Canton police to add chaplains to staff

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If police from departments surrounding Canton Township are a little envious, it's understandable.

First, Canton replaced its small, old station with a new one so large it'll be years before police personnel fill it.

Now it's launching a chaplain program — usually the preserve of big city police departments.

ONCE APPOINTED, department clergy will serve as more than just ceremonial figureheads.

Chaplains, in addition to attending department functions, will ride with police in squad cars, assist them on calls, and deliver messages to families who've had a loved one involved in a bad accident. They'll be there for suspects to talk to, and to aid crime victims. If need be, they can help calm a barricaded gunman or hostage taker.

The majority of their time, though, likely will be spent with officers.

"Police have an extremely stressful occupation. What they do is reality work — it's like working in an emergency room," said Canton Police Chief John Santomauro, who for 12 years has taught police academy stress classes and whose decision it was to launch the local program.

Santomauro is hopeful his department will shed the reluctance characteristic of police to accept "people from the outside" and take advantage of the program.

Work-related stress can cause complex problems for police both on and off the job, the chief said.

"The well-being of an employee involves both their personal and professional life. Where there tends to a problem developing, it's often because of the employee's work environment.

"Problems can affect officers' ability to do their work," said Santomauro.

" 'Chaplain' almost becomes a misnomer," Santomauro added. ". . . We're not selling religion and we're not offering religious counseling or education. We're de-emphasizing the religious aspect and emphasizing the humanistic aspect. We're offering an ear for someone to talk to."

Chaplains will be a resource for both officers and their families, he said.

SINCE INITIATING a search six months ago for volunteer chaplains, the police department has come up with three finalists: the Rev. W. Thomas Keilman of Word of Life church in Canton, the Rev. T.L. Grotjohn of St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton, and Canton's Rev. Wayne Byrum of the Methodist Church. (See story below.)

It's likely the three will share chaplain duties, each devoting about eight hours a month.

All are "people who've had some life experiences where police work

Hobert Roark gave up a Navy career to become coordinator of security at Centennial Educational Park.

Security is his objective

By Doug Funke
staff writer

After 5½ years in the Navy, during which he served as a coding specialist, received anti-terrorist training and became proficient as a weapons expert, Hobert Roark felt he was ready for a career change.

So he took a job last summer as coordinator of security at Centennial Educational Park.

Roark, 25, oversees a staff of about a dozen on the 305-acre campus at Canton Center and Joy roads.

They're responsible for maintaining a safe learning environment, inventory control, enforcing parking regulations and generally keeping an eye on goings-on at special events.

Roark also deals with more pedestrian tasks like students having car trouble.

"At first, they were very scared of me," he said. "Being just out of the military, they thought I would be very strict."

A PERSONAL touch and a willingness to separate poor behavior from a basic belief in the goodness of people have served him well, Roark said.

Time spent away from wife Kim and son Jason convinced Roark to leave the military. So, too, did some of his assignments, including narcotics work in Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore.

"After working in that type work and seeing the type of people abusing narcotics, I felt I was going in negative directions," he said. "I felt by reaching people this age and giving positive direction, we'd avoid a lot of problems later on.

"I believe in prevention 100 percent. I get a better feeling out of it."

Disruptive student behavior and trespassers are the two biggest problems at CEP, Roark said.

"As soon as I got here and saw the problems we were having, it was natural for me to go out and deal with it — talking with students about what really is going on, give them direction."

Some young people, he said, sometimes seem to experience reality avoidance for one reason or another.

"A LOT get caught up in fantasy, drugs, wanting to run away. You have to pull 'em aside and say, 'You're a good person, but your behavior isn't right.'

"You've got to learn there are rules, regulations, policies and procedures. If you don't, you have problems. I think if you sit 'em down and talk realistically to them, they really react well to that."

Roark said he doesn't like to come on as a tough guy, but sometimes the situation demands a firm response.

"I let 'em know I've played games with people a lot meaner and rougher — and I don't play games. I let them know I'm serious.

"We understand they're all good people. It's just their behavior that's causing us problems.

"A student being disruptive, not going to classes, is losing touch with what a person is here to do. Trespassers who don't understand what the structure of the environment here is stick out like a sore thumb."

ROARK SAID he works up to 70 hours a week and doesn't have a typical day.

"We have people who use the athletic facilities at four in the morning. We have community ed in the evening that gets out at 10, 10:30.

"We have sporting events, special events, plays, concerts. This park is used so much. It's more than an educational complex for high school students.

"I have a lot of respect for the amount of assets we have here. We have to make sure they stay here and are available for the next group to use."

Roark attributed his interest in security to a curiosity about things going on around him. He said he prefers the personal touch rather than learning and leading through memos.

When not on the job or spending time with his family, Roark is remodeling a house in which he ultimately intends to live. He also enjoys woodworking and playing the drums.

"Really, what our goal is here is to create an environment for learning," he said. "This is an age they (students) experiment with beliefs and values, but we believe the environment has to be positive so while they experiment, it turns out positive for themselves and society."

Search nets 3 clergymen

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

One works in a veterans' hospital where as a member of the crisis team, he recently helped restrain a knife-wielding, crazed patient who was trying to hurl his 3-year-old daughter out a window.

Another once worked as a penitentiary chaplain. It was his job to counsel convicts about to die in the electric chair.

A third constantly deals with the down and out — "drunks, alcoholics and people who are involved in child and spouse abuse."

All are clergymen likely to become the Canton Police Department's first chaplains — the Rev. Wayne Byrum, the Rev. T.L. Grotjohn, and the Rev. W. Thomas Keilman, respectively. They are finalists in a search started by Police Chief John Santomauro, who thought having chaplains on staff would be a good way to help officers relieve stress.

Keilman describes Canton's fledgling program as"revolutionary."

Larger departments like Detroit and Flint have chaplain programs, said Keilman, pastor of the Word of Life Church in Canton. "But we're looking not to be just a mold of another department. The chief is originating a program that's creative and innovative."

PROBABLY WHAT best distinguishes Canton's program — to be implemented in early 1987 — is the uncommon practice of having chaplains ride in squad cars with patrolling officers.

"The Inkster department has seven volunteer chaplains, and I once asked a chaplain in the seven years he'd been there, how many times an officer had come to him," said Keilman. "His answer was startling. He said, 'Never.'

"That's why the whole prospect of riding with an officer makes all the difference.

"Where someone might not come and ask for advice, in the course of conversation you might be asked what you think," said Keilman.

"We were told it takes a year for them to take you into their confidence. But at least in my initial visits, guys have opened up and been extremely friendly," added Keilman.

Byrum, patient representative at the VA Medical Center in Ann Arbor and a district director of envangelism for the United Methodist Church, says the chaplain program "really says a lot about the chief of police and his leadership. He's not only concerned about the police officers and their families but about the community.

Developer wins strip-mall fight

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Residents opposing a shopping mall on the southeast corner of Morton Taylor and Joy roads lost a long, hard-fought battle in court recently.

Wayne Circuit Court Judge Louis Simmons Jr. has ruled that Mayfair Village resident Joseph Michelin waited too long to hire an attorney to stop the Nelson/Ross development.

Michelin argues the delay was a result of his effort to halt the project by trying to get support from the Canton Township Board of Trustees and Planning Commission.

"They didn't listen to the people who live here, they listened to an outside developer," Michelin said.

MAYFAIR HOMEOWNERS have opposed the 114,000-square-foot Coventry Commons-East plaza with A&P, ACO and Arbor Drugs stores as proposed anchors.

They said a 1975 Wayne Circuit Court consent judgment, which earmarks the land for entertainment and leisure activities prohibited the development. As land owners, residents said, they were party to the consent judgment.

They predicted the mall would increase traffic in the subdivision especially endangering children crossing Morton Taylor to attend Hulsing Elementary School, add to a "saturation" of strip malls in the community, raise crime and lower property values.

Michelin requested Judge Simmons allow him to intervene in an earlier lawsuit filed by the Mayfair Village Homeowners Associaton and eight Mayfair residents against developers Nelson/Ross, the township board, Canton's economic and community development director and his office, the previous owner of the property and the Wayne County Road Commission.

Residents dropped the lawsuit when Nelson/Ross threatened to file a counter claim if it was pursued.

Nelson/Ross agreed to put aside $20,000 for safety devices on the east parcel and $20,000 for its west parcel during negotiations for the original laws.

THE DEVELOPERS also agreed to support efforts to convince Wayne County to establish 25 mph speed limits and post signs indicating trucks enter from Joy and depart from Morton Taylor in a northerly direction.

The developers also agreed to consult residents during development planning for the southwest side of Morton Taylor and Joy. It is undetermined what will be built on this parcel, said Nelson/Ross attorney Fred Feichheimer, because "they're still testing the market."

Nelson/Ross also owns land at Sheldon and Joy.

Residents are not expected to appeal Judge Simmons' decision.

"We'd probably win on appeal but that would take a lot of time and

Arts, crafts await Christmas shoppers

THE PLYMOUTH Christmas Arts & Crafts Show will be held two consecutive weekends this year, beginning Friday, at the Plymouth Community Cultural Center.

The show, sponsored by the city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department, will be Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 28-30 and Dec. 5-7.

The show hours are 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays in the Cultural Center at Farmer and Theodore. Admission is free and there is plenty of free parking.

THE PLYMOUTH Parks and Recreation Department has been running Christmas Arts & Crafts Shows since 1974.

In 1974 there was one show with 70 exhibitors; 12 years later there are two shows with 75 different exhibitors in each show. Each show draws an estimated 5,000 people each weekend.

Co-directors Tom Willette adn Carol Donnelly are extremely happy with the variety and quality of the crafts in this year's shows. Both shows have been full for months.

"There is such a demand to get into the shows that new crafters that are accepted into the shows usually spend time on a waiting list before getting in," said Willette.

The show draws crafters from all over the state. Will Shomin of Petoskey, for instance, will be in both shows with his wooden crafts. Alice Landis travels from Traverse City with her jewelry for the first show. Frank Ettawagshik of Karlin, Mich., exhibits in the first show his pottery, some of which is made using a technique the Indians developed hundreds of years ago.

NOT ALL the crafters are from outside the community.

Diane Bradley of Canton will be in the second show with fabric applique and folk dolls while Sue Smith of Canton will be in the first show with spice wreaths.

Carole Dunn of Plymouth will be in the first show with Christmas ceramics such as ornaments and miniature lighted houses.

New to the show this year will be Deborah Kennedy who will have a one-day spot Sunday, Dec. 7, with handcrafted teddy bears.

Mary Ann Goodnuff of Redford appears in the first show with evergreen wreaths while Barbara Wilkie of Redford will be in the second show with handmade clay animal sculptures.

France & district continue exchange

Families in Plymouth-Canton in March will host 20 students from France as part of a back-to-back foreign exchange program sponsored by Campus International of France.

Last year this program was introduced into the Plymouth-Canton area. In the past school districts in Dearborn and Walled Lake have participated.

This year French children, their teacher and bilingual counselor will stay in the Plymouth-Canton community March 11-31. Students from Plymouth-Canton will fly to France to stay June 10-30.

Involved in the exchange from Plymouth-Canton are: Alexis Bohlanlder, Mat Price, Tiffani Natalini, Andrea Ramsey, Julie Coyle, Suzanne Salo, and Megan Barrest, from Allen Elementary School; Michael Allison, ZackLoiselle, and Doug Austin from Bird Elementary; Matt Lee, Erin Skene, Amber Chadwick, Katie Garard, Megan Schidora and Katie Heid, from Smith Elementary School; Kelly Kirkpatrick, from West Middle School; Kelly Rimmer and Margaret Hodenfield of Farrand Elementary; Marco Ezio DelPizzo and Shawn Brown of New Morning School.

The teacher for the class is Randy Lee and the bilingual counselor is Anria DelPizzo of New Morning School.

In preparation for the trip the students once a week will meet at Allen Elementary with their teacher and counselor for lessons in French, French culture and customs.

Expenses of the students will be paid entirely by their parents and the host families will be responsible for their visitors. Contributions are being sought, though, for field trips and transportation. Interested donors may call 451-6511.

Toys for Tots drive coming

Omnicom Cablevision and the U.S. Marine Corps will be cooperating this year in the Toys for Tots program.

Beginning Dec. 2 and running through Dec. 31, Canton and Plymouth residents can bring in a new unwrapped toy with a minimum value of $5 and receive $5 off basic installation or the installaiton of an additional pay service.

Last year in the Detroit metro area some 60,000 children benefited from the program, says Lisa Boland, marketing director for Omnicom. "This is the fourth year, and we are pleased to support the Marines in helping needy children in our area."

Toys can be taken to Omnicom's sales office at 550 Forest in Westchester Square Mall in Plymouth. Residents may donate toys without installing cable services. Residents also can drop off canned goods for the Salvation Army at the sales office.

wouldn't be a shock for them," said the chief.

To further familiarize them, the clergymen have attended police academy classes in interpersonal relationships, and accompanied police on patrol. And there's more in store. Chaplains will complete 150 hours of training in the reserve police academy and regular police academy, and learn first aid.

The prospective chaplains will set specific goals and objectives with a police committee that's implementing the program at a "roundtable" discussion Dec. 4.

HAVING CHAPLAINS on staff should "help humanize" the department, said Gerri Svec, chaplain committee member and secretary to the chief.

"Sometimes people see police as uncaring and intimidating — the big bully type. I think seeing a chaplain in uniform will put some humanness into the department.

"So far the police officers' reaction has been favorable," added Svec. "They see a lot more worth in the program than they originally did."

Santomauro is encouraged, as well. Chaplain programs aren't all that common, probably because "police administrators tend to be very reactionary. We're trying to see if we can't be pro-active in improving the quality of the working environment," he said.

Chaplains eager to start

". . . Many times police departments have available a psychologist for officers and their families to talk with, and they almost never use these people. But many times they will talk to a chaplain."

Byrum expects the program to be a valuable asset for officers.

"One of the biggest problems among police officers is a high divorce rate. The job is very stressful on the family," said Byrum, who for 10 years was a Nazarene pastor in Texas, Tennessee, and Highland, Mich.

"We'll be there just to be a friend and to be of help. What the police officers share with us will be strictly between us and them."

GROTJOHN CAN FORESEE aiding police in potentially-explosive situations such as threatened suicides.

"Hollywood does a good job of glamorizing that one. But a chaplain or religious person coming in to negotiate in a situation can be of great assistance to a department," said Grotjohn, pastor of St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton.

The clergymen agree that with some training, their own life experience in a stressful occupation will enable them to empathize with officers, assist them on the job, and help them cope with stress. But an even stronger belief is behind their commitment to the non-paid chaplain program.

money," said Carol Levitte, Michelin's attorney.

"I've exhausted all attempts to stop the development, and I can't afford an appeal," said Michelin adding that he would "fight" the southwest development as "long as I can."

The legal actions delayed Coventry Commons-East about six months, Fechheimer said. The mall is expected to open next summer.

Super Sewer project fails

Local leaders say they'll try again next year

By Teri Banas
staff writer

County officials and project engineers for the so-called Super Sewer will try again next year to fashion a sewer project and anti-pollution program that can win needed support of area communities.

Of the one-time 16 communities that had been tapped to join the regional sewer program taking area waste to the Detroit Treatment Plant, 13 communities sent representatives to a meeting in Livonia City Hall last week and indicated they would be interested in remaining together next year.

Many of the communities are under notice from the state Department of Natural Resources that potential building bans face them unless they submit plans for corrective action and local sewer improvements.

Community representatives from western Wayne and north Oakland counties said high costs might ultimately prevent their participation in Super Sewer, but in the meantime they'd be willing to study new plans.

Meanwhile, federal funding that would have paid up to 55 percent of some costs of the sewer project for this year probably will be bypassed, David Vago, the county's deputy director of public works, told the municipal representatives last Friday.

"THERE'S NO possible way to meet the deadline, therefore the 16-community process is dead," said Vago, speaking of a Dec. 1 deadline Wayne County had for submitting project plans to the state.

Funding was expected from the federal Clean Waters Act. Though President Reagan vetoed the bill last week, local officials expect Congressional action will restore the funding.

The news that Super Sewer will pass by another year without action caused one official to quip, "We're now talking about the Grandson of Super Sewer." The regional $85 million project has been reworked and debated for nearly 19 years recently acquiring the title, "Son of Super Sewer."

Michael Duggan, a spokesman for Wayne County Executive-elect Edward McNamara, who supported the project and tried to encourage full participation, said McNamara's Administration will continue its support.

"We plan to make every attempt to cash in on the 75 percent available federal funding by next year's November deadline," said Duggan, who takes over as deputy county executive on Jan. 1. Duggan said that timing is important because officials have been advised that the grant program will expire in two years and will be redesigned into a loan program.

Duggan also stressed that a plan by western Wayne communities for handling sewer problems would prevent the kind of "growth ban" that has been imposed on Canton Township.

BESIDES Canton, Plymouth and Northville townships opted out of the Son of Super Sewer program, a project endorsed by the state Department of Natural Resources, and now are studying plans to build into an Ypsilanti sewer system. In the meantime, at least, Plymouth Township is restricting its own sewer tapins until some remedy is found.

Representatives from the two Oakland County communities, Wixom and Novi, said Friday they might seek other remedies beside the regional sewer project. Wixom is considering building its own sewage treatment facility though prefers a regional sewer line to Detroit's facility.

State DNR chief Gordon Guyer, while attending a luncheon for the Friends of the Rouge River at the Livonia Holidome last week, commented on the state of the regional sewer project in relation to that area river. He said his department planned "to keep the heat on" local communities to force compliance of clean water standards. Particularly where communities have combined sewer lines carrying storm water and raw sewage, heavy rains cause sewage overflows into the Rouge River.

"What ever happens we have got to work together to insure the sewer project doesn't lose momentum," Guyer said. "Where there's environmental assault, we'll take action."

According to Vago, the refusal by Canton, Plymouth and Northville townships to continue with the regional sewer program in the final months before the funding deadline did not leave enough time to rework drafts for a 13-community project.

Township leaders had argued that Super Sewer did not offer increased sewer capacities as purported and that development costs were too high when compared to cost shares allocated to the two booming Oakland County communities.

Discrimination suit settled

By Mary Klemic
staff writer

A $1.2 million lawsuit charging ethnic and religious discrimination against the Clarenceville School District has been settled out of court for $30,000.

A group of 25 American Moslems of Indian and Pakistani descent, including a Canton resident, filed the lawsuit under the name of Crescent Investments in August 1985 in U.S. District Court.

The group had offered to buy the closed Westbrook Elementary School building in Farmington Hills for $57,000.

In May, the Clarenceville Board of Education accepted the lower bid offer of $47,500 from John White, a retired Farmington Hills manufacturers' representative and building renovator.

"We went into the judicial system not for the money but as a matter of principle," said Syed Mohiuddin, secretary and spokesperson for the group. "We felt that we were openly discriminated against. It was below our self respect to take something like that. We are obligated to clear our names and assert our rights."

"This does not prove guilt or innocence," said Clarenceville Superintendent Michael Shibler. "We all along have maintained we are not guilty of discrimination. We sold the building to the individual who is going to best use the building for the benefit of the school district and for the kids of Clarenceville.

"The other situation would have been for a private school. It would be tax exempt. It would take students from the district."

Clarenceville includes parts of Livonia, Redford and Farmington Hills.

CRESCENT INVESTMENT planned to renovate the building for use as a nursery school and cultural center. The group had future plans to start a full-time school there.

The group was interested in developing a religious school and a place of worship. Its plans also featured splitting off the northern two acres of the six-acre plot and building condominiums.

White planned to convert the school into an apartment building and call it Westbrook Place.

Crescent Investment called various school districts in looking for a site, said Mohiuddin, a Canton resident. He was told by a Clarenceville official that the Westbrook property was available and that the district wanted to get rid of it, he said.

TALKS BETWEEN Crescent Investment and the district began in December 1984.

In a February 1985 meeting with Shibler, assistant superintendent for school business affairs Edward Salisz and school board member Richard Woods, Mohiuddin was told that the district would take the highest offer, he said.

Mohiuddin said the group also was asked at the February meeting if it would conduct prayers over a loudspeaker on the property, which was being done at a mosque in Dearborn.

Members replied that a loudspeaker wouldn't be used, and made it clear that they didn't have political affiliations and weren't involved with incidents in the Middle East, he said.

"I tried to let them know we are conscientious citizens of this country," Mohiuddin said.

The group received a letter from the district saying no offer of less than $50,000 (half of the asking price) would be accepted, Mohiuddin said. He said White became involved when an article about the offer appeared in the local paper.

BOTH CRESCENT Investment and White made offers of $50,000, but White's offer included contingency clauses, Mohiuddin said.

