80-foot requirement?

Lot size minimum eyed

When the township board voted to establish a minimum 70-foot lot size in August, 1977 to help curb Canton's population boom, most persons thought that the new minimum would apply to all lots in the township that had not been already platted.

But according to ordinance officer Bruce Phillips, lot sizes were increased from 60 feet to 70 feet in only one district located south of Ford between Canton Center and Sheldon.

On Tuesday night, the new township board considered action that would preclude the platting of any more 60-foot lots in the township.

The resolution board members are considering would increase the minimum lot size to 80 feet on the unplatted land that could now support 300 60-foot lots. Some land would still be zoned for 70-foot lots.

Board members believe the new minimum would help curb the township's mushrooming growth, since fewer houses could be built on a specific parcel of land.

"I think everyone assumed that the 70-foot lot size applied throughout the township (under the board's 1977 resolution)," said Phillips. "I know I did."

But according to Phillips, the motion unanimously approved by the former township board on Aug. 9, 1977 only established one zoning district with 70-foot lots.

"The motion never said remove 60-foot lots," Phillips said.

He added, however, that many developers have platted 70-foot lots even though they were legally allowed 60-foot lots in the zoning district where their subdivisions were located.

Board members will consider establishing the new minimum lot size at their next meeting on Feb. 27.

The farmhouse on Geddes Road that has been home for the Robert Ewald family for two years was destroyed by fire Friday night.

School boundary report released

Decisions will be made next month on adjusting school attendance boundaries to better balance student population among the individual buildings.

The boundary and growth committee of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools has finished its preliminary report which was forwarded this week to school board members.

The report will officially be presented to the school board Monday, Feb. 19, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theater of Plymouth Canton High School, Joy Road just west of Canton Center Road.

Although the public is welcome to attend that meeting to gain background information, public comment and questions will not be taken at this time.

The Feb 19 meeting is designed to allow board members to hold discussions with and ask questions of the boundary and growth committee.

THE PUBLIC WILL get its ch?ance on Tuesday, March 6, when a public hearing on proposed boundary changes will be held from 7:30-9:30 p.m. in the Little Theater at Canton High.

If the calendar is followed, the school board will make its final decision on boundary adjustments at the regular March 12 meeting which will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the board office at 454 S. Haryey, Plymouth.

Prior to the public hearing residents may ask questions or convey comments by calling a special phone line, 453-0200, ext. 422.

The special phone line will be operating beginning Feb. ?19 and continue through March 5.

Information about boundary changes also will be communicated in individual school newsletters going home to parents.

Because of rising enrollment, changes in individual school attendance boundaries has become an annual occurence in recent years.

The attendance boundaries are changed to reduce busing expenses as well as balancing student bodies among the schools.

The majority of the changes involye schools locate in Canton which generates most of the influx of new students.

The boundary adjustments are for the elementary and middle school buildings as high school population is balanced through the random selection process.

Farmland director sought

The non-paying position of farmland preservation director has been created by the Canton board at the recommendation of Supervisor Noel Culbert.

The position will be filled by a Canton resident.

According to Culbert, the person who fills the position will coordinate informational sessions on the farmland preservation proposal and lobby in general for passage of a farmland millage issue.

Last November, voters turned down a four-mill request ($4 per $1,000 assessed valuation) that would have financed public purchase of farmers' development rights.

The township board has pledged to present voters with another millage request to fund a farmland preservation program by May 30, 1981.

Persons interested in the director position are asked to send resumes to Culbert's office at township hall, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton 48188.

19 dogs found dead after fire guts home

By DARLENE STINSON

A family of seven is homeless and 19 dogs are dead following a fire that gutted a farmhouse on Geddes last Friday.

Robert Ewald, his wife, Darlene, and their five sons were attending a Cub Scout bowling session when the blaze broke out about 5:30 p.m.

But the family's five adult dogs and 14 Labrador retriever and beagle puppies were staying inside the house because of the cold weather.

Ewald said he found the dogs huddled inside the master bedroom—the only room in the house that was not destroyed by flames—where they apparently died of smoke inhalation.

CANTON FIRE CHIEF Mel Paulun said the house was damaged beyond repair. He estimates damages at $50,000 and tentatively attributes cause of the fire to a Franklin stove in the family room.

Paulun said it took the fire department six hours to extinguish the flames.

Ewald, Cub Scout master for Pack 754 at Quirk School, said he was driving down Geddes Road with his family and five other scouts when they spotted the police cars and fire trucks about a half hour after the fire started.

"At first, we assumed it was an accident," Ewald said. "But when we turned around the bend, sure enough, it was our house."

Ewald said his family purchased the old farmhouse on a half acre of land

Plymouth woman dies in freak Canton crash

MARTHA STILEC

A Plymouth woman was killed Monday afternoon after a house trailer rolled on top of the car she was driving on Cherry Hill near Lotz in Canton Township.

Martha Stilec, 26, of 872 Hartsough, was pronounced dead on arrival at Wayne County General Hospital. Mrs. Stilec was an art teacher at Wildwood Elementary School in Westland and granddaughter of former Plymouth Mayor William Hartmann..

According to Canton police, Mrs. Stilec was driving east on Cherry Hill at 3:45 p.m. Monday when a house trailer broke loose from the westbound wrecker that was pulling it.

Police said the house trailer rolled on top of the 1978 Pontiac Firebird that Mrs. Stilec was driving.

The driver of the wrecker—Ernest Stewart, 44, of Inkster—was arraigned on charges of negligent homicide before 35th District Judge James Garber on Tuesday. Stewart was released on a $1,000 personal bond. An examination date was scheduled for Feb. 21.

The charge is a misdemeanor that carries a two-year jail sentence on conviction.

The owner of the house trailer—William Logan of Inkster—was riding as a passenger in the wrecker at the time of the accident. Police said Mrs. Stilec was driving alone. Mrs. Stilec was the wife of Charles Stilec and the daughter of Graham and Beatrice Laible of Plymouth. Her parents are both teachers in the Plymouth-Canton schools.

Funeral services for Mrs. Stilec are scheduled for 3 p.m. today (Thursday) at the First United Presbyterian Church of Plymouth. Burial will be in Plymouth's Riverside Cemetery.

Persons are asked to make memorial contributions to the Martha Stilec Memorial Fund, which will be used for college art scholarships by the Wayne-Westland Schools.

Regulations pit business against township

By DARLENE STINSON

Are there too many business regulations in Canton Township? Or aren't there enough?

If you're a businessperson who's distraught over a proposed ordinance that would require you to obtain a license every two years, you'd probably answer yes to the first question.

But if you're a Canton official who's considering passage of the legislation, you'd probably answer no.

The conflicting answers illustrate a long-standing rift between the business community and township government over business-related laws in Canton such as the strict sign ordinance.

"I don't think there's too much government now, but I think it's becoming that way," says Gary Roberts, a defeated township trustee candidate who owns Canton Vac & Sew on Ford Road.

He and other store owners say that the business climate is discouraging new commercial establishments from coming to Canton.

'If anything, I think businesses are under-regulated. I think what they're griping about is just a change in status quo.'

--Supervisor Noel Culbert

But Supervisor Noel Culbert has taken the opposing point of view.

"If anything, I think businesses are under-regulated," he says. "Being a rural community for so long, there were few regulations. I think what they're griping about is just a change in status quo."

THE BUSINESS COMMUNITY'S latest gripe concerns an ordinance still in its rough outline stage that would require business to obtain licenses every two years.

The ordinance allows for the inspections of commercial establishments and the denial of licenses if building codes are violated. A consumer protection section of the ordinance prohibits businesses from selling defective merchandise unless the articles are so represented.

Canton officials insist that the proposed ordinance will help—not hurt—the business community.

They say the ordinance is needed to provide a list of current businesses and their owners so store proprietors can be notified in an emergency. The ordinance would also prevent the deterioration of Canton businesses as the community grows older, they say.

But according to a Canton Chamber of Commerce survey, 95 per cent of the chamber's members do not buy that argument. They oppose any form of licensing or regulation at this time.

To Ken Dividock, the owner of the Century 21 office on Ford Road, the real clincher in the ordinance is the power it gives to the township board to approve or deny original license applications.

"IF WE ALLOW them to pass this, what new ordinance will they come up with next?" he asked. "We have a great deal of distrust for the people who run this township."

Dividock said his suspicions are rooted in a consumer protection ordinance that was proposed during the administration of former Supervisor Robert Greenstein, who is now a township trustee.

The business community raised such a stink about the proposed ordinance that it was never passed.

Dividock and countless other businesspersons are also outraged at a sign ordinance passed by the Greenstein administration that prohibits free-standing ground signs.

They say many businesses, particularly impulse-oriented stores such as donut shops, need signs that are visible from the roadway. Although the planning commission has approved a revised sign ordinance that would allow ground signs up to 50 square feet in area, most members of the new township board have indicated that they will not pass the proposed law in its present form.

'If we allow them to pass this, what new ordinance will they come up with next? We have a great deal of distrust for the people who run this township.'

--Businessman Ken Dividock

But the businesspersons' gripes do not stop at proposed ordinances or laws already on the books.

Richard Kirchgatter, co-owner of the Parkway Veterinary Clinic on Lilley and a former planning commission member, is among the businesspersons who object to the manner in which the township board handles site plans for new businesses.

He notes a recent case in which the developer of a new party store was forced to include a more expensive roof line and brick on the back of the building in order to receive site plan approval from the township board.

Schools OK money-saver

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will close down its central warehouse July 1, and began a joint supply purchasing and storage arrangement with Livonia Public Schools.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education approved the joint warehouse venture by a 7-0 vote Monday night.

The change will result in an initial annual savings of almost $45,000, according to Ray Hoedel, assist. supt. for business.

The venture also will result in a wider variety and higher quality of materials for teachers, added Tom Rose, purchasing agent for the school district.

And the closing of Plymouth-Canton's warehouse could free up classroom space at the middle school level where the crunch for space will hit next year, said Supt. John M. Hoben.

HOEDEL REPORTED that Livonia has been in the warehousing business for 20 years or longer, and has a large facility designed specifically for warehouse use.

Plymouth-Canton started its central warehouse operation by converting two shop classrooms at Central Middle School and adding a couple of portable units.

"Livonia's warehouse is 21,000 square feet compared to our 6,000 square-feet. Livonia also has metal shelves, uses palates and a forklift truck, and maintains a perpetual inventory.

"They order one particular item in enough quantity to last for the entire year, something they can do because they have the storage space. Because of that, Livonia can purchase materials at a much lower price than we can—an average about seven percent cheaper."

As part of the analysis on whether to make the change, Rose studied some 85 items worth $150,000 which both districts carry and found Livonia could purchase those items for about $120,000.

"The catalogue of supplies available in the Livonia warehouse contains many more items than our's," Rose added. "Their catalogue has some 1,600 different items compared to our 400."

Rose said the City of Plymouth, Canton and Plymouth townships could continue to order supplies through the schools as they do now after the joint venture with Livonia begins.

Hoben stressed that more classroom space will be needed next year at Central Middle. "And in the near future we'll need all the middle school classroom space we can get. Right now the enrollment crunch is at the third and fourth grades. When that group of students reach middle school, the middle school population will grow to 4-5,000 and we have a capacity now for only 3,400 students."

Rose said Livonia has unused capacity in its warehouse. "Some other districts have made overtures about joining with Livoinia, but we are the only ones who have entered into direct talks with them. We will be taking up their capacity and I doubt other districts will be getting involved."

Rose added that Plymouth-Canton will parti cipate as a partner with Livonia in warehousing, and that instructors here will be given the same opportunity as Livonia teachers to suggest the types of materials to be stocked.

Rose expects supplies in the warehouse at Central Middle will be almost fully depleted by July 1 and that the district will be ordering almost 100 percent from Livonia at that time.

Movie trivia key for durable matinee host

By C.J. RISAK

What is it that has attracted Detroit viewers for nearly three decades—the man or the movie?

Certainly, the answer is both. For without one, the other could not enjoy the success it has obtained.

Since 1952, Bill Kennedy has been Detroit's afternoon movie host. His show's love affair with Detroiters began with Channel 4. He then moved to Channel 9 in Windsor in 1956, before switching to Channel 50, where he has remained for the past 10 years.

Despite efforts of the rival stations throughout the area, Kennedy has survived the test of time. His Sunday afternoon program draws a 30-35 share of the market, which means 30-35 percent of the televisions are tuned in. (Networks are satisfied if their prime time shows get a 30-33 share).

The Sunday show has remained successful through the challenges of pro football and movies carried by other stations.

"I own Sunday (afternoon), especially when football isn't on. . . .I'm a virtual powerhouse!" Kennedy claimed with a dramatic wave of his hand during an interview Monday. With that he was off, out of the studio and back to his office to search for one of his 250,000 photographs.

THAT IS Bill Kennedy, on screen and off, theatrical in speech and action. It's drew the audiences. The switch never affected his ratings.

"I research every movie and try to not contrived or forced or fake in any way—it's just Kennedy.

His early career had its ups and downs. He started in Detroit in 1936, working as a sportscaster and Hollywood reporter for WWJ radio.

"I worked with Ty Tyson (former Detroit Tiger broadcaster) and did a gossip-type show on Hollywood," he recalled. "And I used to do some spots (commercials), too." Without hesitation, he started singing one of the shorts he had done some 40 years earlier.

In 1939 or '40 ("It's hard to keep dates accurate"), Kennedy moved to Hollywood to seek his fortune and fame. He signed a five-year contract with Warner Bros. with an option clause for seven years. But Warner's didn't pick up the option, so Kennedy went into free-lance work at other studios.

His biggest disappointment came in 1945, when the movie he produced and starred in, "The People's Choice", bombed out. It was such a disaster that Kennedy was forced into bankruptcy.

Seven years later, the movie was bought out of bankruptcy by Adrian Weiss. At the time, movie studios refused to sell films to television because it "threatened their future." That made Kennedy's film a hot commodity—Weiss bought it for $7,000 and sold it to television for $1 million.

Kennedy ended up showing the film he had produced and starred in on his show when he was at Channel 4. "Isn't that a quirk of fate?" he said.

He wasn't down for long, however. His free-lance work continued until he "was saved by television."

He returned to Detroit in 1952 to host the afternoon movie for Channel 4, called "The Afternoon Movie, with your Hollywood Host Bill Kennedy". But Kennedy tired of it, and after two years, he went back to Hollywood to give it one more shot.

He made a number of television appearances, including several on the "Cisco Kid" series and also voiced the introduction to the "Superman" program. He became a news anchorman for a local California television station, but lacking sufficient background to become a "news analyst," he lost the job and finally returned to Detroit in 1956.

SINCE THEN, he has been a mainstay on afternoon television, shown six times a week—seven since September. His jump from Channel 9 to Channel 50 in 1969 proved that it's his analysis and comments on the films he features that respond to what the public wants," Kennedy explained, sitting in his office but still showing the same dramatic flair he had shown in front of the camera minutes before.

"These stills are an integral part of the show. And my question and answer period is dynamite. As far as I know, we're the only ones in the country to do it—and I just stumbled across it five years ago."

He was up and off again, back down the hallway to the studio, holding a number of pictures to help answer viewers' questions.

"See this?" he asked, pointing to a photo he had just pinned on his bulletin board of himself and some obscure singer from the 1950s, who had been the object of a question the day before.

"Who would remember this guy? Well, I do, because of my collection of stills. They really make the phone calls segment work.

"Now what was that hit song this guy did?" he questioned himself, then, in an attempt to answer it, sang, "You got me singin' the blues. . . ."

Moments later, he was on the air responding to the inquiry about the singer. As soon as they cut back to the movie, he was gone again, back to his office.

Though he sometimes appears lost in his own thoughts, Kennedy remains an engaging personality. His easygoing manner makes it easy on the people around him.

Things haven't always gone so well, however. Kennedy in January was involved in a celebrated Grosse Pointe traffic accident. He said his erratic behavior was caused by medication he was taking. He pleaded guilty to impaired driving, and a separate charge of leaving the scene of an accident will be in court later this month.

"HE'S A GEM to work with," says Ruth Whitmore, a former Channel 50 staffer now with WRIF radio. "He's never late, never sick. He forgets a few things, but rarely. And he's no egomaniac.

"The only time he balks about doing anything is if it threatens the quality of his show."

That quality has led Kennedy into minor disagreements with the management concerning the length of his program and the movies he shows.

"I'm always pressing for more time," he said. "You tend to alienate people from a picture if you cut it so you can make comments about it. So my air time is usually shortened."

The movies he shows used to bring criticism from viewers because they were shown over and over again. Kennedy explained he does not choose the films but is consulted when a package is bought.

"We go over it together," he said. "Sometimes a package of 26 or 27 films only has three or four good ones. So they always get my opinion."

As for TV movies of the future, Kennedy cannot see any film holding out for long before being shown on television.

"'Gone With the Wind' was the last big one to fall," he said, then, once again, adding dramatically, "It finally succumbed to the lure of gold, which we all do at some time."

Then it was back down to finish Monday's live show. His Sunday through Wednesday programs are all live, with Thursday through Saturday taped. During a five-hour period Monday, Kennedy taped Thursday's show, took phone calls for Monday's show (part of the telephone question period is taped, allowing Kennedy time to get a picture to answer the question. The picture is then cut into the tape), and taped promos for the 8 p.m. movie.

"I'm very lucky to be doing what I like and getting paid for it," he said about his future. "And I know it. I wouldn't know what else to do. As long as the public enjoys it, I'll keep doing it."

He got some things together for Tuesday's show, put on his overcoat and a blue cap, and headed for his car to drive to his Grosse Pointe home. On his way out, Kennedy was stopped by Channel 50 program director David Simon, who complimented him on his black velvet suit.

Long meetings scrutinized

For one reason or another, Canton Township board meetings are often packed with scores of residents who are interested in a particular agenda item or in township affairs in general.

But because of the late hour at which most recent board meetings have adjourned, the crowds who walk through the meeting hall door at 7 p.m.often are reduced to a few steadfast onlookers by the time the last agenda item is discussed.

Trustee Carol Bodenmiller recognized that problem at last Tuesday's township board meeting and offered what she believes could be a solution to the increasing number of 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. meetings.

Mrs. Bodenmiller suggested that the township board hold four regular meetings a month instead of the three that are currently scheduled. The meetings would be held on first, second, third and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The increased number of meetings would allow the township board to adopt a policy that would require all meetings to adjourn at 11 p.m., Mrs. Bodenmiller reasons.

Under her suggestion, the township board could extend the meeting to 11:30 p.m. by a two-thirds majority vote. Any agenda item that is not discussed within the time limit would be placed on the beginning of the next meeting's agenda.

Mrs. Bodenmiller claims that board members are in no shape to consider important agenda items at 2 a.m. She also believes that the board's marathon meetings are discouraging township residents from attending.

Board members seemed receptive to Mrs. Bodenmiller's idea but wanted to sleep on the suggestion. The matter will be discussed at the board's next meeting on Feb. 27.

Whether it was Mrs. Bodenmiller's doing or the relatively short length of the agenda, Tuesday's meeting adjourned at 10:30 p.m. — the earliest quitting hour for any regular board meeting in the last several months.

Reading skills continue as schools' top priority

Teaching reading skills continues to be a top priority in the learning program of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

That assurance was given the school board Monday night by Mike Homes, assist. supt. for instruction.

But after receiving the assurance, some trustees still had personal reservations about whether the methods and materials used are consistent with the high priority assigned.

THE DISCUSSION of teaching reading in the middle schools was initiated by a request for a progress report by trustee Joe Gray.

In December 1977, at Gray's prodding, the central adminis tration forwarded to middle school principals a re-statement of its commitment to teaching reading skills and promised a full evaluation report to the board in June 1979.

When Gray asked Monday night how the reading program at the middle schools was progressing, Homes responded with a detailed interim report.

But the report seemed to raise more questions and issues than it addressed. And it opened up a wide-ranging discussion with trustees offering their opinions about what was right and wrong about reading instruction here and elsewhere.

GRAY BEGIN by asking the administration to consider whether an entirely new approach was needed for teaching reading.

"In my opinion, we and many other districts have been teaching reading wrong for the past 50 years. I think phonics is the way to go and I'd like the administration to take a close look, with an open mind, at some materials I have to share with them."

Gray said he picked up the material from the Readers Reform Foundation, a non-profit group which has evaluated numerous reading programs, conducted research, and makes suggestions on how non-readers can learn to read through phonics.

"The foundation has a lot of success stories to tell, especially with learning disabled children who have been taught to read within a couple of years and decertified within four years from entering school," Gray added.

Gray questioned whether reading test scores comparing Plymouth-Canton with districts throughout the state really is a measure of success. "If nobody in the midwest can read, than what do the comparision scores really tell us. That our non-readers are better than other non-readers?"

DICK ARLEN, board vice-president, expressed concern that different schools may be going down different roads to teach reading.

