Canton offers police service to neighbor

Supervisor Noel Culbert has made an informal proposal to Plymouth Township for the provision of contractual police services.

Under the proposal, Canton would place seven to 10 patrol officers on Plymouth Township's streets for an annual fee of $248,000 — the sum raised by one mill in the adjoining community.

Culbert and Police Chief Jerry Cox say Canton would benefit from the formation of a regional police force with Plymouth Township.

According to Cox, regional police departments are eligible for federal law enforcement funds, which are usually unavailable to small, one-community departments. Officers assigned to Plymouth Township or Canton would offer back-up support to both communities in emergency situations.

Plymouth Township Supervisor Tom Notebaert said he will present Culbert's proposal to the township board.

Notebaert added, however, that the proposal will be considered as a long-range possibility for police protection or as an alternative to a proposed contract with the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

—Noel Culbert
Canton supervisor

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP and the county law enforcement agency have already given tentative approval to a three-year contract for police protection.

However, the contract must be approved by county auditors and the Wayne County Board of Commissioners before it can be implemented. The township was warned earlier this month that Wayne County's financial problems could stymie the contract's approval. According to Notebaert, the township would consider informal proposals from Canton and the City of Plymouth if the sheriff contract is turned down. A police officer from Northville Township has also made a proposal for the establishment of the township's own police department.

The law enforcement services would be funded from a one-mill tax hike approved by Plymouth Township voters last August.

Notebaert says he sees "a lot of merit" in the proposal made by Culbert. He added, however, that Plymouth Township board members want more law enforcement officers on their streets soon.

The Michigan State Police and the Wayne County Sheriff's Road Patrol are now the only police agencies operating in the township.

"It appears the sheriff would be the route to go to give us the quickest resolve of our problem," Notebaert said. "I personally hope that the sheriff's contract will fall in place very soon. Then we could have time to look at possibilities for the future."

COX INSISTS that a Plymouth Township contract for 24-hour patrol would not deplete Canton law enforcement services in any way.

He envisions use of Plymouth Township's one mill for the hiring of seven to 10 patrol officers who would work out of a mini-station in that community. The municipalities would share detective and record-keeping departments.

The result would be a regional law enforcement agency which would be supervised and administered by Canton.

Culbert said the proposal is "just a preliminary idea" which would require approval of the Canton and Plymouth Township boards prior to implementation.

He insists that a regional department would benefit the Plymouth-Canton area.

"We border each other," Culbert said of Plymouth Township. "But right now, we're drawing a curtain down Joy Road."

According to Cox, the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is now stressing the regionalization of police department when it issues federal grants.

Cox said a $124,000 grant for communication equipment represents the only federal money received by Canton police since the department was formed in 1976. The grant was shared by Canton, Belleville, Van Buren, Sumpter and Huron Township.

IN A NOV. 16 LETTER to Notebaert, Culbert compared Plymouth Township's present considerations to the situation faced by Canton in 1976. In that year, Canton opted for formation of its own police department in lieu of a contract with the sheriff.

He said the "element of control" is an important factor to consider when contemplating a contract with the sheriff's department. He said sheriff deputies "enjoy very high salaries, which you would have to pay for."

But Culbert also noted the high cost of police equipment and other capital improvements in starting a department. Cox estimated capital improvements costs since 1976 at $425,000.

"After several years, Canton has reached the point, finally, where things are going smoothly and more efficient police protection is provided," Culbert said.

In his letter to Notebaert, Culbert said a regional police force comprised of Canton, Plymouth Township and the City of Plymouth would be "ideal."

Cox expressed, however, that Plymouth's established police department would be interested in such a proposal. He said Canton officials have never approached the city with the idea.

In 1980, the Canton Police Department will operate on a $1.1 million budget. The funds come from a special 3.25-mill tax levy for police ($3.25 per $1,000 assessed property valuation) and an $80,000 allocation from federal revenue sharing funds. The department was established as a part-time force in 1976. It began providing 24-hour patrol in June, 1978.

New signs welcoming motorists to Canton Township were erected at 16 of the community's border points this week. In the photo at left, DPW workers Bob Farrell (left) and Mike Pinion take down the sign that has graced the Joy-Canton Center intersection for years. In the photo at right, Joe Teramino (left), Farrell and Pinion put up the new sign. The green background and tree emblem of the new signs — which cost $672 — represents Canton's goal of saving agricultural land and open spaces, according to Supervisor Noel Culbert. Financial concerns pare park plan

The rut-filled condition of Flodin Park will be improved next spring, so informal soccer and baseball games will be possible on the site.

But the tennis courts, landscaping and formal baseball diamonds planned by the Canton Recreation Advisory Committee (RAC) will not be installed on the 30-acre site until some future date.

At a special meeting last Tuesday, the township board turned down a request of the RAC to authorize implementation of the $158,000 plan for phase one of the park's development.

In a compromise move to allow some use of the park on Saltz west of Lilley, the board authorized an $89,000 expenditure to grade and seed the land which was once used as a cornfield. The sum will also finance construction of a gravel parking lot on the site and a storm sewer system.

Recreation superintendent Mike Gouin said the graded land could be used for soccer games.

And township board members expressed hope that Canton's community service clubs would donate ballfield backstops and other equipment for baseball diamonds in the park.

ALTHOUGH THE BOARD approved the concept of the park's $500,000 master plan and the four phases under which the park would be developed, officials refused to approve expenditures for anything except preliminary construction work at the site.

Trustee Robert Greenstein and Treasurer Jim Donahue voted against the motion to authorize the $89,000 expenditure.

They objected to any capital expenditures for recreation in light of economic hard times and the tight fiscal year which Canton is facing in 1980.

Donahue pledged to renew discussion of a proposed millage for recreation at a future board meeting when Trustee Stephen Larson is present.

Greenstein broached the millage idea at last week's meeting to give all residents an opportunity to air their views on the financial priorities of the township.

He made a motion to place a recreational millage question on the ballot of Canton's next regular election. The amount of the millage would be determined by finance director Mike Gorman.

Greenstein's motion failed by a 3-3 vote, however, with Supervisor Noel Culbert, Clerk John Flodin and Trustee Eugene Daley dissenting.

Larson, who was absent from Tuesday's meeting because of vacation plans, objected to the high cost of the Flodin Park master plan at a previous meeting.

The $500,000 plan, which would be implemented over four phases, calls for construction of tennis, soccer, softball and basketball courts on the 30-acre site. The plan also shows a comfort station, picnic area, child's play area, physical fitness course and parking lots.

DONAHUE SAID he spoke to numerous residents about the park's master plan before last Tuesday's meeting.

"The overwhelming majority of them said, 'Don't you dare spend that money,'" he said.

Greenstein maintained that board members have a moral "obligation to go to the people of this township and ask them how to spend their money."

Only about 15 persons attended last week's special meeting. But the majority had strong feelings about the master plan for Flodin Park.

Many of those in attendance were members of the RAC or involved somehow in organized baseball or soccer leagues. They cited an immediate need for the ball diamonds and tennis courts shown in phase one of the park's master plan.

Frank McMurray, a former RAC member, said 2,600 children registered for organized baseball leagues this year. But because of a facility shortage, only 2,300 could be accepted.

"You're talking about hard times, and I agree," said Jim Schols, president

Masses greet Santa

Friday may have been a dismal, rainy day.

But for Santa Claus, the day couldn't have been any busier.

The venerable Mr. Claus first arrived in Canton Township at 9:30 a.m. via fire truck (a lack of snow prevented use of his sleigh) for the benefit of the Canton Jaycees.

For the Jaycees, Santa has agreed to man a workshop trailer near the west entrance of Meijer Thrifty Acres.

He will greet kids there Wednesdays through Fridays from 6:30 to 9 p.m.; Saturdays from 1 to 5 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m.; and Sundays from 1 to 6 p.m.

No fee will be charged for admission to the trailer. But parents who want a

The event will take place at the official Canton Township hall, on Canton Center Road just north of Geddes. There will be a special cameo appearance by none other than Santa Claus, who will be passing out candy canes to the kiddies.

The Michigan Senate now has a toll free action line. Just call 1-800-292-5893 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and your message will be relayed to the appropriate senator's office. An immediate follow-up call from the senator or a member of his or her staff is supposed to be the result.

It's time to book

The Canton Public Library is seeking volunteers to attend meetings of Friends of the Library (a group under formation) at either 10 a.m. or 7:30 p.m. Nov. 27 on the third floor of Canton Township Hall. Head Librarian Deborah O'Connor and members of the library board will be on hand to explain to volunteers the various ways they can help to get the new library open. Pursell urges preventative health program

The nation needs more preventive health programs, starting with school-age youngsters, to keep medical costs controlled.

That was the feeling of U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, in discussing proposed federal controls on hospital spending and related issues last week at a Livonia Chamber of Commerce legislative breakfast.

Pursell, in his second term in the House, said that preventive health measures are more important and effective than putting controls on hospital spending.

It was that latter proposal that the Carter administration proposed and saw defeated in Congress this month. It was part of the president's anti-inflation program.

A good preventive health program, Pursell said, should include instruction on nutrition, physical education in schools, no smoking regulations, among others.

The congressman said he is also working with University Hospital specialists in Ann Arbor on a program to curb obesity.

"A study shows that 15 percent of first graders in the country are overweight," Pursell said.

The country tends to react to a crisis, such as in controlling medical costs, but ignore preventive health programs.

PURSELL SAID Carter's proposed controls on hospitals were a form of wage-price controls on one industry but it would have no effect on the rest of the nation's economy.

One problem with Carter's program, he added, is that Veterans' Administration hospitals and long-term care facilities were exempted from the proposal.

"Many (congressmen) took a long, good look at the hospital controls and eventually opposed them.

Pursell pointed out that the voluntary controls of hospital spending brought those annual increases recently well below the national rate of inflation. The voluntary process is continuing to work now, he said.

ON OTHER issues Congress is dealing with, the Chrysler Corp. loan guarantees received support from Pursell.

He said the company is the 14th largest in the country and its bankruptcy would be "disastrous for the nation's economy."

Pursell added that the government has provided help for other industries and individual companies in the past and would not be setting a precedent with Chrysler.

The government provides loans for small businesses and farmers and gave specific help to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and New York City to help them avoid bankruptcy.

"I feel Chrysler can turn the situation around if it can hold out for several more months," Pursell said.

"This (Chrysler issue) is not a simple free market, free enterprise question," Pursell said. "There are several factors involved that were outside of Chrysler's control," apparently referring to fuel economy and clean air standards imposed on auto companies by Congress in recent years.

PURSELL TOLD the chamber audience of about 45 persons that members of the House and Senate are beginning to sense the nation's mood about tax cuts or spending limitations.

The voters in 1978 approved Proposition 13 in California last year to provide for substantial property tax cuts and 22 other states, including Michigan, adopted some form of tax cut or tax limitation.

"There is a spin off of that public sentiment in Congress," Pursell said.

"The California mood is moving to Washington. The message is loud and clear — most Americans want a balanced federal budget."

He said the federal budget of just under $500 billion represents 22 percent of the gross national product.

But Pursell said he prefers to limit federal spending through the legislative process instead of a Constitutional amendment as preferred by others.

Public health nurses from Wayne County found time to talk while waiting for seniors to show up for free shots. Underclassmen received their shots on Tuesday and Wednesday last week.

A lotta worry but little pain

There were a lot of worried faces last week as high school students lined up for shots from school nurses.

As might be expected, the rumor mill had spread the word that the immunizations were really painful but those brave enough to show up discovered that very little pain was involved.

The shots were administered by school district nurses and by Wayne County Health Department nurses in Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton high schools.

The free immunization clinic was set up to provide shots to those students not fully immunized as required by state law. Some 2,200 students were in that category before the clinic was held.

The 2,200 students faced exclusion from school if they did not receive all needed immunizations by Feb. 15, and so there was some motivation to show up.

But the lines of students waiting for shots was not long when the Observer photographer stopped by last Monday — the time when seniors were scheduled.

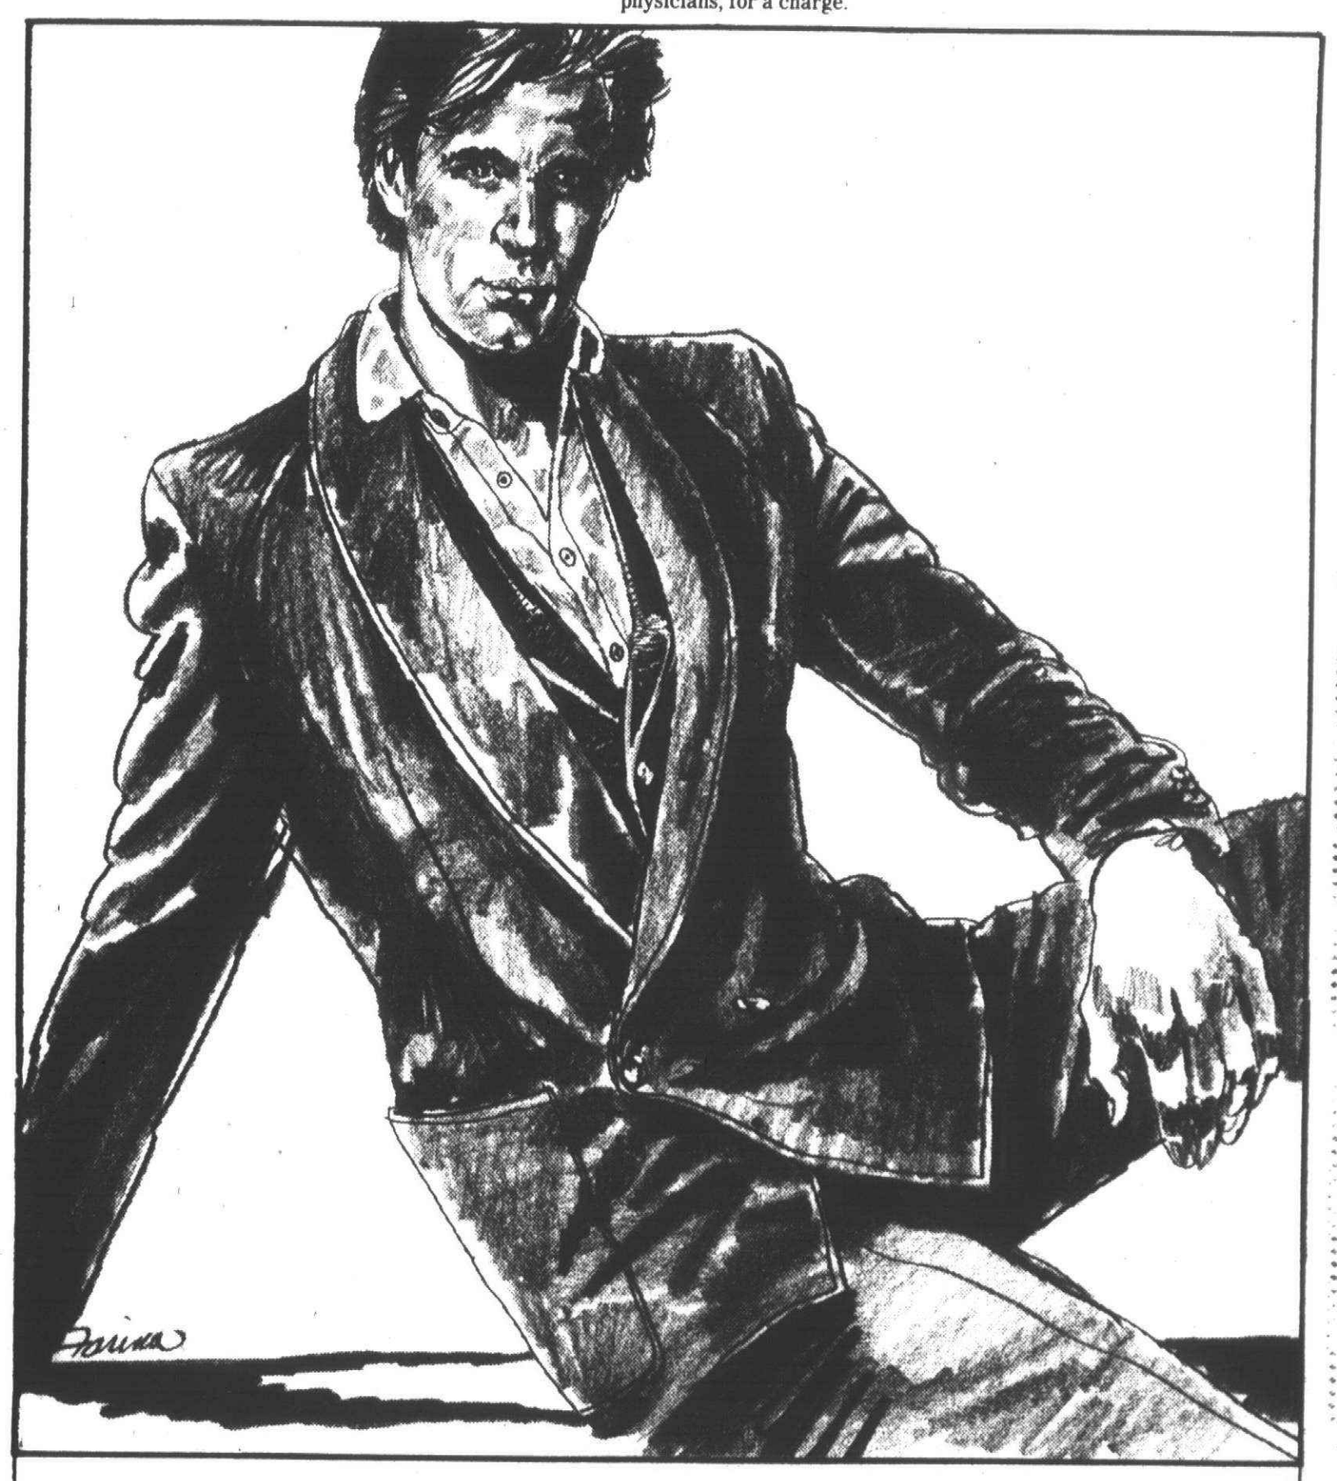

Students who didn't take advantage of the free shot clinic still may get immunizations from Wayne County General Hospital or from private physicians, for a charge.

Board may set bond size

A student growth plan is expected to be approved tonight by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

The board's timetable for a school bond election in February calls for trustees to approve finalized directions for the 1980 bond issue at tonight's meeting.

If the final decision on the size of the bond issue is made tonight, the board would approve the formal ballot language on Dec. 10 for an election on Thursday, Feb. 28.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the board meeting room of the administrative offices at 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth.

LAST WEEK school trustees managed to narrow down a list of some of the alternatives during a study session.

At that time the board decided against building a new high school and against grade realignment.

Superintendent John M. Hoben had recommended a realignment whereby the ninth grade would be moved back to the middle school level and sixth grade would be moved back to the elementary level.

The major purpose of that move would be to relieve enrollment pressure at the two high schools.

The school board has decided to rent Lowell Junior High, on Hix just south of Joy, from the Livonia School District and operate it as a fifth middle school.

The board also has decided to seek funds to renovate Central Middle School (the old Plymouth High School) and convert it for use by high school students.

Because Central doesn't have enough room to house the added high school students expected in the future, though, the board also will be asking for bond funds to finance classroom additions at the Centennial Educational Park (CEP).

In opting for the classroom additions and renovation of Central Middle, the school board has decided against the suggestion of building a third high school — either at the CEP site or on property adjoining Field Elementary in Canton.

With those tentative decisions made, the board must decide now whether Central will be operated as a third but smaller high school or as an annex operation to the CEP programs.

The tentative decisions were indications given by trustees by a straw vote conducted at last Monday's study session.

AT THAT TIME the board also was presented with the latest enrollment projections, based on the Fourth Friday count taken in September.

dent of the Plymouth-Canton Baseball League.

"But if you don't have something for kids to do, you're going to be paying more for police protection. We need ball diamonds, soccer fields and a place for the kids to get together."

Only two members of the audience — Dr. Sid Disbrow and Roberta Steele — spoke against expenditures for Flodin Park. They urged the board to place the issue on the ballot.

"The idea of all the people of Canton deciding what should be done is a way to avoid special interest groups," Disbrow said. "I think recreation is vital, but I don't think it's something that always needs to be provided by government."

SUPERVISOR CULBERT said he was prepared to authorize phase one of the park's development last Tuesday. He said most residents he spoke with about the park plan favored the expenditure.

Trustee Carol Bodenmiller said her motion to authorize grading and other preliminary construction work at the park site would allow the board to reconsider all of phase one next spring.

She said the grading work would allow some use of the park for neighborhood softball and soccer games.

Student interviews contender

Hearns ready for Sugar Ray

By LISA PAGE

Tommy Hearns of Detroit is the number one contender to fight for the welterweight boxing crown now held by Pipino Cuevas or Wilfredo Benitez.

Hearns actually started boxing at age 10. While growing up he would watch professional boxing on television or watch amateur boxing on the streets of his Detroit neighborhood.

Hearns said he felt there was no using waiting to enter the 1980 Olympics because by 1980 he said he thought he could be a champion.

Tommy's biggest fans and supporters are his mother and younger brothers. He says his mother has had the biggest impact on his boxing career through her continuous praise and encouragement.

BESIDES HIS perfect ring record, Hearns said he is most proud of the Sports Man of the Year Award from the city of Detroit.

"I never thought of being considered for this kind of award," said Hearns, who added the award has a special meaning for him.

And Hearns thinks about that award, and his fellow Detroiters, everytime he enters the ring. Being undefeated places added pressure on Hearns who says that prior to every fight he must think about his record and how he would face himself and his fellow Detroiters should he lose.

It is Hearns' opinion that number one contender and former Olympic gold medalist Sugar Ray Leonard is not avoiding a fight with him. He feels that the present time is not the right time for either boxer.

When asked when he would be ready to fight Leonard, he answered: "It's not a point of being ready — it's the point of getting a fight with him, cause whenever we get a fight, I'll be ready."

He understands that a Hearns-Leonard bout is a fight everyone would like to see, and he'd love to see the fight scheduled for the new Joe Louis arena expected to open in mid-December.

THE TOUGHEST fight of Hearns' career, in his opinion, is the 10-rounder he had with Clyde Gray.

Hearns said he never experienced a tougher 10 rounds of boxing than the 10 he went against Gray.

Tommy describes his boxing technique as his "own little style." When developing his style early in his career, Hearns decided not to immitate other boxers but to be himself in the ring.

Hearns said he hopes the success he's had thus far continues for some time to come. At the end of his career, Hearns says he like to have a business career as a supermarket manager or as an apartment manager.

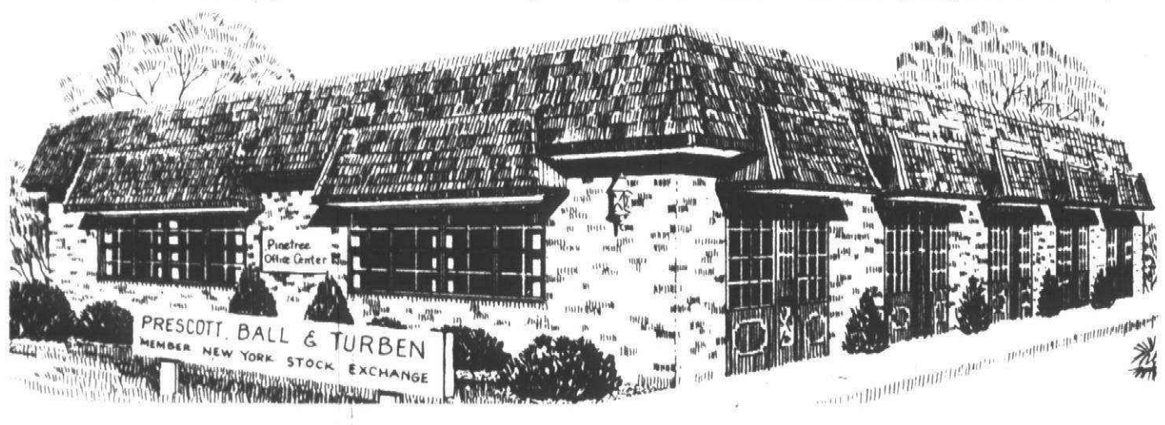

Double success

Robert Johnson and son Rob of Canton both enjoyed success on opening day of deer hunting season. Rob, 16, bagged an eight-point buck while his dad got a 10-point buck — both at about 8:30 a.m. on opening day near Houghton Lake. This was the first deer for Rob, a junior at Plymouth Salem. The Johnsons live at Palmer and Lilley in Canton. (Staff photo)

3rd stock brokerage firm opens here

Five young men who recently graduated from the Manley-Bennett-McDonald stock brokerage firm on S. Main have opened Plymouth's third stock exchange office.

The five young brokers have taken over a franchise of the nationally known firm of Prescott, Ball and Turben and have opened an office at 44507 Pine Tree Drive, just off the corner of Ann Arbor Road and Sheldon.

They are: Craig Fleming, Tim White, Ernest Hughes, Jack Stoops and Tom Tybinko.

THE RECENT OPENING follows by only a few months the arrival of the Paine-Weber firm in the Markham Building and helps to make Plymouth a focal point for stock market investors.

"We are all from this area," said Fleming, "and we feel Plymouth can stand a third office. It has been the 'secret' of the brokerage business for a long time."

Thanks for help on UNICEF

Editor:

On behalf of the American Association of University Women, and from me as coordinator for UNICEF, a special thank you to the 1,286 children who participated in UNICEF in the Plymouth-Canton community.

In the International Year of the Child, these children raised $1,675.54 for needy children throughout the world. Thank you also to the many adults who allowed their children to collect door-to-door and recruited others to help too.

Thank you to the city of Plymouth, and Canton and Plymouth townships for giving us permission for the drive. The collection could not have been done without their support.

Thank you Carole Strid, Joyce Holmes, and Cindy Zajac for organizing groups of children to collect. Thank you also to Mary Uhl of Ericksson and Nancy Mather of Isbister for involving their entire class in the project.

Thanks also to Luan Brownlee, learning specialist at Field, for involving the entire school in a Read-A-Thon. I thank her for her creative way of accomplishing two worthwhile things.