"We didn't have any of that," Mohiuddin said. "Our offers were always ahead on the other offer."

At a special board meeting in May 1985, Shibler recommended that White's offer be accepted, based on the assumption that his project would generate more taxes for the school district.

Crescent Investment said its project would generate $12,000 in taxes, but White never said how much his project would generate, Mohiuddin said.

"The whole problem was they had made up their minds. They decided to sell to him anyway. We said we felt the district was discriminating against us," he said.

Shibler said that no one could know how much tax money would be generated by a project unless it had been appraised.

The group filed suit in federal court and asked for an injunction to stop the sale in June 1986. Judge Anna Diggs Taylor denied the injunction.

Both parties agreed to put the case before an arbitration board. In September, the panel decided that $30,000 should be awarded to Crescent Investment.

At the invitation of the district's attorney, the group withdrew its lawsuit and the matter was settled out of court.

Westland Medical eyed by Mercy Health Corp.

By Teri Banas
staff writer

The once publicly operated Westland Medical Center may again face a change of operators as corporate officers negotiate a potential lease with the Sisters of Mercy Health Corp., the Farmington Hills-based operator of five hospitals and health centers in southeastern Michigan.

Mercy spokesman LeRoy Fahle, the chief executive in charge of the corporation's Mount Carmel Hospital in Detroit, said he would likely take details of those talks to his board of directors Friday, Dec. 5, but noted yesterday that no conclusions had been reached as yet.

"The Sisters of Mercy (corporation) have had some discussions with Southwest Detroit Hospital Corp. regarding the Westland Medical Center. But what the board directed us to discuss is yet an undefined relationship," Fahle said.

The chairman for Southwest Detroit Hospital Corp., which leased the Westland center from Wayne County two years ago following large financial losses, said his corporation is looking at three potential bidders, two located in the Detroit area and one found out-of-state. He declined naming them.

But chairman Reginald P. Ayala said yesterday he's not ready to say that subleasing the 310-bed hospital to yet another party is in the picture.

"THE DECISION for us to leave the facility has not been made," Ayala said.

Ayala did confirm that his corporation, which also runs the 244-bed Southwest Detroit Hospital in Detroit, listed $2.6 million in combined losses last year with current occupancy at Westland around 28 percent. (The statewide occupancy average is more than twice that.)

When Wayne County leased the property to Southwest two years ago, it averaged annual losses of $15-$18 million.

News of outside interest in Westland Medical follows months of industry rumors that the center was entertaining options that include, beside a sale or lease, possible affiliation or shared service agreements with other health care providers.

Ayala said "alternatives" are under study and the debate continues, with some decision expected in the next 60 days. He said when the corporation took over operations from the county it did so believing "we could do a better job in operating it, that it could be run on a profitable basis and render a higher level of service. We're proud of what we have accomplished."

Yet, noting that his corporation grosses $55 million in revenue each year, Ayala said: "We are able to sustain a $2.6 million loss, but we're not able to sustain that kind of loss (inevitably)."

AYALA SAID corporate officers will be examining what it would take to continue operating the facility, joint ventures and how "new capital" could be raised.

Vernice Davis Anthony, Wayne County director of health and community services, said any new service operator would still be bound to contractual agreements to offer medical care to indigent county residents, Westland Medical is one of more than a dozen health care operators so required in the area and has a 10-year lease with Wayne County. She added she has been aware of discussions to sublease Westland Medical and was hopeful a new operator could offer "stability" and an "improved facility."

Mercy's Fahle said his corporation also has a "continued commitment to meeting the needs of the poor and promoting health care access." He added meetings were expected with Southwest officials this week.

Judicial requirement faces test

Faust says legal experience is needed on local benches

By Teri Banas
staff writer

Sen. William Faust, D-Westland, the proponent of legislation that would ensure some level of experience for elected Michigan judges, predicts Legislative approval will require "a hard and difficult fight."

Faust, a former newspaper publisher and 20-year legislator, says that's because attorneys are hesitant to criticize their own.

Noting that one-fourth (nine out of 38 members) of the state Senate is made up of attorneys, Faust said:

"I think they'll be reluctant to do it because of the fact they may be denying an opportunity to a peer and if it doesn't pass they may face one of these judges, fresh out of law school.

"They are not the most outspoken inside their own fraternity."

Faust is attempting to gather support for a joint resolution which would call for changing the state Constitution to require six years minimum experience for judicial candidates. The measure would have to win voter approval.

THE WESTLAND lawmaker noted the lack of long-term experience of some of the candidates in this year's field in the Wayne County Circuit Court race, and pointed to one winner, Kathleen Macdonald, who earned a law degree just one year ago. A Grosse Pointe native, she is currently employed as a law clerk for another circuit court judge. Of the six finalists for the 3rd Circuit bench, half had less than six years of experience.

Macdonald, 40, who raised a family before she decided to earn a law degree, nonetheless does have what Faust terms some of the needed "life experience" that is lacking in other people who attained judicial status early in their professional careers.

"Over my lifetime in office I've seen numerous occasions of judges elected fresh out of law school. I do know of checkered careers, and cite Judge DelRio who was elected one month after passing the bar. He was involved in highly controversial judicial actions and personal actions in the courtroom that were outlandish," Faust said of DelRio's criticized use of a handgun in the courtroom.

FAUST'S RESOLUTION, which was introduced last week, will be reintroduced after the Legislature's holiday break in January. He said he recognized that it was unlikely action could be taken this soon but wanted it to gain advanced standing in the coming new year. His resolution asks that the issue appear for a statewide public vote in January 1988.

Faust said he is researching other state requirements for judicial officeholders.

To become a lawyer in Michigan, one must pass the state bar exam, complete law school and never have been convicted of a felony. Some 24,000 lawyers are listed in Michigan today.

FAUST SAID he's talked with several "skeptical" attorneys about this proposal and added he would be willing to settle for less than six years of experience. He said he broadly structured the resolution to ask for six years of legal experience, which would include experience in legal work other than the strict practice of law, such as work as a legal clerk, court administrator or magistrate.

Michael Frank, executive director of the State Bar Association of Michigan, said members there will likely take a position on Faust's proposal sometime in January or February.

He said the issue has been debated among members in the past with strong disagreement between younger and older members.

"Younger lawyers generally oppose this approach because they feel it doesn't guarantee competency. Older lawyers tend to feel that some qualification will make for better judges," Frank said.

ACROSS THE country states differ widely in their requirements for trial courts. Some states, such as Alabama, New Hampshire, Maine, and Minnesota, make no requirement of judicial candidates, while half of those simply ask that one mus be "learned in the law." In most state cases, admission to the state bar, which automatically includes law school graduates, is required, according to researchers with the American Judicature Society in Chicago.

A set term of legal experience is required in 24 states, ranging from four years experience to up to 10 years of experience or membership in the state bar.

Overall, 17 states have age requirements, asking that candidates be at least 25 though most of those put the minimum age requirement at 30 years of age.

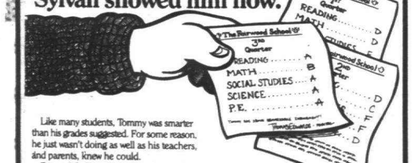
Tommy's teachers always said he could do better. Sylvan showed him how.



Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.
For a while Tommy managed to get by. But then he started slipping. When his math class moved on to more advanced problems, Tommy couldn't—he hadn't learned the basics.
At Sylvan we know how important those basic skills are. We've helped thousands of children master the basics of reading and math, and go on to fulfill their potential.
We can help your child. In fact, we guarantee it.

The Sylvan Guarantee
Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

Your child can begin to do better—today.
Learning problems don't go away by themselves. But they can be solved.
If you feel your child could be doing better, let Sylvan show him how.
There's a Sylvan Learning Center near you. We offer a flexible schedule of after-school hours and require no long term commitments. Why not call today for more information?

Rouge 'friends' start new year river clean-up plan

By Teri Banas
staff writer

State Department of Natural Resources director Gordon Guyer, addressing a gathering of "Rouge Rescue" supporters in Livonia last week, said the Department of Natural Resources is behind them 100 percent in advancing the cause of ridding pollution from the Rouge River.
At a celebration luncheon that also served to launch the group's 1987 program, Guyer told the 200-member gathering in the Livonia Holidome that the state DNR would "take a strong stand against those who would assault the river.
"In the coming year you're going to see a different DNR," added the recently appointed DNR chief. "You're going to see one committed to helping you solve your problems."
Guyer's visit played a symbolic role in solidifying planning between state officials and the Rouge Basin-based local group, made up of representatives from 36 communities in Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties.
It was after the strong backing of the state Water Resources Commission, which oversees the DNR, that local efforts were energized last year toward the first "Rouge Rescue" on July 7. It materialized with 2,100 volunteers working in 14 communities to remove 1,000 cubic yards of debris and 35 logjams.
Announcing goals for next year, commission chairman James Murray said, "The river basin doesn't exist with 1.5 million people without tender loving care, and that's exactly what we plan to do."
Besides aiming to double volunteer participation next year and triple local municipal involvement, the sponsoring "Friends of the Rouge are planning educational programming for local school systems. Murray said they will tie this program to facilities and resources available at area universities, naming the University of Michigan in Dearborn, for one.
With plans to employ 7,000 students from 10 school systems, Murray said the program will serve as a "real lab experience" for youngsters and would offer scholastic awards. The youngsters will be asked to monitor the river quality with results tested at the universities.
Attention also will be directed at restoring eroded river banks with new tree and brush plantings, as well as continued work at removing log jams, which also does damage to riverbanks. The group recently completed a log jam study that locates some 150 log jams throughout the river basin.
Further work will be done in promotions, including highlighting recreation and historic interests along the 126-mile river. More effort, as well, will be directed at reaching new corporate and business sponsors, Murray said.

Jobs picture: Some prosper, some don't

By Tim Richard
staff writer

No place is average.

That bit of folk wisdom was underscored with computer graphics when University of Michigan economists reported on unemployment rates for the state's 83 counties.

"Diversified areas have the lowest unemployment," summed up Malcolm S. Cohen, director of UM's Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations.

"Too much or too little manufacturing can be a bad thing."

COHEN'S PICTURE (see map) showed that 60 counties, mostly with small populations, were staggering under 1130 percent unemployment rates in 1985, three years into the economic recovery.

Those counties, shown as black on the map, included the entire upper peninsula, all but two counties north of Saginaw and the southwest corner of the state.

Nationwide, only two states in 1985 were reporting unemployment of 11 percent or more — West Virginia and Louisiana.

In Michigan, the lowest unemployment rates, in the 57 percent range, were reported in Washtenaw and Clinton counties (horizontal lines on the map). Washtenaw is the home of the University of Michigan, which has attracted a host of hightechnology companies in close proximity to its engineering and medical schools.

AMONG THE largest counties, Oakland had one of the best job growth showings.

Not only did has it gained industrial jobs during the recovery, but the pace has been set by such "service" jobs as hightech, trade and finance.

Oakland lost 29,600 jobs in the recession years of 197982; gained back 130,000 jobs in 19836; and will add 38,000 more in the two years ahead, according to UM forecaster Donald Grimes.

The map's lesson isn't that manufacturing is good or bad. Rather it shows that:

- Rural counties dependent on mining, farming and tourism reported high jobless rates in '85.
- So did high manufacturing counties like Genesee (Flint), Bay and and Jackson.

NATIONWIDE, the UM economists noticed some flow of jobs during 197985 from the highwage states of the NortheastMidwest to the low wage states of the Sun Belt.

But highwage areas such as New England and Maryland now have some of the lowest unemployment rates in the nation, Cohen said.

"No one factor" exlains high unemployment, he said. Among the causes of persistent high unemployment, he said, are an oversupply of labor, the drop in oil prices (in energyproducing states) and market conditions for particular products.

SEMTA fights break-up

The Southeast Michigan Transportation Authority board wants SEMTA to remain a seven-county regional authority.

The board voted 9-4 to oppose Senate Bill 363, which would replace SEMTA with a smaller agency.

Supporters of SB 363, which was sponsored by Sen. Richard Fessler, R-West Bloomfield, are working to collect votes in the lame duck session of the Michigan House of Representatives. The Senate passed the bill last spring.

FESSLER'S SB 363, introduced in 1985, is supported by members of the so-called "Big Four" — Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, Wayne County Executive William Lucas, Oakland County Executive Daniel Murphy and Macomb County Board of Commissioners Chairman Walter Franchuk.

Should the bill pass, SEMTA would be dissolved and could be replaced by three or more separate transit systems.

Critics of SB 363 told the SEMTA board the bill would add layers of bureaucracy involved in operating several transit systems in the region. They also cited the inevitable duplication of service that would result with several transit systems in existence and the costly fares involved in transferring between systems.

Don Lozen, representing the Center for Independent Living, also addressed the board. "A vote for SB 363 is a vote against the handicapped and a vote against the elderly," he said.

Open-heart surgery now 30 years old

Thirty years ago this month, the first open-heart procedure in Michigan was performed at University Hospital at the University of Michigan Medical Center by Dr. Herbert Sloan, and his cardiac surgery team.

"This was the culmination of a great deal of preliminary work," said Sloan, former head of thoracic surgery at the U-M Medical Center.

"At the time, it was technically a completely different kind of surgical experience and, for us, it marked the beginning in a new era of heart surgery for children."

Three years later, Sloan performed the first open-heart procedure in the world on a newborn child.

"WHEN YOU see what's being done today, it's difficult to conceptualize how it all began," said Pat McHoskey, head nurse of the intensive care unit when Sloan performed the historic operations.

A homemade bubble oxygenator, designed and built by thoracic surgery staff, provided oxygen for the patients.

A Sigma motor pump, a commercial device used in industry for pumping fluids, kept the patient's circulation moving using fingerlike rods compressing blood through rubber tubing.

We are thankful; our spirit's intact

AS THANKSGIVING day rolls around once again, we are wont to look about us to give thanks for what we have. It is often hard in these troubling days to put our blessings in proper perspective.

We seem to always live in tumultuous times. Good news is followed by bad. The economy improves and then plants close, companies shut down and employees are laid off. Our governments seem to be staying on course and then there is a flurry of unfortunate activity and our relative tranquility is threatened once again.

And so we go into the last years of the 20th century hoping that we can stave off war, economic disaster, disease, catastrophic social problems and even the planet-threatening effects of our insatiable consumption of the earth's resources.

THE SERIOUS problems abound. We are no closer and could be further away from ever achieving any kind of agreement limiting nuclear weapons. Our relationship with Russia is no better and may be worse.

The Middle East remains a tinder box, which could be set off by unwise or reckless actions of any of a host of countries. The present national administration seems to becoming bogged down in the quagmire of Middle East politics just as the previous administration did.

We are supporting a war in Central America, and there is almost an ever-present threat of direct U.S. troop involvement. The proliferation of nuclear arms makes catastrophic war a possibility on almost every continent.

WE ARE a country in a transition economically and socially. The industrial society is gone, being replaced by an economy based on service and information. Where once we were pre-eminent in the manufacture of almost everything for our use and the world's, today we import far more than we export.

More people are employed in the fast-food industry than in making durable goods. We manufacture pizza and hamburgers rather than steel.

We battle against spiralling crime rates, welfare dependence, AIDS and drugs and seem to be losing on every front.

AND YET, we have, as always, more to be grateful for than to grouse about, more to look forward to than to fear.

We are managing to live with the threat of nuclear war, international terrorism and Soviet expansionism and are still holding our own, still strong, resolute and determined to do what is right for our own self-interest and the peace of the world.

Our governments, national, state and local, contain weak links and humans capable of major errors of judgment, but we are still blessed with governments that are the servants of the people and responsive to their constituencies rather than governments with tyrants ruling over us.

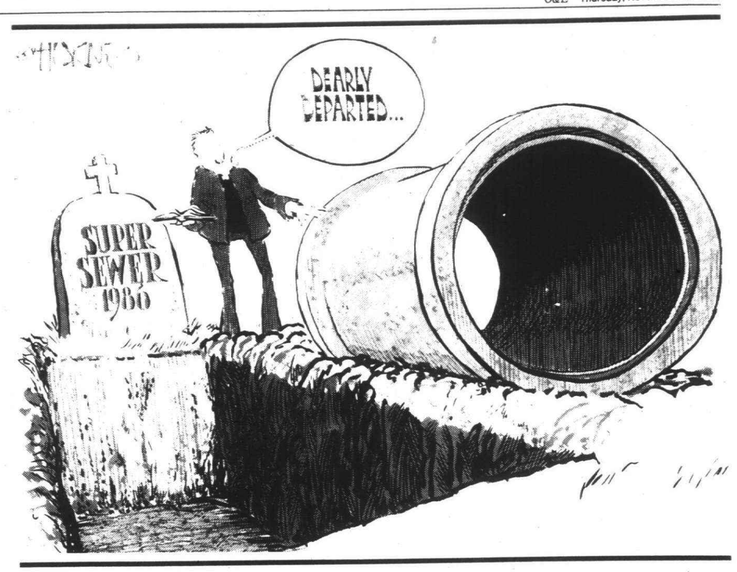
We have a free economy that serves most people well, and there is in the land a spirit of enterpreneurial ingenuity that promises to make our future work lives even more meaningful.

WE HAVE an abundance of wealth and have to work fewer hours to earn basic sustenance than did our parents, or their parents.

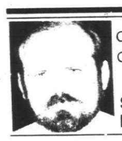
We have, for the most part, a country that has enjoyed a long tenure as a free people whose opportunities for enrichment of life, self and national and personal character, still seem boundless.

We have a society that is more spiritual than at most times in history and we rely on God to help us through the difficult periods. Our national spirit says that whatever our problems, we will persevere and the more difficult the challenge, the more glorious the triumph.

We can be very thankful for what we have.



Affluence is a poor excuse



crackerbarrel debate

Steve Barnaby

SOMEWHERE along the line, responsibility comes with the money.

No excuses really, especially when you're an adult.

Seems reasonable enough, for sure. But the facts show otherwise when it comes to parents' most important responsibility — their kids.

The problem is littered with illustrations, but adults' attitudes make it difficult to solve.

Recently this newspaper published what many public officials already know. Alcohol abuse is a major problem among our youth. But alcohol abuse is only the symptom.

PARENT NEGLECT is the real problem.

Our latest example is the mass surveillance and ticketing of young people at shopping areas along Orchard Lake Road in Farmington Hills. Sounds parochial. But of the 43 young people ticketed, only 10 were from Farmington Hills.

The others were from surrounding communities including Livonia, West Bloomfield, Southfield and Bloomfield Hills.

Farmington Hills police Sgt. Charles Nebus describes the problem:

"What happens among the 12- to 15-year-olds is that their parents drop them off (at a shopping center) while they go to dinner or to another social engagement, leaving their kids unsupervised until 10 p.m."

Nebus went on to describe how teens between 16 and 18 "come with an abundance of money in their pockets and driving newer model, high performance cars."

MOST OF the offenses are minor — trespassing, disturbing the peace, littering, disorderly conduct and reckless driving.

The other, possession of alcohol, is indicative of a very serious problem with which this society is reluctant to deal.

But the biggest problem is parents who think their responsibilities are fulfilled by living in an affluent community, sending their children to schools and providing their children with material possessions.

It's tough to imagine what kind of parent would dump their kid at a shopping center, left unsupervised — until you realize it's your neighbor, or maybe even yourself doing it.

We do fall into this kind of conduct pretty easily. Even adults are influenced by peer conduct.

The problem has been a constant one since suburbs came into being. I vividly recall attending a conference a few years back where a group of parents were organizing to deal with children in trouble. A noble effort, for sure.

BUT THE BOTHERSOME theme that ran throughout the evening was something on the order that parents really couldn't do much if their kids were trouble-makers. It was all the kids' fault.

What baloney. Most of the time, parents can do something about providing a role model and working with their children.

But one thing is for sure. You can't throw your child in a corner, no matter how much candy you give them, and expect them to amuse themselves for long.

Neither can you dump your child off at a shopping center with a wad of cash and expect that to be sufficient parental guidance.

It just doesn't work that way.

'Adoption option' widely ignored

Tim Richard

A POLITICAL friend toured a state-supported facility for unwed mothers and came back appalled.

The girls, she reported, are imbued with the radical doctrine that they can raise a child themselves and don't need a man's help. State welfare will subsidize them, of course.

Next I began hearing how attorney Noel Keane of Dearborn arranges deals for surrogate mothers to bear babies for childless couples.

It seems there is such a severe shortage of adoptable babies that couples are willing to pay a fertile woman $10,000 for her childbearing services.

And this in a nation with one of the highest illegitimate birth rates in the industrialized world.

WELL, COUNSELORS just don't tell unmarried mothers about the adoption option.

