Auditors laud PC Schools' finances

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Despite state aid cuts, voters' defeat of the Headlee Amendment waiver and other revenue losses, Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are in good fiscal shape, according to auditors.

Lyle Algate, Plante & Moran CPA, pegged the district's total assets at $11.2 million, liabilities at $6.9 million and total fund equity at $4.3 million.

Algate gave high marks to administrators, with just a few suggestions as to how more internal financial control could be obtained.

"The staff is constantly looking for ways to enhance the district. It's more innovative than the average district," said Algate.

THE DISTRICT has refinanced old bonds, resulting in reduced overall rates. It also has explored self-insurance and investment alternatives to increase return on investments, Algate said.

"You have a lot of dollars to keep track of but, percentage-wise, you don't spend as much as smaller districts on your finance office," Algate told school board members Monday night. "You have an outstanding staff in terms of the capabilities you have internally and in terms of creative refinancing."

Revenues totaled $51.7 million, and expenditures $51.2 million, leaving an excess of about $468,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1987.

The district's fund balance went from $3.8 million in July 1986 to $4.3 million in June 1987.

Budgeted and actual expenditures and revenues "were about as close as you can get," said Algate.

The district budgeted $51.3 million in total revenues, and realized $51.7 million. It spent $225,398 more than the $51 million budgeted for total expenditures.

Plymouth-Canton schools received $40.6 million in property tax and other locally-generated revenues, about $10,000 less than the amount anticipated.

State aid totaled $10.9 million, about $300,000 more than expected.

Federal revenue during the 1986-87 school year, budgeted at $12,000, slumped to $6,821.

The district spent $10.2 million on elementary instruction, $59,241 more than budgeted. Middle school instruction costs totaled $6.6 million, about $15,000 more than expected. High school instructional programs cost $24.4 million, $180,324 more than budgeted.

Special education costs totaled $2.5 million, $230,985 more than anticipated.

Community education costs, budgeted at $27.4 million, totaled $389,000 more than anticipated.

The district's total bonded debt stands at $29.5 million.

Revenues totaled $51.7 million, and expenditures $51.2 million, leaving an excess of about $468,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1987.

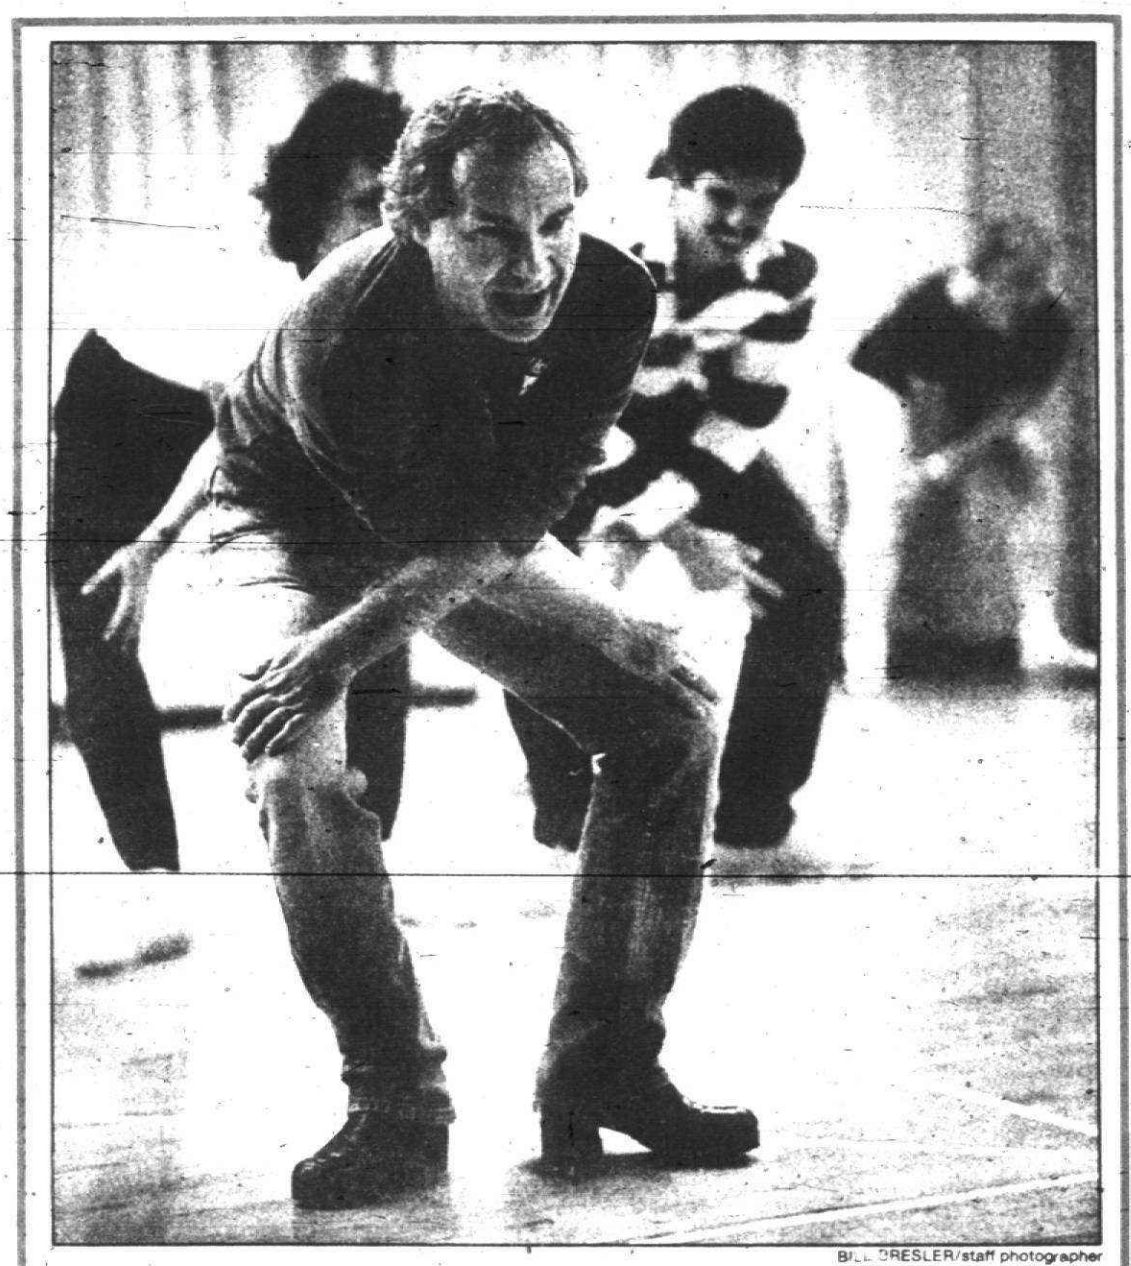

DIANNE GAUDINO, Plante & Moran audit supervisor, said 73 percent of the district's general fund revenues were generated from local property tax — down 2 percent from 1986.

Instructional expenditures, primarily teacher salaries and benefits, accounted for 52 percent of the district's 1987 expenditures, up 1 percent over 1986.

Per-pupil revenue in 1987 totaled $3,357. Spent per pupil was $3,328. Per-pupil revenues were up from $3,165 in 1986.

Student enrollment in 1987 was 15,933 in Plymouth-Canton schools, compared with an average of 10,575 students in Wayne County districts. State equalized valuation per pupil was $66,274 compared to a county average of $48,780 per pupil.

The board unanimously approved the report.

Paul Lubera brings energy, follies to Canton

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Like most little boys, Paul Lubera dreamed of joining the circus.

So flying from a single trapeze before thousands of wide-eyed spectators was a fantasy come true.

Now Lubera, 50, rips away everyday doldrums from teachers, housewives and people of all walks of lives across the U.S. He throws them into the adrenalin pumping, highstepping, flashy life of show biz — even if it is only for a short stint in a community production.

Traveling to an average of nine communities annually, Lubera grants suppressed thespians their childhood dreams.

For the next couple of weeks, he will shine the glitz of Plymouth and Canton "stars" preparing for the Plymouth Community Arts Council's "Oct O' Follies."

THE OCT. 9-10 SHOWS are patterned after a Las Vegas nightclub act, said Lubera, who comes to Plymouth from Jerome H. Cargill Productions in New York.

"I've been working with Cargill for 10 years, and I've never had a bad show. If it works in Vegas it will work anywhere."

Lubera raised his eyebrows and curled the corners of his mouth when asked about his first impression of Plymouth.

"It's clean," he said slapping his knee and leaning forward as if revealing a secret.

"It's the first city that I've been to that didn't have an empty storefront" to stage the production, he added laughing.

"This town is beautiful, beautiful. Everytime I come into a town, I love it. The people put on a good show, and it's just going to be a lot of fun."

As director, Lubera has to carefully massage the personalities and talents of his actors all of whom have varied levels of experience. He insists it's easier to direct a cast with less time under the spotlights than pampered stars who need dramatic explanations for "motivation."

"I hate the word amateur," Lubera said. "They're unpaid professionals, and I talk to them as unpaid professionals. I like people to have fun, they should be having fun, but there are serious parts of the show, too."

'I hate the word amateur. They're unpaid professionals, and I talk to them as unpaid professionals. I like people to have fun, they should be having fun, but there are serious parts of the show, too.'

— Paul Lubera

HE COMES TO the job with an impressive mix of credits all rooted in a 5-year-old boy's burning desire to entertain.

When Lubera was 12, he decided he wanted to be in the circus. "I was told I had to go to dance school to learn acrobatics."

County delays Warren resurfacing until 1988

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If you've bent wheel rims hitting potholes on Warren and then soothed your ire believing that paving was imminent, Alan Richardson has bad news for you.

Richardson, who oversees road paving for Wayne County, says that although Warren between Beck and Canton Center was on the 1987 list, it won't be surfaced until 1988.

Tom Casari, township engineer, predicted "a lot of people will be up in arms" about the delay. "The work isn't getting done. It's critical that it get paved."

"We fell behind in turning out the project and in getting it through county approvals for contracting. And it took longer to get the job designed than we anticipated," said Richardson.

THE COUNTY contracts for road grading and drainage work. County crews do the paving.

Projects that can't be completed by October usually are suspended until spring.

"We're getting into the time of year where weather is an independent force we have to contend with," said Richardson.

Sheldon Center — a new road connecting Sheldon and Canton Center south of Joy and north of Warren — is higher on the county's priority list.

"Our contractor is still on site. When the contractor leaves then the county road department will bring in their own forces.

"I don't see any reason why we can't complete the project in October," said Richardson, deputy director of engineering for the county's office of public services.

School land fate studied

Barter option considered for 10-acre parcel

By Susan Buck
staff writer

Two study committees are considering the fate of a 10-acre parcel of land in Canton that is being eyed by Wayne-Westland Community Schools as a possible elementary school site.

Canton bought the parcel at the northwest intersection of Palmer and Sheldon roads from the state for $100 about three years ago, according to Canton treasurer Gerald Brown. It was originally awarded to the state because back taxes were not paid.

Brown was unable to give the current dollar value of the land. Canton has considered building recreational facilities, such as a soccer field, on the parcel, he said.

Brown said he has a problem selling the land.

"Wayne-Westland is a relatively small part of our community. Maybe the schools would take it if they could do something for us, like recreational fields, which could fulfill one of our needs."

DENNIS O'NEILL, Wayne-Westland Schools superintendent, remains hopeful.

"We're working out a deal on just the land," he said Tuesday. "It's just the beginning."

He cited three reasons Wayne-Westland school officials are interested. They are:

- A potential future overload of Wayne-Westland students at Walker Elementary, Michigan east of I-275, in Canton. "This would depend on how much expansion there is and how many young families move in there."
- The safety of Walker Elementary students after Michigan Ave. is expanded to eight lanes. Road construction is under way.
- Development of the I-275 corridor, which may make it profitable to sell the property and possibly close Walker Elementary. If that ever happens, students could then be transferred to the school. Wayne-Westland officials may build on the Palmer-Sheldon parcel, he said.

O'Neill hastened to add that this third option is only a consideration.

BEFORE ANY new school construction could take place, Wayne-

Sears attempts new marketing approach with specialty store

By Susan Buck
staff writer

A Sears store specializing in paint, hardware and related products, opening here soon, represents a new marketing approach by the company.

Sears will open two paint-hardware outlets in western Wayne County — one in Canton, the other in Redford.

The Canton Township store is on Ford Road just east of Lilley; the Redford Township store is on Joy at Beech Daly.

"Surveys show that people will drive three or four miles to go to their closest hardware store but they don't want to go into a major mall," said Dick Bellan, product supervisor.

In addition, the stores also will offer a catalog order and pickup service for smaller items that do not require a loading dock.

"Sears is trying to get its presence back in the neighborhoods," said Dennis Kurzyniec, manager of the Canton store. "We found that people miss that. We did away with a lot of the catalog stores. It's a new concept for this area."

A year ago, Sears opened the first of its metropolitan area hardware stores downriver in Riverview. Stores in Lathrup Village and Detroit (Eight Mile-Dresden) followed. Stores also are planned for Warren, Sterling Heights and Royal Oak.

Grand opening at the Canton store, originally planned for Oct. 10 has been postponed, according to Kurzyniec. "Merchandise isn't coming in as it's supposed to. It's the first time we tried to do two openings at once."

Grand opening is scheduled at the Redford store on Thursday, Oct. 8.

Store hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Parents part of new Glenn smoking ban

By Philip A. Sherman
staff writer

Student smoking at John Glenn High School has been substantially curbed under a new policy.

The new policy requiring students to file parental permission slips in the office before lighting up cigarettes outside is "really going very well and is cutting down on the number of smokers," said principal James Myers.

He said the policy is new this fall.

Canton residents living in the Wayne-Westland Community Schools attend Stevenson Junior High and John Glenn High School after leaving the elementary level.

If students want to smoke on school property, they must first file the consent forms, attend a two-day health seminar emphasizing the dangers of smoking, and buy a $2 identification tag allowing them to use the outdoor smoking area.

"It's the area behind the main building — all open air," Myers said.

"A lot of the time if it's raining or cold out, then they won't go out. I guess they decide they don't need a cigarette that bad."

ONLY 50 to 70 permits have been issued so far out of the 2,100 student population, or about 3 percent, Myers said.

At least two student smokers, Patty Cicotte and Paul Glass, both 17, think the policy is a good idea.

Cicotte has been smoking since she was 14.

"It relaxes me when I'm nervous or upset." She said both parents and "a lot" of her friends smoke, and added her parents "think it's pretty much my decision."

Although she once quit for a month, Cicotte has started smoking again. "The policy's pretty good though. It's better than closing it down."

Glass agreed the smoking policy is better than not allowing students to smoke. He's been smoking for four years, and said his mother and friends also are smokers.

HIS MOTHER thinks he's "old enough to make his own decisions" regarding smoking, Glass said.

Like Cicotte, Glass quit smoking once — for two days. He added he's still trying to quit.

"Socially, if it's easy to do, they'll do it," Myers said.

"Now they don't have to because they can say it's not their decision — it's the parents."

Group studies school land fate

Westland voters might have to pass a bond issue, he said.

"We have no immediate plans to close Walker," said O'Neill. "Down the road, the value of the property itself will increase. We're planning ahead, rather than reacting after the fact. We can't be caught short-handed or there won't be any vacant property out there."

O'Neill said that it is likely the school district would ask Canton for a land donation. "They got it for a nominal price."

Township board members passed a resolution Sept. 8 recommending that trustee Stephen Larson, Mike Quinn, superintendent of parks and recreation, and Dave Nicholson, director of community development, be appointed to a Canton study committee that will meet with Wayne-Westland officials by Oct. 8.

In turn, O'Neill said that he formed a Wayne-Westland study committee of his own, comprised of himself, school board president Sharon Scott and Thomas Svitkovich, associate superintendent for communications and finance, to further study the issue.

clarification

A story in Monday's Observer should have said Canton trustees approved 6-0 a resolution requesting township administrators to review and make a recommendation on a garbage rate increase. The increase, resulting from a rate hike announced recently by the township's landfill, is likely to be approved when the board meets Tuesday, said Jake Dingeldey, DPW superintendent.

and east of I-275 ... is expected to be paved sometime in 1988."

The county has been awaiting word from Canton as to whether that portion of Warren should be paved with concrete or asphalt. Supervisor James Poole favors concrete for the roadway, which is in an area zoned industrial.

But at last week's board meeting, Casari received a consensus from township trustees who say asphalt will suffice for now.

Lubera productions are a folly good time

The Cleveland native worked in community theater when he was 16, and he trained for Broadway doing the same show six days weekly.

"When I was 18, I said to my mother 'Farewell, I'm off to the circus.' I still love going to the circus."

From 1962 through 1981 he worked in various circus groups. For some of the 10 years Lubera has been with Cargill, he simultaneously performed in the circus.

He also worked for about a year as an acrobat in the chorus line at the Tropicana nightclub in Las Vegas.

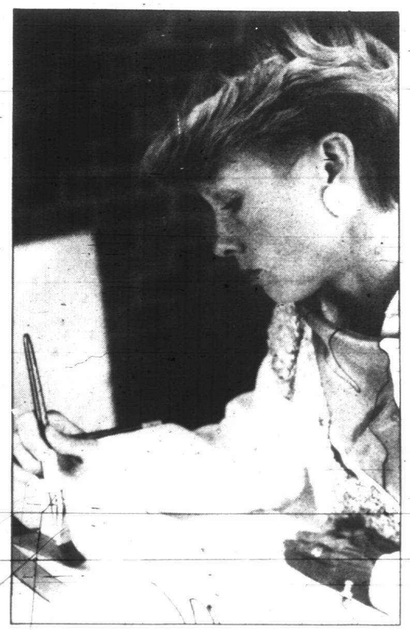

Lubera draws from each of these experiences when he directs productions.

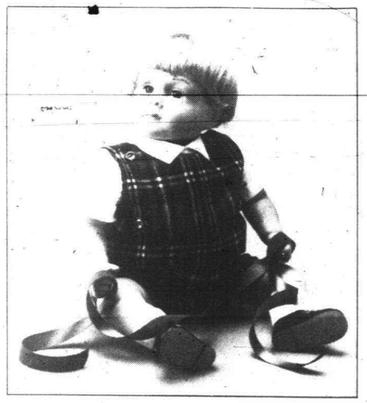

"When I was doing theater they never said this is work, they said this is a lot of fun. So my work has always been a lot of fun."

Sales tax hike

Local legislators balk at tax increase to finance education

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Local Republican politicians say they cannot support a report by House Republicans in Lansing that calls for an increase in the state sales tax to finance public education.

They say, and western Wayne County school officials agree, that the proposal, which would cut property taxes and raise the state income tax from 4 to 6 percent, doesn't have much of a chance of becoming law.

"I'm not going to bet my life savings on any proposal that has a sales-tax increase," said Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia. "The people of Michigan don't want any new taxes. We know that."

"I'm not very enthusiastic about it," said Sen. Robert Geake, a Republican whose district includes Redford, Livonia, Plymouth and Canton. "It's another tax-base sharing program and would hurt those districts with high SEVs (state equalized valuation)."

"I really don't believe this proposal will get off the ground," said Geake. "High-SEV districts are not willing to give up their property tax base, and school districts are not willing to go to state funding, which means state control. ... I don't expect major modifications in tax funding this year. I doubt if the Democrats are even taking it seriously."

ONE OF those Democrats is Rep. John Bennett of Redford. "I know those fellows on the task force and I have a lot of respect for them, but I don't think it's viable. No. 1, it says they're going to increase the sales tax from 4 to 6 percent, and the last time that was voted on it got 27 percent positive and the rest negative.

"The other problem I have is if this tax proposal passes, the taxpayers of Michigan will suffer a loss of $350 million a year (in federal income tax deductions)."

Property taxes are federally deductible; sales taxes are not.

Bennett said that even if he had no disagreements with the proposal, he said it would fail in a statewide referendum because "I don't think the taxpayers out there trust the Legislature."

'I'm not very enthusiastic about it. It's another tax-base sharing program and would hurt those districts with high SEVs (state equalized valuation).'
— Robert Geake, state senator

SCHOOL ADMINISTRATORS were divided in their opinion of a shift from property taxes to sales taxes, but agreed that such a proposal would be defeated in the required statewide vote.

Said Kenneth Erickson, superintendent of the Redford Union schools: "We are a property-poor district. Of the 565 districts in the state, we rank 505th in per-pupil wealth. So, anything that reduces the reliance on property taxes we feel is good for Redford Union. It's a step toward equalizing funding. The property tax system is stable but it produces gross inequities."

Erickson said he doubted voters would pass a sale-tax hike. And he said a drawback with a system funded by sales taxes was that it wasn't stable. "In hard times, people don't buy as much and revenues go down."

John Hoben of the Plymouth-Canton schools is opposed to a sales-tax system. "I have strong feelings that the sales tax is an unfair tax. The property tax is the best vehicle for equity. I agree that property taxes are getting up there, but with a sales tax, a person who makes $4,000 pays the same as a person who makes $100,000.

"I think something has to be done. They have to come up with a plan with an equitable distribution of funds, but I don't know how they're going to do it. They have to bring the have-nots up to the haves."

Anything that would improve funding, we'd have to take a long look at," said Dr. Dennis O'Neill, superintendent of the Wayne-Westland schools. "All the emphasis lately seems to be on switching from a property tax to a sales tax. But with the new federal laws, there's no longer a tax deduction for sales taxes."

And another thing. In all the proposals I've seen, none of them have addressed the cost of doing business. The cost of doing business in southeastern Michigan is much higher than up north."

James Carli, superintendent of the Livonia schools, said it has been hard getting specifics on the various reform proposals that have come out of Lansing. "All educators have been waiting with baited breath to see the meat on the bones," he said. "I describe them as being in the concept stage.

"They're floating trial balloons to get a reaction to them and then changing the direction of the balloon."

Jan Jacobs, superintendent of South Redford schools, said any proposal to raise the sales tax was sure to fail in a vote. "That's my gut reaction. It's not just conjecture. It's been put to the people a number of times. ... It's just not viable."

Hoben had a proposal of his own for saving cash that could be diverted to schools: "I think we should go to a part-time Legislature. For example, in Texas the Legislature meets for 90 months every two years and they get by. I think you can save a heck of a lot of money that way. Of course it will never happen."

GOP says plan will close school funding gap

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

A task force of House Republicans in Lansing has recommended cutting property taxes and raising the state income tax from 4 to 6 percent to finance public schools.

The task force said Michigan taxpayers would receive a property tax break of $1.77 billion under the plan, and that it would close the gap between rich and poor school districts.

The plan would lower local school millage rates from a statewide average of 32 mills to a guaranteed level of 16 mills. Local districts could raise the 16-mill rate by a maximum of 4 mills or levy a 0.5 percent income tax to raise extra revenue for the schools, subject to voter approval.

Fifty of the richest school districts, such as Bloomfield Hills, Grosse Pointe, Birmingham and Southfield, would be allowed to tax at a higher rate. No western Wayne County schools were included in that list of 50.

"We think we have a plan to sell to both the rich and the poor," said Rep. Paul Wartner, R-Portage and co-chair of the House GOP task force that prepared the proposal.

THE IDEA TO SHIFT the individual tax burden from property taxes to sales taxes is not a new one. At least two lawmakers have already released similar plans and a 40-member state Board of Education commission is working on its own proposal, which parallels the GOP plan in many ways.

The proposal's effect would vary widely across the state, cutting millage rates by more than half in some areas and only by a fifth in others.

According to Wartner, local millage cuts would be: in Garden City from 30.5 currently to 19.1; in Livonia from 35.2 to 17.5; in Plymouth Canton from 36 to 16; in Redford Union from 37 to 18; in South Redford from 33.1 to 18.5, and in Wayne-Westland from 40.7 to 19.3. No figures were available for Clarenceville.

'We all want property tax relief, but at what expense?'
— state Rep. Lyn Bankes

School districts with less than $2,750 to spend on each student would receive $300 more per student each year until they reached the base level, which would be tied to growth in the Gross National Product.

The plan also would establish the state Account for Education trust fund, or SAFE, to protect and administer the increased school revenues provided when the sales tax increases to 6 percent.

Since 1972, Michigan voters have rejected seven different proposals promising some form of school finance reform, and local school administrators and legislators say voters will reject any plan calling for an increase in the sales tax (see related story).

The Republicans promoting the new plan said their polling data indicated the time is right for another proposal.

State treasurer Robert Bowman called the GOP plan a "shift-shaft," ignoring the fact that replacing property taxes with a higher sales tax would force Michigan taxpayers to pay $350 million more in federal income taxes because of lost deductions.

It results in a federal income tax increase on Michigan citizens," Bowman said.

Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, said "I don't like to be on the same side of any issue as Bob Bowman, but on this one I am. The people of Michigan don't want any new taxes.

"The bottom line is: How does it affect Livonia? We all want property tax relief, but at what expense?"

To become law, the task force's recommendation would have to be assigned to a House committee, then come out of committee, be passed in both the house and senate, then pass a statewide referendum on a constitutional amendment.

Banks said the plan had no chance of passage as it stands. "Nineteen eighty-eight is a house election year. I am never politically motivated, but some of my colleagues are," she said with a laugh.

It's you're campaigning for a sales-tax increase, and those opposed are campaigning against it as a shift-shaft, who's going to win?"

WARTNER SAID political realities made it necessary to grant exemptions on tax limits in some districts. "It's a realistic task force," he said. "They were grandfathered in to get viable reform. We had to satisfy various interest groups in crafting the package."

No way, could we take a district spending $6,000 a pupil, and tell them that overnight you can only spend $3,000. ... You'd be destroying these systems, and that's not our intent."

Teacher contract wins union, board approval

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

Nearly everyone went home pleased.

The six-month task of reaching a new contract was officially put to bed Monday night, when the Wayne-Westland school board voted unanimously to ratify the tentative pact between the district and teachers' union.

Earlier in the day, teachers approved the agreement by an overwhelming majority.

Wayne-Westland Community Schools services a portion of Canton Township.

About 95 percent, or 879, of the more than 900 teachers voted in favor of the three-year pact, according to William Reece, president of the Wayne-Westland Education Association. Forty-one teachers voted against the contract and one abstained from voting, Reece said.

A handful of adult education teachers had yet to vote on the agreement as of Monday night, but no significant changes were expected in the outcome, said Bill Taylor, associate superintendent for employee services and district operations.

REECE SAID the teachers ratification vote went "about the way I expected it."

"We're very pleased with the result," Reece said before the board's regular meeting. "I think everyone is glad that we got it without having to strike."

Wayne-Westland School District
The district serves southeast Canton.

The tentative agreement was reached Sept. 7, three hours after the midnight strike deadline. Had the teachers hit the picket lines, it would have marked the first time a strike was called after school was already in session.

School board members were unanimous in praising the way contract negotiations were handled on both sides of the table.

"I don't think the board has ever had as much information as we had this time," said Mathew McCusker.

He cited constant updates from the administration and also a number of board study sessions in which members received detailed briefings on the ongoing talks.

"We all became winners when the kids were allowed to remain in school," said Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek.

Board member Kathleen Chorbagian singled out the job done by Reece and said the union head "acted as a complete professional."

THE NEW contract calls for pay raises of 6 percent annually for the next three years for teachers.

By 1990, teachers with bachelor's degrees who are at the top of the pay scale will earn an annual salary of $38,840 and teachers with master's degrees will earn a top salary of $45,755.

Most teachers in the Wayne-Westland district are at the top of the scale.

The contract also features an improved fringe benefits package, including a more flexible health insurance package and increased life insurance.

Other provisions will be a slight reduction in classroom pupil-teacher ratios and the addition of eight new jobs in the district — four elementary crisis intervention counselors and four reading/math consultants at the junior high level.

In a separate action Monday, board members unanimously approved a 6 percent salary increase for 1987-88 to 539 non-union employees. Those workers include substitute teachers and other full and part-time employees.

CEP band finishes 2nd

The Centennial Educational Park Marching Band finished second place overall at the 10th annual Clarkston Invitational Marching Band Competition Saturday evening.

Some 19 Michigan high school marching bands performed before a capacity-plus audience Sept. 16 on the Clarkston High School football field.

The CEP band also was awarded trophies for best color guard and for best music.

Kris Seipel, color guard instructor, describes the guard's performance as a jazz-ballet routine that enhances the band's visual presentation of the George Gershwin music.

Featured dancers are color guard captain Allison Lamb, Shelle Bertell and Danielle Mirto. The guard includes 26 young women.

Seipel is a 1983 Plymouth Salem High graduate who was a member of the CEP Color Guard for three years. She currently is a senior majoring in business at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

The band's next competition will be at the Flushing High School Invitational at Atwood Stadium in Flint on Sunday, Oct. 4.

