Canton, Westland will finance water main

Canton and Westland officials have outlined a proposal to sell up to $4 million worth of bonds in order to cure both communities' water pressure woes.

Supervisor Noel Culbert said he and Westland Mayor Tom Taylor have reached a tentative agreement to form a joint water authority. The authority would sell bonds to finance construction of a water main in Livonia.

Engineers say the main would increase water pressure in Westland and Canton. The low water pressure problem prompted the Michigan Public Health Department last fall to impose a moratorium on additional water line extensions in both communities.

Canton attorneys are expected to meet with Taylor in Westland today (Thursday) to discuss the contract language which would establish the authority. Culbert expects to present the authority proposal to the township board later this month after details of the plan are ironed out.

A major kink in the plan involves the method under which Detroit — owner of the proposed main — would pay back the communities for their expense.

ACCORDING TO CULBERT, the bonding consultant firm of Miller, Canfield, Paddock & Stone recommended that Canton and Westland sell the bonds, instead of Detroit.

According to Culbert, the western Wayne County communities enjoy higher credit ratings than Detroit. The supervisor also believes that construction of the main will begin sooner if Westland and Canton arrange for the financing.

The timetable is an important consideration for Canton and Westland officials.

Both Taylor and Culbert have said that the state moratorium on water line extensions has hampered needed industrial development in their communities. Only those projects which were enrolled in the site plan process at the time the moratorium was imposed will be allowed to tap into the water system.

Both officials hope that construction of the main can begin this spring. Culbert expressed hope that the water line will be complete by late fall 1980.

The supervisor maintains that a lawsuit filed against Detroit by numerous suburban communities over sewer rate structures has held up construction of the main.

"Detroit agreed to build this main a long time ago. It should have been built in 1974 or 1975," Culbert said. "They claim that the litigation clouds their ability to sell bonds."

LAST SEPTEMBER, the Canton Township board voted to share the cost of building the Stark Road main with Westland. At the time, the cost of the main was projected at $2 million.

But Culbert now says that the proposed Canton-Westland authority will be empowered to sell up to $4 million worth of bonds.

Culbert said Detroit officials told the township last summer that the main would cost $2 million. However the city recently completed preliminary cost estimates and revised its estimate to $4 million.

Still undecided is the manner in which Detroit will pay back Westland and Canton for the expense of constructing the main.

Taylor has suggested that Detroit issue credits to the communities for water service.

Culbert says Canton and Westland officials must also agree to the percentage which each community will pay for construction of the main.

Culbert maintains that Canton — with an estimated population of 45,000 — should pay less than Westland. He pegged Westland's population at 90,000.

The supervisor said Canton may choose to use a portion of its $4 million surplus water fund to finance a part of its share in the project.

"Those are just the details we'll have to work out," he said.

According to Taylor, the bond sale will not require a vote of the people under the Headlee Amendment. The bonds proposed to be sold are revenue bonds, which use water bill receipts as collateral.

Lowest since 1970

New home building slows to crawl

In November, home construction activity hit its lowest mark in Canton Township since August, 1970.

Supervisor Noel Culbert reports that only four building permits for single-family homes were issued last month. That is the lowest monthly figure since August, 1970, when two permits for new home construction were issued.

The slump follows a decade of booming construction activity in the township.

Although November is typically a slow month for construction, Culbert attributes last month's building figures to a depressed economy and high interest rates.

In November, 1978, for example, the building department issued 93 permits for new-home construction. That compares to the 184 permits issued in November, 1977; the 51 issued in November, 1976; and the 62 issued in November, 1975.

Culbert predicts the slowdown will continue at least until next spring.

"I'm pleased in a way," the supervisor said of the slump. "It will give us a breathing spell."

The township's mushrooming population and construction boom has been a major political issue for the past several years.

Officials have talked of the need to slow down growth because of inadequate roads and the burden which an escalating population has placed on schools.

Building department employees have felt the impact of the slump, however.

Two building inspectors were laid off in October because of a decline in home construction activity. Culbert said a third building department employee was due for layoff this week.

The building department, which is self-supporting, derives its revenues from permits and inspection fees.

Culbert expects revenues from commercial construction, building additions and other construction activity will be sufficient to support the remainder of the department this winter.

He said construction in those areas has not shown the same decline as the home building industry.

New planning assistant is also elected official

Dave Nicholson — who was hired as Canton's assistant planner Tuesday night — knows what it's like to sit on both sides of municipal commission tables.

At Tuesday's township board meeting, Nicholson sat in the audience while Canton officials discussed the merits of a permanent assistant planner's post.

But on Monday night, he sat with elected officials in Ypsilanti to make decisions for that community.

Nicholson, who has held Canton's assistant planner job on a temporary basis since last July, is serving his second term as Ypsilanti City Councilman. He was first elected to that post in April 1977.

He now comes on board as permanent assistant to Canton Planner Jim Kosteva. Nicholson is finishing graduate work in urban planning at the University of Michigan.

Nicholson, 28, calls his dual role as a municipal employee and city legislator "a very unique situation."

"It gives me better insight into why the township board arrives at their decisions," said Nicholson. "In Ypsilanti, I can better understand day-to-day operations."

Nicholson, who has attended numerous township board meetings since July, has brought some Canton ideas home to Ypsilanti.

He recently convinced city council members to end their meetings at 11 p.m., for example. The policy was implemented by the Canton board last year to put an end to early-morning sessions.

Nicholson's job with Canton Township is his first as a professional planner. He is responsible for site plan review, rezoning analyses and other planning matters.

His salary, fringe benefits and length of employment are currently up in the air. The township board agreed to hire him on a contractual basis, and those items will have to be negotiated.

Nicholson holds a bachelor's degree in sociology from Eastern Michigan University. He has almost completed work on a master's degree in urban planning from UM.

Cops aid woman trapped in house

A 26-year-old Canton woman was a prisoner in her own house for 16 hours last week after her estranged husband took the keys to all the home's deadbolt locks and removed the telephones.

Canton police forced open the door of the house at 8 a.m. Friday after a neighbor complained of someone shattering windows in the house.

According to police, the woman had been locked in her home since 4 p.m. the previous day.

Lt. Larry Stewart said police attempted to obtain a warrant against the man on Friday.

But, according to Stewart, police were told by the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office that no law prohibits locking a person in his or her own home.

Police obtained an assault and battery warrant against the 30-year-old man, however, on an earlier charge of beating his wife. The man was released on $50 bond.

He will be arraigned on the assault and battery charge within the next 20 days.

Police would not release the names of either the husband or wife. According to police, they were recently separated and had filed for divorce.

Stewart theorized that the woman did not attempt to break the windows of her home until Friday morning because she thought her husband would return and release her.

The woman told police that she and her estranged husband had argued Thursday afternoon, before she decided to take a shower.

According to police, the woman discovered her husband had left after completing her shower. She said her husband had taken her purse, keys and all the telephones in the house.

Police said the woman was alone during the incident.

Flames displace family of 7

A family of seven was searching for a place to sleep Monday night after flames and smoke caused an estimated $25,000 in damages to their Windsor Park home.

No one was injured in the blaze that erupted in the home of Bill and Catherine Fulkerson at 7209 Irongate Monday morning.

But Fire Chief Mel Paulun estimated damages to the house at $25,000 and said the kitchen was destroyed by flames. He said the remainder of the multi-level house suffered extensive fire and smoke damage.

According to Paulun, firefighters were able to rescue the family's pets from the burning house. The Fulkerson couple and their five children were not at home when the fire broke out at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

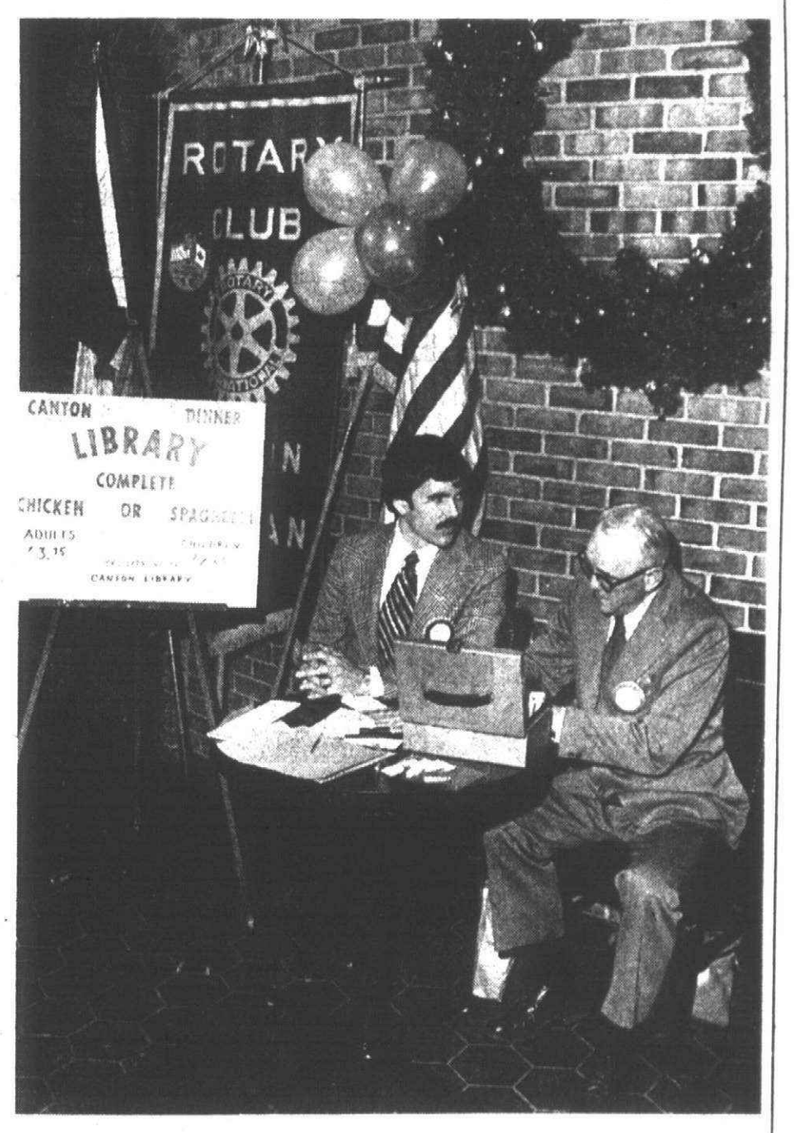

Paulun tentatively attributed the cause of the fire to a kitchen burner which may have been left on.

The Fulkersons were visibly upset and unwilling to talk about the fire Monday afternoon while they were temporarily staying with neighbors.

"At least the kids are safe. That's all I care about right now," said Mrs. Fulkerson. "But there's nothing left to the house. It's gone."

Dealers' car sales picture varies

By W.W. EDGAR

In these days of spiraling inflation, the automobile business in the Plymouth community doesn't seem to be suffering much.

In some cases new car sales have dropped drastically. In others the dealers are either holding their own or showing an increase over the same period last year.

But if you take the word of Don Massey, the Cadillac dealer on Ann Arbor Road, "business is much better than it has a right to be."

After making this strange-sounding remark, Massey said that the market is puzzling because the public is going for the higher-priced cars. He reports that he can't keep any in stock.

"Let me put anything priced at $18,000 or above in the show room, and it will not be there long.

"I even feel a bit guilty driving this high-priced model ($25,000) when I can't get any to sell.

"In the lower priced cars I am down about 15 per cent, or about 300 cars. But that's not bad with the economy as it is. I still have about 70 of the late 1979 models but I expect they will be gone in a month."

AT COLONY Chrysler-Plymouth the sales manager said that business is better than it was at this time last year.

"Of course," he said, "you must consider that we do a lot of fleet business and we have our own leasing firm that helps.

"We have received only three 1980 models of the New Yorker thus far. And we could sell those as fast as we get them."

Even during this period of moving his agency from Ann Arbor Road to the new location on Sheldon Road, Bob Jeannotte finds that he is a few cars above the same period last year.

"We did have a bad month or so, but that's over now and in the new place we expect to do better than last year."

THERE ALSO was a cheerful note at American Motors in that sales have been on the rise for the past three months.

"Ever since the new models were announced there has been an upswing in sales. And with the new Eagle, the four-wheel drive, things look brighter than ever," Clarence DuCharme commented.

Speaking of the Eagle, which he says has had fine public acceptance, he explained that the company had set a goal of 40,000 Eagle models. That has been boosted to 60,000 and now they are talking of 70,000 — all the company can make in its Kenosha, Wisc. plant.

BUT FORD and Chevrolet report a signifigant drop in sales locally.

"We have been hit pretty hard," Leo Calhoun, the Ford dealer, stated. "We are down about 15 per cent from this point last year, and the way things are going with the economy, business may get much worse."

The story was much the same with Lou LaRiche, the Chevrolet dealer.

"We're down about 300 cars from the same time last year," he said. "That would be about 15 percent and things don't look too good for the start of the new year."

But, even with the mixed conditions, none of the dealers are pessimistic. On the contrary, they expect an upturn in the auto business not later than the summer months. And they point out the fact that it is an election year when business usually takes a turn upward.

In the meantime, Don Massey's comment, "business is better than it has a right to be," seems to sum up the story of the auto business in the Plymouth community.

Student record privacy rights are explained

Without prior consent, only parents and authorized individuals with legitimate educational interests will have access to a child's educational records at Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Parents may make an appointment to inspect and review their child's records at his/her school.

If, upon review, they believe information in the records is inaccurate, misleading or inappropriate, the parents can challenge that information.

If there is agreement, steps will be taken to amend or correct the information in the record.

THAT ASSURANCE was given this week by Florence Beier, administrative assistant for community relations, while reviewing the district's policy on the privacy of student records.

If agreement on correcting a record isn't reached, a hearing will be scheduled providing parents with the opportunity to present their views and reasons for the challenge, Ms. Beier said.

Parents may bring to the hearing, at their expense, any individual who may be of assistance, including legal counsel.

Following the hearing, should there be a failure to reach an agreement, parents have the right to appeal the decision to the superintendent.

Parents also have the right to enter into the record a statement of the issue as they see it.

These access and challenge rights are transferred to the child upon his/her 18th birthday or when the student is admitted to a college or university.

The Canton Singers led the Christmas caroling at Monday's tree-lighting ceremony in front of township hall.

Santa, caroling spice tree lighting ceremony

The event everyone was waiting for came shortly after.

None other than Santa Claus drove up to township hall in a horse and carriage supplied by residents Glen Hornback and Lonnie Cisco.

Mr. Claus gladly opened his lap to the gangs of kids who had eagerly awaited his appearance.

The children crowded around old St. Nick for a chance to recite their Christmas wish-list. Candy canes were awarded to all the good boys and girls to top off the event.

Scores of residents, officials and sparkly-eyed kids put on their warmest clothes and lifted their voice in song Monday night at Canton Township's first annual Christmas tree-lighting ceremony.

Supervisor Noel Culbert plugged in the cord that illuminated the tree in brightly-colored lights donated by planning commissioner Bart Berg.

The Canton Singers, under the direction of Gordon Limburg, led observers in a rendition of "Jingle Bells" and other favorite tunes.

A hug with Santa was the event 3-year-old Robert Caron was waiting for.

Board awards tax break for 3rd time to industry

Clark Block & Supply Co., which has been operating at 4930 Belleville Road for the last 32 years, won the unanimous approval of the township board Tuesday night for a 50 percent tax abatement on a new addition.

The tax break, which will run for 12 years, will save the company more than $19,000 in annual property taxes.

The lost taxes would have been split among the Wayne-Westland School District, Canton Township, Wayne County and the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

Township Clerk John Flodin pegged Canton's share of the lost taxes at $2,500 annually.

But township officials say that the tax exemption, made possible under Public Act 198, is needed to create a favorable reputation for Canton among industrial developers.

The break granted by the township board to Clark is the maximum allowed by law.

Flodin says the policy of granting the maximum is aiding the township in its drive to encourage industrial development.

Township officials say more industry is needed in Canton Township to ease the tax burden of residents.

Three firms have now received the 50 percent tax break for 12 years. They include Clark — a manufacturer of bricks and cinder blocks; Diamond International; and Canton Machine Blocks.

A fourth firm, Daykin Electric Corp. has submitted a tax break application under the Industrial Development act for the new facility it plans to occupy on Ronda Drive. Daykin plans to vacate its facility in Livonia in order to make the Canton move.

The tax break granted to Clark Block Supply Co. applies only to the new warehouse which the firm is building. The value of the new building and machinery is estimated at $1.3 million.

County parks face cuts and a bleak winter

The Wayne County Parks Division has $1.2 million to spend next year, but it isn't even enough to keep the restrooms open.

"It's just going to be a type of caretaker operation," said Edwin Mika, Parks and Recreation Superintendent.

Meanwhile, county officials are calling for pulling Wayne County out of the Huron-Clinton Metroparks system.

THE COUNTY Board of Commissioners approved the county parks funds last week as part of the $281 million general fund budget for 1980. The new budget year began Dec. 1.

This year's parks budget of $2.5 million was cut by $1.3 million. The Wayne County Road Commission, which operates the parks division, had requested $1.9 million for 1980. Parks maintenance is funded by general county tax revenues.

Unless more money is directed toward the parks, Mika said maintenance next spring will remain minimal.

"We will not maintain softball diamonds or open up comfort stations," he said.

"At the moment we'll take care of cutting the grass in the spring and removing hazardous trees this winter."

AMONG THE county parks affected are the 17-mile Middle Rouge Parkway (Hines Park), Lola Valley and Bell Creek in Redford Township, William Holliday near Westland Shopping Center, and the Lower Rouge Parkway in Wayne and Inkster.

All county parks buildings have been closed for the winter since early November. There are no park skating rinks or toboggan runs provided as in past years.

The 89 parks employees, who work for the road commission, have been transferred to other road commission departments.

Mika predicted there would be a "65 percent reduction" in parks division employees. That means about 31 would maintain the five county parks next spring.

The 58 other parks employees would be reassigned to other road commission work.

IN A RELATED matter, two county commissioners from Detroit have proposed that the county withdraw from the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority and a joint Detroit-Wayne County authority be established to operate parks and recreation services in the city and county.

The proposal by Commissioners Jarrette Simmons and Clarence Young, both Democrats, is under study by the county's lawyers, a county board committee and Mika's office.

Mika said he had no comment on the proposal.

Huron-Clinton Director David O. Laidlaw said, "I'm not going to get excited about it unless they adopt it."

LAIDLAW SAID state law doesn't allow a county to withdraw from the regional park authority. The law would have to be changed by the Michigan Legislature to allow Wayne to drop out of Huron-Clinton.

"That (changing the law) usually takes minutes," Laidlaw joked.

Huron-Clinton levies a one-quarter mill tax within the county that nets the authority between $3.5 and $4 million annually. That is about half the park authority's tax revenue, Laidlaw said.

Huron-Clinton has 6,215 acres of parks in Wayne County, including the Lower Huron Metropark in Belleville, Willow Metropark near New Boston and Oakwoods Metropark near Flat Rock. The Lake Erie Metropark near Gibralter is the newest regional park in the county.

Under the commissioners' proposal, the regional parks tax collected in Wayne would go to the Detroit-Wayne authority which would operate all of the parks, including Huron-Clinton's, in the county.

"They're casting around for bucks," Laidlaw said.

Detroit has also cut back its parks and recreation services drastically this year.

Tips to tantalize spinach

It's cousins include Mangelwurzel and Orach. It belongs to the Goosefoot family. But your offspring will never play with theirs.

It helps prevent night blindness and fights infection. It also helps hold body cells together. What is this versatile, yet elusive dinner guest? One final clue: Popeye likes it, but children usually don't. SPINACH!

Here's how to change spinach-haters into spinach-tasters. Even foods that are normally rejected by the finicky will be eagerly tested by them when they've had a hand. The trick is in allowing your children to handle most of the preparation.

They're bound to want to try out their own cooking, so turn them into do-it-myselfers. It is simple, but nutritious, for spinach is high in vitamin A. Sophisticated enough to serve to dinner guests, yet appealing to fussy young eaters, this is truly a gooey concoction. Here's how:

SPINACH BALLS:

2 10-oz. pkg. frozen spinach, thawed.
8 ounces Muenster cheese, grated.
2 eggs — beaten.
½ tsp. salt.
¼ tsp. pepper.
bread crumbs.

The key is to allow the child to do as much as possible, so if the Muenster cheese you have isn't grated, let your child do this job. Similarly, your child can beat the egg, add to it the seasonings and then mix in the cheese. Set aside.

Here's a part they're sure to enjoy. The spinach must be squeezed out before adding to the cheese mixture. So little by little, pick up parts of the spinach and sqeeze out the water, then place in the bowl with the cheese and egg mixture. When this is complete, thoroughly blend all the ingredients together, except the bread crumbs, by squashing, squeeking and mashing with the hands.

Now you are ready to form the mixture into little balls. Pick up a small amount of the spinach concoction and shape it into a small ball. Then roll the ball in the bread crumbs and place on a cookie sheet. Do this until all the spinach mixture is used up.

Place cookie sheet in 350 degree oven, wait for 20 minutes, remove, and taste while still warm. Popeye would be proud!

Patricia Bordman has taught elementary school and conducted workshops and lectures on education. While attending Oakland University graduate school, she became interested in photography. She and her husband have two daughters and live in Farmington Hills.

Fussy eaters will sample the spinach if they've had a hand in concocting it. (Photo by Pat Bordman)

County officials deny deal-making in M-275 OK

By TIM RICHARD and TOM LONERGAN

Oakland County made no deals to win State Transportation Commission approval of the M-275 freeway plan.

So say County Executive Daniel T. Murphy and Managing Director John Grubba of the Oakland County Road Commission.

"I don't know who's starting that rumor," Murphy said last week when asked if he would mute his criticism of a rapid transit subway in the Woodward corridor, as proposed by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

"Tuesday night it will be pretty damn clear we haven't made a deal," said Murphy last week.

He referred to his plans to testify against a subway in a public hearing scheduled by SEMTA for Dec. 4.

MURPHY SAID he had had lunch the day before the M-275 vote with Lawrence Patrick, a Detroiter newly appointed to the state Transportation Commission this year by Gov. William G. Milliken.

The county executive said they discussed only the merits of M-275 — a 22-mile, $98 million freeway which would extend I-275 from Novi across rural western Oakland County to I-75 at Clarkson.

Patrick, a Republican, voted in the 4-2 majority for the freeway the following day.

Murphy was reminded of a deal which Wayne County Board Chairman Richard Manning, D-Redford, had tried to cut with the city of Detroit involving the SEMTA plan and the "super sewer" which western Wayne interests want. Manning says William Ciluffo, Mayor Coleman Young's assistant, reneged on the deal.

Said Murphy: "You can't trust Ciluffo from here to here," indicating a 10-foot space on the carpet.

GRUBBA CALLED M-275 and a subway "separate issues."

The chief operating officer of the road commission, long a vehement opponent of SEMTA's rapid transit plans, vowed "I will not tone down" his remarks on the subway.

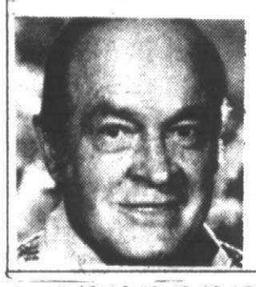

He said he talked to William Marshall, state AFL-CIO president and a member of the State Transportation Commission, prior to the vote. But Grubba denied making a deal with Patrick or Marshall, who was already considered a pro-M-275 vote.

At the Nov. 28 transportation commission meeting, Marshall said, "I'm just as serious as anyone else in getting on with developing a balanced transportation policy in the state."

He heaped scorn on "textbook environmentalists, who write a few textbooks and pamphlets and call themselves 'experts'. Most of those so-called experts never worked a day of their lives at hard labor."

Significantly, Marshall is a former member and chairman of the SEMTA board.

Dealer realizes dream in Plymouth showroom

By W.W. EDGAR

Bob Jeannotte looked out the window of his new ulta-modern Pontiac showroom on Sheldon Road and admitted, as his eyes scanned the M-14 expressway, that it was a dream come true.

"Would you believe it, this is the culmination of 17 years in the automobile business and I got into it by accident."

As his sales staff busied themselves getting their new offices in order and the big showroom ready to receive the 1980 models, Jeanotte recalled some of his experiences, how he happened to get connected with automobiles, and how pleased he was to head up a dealership valued at $2 million.

Bob Jeannotte opened the doors of his new dealership for the first time on Monday.

Raised on Detroit's east side, he attended St. Catherine School and later the University of Detroit.

Although he didn't graduate from U-D, he did pick up enough education to look toward a career as an accountant.

With that background, he tried the advice of Horace Greely to "Go West, young man," and struck out for California in the hope that would be his home for quite a while.

"But there were no jobs available," he recalls.

So Jeanotte returned to Detroit and became a member of the great army of the unemployed. Finally he got a job with the Ray O'Brien Ford agency in St. Clair Shores.

THAT WAS the start. From then on he has spent his life in some sector of the automobile business.

After bounding around in several agencies the big break came when he was hired as a used car salesman by Jim Causley Agency in Ferndale.

That was in 1970. After a year as a salesman he was promoted to manager of used car sales.

By this time all thoughts of a career as an auditor left him and he dreamed of some day having his own dealership — no matter the make of car.

"In 1976 I traveled all around the country from coast to coast, and even down through the Carolinas. I was on the hunt for a dealership.

"And where do you think I found one? Right here in Plymouth. It was the Bruce Craig Pontiac dealership down on Ann Arbor Road."

Now in possession of what he had wanted for years, Jeannotte looked for even greater things.

Rather boxed in on Ann Arbor Road with little or no room to expand, he finally decided on the site close to the new M-14 expressway.

It looked like a big gamble then, being out there with little but empty fields around him, but he already had purchased 10 acres for expansion.

The thing which caused him to make the big decision for the $2 million dealership is that it is close to the expressway and close to what is expected to be 440 acres of light industrial development.

"With the population and industry moving west I am now in a fine location. There is heavy traffic up and down Sheldon Road and, fortunately, only a short way from the only Plymouth exit on the new highway.

"We were holding our own down on Ann Arbor Road. But with the most modern Pontiac agency in the area, I'm hopeful this is the move I have contemplated ever since the day I left the ranks of the unemployed to become a car salesman."

The new dealership on Sheldon near M-14 is valued at about $2 million. (Staff photos by Gary Caskey)

Gifted expert will speak

Roger Taylor, a well-known expert on the education of gifted students, will speak in Plymouth Canton High on Thursday, Dec. 13.

Taylor's presentation will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Canton Little Theater.

Dr. Taylor began teaching gifted and talented students some 10 years ago.

As a classroom teacher, dealing with disadvantaged youth in the East St. Louis area, he felt the impact of frustra tion that came with knowing a student was gifted but was helpless to nurture that gift.

As a result, Taylor dedicated himself to developing programs specifically designed for gifted and talented children in schools. He now specializes in the areas of program planning, staff development, training and curriculum.

The public is welcome to attend. Admission is free.

Fighting the 'losing' battle

Author gives insight into motivating dieters

Nancy Austin

The greatest gift you can give any dieter is motivation. And the person who figures out how to package motivation would turn into a millionaire overnight.

Eda LeShan probably comes the closest to packaging motivation than anyone else I know of who has tried.

Eda has written a book, "Winning the Losing Battle — Why I Will Never be Fat Again." ($8.95, Crowell Publishers.)

She comes the closest to the root of successful dieting, psychological readiness.

Leshan, author of many magazine articles and contributor to Woman's Day magazine, tells of her own experience in losing 65 pounds.

While her method may not be your way — and she implores you to find your own way — the basis of her experience is the most valuable advice I have seen given anywhere. She learned who she is, to love who she is (even while she is fat), and how to face the new Eda after she reached her goal.

It's a hilarious, moving, sometimes sad, motivating commentary on the life of one person who makes it. But more than that, it gives the reader something or someone to identify with, exposing her most intimate thoughts during the losing process.

You will laugh (she's quite candid), you may cry, and for sure you'll scream "That's me!" And maybe, just maybe, this is the book that can get you moving in the right direction toward permanent weight loss.

I was impressed.

THE MASS MARKET paperback edition of "The Complete Scarsdale Medical Diet" by Herman Tarnower, D.D. and Samm Sinclair Baker will be published by Bantam Books on Jan. 1.

The paperback includes the complete diet, answers to the most frequently asked questions about the diet, plus Scarsdale Diet menus for the budget-conscious, vegetarians, gourmets, plus dozens of recipes. Cost will be $2.75.

THE HEART association has revised their cookbook. The expanded edition includes new and valuable features aimed at blending good taste, quicker cooking and heart-helping advice that can be followed by all Americans.

"The American Heart Assoiciation Cookbook responds to the needs of all Americans for low-calorie, low-fat meals, but it also deals with the problem of preparing healthful meals for your family that are tasty enough for them to want to eat," according to Mary Winston, AHA nutritionist and a co-editor of the cookbook.

The cookbook is designed to help people buy, prepare and serve proper proportions of the food that will help maintain ideal weight, lower the total amount of animal fat and cholesterol eaten, and reduce use of salt.

The book also includes:

- New emphasis on using herbs and spices in place of salt;
- Added emphasis on quick, low-calorie cooking;
- Expanded information on weight control;
- An easy-reference guide to low-calorie between meal snacks;
- More emphasis on meatless recipes and the economical use of meat;
- A new fat-cholesterol calorie chart.

