Trash haulers want more money

By Doug Funke
staff writer

The private company that hauls trash from houses in Plymouth and Canton townships has requested a rate increase of 23 percent from the former and 16 percent from the latter.

Canton Recycling, citing higher fees demanded by landfill operators, has asked for an increase to $4.35 per house per month in Plymouth and $3.59 per house per month in Canton.

Even though Canton Recycling has requested a rate increase, individual homeowners in Plymouth and Canton probably won't sustain higher direct, out-of-pocket expenses for the service in the immediate future.

Midwest Sanitation, a private firm that collects trash in the city of Plymouth, has informed city officials that it will pass on escalating landfill dumping costs as permitted in a three-year contract which expires in July of 1988.

City Manager Henry Graper said the city also could likely absorb the $50,000-70,000 increase for the rest of this year, but probably will have to raise the tax rate next year.

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP residents have paid $4 per month since Canton Recycling was awarded a non-exclusive trash collection contract in July of 1982.

That fee consists of actual charges from the trash hauler, $3.53 per month as of July 1.

It also includes a stabilization fee set by the township to establish an account to ensure continuity of service in the event of a large rate increase.

The stabilization fund as of the beginning of this year was $147,000, said Supervisor Maurice Breen.

TRASH COLLECTION service is provided to all Canton residents with general fund tax money.

"There's less than five years of landfill remaining in Wayne County now," said Canton Supervisor James Poole. "This is a critical situation. This is the most critical situation facing this community now."

"I don't know what the bottom line is. The solution is going to lie squarely in the hands of governmental units and be borne by people utilizing it," said Breen.

The rate increase agreed to by Canton administrators and Canton Recycling would cost the township an additional $140,000-150,000 for refuse collection. The annual tab has been $600,000, Poole said.

"I'LL CONTINUE to take it out of the general fund. That means it won't be spent somewhere else like parks and recreation," he said. "One of these days the township will have to do something."

One scenario, Poole suggested, would be to switch some local general fund dollars currently budgeted for police and fire operations to trash collection, then raise the tax rate for police and fire operations to make up the difference.

Direct voter approval isn't needed, he added.

Breen has been directed by Plymouth Township Board to renegotiate the contract with Canton Recycling which expires next July.

Poole is concerned that refuse collection rates will continue to soar.

"If there was less than five years remaining and you owned the landfill, what would you do?" he asked rhetorically. "Raise prices. You ain't seen nothing yet."

David Denski, owner of Canton Recycling, termed the 80-to-100 percent increase in landfill charges "unreal" and "a bomb."

"They won't talk to us," he said. "I wish they had a boss — Frank Kelley, somebody from DNR saying, 'What are you doing?'"

The city of Plymouth taxes homeowners and businesses at a rate of $2.48 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation for refuse collection.

The tax raises about $360,350 per year or nearly $87 from a house with a market value of $70,000.

"The only answer to this is communities will have to band together and build an incinerator," Graper said of skyrocketing costs.

Almost nestled in the clouds, John Sherwin scans Michigan roads for traffic snarls.

Ex-cop rides high in traffic copter

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A booming voice descends from the heavens proclaiming a message for all to hear.

"There's no major traffic problems. On the westbound Lodge there's a disabled car . . . I'm your captain John Sherwin, aboard your AAA safety copter."

From 3:50 to 5:50 p.m. daily the Canton resident broadcasts Michigan traffic conditions for WWJ-AM radio station.

Flying about 100 mph 2½ miles high, he usually takes the helicopter from I-275 east to St. Clair Shores, I-94 to downtown, then I-75 south and north to Pontiac.

On a windy afternoon earlier this week, Sherwin, 37, made one last pre-flight check before boarding the helicopter. It's operated by Metro Copters, which is owned by Pat Monks — longtime WWJ traffic broadcaster.

"A lot of people think helicopters aren't safe, and if they weren't I'd be the first one not to get in it," Sherwin said, smiling beneath a neatly trimmed full beard.

PATROLLING THE SKIES for traffic problems is somewhat like his Canton police officer job where he worked from 1976 through last July.

While serving as an officer, Sherwin worked part time for Monks. He quit the department and devoted all his time to Metro Copters.

"Police work in general started affecting my family life," said Sherwin, who is married and has two children, Sandy, 13, and Jimmy, 8.

people

"It was changing my personality, and I didn't like it but fortunately I had another place to go to."

Sherwin positioned his burly frame in the blue and silver helicopter and crowned his thick salt and pepper hair with a headset. He strapped a note pad around his knee securing a place to jot down notes for air time.

The engines begin to roar — louder and louder — until the copter lifts off making a whirlwind below. A couple of feet off the ground, Sherwin sways the copter back and forth in a joust with Fox, a playful red and white stray dog that made its home at the hangar in Dixboro.

Glenn Oswald, a Metro Copters employee, is in the backseat giving traffic conditions to other stations as a free AAA service.

Most of the time the men are spotting traffic snarls or listening to Michigan Emergency Patrol and other traffic stations. But off the air they constantly joke and entertain each other.

AFTER A COUPLE of broadcasts, Sherwin landed the copter on top of Cobo Hall — the world's largest heliport — for a two- or three-minute break.

Then he flew over the Detroit River and headed for the highways, periodically checking his watch in preparation for the next broadcast.

"This job is considered hours and hours of boredom punctuated by sheer terror," said Sherwin, recalling a time he was in the air and watched lightning hit the ground.

Flying above a span of trees colored by the onset of fall, Sherwin said: "It's kind of nice to be up here, and to think I'm getting paid for it. When you have nothing going on it can be boring but when you get on the air you don't want to be repetitious."

He usually works eight hours daily — doing traffic watch, computer work and other flying assignments for Metro Copters.

It's easy to spot area landmarks like Detroit's majestic Renaissance Center, the Ambassador Bridge, sprawls of metallic shining buildings in Southfield, Chi Chi's in Livonia, Meijers in Canton and the twin towers in Dearborn. But Sherwin and Oswald easily spout off major expressways and secondary highways from their bird's-eye view.

Sherwin, who earned his flying license during the early 1980s, was drawn into flying after developing a friendship and going on flights with Monks. His broadcasting style is something that developed with practice.

"One day he (Monks) said you'll do the last report . . . today," Sherwin said. "You want to talk about nervous? Then one day he said you'll do the last half."

Sherwin keeps a tape recording of his first broadcast, which he had to write out verbatim before broadcasting. His development is clear, as he jots down abbreviated notes and spices the report with on-the-air ad-libbing.

"I gather information, put it down so I can read it and then get it out."

1987 Balloon Festival lands in Canton again

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Clouds that loomed over whether Canton would host the Mayflower Hotel Balloon Festival next year have cleared.

Canton Township Board of Trustees talked about backing away from the summer event next year. But a meeting between a board subcommittee and festival organizers changed those plans.

Initially the trustees argued that Canton didn't receive enough recognition from participating in the festival.

Confusion that the festival took place in Canton resulted from the name of the event listing the Mayflower Hotel, which is in Plymouth.

Also, the festival previously was hosted by Plymouth and most recently in Plymouth Township. Canton became host for the first time in 1985.

Subcommittee members Clerk Linda Chuhran, Trustee Bob Padget and Treasurer Gerald Brown met last weekend with balloon festival sponsors Gordon Boring and Scott Lorenz, Mayflower Hotel general manager.

A LIST of changes for next year were outlined at Tuesday's board meeting.

"We'll strive harder to make people believe that it is in Canton," said Brown, who presented a proposal last month suggesting Canton stop sponsoring the program.

"My problem originally was that we need an ongoing summer event that is Canton's," Brown said. He added that the balloon festival and Canton Country Festival fail to give the community a summer event that people can identify solely with Canton.

The committee's suggestions include: locating more signs, enhancing Canton's name on printed material, naming a township liaison to advise the board, increasing participation from the Canton Chamber of Commerce and establishing youth oriented activities.

"If we're going to keep it in Canton, we want Canton businesses to reap from it," Chuhran said.

"There was a mutual understanding that there were a lot of things to be modified — basically in recognition that Canton would get," Lorenz said.

Last year Canton spent about $3,000 for police, fire and public works services. Costs for 1987 are expected to be less, according to Supervisor James Poole.

The balloon festival is scheduled for July 3, 4, and 5.

Plymouth-Canton schools sell surplus property

The sale of some Canton land deemed too marshy for future school construction was approved by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education at Monday's regular meeting.

"We're never going to use that piece of land for a school," said Superintendent of Schools John Hoben, explaining the desire of school administration to sell the two parcels, split by a stream.

Located on the north side of Maben Road between Canton Center and Beck roads, the parcels cover nearly 18 acres. The land contract sale will net the district $85,000, to go into a capital improvements fund, said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business.

"It's a fairly marshy type of area, one we would have great difficulty building on," Hoben told the board, prior to their vote to approve the sale.

In a memo to the board, Hoben wrote, "It should be noted that the district owns a rather large section of property just south of Warren Road, between Canton Center and Beck Roads, that would be a more appropriate site" for construction.

Hoedel said this site is one of three Canton sites being studied for construction of an elementary school by fall of 1988, approved in the June bond issue election. "I think the Saltz Road site (between Canton Center and Sheldon roads) is the primary site," he added.

The two parcels, currently used for farming, were sold to Billy G. Grady of Canton and Conrad Henry Jr. of Milan, Hoedel said.

Home school trial delayed

The trial of two Canton parents who are home-schooling their children against the wishes of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools has been postponed.

Originally set for Tuesday in 35th District Court, the trial has been rescheduled for Jan. 12, 13. Judge John MacDonald denied a motion by defendants John and Sandra Bennett of Ayrshire to dismiss the case.

The Bennetts face four counts of failure to send a child to a public school. Sandra Bennett has said she began teaching her four children at home a year ago for various reasons — one child was offered drugs, while a teacher made ethnic slurs to another, she claimed.

The Bennett's home-school program is guided through Clonara School of Ann Arbor, which organizes home schooling programs in Michigan and out of state. Pat Montgomery, head of Clonara School, estimates that seven Canton families instruct a total of 20 children in the home.

John Hoben, Plymouth-Canton superintendent of schools, has said that while he does not oppose the concept of home school, he does object to a lack of controls.

New principal takes Good Counsel helm

Ted Behn and Mike Myer officially were welcomed Sunday as educational leaders at Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic School in Plymouth.

The welcoming reception was held Sunday so parishioners, parents and staff could meet Behn, new school principal, and Myer, new director of religious education.

Our Lady of Good Counsel opened its school doors Aug. 28 to 600 students. Primary teachers Mary Short and Linda Lavigne said that "shines on the faces were almost as bright as the new shoes and lunch boxes."

Behn, who echoes the enthusiasm of the teaching staff, comes to OLGC from St. Alphonsus High in Dearborn, where he was principal for six years.

A graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor's degree and Eastern Michigan University with a master's degree in educational administration, Behn had taught in Livonia Public Schools before pursuing his administrative career in the Archdiocese of Detroit schools.

Before becoming assistant principal and principal, Behn taught grades one, three, six, seven, eight and nine.

Enthusiastic about returning to elementary education, Behn said: "During my 16 years in education, I have been able to observe both public and private settings, K-12. I much prefer the formative grade school years, which may well determine the success of a child later in education.

"Academic success is not, and cannot be, our only concern. As educators we must strive to develop each student's moral values, powers of reasoning and sense of responsibility to self, family and community. This aspect of education is but one goal to which we at OLGC have committed ourselves to attain excellence in education."

Myer earned his bachelor's degree from Barrows College in Ohio and a master's degree in theology at University of Detroit. Besides his responsibilities and activities with the religious education office at Counsel, Myer is vice president of the Novi Board of Education, a member of the Archdiocese Pastoral Council, an accomplished guitarist and is working on his doctor of ministry degree.

Also joining the OLGC staff this year are: Pat Fair, junior high science, social science teacher; Karen Brown, fifth and sixth grade science, math teacher; Darlene Grimshaw who returns as sixth grade language arts instructor.

Arson seen in home fire

Arson is suspected in a fire causing about $3,500 worth of damage to an abandoned home on Haggerty north of Ford in Canton.

Canton firefighters were called to the ranch house, 5859 Haggerty, at 10:16 p.m. Saturday. It is undetermined what was used to ignite the fire, which started in the living room. The fire was under control by 10:32 p.m.

Photos and other evidence in the home were sent to the Michigan State Police crime laboratory to determine the cause of the fire, according to Lt. Don Adams, Canton firefighter.

Gas and electricity had been shut off and it appeared the home had been unoccupied for some time. The home had been in a state of disrepair before the fire, Adams said.

Diploma awarded posthumously

Karen Sonntag never got the chance to walk down the aisle of Crisler Arena in June to receive her diploma with her senior classmates at John Glenn High School.

But her family received the diploma Monday night it felt she had earned.

Wayne-Westland School Superintendent Dennis O'Neill presented Karen's diploma posthumously to the Sonntags, noting that while the ceremony was "emotional and melancholic, Karen would have wanted it to be an upbeat presentation."

A senior at Glenn, Karen died on July 19 of a heart attack while recovering from a liver transplant operation, performed at the Pittsburgh Presbyterian University Hospital in April.

THE TRANSPLANT was prompted by a liver ailment that caused her to suffer from cirrhosis and hepatitis. She was recovering from the transplant when she developed a lung infection and died as the result of the heart attack just a fews weeks before she was scheduled to leave the hospital.

"Karen was an outgoing person, a promising poet and artist and a longtime Girl Scout," O'Neill said. "Her father told me she had no reservations about the transplant operation and afterwards she was a source of encouragement for the other patients at the hospital."

Accepting the diploma were her parents, Don and Sue Sonntag; her sister, Edythe; and brother, Andrew.

The Sonntags received condolences and congratulations from the members of the board, with president Mathew McCusker noting that "this isn't the easiest thing the board has ever done."

Board candidates will be screened

The Wayne-Westland Board of Education has scheduled two nights next week to interview eight candidates seeking to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Rex Wilhoite Sunday.

The board has set aside Monday and Tuesday to interview the candidates. The interviews will begin at 7 p.m. both nights with each candidate allowed a half-hour interview.

The first candidate to appear before the board will be William Liedel, who is no stranger to the school board. An attorney, he was a chairman of a citizens committee that promoted two millage elections this year. Voters rejected both proposals.

Liedel will appear before the board at 7 p.m. Monday. He will be followed by Derek Delacourt at 7:30 p.m., Sandra Ference Cicirelli at 8 p.m. and Timothy Naughton at 8:30 p.m.

Delacourt is a Westland police officer, Cicirelli is an attorney and Naughton is a student at Eastern Michigan University.

BRYAN AMANN will appear at 7 p.m. Tuesday. He will be followed by David Carpenter at 7:30 p.m., Teresa Reighard Johnson at 8 p.m. and Stephen Oscarson at 8:30 p.m.

Amann is an attorney, Carpenter is a local businessman, Reighard is a lease manager and Oscarson is an employee of the Ford Motor Credit Co.

Wilhoite resigned from the board as the result of a job promotion and transfer to Syracuse, N.Y. The board has 20 days in which to fill the vacancy. If it can't agree on an appointee within that time, the selection would be made by the Wayne County Intermediate School District's Board of Education.

Wilhoite's replacement will serve on the school board until next June's school election, when voters will pick the person to complete the remaining three years.

Where does it all go? A landfill 'dilemma'

By Teri Banas
staff writer

It's been described as a 26,000-ton-a-day dilemma — the amount of trash Michigan households, businesses and industry generate in a day.

Up to 85 percent of what's picked up on collection day is taken to area landfills, and though new technology promises to lessen environmental threats caused by soil and water contamination, space may someday run out.

David C. Olson, a member of the Michigan Natural Resources Commission and chairman of the Clean Michigan Fund Program, told a gathering in Southfield last week that money is one of the main obstacles in solving the waste dilemma. He added that Michigan won't solve the problem until it implements a general obligation bond program.

"The cost of a $300 million bond program over a 10-year period would be approximately $13.68 per household per year. A significant cost, but a real bargain if we can solve the waste dilemma," he said.

Olson said society needs to curb its production of solid waste and put more effort into recycling waste to begin to solve the "disposal dilemma."

"THE PRACTICE of burying solid waste in landfills means that millions of tons of valuable resources are lost forever. It also means that improper land disposal has been responsible for groundwater contamination," he said.

STEVE FECHT/ staff photographer

Wayne County estimates its landfill capacity will expire within seven years. Industry and government representatives met in Southfield to highlight the issue last week.

According to the state Department of Natural Resources' "contamination priority list," 15 percent of the worst 360 Michigan sites it cited were linked to improper landfills, and 47 percent were suspected of ground water contamination caused by improper landfills.

According to Olson, these environmental concerns along with rising landfill disposal costs (ranging $12-$36 per ton) are reasons enough to develop wider options in recycling.

"All those plastic jars, containers, wrappings, a few cans, and many items. Can you imagine an archeologist in the year 2186 examining an old dump site? The thought will probably be, 'What a wasteful society!'" he said.

Olson blames "high tech packaging" and non-degradable materials for adding to each person's average 25-pound per week disposal amount, and said some remedies are already being tried.

As disposal rates rise and the cost of landfill cleanups are taken into account, he said, communities will look more closely at resurrecting recycling attempts.

In industry, the state's paper mill industry, for example, he said 26 mills rely on recycled materials for some part of their raw materials, adding there is room to expand.

Across the country, Michigan ranks fifth in waste paper recovery and employs 7,000 people in this field.

According to the state's Resource Recovery Action Plans, adopted in 1984, he said the state's aim is to reduce landfill dependency by 70-80 percent through waste reduction (10 percent), recycling (25 percent), composting (6 percent) and incineration (40 percent).

INCLUDED in the program was the Clean Michigan Fund Program, which at $8 million this year offers local grants across the state for developing programs in recycling and recovery purposes as well as educational programs.

Olson said that while the state's goal is to reduce its reliance on landfills, it recognizes that landfills will always play some part in disposal.

Today, he said, there are 46 incinerators that burn trash and generate steam or electricity across the country. Some have been in existence for as long as 15 years. Studies show, he said, that Michigan could use for 30 or 40, such as what's being proposed by the Greater Detroit Incineration Authority.

Though air quality standards are often in question, he said "there is no such thing as risk free. Risk assessment is a controversial science."

He said the trade-off benefits are reduction in groundwater contamination and, someday, low-cost energy.

In Wayne County, which adopted the state's policy for reducing landfill dependency in 1984, no new landfills have been approved or cited since then. It is estimated that landfills serving the county will be filled within seven years unless other alternatives are instituted.

WAYNE COUNTY planning chief Maurie Roach said recent developments toward incineration, using facilities that burn trash and create electricity, will have some impact on that.

The Greater Detroit Incinerator Authority, a developing 3,300-ton-a-day burner, will reduce the county's landfill dependency by up to 40 percent after taking in garbage from Detroit, Highland Park and Hamtramck.

In western Wayne County, the Central Wayne County Sanitation Authority will be reopening a burner that is being outfitted with new pollution devices for a 500-ton-a-day capacity. Opening is scheduled for the fall of 1987.

In industry, General Motors Corp. recently opened one in Detroit with a capacity to burn 100 tons a day.

But even with incineration, he said landfills use will still be necessary for burying the residual effects of burning.

He said county planners are looking at a combination of alternatives - landfilling, recycling and incineration to solve the problem.

Meanwhile, some nearby landfills serving the county are hoping to expand current facilities, including one in the Downriver area and Canton Township's Wayne Disposal facility.

"It's a dilemma because no one wants one near them," he said.

Roach said disposal costs and landfill issues ultimately have an impact on an area's economic health. Companies will soon, if not already, consider these costs when deciding to locate.

Early Detroiters solve food problems with style

Tonquish tales
Helen Gilbert

Believe it or not, almost every little cabin home on the ribbon farms which edged both sides of the river at d'Etroit in the 1700s served hors d'oeuvres every day!

The hors d'oeuvres were sometimes called assiettes volante or entres volante — "flying dishes" or "flying entres" — because they were platters of mixed delicacies, sometimes placed on crusts of delicious French bread. They included salted or preserved meats delicately seasoned with herbs and occasionally hot preparations of kidney, liver or venison.

FRENCH THRIFT demanded that every little bit of leftover meat, game and fish be salted, smoked or marinated.

Everything that could be preserved was saved by the thrifty French housewife. There was no refrigeration. There were wells driven deep into the ground where food in baskets was lowered. And in this way some perishables were preserved for a limited time.

But the combined smokehouse and slaughter house, a small structure out in the back of the living quarters, was the workplace for the industrious farmer. Not that every inhabitant was that industrious, or every housewife energetic, but those who had pride and ambition forged ahead and left the laggards behind.

After the hors d'oeuvres, there usually was a thick potage or soup. Its base was peas fresh from the garden, or onions, or beef with other vegetables, or a specially flavored fish. "Delicious" is the word for French soup.

The soup was followed by the piece de resistance. There were two. First was the "belle salade," fresh from the garden. No French household was without its daily salad replete with special herbs and spices and a delicate mixture of greens, which only the French can prepare. Then came the casserole of meats and vegetables, which may have been warmed all day in the beehive oven out in the frontyard.

Of course, this delicious meal was accompanied all the way by vin rose or by a common wine made by the farmer himself from grapes that grew in his orchard. Sometimes the homemade wines were flavored with wild elderberries, which grew so plentifully in the nearby forest. And freshly baked delicious French bread always accompanied the supper.

THIS QUANTITY and quality of food may seem incredible to you, but careful and extensive research shows that this is the way it really was.