"Are we using different yardsticks at separate schools to measure ability to read? Do we have a non-standardization of criteria to determine what's really happening in the individual schools?"

Arlen also noted that the selection of reading materials from publishers by the individual schools varies greatly and asked whether there really was any way to evaluate all the programs. "If 14 schools are using 14 different kinds of materials from 14 different publishers, than there's a problem."

Barbara Telford, director of elementary education, noted that "the selection of material has a lot to do with the learner and the teacher.

"Because individual students learn differently, we must prescribe different programs and materials. I don't see how we can claim to offer individualized instruction without having different materials.

"And we have to be careful. We cannot keep prescribing the same thing because it once was good."

TOM YACK, board president, commented that materials used should in some way be related to the goal-based curriculum system now being used by the district.

"Unless there is some agreement as to where the district is going, than when one school accepts reading materials from a publisher it really is accepting the objectives of that publisher.

"With goal-based curriculum, we should be moving away from that. But I would think we are having a problem offering curriculum training if so many different means and materials are being used."

Supt. John M. Hoben noted that there has been a lot of changes since 1920 which relate to the ability of schools to teach reading.

"In the 1920s, for instance, about 62 per cent of those entering public schools never entered high school. Now about 90 per cent enter high school."

Hoben also noted that the frequency of reading at home was an important influence on a student's ability to learn to read at school. "This is a socio-economic factor that we really cannot control."

Yack also noted the harmful impact too much television viewing has on youngsters, adding that time spent watching TV is not spent reading. "One thing which shows up in research again and again is that the more someone reads, the better they get at reading."

The discussion ended with Gray forwarding his materials to the administration and suggesting a workshop be scheduled to discuss whether phonics is the best way to teaching reading skills.

Beaten wives get group's help

The statistics on domestic assaults in the western Wayne County area make grim reading.

During a two-month period in 1?977, 80 domestic assaults were reported in the city of Livonia.

In a four-mounth chunk out of 1977, Westland police took 112 calls dealing with domestic violence.

Plymouth was luckier. Only 10 domestic assaults were reported during 10 months of 1977.

As of yet, no statistics have been compiled for Canton Township. But one thing is certain. The incidents of domestic violence — spouse abuse — that were reported are only the tip of an iceburg.

Deborah Benjamin, director of a new organization called First Step, said the true number of spouse abuse cases could be as much as five to 10 times higher than the reported statistics. "No one really knows for sure," she says.

Ms. Benjamin is in the process of training volunteers to begin a service to aid the victims of what she calls domestic violence. The organization is less than two months old and is based in Westland.

A Michigan nonprofit corporation, First Step was formed to deal specifically with the victims of domestic assault in the western Wayne County area.

It operates on a year's grant of $24,000 from the city of Westland, but its director hopes to get support from other communities as well.

Ms. Benjamin described the organization to the Canton Township Board of Trustees at a regular meeting Tuesday night. Her aim was to get a pledge of support and a vow of cooperation from the township police department. Her presentation resulted in the desired pledge.

Finding the money to operate First Step, however, is another matter. The organization has made several grant applications.

"We'll probably be offering limited services in about a month," Ms. Benjamin says. She is currently the only paid staff person for the organization. The project will be padded out with the help of volunteers, who are undergoing training.

The goals of First Step, when the program is in full swing, are these:

- Provide 24-hour crisis intervention services delivered by counselors and volunteers, which will also function as a support service to police departments and social service agencies.
- Provide emergency transportation and housing, to be coordinated with the crisis intervention service.
- Develop noncrisis support systems such as individual and family counseling, advocacy, referrals, re-establishment and follow-ups on families.
- Coordinate service witb other community services.
- Develop community awareness of the magnitude of domestic violence.

There are other spouse-abuse centers in the area. Ms. Benjamin says Detroit's center has harbored 91 people since it opened less than two months ago. Of that number, 24 percent were from outside Detroit.

Ann Arbor's program has volunteers going to the homes of people involved with domestic violence (but only in the presence of police officers) and meet victims in public places.

"We of course don't want any of our people getting hurt," she says.

Ms. Benjamin says the program, if it is to be a "quality one," would cost as much as $200,000 a year to operate — and that's without actual shelters.

In the meantime, First Step will be using the services and homes of volunteers to help the victims of spouse abuse.

Business

Zoning ordinances do not require brick on four sides or specific roof styles.

"The guy (coming in for site plan approval) is simply at their (board's) mercy," Kirchgatter said, "it's totally unjust."

THE END RESULT, say many members of the business community, is a climate so adverse that new commercial establishments will stop coming to Canton.

Frank McMurray, insurance agent and planning commissioner, says businesspersons in Canton often must pay higher rents than their competitors in other communities because of the newness of the buildings.

He claims that many Canton businesses have already gone bankrupt because they must charge higher prices to compensate for higher rents or enjoy large-volume sales.

Even though many surrounding communities license their businesses, McMurray and others claim that a licensing ordinance in Canton could be the final straw that would break the business community's back.

Fire destroys home

two years ago. They had just finished remodeling the home, said Ewald, who had lived in Holiday Park Subdivision before buying the Geddes Road home.

The family is living temporarily with former neighbors in Holiday Park. Ewald said his family plans to build another home on the Geddes Road site.

"But we loved that old house," Ewald said. "We wanted something old, and were were renovating it 'back in time.'

"The oldest dog—a Pomeranian—was like a family member," he added. "We had her for 10 years."

THE FIRE added to the heap of bad luck that the Ewald family has experienced during the last month.

On the day of the fire, Ewald said he was worried about his father who was seriously ill in a hospital.

The Ewalds had been left without transportation for three weeks, while they waited for the installation of a new transmission in their Suburban truck. They picked up the repaired vehicle only a week before the fire, Ewald said.

But a few days after the blaze, the truck was returned to the shop because of a bad universal joint.

The morning after the truck was picked up a second time, a car slid on ice in front of the home where the Ewalds are staying and hit the front end of the family's truck.

"It's just unbelievable," Ewald said of his streak of back luck.

The Ewalds are thankful, however, that none of their five sons, who range in age from 8 to 17, were injured in the blaze.

"We do a lot of things together, and the boys went along (to the bowling outing) to keep score," Ewald explained. "But my oldest son wasn't supposed to go. He changed his mind at the last minute."

Businessman blasts proposed licensing law

Editor:

I am writing this letter in protest of the latest ploy on the part of Canton Township officials to cast still another barb at the business community of Canton Township.

When will it all end? It seems as though our elected officials, rather than trying to attract new business into our community, are instead going out of their way to encourage it to look elsewhere in search of a more favorable business climate.

The newly conceived licensing ordinance would, as previously stated, "bar any business from operating without a license issued by the township ordinance department and approved by the board of trustees." It seems as though 1984 isn't just around the corner, it is here now! "Big Brother" isn't only watching, he's walking right through the door!

The proposed ordinance also states that the businessman be required to fill out an application to do business in Canton, stating ownership, scope of business, type of merchandise or service offered and criminal and moral background of proprietor. Isn't it being a bit discriminatory to allow our board of trustees the power to be judge and jury over individuals because of past beliefs or actions? Does our present board of trustees have any skeletons in any of its' closets, or is it totally omniscient?

Bruce Phillips, or present township ordinance officer stated, "Licensing could enable us to inspect businesses to make sure buildings are up to building and fire codes. This could benefit both the business and residents who go into a store. They will know it's safe." If someone is injured in my business establishment, I expect to compensate them with medical relief from my insurance carrier or possibly even hear from their attorney. Will a favorable inspection of my place of business by Mr. Phillips keep me out of court? I doubt it.

I believe the proposed licensing ordinance is another step by our present administration to tie building codes, a sign ordinance and licensing into a common knot; a hangman's noose for existing businesses with free-standing signs. By incorporating a new sign ordinance with building codes and business sight-plan approvals, Canton Township could require older established merchants to comply with new codes, sign and otherwise, simply by finding fault with their buildings.

I'm sure that there are faults with our new township hall, but I doubt that it will be closed down because a toilet doesn't flush properly.

Mr. Phillips also stated that if a merchant was found "conducting a business in an unlawful manner as to constitute a menace to the health, morals, safety or welfare of the public," the license would be revoked. Who will determine what is morally safe? Certainly, I hope, not Mr. Phillips!

Does anyone tell Supervisor Noel Culbert or Trustee Bob Greenstein what type of people to defend in court? If they choose to defend a rapist does anyone condemn them, saying they condone rape or are immoral for defending an undesirable?

Does anyone tell Treasurer Jim Donahue, also a florist, not to sell poinsettia plants at Christmas because the leaf of the plant is poisonous? Everyone knows small children will put just about anything in their mouths.

Yes, the above examples are extreme. However, by allowing our township to adopt such an ordinance, aren't we then opening the door to another Pandoras' Box? Whenever a new law is enacted aren't we then giving up one more freedom? Don't we presently have enough laws and regulatory agencies in this nation, state and township to protect our people from themselves? Usually, when a new law is passed, there is always a sharp legal mind available somewhere to find a loophold to circumvent the new law.

Why kill free competition in Canton Township? Since the federal government became involved in the automobile business, prices have increased due to government regulation. How many people actually use the mandatory seat belts they paid extra for when they purchased their new car? Shouldn't the public have the option to buy what they want to buy and shop where they want to shop? Each time the government becomes involved in something, it always seems to cost the taxpayers money. Increased costs of doing business are usually passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices. If Canton businessmen are burdened with increased costs imposed by government, those costs will then be reflected in the increased cost of their merchandise or service.

Additionally, if the licensing ordinance is adopted and the board of trustees is allowed to limit the types of business allowed, could they not also limit the number of types of businesses allowed? Recently our board denied a request to build another supermarket at the southwest corner of Joy and Sheldon Roads.

One of the reasons given for denial being that Canton already had a sufficient number of grocery stores. Maybe so; but by granting our elected officials this power, aren't we also giving them the power to limit free competition? Aren't we giving them the power to overtly or covertly create a monopolistic situation for certain large monied concerns doing business in our community? By creating such a hypothetical situation, Canton consumers would be paying higher prices for goods and services simply because the desired good or service was the only one available in the area.

Lower prices are usually the result of increased competition, not monopolistic control. What price are we now paying for our gasoline, electricity, natural gas, postal service, telephone and water usage? Who is in control? Just a few! Who allowed this to happen? The government, that's who!

This letter was not written to antagonize our present Canton administration, but like Jim Donahue, I'm "mad as hell!" Get off of our backs and allow the business community to get back to business. Why can't we all, our elected officials, the people of Canton and the business community together work toward the building of a great place to live and let live. Political intimidation is not the answer; cooperation must be our goal.

Editor:

Our past coordinator of the Canton Senior Citizens is not working with us anymore. But I know she has relatives living here, so she will know of this letter which is directed to her.

Thank you, Dale (Hall), for all the extra nice things you have done for us during the 14 months you were coordinator of the three Canton senior citizen clubs.

Thank you for the time you and Dolores (Edwards) visited me when I was laid up with a scalded leg.

Thank you for the extra touches of kindness and consideration you showed to us seniors like honoring the Swartzes on their golden wedding celebration and like the bus trips we took with you while you were still on crutches.

You didn't complain or ask for help, but you were the first one off the bus to make sure our reservations were all in order. While still on crutches, you dickered with the sales person at an apple orchard to get apples for us at an extremely low discount even though you didn't get that discount yourself.

You got a discount for us at the Holiday Inn in Canada. You even got them to refund money to a group who had been there a week previously.

You visited the sick, comforted the bereaved and drew out the most reticent so that they too would have a part in our affairs.

You brought all three Canton senior clubs together, and our lives have been greatly enriched by it. We have made scores of new friends through your effort.

You have shown us that you cared and for this we will always love you. We miss you and wish you were back with Dolores again.

Power keeps open political doors

By TIM RICHARD

Phil Power for governor in 1982? That's the speculation in the outstate Booth Newspapers.

Phil Power as assistant secretary of state for China affairs? That's the rumor in an Oakland county weekly.

Phil Power for Congress in 1980? That's the gossip among some Republicans in the 2nd Congressional District.

"PREMATURE," said Power of the political discussions. "I'm looking at some highly interesting things politically and from the standpoint of business."

Still on leave as board chairman of Suburban Communications Corp., parent of the 12 Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Power was contacted in his new Ann Arbor office, where he said he was "putting to bed" the files of his 1978 bid for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination and Secretary of State Richard Austin's successful re-election bid.

Power ran second in a five-man race in the August primary, taking about 20 per cent of the vote. His campaign was marked by constant questions about his wealth and his lack of visible experience in party affairs.

For years he had been a behind-the-scenes person — involved in the machinations that made Sander Levin state Democratic chairman, a four-figure contributor to Coleman Young's mayoral campaign and his wife's politicking.

SINCE AUGUST, his Democratic Party activity has been more visible.

PHILIP POWER

Commentary

"I'm volunteering in Jamie Kenworthy's campaign for mayor of Ann Arbor," said Power. Ann Arbor is one of the few home rule cities in Michigan which still has partisan elections. The contest is in April.

"With respect to China: I have been there, but it isn't true. I haven't talked to the State Department about a China assignment, and they haven't talked to me," he said.

He referred to a trip there in 1976 with a University of Michigan contingent, including his wife Sarah, a U-M regent.

He was aware U.S. Ambassador to China Leonard Woodcock was due to speak last night in Dearborn but was planning to be out of town and wouldn't attend.

He was involved in a UNESCO conferenece in Paris in December. "We were successful in stopping a Russian resolution. The Russian resolution would set down an internal code to give a legal basis for countries to throw out American correspondents they didn't like and sanction government control of the press," he said.

Power describes himself as "an unofficial observer and activist" in UNESCO matters. Mrs. Power chairs a United States commission to UNESCO.

"She and I and others held a series of briefing meetings for New York Times and Washington Post correspondent types. We got the World Press Freedom Council cranked up to keep a fire under the State Department," he said.

The press freedom issue keeps popping up. Communist and "third world" nations view education as a function of the state and the press as an arm of education — hence as a function of the state. American correspondents continually fight the notion they are tools of the U.S. government.

The battle is constant — thus the efforts to "keep a fire" under the State Department.

AN OCCASIONAL correspondent for the late Chicago Daily News during his graduate student days in Oxford, Power has worried long about the problem.

The Chinese almost dropped him from the visitors list when they found he was a newspaperman. He contented himself with being the husband of a university official in order to make the trip.

When Jimmy Carter was elected president in 1976, Power wrote his reactions about the peaceful changing of the guard from Nairobi, Kenya, where again he was working to beat down the Russian resolution.

County settlement could eliminate 17 agencies

By MICHAEL MATUSZEWSKI

Wayne County's new contract settlement with more than 4,000 union employees could force 1,900 layoffs and the elimination of 17 county agencies.

With the $14 million two-year settlement contributing to an anticipated $14 million 1979 budget deficit, county officials are scrambling to come up with untapped sources of revenue. Because the county's precarious financial position is monitored by the Michigan Municipal Finance Commission, Wayne County commissioners are forced to balance their red ink-stained books.

That means layoffs.

The anticipation of contract-related layoffs is not new. There would have been some layoffs even if the county had persuaded the four locals of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) to accept a three percent wage increase, commissioners said.

A nine percent wage settlement spread over 21 months, coupled with anticipated revenues that will not be forthcoming, will force a new round of pink slips, commissioners and other county officials said.

IN A DESPERATE attempt to avert the layoffs, the 27-member board of commissioners led by Chairman Richard Manning (D-Redford) plans to appeal again to Gov. William Milliken and the state legislature for funding.

It will also increase fees for various county and court services. Marriage licences, for example, will cost more, as will the processing of court files.

The fee increases, according to county spokesmen, could mean $2.5 million annually in new revenues.

In addition, the board of commissioners is counting on at least $4.1 million as part of the governor's proposal to have the state pick up the funding of some mandated court operations. On an annual basis, it would mean a $7.2 million savings for the county.

Manning is also proposing that the state pay all the costs for court-appointed attorneys for indigent persons awaiting trial and 25 percent of the medical costs for indigent patients in Wayne County General Hospital. If that state aid could be expected April 1, it would mean a $6.25 million savings for the county. Annually the county would save $8.5 million, a spokesman said.

"IF WE CAN pull it off," Manning said, "it's zero (layoffs)."

But some doubt that the county can swing that financial package. Milliken has been very reluctant to send any aid to Wayne County without strings attached.

Most recently, Milliken said the state would be willing to pick up more than $6 million in state-mandated court costs — if county commissioners would consent to a radical reorganization of Wayne County government and the circuit court system. "It's almost inconceivable that we'll get none of that," a county spokesman said.

Wayne County hopes are bolstered by a strong showing of support by Detroit's delegation in the state legislature. "They said 'don't bother going to the governor; come to the state legislature first,'" a county spokesman said.

EVEN IF NEW revenue sources are not found, Manning said 800 layoffs could be averted if the board of commissioners could convince the Municipal Finance Commission to allow the county to balance its books over a three-year period.

"I'm an eternal optimist," Manning said of the county's chances before the finance commission, watchdog over local government spending and borrowing practices.

Another county spokesman added, "Frankly we hope that they'll buy it on our good faith efforts to reduce the deficit. This year we reduced our budget $25 million.

"We're getting closer to a true balance position every year," he said.

IF THE COUNTY is stuck with the AFSCME settlement, an aggravated deficit and no new revenues, then new layoffs will be unavoidable, county spokesmen said.

Manning said the layoffs would be effective April 1 with notices going out March 15.

The 1,520 persons employed at Wayne County General Hospital in Westland will be the focus of the new wave of layoffs.

Some officials believe the county could realize the greatest savings by closing the hospital.

Others say the hospital's $52 million budget is nearly offset by annual revenues totaling $43 million. They add the county would still be responsible for more than $5 million in costs for housing indigent patients in other hospitals. One spokesman estimated that the county would save only $4 million by closing the Westland facility.

Marathon bargaining story told

Don't ask Wayne County Commissioner Tom Presnell (D-Westland) about the weekend.

As a two-year member of the county's labor relations board, Presnell and bargainers for financially-strapped Wayne County and more than 4,000 striking county emplopyes caucused and haggled for about 21 hours Sunday. The marathon session resulted in a new contract for the members of four locals of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME).

"The coffee kept getting worse and worse," Presnell said, recalling the session.

And the negotiations kept hitting snags.

According to Presnell, a former United Auto Workers bargainer, two state mediators tried to get Wayne County's bargaining team to accept "unacceptable" contract language.

"They tried to snooker us," Presnell said.

The county commissioner said that mediators Freda Mills and Robert Pizarski wanted county commissioners to retain exisiting contract language. County officials objected, saying they needed "modifications in layoff and recall provisions."

"The mechanism of laying an employe off is so complex that it's almost impossible to accomplish," Presnell said. "The mediator said 'continue the language,' and we said, 'no.'"

Then came the shouting and the arguments. "Cooler heads prevailed," Presnell said, "and when it was all over we all shook hands."

Contrast in leadership

A change in schools since 1918

PLYMOUTH—PAST AND PRESENT
by Sam Hudson

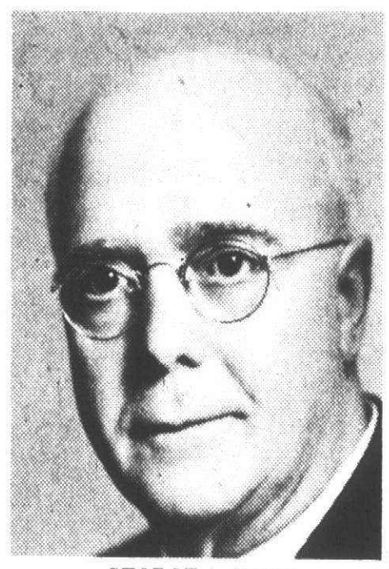
JOHN M. HOBEN



GEORGE A. SMITH

(Part I)

The man who holds the tenure record as superintendent of schools in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools is George A. Smith.

Tenth to hold the job, Smith was superintendent for 27 years, spanning both world wars.

He still is remembered fondly by many in the community who attended school here during that period.

"George A. ran a tight ship," recalls one of his former students.

"He left his mark on the community in more ways than one. Older boys who got out of line soon found out who was boss, especially if they had a session with Mr. Smith in the school boiler room. The blue room we used to call it.

"The teachers knew who they worked for. They had to get Smith's permission if they wanted to leave Plymouth on weekends. He wanted them to be part of the community. And George A. was death on drinking and smoking.

"He wouldn't hire a married woman unless she was the sole support of her family. He believed that married women whose husbands could support them shouldn't stand in the way of single girls who needed jobs."

IN 1918, when George A. Smith came to Plymouth, a school administrator who was not an authoritarian didn't hold his job long.

Smith learned his calling in an era when parents not only approved of discipline in schools, but expected school personnel to resort to force when all else failed.