Thank you to the businesses which gave financial backing for the Read-A-Thon. They were: Frank A. McMurray Insurance Agency, Parkway Veterinary Clinic, Roman Forum, Inc., Rusty Nail Lounge, Schwartz's Greenhouse Shop, and the Superbowl, Inc.

from our readers

Thank you to St. Theordore's Church for loaning the chips to keep a record of the amount of time children read. Thank you to Joleen Immerfall and her husband for loaning the chiming clock and all her organizational help.

Thanks also to all the parent volunteers and the great cooperation from the entire staff.

A thank you also is extended to Bobbi Abbott, Cindy Zajac and Debbie Maloni of AAUW for helping me organize the drive.

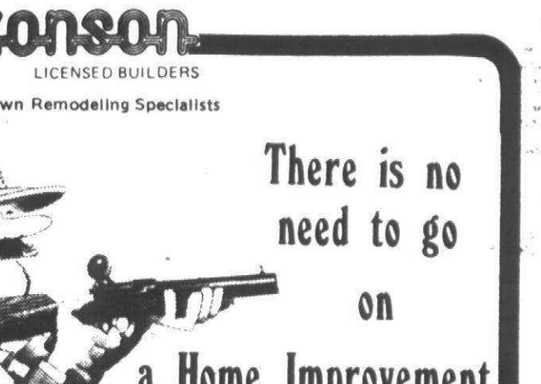

In closing I would like to express a warm and sincere thank you to all the adults, the very special children and all the people who contributed financially to make the entire UNICEF drive a success.

Will M-14 open up area?

Hunting ban issues revisited

Sparked by renewed interest in residential safety, a hunting ban in Plymouth Township is up for another round this week.

Despite 3-1 support of a township hunting ban in a 1978 referendum election, hunting currently is allowed in the township's western end.

Residents will get another chance to voice their concerns on the issue at a public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the township hall.

Arguments in favor of the township-wide hunting ban have refueled since the opening of the M-14 freeway, expected to increase access to this area. Additionally, the issue has gained interest because of further expansion of western home development.

Township Trustee Barbara Lynch several weeks ago suggested the issue be reviewed because of "numerous" contacts with reisdents favoring the ban.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE Lee Fidge, also outspoken against recreational hunting in Plymouth Township, said: "The state should recognize that the township is not a farming-hunting area anymore."

Presently, hunting is allowed west of Beck Road. On private property, however, the hunter must secure written permission to hunt from the property owner.

"It is difficult to enforce this," Fidge said. "With the building of subdivisions and the M-14 freeway, the whole western end of the township should be closed to hunting."

Speaking from personal experience, she said she has caught hunters trespassing on her property from areas where it is allowed.

One evening last year, she stopped nine hunters searching for pheasant on her property. They were from Livonia, Romulus and Belleville, she said.

"The problem is that people fire guns and animals don't know any boundaries."

Frank Opolka, head of the enforcement divison of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), agreed that enforcement on private private posted against trespassing is difficult.

"If an officer is on the spot he can issue a citation."

However, if an officer is not on hand, the landlord must sign a complaint with the DNR.

"Not all landlords are willing to do so."

Township Treasurer Joe West, who opposed a hunting ban four years ago, said he recognizes that the opening of the M-14 could bring more hunters to Plymouth Township.

"I'M LEANING toward it but I haven't made up my mind. Having been a hunter, if I had a 100-acre farm I'd want to hunt and I don't think anyone can stop it."

West was the township representative to a committee investigating a ban. The committee was comprised of representatives from the DNR, the Michigan State Police and the Wayne County Sheriff's Department.

After some study, the committee recommended that hunting not be banned in the western end but that the size of bullets be restricted.

West said if the issue appears again, he expects strong opposition from the DNR as well as the Western Wayne County Conservation Club.

Opolka said if a resolution to ban hunting throughout the township is passed, the final action could not be accomplished immediately.

He outlined a long, complex governmental process that picks up with more committee work by those four agencies. If the committee rules hunting is dangerous in this area, the attorney general's office will study it, as well as a joint house-senate administrative rules committee.

Upon that committee's recommendation, a ban could receive legislative approval and become law.

In the most recent hunting accident in this area, a Plymouth man was shot in the head when he trespassed on private property in Salem Township this fall.

Hands in resignation

Schuele through with Canton position

By BRAD EMONS

After four years and a 6-30 record, Dave Schuele is out as head football coach at Plymouth Canton.

Schuele informed Canton High School principal Kent Buikema Wednesday morning that he was resigning. He then addressed returning players to explain his decision.

"The way things were it was a no win situation," said Schuele. "They needed a person inside for communications. That's a major drawback that I thought I could overcome. You need interaction with the kids during the day.

"The conditions were not ideal."

Schuele said he did not resign because of pressure from parents or the administration.

"Yes, I was disappointed with the program," said Buikema, "but I admire Dave as a person. He's a fine gentleman who works well with young people.

"In some ways he did not have a fair opportunity and had some obstacles to overcome. Being out of the building did not help."

Schuele, a resident of Livonia and teacher at Highland Park High School, commuted every day to practice.

Buikema said no timetable has been set to hire a replacement. However, he "we will move as quickly as possible."

The Canton principal emphasized that the new coach will be interviewed and hired from within the district.

TWO WEEKS ago the Observer learned that a group of Canton football parents were organizing to demand that a new coach within the Canton building was needed to replace Schuele.

'The way things were it was a no win situation.'
— Dave Schuele

"I'm sure there are a lot of people in Plymouth happy that I'm gone," laughed Schuele. "I felt I worked hard and was interested in the kids'well-being.

"I don't care what the parents think. That had nothing to do with my resignation. They (parents) are just there on Friday nights.

"They have no idea what goes on."

Schuele took over for Jim Muneio four years ago after he resigned. Muneio left because of parental pressure.

"I hope I gave them the buffer they needed when I got the job," said Schuele. "Nobody in the system wanted to touch it when I applied. I thought it was a good move."

Schuele began his coaching career by starting a program at Sanford-Meridian. His teams did not get over the .500 mark. He then served as an assistant coach in winning programs at Okemos and Highland Park.

"When I came here I thought I could turn it around," he said. "But the conditions were not right. The travel every day and hunting for a staff all the time were the biggest factors.

"I had constant turnover on the coaching staffs."

SCHUELE had two 0-9 seasons 1977 and 1979 during his tenure. He was 2-7 in 1976, his first year, and 4-5 in 1978.

"This year was a disaster," he said. "It was very discouraging.

"The players I had this year were a good group attitude-wise. They worked hard and gave fine fforts. We had to overcome some physical deficiences.

"I hope whoever gets the job will not get it by default. They need to keep the winter weight-lifting program going."

It is unknown at this time whether any assistants under Schuele will apply for the position. Schuele said that he believes John Gravlin, an assistant varsity coach this year, will not be back next season "because of medical reasons."

DAVE SCHUELE
Resigns post

Schuele said "I don't think I'm through with coaching. I'm going to lay low for a few weeks.

"I've got a couple offers and have left some avenues open."

Coaches unanimous on selections

All-Area harrier squad durable

By BRAD EMONS
and DAVE SCHWARTZ

Catholic Central, Livonia Stevenson and Franklin dominated this year's Observer All-Area cross country squad.

The Shamrocks, Catholic League champs and qualifiers for the state meet at Faulkwood Shores, placed three harriers on the 10-man team as did Livonia Stevenson, a member of the Inter-Lakes League.

Livonia Franklin, second place in the Northwest Suburban League, is well represented as area coaches voted its runners to the first team. Two other harriers from the Northwest Suburban League round out the team.

FIRST TEAM

Andy Dillon, Catholic Central. The Shamrock senior was a vital force in leading Catholic Central to the regional Class A team title at Cass Benton as he finished first. He was also state runner-up with a time of 15:04.

His best time this season was 14:37 when he won the Haslett Invitational. Dillon also captured the Holly Invitational, Catholic League title, Operation Friendship crown and Alpena Inviate.

An outstanding competitor on the CC track team, Dillon was selected to the squad for the second year in a row. He was the Shamrocks' co-captain for two years.

Paul Coburn, Livonia Franklin. Another repeater on this year's team, Coburn will be back again next season running for Bob Holmes' Patriots. He's only a junior.

The Franklin co-captain won the Northwest Suburban League championship and placed third in the tough Schoolcraft Invitational at Cass Benton.

Undefeated in dual meets, Coburn placed third in the Class A regional and went to record a 26th place finish at the state meet.

He is the school record holder at Franklin for three miles.

Rich Dubois, Livonia Stevenson. He was the Spartans' top runner and MVP this fall as a senior.

Dubois ran eight times at Cass Benton and never went over 17:00. His best time was 16:17 there. The Spartan standout placed fifth at Schoolcraft and second in the Livonia City Meet. He was 28th at the regionals and ninth at the Ru Invitational.

Dubois was an all-league pick in the Inter-Lakes.

He was eighth in the Catholic League and fourth in the Operation Friendship City race.

In other races he placed third at Alpena, seventh at Niles and fifth at Haslett.

The all-Inter-Lakes League pick Bowie placed 15th at the Redford Union Invitational and 22nd in the regional.

He was fourth in the regional and third in the Catholic League championship.

Casey also competed in invitationals at Alpena (5th), Niles (8th) and Haslett (4th).

His consistency was a big reason for CC's success.

He finished third in the Northwest Suburban League and placed 14th in the regional, gaining a berth in the state meet where he finished 60th.

The Patriot co-captain also turned in a fine performance at the Schoolcraft Invitational where he placed 10th.

He was ninth at Schoolcraft and third in the Livonia City Meet.

Santo Campbell, John Glenn. He gained all-league honors (Northwest

Girls' cage showdown

Rocks, Chiefs vie in opener

The Class A district title may very well be decided when rivals Plymouth Canton and Salem clash in the first round, Tuesday at 7 p.m.

The game, pitting two of the area's better teams, will be held at the Canton Phase III gym.

"Canton-Salem is always a good game," said Canton coach Mike McCauley. "The fans should come out and see it.

"We'll both be ready and it should be an enjoyable game."

Salem coach Bob Blohm is also looking forward the the battle.

"I think it's great," he said. "Eventually you have to play them."

Three other teams will also battle for the title — Westland John Glenn, Belleville and Ypsilanti.

Both coaches agreed that Glenn is the darkhorse of the tourney.

"Their also a favorite after beating Thurston," said Blohm.

Said McCauley: "John Glenn is a real dark horse. George Sommerman (coach) does a real good job with them. They have a heck of a team and have really improved."

Glenn, which lost its last regular season game to Inkster at home Tuesday night, will meet Belleville Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the first game of a doubleheader.

The second game will pit the winner of the Canton-Salem game against Ypsilanti at 8 p.m.

THE FINALS will be held Saturday at 7 p.m.

Canton appears now to be the favorite after notching its 15th straight win over Farmington Tuesday. The Chiefs are 17-3 overall after a 2-3 start and the loss to starting guard Jill Pedersen (out with a broken leg) in the fifth game.

"Canton has to be the favorite," said Blohm.

McCauley doesn't agree.

"There's no favorite in this game," he said. "The team who peaks near tournament time will go."

Salem is 13-7 overall after dropping its last two games. The Chief-Rock battle will be physical with both teams most likely matching up with man-to-man defenses.

Glenn, with a 11-9 mark, is led by junior front-liners Geri Pizzuti and Kim Cesarz. Pizzuti did not play against Canton in a -point loss a month ago.

Glenn can also rely on the strong guard play of Teri Slack.

Belleville, which lost twice to Salem in Suburban Eight League play, comes into the tournament with a 10- mark under coach Tom Niemi.

The Tigers are paced by senior guard Laura Houle, who averages 16 points per game. Other standouts include sister Sheri, a guard, and center Lisa Ray.

Ypsilanti, which lost to Canton, 40-25, early in the season, appears to be the weakest of the field. Bev Turman, a 6-foot center, leads Ypsi in scoring.

Cagers on air

The Plymouth Salem-Canton battle will air on Tuesday at 6:45 p.m. starting with the pre-game show.

WSDP will also broadcast the second game of Thursday's doubleheader at 8;15 p.m. with Ypsilanti meeting either Salem or Canton.

In the event that either Canton or Salem make it to the district finals, WSDP will broadcast that game Saturday at 6:45 p.m.

Providing the play-by-play this week is Dave Meador. Rick Johnson will do the color commentary.

Canton girls bounce Falcons

By BRAD EMONS

Plymouth Canton managed to cut through a forest of tall Farmington defenders Tuesday night for its 15th straight girls' basketball win.

The comparatively small, but tenacious Chiefs came from behind in the final quarter to beat the Falcons, 51-48, in a non-league game.

Coach Mike McCauley's squad ended the regular season with a 17-3 mark after downing one of the biggest teams in the state.

"I don't know why we can't have the same kind of stuff in our drinking water," quipped McCauley, referring to 6-foot-3-inch Farmington sophomore center Stacy Green.

What the Chiefs lacked in height was made up in their usual aggressive style of play. Canton found it easier to take the 15-foot jumper on the wing then getting ball inside against the likes of Green.

Trailing 38-33 at the end of three quarters, Canton made its final period charge behind the generalship of point-guard Vicky Cavallaro, who played her finest game of the season.

The Chiefs beat Farmington like a drum in the fourth quarter.

Cavallaro and Cindy Sovine each scored five points in the final quarter to lift the Chiefs back into the game.

Junior Ruggerio then took over as she hit for six points, four coming on crucial free throws.

RUGGERIO gave Canton the lead with 3:29 to go when she canned two free throws. She was fouled on the play by Green, who exited with five fouls.

"That really hurt us when we lost Stacy," said Farmington coach Bob Lekovish. "She was blocking a lot of shots and getting a lot of rebounds for us.

"We missed some key buckets and made some turnovers. They (Canton) are a good team. I would compare them to Redford Union or Bentley. They hustled and came on strong at the end."

With 1:22 to go, Ruggerio salted the game for Canton when she canned an easy layup on a pass from Joni Sommerville, making it 49-44.

"It was a scrappy one," said McCauley. "We came through on the foul line. It was a total team effort. It was our 12 (players) against their five.

"We came out working hard in the fourth quarter after playing poorly in the third. We had to press and get them tired.

"Our 90 fingertip push-ups was the difference."

McCauley might not be joking when talking about the push-ups. His team ripped several balls away from the big Farmington team. The Chiefs also forced countless turnovers and tie-ups.

Betsy VanDeusen topped Farmington with 11. Kelly Wallace, scoring all layups, had 10 along with Julie Tadreynski.

The bowlers in the western suburbs did more than feast on turkey for the holiday. They sent the pins flying in all directions in the bowling centers. And when the firsing ceased they had recorded seven series above 700, and the Wonderland Classic set the pace with three team series above the 3100 mark.

In the midst of the high scoring it remained for a 19-year-old recent graduate of the junior leagues at Westland Bowl to set the pace. Bowling in the Tri City men's league Dale Williams rolled a perfect game on the way to a 752 series. It was the highest he ever had registered.

While he was breaking the 700 barrier a few lanes away, Marty Capaldi came through with a 712 made possible by a middle game of 256.

The other 700 series at Westland were the work of Bill Todd who had a 726 in the Little Caesar Classic, along with a 715 by Dick Beattie and a 708 by Bob Jawor

THE HEAVIEST firing came in the Wonderland Classic where three teams betterd the 3100 mark to set a new high for the season. .

John Mc Keever's Press Form team linked counts of 1028,1057 and 1054 for a 3102, but had to yield high honors to George Stefan's squad that came through with games of 1123, 995 and 1069 for 3187. The third team to do the trick was Gordie Cantwell's Westland team wi with counts of 1061, 998 and 1043 for 3102.

Meanwhile, John Walters had a 703 in the classic that came about when he put together games of 245, 247 and 211. His closest rival was Dean Shiffman with a 671.

A RAFT of good scores alaso was turned in at Plaza Lanes where Ken Loftis took single game honors in St. Collett's league with a 254. In the Ford Sheldon loop Frank Gercak paced the group with a 617 and Joe Bardee showed the way in the Monday men's loop with a 631.

The best scoring came when Dennis Seeman came through with a closing 232 in 647.

THE HIGH SCHOOL bowlers put on another good show at Farmington Lanes. Leading the way was John Ponke with a 237 in 662 and Dave Hamilton with a 603, while Debbie Harmon showed the way to the girls with a 210. In the junior league Fred Mc Neese had a 233 in 614 and Kim Walker had a 213.

In the ladies classic Barbara Jawor posted a 235 in 632 and Carol Sotala had a 225 in 606.

BUD WEINSHIENDER was high man for the week at Woodand Lanes. He found the range for a 639 in the Elks League when he opened with a 278 followed with 194 and closed with 166. Second place for the week went to Denise Sei, of the Kings and Queens loop with a 638 that included a 233 finisher. On the men's side Dick La Motte was high with 622.

Other high single games were a 244 rolled by Carol Gouray in the St. John Bosco League, George Horvach's 256 in the Bators loop and Bob Diaz 602 in the Jacks and Jills circuit

AT MERRI-BOWL Kay Markell showed the way in the doubles with a 596. Right behind her came Marlene Hanna with a 242 in 584 and Linda Henderson had a 242 in 574.

DENISE RACHBUN broke into the winner's circle in the ladies classic at Westland with a 572. Her nearest rival was Geri Beattie with a 233 in 567 and Julie Zimmerman with a 224 in 554.

Rocks and season with 13-7 mark

Rally not enough as Salem falls

Walled Lake Central handed Plymouth Salem its second girls' cage loss in as many nights, 45-40, in a regular season finale for both teams.

The five-point loss Tuesday night dropped Salem to 13-7 overall. Redford Union dumped the Rocks Monday, 45-41.

Salem trailed 29-14 at halftime, but made a game of it in the final quarter. In fact, the Rocks cut Central's lead to 42-40 with 1:11 to go.

Salem coach Bob Blohm was then whistled for a technical foul and Central converted two free throws to wrap it up.

"Walled Lake shot the ball real well," said Blohm. "We did not play well in the first half because we tried some things that we don't normally do."

The Salem coach tried a match-up zone, but Central found the range, jumping out to a 14-8 first quarter lead.

"I'm not really happy for doing that," he said. "We just can't divert from what we do best."

Blohm went back to his regular man-to-man defense in the second half and called it "the best we've played all season."

"We played well in the final two quarters," Blohm said. "I felt we had the game until the technical."

Erin Blendin of Central paced all scorers with 16 points. Wendy Keelty added 11.

PATTY WEIDMAN led Salem with 14. She was the only Salem player to shoot free throws and the Rock center missed all four.

Salem committed 22 fouls as guards Nan Horwood and Eileen Moore each had five. Central was whistled for just nine while canning 17 of 29 charity tosses.

Hear Joe Granville Give His Predictions Of Where The Market's Going.

Joseph E. Granville is a legend in his own time. In a special "Emergency Letter" of September 23, 1979, Joe Granville called what he felt to be the top of the market for this year. During the next four weeks the market plunged almost 100 points. He called the entire 1974-76 bull market, catching not only the primary trend but also the intermediate tops and bottoms. He identified the brief November 1977 bulge immediately as a bull trap, and forewarned of a sharp pullback going into the new year of 1978.

He has been right more than most market counselors, but it was his recommendations on gambling stocks that really catapulted Mr. Granville into the limelight. Mr. Granville first recommended the casino and potential casino stocks in March 1978, with the unheard-of thesis that gambling will become the biggest new growth industry since electronics and computers.

Plan to attend E. F. Hutton's seminar featuring Mr. Granville on Friday, December 7th at 7:30 PM. Early reservations are urged due to limited capacity. For reservations and full details, simply fill out the coupon or call Terry Lester or Henry Gordon at (313) 358-3200.

Young, talented Rock cagers eager

By BRAD EMONS

Development of underclassmen will be the key to a successful basketball season at Plymouth Salem.

If those players improve and contribute this winter, Salem should be able to notch its seventh straight Suburban Eight League crown.

"This group has the opportunity to as good as the other clubs we've had," said head coach Fred Thomann, whose team finished 21-3 last year.

Monk, a 6-3 post center last year, has grown to 6-6 and returns as the team's third leading scorer and top rebounder.

"We think he's a legitimate big-time player," Thomann said. "Howard is at least recruitable. He's quick, plays good defense and doesn't back away. He's developed into a good shooter."

Running the show once again this season is 6-1 point guard Rob Neu.

"WE ASKED Rob to bring the ball down for us last year," said the Salem coach. "He handles it extremely well and has quick hands. He's developed into a good point guard. Rob will be asked to do more scoring this year."

Adding rebounding and muscle inside is 6-3, 200-pound forward Jim Anderson, a valuable reserve last year.

"He's a good passer and can shoot," noted Thomann, "but he also gets good position and is a hard-nosed player. He's a competitor."

Five juniors and two sophomores round out the rest of the squad.

"We'd like to give everybody an opportunity early in the season to show what they can do," said Thomann. "It will just depend on the situation.

"We're quick, strong, jump well and have more size this year. But I'm not sure about depth. At this time we're a shade ahead of last year. We'd like to start the season right now."

Salem will open its 1979-80 season Friday, Dec. 7 at Walled Lake Central.

Paul Horton, a 6-8 junior, is pressing for a starting spot along with 6-2 guard Mike Sharp. Horton will give the Rocks added rebounding strength when he's in the lineup. Another post player vying for time is 6-3 junior Kevin Urban.

One of the best jumpers on the team is 6-1 Leigh Langkabel. He will be joined by another junior, Tom Kelliher, who is being converted from forward to guard.

TWO TALENTED sophomores wanting to contribute right away for Thomann are Scott Bublin and Mike McBride, both 6-2.

"Scott has all the tools," said Thomann, "and Mike has an excellent head and shoots the ball well."

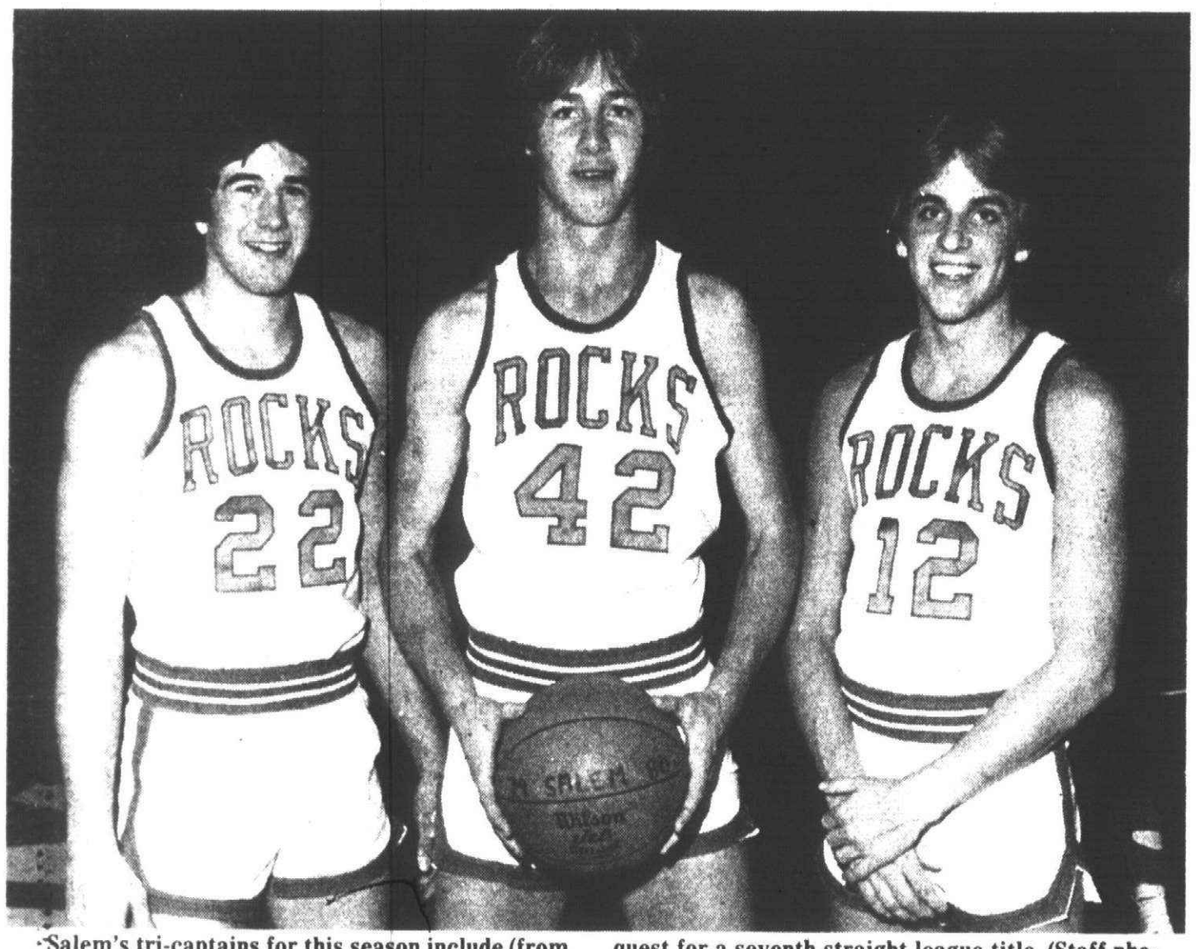

A fast Salem start will be the result of a comprehensive summer program. The Rocks played at the Detroit Boys Club against some of the toughest squads in the state — Detroit Mackenzie, Catholic Central and Saginaw to name a few.

"I think a summer program is important," said the Salem coach. "We just let them play. It's a chance to evaluate what we have."

Salem has beefed up its schedule this year with the likes of Ypsilanti and Livonia Stevenson (twice).

Thomann said the Suburban Eight League race should be a battle again between his own club, Livonia Bentley and Belleville.

The Rocks will unveil their team in the annual Blue-White game, Wednesday Nov. 28. The freshman team will play at 5:30 p.m. followed by the junior varsity squad at 6:30 p.m. Varsity players will hit the floor at 7:30 p.m.

Salem's tri-captains for this season include (from left) Jim Anderson, Howard Monk and Rob Neu. All three players will play a key role in the Rocks' quest for a seventh straight league title. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

Plymouth Canton graduate Steve Prueter, a senior on the Purdue University team, and Dave Mossoian of Dearborn, hold down the No. 3 spot in men's doubles.