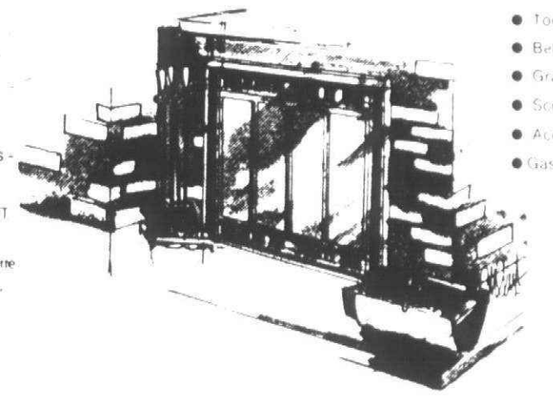

The book has more than 550 recipes tested under the superivison of the assoication's nutritionists.

The American Heart Association Cookbook, published by David McKay Co., Inc., sells for $12.95.

I'd say it is worth every penny.

FINALLY, A book for husbands called (what else) "The Husband's Cookbook" by Mike McGrady. He is also the author of the book, called "The Kitchen Sink Papers: My Life as a Househusband."

Congressman speaks out

An O&E Roundup

Congressmen representing western Wayne and southern Oakland counties split last week as the U.S. House of Representatives rejected a proposed moratorium on construction of nuclear reactors.

The proposed six months construction freeze lost 254-135.

Supporting the moratorium were Reps. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Brodhead, D-Detroit, and David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens. Pursell's 2nd District includes Livonia. Brodhead's 17th District includes Redford, Farmington and Southfield. Bonior's 12th District includes the east side of Greater Rochester.

Opposed were Reps. William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, and William Ford, D-Taylor. Ford's 15th District includes Westland, Garden City and Canton.

Rep. James Blanchard, D-Pleasant Ridge, whose district includes Troy, did not vote.

THE PROPOSAL, an amendment to a $374 million budget authorization for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), was the first House vote regarding the safety of nuclear power since the Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania last March.

Both Brodhead and Pursell said they supported the freeze to send the NRC a message to increase health and safety monitoring of nuclear plants.

"I thought we ought to send them a message that the Congress feels they ought to clean up their act," Brodhead said.

"Health and safety issues have not been, historically, a major concern of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission," Pursell said.

The NRC "ought to come down real hard" on existing nuclear plants, Pursell added. Nuclear plants provide about 13 percent of the country's electricity.

A SPOKESMAN for Broomfield said the congressman "was not prepared to close down a nuclear option completely . . . and that's the way the amendment would have been interpreted."

Brodhead noted that few licenses for nuclear reactors have been approved in recent years because plant construction costs are "astronomical."

"For the time being, it (nuclear power) is not economically feasible," Brodhead said, "and that's the main reason they're not being built."

The NRC now reviews every nuclear license request on a case by case basis. Each license takes up to three years to gain approval, Pursell said.

Red Cross needs blood

The Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the Red Cross is expanding its annual year-end blood drive known as "Save-A-Life Sunday."

The agency's blood centers will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 30, and Monday, Dec. 31.

Because many businesses and industries, whose employees provide the bulk of blood donations, are closed between Christmas and New Year's Day, the Red Cross has sponsored the special blood drive day the past five years.

The Red Cross hopes to collect 1,000 units of blood each day for patients in 75 area hospitals in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, St. Clair and Washtenaw counties.

The western Wayne County blood center is at 15457 Middlebelt in Livonia.

ACCO acquires gaging systems

DANIEL J. KILE

ACCO Industries Inc. of Bridgeport, Conn., has purchased a 40,000-square-foot gaging systems plant in Plymouth.

The plan was acquired from the Industrial & Automation Systems Division of ITT.

The division plant in Plymouth manufactures automated gaging systems, part feeders and metal detectors for mass production lines. Its systems also can perform material handling, testing, and assembly functions.

The division will become part of the Industrial Products Group of ACCO Industries, headed by F. John Pichard, vice president and group executive.

Pichard said the acquisition will strengthen the physical testing systems business of ACCO Industries, which includes on-line systems for hardness, eddy current, and tensile testing.

"We will now have the capability to provide turnkey systems which combine ACCO's testing expertise with the gaging and part feeding expertise of ITT."

Products of the division will continue to be sold through its existing representative organization, supplemented by ACCO's testing equipment sales force.

ACCO Industries is a diversified manufacturer of material handling equipment, chain, wire, and industrial products, and process control instruments. Its annual sales exceed $500 million.

Business Briefs

In 1967 Rafferty was named Industry Man of the Year in recognition of his leadership. He now is a member of the board of directors of the Michigan Association of Recreational Vehicles and Campgrounds (MARVAC), and has served as president of MARVAC which sponsors the Detroit show.

market watch

Stock optimism in order

A growing number of Wall Street analysts are becoming increasingly optimistic concerning the medium-term outlook for stock prices.

While each individual has a pet reason for expecting a better market to emerge, there seems to be almost unanimous agreement that many of the current negative influences are gradually diminishing, and some slight evidence of improvement is beginning to appear.

The principle depressant of stock prices has been the continuing increase in interest rates over the past two years.

A reduction from the peak of 15.75 percent to 15.25 percent in the past few days has lent encouragement that the peak has been seen. It is much to early to assume that this is true.

But there is reason to hope that the rate has reached its top, or at least close to it, because several banks have stated that the demand for loans has declined considerably at this high interest level.

STATED SIMPLY, a bank is little different from any other retail operation. Instead of selling toothpaste or soap, banks sell money.

It is not their own money they sell, but it is the money that they have borrowed from others — basically from their depositors.

The success of a bank's operation rests on its ability to loan money at a higher rate of interest than it costs them to borrow it.

There is a point, however, at which the high cost of borrowing money may make it prohibitive to the borrower.

If the businessman cannot employ the borrowed money in a fashion to earn more income than it will cost him to borrow the money, then he obviously will decline to incur the debt.

As the demand for loans diminishes, and the supply of lendable funds increases as a result of the fallen demand, the natural result should be a trend toward lower interest rates.

It appears that we may have reached this condition.

ANOTHER FACTOR on which the analysts generally agree is a potentially bullish factor — the high amounts of investment funds that are currently placed in short-term interest bearing instruments.

The unprecedented high level of interest rates has encouraged money managers to take advantage of the unusually high income offered by short-term debt instruments of various kinds. These highly favorable investments have overshadowed other types of investments, and have caused funds to leave these other areas in favor of them.

A decline in interest rates, however, will cause the reverse to happen. Any quick reduction in interest might cause a very interesting stock market.

There is common agreement that, by historical comparisons, common stocks generally offer the best values that have existed for many years.

THE MOST broadly accepted yardstick for measuring common stock values is the price-to-earnings ratio. This is a ratio of market price to annual earnings. It tells us how much we have to pay per share for the common denominator of $1 in earnings.

Each company must be judged on its own merits, obviously.

But just to draw one comparison, it is worth noting that the price investors had to pay for that $1 in earnings for IBM was very rarely less than $40 or $50 during the more favorable market years. It is only $12 today.

The writer is with Manley, Bennett, McDonald & Co. in Plymouth.

Oakland politicians call for vote on subway

By TOM LONERGAN

A number of Oakland County residents and politicians agreed on one item Tuesday: They don't want a subway in Detroit.

More than 30 persons, nearly half local public officials, spoke at a public hearing in Pontiac on the 1980 regional transportation plan proposed by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA).

The hearing, held in the County Board of Commissioners auditorium, drew about 120 persons. SEMTA has held a series of public hearings throughout the metropolitan area the past two weeks. They are required before the regional transportation authority makes a final decision on its plan.

SEVEN OAKLAND County officials, led by County Executive Daniel Murphy, told a panel of seven SEMTA Board of Directors members that the proposed Woodward corridor subway would serve too few in the region and cost too much.

Both Murphy and Board of Road Commissioners Chairman Fred Houghten, R-Rochester, called for voter referendums on the light rail transit portion.

Houghten favored a referendum asking Oakland, Wayne and Macomb county voters to choose between an all-bus and SEMTA's "preferred plan," which includes a Woodward light rail line from downtown Detroit to Eight Mile Road. The subway portion would run from downtown to Grand Boulevard.

Murphy said voters should have a say on projected new taxes for regional transportation before any plan takes effect.

SEMTA expects to ask voters in 1982 for an operating tax to cover an estimated deficit of $60-70 million no matter whether an all-bus or combined bus-rail plan is approved.

TEN OF THE 14 residents who spoke opposed the subway.

Lou Geisling, of Bloomfield Hills, a school teacher in Detroit, said SEMTA should pay more attention to the other "power centers" of the region, naming Southfield, Troy, Livonia and several other suburban cities.

"I think it's crazy," he said referring to the subway. "It would begin in nowhere and it would end in nowhere."

"Tell the feds to take back their $600 million bribe. We don't want it," said Dave Miles of Birmingham. The federal government has committed at least $600 million for capital costs of the proposed rapid transportation system. The preferred plan's capital cost is an estimated $1.4 billion, with half going into buses and half into light rail.

While in the minority, several residents staunchly applauded a subway.

Hank Liese of Rochester said he believes in Detroit's renaissance, "as unfashionable as it may be." Liese, who works in the city, supported a subway to McNichols.

"It's time for Detroit to move out of the dark ages as far as mass transit is concerned and into the 20th century."

COUNTY EXECUTIVE Murphy said he's not convinced the subway is needed.

"Instead of creating economic activity, subway construction would simply redistribute existing activity from one part of the region to the other."

Houghten said SEMTA sould "scrap downtown rail entirely," implement an all-bus system and expand commuter rail service on existing railroad rights-of-ways.

Plymouth — Past & Present

Farms owned by health advocate

By SAM HUDSON

Dr. Ralph Pino gives a ride to children of employees who worked on Colony Farms.

(Part III)

Dr. Ralph Pino, founder of Plymouth Colony Farms, was an active member of the Plymouth Grange.

He was chairman of its health committee in the 1960s and in March 1964 he spoke to the Grange on alcoholism and its effect on youth.

In 1965, Pino wrote a series of articles on alcoholism for the Plymouth Observer. It was his contention that alcoholism is cultivated and propagated by those who profit from the sale of alcoholic beverages.

In 1969, Dr. Pino sold his Plymouth Colony Farms property to Stewart Oldford, a real estate developer then located in Plymouth. It was Oldford who built the complex of 48 condominiums and 94 homes that now occupy the 92 acres.

I RECENTLY SPOKE to Mr. Oldford, who now lives in Hartland, Mich. - nine miles north of Brighton.

He recalled that all of the details of the sale of the property were handled by Frank Hubbell, Pino's business manager. But it was Dr. Pino who gave Oldford a personally conducted tour of the farms before the papers were signed.

"He was 80 at the time," says Oldford. "I was a lot younger, but he tired me out. We walked over the entire terrain. He told me about every tree he planted and every bush he nursed.

"For a man of his age, his senses were remarkably keen. At one spot, we came to a patch of clover. Among thousands of clover leafs, he immediately spotted a four-leafed one. I hope my sight is that good if I ever reach 80."

Oldford remembers Dr. Pino as a nature lover and idealist. He says Plymouth Colony Farms was not mechanized. Much of the planting on the place was done personally by Pino, including the placing of the beautiful willows that fringed the pond that served as an idyllic background for the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra during the summer concerts of 1957-59.

Stewart Oldford recalled another example of Dr. Pino's strong constitution.

"It was in February of 1969. There had been a heavy snowfall. The roads around Plymouth were clogged. Few, if any, automobiles could get about.

"Frank Hubbell had asked Dr. Pino to make sure that he got the abstract of the property to my office in Plymouth on the morning of the day.

"I managed to get to my office, but never in the world expected Dr. Pino to make it. I was wrong.

"Shortly after I arrived, Pino walked in with the abstract. He had come by foot three miles through the deep snow from the farms to the city.

"I offered to try to drive him back, but he refused the offer. I'll walk back, he told me. That's how rugged Dr. Pino was at the age of 80."

AFTER THE PROPERTY was sold, the Pinos travelled in Europe and then settled in their new home in Farmington. Dr. Pino died there in 1977.

Pino married twice. His first wife, Maude W. Pino, was active in the YWCA and was a lay leader in the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Detroit. She died in 1970 at age 76.

They had three children, all of whom died before their father, and had four grandchildren.

Dr. Pino was married to Grace Marie Clarke in 1954. Now living in Birmingham, she was very helpful in providing me with information about the doctor and the farms when I interviewed her recently.

Dr. Pino, more than six feet tall and slender in build, liked to keep active. He especially liked to work on the forge at the farms. He loved walking and riding horseback, and often was seen wearing a cowboy hat he acquired on one of his trips to the west.

Dr. Pino was brought up in the Methodist Church, later becoming a Presbyterian. Liberal in this thinking, and considered by many to be a visionary, Pino may have been more pragmatic than many reporters and some of his friends realized.

It was the communal, cooperative aspects of Plymouth Colony Farms that journalists liked to play up in their articles. The Detroit News, for example, on Aug. 6, 1950, referred to the project as "a College of Living" which prepared people for retirement. It said the Colony was demonstrating methods "whereby oldsters can be shown something better than rocking chair retirement after quitting the job."

Actually, according to Mrs. Pino, Dr. Pino thought of the project as a profit-making venture which would provide income for his retirement years. All of the people who worked at Plymouth Colony Farms — and there never were more than eight — were paid employees.

It was when it became apparent that Plymouth Colony Farms was costing him too much money to operate that Dr. Pino decided to bring the venture to an end.

It is futile to speculate on what might have been. Like all utopian projects that have ever been tried, Plymouth Colony Farms could not survive without the driving force that created it.

But there is little doubt that Plymouth would have benefitted if the zoning controversy could have been settled amicably; if Plymouth Colony Farms had developed into a permanent weaving and designing center; and if the Plymouth Symphony Summer Concerts had managed to grow into another Tanglewood.

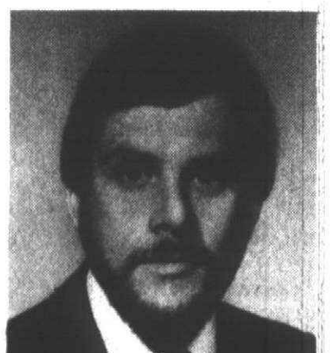

At age 73, Dr. Pino works at the forge. He posed for the picture in 1961 with white shirt and tie by normally wore work clothes.

'Vibes' more potent than witch's charm

Dear Gundella:

My neighbor has lived alone for seven years and had no men friends. Then you gave her some sort of charm to carry, and two weeks later she met a really nice guy. Now they are planning to get married.

What was it you gave her, and how does it work?

Curious, Birmingham

Dear Curious:

I'm not sure what it was I gave your neighbor. There are many different charms to carry that are said to attract the opposite sex: Adam or Eve root, Queen Elizabeth root, salep root, rose hips and seeta balls, to name just a few.

How do they work? Well, there are differences of opinion among witches about that. Some believe these charms actually give off magnetic vibrations which draw people to you.

I believe it is a little more complicated than that, and the attraction comes from the vibes you give off and not those of the charm.

Never underestimate the power of positive and negative thought.

Suppose a woman meets a man that she really would like to get to know better. If her first thought at the time is: "Oh, he wouldn't like me. He probably knows a lot of women better looking than I am," then she will be giving off negative vibrations.

He is likely to take one look at her and think to himself, "I know a lot of women more attractive than that one." And that will be the end of that.

BUT SUPPOSE this woman is carrying a love charm, and she really believes in its power. She is likely to think, "Wow! I'm glad I've got this charm. Now he will notice me."

Then she will be giving off positive vibrations. She will be smiling and radiant, and he will notice her and find her attractive no matter what her physical attributes happen to be.

The same thing is true in the case of the man. He may need a love charm to give him the self-confidence he needs to approach a lady with whom he would like to get better acquainted.

Know what you are looking for before you start projecting those positive vibes. Or, before long, you may be writing to ask for a charm to break the charm.

Reader upset with hit-run of dog

Editor:

On Wednesday, Nov. 28, at approximately 4:30 p.m., a brown and beige station wagon hit and killed a dog on Harvey Street a little more than a block north of Church Street.

It was not my dog, but I heard the thud and the dog's screams and saw the car described above drive hesitantly away.

I hope that the woman driving the station wagon will read this letter. If not, then I at least hope that others who read it will think twice before they drive away from similar accidents in the future.

Whether or not you were at fault, common decency should have compelled you to stop. This dog was dead in a few moments, but if it had only been injured you might have saved its life. At the very least you could have prevented other cars from hitting it. You might also have knocked on a few doors and found the owner or at least have gotten someone to call for help.

A young boy who was walking down the street and I had to do this for you.

If you read this letter, stop and think about what you did. You hit someone else's pet, and you knew that you hit it because you did stop momentarily. Then you just drove away, leaving this poor animal lying in the street dying. I hope that if you have any pets they are never unlucky enough to be hit by someone who, like you, thoughtlessly and selfishly looks out only for herself.

Goof: Error found in water rates

Editor:

The lead article "Township water rates will go up" in the Nov. 29 issue of the Plymouth Observer should be challenged by everyone who has completed elementary math courses wherein you learn to figure percentages.

According to the way I was taught and the way my calculator works, the difference between the current rate of 41 cents per 1,000 gallons and the new rate of 55 cents is 14 cents. Fourteen cents divided by 41 cents equals an increase of 34 percent and not 10 percent.

Trustee Maurice Breen is quoted as saying "that's only a 10 percent increase, compared to 20 percent if we raised it to 62 cents." Again, my calculator says that the 21 cents (the difference between the 41 cent rate and the 62 cent proposed rate) equals an increase of 51 percent and not 20 percent as claimed by Trustee Breen.

I realize that proficiency in math is not required in order to be elected to public office. It is, however, a little frightening to think that these are the people who figure budgets and other economic considerations for the township.

I am disappointed that the responsible people at the Plymouth Observer didn't challenge the mathematical computation offered by the township board. Maybe the schools should offer night classes in remedial math.

DON DECKER
Plymouth

(At least one other letter to the editor has been received making the same point — that the upcoming increase in the water bill for sewage disposal rates is almost 34 percent, not 10 percent. Although the 10 percent figure was used by one or more board members, the discrepancy should have been caught by the editor but wasn't. The new sewage disposal rate will be 55 cents per 1,000 gallons of water consumed — Editor)

School secretaries waiting

Editor:

It is about time the Plymouth-Canton community is made aware that the Plymouth-Canton Community School secretaries have not settled their contract.

We have been trying to negotiate a contract since April to no avail. Board negotiator Walter Bartnick refuses to budge from his original offer of 5 percent per year for the next three years with no mention of renewing the cost-of-living clause which was in our previous contract.

Other groups that have settled have been given an 8 or 9 percent increase and these groups start with a much higher base salary than the secretaries.

A 5 percent increase to the average secretary would only amount to about 25 cents an hour. This is very downgrading as most of the secretaries in the system have had a college background.

Do you realize the secretaries are the backbone of the school system? We are the ones who keep things running smoothly. We are the assistant principals. We are the ones parents, teachers, administrators, students, the general public, etc. always contact first. We are the public relations people of the school system. We feel it is about time we are recognized as the professional people we are.

Are you aware there are executive secretaries at the board office who are not a part of the Plymouth-Canton Community Secretaries Association? These executive secretaries are paid a much higher wage than the rest of the secretaries, plus they receive a higher fringe benefit package.

We feel this is very unfair as we are all doing the very best we can to do a super job. We are told the reason the executive secretaries are paid a higher wage is because of the confidential work they do.

We ask you, who handled more confidential information than the school secretaries in the school buildings? We deal directly with the parents and teachers and have a great, great deal of confidential information to keep.

Are you aware that more than two-thirds of the secretaries, who have been in the school system 10 years or more are paid less than a beginning custodial person? We ask you, is this fair?

The morale of the secretaries is at a very low ebb at this point. When the schools did not open on time this fall because of the teachers' strike, we were on the job taking the brunt of the whole thing. We worked through the turmoil and kept things running smoothly.

Yet the teachers' contract, economic-wise, was settled and with a fairly good wage increase and here we are still carrying the load, and working without a contract. We ask you, is this fair?

Please let your school board know how you feel. We would appreciate your help.

editorial opinion

Should we toy with fate or avoid sudden death?

Human tragedies are often predictable.

The first heavy snowfall of the winter results in a rash of deaths as people's hearts fail due to overexertion.

Every Fourth of July or Labor Day it's predictable that someone will be shot or stabbed in a family squabble.

On opening day of deer season someone will be accidently shot, and someone else will drop dead of a heart attack.

On Memorial Day some child will drown in a pool.

During the Christmas season a home will burn down, and during the early-morning hours of New Year's Day a motorist will be killed on the road.

Yet our foreknowledge that the potential for tragedy exists has not helped us in preventing unexpected and sudden death.

Maybe it's because we always expect tragedy will come to the other guy, not us. But, deep within us, we know eventually tragedy will strike us or very close to us if we continually challenge "fate" by not exercising care and common sense.

THIS VERY MINUTE we all know the upcoming Christmas and New Year's season will result in a lot of parties in homes, restaurants and clubs.

Right now, without thinking very hard, we also know alcoholic beverages will be served at those parties. And we know, this very minute, that drinking and driving can lead to sudden death.

And if we think, just a little bit, we'll admit abuse of alcohol also causes many tragedies beyond death on the highway.

Because we know all these things, right now, why don't we spend a couple minutes more thinking about steps we can take in planning entertainment to prevent needless death or harm to ourselves and others.

The first thing we can do is to be reasonable in mixing drinks. We do no one a favor by mixing one heavy with alcohol.

Learn to take "no" for an answer. Other people know their condition and limit best — don't press them to have "another" when they politely decline.

It's a biological fact that the body needs about one hour to get rid of the alcohol in one drink. The host, therefore, should plan to close the bar one hour before the planned end of the party. Asks your guests to stick around for coffee and food because the longer you keep them from driving after their last drinks, the safer they will be.

IF YOU HAVE small children, put away the liquor bottles and empty all glasses before going to bed after a party.

Children usually will get out of bed sooner than their parents on the morning after a party, and discover bottles and unfinished drinks. Alcohol can be a deadly poison for a small child.

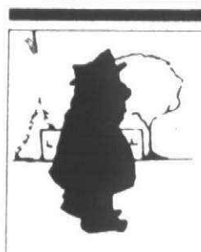

Avoid using shallow, foil-type ashtrays because they just don't do the job. Spread around a number of large, deep ashtrays and empty them often. Keep wastebaskets out of sight of smokers. Smokers should make sure an ashtray is nearby before even lighting up.

When the party ends, empty all ashtrays one last time and make a final survey to insure there are no smoldering butts which could cause a fire when you are sleeping. Check under and between cushions, under tables and chairs, and check the rugs for any "hot" ashes.

The kitchen is a popular gathering place, but it's dangerous for the cook to be handling hot food with a lot of people mingling around. So clear everyone out.

If young children will be at the party, put all breakable items out of reach. Whenever possible, it is a good idea to assign an older, more responsible child to keep an eye on the younger ones.

The above suggestions don't require a lot of effort to follow, but they will go a long way toward reducing the chance of sudden death during the holidays.

What we need is taken away

There was something different about the Old Philosopher when he pulled his chair up to the luncheon table. His smile was missing.

For years we had been meeting over lunch to discuss the world's problems. And many were the times we just sat and laughed at the odd turns it was taking.

This time it was different. Instead of smiling or laughing outright he was frowning as he said "I don't know where we are going to. But it certainly doesn't look good to me.

"I just can't make heads or tails out of the actions of our lawmakers," he began. "And the more I hear of their actions, the more puzzled I become."

When the Old Philosopher gets in one of these talking moods, The Stroller has learned from experience not to interrupt him. So he just sat and listened.

"LOOK AT WHAT they are doing. They are making trouble for the two things we need most — homes and automobiles. First they took away our transportation with the passing of the old-time streetcars that took us from place to place in the suburbs.

"And how about the old interurban street railway that was always a joy to ride up to the towns along the river on the way to Port Huron? And how about the train we used to ride from Plymouth to Lansing and Grand Rapids? They took both of these modes of travel away from us.

"What did we get in their place?" he asked. "They have given us expressways as an open invitation to move away from the cities and build a nice home in the suburbs. Sounds great, doesn't it? But let's look at it.

"Take a look at the new M-14 as an example. It gets us out of Detroit in a hurry. But it rushes us past the City of Plymouth where the only exit is at the western end of the community. When you get off the expressway you have to drive back in to the city."

THE OLD PHILOSOPHER reached his peak when he went on a tirade over what the government is doing with the automobile.

"They took away our streetcars and the railroads, and we were enticed into owning automobiles to build up the economy of the country. Now look at what has happened.

"Suddenly, the automobile has become a menace. Its exhausts foul the air too much. So they forced the auto companies into costly changes. Then they started at the energy crisis and now are forcing the automakers to build cars with fuel conservation in mind."

WHAT ABOUT CHRYSLER? Should the government bail the company out of its present dilemma?

"Why not?" the Old Philosopher answered. "The government helped get Chrysler into the jam and now it should help to get it out. And the government shouldn't be allowed to collect interest on the loans. Why allow the government to make money on any assistance it might give?"

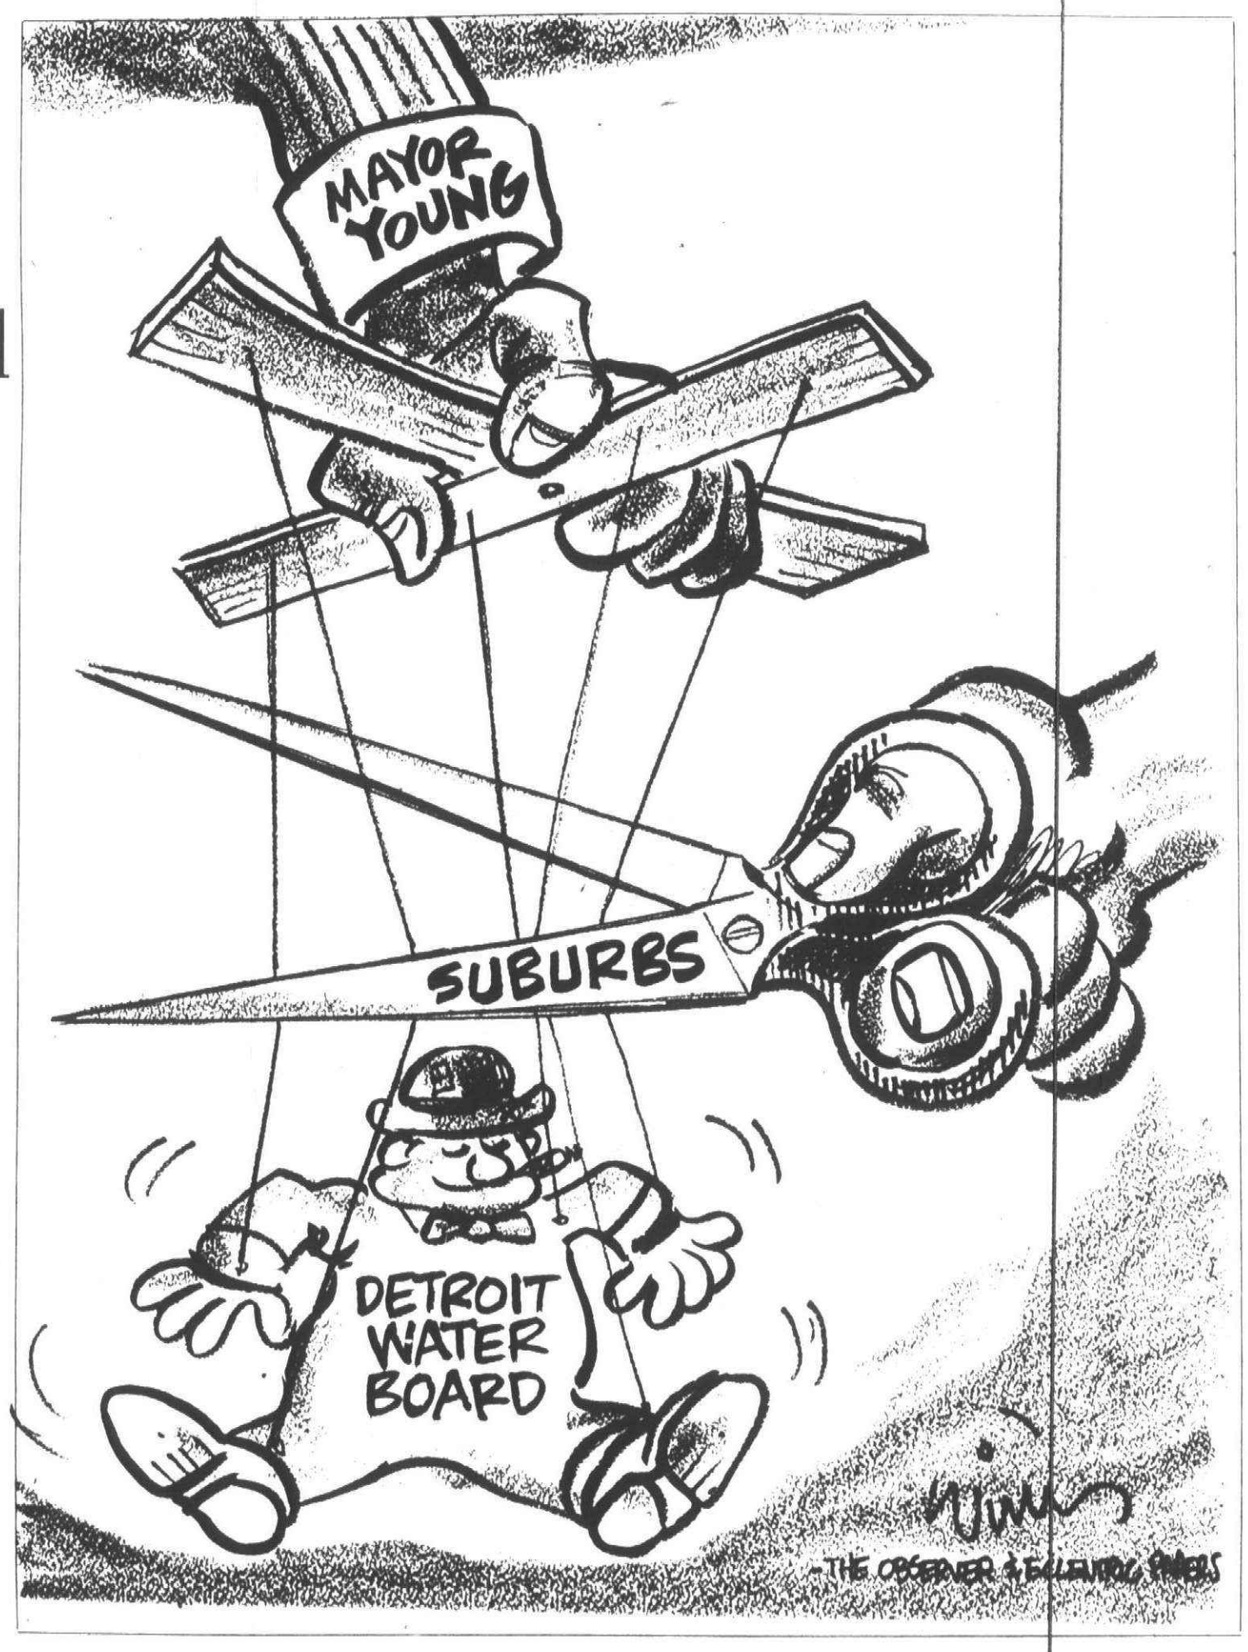

But the latest word really got to him.