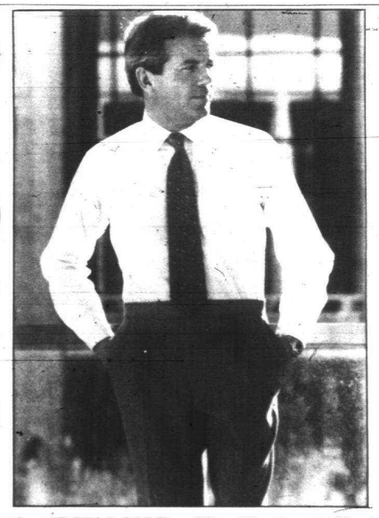

The band will travel to Terre Haute, Ind., for a Marching Bands of America Regional Invitational. The Durand Invitational will take place on Oct. 17, followed by the Michigan Competing Band Directors Association State Show at the CEP Athletic Field on Saturday, Oct. 24.

Photos also win awards

The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers has taken top honors for best lifestyle section, best special section, best presentation of a special holiday and sports photojournalism in The Michigan Press Association and Suburban Newspapers of America contests.

The O&E received a second-place award in the SNA contest for a nursing home section in April written by Stuart Gale, reporter for the Canton and Plymouth Observer Newspapers. The section examined the social, economic and legal aspects of nursing home care in the '80s. The section was photographed by Steve Fecht and designed by David Frank, graphics editor.

Fecht also took first place in the sports photo category of the MPA competition.

Richard Lech, editor, and Larry O'Connor, reporter, took first place for best lifestyle section in the MPA's 1987 Better Newspaper Contest. More than 860 weekly newspapers submitted 1,765 entries for the statewide competition.

Lech and O'Connor produce the suburban life sections in Livonia, Redford, Westland and Garden City. The section appears on Thursday.

O'Connor also took second place for best presentation of a special holiday in the SNA competition. The SNA competition is open to suburban newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. His award-winning entry focused on the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. It detailed the people who participated in the civil rights movement in the 1960s.

Henry Ford II: A giant leaves his legacy

By Rebecca Haynes and Wayne Peal
staff writers

Friends and associates recall the late Henry Ford II as an automotive giant who left an indelible mark on metropolitan Detroit and its residents.

In western Wayne County, that influence is evidenced by the numerous factories and warehouses bearing the family name as well as the University of Michigan-Dearborn, created through his donation of land.

Ford, 70, died at 7:21 a.m., Tuesday, in Henry Ford Hospital after a battle with pneumonia.

Flags flew at half-staff outside company buildings.

"This is a very sad day for us," Livonia Transmission plant employee Lois McAllister said, speaking on behalf of her fellow workers. "Right by my desk there's a photograph of myself with Mr. Ford and I'll cherish it always."

Ford was no stranger to the company's facilities, company spokesman Robert Taub said.

"He took a great interest in plant operations and he'd often visit them," Taub said.

FORD'S LAST Livonia visit was May 3, 1983, according to transmission plant records.

One of Ford's last public appearances came during a June fund-raising event on the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus. Ford helped in the creation of the university in 1957 by donating 200 acres of family-owned land, as well as Fair Lane, the estate of his grandfather, Henry Ford I.

"Our campus, our buildings, our students and alumni and Fair Lane are all tangible reminders of his presence among us," UM-D Chancellor William Jenkins said.

A figure who looms large in postwar automotive history, Ford is given credit for reviving the flagging fortunes of the company his grandfather founded.

"He was responsible for the rebuilding of Ford Motor Co. from a disastrous position," said Ben Bidwell, Chrysler Corp. vice chairman, a 27-year Ford employee. "He had the foresight to realize that in order to be successful there were changes that needed to be made."

Ford succeeded his father, Edsel, as company president in 1945. During his tenure as chairman, company sales rose from $894.5 million to $43.5 billion. He retired as chairman in 1980, ending a 40-year career that began with a mechanic's job in the company's Dearborn plant.

Fellow automakers praised Ford's contributions to the industry.

"For almost four decades Mr. Ford was Ford Motor Co.," Donald Petersen, chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer at Ford Motor Co. said. "He was born to lead."

Lee Iacocca, Chysler Corp. chairman, who was fired from Ford in a celebrated run-in with Henry Ford II; recalled the days when the pair worked together.

"HENRY FORD and I were friends and colleagues for a lot longer than we were adversaries, and my sympathy goes to his family and friends," Iacocca said.

Roger Smith, General Motors chairman and a Bloomfield Hills resident, called Ford an industry legend.

"His leadership and candor won him the respect of leaders the world over as well as employees on the plant floor," Smith said. "He was a brilliant businessman."

Among friends, Ford's image as a two-fisted, hard-bitten industrialist was belied by warmth and an active sense of humor.

"He was a wonderful person and lots of fun to be with," said Lucia Zurkowski of Birmingham, a family friend for more than 10 years.

"He never came off like you'd think a Henry Ford II would," said Bonnie Silva of Birmingham, another close family friend. "He never acted like he felt better than anyone else or that he was was impressed with his name and title."

Another friend, Mort Lieberman of Bloomfield Hills, recalled Ford's sporting side.

"Henry loved to play backgammon and it always bothered him that he could never beat his wife," Lieberman said. "I remember once when we were on a boat trip we played and I won $40. I didn't think anything of it but after we'd been home for a couple of days I got a check in the mail for $40.40.

"So I called Henry and I asked him what in the world the check was for," Lieberman said. "He told me it was the money I'd won and since it'd taken him a few days to pay up the 40 cents was the 1 percent interest."

Lieberman never cashed the check and chuckled at the memory of Ford sending it.

"He was a true friend," he said.

A PRIVATE funeral for family members will be held this week. A memorial service for friends and relatives will be held in Detroit in about two weeks.

The Fords lived in Palm Beach, Fla., but kept a home in Grosse Pointe Farms.

Ford is survived by his wife, Kathleen; son, Edsel B. Ford II; daughters, Charlotte Ford Downe and Anne Ford Scarborough; brother, William Clay Ford; sister, Josephine C. Ford; and six grandchildren.

Another brother, Benson, died in 1978.

Ford's children are from his previous marriage to Anne McDowell Ford. The 24-year marriage ended in divorce in 1964. He was also married to the former Maria Christina Vettore Austin Ford from 1965-80.

His death came 37 years to the day after the passing of his grandmother, Clara Ford, according to family records.

Aside from his business duties, Ford also was active in civic affairs, including serving as chairman of the board of trustees of the Henry Ford Health Corp. He helped to organize Detroit Renaissance, a plan to implement the commercial and civic revitalization of Detroit, and launched the development of the Renaissance Center.

Henry was a warm, wonderful, compassionate human being and truly a friend," said Mary Jean Lieberman. "It's hard right now to express how we feel, but that really comes from the heart.

Harden report: Schools of choice, state standards

Here are excerpts from the so-called "Harden Commission" report on state educational standards. The 43-member Michigan School Finance Commission on Sept. 22 completed its report to the State Board of Education entitled "Educational Quality in the 21st Century."

Choice and competition

"... Parents and student should have the opportunity to select a school that they believe will best serve their needs.

"Adopting a 'schools of choice' approach to school assignment would necessitate individual school units developing and conducting programs that were distinctive enough in nature to draw students for enrollment. (It) would create competition between schools ...

"Wherever feasible, school districts should be encouraged to permit parents to choose a public school within the district, at the appropriate grade level, to which they will send their children.

"WITH SOME exceptions, Michigan school districts generally require children to attend a particular neighborhood school ... By giving parents the right of choice, there is potential for unleashing much of the creative potential of our schools.

"First, schools can specialize to meet the special interests and needs of particular groups of pupils.

"Second, pupils and parents can exercise an effective tool to improve the administration of a school — the threat to take their business elsewhere. This forces each school to compete effectively in order to survive and flourish.

"MORE THAN a decade ago, the East Harlem Community School District No. 4 of New York began experimenting with choice among its schools, which have gradually become more specialized both in educational philosophy and in content.

"Pupil interest and pupil performance — once at dismal levels — have both dramatically improved as the system has developed.

"The establishment of statewide standards will prevent schools from competing for pupils by offering law educational programming. Further checks are needed to prevent schools of choice from being vehicles for additional segregation along economic or social lines.

"THE STATE should offer incentives for implementing standards and 'schools of choice' programs.

"Dollars follow pupils ... A school in which enrollments are growing must be given the resources to continue to do the job. A school with declining enrollments must not be allowed to maintain its share of a district's budget."

State standards

"Historically each school district has had little accountability for its curriculum or educational results.

"The commission recommends that the Legislature and the State Board of Education:

● "Define a 'core curriculum' for the K-12 system. (It) would indicate what courses must be required of every pupil and what additional elective courses must be available to every pupil.

● "Establish performance standards for the schools. (These would include) the level of learning acomplishment at several key grade levels (as measured by test scores) and the level of retention of pupils in the system ...

● "Have ultimate power to declare educational bankruptcy in a district that persistently fails to meet standards, creating a receivership for either the district or for particular schools or programs within it.

"The proper role of the state will be to set parameters inside which experimentation can take place. The state should not dictate rigid standards."

Revenue for education

"The commission recommends that the Legislature enact an 'Educational Trust Fund' (of) approximately $200 million (to improve) the quality of K-12 education.

"The commission was emphatic that new dollars be spent on specific programs and not be put into a general formula increase."

Local district responsibilities

"1. (I)mplement the state core requirements. Achieve acceptable educational results in the following areas and provide evidence of implementation in kindergarten through 12th grade."

(Commission footnote: The Department of Education believes that more than 50 percent of the school districts do not meet the standards of quality needed in course content, student achievemenet and/or instruction.")

The commission listed these "core" areas:
Communication skills
Science
Social studies
Health, phys ed.
Career, vocational Arts, humanities

"2. (E)valuate the district instructional program as defined by the core requirements. This evaluation must include:"
Test scores
Employability measures
Attendance, graduation rates
Graduation follow-up
Instructional implementation

Editor's note: The Harden Commission recommendations on property tax reductions and a sales tax increase were published Sept. 24 on page 5A.

War of propaganda criss-crossed oceans

Hélen Gilbert

A rainy mist settled on the ancient forests of Pennsylvania as Washington and his battered troops prepared to march out of what was left of Fort Necessity. It is the morning of July 4, 1754.

Striding through the blood-stained muck of the destroyed fort we can see the tall, resolute figure of the 22-year-old Colonel Washington directing the preparations for the evacuation of his troops.

It had rained for nine days and the encampment was laden with heavy mud, except for a few high places near a drainage ditch.

WASHINGTON DIVIDED the stores into three separate categories: one to be carried home, one pile of goods to be destroyed and one pile to be left under guard.

After looking to the supplies for the living he turned to the task of burying the dead. There were 13 gone from his Virginia Regiment, and the Caroline Company lost 18.

The fire burned into the night and the blaze was like a beacon to hundreds of Indians who had fled the battle. They came back demanding the right to ransack and pillage . . . some became very unruly.

There were 70 wounded and of these about six were too far gone to be carried back. They were left with the guards by the cache of keepsakes that the guards would try to protect. There was no other alternative. (The graves of the English dead never have been found.)

Forunately the commandant of the French troops, a man from Michigan named Coulon de Villiers, was a gentleman of good instincts, basically compassionate, and showed a civilized respect for his fallen foe.

This compassion may have been tempered by a real concern for the French hostages that the British had taken when Coulon's brother, Jumonville, was killed. The brothers were sons of the longtime commandant of Fort St. Joseph, Michigan. They and many of their troops came from Fort Ponchartrain d'Etroit.

Coulon must have been aware that he had tricked Washington into signing a treaty in which Washington admitted that he had "murdered" Jumonville. De Villiers may have intended to use this alleged "confession" as propaganda for the French cause in Montreal, d'Etroit, Quebec and Paris.

No such admission was made by Washington, but the French translation of the treaty was badly bungled by Van Braam. A few weeks later the "confession" made headlines in the Paris press.

Many important people including Voltaire, who had been a supporter of the British-American cause, no longer embraced the Anglo-Americans. In losing Voltaire they lost one of the greatest propagandists of that time.

The media of Paris had a field day calling Washington a "fiend," a "scoundrel," and a "murderer." These lies were spread in England and eventually found their way back to America. Some of Washington's friends deserted him and Governor Dinwiddie was dimissed a few years later. Such is the power of gossip in an unsophisticated society among ignorant people when the evidence is clouded and is not examined in an intelligent, perceptive way.

Nobody knows the truth of all these matters. It would require many pages of purely speculative interpretation to even begin to explore this story. In as much as it is not really a part of Tonquish Tales, we will refrain from drawing any conclusion from the sketchy evidence.

LET US RETURN to the fallen fort where we find Washington talking with Captain Robert Stobo and Captain Van Braam, the French translator.

At Stobo's request Washington sent a Delaware Indian, who had been standing around the camp, two miles to a cave where Aliquippa, the queen of the Delawares, was hiding. Long known to be loyal and devoted to the English, she was asked to provide message runners for Captain Stobo.

Stobo and Van Braam had been chosen by Washington to go to Fort Duquesne as hostages. There is evidence that Stobo volunteered for the assignment. Five years later the Virginia House of Burgesses passed a "resolve," which said, in part, of Captain Stobo, "That the sum of one thousands pounds be paid . . . over and above the pay that is due him from the time of his rendering himself as a hostage." This was a lot of money in these days and an official admission of his value as a double agent. Van Bräam was chosen because he spoke French and, like Stobo, was unmarried and had no family responsibilities at home.

While all these arrangements were being made and goods carted to the various piles, another Indian came out of the woods alone and moved directly toward the group. They were quite startled by this unusual move, and Washington stepped back, hand on his sword, evidently uncertain of the Indian's intention.

Stobo said, "Wait, I know him. He's a friend," or words to that effect. The Indian was a longtime friend of Washington's Indian friend, Half King. (For the story of Half King and his adventurous trip with Washington, read Tonquish Tales, Vol. 2.)

Probably Half King had sent this young brave to act as a guide or aide to his old friend. The young man was a Mohawk named "Moses-the-Song." He was a brother-in-law of Monacatoothis, another loyal Indian friend, and was the adopted brother of Pennsylvania's noted Indian trader and guide, Conrad Weiser.

Half King could not have found a better man to carry messages for Stobo. Later Moses infiltrated the French Fort de Duquesne and carried detailed plans of the fort to the British. But we are getting ahead of our story.

LET US RETURN to the Great Meadows where some important negotiations are taking place.

After the English had buried their dead, and preparations had been made for carrying out the wounded, Captain Villiers appeared at the stockade. He ordered all wagons to be broken and burned, all cannon to be destroyed except one. He had the palisade posts collected and set on fire.

The fire burned into the night and the blaze was like a beacon to hundreds of Indians who had fled the battle. They came back demanding the right to ransack and pillage. Villiers refused them and some became very unruly.

Washington complained that this little conduct was a breach of good faith, and Commander Villiers promised to remove the Indians, by force if necessary. Hundreds of warriors kept coming into the camp, and the situation became most hazardous. It was evident that the French had little control over their own Indians.

Of this episode Washington said, "Sundry of them came up, and spoke to us, and told us they were our brothers, and asked us how we did."

Robert Alberts, in his excellent biography of Stobo ("The Most Extraordinary Adventures of Major Robert Stobo," Houghton Mifflin, Boston 1965), writes of this period, "The French commander promised to remove his Indians from the scene as rapidly as possible and ran among them with his sword drawn but with little more effect than a fly swatter in a swarm of locusts."

Probably Stobo's last act as a company officer was to name two reliable men — Richard Morris and Edward Graves — to stay with nine others to care for the wounded and guard the cached supplies.

Then, according to Robert Alberts, he unbuckled his sword and presented it, together with the command of his company, to Lt. William Pou. According to Stobo's men (Clements Library, University of Michigan) upon this occasion, Stobo said, "It is ours, I do not need it, beg you not to spare it when opportunity offers to draw it in behalf your country."

(The story of Major Robert Stobo will be continued in the next edition of Tonquish Tales.)

The media of Paris had a field day calling Washington a "fiend," a "scoundrel," and a "murderer." These lies were spread in England and eventually found their way back to America. Some of Washington's friends deserted him . . . Such is the power of gossip in an unsophisticated society among ignorant people when the evidence is clouded and is not examined in an intelligent, perceptive way.

A story in Monday's Observer incorrectly reported there are no permits for sewers in this area. Plymouth Township had five sewer permits approved by Wayne County and pending before the Department of Natural Resources. Two of those five have been approved by the DNR, Rick Lorenz of RTL Inc. states that his condominium project is not being delayed by lack of a sewer permit.

Anti-takeover bill advances

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A House committee reported out two bills designed to inhibit corporate takeovers after satisfying objections from state Treasurer Robert Bowman.

"We've got to stop the Wall Street raiders from stealing our money and our jobs," said Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford, who chairs the House Corporations and Finance Committee.

The bills are "tie-barred," meaning that both must pass for either to take effect.

THE BILLS are:

● HB 4907. Bennett's original measure allowing stockholders of a Michigan corporation to limit the voting power of a raider's "control" shares in the election of directors. Investors who acquire 20 percent of a company would have to declare whether they are seeking control. The corporation also could redeem control shares at market value.

● HB 4936 — an amendment to the executive powers act allowing the state treasurer, as fiduciary for pension funds, to solicit proxies from shareholders.

The bills were reported out with no opposition, the chairman said.

"This will do a great deal of prevent senseless takeovers," Bowman told the panel.

IN A TELEPHONE interview after his panel's meeting last week, Bennett said the Michigan Manufacturers Association and the governor's office also back the bill.

He said the revised bill satisfied Bowman's desire for state companies' protection against "greenmail" — the practice in which "an entrenched management pays off a raider to get 'em out of their hair," in Bowman's words.

Management would be prohibited from buying back one stockholder's shares unless the offer were extended to all stockholders.

A raider "offering to buy stock would have to make the offer to buy all shares."

THERE HAS been a flurry of such state laws around the country.

Bennett said his bill, which is expected to be taken up by the full House soon this fall, is modeled after Indiana's, which survived a court test.

Minnesota passed such laws to halt the Dart Group from taking over Dayton Hudson Corp., the large retailer.

Wisconsin passed laws designed to halt an Australian firm from buying control of Heileman Brewing Co. The two companies are currently negotiating a friendly takeover.

BENNETT'S BILL defines Michigan corporations as publicly held firms with at least 100 shareholders, with more than 10 percent of shareholders being Michigan residents, or with 10,000 shareholders being Michigan residents, and whose principal place of business or substantial assets are in Michigan.

Between one dozen and three dozen companies would be protected, Bennett said, citing the utilities and Federal-Mogul, K mart, Gerber Products and Primark.

Bennett said the bill was prompted by an attempt to take over an unidentified company with 230 jobs in his district.

County hopes its air show will soar

Like a bride, the 1987 Willow Run Air Show features something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue.

What's old is the air show concept itself. Its directors hope to bring back the days when thousands of Wayne County residents jammed local airports to watch leather-helmeted fly boys put single-propeller aircraft through their paces.

What's new is the emphasis county officials are placing on this year's show: the first in two years.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara has said he would like to see the show become an annual charity event. A portion of this year's proceeds will go to the Easter Seal Society of Wayne County and Children's Hospital of Michigan.

What's borrowed is Willow Run Airport. The county-owned airport will be reserved Oct. 3-4 for the show.

What's blue is the event's chief attraction, the Blue Angels. This is the first time we've had anything like this," airshow spokesman Jan Shaffer said.

The U.S. Navy Precision Flight Team heads a list of attractions that also includes wing walker Lori Lynn Hoss, a former Southfield resident.

Other attractions include the Northeoast Aerial Circus skydiving team, stunt pilot Eliot Cross and the Red Hawk Aerobatic Team. The Yankee Air Force Museum, a collection of vintage aircraft maintained at the airport will also be open.

The show will run from approximately 1-4 p.m. both days. The Blue Angels are scheduled to appear at 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Tickets are $9 for adults $7 for children. Advance tickets, $7 for adults, $5 for children are available through Ticketmaster outlets. Gates open 10 a.m. both days. There is a $2 parking charge.

Additional information is available by calling 482-8888. Willow Run Airport is at I-94 Belleville Road, Ypsilanti.

Hospital sale safe–county

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

The sale of Peoples Community Hospital Authority's hospitals may prompt health care changes in western Wayne, county officials said, but it wouldn't prevent the PCHA from buying Westland Medical Center.
The PCHA, which operates five hospitals in western Wayne and Ypsilanti, is one of three hospital groups committed to buying Westland Medical Center, the former Wayne County General Hospital.
A recent study recommended the PCHA sell its member hospitals, essentially going out of business to eliminate debt. The PCHA lost $6.1 million in the past fiscal year, according to a University of Michigan study released Sept. 17.
PCHA board members and county officials said any such sale wouldn't affect the PCHA's commitment to buy Westland Medical Center.
Sale of the PCHA would have no effect at all, deputy county executive Michael Duggan said. Whoever bought those hospitals would be bound to the agreement on Westland Medical Center.
Westland Medical Center's sale is considered a fund-raiser for debt-plagued Wayne County. It is also seen as a way to extract the county from its indigent health care commitment, a major cause of a $60 million health care debt with the state.
Wayne County is the only Michigan County required by the state to provide indigent health care.
The county expects to receive $7.5 million from selling the Merriman Road facility to the PCHA, Garden City Osteopathic Hospital and Oakwood Hospital, Dearborn. The money could be used to pay back part of the county's $60 million health care debt to the state, county officials said. Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said earlier this month the money could also be used to build mandated new jail space.
County commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, a member of the PCHA governing board, agreed that the sale of authority members wouldn't affect the medical center agreement.
"As far as that is concerned, I don't think it would have any effect," said Mack, whose county commission district includes Canton Township. There was no mention of the recommendation's effect on the purchase of Westland Medical Center in the U-M study, Mack added. "That kind of surprised me," he said.
Sale of member hospitals, however, would dramatically affect health care services in western Wayne County, Mack said.
"You have to believe there would be changes," he said. "First of all, the PCHA provides about 3,500 jobs. While the Legislature is doing everything it can to secure that many jobs with the Mazda plant in Flat Rock, it hasn't landed in the PCHA."
The authority is lobbying state legislators for the right to convert from a public to private agency. The Legislature commissioned the U-M study.
PCHA board members have opposed selling any hospitals.
"What we're looking to do is join with a teaching facility," Mack said. "The U-M study indicated that, [illegible] couldn't be achieved, but we believe it could."
The PCHA board also seeks to reorganize the authority into a private, non-profit corporation to better compete with other hospitals and HMOs.
"Because we're a public agency, there's things we can't do financially, that we could if we were private," he said.
The PCHA includes Annapolis Hospital, Wayne; Heritage Hospital, Taylor; Outer Drive Hospital, Lincoln Park; Seaway Hospital, Trenton and Beyer Memorial Hospital, Ypsilanti.
The public agency levies a 0.2-mill tax on homeowners in member communities, including Westland and Garden City.
What intrigued me about the study was that it indicated the PCHA should continue to levy the millage even if the hospitals were sold," Mack said. "But I can't think of an elected official in western Wayne who would go for that. That's taxation without representation."

Area stores bilked in lottery ticket scam

By Sue Mason
staff writer

Lottery agents in the metropolitan area are being urged to tighten up procedures on instant lottery ticket payoffs after altered tickets turned up in Livonia, Garden City, Redford Township and Detroit in recent weeks.

The state lottery bureau alerted local police departments of the problem Sept. 23 after the altered tickets began showing up in those four communities.

"There's always going to be people trying to alter tickets," a lottery bureau spokesman said. "This isn't a huge problem, but it's a serious problem."

Three people have been arrested for cashing in the altered tickets in Livonia and Garden City, but the problem appears to be spreading.

"I just heard some turned up in Oak Park today (Tuesday)," said Detective Lt. William Sandman of the Garden City Police. "There's some kind of ring working in the area and they've real good. You have to look real close and they're even to the point of matching the red and gray colors on the tickets."

The alterations involve peeling the dollar amounts off a losing ticket and placing it over an amount on another ticket to make it a winner.

Most of the tickets that have turned up have been $50 winners, but Sandman said the lottery bureau has notified dealers that the alterations may now involve $2, $25 and $10 winning tickets.

Dealers are suppose to verify the winning tickets through their number codes, but the bogus ducats apparently have been cashed in when clerks are busy or used to buy a few items, Sandman said.

ATEMPTING TO redeem a forged or altered lottery ticket, no matter what the amount, is a felony punishable by up to five years in prison and or a $1,000 fine.

Two 7-Eleven stores in Garden City have cashed in altered tickets. One of the stores, at Ford Road and Merriman, has lost an estimated $200.

A 40-year-old Detroit man will stand trial in Wayne County Circuit Court on charges he passed a bogus $50 winner at the other 7-Eleven store at Warren and Middlebelt Sept. 20.

According to Sandman, the store manager caught on after an altered ticket turned up that morning. A second altered $50 ticket along with several losing tickets were also found, Sandman said.

Two other Detroit residents in their late 20s also have been bound over for trial after cashing in a bogus ticket at a 7-Eleven store in Livonia Sept. 11, said Police Sgt. Donald VanderSloot.

VanderSloot said about $1,000 worth of altered tickets have been turned in to police, but the amount of money being lost by lottery agents in Livonia may be a lot more.

"They've been hitting party stores and 7-Elevens, but it's hard to say how many. A lot of owners have decided to eat the loss rather than turn it over to us," he said.

THE 7-ELEVEN store on Schoolcraft in Redford also has has cashed more than $200 worth of bogus tickets, while another south Redford party store has lost about $100, Lt. Eric Plater said.

The altered tickets began showing up in that community a few days before the lottery bureau's alert, he said.

Redford's crime prevention bureau has been working with lottery agents on how to spot the bogus tickets and Plater said the culprits will be "apprehended without much of a problem."

"If the agents checked the codes on the tickets there would be no way they should get stuck with them," Plater said. "They have to educate their employees about checking them."

Redford Hospital overpass built over controversy

By Philip A. Sherman
staff writer

One hundred Redford residents signed a petition this summer to halt construction of an overpass connecting the east and west buildings of Redford Community Hospital.

However, their petition was filed late — 14 years late — and the overpass, now being built, should be ready for use next month.

The controversy started in 1973 when the hospital filed suit against Redford Township, former township supervisor Bill Robbins and John Madden, former public services director, for refusing to grant the hospital a building permit for the overpass.

At the time, Redford thought it had authority over rights of way in the township. The overpass was to be built over Garfield, the street separating the hospital buildings.

But the ordinance Redford used to decide its authority over the roadway was found to be invalid.

In fact, court findings indicated Wayne County has jurisdiction over township road rights of way.

The hospital then received the necessary permits from Wayne County.

"BUT THEN they (the hospital) had money problems and probably put it on the back burner," said Leo Snage, current public services director. "They need it (the overpass) to offer other services."

Robert Laible, the hospital's president and chief executive officer, said the overpass is needed to transport patients back and forth between the two buildings.

"We only have one elevator servicing the west building but we have three in the east building," Laible said.

"If they want to sink that kind of money into the bridge, why not just build more elevators instead?" said Christy Coe, a Garfield resident who signed the petition to keep the overpass from being built.

Coe said area residents signed the petition "because it's going to be a hassle getting in and out. Also, the hospital didn't inform us about it, and we're going to have trouble getting work crews to work on our yards."

"Mostly, I was just incensed that nobody at the hospital asked us," Coe added.

However, Laible said he met in June with Mary Hickey, president of the North Redford Community Organization, and several area residents.

"WE DISCUSSED the whole thing with them. We have no hidden agendas."

When asked about a neighborhood rumor that the hospital was building an AIDS clinic and would use the overpass to separate AIDS patients from the rest of the hospital population, Laible burst out laughing.

"That's not at all why we're doing this," he said.

IS CATHOLIC TEACHING ON SEX EDUCATION AND CHASTITY BEING IGNORED AT OUR LADY OF GOOD COUNSEL SCHOOL?

Paid Advertisement

Loyal Catholics are saddened at what has been happening at OUR LADY OF GOOD COUNSEL in regards to sex education and parental rights. The first thru eighth grade books the "NEW CREATION" by William C. Brown Co., is a very controversial sex education series which has met nationwide criticism and has been implemented over the protest of parents.

ARCHBISHOP PHILIP M. HANNAN, of New Orleans, stated "I agree with you that 'NEW CREATION' is very crude and offensive as a means of informing youth of facts of life. I also agree I cannot believe that a bishop gave this material an imprimatur."[1]

CARDINAL EDOUARD GAGNON, President of the Pontificial Council for the family in Rome, stated "Unfortunately, I am well acquainted with the 'NEW CREATION' series, published by the W.C. Brown Co. of Dubuque, Iowa. As a matter of fact, the Holy Father is also informed about the matter. Despite repeated warnings of the Holy See, both the editors and teachers continue to use and spread this series."[2] Only if families unite and join in battle against this travesty of sex education will the battle be won. I pray for your success and bless all of you who love the Church and your families enough to fight against the use of this scandalous series in our schools...it is the 'NEW CREATION' series which does not follow the philosophies and theology of Vatican II. In this letter I express the judgement of the Holy Father."

