Enhanced 911 moves closer to approval

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A woman is alone at home and begins to feel pains in her chest. She quickly dials the 911 emergency number for help but falls unconscious on the floor before she can give her address.

An Enhanced 911 emergency program would help in this and similar types of traumatic situations. A law approved by the state Legislature this week will help make the system financially viable.

The proposed system would route the call directly to the police station in the community the call is being made and list the telephone number and address of the caller on a computer screen.

"Enhanced 911 is probably one of the most valuable tools for handling emergencies and non-emergency calls for service that I've seen," said Canton Police Chief John Santomauro, who has been designated Canton's representative to the Conference of Western Wayne. CWW has been coordinating a study of the feasibility of the E911 system for its 17 communities, which include Plymouth, Canton and Plymouth Township.

Senate Bill 303 — implementing a payment plan affecting E911 — was returned from the House and the Senate concurred with amendments this week, said state Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, whose 6th District includes Canton and Plymouth. The bill now awaits Gov. Blanchard's signature.

THE BILL would allow local governments to form areawide 911 emergency service systems.

The measure calls for a uniform charge for everyone in the community because "they are all potential users" of the program. It could cost 10 to 25 cents — or up to 2 percent of the highest residential base rate in that area — for resident's monthly billing rate. Only communities opting for the change would be affected by the SB 303.

"Currently, because telephone exchanges and lines do not correspond to political boundaries the first community in an area to get the 911 system effectively restricts surrounding communities' use of 911 unless there is an agreement among the communities involved," Geake said.

Presently 911 calls are received outside the township and the Canton police and fire stations are notified. This creates a time delay.

"Anytime a person can't communicate an emergency it's a critical situation, and without that feature we wouldn't be able to handle that emergency," said Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry. "Suppose there is a deaf mute who has an emergency. They can dial the 911 number, and we would get their address immediately."

EVEN THOUGH the outlook for SB 303 looks good, E911 probably won't be implemented immediately.

"My understanding is that if the system is approved by the individual communities it will still be two to three years before it goes into effect," Santomauro said.

Eliminating prank calls is another advantage of E911, Santomauro said, because police officers would be able to immediately identify where the call is coming from.

"Secondly, when people are calling for emergency service they panic and sometimes fail to give us proper information so we can respond," Santomauro said. "If the costs are in line, and they certainly appear to be, I am in support and would recommend it to the board for approval."

Because E911 has not yet been implemented Santomauro encourages Canton residents to directly call Canton's police emergency number at 397-3350 and the emergency fire number at 981-1111. The Plymouth Township emergency police emergency number is 453-2545 and the fire emergency number is 453-2546.

Wanted: Canton Country Festival supporters

Larry Bowerman

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Planning the Canton Country Festival is becoming a heavy load for a dwindling number of volunteers to carry.

Larry Bowerman, president of the Canton Country Festival Board, says unless some workers step forward and give their time, something will give.

"I don't want to be too negative, but we have a problem and people have to realize that and try to do something about it," Bowerman said.

"The number of people necessary to put it together is greater than the number that seem to be willing to help. If there isn't more participation from people, we won't be able to put on a festival like we have in the past."

THE ANNUAL Canton festival parade is the most recent victim of festival board apathy.

"Last year the parade was a large project and very difficult to do, and now with the decline in the board, it's impossible to do," Bowerman said. Also the parade route failed to draw people to the grounds.

"Our main concern is to get people over there to the grounds. The festival gives people in the community a chance through their organization to raise funds for the types of activities they want to carry out and put back into the community for their causes. The festival adds identity and participation to the community."

Festival board bylaws call for 15 members. Last year 13 people volunteered, and members talked about their struggles to handle the hefty task. This year only nine residents have committed to organize one of Canton's major attractions of the year to be held June 20-22.

"We've ended up having to double up on committee assignments to try to accomplish the same amount of work that a larger committee tried to perform last year," he said. The board will hire temporary labor to help set up and take down tents and equipment.

"There's no way to check attendance, but there are thousands and thousands of people who come to the festival," Bowerman said. "There were a lot of people last year that came from areas outside the immediate Plymouth/Canton community."

The Cow Chip Fling is another event that may fall by the wayside unless someone decides to take the bull by the horn and organize it.

Go-karts to start rolling in township

By Diane Gale
staff writer

It's full speed ahead for construction of a go-kart track and miniature golf course in Canton.

Canton Fun Center will be built on the south side of Michigan Avenue east of Canton Center Road on 2.33 acres of land with the Pump 'n' Pantry gas station on the north, Wonderland Mobile Home Sales on the west, and vacant land on the south and east sides.

CONSTRUCTION ON the presently vacant land is targeted for completion in June.

Investors plan to offer drivers of all ages a choice of 15 go-karts. They're also proposing an 18-hole miniature golf course that will be set up on a 10-foot hill featuring a waterfall.

"Up on a hill it will be a little more challenging than the usual flat surface," said Scott Miller of Westland, an investor in the project. "We want it to be a nice looking landscaped place to attract families."

The types of go-karts they will offer are similar to the kind at Sportway of Westland on Ford Road near the Canton Township border, Miller said. But the track in Canton will be longer, he promised.

Tom Linderman of Canton is part owner and will manage Canton Fun Center. In a letter to the Canton Planning Commission, he addressed concerns by the commission about excess noise and potential security problems.

THEIR ANTIDOTE is to run the track on the southerly portion of the parcel, and screen it with the 10-foot miniature golf course hill.

The developers also enlarged the size of the parking lot, and said they might hire a security guard, Gerald Martin, Canton Community Development and Economic Development, said.

"The township, in general, has not been terribly enthusiastic about a go-kart track but the zoning ordinance does permit it so we allowed it to go in," Martin said of the parcel zoned light-industrial, which includes outdoor recreational uses.

"The developers were quite sensitive to the fact that they weren't terribly popular," Martin said. "The changes they made were not required, and they showed their good faith by making them."

The go-kart track will attract patrons in their early teens to late 20s, Miller predicts, and the miniature golf course will lure people of all ages.

"These developers are going the extra mile," Martin said. "They really did seem concerned that they have a quality project here."

You can go home again, Melin learns on the job

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Most of us get to taste life's experiences only once. Andrew Melin at the tender age of 25 has gone back for seconds.

As a student at Plymouth Salem High School in the mid-1970s, he zealously worked at WSDP-FM radio and, for a time, participated in basketball, football and baseball at the junior varsity level.

Now, Melin works full time as station manager at WSDP and moonlights, so to speak, as JV boys basketball coach and girls varsity assistant at his alma mater.

"The one thing I realize is I have been working with young people and I feel I have to do that the rest of my life," said the soft-spoken Melin.

That might sound corny coming from some people but not from the young man known affectionately by the community as Andy.

As station manager, Melin supervises a student staff of 30 and coordinates all fund-raising and promotional activities. A little more than half the staff comes from radio classes taught by John Seidelman, the remainder sparked by a special interest in broadcasting.

"I'M NOT a certified teacher but as part of my duties I am training young people in how to run a broadcast station," he said. "I'm a teacher in that respect."

He proudly points out that several of his students have gone on to paying jobs at commercial stations directly from WSDP.

Melin, in fact, credits his high school experiences at WSDP for launching his career. He had a paying job at WKAR in Lansing before he started as a student at Michigan State University from which he graduated with a degree in telecommunications.

In high school, Melin initially tried to combine athletics with the radio station as extracurricular activities. He decided it was too much.

"I just wasn't good enough to play basketball," Melin said. "Maybe I could have made the team but I had radio then. In a way I regret not playing varsity athletics but on the other hand it sure helped me in radio."

After graduating from MSU, Melin did marketing and promotional work for the Detroit Pistons for a few months before learning that the station manager job had opened at WSDP.

"When this opportunity arose, I jumped at it."

MELIN ALSO jumped at the opportunity to get into coaching.

"The role of athletics here at the high school is it's another opportunity for a student to be involved in something and to help them become a better person.

"We talk about wanting to provide a well-rounded education. Athletics and radio help broaden a student's base of knowledge. I'm teaching rules of life, responsibility. Athleticially, I'm teaching them how to take care of themselves — competitiveness."

Melin conceded to having some apprehension about returning to his old stomping grounds.

"Everybody knew me. Would they treat me as a student or treat me as an adult? Fortunately, they treated me as an adult and gave me the freedom to do my job here. They left me alone and I appreciated that.

"The hardest part was the first day walking into school. It's like, 'What am I doing here?' It wasn't a comfortable feeling but as soon as I started working, the feeling went away."

MELIN CARRIES that same philosophy into dealings with his students.

Garage fire extinguished in short time

Plymouth Township firefighters doused a fire at a garage on Brookline last Saturday before it could spread to the attached house. Damage was limited to $1,000, said Fire Chief Larry Groth.

"There was a wood-burning stove in the garage and apparently there was paper six to eight inches from the stove. The heat was enough to catch the papers on fire. From there, it went to studs on back of the garage."

A resident who had been working on his car left the stove unattended when the fire broke out, Groth said.

The fire was reported at 2:19 p.m. and the first of three units arrived at the house a minute later, a fire spokeswoman said. Twelve firefighters — a combination of regulars and volunteers — responded.

Beatrice and Eugene Korte wait for their appearance before the Board of Review.

Peggy Farell, a Canton employee, explains the procedure to appeal to a township property owner.

Tips on appealing property taxes

Property owners can challenge their latest property assessments by meeting with their local board of review.

Board members meet annually with individual property owners who have tried to work out their concerns with the assessor's staff, but couldn't. A home's assessed valuation is supposed to be half the market value.

Under Michigan law, 50 percent of the true cash value of property is the taxable value. True cash value is the usual selling price of property.

Assessments are based on sales that actually occur in the marketplace, and other factors, including age, lot and house size, quality and type of construction, number of rooms and the neighborhood.

When challenging an assessment, make an effort to document your case with examples of comparable housing sold at lower prices than your appraisal or of sales patterns in your neighborhood.

Property owners unhappy with their board of review's action can appeal to the state Tax Tribunal, P.O. Box 30230, Lansing 48909. The telephone number is 1-517-373-8850. There is no fee.

Tribunal hearings can be held in local county governmental offices. Appeals to the Tax Tribunal must be requested by June 30.

TO ASSIST property owners, the Michigan Consumers Council has brochures outlining how to review property tax assessments, what to look for in determining the accuracy of assessments and how to appeal assessments.

"Many assessment changes simply reflect inflation in the housing market," said Kent Wilcox, council director. "However, errors are made frequently. These can range from incorrectly computing the tax to an actual error in judging the property's value."

"The first thing consumers need to do is check the appraisal records in the assessor's office for accuracy," Wilcox said.

"It's possible that the appraisal may have been based on assumptions that are simply incorrect, such as stating that the house has a finished basement when it doesn't.

"The appraisal may have also missed defects that might tend to reduce the house's value, such as settling or shifting on the foundation."

THE COUNCIL advises discussing errors first with the local assessor. Some assessors may be willing to adjust appraisals, saving consumers and themselves from going through a formal protest.

If consumers find it necessary to protest, the brochure provides information that may be useful in documenting a case before a local review board.

Protests must be filed by the review board meetings.

Free copies of "How to Review and Appeal Your Property Tax Assessment" are available by writing or calling: Michigan Consumers Council, 414 Hollister Building, 106 W. Allegan, Lansing, MI 48933, 1-517-373-0947. Copies are available in large-print for the visually impaired.

When to appeal

THE BOARDS of Review have started meeting in the Plymouth-Canton community.

If you haven't appeared, there's still time to appeal your property tax assessment.

The Board of Review in Canton will meet from 8:30-11:30 a.m. and 1-5 p.m. today and Friday, the same hours on Monday, and from 3-9 p.m. March 11. Appointments may be made by calling 397-1000. Appeals also will be heard on a walk-in basis.

The Plymouth Township Board of Review will meet form 9 a.m to noon and 2-5 p.m. on Monday, March 10, and from 3-9 p.m. March 11. Petitioners will be heard on a first-come basis in the township meeting hall. Appointments aren't needed.

The city of Plymouth Board of Review met Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Appeals also may be submitted by mail.

Property should be assessed up to 50 percent of true market value, so that a house that assessors determine, from average sales figures, should sell for $80,000 would be assessed at $40,000.

One mill is multiplied against the assessment on a per thousand basis so that a one-mill rate levied against the $80,000 home would produce $40 in tax revenue, and 60 mills would produce $2,400 in tax revenue.

3 seats open for board

Residents on Monday, June 9, will be voting on three positions on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

Two four-year terms and one two-year seat will be filled at the regular school election June 9.

The two-year spot is held by Marilyn Schwinn who was appointed to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Nancy Quinn. The four-year posts are held by Elaine J. Kirchgatter, board vice president, and E.J. McClendon, board treasurer.

ANY RESIDENT wishing to run for a seat on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education must file a nominating petition by 4 p.m. Monday, April 7.

Petition forms are available from the board of education office at 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth, and should be returned there. The board office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Each petition must contain a minimum of 20 valid signatures, a figure based on the number of voters in the last election. The deadline for a candidate to withdraw his or her name from the ballot is 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 10.

The school board consists of seven residents, each elected for staggered four-year terms.

Any registered voter in the school district may run for election. Members, elected from the total district, receive a stipend of $30 per meeting up to a maximum of $1,500 per year.

UNDER STATE law, the school board has responsibility to:

- Set goals for the school district.
- Establish policies for the operation of the schools.
- Employ and evaluate the superintendent.
- Authorize the appointment of other staff members upon the recommendation of the superintendent.
- Determine educational standards and goals.
- Authorize curriculum development and revision.
- Secure money for school operational needs and building programs, and authorize specific expenditures.

The June 9 election is a regular school election with voting at school election polling places, which may differ from township and city precinct sites.

For further information about nominating petitions, call 451-6422.

Local lawyer wants Ford's job

A Canton Township attorney, who wants to unseat a longtime congressman, supports President Ronald Reagan's reform program to eliminate inequities in the present tax system.

The candidate, Peter Bundarian, 46, also said he favors a federal sales tax in order to further reduce personal income taxes and the national debt.

That's one reason why Peter Bundarian is running for the Republican nomination in the 15th congressional district which includes Westland, Garden City, Canton Township and the south half of Livonia.

Peter Bundarian
GOP candidate

"I am a serious candidate for this seat and feel my education, experience and stand on issues should make me a viable contender against Mr. (William D.) Ford," he said.

Bundarian hopes to win the Republican nomination to challenge U.S. Rep. William D. Ford, D-Taylor, a member of the House for 21 years.

The primary is Aug. 5.

A lawyer with offices in Canton, Bundarian is concerned about what he calls the parochial standards by which candidates for federal judgeships are being screened, the declining effort to protect the environment, and the failure of the current social and welfare programs to foster independence and self-reliance in its recipients and their relationship to the present epidemic of teen-age pregnancies.

BUNDARIAN said he favors a continuation of space exploration and stronger efforts on the part of the government and American business to eliminate apartheid as a national policy in South Africa and supports holding the military more accountable for their expenditures and the president's policy to aid "freedom fighters."

A native of Cornwall, N.Y., Bundarian has an associate of arts degree from Orange County Community College in Middletown, N.Y., a bachelor of science degree in industrial and labor relations from Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., and a juris doctor degree from the Wayne State University Law School.

Canton festival volunteers sought

THE FLING drew media coverage when the board voted not to sponsor it last year, but supporters organized it and the event flew anyway. This year it's still up in the air.

There also has been a slackening of the number of non-profit organizations committing to setting up meal and concession stands, Bowerman added.

"We're trying to get all around more participation from the community in the events," Bowerman said.

Tuesday night Bowerman convinced the Canton Township Board of Trustees to allocate $5,000 to help subsidize the festival. Cost is estimated at $35,000, according to Bowerman's "bare bones budget." He expects the festival to generate $30,000. The Canton Country Board is a non-profit organization separate from the township government.

To help the festival get back into the black this year, Bowerman has started a campaign for the first time urging business people to pay an advertising fee of $100 to have their company name placed on a sponsors board. Boards will be placed at key locations on the festival grounds.

"This year we're attempting to get the community involved in the activities, and it's difficult to do that," Bowerman said. "We want to get the whole family over there and participate in the festival rather than just come have a dinner and leave."

The major events planned this year include a millionaire's party, a carnival, concession and meal stands, an arts and crafts tent, local bands and area entertainment acts for children. A rodeo and girl's softball tournament also are being considered.

The Canton Country Festival Board meets once a month, and as the festival approaches, the number of meetings will probably increase. Anyone interested in volunteering may call Bowerman during the day at 453-6810 and in the evening at 459-0077.

Melin relishes return to CEP

"I had a meeting with my student directors, told them about myself and my ideas and told them I needed their help to run the station. I laid down some guidelines and let them know they were going to run it. They liked that.

"Respect is something that is earned," Melin said. "I treat all students I work with like adults. I make sure they understand what my position is and what theirs is. Whether they like me or not isn't my concern."

Melin acknowledges that he's well paid and enjoys the freedom of having "one of the best high school station manager jobs in the country." However, he says that someday he expects to pursue other career opportunities.

"My future, I hope, is athletic oriented," Melin said

Boller makes 'saves the parks' plea

By Teri Banas
Staff Writer

Beset by chronic funding shortfalls, the Wayne County parks system may become the focus of a blue ribbon task force.

The panel would suggest ways to fund the park service — including separate, designated millage.

Commissioner Curt Boller, D-Brownstown, met this week with Ron Chapman of the county executive's office to discuss appointing a 6-member panel. Boller called it one way to generate solutions "to rescue the park service.

"It has become too big an issue for 15 people (the County Commission) to decide," said Boller this week. "If there is going to be a millage, it should be on the next ballot, probably by November, before the start of the budget year (in December)."

'It has become too big an issue for 15 people (the county commission) to decide.'
— County Commissioner Curt Boller
D-Brownstown Twp.

BESIDES FUNDING, Boller said, the task force should look at reorganizing the seven-park system as well as maintaining it.

One way, he pointed out, would be to take advantage of a 1965 state act which would allows formation of a parks commission to operate the system in place of Wayne County general government.

The parks commission could then levy its own millage. Oakland County has such a separate commission and voted millage.