Peggy O'Neill of Livonia, a senior at Texas Tech, gained a No. 4 rating in women's singles. Margaret Mayer of Grosse Pointe Park is the top player.

Plymouth Salem's Kathy Horton, regional Class A champ and No. 1 player for the Rocks this season as a senior, earned a No. 5 ranking in girls 18 singles. Leanna Burchett of Plymouth is rated No. 6. The top-ranked player is Leslie Van Houten of Ann Arbor.

Dick Scott has opening for Buick dealership

When Dick Scott took over the long-established Buick car dealership from Jack Selle he promised he had some unusual ideas about conducting the business.

At the time he declined to mention any of them and adopted a wait-and-see policy.

But his customers don't have to wait see any longer.

Scott showed them recently when he conducted an open house to display the 1980 models.

When the gathering of several hundred persons accepted his invitation, Scott told them he had a purpose in mind.

"There is no use having two small parties when one big one will be much better," he commented. And that is just what happened.

Speaking of the party, Scott said it was much better than he anticipated and that, beyond having a good time, it developed into a lot of business, too.

"For one thing, they not only enjoyed the open house, entertainment and food, but they spent a lot of time looking at the new cars. And, surprisingly, they all wanted to see the top models.

"Of course, their eyes were set on the Skylark which is our low-priced model to meet the competition with the other small, fuel efficiency cars. So it looks like a good year."

The Bottom Line

Business break

By DANIEL HERRIMAN

(The author, Daniel Herriman of Plymouth, is a partner in General Business Services Inc., which offers management consulting services to small businesses.)

The Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977 created a new tax credit designed to stimulate the economy through an entirely new concept.

The Jobs Tax Credit was designed to provide small businesses throughout the U.S. the opportunity to receive a rebate on a portion of their salary expenses.

This concept has been adapted to what is now known as Targeted Jobs Tax Credit and is aimed at employing the hard-core unemployed.

The Jobs Tax Credit is available to a corporation, a sole proprietorship, a tax-option corporation, a partnership, and estates or trusts which meet the following requirements:

- To qualify, employees must be hired after Sept. 26, 1978.
- The credit is based on earnings between Jan. 1, 1979, and Dec. 31, 1980.
- The individual must be from at least one of seven targeted groups.

THE TARGETED groups are:

(a) Mentally or physically handicapped individuals referred from qualified vocational rehabilitation programs;

(b) Individuals at least 18 years old, or not yet 25, on the hiring date who are members of economically disadvantaged families;

(c) A Viet Nam era veteran who is less than 35 on the hiring date, and is a member of an economically disadvantaged family;

(d) Recipients of supplemental security income (SSI) payments;

(e) Persons who receive cash payments for at least 30 days from state or locally qualified general assistance programs;

(f) Youths who are at least 16 but not yet 19 who have not graduated from vocational or high school and are participants in a qualified cooperative educational program; and,

(g) Ex-convicts convicted of a felony who are members of an economically disadvantaged family, and are hired within five years of release from prison or date of conviction, whichever is later.

AN ECONOMICALLY disadvantaged family as referred to in targeted groups b, c and g above is one whose income during the six months before the month the individual is hired (when figured on an annual basis) is less than 70 percent of the Bureau of Labor Statistics' lower living standard.

Further, to be eligible for the credit, an employee must be certified as a member of a targeted group by a local designated agency. Generally, these agencies are local offices of the state employment security agency.

The Jobs Tax Credit itself is based on 50 percent, to a maximum of $6,000, of the first year's wages and 25 percent, to a maximum of $6,000, of the second year's wages. Thus the maximum credit for first year employees is $3,000, and for a second-year employee would be $1,500.

The Targeted Jobs Tax Credit, as the title implies, can be used to offset 90 percent of the current year's tax liability of a sole proprietor or corporation.

Employees can be either full-time or part-time for wages paid to qualify for the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit. If an employee who generated the credit is fired by an employer, or quits, no penalty is imposed on the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit earned for that particular employee.

If the Job Tax Credit is not entirely used to offset the tax liability, it can be carried back three years and forward seven years for a refund of taxes paid in those years.

The only penalty associated with the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit is that in the year of its computation, the salary expense shown on the tax return must be reduced by the amount of the Jobs Tax Credit.

This reduction in wage expense lowers the credit from 50 percent to a smaller amount, depending upon the individual's tax bracket.

Thus, a sole proprietor in the 14 percent tax bracket does not have a maximum effective per additional employee credit of $3,000 (50 percent of $6,000) but only $2,580. Likewise, a corporation in the 20 percent tax bracket has a maximum credit of only $2,400.

Wanted: Tradesmen

Retired tradesmen and handymen still are needed by the Plymouth Community Council on Aging, Inc.

The council is in the process of establishing a skill banks for the older adults in the community.

Skills bank will be a clearing house for the retired tradesmen who desire jobs in their spare time to maintain their skills while earning some additional income.

The skills bank will operate a telephone center where return calls requesting needed service will be received and passed on to the listed retired tradesman.

The worker and homeowner requesting work will then negotiate directly to ascertain the work to be performed at reasonable rates.

Before the program gets started the council needs to hear from volunteers willing to participate. Retired persons willing to offer their skills or volunteer for the phone center may do so by calling 455-4907, 453-2816, or 453-4844.

The council and its committees are all unpaid volunteers, working in the interests of senior citizens, and is dependent on local contributions for its funding. The council is not, at this time, affiliated with any federal, state county or city programs but functions as independent advocates for senior services.

New child care center plans January opening

The Corner Cottage Child Care Center, on the grounds of the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Medical Center, is planning to open its doors Jan. 3.

The Corner Cottage will be the first employer-related, work-site child care center in Ann Arbor. It also is one of the first child care centers in the area to offer an infant care program.

The center plans an initial enrollment of 18 children, ages six weeks through four years and will be open to children of VA employees and other federal workers in the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti area.

Susie Siegel will serve as director of the center.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF the opening date and appointment of Ms. Siegel as director came nine months after a group of 40 VA employees first raised the idea of a work site child care facility.

"The Ann Arbor VA Medical Center is among the first VA medical centers in the country to work with employees to establish child care services," said Al Zamberlan, medical center director.

"I believe the Corner Cottage will play a very positive role in the recruitment and retention of VA employees who otherwise might not be able to work while their children are young.

"In this way, the child care center also will contribute to better patient care. Knowing your child is receiving excellent care at the Corner Cottage, which is located right on the grounds of the VA, will be very reassuring to patients," he said.

MS. SIEGEL, an Ann Arbor resident since 1975, was one of the founders of the Forest Hills Child Care Center and served as its director from 1976-78.

She is a graduate of Clark University in Worcester, Mass., with a bachelor's degree in psychology and a minor in early childhood development.

She now is working for the Corner Cottage Child Care Center Inc., a non-profit organization incorporated on Oct. 1 by three VA employees to operate the child care center.

The official incorporators were Meredith Eiker, administrative assistant to the VA chief of medicine, Julie Connors, a personnel specialist, and David Jewel, a management analyst.

They now are in the process of working with an employee task force to form a nine-member board of directors, six of whom will be parent-users.

SUSIE SIEGEL

"It has been a wonderful experience to be involved with the establishment of the Corner Cottage and to see the enthusiasm generated among all of the VA employees, many of whom are not even parents of young children," said Ms. Eiker.

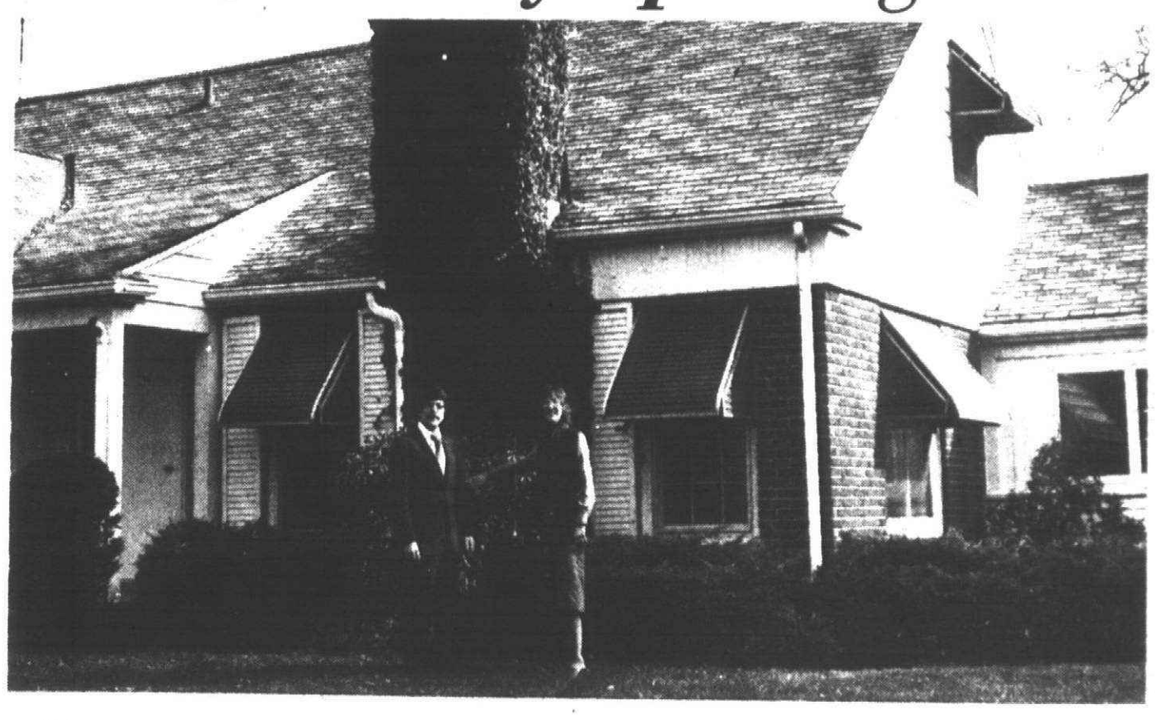

"The volunteers from the veterans service organizations also have been supporting us every inch of the way," she added.

The Corner Cottage received its name through an employee contest which generated 200 entries, said Ms. Eiker.

In September VA employees held a rummage sale and in October they held a chili dinner to raise funds for renovations and painting of the 4½-room cottage which is being leased from the VA.

"As is the case with most fledgling child care centers, monetary support will be required during the first few months of operation," said Ms. Eiker. "We would welcome donations of cribs, toys and other equipment."

More information about the center may be obtained by calling Ms. Siegel at 769-7100, ext. 718.

TRAVEL LOG of Iris Jones

To be or not to be, the weather decides

Bob Helwig and his staff at the Upper Peninsula Travel and Recreation Association hoped to be able to tell you that the ski runs would be open for Thanksgiving, but old man winter didn't cooperate.

Some parts of the Upper Peninsula had collected 10 inches of snow in early November, but most of it was not concentrated in the ski resort areas. What there was has been melted and was lost by mild weather.

Mount Ripley in Houghton and Pine Mountain in Iron Mountain have announced that they expect to open Dec. 1. Ski Ruble in Iron River has had the most snow-luck, and is most likely to be the first slope in use.

There had not as yet been any word from Indianhead in Wakefield when we called. Hang on to your skis. Winter is coming, but you may not be able to slide on snow just yet.

A COMPANY ONCE known as Europe on Skis has changed its name to Steve Lohr's Skiworld, and is reorganized to offer custom ski vacations to travelers.

Lohr offers a Ski Holiday Kit containing dozens of suggestions for every major ski area in the world. The traveler will be invited to write or call Lohr and talk abut the kind of ski trip desired. Lohr's Skiworld will then recommend a specific trip.

If anybody has tried this service, let me know. Skiworld's address is 3 East 54th St., New York, New York, 10022.

Two ancient Egyptian monuments go public in 1980

By IRIS SANDERSON JONES

During a recent trip to Egypt, I visited the restoration sites of two ancient Egyptian monuments that will be open to the public in 1980.

The temples at Philae, which have been under water since the first Aswan Dam was built in 1902, have been moved to higher ground near the city of Aswan.

The 5,000-year-old Cheops Funeral Barge, unearthed during an archaeological dig in 1954, has been painstakingly rebuilt and will be shown in a museum setting next to the Great Pyramid of Giza.

Philae is an islet at the end of the Nile cataracts, 600 miles south of Cairo in Upper Egypt. It has been the site of holy temples since the 26th dynasty, in the sixth century B.C., including the Temple of Isis, Hathor Temple, Hadrian's Pylon, Horendotes Temple, the Temple of Augustus and the Kiosk of Trajan.

THE ISLAND, once fringed with palm trees, was a popular religious resort for Egyptians, Ethiopians and others who traveled to Aswan, the crossroads and ancient marketplace of Europe. The sands of centuries eventually buried many of the monuments, which were unearthed during archaeological digs in the late 19th century.

The famous walls were flooded when the first Aswan Dam, now known as the British Dam, was built in 1902. For decades, the top of the Temple of Isis has been visible only from July to October.

The raising of the temples began after the successful raising of the gigantic temple figures at Abu Simbel, which would have been similarly lost under the waters of Lake Nasser after the new Aswan Dam was built.

All of that is historical information, but the real experience of visiting a monument of this kind is in the people who surround it.

As we went down the stone steps to the boat which waited on the Nile beside the old British Dam, a frieze of Egyptians shaped the stone slope with color. A black man from Nubia, to the south, leaned his foot on an oil barrel at the top of the stone slope. Nubia was so completely flooded by the new dam that most of its residents have been moved to Aswan.

A tiny child in a striped robe and a multicolored cap marked the first landing. An old man, black face between a stark white galabia robe and an equally white sunhat, did a cheerful jig at the bottom of the slope.

A young man and a small child, both in cotton robes and cap, sailed us across the narrow strip of water towards Philae. From a distance, the ancient pillars made dark shapes against the brilliant desert sky. Close up, they were a feast of hieroglyphics on stone.

The construction crews were still working with scaffolds and ladders when we were there. A man rested in a patch of shade. Two men posed for the camera. A young student explained that he was learning Egyptology at a school and on the job.

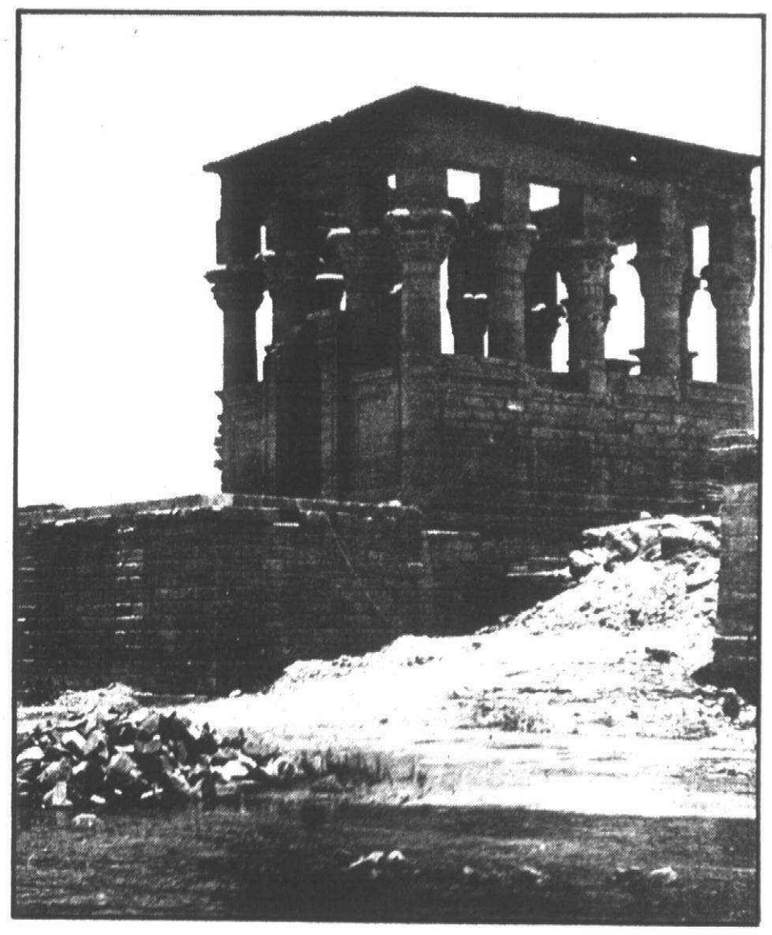

Many experts believe that the Rosetta Stone, which allowed the western world to decipher the hieroglyphics of ancient Egypt, would never have been deciphered without a relic from Philae, now resident in the Louvre in Paris.

SIX HUNDRED miles downriver, where the narrow stem of the Upper Nile meets the delta at Cairo, these same waters once carried Cheops funeral barge to the now-inland city of Giza. A canal once joined Giza with the Nile.

The Great Pyramid, the largest of the pyramids at Giza, was built by the Egyptian king Cheops 5,000 years ago. Although little is really known about how it was built, more than 100,000 workers are believed to have labored for 20 years building it.

The original limestone covering of the pyramid has long since been removed, leaving only the rough-cut stones open to the air.

Cheops was buried here 50 centuries ago. His body was carried in procession down the canal from the Nile to Giza, and up the slope to the pyramid on a wooden barge 45 meters, or 49.2 yards, long.

The temple at Philae is set on the banks of an islet at the end of the Nile cataracts, awaiting what the 1980s and the more distant future may bring. (Photo by Iris Sanderson Jones)

THE REMAINS OF the barge, in remarkably good condition after 5,000 years, was found during a dig near the pyramids in 1954. It was buried in seven layers. Five thousand meters, or 5,468 yards, of rope tied the pieces of the barge together in ancient times.

The museum was still under construction when I visited it in the building where the barge will be displayed, adjacent to Cheops' pyramid. A small model of the barge, and the great stones which buried it, are on display on the ground floor.

Nassef Mohammed Hassen, the manager of antiquities for Giza, led us to the high space where the renovated barge is now suspended under a glass roof.

"The father of Cheops is known to have sent 40 boatloads of goods to Lebanon, and to have brought back cedars from Lebanon," Hassen said. "Some of those cedars may have been used to build this barge."

Hassen and his crew have spent five years carefully restoring this priceless antique. The wood was treated, the parts registered and photographed. What we saw when we climbed the stairs was a huge, graceful wooden boat floating in air.

It took 24 seamen to propel this craft, two to each of the oars projecting fom its sides.

A new permanent museum will be built to house the barge within 10 years.

Skiers, snowmobilers can take the snowtrain

Gov. William G. Milliken announced that the state of Michigan will assist in testing a snow train for skiers and snowmobilers between Cadillac and southeast Michigan in January.

Milliken said that state gencies will help organize an Owosso-Cadillac round-trip passenger excursion train on the weekend of Jan. 4-6, to test the feasibility of reviving this once-popular rail service for northbound tourists.

The January rail excursion to Cadillac will be promoted as the Michigan Snow Train and will feature a weekend of entertainment, including a band.

Cadillac Winter Promotions, Inc., a non-profit organization formed by Cadillac area business leaders, will be the official sponsors of the event, with assistance from the Michigan Travel Bureau, the Michigan Office of the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission, the Michigan Bureau of Urban and Public Transportation, the Cadillac Chamber of Commerce and others.

FIVE PASSENGER coaches, a club car and a flat car to carry snowmobiles have been secured by Michigan Interstate Railway Co., the former Ann Arbor Railroad, which will operate the train.

Ridership will be limited to the first 340 persons who buy round-trip tickets.

A package plan includes the round-trip train ride, all ski lift and snowmobile trail fees for the weekend, a Friday night fish fry, lodging fo two nights, a Saturday morning lumberjack breakfast and lunch and other special events. The price is $189 a person.

Transportation to Caberfae ski area also will be included. A number of snowmobile trail rides and a 50-mile Snofari have been planned for the weekend.

Milliken said that if this trip is successful, especially revenue-wise, other similar ventures will be organized in other parts of the state aimed at both train buffs and recreation enthusiasts.

The train is scheduled to depart Owosso at 1 p.m. Friday, Jan. 4, and return by 9:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 6. Owosso is northeast of Lansing and just southwest of Flint.

Am Air skiing tours

Now that it has new routes into some of the prime ski regions of the U.S., American Airlines has developed a selection of ski tours.

This season's tours range from three to seven days and cost from $88 to $453, based on double occupancy and excluding air fare. The tours are in effect through April 30.

In Utah, accommodations are available at Salt Lake City and four nearby areas: Park City, Park West, Alta, and Snowbird. On the Nevada/California border, accommodations are at Heavenly Valley, Squaw Valley, and Kirkwood. In New Mexico, Taos skiers can stay either in the ski valley itself or in the picturesque community of Taos.

At Colorado's Aspen and Utah's Sun Valley, the varied accommodations cluster around the bases of the mountains.

LOUISE SNIDER

Basketball theme hides poor images in 'family film'

There was a time when a family film meant quality entertainment. "Robin Hood," "National Velvet," "Scaramouche" pleased large and diverse audiences.

These films offered adventure, laughs, bright spirits and even moral principles. The protagonists put others before self, struggled against adversity or fought injustice.

Family films are still being made but they seem to have fallen on hard times. "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh" (PG) demonstrates the extent of that fall.

On the surface, it's a cheery film appealing to juvenile and family audiences. It has the neon look of a merchandiser's concoction of basketball, disco music and lame comedy, strung together by a predominantly black cast that includes several pro-basketball stars (Julius Erving, Meadowlark Lemon, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and others).

Presumably, it is rated PG instead of G because it panders to viewers with a few locker-room expletives and some bumps and grinds from a pair of hookers in the basketball audience.

THE STORY IS about a million-dollar bonus baby, Moses Guthrie (Julius Erving), who hits a severe slump along with the rest of his teammates. Their 12-year-old water carrier, Tyrone (James Bond III), appeals to an astrologer (Stockard Channing) for help, and she helps them all the way to the NBA playoffs.

There are scores of films worse than this, but they don't masquerade as anything decent. That, ultimately, is what is so objectionable about "The Fish."

At least the audiences who attend vile horror films or mindless karate films get just what they pay for and expect to see. "The Fish . . . ," on the other hand, is insidious. It appears harmless and inconsequential. In reality, it is an insult to all audiences and to blacks particularly.

Consider some of the implications and object lessons to be learned from it. When the old team walks out because of the bonus baby's poor performance, tryouts are held for new players, and they are selected according to their astrological sign.

They must all be Pisces, because Moses is a Pisces and works best with other fish around him. Naturally, the new team is a sensation that slam-dunks its way into the championship playoffs.

THE MORAL IS that you can forget about hard work, practice, skill, cooperation. Your performance and success depend upon the stars. Not the ones on the court, but the ones in the sky. In fairness, there is one occasion when the team rallies because of pride. Still, it was the stars that got them to the playoffs.

What does this say about personal effort, and what kind of model does the film's adult lead provide? Well, Moses wheels around town in a Rolls convertible, for one thing. Wonderful message there.

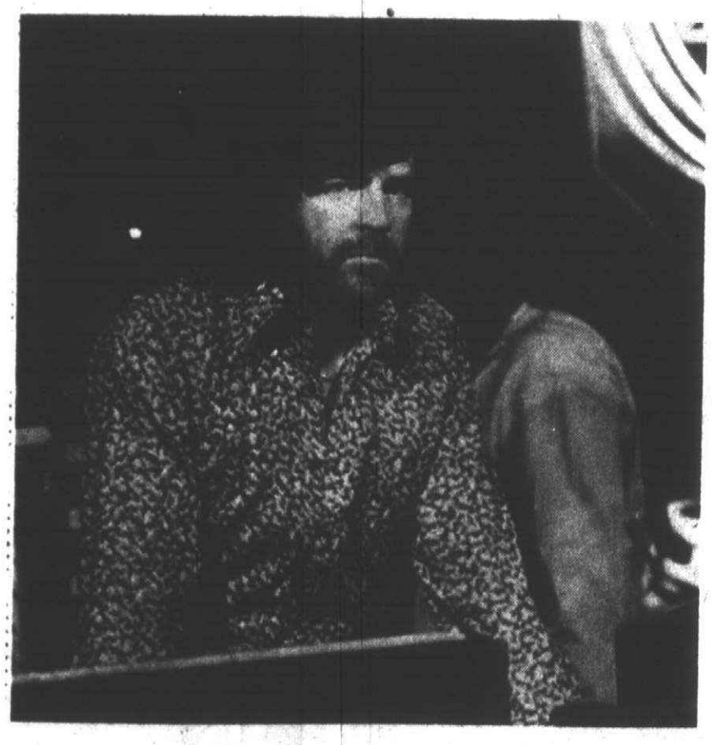

Young black males don't have to be pimps to get out of the ghetto. All they have to do is grow seven-feet-two-inches tall, have excellent coordination and terrific peripheral vision.

Values like these make "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh" a classic example of its kind. Not a family film, but a commercial product packaged by financially fixated, intellectually inert, morally stunted moviemakers.

Remembering The Rose

Bette Midler stars as The Rose, a hard-rock superstar of the late 1960s, in Twentieth Century-Fox's "The Rose." The character is a composite of many female singers of that era. Alan Bates (below) co-stars as Rudge, her hard-driving manager.

Q&E

The Warming Oven

by Emily Watson

Ed Zuckerman was home for Thanksgiving with his parents, Louis and Rochelle Zuckerman of Farmington Hills. Ed is a contributing editor to Rolling Stone magazine but he also is president of Killer Bee Honey Corp. in Cambridge, Mass. The business venture grew out of a writing assignment so the two are not exactly unrelated.

Ed's company is marketing South American killer bee honey in the United States. He believes a jar of the honey — at less than $5 — is the perfect gift for person on your Christmas list who has everything. He told us all about it at lunch the day before Thanksgiving.

Concern that the notorious killer bees were spreading and heading for United States via Latin America and Mexico prompted Ed's assignment to French Guiana. He interviewed some American entomologists who were in South America studying the killer bee situation.

As he was having tea with one of the biologists and his wife, Ed dipped some honey into his brew and asked, "Is this from the killer bees?" It was.

The African bees which were brought to Brazil in 1956 by a scientist escaped from his research station Breeding with the European-type honey bees of the area, the feisty, easy-to-rile temperament of the African bees soon became predominant.