BISHOP THOMAS J. WELSH of Allentown, PA states "The 'NEW CREATION' program is not approved for use in our schools."[3]

BISHOP LEO T. MAHER of San Diego ordered 'NEW CREATION' not to be used in El Cajon parochial schools. He rightly observed that it's "reading list" contained all sorts of books that exposed the Planned Parenthood philosophy.[4]

POPE JOHN PAUL II, declared in his address to the U.S. Bishops talk in Los Angeles, on 9/11/87, "FROM TIME TO TIME, THE QUESTION OF SEX EDUCATION, ESPECIALLY AS REGARDS TO PROGRAMS BEING USED IN SCHOOLS, BECOMES A MATTER OF CONCERN TO CATHOLIC PARENTS. THE PRINCIPLES GOVERNING THIS AREA HAVE BEEN SUCCINCTLY BUT CLEARLY ENUNCIATED IN FAMILIARIS CONSORTIO. FIRST, AMONG THESE PRINCIPLES IS THE NEED TO RECOGNIZE THAT SEX EDUCATION IS A BASIC RIGHT AND DUTY OF PARENTS THEMSELVES. THEY HAVE TO BE HELPED TO BECOME INCREASINGLY MORE EFFECTIVE IN FULFILLING THIS TASK. OTHER EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES HAVE AN IMPORTANT ROLE, BUT ALWAYS IN SUBSIDIARY MANNER, WITH DUE SUBORDINATION TO THE RIGHTS OF PARENTS." (Section 19)

On the other hand, Fr. John Forliti, the theological consultant for 'NEW CREATION,' is on record as stating: "If mistakes have to be made, I would rather make a mistake in the direction of too much too soon."[5]

Besides containing much offensive and objectionable material unfit for elementary school children, the 'NEW CREATION' series engages in a massive assault on personal and parental privacy.

We respectfully request the removal of this offensive and objectionable sex education program from Our Lady of Good Counsel parochial school. We hereby request teachers and administrators at Our Lady of Good Counsel to think and act in accordance with the mind of the Church. Parents who feel deeply about the violation of their rights by corrupting sex education programs in Catholic schools are encouraged to write or phone:

No basket case: Baskets are big business for enterprising Troy homemaker

By Sharon Dargay
staff writer

Jody House is a basket maker, not a basket case.

But she could easily be a basket case, what with 3-year-old twins, a 4-year-old and a first grader underfoot.

And the bundles of splint soaking in her kitchen sink and piles of sea grass scattered on tabletop and counter. And the boxes and boxes of finished baskets piled high in her basement, along with 30 or so woven flower vases suspended from the ceiling and late-night basketmaking sessions and thriving home business and weekend craft shows and ... GEEZE! Just how does this mother of three do it?

"My husband is wooonderful," admits the Troy homemaker. "I don't know how he puts up with it. He has come home to some strange sights. He expects dinner, and all he sees is splint all across the floor, baskets on the table."

Her home, decorated country-style with baskets and wood plaques, is spotless. But when "Baskets by Jody," her one-woman basket-making company, is in operation, the scene is less than picture perfect.

"I've worked on the kitchen floor. Then when this starts to unwind it's like a giant slinky," she says, recalling wrestling matches with unwilling loops of slender splint. "I've gotten whipped by this stuff.

"If I didn't have a sense of humor I never would have made it. My first year in business I'm $2,300 in the black," she adds proudly.

HER HUSBAND, a computer systems analyst, helps out with the books, baby-sits when House is busy with weekend craft shows or helps set up her basket display.

House designs and sells her creations, sometimes working through the night to replenish supplies during lucrative craft shows.

Her children provided the inspiration to work at home.

"With the kids so close together in age, it was a creative outlet for me. It made things easier.

"When the twins were little I found it easier to do work when they were up and around. Now they'll want mom's attention, and all I have to say is 'Mom's working right now,' and they'll go play."

Marketing and display ideas come easily to House, who has an undergraduate degree in business. Her artistic skills were self taught.

"I just do it. I've always liked arts and crafts. I just make them pleasing to the eye, like I'd like to see them done myself," she explained.

House dabbled in a variety of crafts until she found her niche in basketmaking nearly two years ago when a friend demonstrated a simple design. House's woven creation wasn't perfect, but she kept practicing, reading about the craft and experimenting with her own designs.

SHE BECAME a saleswoman for a company that sold baskets through home parties. A company representative saw House's baskets and included them in the firm's product line.

"Always in the back of my mind I thought I could do something at home to make money. But I thought, now wait a minute, there's something wrong here. She was marking my baskets up three times. Why do I need this middle person?"

Convinced that her baskets were good enough to sell, House went out on her own, creating enough stock to carry her through her first craft show.

"Summer shows aren't that good. I usually do at least one in the spring, one in the summer and the rest in the fall. During my first year I sold out at one show. I had to cancel the following show, but I had one scheduled three weeks later. I worked from 9 a.m. to 2 a.m. every day to get ready for the show.

"Boy, I've had some misses too. I was invited to the Meadowbrook Bluegrass Festival. I'd only done three shows. I sat until 2 p.m., without selling anything. People had come to listen to the music. I know enough now to stay away from family fairs and those kinds of things."

She also learned about proper display techniques through trial and error. After a storm ripped apart her booth, scattering all of her baskets at one show, she invested $500 in a weatherproof canopy.

Set-up usually takes a few hours, requiring House to head for morning craft shows as early as 6 or 7 a.m.

'If I didn't have a sense of humor I never would have made it. My first year in business I'm $2,300 in the black.'
—Jody House

"The night before we lug everything out of the basement. At outdoor shows you can park next to your display spot. For indoor shows you have to park quite far away and carry this stuff.

When I started I thought I'd have to sneak peaks at what other people made. But everyone is so willing to talk. Crafters are the nicest people."

She makes a point of introducing herself to other artists in addition to the basket makers — both out of a professional interest and for practical purposes.

"You have to go to the bathroom at some point. You can't sit their for eight hours. So, I hope I know the crafter next to me well enough to leave for a few minutes," she explained.

House will sell her baskets from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at Mercy High School's Folk and Country Craft Show on Oct. 10 at the Chelsea Craft and Folk Art Show, and on Oct. 17 at the Farmington Community Center.

Gamblin' on trash

Is it time to hold or fold?

NATIONWIDE, across Michigan, throughout the region and in the Plymouth-Canton community landfill is becoming a critical issue.

What to do with the junk we generate.

In recent years the city of Plymouth's finances have been squeezed as rate increases for garbage removal put pressure on the operating budget. In Canton, also, garbage removal is becoming a greater burden on the general fund.

The problem is that existing landfills are filling up, and the cost of operating landfills is rising each year.

Thus the trash haulers have to pay more to dump our garbage and those increased costs are being passed on to local governments, which very soon will show up in increased millage.

WAYNE DISPOSAL-CANTON has been trying to get approval from the Canton Township Board of Trustees to expand its landfill in Canton.

The initial local reaction was negative. Landfills, after all, are like prisons. Everyone agrees they are needed but nobody wants them in their backyard, or over the backyard fence, or even five miles away.

The area from Novi to Belleville is ideal for landfill operations because the heavy clay content of the soil makes it easier to contain contaminants so they don't harm the environment. Canton, particularly, is a prime target for landfills.

Recognizing that landfills don't have the same attraction as condos and industrial parks, Wayne Disposal came up with an incentive package to induce Canton officials to approve the project. Incentives include free dumping for Canton and direct cash payments over a period of years amounting to between $20 million and $40 million.

Township officials say the perks aren't good enough. And, so far, by not doing anything, Canton has delayed and possibly nixed the project. But Wayne Disposal is moving ahead, which may result in Canton being left behind.

THE PROCEDURE for landfill approval provides for the application to go to Wayne County if a municipality does not approve the request.

This week the county is taking major steps on processing Wayne Disposal's application. If most municipalities in the county approve the request, the landfill will be located in Canton in spite of local wishes. If so, Canton will have missed out on an attractive incentive package and be stuck with the landfill anyhow.

That would be too bad because Canton should get some benefits if it is to have some of the disadvantages of having a landfill within its limits. The stall can be interpreted as a negotiating chip. Right now the delay tactic looks like a risky gamble.

There also has not been any apparent movement to form any kind of authority of local communities (Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Northville, for instance) to finance and build an incinerator. Wayne, Westland, Garden City and Inkster years ago formed an authority to build and operate an incinerator, a move which proved very satisfactory for all cities involved. The authority is getting ready to restoke its incinerators after being shut down temporarily for environmental reasons.

Plymouth-Canton would do well to join neighboring municipalities to operate their own incinerator. The idea has been discussed between Canton Supervisor James Poole and Plymouth city manager Henry Graper. The idea also has been pursued by supervisors and mayors at the Conference of Western Wayne. But nothing happened beyond talking, and the talking may have died out by now.

Recyling measures may relieve the pressure but will not come close to solving the problem.

And so for the near future the most reasonable solution is location of a new landfill somewhere in western Wayne County. And guess where it likely will be?

Eventually a solution must be found. Will the solution come from local government or from county, regional, state or federal levels?

But if Canton's officials are going to play the gambler, residents unfortunately have to trust they'll know when to hold 'em and know when to fold.

A narrow focus cheats voters

A POLITICAL pundit once observed that all politics are local. Sadly, Michigan voters are being cheated out of that local franchise.

Voters of whatever persuasion should be outraged at the political shenanigans of Michigan's GOP, which is limping into the election of 1988 and crippling the rest of the political process simultaneously.

Forty percent of Michigan's voters are independents. They deserve a choice, a choice that thus far, Michigan's GOP is incapable of offering.

This sorry state exists because a lazy and ineffectual moderate wing fell asleep on the job and woke up faced with a coup d'etat in the ranks.

Organizers of this successful coup are supporters of presidential hopeful Pat Robertson.

So torn is the party that it is unable to field a candidate to challenge Democratic Sen Don Riegle in 1988. When a party's incompetence turns away as qualified a candidate as Colleen Engler, we all are cheated.

MORE IMPORTANTLY, the GOP is so tied up in 1988 presidential politics, it's ignoring a chance to take over the state House of Representatives.

This is nothing short of political nonfeasance on the moderate's part.

Politicos have stopped giggling about the TV preacher's presidential aspirations. He has had great success in South Carolina, Florida and Iowa.

Voters of whatever persuasion should be outraged at the political shenanigans of Michigan's GOP, which is limping into the election of 1988 and crippling the rest of the political process simultaneously.

Michigan GOP opponents are finding out that Robertson is indeed a shrewd political organizer.

More power to him.

By neglecting their duty, the moderates have allowed a group of out-of-state political technicians to grab hold of their party. They are only interested in local politics as long as it serves their candidate's interests.

But when the dust settles, the voters of this state will be left holding a nearly empty, very tattered electoral bag.

There are some problems with the new conservative direction of the state party. Robertson supporters have directed the party on a rightward course beyond the leanings of most Michiganians. The state's Democrats are quietly rubbing their hands in glee.

And while state Democrats are quietly rubbing their hands in glee, we should be shaking our fists in anger.

Rivera mural

Cleaning was a labor of love

A NOTE OF thanks is due two artists who cleaned the Rivera fresco at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Lucienne Bloch, 78, and Stephen Pope Dimitroff, 77, finished their work on the treasure this week. Using a simple process — sponge and water — they removed 55 years of grime from the huge fresco, which they know well.

Bloch and Dimitroff worked with Rivera in 1932-33 on the mural, titled "Detroit Industry." In town last week, the husband-wife team told stories of the Mexican painter and his wife, Frida Kahlo.

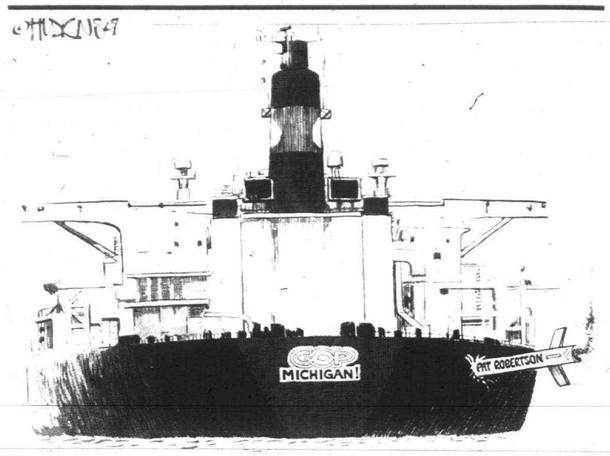

"Rivera believed the machine controls us, not the other way around," said Dimitroff, a Bulgarian native who worked in a Flint auto factory. Rivera painted Dimitroff on one of the mural's main panels, as he often used his helpers as models.

Pope and Dimitroff continue to make make frescos and teach students the art of fresco. They held a workshop and lectured on the topic in Detroit.

Decades have not dampened their energy or enthusiasm.

The years have not affected the greatness of "Detroit Industry" either. It is a treasure — now cleaner — and worth another look for those who have seen it before. Those who haven't seen it, should do so. Bloch has seen the fresco hundreds of times. But she said the work remains fresh to her.

"Every day I see something new," she said.

Business mavericks are a special breed

With little recognition they point out those uncomfortable facts that other more status-conscious executives fear to emphasize.

Steve Barnaby

Ray Windecker will never have a building with his name on it. That just isn't in the cards for the Ford Motor Co. executive. And you'll never see him hanging out in the corporate board room.

They wouldn't let him in, he jokes.

And if you ever get a chance to meet the Livonia resident, you'll realize that that's all right with him.

An avid car buff, he would rather spend his time after hours working on the restoration of his 1953 Studebaker and 1968 Mustang.

He's a rare but important breed on the American business scene. He's a corporate maverick. And being a maverick can be dangerous business. Often those who dare to speak out find themselves left out.

WITH LITTLE recognition they point out those uncomfortable facts that other, more status-conscious executives fear to emphasize. Often they get little credit.

But credit is hardly the point. They enjoy jostling the consciente of corporate America and seeing it slowly respond. Ray has done some jostling in his time.

He enjoys defying the conventional wisdom. Just ask him about the true story behind Japanese imports or how gasoline in relative terms is really less expensive than it was a dozen years ago. You'll walk away a believer.

Now Ray hasn't exactly been left out of the corporate scene. As a matter of fact, he's got a pretty nifty job at FoMoCo as a research and analysis manager. Ford, unlike some other companies, will put up with mavericks, he says.

Before coming to Ford, he worked for a dozen years at now-defunct Studebaker, which, Ray admits, was sometimes too far ahead of its time with a product too expensive to produce — a lesson, he points out, that took other American auto executives a long time to figure out in their battles with foreign imports.

AMONG HIS duties at Ford is to write position papers for the board room types to mull over and adopt and reject as they see fit. It's obvious that Ray has had his share of rejections.

But a keen observer can tell that Ray thinks that's all right, too.

I met Ray for the first time the other day at the scheduled preview of the 1988 Ford Motor Co. models. About two hours before the press conference Henry Ford II died and the formal program was quickly disbanded.

As "look-alike" Ford executives shuffled about wondering what to say or, more importantly, what not to say, Ray was gathering up itinerant reporters for the brief announcement which would cancel the day's events.

Ray smiled easily as he chided reporters to quit malingering and get to work. They responded by teasing — but moved to the front of the room as he asked.

Ray Windecker is a man in control of himself and those around him.

Now here is a guy who doesn't have to complain — or explain.

This question better for Bork

To the editor:

The confirmation hearings at which Robert Bork testified on his own behalf were frustrating. The commitee's liberal members sounded petty and vindictive. The conservatives were solicitous. Judge Bork had to answer the same questions over and over. And the real issue was overlooked.

Is there any doubt why Judge Bork was nominated by the Reagan administration? This administration has consistently expressed its unhappiness with certain Supreme Court rulings. Most prominent are those dealing with abortion rights and the rights of suspected criminals. Judge Bork would not have been nominated unless the administration felt he would be a force for reversing recent decisions.

What is sad, and ironic in this 200th year of our Constitution, is that the Supreme Court rulings which President Reagan and his supporters object to were not the result of court social activism or tinkering with the constitution (as alleged) but a response to the broader issue of fairness and justice for all.

The administration and its supporters apparently choose to forget that before Roe vs. Wade the wealthy could obtain safe abortions and the poor could not. They apparently choose to forget that many police officials treated white, wealthy suspects with kid gloves and beat confessions out of minority (especially black) suspects, some of whom were innocent. These conditions were unfair and unjust.

The Supreme Court is the final remedy for unfairness and the failure of justice. This involves more than a debate over the applicability of specific sections or wordings of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. This Court responsibility derives from the concept of liberty and justice for all that is implicit in the Constitution as a whole.

We need to know whether Robert Bork believes that the Court can rule on the unfair and the unjust without a literal citation of the Constitution. So far, the indirect evidence is that he does not. Judge Bork appears to be a Constituational literalist, unwilling to acknowledge the broader implications, safeguards and mandates of this great document. If this is the case, he should be rejected.

Reader lauds pope coverage

To the editor:

I have to thank the Observer & Eccentric for the colored prints and positive coverage of the Pope John Paul II's visit.

It's great to have one's hometown paper respond so well.

The column by Rich Perlberg in the Sept. 24 edition, was especially noteworthy.

Reader backs pool proposal

To the editor:

For the last few weeks I have been reading with much interest about Jane McCourt's efforts to put a proposal on the November ballot concerning a swimming pool in McClumpha park.

I, too, am a newcomer to the Plymouth area and, like McCourt, I have been disappointed with the recreational opportunities available in my new community. Plymouth is an outstanding community in many ways but one that gives the impression of having grown in spite of itself with a subsequent lag between the needs of its residents and its ability or desire to fulfill those needs.

A swimming pool in McClumpha park would be much more than a "toy" for the "elite" as one recent letter to the editor put it. Facilities such as swimming pools, tennis courts and golf courses not only add to the quality of life in a community but they add to the value of everyone's property as well.

Indeed, if the young people of Plymouth had somewhere to meet with their friend perhaps we wouldn't be so inundated with "cruisers" every summer.

While I understand the concerns of those worried about high property taxes, I'm unable to understand those who refuse to consider an item because they personally will never use it.

A love for adventure

Fred DeLano

IT TOOK SEVERAL readings of the notes I made from a recent interview with a charming travel-minded acquaintance to determe which of her statements was most revealing, and then these words leaped at me: "I have a sense of adventure," said Denise Chapman.

Amitting she hungers to see the history of which she read in earning degrees at Ferris State and Madonna, Denise told of trips take over the last 12 years to Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, numerous islands on three Caribbean cruises, Egypt, Greece, Finland, Soviet Union and Poland.

"I would love to do the Amazon River," added this adventuresome, slim and trim single women in her mid-30s who works 9 to 5, Monday through Friday, as legal assistant for four attorney friends of mine.

THE CHANCE for the most novel of her trips abroad came out of the blue last February. Most of her travels have been scheduled well in advance as a member of an organized tour group with exacting itineraries, a feature of the travel industry of which more and more of you have been taken advantage in recent years.

But in February, a call from her sister, Diane, who works for a travel agency in Sterling Heights, opened a completely different opportunity. Diane knew that Foreign Adoptions Consultants of Rochester had immediate need for two people to fly to Seoul, Korea to being several orphan children back to the United States and wondered if Denise would join her on the assignment.

I understand there are frequent such trips and some of you who live in the Rochester area may be experienced escorts. But this was one time when the agency was short of volunteers and so Denise Chapman and Diane Wheeler filled the gap.

THEY FLEW on Northwest without any major problems, fortunately, and spent a week in Seoul. This gave time to do some shopping in what has become the bargain center of the far east and also provided them with hotel window perches to watch the first of this year's riots between Korean university students and police.

"All the processing for adoption of the children we were to escort had been completed," said Denise. "Their parents-to-be in this country already were determined and these parents met us at Metropolitan Airport when we returned.

"We ended up with four babies who were each four months old and three older children who included a brother and sister approximately 5 and 6 and another little boy about 6 or 7 who was met in San Francisco to be taken to his new home in Texas. The others we brought back with us to Detroit.

"WE MET PEOPLE from other states who were there doing the same as we were, probably about 10 who were picking up children from the orphanage. There also were two from Australia on the same assignment.

"We were on a normal commercial flight. Everyone was willing to help us feed the babies, including the airline officers, one of whom said his wife was expecting and he needed some practice.

"But everyone deserted us when it came time to change diapers.

"In Tokyo, on an hour's stopover, one of the maintenance men brought us a large bag of disposable diapers. Everyone was very helpful. The older children didn't speak English and we don't speak Korean, so trying to get them to fasten their seat belts and stay seated when we took off was a big problem.

"That was understandable because they were so excited. They knew where they were going and that life would be better here. They were eager, not reluctant. Just seeing the new parents faces when they met us at the airport made it very rewarding. I'd be happy to do it again, if asked."

Return trips to Leningrad and Moscow, a first-time tour of the Balkans and that Amazon RiVer voyage are the next Chapman targets. What an interesting way she has found to relieve the tediousness of a law office. Denise, you should have been a travel writer.

What are the real goals of school finance reform?

Rich Perlberg

SO, HOW ARE we going to pay for public schools?

State Sen. Rudy Nichols, the Hardesty Commission and House Republicans all have plans. So do other people. Many people think they aren't going anywhere.

At least part of the problem is that while all the plans carry the promise of reform, it's not clear if the target is sufficient financing for schools or cutting back on property taxes. The two don't have to be mutally exclusive, but promising one while delivering the other is a worrisome possibility.

The screams over property taxes are not as shrill or demanding as years gone by when Tisch I and Tisch II (both unsuccessful) were born as was the Headlee Amendment (which was successful).

Still, the relative good times in Michigan have resulted in increasing property values which will take their toll, especially as schools aim for higher tax rates.

MICHIGAN SCHOOL districts rely heavily on property taxes for their revenue. A growing number of school districts, over 120 to date, are out-of-formula which means they get no state aid for operating purposes and depend almost solely on their property values and the tax rate they can coax from residents.

This is part of a trend. A few years ago only a handful of districts were out of formula. The state support of public schools has not kept pace with the money spent by public schools. Local superintendents can remember when property taxes and state aid equally funded state schools. Today, property taxes outdistance state aid by about two-to-one.

Out-of-formula districts aren't totally distressed by this development. True, they don't get state aid. But neither can they have money snatched away when the state runs into a financial crisis.

THIS COULD change, if reformers have their ways. A professed goal is to close the funding gap between wealthier and poorer districts. No problem so far. But instead of just trying to raise the floor, most proposals are also lower the ceiling.

For instance, most proposals not only redistribute tax money but also put a limit on how high local districts can tax themselves even with voter consent. One legislator has suggested taking away the state's Social Security payments for the 41 wealthiest districts. That would mean losses of up to $2 million for districts such as Southfield, Troy, Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Farmington and West Bloomfield.

Will this be more talk than action? Perhaps. The state isn't talking about additional funds for schools, just a partial shift out property taxes and raise the sales tax from four to six cents on the dollar.

Voters have already rejected attempts to raise the sales tax and they may be even less receptive now that sales taxes are no longer a help on the federal tax returns. As odious as they may seem, property taxes are still helpful for many people around April 15.

Parlimentary ruse used to minimize dissent

Tim Richard

I THOUGHT I had seen every parliamentary trick in the book, plus a few others you won't find in any dusty text.

But S. Martin Taylor showed me a new one last week as the Harden Commission wrapped up its report to the state Board of Education.

Taylor is a veteran of the Lansing wars — as head of the Labor Department and the Michigan Employment Security Commission. He is now with New Detroit Inc.

But he has never been a legislator, and I can't say where he picked up this trick.

TAYLOR MADE the motion to adopt the report, but he threw in a few twists while he was at it.

One was that only members who voted "yes" could add individual views in the appendix.

In the complex crush of events, the implications of Taylor's fine print almost got by everyone.

But not Peter Eckstein, the AFL-CIO economist.

Eckstein caught the subtle implication. If you disliked the report and wanted your views known to the state Board of Education and the Legislature, you had to vote yes, under Taylor's motion.

TAYLOR NEVER explained why he offered the motion that way, but it's easy to guess:

- If you disagreed with some of the report, you were given an incentive to vote for adoption — hence, more yes votes to make the report look better.
- The number of dissenting viewpoints in the appendix could be kept to a minimum.

Eckstein raised a stink. He offered an amendment to strike the Taylor maneuver. Eckstein's amendment won by a small majority. It looked as if there might also be a majority against the final report.

Not so. The final report was adopted 32-3. The AFL-CIO representative, the Michigan Education Association representative and the proxy for one state senator voted no. They will get their dissenting views, if any, published.

THE MICHIGAN Constitution provides precedent for what Eckstein sought to do.

The constitution allows members of the Legislature who vote no on final passage of a law to state their reasons following the vote and have their dissents printed in the House or Senate journal.

Other bodies of government in Michigan allow dissenters to have their statements printed in the minutes, though the dissenters have no automatic right — it's just a courtesy.

I've seen dissenters abuse the courtesy, but I'm glad we in Michigan do things that way.

SOMETIMES VISITORS to the Legislature or local governmental boards are surprised to see a member vote for something, then switch his vote (to no when it's apparent his side will lose).

Is the member trying to fool the public? Does he lack the courage to be recorded in the minority?

Not necessarily. The member may be protecting his right to ask for reconsideration.

Under Robert's Rules of Order, once a matter has been decided, only a member of the body who has voted on the prevailing side may ask reconsideration. That's to keep losers from bringing up the matter over and over. So the losing member switches his vote in order to ask for reconsideration later.

A member can change his vote up until the time the chair declares the matter passed or failed. Even when the secretary announces the vote is four yes and three no, a member can switch his vote — as long as the presiding officer hasn't made the formal announcement.

There are a lot of twists to this game of parliamentary law.

Where there's a need, there's a way. The United Way.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Falcon project called success by state DNR

Life in downtown Detroit suited four peregrine falcons just fine, says the committee that promoted the birds.

"With one out of the five birds injured, our program is still above average when compared to releases in other cities," said Bob Hess, a state Department of Natural Resources biologist and coordinator of the Peregrine Return Committee.

Five of the predatory, diving falcons were released atop the tower of the Guardian Building, now owned by the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. One was injured and returned to a hatching lab in Minneapolis. The other four have scattered and are believed to be hunting their own food.

THE PROGRAM was financed by the state Nongame Wildlife Fund and contributions from Mich-Con, Stroh Brewery and the Michigan United Conservation Clubs. Gas company employees and Audubon Society members monitored the birds' movements from the Fourth of July to Labor Day.

Wildlife experts were to gather Saturday at Point Pelee, Ontario, to watch the peregrines migrate south. The point, which extends into Lake Erie, is a major landmark for birds.

Peregrine Return members want to raise funds to release six more birds in 1988 and 1989. Each bird costs some $3,580 to plant — counting attendants, food and office supplies.

The local committee is part of a nationwide effort to reestablish the falcon in the lower 48 states. The goal is to establish 10 breeding pairs of the endangered species in Michigan by the year 2000.

Canham files appeal to regain law license

James Canham files appeal

Former chief Wayne County Circuit Judge James Canham has filed with the Michigan Supreme Court to regain his law license, but it's far from certain whether the high court will hear his appeal.

Canham, a longtime Redford Township resident, was disbarred by the Michigan Attorney Discipline Board in April. A disciplinary board hearing panel found Canham conspired with Michigan Appeals Court Judge S. Jerome Bronson in late 1986 to solicit a bribe from attorney James Finn. Both Bronson and Finn are deceased.

In an appeal filed last week, Canham contends he didn't receive a fair hearing before his law license was revoked.

The board found Canham "aided and abetted" Bronson in soliciting the bribe. Bronson, a Franklin Village resident, committed suicide Nov. 14 after being arraigned on a bribery charge.

The board ruled that "Canham should have reported Bronson's efforts to solicit a bribe.

"The panel found him guilty of something he wasn't charged with," said Canham's attorney, Sheldon Miller of Detroit. "We're asking for a fair trial."

Miller has maintained failure to report Bronson wasn't contained among charges filed against his client. Miller said Canham would have conceded guilt if fairly charged with a lesser offense involving a lighter penalty.

Appealing to the state Supreme Court is Canham's final effort to regain his license.

The high court changed its rules in 1979 and no longer makes such appeals a matter of right. Supreme Court clerk Corbin Davis said fewer than five such appeals have been accepted by the high court in recent years. Miller, however, said he's hopeful the court will agree to hear the case because of its notoriety.

Testimony during the disciplinary hearing indicated Bronson asked Canham to be a go-between, soliciting $20,000 from Finn in return for a favorable ruling in a case pending before the Appeals Court. Canham approached Finn with the bribe offer during an Oct. 31, 1986, meeting at the Franklin Racquet Club, Southfield, testimony indicated. Finn subesquently reported the bribe attempt to a friend, Appeals Court Judge Joseph B. Sullivan, triggering the probe that ended in Bronson's arrest.

Canham was given immunity from criminal charges in return for his work in helping trap Bronson.

Finn, a Birmingham resident, died Sept. 5 after suffering a heart attack.

Lights, 'laughter,' action . . .

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Flash the spotlights, tickle their ham bones and promise new friendships.

