Board considers Sheldon School purchase

A vacant elementary school on Geddes near Sheldon may be converted into a Canton Township recreational facility.

The township board is toying with the idea of purchasing the recently-closed Sheldon School from the Wayne-Westland School District.

But according to township Supervisor Noel Culbert, the idea may be quickly dropped if finance director Mike Gorman and recreation superintendent Mike Gouin find the building structurally unsound.

On Tuesday, the board directed the two officials to investigate the condition of the school building and the availability of land Canton could buy for additional parks.

CULBERT SAID the Wayne-Westland School District is asking $200,000 for the school that is located on 10 acres of land.

The school, which accommodated lower elementary grades, was closed about two weeks ago, according to Richard Keilhacker, the Wayne-Westland Schools' assistant superintendent for business and operations.

Keilhacker said Sheldon students were transferred to Walker School on Michigan near Haggerty where they will come in contact with pupils in higher elementary grades.

The planning commission proposed rezoning the land to light industrial, and the township board accepted the recommendation last year.

According to Carroll, administrators of the federal community block grant program have already allocated $80,500 to Canton Township for the purchase of the Dye Brothers land. Carroll hopes the township will receive an additional $360,000 in federal funds for the project over the next three years.

The entire cost of buying the land is estimated at $612,000. Canton would have to pay about $172,000 of the cost.

At this point, Canton officials do not know if they will sell or lease the land to industrial developers.

Carroll hopes to receive federal funds to finance the construction of roads and water and sewer main extensions in the industrial park. The complex will include the 40-acre subdivision and an adjacent 60-acre parcel already owned by the township.

ALTHOUGH 18 FAMILIES who currently live in the subdivision will have to move to be relocated, Carroll says the families will not have to make the move for sometime.

The land acquisition program is divided into four phases. Occupied homes will not be purchased until the end of the second phase.

By law, the township must pay a fair market price for residents' homes and help the families find a new place to live.

Carroll does not expect Dye Brothers residents will object to the industrial park plan.

He said subdivision residents failed to attend public hearings the planning commission held on the proposed industrial park. Residents have not telephoned the township to complain about the proposal.

Fire, police staff face residency

A modified residency policy that would require new police officers and firefighters to live within five miles of Canton Township's borders may be included in the township's new hiring procedures.

The residency requirement was recommended by the Canton board Tuesday night for all police officers and firefighters who are hired in the future.

But the township merit commission, which is responsible for establishing hiring, disciplinary and dismissal policies, is not obligated to adopt the township board's recommendation.

Larry Bowerman, chairman of the three-person commission, said he informally asked the township board to deliver its opinion on the residency question because the commission's feelings on the matter are mixed.

BOWERMAN SAID the commission, which was established by an ordinance approved by voters last August, would like to establish a uniform residency policy for all police officers and firefighters.

Currently, fire department employees are not bound by any residency requirement. But police officers are required to live within three miles of the township borders, under a set of police rules adopted by the township board last year.

"Personally, I'm opposed to residency requirements," Bowerman told the board. "But I do favor requiring members of the police and fire departments to live within X miles of the township so they could get here quickly in an emergency."

If the township board's recommendation is adopted, new police officers and firefighters would be required to move within five miles of the township's borders within six months of completing their probationary period.

Current employees of the police and fire departments would not be bound by the rules.

Supervisor Noel Culbert admitted that the township board's recommendation discriminates against police officers and firefighters because the residency rule would not be applicable to other township employees.

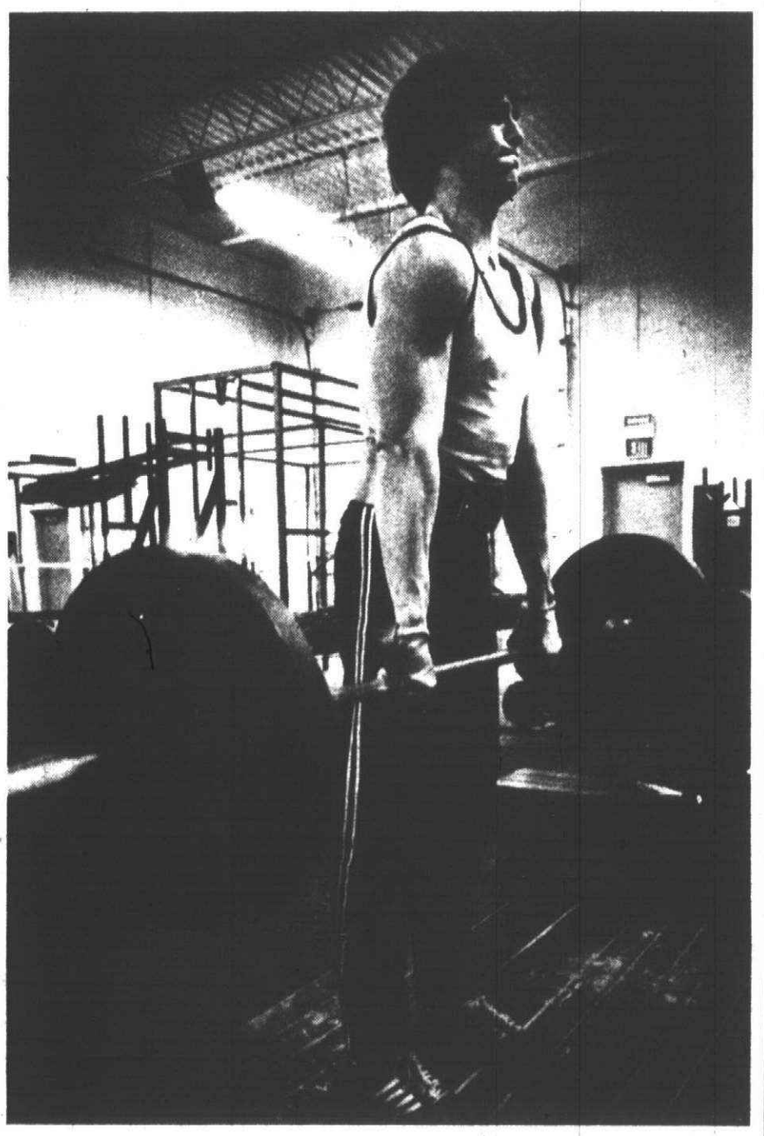

But he said such discrimination is legal on health, safety and welfare grounds.

Trustee Lynne Goldsmith said officials of most surrounding communities require police and fire employees to live within or just outside their municipalities to cut down on response time to emergencies.

ANY NOTION of establishing a strict residency policy that would require police and fire employees to live within the township was quickly dropped Tuesday night because of the high cost of housing in Canton.

Patrol officers and firefighters currently earn about $13,000 a year. Board members said they could not expect

First step taken to prepare sub for new industry

It will probably take years before all the paperwork and planning needed to convert one of Canton's oldest subdivisions into an industrial park are complete.

But steps are being taken now to begin the process that will transform the 50-year-old Dye Brothers Subdivision near Michigan and Sheldon into an area of light industrial plants.

Grant coordinator Terry Carroll, who was appointed director of the Dye Brothers project Tuesday night, expects to begin notifying landowners of the township's intent to purchase their land sometime next month.

Appraisals of the land and steps to relocate the 18 families who live in the subdivision will eventually follow.

THE DECISION to transform the subdivision into an industrial area was made more than a year ago following a petition of Dye Brothers landowners to extend water and sewer lines to their property.

Township planners denied the request on the grounds that public water and sewer availability would spur residential development in the predominately vacant, 40-acre subdivision.

Planners maintained at the time that the area was more suitable for industrial development because of the close proximity of Michigan Avenue, Willow Run Airport and railroad lines.

Culbert said township officials are investigating the condition of the school because Canton needs more indoor space for recreational activities.

Senior citizens and civic organizations currently meet in the recreation hall at Michigan and Sheldon. But Culbert maintains that the one-room building is not large enough to accomodate expansion of the township's recreation program.

The former township board purchased the recreation building last year for $105,000. Prior to the purchase, the township rented the building.

Trustee Lynne Goldsmith who sat on the former township board believes Canton officials may have decided against purchasing the recreation hall if they had known at the time that Sheldon School would be put on the market.

Culbert claims he possesses correspondence between former Supervisor Harold Stein and Wayne-Westland officials about the availability of Sheldon School. But Mrs. Goldsmith said Stein told the board when the recreation hall was purchased that the school was not available.

"I don't like digging up old news," said Mrs. Goldsmith. "But (knowing that Sheldon School was available) would have made a difference. We would have made a choice between the two buildings. We wouldn't have bought both."

If Sheldon School is purchased, Culbert says he has no idea if the township will sell or retain the current recreation building.

BESIDES INVESTIGATING the condition of Sheldon School, Gorman and Gouin will also investigate the availability of potential park land.

School hours changed

Elementary and high school students in the Plymouth Canton district will be getting out of school a little later each day beginning Jan. 29.

That's the eventual compromise reached by the district's teachers' union (Plymouth-Canton Education Association) following a disagreement that went all the way to arbitration.

As of Monday, the elementary schools will be dismissed 10 minutes later than the normally scheduled time. Elementary lunch hours will also be extended by 10 minutes.

At the district's high schools, first class of the day will begin five minutes later and dismiss five minutes later.

The change in dismissal and starting times results from a grievance filed by the teachers' union when the administration began a schedule of staggered school hours at the beginning of the school year.

Union president John Ryder charged that the administration did not have the right to change school hours without negotiating the item with the union.

The complaint went to Wayne County Circuit Court, but the judge who heard it told both sides to go back take the matter before an impartial arbitrator.

The arbitrator failed to resolve tbe dispute at first, but a compromise was eventually reached last week.

Norman Kee, personnel director for the district, said having to go back to the old hours would have cost the district the price of extra busses and teachers.

Ryder was unavailable for comment.

Gifted children get TAGged in school district's program

They may not compose a symphony by the time they are seven.

They may not discover a cure for cancer before they reach their 12th birthday.

They may not even have astonishing I.Q.s.

Nevertheless, roughly 500 children in the Talented and Gifted (TAG) program sponsored by the Plymouth-Canton school district do have unique abilities that might never be developed without a little help.

TAG, which has been operating about a year, is a program to identify and develop children's talents. Children who are identified as talented or gifted are given such options as taking minicourses revolving around specialized subjects, making individual contracts with teachers to do advanced study, taking advanced placement courses and working with community aides or mentors who are experts in subjects of interest to TAG students.

TAG children have made movies at Allen school, creative music at Miller, published a newspaper at Starkweather and started a Junior Achievement business at Pioneer Middle School.

TAG's coordinator is Richard Olenchak, who works with a committee of teachers, administrators and parents to impliment the program.

Olenchak presented the program's first annual report to members of the Plymouth Canton school board last Monday.

The report was well received by most board members, but drew some criticism from board vice-president Richard Arlen. "I've had some comments from individuals that what the young people are doing is nice, but they didn't see how it prepared them for anything," Arlen said.

According to Olenchak, the idea is more to give students as much individualized instruction as possible. "TAG is not an attempt at creation of an elite, nor is it an attempt at segregation," his report says.

"It is, however, a program which offers students, parents and teachers an opportunity to achieve the elusive commodity of personalized curriculum."

Olenchak says the program tends to have a "spillover" effect in which other children also become involved in individualized programs.

TAG is not without its problems. Olenchak admits that not all teachers are capable of dealing with gifted children.

He believes there is more of a problem with parents who don't want to admit their child is gifted, than with parents who insist their child belongs in a TAG program.

The decision whether a student is TAG material comes from a number of sources. The child may be recommended by a parent or teacher, do well on intelligence and achievement tests or show demonstrated ability. TAG students have to satisfy at least three of the seven screening elements. No one element is weighted above another.

Olenchak says the reason for tbe variety of screening devices is because a child can be gifted in a variety of ways.

"A high I.Q. may show academic ability, but it wouldn't show whether a child is talented in art," he says.

Since the program officially began last November (although it was being organized almost a year before that) the TAG program has cost $16,205.

Three stop to help, rob man instead

A Wayne man who accidently drove his car into a ditch was robbed early Monday morning by a trio of men who offered the man their assistance.

According to Canton police, Brian Vogh, 22, of Wayne, was forced to give the men $46 after they drove him to a deserted area near Lilley and North at 2:30 a.m.

Vogh told police that one of the men stuck his hand in his pocket as though he had a gun.

The incident occurred after Vogh accidently drove his car into a ditch near Newburgh and Cherry Hill in Westland.

Vogh said three white males, about 26-years-old, stopped at the accident site in a green Dodge pickup to offer their help. Vogh told police that he voluntarily entered the truck after the men promised to drive him to a gasoline station where he could receive help.

Canton Police Sgt. Larry Stewart believes the incident may be related to three other robberies that have occurred in the area since Dec. 26.

In a case Dec. 26, a Westland juvenile was robbed $250 and knocked unconscious by three men who offered the youth a ride. The men drove the youth to a deserted area in Canton.

Stewart said the other two cases occurred in Washtenaw County.

Although the victims have given differing descriptions of the men who robbed them, Stewart believes the same group of people may be involved.

Special meeting set

Canton's township board and planning commission will meet in a joint session Monday Jan. 29 to decide whether the farmland preservation concept should be pursued.

The special joint session is scheduled for 7 p.m at the township hall.

A proposal to levy four mills over a period of years to pay for the purchase of development rights to many acres of Canton farmland failed at the general election in November.

However, the narrow margin of defeat, even in a year of taxpayer revolt, has led many Canton officials to believe the issue should not be allowed to die.

The township board is meeting in conjunction with the planning commission because a new master plan is in the works.

A resolution to either support or not support the development rights plan would have an act on tbe proposed master plan.

Noel Culbert, nship supervisor, is confident that tl sue will get a positive reception i the rest of the board. He said h lieves more community education about the proposal is necessary before it goes to the polling place once again.

Culbert added, "another vote on the issue be taken until the end of this year."

Hearings are set

Students question traditional schedule effectiveness

A group of students challenging the scheduling program at the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park (CEP) is about to take its first official action.

The Student Advocates for the Philosophy of Education, organized last fall, will hold a series of public hearings at the end of this month to gather information about the effectiveness of traditional scheduling at Plymouth Salem High and Plymouth Canton High.

The hearings will be held 2:15-4 p.m. in the Little Theatre of Canton High on Jan. 31, Feb. 1 and Feb. 2.

The Student Advocates also will hold open hearings for CEP students during the fourth hour (the period when lunch hours are scheduled on a rotating basis) on the same days.

LAST FALL, the high schools at the CEP dropped the modular scheduling system in favor of the traditional six one-hour class day schedule.

The decision was made earlier by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education based on an administrative report that high school population had reached the point where modular scheduling no longer could be accommodated.

Under modular scheduling, students schedule classes over a six-day period which allows more time blocks for independent study and research.

Modular scheduling had come under a lot of criticism, however, from some parents who felt the students—particularly freshmen and sophomores—weren't mature enough to handle the freedom and flexibility offered by the system.

Foes of modular scheduling cited as abuses the mingling of large numbers of students in the cafetorium, hallways and other areas and the poor attendance record as reasons for favoring a more traditional schedule.

Adoption of the traditional schedule this fall, however, resulted in a number of electives being eliminated because they could not be retained under a traditional schedule.

THE STUDENT group hopes to obtain views from students, parents, teachers and administrators regarding the effectiveness of the scheduling change.

The group also has invited a number of educational experts to speak at the hearings.

The Student Advocates hope these representatives from philosophy, curriculum, administration and alternative programs will give them the best information available regarding program goals and options available within a traditional structure, explain student leaders Anne Harrington and Chris Johnson.

After the hearings, the Student Advocates will compile a report on the effectiveness of the new program.

The group hopes to share this data with others and use it as a base for recommendations to improve the schooling process at the CEP.

"We have about 25 students who have regularly been attending," explained Harrington, "and these students are quite representative of all grade levels, and from both high schools."

Johnson added that the consensus of opinion developed after the hearing might lead to the group making a proposal which it would present in the future to the school board.

A tape recording of the hearings will be available.

The sponsor of the group is Stephen Williams, who teachers social studies, history and government at Canton High.

The Advocates received its charter at the end of November.

Which career has best job outlook?

Job opportunities remain very good for students in applied science programs at Schoolcraft College, according to school figures.

The latest edition of Employment Outlook, published yearly by the college's admissions office, rates 20 job areas as having "excellent" opportunity. Of the remainder, eight were rated "moderate" and two just "fair."

Two career programs rated fair last year moved up to moderate in the latest ratings. Occupational therapy assistant, with entry level wages ranging from $4.35 to $5.36 an hour, is one of those upgraded. Employment opportunities out-of-state were rated excellent for OTA.

Law enforcement, with entry level salaries ranging from $11,500 to $15,000 a year, also moved up from a fair to moderate rating.

Two new programs at Schoolcraft earned excellent opportunity ratings. They are child care teacher's aide, with a wage range of $2.65 to $6.80 an hour, and manufacturing-production planning, which offers a beginning salary of $1,000 a month.

Tool design technology, another area with excellent opportunity, also ranks high in remuneration. Entry level detailers can expect to earn $4.50 to $5 an hour, layout personnel to $8, designers to $10 and checkers to $12 an hour.

Overall, four of Schoolcraft's seven programs in business offer excellent employment opportunity, four of the five health careers (most of which have waiting lists), one of four in public service and 12 of 14 in technical careers, including culinary arts, which also has a waiting list.

A limited quantity of Employment Outlook is available at the admissions office, which has distributed copies to area high schools and employment offices as well as to other offices on campus.

Ice skating is postponed

Sorry, kids, but liability problems mean Plymouth Township won't be able to offer ice skating this winter at the recreational park.

"We're sorry we can't have any skating because construction is going on," apologized Supv. Tom Notebaert, who's received a number of phone calls about skating on the pond in the new park at Ann Arbor Trail and McClumpha.

Because construction is not completed at the park, the township would be liable for skaters at the park, Notebaert explained.

However he's assuring those skating fans in the area that the pond will be cleared of snow as soon as possible during next winter's skating season.

Muscle

Bulges mark body building boom

Tom Semrau strikes the kind of pose that endangers weak-seamed shirts.

By LYNN ORR

If Roger Honica pressed weights to please women, he would have quit six years ago.

"My wife thinks it's grotesque," he admits. "She thinks body building is a waste of time."

But with an eye to entering competition like "Mr. Universe" some day, Honica looks at body building as a personal challenge. And his wife Judith likes the fact that he's combined his hobby with a business venture by opening Silver's Gym in Plymouth.

With 220 pounds of prime muscle on a 6-2 frame, Livonia resident Honica is a walking advertisement for the gym which caters to advanced body builders as well as beginners.

Honica's gym is the first of its kind in Michigan.

"I'm the first gym to mix the sexes," he says. Four of the current 30 members are females, and Honica doesn't expect to increase that ratio dramatically.

Most women, he says, work out to keep in shape. They're not interested in the heavy body building equipment Honica offers at the gym at 953 Irvin, north of Junction.

But only about 10 per cent of the men who work out aspire to physiques like TV's "The Hulk."

SILVERS, with a nameplay on the hot California gym, Golds, where TV's Lou Ferrigno keeps in shape, is Honica's latest sideline. He is employed at Ford Motor Co.

At the gym, which officially opens the first week in February, beginners work out next to guys like Tom Semrau of Wixom, who has been pumping iron for 15 years since high school.

"It's my primary sport," says Semrau, whose father was also a body builder. Semrau's wife likes his rippling muscles, but she doesn't appreciate the time he devotes to working out — at least two hours a day, five or six days a week.

That's an average amount of time to spend on serious body building, Honica says, who works out about two hours a day himself. But the serious types quickly outgrow most equipment available at spa chains, he adds. That's what prompted his latest venture.

"I was working out at a health club in Redford, but it folded and I had no where to go. The closest place was east of Woodward."

Undaunted, Honica decided to open his own gym. He sold an A.S. Cobra, an expensive English Ford sportscar acquired in pursuit of another hobby, and invested about $20,000 in equipment he had built from his own design.

Stu Galbreth, a welding instructor at Schoolcraft College, built the different pieces. Each one is designed for one particular body part.

A 1,000 pound calf and leg press machine, 5-150 pound dumbbells, and 30-130 pound barbells stretch devoteees to their muscle-bearing limits.

FOR MANY, "it's a craze," Honica says. For others, it's a hobby, a sport and a challenge. For Honica, 31, it all started when a former girlfriend called him a "zipper."

"I was 135 pounds and had a high jump record in high school, but that's all I could do."

Now as society becomes more health conscious, more people are turning to body building as a way to stay in shape, he says. He shruggs off medical criticism of the sport.