Ed says a single sting isn't any more dangerous than that of your ordinary honey bee, unless a person is allergic to bee stings. But the Africanized bees operate as a mob. If one gets excited, they all get "worked up" and a hundred or more stings can be fatal to animals as well as humans. So the term "killer bee" evolved.

Their honey is dark and has a fruity flavor. Ed says the slight coffee taste could be from the coffee blooms where they gather their nectar. It's easy to imagine all kinds of exotic jungle flowers visited by the bees when you savor the thick honey.

I asked Ed where one could buy the killer bee honey in our area. He said Hudson's has it on order and should have it very soon; in Birmingham it is at Quarton's market and Continental Gourmet; in Southfield, Healthy Jones has it; and in Plymouth, the Wine and Cheese Barn is expecting delivery this week.

FOR ALL THOSE SPECIAL friends and neighbors whom you want to remember at Christmas with very special gifts, a day in your kitchen and a visit to the dime store may solve all your problems.

An apothecary jar filled with your own Roquefort dressing, teamed with a bottle of celery vinegar will please any salad-loving friend. Put both in a plastic bowl suitable for salad washing or even serving. Tie them up in a checkered dish towel. Just add a sprig of holly and they're ready for Christmas giving.

Your list should include red, green and gold foil for wrapping cookies, individual fruit cakes and jars of Christmas marmalade or mincemeat. Add a few clear plastic boxes, some small candy canes and ribbon and you're in business.

Now to the kitchen.

CELERY VINEGAR

Add two-thirds cup minced fresh celery leaves and one small grated onion to one pint cider vinegar. Let stand for two or three weeks, then strain through a fine sieve.

For gift giving, pour into fancy wine or liqueur bottle.

ROQUEFORT MAYONNAISE

1 pint mayonnaise
8 tbsp. chili sauce
2 tbsp. crumbled Roquefort or blue cheese
¼ tsp. tarragon

INDIVIDUAL FRUIT CAKES

1 lb. walnuts
1 lb. pitted dates
¾ lb. candied cherries
1 lb. candied pineapple, diced
¾ cup all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
3 eggs, well beaten
½ tsp. almond extract

Combine all the nuts and fruit in a large bowl. Only the pineapple is diced; the nuts and other fruit are left whole. Sift the flour with the salt, baking powder and sugar. Mix thoroughly using hands, so that all the fruit and nuts are well-coated with the flour. Mix the beaten eggs with the almond extract and fold into the fruit mixture. Blend well.

Pack in foil baking cups, filling them well. Bake in 300-degree oven for 40 minutes. Yields about 30 small cakes.

NOTE: These can be made well in advance. They keep well in a cool place or they can be frozen and kept for two or three months. Wrapped in foil and tied to the Christmas tree, the little fruit cakes are ready gifts for holiday guests.

Say "Good morning" with nutritious breakfast dishes (clockwise from top right): corned beef hash and egg bake, pockets full of fruit, biscuit bonus, "Good morning" rolls and lemon cheese Danish.

Fast break breakfasts

The morning meal is enjoying a renaissance as we discover the nutritious importance, as well as the sheer pleasure, that comes with a serene family breakfast. Even if breakfast has turned into a morning rush hour, a little night-before preparation will get everyone off to a good start in no time.

Homemade biscuits, rolls and sweet rolls are a breakfast tradition. But today's time schedules call for shortcuts. Ready-to-bake biscuits and rolls are the smart, quick, easy way to achieve home-baked flavor without the time of baking from scratch.

For a quick, satisfying breakfast, serve hot-from-the-oven biscuits that take only minutes to bake, with a choice of nutritious spreads that you have made the night before.

For a fast start in the morning, make pocket breads the night before. To serve, fill with fresh fruit and yogurt. You'll have a well-balanced breakfast that is especially appealing to teenagers.

When there's more time, try savory corned beef hash and egg "pie" with a biscuit border which takes only minutes to assemble. A lemon cheese braid, made with refrigerated crescent roll dough, may become a specialty of the house for weekend brunches. It makes a fabulous hotbread which looks and tastes as if it were made by a professional.

Lamb shishkebob for a taste treat

The truth is, after one or two meals of leftover turkey, my taste buds start marching and picketing, demanding equal representation for some other flavor — something lively to rev them up again.

But, I argue, turkey is tasty and low-calorie. Eating the leftovers is as traditional as serving it for the holiday dinner. Why, Ben Franklin wanted to make turkey our national bird; it's almost patriotic to eat the leftovers.

Yeah, we know all that, the little devils shoot back, but we're ODing on it.

Leftovers sap my fighting strenth so I'm easily lead down a meat counter path in search of a more exotic entree. His timing right on the mark, the butcher was busy piling frozen imported legs of lamb into the meat bin. At $1.69 a pound yet.

Another woman shopper at the meat counter described her method for roast lamb; I mentioned shishkebob. Each of us left with two legs of lamb in our baskets and two menus in our heads.

For the shishkebob, it was necessary to trim, bone and cut up the meat. The butcher will usually do the carving for you, but if you don't have time to wait in the store, here's how:

Grasp the leg firmly by the shank (ankle), brace it against a cutting board or counter-top, and slice downward alongside the bone using a sharp knife, cutting the meat away from the bone.

CUT THE MEAT into one-inch cubes or a size to fit your skewers easily. The fat can be removed with a small, sharp knife, or some of it even just by pulling it away with the fingers.

When I made this a few days ago, we were quite hungry and figured one-half pound of meat per adult. That's after boning. It's also a heavy meal. Probably one-third pound would be enough, less for children.

Rice is my favorite go-with for shishkebob. Cook according to package directions, dissolving a beef bouillion cube in the water before adding the rice. Or, substitute homemade or canned beef bouillion for the water. Canned bouillion has a stronger flavor and may need to be diluted, depending on your taste. This works equally well with minute-type rice.

Before serving, toss the rice with ¼ cup pine nuts and ¼ teaspoon dried parsley for each two cups of cooked rice.

MANY SHISHKEBOB recipes put tomatoes, green pepper and onion on the skewer with the meat They can go on a separate skewer and go into the oven or on the grill later.

Sometimes, instead of cooking the vegetables, I cut them into a bowl with cucumbers, maybe a little feta cheese and black olives and dress lightly with oil and vinegar. To vary this menu, an excellent flavor combination, also Greek, is baked tomatoes stuffed with rice.

Whatever you choose to serve with it, lamb shishkebob is a delightful change of flavor, likely to perk up taste buds knocked out by holiday feasting.

LAMB SHISHKEBOB

1½ lbs. leg of lamb, shank half
3 tbs. oil
1 tbs. vinegar
2 tbs. lemon juice
2 or 3 grindings pepper
Salt to taste
⅛ tsp. each of basil, tarragon, oregano, and parsley
1 small onion, sliced and separated into rings

Put all ingredients into a bowl. Toss to coat the meat with the marinade. Let stand for a minimum of three hours. Can be left to marinate in refrigerator overnight. Stir occasionally.

Thread on skewers and broil until done to your taste.

BAKED TOMATOES STUFFED WITH RICE

1¼ cups water
½ cup uncooked long or medium grain rice
6 firm ripe tomatoes, each about 3 inches in diameter
2 tsp. salt
6 tsp. olive oil
½ cup finely chopped onions
¾ cup canned tomato puree
½ cup finely chopped parsley
2 tbsp. finely cut fresh mint, or 1 tbsp. dried mint
2 tsp. finely chopped garlic
¼ tsp. oregano, crumbled
Freshly ground black pepper

Boil water and add rice. Cook for 8 minutes, then drain and set aside.

Cut ¼ inch slice off stem ends of tomatoes and set aside. With a spoon, remove pulp from tomatoes and discard seeds. Chop pulp and set aside. Sprinkle tomato cavities with 1 teaspoon of the salt and drain upside down on paper towels.

Pre-heat oven to 350-degrees. Make stuffing: over moderate heat, cook onions in a skillet for 5 minutes, or until transparent and soft but not brown. Stir in the rice, tomatoe pulp, ½ cup of the tomato puree, the parsley, mint, garlic, oregano, remaining salt and a few grindings of pepper. Cook briskly until most of the liquid evaporates and the mixture is thick enough to hold its shape almost solidly in the spoon.

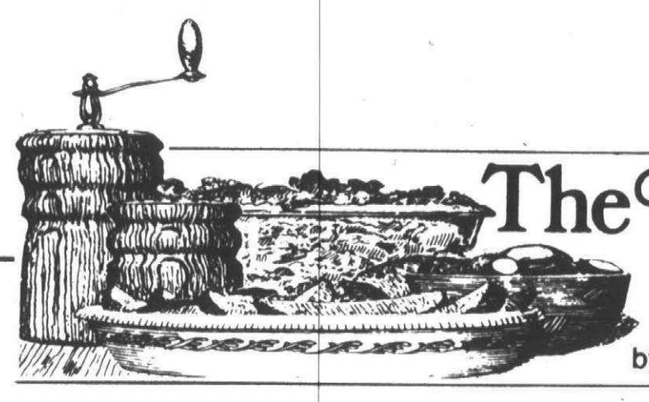

Arrange the tomatoes in a baking dish large enough to hold them side by side. Fill with the stuffing, packing it in firmly, and cover each tomato with its reserved top. Combine the remaining ¼ cup of water and pour the mixture around the tomatoes. Bake uncovered in the middle of the oven for 20 minutes, basting once or twice with the cooking liquid. Cool to room temperature and serve directly from the baking dish.

Brunch—palate pleaser for family and entertaining

There is no mystery involved in determining from whence the word brunch was derived.

By combining the first two letters in BReakfast with the last four letters in lUNCH, one is able to indulge in a most memorable treat.

At no time are one's eating tastes more definite than early in the day at breakfast. And lunch, for many, is a hurried, grab-on-the-fly affair.

So, when time permits, it stands to reason that the ideal method is to combine the two meals some time between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. and serve a brunch.

Sonday entertaining at a brunch has become increasingly popular in recent years. In many homes a pleasant, leisurely late breakfast is a most relaxing and much looked forward to weekly function.

When guests are invited, entertaining is accomplished with a minimum of effort. The hour contributes to the free and easy atmosphere since family and guests are in no rush to return to the office and no one is clock watching because the hour is late.

ANOTHER PLUS is that the time of day does not dictate that several courses of food be served and guests do not expect it.

However, there are no hard and fast rules regarding brunch. If you wish to fuss, there area few types of food that are inappropriate for a brunch.

If you are entertaining a large group, you will find buffet style service ideal. Make the meal as simple or as elegant as you wish.

Some prefer a simple and hearty meal of fruit or juice, eggs, rolls and cups of steaming, freshly perked coffee.

Others opt for a more lavish type of fare for their first meal of the day. Assorted fresh fruits in season, a mixture of smoked and cured fish, eggs with chicken livers and onions, hot pecan rolls and delicious cups of Cappuccino Caffe are excellent choices for those preferring a sumptuous repast for their combined breakfast-lunch.

There is one feature of a brunch which clearly distinguishes it from early morning breakfasts. . . . . alcoholic beverages, Screwdrivers, Bloody Marys, wines and, of course, champagne, are all excellent accompaniments.

Listed below you will find a menu and recipes for a lovely brunch which leans toward the elaborate. Use a few or all of the recipes to make it as simple or fancy as your taste dictates.

SUNDAY BRUNCH FOR EIGHT

Oranges, grapefruit and banana slices (sprinkled with confectioners sugar)
Assorted smoked and cured fish
Eggs with liver and onions
Cheese blintzes with sour cream
Farmers chop suey
Assorted rolls, bagels and black bread or pecan rolls
Jams, jellies, marmalades and cream cheese
Cappuccino caffe (or coffee, tea or hot chocolate)

ORANGES, GRAPEFRUIT AND BANANA SLICES

Peel 6 oranges and slice thin. Arrange on doily-lined platter. Repeat procedure with 3 or 4 grapefruit. Peel 5 firm bananas; run fork tines from top to bottom of bananas and slice thin. Arrange with other fruit. Dust with confectioners sugar and sprinkle with nutmeg and cinnamon (optional).

ASSORTED SMOKED AND CURED FISH

Three-quarter lb. smoked salmon (either Belly or Nova), ¾ lb. smoked sturgeon, (thinly sliced), 2 whole smoked whitefish, 4 small chubs. Fish may be purchased at fish store or fish department of most markets.

Arrange smoked salmon slices and sturgeon slices on leaf lettuce lined platter. Carefully remove tough layer of outer skin from smoked white fish. Cut into small wedges and arrange on the platter. Remove heads, skin and tails from chubs and discard. Cut into small wedges and add to platter of fish.

EGGS WITH CHICKEN LIVERS AND ONIONS

Rinse ½ lb. chicken livers in cool water; drain on paper toweling and cut each liver in half. Saute 1 large onion, thinly sliced, in 1 tbsp. butter until transparent, over low heat. Add livers and another tbsp. butter and saute until livers are brown on outside; set aside. Beat 14 eggs with 2 tbsp. milk, 2 tbsp. water, 1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. pepper and 1 tbsp. minced parsley flakes. Add 4 tbsp. butter to pan with liver and onions over low heat. Add eggs and increase heat to medium. Scrape bottom of pan with spatula until large curds appear. Do not overcook.

CHEESE BLINTZES

Sift 1 cup flour and 1 tsp. salt together. Combine 4 well beaten eggs, 1 cup milk and 2 tbsp. melted butter; gradually add to dry ingredients beating until smooth with wire whisk. Heat heavy fry pan (6-in. size) and brush lightly with butter or margarine. Pour approximately 3 tbsp. batter or just enough to make a very thing pancake, tipping pan until batter covers the pan bottom completely. Fry on one side only until it blisters. Stack, fried side up, until all have been fried.

Put 1 lb. dry cottage cheese through strainer or colander. Blend in 4 egg yolks, ½ tsp. cinnamon, 1½ to 2 tbsp. sugar and ¼ tsp. vanilla. Place a generous tsp. of filling in center of each pancake on fried side. Fold up sides, envelope fashion. Before serving, fry in butter or margarine, until browned on all sides. Serve with a dollop of sour cream for each blintzes.

NOTE: when making large quantities, it is a good idea to bake instead of frying prior to serving. Place in greased baking dish, dot with butter and bake in 350 degree oven for 30-40 minutes or until browned.

FARMERS CHOP SUEY

Empty contents of 1-lb. carton creamed cottage cheese into decorative glass bowl. Thinly slice and halve 10-12 large radishes, chop 6 green onions (green included), and dice ¾ medium cucumber; add to cottage cheese. Salt and pepper to taste and add 6 oz. sour cream mixing and blending salad thoroughly. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until serving time. Sprinkle surface with paprika before serving.

ASSORTED ROLLS, BAGELS, BLACK BREAD OR PECAN ROLLS AND BUTTER

All the above carbohydrate-laden goodies may be purchased at a bakery or market. However, for readers who wish to prepare at least one of the goodies in their own kitchens, see recipe below.

PECAN ROLLS
(Makes 18)

2 cops sifted flour
3 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¾ cup milk
4 tbsp. shortening
3 tsp. melted butter or margarine
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
½ cup raisins
1½ tsp. cinnamon

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening and add milk; stir only until dough holds together and is smooth. Knead on slightly floured board for a minute and roll out to ¼-inch thickness. Brush with melted butter. Sprinkle surface with brown sugar, raisins and cinnamon. Roll jelly-roll fashion and cut into 1-in. slices.

Grease muffin pans and make a mixture of the following: 4 tbsp. butter or margarine, 8 tbsp. brown sugar and cream well. Evenly distribute mixture into bottom of each muffin container. Place 3 pecan halves into each muffin container. Place 1 slice pecan roll, cut side down, into muffin pans. Bake 20 minutes in 425 degree oven.

CAPPUCCINO CAFFE

Pour 4 cups hot half and half and 4 cups hot freshly brewed espresso (or double strength coffee) into coffee pot or kettle. Keep hot until needed. Fill cappuccino or demitasse cups (4 oz. size) with beverage. Sprinkle lightly with a pinch of nutmeg and cinnamon. Serve immediately after pouring. This amount makes 16 4-oz. servings.

Tips on buying fresh fish

Freshness in whole fish, no matter what the variety, can best be determined by looking square into the fish's eyes and at the gills.

If the fish is fresh, the eyes will be bright, clear and bulging.

Pass by any fish whose eyes are sunken in the sockets or which have a thick, opaque milky color.

The gills of a fresh fish, when lifted open, should reveal a clear, bright red, bloody mass — much like a fresh chicken liver. If the mass is dried and brownish in color, the fish is not fresh.

If you still are in doubt, sniff the open gill because it should have a mild briny seat-breeze smell.

Traces of acrid fishiness indicate it is past its prime. Neither the fish, nor the market itself, should have that unpleasant pungent odor.

THE SKIN AND SCALES of a fresh fish will be smooth and shiny.

If the skin and scales are slimy, the fish has been out of water for too long. If the skin is slack, the fish quite likely has been frozen.

In any case, the fish should feel firm, and there should be no impression left when you press down on it with your thumb or forefinger.

If the fish is whole and the head has been cut off, beware. In fact, many markets sell some fish already cut into fillets or chunks, or sliced into steaks, making it impossible to judge freshness by the eye or gill test.

You can still tell though. If the slice looks almost cooked, with lackluster, very white and opaque flesh which is separating into coarse-grained segments, pass it by.

Home-baked bread and accessories are ideal gifts

In America, "breaking bread" has always been a sign of friendship and love. Today bread baking is enjoying a tremendous revival, and it ranks high as a gift-giving idea.

This season make bread gifts extra special by complimenting the home-baked goods with useful kitchen items, such as attractive and functional food containers and utensils.

They call the giver to mind all year through.

Quick breads are true to their name — quick to prepare yet tasty and perfect for snacking. Give a nut bread tied with a festive ribbon on a handsome cutting board. Add orange marmalade or strawberry preserves in a modern glass jar.

Surround a soda bread with flavored tea bags on a small but colorful serving tray.

SOME SAY no flavor can compare with a freshly baked loaf of bread. If you set aside a leisure day for yeast bread making, there's no end to the variety of gifts you can plan.

To enhance a homemade collection of white, whole wheat and rye breads, what could be more appropriate than an old-fashioned breadbox? Loaves of all sizes and shapes can be tucked behind a roll-top lid of hewn wood.

Placed on a counter top, a breadbox is a charming way to keep breads conveniently.

Whip up a cheese spread of shredded cheddar and Swiss seasoned with thyme or dill and pack it in a lidded crock to accompany your breadbox full of luscious loaves.

Straw baskets make handy, contemporary totes for small baked goods such as muffins or biscuits. Line the woven container with a fringed, cloth napkin. If the ends are long enough, draw them together over the muffins and secure with a bow.

Another way to transport your gift is in a wrought-iron muffin pan heartily filled with berry muffins. Or provide coffee mugs brimming with homemade doughnut holes or bread rolls.

To start you off on your gift-giving venture, here are two recipes.

ORANGE MARMALADE NUT BREAD

½ cup margarine
½ cup packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1-10-oz. jar orange marmalade
2¾ cups flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. baking soda
½ cup unsweetened orange juice
½ cup chopped nuts

Cream margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Blend in marmalade. Add combined dry ingredients alternately with orange juice, mixing well after each addition. Stir in nuts. Spoon into greased 9x5-inch loaf pan. Bake at 325-degrees for one hour and 20 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 15 minutes; remove from pan.

JAZZBERRY MUFFINS

2¼ cups flour
⅓ cup sugar
1 tbsp. baking powder
¾ tsp. salt
¾ cup milk
⅓ cup oil
2 eggs
⅓ cup strawberry preserves

Combine dry ingredients. Add combined milk, oil and eggs, mixing just until moistened. Spoon into greased medium-sized muffin pan, filling each cup ½ full. Dot generously with preserves; top with remaining batter. Bake at 400-degrees for 20 to 25 minutes.

Make your own eggnog

During the holidays, serve family and guests eggnog, the traditional holiday drink, or Orange Milk Punch. Any fruits, including blueberries and strawberries available in the frozen foods section of your super market, can be added to the basic eggnog recipe for a different taste treat.

Make eggnog by beating six eggs until thick. Add two cups each of milk and cream, two-thirds cup sugar, two tablespoons vanilla extract, and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Add one cup brandy or dark rum (optional). Mix until well blended. Top with freshly grated nutmeg. Makes 12 servings.

To make Orange Milk Punch, combine one quart softened vanilla ice cream and two pints orange sherbet. Add one 16-ounce bottle carbonated lime drink, one quart milk, and blend. Serve in punch bowl garnished with maraschino cherries if desired. Makes 24 one-cup servings.

Food for them

A nationwide study has concluded that nearly one-half of the children ages 6 to 14 fix their own breakfast at least twice a week.

Cheese whiz!

The biggest block of cheese ever made was a 17-ton cheddar produced by Wisconsin cheese makers and displayed at the 1964 New York World's Fair. It used 170,000 quarts of milk — 43 years' worth from the average cow National Geographic World magazine says.

Water rubberland

Four of the five Great Lakes lap at Michigan's two large peninsulas and several islands. The state's total shoreline would stretch more than 3,000 miles, twice the distance from Maine to the tip of Florida, points out National Geographic.

Silver Bullet guitarist forms video tape firm

Bass guitarist Chris Campbell of rock singer Bob Seger's Silver Bullet Band may have found the key to a profitable sideline career in the business world.

In a play on their own names, Campbell and wife Christine have founded a firm called C-Squared in Campbell's native Plymouth.

Numerous ventures may be considered for operation with C-Squared as the parent company, said Campbell, and the first of them already formed as a subsidiary is Video Service Co.

VIDEO SERVICE at 763 Wing, Plymouth, is under the management of Campbell's brother, Denny — a veteran of 13 years as a manufacturer's representative in the automotive sales field in metropolitan Detroit.

The firm's specialty is filming and producing video tape cassettes showing detailed inventories of the possessions in private homes, apartments, cottages or business establishments for use in the event of fire, vandalism or burglary.

Offshoots of this original purpose have burgeoned to include cassettes portraying training procedures in technical fields, sales meeting talks, homes for sale, construction progress, depositions for attorneys, statements on campaign issues by political candidates, and even entertainers performing for an audition.

"We are portable. We go where we are needed for visual documentation," said Denny Campbell. "The video camera and resultant cassette provides a concept that's impossible to gain with flat photographs.

"In time we intend to be a national company. We sincerely feel we can be of service to people."

BACKER CHRIS Campbell's attitude is summed up in his comment, "I think it's a real winner."

The guitarist, 31, has been a member of Ann Arborite Seger's backup group for 10 years — getting his start in music in the Plymouth school system where he started out on drums as a third grader.

He began playing semi-professionally at age 13, turned to guitar after graduation, and played with the Toby Wesselfox band before joining the group known as the Bob Seger System in 1969.

The name Silver Bullet Band was adopted in 1972. After steadily increasing success in the midwest, the group's popularity has soared to a national scale in the last three years as the Bob Seger name has become a big drawing card in the entertainment world.

The albums "Live Bullet" and "Night Moves" both were what the trade calls "double platinum" hits, meaning each sold more than two million copies, while "Stranger in Town" was a "triple platinum" winner with sales topping the three million mark.

Seger and the Silver Bullets completed work on their newest album, "No Man's Land," for Capitol Records last month and its release is tentatively planned for early in 1980.

In the current respite between public engagements, Campbell is spending considerable more time helping his brother map Video Service's course and analyzing other business opportunities.

He and wife Christine, the former Christine Blagus who like Denny is a Plymouth High School graduate, also are deep into the collection and restoration of antique furniture as a hobby.

While music may be his first devotion, Chris seems not to be leaving anything to chance when it comes to future security.

JA recognizes Center manager

David Griffin, survey party chief for McNeely & Lincoln, recently was named center manager for Junior Achievement's Plymouth Center.

Griffin last year was a center manager of JA's Pontiac Center. The announcement of his transfer to Plymouth was made at a training luncheon held in Farmington.

DAVE GRIFFIN

When asked how he likes running a center full of high school students, Griffin said: "It's great! I really enjoy working with the students and the business advisers.

"I believe Junior Achievement can really help the student better understand how a small business really operates. JA could even help them get a job."

GRIFFIN WILL work with advisers from Ford Motors, Michigan Bell Telephone, National Association of Accountants, Western Electric and Burroughs Corporation at the Plymouth Center on Ann Arbor Trail.

"Dedicated individuals who give unselfishly of themselves and their time, as Dave Griffin has, positively influence the young adults by helping instill a sense of self-pride into each student participating in the JA program," said James Jones, public relations director of the Junior Achievement of Southeastern Michigan.

Vietnam vet beats blindness

John Todd not only practices law, but teaches political science and business law at Michigan Christian College.

By LETHA D. WILLIAMS

He built the shelves himself, which is not an unusual feat for a 33-year-old. Except Todd is legally blind.

While piloting a helicopter in tactical support for the infantry during 1969, Todd was hit in the face by a Viet Cong anti-aircraft shell. Ten years later, he passed the bar exam.

Todd and his wife, Joyce, graduated in May from Georgetown Law Center in Washington D.C. In June, they moved to Avon Township with their 4-year-old daughter, Lacey.

Todd is practicing law and teaching political science and business law at Avon Township's Michigan Christian College. Mrs. Todd is an assistant prosecutor at the Oakland County District Attorney's office in Pontiac.

Todd was in college when he was drafted and sent to Vietnam in 1968. He had only three goals in mind then: to be a captain stationed in Germany, to buy Jaguar an XKE, and to build chalets with his father.

But flying near the Cambodian border, he was wounded. He spent the next year in Maryland's Walter Reed Army Hospital.

For his work in Vietnam, Todd received the distinguished flying cross for valor, 17 combat air medals and the cross of gallantry with the bronze star. For his wound, he received the purple heart.

WHEN HE LEFT Walter Reed, Todd moved to New York City for treatment by an eye surgeon. The doctor restored enough of Todd's vision for him to distinguish shapes and colors.

While in New York, Todd heard a television anti-Vietnam War editorial.

"The anti-war movement was taking a new tact," Todd said. "They were depicting the vets as war criminals and drug addicts. I was terribly offended by that."

He contacted the television station and asked for and received reply time. A member of President Nixon's staff saw Todd's presentation.

"And I was asked by the President to speak on behalf of him on Vietnam," Todd said.

