Police request more funds to beef up force

By DARLENE STINSON

Police Chief Jerry Cox has requested an additional three-quarter mill to run his department next year.

He made the request at a public hearing Tuesday night on an administrative proposal to levy 3.25 mills ($3.25 per $1,000 assessed property valuation) for police in 1981 — the same tax levied this year.

A separate hearing Tuesday addressed another proposal to levy 3.25 mills for fire protection. The fire department operates on a 3.25-mill budget this year.

Under the proposed tax levy, both departments would operate on a $1.3 million budget in 1981.

But Cox told the Township Board Tuesday that the understaffed police department critically needs more funding. Hiking the police special assessment to four mills would increase the departmental budget by $310,000 and allow the hiring of 10 additional patrol officers.

Cox said a community of Canton's size requires a force of 72 to 96 full-time police officers. Canton now employs 25, including five command officers. An additional 33 workers are employed on a part-time or volunteer basis.

"You're talking about 20 people patrolling a community of 48,000," said Cox. "If we don't deal with this problem now, it will only compound itself in 1981 and 1982."

NO ACTION was taken on either the police or fire tax Tuesday night.

But at least some board members indicated their endorsement of a recommendation made by Trustee Robert Greenstein to place priorities on police department needs.

Greenstein suggested approving Cox's request for an additional three-quarter mill by slashing township spending in other areas. Under his suggestion, the special assessment for police would be raised by that amount and the general fund tax levy reduced.

Under his proposal, property owners would pay the same tax levy to the township as this year.

Finance director Mike Gorman said implementing Greenstein's proposal would require layoffs at Township Hall and a reduction in services. According to Gorman, approximately 80 percent of all budgets fund personnel.

Gorman said township administrators would have to scrutinize an operating budget draft already made by Supervisor Noel Culbert in order to trim expenditures. Greenstein gave no formal suggestions on where cuts could be made.

"The real question is what services would not be performed because you don't have those people anymore," Gorman said.

CANTON TOWNSHIP currently operates on three separate taxes — a five-mill general fund levy, a 3.25-mill police tax and a 1.25-mill fire tax. This year, the equivalent of two mills ($653,000) was used from the general fund levy to support the fire department.

Township administrators have proposed reducing the general fund levy by two mills in 1981 and hiking the fire millage by the same amount in order to improve accounting procedures.

A proposed general fund budget will be submitted to the Township Board this week. By law, board members may levy a general fund tax of five mills without a vote of the people.

Township residents authorized the establishment of two special assessments for police and fire protection during the last decade. Under law, the Township Board may levy special assessments of up to 10 mills for each of those two services.

Greenstein's suggestion, coupled with the administrative proposal to transfer two mills from the general fund to the fire tax, effectively would

Busing slash fuels protests

By TERI BANAS

As expected, cutbacks in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools busing program were greeted by opposition and sometimes emotional outbursts from those parents whose children will be walking to school in the fall.

But adamant parents were unsuccessful at Monday's board of education meeting in moving the board away from its earlier decision of two weeks ago to stick to its policy on safety busing.

The policy states that students who live 1½ miles or more from school will be bused by the district. (K-2 youngsters have a one-mile limit).

Exceptions, however, are made for those students who live closer to their schools but have no safe means of walking to school because of lack of sidewalks, hazardous construction or other enviromental barriers.

Parents who attended the meeting Monday, many from two Canton Township subdivisions, were not pleased by the board's firm stand on its policy.

THE PARENTS, from the Windemere and Holiday Park subdivisions, have children who previously were bused by the district to Miller and Fiegel Schools.

Under a comprehensive review by the district's transportation department this year, these areas and 27 others have been affected because condi-

Hundreds come when the Siscos throw big bash

By ARLENE FUNKE

Lonnie Sisco and his wife Christine are savoring good feelings from a rip-snortin' party, even as they ponder whether they'll do it again next year.

Last Sunday, for the fifth year in a row, some 400-500 people found their way to Sisco's 25-acre spread located west of Beck and south of Cherry Hill in Canton. They snacked on roast pig, hot dogs and corn, listened to rock music and rode in horse-drawn buggies.

WHY? Because Lonnie enjoys it. This picnic started as "just a get-together for friends," a chance to entertain a lot of people in one fell swoop. The first year, about 100 persons showed up to munch hot dogs and donuts and look at the Siscos' dozen or so horses.

The Siscos have lived in Canton for 17 years. Lonnie's drawl betrays his Paducah, Ky., origins.

"I grew up on a farm," explained Lonnie, 58, who retired as a supervisor from Chevrolet Spring and Bumper in Livonia last April. "A lot of people wanted to come out and see the horses." In recent years, word of Siscos' hospitality spread to friends of sons Paul, 11, and David, 13. No one was turned away, and people came from Canton, Ypsilanti, Belleville and Ohio.

People brought their horses, and Lonnie provided teams of ponies and mules for buggy rides. Guests bring a dish of food to pass and games are played.

This year there was a 200-pound barbecued hog.

"DID THAT go fast," exclaims Lonnie. "I just barely got a little piece."

At horse shows, "there's arguing about whose horse is best," notes Lonnie. "Here, they are just having a good time.

"I didn't hear a cross word," he adds. (People) have a sparkle in their eye.

Lonnie says he's pleased that there haven't been any fights or trouble at his picnics. He's concerned about the growing crowds and wants to maintain his unblemished record.

"Where would we put all those people?" says Lonnie. "I have a feeling this will round it up. But we haven't decided yet."

Lonnie praises the musical groups Teaser, Mirage, Power Source and Raven, who entertained guests free of charge all day.

"Give those boys a good lift," urges Lonnie. "They worked their heart out."

Problem drinkers crowd program of court

People who mix booze and driving just might end up in court. (Staff photo by Gary Caskey)

By DAN VECCHIONI

You could say 35th District Court Judges James Garber and Dunbar Davis have a drinking problem.

After all, about 50 percent of the cases they hear each month — 150-200 cases — are alcohol-related.

But don't expect to find the offenders in such cases overflowing the local jails. Most are filling the Plymouth courtroom Tuesday evenings attending the 35th District's alcohol awareness program.

The next program is scheduled for Sept. 9, 16 and 23, and anyone may attend. There is no admission charge.

The numbers the courts are dealing with are high. Currently, 623 persons are on probation in the 35th District for drinking under the influence of liquor (DUIL) cases only, said Cathy Gray, assistant chief probation officer in Plymouth. More than 320 are from Canton, and nearly 170 are from Plymouth.

The remainder are from other communities.

"At least half have been ordered to attend the awareness program," said Ms. Gray. "And, although we don't keep figures, I would say there's a very low repeat rate. People who attend the program with an open mind learn something."

Ms. Gray's counterpart in Canton, Carol Nalepka, said: "I've heard from some people that the program saved their lives." And, although statistics are not available, most do not wind up in court on a similar charge again, according to persons associated with the program.

"WE DON'T GET A whole lot of them back," Judge Garber said. "It's one of the better programs. It opens a lot of people's eyes. It's informational."

"It's effective," said Dr. Frank Hollingsworth, who heads the alcohol program at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia and serves as a lecturer for the 35th District program.

"We don't attempt to put the finger on anybody. We present factual information on how alcohol affects everybody. An individual then takes a look at his own drinking and how it brought him to the program."

The program has proven popular, expanding from a twice-yearly to monthly basis since its inception 10 years ago. An average of 70 persons attend each program, with most attending as a condition of their probation for a drinking-related offense.

"It's informational for first offenders," Garber said. "Most are drunk or impaired driving cases, but there are assault and shoplifting cases which involve drinking, too.

"If it's a second offense, we go beyond the awareness program. If I think they're an alcoholic, I do something more."

In addition to the referrals from the court, persons attend who may have read about the program in a newspaper, are friends or relatives of someone attending or are from Alcoholics Anonymous (AA).

"WE'VE HAD TEACHERS go through, and they get quite an education," said Robert Kersten, the program director and a member of AA. "And I brought all my kids through the program except my youngest girl — she's 10. Its main purpose is to make people aware. It's not rehabilitation or a cure."

The program consists of three sessions held on consecutive Tuesdays each month in the Plymouth courtroom at 8 p.m. Hollingsworth lectures the first two sessions, with the third consisting of a panel discussion by members of AA and Al-Anon.

Law clips arrest figures

It's no crime to be drunk — not since last year, anyway, when a state act took effect decriminalizing public drunkenness.

The repercussions of the law which went into effect in 1979 are not evident so much in the courtroom as in the police station. There, you won't find drunks sleeping it off unless they're also involved in some other offense.

Drunk driving, impaired driving, transporting alcohol in a car and a minor in possession of alcohol, among others, are still considered criminal offenses. Those are the cases that most often appear in court.

"The decriminalization law has had no effect on drunk driving and other cases," reported 35th District Court Judge James Garber. He pointed out that nearly 50 percent of his cases — or about 150 to 200 a month — continue to be drinking-related.

BUT, AS DR. FRANK Hollingsworth, head of the alcohol program at St. Mary's Hospital in Livonia and a lecturer for the 35th District alcohol awareness program, said, the difference is in what the police do.

"Now, if a guy isn't causing any trouble, the police just leave him alone or take him home," Hollingsworth said. "Before, they would take him to jail to dry out."

Hollingsworth is disappointed in the state law, which he said he worked on for a time in its early stages. He claims the state failed to provide the resources to make it work — like money for treatment centers.

Motocross is fast becoming a popular sport as the thrill of a race proves to be a strong lure.

Motocross: for all ages

Staff photos by Gary Caskey

Motocross fast is becoming a bike racing activity for all members of the family to enjoy.

Popular on the west coast for a long time, the sport has invaded the Plymouth-Canton community in recent years.

This past Sunday a number of local bikers traveled to their "home track" in Woodhaven — the nearest motocross track — to enjoy a day of racing.

Among the groups there were a contingent from the Easy Rider Club in Canton and a group headed up by Dan Loiselle of Jerry's Bicycles in Plymouth. Most of the Easy Riders, though, were in Howell Sunday qualifying for the state meet.

Local riders have been hoping to locate a motocross track in the Plymouth-Canton area, and the Plymouth Community Civitans have been helping in the search for a site, but so far without success.

The racers make the first turn at Woodhaven. The starting gate can be seen in the background on top of the slope.

Spectators from the Easy Rider Club in Canton line the course to watch the activity.

Racers take time out for a bite to eat. Easy Riders shown are: (from left) Bill Toth, 15, Andy Wrenbeck, 12, Don Chanter, 13, and Bill Dely, 16, all from Canton.

Check your old tax bills

Canton's tax department is preparing for the possible passage of Proposal C on the November ballot by asking all property owners to scrutinize their tax bills.

Any errors concerning name or address should be reported to the tax division of the treasurer's department immediately by calling 397-1000.

If approved by voters, Proposal C would exempt property owners from paying taxes on the first $7,100 of state equalized value (SEV). Howard Heideman, assistant to the Michigan Senate Finance Committee, said municipalities would be responsible for sending tax exemption certificates to property owners.

"When they mandate this to be done, it's supposed to be done," said township deputy treasurer Maria Falkiewicz. "You don't have time to wait until the end (and see if the proposal is passed)."

In July, Ms. Falkiewicz' department sent copies of 1980 tax bills to all owners of Canton property. In most cases, the bills already had been paid in December.

Property owners were asked to check names and addresses on tax bills and report any errors to Township Hall.

Ms. Falkiewicz said approximately 1,500 to 2,000 property owners have reported errors so far.

"But we sent thousands out that need updating," she said.

Residents who have lost or misplaced their tax bills may call the tax department to verify the accuracy of township records.

A letter sent to property owners last July said accurate information was needed in order to meet stipulations of two pending pieces of legislation.

According to Heideman, both Senate bills 1169 and 1173 were signed by Gov. Milliken July 29. The bills will implement Proposal C, if approved by voters next November.

Ms. Falkiewicz said updated tax information is needed by Canton Township even if Proposal C fails.

Court deals with drinking

"During the first session, I talk about the physiological effects of alcohol on the human system — how it affects the brain and vital organs of anybody who drinks," Hollingsworth said.

"In the second session, I talk about alcoholism, the disease, from the beginning to the end of the problem. There are predictable symptoms, and you learn how to identify a person as an alcoholic long before he reaches Skid Row — if he lasts that long.

"I've run into a number of people who said the first step they took to doing something about their drinking problem was attending the program," Hollingsworth said.

"But we're not telling anybody they're an alcoholic. Attending doesn't mean you're one."

Not all the stories are of successes, Kersten said.

"I know some of them will be back," he admitted. "I was talking to one guy who got arrested for drunk driving twice while attending the program on another drunk driving charge."

Drinking law

The law does require police to make decisions. Plymouth Sgt. Ralph White said a person no longer can be arrested on a charge of drunk and disorderly. It is just disorderly now. And often, police will transport a drunk to a detoxification center.

The detoxification centers are the one visible difference since the decriminalization law took effect. Wayne County General Hospital operates a 72-hour program funded by the state.

DO THEY WORK? Jo Neal, acting director for the Wayne County General Hospital center, said the number of repeaters is high.

"We don't have statistics," she said. "But from my observation, I see the same patients come in time after time to the detoxification center."

It is only after they commit an offense and appear in court that they may be referred to a more in-depth program involving medication, counseling and observation.

Youth faces charge for store break-in Canton police have arrested one youth and are looking for another in connection with the break-in early Tuesday of a grocery store.

According to Det. Robert vanLith, officer William Keppen was patrolling in the King's Row shopping center at Warren and Lilley roads shortly before 4:30 a.m. when he noticed a broken window at the Quik Pik store.

Keppen found a 16-year-old boy inside the store with $58 in cash. A safe had been pried open and lottery tickets were scattered on the floor, said vanLith.

VanLith said bags containing about $200 were missing from the store.

"We feel there was an accomplice that was able to get away with the money," said vanLith.

He added that the youth was turned over to the Wayne County juvenile authorities.

Hearing airs views on budget

Chief requests more funding

lower next year's operating tax from five mills to 2.25 mills.

Another suggestion of Greenstein would lower general fund revenues even more.

He suggested slashing the 1981 general fund budget by an additional half mill in order to offset a 23 percent increase in property assessments. Assessments, the basis for property tax computations, are reviewed annually by Wayne County and the state of Michigan. By law, they should approximate 50 percent of market value.

The assessment hike means a $348 tax increase for the owner of a home assessed at $25,000.

THE ASSESSMENT HIKE will increase the value of one mill from $308,000 to $413,000 next year. That means a 17 percent funding increase for the police and fire departments with no millage hike.

Cox said a 17 percent increase for his departmentt simply will keep line with inflation. The administrative proposal for a 3.25-mill tax levy will fund the promotion of five patrol officers to a corporal position and finance the salary of new lieutenant post.

Cox said his department critically needs even more officers. According to the chief, an increased number of criminal complaints has curtailed the department's ability to make routine patrols and offer other services.

He said services of the police department will deteriorate unless additional funding is provided.

The dozen or so residents who spoke up at Tuesday's hearing appeared frightened by Cox's word. They endorsed more funding for the police department, but said they were unable to pay any more taxes.

One resident objected to the administrative proposal to lower the general fund levy by two mills in order to increase the fire tax.

"That's all well and good. But what stops the board from bringing (the general fund tax) up to five mills?" asked former planning commissioner Bart Berg. "It's just a gamble that I'm not happy with."

Busing plan stirs anger

tions present when safety busing began have changed. In total, 518 students are involved.

The protest Monday, which was augmented by petitions signed by more than 200 residents of the two areas, was a repeat performance of a board meeting two weeks ago when parents of Bird School students protested their loss of safety busing.

Holiday Park resident Dorothea Broome spoke on behalf of parents in her neighborhood.

"We feel this action was not done in the best interest of our children," she said, at times referring to the New Testament. "We feel the board is asking us to compromise on our parental standards."

About 10 parents were concerned that their K-2 youngsters are not able to handle the walks to school.

"I don't feel a child can physically handle it at this age," said Mrs. Broome. "Even the church recognizes that these children are not able to make decisions on their own."

"WE KNOW BUDGET cuts have to be made," she added. "But this isn't a monetary thing to us; it's a safety thing.

"Could you propose a cut that doesn't relate to our children's safety?"

Trustee Tom Yack, with support from other board members, told the parents that the district's safety busing policy could not be changed for these parents because it must be applied with "equity" across the entire district.

Transportation director Dale Goby, who headed this year's panel to update of the busing policy, said he saw "nothing unusual" about either the Windemere or Holiday Park situations to warrant a waiver.

"It's a hazard for kids to walk to school today, but we also have to educate the kids and we need money to do it," said Trustee Flossie Tonda. "And if you don't have a good education, then you're going to be back here complaining about that. You can't have both."