That's just the right backdrop for the star struck thespians who signed up last week for acts in the Plymouth Community Arts Council famed follies. Volunteers said the bottom line is to have fun.

From the laughter that echoed through Pioneer Elementary School gym Oct. 22 during "director's night," it's certain they'll get what they're looking for. The performers got a chance to meet their short term boss and director of Oct O' Follies, Paul Lubera, of Jerome H. Cagill Productions in New York.

The production will run 8 p.m. Oct. 9-10 at the Plymouth-Salem High School, Joy Road west of Canton Center. Tickets are $5 or $7. A dress rehearsal 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct.8, at Plymouth-Salem is open only to senior citizens. Tickets are $2.

LUBERA SAID HE patterned the glitzy production after a Las Vegas act, complete with chorus lines, tap dances, constant one-liners, disco dances, show girls and "something for everyone."

Yesteryear recalled in proposed calendar

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Scenes of days gone by in a Canton Historical Society calendar will be daily reminders of the community's roots.

A free copy of the 1988 calendar — complete with notations of Plymouth-Canton school events — will go to all Canton homeowners and businesses, compliments of the historical society and advertising supporters.

Earlier this year, Canton Township Board of Trustees agreed to pay mailing costs for 20,000 calendars.

THE SOCIETY SOLICITED more financial support from the township, but trustees said if they underwrote the entire project, other organizations would expect the same backing.

Advertising spaces on the calendar cost $1,000 and are in view all 12 months. Other spaces cost $100 each and are in view for one month. Discounts are offered to business people who buy three or more $100 ads.

Sellouts of $100 ads for January, April, May and June indicate strong sales so far. Proceeds go to the society.

"Twenty thousand people would be viewing that ad for 365 days," said Flossie Tonda, historical society director. "And that's not including the guests and visitors who will see it."

The sales pitch has come in handy for Tonda, who is selling advertising spaces with the help of society president, Tillie Schultz.

"We want to get owners of apartment complexes to buy a certain amount of calendars to give to renters as a Christmas gift," Tonda said. "Or, we could sell owners the calendars at a discount and they could sell it to their renters."

THE WOMEN HAVE pounded the pavement, knocked on business doors and sold $8,000 worth of advertising for the historical society coffers.

They're hoping to sell enough ads to pay for the $10,000 calendar printing costs and to help support other society projects.

The society is sponsoring the writing and printing of "Cornerstones: A History of Canton families" which was due out this year. Writing is not complete and the book isn't expected to go to the printers in 1987.

Plans to hire a tour guide for the historical museum, on Canton Center south of Proctor, also needs funding.

"These are only two present projects we have to fund," Tonda said.

Holiday cites stepparents

By Rebecca Haynes
staff writer

Eleven-year-old Danny Victor has been celebrating his own Stepparents' Day for as long as he can remember. But thanks to the work of his dad and many other volunteers, this year he's got a legal, state-named holiday on which to celebrate it.

The state legislature recently declared the first Sunday in October as official Stepparents' Day in Michigan.

Richard Victor, Danny's father, is the Birmingham attorney who has spent the past several years trying to get the holiday established. Now

'Stepparents' Day is really a vehicle to bring recognition to the largest growing social phenomenon in the country.'

— Richard Victor, Birmingham attorney that he has accomplished his goal at the state level, he is setting his sights on a national Stepparents' Day.

"Stepparents' Day is really a vehicle to bring recognition to the largest growing social phenomenon in the country," said Victor, who's the legal adviser for the Stepfamily Association of America as well as one of its national board members.

"I deal with family law, and I've found that children in a blended stepfamily often have an emotional conflict of interest on Mother's Day and Father's Day. If they celebrate it with their stepmothers or fathers they often feel as though they're cheating their natural parent.

"STEPPARENTS' DAY is an attempt to erase this conflict and have a day they can celebrate without any guilt," he said. "I don't think I really realized it until now, but I think this thing all started with my oldest son, Danny. I have to give him a lot of credit."

Danny was 2 when Victor remarried after a divorce. Now 11, he lives in Bloomfield Hills with his father, stepmother, Denise, and a half brother and half sister.

He's very close to Denise and would always celebrate Mother's Day with her a day early, since he spends Sunday with his natural mother, Victor said.

"He'd take her breakfast in bed and give her a card that he'd have to make himself because there were never any cards to buy for a stepmother. I guess I saw how special their relationship was without him feeling as though he was cheating his own mom."

Growing up with a split family hasn't been easy, but Danny said he has learned to understand it and to cope with it. He's also not alone. Statistics show that 1,300 stepfamilies are created each day.

"THERE ARE some kids who really don't like their stepparents," Danny said. "I don't know why. They're not bad or evil.

"It would be nice if I didn't have to leave one of my parents to see the other, but you get used to it," he said.

Although Danny said his relationship with Denise is good, and he doesn't feel he has cheated his natural mother by being close to her, he said he's glad Stepparents' Day was passed so that other kids can have the chance to do the same thing.

Last year Danny gave me an official stepparent card from the store for the first time, and I was really excited," Denise said. "Actually I luck out. Now I'll get to celebrate Stepparents' Day as well as Mother's Day."

Same trauma faced

By Rebecca Haynes
staff writer

Dealing with the emotional trauma of trying to combine two families into one can be one of the most difficult tasks facing the stepfamily.

Often counseling is needed to help them through this troublesome time.

Elaine Horigian-Smith, a Rochester resident, is a Birmingham psychologist specializing in stepfamily counseling. She also founded and serves as president of the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the Stepfamily Association of America.

It was a personal involvement that really got me started in all of this," Horigian-Smith said. "I am a stepmother and have helped to raise both of my husband's children. After we were married there were so many things that I didn't know anything about and when I went researching I found there was very little information available on stepfamilies and the role of the stepparent.

IT WAS then she heard about Emily and John Visher who had started support groups for stepparents in California. After attending one of their workshops, she decided to form a stepfamily support group in the Detroit area. Since then the Stepfamily Association of America, of which Horigian-Smith's group is now a chapter, was formed.

"Despite the large numbers of people living in the stepfamily situation it has taken quite a bit of time for the public to understand," she said. "There is a sense of isolation and a negative aura surrounding the stepfamily and people are often quite reluctant to talk about it.

Often people have the misconception that when families merge love and understanding happen overnight. However, this is far from the truth.

"It typically takes five years or more to develop family ties," Horigian-Smith said. "Plus, the older the children involved are, the less likely they are to see the stepparent as an authority figure or to want to accept these new family ties.

"A STEPFAMILY is born out of loss," she said. "Either the loss of a parental figure through death or divorce or the loss of a dream about how life should be."

There are also many types of stepfamilies, ranging from some where the children visit occasionally to others where the children live. Also, statistics estimate that by 1990, only 35 percent of all children in the U.S. under the age of 18 will be in their original, nuclear family.

Eight common problem areas face today's stepfamilies trying to merge a difference in feelings, values and lifestyles, a close bond formed between the single parent and child before the remarriage occurred, which is hard to loosen and makes life difficult for the stepparent, a biological parent who is deceased or lives elsewhere and has a large influence on the children, the emotional readjustment children who are members of two households must face when they go back and forth, the poorly defined role of the stepparent, the lack of a legal relationship between the stepparent and stepchild, the often constant testing of the new couple relationship by the children, and the influence exerted toward the family by its extended arms, such as grandparents.

Children often idealize their biological parent and this can have a detrimental effect on their relationship with their stepparent, Horigian-Smith said. Also, biological parents can act very defensive because they feel threatened that their child will like their stepparents more than they like them.

FAMILY ROLES can also create friction.

"There are times when a stepparent is supposed to act like a parent and times when they're supposed to act like a friend and times when they need to not act at all," she said. "The problem is being able to pick which one at which time and your chances are 66 percent you'll be wrong."

Many families do seek counseling which needs to include a strong educational component, Horigian-Smith said. When seeking a counselor, families should be sure the person is trained to deal with the problems of the stepfamily, she said.

The person who doesn't understand the dynamics of the stepfamily can do more harm than good, she said.

The Stepfamily Association offers monthly meetings for education and support as well as a stepsouth program for children aged 10-18.

A NEW program, the Step-Family Growth Center, is being offered in Birmingham by three professionals at the South Woodward Clinic. Psychologists Doris Ball, Lyle Danuloff and psychiatric social worker David Masselotf formed the program last spring because they said they saw a need for stepfamily education in this area.

"The three of us were sitting around one day and realized we were seeing more and more stepfamilies," Danuloff said. As we began to swap information we realized we could put together a solid program not only to deal with the problems but to enhance the strong points."

The center offers a five-week educational program on strengthening the stepfamily as well as free lectures, individual counseling and therapy, family therapy, stepcouple's and stepchildren's groups and training for effective parenting.

"The stepfamily can't function as a nuclear family," he said. "There are lots of myths, such as the family will instantly love each other" as well as loyalty problems with the kids and the parents."

WHEN A family expresses interest in the program an initial evaluation is done. Recommendations are then made as to which aspect would most benefit family members, either the educational program or more specialized therapy.

We limit the educational classes to approximately five or six couples and each week there's a structured lesson and homework that's assigned with problem areas then worked on," Danuloff said. "In a nuclear family the couple had a certain amount of time together before the children came along. In a stepfamily, the parental relationship comes immediately.

"Stepfamilies have been presented in the ways like the Brady Bunch or Eight is Enough and it just doesn't work that way," he said. "Often the stepparent or the stepchild thinks they have to love everybody the same and that's just not true. You have to learn to accept and respect the differences between family members when you're really blending two cultures.

'A stepfamily is born out of loss. Either the loss of a parental figure through death or divorce or the loss of a dream about how life should be.'

Volunteers in the homespun event must be Plymouth or Canton residents or employees. If that doesn't apply, join the arts council and you're eligible.

What motivates the people underneath the glittered costumes and make-up?

For Karen Conger of Canton, it's the adrenalin that pumps when she steps on stage.

"I like to be under flood lights," she said laughing.

In a more serious tone, she added, "The fellowship between everyone is great. It's like a family by the end."

Pam Anderson and Anne O'Karma started their friendship during the arts council follies two years ago. Their acquaintance personifies the reason for the follies.

"We originally started it to get people in the community together," said Sandra Richardson, follies chairperson.

"I love to perform," said Anderson, who concentrated in dance during college. "Last time we had so much fun and we made friends and the friendship continued."

APRIL LEWIS, who is used to being on stage in her business of producing company training videos, signed up for acts with her mother, Carol Lewis. They laughed and said they could practice their steps together at home.

Margo Panko, a Plymouth-Canton teacher, came back for more theatrics because she "had so much fun the last time. The people were fantastic and I made lots of new friends. It's good for networking and you don't have to be exceptionally good, you just have to try."

Others who are convinced they have no talent but still want to take part are assigned jobs behind the scenes, like applying make-up and dispensing tickets. Profits made from the follies go to the arts council.

THE FAMILY has been through its ups and downs adjusting to the rigors of the stepfamily. However, Denise said it has become a way of life and is much easier now that Danny lives with them.

Before he lived with us we sort of built our family around him, and when he would be here," she said.

Even after we had our own children we'd sit around and mope and not do anything because Danny wasn't here. When he comes to live with us it was sort of like the missing piece of the puzzle wasn't missing anymore."

Through his work as a divorce attorney, Richard Victor is an active advocate of stepparents rights and is suffering to get laws passed that will help and preserve the relationships that develop when a stepparent plays a major role in the raising of a child.

A stepparent who is actively involved in raising their stepchild and is divorced has no right to see that child once the divorce is final," he said. "You don't need a road map to see how many second marriages are ending in divorce.

VICTOR IS using his legal expertise to work with television producer Aaron Spelling as a technical adviser for an upcoming made-for-TV movie, Who's Mother Am I. The movie will deal with this dilemma of the stepparent.

One of the biggest frustrations in advocating stepparents rights is being labeled anti-family, Victor said.

"I would stop every divorce and every custody dispute I would do it," he said.

I'm an advocate for children and their needs and if that benefits the stepparent so be it. The children are the ones who either suffer or gain from our decisions."

Michigan was the first state to name a Stepparents' Day back in 1985. However, it was done for the first two years by governor's proclamation.

We wanted it to be made into law, otherwise the governor would have to proclaim it every year," Victor said.

Other states that have since named a Stepparents' Day are California, Florida, Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Colorado.

Hallmark didn't Sponsor it for me," he laughed. "Children should know there's nothing wrong with loving three or more adults."

The next step is to get Congress to name a national Stepparents' Day.

I'm optimistic but I'm also realistic," he said. "I hope to get the national Stepparents' Day declared before I'm a grandparent."

moral perspectives

Rev. Robert Schaden

A dissenting voice can spur progress

THE CAR in front of me at the light was papered with bumper stickers. On most of them the lettering was faded, and the edges were tattered. One of those weathered statements read "America: Love it or Leave It." I said they were old stickers. As it stands, that may be a point worth considering.

However, the face of it and the implication are not always the same. The underlying message seems to be that loyalty and love of any institution require agreement with all of its policies and priorities.

For many, dissent is not a popular pastime. It has a tendency to cause many in positions of authority or power to get nervous at the prospect of being challenged. Some are not used to having the wisdom of their ways questioned.

For many others, their level of authority notwithstanding, dissent is an equally unpleasant phenomenon. For them the thought that the status quo or that in which they have put their faith is questionable at all is at least uncomfortable.

DISSENT NEVER has been nor is it ever likely to be a process that delights everyone. The very existence of the United States of America is the result of dissent against the British crown. Even that hallowed Revolution was not without its opponents. The Tories were alive and well in 18th century America.

It will always be true that those who run governments, lead churches, direct education or manage businesses will be subject to the limitations of the human condition. As such they may need to be challenged. History is scattered with the debris of those who were not.

However, as inevitable and as productive as dissent may be, it still remains for those who would take part in such a process to remember that there is a difference between mere grumbling and responsible dissent.

The very existence of the United States of America is the result of dissent against the British crown.

For starters, an ability to discriminate seems to be a welcome ingredient. Those who claim that dissent is disloyal fail to recognize the difference between what is essential to the group or the organization and what is not. If, for example, I want to throw out the Constitution, my Americanism may well be questioned. However, I may suggest that "The Star-Spangled Banner" is a bit too belligerent to be the national anthem for a peace-loving nation without questioning the very heart of America.

WHEN SUCH a lack of discrimination is beyond those in power, paranoia and even tyranny result. But when that same ability to discriminate is missing in the dissenter, confusion reigns, and the baby goes out with the bathwater.

Along with such discrimination, an open mind can help the dissenter to see that even a system that needs changing or a leader who needs challenging can and often does have some saving grace. It is dangerous when the mind of the dictator is closed. But it is equally dangerous and a bit sad when the closed mind belongs to the dissenter.

This may be too much to fit on a bumper sticker, but it may provide a context in which to read the next sticker on loyalty on the car in front of you.

The Rev. Robert Schaden is with the Newman House at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Ford's better idea: helping minorities

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

When Renaldo "Ray" Jensen became manager of Ford Motor Co.'s minority development department last February, the automaker's commitment to hiring minority suppliers was already in full swing.

Jensen, an Air Force career officer who joined Ford nine years ago as a principal design engineer in the aerodynamics department, was ready for a more challenging assignment.

"Mr. Henry Ford II and Mr. Gary White were the biggest contributors and formulators of the minority program, which began in 1978," said Jensen of Farmington Hills.

He shares his third floor suite of offices in the Ford Motor Co.'s World Headquarters building in Dearborn with Joseph Black of Livonia, his executive assistant.

White left the program to buy Jones Transfer, a Detroit-based trucking company Jensen calls the largest minority-owned trucking business in the world — and a participant in Ford's minority supplier program.

'You just can't purchase from a minority — you must develop a supplier who can meet the changing needs (of the auto industry).'

— Ray Jensen

In the past seven months, Jensen has involved himself in the programs directed at sustaining Ford's minority supplier base and has new projects in the wings.

HE CAN SPEW facts and figures — historical perspectives as well as projections — without glancing at written reports, belying the fact he's been at the helm for less than a year in a program almost a decade old.

Ray Jensen

"We learned things in the first five years — you just can't purchase from a minority — you must develop a supplier who can meet the changing needs (of the industry)," said Jenson, whose clutter-free office offers a wall of windows, plus automotive and African art.

"Ford assembles and designs cars. We take designs with specifications and contract with suppliers to deliver these parts to our assembly plants," he said. "Fifty percent of our parts are done this way. When

Courtship blooms at ad, PR agencies

By Philip A. Sherman
special writer

Advertising agencies say they're buying into public relations firms to expand capabilities, enhance client services and stockpile "instant" staffs to fortify themselves in an acknowledged high-pressure arena.

But there's another reason: money.

"It's hard to pinpoint, but it certainly has to be financial. Advertising agencies don't perform well when they go public," said Bruce VandenBergh, chairman of Michigan State University's advertising department. "They invest heavily in people . . . but with computers replacing human capabilities, the billings-to-people ratio is getting much, much smaller."

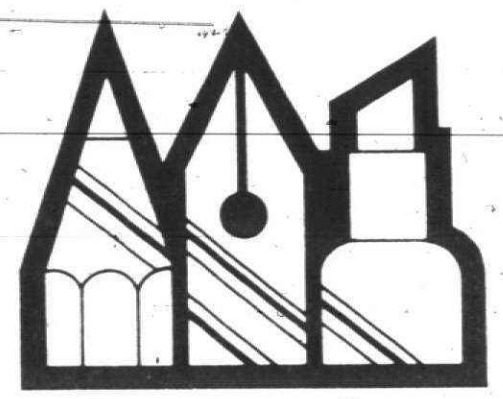

VandenBergh thinks finances could be an additional, yet largely overlooked, reason why Ross Roy Group Inc. acquired a "substantial minority interest" in Anthony M. Franco Inc., Detroit's largest and best-known public relations firm. Tony Franco, chairman and owner, said "of the top 20 PR firms, 15 to 17 have been acquired" by advertising agencies over the past few years.

"The PR discipline is something agencies have not had in place until the last three or four years," Franco said. "They recognize now that PR is an important part of the marketing mix. PR is very profitable and becomes a very strong profit center" for an ad agency, he added.

THAT PR IS profitable in the right hands is undeniable. That fact is best demonstrated by the Sept. 22 sale of Casey Communications Management Inc. in Southfield to Shandwick plc of London, England — the world's largest public relations network. Mary Lou Butcher, executive vice president of Casey, said Shandwick expects more than $50 million in annual revenues, with a large part of that coming from its six U.S. firms and the rest from its remaining 22 worldwide offices.

Neither Franco nor Butcher have publicly placed a dollar amount to their mergers.

Reasons for buyouts vary. In Franco's case, he wasn't bought out. "His deal is an old-fashioned arrangement where he kept total autonomy. The arrangement looks like the type of deal you'd see 15 or 20 years ago," VandenBergh said. Franco confirmed his firm retains its independent status.

Advertising agencies 'recognize now that PR is an important part of the marketing mix. PR is very profitable and becomes a very strong profit center.'

— Anthony Franco

Likewise, Butcher said Casey Communications also will continue to operate independently of Shandwick, even though Shandwick now owns the firm. "They only want to enhance our success. They don't want to change anything," Butcher said.

Mergers aren't exclusive to the public relations field, either. Last August two advertising companies — Stone, August and R.J. Baker — merged to form Stone, August, Baker Communications Companies, again offering complete marketing services from one or all of its five newly formed divisions.

VandenBergh said he's seen the merger trend between advertising and public relations emerging for While working the sales end of the screw machine field, Carmen Munoz was encouraged by General Motors Flint Division to start her own business.

Hispanic stands out as supplier for auto industry

When Carmen Munoz opened Machine Products Inc. in Livonia in 1984, detractors thought she was simply a front for her husband.

But the Hispanic woman with 28 years in the screw machine field persevered. And proved herself.

A manufacturer of bar machine products for use in the auto, defense and oil industries, Machine Products has grown to $2 million in annual sales. It employs 30 and is planning a move to a bigger site soon, having outgrown its current facility on Merriman north of Plymouth Road.

"My husband never came near it, but we're getting too big now," she said in her cramped office area over the din of operating machinery in the adjoining factory.

"I finally worked on his conscience and talked him into helping out. He's been my production manager for a few months now."

One of the couple's three children also works there. But Munoz stresses the company is not a family business.

"We have a good work force that can produce a competitive quality part," she said.

MACHINE PRODUCTS supplies parts for General Motors Corp., Chrysler, Ford Motor Co., General Dynamics and Rockwell International.

While working the sales end of the screw machine field, Munoz was encouraged by General Motors Flint Division to start her own business.

"Buyers began telling me of minority programs. They were looking desparately for good (minority) suppliers in order to keep federal contracts," she said.

'There are no giveaways, and we don't need them. We have to compete with majority suppliers in all ways. Everyone has to learn to stand on their own two feet.'

— Carmen Munoz

"Now I think the companies have more social conscience. There are lots of reasons for cultivating minority suppliers. If minorities don't prosper, there is no one to buy the cars."

She participated in minority supplier programs with GM and Chrysler before being accepted into the Ford program last February. Munoz has also applied for participation in a federal program for economically and socially deprived female suppliers. She is hopeful of acceptance.

"Since joining the Ford program, my sales have gone up dramatically," she said. "Sixty-five to 70 percent of my total sales now are with Ford."

CANDID IN rating the Big Three minority supplier programs, Munoz puts Ford at the top and GM at the bottom, describing their program as nothing more than perfunctory.

"Chrysler's program is small but dedicated. Ford has very good structure to their program.

"With Ford, I have been pleasantly surprised. They want us to be a Ford supplier but cultivate a good competitive business as well."

The minority programs are not handouts, Munoz said. She compared them to experienced industrial giants sharing their wealth of knowledge with fledgling businesses.

"There are no giveaways, and we don't need them," she said. "We have to compete with majority suppliers in all ways. Everyone has to learn to stand on their own two feet."

She recently attended a weekend seminar sponsored by Ford and presented by the accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand, as well as an executive training program at Dartmouth College, which Ford sponsored.

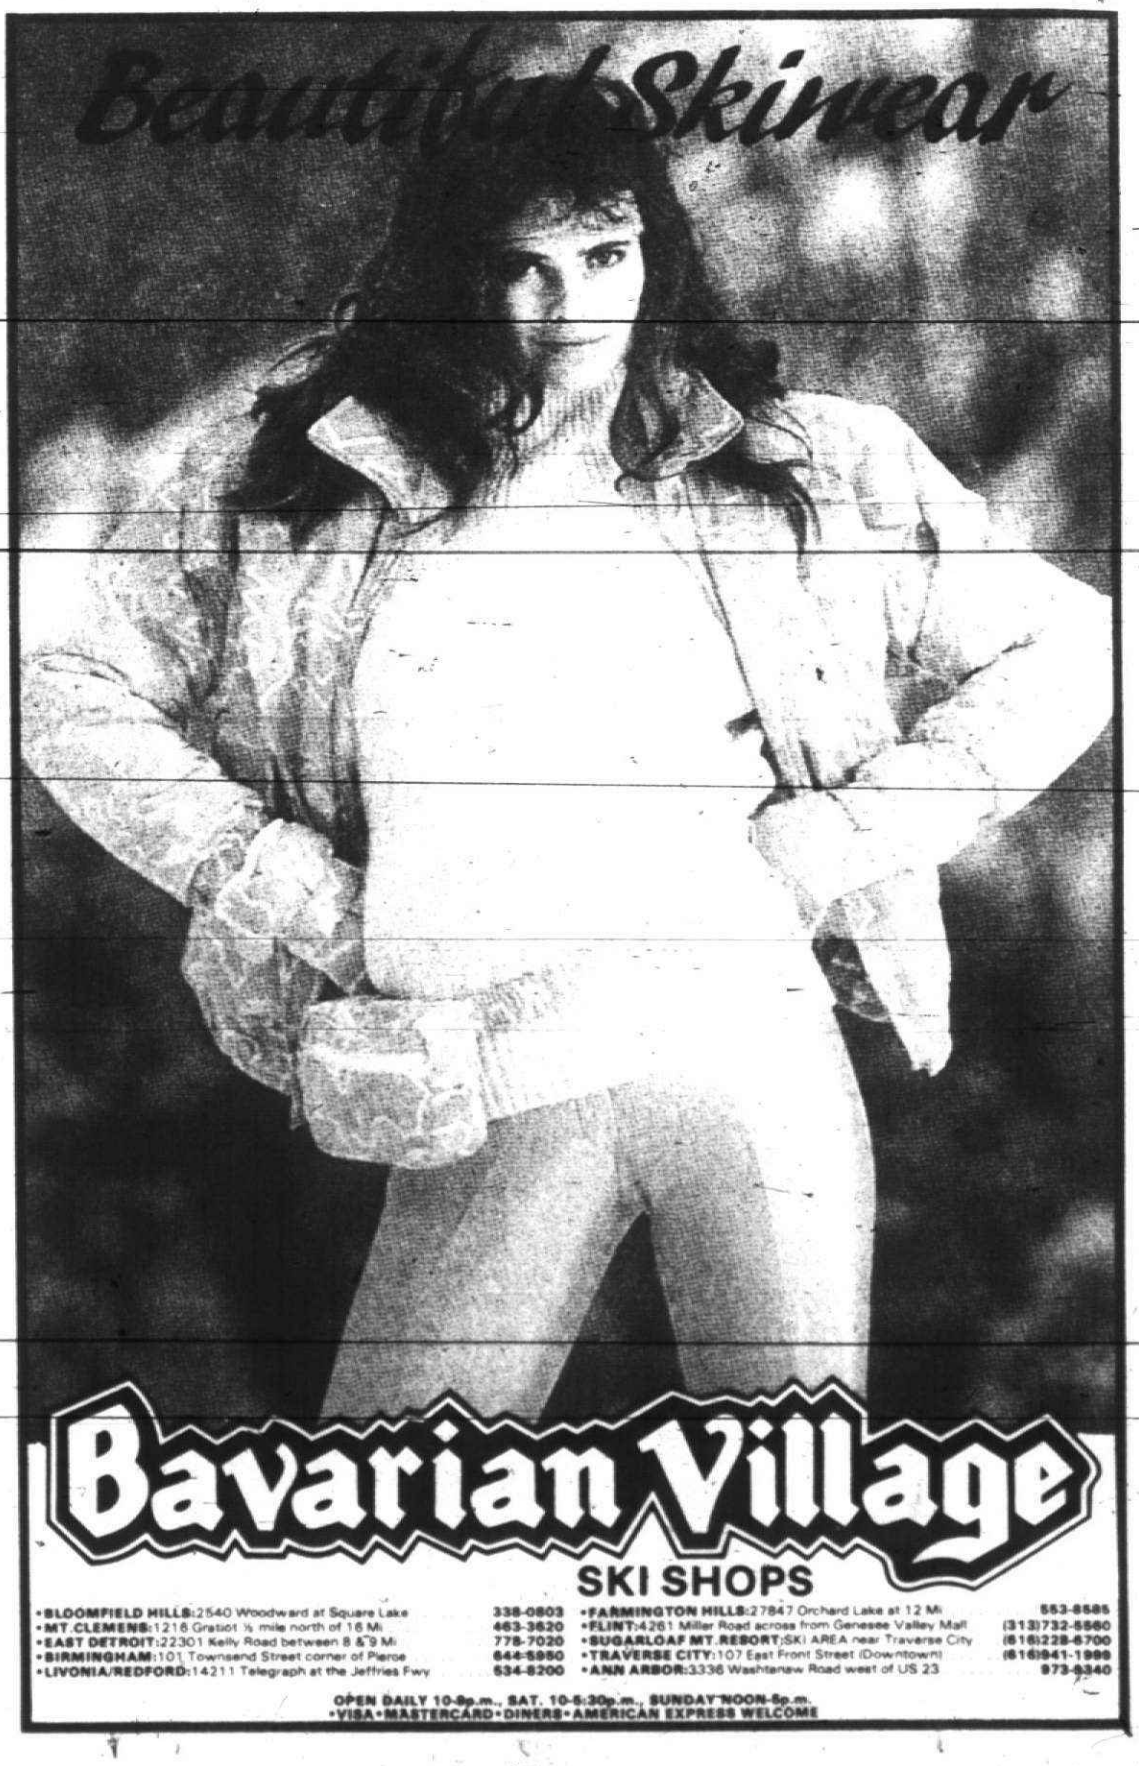

"They are looking to become competitive in a world market. They want minority companies to be a part of it," said Munoz.

IN RETURN, they ask minority suppliers to scout around for other minority developers "to see what we can do to help each other."

"It's been rewarding, difficult growth. I don't know of any other female in the screw machine industry. I think Ford has accepted me as a promising corporation to give them a competitive quality part. It's a good feeling. They are doing their utmost to help."

She describes Renaldo Jensen, manager of the Ford minority supplier program, as "dynamic and very committed. Policy made at the top really funnels down.

"They are willing to impart their knowledge. You can't ask for more than that," she said.

A better idea: Ford helps minority suppliers

you look at that, we are very dependent on suppliers. We must work closely with them. They are our lifeblood."