Todd supported Nixon's "Vietnamization" program.

"We had taken their war away from them," Todd said. "Vietnamization was simply a way to give them back their war if they wanted it."

He publically debated people like Gloria Steinam, Jerry Rubin and David Dillinger. And he won two Freedom Foundation awards for writing and speaking.

But he was not paid for his work with the Nixon administration.

"I DIDN'T get paid because I didn't want to be attacked for taking money from the Nixon administration," Todd said.

He did, however, author and lobby for a bill passed by the 95th Congress in 1978. It provides survivor benefits for families of permanently and totally disabled veterans.

During his work with the Nixon administration, Todd was invited to a state dinner honoring South Vietnamese President Thieu. Joyce Todd, who was working as a CIA analyst, was to meet Todd there.

"It was a blind date," Todd said. "No pun intended."

It was the first time Joyce Todd had been near someone who was a celebrity.

"And I was very impressed," she said, "by his voice and his sense of presence and command of the situation."

Two months later, the Todds were engaged. In another two months, they were married.

When Todd decided to attend law school, he encouraged his wife to attend with him.

"She was going to have to read for me," Todd said. "So I figured she might as well get credit for it."

While attending law school, Todd helped raise Lacey and continued his work on Capitol Hill. But he soon resigned because he said he felt himself being used to stimulate support for Nixon.

TODAY, TODD is excited about his new teaching career. He is especially thrilled about teaching an evening business law class during Michigan Christian College's winter semester.

"I think I do a good job with the course," he said. "I certainly love it. I love teaching."

He said despite seven plastic surgery operations and three cornea transplants that have still left him legally blind, he is happy with his life.

"I'm perfectly content with my wife and my life," Todd said, adding his second child is due in January.

His blindness does not keep him from teaching or practicing law or building a study in his basement.

"I'm just so lucky to be alive that the minor inconvenience of not being able to read doesn't bother me a bit," Todd said.

I am asthmatic and used to have to take six injections a week. I had to use the inhaler every day. I couldn't play hard. If I played hard, I would have an asthma attack and sometimes it would develop into pneumonia. Then I stopped taking the injections when I started going to Dr. Grassam and I never had an asthma attack. Now I can play hard and do anything I want and I don't get headaches as often. I wish I had not waited so long to go to Dr. Grassam.

Oakland's drain commission head pushes for control of water board

and TIM RICHARD

George Kuhn says he doesn't want to "build an empire." But the Oakland County drain commissioner would like to leave a monument.

The monument he has in mind is regional control of the water and sewerage department that serves some 100 southeastern Michigan communities. Since it was founded, the department has been under the total control of the city of Detroit. The board members and director are all appointees of the Detroit mayor.

Kuhn and his political friends in the suburbs have launched a petition drive to regionalize the water board on a one-person, one vote basis. Detroit would have three of the nine seats.

FOR MUCH of his political career, Kuhn has been at odds with Detroit, the city where he was born and grew up.

As mayor of Berkley in the early 1960s, he led a group of suburban mayors opposed to a city income tax on non-residents working in Detroit.

As a Republican state senator from 1967-70, he was at odds with leading Detroit black politicians over civil disturbance-related laws in response to the 1967 riot.

And as drain commissioner since 1972, the West Bloomfield resident has been a persitent critic of the Detroit sewer and water system management and rate hikes. He is aiming for a referendum on the November 1980 ballot.

Both critics and allies of George Kuhn on the Oakland County Board of Commissioners consider him a very adept politician.

KUHN, 54, was born in the Trumbull and Grand River area. His father, a doctor, was once president of the Detroit Board of Education.

Kuhn grew up in the Boston-Chicago Boulevard area. During the 1930s, it was "considered one of the nicer spots," he said. Now a historical district, the area has been referred to as the "Bloomfield Hills of the '30s."

His paper route customers along Boston Boulevard included such prominent names as the Fishers and Briggs.

In the 1940s, Kuhn's service in the Navy during World War II was sandwiched between college. He graduated from Central Michigan University in 1947 in business administration. His naval training as a fiscal officer included courses at Harvard.

The post-war years saw Kuhn join Ford Motor Co. management. From supervisor of manufacturing and assembly coordination at the Highland Park plant, he was promoted to the production development staff under Ford's then-vice president Robert S. McNamara, who was later company president and then secretary of defense under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. McNamara is president of the World Bank.

IN THE 1950s, Kuhn, a life-long Republican, was part of the beginning white exodus from Detroit for the northern and western suburbs. In Berkley, Kuhn began his political career.

After election to the Berkley city council in 1957, Kuhn was elected mayor in 1959 and served four terms.

He was chairman of the Vigilance Tax Committee of Michigan, a group of suburban mayors opposed to Detroit's proposed 1 percent income tax on non-residents working in the city. The tax was eventually implemented by then Gov. George Romney, but reduced to 0.5 percent of annual income.

Kuhn was elected to the state senate in 1966 from a district that included the lakes area of Oakland County and northwestern Wayne County.

As a member of a senate investigating committee after the 1967 riot, Kuhn said laws he proposed led him to be characterized by then-Sen. Coleman Young of Detroit and long-time Sen. Basil Brown of Highland Park as "lily white George Kuhn of suburbia trying to keep peace in the city."

Kuhn had proposed that assembly of people in Detroit be limited and the city have the right to call in the National Guard to quell any disturbance.

For the past five years, he and Oakland County Executive Daniel Murphy, also a Republican, have been at odds over the merger of the drain commission with the county's department of public works.

Both agree they should be merged. But Murphy wants the merged departments under his administration as part of unifying county government under the executive.

Kuhn maintains both departments should be under a separately elected public works commissioner.

Current state law doesn't give a county Board of Public Works, under the executive, the power to issue bonds or build new sewer systems. That authority is under the drain commissioner.

Both sides have been in court over the issue since 1975. But the issue won't likely be resolved until the Michigan Legislature strengthens Public Act 139, which allows counties to adopt the county executive form of government.

Since the only executive of a large Michigan county is a Republican, the Democratic-controlled legislature has kept the county executive law relatively weak.

THE MERGER issue is a "sore spot" with him, Kuhn admits. In a recent interview, he insisted on talking about the challenge to the Detroit sewer and water utility rather than his differences with Murphy.

"We're too busy to be playing games for political power," he said.

Kuhn said regionalization of the sewer and water system is "long over due."

While his dispute with Murphy over the public works merger has split the board of commissioners, both Democrats and Republicans on the GOP-dominated board applaud Kuhn's challenge of sewer and water rate hikes.

His petition campaign to place the regionalization issue on the ballot was unanimously endorsed by commissioners.

Anderson honored

Dwight Anderson, English teacher at Plymouth Salem High, has been commended by the National Council of Teachers of English for his contribution to the revision of "High Interest — Easy Reading."

This booklist describes more than 425 current titles with special appeal for adolescents who do not yet have the reading habit.

It is designed for use by junior and senior high students, as well as by teachers and librarians.

To make such publications possible, the council relies on the voluntary investment of time and professional knowledge by teachers and administrators in school and college programs across the nation.

"We are accordingly grateful for the efforts of Dwight Anderson and find reason to thank Plymouth Salem High School as well for this contribution to our service," said Paul O'Dea, director of publications.

REMEMBER LISA STUART who used to be manager of the Slack Shack on Ann Arbor Trail?

Lisa graduated from Plymouth Salem High School in 1973. After working at the Slack Shack she attended the Kendall School of Design in Grand Rapids. She graduated in May 1978 and in June married Art Usher, whom she had met at Kendall and was a member of the same graduating class.

They decided they wanted to live in the southwest and headed in that direction, job hunting along the way. They ended up in Albuquerque, N.M. where Art found employment as assistant advertising director with a large advertising company. Lisa was hired as art director for Jack Luce & Associates, a small advertising firm.

After just one year in the advertising business, Lisa was winner of nine awards at the New Mexico Advertising Federation awards competition banquet Nov. 16. Art received an award of merit for a sales promotion brochure and a second place for an outdoor painted bulletin.

Lisa's entries received the following ratings: Best of show; first place for specialty advertising (a neckerchief she designed for ZIA airline hostesses); award of merit in color consume magazine; second for color in a trade and business publication; first for an outdoor campaign; first for posters (graphic design) awards of merit for a letter head (graphic design); a radio advertising jingle; and for a one-minute radio commercial.

There were more than 500 entries in the contest. The first place entries will go on to a regional awards competition which will be in January in Denver. The American Advertising Federation is made up of 165 advertising clubs which are divided into 15 districts and three regions.

Lisa is the daughter of Lois and Alan Stuart of Clemons Drive, Plymouth Township.

Alan said that Lisa had entries in 15 categories in the competition. Art had three entries and won in two of them.

"Lisa has one advantage in working for a smaller firm," explained her father. "She is involved in just about every phase advertising."

After one year in the business, one wonders what the young couple will do for a follow-up next year.

CONTINUING OUR residents' winning ways there's news from Eastern Michigan University. Alexis Kraft, a senior at Plymouth salem High School, came in first in the fiction category in the writing contest that was part of the Sixth Annual Writers' Conference for High School Students.

The contest was sponsored by EMU's Department of English Language and Literature.

Alexis won for her short story, "Honesty."

"The story was based on my experiences at a place I used to work," said Alexis. Her story was "about five typewritten pages in length. But there was no limit — it could have been one page or it could have been 20."

Alexis has been writing since she was "very young." She enjoys reading but spends more time writing than she does reading. Her favorite authors are S.E. Hinton and Stephen King.

Deadline for entries in the contest was Oct. 10 and the winners were announced Nov. 10. Alexis is the only local winner. The scholarship amounts to $250 for an off-campus student and $850 for an on-campus student.

The young writer credits two of her teachers with encouraging her to write and to attend writers' conference.

"Mary Hendry got me writing again last year and told me about conference. Maxine Gibson helped me this year."

Alexis is the daughter of Joan and Raymond Kraft of Gloucester Street in Canton Township.

CARL PETERS and Emily Griffore had high scores at the Nov. 15 party bridge games at the Plymouth Cultural Center. There was no play last week because of Thanksgiving.

THE PLYMOUTH Theatre Guild believes it set a new attendance record on the closing night of the melodrama, "Love Rides the Rails."

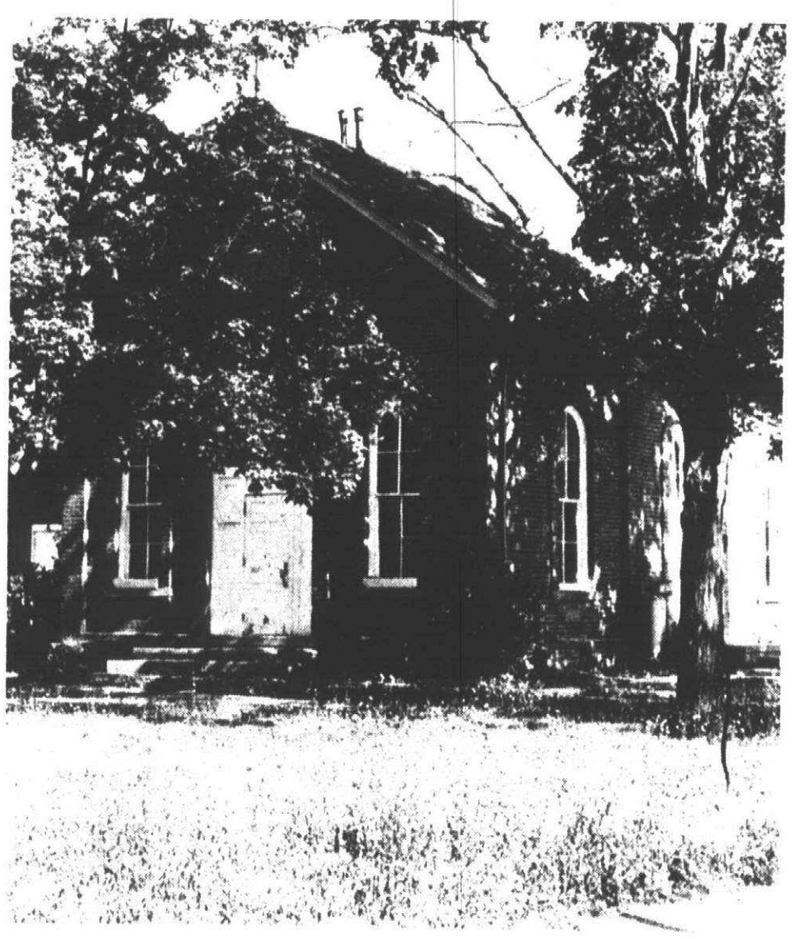

It was Dave Ide's first directing job and the cast and crew presented him with a director's chair with DAVE on the back. He was so pleased.

NANCY-LUNDIN RACINE of Ridgewood Drive, Plymouth, is one of six undergraduate art students at the University of Michigan School of Art who will exhibit their works in a Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA) Show. The show will open Friday in Slusser Gallery on North Campus and run through Dec. 6.

Nancy's works will include metalwork and drawings.

Slusser gallery in the U-M Art and Architecture Building is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays.

An opening reception for the show will be from 8-10 p.m. Nov. 29 in the gallery. All six of the students are expected to graduate this winter with BFA degrees.

Geer School will celebrate its centennial year in 1980.

Geer School to celebrate centennial

If planning ahead is the secret of a good party, then the one at Geer School next year should be really memorable.

In 1980, the school will celebrate its centennial year.

An enclave of smallness in the Plymouth-Canton School System, Geer has only two rooms, one for first and second graders, and one for third, fourth and fifth graders. It has one principal, two teachers and 42 students. And it's actually in Washtenaw County.

Located on West Ann Arbor Road, the school building itself will be 100 years old in September 1980.

"But, there's been a school on this location for more than 100 years," said Jeannine Bahlow, a school aide.

Actually, the school was created by an Act of Congress in 1826. It started out as the Geer-Miller School, but the Miller was dropped when the new brick school was built in 1880.

PREPARATIONS FOR the party next September were revealed at the school's annual turkey dinner for children, parents, grandparents and aunts and uncles last week. The dinner and pageant presented by the students have been an annual event since the school was built.

About 200 attended, and the dinner had to be held in Pioneer Middle School to accommodate the crowd.

Playing a central role in the scheme for the party will be a handsome quilt, prepared by the students and on display for the first time at the dinner.

The students drew pictures on squares with permanent markers, and Mrs. Bahlow "just sewed the quilt up for them." The quilt is of dark blue calico, with a white background for the pictures.

Lara Blechschmidt and Wendy Hix gave the address of welcome and acted as emcees for the program.

"Sailing the Seas" was presented by John Nowak, Alissa Mead, Amy Krugler and Lamar Nagy, after a Viking Disco, performed by grades 3, 4 and 5.

Shannon See, Tricia Carney, Greg Dani and Billy Vitti portrayed Spanish explorers in 1492. Kathy McComas, Mike Sudia, Diane Andres and Chris Trim were Northwest Passage searchers. Randy Fill, Eileen Vachher, Jeff Farell, Shawn Keough and Dennis Dameron took the roles of French explorers.

A "FLAT STOMP," to "honor all nations in search of new worlds and new ideas," was presented by Bill Vitti, Candi Jones, Tricia Carney, Shannon See, Chris Trim, Mike Sudia, Kathy McComas, Alissa Mead, Diane Andres, Andrea Reo, Bonnie Waller, Randy Fill, Helena Stewart, Eileen Vachher, Carolyn Schlosser, Holly Della-Badia, John Nowak and Amy Krugler.

Candi Jones, Brad Emmet, Helena Stewart, Carolyn Schlosser and Roshani Cowmeadow took the roles of early American explorers. while Bonnie Waller, Andrea Reo, Holly Bella-Badia and Steve Bahlow braved the polar regions.

Participating in the final presentation, "Over the River and Through the Woods" were Ronnie Cline, Sandy Fill, Kara Hogan, Barbara Schlosser, Sheri Woodard, Scott Breithaupt, David Huffman, Shane Keough, Jennifer Schumont, Steve Santos, Sara Sullivan and Gary Hobbe.

First grader Sandy Fill and Geer Principal Carrol Nichols were among the many who admired the centennial quilt.

Eriksson honors Kathryn Touhey

As long as Eriksson Woods exists, Kathryn Touhey will be remembered.

The Parent-Teacher Organization of Eriksson School made sure of that last week when it dedicated a monument in her honor.

In spite of having a monument, Mrs. Touhey is very much alive, and was on hand to enjoy the dedication of the bronze plaque resting on a granite stone, which was set on the edge of the woods.

Mrs. Touhey is a former art teacher at the school. She retired in 1978, but while she was there she instigated the formation of the Eriksson Woods Committee and the Woods Work Days the beautification of the three-acre property.

Mrs. Touhey has always been interested in the out-of-doors (hiking is one of her favorite activities). She decided that some education was in order one day when several of her students appeared with great bunches of trilliums they had picked in the woods.

She quickly explained that not only was it against the law to pick trilliums, an endangered species in the plant world, but that all wild flowers should be left to be enjoyed by all.

With the help of Elaine Aron, fifth grade teacher at Ericksson, and parents and children, nature trails were set up in the woods.

A naturalist from the Wayne County extension service helped identify the rare forms of plant life that exist in the woods.

HOWEVER, THERE was a sad side to the dedication. Recently marking posts have been disrupted and older children have gone in with chain saws and marred some of the areas that should be preserved.

Attending the dedication were not only all the children of the school, but also members of the board of education and school administration. PTO members Barbara Oldford, Marilyn Rickard and Dee Bashor formed the dedication committee.

Although retired from teaching, Mrs. Tohey still retains a lively interest in the woods. As an artist, she has long "drawn on nature as source of inspiration."

As a teacher, she wanted to "help the children enjoy nature in their woods."

As a retired person, she is interested in exploring nature from a different perspective. She's taking snorkelling lessons at Schoolcraft College. She may be the-eldest in the pool, but she wants everyone to know that she is "an extremely happy person who is enjoying life."

She and her husband, William, got their first taste of the joys of watching life below the ocean last year when they visited an island off the Yucatan Penninsula.

THEY RECENTLY bought a van and are planning many more trips, through th U.S., including a camping trip to Hawaii. They also plan a visit to Portugal and a returns to Yucatan.

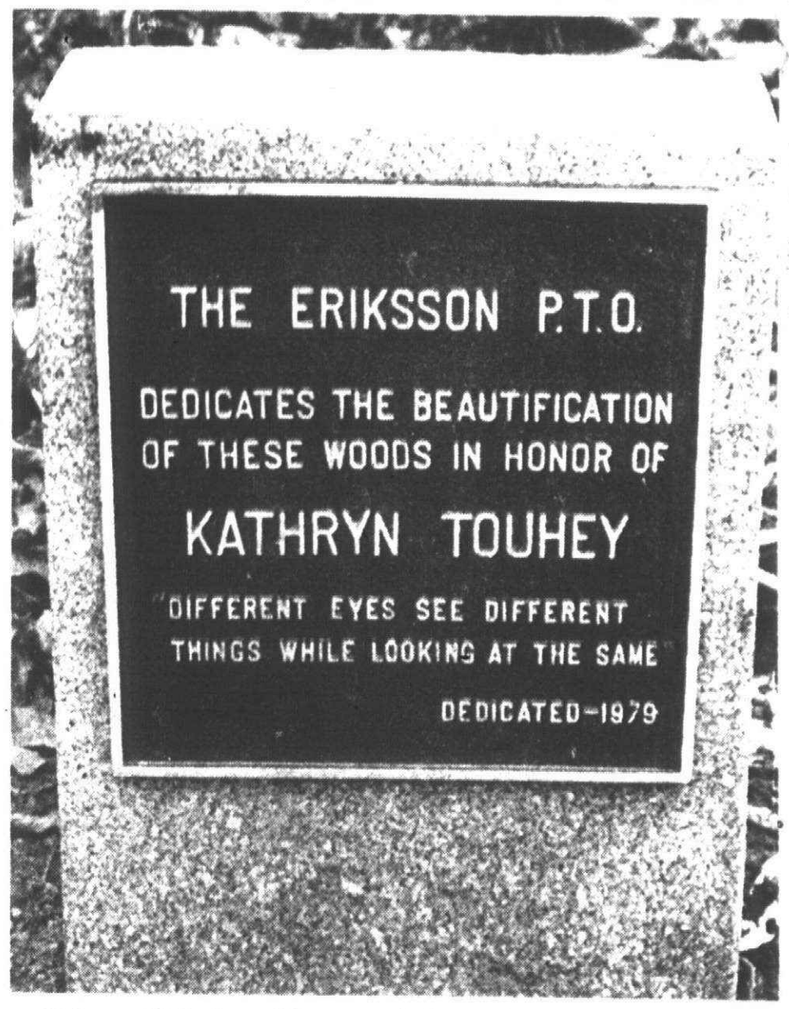

Besides hiking, walking and beachcombing, Mr. and Mrs. Touhey play a lot. They also spend time with their three grand-children and with Mrs. Touhey's 87-year-old mother.

In the artistic realm, weaving is her specialty. Her tapestry wall weavings have appeared in many exhibitions, and she is busy preparing now for one at Eastern Michigan University in the spring. Mrs. Touhey received her master of arts degree from EMU in 1971, and is happy to be invited to participate in this exhibit by former students.

"I do miss the little ones," said Mrs. Touhey. "I feel like I made a lot of little friends.

"I hope I taught them to really look at things, such as trees. An artist can't paint a tree until he really looks at it, at its bark, at its branches, at its leaves.

"And I hope I made some children realize that an old and grey-haired lady can still be creative and have fun."

Monday's Commentary

Daniel's Den

By Emory Daniels

A special gift from librarians

With Thanksgiving over, I'm now in the process of making out my Christmas shopping list.

And a couple items I know will appear will be books and records — books for daughter Bridgette and records for son Lyle.

In past years Lyle has been interested in only Sesame Street albums but his interests have been branching out recently to include Charlie Brown.

Bridgette, like her father, is an avid reader and always enjoys a good book for a gift. The problem, though, is finding a good book.

That especially is a problem now that her reading interests have advanced. Just recently Bridgette informed me that she wants to read "Animal Farm" by George Orwell but her teacher felt her dad ought to talk with her about the book first.

I haven't figured out yet how to summarize the meaning of "Animal Farm" to a sixth grader, although I'm sure it can be done.

There's a worn-out paperback copy in our book shelves at home, though, so that won't be a Christmas gift choice.

RIGHT ON MY desk, however, is a booklet which should be a great help in drawing up by gift list for the upcoming holiday.

In my hands is a mint-green booklet entitled "A Holiday Booklist for the International Year of the Child 1979."

Contained within are nine pages of suggested gift books for young people in elementary, middle school and high school levels.

The list includes the book title, author, price, publishing company, and a brief summary of the contents.

As might be expected, the selection has an international flavor because of the tie-in with the International Year of the Child.

The publication was prepared by the library/media specialists of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and was delivered here by Bee Green, director of libraries.

I quickly scanned through the lists for ideas for Bridgette and Lyle.

• "A Thousand Pails of Water" by Ronald Roy. Unhappy about his fisherman father's killing of whales, a young boy attempts to keep a beached whale alive with the help, eventually, of the villagers.

• "The Upstairs Room" by Johanna Reiss. The author recalls her own experience as a Jewish child hiding from the Germans in Holland.

• "Bridge to the Sun" by Gwen Terasohi. Story of a girl from Tennessee who marries a Japanese diplomat prior to World War II and remains at his side during the war.

• "A Day No Pigs Would Die" by Robert Newton Peck. To a 13-year-old Vermont farm boy whose father slaughters pigs for a living, maturing comes early as he does "what's got to be done."

• "Our Michigan, Ethnic Tales and Recipes" by Carol Eberly.

• "The Outsiders" by S.E. Hinton. Story of slum children and their efforts to find a place in the world.

• "The Westing Game" by Ellen Raskin. A mystery about the will of an eccentric millionaire and 16 heirs.

A book I wouldn't put on my list because my daughter already has it, but which would make an excellent gift for someone who doesn't is "Where the Wide Sidewalk Ends" by Shel Silverstein — a book of humorous entertaining poetry for any age.

Among the books suggested for high school students are: "The Hiding Place" by Corrie Ten Boom; John Hersey's "Hiroshima; Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables"; Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina; "Nicholas and Alexandra" by Robert K. Massie; Leon Uris's "Trinity"; and "Artic Passage" by William Hunt.

My thanks to Bee Green and the other librarians for making my shopping easier. I'm sure a lot of other parents also appreciate the holiday booklist.

Jackie Klein writes

Synanon—a cult or a cure?

Synanon was lauded for its successful drug and alcohol rehabilitation program when it started 21 years ago.

But the California-based organization recently has been criticized for unorthodox techniques and alleged criminal activities. It has been labeled a cult and a non-profit tax exempt charity which has a profit-making, tax-paying business arm.

Synanon has been soliciting money or donated products from big businesses in Michigan since the late 1960s. The State of Michigan still recognizes Synanon as a religion, though the Internal Revenue Service maintains it's a non-profit charity.

The program quietly collapsed in 1973, but Synanon now announces it wants to renew its program and expand its sales force in Michigan. The group still bills itself as the most successful drug rehabilitation program in America.

Many teenagers ran away from the program. I know one who stayed. Nancy was hooked on pot, uppers, downers and almost every other mood changer on the 1960's drug scene. She checked into Synanon in Detroit, where she was welcomed with the spirit of brotherhood and sisterhood which permeates Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) meetings.

For Nancy, Synanon became a new lifestyle, but not a free one. She said she was watched like a prison inmate, and when she tried to run away, she was caught and punished like a prison escapee. She said her suitcase and personal articles were taken and donated to Synanon. This smacks of the cult syndrome.

THE LAST I heard of Nancy, she was in a Synanon community in California using her skills as a hair dresser. I don't know if she gets paid for her work or if she's at the foundation against her will or by choice. But as far as drugs are concerned, she's gone straight.

My father, who was violently opposed to cults, was impressed with Synanon when he was approached by the group's salesmen in 1977 to buy Christmas gifts. The money was to help support the drug rehabilitation program. Synanon reported assets of $21.6 million. Before he died, I think my dad gave a donation.

The salesman gave my dad what's called "Synanon Punk Squad Fact Sheet." The Punk Squad is supposed to be Synanon's answer to the problems of young persons in trouble.