"The common denominator in all of this is money," said Boller.

Boller warned that county purse strings will be drawn even tighter next year, placing non-essential services in further jeopardy. He referred to the county's anticipated loss next year of $19 million in federally shared revenue.

In that financial climate, he said commissioners from suburban areas where the bulk of the county's park services are found will be hard pressed to win continued support from the general fund because "we're outnumbered."

BOLLER RECOMMENDED the task force be made up of appointments jointly made by the executive's office and county commission, with Executive William Lucas selecting the chairman. Boller said it would operate similar to other county task forces on issues such as infant mortality, crime and jail space.

"The concept for a parks task force was first recommended by county parks and recretion director Eric Reickel during last year's budget hearings. Reickel supports a separate parks millage. He is a vocal advocate of improving county parks.

All this comes at a time when County Commission Chairman John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, proposes splitting up the county park system and turning over responsibility of two facilities to the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority.

Under the plan now under consideration, the two parks would be Elizabeth Park at Trenton, complete with a boat ramp on the Detroit River, and Warren Valley Park in Dearborn Heights, which offers two 18-hole golf courses and banquet facilities.

BOLLER SAYS he opposes the Hertel plan, particularly Elizabeth Park, located in his district. He cites a 1979 corporation counsel opinion that states that deed restrictions would prevent ownership of Elizabeth Park by any entity other than Wayne County or the city of Detroit.

"The decision says the county must fund and maintain it, or it reverts back to the owners or their heirs," he said. Elizabeth Park, which Wayne County came to own in 1909, is today valued at $15 million.

Turner to announce candidacy for exec

Samuel Turner.

County commissioner Samuel A. Turner was expected to announce today that he will be a candidate for Wayne County executive.

A one-time commission chairman, Turner is in his seventh two-year commission term.

Turner joins three other declared candidates: Livonia Mayor Edward H. McNamara; county sheriff Robert Ficano and Sumpter Township treasurer Thomas Gondek.

Expected to announce also is Frank Wilkerson, an assistant Wayne County executive who previously served as jail administrator in the county sheriff's department. Commission chairman John Hertel is also a possible candidate.

Wayne- Westland preparing budget cuts

By Sue McDonald
staff writer

The Wayne-Westland school board, faced with a recommendation to cut $2.5 million, will start its review of the next budget Friday, March 15.

The process won't be an easy one for the board, which Monday night received an overview of the cuts in programs and personnel that must be made to balance the budget.

The board took no action on the recommendations at the study session, and had only a few questions for the administration.

Superintendent Dennis O'Neill has proposed a $68.1 million budget for the new fiscal year, which starts July 1, an increase of less than $1 million over the current budget of $67.15 million.

But to balance the budget, he has recommended that 90 full-time equated (FTE) positions be eliminated, including 19.3 teaching positions, to reflect a decline in pupil enrollment.

"As we annually go through this cutting process, our options become more and more limited," O'Neill said. "Although the reductions recommended will have an effect on our ability to deliver services, we believe that these cuts represent dollar savings which will least affect students.

"As difficult as those decisions may seem today, postponing the inevitable has a snowballing effect, if it is not addressed. It is therefore imperative that our ultimate goal must be a balanced bottom line."

Among the recommendations presented to the board were:

● Elimination of five directors' positions in employee services, instruction and planning, custodial services, adult/community education (ACE) and intern/special education, one executive secretary and three non-affiliated location managers in ACE and leaving vacant due to retirement the supervisory positions in accounting and personnel records.

● Elimination of 24 FTE teachers due to a 67 percent reduction in the elementary expressive arts program. The district is proposing that the arts program be offered on a rotating 13-week basis at the elementary schools as opposed to current full school year programs.

● ELIMINATION of 3.4 FTE teachers due to a 50 percent reduction in elementary instrumental music. That instruction also would be on a rotating basis and district officials are working at ways to keep fifth-graders in the program.

● Elimination of three FTE teachers due to the high school release time. O'Neill said there would be a tighter scheduling of the student/teacher ratio to take into account those students who are not in high school for a full six-hour day.

● Reduction of teaching supply accounts from $22 to $19 per student in elementary schools and $32 to $29 per student in the high school. Although listed as a reduction, the $19 and $29 figures, according to Woody London assistant superintendent for business services, reflect an increase over the current budget figures. The amounts would be guaranteed as opposed to previous years when the supply accounts were budgeted for the maximum, but schools actually received only 70 percent of that amount.

● Reduction of high school supply accounts due to the equivalent of 350 FTE students attending the William D. Ford Vocational/Technical Center. O'Neill said about 700 students spend half their school day in classes at the center.

● Reduce money set aside to match grants for the vo/tech center from $90,000 to $50,000.

● Reduction in the number of co-op students hired by the school district to 20.

City to finance DPW expansion

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

New building construction at Plymouth's Department of Public Works yard will begin June 1, following city commission approval Monday of a $250,000 bond issue to pay for the continuing improvement project.

Slated for completion by Sept. 1 is a 2,850-square-foot administration building, an adjoining building for workers, a concrete parking lot and eight-foot chain-link fencing, according to the plan.

With cost estimated at $237,000, City Manager Henry Graper explained $250,000 was being sought to make sure the project could continue despite possible cost overruns.

Graper noted that Phase II cost originally was estimated at $200,000. In a report to commissioners, he wrote that the increase allowed for further construction, legal and financial costs and contingency funds.

Improvements at the DPW yard are necessary, Graper said, adding the present DPW building is nearly 70 years old and in disrepair.

"It's so bad you can see the sunlight shine between the bricks. It's terrible," he said.

PHASE I of the improvement plan, completed last year, included construction of a salt dome and a waste compactor. Cost of that phase of the project was about $140,000, Graper said.

A tentatively planned Phase III calls for a 9,724-square-foot garage addition, curbs, pavement and storm drains. Tentative cost of this phase is $560,000.

The final step in DPW yard improvements involves the estimated $30,000 demolition of the existing building and the sale of 2½ acres at the Arthur Street site, Graper said. He added the city is seeking to sell the parcel for about $39,000 per acre.

Robert Jones was the lone commissioner voting against the resolution approving the bond sale. Jones questioned the lease provision giving the Plymouth Municipal Building Authority "the unilateral right to issue bonds."

Jones asked what the city could do if the building authority refused to issue more bonds if emergency bonds were needed to complete the project.

"I do not think this gives the city commission proper contro," he said.

Graper responded that the lease followed standard models. He said the city could in extreme cases remove hostile board members from a building authority.

Also Monday, the commission approved an earlier publicized plan for spending 1986 Community Development Block Grant funds. Along with targeted amounts for firefighting services, administration, and public services, the plan calls for $10,000 to build a sewer tie-in to the Old Village pumphouse, planned for use as an office, and $460 for audio library books for people with vision problems.

Heart victim ready for CPR training

Valentine's Day was especially memorable this year for Bob Rogers, a Plymouth Township resident who today considers himself darn lucky to be alive.

Rogers, an analyst for Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn, took seriously ill Feb. 14 at work. By ill we're talking no pulse or heart beat.

Rogers said he's convinced he wouldn't be here to ponder several ironies relating to the experience if not for the quick work of several employees of the parts and service division who just happened to be in the right place at the right time. And knew what to do.

"The good Lord was over me, and I do believe he gave me a second shot," Rogers said while recuperating at home from what he's been told was an asthma attack. "I appreciate there were people around or I could have just passed out in the snow in the parking lot."

Rogers collapsed at about 11:30 a.m. while walking to his car. Ironically, he was going for a chest X-ray because he hadn't been feeling well.

ROGERS REQUESTED help from Ken Hosking, who flagged down Ted Perchall, who drove Rogers to the executive garage and summoned further assistance.

Faye Jones, a company nurse, administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation and Sam Finazzo, a mechanic, administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Rogers' vital signs had been revived by the time an ambulance arrived to take him to the hospital.

"I just couldn't catch my breath. I didn't know what the heck I was having," he said.

Two other ironies about Rogers' episode are especially striking.

The nurse who administered CPR had just been reassigned to the parts and service division last fall. Up to Jones' return, the facility had been without on-premises medical personnel due to budget cuts.

Also, Rogers and his wife had been scheduled to take a CPR course themselves less than a week after he was stricken.

"When I get fully recovered, I want to take that class," he said. "It shows knowing something about CPR can help a person."

Arrested for burglary

Two television sets and assorted jewelry were stolen during a burglary last Sunday afternoon from a house on Ann Arbor Trail, residents told Plymouth Township police.

The front door was kicked in between 12:30 and 4:45 p.m. Prints from a heavy work boot, size 10 or 11, were found at the scene.

Taken were a Panasonic color TV set valued at $325, a KTV model two-inch black and white TV worth $125 and miscellaneous jewelry, including rings and necklaces, no stated value.

A Livonia youth confronted and arrested by officer James Jarvis near Bob Jeanotte Pontiac last weekend subsequently confessed to stealing two wheels from a car at the dealership, township police reported.

The 16-year-old was released to his father and will be referred to juvenile court, police said. Jarvis encountered the youth at about 9:45 p.m. while on routine patrol.

In other incidents reported to township and city police:

● A wallet containing $50 cash and several credit cards was stolen from the men's lockerroom at Vic Tanny on Ann Arbor Road. The locker reportedly was locked.

● Two bicycles — a red 10-speed and a blue 12-speed — were stolen while they were chained together outside of the Penn Theater on Penniman.

● A window was broken at Allen School on Haggerty. Two juveniles, one wearing a blue jacket, the other an army jacket, were seen running away from the building. No damage estimate was provided.

Panel predicts toxic waste disposal crisis

By Teri Banas
staff writer

The lack of hazardous waste sites in Michigan is nearing "crisis proportions" while public opposition has mounted — a scenerio that could dissuade industries from locating here in the near future.

That was the conclusion reached by members of a Southeast Michigan Council of Government's study group at a press conference yesterday.

"We believe the crisis level could be reached shortly. There are tens of thousands of tons generated each year including cleanup from contaminated sites," said the group's chairman, Dick Burstein of Detroit.

At the forefront of concern is that the only remaining operating Michigan landfill, the Wayne Disposal site near Belleville Road and Interstate-94, has only a 6- to 10-year life expectancy before it becomes filled.

And officials worry that unless Michigan acts, shipments currently made to disposal sites in neighboring states will no longer be an alternative when those states begin shutting their doors to Michigan waste.

THE STUDY, which took into account interviews with 50 "experts" from government, regulatory agencies, business, industry and enviromental groups, was coordinated by the Municipal Affairs Corp. of SEMCOG.

SEMCOG executive director John Amberger noted that Michigan generates about 2.5-million tons of hazardous waste each year. With only one commercially available landfill allowed to hold it, and no incinerators, the crisis "is on the horizon," he said.

Amberger said the purpose behind the study and yesterday's press briefing was to initiate public discussion "to help remove the doubt and suspicion" of the public.

He said the group has made recommendations that would work toward easing public acceptance of carefully planned sites and said they already have been incorporated in recent recommendations by the state Natural Resources Commission.

THE COMMISSION adopted those recommendations last January and through the Department of Natural Resources is writing "legislative language" that they hope to see adopted into law, added SEMCOG's project coordinator Janis Bobrin.

"The public is just not aware of how fragile our waste disposal situation is," Bobrin said.

Among some of the groups findings are these:

● Michigan has not licensed a new commercial disposal facility in 10 years, a condition Burstein has attributed to public opposition. "The dialogue has been too little, too late and always adversarial." He called the lack of sites "the greatest roadblock to economic expansion" in Michigan.

● Of the 2.5 million tons of hazardous waste (1983 statistics) generated in Michigan, most of it, or 2 million tons, was processed "on site" by larger industry's own facilities. But officials said they worry over the ability of smaller outfits, which employ in total larger numbers of people, to handle such waste disposal.

Engler: 'long shot' enters GOP race

State Rep. Colleen Engler admits she may be a "long shot" in the race for the Republican nomination for governor but says there's a "distinct advantage" to entering late.

"Often, your opposition underestimates what you can do," the Mt. Pleasant lawmaker said following the announcement of her candidacy Wednesday.

A moderate GOP serving her fourth-term in the state Legislature, Engler said she is giving up a re-election bid to her house seat in order to run for governor because she feels her legislative experience makes her "the best candidate."

Engler, 33, is also the first woman from a major political party to wage a campaign for the seat.

"IT'S A BIG job getting into the campaign at this time but there are real benefits," she said yesterday. "Money for the other candidates will be tight by the time they reach the summer."

Engler reasoned that while she has yet to begin fund-raising she hasn't "spent any yet." She said it will be her strategy to shore up funds to mount a highly visible television and radio media campaign starting in the summer, months before the August primary.

She said her immediate plans are to collect $50,000 "as soon as possible" in order to qualify for two-for-one state matching dollars.

ENGLER deflected speculation by some political observers that her campaign is planned to place her in a better position for a lieutenant governor's offer. She said she would like to be in the position to offer the post to one of the other candidates in the race. The other announced candidates are: Wayne County executive William Lucas, Oakland County executive Daniel Murphy, Brighton businessman Dick Chrysler and Grosse Pointe Farms engineer John Lauve.

Married to state Sen. John Engler, R-Mt. Pleasant, Rep. Engler said her husband, an early Lucas supporter, will now stand behind her in her campaign.

Fudge-maker tells of trek to town

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

One of the last places you would go to find a husky man, who had served several years in the European theater of World War II, is in a kitchen making fudge.

But that's where you would find Leonard Grunwald.

When I was discharged after serving in the signal corps, I went back home to Gaylord where my parents owned and operated a restaurant. On the side, my mother and father made fudge, much like you find in the cities of northern Michigan.

"I had worked for Western Electric before serving in the Army and wanted something that I would enjoy and still make a good living.

"I hadn't been back home very long until I realized I had found what I wanted — to make fudge and use that as a livelihood. So, here I am in Plymouth and nothing could be better."

AS HE SPOKE, Grunwald had an instrument that looked like a shovel in his hands.

The fudge he was making was in a big roll on the table. As he spoke he walked up and down, working the fudge until he thought it was mixed to the proper style.

Finally, he allowed the new fudge to settle and revealed that after the war and his term in the restaurant in Gaylord, he came to the Detroit area in 1955.

He met his wife in Gaylord and they figured life would be better in a larger city. So they headed for the Detroit area and he found a job in Dearborn. It didn't work out as expected and he kept his eyes open for the kind of place he would like.

When they saw the Plymouth community on the rise, they decided to come here. And it has proven to be just what he wanted.

THE GRUNWALDS have been married 39 years and the experience he has found in Plymouth has been to their liking.

He now makes 16 different tastes of fudge at the Fudge House on Ann Arbor Trail between Harvey and Forrest, and it is one of the busiest places in the entire area.

"I have been making fudge for more than 20 years," he said as he took up the spreaders again and started anew on the fudge.

He recalled that when he worked with the Bell Telephone Co. in Gaylord that regular-type work was not to his liking. But each day he gave more thought to making fudge and this desire finally brought him to Plymouth.

While he was working with the fudge on the big board, Grunwald said he didn't want to keep working for years and now he has found just what he wanted.

While he doesn't have much room in his present location, it is just big enough to keep him busy and happy, as he makes 175 to 300 pounds a day.

"Business here is just what we needed. We are busy all day and there is a steady stream of customers. We couldn't have asked for anything better than that.

"I did my hard work in the Army, and now I have found just what I wanted here in Plymouth making fudge. It was a good break for me when I came home from the Army and worked in our little restaurant in Gaylord. That's where I learned to make fudge and it is the best thing that ever happened to me."

Library hours disheartening

To the editor:

It really disheartens me to find that a prominent and prosperous city like Plymouth has to close its doors to public library on Friday and Sunday.

There have been many a time that I tried to use the library only to find the doors locked. Consequently I turned to Northville only to find that its library is closed on these days also.

How are adults and children (who, incidentally, are potential future leaders in this community) supposed to learn and enrich their lives if the doors are closed to these important learning facilities? Is this an indication that libraries may become a thing of the past? I certainly hope not for our sake as well as the sake of our children.

Plymouth residents wake up and observe what is happening around you. Where are your tax dollars going to? The next time you decide to use the library you may find out that it no longer exists.

Humane Society works to avoid killing animals

In order to try to help the Humane Society of Southeastern Michigan (HSSM), the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers will at times feature a photo of a pet which the society is trying to place in a home. This will be in addition to our regular series done in cooperation with the Michigan Humane Society Kindness Center in Westland.

The HSSM is a new concept in animal welfare utilizing area veterinary clinics as mini-shelters. There are 34 metro area animal hospitals and clinics affiliated with the HSSM, which was organized in 1983.

THE SOCIETY is based on the belief that unwanted pets should be given a second chance, and that placing healthy pets avoids the needless destruction of unwanted animals.

Spaying or neutering of all adopted pets is mandatory. All incoming animals receive an examination, necessary vaccinations and are check for worms.

A partial refund of the adoption fee is given when spaying or neutering is done at participating hospitals. The adoption fee for dogs and puppies is $40 with a $25 refund upon spaying or neutering and $25 for cats/kittens with a $10 refund.

A COMPUTER program called Computer Animal Placement Services has been established to provide extensive information regarding large number of available pets.

Each participating clinic offers a weekly updated listing of all pets available, their physical characteristics, and location of mini-shelters giving them care. The society has been approved by the American Animal Hospital Association and/or accredited by the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association.

For more information and/or to become a member of the Humane Society of Southeastern Michigan write to P.O. Box 582, East Detroit, Mich. 48021. To adopt a pet through HSSM call 445-3720.

Michelle Katlein holds three kittens available for adoption at the Kershaw Animal Clinic, 9525 Wayne Road, Livonia (421-7878). The kittens are six weeks old.

DKC show Sunday; other shows in area

Not only is the Detroit Kennel Club show Sunday an attraction in itself, but it's generating specialty breed shows throughout the area.

For examples:

● The Bichon Frise and Lhasa Apso clubs will hold a joint show Friday in UAW Local 182 Hall, 35603 Plymouth Road, Livonia. Showing of the 63 Bishons will start with puppies at 10 a.m. The 38 Lhasas will be judged starting about 3 p.m. Admission is nominal.