That view, first uttered by my political friend, was fleshed out in a scholarly magazine called Child Welfare, published by the Child Welfare League of America Inc. I stumbled across the current issue in Schoolcraft College's Bradner Library.

Professor Edmund V. Mech of the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana cites national studies showing that fewer than 5 percent of pregnancies among unmarried adolescents result in adoptions.

Why so few adoptions? More abortions . . . societal acceptance of unwed parenthood . . . subsidies from the state, March suggests. Then he drops his bombshell:

"Usually, no options other than keeping (the baby) are considered."

Counselors of the teen mothers "assume that pregnant adolescents have little or no interest in the adoption option."

THEY ASSUME wrong.

March quizzed 320 pregnant, unmarried girls ages 13-19 at 35 sites th an anonymous Midwestern state.

He asked whether they would consider adoption "if your child would have a better chance in life with another family," if they could meet the adopting family first, and so on.

Usually, 20-30 percent answered yes to a question, confirming the professor's hunch they would agree to adoption if anyone counseled them about adoption.

The 186 non-white girls tended to be less favorable toward adoption, but March concluded their response was favorable enough to warrant counseling them, at least.

(Incidentally, 45 percent of those 320 unwed teen mothers already had one child and were expecting a second.)

LAST WEEK I scoffed in print at Agnes Mansour, outgoing director of the state Department of Social Services, for suggesting that societal mores were the cause of our astronomical illegitimate birth rate, and that state government could do little to change it.

Now you understand why I scoffed.

It appears 20-30 percent of babies would have a better chance in life if their unwed mothers were counseled — even encouraged — to let them be adopted by eager childless couples.

Kids in two-parent homes have fewer learning problems, fewer diseases, less chance of living in poverty and a drastically reduced chance of going to prison later on.

Their mothers would have a better chance to finish school, too, and avoid the morass of the Welfare Culture.

Incidentally, more adoptions would free up more welfare money for our schools.

Freedom counts

ACLU is bullish on civil liberty

Rich Perlberg

THEY CAN BE very irritating at times, those folks from the American Civil Liberties Union. When it comes to freedoms — of speech, of religion, of expression — they just don't know when to stop.

Thank goodness.

Certainly most of you have rolled your eyes to the ceiling and asked for patience after hearing of the latest ACLU cause.

A plan for drug-free work places? The ACLU opposes it. An attempt to keep drunk drivers off the road? The ACLU says it is unconstitutional. School locker searches for weapons? No can do, says the ACLU.

The ACLU has even supported the rights of racists to hold public marches. The ACLU does not support racism; it does support the idea that constitutional rights, such as the right of assembly, must be protected at all times, not just when it is convenient or palatable.

IF EXTREMISM IN support of liberty is no vice, as Barry Goldwater claimed, then zealousness in support of civil liberties is a virtue. If you doubt that, talk briefly with your fellow suburbanite who nearly got a government-paid stay in a Yugoslavian prison for that most heinous crime, participating in a peaceful demonstration.

The ACLU, no doubt, is taking a beating in some corners because it has prevented a Nativity scene from being displayed in front of Birmingham City Hall. Actually, the ACLU didn't prevent anything; the U.S. Constitution did. That's a small but essential point that is often overlooked.

But without the ruckus raised by the ACLU, the Nativity scene would not have been disturbed. Instead it was hidden in storage for a couple of years during interminable court proceedings. Recently, the U.S. Supreme Court affirmed what the stubborn city commission should have accepted a long time ago: city governments should promote public safety and clean streets, not religions.

THERE IS A feeling sometimes spoken that the ACLU should keep its nose out of a Birmingham matter. That not only forgets that the suit was initiated by a Birmingham resident, but it also is uncomfortably reminiscent of southerners who blamed outside agitators for stirring up blacks who otherwise, we were led to believe, would happily forego their right to vote.

Do most people care where the Nativity scene rests? Probably not. But that does not diminish the importance of the issue. The city should not be singling out a preferred religion, which is precisely what it is doing. There was not, if you recall, a display in front of city hall during Yom Kippur.

If the city wants to be in the position of favoring religions, then it should put its principles were its wallet is and refuse to accept taxes from any residents other than those who profess to be Christians.

There are some who will undoubtedly think I am criticizing the Nativity scene. I am not. I look forward to seeing it this Christmas at the St. James Episcopal Church. That's where it will be displayed this year and that's where it should be.

And the ACLU will be back in court defending some other civil liberty. That's where it should be.

History can be more than wars and politics

through bifocals

Fred DeLano

IT SEEMS appropriate during Thanksgiving week to speak of our history, not in the sense of dry as dust assignments to memorize names and dates from a textbook but rather to give a pat on the back to the hundreds, maybe thousands, among us who bring the past to life through their local and state historical societies.

My teachers of long ago made history seem a continuous march of politics and war, leaving untold the economic, social and cultural matters. It may have been global in one classroom, national in another, but never of our own backyard — Michigan.

I think things have changed. If so, it's because a host of organizations have pointed the way with the enthusiasm of volunteers along a route well defined by a gracious philanthropist in the early '70s when she donated money for construction of the Dunning Memorial Building as the home of the Plymouth Historical Museum.

Margaret Dunning said its purpose would be to provide all who enter "knowledge of our forefathers, enjoyment of our heritage, encouragement toward preservation, and inspiration to continue progress, for without a past there is no future."

I DOUBT if anyone ever had the audacity to tell Margaret Dunning, "If the shoe fits, put it on," but I don't mind suggesting that her words have no geographical limits.

Nor does it matter whether the evidence of the past is exhibited in a solitary municipal attic or throughout the two floors of a 15,000-square-foot building such as Plymouth's. Roots are personal to a community and it's nice to know from whence they grew.

Be it Birmihgham or Northville, Rochester or Livonia, the Farmingtons or Canton, and on through the alphabet, we all have a heritage of which to be proud. Our freeways have replaced the Erie Canal of 1825 for spreading out the population, but it matters little. Roots are what matter.

What prompted this trail of thought was recent discovery of one of the best kept secrets in southeastern Michigan museum circles, although this may have been more from lack of a press agent than anything else.

It so happens that one particular program of the Plymouth museum, called "Then and Now," features five social history classes for school groups. They are "hands-on" discussions under the direction of Betty Childs, the wife of a frequent golfing companion of mine, and they are called "Michigan Indians," "Pioneer Families," "Great Grandma's Trunk," "Let's Go Shopping" and "What Did They Do For Fun?"

THIS WAS originated just a couple of years ago, fliers were sent to every school within a 50-mile radius, and in two years more than 10,000 students have benefitted through advance reservations by their teachers.

Meanwhile, Betty put together an exhibit for a museum Association convention where she heard comments from delegates such as, "We don't know what to ask you because this sort of thing just isn't done!"

One of those delegates was a representative of the renowned Smithsonian Institution. She spent a day in Plymouth studying the project, returned to Washington, and then with the Plymouth example as a model created what the Smithsonian calls its "Discovery Center."

Where I sit that's called high praise.

Now, with the holiday season drawing near, to say nothing of Michigan's official sesquicentennial salute to statehood on Jan. 26, festive historical links are being planned in many communities. A spokesman for the Historical Society of Michigan, headquartered in Ann Arbor, has told me there are at least 200 such local groups in the state.

Your participation where you live will be more than welcomc, I am sure. However, if you feel left out and if history has passed you by, "Come on down," as they say on the Bob Barker show.

COME ON down (up, over, or whatever) to Plymouth, Saturday, Dec. 6, for a Christmas Gala Open House Benefit from 8 p.m. until midnight at the museum (which is smack dab downtown, spittin' distance from city hall), or the Sesquicentennial Open House on Sunday, Jan. 25.

For that matter, Society President Burce Richard suggests, come for both. We need members, we need volunteers for the many ever-changing seasonal projects, and maybe we need a press agent.

Diet, lifestyle keys to health

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Dr. John A. McDougall would like to change the way America eats.

The typical American diet contains too much meat and too many dairy products, according to McDougall. A diet based on such starches as rice, potatoes and pasta, accompanied by fruits and vegetables, however, is one that will promote good health for a lifetime.

"Those things support your health."

That information is included in the physician's book, "McDougall's Medicine — A Challenging Second Opinion" (New Century Publishers, 1985).

McDougall, who grew up in Garden City and Dearborn, was in the area recently to discuss his book. His parents, John and Betty McDougall, live in Canton.

The doctor, a graduate of Dearborn High School, attended Michigan State University for his undergraduate degree and for medical school. He did his internship and residency at the University of Hawaii and now practices and teaches there, in addition to having a private practice in internal medicine.

McDougall's approach to diet is based primarily on starches, fruits and vegetables, with such things as chicken, fish and dairy products considered "delicacies."

THOSE DELICACIES are considered acceptable for occasional consumption by healthy people, he said, but shouldn't be the mainstay of a diet. It's been that way for most people throughout history, he said, with the exception of royalty.

'So it perpetuates itself. The sickness is where the reward is.'
— Dr. John McDougall author

Today, with the development of technology and increased wealth, average Americans can eat such a diet 21 times a week.

"It shouldn't surprise anybody that people are sick."

McDougall's book argues that the U.S. health care system leaves patients essentially at the mercy of their doctors. Rather than advocating the prevention of disease through proper diet and lifestyle, temporary relief is supplied to patients at a high cost — both in dollars and in quality-of-life terms.

Too often, patients expect a "magic pill" that will make them well, McDougall said.

"It's not necessary. Magic is inside you."

"McDougall's Medicine — A Challenging Second Opinion" has chapters on a number of common diseases, including cancer, osteoporosis, atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries), heart disease, hypertension (high blood pressure), diabetes, arthritis and urinary disease.

In each chapter, an individual with that particular illness is profiled briefly. The chapter continues in a question-and-answer format, with the patient's questions about each disease answered by the doctor.

THE BOOK ends with a summary of its message and a chapter on choosing a doctor.

Throughout the book, McDougall emphasizes the importance of a good diet and other lifestyle factors, such as sufficient exercise.

Americans acquire a taste for foods that are sweet and salty and that smell good, according to McDougall. With time, however, it's also possible to learn to enjoy a diet centered on starches, fruits and vegetables.

"What people really enjoy is in a health supporting diet."

In addition to "A Challenging Second Opinion," McDougall and his wife, Mary, are co-authors of "The McDougall Plan" (New Century Publishers, 1983). Mary McDougall, a nurse, is author of "The McDougall Health Supporting Cookbook — Vol. I" (New Century Publishers, 1984) and "The McDougall Health Supporting Cookbook — Vol. II" (New Century Publishers, 1986).

John McDougall serves as medical director for a program at St. Helena Hospital Health Center in California. During that two-week program, participants learn how to deal with their health problems through a better diet and more healthful lifestyle rather than through medication and/or surgery.

In "A Challenging Second Opinion," McDougall questions many of the treatments given for diseases, arguing that those treatments deal with signs of the disease and not the cause. Too often, "drugging you or cutting you" are the only options offered.

"That approach doesn't deal with the problem."

SUCH AN approach gives inadequate attention to the role that diet and lifestyle play in determining overall health, he said.

"So it perpetuates itself. The sickness is where the reward is." Today's competition in the health care system makes the consumer even more vulnerable, the doctor said.

"They start treating things that are questionable."

In the chapter on heart disease, McDougall questions the wisdom of doing bypass surgery. The operation has an expensive price tag and serious side effects, he said, and doesn't significantly extend most patients' lives.

Instead, the surgery is done to relieve chest pain — something he said could be achieved by a change to a more healthful diet.

McDougall's father, a consultant for the Ford Motor Co., benefited from his son's teachings. The senior McDougall — who enjoyed "the good things" in life — began to have severe health problems some 10 years ago when he was in his early 50s.

By the age of 60, McDougall's father was 40 pounds overweight. He suffered from arthritis, high blood pressure and other health problems.

"He was dying, and I couldn't get him to change his diet," McDougall said.

DESPITE HIS health problems, McDougall's father continued to have trouble turning down "goodie" food items.

Several years ago, the senior McDougall got out of his car to go

In his book, the physician questions the value of many of the treatments given for common chronic ailments that afflict people in the U.S. Too often, medication and/or surgery are the only options offered to patients, he said.

There's no magic pill to be taken that will result in good health. Instead, a healthful diet and lifestyle are the essential ingredients, according to Dr. John McDougall.

Makeup

Celebrities face artist's scrutiny

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Judy Hepler of Livonia and makeup artist Jeffrey Bruce chat with Sandy Baluch, president of the Livonia Town Hall, last week. Bruce's appearance at the Town Hall drew a sell-out crowd.

JEFFREY BRUCE might apply makeup with a cotton swab, but his barbs toward celebrities are applied with sandpaper.

Bruce, a well-known makeup artist, spoke with both softness and grit before a sold-out Livonia Town Hall last week at the Livonia Holiday Inn-West.

The New York native, who's worked with Jackie Onassis, Lauren Bacall, Ann-Margret and Racquel Welch, provided tips to women on how to look their best and not look like the rest.

He pokes fun in Joan Riversque fashion at a host of celebrities to make his point. No one is sacred as he chided Donna Mills for her eye makeup, Karen Black for her eyebrows, Lucille Ball for her lip line and Barbara Bush for her hair color.

"I'm always nice," Bruce said. "It's just the celebrities I pick on."

BRUCE'S MAIN message to older women is to look their age and "look sensational." Judy Hepler of Livonia applied a makeover to a member of the audience while Bruce explained the type of makeup to use and how to apply it.

But more important than application are the attitudes some people have carried through the years when it comes to cosmetics.

"One of the big problems that women have is that for centuries they've been doing the same thing," Bruce said. "Someone told them at 20 they looked nice and for the last 30 years they've been doing the same thing since."

One area in particular Bruce believes to be important are the eyes. He suggests using eyeliner "only where you have eyelashes."

Bruce also said mascara should always be black and eyebrow pencils shouldn't be used.

TO AVOID raccoon eyes, Bruce recommends using a natural blend of four eye shadows instead of one. It's not necessary, he said, to match the color of the eye shadow to the color of the eyes.

"You people with blue eyes, give us a break," he said. "Don't try to make your eye shadow the same as your eyes . . . You look like you're looking through bagels and you should be singing, 'Tomorrow' (like Annie) somewhere.

"When in doubt, use light gray. It looks attractive on everyone."

Bruce believes the eyes to be really important because they can draw attention from the mouth area, where people began to show age.

He recommends the non-lipstick look for the lips. And for lines and wrinkles, he said learn to live with them.

"No cream can get rid of lines," he said. "Facial exercises don't work either."

ESSENTIALLY Bruce believes the clean, classic, fresh look works best. And it works without going to excess, using too much or too little makeup.

"If people tell you they love your makeup, it's not a compliment," he said. "It's like being complimented on your plastic surgery or your toupee."

Bruce has been telling people what he thinks of their makeup for more than 20 years. He's currently a regular guest on several daytime talk shows, including "Kelly & Company" and "Sally Jessy Raphael Show," both on WXYZ-TV, and "Hour Magazine" in Los Angeles.

At one time, he worked at Estee Lauder before he went to Revlon as director of cosmetics. He has his own line of cosmetics and skin care products.

Bruce still works out of New York, though he's become a regular visitor to the Detroit area. Six years ago he did the makeup for Heidi Hepler, who was then Miss Michigan and a contestant at the Miss America Pagaent.

On Judy Hepler's request, Bruce came to Michigan to demonstrate his art and to promote his line of cosmetics.

It's also opened up a new line of work — acting. The animated Bruce, with no previous experience, played the Zero Mostel role in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to Forum" at the Birmingham Theater.

With time, it's possible to learn to like a diet full of healthful foods, said Dr. John McDougall. "What people really enjoy is in a health-supporting diet."

Making health a top priority

into his office. He felt a terrible chest pain. After a trip to a cardiologist, McDougall asked his physician son if he should have bypass surgery, as had been suggested.

Instead, the senior McDougall changed his diet according to his son's advice. Within several months, he lost weight. His blood pressure dropped, as did his cholesterol level.

Today, McDougall's father is in his 60s and enjoys good health. He's not on medication and works full time.

Dr. John McDougall, who lives in Hawaii, is planning on marketing frozen foods based on his dietary teachings. The foods would be in boilable bags that could be put in a microwave.

He also believes Americans can eat well at restaurants — provided they know where to go and what to look for.

Due to consumer demand, many restaurants have begun to serve more healthful fare. Salad bars, for example, are now a common sight.

"It's only because of consumer demand. Their interest is in making money."

His recent trip to Michigan took McDougall from warm weather to a much colder climate — a change he wasn't entirely happy with.

"I never liked it when I lived here and I still don't," the doctor said with a smile. "To me, winter is a hibernation period."

(For additional information on McDougall's program at the St. Helena Hospital Health Care Center; call 1-800-358-9195.)

Pageant features Central student

Jennifer Ann Furr, 12, daughter of Steven and Teri Furr of Canton, will represent Michigan in the Miss American Pre-Teen Pageant in Tampa, Fla., over the Thanksgiving holiday.

The national pageant is open to girls ages 8-12 who have won their respective state pageants.

Furr is a student at Central Middle School in Plymouth. She and the other contestants will be judged in four categories: interview, interview appearance, appearance on stage in evening wear and speech presentation.

The speech topic is "My Favorite American." Furr's favorite American is Mary Lou Retton, the gymnast.

The Canton girl will also compete in the separate talent and photogenic events. She will perform a jazz dance routine to a disco version of "Singing in the Rain," choreographed by JoAnne Zavisa of JoAnne's Dance Extension in Plymouth.

Zavisa will accompany Furr to the national competition. Furr will also be accompanied by her parents and by her grandmother, Ann Arnold of Lansing.

On Thanksgiving, the contestants will go on a tour of Disney World. On Friday, the competition will begin, with the crowning of 1987's Miss American Pre-Teen set for Saturday evening.

Furr will tour Tampa Sunday and return to Michigan Monday.

"I have never been so excited about Thanksgiving in my entire life," she said. "I cannot wait to meet all of the other state winners."

"What I discovered at UM-D is that professors don't just teach the material in a book—they give you a whole new way of looking at things. You don't just earn a degree. You gain a new vision."

IT TAKES MORE THAN MODERN COMPUTERS AND library books to make a great university. At UM-D, we know that talented, motivated students are just as important as a first-class faculty. It is the synergism that occurs in the classroom every day between a great faculty and a great student body that is the true indication of a quality education.

moral perspectives

Rev. Robert Schaden

Thankfulness can take a variety of expressions

TO SUGGEST that we should be thankful is seemingly trite. After all shouldn't everyone know that gratitude is a necessary ingredient of life? And besides the holiday invites us all in that direction. We hardly need a newspaper column to call us to the obvious.

But this graditude business goes beyond the obvious. It bears some reflection, regardless of the number of times we have feasted on turkey — or whatever else your family tradition demands of this last Thursday in November. For one thing, there are those who do not feel much reason to be grateful. Do we simply write them off as non-holiday people? And for those who do feel the cause to be grateful, perhaps some items beyond the obvious belong on the list.

What of those who are not in a holiday mood? We have all met them and at one time or another they may well be us. It may be that this is the first holiday they are without their spouse. Death has a way of changing holiday fare. For that matter, so do divorce and other kinds of separation. Then there are the jobless, newly so or tiredly accustomed. They may not feel particularly cheery as others prepare to buy, buy, buy. Nor are hospital residents likely to qualify for a lead in the Thanksgiving parade. If you know such a person it may just be that you are the one who can provide a reason for gratitude amidst the pain. You may not be able to remove the pain that is there and probably cannot. But that does not negate the possibility of providing a healing moment of gratitude in an otherwise cold winter.

If you are among those who do not feel a holiday mood — and I tread lightly here since I know what it is to have someone tell me not feel bad when indeed I do — you may benefit from a respite.

WAITING UNTIL we feel like taking a look at any of the good in our lives may be a way of making sure we never do. Grief will usually be there when we get back to it. But a moment, a few hours or even a day's vacation from the pain of our losses can sometimes give us the stamina to charge through them more effectively. A touch of gratitude, even for the smallest gift, can provide just such a break.

And whoever we are, there is a list of items which qualify for one or more of those grateful moments. There are the obvious. A roof over our head as the temperatures dive into winter, food to eat in a world of so many hungry people, our eyesight and so much more. But let the list go on.

Perhaps we have learned of mistakes in our governments or our churches. Being grateful that we can admit injustice or dishonesty may be the first step to enabling ourselves to make corrections. For that we can be thankful.

For those who have stood against the grain to challenge us to be more human, more just, more peaceful, less violent, less selfish and less complacent we have reason to be grateful.

Some of these are heroes from our past who live in memory. Some are among us still and will only be recognized for a gift when history is written. But alive or dead, on podiums or in prisons they give pause for gratitude. And only a grateful people stand empowered to bring to life the message they offer.