"Punk Squad describes the condition of the younger people who come to Synanon for help," the fact sheet read. "It incorporates the successful notions and philosophies pioneered by Synanon. They have changed the nation's attitudes towards the treatment and rehabilitation of drug addicts and other people in trouble since 1958. They have spawned more than 2,400 Synanon-like programs throughout the country."

LIFE IN the Punk Squad on Synanon's Tomales Bay ranch in California is rigorous. Kids from 9 to 18 years old get up early, exercise vigorously and work hard. But, according to the fact sheet, they also have fun.

Fun on the ranch is hiking, camping, sports, healthy competition, a sense of accomplishment and friends — in a crime-free, violence-free environment with no drugs, alcohol or smoking.

The fact sheet sheet says nothing about kids selling products to support Synanon the way Moonies support Rev. Sun Myung Moon and Hare Krishnas beef up the Krishna movement's coffers. But young persons in the Synanon program solicit for the "cause." Most cults are anti-drug.

"Young persons start growing up in Synanon with the help of people who set firm boundaries for their behavior," according to the fact sheet. "Synanon founder, Chuck Dederich, has put it succinctly. The operating philosophy is the 'reality principle.'

"The principle is conditional love based on accomplishment and earning one's way. Good boys and girls get good things, and bad girls and boys get bad things."

LIKE ALL Synanon residents, the "Punks" play the Synanon Game, described as an uninhibited forum which allows them to articulate whatever feelings or views they may have about any person or subject. It's supposed to be the key to changing their lives.

One former Synanon member described the therapy game as undermining, dangerous and controlling, making the players feel like non-functioning, emotional cripples. It sounds like a variation of cult mind control.

After six months of housebreaking, the Punks are supposedly ready to begin assuming the responsibility of being full-fledged members of Synanon. The "Punk Squad" is a special approach to juvenile problems, according to the fact sheet, but it's also a part of the greater community. "Punks" aren't isolated. They're part of the daily life of Synanon which supposedly provides total development and schooling in behavior, character and skills.

Synanon professes to be a charitable, scientific, educational and religious organization. It allegedly engages in research into the causes of alienation and delinquency as manifested in drug addiction and alcoholism.

SYNANON CLAIMS its population is a cross section of America — old, young, black, white, the disturbed, squares, families, singles and the educated and uneducated. Retirement-age persons, doctors, lawyers, college students, craftsmen and engineers live in Synanon.

Every day that an addict is in Synanon and not using drugs, he or she has lived "a clean man day," the fact sheet says. In 1975 and 1976, drug addicts in Synanon produced 190,715 clean man days. At $100 a day, a conservative estimate of what a "dope fiend" costs society, Synanon professes to have saved society nearly $20 million.

In my opinion, anyone who uses the archaic term "dope fiend" is either out of step or trying to inject sensationalism into public relations pap. And Synanon's letter heads say, "Synanon: The People Business."

This is the Synanon Prayer — "Please let me first and always examine myself. Let me be honest and truthful. Let me seek and assume responsibility. Let me understand rather than be understood. Let me have trust and faith in myself and my fellow man. Let me love rather than be be loved. Let me give rather than receive."

It isn't easy to have faith and trust in one's fellow man when supposedly tried and true institutions like Synanon and Boys Town are exposed as profit mongers. Would they rather give than receive?

Synanon was once a new hope and a second chance for drug abusers. And there are those who claim they were cured by the program.

But in an era when religious cults are growing like noxious weeds, breeding alienation and fear, it's hard to believe in "do-gooder" organizations promising panaceas for all the ills of society.

The Stroller

Indian tale recalled

By W.W. EDGAR

A funny thing happened to The Stroller the other day while listening to Dr. Helen Tanner deliver a most interesting address on Indian lore to the members of the Plymouth Rotary Club.

All of a sudden The Stroller realized that she was talking about some of his forbears. This may come as a surprise to his good friend, Dr. E.J. McClendon, but The Stroller has a strain of Indian blood in his veins. His great-great-grandmother was a full-fledged Indian squaw.

As he sat there listening to the speaker, The Stroller began to realize that this strain of Indian blood possibly was responsible for the friendly feeling he has had for the Red Man ever since childhood.

As far back as he can remember, the Stroller liked nothing better than playing Indian and he never missed a chance to doll up in feathers, grab a hatchet and go about dancing with the rest of the group in our home town parades.

BUT THE FONDEST memory of all is the year he became the Sachem (chief) of the newly formed fraternal lodge known as the Improved Order of Red Men in our home town.

By custom it was the duty of the Sachem to wear a white velvet uniform at all public functions. The uniform was covered with all sorts of sparkling ornaments and braids. And, best of all, he was called upon to ride a white horse at the head of the annual Halloween parade, and wear a long feathered head dress.

No one was prouder of that role than The Stroller. But there came a day of reckoning.

Aside from riding the white horse in the parade, the Sachem was to conduct burial services for all departed brothers and the ritual called for the releasing of a white dove from the grave. As it flew away, it was to depict the soul flying to heaven.

Came a day when The Stroller was called upon to conduct a funeral service. Now, it so happened that there were no white doves in his home town, so the best he could do was rent a white homing pigeon.

Proudly, he carried the white pigeon in a little box to the cemetery. He had committed the service to memory and was prepared when the regular minister stepped aside after his religious task and motioned The Stroller to the head of the grave.

ALL WENT WELL until it came time to release the "dove."

In those days the casket was lowered into the grave before the service began. At the proper moment The Stroller leaned over the head of the grave and slowly pulled open the door of the bird cage. But there was no flurry of feathers, no wild flying.

Instead the "dove" dropped down and sat on top of the casket. It uttered nary a sound. All efforts to get it to fly failed and the departed brother's mother, in deep mourning, cried: "Our Willie is not going to heaven." It was a trying moment.

Finally, the homing pigeon left the grave and flew over to the fence where it sat while we were leaving the burial grounds.

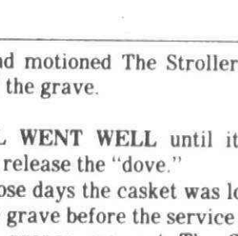

From that day to this The Stroller vowed that never again would he become the head of a lodge or any other organization. He'd be satisfied to walk in the ranks.

That's why Dr. Tanner's address reminded him again that his days as an Indian chief are ended.

Off the Walls

Unwanted help

By NANCY WALLS SMITH

Now that school has gotten well under way, and I have survived the maternal traumas that come with sending your firstborn off to kindergarten and the cold, cruel world, I find that my days alone are not as idyllic as I had planned, hoped and dreamed they would be. Mainly because I am not alone.

I now have a bored 3-year-old on my hands. Let me be the first to make the profound statement that entertaining one child is much more difficult than having two on the premises. Two brothers may play, fight, scream and wreak havoc in general, but at least they do it, at and with each other.

The moment his brother leaves the house for school, my 3-year-old is virtually glued to my side, with the added attraction of a mouth that never stops.

"What can I have? When is Jason coming home? Where's daddy? Where's grandma? Is it time for Jason to come home yet?" He sounds as if the world has been evacuated and we're the sole survivors.

Some days he just lies on the couch moaning, "What's on T.V.?" or "What can I eat?" A friend suggested I buy him a little can of beer and the picture would be complete.

Instead I build tents for him, I color with him, I read stories to him; all that fun stuff. But if I try writing a column, he's on my lap while I'm at the typewriter, or if I'm silly enough to attempt to read a novel he delights in using my stomach as a trampoline.

Sadly, he also insists on "helping" me scour the bathrooms and make the beds. Needless to say, his good-intentioned help usually turns a 20 minute task into a two hour chore. Makes cleaning just loads of fun.

For some strange reason the little nipper has taken it upon himself to make certain that I never shirk on the job. On the few occasions when I have noticed him to be preoccupied with the likes of Woody Woodpecker or Casper, I have tried sneaking off to the living room couch for a much needed nap.

As soon as he senses that my body is no longer in motion, he rushes to my reclining side and proceeds to poke his fingers in my eyes exclaiming, "Wake up, mom. Get up and clean the house!"

I have yet to figure out why he is so adamant in denying me a short nap, when I would gladly grant him permission to take one. If only he would.

I have a feeling it's going to be a long, long winter. Just me and my little buddy spending long hours cutting out construction paper, gluing our fingers together, playing horsey (I make a great horse), and attempting to clean house in our own fumbling way.

Believe it or not, I am wise enough to know that once he starts nursery school next fall I will be missing the little guy terribly and bewailing my loneliness; but until that time I figure if his mouth keeps going at it's present pace ("Mom, why are you typing? Mom, let's go to the store and buy me something. Mom, why is this piece of lint on the floor?") and there's no reason to doubt that it will, I shall be ready for the Rubber Room sometime around mid-February. Please make my reservations.

OWNER'S SACRIFICE
When I built this spacious 4 bedroom colonial for my family, I gave them everything they asked for. A formal dining room, a family room adjoining the kitchen, a rec room that walks out onto a patio, a separate laundry room, a 3 car garage, a snowmobile shed, a country porch and a paved circular driveway. I situated it on an acre of ground so that it would be surrounded by maple trees. I selected a location a few miles west of the quaint town of Gaylord in a private recreational community in which I have privileges on two magnificent spring-fed lakes, the use of a clubhouse with an indoor pool, a golf course, a lighted air strip, a riding stable and much more.

Now business commitments elsewhere force us to sell and we're anxious to deal. So phone my wife or me at 616-585-6400 (this is our home number) for full details.

High-mileage Chevy

The 20-mile-per-gallon barrier for full-size cars on the EPA's estimated city schedule has been broken by this 1980 Impala. It will be available after Dec. 1. Called the Impala SE, the car is rated at 20 mpg in the city and 28 on the highway. It is equipped with a 3.8-liter V6 engine and automatic transmission. It also has a special rear axle and oversize tires. The SE can not be bought with air conditioning.

Alternative fuels supplement gasoline

The current gasoline situation has resulted in increased interest in natural gas, propane and an alcohol-gasoline mixture.

The two non-gasoline fuels are possible replacements for gasoline, but they have drawbacks, according to the Automotive Information Council.

The alcohol-gasoline mixture, gasohol, is gasoline based and so does not offer the advantages of a non-gasoline fuel.

Propane, a liquid petroleum gas, is in worldwide surplus and sells for considerably less than gasoline.

The most abundant supply of natural gas comes from underground wells, which are non-renewable. But natural gas can also be derived from the almost endless supply of waste materials such as garbage or rotting agricultural plants.

The city of Modesto, Calif., runs many of its city-owned cars and trucks on gas produced from its sewage treatment plant.

Both fuels burn clean. For this reason, they lead to long engine life with fewer emissions.

However, industry experts don't see either propane or natural gas becoming the immediate answer to our energy problems. Any surplus of propane could disappear if sizeable numbers of cars or trucks were converted.

There are only 25,000 propane dealers in the United States, as compared to 171,000 gasoline stations. Because these dealers are usually in rural areas, finding a place to fill up isn't an easy task.

Technologically advanced propane conversions can cost anywhere from $1,000 to $1,800.

Natural gas conversions have not been as popular as propane conversions. Private car owners, especially, have shied away from converting their autos to run on natural gas.

The initial cost of the conversion and the need for a base refueling station, priced at over $40,000, have hurt the popularity of natural-gas conversion. It makes economic sense only for large fleets of vehicles at this time.

The big plusses for gasohol are that it stretches the supply of gasoline (or reduces imports) while requiring minimal modification of a gasoline engine. In addition, the alcohol for gasohol can be produced from farm products such as corn or sugar beets.

Making gasohol with American-made alcohol reduces the amouth of money sent overseas by buying farm crops instead of the non-renewable oil.

When You're Sick Which Do You Treat---

The Cause Or The Symptom

BY CARLTON R. MASHIKE, D.C.

"Today well lived makes of every yesterday a dream of happiness and every tomorrow a vision of hope."

One of the basic dreams of all mankind is to enjoy health, and so many of these dreams are never fulfilled. But they can be, a body that is sick is lacking vital nerve impulses in some part, whatever part is sick.

Health amounts to the ability of the brain to communicate with all body parts via nerve fibers. Pinch these fibers and the body part that is innervated by that fiber will become sick and diseased.

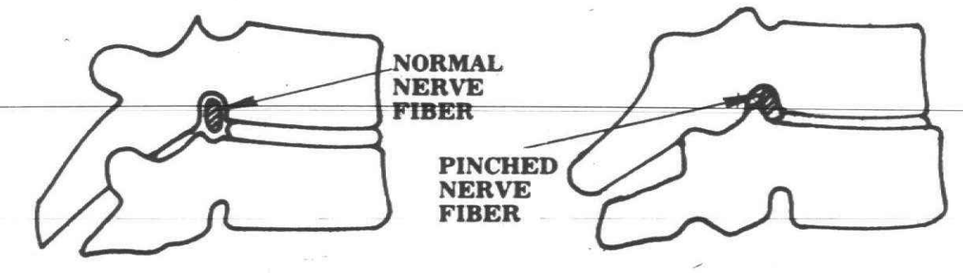

Chiropractic corrects cause of disease and others treat symptoms. Symptoms are signals that the body uses to tell us of a malfunction. 80% the drugs on the market today work on symptoms (the signals) not the cause of the problem.

IT IS SCIENTIFIC FACT THAT THE BRAIN RUNS AND CONTROLS ALL PARTS OF YOUR BODY. Block that communication and whatever organ is cut off will then not function normally. ORGANS THAT DON'T FUNCTION NORMALLY WILL BECOME DISEASED.

Disease is the lack of life to a particular part of the body. Bacteria do not cause disease they are the secondary by-product of the lack of life. In other words, THE TISSUE OR ORGAN MUST BE WEAK FIRST BEFORE BACTERIA WILL INVADE.

Keep the body strong (resistance high) and you won't be susceptible to disease.

NORMAL VERTEBRAE — TWISTED VERTEBRAE

These pinched nerve fibers don't give any pain, so you can't tell by feeling if they exist.

Only a Chiropractic spinal examination will reveal them. When they are found the Chiropractor then precisely adjusts the vertebrae into its original position thus taking pressure off the pinched nerve fiber.

After the pressure is removed impulses from the brain will start coarsing through the fibers again and the organ will start to be repaired. AND YOUR HEALTH WILL THEN RETURN.

Your body was created to be healthy, everything necessary to maintain that health is found within.

SUFFERING NEEDLESSLY?

Millions are turning to chiropractic because they are recognizing the scientific principles of nature that have made spinal adjustments effective for many conditions where other methods have failed.

SPINAL NERVE INVOLVEMENT CAUSES MANY CONDITIONS

The spinal chart shown above is directed especially to those people who have tried to regain their health through methods other than chiropractic, and have failed. That failure should not lead to discouragement, but to greater determination to discover the fundamental cause of all disease.

Since the discovery of chiropractic, no one needs to feel that he or she is destined to be sick all their life. Remember, "Where there is life there is hope and he who has hope has everything."

Chriopractic cured by pain and by son's temper
—Gary Young

Solves Arm Problem

We brought Scott to Dr. Mashike's because he had practically no use whatsoever of his right arm. We had been taking him for therapy for years.

Dr. Mashike told us that Scott had pressure at the bottom of his neck right at the shoulders where the nerves exit the spine and run down into the arms. That was why his arm wouldn't function properly.

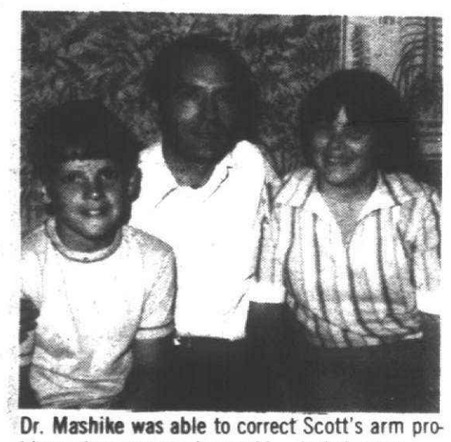

This made a lot of sense, so much so that we all decided to have our spines checked, because we weren't in the best of health either.

Dr. Mashike found the problem with Scott's arm and was able to correct it and no one else could. We still take Scott to therapy class, Dr. Mashike believes its necessary, and they are completely awed at how all of a sudden Scott has gone from zero percent to 90 percent usage of his arm.

Scott also has asthma, since starting chiropractic care the attacks are less severe and farther apart. We hope that as more pressure is removed Scott will be free of asthma all together.

Our health has improved greatly we are able to do so much more and we feel so much better, we owe it all to Dr. Mashike and chiropractic care.

Judy Langer

Dr. Mashike was able to correct Scott's arm problem when no one else could — Judy Langer

Heart Surgeon Recommended a Chiropractor

My heart surgeon recommended I see a chiropractor because he couldn't help me with my problem.

I had severe pain in my neck and arms along with hypertension. It was almost immediately that the pain in my neck and arms left. And now my blood pressure is dropping because of the adjustments.

But the real story is not myself but my son. I love my son very much so I thought if chiropractic can help me that much it might be able to help my son. We have been taking Tim to a psychiatrist because of his temper tantrums and offensive dispostion.

I am so happy and pleased that I can't put it into words, Tim is so much better, his disposition has changed and he has no more temper tantrums.

If you have children with this problem get them under chiropractic care because it works.

I really wouldn't have believed how important my and Tim's adjustments are and how much better we feel physically as well as mentally —if I had not seen it with my own eyes.

I definitely recommend chiropractic care, because it works.

Unable to Work A Full Week

I lost at least two days a week from work. I couldn't drive a car and was afraid to go shopping alone. I would have such violent dizzy. spells I was afraid to do anything. I also had high blood pressure, extreme nervousness and my hearing was going fast in my left ear.

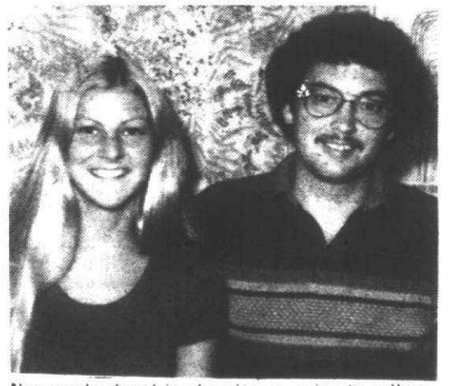

A friend gave me Dr. Mashike's supplement that came in the paper. I figured there was nothing to lose since I hadn't gotten relief anywhere else.

Dr. Mashike started adjusting my spine to remove the pressure from my blocked nerves. Well, in about six weeks the dizzy spells improved, my blood pressure dropped and my hearing is improved. I have more pep and energy and have become more calm. I can drive and not be afraid of having an accident.

I have already recommended Chiropractic and passed out copies of Dr. Mashike's paper to girls I work with and they are giving copies to friends they know need help.

I only wish I had heard of Dr. Mashike sooner, all the pills I have taken in the last three years, plus my poor health could have been avoided.

Adjustments cured what antibiotics couldn't
—Kathy Mann

Lives Changed Because of Chiropractic Care

We first heard about Chiropractic through my aunt who had received astounding results through Chiropractic when all else had failed.

I had dizziness-inner ear problems, a stiff neck, allergies, stomach pains and I was chronically tired.

Once getting started under Chiropractic care the improvements started immediately and then gradually over a period of 6 weeks until all were gone. My entire health is generally better and we will continue with regular Chiropractic health care

Do we recommend Chiropractic to others? Most assuredly! Chiropractic is the best way to approach health problems because they treat causes of illness and not the symptoms of them. Once the cause is removed the symptoms won't be there anymore.

My husband and I are convinced that Chiropractic works, so much that my husband is planning on going to college to become a Chiropractor. He's always wanted a profession in the health field and we know Chiropractic does the most to keep people healthy.

Susan Allen

Now my husband is planning on going to college to become a chiropractor — Susan Allen

Infection Finally Gone

For 6 months I had taken penicillin and antibiotics to try and get rid of an infection that started in a tooth. It then spread to my jaw bone. They told me the next step if drugs didn't work, was to do a bone graft from my hip and replace my jaw with it.

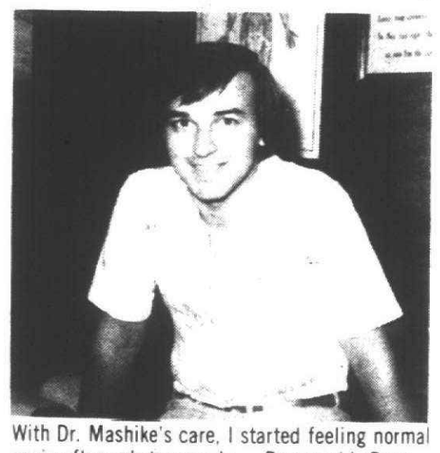

A friend suggested going to Dr. Mashike because she had gotten such good results. I figured anything was better than a bone graft.

It took a couple of weeks of spinal adjustments before I noticed any improvement at all, but then the infection started to clear up and within a few more weeks it was entirely gone. I hadn't been taking any drugs from the start so I know it was the adjustments that allowed me to get better.

Not only was the infection gone but other health problems were gone too. Now instead of relying on drugs I rely on Chiropractic.

Now I have all my friends coming and I tell all who will listen the benefits of Chiropractic care over constant taking of drugs which will not cure your illness.

Kathy Mann

With Dr. Mashike's care, I started feeling normal again after only two weeks — Raymond LaBean

Pain Left Only If Medicine in Effect

The pain was so bad I could hardly move. I missed work frequently because it was so bad. Almost my entire back hurt with severe pain in my shoulder, lower back and knees. I thought I would never be normal again because I went to other doctors for my problem, all they could do is give me pain pills so I only felt good when the medicine was in effect.

I heard about Chiropractic through Dr. Mashike's monthly newsletter. After x-rays and an examination I was told that my condition could be helped. Dr. Mashike would do this by correcting some twisted vertebrae in my spine.

After about two weeks I started feeling normal again. I didn't think I would be again. I found I was feeling better mentally because my physical health was improving. I definitely recommend Chiropractic to others.

Raymond LaBean

By BETTY MASSON

If your best-beloved has ever given you a diamond ring for Christmas when what you really wanted was an extra $10 a week for groceries, then you can understand how people in nursing homes feel.

A diamond is great, fabulous and no one would turn it down. Its sparkle warms the heart. It makes you feel proud — it shows he really cares.

But a little extra grocery money every week would make shopping a lot easier and the business of living more comfortable.

So it is in nursing homes.

THE CHRISTMAS spirit impels individuals and groups to visit the sick, the old and the shut-in. Christmas can be a really vigorous round of visits and parties, but they're worth it.

Who can resist the beaming faces of little carollers?

Visits by Cub Scouts, Brownies, Jaycees, Kiwanis, Vivians, Shriners and a host of others make Christmas joyful. So do staff parties and patient parties.

The thought of anyone being lonely over Christmas is a sad one. We work hard to prevent it.

But it's almost as hard being lonely in February when winter freezes the bones and the heart, and it seems that spring will never come.

It's hard being lonely when you see families going out for Sunday drives or cooking at the barbecue grill on a sunny Sunday.

It's hard being lonely in the autumn, when falling leaves herald the coming of another winter.

It's hard being lonely when you'd like to talk about the past — or the future — with just one person who cares.

Salvation Army staff and volunteers regularly visit nursing homes. Their vans take Tonguish Creek Manor residents shopping several times a month.

Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church has been named several times by nursing home staff as doing an excellent service for Plymouth nursing homes. Each Christmas a family at the church adopts a West Trail resident, chooses a special present for him or her and delivers it personally.

The feeling of loneliness is particularly for those elderly in nursing homes.

Often, said Carl Lampton, West Trail owner, these visits and friendships continue throughout the year.

For 18 years, a small group from Calvary Baptist Church in Canton has visited West Trail every Monday evening. The group consists of Donna Groth, Grace Evans, Jean Polley and Judy Ritchie.

What they lack in numbers, they make up for in devotion. They would not miss a Monday visit.

Mary Lou Johnson's Girl Scout Troop 216 has adopted some Tonquish Creek Manor residents as "grandparents." They visit regularly. "They are absolutely super," said director Sharon Thomas.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools offers classes almost every day of the week through Larry Masteller's continuing education department. Nursing home residents can learn about current events, music appreciation, physical fitness, Bible literature and arts and crafts. Teachers go to Hendry and West Trail in Plymouth, to Whispering Willow in Canton Township and to Wishing Well in Northville.