"When you're working out hard, you're tearing the body down, actually aging it faster," he explains. "But you're flushing your system as well."

Unlike many body builders, Honica doesn't use drugs like amphetimines, steroids, or niacin, purported to darken the skin for competition.

He has two goals — to enter body building competition and to reach a break-even point with the gym.

SOME OF HIS neighbors aren't too happy with either goal.

The gym is located in an area zoned light industrial and nearby residents want a cement wall built across the rear yard of the complex where the gym is located.

Since Silvers moved in, they're using his gym to renew old complaints, he says.

"They think if they give me a hard time, I'll give the owner a hard time, and he'll build the wall," Honica explains.

And he's not worried about neighbors' implications that there may be more than body building going on in the gym.

"It's a health spa, not a massage parlour," he says adamantly.

"I don't worry about it. All the years I've been going to gyms I've never been approached by gays."

There's only one requirement to use the facilities — paying the fees. The gym is open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday, noon to 6 p.m., Saturday, and 2-6 p.m., Sunday.

Daily, weekly, monthly, and yearly rates of $3, $10, $25 and $250 are available with decreasing yearly and family rates.

Prices are compatible with other gyms, Honica says.

RON GROLLMUS of Livonia thinks Silvers has the best equipment he's ever seen.

With a bellow and a red face, Grollmus finishes using the lats pull and has only one response for why he puts himself through the heavy paces.

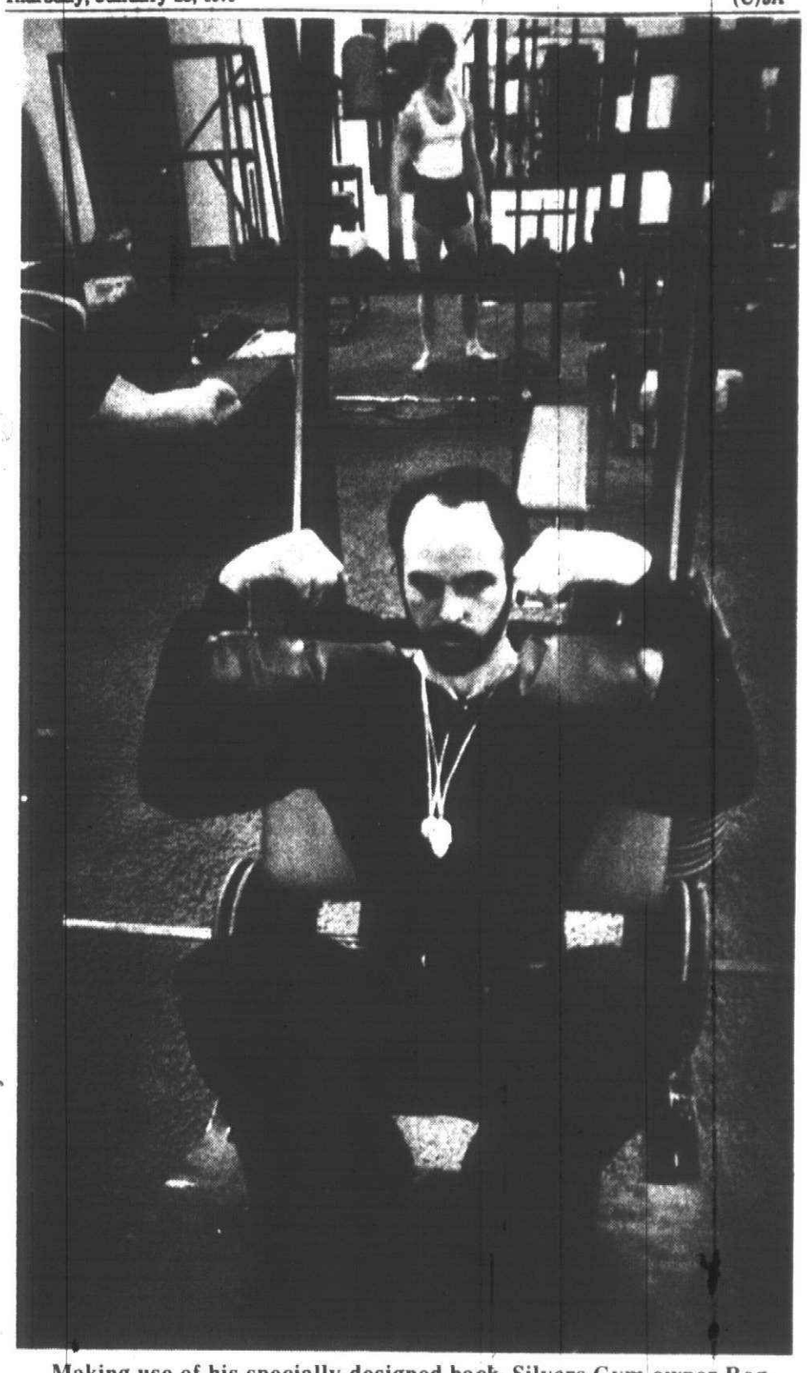

"I like it," says the Schoolcraft College student. "It makes me feel good about myself."

And he doesn't mind the admiring glances females cast his way.

"They look," he confirms. "And why shouldn't a girl look at a guy who's built well?" he challenges.

No one had a response.

Daniel's Den

By Emory Daniels

Missing the Superbowl

I missed half the Super Bowl Sunday because of the recent blizzard in Chicago.

And, of course, it was the best half — the final two quarters — which I missed.

The reason goes back to a decision my sisters and I made in December for a Christmas gift for Mom.

We decided to throw a few bucks in a pot and buy Mom a round trip flight to Chicago so she could spend a couple weeks after the holiday with her youngest son who is living in northwest Chicago.

My younger brother is a minister near Streamwood, Ill. Between caring for the flock, and running a day-care center, he couldn't get free to join the family at Christmas time. So we decided to send Mom there, instead.

UNFORTUNATELY, THE Chicago area was hit by a blizzard shortly after Mom arrived there.

The suburbs were immobilized and she was house-bound except for three ventures outdoors during a two-week period.

The Chicago papers reported the January blizzard was worse than the last great storm of 1967. And so I can appreciate what things were like because I was in the Army and living in the northwest suburbs of Chicago when the '67 blizzard hit.

At that time, I was stranded away from my residence for three days. Chicago got cleared out first, but the suburbs remained buried. Even the snowplows, graders, and two trucks got stuck. In 1967, though, the problem was a ton of snow, high winds and sub-zero temperature.

In 1979 the same conditions existed except more snow fell, the winds were stronger, the period of sub-zero temperatures longer, and an ice storm followed the initial barrage of snow.

AFTER THE STORM ended and things settled down a bit, Mom decided she better get started back for Michigan because a new storm warning had been issued.

So my brother Dave and Mom left Friday afternoon for O'Hare Airport. She had an open reservation for a direct flight to Saginaw and had called in to save her seat on the next flight out.

But the snow piles were still high above the level of cars on the streets, creating dangerous blind intersections at almost every turn. The roads still were slippery, making driving very slow.

Dave got Mom to the airport safely, but 10 minutes after her flight departed. Almost every other scheduled flight at O'Hare was departing later than scheduled by a half hour to an hour and a half. But Mom's plane left right on schedule.

The only option left was to take the next flight out to Detroit Metro, and then arrange a trip to Saginaw from there, or remain in Chicago a couple days until the next direct flight was scheduled and take a chance on being stranded again by the predicted storm.

Mom made the wise choice and boarded the plane headed for Metro.

I WAS STILL working in the Plymouth office Friday night when I got a call from my sister in Saginaw informing me that Mom's plans had been changed and she would be arriving at Metro in about 30 minutes.

So I interrupted work for a trip to Romulus to pick up Mom and take her to our house. No problem Friday night — everything worked fine.

Connections couldn't be made Saturday for a flight from etroit to Saginaw. I offered to drive Mom home, but she declined: "I've got a paid ticket, why should you drive?"

Well, my sister in Saginaw had to work on Sunday and couldn't get to the airport there to pick her up until after 6 p.m.

Given the choice of flight times on Sunday then, Mom chose the one leaving Metro at 6:37 p.m. and arriving in Saginaw at 7:05 p.m.

I was in Plymouth Sunday afternoon helping to celebrate the birthday of my niece, Robin Hudson, so I was able to watch most of the first half of the ga..e after dinner.

But with a half-hour driving time, and the need to get Mom at Metro 30 minutes before the scheduled departure time, I had to leave before the second quarter was over.

By the time I returned home, the game was over and some guy was narrating the highlights. So much for the Super Bowl!

You wouldn't think a blizzard two weeks earlier 300 miles away would interfere with plans for four hours on a Sunday afternoon. Which demonstrates how much stock can be placed in the best-laid plans of mice and men.

Wayne-Westland schools to ask for 3 mills March 5

If you have children attending Wayne-Westland schools, you might want to circle March 5 on your calendar.

That's the date of a millage election in which the Wayne-Westland School Board will ask voters to approve a tax increase of three mills for two years—the first such request in 12 years. The board unanimously approved the election date Monday, with board members Gerard McGrath and Robert Reichard absent.

"We have to bite the bullet," said Supt. Timothy Dyer in his request for the millage election.

Dyer has said that failure to approve the millage request will force "drastic" reductions in art, music and elementary physical education programs. It also will force restrictions in athletics, shorten school days by one hour and cause cancellation of summer school programs, he added.

The additional three mills would raise about $2 million, which Dyer believes is enough to restore cuts made in this year's budget and to prevent further reductions.

The increase would mean an additional $3 for each $1,000 of assessed property valuation. That assessment usually is half the market value of the property.

An administrative task force earlier had estimated that a 2.85-mill increase would be sufficient. It was later decided to hike the request to three mills, to offset an anticipated trim in state aid for programs that include transportation, vocational education and special education.

To be discussed at a future meeting is whether the increased millage will be earmarked on the ballot for special programs, or whether it will go into the district's general fund from which salaries and most expenses are paid.

"We should take a hard look at taking a portion of the increase and earmarking it (for certain programs)," said Board President Fred Warmbier.

A number of factors have prompted a request for additional millage. An administrative task force has been studying those elements, which include inflation, costly state-mandated programs, declining enrollment and a slower-than-average growth rate for property values.

Inflation combined with a tight budget "makes any flexibility for next year impossible," according to Dyer, leaving no room unless the district starts layoffs and reduces programs. Declining enrollment and a budget deficit from the 1977-78 contributed to the austere budget.

Also contributing to the need for a millage increase is what Dyer describes as a "very poor state aid act," which brought the district only 5.4 per cent of new money.

Other factors include state mandated programs, which run about $1 million a year. Wayne-Westland over the past three years. Dyer said that the district's property value has grown about 1.56 per cent, as compared to about 8-9 per cent statewide.

Wayne-Westland expects to lose about 1,000 elementary students next year. While some of that loss can be made up with adult and community education programs, the district expects an overall loss of nearly 600 students.

Since the district receives about $1,000 per student in general state aid, declining enrollment could lead to a loss of nearly $600,000, with little ability to reduce costs proportionately.

The district's taxpayers did receive a property tax break this year with nearly a four-mill reduction in taxes under a special provision of the state aid act. State aid was supposed to make up the difference in revenue lost because of the rollback. But cost of living increases outpaced the state aid, said Dyer.

Dyer also noted that state House Speaker Bobby Crim (D-Davison) has proposed an increase in the "circuit breaker," a form of property tax relief. That proposal would practically eliminate property taxes for those with an adjusted gross income of less than $35,000. That loss in revenue would be made up with a one per cent increase in the state income tax.

While a shift in taxes is possible, the Crim proposal may not receive Gov. William Milliken's approval.

Job skills to be topic

Are you looking for a job, want to increase your chances of finding a job you'd really like, or want to minimize the chances of losing out on the job you really wanted?

Than you might be interested in a four-week job skills workshop beginning Feb. 6.

Beginning Feb. 6 and running four consecutive weeks, 7-9 p.m. on Tuesdays in Plymouth Canton High, the job skills workshop will help persons assess job values, write a convincing resume, complete a successful job interview after proper filing of an application, and assist persons in seeking--and keeping--the right job.

For more information on the workshop and other enrichment programs offered through the school district, visit the community education office in Room 129, Canton High School, 8415 Canton Center Road, or call 459-1180.

Library fund to get benefit dinner boost

The Cyprus Garden restaurant will host a dinner to benefit the Canton Library fund at 7 p.m. Feb. 4.

The fundraiser will cost $25 per couple with tickets available in advance. Cyprus Gardens is donating all profits from the dinner to the fund, just as two other local restaurants did in December.

The library fund, now more than $4,000 is to help achieve a library for Canton. Township residents now use the Plymouth library.

According to Larry McEwen, a member of the library fund committee, township board members, U.S. Representative William Ford, State Rep. Thomas Brown and State Sen. William Faust are expected to attend.

A discussion on the proposed library will follow the dinner.

Tickets are available from Norma Waara, who can be reached at township hall.

employees to purchase expensive housing on those salaries.

The firefighters' union contract with the township says current fire employees cannot be bound by residency requirements. But it gives township officials the right to impose the requirement on new employees.

Patrol officers, who recently voted to join the Police Officers Association of Michigan, are expected to begin contract negotiations with the township in the near future.

Board members admitted that residency is a negotiable item that could be negated by the contract.

Fall Festival elects officers

South, a member of the Plymouth Kiwanis Club, was first vice-president of the Festival Board for 1978. He is principal of Eriksson Elementary School of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

South replaces Dick Raison of Colonial Kiwanis Club of Plymouth who steps down as president but will remain as a member of the board.

OTHER OFFICERS elected included:

Eugene Kaflia of Plymouth Civitans, first vice-president;

Fred Eisenlord of Plymouth Lions, second vice-president;

Hazel Gibson of Plymouth Book World, secretary;

Tim Yoe of Colonial Kiwanis, treasurer.

New members on the board include Elinor Shevlin of the Plymouth Symphony League, June Turner of the Plymouth Community Arts Council, and Cathryn Kostreba of Plymouth BPW.

Eisenlord and South will continue as members of the FAll Fall Festival Board.

Members whose terms on the board expired are Sandra Davis and Nancy Sharp.

RAISON REPORTS that the Fall Festival ended up in the black financially for 1978 with a balance of about $2,300.

"This was due largely to the strong organizational work and management of Festival Manager Carl Glass and his assistant Mike Vanderveen.

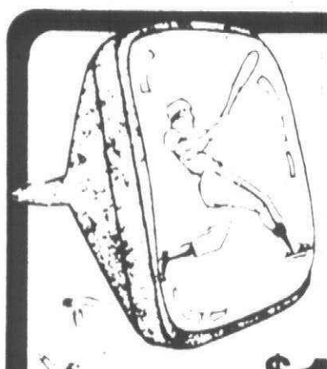

"One thing we noticed in 1978, for instance, was that the income the Board received from the concessions was down but this was made up by Glass and Vanderveen keeping expenses down."

Raison added that all organizations, except one, made money on the 1978 Fall Festival. The exception was a high school class which lost money on its booth.

Meets Mrs. Carnegie

John Czubaj of Canton met Dorothy Carnegie, widow of Dale Carnegie, recently while attending the international convention of the Carnegie organization. The meeting occurred because Czubaj, who offers Carnegie classes in the Plymouth Hilton, is a member of the Ralph Nichols Corporation in Southfield which achieved a record in 1978. The corporation, which provides training in metropolitan Detroit area, had a record number of graduates—2,500 in 1978—which made it eligible to join the exclusive President's Club of the organization. The only other three members of that club are the countries of France and Mexico, and the region of Southern California. This is the first time in Carnegie history that any franchise graduated 2,500 or more persons in one year.

Township looks again at mid-rise ordinance

The combination of new legislation and another look at zoning ordinances may bring some changes to Plymouth Township's zoning books.

Mid-rise buildings—where they should go and how they should go up—will be the subject of a special planning commission study session Feb. 7.

At that time, commissioners hope to decide whether to retain, revise, or write new ordinances regarding mid-rise zoning for structures up to nine stories.

According to township planning consultant Jim Anulewicz, new township enabling legislation recently signed into law may give the commissioners new direction on where to go with the mid-rise question.

The legislation puts some teeth into township planning considerations within the guidelines of the legisla tion, Anulewicz says.

Township ordinances now restrict mid-rise zoning adjacent to freeways. Commissioners earlier had discussed the possibility of freeing that restriction for certain areas.

However a Plymouth architect's request to build a mid-rise structure prompted the commissioners to consider the mid-rise zoning question at its last meeting.

ERICK CARNE, of Carne Associates, hopes to build a nine-story apartment complex and six-story office structure on Plymouth Road west of Haggerty.

Under current township ordinances, Carne could not be granted mid-rise zoning in the area, although some commissioners believe the site is compatible for such zoning.

"It doesn't seem like a very bad place for it," concedes Smith Horton, chairman of the planning commission.

But instead of lifting the freeway location restriction, commissioners may consider another ordinance for planned unit developments (PUD) as an option for developers considering mid-rise.

The PUD, adopted by many communities, in effect gives a planning commission more of an insight into a developer's plans for a particular piece of property than normal zoning allowances, Anulewicz explains.

"If someone comes in and requests commercial zoning, for example, you're not approving any sort of plan, just the zoning," he said.

Under PUD zoning, the developer must present more detailed plans for the entire piece of property when zoning is requested.

He added that PUDs also give township planners more flexibility than consent judgements, which develop from court battles between developers and municipal officials.

Often when developers believe a denial for a rezoning request is unjustified, they can file suit against the municipality. After years of legals talks and fees, the lawyers for the plaintiff and defendent usually agree to a consent judgement—in which the two parties are bound by the agreement signed in court.

Consent judgements are not only expensive, they often veer far afield from the intents of local planning authorities, officials argue.

"The community has established through the master plan the kind of community it wants to have," Anulewicz says. "There may be areas where it may be reasonable to have kinds of uses permitted in a mid-rise district."

Possible revisions of the mid-rise zoning would retain the intent of the master plan, he emphasized.

Managing floodplains

Residents of four western Wayne County communities will get an expert account of flood hazards in the Tonquish Creek basin next week.

A report entitled, "Flood Hazard Analyses—Tonquish Creek and Tributaries" will be distributed at 1:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 2 in the conference room of Westland City Hall, 36601 Ford Road.

It was prepared by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service with the aid of the state Department of Natural Resources, the Wayne County Soil Conservation District and officials in the four communities—the cities of Plymouth and Westland and the townships of Canton and Plymouth.

"THOSE COMMUNITIES must decide how to reduce damage from flooding," said Joseph Luellen of the soil conservation district.

"The public can help their local officials in developing a management plan for the area.

"How the flood plain is used could affect public health and safety. Property damage caused by flood will be greater if buildings are located within the area."

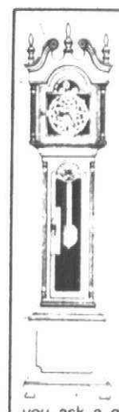

In the current flood plain, he said, are:

- 52 residential buildings.
- 31 commercial buildings.
- 73 acres in the Plymouth community.
- 182 acres in Canton Township.
- 191 acres in Westland.

ANALYZED ARE four levels of floods—those likely to occur in 10 years, 50 years, 100 years and 500 years.

The flood plain area includes a distance of 9.68 miles from the Middle Rouge River (just east of Wayne Road) to North Territorial Road; 1.7 miles of Willow Creek from Warren to Lotz roads just south of Ford Road and the south branch of Tonquish Creek from Ann Arbor Road to McClumpha Road.

Total drainage area is 24.4 square miles.