Ford recognized the economic opportunity in the minority sector in the late 1970s, but found these suppliers, primarily black, Hispanic, American Indian and Asian, weren't equipped to grow and change with industry needs.

In 1984, the vice president of truck operations commissioned a task force of general managers and directors to develop a minority supplier program and the Building Excellent Suppliers Together (BEST) program was born.

"The BEST program is now institutionalized at Ford," Jensen said. "In 1986, $3.9 billion was spent with outside suppliers. We asked the buying community at Ford to set a goal with the minority supplier. By 1990, it's 2 percent or $300 million. In 1987, $757 million will be spent with minority suppliers."

ALL ARE CULLED from Ford's North American Operations and many are based in the Detroit area, including Bing Steel, Detroit; Regal Plastics, Roseville; Jones Transfer Trucking, Monroe; O.J. Transfer, Pontiac; Carmen Munoz Machine Products, Livonia; and Barfield Manufacturing of Ypsilanti.

There's also Diversified Chemical Technology of Detroit; Gilreath Manufacturing of Howell; Aguirre's Mexican Industries, Detroit; and Gonzales Design Engineering of Madison Heights.

Each does $8 million to $15 million in business annually with Ford.

We have a classification of suppliers called Key One who meet the highest standard of excellence," Jensen said. "One minority supplier, Custom Molders, a plastics firm in Durham, N.C., has achieved this rank."

The BEST committee has grown to 18 members who meet once per quarter. Another committee focuses on certification and meets monthly. Jensen chairs both.

Certification criteria includes making sure the recipient is a bona fide minority, owning and operating 51 percent of a business producing a part or service Ford is interested in buying. Ford deals with over 600 certified minority suppliers now.

"And we don't deal with a broker who buys over the phone without taking title to the product," Jensen added.

ALSO REGULATING the minority-minded program are commodity councils, which oversee actual purchasing in seven areas — construction, transportation, plastics, machining, stamping parts, electro mechanical components, and industrial materials.

Coordination specialists target minority suppliers who manifest, or display, the greatest potential for growth.

"There's two approaches," Jensen said. "We have $300 million plus a year with minority suppliers. We could contract with several small minority suppliers or target those who have manifested growth. We feel with (the larger suppliers) we can accelerate their growth to reach the $300 million much more quickly."

On the financial end, Ford provides minority suppliers who qualify with attractive loans (one or two percentage rates below prime for five-year terms) for new equipment, business growth or acquisitions. Jensen sits on the Minority Enterprise Small Business Investment Corporation (MESBIC) board which oversees these loan arrangements.

A resource center provides consultation for management — "anything we feel could support (minority suppliers) growth successfully.

Advertising agencies buying public relations firms

a few years. He thinks this is happening because "one of the problems in an ad agency, as opposed to, say, an accounting firm, is the output of creative work. It's very hard to balance cost efficiency while striving toward creative excellence."

FRANCO SAID dealing with public relations and advertising "is dealing with different animals."

"The public relations dollar is 100 cents on the dollar. In advertising, 85 cents goes to pay for the service they sell, and they have to pay all their help on the remaining 15 cents," he said.

Both Franco and Butcher cited other reasons not as obvious and unrelated to finances as to why their firms linked with others. Butcher said Shandwick "looks for firms with special strengths, and we're very strong in automotive and public affairs capabilities." Franco said, "Our PR pros deal at the very top of client companies, something that doesn't necessarily take place with an advertising agency."

But not all PR firms or ad agencies are being lured by the enticements of merging with other companies. "It isn't that we haven't had offers. The world seems to be shopping for PR firms," said Bev Beltaire, president of PR Associates. "I listen, but truly, we don't feel that we're ready. we don't see a need for it, and we're very successful as we are now."

Marilyn Barnett, president and chief executive officer of Mars Advertising, echoes Beltaire's sentiments. "No, we're not about to merge," she said. "A merger is not really good for the client. They might get more resources in a merger, but an agency is comprised of people. More doesn't necessarily mean better."

More growth topic for small businesses

Small- to medium-sized businesses interested in acquiring the tools to achieve long-term growth may attend a conference Friday, Oct. 16, presented by Oakland Community College, Highland Lakes campus, Union Lake.

Called "Beyond the Beginning — Growth Strategies for the Going Concern," it is co-sponsored by the Council of Chambers of Commerce of Oakland County and the Oakland County Chamber of Commerce and is geared to fulfilling education, information and networking needs of established businesses. The format includes workshops and roundtable discussions.

THAT'S THE word from Carol Lubin, assistant coordinator of community services at OCC's Highland Lakes campus.

"We wanted to develop a conference that the already advanced business enterprise could benefit from," she said. "As firms achieve success, maintaining that success over the long term requires new ideas and new ways of doing things. This year's conference brings together the best of the tri-county area's business community to meet and exchange information in accomplishing this objective."

A HIGHLIGHT of the conference is the "Entrepreneurial Forum," featuring Murray Pitt of Murray's Discount Auto Parts, Leonard Daitch of Bulk International, Gerald Haynes of Gerald's Hair Salons and Alan Teitel of Teitel's Brokerage.

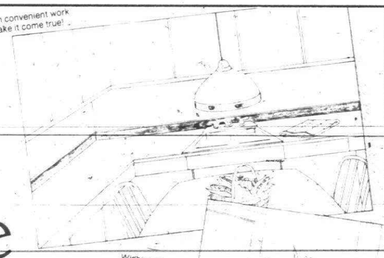

"Ask the Expert" roundtable discussion sessions focus on such businesses as import/export, mail order, construction, health care and home-based industries.

Independent business advocacy groups will also be represented at the conference.

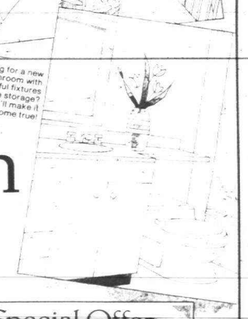

MARY DIPAOLO will be the opening speaker. She is owner of MarkeTrends and producer and host of the cable television series "Focus: Small Business." Judith R. Trepeck, Michigan's 1987 U.S. Small Business Accounting Advocate, will close the conference.

Fee is $75, which includes a reference manual. To register, call Lubin at 360-3041 or 360-3082.

Iacocca stirring AMC into the Chrysler pot

Auto Talk by Dan McCosh makes its debut in today's edition. A veteran of 15 years covering the auto industry, McCosh will provide a behind-the-scenes look at the Big Three and their foreign competitors. A former business and community editor with Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, McCosh currently is the auto editor of Popular Science magazine.

The rumor at Chrysler today is that the only guy who had the nerve to ask Lee Iacocca "Why do you want to buy AMC?" got sent to Mexico. But the question persists, both inside and outside Chrysler.

In fact, Iacocca is starting to look like a dog whose hobby is chasing cars, who finally caught one, and now has to figure out what to do with it.

There's a pretty strong argument that AMC more than any other company was run over by Chrysler's comeback. In fact, AMC was standing in line for government assistance alongside Chrysler when Renault appeared as a stockholder-cum-savior. Both companies worked hard at making the regular guy's car — shirtsleeve bargains in the real world out there beyond the yuppie.

BUT WHEN Renault announced its takeover of AMC, the French executives stood on one side of the stage in dark wool, with AMC types in plaid sports coats. Anyone could see it was not going to be an easy mix of corporate cultures.

Before the new guys could straighten the seams on their pants, Chrysler was taking over the market for economy cars, eschewing the California yuppie but not leaving much room for AMC in middle America.

The French executives at Renault never could quite understand the real soul of AMC. The Renault engineering that went into the AMC cars during the time Renault held controlling interest of the company was superior in many ways to the old cars, but somehow came out an embarrassed second best to the Japanese imports.

REAL AMC cars always had a kind of bravado, an outrageous sense of style. Like the Gucci interior for the Concord wagon, with green seats and a bright orange stripe down the middle. And the Levi Jeep, with the copper rivets on the seat. Or the Gremlin, when AMC decided to make a subcompact by deleting a larger car's trunk. You could back it against a wall and tell people the other half of the car was on the other side.

Early AMC cars terrified mothers with the introduction of the reclining seat and embarrassed a generation of car-hip teens (Jeez, Dad, a Marlin?).

AMC's biggest success, the Jeep, struck deep into the heart of irrational marketing, purchased in large numbers by suburbanites harboring safari fantasies who rarely got into terrain more rugged than the drive-in lane at Taco Bell.

BUT THE ISSUE at hand for Chrysler today is melding AMC into its eclectic mix of minivans, Maseratis, squad cars and pickup trucks. The game plan so far: we understand, goes something like this.

The Eagle badge (described as looking "something like the thing on Superman's chest," by a Chrysler insider) forms the nucleus of a division that is expected to latch onto the yuppie Jeep buyer and sell him her something kind of foreign and upscale as well, like the Premier, made in Canada, or the Medallion, made in France — which will gradually absorb Chrysler-built engines and other underpinnings.

This is based on the observation that most Jeep owners are pretty rich, in the same frame of mind as the women reading the New Yorker who buy highly stylized mechanic's suits.

Chrysler is dropping AMC's pickup trucks in lieu of its own. The ties with Renault aren't severed. Renault still wants to sell Jeeps in France and it will supply cars and parts for five years or so to Chrysler.

IT'S EASY to lose track of the AMC strategy in the midst of Chrysler's other international dalliances. The joint venture between Chrysler and Mitsubishi called Diamond Star Motors soon will make a two-door coupe in Indiana that will be sold in Plymouth dealerships.

And last month, Iacocca himself launched Chrysler's drive into West Germany, where customers get a three-year all-parts warranty, but no cheek.

Pulling all this together could be interesting. What the folks at Chrysler are good at is financial cleanup. Reworking AMC must seem like something more like what they are used to than trying to out-engineer Honda.

But nothing is certain in the auto business. It's worth remembering that the father of the Mustang also authorized the Edsel. Limousine tarter today that's a mini-condition. Paper.

Here are 3 ways to give to charity, cut your tax bill finances and you

Sid Mittra

In this column we will present three ways of maximizing benefits from gift giving.

Capital Gains

The law states that gifts of property that has risen in value will be deductible at full fair market value only if it has been held over six months. This is in contrast to the gains on property sale, which are taxed at ordinary tax rates (28 percent in 1987) regardless of how long it was held. For example:

Assume five months ago Dr. Jones bought 100 shares of ABC Company at $10 a share and the stock is selling for $15. If Jones contributes the stock to charity at this time, he will be allowed to deduct only $1,000, which is his cost basis. However, if he waits for another month (six month holding period) and the stock is still selling for $15, he would be allowed to deduct $1,500, which is the fair market value of the stock.

Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT)

Under the new Tax Law all gifts to charity are not tax preference items. It is only the appreciation that is allowed as a charitable deduction for a given year that is counted as a preference item for that year. That's why careful planning can significantly reduce the AMT's tax bite.

Say Betty Jones bought a stock for $60,000 and it has appreciated to $100,000. In this case, only $40,000 of appreciation in the stock is a preference item, to be included in the calculation of AMT.

Now here is the good news. In figuring out how much tax preference she has to report this year, Betty is allowed to give her $60,000 worth of stock before she has to give away the appreciated value of $40,000, which is a preference item. So, in this case if she wishes to give a gift of $100,000 over a five year period, she will not have to report any tax preference item until the fourth year — deduction for $100,000 gift

1	$20,000 (no tax preference)
2	$20,000 (no tax preference)
3	$20,000 (no tax preference)
4	$20,000 appreciation — tax preference
5	$20,000 appreciation — tax preference

Life Insurance

Life insurance can be used in many creative ways as the basis for gift giving. Let's talk about Mr. Dillon, 60, who wishes to make a large gift of $150,000 as well as provide for his grandchildren. So he makes a charitable gift of $150,000 cash and saves $57,750 (marginal tax bracket of 38.5 percent) in taxes. He uses the tax savings of $57,750 to buy a $160,000 single premium life insurance policy and sets it up in such a way as to allow the premium to be sheltered from federal gift tax.

The bottom line of this simple technique is as follows:

- The charity receives $150,000 in cash right away.
- At no extra cost Dillon owns a $160,000 life insurance policy.
- Dillon's grandchildren would receive much larger estate upon Dillon's death because the premium is sheltered from federal gift tax.
- During Dillon's lifetime grandchildren will have access to tax-free money for education.

Rules concerning charitable contributions are complex. Consult your financial planner before making the actual move.

Franchise may be good, but nothing is sure

Mary DiPaolo

When it comes to buying a franchise as a new business, after the principle of caveat emptor — let the buyer beware — should serve as a general rule before making any decisions.

Didn't get that wrong. Buying a franchise may represent the smartest business decision you'll ever make, long-term success-wise. Business Administration statistics indicate that franchisees have a 75% chance of success over the first five years of operation. With those kinds of odds of success, it's no wonder why new business owners are choosing this option "for the long term."

Hence the appeal of franchising. Typically, franchises are complete operating systems that offer total franchisee support through all stages — starting up and managing the business. But just like marriage the success of a relationship between the two parties involved hinges, to some degree, on mutual understanding of success and everything it entails.

According to Robert Kushell, president of Franchise Learning and Consulting Center of Oak Grove, Mo., "buying a franchise doesn't guarantee success as a new business owner. Many franchisees are disappointed by success stories written about people in franchising — some of which are true. But they also are very unrealistic about what their responsibilities are, how hard they have to work, how programmable they must be. Nor do they really probe to find out whether the franchiser has demonstrated with other franchisees that he shares their philosophy."

Kushell adds that the boom occurring within the franchising industry has opened the way for franchisers interested only in selling units, rather than working with franchisees to build businesses. As a result, the franchisee who doesn't do his homework beforehand may end up in a relationship that benefits one but not the other.

Ernie White, owner of Comprehensive Accounting Services, a Livonia-based accounting services franchise, agrees. "If you know what you're looking for before entering into an agreement with any franchiser, you won't be setting yourself up for disappointment later on."

In White's situation, buying into his franchise met a set of specific needs. "The database system the company developed to handle client accounts is superior," White said. "After seeing what others had to offer, I knew Comprehensive would not only meet but exceed my expectations as a source of franchiser support."

Before buying a franchise, it recommended that potential franchisees contact others already involved in the same franchiser/franchisee relationship under consideration. Next week, we will discuss franchising from the potential franchiser perspective.

Mary DiPaolo is the owner of MarkeTrends, a Farmington Hills-based business consulting firm. She is also producer and host of the cable television series "Focus: The Small Business Environment."

Theater groups offering variety for new season

By Victoria Diaz
special writer

The curtain is going up on the local community theater scene for the 1987-88 season.

Mark your calendars and prepare for weekend entertainment geared toward almost every taste, from now until next May. The price is right, the theaters are just around the corner, and where else can you see your next-door neighbor in a Neil Simon play, or watch your favorite uncle star in a Stephen Sondheim musical?

Here's what playgoers in the Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and Wayne-Westland areas can look forward to this year. Curtain times are at 8 p.m. unless otherwise noted.

● Spotlight Players began its season last weekend with performances of Harry Segall's comedy, "Heaven Can Wait," which continues its run Friday and Saturday at John Glenn High School Auditorium in Westland. Other productions coming up include "Alone Together," a contemporary comedy-drama centering on an older married couple whose children have left home, and who are looking forward to some time "alone together" after many years of family togetherness. Then, the fun — and the surprises — begin. "Alone Together" is scheduled tentatively for Feb. 5-6, 12-13.

Scheduled to conclude the Spotlight Players 1987-88 season on April 29-30 and May 6-7 is the popular "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

According to publicist Karen Mosti, Spotlight Players also may offer an evening of one-acts sometime in March. For further information, call 459-7672.

● Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford will kick off its 34th season on Friday, with John Ford Noonan's "A Coupla White Chicks Sitting Around Talking," a kitchen comedy centering on the zany relationship between two women — Maud, a contemporary suburbanite from Westchester County, N.Y. and the other, her new neighbor, just in from the Lone Star State, who won't get out of her house. Performances continue Saturday, and Oct. 9-10, 16-17.

Beginning Friday, Nov. 20, the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford will offer Stephen Sondheim's Tony-award-winning "A Little Night Music." Action of the musical, set in the 19th century, takes place over a weekend in the country. The plot deals with the escapades of a middle-aged lawyer, his teenaged bride, his mistress, his mistress' lover, and his mistress' memorable mother, one Mme. Armfelt. "A Little Night Music" will be presented Nov. 20-21, 27-29, and Dec. 4-6.

"Getting Out," a drama by young playwright Marsha Norman, is planned for the TGLR stage in February. "Getting Out," a critically acclaimed off-Broadway production, was Norman's first play. It probes the mind and emotions of a woman just released from prison, who is trying to make a life for herself in normal society. Playdates are Feb. 12-13, 19-20, 26-27.

Concluding the season on April 22-23, 29-30 and May 6-7 will be Jonathan Reynolds' "Geniuses." Described by the New York Times as "an insidious act of movie criticism (that) skewers deal-makers, agents, and all the other satraps who overdose on self-importance," the contemporary farce takes place in and around a remote movie set in a Philippine jungle.

All performances will be at the TGLR playhouse, 15138 Beech-Daly Road. For reservations, call 522-8057.

● At Livonia's relatively new Trinity House Theatre (Six Mile Road and I-275), the season opens Friday with an offering of three one-act plays. Gary Brda's "One More Show Before You Go," a drama centering on a young, star-struck girl and her reaction to the untimely death of Marilyn Monroe, is scheduled to start that evening, followed by Harold Pinter's well-known British story, "Dumbwaiter," and Ann Gerstenberg's comedy of manners, "Overtones." Performances are scheduled for Oct. 9-10, 16-18, 23-25.

If you don't think there are any possibilities for humor in the world of Job, go and see "God's Favorite," Neil Simon's comedy based on that seemingly unlikely subject. It will debut Nov. 20 at Trinity House and continue Nov. 21, 27-29, and Dec. 4-6, 11-12.

Susan Brown's child-centered drama, "Speak No Evil," is scheduled for Feb. 26-27 and March 4-6, 11-13. The season will conclude with Paul Patton's upbeat, nostalgic musical, "Junior High," with performances on April 22-23, 29-30 and May 1, 6-7, 13-15, 20-21.

Sunday matinees are at 3 (no evening performances on Sundays). Call 4640-6302.

● Coming up at the Plymouth Theatre Guild is "Second Time Around," which will start the season for that group Nov. 6, with additional performances Nov. 7, 20-21. A comedy by Henry Denker, "Second Time Around" is the story of two elderly lovers who move in together to save on their Social Security and soon find that not everybody — especially their children — approves the idea.

Anita Sarko of Detroit, who has been called queen of the DJs in New York, will return to her hometown to spin records for dancing at a benefit party called New York Lifestyles '87. She offers her Music Fantasy from the Big Apple's hottest club, the Palladium.

DJ conquers Big Apple

By Chuck Moss
special writer

THE BACKDROP will be pure Big Apple when Town & Country Interiors in Bloomfield Hills holds its March of Dimes benefit Wednesday.

Furnishings, food and fashions will approximate New York. However, when Detroit native Anita Sarko hits the podium to spin the tunes, it won't be ersatz but mainline Manhattan. New York's queen of the disc jockeys? You're looking at her.

"I don't play to the crowd. People come to hear my taste. I'm not a juke box."

Now that's attitude! Hardly less daunting is her answering machine: "At the sound of the beep, tell me why I should want to talk to you." Whew!

But once on the line, Sarko is fluent, engaging, down to earth and possessed of a — dare it be said? — Midwestern charm. She has been called everything from a celebrity DJ to "Our Lady of Perpetual Sound." An acknowledged celebrity in her own right, Sarko is the reigning empress of the New York club scene. That's a long way from Sherwood Forest and Mumford High.

"CELEBRITY JUST means I was in the right place at the right time," she said.

A Michigan State University alum, Sarko left Detroit to attend law school in Georgia, got married, figured law was for the birds and answered an ad for a Georgia radio station. Within two weeks she was on the air. The time was the late '70s, and Sarko wowed the Southern airwaves with new sounds.

"Then I went up to New York for a visit. The B-52s — they're Georgia kids — said, 'You gotta stop by the Mudd Club.' I did, heard the DJ and told the manager I could do better, and came up to the big city cold, figuring I'd get a job and a place."

She laughs, her trademark throaty chuckle. "I was so dumb I didn't know you just didn't do that."

Sarko started spinning for Mudd Then, "When everyone got tired of Studio 54, they all came here. There I was, new in town, and suddenly I'm working the hottest club in New York. Now is that timing?"

Sarko doesn't content herself with spinning club platters. She has co-hosted the No Entiendies avant-garde cabaret, which gave Madonna and the Beastie Boys their start. "The Beasties were my little 14-year-olds, hanging around the club. They're really wonderful kids! Plus, she writes a music column for the newspaper NY Talk.

In addition, Sarko's fame in ambiance engineering has led to world-wide demand for her talents.

"I do fashion shows, galleries. I was taken to Japan — Tokyo — and I put on a tour of clubs in Italy recently."

ALTHOUGH SARKO is startlingly nonchalant about her job, her voice soon grows determined.

"Basically, I'm a DJ. But my approach is not like others. I am not a juke box.

"I'd describe it as being mood-oriented, walking the line between self-indulgent and commercialist. But I need people to create a mood. I'll just walk in and start throwing things out. Some DJs will have their playlists all worked out in advance — not me. You have to be totally open to anything you feel from an audience. I look at clothing. I read the people."

She laughs again. "In eight years, you learn it. But it depends what I see. If I get nothing back from my audience, I can't give."

A typical Sarko night might feature big-band as well as avant-garde. Motown and the latest New York edge sounds. She's planning to bring 100-200 records to the Town & Country show alone. Does she own all those records?

That's like asking a plumber if he owns his wrench.

And how do you get to be a celebrity DJ?

"You become enough of a brat! Then she backpedals. "I was in the right place at the right time. I dress rather eccentrically — Victorian Edwardian, big hats. They don't know what to make of me. New York has this open-arms attitude of show me. If you can strike the right chord, you're accepted."

What is the right chord? It has to do with humor.

Anyone interested in hearing the Detroit native who conquered New York is welcome to hit the Town & Country Interiors benefit party for the March of Dimes. Cost is $35 per person, starting at 7 p.m. Its theme is New York Lifestyles '87.

Sarko left Detroit to attend law school in Georgia, got married, figured law was for the birds, and answered an ad for a Georgia radio station. Within two weeks, she was on the air.

'Heaven Can Wait' grows tired

Performances of the Spotlight Players production of "Heaven Can Wait" continue through Saturday at John Glenn High School auditorium in Westland. For ticket information call 459-7672.

Victoria Diaz

By Victoria Diaz
special writer

Harry Segall's fanciful comedy, "Heaven Can Wait" has been around for a long time. Made into a movie at least twice, and probably performed billions and billions of times on the stage by now, perhaps it's beginning to get a little tired.

Maybe that helps to explain why it seems so lackluster and uninspired, as currently presented by the Spotlight Players of Wayne-Westland.

"Heaven Can Wait" deals with the trials and tribulations of a young prizefighter, Joe Templeton, who dies (sort of) in a plane crash, then gains the opportunity to put heaven on hold for 60 more years by becoming, first, an aging millionaire and then another prizefighter. If that sounds confusing to you, that's because it is. But confusion is not the problem in this version of "Heaven Can Wait."

"The problem here is a lack of freshness and spirit, evident in several facets of this production directed by Tobin Hissong, but especially in the stale sets and the labored, heavy-handed performances of too many players.

MARK SCHWENKEL as Joe Pendleton seems to work hard and should receive some applause simply for learning all those lines (he's onstage almost constantly throughout the entire two-hour play).

Physically, Schwenkel is pretty well-cast (picture actor Rod Steiger 30 years younger), and he's fairly consistent with the "tough guy" accent he's chosen to go with. Also, he has enough poise onstage to handle a couple of opening night snafus with some nice aplomb.

But he never quite manages to shake his self-consciousness onstage, and never really infuses his character with that spark of spontaneity needed to make him convincing and appealing. In addition, Schwenkel has a curious, persistent tendency not to make enough eye contact with others onstage, which gives his portrayal of the supposedly warmhearted pugilist a distracting, insular quality.

Joseph Haynes, cast as Mr. Jordan, the Almighty's No. 1 gatekeeper, is also disappointing. Though Haynes is usually a commendable actor, his Mr. Jordan, complete with silvered pompadour, bright red lipstick and a voice he seems to love listening to, misses the mark. At times, his character seems ludicrous — at other times, just faintly contemptuous of the whole situation.

In the role of the dastardly Julia Farnsworth, Carla Lenhoff affects some pretty fair Bette Davis-type pacing, head-tossing and cigarette-smoking. Maybe she could be a delightful villainess. It's hard to tell. Ultimately, though, her character emerges as merely bored, impatient and overly cliched. Lenhoff's rhinestones sparkle just a bit more than does her performance most of the time.

OTHER PLAYERS don't fare much better, although Anne Grobosky, playing a heavenly emissary new to the business, has her moments now and then, as does Joel Fabian in the role of an inspector trying to get to the bottom of the crazy, mixed-up happenings. (Did any comedies written circa 1940 not include at least one inspector in the cast of characters?) Playing Joe Templeton's tough-talking, tattooed manager, Tom Morgan also adds a bright spot here and there.

According to the playbill, "Heaven Can Wait" is set in 1944. It's quickly apparent in this production, though, from the '80s costumes and the references to recent dates and present-day notables, that attempts have been made at updating the play. Too bad something couldn't be done about the set, which appears to be as tired as the production.

An old-fashioned melodrama, "The Sound of Murder," will be the PTG offering Feb. 5-6, 12-13. Written by William Fairchild, "The Sound of Murder" revolves around a writer of children's stories (who happens to be a sadist in his spare time), his love-starved wife, her lover and their foolproof plan to do away with the writer.

"Dining Room" will conclude the PTG season May 6-7, 13-14. Set in a present-day dining room, the play is actually a mosaic of scenes which combine to create a portrait of the upper middle-class. Individual actors portray a variety of characters.

All performances are at Plymouth Central Middle School, Church and Main streets. For ticket information, call 453-7505.

(Garden City Civic Theatre has suspended production for the 1987-88 season. According to former publicist Marie Mack, the group has no plans for reorganization.)

review

By Rob McCabe
special writer

"Fascinatin' Rhythms," a compilation of songs from the world of theater and films, provides a fun-filled evening guaranteed to please.

The Novi Hilton and TAP Ltd.'s second production of Chicago-style cabaret theater is directed by TAP's founder, Michael J. Kliser. "Rhythms" features a quartet of excellent performers who from the very start grab you and won't let go until the finale.

Vocal performers Rick Ingram, Nick Beasanski and Nancy Koltin, along with singer/accompanist "Rebecca," show the audience how to have fun by involving them in sing-alongs and "Name That Tune" types of games. The audience participation adds to the intimacy already established by the small theater (it seats 100).

The 12-by-30-foot stage at first glance seems too small to hold a piano and three singers, but these performers are quite comfortable being up there. They also enjoy walking out into the audience, making the showgoers feel at home.

SINGER NANCY Koltin has a particular style that is not easily forgotten. She doesn't simply sing a song, she belts it out, making every note ring loud and clear. She is also quite a performer as she flirts and bats her eyes while strolling up and down the aisles, playing coquette with various male audience members. It is that kind of involvement that raises a simple singer to the status of musical performer.

Rick Ingram has a certain verve and flair that brings to mind such notable performers as Ben Vereen and Gregory Hines. His tenor voice rings loud and clear in the song "I Can See It," from the off-Broadway musical hit "The Fantasticks," and manages to work around the difficult machinations of "Money, from "Cabaret."

Nick Beasanski, while enthusiastic enough, seems to lack the vocal strength that is evident in both Koltin's and Ingram's performances. When singing a ballad, Beasanski's voice doesn't quite project the sound needed in the upper tenor range; his voice is barely audible. But when he sings "The Mickey Mouse Song," from the old TV series, and other upbeat songs, his strength shines through.

It is pianist Rebecca who deserves a special hand because of the extreme difficulty of accompanying these talented performers, which she does to perfection. Not one note is lost or blurred throughout the evening. Every one is succinct. Not only does she accompany on the piano, but she also sings.

The show is broken up into 10 different sections, with songs devoted to that many themes. What is particularly amazing about this production is all the tremendous energy the performers exude. They perform nonstop for 75 minutes.

"Fascinatin' Rhythm" continues to run for a six-week engagement until Saturday, Dec. 12.

Actors outstanding in 'Sunshine Boys'

The Birmingham Village Players production of "The Sunshine Boys" by Neil Simon continues through Saturday at the playhouse in Birmingham. For ticket information call 644-2075 any time.