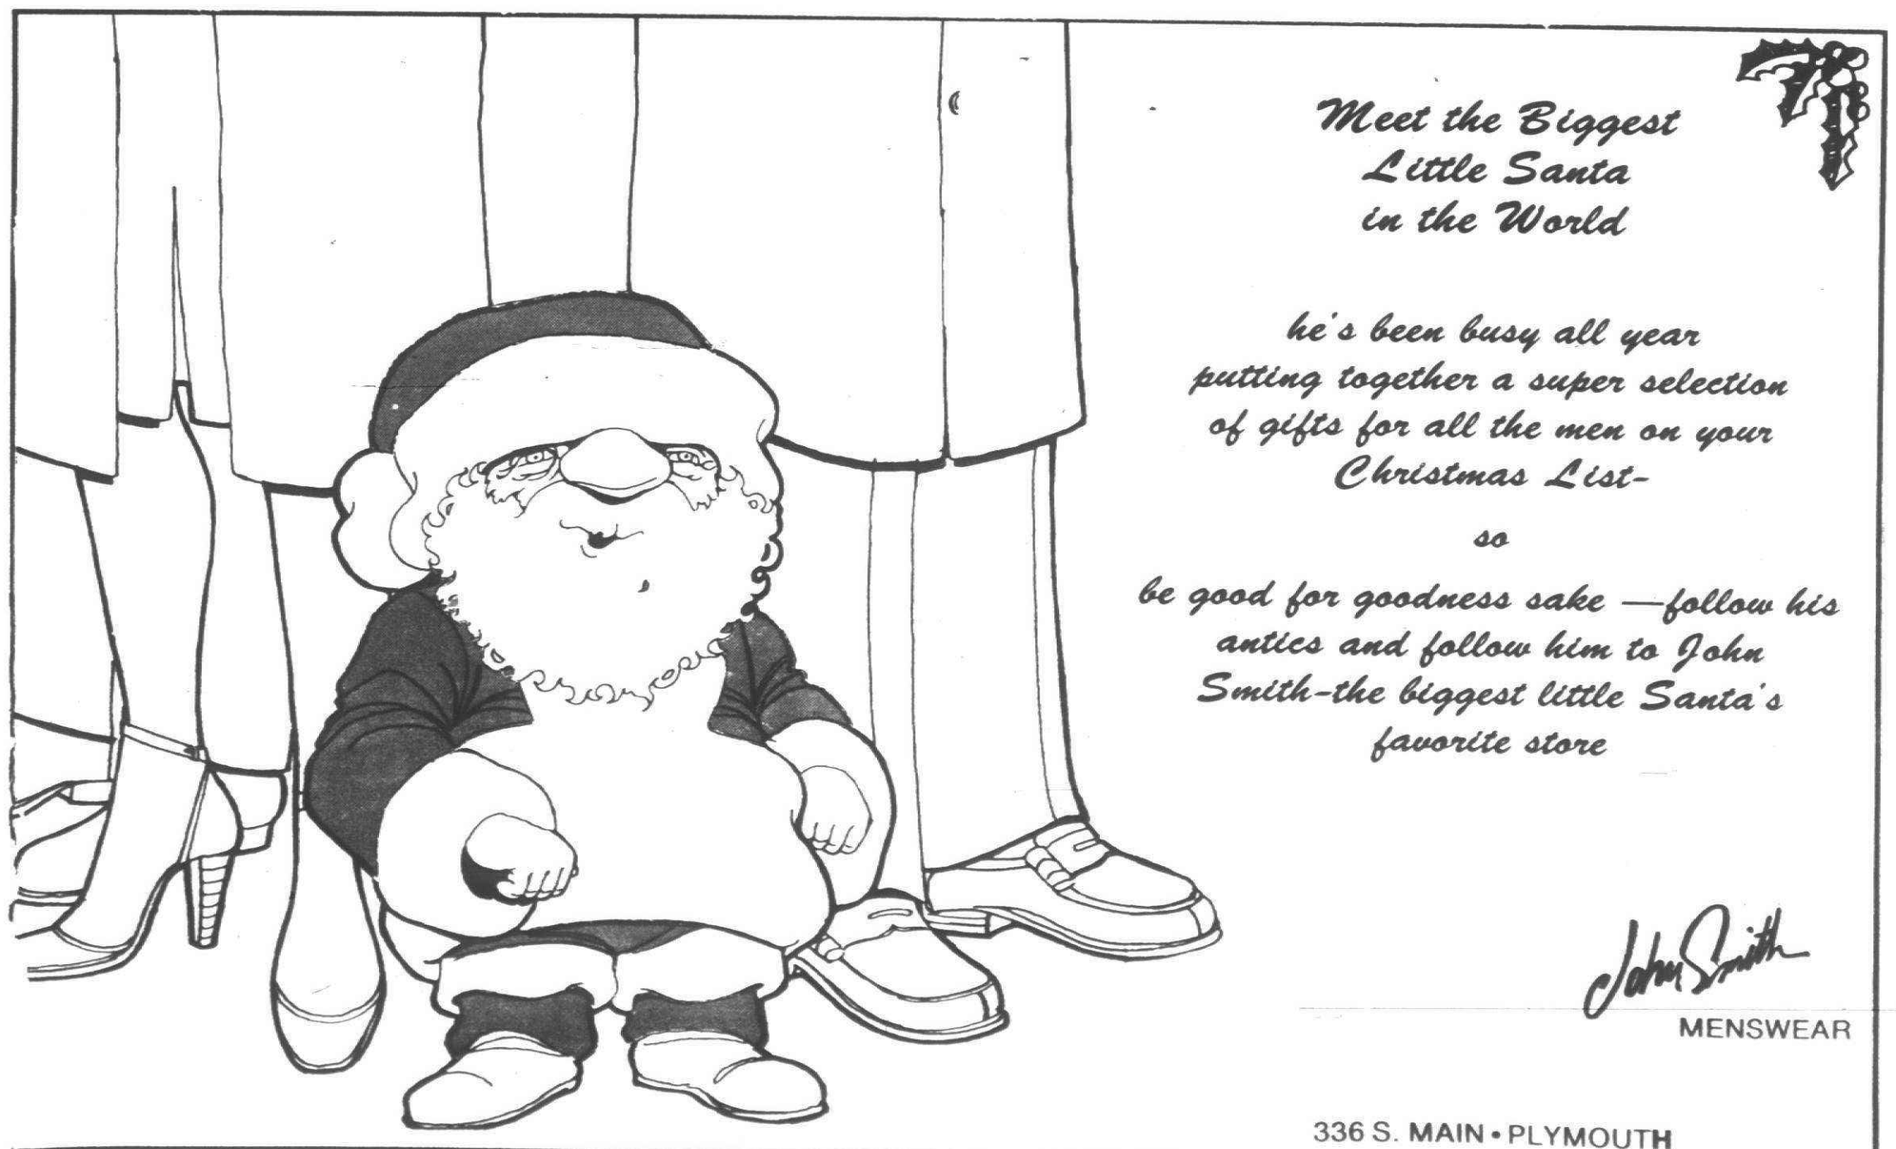

About half the residents are well enough and interested enough to participate.

Barb Evangelista, who is the occupational therapist at Hendry, believes the public has to be educated and reminded to visit nursing homes.

"I've been encouraging groups to come at other times as well, as at Christmas and holidays," she said. She has called dancing studios and encouraged them to present programs during the year.

Plymouth teachers have brought their students in to show nursing home residents their skills at skits and square dancing.

There are others who visit regularly and quietly keep Christmas all year. More would be nice, say both residents and staff.

Here it is, the season to be merry, and there's nothing interesting in the closet to wear.

The stores are full of delightful, glittering apparel, all costing more than the mortgage payments, and you can't help but think how nice it would be to have something new to wear for the round of holiday parties coming up.

Unfortunately, the Christmas season is a bad time to become clothes conscious.

There are ways, however, to dress up for the holidays without sending your credit card into shock.

FIRST, AVOID the impulse to run out and buy a new outfit the afternoon of some specific party. That's when you end up with a dress you wouldn't want to wear around the same people again within a short time. The dress gets put away until next year, when it will probably be out of style. Once again, you have nothing festive to wear when the next party rolls around.

The trick is to buy clothes that can be pulled together to make a variety of outfits, not just one single spectacular outfit.

If you can only buy one thing, buy a dinner suit. A dinner suit is essentially just a skirt and fitted blazer in some neutral color such as black.

These suits usually come in a dressier material than the run-of-the-mill wool suit. They are high-milage items because they can be adapted for any imaginable function. They can be worn throughout the year, not just at holiday galas. It's all in what you choose to add to the suit.

The jacket and skirt can be worn with a glittering top and look extremely festive. It can be worn with a shirt and plain shoes for a less formal gathering. The skirt can be teamed with a sweater for more casual parties. The jacket can even be combined with a pair of jeans if you so desire.

But the main charm of a suit is, through the use of inexpensive accessories, it can be made to look different enough so that you won't get sick of it.

Unless you're going to the junior prom or a coronation, you don't need to worry about finding a long dress to wear. The suit will get you through even the most formal occasion — probably in better style than a floor length number.

Even a suit can set you back a few hundred dollars. If the purchase of one is out of the question, you can still get by at the next party without looking tacky.

Take a look at what may already be hiding in the back of your closet. An old floor-length dress could be made to look a la mode by cutting it off somewhere around knee length and incorporating some slits at the sides.

If you're truely brave, you can leave the pants wide at the legs and simply hem them up above your ankles. Then you tell everyone its the Perry Ellis look.

YOU CAN ALSO glitter up fairly blah outfits by adding a metallic belt (all the stores have them in widths from very slender up to five inches wide), shiny pantyhose or sequined sweaters.

Just remember that a little of the shiny stuff goes a long way. There's no need to compete with the Christmas tree.

If you're at all handy, you can have the accessories at minimal cost by paying a visit to the local fabric store.

Rosemary Kuhlmann has played the role of Amahl's mother in "Amahl and the Night Visitors" in Plymouth since she performed the same part for the NBC production of the one-act opera. The opera is set for Dec. 16 in the Plymouth Salem High School auditorium.

A seasonal old favorite welcomed once again

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," will be featured at this year's Christmas program of the Plymouth Symphony.

The Dec. 16 presentation is built around the opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti in 1951. "Amahl" is the first opera written for television and more than one person in the Plymouth audience will undoubtedly recall that first preentation.

The opera will be presented at 4 p.m. in the auditorium of Plymouth Salem High School, Joy and Canton Center roads. Tickets are on sale at Beitner Jewelry Book World 1 and 2, and Heide's Flowers, as well as Arnoldt Williams Music Store.

Plymouth children will have a preview of the concert in their own Young People's Concert at 10;30 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 15 in the high school auditorium.

The concert will feature the Suzuki Violins of Plymouth; dancers from Ann Arbor in "Shepherd's Dance" from "Amahl"; plus the Debussy and Beethoven from the Sunday concert.

Smart shopping saves winter fuel

By MARY CONNELLY-SZCZESNY

'Tis the season to be not only jolly but energy-efficient.

This is the year after all when national advertising campaigns admonish us to save a gallon of gas a week and when conservation is becoming a watchword of the new decade.

In a spirit of energy-effeciency then, we offer a list of Christmas gifts which are designed to keep those you love warm in 65-degree homes and offices, save gas and oil and add a new twist to gift-giving at the close of the '70s.

• Gift ideas abound if you're handy with a crochet hook or knitting needles. For all your friends and relatives captive in cooler homes you can turn out afghans, sweaters, slippers, shawls or a stocking night cap.

• If you can't knit, wrap up the pattern, needles and yarn for someone who can.

• For the antique lover on your list, try ferreting out a warming pan.

• For the nostaligia buffs, make it an old-fashioned hot water bottle which will heat the sheets on cold winter nights.

• Warm the heart of someone on your list by wrapping up a gift certificate for several gallons of gas.

• Help the car get the most mileage out of the gasoline by including a gift certificate for a tune-up at a local gas station.

• Some people prize giving the gift of their time at holidays. This year offer to spend a number of hours with your brother and sister-in-law or Uncle Fred on a weekend. Donate your time to help caulk windows or insulate their home so heat doesn't escape needlessly.

• If you hate doing handyman chores, give the equipment necessary to get the job done or a gift certificate to insulate part of the house.

• If there are procrastinators on your list, offer to set up inspections of their furnace or hot water tanks to insure maximam efficiency.

• If you are living close to someone on your list, offer to combine their errands with yours to save fuel. Your gift could be the offer of several trips to the post office for stamps, a couple of trips to the dry cleaners or a few stops at the neighborhood bakery.

• If you sew, this is the year to buy yards of corduroy, flannel, velour, wool and quilting and stitch warm bathrobes, shirts and long nightgowns.

• If the person you're giving a gift to is especially energy-conscious, give them a wagon or shopping cart to haul parcels when they're traveling on foot.

• If you know someone making an effort to leave the car in the garage, give them a pair of comfortable walking shoes or a gift certificate at a favorite shoe store.

• An array of wool socks packaged with his and her thermal underwear could be a hit with the couple coping with skyrocketing home heating costs.

• If your friends and relatives hate getting out of bed in 65-degree homes because of cold floors, head to the nearest camping equipment store and wrap up some book-like down slippers.

• Scout stores with energy-efficiency in mind. You could choose from quilted sacks to snuggle in on the home sofa and calico-covered insulators designed to keep drafts from entering underneath doors or thermal blankets.

but then had difficulty renting one for such a short term.

Cashing checks also was a problem, even though they opened an account at a local bank almost immediately. They had to apply for check cashing cards at most of the local stores.

By the end of January they were finally able to move into their new home. They had the carpets cleaned, locks changed and the phone installed. The movers arrived Feb. 1. but they were several hours late because the truck got stuck on the ice.

When the movers called to say they would be late, Larry decided to take advantage of that time and go to the Secretary of State to change his license plates. It wasn't easy being a "Buckeye" in a "Go Blue" area, so he had to get those Ohio plates off their vehicles, Larry said.

With the movers came the joy of putting everthing in its place. However, first they had to find everything. Sue said the contract stated that everything on the main floor had to be unpacked by the movers, but it said nothing about putting things away, so she had towels, bedding, dishes, and odds and ends from one end of the house to the other.

Many boxes were carried to the basement and did not get unpacked. It took a while, but eventually Larry found the box with the pots and pans in the basement.

On Feb. 2nd, their water heater overflowed, and they used the hit or miss method in the Yellow Pages to find a plumber and a wet vac. They still had many many boxes of household goods and books in the basement, in addition to two-inches of water all over the floor.

Feb. 4 found the Hoffman's in need of the gas company. There was a leak in their gas stove.

By Feb. 7, even though she still had boxes from bedroom to kitchen to basement, Sue decided to attend her meeting of Canton Newcomers and find out more about the community she would call home. Through friends in Newcomers she was able to find a doctor and dentist.

NOW, ALMOST A year later, the Hoffmans can look back on their move a breath a sigh of relief that it's over and they can enjoy this Christmas season like "normal" people.

If you are just moving in, call the Plymouth or Canton Township offices to obtain a map of the townships. They also will be able to give you telephone numbers for Newcomers groups and a business directory listing churches, hospitals, schools, veterinarians, stores, banks, and other services in the area.

A Welcome Wagon representative will be happy to call on new arrivals and has gifts from local merchants. Call 459-6247 for a Welcome Wagon visit.

Wherever they were found, they are selling phenomenally well, reports Lorraine Waun of Lorraine's Doll Shop, 615 N. Mill, Old Village.

She received six dozen six weeks ago. She has about one dozen left. At between $85 and $95 per person, that's not bad. Price depends on hair style.

Little People are hand-made by artists. No two are alike. Features include tiny toes, fingers, belly buttons and expressions indicative of individual personalities. They wear regular baby clothes.

What happens when moving day is holiday for this one family

By SAM NICHOLS

Imagine, if you will, adding to all the hustle and scurry of getting ready for Christmas by moving into a new home, from out of the area, during the holiday season.

Sue and Larry Hoffman of Canton did just that.

Larry came to the area first in mid-October, 1978 to interview for a job with Ford Motor Co. Next came the trip to Plymouth-Canton to look for a house.

Larry and Sue flew to Detroit in mid-November on a Tuesday in search of a home to buy on a V.A. loan. It took the Hoffmans from Tuesday to Friday before they found a home and made a bid on it. Their bid was accepted Friday evening, and Saturday morning they were on a plane returning to Aberdeen, Md.

The day before Thanksgiving, Sue and Larry drove from Maryland to Larry's parent's home in Massillon, Ohio. Although Larry's parents were in West Virginia for Thanksgiving, the Hoffmans had made the trip to move items, such as stereo equipment, which they did not want bounced around in a moving truck for a week or more.

After a night's rest, they drove to Dayton, Ohio to spend Thanksgiving Day with Sue's parents. They returned to Maryland on Saturday.

Sue said they were thankful for Larry's new job, but it was difficult to relax and enjoy the holiday knowing their move still was ahead of them. She had completed her Christmas shopping though, and by Thanksgiving Day presents were hidden under Larry's parent's bed in Massillon and in Sue's parent's basement in Dayton.

We all know how difficult it is to find just the right gift, so Sue decided it would be better to shop in Maryland where she knew the stores. As a new arrival in the area, all Fairlane meant to Sue was a type of car, and Twelve Oaks was a dozen trees. Knowing where you are going in the Christmas shopping crowds is a big plus.

BOTH SUE AND Larry were leaving jobs in Maryland.

Sue was teaching, so the beginning of December found her getting ready for the movers, cleaning the house they were leaving, writing Christmas cards and preparing end-of-term report cards.

Her Christmas cards last year read: "I must have holes in my head with Christmas cards, report cards, and movers all due at the same time!"

At least she didn't have to worry about decorating a house. Not only was there no time, but by Christmas Day, their new house was not ready yet.

Larry returned to Michigan Dec. 15 to begin work. Sue had to remain in Maryland until Dec. 22 to finish school. The day school ended, Sue loaded her plants in the car and drove to Massillon, Ohio to meet Larry for Christmas.

Dec. 27 found the Hoffmans in Canton to sign mortgage papers, then in Dayton to spend a few days with Sue's folks.

New Year's Day, instead of enjoying the Rose Bowl game, they drove up I-75 in a terrible ice storm, to arrive in the bitter cold at their temporary home, an efficiency apartment. The apartment had a few problems, one of which was mice. Larry managed to trap six in the month they lived there.

Larry was quick to point out that while things were hectic for them, they made the move with no children or pets which complicates things even more. Many efficiency apartments will not accept children, and even more will not accept pets.

Making kennel arrangements over a holiday can be very difficult, if not impossible, for a new arrival. Picking one out is just a stab in the dark.

WHILE LIVING in temporary housing, mail was a problem. They finally decided to have mail forwarded to a post office box,

If you think it's a pain to check out one or two strings of Christmas lights to see how many bulbs need replacing, consider the job of the Plymouth Department of Public Works.

In order to create the holiday beauty at Kellogg Park, about 80 strings of lights had to be checked. About 20 are used for the big Christmas tree which was lit Friday, and between 50 and 60 strings are used for the rest of the displays.

"We do a lot of trees," commented Tom Wolfe, assistant DPW director.

DPW workers began early in November to decorate the town, putting up wreaths, candles, bells and lights. But they had to get help from a Northville tree service to complete the Kellogg Park trees. The city doesn't have ladders long enough to reach the tops.

Santa arrived in Plymouth on Nov. 23. He and was greeted with the tree-lighting and Christmas carols. There was no parade this year; because of a lack of participation in past years, but Santa will be in his house in the park at designated hours from until Dec. 24. Santa's visit is sponsored by the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce.

Passersby will also be able to admire the lovely manger scene in the park, as well as the DPW's work at City Hall and the Plymouth Library.

Santa Claus arrived in Canton, via helicopter, the day after Thanksgiving. His first stop was at Griffin Park on Canton Center Road, north of Cherry Hill.

He will be visiting Canton shopping centers throughout the holiday season.

Special attention has been paid to the new (this year) gazebo, at Starkweather and Farmer. It's all done up (like a Christmas tree) with red ribbons and bows.

He's all dolled up and ready to go

By BETTY MASSON

Little children (especially boys) occasionally kick Santa. They often try to pull off his white whiskers.

They were doing it in 1935 and they are still doing it today.

It was in 1935 that Canton's Santa, Gene Reaves, first donned a Santa suit. "It was the depression, you know. I needed a job."

He applied at Hudson's personnel office and became the Santa of its downtown store for 10 years. He rode in the Christmas parades. Some of Detroit's best-known figures of today sat on his knee.

IN THE YEARS that followed, Reaves worked as an automobile salesman, but he still found time to play Santa.

For more than 10 years, he was Santa at the Farmington Plaza. He even put seats into the back of an old funeral flower car to transform it into a Christmas ride for children.

Later, Reaves became Canton Township's Santa, arriving by helicopter and visiting the local stores. This ended two years ago, when he decided that sitting for long periods of time was a little hard on 77-year-old bones.

Inspite of the kicks (Santa hinted that he occasionally got in a lick of his own when Momma's back was turned), Reaves is not planning to put his uniform in mothballs.

For one thing, a Santa suit costs about $500, and Reaves even has a Santa overcoat. He's got too much invested in the outfit to retire it.

(Nasty little boys should take note. Santa's beard is firmly welded to his locks. It's fastened with toupee glue as well as being sewn on. In order to de-beard Santa, you would have to scalp him.)

For another thing, according to Reaves, being Santa gets to you. It isn't all fun. How do you explain to a little boy that not even Santa can bring his dead mother back for Christmas?

Or how do you tell a child that his Christmas dreams are impossible because his father is out of work?

How do you make Christmas brighter for children who live in institutions?

This last is a project that is dear to Reaves' heart. Maybe because he and his wife, Madelyn, have given a home to a retarded relative for the past 20 years.

Santa plans year-long for children at the Plymouth Center for Human Development. He's done this for 10 years. Reaves works with the foster grandparents at the center. He gives gift certificates to about 60 foster grandparents. Often, he said, the grandparents use part of the certificates to buy mittens, sweaters or other needed items for their adopted children instead of gifts for themselves.

These projects cost about $3,000 a year, and Reaves could not do it without donations from private citizens and service clubs such as the Jaycees, the Lions and the Rotary.

THIS YEAR the need may be even greater, because Mrs. Santa has had to spend some time in hospital.

Donations may be sent to Gene Santa Reaves or to Santa's Christmas Fund, 37789 Hixford Place, Apt. F12, Westland, Mich. 48185.

Reaves contributes a lot through his own efforts. He appears as Santa for private parties for a donation to his cause. He'll even spend a couple of hours in a beauty shop, or some other place of business, for a contribution.

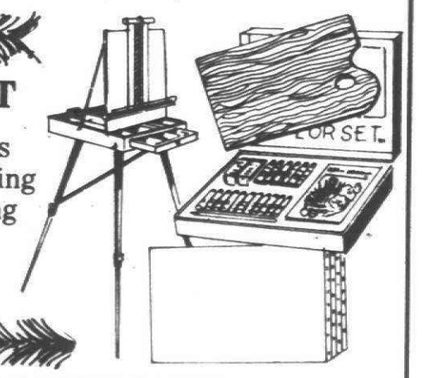

Like the real Santa, Reaves has a workshop. In it, he works on personalized plaques. Many buy them because they make good gifts year-round. Reaves put these proceeds in his Christmas fund for yet another year.

Off the Walls

Blessed?

By NANCY WALLS SMITH

As another Christmas is fast approaching, I am reminded of that old proverb which goes on about it being "more blessed to give than to receive," and I think, "it's a heck of a lot easier, too!"

Even though the giving of yuletide gifts may require hours of shopping in crowded stores in order to find that certain something that may thrill Aunt Matilda Mae, at least once you hand it over to Auntie, your worries are over. She either likes it and thanks you profusely, or doesn't like it but still thanks you profusely.

THE GIVING I love; it's the receiving that hangs me up.

Weeks before Christmas I can be found making faces of surprise and delight at myself in the mirror in practice for Christmas morning when I will be handed boxes containing "who-knows-what" from my loved ones.

There is a great deal of dramatic flair required to look pleased when you open a lovely package only to find a hideous, orange, quilted robe, size 46, or a knitted hat with a chartreuse pom pom affixed atop.

I've worn that robe for more than six years so as not to hurt my husband's feelings, all the while hoping fervently that the darn thing would fall apart so I could quietly dispose of it. I find it best to wear the hat in blizzards when the snow is thick enough to obscure everyone's vision.

There just seems to be no polite way to say, "I really didn't need a set of smiling golf balls," or "I doubt that I'll ever use this two-tier, portable bar you've given me."

I even find it difficult to keep in mind that "it's the thought that counts" when it looks as if the thoughtful one who gave me the orthopedic car cushion just wasn't thinking. Or if they were, I'd rather not dwell on what the thought might have been.

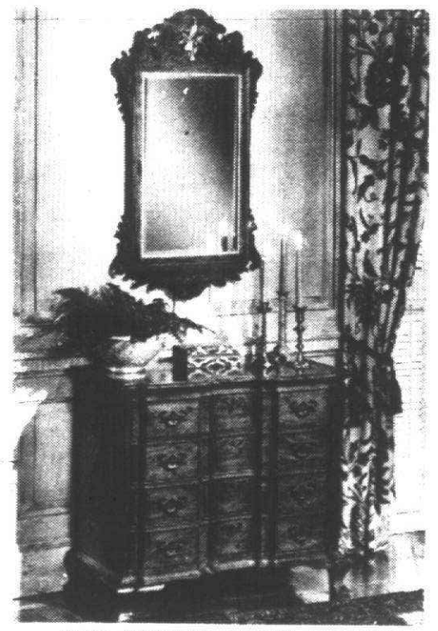

UNFORTUNATELY, the problem isn't over as quickly as are the Christmas carols.

Once you have managed to gracefully receive those many things you could live without, it is your duty as a grateful recipient to use these items.

Aunt Gertie will tend to eye you suspiciously if she should get into your car and not see an orthopedic cushion therein, and Uncle Fred might get

Depression joins the holidays

By DARLENE STINSON

But beneath the glitter of brightly-wrapped gifts and cocktail parties are often hidden feelings of guilt and depression.

Excessive gift-giving, eating and drinking sometimes cover up the negative emotions which people feel during the holidays, say two staff members of a Plymouth psychiatric clinic.

Despite the festivites of holiday dinners and parties, feelings of depression are more prevalent than people care to admit.

DR. GONZALO MESA, a psychiatrist with Associated Counseling Services, and Myron Hornyak, a clinical social worker, say all holidays trigger buried memories.

People remember the happy times; others relive the sad times.

The importance attached to family togetherness at Christmas is a major cause of holiday depression, according to Mesa and Hornyak.

People who live far from family and friends become depressed because they are alone. People who have lost loved ones through death or divorce feel depressed because of their memories of better times.

But Christmas also tends to trigger feelings of guilt by reminding people of past family conflicts and resentments.

Visiting and loving family members on Christmas Day is "an obligation — a responsibility that people feel they must do," Hornyak said.

"It's a feeling that 'Christmas is coming, and I haven't talked to my mother lately. I have to go see her during the holidays.' "

HOLIDAY GUILT and depression often leads to overzealous gift buying at Christmas, Mesa said. The psychiatrist said an expensive gift is often used to compensate for negative emotions which one feels toward family members.

"You feel a bit down. You haven't written to your family in months. Christmas advertising campaigns capitalize on that."

Hornyak attributes the increasing commercialism of Christmas in part to the efforts of people to repress their negative feelings toward the holidays.

"I know people who dread Christmas because it meant nothing but deprivation as children," he said. "They will often get into debt in order to give their own children an enormous number of gifts."

Excessive eating and drinking are also signs that acute depression may be lurking beneath the veneer of holiday joy.

"Things people can't undo, they want to forget," Hornyak said.

The social worker said Christmas and New Year's are often viewed as milestones in life, which remind people of their past failures and future shortcomings. Both holidays ring as a reminder of mortality.