No, it's not all as obvious as turkeys and stuffing but among the better things of life, the things that make us more human and give us reason to stand taller is a sense of gratitude. And when that gratitude can be experienced in adversity even for the things that are less obviously good, then our standing tall is more than an illusion. It is the stuff of which life is made.

A traveler walks to a train at the station in Strasbourg, France. The bulletin board in Beziers, France, reflects the busy train schedule.

Traveling by train

Sidetracked in U.S., it's still big with Europeans

one-of-a-kind traveler

Iris Jones

contributing travel editor

OUR TRAIN to Paris leaves the St. Jean station in Bordeaux at 9:27 a.m. and arrives at Austerlitz station in Paris at 1:46 p.m.

There are 19 daily Bordeaux-to-Paris trains listed on the small paper train schedule I hold in my hand. Several more trains operate five or six days a week, so there is a lot of train service on this one leg of the extensive rail network in Europe.

Those numbers tell you many things, primarily that Europeans still use trains.

The quality of the equipment and service reflects that regular use.

IN THE U.S., there are only a few places where trains are part of daily life — New York to Washington, for example — but European countries still conduct their daily business and vacation life by train.

A society that lives by its trains gives you train service you can live with. Instead of reducing its train network year by year as we have done, the Europeans are building bigger and better trains every day.

Good trains cover more than 100,000 miles of track throughout the continent. Special TEE and Intercity trains run between major cities.

In Germany, an Airport Express hurtles along the Rhine, carrying passengers from Frankfurt Airport to Bonn and Cologne. In France, the TGV, fastest train in the world, has been breaking all records between Paris and southeastern France since 1981; a network of TGV trains will criss-cross France before the turn of the 21st century.

I AM traveling on a Eurailpass, which allows me unlimited travel on first or second class in 16 European countries.

At the moment, I am sitting in a spacious, wll-lit first-class coach with new blue carpeting and wide red seats reminiscent of first class airline seats, two seats on one side of the aisle and one on the other. The front half of the car, behind the glass wall, is for smoking, the back half if non-smoking. Most of my fellow travelers are businessmen reading their morning papers.

A second style of first class car has compartments, with seats facing one another; you have seen them in all those Agatha Christie movies.

Second class cars also come either compartment-style or four abreast like economy seats on a plane. I am traveling with a friend who sometimes travels first and sometimes second, so I have had a good opportunity to see the difference. The main difference is in the luxury level of the cars.

FAR MORE people travel second class. On the seven or eight trains I have taken so far on this trip, most of them in France, the second class cars have been quite clean and comfortable, and more crowded than first. In most cases we are talking about relatively short runs of three to four hours.

If you buy your tickets as you go, instead of using a Eurailpass, first class costs 50 percent more than second class. From Bordeaux to Paris, a one-way first class ticket costs 388 francs and a second class ticket 259 francs; at 6.5 francs to a U.S. dollar thats $60 versus $40.

Whether the difference is worth it depends on your priorities how far you travel and how many trains you may be taking. In summer or on weekends it may be worth the extra; during less busy times it may not.

BUY A Eurailpass and you can travel either way. The Eurailpass is available only to people who live outside of Europe, Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia, so you must buy it before you leave home, however, unless you are traveling only between major cities listed on the schedule that comes with your pass.

There are a lot of interesting little details to learn but the most important is that you will be carrying your own bags so travel light.

Even with a taxi to the door of the station you must haul your bag to the platform, up and down long flights of stairs to other platforms, up and down flights of stairs to other platforms and up the steps into the train.

Once aboard you will probably hoist your luggage up to an overhead rack. First class cars have floor and waist-level racks at the ends of the car. You can check your bag but most people don't because it may not arrive on the same train that you do.

MY ITINERARY took me by plane to Frankfurt Airport, by train to Cologne, up the Rhine River by boat, by car to Stuttgart, by train to Montpellier, France, down the Canal du Midi on a hotel barge, by train to Bordeaux and by train again to Paris, where I took a plane home. A Eurailpass is well worth while when you are wandering around the continent like that.

The fast train out of Frankfurt airport sped on swift silent rails to Mainz and down the Rhine River to Cologne. Signs in German and English led me from my Pan Am flight to the baggage area. Railway schedules were posted there and throughout the airport.

Eurailpass tickets must be signed and validated at the railway counter before boarding a train for the first time. From then on, you just climb aboard while other people line up for tickets. The ticket for that run cost 67 marks ($34) first class and 41 marks ($21) second class, with an extra five mark ($2.50) surcharge for the fast train.

WE TOOK the airport escalator down two levels to track three, where a diagram showed exactly where trains stop and where to stand to board either first or second class cars. The express to Cologne leaves at one minute before the hour, and at exactly 10:59 it glided into the station.

There was no clackety-clack of train wheels as we raced up the river. That is an electric train and it rides more smoothly than the cushiest Cadillac.

It isn't always that easy. The first rule of train travel in Europe is to leave yourself enough time to get the information you need to go from one place to another. The railway network system in Europe is very large, with trains going to every village and town on the continent. You would need two large books the size of telephone books to have all the information you need.

A small schedule of main trains to main cities comes with your Eurailpass, if you ar going from Paris to Frankfurt, and then on to Madrid, you have the schedule in your pocket. I knew before I left home that one of my trips was from Stuttgart or Manheim to Montpellier.

THE CHICAGO Eurail office told me that I had several choices, none of them wonderful. It looked like I had to either stay overnight somewhere or backtrack to Paris to meet my 2 p.m. Sunday appointment in Montpellier. "Check the information desk when you get to Europe."

I tried the information desk again in Heilbronn, where a young woman found me a slightly better route through Lyon, but I still had to overnight in Montpellier to meet my mid-afternoon appointment the following day.

Next week: By train through France.

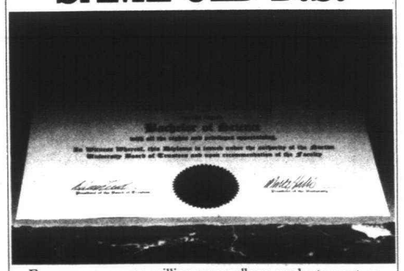
IN TODAY'S JOB MARKET EMPLOYERS WANT MORE THAN THE SAME OLD B.S.



Every year, over a million new college graduates put on their new blue suits and go job hunting.

All of them have degrees. Most of them have hearty handshakes. But very few have what employers want most – practical work experience.

That's why there's a nationwide program called Cooperative Education. It allows students to alternate studies at the college of their choice with paid, practical work experience in the career of their choice.

So Co-op Education students graduate with more than a degree. They have practical knowledge. And a competitive advantage in today's crowded job market. And that sure beats trying to B.S. your way into a job.

Co-op Education
You earn a future when you earn a degree.

Jeff Nahan, founder and executive director, conducts a class in Performing Dynamics at the Actors Alliance Conservatory of Theatre at the International School in Southfield.

Dr. Patricia Kihn provides input for students Terrence Haggerty of Royal Oak and Lisa Fisco of Frmington at class in Scene Studies.

Talent will out

Developing acting skills

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

STUDENTS AREN'T TAUGHT acting at the Actors Alliance Conservatory of Theatre in Southfield.

"We can't teach anyone how to act," said Jeffrey Nahan, founder and executive director of the conservatory. "We give them the tools to find it within themselves."

How to project voice, move well on stage and prepare a scene or monologue are only a few of the many skills integrated into the program. Theoretical exercises help students break through barriers.

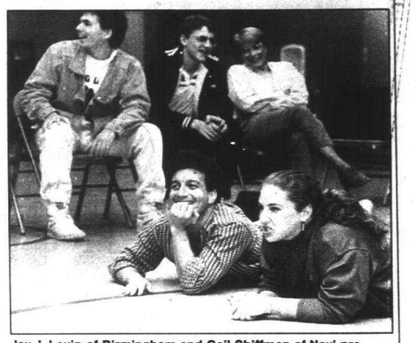
Nahan says many people are so self-aware when they first get up on stage that it blocks their progress. "So often people need permission to be," he said.

In his classes he gives that permission and tells students the class is like a padded cell where they won't get hurt if they let go and express themselves.

In addition to teaching fundamental theater skills, Nahan also announces upcoming auditions, recommends photographers for promo shots and discusses local talent agents, to give students practical information so that when they complete the program they're ready to go out and get work.

AS THE EDUCATIONAL arm of the Actors Alliance Theatre Company, the conservatory offers three levels of ongoing adult classes at the International School on 13 Mile and Evergreen roads. Also offered are Saturday classes for youth.

Nahan says within the three levels there is a place for anyone with an interest in the program. He personally places students to be certain the level of difficulty suits their abilities and experience.



Jay J. Levin of Birmingham and Gail Shiffman of Novi pretend to watch television, during "in the round." Students circle up, then take turns acting out their own impromptu skit.

Amateurs who want to explore possibilities and improve speaking skills enroll in the Exploratory Program. Performers preparing for careers in theater follow the Preparatory sequence of classes. The Conservatory series for the professional actor features weekend workshops and master classes by experts brought in from New York.

Six-week sessions begin periodically throughout the year, and classes meet evenings for 2½ to three hours once a week. The conservatory offers nine class experiences of gradually increasing challenge, on its Exploratory and Preparatory levels.

With the help of state Sen. Jack Faxon and Helen Lanese, Nahan founded the Actors Alliance Theatre Company in 1981. He had done cafe repertory in Philadelphia, studied dance and street mime in New York and worked with the Detroit Repertory Theatre and the Attic Theatre in Detroit.

HE HOLDS a bachelor of arts in television and radio production, from Wayne State University and has 10 years experience teaching acting and directing,as well as running the business side of a theater.

Sweet village

A Gingerbread Village constructed by 14 area chefs and 22 culinary students will be displayed from Thanksgiving Day through Tuesday, Dec. 2, at the Festival of Trees, at Cobo Hall in Detroit. The 27 village buildings are made entirely from edible ingredients. Individual houses will be for sale at the event. Chef Duane Christ of the Bakers Loaf in Southfield has created one of the buildings. Two teams of students from Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills also made buildings, under the direction of coordinating chef Joe Bender. For more information call 745-5373.

MRA relocating

The 1,800-member Michigan Restaurant Association, now headquartered in Birmingham, will move to Lansing early in 1987. Michael Newman, new president of the MRA, will oversee the relocation. Newman is former executive president of the Michigan Retailers Association.

Actors portray Tiny Tim at Bonstelle

Two area residents alternate in the role of Tiny Tim in Wayne State University's Bonstelle Theatre production of "A Christmas Carol," in Detroit.

The play based on Charles Dickens' classic opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 12, and continues with performances Fridays and Saturdays, Dec. 12-13 and 19-20. Matinees will be at 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, Dec. 13-14 and 20-21.

For ticket and schedule information call the box office at 577-2960. Door sale at the Bonstelle begins one hour before curtain.

The story of Ebenezer Scrooge, a curmudgeonly miser, and his Christmas Eve awakening, has been adapted for the stage by Wayne State's Robert Emmett McGill, professor of theater and assistant director of the university theaters.

Nahan said, "Teaching clarifies my own skills as a performing artist. My most important growth as an artist has come in these five years."

Dr. Patricia Kihn, an actress who teaches voice classes at the conservatory, said, "I've had people who came to learn how to speak at a board meeting, as well as lawyers, policeman and telephone operators."

The slim, energetic brunette, with the lilt of her native Scottish accent still evident after 22 years in the United States, says, "People neglect voice and it's an incredibly important instrument."

She projects enthusiasm and seems to be moving even when standing still.

Kihn earned a bachelor of fine arts degree at the University of Detroit, a master's in theater at the University of Michigan and a doctorate in speech and communication at Wayne State.

SHE SAID, "People need encouragement as they learn to walk about on stage." Encouragement is part of her teaching style.

In her classes she puts into practice some of the theories of Christine Linkletter, a British specialist in voice trained in the strict techniques of English theater. Linkletter's belief is, "The things that hold back voice are the same things that hold back freedom," Kihn said.

Because people use their voices all the time without thinking much about it, they assume developing an effective voice is easier than it is. Kihn said, "Building a voice is a process." She works on the process in class and gives students homework they can do in the car to make use of the limbo time spent getting from one place to another.

Divina Cook, a well-known Detroit actress who was one of the founders of the Attic Theatre, teaches the method approach to students preparing for a career in the performing arts.

COOK GREW UP in New York City and received theater training at Uta Hagen's H.B. Studio and under Lee Strasberg at the Strasberg Institute. After a stint in Los Angeles, she came to Detroit and stayed because she saw an opportunity to do something worthwhile.

"Method acting is a way of becoming a human being on stage," she said. Her classes use exercises and techniques to make students vulnerable to stimuli and put them in touch with their humanity.

"Sometimes actors forget to think as the character on stage," Cook said. Using the method approach, actors learn to think and react the way their characters do.

Even on stage the traditional actor maintains a clear sense that he's an actor pretending to be somebody else. His mental eye is always watching and judging what he's doing and thinking about the next cue.

In contrast, the method actor strives to become the character, to think and feel and react as the character does.

Cook sets high standards for theater. She said, "There's a tendency to worship the god of mediocrity and settle for the easy road. Art has to strive for something more, for those moments of true genius."

She asks her students not to settle for stereotypical interpretations of character but "to allow that part of oneself that is truly yours to come through."

CONSERVATORY instructors take pride in the supportive atmosphere in classes. Cook said, "We learn a great deal about each other, sometimes very personal things. Each group becomes a family that gives and receives a lot of love."

Love is compelling in 2 theater pieces

Performances of the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford production of "Savage/Love" and "Fool for Love" continue through Saturday, Dec. 6, at the theater in Redford.

By Bob Welbel
special writer

Under the expert direction of Gail Mack, the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford is offering two very different presentations about that most mysterious of human emotions . . . love. Both are very good.

The first piece, "Savage/Love," is from the pens of Sam Shepard and Joseph Chaikin. Its original form is pure verse. Director Mack has chosen to present it with four performers, supported by excellent music, lights and elements of dance movement.

It gives a stylized, lyrical quality that seldom misses a beat as a backdrop to 1,001 observations about everything from the desire and pursuit of love . . . to the loss of love.

Vicki Cravens, Mary Sieklucki, David Rago and Tobin Hissong work well together as an ensemble. Cravens is perhaps the most eloquent — especially when describing the tactile facets of her lover's voice and touch.

AFTER THIS stylized, poetic look at the many complexities and expressions of love, playwright Shepard treats us to a highly dramatic view of destructive love in "Fool for Love." It's set in a sleazy motel room at the edge of the Mojave Desert.

Thankfully, the walls are solid and the door sturdy because they must endure 60 minutes of slamming and banging as two tormented lovers, Vicki Cravens and David Rago, go at each other hammer and tong.

She is a crying, hysterical type. He is a devious, jealous cowboy on the rodeo circuit. Both turn in superb performances. Their characters ring true, and they manage to maintain the intensity of an encounter group from beginning to end.

During all of this, an old man watches, sips booze and smiles. He's the father. Tom Loomis is the perfect personification of the man responsible for their inability to cut loose from each other.

Rounding out the cast is Tobin Hissong who gives a nice interpretation as the man who might have brought happiness, if our woman in question could change. As with many ironies of life, uncontrollable desires often block rational decisions.

UM-D seeks fee hike

Student activity costs will rise to $35

The University of Michigan-Dearborn will seek an increase in per-semester student activity fees from $6 to $35, over a three-year period.

Student activity fees are used to support student activities, lectures, concerts and speakers, some 55 clubs and organizations, the student newspaper and student government, intercollegiate as well as intramural and recreational sports programs open to the 7,100-plus students on the commuter campus.

"Funding of UM-D student activities has been woefully inadequate for far too long. As a result, the quality of student life on campus does not approximate the excellence of our academic programs," said UM-D Chancellor William A. Jenkins.

"ON ALL campuses, but especially on a commuter campus, an enriched set of activities and opportunities to grow through lectures, concerts, debates and films is essential," Jenkins said.

The proposed fee would go from:

- $9 to $15 in January 1987.
- $5 more to $20 in September 1988.
- Another $5 to $25 in September 1989.

Still another $10 per term fee may be added at a later date, to create a student union building fund. Authorization for that project is still forthcoming.

Jenkins noted that the present $6 fee has remained the same since 1971, through years of inflation and rapid increases in the costs of goods and services. "The only offsetting feature has been the enrollment increases. We now have more than twice the students that we had in 1971," he said.

'On all campuses, but especially on a commuter campus, an enriched set of activities and opportunities to grow through lectures, concerts, debates and films is essential.'

--William A. Jenkins
UM-D chancellor

"THE ADDITIONAL activities income will go further because we are down-sizing our intercollegiate athletics program, from five sports to two, one each for men and women."

The proposed increased money will be distributed this way:

- 25 percent toward the intercollegiate athletics program, to be placed under the direction of a part-time athletic director. Effective next Sept. 1, only men's hockey and either women's volleyball or basketball will be continued as intercollegiate athletics.

Other athletics may be continued as club sports and/or funded as recreational activities.

- 50 percent toward student activities, including the 55 clubs, student government, the newspaper, lectures, concerts and other social/cultural activities.
- 25 percent toward an expanded intramural and recreational sports program, to be directed by a trained professional.

"THE INCREASE will support activities similar to those on a number of Michigan campuses, but certainly not all of them," Jenkins said. "The $15 per term at UM-D certainly cannot support what fees at other campuses, which exceed $100 per term, can support."

Of the proposed student union building fund, Jenkins said, "While activities of all sorts, including recreational sports, should be improved by the more adequate funding, until UM-D has a Student Union building they will hardly be comparable.

"Improving the facilities for student activities is as critical as support for these activities," he said.

The effectiveness of the proposed student fee increase would be reviewed at the end of three years by a committee to be appointed by the chancellor.

Salem vs. Garden City tonight

Rocks rout Churchill; Cougars fend off Pats

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Even before the night was over at the Westland John Glenn gym, talk was turning to Wednesday's Class A district girls basketball final.

It will be Plymouth Salem (21-1) against Garden City (18-3) for the title, beginning at 7 tonight at Glenn.

Both teams breezed through Monday night's semifinals, Salem whipping Livonia Churchill in the first game of a double-header, 62-18, while Garden City toppled Livonia Franklin in the nightcap, 66-43.

The two teams will not alter strategy for tonight's championship. Both teams plan to run the ball up and down the court, but Salem will be cast as the favorite.

"We can't change at this point," said Garden City coach Marshall Henry. "I don't think we can afford to play slow-motion, post-up basketball with Salem.

"It's our defense against their defense. We've got to make Salem earn their points every time down the floor."

SALEM COACH Fred Thomann added more insight to the matchup.

"When I look at Garden City, and I've watched them early and I've watched them late, they haven't made too many changes," he said. "I expect them to sit in a zone and run out of a zone. They have decent quickness at the guards. Not only do they have three good perimeter players, but they also have two good post players. They're a good basketball team when you let them be. We run our same stuff and just go at them."

Thomann expected a stiffer test from Churchill (12-9), but the Chargers launched shots from ozone range and kicked the ball around like it was soccer.

Liz Monroe's basket made it 2-2 with 6:03 left in the first quarter, but then Salem scored 28 unanswered points and led 36-5 at the half.

All 10 Salem players scored with Dena Head and Jessica Handley tallying 16 each. The Rocks' other three starters — Keri McBride (eight), Jill Estey (six) and Kristen Hostyns' (six) combined for 20 points.

THE MARGIN OF VICTORY was a bit more substantial for the Rocks, who beat Churchill by only six early in the season.

"This was a nice way to evaluate in terms of game No. 3 and game No. 22," said Thomann. "Obviously we didn't expect that kind of game. I thought it would be much closer, a lot more give and take. Once we got on a roll, they didn't get many good shots, it seemed."

Meanwhile, Garden City had a barrel full of shots in its victory over Franklin (7-14).

The Cougars led 13-9 after one quarter and then shot out to a 37-19 halftime lead, outscoring the pint-sized Patriots by 14 points in the second period.

Linda Lankford, the Cougars' 6-foot-1 senior center, poured in 18 points and made life miserable for Franklin on the boards.

She led a balanced scoring attack with three other Cougars in double figures — Terri Paul (14), Karen Sandman (13) and Denise Kokowicz (10). Shelly Malone came off the bench and added six.

"THE KEY TONIGHT was that Linda played the way she was supposed to play," Henry said. "We really worked hard with her the last few days on her aggressive, post-up moves. Tonight she was squaring up and was more patient.

"And Denise (Kokowicz) got us out of the gate fast. Sandman did a great job of running the offense and Terri Paul is coming around. She made some nice passes and played good defense. We had a lot of balance. They couldn't key on anybody."