Food was an item with the French. They worked at it. And to this very day French cuisine is world famous.

Actually, the poor farmer struggling for a living in Detroit was trying to copy in a small way the grandeur of Versailles.

For a more detailed account of that grandeur, read "Food In History" by Reay Tannshill, "Tales of the Table" by Barbara Norman or "Food and Drink in History" by Robert Forster.

In the 1700s, almost every little frontier cabin that lined the waterfront at Detroit had a "beehive oven" in its frontyard. The bread, which would raise overnight, came out of these little ovens. This custom was widely practiced in Quebec and the French brought it with them.

The oven was made of clay around sticks. It had two doors — an inner door of a kind of iron and an outer wooden door. It was heated by wood, of which the habitant had a plentiful supply, split very fine, and burned to coals on the floor of the oven. The ashes were cleaned out with a mop, and this left the warm oven ready for the bread.

Bread baked in this way was called "town bread" and was an improvement over the coarse bread made by the courers de bois (the woodsmen) and by the men who made the long trips by sea (the voyageurs). Their bread was made by pounding parched corn on a rock and mixing it with maple sugar.

INSIDE THE cabin there always was a fireplace for warmth and for cooking.

Unlike the elaborate Lincoln fireplace of the 1800s (for a detailed description of this read Tonquish Tales, Vol. 1), the habitant's fireplace also served as the kitchen stove. There was an iron pot hanging from a swinging metal crane and the soup was always on. Many a Frenchman when he first came home grabbed an hors d'oeuvres form the cupboard and a ladle full of soup from the pot. So it was literally pot d'feu.

The iron pot was too heavy to bring to the table, so the French housewife used the technique of her ancestors — the soup went into a clay casserole. Sometimes the casserole was allowed to bake all day in the little beehive oven out in the yard.

Every little house had its dock, and some who were ambitious traders had large wharves. At each dock was tied at least one perogue — a dugout made from a tree trunk and used as a speedy runabout. Every farmer had at least one batteau — a flat bottomed boat used for hauling furs and trade goods — and several canoes. The canoe was the mainstay of transportation and trade — the workhorse of the river.

The picture is not complete unless we understand that the river was their highway. Even after the little road was built along the edge of the water and a few Canadian ponies were imported, the main thoroughfare was not the road but the river. It was cheaper, faster and safer than anything else, or so it seemed to them.

From their own docks the habitants could carry grain and vegetables, furs and trade goods to the fort or anywhere else. To the average Frenchman the river was freedom, and on it he could explore the most remote places. Someday he might, or so he dreamed, move to the Sault Ste. Marie or even to Mackinaw or, if he wished, return to Montreal or Quebec.

The river was the road to freedom.

EVERY FOOT of land on the little ribbon farm was used in some way.

There were a few who were shiftless and lazy and did not advance in the economy of the area, but the majority accepted the challenge and, to the best of their abilities, worked toward worthwhile goals.

Their families were large (10 or more children were the usual household) and all the children were put to work at an early age. There were few books and no libraries. Little time was occupied in reading. Hard work was the order of the day. There were no newspapers, so what was happening in the rest of the world was discovered from passing travellers, returning voyageurs, soldiers, and anyone who recently had been to Montreal or Quebec.

Beyond the perimeter of the little farms were wild animals and Indians. In those days Michigan had an abundance of both. The forest was live with badger, bear, fox, wildcats, wolverines, raccoons, groundhogs, muskrats, rabbit, mink, weasels and deer. Everywhere within a few miles of their tiny homes were these creatures of the wild, and everywhere danger lurked.

The only one that fought back was the wolf. Wolves roamed the whole area in fierce packs and created fear in every household. The farmer was forced to surround his immediate backyard with a fence of sharpened pickets. If the door was left open, a hungry wolf would come right into the kitchen. This is one reason why every kitchen had its old blunderbuss, which passed for a firearm, and a sharp sword or at least a large knife. Many a wild shot zinged forth toward the wilderness at night to silence the plaintive call of the wild wolf.

All the pigs and cattle were moved to Belle Isle to protect them from the predatory wolf pack.

Another mainstay of the Detroiter's diet was wild fowl. Turkeys in flocks of hundreds were commonplace. Geese and ducks filled the channel between the fort and Canada during their migratory season.

And passenger pigeons, now extinct, abounded everywhere. It has been reliably reported that those pigeons sometimes arrived in a huge cloud of flapping wings. Their weight broke the branches of trees where they rested. The hunter had little trouble in killing a bagful of these birds at their swarming place. He will never have that trouble again.

Wine cooler issue: handling fees for stores

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A proposed 10-cent deposit on wine cooler and mixed drink containers is scheduled for a floor vote by the state House of Representatives today after sailing 10-1 through a committee Wednesday.

The big debate will be over amendments affecting retailers and beverage distributors.

"Ten cents is fair," said Rep. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, who voted for the no-compromise measure in committee.

THE HOUSE Liquor Control Committee quickly dropped a so-called compromise measure reducing the deposit on wine cooler bottles to five cents after it was bitterly denounced by Thomas L. Washington, executive director of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

MUCC spearheaded the 1976 voter initiative that enacted a deposit law for beer and pop and is continuing its petition drive for a wine cooler deposit vote.

Dunaskiss, the only Observer & Eccentric area lawmaker on the committee, said a survey of his northern Oakland district shows "in excess of 90 percent are in favor" of extending the deposit law to wine coolers and mixed drinks.

THE KEY questions today, however, aren't whether it will be passed but how it will be amended to appeal to business groups.

Grocery stores pleaded for a two-cents "handling fee" because of costs they incur in returning cans and bottles to the plants. That amendment was rejected on a 7-4 vote.

The other amendment, which passed 9-2, would permit distributors to be given exclusive territories for wine coolers.

The MUCC's Washington, asked if that were acceptable, said, "Well — yeah. We won't go to the mat on that. But the consumers and retailers might be uptight about exclusive territories."

He said MUCC's petition drive would continue until a bill is passed by both houses of the Legislature and signed by the governor.

DUNASKISS, WHO supported both amendments, called them fair.

"I think a two-cent handling fee for 'Mom and Pop' retailers is fair," said Dunaskiss, whose north Oakland district includes Oakland Township.

"We heard testimony that the wholesalers are taking in $20 million to $30 million a year" for cans and bottles that are never redeemed. Lawmakers backing the two-cents handling fee for retailers said the money could come from that "float" without being tacked onto purchase prices.

Washington said the handling fee idea was all right, "But this is not the bill to do it on." The MUCC chief said he would be "willing to sit down and work with them" on a separate bill.

Center celebrates rebirth of OB-GYN medical unit

By Teri Banas
staff writer

The troubled Westland Medical Center has announced the reopening of its Obstetric-Gynecology unit this week, nine months after it was forced to close down operations because of a withdrawal of services by University of Michigan doctors.

Now employing private doctors, some of whom work as part-time staff physicians, the hospital announced the unit is again delivering services.

The December 1985 action — ending a 20-year affiliation between the teaching institute and the hospital — took place when patient volumes dropped severely and the hospital failed to provide medical malpractice coverage.

Even today, the Westland Center has a 30 percent bed occupancy ratio compared to a 60 percent rate statewide, according to hospital estimates.

Chief executive David Kreger said the hospital has "completly redecorated" the 27-bed OB-GYN ward and is serving new mothers "a champagne dinner" the night before their release.

THOUGH FORMAL congratulatory ceremonies were Tuesday, the unit was actually reopened July 21, Kreger said. He said the center has a "much brighter look" and the hospital's aim is to develop an inclusive maternal-child health program that stresses health education.

Eight doctors, most in private practice, have been hired and other staff positions were resumed in the speciality areas of labor and delivery nurses, post-partum nurses and OB-GYN clinical nurses. When the U-M physicians left, the program was providing 26 faculty members and 41 residents and a number of medical students on rotation throughout the hospital.

Unit chairman, Dr. Rudolph Wyatt, said the hospital still plans to reopen a neo-natal unit (for high-risk babies) but until then will continue to transfer those patients to Detroit's Children's Hospital. "It has to do with patient volume," he said. "We're fairly certain it will be reopened in the next three months."

He said the goal is 800 births by the end of this year.

That is achievable in part, Wyatt said, because of a newly-negotiated contract with Wayne County for serving indigent OB-GYN patients referred from two county-operated clinics in Inkster and Sumpter Township.

THAT CONTRACT will take effect Sept. 21 and will cover an estimated 400 patients. Before the neo-natal unit was closed, the hospital was serving 800 patients under Wayne County agreement with four such clinics.

"Slowly, we're moving back up," said Wyatt, a 30-year private practice physician from southwest Detroit. He was hired in June to be in charge of the unit.

Kreger said the announcement was planned in conjunction with the expected start of the center's new mental health wing. The first 46-bed phase of the planned 96-bed unit will open at the end of September, he said. An outside operator, Hegira Programs, Inc., will manage it.

Kreger described the wing, rebuilt on the center's fifth floor, as "dorm like" with activity rooms, a dining room and kitchennettes and laundry rooms. The facility is not planned for long-term patients, but rather for an average stay of 25 days, he said.

"It'll bring in a whole new group of patients," he said.

The new program is expected to help increase the hospital's occupancy rate, which today is about 80 patients, Kreger said. The hospital is currently licensed for 310 beds.

Hijacking ordeal: 'We should get out now'

By Sharon Dargay and Neal Haldane
staff writers

Ann Marie Sundareson, a heroine in the hijack ordeal of Pan Am Flight 73, will face a quiet welcome from peers when she resumes classes in the next few days.

"I feel compelled to protect the family," said Al Meloy, Troy High School principal. "We don't know what psychological implications an ordeal like this might have. Before we do anything in terms of (a homecoming) we'll discuss it with the family."

Gone are the swarms of journalists who mobbed the Troy High School junior and her family during arrival at Detroit Metropolitan Airport on Monday. The yellow ribbons and "Welcome Home" signs are down. Bouquets of homecoming flowers have wilted.

Ann Marie's father, Shanker, was expected to return to his job as a pathologist at Hutzel Hospital Tuesday. Her sister, Rose Marie, 13, is expected to be back in the classroom at Boulan Park Middle school next week.

The family, including mother, Omana, returned home Monday after surviving the terrorist takeover of the jet at Karachi International Airport late Friday. Seventeen passengers were killed when hijackers opened fire on the aircraft and 127 more were injured in the fray.

Ann Marie, 16, suffered a head wound while rescuing a toddler from the airplane's escape chute.

SHE DOWNPLAYED the event at a crowded press conference at Metro Airport, but later recounted the event for reporters who gathered outside the family's westside home.

"She was on the slide and was getting trampled. And the mother started screaming, and I just went back and picked her up," Ann Marie said. "I just got her."

The family was mobbed by media representatives after a private greeting from family and friends in an airport reception room shortly after 5 p.m.

"We just want to take them home, have a small dinner with them and leave them alone," said Clement Prabakaran, a cousin of Dr. Sundareson.

Relatives presented the family with flowers, placards and a banner, which read, "Thank you Lord for our Sundaresons, we love them so much."

The couple's son, Edwin, who had flown home from the family's summer vacation in India ahead of his parents, said the press had been helpful during the ordeal, often providing information he was unable to obtain through the U.S. State Department.

He said the family "was hugging everyone" and didn't have much to say at the private airport reunion.

The scene at home was more subdued.

A few journalists and about 50 neighbors and relatives awaited the family's arrival.

Youngest family member Rose Marie, arriving first, rushed into the arms of neighbor Denise Christiansen, her sister's best friend.

"OH MY GOD, I can't believe it's you. I missed you so much," Denise cried, embracing the teenager. Then, the surprised Denise blurted: "What happened? I didn't know if it was you."

"I got a perm," Rose Marie answered, cradling an array of flowers.

"Are you OK?" Denise asked, pressing another bouquet of flowers and a balloon into her friend's hands.

STEVE CANTRELL/ staff photographer

The Troy teen who rescued a young child during last week's air hijacking, Ann Marie Sundareson (with headband), arrived at Metro airport with her family, including mother Omana, sister Rose Marie and her father, Shanker, to be greeted by a flood of reporters.

"We were scared," Rose Marie answered. "My dad had bullet holes in his jacket."

As his wife and daughters greeted well-wishers at home, Sundareson calmly talked about the ordeal.

At the start, he said, the family did not know a hijacking was unfolding. "We thought it was a security check by the Pakistani police."

But they quickly discovered what was going on, he added. During the hijacking's first hours, the terrorists ordered passengers to keep their hands on their heads.

"For the first two hours it was very tense and then they started relaxing a little bit," Dr. Sundareson said.

The hijackers allowed passengers to go to the bathroom one at a time while someone got sandwiches, he said.

Gunfire erupted after 17 hours of captivity, when a power failure knocked out the airplane's inside lighting.

Police car rammed

A 16-year-old driver rammed a Canton Police car in a futile attempt to escape a barricade of squad cars.

Early morning Monday, Sept. 8, four Canton Police cars were surrounding the Club Canton Lounge on Michigan Avenue east of Lotz Road, according to Canton Police Lt. Larry Stewart.

In an apparent attempt to flee, the youth struck one of the police cars. The 16-year-old was driving a 1986 Z-28 Camaro, allegedly stolen from Ann Arbor.

No one was seriously injured.

The youth was immediately arrested and charged with receiving and concealing stolen property. He was released to his mother.

The police car had extensive damage but is repairable, Stewart said.

A defense against cancer can be cooked up in your kitchen.

There is evidence that diet and cancer are related. Some foods may promote cancer while others may protect you from it.

Foods related to lowering the risk of cancer of the larynx and esophagus all have high amounts of carotene, a form of Vitamin A which is in carrots, loupes, peaches, broccoli, spinach, all dark green leafy vegetables, sweet potatoes, carrots, pumpkin, winter squash and tomatoes, citrus fruits and brussels sprouts.

Foods that may help reduce the risk of gastrointestinal and respiratory tract cancer are cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, cauliflower.

Fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals such as oat meal, bran and wheat may help lower the risk of colorectal cancer.

Foods high in fats, salt or nitrite cured foods such as ham, and fish and types of sausages smoked by traditional methods should be eaten in moderation.

Be moderate in consumption of alcohol also.

A good rule of thumb is cut down on fat and don t be fat. Weight reduction may lower cancer risk. Our 12-year study of nearly 4 million Americans uncovered high cancer risks particularly among people 40% or more overweight.

Now, more than ever, we know you can cook up your own defense against cancer. So eat healthy and be healthy.

No one faces cancer alone.

Hiring manager structural shift

THIS WEEK the Canton Township Board of Trustees received two important reports from committees investigating whether to change the status of township government.

The cityhood committee studied whether incorporation was a viable choice for Canton at this stage in its history, and recommended against cityhood. The implementation committee outlined how the township should be administered by a full-time appointed professional manager rather than an elected supervisor. The trustees had previously voted to hire a superintendent.

Canton has grown to the point where a professional manager is needed — a leader schooled in municipal administration rather than politics. The township may have been better off being led by a city manager instead of a township superintendent with appointed clerk and treasurer. But the cityhood group has made that issue a moot point.

Instead Canton may adopt a transitional government format — an appointed full-time professional replacing the elected part-time supervisor. This move, if taken, is a marked departure from rural township government and a step toward an urban township municipality.

Clearly Canton has advanced as a suburban community of ever-expanding population where full-time professional management can more efficiently handle the day-to-day business and long-range planning of local government. Canton no longer is a farming community where a part-time supervisor can spend a few weeks ensuring the tax bills go out, the assessments of farmland are adjusted, and the clogged ditches cleaned and then go back to his own farm.

Neither is management a partisan skill. If party labels have any place in local government, a debatable point, it is for legislators. Administration should be free of partisan politics as continuation in the job should rely on performance, not nomination by party or reelection in a partisan vote.

OF THE TWO committees which reported Tuesday to the Canton Board, one report will be filed away to gather dust in the archives.

The cityhood group, by recommending against cityhood, has come out supporting the status quo — continuation of a rural form of government for a suburban community. Since no change is advised, no action is needed. Thank you letters can be sent out to members for service rendered and the report can be filed.

Action is needed, however, on the implementation committee which feels that continuing the status quo is not a wise course. Given the political bickering, instability, and lack of long-range direction in Canton's government, it should be obvious change will be healthy.

Given the historical development of Canton's government, the transitional step from supervisor to superintendent is a logical and desirable one. The total township millage already is near what a city's tax burden would be and so a change in administrative format will draw the township one more step closer to cityhood.

CITYHOOD, however, should not be attained piecemeal or by tip-toeing backward into incorporation.

The path toward cityhood should be walked openly, with all residents kept informed of the motives behind each step. We should not suddenly "arrive" one day, out of the blue, so close to cityhood that the electorate voting on incorporation becomes nothing but a mere formality.

Instead the electorate should have a say in the process which is "dismantling" the rural form of township rule and creating a new format for a new age. If superintendency is a step toward cityhood, than people should vote on the change just as the people must vote on the ultimate change of incorporation.

We are a representative democracy and the township board has the right and should make many major decisions without going to a vote of the people. As legislators, the board could vote to spend millions of dollars on Supersewer or on a waste disposal incinerator without a vote of the people. But changing the form of government — a change that could last for decades — is a more serious decision than allocating financial resources.

The Observer feels the implementation committee made a wise choice in recommending a change to a full-time superintendent. We now urge the board to let votes endorse the wisdom of that recommendation by placing the issue on the ballot.

While the law allows the change to be made legislatively without a vote of the people, the importance of this transitional step in Canton's development is a singular reason to justify placing the issue on the ballot. We urge the board to do so.

Drive 55 and drive alone

Bob Wisler

HAVING RECENTLY returned from a car trip that took me through Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, I feel well qualified to estimate what percentage of the driving population is traveling at 55 mph or less. Two percent. That's my estimate.

I saw hundreds of cars and trucks and noted the occasion whenever I zipped by someone traveling less than 55. There were only a few. One guy was pulling a boat and his car wasn't really big enough to do the job so he was moping along about 50 mph.

There was a small car with four nuns in it religiously observing the speed limit. And there were a couple of oldtimers with local license plates who were obviously looking for a way to get off the gol-durned freeway and onto a local road so they could continue their inspection of the back 40.

Aside from those and a few police officers whose presence really slowed traffic down, I can't recall anyone traveling 55 or less.

MOST FOLKS were tooling along at 65, 70 and 75. Early in the journey I had some vague notion that I might try to hold my speed to a sensible 60. Whoosh, Whoosh. Whoosh. Whoosh. I was passed up by everything but tractors.

Since it is somewhat unnerving to be continually passed by 18-wheelers and double-tandem trucks whose last trailer always appears to be wavering in the wind ready to capsize on my car, I moved up to 65.

I was hoping to keep up with the crowd but ended up squinting at the crowd disappearing on the horizon. A new crowd began overtaking me and even the four-cylinder super-saver economy specials began breezing by my Motor City eight-cylinder road hog.

THE WAY THINGS are, I am on the side of those who say the 55 mph speed limit ought to be junked. The national 55 mph speed limit might have seemed to make sense at one time — although you can get an argument on that — but it is now a national joke.

If nobody is going to travel 55 and if the cops aren't going to enforce it, why have it?

The 55 mph limit was put on the books because of a national scare over oil shortages. The scare, manufactured by the OPEC cartel, was enough to cause the entire auto industry to downsize and the country to looking for ways to economize.

It is apparent, however, that there isn't any oil shortage and there likely won't be in the forseeable future. There is at present a world oil glut and many national economies are suffering because of it. Attempting to save fuel now doesn't make a great deal of sense.

It is argued by some that the national 55 mph limit helps save lives. But the statistics don't show any savings in lives because of the lower speed limits. In fact, the fatality rate was dropping before the 55 mph limit was put into effect and continues to decline as average speeds continue to go up.

All the 55 mph limit does is create an atmosphere where drivers look on the authorities as foolish. Because we have one law that is not observed, there may be a tendency to look with disdain on other traffic laws.

The national speed limit and federal efforts to maintain it ought to be scrapped. The states can decide what speed limits should be imposed. In heavily travelled areas, and on roads that are not divided freeways, maybe 55 mph makes sense. But it is probable that if the states can decide for themselves, the 55 mph limit will be raised on roads that now regularly carry traffic at 65 mph.

Christian tells about witches

To the editor:

We are Christians because we love our Father Almighty, our Creator, and His son and Savior, Jesus.

Because of this love and our desire to be with Him in Heaven, we read and follow His commandments and various laws that are written in the Holy Bible. The Bible is clear in both the Old and New Testaments that witchcraft and the worshipping of other gods is forbidden for us.

He speaks of witchcraft as a detestable practice in Deuteronomy 18:10-12. "Let no one be found among you who sacrifices his son or daughter in the fire, who practices divination (fortune telling) or sorcery, interprets omens, engages in witchcraft or casts spells, or who is a medium or spiritist or who consults the dead. Anyone who does these things is detestable to the Lord."

II Chronicles 33:6 tells us that witchcraft is evil. "He sacrificed his sons in the fire in the Valley of Ben Hinnom, practiced sorcery, divination and witchcraft, and consulted mediums and spiritist. He did much evil in the eyes of the Lord, provoking Him to anger."

GALATIONS 5:19-21, our Lord states witchcraft as a sin. "The acts of the sinful nature are obvious: sexual immorality, impurity and debauchery; idolatry and witchcraft; hatred, discord, jealousy and fits of rage, selfish ambition, dissensions, factions and envy; drunkenness, orgies and the like. I warn you, as I did before, that those who live like this will not inherit the kingdom of God."