Smith was a father figure when the term bore nothing but good connotations. In 1922, in opposing the proposed showing of movies on Sunday in Plymouth, he declared:

"I have 800 reasons—all pupils—why Sunday movies should not be shown."

A man of ample girth, in the days before fad diets, cholesterol and polyunsaturated became household words, Smith liked to eat well. Once a year he held a get-together for his teachers at which he cooked and served corn-fritters and syrup.

"He knew I liked to eat, too," remembers another of his students, "so he let me help cook the fritters. I got to eat what was left over."

Like most Plymouthites of his day, Smith was a conservative in many matters, but a liberal in others.

In 1931, a speaker from the House of Correction appeared at the Plymouth Rotary Club and spoke in favor of capital punishment.

Smith took the floor in opposition. During his remarks, he contended that:

"If we remove criminal contacts from the life of the child, crime will disappear."

George A. Smith was a strong influence on the community, on his service club, and in his church. But, like most of us, he also reflected the attitudes of the majority of residents of the community in his day. He was a product of his times.

SO IS John Michael Hoben.

Hoben, the present superintendent to schools, became the 14th to hold position when he was appointed in 1971. If Smith's strong point was discipline, Hoben's is planning.

"If the schools are to survive," he says, "we must have a planned program—and we've got to be accountable."

A mathematics major in college, and a math teacher before he became an administrator, Hoben loves to collect, analyze and publish data on which he and the school board can base decisions affecting the future of the school system.

"Mike is impressive," Plymouth Observer columnist Bill Sliger recently wrote of Hoben. "He sounds more like an IBM executive than your run-of-the-mill school superintendent."

It is just as well.

Because Mike Hoben presides over a different kind of establishment than that with which George Smith and his contemporaries had to contend.

For one thing, society's long-time drift toward individualism has reached a stage where restraint on the individual, in school or out, is no longer popular.

In today's do-it-yourself milieu, a disciplinarian in public education is an anomaly. Post-Spock students and organized teachers do not take kindly to paternalism, no matter how benevolent.

For another, Plymouth-Canton Community Schools has become a big business, requiring an administrator more adept with a computer than a birch rod.

Dietrich opens Lansing branch

Business Briefs

DIETRICH EXPANDS

Norman L. Dietrich Associates, P.C. of Plymouth has established a new office in Lansing.

The firm, headquartered at 107 S. Main St., Plymouth, consists of community planners, landscape architects and civil engineers.

Dietrich, president of the corporation, indicated that the Lansing office will emphasize providing planning and landscape architectural services, particularly to those communities just initiating a planning, zoning or open space use program.

"Our experiences in dealing with developing communities in Wayne County has given us some vital insights into the pitfalls a growing municipality may face."

Dietrich also indicated a concern for the visual development of a community which can be and often is overlooked in the early planning stages.

"As planners and landscape architects we are most concerned about the physical environment which is created in a community."

David Boehm, a Lansing resident and a registered professional community planner, has joined the Dietrich firm and will be responsible for managing the Lansing office. Boehm is formerly the director of planning for Planning Consultant Services, Inc. of Lansing.

Although the office is new to Lansing, Dietrich also is no stranger to the area as he presently is an assistant professor in the landscape architecture program at Michigan State University.

KING OF THE ROAD

Donald E. Wahlberg of Plymouth has been selected as Michigan RV King of the Road in competition sponsored by the Detroit Camper Show.

Wahlberg, 60, has logged an estimated 85,000 miles in 11 years of camping. He and wife Connie have a pickup truck to tow their 31-foot Airstream travel trailor. He is an active member of the Wally Byam Caravan Club International and a member of the Detroit Metro chapter.

Favorite and regular visiting spots for the Wahlbergs are Florida and Cape Cod. When not camping through the U.S., the couple move their travel trailor to a campground at Brighton during the summer months. Last year they spent more than 75 days in their RV unit.

The Detroit Camper Show opens Feb. 16 and runs through Sunday, Feb. 25, at the Detroit Artillery Armory on West Eight Mile Road near Northland Center.

VET ON TV

Dr. Richard Kirchgatter, a Plymouth veterinarian living in Canton, will be one of the featured panelists on the television program "All About Animals" which will be aired at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 20, on Channel 56.

The theme for the program will be "Planned Pethood — The Problem of Pet Overpopulation." The program is produced by Channel 56 and the Southeastern Michigan Veterinary Medical Association. Kirchgatter is a partner with Dr. Cliff McClumpha and the two operate clinics in Plymouth and Canton.

OLDER WORKERS

An older workers program has been started at the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) office at 8825 General Drive at Joy just east of Lilley Road in Plymouth Township.

Mildred Rady and Anna Wilson, older worker specialists at the local MESC branch, have a file on workers 40 and older who are interested in both part-time and fulltime jobs.

"Some are retirees with limited incomes but unlimited potential to contribute," says Ms. Rady. "Many employers here in our community have been pleasantly suprised at the quality of our older workers placements."

Ms. Rady stresses that studies indicate that workers 40 and older may surpass younger employees in a number of ways:

- Workers hired after age 40 generally attain a higher performance rating in a shorter time than those hired before the age of 30.
- Older workers tend to have positive attitude toward work.
- Older workers have a greater job stability and a better record of continued acceptance by employers once they are hired.
- The number of days lost per 100 workdays for all reasons goes down as age increases. Workers in every age group above 50 lose fewer scheduled workdays than those in any age group below 50.

"Contrary to popular belief, older people have not lost the ability to learn. Neither are most set in their ways. They have had to adapt to dramatic changes on the social scene.

"Workers over 40 can offer you the skills, judgment, reliability, and maturity which come from experience."

Interested employers can learn more about the older workers program by calling the MESC branch at 453-3520 or 453-3534.

NEW BRANCH BANK

Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit has opened its first branch office in Northville Township at 41660 Six Mile Rd. near Winchester Road.

The bank now is operating in a temporary facility. Construction is expected to begin on a permanent building within 90 days.

Betty Holmes, who has 22 years experience with Manufacturers, is the new branch manager.

Banking hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays-Thursdays and 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Fridays. The branch is adjacent to the Northville Township offices.

Senior citizen van services announced

The full range of transportation services available to senior citizens has been announced by Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department.

The city now is providing van service to senior citizens, after receiving delivery of the vehicle purchased with federal Community Development Act funds.

Transportation will be provided to and from the nutrition program site at Tonquish Creek Manor Mondays-Fridays.

Senior citizens will be picked up from 11-11:45 a.m. with meals served at noon except on city holidays noted in the city calendar. Transportation home will be between 1 and 1:30 p.m.

Transportation also will be available to doctors, dentists and other professional services in Plymouth and Plymouth Township every Monday and Friday mornings and Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Appointments at the professionals must be either at 9 a.m. Mondays and Fridays or at 2 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Pick up at the medical offices must be by 10:30 a.m. Mondays and Fridays and by 4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Senior citizens are advised to notify their doctors of this schedule so adequate time is reserved for their medical care.

THE VAN WILL take senior citizens on shopping trips to the central business district on Tuesday and Thursday mornings and on Monday and Friday afternoons.

On Tuesday and Thursday mornings, home pick up will be from 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. with pick up for return home at 10:30 a.m.

On Monday and Friday afternoons, home pick up will be between 1:30 and 2 p.m. with pick up in the CBD for return home at 3:45 p.m.

Reservations for all trips on the van must be made by Thursday of the previous week by calling 455-6620.

Plymouth Township extends tax deadline

Plymouth Township property owners who failed to meet the deadline yesterday for paying property tax won't be penalized.

The board of trustees recently extended the Feb. 14 tax deadline to Feb. 28. The board regularly extends the deadline, according to Treasurer Joe West.

This year, however, high interest rates allow investors to accrue a little more income before paying their 1979 taxes.

After Feb. 28, the four percent penalty on the total taxes due, plus 0.75 per cent penalty per month will be assessed to delinquent taxpayers, West warned.

Adults skirting problems of aging parents

By SUSAN TAUBER

There are only a few people signed up for the class "You and Your Aging Parent" offered at Oakland University Continuum Center and the teachers are concerned.

"I have a theory about why people aren't enrolling in this six-week class," said Sydney Reiter. "Talking about this subject opens up feelings of anger and depressions and people don't want to talk about it. My other theory is that if they ignore the problems involved with aging parents the problems will go away by themselves."

Ms. Reiter and her co-teacher, Adele Weaver, are suprised at the lack of response because when they've offered the same class as a Saturday-only workshop, the programs were given to full enrollment and were, they said, "every successful."

"We decided to offer this class over a period of six weeks because people who took the one-day class told us there's so much information that it's hard for them to soak it all in in one day," said Mrs. Weaver.

So the two women, both counselors for gerontology at the Avon Township Continuum Center at Adams and Butler roads, set up the program that begins Wednesday, Feb. 21 and continues through March 28.

From 7-10 p.m., they'll discuss four areas: communication; information about the aging process; community resources; and exploring your own concerns, problems and feelings.

Advance registration is required by Monday, Feb. 19 by calling 377-3033. Continuing education units can be earned. The fee is $55 per person or $90 per couple.

"ONE OF our goals," said Mrs. Reiter, "is to help the adult child be respecting of his or her own needs as well as those of the parent. We'll give information on options of handling an aging parent to help the adult child feel more confident about decisions she has to make."

"This class isn't just for a person in a crisis situation now," added Mrs. Weaver. "It's also for people who are looking ahead so if and when a crises arrives, can make a decision on choices already aware of."

A maximum of 24 people will be accepted into the class to ensure ease of breaking into small groups and applying material discussed that night to individual concerns.

Also, not all of the people in the class need be adult children. They may decide to come, according to the women, because of an old friend of the family they are caring for or because of an aging aunt or uncle.

And though Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Reiter expect most of the participants to be in their 40s and 50s, some may be younger.

"I know some people who are 30 years old who have parents in their late 70s," said Mrs. Reiter.

"Many people think they should know the answers when they are dealing with their parents. They think if they just try harder they can handle things themselves. But when it comes to time to make decisions, they often don't know the choices. In this situation, we'll tell them the choices and give them support for their decisions. Not every decision made is one that will please everyone involved," said Mrs. Reiter.

One of the main areas of discussion will involve communication, not only with the aging parent but with the adult child's spouse, children and siblings.

Often siblings resentment against one another if one feels she's taking on more responsibility for caring for aging parents than the othe. When a son or daughter is caring for a parent in the home, there are problems that may arise between husband and wife and with their own children.

Also, adult children need to understand what their parents are going through psychologically and physically as they grow old. A child may say her mother is coming difficult, stubborn and unsociable when actually the woman ishard of hearing and therefore shying away from social situations.

WITH THEIR experience in working in the field of gerentology and with their own personal backgrounds, Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Reiter have a great deal of empathy and information to share with adult children of aging parents.

Mrs. Weaver has a degree in humna resources development Mrs. Reiter has a bachelor's degree in nursing and is a psychiatric nurse.

"We want to help people explore all the avenues open to them and their aging parents so when the time comes for them to handle a crises or a problem, they won't pull back and do nothing at all," added the women.

A search for leggings

By NANCY WALLS SMITH

2:30 in the afternoon:

"Do you two kids want to go out and play?"

"Yeah, yeah, sure mom, yeah!!"

"OK, let's get your boots and leggings and stuff on. Jason, where are your boots?"

"I dunno."

"Well you had them on this morning with your pajamas. Did you leave them in the basement when you were down there?"

"I dunno."

"Well, go look and see! Jimmy, let me put these leggings on you."

"I don't want to wear leggings."

"Why, Jim?"

"Leggings hurt."

"Aw, come on, Jim. Leggings can't hurt."

"They hurt."

"Let's just put them on anyway. You can't go out with just your slacks on. Your legs will get cold."

"Leggings hurt."

"I know, Jim. Jason, what are you doing in the basement?"

"I dunno."

"You're supposed to be looking for your boots. Remember?"

"Oh, yeah. I'm looking, mom."

"OK. Now, Jimmy, do you suppose you could try real hard this time to put your thumb in your mitten instead of balling your hand up into a fist. It would make things a lot easier on mama. OK, dear?"

"OK."

"That was close. Let's try it again. Open up your hand. Pretend you're waiting for a cookie."

"I want a cookie."

"Not now! I just want to get you kids dressed and out. We'll talk about cookies later."

"Mom, all I could find in the basement was this orange dishpan."

"Jason, why did you bring that dishpan up here? You were looking for boots, remember? They're nothing alike!!"

"I just wanted to know what you wanted me to do with it."

"I don't want you to do anything with it. Where are your boots?"

"I dunno."

"Mom, I have to go to the bathroom."

"Oh, Jim. Why couldn't you tell me that before you got ready to go outside?"

"I thought it would go away."

2:40 in the afternoon:

"O.K., boys, you're all ready to go. Come back in when you get cold. And please don't go to anyone's house. No one's mother wants to spend her afternoon unwrapping you two mummies."

2:50 — a piercing scream is heard from outside.

"What's the matter!!!"

"I got some snow in my eye."

"Is that all? Could you please try not to sound like you've been hit by a car?"

2:55 — a knock on the door.

"Mom, can I go over to Bobby's?"

"No. I told you you can't go to anyone's house dressed like that. It's too much trouble for his mother to get all that stuff off you."

"Then why don't you take it off me and put on my regular coat and then I'll go to Bobby's."

"No. It's too much trouble for me too."

2:58 — the doorbell rings.

"Mom, will you call Bobby's house and ask if it's OK if I come over there later?"

"We'll talk about it later."

3:10 — a piercing scream from outside.

"What's wrong with Jimmy?"

"Linda's not being nice to him. She keeps telling me to throw snowballs at Jimmy and when I do, he starts crying."

"So don't throw snowballs at Jim."

"Oh, OK."

3:15 — Someone at the door.

"Mom, I got grease on my hands."

"That's not grease, Jim. That's snow. Where are your gloves?"

"I dunno."

"Listen, you guys are driving me a little bit nuts. I think you should come in now. I see less of you when you're in the house."

"That was really fun, mom."

Yeah, kids. I don't know when I had a more delightful 45 minutes."

Hurry spring! I don't think I'm gonna make it!!

Witch Watch

by GUNDELLA

Nine of swords means recovery

Dear Gundella: I recently dreamed that I was the person on the nine of swords card of the Tarot.

In my dream, I sat on the bed crying. Nine swords hung on the wall above me. Suddenly I arose and seized the third sword from the top. I broke it in half and went merrily on my way.

I awoke feeling light-hearted and happy, as if a large burden had been taken from me.

Can you interpret this dream for me?

M.C., Garden City

DEAR M.C.: The nine of swords depicts a convalescing person recovering from a long illness or emotional depression. Is this true of yourself at this time?

One interpretation might be that the third sword represents the three of swords, a card which depicts a damaged heart (from either illness or an emotional trauma).

Your breaking of that sword could indicate your determination to break out of this situation and become a well person again.

ONE OF THE world's largest privately held collections of playing cards (including Tarot decks and books) is that of Stuart and Marilyn Kaplan.

Kaplan is president of U.S. Games, Inc., of New York. This company has recently published a magnificent new volume entitled "The Encyclopedia of Tarot."

This book contains photographs of more than 3,200 different Tarot cards from more than 250 different decks. These range from the earliest known decks to the newest 20th century decks.

The diversity of these many decks further illustrates the point I have tried to make here and again: Tarot is a living language; it is continuing to develop every day.

Tarot symbols are adapted to the peoples using them and are altered accordingly. This does not detract from their authenticity, but rather strengthens it, keeping it as alive and meaningful today as it was in centuries past.

Kaplan's encyclopedia belongs in the library of every serious Tarot scholar.

BILL BUTLER'S "Dictionary of the Tarot" (Schocken Books, New York, 1977) lists not only his own interpretations for each Tarot card but also the interpretations of 13 others.

The others include: Case, Crowley, Douglas, G. Dawn, Gray, Grimaud, Huson, Kahn, Kaplan, Mathers, Papus, Thieren and Waite.

These authorities differ greatly in their various interpretations, sometimes to the point of being totally opposing.

None of the authorities is wrong, however. Remember: There are as many interpretations of the Tarot as there are Tarot readers. Each person sees in the cards the message held for him or her at that time.

Next week, I will discuss the interpretation of the Major Arcana Card XVI, "The Tower."

(In June, Gundella will conduct a weekend workshop on Tarot. Enrollment is limited. For information, call her at 427-1072.)

Y to honor 17 leaders

"Women in Perspective" is the theme of the 86th annual meeting of the YWCA of Metropolitan Detroit, Saturday, Feb. 17 at the Detroit Plaza Hotel in the Renaissance Center.

Seventeen outstanding Detroit-area business women will be honored at a 10:15 a.m. reception and champagne brunch. Rita Bell, president of the Detroit Women's Advertising Club, will introduce the honorees, and Erma Henderson, president of the Detroit City Council, will be keynote speaker.

"The women selected will represent the many women who are proving individual initiative and leadership to improve the spirit and quality of life in metropolitan Detroit," said Sara Hill Stewart, president of the Detroit YWCA.

The women to be honored include Mary Ball, executive director of the International Institute; Mary Bell, president and chairman of the Board of Bell Broadcasting; Bess Bonnier, musician; June Brown, columnist; Dr. Sonya Friedman, of Psychological Resources, Inc. and radio and TV personality; Pat Wheelless Goldman, corporate director of the Taubman Co.; and Dr. Jessie Kennedy, director of the Center for Professional Growth and Development of Wayne State University.

Others are Sue Kruczewski, women's athletic coordinator for the University of Detroit; Sister Louise McCoy, executive director of Vista Maria, Dearborn Heights; Nickie McWhirter, columnist; Councilwoman Maryann Mahaffey; Dr. Marjorie Peebles Meyers, Ford Motor Co.; Jane Moeller, First Federal Savings and Loan Association; Claudia Morcum, attorney; Carol Morrisseau, director of Detroit City Dance Co.; Dr. Clara Raven, Wayne County deputy chief medical examiner; and Martha Jean Steinberg, radio personality.

Barbara Consilio, director of children's services in the Juvenile Court of Macomb County, is chairwoman for the YWCA event. Tickets are available at all YWCA branches.

The YWCA annual meeting and brunch is open to the public.

Pursell lands 2 subcommittee posts

U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth) has been named to two subcommittees of the House Appropriations Committee.

One subcommittee shapes the budgets for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Labor Department (HEW-L). The other deals with the District of Columbia.

The HEW-L subcommittee handles budgets totaling $56 billion, second in size only to the defense budget. For that reason, the subcommittee is considered one of the appropriations committee's most important divisions, Pursell said. Pursell's 2nd District includes Livonia and Northville in Wayne County, eastern Washtenaw County and most of Monroe County.

One factor in Pursell's HEW-L assignment was his experience from 1970-76 on the Michigan State Senate's appropriations committee. While in Lansing, Pursell was the only senator to serve simultaneously on all three education subcommittees — higher education, community colleges and K-12.

And breaking with tradition, Pursell was named the ranking minority member on the District of Columbia subcommittee, which reviews Washington's $1.36 billion budget.

Although Pursell received his appropriations committee appointment only last month, Rep. Silvio Conte (R-Mass.), ranking appropriations Republican, appointed the second term lawmaker to the subcommittee. The District of Columbia subcommittee is usually reserved for veteran committee members.

Senior citizen service questions ignite battle

By LYNN ORR

Wayne county commissioners will square off with the Office on Aging today in a battle over senior citizen services in out-county areas.

Commissioner William Joyner, Democrat, Plymouth Township, will call for an audit of the office by the county Board of Auditors at today's commission meeting. Co-sponsoring the resolution with Joyner are commissioners Mary Dumas, Republican, Livonia, and Kay Beard, Democrat, Inkster.

Joyner charges that the department never has been audited since its inception in 1973, a charge that Director Dante Divitto disputes.

Joyner claims that under Divitto's leadership the bulk of senior citizen funding goes to Detroit, with hardly any going to the senior citizens in western Wayne County. Divitto claims that the 70-30 percent ratio of funding applies to federal funds only, as stipulated by federal regulations.

Using 1970 census figures as required by federal guidelines, federal funds are split on the 70-30 percent ratio, Divitto responded.

Divitto says he doesn't understand the call for an audit, maintaining his office is under constant audit. He claims commissioners have failed to contact his office about an audit problem.

JOYNER CHARGES that the county's Board of Auditors were unaware that county funds were forwarded to the Office on Aging and subsequently have failed to perform an audit on the department.

Divitto denies that charge. Politics, he says, are undermining the important work performed by the Office on Aging. He's particularly irritated with the complaint about phone numbers for senior citizen service.

Currently, the phone number on posters advertising the county services for senior citizens is a Detroit number. Joyner charges that out-county residents who call the number are turned away.

Divitto says a new phone number for out-county senior citizens will be made available in the near future on new posters.

He admits that the phone numbers have been a problem, however.

"People are reluctant to dial a Detroit number," he says.

