Mobile home park's resale fees battled

Owners of the Royal Holiday Mobile Home Park in Canton may have to pay as many as 300 people $2,000 each if the past practice of charging a resale fee is found to violate the Michigan Anti-Trust Act.

A class action lawsuit filed by tbe Michigan Mobile Home against Sheldon Futernick, who has controlling interest in a number of mobile home parks and sales outlets, came before a Wayne County Visiting Circuit Court judge last week.

The suit, filed in 1974, charged that people selling mobile homes that were to remain in the Royal Holiday Park had to pay $1,000 to the Nationwide Mobile Home Co.

According to information admitted in court, Nationwide returned $800 to Royal Holday Park and kept the rest. Nationwide is owned by Sheldon Futernick.

Andy Muth, attorney for the mobile home commission, said the $1,000 fee was abandoned in 1974 after the lawsuit disputing the practice was filed and the state legislature enacted the Michigan Mobile Home Act. That act prohibited entrance-exit fees.

The lawsuit was filed under the state anti-trust act, however. Muth said he is seeking to have double the resale fee—or $2,000—returned to each person forced to pay prior to 1974.

THE TRIAL was heard least week before visiting Judge Audrey Stroia, who is expected to issue a judgment in early January.

Attorney for Futernick is Jim Bushman, who could not be reached for comment.

The suit against Royal Holiday and Nationwide is just one of many cases being brought against mobile home parks and sales outlets, usually by the mobile home commission.

Last month, Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Robert Webster ruled that the Country-Cousin Mobile Village of Novi had violated the Michigan Consumer Protection Act by charging a $500 "resale fee" to allow a mobile home to be sold and remain in the park.

The suit was brought by Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley, who said the fee was an entrance-exit fee outlawed by both the consumer protection and and the mobile home commission act.

Kelley didn't file the suit under the mobile home commission act, Muth said, because the act prohibits an attorney general from enforcing it. According to the law, the Mobile Home Commission has to take action on alleged violations.

There is no such provision in the consumer protection act, but that act does not specifically refer to mobile homes.

Attorneys for the Country Cousin park argued that the attorney general couldn't file under the consumer protection act because the title does not indicate it refers to the mobile home industry.

Webster rejected the argument by saying the consumer protection law prohibits all "unfair, unconscionable or deceptive methods, acts or practices in the conduct of trade or commerce."

According to Muth, official attorney for the mobile home commission, Country Cousin had not discontinued tbe fee after the mobile home act went into effect. Futernick was not involved with the Oakland County mobile home park.

Robert Myers of Canton, a mobile home commission member, said problems with mobile home parks extend beyond resale fees.

"The biggest problem is the scarcity of mobile home sites. We (the commission) have been working to create new mobile home zoning so people can own their own sites just like subdivisions.

"Then they won't be at a park owner's whims." Myers says private ownership of mobile home lots isn't illegal, but many communities are reluctant to zone land to allow it.

Myers, a former Canton board trustee, said it is important to change some of the concepts people have about mobile bomes because "it is a growing industry. It's affordable housing, something that more and more people are looking into as conventional housing prices go sky-high."

Township appoints teen

Glen Adsit may only be a ninth grader, but he's already serving as an appointed member of the Canton recreation commission. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Ninth-grader Glen Adsit, the newest appointee to Canton's recreation advisory committee, calls himself an "outgoing person" who is not self-conscious about his age.

The 14-year-old student at Plymouth Salem High School was appointed to the formerly all-adult committee by a unanimous vote of the Canton board last week.

He will fill the seat vacated by Gloria Hammonds on the nine-member council, which makes recommendations to the township board on recreation policies and programs.

The appointment was made at the recommendation of Trustee Robert Greenstein who said it's "time to open up government to young folks."

ADSIT, WHO participated last week in the committee's monthly meeting as a full voting member, said he feels "really honored to be a part of Canton government."

"I felt right at home," Adsit said of Guess who came to town?

When Santa Claus came visiting homes in this area around the turn of the century, the displays for Christmas he found were a bit different from what he's likely to see today.

The tree in the Victorian parlor was fresh-cut and hung with tiny candles, the only lights of those days. It was strung with popcorn, and ornaments included flags of various sizes, angels made of pinecones and milkweed pods and wrapped gifts.

Underneath the tree Santa found, instead of today's piles of gifts, a manger scene or a village in miniature.

If he wanted to look around for milk, he stepped into the dining room where people of that area entertained on a formal scale during the holiday period. If the family really wanted to impress Santa, a piece of fruit was left, since that was the sought-after delicacy of that time.

The world of Christmas in Victorian days is recreated in the Plymouth Historical Museum this year.

And the visiting Santa pictured here (who is staying anonymous because he represents Santas of many times and places) found the decorations just as they looked when his counterparts of earlier years did their thing on Christmas Eve.

The tree has candles and other decorations known to pines of the 1890s. In the dining room there's a table set in Haviland china and featuring a bowl of fruit, and a cookie-making mannequin gives atmosphere to a Victorian kitchen.

One thing about the candle-laden tree was stressed by Barbara Saunders, museum director.

"The candles were lighted only once, " she said, "by the father of the family when the family gathered on Christmas morning. Santa wouldn't have lighted them when he arrived. Too dangerous."

The museum features also such memorabilia of Christmases past as antique dolls and dollhouses, rocking horses and Buddy L trucks. Iron banks and cars are on display, too.

Located at 155 Main, Plymouth, the museum will keep its Christmas display through Jan. 14. It is open 1-4 p.m. Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, and special educational tours can be arranged by calling the museum office, 455-8940. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for youth 12-17 and 25 cents for children 5-11.

Roles of schools vs. municipalities are blurring

analysis

By EMORY DANIELS

At one time the functions of school districts and municipal governments were clearly separated and understood by leaders in each unit.

The function of schools was to educate children during certain prescribed hours and to assume the role of parents in protecting the child while the student was on school property.

The function of municipal governments—cities and townships—was to provide for the health, safety and welfare of its residents, including children.

Over the past two decades, however, the distinction between school functions municipal functions has become blurred.

One reasons is that schools have been asked to assume responsibility for social functions which rightfully should be assigned to federal, state and local governments, i.e., substance abuse programs, sex instruction, hot lunch programs, leisure time activities, clothing banks and "safety" busing.

Another reason is that in past years schools have taken upon themselves, by choice, functions which weren't being performed, but should have been performed, by municipalities.

A result of "hibernation" of governmental functions has been an increase in school millage to finance activities which technically should not be school responsibilities. Likewise, city and township millage has not increased as it otherwise would if the municipalities had assumed their full responsibilities.

This result is best seen in the expenses borne by the schools for providing crossing guards and added buses for "safety" busing.

Safety busing is the transporting of students who live less than 1 ½ miles from school because of the existance of unique hazardous conditions. Such condtitions usually are the lack of sidewalks, paved roads, open ditches, absence of street lights, or lack of traffic signals at intersections.

IN THE CASE of safety busing, the school district must pay for additional buses, gasoline and added salary and fringes for bus drivers.

In almost every instance of safety busing, the exception to the 1 ½ mile rule is made because a municipal government has not met its responsibility in providing for the health, safety and welfare of its citizens.

Paving roads, enclosing open ditches, installing street lights and building sidewalks are all functions and duties of townships and cities. Although the county installs traffic signals, it is the function of city or township governments to request the installation.

Whenever a municipality, for whatever reason, fails to assume one of the above functions the result is a possible hazard for children walking to and from school.

And invariably the parents come to the school board and insist the hazard be removed by busing the child to school and home again. Few parents will march on township hall or city hall and demand removal of the hazard by building sidewalks, installing street lights or paving roads.

During the past year two incidences have occurred which typify how blurred the distinction between, and separation of, governmental functions has become.

THE FIRST INVOLVED residents in western Plymouth Township who wanted their children bused to school because there were no sidewalks in their subdivision and children had to walk on interior streets.

The apparent solution would be to build sidewalks throughout the subdivision and along Ann Arbor Trail from the sub entrance to the school site. Economically, the cost of sidewalks amortized over 10 years is much cheaper than bus and salary costs for drivers over the same period.

In this case, though, residents did not want sidewalks because it would aesthetically disturb the appearance of the large lot frontages on rolling terrain.

Thus the school district was asked to assume an economic burden of busing children when the logical way, based on proper governmental functions, would have been to build sidewalks. Likewise, school districts do not have the responsibility to preserve the aesthetics within subdivisions.

The second incidence, of more recent origin, involves a new subdivision in northern Canton. Parents asked for safety busing because of a lack of sidewalks, absence of street lights, potential of heavy snow drifts, and because of alleged threats against young ladies from construction workers.

The residents could have—but didn't—petition Canton Township for street lights. The matter of snow removal on streets is a municipal responsbility, and on sidewalks a responsibility of residents. Counteracting threats against young ladies is a police responsibility.

If residents, township hall and developers got together to provide timely delivery of sidewalks, snow removal, street lights and selective police patrols then little reason would remain to request busing for high school students living within 1 ½ miles of the Centennial Educational Park.

The point often overlooked is that the school's primary legal responsibility begins at the property line of each school site. The environment inside subdivisions and along public roads are responsibilities of city and township governments.

A SIMILARLY FUZZY separation of governmental duties exists with the practice of providing crossing guards at busy intersections and other pedestrian crossings.

The schools, concerned about safety of youngsters, got into the business of providing crossing guards and constructing pedestrian overpasses across busy roads. Both functions should be solely municipal responsibilities because they involve safety on public thoroughfares outside of school property boundaries.

There was a special millage a few years back levied to pay for the pedestrian overpasses. And, of course, it was the school district that levied the millage—not the municipalities.

The schools for some time now have been wrangling with Plymouth Township to get it to pay half the cost for crossing guards, but each year the township declines. The issue now is in

Board resets meeting dates

Special meetings of the Canton board have been scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 19 and Wednesday, Jan. 3.

The meetings will replace regular board sessions scheduled for Dec. 26 and Jan. 2. The township board rescheduled the meetings because of the holidays.

The special meetings will begin at 7 p.m. in the township administration building on Canton Center near Proctor.

Pick your own

A popular activity for many persons during the holiday season is to travel to a tree farm, select and cut down their own Christmas trees. It's so popular that Michiganders can choose from 800,000 evergreens at 68 cut-your-own farms. For a listing on 12 locations within driving distance of Plymouth-Canton, see the story on Page 2A.

Locations are given for cutting own tree

There are nearly a million reasons why more and more state residents are cutting their own Christmas trees each winter, according to the Automobile Club of Michigan.

"Michigan is the nation's top producer of plantation-grown Christmas trees," said Joseph Ratke, Auto Club touring manager. This year, families can choose from 800,000 evergreens at 68 cut-your-own farms.

There are trees for every taste and budget, ranging from $1 for Scotch pine to $50 for Douglas firs, blue spruce or large flocked trees, which are sealed and sprayed with a snow-like coating.

"Tree sizes also run the gamut, from young evergreens perfect for children's rooms, to 40-foot giants for churches and other large buildings," Ratke said.

Many farms this year are using special attractions to lure customers.

On weekends, Santa Claus gives out treats to children at several area farms and there are farm animals to pet, plus hot, fresh apple cider and doughnuts to enjoy around yule log fires at many others.

"You can ride a wagon or horse-drawn sleigh at 16 operations around the state or even take part in a live Sunday country music radio show at a farm near Lennon," Ratke added.

Auto Club gives this advice for persons cutting their own trees:

- Bring a hand saw. Sixty-one farms lend saws, but they could be in use. Axes are banned.
- Remember that while most pines and Douglas firs hold needles, balsams and spruces drop them if not properly cared for.
- After choosing a tree, saw close to the ground.
- Bring a rope for tying the tree to the car. Be sure the base is at the car's front.
- Before placing in a stand, angle cut an inch or two off the tree's base to help it absorb water. Fill the stand with water daily.
- Keep trees from open flames and check lights for shorts and bare wires before decorating. Make sure electrical outlets can handle the load.

Here is the list of Christmas tree farms in southeastern Michigan:

KRAUSE, 2950 Applegate Rd., Applegate. (313) 633-9935. 30,000 trees, $4 up. Open daily daylight to dusk.

CENTENNIAL, 2775 Bricker Rd., Emmett. (313) 384-6662. 15,000 trees, $10-$18. Open daily 9 a.m.-dusk.

City to consider van purchase for seniors

City commissioners will consider the purchase of a van for senior citizen transportation at tonight's meeting, with the knowledge that Plymouth Township is willing to share the maintenance costs of the vehicle.

Plymouth City Mgr. Fred Yockey is proposing the purchase of a 15-passenger van to be used to transport senior citizens to hot lunch programs, physicians, and Wayne County health facilities. Yockey would purchase the van with $10,000 of the $16,000 in funds received under the federal Community Development Block Grant program.

Plans for the other $6,000 of the funds have not been specified as yet, he added.

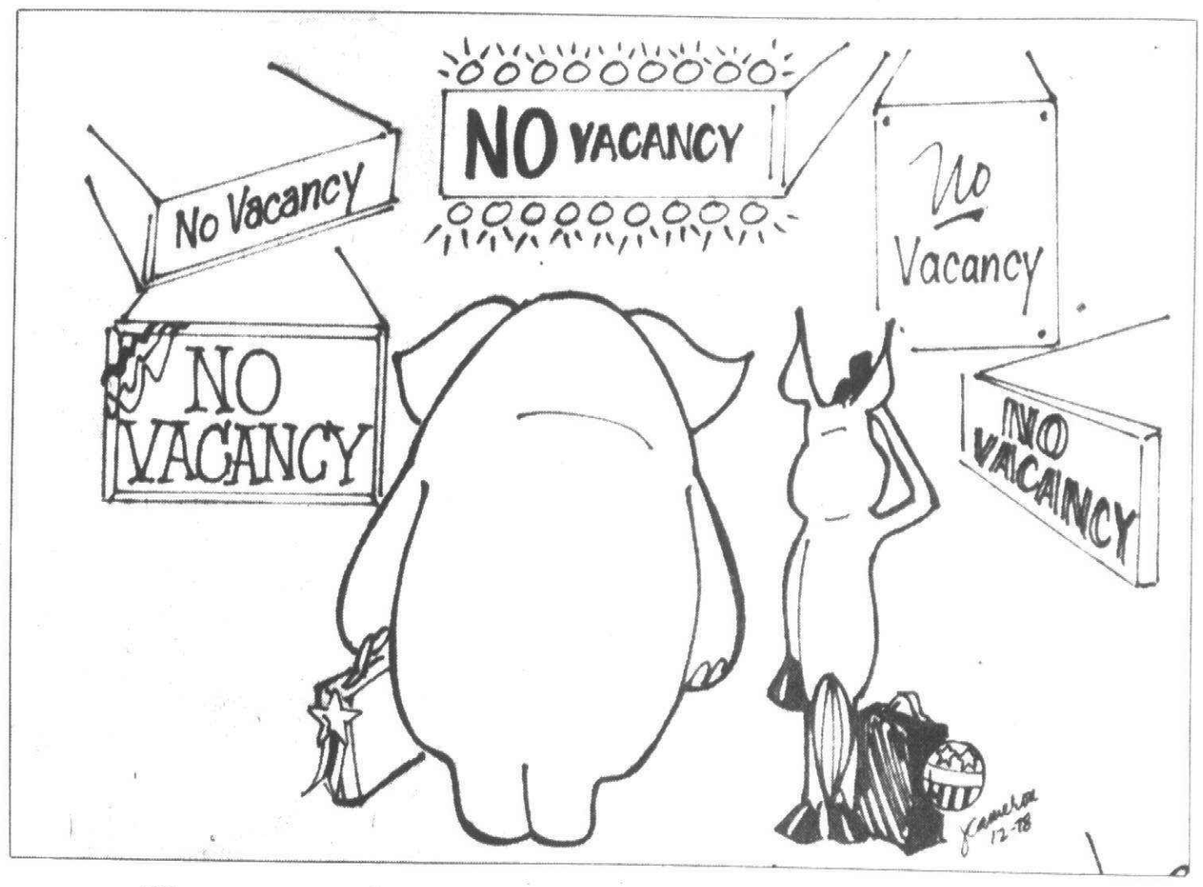

Township officials agreed last week to pay half the cost of maintaining the van and purchasing the gasoline for a one-year period. Costs are estimated annually at about $2,860 for the two communities.

Trustee Maurice Breen stipulated, however, that further funding be based on an evaluation at the end of one year to determine an accurate breakdown of city versus township users of the program.

Money for a driver will come from Wayne County's Office of Manpower department, under the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA), according to Yockey.

Special equipment for transportation of the handicapped is not available on the van, he said.

The Canton-Northville-Plymouth Area YMCA also is looking for funding from the two municipalities for its senior citizen van service. Yockey said he is opposed to the Y funding, and prefers to offer the service through the City of Plymouth resources.

Carter's 2d coming here?

By MICHAEL MATUSZEWSKI

Suburbia could benefit if Detroit becomes either the scene of Jimmy Carter's second coming or the birth of a Republican usurper.

By luring the Republican and Democratic National Conventions to Cobo Hall,the Metropolitan Detroit Convention and Visitors Bureau will guarantee "no vacancy" signs at many city and suburban hotels.

Downtown Detroit's hotels couldn't even come close to accommodating the 20,000 delegates, alternates, party officials, reports and network television technicians that the Republican convention would bring. And the Democratic convention would attract several thousand more people.

So far, the convention bureau has booked nearly 18,000 rooms at hotels, motels and college dormitories from Ann Arbor east to Lake St. Clair, and from Trenton north to Pontiac.

"THE CONVENTION has to be a metropolitan effort. It just won't work any other way," said Carol Geis of the Metropolitan Detroit Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Mrs. Geis worked hard to put the area's best foot forward when the Republican site selection committee made their swing through the Motor City.

"You can't go in there and pitch just one city or one suburb. You can't go in there and pitch Hazel Park. It just won't work," she said.

"When you're talking about big conventions, getting 16,000 hotels rooms is really like pulling teeth. No other city, with the exception of New York or Chicago, can do it without talking about the metropolitan area," she said.

"We need the hotels. We need the rooms. We need Oakland County. We've got to have western Wayne County," she added.

DOWNTOWN DETROIT'S three big hotels—the Detroit Plaza in the Renaissnce Center, the Radisson-Cadillac and the Hotel Pontchartrain—so far have set aside 2,550 rooms, a little over 14 per cent of the booked total.

Together, Oakland and western Wayne hotels and motels account for more than 35 per cent of the booked rooms.

Southfield and Troy, with their big hotels—The Michigan Inn, the Southfield Sheraton, Stouffer's Northland Inn, Somerset Inn, the Northfield Hilton and a number of large Holiday Inns—boost Oakland's total to 3,700, more than 21 per cent of the rooms booked thus far.

In out-Wayne County, Dearborn's giant, 770-room Hyatt Regency leads the way. The county's hotels, outside Detroit's city limits, account for 2,785 rooms, more than 15 per cent of the total.

IF EITHER major convention picks Detroit, the influx of new money will make recession-conscious local officials very happy.

According to Sid Baker of the Southfield-based Southeast Michigan Travel and Tourist Association, the 20,000 mid-summer visitors could spend more than $1 million during each day of the convention.

Most conventioneers spend about $30 a day on food, lodging, transportation, gifts and incidentals, Baker said. "The convention delegates spending is going to be higher than that. It might be up closer to $50 a day.

"It's for sure going to have economic significance for the entire area," he said.

The convention bureau's estimates range much higher. Its officials estimate that the Republican delegates alone could spend $6 million through the convention. The gaggle of reporters and television technicians accompanying the hoopla could add another $7 million to the local economy, they say.

The Republican National Committee is expected to make its selection Jan. 23.

Morris' story lights up Hanuka for children

Marilyn Rowens is the author of a newly published Hanuka tale that asks the question, "Do you want to be famous, to do something important?" It's a fictional tale, but based on the traditional Jewish celebration that commemorates the victor of the Maccabees over the Greeks in 161 B.C. All the Hanuka lore is included, such as the rededication of the Temple at Jerusalem by lighting the eight candles of the traditional Menora. Mrs. Rowens has a fictional hero called Morris, third cousin to the Macabees, and other surprises. It's a coloring book too, adding to the fun for the younger set.

By ELEANOR S. WRIGHT

"Do you want to be famous, to do something important?"

It is a question Marilyn Rowens asks children in her newly published Hanuka tale, "Nobody Knows My Name."

The book reflects Mrs. Rowens' philosophy that children are important — "what they have to say is important and what they do is important."

"It is a book in which I hope children can become creatively involved," she says of the unique "color it your way" book.