Deuteronomy 5:6, "I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery. You shall have no other gods before me."

As you can see it is important for us to stop teachers from showing our children the movie "The Sword and the Sorcerer." As stated in my flier, the opening scene shows a witch calling up a devil from the pit of hell while the walls of hell come alive with anguished humans, bleeding and screaming in agony.

THE WITCH proceeds to worship the devil by licking and kissing him throughout several scenes, calling him "my god" and "my master." This is in direct violation of our Christian faith and was shown to the children without the knowledge of the parents.

We feel that as citizens of a religiously free nation and as taxpayers, we, and our children, have the right to hold to our beliefs without the schools introducing material that puts their Christianity in jeopardy.

We are not out to change others to Christianity; we are trying to hold onto it for ourselves and our children.

Diane Daskalakis,
Plymouth

No way to greet a neighbor

Rich Perlberg

IF IT WASN'T already hard enough to own a swimming pool in Bloomfield Township, now it is more difficult. A mentally retarded person might fall into it.

That's the spectre facing the residents of Charing Cross subdivision where, according to their attorney, everyone should have an IQ of at least 70.

Actually, that is not exactly what the attorney said. That is just the way a cynic (me, for instance) might interpret part of the legal gymnastics used to oppose a group home of six mentally retarded people.

The attorney, James Elsman, argues that the retarded people will have sub-30 IQs. Other group homes, he said, have residents with IQs of 70 or above which, presumably, would make them more appropriate residents of the subdivision. But sub-30? Think of the problems.

"They won't know the difference between right and wrong," Elsman told a reporter. "For instance, what happens if one of them is walking on the street at midnight and confronts our wives or our daughters in a one-on-one situtation?"

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN? Maybe the midnight-strolling wife or daughter could fake a jump shot and drive the baseline. But I don't think basketball is what Elsman was referring to.

Mental health spokesman Thomas Deloach doubts that anything bad would happen. For one thing, group homes have 24-hour supervision. For another, group home residents are not by definition violent or criminal. They are mentally retarded.

Fewer than one of five group homes is vigorously opposed, he adds, and in those cases the fear "almost exclusively" slips away after six months. "A year later, people are not aware of it."

They are aware of it now in Charing Cross where, Elsman said, mentally retarded people will interfere with the enjoyment of home ownership "if we have to worry about them falling into pools."

Such compassion is heartwarming. It seems the surest way to increase concern for the welfare of mentally retarded people is to plan a home for them in a neighborhood. All of a sudden, everyone worries about their safety.

Put them in the country? But there are no recreational facilities. Put them in a subdivision? But they might fall in a pool. Put them on a dead-end street? But emergency vehicles can't get to them. Put them on a main thoroughfare? But the traffic is so dangerous.

WHY NOT PUT them someplace safe? Why not an institution, such as the Plymouth Center for Human Development, a warehouse for humans that was closed following the disclosure of shocking treatment of mentally retarded residents. The big problem was neglect, which led to retarded children virtually vegetating in the corner.

Some were drinking from feces-filled toilets. That's not a pretty image, but you just have to read about it. They lived it.

Many of these mentally retarded people were thought to be hopeless. Sub-30 IQs, if you will. But once they were given some basic attention and more than a few hugs, they made remarkable progress.

The Charing Cross group home is getting litigation not hugs. Next-door neighbor Mark Colonese is among those pressing a court case against the home and its residents.

"Am I going to go over and have a cocktail with him while I help him brush his teeth?" he asked.

He meant it facetiously, but it's not a bad idea. Deloach tells of a Boyne City woman who vehemently opposed a group home in her neighborhood. It came anyway. Now she is over there two and three times a week with cookies and brownies.

That, and not injunctions, is the proper way to greet a neighbor.

What's cookin'? Plenty of books will tell ya'

through bifocals
Fred DeLano

IN A COLUMN some years ago, I made light of the fact that we then had 27 cookbooks on our shelves at home, many with tasty suggestions clipped from newspapers and magazines tucked between their pages. The total now stands at 76.

It isn't that we eat more often than other families, but I am blesed through marriage with a mate who is one of those generous "pinch of this" and "dash of that" artists who can read a recipe and then give it her own twist to carry it from the realm of the ordinary to the sublime.

When last seen, this Queen of the Culinary Arts was stirring sherry into the mushrooms to make a sauce that would convert everyday hamburgers into a gourmet's delight. My mouth waters, too, at the mere thought of her lobster hash.

However, quite thoughtlessly a few days ago after one of the periodic housecleaning weekends, I complained that our collection of cooking encyclopedias would outdo most book stores, immediately drawing the challenge from Mother Goose that I knew not whereof I spoke.

TO PUT THE matter to rest, or so I foolishly thought, I visited one of my favorite bookstores to count the cookbooks available and found they had 144 separate titles available, not counting diet and fitness publications.

Good Lord, that means we're barely half way to goal!

Collecting recipes seems to be a national, maybe worldwide, avocation, but if this craze is carried to the ultimate at our abode, there'll be no place to put all those new volumes without discarding my treasured collection of football histories and tales of foreign intrigue. On such issues do marriage counselors thrive.

During that aforementioned housecleaning, we chanced upon one of our more intriguing books, one we had long considered lost. It had belonged to Grandmother Bessie, a hidebound Indiana Methodist who had been born in 1868 and who married a misplaced sailor from Boston when she was 18, probably to save him from the evils of drink. This remained her prime dedication until death at 74.

Inasmuch as Bessie's favorite mode of cooking was to fry everything to a fare-thee-well, one wonders in wandering through her hand-written recipes just what social occasions prompted her to record the ingredients for "Gertrude's cherry pudding," "Grace's oatmeal cookies," "Helen's prune salad" and an ungodly sounding mixture called "Chaw Chaw."

HOWEVER, IN all fairness, lest I encounter Bessie sometime in the great beyond, I must admit that nothing could match the wonderful odor of her homemade bread baking in the kitchen's coal and wood Round Oak range.

I eat, but I don't cook. In fact, the principal covenant which Mother Goose insisted be included in our marital contract stipulates that if I don't tell her how to run her kitchen, she won't tell me how to run a newspaper.

The last time I even helped prepare a meal was in my bachelor days when I shared an apartment with two guys who worked for the same paper. I had won a scrawny chicken in a bingo game and knew there would be plenty of room for it in our tiny regrigerator because the three of us never kept anything there except radishes and beer.

We scrubbed that doggone hen with soap and water, boiler her for hours, and finally invited a trio of beauties to share our home-cooked entree — radishes and beer on the side of course.

It was one of the least memorable feasts of all time. All three girls married bankers and have gone on to rich but dull lives.

Meanwhile, as I write this, the one cookbook in the kitchen that has been opened is turned to a page headed, "Dinah's Cheesecake." When it's ready for serving, you'll be the first to be invited.

Disagrees with drug approach

To the editor:

I have just read, with mixed emotions, the first page article you ran (Sept. 4, Canton Observer) entitled "Drug enforcement team to hit schools." While I applaud the efforts of the local police to try to do something, anything, to curb substance abuse in our community, I question one statement in particular. Canton Police Chief John Santomauro is quoted as saying "If we do a good job in drug education, we will do that much less in drug enforcement."

This statement leads me to believe Chief Santomauro needs some education in chemical abuse — particularly the reasons people become addicted to drugs and alcohol. The American Medical Association, a somewhat cautious and conservative organization, has established that chemical dependency is a disease. A predisposition for this disease occurs in certain individuals, and the tendency to have it repeats itself in certain families. It is not characterized by weak-willed individuals, people of lesser intellect, tall people, black people, white people, etc. It is an "equal opportunity" disease.

The AMA also characterizes chemical dependency as a "primary" disease, not unlike diabetes. Left untreated, both diseases can lead to death. While a diabetic can often control his disease by diet alone, a chemically dependent person can control his disease by not using the addictive substance. Neither person is "cured," they simply put their disease in remission. This is why an alcoholic/drug addict always maintains that he/she is "recovering" and never "cured."

While Santomauro feels that education will lead to less abuse, I tend to disagree with him. If Plymouth-Canton parents are willing to believe that educating their children will "fix" them, this fact, frankly, scares me to death. Unless parents have been living under rocks for the last several years, they should be aware that almost every high school student in the entire country is going to experiment with some sort of potentially addictive substance before graduating.

Fortunately, for most it will just be experimentation. They are the lucky ones. For those with a predispositiion toward chemical dependency, no amount of education will keep them from the inevitable.

Recent studies show that one in three families is affected by this disease, so it is a very common occurence. Even after being educated, most chemically dependent individuals will feel that they, and not the substance, are in control.

Disagrees with drug approach

Adolescents rarely have the maturity to recognize self-addiction. Even after they are treated for their dependency (most often an intensive, in-patient hospital stay of a month or more), statistics indicate a high relapse rate. Almost 35 percent of those treated will require further treatment before sobriety.

Another 35 percent will choose to never give up the substance they crave. They can be taught all the statistics, do all the bookwork on their disease and still continue to destroy themselves. Chemical dependency is truly a horrifying disease.

I do not propose to have a solution for this problem. Who knows if there will ever be one. Perhaps someday when medical science finds cures for diseases like cancer, diabetes, obesity, muscular dystrophy, etc., they will include a "cure" for chemical dependency. Until then, not only the afflicted ones and their families, but society as a whole, will suffer. We are all paying daily for the accidents caused by those under the influence of an addictive substance — both on the road and in the working place.

Until a solution is found, we do need drug enforcement teams. We need drug users helped, drug pushers punished. We need a tougher judicial system that stops giving people one more chance all the time. We need to make it hard to use and sell drugs. There is too much "turning heads" and allowing illegal abuses to continue.

Tracking down the elusive volunteer

By Julie Brown
staff writer

THE VOLUNTEER labor market just isn't what it used to be.

The number of women returning to the paid work force or to school has created challenges for those who rely on volunteers to get the job done. Although many women still volunteer their time and talents, the amount of time they have left for volunteer work is limited.

It's not all bad news, however. With a healthy dose of creativity and plenty of hard work, volunteers can be recruited, trained — and retained.

The Huron Valley Girl Scout Council has a relatively small paid staff, with volunteers filling a number of roles.

"We do rely heavily on volunteers," said Sally Nitzel, the council's field director for Plymouth-Northville-Canton.

Those volunteers fill a number of positions, including troop leader, assistant troop leader, trainer, troop services director and others.

The volunteers are treated as professionals, including having job descriptions for all volunteer positions, according to Nitzel. Volunteers are appointed to their positions with a letter of appointment.

THE GIRL Scout volunteers receive a thorough explanation of the organization's expectations. They're told about Girl Scouting's goals and values as part of their training.

"Volunteers, of course, recruit volunteers," Nitzel said. The troop services directors are responsible for recruiting volunteers and then supervising troop personnel.

The ongoing training for Girl Scout volunteers includes regular conferences with the setting of goals.

The training for adult volunteers is geared primarily to the needs of the Girl Scouts, Nitzel said. It also allows, however, for personal growth and development among the adult volunteers.

Volunteers can, for example, gain skills in parenting or other skills that are useful in their personal lives, such as time management.

"There are side benefits," Nitzel said.

Recruiting Girl Scout volunteers doesn't begin and end with women who have school-age children.

"We've always encouraged men to be volunteers," Nitzel said. Volunteers are also recruited from among the ranks of senior citizens and single women who are childless.

"BEING A mom is not a prerequisite." Although mothers of school-age children represent the backbone of Girl Scout volunteers, they aren't the only ones giving their time and talents.

Recruiting the less-traditional volunteers can be difficult, according to Nitzel. Mothers of school-age children can be contacted through the schools, but other potential volunteers are more difficult to reach.

In recent years, those involved in Girl Scouting have tried to focus on the value of being a short-term volunteer — teaching Girl Scouts a specific skill in a relatively short time span, for example, rather than assuming the long-term responsibility of being a troop leader.

Some Girl Scout volunteers share a job with another volunteer, thus reducing the time and energy they expend on Scouting activities.

Some troops of older Girl Scouts now meet in the evenings, rather than right after school, in part to accommodate the schedules of volunteers who have paid jobs or are going to school. The younger Brownie Girl Scouts, in grades one through three, still generally meet right after school.

The Huron Valley Girl Scout Council has volunteers who request references from the council staff members. Those volunteers find that the skills they gain through volunteer work can transfer into the paid work force.

"In fact, they have been managing," Nitzel said. Some of the volunteers supervise other volunteers in addition to having their own work supervised.

REQUESTS FOR references are also made by volunteers at Growth Works in Plymouth.

"I've done that for them," said Sue Davis, the agency's coordinator of volunteer services.

Growth Works uses volunteers in two programs, the crisis telephone line and the youth development program. The programs have approximately 40 to 50 volunteers.

"I would say the majority of them hold a job someplace."

Growth Works volunteers are recruited through announcements in local newspapers. Some announcements on local cable television are also used.

The agency's volunteers are primarily Plymouth-Canton residents, Davis said. Most are looking to put something back into their community and believe they can help others.

People choose volunteer work for different reasons, she has found. Volunteers are also looking to fulfill a need they have.

Some women who are thinking about returning to school in one of the "helping professions" may use their volunteer work to see if they enjoy the field and can cope with its demands. Davis said she believes volunteer experience is a good way to make that determination.

ALTHOUGH SOME 95 percent of the Growth Works volunteers "are really pretty terrific people," Davis has found that a few don't take their volunteer commitments quite as seriously as a paid job. Some are a bit lackadaisical.

"I run into that on occasion. So that's kind of a pitfall."

Volunteers at Growth Works are requested to make a minimum commitment of six months of volunteer service.

"It's expensive to put people through training," Davis said, in explaining the reason for that request. Volunteers stay 10 to 12 months on the average, she has found.

Growth Works volunteers go through a screening process, including being fingerprinted and checked for a criminal background. They go through a personal interview and extensive training.

Volunteers at Growth Works come from a variety of backgrounds. They are of different ages. Davis estimates there's one male volunteer for every five or six women. Volunteers aren't required to have a background in counseling.

"Just a real broad spectrum," she said of the volunteers. "We have a real wide range."

Working around volunteers' other time commitments hasn't been a major problem at Growth Works. A monthly schedule is posted and volunteers sign up for different times. Friday nights proved to be difficult to fill, so volunteers were asked to work a Friday night shift periodically.

THE HOLIDAY season during December can also be a trouble spot, Davis said, and a few volunteers ask to have the summer months off.

Flexibility in scheduling volunteers is helpful, according to Betsy Rohwer, director of volunteer services for Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn. The hospital operates Oakwood Hospital Canton Center in Canton Township.

Plymouth's Fab Snage combines her studies at Schoolcraft College in Livonia with volunteer work for the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council. She and Donna Renehan share a troop services director position at Bird Elementary School. Snage, who has a 9-year-old daughter, Stephanie, wants to transfer to Eastern Michigan University or to the University of Michigan to study business administration.

Volunteers at the Canton facility fill a variety of roles and have their own volunteer guild. Some have administrative responsibilities in such areas as fund raising or keeping track of hours worked.

Other volunteers help out with blood pressure screenings and classes; some take patients around, help out in the waiting room or fill back-up roles in the emergency room.

Recruiting volunteers hasn't really been a problem, Rohwer said. More and more of the volunteers, however, have other commitments of paid jobs and/or school.

The facility has a number of retirees who volunteer their time. Younger students who are considering going into a health care field

Memories of fun time

By Julie Brown
staff writer

SOME TRAVELED just a short distance to get to the Plymouth Elks Lodge Saturday night. Others came from California, Texas, Florida, Arizona, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Arkansas.

For all of those attending Plymouth High School's class of 1936 reunion, however, Saturday night was a time for memories.

"It's real nice to see everybody," said class member Virginia (Heintz) Shaw of Plymouth. "Some of these people I haven't seen since graduation. You've got to look at them a few minutes before you recognize them."

Class member George Statezni traveled from his home in Oceanside, Calif., with his wife, Lee, to attend the reunion at the Elks Lodge.

"I've been waiting a long time," he said of the reunion. "It's great."

Seeing his former classmates — some of whom had begun school together as kindergarteners — was a rewarding experience.

"In some cases, to know that they're still around." Finding out about the class members' families was also part of the enjoyment for Statezni and the others.

THE REUNION drew 60 class members, with spouses boosting the total attendance to 111, said Plymouth's Jeanette (Bauman) Schryer, who was the class vice president.

Among the former students attending was author and scholar Russell Kirk, who traveled with his wife from their home in Mecosta, Mich., for the celebration.

In addition to the former Plymouth High School students, three Understanding epilepsy

By Richard Lech
staff writer

EPILEPSY is a much misunderstood disorder — even by the people who suffer from it.

An epileptic seizure, for instance, conjures up images of someone rolling on the floor and shaking.

But less than half of epileptics have seizures of that type. Many have a seizure so subtle that other people aren't even aware it's going on.

People with epilepsy often live in dread. Many fear their next seizure could cause brain damage or even death. Some even contemplate suicide because they can't take the constant strain of living with that fear.

But seizures do not cause damage to the brain. And if properly managed, the seizures generally are not life threatening.

Because of the stigma associated with it, epilepsy sufferers often are reluctant to tell others they have the disorder. But epilepsy can strike anyone, at any age. Although primarily a genetic disorder, it also can be caused by a brain injury or stroke.

THE ABOVE information comes from Dr. Robert Mittan, an internationally known expert on epilepsy. Mittan is the staff psychologist and director of neuropsychosocial treatment at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Sepulveda, Calif.

Robert Mittan

He also is the originator of the Sepulveda Epilepsy Education (SEE) program, a program he has presented throughout the country and as far away as New Zealand. SEE is designed to help people with epilepsy and their families learn how to understand the disorder, dispel their fears and get the best treatment and seizure control possible.

"I like to call it an owner's manual for epilepsy," Mittan said. "Unlike a TV set, a car or a refrigerator, epilepsy doesn't come with an owner's manual."

Mittan brought the SEE program to Michigan for the first time when he conducted a three-day seminar at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti recently. The seminar was sponsored by various local disability associations, including the Epilepsy Center of Michigan.

The center's community service director, Thomas Caughlin of Livonia, estimates that 90,000 people in Michigan have epilepsy. The national figures are put at 2 million, although some estimates go as high as 4 million.

"There are more people with epilepsy than MS, cerebral palsy, tuberculosis, Lou Gehrig's disease, myasthenia gravis, every one of those disorders combined," Mittan said.

YET THE brain disorder called epilepsy remains an enigma to the general public. The common image is of someone falling to the floor in convulsions.

But with 2,000 different kinds of seizures identified, the attacks come in many different forms. Mittan recalled one epilepsy patient who, without provocation, started verbally assaulting him, then suddenly stopped.

"She proceeded to look for a wastebasket under the papers on my desk. That's when I realized it was a seizure.

"Hers was kind of spectacular. Most people stare off into space for a few minutes, and they're back to normal."

Mittan's SEE program stresses that epileptics should have an understanding of their disorder and how it affects their bodies. Many epilepsy sufferers lack such knowledge, with potentially disastrous results.

"One thing we found in our studies is that two thirds of the people with epilepsy are doing something that may be hazardous in their own medical treatment," Mittan said.

The consequences can range from the side effects of improperly using medication to, in some extreme cases, death.

FOR INSTANCE, an epilepsy sufferer may decide to stop taking his anti-convulsion medication thinking it is not doing the job because his seizures continue to occur.

But in one in 20 cases that can lead to a condition called status epilipticus, in which the person goes from one seizure into another without stopping, Mittan said. Although status epilipticus can be treated before even minor damage can occur, it is potentially life threatening.

"So for what they believe is a good reason they can end up literally putting their life in jeopardy."

About half of all people with epilepsy have been able to control their seizures with the use of anti-convulsant medication. Mittan said perhaps as many as 80 percent could control the seizures if they had a better understanding and diagnosis of their disorder.

DESPITE THE physical symptoms, Mittan said, epilepsy is more an emotional and social problem than anything else.

In one group of epilepsy sufferers he studied, for instance, three quarters feared their next seizure would cause brain damage. But the seizures themselves do not damage the brain, although in certain cases they can be the symptom of a degenerative brain disease.

Two thirds of the sample said they were afraid they would die with their next seizure.

"In fact, out of the various chronic disorders you might have, such as diabetes and heart disease, epilepsy is one of the least fatal of all the disorders," Mittan said.

"The fatalities occur mainly because the persons mismanage themselves. People are so frightened. But when they understand the medical aspects, that fear melts away."

Because this fear of the disorder starts early, Mittan's SEE program puts a lot of emphasis on the families of epileptics. He concedes that children with a high-seizure-frequency rate may need extra protection.

But other children with epilepsy should be encouraged to lead as active a life as possible.

"Yes, there may be consequences, but the consequences might be much less than the consequences of overprotection."

MITTAN ALSO encourages people with epilepsy to be open about their disease with their family, friends, employers and co-workers.

"Research has shown that when people attempt to keep it secret, it always comes out. If you try to keep it secret, and everybody knows, what kind of impression are you giving about epilepsy?"

He cited the example of one patient he worked with at the Veterans Hospital who had epilepsy for 35 years. Through medication, he had been able to control the disorder, so he never felt he had to tell his family he had the disorder.

But in the last few years he started to have breakthrough seizures that came despite the medication. Afraid that his family would find out, the man attempted suicide.

"His family came to visit him in the hospital, and they couldn't understand why he did this. He said, 'There's something I've kept from you. I have epilepsy.'