Another charge Joyner has leveled at Divitto and his office involves the Vial of Life program. Joyner charges that 15,000 out of 20,000 of the vials provided by Blue Cross-Blue Shield remain undistributed.

The vials are used to provide health information about senior citizens to emergency workers.

Blaze destroys two businesses

An early-morning blaze that burned off the wooden roof of a Plymouth building yesterday apparently started in a body shop housed in the duplex in the northwest part of town.

Plymouth firefighters were able to salvage some of the contents of the building located at 1405 Goldsmith, home of S&H Collision and Bowen Development Corp.

The wooden roof of the building owned by Leonard Dybus of Plymouth succumbed to the flames, according to Lt. William Groth of the Plymouth fire department. Loss estimates were unavailable until investigation is completed, he said.

Cause of the fire is under investigation, although fire officials believe the blaze started in the body shop. The general alarm, calling for two engines, a squad truck, and volunteers went out at 4:41 a.m.

'King of the Road' honored

A camper from Plymouth and a club based in Livonia are being honored at the Detroit Camper Show, which runs Feb. 16-25 in the Detroit Artillery Armory, Eight Mile west of Northland Center.

Donald E. Walhberg, 60, of 15042 Finch, Plymouth, is "Michigan RV king of the road" after winning the trade show's competition.

Walhberg and his wife, Connie, have logged 85,000 miles in 11 years of camping. They use a pickup truck to tow their 31-foot Airstream trailer.

Their favorite spots are Florida and Cape Cod. In summer, they move their unit to a campground near Brighton Last year they spent 75 days camping.

THE MUDSTOMPERS Chapter 177 of the National Campers and Hikers Association was selected "Michigan RV club of the year."

The president is George Weatherford of 15600 Sunset, Livonia. The group consists of 18 families from in and around Livonia.

According to Camper Show officials the Mudstompers have participated in a number of charitable, civic, youth and conservation projects since organizing in 1970.

Club families have sponsored wheelchair basketball games and donated money so that a terminally ill boy could visit DisneyWorld.

Conservation projects have included piling tree trunks and rocks to stop erosion at Proud Lake State Recreation Area and clearing hiking trails at Maybury State Park, Highland State Recreation Area and the Charles Howell Boy Scout Camp.

Mudstompers have cleaned up a portion of the Huron River near Kensington Metropark and along the roadway of E.N. Hines Parkway.

Their teen camping chapter is called Pud Muddlers 177½. It consists of 15 youngsters who have their own projects and campouts.

Course explores RV mysteries

By LEM MESEE
Outdoors writer

So you've decided to make the big plunge and buy a recreational vehicle — a camping trailer, a van, a motor home or pickup truck.

You have to take care of it, you know.

And there will be problems with an RV that are different from caring for a car. The RV is commonly stored outdoors, exposed to the weather, while your car is in a garage. An RV wheel has a smaller circumference that the wheel of your car, so on a trip it makes more revolutions and suffers more wear and tear.

Schoolcraft College is offering a six-week workshop beginning Tuesday, Feb. 27 called "An Introduction to Recreational Vehicles. It will help new or potential owners of RVs to deal with the mysteries of RV mechanical systems.

The instructor is Ernie Hickman. Experienced RV owners have seen his magazine articles and heard his lectures.

Class hours are 7-9 p.m. in Room 2 of Schoolcraft's Garden City Center at 6701 Harrison. Price is $20 for one or $25 for a family. I would advise enrolling with your wife or one of the offspring. Otherwise, when you're out in the wilds, they will beg off helping you because "you took the course, not me."

Call the college at 591-6400 ext. 409 for registration information.

DOGS OF 125 recognized breeds will pack Detroit's Cobo Hall Sunday, March 11 for the Detroit Kennel Club's 61st annual dog show. More than 3,000 dogs and their handlers are expected.

The show is open to the public as soon as it starts, at 8 a.m. It is a "benched" show, which means you can view the dogs which are displayed on benches throughout the day except during judging.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for senior citizens and youngsters under 12.

FEB. 28 is the deadline to apply for your wild turkey hunting permit. A total of 10,575 will be available statewide. The 1979 season begins in late April and ends in mid-May. The state Department of Natural Resources district office at 2455 N. Williams Lake Road, Pontiac, has applications.

MARCH 1 is the deadline to enter DNR's Michigan waterfowl hunting stamp contest. Winning design will be used on the 1979 stamp, and the top 10 will be part of a floating art exhibit.

Anyone 18 or older and a legal resident of Michigan may enter. For rules and entry blank, write to: Wildlife Division, Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Box 30028 Lansing, MI. 48909.

One tip: Don't use the wood duck, canvasback or mallard. They were used in the designs of the 1976, '77 and '78 stamps. Winners will be announced March 20.

FOUR WINTER programs are on tap at nearby Huron-Clinton Metroparks.

At Kensington on I-96, naturalist Dave Moilanen will lead a two-hour crosscountry ski tour at 9 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 18. Provide your own equipment and meet at the nature center.

A family nature program on "Weathering the Winter" is offered Sunday, Feb. 18 at Oakwoods Metropark in southern Wayne County. Meet park naturalist Glenn Dent at 2 p.m. in the nature center to learn about the daily problems of food, water, warmth and shelter animals encounter. He will have slides and exhibits.

Kensington will be the site of a nature study ski tour at 9 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 24. Naturalist Steve Horn will cover wildlife survival, ice age geology and local history.

Want to learn to identify animal tracks in the snow. Try Kensington's program at 10 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 25 at the nature center. Naturalist Steve Horn will give an indoor introduction followed by an outdoor observation session.

For the Kensington programs, make an advance registration by calling the park office at 685-1561 (Milford). Programs are free, but you'll need to pay park admission of $2 a day for your car or $7 for an annual pass.

Can't meet pollution standards: Detroit

The Detroit Water and Sewage Department says it cannot meet stricter water pollution standards, and it will have to face the ire of state and federal authorities next week.

Federal Judge John Feikens this week ordered a Feb. 22 hearing, the latest installment in a 1½-year U.S. District Court battle to end the pollution of the Detroit River and the Great Lakes. The hearing will begin in Judge Feikens' courtroom at 8:30 a.m.

During the hearing, attorneys for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) are expected to challenge Detroit's contention that the Jefferson Avenue Sewage Treatment Plant cannot meet pollution standards slated to become effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Detroit water department officials say more equipment and a new building to house the new hardware are needed.

Detroit officials say that difficulty in purchasing the new equipment and construction time will mean that the 1980 pollution guidelines will not be met until 1981.

That admission came as part of Detroit's latest plan to bring the massive sewage treatment plant, which services Detroit and 76 suburban communities, into compliance with the beefed-up guidelines.

According to briefs filed earlier this week, the EPA and DNR believe Detroit can meet the 1980 guidelines on schedule without the "needed" equipment and construction.

editorial opinion

Brevity can be beautiful for board meetings

Canton's board of trustees has done an admirable job of letting the public speak at township meetings.

We like to hear a lot of people giving different opinions before the board decides on any issue. We especially like to hear disagreement on the board, because it means that resolutions really are being decided in a public forum.

Governmental units that breeze through agendas with little or no discussion are usually doing their discussing somewhere other than a public meeting. They violate the spirit, if not the letter, of the state open meetings law.

Unfortunately, one of the inevitable offshoots of a growing community is a growing meeting agenda.

A Canton Township board meeting begins at 7 p.m. three times a month, not counting many special meetings. Each meeting—no matter how insignificant the agenda might seem—will last long past midnight.

The long, long meetings create a few problems.

They can be discouraging to the average resident who just wants to see what's going on in local government.

They can force officials to make important decisions when they are fatigued and not thinking sharply.

They can result in important decisions being tabled over and over agian because those issues come up when the hour is late.

Township department heads also bear a heavy load when these meetings last far into the night. Most department heads are required to attend the board meetings, then show up for work early the next morning. They are supposed to get compensation time off work, but somehow never find the chance to take it.

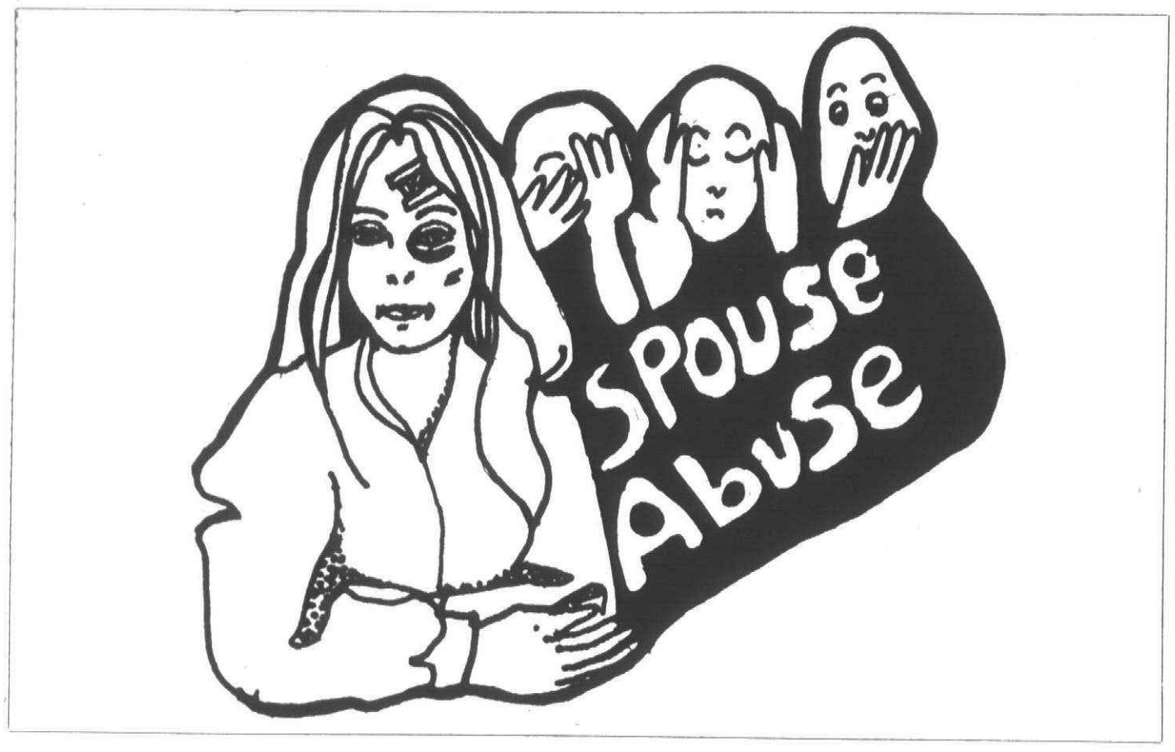
People who work too many hours a day get tired and do not perform as well at work as they would normally.

Although we encourage the board's desire to hear everyone out, we urge members to find a constructive solution to the long meetings. We know they can speed things up, because we've seen the board go through 10 items in a short period of time after spending two hours on the first three agenda items. It doesn't matter what those items are; the first few always take the longest.

One alternative to overly-long meetings was suggested by Trustee Carol Bodenmiller at what turned out to be a shorter-than-usual board meeting. The township board should, she said, hold four regular meetings a month instead of three as is the case now. The meetings would be held the first four Tuesdays of each month.

Connected to that arrangement would be a time limit: Meetings would have to end at 11 p.m. unless a two-thirds majority voted to extend discussion another half hour. Unfinished business would be put at the top of the next meeting's agenda. It makes sense.

There's nothing to be ashamed of if the board keeps a little closer eye on the clock. Sometimes too much of a good thing can be counter-productive.



Take one step at a time

Even a monumental move has to begin with a first step.

A new organization in western Wayne County, known as First Step, is working on programs to offer help to the victims of domestic violence.

There are other programs dealing with spouse abuse, notably in Detroit and Washtenaw County.

What is needed in the western suburbs, however, is easily-accessible help for the person facing the potential or actuality of abuse.

Recently, Canton Township has joined other communities in a pledge of support for the goals pursued by First Step.

Now, all the organization needs is money. For starters, the group hopes to set up a crisis intervention service, provide emergency transportation and housing, and set up community awareness programs.

Eventually, First Step hopes to have a shelter for domestic violence victims.

It's good to see this kind of attention given to a subject that has been shoved into the back closet for so many years. We know now that spouse abuse occurs in even the best of families. It crosses racial, ethnic and economic lines, to reach out and touch the lives of people one would least suspect.

Spouse abuse even happens in communities such as Plymouth and Canton, as anyone who has ever looked at a police blotter would know.

Some women (the usual abuse victims) put up with physical punishment for years before they finally work up the courage to escape. Some women never do escape.

The reason they stay on could be as simple as the fact that they have no place else to go, or as complex as a society that makes a woman feel the abuse is somehow her fault.

Hopefully, an organization like First Step will be able to help these victims out of their terrible dilemmas. It will take cooperation from police departments. It will take support beyond lip service from communities such as Canton.

In short, it means taking a first step of our own—toward understanding.

'Twofer' one policy helps keep Broadway healthy

Have you ever heard of "twofers"?

This is that wonderful service for Broadway theater fanciers. If you're going to New York and plan to see some shows, remember twofers.

What you'll get are two tickets for the price of one — twofer. But that's only on the day of a specific performance. And you must be willing to queue up at a trailer-like structure in Times Square after 3 p.m. on that day.

In fair weather, the lines get pretty long, as you might imagine. After all, getting a pair of seats worth $40 for $22 (including the $1 per ticket service charge) will attract an army of bargain hunters.

Last week my wife and I spent a few days in Manhattan and twice weathered the twofer lines. I say "weathered" because the temperatures were Arctic-like, and winds of 25 mph swept through the theater district.

Happily, our wait lasted only about 15 minutes each time. But that gave us time to look at some of the zanies and Marilyn to be unexpectedly interviewed by a radio man on her opinions of the Lee Marvin fiasco.

ONE DAY WE GOT two excellent orchestra seats for "Da." The next day it was a pair in row K for "Grand Tour."

Both shows are tremendous.

Joel Grey sings, dances and philosophizes his brilliantly talented way through "Grand Tour." But don't take just my word. Time magazine, which is a harsh critic, calls it one of the season's best.

The time is World War II as the Nazi blitzkreig crosses France. It's a musical spinoff of the play "Jacobowsky and the Colonel" and offers everything — great music, dazzling costumes and dancing — all supporting Grey's effortless portrayal of the Polish Jew trying to keep one step ahead of the Germans.

The tiny Jacobowsky finds himself teamed up with a giant Polish colonel and his loyal orderly, also fleeing. Add to this trio the beautiful French mademoiselle Mariann, who plans to marry the colonel, and the Grand Tour is on.

THEY MANAGE TO OUTWIT the jackbooted storm troopers mainly through Jacobowsky's deft thinking. They join a traveling circus at one point — and that ends in a hilarious sequence and a mad scramble of escape.

Then there's the about-to-happen Jewish wedding, but the rabbi has fled and there is no one to pronounce the vows. Jacobowsky, who admits his father was a student of the Talmud, is pressed into service as "half-a-loaf" rabbi.

The story line reminded me of "South Pacific" and its sub-plot about discrimination. Beneath "Grand Tour's" colorful action is that thousands-of-years-old story of the Jews' flight from oppression.

THE PALACE where "Grand Tour" plays is a nine-iron shot from the Morosco, which houses "Da." The two offerings are light years apart.

Barnard Hughes is Da. You may remember him as "Doc" in the television series of the same name. The story begins shortly after his funeral. His son is busy closing the family homestead.

Da returns as the spirit of the Irish father he was. In a charming way he refuses to exit the life of his grown son, who is infuriated. Hughes is warm and witty. In the flashbacks with his late wife, he is a Casper Milquetoast.

His brogue is so perfect that it's difficult at times to catch his exact words, although the meaning always comes through.

The son complains to Da that he never stood up to his wife when she obviously was too strict or displayed provincial ignorance. Da lets these darts zip past him, and they fall harmlessly to the floor.

It takes the son a long time to realize his father really loved life and preferred calm to conflict.

This show is full of good Irish humor, but there is real pity when Da remembers his last earthly conversation with the son. Da becomes confused and calls for his wife, dead more than two years. The tears flow.

Da is an evening of fine entertainment.

NOW, IF IT'S FLUFF you seek, you can catch, as we did, a performance at the 46th Street Theatre of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." Unfortunately, we missed the twofer deal on this one and had to go full fare.

You would think, with this title, here is a show long on backroom humor, featuring a brace of beauties. Well, scotch that thought.

There are the ladies of Miss Mona's Chicken Ranch (so named because during depression days rural customers often paid with live poultry from the barnyards). But the women play minor roles.

The star is sheriff Ed Earl Dodd, who through the years has upheld the law in his county — and kept watch over the Chicken Ranch. Ed Earl is in love with Miss Mona in a standoffish, Texas-he-man sort of way.

Along comes a do-good television personality called Watchdog. He "shines his light" on the Chicken Ranch, and from then on it's all down hill.

WATCHDOG PRODS nervous politicians: "What are you going to do about the Chicken Ranch?" They sidestep the issue. As Watchdog gathers his dirt, he tangles with Ed Earl Dodd on the courthouse steps. The TV cameras record everything, and the sheriff comes out second best.

After a lot of singing and dancing, Ed Earl is ordered by the governor to close the Chicken Ranch. The girls depart one by one.

Miss Mona and Ed Earl are the last two left. You sort of hope that he'll propose marriage and the pair can settle down as a middle-aged couple.

But the sheriff can't find the words and off he trots, leaving Mona a sad, solitary figure.

One of this show's features is the country and western band which plays from center stage throughout the fun. Even if you don't care for good-ol'-boy music, the way this group does it has your toes tapping.

THESE THREE SHOWS are among the 25 productions which currently keep Broadway marquees brightly lit.

Add to that total 19 off-Broadway and 53 off-off-Broadway stage offerings, and it gives an idea of the vigorous health New York theater presently enjoys.

And in closing, let's hear it for the twofers, which surely help.

Employers can tap school, MESC to fill many jobs

Employers in Plymouth and Canton who have problems finding reliable temporary or part-time help likely may not be taking advantage of available resources in the community.

There are at least two major resources which should be tapped when you're searching for part time or temporary employees—the job placement office of Plymouth-Canton Community School District and the older worker specialists employed locally by the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC).

These two sources are not duplicating services—the schools' job placement office has a pool of young people entering the work market for the first time; the MESC new older workers' program has a pool of persons 40 and older to offer employers.

THE JOB PLACEMENT office operated by Plymouth-Canton Community School District is located in Plymouth Canton High School.

A lot of employers already are making use of this service, but not everyone is aware of the opportunities.

The advantage of dealing with the job placement office is that the staff maintains a list of current applications of young people presently searching for work—not job hunters of six months ago or more who no longer are in the market.

In January, for instance, the office had on file 52 current applicants. Of these, 41 were still in school, and five were recent graduates.

During January the job placement office identified 32 job openings, made 84 referrals, and found jobs for 28 young people. Of these placements, 23 were part time, two were temporary, and three were full time.

That record shows a lot of activity and success for the job placement office. It's an activity employers should take advantage of.

JUST RECENTLY another service has been added for local employers by the MESC, 8825 General Drive at Joy Road, just east of Lilley in Plymouth Township.

The MESC has started an older workers program and has a file of persons 40 and older who now are in the market for part-time and full-time jobs.

Mildred Rady and Anna Wilson, older worker specialists for MESC, stress that job seekers age 40 and older are "mature, dependable, experienced and anxious to prove that the 'work ethic' is still very much alive."

The specialists also stress that experience does not support the myth that older workers are less capable than younger workers. "Studies indicate that workers over 40 may even surpass their younger counterparts in a number of ways."

The MESC, like the schools' job placement office, does not charge a fee to either the employer or to the job-seeker.

Another source which shouldn't be overlooked is the Observer Classified Section—a real marketplace where buyer and seller, job seeker and employer, meet twice a week to swap information and conduct transactions.

In case you doubt the real activity which takes place in classified, just check out the "help wanted" and "work wanted" classifications in today's section.

FINDING THE right person for the job you have open can be very frustrating. The search itself is a science as well as an art.

But make it easy on yourself. Take advantage of the resources right in your own backyard.

Contact Ms. Rady or Ms. Wilson at the MESC at 463-3520 or 453-3534, or Joyce Willis at the schools job placement office at 453-3100, ext. 354 or 386.

So try one of these resources. You may reduce frustrations while increasing operating efficiency and increase annual profit. It's worth a try.

Volunteering breaks log jams

By William C. Nichols Ed.D.

Volunteering is one of the most productive things that we can do to enhance human relationships.

You do something for the other person because you wish to do it. They don't have to ask you to do it. You don't ask for anything in return.

Volunteering means deliberately doing things that are helpful or pleasing to another person without being asked.