"Every comment you've made is a financial comment," said parent Rich Orlandi of the Windemere subdivision. "I think it's time the policy needs to be evaluated and re-evaluated again."

The parent group also was unsuccessful in convincing the board to consider other options to cutting safety busing.

Parents suggested that they would foot the bill themselves for busing their children who no longer qualify for safety busing.

'Friends' look for members

Friends of the Canton Township Library still are looking for members to help get a new book-lending facility off the ground

"We want to get the word out," said LoAnn Smith, interim president of the Friends organization

Established about three months ago, the group is charged with promoting the library, raising money from specific projects and increasing community awareness of library programs.

The group plans to stage a grand opening activity for the library's tentative start-up date Oct. 20.

Specific ideas for the event will be discussed at the group's next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 8. The meeting will be held in the library facility on the third floor of township hall at Canton Center and Proctor

Ms. Smith urges interested residents to attend and sign membership cards of the new group. The organization's paid membership now comprises 25 to 30 residents.

New members who join Sept. 8 will be eligible to cast votes in an election of new officers. Positions up for grab are president, vice president, treasurer and secretary.

Annual dues of the group are $5 for an individual, $10 for a family, $25 for a sustaining membership and $30 for an organization. A life-time patron membership is $500.

Year-round day camp is planned

A year-round after school day camp program is being started by the Plymouth Family YMCA.

Announcement of the program was made recently after a contribution of $1,200 from the Lions Club of Plymouth to underwrite the expense of the effort.

The year-round after school day camp is a planned activities program to offer enrichment to the youth in the Plymouth area at-large, explains Janet Luce, program director for the YMCA.

Emphasis will be placed on developing the youth's abilities through involvement in sports, active games, quiet games, crafts, hikes, music, poetry, story telling and sharing of ideas.

The camp also will offer opportunities for companionship and discovering of new friends, added Ms. Luce, and will add a source of stimulation and excitement during the after school hours to all youths from first to fifth grades.

The scheduling of different weekly themes is expected to insure variety and diversity throughout the year.

One-way transportation from all elementary schools in the city of Plymouth and in Plymouth Township will be made available to the camp site at Starkweather Elementary School. Parents will be expected to pick up their children at 5:45 p.m. at Starkweather School.

The Plymouth Lions also donated the van used by the YMCA to transport the youth as well as having contributed the $1,200.

The instructor will be Dave Stoddard who has certification in physical science from Eastern Michigan University. A sports enthusiast, Stoddard has personal background in baseball, football, soccer, biking, running andhiking. He also is a talented musicians, says Ms. Luce, who sings, plays guitar, and writes poetry.

The after school day camp will be offered five days a week from 3:45-5:45 p.m. for first through fifth graders beginning on Sept. 22. Persons should register with the YMCA one week prior to the class starting.

A fee of $8 per person per session will be charged to members of the YMCA and a fee of $10 for non-members.

These helped the elderly

Editor:

The Plymouth Community Council on Aging Inc. desires to thank all those who gave us financial support in our recent drive for funds.

We reached 80 percent of our anticipated revenue with help from the Plymouth Community Fund, Township of Plymouth, city of Plymouth, Plymouth Police Officers Association, Kiwanis Club of Colonial Plymouth. The Civitans Intrernational have promised financial backing on one of our latest projects — a newsletter with pertinent information for our elderly.

To all those above we extend our profound appreciation for their concern for the older adults of the Plymouth community. They can be proud to be a part of this effort. Those who supported us in the past have not been forgotten, and our sincere gratitude remains.

My personal thanks goes to those who so graciously listened to my plea.

Editor:

The Canton Chamber of Commerce would like to thank you and all the people who helped in any way for your efforts and support in the 5th annual Canton Country Festival.

This year's festival was bigger and better than ever! This is due to many hours of concentrated effort on the part of the Promotion and Barbecue Committees, new media, volunteers and all the participating clubs and organizations.

The philosophy behind this promotion is to make residents aware of the many services and goods that can be offered by the business people in Canton to help make Canton a better place to live. We also feel that this is a great way to get the entire community involved.

Again, many thanks, and see you next year.

Soybean field day at MSU

Michigan State University will host a soybean field day beginning at 9:30 a.m. Aug. 19 at the campus farms.

"Michigan soybean acreage has increased dramatically over the past few years," says Zane Helsel, MSU Cooperative Extension Service soybean specialist. "Because of this trend, MSU has increased its soybean research efforts."

The field day will include formal, one-hour wagon tours which will depart from the farms every 15 minutes. The last wagon will leave at 2:30 p.m. Tour participants will see the results of soybean weed control studies and visit test plots of soybeans that are resistant to root rot disease.

Visitors can also take a walking tour of more than 100 commercial soybean varieties. The walking tour will also include visits to a U.S. Department to Agriculture disease monitoring trial and edible soybean plots.

The Plymouth Community Band will resume rehearsals Wednesday for its 1980-81 winter season.

The rehearsal will begin 7:30 p.m. Sept. 3 in the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park (CEP) Phase III band room.

All amateur adult musicians in the western Wayne County are are invited to join.

The Plymouth Community Band provides year-round musical entertainment at such locations as Greenfield Village, Plymouth and Northville parades, community college graduations, shopping malls, and nursing homes.

The band is best known for its traditional summertime Thursday evening concert-in-the-park series in Kellogg Park in downtown Plymouth.

The band is conducted by Carl Battishill, associate director of bands at the Plymouth CEP. Anyone wanting more information about the band may call Clay Leroue, band president, at 453-1957 or attend one of the Wednesday evening rehearsals.

The band presently has a complement of 52 members, but new members always are welcome, says Battishill. All members play in the band "strictly for the fun of it," he adds, to keep their musical skills alive.

Schoolcraft instructors threaten walkout Tuesday

'We're willing to bargain, but our job security is not for sale.'
— Richard Arlen, chief faculty negotiator

More than 160 full-time and 200 part-time Schoolcraft College instructors will strike Tuesday unless a new agreement is reached with the college.

The Schoolcraft Faculty Forum, which represents 163 full-time faculty and more than 200 part-time instructors, said in a written statement released two days ago that the major stumbling block to a new agreement is job security, particularly the number of course hours per week the college is required to offer a full-time instructor.

A Schoolcraft spokesman Tuesday would not confirm that as the major issue in contract talks. "The college declines to stipulate any major issues at this time," said David Heinzman, Director of College Relations. He said the college is "optimistic about returning to the table with a mediator" and reaching an agreement.

Classes are scheduled to begin Sept. 4.

THE FACULTY union Tuesday requested the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) appoint a mediator to the negotiations.

The Faculty Forum, affiliated with the Michigan Education Association, struck the college two years ago before settling on a two-year contract which expired at midnight Monday.

Faculty members earlier this week voted to extend the contract until 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 2. The actual strike vote, taken on Aug. 21, was unanimous although less than a fourth of the total membership of the faculty forum was present for the vote, said Richard Arlen, an accounting instructor and chief faculty negotiator.

But Arlen said more than 90 percent of the faculty forum members met Tuesday and no dissension was expressed regarding the possible strike.

THE MAJOR issue, according to the faculty, is how many sections the college offers within a particular department each semester. Arlen said the basic load per instructor is now four sections. He said the college no longer wants to guarantee four sections for each full-time faculty member within a particular department during fall and winter terms.

The faculty group fears this would lead to a "guaranteed layoff," Arlen said.

"To us it's an open door situation," said Arlen. "We're saying at least you've got to have the inventory on the shelf and let the customer (the students) decide," Arlen said. If the minimum four sections a week can't be filled, he said the current agreement allows for layoffs.

"We have the machinery to deal with layoffs," he said. "That machinery should be allowed to operate."

The faculty said in its written statement that instructors have been guaranteed basic loads since the college started in 1964.

Other issues, according to the faculty, include reduction in mandatory hours for counselors, reduction in pay for coordinators of co-op programs and a deductible in the faculty medical insurance plan.

Salary, says Arlen, is not a major issue, "but could become one." He said the faculty seeks an 8 to 9 percent salary increase, while the college's latest offer is 7¼ percent.

Arlen said 90 percent of Schoolcraft faculty are at the top of the scale meaning most of the instructors make at least $24,300 a year.

"We're willing to bargain," Arlen said, "but our job security is not for sale."

Auto emissions tests wow 'em at the fair

Michigan State Fair visitors can see how cars will be tested for pollution at a special booth co-sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the state and the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG).

The fair, on the Woodward Avenue fairgrounds, south of Eight Mile Road, in Detroit, runs through Labor Day, Sept. 1.

The state's motor vehicle emissions inspection and maintenance law, passed by the state legislature in April, requires states to comply with nationwide pollution standards set by the federal government.

Because southeast Michigan won't attain the standards by 1982, auto emissions inspection and maintenance is required to bring the region into compliance with federal law by 1988.

The exhaust testing booth, near the southwest corner of the fairgrounds, across from the Community Arts Building, will be open from noon through sunset.

What can we do?"

At CANCER ACTION NOW, we have special programs to help patients and families get through this sometimes difficult period. Programs of reassurance and support. Programs of practical help and rehabilitation for the patient and the family.

That's why we're glad you call us. We know it isn't easy, to recover from some kinds of cancer. For the patient. Or for those close-by who care. Patients often feel depressed. After cancer surgery, some patients have to adjust to a new self image. Sometimes they're worried about the cancer coming back. The family is often worried, too, and isn't sure how to act and how to tell the patient they still care.

Let us help. We know what you're going through now, and want only to help you through it as quickly and easily as possible.

We shouldn't shield children

Editor:

Jocelyn Krieger's article, "Recollections of earlier marches by Nazis," tugged at my heart. The saddest aspect of humanity is that it refuses to learn from its past mistakes, preferring instead to repeat them is succeeding generations. We have been told that "those who do not know their history and are not governed by it are doomed to repeat it." Perhaps our failure to learn lies in our refusal to remember our mistakes and pass that knowledge on to our children.

I was first made aware of the ignorance of Hitler and Nazism in post-war generations while teaching in the early '70s. A student remarked in class that her mother could not tolerate the smell of meat cooking on a grill because it reminded her of the smell of burning flesh. The rest of the class snorted in disbelief. The girl went on to explain that her mother had been in a concentration camp. Most of those students didn't know anything about the atrocities of Hitler's Germany.

We do our children no favor by trying to shield them from the disgusting, immoral, inhuman aspects of Nazi Germany. We only create, by our silence, the climate for someone like Gerald Carlson to spew his particular brand of hatred and gain acceptance. Of course the word extermination is never mentioned, but the malevolent intent is always bubbling near the surface. How,. for example, does one go about deporting black American citizens to Africa without force?

The best defense we have against these cowardly, hate-filled groups are the facts of history. We need to remind ourselves about the concentration camps, the experiments, the torturing and hanging of blacks in our not-too-distant past. Only when we confront the horror of the past squarely and recognize our own individual potential for evil can we overcome it.

Should the Nazis march? Certainly, if they want to. I only wish that nobody would go. Those who must be on the streets should practice a refined form of the Bronx Cheer; they ought simply to turn their backs on the shameful proceedings until the parade passes by.

Just as certain insects prefer the dark of rotting logs, so hate prefers a secret climate. Expose the purveyors of hate for what they really are, and they too will not be able to stand the light of discovery.

GOP says thank you

Editor:

On behalf of the Massachusetts delegation we wish to commend the state of Michigan, Gov. William G. Milliken, the city of Detroit, Mayor Coleman Young, the host committee and the countless residents of the greater Detroit area for the warmth, hopsitality and many courtesies shown to the Massachusetts Delegation as well as those frm the other 50 states.

As we watched and read about the recent convention in New York, we realized that all do not agree on every plank in the Republican Platform but we have unanimity in "We Love Detroit" and we hope we can return to your great city and see all our many friends in 1984.

We from Massachusetts especially want to cite John Dithmer, general manager of the Plymouth Hilton and his staff; the city of Plymouth; its mayor, Mary Childs; City Manager Henry Graper; the Mayflower Hotel; the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps; the Plymouth Community Chorus and the countless Plymouth residents who extended so many kindnesses to us during our stay at the 1980 Republican National Convention.

We all thank and salute Detroit — and Plymouth, Michigan.

August is a yucky month for porous sea sponges

Nancy Walls Smith

There's not much to do, and even less urge to do it, when the heat is oppressive and the humidity makes one feel like an overly porous sea sponge. My sinuses are itching and tearing, and if I drink one more diet pop in my feeble attempts to cool off, I shall float right out the door.

Not my idea of a good time.

The kids are keeping a rather vast toad collection in the garage and the cat keeps finding a thrilling array of snakes, moles, and field mice to deposit on the doorstep. I grew up in Highland Park — I'm not used to all this wildlife.

The misquitos, needless to say, have staked out territorial rights in our backyard, and once again we've conceded it to them. Everytime the kids come in the house, another big, fat fly manages to take advantage of the open door to come in with them. There are ants in the bathrooms and spiders everywhere else. I hate to think what varieties of insect life are probably flourishing in the darker corners of the basement.

Speaking of the basement, I could grow penicillin in the laundry basket if I were foolish enough to throw a damp washcloth down there. I did once, and found our clothes were soon spotted with lovely little decorations of green mold. If anyone knows how to get green mold out of a yellow shirt (or anything else for that matter), will you please let me know.

I'm feeling a little moldy myself lately. All this sweating is making my skin so oily that my glasses keep slipping down to the end of my nose and my face is shinier than a newly polished car. Cute.

I don't even want to talk about my hair. These days I'm giving new dimensions to the word "frizzy."

What kind of clothes does one wear when the temperature is in the 80s and the humidity is nearing 100 (and what happens when the humidity reaches 100 percent — will the air become solid water?). The less I wear these days, the better I feel, and the worse I look. I just don't have a halter top and short shorts body. I'm more the layered type. I like to hide my layers under layers and layers of clothes.

If there's anything pleasant about August, I can't think of it. We've done all those fun summer things we had planned. Vacations are over and the kids are growing bored.

Maybe that's the way it should be. You have to live through August to appreciate September. I yearn for those cooling breezes and falling leaves. I look forward to that nip in the air that will re-open the sinuses and unfrizz the hair.

This may sound crazy, but I think I'm actually looking forward to winter. Either that or the humidity has gone to my brain — which is a very distinct possibility.

McClendon is appointed

E.J. McClendon, a University of Michigan professor and a former president of the Plymouth Canton Community School Board, has been appointed to the Plymouth Township Board of Appeals.

McClendon's appointment, made by Township Supervisor Thomas Notebaert, was approved by the Township Board Thursday.

He replaces John Kenney, an attorney for Chrysler Corporation, who resigned two months ago.

According to Notebaert, Kenney resigned from both the board of appeals and the township's compensation committee because he was "at odds" with the committee's actions.

(The committee was formed to work on recommendations for township employee salaries).

Notebaert said he could not explain why Kenney would resign from the board of appeals because of a disagreement with the compensation committee.

Kenney was not available for comment.

Asked why it took two months to fill that vacancy, Notebaert said:

"I've had some difficulty finding someone to take the position from that same area."

Both Kenney and McClendon live in the Lake Pointe subdivision.

Nancy Grow had replaced Kenney on the compensation committee, said Notebaert.

'Tanks' a lot

Workers' efforts save taxpayers $19,000

By MARILYN RILEY

Workers at a nearby manufacturing firm were gearing up to produce a military tank part for the federal government when they spotted a blooper in the blueprints.

By sending the part back to the drawing board, American Swiss Manufacturing earned a $19,093.25 "thank-you" under a little-known federal program designed to save taxpayers' money.

"They could have gone ahead and made the thing . . . gotten paid for it, made a profit and the government would have found out it leaked grease all over the place," explained Chesley Ayers, an engineer with the Department of Defense Logistics Agency in Detroit. "It would have been perfectly useless."

Federal officials figure American Swiss saved the government $40,000 by catching the error. And, under a clause written into many contracts with firms doing government work, the Southfield-based company is entitled to half the savings, Ayers says.

Chrysler Corp. designed the problem part — a hand tool used to change the track on the Army's M-60 tank. The government bought the design and American Swiss won the job with the low bid, Ayers said.

WHEN THE FIRM was getting ready to start production, workers quickly discovered that lubricating one end of the tool wouldn't have done much good because the design lacked a crucial oil seal, explained a company official.

"You put in the oil and it leaks right out," says David Brown, vice-president of American Swiss. The 38-year-old firm manufactures military vehicle parts under government contract.

Without proper lubrication, the tool could have rusted and left soldiers stranded with a crippled tank, he adds.

Asked how Chrysler engineers overlooked the problem, Brown laughed and said: "We don't know."

The firm's first application for a design change under the federal Value Engineering Program was rejected by officials at the Army's Warren tank command, Ayers said.

"It was a bad design," Ayers says flatly.