Franklin was led by Rose Obey, who scored a team-high 14 points. Kathy Curnow came off the bench to score 10 and senior Linda McCaul finished with eight.

"We didn't want to get into running game," said Franklin coach Dan Freeman. "We didn't want to start pressing, but when we got to a point, we had to. We were just going through the motions. We weren't aggressive at all with our half-court, diamond press. We just weren't sliding."

Other than Curnow, the Patriots had a hard time getting shots off inside of Garden City's 3-2 zone.

FRANKLIN'S 5-FOOT-5 center Maria Vasseliou, tried to knife inside, but had little success.

"We were hoping to draw some fouls and change the outlook of the game," Freeman said. "But Garden City just has too much size and too much outside shooting."

Henry emphasized that the Cougars cannot be lethargic against Salem.

"We really roll when we push, push, push," he said. "Even off a made basket we have to fly down the floor. I think we learned our lesson against Churchill (a 46-44 loss). That turned our season around."

Engineers swap ties, Baker's getting antsy

A.J. Baker hasn't pushed the panic button — yet. But there was a certain sense of urgency in his voice when he said: "The time to jell is right now."

Baker's Hennessey Engineers Junior A hockey team is off to a mediocre start with its 7-8-2 record in the North American Junior Hockey League. The team's inconsistency surfaced again in its two games last week.

Last Wednesday at the Plymouth Cultural Center the Engineers battled undefeated league-leading Compuware to a 4-4 tie. It was one of the Engineers' better efforts of the season. But on Saturday, the Engineers blew a lead late in the game and settled for a 6-6 tie with the St. Clair Shores Junior B team.

"The point we got on Wednesday we gave away on Saturday," Baker said.

But Baker remains optimistic that his team will get untracked.

"I was looking over some records, and I found out that last year after 16 games we were 7-7-2. We were 7-8-1 after 16 games this year," said Baker. The Engineers finished strong last season and placed second in the NAJHL. "I hope the similarities between the two teams will make our guys believe we can still make a success out of this season. There is plenty of time left. Hopefully, something will kick in and we'll begin to see the light at the end of tunnel."

hockey

TOM MADDEN scored a goal early in the third period Wednesday to draw the Engineers even with Compuware. The rest was up to goalie Doug Brown. He stopped 30 of the 34 shots Compuware peppered at him.

"Doug Brown played an excellent game," Baker said. "He was the difference. They outshot us 34-22."

Leif Gustafson, Darrell Sattler and Bryan Krygier scored the other Engineers goals against Compuware goalie Mike Tardich.

It was a different Engineers team that showed up at the Detroit Skating Club on Saturday.

"I don't know what it was. Something about the day. But there just was not a lot of motivation," Baker said.

It also didn't help that the team played without two of its better players, Larry Pilut and Madden, both nursing minor injuries.

One player did show up to play, luckily for the Engineers. Bryan Krygier scored four goals and assisted on the other two for Hennessey. Jeff Smith scored the other two goals.

IT WAS a 3-3 game entering the final period. The Engineers went ahead 6-5 late in the game on a shorthanded goal by Smith. But with 45 seconds left, St. Clair Shores scored the tying goal.

"Between periods I told the guys that the team that made the fewer mistakes in the third period would win the game. And we went out and made far too many mistakes," Baker said. "On the tying goal, our forwards got caught up ice and they came down four-on-two. You just can't get caught up ice in that situation."

One bit of good news came out of Saturday's game. Goalie Dave Church, who has been injured for three weeks, played the first period. He gave up two goals but played well before Baker sat him down.

"Maybe I should've stayed with him. I'm second-guessing myself now," Baker said.

The Engineers and Compuware will go at it again at 8:20 p.m. Friday at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Salem looks to rebuild; Canton improved

By Bill Parker
staff writer

Ron Krueger dosen't feel he's crying wolf.

But he knows that's what everyone will think when he claims Plymouth Salem is in a rebuilding year.

"We're going back to the grinding stone this year," said the dean of Observerland wrestling coaches. "I know I've said that before and everyone said 'yeah, sure,' but we really are. We're not crying wolf. We're going to be a young team this year. Last year we had a great season, but we're not going to have that kind of a year. We lost a lot of kids to graduation, and we lost some pretty good JV kids, for one reason or another. Basically we're a young team."

It certainly wasn't an understatement when Krueger said Plymouth Salem had a great season last year.

Over the course of the 1985-86 campaign, the Rocks won the Westland John Glenn, the North Farmington, the Monroe, and the Milford Lakeland invitationals. They won the Western Lakes Activities Association title, placed second at the district meet, third at the regional meet and seventh at the state meet.

Some of the more notable losses from that powerhouse squad are Dave Dameron, 126-pound state champ and all-America selection; Jamie Woochuk, fourth in the state at 185 pounds; Kirk Rentz, fourth in the regional at 138 pounds; and 132-pounder Kevin Freeman.

"WE HAD A great bunch of seniors last year," said Krueger. "We've got a good bunch this year, but we just don't have enough. This year we're putting the eggs in the basket and we'll have to see what happens."

Top prospects for this season include senior co-captains Dennis Dameron, Tim Ott and Lem Yeung.

Dameron, who finished third in the state at 112 last year, and Ott, who was a third place district finisher at 119, are both contending for the 126-pound slot. One of the two will either go up or down one weight class. Yeung will enter competition in the 155 category.

Other seniors on the team include Sean May, 112; Mark Smith, 167; and heavyweight Richard Johnson, who placed second in the league last year.

"Johnson could be a good one this year," said Krueger. "It just depends on how much he wants it."

Todd Bourlier, a junior, who qualified for the regional tournament last year will stake down the 105 spot, while classmate Jeff Delbeke is expected to do battle at 98.

Junior Bill Atwell will fill in around the middleweight area and Chuck Graczyk should pick up some slack around 200.

"With the help of my assistants Larry Phillips, Larry Fridge and Byron Waldron, we're teaching a lot of basics right now," said Krueger. "We should be pretty strong in a couple years. Maybe some of the new kids will come along faster than we expect, jump in, and help us out."

wrestling

Krueger believes Westland John Glenn and Walled Lake Central will be the powers in the Lakes division while Livonia Churchill, Plymouth Canton and Walled Lake Western will battle it out in the Western division.

PLYMOUTH CANTON

After a 4-5 dual meet record last year, and a sixth place finish in the 12-team league meet, the Plymouth Canton Chiefs are hunting for better things this season.

"As a team we'll do as well or better than we did last year," said Canton coach Rick Menoch. "If the younger kids live up to their potential, we're going to be competitive in our division. We have the potential for a great year."

The Chiefs lost some tough competitors from last year's team such as state qualifier Dave Dunford and regional qualifiers Tim Birely and Jay Pollard. But they also return some talented individuals which gives Menoch reason for optimism.

The Chiefs will be looking for leadership from senior heavyweight, Tony Calloway (fifth in the league last year), and juniors Tom Flores, 98, (third in the league) and Jim Crews, 198, (fifth in the league).

Freshman Tim Mardini, sophomore Josh Berrie, and junior Matt Keeler are expected to hold down the lighter weight divisions.

COMPETITION FOR the middle weight classes will be between seniors Lee Moss, Larry Allen and Dan Dewyer, and juniors Craig Rinke and Tony Sayers.

"Last year we were basically a .500 team," said Menoch. "We don't have the individual talent like Dunford, Birely and Pollard, but as a team we're stronger. We're not in a rebuilding year at all. We should have a good year. I think we'll have a good wrestler at each weight class. If the younger kids come along we'll have a good season. If they take it on the chin, we'll take it on the chin."

The Chiefs open the season at Salem at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and travel to John Glenn for a 7:30 meet on Thursday.

"We open with the teams that were one and two last year, so we'll find out right away how we're going to do," said Menoch. "We'd really like to beat Salem in our opening meet. They just annihilated us last year. They ate us alive. This year we'll be able to compete with everybody."

Dennis Dameron will be a key figure in the Salem wrestling plans again this season.

Local teams tumble, blame sports writer

Some final thoughts on the fall season . . .

Chris McCosky

ANYBODY NEED some passes to the state football finals at the Silverdome Saturday?

With Harrison and John Glenn playing in the semifinals, I was certain Observerland would be represented in the Dome this year. So did a lot of folks in the Farmington and Westland communities. Oh, well. It was a lot of fun while it lasted.

If Harrison wants a whipping boy, use me. I'm the jinx. It's been heartbreak ever since I came on the scene. Listen to this:

The last time I worked the state finals in football was in 1982. I worked the famous Farmington Harrison-Dearborn Fordson game. I was covering Fordson. Fordson lost. The precedent was set.

Harrison's loss to Churchill in 1983? My fault. The loss to Fordson in 1984? Don't blame the mud or a kicker named Kamal Salame, or something like that. Uh-uh. My fault. Last year, the loss to Glenn? You guessed it. My fault.

It's not just the Hawks either. Farmington Hills Mercy won the state girls basketball championship the year before I got here. It hasn't won it since.

Take heart. I think I know what the problem is. It's my attitude. You see, in my heart I want my teams to win. I enjoy covering the state championship games. The sports editor before me, the legendary Tom Baer, had a different attitude. His motto was: The earlier the teams were eliminated, the less work there was to do. He had two state champions in the same fall season in 1982. You see, I need to adjust my mental approach to this job.

MORE ON THE HAWKS: I felt a little sorry for Dave Krolicki. He was cheated out of some statewide recognition because of a misprint in the program. Krolicki scored the Hawks' only points. He caught the 24-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter. But the program listed No. 87 as Tony Allen. Krolicki has wore jersey No. 87 all season. But the Detroit and outstate reporters didn't know that. Thus, throughout the state, Tony Allen got his name in the papers for scoring a TD.

Krolicki, in a sense, was lucky the Hawks didn't have to play another game. He may have been in line for some punitive measures from the Harrison coaching staff. You see, David performed a little high-stepping dance in the end zone following his TD. The Harrison coaches do not tolerate such tomfoolery from their players.

But the coaches couldn't be too upset with Krolicki. In many ways, Krolicki symbolized the strength of the Harrison football program. It seems every year the Hawks graduate a load of talented players. Every year a new bunch of unfamiliar faces and names step in to guide Harrison to its familiar spot atop the league and among the state leaders.

How does this happen? Look at Krolicki. He played very little as a junior. As a senior, he was one of the best two-way players in the area. Something happens to these guys between their junior and senior years. I think it has something to do with desire — the desire to maintain Harrison's standard of excellence. It also has something to do with superior coaching. Bob Sutter, Bob Sallow and John Herrington "teach" football as well as any staff in the state.

ON GIRLS HOOPS: Wednesday, Dec. 10. Southfield High School. I cannot wait. Barring a nuclear fallout or any other such cataclysmic event, Plymouth Salem and Farmington Hills Mercy will meet that night in the state Class A quarterfinals. Winner gets to take me to Grand Rapids. Mercy and Salem have made playing each other in the state tournament an annual event. Mercy has yet to lose to Salem in the state tournament.

Salem sure did put on a show for the large crowd at John Glenn last Thursday. The Rocks scored 20 points in the first half and fell behind John Glenn. Then the Rocks turned it up a notch. They ran off 17 straight points in the first three minutes of the third quarter. It was a surge reminiscent of Mercy's fourth-quarter rally against Flint Northern in the 1982 state championship game.

While we're discussing Mercy and Salem, there are some intriguing similarities between the two powerhouses.

● Coaching: Mercy's Larry Baker and Salem's Fred Thomann are both hard working and highly respected throughout the state.

● Blue-chippers: Each team has one. Salem has Dena Head. Mercy has Yvette Maison.

● Sterling supporting cast: Jessica Handley, Kristen Hostynski, Keri McBride, Jill Estey for Salem. Margaret DeMattia, Jan Herberholz, Adrienne Clark, Jennifer Slosar, Maria Dietz for Mercy.

● Instant energy supply off the bench: Mercy's Patty Chapp and Salem's Stacy Sovine have the ability to ignite their team with scrappy, hustling play. Both can dole out the bruises, too, if the opposition wants to get physical. I'd love to see Chapp and Sovine play a game of one-on-one. Last one standing (or breathing) wins.

● Unsung heroes: For Mercy, it's Herberholz. For Salem, it's Hostynski. Although their names seldom make the headlines, neither team would be as good as it is without them.

Dec. 10. I cannot wait.

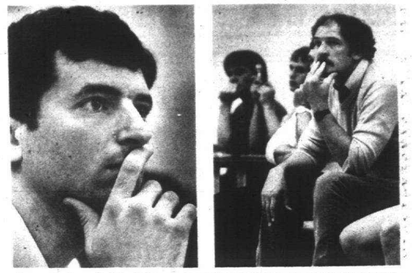
Of course with my luck . . . Ah, I don't want to think about it.

PARTING PATS ON THE BACK: Congratulations to following for jobs well done this fall: Jerry Young, John Barrett, Chris Inch, Jim Kerwin, Kathy Heimbuch, Anita Toth, Rick Wilson, Dick Wilson, Gene Schoeneich, Chris Bayer, Mike Granger, Hooker Wellman, Rose Bandy, Cassie Cummins, Lauren Weary, Suzie Knipper (for caring so much). Ken Johnson, Mike Zaretti, Dave O'Malley, Mike Morgan, Scott Morgan, Glenn Bruehan, Craig Bailey, Cathy Cole, A.J. Baker, Tom Yockey.

Ron Holland and Paul Cummings. And Ellen Sekerak. And Charlie Brown (CEP's real AD).

Tom Moshimer (the original Captain Jack), Scott Selzer, Scott Bissell, Eric Green, Joe Jouppi, Tony Boucher, Ralph Temby (for coming back). Fred Thomann, Larry Baker, Rob Neu, Mike King and Bob Blohm. The best. Becky Philp, Kelli Koss, Lesley Devine, Karen Boluch, Penny Piggott, Jill Estey, Stephanie John, Canton's JV basketball team (undefeated). . . .

And to all others that have contributed to the thrills and spills of this 1986 fall sports season.



Larry Baker (left) of Mercy and Fred Thomann of Salem have their teams on a collision course for a showdown Wednesday, Dec. 10.

Gannon in tourney OU kickers surprise

A Brian Fitzgerald header kept Oakland University's Cinderella soccer season alive Saturday, boosting the Pioneers to a 2-1 win at Gannon University in Erie, Pa.

Fitzgerald's goal came with just under 21 minutes left to play and snapped a 1-1 tie. The score was set up by Gray Haizel, who worked his way deep into GU territory and was fouled. Haizel lined up a free kick right at the end line, halfway between the penalty box and the edge of the field.

From there he chipped it to Fitzgerald, a Southfield graduate and forward-turned-defender, who headed it in.

OU'S FIRST goal was netted by Birmingham Seaholm grad Tom Duff on an assist from John Stewart 18 minutes into the game. Stewart retrieved a ball deep in the corner and crossed a pass to Duff for the goal.

At 63:51, a Hannes van Zyl free kick was headed by Gerry van DeMerwe to Dave Dix, who knocked it in to tie it for GU. After the Knights again fell behind, they had a golden chance to tie it on a Michael Idoko breakaway, but Mikael Carlstrom got back for OU defensively and slid the ball clear.

"We win the ugliest and scariest way I know," said an elated Gary Parsons, OU's coach. "It seems like every time we get a lead, we do everything we can to let the other team back in."

Still, OU is in, advancing to the Division II semis for the third time. A month ago, when the team was mired 5-4-2, a playoff berth seemed unlikely. But the Pioneers rallied and have gone 8-1-1 over their last 10 games.

Lady Ocelots drop a pair

By Brad Emons
staff writer

You can't blame Schoolcraft College women's basketball Jack Grenan for feeling a little bit like a carpenter without all the necessary tools.

The first-year coach is trying to patch things up until he gets a full complement of players.

Over the weekend, Grenan took his undermanned team to the Superstar Classic in Harriman, Tenn. The results were predictable.

The Lady Ocelots opened their season with two losses, falling to host Roane State (Tenn.) in Friday's opener, 89-78, and Gadsden (Ala.) in Saturday's consolation game, 78-65.

Two of the Lady Ocelots' 10-member crew, soccer player Sheri Wolfe and volleyball player Tina Osantowski, did not make the trip because of remaining obligations to their fall sports. They have yet to practice with the team.

Three other players were also nursing injuries. Monday's practice drew only seven players, and the prospects don't look any better this weekend when the Lady Ocelots travel to Muskegon Community for a two-day tournament.

GRENAN IS CONFIDENT things will turn around once the Eastern Conference season starts. Five players return from a 21-6 team that will try and defend its title.

"It's hard to see what we have until we get the kids back from other sports," said Grenan, who took over for Ed Kavanaugh. "After two games we're still trying out different combinations. We have three starters back, but two spots are still open — point guard and center. We may go with three forwards.

"We still have three games before the conference so we're going to experiment to find the right combinations. We want to win, but we also want to improve."

The team's leading scorer from a year ago, 5-foot-10 forward Sue Lubbe of Dearborn Divine Child, scored 35 points over the weekend en route to all-tournament honors. She average 19 points per game last season.

ANOTHER RETURNING veteran is 5-10 forward Tracy Ladouceur of Livonia Ladywood, who averaged 18 points per game last season. She had 31 in the two losses.

Others back include 5-6 guard Lori Abbas of Dearborn Fordson, who netted 13 each in the two games. She is joined by 5-9 forward Michelle Richards (Detroit Western) and Wolfe, a 5-8 guard from Livonia Bentley.

Several new players hope to fill the void left by top scorer Kim Chandler, who averaged nearly 25 points per game, and Colleen McKay, who opted for a four-year school.

Sharon Miller, a 6-2 freshman center from Melvindale, had seven points and seven rebounds in the loss to Gadsden. But she has been slowed in the preseason by an injury to her arm, missing three weeks of practice after being involved in a car accident.

Another hopeful is Lisa Kline, a 5-9 freshman from Waterford Kettering, who has showed so far that she can scrap underneath the boards, grabbing eight rebounds against Gadsden.

Kline will provide depth along with 5-5 guard Tammy Adkins (Melvindale), 6-0 center Kelly Watson (Livonia Clarenceville) and the 6-2 center Osantowski (Madison Heights Lamphere).

"I RECRUITED all the freshmen and our season depends on whether they contribute," said Grenan, "especially the two big people — Miller and Osantowski. This is the biggest team Schoolcraft has ever had.

"We'll see if the big people can run with us. We're going to push the ball up and play full-court man-to-man defense. We're going to pressure the other team and make them play the whole court."

Despite the injuries and the skeleton crew for the first part of the season, Grenan believes his team can contend for the title.

"The league is more balanced," he said. "I think you can win the division with four losses."

Ma Nature foils Wandzel's bid for school record

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Old Mother Nature may have prevented Northwood Institute tight end Ron Wandzel from becoming the school's single season pass catching leader.

The Livonia native and Redford Catholic Central High School product missed Lloyd Slabaugh's mark of 40, set in 1983, by just two receptions.

The sophomore, recently named to the All-Great Lakes Intercollegiate Conference's second team, caught 38 passes for 473 yards. He was second in the GLIAC behind Saginaw Valley's Kurt Priemer with 21 catches for 247 yards.

In Northwood's final game of the season against Hillsdale, Wandzel needed only three catches to surpass Slabaugh, but because of double coverage, quarterback Paul Tripp was only able to complete one pass to his favorite target.

"IT SEEMED the whole (Hillsdale) defensive backfield was on me," said Wandzel. "The coach (Jack Finn) didn't say much, but the team made a big deal about it, like a major countdown or something. They were kind of upset. They wanted me to get it."

Wandzel probably would have broken the record had it not been for the September floods in central Michigan. With the Northmen's home field under water, their Sept. 13 game with the University of Indianapolis was cancelled.

"School was called off and I went home for a day," said Wandzel. "We came back and practiced. Our practice field was OK, but our game field was unplayable."

Despite a 1-8 season and rumors that he might transfer, Wandzel's future at Northwood appears bright with two seasons remaining.

After 18 seasons, Finn is stepping down as head coach to become the school's full-time athletic director. His hand-picked successor is Lou Ferrari, who spent this season as the No. 1 assistant after coaching the defensive line at Columbia University in 1985.

Wandzel said he figures highly in Ferrari's plans.

"HE (FERRARI) is going to make some changes and he wants me back," said the 6-foot-3, 210-pounder. "I plan to get up to about 230 next year."

Losing was difficult for Wandzel, but he kept his composure.

"It was really different because when I was at CC we never lost," he said. "But we were in every game this year through at least the half. The losing didn't bother me as much because we really had a lot of young players. I knew going in that we weren't going to be winning as much. We had only eight seniors.

"Even though we lost, coach Finn said he enjoyed coaching us. We never quit and our attitude was great."