Volunteering takes many forms. Telling your friend that you appreciate your friendship is volunteering. Offering to share some of your spouse's workload is volunteering behavior. Telling your child that you think he or she is "a pretty good kid and I like having you around" is volunteering.

Volunteering is different from several other kinds of behaviors. It is different from "doing a favor" for someone else. Doing a favor implies an obligation on the part of the other person.

USUALLY FAVORS are done because we are asked. Someone requests, perhaps begs, us to do something. We can be condescending or gracious, but we are owed something in return, and we have done it because we have been asked to do it.

It's different also from a straight bargain approach. If we're entering into a bargain, we're doing "something for something." This is a quid pro quo arrangement. I do this for you in return for that from you.

Both doing favors and entering into explicit bargains are part of most human relationships. They are necessary and helpful at times.

Volunteering also is quite different from "doing your own thing." To paraphrase, "You do your thing and I'll do mine and if we meet it's beautiful" is hardly the same as looking for ways to help or please another person. Whatever potential it may have for individual enhancement, it offers very little for helping a human relationship to grow.

Again, the key thing with volunteering is that we do something because we wish to do so, without being asked, and without making any request for something in return.

WE MAY NOT volunteer something for entirely altruistic reasons.

Motivation generally is mixed. Our reasons for doing something may well be an amalgam of altruism and selfishness. We may not be conscious of major factors in our motivation.

Sometimes, however, the origins of actions may not be as importatn as the actions themselves in producing an outcome.

Volunteering does have risks. Our efforts may not always turn out positively. Oters may not understand them.

For one thing, they may not be accustomed to receiving things "with no strings attached." They may look for the gimmick or the "hooker" in our action.

The other person may not greet our actions with pleasure and gratitude. If that's the case, perhaps our efforts were ill-advised. Perhaps our motives need some more examination.

Perhaps we have not used the best possible judgment. We may have made them feel uncomfortable because we have overdone it with our actions.

Sometimes the other person may take our volunteering for granted. If they continue to make a "regal response"—i.e., to act as if they have a royal right to have the mud puddle covered by our coat—the volunteering isn't helpful. It is enhancing the self-centeredness of the other and not the relationship between the two of us.

WHERE THERE ARE rewards from volunteering, they may be either direct or indirect.

At first or at other times, the other person may not notice what we have done. This lack of awareness may be for a variety of reasons, including their preoccupation with other matters.

When they do notice, others frequently begin to respond in kind. When they become convinced that we did something primarily because "I thought you might like it and I wanted to do it," many persons become infected. What they have received makes it possible for them to begin their own volunteering behaviors.

They may begin to "stick their necks out" and risk doing something without asking for something in return in the relationship with us and/or in relationships with others.

Volunteering has some potential for resolving impasses in human relationships. Some relationships are stuck and unsatisfactory largely because the participants are each waiting for the other to move, to do something constructive, to be giving.

Volunteering can be like removing the key logs that are holding a logjam together. Removing first one key log and then the next leads eventually to a breakup of the log jam. Things begin to flow and to move satisfactorily.

Just as breaking up a log jam is not without risk, so working to resolve impasses in human relationships is not without risk. But each action has the potential of reward.

Ask the Educator

Learning disability?

JOSEPH HADDAD

QUESTION: My daughter is in the sixth grade, but is only reading at fifth grade level. Her teacher tells me not to worry, but I do.

I just know she has the ability to do a lot better if she would try harder or if she were taught differently. Do you think she sounds like she is learning disabled?

Mrs. R. L.

ANSWER: The chances are that your daughter is not learning disabled. This term is very much overused nowadays.

Every child with a learning problem is not necessarily handicapped. Perfectly normal children sometimes have difficulty living up to our expectations.

It may be that your daughter is learning just fine in relation to her basic ability. If so, then she should not be made to feel unsuccessful or a failure.

Talk again with your daughter's teacher. Ask her to seek the opinion of the builidng reading speciaist. It is OK for you to ask for a second opinion in this way. You do deserve to be reassured in this matter for your own peace of mind and for your child's sake.

IF SUCH a reading diagnosis has not been done in the last year, it should be now. Unrealized potential or learning problems interfering with your daughter's progress should become apparent.

If the classroom teacher and the reading specialist suspect a learning disability they will discuss with you a referral for a special education diagnostic work up.

The chances are, however, that this is not the case. Less than five percent of the school age population have learning disabilities. Many, many more do have what might be called normal problems in learning.

I believe that it is all right for you to encourage your daughter to try hard in school and to always strive to improve, but be careful not to make a healthy normal child who is average feel a failure by setting unreachable goals for her.

A reading achievement level that is within a year or so of grade level is not at all abnormal for youngsters with average ability in the sixth grade.

(The writer is director of special education in a suburban school district.

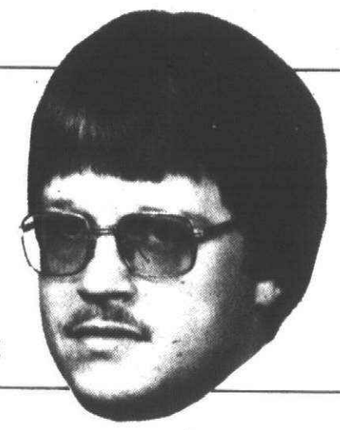
The Bottom Line

Missed savings

By RONALD G. LOISELLE



There are three major areas of allowable business-connected income tax deductions that the small business owner may overlook: child care, the home office, and automobile expense.

Child care is an area you cannot afford to ignore, because the laws, now more liberal than ever before, allow many working parents to claim the credit.

Even part-time workers now are eligible as long as the child care payments do not exceed the salary of the lower paid spouse.

Also, if the spouse is disabled or a fulltime student, a partial credit is available even if there is no income from that spouse.

Another important feature of the new regulations is the possibility of paying a non-dependent parent for the child care. It is now frequently allowable to pay a relative, such as a grandmother, for child care. There are limitations and restrictions, of course, so you should determine which expenses are allowable.

THE SECOND AREA is the home office.

Because so many small business owners handle a variety of paperwork at home, tax deductions in this area can add a great deal to income by reducing tax liability.

Tax law says that a business owner operating his business away from home may claim a part of his household expenses as a business deduction if it is necessary to maintain additional facilities at his residence.

If a room set aside for business use is actually being used only for business purposes, and the use of the home facility is required in the case of an employee, or necessary in the case of a self-employed individual, you may be able to deduct all direct expenses such as a telephone, office supplies and equipment, and apportion other costs such as rent (or depreciation), heat light, etc.

You may, again, need professional help to determine just what is allowable.

THE THIRD TAX deduction concerns your automobile.

The cost of operating an auto for business purposes (but not for commuting between your home and place of business) is deductible.

There are two ways to compute this deduction. The "actual method" involves keeping accurate records of all expenses — depreciation, gas, oil, insurance, etc. The "mileage method" allows a standard deduction for every mile driven, with parking fees and tools itemized separately. Mileage is not allowed, however, if accelerated depreciation has ever been used on the car.

If you keep proper records, you can compute the deduction both ways at the end of the year and choose the most advantageous.

The important thing is to be prepared. Maintain a clear and complete set of records and organize all your activities during the year so that your income at year-end will be taxed at the lowest possible tax rate.

Auction help is thanked

Editor: On behalf of myself and the members of Plymouth Area React Team (PART) I want to thank the many community-minded people and businesses which so generously donated to our first annual public auction.

PART has been struggling for finances and manpower since incorporating in 1977. This auction has helped greatly towards our operating and equipment costs.

The brains behind this endeavor was James Crockel, our entertainment officer. He conceived the idea, planned all phases and with the assistance of his wife, Bonnie, saw that each last detail was carried out perfectly.

We especially thank George Ferris, our unpaid auctioneer, Driesback and Sons Cadillac for a beautiful 1972 Cadillac, Don Massey for a 1971 Cadillac, Randazzo Tuxedos for that touch of class, and all the area businesses and individuals who gave so freely of their merchandise, services and time. We greatly appreciate your help.

PART monitors emergency CB Channel 9 from its central base station in the Plymouth Hilton Inn, and our concern now is more manpower. If interested, call 464-6907 or 453-7377.

Why we enjoy insults

By JACK BOLOGNA

Advertisers are said to spend $10 billion a year on prime time television convincing us we are less than we ought to be.

They brazenly encourage us to put ourselves down by suggesting we have bad breath, dirty teeth, body odors, drink the wrong beer, wear the wrong clothes, use the wrong toiletries, invest our money with the wrong financial institutions and wash our clothes with the wrong soap.

Why we are even accused of maintaining smelly houses!

IF YOU INVITED a friend over who insulted you in your family room as often as TV commercials do, you would quickly end that friendship.

And yet we allow advertisers to insult us and put us down a hundred times a day.

Why do we allow ourselves to be so ill-treated? Are we all masochists? Do we enjoy being put down?

Dr. Sidney B. Simon in his book "Negative Criticism" suggests we accept all this abuse because we have been conditioned by our society to accept the notion that all criticism is bound to be good for us. We think it makes us more mature.

Being grown up means having the ability to absorb all sorts of critical jabs and cheap shots. It's almost as though we believe the more pain we inflict on ourselves through self-put downs or the put-downs of others, the better it is for us.

And the advertisers know it too. They orchestrate it for us on TV. They make us feel so insecure that we take it personally and feel it deeply enough to run right out and buy their products.

BEING PUT DOWN by others is painful enough, but our own self put-downs probably do more damage to our sense of worthiness.

How can you feel good about yourself when you spend the day reminding yourself a hundred times that you're too: fat, thin, tall, short, old, young, weak, muscle bound, clumsy and homely; or that you are not good at math, art, writing, reading, chemistry, remembering names; or that you feel awkward about speaking in public, meeting new people; or that you are not a very good cook, housekeeper, conversationalist, etc.?

Try making your own self put down list this week. You will be surprised at how quickly you can find your flaws.

Then try to write a build up list: the things you do really well; the things about yourself you are really proud of.

Research shows it will take almost twice as long to identify the same number of personal strengths as it does identifying your weaknesses.

IT SEEMS TO be part of our cultural heritage to put ourselves down, probably because of some misbegotten notions we learned about humility.

While we dislike braggarts and are trained or taught to despise them, the opposite end (self-deprecation) may be just as bad.

Humility doesn't mean becoming a doormat or accepting everyone's barbs gracefully or hanging your head low.

Humility is appreciating and respecting yourself for what you are and for what you can still become. It means fairly and honestly assessing your own competencies, virtues and interests.

The problem for most of us is that we fall into the habit of self-deprecation and devaluation and once in that trap, we tend to overlook or discount our talents, our strengths and our good qualities. That leads us further and further into the abyss of self-pity and self-destructive behavior.

The VIEW from 461 SOUTH MAIN

by ELLIE GRAHAM

RECEIVED A NOTE from Lou Straub who is chairing the 50th class reunion for the Plymouth High School class of 1930.

He says the date has been picked—June 14, 1980.

He wrote: "I have been busy getting the "packet" together which had to be sent to all the classmates. I finally located 11 teachers who were on the staff then (1930), quite amazing, I think.

"We are getting good results so far from the packets. So far the indication is that the June 14 date is running about 2-1 in favor of the 14th.

"I have written to several classmates living in Plymouth wanting information, but they don't answer their mail."

He went on to list Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stevens (Helen Edwards), Frederick Shear of Ann Arbor, and Blake Fisher of Livonia as those who did not respond. If anyone can supply the missing addresses we'll be happy to forward them to Lou. Or, you can send them to him at 2308 Winton, Speedway, Ind. 46224.

"have located Clare Lyke, Claude Rocker, Irene Anderson and Arthur Moe," the letter continued. "Does Margaret Dunning still live in Plymouth? Could you give me her address, please.

"I guess I'll have to drop the identity of our school, nobody is behind me—except Wendell Doubt, class of '27."

When the Straubs were here in the summer, they were saddened by the fact that Plymouth High School no longer existed in name. It was Canton and Salem high schools. He decided it would be a worthy class reunion project to revive the name Plymouth High School for one of the new schools.

"I have several classmates who are really going all out for the reunion, really enthused, gives me a big lift."

He also mentioned the fact that after three years of hard work and a lot of writing and re-writing, he has finally finished his manuscript entitled "We Walk Alone." It is being published by Doubleday, New york "if we can get together."

WHILE SURVEYS and discussions about junk and competitive foods continue, a group of fourth graders decided to something about it.

Students in Duncan Lewis' fourth grade at Field Elementary School voted to forego the usual candy, cookies and cupcake treats at their annual Valentines party. They opted for nutritional foods instead.

So the mothers were not baking upa storm for the party. They prepared fresh fruit and vegetables—the students' choice.

FAT BOB, the singing plumber, is honorary chairman of the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council's cookie sale this year. He came out to Plymouth Salem High School to sing Girl Sscout cookie songs with 600 area scouts.

And he invited the scouts to visit him during his 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. stint on WAAM radio in Ann Arbor.

Junior Troop 216 accepted the invitation. Twenty-five scouts went to the radio station on Packard Road and received a royal welcome. There would have been 25 scouts but two were sick, one had a dental appointmnet and another moved to Clarenceville School District.

The scouts sang the Girl Scout cookie songs, live, over the air. They sang Girl Scout cookie songs which were taped to be played later. They were taken on a tour of the station.

Twenty-five Girl Scouts and their mothers, who chauffered them to Ann Arbor, came away convinced that their honorary cookie chairman was the greatest.

If you tune to 1600 on your AM radio dial you might hear some young voices singing "Girl Scout cookies, Girl Scout cookies, Yum, yum, yum, yum yum yum, Eat 'em by the dozen, eat 'm by the dozen, They're all gone, they're all gone."

The tune will be "Frere Jacques" and words will be those owritten by the Hiking Hippos Patrol of Junior Troop 216, that meets in Allen Elementary School.

EXTENDED SCHOOL year (ESY) may be responsible for fostering hobbies that would never have blossomed on a regular schedule.

Erik Kleinsmith, 12, a student at Pioneer Middle School, spends his ESY vacations writing and producing marionette plays. Using a stage he helped design and his father built, he took his show to Isbister Elementary School on Valentines Day.

He and his marionettes performed "The Treasure" for kindergarten and first grade parties.

Erik makes good use of his year 'round schedule to write scripts and design scenery as well as record the voices of the characters. He keeps in touch with a local puppeteer for advice.

Lending his marionettes and assisting with the manipulation is Brad Bloomhuff, a classmate at Pioneer. Brad helped write and produce another play, "Practice Don't Make Perfect but it Helps."

The boys have put on their shows in other schools and at birthday parties in the Plymouth-Northville area.

The 'play's the thing' for some Canton women

The play's the thing these days for a number of Canton Township women who have been spending a good many of their evening hours rehearsing in a Bird School kindergarten classroom.

Judy Kammeraad has the role of Mother Martacloy in "Pegora the Witch," a children's drama which will be presented the weekend of Feb. 23-25. It will be the 19th annual children's play presented by the Plymouth branch of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Kammeraad dons a tall black hat and flowing robes for her part as the head witch. It is she who comes up with the dastardly plan to kidnap the seven daughters of King August and Queen June.

Donna Rennolds is Friday, one of the threatened princesses. The seven princesses are named after the seven days of the week and Pegora proceeds to princess-nap them in chronological order.

CATHY FIFE plays Quig, one of three wizards summoned by the royal couple to put an end to the crimes. The wizards, in plumed hats and blue robes spangled with gold and silver moons, are no match for Pegora's spells. She continues the princess snatching under their very noses.

Esther Nelson and Ruth Davis are the palace guards, also futile in their efforts to save the girls. Donna Rennolds and Esther Nelson are doubling up in their responsibilities. Besides acting roles, they are in charge of costumes.

Mable Partain is in charge of posters. Camile Zornow is chairing the Feb. 22 benefit performance.

Laurna Badendieck is directing the cast of 21 members. She has been associated with the children's plays for several years. She directed "Cinderella" for the group. Sherry Brown, another Plymouth resident, is assistant director.

Sylvia Rozian, in bejeweled crown, fur-edged jerkin and blue satin doublet, has the role of King August. He and his queen, June, played by Coralyn Riley of Livonia behave in true fairy tale style as Pegora kidnaps their daughters, one by one.

THOUSANDS of children have had their first taste of live theater at the AAUW plays. They were originated to fulfill a community need--the lack of live drama for youngsters between the ages of 3-9.

Over the years, there have been some repeats. This will be the club's premiere performance of "Pegora the Witch," written by Carol Lynn Wright. It was first performed in 1963 by the theater department of Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

"Pegora" has all the ingredients for a successful AAUW play. Young audiences will have an opportunity to share the excitement of the action. They will groan over the foolishness of the wizards and Thropplebrock. They will be "in on" the Jester's plan to outwit the witches. And they will sigh in relief at the happy ending.

It is full of surprises, colorful costumes, and there is never a dull moment.

PEGORA, the apprentice witch, is a lovable character. She has none of the attributes of a nasty witch.

When Mother Martacloy hears that Pegora has made a contribution to the Orphaned Children's Home, she pays her a visit and demands she give up her broom.

The head witch and her attendants groan when Pegora cheerfully offers them hot muffins, fresh from her oven. Pegora begs for one last chance and Mother Martacloy says she has to kidnap the seven princesses or she's through.

The excitement starts with a series of amusing blunders on the parts of those supposed to protect the girls.

Tickets can be purchased in the Plymouth-Canton schools Feb. 13-15. After that date, tickets will be sold only in Del's Shoe Stores in Plymouth and Northville: Tickets are $1.

Phyllis Johnson and Jan MacCleod are handling ticket sales in Plymouth. Cheryl Holmberg is chairing sales in Northville and Carol Draveling, 525-3889, in Livonia.

Performances are scheduled for 7 p.m. Feb. 23; 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 24; and 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 25, in Plymouth Salem High School auditorium, Joy Road west of Canton Center Road.

Nutritious lunches dumped for candy

BY SHERRY KAHAN

"I've watched students get off the bus, take their nice brown bag lunch and drop it in the nearest container. Then they go to the nearest candy machine for their breakfast. They don't buy one bar, they buy two or three."

As a janitor at Stevenson's High School in Livonia, Eva Mesh found these eating habits hard to take. She wanted to tell someone about the substitution of junk foods for good food brought from home.

That was why she was seated in the first row at the hearings on non-nourishing foods sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. She was hoping to tell her story directly to Carol Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture, who sat in front of her on the platform together with several aides.

Testimony had been invited by the department on whether it should restrict the sale of candy, pop, frozen desserts and gum in schools taking part in the national school lunch program. They are labeled by the department competitive foods, because they compete with the nutritious Type A meals subsidized by $3.2 billion in federal funds. Under the department's proposed regulation last April, these items could be sold after the last lunch period.

BUT MRS. MESH had been late in signing up to speak. More than 80 parents, educators, administrators and representatives of the the soft drink and vending machines industries were there ahead of her. But while waiting for the event to start, Mrs. Mesh had a story to tell to underline her point about junk foods.

A Stevenson girl once approached her to ask for help. She had thrown away her lunch without remembering that her wallet was in the bottom of the bag. With Mrs. Mesh she went to the trash container and together they opened every lunch that had been tossed away so cavalierly. The girl's lunch was at the bottom.

The experience was a real mind-boggler to Mrs. Mesh.

"You can't believe the waste," she said. "All those oranges, apples, carrots, celery, ham and roast beef sandwiches thrown away. They even threw away money that was in the bottoms of the bag. We found about $5.

"Every now and then some of the students will tell me they have a headache. I ask them what they had for lunch and they tell me it was a candy bar. And they wonder why they are sick."

THE HEARING PROVED to be an emotional battle between the sweet and anti-sweet partisans, who applauded for the speakers who agreed with their thinking.

Those favoring the ban on sweets claimed it was confusing to children to have good nutrition stressed in the classroom and then have junk foods sold in the cafeterias and halls.

On the other hand, spokesmen for the soft drink industry questioned the right of the federal government to butt in on the issue. Calling pop "a pure and wholesome beverage," Douglas Graham of the Michigan Soft Drink Association, said a ban on soft drinks would be discrimination. "There is no valid research showing soft drinks are harmful if consumed moderately," he added.

A Livonia dentist, Dr. Michael Weisenfeld, had a differing opinion. "We know sugars are harmful to health," he maintained. "They cause tooth decay and gum disease. We also know that the more frequently a person eats sweets, the more rapid the decay."

In an interview after the hearing, he said soft drink representatives approached him after his testimony and questioned him about the medical evidence on sugar. He told them there is scientific proof that any sugar taken in from a soft drink stays in the mouth a long time.

"The sugar is converted into acid by bacteria," he said, "and we can measure for a long period of time the decay caused by the bacteria."

In his testimony, Weisenfeld, president of the Detroit District Dental Society, noted that the American Dental Society is so concerned about harm to the teeth caused by sugar that it is actively striving to have pictures and references to confections deleted from textbooks.