"Mine is a purely fictional tale," she continues, "but it is based on the traditional Jewish celebration that commemorates the victory of the Maccabee brothers over the Greeks in 161 B.C. and the rededication of the Temple at Jerusalem by lighting the Menorah's eight candles in the 'Feast of the Lights' that is Hanuka.

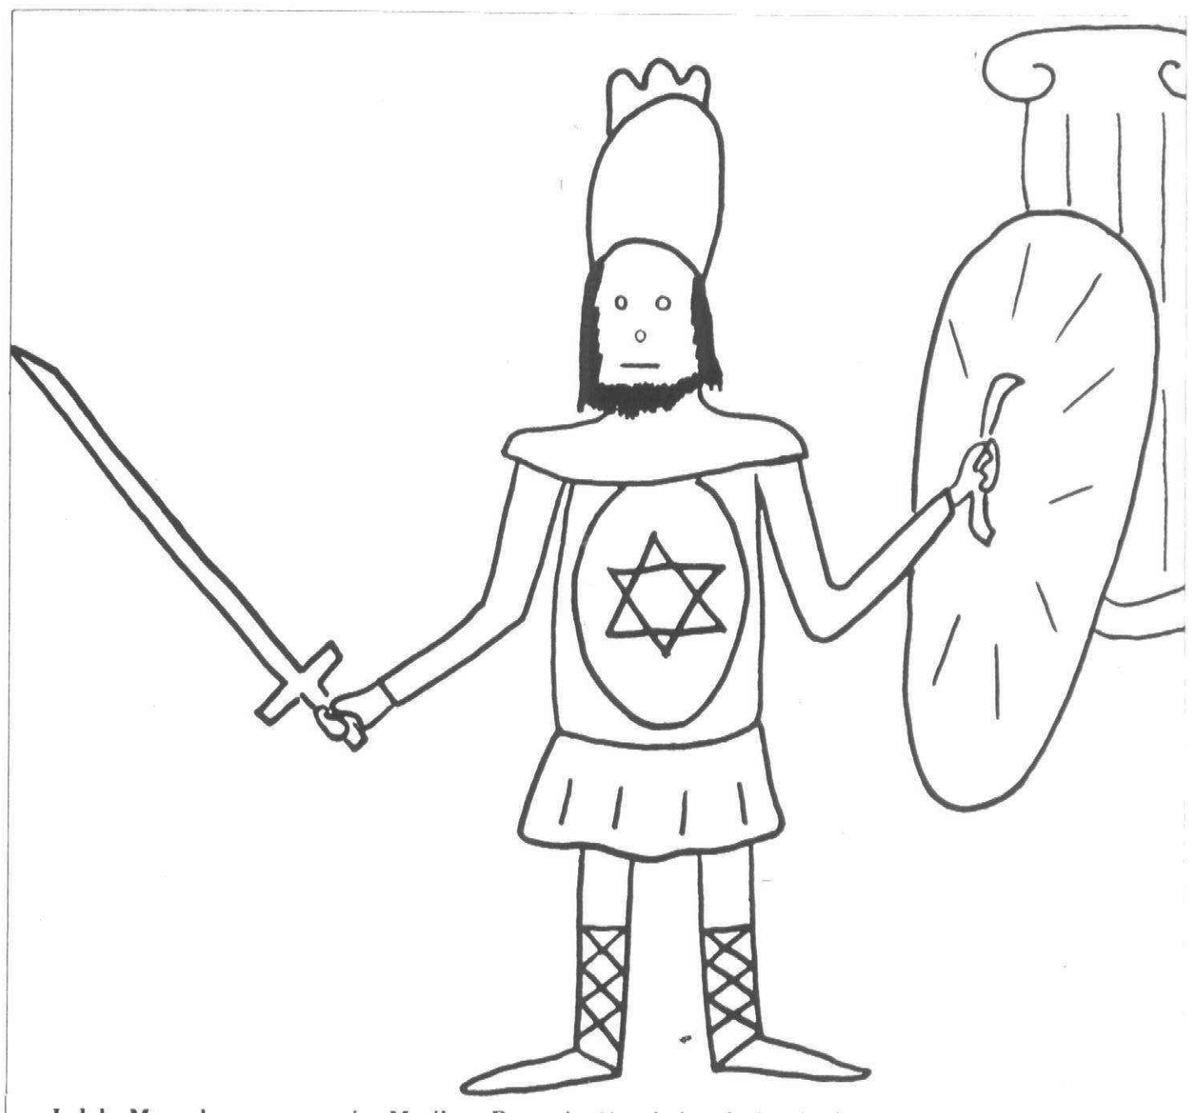

Into the book she has written young Morris, a third cousin and not so important member of the family of Maccabees. She has included three sisters because girls are an important part of family life and "surely the Macabees must have had sisters!" she exclaims.

She has also included an element of sharing with the Greek soldiers who happen into the Temple that reflects her own commitment to peace and that of the Society of Humanistic Judaism which is an integral part of Birmingham Temple's approach to Judaism.

TEMPLE ACTIVITIES are very much a part of Mrs. Rowens' creative life. It was for the drama group of sixth and seventh graders at the Temple that she first wrote her Hanuka tale as a play. Then it evolved into a stick figure slide show to teach children about Hannuka, and finally she published it as a book herself to share with Temple families and friends.

It has been recently displayed and sold for $3.50 at the Jewish Book Fair and the Birmingham Temple Art Show. It is available locally at Book People, Dickens Den, I-Browse, Spitzers and Borenstein's and at The Little Professor in Oak Park.

It is a coloring book, for which she did the simple figures that convey the story, because she wants to give the audience for whom she is writing a chance to become involved in the creative process of the story just as she did the children who acted in her original play. They wrote the original music for the songs, she explains, like the one which says "Nobody knows who I am . . . but I am here just the same."

Judah Maccabee appears in Marilyn Rowen's Hanukah coloring book. Her story dwells mainly on the hero's "unknown" cousin, Morris.

Like the Hanuka tale, most of her activities are geared to developing the child's or adults self-image. She has taught in the Cameo program (Creative Arts and Meaningful Educational Opportunities), a federally funded creative dramatics project in Livonia schools.

Last year she set up TOY (Theatre of the Young) at Clarenceville High School, which her own children, Bard and Tracy, now students at the University of Michigan, attended.

SHE ALSO DIRECTS the adult drama group at Birmingham Temple which annually shares the creative abilities of its members with the Temple and public. This year's production will be called "Our Story" and will weave together the memories, ideas and concerns of the individuals involved. Previously the group has created a "Dramatic Patchwork" on the relationships of love and "Growing Up Human," which combined poetry from all walks of life and interpretive dance.

She has helped build the Temple's celebration of World Day, a family festival on the Friday before Halloween, which each year approaches peace in the world from a different perspective.

She has enhanced her own creative process, in which she believes so strongly as a tool for education, by reinforcing her skills in the drama seminars of Virginia Koste at Eastern Michigan University. She is an English literature graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles.

While being Youth Services Coordinator for her Temple, she also served eight years on the Livonia Community Commission for Drug Abuse and for two years was its chairman. She ran three times for the Clarenceville School District Board of Education.

Throughout her activities, children have been her main concern and her husband, Jack, her mainstay. Momentarily, he is coping with 2,000 books yet to be sold and stored in a closet at home.

"In some families it is tradition to give children a gift at Hanuka," she says, hoping that her book may be included this year on the night of a candle lighting.

Homeowner headaches

Although they aren't the exclusive perpetrators of the sin, Canton polititians seem especially guilty of a little-exposed form of discrimination.

It's not so much what they do, it's how they say it. The bias comes out in the overkill of one word: "Homeowner."

Now I don't have anything against homeowners as a group; some of my best friends have gotten involved with mortgages.

Nor do I argue with the fact that everyone is entitled to have his or her dream of a little vine covered cottage or a three bedroom quad in Sunflower Sub.

However, Canton does have it's share of residents who are not members of the much-heralded homeowner cult.

For various reasons, they have chosen to rent an abode rather than buy one.

Being a renter is not one and the same with being a feckless criminal out to rape the community, and then beat it out of town.

Renters are not always transient types, here today and gone tommorrow.

I know of one renter who has lived in Canton more than five years, which is more than many a homeowner can claim.

Renters are a much put-upon lot. They pay exorbitant rents in this neck of the woods — some of which goes to pay property taxes — just as homeowners do.

RENTERS don't get the same kind of tax breaks homeowners do, nor do they get the same amount of consideration from elected officials.

They, of course, don't get equity in a house, but that equity is usually swallowed up if you have to buy another house after selling the previous one.

You see, renters don't rent because they are too stupid to buy a house, anymore than homeowners buy a house because they are too stupid to rent.

And yet every political speech, every flyer, every piece of legislation, seems geared to people who are called homeowners. It's not especially fair, especially when one considers that the term "homeowner" tends to be a bit of a misnomer.

There aren't that many people, especially in Canton, who can truely claim a house as theirs alone.

Usually a bank has some interest in the old homestead, which means that the only thing between the home and the owner is a little thing known as a mortgage payment.

This payment is due monthly, just like rent. Although polititians should represent the homeowner, they should not forget that their constituents include dwellers in several large Canton apartment complexes.

Instead, renters tend to be forgotten.

There are some advantages to being ignored. Renters were treated to few of the rabid political flyers that were distributed in many subdivisions.

Apparently, candidates didn't feel renters were worth cultivating.

It's probably true that people who rent in Canton are less politically active than people who are homeowners. But are renters inactive because they are apathetic or because nobody makes an effort to get them involved?

Whether they chose to be involved or not, renters have as much right to representation as anyone else living in Canton. The politicos might start by using the term "resident" rather than "homeowner."

Company suggests EDC to get financial break

By LYNN ORR

Cheaper financing of commercial and industrial business is behind a recent request to Plymouth Township officials.

Landmark Consultants, which plans a $15 million commercial venture on 20 acres of property at Five Mile and Sheldon Road, approached the township board last week with the concept of forming an Economic Development Corporation.

With a promise to pick up the tab for any expenses incurred, consultant Donald Whittaker Sr. is hoping the township will form the corporation under Public Act 175, which results in lower interest paid on bonds sold to finance business ventures approved by the corporation.

Under the law, tax-free revenue bonds sold by a lending institution reduce costs, which are passed on to the borrower, thus lowering the costs of setting up a business.

Benefits to the township, Whittaker pointed out, include expansion of commercial and industrial growth, creation of jobs, and assistance to those businesses faced with conventional financing problems.

"It's more or less an incentive to relocate a plant," Whittaker noted.

BOTH CANTON Township and the City of Plymouth have formed economic development corporations, he said, adding that the corporation assists in marketing "aggressively" an industrial park concept.

He estimates that about one-third of the ventures in the eventual 137-acre area at the site could be financed through the Economic Development Corporation.

Broached with the concept for the first time, Township Supervisor Thomas Notebaert appointed Trustees Maurice Breen and Gerald Law to a subcommittee to study the plan.

About 18 other southeast Michigan communities have established such corporations, Whittaker said, including Canton Township and the City of Plymouth.

Municipalities eager to expand the commercial and industrial tax base are going with the concept with the hopes of attracting new business to their communities, says Bob Schaetzl, secretary of the corporation formed one year ago in Canton Township.

Schaetzl believes Canton's residential tax base of 68 per cent is terribly high, particularly when compared to Livonia, which estimates a 50-50 share of the tax burden between residential and commercial taxpayers.

Since its inception in Canton, about $10 million of assessed commercial and industrial valuation in the form of four different ventures has moved to Canton with the Economic Development Corporation's blessings.

Unlike the Industrial Development Act, which allows tax abatement, the corporation allows a break on financing only, Schaetzl emphasizes.

Charging $750 to apply to Canton's corporation for approval, Schaetzl and other members of the board are attempting to apply the money to publish a prospective on Canton to lure other businesses to the township.

"Industrial taxbase is extremely important, and if you don't get it, the residents pay through the nose," Schaetzl says.

He's convinced the corporation will be able to favorably expand Canton's industrial and commercial tax base and reduce the proportion of property taxes paid by residents.

Who is responsible— community or school?

If a pure separation of function was maintained, the cost of crossing guards probably would be assumed 100 per cent by municipalities. But the lines became fuzzy decades ago.

An example of the schools willingly taking on a municipal function was a former practice of the district operating a community recreation program through an "adult education and recreation department." That program ceased about 10-15 years ago, and since then city and township have taken over some recreation programs and the Plymouth-Canton Junior Athletic Association has assumed responsibility for the balance.

The schools only involvement presently in community recreation now is to offer use of school athletic fields, swimming pools and playground fields for private or municipal recreation programs.

Here there is some rationale for blurring the distinction on separate functions for schools and municipalities. Because taxpayers invest in the buildings and large school sites, a greater economic return is realized when school sites are used as community centers as much as possible.

But there is less rationale from a public administration standpoint for the position that the safe movement of students from home to a school site is a school function. There may be a historical basis for the involvement, but still it is irrational.

The result, beyond the financial implications, is that the school board finds itself being accused of trying "to pass the buck" when residents petition the wrong unit of government for solution of a problem, be it real or perceived.

last week's recreation committee meeting. "It doesn't bother me to be with older people at all."

Mike Gouin, superintendent of the parks and recreation department, is hopeful that Adsit's participation on the committee will give teens a voice in leisure-time policies and programs.

"It will be an interesting experience for him, and I think it will be a help to us too," Gouin said.

"We need input from the entire community on recreation matters. He obviously represents a different interest group than the other members do."

Gouin called Adsit's appointment "unusual."

"There aren't many communities that have teens with voting power on their advisory committees," he maintained.

Greenstein said a psychologist at Plymouth Salem High School recommended Adsit as a qualified candidate for the post.

The ninth grader attributed the school's recommendation to his "outgoing personality."

ADSIT, of 7358 Irongate in Canton, is the son of LaVergne and Audrey Adsit.

The freshman says he likes music and sports and plans to try out for the school track team this year. A member of the Centennial Educational Park Cadet Band, Adsit plays trombone and guitar.

The other members of the recreation commission are Ralph Brickman, Donna Summerman, Ron Hellier, Judie Humberger, Helen McGee, Frank McMurray, Robert Suggs and Don Vogler.

Dial a plant tip

Timely gardening information is now available without leaving your home by calling "Handy Hints on Call" at 858-2519.

This phone message service was developed by Greg Patchan, Michigan State University Extension horticulture agent, to give gardeners quick answers to current gardening problems.

Topics are changed on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and you can call any time.

Messages cover house plants, perennials, fruits and vegetables, lawns, trees and shrubs. Household pest problems are also addressed.

Detroit Science Center displays laser system

With the high cost of lumber even the most basic household job can seem an expensive undertaking.

So how can the consumer, builder and handyman be assured of quality? Bendix Research laboratories, in collaboration with American Forest Products Corp., has developed a computerized, laser inspection system, aimed at obtaining the maximum useful wood products from harvested timber.

A model of the system is on the Exhibit Floor at the Detroit Science Center, 5020 John R, Detroit.

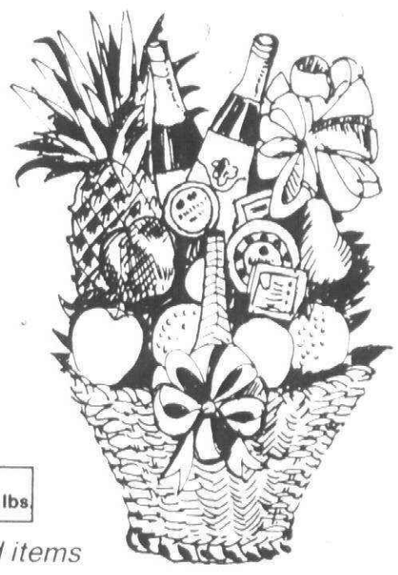

The new display shows how a low intensity laser beam, in conjunction with precision optical components, scans each piece of wood for defects.

A computer interprets the scanner data and performs high speed calculations and decisions to select the best positions for removing board defects. A completely automatic saw makes cross cuts based on the computer's directions.

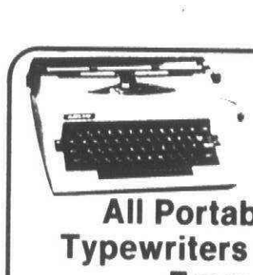

The system on display has been field-tested and demonstrated the potential savings it could provide. It is being installed at Martel, Calif., where it will be used in the manufacturing of moulding.

You can also find out more about laser beams in conjunction with holograms at the Detroit Science Center. For further information call 833-1892. Open seven days a week.

Military Service

MICHAEL W. WOOLEY

Michael W. Wooley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Wooley of Versailles, Canton, and a student at Plymouth Salem High School, has been nominated to the U.S. Military Academy.

Wooley is among a record 90 nominees—including 17 women—to compete for appointments to U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine academies in 1979. The nominations have been made by U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin.

The 90 nominees will be competing for 20 openings in first-year classes entering next summer. Final selection will be made by the four service academies.

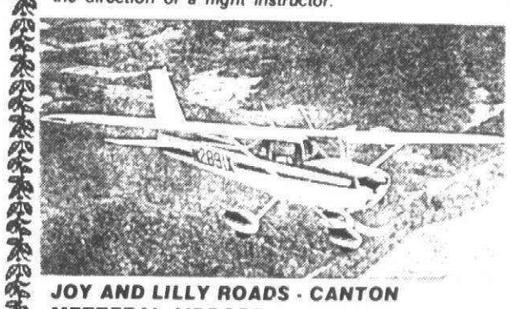

The 90 finalists for 1979 come from more than 60 Michigan communities and were selected from some 500 applicants on the basis of grades, character, extracurricular activities, leadership potential and letters of recommendation.

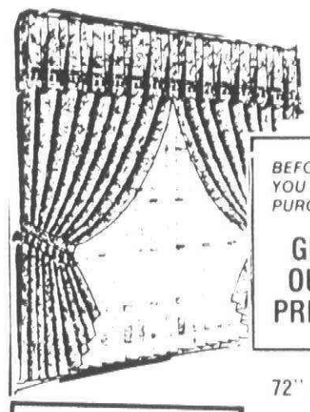

The nation's fifth service academy—the U.S. Coast Guard Academy—does not utilize a congressional nomination system.

DOUGLAS J. VINCI

Pvt. Douglas J. Vinci, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Hanson of Harvard Lane, Canton, recently completed a food service specialist course at Ft. Jackson, S.C.

The course trains personnel to prepare and serve food in large and small quantities. Students receive training in baking, field kitchen operations and the operation of an Army dining facility. Vinci, who entered the Army in June, is a 1973 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School.

The Stroller

A gift for mom

By W.W. EDGAR

Every year about this time when the Christmas shopping is reaching its peak, The Stroller can't help wondering if the young folks today are having as much fun selecting a gift for someone they dearly love as he did when he was a young lad in knee breeches.

Back in those days in our little town in the Dutch Country the families seemed to be much closer than they are today—especially where it concerns grandparents. That's why the young Stroller was especially close to his maternal grandmother.

AS HE LOOKS back now, he doesn't recall seeing her anywhere but in her rocking chair at the living room window. Oh, occasionally, she would make a trip down to our little house, but she always hastened home before dark.

There was a good reason for her sitting in that rocking chair day after day. She was the victim of what she called "rheumatis," now known more readily as arthritis. It pained her to move around the room. She did it only once or twice a week. These trips were to the kitchen to prepare old-fashioned potato yeast which she sold to the neighbors in one and two penny portions.

And that's how The Stroller came to take a great liking to her. He liked nothing better than to visit her after school and then handle the folks who came for one or two cents worth of yeast. They found it best in the baking of homemade bread. And much of the love that developed between The Stroller and his grandmother possibly came because she often allowed him to keep the pennies.

THEN CAME THE year when her "rheumatis" got the best of her. It was thought for a time that her days were numbered. It was sad to watch her suffer with the knowledge that so little could be done for her in the way of easing the pain.

Just when things looked darkest, a new young doctor came to town and he shed a ray of light on the situation.

Visiting with her one afternoon he asked if she ever did any needlepoint work.

Assured that she did, the young doctor advised that she make a bit about six inches square. When that was done he suggested that she dampen it and place on top of her head and keep it there all day. No one ever had heard of such a remedy. It became even stranger when he suggested that she take up smoking and confine her smoking to puffing on a corncob pipe.

His suggestions were followed to the letter.

She made the headpiece and the Stroller's mother provided a corncob pipe and a can of tobacco. It seemed like an odd remedy. But it worked. It seemed as she sat there puffing on the pipe and looking out of the window that her pain didn't seem so great.

Older folks coming to her home in the evening to purchase her famed yeast used to smile and wonder if the so-called remedy wasn't just imagination. But as long as her pain seemed relieved every one seemed satisfied.