As a freshman, Wandzel was used primarily at wide receiver. He had eight receptions.

S'craft men win 1st

Mike Simpson scored 22 points and dished out nine assists Saturday to propel the Schoolcraft College men's basketball team to an 85-67 victory last week at Grand Rapids Baptist.

It was the Ocelots' first victory in three starts and the first for new coach Bob Wetzel. Schoolcraft led 45-33 at the half and never looked back.

"We played closer to 40 minutes of basketball," said the rookie coach. "We handled the ball better and kept our composure, especially in the second half."

Simpson, a 6-foot-3 product from Detroit Redford, got plenty of scoring help.

Aaron Brown, a 6-5 forward, scored 13 points and grabbed seven rebounds, while 6-3 forward Phil Weiss and 6-8 center Don Edwards, contributed 12 and 11 points, respectively. James Evans added seven rebounds.

The Ocelots return to action Saturday at Wurtsmith Air Force Base near Oscoda. Game time is 1 p.m.

Mistakes ruin Hawks

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

Here's why Farmington Harrison won't be playing football in the Pontiac Silverdome Saturday.

• Marysville, the Hawks' opponent in the state Class B semifinals at Flint Atwood Stadium Friday night, dominated the line of scrimmage. The Vikings gained 236 yards rushing. Harrison gained 19.

• Harrison, which had committed just four turnovers and three penalties in the two previous playoff games, committed four turnovers and was flagged eight times for 68 yards Friday night.

• The Hawks were victims of two bad breaks in one critical sequence, which led to Marysville's backbreaking touchdown in the fourth quarter.

• Marysville won the football game, 22-6. The Vikes will take on either Grand Rapids South Christian or Cheboygan in the state championship game Saturday.

Harrison coach John Herrington offered up the bottom line: "Plain and simple. We just got our butts beat."

IT WAS FAR from vintage Harrison football. From the outset, the Hawks appeared tentative and tight. Marysville, in contrast, seemed fearless and supercharged.

The Vikings stuffed Harrison's first offensive series. Then, on their second play from scrimmage, the Vikes' junior halfback Steve Foster romped off tackle for 69 yards and the game's first score. He broke three Harrison tackles along the way.

That opening sequence established two truths about this game.

John Herrington wasn't pleased with the goings-on Friday night at Flint Atwood Stadium.

Harrison was not going to be able to run against Marysville and Marysville's Steve Foster was going to be able to run a lot. Foster accounted for all of Marysville's points (three TDs, an extra point and a field goal) while rushing for 153 yards in 20 carries.

"The name of this game is line play," said Marysville coach Walt Braun, who had just coached his 210th win. "We think we do a good job of teaching it. Offensively, our guys aren't very big but they do the job. Defensively, we aren't big either, but we are very quick."

Harrison had two successive first half drives end with turnovers. Harrison quarterback Mark Murray (12-of-22 for 171 yards and three interceptions) hit Mark Schmidt with two passes good for 60 yards, then another to Rocky Varacalli to get the Hawks to the Marysville 24. But Varacalli fumbled the ball away on the next play.

Next series Murray completed two passes for 14 yards. Then Tom Hornbacher intercepted him at the Marysville 20.

From there Marysville marched to the Hawks' 4 and settled for a 22-yard field goal from Foster.

HARRISON HAD a chance to get on the board before the end of the half. Gary Schwedt recovered a fumble at the Marysville 33 with eight seconds left. Murray hit Schwedt with a sideline pass with four seconds left. Mark Calvaruso's 43-yard attempt, however, sailed wide to the left.

After some serious attitude adjusting by the coaching staff at halftime, a meaner, more intense band of Hawks took the field for the second half.

Marysville, in its first possession of the third quarter, tried to surprise Harrison with a quick kick on third down. Surprise! Harrison's Marc Hunter blocked the punt and John Bonasso recovered the loose ball at the Viking 24.

On the next play Murray hit a wide open Dave Krolicki in the end zone. 9-6.

Marysville gave the ball right back to Harrison. Jeff Skinner recovered a fumble at midfield and the Hawks appeared poised to overtake the Vikes.

Marysville and whatever fates were at work had other plans.

The Hawks finish with a 10-2 record, a Western Lakes championship and a regional championship.

Offense stalls Glenn football

The dream of going to the Pontiac Silverdome nearly became a reality for the Westland John Glenn football team.

The Rockets turned in a courageous defensive effort all afternoon, but couldn't generate quite enough offense as Muskegon rallied in the final two minutes to escape with a 6-3 win in the state Class A semifinals Saturday at Flint's Atwood Stadium. Muskegon (11-1), nicknamed The Big Reds, will meet unbeaten Sterling Heights Stevenson, a 16-0 winner over Detroit Henry Ford in the other semifinal, for the coveted crown beginning at 1 p.m. this Saturday at the Dome.

Quarterback Rodney Burks made his only completion of the day count big on the scoreboard when he hit 220-pound fullback Willie Wilson out of the backfield with a 17-yard touchdown pass with only 1:47 left in the game.

Muskegon marched 53 yards in 11 plays after Wilson returned a Glenn kickoff 32 yards.

THE ROCKETS' only points of the day came when Tony Svaluto made up for a first-half miss, booting a 30-yard field goal with 6:50 remaining in the game after Mark Bauschat recovered a Rodney Burks fumble at the Muskegon 34.

Glenn, which stopped Burks on the two-point conversion run after Wilson's TD, was thwarted on a last-ditch attempt to get into field goal range when quarterback Steve Hawley was intercepted by Muskegon defender Donald Banks at midfield with 1:10 left.

"Muskegon is a big, powerful football team, and I think they probably wore us down," said Glenn coach Chuck Gordon, whose Cinderella team bowed out with a 10-2 record. "We just couldn't get anything going offensively. We had some spurts, but no consistency. Our defense was on the field too much, but we felt we still had a chance."

TELEGRAPHING MOST of its plays, the run-oriented Big Reds were stymied a number of times by Glenn's big-play defense.

In the third quarter, Muskegon marched 75 yards down to the Glenn 5, but came up empty when Glenn defenders Kurt Kuban and Joe Franchak stopped Eddie Brown just short of the first down marker.

On the first play of the third quarter, Kuban recovered a fumble at the Muskegon 30, but the Rockets couldn't convert, drawing four penalties in six plays to force a punt.

Early in the fourth quarter, Brown fumbled and Chris Scheffer recovered at the Glenn 27.

And even in the first half, the Rockets forced three turnovers. Burks was intercepted three times, twice by Pat Pettit and once by linebacker Doug Strehl (on a tip by Scheffer).

But despite the opportunities, Glenn could not capitalize.

The Rockets could only muster 115 yards total offense with only 30 rushing. Muskegon totaled 199 yards total offense, 182 on the ground. The Big Reds ran 61 plays to Glenn's 39. (Brown rushed for 84 yards on 20 carries).

"GLENN IS A TOUGH defensive ballclub," said Muskegon coach Dave Taylor. "They shot down everything we tried.

On the winning TD, Taylor said: "With the time running down, we had to throw sooner or later. It was a 'power-slide out,' we had only run it once before this season. Rodney did a great job of rolling out and he just got the ball to him (Wilson)."

Gordon acknowledged the TD play "as a great call."

"We might have got caught sniffing up in there (at the line of scrimmage) where we didn't belong," said the Glenn coach. "But I thought it was a great defensive effort to hold a team like that to one touchdown."

Ocelots win

For the second straight season, Schoolcraft Community College has advanced to the final eight in the National Junior College Athletic Association volleyball tournament.

The Ocelots, coached by Tom Teeters, won two of three matches in pool play Monday at Miami's Dade Community College to advance to the final eight. The championship will be decided tonight.

In its match Monday, Schoolcraft knocked off New York Genesee Community College 15-2, 15-8, 15-7. The Ocelots then defeated North Carolina Chowan CC 15-11, 15-5, 15-5.

Barton County CC of Missouri knocked off Schoolcraft in the third match, 15-5, 12-15, 15-13.

KIM RELYEA, a Livonia Stevenson product, was standout both at the net and on defense. She led the team with 120 attacks (43 kills and only five errors). She also led the team in digs. Sue Cyrus of Garden City was also strong at the net with 97 attacks, 23 kills and five errors.

Against Barton, Schoolcraft got a big lift from its bench. Tina Osantowski delivered 19 attacks, five kills and four solo blocks in limited action. North Farmington graduate Donna Konjarevich played superb from the back row. She didn't make an error in the match against Barton.

Schoolcraft was ranked No. 5 in the nation entering the tournament.

County of Wayne and the City of Plymouth combined Notification for
NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT ON THE ENVIRONMENT AND NOTICE OF INTENT TO REQUEST RELEASE OF FUNDS

From the County of Wayne
728 Woodward Ave.
Detroit, Michigan 48226

On or about December 15, 1986, the above name County will request the U.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development to release federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93.383) for the following Projects:

Project: City of Plymouth Fire Services
2nd year funding of purchase of Emergency Response Unit and related equipment.
Location: Census Area 5630
Cost: $25,000.00

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and accordingly, the County of Wayne has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190). The reasons for such a decision not to prepare such a Statement are: The Emergency Response Unit is a truck and as such meets all current Environmental Protection Agency Rules and Regulations relating to the manufacture of a truck.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the above project has been made by the County of Wayne which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review record is on file at the County Offices noted above and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at the Plymouth City Hall 201 S. Main, Plymouth, Michigan 48170. It is available between the hours of 8:30 AM and 5:00 PM (During normal business hours) from now until the 1987 project year is completed. No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal Funds.

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the County of Wayne to the Office of the County Executive. Such written comments should be received at 2211 East Jefferson, Detroit, Michigan 48207, on or before December 14, 1986. All such comments so received will be considered and the City will not request the release of Federal Funds or take administrative action on the within project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

The County of Wayne will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) under Title I of the HUD act of 1974. The County of Wayne is certifying to HUD that the County of Wayne and Executive William L. Lucas, in his capacity as County Executive, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making, and action, and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The Legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the County of Wayne may use the Block Grant funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases:

a) That the certification was not in fact executed by the Chief executive Officer of the applicant; or

b) That the applicant's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process.

Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to HUD at: 15th Floor, McNamara Building, 477 Michigan Ave., Detroit, Michigan 48226. Objections to the release of funds on the basis other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objection received after December 31, 1986 will be considered by HUD.

Supermarket Sweeps

Your wish is their command

Pork 'n' beans to haute cuisine

By Pat Walsh

Which shopping list sounds like yours?

Starfruit, prickly pears, French endive, lemon grass, ginger root, chutney canapes, calamari ring, psari marinata, prawns and caster sugar.

Or. . . .

Twinkies, white bread, whole milk, bologna, Tide, oranges, Lee Press-On Nails, and bathtub caulk.

Not that it matters anymore, not when there are 25,000 items on the shelves of the Farmer Jacks in Southfield and Farmington Hills. Ditto for the new A&P Save-A-Center in Belleville.

We used to be lured to supermarkets with encyclopedias, dishes and flatware. Then the pied piper was in the form of coupon wars and child identification programs. This summer 32,000 customers weighed in at Great Scott's Dr. Katahn's rotation diet promotion. Singles' night has been a great bait.

YOU MAY argue that soup, salad and juice bars, even lobster tanks, will one day go the way of no-brand items. But 25,000 choices isn't just a trend. It's a fundamental change in the industry.

According to Gilbert Borman, director of public relations for Farmer Jack, the supermarket industry has changed more "in the last two or three years than it ever changed before. Gourmet choices and discount pricing are growing at the same time."

"Incredible diversification is what is being offered," Borman said. "One long price war" has become one great choice war.

We are choosing fresh bakery, imported cheeses, all manner of deli foods and even hot foods. But while hot foods are hot, frozen foods are even hotter.

"Frozen food is the single fastest growing area," Borman says. "Coffin coolers," in industry vernacular, have been replaced with rows of stand-up frozen food fixtures.

Paul Coleman, Great Scott spokesman says, "Frozen food is growing by leaps and bounds: microwave french fries, frozen entrees and ice cream novelties such as Life Savers, Dove Bars and Klondikes."

But we are also choosing service.

"Time is a commodity. One-stop shopping is our best product," Meijer public and consumer affairs coordinator Dave Lukens says. "The food market is thriving, and we offer service and choice."

At Farmer Jacks you can mail a package, pay your utility bills and rent a film. Scanners get you out of the store more quickly than before.

IT USED TO BE they told us what to buy. Now they want us to tell them what to sell. Great Scott! recently completed a "We listen better. ." campaign. It included a consumer advisory board whose suggestions, such as bottle returns at the front of the store and more fruit in the salad bar, were incorporated into its new stores.

Meijer surveys customers of each store it operates every other year. Market surveys, demographic studies and "segmentation" have

How does the independent grocer compete?

James Hiller's family has been in the Detroit area food business for 50 years. His family owns and operates four The Shopping Centers and one Food Emporium. His anser is responsiveness and quality.

Hiller's family has stores in Livonia, Southfield, West Bloomfield, Berkley and one that just opened in Northville.

Traditionally they have catered to an ethnic audience, responding to the subtleties of the neighborhood in much the same way the chains are doing today based on their marketing surveys.

Hiller isn't intimidated by the activity recently generated by the chains. He believes he can respond instantly to a change in the market. Store managers have the authority to respond to community preferences faster than a big chain can, he said.

In addition to responsiveness, The Shopping Centers and Food Emporium claim to offer specialty items not found in chain markets.

"We do not offer the same proNuct in meat, produce or fish. My produce buyer is at the produce terminal at 2:30 in the morning. We called Holland to find a certain kind of broccoli.

"We offer a striped fish in the snapper family that is sold only on one of the Hawaiian islands and arrange to have it flown non-stop back here. We go to Italy to get pasta."

Hiller says the greatest areas of change in the food business have been in fish, produce and fruit.

Fish has expanded "geometrically not linearly. It is the protein source of the future."

Of his niche in the business, he says: "We have our own sandbox."

Divide & conquer

Since 1983, A&P in Michigan has doubled its sales volume even though the number of its stores has fallen from more than 100 to 55.

A&P is responding to varying economic stata and social segmentation with "multiple formats" and "varying product mix," which has produced an economic turnaround for the chain that the Wall Street Journal has called a "stellar success."

It all has to do with "being more responsive to the customers' needs, " said Tom Montgomery, vice president of merchandising for A&P.

To achieve the responsiveness, A&P has four different kinds of stores:

• Save-a-centers: 40,000 to 60,000 square feet with 25,000 items. Warehouse prices without warehouse environment. Middle class shoppers. Example: Oak Park, Belleville. Coming to Southfield in 1987.

• Conventional store: 20,000 square feet. Renovated building. Demographics in a state of flux. Example: Walled Lake.

• Future stores: 35,000 square feet with an excess of 25,000 items. Gourmet foods. Sophisticated, upscale customer. Three planned to open in 1987 in Canton, Sterling Heights and West Bloomfield.

• Gourmet store: 15,000 square feet in areas where their is no real estate. Super affluent customer. Example: Manhattan.

Understand your pension plan practically speaking

Many people don't fully understand what their retirement plan offers other than money for the "golden years." Now is a good time to review your company's retirement provisions to understand what kind of coverage you have, when you can expect payments and what you can do now to help ensure your financial security during your retirement years.

Here is an outline of the four major retirement plans: defined benefit, defined contribution, profit sharing and deferred compensation.

DEFINED BENEFIT pension plans provide a promise to pay participants benefits over a period of years after retirement. The benefits are determined by such factors as the individual's age, years of service and total wages earned. As a participant in this plan, you accrue benefits payable at a predetermined time in the future. Your benefits are funded by employer contributions which can fluctuate depending on statistics of the life expectancy of the participants and investment computations.

DEFINED CONTRIBUTION plans require individual accounts for each plan participant. The amount you will receive from the plan depends upon your employer and employee contributions, the income, expenses, gains and losses credited to your account.

Under a defined contribution plan, the contribution rate is generally determined by the participant's salary, profits of the employer or both.

When a participant retires or withdraws from the plan, the amount allocated to the participant's account represents his or her accumulated benefit and it may be paid to the participant or used to purchase an annuity. In contrast to defined benefit plans, the amount of benefits a participant will ultimately receive is not determined until the time of distribution.

As a participant, you benefit from successful investments by the trustees but also bear the risk of investment loss.

One example of a defined contribution is a money purchase plan. Here, your employer's contributions are based on a definite formula, irrespective of profits. Usually the employer's annual contribution is a fixed percentage of your compensation. For example, the plan might provide that each year your employer will contribute on your behalf 10 percent of your compensation for that year.

A PROFIT SHARING plan is when a company agrees to make a contribution, at its discretion, out of profits. Amounts contributed to the plan are invested and accumulate tax free for eventual distribution to participants or their beneficiaries either at retirement, after a fixed number of years or upon the occurrence of some specified event such as disability, death or termination of employment.

Unlike a defined benefit plan or a money purchase pension plan, contributions are based on a percentage of profits. If the employer has no profit in a given year, no contribution could be made for that year unless the plan provides for contributions from prior retained earnings.

A stock bonus plan is an example. As a participant you are given the option of receiving your benefit payments in the form of company stock. Just as in profit sharing plans, it's up to the employer to decide each year how much, if anything, he or she wants to contribute.

Act now to get ready for changes in the tax law

(Part I)

finances and you

Sid Mittra

Your responses to our recent poll on the new tax have been overwhelming. As expected, there is an insatiable desire to learn everything about the new tax law in a hurry. I have therefore, decided to devote all of my columns for the rest of this year on the smart moves you can make to beat the clock.

a word of caution

Even though the new tax law has been signed by the President and it will be in effect on Jan. 1, the debate is far from over. In fact, experts are still puzzling over many of its implications.

The situation is aggravated because not all provisions become effective on Jan. 1. Some come into effect on July 1 while a few others have been made retroactive.

The best way to describe the confusion is to reiterate George Bernard Shaw: "For every difficult problem there is at least one easy solution. Unfortunately, it is always wrong."

Confusion notwithstanding, you shouldn't wait for a moment longer. There is a lot you can do right away to help yourself.

In addition, much can be done in the months ahead to improve your financial situation in the long run.

short-term moves

The following are the steps you can take this year to improve your situation:

- Defer your income into subsequent tax years.
- Accelerate deductions into the current tax year.
- Pay off personal loans to reduce interest expenses.
- Consider high-yield investments rather than growth investments.
- Make political contributions in 1986.
- Use income averaging in 1986.
- Consider adjusting income to take full advantage of IRA contribution limits for active participants.
- Use specific income shifting techniques that will still be legal under the new law.
- Realize long-term capital gains on properties that are either fully priced or overpriced.
- Adjust investments in passive activities so the passive income would offset passive losses.
- Maximize contributions in qualified plans, which would be affected under the new law.

intermediate-term moves

You can take additional steps to improve your situation in 1987 and beyond. Here are some suggestions:

- Re-evaluate your investment strategy. Since long-term capital gain tax rates will no longer be available, there won't be a need for holding assets for six months or longer merely to reduce taxes.
- Concentrate on income-producing assets.
- Generate additional passive income to offset passive losses you are incurring.
- Pay attention to the investments that will still shelter your income. For example, continue investing in IRAs (which will still accumulate tax-deferred), single-premium whole life, EE bonds, qualified plans, and so on.
- Pay special attention to limited partnerships, which will have important economic benefits.

Next week: More on tax saving ideas.

Thomas E. O'Hara of the National Association of Investors Corp.

When AT&T was split up in January of 1984, I took my shares in US West. I did that because I reasoned its area was one of the fastest-growing in the country and therefore the chance of the company growing faster was better.

I'm satisfied with my choice. The stock has almost doubled in price since I received it. My goal is to double the value of my holdings every five years, and since this doubling has happened so quick, I'm wondering if the stock hasn't gotten overpriced and is therefore likely to do less well in the next few years.

Do you think there is a chance it will double in the next five years?

Let's consider your concern.

From early 1984 to the present time, there has been quite a change in stock market averages, and a lot of stocks have enjoyed substantial price increases. The price-earnings ratio at which the stock sells has gone from 6 to 11.

This change in attitude towards the stock by investors can account for about 80 percent of the price increase in the next five years. The company not only has a good territory but it seems to have able management with a lot of ideas.

MANAGEMENT HAS pushed its earnings on equity up to 15.4 percent in 1985. That is one of the best figures in the industry.

The company believes that most of the future growth of telephones will be beyond the local networks in business information systems, in cellular mobile telephone service, directory publishing, and other similar areas.

This year, the company bought Applied Communications Inc. It is the nation's leading producer of electronic funds transfer software.