"They said, 'but we've always known you had epilepsy, but since you never talked about it we felt you didn't want to talk about it.'"

Many people with epilepsy shudder at the thought of filling out a job application, especially when it asks if the applicant has a medical problem. Epileptics fear that if they tell the truth, they won't get the job, and if they lie they will be fired if they have a seizure on the job.

"There's a very simple solution to this," Mittan said. "When the person comes to that point, they should write, 'I will discuss this matter in the interview.'

"It's an opportunity to educate their employer and present epilepsy in a positive light to their employer."

For more information on the SEE program or epilepsy in general, contact the Epilepsy Center of Michigan at 832-0500.

Reunion's fun

teachers attended the 50th reunion. Gertrude Fiegel and Carvel Bentley, the class advisers, were at the celebration, as was Irene Walldorf.

There were 106 students in the class of 1936, Schryer said, 18 of whom are known to have died.

Just a few of the 1936 Plymouth High School graduates couldn't be tracked down for the celebration at the Plymouth Elks Lodge.

"Six we couldn't find," she said. "That isn't too bad."

Schryer echoed the sentiments of her former classmates in describing Saturday night's fun.

"Just great," she said of the celebration.

Illiterates can get help

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Following the death of his wife, John Young was ready to throw in the towel.

He decided, however, to follow a different course. That course, adult education, was to change his life.

Young began to learn to read. Street signs that once included unfamiliar characters began to have meaning.

Canton Township's Young was one of several students at a "Literacy Luncheon" Monday afternoon at the Plymouth Cultural Center. Community representatives met with the students, local educators and volunteer tutors to learn about illiteracy in Plymouth-Canton.

The adult students have help available to them on the local level. Plymouth-Canton Community Education, a service of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, provides free adult basic education classes.

The Community Literacy Council provides adults who are illiterate or semiliterate with tutoring help. The students and tutors work together on a one-on-one basis, concentrating on improving the students' reading and writing skills.

THE COMMUNITY Literacy Council was formed in August 1985. The tutors have worked with local adults throughout the 1985-86 school year and will continue to do so this year.

In addition to English-speaking students, the local literacy efforts are also designed to help adults for whom English is a second language.

"Literacy is being talked about," Carolyn Burns, president of the Community Literacy Council, told those at the luncheon. "Michigan is being watched" by others concerned about U.S. illiteracy.

The Plymouth luncheon was held on World Literacy Day, as declared by UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

This fall's local efforts also coincide with PLUS, Project Literacy U.S., a campaign of the ABC and PBS television networks. The campaign will include broadcasts and community service support designed to help illiterate and semiliterate adults.

During Monday afternoon's luncheon, Burns pointed out several common difficulties facing adult non-readers. The table centerpieces were not the traditional carnations or daisies found at luncheons. Instead, generic products in their black and white packages adorned the tables.

Although the generic products represent a savings for consumers, their packaging does create problems for adults who can't read, Burns said. The lack of pictures of the product on the packages makes it impossible for non-readers to know what the packages hold.

RESTAURANT MENUS also create problems for adult non-readers, according to Burns, who is a Canton resident.

Often adults who can't read dine at Elias Brothers restaurants because the menus include pictures of the fare. When their children ask why the family always dines there, the response is that the parent likes that restaurant. The primary reason for consistently choosing the restaurant, however, remains hidden.

Further training sessions for volunteer tutors are planned. For additional information, call 451-6555.

Recruiting volunteers

also volunteer at Oakwood.

For students, volunteering at a hospital can help in gaining acceptance to medical school, nursing school or another health care program, Rohwer said. Volunteering also helps students gain exposure to health care fields.

"It's constantly changing as to who volunteers."

WOMEN WHO are full-time homemakers are still found in the volunteer ranks, but many others also give their time and talents. The traditional view of the volunteer coming from a well-to-do background isn't necessarily the case today, Rohwer has found.

Some of the Oakwood volunteers do hope to use their volunteer experience in seeking paid employment, she said. Some mothers volunteer their time either to brush up on their skills or keep in touch with the workplace while their children are young.

Some of those who volunteer have recently lost a loved one, the director of volunteer services said. They've appreciated the treatment they've received from the hospital staff and volunteers and are looking for a way to give something back.

Volunteers can work in a variety of areas at Oakwood.

"New areas are opening up for volunteers," Rohwer said. One volunteer is working in marketing, a strong growth area in health care.

Rohwer agreed that the current emphasis on paid work for women can tend to devalue the role of the volunteer. It's important to recognize the professionalism of volunteers, she said, and to honor their contributions.

Girl Scout volunteer Fab Snage is also a student at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Church keeps Finnish roots

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

WHILE DIFFERENT Lutheran sects are discussing how to merge, the Detroit Laestadian Congregation would rather converge.

And the point the Plymouth-based church converges on is the teachings of Martin Luther in the purest form.

Several doctrinal differences separate the Laestadian Church, which has roots that can be traced back to Scandinavia, from most Lutheran churches in this country. The most obvious is that the women don't wear any makeup.

Other things, such as television, movies and theater, are also forbidden.

"We believe in one Christian faith," said the Rev. Don Lahti, who's been pastor for the last three years at the church. "We do not approve of any other sects or groups."

So, understandably, the recent merge between the Lutheran Church in America (LCA), the American Lutheran Church (ALC), and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches (ELC) is of little interest to the Laestadian congregation.

To members of those churches, some 5.3 million people, the Laestadian Church is definitely viewed as conservative. It's even considered to the right of both the Missouri Synod and the Wisconsin Synod, which also didn't participate in the recent merger.

THE LAESTADIAN church has stayed close to its conservative Finnish roots. The church originally was part of the Apostolic Lutheran Congregation of Detroit. In 1973, the Apostolic Lutheran Congregation broke its ties with the sister church of Finland and joined with the Apostolic Lutheran Mission instead.

The Detroit Laestadian Congregation, which moved to 290 Fairground in Plymouth in 1982, was formed with the members that were left.

The rumblings of division weren't only heard in Detroit. The same type of split occurred in the United States, Canada and to a lesser extent in Finland.

Detroit Laestadians, after the break up, joined a newly formed group known as the Association of American Laestadian Congregations (AALC). The AALC kept its association with the sister church in Finland, Suomen Rauhanyhdistysen Keskusyhdistys (SRK).

The Detroit Laestadian Church has approximately 30-35 members. Recruitment, though, isn't a main concern.

"Probably our largest growth is from within," Lahti said. "It's mostly children of families who already belong to the church. The young people are closely knit with other children of this faction."

WHICH MEANS child members probably know a lot of other kids in Minnesota, Washington, Phoenix, Ariz., and Canada where Laestadians are prevalent. The headquarters of the AALC, ironically enough, is in Plymouth, Minn.

Children itself takes on double meaning in the Laestadian church.

The congregation consists of a strong fellowship of "children of God," which refers to those who have repented their sins and now have the keys to preach the gospel. Most Laestadian preachers in the U.S. have lay backgrounds.

Lahti, for example, is an accountant supervisor with the Ford Motor Co. He was chosen by the congregation three years ago as church pastor.

A majority of Laestadians are of Finnish descent. It was the influx of Finnish people in the early 1900s to the state's Upper Peninsula, which brought the Laestadian beliefs to the state.

Until the major split in 1973, the church was in Farmington Hills. Following that, the Detroit Laestadians rented Rice Memorial Church in Redford Township.

They bought a church from the Salvation Army in 1982, where the Detroit Laestadian Congregation currently meets.

And any chance of meeting with other Lutheran congregations for a merger, according to Lahti, isn't even a remote possibility.

The unthinkable war needs serious thought

NEXT SUNDAY every United Methodist minister in most of Michigan is supposed to preach on the bishop's statement "In Defense of Creation." The subject is the arms race and peace. It is a difficult topic. Many of the clergy who are supposed to speak on the subject will squirm. More who sit in the pews will be uneasy. We would rather not think about it.

By "it" I mean a nuclear war. We also would not like to think about the cost of the arms race. We don't want to be reminded of how many people this money would feed, how many poor countries it would help in development.

The objection that is always made to clergy talking about peace is "they don't know what they are talking about," or "they are soft on communism."

This is said in spite of the fact that Jesus spoke about the peacemakers being the children of God. He stood in the line of the prophets who, like Isaiah, said that we must beat our swords into plowshares.

If we wish to search for it in scripture, the mandate to work for reconciliation and peace is writ clear for Jew and Christian alike. The basic statement, which believer and nonbeliever remembers, is "love your enemy."

I WISH to present two arguments. First, even though we do not now know how to put such a teaching into practical action, we need to acknowledge it. Love your enemy. I do not know very well how to do it. I do not know how to love the enemy and avoid being destroyed by him. But the teaching is there. It is all right to affirm the truth, and admit that we have a long way to go to understand how to make it happen. The nature of this conflict within us needs to be kept alive. I am taught to love you, but I may have to kill you. This is the issue we must struggle with in the end of the 20th Century.

Second, we need to study ways of defense that de-escalate violence. There are a few who have begun to gather together the stories of how groups resisted the Nazi regime during the Second World War. This is a serious question that needs further study. Is our only answer to violence doing a greater violence? With the constant concern about terrorism and the news of South Africa constantly before us, we face this issue of violence. What causes violence and hwo do we oppose it?

We must acknowledge the power of evil in the world. Our faith teaches us to look beyond evil to a point where it can be overcome. The good news is that our awareness of such issues causes us to seek for answers.

The work for peace is a long-term issue. Each of us only can do a small part. Yet each part is used by God in working out his plan.

I wish I could know how each of the approximately 1,000 United Methodist ministers in Michigan will deal with the request of our bishop to preach on peace. I would like to be in all of those churches to hear the sermons, and share in the struggles. It is our worthy cause.

Composting: rich fertilizer, ecological sense

Terry Glbb

Q. What is composting?

A. Composting is the breakdown of organic material (plant or animal) until it's ready to be used as nourishment by plants. Leaves, weeds, grass clippings, fruit and vegetable trimmings, coffee grounds and tea leaves all break down naturally. By composting, the process is just speeded up.

Q. Why should we compost?

A. Composting creates a rich organic fertilizer, solves disposal problems, and will save you money.

Q. What is the correct way to compost?

A. To put it simply, layer your compost materials in approximately 5-inch layers, mix with dirt and water, and provide air.

Composting can be done in a hole, free-standing (as in a pile), or in a garbage can punched with holes. Each day dump in your compostibles and cover with a little soil. Once a week, turn the contents with a shovel to mix and add air. In about seven weeks, it should be ready to use.

Lime, phosphate or manure will speed up the decomposition process.

Keep your compost damp by occasionally spraying with water, but do not soak it.

Q. What things can I put in the compost pile?

A. Grass clippings, leaves, dryer lint, feathers, tea bags, egg shells, toilet paper, shredded newspaper (not colored comics), rinds, coffee grounds, hair, potato skins, corn cobs, sawdust.

Do NOT use in a compost pile: meats and meat fats, bones and twigs.

Q. How does the garbage bag composting method work?

A. The method is called "anaerobic" composting because it is done without the addition of oxygen.

Fill your garbage bag with compost materials. Add a few shovels of dirt, one shovel of lime, and two shovels of manure. Water the contents, tie the bag tightly to eliminate any air, roll the bag a little to mix the contents and let it set for about a month (longer in cold weather).

Q. Can I compost in winter?

A. Yes. You can use the just mentioned garbage bag method or the traditional method.

Combine your pile in the fall and cover it with black plastic. After three weeks, turn it over with a shovel, water it well, re-cover with the black plastic and let it work through the winter.

Q. How can I use the compost?

A. Seedlings can be started in new compost. Spread compost over your entire garden area to add nutrients to garden plants. Compost can be mixed around the base of trees, plants and flowers instead of expensive fertilizer.

Testing sites named for gun permits

A Wayne County panel that oversees concealed weapons permits has selected eight Detroit-area locations as sites for gun-handling training this week.

Starting Oct. 1 in Wayne County, applicants for concealed weapons permits will be required to successfully complete a four-hour training course at one of these locations, the panel announced.

Applicants will fire 50 rounds of ammunition at a gun range and receive instruction in weapons safety, gun maintenance and legal responsibility. Testing will be done under the supervision of a representative of the Michigan Law Enforcement Training Council or the National Rifle Association.

COUNTY SHERIFF Robert Ficano, one of a three-member panel that issues concealed weapons permits, said the new requirement is an attempt to "teach more respect for the weapon."

A recent Supreme Court ruling has given gun panels such as Wayne County's more strength in its policy-making abilities.

"An interesting statistic. There are now more guns in Wayne County than there are people," said Ficano, who joins the county prosecutor and director of Michigan State Police on the panel. "There are some 2.2 million people and 2.5 million guns."

Ficano estimated the new testing may average a cost of $25 for applicants.

Testing sites include: Irv's Gun Shop, 27367 Michigan Ave., in Inkster and Michigan Firearms, 26140 Ford Road, in Dearborn Heights. Others include: Royal Oak Range, 2920 N. Woodward, Royal Oak; Shooter's Haven, 19999 Dix-Toledo Highway, Brownstown Township; Peter's Indoor Gun Range, 28631 Gratiot, Roseville; Motor City Sportsman Association, 4562 Chene, Detroit; Eagle Gun Shop, 11720 Conner, Detroit; Tony's Gun Shop, 23031 Pennsylvania, Brownstown Township.

Ficano said that of the 1,200 applicants reviewed by the panel each year, about 450 get approval. The restrictions are limited to age (21 years), and a six-month residency requirement. In addition, approval is only given if the applicant has no felony convinctions.

Reasons for denial may include the background and character of the applicant. Sometimes restrictions may include to and from employment centers and to and from the bank, he said.

School bells ringing for entrepreneurs

Craig Smith says he can't work within the framework of regimentation and discipline that is required in corporate life. His mission as co-chairman of the private-sector advisory board of the new Center for Entrepreneurship at Eastern Michigan University, is to show others like himself how to channel their talent and energy.

RICK SMITH/staff photographer

Craig Smith views real estate as "the cornerstone and heart of entrepreneurship" becaue of its risk-taking characteristics. He is executive vice president and director of the Berger-Lewiston-Smith Realty Corp. in Southfield.

By Carolyn Smith
special writer

While entrepreneur may be the latest business buzzword, Craig Smith of Bloomfield Township has worked as one for 40 years.

He is executive vice president and director of the Berger-Lewiston-Smith Realty Corp. in Southfield and chairman of Gov. James J. Blanchard's Task Force on Entrepreneurial Education. He also co-chairs the private-sector advisory board of the new Center for Entrepreneurship at Eastern Michigan University.

Smith sees "enormous potential" for the center that will begin this month to offer limited classes and weekend seminars to existing and aspiring self-employed people.

"Recent polls show that 80 percent of all college students want to go into businesss for themselves," Smith said. "And the U.S. Chamber of Commerce says that 80 percent of all new jobs have been created in the small-business sector. We can't afford to ignore small businesspersons."

Smith, 60, is a second-generation real estate investor with current interests in apartments, hotels and small shopping centers.

"I'm an entrepreneur; I can't work within the framework of regimentation and discipline," he admitted. "There are lots of others like me out there. They only have to be shown how to channel their talents and energies."

SMITH DEFINES the entrepreneur: "He or she is the type of individual who takes financial risks and refuses to be regimented. That person is expressive, imaginative, inventive and independent, and will build the business into the biggest enterprise possible."

The successful entrepreneur, Smith said, is "creative, hyper(active) and driven." A good model, he said, is John Psarouthakis, head of the Ann Arbor-based J.P. Industries, which had $133 million in sales last year and expects to top $200 million this year.

Psarouthakis, with whom Smith co-chairs the EMU advisory board, is involved in the manufacture of building accessories and automotive parts. The November 1985 issue of Forbes magazine names J.P. Industries one of the 200 best American companies with sales under $300 million.

"John is one of the main reasons I decided to see the EMU center through to success," Smith said. "He's a man of unparalleled vision, drive and determination."

Smith also praises Dr. Patricia Weber, associate dean of EMU's College of Business for being "astute and aggressive" and Dr. John Porter, EMU president, who announced that "the emphasis of the center will be on teachable, trainable skills, not on theory or personality."

SMITH SAID the training offered by the center is not intended to replace traditional courses at the business college. But it could be more practical in the long run.

"Business admiminstration is great, but you can't always make a living off it," he said, citing the growing number of employers seeking job candidates with master's degrees in business administration.

Aside from EMU's dedication to the entrepreneur program, Smith offered another reason for his interest in the program.

"I'm tired of the swings in the economy and being tied in with the auto industry. It's good we're rapidly becoming a service-oriented economy, but we simply have to diversify."

There is a bright future for computers and computer technology, plastics and pollution control, robotics and machine-vision technology, Smith said. He also predicts improvements in labor relations and manufacturing techniques, and a wider use of profit-sharing to stimulate better product quality.

But at the core of the state's success is the ability to train future entrepreneurs and to improve the performance of existing ones. Smith said the University of Michigan, Oakland University and Grand Valley State College have pledged support of the program through future development of their own entrepreneurship centers.

"They're just waiting to see how EMU does it. Then they'll play follow the leader," he said.

ALTHOUGH SMITH views real estate as "the cornerstone and heart of entrepreneurship" because a developer is "constantly taking risks," he is pleased to see conservative big-business leaders acknowledge the value of the independent, free spirit.

Smith leafs though a copy of a speech given by General Motors Chairman Roger B. Smith on being named "executive of the year" by the University of Arizona.

"There is a spirit sweeping American industry today," Roger Smith said. The whirlwind of change is blowing out old thinking and blowing in new ideas as we throw open our doors to new opportunity.

"By giving people the environment and the freedom to put their ideas to use and their plans to action, we will successfully harness the entrepreneurial energy and aggressiveness we need to keep our businesses young and vital. We will create true 21st-century corporations."

Craig Smith smiles and points to the passage before saying:

"It's this kind of endorsement and sense of awareness that will place Michigan on the threshold of becoming the technology center of the world. We're going to do it."

Changing work ethic marks '80s

A "wholly revitalized work ethic" in the '80s is just one of the trends to influence the business world, according to Rohrer, Hibler and Replogle, a Southfield management consulting firm.

RHR calls the new work ethic a "full circle shift in individual and cultural values" away from "total alienation from the free enterprise system in the '60s." But while managers may welcome the new manner in which workers relate to their jobs, workers are also expected to demand more of management in terms of human values. RHR recently polished its crystal ball to predict what will round out the restructuring of American business. Their findings include:

- The emergence of a new sense of ownership. Look for a "new sophistication in terms of one's personal and financial investment in one's company. People are more aware of their employment alternatives (including self-employement) and they want greater 'ownership' of the decision-making and problem-solving processes in their companies."

RHR warns chief executive officers not to be defensive about the "new ownership." Rather they should turn it to their advantage by using the increasing sophistication people have in their desire to contribute. "Neither should CEOs allow lower and middle managers to get in the way of this new developing identification with ownership."

- The reaction to dehumanizing business trends. Employees will demand leadership, more freedom from rigid work schedules and locations, more training, sabbaticals and will search for employment alternatives such as early retirement, second careers, moonlighting and self-employment.

And whose responsibility is it to "accept responsibility for personalizing their company's relationships" with its employees?

The CEO's.

CEOs 'must seek out ways of giving recognition to people at lower levels. We are convinced it is up to the CEO to introduce humanity back into his organization.'

"They must seek out ways of giving recognition to people at lower levels. We are convinced it is up to the CEO to introduce humanity back into his organization."

- The return of the renaissance manager. "The CEO needs to recognize that the people who are going to succeed him must have some very humanistic qualities that were not at a premium in years past: greater oral and written skills, more cross-cultural awareness, higher sensitivity to ethics and values, and skilled use of second and even third languages. All these skills point back to the kind of unversity liberal arts education that was forgotten in our race to produce MBAs in the '60s and '70s."

- The mushrooming of age discrimination as the most sensitive business/social issue. Business will have to hold onto older workers at a time when the emphasis is on "flexibility, change and computer literacy," which puts older workers at a "disadvantage."

"The CEO needs to be aware that his professional and managerial staffs are aging and that he no longer has the luxury of starting a youth movement in management. While senior staffers may seem at a disadvantage in a rapidly changing environment, they're apt to be the ones most committed to holding onto their jobs and doing whatever's necessary to learn new skills. Thus training and development programs should be aimed at older employees as well as young (instead of just early retiring everybody over 55).

- The fall of "management empires." Middle management will continue to shrink as computer technology permeates additional levels of the organization. "The personal computer will more and more allow individuals to tap expertise without the need of staff experts. Exotic technology will be bought on contract rather than added to staff.

"The CEO needs to take advantage of this new flexibility and to continue to pare redundant control staffs and systems made obsolete by better computer reporting."

- The cresting of the "entrepreneurial surge." RHR predicts that while the service sector will continue to "churn with entrepreneurial opportunity, there will continue to be a lot of small firm failures. Because consulting and other entrepreneurial efforts are high stress and lonely things to do, many of the recently self-employed will begin drifting back into corporate jobs.

"As far as 'intrapreneurial' activity (entrepreneurial activity within the corporation) is concerned, acquisitions seem to be proving a quicker and more reliable way to grow."

Take stock in market investment advice

practically speaking

The position of the planets are consulted by some before they make a move in the stock market. But if you'd rather rely on more traditional advice, here's a set of guidelines that may give you a winning advantage on Wall Street.