Both breeds are judged in the "non-sporting" group of dogs, along with bulldogs and poodles. The Bichon originated in the Mediterranean and enjoyed a resurgence after the 14th century; the Lhasa is a relatively recent import.

● Six specialty clubs will hold shows from 9 to 4 Saturday in the Fieldhouse on the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus, Evergreen south of Ford Road.

Breeds shown will be Alaskan malamute, cairn terrier, collie, Great Dane, Great Pyrenees and poodle. More than 400 dogs will be shown. Admission is $2.

Unlike the DKC show, specialty shows usually feature obedience trials as well as conformation shows.

THE DETROIT show, all day in Cobo Hall, is one of only seven "benched" shows in the country — meaning the dogs are on view all day.

Judging starts at 9 a.m. Some 2,700 dogs are entered — not a record but still one of the largest collections in the U.S.

Each breed is judged in five different classes: puppies, novice, American bred, bred-by-exhibitor and open class.

Best-of-breed winners compete for best-of-group prizes in seven categories: sporting, hound, working, terrier, non-sporting, toy and herding.

Tickets are $5 general admission and $3 for children under 12 and senior citizens. Family tickets at $12 will admit two adults and three children.

Fishing show set

The Metro-West Steelheaders club will hold its spring show and clinic on fishing for lake-run rainbow trout from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, March 9, in Westland.

The event will be in the Bailey Recreation Center behind Westland City Hall, Ford Road between Wayne and Newburgh roads. Admission is free.

Is there a place for Canton Fest?

HAS THE Canton Country Festival passed its heyday, or is there still a place in the township for a communitywide event to draw together people of all ages and backgrounds?

There will, for sure, be a Canton Country Festival this summer, but the 1986 rendition could be the last one of its scope unless corrective action is taken. The festival suffered a setback when the decision was made to cancel the parade that was one of the highlights of the summer in Canton.

The decision was made to continue with the Country Festival, minus the parade. Now it appears the festival itself is in danger unless it gets a shot in the arm. And this might well be the antidote. The festival likely will continue in a scaled-down version but its standing as a communitywide event is endangered.

FOR A NUMBER of years the Canton Chamber of Commerce each year held a chicken barbecue and corn roast.

The chicken barbecue grew in popularity from year to year as more and more Cantonites participated. More attractions were added until the barbecue grew beyond a chamber event to a communitywide function.

Some five years ago the decision was made to formalize the barbecue into a community festival. And so in 1981 the Canton Country Festival Corp. was formed as a non-profit agency to plan and implement the festival each year.

Last year's event drew thousands of people. The attraction included free entertainment, arts and crafts, a rodeo, carnival, fireworks, bingo, a millionaire's party and lots of food.

The festival not only was an opportunity for residents to join together but also was an affair that attracted people from throughout southeastern Michigan, helping to introduce the virtues of Canton to more and more people.

SUCH EVENTS, though, do not just happen.

The Canton Country Festival, by its nature, requires lots of volunteer help from residents throughout the year and financial support from businesses and civic groups. The financial help can be obtained with effort; what is sorely needed is residents to volunteer their time, energy and expertise.

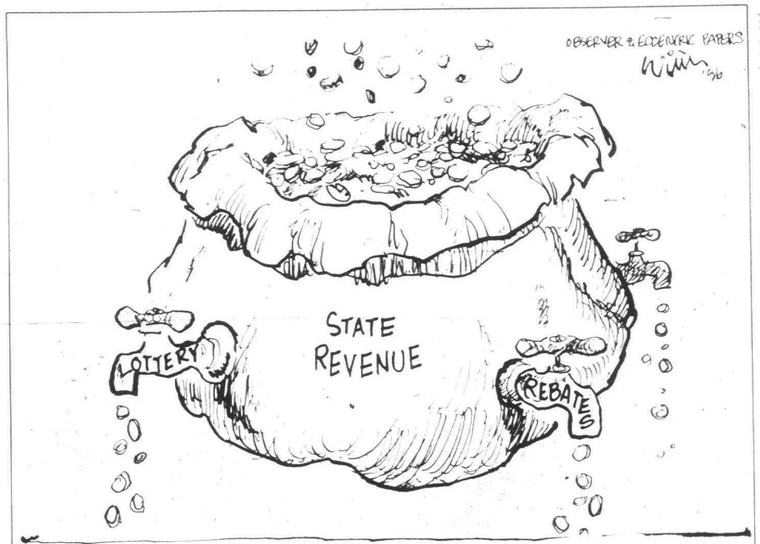

The Canton Country Festival Corp. has a board composed of volunteers that meets monthly to plan each year's event. That board is very short on manpower and could use a half-dozen people willing to spend a half-dozen hours a month to take care of details to ensure the success of the 1986 festival.

The Country Festival is needed and should be preserved as it is now staged. We can return to a more limited festival, or a picnic, but is that what we want? Right now things do not look very bright. You can help save the festival, and do the Canton community a big favor, by volunteering a few hours of your time. To do so, call board president Larry K. Bowerman at 453-6610.

To collect financial support, the board is selling sponsor boards on the festival grounds. For a $100 contribution the name of the donor business will be placed on a sponsor board on the festival grounds. Businesses or clubs wanting a sponsor board may mail a check for $100 payable to Canton Country Festival to Larry K. Bowerman, 933 Wing, Plymouth, Mich. 48185. Specific information can be obtained by calling Bowerman at 453-6610.

Will there be a Country Festival in 1987? You can answer that question.

Balanced-budget games

Tim Richard

THOSE STILL bleating for a federal "balanced budget" amendment ought to learn a lesson from Lansing.

The lesson is that a constitution should be a framework of government, not a repository of economic details.

Michigan politicians are embroiled in a dispute over whether the state collected too much income and single-business tax money. Under the 1978 Headlee tax limitation amendment, excess taxes are supposed to be returned to those who paid 'em.

It sounds nice as economic policy, but it's bad constitutional law. The Court of Appeals may have to be called into the fray.

PONDER THESE details.

- The state collects millions through the lottery but returns half of it in prize money. What do you count as "revenue" — the entire lottery proceeds or the half that is kept by the Treasury for benefit of our schools?

- The state places a 7 percent tax on oil and gas found in Michigan and uses the money to acquire parkland. One side doesn't want to count that as revenue; the other side does.

That's just one set of arguments.

DEFINING "REVENUE" becomes even trickier when you shift to the federal budget. There are just two many ways to manipulate the numbers.

Suppose the Congress decides to beat the balanced budget amendment by splitting expenditures into operating and capital costs. Corporations do it all the time.

For example, our clever congressmen could say air bases, big dams and interstate highways are capital investments and can be financed with borrowed money. Such financing is perfectly logical and could easily defeat the purpose of a balanced budget constitutional provision.

Another trick is to have fun with "contingent" expenditures. You've never heard of those? Well, a loan guarantee, like the feds gave Chrysler, or farm loan guarantees are examples. Do you count that as spending even though a check never is written?

Suppose the amendment allows an unbalanced budget in time of war. What's a war? Was the Korean conflict, where there was never a declaration, war? How about our activities in Vietnam, again without a declaration? Or Grenada?

In the 1930s, '40s and '50s, Social Security was a separate trust fund and not part of the operating budget. What's to stop Congress from going back to that kind of "off-budget" spending plan?

AN ACCOUNTING whiz could list reams of tricks the folks in government might play, but by now you should get the point.

It's going to be impossible to write a workable federal balanced budget amendment.

A Republican named Lincoln said we should be reluctant to clutter up the Constitution with amendments.

A Democrat named Muskie elaborated: "We don't need fiscal handcuffs to wipe the deficit out. We need fiscal discipline. If we have that will, no formula is necessary. If we don't, no formula will work."

Lack of excitement spurs Rep. Engler

Bob Wisler

THE LATE entry of state Rep. Colleen House Engler, R-Mount Pleasant, into the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination may be just what is needed to stir up interest in what hitherto has been largely a ho-hum affair.

Engler, who is in her third term as a state representative, said she believes there is a need for an "exciting" candidate, someone who can generate a lot of enthusiasm.

It remains to be seen whether she is the person who can generate excitement, but her observation is correct that there is a paucity of enthusiasm in the GOP ranks.

The two-year-old-plus quest of Wayne County Executive William Lucas to become the next Republican governor and the country's first elected black governor seems to have peaked about the time that he was turning from a Democrat to a Republican. Lucas doesn't seem to be losing any ground, but he isn't gaining any ground either.

Oakland County Executive Dan Murphy is as dull as dirt, no matter what his qualifications or ability as an administrator. He just can't generate any excitement for his campaign.

BRIGHTON BUSINESSMAN Dick Chrysler has been the only one of the candidates whose campaign looks like it is picking up momentum.

A man who made a large fortune in car conversions, Chrysler has spent a small fortune on advertising depicting him as a hard-nosed businessman, a captain of the auto industry and a family man capable of providing the same kind of leadership for the state that he has provided for his family and the car industry.

The nearly $500,000 worth of TV advertising certainly isn't enough to get him elected but it was enough to start many GOP stalwarts thinking that he is a legitimate contender. Indeed, it may be that in a three-man race, with his money — if his money holds out — Chrysler could beat both Murphy. Beating out Lucas may be another matter.

Lucas still has problems, however. How does he generate enough excitement for his campaign to get him 1) the nomination and 2) the governorship? Very difficult.

The issues that cause the kind of public discontent that is necessary to unseat an incumbent just aren't there.

ALL OF the GOP candidates have been hitting on the now three-year-old tax hike engineered by Gov. Blanchard shortly after he took office. But that really isn't causing the kind of stir needed to get a campaign going.

Enter Colleen Engler. If anything could build some interest it is a woman candidate who can appeal to women without turning off the men. In addition to there being more self-professed Republican voters than self-identified Democrat voters, there are more women voters than men voters.

I always thought the Republicans should have talked Peace Corps Director Loret Ruppe into running for governor to make the GOP race more interesting and to bring out a resurgence of womanly interest in the Grand Old Party.

Richard Headlee, the Republican candidate for governor four years ago, just about lost the race because women perceived his treatment of them as patronizing or chauvinistic.

A GOP candidate who could retain the votes Headlee had and pick up the women's votes that he lost could win the governorship in November. That assumes that all other factors remain the same, which they don't.

Nevertheless, the time of a woman candidate for governor is at hand and certainly we are not far away from the time when this state will elect a woman governor. Engler senses this and is ready to capitalize on the situation.

Who'd have thought a few years ago that it would be the Republicans who would end up having a black and a woman making a run for the governor's job?

Whispered failure haunts us

Steve Barnaby

THE DEBATE BETWEEN the Detroit NAACP, city of Dearborn officials and suburban mall developers really is the story of how a dream has turned into a nightmare of fear, cultural ignorance and bigotry.

For just a moment put park restrictions, boycotts and suburban shopping malls to the back of your mind. Today, we're talking about a massive social failure in America.

Eliminating a social crisis would be a simple matter if all we had to do was build another shopping mall.

But no such luck.

This controversy uncovers an uncomfortable truth — integration in America has failed.

And while many civic and business leaders talk economics, they're really just skirting the issue. But then, most of us are still only whispering.

Let's face it, to proclaim loudly and clearly that racial integration has been rejected by a majority of society is frightening enough. The consequences of such a mentality is, frankly, unimaginable.

Any social scientist would be hard-pressed to cite even one American city or metropolitan area that has integrated. And the Detroit metropolitan area is in far worse shape than we care to admit.

What we hear civic leaders tell us is that a boycott won't work.

But what we hear whispered is that many suburban whites are delighted that fewer blacks are showing up at the malls.

What we hear business leaders tell us is that "conditions" for a major mall in Detroit just aren't feasible. What we hear whispered are the voices of fear from those who are just too frightened to go downtown.

FOR THOSE OF US Detroiters who have lived the roller coaster existence — from riots to resurgence and back to retrenchment — we mourn the division that haunts this area.

We mourn that metropolitan Detroit has grown into a scattering of conclaves — blacks divided against whites, poor against rich, power against pawns.

Maybe a mall in Detroit is impossible, but the excuses we hear from the experts are impossible to believe.

For years we've been told that a mall in Detroit would only succeed if more people lived downtown. But remember when Westland Shopping Center was constructed — in the middle of an empty field without a subdivision in sight.

We hear that parking is too expensive. But that doesn't stop the thousands who go to Greektown or Cobo or Joe Louis Arena every week.

Others tell us the river acts as a barrier. Sure just like Lake Ontario is a barrier for Toronto or the empty fields north of Northland were barriers when that shopping center was built.

Still others say that Detroiters' income level is too low to support a mall. But really now, folks living around Southland fare about the same.

NO, THE REALITY IS that we are living in an area where people fear one another — so much so that they no longer care to shop together, let alone live on the same block.

To survive this crisis, and it is just that, we must escalate the dialogue. Civic, political and business leaders must act more responsibly in facing this issue.

The decision makers in our society must be willing to make decisions which will break down these walls of fear, misunderstanding and prejudice.

In short, blacks and whites at all levels must sit down and start talking about what really is on their minds. Blacks must tell whites about their fears and resentments and their cultural aspirations, which whites must learn to understand.

Teachers share renewed spirit of pride

This week Americans in cities and towns across the country will be honoring those who are shaping the future — our nation's school teachers. National Teacher Day takes on special significance because the spirit of the outstanding New Hampshire teacher astronaut, Christa McAuliffe, is still so much with us.

Christa represented the very best of our profession. Vibrant, upbeat, energetic, courageous, she was full of enthusiasm for teaching and for life. Her dedication to her students and to her profession touched America's heart.

This is the time to recognize the thousands of Christa McAuliffes in classrooms everywhere, the teachers who are encouraging children and making a difference in their lives.

Each day teachers in schools as different as large urban high schools and rural, one-room school houses are helping students explore new ideas, master new knowledge and skills. Teachers are reaching out to every student — regardless of ability, regardless of interest in learning, regardless of social or economic background. They are striving to help all children realize their potential as worthy and effective members of this democratic society.

More and more Americans, I believe, now understand that teaching is both a science and an art. More and more Americans are understanding how very complex the teaching-learning process is.

I welcome this new understanding. We've clearly gone beyond that old idea that those who instruct and care for our nation's children just aren't quite as knowledgeable, quite as professional, as those working in other professions. Christa McAuliffe's inspiring example has helped change this misperception.

Christa also reminded America that education belongs in the forefront of any plan for the future, because education and learning are uniquely about the future.

Among all of us who work in America's classrooms, there's a renewed spirit of pride in our profession. We can feel the respect and confidence we have gained — from our students, from parents, and from our communities. That's why today, all across the nation, so many of my colleagues are proud to say, "I'm a teacher, too."

Note: A fund to honor Christa McAuliffe by providing grants to aspiring and practicing teachers has been established. Tax-deductible donations can be sent to: The Christa McAuliffe American Education Fund, P.O. Box 0149, American Security Bank, Washington, D.C. 20055.

Few neighbors would pass public hearing test

Rich Lech

GROUP HOMES always generate a lot of angry words from homeowners at public hearings. But when your average, run-of-the-mill neighbor moves in, nary is heard a discouraging word. What would happen, though, if everyone who moved into a neighborhood had to undergo a public hearing? Imagine . . .

"I would like to thank all of you for coming to this meeting on the placement of a Single-Family Home at 5555 Offal Court. I'm Mr. Cleaver of the State Department of the Folk(s) Next Door. We want to place here a family of four — a mom, dad, and two kids. Let me, as best as I can, summarize the special needs and attributes of each of these potential residents.

"THE DAD is a visionary who enjoys tackling many different projects, but unfortunately rarely sees them to fruition. As a result, three or four obsolete automobiles in various stages of disassembly will be in his back yard at any given time.

"He will spend his down time — and, oh boy, does he have down time — sitting sans shirt on the back porch, listening to loud rock music, drinking quart bottles of beer, ogling and making comments to any female neighbor between the ages of 12 and 87, and chain smoking cigarettes, flicking the butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"The mother often will engage her spouse in loud verbal or nonverbal disputes, usually between the hours of 3 and 4 a.m. for maximum impact on the neighbors. She will spend the rest of her time gossiping on the front porch with like-minded female neighbors, flicking cigarette butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"The oldest son, 16 years old, is an enterprising lad who doesn't sit back and wait for things to happen — he makes things happen. Break-ins and teen drug use will quickly rise in the neighborhood once he moves in.

"Impatient with the petty details of daily life, he has an amazing aptitude for cutting right to the heart of matters — so he will drive his motorbike across the neighbor's front lawn to get home. Much of his spare time will be spent in his driveway with other youth, discussing the rising price of marijuana and fluctuations in the cocaine commodity market while flicking cigarette butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"The younger son, age 8, is an irrepressible little nipper. He cannot be repressed. It has been tried. No lie-in-bed type, he'll be up at dawn Saturdays, bouncing balls of various sizes and consistencies off the neighbor's house. A thoughtful boy, he will clear all rocks from the yard so his father can perform the semiannual, "whether it needs it or not, ha ha" lawn mowing.

"He will remove the rocks by tossing them at the neighbor's shrubs, garage, pets and/or the neighbor himself. When not up to childhood hijinks, the youngster will be found behind the garage, sneaking a smoke and flicking the butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"WELL, THAT'S my general overview of the family. Any questions or comments from the audience? Yes, the gentleman with the shotgun."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Cleaver, for giving me the opportunity to speak. My comment is this: Take your proposal and yourself out of this building very quickly, and do not cross our city lines ever again — or else."

"Thank you for your timely, pertinent observations. And good-bye."

Fortunately, such a public-hearing process will never come to pass since it would be a gross violation of individual rights under the Constitution. So when it comes to neighbors, we'll have to keep on taking them — or leaving them. Anybody know of any good desert islands for sale?

Credit charges still is usury

To the editor:

In general I agree with Tim Richard's article "Fine print on credit statements tell true story" that appeared in the Thursday, Feb. 27, issue of The Observer.

This credit card business is certainly a master plan to extract money from the American consumer. I wonder which bank was the first to offer the so-called "plastic money"?