ANOTHER POINT made by soft drink representatives was that depriving students of pop meant they were being deprived of their right to learn to make their own choices.

Esther Shapiro, director of Detroit's Consumer Affairs Department, found fault with this kind of thinking. If given the right to make all their own choices, students would ask for marijuana and contraceptives in vending machines.

To which Maryanne Mahaffey, president protem of the Detroit City Council, added another point. Students are not given given free choice of curriculum, she said, nor are they allowed to decide whether or not to have crossing guards.

"That doesn't deny them their liberty," she said. "They should be protected from second class food that causes their teeth to rot."

The role that money plays in the sale of sweets was emphasized by the director of school services for the Toledo schools, Edward Goodman.

"The Toledo system offers its students a full line of snacks including sweets in vending machines," he said, "with the money going to the lunch program."

He added that good causes are supported by the sale of candy in school stores.

When questioned about the amount of judgment young children have about their purchases, he stated: "I am not involved nutritionally. I see myself as an administrator. I don't get involved in what's good. For us to tell the students what they can or can't do is going pretty far."

The Detroit school system has a greatly different nutrition philosophy, according to Mike Dinan, who has a job similar to Goodwin's. Assistant director of Detroit's food services, he urged that the four sweet foods not be sold in competition with the type A lunch.

"Candy, gum, pop and frozen desserts have never been allowed in the Detroit schools at any time of day," he said. "I hope they never will be. For some of our students, the only nutritious meal they get all day is the school lunch. Not to ban the sweets would be a tragic mistake."

IT IS COUNTER productive, noted Janice Rolnick of Farmington Hills, for the government to provide nutrition programs and nutritious meals while at the same time allowing foods of low nutritional value to compete.

A member of her local school board, Mrs. Rolnick stated: "The selling of junk food in vending machines in an educational setting conditions youngsters to believe that such products are conducive to proper dietary patterns."

Sniping at those who would sell junk foods for profit, she added: "Profits from the sale of competitive foods should not infringe upon the nutritional well-being of students. I refuse to believe that parents, students, teachers and administrators are so uncreative that they cannot think of another way to earn money which is educationally sound."

Representing the Feingold Association of Southeastern Michigan, Sandra Leuplen of Birmingham emphasized that hyperactive children react badly to the artificial coloring and flavoring as well as the sugar in the four foods under discussion.

She added that "every child will respond adversely to them." Too many sweets, she said, can lead to obesity, high blood pressure and other diseases.

INTRODUCING A STUDENT viewpoint to the proceedings was a speaker from Lincoln Park High School. Carol

Mom's brown bag lunches dumped

Sue Jackson declared: "I think students from Lincoln Park are old enough to make up their own minds about these foods. Pop is cold and real good. And they sell sweet things to make money to go on trips."

A dramatic note was introduced to the hearing through an impassioned speech by Wendy Dunn of Huntington Woods. Co-author of the "Underground Shopper," she took her small daughter, Tina, on the platform with her.

"Education begins at home," cried Mrs. Dunn. "Train them to avoid sugar before they become addicted."

She pointed out that she had become overweight because of her addiction to sweets, then suggested parents should intervene if "your child is fed poisons at school." Her daughter's body is beginning to recover from too many sweets offered at nursery school, she said. Her 6-year-old son was addicted, "but I am repairing that.

"Why don't we parents love and care enough to train our children on nutrition ourselves," she wondered. "We don't want sugar in the schools."

A Plymouth resident who was unable to attend the hearings, yet wanted to make public her ideas is Jacquelyn Troutman, on leave from the Plymouth schools and partner in Nutrition Know How.

"I have observed other schools in the country in which competitive foods are not served," she said. "The students are eating more nutritious lunches, and doing it happily. I didn't hear gripes about the food.

"Choices in food can be offered, but they can be between nutritious items. A child can bring a candy bar from home, but why sell it in school?"

School children may see Detroit history

Though historic Fort Wayne is closed for the winter, its education program continues. Yesterday On Tour, a "hands-on" history program, is being offered to schools and community groups throughout the metropolitan area.

William Phenix, curator of military history at the fort, said the program has been seen by thousands of school children in the tri-county area.

"The four participants in the program have traveled to many Detroit schools as well as schools in Troy, Plymouth, Rohcester and Birmingham," he added.

"Everywhere they have gone, they have created a greater interest in local and national history and historic Fort Wayne as well."

Billed as "a field trip without the cost, labor and expense of leaving school," Yesterday On Tour combines "Hardtack and Coffee," last year's popular outreach program on the Civil War, with "Les Francais a Detroit," which deals with Detroit's 18th century French period.

As in last year's program, Michael Jones and Nora White of the fort's interpretive staff play the roles of Jacob Genner, a Civil War soldier, and Lydia Hall, a woman of the 1860s, as they demonstrate how people lived during that era. Their presentation includes discussions of Civil War army life, a typical soldier's uniform and equipment, and domestic life during the war—especially women's active contributions to the war effort.

This year, two characters have been added to the program, Dennis Charboneau and Jeanne Godfroi, portrayed by Dennis Charboneau and Jean LaViolette, both also from the interpretive staff.

Through artifacts and story, they describe the life of the adventurous French "habitants" and "Coureur du bois" (rover of the woods) in 18th century Michigan.

Yesterday On Tour is available to school grades three through eight and limited adult presentations. Each program lasts approximately 45-60 minutes and is adaptable to shorter lengths. The fee for one presentation is $35 but the cost is reduced when more than one presentation is scheduled at one location.

More information is available by calling Fort Wayne at 833-9776.

Progressive dinner spoofs toga party

Canton Chatter

By SHARON STARON 455-5322

Canton Newcomers board of directors decided Feb. 3 would be a great time to get out the winter doldrums and have a progressive dinner.

First stop was at the home of Diane and Jerry Cuper on Gainsborough where punch and appetizers were served with the help of Judi Thomas. Carol and Mike Dugan slipped out early to get ready at their home for the entourage which descended upon them for the salad course prepared by Sam Nichols, Norma Huetteman and Carol.

Kathy and Charlie Freece opened their home on Addison for 22 persons to enjoy the main course of baked ham, vegetable selections and hot rolls provided by Mary Moore, Eileen Dunn and Kathy.

Not to be daunted by the cold, the group forged ahead to Helen and Mike Wesner's for the dessert and party.

TWO IMPORTANT anniversaries were being celebrated by Judi and Cecil Thomas and Carol and Mike Dugan. A decorated torte was appropriately inscribed with their names. Anyway, the group consumed the torte— names and all. Seems the cake and a turn on Warren Road didn't coincide on the trip from the bakery resulting in a lopsided dessert. The icing found its way to several faces.

We heard that three couples arrival at the Wesners' was like a scene from the movie "Animal House." Helen answered her door to find six people in strange regalia—sheets (toga style), jewelry, fern fronds, etc., all ready for the party.

Other couples enjoying the fun and games were Rex and Sam Nichols, Norma and Irwin Huetteman, Linda and Jack Luo, Thomas and Christy Skorka, Mary and Sherman Moore and Robert and Eileen Dunn.

Needless to say, they all had a ball.

MEMBERS of Geneva United Presbyterian Church will present their third annual variety show at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 25. The show is a fun night for the family to enjoy the talents of amateur performers.

Some of the acts on the agenda include a gong show put on by the members of the junior high fellowship. Blue grass selections will be performed by Gary Best and George Tiavis. A bagpipe presentation by Nick Boersma will be part of the show along with the Ollie Wagner family with recorders.

The adult and youth choirs will Perform and Mike Mincher is planning a reading titled "Religious Matters." A singing quartet includes Gary Best, Ron Frey, Chet Solowiej and Norm Nettles. Jean Braun will play a number on the viola.

Some of the children also will be on stage. Susie Stone will sing "Tomorrow" from the Broadway musical, "Annie." Four-year-old Julie Wahl will sing "Jesus Loves Me" in English and Korean. Jennifer Zattau and a friend will do a disco dance. Michelle Spencer will read the poem "Sick." Jackie Breen and Jeff Wilson will perform piano solos.

The show is being coordinated by Michael and Virginia Koon and Mike will be the MC for the evening. Sounds like a lot of talent will be on hand for the show.

THE CYSTIC Fibrosis Association wants to remind everyone that this week is Kiss Your Baby Week. You can tell with a kiss if your baby has a salty taste on his skin. This is one of the first signs of CF. If you do detect a salty taste your baby probably doesn't have CF but you should check with your doctor immediately. CF is an inherited and serious lung disease.

EPSILON Alumnae Chapter of Apha Chi Omega in the Metropolitan Detroit area has been very busy organizing the campaign for CF. They have distributed posters and done other publicity for Kiss Your Baby Week.

Stars in their eyes... ... and plaid knee socks

The Sunday afternoon bridal fashion show is not just for members of a wedding party. It is for teenagers who expect to attend their senior prom. And it is for all women interested in finding the perfect dress for an after-5 event.

The fashion show is a first for Geneva Salyer of Geneva's Bridal Shoppe in Forest Place Mall. She hopes it will be the beginning of a tradition—an a late winter show for spring and summer fashions and a later one for fall and winter collections.

Cooperating with Geneva in arranging the show are a host of business people, her family and friends. First of all, there is Ethel Burns of the Mayflower Meeting House. Ms. Burns is the resident expert on planning successful wedding receptions. She is decorating the Meeting House for the occasion. Guests will be seated at tables in the atmosphere of a regular reception.

THE FASHION show will begin at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Mayflower Meeting House on Main Street, Plymouth. It is free and open to the public.

Dolly of Beautiful People Hair Forum will do the models' hair Sunday morning. Betty Porter of the Statice Shop will arrange a display of keepsake bridal bouquets and table arrangements.

Representatives from Bed 'N' Stead and Wayside will tell prospective brides how to become enrolled in a bridal registry. The Home Gallery will fill them in on how to start assembling furnishings for the home. The Dragon-Fly will have a display of unusual gifts. Engraving Connection will zero in on gifts for the bridal party. Baskets 'N' Bows, Heide's Flowers and Gifts, Inc. and Jer'Richards Jewelers also are involved in the show.

Men's formal attire will be provided by Famous Men's Wear.

Together, the local merchants hope to prove that all the ingredients for a perfect wedding are available in their own hometown.

THE SHOW will open with a parade of after-5 and party dresses. These will be everything from cocktail dresses and disco styles to prom dresses.

Twenty models will wear the designer fashions—four junior high and college students. Fran Henning will model a mother of the bride ensemble. Ann Wallace will wear mother of the bride as well as cocktail dresses as will Kathy Easton. Nancy Petrocelli will be featured in the second wedding look. The latter are four local business women who have taken up modeling for the show.

"Everyone has been so cooperative," said Geneva. "My three daughters, Kim, Terri and Kelly are modeling as well as many of their friends." Her 6-5 son, a student at Eastern Michigan University will be modeling formal wear from Famous Men's Wear.

FRANKIE Lamirand, a teacher at Plymouth Canton High School, will be commentator.

During the second half of the show, she will describe the three wedding parties—bride and her attendants, bridegroom, best man, ushers, and mothers of the bridal couple.

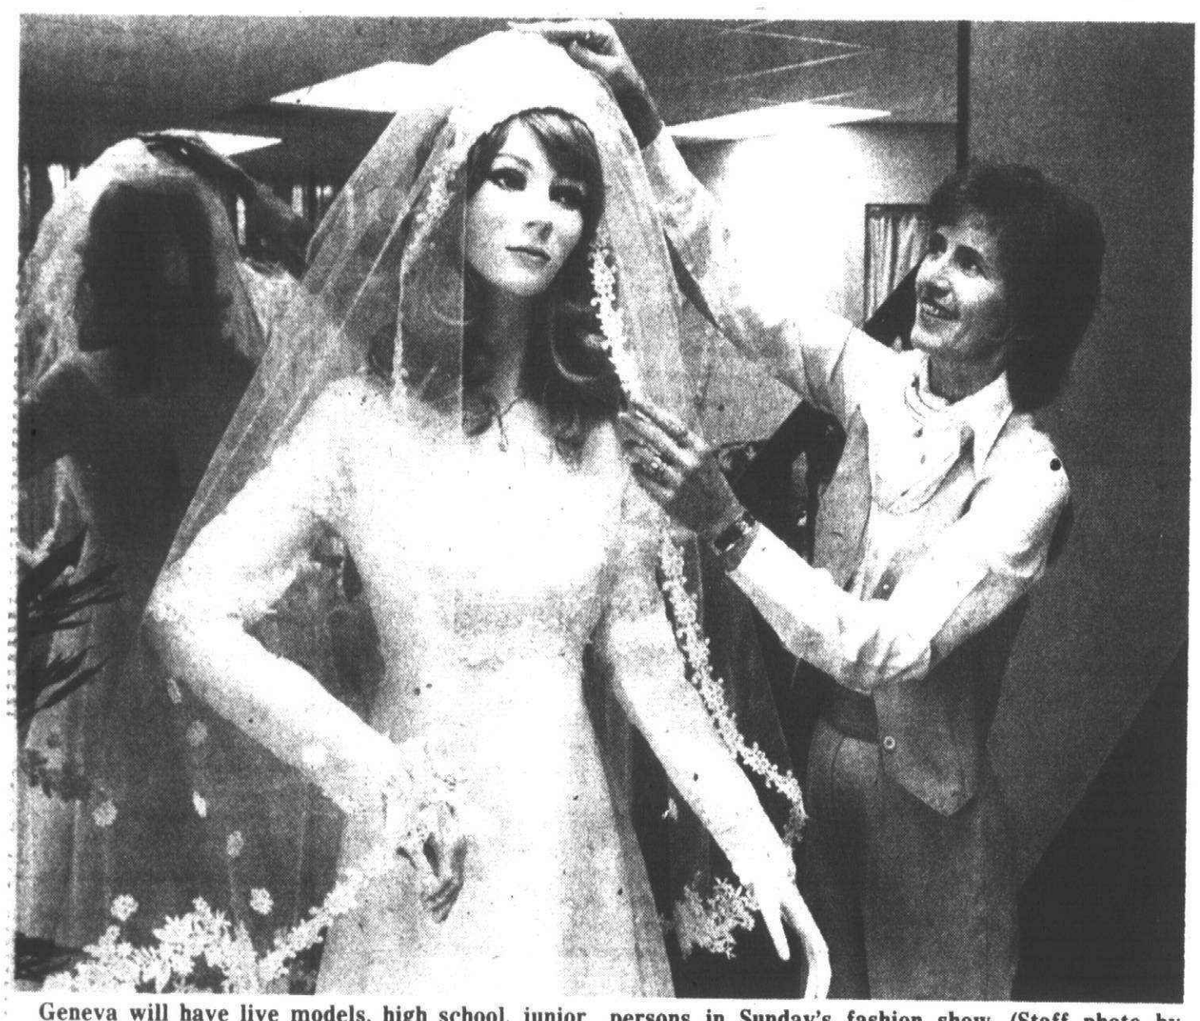
There will be an old-fashioned wedding, traditional, and an extremely sophisticated group featuring the blouson look in the bride's and bridesmaids' gowns. Flowers and headdresses will complete the settings.

Geneva's is the first bridal shop in the Plymouth-Canton area. It has been open only a few months. Surrounded by satins, sheers, lace and frothy veils, Geneva says she loves it.

"It's interesting to see them come in blue jeans and plaid knee socks. They try on the most traditional gowns, satin, lace and seed pearls, and always the plaid knee socks. I love it."

Her wedding gowns range in price from $150-$600. She pleasure over the fact that a young bride-elect had come to her shop for one of the new lace and veiling trimmed hats to go with a $1,500 wedding gown purchased in Birmingham.

For information about the bridal show, persons can call 455-4445. Reservations are unnecessary and there is no admission fee.



Geneva will have live models, high school, junior high and college students, as well as local business persons in Sunday's fashion show. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Pierrot, one of the pieces in the modern sculpture group, drew thoughtful responses from the students. Jennifer Breed thought he was very sad. The Sculpture Lady program is sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council in an effort to familiarize students with great works in the field of sculpture. (Staff photo)

The students gazed solemnly at the statue. They touched its surface and eyed it from every angle.

The Sculpture Lady, a volunteer from the Plymouth Community Arts Council, had arrived with several new pieces of sculpture. They would be theirs to live with for a month. And before they were taken to another school, and a new batch arrived, they would be familiar friends.

As they were introduced to the small collection of modern sculpture, they were asked to describe the mood of each piece and their reaction to it.

"Pierrot" by Peggy Mach drew some thoughtful responses from the youngsters:

- "The clown is regretting something."
- "The lights are out."
- "All the people went home."
- "I feel sad."
- "Nobody laughed."
- "Maybe he fell off a horse."
- "Maybe he got fired from his job."
- "The clown will cry."
- "Lonesome."
- "He's looking up at the stars with stars in his eyes."
- "I'm the best clown in America and nobody will take me."
- "His heart is broken."
- "Meditating."
- "He's just sitting there expressing his deepest feelings."
- "Alone in the middle of the night."
- "Maybe he's the very last clown."
- "Sad and tired."
- "Wistful."
- "The show is over."
- "The people didn't like his show. Still got his makeup on just sort of sitting on the grass."

One of the sculpture ladies noted the preceding remarks at New Morning School. Next stop for the collection was Bird Elementary School.

"I think he's very sad," said Jennifer Breed, a Bird School student.

The sculpture ladies and their counterparts, the picture ladies, are two of the continuing arts projects in the schools funded and carried out by the PCAC.

It's their week

Jaycettes receive national recognition

U. S. Jaycette Week is being celebrated Jan. 11-17 by 55,000 young women in 4,000 communities in 48 states.

Until June 1974, the Jaycettes were an auxiliary group to the Jaycees. At the annual meeting of the Jaycees in San Diego, Calif., the U. S. Jaycettes organization was voted into existence by an overwhelming majority and has become an autonomous club.

Any woman between the ages of 18 and 36 can become a Jaycette. They still work very closely with the Jaycees and many projects are cooperative efforts. But the two organizations are separate and individual.

The Canton Township Jaycees and Jaycettes consider their Christmas baskets an ideal cooperative venture. The Jaycees provide the money and deliver the baskets. The women do all the buying and fill the baskets.

THE PLYMOUTH Jaycee Auxiliary, forerunner of the Jaycettes, was founded in 1962. Current membership is 30.

General membership meetings are the second Tuesday of each month. The club is involved in many community service projects as well as social events.

The Jaycettes began a contest for the oustanding young woman of the community. This has been an annual project with a plaque awarded at an awards banquet.

New this year was the outstanding teen award. The Jaycettes plan to make this an annual event and are working toward a monetary award to go with presentation next year.

THE WOMEN HAVE conducted babysitting clinics which have set high standards and benefited parents, children and the babysitters themselves. The Jaycettes have bingo games for senior citizens and provide birthday cakes for Northville State Hospital.

They work closely with the Jaycees who organize the Fourth of July Parade in Plymouth. The Jaycettes also have their own pop sale on the Fourth. They assist the Jaycees during the Plymouth Fall Festival when the men serve a rib dinner.

Our Lady of Providence School is included in the Jaycees' benefits and Super Mom is an upcoming project. They cooperated with the Jaycees in planning a very successful community New Year's Eve Party.

Among the social events were a Lucky Las Vegas night, square dance, progressive dinner and disco dancing.

Officers in the club are Vickie Soper, president; Jane Beauchamp, vice-president; Cissy Ventittelli, secretary; Dee Wilhelm, treasurer; Mary Decker, Maureen Karby and Gale Owens, directors; and past president Barb Lane, president of the board.

CANTON JAYCETTES consider their "Buckle up Babes" project their most important.

They started out with 13 infant car seats. They chose a General Motors model recommended for its quality and safety standards. The seats are available on a rental basis.

"Finally, after two years, people realize we are doing this," said Nancy Rentz who is chairing the project.

They now have 51 seats. "I have just three at the house now and two of these are spoken for," she said.

They are planning a bake sale from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 3 in the Krogers store in Harvard Square Shopping Center.

One of the Canton Jaycettes favorite projects is Whispering Willows Nursing Home which they visit once a month. Because the residents of the home love to have children come to see them, the Jaycettes have included their youngsters.

At Christmas they helped in the caroling and preparing and dispensing presents. At Halloween, it was trick or treat in reverse and the children passed out the candy.

EASTER BASKETS for seniors and a visit by the Easter Bunny to Canton Commons are annual spring activities.

Working for Project Concern, the Jaycettes have prepared school kits and hygiene kits for the underprivileged at home and abroad. At the present, they are working on layettes for the project.

A cooperative Jaycette garage sale is one of the club's regular fundraisers. Members of the club worked on the Vial of Life program and collected for the cancer fund.

Each fall, the Jaycettes work closely with the Jaycees in preparing for the Halloween Haunted House.

They assist the Jaycees at the annual Jaycee Fair, a weeklong event in the summer. The women provide birthday cakes once a year for the patients in Northville State Hospital and they provide a gift each month for the Canton Senior Citizens.

