Fed up with sign law

Chamber threatens litigation

By DARLENE STINSON

The Canton Chamber of Commerce is threatening to sue Canton Township because of its ban against freestanding signs.

Chamber president Frank McMurray said the lawsuit would seek to overturn a section of the 1975 sign ordinance that prohibits businesses from erecting commercial signs near the roadway.

McMurray would not rule out the possibility that chamber members would also seek monetary damages from the township for the alleged harm the sign ban has had on their businesses.

Although the township board may allow freestanding signs, McMurray said chamber members are tired of waiting for the board to amend the ordinance.

At a meeting last Wednesday, chamber members established a fund for legal fees and voted to retain an attorney, "who is interested in our cause," McMurray said. The chamber started the fund drive with a $500 contribution.

TOWNSHIP SUPERVISOR Noel Culbert was surprised to learn of the chamber's action.

"I thought they wanted peace," he said last week. "I thought they wanted to work with the township. The chamber said they wanted good will and to work together. I think they just threw the good will out the window."

Culbert was preparing to schedule a special meeting on the sign ordinance for this Thursday, but after learning of the chamber's lawsuit, he said he would cancel the plans.

An ordinance amendment, approved by the township and Wayne County planning commissions, would allow freestanding signs up to 50 square feet in an area. But the board has not acted on the amendment.

"If they're trying to intimidate us, it's not going to work," Culbert said. "They can file their lawsuit."

McMurray said Culbert told him last week that no meeting was planned for the near future on the sign law. He said chamber members viewed that as the last straw.

Culbert and at least three of the seven township trustees have indicated they will not approve the proposed sign law change in its present form. They believe that the freestanding signs allowed are too large.

Township planners have been working on the proposed sign law for about a year-and-a-half.

AND BUSINESSES say they are tired of waiting.

They say they desperately need freestanding ground signs to attract potential customers. Some businesses claim they have lost customers because of the freestanding sign ban.

"This is a real thing," McMurray said. "This is dealing with people's lives and their ability to survive.

"We don't know how long we'll have to wait for our township government to make up their mind," he added.

"At this time, we can do nothing about the proposed ordinance. All we can say is that for four years we've been unable to put up freestanding signs. We're interested in today. We can't talk about something that's tomorrow which is the proposed ordinance."

The sign on this van got Canton businessman Gary Roberts a ticket and could lead to a legal confrontation over the township's sign ordinance. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey.)

Van sign advertises sale, earns ticket for merchant

Gary Roberts said he didn't think he was breaking any law when he hung a large yellow cloth on a van to advertise a recent sale at his store.

But Canton township officials thought otherwise.

They ticketed Roberts April 1 for violating the township's sign ordinance.

Ordinance officer Fred Baker, who issued the ticket, insists that the cloth on Roberts' van, parked in front of Lori Roberts' Canton Vac & Sew on Ford Road, was a banner. He said he told Roberts to remove the cloth on March 31 and issued the ticket after he saw the cloth and van again the next day.

The sign ordinance outlaws freestanding commercial signs in front of stores, as well as banners.

ROBERTS, a defeated township trustee candidate who opposes the sign ban, will fight the citation.

He is scheduled to appear in Canton's 35th District Court on Friday, April 13 for violating the sign ordinance. If convicted of the misdemeanor, Roberts could face a maximum $500 fine and 90 days in jail.

Roberts said he will plead innocent on the grounds that he thought he was conforming with the sign ordinance. He maintains that the cloth on the van is not a banner.

"According to the dictionary, a banner is a flag or a free-flowing cloth," Roberts said. He said the cloth was attached securely to the van.

The businessman said he will appeal the case if 35th District Judge James Garber finds him guilty. He also said that he might sue the township for damages.

Baker said he tried to be fair with Roberts by issuing a warning before the ticket. He said the cloth was attached to the side and back doors of Roberts' van.

"It's a banner," he said of the cloth. "A banner is a banner.

"Mr. Roberts stated to me that I could write him a violation," Baker said. "He said he could get free publicity in the newspapers and said he could win in court anyway."

ROBERTS' THREAT to sue is the second one directed at Canton officials last week because of the sign ordinance. Wednesday, the Canton Chamber of Commerce threatened legal ac-

Township gets funds

In its first year of operation as a township-owned facility, Fellows Creek Golf Course on Lotz near Michigan Avenue netted $74,000 in surplus revenues for township coffers.

At last week's township board meeting, Canton officials earmarked $35,000 of the surplus funds as a "nest-egg" for future bond payments which average $75,000 a year.

Board members earmarked $7,000 for capital improvements at the course, $12,500 for the purchase of maintenance equipment and $10,000 for the purchase of 12 new golf carts. Another $10,000 of the surplus funds was set aside for unspecified improvements to other township parks.

Trustee Robert Greenstein and Treasurer Jim Donahue were the only board members who voted against the allocation of the surplus funds.

Considerable controversy surrounded the $800,000 purchase of Fellows Creek last year.

Greenstein — one of the more vocal opponents of the purchase — suggested that the township sell the course. Although the township paid $800,000 for the course, Greenstein noted that interest and principal payments will total $1.5 million by the time the golf course bond issue is paid off in 1997.

But Clerk John Flodin objected to Greenstein's suggestion.

"I think it's important for people to know that this golf course is an asset, not a liability," Flodin said. "I suggest that the golf course is capable of supporting some of the recreational needs of this community."

Visibility affects ranking

By LYNN ORR

Custodians rank at the top among school personnel for job performance, according to a school research expert.

Bus drivers are second, teachers third, and school boards finish last, according to Ned Hubbell, a leader in school public relations and opinion research.

Hubbell's theory behind that curious ranking chosen by residents of 71 school districts over the past eight years concludes that direct involvement with children produces higher regard for the job.

In the case of custodians and bus drivers, the visibility of their work — clean schools and safe driving — puts them at the top of the list.

How the public views the job done by school personnel is critical when it comes to millages, Hubbell told an audience of Plymouth-Canton school district teachers, administrators and parents last week.

Apathy and the economy are why districts are losing millages.

"We lose millages because we don't know how to campaign very effectively," he says. "People don't want to vote 'no' for kids, so they don't vote. If they get soured on us and come out in droves against us, we're really going to be in trouble."

HUBBELL'S VISIT to the district was co-sponsored by the Michigan Education Association (MEA) and the Plymouth-Canton Education Association (PCEA).

Phyllis Mitchell, third grade teacher at Fiegel Elementary and past president of MEA Region II, assisted in organizing the open forum that drew about 50 persons to Pioneer Middle School last Tuesday.

The purpose? "The changing public and its implications for school millage elections," and "School public relations — a partnership with parents."

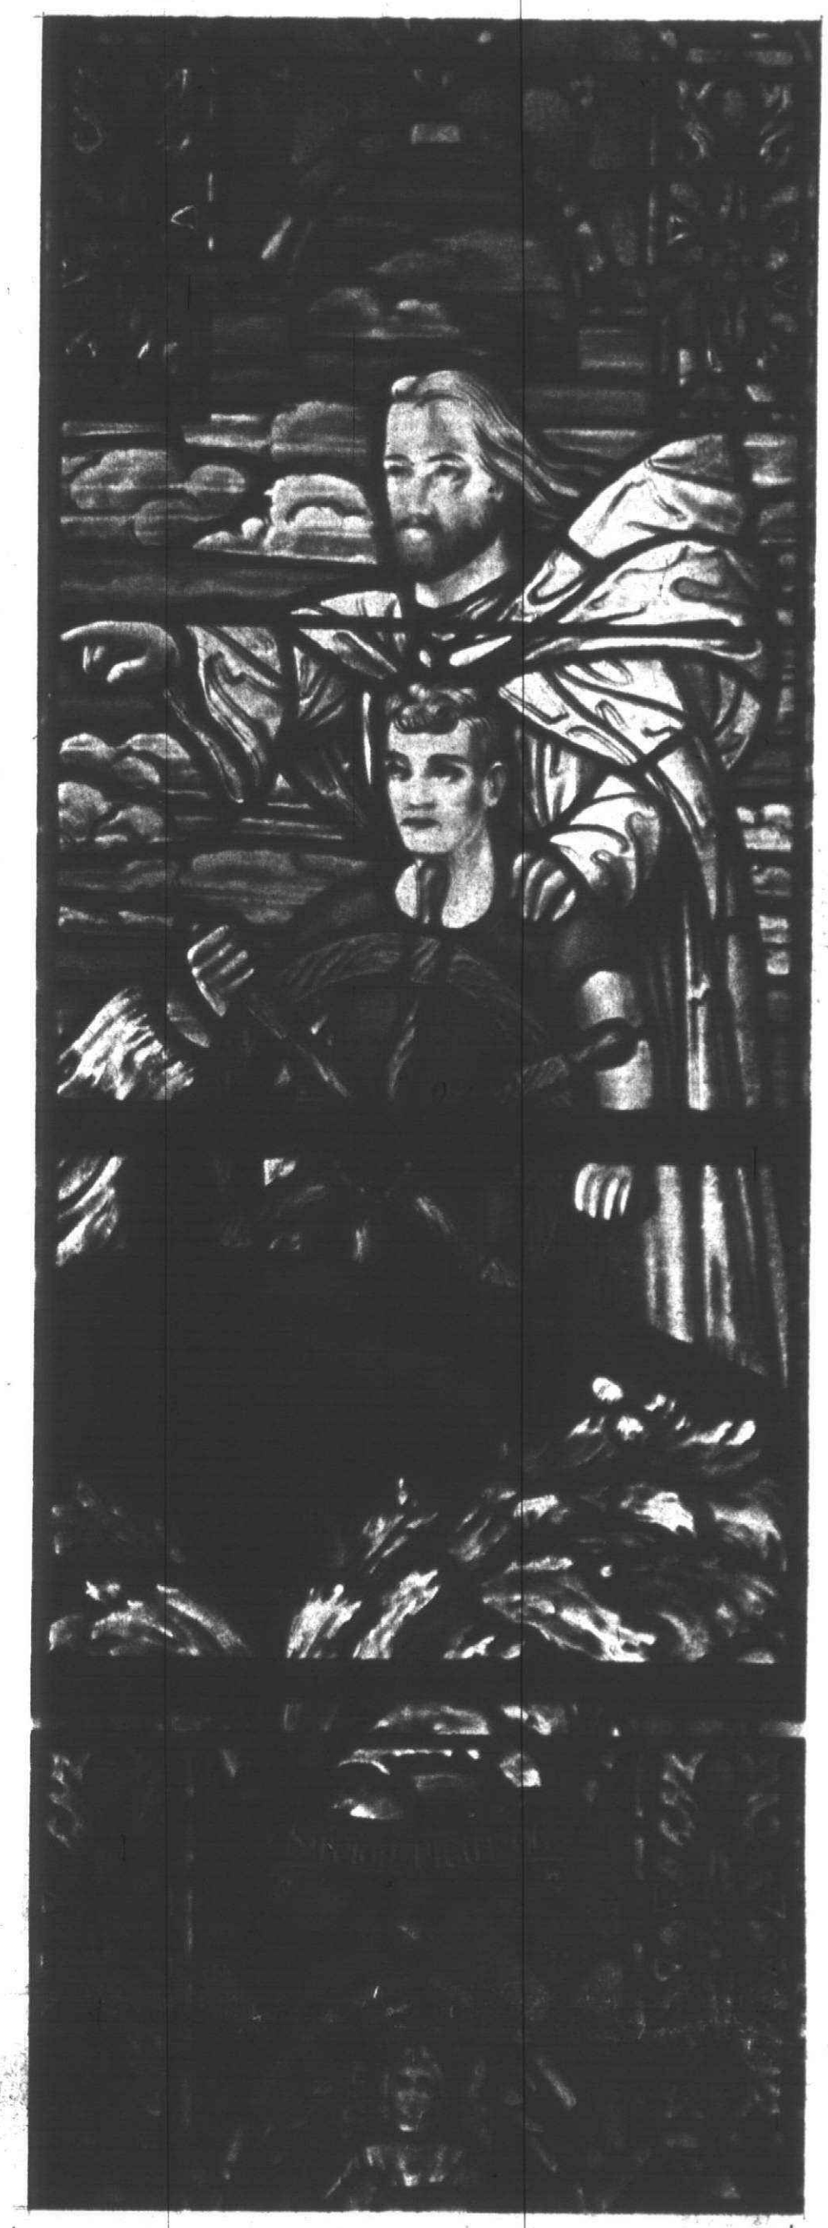

Hubbell believes strongly in getting parents involved in school. He outlined several anecdotes about how he was drawn into his children's classroom by innovative teachers.

The rankings were one example of how district residents view school personnel, and the farther away from children, the lower the rankings.

For example, school boards rank last, basically because about 25 percent of those questioned answered "can't say" about the school board's performance.

The rankings also are just one exam-

A young pilot, depicted in stained glass panels, forms the theme for one of 12 windows in the chapel at Methodist Children's Village in Redford Township. (Staff photo by Art Emanuel)

Children of world 'adorned' in glass

Children of the world look down on children of Methodist Children's Village when the current users of that Redford Township facility hold their special functions in the chapel there.

Easter services are planned this week for the youngsters who are in the special day care programs that now fill the buildings at the Six Mile Road site.

In other weeks choirs and bell choirs practice in the chapel, and there are assorted meetings and programs as well as an occasional wedding or baptism.

Last summer children of the village put on a performance of "Mary Poppins" in the chapel.

The set of 12 stained glass windows that form the main focus of the traditional chapel were designed as a tribute to the children of the world in the hope that their friendship could bring peace to the earth.

The windows and the rest of the chapel were designed before World War II, but that conflict meant construction delay and it was 1951 when the chapel was dedicated.

Each window depicts a child of a different nationality.

The one showing Jesus assisting a young boat pilot reprsents American children, and it was placed just above the choir loft at the back of the church.

That was because the late Dr. Frances Knight, for many years director of the children's home, wanted that image to be the last one the young residents saw as they left vesper services in the evening.

The window was donated by Mrs. Samuel J. Lang of Bloomfield Hills and the late Mr. Lang in memory of Dr. Sidney Eva, a clergyman long active in establishing the children's facility.

A larger window over the chapel's altar depicts a nativity scene and was dedicated to Dr. Knight.

Short takes

SHERWOOD MOBILE Village has been cited for an additional 100 violations of building and fire department regulations, according to Canton Supervisor Noel Culbert. The mobile home park, owned by Spencer Partick, was given tickets for 32 fire department violations and 57 additional violations of township ordinances two weeks ago. The 100 additional violations discovered last week are what Culbert says "are only the tip of an iceberg." The citations, for violations ranging from open sewage to exposed electrical wiring, have been issued to both individual tenants and the park manager. Culbert says the Township also plans to notify the Michigan Mobile Home Commission and the Wayne County Health Department of the problems.