FINALLY CAME the holidays. As folks were talking about gifts, the Stroller kept wondering what he could get for his grandmother who had been so kind to him all year.

At a loss, he finally asked his mother, "What can I get for "Nonna," our favorite name for her.

"Why don't you go downtown and buy her a new corncob pipe and can of Prince Albert tobacco. She needs that more than anything."

Off he went, light-hearted, to buy a gift for his favorite grandmother. But things weren't that easy.

When he stepped into the tobacco store and asked for a can of tobacco and a corncob pipe, the storekeeper smiled and told him he wasn't old enough to buy anything like that.

"But it's for my grandmother," The Stroller pleaded. That only brought on a few more smiles from the tobacconist.

Fate has a way of handling such things. Or maybe it was the angels. But at that moment the young doctor who had suggested the remedy for "Nonna" walked in to the tobacco store.

He revealed that he had suggested such a remedy for the old grandmother with "rheumatis" and that it was okay to sell the pipe and can of tobacco to The Stroller.

You can imagine the feeling on Christams morning when The Stroller almost choked on his breakfast in his haste to deliver the gift.

How proud he was when he handed the pipe and tobacco over to her and she leaned over and kissed him.

It was one of the finest gifts he ever had given to anyone on Christmas morning. And he delivered a new corncob pipe and a can of tobacco to her every Christmas morning until the day she went to her reward.

Court charges contempt for 'payless' pay days

By MICHAEL MATUSZEWSKI

Despite court orders blocking layoffs, payday last week meant smaller pay checks or no checks for 26 employees in the Wayne County Prosecutor's office and 20 employees of the county clerk and treasurer.

In response to the county's financial problems, the board of commissioners in October ordered the employees laid off and cut their positions from the 1979 budget, which took effect Dec. 1.

The prosecutor, clerk and treasurer balked, but after a number of court hearings and a tangle of legal proceedings, the controversy is no closer to a resolution than it was in October.

"If an employee is working in a position, and that position no longer exisits, he won't get a paycheck," a county spokesman said.

TWO WAYNE COUNTY Circuit court judges have issued orders blocking the pink slips for the employees in the three departments. Judge Roman Gribbs issued the original court order Oct. 13 and Judge William Sullivan, in response to a number of lawsuits filed, continued that order Nov. 22.

Sullivan also ruled the 27-member board of commissioners in contempt of court for issuing the layoff notices.

Prosecutor William Cahalan, County Clerk James Killeen and County Treasurer Raymond J. Wojtowicz refused to distribute the pink slips. The elected department heads argue that the layoffs, which were ordered for all county departments, will damage their ability to perform their constitutionally-mandated duties.

"They think they're exempt from any cutbacks," one county official said.

LAST WEEK the legal proceedings took a new turn.

The state Supreme Court removed Sullivan from the case and ordered new hearings by a visiting circuit court judge. The high court said that because Wayne Circuit Court judges actively oppose any budgetary cutbacks in the judiciary, they could be biased.

Sullivan later disqualified himself from the related suits.

The court also continued all of Sullivan's orders meaning the employes continue working and the commissioners remain in contempt.

The supreme court, however, made no provisions for paying the employes who remain on the job.

Cahalan, Killeen and Wojtowicz tried to get the supreme court to immediately name a visiting judge. After deliberations, the court appointed a Tawas City judge, Alan C. Miller, of the 23rd judicial district.

SOME COMMISSIONERS say a ruling exempting the three offices from cutbacks could ruin local government.

"It's a frightening case," says Commissioner William Joyner (D-Plymouth). "The question is, if we're told we can't cut the prosecutor, the clerk and the treasurer, who in the world is running the local units of government?"

Because the commissioners decided to cut staff to avoid a deficit, Joyner says, "The courts are telling us we don't have to cut our deficits."

But in addition to any court decision, the county must answer to the Michigan Municipal Finance Commission. "The finance commissioner said we couldn't spend any money not already appropriated in the 1979 budget without consulting them first," Joyner said.

Hours flap continues

Whether non-union Plymouth Township employees should be paid for 40 hours in a scheduled 37.5-hour work week failed to be resolved last week.

Township officials continued to wrangle over the issue, after Supervisor Thomas Notebaert explained that the practice resulted from the deletion of Saturday hours in the township hall in 1966.

Board minutes from April 12, 1966 reveal that board members designated a work week from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. with an hour lunch, deleting Saturday hours from 9 a.m. to noon.

The change brought about a 37.5-hour work week for non-union employees who are not salaried. Overtime, however, is not paid until 40 hours are worked, according to Clerk Esther Hulsing.

The minutes failed to resolve the issue for Trustee Maurice Breen, who questions the practice without specific board authorization.

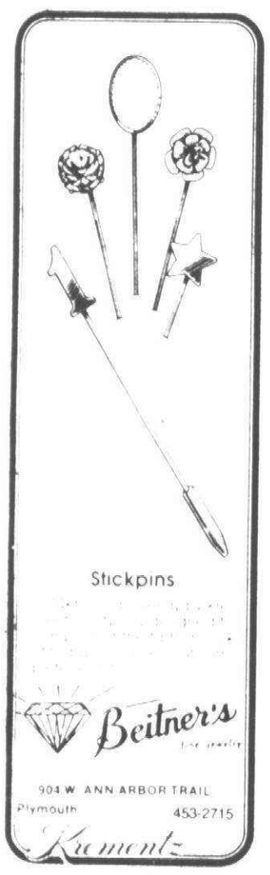

"The only people on salary are the elected township officials," Breen commented, noting that hourly employees should be paid for hours worked.

Notebaert said he failed to see a need for board action, and trustees dropped the matter without further discussion.

Last week's comments on the subject followed a Nov. 28 board discussion, in which trustee Lee Fidge asked whether authorization of the practice had been established.

Mrs. Fidge questioned the wisdom of the pay schedule without specific authorization by the board, after the board agreed to change working times—rather than hours—for the unionized water and sewer department employees.

Mrs. Fidge was not present at last week's meeting.

Charming wood stoves dangerous

That charming wood burning stove you picked up at a garage sale this past summer has been a real conversation piece. Now it's time to decide whether or not to turn it into a source of heat.

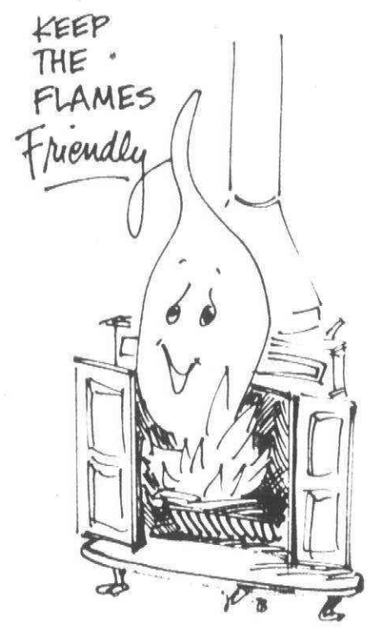

However, while wood burning stoves have a charm all their own and have become very popular at a time of skyrocketing fuel bills, they do present a potential danger to life and property, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

There's a lot more to using a wood burning stove than just installing it in your home and lighting the fire. In the first two months of 1978, the U.S. Product Safety Commission reported approximately 60 fires caused by wood burning stoves. The commission is concerned that improper installation and misuse of these stoves will result in further loss of life and damage in the fall and winter of 1978-79.

The commission's concern is shared by fire prevention officials, stove manufacturers and the insurance industry. The problem, according to executives in each of these areas, is that the vast majority of wood burning stoves are installed in homes on a do-it-yourself basis. The result is improper installation, leading to fires causing loss of lives and millions of dollars in property damage.

To combat the rising potential for more losses, insurance companies are distributing these safety warnings to policy holders:

- Be sure your stove is made of sturdy, suitable material, such as cast iron or steel. Look for stoves listed by Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) or other recognized testing laboratories.
- If you purchase a used stove, check it carefully for cracks or other defects. The legs, hinges, grates and draft louvers also should be checked carefully.
- Leave at least three feet of clearance between the stove and any combustible material (wall, ceiling, furniture, newspapers, any flammable object.)
- A pad under the stove is essential.
- Never burn anything but seasoned, dry hardwood in the stove.
- Never use gasoline, kerosene or any flammable liquid (including lighter fluid) to start a fire. Start a fire by using small strips of paper and twigs.
- Do not treat the stove as a garbage unit.
- Consult a detailed safety manual to be sure the stove pipe and flue meet safety requirements.

Needing a little respect

The review of the Plymouth Township fire department statistics each month appears to give the township board ample opportunity to unleash its particularly tactless brand of sarcasm.

The board, of course, doesn't discriminate among township employees when it comes to needling, but the firefighters appear to take the brunt of the board's disrespect for its own employees.

Psychologically, efficient managers attempt to inspire loyalty and devotion to jobs among employees by example and respect for a job well done. The majority of Plymouth Township board members, however, take a different tact.

I've yet to hear a complimentary, much less tolerant, remark about the firefighters.

The prevailing attitude of disdain for the employees of the township is the overall impression one carries away from nearly nearly every board meeting. One wonders how board members can expect to improve morale, inspire loyalty, or get their money's worth from employees who constantly are the target of disparaging verbal abuse.

LAST WEEK newly-elected trustee Barbara Lynch jumped on the "Put down the firefighters" bandwagon in a tactless burst of zeal.

Although Mrs. Lynch is quick to express her ignorance in other areas, such as budgetary expertise, in an honest effort to educate herself about her duties as a trustee, she apparently feels no compulsion to stifle her anti-firefighter instincts.

Her offhand comment, referring to "giving the firemen something to do," seems particularly out of place when the board that evening called in Mrs. Lynch's husband for a quick lesson in the construction business in a discussion of renovating township hall.

It seems a little out of place for the spouse of a trustee to be advising the board concerning at least a $200,000 expenditure, but that's another story.

One can only hope that board members, particularly Mrs. Lynch, do their homework on the performances of township employees and reserve their criticism for specific problems.

Sarcasm and needling of employees are out of place in a public forum unless poor performance can be substantiated. I have the suspicion that there are many grateful township residents who who have availed themselves of the firefighters' expertise, based on their 532 rescue runs and 183 fire reports accomplished this year through the end of November.

If the firefighters aren't doing a good job and there's evidence to establish that fact, let's hear it. Otherwise, it's time to eliminate the caustic comments and concentrate on improving morale with a little respect that could go a long way to upgrade the cooperation necessary to provide township residents with the best possible job for their tax dollars.

O&E

In every phase of life we face this recurring question:

What think ye of Christ?

In youth, too happy to think -- I've plenty of time.
In manhood, too busy to think -- I must make a living.
In maturity, too anxious to think -- I've more urgent problems.
In declining years, too old to think -- my pattern of life is set.
As death approaches, too ill to think -- my sensibilities are dulled and my mind is weary.
In death, too late to think -- the spirit is flown, the day of opportunity is past, the harvest is gone and now God's judgment day.

Salem cagers crush Dearborn, 79-48

Plymouth Salem cagers won their fifth straight game without a defeat Friday night, crunching Suburban Eight League foe Dearborn, 79-48, for yet another road victory.

The Rocks have played four of their first five games on the opponents' floor and won them all. Most importantly, two of those contests were in Sub-8 play which couldn't make coach Fred Thomann any happier.

"We've accomplished what we've wanted (in the league) before Christmas," the Salem mentor said. "You don't want to let one of those teams come up and beat you and they (Dearborn) are tough to beat at their place.

"Dearborn never stopped playing the whole game. We got the pressure going early but they kept playing. They played very, very hard but so did we.

"Our kids did a nice job. We had them, 45-24, at halftime we like that."

Four Salem players reached double figures. Senior lefthander Kevin Kelliher pumped in 16 points to lead the way. Junior Howard Monk netted 13, Matt Etienne sunk 11 and Bill Thimm added 10.

Senior forward Barry Owens scored six points but led the charges on the boards with nine rebounds. Rich Hewlett also scored six points and sparkled on the court with 13 assists. Junior Jim Anderson sat out this game with an ankle injury. He is questionable for tomorrow night's game against Livonia Churchill.

The Rocks, always known for their tough defensive play, also looked sharp on offense, totalling 35 field goals. They raced to a commanding 23-10 first-quarter lead and were never headed after that.

Salem presently is the only unbeaten team in the area. The Rocks will try to maintain that standing with their two non-league games this week against Churchill and Plymouth Canton in the Livonia Churchill Christmas Classic.

That's better! Chiefs trip spunky Harrison, 76-67

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Plymouth Canton outscored Farmington Harrison 21-12 in the third quarter to break a 33-33 halftime deadlock en route to a 76-67 basketball victory Friday night.

It was the Chiefs' second straight Western Six League victory and fourth triumph in five games. Harrison, victims of a rugged non-league schedule early in the year, have yet to win a contest in five attempts.

But the spunky Hawks looked anything but an 0-5 team against Canton, as they gave an impressive effort despite the third-quarter slump.

In fact, Harrison coach Mike Teachman felt his squad played well enough to win if it wasn't for what he thought was terrible officiating.

"I think we should be 1-4," said the disappointed Harrison coach. "We played excellent ball tonight. "We had our usual third quarter blues — 21-12 — that's the ball game. But there were some really funny calls out there.

Canton coach Craig Bell didn't feel the officiating was a factor.

"I think the officiating went both ways," the Canton coach said. "We don't concern ourselves with the officials, as players and coaches."

Nonetheless, neither coach doubted Harrison gave a decent effort before fading in the third quarter.

"We've got nothing to be ashamed of," Teachman said. "We've played one bad ball game (this season). The other teams we've played had more talent and we stuck it to them."

"We think everybody we play in our league will come after us and play," Bell said. "We're going to have to face tough teams and we have to handle that challenge."

Canton's Rusty Mandle and Mike Leary made the difference in this outcome, as each player hit for 18 points for their best performance of the season.

"We thought Mike Leary worked very hard for the second and third shots, and Rusty (Mandle) made things happen both offensely and defensively on the court," Bell said.

Butch King led all scorers with 20 points, as his hot shooting hand regained its proper form for the Chiefs. King hit on eight of 15 shots from the floor after converting on only five of 17 in Canton's only loss to Southfield-Lathrup last Tuesday.

Dave Visser's injured ankle kept the Canton junior out of this game but he is expected back in action tomorrow night against Livonia Stevenson.

Jay McKinley, Frank LaSota, and Scott Adler picked up the slack off the bench.

Four Harrison cagers hit double figures. Dave Turnquist played an excellent inside game for his 17 points. Brad Herremans netted 15 and John Trèmonti and Scott Hendries added 14 each.

Young hoopsters eye Elks' contest

The annual Elks National Free Throw Contest comes to the Plymouth-Canton community Saturday, Dec. 30 at the Plymouth Salem gymnasium from 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

The "Hoop Shoot" event, sponored locally by the Plymouth Elks Youth Activities Department, includes competition for all boys and girls ages eight through 13.

All participants compete in their respective age brackets — 8-9-year olds, 10-11-year olds and 12-13-year olds — to see which players can make the most free throws out of 25 chances. The winners of the local competition advance to district and regional play. With any success, the Elks will transport all regional winners to the national competition, free of charge.

This season, the Plymouth-Canton Junior Basketball League will be extremely involved in getting its players to participate. All the junior cage coaches are encouraged to have maximum team participation in this event.

Any youngsters not involved in the junior basketball league can still participate by showing up at the Salem gymnasium during the scheduled time period on Dec. 30.

All local winners not only go to district competition but also receive trophies from the Plymouth Elks Club.

Holiday cage 'Classic' features emotional rivalries

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Commentary

The holiday season is here and the first thing that comes to my mind as December winds down is the annual Christmas basketball tournament co-hosted by Plymouth Salem and Livonia Churchill just before the holiday break.

This season's event is the eighth one and it's Churchill's turn to host it Tuesday and Thursday night.

The Good Doctor has mixed emotions about this year's event. First of all, you can't call it a tournament any more. The new, official name is "Christmas Classic" which is nothing more than a fancy name for non-league basketball competition.

But these aren't just ordinary non-league contests for the four teams. The "Classic" pits some interesting rivalries which should not only create added fan interest but also stir a lot of emotion between Plymouth and Livonia schools.

The fun of predicting a tournament champion is gone. But that was never a challenge, anyhow, as Plymouth Salem dominated the tournament format with four wins in a row and six victories in the seven years of the tournament.

In a way, I'm sad to see the tournament style of competition leave us. It always seemed to be a special goal for all the players and coaches who needed something to motivate top performance levels before getting into the thick of the league races.

But somehow, I've got a feeling this motivation factor will not leave the four teams because of the fantastic local rivalries created by the 'Classic' format.

Tuesday night, Plymouth Canton, the newcomer of the tourney replacing Redford Thurston, battles a respectable Livonia Stevenson squad at 8:30 p.m. Salem and host Livonia Churchill kick off the action at 7 p.m.

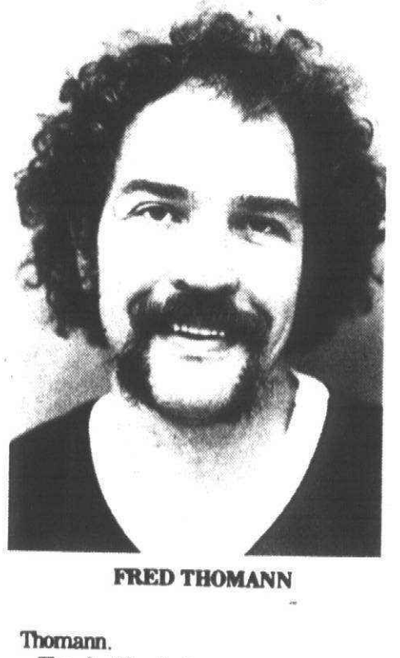

Neither opening night game should be shrugged off. The Canton-Stevenson game will probably be the most exciting of the two, although Canton's height advantage should prevail against a Dave Hall-less Stevenson squad. The Spartans were looking for great things this season but the loss of Hall due to a football injury has slightly dimmed those hopes. Canton has a height advantage on all teams in this event, but should be careful against a well-coached Stevenson squad.

Salem is the only undefeated team in the area, after three weeks of action. The Rocks, under coach Fred Thomann, are not tall but very physical and rugged on defense. The Rocks should handle Fred Price's Churchill squad, which isn't a bad team, but definitely the weakest club of the four.

THE SECOND NIGHT (Thursday) will be something to behold. Fans should be hanging by the rafters on the corner of Joy and Newburgh roads, as two exciting, emotional rivalries should bring Christmas cheer to all.

The 7 p.m. contest is the Centennial Park rivalry between close neighbors, Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton.

What a match-up this should be. Canton's quick start gives it confidence against Salem. The Rocks are a perennial winner under

FRED THOMANN

Thomann.

The battle between coaches is also interesting. Thomann will match wits with Craig Bell, the old teacher-versus-student story. Bell coached in Thomann's program as a junior varsity mentor before moving to Canton this season.

It will also feature Canton's explosive offense and exceptional height against the smaller, quicker, defensive-oriented Rocks. And don't forget the match up between two outstanding senior guards in Salem's All-State candidate Rich Hewlett, an all-around athlete, and Canton's Butch King, one of the best offensive players in the area.

The edge? Well, I'd have to go with Salem and its tough defense this time. But it should be a close game.

It's important to remember, however, that despite this rivalry, it's just a non-league game. The most important Salem-Canton battle will come later in March, if the two teams meet in the district tournament.

Churchill and Stevenson play in the 8:30 p.m. game with Livonia pride will be at stake between two long-time foes.

The emotions will also be high in this one, and the winner will probably be determined at the buzzer. Stevenson gets the nod in this one, but don't take Price's Chargers for granted —especially at their home court.

Massey honored

Plymouth Canton's girls swim team officially ended its long fall season with its annual banquet last week at a restuarant in Ypsilanti.

Sophomore swimmer Kim Massey took the top honor of the evening when she was named the club's Most Valuable Swimmer for the second year in a row. The award was given by her teammates.

Freshman diver Kelly Arvin was chosen the squad's Most Improved Swimmer, and sophomore Lisa Orr was given the Coach's Award for hard work and dedication to the program.

The banquet also marked the final showing for senior co-captains Robbie Bennett and Cindy Shelanskey. Both swimmers were four-year letter winners on coach Anne Massey's squad.

Stanwood again

Sophmore Sarah Stanwood, the versatile swimmer of the Plymouth Salem girls swim team, was voted the Rocks' Most Valuable Swimmer at the squad's season-ending banquet last week. Stanwood qualified for the state meet in two different events plus the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Senior Kim Coates was chosen the club's Most Improved Swimmer, while senior Jill McCann, a four-year letter winner, was given the Coach's Award for dedication and loyalty to the squad.