The Canton Jaycettes have had 16 new members join the club in the last month. Anyone interested in joining can call Elaine Burger, 455-7567. The club meets the first Tuesday of each month in the Canton Recreation Center.

Auditions Sunday for dance theater

First auditions for the new Plymouth Canton Dance Theater are scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 18 in the Studios of Dance Unlimited, 757 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

Auditions will be adjudicated by Pamela Dunsworth, artistic director of the Fairlane Ballet Company, Anne Mininberb, artistic director of the new group, Deborah Chase, assistant artistic director; Renee Dubry, dance instructor; and Joanne Hulce, liaison person between the dance theater and the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

Young men and women 12 years of age and older may audition. A ballet background is required. Dancers should take at least two ballet classes per week at the studio of their choice. They should be classified as intermediate or higher.

Proper ballet attire will be expected including pointe shoes.

The audition will consist of a technique class. Solos or variations of three minutes or less will be observed after the class. Dancers should provide their own music for the solo number.

Dancers will be judged for proficiency, potential and performance quality. Qualifying dancers will be obligated to one company class a week.

Audition results will be given by telephone.

The dance theater group has been organized under the auspices of the arts council to give talented young dancers an opportunity to perform within the community setting.

Panhel seeks scholarship candidates

Plymouth-Canton Panhellenic is seeking names of possible recipients for the two scholarships awarded each year by the organization.

To be eligible, a woman must be a graduate of the Plymouth Canton Community Schools and be a pledge or active member of a national social sorority. Names of possible candidates for scholarships may be telephoned to Isabel Bates, 453-8623. All candidates will be contacted and given detailed information and deadlines.

Scholarships are funded by the proceeds of card parties held in the members's homes. Two $100 scholarships are awarded annually.

Seminar on wills is free

Two authorities on wills, trusts and estate planning will share their expertise at a free estate planning seminar at Madonna College of Livonia, at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 20.

The seminar is scheduled for the College's Residence Hall at 14221 Levan Road, just north of Schoolcraft, Livonia. Reservations are suggested and may be made through the college office of development, 591-1211.

IN THE POCKET

By W.W. EDGAR

As the bowlers head in to the tournament season, Rose Marsh, whose job as secretary of the Detroit Women's Bowling Association is to oversee the big event that opens at Ark Lanes West on Feb. 24, is puzzled.

The official team entry was closed at 975 teams which is a few teams below last year's total. The minor events have soared and Rose readily admits that she doesn' know why.

Elaborate ceremonies are planned for the opening and all of the top officials of both men's and women's associations will be on hand when the first ball is thrown at 1:30 p.m.

CORA FIEBIG, who is making a strong bid to become the area top average bowler, strengthened her claim to top honors Sunday at Ark Lanes West when she won the monthly mid-city women's event and averaged 213 in her final four games.

She bowled well through the entire program but reached the peak in the final where she beat Ruby Williamson by a mere 10 pins.

HIGH SCORING returned to Westland Bowl when two of the sharpshooters in the Little Caesar Classic broke the 700 barrier.

Bob Basocchi did the greatest shooting when he linked games of 225, 286 and 233 for 744. At that figure he beat Dave Pickett by 24 pins.

Afte posting games of 255 and 243, Dave dropped to 222 in his last game and that beat him. Third place went to Dave Kaliszewski with a 691.

Marge Kropacek failed to reach double-century figures but she didn't have to as her 557 was good enough to earn the pacemaking role

PAT LISOWSKI returned to the winner's circle in the Classic at Garden Lanes when her 626 count last Friday earned her the top place. Mazie Kowalski was next in line but she was 40 pins back. In the Misfits league Don Gavin Jr. was tops with an even 600./1 THE WOMEN are doing well at Woodland Lanes, especially in the Th ursday afternoon league. This week Helen Burger, a 149 average bowler, fashioned a 202 in 575 to take top place. Next in line was Jo Belanger, with a 150 average, who bowled 222 in 566 Kathy Matusukey landed third with 540.

In the BeeGees league Moe Gauvin , with a 127 average, rolled a 164 in 508 and Thelma Coopersmith paced the women with a 190 in 514.

Livonia-Redford Guild

Pulling the reins on 'Equus'

By TOM PANZENHAGEN

Peter Shaffer's "Equus" seems to be the kind of play that can be done only one way — Shaffer's way.

The playwright worked closely with the director of the premier production of the play a few years ago, and the final script was one that called for specific sets, lighting and movements by actors.

But the production of "Equus" coming to the Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford stands a good chance of being done a different way — Vosgerchian's way.

Vosgerchian is Mary Ann Brownlee Vosgerchian, the director of this production of the play. A 1975 recipient of a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan's Theater department, Ms. Vosgerchian is faced with certain problems that have forced her to alter many of Shaffer's prescribed bits of stagecraft.

Her biggest problem is the size of the Livonia-Redford theater. The Guild's playhouse will seat about 120 for "Equus."

"The last row of our theater is probably closer to the stage than the first row of the Fisher Theater," Ms. Vosgerchian said only half jokingly.

Because of the proximity between stage and audience, a nude scene has been removed from the Guild's production of "Equus."

"I didn't think it was necessary," Ms. Vorgeschian said.

IN OTHER PRODUCTIONS of the play, however — in London where "Equus" debuted, on Broadway, and more recently in Ann Arbor and at Detroit's Fisher Theater — directors have found the nude scene instrumental to the resolution of the play.

The scene comes when a boy, under a psychiatrist's care as a result of having blinded six horses, first begins to respond to the psychiatrist's care. When the boy's facades and guises are finally worn away, he is left naked on stage — very much alone, helpless and innocent-looking.

"When I saw it at the Fisher," Ms. Vosgerchian said in reference to the play and the nude scene, "I was a bit shocked. But, then, the distance (between stage and audience) made the actors movements seem more like ballet."

The director maintained that the setting in the Guild's theater would make the scene unrealistic. In her rendering, the two characters who have appeared nude in the past — the 16-year-old boy and his girlfriend — will look more like "modern teens grappling in the back seat of a car."

FUNDING IS another problem faced by the local troupe.

A lack of money has prohibited the theater from duplicating the unique mobility of the "Equus" set seen in previous productions, according to Pat Secor, executive director of the Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford.

The company has had to resort to more austere sets and lighting techniques, she added.

Another potential problem may be the reaction of a community theater audience to what many critics have called a controversial play.

According to Ms. Vorgeschian, the play is not controversial: "The play's message is conservative and traditional as far as morals and ethics go."

But the subject matter of the play has prompted Ms. Secor to aver that "the play will be done in good taste."

Ms. Vorgeschian said the blinding scene will remain in her production. "It is done in flashback," she said. "It's not a scene of reality," and is carried out rather symbolically by the boy, who "spikes" the eyes on masks of horses which are worn by human members of the cast.

"Equus" is a play of many dimensions, though, and should not be judged on the value of two scenes.

Mr. Afternoon Movie

With a wave of his hand, Bill Kennedy rules the living room silver screens

By C.J. RISAK

What is it that has attracted Detroit viewers for nearly three decades—the man or the movie?

Certainly, the answer is both. For without one, the other could not enjoy the success it has obtained.

Since 1952, Bill Kennedy has been Detroit's afternoon movie host. His show's love affair with Detroiters began with Channel 4. He then moved to Channel 9 in Windsor in 1956, before switching to Channel 50, where he has remained for the past 10 years.

Despite efforts of the rival stations throughout the area, Kennedy has survived the test of time. His Sunday afternoon program draws a 30-35 share of the market, which means 30-35 percent of the televisions are tuned in. (Networks are satisfied if their prime time shows get a 30-33 share).

The Sunday show has remained successful through the challenges of pro football and movies carried by other stations.

"I own Sunday (afternoon), especially when football isn't on. . . .I'm a virtual powerhouse!" Kennedy claimed with a dramatic wave of his hand during an interview last week. With that he was off, out of the studio and back to his office to search for one of his 250,000 photographs.

THAT IS Bill Kennedy, on screen and off, theatrical in speech and action. It's not contrived or forced or fake in any way—it's just Kennedy.

His early career had its ups and downs. He started in Detroit in 1936, working as a sportscaster and Hollywood reporter for WWJ radio.

"I worked with Ty Tyson (former Detroit Tiger broadcaster) and did a gossip-type show on Hollywood," he recalled. "And I used to do some spots (commercials), too." Without hesitation, he started singing one of the shorts he had done some 40 years earlier.

In 1939 or '40 ("It's hard to keep dates accurate"), Kennedy moved to Hollywood to seek his fortune and fame. He signed a five-year contract with Warner Bros. with an option clause for seven years. But Warner's didn't pick up the option, so Kennedy went into free-lance work at other studios.

His biggest disappointment came in 1945, when the movie he produced and starred in, "The People's Choice", bombed out. It was such a disaster that Kennedy was forced into bankruptcy.

Seven years later, the movie was bought out of bankruptcy by Adrian Weiss. At the time, movie studios refused to sell films to television because it "threatened their future." That made Kennedy's film a hot commodity—Weiss bought it for $7,000 and sold it to television for $1 million.

Kennedy ended up showing the film he had produced and starred in on his show when he was at Channel 4. "Isn't that a quirk of fate?" he said.

He wasn't down for long, however. His free-lance work continued until he "was saved by television."

He returned to Detroit in 1952 to host the afternoon movie for Channel 4, called "The Afternoon Movie, with your Hollywood Host Bill Kennedy". But Kennedy tired of it, and after two years, he went back to Hollywood to give it one more shot.

He made a number of television appearances, including several on the "Cisco Kid" series and also voiced the introduction to the "Superman" program. He became a news anchorman for a local California television station, but lacking sufficient background to become a "news analyst," he lost the job and finally returned to Detroit in 1956.

SINCE THEN, he has been a mainstay on afternoon television, shown six times a week—seven since September. His jump from Channel 9 to Channel 50 in 1969 proved that it's his analysis and comments on the films he features that drew the audiences. The switch never affected his ratings.

"I research every movie and try to respond to what the public wants," Kennedy explained, sitting in his office but still showing the same dramatic flair he had shown in front of the camera minutes before.

"These stills are an integral part of the show. And my question and answer period is dynamite. As far as I know, we're the only ones in the country to do it—and I just stumbled across it five years ago."

He was up and off again, back down the hallway to the studio, holding a number of pictures to help answer viewers' questions.

"See this?" he asked, pointing to a photo he had just pinned on his bulletin board of himself and some obscure singer from the 1950s, who had been the object of a question the day before.

"Who would remember this guy? Well, I do, because of my collection of stills. They really make the phone calls segment work.

"Now what was that hit song this guy did?" he questioned himself, then, in an attempt to answer it, sang, "You got me singin' the blues. . . ."

Moments later, he was on the air responding to the inquiry about the singer. As soon as they cut back to the movie, he was gone again, back to his office.

Though he sometimes appears lost in his own thoughts, Kennedy remains an engaging personality. His easygoing manner makes it easy on the people around him.

Things haven't always gone so well, however. Kennedy in January was involved in a celebrated Grosse Pointe traffic accident. He said his erratic behavior was caused by medication he was taking. He pleaded guilty to impaired driving, and a separate charge of leaving the scene of an accident will be in court later this month.

"HE'S A GEM to work with," says Ruth Whitmore, a former Channel 50 staffer now with WRIF radio. "He's never late, never sick. He forgets a few things, but rarely. And he's no egomaniac.

"The only time he balks about doing anything is if it threatens the quality of his show."

That quality has led Kennedy into minor disagreements with the management concerning the length of his program and the movies he shows.

"I'm always pressing for more time," he said. "You tend to alienate people from a picture if you cut it so you can make comments about it. So my air time is usually shortened."

The movies he shows used to bring criticism from viewers because they were shown over and over again. Kennedy explained he does not choose the films but is consulted when a package is bought.

"We go over it together," he said. "Sometimes a package of 26 or 27 films only has three or four good ones. So they always get my opinion."

As for TV movies of the future, Kennedy cannot see any film holding out for long before being shown on television.

"'Gone With the Wind' was the last big one to fall," he said, then, once again, adding dramatically, "It finally succumbed to the lure of gold, which we all do at some time."

Then it was back down to finish Monday's live show. His Sunday through Wednesday programs are all live, with Thursday through Saturday taped. During a five-hour period last Monday, Kennedy taped Thursday's show, took phone calls for Monday's show (part of the telephone question period is taped, allowing Kennedy time to get a picture to answer the question. The picture is then cut into the tape), and taped promos for the 8 p.m. movie.

"I'm very lucky to be doing what I like and getting paid for it," he said about his future. "And I know it. I wouldn't know what else to do. As long as the public enjoys it, I'll keep doing it."

He got some things together for Tuesday's show, put on his overcoat and a blue cap, and headed for his car to drive to his Grosse Pointe home. On his way out, Kennedy was stopped by Channel 50 program director David Simon, who complimented him on his black velvet suit.

"My mother made this for me when I was a little boy," Kennedy explained, tongue-in-cheek. "As I grew up, she would get out the Singer sewing machine and keep adding more material to it until I was 21 and had reached my full height."

He paused, then added with a flourish: "That mother of mine—she really had a velvet touch."

A smiling Bill Kennedy greets viewers as he hosts another segment of his afternoon movie on Channel 50. Kennedy claims he owns Sunday afternoons and the ratings back him up. "I'm a virtual powerhouse," he says.

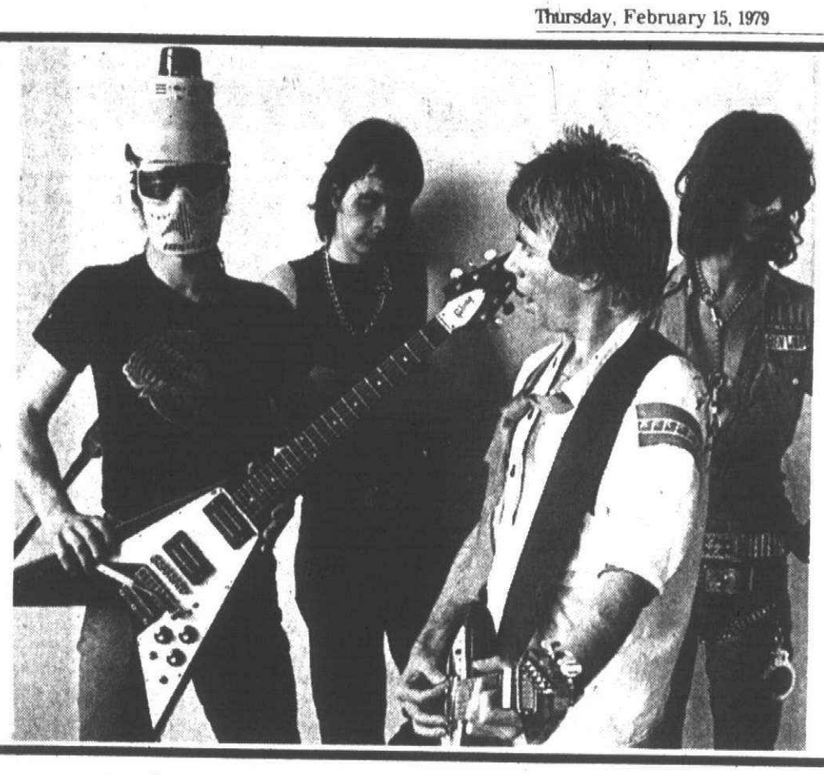
Taylor Dancers return

The Paul Taylor Dance Company returns to the Music Hall Center for performances Feb. 21-25. The group recently toured the Soviet Union Shows are 8:30 p.m. Wednesday-Sunday and 6:30 p.m. Sunday. Matinees are at 1 p.m. Thursday and 2 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are $3-$9 at the box office, 350 Madison in downtown Detroit, or by calling 963-7680.



Local kids make punk

The Sillies, warming up for a trip out west, will be at the Silver Byrd Lounge, Six Mile west of Telegraph, Monday night starting at 10:30. The punk rockers, including a couple of Redford and Livonia natives, are expected to remain true to their name. In past performances, according to manager Scott Campbell, "A variety of things have happened that we never expected." Their more notable tunes include "Sex for the Handicapped" and "Love You to Death." Also on the bill is The Pigs. Persons with pacemakers are advised to steer clear.

'Moonchildren' on stage at Marygrove's Theater

"Moonchildren," a comedy-drama that focuses on a group of co-ed college students of the '60s continues at The Theatre. Intended for mature audiences due to its candid use of language, the play runs Friday-Sunday.

The play originally opened to critical acclaim in New York during 1972. It was hailed by The New York Times as "the best American play of the past three or four seasons." Playwright Michael Weller, also has been selected to have his newest play premiered at the Arena Theatre in Washington, D.C.

The eight characters portrayed in "Moonchildren" are both high-spirited and serious-minded. Some of them are dedicated pranksters, others are hopelessly "straight" and the rest are involved in romances that turn out to be poignantly unsatisfactory.

All of them are papering over a sense of panic at the approach of graduation and the inevitability of assuming adult responsibilities without the protective umbrella of parental support.

The Theatre is located in the Liberal Arts building on the Marygrove College campus (8425 W. McNichols), in Detroit. Admission prices are $3 and $4. Curtain times are 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 7:30 p.m. Sunday. For ticket information and reservations, call The Theatre box office at 927-1130 during regular business hours.

Pierrot heads for Britain

"England, Scotland, Wales" is this Sunday's World Adventure Series color film, narrated by cameraman Kenneth Richter at 2:30 p.m. in the Detroit Institute of Arts auditorium.

Richter trained as a cameraman in Hollywood movie studios and has visited more than 80 countries with his camera. His Great Britain movie travels all of that country, from Land's End on the westernmost tip of the rocky Welsh coastline to the Scottish Isle of Skye.

Between these points, Richter explores the mystery of ancient Stonehenge and Hadrian's Roman-built wall. He visits castles and cathedrals, views life in thatched-roof villages reminiscent of Shakespeare's time.

For information on the Sunday programs, write the Institute of Arts, Detroit 48202, or call 832-7676. Seats are reserved for $3.

Music recital is Monday at UM-D

A violin and piano recital featuring Czech music will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in the Fair Lane Conference Center of the University of Michigan-Dearborn. Admission is free.

Selections will include Dvorak's Sonatina and Romantic Pieces. Also on the program are Semtana's Aus der Heimat and Grieg's Sonata in F Major.

Violinist Paula Kibildis is a member of the Flint Symphony. Pianist Thomas Kuras is director of music at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church.

2 pastors recall long years of evangelistic service

By SHERRY KAHAN

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord."

Thinking back on his 62 years as a preacher, the Rev. B. H. Lucas of Garden City recalled this Biblical passage from the Book of Romans as one of his favorites.

"It means that things will work out in some way," he said.

Pastor for almost 27 years of the Pilgrim's Mission Church in Garden City, Rev. Lucas has been in a reminiscent mood lately, possibly because he will be 90 years old Saturday.

Members of the family are due at the parsonage on Barton Street from around the country. Among those who may be able to put in an appearance are five of his his seven children.

They will celebrate the occasion at lunch. From 6-8 p.m. there will be an open house.

In the mood for recollection, Lucas gave some thought to what he regarded as his greatest accomplishment in a pastoring career that took him from small churches in the Kentucky mountains to his present post in Garden City.

"A lot of people were converted by my ministry," he said.

He tells about his own conversion with a clear memory for detail. At the urging of his first wife, he had reluctantly attended several prayer meetings.

"THE PREACHER SEEMED to be talking right at me," he recalled. "He was talking about all the things I had done wrong."

It was 1913—people worked on holidays—and Lucas noted that a strange thing happened on Thanksgiving.

"I stopped for a shot of brandy and a can of chewing tobacco on my way to work," he continued. "But while at my machine I decided to become a Christian and change my ways. I offered a friend my tobacco and told him I had quit, smoking, chewing, cursing and drinking.

"That Sunday I went to the church altar and prayed. And here I am today. Being saved is when the want is taken out. I never wanted after that to smoke, drink, cuss or chew. We don't even have a TV."

His wife added: "The difference in being born again is that the desire for those things is gone."

She is the Rev. Ethel Lucas, who met her husband in Cambridge, Md. after the death of his first wife. "I was an evangelist before we married," she explained. "I traveled for 10 years in this work."

As a teen-ager she recalled the day she had gone into church with a heavy heart. "I went to the altar and prayed," she said. "A burden was lifted from me and I became changed."

Since her husband has been confined to bed, she has taken on ministerial responsibilities at the church with assistant pastor, the Rev. William Beagan.

SHE DESCRIBED the preaching style of her husband as "very demonstrative, with a lot of gestures." She confessed to occasionally smiting the podium herself during her talks. The congregation also has the freedom to express itself emotionally.

"When the spirit of the Lord comes upon the people during a service, they sometimes start crying without knowing what it's about," said Lucas.