THE RESULTS are in. The worst road in Canton according to our readers is . . . well, we aren't going to tell you here. Instead, turn to page 3A and you'll see the lowdown on crummy roads. Actually, when we sent Observer photographer Gary Caskey out to take a picture of the worst stretch of road (remember, the answer is on 3A) it wasn't bad at all because it had just been graded. But, if our readers are correct, it will soon be back to its normal, disreputable state.

SPICE & RACE

The spice of spring and the school board race are just two samples of the many items of interest which can be found inside today's Observer.

If you're feeling the spice of spring and are ready for that new look, you'll want to check our story and photo spread on a makeover for spring.

See story in Suburban Life Section on Page 1C.

Meanwhile back at the school board offices, seven residents thus far have filed as candidates for the June 11 election — including at least one suprise. See Page 2A.

School board race is assured

At least seven residents have filed nominating petitions for the two seats open in Plymouth Canton Board of Education annual school election June 11.

The deadline to file is 4 p.m. today.

Others still may be returning nominating petitions today.

The only board member seeking re-election to a four-year term is Tom Yack of Canton, board president.

Incumbent Joe Gray of Plymouth Township has decided against seeking re-election.

Among those filing early were James L. Sinclair and Kenneth Vogras. Sinclair of Plymouth Township is a past president of the Plymouth-Canton Junior Athletic Association.

Vogras, a longtime resident of Plymouth, is director of public works for the city.

Another resident from the Plymouth filing nominating petitions was Allen L. Smith of Irvin Street.

Another candidate filing from Canton Township was Kevin F. Campbell of Morrison.

Joining Sinclair as a candidate from Plymouth Township is Earl D. Swartzwelter of Lighthouse Ct.

The only woman to officially become a candidate thus far is Slyvia A. Stetz of Wolfriver Dr., Plymouth Township.

Another woman had filed petitions but at press time her petitions had not been validated and there was some question about whether enough proper signatures had been obtained.

At least four other residents were known to have taken out petitions but they had not returned them by the end of the day Friday.

It was not known whether the four had taken petitions out for themselves or for a candidate who already has filed, but it was believed at least one planned to run for the board.

EPA is urged to OK sewer

A resolution has been introduced in the Michigan House urging the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to approve construction of a "super sewer" in western Wayne County.

The EPA has authorized design of a 30-mile section of the huge pipe to carry waste water from Sumpter Township to a sewage treatment plant on Lake Erie.

But EPA officials have refused to release funds to extend the super sewer into the northern areas, including Plymouth, Northville, Livonia and Westland.

The resolution was introduced by state Rep. Robert C. Law, R-Livonia. Among the sponsors were state Rep. Thomas Brown, D-Westland, whose district includes Canton Township.

"Despite the fact Wayne County has spent $1 million conducting surveys and writing impact statements," says Law, "the EPA claims there is insufficient data to support extension of the sewer.

"I think sufficient data has been provided and Wayne County is convinced that the original super sewer plan is logical, cost efficient and environmentally sound."

Law said the debate over sewer has raged since 1968 and construction costs have doubled because of the delays.

Although President Carter's urban policy urges that new sewers be limited to prevent industry from moving to suburban areas which lack sufficient sewers, Law points out that the super sewer is intended to provide services for existing residents and businesses.

"Without that sewer, there can be no further development — industrial or otherwise, that would provide a good tax base to communities which need it.

"The EPA decision is narrow and short-sighted and could have a stifling affect on communities which are thriving now. I certainly hope this ill-advised policy will be changed."

Law said he also is concerned about the impact of the project on the environment if it is further delayed.

Safety

Children do their part

School youngsters still clamour for the opportunity of wearing the honored straps and badge of a safety patroller.

For years school children competed for the privilege of being a member of the safety patrol — sometimes called service squad.

And although being a member of the squad may not be as cherished a position as in years past, there still are many students anxiously volunteering for the duty.

In fact, in one elementary school of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools 78 of the 79 fifth graders this year have volunteered to serve on the safety patrol.

THE MODERN squad has a lot more duties than the patrollers who stood guard at intersections to help younger pupils cross the streets safely.

Patrol boys and girls still stand at intersections and by the school driveway entrances to help the little ones get to classes without mishap.

But the patrollers also help youngsters get on and off buses, stand guard in the playgrounds, serve in the hallways, collect lunch and milk money and other duties in the lunchrooms, and help little ones get their coats buttoned and boots on before leaving school for the day.

The variety of duties beyond intersection patrol is one of reasons many elementaries have changed the name to service squad, because service to other students is just as important as the safety functions provided by the patrollers in many cases.

A key to the safety patrol, or service squad, program still is the Automobile Club of Michigan which provides all of the belts, badges, certificates and direction books.

At many of the schools assistance also is given from the Parent-Teacher Organization. One PTO, for instance, arranges for a gift certificate to be given to each youngster selected as safety patroller of the month.

A lot of other things also are done at the individual schools to demonstrate appreciation for an important job well done. Hot chocolate may be served on cold or rainy days. One principal makes personal gifts of pop, cookies, or donuts and cider for worthy performances.

And once a year schools hold a special appreciation event for patrollers — a pizza party, a dinner, a trip to Tiger Stadium for a ballgame, or a swimming party.

These young servants may be unheralded by the general public but they have earned and receive recognition from fellow students, teachers and principals at the schools they daily serve.

Phil Komar, 10, drops his books off on the fence post and hurriedly fastens his belt before the arrival of students at his station near Allen Elementary.

The worst

Canton residents have given Sheldon Road south of Cherry Hill their vote of no-confidence in a "Worst Road in Canton Contest" sponsored by the Observer.

That Sheldon Road section and the second-place nominee, Elmhurst, were the overwhelming choices over the other roads in the area.

Both Sheldon south of Cherry Hill and Elmhurst are gravel roads and are maintained by the Wayne County Road Commission.

According to Bill Eskew of the road commission, during the spring thaw the roads are graded often depending on the amount of rain and snow as well as road use.

Eskew said that Sheldon south of Cherry Hill was graded April 5 and that Elmhurst was graded earlier in the week.

If Canton residents want these roads paved, they will have to petition for it, according to Bill Sutherland, the Wayne County Road Commission's assistant director.

Sutherland said that either the township or the property owners in those areas can petition for an assessment process in order to have the roads paved.

The assessment process depends on the number of buildings fronting on the road that people want improved and also depends on the number of people who desire the improvement.

Seventy-five percent of the frontage on the road must be divided into tracts of 300 feet or less, and there should be one building for every 300 feet of road.

According to the Road Commission, Sheldon south of Cherry Hill and Elmhurst qualify for assessment.

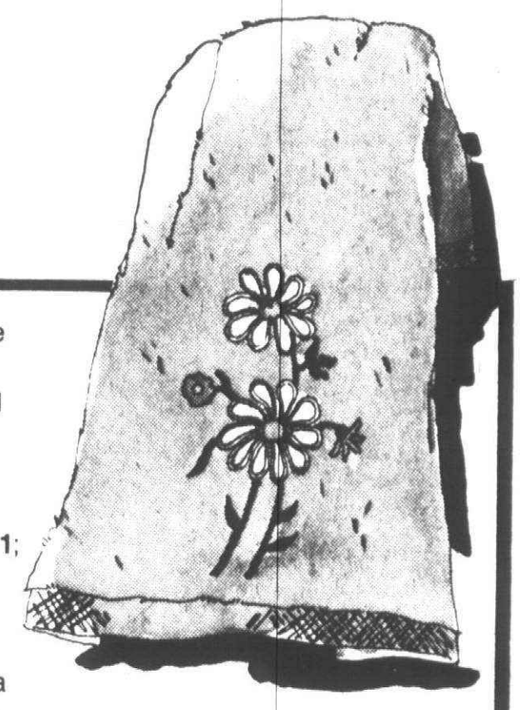

If residents want the road improved, they must pick up a petition from the Road Commission, have 51 percent of the owners of good tax standing sign it and return it to the commission.

O&E

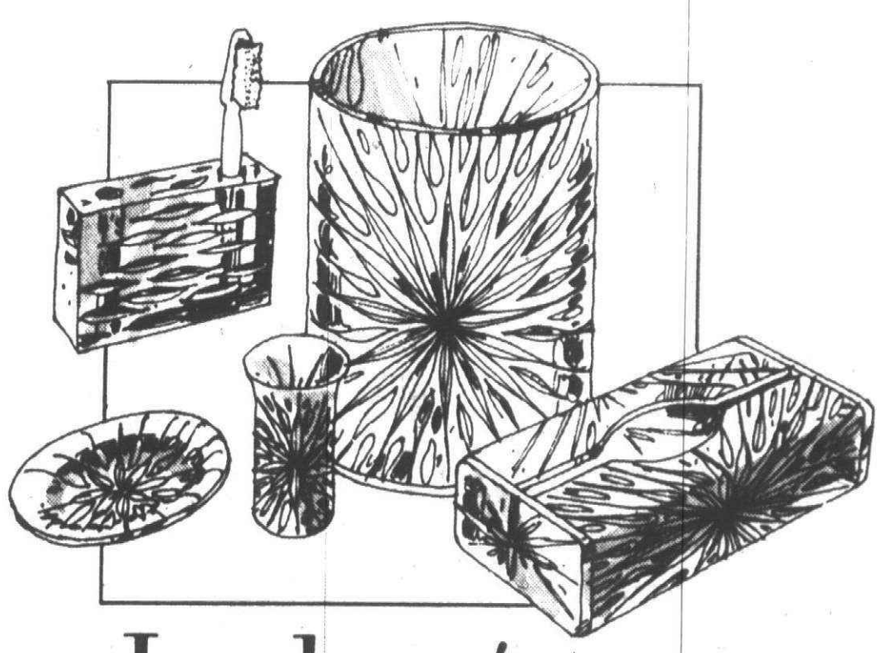

The stretch of Sheldon Road south of Cherry Hill Road doesn't look bad since it was graded, but residents said it was the worst section of road in the Township.

ple of the kind of knowledge Hubbell has accumulated over the years when it comes to schools and public relations.

He is founder and president of Ned S. Hubbell & Associates, the nation's first counseling firm devoted exclusively to educational public relations and opinion research.

HUBBELL HAS worked out of Port Huron for the last 14 years, during which time he's conducted more than 100 school district public opinion polls.

Currently the firm is conducting a $12,000 poll for Lakeview School District near Battle Creek to discover why the district recently lost three millages.

That's about tops in price for a survey, he says. If a district takes on some of the work itself, such as interviewing or sampling, the price can be as low as $1,500.

In 10 months last year, the firm conducted 22 polls, reporting objectively as to residents' responses to district questions. The surveys are formed based on what each district wants to know — almost a school performance survey in some cases.

Sign lawsuit

McMurray said chamber members view a lawsuit as a possible solution. Some months ago, chamber attorney Bernie Schwartz indicated that some provisions of the current sign law may be unconstitutional, McMurray said.

He said about 25 chamber members attended last week's meeting. Although some members abstained from voting, McMurray said no one at the meeting voted against the chamber's executive committee recommendation to pursue legal action.

IF THE ban on freestanding ground signs is lifted, McMurray said the chamber may still sue the township for damages.

He maintains that the chamber is not trying to intimidate the township board. "This is not political action," he said. "It's just questioning an ordinance on the books."

But Culbert believes otherwise. He says the township board will fight back.

"If they're trying to urge me into action, I'll drag my feet," he said. "We don't have to pass a new sign ordinance."

tion to overturn the sign prohibition (see related story in today's issue).

The ordinance prohibits businesses from using banners for outdoor advertising purposes or to park vehicles with signs advertising businesses in front of stores.

ROBERTS INSISTS that his citation did not influence the chamber's decision to sue. He also said he was not trying to sidestep the sign ordinance.

"I didn't do it to test the ordinance. I thought it was safe," he said. "I didn't want to violate the ordinance and spend money going to court."

Like most chamber members, Roberts maintains that the ban on freestanding signs has hurt his business.

"I'm not getting as much business as I could," he said.

S'craft tax returns to ballot on June 11

By TIM RICHARD

Voters in the Schoolcraft College District will be asked June 11 to approve a scaled-down tax hike package following the March 26 defeat of a request for one mill for five years.

The new request, in two parts, will ask one mill ($1 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation) for a single year. The parts:

• A half-mill to raise about $1 million for a Culinary Arts Addition to the Waterman Campus Center. The college already has about $1.2 million in the bank for this expansion.

• A half-mill "for remodeling, equipping and re-equipping existing buildings, site improvements and major maintenance expenditures.

Both of those items were in the March 26 package. In effect, the new proposal drops an Applied Sciences addition and a new Learning Resources Center from the package.

THE VOTE Wednesday on the board of trustees was 6-2 to put the package on the ballot. Dissent came from the two board members who are politically poles apart — Leonard Wozniak and Mark McQuesten.

Wozniak called the Culinary Arts addition " a mistake. . . too expensive." He added: "I'm convinced it's going to be defeated. Regardless of how great we (trustees) think this institution is, the question in voters' minds is not Schoolcraft College but taxes."

McQuesten said, "I'm not ready to work on it (millage campaign), and I can't ask others to work on it."

Referring to last month's special election where the 7,200 turnout (five percent of the electorate) was less than the college's enrollment, McQuesten turned his oral guns on the voters.

"The people are guilty of gross neglect of this college. They created an institution and refuse to support it. The students have shown themselves to be irresponsible. I can't be the student spokesman any longer," said McQuesten, the board's only former Schoolcraft student.

THE MAJORITY, however, thought the college's physical plant is in bad enough shape that another request to voters is justified.

"My heart says what we did (in the March 26 proposal) was correct, but the realities are that we must prioritize," said vice-chairman Harry Grenenleaf.

"The culinary addition is expensive, but it's not just for 60 students. It's 60 a year, from now until there's no need for the program. Maintenance and equipment are also a top priority." said Greenleaf, summing up the majority view.

The June 11 millage request will be on the same ballot as elections for K-12 school board members and Schoolcraft board members. Thus, the college's millage request could become a board election issue.

Three full six-year terms expire, but only two will be elected under a state law that pares the Schoolcraft board from eight members to seven. Incumbents Gerald Cox of Garden City and Nancie Blatt of Livonia are circulating nominating petitions. Board Chairman Paul Y. Kadish of Livonia said he will retire after eight years.

In addition, trustee Richard Hayward of Livonia will have to face voters to serve out the remaining two years of the term to which he was appointed. He is circulating nominating petitions.

THE CULINARY art addition would allow the community college to expand enrollment from 58 to about 120 and provide community facilities as well.

The Michigan Legislature has appropriated $750,000 for the project, but the money will be lost in another year unless the college district can come up with its share. In addition, the college already has $500,000 in the bank for it.

Major maintenance and equipment plans are not spelled out on the ballot because many small projects are involved. An administrative memo lists these:

Road development, repairs to parking lots and drives, a new fire alarm system, new pipes for the pool: modification of the boiler piping for the Liberal Arts Building, modification of heating, air-conditioning and ventilating systems for energy conservation, and equipment for the business division, student affairs division, administration, physical plant and athletics.