Rene Lakatos and Sharon Ross were selected the senior co-captains of next year's team.

Coach Chuck Olson led the Rocks to their third straight Suburban Eight League title last fall.

Swim rest

The Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem boys swim teams did not compete last Thursday night. Both squads will remain idle until after the holidays.

The Chiefs resume action Tuesday, Jan. 9 hosting Redford Union in a non-league dual meet starting at 7 p.m. The Rocks are also active on that Tuesday, beginning the new year with a dual meet at Livonia Churchill starting at 7 p.m.

Call coach

Coaches of high school boys' swimming teams in Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Garden City, Redford and Westland are encouraged to contact Bentley coach Keith Wright at 422-3070 after every meet with their best times of the meet.

Wright will chart the listing, which will appear regularly in the Observer Newspapers beginning Dec. 21.

Chief JV loses

The Plymouth Canton JV basketball team lost its first contest of the season, 64-59, to a tough Southfield Lathrup squad last Tuesday in Southfeild.

The Chiefs started out slowly, trailing 13-10 at the end of the first quarter. A good full-court press enabled the Chiefs to tie the score, 30-30, at the intermission.

The Chargers jumped out at Canton in the third stanza, and with some sloppy play by the Chiefs Canton fell behind to stay.

Sophomores Jim Mills and Dill Childs were the leading scorers for Canton with 14 and 10 points respectively.

The Chiefs record dropped to 3-1 and Lathrup now stands at 2-1.

Chief grapplers grip Churchill for victory

By SCOTT ADLER

"It's great. A really big win for us," said a jubilant Dan Chrenko, Plymouth Canton wrestling coach, as he watched first the JV and then the varsity wrestling teams whip their Churchill opponents, 57-12 and 43-15 respectively.

"It's very encouraging to see what we thought would be a much closer match turn out like this."

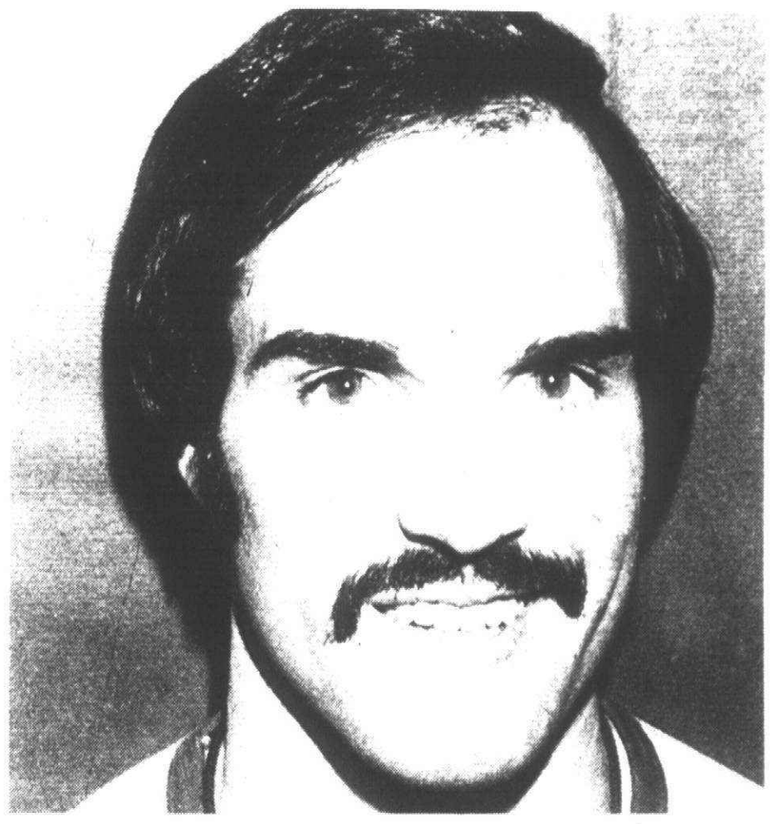

In the JV contest, the only Churchill victories came on forfeits at 178 and 191 pounds. The first 10 weight classes, however, were dominated by the Chiefs. Canton winners included: Joel Schnelbach, Kevin Decker, Brian Lee, Bret Harrala, Andy Kitti, Mike Dupuis, Barron Smith, Dan Smith, Dave Brass and James Kicks. The two Churchill winners were Charlie Martha and Jeff Tinn. The JV is coached by Dan Riggs.

In the varsity match, Chrenko was happy with his underclassmen's development, as well as the seniors who wrestled.

"The young kids did a great job, like (Kevin) Santilli and (Dave) Bennett who are two sophomores that came through with pins. Three of our four seniors won with Dennis (Howell) having the fastest pin of the night. Jay (Lee) beat the league champ of two years ago."

Tom Holloway and Tom Harreld opened the varsity contest with forfeit victories for the Chiefs. At 112 pounds, Dan Muraske, a freshman, was decisioned by Bob Pryzblski, 4-1.

Tim White defeated Ray Bomya, 9-2 in the 119-pound class. At 126, it was Santilli pinning Chet Taylor in 2:35. Junior Tim Racer beat Ron Emerson 5-3, while Bennett pinned Eric Breda at 4:22.

CANTON COACH DAN CHRENKO

Jay Lee whipped former league champ Zack Taylor, 13-6, and junior Mike Kitti creamed Ed Sarah, 15-6, in the 155-pound class. The 165-pound weight class saw Howell pin Frank Kinney in 1:33, the fastest of the evening.

Canton junior Paul Mooney ran into some stiff competition at 178 and was decisioned by Steve Clemens, 5-4.

Norm Recla of Churchill beat Mike Cannon, 8-1, and in the heavyweight category Dan Meiers won on a forfeit for Churchill.

The Chiefs record now stands at 7-4 overall (the seven victories are the most by any Canton wrestling team) and 1-0 in the Western Six League.

"It's always nice to win a league match. And it's even nicer to win at Churchill," said Chrenko. The win marked the first time the Chiefs ever won at Churchill's gym.

Rice tops Borgess

RICE—BORGESS

All 13 players for Birmingham Brother Rice saw action and 10 scored during the Warriors' 82-60 basketball victory Friday over Redford Bishop Borgess.

The win was the second for Rice in as many Catholic League Central Division contests. The Spartans' league ledger slipped to 0-2.

The Warriors blitzed out to a 16-6 lead after the first quarter and extended their advantage to 37-19 at the half. After that, it was no contest.

Tim Andree, Rice's all-state candidate, led all scorers with 26 points. Teammates George Duncan and Don Pietrowski added 19 and 10 points, respectively.

Dave Agardy netted 17 points for Borgess and Mark Taylor contributed 16.

"They're awesome, they really are," said Ron Gutkowski, coach of the Spartans. "They're 6-10, 6-5 and 6-5 and they all have a build. They could double as football players.

"We scrapped, but couldn't keep up with their muscle," Gutkowski continued. "We were really cold (shooting) in the first half. We went 6-30 from the floor. We used a diamond-one defense, got the ball, worked the offense and missed the shot.

"You just can't win ball games like that."

Brother Rice also won the JV game, 65-62.

IN THE POCKET

By W. W. EDGAR

If there was any doubt about bowling being an exciting game, it was removed last Tuesday night in the Wonderland Classic.

In one of the keenest battles of the season, Larry Brandt's K&L team outrolled Jim Shelp's Sherwood Forest squad, 3410-3299 and set a new high for the season.

The winners rolled games of 1079, 1177 and 1154 for the best series posted thus far. Meanwhile, Shelp lost an individual set to a teammate, Hugh O'Neil, 695-694 to add to the excitment.

Meanwhile, Bob Cooker broke the 700 barrier when he laced games of 241, 238 and 245 for a 724.

AFTER HIS STRING of 700 series was broken a week ago, John Hurley came right back this week with another barrier breaking count in the classic doubles at Westland Bowl.

This time, he put together games of 234, 236 and 258 for a 728. Hurley boasts more 700 series then any other bowler in the area.

High scoring also marked competition in the Wednesday men's league. When the firing had ended, Rich Wolfe was out in front with a 235 in 621 and Terry Mijal was next in line with 254 in 611. Both bowlers had to give way to Charlie Tarver, who had the high single game of 259.

In the ladies classic, Ruth Worley set the pace with a 591 and Ann Ahoe had high single with a 235 in a 584 series.

ONLY ONE pin separated the two leaders in the Vinco league at Garden Lanes. This sizzling finish came about when Bob Woldack posted a 632 and Len Elandt a 631. Behind them came Steve Kandow with 621 and Jerry Ohl with a 602.

In the St. Linus league, Bill Wierchiock was top man with a 671. At that figure, he beat Ron Larkin by five pins and Bob Krause took third place with a 636.

THERE WAS an odd finish in the senior league house league at Merri-Bowl. Tom Gow and Ray Plamer were tied at 258 for high game. Their nearest rival was Ron Brennan, who was 20 pins behind with a 238.

BARB DETTORE rolled one of the most consistent series of the season at Woodlane Lanes. She opened with a 203, added a 200 and closed with 192 for a 595 to set the pace in the Bowling Belles loop.

Colleen Anderson landed in second place with a 566 and Jean Grevak had a 202 in 561 for the third spot.

When it comes to odd experiences, Jerry Nolan's would be a bit tough to beat. Bowling in the Tumblers league and averaging 153, he started with six strikes in a row. Then, the pressure got him and he rolled his seventh ball in the gutter. He had to be content with a 212 game.

In the Jacks and Jills league, Gizeen Mitchell had a middle 233 for a 597 to take top honors until Ray Larch turned in a 246 in 620. Betty Koske was high in the Morning Stars with 600.

IN OTHER oustanding performances, Erwin Ottenfman, who carries a 114 average in the senior citizens league at Plymouth Bowl, went 114 pins over with a 228 series. At Super Bowl, Karyn Brothers paced the Las Vegas circuit with a 242 in 567.

Spartans crunched

A more experienced Pontiac Northern wrestling contingent had little trouble defeating Livonia Stevenson last week in an Inter-Lakes League dual, 51-9.

Stevenson's three individual victors—Steve Justice, 132 pounds, Ron Carozzo, 145, and Eric Temby, 155—all won by decisions.

Stevenson, West triumph

After trailing 14-12 after the first quarter, Livonia Stevenson out-pointed Walled Lake Central, 35-18, during the middle two periods Friday enroute to a 65-46 Inter-Lakes League basketball victory.

The Spartans limited their guest from Walled Lake to four points during the entire second quarter.

"We were playing man-to-man defense and jump-switching," said Stevenson coach George Van Wagoner. "We were executing better in the second quarter. We weren't executing at first."

Bruce Dominiak scored 14 points for the Spartans. Evan Lyall added 10.

No one for Central scored in double figures. Mark Williams, Tom Phelps and Harry Nichols all produced eight points each for the Vikings.

Stevenson converted on 15 of 18 chances from the free-throw line during the game. "That's what we have to do against good ball clubs," said Van Wagoner.

The Spartans' coach had special praise for the hustle and hard work of Dominiak, Lyall and Harkrader.

Stevenson also triumphed in the JV opener, 72-42.

GC WEST—SCHAFER

Garden City West played over some early foul trouble Friday and defeated Southgate Schafer in a Tri-River League basketball game, 59-50.

"This is one we needed to stay in contention," said West coach Chris Babler, who watched his charges raise their conference record to 2-1, 3-2 overall.

The Tigers out-scored Schafer during every quarter except the fourth—17-12, 16-10, 12-9 and 14-19.

Pat Dybas, West's center, totalled 22 points on six field goals and a 10-15 performance from the charity stripe. He also grabbed 12 rebounds.

Gary Rago contributed 14 points to the Tigers' offensive cause.

Dave Williams collected 18 points for the Vikings, 12 from the free-throw line.

"We were able to show a certain amount of maturity," said Babler. "We were able to control the tempo of the game.

"Again, Rago played well. Gerald Tatro came off the bench and did well (six points)," said Babler.

The Tigers are now off until after the holidays.

West also won the JV game, 54-39.

Doc's Corner

By DENNIS O'CONNOR
Sports Editor

In a recent column I asserted the right of journalists to name names whenever high school athletes are involved in disciplinary action which removes them from the team.

Several readers have objected to my position in the Oct. 9 column.

In the column I also referred to Plymouth Salem varsity basketball coach Fred Thomann, and a discipline problem he had more than two years ago.

Thomann also takes exception to what I wrote. Because readers may be interested in his views, here is Coach Thomann's reply:

"My initial reaction to your column, Mr. O'Connor, is one of anger and frustration. I honestly believe that you owe me an apology and a retraction for the remarks that you included in your article of Oct. 9, 1978 more than two years and eight months after the fact.

"To begin with, you said: 'It reminded me of a time two years ago when (named student-athlete) quit the Plymouth Salem basketball team after getting in countless disagreements with head coach Fred Thomann. (He) also had many discipline problems which led to his departure from the team.'

"You know that you never witnessed any disagreement between myself and the athlete in question, and your statement as to his leaving the team was pure conjecture. But the point is, why bring it up at all?

"You said: '...I went ahead and wrote an extremely small piece with a headline about the incident—much to the dismay of the Salem coach.

'The result—I was banned from the locker room for two games and called every name in the book by the Salem coach.'

"The only time you were barred from the locker room was, four games after the initial article, when you wrote a second highlighted article about the same student-athlete.

"Yes, I was angry; and in my anger, may have voiced a few epithets but did not, of course, call you 'every name in the book' as you wrote on Oct. 9.

"Quite apart from your distortions, I firmly believe that responsible reporting of high school athletes involves concern for the individual student-athlete and his family and their relationships in the community. To disregard this responsibility for the sake of, as you have said, '...to gather the news and report the facts,' is to look only at the immediate need of attracting interest to a story while ignoring fundamental fairness. These are, after all, youngsters who are 16, 17, and 18 years of age. They are not professionals.

"I take my duties as a teacher-coach seriously. I have always tried to be cooperative with the press and will continue to do so. I expect you and other members of the press, however, to honor the confidentiality existing in that special relationship between a high school athlete and his coach. I would also expect you to recognize that, under certain circumstances, a member of the team will be disciplined as are other students in school, and this should not be a matter of great public concern.

"Thank you for this opportunity to reply."

Jr. tankers 3d at league meet

The Plymouth-Canton Junior Swim Club finished its fall season with a third-place finish in the Super Six League Championship meet recently held at Chelsea. The junior tankers resume action for the winter season on Wednesday, Jan. 3 with registration taking place at the Plymouth Salem pool that night.

Plymouth-Canton scored 1,091 points in the league meet, some 600 shy of the league champions from Chelsea.

Chelsea won the event with 1,671 points. Milan was second with 1,393 ½. Ypsilanti followed Plymouth-Canton in fourth place with 1,018 points. Belleville was fifth with 735 ½ and Willow Run was last with 528.

Plymouth-Canton won two freestyle relay events and placed second in three medley relay races.

Cindy Elliott, Lisa Mather, Beth Scheafbauer and Kathy Kennedy combined for the 9-10-year old girls prize in the free style relay race. Their time was 1:04.6. Jim Dillon, Bill Matthews, Tim Collins and Bob Bowling won their event (11-12-year old boys) in 2:06.8.

Susan Schendel, Erin Olson, Kathy Buckley and Cassie Cummings placed second in the eight-and-under girls competition in the medley relay. Their time was 137.6, 11 seconds slower than Chelsea's foursome.

Cindy Elliott, Beth Scheafbauer, Gail Chelian and Kathy Kennedy also placed second in their medley relay with a 1:13.8 clocking. Tim Collins, Bob Bowling, Jeff Hancock and Jim Dillon finished second in the 11-12-year old boys medley race in 2:22.6.

Individual winners included Sarah Stanwood in the 50-yard butterfly and 200-yard freestyle. She won with times of :30.5 and 2:10.5, respectively, in the girls 13-14-year old competition.

Kennedy shined in the 50-yard freestyle, swimming the distance in :33.4 for the 9-10-year old girls championship. Bowling (11-12-year old 50-yard freestyle), Lisa Forsythe (13-14-year old 50-yard freestyle) and Collins (11-12-year old 50-yard backstroke) were the other Plymouth-Canton individual winners.

Jim Dillon placed second in the 11-12 year old 50-yard butterfly, Cindy Elliott was second in the 9-10-year old girls 25-yard butterfly, Jim Riemenschieder was third in the eight-and-under boys 25-yard backstroke, and Gail Chelian placed fourth in the 9-10-year old girls 50-yard breaststroke for the other top Plymouth-Canton individual finishes.

CC falls again

Churchill prevails

Livonia Churchill pulled away from Walled Lake Western in the fourth quarter Friday and went on to win the Western Six League basketball contest, 56-46.

"It was close right through the third quarter. We picked it up in the fourth period and the kids caught fire. Ralph Jarnot and Dave Krick sparked our attack in that quarter," said Churchill coach Fred Price.

The Chargers sank 18 points in the final quarter compared to Western's seven.

"We played good defense in the final minutes and our bench really helped us throughout the game. They gave our starters some rest so they had something for that last quarter," Price explained.

The first three quarters were as close as could be. Churchill led at the end of the first, 15-14. The game was tied at halftime, 27-27, and Western took a one point lead in the third quarter, 39-38.

The Churchill JV also won, 68-41.

The victory raises the Chargers' record to 3-2 overall and 2-0 in the league.

CC—De La SALLE

Detroit Catholic Central, which lost its second starter of the season last week with an injury prior to its Catholic League basketball game Friday against Detroit De La Salle, fell to the Pilots, 53-49.

Todd Nadeau sustained a hand injury and will be lost to the team at least until after the holidays, said CC coach Bernie Holowicki.

Barry Spencer, an excellent playmaker and shooter, was lost to the squad before the season began with a knee injury.

"We're hurting," admitted Holowicki. "We're struggling and we're in trouble. We've had a lot of adversity.

"We're really kind of a young team now. I don't want to alibi. When you lose players, you have to have other people to fill in.

"De La Salle is a good club," said Holowicki.

The Shamrocks were plagued with the same problem against the Pilots which they have experienced all season long to date — a miserable third quarter.

CC, which trailed by only one at the half, 28-27, mustered only six points during that third period.

Teamwork in buying helps

Agemy, Albus prove 'little guy' can make it

By BETTY MASSON

business

Monday, December 18, 1978 ★5B

On the way to the back of his store, Joe Agemy picks up a coffee cup a customer has discarded and straightens out a few heads of lettuce.

On a similar trip, Tom Albus leads the way, carrying a large collection of empty cartons he has picked up at the front.

When you own you're own store, you're always working. And if you want to make it successful, you must constantly pay attention to details such as these.

Agemy and Albus own stores, and are successful in the tough world of the grocery business.

Agemy's, at Five Mile and Farmington Roads in Livonia's midtown, is the site of a former A&P market. So is Albus's store, which is called Stan's Market. It is at the intersection of Ann Arbor Road and Ann Arbor Trail near the western edge of Livonia.

How can "the little guy, the family business" compete, when even some of the big chains are in financial trouble?

PART OF THE answer is attention to detail, making every trip count. Both stores take pride in their meat and produce departments. There are no pre-packaged steaks here.

For Agemy, it means frequent early morning trips (about 3:30 a.m. in the summer and at 6 o'clock in the winter) to the produce terminal to pick out fresh fruits and vegetables.

Albus has an eye on everything that goes on in his store to keep a promise to "treat customers like they should be treated."

Part of this promise is "no long lines at checkout counters." When the need arises, new registers are put into service.

Both have one man in charge of meats. In Agemy's case, it is his brother and partner, Mack, who travels to the packing houses to choose all the meat. For Albus, the head meatman who does the same job is Ron Keenmon.

ANOTHER PART of the answer lies in an association of independent grocers through Spartan Stores, a cooperative food whoesaling business operating in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

It claims to be the No. 1 food distributor in Michigan, and No. 2 in the nation. Spartan Stores is owned by storeowners themselves, who are the shareholders, and is operated through a board of directors.

"Through this, you can buy and be as competitive as any chain in the city," said Albus.

Besides being able to buy in volume and offering member stores lower, competitive prices, Spartan affiliates offer contests designed to attract customers to their stores.

In a recent "Shoppers' Holiday Sweepstakes," Stan's Market had two out of five winners of trips for two to Las Vegas, while Agemy's had one.

All the winners are from the Livonia-Westland area. They are Michael Barna Jr., Pearl Monkiewicz, and Jerry Ardrey. Leo J. Gizicki also won a $50 shopping spree from Stan's.

Spartan officials estimated that about four million entries were received in the three-state area. The grand prizes were four expense-paid trips to Germany.