His wife added: "They praise the Lord with good old fashioned shouting and marching in the aisles. It just comes out, It is not planned."

"They are shouting about what they feel," said Lucas. "It is a spiritual happiness glorifying the Lord. Some laugh, some cry, some run around or start jumping. In fact, you'll have me out of this bed if you keep on talking about this."

Lucas came from a home with a dirt floor. In 1919, he became pastor of his first church in Rush, Ky. But because the congregations were small, he sometimes preached at three area rural churches, for a total wage of $1.35.

His work took him to Tennessee and Ohio and eventually Maryland. With his present wife he came to the Garden City Tabernacle in 1950, but later left.

"However, a group of five families called us in 1952 and asked us to come back and start a church," his wife said. "They called on a Saturday and we left that night from Lima, Ohio."

THE HOME of a church member was the location of their first meetings, then rented buildings until they purchased their present home—the church at Middlebelt and Beechwood.

"Our members are a variety of ages," said Mrs. Lucas. "We have a nice group of young married couples. Many of them are southerners who moved up here. We still have a family who started out with us in 1952, Willis and Vina Montgomery.

"The Lord has really helped us."

Buffet dinner March 8

The many services offered by the Women's Resource Center at Schoolcraft College will receive a shot in the arm through a buffet dinner dance being sponsored by the college's Women's Advisory Committee 6:30-8 p.m. Saturday, March 3, in the Waterman Campus Center.

"It's our first fund-raising project," said Charlotte Adams, a member of the advisory committee and chairman of the dance.

"With the failure of the last vote an millage for Schoolcraft, the resource center saw its funds cut while women on campus and in the community are needing more and more services provided.

"We are interested in seeing these services expanded, so the dinner dance is offered so the community can have a share in the project and also have a good time."

Tickets for the dance are $12.50 per person and include a sirloin bordelaise dinner, dancing until midnight to the music of the Royals, and special entertainment by a group from the Schoolcraft madrigal singers.

Reservations should be made by sending checks to Marge Lynch, Women's Resource Center, Schoolcraft College, Livonia, or by calling her at 591-6400, ext. 432. Seating will be by tables of eight, and tickets may be purchased singly or in groups.

It offers informatin to women who drop in or telephone and also has a number of specific services such as peer counseling, financial aid for part time students, and a WISER (Widowed In Service) program.

"The dinner dance is designed as an opportunity for the community and the college to support these services and help them continue," Mrs. Adams said. "Our hope is to make it an annual event."

Salem grapplers place 3d in Sub-8 meet

Belleville earned a tie for the Suburban Eight League wrestling title for the second year in a row after defeating Trenton 173½-153 in the conference meet last Saturday.

The Tigers, who tied for first place last season with Plymouth Salem, this year's league-meet host, lost to Trenton, 25-24, in dual meet competition earlier this season.

In the league meet, however, the state-ranked Belleville squad ran away with the honors, crowning five of the 13 individual wrestling champs.

Plymouth Salem placed third in the league meet with 129 points and finished in a tie for third place in the overall standings with Dearborn Edsel Ford. The T-Birds placed fourth in the league meet with 119½ points.

Allen Park, finishing fifth in the league meet with 78½ points, earned in a fifth-place tie with Dearborn High. The Pioneers placed sixth in the league meet with 64 points.

Livonia Bentley, which brought only four wrestlers to the conference meet, didn't score a point, finishing in dead last in both the overall and league meet standings.

Belleville, the pre-season favorites to win the crown, was led by the Winekoff brothers, Carl and Rick, who won respective league titles at the 158 and 168-pound weight classes. Both grapplers shutout their opponents, winning by decisions. Salem, coached by Ron Krueger, sent four grapplers to the finals. The Rocks crowned two league champions, as Jim Schultz pinned Belleville's Dave Cook at 2:29 to win the 108-pound title and Jeff Brown superior decisioned Allen Park's Doug Grafton, 21-3, to take the 115-pound crown.

Brown is a repeat winner in the league having taken the 101-pound title last year as a sophomore.

Schultz is the Rocks' top wrestler this season with a 34-3 record. He is also a junior.

Juniors Jerry Valchine and Jeff Powers also reached the finals for Salem but lost a bid for a first-place Sub-8 medal. Valchine, wrestling at 141 pounds, lost to Jeff Rose of Belleville, 9-3, while Powers, who is only one pin short of the Rocks' single-season record, was decisioned by Dearborn's Brian Pinfold, 8-3, in the 181-pound competition.

"It was tough—one of the toughest league meets in tbe state," said Krueger after the Sub-8 competition. "On our part, I think we came back and did a nice job. And all our points will be back next year (in reference to the juniors who placed high in the meet)."

Salem, entering the league meet with a 3-3 dual record in fourth place, trailed Edsel Ford most of the day in the meet standings. The Rocks, lodged in fourth, then past tbe T-Birds into third place after the championship round.

It marked the first time in the eight-year history of wrestling in Plymouth that a Sub-8 meet was hosted by the Rocks.

The pressure is on

It was almost three years ago when Rich Hewlett made his first varsity appearance for Plymouth Salem.

Remember it?

Hewlett was only a freshman but Salem basketball coach Fred Thomann was short of guards toward the end of the 1975-76 season—the year Jim Ellinghausen was a senior.

So Hewlett got called up from the junior varsity and performed admirably in the Southfield districts. And, in the most pressure-packed moment for the unsuspecting freshman, he responded with nine points, despite the Rocks' district finale loss to Bloomfield Hills Lasher.

It was just one of many pressure-packed moments for the 17 year old. He has been through so many during his prep career in Plymouth.

Now, he is about to begin another era of pressure.

AS ALL OF YOU probably know by now, Rich Hewlett announced last Friday that he will sign a letter-of-intent next week to play football for the University of Michigan.

The early decision (the actual date for signing is Wednesday, Feb. 21) rids Hewlett of some of the last-minute pressure which occurs in this game of recruiting.

Although Hewlett always leaned toward Michigan from the start, even some two years ago when the Wolverines began talking to him, the recruiting pressure was something the Rock star never seemed to like.

He was tired of all the people—fellow students and people in the community— constantly asking him where he was going to college.

Now the pressure is off. Or is it?

The rumors are already starting. Will Hewlett be the starting quarterback for Michigan next fall—replacing Rick Leach? Some of us have heard that Bo Schembechler, the Michigan coach, does, indeed, want another four-year quarterback. Hewlett has the option experience to be that man.

Others have said Bo has promised the quarterback job to Jim Paciorek, the all-stater from Orchard Lake St. Mary's, who will be a sophomore next fall.

And there's always Gary Lee of Flint Southwestern fame. Or John Wrangler. And, heaven forbid, don't forget B.J. Dickey.

ONE THING is for certain, however. You know Hewlett's going to get every possible opportunity for that starting job, or Bo wouldn't have worked so hard to get him. And, in one man's opinion, Hewlett has all the tools to start as a freshman.

And, then, what about the pressure?

The Rock gridder's number-one fan, his mother, Barb Hewlett, knows about the pressure. But she's still glad about his decision.

"Heavens, yes, there will be pressure," Barb said. "But everyone's always expected a lot of him. We all do, and I think he can handle it.

"In a way, I don't like the pressure but he'll be ok. What the heck? It's another stepping stone.

"I'm just tickled to death (about the decision). His mother's always been to all his games. What would he do without me there?"

Yes, Michigan is closer than Alabama to watch Richard perform. But that didn't make the Crimson Tide feel any better about the lost recruit.

"Alabama was sick," Salem head football coach Tom Moshimer said. "They wanted him. In fact, Bear Bryant was going to come up later (this week) but they didn't expect him to decide so early.

"They (Michigan) recruited him on being a player, now. I hope it works out. What the heck. He's close to home, and he was always leaning toward Michigan. I think he'll play."

But Moshimer also knows about the media pressures this young man will endure in the future. Just recently, Moshimer, never a big fan of any press medium, jokingly said Hewlett should go to Alabama because he'll get "better" press than in Michigan.

True, the Joe Falls and Jerry Greens will, no doubt, harp on Hewlett's option-style of quarterbacking, instead of a pass-oriented quarterback.

They may get on his case (oh no, another four years of run, run, run) before Hewlett ever steps on the field.

I just hope Bo doesn't closet Hewlett away from the media, like he's some irresponsible vegetable. The Michigan head man has been known to do this in the past, but it would be a shame to do something like that to Hewlett.

Sheltering him from the media won't help the kid learn to deal with others. Besides, I always thought he acted in a very classy manner whenever he was with the media in his high school years.

PRESSURES? Sure, we all know there will be pressure on Rich Hewlett.

But if he handles the pressure like he did that day three years ago on the basketball court, I know he will be okay as Michigan's number-one quarterback next season.

Number-one, you say?

Isn't that the only way to describe a Rich Hewlett?

Canton clips Dearborn by 23

Plymouth Canton got its basketball scoring machine into full gear Tuesday night, pounding non-league foe Dearborn High, 92-75, at the Pioneers' gym.

It was the Chiefs' 13th victory in 17 starts this season. Canton can cement its first-ever Western Six League basketball crown Friday night when it hosts Walled Lake Western. The Chiefs have a three-game lead over the rest of the field and a victory over Western would leave only two conference games left on the schedule — giving Canton the outright title.

Against Dearborn, the Chiefs scored 50 points in the first half to breeze to victory. Down 50-33 at halftime, Dearborn scored the first 13 points of the second half to narrow the Canton margin to only four points, 50-46. But the Chiefs spurted ahead for the victory.

Butch King led all scorers with 33 points on 15 field goals and three free throws. Mike Gollnick and Mike Leary each pumped in 15. Junior Dave Visser had nine.

"We had a really good first half," said Canton coach Bell. "They (Dearborn) came out in a zone and we shot over it. They were big but not mobil and they stayed in the zone."

Canton shot 50 percent on the night, hitting 35 of 70 shots.

Lackluster Rocks tip Redford Union

By DENNIS O'CONNOR

About the only exciting thing at the Plymouth Salem gymnasium Tuesday night was Howard Monk's slam dunk late in the third quarter.

Oh yes, there was a basketball game — if one wants to call it that.

The Rocks defeated Redford Union 64-38 in a sloppily-played non-league contest which probably made Salem coach Fred Thomann want to pull even more hair out of his newly shaved scalp.

There were 42 turnovers in all. Redford Union committed 26 and Salem 16.

Nonetheless, it was Salem's 15th victory of the season against two losses. After a rare Friday night off this week, the Rocks will host another pitiful team, Trenton, next Tuesday before meeting rival Livonia Bentley for what should prove to be battle for the Suburban Eight League championship.

"It's really difficult to get mentally ready for a 0-15, 0-16 team," Thomann conceded. "We're just trying to get through this week, trying to get everyone healthy."

The Rocks were hit by the flu bug last week and a few leg muscle pulls didn't help any.

Neither did the competition.

"I think we played well tonight," the Salem mentor said, despite the sloppy game, "because we saw this team (Redford Union) play an eight-point game with John Glenn. So they've been playing better and we took them out of that tonight."

True. The lowly Panthers have been playing better. The last time they played Salem, before Christmas, the Rocks savored a 103-46 slashing at Redford Union's gym.

Things weren't that bad Tuesday, much to the pleasure of Panther coach Bill Foley.

"I thought we looked a lot better in the last couple of games we played," the Redford coach admitted. "We thought the way to beat them (Salem) was to control the ball. But we got behind and starting hurrying up. We had too many mistakes.

"At least it was better than the last time. We didn't get blown out of the gym."

More sports on page 6B

Game-scoring honors went to Redford Union's Glenn Roberts to put in 17. Pat Brazzil came off the bench to add 10.

Salem opened with a 20-7 first-quarter lead, but eight free throws in the second quarter helped Redford Union pull within seven points late in the period.

Canton matmen 4th in Western 6

Farmington Harrison, a team comprised mostly of seniors, won its second straight Western Six League wrestling title at the conference meet last Saturday held at Waterford Mott.

The Hawks totaled 170½ points to run away from the field. Northville, the surprise team of the meet, had everything fit in place, en route to an unexpected second-place finish with 140 points.

Walled Lake Western, the team which was expected to give Harrison a run for its money, placed third with 125½.

Plymouth Canton, Waterford Mott and Livonia Churchill rounded out the Western 6 standings.

The Chiefs, coached by Dan Chrenko, placed fourth with 88½ points. Last season, with a senior-oriented team, Canton placed third. So, in this rebuilding year, Chrenko was fairly pleased with the fourth-place spot — especially after entering the conference meet with a lowly 1-3-1 league dual-meet record.

"I figured we were going to have fifth knotted up," the Canton mentor said. "But we got some super performances. We held our own. I figured we may get around 69 points but we ended up with 88½, so it was really a tremendous day for us."

Canton had three wrestlers reach the finals, only to see them all lose. The three second-place finishes were accompanied by three thirds and two fourth. The Chiefs wrestled only 11 men in the meet.

Junior 108-pounder Tom Harreld ran into an old nemesis in the championship match, losing for a third straight time to Northville's highly-successful grappler Bill Blanchard.

Dennis Howell (148 pounds) and Jay Lee (141 pounds), both seniors, also fell in the championship round.

Junior Tim Racer and sophomore Dave Bennett were Canton's most surprising wrestlers. Both showed great improvement with third-place finishes.

Rock gymnasts make things close

By BETTY DeLANO

Posting a score of 53.15, the Plymouth Salem gymnastics team came close to winning its first meet of the season last week.

The Rocks were defeated by Dearborn Edsel Ford after being ahead at the finish of the first two events. Salem then trailed by .3 points after the third event and ended up losing to the Thunderbirds, 53.15-60.80 after the floor exercise.

Coming off this closest match of this season, Salem then couldn't hold up its competitive edge and was easily defeated Monday by Walled Lake Western, 49.8-79.7.

"The girls did extremely well in both meets," said Salem coach Carol Michaels. "Their performance in both meets was equal. The big difference was the judging of the routines. Against Walled Lake the judge was much tougher on us than the other team and at earlier meets."

Top vaulting scores for Salem against Edsel Ford were Linda Wochna with a 5.0, Jane Kimling a 5.3 and Diane Perpich with a 6.65 for a team total of 16.95. Edsel Ford was behind at this point with a score of 15.40.

The Rocks still held a lead after posting scores in the uneven bars of 2.75 from Kimling, 3.15 from Pam Worsnop and 3.8 from Nicole Rollins for a team total of 9.7. Edsel Ford picked up on the Salem lead by taking a team score of 10.55.

Taking the lead in the beam event, the Thunderbirds came out with a total of 14.1 to Salem's 13.1. A 3.85 from Kimling, 4.0 from Worsnop and a 5.25 by Wochna gave the ROcks their 13.1 total.

In the floor exercise Rollins added a score of 4.25, Perpich a 4.4 and Wochna a 4.75 for a team total of 13.4. Edsel Ford took the floor exercise with a score of 20.75 that clinched the meet.

The Rocks' total for each event against Walled Lake was a 15.7 in the vault, a 7.3 in the uneven bars, 12.9 in the beam and a 13.9 in the floor exercise for the team total of 49.8. Walled Lake's scores were 22.5, 17, 19.1 and 21.1 for a total of 79.7.

Rock JV batters Dearborn

By THOMAS ZAIBEK

Two second-period steals by Plymouth Salem's Tom Kelliher sparked the junior varsity to its 13th basketball win, 77-47, over Dearborn last Friday night. The Rocks have lost only three games this season.

The Rocks took a 12-11 first quarter lead and outscored the Pioneers, 21-3, in the second period to take control of the game.

Guard Scott Bublin and center Tim Horton lead the way with nine and five points, respectively, in that quarter.

With a 55-33 lead in the third period, the reserves took over and continued the barrage against the outmanned Dearborn squad.

Strong defensive play and balanced scoring enabled the Rocks to win by the 30-point margin.

Freshman Bublin was high scorer with 19 points followed by Langkabel and Kelliher with 16 each and Horton with nine.

Chief JV upset by Hawks

The Plymouth Canton Chiefs JV basketball team lost its second straight game Friday to Western Six League rival Farmington Harrison, 43-41.

Harrison's Eric Shanbom sank two free throws with 12 seconds left in the game to break a 41-41 deadlock.

The loss was the second in league competition and sixth overall against 10 victories.

"We just didn't come ready to play," said Canton coach Pat Cunningham. The Chiefs defeated Harrison earlier in the season, 59-38.

Canton fell behind 19-10 after one period of play and 27-18 at intermission.

Dave Carter and Dave Malek led the Chiefs with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Salem falls to Ford

Canton spikers bow to Churchill

BETTY DeLANO

All four of the Centennial Educational Park volleyball teams, junior varsity included, were defeated in league action Monday night.

Playing against undefeated Livonia Churchill, Plymouth Canton blew its chances for first place in the Western Six League by losing 1-15, 13-15, while Plymouth Salem lost to Suburban Eight League foe Dearborn Edsel Ford, 15-13, 0-15, 11-15.

PLYMOUTH CANTON was victimized by Churchill's strong serving abilities during the first game. Drives of four points each for the Chargers Julia Brubaker and Leigh Feenstra left the Chiefs in an undesirable situation. Canton found it difficult to stop the skillful Churchill squad from breezing to victory.

The younger Canton squad, which lost to Churchill earlier in the season 10-15, 5-15, put some added pressure on the Chargers during the second game before falling by two points.

Canton senior Kelly Heaton brought the Chiefs back into contention by scoring five points and putting Canton into its first lead of the match, 6-2. But the consistent defensive work on Churchill's part was too much for the Chiefs.

PLYMOUTH SALEM was defeated by Edsel Ford for the second time this season after losing the first time by scores of 11-15, 5-15.

The revenge seeking Rocks were at a disadvantage against the Thunderbirds because they didn't play two of their starting players who were sick. Senior Patty Radzik was absent from the Salem lineup and senior Monette Recto didn't compete until the third game.

A seven-point scoring drive by junior Ann Klaes and the strong performance by sophomore Cheryl Sobkow in the front row gave the Rocks the victory in the first game. But the improvement in Edsel Ford's serving during the second game put the Rocks into a serve reception slump that later resulted in the loss of the match.

"Edsel Ford wasn't serving well or couldn't receive any of our serves in the first game," said Salem coach Cathy Himes. "Cheryl did a dynamite job in the first game because she had the sets to get good hits off of. The second and third games we couldn't get the bumps to the setter and Edsel's serving improved. We weren't playing as aggressively as we were during the first game."

The junior varsity squads for both Salem and Canton were also defeated. Canton lost its match after a touch-and-go first game ending 15-17 and then lost the second game 4-15. Salem lost its match to Edsel Ford, 7-15, 6-15.

Both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem will compete in the Howell Invitational Saturday. The next regular season play for Canton is against Redford Union Monday at Redford Union. Salem takes on Trenton in league play at home Monday, trying to defend an earlier victory. Both matches are scheduled to start at 7 p.m.

Earn the highest effective annual yield available on insured savings by investing $10,000 or more in a 26-Week Money Market Certificate Account. The rate established at the time an account is opened is the rate in effect on that certificate for the full 26-week term.

These accounts are automatically renewed upon maturity at the then CURRENT rate unless otherwise notified. Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal from certificate accounts.

Belated
Happy Valentine's
Thomas Albert

NANETTE LANFEAR
I am very proud of you and I want the World to know.
Love, Dad

TO MY DARLING UNJOCK:
To my heart you own the key,
As anyone can plainly see,
For 30 years, we've been together
And many of life's storms we've weathered.
Dear Jack, I know for me you'd die.
And I'm the apple of your eye.
But why, dear Unjock, do you quiver and quake
When I suggest a Grandpa should stay in shape.
Don't take my word, my hubby, my treasure --
Just get out the old tape measure --
Hope this loving Valentine doesn't make you grumble --
But Honey, that's how the cookie crumbles.
Love, Shirlee

AMERICAN HOME SERVICES

LICENSED REAL ESTATE BROKER

$650.00 *Brokerage Fee

or approximately 1% of the selling price*

"Why pay more?"

When we say: "Why PAY more" it's because we believe approximately one-percent is all you should pay when you sell your home.

Other firms charge 6% or 7% depending on the real estate firm you're doing business with. On a $50,000 home a 7% broker will realize a $3,500 commission. That $3,500 commission is coming out of someone's pocket, either the buyer's or seller's depending on the individual transaction. American Home Services can save you $2,850.00 of your hard earned money for the same transaction.
Call us, 353-6800.

"We really work!"

At American Home Services we're not just another paper processing company. When we list your home, we go right to work. We first erect a sign on your property and begin an advertising plan. We then contact prospective purchasers, at which point we qualify the buyers and negotiate the price up to the finalization of the purchase agreement. We then arrange for financing, prepare a closing statement and attend the closing with the seller, buyer and their attorneys.

When it comes to selling your home, we work hard and we don't fool around.