Each half-mill would yield about $1 million on the college district's valuation of $2 billion. The college district includes the K-12 districts of Clarenceville, Garden City, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth-Canton and a small portion of Novi.

Pro umps on strike

Plymouth umpire gets big league shot

By BRAD EMONS

A strike by major league umpires has given Plymouth resident Richard Runchey a chance to show his stuff in the big leagues.

The striking baseball umpires have been replaced with fill-in crews from around the country. The major league umpires are in the midst of a contract dispute over salaries. Both the league front office and the "men in blue" are reportedly far apart in the negotiations.

Runchey, 28, a materials control scheduler at Detroit Diesel Allison, got a call two weeks ago from Doug Cossey, who had the job of finding capable replacements. The Detroit baseball club put Cossey in charge of forming his own crew.

"When Doug called me I said sure. It's an honor to be chosen but it's a difficult job," said Runchey.

Runchey has three years experience in the minor leagues. In 1975 he worked in the Southern AA League.

In 1972, after graduating from Central Michigan University, Runchey was a pupil in the Somers Umpire School in Daytona Beach, Fla.

"I started umpiring little league when I was 16," he said. "In college I officiated Babe Ruth league."

Runchey also has experience umpiring major league teams in spring training.

"I pursued a goal to become a major league umpire and then made a decision not to do it," he said.

RUNCHEY HAS been working strictly college baseball games the last few years. He is a familiar face in the Big 10, Mid-American and GLIAC leagues.

The Plymouth umpire was scheduled to be on one of the bases during yesterday's game between Texas and Detroit at Tiger Stadium.

The other men on the crew include Cossey of Birmingham, Robert Moyer, a mailman in Birmingham; Tom Ravashiere, and Mike Fitzpatrick, a AAA league umpire from the minor league development school.

Over the weekend, striking major league umpires were expected to picket Tiger Stadium.

"None of the major league umpires have called me," said Runchey. "I can understand their viewpoint. They are professionals and what they are saying is correct."

"It's a thrill and exciting. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity," Runchey said.

American League umpire Dave Phillips said that umpires under their current contract average $183 per game. The striking umps want their minimum yearly salary to increase from $17,500 to $23,500.

Phillips said NBA referees make $455 per game.

Runchey doesn't know what sum he will receive as an interim replacement.

"THE PRO GAME in the majors is a little different than in college," he said. "In the majors you have four umpires, whereas in college you just have two per crew."

"You don't have to cover as much ground in the pros. But you have back up each other more on the bases."

Runchey said the pro game is more difficult to umpire because the pace is faster.

"People in the major leagues throw faster and the plays happen quicker. Guys are smarter also," said the Plymouth resident.

Runchey said he expects the high-paid major leaguers will treat the fill-in crews in much the same manner as the regular umpires.

"They are concerned about their own jobs," said Runchey about the players. "Some decisions will always turn into arguments."

"It could get heated out there but I'm just going to go out and do my best," he said.

Runchey said their are some competent men working on the fill-in crew. Ravashiere is a 19-year veteran in the minor leagues. He is an assistant director in the Toledo Parks and Recreation Department.

Fitzpatrick will not stay in Detroit until the strike is settled. He will leave for another series once the Detroit-Texas series is over.

Cossey, Ravashiere, Moyer and Runchey, the youngest of the crew, will rotate in the three other positions and will not travel. They will be doing games strictly at Tiger Stadium.

Faculty, pupils tie

Plymouth Canton held its first senior-faculty basketball game and to the surprise of everybody, the game ended in a 48-48 tie.

Behind Scott Kurtz' 13 points in the first half, the faculty enjoyed a 28-25 lead.

The seniors were coached by varsity basketball players Butch King, Jay McKinely and Mike Leary.

The faculty was coached by Canton varsity coaches Craig Bell and Pat Cunningham.

The two teams were tied, 48-48, at the end of regulation play. Both squads decided not to play an overtime period.

"The teachers looke tired out there, but we were ready to play," said King about his seniors.

"We got some great hustle on the part of the faculty," said Bell.

Coach back; Chiefs make strides

By BRAD EMONS

After a recent game, Detroit Piston basketball coach Dick Vitale asked the press: "How far are we from being a contender?"

Plymouth Canton's boys track coach Mike Spitz, who has returned to the Chiefs after a one-year absence, is wondering the same thing.

Spitz coached the Canton varsity two years ago. Last year he directed the Bishop Borgess girls track team.

Like Vitale, Spitz is looking toward the future.

"Canton placed fourth last year in the Western Six League meet, their highest finish ever," said Spitz. "From their results last year, they lost a lot of close meets, 10 points and under."

Spitz will have the same problem as last year's Canton varsity coach Mike Tiano did — not much depth to work with.

"We have a small to average size squad," said Spitz. "We have approximately 40-42 out."

Livonia Churchill has won the Western Six title the last six years under the direction of coach Fred Price, but Spitz is hoping that may change. "They (Churchill) have a good program and have been a powerhouse," said Spitz.

"Northville had a good cross country team and so did we. I see us moving up, but it's a slow process."

IN THE FIELD events, Spitz will look for points from senior shot put-discus performers Frank Kellogg, Greg Mallare, Joel Mallare and Alan Olszewski.

"Those four will give us leadership. They've been responding to hard work," said the Canton coach.

In the high jump, returning veterans include senior Dave Talaga and junior Dan McGlinn, who just concluded the basketball season.

The lone returning pole vaulter is junior Randy Lee while the only long jumper with experience is John Tarr.

One of the top athletes on the Canton track team is senior 220-yard dash standout Rich Fleischer. He won the regional and reached the state finals in the 220. His best time has been :23.0.

Adding strength in the sprints are senior Dave Deseatel, Tarr and McGlinn.

Fleischer, McGlinn, Talaga and junior Phil Simon will compete in the 440-yard dash for the Chiefs. McGlinn, an all-around performer, will also see action in the hurdles along with senior Jerry Van Berkel and junior Larry Bigelow.

Spitz is optimistic about his middle distance and distance group.

"WE'RE COMING OFF a good cross country season and that should carry over to our track team."

Workhorses Talaga and McGlinn may see action in the 880-yard run as will sophomore Vince Lewis.

The mile and two-mile contingent will consist of senior Dave Perrot, junior Dave Spitz, sophomore Mark Talaga, junior Randy Hennels and sophomore Mike Swisher.

"My assistant coach, Tim Fox, who also coaches the cross country team, has been working hard with our distance people," Spitz said.

Dave Spitz is the brother of the coach while Hennels, according to coach Spitz, "has looked good in practice. "I have to be optimistic," said Spitz. "We're not deep but we have some good talent.

"We have some individuals who are working hard and it's going to pay off. We must avoid injuries because of our lack of depth.

"I don't think anybody will run us into the ground," he said.

Cage jobs vent applicants

By BRAD EMONS

It's been a topsy-turvy week for college basketball coaches in Michigan.

Western Michigan University named University of Illinois assistant Len Wothke to the head post. He replaced Dick Shilts who was unable to bring in a winner after three years.

Eastern Michigan replaced ex-Piston coach Ray Scott with University of Michigan assistant Jim Boyce.

University of Detroit coach Dave "Smokey" Gaines made his threat stick, when he accepted the head coaching position at San Diego State.

Plymouth Salem coach Fred Thomann applied for the Eastern Michigan job and was granted what he said was "a good interview" with EMU athletic director Alex Agase.

Thomann has an outstanding high school coaching record, one of the best in the state. It was the first time he applied for a college position.

"People I had known asked me if I was going to apply for the EMU job," said Thomann, "so I filled out an application because I wanted to know what it's like to be in collegiate coaching."

"I was familiar with the school and the area. I did my masters work at Eastern," he said.

The Salem coach said he wanted to see what the process was in applying for a college job.

"I DIDN'T HAVE ANYBODY call for me. I didn't actively pursue the job," he said.

"I was fortunate to merit an interview and it went well. I was not upset or disappointed because I didn't get the job. I wasn't excited when I found out I was to be interviewed."

Thomann said he is not going to apply for every job that comes along. He wants to weigh each opportunity.

"If it's right for me, it'll be the right job," he said. "Yes, I'd like to go to the college level, but I won't scheme or connive to get it."

Thomann said he might be interested in an assistant's position, but it couldn't be a school that has never had one.

The Salem coach was conerned that "people are making more out of this than it should be.

"I like where I am. The Eastern job was a challenge but my job at Salem is also a real challenge."

Thomann was a serious candidate at EMU. He was one of a handful picked for an interview out of approximately 74 candidates. The EMU administration would not reveal who else was interviewed for the job.

Like Thomann, Boyce was highly qualified for the job. The former assistant at U-D and successful coach at Detroit Northwestern knows the Detroit area. He has contacts not only in the area, but around the country.

BOYCE IS A HARD worker. He gets out and meets people unlike the Ray Scott regime did. The job will be a challenge for him. EMU has been on a downswing ever since Jim Dutcher, now at Minnesota, resigned.

Most universities have gone the assistant route in selecting head coaches. Vanderbilt recently hired an assistant coach.

Some high school coaches are frustrated, wondering if they'll ever get serious consideration as Thomann did.

Bloomfield Hills Lahser coach Nick Conti, who also applied for the Eastern job, was not granted an interview. He has an outstanding record in his six years of coaching. Lahser finished this season at 20-3, losing twice in the final seconds to powerful Birmingham Brother Rice.

"It seems to me they want to hire college assistants," said Conti. "I didn't think they took me seriously and I was disappointed in the format. They told me, 'we'll call you'."

Conti is eager to get into college coaching, but he is wondering what is the best way.

"The Eastern situation was frustrating," he said.

Tom Villemure, who has been an assistant college coach, successful high school coach and has guided Grand Valley State three times into the NAIA national tourney, openly campaigned for the Western Michigan job. He has contacts in the Detroit area and around the state. He's happy at Grand Valley and reportedly turned the Western job down.

THAT BRINGS US TO the situation at the University of Detroit. Many media people criticized Gaines for his approach to his contract negotiations with the U-D administration.

All Gaines wanted was security. Instead they threw a bunch of "conditions" on the table. His contract was not discussed until after the NCAA tournament was over. He felt his value to the university was more than what they had offered, which was next to little or nothing.

With a more substantial and definite offer, Gaines packed his bags and left for San Diego State.

The program at U-D is now in jeopardy. The best move athletic director Larry Geracoiti could make would be to hire a coach familiar with the area.

My better instincts tell me that a coach from the east will come in. That could be the ultimate demise of the program and then Geracoiti.

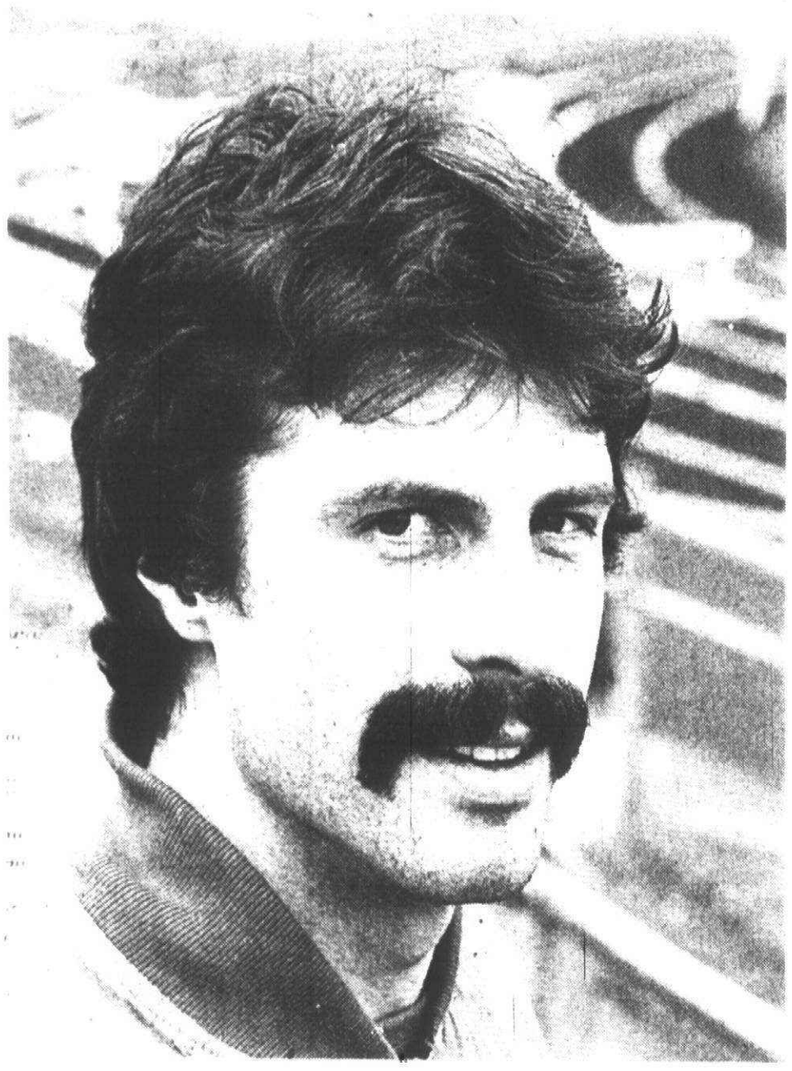

The alumni are fed up with the situation. Whoever accepts the position will face a real challenge.

Gaines knew the territory and could recruit with anyone. That is often the bottom line in college coaching. Just ask a former NBA coach of the year.

Kurtz seeks meet improvement; Salem girls ready for outdoors

Scott Kurtz returns for his third season as the Plymouth Salem girls' track coach. The team just concluded its indoor season and will start the outdoor campaign Wednesday at Livonia Bentley. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

By BRAD EMONS

With just about everybody back, Plymouth Salem girls' track coach Scott Kurtz hopes his team will improve on their 1-10 dual meet record from a year ago.

"We can be pretty strong if we run to our potential," said Kurtz. "We're a good practice team but haven't proved it in the real meets yet."

"We had a young team last year," said Kurtz, "but we lost just two seniors."

The Salem girls' track roster is dominated by young talent again this year.

But seniors such as co-captain Erin Lucas will hold the key to a successful season.

Lucas leads a deep group of high jumpers who should clear 5-0. Other returnees include Diane Perpich and Kim Brown.

The other co-captain, Lisa Morris, returns for duty in the long jump along with veterans Anne Mixner and Perpich.

Junior Carin Ford is back in the shot put. She was the only Salem girl to qualify for the state meet last year. As a sophomore, her best toss was 35-0.

She will be joined by senior Sharon Radionoff and Swedish exchange student Inger Eithun.

Ford, Radionoff and Eithun will also see action in the discus event.

"EITHUN SHOULD should give us depth in the field events. She looks good so far," said the third-year Salem coach.