- Don't invest more than you can afford to lose. Keep enough money aside to meet your everyday needs as well as emergencies. Picking a winning stock won't help you if you are forced to sell before its price goes up. How much money to invest in the stock market depends on your financial situation, the nature of your other investments, your investment strategy and several other factors. To be safe, first build a financial base by putting your money into low-risk stocks. Then move on to growth, aggressive growth and speculative stocks only when you feel comfortable doing so.

- Set goals. Do you want to invest for short-term profit or for long-term appreciation? Once you decide, buy only those stocks that fit your strategy. Don't hold on to losers. No one can invest without running into at least some disappointing deals. The trick is to cut your losses by getting out before you lose too much money. Many investors find this hard to do. After all, no one likes to take a loss, much less admit they picked a sour investment. Others become attached to a favorite stock and won't sell it. Remember that if a stock loses half its value, its price will have to double for you to break even.

- Diversify. One basic rule for gaining in the stock market is to diversify your holdings. But too many investments of different types can be difficult to track. A good mutual fund is one way to diversify.

- Look to the future. Looking only at a stock's history is not the best way to measure future performance. You may find a clue in the past, but the business and economic forces the company faces in the next few years could hold much of the stock's fate.

- Don't take tips. Rumors abound in investment circles as individuals hunt for those rare deals that will double or triple their money. The serious investor is not apt to act on questionable advice.

- Be patient. Don't be too quick to unload. Even the best investments take time to pay off. Don't panic or react too quickly to adverse news unless it reflects serious problems at the company and in its industry. The company may very well survive bad headlines.

- Be realistic. If you are prudent, your goal will not be to make a lot of money in a short period of time. Those great buys that produce hefty overnight profits are rare. Better to follow your strategy closely, be patient and enjoy the profits when they come.

- Find a stockbroker you can trust. The personal chemistry between you and your broker, and subsequently how easy it is to communicate, can make the difference between success and failure. Find one who listens and understands your goals.

- Buy what you know. Many people fail to tap their own expertise and knowledge when choosing stocks. For instance, if you are a regular customer at a large company, you may already know enough about the company to evaluate the prospects for its securities.

Stock divident, stock split have same effect

Can you explain the difference between a stock dividend and a stock and a stock split?

As far as you and I as investors are concerned, the difference is only a matter of works. The result is the same whether we receive a stock dividend or a stock split.

A 100-percent stock dividend means that we get one more share of stock for each share we currently hold. If we have 100 shares, we receive 100 more.

The words will be different if it is a stock split. The same kind of distribution would be called a "2-for-1 stock split."

But as a shareholder, the same thing would happen. For each share we held, we would receive one more. If we held 100, we would receive 100 more.

IN BOTH CASES, our interest in total corporation would remain the same. When the corporation paid a 100 percent stock dividend, it doubled the number of shares outstanding and the holdings of every shareholder are doubled. Nobody's interest is changed.

Likewise, in a 2-for-1 stock split, the total number of shares outstanding is doubled and so are those of each shareholder.

There is a difference in the accounting on the corporation's books. When a stock dividend is paid, the corporation must transfer the value of the dividend from the retained earnings account. The value of the stock dividend charged against earned income is determined by multiplying the number of shares in the dividend by the market value of the stock the day it is paid.

today's investor

Thomas E. O'Hara

of the National Association of Investors Corp.

The par value of the shares in this stock dividend is added to the authorized and issued account, and the difference between the market value and par value is added to the paid-in capital accounmt.

When the corporation splits the stock, the treatment on the books is quite different. If the split is 2-for-1, then the par value is split the same way. If it has been $25, then after a 2-for-1 split it will be $12.50.

WHEN a 100-percent stock dividend for 2-for-1 split is affected, the market price of the stock will usually change accordingly. If the stock has been selling at $48 a share, the next day it will normally sell for $24.

However, a stock dividend or split usually is made because the company is increasing its earnings and the market price has gone up to a point where management believes the market would be improved if the price were lowered. The investor hopes the growth in the company will continue and the price of the dividend shares will move up.

The stock dividend or split has little value in itself, but usually is an indication that a company is growing and interested in its shareholders and the market for its stock.

Dear reader:

I am sitting on the deck of an A-frame cottage on Mayne Island watching the sea otters at play in Bennett Bay. Mayne is one of the Gulf Islands in the Georgia Straits between the Canadian mainland and Vancouver Island. In the United States, this same group of islands is called the San Juan Islands.

We've had a couple of days of the light rain for which this northwest coast is famous, but the sun has come out now, burning the mist and clouds out of the sky, and Mount Baker has raised her snow-capped head, preening there on the distant skyline of Washington state.

Mayne Island dweller Margaret Ion looks out on picturesque Bennett Bay.

Iris Jones

Every stretch of water on this glorious coastline has its own look. This bay is a glistening sheen of water that spreads flat between green arms of land at high tide and wears a reef of rocks across its mouth when the tide is low.

The shoreline is rocky and barnacled, slippery with seaweed, but the small rowboats and the big pink buoys are there all the time, just off shore, as are the stairways and high walkways that lead from cottages to docks.

THIS IS rain forest country and the great trees are painted against the blue sky around me, the huge tall trunks of Douglas firs, the single pine tree that has been growing at right angles from the bank over the beach for years, making a perch for crows, hawks and eagles.

I came to Paddy and Eileen Clark's place here on Bennett Bay for a weekend wedding. Nobody in their right mind brings 80 guests on an hour's ferry ride across the Straits of Georgia for a wedding, with everything needed for a two-day reception, but there it was on my niece's wedding invitation.

Vick Ion and David McKenzie and their parents invite you to a wedding at St. Mary Magdalene Church, Mayne Island. Accompanied by a map and ferry information: Leave Tsawwassen for Village Bay at 9:25 a.m., arrive at 10:45 a.m., wedding at noon.

Eighty guests followed the bride and groom in Fred and Trudy Dunn's silver 1939 Cadillac to the tiny wooden church near Miners Bay, so called because this was the half-way point between the mainland and Vancouver Island during Gold Rush days.

THE BLACK-TAILED deer paid little attention as we went by; they wander in and out of backyards all the time, so people aren't much of a novelty to them.

The reception was here on this deck, with the bride's parents, Marg and Gord Ion, as hosts, and a team of friends manning the before-and-after party food and the bar.

This is a typical summer cottage setting, a few hundred cottages on a beautiful piece of treed rock about 10 miles long, so the official reception wasn't easy. Dennis from the Center Store somehow dug up the tables from the Lions Club; Barbara Russell, whose homemade bread makes the island smell so good, did the catering, and Wayne, from the Trading Post, showed up unexpectedly on wedding day to hang baskets of flowers around the deck.

Guests wandered around back and forth to the Blue Vista Motel, the only motel on the island, conveniently located across the road from our cottage. The wedding party filled all the one and two-bedroom cottages this weekend, filling up the pullout beds in the living-kitchen areas.

Naomi and Gerry Daignault just bought the motel last spring and they counted on Expo 86 to bring tourists into the islands, riding the big white B.C. ferries that run back and forth several times a day from Tsawwassen on the mainland of B.C. to Swartz Bay on Vancouver Island, and back and forth between the Gulf Islands.

THE FERRIES land on the other side of the island, none here in Bennett Bay, but there is lots of activity in the water below me. Birds always make their little skim lines on the water, of course, and the binoculars are always ready for the seals, who often lift their glistening heads out of the sea to put on a show.

The seals are outdone only by the crazy sea otters, who come in groups to dive and roll, play and show off against the glistening sea. The last batch that came by decided to jump into a new boat just for the fun of it, leaping on deck and sliding back into the sea.

Everything would have been fine if one hadn't nosed open the flap of the canvas cover and slid inside. He couldn't get out and it took a whole convention of sea otters thrashing around in there before they found their way into the sea again.

You will probably never get to a wedding on Mayne Island, or even stay in the Blue Vista Motel, but if you ever decide to explore the inside passage between Vancouver Island and the mountains of British Columbia/Washington, you could certainly sail a boat through these scenic waters or ride a ferry just for a day.

MOST PEOPLE ferry through on the way to Victoria, but a few knowing travelers stop at places like this. There isn't a thing to do on the island unless you drive or hitch a ride to the Five Rooster Restaurant or hike the island trails.s

You could rent a cottage, I suppose, or find a hotel room in Ganges, on Salt Spring Island, the most populated and civilized of the Gulf Islands. Call the Blue Vista at (604) 539-2463, or Pacific Shore Realty in Vancouver at (604) 222-1188. Try Tourism B.C. at Expo or in their Victoria office at (604) 387-1642. Or just get off the ferry and take the next one back if you don't luck out.

As for me, I'm just going to sit here in the sunshine and watch the sea otters going by on their way to other fabulous destinations

The atrium at the Wheels Inn in Chatham presents a scenic setting.

3-day trips

Ontario has many interesting places

Three-day trips in southwestern Ontario offer some attractive possibilities.

In Kingsville, you can visit the Pelee Island Winery only 45 minutes from Windsor on Highway 455. Daily tours at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Wines may be sampled and tourists will visit the European traditional wine cellars. Call (519) 733-6551 for information.

Back on Highway 401, head for Wheels Inn in Chatham with its seven acres of indoor health resort facilities.

Under one roof, you'll find racquetball courts, a bowling alley, a fitness gym, saunas, whirlpool and indoor/outdoor swimming pools where you can swim laps or do water exercises. There is a special activity area for children featuring a waterslide, ping-pong tables and putting greens.

In addition, there is a day-care center so children are cared for while mome and dad are being physical at the Fitness and Racquetd Club. Free weight equipment, six indoor tennis, nine racquetball and four squash courts are available for use by Inn guests.

WHEELS INNF Also offers one, three and five-day programs at its Country Spa. These include exercise classes, a herbal wrap and massage, facials and hair care, depending on the program you choose. Prices range from $125 per person per day to $850 a person for the five-day Super Tone-Up. Call 1 (519)351-1100 for reservation information or write to Wheels Inn, P.O. Box 637, Chatham, Ontario, Canada N7M 5K8.

Not far from Kingsville, in Ruthven, is Colasanti Farms, a tropical garden featuring exotic birds, small animals, flowers and plants. The gardens may be seen in 15 green houses all year round. Admission is free.

HOLIDAY BEACH Park, on the shore of Lake Erie, south of the historic town of Amherstburg, is a 225-acre park with 50 sites for trailers or tents.

The dark can be used as a base while campers explore Fort Malden National Park, the north American Black History Museum, the King's Navy Yard, Colasanti Gardens and Bobo Island, all within minutes of the park.

Other places accessible from the campgrounds are Point Pelee National Park and Jack Miner's Waterfowl Feeding Grounds near Kingsville. U.S. campers can pick up a Holiday Beach brochure at the Ontario Travel Centre near the Ambassador Bridge or the Windsor-Detroit Tunnel. For reservations, call Essex Region Convervation Authority at (519) 736-3772.

The Navy Has $40,000 To Help Pay For Your Education.
A Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps (NROTC) scholarship pays for tuition, fees and books at over 60 colleges and universities across the nation, and provides a tax-free allowance of $100 a month for up to 40 months. So if you qualify for an NROTC 4-year scholarship, you could receive over $40,000 to help you get the kind of college education you want.
Competition for NROTC scholarships is based solely on academic ability and demonstrated leadership potential, not on your family's financial situation. After graduation, you'll immediately move into a responsible, decision-making position as a Navy officer.

To see if you can qualify for an NROTC scholarship, call your Navy representative.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own . . . but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item . . . and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers . . . so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood . . . but you'll want a bigger crowd than that . . . so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

Pick up your free Garage Sale folder in our office when you place your ad! (Contains two signs, two arrows, a handy ledger, 14 tips for a successful sale and nine tips for a successful ad)

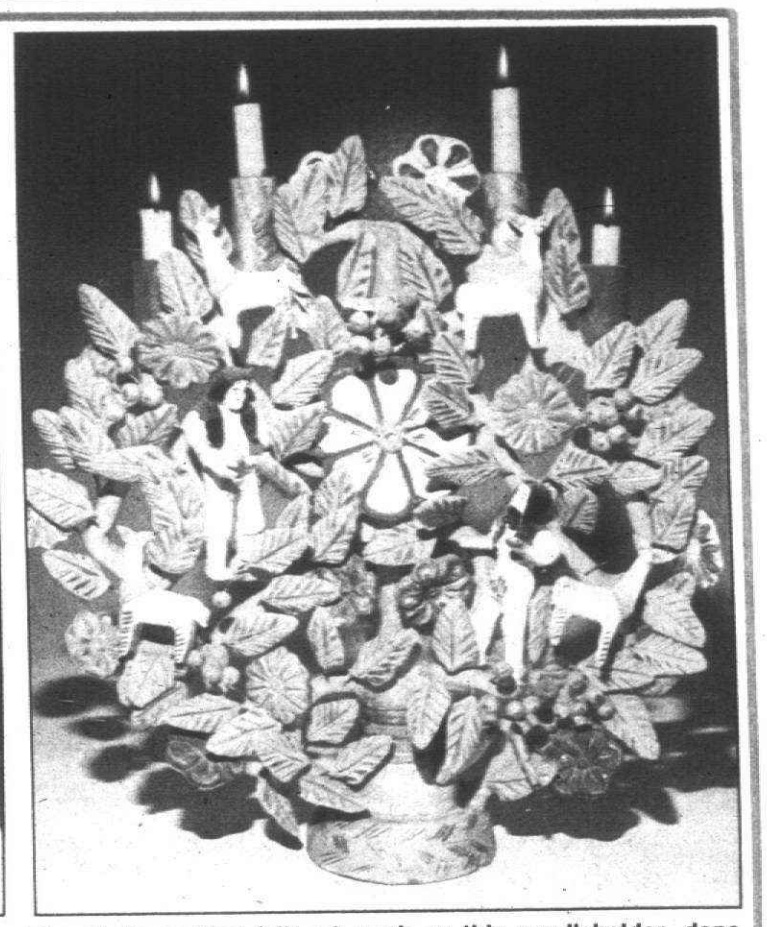
Examples of some of the candelabra in the Margolin collection illustrate the brilliant color and the ingenuity that characterize this kind of folk art.



Beautifully crafted folk art, such as this candleholder, done with a combination of flamboyance and sensitivity, is a far cry from the all-too-common souvenirs sold on the streets of Mexico City.

Coleccion magnifica

Poster purchase initiates folk art collection

By Manon Meilgaard
special writer

WHEN MEXICAN poet Juan Coronel, grandson of Diego Rivera, was invited to dinner, he was amazed by the quality, artistry and variety of his hosts' displays of modern Mexican folk art. This impression is shared by all who have seen this superb collection in the Detroit home of Linda and Michael Margolin.

Approximately 250 pieces by prominent Mexican artists and artisans from many diverse regions are artistically displayed en masse on two walls of the living room — spilling over to smaller groupings in the dining room and hall.

It is like having the nose pressed against a shop window crammed with delights. The panoramic miscellany includes sculptures, constructions, masks, animals, angels, fruits, skeletons, skulls, candelabra, pottery, figurines in regional dress, crucifixes and numerous religious/pantheistic images that reflect an Aztec past and the Spanish influence in an artform that is supremely Mexican.

THE MATERIALS are mostly clay, tin, papier mache and wood and the colors literally leap into the room. As Linda Margolin aptly puts it, "It (Mexican folk art) is a celebration of life."

It is also in some ways, a celebration of death. This subject is not a gloomy one in the Mexican mentality. Images of death constantly occur in Mexican art. The Margolins own several samples of skulls representing "el Dia de los Muertos" (the Day of the Dead) when on Nov. 5 it is the custom to visit family graves and make presents of edible sugar skulls.

One beauty recently acquired by the Margolins is of peacock-blue papier mache, with polka-dot eye-sockets, brilliantly decorated with a cactus, birds, flowers, a frog and a snail — the last five also symbolic images in Mexican folklore.

The collection contains many fine candelabra. Some in unpainted tin or terra-cotta and others in polychrome earthenware ornamented with Adam and Eve figures are surrounded by cherubs and small animals — a Garden of Eden fantasy in mouthwatering, sugar-icing colors.

To underline the inherent humor in much of Mexican folk art, there is a delightful Noah's Ark in papier mache, complete with minute clay figures, which looks more like a submarine or an airship.

And although every single piece is a cherished item, one of Michael Margolin's favorites is a graceful 2½-foot-high statue in terra-cotta of a woman in Tehuan dress — the kind of attire that Rivera's wife, artist Frida Kahlo, habitually wore.

The Margolin collection originated with the purchase of a poster depicting examples of modern folk art, designed by former Detroiter Alexander Girard at a New York textile and objects exhibition.

The couple's interest was further sparked by a visit to Fort Lauderdale, where they came across a little import shop owned by an American woman who, Linda says, "always wore Mexican dress and was as crazy as a loon, but she certainly knew her Mexican art. Perhaps it was the combination of hot Florida sunshine," she adds, ". . . it was so alive."

Michael is equally enthusiastic, "The colors and sculptural forms were unique." They were hooked.

Thus began the acquisition of a few pieces in the late '60s, which has grown into the present vast collection. It was started for fun, but lately the Margolins have been seriously cataloguing the works.

THEY USUALLY BUY through dealers. The quality of the work is comparable to that found in the Instituto Nacional Indigenista (National Museum of Popular Arts and Crafts) in Mexico City and has little or nothing to do with the tawdry souvenirs and crude copies of pre-Columbian art proffered to unknowing or hapless tourists.

For the Margolins, who are very much part of the Detroit art community, art, artists and collecting is almost an axiom. Linda is a curatorial assistant in the education department of the Detroit Institute of Arts (she will embark on a course of study on Mexican art in Mexico later this year) and Michael is supervisor of medical social services at Sinai Hospital and a free-lance writer on subjects pertaining to art, opera and dance theatre.

Apart from the Mexican collection, the Margolin home is a virtual museum of paintings, sculptures, prints and photographs by Detroit artists.

Will the collection of modern Mexican folk art ever be seen by the general public? Happily, yes. News of la collecion Mexicana is beginning to seep out and it (or part of it) will be exhibited at the Muskegon Museum of Art from Nov. 22, 1987, to Jan. 31, 1988. A date to remember.

As Michael says, "Most people think folk art is generic, and while this is essentially true, Mexican artists have a style and tradition which is uniquely their own."

Manon Meilgaard has a special interest in art and theater. She was born in England and presently lives in Birmingham.

Linda and Michael Margolin worked their way from casual to major collectors of Mexican folk art. And they have obviously enjoyed their journey into this intimate part of the lives of our colorful neighbors to the south. That's a Frida Kahlo mask next to her.

Fall oomph (pahpah)

Dr. Leonard Smith
Sousa lives again

DR. LEONARD B. Smith has a prescription for those end-of-summer blues.

He suggests putting some oomph into your musical calendar. Only he spells it oompapa — the kind that has made Smith and his Detroit Concert Band famous for their renditions of music by march king John Philip Sousa.

The concert band will perform at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the Livonia City Hall Plaza. There is no admission charge. The audience is encouraged to bring seating.

Guest soloist will be David Zauder, trumpeter with the Cleveland orchestra. He will play a cornet solo, "Southern Cross," by Herbert L. Clarke.

In the event of rain, the concert will be held in Churchill High School, 8900 Newburgh Road, Livonia.

● QUILT SHOW/HERB SALE

Detroit Garden Center, in historic Moross House, will hold a dual event — a 19th-century quilt exhibit and harvest of herbs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday, Sept. 19, and Saturday, Sept. 20. Admission to the quilt show is $2, but there is no charge for the herb sale.

The quilt show will exhibit for the first time in this area, the 19th-century quilt collection of the Palmer, Ireland and Course families quilted in upstate New York, formerly on display at the Birmingham, Ala., Museum of Art.

The Quilters Patch of Grosse Pointe will have quilt demonstrations and quilting supplies for sale.

The Upstairs Shop will be open with items for sale.

The Herb Society of America, Grosse Pointe chapter, will conduct the herb sale. Some of the items for sale have been created by the members, including lavender and wisteria wreaths.

For more information, call 259-6363. The Moross House is at 1460 E. Jefferson, a half-mile east of the Renaissance Center.

O&E golf field is largest ever

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

The stage is set, the starring roles are now being determined and the cast might well resemble that of a Cecil B. De Mille movie.

Well, OK. There won't be "a cast of thousands" competing in the Observer & Eccentric-Whisper Willows Men's Golf Tournament this weekend, but it will be the largest field ever.

The entry scroll bulged with 204 names Monday, with another 40 on a waiting list hoping for cancellations. Which left tournament director Gary Whitenect, the golf pro at Whispering Willows, with one rather obvious comment.

"Are we ever packed."

Last year, 166 golfers hit the links for the Observer-Whisper Willows shotgun start. So to make room for additional entries, TEE OFF TIMES will begin on the hour. Players will start in groups of 3 or 4 with a tee-off time every 8 minutes.

The list of hopefuls is exclusive, but it won't include defending O&E champion Gerry Thomas of Livonia, who is currently coaching golf and is therefore ineligible. That makes a clean sweep of 1985 O&E champs (and last year's women's winner Gerlaine Bejnar also started by adding her name to the waiting list).

But there are plenty of other big names. Dave John Van Viers of Farmington Hills, a two-time champ who has won the Observer Match Play Championship and the Nardin Memorial Tournament, also took the 1984 O&E title.

In fact, the field is so large that on the course, with an expected 144 at each green, but pin placement often takes a lot.

No. 8 (374 yards, par 4) — Straight tee shot that carries over the O & E tee is of value here. Fence on left side is in play most of the time.