Currently, Agemy's is giving away three of the "world's largest Christmas stockings." They are on display at the store.

A THIRD PART of the answer to making a success of the grocery business may also be to start young. Agemy and Albus have similar backgrounds, both having grown up in grocery stores operated for many years by their fathers.

Stan's takes its name from Albus's father, who was active in the business until his retirement last January. Now the store is operated by Albus and his brother Mike. They have been in the present location three years after operating a store across the street 10 years.

Agemy's was opened in its present location about 18 months ago. Agemy also has operated a store in Allen Park for 20 years, and is in partnership with his brother.

He also has two sons, David, who manages the Livonia store, and Allen, manager at Allen Park, as well as another son and a nephew who work part-time in the business.

"We had to expand," said Agemy, "because you can have only so many families eating out of one store.

He says business has improved in the last two or three months.

"One thing that has helped is that people have moved in from downriver or have told their relatives about us. They know of our reputation."

Tom Albus, owner of Stan's Market, faces a myriad of details every day in his conduct of a successful business. When not seeing to it that things are running smoothly in customer areas, he's at this desk poring over marketing information and carrying on discussions with suppliers. (Staff photo by Bob Woodring)

Agemy has plans for expansion and so does Albus. The latter reports his business has increased as much as 30 per cent a year over the last few years. He has just completed remodeling and has doubled his meat department.

The two men agree that high prices for meats are not scaring away customers. "I've noticed that people are buying better stuff, the good stuff," said Albus. He cited premium beer as one example, as well as better cuts of meat — and more meat.

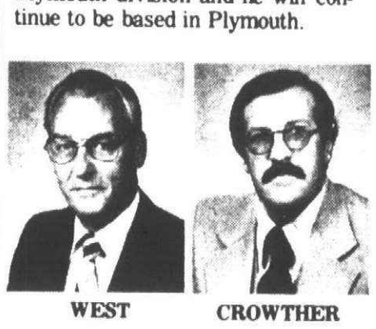

Albus and Agemy also are expanding their cooperative Spartan effort into a cooperative advertising program for 1979.

Focus on Business People

Kenneth R. West has been named manager of the North American Automotive Region of Associated Spring, Barnes Group Inc., effective Jan. 1. West was formerly manager of the company's Plymouth division and he will continue to be based in Plymouth.

WEST CROWTHER

In his new position, West will manage the company's automotive region manufacturing, consisting of the Ann Arbor and Plymouth plants as well as Canadian plants located in Hamilton and Burlington, Ont., and Pointe Claire, Quebec.

West holds a degree in mechanical engineering from Lawrence Institute of Technology and a master's degree in business administration from Michigan State University. He joined Associated Spring in 1950 and has been division manager both in Dayton, Ohio, and Plymouth.

Donald W. Crowther in turn has been appointed to replace West as Associated Spring's division manager in Plymouth. He has been factory manager at that facility since 1975 after joining the company in 1969 as a production engineer at Plymouth.

He too attended Lawrence Institute of Technology in Southfield.

Associated Spring is headquartered in Bristol, Conn. The company claims to be the world's leading producer of close-tolerance mechanical springs and critical custom-made metal parts for uses in industrial machinery, transportation equipment, automobiles, appliances, business machines, construction machinery and electronic equipment.

Kenneth H. Harma of Livonia, service parts merchandiser for Ford Parts and Service Division, has been awarded $4,125 in United States savings bonds for a management proposal which will help improve division efficiency.

Harma suggested replacing two automotive parts with one which would be suitable for both applications.

Ford started its management proposal plan in 1949 to encourage employees to use their creativity to help the company improve manufacturing methods, job safety, work efficiency, product quality and the company's position in the market place.

Economic experts find area of agreement in uncertainty

By TIM RICHARD

You ate too much and now you're having a nightmare. Which one would be worse:

a) Standing in front of a University of Michigan alumni club and forecasting a Rose Bowl loss?

b) Standing in front of the Economic Club of Detroit and forecasting a recession?

Five business executives last week found themselves in front of the Economic Club but stopped short of predicting a recession. A flattening, yes. A credit crunch, yes. Reduced auto sales, yes. A decline in new housing starts, yes.

But no one would predict a recession.

YET THERE were many pessimistic sentences in their speeches.

David Littman, vice-president for economics of Manufacturers National Bank, qualified his list of good things that might happen by hinging them on actions of the federal government. The good things will occur only if federal monetary and fiscal policies are brought under control.

More important may have been this thought:

"Largely as a result of these (1978) inflationary excesses, the economy now enters 1979 with considerable vulnerability to recession and great uncertainty regarding even more government-imposed controls."

Littmann made the optimistic assumption there would be no major strikes—in a year when auto contracts must be negotiated—and predicted a one per cent real growth in the gross national product.

And if there is a strike of a week or a month? He didn't say.

THE LEAST gloomy forecast came in the construction industry, which in the past has been one of the hardest hit by recessions.

Robert F. Johnson, executive vice-president of Etkin, Johnson & Korb, one of the state's largest builders, saw good things happening in two important areas—industrial construction and public works for such projects as sewers.

A prediction of industrial expansion is always a good sign.

There were two points of uncertainty. One was the effect of the Headlee amendment's passage on local government and school construction. Proposal E on the Nov. 7 ballot requires all general obligation bond issues to be approved by voters.

The other uncertain sign was residential construction. He predicted 22,000 housing starts in 1979 compared to 24,780 last year. That's a drop of 11 per cent.

TWO SPEAKERS saw credit problems developing during the year.

Despite higher interest rates, "Demand for credit should remain strong through March of 1979," said Stanford C. Stoddard of Michigan National Corp. Then he added: "At which time lenders will restrict their advances."

Stoddard said large firms will be able to pass along interest rate increases to customers, but small and medium firms won't. "It would be a tragedy to have too much pressure on small and medium-sized firms which must supply the larger firms," he said.

A Sears executive, Larry Trettenero, said the buying public will make an effort to reduce consumer debt, now standing at $1.1 billion.

There was much upbeat in Trettenero's forecast—a continued rise in retail sales, though not so much as in 1978. Yet the historical fact is that a peaking of consumer credit has usually been associated with the start of a recession.

A SELF-EFFACING prediction came from Thomas F. Russell of Federal-Mogul Corp.

He forecast a reduction of American auto sales from the current 11.2 million to 10.9 million.

But then he went out of his way to say that General Motors' Thomas A. Murphy was predicting a continued increase, that Murphy had been right in the past when others were wrong, and that he hoped Murphy was correct this time.

But that didn't alter the bottom line of Russell's prediction: A decrease in auto sales.

Russell saw hope that in the 1980's American firms would become competitive in the international market place. If so, it would be the first time in a generation that American cars have been competitive abroad, let alone at home, where nearly one vehicle in five is an import.

What no one bothered to put together are two contradictory facts about future vehicles and fuel consumption.

One fact is the boom in sales of non-auto vehicles—vans, pickup trucks, four-wheel drives—as personal passenger vehicles. The other is an administration prediction of $1 a gallon gasoline.

Those two trends spell more trouble for the metropolitan Detroit economy than anyone dared to say aloud in front of the Economic Club.

Auto Show to aid 3 charities

The Detroit Auto Dealers Association, sponsor of the Detroit Auto Show, has selected three metropolitan area charities to share the proceeds from the '79 show's Charity Preview Night, Jan. 12.

They are the Boys' Club of Metropolitan Detroit, the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb Counties, and the Northeast Guidance Center for Emotionally Disturbed Children.

Leo Calhoun, owner of Calhoun Ford in Plymouth, is chairman of the '79 show which will be open to the public Jan. 13 through Jan. 21 at Cobo Hall.

The preview night for charity on the evening before the grand opening is a traditional $30 a couple, black-tie benefit.

This winter's show marks the 63rd year that the DADA has sponsored the event which will feature a special activity each day of the show.

At a press luncheon Thursday, Calhoun revealed that on Monday and Tuesday, Jan 15 and 16, many well known children's personalities will be featured both in the afternoon and evening.

A senior citizens party will be held Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 17. It will be followed at 7 p.m. by Celebrity Night when many Detroit area radio, television, newspaper and sports personalities will be present.

New car auctions will take place the evenings of Thursday and Friday, Jan. 18 and 19. They will take place in the individual exhibit areas where the auction car is displayed.

"We truly hopeto make the '79 auto show reflect the theme, 'The Best of Everything,' " Calhoun said. "In addition to all of the beautiful new vehicles, we will have plenty of family fun and entertainment."

You'll see it at Indy

This specially modified version of Ford Division's all-new 1979 Mustang will be the official pace car at the 63d annual running of the Indianapolis 500 next May. Built from a three-door hatchback model, the black-and-pewter Mustang has bring orange and red accent stripes and a non-production T-roof. The car will be equipped with a 302-CID V-8 engine.

A new look for Tonquish Manor

Tonquish Manor, the City of Plymouth's apartment building for senior citizens, had its columns decked out with the greenery of Christmas last week — thanks to a lot of hours and some hard work put in by members of the Colonial Kiwanis Club. Members of the Thursday luncheon club have decorated the Tonquish columns annually over the past few years. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Wood seen as unlikely fuel source

Despite increased public speculation that wood could become an important source of fuel, a University of Michigan authority on natural resource economics says such a development is not very likely for two reasons:

• Forest production and delivery systems, which are dependent on petroleum, make wood an expensive energy source.

• Wood saves far more energy when it is substituted for steel, aluminum or cement than is generated when it is burned as fEul.

"As energy costs rise, the cost of virtually every step in the forest production process rises," says Prof. G. Robinson Gregory of the U-M School of Natural Resources. These include such things as planting, site preparation, road maintenance, logging and transportation.

Because of the prospect of increased forest production costs, Gregory maintains that unless the cost of oil "goes well above $20 a barrel, it will still be a cheaper fuel for most purposes than wood grown or harvested for fuel."

The UM professor made these points in a recent speech at the annual meeting of the Society of American Foresters, held jointly with the Canadian Institute of Forestry.

But Gregory predicts that wood could play many key roles in an energy-conscious era.

"If saving oil is the objective, we would be advised to use our wood to replace use of steel and aluminum—both energy intensive materials," he says.

"Wood is one of the least energy intensive materials we know about. As energy prices rise, wood prices—on this account, at least—will be forced up less than those of competing materials."

And, although wood is not liekly to supplant fossil fuels, there will be steadily increasing markets for fuelwood, says Gregory.

"These markets will perhaps be large enough to enable forest managers to 'clean up' their forests—to get rid of snags, culls, underireable species, low grade trees and of logging waste.

"It may not be possible to market such materials at a profit," notes the U-M professor, "but the net cost of removal would be substantially reduced, and the resulting increased yield of quality timber may make this a highly profitable investment."

One example of such use of wood waste is the pulp and paper industry, which today generates nearly half its energy from forest residue and is moving "rapidly toward complete energy self-sufficiency," according to Gregory.

The U-M professor also notes that pressure for energy is taking its toll in the less developed parts of the world—including Nepal, India, Peru, Mexico and hill regions of Pakistan—where lack of forest management is leading to a virtual depletion of wood supply.

TRAVEL LOG of Iris Jones

The world's a year-round bazaar

There is a Christmas gift drawer in my house that I fill up as I travel. There are silver charms and chunky Caribbean earrings for my nieces, English soccer books and Indian record albums for my nephews, a tropical shirt for my son and miscellaneous books, cassettes, stamps, coins and cookbooks for others.

Any traveler can save time, money and take some of the hassles out of Christmas shopping with a little forward planning this time of the year. The trick is to identify or set up a special interest for as many people on your Christmas list as possible.

Many simple gifts are available in other places that might not be found here. The main considerations are: is it something I can carry home? Can I afford it? Is it a gift I couldn't buy at home?

The gift doesn't need to be a five-foot-high carved Indian elephant to be a success, as I discovered recently when I took a box of travel trinkets to a Christmas party.

The most popular gift was not the silver spoon, the tiny wooden statue, the cookbook, the dool or any of the other exotic-looking gifts. It was a first edition stamp of the Indian leader Mahatma Ghandi.

You can't find a gift easier to buy and carry than that. In the future, I will buy stamps wherever I go.

If you are struggling with the Christmas gift ideas, consider starting a Christmas tradition that you can carry on when you travel.

• Charm bracelets. Buy a chain and single charm, and add silver charms from Mexico, the Caribbean, Hawaii or any part of the world for about $3.50. Gold is now too expensive for casual giving.

• Stamps and coins. Collectors come in all ages. A basic stamp or coin book can be reinforced as you go by a single stop at the local post office or bank. Some people would prefer a first edition stamp to a real live Hawaiian dancing girl.

• Records and cassettes. Rock music is the same the world over. Folk music is different. Either way, you please somebody with a local version of music.

• Silvers spoons. Buy the first one at home and you'll never run out. This is a quality gift, and it doesn't stoop to being a souvenir ashtray.

• Cookbooks, travel books or any other special interest books. They're flat. Everybody prints them. You can't buy them at home. And, if worse comes to worse, you can mail them home book rate.

• Museum and art gifts. Museum posters cost a fortune in American book stores. A Yugoslavian museum poster will cost you $2. Slides of art work hanging on a faraway wall can be bought before you get back on the tour bus and carried in purse or pocket.

• Be origianl. Try crafts, polished stones, special teas and cheeses. And, if you run out of other ideas, buy tiny bottles of local liqueurs. If your friends don't drink, they can always hang that gift on the Christmas tree or serve it to somebody else.

FROM THE MAILBAG—The Southeast Michigan Travel and Tourist Association operates a 24-hour SNOWLINE that gives up-to-the-minute conditions at major southeastern Michigan ski resorts.

Call 357-2600. Taped daily, the information includes news of cross-country skiing, ice fishing, tobogganing and other winter events.

The association also publishes a nine-county "Winterfun" guidebook. Write to the Southeast Michigan Travel and Tourist Association, Amerian Center Building, Suite 350, 27777 Franklin Road, Southfield 48034.

DRIVERS AND CAMPERS have access to another publication, called "Standby: A guide on how to be ready for emergencies." It is published by the Coleman Co.

It tells you what to do when the lights go out, what to carry in your car for emergencies and how to use camping gear and other things for lighting and cooking when winter closes the world down.

For a free copy, ask your nearest Coleman dealer or write to the Public Relations Department, Coleman Co., Inc., 250 N. Francis, Wichita, Kan. 67201.

HOTELS OFFER CHRISTMAS bargain packages this time of year, because business is slow when business people stay home with their families.

Holiday specials are available at the Plaza Hotel in Detroit, which offers a $35 room for two, including a cocktail and parking, and free sleeping space in your room for children younger than 18.

The Michigan Inn in Southfield offers one night at regular rates and the second night free, with free space to children younger than 18 accompanied by parents.

Hotels are eager to pay their rent during slow holiday seasons, so check rates at other nearby hotes if you want to consider a hotel holiday over the Christmas and New Year season.

LOCAL CHRISTMAS mini trips include the following Yuletide events at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village: Toys around the Christmas Tree, an exhibit of antique toys and an exhibit of Christmas crafts in the making at the Museum; Christmas cooking and craft demonstrations plus old-fashioned decorations at the Village; a presentation of "A Christmas Carol" by the Henry Ford Museum Theater at 2 p.m. Dec. 26-31, and at 7 p.m. Jan. 6, 13, 20; and a sleigh ride and dinner at the Village through Jan. 14, for $17 a person.

THE MICHIGAN CALENDAR of travel events will list recreational, cultural, sports and other events of interest to travelers if you can meet their Jan. 8 deadline.

This six-month seasonal calendar gives the public information about what is going in the state.

If you would like a copy, or would like to list an event, write the Travel Bureau at P.O. Box 30226, Lansing 48909.

The grand hotels

Majestic stones rival glass-and-chromes

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

The Chateau Frontenac Hotel peers down from a high cliff over the restored old city of Quebec, Canada. Presidents, prime ministers and kings have stayed there for 100 years. It is one of the visible grand hotels of North America.

On the other side of the continent, L'Ermitage hides quietly amid affluent apartment buildings in Beverly Hills, Calif. Its most famous guests are rock stars and movie stars. It is one of the less visible grand hotels.

Grand hotels, old and new, give travelers an unusual option in a world of standardized chain motels. Each hotel has an unique environment, legends about famous guests, and personal service and higher-than-average rates.

They once were reserved for the rich. But rising hotel costs make them a reasonable buy nowadays if you plan to spend the high dollar demanded by first class glass-and-concrete high-rises which dominate city landscapes.

Unusual hotels like this have been maintained and restored in rural and city settings all over the United States and Canada. The Grand Hotel sprawls in all its white clapboard splendor across Mackinac Island. Old ladies still peer over the railings of the huge spa hotel in French Lick, Ind., now the French Lick-Sheraton.

All of them were built for the very affluent and the very famous of one period of another, and all are now trying to attract the middle- and upper-middle-income traveler.

The Chateau Frontenac is one of the late 19th and early 20th century hotels built across Canada by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways.

The first Canadian Pacific Hotel was the Banff Springs, which rises in rocky splendor out of the Rocky Mountains at Banff, Alberta.

Canadian Pacific could not haul heavy dining cars over the mountains 100 years ago, so the company built dining cabins which eventually were replaced by the Banff Springs and the nearby Chateau Lake Louise for train travelers.

Other famous railway hotels, in the heart of almost every Canadian city, are the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa, the Royal York in Toronto and the Empress in Victoria.

Sometime during the last 10 years, every one of these hotels has been threatened with demolition by company treasurers who were appalled by the cost of upkeep.

Canadians were so enraged at the idea of losing their famous downtown meeting places, that they threatened to revolt if the companies touched one brick on the historic old dames of stone.

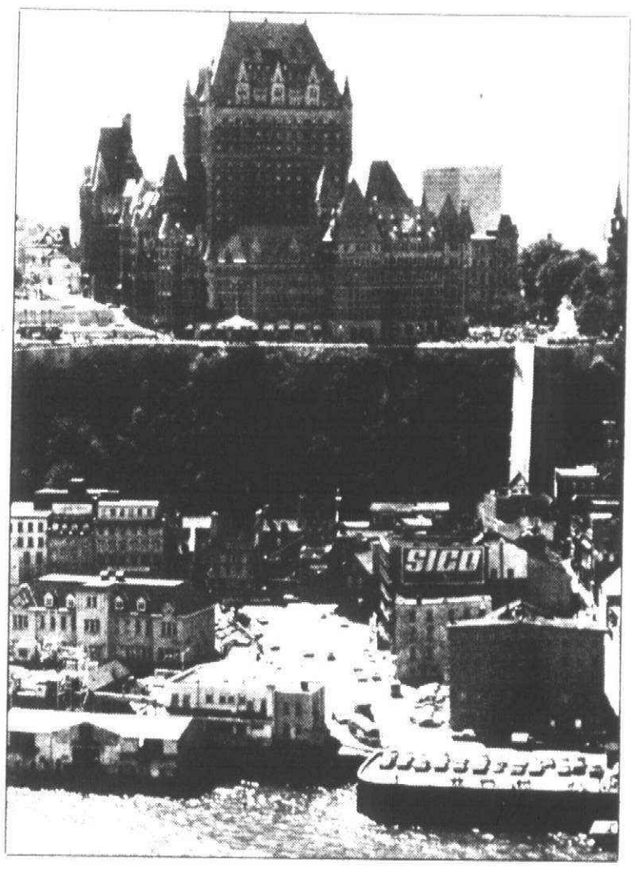

Canadian National and Canadian Pacific chose an alternative. Renovate and reorganize them for the younger and the middle-income traveler.

You can dance all night in discos now in most of these chateau hotels. The stuffy old dining rooms have been replaced by beer and wine pubs, rock bands and elegant French and oriental dining rooms.

Prices are comparable to better quality hotels anywhere, with $50 as a starting price for a room for two and special rates for weekend packages.

The L'Ermitage in Beverly Hills has none of the history associated with the chateau hotels of Canada, but it was recently built for the same reason: to provide unusual, elegant surroundings to travelers who are bored with ordinary accommodations and are willing to pay for something grander.

Arnold and Severyn Ashkenazy, who were born in Poland and schooled in France, built the hotel as a California version of the European "hotel de grande class."

Ex-hooker stumps for decriminalization

By MICHAEL MATUSZEWSKI

Carol Ernst is a slight wisp of a woman. With delicate white skin, fine hair and a pert little smile that evaporates almost as quickly as it appears, she could be another Livonia homemaker.

She's not.

She is a former prostitute who has turned political activist. When she's not driving a bus in Ann Arbor, she's trying to win support for decriminalizing prostitution.

"We have to start dealing with prostitution in a positive way. You're not going to get rid of it," she claims.