But, he adds, Army officials at first didn't believe Chrysler engineers would make such a mistake.

"When they really looked into it, they suddenly found it was a major problem," explains Ayers, who kept pushing for successful reconsideration.

AMERICAN SWISS has since produced about 18,000 of the tools — with the extra oil seal, Brown says.

The nearly $20,000 bonus "is a nice piece of money" for a firm with yearly sales of about $1 million, Brown says, adding that he plans to put the bonus in the bank.

The Southfield firm's tank tool redesign request was the first of several value engineering applications to be approved, Brown says. He thinks the cash bonus program will prompt his company to examine all contract jobs closely.

That's the point of the value engineering clauses, first put in military contracts about 10 years ago, Ayers says. His job is pointing out the fine print to military contractors often swamped by reams of government-mandated paperwork.

"It's unfortunate more contractors don't take advantage of the program," says Ayers. "If they can come up with an idea that will save money, we'll share the savings."

Ayers says his department received 55 such applications last year and 30 so far this year. About one-fourth of the requests are eventually approved, with awards usually around $1,000.

Nationwide, the program has saved the government nearly $6.5 million so far this year after federal officials doled out an equal amount in rebates, said Ayers.

An urgent message to Michigan's 5.1 million Blue Cross/Blue Shield subscribers.

The Executive Committee of your Blue Cross/Blue Shield Board of Directors unanimously adopted the following resolution because of its deep concern that pending legislation, if approved unchanged, will severely cripple our ability to serve our customers and subscribers.

The resolution was sent to the Governor, Attorney General and leaders of the Senate and House of Representatives, urging them to help us protect your interests.

We hope you will examine this resolution thoughtfully. The subject matter is of enormous significance.

The resolution reads:

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF BLUE CROSS AND BLUE SHIELD OF MICHIGAN'S BOARD OF DIRECTORS

The 5.1 million subscribers of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan (BCBSM) face the worst crisis in the 41-year history of the corporation.

BCBSM is experiencing alarming underwriting losses and plunging reserves caused by inadequate rates and Michigan's severe economic recession. Subscriber security is threatened by pending legislation that may soon freeze into law burdens even greater than those imposed by a failing economy...burdens which will diminish this corporation's ability to serve its customers and subscribers.

The members of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors appeal for your help to prevent further damage to a health care delivery system on which 53.7 percent of the state's population depends.

Since its founding, Blue Cross and Blue Shield has pledged to its subscribers the highest quality health care coverage for the lowest possible cost, and cost containment leadership and innovative approaches to improve the design, delivery and quality of health care.

That commitment is now in jeopardy.

There are provisions in H.B. 4555 and the Senate Substitute that, if adopted, will unnecessarily increase our regulatory burden, erode financial stability, hamper efficient Board operations, add millions of dollars to the costs our subscribers must pay, and impair our ability to offer benefit packages to subscribers in competition with large commercial insurers headquartered outside Michigan.

We urge you to recognize the danger of over-regulation because we know its consequences firsthand. For two and a half years we were denied a rate hearing by aggressive intervenors, thus forcing us to withdraw our filing and seek redress through the courts. Yet proposals in one Bill would perpetuate such delays by mandating a rate approval process open to intervention by any group, whether enrolled in our programs or not.

Inadequate rates, long tolerated, compound losses and lead only to instability for our 5.1 million subscribers. Instead of gradual adjustments for inflation, our customers and subscribers can again face sudden and large increases when new rates are approved after long delays.

The Bills now before the legislature contain many other provisions ominous to BCBSM's future, and consequently ominous to its subscribers.

We are concerned at the extent to which government would intrude into the policy-making functions of our Board and operations of our company at a time when American public policy has shifted decisively toward deregulation.

Both Bills establish by law the unprecedented doctrine of political appointments to the Board of a private corporation. Both Bills, though in contradictory formulas, mandate proportional representation. The Board itself is left with no discretion to adjust membership in light of changing business environment or the needs of its subscribers.

Both Bills require roll call votes on substantive issues, listing of the names in the minutes, and distribution of raw draft minutes to anyone on request—a prescription for intimidation, harassment and external pressure on directors, especially with respect to such unpopular issues as cost containment.

While advocating stringent cost containment measures, the Bills, as amended, mandate benefits that will add upwards of $30 million a year in costs to our subscribers, and in some cases contravene collective bargaining agreements.

The requirement that we pay a psychologist for the same service provided by a physician adds a new BCBSM provider class—and would raise the cost to our subscribers by $20 million annually.

The provision that we pay for care in state mental facilities adds an estimated $10 million to our subscriber cost. Moreover, we would have no control over performance standards and rules.

The Bills would also force us to contract with free-standing surgical facilities without knowing whether they, in fact, save money or add to the total health care bill.

Many hundreds of thousands of dollars could be added to our subscribers' bills by the mandate that we offer prosthetic appliance benefits which are now optional.

Clearly, the "savings" envisioned by this legislation would be diminished by these costly provisions.

The health care benefit market in Michigan is extremely competitive.

Crippling our efforts to meet the aggressive challenge of large commercial insurers is a double standard of regulation. We are not granted the same freedom as our competitors to design benefits and implement appropriate rates.

Just when we face the strongest competitive pressure in our history, the proposed bills would explicitly forbid us to market the kind of health-life-disability benefit "packages" now being demanded by many of our customers, who speak for millions of our group subscribers.

Equally important, such provisions would deprive Michigan employers of Blue Cross and Blue Shield as a source of such benefits, regardless of the efficiencies and service advantages we can offer their employees.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan has never opposed reasonable and equitable regulation. But the Bills now before the legislature go far beyond the "reasonable" and "equitable" philosophy. In fact, neutral observers in the legislature and the media, as well as reputable and independent consultants whose views are on record, have concluded that some sections are punitive, and reflect pressures unrelated to the issues.

The fundamental issue is whether Blue Cross and Blue Shield survives as an efficient and effective system so vital to the health care of the citizens of Michigan. This, in turn, directly impacts the jobs of 5,500 BCBSM employees in Michigan and potentially has adverse ramifications on other Michigan jobs both within and without the health care field.

An impotent BCBSM...its policy distorted by disruptive influence, its market share greatly reduced, its capacity to control costs undermined by fiscal instability...would ill serve Michigan's labor and business communities, and the hundreds of thousands of individual subscribers who have depended on this company for 41 years to provide the best quality health care at the lowest cost.

We urgently ask your consideration, support and influence to reject attempts to further weaken a Blue Cross and Blue Shield already burdened by inequitable regulation, underwriting losses and Michigan's economic recession.

We stand ready to work cooperatively with the House-Senate Conference Committee. We believe that our knowledge and experience coupled with the wisdom of responsible political leadership can build a health care system all of us want: effective, efficient and managed in the best interest of those we serve.

You have been fully apprised by BCBSM management during the past year and a half of its concerns with the pending legislation, and the Executive Committee fully concurs with those management efforts.

Therefore, be it—

RESOLVED That we, the undersigned members of the Executive Committee of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan, strongly support this appeal to the executive and legislative leadership of Michigan.

Most MSU students get financial aid

Students at Michigan State University will receive between $40 million and $45 million in financial aid this coming school year.

About 55 percent of the 45,000 students on campus will receive some kind of financial aid, whether it's a short term loan which must by repaid in a few months or a long term loan which doesn't have to be repaid until the student graduates.

Ronald L. Roderick, acting director of financial aid, said students can get help paying their school bills through four basic sources: grants, scholarships, loans and jobs, or a combination of sources. The money comes from private donors, the federal government, the state and MSU.

And this year students seem to need more help than ever, says Roderick. In one program alone — the Michigan Guaranteed Student Loadn — applications are up 125 percent over last year, and they're coming in now at the rate of 300 a day.

"The economy and the layoffs, especially in Michigan, have made a tremendous impact on the number of students who will need and depend on aid to attend school this coming year," said Roderick.

However, Roderick said that by using a number of alternatives, including a loan, a willingness to work part time and cutting back on personal expenses, there is a means for students to go to school.

One program which has helped many students is the Guaranteed Student Loan, which provides a maximum of $2,500 in a single year. Students must start repaying the loan nine months after they graduate, including 7 percent simple interest.

The financial requirements to prove need are not as strict as in other types of loans, making it attractive to many students, said Roderick.

Students usually apply for these loans through their hometown banks. If they are turned down, they can apply to the state through the State Direct Student Loan Program at the state Department of Education and then to Michigan State.

When parents are no longer able to help out with school costs, students often turn to the Guaranteed Student Loan program for help, said Roderick, and that seems to be what's happening at MSU.

Going to school this year will cost the average student $4,050, including $705 for personal expenses — everything from toothpaste to travel home.

There have been two cutoacks in student grant and loan programs this year. The State Competitive Scholarship program, whcich provides help paying tuition, has cut back aid to every recipient by $250. The Basic Educational Opportunity Grant from the federal government also cut each grant back $50.

But we know what went wrong, don't we? A business can never outgrow the need to advertise. A successful businessman advertises differently than one who is just beginning, but it is necessary to keep the company name always before the buyers.

Even in a recession, the smart businessman keeps his customers by advertising agressively and often he takes customers away from the timid competitor who cuts his advertising budget during bad times.

Dems select slate for state high court, education offices

A long-time Democrat linked with the Detroit Cavanagh years and a relatively unknown party regular were nominated for the Michigan Supreme Court at Sunday's state Democratic Party convention in Cobo Hall.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Joseph B. Sullivan, 58, defeated state Court of Appeals Judge Michael F. Cavanagh, 39, and attorney Warren D. Bracy Jr., 38, of Ann Arbor for one nomination.

Also nominated, without opposition, was Elizabeth B. Burch, 55, a Dearborn attorney and former 16th District Democratic Party chairman.

WHILE THE Nov. 4 election for two state Supreme Court justices is officially "non-partisan," the two major political parties nominate the candidates that appear on the November ballot.

Sullivan of Grosse Pointe Park, a circuit judge since 1974, defeated Cavanagh after two ballots. The two had agreed before the 3,154 state convention delegates voted that the loser would not oppose Mrs. Burch, a late entry in the nomination process.

"I got into this race only Friday at 10 o'clock," Mrs. Burch said after her nomination Sunday.

Cavanagh is the younger brother of the late Jerome Cavanagh, Detroit's mayor during most of the 1960s. Sullivan was Jerome Cavanagh's campaign manager in 1961 and was the city of Detroit purchasing commissioner in 1967. He was elected Wayne County Clerk in 1972 and elected to the circuit court in 1975.

WITH 49 PERCENT of the first ballot vote, Sullivan was 30 votes short of nomination. Bracy, the only black supreme court candidate, dropped out of the race and urged delegates to vote for Sullivan. Bracy received 7.5 percent of the first ballot vote.

On the second ballot, Sullivan won with 54 percent of the vote.

Among suburban districts, Sullivan won the 2nd (including Livonia and Plymouth), 15th (including Canton Township, Westland and Garden City), 17th (including Southfield and the Farmington area), 18th (including Troy) and 19th (most of Oakland County including Birmingham-Bloomfield, West Bloomfield and Pontiac).

Cavanagh was a narrow winner in the 12th District, which includes Rochester and part of Avon Township.

INCUMBENT JUDGES seeking reelection include chief Supreme Court Justice Mary Coleman, nominated last week by the Republican Party and Justice Charles Levin, elected as an independent in 1972 after failing to win the Democratic party nomination. Also nominated by the Republicans was Michael Hegarty, 47, a former Livingston County Commissioner. The candidates will run for eight-year terms.

While Sullivan said he will pay "no particular attention to knock off" either incumbent, both he and Ms. Burch agreed that Judge Coleman was too conservative. Ms. Burch labeled herself a "moderate."

Ms. Burch downplayed her lack of judicial experience. "I don't think you need judicial experience," she said, citing supreme court Justice G. Mennen Williams, a former governor first elected to the court in 1970.

"I'm a trial lawyer and I have lots of trial experience," Ms. Burch said.

FOR OTHER statewide education offices, the Democrats nominated former Wayne County juvenile court Judge James H. Lincoln, 64, and Carroll M. Hutton, 60, of Highland, a semi-retired adult education director for the United Auto Workers, for two eight-year terms on the State Board of Education.

Nominated for two eight-year terms on the Wayne State University Board of Governors were Murray E. Jackson, 53, of Detroit, a Univerity of Michigan professor of higher education and former Wayne County Community College president and Elena R. Sanchez, 39, of Saginaw, a secretary in the UAW Region 1D office and a state party officer-at-large.

Burn-cure side effects halted by researchers

The mystery of why the same dosage of infection-preventing drugs applied to the skin can cause severe side effects or even death in some burn patients and be clinically ineffective in others apparently has been solved.

Researchers in the University of Michigan College of Pharmacy also believe they have a remedy for this problem which has long puzzled clinicans who treat burn victims.

Gordon L. Flynn, Ph.D, a professor of pharmacy who heads the research, said he and his colleagues have discovered that the way drugs penetrate burned skin can vary greatly regardless of the degree of burn.

"This is contrary to the burn literature physicians have relied upon," he said.

Thus an application of antibiotic on the skin's surface may be adequate for one patient, dangerous for another in which greater permeability would permit more of the drug to enter the bloodstream, and ineffective on a third due to poor penetration.

"One can have a third-degree burn (deepest, destroying tissue) with the skin's natural barrier to penetration (impermeability) intact, and one can have a first-degree (minor) burn with the barrier destroyed," Dr. Flynn said.

ADMINISTERING DRUGS orally or by injection is not effective for burn patients because of poor blood circulation through the damaged tissue, he said.

The answer to the clinical treatment problem is to determine the permeability of the burn tissue in each patient — not apply a skin dosage according to the depth of the burn.

Since a physician can not determine permeability by just looking at the skin, the U-M scientist said, some simple means of measurement of a burn's effect appears to be the only solution. Changes in water vapor transpiration through the skin's surface are a good indicator.

"In the future, physicians in hospital burn units will map out surface water loss." The greater the moisture loss, the greater the damage to the barrier that keeps the antibiotic or antiseptic from entering the bloodstream, he said.

Dr. Flynn and his colleagues in the College of Pharmacy, aided by physicians in the U-M Hospital Burn Unit, began their study three years ago. Supported by the National Institutes of Health, they have had two scientific papers on the study accepted for publication, "but fundamentally the world is not yet informed about what we have found out."

HOWEVER, HE predicted, "within the next two or three years, I expect an impact (from the study) clinically if we are on the right track, and I think we are.

"What we have learned is far more clinically significant than we anticipated."

In addition to finding out that premeability varies in individuals with the same degree of burn, the U-M scientists also discovered that it remains stable for four or five days after the patient if burned, but then changes as natural repair begins to take effect.

"The skin is a very elegant and highly organized tissue that prevents absorption of harmful impurities and chemicals from the environment, but the burn patient loses that protection."

Also because of the damage to tissue, the burn patient is susceptible to local bacterial infections of extreme severity and the spread of infection into body tissue, he said. Fulminating infections are the leading cause of death in the burn ward.

Thus, body organs are more likely to be affected by overdoses of the drugs that are used to prevent life-threatening infections.

'Uh-huh. I'm a very smart guy. I haven't a feeling or a scruple in the world. All I have the itch for is money.'

— Raymond Chandler, 'The Big Sleep'

By CRAIG PIECHURA

Call them private eyes. Gumshoes. Snoops.

Private investigators like the crew at Bell Investigations don't care what people call them as long as they pay. Half of the fee up front, 25 cents per mile if they use a car, plus expenses such as movie tickets when a surveillance target ducks into a theater.

It's exciting undercover work. But, unlike any Chandler novel, few private eyes ever get into the cloak-and-dagger business of solving murders or cracking big criminal conspiracies.

"That's police work," explains Leonard Rancilio, 28, one of the private eyes at Bell. "Few (private investigators) do it.

Anyone who tells you different is probably BS'ing you."

PRIVATE INVESTIGATORS concentrate on cases such as child custody matters, tracking down missing persons, and performing the unglamorous detail of checking to see if someone's cheating on their spouse.

A sign of the times, investigators say, is an increase of clients who pay private investigators to track down sons or daughters who've joined a religious cult.

Private eyes say they must work within the law to satisfy their client's request but admit that for the fee they obtain information laymen would be prohibited from obtaining. For example, people are often traced by private eyes through Social Security numbers, information which is supposed to be confidential.

Taking a Krishna member unwillingly away from his ashram or picking up a child caught in the middle of a custody dispute could be called kidnaping. Because "the law is in a gray area," on such matters, Rancilio explains that Bell investigators will locate the subjects for their clients but let the parent make the actual "snatch."

Private investigators at Bell, with headquarters in Southfield, were asked about the ethics of participating in a scheme to "snatch" a child for a divorced parent. Investigators explained that as a hired gun, they must divorce themselves from any emotional involvement in the cases.