Cantor Blank will celebrate 90th birthday

By MARGARET MILLER

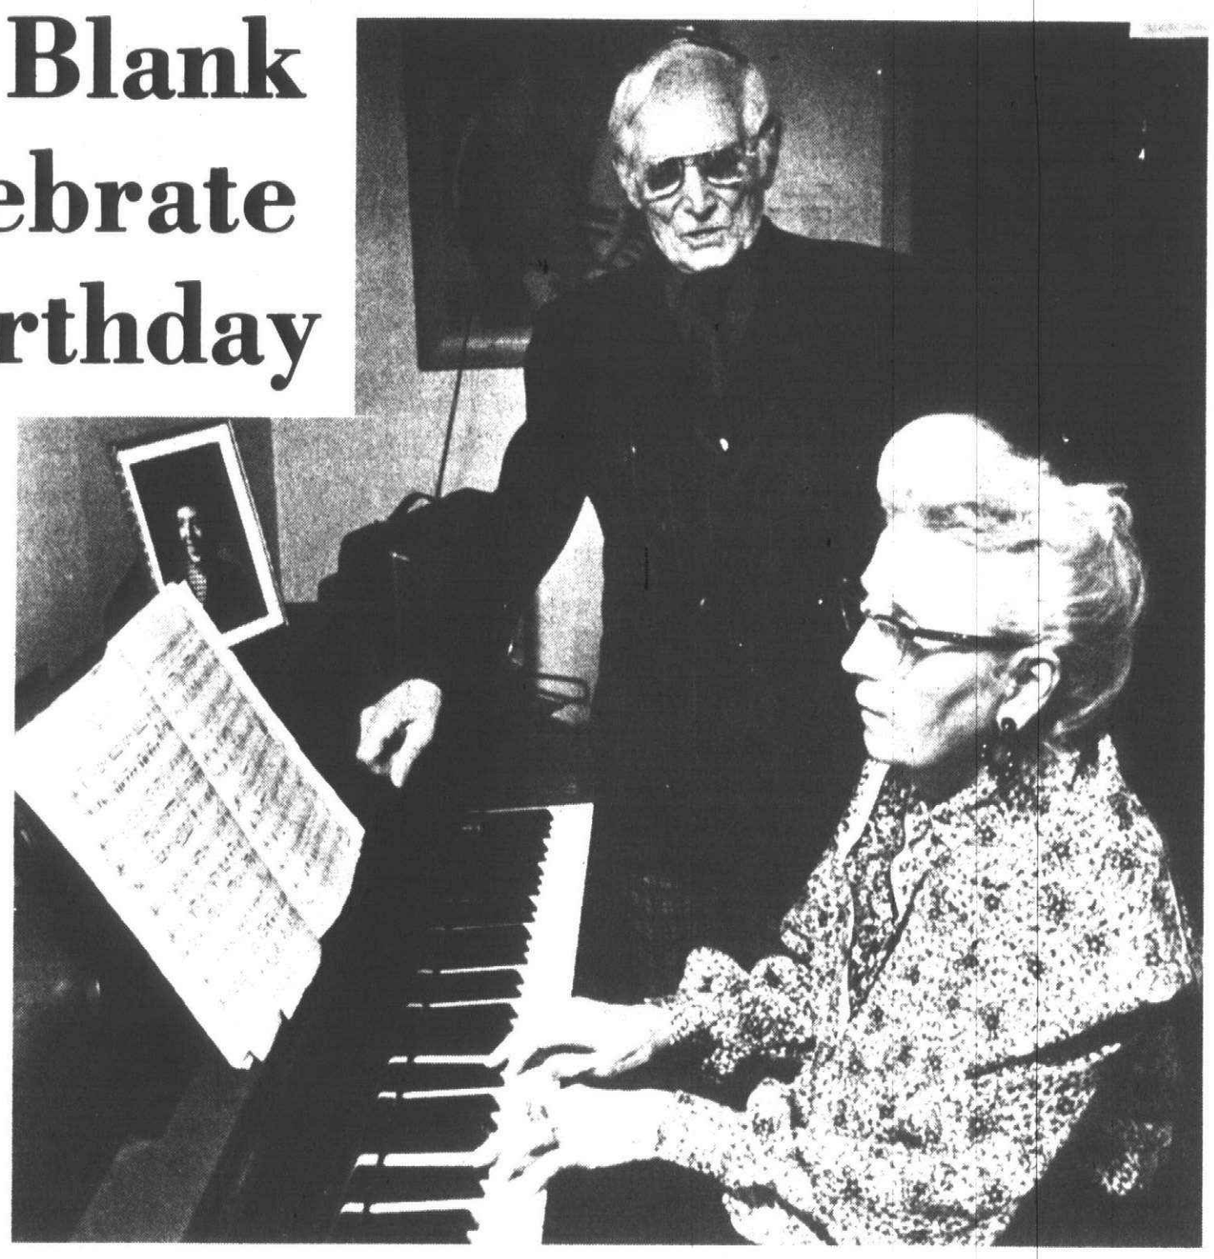

Henry J. Blank, who will be honored by his Livonia Jewish Congregation on the occasion of his 90th birthday Feb. 11, has been a cantor for 70 of those 90 years.

Actually, his career as a singer spans 84 years. He remembers he was only six years old when his father, cantor in the Russian town of Kishnov, took him along when he went to sing for High Holy Day services.

Through that long career he has served congregations in Detroit and Los Angeles, Livonia and Trenton, many places around the country.

And through the years of singing—62 of them, anyway—he has has the same accompanist, his wife, Louise, whom he married in 1916. She will be by his side, as always, when the local congregation offers its birthday congratulations with a 7:30 p.m. reception in the LJC synagogue located at 31840 W. Seven Mile.

Rabbi Martin Gordon will give the invocation for that event, and Cantor Blank's longtime friend, Cantor Larry Vieder, president of the Cantor's Council of Detroit, will be the speaker. The honoree is particularly proud that 13 Detroit area cantors, all members of the council, will be present for the occasion.

CANTOR BLANK left his home village near the Roumanian border to head for this country when he was 20 years old.

Why? "Who did not want to come here then?" he asked. Others in his family emigrated from Russia, too. An uncle, Leon Blank, became one of the best-known actors in the Yiddish theater, and a brother, also Leon, was Detroit representative of the defunct newspaper, "Jewish Daily Day."

He also has two brothers in Jerusalem, one of whom is a dean of the Yeshiva there.

Arriving first in New York, he soon went on to the Detroit area, and it was here that he married Louise, who grew up in Buenos Aires and graduated from the music conservatory there.

"We met because she was both my sister-in-law and my niece by marriage," then explaining that his younger brother had married her mother.

A cantor's life is one of "a lot of traveling," the Blanks said. He served a number of congregations including Beth Moses in Detroit and a large synagogue in Los Angeles.

The couple had two sons, Sinai and Marvin, and when they married and headed for the western suburbs the elder Blanks took up residence in Livonia. The cantor's talents went to the new Livonia Jewish Congregation.

"I was almost retired then," he remembers, "but a cantor was needed." He put in two years with a congregation in Trenton, but then came back to Livonia—"I had really never left them."

RETIREMENT came only last year, when Henry Blank became cantor emeritis for the Livonia Jewish Congregation.

But retired isn't exactly the word to describe this couple. "I should have so much energy," is how one LJC member would put it.

There are regular visits to the Prentis Manor in Southfield and occasional ones to its parent institution in Detroit, to lead services for the elderly Jews there and read to them.

They also visit the elderly residents of the Franklin manor. They participate in special services and put on programs. Cantor Blank has remained an active member of the cantors' association.

Trustee Law pushes for charter change

By LYNN ORR

Without an increase in taxes or a full-scale police department, Plymouth Township can protect itself from annexation by opting for charter township status.

That's the opinion of Trustee Gerald Law, who wants the board to seriously pursue that course within the next few months. But he also wants to overcome residents' fears of a tax hike which usually follows the charter township course.

"The intent is not to change from one mill," he declared at Tuesday's meeting.

And he's convinced that with assurances that taxes won't rise to the five-mill level allowed to a charter township without a voter referendum, residents won't attempt to stop the board from pursuing the charter township goal.

Under state law, trustees themselves can vote to form a charter township if criteria such as fire and police protection is met. Residents, however, can petition to stop the action and demand a vote on the question.

But Law is convinced that if residents understand the trustees' intent, Plymouth Township will attain charter township status to everyone's benefit.

He also pointed out that the Headlee amendment may prohibit tax increases without a vote, even though a charter township is allowed to levy up to five mills without a vote.

A court case probably will decide that question, he speculated.

"WE HAVE one avenue open to us and it's been beaten to death," Law said, adding that he wants to end the discussion and take the steps necessary to prepare themselves for charter township status.

Those steps include some form of police protection and solid waste disposal. And both steps can be easily accomplished without a tax hike, Law argues.

In discussions with other general law townships which recently voted for charter township status, Law learned that the licensing of a contractor for rubbish pickup fulfills the requirement for solid waste disposal.

And police protection can take the form of a one-person department rather than an expensive contract with the Wayne County Sheriff's department, he says.

"We're attempting to comply with an act to become a charter township. I think it might be more advantageous to explore having one full-time police officer. We don't have to make a commitment to fund a police department."

A few years ago, the cost of $250,000 for one patrol car in the Plymouth-Northville-Canton sector was considered steep.

And Law isn't convinced that a sheriff's patrol is the way to go.

"What I'm leaning to is getting our single police officer," he told fellow trustees. "I can't believe he's going to cost $250,000."

The board re-tabled the item for two more weeks while Notebaert promised some recommednations and information concerning police protection and licensing possibilities.

Hines patrol grants asked

State-funded sheriff's traffic patrols are expected to be operating along Edward Hines Drive and some other areas of Wayne County within a month, following approval of the plan by the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

The county board Jan. 18 approved an application for $1.25 million in state funds to underwrite the cost of the patrols for a nine-month period ending Sept. 30. The money is available to counties under Act 416, passed by the Michigan legislature last year.

Commissioners made their approval contingent upon approval by the sheriff's deputies union of a memorandum of understanding. The memo acknowledges the county is under no obligation to continue the patrols if state funding is ended or to put any county money into the program.

INSISTENCE ON the memorandum came in the wake of an arbitrator's ruling that the board of commissioners could not reduce the personnel of any existing sheriff's units below their July 1974 levels as the result of a "staffing" clause in the union's contract.

A union spokesman told the board his membership would vote on the memorandum today. He indicated that he expected approval.

Sheriff William Lucas said the new 32-officer unit will concentrate on traffic enforcement on secondary roads as required by Act 416.

"If it is not an Interstate, a U.S., an M (Michigan State) or a residential street, chances are it's a secondary road," Lucas explained. He cited Middlebelt, Merriman and Ecorse Road and Hines Drive as examples.

The patrols will operate in the unincorporated townships of western Wayne County and will go into cities only upon request, Lucas said.

He said state funding will double his road patrol strength outside the City of Romulus, where a 36-member sheriff's force provides the city's police services under contract.

THE NEW UNIT will operate single-officer cars. Approxiamtely 15 will be purchased with equipment such as a new radar unit that permits clocking of oncoming cars while the patrol car is also in motion, Lucas said.

The cars will be deployed on the basis of high-accident locations, as reported by the Michigan Accident Location Index, a computerized system in Lansing which makes such data immediately available, he added.

"For example, when last we checked, the intersection of Sibley Road and Telegraph in Brownstown Township was the highest-accident intersection in Wayne County. Sibley falls within Act 416, so this will be a priority location for these patrols," Lucas said.

The new unit will feature a "drunk driving saturation patrol" which will operate on weekend evenings and other times when larger numbers of intoxicated drivers are on the road, he added. He said statistics indicate drinking is involved in about half of all fatal accidents.

Lucas said the new patrol cars will be clearly marked. "We're not after ticket-writing. We are after traffic safety through compliance and 90 per cent of the drivers improve their driving upon seeing a patrol car."

Patrols will respond to emergency situations other than traffic matters, Lucas said. He cited crimes-in-progress and unruly crowds in parks as examples.

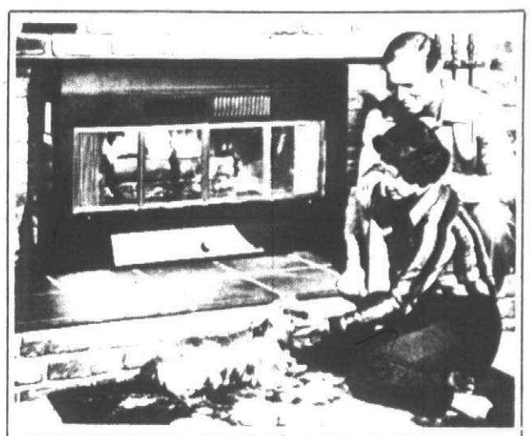

Funding must be applied for annually in order to continue the patrols.

PROBLEM SOLVING

A workshop on how persons can learn to be more creative problem solvers is being offered by George Odiorne Associates of Plymouth at the YMCA Storer Camp in Jackson the weekend of Feb. 2-4.

The Creative Problem Solving Workshop will explore ways people can use their creative energies to tackle problems which arise in the workplace, home, or personal lives, explains Jack Bologna, president of Odiorne Associates, 711 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Suite 4, Plymouth.

Some of the topics to be covered in the workshop include models for creative problem solving, communication skills, blocks to creativity, the relationship between humor and creativity, and new approaches to leadership and management.

The workshop is part of a national series offered by the National Humanistic Education Center of Saratoga Springs, New York. Workshop leaders will be Dr. Joel Goodman and Elliott Masie of the center's staff.

Participants from Michigan and Ohio will include teachers, nurses, parents, helping professionals, students, business persons, and others.

The fee for the workshop, which includes tuition, room and board and a copy of Creative Problem Solving Playbook written by the workshop leaders, is $95 per person. To register contact either the National Humanistic Education Center, 110 Spring, Saratoga Springs, N.Y. 12866 (518-587-8770) or Odiorne Associates at 455-2860.

Midnight Madness plans developing

Plans are developing for Daylight Madness in Old Village and for Midnight Madness in the central business district and Ann Arbor and Sheldon Roads.

The Daylight Madness will be from noon to 6 p.m. in Old Village on Feb. 15, and Midnight Madness downtown and at Ann Arbor-Sheldon will be from 8 p.m. to midnight on the same day.

In all three locations there will be "mystery shoppers" who will be handing out gift certificates good for merchandise in Plymouth.

These gift certificates will be for prizes of any amount.

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce is presently lining up entertainment for both the Daylight and Midnight Madness events, and are interested in high school groups and barper shop quartets.

Merchants with suggestions for entertainment or gift certificates are urged to contact the Chamber at 453-1540 or at its office in Suite 15A, 878 Wing Street.

Chamber members and merchants are urged to attend the next planning meeting which will begin at noon, Feb. 6, in the Hillside Inn.

The Stroller

The leisure pursuits of youth

By W.W. EDGAR

During a recent lull in the day's occupation The Stroller sauntered into the Plymouth Cultural Center. His curiosity had gotten the better of him. He had wondered what the youth of today was doing for recreation during these cold winter blasts.

As he stood there watching the young lads skate up and down the indoor ice rink, a flood of memories came back from when he was a boy back in the Pennsylvania Dutch country playing "shinny" with the other kids in our neighborhood.

It was a far cry from what youth enjoy today. Instead of official multi-color uniforms complete with plastic helmets, regulation sticks and special skates, we had to be content with homemade regalia.

There was no such thing as a uniform. We had to fasten skates to our regular shoes. Instead of protective hard helmets, we wore stocking caps. More than that there was no such thing as a regulation stick in those days. Instead we used broom handles to whack an empty tin can back and forth across the ice. And the ice was wherever we could find it.

The game of hockey, so popular, was unknown then. And indoor rinks in neighborhoods weren't in existence. We used the frozen creek at the end of town. We even were delighted when the water froze at street intersections and gave us enough room to play. While older folks cursed the icy streets, we kids make the most of them. They became our playgrounds.

How times have changed.

NOW ICE ARENAS dot the landscape. Most every community has at least one and some have two or three. In some areas, these indoor ice rinks have become entertainment centers with big ice shows each winter.

It was the same way when basketball started to become popular. The young lads back in the old hometown had no place to play. And it is a bit laughable now when The Stroller recalls how the problem was solved.

At the time a new high school was being built and there were rumors among the embryo athletes that the new facility would include a basketball court.

You can imagine our shock when we learned that there was no basketball court in the new building. Immediately we bitterly complained. Finally, the powers that be gave us permission to use part of the basement provided to build our own court.

That was a pretty kettle of fish. But we took the challenge. We decided that we would ask the merchants in town to supply the lumber needed for the side boards. It wasn't a monumental task. We soon had enough money to buy the lumber. Then we set about building the walls.

Next we needed wire to go above the four-foot high sidewalls to keep the ball from going out of bounds.

AGAIN WE WENT to the merchants not only in our town but in the community across the river. Public attention was now being brought to our plight. We had little trouble raising the necessary funds. Now we had the solid walls complete — wood four feet high and then chicken wire to the ceiling.

Now we were stuck. We needed two more items — a floor and the hoops for baskets. Somehow or other the old blacksmiths in town heard of our problem and quickly produced the hoops and installed them along with the nets.

There was only one thing wrong. There was no room for spectators as only one side was open. No more than 50 to 75 people could see the games. But we had a court. It was the only one in the area. And were we proud.

But like most every thing else, even in those days, politics entered the picture.

It wasn't long before the critics, who were no lovers of sport, complained that their tax money was being used to provide recreation for a select few in the schools. And they voiced their complaint loud and long.

There is always a way out. And to this day The Stroller has to smile when he recalls how the critics were silenced. The school board decided that the work done by the basketball players was proof that a manual training program could be set up on the high school.

So, in one move, we made possible a basketball court for winter play and the school system had a new program.

But we never got an indoor ice rink and had to stick to our spirited games of "shinney."

Today's youths are most fortunate.

Free tax help

Free income tax assistance for senior citizens will again be offered by the Plymouth-Northville Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

Fred Bradley, president of the local chapter, notes that this is the fifth year the service has been offered.

A team of 10 chapter members have just completed a four-day training course in both federal and state income tax returns.

The schedule of dates and places will be published in later editions of the newspaper. No appointment is necessary—just walk in with your income tax papers.

Although there already have been requests to have the tax service offered in libraries, clubs and housing complexes, there still is room for a limited number of additional locations. Call Bradley at 348-2909 for schedules.

Leisure time pursuits

What's the alternatives to TV and beer?

By JACK BOLOGNA

Television gets more bad raps from more people than any other modern invention or social institution.

It has been variously described as a vast wasteland, a cheap purveyor of voyeurism, violence and inane comedies, a vacuous charade on reality, a divination of the demonic, a pass-time for the purely passive, the greatest boredom avoidance scheme since penny-ante poker, the world's greatest babysitter and on and on.

Television stands accused of fostering crime, contributing to the delinquency of minors, sowing the seeds of marital discord, the "staging" of news events rather than news reporting and making "Johnny" dull-witted, unimaginative, boring and lacking in compassion, feelings and social graces.

GRANTED THAT television programming in both its content and quality leaves a lot to be desired, can anything so attractive to so many be all the bad? In the spirit of balance and fairness let us discuss some good things television may have brought us.

First, let us look at our recent past history. What did people and families do before the advent of TV? In my youth, the family huddled together around a radio after dinner, dishwashing and homework to listen to Eddie Cantor, Al Jolson, Jack Benny, George and Gracie, Fibber McGee, Bob Hope, Henry Morgan, Arthur Godfrey, Bing Crosby, the Hit Parade, the Shadow, the Green Hornet, Lux Radio Theatre, the Little Theatre Off Times Square, Grand Central Station, baseball, football, the Lone Ranger, Captain Marvel, Sgt. Preston of the Yukon, Superman, Joe Penner, Amos & Andy, etc., etc. That's a lot of listening too and also very passive, I might add.

As one got older it was possible even in a large family to give equal attention to the radio plus household chores and homework. Only when finals came along did the radio fall silent because a higher degree of concentration was required.

The real treat for me in those days however, was when my mother told us stories she had learned in her youth in Sicily or when she read to us sections of the Italian romantic novels she bought with regularity at Bonaldi's Book Store on Gratiot Avenue.

(The stories always seemed to involve orphans, widows, families separated by war, famine or disease or bad "padrones." The plot always turned on a quirk of fate, chance, or good fortune, i.e. a brother who got rich and spent the next 20 years digging up information as to the whereabouts of his mother, father, sisters, and brothers. Invariably, the searcher, exhausted from his long and tedious travels would collapse on the front stoop of a monastery and discover on his awakening that the kindly old man providing him soup and mopping his brow, a lowly church sexton, was in fact, his long lost father. Then the search would really gather momentum as the two, reinforcing one another, set out to find the remaining or surviving members of the clan.)

Now that might sound "corny" to you, but it's a memory I treasure. Not the stories themselves but sitting at my mother's feet and listening to her read, still brings on a warm feeling and glow when I think about it.

THE QUESTION IS has television destroyed that kind of experience for today's children? I think not.

Children on the whole today get as much if not more of it. Children's book sales have grown geometrically in the past 20 years. Mothers do read to their children and probably read more than their own mother read to them.

If we move back in time to the generation before, what did our parents do as small children. Admittedly their recreational pursuits were limited. Society was more agrarian and most children lived on farms or small towns.

What did they do for excitement? What could they do? They had chores that used up most of their non-school time and recreation was limited to a Sunday afternoon baseball game, a Saturday visit to town to do shopping, and in the winter a game of "shinny" and maybe some sledding.