No. 9 (390 yards, par 4) — A deceivingly tough hole. A good drive (about 220 yards, but a ball in the fairway at that distance is on a downward slope. A drive that carries thirty yards further puts you in the water. Green is well bunkered, and trees can be a problem on both sides of the fairway.

No. 10 (475 yards, par 5) — This is very much like No. 1, with a slight bend to the right. Poses no real trouble.

No. 11 (356 yards, par 4) — A short par 4, but straight tee shot is essential "through" opening in trees, which surround the fairway. Really start a drive and it can get into the woods with a downhill lie for your second shot.

No. 12 (317 yards, par 4) — Play it right. Tight dogleg left which invites a shot over tee shot. Trees are everywhere, but if you place your tee shot properly you will easily reach the green in two, making par reachable.

No. 13 (305 yards, par 4) — Another hole by that is wide open. If bet is right, but play it to that side and it can easily be birdied.

No. 14 (370 yards, par 4) — Fairway is open to the right. A few extra yards on your tee placement might make it 3 on par.

No. 15 (219 yards, par 3) — A good tee shot will keep you out of trouble. Water surrounds this hole. Dense trees line both sides of the fairway, and if the pin is placed on the front of the green, it could be tough.

No. 16 (494 yards, par 5) — Longest hole on the course. Trees on right of the fairway, but they end after about 250 yards. Bunkers on the left, but far from the fairway.

No. 17 (156 yards, par 3) — The nastiest of the par-3 holes. With no fairway, obstacles to right shooters. Sand traps on left side of the green could be troublesome.

No. 18 (402 yards, par 4) — Not a difficult finishing hole, simply a matter of keeping the fence on the left. Again, misplay on the green could be a problem. But good players should have no real trouble.

golf

the division between flights is rather tight. Championship flight, for instance, includes those with eight handicaps and below. First flight includes 9-14 handicaps, second flight is 15-21 and third flight is 22 and over.

Gift certificates and plaques will be awarded to low gross and low net scorers in each flight.

But what can the golfers expect from Whispering Willows' par-71, 6,205 yards? Here's a short hole-by-hole synopsis.

No. 2 (483 yards, par 4) — A real par 5 on the course. A long drive is necessary, and a dogleg left means two shots at a narrow fairway. The green is protected by a pond with the green. Overshoot, right could be trouble for a second shot.

No. 3 (443 yards, par 4) — Slight dogleg left, but generally not too tough. Flat. Trees are the only hazard.

No. 4 (346 yards, par 4) — Play it right. Dogleg left. Center can be a problem if your tee shot is pushed.

No. 5 (206 yards, par 3) — Difficult hole. Long shot over water to the green. All times the pin cannot be reached.

No. 6 (386 yards, par 4) — Again another dogleg left. Long hitters can cut the corner. Trees on the left can be a problem.

No. 7 (135 yards, par 3) — Shortest hole

A PLYMOUTH HIGH SCHOOL FLASHBACK

In September of 1970, Plymouth Salem football coach Tom Moshimer moved a journeyman tailback Greg LaMirand, a 6'1" senior, into the staring quarterback position. Against rival Northville High in the opening game of the 1970 season, LaMirand, making his first start at Varsity QB threw 2 TD passes to glue-fingered 6'4" senior Charley Wolfe. That performance plus the durable running of Capt. Ed Scott, Don Chopp and Carl Huter enabled Plymouth to blitz Northville 36-8 and capture the Silver Bell emblematic of football supremacy in the rivary between the two teams. It also marked the last time ever the Silver Bell was up for grabs.

Nice ties

Salem, Chiefs equal Spartans

The Plymouth Salem soccer teams, both the boys and girls, are notorious fast starters.

This season has been no exception for Ken Johnson's boys team.

After pasting Belleville 13-1, the Rocks tied 2-2 with Livonia Stevenson, the area's No. 1-ranked team. Saturday. Monday, they beat powerful Northville 2-1.

"We've got a good team," Johnson said. "Some of the old stalwarts are playing well: Ted Hanosh and Mike Zaretti, Dennis Dameron. And we're getting good play from some of the younger players, and the goalies have played excellent."

It was one of the youngest players who helped Salem tie Stevenson Saturday. Freshman Jeff Gold scored two second-half goals to erase the 2-0 deficit for the Rocks.

"Keep an eye out for him," Johnson said. "He's going to be a good one. He's a little thin yet, he gets knocked around a lot. But he's talented."

The key to Salem's game was the placement of Stevenson star Lars Richters. When Richters played a forward position, Stevenson jumped ahead 2-0 (he scored both goals). When Stevenson moved Richters to midfield, Salem went on the offensive and scored the tying goals.

AGAINST NORTHVILLE, Salem's game was one of simple survival.

"They're animals," Johnson said of Northville. "I've never seen such big players in all my life."

But Salem's speed, more than offset Northville's size. The Rocks outshot the Mustangs 21-10.

"We should have scored at least two goals in that first half," Johnson said. The half ended in a scoreless tie. "We were all-over them."

Hanosh broke the drought early in the second half, scoring on a pretty 20-yard free kick. Junior Denny Reynolds made it 2-0 taking a pass from Mike Ulaszek.

Northville's lone goal came with less than 10 minutes left in the match. Dave O'Malley, the Salem goaltender, handled Northville the rest of the way.

Johnson also praised the efforts of Zaretti and fullback Rick Najarian.

"I'm very pleased with things so far. We've played two very good teams."

CANTON 3, STEVENSON 3: On the heels of Salem's 2-2 tie, the pesky Plymouth Canton Chiefs fought back from a 3-1 second-half deficit Tuesday to gain their own tie with Livonia Stevenson.

Two goals by Lars Richters (he now has 10 in five games) and another by Ray Barnas (set up by Richters) gave the Spartans a 3-1 lead with 13 minutes left in the match.

Dave Dahlberg scored Canton's second goal on a nice pass from Todd Nichols. Nichols, who had scored the game's first goal, tied it on a penalty kick with six minutes left.

Both of Nichols' goals and one of Richters' came via penalty kicks.

"I've never seen so many penalty kicks in a game in my life," Canton coach Mike Morgan said. "You take away the penalty kicks, and I think we had them beat. I really do."

Morgan also praised the efforts of sweeper Scott Morgan (his son), and forwards Steve Rudelic and Pat Frederick.

"We were able to control the ball at midfield. They tend to play a long-ball game, and we were able to shut that down. We have good speed in the backfield, and we have speed up front."

Canton opened the season with a 2-1 loss to Grand Blanc on Saturday.

Stevenson is 3-0-2.

Harrison kickers making waves

Look who's making noise in the mighty Western Lakes soccer conference.

Farmington Harrison, the league's perennial doormat, is making its opponents take notice.

First a hard-fought 4-2 loss to the state's No. 1-ranked team (according to the coaches' poll), Livonia Churchill. Then Monday, a narrow 2-1 loss to defending state champion Livonia Stevenson.

Here's what people are saying:

"This was the best Harrison team we have ever played," Churchill coach John Neff said.

"I will tell you, they were way up for us," Stevenson coach Pete Scerri said. "They were one step ahead of us the whole game. They are a very, very improved team. They have new coaches, and they have done a good job. It is a lot better for everyone in the league. Nobody likes to go in there and win 10-0 all the time; not them, not us, nobody."

Head coach Glen Bruehan and assistant Mario Said have made tremendous progress with the Hawks.

MSU to ride rapids with slow secondary

COME SATURDAY, all the hype, all the comparisons and charts and intricate graphs and minute details accumulated by dozens of so-called college football experts won't mean a thing.

Come Saturday, every team in America will have played at least one game. Which means all those experts will either be glowing with I-told-you-so smirks pasted on their faces, or they'll be buried in a corner somewhere trying to refigure all their data.

That's what makes the game fun for fans. For players, it's a different story.

TAKE MICHIGAN STATE, for instance. The Spartans are touted as one of the top three teams in the Big Ten. A sure bowl game qualifier. A Rose Bowl possibility.

Why? Because MSU possesses the best running back in college football, Lorenzo White. The Spartan PR office has already been busy churning out tons of publicity about White in an effort to earn him the coveted Heisman Trophy.

But, despite what rabid Spartan fans might insist, White is not a god. He cannot carry MSU to the Rose Bowl alone.

Winning takes defense. And MSU's defense will be largely predicated on a secondary consisting of — well, basically, four safeties.

Paul Bobbitt, a senior from Southfield-Lathrup, plays free safety. Todd Krumm, a junior from West Bloomfield, is the right cornerback. John Miller, a sophomore from Farmington Harrison, is the left cornerback. And Dean Altobelli, a senior from Escanaba, is the strong safety.

THERE ARE common traits that run through the secondary. None of them is fast. Three of them — Krumm, Miller and Altobelli — are really better suited to play strong safety. The fourth, Bobbitt, played that position the last two seasons before moving to free safety this year.

So that you understand, in the general scheme of defenses strong safety is the slowest of defensive backs.

"I'm definitely not fast enough to play corner," an honest John Miller says. Then he adds, "But that's where your head comes into it."

Aha. Now you know. Yes, MSU can win eight or nine or 10 games. But don't look for the key to their success in the volumes of preseason hype. Victory for the Spartans will depend heavily on how well their defensive gambles pay off.

A YEAR AGO, Spartan coaches plopped an unproven sophomore in at the corner. Todd Krumm performed well, if not outstanding. "I held my own," he says. "Nothing flashy. I didn't get beat deep, I didn't make many mistakes."

He also came up with a team-high four interceptions, including one against All-American Chuck Long, then of Iowa. Krumm succeeded without great speed. He runs a 4.7 40-yard dash, slow in a world of wideouts who range 4.3 to 4.5.

"People say, 'You've got a world-class sprinter going against you,' but every play isn't a sprint to the goal line," Krumm explains. "A lot of it is technique, reading the receiver."

Krumm survived with smarts, which convinced MSU coaches that if it worked once, it could work again. So Miller was installed at the other corner.

"I have strong confidence in those corners," said Bobbitt, who, by the way, also runs a 4.7 40. "We play a lot of help defense, and besides, there are a lot of things a defensive back can do to break down a receiver's speed. You make him go a certain way, cut down the field and don't let him go where he wants to go."

Adds Miller, "Our whole defensive philosophy is not to give up the long ball. Give up the stuff underneath."

KRUMM MADE that strategy work last year. Can it work again?

"If we're ever going to be tested, it'll be in the first game," Miller predicts. "I think they're going to be passing a lot."

MSU travels to Arizona State for Saturday night's game, and the secondary will be challenged by Jeff Van Raaphorst, who tossed for 2,200 yards and 10 touchdowns last year.

But Van Raaphorst can't match the quarterbacks Krumm faced last season. Long, Jack Trudeau of Illinois, Jim Everett of Purdue and Steve Bradley of Indiana have all graduated.

That must generate at least a slight sigh of relief among the Spartans. Other than Van Raaphorst, the only proven passer on MSU's schedule is Michigan's Jim Harbaugh.

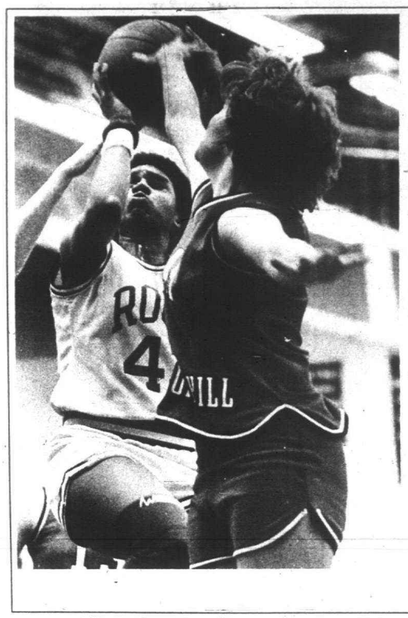
ALREADY, MILLER, Bobbitt and Krumm figure MSU's trip to U-M Oct. 11 could decide who goes to the Rose Bowl. The Spartans don't play Ohio State, another preseason powerhouse, this season.

So you can readily see what MSU must do: Play capable pass defense. It won't be easy. Help from other areas of the defense is undependable because it's unproven. Birmingham Brother Rice grad Mark Nichols is the only returning defensive lineman.

So, despite their alarming lack of speed, Krumm predicts, "I think people will be surprised by the amount of one-on-one we'll play. John plays good one-on-one. And we have a lot of blitzes, so the quarterback only has a few seconds to throw.

"The key to our success is if we can pressure the quarterback."

It's a chancey situation, but if the coaching staff's gamblers instinct remains as accurate as last year, the Spartans could be on their way.



Salem survives; Canton wins 1st

It wasn't easy, and deep down, Plymouth Salem girls basketball coach Fred Thomann knew it wouldn't be. It's never easy for Salem teams to beat Tom Lang-coached teams.

The highly touted Rocks left Livonia Churchill Tuesday night happy with a 49-43 win.

"They got out quick but we started chipping away," said Lang, the former coach at Livonia Bentley in his first season with the Chargers. Lang's Bentley teams used to have wars with the Salem teams in the days of Kim Archer and Jacque Merrifield. "We got within two with 1:30 left and just couldn't get over the hill."

Salem scored the final four points of the game after Churchill pulled within a basket, 45-43, with 90 seconds left. Salem had bolted to a 17-5 lead after one quarter.

Dena Head scored 16 to pace Salem and Kristin Hostynski added 12.

Tracy Greenwald had a 20-point night for Churchill (0-1).

CANTON 45, REDFORD UNION 26: Rob Neu called it a 360-degree turnaround.

His Plymouth Canton team had lost its first two games of the season coming into Tuesday's battle at RU, and a victory, judging from the team's performances, didn't appear imminent.

But with a 15-7 second-quarter explosion, the Chiefs set aside all the doubts and ran away from RU.

"They are so big," said RU coach Terri Anthony. "It was a scrappy game, and I guess they just wore us down."

RU made just five field goals in the game.

Canton's Tory Barger scored 12 points. Michelle Fortier added 10 and Vicky Ferko nine.

RU's Caryn Shannon led all scorers with 14. Janine Sorel scored eight.

RU is 1-1.

THURSTON 34, STEVENSON 33: Livonia Stevenson trailed throughout the game Tuesday and never had an opportunity to shoot for the lead.

Redford Thurston, led by Virginia Angels' 18 points and 14 rebounds, took a three-point lead with just under a minute to go. Stevenson scored with 12 seconds left to make it 34-33 but never got the ball back.

Sue Zatorski led Stevenson (1-1) with 16 points and nine rebounds. Denise Vince also pulled down nine rebounds.

Thurston is 1-1.

CRESTWOOD 50, CLARENCEVILLE 32: Slowly, but surely, the young Clarenceville team is rounding into form.

Falcons fall

Some nights the ball falls, other nights it doesn't.

Farmington's girls basketball team suffered through the latter Tuesday night in a 34-21 non-league loss to Ferndale.

"The other night offense wasn't the problem; tonight we couldn't put the ball in the basket to save our lives," said Farmington coach Diana Fair. "The ball must have went in and out 50 times."

To make matters worse, Farmington was soundly outrebounded.

"They were getting three and four shots a crack, and we would maybe get one," Fair said.

Becky Philp, who scored 31 points in the season-opener at Redford Union, led the Falcons with six Tuesday. She pulled in 11 rebounds. Karen Jenkins had five points and nine rebounds.

Farmington falls to 0-2.

12-3 start gives prognosticators hope

By Chris McCosky and Brad Emons
staff writers

NOT A BAD start.

The two expert prognosticators survived a rough first week of non-league games, each selecting 12 of 15 correctly.

There were some suprises.

Both missed on Plymouth Canton's 7-6 victory over Willow Run and West Bloomfield's upset 28-27 win over perennial power Farmington Harrison.

It doesn't get any easier in Week No. 2, but the boys are certainly feeling confident.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
(all games at 7:30 p.m.)

LIV. CHURCHILL at PLY. SALEM: The Rocks are coming off a shocking 49-0 loss to Trenton, while Churchill blanked Sterling Heights in a road test, 9-0.

Turnovers buried Salem last week, something it can ill afford to do against a stingy Churchill defense. This is gut-check week for the Rocks. Picks — McCosky says the Rocks get rolling, but Emons takes the Chargers.

PLY. CANTON at WALLED LAKE CENTRAL: Canton's defense is as good as it always has been in the past. Unfortunately, the offense is as ineffective. To win on the road is quite a different story against formidable Walled Lake Central team, which is coming off a 17-8 win against Milford. Picks — The consensus is Central.

WESTLAND JOHN GLENN at NORTHVILLE: The Rockets soared into space last weekend, destroying Belleville, 35-0. They've always had Northville's number and this meeting should be no different, considering the Mustangs were beaten by Brighton last week, 42-21. Picks — Go Glenn.

CLARENCEVILLE at AVONDALE: The young Trojans are much improved, but Avondale, a 27-0 winner last week over Class A Rochester, is the Metro Conference favorite. The Trojans will put up a battle, but could be a year away. Picks — Avondale prevails.

BISHOP BORGESS at REDFORD UNION (Kraft Field): Last year RU gave a more talented Borgess team all kinds of trouble before falling, 7-0. This appears to be a more even match-up, pitting Borgess' offensive speed against RU's defense. Picks — Emons gives slight edge to RU, but McCosky likes Borgess.

WARREN WOODS TOWER at GARDEN CITY: An uncertain millage vote could put this game on hold. Tower forfeited last week to L'Anse Creuse North, allowing the Titans an extra week of practice. Garden City looked awful in the first half last week in a 21-12 loss to Wayne. If Tower can't play, then the Cougars will host Ann Arbor Pioneer, which has an open date. Picks — Garden City evens its mark at 1-1 (against Tower, but not against Pioneer.)

RED. THURSTON at MELVINDALE: The Eagles (1-0) open the Tri-River League schedule against Melvindale, a 23-3 winner last week over Lincoln Park. Thurston must move the ball in order to win. Picks — Melvindale wins.

WAYNE MEMORIAL at ANN ARBOR HURON: The Zebras have a potent ground game, led by Darren Tatum, who rushed for 139 yards last week against Garden City. But the passing attack needs to improve after an 0-for-5 showing. Huron is coming off a 26-7 loss to Lansing Sexton. Picks — Huron beats Wayne for the second straight year, both agree.

YPSILANTI vs. CATHOLIC CENTRAL (at Clarenceville): The Shamrocks got lucky last week in a 10-7 overtime win over Flint Northwestern. The defense looks strong again, but QC lacks a breakaway runner. That means quarterback Greg Haeger may have to go to the air more than coach Tom Mach would like. Ypsi is coming off a heartbreaking 21-14 overtime loss to Lansing Eastern. Picks — CC makes it 2-0, both concur.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

LIV. STEVENSON at LIV. FRANKLIN (1 p.m.): The Patriots proved they can play defense in an 8-0 loss last week to Dearborn Fordson. They've had trouble in recent years against Stevenson's blitzing defense. The Spartans, a 7-6 loser last week to RU, could unleash a potent passing attack. Picks — McCosky likes Stevenson, but Emons (homer) takes Franklin.

FARMINGTON at FARM. HARRISON (1 p.m.): When was the last time Harrison was below .500? You have to go back all the way to 1982 when the Hawks won the state Class B title. It's Farmington's defense against Harrison's potent offense. Picks — Harrison Hawks fly.

W.L. WESTERN at N. FARMINGTON (1 p.m.): The game could have pitted the Western Lakes conference's top two running backs, Scott Selzer of North and Mike Hall of Western, against each other. But Hall is now a quarterback on a Western team which was defeated soundly last week by Novi, 27-0. Western may need more Aika-Selzer this week. Picks — North wins again.

ST. AGATHA at TRAVERSE CITY ST. FRANCIS (7:30 p.m.): Another long road trip for the Aggies, who surprised their coach, John Goddard, with a 20-6 win last week over Dearborn St. Alphonsus. St. Francis, a state-ranked team, rallied to beat Tawas last week, 14-13. Picks — St. Francis wins at home.

football

Livonia Clarenceville's young football team opened the season impressively Saturday with a 32-8 victory over Redford St. Mary's in a game played at Benedictine High in Detroit.

Leading from start to finish, Clarenceville dominated every aspect of the game.

The Trojans piled up 384 yards total offense to a mere 25 for the Rustics.

Quarterback Gregg Buell, a junior, enjoyed a big day.

He opened the scoring in the first quarter with a six-yard run and came back with a 19-yard TD run with 26 seconds left in the third quarter after St. Mary's closed the gap to 20-8, thanks to a 68-yard punt return.

Buell then closed out the scoring with a 37-yard TD toss to Joe Jentzer. The Clarenceville QB hit 12 of 16 passes for 147 yards. Darin DeRoeck caught six passes for 93 yards. (Buell also averaged 42.2 yards per punt.)

Scott Pyle, a 6-foot-4, 248-pound sophomore who alternated between tight end and fullback, scored on a 14-yard run in the first period and a 1-yard run in the second period. He finished with 79 yards in 15 carries, while the other half of the Pebbles and Bam Bam combination, 125-pound tailback Bill Butera, added 46 yards in eight carries.

Defensively, the Trojans recorded 10 sacks, including 5½ by outside linebacker Pete Van Zant. The 6-4, 170-pound senior also came up with a key tackle, one of nine on the day, stopping a fourth-and-one attempt by the Rustics in third quarter.

Other Clarenceville defensive standouts included DeRoeck, an outside linebacker, seven tackles and three sacks; tackle Chris Chwalek, eight tackles and one sack; and nose guard Sean McElerhan, six tackles.

"I couldn't believe our pass rush," said Clarenceville coach Ralph Weddle. "We contained their quarterback and kept him inside."