You find that interest rates are high when you want to borrow money, but when you loan money (i.e., certificates of deposit) you now only get about seven per cent interest at the local credit union with $10,000 on deposit. I feel that credit card interest at 18 percent still is usury when the banks pay six or seven percent on money that you loan them.

However the real threat of credit cards is that they discourage banks from loaning money to businesses. If, for instance, being a pharmacist and wanting to open a drug store, what if I would want to borrow some money? Even if my proposed business proved successful, I probably would not be able to make a profit equal to 21 percent.

No wonder most large companies are shutting down their American plants and moving to friendly dictatorships like Korea to look for workers. Why invest to modernize your American plant when you can't make a modest 21 percent profit on the investment?

Senators split on sports fee hikes

By Tim Richard
staff writer

On the same day they rolled back the income tax, state senators began work on a bill to raise hunting and fishing license fees 32 to 50 percent.

"It's too substantial an increase," objected Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn, as he voted against the measure in the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

McCollough and Joe Mack, D-Ironwood, dissented as the panel voted 3-2 to send the measure to the Senate floor.

Supporting the increases were Chairman Kirby Holmes, R-Utica, and Sens. Connie Binsfeld, R-Maple City, and Phil Arthurhultz, R-Whitehall. Holmes was author of the income tax rollback bill, which the Senate had passed that morning.

IF ENACTED, the House-passed bill would hike most non-resident fees 33-50 percent this year.

Michigan residents would pay 32-36 percent more beginning in 1987 — after this year's election.

'It's too substantial an increase.'
—Sen. Patrick McCollough D-Dearborn

Even with the increases, said Rep. Tom Scott, D-Flint, Michigan's fees will be lower than surrounding Great Lakes' states.

The fee hikes, first since 1981, are needed to pump $6 million into the state fish and game fund, said Scott, who chairs the House Conservation Committee.

"It's not a tax increase. This is the user fee concept," said Scott, anticipating McCollough's and Mack's objections.

MUCH OF the new money would go to add 31 more officers and other staff to the wildlife and fisheries divisions of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

"In 1926, we had 150 conservation officers," said Scott. "Today, with our population doubled or tripled, we have only 156.

"It's ludicrous. We oughta be up to the 240 we had in 1978 and '79, before the crunch came."

HUNTING and fishing licenses provide the bulk (87 percent) of the game and fish protection fund.

That bothered McCollough. "If these programs are worthwhile, they benefit hikers, bird watchers and berry pickers, too," he said. "They should be funded by the general fund, not by hunters and fishermen."

And not all the fund goes to pay conservation officers, McCollough added. Some goes to make payments "in lieu of property taxes" to county and local governments where state forests are located.

Mack, a veteran Upper Peninsula lawmaker frequently at odds with DNR, voiced the same kind of objection. "My position is that law enforcement is a top priority. We squeeze law enforcement all the time," he said.

Scott said sportsmen's groups drafted most of the fee increases. A poll in his district showed 60 percent supported the hike, 30 percent were opposed and less than 10 percent were undecided.

Ron Skoog, DNR director, said the new fee schedule eliminates the free fishing licenses for spouses for the first time in Michigan history.

A $1 public access stamp for hunters also was eliminated.

The new fee schedule will give an 8 percent commission to sporting goods and bait dealers who handle hunting and fishing licenses.

Proposed fee hikes

Here is how Michigan residents' fees would go up beginning April 1987:

Small game — $7.25 to $9.85 (increase 36%).
Deer — $9.75 to $12.85 (32%).
Bear — $11.75 to $14.85 (26%).
Fishing — $7.25 to $9.85 (36%).
Trout — $7.25 to $9.85 (36%).
Sportsmen's (five licenses) — $36.25 to $45.35. The 1987 license would include the $9.85 trout stamp, reducing the effective increase to almost nothing.
Minor small game — $3.75 to $5.10 (36%).
Fur harvester — $5 to $6.50 (32%).

NON-RESIDENT fees would rise:
Firearm deer — $110.25 (33% increase).
Small game — $50.25 (42%).
Bear — $150.25 (50%).
Fishing — $17.25 (13%).

Resident senior citizen licenses would remain at $1 for fishing and $4 for hunting.

Scholarship Ball honors achievement

The Woman's Club of Plymouth is sponsoring its fourth annual Invitational Scholarship Benefit Ball on March 15 at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth.

The first such ball was held there on March 11, 1983, in celebration of the Club's 90th anniversary.

The Observer and the Mayflower Hotel serve as co-sponsors for the event.

The tribute is organized by the Woman's Club to recognize the community's outstanding graduating seniors. Continued support from the individual, business and corporate sponsors makes it possible.

Each December, scholarship applications are available in the schools or at the Observer office in Plymouth. Students whose parents live in or have a business in the Plymouth-Canton Community School District may apply.

A minimum 3.25 overall grade point average and service to the school, church/synagogue, and community complete the requirements of eligibility. Financial need is not a consideration.

WOMAN'S CLUB members review the applications and select the students to be invited to the ball. A panel of judges who are non-club members work on a grid system to evaluate the candidates. Each candidate is assigned a number; no names are used.

A total of 31 outstanding seniors will be honored this year, four more than the traditional maximum established over the past two years. Although the students qualify in one of three different grade point categories (3.25 to 3.50, 3.51 to 3.75, and 3.76 to 4.0-plus), competition in each group determines the number that can be invited.

Twelve young men and 19 young women have been invited, including one student who is now studying in Germany. In 1983, not even one male applied.

Schools represented include Plymouth Christian Academy, Catholic Central, Plymouth Salem High School, and Plymouth Canton High School.

Engineering, law, medicine, math, business, psychiatry, biomedical engineering, language, music, genetic research, communications/journalism, government, financial planning and robotics are among the fields of study the young people are planning to pursue.

LOCAL DIGNITARIES will address the candidates, their guests, parents and friends, and members of the Woman's Club on March 15. They are: Mayor Bill Robinson from the city of Plymouth, Plymouth Township Clerk Esther Hulsing (a life member and past president of the Woman's Club), Canton Township Supervisor James Poole, and a Board of Education representative.

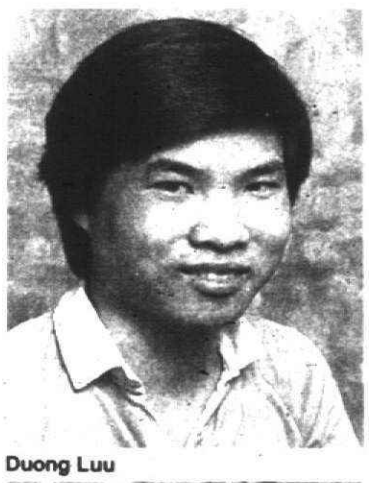

Representing the Woman's Club and conducting the ceremonies will be K.C. Mueller, president, and Carole Daniels Hackett, vice president and benefit co-chairman. Scott Lorenz of the Mayflower Hotel and Emory Daniels of the Plymouth Observer are honorary chairmen as co-sponsors of the ball.

Sponsors of the honored applicants are: Mr. and Mrs. Craig Andersen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Antosz, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bake, Dr. Roger Bookwalter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brandt, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Centofanti, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Childs, Richard A. Friday, March 7th, at 7:30 p.m., Mr. Davis will speak on "GOD HAS GIVEN US EVERY GOOD THING."
Saturday, March 8th, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Mr. Davis will present a seminar entitled "MEDITATION FOR PERSONAL BENEFIT AND INNER GROWTH."
A love offering will be taken at both sessions. Luncheon on Saturday will be provided by the Youth of Unity for a donation of $4.00.
There is a way to relax the body, tune the mental field, and experience conscious Self-awareness. As a result of regular superconscious meditation, the thoughts become ordered, body functions become synchronized, intuition awakens and the faculty of intelligence is cleared. We are as waves on the Ocean of God. When we experience this consciously, we are alive to the Self, life and experience the activity of God through us and around us.
Roy Eugene Davis began his spiritual training with Paramahansa Yogananda in 1950. He is currently the president of Center for Spiritual Awareness, which has world headquarters in northeast Georgia and branch centers in California, Europe and West Africa. Mr. Davis is the author of many inspirational books, many of which will be available at our bookstore. He is also editor-publisher of Truth Journal magazine and an on-demand speaker-teacher for New Thought churches, centers and other programs.

More to life than economic efficiency

Rev. Lloyd Buss

I AM NO longer buying or eating Hormel food products. Having followed the news about the strike against the Hormel plant in Austin, Minn., since it began in August 1985, I have decided not to eat any Hormel product until the strike is settled. The prospects for an imminent settlement are limited. I may not be eating any Hormel products for a long time.

My decision will create no economic hardship for Hormel. In 1984 Hormel reported a profit of $29 million. The Hormel plant in Austin, accounting for 40 percent of Hormel's production, employed about 20 percent of the workforce. Hormel reported even greater profits for 1985.

I will no longer buy or eat Hormel food products because I am concerned about important issues of morality. Fiscal responsibility and management integrity must include a basic regard for the well-being of labor. Profit without and accountability from both management and labor is not profit but deception. Management intent on breaking a local union while continuing with national union representation has lost its claim to integrity. Labor claims of jeopardy to workers in a high-risk accident industry either poorly trained or forced to increased production levels also needs attention.

THE MEAT-PROCESSING industry has come to difficult times. Not all their troubles can be blamed on high wages. If management and labor were able to bring an industry to a high level of accomplishment in years past, then management and labor should accept equal responsibility for whatever troubles they experience now. And for whatever troubles they have experienced beyond their control, they should decide to accept equal responsibility and move forward together.

The decade of the '80s has been often described as the "decade of concessions." Labor-management relations during the '80s have become preoccupied with concessions. Economic issues have become the priority. We have insisted that the profit margin must be maintained.

It's the implication that the profit margin must be maintained at all costs that raises other questions. No one can deny the economic factor in our order of life. But one can certainly challenge the degree of value placed on its worth or role in public life. There is far more to life than our claims to economic efficiency would suggest.

Dividing a community into two groups — mine and yours, and then insisting that we need what you have; will never create a just social order. I'm not asking that Hormel solve the problems of the world, but until they can work out some kind of decent agreement with the men and women they at one time were proud to call their employees, I'm not going to buy or eat their products.

4 developers pitch SC on empty land

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Four companies this month will present Schoolcraft College trustees ideas for developing unused college land at I-275 and Seven Mile.

As the landlord, the college is seeking a compatible builder for 15.6 acres on the southwest corner. The land is in the middle of a booming high-technology arc stretching from Oakland University at Rochester to the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

"Twenty-eight companies were sent requests for proposals," said board chairman Michael W. Burley. "Ten responded. Four have been invited in."

The four are: Proctor & Associates of Troy, Phillip R. Duke & Associates of Indianapolis, First Martin Corp. of Ann Arbor and Shaw Construction & Management Co. of Livonia.

Staff advisers estimate the land could earn $175,000 a year in rent, about 1 percent of the current operating budget.

THE BOARD last week approved incorporation of a non-stock, non-profit Schoolcraft Development Authority to be the actual landlord.

Attorney Steve Palms of the Miller Canfield law firm said the separate authority would:

1) Shield the college from lawsuits involving the development.

2) Be exempt from the Open Meetings Act and able to deal with developers behind closed doors.

3) Be effectively controlled by the college, which would provide five of the authority's nine trustees.

"Schoolcraft College can put limits on the building such as restrictions on the height and kinds of businesses which go there," said Palms.

THE AUTHORITY would receive rents from the tenants and turn them over to the college.

Staff advisers estimate the land could earn $175,000 a year in rent, about 1 percent of the current operating budget.

Trustees will set up special meetings to hear presentations from developers, allowing each about 1½ hours.

IN OTHER business, the board of trustees:

- Learned the college food service, which had run a deficit for years, has turned the corner. Controller A.H. Raby said the operating deficit, which was $46,000 for the first seven months of last fiscal year, is down 90 percent to less than $4,000 for the same period this fiscal year. "Theme days," notably Mexican, and "blackboard specials" are luring student diners.

- Received gifts of audio-visual training equipment worth nearly $4,800 from Rhoda Bowen of Detroit for the nursing program; and an IBM Fastdraft computer system from IBM for the architectural and drafting programs.

Career in mathematics avoided by most — prof

Even students who excel at math in their high school and early college years seldom decide to major in mathematics.

"They think there aren't any jobs for math majors — other than becoming math teachers," said Wayne State University Mathematics Department chairman Clarence W. Wilkerson.

"That's simply not true."

STUDENTS BELIEVE math is a tool used by engineers, physicists, computer scientists and other professionals, but not a profession in itself.

Wilkerson of Southfield hopes to attack that myth. He has facts about the need for mathematics majors in industry and business as well as education.

"Math is not seen as a separate field," he said. "We don't have the recognition factor at the high school level that other disciplines have.

"Students don't realize that math is still ongoing and still happening. It's alive and well."

Every semester, 3,500 to 4,000 undergraduate students at Wayne take math courses as part of the requirements for other majors. However, Wilkerson said, only 30 students a year will take math courses toward a bachelor's degree in mathematics.

Currently, the math department has about 20 graduate students studying at the master's degree level and about 30 at the doctoral level.

WILKERSON feels that number would increase substantially if more students were aware of the opportunities available to them through mathematics.

"A mathematician is a problem solver," Wilkerson said. "In an academic setting, a mathematician makes up his or her own problems to solve.

"In an industrial or business environment, a mathematician solves predetermined problems."

Because math is used in so may professions, mathematicians easily adapt to nearly every field, Wilkerson said.

"A mathematician is a resource person for other people in the company. I think of a mathematician as being a general problem solver who can abstract out the important components of a situation and see what is really necessary to solve a problem."

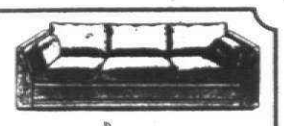

MATH MAJORS can find jobs in fields as diverse as physics, medicine, geology and government.

According to a November 1984 article in Scientific American, the average starting salary for graduates holding bachelor's degrees in mathematics was $23,400. That represents an 8.4 percent increase over the previous year.

The average offer for master's candidates was $28,764, a 12.9 percent increase from the 1982-83 level.

"The central and pervasive role of mathematics in the age of technology should help prevent the boom-or-bust employment phenomena that occasionally affect more specialized areas of science and engineering," the article said.

Jack Bologna of Plymouth is in Paris this week delivering a paper before the Fourth World Congress on computer and communications security.

Computer sleuth

He sniffs out dishonest employees

Jack Bologna is an unlikely candidate for a master detective. Yet he provides knowledge to managers on how to reduce losses caused by people using computers.

Bologna came by his interest in how people cheat with computers by tracking down accounting fraud.

Bologna, who founded and heads Computer Protection Systems Inc. in Plymouth, spent years detecting accounting fraud before starting his own company. His company counsels companies on how to improve computer security and reduce computer theft. Two days a week, Bologna is an assistant professor of management at Siena Heights College in Adrian, Mich.

This week, he is in Paris delivering a paper before the Fourth World Congress on computer and communications security. His paper, "The What, Why, How and Who of Computer-Related Crime," indicates his approach: prevention through knowledgeable management.

Double-entry bookkeeping on paper has been around a couple hundred years, and management knew how to prevent cheating with paper. But with the advent of the computer, many new ways to cheat appeared.

WHILE A dishonest bookkeeper is still a threat, the dishonest programmer is, too. And the dishonest computer operator could cost the company a bundle. "Computers don't steal. People do."

The hundreds of years of experience with paper did little to train the auditor or manager to find errors caused by poorly written programs or intentionally written "mistakes."

But it wasn't just dishonesty that could hurt a company using computers. A disgruntled or incompetent bookkeeper, data entry clerk, programmer, computer operator or anyone knowing the passwords and procedures of a department could unethically manipulate data.

And a lot of companies had little idea how vulnerable their electronic accounting systems were. In steps Bologna.

The physical threats are fairly easy for management to see. Those threats have been found over the years — sometimes by bitter experience — by the larger user of computers. Disaster protection is easily understood. It deals with Acts of God: tornadoes, floods, explosions.

Bologna focuses on the psychology of cheating. If no employee feels the need or desire to cheat, the company will be much safer from cheating, he believes. To eliminate losses, a company must reduce the motivation to cheat.

Planners help map financial strategy

finances and you

Sid Mittra

If you are beginning to believe your personal financial affairs are out of control, and what you need is honest, expert advice in getting it all together, you are in good company.

Much of this country's affluent middle class is in exactly the same position: in over its head and looking for help — on taxes, investments, insurance, real estate, fringe benefits, retirement plans, wills and trusts.

One way to obtain help is to engage a personal financial planner. Some are individual practitioners, some are attached to banks, brokerage houses, insurance companies or accounting firms, and some serve only top executives or the very rich. Others offer more modest services.

No one can — or should — tell you which financial planner is right for you because that depends on several factors, including your needs, ability to pay, net worth, expertise and so on. Before you put yourself in the hands of one, you should be able to identify some qualities that can help in selecting a competent financial planner.

In my opinion, the financial planner should have at least a bachelor's degree and preferably a master's of business administration degree with concentration in finance. The planner should be a Certified Financial Planner (CFP) and an active member of the International Association for Financial Planning (IAFP). He or she should also have been admitted, or in the process of being admitted, to the Registry of Financial Planning.

There are no set criteria for determining the competence of a financial planner. The fact that a person has all the planning credentials does not guarantee that he is a competent financial planner.

One way to judge a planner is by the quality of the financial plan he or she draws up for you. A financial plan means different things to different people. To some, it is nothing more than a statement of net worth and a list of insurance and investments held by the client. To others, it contains an overwhelming amount of data and other information. What is important is not merely the volume but the amount of useful information presented in a comprehensible form.

More specifically, a comprehensive financial plan should cover at least the following seven areas, contained in the seven letters of the word "retired:"

R — Risk management planning
E — Educational planning
T — Tax planning
I — Investment planning
R — Retirement planning
E — Estate planning
D — Desired financial independence planning

Regardless of the complexity of your financial situation, the financial planner must offer to provide the client with a written financial plan. It must provide answers to questions that are unique to a client's situation.