The sprint corps is led by Mixner, a junior, and sophomore Daryn Simms. Both runners will run the 440-yard relay besides the 100 and 200-yard dashes.

In the middle distance events, returning veterans include Brown, Beth Horner and sophomore Rochelle Baltes, who will run the 880.

In the 440-yard dash, Mixner and freshman Linda Lybarger will get plenty of action.

Two freshman anchor the mile and two mile run. The top runners for the varsity are Lori Grissom and Ruth Sample.

Lucas heads the list of returnees in the hurdles. Other letter winners back include Mixner and Rene Slavin.

"I don't know where we'll finish in our league. I have no idea," said the Salem coach.

"Trenton, Dearborn and Redford Union had good teams last year but I'm not sure about the teams in our league this year," he said.

Kurtz said his girls are in shape and should be ready for the outdoor season.

"Our attitude is much improved . Our girls have to get mentally prepared for each race," he added. "They have to mentally toughen up."

SALEM OPENS up its dual meet schedule at Livonia Bentley at 4 p.m. Wednesday, April 11.

Salem's first home meet is not until Tuesday, May 8 against Dearborn.

Some Ocelot squads lack support

By DOUG FUNKE

Even though few students and staff of Schoolcraft College watch the exploits of the school's athletic teams, the squads have turned in some excellent performances in recent years.

For example:

- This season, the men's basketball team tied for the Eastern Conference championship in the Michigan Community College Athletic Association.
- Jennifer DeVenney, the only female on the cross country team last fall, qualified for the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) women's championship in Champaign, Ill.
- This season, the soccer team won its regional and advanced to the NJCAA finals in Miami, Fla.
- The women's volleyball team qualified for the NJCAA finals in Catonsville, Md. during the 1977 and 1975 seasons.

There have also been a couple of problem areas with the athletic program this year. The wrestling team consisted of only three athletes and the women's basketball team could muster only five players for the final game of the season.

"We run (varsity) sports for the participants pretty much like an advanced class as opposed to intramurals, where someone doesn't want the discipline necessary for success," said Schoolcraft athletic director Marvin Gans.

Gans said he leaves it up to his individual coaches whether they actively recruit or not.

"It's our policy to recruit in-district first (Livonia, Clarenceville, Plymouth-Canton, Garden City and Northville School Districts) and the immediate contiguous area," said Gans.

Total available funds for athletic financial aid approximates $5,000 per year for men and women's sports combined at Schoolcraft, said Gans.

While the NJCAA allows athletic scholarships to cover tuition and fees, room and board and books, Schoolcraft's policy is to limit aid to $300 per person per year.

Thirty-two student athletes — 20 in-district and 12 from outside — received an athletic stipend averaging $130 this year.

There are other forms of financial assistance for which athletes might qualify at Schoolcraft including federal Basic Education Opportunity Grants and work-study programs.

To maintain eligibility, athletes must carry at least a 1.5 cumulative grade-point average (4.0 scale) for at least 10 credit hours per term.

"Who would come here?," Gans repeated. "Those who are not sure they want to go away to school or maybe not ready to go away.

"Maybe they're average students who want to go somewhere with good facilities and still stay home. We run a pretty quality program. We have travel and meals (expenses) covered and the fellowship is there," said Gans. "It's not high pressure.

"We have a lot of kids in-district who are fairly well-to-do," Gans continued. "If they can go away, they do, even if they can't play ball."

Jeanette Bowman, women's basketball coach, said she has had quite a bit of firsthand experience with a frequent conflict between work and sports for community college athletes.

"Work is a difficult situation," said Bowman. "I can understand why they do work because school is more important than sports.

"Girls who come out have to be very sincere with it. I should probably say 'work or basketball' for continuity, but it's really hard.

"If we could get more money (financial aid for athletes), it would help out tremendously," she said.

"With so many schools in the area — Wayne State, U-D, Eastern Michigan, Henry Ford Community College — you have to entice them (athletes) with something other than being able to play.

"Schoolcraft has very good potential to develop, but needs financial support," said Bowman.

Bowman, who has coached the past two seasons, said she is not sure if she will return for a third.

The type of student now enrolling in community colleges also helps explain an apparent lack of interest in athletics at that level.

"More and more of our students are part-time students," wrote Schoolcraft President C. Nelson Grote last December in a report titled, "The State of the Community College in Michigan."

"In recent years," he continued, "we have had more students, but students have been taking fewer hours. Average credit hours are dropping at a steady rate, with many colleges reporting less than eight credit hours as an average or typical load."

It seems that students are coming to school for specific classes, completing their business, then leaving. Many have job and family responsibilities to attend to.

"If community college's tend to draw well (attendance), it's because people identify well with a particular college or community," said Gans. "It's sort of the only game in town.

"Here, we have 14 Class A high schools within a 20-mile radius. Look at the colleges in the area and the pro teams. There are so many diversions.

"There's a big difference between subway schools and four-year residential schools that have a captive audience," Gans said. "At a place like Central Michigan in Mt. Pleasant 20,000 students will go bananas over intramurals."

What are the possibilities of making more financial aid money available for athletes?

"Because of the situation of the institution, I don't know how we can now," said Gans.

He made that statement prior to the recent millage failure, the fourth defeat in a row.

IN THE POCKET

By W.W. EDGAR

Even though half of the teams in the Wonderland Classic were in Florida competing in the ABC tournament, the tradition of at least one 700 series a week was carried on.

The chap who saved the day was Bob Patterson, who turned in his most consistent bowling of the year. He opened with a 234, added a 237 and finished with 236 for a 707. His nearest rival was Aaron Lipsky who fashioned a 679 series.

MARGE KROPACEK, the Canton Township homemaker who captains the Livonia Bowling Sales team in the all-star leagues, had one of the most unusual bowling experiences of her life Wednesday night at Crown Lanes.

Troubled with all manner of splits in her first two games in which she posted counts of 129 and 115, she did a complete turnabout in the final where she fired a 215.

JOHN HURLEY, the Westland Bowl sharpshooter, shot a 268 game last Monday morning, but it came just a few minutes too late. In quest of another 700 series of which he has 17 this season, he had to be content with a 658. Then, in his fourth game, he hit the 268, waved good bye and set out for the ABC in Florida.

In the ladies classic, Betty Hoener showed the way with games of 215 and 212 in a 617 series. Cyndi Edwards was right behind with a 234 in 610 and Bev Haggadone landed third with 603 that included a 257 game.

BRAD LACKEY was another who turned in a consistent performance.

Bowling in the Vinco League at Garden Lanes, he started with 224, came back with 219 and closed with 216 for 659 to gain the pacemaking role.

In order behind him came Loren Rigolie with 633, Bob Malinsant with 612, Frank Cernik with 601 and Al Kowalski with 595.

THE JUNIOR HOUSE league at Woodland Lanes came up with an unusual performer when Lee Carlesimo bowled a 638. It was unusual because he carries a 171 average and posted games of 191, 222 and 225 which is 125 pins over.

Among the other high scores, Marv Gadde linked games of 225, 215 and 238 for a 678 in the Great Scott loop. In the Ford LTT circuit Norm Hamada registered a 252 and Steve Blaszczak posted a 244.

AT MAYFLOWER LANES Al Tilley set the pace for the week when he rolled a 631 in the Mixers league. Jack Brodie was next high for the week with 612. On the ladies side, Jan Livingston had a 584 and Mary Lou Wesman turned in a 574.

IN OTHER performances Fred O'Connor paced the senior citizens at Plymouth Bowl with a 232 and Ev Hubble fired a 253 in a 587 series at Super Bowl.

A?FTER GETTING away to a great start with games of 259 and 246, Dave Uniatowski faltered in the final and missed breaking the 700 barrier in the Bel-Aire Classic by a mere eight pins. With the pressure of the possible 700 he slumped to 187 and had to settle for 692.

With that count he had a big lead on his rivals as Jerry Fischer landed second with a 244 in 655 and Gary Hodge was tied with Jerry Smiddy at 651 for third place.

Gilles optimistic

Rocks' pitching holds key

By BRAD EMONS

Bolstered by the return of four senior pitchers, Plymouth Salem appears to be a serious contender again for the Suburban Eight League crown.

The Rocks were 17-7 overall last season and shared the Suburban Eight League title with Livonia Bentley. Both teams finished with 10-4 marks.

"Pitching will be the key to our success," said Salem coach Brian Gilles.

Lefthander Matt Etienne leads the pitching corps. He will be joined by righthander Barry Owens.

"Barry has really come on. He's matured and is quite a competitor," said Gille.

Also slated to see plenty of action are righthanders John Holdsworth and David Runge, both of whom saw limited action last year. Holdsworth is probably the hardest thrower on the staff.

"I'd like to start the season letting those four pitchers split the work. That may be hard because we start out with two league games right off the bat," he said.

"When a game gets close, you tend to stick with the pitcher that's already out on the mound," Gilles said.

'We're solid up the middle.'
— Salem coach Brian Gilles

Gilles said his Salem team is strong up the middle led by the keystone combination of second baseman Paul Dillon and short stop Chris Hannan.

AT 6-FOOT-1, Hannan is one of the finest defensive shortstops ever to play for Gilles.

Dillon, a senior, found a home at second base last season after being switched from the outfield. He is one of the top hitters returning from last season and will most likely be the team's lead-off man.

Catcher Dave "Bubba" Wilcox returns for his senior season and will supply most the power.

"We'll give him the green light a lot this year. He is good defensively and has an outstanding arm," Gilles said.

Wilcox, a .300 hitter last year, has been designated as the cleanup hitter.

The senior catcher is backed up by senior Mike Cimino, who also plays third base and the outfield. Junior Keith Gruden is also in reserve.

Jim Anderson, a 6-foot-2 junior, has the inside track on first base for the Rocks. He is a converted short stop and may see action as a relief pitcher.

"We think Jim can really do the job for us," said the Salem coach.

Chuck Janovsky, a lefthander, will also play first base.

Third base is wide open. Cimino is battling for a job with junior Mike Woodard and senior Mike Michalek.

SENIOR SAM MERRILL, a lefty who started last year in left field will be there again. His backup is junior Julian Martinez.

When he's not pitching, Etienne will play center field, Junior Chad Zbacnik will also play in center.

Lefthander Paul Woodard, a senior, will be the right fielder with senior Billy Harsha and Owens slated for duty.

"I think we have good power with Anderson and Wilcox," said Gilles. "We hit well at home and play 17 or 18 games. Our fences are reachable."

Gilles believes his defense is solid.

"We have a good catcher and up the middle we're solid," he said.

Salem plans to use the hit and run when the opportunity exists.

"With Woodard and Hannan, we'll plan to use it," said Gilles.

"We don't have great team speed but we have some individuals we'll give the green light," he said.

Gilles sees Dearborn and Livonia Bentley as strong contenders for the league title along with his team.

"This is a competitive league, on any given day any team can beat you," Gilles said.

Another team Gilles said had strong possibilities for a league crown was Redford Union, now in the Northwest Suburban League.

"They have a good team coming back. They can be a contender in the Northwest Suburban."

Matt Etienne returns for the Rocks as a starting pitcher. He will also play center field. He practices bunting during an indoor workout.(Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Bad weather can't prevent Chiefs' softball hopes

BETTY DeLANO

Despite erratic changes during the past month, the Plymouth Canton varsity softball team is still planning on opening its season tomorrow unless the threat of snow prevails.

Because of the inclement weather, tomorrow's opener against Livonia Stevenson will not only be the Chiefs' first game of the season, but only the second time it has been able to get outdoors.

"We've only been outside once so far since the start of the season so I really don't know what I've got as far as outfielders are concerned," said first year varsity coach Max Sommerville.

"From what I've been able to see inside, I think our defense will be very strong," he said. "Everyone on the team has good speed and throws the ball with some degree of accuracy."

The biggest plus sign for the Chiefs this year is the return of 14 veterans from last year's district champs.

Sommerville brought up just two players from the junior varsity.

The team is led by four-year letterwinner and senior co-captain Kathy Peck.

Peck's speed and agility along with an accurate and strong arm places her in the shortstop position for the Chiefs. According to Sommerville, Peck has all the necessary tools to be a fine player.

JOINING PECK in the captain's chair is senior Valerie Harbin. She will see action at third base along with fellow senior Sue Lindsay. Both Harbin and Lindsay are quick and can react in any situation. Both have strong arms which will aid the Canton defense.

Other seniors in the Canton line-up include Lucy Howe, a pitcher, and Stepanie Hancock, who played as a sophomore for the Chiefs but not as a junior. She is an outfielder.

Returning as juniors to the Canton varsity will be Vicki Cavallero, second base; Cindy Stevens, first base; Jean Krashenwitz, outfield; Maureen Morahan, second base and outfield; Cheryl Pijanowski, outfield; Marlen McKinley, first and third base; Janet Nostrant, infield; and Cathy Campbell, centerfield.

New members who joined the varsity after playing on the junior varsity a year ago under coach Cathy Himes are sophomore MariAnn Pink and Joni Sommerville. Pink will also pitch while Sommerville will play a dual role — outfielder and short.

The Canton infield looks strong for the upcoming season with the 5-foot-10 Stevens stationed at first base and Schipani perched behind the plate.

"Cind (Stevens) has excellent speed for her height," said Sommerville, "and she doesn't drop many balls."

"She is confident in catching the hard throws from Peck at shortstop."

"PAM (SCHIPANI) has great desire to play well and has all the skills needed. She's quick as well as aggressive and tends to be the spark plug that keeps the team up," Sommerville said.

The new Canton coach will be concentrating mostly on control. He will also rely on strong defense.

Sommerville said he expects his pitchers to be able to throw the ball consistently before working on change-up or strike-out pitches.

Offensively, Sommerville hasn't had a chance to see his team hit other than from an inside batting cage. In the first part of the year he will be counting more on speed and taking advantage of the mistakes made by his opponents.

Wolverine opens season

Wolverine Harness Raceway, located at Schoolcraft and Middlebelt Roads in Livonia, opens its 30th racing season at 8 p.m. tonight. Gates open at 6 p.m.

Admission to the grandstand is $2.50, and $3.50 to the clubhouse. Parking on the grounds is $1 and programs will be available for 75 cents. Children under 12 will not be admitted.

Track officials have revamped the nightly wagering format.

There will be a daily double on the first and second races, trifecta wagering will be offered on the third, sixth and 10th races, and perfectas on the fourth, fifth, seventh, eighth and ninth races.

Several improvements have reportedly been made at the racing facility, with most changes occurring in the grandstand.

Heading the list is a glass enclosure of the grandstand. The glass wall may be moved up and down depending on the weather.

Two five-foot television screens have been installed to display replays of races and a new lounge has been built in the grandstand area.

In the clubhouse, finishing touches have been completed in the dining room and a five-foot viewing screen has been installed in the Tired Horse Pub.

Among those bringing in stables for the meeting are Frank O'Mara from Florida, Doug Ackerman from California, and Raymond Tripp from Chicago.