The biggest intergenerational difference is the great availability of leisure time. Our grandparents had very little and perhaps our own children have more than they can constructively utilize.

Our children may be suffering from boredom but our parents suffered from sameness—the never ending chores, the lack of mobility, the agonizingly long cold winters with little social contact with anyone, where families had to huddle around the pot-belly stove in the evening to thaw out fingers, toes and noses before diving into a cold bed in a freezing bedroom with frosted windows and wind and snow blowing through the wall cracks. The Saturday night bath in the metal tub on the kitchen floor was the most exciting experience of the week.

SO TODAY children are bored because they have too much leisure time.

In yesteryear, children had very little leisure time but suffered from a dull routine of work, school and simple survival from the elements. We have moved from passivity of one sort to passivity of another.

And yet I don't know many folks of that earlier generation who would give up what they have today for what they had 70 years ago.

Is that the stuff of which progress is made—people opting for more creature comforts: a warmer bed, fresh fruit in the wintertime, closer personal contact with peers, mobility, recreational choices?

I'd have to say a qualified "yes." While its true we pay a price for that progress - more leisure time - more potential time for boredom or boring pursuits - few people who have experienced both the old way and new way choose to go backward.

THE ISSUE society needs to address today is what constructive activity choices should we begin to supply people who now have more time to enjoy life?

Television is but one alternative and given the current state of its critique not a very worthwhile choice at that.

Should we be promoting the arts as opposed to a plethora of hobbies? Volunteer services vs. spectator sports? Church membership vs. tavern socializing? Garden clubs vs. junk collecting? Or What?

'Camera Never Blinks' offers unusual insight

Speaking for the record

By BILL SLIGER

A wire service story in the national press recently reported that Dan Rather, the CBS television reporter, was one of the top 10 men on a list compiled by some sort of women's organization that gets its kicks from looking at men.

I don't know whether Rather is handsome or not. But ordinarily my reaction to almost any TV newscaster appearing on such a list would be predictable.

From my biased print-media viewpoint, most TV news commentators are show biz personalities reading scripts.

UPON READING "The Camera Never Blinks," I'm convinced Dan Rather is a first-class journalist, who would be a welcomed reporter to any newspaper. If the gals happen to think he's attractive, all the better. I hope it helps his ratings.

The Rather book covers some of our recent history's most exciting and tumultuous events including civil rights, the marches in the south, Vietnam, the assasinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King, and Watergate.

Actually, Rather covers much of his life going back to the days when he could not afford to attend college and tried his level best to win a football scholarship. Aside from questionable talent, Rather suffered from being small and having a coach who delighted in testing his courage.

The under-sized Rather was installed as a defensive end in scrimmage. A series of power sweeps around Rather's end nearly cost him his life. But the coach of the tiny East Texas college finally had to tell Rather he was through after more than a full season of hanging on--still hoping for a scholarship--and working odd jobs. It was, he says, one of the few times he remembers crying.

Fortunately for Rather he had a bright, young professor with a master's degree from the Missouri School of Journalism. Obviously, he recognized talent in Rather. And he saved him from the punishment of football by securing the youngster an announcer-handyman job for a small radio station.

The professor is credited by Rather for inspiring his career in journalism. And it is one well-founded in the fundamentals of getting the story and writing it promptly and accurately.

THERE HAVE BEEN and still are many outstanding radio-TV journalists.

I'd like to think most of them came through the newspaper ranks. But while television promotes its commentators via a ratings' star system, it is evident that such men as Ed Murrow, Walter Cronkite, David Brinkley, John Chancellor, Harry Reasoner, Eric Sevareid, Mike Wallace and Edwin Newman are much more than just pretty faces and voices. They are all first-rate journalists of the electronic media.

"The Camera Never Blinks" gives the reader a real insight into the kind of thinking that goes through the mind of a journalist when he is working on a story like "Watergate" day after day. It reveals the anxieties and dangers of covering civil rights demonstrations in the south. And it takes you to the battlegrounds of Vietnam.

But moreover, in my view, it demonstrates the burden of responsibility felt by a journalist to do his job totally and accurately regardless of personal feelings.

I think Rather accomplished this remarkably well under most trying conditions. He was not the hero of Watergate to many viewers, nor to those in the Nixon White House.

But to this reporter Rather stands as one of the most thoughtful, sensitive and dedicated professional newsmen serving the broad television audience.

Off the Walls

Toilet training

By NANCY SMITH WALLS

This one's about toilet training.

I realize that this topic is not exactly an area of fascination for most of you, so unless you're the mama of toddlers or you have such a bad case of cabin fever you'll read anything, you might as well go on to "Doc's Corner" or "Daniels Den."

I've got my own problems trying to figure out how to write about toilet training without using any words that may be inappropriate for a family paper. Oh, poop.

I FEEL LIKE shouting it from the house tops: I've just successfully toilet-trained a two-year-old in one day! I should write a book or something.

Right away I can tell that Rule Number One would be: Make sure that you're working with your second child. Firstborns are a hopeless case. It took 10½ months for my eldest child to achieve a similar state of grace. Oh, I could tell you some horror stories about that one.

Like the time the cute little guy made a mess in his pants, let the contents fall out on the driveway, and then proceeded to stomp on it as evenly and thoroughly as he possibly could. I don't even want to mention what it did for his shoes!

I found him in the midst of his task, shrieked like a banshee, and banished him forever to the confines of our house, While I was shrieking and babbling incoherently, it occurred to me that I had to clean up that mess immediately before the neighbors discovered just how really uncouth my children were.

I ran to the backyard to turn on the hose, all the while screaming dire threats at my young son about what I would do to him if he were to step out of the house. I turned on the hose, and ran around the side of the house to look for the end where the water was coming out (what's that thing called anyway?). It was coming out all right.

I didn't stop to think in the confusion that the hose might be connected to something. Naturally it was. The sprinkler was going full force. The fact that it was going directly into our neighbors open bedroom window (it was summer--remember summer?) only added to my hysteria. I could only pray that no one had decide to take an afternoon nap. We were new to the neighborhood. I didn't know yet if that big fellow living next door would take kindly to being drenched while in the safety of his own bed. Few people would.

I won't go on with it. It just gives you an idea of the chills and thrills that child put me through while I attempted to break him of the diaper habit. But his little brother has made up for all that.

ONE DAY A couple of weeks ago, two-year-old Jimmy told me his diaper needed changing.

I replied that I would change it if he would go and get a fresh diaper from his room. He asked, "Do you want on overnight one from the pink box or a regular one from the green box?" I must have did a double-take as I realized, "my goodness that child is a little sophisticated to be a member of the Pamper set."

So I calmly explained to him, "Jimmy, I think you should stop wearing diapers and from now on you'll get to wear underwear like the rest of the world." That was fine with Jim, and it's been a breeze ever since. I kid you not.

What was very nearly a battle to the death with his older brother was as easy as a simple change of wardrobe with Jim.

After 4½ years of changing somebody's diaper, I am free at last! So take heart all you ladies with talcum up your nose. There's a light at the end of that tunnel. And it's wearing training pants. Hallelujah.

The Bottom Line

Home business

By RONALD G. LOISELLE

By RONALD G. LOISELLE

(The following column is written by Ronald Loiselle of Plymouth, business counselor for General Business Services).

Recent statistics from the Department of the Treasury and the Labor Department indicate an increased volume of small one-person businesses.

IRS has established specific guidelines to define a true business versus a hobby. It is advisable to establish which category applies to your enterprise.

BASICALLY, an activity is considered a business if it is entered into and carried on for the purpose of making a profit.

A profit-making motivation, therefore, is one of the primary factors distinguishing a business from an activity engaged in for personal reasons.

An auditor might ask the following questions to determine if this profit motive exists: How much time was actually spent on the activity? Does the taxpayer have any prior experience with the same type of business? Is the enterprise carried out in a business-like manner with proper records, retention of invoices and receipts?

Finally and perhaps most important, IRS considers the type of enterprise actually involved. Collecting stamps and coins, pottery making, various artistic endeavors, and breeding and showing of animals, are all heavily scrutinized merely because of the nature of the enterprise.

THE IRS also considers two other primary factors in deciding whether an enterprise is a business or a hobby.

The first is regularity of activities. Do you regularly make business transactions? Do you regularly advertise or solicit business? Do you regularly incur expenses such as professional dues, automobile expenses, material and supplies, telephone, etc.?

The other major factor of interest to IRS is the amount of income produced. Normally, IRS assumes that your enterprise must produce a profit in any two out of five consecutive years if it is truly a business. Absence of income, of course, would not necessarily mean that no business expense could be deducted.

In the initial year of business, especially in the earlier part of the year, there may be little or no substantial income. On the other hand, there might be expenses such as advertising, business cards, telephone, and other business expenses.

If your activity is not engaged in for profit, any net losses are not deductible. Unfortunately, any net gain is taxable.

If the enterprise is truly a business and a loss is involved, then that loss could be used to offset other income.

What action can you take now, for the future, to insure that your enterprise is considered a business? Establish your activity as much as possible in the format of a business, with the proper recordkeeping system, keeping track of expenses and income, and the appropriate amount of normal business-like expenses such as insurance, telephone, and advertising.

Remember that the activity must eventually show a profit. Be able to prove a clear distinction between a recreational pursuit and a legitimate activity engaged in for profit.

Hors d'oeuvres

by Lynn Orr

The battle's about money

The urban-suburban cold war is heating up faster than butter on a hot English muffin these days.

Basically, the fights about U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) money, the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) opposition to Super Sewer, and Detroit City Council's decision to let Cadillac move hundreds of jobs to Livonia, come down to the same thing—money.

Suburbs don't like HUD strings, such as low income housing requirements. Suburbs oppose the EPA position which says national urban policy dictates that federal money won't be spent on projects that contribute to the drain of central cities.

Detroit city council members like Maryann Mahaffey don't like the competition among communities for tax base that results in tax breaks for a corporation the size of General Motors.

ONE MIGHT propose that the current struggle is a perfect example of the checks and balance theory in action, but it doesn't work that way.

Suburban politicos are cutting HUD strings while demanding the strings be removed from housing packages.

"It's our money," is the challenge. But is it? Since when does any of us decide where our tax dollars go?

HUD Secretary Patricia Harris and her associates got into hot water for acting on longtime government concerns. They're attempting to put some teeth into national policy. For years, one of the loudest criticisms of the sprawling federal government was its lack of coordination.

Now, when Ms. Harris tries to coordinate her end of it, she gets squeals.

With hardcore problems, urban centers are a large drain on federal dollars. It makes sense to try and correct that situation.

MOST SUBURBAN officials, like Dearborn's mayor John O'Riley, who slammed HUD last week, don't see it that way.

And the suburbs that want the federal government to foot 70 per cent of the bill for building a Super Sewer that will allow suburban growth don't see it that way, either.

EPA isn't saying the suburbs can't build a Super Sewer. It's saying they can't build a Super Sewer with federal money that will promote growth in the suburbs and contribute to population decline in the central cities.

When you're thinking of the federal budget, it makes sense.

But like the students who can't get scholarships because their parents make too much money, the suburbs scream about taxes and push for their share of the federal pie.

Unfortunately, the pie is only so big and inflation is taking more and more cherries from between the crusts.

EVERYONE, including Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, jumped on the city council at its first rejection of GM's request to move to Livonia.

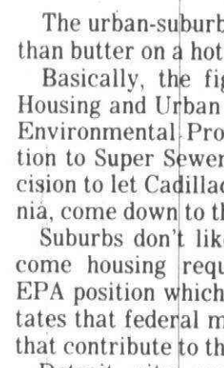

The city council didn't say GM couldn't move to Livonia. It said they wouldn't approve the move, thus blocking Livonia's giving a tax break to the No. 1 auto company.

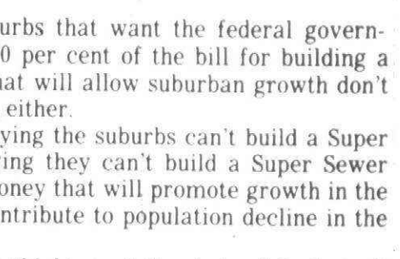

On reconsideration, the council gave in. Now it's up to Livonia to grant the tax break. Again, however, we get into policy. The law GM is attempting to use is designed to encourage business to stay in Michigan. The intent was not to encourage competition among communities within the state nor to grant tax breaks to blue chip corporations.

Ms. Mahaffey and Kenneth Cockrel argued that point, but all the suburbs saw was another Detroit grab at straws.

Martin Luther King would have been 50 years old last week.

If the wall between our cities and suburbs gets any higher, will the next generation even know why his birthday is a state holiday?

Tipping the Scales

By NANCY AUSTIN

While the holidays were definitely a difficult time for dieting, as promised, here is proof positive that it can be done.

The loses include the period from the first week of December through the first weigh-in in January. Several people in Observerland had great weight losses.

A Plymouth TOPS chapter records an eight pound loss for Grace Lower. Grace has a loss of 30 pounds since October.

International Diet Centres boasts about Eileen Gorden of Birmingham. She lost a total of 93 pounds, gained nothing throughout the entire holiday season and graduated the week before Christmas.

Southfield's Roslyn Katzman had a six pound loss during December following Diet Center's program. Michelle Cook from Farmington Hills had a five pound loss.

Weight Watchers had its share of success stories, too. The Westland chapter reports that Richard Dunkelberger lost four pounds; Cathy Zimmer three pounds; Nancy Homer, 4 pounds; and Alice Barnstable, 14 pounds. Our hats are off to Louis Heller who lost 21 pounds during December for a total loss of 56 pounds in 11 weeks!

Space does not permit listing all of the people who did well, but if you lost weight over the holidays, you have proven to yourselves and to others that nothing is impossible.

APPLES ARE still in plentiful supply in the stores and make a marvelous snack. But if you tire of eating them raw, cook up a batch of homemade sauce. "Oh! It's so much work to peel all those apples," you groan. It doesn't have to be. Whenever I discuss the fact that I've made some 80 quarts of applesauce this fall and winter, people marvel. But, rest assured, I'm not peeling all those apples.

About 15 years ago I was introduced to a nifty gadget called a Foley food mill. Many people have never heard of it, so I'd like to share that with you. It is a round, metal container that has small holes in the bottom metal plate and a paddle that, when you turn it, forces the cooked apples through them pulverizing them into a fine sauce.

So, all you have to do is wash and quarter your apples, put them into a pot with just enough water so the apples won't stick. Simmer till mushy. Push through the food mill. While hot, add enough cinnamon for flavor and just a small amount of sugar, if needed. Serve.

A NEW CLASS has been added to those taught at the Gourmet Gallerie. It's Diet Microwave. Larry Janes says, "Let us show you how to eat and stay slim using the microwave." It will be held March 7. Call 455-2626 for futher information.

National YMCA consultant Jo Ann Ploeger shares some recipes with us that I will include in the next couple of columns. Following is one of those developed for their Weight Management classes.

Fruit muffins

½ cups applesauce
1 cup frozen cranberries or other berry
2⅜ cup dry milk
2 eggs
3 T. corn meal
3 T. oatmeal
Sweetener to taste
1 T. wainut extract
1 T. butte. flavoring
¼ t. baking powder
¼ t. salt

Mix together. Bake in muffin tins at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. One half of the recipe is one fruit, one milk, one egg and ½ bread exchange.

Wayne County Commissioner R. William Joyner (D-Plymouth) has asked the State Highway Department to conduct tests to determine whether a new concrete sound barrier installed along the I-275 freeway in Plymouth and Canton townships to reduce noise is actually having the opposite effect. Joyner was prompted to seek action because homeowners between Schoolcraft and Ford roads along I-275 have complained that vehicular noise has increased since installation of the 10-foot wall. In a letter to the state, Joyner quotes Peter R. Miller of Plymouth as claiming the noise level has increased since erection of the sound barrier. Joyner suggests if the tests prove the noise level is accentuated by the wall than a green belt of shrubs and trees could be placed along the barrier to help absorb the noise. He is shown here at Ann Arbor Road and I-275 inspecting the barrier with Canton Supervisor Noel Culbert (left).

editorial opinion

Despite urban sprawl, 'Super Sewer' is better

Public policy decisions are rarely a matter of choosing between black and white. This is particularly true in the 20-year controversy over what has come to be called the Super Sewer project.

With some feelings of uneasiness, we must endorse the concept of Super Sewer as proposed by the Wayne County Public Works Department as the better method of dealing with the wastewater, health and growth problems of western Wayne and Oakland counties.

We have qualms about the possibility of empire-building in the Wayne County DPW and reservations about dealing with a Detroit-dominated DPW board. We have strong sympathies with those who would preserve rural farmland for a future food supply and with those who would halt the drain of people and resources from the City of Detroit.

But we have even more qualms about the route proposed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in its environmental impact statement—a smaller Huron Valley wastewater project and reliance on the Walled Lake treatment plant. To put it bluntly, the EPA report was botched and inept and inspires no confidence.

And that leaves us with the Super Sewer alternative.

'Save Detroit!'

Two conflicting philosophies are at work.

One is justified by the Carter administration's "national urban policy." It is aimed at saving older, central cities which already have an infrastructure of streets, water lines, sewers, utilities and institutions.

The national urban policy is aimed at halting suburban sprawl—the eating up of farm fields, woods and wetlands by subdivisions, shopping centers, swimming pools and pavement. The EPA cites the national urban policy in recommending its Alternative D.

The other philosophy is a bit newer and more subtle. It holds that Detroit and the suburbs aren't enemies but neighbors in a southeastern Michigan region; that the SEM region is battling federal policies which favor the Sun Belt states as growth areas; that if local suburbs lose the battle for industry, the winner will not be Detroit but the South.

Last week we saw an example of the regionalist philosophy at work. Detroit's City Council voted to allow General Motors Corp. to move a Cadillac division operation from Detroit to Livonia when it appeared the alternative might be that Michigan would lose the plant entirely. And a year ago we saw Ohio pick up a Ford plant when southeast Michigan couldn't provide adequate facilities.

If we follow the EPA's Pied Piper and restrict sewerage in suburbia, will it help Detroit? In the decade of the 1960s, as we read federal statistics, Wayne County lost 8.8 per cent of its employment in durables manufacturing and nearly 22 per cent in non-durables, mostly in Detroit.

Since the high-water mark of 1950, Detroit has lost about one-third of its population. These losses occurred without a Super Sewer. EPA fails to convince us, therefore, that not building Super Sewer will "save Detroit."

Moreover, the fringe areas of western Wayne and Oakland counties (particularly Oakland) have continued to attract people, even without Super Sewer. This growth occurred long before I-275 and the new I-96 were built. This growth continues despite the cancellation of the M-275 freeway in Oakland County.

Much as the editors desire to halt the depopulation of Detroit, we're not persuaded that halting sewer growth will do it. Rather, there are legitimate health and environmental reasons for building Super Sewer, along with a legitimate concern for the economy of the southeastern Michigan region, of which Detroit is a part.

Double standard

The Oakland County communities come into the matter with motives less than pure.

One the one hand, they are endorsing Super Sewer, a $207 million project with something like 80 per cent federal and state funding. This they want.

On the other hand, this portion of Oakland County contains many lakes whose shores are in private development. When a county park was proposed in Commerce Township a few years ago, local opposition was adamant—and successful. Each legislative session, the lakes area's men in Lansing introduce a bill aimed at halting acquisition of public boat landings on any more Oakland County lakes.

We could respect the lakes area's position if it were willing to finance all wastewater treatment systems itself, but such is not the case. The lakes area doesn't mind if the rest of us help pay for its sewers, interceptors and treatment plant, but it doesn't want us to launch our boats there, even if we pay for it.

Fortunately, the bills to half public boat launch acquisitions have failed.

Take your pick

Federal, state and local officials have narrowed their choice to two plans for treating wastewater in western Wayne and Oakland counties:

• Alternative A -- "Super Sewer" -- Wayne County DPW is chief advocate. It would consist of a 50-mile regional interceptor, a 49-million-gallons-per-day wastewater treatment plant at the mouth of the Huron River, and calls for the closing of all other treatment plants in the service area. It would serve all the area enclosed in the box. Capital cost estimate: $207 million.

• Alternative D -- U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is chief advocate. Aimed at "a reduced potential for the encouragement of out-migration from the City of Detroit," it, too, calls for a treatment plant at the mouth of the Huron River, but serving an area only as far north as Canton Township. Areas in the middle would join the Rouge Interceptor. Northern areas would be served by the Walled Lake treatment plant. Capital cost estimate: $132 million.

Walled Lake's plant

A crucial issue is EPA's proposal that the Walled Lake wastewater treatment plant be upgraded to handle the sewage of neighboring Oakland County communities.