"I see where the government wants to freeze the wages of the Chrysler employees for three years as a means of justifying the loan. That's absurd."

No wonder he wasn't smiling.

The M-275 decision

The State Transportation Commission has opted for continuing with the M-275 freeway across western Oakland County. Because most opponents had only opposed a freeway without offering a realistic alternative, the state had to choose between M-275 and nothing. Had the opposition supported a parkway instead of blithely labeling it "M-275 Jr.," they might have had a chance.

Recalling the Blue Front

Every Christmas a conflict between Barnaby and the world is resurrected. To be sure it is a friendly one, but a conflict nevertheless.

It has to do with Christmas presents. The scenario goes like this.

"Steve, what do you want for Christmas?"

"Books."

"Oh, c'mon now. You've got enough books to open a small library. What else do you want?"

Quietly, I sit down with my stack of New York Times Book Review sections, make out a list of books and distribute it to potential Barnaby giftgivers. And, for the most part, the list is ignored.

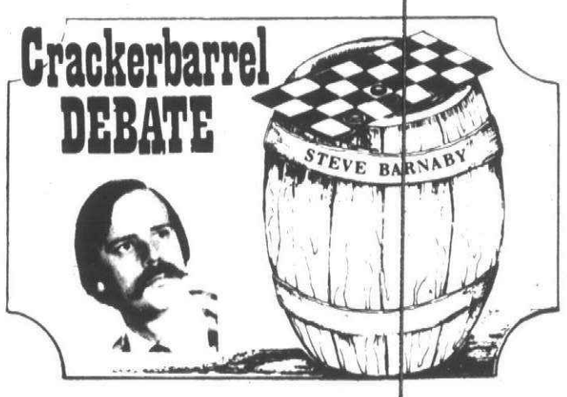

The blame for this book penchant and the resulting holiday conflict rests squarely on my father's shoulders.

It started years ago when I first discovered the wonderful world of books and, better yet, the intrigue of browsing through bookstores. I was about 8 years old.

Frequently during the year we would visit my grandmother who owned an apartment house in Ann Arbor.

Visiting my grandmother was a delight for a number of reasons, but one adventure was utmost on my mind — the trip to the bookstore.

IMPATIENTLY, I WOULD sit in my grandfather's big overstuffed chair, feet dangling in the air. While pretending to watch television, I would, in reality, be watching my father's every move.

I knew the moment would come, but not before my father and I played out the teasing little drama which made the trip's prospect even more tantalizing.

Finally, after what seemed like hours, my father would walk over to the closet, put on his coat and head for the door.

"I'm going out for awhile," he would say to my mother.

Then, reaching for the door handle, he would suddenly turn around, look at me and say, "do you want to come along?"

In one move I would jump from the chair, grab my coat and be out the front door waiting for my father. Inside, he would exchange a quiet smile with my mother.

We always went to this little bookstore called the Blue Front. In recent years, friends who attended the University of Michigan tell me the Blue Front was a hangout for students more interested in browsing X-rated magazines than studying.

But for me it was a palace of knowledge. Obviously my father steered me past the "adult" reading to the shelves containing the more classic writings.

It was at the Blue Front that I bought my first edition of Herman Melville's Moby Dick — my favorite novel and guiding light through life.

It also was at the Blue Front that I met Ernest Hemingway, Theodore Drieser, Rafael Sabitini, John O'Hara and many more friends who have kept me company through the years.

It has been years since I've visited the Blue Front. It may be gone for all I know. But I'll always remember those trips to the bookstore and the game that my father and I played to get there.

Right road to reform?

And now into the fray comes George W. Kuhn, drain commissioner in and for the county of Oakland, hoping to reform the Detroit Water and Sewerage Board after others have failed.

Kuhn and suburban friends are starting a petition drive to put a proposed law before voters which would give the 100 or so customers of the Detroit water and sewerage system something to say about how this indispensable utility is run.

At present the system is a Detroit city department. Its director is appointed by the mayor. Its seven board members, including three suburbanites, are appointed and removable by the mayor. Its rates are approved by the Detroit City Council. Its employees must be residents of the city of Detroit.

Customers from outside the city have no power to do anything but pay their bills.

OTHERS, AS I've said, have tried to reform the system.

State Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford, has won some reforms, but not of the water board appointment process itself. His bills get passed in one house and fail in the other.

In 1975 state Rep. William Ryan, D-Detroit, proposed reconstituting the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments as a more powerful agency with half its members directly elected by the public. One of the new SEMCOG's powers was to be the appointment of the Detroit Water and Sewerage Board. Opposition, especially among suburbanites, was so fierce that the Ryan bill never came to a vote.

Federal District Judge John Feikens, hearing the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency case against the ineptly run Detroit sewer plant, had a chance to reform things this year by appointing a special administrator. Feikens blew it. In one of the most colossal blunders ever committed by a judge, Feikens appointed the mayor of Detroit himself as the special administrator.

In 1972 a Governor's Special Task Force recommended using such agencies as SEMCOG as a kind of "umbrella agency" over regional authorities. It would select their boards, formulate their personnel guidelines, review and approve their budgets and relate them to the regional planning process. That report got lost.

SEMCOG itself has shown no inclination to assert itself. SEMCOG allowed itself to be stripped of power to make most transportation authority appointments and gave itself only a weak role in making Areawide Water Quality Board appointments. SEMCOG has never addressed the Detroit Water and Sewerage Board reorganization question.

AND SO THERE is a political vacuum.

And Kuhn is attempting to step into it.

Kuhn is headed in the right direction, although I'm not sure he is taking the best path.

He is talking of setting up a "Metropolitan Council" on a one government, one vote basis. The Metro Council would meet once a year, pick its chairman, set water and sewerage rates and select a nine-member Regional Water and Sewer Commission.

The Regional Commission would replace the current Detroit water board. It would have three Detroit members and six suburban members. Detroit's members would be picked from nominees provided by the Detroit City Council (not the mayor).

Kuhn's petition drive will require 229,000 legal signatures, which means he must collect 300,000 for a margin of safety. Then the question must go before the voters.

KUHN'S PROPOSAL has much merit and a few problems. Without appearing to be negative, I'd like to point out some of the problems:

- The bill would affect only southeast Michigan, but the entire state would have to vote on it. We would feel uncomfortable voting on a bill that affected only Midland or Escanaba. Wouldn't they be uncomfortable and uninformed voting on our bill?
- It would be better to have SEMCOG appoint the Regional Water and Sewer Commission than to create a new Metro Council. The Metro Council would meet only once a year and for one purpose. SEMCOG's executive committee meets monthly and its General Assembly quarterly; its members get to know each other. On the other hand, SEMCOG has been lackadaisical in seeking new powers and indifferent to the water board question.
- The Metro Council would be organized on a "one government, one vote" basis rather than by population. Someone is sure to start a lawsuit over that apportionment plan.

And yet — all other attempts at water board reform have fallen flat. The Kuhn proposal deserves nothing less than serious, sober consideration. Kuhn may not be travelling the best road, but it may be the only road that is open.

Coach Lamaze made her high on running

Jocelyn Krieger

The heat began rising from the sun-seared pavement as we pounded into the third mile of a 10 km race. Carefully, I paced myself while watchiing the rest of the world whiz past.

What choice was there, carrying 50 pounds extra weight by the scales and 40 years according to the calendar? Six weeks prior running experience should also be added to these not-so-impressive qualifications, and the only reason I had entered the race was to go the distance.

My even, measured breaths fell into an easy cadence when abruptly the sound was distorted by a huffing and puffing defying any rhythm. An elongated shadow of myself pulled up beside me, minus 20 years.

"Who (gasp) coached (gasp) your (gasp) breathing (gasp)?" she questioned.

"Lamaze!" I allowed myself to answer and quickly resumed my pattern.

"Never heard of him!" she blurted, almost collapsing with the effort.

WHEN I SPRINTED across the finish line in 81:53 and could carry on a normal conversation without wishing an oxygen tank were near by, I knew there definitely had to be an advantage to having given birth to six children by natural childbirth, using the Lamaze method. While the time left much to be desired by racing standards, I was congratulated and encouraged by women runners with two or more years experience who had run the Bonnie Bell 10 km yet took this fun-run in 60 minutes (winning time was 34:00).

They noted my breathing had supported me despite the facts. The facts were: 41 years; 5 feet 6 inches tall; 186½ pounds; high blood pressure, asthmatic and a nursing mother.

The doctor suggested I begin jogging because of a nearly fatal pregnancy that left me with high blood pressure. My first attempts were at walking, but I was thwarted by my asthma. I couldn't resist the urge to just take off and run.

Determined, I decided I would follow the same breathing technique used for natural childbirth. What other experience is more taxing to a women's body as well as debilitating?

AT FIRST I used the breathing suggested for the final stages of labor and delivery. Instead of contractions, I timed steps — 1-2 explosive exhale (blow) while jogging and with a fast walk I used four steps with each inhale-exhale.

Twelve weeks after beginning my program, with a 10 pound weight loss, averaging 10 to 15 miles a week, I no longer needed my asthma medication and only required the breathing technique whenever I increased my speed.

To stabilize my breathing, I used the technique for early labor, relax-inhale-exhale slowly with a light breath through slightly open lips, similar to blowing on a candle without extinguishing the flame.

As my fitness increased and I could run a mile without walking, I concentrated on lifting my rib cage and breathing deeply, using the breathing for delivery whenever I felt strain.

Natural childbirth has enabled me to be more attuned to my body sensations. I'm aware of tension and can relax immediately because of reflex conditioning.

Pain in childbirth is caused by over-tight muscles, and injury during delivery (tearing and pulled ligaments) is often the result of an unrelaxed pelvic floor.

My preliminary stretching includes the childbirth preparation exercises. My warm-downs are similar. The more I stretch, the less I hurt, which may be a good lesson for obstetricians.

While natural delivery may be fantastic, muscle soreness is always an afterfact, most likely because of the abrupt cessation of activity after delivery.

RECOVERY UNIT nurses continually ask naturally delivered mothers what medication they were given because of their bubbly, exhilarated condition after having given birth.

They can't comprehend the super-high of the unmedicated mother. she's had an over-abundance of oxygen and her adrenal glands have produced the maximum. She's high on life and love.

The same for running. Once you've experienced it, you'll know it well. As my little girl used to proclaim, explaining her inward joy: "It's me! It's really me!"

You'd better believe it! If it's pushing a newborn life into the world or pushing yourself across the finish line — it's YOU, baby, it's really you!

How long, how hard should you exercise?

fitness

Barry Franklin

QUESTION: I would like to start an exercise program to improve my heart and lung fitness. How much and what type of exercise do I need to accomplish this goal?

A.B., Farmington Hills

The effectiveness of any exercise program is determined by how frequently you participate, how intense your efforts are, how long each exercise session lasts and what type of exercise you employ.

Let's take those one at a time.

FREQUENCY: Most experts recommend exercising three to five days per week. Additional cardiorespiratory benefits of daily workouts appear to be minimal, whereas the incidence of leg and foot problems increases markedly, especially with activities that require running and jumping.

INTENSITY: This relates to how vigorously one exerts himself when exercising and is measured by how fast the heart beats during activity. For most persons, the exercise should be intense enough to raise the heart rate to between 70 and 85 percent of the individual's maximal heart rate.

The maximal heart rate for persons without heart disease may be estimated by subtracting your age in years from 220. Example: A 40-year-old man has an estimated maximal heart rate of 180. His training heart rate range would then be 127 (70 percent) to 153 (85 percent) beats per minute.

DURATION: Exercise sessions should generally include 15 to 45 minutes of continuous activity at the 70 to 85 percent intensity level. Longer sessions apparently result in little additional improvement, while the number of musculoskeletal and orthopedic complications increases disproporionately.

Intensity and duration of training are interrelated. Consequently, programs of low intensity and long duration may yield comparable benefits to programs of high intensity but shorter duration, provided that the total caloric costs are similar.

For sedentary, middle-aged adults or cardiac patients starting an exercise program, a program of lower intensity and longer duration program is preferable.

MODE: Cardiorespiratory fitness is best enhanced through activities which employ large muscle groups, which can be maintained continuously, and which are rhythmical. Such "aerobic" activities include walking, jogging, bicycling, swimming, rowing, skating, cross country skiing and rope-skipping.

Sudden stop-and-go sprint activities (anaerobics) as well as heavy lifting and isometric exercises (straining without movement) are less beneficial and are more likely to place undue stress on the heart.

Important in choosing an activity progrm is to realize that exercise training is specific to the muscle groups involved. Several recent research studies have shown there is little or no transfer of training adaptation from one muscle group to another (e.g., legs to arms).

Thus, various muscle groups need to be exercised in order to meet all around fitness needs (total fitness concept). Jogging or running is not enough.

WHATEVER EXERCISE program you choose, you must continue it on a regular basis. Unfortunately, you rapidly lose the benefits of physical conditioning once you cease training.

You must realize that an exercise program is a lifetime pursuit, not simply an activity of 10 or 12 weeks with residual effects that last forever.

Finally, perhaps the most important point to consider in choosing a fitness activity is the "pleasure principle." A person generally will not stick with an exercise program, regardless of the health benefits, unless he enjoys it.

The writer, a Ph.D., is co-director of cardiac rehabilitation and physical fitness at Sinai Hospital and assistant professor of physiology at Wayne State University. Questions may be sent to him in care of this newspaper.

House seeks curb on FTC

roll call report

Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Nov. 26 through Nov. 28.

HOUSE

CURBING THE FTC: By a vote of 321 for and 63 against, the House passed a bill to curtail the authority of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). The bill (HR 2313) was sent to the Senate. It contains a "legislative veto" provision which, if it becomes law, will enable either house of Congress to prevent by majority vote any FTC action against an entire industry. The FTC was created in 1914 to combat unfair and deceptive business practices.

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., a supporter, said, "We are seeing an end to governement by bureaucratic fiat. The outrage of the American public against unacceptable government has been heard and heeded."

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., an opponent, said the bill would begin "the plucking . . . of the only agency that we can call a consumer agency in the entire U.S. government."

Members voting "yea" favored the bill limiting FTC powers.

Reps. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Ford, D-Taylor, James Blanchard, D-Pleasant Ridge and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham voted "yea."

Reps. David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens, and William Brodhead, D-Detroit, voted "nay."

CONGRESSIONAL VETO: The House adopted, 278 for and 121 against, an amendment permitting Congress by concurrent resolution to veto any regulation issued by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. Such regulations usually concern unsafe pesticides and often are criticized by agribusiness and other sectors of the farming community.

Concurrent resolutions do not require a president's signature to take effect. The amendment was attached to HR 3546, passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Calif., a supporter, said that in the EPA "we are dealing with one of the regulatory agencies that epitomizes regulation and bureaucratic interference . . . "

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., an opponent, said that "precisely what the (amendment) is attempting to do (is) to avoid the presentation provision of the Constitution, which, he said, mandates that any action requiring the concurrence of both houses goes to the president for his possible veto.

Members voting "yea" wanted Congress to be able to cancel certain EPA regulations.

Pursell, Blanchard and Broomfield voted "yea."

Bonior, Ford and Brodhead voted "nay."

GOP BUDGET: By a vote of 187 for and 207 against, the House rejected a Republican motion to cut $7.9 billion out of the 1980 federal budget of $547.6 billion.

The proposal, offered during consideration of a budget resolution (S Con Res 53) later given final approval, would have cut all areas of federal spending except defense and veterans programs.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, the sponsor said: "The American people can no longer afford $30 billion budget deficits, 13 percent inflation and rising unemployment."

Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., an opponent, said it was too late in the laborious budget process to propose sweeping cuts. "This great grandstand play of the Republican motion would have the American people think that one can save money by voting for it. Nonsense, nonsense, nonsense."

Members voting "nay" opposed the budget-cut proposal.

Pursell, and Broomfield voted "yea."

Bonior, Ford, Brodhead and Blanchard voted "nay."

SENATE

WINDFALL EXEMPTION: The Senate voted 53 for and 41 against to exempt most oil pumped by companies involved only in the production aspect of the oil industry from the proposed "windfall" tax on increased oil profits.

The amendment was offered to HR 3919, which was headed for approval and conference with the House. The first 1,000 barrels per day produced by each so-called "independent" would be exempt from the new tax on additional profits resulting from the abolitoin of price controls.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., sponsor of the amendment, said independent producers need a tax break to finance exploration. "It is not a question of doing anyone a favor," he said.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., an opponent, said the amendment would satisfy only "the understandable desire of these active businessmen to increase their already considerable profits."

Senators voting "yea" favored exempting most production by independent producers from the windfall-profits tax.

Sen. Donald Riegle, Democrat, voted "yea."

Sen Carl Levin, Democrat, voted "nay."

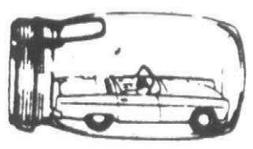

RAILROAD MONEY: By a vote of 54 for and 41 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an amendment to apply $10 billion of the windfall-profits tax to the revitalization of the nation's passenger and freight railroad systems. The amendment was proposed to the oil taxation bill (HR 3919; see previous vote). The $10 billion was to have come from the $128 billion the windfall-profits tax on oil revenues is expected to raise between 1980 and 1990. Already, in an energy-conservation move, the Senate has agreed that up to $15 billion of the tax will go to mass-transit programs.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., a supporter of killing the amendment, said: "It may very well be that the best way to rehabilitate the railroads would be with a loan guarantee progrem rather than earmarking appropriations as proposed in this amendment."

Riegle and Levin voted "nay."

Plymouth Salem cagers turn giant killers

PSL power downed, 48-45

By BRAD EMONS

Plymouth Salem pulled off the biggest upset of the girls' state tournament thus far.

The Rocks, getting a balanced scoring attack, shocked Public School League runnerup Detroit Mumford Tuesday night at Dearborn, 48-45, in the first round of the regional (Class A).

Salem, now 17-7 overall, will face Redford Union (19-4) for the regional title at 7 p.m. Friday. The Rocks have lost two straight games to RU.

"It was a thrilla in Manilla," said an elated Salem coach Bob Blohm after the game. "I really got emotionally involved.

"We beat a very good team tonight. We played against quickness and a team with jumping ability."

Salem withstood a full-court Mumford press in the fourth quarter to seal the victory.

With 22 seconds left in the game, senior guard Nan Horwood hit two pressure free throws to give the Rocks a 48-43 lead.

"We made the critical free throws," Blohm said. "In the fourth quarter we used the clock and wanted the power layup.

"We lost some games in the last few minutes during the regular season. Tonight we really handled the pressure. We've got a good team."

Salem trailed only once in the game, 32-31, with 2:38 to go in the third quarter when Mumford guard Rhonda Beauford made a steal and converted a short jumper.

BUT SALEM came right back as Horwood scored a layup some 10 seconds later to give the Rocks the lead for good.

In the fourth quarter Salem opened up a six-point margin at 4:12 when Horwood converted a free throw.

Beauford, who led all scorers with 14 points, canned a jumper with 3:22 to go, narrowing the slim Salem lead to 42-40. Sophomore guard Eileen Moore then made it 46-41 after hitting two free throws.

Salem missed two 1-and-1 opportunities in the last minute, but Mumford could not hit anything after Felicia Brown's basket with 1:12 to go.

Salem played a strong game on the boards. Center Patty Weidman grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked three shots to aid the cause.

She finished the game with 12 points and was effective in the first quarter beating Mumford 6-2 center Kim Hale several times to the basket. Weidman scored eight points in the period as Salem raced out to a 16-10 lead.

"We caught the ball early and scored," said a pleased Blohm. "I was glad to see Hale out in the second half. Patty had her sealed off well in the first quarter."

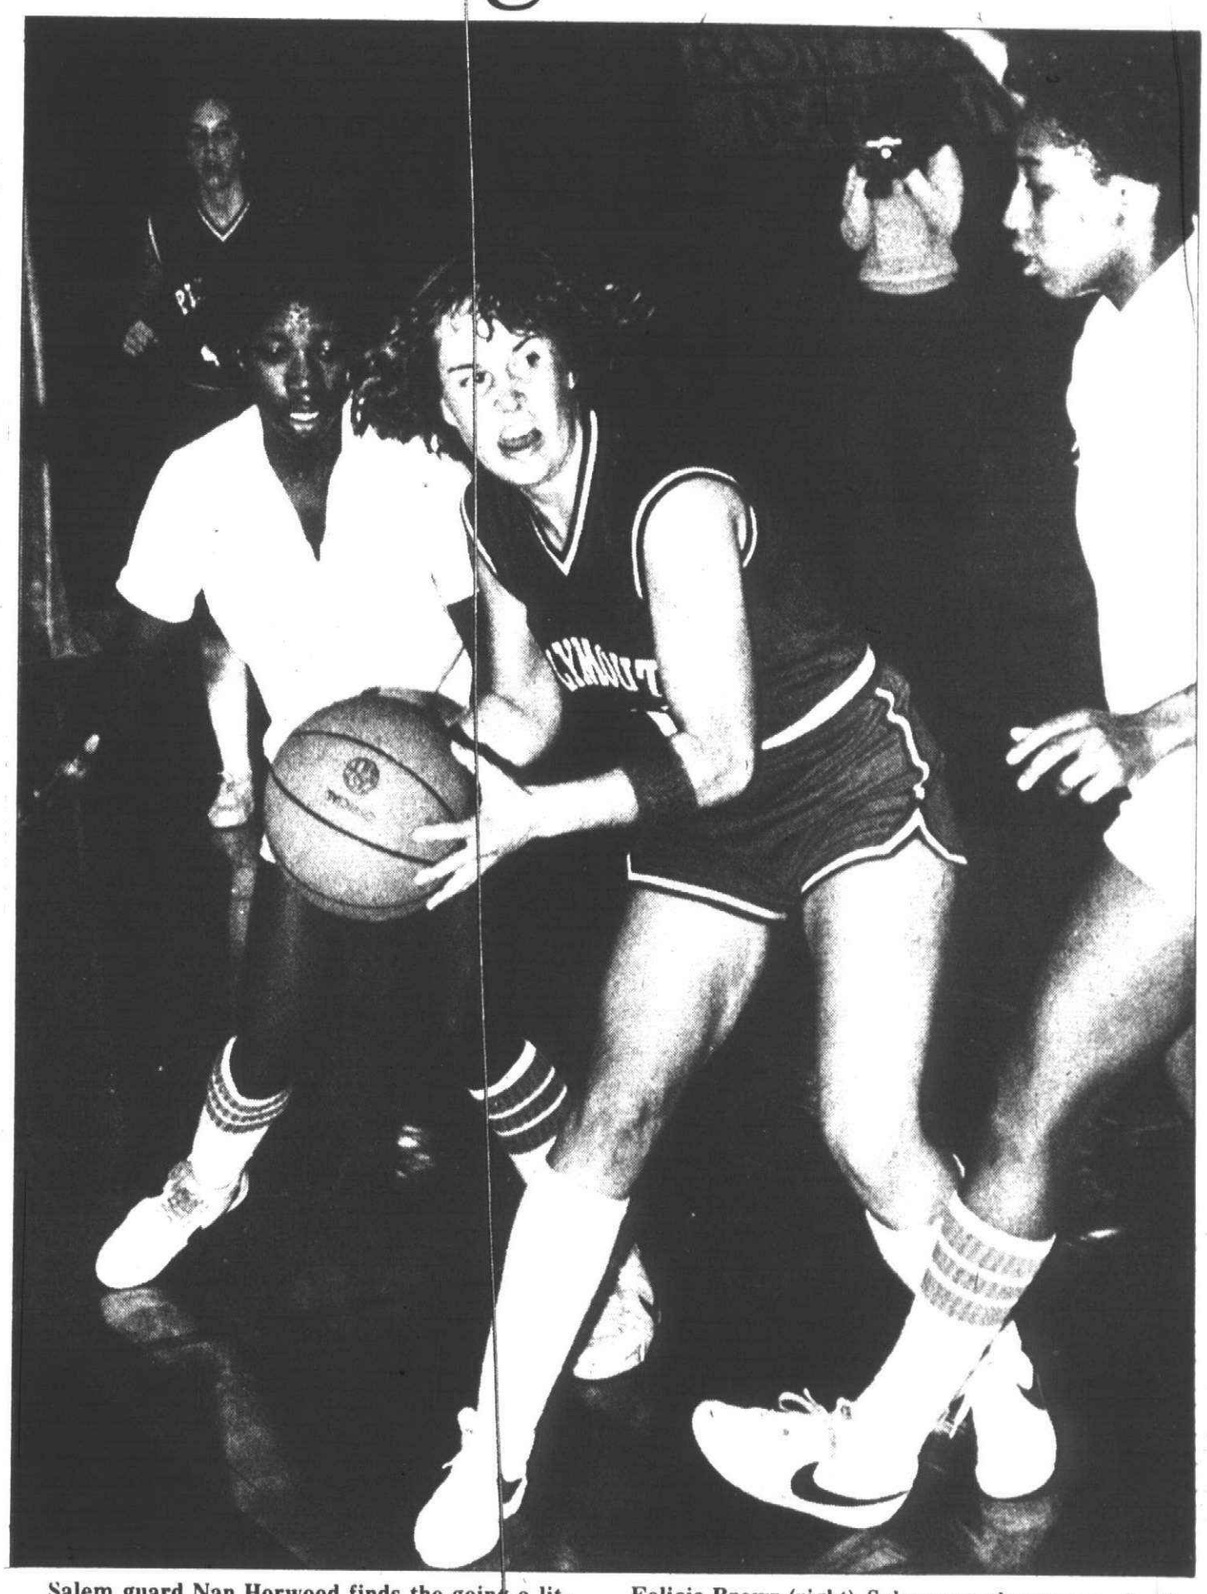

Mumford outscored Salem 14-11 in the second quarter, narrowing the Rocks' halftime advantage to 27-24.

MUMFORD, whose only loss this season was to PSL champ Detroit Murray-Wright, applied pressure against the Salem backcourt in the third quarter.