Exceptionally fine performances mark the Birmingham Village Players' "The Sunshine Boys," the production that kicks off its 65th season.
The Neil Simon comedy is the story of an old vaudeville comedy team, Lewis and Clark (Phil Whelan and Dike Dwelley), who split up 11 years ago and haven't spoken since. Now they have a chance to reunite for one last performance, a comic legacy to younger generations. Old age and years of resentment have taken their toll, leaving the two cantankerous old men to a battle of wits.
From the moment he first shuttles across the stage in raggedy slippers — to answer the phone when it's the tea kettle that's whistling — Dwelley completely endears himself to the audience. Though he can be maddeningly stubborn and forgetful; Dwelley makes it clear there's plenty of the wily fox left in Willie Clark.
Unwilling to accept retirement, Dwelley's Clark has slipped into the role of curmudgeon with great relish. He amuses himself plotting revenge against Lewis, deliberately aggravating his devoted nephew, Ben (James Fuller), or baiting his nurse (Phyllis Livingstone).
WHELAN'S LEWIS at first appears all mild manners and good intentions. Soon, however, there surfaces the annoying little habits that drove Clark nuts for their 43-year partnership.
Looking wizened and arthritic, Whelan contrasts nicely with the lanky and languid Dwelley. Both actors have flawless delivery and imbue their characters with credibility and dignity as well as humor.
Fuller is fine as Ben, practically glowing with sincere affection and concern for the quarrelsome oldsters. Livingstone is pleasingly sassy as the registered nurse, while Diane Evans is the perfect blond bombshell nurse in the vaudeville skit. In a tiny role, Michael Block is a strong presence as the harassed stage manager.
Under very capable director Dee Dwelley, "The Sunshine Boys" is warmhearted, nostalgic, gentle comedy.
The set for Clark's one-room apartment in an old hotel looks appropriately down-at-the-heels. The stage crew was noisy and slow at Saturday night's performance, and a missed lighting cue between scenes highlighted the awkwardness.

Barbara Michals teaches high school English and journalism in Southfield. A theater critic for the last 13 years, she is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

It's so easy to go to Windsor
And so much fun!
Just get in your car and head for the bridge or the tunnel to Canada. And as soon as you're there, you're in Windsor! If you don't have a car, take your yacht—because there's lots of places to dock a boat on the other side.
Go for a drive along the river. You'll find 16 miles of riverfront where the best view of Detroit is from Windsor. Think of all the things you'll find along the way: lovely street flies, flower parks and little harbors full of fishing boats. You won't find a waterfront like it anywhere else in the country.
If you like sidewalk cafes, tree-lined boulevards and a lively, bustling city, you'll like Windsor. It's great for lunch or dinner, with places like TWO's Other Place and the Hilton Park Terrace. You can walk anywhere you want to downtown, then get in your car and go shopping or sightseeing.
Goto Windsor for the nightlife. There's rock and roll, Jazz. And the Windsor Symphony. If you're looking for a little night music, you've come to the right place. Windsor.
Enjoy shopping and enjoy saving, where your money's worth much more. At Devonshire Mall, you shop where Canadians shop—at 150 stores just 10 minutes from downtown Windsor. Save on housewares, clothing, jewelry, gifts, cameras and sporting goods.
There's another country just a mile away from Detroit. And another city. Windsor. A blend of European charm, friendly people and plenty to see and do. It could be just the change of scene you need, and it's only minutes away.
Let's go to Windsor!

IT COSTS A LOT TO SAY YES TO THE FORGOTTEN.
BUT WE CAN'T AFFORD TO SAY NO.
Many of the elderly have earned a unique status in today's society. They're ignored. Less capable of independence, they have it forced upon them. To help them live with dignity, the United Foundation Torch Drive supports 24 agencies that provide services to the elderly.
Last year, you helped fund these agencies with $11.5 million. This year, the need has grown. Your contributions must reach more of the elderly in need of home health care, social activity and food.
So please give more to the Torch Drive and help fund 153 health and human service agencies in the tri-county area. Agencies that not only help the elderly, but also help in the fight against heart disease, stroke, kidney disease, cancer, crime and much more. It costs a lot to say yes. But, when it comes to the status of our elders, we can't afford to say no. GIVE...FOR ALL THE GOOD YOU CAN DO.

Canton on winning side of close score for once

Plymouth Canton's soccer fortunes took a turn for the better Monday, but at the expense of another hard-luck team in North Farmington.

The Chiefs, who had lost four games by one-goal margins, had things go the other way in blanking the Raiders 1-0.

As it has in most games, Canton controlled play, according to coach Mike Morgan, and outshot the host team 26-8. But North goalie Roger Johnson was equal to the task on all but one occasion.

"I think you could tell" both teams had lost some close games, said Raiders coach Cathy Cole. She said the latest game "seemed to be an omen for the whole season.

"Both teams played their hearts out. It came down to the last few minutes, we left a person open and they capitalized on it. Unfortunately, it was Canton."

The Chiefs got the game's only goal on center-fullback Jim Hadde's header following a cross pass from Jerry Stanszel midway in the second half.

"That's one," Morgan said, meaning Canton needs more wins to balance the ledger.

Naturally, he and the Chiefs hope the victory will be the start of a strong finish.

"The state tournament is three weeks off," Morgan said. "We've got three league games left, and I think it's a good time. We might have turned the corner."

But the victory was costly for Canton. After scoring his goal, Hadde suffered a broken wrist, and forward Todd Nichols injured an ankle. Plus, center-halfback Rick Menary is sidelined by a knee injury.

Marty Adamian played the entire game in goal for the Chiefs, 3-4 in the Western Lakes and 4-7 overall, and earned his first shutout.

Despite the loss, Cole complimented the play of her sophomore goalie, Johnson.

"He's been doing a great job," she said. "We don't have an offensive threat, and the defense has been keeping us in games. Unfortunately, with that kind of pressure on the defense, they're going to slip one past eventually."

Al Riddock, Jeff Juliano, Brett Wills and Pete Keller also played well for the Raiders, 1-4 in the league and 2-6 overall, Cole said.

In games played last week, North defeated Walled Lake Western 3-0 and lost to Livonia Stevenson 8-0. Tim McMinn scored two goals and assisted on one by Keller. Todd Menko also had an assist. Kurt Will's three goals lifted Stevenson past the Raiders.

FARMINGTON 11, W.L. CENTRAL 0: The Falcons moved above .500 in league play with their shutout victory.

Farmington, 4-3-1 in the Western Lakes, was led by Joey Crowe's three-goal performance. Steve Lee and Pete Frauenheim had two goals and one- assist apiece, and Scott Seabolt added a goal and two assists.

Others to get into the act for the Falcons included Mike Gammerath and Scott Phillips (each with one goal and one assist), Tom Hanson, Mike Popyk, Tom Krupka and Mike Waker (one assist) and Chris Haas (one goal).

Farmington had a 15-5, shots-on-goal advantage in the first half, and it was 19-4 in the second.

Ex-area players hook up with Lions during strike football

By Marty Budner
staff writer

DARRYL ROGERS took a good glimpse as tight end Ron Wendt grabbed a pass across the middle of the field during Tuesday's Detroit Lions practice at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Defensive back coach Willie Shaw grabbed cornerback Steve Hirsch and offered a few words of advice. Over in the corner of the end zone, offensive line coach Bill Muir ordered Milt Carthens and his fellow linemen through a rigorous set of sprints.

Most Detroit Lions fans will recognize the coaches names. But the players are a different story.

Wendt, Hirsch and Carthens are three free-agent football players seeking a spot on the Lions roster for Sunday's National Football League game against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

While the NFL players remain on the picket line striking over the free-agency issue, NFL owners are determined to continue the season with or without their front-line stars. All 28 NFL teams are scheduled to play this weekend.

To do so, owners have filled their teams with pickup players referred to as "B Squads." The striking players call them "scabs."

WHATEVER THE designation, Hirsch, Carthens and Wendt hope to be in a Detroit Lions uniform Sunday even if their NFL careers consist of just one game.

Hirsch and Carthens, Pontiac residents, gained notoriety in 1979 when they turned up as members of the Bloomfield Hills Lahser High School football team after a Pontiac millage vote failed. They came over along with four other players and became collectively known as the Pontiac Knights — Lahser's nickname.

Hirsch went on to a stellar collegiate career at Northern Illinois University while Carthens wound up as a tight end at the University of Michigan. Both had brief experience in the Canadian Football League.

They now could find themselves as teammates again with the Detroit Lions.

"I'd love to play in the National Football League," said Hirsch, who had a try-out with the Minnesota Vikings in 1984 followed by a three-game stint in '85 with the Ottowa Rough Riders of the CFL. "I liked playing in the CFL, but there's no league like the NFL.

"I feel this is a good opportunity for the coach to get a better look at me. In training camp there are so many players the coaches really don't get a good look at you.

"But I understand, too, if the (NFL players') strike is over, that's it for me," he said. "I feel for the players, but at the same time I feel I'm not taking anything away from them. That's the bottom line. If any one of those guys came back I'd have to step aside for them."

CARTHENS CHECKED into the Lions camp on Tuesday a whopping 300 pounds — some 40 pounds over his college playing weight. He was working as a physical therapist at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital when the Lions contacted his agent, Mike MacDonald.

Carthens, who had a tryout with the Michigan Panthers in 1984, is hoping to make the team and fulfill a dream of playing professionally in his hometown.

"This is the first time I've ever tried out for an NFL team," said Carthens. "The exposure of playing in the Silverdome in front of your hometown fans would be great — even if it lasts for only one game."

Wendt, whose older brother Greg played basketball at the University of Detroit and later had a tryout with the Boston Celtics, figures practicing with the Lions beats "sitting around at home on my butt."

Wendt attended Catholic Central High School where he was a member of the Shamrock football team. He made the Eastern Michigan University football team as a walk-on and finished his Huron career with 37 receptions for 354 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Wendt, a youth counselor at the Washtenaw County Juvenile Center, first contacted the Lions when he heard about the strike.

"I figured what the heck, I'll give it my best shot. You never know until you try," he said. "I've got everything to gain and nothing to lose.

"Every football player dreams of playing in the NFL," he said. "I figured this was better than sitting at home on my butt. Actually, I went to an EMU game this year and started missing the game. I forgot how much fun it was."

Does he have any empathy for striking NFL players?

"Not one bit . . . not with all the money they make," he said. "I'd play it for the minimum salary because I love the game."

Wendt, Hircsh and Carthens would love it even more if they could become permanent members of the Detroit Lions professional football team.

Myrna Partrich

Dry skin means a lack of moisture

Dear Myrna: I have terribly dry skin. I exercise five times a week and probably sweat a quart of water each time. I always bathe after class. What can I do about this dry skin problem?

I know just how you feel. I also happen to have that dry, fragile skin. We must never neglect our skin. Unfortunately skin acts as a barometer for aging.

Exercise will benefit your skin from within.

The increase in blood circulation resulting from aerobic activity will bring nutrients to your skin. This will aid in skin-cell repair.

Don't worry about the quart of water you are sweating off. I'm assuming you replace this water deficit by drinking a quart after each class.

Dry skin means a lack of moisture, not a lack of oil. But you can't increase the amount of water in your skin by drinking more water. The water you drink does not lubricate your skin.

You say you take baths after each class. Staying in a bath for any relaxing period of time may strip away the covering of your skin, which helps to hold moisture.

Many people feel they should have to bathe after exercise. But why bathe? Why not shower? When showering, use lukewarm rather than hot water. Again, hot water removes more of the covering than luke-warm water.

Don't soap all over your body. If you are shampooing your hair, the rinsing of your hair will wash your body. If only showering, just soap your armpits and private areas. These are the only areas that produce odor.

Now, for the most important part.

As I previously stated, you want to add moisture to your skin. Your skin will lose the moisture you've just given it with a shower if you wipe yourself dry thoroughly.

Instead of a thorough wiping, just pat dry, leaving the moisture on your skin and add body oil everywhere to seal the moisture in. The skin will absorb the oil and moisture underneath leaving you a new, smooth, wonderful skin.

This method for fighting dry skin has been working for me. If your problem continues, you might want to see a skin doctor.

Beware, winter will be fast approaching and even dryer skin might be around the corner.

P.S. I hope you don't sun bathe!

OU netters doing well

In a one-week span, Oakland University's volleyball team has established itself.

Last week, the Lady Pioneers defeated Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference rival Grand Valley State, a team that was ranked nationally. They followed that with a strong showing in the Northern Kentucky University Invitational last weekend.

OU started the weekend off on a sour note, losing for only the second time this season. The Lady Pioneers were victims of the 12th-ranked team in the NAIA: University of Montavello (Ala.), 15-9, 15-10, 16-14.

But they bounced right back, winning their next two matches to finish second in the tournament. OU topped University of Indianapolis 8-15, 15-7, 15-9, 15-13, then followed with a 17-15, 15-5, 15-9 triumph over host team Northern Kentucky.

Senior Sue Lormin led the attack with 28 kills with nine errors in 63 attacks (.302 attack average) for the three matches. Tracey Jones added 24 kills with 10 errors in 59 attacks (.238), and 1 solo block and 22 block assists. Holly Hatcher also excelled blocking, collecting four solos and 15 assists.

OU is now 13-2 overall (2-0 in the GLIAC) and challenging for a national ranking. Should the Lady Pioneers emerge victorious this week, they'll have it. They host two more ranked teams, both GLIAC foes: Wayne State at 7 p.m. Thursday and Ferris State, the defending league champion, at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Tips to tracking wounded deer

Bill Parker

YOU'VE JUST TAKEN a shot and you know it was a hit. The weeks of scouting, practice shooting and blind building have paid off. The problem is, the deer didn't drop on the spot as in all the stories you've heard. Now the question of what to do enters your mind. As a licensed hunter it's your duty and responsibility to both yourself and the animal to find that deer.

Be patient. Don't start whooping and hollering and run over to the spot the deer was when you shot. You'll only spook the animal more than it already is.

The first thing you should have done was to observe the animal after the shot. Was it limping or staggering? Which direction did it run? Did it go a short distance and lie down? If so, don't run over to it. You'll only force it to run further. A wounded deer will run until its last breath if it feels it is still in danger. Also note the direction of travel. Was it headed for a nearby swamp or thicket?

IF YOU'VE WATCHED the animal run from sight you can walk quietly to the area and look for your arrow. You can learn a lot about where the deer was hit and how far it will run by looking at your arrow.

If the arrow is covered with light red, foamy blood you've undoubtedly hit it in the lungs. If the blood trail is in spurts, not a steady trail, it indicates a heart or artery shot. In either case the animal probably won't go more than 100 yards. Darker red blood could indicate a liver shot or possibly a hit in a hind or rear quarter. Clear, yellow or greenish fluids indicates a gut shot, and you should leave the animal alone for a few hours.

YOU SHOULD ALSO take notice of the weather. If snow or rain is in on the way you may want to start tracking a little sooner than normal, but only if absolutely necessary.

A deer hit in the vitals — heart, lung, liver — or through an artery will usually only run up to 100 yards. A gut shot deer, if pushed, may run a mile or more if it feels it's being tracked. The distance depends on the severity of the shot.

Take your time. Wait at least a half hour, an hour if you've got the time. Give the animal time to lie down and die. If it's your first deer you may want to get a hunting companion to help you find your quarry.

Once you've found a blood trail mark it well. Tie a handkerchief to a nearby limb or leave a hat on the spot. Try to follow the trail from the side. You don't want to walk on it and possibly cover up what little sign you may have.

If the trail takes you into an unfamiliar area of the woods, periodically look behind you to see what it will look like on your way out. Mark your trail if you wish to keep from getting lost. If you do get lost the thrill of the hunt will be tarnished by the anxiety of worrying how and when you'll get out of the woods. Plus, you don't want to drag the animal any unnecessary diatances.

Follow the trail but also watch ahead for the animal.

Keep your eyes peeled for hoof prints too, or turned up leaves and dirt where the animal has run.

Don't focus specifically on the ground. Blood can often be found on bushes, shrubs or branches.

IF THE TRAIL is light and hard to follow, you may want to mark it with small pieces of biodegradable toilet paper. When you find the animal you should go back and pick up the pieces.

Don't forget to keep track of the direction the animal is traveling. Did it veer off the trail toward a possible bedding area? Does it go over fallen trees and through thick shrubery or around them. If it takes the easy trail it is probably hit severely and your job may end soon.

If you lose the trail, look ahead in the direction the deer has been traveling and you may be able to pick it up again. If you come to the end of the trail and can't pick it up, start making small circles around the last spot of blood. Work into bigger circles until you pick it up again. This circling technique may also help you locate the original trail if you can't find it right away.

Above all, try to be as quiet as possible and don't be discouraged. Trailing is as important as scouting and shooting. And remember it's your duty to find the animal.

Rocks frustrated by Churchill, 1-0

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Livonia Churchill was not the right opponent for a Plymouth Salem soccer team trying to revive its offense.

The undefeated Chargers, 6-0-1, have allowed only two goals all season, and the host Rocks were no more successful than most have been at scoring on Churchill.

John Gentile notched the game's lone goal late in the first half Monday, and the Chargers made it stand up for a 1-0 victory over Salem in an important Western Lakes Activities Association contest.

"Our fullbacks played extremely well — all five that played back there," Chargers coach John Neff said. "And our goalie (Ted Lukiewski) held us in there.

"Obviously, it's a defensive game. But when you play four fullbacks and you're playing a good team like Salem, you're not going to get a lot of opportunities."

THE ROCKS had won four games by one-goal margins, but that pattern was reversed in what was an especially frustrating game for them to lose.

"It seems we let down once and they score," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "Then we press for the next 10 minutes and don't score.

"When we get (the goals) we don't need them," he said in reference to a recent 15-1 rout of Walled Lake Central. "But we break down in the last 10 yards against the good teams."

Churchill controlled play early, and Salem goalie Dave O'Malley had to come out of the goal to make an excellent save against Khaled Zeidan.

The Chargers eventually broke the deadlock with 3:57 left in the first half. Phil Todino centered the ball from the right corner to Gentile, who was racing toward the Salem goal and drilled a shot from close range.

"KHALED was one of the leading scorers in this league last year, so everybody pays a lot of attention to him," Neff said. "That makes it hard for him, but easier for the rest."

But the key for Churchill was its defense, led by Lukiewski and starting fullbacks Jim Chendes, Brady Ericson, Terry Flowers and Chris Speen.

If it was possible for either side to control the momentum in such a defense-dominated game, it eventually swung to the Rocks in the second half.

soccer

Lukiewski rushed out of the goal early in the half to nullify a 2-on-1 break, and he had to make saves on a shot from the left side, a free kick and a corner kick. Then, with less than two minutes remaining, he turned away a point-blank shot.

"I can't say enough about our goalie and fullbacks," Neff said. "Salem is a very good team; we were fortunate to capitalize on our opportunities.

"WHEN YOU play good teams, you run into good defenses, and you can't run those four- and five-goal games that are a luxury."

Johnson said he thought Salem outplayed the Chargers and had the Rocks' outshooting Churchill 10-5, which made his team's lack of scoring all the more puzzling.

"It's hard to put your finger on it when you control the game for 70 minutes and the other team scores in the other 10 and wins," he said.

The Rocks were ranked No. 10 in Class A going into the game, while Churchill was No. 2 behind Livonia Stevenson, another Western Lakes power whom the Chargers battled to a tie.

Salem plays host to Stevenson at 7 p.m. Monday, and its loss to Churchill makes a victory over the Spartans that much more crucial.

"Churchill is a good team," Johnson said. "I'm really proud that we played them so close.

"After tonight, I think (Churchill and Salem) are 1-2 (in the state) after Stevenson.

"I told the kids they could hold their heads high," he said. "They played their best; that's all you can do."

Chiefs fight off Raiders

STEVENSON 1, HARRISON 0: Short of winning the match, Farmington Harrison coach Glenn Bruehan couldn't have been more pleased by the way his Hawks played against the No. 1 team in the state.

Pete Galea, with an assist from Kurt Will, scored two minutes into the game, and Harrison held the Spartans scoreless the rest of the way.

"We played them real tough," Bruehan said. "I was real happy with the outcome.

"Defense has been our strong point this year. With two centerstrikers injured, we have to really work on defense. We have to be a defensive team, because we don't have much punch up front."

Harrison's Craig Bailey is sidelined with a knee injury, and Thierry Berjot suffered broken ribs in a recent game.

"We've always been a defensive team — and even more so without those two," Bruehan said.

Gary Wegner was outstanding in goal to hold a potent opponent to one score. The Hawks are 2-3-1 in the league, 6-3-1 overall.

Livonia ballclub wins invitational

The Livonia Y Hawks won the first National Invitational Soccer Tournament held last weekend at Oakland University.

The girls under 19 team, coached by Paul Dugan, captured five straight games en route to the title, outscoring the opposition 14-1.

In the final the Hawks defeated the Livonia Crusaders, 1-0, as Patricia Boyle and Jennifer Misaros combined for the game's only goal.

In the semifinals, the Hawks defeated Troy United, 3-1.

Dugan singled out the play of goalkeeper Brooke Gillespie along with defenders Chris Lamb, Rosemary Hally, Margaret Kopmeyer, Julie Stabnick and Sara Wasinger.

"We were a little thin on defense due to an injury to one of our key defenders, Lisa Yderstad, so I had to move players to positions they don't normally play," said the Hawks coach. "Julie (Stabnick) is normally a midfielder forward, but in this tournament she played defense much of the time and did an excellent job.

"Amy Trunk is the youngest player on the team, but in the final she played all three forward positions: center midfielder and stopper. During the final 10 minutes she was all over the field trying to protect our lone goal."

Rounding out the Hawks are Emily Riemer, Jenny Schuerman, Carrie Maier, Mary Pelloni, Yolanda Marino and Jodi Smalec.

THE LIVONIA Y WOLVES '77, coached by former Schoolcraft College all-America Rick Hamers, won their second tournament title of the year, capturing the boys under-13 championship with a 2-0 victory over LeVeck, S.C. in the NIT.

The Wolves also scored wins over the Farmington Falcons (6-0), Shelby-Utica Lazers (3-0) and the Birmingham Blazers (4-0).

Lions take pair of victories

The Plymouth-Canton Lions came away with junior varsity and varsity football victories Sunday in their games with the Romulus Flyers.

Paul Martinez scored two touchdowns and Mike Isbell the other as the JVs won 19-12. John Lahti scored the extra point.

Jon Paupore and Matt Kuzawinski scored touchdowns and Ron Horton both extra points in the varsity's 16-6 win.

The Lions freshmen were dealt a 12-0 setback. The freshman record stands at 0-1-2; the junior varsity 1-2-0 and the varsity 2-1-0.

The Lions play on the road next Sunday against the Westland Comets.

Observerland has 2 unbeatens

By Brad Emons and Dan O'Meara
staff writers

Heading into the fifth week of the high school football season, only two schools out of 20 remain undefeated in Observerland.

Farmington Harrison (4-0), although suffering a severe blow when it learned that starting tailback Rick Witte will be out for the season, remains the team to beat among area schools. (Witte broke his arm in last week's 31-15 win over Walled Lake Western.)

North Farmington (4-0) is a big surprise thus far and could be making a bid to meet Western Division favorite Harrison for the Western Lakes Activities Association crown in Week No. 8.

But the defensive-minded Raiders still must get past Walled Lake Central this weekend, Westland John Glenn (3-1) and Farmington before getting a crack at the title.

GLENN, state-ranked and the Lakes Division favorite, must battle back after being ambushed by Livonia Stevenson last week, 14-9. But the Rockets could face Harrison if they beat Plymouth Salem (3-1) and North on successive weekends.

In the Catholic League's Central Division, one of the most balanced races in years, appears to be a battle shaping between Birmingham Brother Rice (4-0), Warren DeLaSalle (3-1) and Redford Catholic Central (3-1). But the spoilers could be Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher, Harper Woods Notre Dame and Redford Bishop Borgess — all 2-2 and 0-1 in Division play.

Last week, the expert prognosticators tied for the third time in four weeks, both going 10-4. O'Meara is 44-15, while Emons is 43-16.

Here are the picks for Week No. 5:

FRIDAY GAMES
(all 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Clarenceville at Detroit Lutheran West (7 p.m.): Everybody got into the act last week in the Trojans' 55-18 romp over Hamtramck. West (2-2) is coming off an eight-point loss to Harper Woods Lutheran East. Greg Harris is a dangerous runner for West. Picks — West takes care of Clarenceville.

Redford Union at Garden City: The winner will ultimately avoid the basement of the Northwest Suburban League. Both are seeking their first wins and both have played a tough schedule. Picks — The coin, please. Emons takes RU. O'Meara gives the edge to the Panthers, too.

W.L. Western at Liv. Churchill: Western (1-3) caught Harrison last Friday on an "off night." But still lost 31-15. Churchill (2-2) muffed a few chances to beat Franklin last week. Picks — Churchill bounces back.

Liv. Franklin at Northville: The Patriots (2-2) have the ability to move the ball behind the running of quarterback Craig Allard and fullback Gary Hudgins. Northville, which has played four close games, is still seeking its first win. Picks — The Mustangs get their first win, according to Emons. O'Meara will be patriotic and pick Franklin.

Ply. Salem at Wsld. John Glenn: A "must win" for both teams if they plan to make a go of it in the Lakes Division of the WLAA. Glenn will try to re-establish its ground game. Salem must try to regroup its offense. Another defensive struggle. Picks — Glenn rebounds with authority.

Farm. Harrison at Ply. Canton: Traditionally, Canton gives Harrison a tougher battle than any other team in the Western Division. But traditionally, Harrison always wins. Picks — No upset in the making. Go with Harrison.

Catholic Central vs. Harper Wds. Bish. Gallagher (at East Detroit Memorial Field): This is going to be a tough, defensive battle. Gallagher is capable of spoiling the upset. CC spurned its option game last week in the win over Borgess and Chris Kovath gained 133 yards. Picks — Tough to call, but go with CC.

Liv. Stevenson at Farmington: The Falcons (1-3) are feeling better about themselves after turning in their best effort of the year Saturday in a 21-7 win over Walled Lake Central. Stevenson (2-2) is also feeling better after upsetting Glenn. Picks — Stevenson feels just subber, beats Farmington.

D.H. Crestwood at Red. Thurston: The Eagles (0-4) put some points on the board last week against first-place Allen Park, but the defense allowed quarterback John Jaskowiak to run wild for 216 yards in a 26-22 defeat. Crestwood (2-2) is coming off a 10-9 win over Dearborn Heights rival Annapolis. The Chargers are led by kicker Bill Stoyanovich, brother of Indiana's Pete Stoyanovich. Picks — Thurston gets its first victory.

Lutheran Westland at Lutheran Northwest: Lutheran Westland won by five points at home last week against the same opponent, 14-9. The home-field advantage won't help the home team this time. Picks — Lutheran Westland makes it two in a row.

Wayne Memorial at Dearborn Fordson (1:30 p.m.): Roll, Tractors, roll. That's the cry for the perennial Wolverine A League power. Wayne quarterback Mike Heard has been on a roll as well. Picks — Fordson is a little too rough for Wayne to handle.

Bish. Borgess vs. Harper Wds. Notre Dame (1:30 p.m. at GC Junior High): Notre Dame lost to No. 1-ranked Birmingham Brother Rice last week, 16-0, while Borgess was blanked by former No. 1 Catholic Central, 14-0. A healthy Corey Ivey is essential if Borgess is going to pick up a win. Picks — Emons has a hunch it's Borgess. O'Meara learned his lesson when he picked Kalamazoo Central to beat Borgess in the opener — and lost the bet.

St. Agatha vs. Wyandotte Mt. Carmel (7:30 p.m. at RU's Kraft Field): The Aggies have not played well this season, but should get a boost against the Comets (1-3), an awful team that lost to Pontiac Catholic last week, 33-0. Picks — The Aggies perk up.

N. Farmington at W.L. Central (8 p.m.): This game has been rescheduled in honor of the Yom Kippur holiday. It doesn't matter what day the Raiders play, especially against a team like winless Central. Picks — North makes it five in a row.

NFL strike gives rise to career idea

IT'S TIME.

No one's life is complete without a few career changes. Some are riskier than others — switching from BobLo boat captain to piloting an oil tanker in the Persian Gulf, for example.

I'm seriously considering embarking on just such a move. No, I'm not moving to Iran, so don't get your hopes up. Sports are my life, and the Iranians' idea of sport — the children's 200-meter suicide dash, with the Iraqi army serving as the finish line — doesn't appeal to me.

But there are other ways to make a living. What I'm thinking about is an entirely new field: sports strike organizer.

I know I could make a go of it. The pro football players have proved that there's a living to be made in this field.

TAKE A CLOSE look at the football strike and you'll see what I mean. First, list the issues.

C'mon.

I'm waiting.

I'm still waiting.

There's a time limit here.

You got one — free agency. Now, what is the debate on free agency? Give up? It's really fairly simple. The players want more money. The owners don't want to give it to them.

Sure, money is always the key issue behind any strike. But money — or any other issue, for that matter — isn't the key element in a strike.

What makes a strike a success is publicity. And the pro football strike has gotten its share. Some of it even favors the players.

It's amazing. Can you imagine — Teamsters are walking the picket line with players. Guys who make $20,000 a year picketing for guys who make $200,000.

WHY? NOT because of free agency. The public could care less about it.