EPA's own report has plenty of reasons why this shouldn't be done.

The chief one is that the Walled Lake plant discharges into one of two main sources of the Middle River Rouge. Says EPA: "Flow in the Walled Lake Branch is intermittent, with no flow occurring during sustained dry weather conditions."

In other words, in dry weather, the only thing coming into the Middle Rouge from the north would be treated effluent. If a malfunction should occur at the Walled Lake plant—such as the horror stories of malfunctions at Detroit's plant—literally half the water in the Middle Rouge in Plymouth and Livonia would be sewage.

We don't want that. Neither do spokesmen for the cities of Livonia and Plymouth. The Middle Rouge basin is lovely parkland.

Again, EPA says: "The waters of the Walled Lake Branch, Johnson Drain and the upper reach of the Middle River Rouge in the project area are enriched with nutrients. Sources contributing to this condition include non-point (area) contributions of nitrates and phosphorous from overland run-off, storm sewer discharges and discharges from the Walled Lake WWTP (wastewater treatment plant).

"During summer, however, water quality deteriorates in Phoenix Lake and Newburgh Lake. Results from water sampling by SEMCOG (Southeast Michigan Council of Governments) in 1976 indicate eutrophic conditions."

In plain English, the lakes are dying.

Everyone is either upstream or downstream from someone else—or both. The communities downstream from Walled Lake's plant should be heard on the Super Sewer issue. They have spoken in favor of it and against the EPA proposal.

They are wisely looking after their own interests. Implementation of EPA's plan of two half-way treatment plants, in our view, is likely to result in lawsuits by downstream Rouge communities against their upstream neighbors.

For them, the issue is not preservation of Detroit. The issue is immediate health and conservation needs.

That EPA report

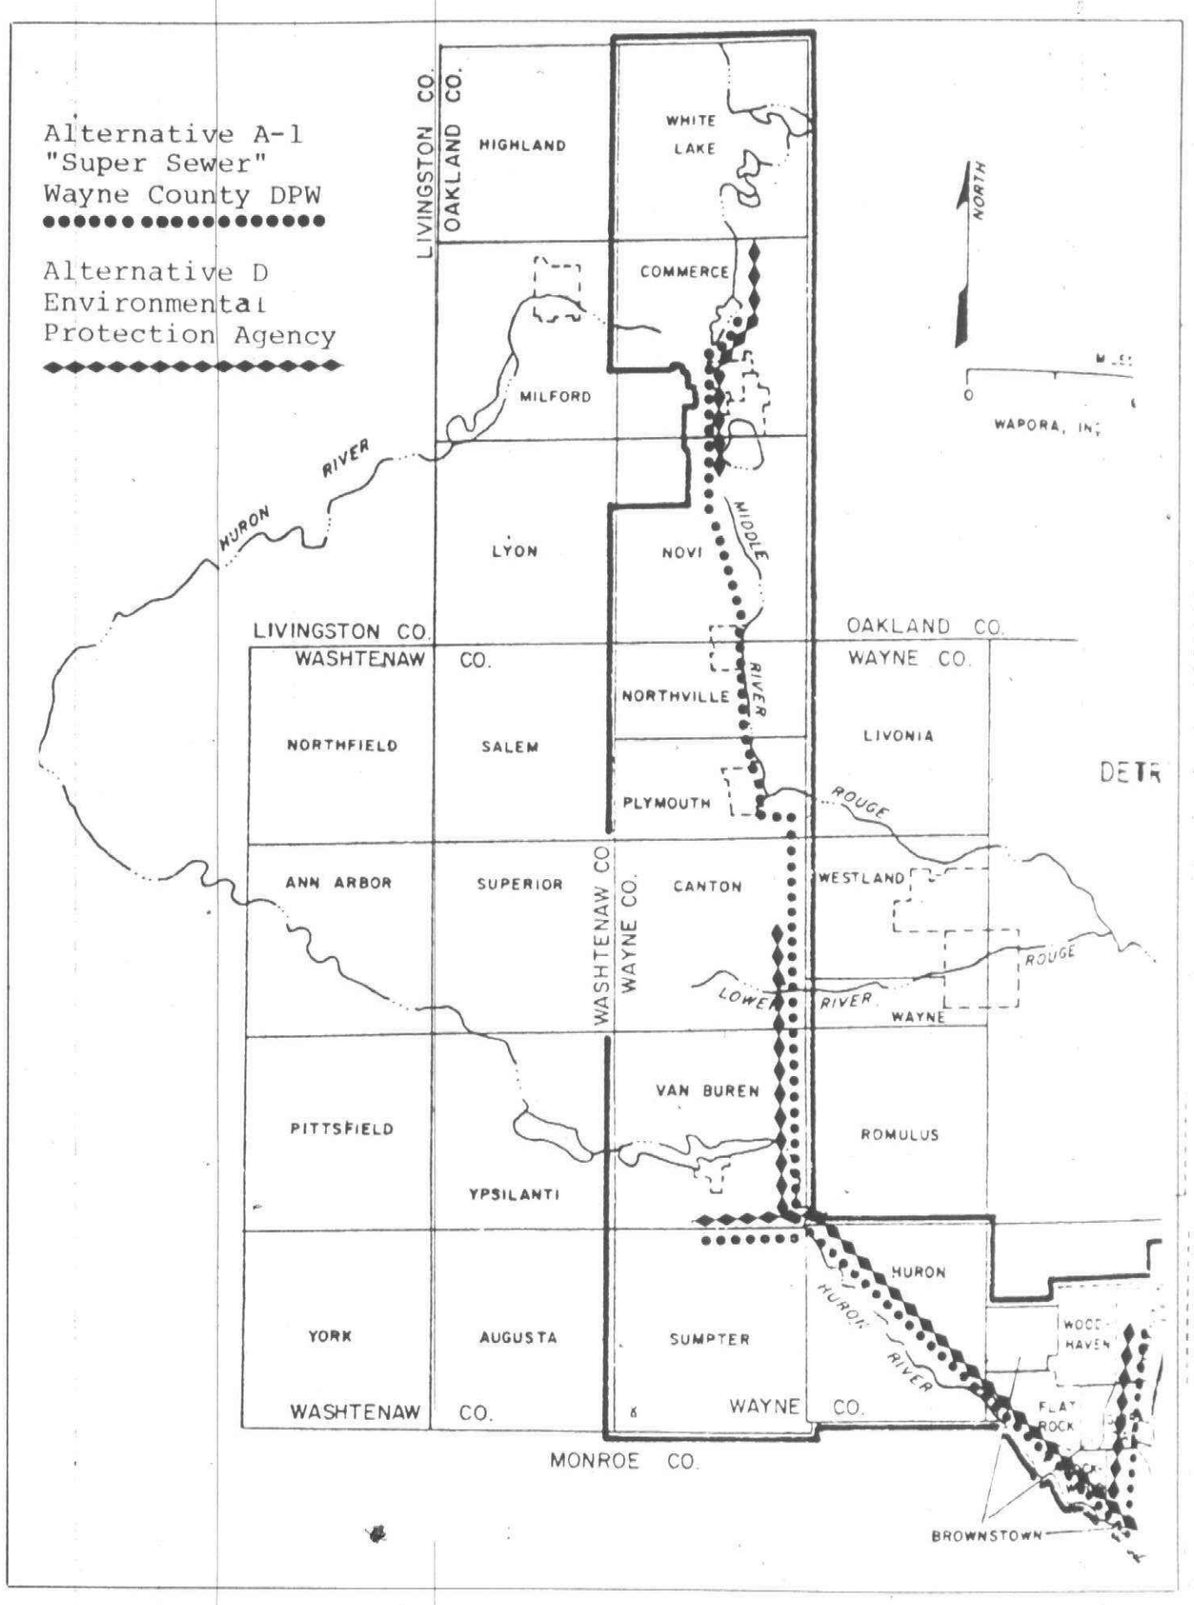

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's report, recommending Alternative D, has so many blatant flaws that we must doubt the entire thing.

The EPA report is addressed to U.S. Sen. John Riegle (his name is Donald); to Rep. Jack McDonald, who left office in 1972; to Rep. James O'Hara, who left office in 1976 and whose district was miles away from the project area; but not to 2d District Rep. Carl Pursell or even his predecessor, Marvin Esch, where much of the project would be located.

EPA lists several species of "threatened" and "endangered" animals "which potentially may be found in or near the Huron Valley project area."

Local residents will be astounded to read that the Kirtland's warbler, bald eagle, osprey and eastern timber wolf are among the creatures which the Huron Valley could "potentially" house.

We doubt any living man or woman has seen an eagle or timber wolf in these parts. Several years ago, four timber wolves were released in the Upper Peninsula's Huron Mountains, 500 miles away, and failed to survive more than six months.

EPA tells us both Phoenix and Newburgh lakes in Plymouth and Livonia "are stocked annually with trout." Some trout were stocked in 1969 to provide a temporary fishery, but otherwise EPA simply doesn't know what it's talking about.

In public hearings, much ridicule was heaped on EPA's head, and one can see why.

Something else in the EPA report bothers us—something we can't spot in black and white or underline with a pencil. A sixth sense tells us EPA is rationalizing—concocting an argument to support the political point of view of the "national urban policy."

It just smells fishy, and the fish we smell aren't trout.

The health issue

Putting aside the lakes area's double standard toward outside funding, let's look dispassionately at the area's problems.

Again we turn to EPA's own evidence – evidence it strangely ignored when it recommends the half-hearted Alternative D.

Many septic tanks in White Lake, Commerce and Novi, EPA says, "were developed prior to the adoption of the Oakland County Sanitary Code and do not presently incorporate provisions designed to ensure proper operation to protect groundwaters.

"In White Lake Township, much of the early lakeside development was for cottage-type occupancy on small-sized lots. Many now are occupied on a full-time basis, causing the on-site sewage disposal systems to become overloaded or to fail.

"Additionally, many of the on-site septic systems were located in close proximity to lakes, in areas of high groundwater levels, or in areas with organic, dense clay, or sandy soils. Such soils frequently are not suitable to absorb contaminants in septic tank effluent. . ."

How, then, can EPA rationalize its recommendation to continue much of the area on septic tanks? It strikes us that politics, dressed up in the highfalutin verbiage of a "national urban policy," dictated EPA's recommendation.

Certainly, from a health point of view, something resembling the Super Sewer project would better protect the health of the residents, the lives of the lakes and the amenities of those living downstream.

Super Sewer is the route to follow—provided we keep an eye on the Wayne County DPW.

Self-made

Uncomfortable moments

Eccentricities

by HENRY M. HOGAN, JR.

Life has many uncomfortable moments, some of which we create ourselves.

Such as using the restroom at a gas station when you don't buy gas and you try to sneak in and sneak out.

Or when you are at a very fancy restaurant and use the restroom but have no change in your purse or pocket, and notice a person standing there giving out hot towels with his or her hand extended, palm up. You have to create an air of indifferent near-sightedness and go without washing your hands.

Or at the same restaurant when you park your car in the lot to avoid having to pay a half-dollar to the doorman, you have to pass by him to get into the place.

How do you feel when you've sneaked into a club to which you don't belong?

WHAT ABOUT THOSE sailors who want to replenish their ice supply on their sailboats and sneak into a motel to take ice out of the automatic ice maker, continually looking over their shoulders to see if anyone is watching?

How do you feel when you use the eight-items-or-less express lane in a supermarket when in fact you have more than eight items and know everyone is glaring at you?

Or consider the student who goes to class unprepared and sits through the whole session hoping the teacher will not call on him or her.

It's a little uncomfortable to park in a permit lot when you don't have a permit.

Or parking in a "No Parking" zone, hoping you'll get back to the car before the police officer does.

Or not putting money in the meter, hoping you'll be able to return before the meter maid does.

WHAT ABOUT standing in the grocery line mentally adding up all your purchases because you're not sure you have enough money in your pocket or purse, ready to pull something out of the basket if the total goes over your resources?

Or not remembering the name of somebody you really knew well.

What if you're under 21 and go into a bar and are served, and you are there waiting for somebody to come and find out that you're not of age?

Or when you put on the brakes after you see a policeman and you have to wait that agonizing period to see if in fact he has caught you.

Or saying something nasty about a person and then realizing they are are within earshot.

Or passing in the right-hand lane on an expressway, even though it is perfectly legal, and you feel squeamish about it.

Or spotting a radar car and turning one block earlier to avoid being caught.

WHAT ABOUT going into an apartment complex to look around when there is a security guard and you drive through waving nonchalantly as if you lived there, hoping you won't be stopped and questioned?

Or when you're sitting around after dinner and drinks and the check comes, and you know you don't have enough money in your pocket, and you hope somebody else will reach for the check.

Or asking for a doggie bag at a restaurant when you know darn well—and so does the waitress—that you're going to eat the leftovers yourself.

What about when you're talking about a person and say to the people in your group, "Don't look now," and they all do look, and the person is looking your way?

It sure doesn't take big things to make life uncomfortable.

Just Between Us

Managing anger—stewing and spewing

By William C. Nichols Ed.D.

A scene in Robert Burns' poem "Tam O'Shanter" is remarkably contemporary and human.

While Tam is at the tavern, getting "unco drunk," his wife is sitting at home, "nursing her wrath to keep it warm." What interests us here is not the marital relationship but the way feelings are handled.

Mrs. O'Shanter is the prototype of all of us who work at staying angry, nursing and stirring our negative feelings. She hangs on to her angry feelings, nurturing them carefully lest they subside.

Whatever the reasons for her anger--and she could be called "an injustice collector" and r seen as justified--she is a "stewer."

THOSE OF US who are "stewers" are likely to become either "spewers" or "steamers" or perhaps both. If we hold on to our anger, stirring it briskly and keeping it bubbling like a stew, we can work ourselves up to a boiling point.

When the mixture hits the right level, we erupt. We become "spewers" who vent our angry, hostile feelings like a volcano. Some of us resemble Yellowstone's "Old Faithful" geyser, going off periodically.

We also can become "spewers" by attempting to hold all of our angry feelings inside, letting them bubble by themselves and never acknowledging the feelings. If we get the proper set of circumstances, the pressure will build until we blow like a steam kettle that has no outlet.

Stored-up, angry feelings find ways of working their effects on us. In some persons they exact a toll from the body, working as combinations of psychologial and physical symptoms. In others where the lid is not put on quite as tightly, the "steamer" reaction is even more apparent.

Some of us are perpetual "steamers." We do not explode as "spewers" but act more like a steam kettle on which the lid is loose. As the internal pressure mounts, the lid rises a little and the steam leaks out around the edges.

We never explode but there is some steam coming out much of the time. We just keep bubbling.

HOLDING IT in--whether this is done consciously (suppressing) or unconsciously (repressing)--is not a workable way of dealing with anger. Strong feelings cannot simply be filed away and forgotten.

Some people think the alternative to storing up their anger is to vent it at the beginning. They are "instant spewers." This is no more workable than storing our anger.

It is not necessary, either, to act on our anger at the outset or to "just hold it in." The idea that we must either express it or hold it in leaves out an important third possibility.

Human beings, like other creatures, tend to have two basic, primitive responses to perceived danger--fright or flight. Expressing the anger and acting on it at the outset is a kind of fight response. Putting it away, whether we stir it for ourselves or let it simmer on its own, is a kind of flight response.

A MORE MATURE response can be learned.

That way is to acknowledge the feelings, examine the situation, and make the most appropriate response possible.

In some instances, flight may be the most sensible reaction. Flight makes sense, for example, if the house is on fire, but reasoned flight away from the flames and smoke, not panic-stricken flight through a burning room.

Similarly, holding one's anger temporarily may be the most appropriate response to some situations. Attacking a police officer who is writing you a ticket may not be in your best interests.

Normal human beings will get upset and angry. During the course of living we will have all kinds of thoughts and impulses pass through our mind. The important thing is how we deal with them.

Abraham Lincoln reportedly said, "any man over 50 is responsible for his own face." Male or female, if our characteristic way of handling our anger is to be a "stewer," the marks eventually will be seen on our face. In Lincoln's terms, we are responsible for the things that we dwell on, the feelings that we nurture.

Similarly, we are likely to show the long term effects of being "steamers" or "spewers" in handling our anger.

AGAIN, IT IS important to recognize that we are angry and to deal with our negative feelings.

But dealing with our feelings is not the same as spewing them forth or stirring them like a stew, keeping them bubbling and boiling, or ignoring them and letting them simmer on their own.

Our goal should be the attainment of a mature, middle way of examining, understanding, and deciding on the most reasonable path possible in each instance in which we become angry. We will look more closely at how to take this middle road in a future column.

Ask the Educator

"Hyperactive' term used too loosely

JOSEPH HADDAD

QUESTION: My son drives me crazy with his jumping around. He hardly ever sits still.

His teacher has the same trouble with him. She thinks he is a little hyperactive. She says there is medicine for this which has worked well for other children she has known with the same problem.

Our pediatrician says he will write a prescription if we insist, but that he really doesn't see a problem.

What's your view on this? I'm always yelling and really at my wit's end.

MRS. H.B.

ANSWER: There is controversy about the use of such medications with children.

There is evidence the most commonly used drug, ritalin, inhibits appetite and retards general growth. The December 1977 Journal of Learning Disabilities reported a study which showed serious inflammation of the blood vessels in addicts who use ritalin to get effects similar to their heroin experience.

You should understand that the medications used with the so-called hyperactive child are very powerful, indeed, and carry with them some risk. It is no small matter to interfere with the natural processes of growth and appetite during an individual's formative years.

Your doctor is wise to be cautious in writing that prescription.

THE TERM hyperactive is very loosely used nowadays.

This diagnosis once was reserved for a small number of children who showed profoundly disturbed activity levels, thought to result from some abnormality in the central nervous system.

Today I see the term used inappropriately by school personnel and parents alike to label children who are bothersome.

It is very common in my experience to see children who are unruly, undisciplined, exuberant or just anxious being called hyperactive. Such children can be hard to live with and even harder to teach, but we should refrain from tagging them with a label which can color other people's opinions of them or even their own opinions about themselves.

IF YOU FIND your son as exasperating as you say, let me suggest you seek out some professional counseling on the management of such a child.

Children like this can be managed and lived with, with a minimum of grief if handled properly. Try consulting your school social worker, local child guidance agency or family service agency.

If your school social worker cannot help you, she can connect you with other resources.

But big question remains

Racquet ball courts may be here in summer

By W.W. EDGAR

If present plans materialize, the City of Plymouth will boast a modern racquet ball court before summer.

But there is one big question.

Who will own it?

AT THE MOMENT, the ARC Investment Co. is planning a building at 271 N. Main, across the street from Kroger's, and the city commission is holding off making a decision on building racquet ball courts at the Cultural Center in case the private venture is successful.

Charles Messer, speaking for the investment company which owns a racquet ball court in Grand Blanc and another at Oakland University, said drawings are being prepared and he hopes to have them approved in time to build in the spring.

Under the plan now being considered, the company plans 14 courts, an exercise room, sauna baths, and possibly a whirlpool bath.

"It all depends on the acceptance of our plans, and the whirlpool still is a question."

WHILE THIS planning is going on the city officials are waiting to see if it really develops.

If it doesn't than serious consideration will be given to building the courts as an addition to the Cultural Center.

The idea of racquet ball courts in Plymouth originated two years ago when City Manager Fred Yockey suggested they be built in the old water tank which now is idle.

Spoken possibly in jest he pointed out that the old tank could accommodate eight courts, but more than that it would give the city a "domed stadium."

That idea died but the thought lingered that the city should have a racquet club as an addition to the Cultural Center.

Yockey now has pointed out that eight or 10 courts could be built at the center with little effort and that such a facility would help alleviate the financial problems at the Cultural Center.

CHUCK SKENE, recreation director for the city, also is eager to have the courts at the Cultural Center.

In a letter to city officials Skene expressed his disappointment that the move hadn't been made before private capital stepped in and possibly remove all hopes for a city-owned facility.

Skene pointed out in his letter that with racquet ball he could provide a well-rounded recreation program and, better yet, improve the financial operation of the Cultural Center.

The city commission has indicated informally that if the private courts are built it would drop from its future agenda consideration of the expansion at the Cultural Center.

Racquet ball has become popular in recent years and cities such as Farmington and Livonia have found them to be real assets.

That's why the investment company and the city are looking forward to the summer months when Plymouth will have a like facility. The only question will be: Who will own it?

THERE'S STILL time to make a reservation for the Distinguished Service Awards banquet Friday night in the Plymouth Cultural Center. The buffet dinner will be catered by Chef Benson of Schoolcraft College.