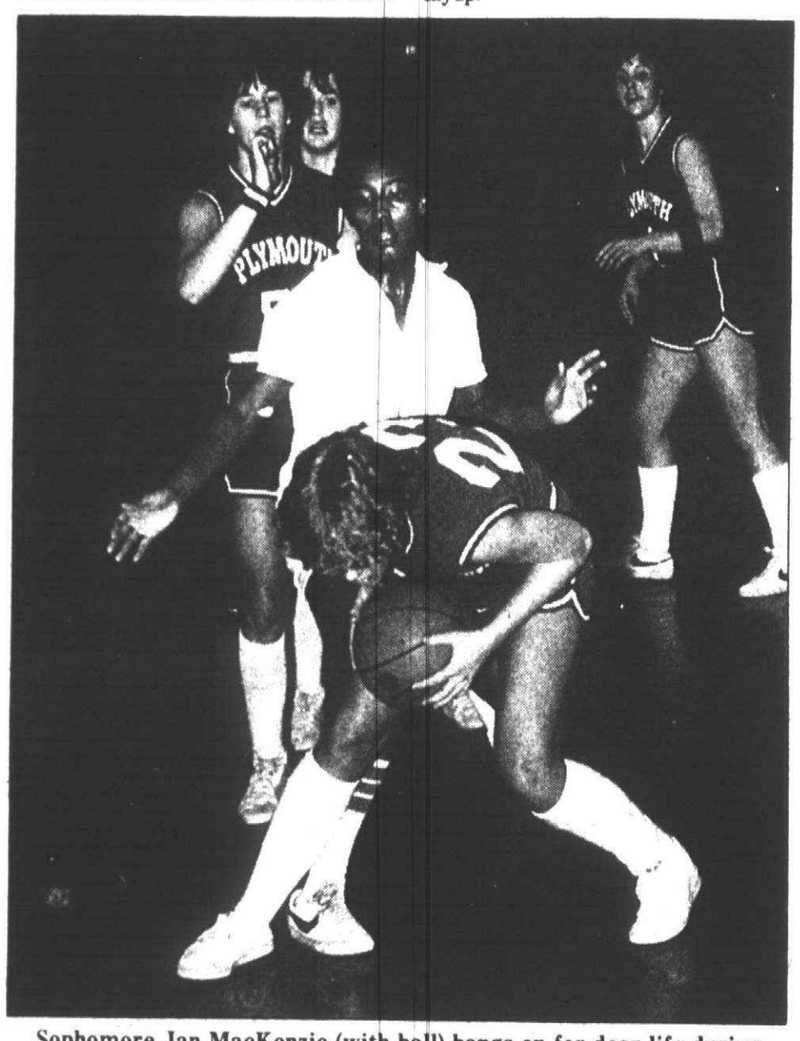

Horwood, who led Salem with 13 points, canned a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer, increasing the lead to 35-32 with the fourth quarter still to play.

Salem bottled up Mumford by switching defenses through the course of the game.

"Rebound-wise and defensively I thought we were right in there," Blohm

Rock girls recover to silence critics

Plymouth Salem's girls met the challenge Tuesday night down at Dearborn.

The Rock cagers, coached by Bob Blohm, were given little or no chance before the regional semifinal game to beat powerful Detroit Mumford, which entered the battle with an impressive 14-1 record. Mumford's only loss came against unbeaten Detroit Murray-Wright in the Public School League final.

I waited for Salem to fold against the talented Detroit team. But to the Rocks' credit, they handled the pressure beautifully to gain the victory, considered by many to be a major upset.

Mumford possessed quickness and leaping ability. I kept wondering when they were going to get hot. A pressing defense seemed to bother the Rocks, but they refused to crack.

Although a little tired, Salem hung tough until the final buzzer, outscrapping the Detroiters.

And a lot of heart came through in this one. It was Salem's finest hour this season.

The Rocks did it by switching defenses and confusing Mumford. A fast start didn't hurt either. Salem jumped out to an 8-0 lead.

Blohm's team appeared headed nowhere before the tournament began. Salem failed to fend off wounding blows in its last two regular season games, losing to Redford Union and Walled Lake Central.

BUT AN opening round convincing victory over Canton gave the Rocks a lift. That victory snapped Canton's 15-game winning streak and proved to be a confidence builder.

Salem has been basically a man-to-man defensive team all season long. A zone against Walled Lake turned out to be a first-half disaster in the regular season finale.

Against Mumford, Blohm had no other avenue than to play a zone, at least part of the time against the quick Mumford team. It was effective.

The strategy payed off and now Salem has a chance to gain revenge against Redford Union, a team which has handed the Rocks two regular season losses.

"Our kids were disappointed in the 13-7 record after going 21-1 last year," explained Blohm. "But we lost five games in the last couple minutes.

"I think we have a sound game to play and are a good fundemental team."

Salem's tournament charge to some is really no surprise. The Rocks have faced some of the toughest teams in the state.

"Five teams in our league won their districts," Blohm reminded the doubters. The sixth team in the Suburban Eight, Belleville, was eliminated by Salem in the district final.

"We've played against some really good teams," he said. "The competition has been good."

SALEM GAINED valuable experience by playing No. 1 ranked Flint Northern earlier in the season.

"We learned to play against size, quickness and good jumpers," said Blohm.

Redford Union, sporting a 19-4 record, came from behind in the two previous encounters to beat Salem.

"I think the difference now is that were not fouling," said the Salem coach. "We're getting good position and playing sound defense.

"That's what was beating us during the regular season."

Detroit Tiger basketball club set for Salem

The long-awaited jump shot possessed by slugger Jason Thompson will unfold Wednesday night at the Plymouth Salem gym.

That's when a group of the Detroit Tigers' basketball team will challenge coaches of the Plymouth-Canton Junior Basketball Association in a benefit game at 7 p.m.

Tickets are available at the Trading Post or at the door. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for children.

Thompson, who played high school basketball, will join fellow Tiger baseball teammates in the benefit clash.

Other Tigers who are scheduled to play include Rick Leach, Alan Trammell, Dave Rozema, Milt Wilcox, Mark Fidrych, Mark Wagner, Ron LeFlore and Kirk Gibson.

At halftime, Tiger players will be available to sign autographs.

The Trading Post will donate uniforms for the game.

New coach welcomes tankers

By BRAD EMONS

New Plymouth Canton swim coach Bill Hahn is optimistic about this year's team, which is understandable.

Hahn has 13 returnees from a team which captured its first Western Six League title last season.

"I can't judge if we're a strong team," said Hahn, "but I'm optimistic. I think we'll certainly be reckoned with in the league.

"The swimmers are getting to know me. I'm adjusting to things."

Leading the cast of returnees is senior Paul Petersen, state champion in the 100-yard butterfly and 100-yard breaststroke.

"He's really impressive," Hahn said. "Paul is very dedicated and is a strong worker."

Petersen is a tri-captain along with seniors Keith Greenleaf and Dave Smith. The latter swimmer hopes to move into the 50-yard freestyle spot vacated by league champ Dave Tanner, who graduated.

Greenleaf is a distance freestyler who will more than likely be the Chiefs' top 500-yard man.

Other freestyle specialists returning include seniors Troy Haarla and Jeff Rice along with junior Steve Gilligan. Another freestyle swimmer to watch is sophomore Pete Stern.

"WE HAVE a lot of depth in freestyle," explained Hahn. "We'll do a lot of experimenting to learn what they're capable of doing. I need to fit their needs."

One of the most versatile swimmers on the team is sophomore Bob Simrack, who returns in the 400-yard freestyle relay along with Smith. Canton is the defending champion in that race with a clocking of 3:29.11.

The league champion 200-yard medley relay team appears to be strong with the return of Petersen, senior backstroker Jeff Seipple and Hurley.

Bob Cline, Canton's league champ in the 200-yard individual medley, graduated, but Hurley is expected to pick up the slack.

Plymouth Canton's 1979-80 swim schedule:

DECEMBER — 8, at Redford Union Relays; 13, Redford Union; 18, Belleville.

JANUARY — 8, Northville; 10, Livonia Churchill; 17, at Farmington Harrison; 31, at Ypsilanti.

FEBRUARY — 5, Thurston; 7, at Northville; 8-9, at Wayne Relays; 12, at Livonia Churchill; 14, Farmington Harrison; 28, at Plymouth Salem.

MARCH — 11, State diving regional; 14-15, State meet. — All home meets begin at 7 p.m.

said. "We had to go to the zone late in the game because we were a little fatiqued. They (Mumford) had to take the outside jumper."

Horwood, who has been outstanding during the tournament, led Salem in assists with seven. Junior forward Cheryl Sobkow, took care of the inside play, scoring 10 points and collecting five rebounds. Moore chipped in with nine points and five boards.

The other Salem starter, freshman Jacque Merrifield, played a key role, guarding Mumford's All-City forward Darlene Brown. Merrifield held her to six points and scored a key basket at 1:57 of the final quarter, hitting a short bank shot after driving the length of the floor.

Fenton rips Ladywood in Class B

LADYWOOD'S 1979 basketball season came to a sudden and shocking end Tuesday in the first round of the Class B regionals at Hartland.

The Blazers were dealt a 59-44 defeat by Fenton, which now has a 23-1 record. "How about this," said a disappointed coach Ed Kavanaugh. "We shot 14 of 58 from the floor and five of 31 in the first half."

Fenton raced to a 16-5 lead in the first quarter, thanks to the Blazers' cold shooting. The deficit was extended to 34-19 at halftime. That was it, as Ladywood could not close the gap in the second half.

Canton, Salem set for openers

The boys' basketball season opens Friday night when Plymouth Canton and Salem hit the road for non-league tests.

Canton will travel to the dark confines of Livonia Franklin's gymnasium while Salem goes to Walled Lake Central. Both games are slated to start around 8 p.m.

Chief coach Craig Bell expects Franklin to be ready. Canton handed the Patriots a 4-69 defeat last year at home.

"We'll have to handle the challenge against Franklin," said Bell. "Physically and mentally we'll have to be ready.

"I know Franklin is not big in height, but I'm sure they'll do something to make up for it. We'll just have to go out and recognize what they're doing."

Bell's team was impressive in a four-way scrimmage last Saturday against Salem, Detroit Catholic Central and Detroit Mackenzie.

"I was very pleased with the things we did," Bell said. "We showed a lot unity and worked well together. We still have to work on some things."

Franklin returns its starting guards, junior Ron Lohman and senior Jon McCarthy. Coach Jim McIntyre's front line is small. Tim Pryzsiecki, a reserve forward last year, is the center at 6-3.

The Patriots lost two tough frontliners to graduation — All-Area choice Chris Baker, now in the Detroit Tigers minor league baseball system and Jeff Reich.

THE PATRIOTS are an aggressive team which likes the fast break.

Bell is uncertain about his starting lineup.

"We have seven players going for five positions," he said.

The Canton coach "suspects it will be a close game."

"We're going to have to play good basketball to beat them," he said.

Salem coach Fred Thomann knows little about Walled Lake Central.

The Lakers were 1-20 last year under Ken Smith, who resigned after the season.

He was replaced by Birmingham Brother Rice junior varsity coach Steve Emert.

The team's best player is 6-3 senior swing man Tom Phelps. He will be joined up front by 6-3 senior forward Kurt Burnstein and 6-5 senior center Rick Wheeler.

Handling the point-guard spot is 5-9 Rick Sarles, an All-State golfer, and 5-8 Doug Gruber.

Central lacks bulk, according to E?mert. The heaviest player is only 185 pounds. Walled Lake will run a motion offense, Indiana style, and likes the man-to-man defense under Emert.

"We'd like to execute and get defensive intensity in our first ball game," said Thomann. "We want to get into our general defensive concepts.

"I'M LOOKING for a good solid game," he said. "We'll take what they give us offensively."

Thomann said he has settled on a starting lineup for the Friday opener — Howard Monk at center, Jim Anderson and Scott Bublin at the forwards and Rob Neu and Mike Sharp at the guards.

Mike McBride, Leigh Langkabel and Paul Horton are key reserves.

Area basketball preview

Glenn, Garden City squads young

Coach Dan Henry will face a challenge in his first year as head basketball coach at Westland John Glenn.

Henry, who coached at the JV level, inherits last year's Northwest Suburban League champs — that's the good news.

The bad news is that all of the starters from that team are gone.

"We're a little thin," said Henry. "We have 12 juniors and four seniors. We're very young and inexperienced. We're not very big this year, either."

Indeed not, as only two players out of the top seven are above six feet tall.

Leading the way will be a trio of 5-10 seniors. Henry called Ken Liedel "the best athlete on the team." Wayne Woodard will see plenty of action at a guard spot. Scott Thornton will play forward, small for that position, but rugged.

Glenn has a huge nucleus of juniors. The 11th graders will determine, to a large extent, the Rockets' success.

Tony Dalimonte will make his presence known as a 5-9 guard. Dave Cesarz has some good basketball genes in the family. The 5-11 forward's cousin, Kim, starred for the girls team. Battling it out for a starting center position are a couple of 6-3 juniors, Dave Ward and Kevin Tweatt.

"We like to put a lot of pressure on the ball all over the court," said Henry. "We like to run. If the running game isn't there, we'll set it up, but we look to run first.

"We're quick. These kids have won at the JV level. I look for us to be a darkhorse."

GARDEN CITY EAST will be another young team without much height. Coach Mike Riley will look to improve last year's Northwest Suburban 2-8 record in his second year as coach.

What does Riley see for the upcoming season?

"Awfully tough competition, for one," he said. "Our league is as tough as any league around. Plus, we have a very rough non-league schedule.

"We don't have any returning starters from last year. We're small, but a little bit quicker than last year."

The tallest man on the team is Roger Ferguson, a 6-2 junior center. He will probably be a starter.

East will have a sizeable group of seniors to work with. The starting guards will most likely be Jack Laxotte, 5-8, and Brad Ohman, 6-0.

Riley will have a host of forwards to choose from. Shawn McGrath is the tallest of the bunch at 6-1. A trio of 6-0 seniors will all see a lot of action — Glenn Barikmo, Jeff Sikora and John Topalian.

"We're gonna have to cut down on our turnovers," said Riley. "Plus, we're gonna have to play a successful, aggressive brand of ball. These are some hard working kids.

"If we can do those things, we should improve over last year. If not — we're in trouble.

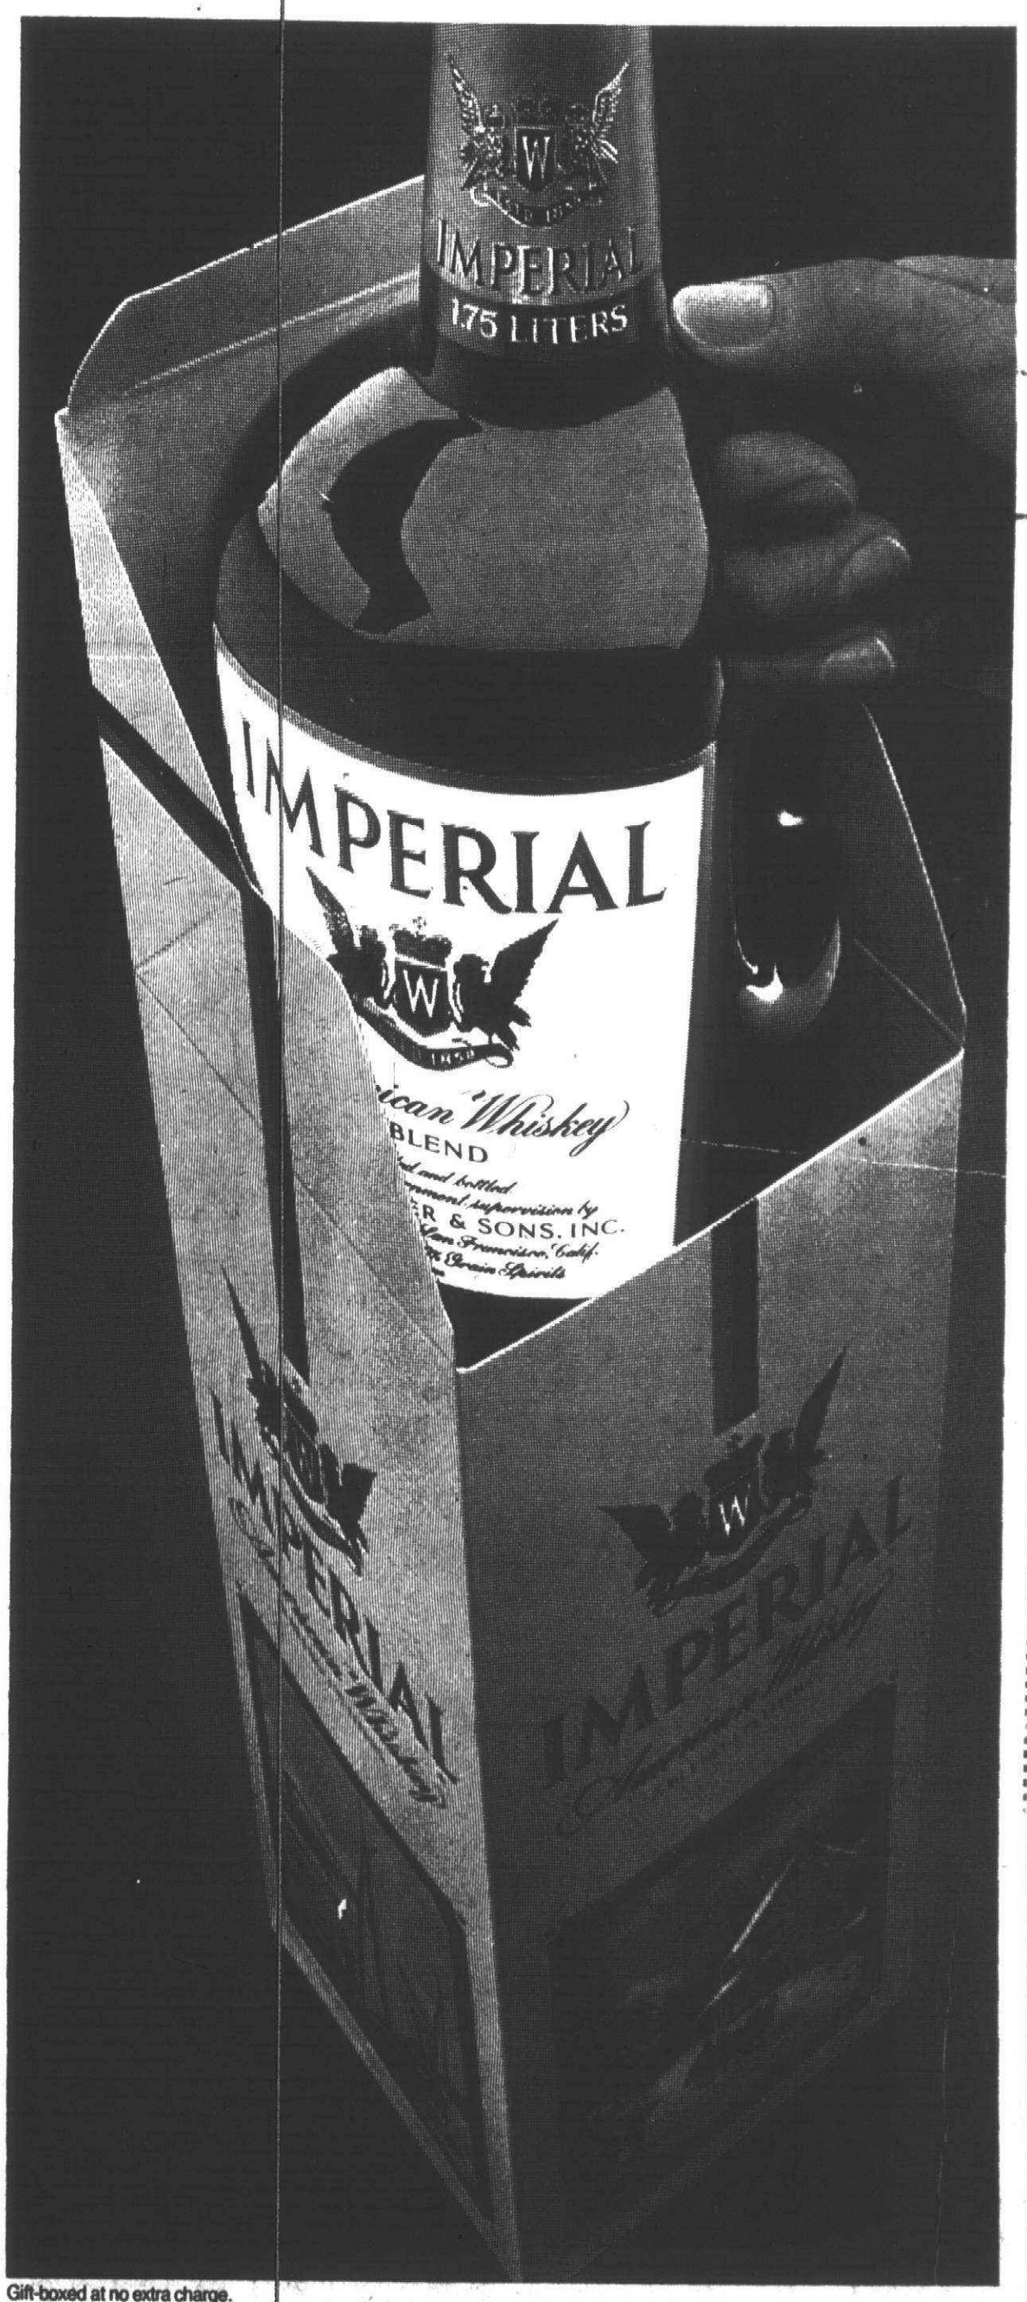

GARDEN CITY WEST will face a stiff challange this season after last year's Tri-River League co-championship with Inkster Cherry Hill

"We lost all five starters, plus my first two reserves," said veteran coach Chris Babler. "We're small, quite different from my ballclubs in the past. We'll be strong at the guard position."

The Tigers look set in the backcourt. The guards will be Rich Jaskolski, a 5-8 senior, and Tom Miner, a 5-9 senior. Backing them up will be a pair of juniors, Norm Boston, whose older brother Doug was last year's co-captain, and Jeff Draper.

In the frontcourt, Dave Seeger, a 6-2 senior in his third year on varsity, will lead the brigade. Chas Tunning, a 5-11 senior, and Mick Bodrie, a 6-2 junior, will either start or see a lot of action.

If the trend of high scoring continues through the winter months in the western suburban lanes the bowlers will force the re-writing of the record book.

The latest example of the pin spilling at Westland Bowl is an omen of what could happen as the cold weather, which always is conducive to high scoring, continues.

Last Friday night, for instance, five members of the Little Caesar Classic broke the 700 barrier. It was one of the highest scoring nights of the year.

More than that, it broke the record for 700 series in the house.

When the five series were written into the book it brought the total this season to 36, compared to 40 for all of last season.

The five sharpshooters who paced the high scoring included Bob Jawor with a 278 opener in 737.

Behind him came John Hurley with a 264 in 726, Bob Pniewski with a closing 268 in 725, Dick Beattie with an opening 268 in 721 and Randy Oncza with a 255 in 716.

While the men were splattering the pins Denise Rathbun paced the women with a 555.

TWO OTHER BOWLERS qualified for the 700 club during the week.

In the Wayne County Road Commission league at Garden Lanes, Glen Baske put together games of 248, 247 and 221 for 716.

The other came in the Civic League at Farmington Lanes. There Buzz Hansen found the range for games of 255, 252 and 205 for 712.

WHILE THE MEN were having a high scoring time Mary Mohacsi, the four time bowling queen, was up to her old tricks. During the week she paced the Ladies Classic at Garden Lanes a 672 on games of 242, 214 and 214.

She followed up that performance by setting the pace in the doubles at Merri-Bowl with a 616 that included a 225 opener.

Following her in the race at Garden Lanes were Doris Bramlett with 620 and Mae Lackey with a 613. At Merri-Bowl those who trailed right behind Mary were Mavis Falkiewicz with 594 and Beth Kenjorski with 592.

IT ISN'T OFTEN that the bowlers convert the 7-10 split. But it happened twice at Woodland Lanes during the week.

Morey Durian turned the trick in the St. John Boscoe league and Earl Gillson repeated it while bowling in the All-In-The-Family loop.

Bill Nichols will have cause to remember his feat this week at Mayflower Lanes. He converted the 3-10 split four times. To add to the oddities at Mayflower, Clyde Paridee posted a 157 triplicate and Myrtle Range knocked over the 4-6-2-10.

DAVE HAMILTON, the young bowler who has been showing signs of stardom, put on another show at Farmington Lanes when he paced the Teen Classic. He opened with 2 then added a 233 and closed with 183 for 626.

While Dave was knocking them over, two of the members of the Ladies Classic were reveling in the thought that they bowled their first 200 games. Diane Carson had a 208 in 602 and Peggy Stanton had a 222 in 600.

High single went to Sandy Weed with a 244 in 584.

EVEN THOUGH she didn't win a game Dot Fulton took top place in the Livonia Ladies Classic with 494-84-578. In the individual games Marion Heath won the first with 172-32-204, Lois Merriman won the second with 188-28-216 and Peg Eizenber took the third with 177-32-209.

Redford Township preview

Bishop Borgess inexperienced

Redford Bishop Borgess, which forged a 5-5 boys' basketball record last year in the Catholic League Central Division, could experience trouble this season.

No returning starters and only three players with a combined playing time of less than one quarter are back.

However, Bill Croteau, an optimist if one ever lived, will coach the Spartans this winter after moving over from Redford Thurston. That alone should be a big step in the rebuilding process.

"We're really stressing defense. We're going to do a lot of hustling and full-floor stuff (pressing)," said Croteau. "We're going to play a lot of pressure defense. On offense, we're going to be disciplined, work for the high percentage shot and try to control the tempo of the game."

The three returners are Tom Zbed, a 6-foot-2 forward; Mark Bartowiak, a 6-foot-1 forward; and Marty Hudy, a 6-foot guard. Croteau said he is especially impressed with Zbed's work and attitude during pre-season practice.

Others on whom Croteau said he will be counting are Larry Mulka, a 6-foot guard and "an aggressive floor leader;" Paul Bialowicz, a 6-foot-1 forward with "tremendous leaping ability;" and Bill Wesley, a 6-foot-1 forward who should prove valuable in a backup role.

"We're not going to be very big," said Croteau. "I'm impressed with the kids' attitude and hustle. Our immediate goal is to get the program turned around the way we like it."

DETROIT CATHOLIC CENTRAL coach Bernie Holowicki must think someone has put a hex on his team the past two years.

Before the 1978-79 season began, Barry Spencer, a 6-foot-7 forward, injured his leg and missed the entire campaign. The Shamrocks went 5-5 in the Central Division, 9-11 overall.

This summer, Todd Nadeau, expected to start at guard this winter, severed a hand in an industrial accident. Jim Harding, who was also expected to start this season, injured his leg during the football season, and will also be sidelined.

Both Nadeau and Harding will probably be lost for the entire season.

However, with Spencer back, CC should still present a formidable challenge to the likes of Birmingham Brother Rice, Detroit DeLaSalle and Harper Woods Notre Dame.

Mike Lewis, a 5-foot-11 guard, will co-captain the team with Spencer. Lewis is a leader who knows how to win. Witness his exploits on the football field this fall.

Two other players back from last year who are expected to contribute this season are Greg Wendt, a 6-foot-5 forward, and Joe Chops, a 6-foot-3 guard.

Wendt averaged 22 points per contest last year.

Dan Bartels, 6-foot-5, and Ed Churches, 6-foot-4, are contending for the starting center position.

Bartels, ironically, broke his leg early last season while filling in for Spencer.

Aaron Roberts, a 6-foot-1 junior with good speed, will serve as a swing player at guard and forward.

"Our biggest strengths, I'd say, are the comeback of Barry (Spencer), I hope, the leadership of Lewis and the effects of the state football title," said Holowicki. "I think we have great senior leadership."

A weak point is team speed at times, the coach added.

"We should be a contender, but it will be a tough league," said Holowicki. "We never had a kid hurt before last year. It's tough, but we're going to have to play over it."

BILL FOLEY, entering his second season as coach at Redford Union, believes the success of the school's football team this year will also boost his basketball program.

Livonia basketball roundup

Franklin, Churchill small; Bulldogs return 2

By DOUG FUNKE

High school boys will take to the basketball courts Friday for their latest start ever of interscholastic competition.

However, many area coaches welcome the extra pre-season preparation time.

Jim Komula, entering his third season as coach at Livonia Bentley, says he won't have the size that he has had in seasons past. However, fear not for the Bulldogs. They won't exactly be midgets either.

Bentley finished second to Plymouth Salem in the Suburban Eight League last season with a 10-2 record. The Rocks inflicted both conference losses.

Overall, the Bulldogs posted a 21-4 record. They advanced as far as the regional finals in the state tournament before losing to Ypsilanti by two points.

Two starters are back this winter — Craig Evans, a 6-1 guard, and Kurt Thorderson, a 6-3 guard/forward. Both are seniors.

Other players on whom Komula will depend are Ed Boris, 6-2, forward; John Bednarski, 6-3½, forward; Bob Ellis, 5-10, guard; and Greg Probst, 6-0, guard, he said.

"We're pretty much even in terms of talent. We plan to play a lot of kids," said Komula.

"We're going to be using a little different style than we're used to. We're going to do a little more running and a little more scrambling. We're going to have to work for everything we get.

"Right now, our intensity is our strong point. Defense is definitely going to be our mainstay."

Look for Bentley to favor the man-to-man defense.

"We don't have the awesome strength we have had," Komula concluded. "We're small this year compared with what we've had. However, if we continue to work hard, we'll be tough."

Salem, Belleville and Dearborn Edsel Ford — along with his Bulldogs — rate the favorite's role in Komula's view for the league championship.

LIVONIA FRANKLIN coach Jim McIntyre also figures to shuffle people in and out of the lineup in an effort to keep his running game in high gear.

Balance is the watchword for the Patriots this season. With high-scoring Chris Baker and Jeff Reich graduated, more people should get in the act this winter.

Four players who saw considerable playing time during the 1978-79 campaign return.