The company is anxious to compete in a non-regulated market. It has actively worked to get the states in which it operates to adopt legislation permitting or requiring deregulation of competitive services. Nine of the 14 states in which it operates have done this.

The company has considerable non-regulated businesses. Its real estate subsidiary has $300 million in assets. Its cellular subsidiary has mobile telephone systems in 10 cities.

ITS HANDWORK publishing subsidiary publishes directories in 800 cities. The company also has a financial services subsidiary.

So far, the subsidiaries are not adding to income. We would expect management to make them quite profitable in the years ahead.

We would not project earnings to double in five years, but I suspect they could get to the $7-8 range. And in the kind of stock market I expect we will see at that time, I think the stock could easily sell at 15 or 16 times earnings.

So far the company really hasn't shown the ability to earn money on its diversified operations. If it learns to do that, it would be a nice plus to shareholders.

Thomas E. O'Hara is chairman of the board of trustees of the National Association of Investors Corp. and editor of Better Investing magazine.

Supermarket sweeps

spilled over into the supermarket industry. They have become the "listening" devices responsible for our abundance of choice.

"Pricing in the Detroit marketplace is the most competitive in the United States," Borman said. "We have five chains here, and a market that suffered considerable losses in past recessions. Identifying the customer is the competitive edge: family income, lifestyle, number of children, ethnic background." The melting pot has been segmented into a layered Jell-O salad.

Great Scott! offers what the surveys say people are looking for. Like Farmer Jack, they have a checkout lane that is candy free — a service likely to be valued by some family members more than others. Great Scott! will be segregating cereals — sectioning off those that have sugar and additives from those that are natural and more appealing to the health-conscious shopper.

But supermarkets are also non-judgmental. Several have begun to carry Jolt for those who like a hefty cola, loaded with sugar and caffeine.

Ethnic foods are also the result of demographic studies. Kosher foods, Italian, Polish, Mexican and black food items are being carried in stores tailored to reflect the ethnic meld of their neighborhood.

Demograhics also measure incomes.

Yvonne's To Go gourmet counter at the Southfield Farmer Jack is an example of upscale targeting.

Festival of Trees

Volunteers build a dandy gingerbread house

Christmas trees and gingerbread houses are inseparable parts of the Festival of Trees which is on display in the Riverview Ballroom at Cobo Hall Thursday through Tuesday. The $50 per person Preview Party is 6-9:30 p.m. this evening.

The event with 100 professionally decorated trees, an aisle of wreaths, lots of entertainment, a festival gift shop and a Gingerbread Village created by outstanding chefs and culinary students, is a benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan.

While visitors of all ages will find wonderful things to see and buy at every turn, a lot of youngsters may lose their hearts to a wonderful gingerbread house.

It was designed and built by Phillip DiMambro and Douglas Winkworth with help from their wives, Denise Di Mambro and Mary Beth Winkworth. The latter also happens to be general chairman of Festival of Trees and Denise Di Mambro is on one of the many committees.

THE GINGERBREAD house makes its debut onthe Festival of Trees float in the Thanksgiving Parade. From there it goes to Cobo Hall for the festival.

Then it was auctioned off. Not only is it wall-papered and carpet, but it is designed so that it can be disassembled easily.

"It completely comes apart into seven panels. It bolts together,"said DiMambro as he put the finishing touches on it in the garage of his Bloomfield Hills home.

Like the gingerbread house, all of the colorful things have been madeand donated to this benefit event. The wreaths were made by 42 metropolitan area garden clubs.

The 100 Festival trees, donated by Frank's Nursery & Crafts are sponsored by area businesses and individuals for a donation and decorated by area designers according to a selected theme. Fourteen chefs and 22 culinary chefs constructed the Gingerbread Village, complete with streets, sidewalks, curbs and lights, of edible ingredients. Individual houses will be for sale.

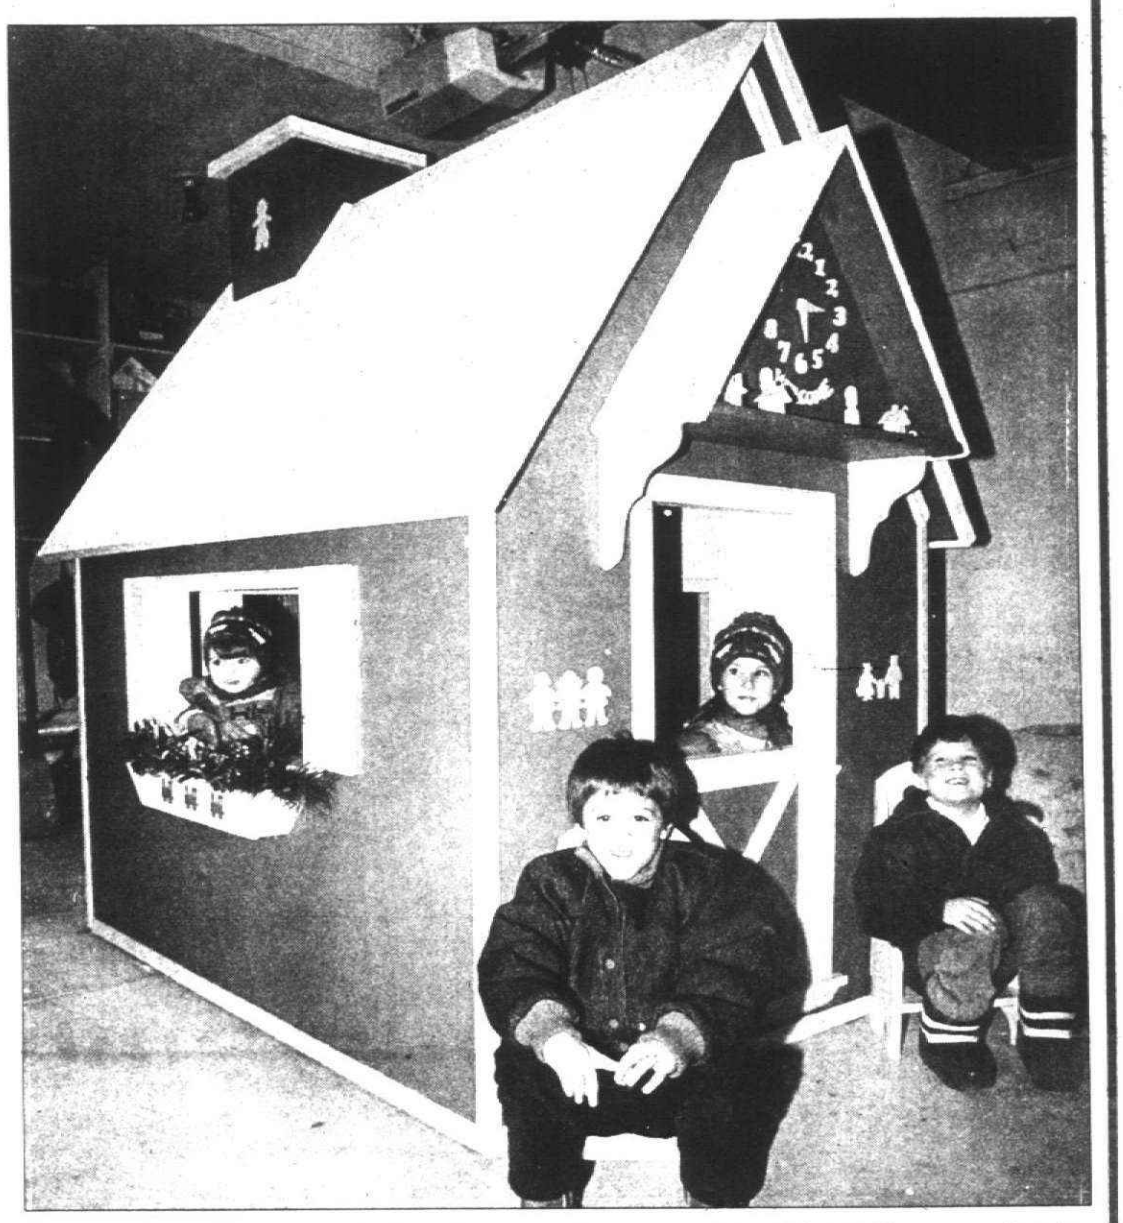
Children will have an opportunity to make a special holiday ornament during a visit to Santaland and visit with Santa.

FESTIVAL OF Trees hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, the day of Santa's arrival; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday; noon to 9 p.m. Sunday; 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday; and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday.

There will be entertainment by school and community groups each day of the Festival.

Proceeds from the Festival will benefit the Evergreen Endowment Fund to support research into causes and cures of childhood diseases. Children's Hospital of Michigan is a voluntary, non-profit, 290 bed hospital serving all income levels. Organizers hope to raise $150,000.

Linda Blondy is the artist who made this theme wreath.



The gingerbread house was built in the garage in Bloomfield Hills for the Festival of Trees and the Thanksgiving parade. Looking out the window is Heidi Rinke, 2, and at the door is her sister, Liesl, 5. The youngsters in front are Tony Di Mambro, 5 (left), and Matthew Hutchins, 6.

See homes decked out for the holidays

Five beautiful homes in the Birmingham-Bloomfield area will be decorated for the holidays and ready for the Detroit Symphony League's annual Christmas Walk from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11.

This annual holiday home tour on the W est side (there's a smiliar one in Grosse Pointe on Thursday, Dec. 5) will focus on five completely different types of homes — an turn of the century farmhouse; a spacious country French home; a contemporary, multi-levbel custom built French chateau; a contemporary beauty with lots of skylights, glass doorwalls and square atrium with a hot tub, nestled into its surroundings with great skill; and a contemporary condominium overlooking Wabeek golf course.

Nancy Laube decorated the country French home for Christmas and used a collection of teddy bears under one of the three Christmas trees. The Wabeek condominium, furnished in eclectic style, will be done in a traditional style for the holidays, others will be more contemporary in approach.

The Choraliers will perform, and the Detroit Symphony Boutique will be well-stocked with gift ideas for those who would like to pause to shop at one of the homes.

Tickets are $6 for groups of 10 or more (557-4838), $7 advanced sale (851-3485 or 646-9208) or at The Village Barn, Franklin.

Ginny Berberian of Southfield is general chairwoman; Barbara Madigan of Orchard Lake is westside chairman, and Pat Mitchell of Bloomfield Hills is assistant westside chairman.

The French chateau with marble floors, soaring ceilings and skylights has magnificant woodwork, French and contemporary furnishings, a formal ambience and luxurious comfort. The interior designer is Roger Llewellyn Bracy of Walter Herz Interiors of Birmingham.

This turn-of-the-century farmhouse originally had stables below and servants quarters above. In the master bedroom, the owners discovered a hidden treasure of a fireplace that was covered with brick and plaster. The wrought iron gate was designed and built by a committee of Cranbrook graduate students. Bob Bently of Perlmutter and Friewald decorated the home for the holidays.

Carlo Curley to perform his special magic

It's a stroke of luck that is bringing Carlo Curley — dubbed as the 'Pavarotti of the organ — to Newburg United Methodist Church in Livonia in an inaugural concert for the church's new organ at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 28.

"We were trying to get someone notable for this opening concert," explained Newburg's music director Tim Bartlett. "On a whim, church organist Jim Bachelor called Grand Rapids to see if Curley was available and it turned out that he was. It was a stroke of luck."

Curley will perform on the church's new Allen digital computer organ in a program focusing on legendary works of Mozart, J. S. Bach, Wagner, Handel, Dupre and Reger.

"It promises to be anything but dull," said Bartlett with a smile, "as Curley puts the new organ through all of its paces."

Admission to the performance is by complimentary ticket only. For tickets and/or information, call 422-0149.

CURLEY IS RAPIDLY cutting quite a swath in music. His goal is "to dispel the elitism that obscures the enjoyment of classicial music from a wider public."

He was a close friend of the late organ virtuoso Virgil Fox. The media recently has said that "Carlo Curley has inherited the mantle of the late Virgil Fox." It's these same music critics who have tagged him the "Pavarotti of the organ."

Curley, in his early 30s, is an unstinting partisan of robust performance and works ardently to win for his instrument the esteem of the general public. The musical repertoire will be accompanied by his inimitable comments which he says will help to "decimate the elitism that obscures the enjoyment of classical music by a wider public."

By age 8, Curley played the major works of J. S. Bach from memory; in his early teens he trained formally at the North Carolina School of Arts. His most well-known teachers included Fox and Britain's celebrated organist Sor George Thalben-Ball.

HE PERFORMS OVER 100 concerts a year. He has performed from the stage of the Royal Albert Hall in Londo, to Carnegie Hall in New York City and has just returned from a triumphant Japanese and European tour. The most prestigious performance was undoubedtly his debut at the Edinburgh Festival, Scotland.

Curley also made history by playing the first classical organ concert in the White House. He performed the Winston Churchill Memorial Concert at Blenheim Palace, England earlier this year and performed a private concert in Copenhagen for members of the Danish Royal Family.

"With all that in mind, you can see what we mean when we say it was a stroke of luck," said Bartlett.

Plants, videos, books, gadgets for shaping up

THE HOLIDAY season could be cited as a study in contradictions.

Fitness fanatics who usually eat right and exercise regularly find themselves with an agenda full of late-night get-togethers where they guzzle gallons of eggnog and other high-calorie holiday delights.

By the time Dec. 31 rolls around, everybody's ready to toast the new year with pledged regimens of exercise, diet and general good health . . . at least until the next holiday season.

Both extremes of the holiday season — self-indulgence and self-renewal — can come together in the gifts you choose this Christmas.

UNWRAPPING A healthy gift is just as much fun as unwrapping a box of calorie-laden goodies, and your gift could benefit the recipient's overall health throughout the coming year.

Here are eight healthy gift ideas you should consider for the health-conscious loved ones on your list:

● Personalized training: Pulse monitors have grown up and are no longer limited to simple digital readouts. With the right options, these handy devices can give athletes the expertise to transform a workout into a highly personalized fitness program. For example, Bodyguard's new wristwatch-style monitor measures the pulse with a finger or earlobe sensor via an opto-electronic pulse detection and can be programmed with an individual's maximum and minimum pulse rate. Other options include a buzzer that can be activated to beep in synchronization to the pulse, a pulse recovery function that automically measures an individual's pulse three and five minutes immediately after a prolonged workout, a clock with 12- or 24-hour display, stopwatch, lap timer and check-point alarm.

● Plants: In searching for a biological air purifier for space stations, NASA scientists have discovered the common spider plant fights indoor air pollutants like formaldehyde, nitrogen dioxide and carbon monoxide. If you'd rather give something more exotic, several other varieties — the Chinese Evergreen, the Peace Lily and the Golden Pothos — work well. Also, consider an aloe plant; its healing salve can do more for the skin than many commercial creams.

● Pets: Whether for companionship, fun or therapy, pets are good for our health. Pets fill a human need — the need to love and care for another living thing. Match the pet to your loved one's lifestyle and personality and be sure to evaluate an animal's specific needs before purchase, advises the Pet Information Bureau.

● Soothing sounds: Would a certain name on your list sleep better at night if he or she were lulled by rolling surf, soft rainfall or a soothing waterfall? Look into sound synthesizers, like the Marsona 1200 Sound Conditioner that masks annoying noise with electronically synthesized sound.

● Rowing to fitness: Many Americans are rowing their way to fitness because with rowing machines they can work all major muscle groups while improving cardiovascular strength. Take a look at the streamlined models, like Vitamaster's stowaway rower that fits neatly in a closet and unfolds for workouts.

● Good reading for eating: Books abound on dieting, vegetarian cooking and dining for better health. Why not give a book offering sound advice for lifetime eating, like Jane Brody's "Good Food Book: Living the High Carbohydrate Way" (W.W. Norton; $19.95). It discusses the roles fats, proteins, sugar and salt play in the American diet and offers suggestions on how to limit them. Exercise and weight control are emphasized and the second half is a cookbook with 386 recipes based on complex carbohydrates and high in fiber and nutrient vegetables, adequate in protein but low in fat.

● Video vitality: Fitness and videos merged when Jane Fonda released her first exercise tape, and the blitz hasn't stopped since. Give a new exercise regimen to a friend via videotapes like Exercise Shorts (Karl-Lorimar Home Video; $9.95) that help athletes warm up for their specific sport — tennis, swimming, jogging, cycling or skiing. Or help a stressed friend relax with The Relaxed Body Video (Karl-Lorimar; $19.95) which teaches breathing techniques and whole-body relaxers.

● Mood music: Why not give a gift of relaxation with music that reflects the moods and colors of nature? The Nature Company offers several, like "Natural States" by Paul Speer and David Lanz, spacious, environmental music evoking the boldness of landscapes of the Pacific Northwest, or "Cicada" by Chaitanya Deuter, relaxing compositions for wind instruments, strings and synthesizers. Write The Nature Company, P.O. Box 2310, Berkeley, CA 94702.

No matter what you choose, your gift can help loved ones live a happier, healthier life and even enjoy doing it.

Electronic yule

Camcorders, stereos, toys for every stocking

SANTA'S ELVES must be taking some electronic engineering classes during their off-season because high-tech gifts are among the most wanted and received at Christmas time.

If you're dreaming of an electronic Christmas this year, drop plenty of hints about the lastest in audio-visual equipment, appliances and high-tech toys. And, you'll easily find a new innovation or update in electronics for those on your gift list.

One of the hottest gifts for the 1986 holiday season is the camcorder, a combination video camera, recorder and usually playback device, according to Jim O'Toole, electronics buyer for Spiegel. Especially popular are the compact VHS models, which offer maneuverability.

The compact camcorder is one of dozens of electronics that have done some shrinking during the year. Portable TVs, like the Sony Watchman, are the latest rage. The Sports Watchman, for instance, offers FM stereo with a two-inch black and white TV, LCD quartz alarm, plus stereo headphones so you can listen privately. A flip-out stand offers hands-free viewing.

THE PICTURES ON today's tiny TVs have greatly improved. "Technology is such that the picture is getting much better than some of the earlier versions," O'Toole said.

Manufacturers have updated portable cassette stereos with solar power, recording capabilities (you can play one cassette and record on another at the same time) and improved sound.

Another sound option is the portable compact disc player. Weighing in at about two pounds, these players are ideal for use as a portable or an integrated component of an existing home music system. GE's compact disc player and AM/FM Dolby stereo cassette offers an equalizer and detachable speakers.

If somone on your gift list is intimidated by all the knobs and buttons on a conventional VCR, consider one with on-screen display, like RCA's stereo VCR that takes you through programming step-by-step.

You can even choose an electronic gift for someone by just knowing their favorite color. Telephones, clock radios, portable stereos, televisions, cameras and typewriters now come in a rainbow of colors.

IF YOU'RE INTERESTED in kitchen tech, some of the latest portable microwaves would delight working couples and college students alike. The Sharp Half Pint is roomy enough for a 10-inch dinner plate, making it ideal for short snacks or full-course meals.

You can even go high tech with a toaster. Vivalp's electronic toaster has a removable heating element that combines a unique reflection system for even toasting plus electronic timing.

For toy tech, check out Grubby the octopede. He's the newest friend of Teddy Ruxpin, Worlds of Wonder's talking bear that was a hit last Christmas. The two can be interlinked to sing songs and tell stories in sync with each other.

The hottest new game in the toy stores may be that prehistorical classic "Cowboys and Indians" with a high tech twist. Lazar Tag by Worlds of Wonder and Photon Laser Blast by LJN Toys use pistols that fire concentrated beams of (safe) infrared light up to 100 feet. Belts and helmets worn by players have LED sensors that register a hit with scoring lights and an audible beep.

If someone on your gift list is intimidated by all the knobs and buttons on a conventional VCR, consider one with one-screen display that takes you through programming step-by-step.

If you're aiming for something smaller, maybe a bit less expensive, a couple of blank VCR tapes, audio cassettes or computer diskettes would delight any "techie" on Christmas morning.

Relax — here's the ingredients for ENTERTAINING is much more than gathering together a number of people. Informality is the key to a successful brunch for the '80s host and hostess.

Today's party-givers should spend the week before a party planning all the necessary odds and ends.

The day before the party should be spent on shopping for the best quality ingredients; the morning of the party should be spent preparing the bounty; the afternoon of the party should be spent in a relaxing venue emotionally preparing for the soiree ahead; and at the party, emphasis should be spent to see that guests are at ease with each other and most importantly, having a great time yourself.

NEEDLESS TO SAY, when your guests see you having fun, it carries over and with the proper amount of personality blending, the party should be an enjoyable experience for all.

One of the secrets here is never to disappear into the kitchen for more than five minutes at a time.

As any experienced party-giver will tell you, when planning a party menu, simplicity is the key. Menus should seldom be elaborate. Leave the culinary experimentations for the elaborate sit-down dinner parties. Really, wouldn't you rather be known for doing simple things very well than for creating overwhelming banquets that leave the spirit and cash flow strung out for days?