What the public is concerned with is Sunday afternoons. Without football, guys will have to wash the car, rake leaves, walk the dog.

What kind of a choice is that? I'd rather walk a picket line.

So you see, organizing strikes in sports is important. Not with the pros. Those guys do a pretty decent job already. They've convinced people football is an essential commodity. Watch — the government will be asked to intercede soon.

But there's lots that could be accomplished at other levels. College and high school players, for example, have no one to guide them.

TAKE THE SITUATION with Wayne State football and the administration's attempt to dump it. Get out of town! I say strike — for lack of support, for lack of under-the-table payments, for lack of fans.

It may not work, but heck, it can't hurt. The program's doomed anyway. At least people would finally realize that WSU does indeed have a football program.

Remember, the reason for strikes is to get cheap publicity. The object of striking is to convince people your industry is a necessity. Issues are secondary.

High school athletes aren't beyond organizing. Two teams in perfect bargaining position are Livonia Stevenson's and Troy Athens' soccer teams. They're No. 1 and 2 in the state. Their communities would rally to their support if they thought they were being mistreated.

They could strike for better school lunches than average students get. For chauffeur service to and from games. For pizza parties after wins.

BIRMINGHAM BROTHER Rice's football squad is also ranked first in the state. Now's their chance — strike! Get better footballs, better locker rooms . . . how about moving to the Silverdome? Now that the Pope's gone, no one's using it anyway. At least the Warriors should make sure they get everything Stevenson's and Athens' soccer teams get.

See how this occupation could blossom? Soon, players at every school would want what their pals at Rice or Stevenson or Athens have. Business would boom.

Sure, taxes would rise to cover the increase in luxuries. But that's life in the fast-pace lane of sports. You think the pro football strike won't result in increased ticket prices?

Face it: Athletes are prima donnas we gleefully created to fill our leisure hours. They deserve a better lot in life than us average folk. And if the mental midgets in control of sports don't want to recognize that, then they deserve whatever happens.

My advice, players, is organize and then strike. Without delay. And if you need help putting it together, well, my number's in the book.

Steeler JVs win first

The Plymouth Canton Steelers gained their first victory in junior varsity football Sunday, defeating the Ann Arbor East Eagles 21-0.

The Steelers scored twice in the opening quarter on Jason Krueger's 4-yard run and quarterback John Roushkolb's touchdown pass to Steve Borke.

Justin Droz kicked the extra point to give the Steelers a 14-0 lead, and the score stayed that way until the fourth quarter.

The Steelers got their final TD when Joey Herman raced 40-yards to the Eagle 8-yard line and scored on a short plunge. Jimmy Helms passed to Michael Applegate for the extra point.

The Steelers' varsity suffered its first defeat in a 7-0 loss to the Eagles, and the freshman game ended in a 7-7 draw.

The Plymouth-Canton frosh got on the scoreboard early in the first quarter with Ted Barker's touchdown and extra-point pass to Dave Rezabek.

The Steelers held a 7-0 lead until the third quarter when Ann Arbor scored on a long run and successfully converted the extra point.

Romulus is the Steelers' next opponent. Plymouth Canton will be the host team at 1 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 4.

Solar for dollar: natural gas holds a three-to-one price advantage over electricity. That means that a high-efficiency gas furnace is always less expensive to operate in Michigan than an electric system when heating is required. And because that price advantage is expected to increase in the future, you could save even more in the long run.

Harriers win again

The Redford Thurston cross country team increased its unbeaten record to 5-0, 3-0 in the Tri-River league, with a 16-47 league victory Tuesday over host Melvindale.

Rick Dziobak paced the winners with a winning time of 17:43.

Tommy Biskner finished second for Thurston at 17:46, followed by Todd Wilson (17:51), Steve Barry (18:21), Randy Williams (19:13) and Jake Didoszak (19:15).

The Eagles have a tough meet today when they meet unbeaten Dearborn Heights Crestwood in another Tri-River dual.

Canton, Salem coast to easy victories

Sometimes there's no in-between in an athletic contest, no gray area, no give and take.

That's how it was Tuesday night when Plymouth Canton belted visiting Farmington 71-26 in girls basketball.

Everything worked just the way Canton wanted, and nothing went right for the Falcons.

"If I could erase this whole night, I'd be happy," said Farmington coach Diana Fair after her team lost its third straight and dropped to 3-4 overall.

The Chiefs, who upped their record to 4-4, opened up with a 20-5 lead in the first quarter and extended the margin to 35-13 at halftime.

"We were looking to work on our normal defense and force them into some bad shots," said Canton coach Rob Neu, whose team strangled the Falcons with its man-to-man defense.

Neu's offensive plan worked well, too, and that is borne out by the scoring totals of senior forward Karen Boluch and sophomore center Susan Ferko, the game's leading scorers. Boluch had 17 points to go with 15 rebounds, and Ferko tossed in 16 points.

"Offensively, we really wanted to score inside, and the nice thing is we did that," Neu said.

girls basketball

The Chiefs, 3-0 in the Western Lakes, had four players in double figures with Amanda Bell adding 11 points and Heather Miller 10.

Farmington had its best quarter following halftime (11 points), but Canton won going away with a 19-2 margin in the finale.

It was a particularly frustrating night for the Falcons, who were minus two players, including one starter, for disciplinary reasons and two others due to illness.

"It was hard to get them fired up for this game when half your players aren't there," Fair said. "We showed a little fire in the third, but it was not enough; it was too late.

"I think it would have been a different story if we had all our girls. Not necessarily with us taking the victory, but not (losing) by such a huge score."

Stacy Swanderski led Farmington with eight points and seven rebounds, and Kelli Koss added six points. The Falcons are 1-3 in the league.

SALEM 80, HARRISON 12: The contest was a definite mismatch with state-ranked Plymouth Salem coasting past winless Harrison.

The Rocks, who improved to 4-0 in the league and 7-1 overall, distributed most of their points among five players in double figures.

Center Barb Krug led with 18 points, Dena Head scored 13 and Keri McBride netted 12. Jill Estey and Shelley Bohlen, who had a game-high eight rebounds, added 10 apiece.

Head also chalked up seven steals and 10 assists. Estey six and eight, respectively. Salem outrebounded the Hawks 28-17.

Leslie Devine had six points and five rebounds for Harrison, which trailed 35-7 at halftime and 57-8 after three quarters. The Hawks are 0-4 and 0-7.

The Rocks, who rolled over two Lakes Division opponents last week, have a big game today when they play at division foe Westland John Glenn, also 2-0 in the Lakes and 6-1 overall.

Those games are behind us, and we want to step out and play well against John Glenn," Salem coach Fred Thomann said. "They've been playing well, too."

WSLD. LUTHERAN 42, PLYM. CHRISTIAN 37: Plymouth Christian Academy had its four-game winning streak snapped by Westland Lutheran Tuesday.

The winners used a 20-10 advantage in the second quarter to build a 25-12 halftime lead, and the Eagles were unable to overcome the 13-point deficit despite fighting back with a 25-17 margin in the last half.

In the second quarter, they pressed us real well and were able to establish a good lead," Christian coach Mark Brandel said. "That was our downfall right there."

The Eagles, who got within 35-28 at the end of three periods, cut Lutheran's lead to four points with a minute remaining, but some untimely turnovers took away their chance to pull out a victory.

Elaine Priebe paced Christian with 12 points, 12 rebounds and four blocks. Peggy Seltz had 16 points and Stephanie Locke 13 for the Westland ballclub.

The Eagles, who were a mere 6-of-20 at the free-throw line, are 4-3 overall. They remain 3-0 in their league.

Gov. Blanchard mends fences with opponents

AP — He didn't apologize for comparing them to "drunken sailors," but Gov. James Blanchard may have finally realized that he needs his Democratic comrades in the House, lawmakers said.

Fifteen of the 17 Democrats on the House Appropriations Committee accepted Blanchard's invitation to attend a fence-mending session designed to calm the growing rift between the two sides.

It was the first time in five years he had met with the powerful appropriations panel behind closed doors.

The lawmakers had mixed reactions to their 90-minute meeting with Blanchard, chief of staff Rick Cole, treasurer Robert Bowman, budget director Shelby Solomon and legislative director Stan Fedewa.

BUT ALL SAID they welcomed a chance to vent their anger.

"It's just going to take time for everyone to learn to trust one another," said Rep. Robert Emerson, D-Flint.

Fedewa said the meeting was called to "clear the air" and "get on with the business of the fall."

"There were some legitimate concerns raised," Cole said.

"A lot of times those meetings are just to vent their anger. He gave everyone an opportunity to do that," said Emerson.

Emerson said he asked Blanchard for an apology for saying Tuesday that lawmakers were upset about his budget cuts because they were "not allowed to spend like drunken sailors."

But Rep. James O'Neill, D-Saginaw, said the governor claimed he was only referring to the Senate Republicans.

Several lawmakers said they had a difficult time believing that.

"HE WANTED to clarify that he was adverse certainly to the credit-card mentality of some members of the Legislature," Cole said. "It was a chance for him to clear that up."

Blanchard and the House Democrats have been feuding since the governor announced $130 million in budget cuts in July, only three weeks after his top aides agreed to increase next year's spending by $118 million.

Many lawmakers said they thought the governor was just trying to "set them up" so he could later gain political favor by holding down spending.

The governor, meanwhile, had said the vocal lawmakers were just out for publicity. He insisted earlier this week that lawmakers were privately thankful that he took responsibility and balanced the budget.

Cole said the lawmakers again told Blanchard they were glad he made the cuts, but just wished he had handled them differently.

O'Neill called the powwow with Blanchard "a very good discussion. It was give and take."

BLANCHARD ADMITTED to the lawmakers that he and his top staffers had to improve communication with the Legislature, Emerson said.

"It was one of those rare occasions that he's communicated directly with the Democratic members of the House," said Rep. Francis "Bus" Spaniola, D-Corunna.

"I think the governor finally realizes he's got trouble with his own party," said Rep. Morris Hood, D-Detroit, and one of Blanchard's most outspoken critics.

"I made it very clear to him that I don't enjoy feuding with him or any other Democrat," Hood said. "We don't gain anything by squabbling among ourselves."

Rep. David Hollister, who earlier warned Blanchard that he "can't afford to get in a dogfight with the Democrats in the House" said he wasn't convinced things will change. "I don't think he heard what we had to say," said Hollister, D-Lansing.

High enrollment, staff morale top EMU goals

Keeping enrollment high and improving staff morale are two of Eastern Michigan University's key goals for the coming school year, EMU president John Porter recently announced.

Freshmen enrollments were cut off in April for the first time in the school's history. Fall enrollment reached 23,095 students.

Maintaining those students are among Porter's five-point plan for 1987-88.

University goals include:

- Improving the number of freshmen who return as sophomores. The retention rate is currently 70 percent.
- Attracting more freshmen with high school grade point averages of 3.0 or better.
- Boosting staff morale and the number of employees hired through affirmative action programs. A university task force will examine EMU service operations with an eye toward improving staff satisfaction and performance.
- Continuing to increase private sector contributions. Private sector support increased by 28 percent last year, Porter said. Greater private support for cultural and athletic programs is a priority, Porter said.

EMU also receives 5.41 percent of the state's higher education budget.

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Sept. 25.

Roll Call Report

HOUSE

GRAMM-RUDMAN REPAIR — By a vote of 230 for and 176 against, the House approved and sent to the Senate legislation (H Res 247) to repair the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law.

The measure also raised Treasury borrowing authority from $2.3 trillion to $2.8 trillion through May 1989.

Thr Gramm-Rudman repair is designed to satisfy the Supreme Court's 1986 objection that the law violated separation of powers by enabling Congress to force presidential budget decisions.

It gives the executive branch's Office of Management and Budget ultimate responsibility for insuring that annual deficits are gradually lowered each year to a zero deficit in Fiscal 1993.

Supporter Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said "no real deficit reduction is going to take place unless the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings trigger is cocked."

Opponent Silvio Conte, R-Mass., called the law "a mindless process" that replaces human decision-making by elected officials."

Members voting yes supported the legislation. Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

Voting no: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor.

BUDGET CUTS — The House rejected, 176 for and 239 against, an amendment to cut about $400 million from a $57.8 billion fiscal 1988 appropriations bill (HR 2783) for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and various agencies.

The amendment sought to cut 2 percent across the board from all areas of the bill except the Veterans Administration and National Aeronautics and Space Administration budgets. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor Philip Crane, R-Ill., called this a chance for members to reduce the deficit themselves rather than rely on an automatic Gramm-Rudman-Hollings mechanism.

Opponent William Green, R-N.Y., defended the bill as already austere. Members voting yes supported the cut. Voting yes were Republicans Pursell and Broomfield.

Voting no were Democrats Hertel, Ford and Levin.

CONTRA FUNDING — By a vote of 270 for and 138 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a stop-gap appropriations bill (H Res 270) to fund government operations at fiscal 1987 levels in the opening weeks of fiscal 1988.

The "continuing resolution" is necessary because Congress has failed to pass any of the 13 appropriations bills for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Included in the outlay is $3.5 million in non-lethal aid to anti-Sandinista contra forces to keep them in place until after the scheduled Nov. 7 start of the impending central American peace plan.

Members voting yes favored the continuing resolution. Voting yes: Hertel, Ford, Levin, Broomfield.

Voting no: Pursell.

SENATE

FIXING GRAMM-RUDMAN — By a vote of 64 for and 34 against, the Senate passed and sent to President Reagan a measure repairing the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law and raising the national debt ceiling to $2.8 trillion through May 1989.

This followed House approval of the same legislation (above).

The measure (HJ Res 324) calls for a fiscal 1988 deficit of no more than $144 billion and a balanced budget by 1993.

It establishes an executive branch device for automatically shrinking the deficit to specified annual levels when Congress and the White Houe fail to do so through the normal process of spending cuts and/or revenue hikes.

Its automatic cuts are split evenly between defense and non-military functions and apply across the board to most discretionary areas of federal spending.

Senators voting yes favored the Gramm-Rudman repair. Voting yes: Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Voting no: Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

'STAR WARS' FUNDING — By a vote of 51 for and 50 against, with Vice President George Bush casting the final yes vote, the Senate approved a higher funding level for the Strategic Defense Initiative in the fiscal 1988 defense authorization bill.

The vote approved $4.5 billion rather than $3.7 billion for the Administration's "Star Wars" program to develop a space-based shield against incoming missiles. The bill (S 1174) remained in debate.

Supporter Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said SDI has "shaken the Russians" and prodded them into serious arms talks.

William Proxmire, D-Wis., called it "a program . . . driven by public relations hype and political ideology rather than sound military research."

Senators voting yes favored higher Star Wars funding in 1988.

Voting no: Levin, Riegle.

Textures

Wayne-Gaffield exhibit opens at Troy Art Gallery

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

It was her own expensive tastes that led Cynthia Wayne Gaffield, a commercial artist from Plymouth/Livonia area, into a new, exciting form of art.

She will have a show of her collection of contemporary dyed and hand-painted clothing and accessories at the Troy Art Gallery beginning Monday.

Starting with the 11 a.m.- 7 p.m. reception Monday, Gaffield will have the gallery filled with long and short coats, jackets, scarves, blouses and a smaller pieces done in a variety of colors, patterns and textures.

Artistically, she said, "I love combining linear or grid patterns on textures . . . . I do all of the clothing myself and I'm really a perfectionist."

She has a special studio in Farmington Hills where she does her work, because she needs space to stretch silk up to 18 feet, plus the work is very messy.

'I love combining linear or grid patterns on textures . . . . I do all of the clothing myself and I'm really a perfectionist.'

— Cynthia Wayne Gaffield

SHE USES natural Chinese silk in a variety of textures, and after it is dyed, she hand paints it while it is stretched on a frame. For certain effects, she uses an air brush.

"I really love painting on fabric, it's very addictive," she said.

After the paint dries, she steam sets the fabric for color permanency. It is air dryed again and then washed and rinsed to remove the excess dye. Once this process is completed, the color is permanent and the fabric can be dry cleaned when necessary or washed very carefully.

Gaffield said, "My designs tend to be contemporary and I use subtle colors, my things don't go out of style . . . . I work primarily with heavily textured silks, some of which eventually develop suede like qualities." On some of her clothing she adds knitting, appliques, stones and beading.

All the pieces she will be showing at the Troy Gallery show are handmade, one of a kind. They will be on display through Saturday, Oct. 10, 11 a.m. to 5:50 p.m. Tuesday-Friday and until 4 p.m. Saturday. 755 W. Big Beaver, Suite 131, Troy.

Gaffield also makes limited edition accessories that are sold nationally in stores and galleries in Chicago and the California area, including makeup bags, cosmetic brush bags (that could double as evening bags) and scarves, one line of which is Ancient Pathways. All are signed by the artist. She also does large hand-painted silk pillows in a textured fabric.

Gaffield has been making, hand dying and painting clothing and accessories for about five years. She took classes at the Birmingham Bloomfield and Ann Arbor art associations, and after being exposed to the basics, began to experiment and play with her medium until her present approach evolved. But even that is continually changing, for she said her happiest moment often comes as she mails out a large order. Then, she can go back to her studio and start developing new ideas and fresh directions.

Stitch in time

Tapestry traces New World colonization

By Anne Sullivan
special writer

PRESERVING Plymouth, England's heritage and making history fun is the goal of Tom Mor, designer of the New World Tapestry, currently being created in southwest England.

The tapestry, when complete, will tell the story of the colonization of the New World from 1580 to 1643 in Newfoundland, Bermuda and America.

A graphic artist by trade and a history buff at heart, Mor and two others have dedicated a great portion of the last 11 years to this project.

Assisted in the research for the tapestry by Tom Maddock of Ivybridge and Freda Simpson of Plymouth, the trio has managed to consolidate England's history of colonization into the plans of a 263-foot tapestry.

The tapestry, which is being embroidered entirely with the Gobelin stitch (called the continental stitch in the United States), will consist of 23 panels, each measuring 11 by 4 feet.

It will have something of a local touch because Ralph Lorenz, owner of Plymouth's Mayflower Hotel, put in one of the first stitches of the massive project.

"The idea for the tapestry came to me from a group of ladies who were working in the Prysten House of St. Andrew's Church on the Plymouth Tapestry, which depicts one day, July 14, 1561, in the life of Plymouth, England," said Mor.

Nearing completion of the project, the embroiderers wondered what they would do next.

Mor was also asked to come up with an idea that might be of interest to tourists at St. Andrews.

With his love for history, especially Elizabethan and Jacobean, and the enthusiasm of the embroiderers, combined with the interest of tourists in the Plymouth Tapestry, he came up with the idea for the New World Tapestry.

MOR AND MADDOCK worked together as the chief history researchers, with Maddock specializing in heraldry (coats of arms).

They began the in-depth research project with four major pioneers, traced over 270 historical figures, depicting 253 on the tapestry. The duo dug into England's history for more than a decade and continue the work today.

The tapestry illustrates more than just the names of the people. It also displays their coats of arms, events of the day, their homes, businesses and the herbs they used in the New World.

Costume design and herb research were done by Simpson. Over 250 herbs, medicinal plants, trees and shrubs were used during colonization.

Simpson has taken the herb research one step further, growing in her backyard each of the herbs used by the Pilgrims.

She does this to obtain an accurate representation on the tapestry of each herb. When the herbs bloom, she calls Mor and he comes over to draw the herbs.

Simpson then colors the drawings and labels them for the yarn colors, so the embroiderers can go to work on the panels.

IN 1983, THE trio was joined by Paul Presswell of Buckfasleigh, a heraldry expert who confirms the correct blazon (written description) of the coats of arms. He then produces colored line drawings of each shield used plus a fact sheet for the tapestry's library.

The panels were originally planned to total 11, but as the research grew, so did the number of panels — from 11 to 14, then to 21, and now 23.

Initially there were 14 embroiderers at Plymouth. But interest in Devon County has grown such that other cities have opened centers to work on the New World Tapestry.

Currently there are eight centers with 150 embroiderers, all women, according to Mor. He is delighted at the increased desire to work on this project. He originally thought the tapestry would take 150 years to complete. But the added interest has cut the time to about 12 more years.

"We had thought that once we got it started, that some day another artist would take over," said Maddock.

"Of course we're glad to see it finished in our lifetime," said Mor.

The embroiderers spend a total of 50 hours a week working on the tapestry at the Plymouth site. It takes approximately one hour to embroider 1 square inch and about 3½ years to complete one panel.

Tours are available through St. Andrew's and include a stop in the Prysten House, where usually three or four embroiderers are working on the tapestry.

Anyone wishing to contribute to this bit of history may do so for the fee of 1 pound (about $1.65 in American money). Your pound enables you to put in one stitch on the tapestry. You also will receive a card that tells where and when you made your stitch, and your name and address is registered in a log of those who have added a stitch. This is done at all of the tapestry centers.

MENTIONED IN AN embroiderers magazine, the interest was so tremendous a center was opened in nearby Exeter. The response there is so great that they have to schedule times to come in so there is enough room for the embroiderers, said Mor.

"At the rate they are going, they will finish the panel in one year. They could do two in the time Plymouth does one. Lyme Regis has 48 embroiderers waiting to get started on a panel as soon as we can get a center started there."

There is no specific order in which the panels are done or assigned to a center. Currently, only one panel is complete.

"We did the easy one first," said Mor.

It was worked on in Plymouth, England, and is the panel on which Ralph Lorenz of Plymouth put one of the first stitches when the embroidering of the tapestry was kicked off.

"We knew the history and the people involved for the 1620 panel," said Mor. "The others were more difficult. We spent a lot of time searching for data and found much of it in local churches."

Another aspect of the project that involves Mor is the consolidation of all the facts, including family pedigrees and old wills, which will eventually be microfiched and available to the public.

Maddock spends time speaking with organizations and schools promoting the tapestry.

"Its not just the tapestry itself," said Maddock. "It's the value of what we have found."

A HISTORY BUFF all his life, working on the tapestry has become a labor of love for Maddock.

"It's like being an explorer and doing detective work," said Maddock.

An example of some information he found is a story about Sir John Harrington, the man who invented the first water closet (toilet).

He was summoned to court by Queen Elizabeth I and told she wanted a water closet installed at Richmond Palace.

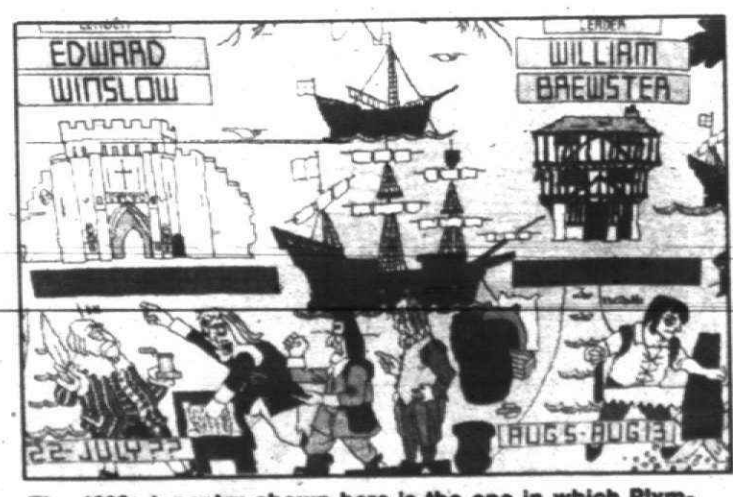

"To find that out for an historian like me, well, that's a great joy. I'm not a trained archivist. I'm only an ordinary Englishman, and a countryman at that," said Maddock.

"Now, I knew Tom (Mor) would want me to recheck the information, so I got in touch with the National Library in London, told them what I knew and asked them to photocopy the plans and send them to me. And now Tom will copy them onto the tapestry.

"I like doing research like this and probing. It's no problem for me. I'm retired and have plenty of time and it's an adventure everytime," Maddock said.

The final home to display the tapestry looks like it will be in Exeter, according to Mor. The embroiderers from Exeter are very hopeful that this will be the case.

"The completed tapestry will hang in one place," said Mor.

Festival presents German culture

Next Tuesday's German-American Day will be getting an early sendoff this weekend in Frankenmuth with a Harvest Days festival of German folk dancers, food, cider, other seasonal treats and all the shops and sites of this picturesque Bavarian village north of Flint.

The weekend celebration at Michigan's most popular tourist destination begins at noon and continues Saturday from 11 a.m. and again on Sunday from noon to 6 p.m.

Frankenmuth's Harvest Days and several large Oktoberfests sponsored by Detroit-area German-American clubs will be the focal points of a Bavarian weekend in the state leading into the nation's first German-American Day the following Tuesday, Oct. 6.

The day commemorates the arrival of the first German immigrants to this country on Oct. 6, 1683, at Philadelphia. German-American Day has been designated by joint resolution of the U.S. Congress, introduced into the Senate by Michigan Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., presidential proclamation and resolutions by state and local officials throughout Michigan.

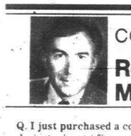

A DECORATED Main Street, organ grinders and such seasonal activities as apple bobbing will await the visitor to the Harvest Days festival. The mid-Michigan town was founded in 1845 as the first of four Lutheran missionary colonies in the U.S., organized in Germany to bring Christianity to the Chippewa Indians.

Trinity Lutheran Church, the historic downtown Detroit church founded by German-Americans more than 150 years ago, will be staging the second large Oktoberfest from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday at Detroit's Eastern Market at Gratiot and the Fisher Freeway.

condo queries

Robert M. Meisner

Q. I just purchased a condominium and am trying to figure out the kind of coverage to get on the interior of my unit. Do you have suggestions?

A. Seek out an insurance agent who has considerable experience in condominiums since it is important that the coverage you obtain on the interior of your unit compliments the coverage obtained by the condominium association so that there is neither an overlap or underlap in coverage.

Also be concerned about the amount of coverage that you have for "improvements" to your unit since it may not be covered by the association's policy. It may be, therefore, a good idea to get a copy of the association's insurance policy, show it to your agent and insure that you have adequate coverage.

Q. We have filed for an application in a cooperative but are disabled. The cooperative association, which is federally subsidized, has denied our application based on the fact that we are not related. We think that this is subterfuge. Do you have any suggestions?

A. A federally subsidized cooperative must comply with the provisions of the Federal Rehabilitation, Comprehensive Services and Disabilities Act of 1978 and must also comply with Michigan's, Elliot Larsen Civil Rights Act and the state's Handicappers Civil Rights Act.

If you believe that their denial of your application was a subterfuge, you should consult your legal adviser in connection with your alternatives. It may result, among other things, in an award of attorney fees and damages to you.

Know-it-alls can still benefit from classes

EVERY YEAR at this time I mention my diet because every year at this time I need to be on one. This year especially, because I'm going to turn "Four-O." Now 40 doesn't bother me, but fat and 40 does.

Well, my wife, Sandy, and I heard about this milkshake diet and thought, with our schedule, that it could be an easy diet to follow. A doctor on the radio said it was a nutritious diet. The can of milkshake powder bore a statement that it was not only nutritious, but delicious.

I couldn't wait to start my diet. After a weekend of unbridled indulgence, I ate all the goodies in our home. So Monday, Sandy and I sat down to a delicious and nutritious milkshake. We both took a sip and gagged.

Simultaneously reaching for the can, we both agreed we must have mixed it wrong. "Maybe there's too much powder, water it down," said I. The result. "Eeyuck!" we agreed.

"HERE, TRY IT with skim milk instead of water."

Double "Yuck!"

The best way to describe the taste would be to pour a yellow cake mix into a blender, then throw in about a six-inch piece of drywall or a pound of plaster, whip, then serve.

"How about a little chocolate?" I ventured.

Well, after 23 milkshakes later, Sandy and I came up with a drinkable nutritious milkshake. But I hardly think you could call it a diet drink. We use chocolate ice cream, milk and a little bit of malt, a portion of delicious, nutritious diet powder and mix it till it was creamy smooth. Then we pinch our noses and gulp it down as fast as we can. Needless to say, preparing diet foods is just not a priority for us right now.

Priority, simply defined, means things you do in order of importance and it has many kinds of applications. Unfortunately, art with all of its values, get pushed to the end of most priority lists and sometimes right off the list entirely. With working men and women, it is their job and family that somehow separates them from fulfillment that art affords. To the housewife, "art-time" is almost "no-time."

NO MATTER HOW solemn your decision to take time out for art, it soon slips down the priority list from "once a week" to "sometimes" and finally "never." If you are serious about your expression through art, then you must make a commitment. Don't say you are too busy. Some of my students are doctors, business owners, many are working mothers and a goodly number are teenagers whose schedules boggle the mind.

A few of my students are working professional artists, so why do they come? Partially to learn new techniques, but primarily just to set aside a chunk of time to do their own art, with no deadlines or commercial requirements.

Probably in scheduling your priorities, the worst mistake is the false concept of "finding time." It doesn't work. In this day and age, you don't find time, you must take time. Only God gives time. All you can do is schedule it. So schedule yourself some art time this year. Enroll in an art class even if you think you know it all. At least will be using your abilities and you could quite possibly learn something new when you least expect it.