Jon McCarthy, 5-10, is a point guard; Tim Przysiecki, 6-2, forward; Bob Gohl, 5-11, guard; and Ron Lohman, 6-0, forward.

"This is a different type of club," said McIntyre. "Last year, we had some size. This year, we're smaller in size, but I think we're definitely quicker.

"I think we'll be quicker and probably have greater balance at most positions. We won't be relying on one or two kids.

"We definitely have enough kids from football so we're not going to be timid. We're going to be aggressive," said McIntyre. "I think we'll rebound well. We have kids who are willing to go in there and take their shots."

"With the kids we have on the bench, we don't lose a lot on the change," said McIntyre. "It looks like we'll be moving people in and out."

That means that players like Tim Gleason, Jeff Weber, Doug White, Norb Pakula, Dave Folsom, Jeff Wojcik and Kevin Leirstein should get a chance to show their stuff.

The Patriots, with a 13-9 overall record last year, tied with Redford Thurston for second place in the Northwest Suburban League with a 6-4 ledger.

What about this year?

"I think it's going to be very competitive. I don't think anyone is going to go 10-0," said McIntyre. "North (Farmington) will probably have a pretty decent ball club. I definitely like our chances to at least make a few ball clubs know we're around."

FRED PRICE, coach at Livonia Churchill, also welcomes the extra practice time in an effort to turn his team's fortunes in the Western Six League.

The Chargers tied for fourth place last year with a 3-7 mark.

Contending for starting forward positions this season are Brian Kersten, 6-3; Chris Harvath, 6-2; Ron Reed, 6-2; and Ken Bloch, 6-1.

Kersten started through the second half of last year, while Harvath was a regular during the first half of the campaign.

Reed played with the JV last year and Bloch saw limited service with the varsity.

Greg Hovermale, Ron Schueneman and Brian Kaump are guards. Hovermale probably has the most experience of the three. Price said that Schueneman has shown steady improvement during his career. Kaump should also get a chance to play during the season.

Doug Schueneman and Scott Conrad, both 6-3 juniors, are battling for the starting center position.

Price said that his big strength this year will probably be depth. He said he likes the fact that people are competing for starting berths.

"I think we have enough potential on the ball club to take the league championship," said Price. "It will be tough. We may need some help and we'll have to play over our heads a couple of times.

"Obviously, we're not favorites, but I've told the kids we have as good a chance as anybody," Price said.

Churchill had trouble scoring points last season, but Price is hoping that will change this winter.

RU tank relays slated

Boys' basketball games won't be the only athletic events scheduled to entertain the sporting public this weekend.

Redford Union will host its 17th annual boys' swimming relays and Redford Thurston will conduct its fourth annual wrestling invitational. Both of those events will be contested Saturday.

Twelve teams will compete for swimming honors at Redford Union, which is located at 17711 Kinloch between Six and Seven Mile Roads and Inkster and Beech Daly.

Livonia Bentley will be back to try and defend its championship.

Attempting to wrest the title away from the Bulldogs will be Plymouth Salem, Plymouth Canton, Livonia Churchill, Livonia Franklin, Livonia Stevenson, Westland John Glenn, Redford Thurston, Farmington, West Bloomfield, Trenton and RU.

Diving preliminaries begin at 1 p.m., swimming preliminaries at 3 p.m. and all finals at 7 p.m. Tickets, which will be available at the pool door, are 75 cents for elementary school students and $1.50 for everyone else. One ticket is good for the entire day.

EIGHT SQUADS will contend for wresling laurels at Thurston, 26255 Schoolcraft Road between Inkster and Beech Daly.

In addition to the host Eagles, the field will consist of Redford Bishop Borgess, Redford Union, Clarenceville, Livonia Bentley, Livonia Churchill, Clarkston and Benzie.

Preliminaries will get underway at 11 a.m. Consolation finals will be contested at 6:30 p.m. and the finals at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets, also available at the gym door, are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students for each of the two sessions (preliminaries and finals). An all-day ticket at $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children will also be available.

Thurston has won its own invitational each of the last three seasons.

Spartan cagers appear ready

The basketball team at Livonia Stevenson is hoping to enjoy as much success this winter as the football team did during the fall.

Veteran coach George Van Wagoner has a tough team coming back, tall and experienced.

"We hope to defend our Inter-Lakes League title," said Van Wagoner, referring to the Spartans 1978-79 co-championship with Pontiac Northern. "Our number one and two scorers and rebounders are back."

Van Wagoner was talking about Dave Hall and Evan Lyle. Hall, a 6-4 senior, was the most valuable player in the league last year. Lyle is a 6-2 senior.

Both will start along with Tom Van Wagoner, a 6-1 senior point guard and Tom Finn, a 6-2 senior. The other starting position is up for grabs.

"We try to rotate a lot of people in there," said Van Wagoner. "We run a stack offense. It's like a 1-2-2, or 1-4, with two people coming out on the wing. We operate from there."

Battling it out for the other starting position will be Kevin Gallagher, a 6-2 senior, James Fox, 6-2 senior, and Rich Sanders, a 6-5 sophomore.

Several other players will see a lot of court time. Tom Huff, a 5-11 senior, and John Huddy, a 5-10 junior, will play at guard positions. Bill Keyes, a 6-2 senior, and Brian Altenberger, a 6-1 junior, will see action in the front court.

"We can't let up," offered Van Wagoner about his Spartans. "There will be a lot of good clubs out there. We think it will be an interesting year."

IT WILL also be an interesting year for Redford Thurston, where first-year coach Cary Fralick takes over the reigns.

The Eagles are coming off of a second-place tie in last year's Northwest Suburban League race. "We're going to be young," said Fralick. "We only have two returning lettermen."

Thurston will be a junior-oriented team, with 10 juniors and just four seniors. Leading the way will be the two returners — Rich Rudd, a 6-2 junior forward, and Darren St. Ledger, a 6-3 senior post man.

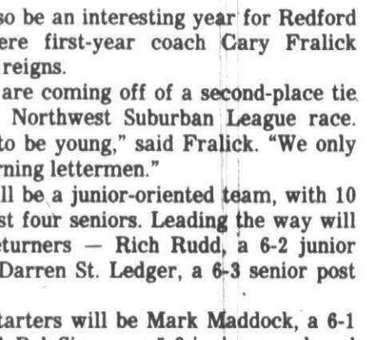

The other starters will be Mark Maddock, a 6-1 senior forward; Bob Simons, a 5-8 junior guard; and Andy Ramos, a 5-10 junior guard.

Other players you can expect to hear from are Steve Polidori, a 5-7 junior guard; Bruce Webb, a 6-1 senior forward; and Tim Fredericks, a 6-2 sophomore who will definitely play a key role in the Eagles season.

"We're going to be very quick," said Fralick. "We should be very competitive.

"I think our inexperience will hurt us, but we're going to come along as we start playing as a unit. I think that we're going to surprise some people."

Will meet Salem for 3rd time

Redford Union girls move on despite turnovers

By DOUG FUNKE

It isn't often that a basketball team which commits 35 turnovers during a game can manage to win.

However, Redford Union did just that, defeating Dearborn High 62-54 Tuesday in a Class A girls' state basketball regional game at Dearborn.

The Panthers will meet Plymouth Salem, a 48-45 victor Tuesday over Detroit Mumford, at 7:30 p.m. Friday for the regional championship.

RU has defeated Salem twice this season — 53-48 at home and 45-41 in Plymouth.

Ken Dersey, coach of the Panthers, said his team will have to show considerable improvement to beat the Rocks a third time.

"Salem's going to be tough. It always is the third time around. The first two games, it came down to free throws at the end," said Dersey.

"It all depends on what (Patty) Weidman (Salem's center) does. She's the key. She had an off night the first two games against us. If she has an on game, we're going to have to buckle down."

RU lacked intensity right from the start against the Pioneers. The Panthers first three offensive possessions against Dearborn resulted in a missed shot sandwiched between a pair of turnovers.

RU led 18-11 after the first quarter, 32-28 at the half and 42-28 after three periods.

The Panthers extended their advantage to 50-42 midway through the final quarter, but turnovers and an inability to make the key shot to put the Pioneers away continued to stymie.

Dearborn, in fact, pulled within two points, 50-48, and had possession of the ball with 2:35 remaining. At that point, Elizabeth Bacso, coach of the Pioneers, called time-out to emphasize her offensive and defensive strategy.

The momentum seemed to switch to RU the rest of the way.

During the final 2:35, Nancy Lawson found the range for four field goals, mostly from right under the basket. Terry Harper connected for two points as did Robin Taylor.

Lawson, RU's center and best scorer, finished with 34 points. She had 17 field goals, which established a new RU record.

Amazingly, the Panthers didn't take one foul shot during the entire game.

Only three other players besides Lawson scored for the Panthers. Lori Pastula netted 14 points, Taylor eight and Harper six.

Sue Cliff, Dearborn's center, led the Pioneers with 24.

Dearborn's offensive strategy seemed to be to set up the good shot and work the ball inside to Cliff.

Glenn, Thurston pin mat opponents

Redford Thurston opened its wrestling season Tuesday in impressive fashion for second-year coach Sal Marsalese, swamping Bishop Borgess 61-4.

The Eagles won all but one match, registering five pins along the way.

In the 119-pound weight class, Harry Newton recorded the fastest pin of the evening, downing Mike Butler after 59 seconds. Brian Galdes followed that in the 126-pound class by pinning Dave Augustyn at 4:26.

Craig McDonnell, wrestling at 132 pounds, made it three pins in a row as he nailed Paul VanZant at 3:07.

Thurston's other pins were registered by Kevin Ault in the 145-pound class, who took care of Mark Jacksum in 1:33 and Scott Farquar's fall of John Graczyk in the 198-pound class.

Jeff Roleau decisioned Mike Coliton in the 105-pound class, 6-0, and Mark Burns was a 7-0 winner over Dave Chiola in the 112-pound class.

At 138 pounds, Aaron Gutowski took a 12-2 decision over Tom Aepelbacher; Dave Wheeler was a winner in the 185-pound class with a 4-0 triumph over Paul Mailouski and Mark Erickson took care of Mike Moges in the heavyweight class, 5-4.

Jeff Lomas at 98 pounds and Chris McDonald at 165 pounds were winners by forfeit for the Eagles when Borgess couldn't muster an opponent.

Doug Johnson was the only Borgess winner of the night, beating Rich Kelp in the 155-pound class.

"We're really a young team," said a pleased Marsalese. "We lost nine starters from last year, but for the first meet they really did well."

WESTLAND JOHN Glenn also had a successful opener with a 46-21 victory over Farmington Harrison.

Glenn had its most success in the lighter weight classes, winning the first six bouts.

Pete Bologna started things out at 98 pounds by registering the fastest pin of the meet. He downed Harrison's Ken Sanders in 43 seconds.

Two other Rockets scored pins. David Zacharias beat Joe Doman in 53 seconds at 119 pounds. Ken Hodge took care of Don Gully in the 155-pound class in 2:42.

Four Glenn wrestlers won on decisions. Mark Demers beat Matt Alcantara 2-0 at 112 pounds; Guy Haggard was an 8-0 winner over Randy Webb in the 126-pound class; Greg O'Neil stopped Tom Burke 15-0 at 132 pounds; and Dave German took care of Ken Kopko with a 21-12 decision at 185 pounds.

How sick do you have to be before your health insurance covers you?

Most health insurance is fine. If you're sick enough. Anything bad enough to put you in the hospital qualifies for coverage.

But for doctor's visits and regular check-ups, you're out of luck. Chances are, you have to pay the whole bill. All by yourself.

Right now, Health Alliance Plan is having a special enrollment for people who want individual health care coverage.

Health Alliance Plan is the largest Health Maintenance Organization in Michigan.

A complete health care plan that covers you in the hospital. And in the doctor's office. For minor illnesses. And major surgery.

For yearly physicals, colds and flu, expensive allergy testing, and emergency room services, you pay only a fraction yourself. And you pay nothing for hospital care.

You're covered for less than $60 a month.

If you join HAP as an individual, our health care program only costs $59.33 per month. And for a family, it's only $104.95 per month.

When you enroll during our special enrollment period, from now until December 31st, you don't have to fill out a medical questionnaire.

You're covered right away, if you join right away.

If you don't have health insurance, or if you want to change from your present individual coverage, you can join HAP and be covered immediately. There's no waiting for benefits.

You're covered at three major hospitals and seven health centers.

Our association with Henry Ford Hospital, Metropolitan Hospital, and Metropolitan Hospital West means you'll have comprehensive in-patient care.

Our seven Health Centers are convenient to everyone in the Metropolitan Detroit area from Downriver to West Bloomfield. And you'll have the convenience of having all your family's medical records in one place. And all your doctors under one roof.

You're covered all the time, instead of some of the time.

Don't settle for health insurance that only helps some of the time.

Join Health Alliance Plan and you'll be covered all the time.

The VIEW from CANTON CENTER

by ELLIE GRAHAM

LORETTA DENNANY says, "It's very exciting watching a movie being made."

Loretta should know. She was involved a movie-making for more than a month. In fact, her home was used as a set for "Somewhere in Time," which will be released in April.

Mrs. Dennany has been a Plymouth resident since 1950. She was born on Mackinac Island as were her father and grandfather. And she has spent every summer of her life on the island.

Her Mackinac Island home was built in 1865, and it was chosen as the ideal setting for one segment of the movie. A mail box, bearing the name Laura Roberts, was installed in front of the house.

"Somewhere in Time," said Loretta, "is the story of a young man, played by Christopher Reeve, who falls in love with a picture of the actress Maude Adams taken when she was a young woman. Miss Adams was the first actress to play the part of Peter Pan. James Barre wrote the script just for her."

REEVE'S fascination (in the movie) with the young Maude Adams leads him to Kensington, a summer resort, to talk to author Laura Roberts (played by Teresa Wright) who has done considerable research and written about Maude Adams.

The Dennany home became Laura Robert's home for the movie.

"They replaced the picture over the mantle with one of my mother in her wedding gown. Christopher Reeve stood in front of the fireplace as he talked to Laura Roberts so my grandchildren will see their great-grandmother's picture in the film.

"It's a lovely love story and will be family entertainment."

Half a block down the street, her father's old home with its Grecian pillars became the Kensington Library in the movie. There was a sign at the front gate and another over the portico, proclaiming it as such.

"The present owner, Mrs. Scott, had people wandering into her home all the time, thinking it was the town library," said Loretta.

REEVES is a wonderful young man, according to Loretta. "He's handsome, tall and slender — very genteel and shy. He started out as a concert pianist and his father is a professor at Yale."

One morning when she went out to sweep her front porch, there was a big tank on her lawn.

"You're going to have rain today," announced one of the crew. It was hooked up to a water hydrant and the hero walked through the downpour — up the front walk and onto the porch.

There were about 15 takes so he arrived 15 times. And every time he went back across the street to begin the scene, he would be surrounded by autograph hunters.

"And although he was always very intent when they were shooting, he never turned down one person in the crowd that swarmed around him," Loretta said.

THE RAINMAKER later was moved to her side yard so the rain could pelt down on the dining room windows as they filmed the action there.

Christopher Plummer and Jane Seymour were the other leads in the movie. "Christopher Plummer played tennis every day with my nephew."

She added, "I never met nicer people. The whole crew were ladies and gentlemen, considerate of everyone. They came back to my house when the were through, cleaned it and put everything back in place. They all said they loved the island and swear they are coming back."

LORETTA WAS invited to a birthday party for Christopher Reeve. She also was invited to the "wrap party" on the last day.

It was held in the tea gardens of the Grand Hotel. "There were tables of drinks and everyone chose their own steak and saw them cooked to perfection.

"Everyone was in formals and after the party they started throwing each other in the pool from the high diving board.

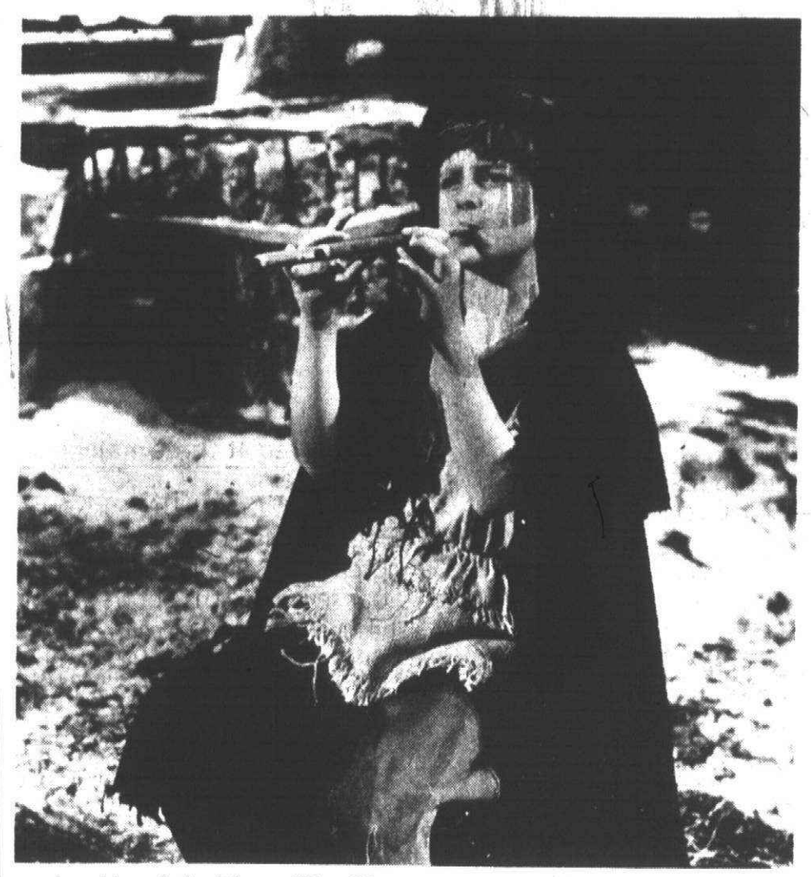

"Susan French, who is 75, was going to be thrown in, but she said, 'Wait until I take off my clothes.' She took them off and she had a bathing suit on underneath. Before they could catch her she turned and made a beautiful dive into the pool."

The cast and crew were all issued bicycles for their stay on the island, she said.

"People flocked in to work as extras. They came from Petosky, Traverse City and all around. They used mostly older people and were anxious to find women as extras."

She says she believes there will be more movies made on the island. The technicians praised the equipment and sound rooms from the Inn of Mackinac complex, which they used.

"There are sound studios there which the technicians said were superior to those they had in Hollywood."

Amahl and the Three Wise Men teach each other about charity in the opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors." It will be staged in Plymouth Salem High School on Sunday, Dec. 16.

David Aiken of Indiana University played King Melchior in the original television production of "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

'Amahl' has 2 from original cast

Two members of the original television cast will be in the Plymouth Symphony presentation of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" in Plymouth Salem High, Joy Road west of Canton Center.

Curtain time will be at 4 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 16.

David Aiken is in charge of the production and will sing the part of King Melchior, as he did in the world premiere television production in 1951. Rosemary Kuhlmann, also of the original cast, will sing the role of the mother.

This well-known Christmas classic has the distinction of being the first opera ever written for television.

In it, Italian-American composer Gian-Carlo Menotti has composed a delight suitable for both children and adults.

The story is centered around a visit by the Three Wise Men, on their way to Bethlehem, to a little crippled shepherd boy, Amahl, and his mother, an impoverished widow.

The part of Amahl will be taken by 11-year-old Gian-Carlo Vellutino of New York.

AIKEN, AND OTHER cast members are from Indiana University.

Carl St. Clair, professor of music and member of the conducting faculty at the University of Michigan, will be guest conductor.

The orchestra will also present on the program three shorter works by Beethoven, Debussy and Brahms.

They are the Egmont Overture, Op. 84; Prelude to. "L'Apres-midi d'un faune"; and Hungarian Dance No. 5.

Tickets for the performance are $5.50 for adults and $2.75 for students and senior citizens.

They may be purchased in advance from Beitner's Jewelry and Heide's Flowers, both on Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth; Plymouth Book World, Forset Place Mall and Penniman Avenue stores; and Arnoldt Williams Music Inc., Canton Center and Ford Roads.

IT IS ANTICIPATED that tickets will also be avilable at the door on the afternoon of the concert.

As usual, a Girl Scout troop will provide babysitting for preschoolers during the concert. Free transportation for senior citizens is provided from Tonquis Creek Manor at 3:15 the afternoon of the concert.

This program is made possible through a grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts and a gift from the First National Bank of Plymouth.

Community Chorus plans salute

Canton, Plymouth, Northville, Livonia and surrounding communities will salute the "Year of the Child" in music at 7 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 16.

The salute will be presented by the 85-voice Plymouth Community Chorus in First United Methodist Church of Plymouth, 45201 N. Territorial.

Tickets, at $2 each for adults and $1 for children and senior citizens, will be on sale at the door.

The program, entitled "Christmas Was Meant for Children," will include such favorites as the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah," "Bethlehem's Star," "Christmas Was Meant for Children," "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas," "Tonight Jesus Was Born," "Mistletoe and Love," and others, including some surprises and works by P.D.Q. Bach.

THE CHORUS has doubled its membership since September. As a result, it should really be able to do justice to such works as the Hallelujah Chorus, according to the director.

Mike Gross of Westland. Carol Chen of Romulus is the accompanist. Her husband, Kelvin, a musical therapist, will assist on the trumpet.

The Chens are from Romulus, and she is a former Plymouth resident.

Gross attended the University of Michigan and Eastern Michigan University. The Chens are graduates of the Michigan State University School of Music.

FEATURED SOLOISTS will include Earl Downing of Brighton, who was outstanding in the chorus's presentation of "Fiddler on the Roof" earlier this year.

Jack Dean of Plymouth, a tenor, will sing "Little Altar Boy," accompanying himself on the guitar.

Leatha Stonestreet, a soprano from Canton, will be featured in the ever popular "O Holy Night," and Jeannine Hayden will switch to a more modern vein in "Let It Snow."

Another Canton resident, Vickey Morrisey, will sing "Merry Christmas, Darling."

Scott and Barbara Yamazaki of Canton and Roger and Pat Bogenschutz of Whitmore Lake will present four-part harmony in "What Child Is This?" They call themselves the Yamashutz Quartet.

A trio composed of Marge Meyers, Winnie Nixon and Joann Visotsky will sing "Whatever Happened to Christmas?"

IN PREPARATION for the concert, the group has been rehearsing Sundays and Thursdays, as well as at its regular Tuesday evening meetings in Plymouth's East Middle School, 1042 S. Mill.

They sang at Westland Mall on Dec. 5, and will present a part of their program for senior citizens at Northville's Allen Terrace on Dec. 12. They will be at 12 Oaks Mall on Dec. 19.

Proceeds from the Plymouth concert will be used to purchase music and risers for the chorus. A new choral shell to give better voice projection was purchased with proceeds from a fund-raising dinner-dance last month.

Anyone interested in joining the chorus for fun and song should call Mrs. Leo Kivel at 459-9894 or Scott or Barbara Yamasaki at 455-1248.

The Plymouth Community Chorus will present a Christmas concert as a salute to the "Year of the Child" at 7 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 16, in Plymouth's First United Methodist Church.

Canton Chatter

Canton enjoys fairs, football

The big weekend of craft fairs has come and gone. Judging from the huge crowds in attendance, they must all have been very successful. The Plymouth Cultural Center was absolutely packed at noon Friday. I never did get to see some of the displays because of the crowds, but one of my favorite items was a wooden plaque which read: "Blessed are they who help clean up." Mothers of Canton, please say in unison: "Amen!"

The Canton Craft Fair filled the entire Canton High School cafetorium. The fair was sponsored by the Canton Jaycettes as a community service project. This was the first year for the Canton Craft Fair, and Jaycettes were very pleased with the number and the variety of exhibitors. Chairwoman Sue Roth said plans are already under way for next year when exhibits will be limited totally to hand-crafted items.

The Apple Run Garden Club provided a greens booth at the Canton Craft Fair, and was overwhelmed by the response. They will definitely be returning to the Canton Fair next year.

St. John's Episcopal Church also had a very successful Christmas Bazaar. All items at the bazaar are hand-made by the church Craft Guild which meets throughout the year. Carolyn Jacobs was chairwoman for this year's event. Among the items I found very delightful were the candy houses. Each year Mrs. Jacobs hosts a workshop in her kitchen. With a little instruction, and a lot of love and patience, these masterpieces of confection are created.

If you missed these excellent fairs, check the paper because there are several yet to come.

SEVERAL GROUPS of friends got together in Canton this past weekend for college football parties. Words don't come easy for me to describe the Army-Navy gathering. Therefore, I will let Army fans assist me in the next sentence by multiple choice. It was with great a.) pain, b.) anguish, c.) sadness, or d.) all of the above, that I watched the Army-Navy football game. You see, I, too, became a loyal Army football fan when I married a West Point graduate.

This year's Canton gathering for the Army-Navy game was at the home of Liz and Charlie Farrell. Liz and Charlie graciously opened their home to both Army and Navy fans this year. Perhaps they should get equal time for rebuttal to this column since Charlie is a graduate of the Naval Academy. From an Army point of view, I can say the following about the party. The food was very good, the company great, the game terrible, and I heard enough Navy songs to last at least another year! I was hoping for at least a few rounds of "On Brave Old Army Team!"

Army couples enjoying the party were Lorraine and Dave Sitler, and, of course, my husband Rex and myself.

Navy couples, who enjoyed the party even more, were Ann and Jack Balcom, Barb and John Hayes, Laurel and Stu McFarland, Nancy and Ed Ligon, Barb and Jim Devaney, Kathleen and Bill Seiss, and Carol and Bruce Erickson.

The Farrells served a party tray and snacks, and various drinks during the game. One of the favorite drinks of the day was "Cadet Crush," a soft drink bottled with a special label for the Navy. A chili supper was served following the game.

There was one commom ground that caused all present to stand up and cheer during the game. This occurred when defensive player number 51 entered the game for Navy. Number 51 is Floyd Jaeggars and is Mrs. Farrell's cousin. Liz, do you suppose you could talk Floyd into being an exchange student to West Point during football season next year?

With 366 days till the next Army-Navy football game I have just two words for Army fans: BEAT NAVY!

There has been some interest expressed by wives of West Point graduates, in getting together for lunch periodically. If you are the wife of a West Point grad, and would like to go to a luncheon in January, please call Jane Brown at 455-2052.

BEV AND GEORGE Halloran were hosts to a group of Penn State fans for the Penn State-Pitt football game. Unfortunately, they suffered the same fate as Army fans, but there does seem to be strength and consolation in numbers.

Joining the Hallorans for the game and spaghetti dinner which followed were Rudy and Jet Baas, Linda and Al Minsterman, E.J. Lund, and Pat Lewis.

In these parts it would be almost un-American to end a column discussing football without saying the "magic words." So, will someone please send me Groucho's duck with the $50 before the Gator Bowl, because here are the words: M Go BLUE!

This is a man for all oceans

By NANCY AUSTIN

Jean-Michel Cousteau, the eldest son of the famed ocean explorer Jacques-Yvews Cousteau, received a warm welcome from a sell-out crowd of 600 people at Schoolcraft College recently.

For two hours Cousteau enlightened his audience with films of the underwater world. He described life in the sea as "the survival of the fittest," and spoke of the impact man has on his environment.

"I grew up on the French Riviera," said Cousteau. "When I was four years old, my parents took me out on their boat and pushed me overboard with a little machine on my back. When I finally realized I could breathe by sucking on the tube in my mouth, I became a part of a journey which would continue for a lifetime.

"I sensed the complexity of the sea, but never really understood it. Here I am 38 years later and I still don't understand it, but I realize it is so complex."

He explained that with his parents and his brother he explored hundreds of miles of coastline between Italy and Spain, and learned all about his "backyard." Then when his own son was 4 years old, he pushed him overboard, "with a little machine on his back to share the same things my father shared with me."

"It was when I realized these childhood discoveries were not there any longer for me to share, I became frustrated and decided to do something about it," he stated. "That is why I am on this lifelong journey."

ONE OF HIS INTRIGUING films was a sound recording of marine fish and mammals communicating with each other. "Anyone could hear these sounds simply by putting their heads underwater," he explained.

The sounds included those of schools of walruses, porpoises and their cousins the dolphins, squirrel fish, the beluga whale, toad fish and a conversation between a humpback whale and her calf.

Another film demonstrated how life in the ocean is a matter of survival of the fittest. "There is no room for the injured, weak, or the sick," he said.

And the film showed these same injured, weak, and sick becoming the prey and food for the healthiest of the survivors.

Cousteau is concerned about the future survival of some of our species which are threatened both by pollution and overfishing our waters. He pointed out the beluga whale as an example of one species whose survival is threatened.

"BUT IN ADDITION to the environmental consequences there is a moral issue," said Cousteau. "Can we decide, in faith, that we will see the largest animal on earth (larger than any dinosaur) disappear?

This animal, whose tongue is larger than an elephant, can we let it disappear? Can we decide to let them go?"

Cousteau did not end the evening without defending the much-maligned shark, presenting some interesting footage about sharks, their habitat, and their habits.

He criticized the movie "Jaws" because it was not designated as science-fiction, thereby distorting the sharks image.

He pointed out several flaws in the movie. "The largest fish to have existed on the planet is the shark, but it has no teeth. It is a plankton feeder. The movie producers ignored that fact, because you can't make a 90-minute film about a shark that is going to gum you to death," quipped Cousteau.