A financial plan should include the following:

- A simple description in words of the existing financial conditions as well as financial assets and products held by the client. This section will give the client an overview of his present financial situation.
- A list of key recommendations followed by explanations of why these recommendations were made. Recommendations should first be made in generic terms with no reference to specific products (investments, insurance, etc). The planner should then translate these generic recommendations into specific product suggestions.

All the basic observations and key recommendations must be fully supported by technical data. This data should be presented in either tabular or chart form so the client knows what to do, how to do it, and how his situation would improve after all recommendations have been implemented, and should be easily accessible.

Since many people by nature are procrastinators, the financial planner should develop an implementation time chart that specifies the approximate time frame for the completion of the implementation process.

If the planner handles products, he should be licensed to handle several kinds of investment and insurance products and should be able to represent all of them without prejudice.

Regarding compensation, there are basically three kinds of planners, namely, planners who:

- for a fee sell advice and information only;
- give or sell — for token amounts — advice in conjunction with sales of financial products, such as mutual funds, securities, real estate, insurance, investment contracts and tax-shelter programs;
- charge a combination of fee and commission.

The fee-only planners are relatively few in number and, as you might expect, expensive. They also tend to be strongly independent, pointing with pride to their lack of ties with any product or industry. They sell their services directly to individuals or through such institutions as bank trust departments or corporations, a significant number of whom now offer financial counseling as a fringe benefit to upper-level executives.

While the "fee only" planning, which claims to provide total objectivity is a good concept, this concept could have limitations. First, fee-only financial planners cannot take responsibility for ensuring that their recommendations are properly carried out. The reason is that they generally part company with you after the plan is completed, and you are left on your own to take whatever steps you deem appropriate. Second, since the majority of financial problems are solved by the judicious use of financial products, knowledge of a variety of products and their use in different situations would become a prerequisite to performing a total financial planning service. Thus, a lack of thorough knowledge of a large number of products could become a serious limitation to the performance of the financial planning function.

Herein lies the justification for the existence of fee-and-commission-oriented financial planners. It is asserted that if financial planners do not earn money from their knowledge of products, they will not have the incentive to learn about them properly.

Campus connections are vital to business

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Far from being dangers to academic freedom, corporate-campus connections should be increased, according to three university presidents and an industrialist.

"It's not a fad; it's here to stay," Oakland University President Joseph Champagne told the Economic Club of Detroit Monday.

"Our trading partners are spending more on research and development than we are," warned University of Michigan President Harold Shapiro.

An economist, Shapiro said America's rates of personal saving, corporate investment and research and development are "not adequate for economic leadership."

"The need for a strong corporate-campus connection has never been greater," agreed John A. Betti, Ford Motor Co. executive vice president for technical and operating staffs.

FAR FROM being a phenomenon of the 1980s, corporate-campus ties have been important in America for decades, but declined in the early 1970s, said John DiBaggio, new president of Michigan State University.

"At the same time, industry's role in basic research diminished, decreasing regular scientist-to-scientist contact," the MSU chief said.

They defined "corporate-campus connections" as: industrialists serving on university boards and advisory committees; companies making large grants; universities having access to specialized industrial equipment; mutually drawing on a pool of expertise without expanding in-house capabilities; companies applying campus research; companies gaining a skilled work force; and universities generating spin-off firms in the research field.

"IT DOESN'T happen elsewhere in the world," said Shapiro.

"In fact," added DiBiaggio, "a recent industry study concluded that the single most important factor attracting such industries to a region was the proximity of a major research university."

Champagne noted that "nearly 75 percent of all scientific discoveries in this country are attributed directly to university scientists."

ARE THERE dangers to universities if they "climb in bed" with corporations?

Problems, yes; dangers, no, they replied.

"The interests of corporate shareholders are not the same as universities," Shapiro said. "But our challenge is to pick that band of mutual interests."

DiBiaggio said that as president of the University of Connecticut, he personally knew every corporate leader in the state, and, "I never encountered one who wanted to interfere with research findings or interfere with academic freedom.

"But they did ask, 'Would you kindly investigate the things that are of interest to us?'

"And they did say, 'Give us engineers who can write a report.' "

Nevertheless, the MSU president repeatedly said he was concerned that world-class universities "might be called upon to train more and educate less."

CORPORATIONS spend $40 billion a year on supplemental education for employees, said OU's Champagne — fully half of the $80-billion, combined budgets of higher education institutions in the U.S.

Ford's Betti called for re-examination of the corporate-campus connection to "reduce the entrance training we (industries) have to do."

Shapiro and DiBiaggio predicted devastating effects on federal aid to students and research if the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings plan of across-the-board budget cuts is implemented next year.

DiBiaggio said that when he was a college student in the 1950s, a summer job could yield almost enough to pay a year of tuition and board costs — a situation that's "almost impossible" today.

'The interests of corporate shareholders are not the same as universities. But our challenge is to pick that band of mutual interests.'

— Harold Shapiro U-M president

Choose financial planner carefully

Financial planners who charge both a fee and a commission are frequently accused of a possible conflict of interest. A financial planner should not be accused of being dishonest merely because he earns a commission on the sale of an investment, insurance or a tax-sheltered product. Rather a financial planner has a conflict of interest only if he or she distorts or manipulates information in order to realize a profit to the disservice or the detriment of his or her client.

So if you wish to select a financial planner who charges both a fee and a commission, make sure that the following conditions are met:

1. The financial planner should promise to deliver a written comprehensive financial plan for which he should charge a fee consistent with that charged by a "fee only" planner.

2. You must have the option of purchasing the recommended products from another person, if you so desire.

3. If you choose to purchase the products from the financial planner, he should charge the "normal" commission; that is, you should receive no rebate or refunds merely because you decided to purchase the products from the financial planner. A financial planner is a generalist dealing with many complicated and technical issues. He should recognize that he must function in an ever changing, complex world. In this world, complete financial planning requires the services of more than one professional adviser, and best results are obtained through a team effort of a CPA, an attorney, an insurance counselor, an estate planner, a banker and a tax-shelter specialist.

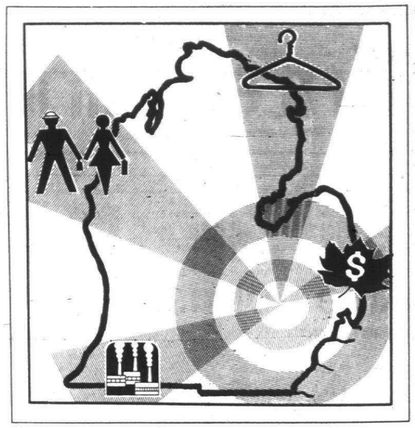

Selecting the right financial planner is neither an exact science nor an esoteric art. In the final analysis, it can be described as looking for a cross between a symphony conductor and a doctor.

The type of practice a financial planner has, and the market in which he operates, determines what advisers are needed. An attorney is needed to create wills, trusts and other legal documents. A CPA prepares tax returns and answers tax and business-related questions. An insurance counselor satisfies various insurance needs, and a trust officer offers many services (e.g., custodian accounts, trustee of a trust, etc.) of great benefit to the client. The planner may also need to work with bank loan officers, real estate appraisers, hard asset specialists and general partners of tax shelters.

Selecting the right financial planner is neither an exact science nor an esoteric art. In the final analysis, it can be described as looking for a cross between a symphony conductor and a doctor.

The players in the symphony include not only you and your spouse but also various advisers like the CPA, the attorney, the insurance counselor and the investment expert. The conductor need not know how to play one or more of these instruments being played, but he has an overview and general working knowledge of all the instruments being used by the group. In addition, you should also view your planner as a financial doctor, who can be fully trusted not only to cure your financial problems but also to ensure that you remain financially healthy and prosperous.

Financial planning should also be viewed as a lifelong process. Development of a comprehensive financial plan is but the completion of the first phase. A dedicated financial planner makes a long-term commitment to his client and believes that the client needs his continued support as a means of achieving all of the short, intermediate and long-term financial goals.

Computer sleuth Bologna sniffs out fraud

So-called hackers get the publicity, but it's the inside people who can do you in.

SO THAT managers can better understand ways cheating can be discouraged, Bologna lists MOMMs psychological targets:

Motivations
Opportunities
Means
Methods

Eliminate these, and the chances of loss are greatly minimized.

● Motivations are economic, ideological, egocentric and psychotic. Most of these motivations can be spotted either before hiring or by an alert supervisor who knows what to look for.

● Opportunities for theft usually depends upon poor management. If management is aware of possible ways to cheat, it can reduce the opportunity to cheat. Here is where passwords and similar techniques are useful.

● Means revolve around finding weaknesses in programming or procedures, collusion or modifying data.

● Methods break down into falsifying input, modifying programs or falsifying output.

Psychological defenses became even more important as more tasks have been put onto the computer: payroll, accounts payable, accounts receivable, billing, inventory, scheduling, even personnel.

Each new area added not only the usual opportunity to cheat but also the opportunity for an outsider, whether a vendor or a stranger, to break in and steal from the computer user.

IN THE GOOD old days — say about 1960 — protecting your records meant a walk-in safe with a combination. Now it means passwords, uninterruptible power supplies, levels of authorization and, yes, a walk-in safe for copies of everything that is stored on the computer.

Tax tip: Take advantage of deductions

If you're still staring at your blank 1040s, here's some deductions you may have overlooked:

● Finance charges on installment accounts (credit cards) or on retail or educational installment contracts.

● Rental on a safe deposit box used to store stocks, bonds or other investments.

● Tax return preparation and tax planning fees.

● Attorney fees for the collection of taxable alimony.

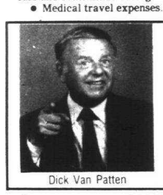

● Penalties for early withdrawal of deposits.

● Sales tax paid on major purchases such as cars and boats made during the year.

● Medical travel expenses.

Man of many faces

Arte Johnson's interests range from books to cows

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

DON'T EXPECT a rubber-faced comic when you meet Arte Johnson. Even though he is still most fondly known for the years he spent as one of the stars of television's incredibly successful "Laugh In," Johnson doesn't think of-himself as a comedian, but as an actor.

He has played many comedy roles, however, including the one in which he now appears at the Birmingham Theatre. In the title role of "The Foreigner," he's a guy who finds himself in some hilarious situations because no one realizes he can speak or understand English.

Not only does Johnson in real life downplay his comedic talents, he also isn't interested in centering his attention just on acting. In an interview last week at Punchinello's restaurant, across from the Birmingham Theatre, he seemed most willing to talk about everything but his career as a performer.

"Comedy is just one facet of acting," Johnson said. "I started out in PR with Viking, the book publisher." He got into acting when he took "the path of least resistance."

Johnson arrives for the interview.

HOW HE BECAME a trouper on "Laugh In" was "from knowing people from other places and things" and from "being in a certain place at a certain time." It all came together through his personal contacts and friendships.

Johnson, who had been doing radio and TV voices, was on his way to a memorial service at a cemetery, with a friend who was going to be a writer on "Laugh In." He also knew the producer, "someone from New York, who used to see me when I worked in the small clubs."

The innovative comedy show took the country by storm.

"Everything was so helter-skelter," he recalls about the way the performers worked together, his roles being "primarily in the area of dialects."

Among these much-admired characters was "a chap who came from behind the Iron Curtain. I played a sumo chef that John Belushi later used."

Other roles were an Arab sheik and a German soldier. "Like all of us, we all doubled in brass," Johnson said.

Doing dialects takes a special talent. "It is music — if you have an ear for it."

Describing his role of Charlie Baker in "The Foreigner," Johnson said, "I think he's harmless. He's just sort of a fun character."

Things are happening around him. He is from the publishing industry. He has been a proofreader for 27 years. He is a consummate B-O-R-E, bore, on a sci-fi magazine yet.

WITH THIS he launched into a recollection of a TV talk show he hosted, when he had a best-selling author as his guest.

"They never assume you read the material. I used to throw the questions (prepared by his staff) over my shoulder and start talking. The author was with his publisher's rep and I said, 'On page 323 you've got a typo.' They said, 'You really do read these books!'"

Johnson, his soft eyes behind steel-rimmed glasses, greying hair and wry sense of humor, is of a literary bent. "I speed read. In preparation for the show, I would read four books a night."

He also remembers, somewhat gleefully, the professor he interviewed on the talk show.

"He wrote a book about bribes. It was 1,100 pages. I read the whole book." Johnson knew where all the typos were and asked his guest, "Did someone proofread this for you?"

"After that, he got in conversations that were a lot more profound," Johnson said.

The actor lives in Los Angeles with his wife Gisela, who is from northern Germany and is a naturalized American. They have two dogs. Kleine (which means small in German) and Knudel (which means little, a hug). Johnson takes great pride in his wife's achievements.

"She's a fashion designer and interior decorator. She's the bright, tasteful one of our group," he said.

THE COUPLE has been married 18 years and had a Hawaiian ceremony for the renewal of their wedding vows eight years ago. They plan to renew the vows again on their 20th anniversary.

"We may go back to Hawaii," Johnson said.

Their home is "very comfortable, with antique wood. I have an all-wood library and a fireplace."

They collect New Guinea art, cattle figurines, oils, brass and porcelains. "I have books on veterinary medicine. I like cows," he deadpanned.

How did he develop this thing for cows? "I was raised enough with cows. They're dumb and nice. They don't bother anyone."

Johnson said he grew up mostly in southern Michigan, around Benton Harbor and South Haven. "I had a big family there. They're all gone. Now they're all over the world."

He looks back on childhood days spent on the farm.

"I learned to climb trees. I got stomach aches eating the wrong fruit. I got one cent for picking bugs off tomato plants." He doesn't mind that he still hasn't collected most of the money owed him at one cent for each bug.

JOHNSON LOVES living in Los Angeles.

"I adore it. I have not done any theater in New York in a long, long time. New York smells like unwashed baby diapers. I'm a day person. New York is a night city."

What he does like about the Big Apple is that "I can just walk for hours in New York."

He enjoys the at-home socializing in Los Angeles, where "my wife and I have dinner at 5 p.m. You can close the doors at 11 p.m."

When shooting a movie, he's up at 6 a.m. and back home at 6:15 or 6:30 p.m.

"You govern your time judiciously," he said of his life in the world of show business. "It looks a lot more romantic than it is. Drug society? In our social circles, all my friends are having quadruple bypasses. They're not filling their noses with garbage."

Last New Year's Eve the the stay-at-home Johnsons celebrated with a composer and other musician friends. They had omelets at midnight. "The New Year's before, someone sent over a kilo of caviar."

"We have a very simple lifestyle," he continued. Arms folded, he said, "I prefer a good book. I have been in houses 10,000 square feet that don't have a book in them."

AS AN ACTOR, Johnson has acquired a fame of sorts for his many appearances on the long-running TV "Loveboat" series.

"There was a big banquet for the 1,000th star — Lana Turner. I was honored as the male who has done the most guest appearances."

Johnson figures that honor isn't exactly one he wants engraved on his tombstone, however.

"They're all personal friends going back so many years, the producers, the writers. When in doubt, get Artie," he said in explanation of why he has been seen so often on "Loveboat." He may have made his last appearance on the show. "Loveboat' may be scuttled this year."

Arte Johnson's real name is Arthur Johnson, but when he went to join the union, he found the name was already taken. He decided to go for Artie, but dropped the "i" because it seemed too ordinary.

"Show business is not the sum total of my life," he emphasized, as he hinted at business interests he is pursuing. "I will be doing work for major corporations relating to journalism. It's a lot of travel.

"I love to travel. Last year I was on the road close to 238 weeks." He was in Germany twice, on an isle off Madagascar, in Bangkok, Singapore, Bali, Hong Kong, Sun Valley, Alaska and Mexico.

"ALSO, I FORGOT, I took a Caribbean Cruise. I'm a chocoholic. I get shipments from Nestle's in Switzerland and Germany. I have a penchant for dark chocolate, aged 12 years."

As if all this weren't enough, "I am a first-day cover collector of stamps. I have a major library and was spokesman for the American Antiquarian Society convention in Los Angeles."

He collects first editions, from Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling to Charles Dickens.

"In other words, it's not all laughs." Asked if he thinks his "Laugh In" success has eclipsed his other acting achievements, he answered, "I have done other things since then that were well received — dramatic things, movies that have been acclaimed critically. I would like to have a little more recognition."

Some of his stage roles are "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "No Time for Sergeants," "Finian's Rainbow," "Stop the World" and "Little Me." Among his films are "Cannonball Run II" and "Love at First Bite."

And then there's that Emmy award he got for "Laugh In."

Performances of the Birmingham Theatre production of "The Foreigner" by Larry Shue continue through Sunday, March 30. For ticket information call the box office at 644-3533.

"The Foreigner" boasts a very funny script, a first-rate supporting cast and the immense comedic talents of Arte Johnson, best known for his antics on television's "Laugh In." The current production at the Birmingham Theatre is a perfect delight.

In the title role, Johnson plays Charlie Baker, a very drab Englishman who describes himself as utterly boring and devoid of personality. Spirited away under implausible circumstances by an old army buddy, Charlie finds himself about to spend three days at a rustic fishing lodge deep in the heart of Georgia.

So shy he cannot bear to converse with the strangers at the lodge, Charlie pretends not to understand English in order to preserve his privacy. To the locals, Charlie is an exotic specimen, to be ridiculed or fawned over, according to one's natural inclination. Likewise the rural Southerners are foreign to Charlie, especially in their speech.

The situation is rife with comic possibilities, and both Johnson and director Charles Karchmer take full advantage.

Pretending to be someone else, Charlie discovers a playfulness within him while at the same time he tries to thwart a plot he has accidentally overheard. With his twinkling eyes, infectious grin and diminutive size, Johnson is ever the mischievous leprechaun. He also uses body English to maximum effect along with his knack for turning his face red with the ease of a chameleon.

JOHNSON'S BRITISH accent is not particularly convincing, but he is in his element when Charlie assumes a vaguely Russian accent, strongly reminiscent of one of Johnson's "Laugh In" characters.

While the lodge residents help elicit Charlie's true personality, he also fills important needs in some of their lives. Lodge owner Betty Meeks, dejected at the possible loss of her property, perks right up because Charlie reminds her of a former pet squirrel. Billie Lou Watt is sweet and motherly in the role and terribly funny when she repeatedly shouts into Charlie's ear to compensate for his lack of English.