But, before accepting a child custody case, clients must prove a court has named them legal guardian. Trouble is, Rancilio says, is that often one parent has custody in one state and the other has custody in another state.

"WE GOT a kid from Michigan," said Michael Rancilio, 27 of Southfield. "(The mother) had legal custody here. He had custody in Texas. He grabbed (the 7-year-old girl) and whisked her away

"She has the kid now. Yeah, you gotta wonder what's going on with that kid."

At the request of the girl's father, Rancilio and his partners located the child, observed her habits from afar, and set up a snatch of the girl as she played on the front lawn of her grandparent's house. The girl's mother was at work.

"He went up to the house, walked up to her, said 'I'm your father,'" Rancilio said. "She said something like 'I know, I've been waiting for you.' She was only 7 years old. She seemed happy to be with him. She grabbed him by the hand and they walked to the car down the street and jumped in with him."

Investigators phoned the girl's mother to tell them her husband had taken custody of their daughter.

It wasn't too long, though, before private investigators working for the mother stormed into a schoolroom in Texas where the girl was enrolled and took her away to be flown back to Michigan with her mother.

Rancilio figures its the job of the court and the couple — not the private investigators — to decide who's right in such a dispute.

IF DOMESTIC squabbles are sticky, investigators say it's even more of a problem when parents want to take adult children away from a cult long enough to talk to them to see if their offspring is making a decision that isn't coerced by the cult. Most of the persons being sought are adults, with legal rights, and the religious organizations are quick to take legal action against anyone who forcibly abducts a member.

"We treat it like a child custody case," explains Leonard Rancilio. "It's a little bit rougher, though, because of the way they shift these people around. I remember one case took us to Detroit, Miami, back to Detroit, Denver, Colo., and we finally ended up at O'Hare Airport in Chicago where the kid was dancing around with a tambourine in his hand.

"We set it up for the parents to abduct the kid. We had information that the kid was going to be moved out that night.

They (the parents) jumped in the car and came right to O'Hare Airport. The kid's father was a big guy, he looked like he used to be a jock. He grabbed the kid by what hair he had and threw him in a car.

"The kid was putting up a fight. All his friends were close by.

We ran interference for the family. We told them (the Krishnas) 'Keep begging, but leave us alone.' We were going to throw a luggage rack between them if they started to interfere."

The 19-year-old local youth never returned to the Krishna movement, according to investigators.

DEPROGRAMMERS such as Ted Patrick, who has served time for abducting and deprogramming cult members, have run afoul of the law. Investigators at Bell say they admire what Patrick is doing but aren't willing to take the same legal risk.

"My personal feeling is if a guy wants to go out and chant, he can do that," Leonard Rancilio says. "But by the same token what about his parents who are worried sick? He's given up everything they've taught him and they're worried sick. Most of the time the parents just want to talk to the kid and see if it's his decision (to remain in the religious group). I feel for both individuals."

But, Rancilio adds, he never forgets who he's working for.

And his brother Michael explains, "You don't try to justify a case. You either do it or you don't do it."

That's necessary to remember in cases where private eyes look for evidence of an unfaithful spouse. Investigators could care less about an alleged infidelity but the client considers the information vital.

Sometimes, says investigator Marty Ravine, the client wants the information to use in divorce action. Other times the client wants to know if his or her suspicions are correct. And sometimes a client with money is obsessed with an unfounded notion that his or her spouse is cheating.

In those cases investigators follow women to Bingo games and their girlfriend's home and report back the uninteresting facts to the client.

Rancilio dispels any notion that private eyes burst into motel rooms to take incriminating photos of extramarital relations.

"It's good if you can get them embracing or kissing. But whatever goes on inside the motel is your guess. I'm sure they don't go in there to talk."

Then they tell about the time they posed as rat inspectors, making sure they didn't misrepresent themselves as city workers, to gain entry to a basement where they checked for stolen tools.

The tools were there, the information was turned over to the police and an arrest was made.

"Unless you throw it back and we kick it around, it's routine to us," Rancilio says. "But I guess to the public it is kind of exciting."

Don't anyone sneeze!

By MARILYN RILEY

A bored Scott Westbrook was sitting around the house playing with a deck of cards one day when he got a bright idea to stop shuffling and start building.

Now, 2,923 playing cards later, Scott and his friend Mike Bernstein are the proud owners of a rambling, ranch-style blob in the corner of the Westbrook family room. The two hope their creation will win them a mention in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Like the creation itself, the idea started small, then grew. The two of them, starting with 160 cards, first wanted to build the shape of the Millenium Falcon, a "Star Wars" space ship. But once they started, they decided to keep building.

"After we used all the decks in my house and his house, we decided to go for the record," explains Mike, a 14-year-old Troy High School student.

They borrowed cards from their neighbors and wound up with about 50 decks in all.

"We have just about every major airline here," says Scott, 13, as he surveys the multi-colored blob with different decks arranged to form a striped pattern. "The only one we don't have is Eastern (Airlines). No one's flown that line recently."

THE CONSTRUCTION technique is simple. Mike and Scott placed cards on edge and leaned them against each other at right angles to form a sold base of squares. Then they created the "roof" on the one-story structure by placing another layer of cards on top. It took them nearly five days to build.

The Guinness record is now held by Carter Cummins, who built his 2,206-card house at Westgate Mall in Texas. But the Cummins house was 51 stories high and Scott and Mike aren't sure their ranch-style structure will qualify.

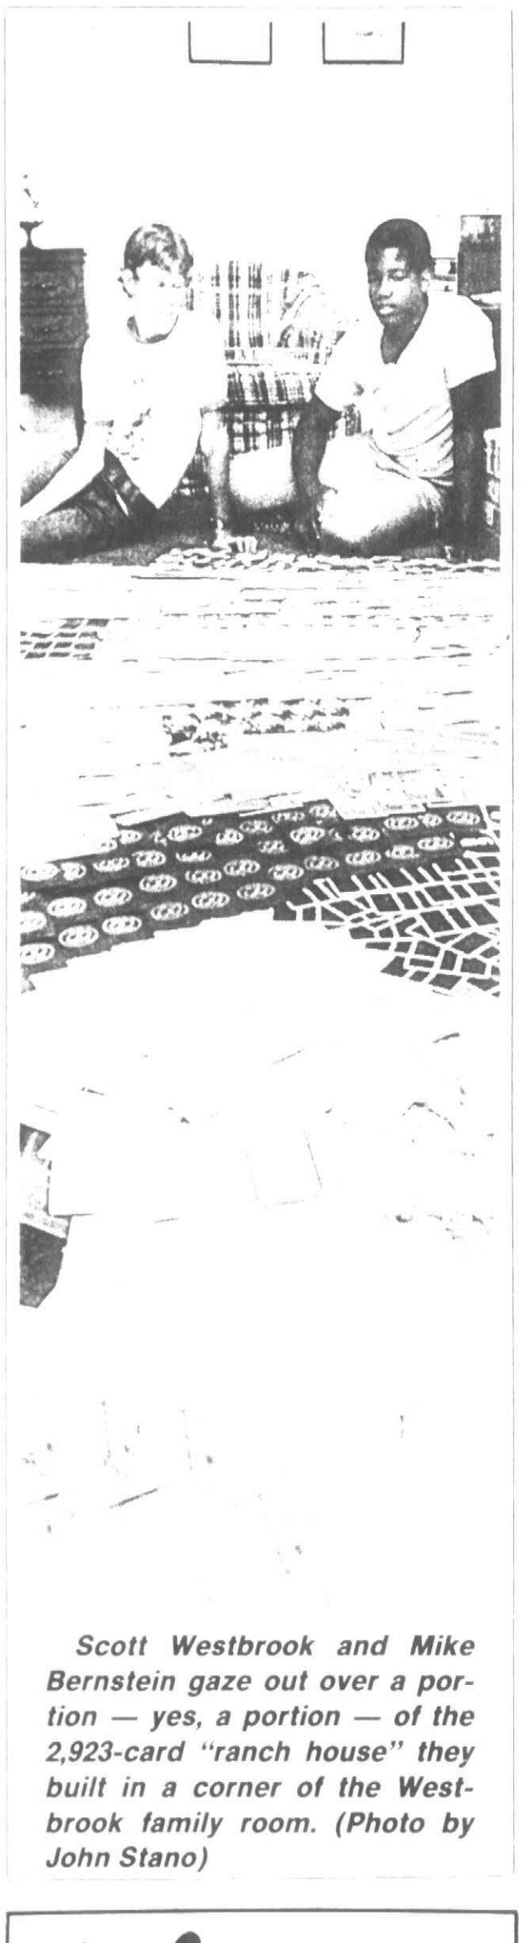
But the two say they're optimistic about getting in the Guinness book with the muscle men and daredevils. "Even if it doesn't make it, we've had a lot of fun doing it," Mike says.

"At least it's kept them busy," says Ruth Westbrook, who has had to tiptoe around the thing.

"They're just waiting so we can take it down," admits Scott. "It's getting hard because my sister dances and she gets close to it."

So now that they've built it, what do they do with it? "It would be so easy to just kick it over and that would be the end of it," Scott says. Instead, the two decided to let Scott's pet hamsters do the honors. Scott and Mike are eager to see how well their house, which withstood last week's earthquake, stands up to the hamsters' furry feet.

When the house falls, Scott and Mike have one chore remaining — sorting 2,923 cards and matching the decks with their owners.



Scott Westbrook and Mike Bernstein gaze out over a portion — yes, a portion — of the 2,923-card "ranch house" they built in a corner of the Westbrook family room. (Photo by John Stano)

SEMTA surveys area trip-making

The Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) will survey selected households in 16 Wayne County cities, including Livonia, Redford Township and Plymouth Township, beginning Sept. 6.

The survey, SEMTA's second major one this year, is being conducted to obtain information on trip-making patterns, related demographics and attitudes toward regional transportation issues.

The survey is a joint project with the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) towards planning future transportation services.

The survey is expected to be completed by the end of October. SEMTA plans to interview members of 3,000 households throughout the seven-county southeast region.

Interviews will be conducted from 4 p.m.-9 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Interviewers will wear special identification badges with their photographs.

Residents will also be given small "travel log" booklets for each household member, 5 years or older, to complete.

Important warnings we should not forget

Summer unofficially ends with the upcoming Labor Day weekend.

And many Plymouth-Canton residents will take advantage of the extra day off to make a final trip to the cottage, lake, beach or to far-off places to be with friends and relatives.

Because of the increased number of motorists who'll be on the freeways this weekend, plenty of admonitions will be given to drive carefully, drive 55, and to avoid drinking and driving.

These words of caution are good advice. Motorists who watch their speed, don't mix alcohol and gasoline, and exercise just a little care usually are alive and well the morning after a holiday.

So we ought to take such annual warnings seriously — very seriously.

ALSO TO BE taken seriously are the annual warnings at school opening time to keep an eye out for children.

The first couple of weeks of school are a dangerous time, as children learn to watch out for automobiles and motorists have to remember to watch out for children.

The "watch out for little ones" admonition has been given before, but repetition is no reason not to take the advice seriously.

The last thing any of us want to do is get careless because the warnings have become cliches.

Labor Day marks a change in all of our lives.

The younger ones who have been on bicycles, tricycles, wagons, skates and skateboards all summer will be putting on their walking shoes again — to hike to school or down to the corner bus stop.

They aren't used to walking to school yet, and haven't learned or relearned where to cross, how to watch for approaching traffic, or how to listen to the sounds of passing engines or squealing brakes.

We haven't readjusted our habits, either, and must relearn to watch in the corner of our eyes for darting children. We need to slow down as we pass parked cars or come upon intersections. And we must get ready to stop when driving behind a school bus.

We need to learn again to drive defensively, because many children don't walk that way.

And, because it is the first week of school, we need to remind ourselves that for some little ones this will be the very first time in their lives they have walked to school. These first-timers may do very unexpected things, very suddenly, because everything is so new to them. We cannot rely on them to behave rationally at all times.

We all know how to drive and watch out for children walking to and from school. But we do forget, during the months school is out, all those little reactions which are automatic driving reflexes during the other nine months of the year.

That's why the first two weeks after Labor Day weekend is a very important transition time — a time when we discover how much we have forgetten. We have to retrain ourselves to keep a close eye out for school children and buses.

So have a happy and safe Labor Day. Drive safely and keep on driving safely.

Let's not take a holiday from living.

Tim Richard

Heavy thinker on public transportation

Iran. Jobs.

Those issues have dominated our political debate for several months.

And yet some very heavy thinking is going on in Washington and metropolitan communities across the United States about public transportation. This affects energy costs, the preservation of communities and human convenience.

Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt covered the gamut in an interview during the recent Democratic National Convention. The questioning was dominated by the Nashville Tennessean, New York Journal of Commerce, and Observer & Eccentric.

"If there's been any discrimination (in transit capital funding) in the last 10 years, it has been in favor of building new systems," Goldschmidt said.

"That has been Atlanta, Miami, Buffalo, $600 million reserved for Detroit, Los Angeles' Wilshire corridor subway project, light rail in Portland.

"THE REAL ISSUE, which Congress tried to confront this time, is why are you dealing with those systems when we aren't able to take care of the systems we own? Why can't New York get enough to maintain its subways, Baltimore, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Boston?

"The president's conclusion is we need to do both."

Goldschmidt, 40, has been in office less than a year. His name is less than a household word, even among half the Michigan Democratic delegates I talked to. They need to get better acquainted.

President Jimmy Carter has two national transportation goals, Goldschmidt went on.

"One is a 50 percent increase in transit ridership by 1982.

"The other is production of more transit equipment here." Only two American companies make buses, and much rapid transit equipment is made abroad.

"Foreign makers are being urged to come into the U.S. and produce it," much the same way foreign auto makers are being urged to invest in plants here.

"We don't want to use the money we save from not buying OPEC oil and turn around and spend it abroad on transit equipment," Goldschmidt said.

A QUICK-WITTED, quick-thinking lawyer by background, Goldschmidt was mayor of Portland, Ore., from 1972-79, when Carter tapped him for the national transportation job.

In Portland, Goldschmidt had gained fame for halting freeway projects and moving that environmentally conscious region into public transportation.

The same issue faces southeastern Michigan. There's grave question whether the I-696 freeway can ever be completed across southern Oakland County. There's graver question whether something as disruptive as M-275 is needed across rural western Oakland County.

"The option is available to any city and state which wants to move money from an interstate highway account, where they have miles of uncompleted interstate which the local officials and governor conclude is non-essential. Congress has provided the tools for withdrawal and substitution of alternative projects."

Such alternative projects, he said, could be smaller roads, traffic signal programs, busways, bus equipment and rapid transit equipment.

Southeastern Michigan hasn't moved in that direction — yet. Goldschmidt didn't say we should. But one gets the distinct impression that if southeastern Michigan should take such a progressive step, there's a key man in Washington who would understand and help.

Americans watch as friends struggle

Main street America is watching and worrying.

Its people are talking about an unfurling drama in a foreign land, many miles from our shores.

The stage is Poland.

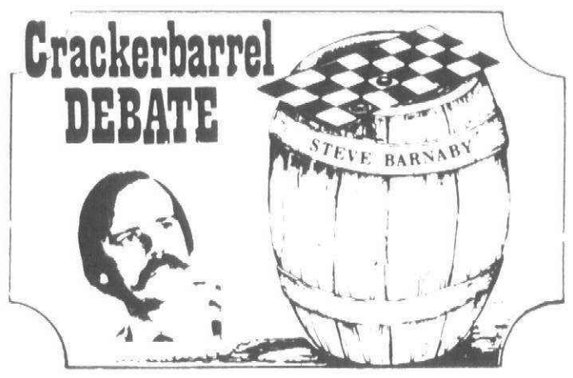
The actors' struggle is basic — to enjoy the fruits of their labors, freedom of speech and equitable labor representation. Their cause is just. But the outcome is pathetically predictable. They will lose.

And that worries main street America. In every place where Americans congregate, they talk about Poland. We hear it in the restaurants, on the street corners, in the shopping centers and in our churches.

It's nearly impossible to grow up in metropolitan Detroit without having at least a passing acquaintance with a person of Polish background.

Many of us have close friends who are Polish. Many of those friends have relatives who live in cities like Gdansk, Poland, where workers are shutting down the industrial strength of that proud country in defiance of the Soviet dominated government.

Unlike the Iranian hostage crisis, the Poles' struggle is talked about in hushed tones. Groups of persons gather around television sets and watch the reports — in silence.



We can rationalize away the behavior of religious fanatics who, in a torrent of emotion, stormed our embassy and took its occupants hostage.

We can raise the American flag and cry injustice for our brothers and sisters held hostage. We can stand for a moment of silence at the baseball game. It makes us feel like we've done something.