Wolverine Raceway will conduct harness racing nightly Monday through Saturday now through July 24. Post time is 8 p.m. for the 10-race card.

Slangsters slaughter The King's English

By JACK HOFFMAN
Northville Record

He escaped by the skin of his teeth.

It's one of the many expressions we use frequently, perhaps too frequently, in our speech and writing. We know what it means, but pity the poor foreigner who tries analyzing our Americanized words and expressions.

To escape is understandable, and to escape with one's teeth is acceptable. But to escape by one's teeth boggles the mind. And teeth that have skin dumbfound him.

He's likely to think we're all ignoramuses.

There's another. Ignoramus. In the 17th century the word ignoramus meant a grand jury had found no reason why a defendant should stand trial. Such decisions so infuriated the citizenry that they eventually coined a term of abuse, "ignoramus jury," and still later ignoramus came to mean an ignorant person.

In researching the meanings of some of our popular words and expressions, I found we take a lot for granted.

(Research. I've never really searched before, so how can I say I've researched word meanings? Yet few of us go to a library to search for something; we go to do some research. Maybe it's because research has a more intellectual sound. It's got snob appeal.)

Anyway, I found some interesting meanings.

Cold shoulder. Now there's an expression that hits home. My wife is always giving me the cold shoulder. It's derived from the custom of offering honored guests hot meat and those guests who have overstayed their welcome a cold shoulder of mutton.

Wins hands down. The expression is used frequently by this writer, who makes no bones about his success on the racquetball court. But the expression has nothing to do with any game involving a ball. It refers to the jockey who lets his hands drop when victory is certain.

Make no bones about it. It refers to the guy who is so eager to swallow his soup that he doesn't object to the bone or two in it.

Animals and insects share major roles in our words and expressions. For example: bulldozer; his room is bugged; bee-line for home; a bee in his bonnet; he goes whole hog; he got the lion's share; he bought a pig in a poke.

Pig in a poke. The term has always bugged me because, even after learning the meaning of a poke, the expression falls flat. Poke means a small bag or pocket. How someone could stuff a pig in his pocket is hard to imagine; but to buy it sight unseen is incomprehensible.

Some words are proper but condemned.

Newspaper headline writers, squeezed by space limitations, annually are taken to task for using the word Xmas for Christmas. Rarely does a year pass when someone doesn't scold, "Don't take Christ out of Christmas."

But the fact of the matter is that Xmas is an old, widely used word. It is not a modern commercialization of this important holiday. X is the Greek letter chi, Christ's initial, and has been used since at least the year 1100. Even the word Xtianity was used for Christianity long before newspapers came along.

Chip off the old block and spit and image are of the same cut.

Some people think "spit" in this expression really means spirit. But it really does mean spit, taken from the expression "to be as much like someone as the spit out of his mouth."

Handicap. It's a shortened version of hand-in-the-cap, a game in which contestants put their hands in a cap and drew out various amounts of money.

All this may seem unimportant to deadbeats. But for those who could care less when they really mean they couldn't care less, the bittersweet lesson is that our language leaves a lot to be desired.

Ramblings

Latest scare too much!

Sometimes it seems they should paste a big label, right around the equator, that says:

"The Surgeon General warns that life has been found to be hazardous to your health."

I'm not sure what came as the last straw. Maybe it was the continuing saga of the core melt-down that appeared imminent at the Harrisburg, Pa. nuclear plant. That was enough to scare the bejesus out of anybody.

Maybe it was last week's announcement that the savior of the frizzy-haired, the blowdryer, is in many cases emitting tiny particles of asbestos with all the fervor its 1,000-watt heart can muster.

Not all hairdryer brands do this, mind you. One in five brands do, including certain Conair models. Naturally, I own a Conair, apparently one of the suspect ones.

Now everyone knows that cigarettes will kill you. If you smoke, you take your chances, rationalize the habit and hope you at least die happy.

But what of those reformed smokers and persons of undefiled lungs who have been unwittingly inhaling enough asbestos to rank up there with the people who mine the stuff?

Think of the super-healthy tpes who work out at the gym and wash their hair at least once a day — maybe twice. All those years of regimented excercise and abstinence from the evil weed will matter naught to the blowdryer set.

I suppose people could get rid of the suspect dryers and consider themselves safe from at least one carcinogen.

That leaves about 999 other cancer-causing agents to worry about.

There are schools that were sprayed with asbestos in all their inner nooks and crannys back before people realized that the stuff, even in small amounts, can give you "white lung."

There is saccharin, the sweetener that dieters worship. The U.S. Food and Drug administration is still considering taking it off the market because massive doses of saccharin have been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

Certain kinds of hair dye is now suspected of doing vile things to people over the long run.

Heck, even the fire-retardant chemical once used in little kid's pajamas (TRIS) has been determined to be a carcinogen.

The hair dye and pajamas have eliminated the nasty chemicals, but that doesn't mean former users don't have the little blueprint for cancer hiding somewhere in their cells.

Even if we get rid of all the suspicious products, we still apparently face the unpleasant possiblity of getting wiped out by a nuclear power plant mishap.

I hate to sound like a gloom and doom prophet. It's just that death by dryer seems a most ignoble way to go.

The real problem with all these warnings and frightening discoveries is that each new pronouncement makes it a little easier to refuse to give up habits that are bad for the health.

The smoker's favorite line these days is, "so what if I smoke? If cigarettes don't get me, something else will." It's all part of a "gather ye rosebuds while ye may," philosophy.

About the only ones who seem to have a chance anymore are those people who live up in the Andes somewhere and eat yogurt. They seem to make it to a ripe old age.

So maybe we'll cast aside our hair dryers and fake sugar and hair dye and cigarettes. Maybe we'll clean up our act and clean up the air. Maybe we'll all move to the Andes and live on yogurt.

With our luck, we'll find that yogurt causes cancer in laboratory animals.

I guess we should just be grateful we aren't white rats.

Memorable lapses

Comparisions are tricky.

Especially when past and present times are involved.

I especially get in trouble when asked to compare something in the present with something in the past.

Most of the time it's my wife asking for the comparision. And most of the time I fake an answer.

My memory usually is good — if I'm asked to recall facts, information, dates, etc. But my mind fails when asked to recall sensorial memories — tastes, smells, sights.

ALMOST EVERY TIME we go some place, my wife asks my opinion of the outfit she's going to wear.

"What do you think — will this be more suitable than the beige pantsuit or would I look better in my yellow skirt and white top?"

(Oh, oh! Let's see, beige is a light tan color and a pantsuit is slacks and blouse all sewed together. Ah, I remember which one she means — but doesn't she have a light brown pantsuit also? Seems Beverly wore that yellow skirt two weeks ago, but did she wear a white blouse or a white sweater? Better play it safe. . . .

"I think what you have on is best. The pantsuit and other outfit may be a bit too casual, although probably not. I think that looks best on you, though."

WOMEN SOMEHOW expect men to remember everything in their wardrobe. And worse yet, I'm often expected to remember what something in the wardrobe looks like — sight unseen — and make a judgment on how it compares with something I see. The safest option is to trust what I see now and avoid selecting the outfit I can't conjure up in my mind.

"I think I'll make some meatballs for the party tomorrow night. Do you think they taste better with the rice in them, like I fixed for Tim's graduation, or with crushed soda crackers like Aunt Bell makes them?"

(Did I ever have Aunt Bell's meatballs? Last time I saw Aunt Bell was Christmas and she made baked beans. Oh yes, she was out for Thanksgiving too. Wait a minute, I don't want to say Aunt Bell's meatballs are better tasting than hers. The heck with the taste difference.

"OH, THEY TASTE much better with the rice — adds moisture. If I remember Aunt Bell's meatballs were much too dry. I've always like them with the rice."

Fortunately, Beverly doesn't remember either whether Aunt Bell's meatballs were too dry or not so I get by again. I know I should remember her recipes but does she really expect me to remember Aunt Bell's or is she just fishing for a backhanded compliment? Tastebuds don't have memories.

And then there are the times when she comes back from hairdresser!

"Well, what do you think?"

(Think fast, pal! What did she look like yesterday? Oh yes, the length was down by the neck in the back and the ears were uncovered on the sides and it was fluffed up on top with half a part in the middle, kinda split in the front a little bit and thinned out.")

"That really looks nice! You look so much younger with your ears covered. I think it made you look a bit older when your hair was fluffed up on top like it was."

"MY EARS HAVE been covered for a month now! And my hair hasn't been fluffed up for that long too!! That just goes to show that . . . . "

Well, blew that one!

And then there's the times my memory can't recall sounds:

"My car's acting up again. Can you check it out? It's sputtering just like it did when you took the kids bowling last Saturday, and it's got that clicking noise, too, like it did on the way back from vacation last summer."

(If it's sputtering maybe it's the air cleaner again, but it looked pretty clean Saturday. The only thing I remember hearing driving back from up north were the kids quarreling in the back seat.)

"I'll take it for a drive and see if it makes the noises again." (Hopefully it won't make any noise.)

Sometimes it doesn't help if past and present are just a second apart, like when:

"What smells better, this or this. . . . " she asks as she flashes one perfumed wrist and then another under my nose.

"LET ME SMELL again."

(Both smell the same to me. I'll bet one's expensive and the other's that Avon stuff I got her last Christmas. Betcha one is her favorite, but which one? Dare I say they almost smell the same but that one on the right's a bit more daring? Does she want daring perfume? What kind of perfume does she want? Subdued, that's it.)

"That one on your left wrist smells better — it's more subdued."

And, finally, there's the good ole comparision question she asks after throwing a gutter ball while bowling:

"What did I do that time that was different?"

(I wasn't even watching. How did she bowl last time? How does she usually bowl? Let me think, now, what does she usually do wrong? Oh yes, sometimes she walks too fast and ends up at the lane before she's ready to release the ball. She often forgets to follow through. Sometimes she looks at the pins instead of her spot. But if she threw a gutter, she likely turned her wrist. I don't remember hearing a noise, she couldn't have dropped the ball. Maybe I should just tell her I wasn't watching.

"YOU WERE walking too fast and tried to throw it harder to compensate and ended up throwing your wrist around to the left in a last-minute attempt to followthrough."

"Then how come the ball dropped into the right gutter?"

"Must have gotten some backward English on it when you looked at the pins instead of your spot."

"What should I do next time?"

"Just relax and throw it. You're thinking too much about what your doing and your rhythm's off."

(That's always good advice.)

The Stroller

Out-of-school learning

By W. W. EDGAR

The Stroller was privileged to be among those present when Dr. Robert Weishan, Michigan Director of Career Education, addressed the annual Business Forum sponsored by the school district and the Chamber of Commerce, in which he implored business to lend a hand to the young folks in acquiring an education.

As he sat there listening to every word, The Stroller couldn't help recalling the part that business had played in his bringing up back home in the Dutch Country.

In those days in our little town, our family had the only lunch counter in the area and Dad needed all the help he could get. So it was that The Stroller was called upon before and after school to help out.

In the morning he would have to rise early, hasten to the lunch room and open at least 100 oysters so they would be ready when the luncheon hour approached. It was the same after school. When summer came and oysters were out of season, he had to wash clams both morning and afternoon.

Being pressed into such duties, his dad pointed out that he saved the wages of some one else and he pointed out that he could get a start in the business world.

LATER ON The Stroller's dad called him aside one morning and told him that he would have to learn to play pocket billiards, then commonly known as pool.

In mattered little that he stood no higher than the table. For hours he was asked to roll the balls and watch which way they turned. As he recalls it, The Stroller's dad pointed out that our family needed every nickel it could get and that it was up to him to learn the game and play for the house.

Even though his dad was proficient with the cue, The Stroller often was called upon when the luncheon business kept Dad busy at the counter.

When Dad was challenged to a game by some of the travelling men who used the lunch period for recreation, he'd decline and say "play the kid." When they demurred, the traveling men were told it would be okay with him if they won. After several defeats, the travelers would plead to have "the kid" miss school to keep up the game. But that never was allowed.

AS THE years went on, The Stroller was taught more of the tricks of business. One he never will forget was the time he placed the blackboard with the major league baseball scores on the outside of our little lunch room.

It had been the custom for the major league baseball scores to be phoned to us by Western Union (in the days before radio) and we posted them on the board. The scores were a lure to get folks in for a bit of lunch.

This night when Dad noticed the blackboard outside he took The Stroller by the arm, walked outside, picked up the board and said "They won't buy pie out here."

That was his first lesson in business tactics. And it worked out well — when misfortune struck and The Stroller's dad became a victim of tuberculosis.

It was up to him to keep the lunchroom going. And never will he forget the words of his mother when she sorrowfully told him that he would have to leave school and tend the store.

"Just because you leave school doesn't mean that you have to stop learning. You can get a good education just taking care of the business."

What happened back in those days can happen again if, as Dr. Weishan pointed out, business takes a hand in helping to educate the young folks of today.

The beauty of Pine's is good excuse for golfing

Speaking for the record

By BILL SLIGER

Whether or not golf is your game, it's difficult to imagine a more beautiful countryside this time of year than the Pinehurst, North Caroline area.

Of course, the fairways lined by towering pine trees, dotted with blue bodies of water and broken by kidney-shaped traps filled with white sand make the scenery that much more exhilerating to the golfing enthusiast.

As you may have guessed, I have just recently returned from a week of golfing at Foxfire. It's a 27-hole layout just six miles from the famous golfing complex of Pinehurst.

Five of the seven days the weather was perfect — about 75 degrees, not a cloud in the sky and just enough breeze to cause the unthinking golfer to under-or-over club his shots into the green.

I don't know how many years it has been that a group of us from the Plymouth-Northville area have escaped from the ice and snow to the links of either North Carolina or Florida.

Most of the regulars were there again this year: Bill McAllister, Harry Crawford, Bernie Stadtmiller, Warren Hoffman. Dick Ambler, Ferris Saxton and a newcomer to the group, Don Tobey.

Naturally, a little money exchanged hands. It takes more time to settle the "friendly" wagers than it does to play the 27 holes we managed to complete each day.

It's amazing to observe the recovery ol' Mac, the entrepreneur of the Northville Road party store, makes from his assortment of ailments once he gets off the first tee.

I remember one day he fired a 39 on the front side and was happily counting all the money he had already filched from me. But No. 10 awaited with a mighty body of water that sucked up two of Mac's shots. Can't you just imagine his expression as he sunk a five-footer for a nifty 10 on the tenth?

Anyway, the weather, beauty and fellowship always make these outings an event to look forward to with anticipation.

I had almost forgotten the attraction of Pinehurst itself. The towering, straight pines line the streets just inches from the paved roadway. Many of the lawns of the stately homes are merely neatly-raked pine needles rather than grass.

And a relatively new feature, which I had not seen, is the World Golf Hall of Fame. It's a most attractive building overlooking the fairways of Pinehurst's most-noted number two course.

Just about everything and everybody associated with the history of golf is recorded there. If you have ever scored a hole-in-one, your name probably is listed there.