THURSTON 21, ST. HEDWIG 0: The Eagles got untracked in the second half Saturday to beat visiting Detroit St. Hedwig.

Redford Thurston held the Knights to 60 total yards, only 15 on the ground.

Linebackers Chris McFarland and Larry Wyatt, who spearheaded the defense, were Thurston's leading tacklers.

The Eagles grabbed a 6-0 second quarter lead when senior quarterback Kevin O'Connor hit Pat Laird on a 2-yard touchdown pass.

In the third quarter, Tim Wojick scored on a 3-yard TD run and Paul Buford added the extra point to make it 13-0.

Wojick then caught a 25-yard TD pass from O'Connor in the final quarter, and O'Connor followed with a two-point conversion toss to Laird to end the scoring.

O'Connor hit seven of 13 passes for 121 yards, while Wojick rushed for 75 yards in 13 carries. The Eagles totaled 229 yards, 108 coming on the ground.

"I thought we were slow as far as picking up the momentum," said Thurston coach Ron Powell. "We started played better in second half. In the first half we had too many mistakes and fumbles (the Eagles lost three)."

ST. AGATHA 20, ST. ALPHONSUS 6: Even coach John Goddard was taken by surprise in Redford St. Agatha's season-opening win over Dearborn St. Alphonsus in a game played Saturday night at Redford Union's Kraft Field.

"The kids played pretty well," Goddard said. "I was more than pleasantly surprised. There's been a big difference since training camp."

The Aggies got a sterling performance from 6-2, 190-pound senior Kevin Foulks, who rushed for 153 yards in 22 carries. He also intercepted two passes.

"Kevin is bigger and stronger and he's playing with lot more confidence this year," said the Agatha coach. "He's got to make the big plays like he did against St. Alphonsus if we're going to win."

In the second quarter, Agatha jumped out to a 6-0 lead on Foulks' 72-yard run. Later in the period, St. Alphonsus scored on an 80-yard drive to make it 6-6 at the half.

In the third quarter, 6-5, 220-pound tight end Kevin Rich caught a 13-yard TD pass from Paul Gardner and Foulks ran for the two-pointer to make it 14-6.

The Aggies then put it away in the final quarter as Foulks intercepted a pass and raced 60 yards down to the Arrows' 1, setting up Gardner's TD sneak.

Agatha rolled up 235 yards on the ground as sophomore running back Matt Schick contributed 57.

Defensively, the Aggies held St. Alphonsus to 107 total yards with ends Rich and Larry Burnett (6-2, 215) leading the way along with defensive tackle Jason Tonti (6-2, 205).

EDSEL FORD 22, BISHOP BORGESS 14 (OT): Redford Bishop Borgess rallied in the second half but couldn't sustain the momentum in overtime as Dearborn Edsel Ford escaped with a season-opening win against the Spartans in a game played at Garden City Junior High.

"We should have won," said Borgess coach Dan Henry. "We're down, but not out."

Borgess did not make a first down in the first half, and a pair of first quarter fumbles resulted in a 14-0 Edsel Ford lead.

In the third quarter, Borgess' offense began moving, as the Spartans marched 85 yards in eight minutes, capped by Corey Ivey's 18-yard TD run. Quarterback Eric Emanual then connected on a two-point conversion pass to Mike Joiner.

In the fourth quarter, Borgess scored again on a 60-yard drive, capped by Ivey's 11-yard run off a draw play. The Spartans faked the extra point kick, but failed on a two-point conversion pass.

Then, with three minutes remaining, the Spartans marched down to the Edsel 3, but were denied when Mike Owens' throwback pass, intended for Emanual, was intercepted. (Dan Hatty's sideline tackle saved a touchdown on the return).

Edsel then threatened with only seconds remaining, but Borgess defensive back Sean Darkins intercepted a pass on the final play in regulation time.

In the overtime, Borgess won the toss and elected to go on defense. Edsel scored on third down after a five-yard Spartans' offside penalty.

The Spartans were stopped on their four downs.

WORK OR PLAY

Kara McGrath back on course

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

college sports

A year ago, Kara McGrath was tired.

Then a junior swimming star at talent-rich University of Texas, the Birmingham native was working harder than ever. Countless hours were spent in the pool and weight room, pushing a body that already bordered on physical perfection closer to that goal.

It wasn't working. McGrath, second in the nation only to Olympic gold medalist and world-record holder Mary T. Meagher in the 200-meter butterfly, wasn't improving.

When so much work results in little or no improvement, it wears on the mind. And when that happens, when an athlete's optimism and confidence is shredded by frustration, slippage can occur. Instead of getting better, they get worse.

McGRATH WAS on that fence. She wasn't beaten mentally, but she wasn't showing much improvement, either. The dream of any swimmer — a chance to win an Olympic medal — was not part of McGrath's plans.

"Any swimmer is thinking about 1988," she said, referring to the next Olympic year. "I wasn't thinking that way, but now I am."

What caused her to change her mind is not difficult to discern. Her summer's goal was to make the U.S. team for the fifth World Aquatic Championships, held in Madrid last month.

McGrath not only qualified for the team, she sliced more than two seconds off her previous best in the 200 fly in the U.S. trials, dropping from 2:12.7 to 2:10.4.

HER REACTION was predictable: "It was a really good feeling. I haven't felt that good about swimming since I was young."

McGrath's trip to Spain was her first international swimming experience abroad. And despite suffering from the stomach virus that infected nearly all the U.S. swimmers, she made a good account of herself, finishing a touch out of second place.

Meagher, her long-time nemesis, won the 200 fly. Two East Germans placed second and third, both just two-tenths of a second ahead of McGrath's 2:10.7.

"The time I did at the trials would have placed me second," she said. But McGrath wasn't too disappointed. "I came back from the meet and even though I didn't get a medal, considering everything that happened I was pleased.

"I guess what it really did was give me some confidence."

What caused her sudden improvement is not easy to figure. McGrath credited it not to harder work, but to more rest.

"Richard (Quick, the Texas and U.S. team coach) rested us more, and I think that really helped," said McGrath. "I felt a lot stronger in the water."

PREVIOUSLY WHEN McGrath tuned up for a major meet, Quick's regimen would be to stop weight training three weeks before and decreasing swim yardage every day. For the U.S. trials Quick altered that, ending weight training five weeks before and alternating heavy and light swim workouts.

Whether that was responsible for McGrath's impressive drop or not, one thing is certain — it couldn't have come at a better time. McGrath's enthusiasm is renewed, and her plans are changed. The Olympics are now a firmly-entrenched goal. "I'm so close now," she said.

She won't have much time to savor her accomplishment. She's already in training for her senior year at Texas, and she has other aims to pursue as well. She'd like to improve in the 100 fly and 500 free-style, and she'd also — just once — like to beat Meagher.

That may be difficult to do, but McGrath is confident — and patient.

"I'm going to take it one step at a time."

Salmon giving battle on Michigan's lakes

By Bill Parker

outdoors

Fish on!

Fish on!

Those familiar words to avid salmon fishermen are currently echoing up and down the some 3,288 miles of Great Lakes shoreline as the salmon spawning runs of 1986 begin.

So far this year success has been spotty, but action is expected to pick up at any time.

"Things can explode on a day-to-day basis," said Asa Wright, Michigan Department of Natural Resources' (DNR) Great Lakes program manager. "If the weather happens to change, like a little warm rain, bang, there are fish all over. Then the next day it could be slow again.

"Now is the time for returning fish. Boat activity in the lakes is very strong. The coho and steelhead are starting to come in, but it's kind of sparse. The chinook are already at the river mouths or up stream. (The runs) will hit quick though. People thinking about getting out should do it within the next two to three weeks."

AS ALWAYS, the Au Sable River is expected to produce a strong run this year. The DNR stocks salmon in Lake Huron from Rogers City through the Thumb. Rivers in this area are expected to produce good catches as runs begin.

"Past good fishing spots should still be good," said Wright. "It's slow right now at Oscoda but things are expected to pick up in the river. They're having success in the lake but it seems to be spotty. The fish don't appear to be schooling yet, and we're a little concerned as to why. Runs in Lake Huron seem to be getting a little bit later each year."

Near Lake Michigan the Muskegon, Manistee and Pere Marquette rivers are all "expected to be hot spots again this year."

Success on the lakes has been strong with North Point Nailer-type spoons and J-Plugs. Wright suggests anglers use black or dark colored spoons on sunny days. In the rivers Meps-type spinners are always good and some success has been reported through tight-lining.

For the less adventurous anglers, snagging is still legal on various rivers in the state including parts of the Pere Marquette, Manistee and Muskegon. (Check with the DNR for exact locations.) But snagging is no longer legal on the Au Sable River at Foote Dam. Anglers are also required to purchase a $7.25 snagging license, on top of the regular fishing license.

Coneheads? No, great dane puppies. This group of 11-week-old puppies play in a parking lot pen outside of owner Sandy Rundle's mobile home. The pups had their ears clipped and then taped to the Styrofoam cups. The cups are designed to keep the pups from chewing on their ears.

I ♥ my show dog

There was a lot of pampering going on last Sunday on the campus of Schoolcraft College. But it wasn't students, however, who were getting all the attention. It was dogs, lots of them — 1,170 to be exact — entered in the Livonia Kennel Club Dog Show.

The canines came in all shapes and sizes. They were bathed, brushed and brushed some more — all for a short but important trip around the show ring and a chance for a prize.

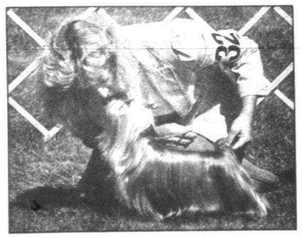
After it was all over, Champion Rich's Halidom Charlesmagne, a Bernese Mountain dog owned by Richard Panko of Mentor, Ohio walked away with best in show honors.

THE SHOW featured 115 different breeds and 81 obedience entries. A cash prize of $100 was awarded for best in show. The seven group winners received $50 each. Dogs from throughout Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania were entered in the show which has been an annual event since 1955.

The Livonia Kennel Club is licensed by the American Kennel Club. Chairing this year's show was Carol Cruce of Garden City. Paul Beebe of Royal Oak serves a president of the Livonia group.

Although a small group, the Livonia Club which numbers only 12, sports some hardworking and dedicated dog lovers. One is Delphie Schultz of Grantland Street in Livonia. Schultz owns five adult cocker spaniels and is currently housing another four puppies. She's raised dogs for 30 years and been a member of the Livonia club for the last 20.

Sunday's show, sponsored by the Livonia club, was directed by MB-F Dog Show Organization Inc.



Mary Bratschi of Grand Ledge has a kiss for her Yorkshire terrier who won winner's bitch in her class.

Sandy Rundle of West Virginia looks out the window of her mobile home and poses with her great dane Amhurst's Mylan. Rundle and Mylan, an American and Canadian champion, took a break from the show festivities and had lunch inside the mobile home.

Dogs and their handlers spent the day trying to impressjudges like John Stanek (with hat) of New Jersy. Here George Murray shows Champion Earl of Sic-Amour, a Doberman pinscher at last Sunday's Livonia Kennel Club Dog Show.

John Davidson, in his suite at the Troy Hilton, talks about the "Hollywood Squares " game show he hosts which is returning to television. Davidson may even get to sing a line, as he asks questions of the celebrities.

Art of the game show

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

SHOW BUSINESS personality John Davidson, who is hosting the new version of "Hollywood Squares," describes TV games shows as "an American art form, like the American musical comedy."

That may be stretching it a bit, but Davidson generates nothing but enthusiasm as he talks about the upcoming syndicated program, to be seen in metropolitan Detroit at 7:30 p.m. weekdays beginning Monday, Sept. 15, on WXON-TV, Channel 20.

In a recent swing through the Detroit area, Davidson was interviewed in his suite at the Troy Hilton. His blue eyes are as bright as the "Hollywood Squares" T-shirt he wore that day.

"There's a trend to bring back the old game shows," he said. "'Hollywood Squares' is celebrity entertainment. We're trying to be as funny as we can play the game. The game is secondary. We're going for laughs."

TO ADD APPEAL, to the game, "We'll give away a car a day," Davidson noted. And, "There are more surprises on the show."

Just to make sure the celebrities come up with hilarious responses to questions asked, some of the answers are arranged ahead of time.

"The only script they have is that some of the people are given funny answers. They don't know the questions," he explained. An answer might be something like, "Your grandfather's glasses."

Davidson declared, "Paul Lynde was great at reading one liners. He was all scripted. If you really want to be funny you have to be scripted."

For the new "Hollywoods Squares," there won't be any regulars, at least at the beginning. "We are going to book nine major stars, eventually to develop a family," he said.

"We want to use the hot rock stars — the mix — a great athlete, star of a TV show, a major film person, major comedian."

CELEBRITIES appearing the first week include Betty White, Bronson Pinchot, John Byner, Lorenzo Lamas, Emma Samms, Mariette Hartley, Phylicia and Ahmad Rashad, Jackie Collins and Itzhak Perlman.

Week two will feature celebrities Milton Berle, Charlotte Rae, Lynn Redgrave, Little Richard, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Louie Anderson, Jan Michael Vincent, Mike Connors and Heida Bohay.

Although his show hasn't debuted yet, Davidson said, "I'm considering that we're a hit already. In 16 years, 'Hollywood Squares' won 11 Emmys. Peter Marshall (the original host) got at least four."

Davidson knows the new show has a lot to live up to, to satisfy old fans as well as offer something to please first-time viewers. "We have to come on like gangbusters. We have to be really funny," he said.

There may be guest stars answering questions about their careers — Johnny Carson did a cameo on the pilot — and film clips shown from someone's latest film. "Squares" may go on location to visit a star.

DAVIDSON, WHO was approached by Orion Televison Syndication to do the show, first became a TV host in 1980 with "That's Incredible!" That program ran five years.

He also has starred on his own talk show as Mike Douglas' replacement for two and one-half years. He did another game show, "The Time Machine," which he said was turned into a mini-series and canceled.

The versatile performer made a name for himself on the stage, in concerts and clubs, movies and television, mainly as a musical comedy star, singer and actor. "I was just burned out on clubs," he said of his deliberate switch to TV host.

He was tired of always being on the road, but he still goes out occasionally. He recently played Las Vegas for six weeks, and Atlantic City for three weeks. His live show combines contemporary material and rock 'n' roll from the 1950s.

"On 'Hollywood Squares' I may sing a line, in asking a question," he said. "They're treating me as a performer on the show, not just a traffic cop."

THE PROGRAM is filmed at NBC Studios in Burbank, on the same corridor as the "Tonight Show." Celebrities love to do "Hollywood Squares." Five shows are taped in a single night and, "They can get in five plugs. We guarantee when that show will air."

For their services, stars are paid scale of almost $500 a show (the same as for the "Tonight Show"), making a total of $2,500 for the week.

Winterize for savings, comfort

YOU MIGHT literally be pushing money through the tiny cracks in your house this winter. But a thorough inspection of your home might save a lot of the money that would otherwise go for fuel bills.

Kenneth T. Austin, chairman of HouseMaster, a national home inspection and warranty service, says there are many areas consumers can inspect themselves.

Austin, whose company inspected some 50,000 resale homes in the past five years, says windows and the areas around them should be checked annually. The installation of storm windows can reduce the amount of heat that flows through window panes to the outside.

Traditional storm windows must be installed by a professional, Austin said. Consumers can install "inside" storm windows themselves by using kits. These kits involve covering the window from the inside of the house with a plastic sheet and are usually inexpensive.

The best kits have rigid plastic sheets and snap-on molding. This design makes them easy to install, keep clean and remove in the spring.

Proper insulation in a house is important in preventing major heat loss. A one-time investment in correct insulation can bring returns for years to come in the form of lower heating bills.

OLDER STORM windows can develop air leaks in frames. To gauge the effectiveness of older storm windows, tape a clear plastic sheet around the inside of the window frame. If there are air leaks, the air will push and even pop the plastic loose.

You can "double pane" your windows while giving them a customized stained-glass look by using designer glass. A professional can apply this process to any window or skylight, according to Barry Rupp, president of Stain Glass Overlays. The design can be executed in almost any pattern while providing an additional layer of insulation.

Caulking around the storm window frame reduces the chance of air escaping around the perimeter. Leaks near the glass on window frames that slide shut can be stopped by the installation of friction-withstanding weather-stripping.

The areas around doors can also provide exits through which heat can escape your dwelling. Door sweeps, weather-stripping devices usually attached to the door bottoms, provide an energy-efficient fit. They are available in flexible rubber and vinyl and glide over the saddle of the door to seal its bottom.

Mechanical weather-stripping adaptations, which flip up when a door is opened and snap into place when it's shut, can also be installed on the threshold for a tight fit.

CRACKED GLASS in doors and windows should be replaced to maintain energy effectiveness.

An insulation checkup is a must.

"Proper insulation in a house is important in preventing major heat loss. A one-time investment in correct insulation can bring returns for years to come in the form of lower heating bills," Austin said.

Insulation in exterior walls, ceilings and floors requires protection by a vapor barrier on the heated, or warm, side of the insulation. Without such a barrier, or if it's installed on the cold side of the insulation, moisture from the house will enter the insulation material and damage it.

A vapor barrier, according to Austin, such as low perm paint, vinyl wallpaper or poly sheeting, should be applied to insulation located under wall paneling on the inside surface of exterior walls.

Austin suggests there should be at least six inches of fiberglass insulation in the attic and that insulation should be placed around the storage tanks of hot water heaters.

Color explosion

Brights are winning comfortably

By Susan Steinmueller
special writer

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Sally Morse shows a floral pattern that uses dark grays to shadow the print so it stands out.

ABOUT SEVEN years ago, were you wearing primarily beige, brown and navy?

And today, are you wearing tropical oranges and greens that would have seemed garish then?

Chances are, says award winning designer Sally Morse, that those same colors you are wearing will eventually make a change in the color of your home decor.

"We know that if people are comfortable wearing something, they'll be comfortable living with it," she said. "It used to be, that if a woman is wearing a color today, it will be in her home in two years. Now, if she is wearing a color today, it will be in her home tomorrow."

MORSE, FROM Bourbonnais, Ill., was in the area recently to give a seminar in Southfield called, "Color Trends and Design," a "fun look at interior decorating trends and colors." The seminar was sponsored by Decorating Den, a 16-year old interior design franchise service that started operations in Michigan last year.

Morse, a consultant to the company, is also an owner of one of the 300 Decorating Den franchises around the country, and was Decorating Den Franchise Owner of the Year in 1984.

The concept of the company is, at least in Michigan, almost as new as the color trends.

Rather than a store, Decorating Den is a free decorating service and shop on wheels. Or, as they bill themselves, "the colorful store that comes to your door."

Franchise owner consultants, who include professional designers as well as talented amateurs such as Morse travel to clients homes in vans emblazoned with the "Decorating Den" name.

THEY bring with them thousands of samples and swatches of name brand materials from wallpaper to carpets. They will take measurements, create a master decorating plan, and do the ordering.

Part of the boom in service franchises, the service cuts out the time required to go from store to store searching for an item, allows one to see what a material would look like under ones own lighting conditions, and provides competitive prices because of the lack of overhead that franchise owners have to pay.

There are now 12 of the fast-growing franchises in Michigan, with regional headquarters based in Lathrup Village.

Franchisees participate in company-sponsored training sessions and seminars.

COLOR IS something that Morse probably knows more about than most, through her involvement in CMG, or Color Marketing Group. Composed of members of various industries, CMG studies trends in American life to predict colors up to two years in advance — colors that industries that subscribe to CMG'S service of providing color forecasts use as guidelines in selecting new colors for products.

"There is an awful lot of thought that goes into what the color trends are gong to be," Morse said.

There is a reason behind their color forecasts she said. For instance, the popularity now of sea blues such as Regatta Blue reflect an increased interest in boating and the marine world.

And, the bright, clean colors that are popular are a reflection of the improved economy and more optimistic outlook.

"The biggest change right now is color," she said. "Color is a direct reflection of how we feel about ourselves. Seven years ago we were beiged to death — it was beige, beige, and 'garbeige.' At that time, we were pessimistic about our future. The economy was bad.

"But right now we're optimistic. People have started buying homes again. And the first big trend is bright colors."

THE POP CULTURE may also set color trends, Morse noted, citing the tropical colors of the television show "Miami Vice" as an example. However, colors such as those tend to have "a short interest span," she said, while most color trends last seven to eight years.

CMG calls colors predicted to be popular "forecast colors." Those now coming into favor are "ascending colors."

Current forecast colors include Calypso, Paypaya, Sunshine Yellow, Spring Burst Green, Purple Reign, Ninja Gray, Vintage Red, Moroccan Blue, and Cameo Coral.

Yellow, which has not been "in" in a long time, Morse said now will be available in more and more shades, including lemon ice, a form of neutral.

Gray has overtaken beige as the number one neutral, she added.

Ascending colors include La Belle Rouge, Knock Out Red, Amethyst, Du Berry (a raspberry sherbet shade), Wedge Winkle (a mixture of wedgewood and periwinkle blues) and Regatta Blue.

Morse compared the popularity of colors with a boy ascending a hill pulling a sled. They take a long time to reach the peak, and a short time to descend.

She predicts that mauve, a color currently "at the top," will be the first to go downhill.

NEW FABRIC trends include "shadows," or colors such as black or gray used as a background to set off brighter colors, such as pink flowers in a floral pattern.

Shadowed fabrics are best used with a neutral carpet so "the eye is drawn upwards to what you are trying to show."