BUT WHAT does main street America do for our Polish brothers and sisters who valiantly struggle while surrounded by 500,000 Soviet troops?

This country's secretary of state, Edmund Muskie, says this is a Polish problem to be solved by the Poles. But that's a lie. The Poles haven't seen freedom for their nation in more than 40 years.

The "problem" will end when the Soviet troops move in and stop it. And like Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968, many will die, all will remain slaves to the Soviet bear, which will continue to sap those countries' natural resources for its own benefit.

Our secretary of state, a Pole, should be ashamed of himself.

Main street America, 12 million of whom are Poles, is ashamed for him.

Our President has committed his administration to human rights. But that commitment has been mere words and shallow actions.

When the Soviet-backed Vietnamese government moved into Cambodia, our President protested, took in a token number of refugees and hoped the problem would go away.

When the Soviets attacked Afghanistan, he boycotted the Olympics.

What similar action he will take when the Soviets quash the Polish workers' protest is anyone's guess.

Main street America is worried. It has a right to be.

Old timers preparing for reunion

A bunch of old men are trying to act like kids. And that's always interesting to observe.

They're gearing up for their 40th high school reunion.

Originally, they wanted to have the festivities last June, but time just seemed to slip by. The reunion is going to be held Sept. 6 and 7. The fellows say there's too much to talk about to stage their 40th anniversary in the more traditional single evening, and besides they speak more slowly now.

And get to bed a lot earlier. Come 9:30 p.m., they begin to nod off.

IN MEETINGS to plan for the festivities currently being held by a cluster of the guys, they begin to talk as if those four years together at University of Detroit High School were only yesterday.

They seriously discuss having a softball game the first afternoon of their reunion, just as if they were young.

Rivalries between their senior homerooms still simmer. Those were named 4A and 4B (which grouped the scholars who took four years of Latin and two years of Greek) and 4C and 4D (home for those who'd settle for a 75% grade in government and an afternoon of snooker.)

That memory prompted the softball proposal — how about pitting the 4A/4B Brains against the 4C/4D Dreamers, someone asked?

Tom Riordan

Executive Editor

The reunion notice mailed to all class members told about the game and said it would last for three innings or three cases of Strohs, whichever came first.

MANY OF THE OLD timers never left the area. They settled in Westland, Birmingham, Southfield, West Bloomfield, Troy, Orchard Lake, Livonia, Farmington Hills, Grosse Pointe, Plymouth.

Others did push on, digging roots in such diverse places as Aspen, Colo.; St. Paul, Minn.; Dunwoody, Ga.; Mission Viejo, Calif.; New York; Gary, Ind.; Bloomsbury, N.J.

These old guys keep saying that 1940 at U of D High was a vintage year, as if they were trying to convince themselves.

Of course the real anniversary actually fell last June, but the ancients were too slow and too tired to make so many arrangements in six short months.

So the spring reunion will be held in the fall. The class picked St. Clair Inn up on the St. Clair River because it's quiet there and no little kids are around, and few big ones for that matter.

THEY WONDERED about inviting wives. But that idea got shot down when a questionnaire was sent out to all the old '40 guys.

One joker from Pontiac, when asked if wives should be invited, answered: "I didn't graduate with your wife and I couldn't care less about her. And you couldn't care less about mine, so let's leave them home."

So wives were scotched and that's probably valid since U of D High has always been an all-male institution.

It's nice to see older people getting so much enjoyment out of their golden years.

There's only one thing that troubles me. I'm one of the class.

Everybody loves pictures of dogs and cats. They make fascinating photographic subjects.

Wouldn't you like some really good pictures of your own pet? All it takes is some planning, patience and a little ingenuity.

To begin with, groom your pet. A few moments spent in brushing your pet will pay off in more attractive pictures.

As in all good portraits, watch the background. Keep it simple and subdued. The background should not draw attention away from the main subject.

When shooting indoors, a large sheet of heavy paper or poster board can be ideal. Make sure the color goes well with your pet. Outdoors, be sure you have an uncluttered background. Green grass or blue sky will work well for you.

BE CAREFUL to follow the general rule of "impact" photography — move in close!

More than anything else, being able to see the appealing expression in your pet's eyes, the texture of his coat and his own unique markings will reward you with that special, dramatic picture.

With a small dog or with cats, you will need close-up equipment to help you move in. Extension tubes and close-up filters are inexpensive ways to accomplish this. Your photo dealer will help you select what is best for you and your camera.

Like people, animals have distinct personalities that will require different photographic approaches. Some animals may be high strung, and you'll need to devise ways of restraining them while others may be lazy, requiring you to liven them up.

Animals will prick up their ears and look alert when they hear a strange, sudden noise. This is the instant that a dramatic picture can be captured. A whistle, crinkling paper or a snap of the fingers will serve this purpose.

If your pet won't stay put, use a prop to keep him in one place. Over-active puppies and kittens love to explore in strange places. An open drawer, paper bag or empty box will not only confine your pet but will serve as an interesting prop, too.

FOR INDOOR shooting under tungsten lighting, use a tungsten balanced film such as High-Speed Ektachrome type B.

With flash or when shooting outdoors, be sure to use daylight balanced film.

In all cases, try to select a camera angle that will favor side or back lighting. Use a soft fill light, if necessary. Full frontal lighting tends to eliminate the texture in your pet's coat, while side lighting will emphasize the animal's fur and bring out details that will add to the impact of the photograph.

Using a flash will enable you to capture a fleeting expression or a playful antic. Try removing the flash form the camera and have a helper hold it slightly to the side.

This will not only give you more pleasing side lighting, but will also eliminate the objectionable reflection called "red eye," which is common in direct flash pictures.

One further word: Children and pets make a natural and happy combination. Photographing your child with your pet will result in exciting pictures all your family and friends will enjoy.

No abortions for federal workers; Alaskan wilds untamed

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes after the Democratic National Convention recess.

HOUSE

CENSUS — By a vote of 222-189, the House approved an amendment blocking redistribution of congressional seats among the states until the number of non-citizens is subtracted from each state's population count under the new census. The vote came on an appropriations bill for various government departments that was later passed and sent to the Senate.

The 435 U.S. House seats are allocated on the basis of population after each decennial census, but critics of this year's count say that including illegal aliens will cause unfair reapportionment.

Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., sponsor of the amendment, said including non-citizens "dilutes and diminishes the citizenship rights of millions of Americans."

Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., an opponent, said "the Constitution's language is clear and unequivocating: all persons regardless of citizenship shall be counted."

Members voting yea opposed including non-citizens in the population figures used to redistribute congressional seats.

Reps. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, voted yea.

Reps. David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens, William Ford, D-Westland, William Brodhead, D-Detroit, and James Blanchard, D-Royal Oak, voted nay.

MORTGAGE SUBSIDY — The House rejected, by a vote of 117 for and 247 against, an effort to make more new homes eligible for government-subsidized mortgages. The amendment law offered to a housing authorization bill that was later passed and sent to the Senate.

Currently, homebuyers with incomes at least 5 percent below the median for their areas can receive interest subsidies on mortgages up to $44,000. The government pays as much as all but 4 percent of the interest on the loan. The defeated amendment would have increased the maximum subsidized single-family home mortgage to $131,250, and would have made eligible those with incomes as high as 20 percent above the median.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., sponsor of the amendment, said that under the lower limits, "virtually every big city in the country will not have the opportunity for its citizens to participate in the program" because of current housing prices.

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, an opponent, asked, "How can we justify taxpayers' dollars subsidizing $130,000 mortgages for the lucky few who would get this assistance?"

Members voting yea favored larger subsidized mortgages.

Bonior, Ford, Brodhead, Blanchard and Broomfield voted nay.

Pursell did not vote.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS — By a vote of 308 for and 85 against, the House blocked the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) from reviewing admissions policies of tax-exempt private schools. Acting in response to a court ruling, the IRS proposed to take away the tax exemptions of schools it found guilty of racial discrimination. The amendment was offered to an appropriations bill (see first vote above).

Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., a supporter of overruling the IRS, asked, "Are we going to next require churches or parishes or synagogues to reflect the racial makeup of the community in which they are built?"

Rep. Louis Stoke, D-Ohio, an opponent, said the amendment "circumvents enforcement of a long established federal policy of non-discrimination on the basis of race."

Members voting yea opposed the IRS review of private schools.

Pursell, Ford, Blanchard and Broomfield voted yea.

Bonior and Brodhead voted nay.

ABORTION — The House approved, 228-170, an amendment prohibiting federal employees' health insurance plans from paying for abortions. The amendment to an appropriations bill (see first House vote) was the latest in a series of legislative efforts to prevent use of federal funds for abortions.

Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, sponsor of the amendment, said, "There are millions of citizens who strongly object to their tax dollars being used to pay for abortion — an act they see as morally and constitutionally reprehensible, the killing of a human life."

Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., an opponent, said, "We are not only violating a contractual arrangement with our federal employees, we are actually saying to the young woman — 'Look, we do not care what happens to you . . .' "

Members voting yea opposed abortions funded through the government contribution to federal employees' health insurance.

Bonior and Broomfield voted yea.

Pursell, Ford, Brodhead and Blanchard voted nay.

roll call report

SENATE

ALASKA — By a vote of 63-25, the Senate provided the three-fifths majority needed to halt a filibuster and clear the way for passage of a bill designating 105 million acres of Alaska as national parks, wilderness areas, and wildlife refuges off limits to most types of development. Those favoring greater use of Alaska's timber and minerals had used prolonged debate to block the bill, which was later approved and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., who favored cutting off debate and supported the Alaskan lands bill, said: "I do not think one senator should be in a position to frustrate the will of 99 others."

Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, an opponent of ending debate and of the legislation, said: "We can have our cake and eat it too. We can have wilderness, we can have parks, we can have oil and gas, we can have minerals, and we can have a tourism industry . . ."

Senators voting yea favored breaking the filibuster and clearing the bill for a final vote.

Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, both Democrats, voted yea.

FINAL PASSAGE — The Senate passed 78-14, a bill setting aside for preservation 105 million acres of Alaska (see vote above.)

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a supporter, called the bill "a balanced and sensible approach to two of the great issues of our time: environmental protection and development of energy and mineral resources."

Senators voting yea favored the Alaska lands bill.

Riegle and Levin voted yea.

The VIEW from CANTON CENTER

by ELLIE GRAHAM

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the German-American Club of Plymouth were in Maumee, Ohio, Sunday for the German-American Festival at the Lucas County Fairgrounds. Five German-American Clubs in the Toledo area joined forces for the annual three-day event. Each club provides special entertainment and there are five big tents where all kinds of German food was for sale.

There is also an import booth. Members of the host clubs were dressed in traditional Bavarian dresses, lederhosen and Alpine hats.

The local group traveled by a Holy Cross Lutheran Church bus. They left the Plymouth Cultural Center at 12:45 p.m. for the two-hour drive to Maumee.

Erika and W. Linwood Miller of Northville, Karen and Jim Takaki and children of Plymouth, Lorraine and Albert Talbot of Livonia, Marilyn and Elliott Burkhardt of Plymouth, Connie and Bob Fitzner of Plymouth and Luella Masora of Plymouth represented the Plymouth club. Karen and Marilyn wore their Bavarian dresses to the festival.

Louella met her sister and brother-in-law, Dorothy and Jack Mohn of Toledo, at the festival and spent the day with them.

Everyone is looking forward to the Oktoberfest which will be Sept. 27. They have moved it this year from the Cultural Center to the UAW Hall on Plymouth Road in Livonia. Tickets now are on sale and it is usually a sell-out.

THE FIFE AND DRUM Corps has done it again.

The members of the corps were special guests of the Morris County Militia at a muster in Chatham, N.J.

They spent two days in Chatham, arriving on a Friday. Their marching performance in the afternoon was praised by their director, Leonard Goren. The corps participated in a torchlight parade that evening and another parade on Saturday. The Morris County Militia presented a plaque to the corps for its performance.

The group left Chatham Sunday morning, bound for Philadelphia and a performance in front of Independence Hall. The young musicians agreed that it was it was an unusual experience to play before the historic hall.

The following day, they toured Valley Forge and returned to Plymouth Tuesday evening.

Seems sad that all these plaques and trophies end up in various basements and family rooms. Since the corps was formed in 1971, it has received innumerable awards which should be on display in some central spot. The community is proud of the corps and should have an opportunity to view with pride all those silver plaques and trophies.

The corps will be performing from 6-7 p.m. Thursday before opening ceremonies of the Plymouth Fall Festival.

THE TERM "great room" has been popping up fairly frequently of late. Discussion of whether or not this referred to a "family room" a "living room" or the favorite family gathering room resulted in a call to Bob Bake, who explained the whole thing.

The "great room" is a new concept. In an attempt to get away from a small living room, a small family room and a small dining room, all three are being combined into one great room. According to Bob, a great room's dimensions must be at least 30 by 16 feet and it must have a sloped or vaulted ceiling.

"The ceiling does not follow the pitch of the roof line," said Bob. "There is an illusion of space. It usually is beamed with beams scaled to the size of the room. It is airy and lends itself to dramatic furniture groupings."

He said the actual nomenclature probably came from Madison Avenue but the trend is here and the great room has been hailed as a great idea. Bob added that there is a fine example of a great room in a model home on Eight Mile Road east of Newburgh in Livonia. It is a ranch house in a section developed and built by the Curtis Building Company.

TALKED TO GEORGE Stepulla the other day. He and his wife Kathryn have been Canton Township residents for two years and both are musicians. In fact, both are violinists.

Bob is a member of Musique Unique, a string quartet which plays everything from classical, to ragtime,

Presbyterians welcome their family

The long-awaited Vietnamese family has arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. Nguyen and their eight children flew into Metro Airport Tuesday evening to be greeted by families from First United Presbyterian Church of Plymouth. The Presbyterians have been expecting their family since February.

Although the old manse beside the church on Church Street has been ready for months, when word came Monday that the family was on its way, there was a wild flurry of excitement. A special meeting was called for Monday evening.

First information was meager. The family name was Nguyen. The father, 42, is a silversmith. His wife is 32. The eight children, range in age from 13 to a year. The oldest is a daughter and the youngest, a son.

They would arrive on American Airlines Flight 604 at 8 p.m. from San Francisco. This information came from Church World Service in San Francisco.

A FEW MORE facts were gleaned at the meeting. The Nguyens had arrived in San Francisco on Saturday. They had been living in Sikhui, a refugee camp in Thailand.

Plans were made to call as many church families as possible and ask them to be at the airport to meet the family. Two Plymouth residents, Maria Thigia and Twong Le, would accompany the group and serve as interpreters.

And because it was deemed to be an international dish, a church member would have a large kettle of chicken soup simmering on the range at the manse to greet its new occupants.

Fresh produce would be purchased on Tuesday and the refrigerator stocked with perishables.

Liz Cardinal, who co-chaired the planning committee, was home from the meeting when the thought struck her, "Diapers. We didn't think of diapers. The baby may not be potty trained."

Mrs. Cardinal, who is the mother of two children, dashed out to purchase diapers Tuesday morning.

MEMBERS OF THE original church and society committee first broached the idea of sponsoring a Vietnamese family in January. Members were Judy Phelps, Marge Ackerman, Mrs. Cardinal, Jim Sockolowski, Helen Van Dyke, George Tully and Jean Ryder, This group was expanded to form the Boat People Committee.

Other groups in the church helped in the project. With the empty five-bedroom manse, they decided they could accommodate a family of 10 persons.

The deacons sponsored a potluck dinner as a fundraiser. The senior high school group from the church painted the walls and cleaned the carpets. The Mission Society took over the task of refurbishing curtains donated to the house.

It was cleaned, furnished, its cupboards filled with staples, and its closets filled with clothing.

They were prepared for all ages, from grandparents to babes in arms.

Once the family has rested from its journeys, there will be a busy round registrations and formalities to be taken care of. The church is responsible for supporting the family for one year or until the father can earn enough to cover their needs.

The news that he is an artisan, a silversmith, encouraged the committee to hope that employment will be available.

Medical and dental care is taken care of under a Medical Refugee Act passed by Congress last year.

Backpackers home after an exciting 6 weeks in Europe

Kevin Kecskes (left) and Brian Waterhouse planned their six-week backpacking trip to Europe for more than a year, and it was everything they hoped it would be. They coped with rain, lost cameras and snow blindness and came through smiling.

Their trip tp Europe couldn't have had a better beginning.

On June 26, the day before they were to take off via Braniff Air Lines for Frankfurt, West Germany, Kevin Kecskes thought he noticed a German accent among one of the men working on the Kecskes' home.

It turned out the man's parents lived near Frankfurt in Wiesbaden and they would be delighted to have the Plymouth visitors come to see them; they would be very disappointed if they did not. He gave them name, address and telephone number and a pressing invitation.