The Movies

LOUISE SNIDER

Audience jolted by 'Deer Hunter'

No other film about Vietnam ("Go Tell the Spartans," "Coming Home," "Who'll Stop the Rain") has captured the horror or delivered the emotional jolt that charge Michael Cimino's epic work, "The Deer Hunter" (R).

From its apolitical base it explores with savage power the impact of the war on the lives of a group of Russian-Americans from a small steel town in Pennsylvania. The first third of this three-hour film establishes the men's camaraderie against a richly detailed background of social, ethnic and religious experiences.

Within the group, Michael (Robert De Niro), Nick (Christopher Walken) and Steven (John Savage) are the three who are closest to each other and who, in 1968, enlist to fight in Vietnam.

With the kind of boisterous vitality that vivifies th details of Flemish painting, Cimino takes a long, lingering look at the character of their lives before they leave for Vietnam.

RITUALS PERMEATE their activities, from the explosive choreogrphy of movement at the blast furnaces to the boozing kinship of the saloon to the mysticism and revelry of a Russian Orthodox wedding and, finally, to the tense sobering drama of their last deer hunt together.

If the film had not gone beyond this first "act," it would still be outstanding for the way it captures the texture of life in this community.

The shabby homes, belching mills and gray streets are ugly and depressing. Yet, Cimino seems to be implying that the quality of life here is not determined by external amenities, but by the closeness of the people bonded by a common heritage and accepted traditions.

Visually, the thesis is exemplified by the stunning contrast of the opulent church whose onion-shaped dome dominates the mean cityscape that surrounds it.

The battlefield chaos and moral anarchy of Vietnam appear even harsher and more strident when seen against this rich backgrond. The scenes of fighting, capture by the Viet Cong and escape consititute the shortest but most excruciating segment of the film.

THE HORROR it evokes springs from a realization of the violence and terror that dehumanization produces. In the most nerve-jangling and graphic scenes ever filmed, the prisoners are forced to play Russian roulette against each other. Each round results in the click of an empty chamber or a squirting stream of blood and brains.

John Savage creates a haunting image of uncontrollable fear as he waits his turn. Later Christoper Walken, in a searing performance, reveals Nick's psychological breakdown and stony disassociation from reality.

Ultimately, De Niro, who has returned home as a reluctant hero, is responsible for trying to restore the sense of order and bring his shattered comrades together again. He goes back to Vietnam to seek out Nick. His journey through the dark routes and waterways of the doomed Saigon resembles a trek among souls in hell.

There are major flaws in this film but they are overshadowed by riveting and brilliant passages. Not the least of them is the startling ending.

Whether intended as a reflection of pride or irony,it works on an unexpected level that reaches to the child in every adult.

TRAVEL LOG of Iris Jones

Mint juleps amid the flowering azaleas, anybody?

We northerners are marching through Georgia again, as we do every spring in our urgent quest for summer. Here are some travel options to consider on your way down Interstate 75 to Florida.

Atlanta's blooming with dogwood, azaleas and other spring flowers. They're clipping and pruning for the mid-May rose festival in Thomasville.

The 355-mile stretch of I-75 runs from Rock City in the northwest corner of the state to Valdosta in the south. There are two national military parks, Chicamauga-Chattanooga, near Rock City, where you will find one of the largest military gun collections in the world.

The Goudland Canyon State Park is also off I-75 on the northern leg at Rising Fawn. Three other state parks are adjacent to the highway: Red Top Mountain in Cartersville, Indian Springs in Indian Springs and High Falls in Jackson.

Of course Atlanta is a special stop, with too many attractions to mention here if you happen to be on the road. On Easter weekend, you might like to participate in the Easter Sunrise Service, the Easter Egg Hunt and the Carrilon Concerts at Stone Mountain, south of Atlanta.

Just south of Macon, where I-75 turns south and I-16 breaks east for Savannah, you are approaching the turnoff into Plains country and the Andersonville Trail. (See story.) This is a tourist gold mine for families, because of its variety.

You can see President Jimmy Carter's hometown, and a lot of the hometown folks. The trail winds through the Camelia Gardens at Marshallville, the free Flint River ferry (honk your horn for service), and Andersonville National Historic Site and the village of Andersonville.

A few miles south of the point where you re-enter I-75, you will see signs for the town of Tifton, where 30 authentic farm village structures have been restored in a State Historic Site called the Georgia Agrirama.

The list of things to see and do along the whole length of I-75 from Detroit to Florida would fill this whole newspaper page. Most of them are well-known; the museum of old planes at Dayton, the food wonders of Cincinnati, the old horse farms and the new Kentucky State Horse Park at Lexington.

But most of us damn yankees are so eager to get to the summer sun that we don't allow ourselves to take our eyes off the road until we get to Georgia.

That's when we really believe that summer's coming home. And if you'd like to see the wonder of summer in all its glory, take a homebound detour to Pine Mountain on Highway 27, where a nature lover called Cason Callaway left all the wonders of the natural world behind for you.

Callaway Gardens is a non-profit foundation which offers greenhouses and natural woodland gardens as well as a contemporary-if-woodsy motel with golf course, lake and a tiny chapel.

By mid-April, the 600 varieties of azaleas will be blooming, the mountain laurel and rhododendron are in season and the Easter lillies and hydrangea are on display in the greenhouse.

A variety of garden and craft workshops will be in full swing and the gardens will be getting ready for the May magnolias that every northerner recognizes as the absolutley irrefutable symbol of spring.

FROM THE MAILBAG: World Wide Villa Vacations offers an interesting travel package to Portugal. You can buy a package that includes round-trip air fare from either Toronto or Montreal, seven to 15 nights in a villa or apartment, a car and a guide.

Prices start from $512 per person for a party of four sharing a three-bedroom villa.

You can also take a Canadian apartment vacation through World Wide Villa Vacations and Air Canada, which will send you a brochure about apartments available throughout Canada. Contact Air Canada or your travel agent or write to World Wide Villa Vacations at 175 Bloor Street East, Toronto, Ontario M4W 1C8.

THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS Board is looking at an American Airlines proposal which, if passed, will mean a two-for-one fare from April 18 to June 16 on all American Airline routes in the continental U.S.

The first passenger will pay full first class or day coach fare and the second passenger will fly free. The fare requires that you stay overnight somewhere on a Saturday night, and limit your trip to five days. Children 2 through 17 will fly at 50 percent off.

All two-for-one fares will be on round-trip bookings only.

"PACIFIC NORTHWEST ADVENTURE" will be the final program of this year's World Adventure Series, which has highlighted Sunday afternoons at the Detroit Institute of Arts for 45 years.

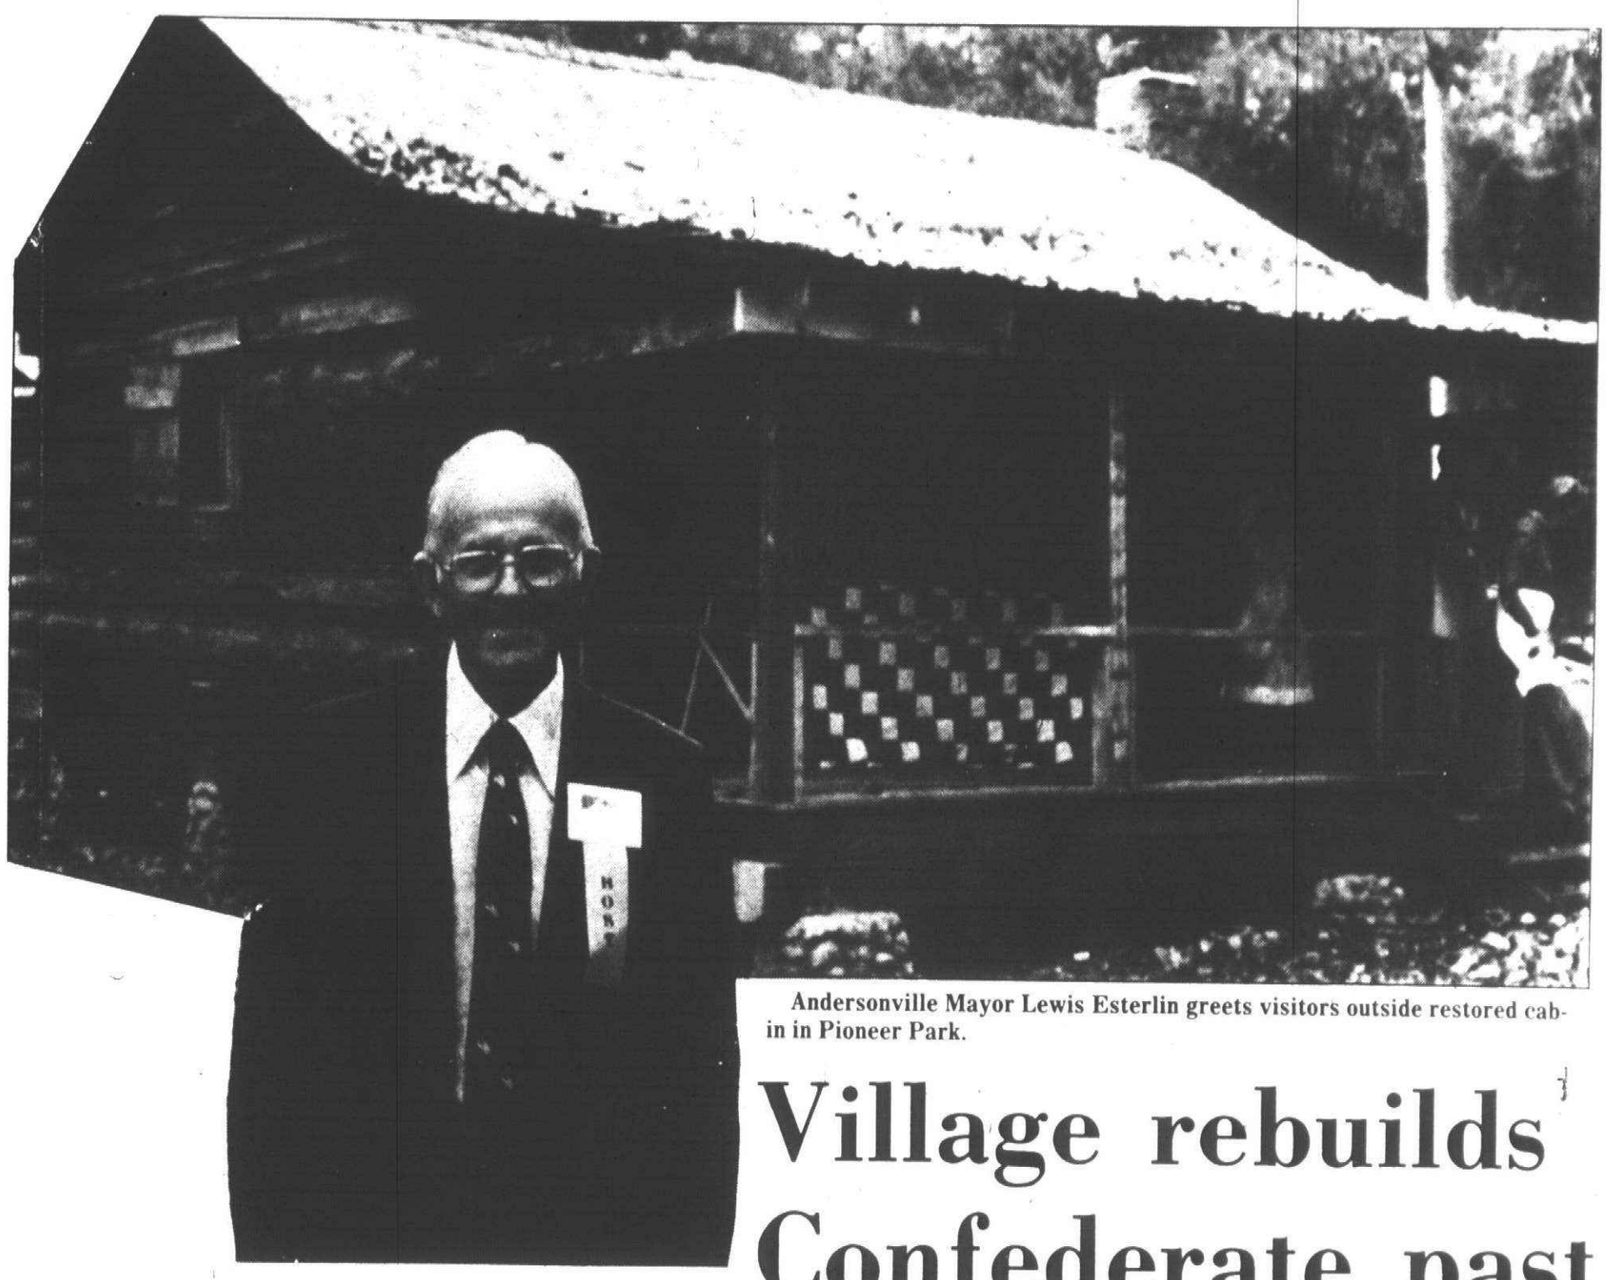

During all those years, when this Detroit program was used as amodel for travel programs nationwide, fans have been greeted by the familiar rotund shape of George Pierrot. George and his wife Helen greeted Lowell Thomas at the series a week or two ago.

After all these years, you will still see them laughing at camera clown Don Cooper, who brings down the house every year with his screen antics and scenic films of the northwest.

The program will be at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, April 18, at the DIA, 5200 Woodward Ave., Detroit.

ARE YOU SATISFIED with regular television programs in your hotel room or do you expect more? According to the Princess Anne Inn in Virginia Beach, Virginia, hotel guests are no longer satisfied with regular television.

They want first-fun movies on closed-circuit even if they must pay for them.

Andersonville Mayor Lewis Esterlin greets visitors outside restored cabin in Pioneer Park.

Village rebuilds Confederate past

Story and photos by IRIS SANDERSON JONES

ANDERSONVILLE, Ga. — Travelers driving the Easter trail down Interstate 75 to Florida can detour briefly along a stretch of road that has a famous name on one of its signboards: Andersonville.

On one side of Highway 49, 13,000 white grave markers cover the Georgia fields where Union forces were imprisoned during the Civil War. This is the Andersonville National Historic Site, the prison site and cemetery, all diligently maintained and open to tourists.

Across the highway is the village of Andersonville, where history is also carefully kept but in a different way. Here, a feisty mayor and 300 townfolk are laboriously returning their village to the 19th century with the work of their own hands.

Mayor Lewis Easterlin calls it "a giant step backwards" and adds, "that's not too hard because nothin' much has changed around here in a hundred years anyhow."

Andersonville, which is along the Andersonville Trail 10 miles from Oglethorpe and 19 miles from Plains is reached by turning off I-75 at Perry along Highway 127 and then south down Highway 49.