Entrees include sliced beef flambeau and chicken. Anyone familiar with the culinary delights concocted by the Schoolcraft chefs can testify to their talents.

The social hour will begin at 7 p.m. with dinner at 8. Glen Carlos, a talented local high school student will provide musical entertainment during the social and dinner hours.

The DSA dinner is sponsored by the

by ELLIE GRAHAM

Plymouth Jaycees and Jaycettes. The outstanding young man and woman of the year will be announced as well as the teenager of the year. This is the first time a teen has been named for a distinguished service award and there were a host of nominees.

For information or reservations, at $12 per person, call Jim Ventittelli, 455-1328, Larry Kennedy of First National Bank of Plymouth, or the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce.

EARL COLE is still out at his old stand on Ann Arbor Road as manager of the Plymouth Elks Club.

He has taken a good deal of ribbing since the first of the year, when Frank Breckman, manager of the Livonia Elks, was placed in the Plymouth lodge in a story in this newspaper.

"And we had more than 300 guests at our New Years Eve party," said Earl. (This was quite a few more than Frank had at his party in Livonia).

THE OPEN DOOR Christian Church in Northville, formerly the Drawbridge Inn and later the Captain's Table, is on the market again.

The building that started out as First United Methodist Church of Northville may once more become an eating place. The congregation is looking for a facility with education rooms for children and Bible college classrooms.

The small membership of the Open Door church surprised themselves and everyone else in 1977 when they came up with a down payment of $50,000 to buy the building. It wasn't until they had added their engagement rings, watches and jewelry to the cash in the collection plates that the sum was realized.

Buying price at that time was $250,000 plus unpaid property taxes and parking assessments. The present asking price reportedly $350,000.

SUE AND ROD Cameron have bought an old farm house and are in the midst of renovating it.

Their old neighbors down on Fairground decided to take them out for dinner and Lee Hosie arranged a mystery trip. Fred and Maureen Robinson, Bud and Dee Martin, and Andy and Lee Hosie knew the destination. The Cannons were kept in the dark. As it turned out, everyone was surprised.

Their destination on Jan. 14, a very snowy Sunday afternoon, was the Canopy in Brighton. When they got there, it was closed because of the snow.

They eneded up at the Holiday Inn in Howell. Lee's reputation as a planner of mystery trips hit an all-time low and her friends and compatriots aren't going to let her forget it.

HAZEL GRIFFIN and Frances Peters had high scores last Thursday in the party bridge games at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

BEN FRANKLIN was honored on his 273rd birthday by about 75 of Plymouth's senior citizens. The party was Jan. 18 in Tonquish Creek Manor.

Ralph Archbold, who has made a career of doing Ben Franklin impersonations, was the guest speaker. Before the pizza dinner provided by Colonial Pizza of Plymouth, he gave an informative lecture on how the art of pizza making was discovered and brought to the colonies. He even read a Declaration of Indepizza.

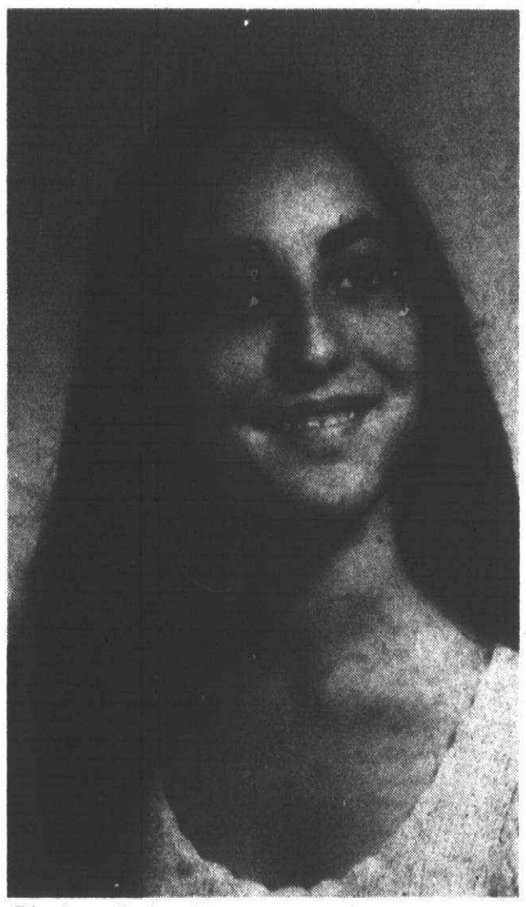

THE PLYMOUTH ROTARY Club deserves a special pat on the back for including other service clubs and organizations in last Friday's luncheon meeting.

Not only the Kiwanis, Lions, Civitans, Optimists and other men's clubs were invited. The women were there too—representatives of the Business and Professional Women's Club, the American Association of University Women, the Plymouth Community Arts Council, Symphony League and others.

Guest speaker was U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell who gave his hometown folks an update on the Congress and what he hopes to accomplish in the neww session.

Carl welcomed the women and said that with 51 per cent of the work force now women, and 80 per cent of the spending in their hands, he was pleased that Harold Guenther who had arranged the program, and the Rotarians had opened the meeting to the women's clubs.

Sunday's symphony concert geared to family enjoyment

Pianist Carla Upton will be soloist at Sunday's concert.

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra's annual family concert, programmed to appeal to all ages, will be at 4 p.m. Sunday in the auditorium of Plymouth Salem High School, Joy Road west of Canton Center.

The traditional concert could be a child's first introduction to fine music. Conductor Wayne Dunlap chooses musical scores with a touch of humor, a touch of whimsy. They also show off the symphony, its musicians and their instruments in a way that delights all age groups.

The concert will open with Haydn's overture to "The World of the Moon." The "space world" theme will continue with Clouds from Debussy's "Nocturnes" and Jupiter from "The Planets" by Holst.

GUEST SOLIST will be Carla Upton, pianist, who is making her second appearance with the orchestra. Her first was in 1962 when she played the part of the youngest child in "Sound of Music."

Miss Upton will play grieg's Concerto for the Piano and Orchestra in A-Minor.

The soloist graduated from Plymouth Salem High School in 1974. She earned her bachelor of music performance degree from the University of Michigan in 1978. She is working toward her masters degree at U-M and studying with Benning Dexter. She gives private piano lessons and is pianist at Geneva United Presbyterian Church in Canton Township.

Concluding numbers will be "Monsters from American Attics," followed by two movements from Taylor's "Through the Looking Glass."

A GIRL SCOUT troop will provide babysitting for preschoolers during the concert.

The Plymouth Symphony League will serve coffee in the lobby during intermission. The works of two local artists, Ellen Kenny and Ellen Person, will be on display in the lobby. The showing is being arranged by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

Tickets for the concert will be available at box office on the afternoon of the concert. Advance sale tickets may be purchased at Beitner Jewelry on Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth Book World on Forest Street, Heide's Flowers on Ann Arbor Trail at Harvey, Audette Office Supply, Ann Arbor Road at Sheldon, and Arnoldt Williams Music, Ford Road at Canton Center in Canton Township.

Cost of tickets is $3.50 for adults and $1.75 for senior citizens. Students kindergarten through 12th grade are admitted free. Those with family memberships in the Plymouth Symphony Society will be admitted with their season tickets.

The concert is made possible in part by a grant from the Michigan State Council for the Arts and the Plymouth Symphony League.

Last year's family concert was postponed because of a blizzard. If there is a snow storm this weekend, persons may call 453-6346 for news of any last minute changes in scheduling.

5 teen finalists for DSA honor

Canton Observer Suburban Life
Thursday, January 25, 1979 (C)1B

The Plymouth Jaycettes have narrowed the field of candidates for the outstanding teen in the community to five. The winner of the distinguished service award will be announced at the Jan. 26 banquet in the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Jaycette Tonie Jarmol chaired the search for the high school senior who would receive the first distinguished service award presented by the club. In past years, the Jaycees have concentrated on finding the outstanding young man and the Jaycettes have handled the young woman of the year contest.

This year, three DSA plaques will be presented to the 1978 winners in three categories.

The candidate is a member of the National Honor Society and has a grade average of 3.10. She served on the student council as class treasurer and was student council representative to the executive forum.

She was co-captain of the cheerleaders for two years and was the most valuable player for 1977-78 on the gymnastics team. Other activities have included everything from participation in a 24-hour basketball marathon to raising money for the basketball team to winning the pie-eating contest during homecoming week.

Miss Bublin represented her school at the Canton Rotary Club luncheon in 1978. She eneterd the Veterans of Foreign Wars speech contest. She has worked in the Class of '79 fall festival booth every year, in fundraising car washes for the class, and on the homecoming float. In 1975, she was president of her junior high Sunday school group at Church of the Nazarene and was a Camp Fire Girl for three years.

During vacations, she has been a lifeguard, a gymnastics assistant and a gymnastics instructor. Her hobbies are crafts and macrame.

It was during her sophomore year that Leslie Bublin became involved in what she considers her most important school activity. She was a junior varsity cheerleader and a student council member at Plymouth Canton. Her friend, Sue Parker, was sophomore class president and JV cheerleader at Plymouth Salem.

"Because Canton and Plymouth weren't very friendly to each other, we decided to combine many of our class activities, like dances, to raise more money and help bring the classes together.

"As treasurer, I know that the Canton class of '79 is the richest class ever to graduate from Canton and we had lots of money to do things our senior year and I know we made many good friends in both schools. Now we are friendly rivals."

GEORGE HAMBLIN, a senior at Plymouth Canton High School, was nominated as an "outstanding leader who is extremely well respected by his teachers and his classmates."

He has done color commentary for women's and men's basketball games broadcast over the school radio station WSDP. He has a third class radio operator's license and has been a writer for his high school newspaper. He played varsity football in 1977 and 1978 and received honorable mention in 1978 for all conference, all area and all Observerland.

He sang in mixed chorus in '76 and was named homecoming king at the 1978 pep assembly.

Hamblin lives and works on a farm. He has sold Christmas trees and also had a job at the Plymouth Hilton. He is a member of St. Kenneth Church. He participated in the Plymouth Fowl Festival for WDSP in 1977 and also the Fall Festival produce display. He was involved in community league basketball in '76.

Hobbies are building models, lifting weights, skeet shooting, karate and music. He is very interested in the study of law and may pursue law as a career. He also is involved in the study of military music of the United States.

KAREN HAUT, a senior at Plymouth Salem High School, is a member of the National Honor Society with a grade point average of 3.6.

She is editor in chief of Centicore, her school newspaper. She has been a student council representative.

As captain of the varsity cheerleading squad she earned two varsity letters. The squad won fourth, fifth and sixth place awards at cheerleading camp and the spirit award. Miss Haut was homecoming queen for her school.

She teaches a first grade Sunday school class and plays guitar for the church choir and services.

Her hobbies are dancing, eating and tennis. Family activities are canoeing, snowmobiling, motorcycling and going to their cottage together. Dinner and church are family times for the Hauts.

At the moment, she is unemployed. She has worked at McDonald's and has taught gymnastics for the YMCA.

LISA HOLK is a senior at Plymouth Canton High School, where she has a grade point average of 3.6. She has been a member of the National Honor Society for three years.

Her letter of nomination referred to her as a leader who does what she feels is right. "Her value system is very strong and evident in all that she does. Her work is meticulous, well-planned, prompt and always beyond the normal range."

Miss Holk has been a member of the Plymouth Centennial Park's marching and symphony bands for four years and has been head librarian for six CEP bands for three years.

Her band career started with her trumpet as a sixth grader in the West Middle School Beginning Band. As an eighth grader at Central Middle School, she was named most outstanding instrumentalist in the school. She joined the Plymouth Community Band, was guitar accompanist for the school choirs, and was a church soloist. She also went to Interlochen for the first time.

Her interest in music has been maintained through her high school years. As a senior she is first chair cornet in the CEP Symphony Band, section leader in the marching band, leader of the Pep Band, member of Stage Band, soloist with the symphony band and head librarian for the CEP bands. She was mistress of ceremonies for the "Variety Is" band show. She gives private lessons and is church soloist, arranger and composer.

SUSAN PARKER, a senior at Plymouth Salem High, is a three-year member of the National Honor Society with a grade point average of 3.5.

She has been involved in student government for four years, as class president of the freshman, junior and senior classes and vice-president her sophomore year. She also has had four years of cheerleading. She was captain of the JV squad and is co-captain of the varsity squad.

She is a two-year member of the girls' track team and a member of the homecoming court.

Miss Parker has been a member of Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church for seven years. She has been a member of the religious education team for two years.

The candidate for outstanding area teen served on the citizens advisory committee on modular scheduling. Her hobbies are sewing, running and attending sports events. She attends all the University of Michigan home football games with her family. Golfing is another family activity. She has worked as a student assistant at school and is a part-time employee at One Hour Martinizing shop.

"She displays leadership qualities, dependability and an ability to cooperate well with others. Due to her vast amount of extra-curricular participation, as well as some community service, I feel that Sue is an excellent candidate for outstanding teen," were the words of her sponsor for the award.

All five of the candidates and their families will attend the DSA dinner at the Plymouth Cultural Center Friday evening.

1978 man of the year will be named Friday

William Joyner, a Wayne County commissioner, and Ned (Nic) Arthur Cooper, a counselor at Plymouth Canton High School, have been nominated for the title of young man of the year for 1978.

The winner will be announced Friday evening at the distinguished service award dinner in the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Joyner was nominated by Karl W. Gansler, a member of the Plymouth Jaycees, sponsor of the annual project.

In presenting Joyner as a candidate for the DSA honor, Gansler wrote:

"Joyner fully deserves this high award because of his contributions to his city and state. During the 1978-79 Jaycee year, Joyner was community vice president of the Michigan Jaycees—serving 350 chapters throughout Michigan."

He pointed out that Joyner is the only full time commissioner in Wayne County. "He is part of a disappearing breed, the public servant. He believes his job is to serve the public. For those who know him, he truly does serve the public.

"He is not a 'party man' (Democrat or Republican), he is a man who votes for the good of the people. Along with his commissioner job, he finds time to be involved in many city organizations, not just in name, but as an active participant."

Joyner and his wife, Paula, have an 18-month-old son, Paul. They live in Plymouth Township. He is a member of the Plymouth Optimists Club, Friends of the Detroit Public Library, Friends of Belle Isle and Common Cause. He is 29.

NED ARTHUR COOPER, 28, was nominated by Dale Yagiela, winner of the DSA for 1977.

Yagiela said he based his nominating petition on observations made after four years association with the candidate.

"What is apparent to me, my staff, and Mr. Cooper's colleagues is his dedication to his work and the school district's youth. He is one of a small, committee group who places the students' needs above all else. It is not uncommon to find Nic helping us with some young person's school problems well after the end of the school day.

"Nic's current pursuits find him developing alternative education programs for youth withdrawn from the CEP program. Over the past year, he has done more than any single individual in the district to develop practical, workable options for the kids who usually 'fall through the cracks.'

"In addition to his school involvement, Cooper has been a volunteer probation officer for the 35th District Court. Until recently, he supervised the Saturday work crews for the court."

Yagiela added, "While not as visible as others, his kindness, gentleness and commitments make him an excellent choice for the award."

Cooper is married. He and his wife, Jane, have no children. He was called "Nic" at an early age because of the confusion of having two Neds in the family—he was named after his father.

A panel of three area residents acted as judges for the Jaycees in choosing the outstanding young man for the award. William A. Neu Jr. and James Vitittelli co-chaired the project.

Let's put Canton on the map

Canton Chatter

By SHARON STARON 455-5322

Many of us Cantonites have been living with an identity problem for many years. Most of my neighbors have lived in Canton for more than seven years. When we moved here, we had a Plymouth mailing address. We would tell people from other cities that we lived in Plymouth because no one had ever heard of Canton.

The township grew so much that we finally had to have a different zip code and a Canton address. Slowly the process of saying Canton rather then Plymouth emerged when asked the question of residence.

People of the township can say Canton as much or as little as they want, but the fact remains that no one outside our local area can find us. If anyone has to look on a map for directions to Canton they had better have the information that we are just south of Plymouth or they will be lost.

One family in town won a free trip to Minnesota a couple years ago. The plane tickets were being sent from a New York office. The officials sponsoring the trip could not figure out what airport would be closest to the family's home since they could not find Canton on any map and had no idea what part of Michigan it was in.

BUSINESSES in Canton have had a lot of mixups in deliveries since many truckdrivers can't find our township because we are even omitted from highway signs.

Townships are not designated on maps and highways. Townships are usually part of the nearest city's mailing address. Canton has its own mailing address and that's where our problems began.

The Canton Jaycees have taken up the cause to put our township on the map and give us more identity. They are collecting signatures on petitions to be presented to the state legislature at the end of January.

The Jaycees also are distributing bumper stickers with the slogan "Canton Can." They can be picked up at township hall and local businesses. There also is a flag contest that will be starting soon to pick a township flag.

I have always had trouble telling people where I live. If I think they're familiar with our area I'll say Canton. If not, I more than likely say Plymouth. The only bumper sticker I have ever put on any car I've owned was back in 1966 when I rode through the streets with "I Love My Corvair" behind me. The "Canton Can" bumper sticker will be the next one I put on just as soon as I can pick one up.

Just about a month ago someone asked me where I lived. I slipped and said Plymouth. "Is that anywhere near Canton?" I was asked. Somedays you just can't win.

CANTON NEWCOMERS will be holding their general meeting Feb. 7. This will be a lucheon meeting at Lerights's in Westland. A hot buffet lunch will be served at the cost of $5.50 per person.

The menu will include chicken, baked ham, keilbasa, au gratin potatoes, baked beans, assorted relishes, salads, desserts, rolls and beverage.

Reservations are being taken through Judi Thomas, 453-6986. The luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m. with hospitality, lunch, business meeting and program.

The Wayne County Extension will try and make attendees think spring with some tips on landscaping. The talk will be tailored to outdoor planting for this area with special reference and attention to the type of soil in Canton.

Babysitting for the luncheon will be provided at the Odd Fellows Hall in Plymouth. Kathy Freece, 981-2027, will make the arrangements.

Coping with change was Wine's topic

Rabbi Sherwin Wine of the Birmingham Temple was guest speaker at Saturday's luncheon meeting of the Plymouth branch American Association of University Women. There was a full house in the Jacob Room of Hillside Inn for the meeting.

"We live in an ever-changing society. How do we deal with that change?" Wine asked. He proceeded to discuss the ways some people get along in today's world.

There are those who deny the change exists. Some develop a neurosis and just revert to childhood behavior patterns.

There are those that can stand one change. "We can't change all areas of our lives, so we quite often change one area that we can."

Psychotherapy is the answer for some. They go to therapists to help handle their anxieties.

Some persons get by by developing the attitude that "what will be, will be," and deny all responsibility.

THE RABBI recommended learning the skills and techniques to live in today's society. He suggested nine ways to learn how to survive in the future:

•Learn to analyse; determine what is important and what is not important.

•Commitment; remain reliable, not only to familiar people but also to strangers.

•Aggressiveness: Let your presence be known; take responsibility for your own happiness and success.

•Be an individual: Conduct your own agenda. Don't worry about being alone, whether in public or not.

•Develop the skill of interesting leisure time activities. Many people do not enjoy their work, therefore they find their primary identity in their leisure activities — their hobbies.

•Anger control: Confront problems without losing control; direct your anger where it can be used most effectively.

Public auction scheduled by React team

An auction of merchandise donated by area businessmen and individuals will be held Saturday, Feb. 10 in Pioneer Middle School, Ann Arbor Road.

Already donated to the event are two late model Cadillacs, one given by Dreisbach and Sons Cadillac, the other by Don Massey Cadillac.

The event is sponsored by the Plymouth Area React Team, a group of men and women who monitor the emergency CB channel to help stranded motorists, diminish crime, and to pass on to the proper authorities reports of fires and other problems.