When Brian Waterhouse and Kevin arrived in Frankfurt at 8:30 a.m. June 27, they looked around the city and then called the Van Hammers in Wiesbaden. Their son had been right. Mrs. Van Hammer said they were to come immediately.

"We got there about 11 and cleaned up. She made a big lunch for us. Her husband, who worked in the offices of the local police department, came home for lunch. They took us out to a neat German restaurant for dinner and introduced us to everybody. Then we went to her sister's house. We stayed all night there and after breakfast, Mr. Van Hammer took us down to the dock where we boarded a boat for a trip on the Rhine. It was a wonderful beginning, said Brian."

THE TRIP had been been more than a year in the planning.

Waterhouse and Kecshes had been friends since 10th grade. Both graduated from Plymouth Salem High School in 1978. Both will be college juniors this fall, Waterhouse at Michigan State University and Kecskes at Boston College.

They had the same likes and dislikes; they had worked and saved their money for a whole year to fianance six weeks of backpacking in Europe; they had their plane tickets and their Eurorail passes. And they had a book which they would recommend to anyone planning a similar trip.

"Let's Go Europe," written by a group of Harvard University students, was invaluable, according to Waterhouse. "It was our bible, and it was never wrong. It kept us out of the touristy restaurants and told us where to eat cheap, where to go if we wanted to spend more money, what to see and where to stay."

They spent their first week in Germany and it rained all the time.

Their boat took them north on the Rhine past vineyards and ancient castles. They spent one night at Rudesheim then contiued to Coblenz. It was on to Heidelburg where they rented a hotel room for two nights before going on to Munich, where they stayed in "The Tent."

"It was a big circus tent with a wooden floor," they explained. "We were given three blankets and a pad and we picked out a spot to sleep, leaving our backpacks before going out to look over the city. There were between 50 and 100 people there when we arrived. When we returned about 11:30 p.m., it was wall-to-wall people."

THEIR ORIGINAL plans called for a trip to the Black Forest area of Germany and taking their time through Austria and Switzerland before heading south to Italy. But they were flexible and although they had thoroughly enjoyed visiting the German castles, churches and cathedrals, "We just wanted to spend some time in the sun. We decided the Alps wouldn't be at their best in the rain," said Waterhouse.

They took the bus to Dachau for an interesting but depressing day (more depressing because they both lost their 35-millimeter cameras), then boarded a train for the 15-hour ride to Rome.

"The weather was beautiful in Rome, but we wanted a sandy beach and were on our way to the nearest Greek island. We took another train and headed for Brindisi."

It was an eight-hour trip from Rome to the city on the Adriatic where them embarked for the Greek Island of Corfu. Their Eurorail pass covered the cost of the 10-hour boat trip. They just paid the port tax, which was $12.50 each.

Corfu was everything they had hoped for — sunshine, sandy beaches, snorkeling in the blue waters. One day they rented Mopeds for a tour of the island. The water in the Ionian Sea was colder than they expected, but four days on the island revitalized them. They were ready for more sight-seeing and Rome.

They spent three nights in Rome, marveling at Sistine Chapel, the Vatican, the Forum and the city itself. While there, they met an American exchange student and her Italian "sister." The Italian girl invited them to visit her family's beach house at Udine.

THEY SPENT two days in Florence and two days in Venice.

"The book said, 'Don't try to find your way around Venice. Take a taxi.' We shouldn't have doubted it for we got ourselves lost immediately and from then on we took its advice."

The Italian family entertained them at the beach house at Udine, then insisted they go with them to their permanent home.

"The father was wholesale distributor and their home was over his warehouse. There were stacks of Del Monte canned goods. He also made his own wine."

Clemie Cyburt

'Life begins at 40' celebration

Canton Chatter

By SAM NICHOLS 397-0429

We've all heard that "life begins at 40." Clemie Cyburt had heard this also, but when she turned 40 a couple of years ago, she really didn't notice any difference in her life. As usual, her birthday wasn't really a big event. Many can sympathize with Mrs. Cyburt and her Dec. 9 birthday. Just about everyone is too caught up in Christmas preparations to stop for a birthday celebration.

Mrs. Cyburt finally decided that if life wasn't going to begin at 40 at all by itself, she would give it a little help. So, she went back to school studying English at Schoolcraft College. Next, she got a job as a library aide at Pioneer Middle School.

Thus, when her daughter Fran was home from college a few months ago, Mrs. Cyburt was telling her how she really did believe that life does begin at 40. She was busy, happy, and well organized. She had to be organized to fit everything into her schedule.

This planted the seeds of a party which was held Aug. 17. Fran and her brother Paul, helped plan her mother's biggest and best "birthday" party. They held a "Life begins at 40 celebration," just a couple of years late.

THE CYBURTS live on 2½ acres, so the party was in their backyard. Fran said they feared for a while the weather would keep guests away, but much to their surprise and pleasure, more than 80 persons attended the party.

Guests included family members, neighbors, and friends. Word just sort of spread, and even friends of Clemie and Louis Cyburt before their marriage heard about the party and attended.

The band "Freeway" entertained, and several lively volleyball games were enjoyed. Rain did drive guests inside for a short while, which made the Cyburts extextremely glad they had finished their downstairs great room just the day before. Fran said her uncle, Joe Cyburt, is a carpenter, and was extremely helpful in that huge project.

Posters proclaiming Mrs. Cyburt's favorite saying: "Pick More Daisies" were prominent, and friends helped her celebrate with gifts of champagne and negligees. This is one "birthday" Clemie Cyburt will not soon forget.

LINDA AND CHUCK Havens and their two sons, Jeff and Matt, just returned from a very busy three-week vacation. They drove to California to visit their families. They enjoyed the mountains, tall trees, and fishing while there.

They sure couldn't have missed much along the way going and coming. It took seven rolls of film to record this vacation, and you'll soon understand why.

In Utah they stopped to see Bryce and Zion National Parks. Linda reported Bryce was spectacular with its colors and formations. In Colorado they enjoyed Rocky Mountain National Park. People were biking up the mountain, much to the Havens' amazement. They found just walking at that height literally took their breath away.

They stayed overnight in Las Vegas at Circus-Circus and Jeff and Matt enjoyed the acts on the arcade there.

Their return trip took them north to Oregon where Linda fell in love with the city of Bend, in the Central Oregon mountains. They also visited the Grand Tetons and Yellowstone National Parks. Yellowstone was their favorite National Park, although they saw very few animals and no bears.

MT. RUSHMORE was their next stop, and although they found it very impressive, there were just too many tourists there to find it really enjoyable. And thousands upon thousands have found it impossible to drive through South Dakota and resist the lure of the Wall Drug advertisements.

jazz and soft background music. Other members of the quartet are Lenore Freeborn on violin, her husband, Alan Freeborn on viola, and Sarah Roth Cleveland on cello. Sarah is one of the Livonia Roths who used to play with the Plymouth Symphony.

George has played with the PSO, too, back in the days when he was student at Wayne State University. He arranges, composes and gives private lessons. The quartet has done clinics in schools and also performs at weddings, receptions, and all kinds of special parties.

The Stepullas are another example of the interesting and talented people who have gravitated to the community.

Antiques for everyone at mart

Take that old truism about finding good food where the truckers eat and twist it to fit antique shows, and there may be another nugget of wisdom. It might go, "to find good antiques, go to the shows the dealers like."

Two Birmingham dealers get enthusiastic quickly when they talk about the antique mart in Plymouth. This eighth annual event will take place Sept. 5, 6, 7 in the Plymouth Community Cultural Center, 525 Farmer Street in the downtown area. The mart is sponsored by the women of the Plymouth Symphony League, who will be at the mart in costumes reminiscent of the Shaker period. The mart supports the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

Carol Bird of Birmingham who will soon be moving to a renovated farmhouse in Hunter's Creek, said, "The Plymouth show is a lovely one."

AND SHE'S BEEN in the business long enough to know good shows from mediocre ones and she is particularly fond of doing church and community sponsored shows.

She said that when her two adult children, John and married daughter Janice Hegedus, left home, they probably figured their mother would be lonely.

But no such thing happened. She quickly turned her hobby of 25 years into a flourishing antiques business and has been traveling, buying and selling ever since.

Her interest in antiques is broad — textiles, decoys, glass, china, brass and copper, wooden ware, old prints and paintings.

She particularly likes to research and document her items. She said she is more comfortable talking to customers when she can offer specifics.

Her first criterion when considering an antique is whether she likes it. This rule of thumb has proved its worth.

"For the most part," she said, "dealers love to sell what they like."

PAMELA LUBS AND her mother, Mary Marquart, fall easily into the category of dealers who have to first really like something before they will put it into a show to sell.

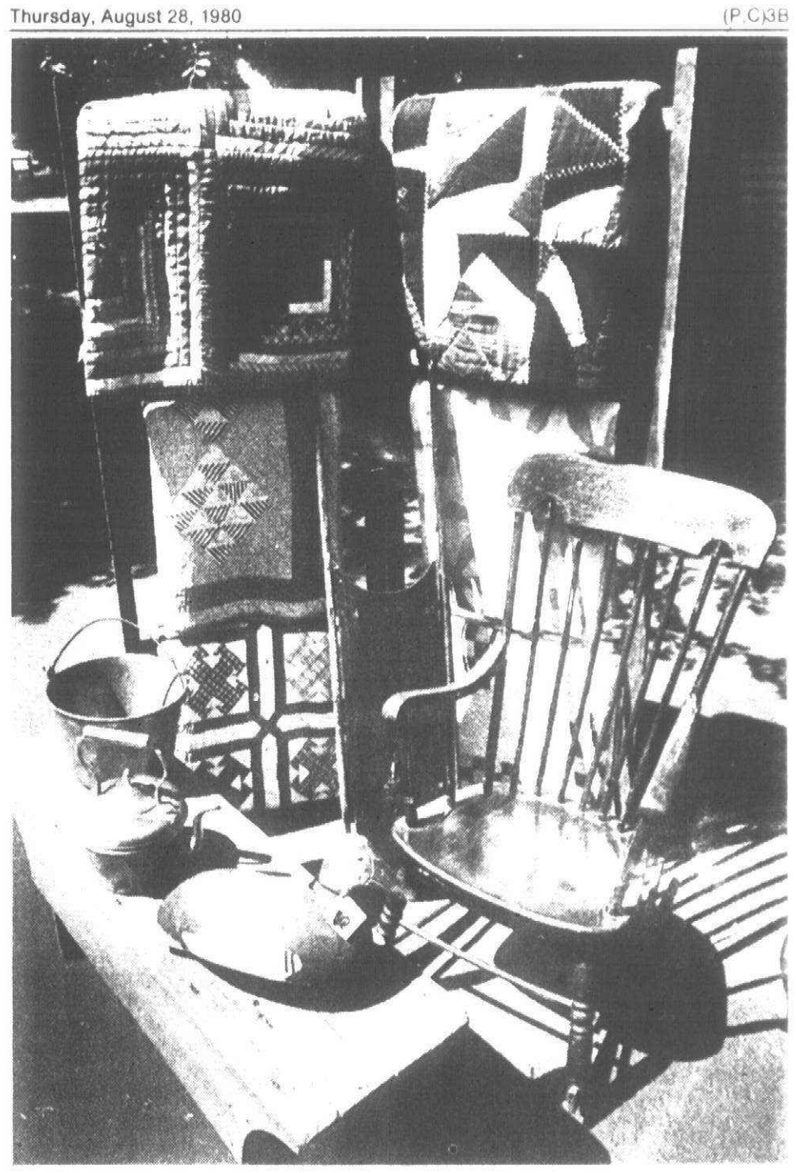
Mrs. Lubs lives in Birmingham and Mrs. Marquart nearby in Franklin. They've been in business together about a year and have already done about 10 shows.

"I was collecting even before I was married and I've been married 10 years," said Mrs. Lubs.

The collecting patterns for both mother and daughter were well established by the time the family moved to this area from Massachusetts. That was when Mrs. Lubs was a senior in high school.

The strong ties with the east have been maintained allowing both mother and daughter to travel and look for the country and primitive antiques in which they specialize.

Hours for the Plymouth Antique Mart are noon to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday. Donation at the door.



Pamela Lubs and her mother, Mary Marquart, both know the New England area well. Mrs. Lubs recently found the rocker there and was delighted because it is old, but sturdy and has the original finish. Quilts are another of their favorite items because they go well with the country and primitive furniture the two specialize in. (Staff photo by Dick Kelley)

Heels over head

You'll flip for this healthy suggestion from the United States Twirling Association. For better overall circulation, thicker hair and smoother skin, try standing on your head once a day for 30 to 60 seconds.

Place a pillow on the floor to protect your head, then slowly bring your legs up while maintaining your balance. The first few times you might prefer to to lean your legs against a wall, or have a friend hold you steady before you try balancing unattended.

My doctor pronounced me cured of cancer. My boss didn't.
My boss didn't understand that I was healthy again.
So I was let go.
A lot of people are like my boss. They think that everyone dies of cancer. I thought so, too. Until the American Cancer Society, through one of its service and rehabilitation programs, helped me return to a normal life.
The ACS also has local Units that help Americans who've never had cancer understand it better.
Today, more and more, cancer is a curable disease. Ignorance about cancer is curable, too.

Backpackers return

The backpackers were northward bound with the next stop Salzburg, Austria, where they spent a day and one night. They were boarding the train to Austria when a voice hailed them, "Hey, Kevin."

It was a friend from Boston College. "And we met him again in London, standing in line to see a play."

Both are skiers and they became consumed with a great yearning to go skiing. They went to Innsbruck. Their book said, "When in Innsbruck, take the little red train through the mountains."

They followed instructions and admired the breath-taking scenery on their way to a point where they boarded a bus. Their destination was Stubaier Gletscher, a glacier where they spent July 26 skiing.

"It was so warm that we finally took off even our T-shirts. People in bathing suits were spreading their towels on the ice and sun bathing. The sky was the bluest and the sun was bouncing off the snow."

It was a great day but with frightening results. The travelers ended up in a hospital in Garmisch. They were snow blind. The doctors treated their eyes, which were very painful, gave them eye drops, which had to be applied every two hours, and promised they would be 100 per cent in 24 hours.

"WE WERE UP all night, putting drops in our eyes every two hours two hours," said Waterhouse. "Kevin's face was sunburned too. But they did get better and we were able to visit the castle with its beautiful woodcarvings."

They also attended a concert in the castle.

They went on to Zurich and then to Interlochen, where they stayed at a hostel. Kevin met two more people from college.

They explained that Interlochen means "between two lakes." They hiked through the forests to a waterfall, where they stopped for a picnic lunch. The weather remained "gorgeous."

Time was running out. They entrained for Paris, where they found accommodations near Notre Dame. During their three-day stay, they made the rounds, visiting the Louvre and the Eiffel Tower.

Last leg of their European travels was by train to Calais, across the English Channel by boat, and then by train to London.

There they spent three days with friends. Their sight-seeing tours included Madame Toussaud's Wax Museum and the Tower of London, where their guide was the assistant raven master. They saw two plays, one of them, "Androcles and the Lion," was outdoors.

JV grand champs

Coach Chris Mayer expressed pride in the (from left) Junior Varsity cheerleading squad at Plymouth Salem High School. Tanya Soper, Laura Weast, Peggy Schrader, Julie Pauloweit, Kiyoko Edick, Julie Johnson, Tracei Riedel and Lauri Wells received first-place honors at summer camp. In competition with 35 other squads at the Northland Institute, Midland, the squad earned five blue ribbons for outstanding spirit, crowd involvement, cheering skill, super squad and jumps and stunts. Sorry Waldo.

You're not the only best friend man (or woman) has. Observer & Eccentric Classified Advertising has moved up to first place. Where else can an ordinary person find things they need and sell the things they don't want in an advertisement that doesn't dent the pocketbook. O & E Classfieds reach over 450,000 people in twelve affluent suburban cities. That's a b-i-i-i-i-g territory and a lot of people.

So Waldo, the best thing you can do to be a good friend is to get that Observer & Eccentric Newspaper into the house as fast as you can.

Move!

Stretching outward–and inward

By MARGARET MILLER

What does it do to the spirit when one crawls in terror across a 50-foot rope ladder attatched to a high platform?

Or inches to the top of a steep, rocky peak, only to have a close call on the way down?

"It shows you how many things are unimportant," said the Rev. Fred Prezioso, pastor of Epiphany Lutheran Church of Plymouth. "It makes you realize that what there is is yourself and how you look at the resources you have."

Or, suggested Bonnie Shomo of Livonia, "it showed me I could do many things I thought I could not."

Both Prezioso and Mrs. Shomo had summer experiences with Outward Bound, a non-profit organization that provides a wide variety of experiences in various parts of the country for a wide variety of people.