A FEW YEARS AGO, you couldn't get so much as a cup of coffee in Andersonville, but a group of local people changed all that by forming the Andersonville Guild in 1973. Their goal was to restore the village to its Civil War days, when Union prisoners were delivered by rail to this town and then imprisoned in the stockade across the road.

Frankly, Andersonville was just another dilapidated little town with a lot of unpleasant memories until the guild decided to build the town a future by rebuilding its past.

Easterlin has been mayor for 25 years. "I left town only once, during the Depression, and I nearly starved to death." In 1973, he and his friends paid $50 for a 19th century railway station, hauled it 60 miles and restored it.

"Depots are hard to get. The thing was just about fell down when we got it," Easterlin said.

They rebuilt it and now the Welcome Center and museum as well as the town council's office occupy the space.

With their volunteered labor they created Pioneer Park, a five-acre picnic site and restored farm village with a blacksmith shop, cane mill, corn crib, smokehouse, guardhouse, bridge, grist mill and "a whiskey mill that doesn't give out samples."

The park is free. It has animals, including the town's favorite mule, and crops. Easterlin restored an antique shop and a country store with a dining room, both buildings 100 years old.

The guild restored the town hall, rebuilt an abandoned log cabin church, added a rustic bandstand to the main street and built old brick sidewalks all over town. A few blocks out of town, two 19th century homes were restored by the Gatewood family.

The result of all this industriousness for tourists is a well-restored century-old village built by the 300 people who live there still and who welcome you with traditional Southern hospitality into the small-town life of rural Georgia.

Where else can they still make hot mashed potato salad?

ACROSS THE HIGHWAY, at the Andersonville Prison Site and National Cemetery, travelers take a different kind of journey through 500 acres of history restored and kept with painful honesty.

On the 26 acres, once surrounded by a 15-feet-high stockade fence, 45,000 Union soldiers were imprisoned and 13,000 of them died. For 14 months, from February 1864 to April 1865, they lived without housing, sanitary facilities or adequate food.

What you can see now from the tour road are markers showing where the fence once stood and the Deadline, 19 feet inside those markers. Any prisoner who crossed the Deadline was shot.

You can see the huge holes where prisoners dug desperately for water, the stream that was and which became a sewer and the spring that flowed one day like a miracle.

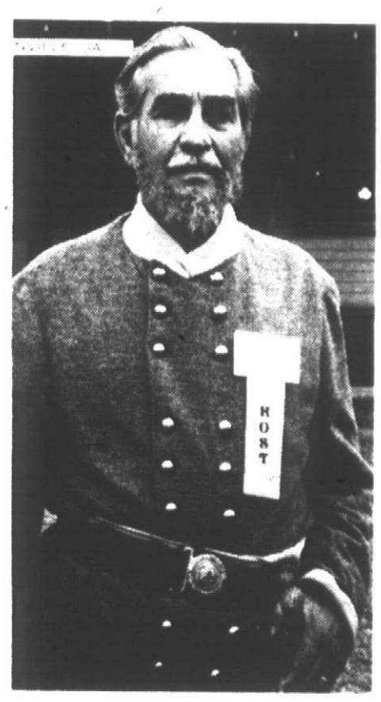

At the Information Center, you can find the names of Michigan soldiers who were imprisoned there.

At the nearby cemetery, with massive memorials from 15 northern states, you can find some of their names on the white markers carefully now kept over their graves.

This detour off I-75 to the Andersonville Trail can take you to other places: Americus, Plains, the National Headquarters of the American Camelia Society, a 19th century river ferry.

But for a look at human life, at its best and worst, it's hard to surpass a trip down Highway 49 to the place with the infamous name.

The prison site will make you lose a little faith in the human race, but Lewis Easterlin and the people of Andersonville will restore your loss in a hurry.

Robert Gibson portrays Gen. Robert E. Lee, the host.

A lemon shark glides through the waters of Sea World's Shark Institute in Layton, Florida, in the Keys. Opened in December 1978 on 6½ acres of land, it serves as a shark research center for institute and independent marine scientists. There are major exhibit facilities, which include two shark displays, a 10,000-gallon coral reef aquarium and a re-creation of a Caribbean tidepool. Hours are 9 a.m. to dusk daily and admission is $3.50 for adults and $2.25 for children 4-12. The center is about 90 minutes south of Miami, between Homestead and Key West. The lemon shark, by the way, is one of the most aggressive of the 300 known species of sharks, is between nine-11 feet long at maturity, and got its name because of its yellowish underbelly.

From our readers

Author unnecessarily rude

Editor:

I'm wondering just what it is that compels one to endure a terrible situation as if mesmerized by its sheer awfulness.

The sort of feeling one gets when watching a very bad act on the Gong Show. Several hundred people were subjected to a "very bad act" at Field Elementary School last Friday, when the noted children's author, Robert Newton Peck, spoke to the children, school personnel, and assorted guests.

Mr. Peck is a distinguished writer, no doubt about that, but he has absolutely no business speaking to children's groups. For one thing, he doesn't seem to like them. He was rude, aggressive, menacing and arrogant.

He threatened to throw several children out of the assembly because he deemed them to be inattentive or they were fidgeting. Imagine — an elementary school-age child fidgeting!

Mr. Peck's talk was generally inappropriate although not totally without merit. He did manage to demonstrate admirably the difference between reporting a story and using words to create a picture for the mind.

The adults present, whether out of a misguided sense of propriety, a foolish respect for fame or the disbelief that things could degenerate any further, failed to do anything except look sheepish and uncomfortable.

How I would have applauded some brave soul with enough integrity to stand and say quietly but firmly, "come class, we are going back to our room now." The children would have understood and perhaps eyen been relieved.

Disgusted by the bus strike

Editor:

I am writing this letter in great disgust and disappointment regarding the bus strike on the morning of March 30.

When our child went to the bus stop that morning, he was told by another child the buses were on strike. Luckily there was someone home to take my child to school. But what about working parents and children being left at home alone?

Driving to school was bumper to bumper, and the same way coming home, too. There were children walking and riding bikes in unsafe streets such as Joy Rd., Sheldon and Ann Arbor Road.

There are no sidewalks on any of these streets. To top this off, no one knew that there was going to be a bus strike.

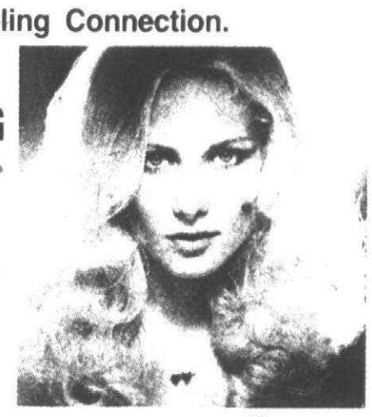

I called Pioneer School and the Department of Transportation and no one knew what the problem was. With all the money we pay in taxes, the school system cannot handle the problems with the bus drivers let alone to decide which schools our children are to go to.

These children are tired of being shortchanged in eduation. How does the board of education expect to keep the pupils' attention and get them to settle down through this teen and preteen stage if they are always shifted around?

I am sure it is not easy working in the education department or being a bus driver. There are probably a lot of trying times handling children, but this is a very poor way of handling things by striking on the spur of the moment.

What if the buses stranded these children in the midst of winter on a dark morning? There are proper procedures to follow and someone is not getting their act together to solve the problems.

Plymouth – Past & Present

Citizens sparked center

By Sam Hudson

Part IV

Seven years after the Plymouth Hockey Club collapsed, the City Commission's annual report for 1941 memtioned the need for a community and recreation building in Plymouth "to eliminate child delinquency and to build character."

No serious steps were taken to fulfill that need until 1967, the year Plymouth celebrated its centennial. In the fall of 1966, Mayor James Houk had appointed a steering committee of local citzens to consider a celebration of the 100th birthday of the incorporation of Plymouth as a village.

From this committee, and the Centennial Celebration Committee which grew out of it, came several recommendations which went beyond the talking stage and bore fruit.

One result was the very successful Centennial Celebration of July 1967. Another was the visit here of Frank Chapman, the Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England, who participated in many of the centennial events.

Still another was the writing and publishing of this writer's 36-page pictorial and 240-page hard cover book on the history of Plymouth.

And another culminated in the building of the Plymouth Cultural Center.

THE CENTENNIAL Celebration Committee was headed by James Tarantino until the Gaylord Corporation transferred him to Texas in March 1967. Thereafter it was headed by Robert Hayman.

Searching for a project which would be a "lasting memorial of the centennial," the committee decided on an ice skating rink. First estimate indicated it would cost $170,000.

As time went on, the idea grew to include a multi-purpose building. The estimate rose to $350,000. By August 1967, the figure had risen to $625,000. When completed in 1972, the structure actually cost $1.5 million.

Built at the corner of Farmer and Theodore Streets, the building rests almost on the spot where Russell Roe and the members of the Plymouth Hockey Club built their outdoor rink in 1929.

THE CENTER funtions under the Plymouth Department of Parks and Recreation whose director is Charles W. Skene. A native of Northville, Skene graduated from Eastern Michigan University with a major in recreation. Manager of the center is Ken Garner.

A good part of the building's 52,000 square feet consists of an artifical ice skating rink measuring 85 by 200 feet. Skene says the ice is used 90 percent of the time by young people, 10 percent by adults. In January 1979, the weekly average for all kinds of skating was 121 hours. Of this, hockey accounted for 47 hours a week.

Garner says the center charges $50 per hour for use of the rink during prime time, $40 per hour at other times. Major users of the rink are the Plymouth-Canton Hockey Association, the Over 30 League, the Plymouth Figure Skating Club, and Eastern Michigan University. The EMU hockey team practices and plays its home games here.

The center provides ice skating lessons for those four years of age and up. Residents pay $14 for eight weeks of 25-minute lessons. Open ice skating can be had at scheduled hours every day of the week. The rate for open skating is $1.25 for adults 18 and older and $1 for those under 18.

As an adjunct to the rink, the center has a pro shop which sells a variety of figure skating and hockey equipment. It also offers a skate sharpening and fitting service, and rents skates.

ASIDE FROM activities on the ice, the Plymouth Cultural Center offers an extensive program of leisure activities ranging from ballet and art classes to karate and belly dancing.

The Over 30 Hockey Club, headed by Richard Randazzo of Plymouth has seven teams which use the ice at the center. Randazzo says there are about 125 men in the league this year. All are over 30, and one of the members is in his 50s.

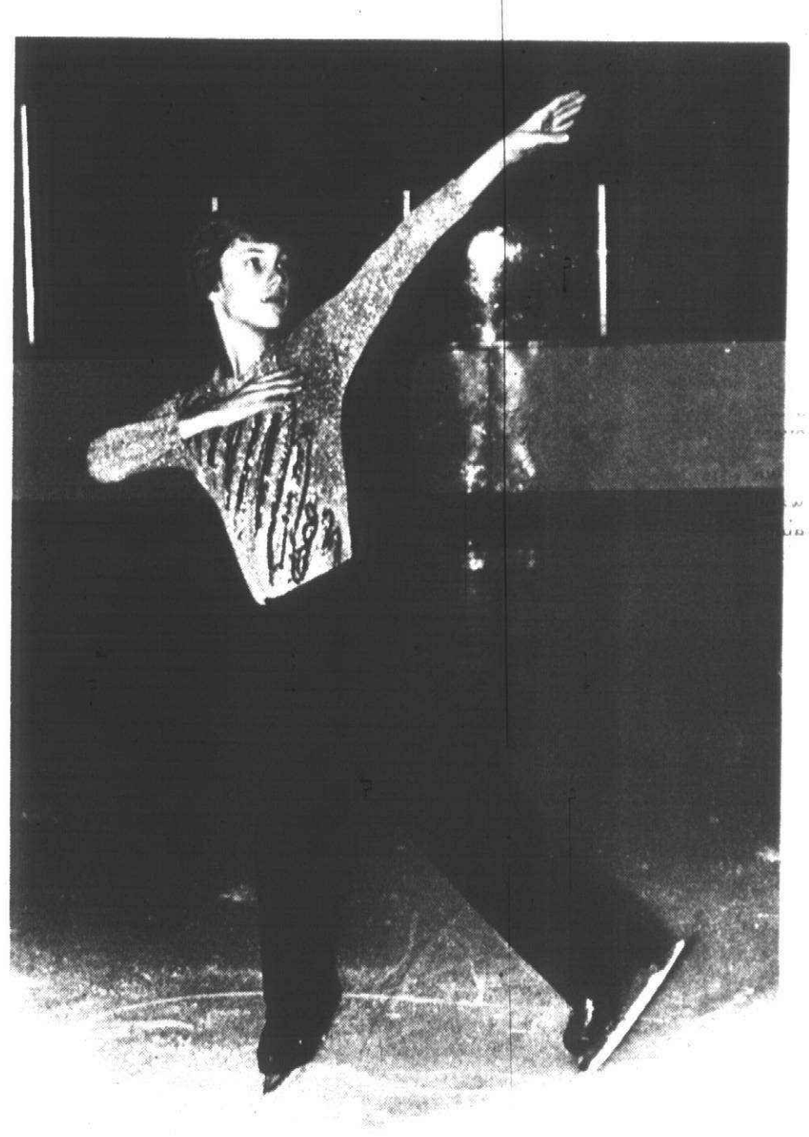

This league, which started in Westland and moved to the Plymouth Cultural Center about three years ago, plays three nights a week. About 65 percent of the players are from Plymouth.

The Plymouth Figure Skating Club, whose president is Sharon Brod of Livonia, also rents the ice. This club, with a membership of about 150, started some six years ago. The ages of the members range from 7 to over 60. About 60 percent of them reside in the Plymouth area. They use the rink almost every day of the week.

One of the biggest users of the arena is the Plymouth-Canton Hockey Association, a league made up of youngsters. Allen Campbell of Plymouth Township, who heads the association, says there are almost 250 kids in the league this year. They play on 19 teams. Each team plays 80 games per season which runs from September to March.

IT IS APPARENT that today's young ice skaters in Plymouth enjoy advantages their counterparts in the 1920s never dreamed of.

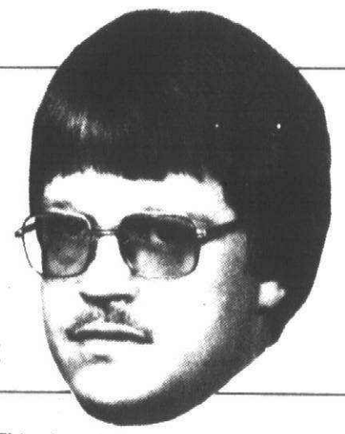

Among thses are the best in modern equipment, a longer season not limited by the vagaries of the weather, and ice that doesn't get soggy when the sun shines. Some of the youngsters at the Plymouth Cultural Center enjoy even more than that.

Kevin Bryzek, 13, is a member of the Plymouth Figure Skating Club which uses the ice at the Cultural Center. In December, Kevin won first place among intermediate men figure skaters in a seven-state regional meet in Indianapolis.