Mixing colors and prints, another current fashionable look, is best if one introduces a color at least three times, to prevent it from becoming an "accident" instead of an accent, she said. And, one should decide which print or color will be the "star" and which the "supporting cast."

Stripes could successfully be mixed with prints if the materials were used, for example, in a two-thirds to one-third ratio to prevent materials from competing with each other.

Morse was recently featured in Woman's Day, Drapery and Window Coverings, and the Wallpaper and Floor Covering Weekly. In addition to being a consultant for Decorating Den, she is a consultant to the Kirsch Co., of Sturgis, Mich. She was a featured speaker at the 1985 World of Window Coverings-West show in Anaheim, Calif.

To contact Decorating Den, call Dan Gaymer, regional director, at 559-5370.

Sealed houses need air

If you have carefully sealed your house to conserve fuel in winter, you must make sure you will have enough air for combustion with an oil — or gas-burner.

One simple method is to remove a small pane of glass from a basement window near the boiler, states the Better Heating-Cooling Council. Another way is to run a length of sheet-metal duct from a window to a spot near the burner.

By providing outside air for combustion, instead of air from inside the house which has already been heated, you can reduce your fuel costs slightly.

Come clean

The louvers inside your hot air registers catch a lot of recirculated dirt all winter, advises the Better Heating-Cooling Council. In most instances the front plate can be removed, so get in there with your vacuum cleaner at the first opportunity, before you blow more dirt around your home.

Tap imagination to remodel bathroom

Bathrooms have come full circle.

Once upon a time, luxury bathrooms were reserved only for the rich. Royalty lounged in marble bathtubs adorned with gold-plated fixtures, leaving the peasants to bathe in a nearby stream.

Centuries later came the era of the drab bathroom. Everybody had one that looked the same — white porcelain tubs and tile, rusty fixtures and plain curtains.

Finally, the chic bathroom is back in style. And the good news is there's something to fit every price range — whether it's the $25,500 Sensorium bathing pool and Ambiance system that controls water temperature and depth, music, whirlpool jets and lighting and gives a bird's-eye view to the front door via a small TV surveillance screen, or a $6 colored ceramic pull to brighten a bathroom drawer.

Many Americans are plunging into improvements for what was once the most neglected room in the house. This year, more Americans will remodel their bathrooms than ever before, spending about $8.6 billion in the process, according to recent industry surveys.

The goal of many bath remodelings is either a luxuriously large new space, or the more efficient use of every square inch of the present bath. New baths are being designed with generous plays of light and color — gleaming surfaces, bolder color schemes and glamorous accessories.

If space and budget allow, many home owners desire the added amenities of skylights, sound systems, exercise areas, dressing rooms, whirlpools, vanities, oversized tubs and lots of ceramic tile.

Tubs are larger and more comfortable, gold-plated faucets abound again and saunas, steam rooms, bidets and even fireplaces are commonplace. The bathroom has become a haven in which to relax, unwind and escape the busy world. Function provides the blueprint, but graciousness and comfort are the end result.

If you're toying with the idea of remodeling your own bathroom, dive in, say designers. Dollar for dollar, bathroom remodeling recoups the investment at the time of the sale. However, a word of advice from designer Lyn Peterson: "Don't outdo the neighborhood. If you live on a street with $80,000 homes, don't build a bathroom for $50,000 and expect the house to automatically bring $130,000 at resale."

As for actual design, experts at Motif Designs recommend starting with gray or another neutral color for the fixtures and floors because the bathroom will stay fashionable longer. Add color through decorations like shower curtains, towels rugs and drawer pulls, which can be replaced and updated periodically. Good bathrooms are designed to remain functional for 40 years, Peterson says.

Patterned vinyl wall coverings can instantly personalize a bathroom. Be sure to prep the walls correctly for proper application and staying power. Motif Design experts like floor-to-ceiling tile because of practicality and longevity as well as the European aura it can create.

Lights should be positioned on opposite sides of the mirror for grooming needs. Natural light is wonderful for applying makeup, so adding sunlight through a skylight where possible or adding a window is an improvement. Sunlight enriches the look of the room while providing ventilation and humidity control.

Converting all bathroom fixtures to fluorescent will improve a bathroom's lighting quality and reduce electricity costs, according to Jim Jensen, a technical lighting specialist for General Electric.

Some families have been able to use adjacent bedroom space or actually add another story to provide for the ultimate master bath, says Bill Waikart, president of Home Masters Ltd., a north Virginia firm specializing in kitchens and baths. Most bath remodeling jobs concentrate on giving the illusion of space and comfort.

Even "extras" need attention. Exhaust fans with heaters, washerless faucets and exotic lighting fixtures combine with towel bars and accessories of chrome, fashion-colored plastic, acrylic or polished brass to make the details striking. Shower curtains are not just functional — they're country in billows of cloth, city-style in slick plastic.

Personalize your bathroom by hanging a small, distinctive clock, or arranging a vase of fragrant flowers or a basket of potpourri says Glamour magazine.

Cook's corner

Attention to detail revitalizes kitchen

Vinyl floor coverings, such as country quilt design from Mannington Resilient Floor's "Opus" Collection, can lend to the overall warmth of a kitchen.

THE KITCHEN is likely the most complicated room in the house. It's the center of activity — meals are prepared there, friends and families gather there, even laundry is sorted there.

Most home owners can name their kitchen's imperfections at the drop of a hat. But the remedies — remodeling or rebuilding — are often too costly, too devastating and too time-consuming to consider.

Surprisingly, decorators say many problem kitchens need only make-overs, not plastic surgery. And the work involved won't send the family out on the restaurant circuit for the next six months.

Space usually isn't considered a problem in a kitchen — lack of it is. If your kitchen is barely big enough to turn around in, start thinking smaller. Make your kitchenware do double duty — buy cookware that can go from the oven onto the table. Consider new appliances only if they do more than one job.

Many small families could get by with the smaller versions of major appliances, like compact washers and dryers and mini-microwaves. Many appliances can be attached under the cabinets where there's loads of unused space.

IF A SMALL TABLE or bar barely accommodates the family, try using larger plates that easily contain meals, eliminating the need for extra dishes, according to an article in Glamour magazine.

See walls and doors as potential storage spaces. Try hanging steel mesh racks on the walls or ceilings for utensils and pans. A collapsible shelf could be mounted on a closet door for instant serving space. You can also add temporary counter space with put-up-take-down tables.

Light walls, such as yellow or beige, will make a space seem larger.

Maybe your kitchen just needs a shot of excitement. If the floor looks drab and lacks luster and shine even after cleaning, you might want to replace it with carpet, firm or resilient flooring. The floor can be the focal point of the room and serve as a unifying element.

"The most popular patterns are light in color and very simple in design," says Albin J. Milwid, vice president and director of styling for Mannington Resilient Floors. "They will remain compatible with color and design changes that may occur over the years in a room. Keep the floor design simple and be adventurous when choosing wall decorations and window treatments."

THE WORK surfaces in most kitchens take beatings from hot pots, sharp knives and sudsy sponges every day.

Terence Conran, contemporary designer and owner of Conran and Habitat stores, recommends plastic laminates since they are simple to cut to size, easy to maintain and usually heat resistant. But a good chopping board is required since most laminates scratch.

Color, of course, is the easiest element to change. But before you pick up the brush, consider the amount of natural light in the room. Blues tend to be cold and work best in a room with natural light. Bright colors, such as yellows, are sunny and cheerful, good choices for rooms with less light.

If a small table or bar barely accommodates the family, try using larger places that easily contain meals, eliminating the need for extra dishes. Another suggestion: see walls and doors as potential storage spaces.

In the "Better Homes and Gardens New Decorating Book" (Meredith, 1981), its editors suggest painting everything in a drab kitchen white: walls, cabinets, woodwork, ceilings, the floor, the works. Sprinkle color with posters, prints, dish towels and colorful kitchen accessories. Ceramic tile can also add spark.

A dark kitchen with wooden cabinets can be remedied by painting cabinetry with bright high-gloss enamel, woodwork in a contrasting hue or white. Try adding new cabinet pulls, too.

ONCE YOU'VE made your kitchen space more attractive and space efficient, why not make it energy efficient as well? A lower heat bill may just mean more money to fund the repairs.

- Self-cleaning ovens consume large amounts of energy, so clean them by hand.
- Defrost foods before cooking.
- Try baking several things at once instead of one single item.
- Do not peek into the oven while it's on. Each peek drops the temperature by 25 to 50 degrees.
- Use toaster ovens, portable appliances or microwave ovens to cook small quantities of food.
- Try heating a ceramic tile while baking. Use the tile, rather than the oven, to keep foods hot.
- Run the dishwasher for full loads only.
- Turn off your ice maker in the refrigerator when not in use.
- Cool hot foods before refrigerating.

By starting with the premise that the kitchen is your work space and your family's favorite room, you'll make the most intelligent improvements and your kitchen will suit the life you lead.

Catalog clever

Mail-order furnishings you can't live without

YOU'VE NO doubt let your fingers do the walking when buying a new shirt or toys for the kids by catalog. Today's home decorators are taking this idea a step further — they're creating a whole new environment for the home with a pile of catalogs, a credit card, telephone or order form.

If you need or want something that will make the house more comfortable, more efficient or charming, you don't have to leave home to get it.

Mail-order decorating isn't a new concept. Big-name department stores like J.C. Penney, Montgomery Ward and Sears have featured home furnishing sections in their hefty catalogs for years. Now companies like Spiegel and Bloomingdale's offer mini-catalogs featuring their home furnishings line.

It seems specialty is the name of the game in today's mail-order market. Most retailers focus on a certain theme or part of the home.

TAKE CONRAN'S, the Britain-based retailer. The company is known for its sleek, functional designs in bold colors at moderate prices.

If getting organized is your top priority, you'll need shelves, filing cabinets, closet organizers and stands for the VCR and home computer. All these, along with office chairs, rolling carts, stereo furniture, lighting and desk accessories are available through Conran's catalog. There are grids, hooks and shelves for organizing the bathroom and storage systems and racks for the kitchen.

City and country cooks can be gourmets with the culinary delights in the Williams-Sonoma catalog. Kitchen items, like bright blue bowls, add sparks of color while storage racks, wooden knife holders and a vertical paper towel holder may bring out your kitchen's potential. With the proper cookware, you can create serious food. Get the right pan, the right pot, the little whisk you've always wanted. No Julia Childs recipe is beyond you now.

MANY CATALOGS boast at least a few items for the bedroom. The Company Store of La Crosse, Wis., offers soft merino wool mattress pads designed as fitted bottom sheets and down quilts. Another catalog, Touch of Class of Huntingburg, Ind., offers an array of bedroom accessories with monograms in all the classic styles on sheets, pillowcases, comforters and towels. No one will wonder which bedroom is yours.

Even L.L. Bean, the mainstay for hunting boots and outerwear, offers cool-weather bed items. A buffalo plaid blanket is available in red and black, white and black or green and black, and there's the Hudson's Bay Point blanket. Bean also offers all-cotton flannel sheets in solids or tattersall patterns.

Conran's offers bedroom items, too. Their sofa/sleeper is a convertible frame that is a couch by day and a double bed with a 2-inch-thick cotton batting mattress at night. A quilted sofa also opens out into a bed, and there are complete bedroom sets with storage units, beds, chests, wardrobes and nightstands. Add rugs and linens from other catalog pages for accessories.

For art by mail, try the Museum of Modern Art's catalog of calendars and posters, or check out the Metropolitan Museum of Art's catalog.

Serious home decorators might be skeptical about the end result of a mail-order room. How can you be sure you're really getting the look you see on the glossy pages?

To help its customers, Laura Ashley, another British retailer, groups the designs and colors used in its wallpaper, paint, fabric, borders, trimmings, tile and lights in a simple and easy-to-use system of color groupings. At a glance, customers can see how their choice of colors and designs will work together to complement each other.

HOWEVER, WITH no salesperson, the customer must assume much of the responsibility. Here's a checklist.

- Note exact sizes on everything from beds to borders.
- Find out if the furniture you plan to order comes assembled.
- If it's unassembled, decide if you'll be able to handle the job with your present tool kit and skills.
- Note the date the order is placed and projected date of arrival.
- How will the materials be delivered and is there an extra cost?

The best part of mail-order decorating, aside from placing the initial orders, is getting the goods. At best, everything will fit perfectly into your new scheme. At worst, you'll have to send it all back. But don't worry, many companies will even pick up returns at your door.

Window dressing: no longer a pane

SOME MIGHT say a window treatment's job is simply to hang there and look pretty.

Interior designers know differently. To them, an attractive window treatment can be an instant remedy for decorating dilemmas, provide insulation, add sound-proofing and protect furniture from the sun.

Functionality, of course, was the window treatment's first calling. Long before colorful miniblinds and billowy fabric curtains, people were putting up cloth or skins for comfort and privacy.

Window treatments still can't be beat for energy-conscious home owners. The editors of "The Book of Inside Information" (Boardroom; 1985) suggest white, tightly woven shades that run on tracks permanently affixed to the window for blocking out the heat of the sun. At the same time, shades allow enough sunlight to minimize any additional lighting requirements.

ANOTHER ALTERNATIVE for energy-saving households is to combine venetian blinds with tightly woven draperies for an attractive, but insulating treatment.

Covering window glass with a reflective film coating allows windows to reflect radiant energy back into the room rather than allowing it to escape through the glass. Thermal-lined draperies and window blankets of yesterday are also showing up again in fashionable sheers, draperies and valances.

Window treatments can also serve as a home's "makeup," according to the editors of the "Better Homes and Gardens New Decorating Book" (Meredith; 1981). For instance, fabric window coverings are a sure way to soften the angularity of a room. Harsh lines of walls, floors and ceilings can be eased with soft, flowing draperies.

A window treatment also can change the visual dimensions of the window it's dressing, or make a window look tailored and compact without appearing severe. Skimpy windows grow with oversized draperies while shirred curtains on generous windows provide the softness of fabric while keeping trimmings to a minimum.

Create an accessible, inviting laundry room

THE HOME laundry has come up in the world since Grandma went down to the cellar on Monday mornings and spent the day with her wringer washer.

Back then, Grandma didn't have much choice when it came to doing chores the hard way. But today's active consumers do. Convenience is a must, and in busy families that means saving time by finding ways to combine home activities.

It's not surprising, then, that a growing number of consumers are arranging marriages of convenience between the laundry center and the kitchen, bringing their attractive equipment up from the basement and into the heart of the home.

Though more than 60 percent of American women now work outside the home, the kitchen remains the hub of family life, a central work area where busy people can combine activities and still be with their families.

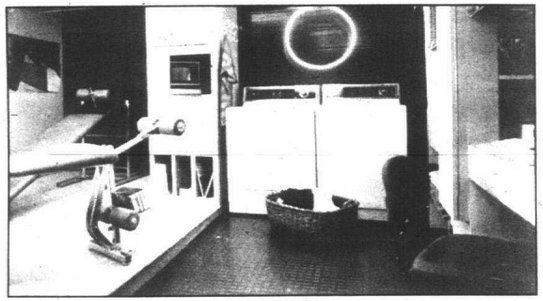
ACCORDING TO Ellen Cheever, design director of the Maytag Kitchen Idea Center, there are several reasons why the kitchen area is a favorite location for today's home laundry.

"The possibility of using existing plumbing lines and centralizing two focal home work areas is a way to save dollars as well as time," she says. "A laundry near the kitchen allows the storage and countertop space to do double duty.

"The breakfast table, for example, can serve as a folding counter; cabinets above the washer and dryer, or adjacent to it, can be used to store laundry supplies. The kitchen sink will handle the pretreating of stains, eliminating the cost of a second fixture."

The one caveat Cheever offers those planning a kitchen laundry is to shield the laundry function from direct contact with the food preparation area with a partition or a peninsula counter. If desired, folding or bi-fold doors can be used to close the area off when not in use.

If space is at a premium, the new full-size stacked laundry units now make it possible to convert a small pantry or closet into a laundry center without compromising on washer capacity. These models take up approximately 27 inches of floor space instead of the 54 to 60 inches needed for side-by-side models, freeing space for creative uses. In a kitchen, that extra 27 to 33 inches can become a desk for the household executive, as well as a counter for folding.



One creative solution to laundry room design makes the laundry do double duty, as in this laundry/exercise/sewing room.

ANOTHER IDEA is to use the space gained from stacked units for an ironing and mending center. The ironing board can be built in, maybe attached to the closet door. A sewing machine can be placed on a built-in countertop with drawers installed underneath. That's certainly more convenient than hauling everything out of a hall closet and placing it on the dining room table when it's time to mend a seam.

A laundry room can actually help the family heating bill. Put a filter on your clothes dryer with a vent coming back into the house. It will add heat and humidity to the house when the dryer is operating.

There's a final bonus for locating the laundry near the kitchen . . . the family is usually around, so there's more opportunity to enlist help with the wash-day chores.

Furniture guide offered

The Furniture Information Council has published a booklet "Express Yourself: A Guide to Furniture."

The booklet, designed to help consumers plan and shop for furniture, offers valuable advice on what to look for in furniture construction, style and design.

The 16-page booklet also provides a glossary of furniture terms, as well as a detailed look at wood and upholstered furniture.

"Furniture is such an important element in the home environment, yet many people don't feel comfortable making buying decisions because they just don't know what to look for, or what questions to ask," said Nancy High, the council's director of communications.

The Furniture Guide is part of the council's effort to educate consumers about the furniture industry and its products.

Headquartered in High Point, North Carolina, the council is a non-profit organization that offers advice and information on the planning, selection and care of furniture purchases.

The booklet is available by sending $1 to cover postage and handling to: FIC/Furniture Guide, P.O. Box HP7, High Point, North Carolina 27261.

Refinishing made easy

REFINISHING WOOD — whether it be a flea market "find," an unfinished furnishing or a precious family heirloom — has become one of the more popular, not to mention one of the easier, do-it-yourself trends around. It doesn't require a workshop full of tools and you can begin with a small project and ease your way into more complicated ones.

Gene and Katie Hamilton, home/workshop journalists and do-it-yourself consultants to the Minwax Co., tackled their first refinishing project more than 20 years ago when they refinished a small oak desk that cost $15 at the Salvation Army. As their confidence grew, so did their skills. Over the years they've tackled everything from dining room and bedroom furniture to a household of oak woodwork and moldings. (For a free booklet about wood refinishing, write to the Hamiltons at P.O. Box 300, Elmhurst, Ill. 60126.)

The Hamiltons gained most of their experience through trial and error. Here are four common mistakes they've already made . . . so you won't have to.

UNEVEN SANDING: "We found it's most important to sand the wood surface uniformly," said Gene Hamilton. "We used to sand the flat surfaces with great vigor, but lost steam on the edges and legs. The result was a finish that looked blotchy and with too many different shades. This is especially true with pine."

The Hamiltons like to use a sanding block and No. 120 grit sandpaper to remove dirt and smooth the grain and imperfections on flat surfaces. To sand round, curved surfaces, they make their own sanding strips. Simply stick a piece of masking or duct tape to the back of a piece of sandpaper, then cut the tape and paper into strips the exact width that you need. Work the strips like dental floss. These strips make sanding round furniture legs or spindles an easy job.

"Don't forget to rub down all surfaces with a tack rack just before applying the finish," said Katie Hamilton. "We prefer a penetrating stain."

DARK END GRAIN: After the Hamiltons stained their first pine footstool, they noticed the edges of the stool and parts of the legs turned out darker than the other parts. Later, they discovered the reason — the end grain areas absorb more stain than the rest of the wood. They found the easiest solution is to seal the troublesome end grain with a wood conditioner. They coat the entire piece after sanding and before applying any finish. The Hamiltons also use it on their hardwood projects before applying a dark-colored finish, although dark tones tend to come out lighter after an application of wood conditioner.

UNEVEN-LOOKING STAIN: On their first few projects, the Hamiltons tried to apply the stain too heavily. Most manufacturers recommend you apply their stain in several light coats, wiping off the excess between coats. Following the manufacturers' advice, the Hamiltons now apply penetrating stain with a rag, allowing it to soak into and become part of the wood. Then, after five to 15 minutes, they wipe up the excess stain with a clean rag. The Hamiltons like the even, professional-looking finish they get with two light coats of a wood finish, instead of one heavy one.

PROPER LIGHTING: The Hamiltons discovered good lighting, especially backlighting, is a key element in obtaining a good-looking high-gloss finish. Place a bare bulb behind the work you are finishing. Then you can see the reflection of the light in the wet finish and tell instantly where the missed spots, runs or drips are. This is most important when you're applying a high-gloss finish, such as polyurethane, but it applies to all finishing projects.

They also found inexpensive clip-on light fixtures handy for this job. Another useful tip is to raise the project up to a comfortable working height by placing it on sawhorses or a table.

Here are a few quick tips that will help you achieve a professional-looking finish.

Between finishing applications, wipe the wood down with a wood-finishing pad. It is easier to use than steel wool or sandpaper and does a better job.

To rejuvenate a worn or lightly scratched finish, apply a protective topping of paste finishing wax. Just scoop a small amount of wax into the center of a folded piece of cheesecloth. Then rub, squeezing the cheesecloth gently to allow the minimum amount of wax to come through. Let it dry a few minutes and buff lightly.

Avoid the urge to refinish outside. Dust adheres to the finish and tiny seedlings, bugs and other minute particles often blow onto the finish. You may not be able to see them at the moment, but just after you've worked on a spot and moved on to another, they'll surely show up. You've got to select a dust-free environment for this type of work.