ANOTHER "TRADE secret" that should be followed when throwing parties for more than 10 include the need for mobility. Start out with drinks and hors d'oeuvres in one room with everything laid out on bureaus or dressers covered in colorful sheets tied at the corners with silver lame ribbons and bows.

Wide hallways and entryways make suitable locations for strategic placement of snack tables covered with greens and ladened with punchbowls, cold appetizers, dips and crudities. Utilize holiday colored helium-filled balloons tied with ribbons to handles of punch ladles, serving pieces and serving tray handles.

TRY, WHEREVER possible to use large dining-type tables, not just as a location for food but also as a stage for showing off your talents in creative holiday decorating.

When planning the soiree, remember to use what feels comfortable and what you have on hand. Use whimsical toys to help send a relaxing feeling throughout. Toy trains make impressive and unique holders for napkins, silverware and crudites.

Large dolls and stuffed animals can be positioned and wired to hold small platters, paper plates, hot/cold cups and various munchies.

Most of all, don't be embarassed to use every bit of kitchen space you can muster including stovetops with wired trivets to act as utalitarian food warmers. Opened toaster ovens and microwave ovens make extraordinary food servers and they make emergency hide-alls for soiled dishes and serving pieces.

DOUBLE SINKS CAN be used for keeping jug wines and liquers chilled and remember, keep the ice for the guests but use fresh fallen snow as a no-cost chilling alternative.

Large flower vases make novel serving pieces for jug wines and chilled party punches. Insert extra long colored straws and float fresh flower blooms instead of the mediocre and over-used-fruit slices.

Save small cottage cheese containers and freeze halfway full with water. Place a fresh flower bloom, cover with

King of the board

Are you game for the latest trivial pursuits?

ONCE THE packages are unraveled and the stockings unstuffed on Christmas morning, many Americans settle down to do some serious game playing.

Ever since the early 1800s when mass-market board games first became available in the United States, games have been stalwart entries on gift lists for all ages. In fact, best-selling games have served as mini-barometers of the preoccupations, interests and dreams of their times.

In 1843, children were hinting for the latest board game for Christmas — "The Mansion of Happiness' — where they navigated the shoals of sin while trying to lead an upright life. This Victorian theme of morality reappeared in the popular "Reward of Virtue" (1850) and "The Checkered Game of Life" (1860).

When the Morgans and Vanderbilts rose to power in the first decade of the 1900s, gamesters emulated their business success with "Wall Street." As the gleeful title, "I'm a Millionaire," suggests, Americans grew increasingly interested in money-making. And in the 1930s, they learned the pain of losing their real-world money in the Great Depression, while "Monopoly" fulfilled fantasies of going from rags to riches.

"GO TO THE HEAD of the Class," 1940s, reflected the American concern for public school education. With the 1950s and the advent of television, games based on popular shows had a heyday, like the question-and-answer "Howdy Doody Game."

As society takes a closer look at what's wrong, right and in-between, it makes sense that one of this year's most popular games is "A Question of Scruples." This adult game, from Milton Bradley, is full of questions about modern moral predicaments, some provactive, some humorous and all intriguing.

Playing "Scruples" can be surprisingly revealing, as contestants predict how opponents will respond to real-world dilemmas like this one: You buy a scarf from a discount store as a gift for a friend who is label conscious. You have an empty box from a trendy store. Do you repackage the scarf in the box and give it to your friend? And when the players are challenged for bluffing, amusing conversation is sure to ensue.

POPULAR BOARD games are often the inspiration for spin-offs. Americans buried themselves in trivia a few years ago with the hit game "Trivial Pursuit," This year, they'll be able to use that knowledge when they play "Incognito," where players act out suggested charades and interpretation, then answer questions about the correct answer.

Another variation on the trivia craze is "Out of Context: A Game of Outrageous Quotes," with a total of 500 quotes from well-known politicians, entertainers, athletes and other celebrities, plus 900 "bluff" quotes. The object is to match the proper quote with the proper person. The bluff quotes are those said by other people, or the ones the inventor, Brian Hersch, made up himself.

Still, some popular board games are takeoffs on popular TV programs, like "Dr. Ruth's Game of Good Sex" by Victory.

OTHERS HAVE gone video. Milton Bradley now offers its popular "Candyland" and "Chutes and Ladders" with an entertaining VCR tape, which brings the game characters to life for the preschoolers who play. And Parker Brothers' "Clue" is now available in video version.

What makes a board game of Christmas Past become a classic for Christmas Future? A game that finds its way under the tree year after year usually has broad-based appeal, can be played by a variety of age ranges, encourages social interaction and challenges skill while introducing an element of chance.

But most of all, a perennial favorite provides a good time for one and all.

THE PERFECT CHRISTMAS GIFT!

Toying around with gift ideas

By Louise Okrutsky
special writer

IF STORYTELLING teddy bears, cute/ugly dolls and yet another trivia game don't put you and yours in a playful mood, then it's time to get back to the basics of fun.

After several winters of lining up in the cold for the hot new toys, traditional play things are making their reappearance. Whether you belong to the apres ski set or the children's concert crowd, this winter is shaping up as a time to go back to simple, mostly battery-free pleasures.

You'll have plenty of company, too. "People are turning back to more traditional toys," confirms Donna Hansen, a department manager for the Doll Hospital, Berkley. "Last year, we had Teddy Ruxpin and the year before that, there were the Cabbage Patch Kids, of course. But I haven't heard of any fads this year myself."

This year, Teddy Ruxpin's joined on the shelves by his best buddy, Grubby. An eight-legged creature with arms and antennae, Grubby speaks only when he's hooked up with Teddy. Together, when activated by a cassette, the duo tell stories. Their tales include "The Day Teddy Met Grubby" and "Grubby's Romance."

Grubby's creators, TM Worlds of Wonder Inc. have even presumed to put words into the mouth of one of the nursery set's most established story tellers, Mother Goose. Add four C batteries to the old rhymster herself and Mother Goose will play her cassette of such perennials as "Goldilocks and the Three Bears" and "The Ugly Duckling".

BUT JUST WHEN it seems the world was made to run on rechargeable batteries, slightly simpler pleasures surface. Teddy bears, plain, old-fashioned, non-talking teddies remain to warm the heart and hearth.

For collectors there's Audrey Hepburn, dressed to the hilt to attend the races at Ascot. Stief, the venerable German toy firm, has issued limited edition replicas of the mama and baby bears it marketed in 1906. There are sweater bears, bridal bears and Heart to Heart bears. Hug the latter and you can hear it thumping its little heart out, providing you've installed the required nine-volt battery.

Crowley's department store even has introduced a line of its own bears, the Cub Club, a collection of four furry companions.

It's a bull market for bears but dolls aren't exactly languishing on the shelves. The long lines may have receded for Cabbage Patch Dolls but their manufacturer, Coleco has managed to find a few new twists. Cabbage Patchers now come suited up for outer space and the Detroit Tigers. They have hands that can hold objects and hair that can be combed.

Children's PJs now bear the resemblance of the bears in their lives. Boys 2-pice PJs are $34; one-piece infants are $28. The bears are included. At Loretta Lorion in Bloomfield Plaza.

Getting back to the basics of fun

And for young fans there's even a Cabbage Patch magazine in which various columns are attributed to dolls dressed in foreign correspondent trench coats. Of course, the editors are dolls outfitted in old-fashioned visors and sleeve garters.

While Coleco backs up its flagging Cabbage Patch market with Rambo dolls, the GI Joe of the 1980s, other firms continue to appeal to adults who never quite got over dolls.

About 80 percent of the dolls sold at the Doll Factory are packaged for adult collectors, according to Hansen. Madame Alexander eight inch high storybook dolls and portrait dolls of the likes of Judy Garland are aimed at buyers who don't intend to romp in the Cabbage Patch. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dolls dressed for the dancers' roles in "The Barkleys of Broadway" evoke memories for late show buffs.

BABY BOOMERS turned couch potatoes can wax nostalgic over dolls representing the Honeymooners' Ed Norton and Ralph Kramden. Kramden's dressed in his blue 1950's bus driver uniform while Norton wears the familiar vest and baggy pants that are the ultimate in sewer chic.

For more intellectual pursuits, there are hand-carved wooden chess boards and pieces available at Thunderbird Toys, West Bloomfield. Looking as exotic and oriental as medieval illustrations to Russian fairy tales, the playing pieces for Thunderbird's chess sets from the Soviet Union feature czars and czarinas as the kings and queens. The rooks are elegant onion domes. The hand painted board folds into a carrying case. Priced between $175-$200, the sets are definitely intended for display as well as play.

Although Whimsey and chess strategy generally seem incompatible, they blend nicely in a set with a nautical theme. The king on this red and blue chess board is a ship's captain in a sturdy pea jacket. The queen is a mermaid whose design was inspired more by 19th century ship figureheads than by Darryl Hanna. Prancing across the playing board are knights in the guise of sea horses. Gilbert and Sullivan style deckhands serve as pawns.

A generation's refusal to totally grow up and abandon playthings has spurred William Sotell, of Westland into a second career as a toy maker. He specializes in wooden toys that appeal more to adults than youngsters. Included in his collection, called Bill's Wooden Wonders, is a biwing airplane carved from black walnut. Based on a Shopsmith pattern by former pilot Norman Marshall, the plane boasts a 13 inch wing span and sits four to five inches high off of its display disc.

SOTELL'S SEVEN-foot-long train is headed by a steam engine hooked up to a passenger car, flat car, coal car and a red caboose. The caboose's red or yellow tint is a deviation from Sotell's usual style.

"Most of the toys are finished in polyurethane to let the woodgrain show," he said. His 18-wheeler with a car hauler attached to it measures 30 inches long, six inches wide and nine inches high.

Evidently it was evocative enough of the real thing to prompt Detroit Diesel to buy one, according to Sotell. The car carries six antique-style autos. The cab sports a CB antennae, sideview mirror, mudflaps, wraparound fenders and an air horn, all fashioned from wood.

"They're made with all glue, no nails," boasts Sotell. His larger pieces are priced in the $85-$150 range.

"A couple bought the train to put under the Christmas tree. They said it wasn't for their grandchildren, 'it's for us. After we're gone, the grandchildren can have it,' " said the toymaker.

While adults may like the way wooden toys look, the metal ones made by Tonka for 40 years are still around to fuel youngsters' dreams of the open road. The firm, which includes Pound Puppies and Pound Purries as well as GoBots among its hot sellers, still hypes its brightly colored metal trucks as one of the "national symbols of childhood."

"If any one particular truck comes to mind when you say Tonka — it's the bright yellow Mighty Tonka Dump Truck," said the firm's public relations spokeswoman, Roberta Karlin. "A symbol of childhood as recognizable as a baseball mitt and rag doll."

THIS WINTER, beside betting on its truck fleet, Tonka is sending its Newborn Pound Puppies, the Cabbage Patch premies of stuffed animals, into the holiday toy wars. If, however, the thought of buying a stuffed dog with adoption papers makes you turn your eyes upward to the heavens, there are some more sober toys around.

All of it seems to show that today's adults aren't about to leave some good toys in the hands of mere children.

Yet another old standby resurrected for grown ups, the telescope seems to be maintaining some popularity in the aftermath of the Halley's Comet commotion earlier this year.

However, these telescopes aren't solely aimed at junior high astronomy buffs. Priced from $39 up to $2000, they're appealing to adults who've progressed beyond recognizing the Big and Little Dippers. For $2,000 at the Doll Hospital, for instance, serious star gazers can obtain a telescope to which a camera can be attached.

Scarfs, belts add snap to holidays

The Echo Design Group, America's most famous scarf and belt manufacturer, has unveiled a holiday accessories collection that brings drama to the simplest fashions and solutions to the toughest gift problems.

Holiday parties call for glimmering sheen of precious metals. First, the silk lame bias tie from the Echo Design Group's Signature Collection. Second, the added sparkle of the metallic belt embossed in an intricate lizard pattern. The tie is $35 and the belt, $15.

Top designers on both sides of the Atlantic presented fall/winter collections highlighting body-conscious shapes, clean lines and minimal detailing. These understated fashions are precisely right for Echo scarfs and belts. Echo accessories are also glamourous gifts for fashion-conscious women on any Christmas list.

Echo offers exciting options to holiday dressing. Elegance can be added to the simplest dress with an oversized shawl finished with a fluid fringe. A sparse neckline can be beautifully accented with an embroidered lace collar from the Club 7 collection; a smart suit can be nipped-in with an Italian leather belt. For holiday glitter, the Echo collections include scarfs and belts in shimmering silver and gold finishes.

BOLD GRAPHICS from around the world have been encompassed in Echo scarfs. Elegant chains and precious gems have gone from the jewel box into lustrous satin scarfs. Jungle fever runs wild in print scarfs featuring animal and safari motifs. Belts have been created to carry out the call of the wild including baby leopard prints stenciled on genuine cowhide.

Echo Design Group is available at Crowley's Alvin's, Jacobson's, J.L. Hudson's and Gantos stores.

Lingerie great undercover gifts

THERE'S LIABLE to be a bigger flurry of romantic gift hunters in lingerie than ever this Christmas, as petticoats whirl in to give traditional half slips a fluffy, lighthearted lift.

Frill seekers will find petticoats full-skirted and ruffly, and a perfect complement to princess lines, A-lines and the long, flowing skirts making waves in fashion this year.

At Christian Dior Lingerie, where petticoats are natural descendants of Dior's ballerina silhouette of the late 1940s and early 1950s, designer Carole Hochman is delighted with the return of crisp crinolines and full half slips.

"WHAT COULD BE more feminine and provocative than a tiny waist and slim bodice that accents the bust and hipline?" she said. "The fullness of the petticoat emphasizes that line, but in the gentlest possible manner. It's ladylike and teasing, all at the same time."

Petticoat-perfect looks run the design spectrum this year. French couturier Christian Lacroix, who designs for Patou, showed full evening skirts rustling with petticoats beneath, and virtually every major designer in America showed fuller skirts that call for fuller slips, from Geoffrey Beene with his extravagant satin bell skirts to Ralph Lauren's classic English gentry skirts with long, flowing lines.

Feathery, see-through laces look fresh in the new petticoats. They're taking their place alongside the warm, oatmealy muslins of the safari looks that continue strong this year in such collections as Outback Red and Liz Claiborne.

Unlike the laces, which are a secret pleasure, the muslins are meant to be seen as often as possible, peeking from under skirt hems, seen the full length of a loosened button-front skirt or on their own as a separate skirt.

There is in fact a long history of petticoats designed to be seen. Petticoats became well-established in the Elizabethan period, when the length, width and volume of skirts required petticoats for support.

FOR THE MAJORITY of women, the slips were simple and hidden, but for women of wealth, petticoats were sewn more grandly, with rich fabrics and ornamental treatments made for show.

In the 17th century, skirts were deeply slit or looped up to show petticoats of luxurious silks and taffetas. And when hoops came along in the 18th century, women developed a flirtatious technique of tilting the hoop to allow a small peek of lacy petticoats beneath.

In this century, nothing yet has quite equaled the impact of Dior's petticoated New Look of 1947, following the straight short skirts and severe looks of the war years.

An editor from Vogue described the palpable excitement of the showing: "We were witness to a revolution in fashion. Pleats whirled, silks rustled, petticoats peeped and the audience became ecstatic."

It's great to have the petticoats back again, but feminine lingerie is a perennial favorite for Christmas gift-giving. A nationwide survey of women showed lingerie is the second most popular gift a woman hopes to receive from her husband or boyfriend, according to Allied Fibers.

SENSUOUS LINGERIE is more than underwear. Romantic nightgowns are the most purchased or received pieces of lingerie in women's wardrobes.

However, feminine undies — such as teddies, camisoles and tap pants —

Warm, oatmealy muslins of the safari are very much in vogue this season. Unlike feathery see-through laces, they're meant to be seen as often as possible, peeking from under skirt hems, or at loosened button-front tops.

are also enjoying a resurgence as more and more women choose to wear these "special occasion" items everyday.

Like petticoats multipurpose garments with romantic flair, like pants sets and jumpsuits that double as sleep or loungewear, are also popular this year for gift-giving. In fact, more than 80 percent of the women in the survey felt that feminine lingerie in all forms is an asset to the entire wardrobe and art of the lifestyle of the well-dressed woman.

Truly hifalutin'

Stuck for a truly unique gift? Try scrumptious Snooty cookies (at $6.99) or Snooty Popcorn ($10) available at Merchant of Vino in Southfield. Both use white chocolate laced with macadamia nuts.

Go for the 'gold'

The gold certificate will be the new gift of choice for smart holiday shoppers this year, according to retailing executives at some of metropolitan Detroit's biggest shopping centers.

The gold certificate is the most widely-accepted gift certificate ever issued. It buys merchandise and services in every one of over 800 businessess in four of the area's largest shopping centers: Briarwood in Ann Arbor, Fairlane Town Center in Dearborn, Lakeside in Sterling Heights, and Twelve Oaks in Novi.

"Unlike most gift certificates, which are good for a single store or for one center, the gold certificate offers an unlimited choice of merchandise and services in four shopping centers," explained Larry Hunt, regional director for the Taubman Co., which manages the four retail centers. "That includes all of the department stores, the movies, restaurants, pet shops, beauty shops — even the dental offices."

Gold certificates in any denomination can be purchased at the information desks at all four centers.

Spoil the cook with new gadgets, cookbooks, videos

COOKING AND Christmas — what a perfect combination. It's important to remember the good cooks we know at Christmastime. They feed us well and add to our holiday pleasure.

There are many wonderful gifts of cooking utensils, recipe books, videos and speciality items that will brighten the kitchen of any cook preparing for the holidays or even every-day cooking.

Williams-Sonoma has a good pan for baking cookies. Of double construction, the Cushion-Aire cookie sheet has an air space between the top and bottom to prevent over-browning.

There's also a cookie gun that makes it child's play to produce heart and flower shapes. Another way to carve dough into amusing shapes is with a rolling cooking cutter, which runs across the cookie dough and creates a kind of Egyptian frieze of 10 shapes, including Santa's boots.

A GLASS BUNDT pan for kugelhopf, a holiday cake, is also available.

Many retailers carry glass cake stands and platters. A standout comes from Romania, trimmed with a touch of blue that freshens the whole presentation. Platters that match the cake stand can hold cookies.

Add to a cook's glassware by selecting bottles and jars for canned fruits and vegetables, jams, jellies and chutneys. Given empty or full, these jars would make any homemade product look wonderful.

Affix a homemade label for a personal touch. Williams-Sonoma has a good selection of faceted vinegar jars and squat jelly glasses.

Unusual dishes to serve regional specialties would be a nice gift for some good cooks. Pack along the necessary spices, and the gift becomes even more unusual.

Try buying brownware for the Tex-Mex cook and then fill a big platter with wreaths of chiles. Or, buy blue earthenware from Provence and provide the cook with the wonderful fresh herbs of southern France.

FOR THE COOK and hostess, there is no better gift than a cookbook or video that can increase the range of imagination for the coming year. This season, nothing seems more appropriate than Julia Child on video. Her six one-hour video cassettes allow you to watch her demonstrate her recipes at your own pace in your own kitchen.

Another suitable video is Richard Sax's "Secrets of Great Dinner Parties: Entertaining Without Anxiety." The well-known chef and food consultant demonstrates a wide variety of basic culinary techniques to create elegant dinner parties.

Books on cooking and entertaining look better than ever this gift giving season. "Tiffany Taste," a hardcover volume by John Loring (Doubleday), doesn't offer a single recipe. Shown instead are place settings and how to create atmosphere for entertaining and private dining. Such famous designers as Else Peretti give how-to-tips.

THE BASIC "HOW to Cook" by Raymond Sokolov (Marrow) would be the ideal book for college students or singles just starting out. It leads the reader from coffee and orange juice right on through the day. Suggestions are offered that can wean the novice away from fast food and into the kitchen.

For the truly outrageous, the book of the season may well be Billi Gordon's "You've Had Worse Things in Your Mouth" (West Graphics). It's a spoof on all the down-home cookbooks and regional cuisines we've seen in the past few years. It comes complete with campy photos of the author dressed as such noted personalities as Aunt Jemima.

John Hadamuscin's "The Holiday's" focuses on the Christmas season. It offers party-givers more than 200 easy-to-follow recipes that are elegant or casual. He begins at Thanksgiving and takes us up to the Twelfth Night, helping all the way with timetables, table-setting tips and beverage suggestions. He recognizes that organization is the key and moves the reader along to success.

With all of these good food ideas and marvelous ways to serve, you can look forward to the year ahead. After all, there are loads of recipes just waiting to be tried.