"Of the 350 species of sharks, only eight or 10 are potentially dangerous," he explained. "They are only doing their job. They are the scavengers of the ocean. They pick up the sick, wounded, and dead."

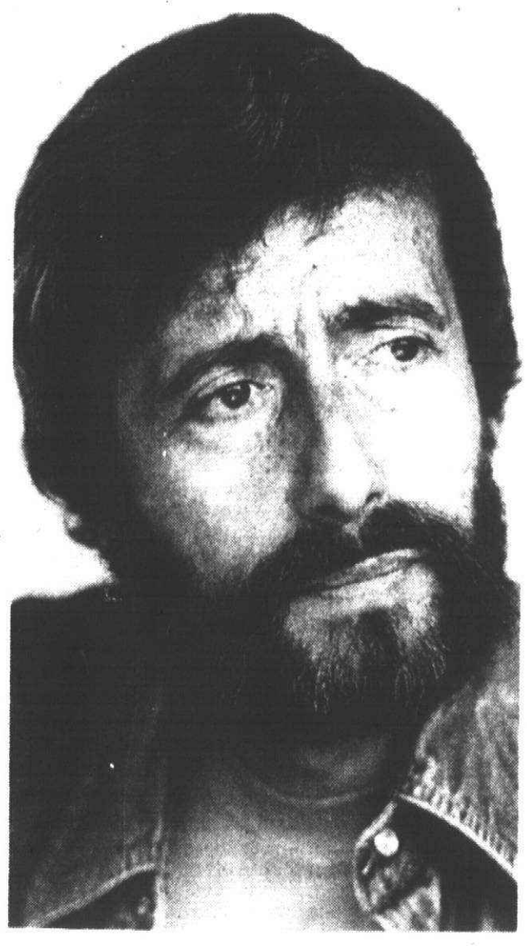

About shark attacks, he had this to say: "Where there have been accidents involving sharks, one or more unusual circumstances have taken place," he indicated. He then listed turbid water, the presence of blood, and splashing the water with hands or feet, as some of the possible circumstances that can result in a shark attack.

"I have had many sharks check me out, but I am here tonight. My father and I have never had a scratch," he declared.

The speaker then described the Cousteau method of escaping from sharks.

When swimming in shark-infested waters be sure to have a partner, he said. When faced with the prospect of a shark attack, move into a back-to-back position with your fellow swimmer. While one of you keeps his eyes on the huge fish, the other can slowly and carefully start to move both of you away from the scene without disturbing the water.

THE AUDIENCE questioned Cousteau following his presentation. These questions ranged from concerns about oil spills to how they could help clean up the environment and make people aware of the problems of pollution.

JEAN-MICHEL COUSTEAU

Cousteau fights pollution

By NANCY AUSTIN

The 41-year-old handsome, bearded Frenchman speaks softly. His eyes reflect the sensitivity of a man who has taken the best from his life at sea.

Jean-Michel Cousteau, himself a father, beams when he recalls the exciting times he has spent with his own, father Jacques-Yves Cousteau, both above the water and beneath it.

"I have received an education that can never be replaced," he said.

The younger Cousteau now lives on Hilton Head Island in South Carolina with his wife and children, a boy 12 and a girl 7. Hilton Head is also the location of the Jean-Michel Cousteau Institute, a public non-profit organization established as a learning and research center for students from all over the world.

His smile breaks into a laugh when you ask him if people are more educated today about the world around them, in particular the sea. "Oh, yes. There is no comparison," he replied. "And I think it is mainly because of the media and my father's work over the last 12 years."

THE CALYPSO CREW ,including Cousteau and his father, have filmed four one-hour television specials a year for 12 years. People have seen these specials and are interested in them, explained Cousteau.

As a result they are more knowledgable about life in the ocean. He welcomes questions and never thinks a question is stupid or silly. But he gave the example of one which was asked 12 years ago.

"One person asked me if my father was so skinny because of the water pressure he was exposed to all the time," he said. "Today you laugh because you know better, but at that time, it wasn't a silly question."

Cousteau and his crew may spend as long as three to four months aboard the Calypso, the ocean-going ship that is his home on the water. At times they may be three or four hours in the water in one day. Life aboard the Calypso is not an easy one, but the younger Cousteau does not complain.

"It is a comfortable boat, and very sea-worthy," he said. "It is the original boat. It was just recently certified and the certifying team told us it probably would go on for another 20 years. It is made completely of wood, so it won't rust. That is probably the main reason we still have it."

IN THIS COUNTRY the Cousteau team numbers about 50 not counting volunteers and the members of his society. In Morocco, there are approximately another 50 dedicated to his worldwide cause.

When asked why he chose Hilton Head for the location for his institute he explained it this way:

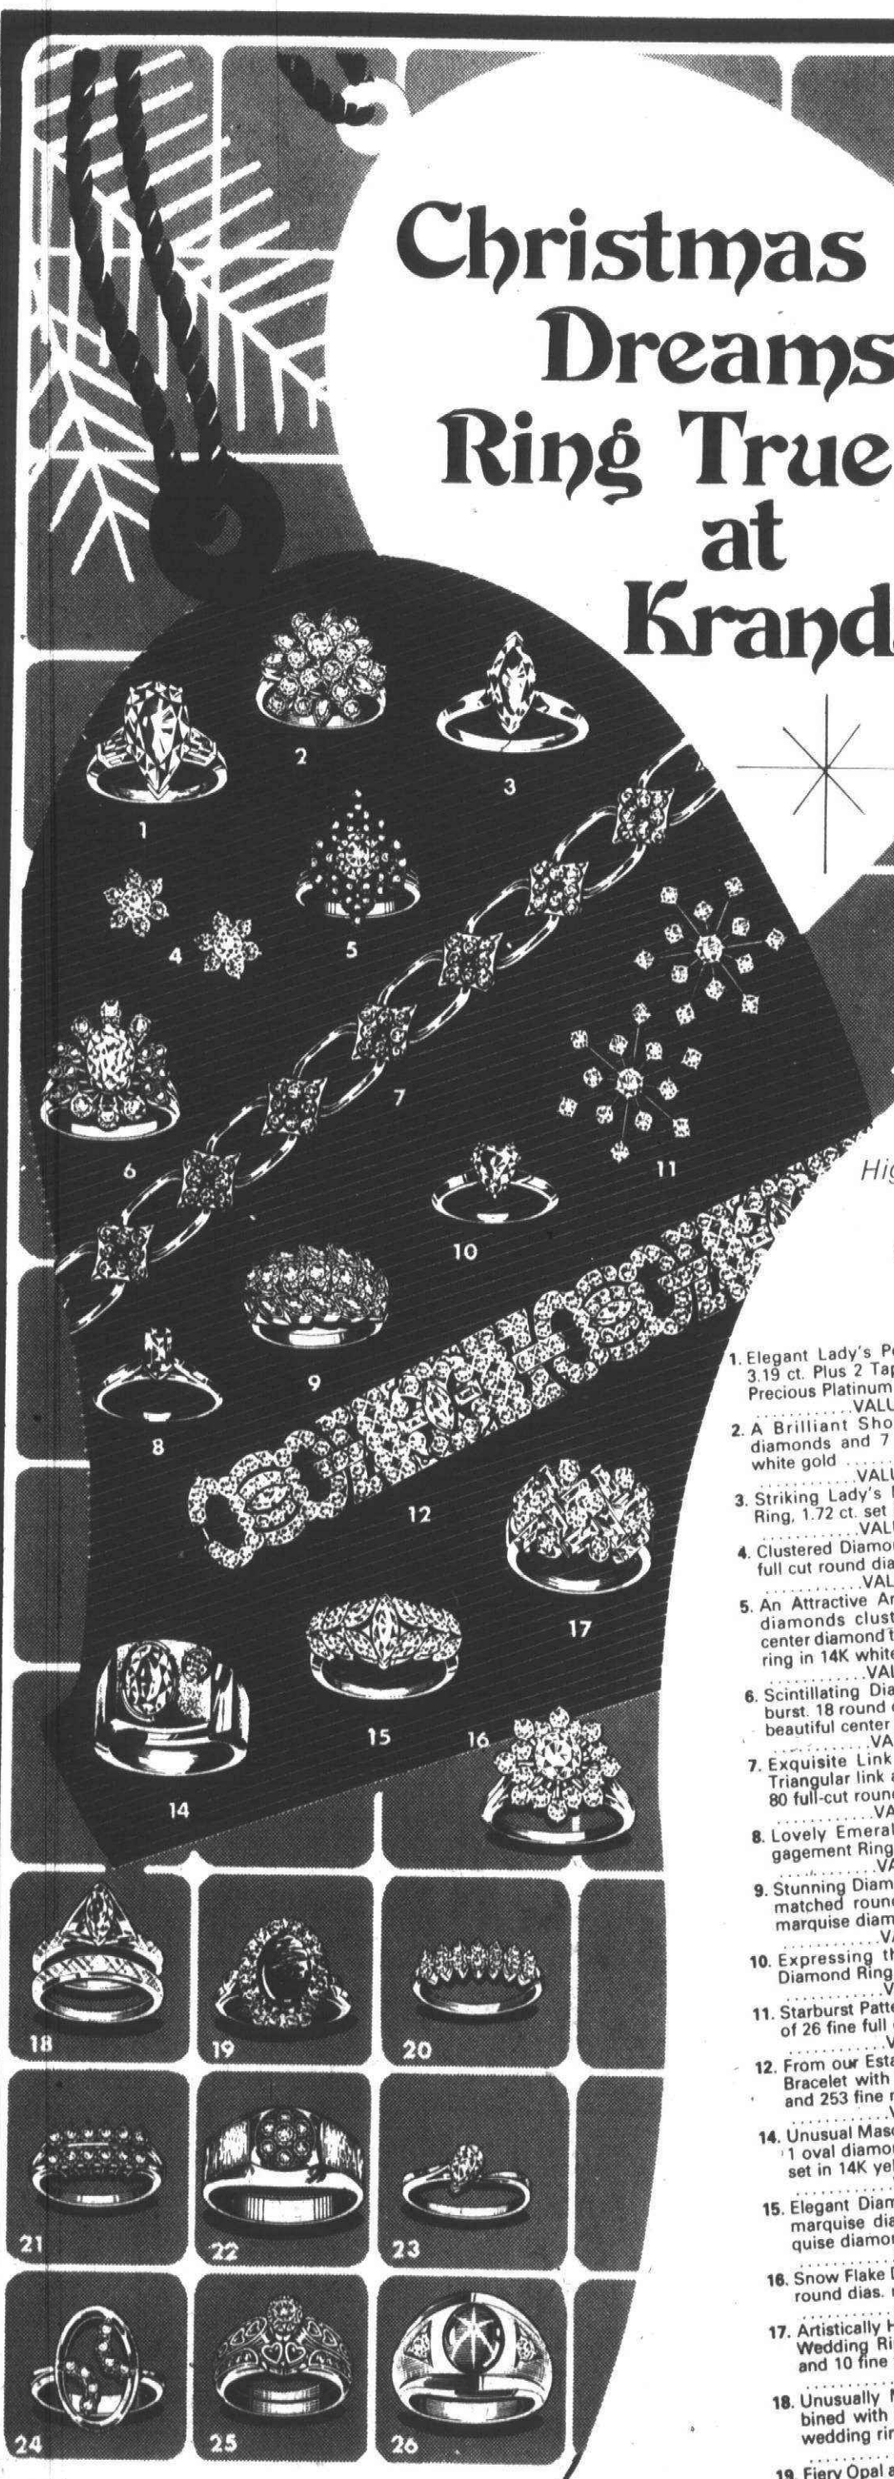

"Hilton Head is an untroubled, vital coastal environment. There are very few industries and it has a small population," Cousteau said. "It is a nice testing ground to encourage prevention before damage. We have been successful. Now we are trying to preserve that part of the nation."

"Project Ocean Search" is one of the purposes of the institute. Students from many countries participate in the education Cousteau offers his students.

They study in the field and in labs, meet with fisherman, discuss the development of Hilton Head, and examine the marshland. It is a natural refuge where birds congregate in great numbers.

Heat's off

Floral styles may change

By BETTY MASSON

If flowers are on your gift-giving list, better take the Ayatollah Khomeini into account when you're making your choice. Ask your florist how the flowers will do in today's cooler houses.

Thanks to modern science, your poinsettias will likely still flourish; but African violets may have to go. Also the palm tree.

That's the word if you're energy conscious and a plant lover as well.

"Most flowering plants will do better when the house is cooler," reports Dennis Sparr, of Sparr's Greenhouse on Joy Road. Most foliage plants like it warm.

Bill Ruehr, owner of Heide's Flower Shop on Mill Street, sees some of the old-fahioned flowers making a comeback.

"Cyclamens and cinerarias are coming back" said Ruehr. "It may be fashion; it may be that they don't take as much heat."

Roy Brock, manager of Flowers by Margie Rae in Canton Township, sees a growth of interest in potted plants. "A ot of people will go with potted plants ow, because they last longer." And otted plants, when in bloom, last longr in cooler temperatures, florists gree.

Betty Porter of the Statice Shop on enniman Avenue reports that her usiness in permanent flower arrangeents is flourishing.

ALONG WITH cyclamens, azaleas, Christmas cactuses and Jerusalem cherries are colorful, yet cool-loving Christmas plants. But it might be wise for families with children to steer clear of Jerusalem cherries. . . those red berries are poisonous.

Next Easter, cinerarias and calceolarias (pocketbook plants) may every well make a comeback, report florists. They, along with the ever-popular Easter lilies, enjoy cool temperatures.

Poinsettias, while they like to be warm and humid, don't need as much heat in the winter as they did when the Sparrs planted them in mid-August. Plant experts have created strains which make it possible for this once tropical plant to be grown in greenhouses in Michigan.

Starr has several thousands on hand, and Ruehr has 700 on order for traditional Christmas giving. Sparr said that the poinsettias have flourished this year, and he has the second best crop he's had in 15 years.

Today's poinsettias last well into spring, and come in white, pink and even marbled, as well as the traditional red. Poinsettias thrive on a medium temperature, between 65 and 75 dgrees in the winter.

Azaleas positively suffer if the temperature goes up above 70, but they take about three years to mature.

"Cyclamens were a great old Christmas flower," said Ruehr, and they may be coming back in popularity. They also are slow pokes in the plant world, taking up to 18 months to two years to mature, but they and their friends, the cinerarias, members of the snapdragon family, positively love cool temperatures, somewhere between 55 and 70. You'll be doing them a favor when you turn the heat down at night, but be sure to keep the humidity up.

Between 55 and 70 is also good for the Jerusalem cherries, Christmas cactuses and calceolarias.

GLOXINIAS, now on display in many area flower shops, are lovely, but like the African violet, they crave warmer temperatures. Their preferences are from 65 to 75 degrees.

On the other hand, these like shady spots, while the others like a good deal of sunlight, something that might be difficult to obtain in snowy Michigan winters.

Plant scientists are undoubtedly studying ways of making plants last longer and thrive in cooler climates, and the house plant of the future may see some changes.

Said Ruehr, "I remember my father saying that a large mum cost as much in 1939 as it did in 1974." This was because botanists were able to develop a chrysanthemum that grew in 12 weeks. In 1939, it took a year.

There is no doubt that that the energy shortage will have an effect on the flower business as a whole.

AS FUEL COSTS rise, plant prices will go up, like everything else. It will cost more to heat the greenhouses here. Sparr reports that they have had to expand and work three times as hard just to keep up to where they were a few years ago.

On the other hand, it is going to cost more to have flowers flown in, because it will cost more to operate the airplanes and delivery vans.

A good example of this is roses. Roses are grown year-long in Michigan greenhouses, and some florists prefer them, claiming that they will last longer because they are acclimated. They also smell prettier.

But they cost more than roses presently flown in from Colorado, California or Colombia.

LWV to hear of programs helping troubled juveniles

A panel of three experts in the field of helping troubled youth will be the League of Women Voters' guest speakers at the Dec. 12 program.

This public meeting will be held from 12 noon to 2:30 p.m., in the Northville City Council Chamber, 215 W. Main, Northville. The program is entitled "Alternative Programs Helping Troubled Youth."

Each speaker will discuss his organization's programs and progress with legislation and funding, what relationship the Revised Juvenile Code will have on his organization and clientele, and finally the roles of such volunteer organizations as the League and the American Association of University Women in helping making changes for the better in the way children are dealt with.

Don Durham will represent the Out-Wayne Youth Services Coalition, Inc. This private non-profit organization with offices in Romulus, serves youth ages 12-17 and operates three separate programs. These are Counterpoint Runaway Center in Inkster, a Home-Attention program and a foster care office which recruits, trains and licenses foster care workers.

RONALD SCOTT, executive director of Youth Living Centers, Inc., will be the second speaker. Youth Living Centers, an affiliate of a similar youth project called The Villages, Inc., in Topeka, Kansas, founded by psychiatrist Dr. Karl Menninger, will hold its second annual meeting this month.

The centers will offer a new model of community-based group home care for young people from troubled backgrounds. The intention is to provide a family atmosphere, as opposed to an institutional environment; to emphasize a learning model rather than a treatment approach; and to promote, when possible, a reconciliation between each child and his biological parents.

The third panelist will be Dale Yagiela, director of Growth Works, Inc. Growth Works is housed in the newly-renovated Stermer Memorial Building on S. Main Street, in Plymouth. A private, non-profit coroporation, it is an alternative Human Service organization serving the needs of Plymouth-Northville and Canton.

The organization is made up of three service components, community and neighborhod services, including Senior Citizen Outreach and information and referral service; Youth Services, youth employment, alternative education, counseling and problem solving, juvenile justice, youth involvement and leisure time activites; and counseling and intervention services (formerly the Our House Crisis Center), crisis intervention, on-going counseling, parenting and child abuse, learning center and substance abuse.

The league has extended special invitations to the LWV of Livonia, the Plymouth and Northville AAUW and high school counselors to attend.

Baby-sitting services may be reserved for the meeting by calling Mary Ellen McKercher, 455-4539, no later than Saturday, Dec. 8.

Fellowship to hear speaker

Bill Gurney will be the principal speaker at the 7 p.m., dinner meeting, Dec. 14, of the Northville-Plymouth-Livonia Chapter of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship.

The meeting will be in the Plymouth Hilton Inn.

BILL GURNEY

Gurney is president of Life Skills, Inc., an out-patient counseling center in Dearborn.

The son of a Lutheran minister, Gurney has a Thursday morning television program, "Christians and Mental Health" on WGPR Channel 62. He is co-editor of the "Journal of Christian Healing."

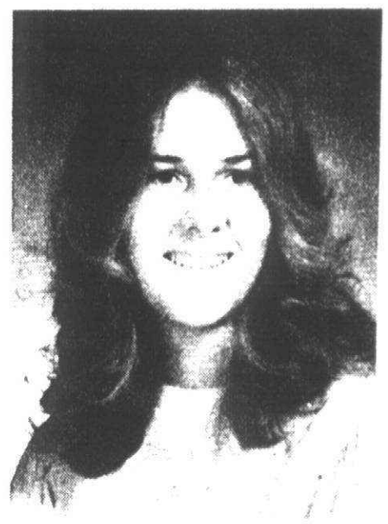

He received his MSW degree from the University of Michigan, and taught at Concordia College and Eastern Michigan University. He has worked in the Wayne County General Hospital substance abuse and alcoholic treatment center.

Sharing the program will be Chuck and Connie Coggins, gospel recording artists from Durand.

Cost of the dinner is $8 plus 15 percent gratuity. The program will follow at 8. Both dinner and the talk are open to the public.

Reservation checks should be made payable to FGBMF and sent to Box 5332, Northville, MI 48167, by Dec. 11.

Paul-Haywood

Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Paul of Crabtree Lane, Plymouth, announce the engagement of their daughter, Diane Lynn, to Steven Douglas Haywood, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Haywood of Trenton.

The couple is planning a June wedding in St. Kenneth Catholic Church, Plymouth.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and is employed in the Riverview Community School District.

Her fiance attended the University of Kentucky and is employed by Ford Motor Co.

Arts Council has grown a lot in 10 years

They began with a "picture lady," 10 years ago, and in that time members of the Plymouth Community Arts Council have kept adding to the scope of their activities.

Today, they offer 18 programs and services connected with the arts throughout the Plymouth-Canton community.

Plans for the coming year were discussed at a working luncheon. Nancy Sharp is president. Other officers for the 1979-80 year are Joan Englehart, vice president; Jan Carney, secretary; and Mary Rose Hausman, treasurer. Directors are Wilma Newton, Jan Gattoni, Audrey Crain, Elaine Kirchgatter, Judy Morgan, Ellison Seaver and Mercedes Kimling.

Beverly Becker is staff administrator.

School programs include not only visits by "picture ladies, but also by "sculpture ladies," plus Middle School Galleries, and the arranging of performances by professional and amateur performing arts groups. There is also a teacher resource file.

In services to the community, the PCAC operates an art rental gallery, craft classes, a master list of teachers of the arts, adult performing arts presentations, community visual displays and artists and craftsmen's shows.

It also offers a variety of grants and awards to aspiring artists.

THE PCAC was founded in 1969 by Joanne Hulce and a group of Plymouth women, under auspices of the board of education, to plan a service to the community in the visual, performing and literary arts.

Since that time, it has grown to include 250 members who collectively spend thousands of hours in volunteer service to the schools and community.

More than 60 women are involved in the "picture lady" program, in which volunteers take reproductions of fine works of art into elementary school classrooms to show and discuss with the children.

In the middle schools, reproductions, planned around a subject, are displayed on six-sided, folding mini-galleries. PCAC volunteers plan, research and rotate the exhibits.

Since 1974, the PCAC has been providing sculpture study units for display in all school media centers They work in cooperation with school librarians.

Volunteers rotate sculpture units and descriptive materials on a monthly basis.

In 1978, this program was expanded at the elementary level to take sculpture directly into the classroom through the use of "sculpture ladies." This new service is patterned after the picture lady program.

A VARIETY OF professional and amateur performing arts programs are made available to the schools each year through the PCAC. Volunteers locate, list and schedule quality assembly and small group programs for the schools as requested by each principal.

Amateur programs are offered to schools free of charge.

The cost of professional programs is paid by the individual schools with some financial assistance from the PCAC.

In its "teacher resource file, the PCAC maintains a list of people within the community who have a special interest or talent which they are willing to share with teachers and students. Copies of the file are located in the media centers of each school.

In encouraging and helping individuals interested in pursuing further study in the arts, the PCAC has established several financial awards.

The first of these was the Russell Isbister Memorial Award. Initially created in 1972, the Isbister Memorial sought to recognize the outstanding art work of Plymouth-Canton Community School students.

Using funds donated by the Plymouth Rotary Club in memory of former Isbister, the superintendent of schools, the PCAC has selected outstanding pieces of student art work to become part of a permanent collection.

This collection is hung in the Board of Education office on Harvey Street, and is added to annually.

FIVE STUDENT fine arts awards, ranging from $75 to $150, are offered by the PCAC to students in grades 6 to 11 to encourage advanced study. Among recent winners of this award have been students who received additional training in summer art classes offered and sustained by the PCAC.

The JWH award, named after the founder, Joanne W. Hulce, provides two $500 grants each year to graduating seniors who plan to pursue a career in the visual, performing or literary arts.

Financial assistance is also available to Plymouth-Canton school teachers through the Teacher Projects Assistance Program, established in 1977.

The aim of these PCAC grants is to provide teachers with funds for use in innovative arts activities which could not take place without financial assistance.

Women discuss roles of women in religion

By MARGARET MILLER

Whether women are accepted in the clergy is a less important question than whether both women and men in the clergy can lead the Christian church to "make a difference in the public order."

That's the assessment of a woman minister, the Rev. Carol Allen of the staff of Rosedale Park Presbyterian Church, Livonia.

She made it while participating in a panel discussion on women in the church at a meeting of the Livonia Ministerial Association.

Sharing the spotlight with her were Margaret Hess, author and Bible class leader, and Jean Lambert, academic dean of St. John Provincial Seminary in Plymouth.

Mrs. Hess discussed the "bad press" the apostle Paul has received in connection with the women's movement. Ms. Lambert talked about the role of women in the ministry of the Catholic church in view of the recent pronouncements of Pope John Paul II.

REV. ALLEN presented the idea that the Christian clergy has always taken somewhat feminine role with society itself in the traditional role of the male.

"Society has granted the clergy status as long as it doesn't rock the boat," she explained. "We have taught moral values, but without really hitting the business world.

"We find ourselves wondering whether the public really gives a darn about what the church is doing, and we see the church become more private and traditionalized and trivialized."

She emphasized that men and women in the clergy "must decide together where we want to be in society."

"We also need to help each other decided what it is to be a man or a woman and not let society tell us," she added.

"We can explore theology together. We can reclaim our role as theologians where the people are rather than where the students are.

"We can continue to allow the sexes to be separated and continue bondage to the old Adam, or we can realize that such a course limits God."

MARGARET HESS, whose husband, Dr. Bartlett Hess, is senior minister of Ward United Presbyterian Church of Livonia, discussed biblical references to the apostle Paul.

"Men throw around references like Paul's statement that women should keep silent in church," she said. "But that does not fit with other things we know about Paul.

"My attitude is that he was talking to a local group. Maybe the women involved had long been shut up in their homes and tended to over-react and perhaps he was telling them to behave more sensibly."

Mentioning another passage from Paul's writings, she said "we'll agree that women should not be idlers, and neither should men."

Mrs. Hess also noted the Bible's description of how Paul dealt with women in one instance.

"He went to the riverside in Philippi," she said, "and found only women there. He built a church there with what he had, as men have been doing ever since."

In other particulars, Mrs. Hess said th apostle made no criticism of Philip's daughters who prophesied and commended a woman named Phoebe and described her as a deaconess.

"But I have to say," she concluded, "that I think there is one time when women SHOULD keep silent in church. That is on Sunday morning when my husband is preaching."

REV. CAROL ALLEN

JEAN LAMBERT admitted to the ministerial group her disappointment with the stand taken by the pope in his visit to this country but added that this need not mean women cannot increase their pastoral and leadership roles in the Catholic church.

"Pastoral care and service certainly can be performed by all and is being performed by women," she said. "The church can tap into what is already being done by women but not recognized as ministry.

"The challenge is to the local churches to identify other functions of women in its leadership, becaause if a local church is to be a force in the community it will require the commitment of all its people, including women."

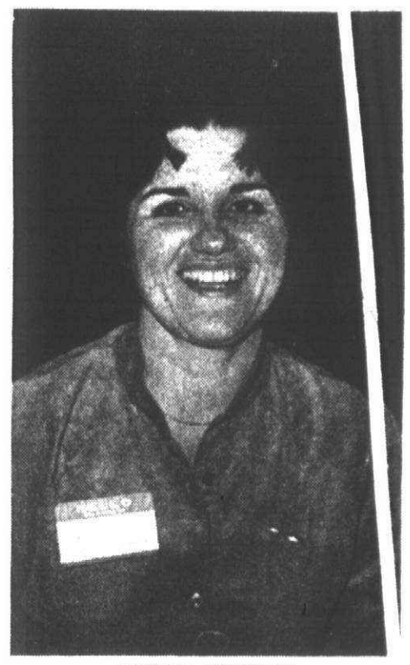

Ms. Lambert said she personally advocates ordination of women.

"I'm sure there will come a day," she said, "when women will have real leadership roles in the Catholic Church.

"But that day probably will not be soon. So we must decide how best to use the talents and training of the women out there not likely to be granted ordination in the near future."

CANTON CALVARY ASSEMBLY OF GOD, 7933 Sheldon, is offering an adult series of Bible studies relating to family living and personal relationships at 9:45 a.m. each Sunday. Teaching the class are the Rev. M. Gregory Gentry, pastor of the church, and his wife, Vicky. The Bible and its basic principles will be the primary textbook. Some of the topics include love in a new dimension, a Christian view of sexuality and family togetherness. The Gentrys feel they can relate to family problems because eight years ago they were on the verge of divorce. The conversion of Rev. Gentry changed the situation, he says.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF PLYMOUTH, 4500 N. Territorial, will present the musical "Listen to the Voices" by Steve Tippett at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9. Members of Sunday school classes for children, youth and adults will participate. The story in word and song is about three shepherd boys who discover that the Messiah will be born in their town. The shepherd boys are played by David Elliott, Robert Crain and Craig Scott. Others in the cast are Karen Elliott, Scott Yonker, Matt Crook, Burly Chapman, Pal Malone and Ed Varesh along with the children's Sunday school choir. Tara McCormick and Janet Crook will direct the performance. A crib nursery will be provided.

ROSEDALE GARDENS PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Hubbard at W. Chicago, Livonia, has planned a potluck supper at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9. It will be followed by the showing of a film, "The Cosmic Christmas," and carol singing. Each family unit is invited to bring an ornament for the tree. Nursery and kindergarten care is provided after 6 p.m. For more information call church at 422-0494.

TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH, 39020 Five Mile, Livonia, is inviting area residents to an Advent happening at 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9. Guests will tour the church rooms accompanied by a tour guide. Music will be presented along with a drama by the high school youth. Total tour time is one hour, with one leaving every 15 minutes between 6 and 7 p.m.