Whiney southern belle Catherine is played to perfection by Stacy Huntington. Certain that he cannot understand her, Catherine finds Charlie the perfect listener to whom she can confide her romantic problems.

Charlie works hard to instill confidence in Ellard, Catherine's mentally retarded young brother, by letting him play English teacher. Mark Morocco is wonderful as the simple but kindly Ellard, his face perpetually screwed up to confront life's mysteries. The English lessons allow Johnson to broadly mimic the southerners, turning words like "lamp" and "rug" into two syllables each.

Gavin Troster is fine as the Rev. David Lee. Catherine's smooth-talking and conniving fiance. Richard Mover is appropriately despicable as Owen, the archetype red-neck Kiansman. Greg Gerard is amusing as Froggy, Charlie's very inventive old friend.

The show moves at a fast clip, the laughs flawlessly paced. Steven Perry's single set is attractively rustic. Only Kennth Evan's lighting effects seem tentative in this otherwise very slick comic romp.

"New York, New York" (1977). 2:30 Saturday night on Ch. 50. Originally 137 minutes. TV time slot: 110 minutes.

This is a strange, highly stylized experiment, an attempt to make a romantic musical with a hard edge. Director Martin Scorsese sets musical antasy (complete with soundstage nowfalls) against a bitter story of love nd marriage gone wrong. Few films ave engendered as much heated deate or divided audiences so completely. This is a yes vote for a movie that is s much about movies as it is about the axophone player and singer that the tory revolves around. Liza Minnelli ealizes her full potential here and her endition of the title song is more passionate than the gently swinging Sinara hit. Robert DeNiro challenges himelf, as usual, by becoming the character he plays. The character is not all hat nice. The musical numbers by Kander-Ebb is almost as good as their Cabaret" score.

Rating: $3.25.

"Eyes of Laura Mars" (1978). 1 m. Sunday on Ch. 50. Originally 03 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

The hip-sleazy side of life is the real subject of this grim picture. Faye Dunaway plays a celebrated fashion photographer who has visual premonitions. Dunaway has become expert at playing hard, cold, driven women, but the question is why would anyone want to watch movies about these women. The photographer becomes celebrated for taking pictures of scantily clad models who have been strangled, stabbed or shot to sell lingerie. (If this seems outlandish to you, the photos are real and were taken by a male photographer who was celebrated for just that. Oh, those rich people have a wicked sense of humor.) Nobody in this film is pleasant and nothing about the film is pleasant. The final confrontation between Dunaway and a psychotic serial killer is tense, riveting but short circuited by the fact that most people do not care what happens to the chill queen.

Rating: $1.

Risk pays off with 'Miser'

Performances of the Meadow Brook Theatre production of "The Miser" by Moliere continue through Sunday, March 23, on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For ticket information call the box office at 377-3300.

Cathie Breidenbach

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

It's risky to take liberties with the words of the old masters.

Meadow Brook Director Terence Kilburn takes that risk, and the updated version of Moliere's "The Miser" is a rollicking good time thanks in large part to Charles Nolte's wonderful adaptation of the script.

His version infuses the old tale about love, stinginess and parental authority with some fresh silliness that includes idiosyncrasies of our own times such as returnable bottles and detergent presoaks.

At the Stratford Festival, peppering scripts with modern "in" jokes has become part of the success formula. With "The Miser," Kilburn joins the company of directors who can make a good classic comedy thrive on present laughter.

The master, Moliere, takes his pot shots at the conspicuous consumerism of Parisians in the 1660s. Charles Nolte adds a few spoofs at American society of the 1980s and William LeMassena in his masterful portrayal of the old French skinflint, Harpagon, shows us a timeless character familiar to any society.

LeMASSENA'S VOICE must rumble around inside him a good while before it reaches the air, like sound gathering resonance in the coils of a tuba. His voice is as unique as his timing, and his droll delivery balances the run-around slapstick humor and the buffoonery of the other peacock men in their ostentatious finery.

Le Massena's voice must rumble around inside him a good while before it reaches the air, like sound gathering resonance in the coils of a tuba.

The costumes aim to define character. Mostly they do. Harpagon's strapping son, Cleante (Michael Patterson), looks ludicrous in a curly wig and a black and white striped jumpsuit with fluorescent orange sash.

He could double for a foppish Clarabelle the Clown. In contrast, old Harpagon wears colorless garb suitable for a ragpicker. Even for high comedy, the contrast is a bit much.

When it comes to costumes, George Gitto's takes the cake. In fact, he looks like one — a multi-tiered birthday cake cascading with lavender and peach frosting flowers. He belongs on a debonair lamp.

The wonder of Guitto as an actor is that as outrageously as he's decked out, he maintains the dignity of his character, the wealthy Anselme to whom Harpagon hopes to marry his daughter, Elise (Dona Werner).

The lavender and orange colors carry over into the marble inlays on the walls of a once-elegant salon in Harpagon's house. The set isn't up to Meadow Brook's usual high standards.

FOR ONE THING, the marble walls seem to go on and on to cover the large stage and the monotony is punctuated only by a threadbare sofa and chair. Either less wall or more furniture would have given the eyes places to wander and focus.

Jayne Houdyshell is brilliant as Frosine, the matchmaker. She brings a bawdy vitality to the role and makes a simple line about the attributes of young men reverberate with innuendo. She may be a bit old to pair up with the servant, La Fleche (Wayne David Parker), but in the end the difference in their ages doesn't matter.

Jacques doubles as coachman and cook to Harpagon who's always trying to "conserve" cash. The monumental Joseph Reed as Jacques lays on the broad humor and even switches from cockney coachman accent to tempermental French chef accent to fit his task.

In classic comedy, everything must come right at the end, most often with a marriage. "The Miser" ends with not one but two impending marriages.

"Two for the price of one," says tightwad Harpagon. Moliere arranges for love to triumph over miserliness and if the arranging is a bit contrived, the shenanigans and satire along the way are what matter in this comedy classic.

Dameron: solid as a Rock

BY ALL rights, Dave Dameron should be the cockiest, most arrogant young man walking around Plymouth Salem High School these days.

Let's face it, he has done virtually everything he had set out to do when he joined the Rocks' wrestling team four years ago.

Last Saturday, the blond-haired, blue-eyed 126-pounder capped off a prolific high school career by winning the state Class A title in his weight class. He finished his career with a 148-34 record, 50-1 this season.

He is the winningest wrestler in Salem's proud wrestling history. He owns all but two individual school records.

This season, he eclipsed six team records (see graphic) — three of them held by John Beaudoin (most wins in a season, most points in a season and most pins in a career), two by Jeff Brown (most wins in a career and most team points in a career), and one held by Harry Walkley (most pins in a season).

ALL THESE accomplishments — plus his aggressive, overpowering style of wrestling, his tightly compacted, muscular physique and his impish good looks — have given him almost a legendary prominence within the wrestling community.

Such is his fame — a young girl approached him for an autograph at the Western Lakes league meet last month at Westland John Glenn. When he won the league title (for the third straight year), the Glenn cheerleaders fought amongst themselves for the privilege of presenting the championship medal to him. The girl who finally won out presented Dameron with both the medal and a lingering hug.

Such success has been the ruin of many high school athletes over the years. But success, like virtually every 126-pound wrestler in the state, hasn't been able to bring Dave Dameron down.

He is not cocky or arrogant. If anything, he's shy about his achievements and determined to work harder to achieve even more after high school.

HIS DREAM is to some day compete in the Olympics. He'll take his first step next weekend in Grand Rapids. He'll compete in a United States Wrestling Federation tournament — winners from which could be selected to a Michigan team heading for competition this summer in West Germany.

That dream, plus some unpleasant experiences both early and later in his career, have helped keep Dameron hungry and humble.

"The hardest thing I had with David was getting him to be confident in himself," said Salem wrestling coach Ron Krueger, who saw Dameron's potential four years ago and groomed and coaxed him into a state champion. "He was as good a wrestler last year as he was this year, but he lacked the experience and maturity that comes with being in the big competitions."

Dameron placed fifth in the state last year, somewhat of a disappointment. He had been ranked No. 1 in his class most of the season.

"THEY RANKED him No. 1 all year, but the minute somebody beat him, everyone turned on him," Krueger said. "This year, same thing. He's No. 1 and getting all the hoopla and attention, then he loses and everybody turns on him again. It's like everybody was always trying to predict who would beat him.

"I guess he took it all pretty good. He wound up No. 1."

There were other disappointments for Dameron along the way. He won 23 matches as a freshman, more than any other frosh in Salem history. He won 32 matches as a sophomore — but the midpoint of that sophomore season may have been the low point in Dameron's career.

He lost three straight one-point decisions to Todd Gattoni of archrival Plymouth Canton. Displayed on Dameron's refrigerator door at home were newspaper photos of Gattoni beating him — a haunting reminder.

"They were all real close matches," Dameron said, still remembering. "He just had more experience than me. It was disappointing, but it didn't bother me too much. I knew I had two more years to show what I could do."

ACTUALLY, HE showed what he could do in the league meet that season. He beat Gattoni for the championship, 1-0 in overtime.

From that point, Dameron became an overpowering force in Observerland wrestling.

"He's really strong, he became confident, he's good with his moves, he's got a good upper body attack and he's super quick," Krueger said. "He's certainly one of the two best wrestlers I ever had (the other being Beaudoin). I hate to do all that 'who's the best' thing. I'll just say that it's going to be a while before anyone gets a shot at his records."

Dameron pointed his entire senior season toward winning the state meet. He suffered a frightening setback, losing the district title to Ann Arbor Huron's Andy McNaughton. But Dameron came back to win the regional and took a No. 1 seed into the state finals last Saturday.

"THERE WAS a lot of pressure," Dameron said. "Everything I had done for four years leaned to that moment. It just made me want to work harder. I had to win."

He did. He beat Mark Smith of Holt 4-2. Smith had knocked off McNaughton earlier in the tournament. But the way Dameron was wrestling Saturday, it may not have mattered who he wrestled.

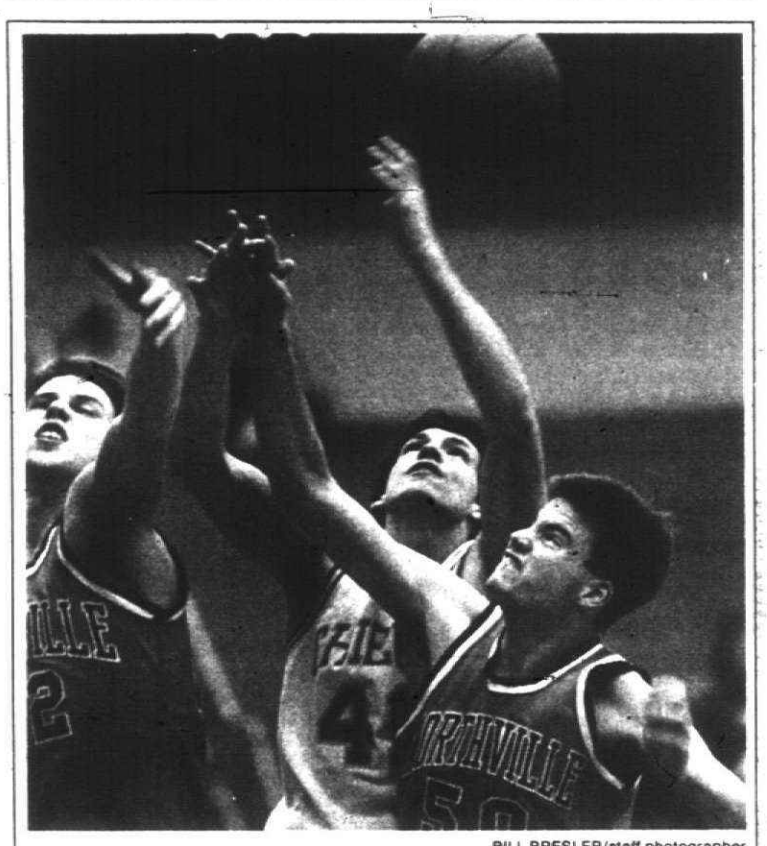

"He was in control of himself," Krueger said. "He wasn't wild like he has a tendency to be. He stayed within himself and took the points when he could get them."

Dameron is hot property for major college wrestling programs. The universities of Michigan, Indiana and Ohio State are among those in pursuit. Krueger mentioned sending a letter to the nation's No. 1 college team, Iowa. "I think he could help them," Krueger said.

RIGHT NOW, Dameron is uncertain about which school he'll attend. He is enjoying his success and preparing for the federation meet in Grand Rapids. But somewhere in his mind, the dream lives: Olympics — 1988.

Don't bet against him.

Said Krueger: "Hey, if he gets with a good college coach, I don't see anything stopping him."

Mies' brilliance for nought in loss

basketball

Somewhere, in between a courageous 28-point performance by Joel Mies, another in a series of well-played defensive games, and an effective coaching strategy, Plymouth Canton found time to lose a basketball game Monday night.

For the third time this season, Northville nipped the Chiefs. This time the score was 53-49; this time the loss ended Canton's season.

Northville advances to the semifinal round of the Class A district tournament at Canton. The Mustangs were to have played Novi at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Actually, it's simple to pinpoint the time at which Canton let the game slip away. It occurred during a seven-minute span from the end of the second quarter to midway through the third.

IN THAT span, Northville erased a 29-16 deficit with a 15-0 run. Canton turned the ball over 10 times and missed six shots.

wrestling

Two state champions, two teams among the top 10 and 10 wrestlers in the top four — Observerland did mighty fine at the state Class A wrestling tournament at Grand Valley State College Saturday.

As expected, Temperance-Bedford won the title with 110 points. Hazel Park was second with 80 and Lansing Eastern was third with 62. (See statistical summary.)

Redford Catholic Central, the No. 1 team in Observerland, placed fourth with 60 points and Plymouth Salem (No. 2 in Observerland) placed seventh with 54.

Others placing were Westland John Glenn (16th with 30 points), Livonia Churchill (19th with 26) and Farmington (tied with Brother Rice for 24th with 24 points).

"We're really pleased," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "Our goal was to get back up into the top 10 and we did that. We were only a point out of fifth and six out of fourth."

THE MAIN man for Salem was 126-pounder Dave Dameron. Ranked No. 1 througout the season, Dameron made good on the rating by topping Holt's Mark Smith 4-2 in the finals. Dameron was 50-1 on the season with 41 falls.

Brother Dennis also had a successful meet. At 112, the junior placed third, beating Hazel Park's David Sayler 1-0 in overtime.

"Our goal for Dennis was third or better," Krueger said. "He was sensational. I had been thinking about retiring from coaching after this year, but Dennis told me if I stayed, he'd win it all next year. I've got to stay at least one more year."

Salem's Jamie Woochuk placed fourth at 185.

AS PROUD as Krueger was of his own wrestlers, he was especially proud of his son. Lee Krueger, a freshman at Redford Catholic Central, placed fourth in the state at 167 pounds.

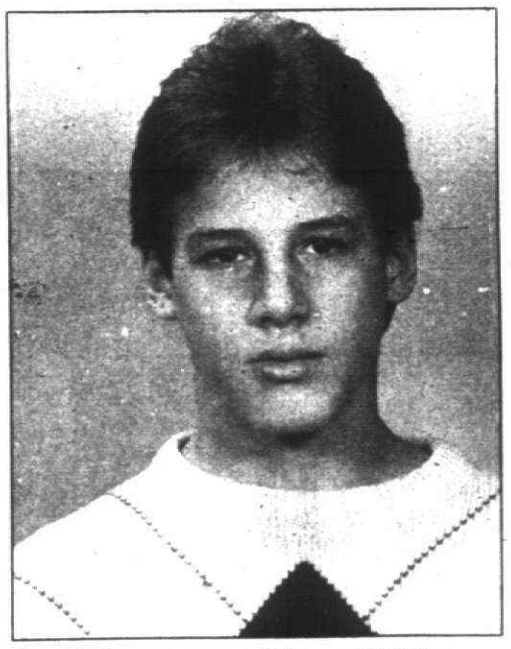

"It's been quite a year," Krueger said. "To place three kids in the state meet, place seventh as a team, and to have my own son do so well — it's been nice."

Krueger couldn't help make one more observation: "Do you know where we would have placed if we had my son? Second."

The other Observerland state champion was Churchill's 112-pounder, Salem Yaffai. He finished off his undefeated season with a 7-1 decision over Lansing Eastern's Tom Morris.

For CC, Mike Gentile was runner-up at 98 losing to Hazel Park Jeff Saferian 10-7. At 119, Jason Wiebeck placed third, topping Gibraltar Carlson's Mark Statler 11-3.

John Glenn's Dan Schimansky (145) and Chris Zimmerman (heavyweight) each placed fourth. Farmington's Dan Parilo placed fourth at 198.

Dennis Dameron gave Salem a lift Saturday by taking a third place at 112 pounds at the state Class A wrestling meet.

OCC cagers grab conference title

Just one day after its most impressive performance of the season, Oakland Community College's mens basketball team sunk to the brink of defeat in a game it should have won handily.

At least it can be said OCC did win, escaping with a 77-76 victory over Southwestern CC in the Michigan Junior College Athletic Association finals Saturday at Kalamazoo Valley CC.

"Our players really earned the victory," said Fred Thomann, who has assumed the coaching duties for Tom McPhillips, who is on medical leave. "I really believe it's hard coming back after an emotional game against an arch-rival."

The arch-rival was Highland Park, which beat OCC twice during the regular season. Last Friday OCC thrashed its nemesis, setting up the showdown with Southwestern CC of the Western Conference for the MJCAA title.

SCC DIDN'T possess HPCC's talent, but that didn't stop it from battling OCC throughout. The Raiders trailed throughout the first half and into the second before making a run that put them in front by six.

The game remained tight until the final two minutes. OCC was up by seven, but missed free throws, a bad shot, a turnover and two fouls that sent SCC to the line and cut OCC's lead to 77-76 with a second left. SCC got the ball back on an OCC turnover, but its final, desperation shot missed, preserving the Raider win.