The Bottom Line

Cover risks

By RONALD G. LOISELLE

Effective insurance coverage is essential for the small business owner.

But merely buying insurance does't guarantee adequate coverage. Sound insurance protection only can be assured by organization and planning.

First, you must recognize and identify your exposure to loss.

All possibilities for damage must be considered, and the largest potential risk factor must be covered first. As in automobile insurance, liability coverage is much more critical for the losses can be much more devastating than collision insurance.

NEXT, YOU SHOULD investigate various ways of reducing costs without jeopardizing your coverage.

Deductibles are an economical cost reducer. Determine just how much you can afford to pay for a loss. Remember, insurance does not have to offer total protection. It can be considered calamity protection.

But don't sacrifice coverage to save pennies. For example, extending the waiting period from three to six months on group health insurance saves very little in premiums, but may cause significant employee dissatisfaction.

Another impotimportant factor is periodic review of your insurance. Automatic renewal greatly increases the likelihood that you will overlook changes in your insurance requirements.

You also should check the market from time to time for price quotations. This doesn't mean, however, that you should change carriers every time a lower figure is quoted. But it does give you the opportunity to watch your relative costs and allows you to discuss rates with your insurer.

Don't give up a reliable insurer for a low price carrier unless you are certain the quality of coverage and service also won't be reduced.

Many businesses carry "umbrella policies" which cover almost every type of risk which might be encountered. An experienced, independent insurance agent can review your requirements to be sure your coverage neither leaves any critical gaps nor includes any overlapping or redundant coverage.

What to do when (if) twister strikes nearby

More than 400 tornados have struck Michigan since 1950, resulting in 227 deaths.

Spring is tornado season, and Plymouth Township firefighters are offering instructions for residents and a fan-out system for businesses to prepare in the event a tornado approaches.

When the area is under a tornado watch, weather conditions are favorable for the formation of tornados. Stay alert and listen to your radio or TV and listen for the signal from the roof siren in your area.

A tornado warning means a tornado has been sighted. You will receive that warning via AM radio, television and a three to five minute blast of the roof sirens.

Take cover immediately following these directions.

In your home:

•A basement offers the greatest safety. Seek shelter under sturdy furniture if possible. In homes without basements, take cover in the center of the house on the lowest floor in a small room, such as closet or bathroom. Keep open some windows but stay away from them.

In a mobile home:

•Go to a prearranged substantial shelter. If no shelter exists, lie flat in a nearby ditch or depression and hold onto something on the ground. Always take shelter up wind from the mobil home. Do not remain in the mobil home.

In a vehicle:

•Travel at right angles to the tornado's path. If there is no time to drive away from it, get out of the vehicle into a basement, ditch or ravine, up wind from the vehicle.

At work or school:

•Follow advance plans to move to interior hallways or small rooms on the lowest level. Avoid areas with glass and wide freespan roofs.

In open country:

•Get into a sturdy building if possible or lie flat in a nearby ditch or depression and hold onto something on the ground. Make sure you are up wind away from any vehicle or loose materials.

Do not call your police or fire department during a tornado watch or warning, because calls tie up emergency lines. But do contact officials for information about provisions they have to alert the community at other times.

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP has set up a telephone fan-out system in order to adequately inform the businesses and industries in the community during a civil defense alert or severe weather warnings.

When a test or warning is received by the township fire department, firefighters will telephone four designated numbers and give them the message. The companies contacted then in turn will telephone four designated numbers and pass on the message.

The system continues until all businesses and industries in the program are notified, according to Fire Chief Larry Groth.

Letters have been sent out to more than 80 businesses and industries in the township with instructions and phone numbers.

Crappies, trout beginning to bite

Noted turkey hunter Bob McCartney will show a movie and pass on tips of the sport at a half-day seminar Saturday, April 21.

He will be at Mar-Lon Archery, 28275 Plymouth Road, Livonia, from noon to 6 p.m.

McCartney will discuss calling, camouflage, signs, scouting and preparation for the table or mounting.

There is no charge, but persons interested in attending should call the Mar-Lon store at 427-2117 to make reservations.

GEORGE GIBLIN, 63, will retire June 9 as superintendent of Lower Huron, Willow and Oakwoods metroparks in Wayne County. He had been with the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority for more than 32 years.

New superintendent will be Kenneth M. Smith, who has been assistant park superintendent at Kensington since 1968.

Smith joined HCMA in 1964 as a buyer in the main office. He earned a bachelor's degree in business administratioin from Michigan State University in 1954. While in college, he worked as a lifeguard at Kensington.

ONLY THE toughest fishermen are out these days, but they are beginning to show results.

Crappies are being taken at the Milford dam on the Huron River. Rainbow and brown trout — some up to six pounds — are being taken on the Clinton River at the Yates unit in the Rochester-Utica Recreation Area.

White bass are being caught in good numbers at the Detroit Edison cut on Lake Erie in Monroe County.

The makings of a makeover

"Before" Bridget Lucas was stuck with a multi-layered cut she's attempting to grow and the no-makeup look that worked fine in high school but lacks professional polish. Shaping a new look begins at right when Dolly Ettenhofer of the Beautiful People hair salon scissors a retro cut. Bridget decided she liked the cut (far right) when she got a peek at the results.

Spice up spring with a do-it-yourself makeover

By LYNN ORR

If you:

• Dream about heading for a fat farm but are stuck with a bank account that couldn't survive the bus fare;

• Submit your photo to Glamour on a bi-monthly basis, hoping that they're looking for a hard-core makeover case;

• Or realize that five winter months of drips gave your hair a terminal case of the drabs;

Then you're ripe for a do it yourself makeover — easy on the budget and available with a little help from your local library, bookstore and beautician.

Learning how to highlight your assets and downplay your debits is the first rule in the makeover game. Bridget Lucas is a Canton Township resident and receptionist in the Observer office.

At 19, she's young, thin and pretty, but she wanted some help in a search for a tailormade '79 spring style. Inexperienced with makeup, scanty financial resources, and being six feet tall proved the obstacles we set out to overcome.

Throw out your browns and rev up with red — that's the latest fashion advice going, and for a fair-skinned brunette like Bridget, it couldn't be more apt.

But it takes a little more than "Sparkling Bordeaux" Ultima lipstick and bright-win blushing gel to get together an honest-to-goodness, gee-you-look-great makeover.

WE DECIDED to start at the top, heading for the Beautiful People hair salon in downtown Plymouth where Dolly Ettenhofer offered the latest in styling advice for a somewhat nervous Ms. Lucas.

Bridget is struggling with that difficult period of growing out a short, layered cut. Her hair is thick, coarse and hard to manage, but also shiny and healthy.

Ms. Ettenhofer suggested a '79 retro cut, modifying the asymmetrical bang and trimming the sides toward the back.

The hairstyle can assume a sleek, rolled version for the '40s look, or a fluffier casual style.

It's a cut that easily falls into shape with a blowdryer, one of Bridget's prerequisites discussed in a consultation before the scissors began their work.

Ms. Ettenhofer suggests that clients make a consultation appointment if they're unsure of what they want done with their hair.

"How much time do you have in the morning?" is the kind of questions Ms. Ettenhofer asks a client.

"I have to get ready an hour before my kids get up, then I can spend time with them. I feel I'm the average person, and they're doing the same thing."

She suggested auburn highlights on Bridget's hair at the crown. Using tin foil to separate the strands for a more natural look, she used a medium auburn tint without bleach that allows the hair to grow in naturally.

"If she likes it, she can have a retouch in about six weeks."

The tint costs between $18.50 and $20, while the haircut and blowdry adds about $23. Ms. Ettenhofer demonstrated how Bridget could pin up the back of the hair with clips for an upswept look or use a curling iron for a fluffier look.

It wasn't until the final touches were made that Bridget relaxed.

"It looks easy. I like it," she said.

That's the kind of reaction Ms. Ettenhofer wanted and why she and her fellow cosmotoligists attend all-day seminars to learn about the latest hair techniques, such as weaving and braiding — and retro cuts.

"Haircutting and styling change every six months," she said. She attends shows across the nation to keep up on the trends and "ahead of the clients."

KEEPING A BUDGET makeover in mind, we decided to tackle makup ourselves. To get to the bottom line, we took a look at the advice spilling out of April editions of fashion magazines and hooked up with a best-seller, "Adrien Arpel's 3-week Crash Makeover-Shapeover Beauty Program."

For a cool $6.95, Adrien has a lot of nifty gimmicks for looking good, plus some easy tips for using around-the-house materials for facials, hair conditioners, and beauty baths.

After saturating ourselves in beauty tips, we then did what any group of women can do to learn more about makeup — we pooled our resources and experimented.

Bridget's complexion reveals a typical oily-dry combination that requires a little more work. We used Ultima's mauve toner-moisturizer for the cheeks and eyes, and Clinique's pore minimizer, oil-free makeup overall. The result gives a moisture base to the dry parts of her skin while keeping oil out of the areas, such as chin and forehead, that don't need moisturizer.

We used a wine-colored creme blush high on her cheekbones to accent her deep-brown eyes, and a dab of wine mixed with brown on her chin.

Finding the right eye shadow proved a more difficult task. A pinky-rose shadow looked dull, and Bridget didn't like the brighter colors being hyped for spring, so we settled on a dull teal, darkening the color with gleam at the outer edges to bring out her deep-set eyes.

Lots of black mascara, applied in three different coats on both the top and bottom lashes finished off the eyes.

To even out Bridget's slightly uneven lips, we used a lipstick brush to apply the Ultima shade she chose.

Because her lips tend to absorb color easily, the bright shade toned down to the color she wanted, considerably more subdued than the red rage prevalent.

But that's what the makeover is all about — suiting the current looks to your own self-image and lifestyle.

UNFORTUNATELY, clothes proved a more difficult task. We had hoped to discover some real finds at resale shops in the area, but Bridget's 6-foot frame proved a problem.

The majority of clothes were already shortened, but we did pick up a $3 belt at Daisies Don't Tell resale shop on Canton Center Road.

The belt is taupe stretch webbing with a brass and leather clasp, easily a $15 item retail. At LaDonna's in Old Village in Plymouth, a navy cotton overblouse with three-quarter length cuffed sleeves for $7.

Bridget uses the blouse over pants or a skirt with a belt for the narrow spring image.

She's still on the lookout for a bright red narrow dress to fill out her spring makeover and a pair of strappy sandals minus spike heels.

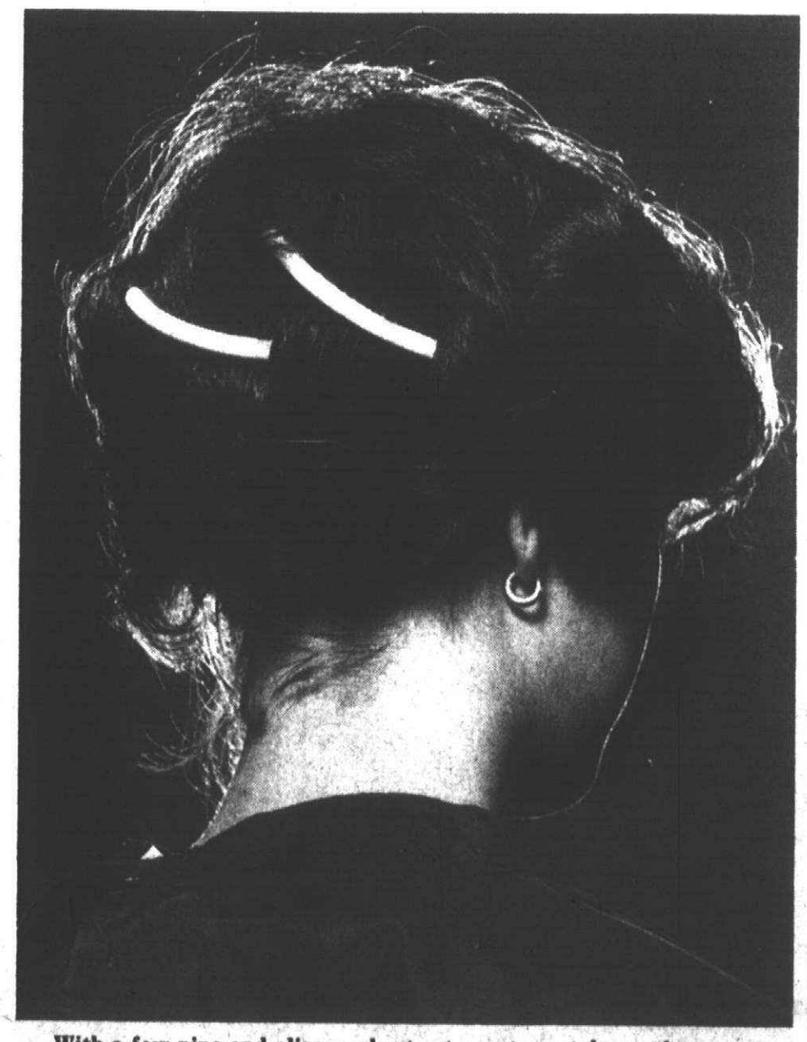

A good cut should fall into place when wet, says Ms. Ettenhofer. This modified retro cut, reminiscent of glamour styles of the 1940s, is easily blown dry by sweeping the hair back. Hot rollers or a curling iron achieve a more studied version of the same style.

Staff photos by Gary Caskey

Bridget practices with a lipstick brush to get the kind of bright, polished look she wanted for spring.

With a few pins and clips, a short retro cut can take on the appearance of an unswept style, or the neat-to-the-head look that's the rage of the fashion mags.

Adding her own fine gold jewelry, Bridget finishes her makeover with a casual but polished look that points toward spring.

Puppets popular among authors

Gallimore Elementary School hosted the eighth annual Young Authors' Conference Saturday in the school on Sheldon Road.

The theme this year was "Puppet Parade." Hundreds of students from the Plymouth-Canton elementary schools participated in the conference.

The young authors were chosen from their classes for original writings in prose, poetry and drama. The students bound their books. Some were cloth-bound, stitched and illustrated.

The school was decorated in keeping with the theme with puppets hanging from the ceilings, fastened to walls and sitting on shelves. Dozen of pots of fresh flowers added splashes of spring color to the event.

BARBARA Schoolmeesters, learning specialist at Gallimore, was chairperson and chief organizer of the conference. She was assisted by learning specialists from other schools.

The program opened at 8:30 a.m. when visitors were given an opportunity to browse through the displays of books.

George Dodson, Gallimore principal, welcomed the guests and a professional puppeteer presented a program for the students.

Eighteen teacher volunteers conducted puppet-making workshops. During the sessions, they made puppets from paper bags, socks, paper paltes, cones, fabric and other materials. refreshments were served to the children during the workshop.

When the puppets were completed, the puppeteer demonstrated how to use the ones the children had made.

All the young authors who participated received certificates from John M. Hoben, superintendent of schools for the Plymouth-Canton community.