CHRIST OUR SAVIOR LUTHERAN CHURCH, 14175 Farmington Road, Livonia, will observe the Advent season with special midweek services at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 12 and 19. The central thought each week will focus on one of the persons connected with the Advent story, Mary, Zachariah and John the Baptist. Each will be portrayed in a tableau while a song about the person is sung.

ST. MATTHEW UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, 30900 Six Mile, Livonia, will be the scene of a luncheon sponsored by Church Women United at 12:15 p.m. Friday, Dec. 7. A choral group from Churchill High School will sing. Officers for 1980 will be installed. Cost is $2 per person. Reservations are needed for the luncheon and babysitting. Call 464-8910.

Keeping fit

How to avoid heart disease

Have you been feeling a bit tired and sluggish lately?

A bit out of shape?

Well, it's never to late to do something about it, according to the Canton, Northville, Plymouth Family YMCA.

The Y is starting up a new program to rejuvenate one's heart and respiratory system.

In doing so, it hopes to build up one's resistance to heart disease, the nation's number one killer.

"It's to help people build up health for the rest of their lives," says Y director Janet Luce. "Keeping the body fit is preventive medicine."

Luce says office workers are most vulnerable to lax "cardiovascular systems." These are the people she'd like to reach most.

"Those who sit behind a desk are slowly going to pot. The sedimentary life is disastrous to a person's health. Our bodies weren't made to sit throughout the day."

In addition to an exercise program, the program features classroom instruction focusing on health and nutrition. Material sources include the Southeastern Michigan Lung Association, the Michigan Heart Association and the Michigan Health Council of the United Community Services.

A physical evaluation will be given to all applicants at the start to screen out coronary risks.

The daytime class schedule was arranged to make it easier for business persons to exercise during the day. The Dance Unlimited location was selected because it is close to the downtown business district.

THE CATCH IS that one must be fairly healthy to take in the exercise.

If one doesn't fall in the minimum levels of acceptable health in certain areas, the will need their own doctor's pemission to take the course.

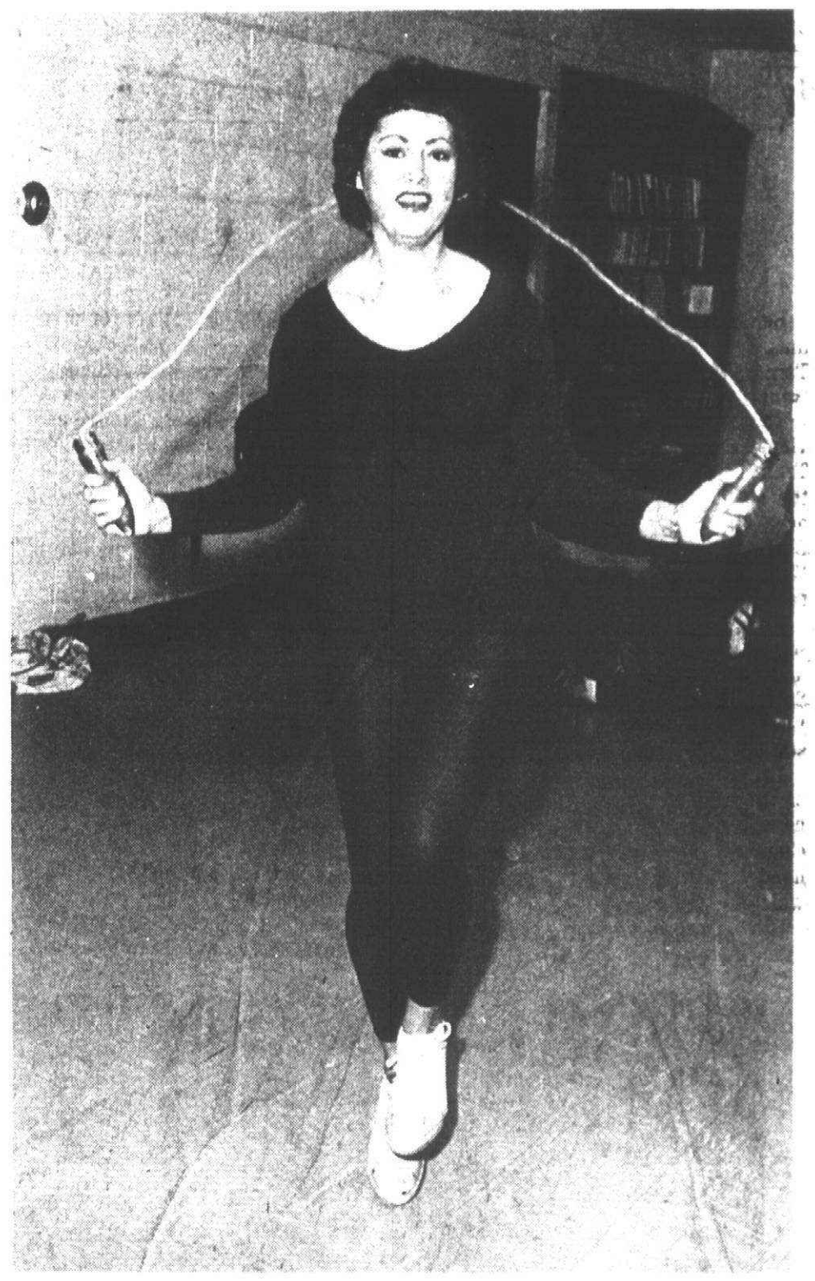

Applicants are screened for their smoking habits, cholesterol levels, blood pressure and weight (or fat content). There are "minimum risk factors" in each area.

During the check-up blood samples and blood pressures will be taken by a nurse.

The course lasts for five weeks and is offered at night and during the day. It starts the week of Jan. 14. Three 45-minute classes are held at Dance Unlimited Studio in Plymouth during the day. Evening classes are held at Starkweather School.

The course does not include "spot exercise" but rather incorporates the whole body.

The fee is $28 for non-members and $25 for members. There's a $15 fee for stress testing which is done with an ergometer, This gages one's heart condition while riding a bike.

Daykin Electric requests move to Canton Township

Although Livonia's industrial population continues to grow, there are occasions when a firm moves out of the community.

This is the case of Daykin Electric Corp., 1721 Levan, who has requested permission from the Livonia City Council to transfer employment from Livonia to Canton Township.

B. J. Rojewski, vice president of Daykin, asked council at a study session Monday night for an industrial facilities exemption certificate.

The permission is needed under a state law allowing property tax breaks.

"A favorable resolution by your council would enable our company to request an Industrial Facilities Exemption certificate under Act 198," he said.

Rojewski told the council his corporation had made attempts to locate a suitable site in the city but without success.

"The sites we looked at were either too large for our operation or had no office facilities," he said.

When asked by a council member if he had discussed the situation with Dan Gilmartin, Livonia's industrial coordinator, he said he wasn't aware the city had such an office.

The firm, a panel manufacturing company, is now in a 6,000 square foot building. Its proposed move to an existing building is tentatively scheduled for Dec. 15. The council will formally approve the move Dec. 12.

Choose a retirement plan that's tax-sheltered

You can begin today to provide for a tax shelter of current income with either an Individual Retirement Custodial Account (IRA) or a Keogh Account at Security Bank and Trust.

IRA ACCOUNT Established for wage earners who are not covered by any other tax qualified retirement plan, an IRA allows an individual to supply up to $1,500 or 15% of his annual earned income (whichever is less). A maximum of $1,750 is permitted if contributions are evenly split between separate accounts for the wage earner and a non-working spouse. Contributions made to the individual's IRA and Spouse's IRA are tax deductible and all earnings (interest earned and compounded) on these accounts are tax-sheltered until retirement.

KEOGH ACCOUNT The Keogh Plan is designed to offer a tax shelter for the self-employed individual's income. With this plan, the individual has annual tax deductible defined contributions of up to 15% of earned income with a maximum of $7,500. If the self-employed individual has eligible employees, they must be included in the Keogh Plan.

Each of these plans permits contributions which are tax deductible and interest earned on contributions are tax-deferred — offering you a tax shelter until retirement, when your tax rate should be lower.

SEP ACCOUNT A new Simplified Employee Pension plan (SEP) can now be set up by an employer, who has no other pension arrangement, for the benefit of employees. Tax deductible contributions of 15% or up to $7,500 of annual earned income (whichever is less) are allowed for all eligible employees. The SEP plan permits the employer's contribution to vary percentage-wise from year to year, but the percentage must be the same for all participants. For more information, contact your local Security branch manager or call 283-5000.

with Security's IRA or Keogh accounts.

These retirement plans earn 8% interest, paid and compounded quarterly, yielding 8.24% annually. Minimum deposit is $25 and you can make additions of $25 or more any time. Deposits earn from the day of deposit but all deposits made in same calendar year have same maturity date — three years from December 31 of year in which the deposits are made.

Withdrawal without penalty may be made between age 59½ and 70½ or in the case of death or permanent disability. Otherwise Federal law and regulation requires a substantial loss-of-interest penalty for early withdrawal. There is also a substantial I.R.S. penalty for early withdrawal.

Residents tell their Christmas wishes

By SHERRY KAHAN

Betty wants a comforter for Christmas. Arthur could use a beanbag chair. Tom would like to have a pocket-sized transistor radio.

These developmentally disabled individuals who live at the Northville Training Center were recently given the opportunity to tell people in the area what they hoped to see under the Christmas tree this year. Radio station WOMC-FM came to the center to record their wishes.

About 100 requests will be aired by the station starting Thursday, Dec. 6, and will run 13 times each day (except Saturday and Sunday) through Dec. 14. Listeners will be asked to ring up the station to donate gifts requested.

In this way on Dec. 18, the residents of the Northville Training Center can have a party like other people. Santa Claus will be on hand to place in their hands something brightly wrapped, which they will like.

It was not a simple matter for disc jockeys Mark Avery and Nick Arama to interview people who have difficulty talking, whose limbs won't do what they should, and who have a limited attention span. But they handled it. They would pat a shoulder, ask a question and then answer it themselves if necessary.

It's not as hard on us as them," said Avery. "It is an unusual experience to talk to them. You're not quite sure what to do when you don't get any response. But it's worth it. They don't just have the wants and needs we have. They have more."

To record the program, the WOMC staff set up equipment in one of the buildings of the large training center complex on Seven Mile, just west of the Northville State Hospital. Avery and Arama took turns sitting at a table to which residents were brought individually by attendants.

The center staff obviously wanted their charges to do well in this experience with the media. They took them to the chair next to the disc jockey with words of encouragement. Later, they grinned like doting parents when things went well.

Often residents had difficulty responding to the age-old question, What do you want for Christmas? So Avery and Arama drew from a list supplied by the center as they annouced that Terry wanted a teddy bear and Marty could use a rocker.

The gift idea was based on earlier-expressed wishes of the resident and on what the staff thought might please him or her most.

"WE FELT THE NEED for doing something like this," said program director Dave Shafer. "It's the third time we've done it. We decided nothing is being done for the retarded. So we concluded this is the way to go. We ask our listeners to buy gifts for the residents here at the center, or send money for them. In the last couple of years we've obtained gifts worth more than $55,000.

"Some of them will be getting their very first gift, maybe their only gift."

Carol Park, community relations director for the center, pointed out that "many of the residents have been institutionalized all their lives." Some in their seventies were brought there as children, and today have no relatives to remember them at Christmas.

At present there are 89 mentally retarded individuals from 27 to 70 or more living at the center. There are also young people from 14-26 living there. Seventy-nine are mentally retarded and 17 are emotionally retarded. When these young people had their turn at the mike, they sent out requests for radios, record players, toboggins, books and battery-operated cars and trains.

One of the most exciting moments of the recording session, according to Mrs. Park, was when a teacher accompanied two young deaf students to the interview table. Fingers were flying as they used sign language. Communication was silent, but it was communication.

She added that some sign language has recently been taught to individuals who frequently experience frustration at not being understood.

At one point a resident, who seemed to understand that something special was happening to him, leaned toward Avery. He put his hand on the disc jockey's handsome grey hair and smiled up at him.

Be an angel; help troubled kids

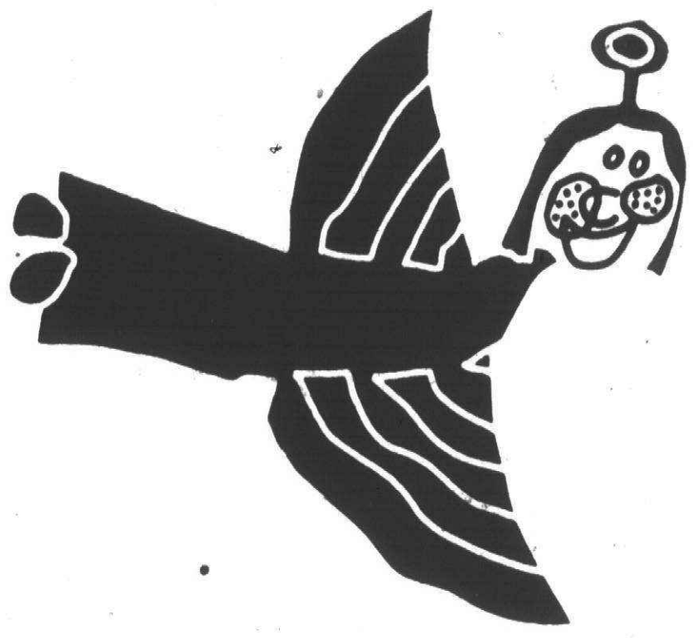

Christmas angels designed by youngsters from four metro Detroit centers for emotionally disturbed children have turned up on a variety of items sold by Crowley's.

Buy an ornament, gift wrapping, cards or other items bearing these angels and you will be contributing to the Mental Health Association of Michigan.

The association will, in turn, distribute this money to the four centers whose children produced the angels. They are the Hawthorn Center in Northville, Fairlawn Center in Pontiac, Lafayette Clinic in Detroit and York Woods Center in Ypsilanti.

"Be an angel; buy an angel" is the slogan of this fundraising effort which is being carried out by both Crowley's and the Mental Health Association of Michigan.

For more information about these angels who appear on shopping bags, store trim and posters at Crowley's, contact Mally Ellen Pastorek of the Mental Health Association of Michigan at 557-6777 or Angie Bournias of Crowley's at 781-6795 or 962-2400, ext. 247.

This and a variety of other angels designed by emotionally handicapped children have been imprinted on a number of items sold by Crowley's to aid the Mental Health Association.

Scleroderma is workshop topic

An educational workshop for patients with scleroderma and their families will be held 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8 in the Sheraton Motor Inn, 1001 Woodward, Pontiac.

Because Kelli Woodsum, 5, of Northville has been the victim of a disabling disease called scleroderma since she was 3, the metro area chapter which fights scleroderma was named after her.

Scleroderma, which literally means hard skin, is classified as a connective tissue disorder. There is no known cure or cause, and physicians can only treat the symptoms to make the patient more comfortable.

It is regarded as one of the most serious and disabling of all chronic diseases.

The workshop is sponsored by the Kelli Woodsum Chapter of the United Scleroderma Foundation. President of the organization is Sarah Leist, who announces that Scleroderma Awareness Week will continue through Dec. 8.

The metro area chapter is named after Kelli Woodsum, 5, of Northville. She has been a victim of the disease since she was hal 3½.

It is estimated that about 300,000 Americans are afflicted with scleroderma.

Speaking at the workshop will be Dr. C. Kohler Champion of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital and Piontiac General Hospital and Dr. Henry Bryan, dermatologist.

Also on the agenda are Barbara Figley, physical therapist, and Maxine Kamer, social worker, both of the University of Michigan Arthritis Center, and Dr. D.R. Kay, rheumatologist of the Rackham Arthritis Center of the U-M. National chairman Diane Williams will also speak.

Preparing for C-section births

By CAROL MAHONEY

Giving birth by Cesarean section need not be a second class experience. Because so much emphasis has been put on natural childbirth in recent years, mothers unable to deliver their babies this way have found it a particularly bitter disappointment.

Believing that a Cesarean delivery can be an equally euphoric and satisfying experience, two local nurses and a physical therapist have formulated a preparatory class for couples who know in advance that a Cesarean section will be necessary.

Margo Gorchow, Kathy Radom and Nancy Brown, who have themselves delivered by Cesarean section, are dedicated to improving conditions for those who face a similar prospect.

"We have all been there. We have all gone through the feelings. It makes you a lot more creditable," said Mrs. Gorchow whose second child was born by Cesarean section less than two months ago.

Mrs. Gorchow and her associates are convinced that the preparation accompanying natural childbirth has been sorely lacking for those who will undergo surgical delivery.

"When you cross the line from obstetrics to surgery, you turn the clock back 20 years," said Mrs. Gorchow. She noted that even something as basic as seeing the child immediately when it is born has been denied mothers who have "C" sections.

"The emphasis has been on the surgery rather than the birth," she said. "Most hospitals will keep the baby for 12 to 24 hours for observation."

MRS. GORCHOW and Mrs. Radom, former public health nurses who belong to the Plymouth Childbirth Education Association, say that their class has been received well.

"The people are so enthusiastic and so grateful. Many said they had searched and searched for such a class," Mrs. Gorchow said.

She sees her role as that of change agent helping expectant parents to explore their feelings and become aware of options regarding the surgery.

"We try to acknowledge the grieving and help them to see that a Cesarean birth can be a positive experience. There are things you can do to have a good birth It doesn't have to be dehumanizing."

Many of the couples registering for the class are expecting their second child by Cesarean delivery.

"Some women feel like failures. Some are depressed and don't understand why they had a Cesarean in the first place."

Mrs. Gorchow said these "second timers learn the why for a lot of things. They understand better what happened to their bodies."

As a physical therapist, Mrs. Brown instructs mothers in exercises they can do before the birth to better prepare themselves.

"Physically they can do a lot more than they think they can do. Preparation ahead of time makes their recovery quicker with fewer problems.

"There are things you can do to help yourself," Mrs. Brown added in regard to the birth itself. "If mentally you are prepared, you are going to perform that much better physically and not let pain get in the way."

The team also advises mothers what options they have during delivery. They recommend discussing procedure with the doctor prior to the birth. "Help him to help you," they urge.

They suggest that something as traditional as having the arms tied down during surgery can be changed. "There is no reason to have your arms tied down, but this should be settled with your doctor beforehand," Mrs. Gorchow pointed out.

BECAUSE the rate of Cesarean delivery has gone from one in 10 to one in five, the nurses encourage all expectant parents to be alert to the possibility.

Mrs. Radom, who also teaches a LaMaze Childbirth class, tries to incorporate information about Cesarean sections into those sessions as well.

"You're only afraid of things you don't know," she said.

One reason for the increased number of Cesarean deliveries has been improved technology such as more complete fetal monitoring.

Moods can influence handwriting

Lorene Green

Dear Mrs. Green:

I was unaware that anyone could tell so much about a person by just their handwriting, until I started reading your column.

I have been told on several occasions that I have a flair about my writing. I too have written in different styles other than this one, personally I feel this is mainly due to my mood, or time involved in writing. I am 30 years old and right handed.

I would truly appreciate your response and would like to express how much I enjoy reading your column. Thank you.

L.O., Livonia

Dear L.O.

I cannot comment on your other styles of handwriting because I have not seen them. I do suspect that your mood at the time of writing could influence your writing as you tend to experience fluctuating moods. You are emotional and wear your heart on your sleeve (extreme right slant).

You must be as busy as Rosalyn Carter with those extremely long inflated lower loops which reveal your strong need for activity, change and variety. Your idea of an enjoyable evening would not be to sit home and watch TV.

Determination and persistence are both very evident in your handwriting. If at first you don't succeed, you will try, try and try again.

Enthusiastic would best describe you when you are doing the things you most enjoy. Those long t bars reveal an enthusiasm that is contagious to others.

The female influence in your early life is revealed in your personal pronoun I. However, it appears that the male figure did little to help you develop a healthy self-image. Your strong desire for material possessions is perhaps compensation for this lack of nurturing you feel from that early period.

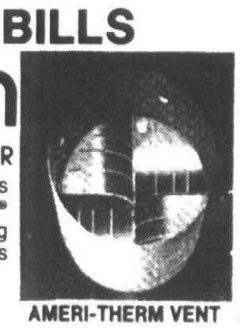

Your narrow left margin and wide right margin suggest there is something in the future that has you concerned.

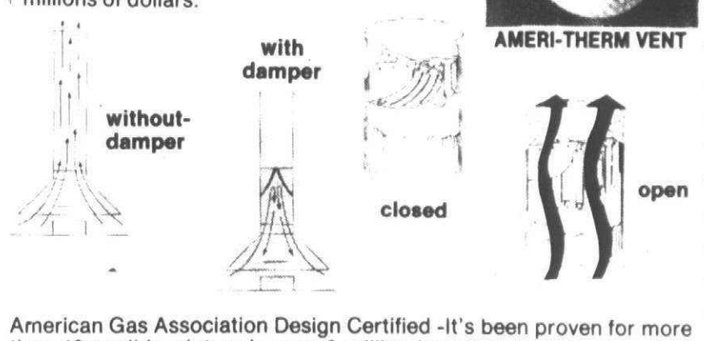

You are a romaticist with a well developed imagination in this area. Perhaps it is a bit unrealistic at times.

If you hvae a question about your handwriting or personality, write to Mrs. Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use a full sheet of unlined white paper and write in the first person singular. Age and handedness are also helpful.

I have been told on several occasions that I have a flair about my writing. I too have written in different styles other then this one, personally I feel this is mainly due to my mood, or time involved in writing. I am 30 years old

All about skates — from Hans' day to today

BY BOB SKLAR

Ice skates have gotten a sleek new look since the days when Mary Mapes Dodge's fictional Hans Brinker glided along canals in 19th century Holland.

Today, each form of skating — figure, hockey and speed — has different skates for special competition. In each case, the boot and the blade are designed with precision.

Figure skaters wear different skates for freestyle and dance. Speed skaters have indoor and outdoor skates. In hockey, goalies use skates that are made differently than those of other players.

There's also greater emphasis now on proper fit. Without it, even the most talented skaters face a challenge in staying on their feet.

"The biggest mistake of parents is buying skates for their children that are a little bit larger so they will fit a year later," says Reina Rachmiel, an Oakland County figure skating instructor.

"If your skates are too big, they not only upset your balance by forcing your feet to slide, but also force you to skate on your ankles rather than on your blades.

"So parents should buy their children skates that are right to foot size, which generally is a bit smaller than street-shoe size. You've got to be able to pull the boot right over your foot for tightness while you have only one pair of socks on."

HOW DO YOU decide whether a pair of skates fits properly?

"Stand up with the skates on, but without lacing them," Ms. Rachmiel says. "If your toes aren't pinched and there's enough pressure on the sides of your heels so that you can't pull them up, then the skates fit. If you can pull your heels up, which can cause chafing, the skates are too big. It's that simple."

Another indicator: When tied, the laces should measure 1¼ inches across the tongue of the boots. If they measure less than that, the skates probably are too big.

The key to buying skates is knowing what you want, then knowing how to find it, so you aren't talked into a pair that are too expensive for your child's needs and ability.

Parents should shun double runners for their children, says Mike Walden, one of the Detroit area's leading authorities on ice skating and bicycle racing.

"Double runners just slide on ice," he says. "They don't strengthen your ankles at all.

"I'd say children 4 or 5 years old can learn how to skate with single-runner skates. We've got some even younger, but they're exceptionally coordinated. The fact is, double runners actually set you back in learning how to skate properly."

THE MORE ACTIVE children are, the more you should consider equipping them with better-built skates, Walden says.

"Normally, you should be able to get three or four years of use from better-built skates.

"But if your child outgrows them after one year, you may be able to sell them for at least 75 percent of their original price. So it's possible it would cost you only 25 percent of the original price or even less to equip your child with better-built skates."

In Hans Brinker's day, Dutch children strapped wood skates onto their shoes. Arch support wasn't a concern. Today, it's a major consideration.

"In the case of figure skates, look for leather boots with steel blades that are screwed into a leather sole," Ms. Rachmiel says.

"These skates are of higher quality and provide firmer support. Avoid blades that are riveted on; that are made of lead-like quality or are matched with cheaper-quality leather."

A good pair of stock figure skates starts at $30 for children and at $50 for adults, Ms. Rachmiel says. Such skates also are available used.

Better-built hockey skates start at $50 a pair, says Walden, who advises buying less expensive hockey skates only for recreational purposes.

"Less expensive hockey skates have blades of lead-like quality that aren't tempered, so they bend more easily," Walden says.

"Besides, they don't hold an edge for very long and are difficult to sharpen. The boot is lacking too, offering little ankle support and little toe and ankle protection from hard shots."

IT'S ALMOST impossible now to buy new racing skates, Walden says. That's because the major manufacturer of the skates closed down last year, he says.

Used racing skates, however, are available if you search hard enough, he says.

"Check sporting goods shops and resale shops for any second-hand racers they might still have," he says. "Or place a 'need racing skates' notice on the bulletin board of your neighborhood ice rink or in your local newspaper."

Youngsters ages 5 or 6 who want to pursue speed skating should start out on hockey skates, then switch to a used pair of speed skates after a year or two, Walden suggests.

He says it wouldn't pay to buy custom racers — which are extremely difficult to find — for children because they would outgrow the skates too fast.

Youngsters hooked on competitive figure skating don't need custom skates, either, Ms. Rachmiel says.

"Buy them boots and blades separately, however," she says. "Blades start at $45. Stock boots start at $55. Then get a good mounting. That makes a big difference because a bad mounting can lead to stumbling."

What about toe picks on figure skates?

"You need them for jumps and spins so make sure they aren't removed when your skates are sharpened," Ms. Rachmiel says.

MONEY GO ROUND

By BRENDA L. SCHNEIDER

Women today must establish credit

The need for credit on the part of today's woman is great.

She faces a far different set of economic circumstances than did the young woman of twenty years ago.

There are growing numbers of widowed, divorced and separated women in the nation — a young woman in her twenties, marrying today, has a 40 percent chance of divorcing or being divorced during her lifetime. Because of that it is becoming increasingly important for a woman to know how to establish her own credit history.

Everyone has a horror story to tell about a family member, work associate or friend who has experienced difficulty in getting credit. And the stories will continue to grow unless the "mysteries" of credit are understood by today's woman.

What is a credit history?

Basically, it is a record of all your creditor relationships. It tells a creditor what, if any, credit you have received in the past and whether you paid the creditor on time.

Your credit history is used by creditors to help them decide if they want to grant you credit or not.

The information that comprises your history is obtained by the creditor from two sources. First, the application itself. When you apply for credit, you will be asked to fill out an application that will provide you space to list your current creditors.

Then, the creditor will check with the local credit bureau to determine your relationships with the creditors mentioned on the application.

Often questions arise about the kinds of information that credit bureaus collect. The answer is not clear, which unfortunately adds to the confusion.

Most national credit card companies report but some local companies or stores may not. They are not required to.

Secondly, things get more complicated because some companies don't report if you pay on time, but only if you are delinquent. And to complicate matters further, companies in various parts of the country use different reporting mechanisms and this creates problems as people move from community to community.

What can a person do to slowly begin a credit history?

FIRST, OPEN a checking and or savings account at a local bank. Neither require substantial amounts of money.

Second, open an account at a local department store. These are usually easier to obtain than a national bank card. The credit line may be limited initially, but the chances of having it increased as you establish your credit history are good.

As a word of caution: do not open too many accounts. Should you find yourself in a situation of more bills than paycheck, you will be negating your efforts to establish a good credit history.

Should you apply for credit and be turned down, remember that the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA) requires that the creditor tell you the reason for the rejection. After receiving this information, you are entitled to request from the credit bureau supplying the adverse information about you a copy of your credit report.

The law says you are entitled to a free copy of the report so you can see on what basis the creditor made his decision. If you are not turned down for credit but are still interested in seeing your report, you may still do so, but the cridit bureau has the right to charge you a fee.

A CHECKLIST to insure a good credit history includes the following:

If you had credit before, make sure your local credit bureau has complete and accurate information about you in a file under your name.

You can locate the bureau by looking in the "Yellow Pages" under headings such as "Credit" or "Credit Rating and Reporting Agencies." The credit bureau may charge you a small fee for checking your file.

When you open an account, if married, make sure you indicate on the application form whether you want to share the account with your husband. Under the ECOA, the creditor must report information on shared accounts established after June 1, 1977, to credit bureaus in both spouses' names.

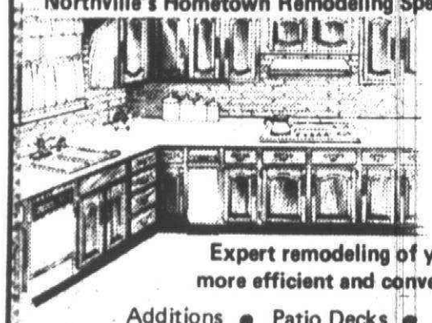

If you shared accounts with your husband which were established before June 1, 1977, and now are closed, visit or telephone your local credit bureau to check whether these accounts are in your file.

They are still part of your credit history even though they are closed.

If these accounts were reported only in your husband's or former husband's name, ask to have them added to your file too. The credit bureau cannot charge you a fee for placing information already reported under your husband's name into a file accessible under your name.

Jazz fills the air through Sunday

Detroit — now being billed as the jazz capital of the world — celebrates jazz this weekend with a series of concerts and workshops.