Northville sends Canton packing

"Hey, we knew Canton would be tough," Northville coach Omar Harrison said. "This was the third time we've played them. We knew it would be hard to beat them, we knew Joel Mies would shoot the ball well. The thing that surprised us a little bit was that they came out in a zone defense."

That surprised a lot of people. Northville has beaten many teams this year with its perimeter shooting game. But Canton coach Tom Niemi also knew that his team couldn't match up with Northville's big people inside, particularly 6-6 Matt Hinds.

So, he gambled that Northville's guns would be off target. He was correct.

Northville made just nine of its first 28 shots in the first half against Canton's tightly-packed zone. Hinds was held to one field goal until the final three minutes of the half.

"DEFENSIVELY, WE did exactly what we had to do," Niemi said. "We had to do what we did because of our injuries (starter Roger Trice sat out the last two weeks of the season with a pulled hamstring muscle). We had to try and get more size on the boards. And it worked."

Harrison made an adjustment of his own that helped stem the tide in the second quarter. He inserted Steve Grant and Dave McCreadie into the lineup — the duo gave the Mustangs exactly what they needed: a swift kick in the behind.

"Our bench gave us a big lift," Harrison said. "They were able to get the ball inside."

Hinds scored six points in the final three minutes of the second quarter and another eight in the third quarter. He finished with 20 points.

Teammate Don Norton also heated up in the second half. His 12 second-half points (including a crucial eight in the final quarter) gave him 20 for the night.

CANTON TURNED the ball over seven times in its first nine possessions of the third quarter. Miraculously, when Mies ended the 15-0, seven-minute drought with a short jumper, the score was tied 31-31.

"Mental errors," Niemi said of the drought. "We were coming down and turning the ball over ourselves. We were forgetting our assignments at times. But we stayed in the game."

basketball

Mies hit a jumper to put Canton ahead 41-39 at the start of the final quarter. He then hit a free throw after Northville was assessed a technical foul for slapping the backboard.

But Canton made two turnovers and missed a pair of free throws in its next four possessions while Northville ran off eight straight points to surge in front 47-42.

WITH TWO minutes left, Mies hit another jumper to pull the team within a basket, 48-46.

The teams traded free throws and with 30 seconds left, Canton had the ball and a chance to tie the game. With 17 seconds left, Canton's Jeff Lyle (scoreless on the night) fired an errant shot from the top of the key.

Hinds and Norton, fittingly, polished off the Chiefs by hitting two free throws each in the final seconds.

"Offensively, we made some real bad choices," Niemi said. "You can't do that and win. We made too many turnovers and missed too many critical free throws down the stretch."

Canton was two for eight from the line in the fourth quarter.

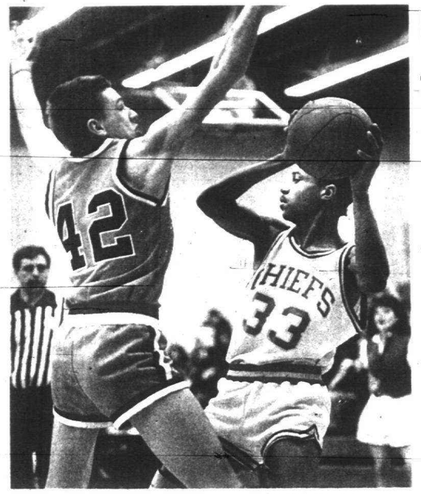

Still, the loss only partially dims a brilliant effort by Mies. Playing his final game as a Chief, playing on a badly sprained and heavily taped ankle, Mies's 28 points came off a blistering 12 of 17 from the floor.

"HE PLAYED with a lot of heart," Niemi said. "He played like the all-conference player he is."

Mies was not selected to the all-Western Lakes basketball team this year — a fact that peeved Niemi and surprised several other area coaches.

Tyrone Reeves added 10 points for the Chiefs who bow out with a 10-11 record — 10-6 since Christmas.

"We played hard and played well with what we had," Niemi said. "We were the surprise team of the league this year, no one can deny that. I'm proud of these kids."

Rocks jolt Glenn from tournament

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

If it was Plymouth Salem's intent to lull Westland John Glenn to sleep Wednesday night in the semifinals of the Class A district basketball tournament at Plymouth Canton, the strategy worked to perfection.

"Oh sure, we wanted them to think it was a junior varsity game," joked Salem coach Bob Brodie.

The laughs came easily for Brodie after the Rocks stunned No. 2-ranked Glenn, 60-57.

If you were a betting person, you might have staked large sums on Glenn coming into the game. Salem was 9-10, Glenn 15-5 and fresh off its Western Lakes championship win at Harrison last Friday.

If spirit was to be the key, Salem was indeed in trouble. The Rockets came out visibly pumped up, with their loud and rowdy group of fans (mostly students) waving and stomping.

SALEM DRAGGED through its pregame drills — its small group of supporters (mostly adults) sat quietly, chatting among themselves.

Even the Salem cheerleaders were quiet. There were only two on hand to begin the game, three others strolled in sometime during the first quarter. They never once went onto the court to lead a cheer.

As you might expect, the Rockets pounced all over Salem in the first half. They completely controlled the game and led by as many as 10 points. You had to wonder if Salem might sleepwalk its way right out of the 1986 season.

"At halftime we just told the players that there was nothing we could show them now that would help," Brodie said. "It's all a matter of intangibles, and the No. 1 intangible is intensity. We simply weren't playing with any."

LITTLE DID Salem know Glenn was about to take a catnap of its own — a fatal one — in the second half.

Two minutes into the third quarter, Glenn led 36-26. That's when Salem woke up.

The team connected on six straight shots and ran off a 12-3 spurt to pull within a point. Jumpers by Bryan Kearis (whose six third-quarter points spearheaded the rally) and Tony Moore helped Salem to a 42-41 lead going into the final quarter.

Glenn scored the first six points of the fourth quarter to retake control. With 4:52 left, Glenn led 49-44.

From that point on, Salem outscored Glenn 16-8. Paul Makara's jumper with 1:40 left gave Salem the lead, 52-51. The Rocks then hung onto that lead draining eight straight free throws in the final 34 seconds — the last six calmly poured in by Mike Hale.

"WE LOST this game at the free throw line," said a disconsolate Glenn coach Gordie Davis. "We were just horrible (the Rockets hit 15 of 24 from the line, Salem was 10 of 13). We had a couple opportunities to score inside late in the game, we did what we wanted to do, but the ball wouldn't drop."

Steve Hawley, a junior, scored 24 points before fouling out in the final seconds to lead Glenn. Tony Boles added 14.

The loss marks the second straight year Glenn has been upset in district play. Last year at Salem, the team was ousted by Northville.

"We're just snakebit out here," Davis said. "I thought we were the better team last year and I thought we were again tonight. I just don't know what it is."

For Salem, Hale's 16 led the way. Makara added 14 and Kearis 10.

"When we are playing, we are one of the best 10-10 around," Brodie said. "But we're up and we're down."

The Rocks will take on Northville at 7:30 p.m. Friday night for the district championship. Northville, who won its semifinal game last night, 77-66 against Novi, has bested Salem twice this season.

Eagles advance in 'D'

Pat McCarthy is on a tear and he's put his Plymouth Christian basketball team in the semifinals of the Class D district at Taylor Baptist Park.

McCarthy scored 36 points Tuesday night to lead the Eagles to a 77-68 win over host Baptist Park. He scored 31 Friday night against Ann Arbor Greenhills.

The Eagles will face defending Class D state champs Allen Park Inter City Baptist Thursday at 8 p.m.

"They are an awesome team," said Eagles coach Jeff Cook. "We will have to try and slow the ball down and take layups and high percentage shots. They go 6-6, 6-4, 6-2 across the front and our tallest player is 6-2."

The Eagles will take a 17-3 record into the game.

McCarthy hit 16 of 20 free throws Tuesday en route to the 36-point night. Rod Windle added 15 points and Jim McCarthy 10.

Rich Nascimento scored 29 points for Taylor Baptist Park.

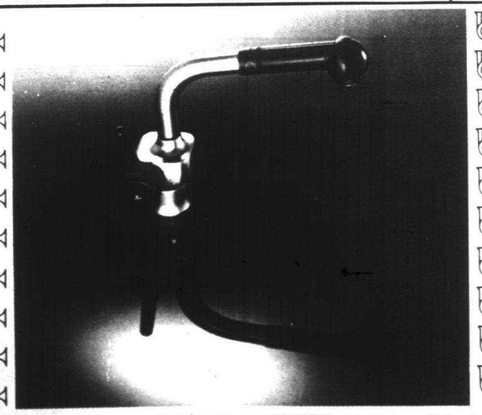

"We will go into Thursday's game looking to be successful," Cook said. "Hopefully, the winning will take care of itself."

4 area spike teams advance

Four Observerland volleyball teams have advanced to regional play on Saturday.

Three area Class A teams — Garden City, Redford Bishop Borgess and Westland John Glenn — all captured districts and will converge on Wayne Memorial High School, along with Trenton, in a four-team regional.

Another area team, Livonia Ladywood, advanced by winning the Class B district at Allen Park, defeating Southgate Aquinas in a mild surprise, 16-4, 15-13.

Catholic League champion Borgess (36-5), survived the stiffest test, winning its own district by defeating two-time state finalist and Schoolcraft Invitational champion Livonia Stevenson, 14-16, 15-11, 15-5.

"It was a great match against a great team," said Borgess coach Jerry Abraham of the finals. "It was a power game all the way and we were fortunate to stick it out and win the match."

STEVENSON COACH Lee Cagle said fatigue may have led to his team's undoing. The second game lasted 45 minutes.

"It was one of the most outstanding matches of the season," he said. "It was a great match even though we lost. The girls came out with their heads held high.

"When we got down to the end I think we were too tired. We didn't have everybody for a full practice during the week because of various ailments."

The match pitted two of the area's strongest hitters, junior Kristine Bailey of Stevenson and Debbie McDonald of Borgess.

"I'm not sure we stopped Bailey all day," Abraham said.

McDonald, meanwhile, had 17 ace spikes in 28 attempts and got strong hitting support from teammates Beth Zacharski and Cherie Johnson.

Defensively, Cheryl Livingston and Stephanie Kielb stood out for Borgess along with setter Anne Terski and reserve Kathy Stabler.

Stevenson, which bowed out at 32-7, advanced to the district finals with straight-set wins over Redford Union and Farmington Mercy.

Borgess, meanwhile, defeated Livonia Franklin (15-5, 15-7) and Livonia Churchill (15-10, 15-5).

GARDEN CITY, had little trouble winning the Dearborn Fordson district, defeating the host school, 15-3, 15-12.

The Cougars, who rearranged their defense and used a key dink shot from Mary Hebert, rallied from a 12-9 deficit in the second game to beat the Tractors.

Earlier in the day, GC whipped a pair of Detroit teams, Northwestern (15-3, 15-7) and Chadsey (15-0, 15-1).

"Our strongest match was in the predistricts with (Dearborn) Edsel Ford," said GC coach Tom Teeters, whose team is 43-5 overall. "Then we played two weak teams and that put us asleep for the Fordson match."

Hitters Missey Ward and Marla Evans controlled play against Fordson, while Mikey Gorak (defense), Denise Kokowicz (blocking), Amy Thompson (serving) and Nikki Stubbs (setting) also stood out in the Fordson victory.

SATURDAY'S REGIONAL pairings at Wayne pits Garden City against Wolverine A Conference champion Trenton, while Glenn, a member of the Western Lakes circuit, takes on Borgess in the other semifinal. Both matches start at 2 p.m., followed by the finals at 3:30 p.m.

Glenn (30-10) captured the Ypsilanti district tourney by beating crosstown rival Wayne for the third time this season, 13-15, 15-5, 15-4. It was also the Rockets' second straight district crown.

In the semifinals, Glenn beat host Ypsi (15-5, 15-12), while Wayne toppled Adrian (15-11, 15-5). The Rockets also defeated Plymouth Salem (15-4, 15-12).

"The regional well balanced and it's going to be a challenge," said Glenn coach Wendy Reynolds. "We split with Borgess earlier in the season."

Senior co-captains Carol Hall and Kelly Watts shined for Glenn, along with Karen and Kristi Creciolo, Jeanine and Kristy Ross, Jenny Okon, Karen Galea, Jenny Okon and and Stacy Graham.

Darnell to fight Monday despite head injury

Steve Darnell, Livonia's unbeaten middleweight, will go on as scheduled for Monday night's Hagler-Hearns undercard at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas despite suffering an injury in a bout last week.

The 11-0-1 Darnell required 10 stitches to close a deep gash above the eye, suffered when he was butted by Cincinnati's Jeff McCall in a card Tuesday, Feb. 25 at the Premier Center in Sterling Heights.

Darnell was awarded a second round TKO when McCall was charged with biting the Livonian in the neck.

"I was a little down, but I got the stitches out today (Monday) and it feels real good," Darnell said. "It's not totally healed, but the doctor knew I wanted to fight on the card, so he gave me the go-ahead. He knows my next fight is very important and it's going to give me a lot of exposure."

DARNELL WILL FACE Israel Acosta in a preliminary bout to the Marvin Hagler-John Mugabi middleweight championship fight. Detroit's Tommy Hearns, will also take on James Shuler as part of the big card, which is slated to be broadcast worldwide on closed circuit television.

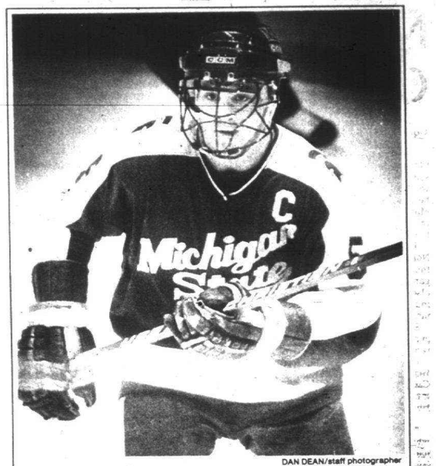

"I was lucky to get the win (against McCall), but I'll take it anyway," Darnell said.

OCC wins state crown

Gary Holt, who netted 31 points in the win over HPCC, paced OCC with 21 points.

The win makes OCC the No. 1 seed going into the NJCAA regional Division II tournament. The Raiders open today at 1:30 p.m. against host-team Kalamazoo Valley CC. Other teams competing are Delta CC and Henry Ford CC from the Eastern Conference and SCC, Lake Michigan CC, Grand Rapids JC, Muskegon CC and Kellogg CC from the Western Conference.

Mair finished second in the league. He also managed a fourth-place finish in the 500 free (4:52.45), trimming nine seconds off his previous best, and recorded the fastest 200 free time of the season for the Britons (1:49.69).

CC swimmers take Catholic League title

John Kovach and Sean McDermott each figured in three first-place finishes Sunday as Redford Catholic Central defended its Catholic League boys swim crown, winning its ninth under coach De Loris Yager.

The Shamrocks won the eight-team meet at Oakland Community College with 344 points, edging rival Birmingham Brother Rice, which accumulated 319.

Kovach broke one league record in the 100-yard butterfly (52.78) and teamed up with Jim Surowiec, Eric Forton and Jon Teal to shatter the league mark in the 200 medley relay (1:40.66), best the record of 1:42.77 held by CC since 1980.

Tavana rises above trauma

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

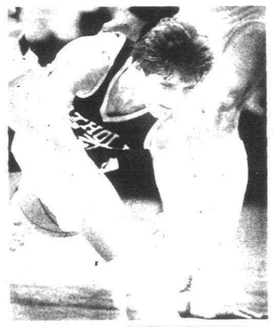

Like most persons his age, Paul Tavana is given to laughter.

The Redford Catholic Central senior basketball player giggles when he reveals that he stays up to 12:30 a.m. watching "The Three Stooges." He even chuckles about getting bathroom time with five females in the same house.

But the lighter side of life has not always followed Tavana. If there is a school of hard knocks, Tavana has earned a Ph.D.

Life deals enough curves to a 13-year-old on the edge of puberty. Imagine Tavana at 13, when his father died of a heart attack.

IT WAS the third parent he'd loved — and lost.

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Catholic Central's Paul Tavana has overcome an overload of personal tragedy to star on the Observerland basketball court.

When Tavana was 5, his natural mother died of a heart attack. At 7, his stepmother died.

But with all the trauma and heartache he's endured, Tavana at 17 doesn't appear a bit scarred or cynical.

Instead, he just dribbles the ball harder and carries on.

"He's a throwback to the old days," Catholic Central coach Bernie Holowicki said. "He has a sense of loyalty and a sense of respect. He places himself second and not first ahead of anyone. His sister Mary has done a tremendous job."

THE ACCOLADES directed toward Mary Tavana are not unwarranted. She picked up the pieces after the death of their father.

She moved back to the Westland family home, as did two of her other sisters, and became the legal guardian of Tavana. He and his brother John are the youngest of the eight Tavana children and the only boys.

"The day my dad passed away, she was my sister," Tavana said. "The next day she was being my parent."

The transition, as expected, was difficult at first. And Tavana admitted he didn't make it any easier.

As time went on, he became more receptive. Now, Tavana admires his sister for taking charge the way she did.

"I'm glad she did," Tavana said. "We probably would've went to our godparents, and the family would've been split up."

INSTEAD, THE family stayed together. Mary, who attends most of her brother's games, attributes the closeness of the family for making the adjustments easier.

"It really hasn't been that hard," said Mary, 28, who calls her brother a sincere and somewhat shy person. "We've been a very, very close family. It just seems sort of natural that the family stayed together."

As a result, Tavana has been more than able to keep it together on the basketball court. The 6-3 forward has been more than just a focal point in the Shamrocks' season.

A scorer, Tavana also can keep opponents from doing the same. CC has trimmed 10 to 12 points off its opponent's score with a tough man-to-man defense.

The perpetrator in all of it has been Tavana, whom Holowicki calls "an excellent defensive player and quick leaper."

BUT TAVANA, in the past, had been somewhat overzealous in keeping opponents in check. Last year, he fouled out of 15 games.

This year, he's only been sent out of five games.

"I was too aggressive," Tavana said. "This year I had to stay in the game."

"He's a very aggressive player," Holowicki agreed. "That's his style. You can't hold him back. He only knows one way: go, go all out."