The clergyman joined a group of six men and three women, ranging in age from 33 to 49, for nine days of canoeing and backpacking through the boundary waters of northern Minnesota.

His experience was a special offering of Outward Bound titled Life-Career Renewal. It included seminars as well as physical challenges to help the participants zero in on personal and professional goals and values.

Mrs. Shomo had a 12-day sojurn in Capital Reef National Park of Utah with a group of women 30 to 58. A major objective was to reach the top of a rocky height known as Fern's Nipple — "named by some man, I'm sure," said this Livonian.

BOTH THEIR experiences took more muscle-stretching exertion than they had considered within their capability. Both stretched minds, too, Prezioso's in planned discussions, Mrs. Shomo's in more informal ones because "by the second day we were all pretty much hung out."

"It was interesting," she added. "Everyone seemed to be at a big crossroads in her life and we found we could do a lot to support each other."

And both trips into the wilds included 48-hour fasts and 36-hour "solos" — times to be alone with the wilderness and entirely on one's own.

"I worked on my journal, read the book we were studying, watched a moose and carved a deer antler I found," Prezioso remembers.

"We didn't have books," Mrs. Shomo said. What she did was embroider some long underwear, write letters, exercise and watch lizards.

And both learned to accept challenges as they came, and came, and came.

"I had figured they would get into things easily at the beginning," recalled Mrs. Shomo, because several of us, including me, had never backpacked.

"Then in the first 15 minutes we were out, we climbed a wooden fence, went down a hill with quite loose soil, got past some barbed wire and crossed a creek.

"I decided to forget any idea of gradual breaking in."

Prezioso said it became a by-word with his fellow campers that when each new challenge came the reaction was "I made my decision to do this when I sent my money in."

THE PASTOR SAID he decided to send his money in after first getting literature on the program for his son.

"It turned out you had to be 16½ years old," Prezioso said, "so he couldn't go. But I decided I wanted to try it. I had been immersed in academic studies for several years; this was a chance for a physical experience."

For Mrs. Shomo it was a matter of a new challenge and personal growth.

"It had been suggested to me I was becoming an 'I can't' person because I hadn't," she said. "I found I could do much more than I thought."

The worst moment for Fred Prezioso was his climb across the rope ladder far off the ground.

"That was absolutely terrifying to all of us," he said. "I was surprised because I thought that would be a piece of cake."

Bonnie Shomo's greatest fear beforehand was of rappelling (going up a sheer mountainside by means of rope holds. "And I'll never forget the thrill the first time I made it successfully," she said.

But on a descent through Piston Gully she had a scare. "We had to set down our back packs," she remembered, "and mine caught on something. I was on a narrow ledge and could not turn to see what it was and no one could get to me to help. Finally I inched over and got loose."

Both praised the leadership provided. Prezioso noted the individual treatment, pointing out that in two similar instances his leader gave the word "Help" one time and "Don't help" another. Mrs. Shomo noted she had "never seen women in such physically demanding roles and it was very comforting."

"But there was one time when they let us camp closer to the road than we should have done," she noted. "They realized we were at our limits that night."

AND WHAT changes do they see in themselves as a result of the experience?

"I keep thinking back to the instructors' saying there are no problems, only opportunities for discovery, growth and change," said Prezioso. "I certainly know there are many things more important that three meals a day and junk food and a warm bed.

"I know I feel better about myself now that I'm in better shape, and I intend to stay that way. And I'll go back — the only question is which other Outward Bound experience to try next."

Mrs. Shomo thinks she has become "more natural." "There we were, grimy and dirty, and still respecting each other," she said. She isn't sure she'll return to the program, but she is sure she will be less fearful when trying other new things.

"And I want my two children to go when they are 16½," she said. "There's a lot of growing to do and they don't have to wait as long as I did."

Chobot enthusiastic about professional bowling tour

By BRAD EMONS

Canton resident Vi Chobot believes in the Women's Professional Bowlers Association (WPBA).

The 49-year-old kegler was in town this week competing in the $25,000 Stroh Light Classic WPBA Tournament. She is dedicated to the game and the promotion of the WPBA tour. Chobot, who moved to Canton three years ago from Westland, is very enthusiastic about the sport despite a best finish of 23rd in a Canton, Ohio tournament three years ago.

"I'll drive anywhere," said Chobot. "I love to travel.

"I bowled the last two years with the All-Stars in Detroit. This year I decided to zero in on myself."

Chobot spent seven months recently in Las Vegas, working on her game with pro Bill Keith in the Charleston Heights Bowling House. She bowled in a league and raised her average to 192.

The Canton bowler will promote the sport any time she can.

"It's time the media got interested," she said. "These girls are fun to watch. They range in age from 18 to 62 and every pro bowler walks in to win."

Chobot spent considerable time making appearances around Detroit for the Stroh Light event. She was a guest of WJR Radio on J.P. McCarthy's Focus Show last week and later gave her views on Channel 7 (WXYZ) during the 6:30 p.m. sports show.

"I DIDN'T HAVE much time last week to practice," admitted Chobot. "I usually bowl six to 12 games a day in preparation for a tournament. I wasn't anywhere near that for this tournament."

Chobot, who is sponsored by her husband Walter, claims her morale is fine despite not having much success on the tour. She was pleased recently when she qualified for the U.S. Open in Rockford, Ill. Last month, however, she had to pull out of a WPBA tourney because of pulled stomach muscle.

"We average a tournament a month usually," she explained, "and I go in hoping to win every one. Our sport is not based on strength. It's timing, endurance and consistency."

THE STROH LIGHT Classic stepladder TV finals will be held at 8 p.m. tonight at Bill Srock's North Hill Lanes, 150 W. Tienken Road in Rochester. The finals will be broadcast on cable ESPN (Entertainment and Sports Program Network). Tickets for the finals are $3 per person.

Chobot will move on to Cedar Rapids, Iowa next month for another WPBA event in quest of her first title. She works out at Westland Bowl and Superbowl in Canton before heading on the road.

"I'm devoting all my time to this," she emphasized. "This is my life."

Oasis romps to softball crown

The Oasis Golf Center Women's fastpitch softball team returned to Benton Harbor Sunday to complete the Pepsi-Cola Invitational tournament. The three-hour drive was not in vain.

Oasis came through with an impressive 11-1 triumph over last year's Class A national runnerup, Benton Harbor Bargain Center, in the rain-delayed championship game. The game was cancelled a week earlier because of heavy rain.

The fired-up Oasis team jumped on Benton Harbor's ace pitcher Barb Johnson for two runs in the first inning and then put the game out of reach with another seven runs in the second for a 9-0 lead after two.

"The girls just exploded up there," said Oasis coach Bob Boyd. "It wasn't as if only a couple girls were hitting the ball — everybody was hitting the ball. "

Oasis pounded out eight hits in the decisive seven-run second inning.

Six consecutive hits in the second inning by Sue McDowell, Vickie Forest, Denise Cifaldi, Vicky Cavallaro, Jan Boyd and Jody Humphries scored four runs. Julie Stafford then drew a one-out walk. A single by Sherri Kiselica and a double to center field by McDowell, her second hit of the inning, cleared the bases.

"She (Benton Harbor's Johnson) is a Class A pitcher," said Boyd, "but we just jumped on her right from the start. We finally knocked her out of the box in the fourth."

LAST YEAR, Johnson pitched Benton Harbor to the national finals of the Class A tourney with no-hit and a one-hit games.

Oasis completed the scoring win the sixth inning. Boyd opened with a walk, moved to third on a double by Stafford and scored on Cole's third hit of the game.

Cifaldi picked up her third victory of the tournament as she limited the losers to five hits. She lost her shutout bid in the fourth inning when Delila Letike tripled and scored on an error.

Cifaldi gave up only one earned run in 20 innings during the tournament, while her fellow pitcher (Boyd) gave up just one earned run in 13 innings of work.

Boyd says that if the Oasis hitting can continue throughout the Class B state tournament in Charlevoix Aug. 30-31, his team can go a long way.

Baseball Hoosiers sign Bob Waite

Indiana University baseball coach Larry Smith recently announced that Plymouth's Bob Waite, who has played at Yavapai (Ariz.) Junior College the past two years, will become a member of the Hoosier baseball team this season.

A 5-10, 172-pound outfielder, Waite led Yavapai to a third place finish in the National Junior College World Series while leading the team in hitting.

Waite prepped at Plymouth Salem were he was an All-Suburban Eight League choice and an third team All-State pick (Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association).

"Bob is an excellent hitter and should be a tremendous help to us with his bat," said Smith. "We're very happy he has decided to come join us at Indiana."

Veterans brighten Canton fall cross country outlook

By BRAD EMONS

The return of a cast of veterans has brightened the fall outlook for Plymouth Canton's cross country squad.

Coach Jim Hayes' harriers may be ready to challenge for Western Six League honors this season. The Chiefs have not won a league crown since the school opened eight years ago.

"I've got just a super bunch of kids," said Hayes. "They're just delightful."

The third-year Canton coach will not predict where his team will end up, but is confident this season can be a success.

"They've been working all summer," he said. "If we can keep them out for the next two weeks, it's really going to help."

Hayes has been encouraged by the turnout so far. Twenty-five boys have reported for practice along with 10 girls.

Northville, the defending league champ, can be considered a top contender once again. Canton, however, appears ready to challenge.

Steve West, a senior, finished 11th in the league meet last year with a personal best time of 16:56. Dan Inloes and Mike Talaga, both seniors, finished in the top 20 a year ago.

"Talaga was probably our most consistent runner last year," said Hayes. "We have four guys who can run in the 16's (16:00-17:00 for three miles.)

CANTON CAN provide plenty of depth with the arrival of newcomers Scott Hand and Jack Pacente, both seniors.

Pacente, a mid-year transfer from Chicago, was the Chiefs' top distance runner last spring during the track season. Hand switches over from the golf team and was right behind Pacente in a number of distance races.

West and Talaga have been selected as the team's co-captains. Talaga was ineffective during the track season because of a bad leg, but is almost back to 100 percent form, according to Hayes.

Other veteran returnees include seniors Barron Smith and Mark Anderson. They are joined by seniors Dave Bennett, an outstanding wrestler, and George Kacic.

Junior hopefuls include Joe Kacic and Dan Henry. Brian Jones and Chris Albaugh, a pair of sophomores, return with junior varsity experience.

"We've got seven good runners back," said Hayes, "some of the guys have to be realistic. We're just too deep."

Canton's girls qualified for the state meet last season and return veterans Michelle Perrot, Kathy Brophy and Lori Shufeldt.

The Chiefs will open the season at 4 p.m. Sept. 9 at Livonia Stevenson. Cass Benton Park is Canton's home course.

First Edition rules at Massey

First Edition of Westland put it all together last weekend in winning the Massey Tournament of Champions men's slowpitch softball event at Massey Field in Plymouth.

A second-place finisher in the Westland Class A League, First Edition captured the 14-team Massey tourney with relative ease.

First Edition, which won four straight games without a loss, pounded rival Jamie's Sunday, the first-place finisher from Westland, 18-3, in the finals.

"That's the best we've played since May," said Manager Bob Andrews, now in his seventh year with First Edition.

"We were back to our old form," he said. "We were hitting the ball and playing good defense."

The tournament brought together the two top teams from seven different cities.

Massey Cadillac of the Plymouth Recreation League, which won a similar tourney last year, was ousted in the semifinals of the double-elimination event by Jamie's, 14-13.

First Edition's only test came in the second round against Johnson's Carbonic of Wayne. The Westland team came away with a 9-8 victory and followed with a 28-10 upset over Massey.

In the winner's bracket semifinals, First Edition beat Jamie's, 11-6, advancing to the finals.

First Edition upped its overall record this summer to 44-16 and will play this weekend in the United States Slowpitch Softball Association (USSSA) state tournament at Southgate.

ANDREWS' TROOPS pulled off five double plays in there first victory over Jamie's. First Edition scored 11 runs in one inning and added 10 more in another to sink Massey.

Providing most of the offense was tourney MVP Charlie Petrillo, a shortstop, who went 10-for-13.

Catcher Bob Hope went 3-for-4 in the finals and belted six homers in four games. Teammate Ron Honeycutt, a cousin of Seattle Mariners' pitcher Rick Honeycutt, also collected three hits in the final, including a homer and double.

Andrews praised the play of pitcher Dennis Kesik, who hurled all four games and went 10-for-14.

"It was a real good effort," said Andrews. "No, I wasn't surprised we won in four straight because of the way we were playing."

First Edition placed second in two tournaments earlier this summer (Lincoln Park and Bowling Green, Ohio) and sports a 3-5 mark against Jamie's.

Richard's Lounge of Livonia, a pretourney favorite along with Massey, found the going rough after losing a heartbreaker to Jamie's in the second round, 25-24.

Wolves kick away playoff berth, 3-2

The Livonia Wolves will not get an opportunity to play for the Detroit Soccer League championship.

A 3-2 loss last weekend to the Spartans dropped the Wolves' league record to 10-2-1 and mathematically eliminated the Livonia squad from any possibility of winning a division title.

Besa rests in first place in the Wolves' division and will qualify for a one-game playoff at the end of the season to determine the championship.

The Wolves have one game remaining — the exact time, date and place to be determined — against Baghdad.

The Wolves were without five regulars against the Spartans, some returning to college and others out of town and unavailable for the game.

Among the missing were Craig Pickard, Dave Gray, Rick Laurie, Brett Nagy, Nick O'Shea and Walt Barrett.

Joe Mancini, coach of the Wolves, sounded as disappointed as he's been all season long after the game.

"For the first time, the other team outplayed us," he said. "We lost five starters and had three new guys. They're good, but not part of the team yet.

"We still played good," Mancini added. "The Spartans are one of the better teams in the league competing for a championship shot. You can't play a team like that without five starters."

The Wolves scored the first and last goals of the game, but the Spartans connected three times between goals.

Bill Ralph scored the Wolves' first goal on a header 10 minutes into the first half. Ralph found the net after receiving a pass from Fred Seyed.

Walter Zuniga scored the other goal with seven minutes remaining in the game. He booted the ball on a free kick from 25 yards out over the defensive wall and into the left corner of the net.

Jaycees seek softball clubs

The Plymouth Jaycees will host a 16-team softball tournament at Massey Field, Aug. 29-31, for Class B and C League teams (league rosters only).

Proceeds from the tournament will go toward the resodding and construction of a underground sprinking system at Massey Field.

The entry fee for the double-elimination event is $75 per team.

Trophies will be awarded to the first place team and individual players. The runners-up will receive a second-place trophy.

For more information, call Randy Shoemaker from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 937-1400 and after 6 p.m. at 455-2248.

M.B.M. pulls upset in Plymouth playoffs

Coach Myron Smith's M.B.M. men's slow pitch softball squad has made giant strides over the past three years.

His team recently completed a successful season by winning the Plymouth Recreation playoffs. M.B.M., which stands for sponsor Manley, Bennett and McDonald, a stock broker's firm, won six of seven games in capturing the crown.

M.B.M., also sponsored by the Mayflower Hotel, finished the season with a 23-11 mark. Smith's squad fashioned a string of upsets in the playoffs after finishing the Class A regular season in fourth place with a 12-6 mark.

M.B.M. beat another cinderella team, C. Cash Builders, 9-4, in the tournament finals. The winners trailed 4-1 going into the bottom of the sixth inning before rallying. Pat McKendry ripped a three-run double to tie the game. Dale Sherwood's two-run homer sewed it up against C. Cash, which won the regular Class B League title.

"Our average age is 22," said Smith, "and every one of our players is from the city of Plymouth.

"We're a very good defensive team. We make only one to two errors a game. If we do a little hitting, we'll usually do all right.

M.B.M. reached the finals with a 12-2 win over C. Cash as Tom Willette belted a key homer. Pitcher Ron Smith, the coaches' son, got credit for the win. Bob Smith added a homer, triple and double on offense.

The playoff champs opened the double-elimination tournament with an 18-4 victory over Vol Tech. M.B.M. then beat Class C champion Party Pantry, 7-5. Puckett Plumbing then fell victim, 4-1.

C. Cash followed with a 4-3 victory over M.B.M. in the first of three playoff meetings between the two teams.

Forced with elimination, M.B.M. experienced its finest hour in three years with a victory over Class A champs Massey Cadillac, 10-5.

"It was quite a big thrill beating Massey because we had never beaten them before."

A year ago, participating in the Plymouth Recreation Class B League, M.B.M. finished second to Century 21, this year's Plymouth-Canton Invitational Champs. Smith's team won the Class C crown three years ago.

M.B.M. received a huge trophy for its efforts in the Plymouth playoffs.

Entries may be mailed to Tournament Director Gary Whitener, Whispering Willows Golf Course, 20500 Newburgh, Livonia 48152.