"If it were any other trade, the city (of Detroit) would be going 'hurray.' The city officials would be pointing to it as a sign of the city's rebirth," she says.

But prostitution isn't limited to the city.

"It isn't as visible in the suburbs. There's a different kind of clientele," she says. Much of the streetwalking is limited to areas south of Eight Mille Road, but the suburban sex market revolves around hotels, plush houses, telephone work and "high society" services.

MS. ERNST IS a member of the Prostitution Education Project of Michigan (PEP) and its smaller affiliates, CUPIDS — Citizens to Upgrade Prostitution in Detroit and Suburbs — and Ann Arbor's Allyecat. She calls PEP a "sister organization" of the nationally-known San Francisco group, COYOTE (Call Off Your Old Tired Ethics).

Her plan is to make hooking a respected profession, restoring it to its lofty position of thousands of years ago. Priestesses in some primitive religions, she says, offered the same services as today's prostitutes but were revered rather than reviled.

Speaking to a group of Oakland County Libertarians in Southfield, Ms. Ernst, who has also tried her hand at substitute schoolteaching, unveiled a sketchy plan to set up a number of "stroll districts" throughout the metropolitan area.

Acknowledging the existence of informal stroll districts along Detroit's Woodward and Cass Corridors, she said their recognized counterparts could be better controlled and better protected.

Prostitutes working the area could draw up a set of standards. The "johns" who violate those standards — by trying to pick up any woman on the street, for example — "just wouldn't get serviced."

"The johns have to realize that they can't go accosting anybody walking the street. You can be horny and still be cool," she says.

"If you have standards of behavior, they can be enforced."

MOREOVER, SHE adds, once stroll areas are defined, "street work" tends to subside. "Prostitution is a very private, discreet profession," she says.

Offering an example, she pointed to Munich, Germany. "Munich set up seven stroll areas. After 15 years, there is hardly any street work.

"As the women get stabilized," she says, "they move off the street and into houses.

"Then they keep working to improve their houses.

"I've got my own fantasies," Ms. Ernst continues. "I dream of owning a house and fixing it up very plush. All sorts of erotic literature would be available and there'd be lectures by the ACLU (American Civil Liberties Union).

"It would be a place where respectable people wouldn't mind coming."

IT IS THOSE respectable people that Ms. Ernst and her fellow CUPIDS and Allyecat members will have to convince in their "decrim" efforts.

"There's a lot of work that needs to be done educating the public," she says. "The neighborhood groups can't go along just saying 'Let's get the dirty whores out of here.'

"You're not going to get rid of the prostitutes. You clamp down in one area and they're just going to move somewhere else. It's the balloon effect," she says.

Ms. Ernst has her work cut out. She must overcome the resistence of neighborhood groups who would like nothing better than to see the hookers move elsewhere. And she must overcome the hostiltiy of persons who charge prostitution is degrading, dehumanizing and immoral.

"These women are making a living. They're staying off the welfare rolls. They're raising families.

"A lot of people don't realize that there are a lot of people in Detroit whose mothers, aunts or grandmothers raised families and put food on the table by turning tricks," she says.

TO THOSE who say whoring is dehumanizing and degrading, she contends it is nothing more than providing a needed service.

'These woman are making a living. They're staying off the welfare rolls. They're raising families.'

–Carol Ernst

"Try to think of more positive images," she advises. "Think of a doctor, a social worker, a counselor. Think of a lawyer and his client. Think even of a minister.

"Just because you get paid for your services doesn't mean it's degrading," she says.

Service and need are key words.

"There will always be a need. People do need help," Ms. Ernst says.

"Some people just like anonymous sex. Some don't want to invest the emotional energy in some types of relationships. Some people don't want to or aren't successful in the hustling scene.

"Sometimes they're just very horny or have been through a very intensive experience.

"Sometimes they just need or want companionship," she says.

"A lot of times, the john who picks up the streetwalkers want that sleazy, flashy, high-level theater," she continues.

Prostitutes are more like therapists, says Ms. Ernst, who turned most of her tricks in message parlors in Michigan and other states.

"We try to fulfill whatever needs seem apparent. It's just like therapy work. Whores become very good at sizing up who and what a person is all about," she insists.

Idea leaves the law cold

Carol Ernst wants to legalize prosititution and thinks she'll do it by educating neighborhood groups and the public.

She's going to have educate the police.

And that does not seem likely.

"We're absolutely opposed to legalizing or decriminalizing prostitution," said Oakland County Chief Asst. Prosecutor Richard Thompson.

"We find that prostitution is always linked to other kinds of crime. The idea of setting up "red-light districts" or war zones has been tried in other cities. There's always violence associated with it," he said.

Boston, Mass., several years ago, set up several red-light districts. Since that time, according to news reports, there have several murders and an overall increase in violent crimes in the area and surrounding areas.

While Oakland County police officials arrest and prosecute prostitutes, Thompson said his office is more concerned with the pimps. "It's with the pimps that organizied crime usually get involved," Thompson said.

He agreed that protitution is more discreet in the suburbs. "They don't openly hail cars from streetcorners. They're basically more sophisticated. They work the hotels and the bars.

"Sometimes the pimps will arrange for a group of prostitutes to show up at a party," he said.

College gets pioneer's verse

By TIM RICHARD

Henry Rowe Schoolcraft, for whom the community college in western Wayne County was named, gained fame as state geologist and Indian agent in pioneer days.

To the nation he is best known as the collector of Chippewa tales which inspired Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's "The Song of Hiawatha."

Now it appears Schoolcraft himself was a narrative poet. The college library has received a copy of his 1820 opus "Transallegania: The Groans of Missouri."

Library director Patrick Butler said the 24-page pamphlet has been valued at $600. It is one of only five copies in existence—the others being in the Library of Congress, the Smithsonian Institution, the New York State Library and the Boston Public Library.

DONOR IS Cornell Jaray, a publisher in Glen Head, N.Y. Butler said Jaray looked for a library which specializes in Schoolcraft collection and was surprised to find a community college named for him.

The college's Bradner Library has no particular collection of Schoolcraft's works although it does have several volumes. The most readable is his "popular narrative" of the 1820 exploration of the Great Lakes in an expedition led by Territorial Gov. Lewis Cass.

Schoolcraft (1793-1864) served as geologist on that months long canoe trip. His "Transallegania" poem is about copper mining.

Butler said the $600 valuation was made by an appraiser because there have been no records of a sale.

The college board of trustees formally accepted the poem Wednesday.

AFTER THE CASS expedition, Schoolcraft became the U.S. Indian agent in the upper peninsula. He served in the territorial legislature from 1828-32.

In 1832 he commanded the expedition which discovered the sources of the Mississippi River, and in 1836 he concluded a treaty in which the Indians ceded some 16 million acres of land to the U.S.

Schoolcraft's fame rests largely on his six-volume work, "History and Statistical Information Respecting the History, Condition and Prospects of the Indian Tribes of the United States" (1851-57).

His other works are about science and Indians.

OTHER RECENT gifts to the college were:

- A Dukane projector, an audio-visual piece of equipment for the electronics department, from Robert Rinn, sales manager of Micro-Measurements, Romulus. Estimated value is $100. Rinn is a member of the college's electronics advisory committee.
- A $100 gift to the athletic department's national team travel fund from Mr. and Mrs. Aram M. Gavoor of Livonia.

Christmas greenery was displayed longer

Certain plants are traditionally associated with the observance of Christmas. Evergreen trees, mistletoe, holly and ivy are all symbols of the holiday season.

In more recent times, the poinsettia and the Christmas cactus have joined the list of living decorations most popular at this time of year.

Hardly a home exists today without some form of holiday greenery adorning it in late December. Nowadays, most people take their decorations down as soon as Christmas is over, and few leave them up after New Year's Day.

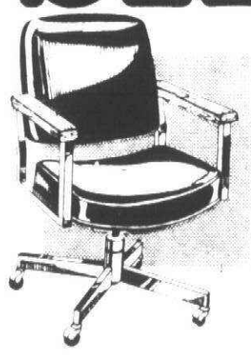

SUCH WAS NOT the case in years gone by.

It was considered unlucky to remove the decorations before Feb. 2, the pagan day for calling back the sun and the witch's sabbath recognizing the coming of spring and the rebirth of the earth.

Mr. Muggs remembered best as the 'real' Santa Claus

By CRAIG PIECHURA

The face is familiar but the voice is unforgettable.

Unless you just moved here from Angola you'll recognize Rubin Weiss' voice as the current pitchman for Here and Now pant stores, AAMCO transmission shops and Elias Bros. restaurants. Or maybe you remember him as the staff announcer at Channel 7 and Channel 4, or the shifty Mr. Muggs in an old Detroit radio drama.

But if you're between the ages of 3 and 30 you probably know Weiss best as the "real" Santa Claus.

Back in 1958 Weiss first donned the red velvet suit and a white beard made from yak's hair for the premiere showing of "Santa's Christmas Party" on Channel 9.

The program came on the day after Thanksgiving and ran through the day before Christmas when Santa had to head up north.

The show was sponsored by S.S. Kresge department stores. A little elf, whose name escapes Weiss and the current staff at Channel 9, served as his sidekick.

That was the beginning of a local legend.

In 1961 Weiss was called into service as the official Santa in the Hudson's Thanksgiving Day Parade. For 15 years Weiss sat in the sleigh and waved to youngsters lining Woodward.

"I tried to look every child right in the eye," Weiss said.

Although both the TV show and the parade were sponsored by department stores, Weiss seemed to transcend crass commercialism usually associated with Christmas sales.

PARENTS EVEN explained to their children that the "real" Santa went to Hudson's and all the others were his "helpers." Quite a coup for Hudson's.

After all, everyone who went to the parade or watched it on TV saw Santa get off his sled in front of the downtown department store and climb up an enchanted castle's facade to accept "the keys to the hearts of all the good boys and girls" from whomever was mayor at the time.

And Weiss received the key from four different Detroit mayors—from Louis Miriani to Coleman Young.

"It's always the same script," Weiss said. "Santa, you get a lot of keys to a lot of cities. But this key is a special key. It's the key to the hearts of all the good boys and girls of the Detroit area."

By the way, Weiss never gets to take the gold key home.

"As soon as I step inside, somebody's there waiting for it."

Weiss' status as local legend was interrupted in 1977 when major surgery caused him to miss the parade. This year he was still recuperating and declined an offer to man the reins behind Donner and Blitzen and company.

If health permits and Hudson's invites him, Weiss said he'd love to star in the Santa parade again next year.

"IT'S THE BEST experience you could have as an actor, doing a parade where, to thousands of youngsters, you're not playing Santa Claus, you are Santa Claus," Weiss said.

"Why did they pick me? I think I sounded friendly and had a rapport with children."

The most common question posed by wide-eyed youngsters "always was 'where are your reindeers, Santa?'"

Weiss didn't let that question faze him, though.

"I'd say, 'Listen, and you'll hear them up in the air.' They'd strain and they'd hear them. Imagination is a wonderful thing in a child."

What children didn't ask him is how a nice Jewish boy named Rubin Weiss grew up to epitomize Santa Claus in a Christian holiday like Christmas. Children don't make those kind of distinctions.

Today Weiss is a freelance actor and voice-over announcer much in demand all over the country.

If you live in the Detroit area, chances are you hear his voice at least once every day.

If you shop at Cunningham Drug stores you hear his voice over the public address system informing shoppers of the latest bargains.

ON TV he's the voice in the ad for Elias Bros. restaurants that claims the service there is so close to Mom's that they make you finish your milk before you can leave.

If you sell Chryslers you've probably seen Weiss in an industrial film to instruct salesmen in salesmanship.

And it was Weiss who did the first dragstrip commercials that told listeners in no uncertain terms that racing was "SUNDAAY, SUNDAAAY at Deetroit Drragway" while "What'd I Say" by Ray Charles played in the background.

Thought you'd remember.

Weiss spends most of his time at an office in the Heritage Plaza Building in Southfield as president of the Detroit local of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists (AFTRA).

The Oak Park resident is also on the national board of AFTRA and the Screen Actors Guild.

Weiss is busy. But he still yearns for the golden days of Detroit radio and television drama. Radio shows such as the Green Hornet, Challenge of the Yukon and the Lone Ranger often featured Weiss. He directed and appeared on locally-produced TV shows such as WXYZ's "Soupy's On," starring Soupy Sales.

But most of all Weiss misses the yak beard, the red velvet suit and the cardboard key to the kid's hearts.

Ready for holiday sing

Students at Smith Elementary School are getting ready for the annual Holiday Sing to begin at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 19. Parents and faculty members will gather for the sing to hear traditional carols accompanied by the music of Lisa Holk and her combo of Plymouth Salem High students. Hot cocoa and cookies will be served in the multi-purpose room after the singing. Parents then are invited to visit their children's classroom to enjoy the Christmas decorations. Among the decorations made are large handmade ornaments for the 50-foot Christmas tree. Showing one of the ornaments are Kendall Foersterling (left) and Rachel Whitmore. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Tavistock residents pan street speeders

In yet another appeal to Plymouth Township officials, residents on Tavistock Street filed petitions last week pleading for a change in the fire route designation of their street.

Residents object to the ban on parking for one side of the street, imposed by the fire designation route. But Bob Weiland and Dale Trenton, speaking for the residents, maintain that the designation fails to slow motorists using the through street to circumvent traffic on nearby major roads.

A recent survey conducted by Wayne County indicates that at least 600 drivers on one day in July used the street as a thoroughfare, Weiland said.

And he is asking the township to once again ask for enforcement of traffic regulations by Wayne County Sheriffs on the street.

Supervisor Thomas Notebaert responded with the suggestion that a ban on left turns at each end of the subdivison on the street might be a way to cut down traffic. Weiland objected to that.

Trustee Maurice Breen suggested that the township consider again the possibility of hiring a township ordinance officer to take care of some of the problems. The board agreed to postpone further discussion on the Tavistock problem until such a hiring is considered.

Rent-a-Santa says kids believe

By KAREN KOPEIKIN BERRY

M.J. Wade bears little resemblance to the jolly man in the white beard and red suit who is so popular this time of year.

He dresses like any dapper, rising young businessman in his navy wool blazer and color-coordinated suit.

Only an infectious smile, twinkling eyes and the spring in his step give him away. M.J. Wade, a manufacturer's representative for college bookstores, moonlights each holiday season.

He is a Santa Claus for hire.

For the past six years, the West Bloomfield resident has donned the red fur suit, black boots, and white hair and beard of St. Nick for children's parties, parades, hospital pediatrics wards and adult office parties.

"Playing Santa for adult parties is fun," said the 31-year-old father of two. "But, it's not as satisfying as doing it for kids.

"The kids really believe I'm Santa Claus. It isn't a put on. I really feel great when a little one comes up to me and whispers, 'I know you're the real Santa.'"

IT ALL BEGAN six years ago, when Wade tried, unsuccessfully, to hire a Santa to visit his home on Christmas Eve.

He never found one, so he rented a suit and entertained his first child and several other youngsters on his block.

"Then I really got hooked," he said. "Beaumont Hospital had taken good care of my wife, who had been very ill. So, to thank the staff, I volunteered to play Santa for the children in the pediatrics ward.

"I saw one little girl who was very sick," he said. "The nurses told me she hadn't even sat up in months. Well, when I walked near her bed to talk to her she sat up and laughed and cried.

"And I've playing Santa every year since."

Wade, who said he has fooled many of his close friends while dressed as St. Nick, claims he has "never not been able to get a child up in my lap."

Most parties he plays are places he has been before, which helps him remember children's names and what they asked for and received the year before.

"Working with kids is really a lesson in psychology," he said. "The little ones look at Santa's boots. They seem to know instinctively that if he wears rubber boots he is the real Santa."

"I've gotten so I can just walk into a home and know if it is a happy or sad home," he said. "When the parents are warm and treat their children well, the little ones are usually open and trustful of Santa."

THOSE YOUNGSTERS four and five are the best age, he said.

"When they are six, they are right at the breaking away age," Wade said.

"They don't want to believe in Santa because their friends have told them there is no Santa Claus. But, they are afraid to not believe because if they don't, they won't get any presents."

He handles disbelievers with the ease of a professional psychologist.

"One little girl was a disbeliever," he said. "So I said fine. I passed out all the gifts in my bag except for one which belonged to her.

"I said, 'Well, I have one gift here for Susie. But, she doesn't believe in me so I can't really give her this present.'

"As I put it back in the bag and turned to leave, she came running up to me and said 'I believe in you Santa.'"

Wade believes it is importatnt to spend time with each child and listen carefully to what he or she has to say.

"Kids know if you are putting them on," he said. "So I listen very carefully to each one and promise to do my best. But, I remind them that I have many children to care for. And they all shake their heads wisely and understand."

HE INSISTS that most of the children are not selfish when they ask for gifts.

"So many ask me to give gifts to children who never get any," he said. "And others ask for a gift for their brother or sister or mom and dad.

It takes M.J. Wade nearly a half hour to don his Santa Claus attire and make his cheeks just the right rosiness when he prepares for his part. (Staff photos by Art Emanuel)

"As a matter of fact, some of the children have almost seen old Santa cry because of the touching things they have said."

The father of a six- and three-year-old, Wade enjoys telling about one Christmas Eve several years ago when there was a heavy snowstorm.

"I was driving a little yellow Volkswagon at the time," he said. "And I got it stuck in the snow. So, here I was in my Santa costume trying to get someone to stop and help me out.

"It was a riot," he laughed. "When I explained to the people who stopped that I had several other homes to visit that night they pushed me out in no time."

On Christmas eve he will attend an average of one party each hour and charges from $35 to $50.

"But, I don't work at all on Christmas morning," he said. "I have a family, and that is the day I spend with them."

Several times he was stopped at a red light on his way to a party while dressed in his Santa duds.

"I'm sitting at the light when the wife looks over, who is usually sitting on the passenger side of the car," he said.

"The next thing I know her husband is waving at me and the kids are at the windows like magnets.

"I'll never know how mom and dad explain to their children that I'm not in my sleigh with the reindeer."

Wade siad he has never missed a party appointment for six years, but admitted he has had some pretty close calls.

ONE YEAR, I had a party scheduled here at home and I was on a business trip in Chicago snowed in," he said.

"I explained to the woman at United Airlines that I had to play Santa for a very important group of children so she arranged for me to be flown out of Chicago on another airlines.

"I called the party and told them Santa had run across a little bit of bad weather but that I'd soon be flying in from Chicago. They kids loved it."

Although he enjoys playing Santa for children, Wade admits that adult parties are more lucrative.

"I've played for women's luncheons, office parties and even the Pistons family party," he said.

He charges from $50 to $100 for each adult party at which he spends about 2 hours. He has played santa for a children's show on television channel 20, a Livonia homeowner's association parade and still does a benefit show for the children at Beaumont Hospital.

"I just love this time of the year," he said. "And that's why I play santa. I'm really sad when Christmas is over because I think I make quite a few folks holiday a little happier.

Paid voc ed training aids area unemployed

"Out county residents are eligible for vocational training that will help them enter careers with upward mobility patterns," according to Marlene Dewling, area CETA program manager.

Hundreds of training slots are open to qualified persons who live in Wayne County, excluding Dearborn, Detroit and Livonia, and who meet other screening criteria.

Students will receive minimum wage ($2.65 an hour) for the time they attend the federally funded program.

If they qualify, applicants may select training in fields such as medical, computers (programming and operating), mechanics, clerical and drafting design.

Vocational training programs are administered through the Wayne County Office of Manpower and funded by CETA, the federal Comprehensive Employement and Training Act, reenacted by Congress this fall.

"If qualified people who need and are interested in this training were aware of its existence, they could contact our office today. They could then be enrolled in most programs and have money plus educational benefits by the early part of the New Year," says Ms. Dewling.

As with most federal programs, certain guidelines must be met. Applicants must meet the out-county residency requirement. They also must meet income and unemployment criteria. Low income, unemployment or underemployment is also a consideration. Age is no factor, but applicants should have a high school diploma or equivalent.

Who would benefit most from vocational training programs?

According to Ms. Dewling, training seems best suited for:

- The high school graduate or GED recipient who wants to study a specific field but can't afford college programs.
- The single parent who needs some income while training for a future career.
- Minorities who typically have a hard time breaking into today's job market at meaningful levels.
- The woman who has spent much of her life caring for a family and now, perhaps alone, finds herself in need of work or training.
- b Persons with GED's who find they need accredited training to get jobs in today's competitive market.
- The college drop-out now trying to make it on his or her own.

Vocational students come from all walks of live and cultural backgrounds, says Ms. Dewling. Training is as diverse as the needs of the person applying.