His tenacity on the court might be traced to the past. Mary believes that sports have been a way to vent feelings for both Tavana and brother John, who's a football player and wrestler at CC.

"PAUL DOESN'T express his feelings much," she said. "He keeps them to himself. Sports is an outlet for both of them."

"I've begun to learn to deal with it," Tavana said of his parents' deaths. "I'm able to talk about it now. Before, I used to break out in tears when I tried to talk about it.

"The hardest time is during basketball when we had parent's night," he added as his voice began to trail off.

But he looks to the future with renewed optimism. Currently, he's considering Baldwin Wallace College near Cleveland along with Hillsdale and Grand Valley. He plans to major in criminal justice because "I've wanted to be a cop or in the FBI," he said.

Holowicki thinks Tavana could be a good role player on the Mid-American Conference level.

"HE'D BE a guy stopping the other team's player," said the CC coach. "He could be a regular off-guard or off-forward."

Tavana enjoys that role now.

"I like guarding their best player because I can shut them down and score more points than them," he said.

Tavana's fondest recollection playing for CC was when the Shamrocks upset then Catholic-League powerhouse Birmingham Brother Rice in his sophomore year. He scored 18 points in the game, but more importantly: "I was playing well defensively."

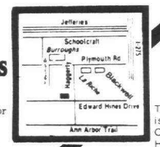

He's taking more than a few memories with him from CC. Mary credits the school for helping her raise both Paul and John in their teen years.

She also believes it's a good idea for Tavana to go away to college. The adjustment of being away from home shouldn't be difficult since, according to Mary, he's already fairly independent.

Luxury barge is just right for lazy-day touring

This is the second in a two-part series about floating down the Thames River in England aboard the luxury hotel barge ACTIEF.

IT WAS A WEEK before the Royal Henley Regatta, held every June, and the Thames River around Temple Island was alive with racing shells. The coxswain was small, with an insistent, chanting voice; the rowers bigger, stronger, pulling, splashing, moving each shell like a knife through water.

The white posts made two straight lines down the river, pointing like arrows toward the square-church that dominates this famous English town of Henley-on-Thames.

Yachts lined one side of the river. Reviewing tents were already set up on the other side, waiting for the royalty and the boat-loving commoners who would sit on them.

This was our third day aboard the ACTIEF, a luxury hotel barge that makes regular one-week cruises on the Thames River. Henley-on-Thames is one of the barge's regular mooring places on the river, right in the center of town opposite the ancient main street, but as we tried to land a man in a gray suit raced out, waving his arms.

Iris Jones
contributing travel writer

"Actief! Actief! No mooring this week because of the regatta!" Captain Bill Almond, his head rising above the back of the 126-foot-long hotel barge, did a U-turn in the river, blocking its width with our bulk.

There was one long parking spot on the north side of the river, where a man stood on the grass bank and waved us in, while the ducks paddled out of the way.

Lots of drivers talk to themselves when they drive and Capt. Bill is no exception. "Wednesday! We're going to have to stop all these navigational acrobatics on Wednesday. Okay, crew, lets try again. I'll put the nose into the bank you jump."

THE NOSE hit the bank softly and Julie, one of the three female crew members, jumped ashore. Capt. Bill raced to the front, checked the tree we would tie up to, and raced back. Katie was ready with the rope.

"Lock it up Katie, but don't let us go anywhere."

Soon the eight passengers were climbing the gangplank to the grass, young Andy raced to a fence to pat a horse, the two Australians gathered their postcards for mailing, and all of us headed across the field to the road that leads into town.

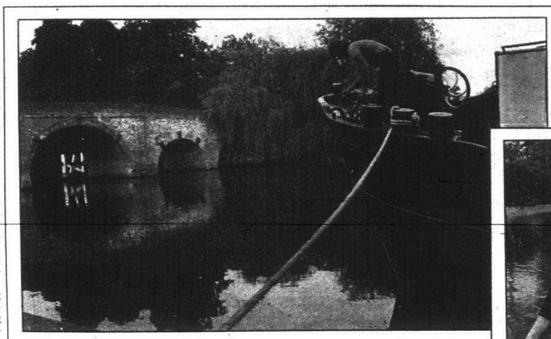

It was our first real chance to shop since we left Windsor Castle behind us two days before and the most rivergoing action we had seen on this peaceful river.

travel

We finished our shopping in Henley and were soon back on the river. There were homemade bread smells coming from the galley. A bridge game was soon in progress. One less-than active soul sat on the prow of the boat watching the ducks.

I started thinking about opening the paperback book brought along to read on the river. But first, I decided to take a nap. Henley was all the excitement I could take for one day.

As we approached March Lock we could see the huge DANGER sign on the long wooden walking bridge over the weir, where water foams furiously through the sluices. Weirs were built centuries ago for fishermen and have always been a problem for Thames boat captains.

This is a leisurely and interesting way to see England, by the 'back door' of the river.

The Actief ties up near a bridge and skipper Bill Almond is all smiles.

MARSH LOCK looked narrow for this long barge, but Capt. Bill steered us neatly in between the flower gardens so popular among lockmasters. Julie rushed forward, corkscrew curls flying over blue jeans and a navy blue sweater, and as usual she charmed the lockmaster.

Sometimes it was just with a smile, sometimes with a coffee or a beer. We all hopped off for our regular walk around the lock.

At each lock a neat brick house sides the lock, neatly tended and often with elaborate gardens. Being a lockmaster is not a well-paid job, and it's as far as you can go in the lock business, but its a good life in its own way.

The Thames is navigable to Lechlade near Gloucestershire, 143 miles from London, so there are a lot of locks, although we only see a few of them. We aren't much more than half way along our 50-mile route and it has taken us three days of sitting on the boat watching the world go by.

THERE ARE footpaths all along the Thames and the energetic among us use them as bicycle paths. The ACTIEF carries its bicycles strapped to the front of the boat for instant action. These footpaths were once towpaths used to haul boats upriver. Now they are like cleared botanical gardens for walkers and bikers along the river.

Those who went on foot or by bicycle towards the village of Sonning were ahead of those of us who stayed aboard.

Capt. Bill didn't want to disturb the picnickers on the bank at Sonning so he tied up to a tree 100 yards beyond his usual landing. We were warned to watch out for the traffic that roared across the nearby stone bridge. We were re-entering the 20th century long enough for a pint of beer at the Old Bell Inn, "oldest inn in England."

"There can't be more than 100 of those," Capt. Bill said cheerfully as we drank.

BY 10 P.M., back aboard, we watched the misted trees make dark shapes against the gray but still light sky, with identical reflections on the steel gray water below. Cruisers and yachts made bulky shapes nearby.

At 5 a.m. on Wednesday, our third day on the river, the sound of falling raindrops hit the river outside the eye-level window, accompanied by the early morning launching sounds of the ducks. We went through the next lock in the rain.

Julie opened it, Katie closed it, Sue handled the ropes. The lockkeeper has business hours but the Thames is a 24-hour public waterway, so any licensed boat person can turn the wheel according to instructions, fill the lock and open the other side as long as the lock is left empty and the gates locked.

WE MOVED on. The sun came out. Mapledurham, believed to be Toad Hall in the story "Wind in the Willows," was ahead of us. So was Reading, Pangbourne, Goring Gap and Oxford.

This is a leisurely and interesting way to see England, by the "back door" of the river, with a minimum of touring and a maximum of lazy-day experiences. If you would like to know more about floating down rivers on luxury hotel barges, contact your travel agent or Floating Through Europe, 271 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Hotel barges float on the Thames and the Avon rivers in England, and on waterways in Holland, Belgium, Germany and France. Costs are about $200 a day per person including all meals but not including alcoholic beverages or tips.

Ann Loveland's paintings, such as the one pictured above, are strong on design and color. Shown in her studio, at right, Loveland enjoys working on many different projects at the same time. The large framed piece on the floor is a carefully done collage in black, gold, reds and other primary colors. She also teaches in the Livonia VAAL program.

Return to art brings fulfillment

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

Ann Loveland has a way with color. That's obvious as soon as she opens the door to the house which she and her husband, writer Noel Loveland, recently built and furnished in a far corner of West Bloomfield.

The immediate message is that here is a couple who take great pleasure in rich, warm color.

That pleasure is further reinforced in her studio, adjacent to his, where there are several paintings that she will have in the Sholem Aleichem art show, March 7-9 at the Shenandoah Country Club of West Bloomfield and many in various stages of completion.

To a point her story is a familiar one. She was born and raised in Detroit, was an art major at Wittenburg College, Springfield, Ohio, studied at Eastern Michigan University, taught grade school in the Farmington district, married and settled down in Livonia to raise her family.

When her last child was in school full time, she said, "I really got serious about my art." That included some classes at Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association of Birmingham.

NOW, WITH the children on their own, she maintains a challenging teaching and painting schedule. She recently remarried, moved to West Bloomfield, but still teaches for the Visual Arts Association of Livonia, VAAL, and is an active member of the Farmington Artists Club.

And while she particularly likes teaching in the VAAL program, she said, "They're mostly adults who are very serious painters. What I really like is just painting or drawing. I like a water-based medium best."

To both acrylics and watercolor, Loveland brings a strong sense of design, and a love for pattern and color. And while they could be termed decorative, a term she used herself and said she doesn't object to, many of them move beyond that to combinations of interesting grid patterns, elements of impressionism and realistic still lifes. Her ability to bring out strong, rich, lush colors is certainly one of her strengths.

Essentially Loveland's paintings lift the spirits and please the eye. She's a gardener who has a great appreciation for the flowers she often uses for subject matter and she isn't afraid of using watercolor on folio size Arches paper.

Just recently she began to do collage. Her appproach to that is meticulous and design-oriented, but she doesn't feel she's really hit her stride in that medium yet.

Loveland's work is available at the Collector's Corner of the Toledo Musem of Art, in the Sales and Rental Gallery of the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, at the Detroit Artists Market and March 7-9 at the Sholem Aleichem art show at Shenandoah Country Club.

Art show opens Friday

Publisher builds an exciting lifestyle

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

Jim Hasenau has built an exciting lifestyle with the same care he used to lavish on constructing houses and making models.

Hasenau, a lifelong metropolitan area resident, now in his 60s, model maker, builder, teacher and strong individualist with a naturally inquiring mind, milked all of his skills to the fullest to become an author, publisher and inveterate world traveler.

His publishing firm is Holland House Press of Northville and of the dozen books on his current order list, eight were written by Hasenau. The most popular, "Build Your Own Home," which Hasenau wrote and illustrated, has sold more than 200,000 copies since 1972, he said.

His most recent, "Toys Wooden," with lots of illustrations and easy-to-follow directions, came out last year and will soon have a sequel.

HASENAU'S FATHER worked with his young son teaching him building skills and model making.

"I was brought up on 'Popular Mechanics' and 'Popular Science,'" he said, "if he (his father) hadn't of held my hand, I'd have been just another amateur."

But, as a result of his father's guidance, these skills are second nature to Hasenau, who worked as an automobile model maker for about 10 years.

"I was pretty good at it — in fact, I was real good at it," he said.

During World War II he was a navigation instructor and later completed his master's in education at the University of Michigan and taught in Detroit for two years, "until a guy pulled a gun on me and I said 'that's it'."

Even while he had his own building company, he was thinking he'd really rather write and travel the world than build and sell houses.

He found the opportunity almost by accident. When his son, John (now a veteranian), was a kid, he raised gerbils. Soon they found markets for gerbils and raising them became a business. Hasenau wrote his first book on how to raise gerbils in 1970 and published it through a vanity press.

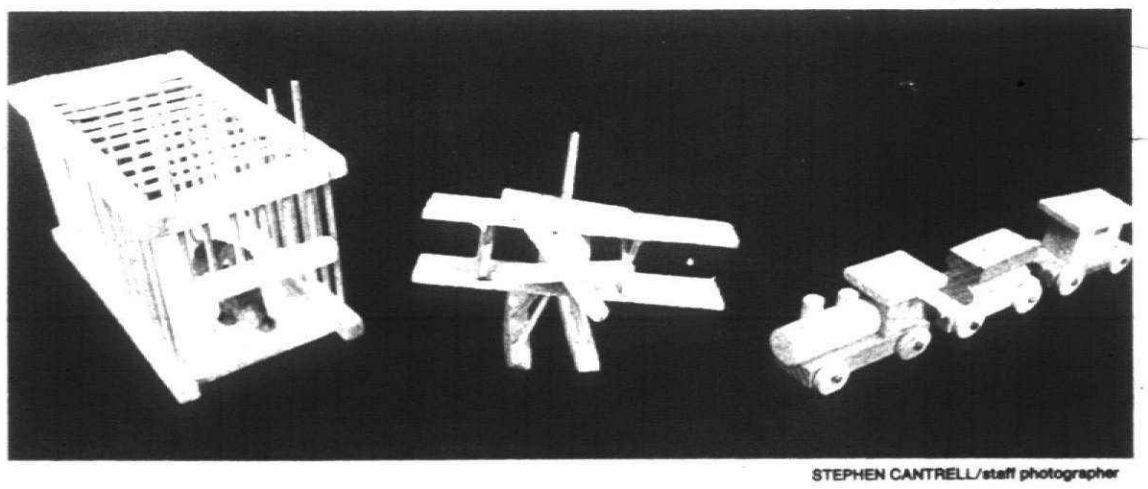

HE WAS dissatisfied with the way the book was promoted and distributed and decided he could do it better himself. And Holland House Press was born.

And now ideas and information for books multiply almost as fast as those gerbils did.

He and his wife, Florence Ann, always carry a suitcase of books with them as they make their frequent trips to the far corners of the world, "We always sell all the books we take," he said.

For instance, while updating the information in his book, "Travel by Charter," he may plan stops to pick up ideas for other books. Some of the ideas in "Toys Wooden" are modifications of things he saw in Germany.

Hasenau's books vary in price, "Build Your Own Home and "Toys Wooden" are both $9.95. For information and/or a book list, contact Holland House Press, P.O. Box 42, Northville, 48167, 273-0223.

STEPHEN CANTRELL/staff photographer

The wooden toys shown, which Jim Hasenau made, are some of many in his book, "Toys Wooden." There are a variety of animals that can be made to fit in the cage at right. Hasenau says his book is the only one he knows of that includes instructions for making wheels.

J. James Hasenau, publisher, writer, world traveler, has also been a model maker, teacher and home builder.

Pro Musica Series hosts rising star

Avigdor Zaromp

By Avigdor Zaromp
special writer

The Pro Musica series presented its latest program Friday at the Detroit Institute of Arts recital hall with the young violinist Joshua Bell.

Having performed with the Philadephia Symphony at the age of 14, Bell is considered one of the most acclaimed, rising violin stars today.

Now 19 and a student at Indiana University, he has appeared with the major symphony orchestras in this country and was also on a tour to Europe.

He was accompanied by the extremely capable pianist, Angela Cheng, who has won numerous prizes and is presently studying at Indiana University under Menahem Pressler.

The high caliber of the artists was matched by the attractive items on the program. These consisted of a Sonatensatz in C Major by Brahms, the Sonata in A Major for Violin and Piano by Faure, the Chaconne from the partita in D minor for unaccompanied violin by Bach, "Nigun" by Ernest Bloch and the "Carmen Fantasy" by Sarasate.

THE BRAHMS selection is one of his lesser known works, which was his share of a sonata whose other movements were supposed to be supplied by other composers.

While the opening bars in the lower register sounded somewhat ambiguous, the quality of Bell's tone emerged soon enough. This quality was consistent through the program.

The one drawback in the first portion, which included the Faure sonata as well, was the fact the fully open piano lid resulted in too loud a sound.

This was particularly true in the Faure sonata. Some of its passages and harmonies tend to remind me of the Franck sonata in the same key, but its texture should be more subdued than this performance suggested. The closing of the lid in the second portion was beneficial.

Among the works for unaccompanied violin, Bach's chaconne is among the most challanging and, in my opinion, the most musically perfect. In addition to multiple stops, there is an intricate part-writing with alternation between the parts, requiring the kind of independence that is hard to achieve without a split personality.

While such independence wasn't complete in some of the variations, it was present in many others, indicating Bell to be on the right track.

UP TO THAT point, Bell's tone was detached and emotionally aloof, even though it was technically clean. With the Bloch piece, however, one could sense a lot more emotional involvement on his part. This was a warmup for the "Carmen Fantasy," which is technically ferocious.

The smooth and clear harmonics were of the kind that only few of the greatest masters of the instrument could successfully attempt. The bravura ending had the audience standing up cheering. Bell and Cheng returned to play a Kreisler tune for an encore.

Angela Cheng, whose role was somewhat overshadowed by that of Bell, deserves credit for her capable performance. She mastered the substantial demands in the Faure sonata, and her agile rendition of the scherzo was noteworthy. It is hoped that we shall be hearing more from these capable artists.

Kathryn Cooke and James Dunne, who will have leading roles in the Sunday performance of "Sleeping Beauty" at Southfield Lathrup High School, have danced together many times.

'Sleeping Beauty' to awaken

The Contemporary Civic Ballet and Southfield Symphony Orchestra will present "Sleeping Beauty" at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, March 9, at Southfield Lathrup High School, 19301 W. 12 Mile, east of Evergreen, Southfield.

Kathryn Cooke of Birmingham will dance the role of Aurora with James Dunne as the Prince. Conductor, Ervin Monroe will be on the podium. Rose Marie Floyd is artistic director of the Contemporary Civic Ballet Company.

Cooke is married to Kim Cooke, an attorney who will dance the role of one of Aurora's four princes. She began her ballet training at age three in England and has studied with Rose Marie Floyd since age nine. She completed her bachelor's degree in ballet at Indiana University and returned to teach and perform with the Contemporary Civic Ballet. She also performed in Scotland with the Scottish-American Ballet.

Floyd, named Michigan Dance Teacher of the Year in 1984, is president of the Cheechetti Council of America.

Joann Wenson, who has studied with Floyd since age five, will dance the role of the Lilac Fairy. She has a bachelor's degree from University of Cincinnati and was a member of the Cincinnati and Cleveland ballet companies.

Dunne, who has appeared with many major ballet companies, had the lead in the Broadway production of "All that Jazz."