Judging from the registrations received to date, there will be quite a few quality players competing in the annual Observer & Eccentric Golf Tournaments.

The 36-hole men's tournament will be contested Sept. 13-14, the 18-hole women's competition Sept. 17 at Whispering Willows Golf Course in Livonia.

Entry fee is $25 for the men's tourney, $11 for the women's. Entry deadline is Sept. 7 for men, or when 225 have registered. Women may sign-up for their tournament until Sept. 10.

Amateur golfers who reside in the O&E circulation area — Farmington, Farmington Hills, Canton, Plymouth, Livonia, Garden City, Rochester, Troy, Avon Township, Westland, Redford, Southfield, Birmingham, West Bloomfield, Bloomfield Hills and Bloomfield Township — may enter.

Entry coupons are available in most editions of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and at Whispering Willows, which is located on Newburgh Road, just south of Eight Mile Road (476-4493).

Tom Welsh, assistant pro at Whispering Willows, said that nearly 100 golfers had turned in their entry forms for the men's tournament as of Tuesday.

Of that number, 18 claimed handicaps of four or better. More than half of all men registrants signed up to date said their handicaps are 15 or better.

Golfers will compete for low gross (actual) and low net (with handicap) honors in four flights based upon ability.

Women's entries again are coming in slowly. Twenty had been received by Tuesday afternoon.

Welsh said that entries are being received in the mail each day. Traditionally, there is a big rush to register — especially in person at the course — the week prior to the deadline.

"We'll probably fill up," Welsh said of the men's tournament.

After all the marketing hyperbole has been expended, there is one brutally reliable way of determining an automobile's inherent worth: how much of its original price it retains on the used-car market.

Seen in this revealing light, no other similarly priced luxury sedan — domestic or imported — approaches the BMW Five Series.

According to the January 1980 NADA figures you see indicated in the chart, a 1979 BMW 528i retains an astonishing 100.3% of its original price — and an average over the past five years of 84%.

While these numbers are, to say the least, unusual, they are easily explained.

Against all odds, the engineers at BMW in Munich, Germany have produced a gasoline-powered automobile that not only delivers excellent gas mileage, but does so without ever violating the BMW conviction that extraordinary performance and brilliant engineering are the only rational motives for purchasing an expensive automobile.

In fact, with 5-speed standard transmission (automatic is available), the 528i is the only gas-powered car in its price class to deliver an impressive 18 EPA estimated mpg and 30 estimated highway mileage.

(These fuel efficiency figures are for comparison purposes only. Your actual mileage may vary, depending on speed, weather and trip length. Your actual highway mileage will most likely be lower.)

All in all, a 528i is one of the few luxury automobiles that is truthfully a shrewd investment.

THE ULTIMATE DRIVING MACHINE.

Montreux jazz festival hops for the weekend

Blues star B.B. King will give shows at 7 and 9 p.m. Sunday on the terrace of the Detroit Plaza Hotel.

By JIM WINDELL

The five-day Montreux-Detroit International Jazz Festival opens today with a blending of hundreds of Detroit-area jazz musicians and out-of-town musicians of world renown.

Detroit is the first North American city to host a version of the famed 14-year-old Swiss festival.

Jazz and blues stars Ramsey Lewis, B.B. King and Oscar Peterson head the swinging lineup. In addition, there will be eight Music Hall and Detroit Plaza Hotel concerts and 30 free concerts at Hart Plaza.

The festival officially begins at noon Thursday, with the opening ceremony on the balcony of the House of Fabrics, Woodward and John R. Mayor Jean-Jacques Cevey of Montreux, Switzerland, and Mayor Young of Detroit will open the festivities. There will be entertainment by the Suisse Swing Six, the band that won the competition at the Montreux International Jazz Festival in Montreux in July.

CLARK TERRY

The Opening Night River Gala takes place at 8 tonight on the Bob-Lo Boat, on the waters between Detroit and Windsor. The World's Greatest Jazz Band and the Little McKinney's Cottonpickers will perform.

THE FESTIVAL begins in earnest at noon Friday with a string of seven free concerts in Hart Plaza. The Northview High School Jazz Band from Grand Rapids starts the concert schedule at 11:30 a.m.

Along the way, until 10 p.m., will be continuous concerts featuring vibist Jack Brokensha, George Benson and Ursula Walker, among others.

Also on Friday a paid-admission concert takes place at 5 p.m. at the Detroit Plaza Hotel terrace. Soul and jazz pianist Ramsey Lewis will be followed by the Heath Brothers and finally Troy pianist and local favorite Lenore Paxton.

Musical exitement switches to the Music Hall at 8:30 p.m. for a salute to big bands. The concert features the group Supersax, which specializes in saxophone renditions of Charlie Parker music, Clark Terry and the Wayne State University Jazz Lab Band, and the band of the Radio Suisse Romande.

Another 10-hour round of jazz is offered Saturday at both the Hart Plaza and the Plaza Hotel. Among groups featured are the Brookside Jazz Ensemble at 11:30 a.m. The Detroit Plaza Hotel Terrace paid-admission concert at 6 p.m. will headline Spyro Gyra and Detroiter own Larry Nozero Quartet.

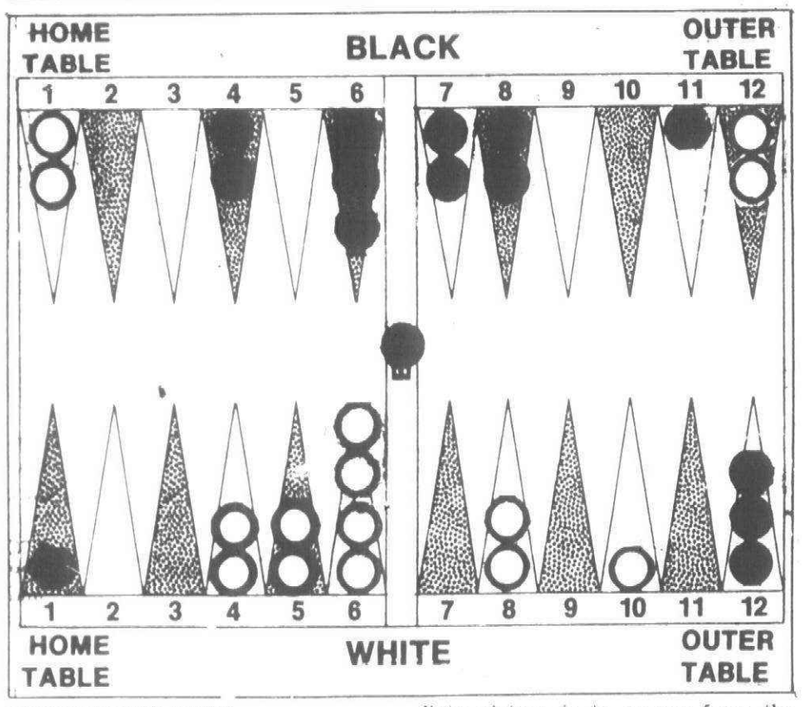
backgammon

Michael Kloian
of the American Backgammon Club



DON'T GIVE IT AWAY

In this position, white is on roll and decides to offer the doubling cube to black. Do you agree with white's double? Should black accept?

Black was previously under attack by white. Black failed to re-enter from the bar on his last roll.

There is a lot of game left. If black resigns, he will lose one point automatically. If black accepts the double, he will have a good chance to win two points. Black should accept the double, gladly.

It appears that white is preparing to close in on black. Actually, there are only eight out of 36 combinations that offer white a newly closed point. White's only hope of a sure and immediate victory is to escape from the backfield and continue the attack by hitting black as soon as he hops off the bar.

However, black is a favorite to get off the bar and will probably make it very difficult for white to run with his back men. Black has timing on his side and will, no doubt, hold the 1 point long enough to prohibit white from moving freely in the home board.

White would have done best to wait one more roll. If his roll (after doubling) is nothing good and if black comes out to establish a point, white may soon see the cube at four.

Comedy reigns as Castle gets a new address

By JUDITH BERNE

For the public, it's a laugh a minute in West Bloomfield these days.

Currently there are two houses of comedy, two miles apart along Orchard Lake Road.

Comedy Castle has relocated from Friday's in Pine Lake Mall to the banquet room of Stafford's Restaurant in Orchard Mall. Tuesday was opening nigh

Comedy continues at Friday's, where owners Cory Hanson and Timothy Busch have taken over the show. "We're booked for the next couple months," a Friday's spokesperson said.

But for Mark Ridley, the promoter of Comedy Castle, the situation's no joke.

Last week he won a temporary injunction in Oakland County Circuit Court to stop Friday's owners Cory Hanson and Timothy Busch from using the Comedy Castle name.

"There's nothing inherently wrong for them to run their own comedy out of there. I just want them to change their name," said Arnold Weintraub, Ridley's attorney.

"There's plenty of room for competition. I haven't seen West Bloomfield hit by the recession."

Meanwhile, Stafford's owners Ted and Dennis Vatsis have Ridley for two weeks.

"If it works, he'll stay for a while," said Dennis Vatsis. "We have to figure out how to make a profit on it."

Stafford's banquet room holds 100 compared to Friday's 200. Also, Stafford's serves only beer and wine compared to Friday's full bar.

"All the local comics are behind us," said Comedy Castle spokesman David Gladstone. "Mark's heart is in it. He treats performers as artists, not just as a commodity."

Ridley originally opened the Comedy Castle in the Meating Place Restaurant, north of Friday's on Orchard Lake Road, in January 1979. Four months later he moved into Friday's, where the Comedy Castle operated until last week.

Jazz begins Sunday with a free concert by Detroiter James Tatum at the Hart Plaza. Among the free concerts that day will be the Austin-Moro Band at 1 p.m., Katalenic-Kwek at 2:30 p.m. and J.C. Heard at 7 p.m.

The Montreux Detroit International Jazz Festival comes to a fitting close with what promises to be a Detroit jazz free-for-all, at 8:30 p.m. at the Music Hall.

DETROIT JAMS will feature a house band composed of such stellar jazzmen as Tommy Flanagan (piano), Billy Mitchess (sax), J.C. Heard (drums), Kenny Burrell (guitar), Jack Brokensha (vibes), George Benson (sax) and Will Austin (bass). Joining this "all-star house band" will be a host of other Detroit jazz musicians, who will play in various one-night-only pick-up groups.

At the end, it is expected that all musicians will be on stage together for the highlight of the five-day jazz festival.

Tickets to all paid-admission events at the Music Hall and the Detroit Plaza Hotel concerts may be bought at all CTC ticket outlets including all Hudson stores, the Fisher Building box office, Kay Baum stores and the Music Hall.

Tickets also can be charged on Visa and Master Charge cards by calling the Music Hall at 963-7680.

● TRAGICOMEDY TONIGHT

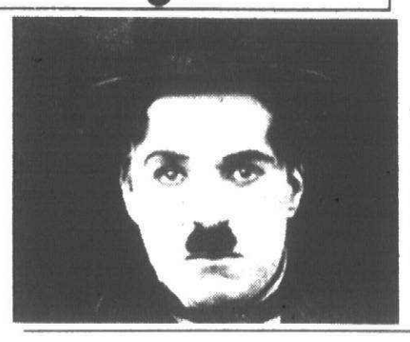
Three films this week provide the impetus for a look at what makes a movie funny or sad. Someone once said that the only difference between comedy and tragedy is that a comedy has a happy ending and a tragedy an unhappy one. If that's true, then there should be distinct similarities between so-called comedic and tragic films. And certainly there should be similarities among all comedy films.



Charlie Chaplin, comedy's famous little tramp, is on TV this weekend in "Gold Rush."

"Room Service" (1938), 1 p.m. today on Channel 50. Originally 78 minutes.

We begin with the Marx Brothers worst movie, one that marks their decline in terms of creativity and popularity. The brothers had plenty of laughs left after 1938, but they were aging — Chico, the eldest, was 52 and Groucho, the youngest of the three film regulars, was already 48 — and the material given them was changing.

From 1929 to 1937 the brothers made seven films, all of which were a combination of gags from their old vaudeville days and new material dreamed up by the brothers in collaboration with the best comedy writers of the day (Morrie Ryskind, George S. Kaufman and S. J. Perelman, to name a few).

"Room Service," however, was an RKO studios adaptation of a Broadway hit not written for the brothers. It was transformed to the screen with minor changes and Groucho, Harpo and Chico were thrown into parts written for individual players. The whole thing was a disaster.

The trouble with "Room Service" as a vehicle for the Marx Brothers is that it actually has a plot and narrative flow. The brothers could not function under such guidelines. Their humor is episodic — fractured may be a better word — so it is necessary for the orchestra in "A Night at the Opera" to begin playing "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" and it is essential that Groucho suddenly don a peanut vendor's garb and begin hawking nuts in the orchestra pit.

Marx Brothers' comedy is immediate and without structure of any sort.

"The Gold Rush" (1925), 1:30 a.m. Saturday on Channel 62. Originally 82 minutes.

The comedy of Charlie Chaplin is also immediate and without structure in a narrative sense, but his humor is deeply structured by the overall thematic design of his movies.

The plot of "The Gold Rush" has little bearing on the film. Mainly, it's a mishmash of comedy bits and routines, proven laugh-getters that would be funny whether the backdrop is gold rush days in the Yukon or Depression days in the big city.

Yet Chaplin's films portray a constant theme, a theme of the indomitable spirit of that one little tramp and his efforts to overcome the corruption of man. As spontaneously funny as Chaplin may seem, the laughs always point back to the same message.

For instance, Chaplin finds himself an innocent bystander when two ruffians tussle over a loaded shotgun. But as the thugs wrestle, the gun always points at Charlie, no matter which way he turns.

His comedy is structured and the "Who, me?" motif is constant. Chaplin only wants to do what's right, but he keeps getting into so much trouble.

"Meet John Doe" (1941), 2 a.m. Sunday on Channel 62. Originally 123 minutes.

Frank Capra dramatized what Charlie Chaplin made comedic — and he took the proposition one step further. His films of the '30s and '40s are full of the sense that the downtrodden will one day rise by their bootstraps and that these fortunate few will be heard and improve the lot of John Does everywhere.

The little tramp was always lucky to come out of his scrapes alive, much less ahead.

Thematically, though, pictures like "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" (1936), "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" (1939) and "It's a Wonderful Life" (1946), along with "John Doe," advocate the same thing Chaplin's films do — specifically, in Capra's case, hope during the Depression and pride in the post-war era. Men are corrupt, according to Capra, but the system is sound.

"John Doe" is as tragic as "The Gold Rush" is comic. In the film, Gary Cooper portrays a common man raised to Messianic heights, only to be dragged down by the corruption of the ruling class and forced to commit suicide.

The full weight and structure of a debauched society, then, rests squarely on the shoulders of a tramp and a John Doe, both comically and tragically; meanwhile, the Marx Brothers collapse under the weight of a film with too much structure to allow them room to be funny or sad.

LEGAL SECRETARIES

Dear Legal Secretaries,

If you are a victim of the following symptoms it's time for a change in jobs.

Boredom, Apathy, Indifference, Weariness, Lack of Initiative and Poverty.

The prescription to your problem is one quick telephone call to Joanne at 646-4210 and you will be on your way to happier days.

I would like to put the zing back in your life by telling you about some outstanding jobs for experienced legal secretaries. A few require shorthand, but don't let that scare you - half of the time you will find yourself using a transcriber unless your boss is of the "old school". Other current Job Orders are strictly dictaphone transcription.

I am actively recruiting - RIGHT NOW. Accept my service at no cost to you and put a little charge in your life.

Best wishes for the future.

"I DIDN'T WANT TO BELIEVE IN RE/MAX!"

"...because if it was true, I was wasting my time working for anyone else."

Like so many of my fellow agents, I was disgusted with the way some real estate companies were turning into Army Camps where everyone wore a uniform coat and you are treated like a "number". I didn't like having to lower my client advertising standards so the company could "save a buck" and I didn't like working with part time agents. Then one day a friend told me about RE/MAX. I've been around enough real estate people to know that we have a tendency to exaggerate. So, I didn't take it too seriously.

After looking into RE/MAX, I've changed my mind. RE/MAX is very serious about becoming the #1 Realtor in Michigan and they've got the program and experience - to do it. That's part of the reason I joined.

Its given me a tremendous sense of pride to offer what I feel is not only the most impressive array of client benefits, but an opportunity to participate in one of the most dynamic real estate concepts in North America. I just can't say enough about the tremendous benefits of an association with RE/MAX for the sales agent.

I'm now in control of "my" future and the monetary rewards have changed my life! Sure, there are other 100% commission companies that an agent could join, but the professionalism and the first class standards which RE/MAX offers far surpass the others. But as the old saying goes, don't take my word for it. Find out for yourself, like I did. Besides, you probably think I'm exaggerating anyway!