"Christmas is supposed to be a happy holiday," Mesa said. "But we're celebrating someone's birth who's death we're going to remember at Easter in just a few months.

"The most dreadful day of the year is the last day. The increase in anxiety, suicide attempts, depression and hospitalization is remarkable. Parties are a compensation. The senses are deadened by overimbiding.

DESPITE THE GLOOMY picture they paint, Mesa and Hornyak insist that they are not the Ebenezer Scrooges of the holiday season.

Genuine expressions of love and joy often surface at Christmas, they say. Many look forward to the holidays with anticipation.

They attribute holiday depression to the inability of people to deal with their feelings throughout the rest of the year.

Depression arises when people repress their guilt complexes and refuse to express sadness and grief in a healthy manner.

Mesa called depression one of the most common ailments of the world. But he said the feeling is most difficult to treat in Western countries where people, particularly males, are taught to hide their emotions.

"What's important is that people are more susceptible to their emotions at the holidays," Mesa explained. "People are often too busy to deal with their feelings during the rest of the year."

He defines depression as an "abnormal feeling — a reaction that's uncalled for or disproportionate to the occurrence." He defined sadness and grief "as a normal way to work through your feelings."

Shimmer, shimmer,

By RUSTLE SHAND

Shine, sparkle, shimmer — glow, glisten, glimmer.

Holiday dressing promises to light up the nights like neon.

Lame, satin, irridescent taffeta — paillettes, sequins and rhinestones catch the glow of candlelight or flash back at holiday lights.

And, unlike other years when you felt compelled to make a holiday statement completely alien to the rest of your wardrobe, this season you should be able to achieve this opulent look by adding pieces of clothing such as jackets or sweaters or a smart new accessory to your wardrobe basics.

OPULENCE and elegance are the key words to consider when you put your holiday look together. Think in terms of gleaming gold overtones, of shimmering sequins and bugle beads and glitter-splashed sweaters without overdoing a good thing.

The perfect little evening top to add to last year's black evening skirt or trousers. Or a gleaming, glowing jacket to top off simple silk dresses, skirts or pants.

A softly feminine dressy sweater can demurely dress up your daytime suit for day. Then, when the jacket comes off in the evening — reveal sparkling shoulder details and plunging backs.

Any one of the elegant evening bags by Rafael Sanchez can transform the simplest of garments into a knock-out evening statement.

As the designer said when he visited Claire Pearone's shop, "People are so quality conscious. Americans are into quality now. They would rather buy one beautiful piece.

Evening bags (above) lend the pulled-together look for the holidays. Both bags were created by Rafael Sanchez and run between $320-$350.

depressed if he should come over and not see that plastic yellow portable bar standing in an appropriate corner of your home.

I confess that one year I pulled a real social "no-no." After storing a particularly useless electric warming tray in the back of the linen closet for eons, I re-wrapped it and gave it to someone else as a present.

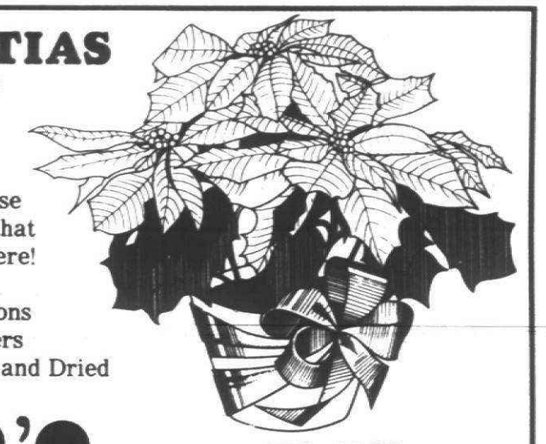

I don't recommend this tactic, as the guilt was disconcerting, especially when I sensed that the recipient of this gem was just about as un-thrilled with her present as I had originally been.

I suppose someone really bold could save up all these turkeys and have a really interesting garage sale — if you didn't mind the fact that no one would speak to you for the rest of your life.

I certainly don't want to hurt the feelings of those I love, so I shall continue to practice my facial calisthenics well into Christmas Eve in preparation for my performance on Christmas morn.

I know I can pull it off. I'm the lady who smiled when she received a toilet bowl scouring brush from her husband as a gift on Mother's Day. After that, I'm ready for anything!

While's probably still a lot of fun playing with cardboard boxes, chances are you'll score a bigger hit if you give an electronic game this holiday season. But be sure to stock up on batteries. (Photo by Santa Fabio)

Electronic games are tops with kids

By SUZIE ROLLINS

Santa Claus better have a pack full of batteries with him this Christmas if he wants to please children and adults alike.

According to two J.L. Hudson's toy department managers, electronic toys are more popular this year than ever before.

"We're selling them to kids and adults — it's incredible," says manager Tracy Pearce.

Barbie and Ken have taken a backseat to the Talking Robot who tells jokes, asks and answers true and false questions and plays eight-track tape cartridges. Mr. Robot, as he is known around Hudson's third floor, is sold for nearly $70.

Last year's introduction to electronic toys was just the beginning of the space age era. First it was Blip, then electronic football and baseball. Then Simon, the game of duplicating sounds, made its debut.

This year, manager Laurie May says Sensor Scrabble is the game of the season. "Everyone seems to want it."

Played in the same fashion as the conventional Scrabble game, only the player's moves are computerized. Instead, of laying the letter tiles on the board, the player types them into the machine and they are flashed on a screen.

CONVERTING TABLE games into electronic wizardry seems to be the wave of the future, Ms. May says.

"Battleship was once a table game and it's electronic now. Soon Monoply will probably be electronic too," she adds.

Ms. Pearce saus the introduction of Stop Thief, a cops and robbers game which uses a computer to dictate moves rather than dice, may be the test for the idea of mixing traditional game playing with contemporary thought.

"If this game takes off, other ones will probably be made," she adds.

Television characters also make popular dolls for both boys and girls, Ms. May said. Steve Austin and the Bionic Woman are expected to be sensational this year. Hudson's still has some dolls in the likeness of Donny and Marie Osmond and Farrah Fawcett hanging around from last year.

"The problem with these dolls is by the time they get to the market the show is usually off the air and the kids don't want them" Ms. Pearche says.

North Pole notions for sporty Santas

By LEM MESEE
Outdoors writer

If the holidays just mean an unusually hectic schedule, keeping the outdoors types away from their favored winter jaunts, a gift to remind them of those long January Saturdays ahead may replace the holiday glooms with anticipation.

And making sure your favorite outdoors lover is well equipped for hunting, fishing or camping, particularly in cold weather, is a particularly nice way of combining practicality with a present.

One nifty little item on the market is a portable hand warmer. This is a blessing for deer hunters and ice fishermen, as well as for nature photographers who spend hours waiting for that perfect shot of a winter bird or fox.

One brand is water-powered. That is, you add a couple of teaspoons of water to the chemicals, and it produces four hours of heat at 140 degrees F. It runs about $7.

That's about long enough for an ice fisherman. If you don't catch enough fish for a couple of meals in four hours, you're never going to get 'em, so you might as well pack it up and go.

Another item, at $13-16 a pair, is battery-heated socks. A fellow doesn't need those if he keeps moving, as in rabbit hunting, but they can be a boon to a deer hunter or ice fisherman.

THEY'RE THE kinds of things an outdoorsman might not think of getting for himself, but they make great gifts. And if a woman wants to partake of cold weather hunting or hiking — and greater numbers of women are doing so — why, she might as well tell her man to get her something like that.

Obviously a quilted or down-filled vest, flannel shirts, or a great pair of boots will make any outdoor person happy.

But a survival kit is something most men don't think of getting for themselves.

He needs a first aid kit, a compass, a whistle, needle and thread (rips in clothes can get mighty drafty if you're lost in the woods), and some fire-starting materials. Check your friendly local library or the Boy Scout Handbook for ideas.

Maps are things many outdoorsmen don't consult often enough. Good maps can show you out-of-the-way hunting and fishing spots, boat launches and trails. There are also lakes charts which show you depths and dropoffs — the best spots to fish for lunkers of any species.

No, a state highway map isn't enough. It shows major roads and state parks, but not the range of county roads, state forests, national forests and obscure trails where Michigan's resources are best appreciated.

Tug-of-war
Holiday spells conflict for divorced families

By SHERRY KAHAN

For a loving family, Christmas and Hanukkah offer a special time to enjoy each other's company. But for an ever increasing number of divorced families, the holidays can instigate the toughest tug-of-war of the year.

For parents who haven't resolved custody issues, the holidays can be the time of the three As — anxiety, anger and arguments over who gets the kids.

"Christmas is the hardest time of year as far as visitation is concerned," says Carl Gundersen of Livonia of the Family Counseling Service of Wayne County.

"Even if they can work things out other times of the year, divorced parents are apt to have difficulties around Christmas."

It's a rough problem, concedes Shirley Emerson, a counselor at Schoolcraft College and a therapist at the Amity Mental Health Clinic in Dearborn.

"I sometimes suggest that if the parents are unable to talk sensibly about who is to get the children, then they should decide what to do on the basis of what is best for the children."

With that thought in mind, some divorced parents have been able to work out reasonable solutions, such as the following:

• The husband joins his former wife and the kids at their home for the holiday. This usually works well only if the separation was amicable.

• Another woman operates with a hectic but satisfactory schedule.

"On Christmas eve the children and I go to my former mother-in-law's house at about 4 p.m. for a dinner and gift-opening. At about 10 p.m. we leave and go to my mother's for a get-together. Sometimes we get home about 4 a.m.

"On Christmas day I have a dinner at my house."

This divorced mother is convinced "You have to give up your own selfish needs to work all this out."

• "My husband goes and gets his kids in midafternoon on Christmas," explains another divorcee. "He brings them to our house. My kids don't see their father. All of them (children of both marriages) get on together. It works out fantastically well."

• Bringing Christmas Eve into the picture has been a big help to many split families. The children visit one family parent for decorating the tree, perhaps, and opening packages. On Christmas Day they exchanges gifts with the other parent.

Both Gundersen and Mrs. Emerson object to divorced parents sharing the day with their children if they can only pretend to enjoy themselves. The children will see through the pretense and feel uncomfortable, they say.

CHRISTMAS PLACES stress on many families, said Gundersen.

"The first year after the divorce is often quite difficult for everyone involved.

"Sometimes it is necessary to develop new traditions for observing the day. For example, a father might want to take his children up north to stay with his parents."

Gundersen's advice is to concentrate as much as possible on the child, and understand what Christmas means to him.

"Often in the name of doing things for kids, we forget our kids," he said.

"YOU CAN CHOOSE to be happy or miserable over Christmas," said Mrs. Emerson. "Remember that it is your choice. Try to make the best of it. Plan a party, reach out and do something that is fun or creative. Don't feel sorry for yourself."

She believes it should be possible for the divorced couple to share a family dinner, especially if there were plenty of people around as a buffer.

She also suggests bringing children above the age of 6 into the decision-making process about how they spend the holidays.

Above all the child should get a message from his parents that "We each love you and we each are willing to share you."

es); dry sand and "plumbers" candles. These are five-inch candles and are available in hardware stores as well as grocery stores.

To make a luminaria:

1. Fold down the top of each bag approximately one inch to form a cuff. This gives the bag more support.

2. Pour two or three inches of sand into each bag. (You could use kitty litter, but it costs more).

3. Put one candle squarely in the center of the sand in each bag.

Line your driveway and walks with the luminarias.

Remember that these are to be used as outside lighting only. Do not place the bags too close to buildings or shrubbery. Check periodically to make sure the candles are upright. Be sure to snuff out all the candles before you go to bed.

Daniel's Den

By Emory Daniels

Memories of days past

(The following Daniels Den was a holiday favorite for many Observer readers in 1970, a time when Jimmy Hoffa was known to be alive in prison.)

Dave Beck and Jimmy Hoffa may have been guilty of graft, tax evasion, and an assortment of misdoings but they deserve credit for one thing — getting the kids out of galvanized washtubs.

It wasn't that long ago when families without bathtubs stuck their offspring in a galvanized tub, which also was used for washing clothes and vegetables.

Bathing in a galvanized tub in the kitchen is but one memory of my early childhood. Another is having mom wash my hair in the kitchen sink with one of those off-red rubber hoses which connect to the kitchen faucet.

How were we to know other people shampooed their hair under a shower and washed in a bathtub in a bathroom? Our buddies also bathed in the kitchen. Didn't everybody?

We didn't think it unusual, either, to walkout outdoors to the outhouse. We had heard about inside plumbing but it wasn't until later in life, when we visited out city cousins that we actually did out "sittin" inside.

Mom also cut our hair, and we wore blue jeans and flannel shirts to school and didn't know that made us poor. Our home was in the country, and we all shared the same experiences. A two-room school house has a way of restricting one's social horizons.

Because our buddies ate the same way, we didn't think about being poor just because we were served an abundance of homemade vegetable soup, beef and noodles, stew, chili, pancakes, fried cornmeal mush, meatloaf, sherpherds pie and hash.

You see, dad was a truck driver and, before the days of Dave Beck, truck drivers just took it for granted they were supposed to be poor. But Beck thought - otherwise. He may have abused his power, but he didn't abuse his drivers.

A CHILD HAS to get older, and mix with kids from other neighborhoods, before he really understands his family is poor.

By that time, though, he's been poor for so long that the discovery doesn't really matter.

My discovery came the year my folks didn't have the money to buy us Christmas gifts. We opened packages that year and found used toys and boxes with frayed corners. Most may have been Goodfellow toys, but I did learn that one had once belonged to my grandfather.

That was a memorable Christmas — only because it was the year I understood, as a boy of seven, how really poor we were.

We kids didn't know what the Teamsters Union was, and I had never heard about Dave Beck until the headlines carried the news of his arrest.

As a young boy, I listened to the radio the night Beck was taking the Fifth Amendment before some Congressional committee. I can remember wondering silently why my dad wore that Teamsters pin when Beck was such a bad man.

In high school, I learned about unions and understood more. But it wasn't until college, when Hoffa was appearing before another Congressional committee, that I could see the faint form of a halo above these two heads.

You see, we kids started dressing better in junior high, and in my freshman year mom actually served us a sirloin steak at home.

Our family had moved up to the lower middle class without anybody really knowing it.

There's not much difference between being poor and not being poor. When you quit being poor, it's a gradual thing and is discovered only in retrospect.

And that retrospect also told me that Dave and Jimmy did a whole lot for a large number of families who were kept together by the once meager wages of a truck driver.

Today, truck drivers do all right and a lot of the credit goes to Dave Beck.

So Merry Christmas Dave and Jimmy, and God bless you both during these holiday days — wherever you are.

Candle power: An

Luminarias mean little candle lights.

Not only do they conserve energy, but they are inexpensive to make.

Luminarias had their origin in Spanish territory, in what is now New Mexico. They were set out to lead a path to each house, as a symbol of the first Christmas and the lighting of bonfires by shepherds to lead the way to the manger in Bethlehem.

In previous years, there have been some luminarias in and around Plymouth and Canton. Churches and boys scouts have sold the kits; and Plymouth Mayor Mary Childs has been instrumental in getting them set out in the area around her home. There have been luminarias at St. John's Episcopal and First Methodist churches.

But the Christmas Eve effect has been a little spoiled in the past two years as rain has dampened the lights.

If you are interested in making your own, you can pray for snow and not rain, and pick up some sand at the Department of Public works yard,on Arthur St. according to the mayor.

To make a luminaria, you need small brown or white paper bags (10 or 11-inch-

Tree trimming has deep roots

Don't you believe it.

Like most Christmas traditions, tree trimming came to this country with the European immigrants.

It is difficult to trace the beginnings of the custom because of the myths surrounding it.

One of them is that Martin Luther started the tradition. The story goes that he was attempting to explain to his wife and children the beauty of a snow-covered forest under a glistening star-speckled sky. According to the legend, he cut a fir tree, dragged it into the nursery and put some candles onto the branches.

WHAT IS KNOWN is that in ancient times trees were worshipped by many people. Gifts were placed on the branches as sacrifices to the deities.

The practice of giving gifts to others was introduced later by the Christians.

The earliest written record of Christmas trees is from 1521 in the Province of Alsace in the upper Rhine in Germany. Another reference is from Strasburg in 1605.

"At Christmas, fir trees are set up in rooms and hung with roses cut from paper of many colors, apples, wafers, etc" according to one ancient book.

Until the early 1800s, the use of Christmas trees was mainly a custom only in Germany. Historians cannot determine why in about 20 to 30 years the practice spread throughout Europe.

It is believed that tree trimming possibly grew out of a practice by early forest dwellers. They placed food in trees at night so it would be out of reach of prowling animals.

COOKIES WERE added to the trees in the shape of flowers, bells, stars, angels, hearts and animals.

Then came the wax candles, ribbons, a star for the top, nuts, fruits covered with bright-colored paper, dolls and glitterhng strings of beads and other ornaments.

Before the introduction of electric lights, wax candles caused serious fire hazards in most homes. For this reason, candles were only placed on the Christmas trees for a few hours during the holiday season.

Christmas tree traditions are as varied as the different ornaments on the tree.

An old family custom in Scandanavia was for the parents to decorate the tree in secret on Christmas Eve. Then the doors of the parlor would dramatically open and the children would rush in to gaze at it.

IT IS ALWAYS anti-climactic to take a Christmas tree down.

The Victorians had a solution to that.

The sweetmeats and the fruit remained on the tree until Twelfth Night when they were taken down. Then all the children would join in and happily munch the pleasures of Christmas.

Their doors are open all year-round here

By BETTY MASSON

Times are tough in Tennessee. The job is unrewarding and the dollars won't stretch to cover heat, food, and clothes.

You read about the big salaries the automobile workers are making in Detroit and your friends write about how well they are doing.

So you pack up the kids, yourselves and the dog, and you hope the old car will make it.

Two weeks later, you still have no job, your friend's three-bedroom house is almost aflame with friction between his children and your children and his wife and your wife — and the money is running out.

Where do you turn for help?

FOR MANY, the answer is the Salvation Army. It's often the first port of call in an economic storm.

The Plymouth Salvation Army has referred six families such as these, needing long-term help, to the Army's new emergency shelter in Detroit near Tiger Stadium in the past few months.

Between 140 and 150 persons are sheltered here each night. Children are cared for during the day while parents look for jobs and talk to county and state social workers.

The Salvation Army is most visible at Christmas time with its bell-ringers and kettles for donations, but its work goes on year-round.

There are many, many people who need short-term help, said Plymouth Salvation Army corps commander Bill Harfoot.

There's the man who is suddenly laid off work — and that seems to happen a lot just at Christmas time — or the senior citizen who needs help when social security checks won't stretch to cover fuel bills. And there's the family meeting the cost of an unexpected illness.

There are state and county agencies to help in times like these, said Harfoot, but there is often an interval of a week or two before all the forms can be filled out, and the help actually in hand.

CHRISTMAS GIVING helps with the Army's work year round, but in giving and receiving the Army is particularly busy at this time of the year. Last year, the Plymouth corps helped provide Christmas dinners for about 75 Plymouth, Canton and Western Westland families. They gave out 414 toys to children and shoes and clothing to more than 900 recipients.

They made Christmas a lot merrier for many.

"We wouldn't have a Christmas without you." That's what Dorothy Moyer and Harfoot hear often.

Mrs. Moyer and Lucille McKinney work with families in need year round.

They go on visiting families whose names were given to them at Christmas time after Christmas to see if they need further help.

Getting ready for Christmas has been on the minds of Harfoot and his staff for two months now. Salvation Army kettles and bell ringing began the day after Thanksgiving, but the schedules for service clubs and other volunteers who staff them were set up long before.

Lt. Willaim Harfoot of the Plymouth Salvation Army and Dorothy Noyer, the center's secretary, remind the community that "caring" is a year-round job. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

The hours the kettles can be staffed, and consequently the donations, depend on these volunteers.

The weekend of Dec. 7-8 has been set aside for the Plymouth Kiwanis clubs to ring the bells. The following weekend, the Plymouth Rotary Club will take over.

Christmas mail appeals went out just before Thanksgiving.

This year, principals of all Plymouth-Canton Schools have been asked to collect contributions of canned foods for the corps. Some schools, among them West Middle School, already have been doing this for years.

These canned goods are used not only for the Army's famed Christmas baskets, which also contain certificates for turkeys and other perishables, but they are needed year-round for emergencies.

Harfoot is hoping that the Plymouth corps will be able to send some as contributions to the Detroit shelter this year.

Gift problems solved with assist to charity

Got the Christmas Gift Giving Blues?

Why not avoid the search for the impossible this year and make donations to charitable organizations in the names of friends and relatives who have everything?

Throughout the area, agencies are working to help the victims of disease and handicaps — often on strained budgets. Send a contribution to one of these worthy groups and you'll not only be helping out the less fortunate but exemplifying the true meaning of Christmas.

Aunt Maimi may not need another purse, but she might be pleased that a contribution was made in her name. Often these gifts are made upon the death of a loved one, but why not make a contribution in celebration of life?

When selecting a charity that needs your help, don't overlook community groups like the Jaycees, Rotary, Kiwanis, Junior Womens Clubs, Lions, American Assocation of University Women and others.

All use the money they raise to provide scholarships or help the less fortunate. A phone call to city hall or the local chamber of commerce office will help you discover all the groups working within your community.

The Detroit Institute of Arts, Science Center and Historical Museum can always use an assist. And don't forget the Detroit Zoo's program for feeding its animals.

MANY LOCAL stores sell cards and calendars from the United Nation's Children's Fund (UNICEF).

Before making your contribution, be sure to contact the group to find out how best to handle the donation. Names and addresses of just a few groups that need your help follow:

Movarians started custom of the putz

By W.W. EDGAR

Want an old-fashioned Christmas?
Then bring back the old-time putz.
A Christmas putz? Never heard of it?

Well, the putz is the most important part of the yuletide home decorations and customs of the Moravians in the east — a custom forgotten by many.

A Christmas putz is a platform erected in the living room where the Christmas tree is placed. Moravians would not think of merely placing the tree on a small stand and shoving it in a corner.

THE PUTZ can take on many features, bringing about a friendly contest among neighbors in the smaller towns.

After building the platform the rest is left to the builder's imagination. In many cases an electric train, with switches and railroad stations, is run around the platform.

USUALLY WHEN the putz is completed, a sign of welcome is hung on the front door of the home.

Two of the finest Christmas putzes built in the Moravian country in the east were located in Bethlehem, Pa. — home of the Bethlehem Steel Works.

The early settlers in the community had named the passing river the Jordan River, and then populated several towns and named them after biblical cities such as Bethlehem, Emaus and Nazareth.

The Bethlehem Steel Co. started it off by erecting a huge star atop old South Mountain and lighting it at night. This Star of Bethlehem could be seen for miles.

Then an enterprising chap decided to duplicate it in the front room of his home. He arranged what looked like a mountain by placing a sheet over a huge pillow. On this he placed a star and then a hose up in the corner of the room behind the tree, to form a fall and a stream.

As a starter he ignored the customary evergreen tree. Instead, he obtained the top of a sassafras tree — the type with the sticky limbs.

On the tree he ran an electric wire down the branches and covered them with cotton to give the entire tree the effect of being out in the snow. For light he used blue bulbs.

On the platform of the putz he used pillows and white bed sheets to give the appearance of a mountainous country.

Mixed in with the mountains he took a series of mirrors and placed them flat on the platform to give the impression of lakes. Then he covered the entire putz with imitation snow.

It was a sight to behold the wise men coming over that mountain.

Whether it be an original work of art or whether it be a beautifully framed reproduction, art is a gift of beauty that is always and forever appreciated.

By NANCY AUSTIN

If you are a dieter, chances are that you renewed your dieting efforts in September after a hectic summer. You have probably lost a few pounds and are eager to keep on losing.

Also you secretly are worried about the upcoming holiday season and its effect on your weight-loss plan.

You don't want to ruin your efforts, but maybe don't know how to handle the problems that occur at this time of year. Maybe you are actually frightened.

The following ideas may help you get through the season and emerge refreshed rather than depressed over a weight gain. Maybe, too, with these ideas, some hard work and motivation, you may even lose a few pounds.

• Gear up psychologically for the battle — and that is exactly what is ahead of you. Visualize yourself as a slimmer person on Jan. 1. Keep that image in your head at all times.

• Try to maintain some kind of a schedule. This time of the year is devastating to a routine. Do your best to eat at regular times so you don't starve one minute and gorge yourself the next.

• Plan ahead, no matter what the event. If you are going to a cocktail party don't go on an empty stomach. Eat a light protein snack about 20 mintues before you leave your house. This will take the edge off your appetite by the time you arrive.

If you are going to a dinner party in a private home, you may find it helpful to prepare for the inevitable remarks: "Go ahead and have a little. You can go on your diet tomorrow." Sometimes your friends are your worst enemies.

Be polite but firm in refusing food you don't care to eat.

• Holiday shopping can drive you to the point of exhaustion. Try to pace yourself. Chances are you will eat more when you are tired.

The reason for this phenomenon is that you have less resistance to temptation. In addition, you are less likely to prepare a wholesome meal and will snack on the first thing available in the refrigerator or the cupboard.

• Too much self-denial can make you feel like a martyr.

Don't feel sorry for yourself about all the temptations you are resisting. If you can't overcome the temptation, or are really experiencing a craving, then have a bite of whatever it is you want. But control the amount you eat.

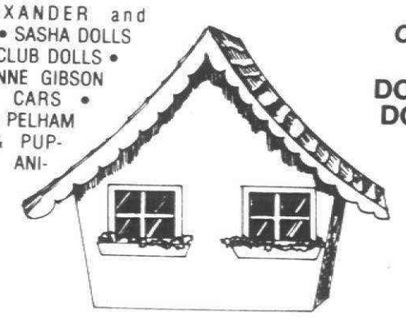

Above all, keep in mind that it really is the taste you are craving, not the whole piece. Take a little taste, and savor every morsel. You'll find this method refreshingly satisfying.

• If you are used to counting calories, you'll find it difficult. Don't give up the practice entirely because of time restraints. Even if you don't count calories, be sure to write everything down that you are eating. This, in itself, will help remind you how well you are doing.

• If you plan to eat in a restaurant, plan ahead. Decide before you go that you will order something from the menu that is not swimming in gravies or sauces. Seafood or poultry is a wise selection.