After completing training, which lasts from one to two years depending on the program selected, students are assigned with job placement.

After completing training, which lasts from one to two years, depending on the program selection, students are assisted with job placement. The vocational educationl program can't institute a training program in excess of two years. However, primary emphasis is on one-year programs.

It takes about three to four weeks to get into training.

For more information on how you can qualify, call Evonne Hunt at 956-[illegible].

SC joins 2 groups

Schoolcraft College trustees have voted to renew memberships in three organizations and to send up to two persons to a Washington, D.C. convention.

The board Wednesday voted unanimously:

- To renew membership in the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges at dues of about $450 for 1979.
- To continue membership in the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG), a seven-county voluntary regional planning association. Dues are $220. Schoolcraft is one of only a handful of educational institutions involved in SEMCOG, whose membership is open to some 400 counties, cities, villages, townships, school districts, intermediate districts and community college districts.
- To reappoint Rosina Raymond delegate to SEMCOG, replacing Mark McQuesten who resigned after 18 months. Mrs. Raymond was McQuesten's predecessor in the SEMCOG arena. Gerald Cox was reappointed alternate delegate.
- To send one representative and one alternate to the second annual national legislative seminar sponsored by the Association of Community College Trustees (ACCT) Feb. 25-27 in Washington. Cost will be $351 per person.

Wood burner can blow up in your face

That charming wood burning stove you picked up at a garage sale this past summer has been a real conversation piece. Now it's time to decide whether or not to turn it into a source of heat.

However, while wood burning stoves have a charm all their own and have become very popular at a time of skyrocketing fuel bills, they do present a potential danger to life and property, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

There's a lot more to using a wood burning stove than just installing it in your home and lighting the fire. In the first two months of 1978, the U.S. Product Safety Commission reported approximately 60 fires caused by wood burning stoves. The commission is concerned that improper installation and misuse of these stoves will result in further loss of life and damage in the fall and winter of 1978-79.

The commission's concern is shared by fire prevention officials, stove manufacturers and the insurance industry. The problem, according to executives in each of these areas, is that the vast majority of wood burning stoves are installed in homes on a do-it-yourself basis. The result is improper installation, leading to fires causing loss of liv es and millions of dollars in property damage.

To combat the rising potential for more losses, insurance companies are distributing these safety warnings to policy holders:

• Be sure your stove is made of sturdy, suitable material, such as cast iron or steel. Look for stoves listed by Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) or other recognized testing laboratories.

• If you purchase a used stove, check it carefully for cracks or other defects. The legs, hinges, grates and draft louvers also should be checked carefully.

• Leave at least three feet of clearance between the stove and any combustible material (wall, ceiling, furniture, newspapers, any flammable object.)

• A pad under the stove is essential.

• Never burn anything but seasoned, dry hardwood in the stove.

• Never use gasoline, kerosene or any flammable liquid (including lighter fluid) to start a fire. Start a fire by using small strips of paper and twigs.

• Do not treat the stove as a garbage unit.

• Consult a detailed safety manual to be sure the stove pipe and flue meet safety requirements.

Paycheck puzzlement

Many employees are puzzled to discover that their take-home pay is slightly higher immediately after having been out sick. The reason is that Social Security tax is not deducted from wages paid for sick days.

The Bottom Line

Supporting your local candidate

By RONALD G. LOISELLE

(Ronald G. Loiselle of Plymouth is a business counselor for General Business Services. Following is the first in a series of columns of interest to readers thinking about filing tax returns soon.—ed.)

One of the many side effects of the investigations resulting from Watergate is the emphasis on corporate political contributions. They are, as you most probably know, illegal.

But you, as an individual taxpayer, since the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1971, do have two options on claiming individual political contributions on your income tax return.

Beginning with the 1972 calendar year, taxpayers have been able to choose either a tax credit or an itemized tax deduction for political contributions made after 1971. In most cases, the tax credit is most advantageous, for it reduces your tax liability on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

The itemized deductions only reduce the amount of income subject to the tax computation, depending on your tax bracket.

THERE ARE RATHER specific rulings as to what constitutes a political contribution.

The campaign contributions can be for any announced candidate in any primary, general, or special election for any federal, state or local office.

Contributions to a committee formed for an "as yet unannounced candidate" are valid for deduction purposes, providing the candidate makes his or her formal announcement before the end of the year.

If the candidate opts not to seek office, the tax benefit would still be allowed if the committee directs the funds for use by another formally-announced candidate.

While you are not required to file proof of a political contribution with your tax return to claim a tax credit, it is important—as with any tax-support records—that a canceled check plus a receipt for the contribution be retained in your tax records in case of a tax audit.

The receipt should indicate the full name of the candidate for the committee, the amount and date of the contribution, your name, the specific nomination or election, the IRS Service Form 4909 statement, and the signature of either the candidate or the committee issuing the receipt.

Members of the award-winning percussion group perform the drum solo "The Sheriff" at CEP's football field during half time.

Percussion unit leads the way

During the 1975-76 school year, the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park marching band made a major switch in its program.

The band went from a high stepping style of marching to the more popular corps style.

Since then, the band has continued playing for the Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton home football games every week, but has also expanded its yearly schedule to include many corps style competitions throughout the state.

The first year the band participated in the corps style of marching, it performed in one of the last full sized University of Michigan Band Day shows and was one of five bands to perform a post-game show.

The following year the band made its first appearence at the Western Michigan University "Cavalcade of Bands" and placed third in the open class.

The WMU competition has become a yearly event since then for the band, as they have returned the following two years to again take third place among competing bands.

This past year the percussion section was named the best percussion section of the 14 competing bands at WMU and placed ahead of the Flushing "Raider" marching band, which had been undefeated in Michigan marching band competition for the last five years.

In October of the past marching season, the band also competed in the Clarkston Marching Band Invitational and placed third out of 14 bands.

Under the direction of Jim Griffith and Carl Battishill, the band has also performed at the Pontiac Silverdome for the past two years during half-time at Detroit Lions football games.

Next year the band will enlarge its competitive schedule and pursue the possibility of puchasing new "corps style" uniforms.

Senior Sharon Radionoff is a trombonist and co-equipment manager for the marching band.

Staff photos by Gary Caskey

Senior field commander Barb Stout maintains a military stance and stern face as she controls the band's marching sequence.

Senior band members are (from left) Marty Schedel, Roger Anason and Chris Koepke, who celebrated after their final performance.

Senior John Upton's huffing and puffing do not go unnoticed.

Flag corps members add color to the total marching unit.

Q&E

Communicating via computers

"How many boxes do you see?" asks the teacher.

"Three," the student answers.

"That's correct. You are very smart," says the teacher. The student smiles and nods his head vigorously in agreement.

The student is mentally retarded, physically handicapped and cannot talk. But he can communicate with the help of his "teacher," who is really a computer that speaks via a voice synthesizer.

The scene takes place daily at Northville's Moraine Elementary School, which is the home of what one expert calls the most advanced computerized communication enhancement program in the world.

The immediate benefactors are seven students who live in the Plymouth Center for Human Development, but who attend Moraine as part of Northville's state-financed special education program.

ESTABLISHED in 1975, the Communication Enhancement Program—with the cooperation of Michigan State University and the Wayne County Intermediate School District—leaped forward technologically this year with the addition of a roomful of computers and supporting equipment.

Basically, the computers give youngsters who have always had something to say a way to say it.

Using video scanners, voice synthesizers and and strike-on keyboards, the students can effectively "talk," answer questions, make their needs known, complete individualized lesson plans and even compose tunes that are dutifully played back by computer.

Previously, all that was available were language boards, cumbersome devices that required the student to point to letters, words or phrases on a large plyboard in front of him.

These were inadequate because the boards must be large to contain even a limited vocabulary, and because they require some control of hand and arm movement which many of the students lack.

WOODY, an obviously receptive youngster whose eyes light up when his instructor mentions ice cream, is so handicapped that, before computers, he could communicate only by using his eyes—once for "yes" and twice for "no"—as his teacher pointed to words and symbols on the language board.

Now, thanks to a head switch that is attached to his chair, Woody can spell out words on a video screen merely by moving his head back and forth.

"Ten years ago, the hardware required for this would fill a room," said Clinton Bennett, the computer manager for the program.

The cost of this technology is as staggering as it is exciting. The loaf-of-bread sized voice box alone costs $2,250, and the research and development cost for developing pocket-sized models is prohibitive for the foreseeable future.

Although the voice box was on loan, the rest of the impressive array of computer hardware and software at Moraine is owned by Northville's special education program.

Beside cost, there is the practical question: Can most of these kids who are retarded be expected to learn a meaningful vocabulary, much less how to use the computers?

"Could I remember all those numbers if it was the only way I could communicate? asks Rezmierski. "Sure."

But he is frank when he is asked how many retarded residents at the Plymouth Center can realistically be expected to benefit from the computers. "We don't know. We honest-to-God don't know. But this may be the key to getting through to them."

Resume writing class slated for Jan. 30

The steps that comprise the process of writing an effective resume will the focus of a workshop in the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer, Plymouth. The class will be at 7 p.m. Jan. 30.

The fee will be $5 and the goal of the workshop is to enable participants to write an effective resume at any stage of their careers.

Steps in writing a resume will be divided into three parts:

- Determining the skills required of a particular position.
- Identifying skills.
- Choosing a format, words and phrases that highlight skills.
- Making effective use of a completed resume.

Representatives of PJK Career Development Associates, Ltd. of Ann Arbor will conduct the workshop. Each person taking part in the one-evening seminar will receive a self-paced manual of resume-writing.

The workshop is sponsored by the City of Plymouth Department of Parks and Recreation and persons can register at the office on Farmer from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A job research overview workshop is slated for Feb. 27. Fee will be $15. It will address what you want to do, where you want to do it, and how to you it.

Participants will learn how to assess their skills, interests and preferred working environments; identify places where such skills can be used; use resources in uncovering jobs and securing positions; and map out a job campaign.

The goal is to enable participants to have more power and responsibility in their campaigns for jobs.

PCA CHRISTMAS BASKETS

The students of Plymouth Christian Academy are assembling Christmas baskets for less fortunate families in the community. They will be collecting canned goods and staples during the week of Dec. 18.

Students in the elementary grades are decorating a Christmas tree with handmade ornaments under the supervision of art teacher JoAnn DeCuirci. The school has temporary quarters in Northville until its building is completed at 43056 Joy Road in Canton Township.

AARP MEETING

The Plymouth-Northville chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons, Inc. will meet Wednesday, Dec. 20 in the Plymouth Cultural Center on Farmer Street, Plymouth. Sewing, knitting and socializing begin at 10 a.m. with lunch at noon. Persons are asked to take along a sandwich and half a dozen homemade cookies. Ice cream will be provided. Leftover cookies will be given to nursing homes.

The program will include installation of officers under the direction of Mrs. Floy Reed, assistant state director.

John Harper, a member of the American Bell Association and an avid collector of bells, will exhibit and tell about them.

There will be tax aide training at the Cultural Center Jan. 3, 4 and 5. For more information call Fred or Louise Bradley, 349-2909.

Visitors are welcome to attend the Dec. 20 meeting.

CUB SCOUT PACK 1540

Cub Scout Pack 1540 which meets in Isbister Elementary School will sing Christmas carols at 7 p.m., Dec. 19 at West Trail Nursing Home, Plymouth.

On hills and curves

A challenge for skateboarders

Whirring and whizzing wheels, fiberglass loops and skateboardese are the trademarks of a new indoor park that is drawing kids to 29123 Eight Mile in Livonia.

Visitors to Odyssey Skate Board Park pause amid zooming by to discuss things like tic-tacs, tail taps, wheelies and walking the dog.

The operation is based on an idea imported from California by Fred Winnie and his son, Dan. It features fiberglass hills and curves to give the skateboards and their riders more speed and safety than they would know on streets and driveways.

Three pieces of apparatus are set up in the big hall. One, for beginners, is a stretched-out halfpipe which looks a little like a big U with an elongated loop. Skateboarders work up speed to roll up one side, turn at the top and slide to the bottom. Then they rocket along at ground level and up the other side.

The big brother of this piece of equipment is longer and higher, producing greater speed. There is also a series of waves called the mogul. Skateboarders sail up and down, traveling the length of the building.

DAN WINNIE SAID the fiberglass has a surface that "gives quite a bit compared to concrete." That makes it faster as well as safer, he said.

"We have had a few bruises and sprained wrists, but that is nothing for skateboarding."

Rules at the establishment contribute to safety, the father and son said. Participants take turns roaring up and down the equipment, so if they fall there is no one behind to run into them.

There is the possibility of "wiping out" or going over the edge, but indoor skateboarders learn to be alert at all times.

"My mom thinks it's better to skateboard here than in the streets," said Barry Offerman of Livonia, who has sometimes been known to whoosh down the concrete drainage ditch at Six Mile and Levan. "There are no cars."

BOB MCILRATH, a 15-year-old Livonian, turns up at the park to have fun with his friends. He wants to learn those kick tail turns you do at the top of the half pipe. He owns his own equipment and comes about once a week, usually with a friend.

"You need a friend for moral support," he said. "He tells you to get up and do it again when you fall on your fanny."

David Blake of Redford Township took up the sport because all his friends and his brother do it. He called it "pretty fun," but "dangerous."

He added: "The fiberglass is better than the street. On the street you can really get scratched."

To some it may seem strange that the skaters usually wear short sleeved shirts and shorts offering little protection from scratches. "Shorts give you more freedom of movement," said David Loy of Garden City. "You really get hot pushing up the sides."

But like all the skateboarders, Loy wears a helmet and knee and elbow pads. That is another safety rule. The equipment can be rented.

Dean Johnson of Farmington Hills said he finds indoor skateboarding challenging.

"I've learned a lot of stuff here in a week and a half," he said. "I've fallen, but have not been really hurt. It hurts to fall, but I recuperate in about five minutes. You always want to go back and learn again."

YOU KNOW THAT a sport has come into its own and is building its own legends and champions when a visiting celebrity like Chris Yandall of West Bloomfield walks in the Odyssey door. In 1975, when he lived in San Diego, he won the world championship in the downhill slalom on his skate board.

"I'm now in the promotional end," Yandall said. "I sell to shops the componant parts for skateboards. I'm happy to see places like this opening up."

The Winnies have a pro shop at the park where they sell boards, wheels, helmets and pads. These items are also rented at 25 cents for a pair of pads, 50 cents for a helmet and $1 for a skateboard.

All regular skateboarders at The Odyssey must be members. The fee is $10, which also gives you a day of free skating within a week of joining, plus 10 per cent off on anything in the pro shop. A three-day trial membership is $3, which can be traded in on a full membership. For members, everyday admission is $2 for the first two hours. It costs $1 for each additional hour or $5 all day.

Most of those swirling up and down in the park are teen-aged boys, although four girls are lifetime members. "But we have a lot of senior citizens," laughed Dan Winnie. "Those are the ones over 21. They get half price admission on certain nights."

Rick White and Mike Wigand of Livonia are paid by The Odyssey to help beginners, keep the park orderly, assure everyone takes their turn, and clean up. They also roll with the best of them when times are slow.

Odyssey Skate Board Park is open from 3-10 p.m. weekdays, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturdays and 1-5 p.m. Sundays.

Help for divorcees available at seminar

An eight-week group program for men and women separated or divorced less than one year is being offered by Plymouth Family Service.

The group will meet for the first time Wednesday, Jan. 17.

The focus of the group will be to provide information about how to cope with the stresses which follow marital separation.

The format of the program provides participants with opportunities each week for sharing experiences and for giving and receiving support.

Topics to be covered include the emotional impact of separation, the continuing relationship with the former spouse, the impact on children, inlaws and friends, and the problems of "starting over."

The group will meet Wednesday evenings beginning Jan. 17. Enrollment will be limited to eight persons and all participants will have a preliminary interview with one of the two group leaders—Joyce Cunningham and Juliette Wood.

For more information or to enroll, call Plymouth Family Service at 453-0890.

Plymouth Family Service is a branch of Child and Family Service of Washtenaw County. Its local office is at 880 Wing Street, Plymouth. Ms. Wood is the branch supervisor.

Researchers seek heart attack victims

A University of Minnesota research team is seeking persons between the ages of 30-59 who have had only one heart attack in the past 36 months. It is trying to determine if lower cholesterol amounts will prevent heart attacks.

Most heart trouble results from atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries, said a team spokeman. A clue to the cause of atherosclerosis may be that cholesterol, a fatty substance, is found in the diseased arteries. However, it is uncertain whether lowering cholesterol will prevent heart attacks.

Anyone interested in more information is requested to call the University of Minnesota Hyperlipidemia Study collect at 612376-4494

IS A FUNERAL NECESSARY?

Death is one of the most difficult losses we can experience—especially the death of a family member or spouse.

The wake and funeral services can be "tools" that help us accept the fact of death and permanent separation as the real thing. The wake becomes a time of consolation to those who have experienced the loss — a time for friends to SHARE their grief.

The funeral helps us remember the life of the lost one. It provides strength for the family and friends and communicates to all those attending that this life is now permanently separated from ours.

It is my experience that some who do not attend the funeral of a loved and close one suffer more afterwards. The funeral can become the first stepping stone to the rebuilding of our own lives without the presence of the deceased. Call us if you'd like more helpful information and booklets on the subject of funerals.

LOUISE SNIDER

Life challenges rabbits on move in 'Watership Down'

Richard Adams' novel "Watership Down" seems on its way toward becoming a modern classic. It relates the epic tale of a group of rabbits who journey from their doomed warren to seek out a new home and haven.

Examples of leadership, loyalty, sacrifice, struggle and even comedy emerge as they encounter enemies and physical hazards during their plucky trek.

Their adventures are analagous to events in human history, such as the migration to the American West and the confrontation of democracy and fascism. Further, the thoughts and feelings of the rabbits seem to parallel those of humans.

While these and other analogies add interest and a certain philosophical depth to the tale, the most remarkable quality of the novel is its ability to involve the reader and evoke feelings of compassion and reverence.

THIS LONG preamble is necessary to do justice to producer-director-scriptwriter Martin Rosen's accomplishment in making an animated film, "Watership Down" (PG) that remains faithful to the tone of the novel.

Rosen necessarily shortened the story but included the principal characters and the events of their exodus and settlement. More important, he treated Adams' work with respect. The film, like the book, is interesting to both adults and children.

The animation, under the direction of Tony Guy and Philip Duncan, generally is in harmony with the tenor of the story. It is more tempered than the spastic quality of children's cartoons but less spectacular than the razzle-dazzle effects of "Lord of the Rings."

The most vigorous and stylized art work appears in a prologue that reveals the rabbits' mythology and recurs in scenes where the rabbits are frightened or in pain or engaged in battle. The only exception to the graphic excellence occurs in those scenes in which a mythical Black Rabbit of Death appears. It is a vision which is neither convincing nor compelling.

.On the other hand, the animators successfully echo the English countryside in gentle washes of softly rolling hills. The rabbits themselves are distinguished by their size, color, shape and, especially, voice.

ROSEN RECRUITED some top British talent to supply the voices. John Hurt (the English prisoner in "Midnight Express") is the voice of Hazel)a male rabbit, despite the name). Ralph Richardson is the grumpy Chief Rabbit of the old warren and Richard Briers (from the British stage) is the voice of the clairvoyant rabbit Fiver.

Good as these and other actors are, there is one performer so outstanding that he must be singled out, and that is the late Zero Mostel. Mostel, with a thick accent and a quick temper, plays the eccentric seabird Kehaar. It's a wonderfully comic creation that lingers in memory long after one has left the theater.

"Watership Down" is an animated adventure that knows no generation gaps. A classic tale becomes a classic film

Cranbrook completes observatory work

As exhibits designer at Cranbrook Institute of Science, Betty Odle has tackled dozens of unusual projects, but supervising the renovation of the institute's almost 50-year-old observatory presented some firsts.

"It's not every day one orders an 18-foot diameter, aluminized steel dome," she said.

Now, after a year's labor by Ms. Odle, other staff members and a few outside contractors, the $66,000 project is completed.