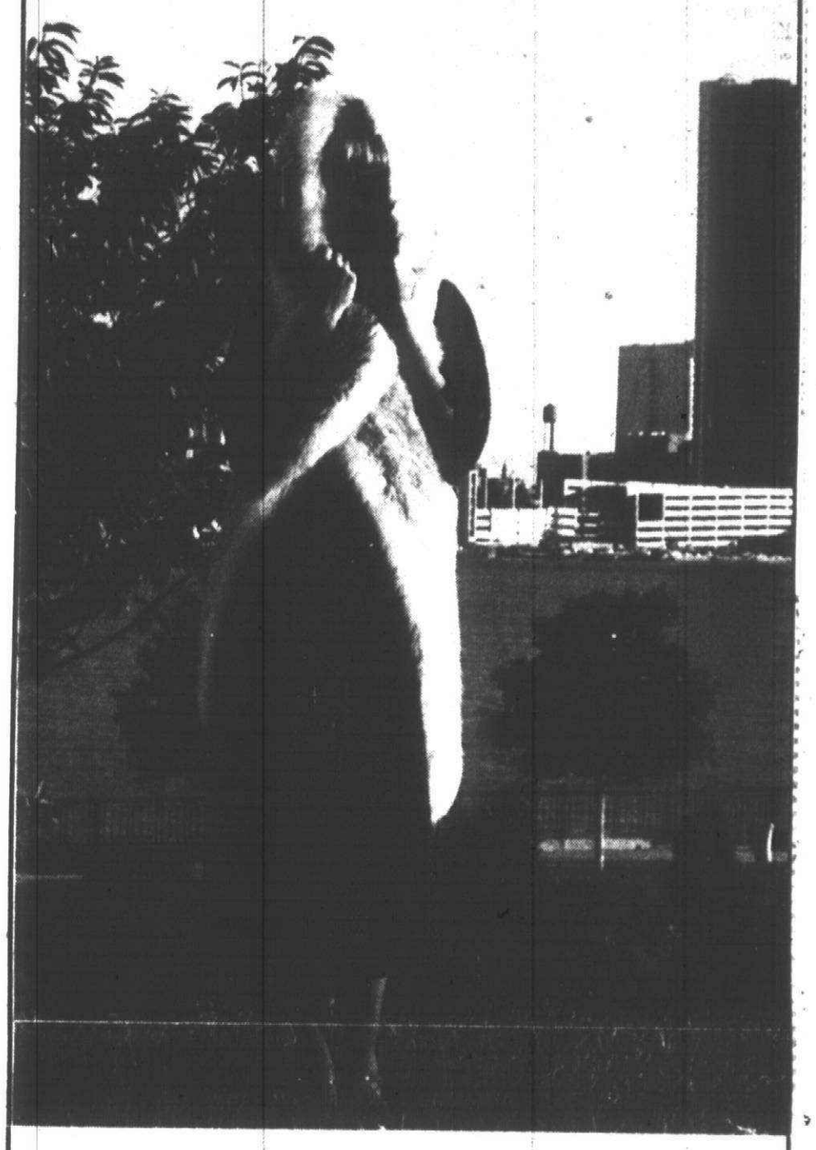

Monitors who live throughout the area volunteer their time in the React center in the Plymouth Hilton.

Other items which have been donated for the auction are smoke alarms, CB radios, professional snow removal service, plants, hair styling and radios.

Viewing of the items to be auctioned will take place from 6-7 p.m., with the bidding scheduled to start at 7 p.m. For further information or to make donations call Jim or Bonnie Crackel at 453-2387.

Blue jeans and chewing gum greatest thing since borscht

By SHERRY KAHAN

If you think the Soviet Union is still a strict, utilitarian and repressed society, listen to Nila Magidoff. She'll tell you life styles are changing.

This former Russian, the only speaker ever to make a third appearance at the Livonia Town Hall, came recently as an emergency replacement for scheduled beauty and fashion expert Emily Wilkins.

Nila is now a United States citizen and an enthusiastic booster of this country, and she was delighted to inform her audience that blue jeans and chewing gum are the biggest thing in Russia since borscht.

One Soviet youngster told her that he didn't much like to chew gum, but he did it anyway "because I want to look like an American."

A shirtless young man wearing long hair, a leather jacket and skin-tight blue jeans told her he was dressed that way to impress his mother.

"Don't worry, she'll be overwhelmed," Mrs. Magidoff assured him.

She saw another man similarly clad, sporting a button which said, "Kill a Commie for Christ."

"He didn't know what it meant," she laughed.

In an accent as thick and creamy as yogurt from Soviet Georgia, she informed her listeners that advertisements for deodorant and beauty creams are turning up in the Soviet Union, along with fashion shows and beauty institutes. One ad was pushing an outfit for a maid.

"The fashion show was so unbelievable, I was speechless," said the speaker who left Russia a few days before Pearl Harbor, after marrying an American who was an NBC correspondent. "According to the show, Soviet women entertain in gardens in large hats, and sit in brocade in front of the fireplace. But who has a fireplace?"

'It gives them social standing to have a gold tooth. They even put a gold cap over a healthy tooth.'

— Nila Madidoff

EVERY LARGE CITY has a beauty institute. In Moscow a staff of 200 treat about 1,500 clients a day, some of them men. Russian men don't believe in doing such female tasks as housework and caring for children, she stated. "But they think nothing of sitting in the institute wearing curlers and a beauty mask along with the women."

Having just returned from one of her many visits to her former homeland, Mrs. Magidoff was able to give the latest prices in facelifts. A partial costs $25 and a complete one is $165.

Other methods by which Russians are beautifying themselves are with gold teeth. "It gives them social standing to have a gold tooth," she said. "They even put a gold cap over a healthy tooth."

Women are sporting aritificial hairpieces, not necessarily of matching colors. They are able to read about new styles such as this through columns for women in newspapers, telling them about make-up and diets.

On a more serious note, she spoke of the various ways Soviet citizens act counter to government wishes. She thinks the interest in rock music and American ways is in itself a kind of protest. Mainly involved in this are people from the upper layers of society, possibly because some sell jeans at $310 apiece.

Another group consists of men from all walks of life who live in communes and share their income. "The Soviet press acknowledges them and calls them dropouts," noted Mrs. Magidoff. "But it acknowledges there are hundreds of them.

"They go to isolated places where people don't go voluntarily. Some of them are doctors or other professionals. They can make a lot of money where their services are in demand. They say they are the only free men in the Soviet Union. They can talk on religion, literature, exercise a belief in God and write poetry and books."

The underground press circulates their work along with that by other authors, including Solzhenitsyn. Pop singers are not allowed to perform publicly, but they perform in private homes. "Their tapes are spread all over Russia," said Mrs. Magidoff.

Russians are still amazed by Watergate. "Is it true," she was asked, "that all those people who sent letters to Congress asking that President Nixon be impeached signed their own names?"

She was also told: "We envy you in America your access to information. Now it is better here than under Stalin, but we can't be as free as you are."

While officially God does not exist in the Soviet Union, Nila attended church. "Each time I went I saw many young people," she noted. "I saw a wedding in a church in which the groom was a Red Army soldier. More and more people are wearing crosses.

"I was told by a woman, 'I'll give you anything if you'll sell me a Bible.' On my last trip there, a customs official asked if I was carrying a Bible or religious material. If they are asking such a question, it must mean there is a problem."

MRS. MAGIDOFF RESPECTS greatly those who oppose the system in Russian. In her younger days she was one of them.

"I was a third class sailor in the merchant marine before World War II," she said. "I had never been out of Russia, and I saw how people lived. After that I couldn't accept the dictatorship, so I joined the underground against Stalin."

She wound up as a political prisoner, living above the Arctic Circle, "56 criminals and myself."

She added: "A gypsy told me how to tell fortunes. I became so good at it that I was known as the counter revolutionary fortune teller.

"My mother always told me to take any situation you were in and make the best of it. I danced in my cell when I thought my courage was leaving me."

So impressed was she with the courage of Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn that she was determined to meet him when he lived in Switzerland. She went every day to the woods in which he walked, until one day he came along.

"He touched his hat and said a greeting," she recalled. "I gave him a long, low bow. It was so low my hat fell off. He laughed a beautiful laugh."

The life of the young Russian woman took a radical change one day in Moscow when she went skating. Robert Magidoff was skating, too. "He fell down, and I picked him up," she said. "It was a wonderful pick-up.

"After we were married, I applied for permission to go to the U.S. But there was no reply from the Soviet government. The war came and all wives of U.S. citizens were evacuated, but I stayed there. The American ambassador negotiated to exchange me. The Americans gave the Russians two tanks of high octane gas, and I was allowed to leave.

"I think I am the only woman who knows exactly what her value is."

She took to American life like a commissar to a five-year plan. She plunged ahead with the new language, despite the fact that she occasionally made mistakes.

"Someone asked me once if I had ever parachuted," she remembered. "I told him that when I was in Russia I had jumped. I added that my bra was on my knees. I wanted to say I had bruised my knees."

And what does an ex-Russian sailor, parachutist, political prisoner and news person do when she transports her instinct for survival and her zest for life to a foreign shore?

Lately, she has been flying in balloons.

"We sit in a little box and slide through the air in complete silence," she said with obvious satisfaction. There is a feeling of moving without noise. "There is no smell."

At least in most cases there is no smell. A recent trip above Florida almost took her over the Gulf of Mexico. Instead, the craft came down in the middle of a dump.

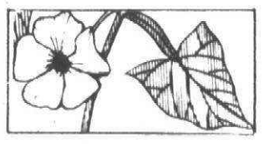

Nila Magidoff, eight days back from a visit to Russia, reported to the Livonia Town Hall that "it is very expensive to visit that proletarian country." (Staff photos by Art Emanuel)

Graphologically Speaking

By LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene Green,

This is my second attempt at writing to you. I am most anxious to have my handwriting analyzed.

I have spent most of my life thinking I knew who I was, only to find out I don't know me at all.

It's very important to me, to know what my handwriting reveals. I will continue to watch your column with interest. Thank you.

M.C.W., Troy

Dear M.C.W.,

I am sorry that you had to write a second time to have your handwriting selected for analysis. Unfortunately time and space do not permit me to use all of the letters I receive.

From the margins of your letter I can see that you are attempting to make some significant changes in your life. A very wide left margin with a narrow right margin tells me you are leaving some of the past and moving out into the future.

I see this as a very good sign. Too long you have been bound by events of your early life that you did not like.

I do not know where the male authority figure was in your youth, but if he was in the parental home he had almost no influence on you (personal pronoun I). Also resentment that you harbor from that period of your life is shown by your many inflexible strokes that begin below the line on the first letters of many words.

Although you are probably quite comfortable in familiar surroundings with people who have accepted you for the nice person you are, your self-consciousness becomes more apparent in unfamiliar situations or among new social groups (self consciousness is shown when the final humps on m's and n's are higher than the preceeding ones).

Your little round circle i dots suggest your individualist nature. You are probably attracted to clothing styles or fads that help you appear more distinctive.

There are some signs of frustration in your writing. However, the light pressure of your writing tells me you are resilient and can bounce back from experiences more easily than a heavy pressured writer.

The lines of your handwriting tend to slope downward as you write suggesting that you may be tired or a little down at this time.

The beginning of a new year is an excellent time to take stock of one's personality and of the old resentments that are keeping us from becoming the fulfilled person we would like to be.

You have a great deal to offer. You are friendly and caring (right slant and word endings that reach out). Pride and dignity are shown by the height and retracing of your t stems. You are also neat and quite well organized (good spacing). Best wishes in the search for your identity.

GRAPHOLOGY TIP--The more elaborate the capital letter the more the writer wishes to be noticed.

If you have a question about your personality write to Mrs. Lorene C. Green, in care of this newspaper. Please write on a full sheet of white paper using the first person singular.

Joggers need extra vigilance

Jogging, America's newest exercise, is shaping up an estimated 25 million people, but it's also killing them. The National Safety Council reports one in five motor vehicle accidents between pedestrians and vehicles in 1976 included a high percentage of joggers.

The increase of jogging has also led to the growing annoyance and antagonism from motorists who don't like sharing the streets with joggers.

Joggers taking either a scenic route through a park or on the road should follow these safe tips for running:

- Always wear a light colored sweatsuit so vehicles can spot you. When jogging at night or early morning, convince a friend to join you. There's safety in numbers.
- Keep to a sidewalk if one's available. Otherwise jog around a nearby park, boulevard or dead-end street. If these aren't available, find a side street with little traffic and few dogs as an alternative.
- Run in single file when jogging with others, never two or more abreast.
- Always run against traffic when using streets and highways advises the National Safety Council. This makes it easier for joggers to spot oncoming cars and get off the road when necessary.
- Avoid streets and highways with heavy traffic. Motorists using congested roads often are preoccupied by other cars and often not alert to joggers and runners.
- Anticipate dangers. A speeding motorist cannot stop on a dime.

High cost of beef bring new diet patterns

Hamburger—actually beef in one of its most common forms—is the undisputed king of the range in American homes.

But pork, not beef, used to ride herd over other meats in this country and, in fact, beef may be due for another tumble in its popularity, according to Eric Ross, a visiting assistant professor of anthropology at the University of Michigan.

"The development—away from pork, which dominated much of 19th century American cuisine, to beef—is far more a function of economic history than simply a reflection of inexplicably changing tastes," Ross says.

For the same reason that dietary styles are not random, Ross contends, Americans can expect another upheaval in their diet because beef is getting too expensive to produce in comparison with other sources of quality protein.

ROSS' VIEWPOINT is central to an article, co-authored with Marvin Harris, professor of anthropology at Columbia University, in a recent issue of the Magazine Psychology Today.

In that article, Ross takes exception to the view of some anthropologists who emphasize ideological factors—taboos, habits and preferences—as determinants of what people eat, as if these were divorced from the material facts of environment and economy.

"Food habits are not fortuitous or whimsical," says Ross. "At any particular point in time, given the nature of the economy, the level of technology and the distribution of population, one ought chiefly to look at particular resources being exploited in terms of the material costs and benefits to that population.

"As these change, food preferences are modified, sometimes consciously, sometimes unwittingly, depending on the scale of change. But almost invariably, whatever their historical antecedents, people tend to look on their dietary habits either as sacred trusts or acts of free will.

"Why," Ross asks, "do Americans value beef as a food and why does Indian society prohibit the eating of beef?"

It's not just a question of religious beliefs or eternal verities, he answers. It is generally more economical for Indian society to deify cows than to eat them, he notes. Cattle raising typically is based on large areas of grassland. Indians need land to till and what few animals an Indian farmer can afford are needed more to provide traction and dung as fuel than for meat.

ROSS'S THESIS is an outgrowth of an approach to anthropology called "cultural meterialism." Many other anthropologists adopt more "symbolic" reasons, he says, rather than economic or ecological ones, to explain why people act the way they do.

In America, for instance, one well known scholar espouses the view that our high regard for beef derives from an ancient Indo-European association of cattle with virility, Ross says. Superficially, at least, this notion is reinforced by our cowboy cult and a contemporary image of the meat-and-potatoes man.

"But one cannot properly invoke an Indo-European heritage which also developed into a taboo on beef-eating in India to explain a preference for beef in the modern United States," Ross observes.

Moreover, he says, Americans actually used to eat more pork than beef because pigs, which convert their food supply into proportionately more meat than cattle, were nicely adapted to the woodland areas of the eastern states where swine rooted for food in the forests..

IN ADDITION, in the days when methods for preserving meat were relatively crude, pork salted or pickled better than beef, Ross explains.

"It was a combination of the vast interior grasslands of the continent—well-suited for the grazing of ruminants like cattle, but not for pigs—and the development of refrigerated railroad cars to ship fresh meat to a burgeoning eastern market, that marked the beginning of the ascendancy of beef in the American mind," he summarizes.

"The relationship between humans and food-yielding animals," Ross concludes, "is, and will continue in the near future to be, one of the major factors shaping society."

DESPITE ARGUMENTS by vegetarians, a meatless diet, Ross argues, is not an easy way to satisfy human protein needs.

"People must consume a broad range of vegetable foods to obtain the necessary complement of protein constituents, amino acids," he says, adding "It's usually easier to let the animal do the foraging for you—especially when certain land cannot be exploited for food except indirectly through animals."

But, Ross says, as population grows, land use generally turns to more intensive forms. As U.S. settlement has flowed westward, cattle raising has given way on the prairies and the plains to grain agriculture.

According to Ross, while grass-feeding is still important as a relatively cheap phase of the beef industry, the fact that corn-fed cattle put on weight more quickly has, along with diminishing rangeland, shifted much of beef production to grain-feeding in order to meet market demands for meat.

"The beef industry also effectively markets much of the country's corn surplus," he says, "and it is reasonalbe to assume that our taste for marbled beef is not, in fact, because corn-fed beef tastes better than range-fed (many people who have experienced both prefer grass-fed), but because of the economics of the livestock and grain industries."

IN THE POCKET

By W.W. EDGAR

Detroit has been officially ruled out as site of the National Bowling Museum and the Hall of Fame. The selection committee was in Detroit recently looking over the city's offered sites.

The committee was shown two locations. The first was on Michigan Avenue at Third in downtown Detroit and the other was the State Fair Grounds. The committee didn't seem impressed with either and the fact that none of the top Detroit officials were on hand didn't help. The choice now seems to be between Akron, Ohio and Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

THE HEAVIEST assault on the pins this season was made last Friday night in the Little Caesar Classic at Westland Bowl when five of the sharpshooters broke the 700 barrier.

Bob Goike Jr. paced the assault with games of 279, 248 and 230 for 757. Next came Jim Beck with counts of 243, 258 and 236 for a 737.

Larry Sager linked counts of 235, 255 and 246 for 736. Next came Bob Shonce, who rolled games of 199, 268 and 255 for 722, and Mike Lee, who posted games of 248, 234 and 235 for 717.

It was the highest scoring night in the history of the classic. While the men were stealing the show, Pam Anderson paced the women with games of 205 and 211 in 607.

THREE OTHER barrier breaking scores were registered during the week.

As usual, John Hurley, bowling in the morning league at Westland, added another to his string that now has reached 13 this season. He had games of 212, 252 and 279 for 743. In his third game, he had nine strikes in a row and then left up the No. 4 pin.

Dave Shiffman joined the 700 club ranks when he linked counts of 260, 246 and 196 for 702 in the Bel-Aire Classic and Joe Tonaski went one pin over the coveted mark with games of 243, 194 and 264 for 701 in the Super Bowl classic.

THE GOEBEL and First Federal teams in the Thursday All-Star classic turned in one of the oddities of the season last week when they were tied at the end of the second game with 2,108 and then bowled a 1,006 final to tie the series at 3,114.

MENTIONING THE GOEBEL team, it now has passed its goal of $20,000 in the leader dog exhibition series. With three more exhibitions scheduled, it is certain that the fund will go far beyond any pre-season predictions.

It is hoped now that the fund will reach the point where six dogs, each costing about $4,000, will be available for the blind.

FOR THE FIRST time in several years, an individual bowler scored a slam in the Livonia Ladies Classic.

Joan Lewis did it when she won the first game with 201-28—229, took the second with 200-28--228 and the third with 189-28—217. This enabled her to take the series with 590-84—674.

WILLIAM STOLAITEK set the pace for the senior citizens at Garden Bowl with his best series of the season. He opened with 255 and came back with games of 207 and 173 for 635.

In the swingers league, Pat McClatchey was high with 624 and Gary Miller was next with 602. In the St. Linus league Larry Kroll started with a 286 and added games of 201 and 165 for 652.

In the TGIF loop, Bob McDonald had a 652 and his brother Russell had a 275 in 614, while Bill Gilbo fired a 644 and Bob Bernat posted a 637.

IN OTHER FINE performances, Berry Van Dike, had his second 600 in the high school league at Farmington Lanes when he fired a 224 in 615.

Rice creams Catholic Central

By BOB GROSS

"The biggest point spread we've ever had with Catholic Central," said Birmingham Brother Rice coach Bill Norton following his team's 75-53 victory Tuesday.

Senior center Tim Andree paced the Warriors' effort with 23 points and 18 rebounds. The 6-10 pivot-man hit on nine of 10 shots from the floor for a 90 per cent shooting average.

Norton, however, felt the victory was due more to team effort than to any single player: "We played very well collectively. . . .The team concept is getting better both offensively and defensively."

The victory pulled Brother Rice out of a slight scoring slump during which it was twice held to under 50 points.

The game started as a match between Catholic Central's team quickness and Brother Rice's inside strength. The Shamrocks tried to draw Andree away from the bucket early, leaving a lane which Todd Nadeau exploited for eight first quarter points.

The strategy at one point gave Catholic Central its only lead of the night, 10-8. But the Warriors hung tough and, with the help of a layup with just six seconds left, took an 18-16 lead at the buzzer.

Brother Rice kept its momentum going into the second quarter, piling up six points before Catholic Central's Jeff Blanzy hit on a free throw at 5:07. That was the only offense the hapless Shamrocks were able to muster until 1:26 when Blanzy sank another from the charity stripe.

Catholic Central eventually picked up six points in the quarter.Brother Rice matched that total and added 10 more, hitting for 16 points and a 34-22 halftime lead.

Shamrock coach Bernie Holwicki explained his team's second quarter slump: "We just quit running our offense; I think the kids invented their own offense."