Sponsored by the Detroit Council of the Arts, Jazz at the Crossroads will feature both the famous and the aspiring unknowns. Ron Carter, Slide Hampton, Harold McKinney, Marcus Belgrave, Billy Mitchell, Jimmy Wilkins, Curtis Fuller, Frank Foster, Stanley Crouch, Muhal Richard Abrams and youth bands from Detroit schools will be among the participants.

Carter, a former Detroiter, has performed on over 400 albums. He will perform 8-11 p.m. Sunday at Orchestra Hall on Woodward with his quartet and as a soloist with Jimmy Wilkins and His Orchestra.

Hampton, a trombonist arranger and band leader, will perform 8-11 p.m. Saturday at Orchestra Hall. The concert will be followed with music by Sam Sanders and Visions in the grand ballroom of the Radisson Cadillac Hotel on Washington Boulevard until 3 a.m.

Hampton will also conduct a workshop on composing, arranging, improvisation and horn technique, 2-4 p.m. Friday at the Detroit Community Music School.

Other events on the schudule include:

- Four student bands performing 8-11 p.m. tonight in Orchestra Hall.
- Band leader Harold McKinney giving the first performance of "Invocations," a work for orchestra and strings, Friday night at Orchestra Hall.
- A panel discussion, "From Mainstream to Crossover," 1-2:45 p.m. Saturday in the Woodward Room of the Radisson Cadillac.

Admission to the workshops is free. Tickets to the concerts, available at the door, range from $5 to $8.

For more info, call the Detroit Council of the Arts at 224-3482.

Calling all artists

The Detroit Institute of Arts issues an appeal to all Michigan artists to call or write the museum for inclusion in the Michigan Artists' Registry.

Editor Nancy Gordon is looking for people working in the visual arts, music, dance, theater and literature so they can be notified of programs, competitions and other activities in their field. Only 5,000 of the estimated 20,000 to 30,000 artists in the state responded to the first call.

A computer will divide artists by discipline. The registry requests a brief biography be sent to the Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward, Detroit 48202.

'Nutcracker'

The Sugar Plum Fairy is back for the holidays

When the musicians and the dancers get together this weekend at Clarenceville High School for "The Nutcracker Ballet," music conductor Francesco Di Blasi will be keeping his eyes on the dancers.

"It's very tricky," he says. "It's up to the conductor to realize that a dancer has changed a tempo slightly. Each dancer has her own tempo."

While the timing of the performance has been worked out ahead of time, it's up to Di Blasi to see that the music stays in tune with the feet on stage. It's a change of pace for a conductor, who is used to setting the tempo when he leads an orchestra.

Di Blasi will be leading a chamber orchestra from the Oakway Symphony in the performace with the Livonia Regional Ballet Company. Shows are at 8 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Schmidt Auditorium at the high school, 20155 Middlebelt north of Seven Mile.

Tickets are $6 for adults and $3.50 for students and senior citizens available at the box office an hour before each performance or by calling 421-2000, ext. 353.

THE TRADITIONAL Christmas tale by the Russian composer Tchaikovsky, first performed in 1892, tells the story of of a Christmas Eve party at the home of the Stahlblum family.

Herr Stahlblum presents a nutcracker to Clara, his god-child. She falls asleep under the tree and Stahlblum starts working his magic. Human-sized mice appear, the tree grows and the nutcracker turns into a prince. The mice fight with toy soldiers and Clara saves the wounded Nutcracker Prince.

Stahlblum transforms the prince into a real prince and the three of them head off to the Kingdom of the Sugar Plum Fairy.

In the second act, a variety of characters representing chocolate, spice, tea, coffee and candy hold a series of ethnic dances, starting with the famous Waltz of the Flowers, to honor Clara for saving the prince.

The Spanish dance includes a brilliant trumpet solo, and the Chinese dance has a tough score for flute. And there's the Dance of the Reed Pipes, with three flutes.

"The orchestration calls for everything the orchestra ever uses," Di Blasi says. "All kinds of bells, cymbals and a tamborine."

The characters slowly fade away and Herr Stahlblum tells Clara her dream is ending. She wakes up at home, not sure whether it all really happened.

"IT'S CONSIDERED one of the hardest works in classical ballet," says Michelle Wolfe, artistic director for the Livonia Regional Ballet.

The human mice wear large headpieces and the dancers must execute numerous turns.

The ballet staff has built a Christmas tree that grows from eight to 18 feet in height. And they're still working on the 136 costumes they'll be using.

"Have a good time," says Ms. Wolfe. "Don't be afraid to go in and enjoy it. It's a way for children to grow up and a way for adults to grow young."

Mary Lassaline, Karyn Parker and Janelle Folsom strike a pose from this weekend's production of "The Nutcracker Ballet" at Clarenceville High School.

'Gammon players roll dice for glory

The backgammon fans will be going at it next Wednesday night at a Livonia disco club.

An open round robin tournament starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Mine, located in the Livonia Holiday Inn on Plymouth Road. First prize is a weekend at the Holiday Inn with a champagne dinner.

Cash prizes — the amounts to be determined by the number of people participating — will be given for second and third place finishers. There is a $5 entry fee.

The tournament is sponsored by the Detroit-area chapter of the American Backgammon Club, which holds regular backgammon playing sessions and lessons in the Plymouth Hilton Inn.

Mike Kloian, head of the club, says the tournament is open to anyone who likes to play the game. No betting is allowed, however.

Participants will go for nine or 10 games, with each player allowed only one turn of the doubling cube.

Winners and losers thus accumulate points on the basis of their wins. High point scores at the end of the night are the winners.

BACKGAMMON has been growing in popularity the last couple years, both as recreation in bars and as home entertainment.

Kloian, a backgammon addict who last week participated in the World Amateur Backgammon Championships in Las Vegas, figures the game is 70 percent skill and 30 percent luck.

On stage

John Morgan Lund and Edith Taylor Hunter appear in the Hilberry Theater production of "The Matchmaker," a farce by Thornton Wilder. The play opens Dec. 12 and will run through Feb. 21. For ticket info, call the Hilberry box office at 577-2972.

An urban planner wants to rebuild a part of downtown

By CORINNE ABATT

When Detroit's Renaissance Center was just an idea, Katherine Ford Beebe listened to the pessimists tear it apart.

It would never materialize; no money would be available. If it did go up it would never rent. It would be a huge gray elephant, they said.

At the time, Mrs. Beebe, who grew up on a farm in Troy, was a project director with Detroit Renaissance. She was promoting the redevelopment of the city "in bricks and morter terms."

"In 1971-72, people thought Detroit was hopeless," she said. "But ever since 1973 it's been getting better and better."

Now, as one of four principals in the Cardoza Partnership, Mrs. Beebe is still involved in the city's future. But now people are more optimistic about that future. Mrs. Beebe is a city planner working on her doctorate in architecture. Her three partners are architects.

The firm has recently been developing a future plan for the Grand Circus Park area in downtown Detroit.

As a person who plans ahead, Mrs. Beebe frequently looks back.

"Areas have a life of their own that carries on," she said.

'In 1971-72, people thought Detroit was hopeless. But ever since 1973 it's been getting better and better.'

PIERRE CHARLES L'Enfant, a French-American architect and engineer, designed a plan for Detroit in which circuses or parks would be at intervals connected by radial streets. With this plan people would be able to look down the broad, tree-lined radial streets and see wonderful views and broad vistas.

Grand Circus Park was the first part of his plan to be implemented. Many radial streets survive from the plan, which lasted for seven years.

"The farmers, whose land came up to Grand Circus Park, complained they couldn't farm in wedge-shaped fields. This killed L'Enfant's plan because they wanted rectangles, not wedges," Mrs. Beebe said. "They developed long ribbon farms to have frontage on the river."

This explains some of the wedge shapes which are found among the streets around Grand Circus Park.

FORTUNATELY, according to Mrs. Beebe, Grand Circus Park has some strong institutions and businesses which have formed an association. Included are the YWCA, YMCA, Detroit Athletic Club, Detroit College of Law and Michigan Mutual Insurance Co., along with buildings like the David Whitney Building and some residential housing.

"Nearly two-thirds of the land in Grand Circus Park is vacant," she said, adding that this is unusual for a downtown area. The question then was to decide how this land could best be used in a plan to be adopted by the city.

A new plan for downtown takes shape

As she studied the area, Mrs. Beebe saw many strengths. Institutions in the area were building and investing money and time in programs and improvements.

One part of the Grand Circus Park plan is to develop a campus play area to knit together institutions like the Ys and the Detroit College of Law. While this green area would be open to everyone, it would serve to unify and link the area. This would be put on two acres presently occupied by parking lots.

The plan calls for rebuilding existing housing and constructing new housing. The exact type of housing — medium rise, townhouses or something else — is yet to be decided. Mrs. Beebe is concerned that the locations for housing be clarified.

"We are working with the city to get the land use adopted as a city policy," she said. "The type of housing will depend on where the housing market is in 1985. Our concern was to establish areas for use."

Urban planner Katherine Beebe: "The farmers, whose land came up to Grand Circus Park, complained they couldn't farm in wedge-shaped fields. This killed L'Enfant's plan because they wanted rectangles, not wedges. They developed long ribbon farms to have frontage on the river."

ONE OF THE future strengths for Grand Circus Park is that it will be a stop for the projected people mover. Since the present estimate is that 10,000 people use the small area every day, the people mover will be an important factor in the economic activity of the area.

Like much of downtown Detroit, Mrs. Beebe said a lot of the buildings in the Grand Circus Park area were built in the 1920s — the "boomtown days," as she calls them.

"When we try to revitalize those areas, we have to look back on those boomtown days and try to picture how they looked," she said. "Those old buildings are special."

One of the areas she is enthusiastic about is the Cadillac Center, a proposed mall for the Kern block and surrounding areas. Although the present Hudson's store may eventually be demolished, Hudson's has made a commitment to be part of the center if another anchor store can be found.

"Cadillac Center is past the drawing board stage," she said. "It will happen."

With only a shade less conviction, but still optimistically, she mentioned riverfront housing west of Cobo Hall, Forest City's plan to build housing on Washington Blvd. announced last month, and the conversion of four office buildings to residential use by a group called Adaptive Housing.

A VITAL, BUT outwardly calm person, Mrs. Beebe wondered if growing up on a farm with the glamorous big city close by might not have been responsible for her appreciation and enthusiasm for cities.

Mrs. Beebe began her career as an intern with an English planning firm.

She remembered that some of the English people she worked with pointed out to her how special Detroit was because of the radial streets and broad views.

"I got so interested in the work that I started taking courses at Wayne (State University) in planning," she said. "There were very few women in the field at that time and I ended up getting my master's at Wayne."

Choir sings twice

The Schoolcraft College Community Choir will give free performances at two locations this weekend.

Directed by Marilyn Jones, the first concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday at the Livonia Grand River Baptist Church. The program will be repeated at 4 p.m. Sunday at the Detroit Hartford Memorial Baptist Church.

Organist Beverly Williams is the soloist for both performances.

The concerts will include works by Bach, Gabrieli, Mendelssohn and Vaughn Williams, among others. The first half will be given in double choir format.

The Community Choir includes 67 singers of all ages from 17 communities.

Grand River Baptist is located at 34500 Six Mile, a half-mile west of Farmington Road in Livonia. Hartford Memorial is at 18700 James Couzens, just south of Seven Mile Road in Detroit.

Tranquil Maybury stays active through the winter

By LEM MESEE
Outdoors writer

Folks may not be camping and swimming in northern Michigan state parks, but they're getting plenty of mileage out at a park in our backyard.

Maybury State Park west of Northville is drawing hikers, bird watchers and cross country skiiers, according to manager Tony Klain.

Alone among Michigan state parks, Maybury has a living farm, open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays through Sundays during fall and winter.

Meanwhile, Klain and his staff are gearing up for next spring's warm weather. "That preparation must be done with a greatly reduced staff since a large percentage of park personnel are seasonal employees," he added.

They clean, paint and repair buildings; fix broken doors and windows; and handle such major work as plumbing and electrical repairs. Mowers, tractors and trucks, which have received constant summer use, are overhauled and repaired.

Picnic tables are patched and varnished. Dead trees are removed. Budgets are calculated.

The latter job is bigger than you might expect.

"Figuring budgets, anticipating needs and projecting future costs is an awesome task with today's fast changing economy," said Klain.

Utility rates, formerly uniform, need constant readjustment, for example.

There's a lot of other paperwork for a park ranger — drawing up seasonal hiring schedules, planning interpretive programs, ordering such supplies as paints, toilet cleaning materials and office material. He added:

"Before anyone realizes it — and to some extent before the staff is mentally prepared for it — the Memorial Day weekend rush is banging at the gates, fresh from the more confining weather of the winter."

Outdoors

Maybury State Park in Northville, from its woods to its children's zoo, is open through the winter.

HURON-CLINTON Metroparks vehicle passes for 1980 are now on sale, and the price will be $7 again.

Two programs are coming up at nearby metroparks.

A "Four Mile Trek" starts at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9 at the nature center of Oakwoods Metropark near Flat Rock. Naturalist Fred Wooley will lead a leisurely stroll through some of the more remote areas of the park. You'll need sturdy shoes or boots.

"Scary Animals" will be offered at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9 at Kensington Metropark near Milford. Naturalist Bob Hotaling will separate fact from fiction about our friends: the snakes, bats and spiders.

The programs are free, but you'll need a vehicle entry permit. Call ahead to register.

THE NATURAL Resources Commission today is studying a proposal to hike state park camping fees by $1.

If approved, it would affect only campgrounds with modern facilities, where the current charge is $5 a night.

Unchanged would be campgrounds with less improved facilities, where charges are $2 to $4 a night.

The 20 percent hike is entirely legal, even under the Headlee tax limitation amendment, because fees aren't taxes. DNR says it needs the increase to make up what it is losing in general fund money in the 1979-80 budget.

A "SNOW TRAIN" for skiers and snowmobilers will run between Cadillac and southeast Michigan next January, according to Gov. William G. Milliken.

An Owosso-Cadillac round trip passenger excursion will operate the weekend of Jan. 4-6 to test the feasibility of reviving such once-popular rail service.

Cadillac Winter Promotions, Inc., a nonprofit organization formed by Cadillac business leaders, will sponsor the event with the aid of state tourism agencies.

Five passenger coaches, a club car and a flat car to carry snowmobiles have been secured by Michigan Interstate Railway Co. (formerly the Ann Arbor Railroad). Ridership will be limited to the first 340 persons who buy tickets.

tips from the Air Force Survival School

Ypu and a companion have gone hunting in a remote mountainous region. The roads are abandoned logging trails which are covered with drifting snow. The temperature is near zero, and it is snowing.

Ypur four-wheel-drive land cruiser becomes stuck in a snowbank after traveling over these mountainous roads for some eight hours. All efforts have failed to free it. Darkness is settling, and the temperature has dropped below zero. The wind is now blowing at about 20 m.p.h.

WOULD YOU . . .

A. Abandon your vehicle and prepare to backpack out of the area?

B. Stay with your vehicle, but begin preparing an emergency camp from available materials?

C. Stay with your vehicle and turn it into temporary lodging until help arrives?

D. Stay with the vehicle until morning, then hike out of the area for help?

TO SURVIVE . . .

Alternative B offers the best assurance of a successful survival episode. Staying with your vehicle insures all your available supplies are with you and, provided you stayed with your original travel route, will assist searchers in locating you.

By establishing an emergency camp — shelter and a fire — you will have taken care of your most urgent needs in the face of current weather conditions. The shelter can be made from materials you have in the vehicle or it can be constructed from natural materials.

A snow cave is an excellent cold weather shelter. Your vehicle is not a desirable shelter. It may expose you to carbon monoxide poisoning while the engine is running, and it becomes cold-soaked very quickly once out of fuel.

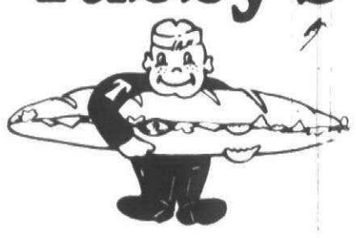

C would be acceptable for a few hours until your emergency camp is established, but not as a permanent residence until help arrives. Depending upon when you are due back from the trip, you could be stranded for several days before anyone realizes you are in trouble.

D would be acceptable provided you and your companion possessed both the physical stamina and the necessary equipment to negotiate the hike out to civilization. Another consideration has to be the distance to help and prevailing weather conditions.

All things considered, most people are advised to stay with their vehicles.

A is the least acceptable of the alternatives. By abandoning your vehicle at this point in an emergency, you could be at the mercy of the elements. You are better off staying with the vehicle as in alternative B.

wine
Richard Watson

As long as the juice of grapes has been allowed to ferment into wine it has come from two colors of grapes, black-red and yellow-white, and produced wine that is either red or white. Rose has tended to a blending of the two. These categories have been around a very long time.

The system underwent a change about three years ago when Sebastiani Vineyards in Sonoma — always the innovator — produced a "blanc." That is, they produced an essentially white wine from red-black grapes.

The process was hardly new. Champagne makers in Epernay have been making the world's greatest white wine from the Pinot Noire grape for centuries. But, not a still wine made in great quantities.

So successful were the Sebastiani boys' efforts that a bandwagon began to roll the next year. It continues.

THE PROCESS is essentially a simple one. It differs only by degree from the process used in France and California to make varietal roses. The color of a wine comes not from the flesh of the wine but from the skin. Following the crush of the grape the juice and skin are quickly separated when making a blanc, so that the colorful skin has little or no impact on wine color.

The slightly pink tone that occurs with some blancs, most attractive visually, is the result of the modest and inevitable contact that must come from the process of separating juice from skin.

The differences between blanc and rose wines are visual (color density), gustatory (roses tending to be sweeter), but predominantly commercial. Winemakers can and do charge more for the new an exotic blanc wines than they can for dumpy old roses. In marketing it is an old story.

The cause of all this marketing innovation is really quite simple. California's vineyardists, when the wine boom began about 10 years ago, did not anticipate that most of the initial enthusiasm would center around white wines. They planted too much red, needed more white. Voila, a transfiguration was made to meet our demands.

THREE GRAPES DOMINATE the field, although the Pinot Noir seems to be the most used to date. In addition to Sebastiani, look for releases by Rutherford Hill, Caymus (called Oeil de Perdrix — Eye of the Partridge), Kenwood, Wente, Veedercrest and Grand Cru.

Almaden makes a beautiful sparking wine in this manner as well, also calling it The Eye of the Partridge.

In general, this grape produces the most austere blanc. Kenwood's seems driest of all. Wente seems to generate the greatest fruit.

Sterling made the first blanc from the Cabernet Sauvignon grape, a beauty. They have been followed by Kenwood, Bell Canyon (Burgess' second label), Fetzer and, newly in the state, Montevina from Amador County.

Zinfandel has been used by Sutter Home (called "White Zinfandel") and Montevina.

Shakespeare play opens Friday at Attic

The Attic Theatre opens the second production of its 1979-80 season, Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," at 8 p.m. Friday.

The show will run through Jan. 19, with performances at 8 p.m. Thursdays, Fridays and Sundays; and at 6 and 9 p.m. Saturdays.

Reservations, recommended for all performances, are available by calling 963-7789 or at the box office, 525 E. Lafayette, 2-8 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday.

This will be a rather unusual presentation of the classic comedy, which pits the forces of law and government against the mythological beast, and fairies believed by the people of Shakespeare's day to rule nature.

Creating a world of modern mythology, the play uses Caribbean steel drum rhythms, African chants, Oriental martial arts and tribal dances.

Following its run at the Attic, 'A Midsummer Night's Dream" will tour to area high schools. For booking information, contact Ginny Lark at 963-7789.

Scandinavian Symphony for Christmas program

The Scandinavian Symphony Orchestra will give its second concert of the season with the Michigan Mormon Concert Choir, directed by Ed Yager.

The Christmas Concert begins at 8:20 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, in Southfield Lathrup High School on 12 Mile Rd., east of Evergreen.

Among the selections by the orchestra, conducted by Walter Poole, are "Pastoral Suite" by Lars Larson, "En Saga," by Jean Sibelius, and "Norwegian Dances" by Edvard Grieg."

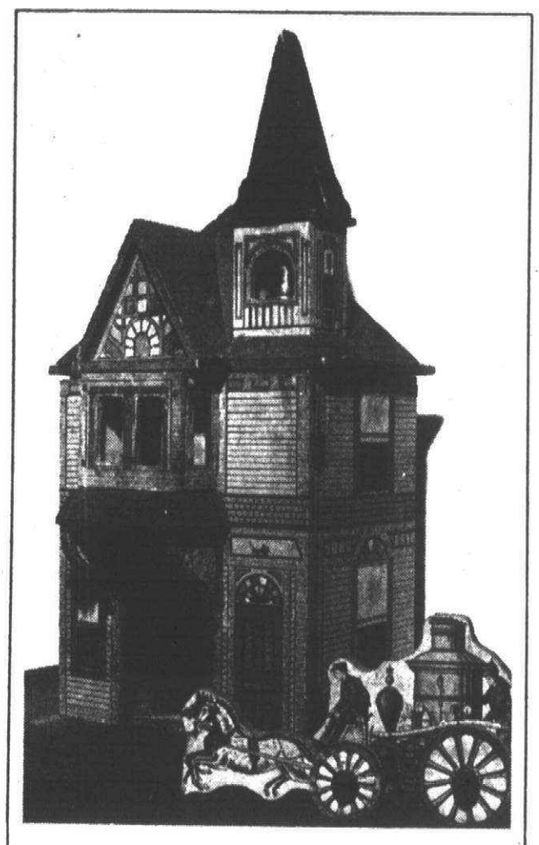

The symphony is now celebrating the Golden Anniversary.

The Michigan Mormon Concert Choir was formed in 1975 and consists of Mormons, only, who come from throughout the state.

Yager is both the organizer and the director of the concert choir. He is a graduate of Southfield High School and Brigham Young University, and has studied with Dr. Leonard R. Smith at University of Detroit and the Detroit Institute of Musical Art.

As with all performances given by the Scandinavian Symphony, guests will be invited to an afterglow to meet members of the orchestra as well as the guest artists.

Tickets are $4.50 each, at the door.

Old toys

An 1885 firehouse made of wood and paper is part of a collection of antique toys on display at the Detroit Historical Museum through April. The exhibit includes over 300 toys dating from the 1870s. Included are tinplate toy trains, games and puzzles and music boxes.

Fair Lane decked out

Henry Ford's old house is decked out for the holidays with all sorts of flowers. "It's something like Mr. Ford would never have seen," says Marlene Briski of the Fair Lane staff.

The baronial mansion, now operated as a conference center by the University of Michigan-Dearborn, will be open this week with extended hours for its guided tours through the history and tinsel.

The house where Ford died, on the east bank of the Rouge River, was decorated by local florists and includes a Christmas tree decorated with slices of apples, lemons and limes, roping on fireplace mantles and strings of popcorn.

The 90-minute tours — showing Ford's personal library, intricately carved fireplaces, the basement bowling alley, the power house connected by an underground tunnel and other points of interest — will be given 12:30-4 p.m. through Saturday and noon to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $3.

Tours are normally given 1-4:30 p.m. Sundays.

The campus is on Evergreen south of Ford Road.

Garden City Civic Theater

'The Good Doctor': Difficult task, well played review

By JOHN MacCOLL

A sneeze? Surgery? A seduction?

Strange topics for a play. But then "The Good Doctor" by Neil Simon is a good deal different from your average stage play.

Actually, the above topics are subtitles for plays within a play, vignettes taken from Anton Chekhov short stories. Each is funny on the surface, but each is cleverly written to include a meaningful statement on the human condition.

THE GARDEN City Civic Theater presents this fine play and presents it in a truly fine way.

Director Rose Leighton has gotten the most out of a very inexperienced cast. Using area lighting and sequential set, they move gracefully from one part to the next. The play's pacing is as delightful as the acting.

It is very encouraging to see such a young theater group grasp the essentials of stage technique so quickly.

The play requires the cast of 10 to change roles in each of the 11 short stories. Not an easy task, but both scene and costume changes are executed with precision-like excellence.

The ability to make people laugh while making a serious statement is the most difficult of tasks for an actor. It requires thorough knowledge of subject matter and an ear for the subtlety of meaning in words. Care must be taken to underplay and not make silly what is really tragic.

Perhaps the only criticism of this cast is that they miss many of these subtlties. They rely on the obviously funny — which they perform well — but neglect to reach deeper into their characters and find the more subtle treasures.

SIMON'S PLAY is a charicature of life in Russia. But it has the depth of purpose to transcend and discuss many aspects of life, not the least of which is the loneliness of old age.

One vignette called "Too Late for Happiness" is marvelously done by Juanita Suchy and Lewis Sequin. Half sung, half spoken, it is a touching meeting in the park by two elderly peorple, now both widowed. Each wonders if it is worth "the pain, the joy, the sorrow" to give love one last go-round.

Sequin and Suchy bring a quiet tear to the eye as they charm us with a very moving moment.

On the lighter side, Diane Kremser, as the old bitty of a woman in "Defenseless Creature," is truly the comic wonder of the show.

Her performance as the money-grubbing, poor, defenseless (like a rhinoceros) hare-lipped, wart-faced old hag is magnificent. From start to finish, she and her counterpart Kristenov the Banker (played well by Glenn Blankenship) keep the audience laughing their heads off. She is the hit of the show.

MOVING FROM character to character is very difficult. You must change your mental attitude from happy to sad, become old after being young. It requires the actor to have maximum concentration.

Nothing is worse than to appear as different people and have the characters walk, talk and look the same.

Well, Debi Barsamian seems to be the pro at this. From a doll-like toy of a wife to a miserly old woman and yet back again to a brash, struggling young actress at an audition, she performs with wit, charm and confidence.

However, it is in "The Seduction" that Ms. Barsamian rises to her best. While not actually meeting her lover until the very end, she is systematically convinced that there is a dashing young man awaiting her amorous favors.

Thinking that it is all great fun, her husband conveys message after message to his increasingly interested wife, until she falls for the fake flattery. The end result is not quite what the cad had in mind when he set upon his devilish plan.

Moving from character to character is very difficult. You must change your mental attitude from happy to sad, become old after being young. It requires the actor to have maximum concentration.

Both Barsamian and Blenkenship (as the cad) are truly outstanding in this mirthful tale of adultery.

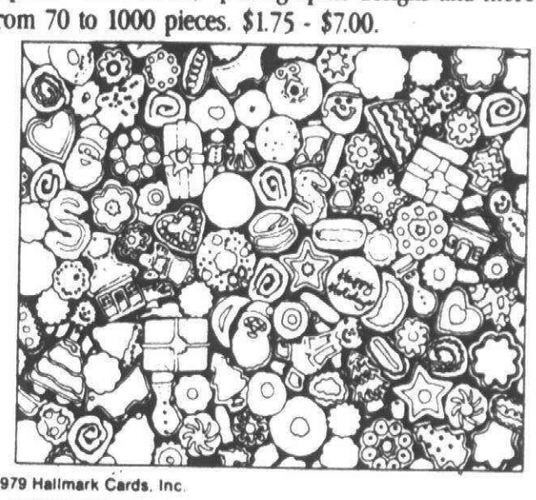

ONE NOTE about Blankenship: He performs with great dexterity and whenever a solid performance is needed to set up a comedy role, his face always seems to pop up as the straight man. He does a very fine job.

Other solid performances are turned in by Tashi Georgoff as the Sexton in "Surgery." His Chaplin-like slapstick comedy is both errorless and a delight to watch.

A truly delightful evening is in store for you as the Garden City Civic Theater continues its performances of "The Good Doctor" at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday. All performances are at Garden City East High School's O'Leary Auditorium on Middlebelt at Maplewood.

WSU singers give their annual concerts

The Wayne State University Chamber Singers, Women's Chorale and Men's Glee Club will present their Winter Concert Friday and Saturday.

The identical programs begin at 8:30 p.m. in the Community Arts Auditorium, Cass and Kirby, on the Wayne State campus.

Both programs begin with the Wayne State University Chamber Singers, under the direction of Dr. Harry M. Langsford. The Chamber Singers recently won third place in the Mixed Chorus competition in the International Muscial Eisteddfod in Wales. They are performing several selections including "Magnificat" by Johann Pachelbel, "Ave Maria" by Victoria and "O Savior, Throw the Heavens Wide" by Brahms.

Following the Chamber Singers, the Women's Chorale, under the direction of Dennis J. Tini, perform "A Ceremony of Carols" by Benjamin Britten. This piece, composed by Britten in 1942, musically describes the "Christmas Story."

Harvey Kahl is the piano accompanist for the Women's Chorale. Pat Terry is the featured harpist in Britten's "A Ceremony of Carols."

After a brief intermission, the Wayne State University Men's Glee Club, also directed by Langsford, concludes the program. "Trosterin Musik" by Anton Bruckner, "At the Round Earth's Imagined Corners" by former Glee Club accompanist Donald Foster, and "Hallelujah Amen" by Handel are some of the featured selections.

For kids

Sue Darr of Graden City, a member of the Wayne State University Dance Company, is part of the group's Children's Dance Theater Series. Concerts will be given at 9:45 and 11 a.m. daily Dec. 11-14 in the Community Arts Auditorium on the WSU campus. A final performance will be given at 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 15. Tickets are $1 for children. For group reservations, call 577-4273.