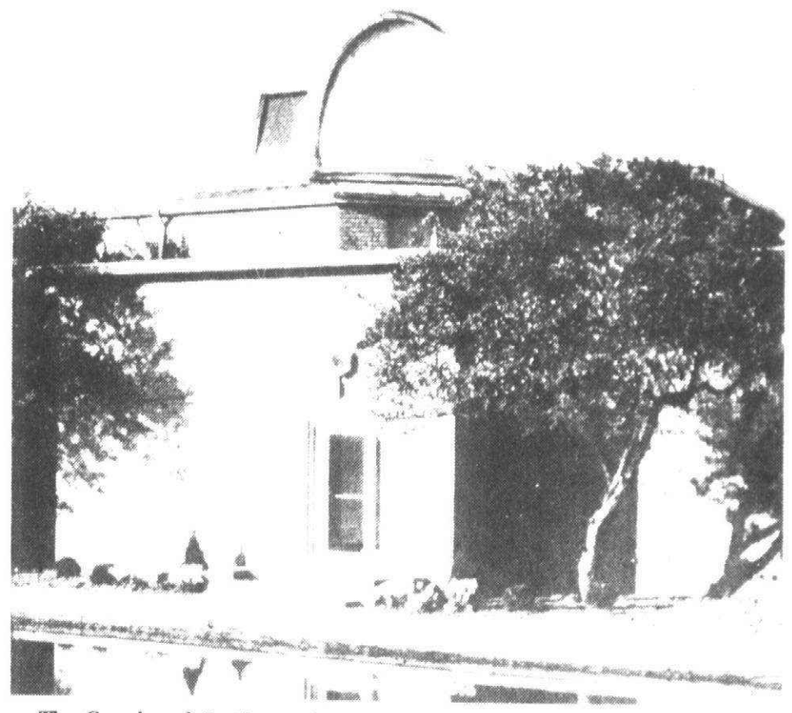

For the first time in its history, the science institute's observatory is open weekends as a museum exhibit. The telescope may be looked at—not through — Saturdays and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. Interpretive labels describe the unique building, its history and machinery.

VIEWING THROUGH the telescope is available on clear Saturday evenings, with demonstrations beginning every half-hour between 7 and 9 p.m. Special group demonstrations are available on Monday evenings by prior registration.

"In the past, we had to close the building during the winter becuase of the design of the old dome," Ms. Odle explained. "If we heated the room and opened the dome, the warm air escaped, creating turbulence and destroying proper viewing conditions."

This is no longer a problem, she said, due to a four-foot-square window and Lanphier shutter in the new dome. By moving the telescope against the window, the room can be heated without affecting observation.

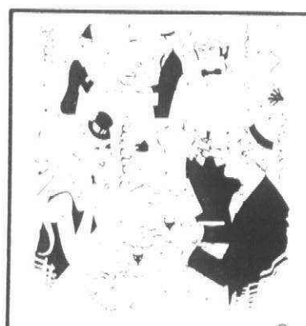

The facility features a six-inch refracting telescope that enlarges objects up to 250 times.

The Cranbrook Institute of Science's observatory has a new 18-foot aluminized steel dome which solves some problems caused by the design of the old dome.

'Miss Margarida' is hilarious

By ETHEL SIMMONS

Review

Miss Margarida's way is the only way to go. No wonder Estelle Parsons as the frenzied eighth grade schoolteacher in "Miss Margarida's Way" reminds the audience several times, "Everybody wants to be Miss Margarida!"

Except for the couple sitting just ahead of me, who walked out early in the first act, the audience opening night at the Birmingham Theatre eagerly shared the experiences Miss Margarida taught. The show continues through Sunday.

It has a perverse theme, about how we are intimidated by powers of various kinds (from cradle to grave, from religious to sexual). And Miss Margarida as a schoolteacher is the perfect symbol of authority.

THE HOUSELIGHTS never go down, and the theater-goers' frequent laughter alternates with hushed moments when Miss Margarida teaches, taunts and terrifies.

Estelle Parsons, the Academy-Award winning actress, wrings every ounce of hilarity from the role. Miss Margarida is slightly mad, a perfect fright to look at most of the time, sexually enticing.

In this unusual vehicle, written and directed by Brazilian playwright Roberto Athayde, she gives a performance that is overwhelming in its complexity.

Throughout the play, the audience is the eight grade class of students, and only one ringer in the class joins Miss Margarida on stage several times.

Miss Margarida enjoins her students to come to her desk or the blackboard, but peril awaits those who dare. The young man, Fred Strugatz, is the silent majority who sometimes comes before Miss Margarida without being called forth, either.

Like all dictators, Miss Margarida demands total obedience and she makes the rules. In her crazy classroom, where textbooks pour from a small table's single drawer, she teaches a variety of subjects, all urgently.

AT FIRST her handwriting on the blackboard is most distinct, as Miss Margarida gets the audience's attention with an impolite word she writes.

During the rest of the play she scrawls on the blackboard in bizarre, nightmarish handwriting as she lectures. Colored chalks emphasize the different races of men, who together beg for help in the melting pot of humanity.

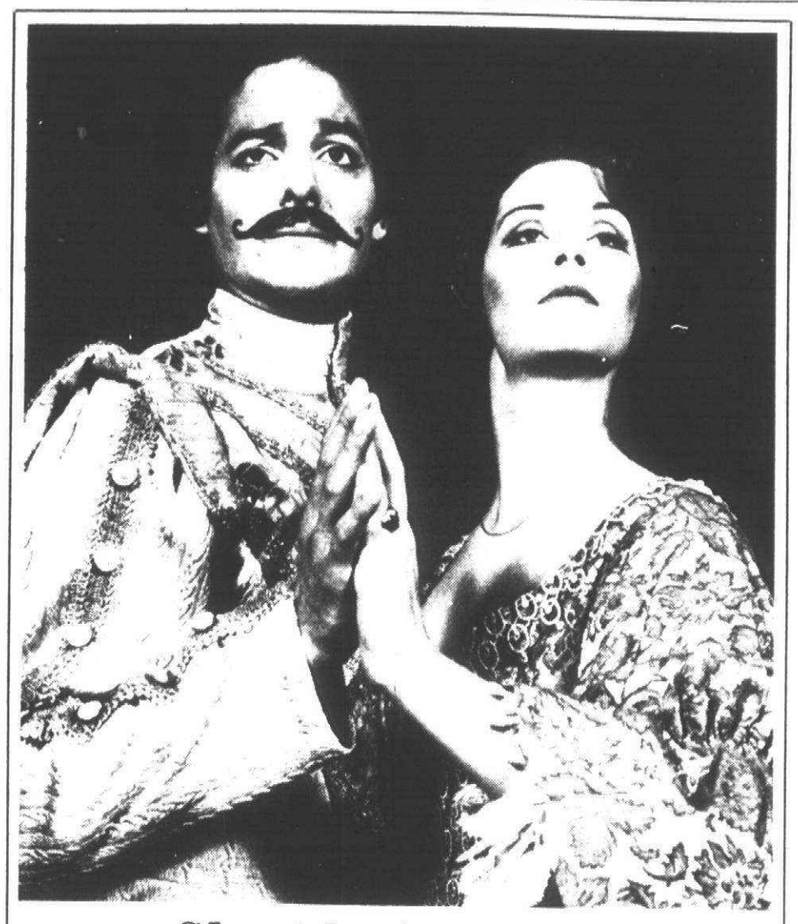

Miss Margarida teaches biology primarily, the science of life, and her lessons taught frenziedly are to prepare her students for life. These lessons are absurd but also real, smacking you to attention with macabre humor when she emphasizes three important stages of life. She tells you bluntly that you are doing to die, and it comes out very bold and funny.

Anyone in the audience can participate in the show, if they wish. Miss Margarida knows how to handle them, demanding later-comers come on stage to the head of the class and explain themselves. Those who walked out were apparently "in the wrong class," she calls out.

The language used by Miss Margarida is rough, spilling over with four-letter words as she bares her venom. The animosity she feels toward her students comes out in her invective, designed to repell them, but she also soothes them, "Miss Margarida loves you!"

MISS MARGARIDA teaches arithmetic and how to divide, by explaining everybody wants more than the others. The lessons come fast, and Miss Margarida never lets up, though she flaunts the students' fascination with wanting to learn about sex and her body.

She warns she will never teach them that, but her own desires continually twist and turn during the class period.

Sheridan's 'Critic'

George Christopher Kappaz and Cynthia Dozier play an actor and an actress in "The Critic; or a Tragedy Rehearsed" at the Hilberry Theatre. The Sheridan play appears on a double bill of farces with Moliere's "The Doctor in Spite of Himself," which continues in the repertory through January. Ticket and schedule information is available from the Hilberry Box Office in Detroit at 577-2972.

Karl Haas to lecture on music

Karl Haas will celebrate 20 years of Detroit broadcasting with a series of five week night talks entitled "The Romantic Connection" at the Detroit Institute of Arts, beginning Wednesday, Jan. 10.

Subsequent dates are Feb. 7, Mar. 7, April 3, and May 16.

Each talk will be presented at 8 p.m. in the museum's Recital/Lecture Hall. Tickets for the series are $20 at the art institute ticket office, 832-2730.

Similar to a series given by Haas at New York's Metropolitan Museum, the talks will explore romanticism in music, literature and the visual arts. Pertinent musical illustrations will be performed at the piano by Haas.

Host of the Peabody Award winning "Adventures in Good Music," which is now heard in 80 U.S. cities and overseas, Haas was appointed director of fine arts by radio station WJR in 1959.

Haas has been appointed "Officier d'Academie" and "Chevalier de l'Ordre des Arts et Lettres" by the French government, has been awarded the First Class Order of Merit by the German government. He has received seven honorary doctorates in music, fine arts and humanities.

Ray Charles with the Raeletts and the Ray Charles Orchestra will appear at Music Hall.

Ray Charles coming to the Music Hall

The "King of Soul," Ray Charles, will sing his greatest hits at Detroit's Music Hall. Backed by the Raeletts and the Ray Charles Orchestra, Ray Charles' revue opens Dec. 26 and will wrap up with a special New Year's Eve show.

At age 48, Ray Charles has become a legend in his own time. He has dipped into more styles of music than almost any other singer and has come out with a kind of "soul" that reaches out to everyone, breaking all barriers of language, culture and education. Frank Sinatra once stated, "Ray Charles is the only genius in our business."

Winner of 10 Grammy awards, Ray Charles was selected by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences (1975) as winner of the "Best R & B Vocal Performance—Male" category for his single of Stevie Wonder's "Living for the City."

That same year Ray Charles was presented the Golden Plate Award by the American Academy of Achievement. In 1976 Ray Charles was named Best Jazz Male Vocalist in the Playboy Magazine Music Awards Readers' Poll and was inducted into the Songwriters Hall of Fame in New York.

FEATURED IN Ray Charles' show is Detroit trumpet man Marcus Belgrave. A five-year veteran of "The Ray Charles Show," Marcus Belgrave is listed on the "Ray Charles at Newport 1958" album and the recent "My Kind of Jazz Part 2."

Belgrave has played with both Charles Mingus, master bassist and composer, and Joe Cocker. In Detroit, Belgrave divides his time between various jazz clubs and H.O.M.E. (House of Minority Employees), the place of his most important project, the Jazz Development Workshop.

On Dec. 31 Ray Charles presents a special New Year's Eve show at 10:30 p.m. Ticket prices include champagne, snacks and party favors.

Evening performances Tuesday-Thursday are at 8:30 p.m., the Saturday matinee is 2 p.m., and the early show on Sunday is 6:30 p.m.

All tickets can be obtained at the Music Hall box office, 350 Madison Avenue, or by calling 963-7680, 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Monday-Saturday. Master Charge, Visa, and Hudson's credit cards are accepted. Group rates are available by calling Joan Heidt, 963-7622.

Joan Rivers to reopen db's Club next month

In the Hyatt Regency, db's club will reopen Friday, Jan 5, following a four-week closing for minor renovation.

Heading the 1979 season is comedienne Joan Rivers, back for her third appearance in the 350-seat night club. Creator of the motion picture "Rabbit Test," Ms. Rivers has recently returned to the television and night club arena and touts db's as one of her favorite clubs on the circuit.

Appearing for eight days Ms. Rivers opens Jan. 5 and continues through Saturday, Jan 13.

Admission to Joan Rivers exclusive Detroit-area appearance will be by ticket sales only, on sale at locations including the Hyatt Regency Dearborn; Olympia Travel, Birmingham; and Hudson's.

Among the nation's leading names in the television and recording industry to be showcased in db's club during 1979 are the Hudson Brothers, stars of the television music comedy series, "Bonkers." They open Jan 15, carry through to Jan. 20, and will be followed by Jose Feliciano Jan. 22-27.

Winner of two Grammys, an Oscar nomination and 32 gold records, Feliciano returns to db's for his third appearance.

Rita Moreno, the only female performer to have been awarded all four show business awards: The Oscar, Emmy, Grammy and Tony, makes her first db's appearance Jan 29-Feb. 3.

The February repertoire includes B. B. King; singer John Gary; "Roots" star Leslie Uggams, and a headliner of television's controversial night-time soap-opera, "Soap," Billy Crystal.

INSTEAD OF A BURGER IN A BAG, WE GIVE YOU A BIG FARM DINNER.

WE DO IT RIGHT. OR WE DON'T DO IT.

If you're not hungry, a quicky snack will do.
But at Bob Evans, we feed you farm style. Try chicken-n-noodles or our boneless barbequed rib dinner. Fresh, crisp salad with our own Colonial dressing. Steaming, baked biscuits that are crusty outside, fluffy inside. And lots more.
And with every dish, we serve a smile.
Drop by Bob Evans. If all you want is fast food, that's your business. But if you want a good, hearty, sit-down farm dinner, that's our business.

Christmas . . . a beautiful experience which has been relived each year since it was first heralded by the angels of Bethlehem.

Christmas . . . a time for memories of past years which will never be forgotten.

. . . a time shining with faith and hope for happy years ahead.

. . . a time for family, friends, carols, lights, laughter, love.

. . . a time for thanking others for past favors.

. . . a time for renewed dedication to serving others.

Christmas . . . a celebration which is more meaningful when it is shared.

May we share with you a wish for a Christmas in 1979 which is rich in the traditions of yesteryear and bright in the promise of tomorrow.

Horace—
It's time you learned the facts of life!

Oh, we're sure you learned about the birds and bees long ago, but Horace, have you heard about 736? That's a Want Ad classification in your home-town newspaper. It works this way Horace.

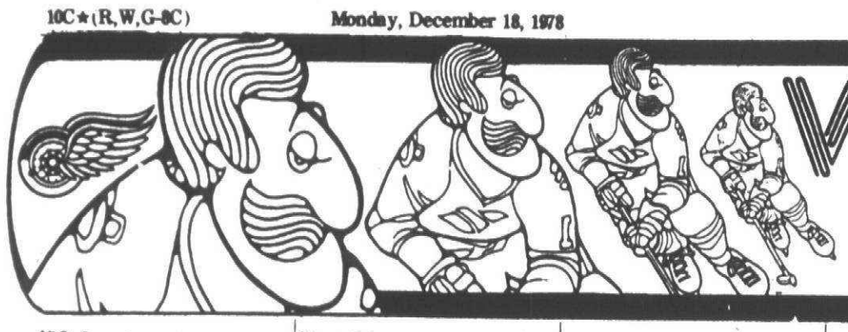

Remember when you almost went crazy trying to find a solid oak hat stand? How you embarassed your wife in the antique store because they didn't have one and tried to interest you in a chamber pot instead and you told that sweet little old lady what she could do with it? Remember?

Well, if you had used the "Wanted to Buy" classification that we have just for this kind of situation, one of our thousands of readers would have called you and your troubles would have been over.

Now, that little bird on top of your head (what's he doing there, anyway?) just told us that you're in the market for a 1938 Chevrolet hood ornament. So here are the facts of life, Horace. "Wanted to Buy" ads get results—that's a fact. 736—that's a figure. Use them and get results—that's a suggestion.

They have our number, do you?

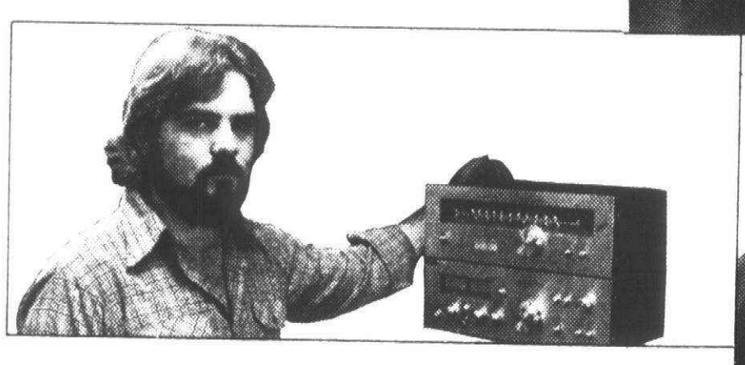

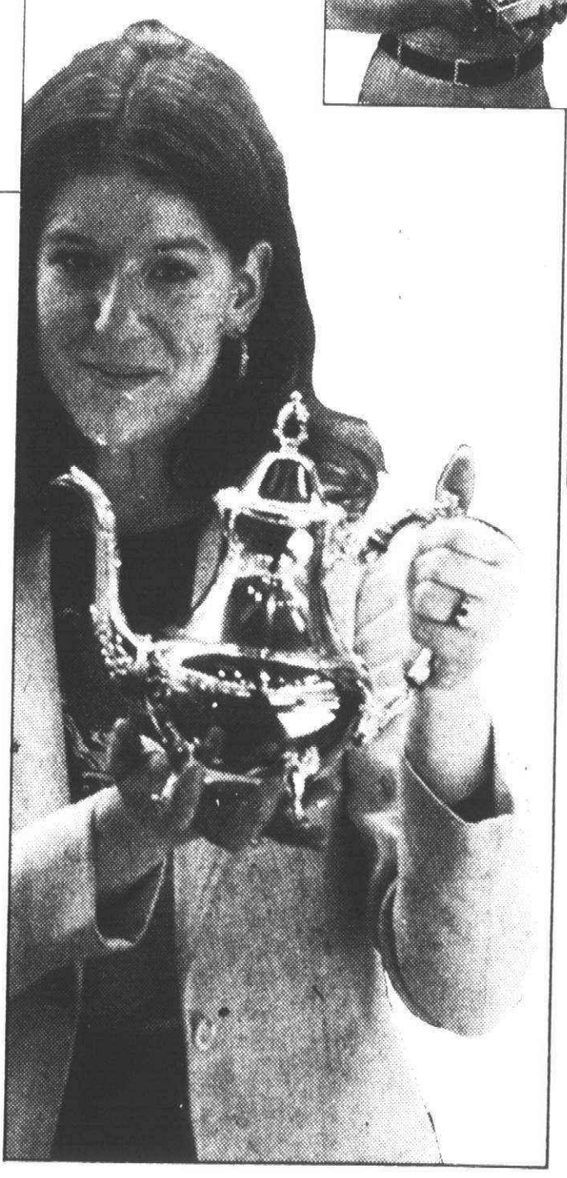

No, we're not talking about our telephone number, although that's an important number too, we're talking about "736", the classification number for "Wanted to Buy" want ads.

Lots of people think the only way to use ads is to tell people what they have to sell. Not so. One little 736 ad will tell people what you want to buy. Looking for a cradle, scuba gear, a 1937 "Superman" comic book? Stick it in 736 and wait for people to call, it's that simple.

And if you've read this far and are thinking, "I really don't have any one special thing I want to buy....we have plenty of numbers for you, too...626...700...708...722. We invite you to try any of these because all of our numbers add up to a lot of satisfaction for you, whether you're in a buying or selling mood.

LINCOLN-MERCURY'S SEPHYR HAS BIG FIRST YEAR—The 1978 Mercury Zephyr has posted the highest first-year sales of any Lincoln-Mercury product since the 1967 Cougar. During its first 12 months on the market (October 7, 1977 through October 6, 1978), 118,900 Zephyrs were sold compared with the Cougar's 128,000 first-year total. Despite the fact that it was introduced three months into the 1978 model year, the Zephyr Z-7 (above) accounted for nearly one-third of all Zephyr sales, making it the most popular of the four Zephyr models. Nearly two-thirds of Zephyr buyers chose the six-cylinder engine, increasing Lincoln-Mercury's overall six-cylinder installation rate to nearly 19 per cent in the 1978 model year compared with less than nine per cent during the 1977 model year.

The 1979 Mercury Marquis marks the 40th anniversary of the Mercury nameplate. The most exciting model of the 1939 Mercury lineup—introduced October 8, 1938—was the Sedan Coupe (background above). Like the new 1979 Mercury Marquis, it introduced several new concepts in automotive design, including semi-enclosed rear-wheel cutouts and two-piece doors with separate chrome window channels. The 1979 Marquis lives up to this heritage of innovative design with advanced electronic engine controls (standard on its optional 5.8-liter engine) and computer-assisted design of its body, frame and chassis to make it lighter yet roomier than last year's Marquis. Mercury sales totaled 60,214 in the 1939 model year. Lincoln-Mercury Division plans to sell about 155,000 Marquis during the 1979 model year.