Greg Wendt opened the third quarter for the Shamrocks by missing a short jumper and the follow-up, setting the tone of what was in store for Catholic Central.

Brother Rice outscored its opponent in the period, 16-11. Tim Andree and Don Piotrowski added insult to injury with less than a minute left—first Andree scoring at :45 with a slam dunk, and Piotrowski hitting at the buzzer to bring the score to 52-33.

WSDP radio broadcasts next 2 Salem cage games

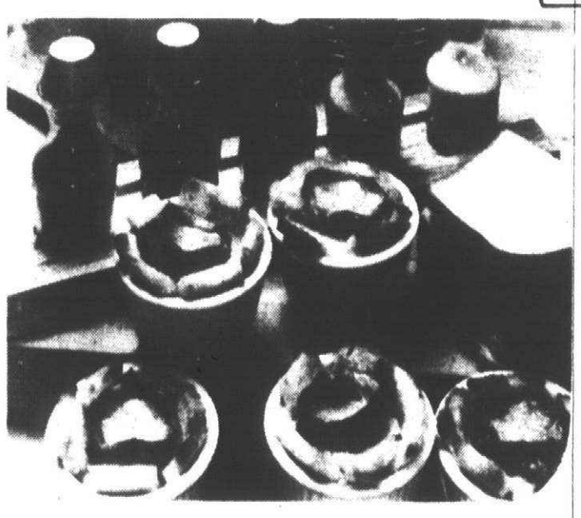

Chris Koepke and Ross Rhinehart will be at courtside, live, with all the play-by-play radio action of Plymouth Salem's next two home basketball games.

The two cage contests will be broadcast over WSDP-FM (88.1), the student-operated radio station of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

SPICY CHEESE CUPS

A LUNCHTIME TREAT

A little mustard, paprika and black pepper is all these cheese cups need to make them the most savory of luncheon dishes.

MUSTARD CHEESE CUPS

3/4 teaspoon powdered mustard
3/4 teaspoon water
8 slices white bread
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
5 thin slices boiled ham
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1-1/4 cups milk
1 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/16 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 cup (4 oz.) grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Blend mustard with water; let stand 10 minutes for flavor to develop. Trim crusts from bread; discard crusts. Cut bread in half. Arrange 3 halves around the inside of a 6-ounce custard cup. Press bread firmly to make a "cup." Repeat with 4 other custard cups. Brush bread with butter. Place a slice of ham in each cup, pressing into bread (folding if necessary). In a small bowl mix eggs, milk, paprika, salt, black pepper and mustard. Stir in cheese. Pour into custard cups. Place on foil-lined baking pan. Bake in a preheated hot oven (400°F.) until knife inserted into center comes out clean, 20 to 25 minutes. Yield: 5 portions.

ISIDOR SASLAV
Reunion at workshop

Violinist hosting workshops

Two upcoming workshops for high school string players will be a sort of reunion for violinist Isidor Saslav, who will be conducting the sessions at Schoolcraft College.

Saslav is concertmaster of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra and former concertmaster of the Minneapolis Symphony. He will also be one of the soloists Feb. 11 with the Oakway Symphony Orchestra in the Brahms Double Concerto for Violin and Cello.

When Saslav was at Cass Tech High School in Detroit, Richard Saunders, who heads Schoolcraft's fine arts program, was the orchestra's first clarinetist.

When Saslav was a beginning Detroit Symphony Orchestra member in the rear of the second violin section, the fourth trumpet player was Francesco DiBlasi, now Oakway conductor. DiBlasi describes Saslav as not only a performer but a scholar who has made a study of Haydn embellishments.

Saunders described the time he turned on a TV a couple years ago to a program where young conductors were being auditioned in Minneapolis. "They interviewed some members of the orchestra for their reactions, and lo and behold! there was Izzy," he said.

THE WORKSHOPS for high school students are on Feb. 9, 10-11:30 a.m. and 1-2:30 p.m. They are free, but there is a 90-student limit in each. "Students should bring their instruments. Saslav will lecture on performance and string techniques," said Saunders. "He will use some students in demonstrations."

To register, students can call Saunders at 591-6400, ext. 510.

DiBlasi describes Saslav as outgoing and "free with his ideas" for young performers.

At Cranbrook

•Museum shows Brazilian art works

The interaction of real space and the illusion of space are explored in the exhibition "Three Brazilian Artists" at Cranbrook Academy of Art Jan. 30 through Feb. 25.

Genilson Soares, Francisco Inarra and Lydia Okumura use simple materials such as string and paint to create conceptual pieces and graphics that juxtapose illusion and reality.

Included in the show are "teaser" pieces such as a cube-like figure that seems to turn itself inside-out because of uneven sides, and a string work composed of straight-sided triangles that seem to curve.

Okumura, now working in New York City, will be in the museum Jan. 23 until opening to install the show. She welcomes visitors and questions during museum hours 1-5 p.m. daily except Mondays.

Soares and Inarra, who reside in Brazil, also plan to be present for the installation, but specific dates are unknown because of visa problems.

The Cranbrook exhibition is the first major showing of contemporary Brazilian visual art in the United States. It is a result of Cranbrook Academy of Art president Roy Slade's visit to Brazil in 1977 as a U. S. State Department representative to XIV International Bienal De Sao Paulo.

Museum admission is $1.50 weekends, by donation weekdays.

Cranbrook Academy of Art, 500 Lone Pine, grants bachelor and master of fine arts and master of architecture degrees. With its contemporary art museum, it is a division of Cranbrook Educational Community, which also includes Cranbrook Institute of Science and Cranbrook Schools.

•Sun will shine at planetarium

Solar eclipses and sunspots are featured throughout February in the Cranbrook Institute of Science planetarium, 500 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills.

Planetarium demonstrations, entitled "Here Comes the Sun," celebrate the star that makes up 99.9 per cent of the total mass of our solar system.

Discussion will include the Feb. 26 partial eclipse that will be visible in the Detroit metropolitan area if skies are clear.

Demonstrations are Wednesdays at 4 p.m.; Saturdays at 2, 3, 4 and 7:30 p.m.; Sundays at 2, 3 and 4 p.m.

The 35-minute shows are free with museum admission.

Auditions open for 'Vanities'

Vittorio's Dinner Theatre in Livonia is looking for young women to cast for parts in "Vanities," which will run on weekends starting March 2.

The story follows the lives of three high school cheerleaders through their 20s, and director Phil Marcus Esser is looking for people who can appear as the right age throughout the play.

"No one has used anyone of correct median age, as far as I'm concerned," he says. "I'm looking for younger girls."

Esser projects a 12-15 week run. For audition information, call 425-8343 or 425-8344.

Pierrot heads to Morocco

"Strange, Wonderful Morocco" will be presented by cinematographer-narrator Clay Francisco as the 11th World Adventure Series program at the Detroit Institute of Arts this Sunday.

Francisco's 2:30 p.m. color film is a 90-minute program that contrasts Morocco's modern face with its pre-World War II times. His film shows how Morocco has become modernized in less than two decades since it gained independence from French colonial rule. He also presents much of that same appearance many American veterans may recall from World War II.

For a free brochure and further information on remaining World Adventure Series shows, write: The Detroit Institute of Arts, Detroit 48202, or telephone 832-7676.

Seats for series programs are reserved for $3. All shows begin at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday. Underground and surface parking are available adjacent to the institute.

D. JAMES GALBRAITH

A portfolio of photographs by a Michigan photo essayist is one of the major exhibits at an art display now under way at the University of Michigan.

The photos, which are the work of D. James Galbraith, capture the face of the Republic of Ireland through the faces of its people.

Galbraith is director of photography for the Sliger Home Newspapers. The portfolio is made up of 20 photographs made over a period of over eight years in which Galbraith made numerous visits to the country.

Galbraith termed Ireland "a land of uncommon joy, cradled in the arms of infinite sadness."

The exhibit is on display in the Blixt Gallery (formerly the Arcade Gallery), located in Ann Arbor's Nickels Arcade on State Street near the U-M campus.

Hours for the display are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays. The exhibit continues through Feb. 8.

Drama goes into 2d week

August Strindberg's "Dance of Death," choreographed by Friedrich Durrenmatt, will continue a second for weekend of performances Friday-Sunday at the Grand Circus Exchange, 47 E. Adams, Detroit.

The play is presented by the Sometimes Up, Sometimes Down Elevator Company, in cooperation with the Grand Circus Exchange. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m., except 7:30 p.m. Sundays.

Immediately following each performance, the company encourages the audience to enter into a discussion/critique of the play, the production and staging.

Tickets are priced for adults and for students and senior citizens. For reservations call 964-7380 (evenings); for information call 366-2617.

Schoolcraft dinner tickets available

Tickets are still available for the Feb. 10 dinner-dance featuring a Scandinavian buffet at Schoolcraft College.

Sponsored by the board of trustees, it offers a complete gourmet dinner with dancing until midnight for $12.50 per person.

Tickets may be obtained from board members or through the president's office on campus. Telephone 591-6400, ext. 214 for reservations.

The menu includes marinated and smoked fish, relishes, salad and Norwegian black bread for appetizers.

Dessert and beverage are included, and a cash bar will be available. The event will be held in the Waterman Center on campus.

Folk art

Out of the closet, into the gallery

Story: CORINNE ABATT

For years, folk art in Michigan as well as across the country was close to closet art. It was displayed at antique and craft shows, but some of it seldom seen at all except by the artist and a few friends.

Wider appreciation in the state for this art form, sometimes referred to as primitive or naive, must be credited in large measure to the efforts of C. Kurt Dewhurst and Marsha MacDowell. Their first major show of Michigan folk art was a 1976 exhibition, "Michigan Folk Art: Its Beginnings to 1941."

The sequel, "Rainbows in the Sky," a representative selection of Michigan folk art of the 20th century, is on display at Meadow Brook Gallery through Feb. 11. The title was taken from a painting by Clarence Hewes of Lansing. Hewes included a poem with this theme in his painting of the Cedar Street Pumping Station in Lansing.

THE APPEAL OF folk art, and this is the term which should be used if one wants to remain a purist, is in the directness of the emotion conveyed by the artist. John Wasilewski of Detroit, retired Ford Motor Company machine operator, saw the Kennedy funeral procession on television and responded.

Ed Kay of Mount Clemens, who has completed about 100 totem poles in the last 40 years, responded to President Carter in a less somber way. Not only has he placed a toothy-smiling Carter at the top of a totem, he has included rows of peanuts around him. It is art with an out-front impact.

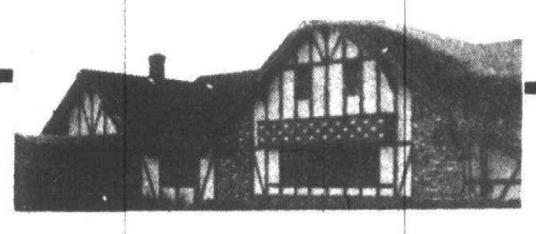

Bird and fish decoy carver Miles Smith of Marine City, a retired boat builder, started by making decoys for his own use. His home along the river is modest, pleasant and comfortable. He likes his view of the water, it's part of his life. He carves because it's what he wants to do. Fame or fortune were at the bottom of his list of goals.

His happiness with his life comes through in his work. Many of his fish have the faintest trace of a smile — as if once again they have eluded the wily fisherman above the water.

In some instances, a folk art form has been passed down through the family. This was the case with Alice Bennett of Mount Pleasant, whose black ash splint basket making techniques are now being practiced by her son, Russell. Mrs. Bennett, now in her 80s, has spent all of her life carrying on a tradition of her Chippewa forebearers.

Bentley hangs on

Chief rally falls short

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

Livonia Bentley blew an 18-point lead late in the third quarter and had to battle for its life in the waning minutes before blitzing Plymouth Canton 67-60 in Tuesday night non-league basketball action.

It was sweet revenge for coach Jim Komula's squad, which fell twice to the Chiefs last season. The Bulldogs, 10-2 overall, resume Suburban Eight League action Friday, hosting Belleville.

For Canton, it was its third defeat in 11 games. The Chiefs, coached by Craig Bell, now hit the road for three straight games starting Friday with an important Western Six League battle at Northville.

The Chiefs outstanding fourth-quarter rally erased a sloppily-played second period which led to Bentley's early advantage.

Canton took over the led with 1:10 left in the game when the Chiefs' leading scorer, Butch King (22 points), hit an outside shot for a 60-59 edge.

Bentley, which was hurt in the fourth period by some poor free throw shooting and the loss of center Chris Bollin because of foul trouble, finally got that shooting eye back at the charity line when it counted in the last minute.

The Chiefs didn't hold onto their lead very long when four fouls and eight straight Bulldog free throws iced the game away in the final moments of action.

Steve Booth (26 points) and Eric Thorderson (16 points), the Bulldogs' top two scorers of the evening, split the eight free shots to close out the victory, as the lid remained on the Canton basket the rest of the way.

The Bulldogs hit 10 of 15 shots from the floor in the second quarter to turn a close game into a comfortable 38-23 halftime lead.

"That's when we were moving," Komula explained in reference to the second quarter splurge. "When we're running our offense, we are tough to beat.

"There is no doubt we are a better team that them (Canton)," the Bentley mentor said. "I don't know what it is. We play to get ahead and then we stop playing."

Bell credited the inside play of Bentley's Chris Bollin (12 points) as one of the main reasons for the Canton defeat. He pointed out that when Bollin fouled out in the fourth quarter, his squad started to make its move.

"We didn't play well. We got out of our game," Bell said. "We were getting into a one-shot game (offensively) and we can't do that. "Chris Bollin played a strong rebounding game. We made a run at them when he sat down.

"I was proud of the way our kids came back and showed people we have a good team. We have no excuses. We knew we broke down early in the game and had to scramble back and almost catch them."

"I think we are just as good as them (Bentley)," Bell said. "But I agree, they have an excellent team that is well coached."

Bentley held a 16-12 first-quarter margin before outscoring the Chiefs 22-11 in the second period to take the 15-point halftime lead.

The Bulldogs had three different 18-point advantages during the third period before Canton scored the last six points of the quarter to start its comeback.

Canton's Rusty Mandle was the only other Chief player in double figures for both squads with 13 points.

Chief JV beats Churchill despite 9 technical fouls

By SCOTT ADLER

The Plymouth Canton JV basketball team set a record last week that they're not too pleased with. Despite nine technicals, the Chiefs overcame Western Six League foe Livonia Churchill 62-55 Friday in the Canton gym.

The record nine technicals were assessed to the Chiefs because Canton coach Pat Cunningham failed to put his team's roster in the official scorebook 10 minutes before the game began.

And from the begining of the game, every Canton player who checked into the game was given a technical foul.

"I subbed every time they (Churchill) had the ball, so they couldn't get a three point-play every time I subbed a player in the game," said an embarassed coach Cunningham.

The Chargers were 5-9 from the free throw line on their technical foul attempts, all of which were shot in the first half. The Chiefs led 39-22 at intermission, and the game was never in doubt.

"We didn't play a very good second half," said Cunningham.

Rock spikers earn 1st Sub-8 triumph

By BETTY DeLANO

Victories were the result for both the Plymouth Salem varsity and junior varsity volleyball squads Monday as the Allen Park Jaguars were put to shame by Salem's defensive and offensive power.

The varsity attack, led by seniors Monette Recto and Inger Eithun, overpowered the Allen Park team and took the match after two games, 15-8, 15-9.

"Monette's speed on digs off the net and on her sets helped a lot in the win," said Salem coach Cathy Himes. "Her sets were well placed and made it easy for our spikers to get good hits off."

"Inger did real well on her spikes. They were very powerful instead of just just barely making it over the net."

The much improved Allen Park team didn't have what it took to keep within reach of the Salem squad during either game of the match. The Rocks' attacks from behind the serving line left the Jaguars in a less than pleasant situation.

Serving became a factor in the Rocks' comanding lead as the Jaguars found it hard to return any of Salem's powerful serves.

"The team did real well at playing together as a team instead of individuals all out on the court at once," said Himes. "We played a much easier game against Allen Park than we would against a team like Livonia Bentley or Dearborn since there wasn't as much competition."

Salem's junior varsity team, coached by Sandy Franck, had an easy time against the Allen Park JV, winning both 15-8, 15-1.

Strong serving by sophomore Joy Gornik in the first game brought the Rocks from an 8-8 tie to a 13-8 lead. Doing much the same thing as Gornik, sophomore Laura Hewlett added five points to the Salem score in the second game to widen the team's lead, any thought of Allen Park's of catching up out of the question.

Salem's varsity now sports a 2-2 season record and is 1-2 in the Suburban Eight League. Livonia Bentley is Salem's next competitor Monday night at the Rocks' gym. The match is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. with the junior varsity competition and the varsity to follow at 7:45 p.m.

Salem gymnasts lose

Plymouth Salem's basketball team continues to get state recognition from the Detroit metropolitan daily newspapers.

The Rocks, 11-0 overall going into last night's road game against Dearborn Fordson, were ranked seventh by the Detroit News and eighth by the Detroit Free Press in the state ratings published early this week.

Salem also holds the second spot in the News' Metro West rankings behind Ypsilanti. Plymouth Canton is also mentioned in the Metro West top 10. The Chiefs are ranked eighth in this pool going into Tuesday night's non-league game against Livonia Bentley.

Rocks still ranked

The loss of Darla Doumanian because of a knee injury was one of the main reasons behind the Plymouth Salem gymnasts' loss to Northville Monday, 41.4- 65.2.

Doumanian, one of the Rocks top gymnasts, did not cpmpete in this meet because of a torn cartilage in her knee. Four freshmen competed Monday in order to make up for the all-arounder's absence.

Salem scores in the vaulting competition included Tracey Lawson with 3.6 points out of the possible 10, Jane Kimling scored 3.75 and Diane Perpich with a 4.75 for the Rocks' total of 12.1 compared to Northville's 20.9.

Uneven bar competition consisted of Tina Melone who came out with a 1.85 total, Pam Worsnop had 2.15 and Nicole Rollins tallied a score of 2.13. The Rocks team total was 6.3 while the Mustangs scored an even 10 points.

Worsnop also competed in the beam and scored a 3.2. Perpich came out with a 3.4 and Linda Wochna led the Salem squad with a 4.1. The Salem total was 10.7 and Northville had 14.4.

A team total of 12.3 was the result for the Rocks in the floor exercise. Worsnop led the Rocks with a 4.65. Rollins followed with a 4.4 and Sue Clark added a 3.25. Northville turned in a total score of 19.9 in this event.

"Darla was the high scorer in all the events in our first match and her absence is obvious when you look at our scores," said Salem coach Carol Michaels. "Even though Darla wasn't competing, the team still made an impressive performance and has improved a lot since the first practice."

Michaels gave individual credit to Linda Wochna for the improvement she made in her routine on the beam. Wochna added such maneuvers such as front rolls and walk-overs to her routine that increase the degree of difficulty.

Salem's next meet isn't until Monday so the rest of the week will be spent on improving individual routines, says Michaels. Monday's meet will be against Farmington Harrison at Harrison and starts at 7 p.m.

Rock JV belts Belleville

By THOMAS ZAIBEK

The Plymouth Salem junior varsity basketball team held off a furious Belleville attack in the second half to notch its ninth victory in 11 games last Friday night.

The Rock JV won the game 60-52, thanks to holding the Tigers to only one point in the first period. Salem led at halftime 35-13.

It was different in the second half, however, as Belleville went to a full court press. Rocks all period, as the Tigers outscored the eventual victors 21-7 in that third quarter.

The Rocks took only an eight-point lead into the final period but maintained that margin, playing evenly with the visiting squad the rest of the way.

Hockey's here

The Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department is presently taking registration for a Spring Hockey League. Each team will be guaranteed 14 games. The $64 registration fee, per team covers officials, trophies and ice time for the last two games.

Registration deadline is Friday, March 9. Games begin Monday, March 26. For more information on the league, call Al Campbell at 459-6444.

Admit it. It's tough to retire in Detroit.

When you're fighting high costs, high taxes, high crime and cold winters, it's tough to enjoy retirement. That's why you should learn about Beverly Hills, Florida.

Half of our 6,000 residents left the Detroit area when they retired. And they've never been happier. Why? Because their cost of living is so low in Beverly Hills, Florida, that they can live better than ever before. And, still put money in the bank for savings.

They never worry about crime or cold winters either. Because Beverly Hills is a completely self-sufficient community of genuinely friendly people, like you. The location on Florida's wooded west coast gives you winters that seem like autumn in Detroit.

The community features complete shopping, medical services, banks, recreation centers, parks and two stocked fishing lakes. Home prices begin in the mid $20's including lot. Complete city services including sewer, water and paved roads.