My Artifacts Club, for example, had an outing at Greenmead, Livonia's historical site recently. We were all over the place, studying, painting or sketching. Everyone, that is, except me. I couldn't paint. I was using watercolors and while I was painting an area, it would dry before I could finish. Finally in frustration, I packed up everything and spent the rest of the day with pastels.

WHEN I MENTIONED it to my watercolor teacher at the store, she said, "Well, haven't you ever heard about glycerin?" I had to confess I hadn't.

"Oh, sure," she said, "just add a little glycerin to your watercolors and they will stay wet even in bright sunshine."

The moral of the story is that know-it-alls can still learn.

So all of you, go get yourself into an art class and I'm going to see if I can get myself into last year's corduroys.

David Messing has been an art teacher for 10 years. He is the owner of the Art Store and More, 16338 Middlebelt Road, Livonia.

Oakway clicks with Spanish theme

By Mary Jane Doerr
special writer

review

The fastest growing minority in America is that of the Spanish-speaking people. Yet, seldom are audiences exposed to the Spanish arts of zarzuela or flamenco.

Sunday afternoon, the Oakway Symphony Orchestra offered its followers the rare opportunity to hear a concert of Spanish music and see the spectacular dancing of Maria Del Carmen and her "Grupo Espana," a group of nine dancers, four guitarists, and one tenor.

This is why community symphonies are so important. They offer the opportunity for local talent to entertain. In this case, the dancing was of such high caliber, the only other place this reviewer has seen such artistry was in Madrid itself.

The dance troupe performed a number of Spanish masterpieces with the orchestra, such as "Malaquena" and "Andalucia" by Lecuona, the "Aragonaise" from French composer Bizet's Carmen, and "Granada" by Lara.

Maria Del Carmen herself performed an unusual solo to Granados "Goyescas," using a slower, more expressive movement style than the faster group numbers. In this dance, she used her castanets, sometimes to echo the orchestra, other times to set the rhythm.

The most fascinating aspect of the synchronized movements of the troupe was the rhythm of the dancers' castanets, always together. The flashing fans, flowing shawls, waving handkerchiefs and long-waisted brightly colored costumes only added to the beauty of the stately charm of this form of dancing. The constantly waving ruffled dresses accentuated the constantly changing beat.

Since Carmen's last appearance with the Oakway Symphony Orchestra, the group has grown in size and quality. At the beginning of the second half of this program, the group performed with the dancers seated in a semicircle with four gut-stringed handmade Spanish guitars, and a Spanish singing tenor accompaniment. Here is where flamenco is so appealing. The dancing combined with the Spanish singing and the soft mellow guitar sounds punctuated with the castanets and the hand clapping was dazzling.

ERNEST JONES conducted the most interesting orchestra solo of the afternoon. Bizet's "L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2," a rare combination of interesting melodies, the Agnus Dei melody in Intermezzo movement, and the wonderful tambourine rhythm in the final Farandole movement.

The importance of Del Carmen and her troupe and the emotional impact of the music selected by Oakway's conductor Francesco Di Blasi made the concert a success.

But that is not to say the setting in Madonna College's gymnasium is any place for a concert. The folding chairs were cold and uncomfortable. The elevation of the first violin and trumpet sections only blocked the view of the dancers for many of the ticket holders. The acoustics did not allow for the sound to get much further than the first few rows in the pianissimo sections of pieces such as Chabrier's "Espana."

It seems unfortunate to plan such a blockbuster program, rehearse an orchestra in this demanding music, contract this unusual and outstanding dance troupe, and then present the concert in such a dismal, unpleasant setting suitable only for a basketball game.

Mary Jane Doerr is an area freelance writer who has been a music reviewer for the Observer and Eccentric for a number of years.

'In this case, the dancing was of such high caliber, the only other place this reviewer has seen such artistry was in Madrid itself.'

LaFlair wins Ceccheti scholarship

Tara LaFlair of Livonia was among 11 outstanding young dancers who received scholarships at the recent Ceccheti Ballet Conference at Michigan State University.

LaFlair, a Class B alternate winner, is a student of Jean Gloria Newell.

The scholarship dance competition was one event in a program of intensive instruction, which attracted more than 200 teens and adults, teachers from 11 states, Canada and abroad. Scholarship recipients were selected by the conference faculty and announced after a concluding public performance in MSU's Wharton Center for the Performing Arts.

CHECK OFFER WITH CARE

Your home has been for sale, inspected and the latest enthusiastic prospect presents you with an "offer" to buy. Review this offer with care. It's an extremely important part of the sale.

Are all names correct? Is the property correctly described? Is the mortgage information accurate? Can you move by the possession date? Is the price satisfactory? Then double check your calculations to be sure you know how much cash you will receive. If you have any doubts about points contained in the offer do not sign it until they have been completely removed from your mind.

The offer to purchase is binding on the purchaser for the amount of time stated in the offer. You can accept it without change. You can let it expire, or you can consider changes. If you change anything in the offer you are reversing the process and making an "offer to sell" to purchaser who then has the same options.

Before you sign, be certain that it clearly states all the points of agreement because the sale will be according to the letter of that script.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at KENNELLY REALTY - 19500 Middlebelt - Ste. 201 E. Livonia, MI 48152 - 477-0404. We're here to help!

The New Breed

"I never saw anything like it. Handsome, distinctive buildings on terraced land, full of intriguing angles and architectural detail. A complete change from that old 'row-house' look.

Every apartment has its own private entrance, unusual layout, and surprising extras like a washer and dryer, vertical blinds, full kitchen with dishwasher, and plenty of closet and storage space.

Some even have cathedral ceilings, oversize patio, and a large eat-in kitchen.

I look out onto lush woods and ponds ... a jogging path ... swimming ... tennis ... and a comfortable clubhouse with exercise and aerobic rooms.

It's not just a place to live; it's a place I love coming home to. You'll see what I mean."

What's new in the Marketplace

Let there be light . . .

And there will be light in the very latest fashion — the southwest look in lamps by Casual Lamps from California and Pacific for the great room or sun room. Available at the Design Center in Troy. Ask for help from your favorite decorator. That's the only way you can visit the design center.

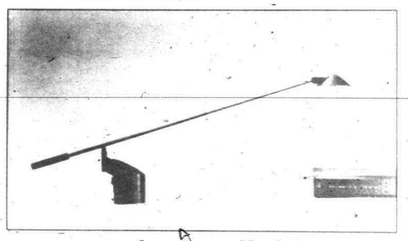

Oval or round

The design is by Joe D'Urso and is appropriately called Cono. It was designed for the Espirit showroom in California. The base is sheet steel finished with an oven-baked epoxy. The top can be either terrazzo, glass or granite. It's available in either round and oval in either occasional or dining room size. Base-only price is $412. At Arkitektura, 800 N. Woodward, Birmingham.

Tokyo chair

The modernistic Tokyo chair was designed by popular English designer Rodney Kinsman as part of his latest minimalist collection. It is fashioned from a painted tubular steel frame, but is also available in chrome. The seat is upholstered in vinyl. $203.50 at Arkitektura, 800 N. Woodward, Birmingham.

. . . and more light

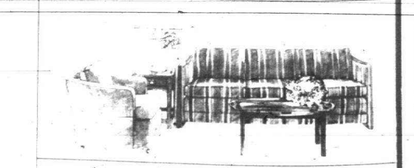

It's called Feather. Here are its dimensions: 3½ inch in diameter; 5½ inches high base; and 4½ in diameter at the shade. The arm is 32 inches long and rotates to 360 degrees with compete vertical-horizontal adjustment. It's shown in black satin. The designer is Robert Sonneman. It is available, through a decorator, at the George Kovacs Lighting Inc. showroom in the Design Center in Troy.

Updating old design formulas for '80s

Design professionals are responding to a new breed of home owner. While possibly just as house-proud as their parents, they're impatient with decorating rules and they're ready to mix and match styles and periods to achieve a thoroughly individual look.

ALL THAT NOISE in the interior design studio is the sound of molds breaking. The old formulas for perfect rooms are being tossed out as designers experiment with new combinations of furnishings and colors.

Design professionals are responding to a new breed of home owner. While possibly just as house-proud as their parents, they're impatient with decorating rules and they're ready to mix and match styles and periods to achieve a thoroughly individual look. Which is why designers have turned a fresh eye on some classic decorating styles.

The traditional room gains much of its significance from the balanced sketchiness from an attention to balanced arrangement. Facing love seats, for example, are accompanied by mirror-image end tables and lamps. Or matching brass wall sconces serve as a framing device on either side of a fireplace.

Often too, one will find beneath well-crafted cabriole legs the bold blues and reds of a symmetrically patterned Persian carpet. Save for the swash of silk curtains and the ticking of antique timepieces here in the classic traditional room all is quiet.

TOO QUIET, THINK some designers who see the look as long on dignity, but short on welcome. Antiques can be intimidating, they say. Also, today, pedigreed furniture can be impossibly expensive.

That's the reason for the innovative spirit that design professionals now bring to the traditional look. Instead of the seriousness one expects in a museum, one now finds a occasional touch of whimsy — tiger-stripe patterns, for example, painted on the proper fronts of a Regency-style chair.

And solidly constructed, but less-than-distinguished furniture gets new attention. A reproduction fauteuil (French armchair) can be dressed up in a snappy contemporary plaid.

The overall formal feeling of a traditional room often is lightened by simply removing the Persian carpet, repairing it with a more casual sisal rug. At the same time, upholstered pieces are swaddled in loose-fitting white canvas slipcovers; others are meant to look a little rumpled.

Still lending their luster to the traditional look of the '80s are such background colors such as dusty green, teal blues and Chinese red. Now, though, you may find these gemstone colors acting as foil for a singularly bright piece of contemporary metal sculpture.

The updated idea for the traditional look is to blend a few period pieces of excellent quality — an antique armoire, perhaps, or an heirloom writing desk — within a totally balanced setting and still make room for Supplies.

CONTEMPORARY design always has admired uncluttered surfaces and lots of empty spaces between clean-lined furnishings. This is the minimalist spirit that underlies the classic look. Sleek, some have called it. "Cold" and uncomfortable, say the critics.

Now there comes a welcome infusion of color and warmth to underlie pure design, as well as a rounding off of usually hard, geometric edges.

Updated for the '80s, country-farm forms now offer real places to sit, such as a 19th century armchair with its wood frame stripped and pickled, the upholstery covered in raw silk of white, pale gray or the palest lilac.

Or imagine the surprise of a camelback sofa, its curving outline covered in the plaided-off white canvas. These pared-down upholstered seating pieces look completely at home with international style classics. Wassily chairs or an elegant square-topped glass coffee table.

And today the furniture may perch atop something other than gray industrial carpeting, bleached pine floorboards perhaps, or a soft kilim or dhurrie rug.

What's gone is the glitz, what's new is the hint of warming colors. Vast expanses of plain, white walls still are the favored background for the contemporary look, but watch for the sculptural splash of bright green apples massed in a glass bowl.

THE SEDUCTIVE charm of the [illegible] comfortable seating pieces. Overstuffed sofas are sprinkled with pillows and cushy club chairs are paired with ottomans. They all invite you to curl up with a book and stay [illegible].

The sense of mid-Victorian overabundance continues in a wealth of garden colors: pinks, blues, greens, elevated in needlepoint carpets, flowered table skirts and slipcovers. And the colors come in a smashing, dizzying array of fabric patterns — cabbage roses, chintz, oversized plaids, stripes, tweeds and plaid taffeta.

As the best country look combinations worth artless as it is all just grew together in layers, no generation having been in a hurry.

The designers are packing away some of the overflow of oriental drawings and majolica knickknacks that threatened to fill every inch of shelf and tabletop.

Simple down-home comfort — the country look is forever fine tuning — seeks a subtle restraint in upholstering. A simple brass floor lamp works just as well as and costs far less than a painted mid-century piece of junk and topped with a fussy shade.

Best of all, this new design temperament makes no apologies for its accessorizing, for one of two reasons: wood pieces — the newest trend in the country-look frontier.

TAKING THEIR fanciful cue from the post-modern architects, young sophisticated designers strive for a never-changing, always new look. Part of the thrilling edge of design. There's a certain understatement, forcing the viewer to participate in the fun. Say, for example, that a [illegible] usually thought out of style, such as the weighted bun foot, is made fashionable by being painted a high-gloss white.

Or a [illegible] is given a fresh look by being painted a bright aqua. Or a [illegible] is given a high-gloss finish by being painted a coat of sunny yellow.

Or a [illegible] is covered with a piece of metal, lawn furniture, or wire, old fabrics [illegible] or even [illegible] are covered with a coat of sun-struck aqua, coral or [illegible].

Or a [illegible] is made of metal, wood planks, hardware and new [illegible] materials. Or a [illegible] is made of steel mesh, shelving, lumber, wood planks, hardware and new [illegible] materials. Or a [illegible] is made of wood planks, hardware and new [illegible] materials. Or a [illegible] is made of steel mesh, shelving, lumber, wood planks, hardware and new [illegible] materials.

But anti-basement furniture is the penny-wise thing. It's the [illegible] clothes dressed up in [illegible] vibrant colors of gold, tangerine, coral, mint green and teal blues. By Hudson's Interior Design Studio designers Susan Zinger, Mario Kocaj and Gloria Brown Ellis.

Reborn

Colonial now contemporary

By Marie McGee
staff writer

IT WAS THE classic case: the children had grown and moved away and the three-bedroom Spanish-style colonial suddenly got too large. The need to provide space for rambunctious teens was no longer a priority.

They found, too, that their taste in home furnishings had changed. The traditional — and sometimes cluttery — "country" feeling that had surrounded them for so many years no longer suited their lifestyle.

Then, too, there was a need to display some of the art they were beginning to collect now that they had time to travel. A lot of the art was glass pieces that needed to be showcased.

It was clearly time to make a move. A condominium looked appealing. But what about all the memories? How do you move those? How do you give up a gorgeous backyard of trees you planted? Or a tree-lined neighborhood where friendliness was a byword?

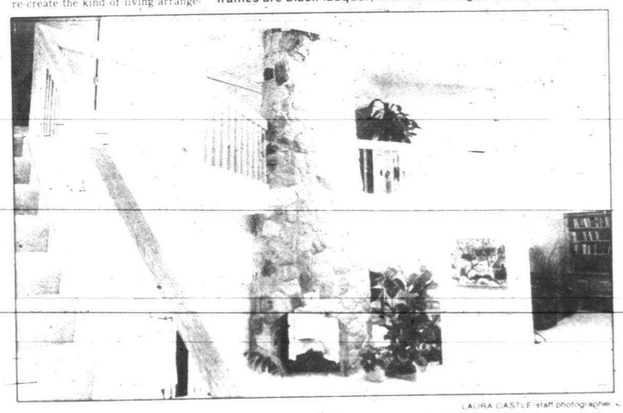

The answer is you don't. Instead of moving, you call in an architect and re-create the kind of living arrangement that now suits your needs at this point in time.

THAT'S THE STORY behind the now-contemporary, two-story home on in West Bloomfield that once resembled many of the other colonials in the neighborhood. Only the address and a fieldstone fireplace remain the same — everything else has been changed.

A strong accent piece in the dining room is a custom-designed table that seats 10 made of Paradiso marble in shades of taupe, beige and brown atop black lacquered bases. The chair frames are black lacquer, with the seating fabric in beige.

Only the fieldstone fireplace remained unchanged in the reconstruction. Dark bannisters were replaced with oak with clear lucite spokes.

The downstairs was completely gutted. All of the dark wood, for instance, associated with Spanish-style colonials was removed. Three bedrooms became two — one a master bedroom with its own elegant master bath. The other a guest room.

Balancing character and quaintness

By Marie McGee
staff writer

ONE OF THE nicest compliments anyone can pay interior designer Melissa Brown after touring the Louis Chernoff residence at 569 Pierce, Birmingham, is to say "it doesn't look decorated."

As a matter of fact, it really isn't — for the most part.

What Brown, An ASID member who owns her own design studio, did was to "decorate" around the furnishings the Chernoffs had stored in various spots (including a daughter's garage) before buying the much-discussed and extremely run down house withing walking distance of downtown Birmingham.

Because of its quaintness, "people know this house," is the way Brown puts it.

The fruits of her efforts will be on display during the upcoming Birmingham House Tour, sponsored by the Detroit Chapter/American Institute of Architects and the Michigan Chapter American Society of Interior Designers.

THE 1930S HALF-timber English-style house is filled with a melange of antique furniture and objets d'art that the Chernoffs have collected over the years beginning with the ownership of their first house, and continuing after that was sold and the couple moved from first one apartment and then to another.

"We recycled a lot of things," Brown said with a smile. "Very little is new." She said her client's love of the vintage is evident in the collection of art that was refurbished and reassembled to create a new look. Dramatic combinations of colors and fabrics and contemporary upholstery provide the background, she said.

The extent of the renovation included the master bedroom, created from two smaller rooms and dressing area from another. A "mother-in-law" suite was transformed into a tented, mirrored dining salon with its own elegant butler's pantry.

Many special touches include a shirred fabric powder room and a flip-up shelf located in a hallway that can be used for large buffet dinners.

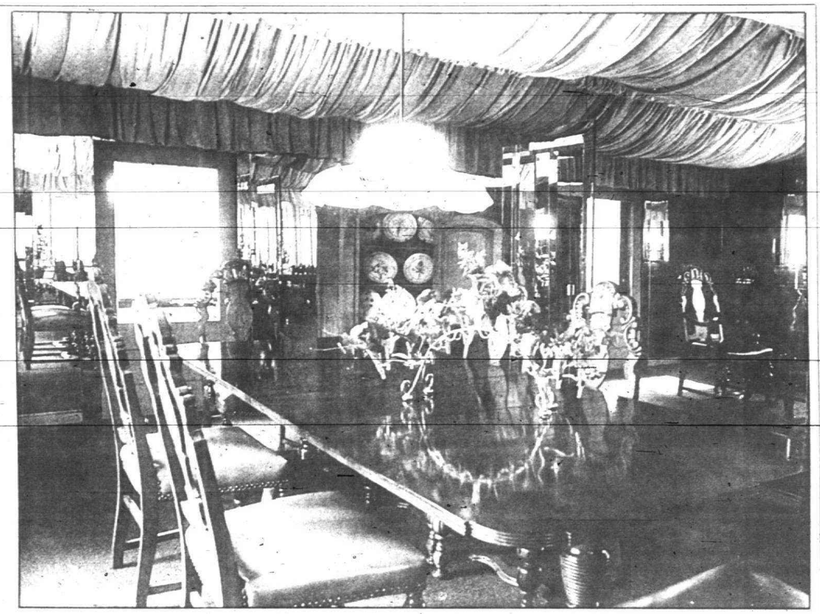

AN APPRECIATION for quality is apparent throughout. In the front circular drive sits their 1953 Bentley Silver Cloud, and in the back garden a 10-foot "Venus on the Half Shell" stands guard.

According to English author Judith Miller, Brown and the Chernoffs were on the right track in the decision to keep things pretty much as they were. Brown is co-author of "Period Details," a book designed to make it easier to achieve the "authentically restored" home.

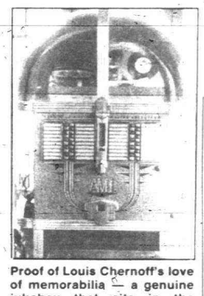

While it is time-consuming and usually more expensive to decorate a period home in appropriate detail, the effort can be rewarding, Miller writes, in terms of psychic comfort.

A room, Miller said, that is true in most of its details to the period in which it was built has an almost indefinable right feeling. The authentic room contributes to a feeling of emotional comfort. Where decorating is out of character, on the other hand, there is often subtle discomfort.

Brown puts it this way: "The house has so much character that I felt it was important to keep that. It's often hard to do that. If you do too much, you lose that quality. It becomes too quaint and looks out of place."

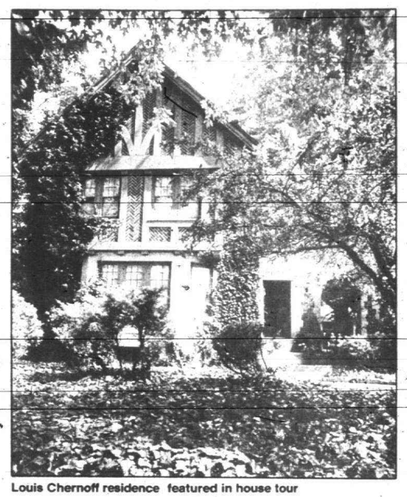

Renovation of the 1930s Tudor-style home called for transforming a "mother-in-law" suite into a tented, mirrored dining salon with its own butler's pantry. What appears to be a cupboard, at the rear of the room, is really a French-style fireplace. One of the problems designer Melissa Brown had to work around was that the room had four doorways — all of different heights and widths. The room's main color scheme was purple accented in part by dining room chairs in lacquered orange.

Proof of Louis Chernoff's love of memorabilia — a genuine jukebox that sits in the breakfast room evoking memories of another era. He retrieved it from a building where his company was doing some work.

A mix of the old and the new is also evident on the second floor landing where an 18th century French secretary has a modern chair of lucite and chrome. One the wall is a hand-painted Indian artifact complemented by an authentic wolf rug on the wood floor.

7 homes on display in Birmingham tour

"100 Years of Design Excellence" will be apparent on Sunday, Oct. 4 during the Birmingham House Tour, sponsored jointly by the Detroit Chapter/American Institute of Architects and the Michigan Chapter/American Society of Interior Designers.

The theme is especially appropriate since the Detroit AIA chapter and the Michigan Society of Architects are celebrating their 100th anniversaries this year.

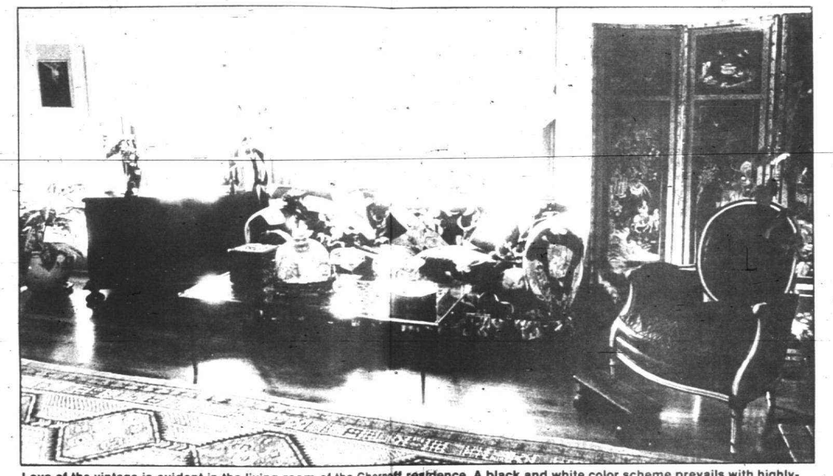

Seven houses dating from 1885 to 1985 will be displayed.

The tour begins at Seaholm High School, at the corner of Lincoln and Cranbrook Road in Birmingham. From there, shuttle buses will take tour participants to some of Birmingham's most elegant environs.

Tickets for the house tour are $12 and may be purchased in advance by calling 965-4103; or at Hudson's Northland and Eastland Interior Designs Studios; and Pierson Interior Design Studios at Somerset Mall.

A limited number of tickets may be purchased the day of the tour at Seaholm High School. The tour takes place rain or shine.

Decorating tips for the bathroom

You may not be able to move the furniture around in your bathroom, but there is much you can do to revitalize and beautify it without spending a fortune.

Here are some decorating tips that can help renew any bathroom — from streamlined to opulent.

- Decorative containers and organizers can hold cotton swabs, makeup, soaps and other loose items that tend to get scattered around.
- Scent your bathroom with fragrant candles, soaps and potpourri.
- Add a few of your favorite things — an antique hand mirror, framed poster or a small chair for relaxing.
- Replace your existing drawer pulls with shiny new ones. Consider brass, enamel, fashion-colored plastic or the variety of novelty shapes available.
- Invest in a set of plush, colorful, king-size towels.
- Plants look great in the bathroom. Try hanging a plant near the window or by the sink. Be sure to choose varieties that adjust well to moisture and that don't need a lot of direct light.
- Add some decorative shelves. Paint them in a color that coordinates with wallpaper or paint. You can use them to store towels or to show off containers full of bubble bath, bath oil, perfume and cologne bottles.
- Hang a pretty shower curtain. Almost any washable material may be used as long as you protect the "wet side" with a waterproof shower liner.
- Liven your bathroom with a printed wallpaper or try a wallpaper border along the top of the wall.
- If the bathroom has a window, have a window shade made from extra wallpaper to match the wall.

Soaking in style

Today's bathrooms are pretty splashy

THE BATHROOM may have moved indoors years ago, but style-conscious home owners are determined to bring the beauty of the outdoors inside with them. Those who can afford the luxury the ones with designer-color commodes and gold-finished faucets want a view from their tub.

Some are opting for massive windows; others enjoy clear-glass ceilings or electric skylights that open to the sun and stars.

Home owners who aren't lucky enough to glimpse the ocean, bay, mountains, a river or canyon from the privacy of their privies are creating their own mini-panoramas with flower gardens and streams just outside their bathroom windows. And inside, potted plants thrive in the humid environment.

There's something about water that brings you back to nature," says designer Richard Kaleh. "It's very stimulating to your senses to be in water and visually relate to the outdoors."

A BATHROOM adds Kaleh, "should be someplace where you don't mind spending time, important time in the early morning and late at night. It should feel friendly."

No longer are bathrooms just a necessary evil. People are beginning to look at them as a very important part of their houses, Kaleh points out.

They have become more of a retreat area than a functional space," echoes designer Marsha Sewell.

Many home owners, according to designer Helene Ziman, are redoing their bathrooms even before they redecorate their living rooms. And they're spending increasingly more money on more spacious, elegant and luxurious baths.

As she sees it, this renewed interest is due, at least in part, to the fitness craze. "People are so concerned about how they look. They're concerned with the care of their face, as well as their body."

AN EXERCISE room is only one part of the master bedroom and bath in the home of one of Ziman's clients. The wing — including exercise rooms, bedroom, dressing area and bath" — completed with whirlpool, sauna, bis and hers toilets and sinks, and a common shower — measures a generous 1,400 square feet.

These larger bathrooms, some with cathedral ceilings, tend to be compartmentalized, with separate showers and tubs and partitioned toilets. Mirror and glass blocks make big baths appear even bigger.

It's easy to see that utility has taken on style. Says Kaleh, "bath rooms are a meditative room, and it's important for them to have the visual impact that such a room needs."

"Ritzy" and "slick" are terms used by Ziman to describe today's luxurious bath. There's an obvious Italian influence. Also popular, she says, is art deco, "almost neo-classical — fun and fresh, using classical forms in a new way. Post-modern toilets, so to speak."

For budget-minded consumers, Villeroy and Boch put out a new sink with a hydraulic lift to change the height at the flick of a button. Meantime, state-of-the-art tubs including the Sensorium with Ambiance, an electronic marvel whose water depth, temperature and turbulence (from whirlpool and bubble maker) are controlled by a waterproof hand unit.

The unit also includes a stereo record player, radio, tape deck, disc player and television as well as a home security TV monitor and switches to control lights, door locks and home appliances. This kind of luxury isn't cheap — it $25,000 from American Standard.

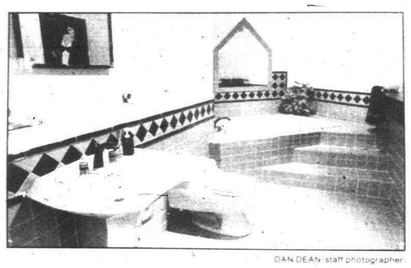

Less spectacular, but still impressive, new bathrooms are decked out in plenty of marble, granite, chrome, gold and lapis. At the same time, home owners who aren't stuck on "the real thing" are having fun with a variety of laminates, including marble and granite look-alikes, geometric patterns, splatters and zigzags.

Ceramic tile, in an assortment of sizes, colors and textures, is increasingly popular for floors, walls, countertops, tubs and even ceilings.

Multi-levels, with raised deck tubs, are more popular than ever. So are angles. Cater-cornered fixtures and angled countertops. Instead of the usual oval sinks, there are plenty of hexagons. And whatever isn't angled is likely to be curved.

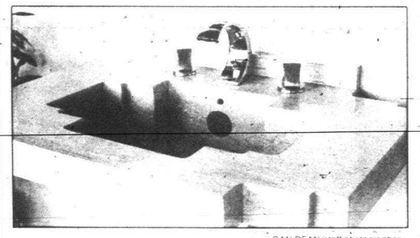

Colors range from black and white and red to burgundy, teal, mauve and even purple. The vast assortment of available colors allows home owners to choose not only what they like, but what shows them off at their best.

Concludes designer Ziman, "People really want to look good in their own environment. And that includes a bathroom."

Special thanks to the Michigan Chapter American Society of Interior Designers for its cooperation in providing background for many of the articles, including the cover for the section.

The "Great Room" concept on the cover was photographed by Beth Singer. Designers were Deborah Clark, associate, ASID; Mary Rose Farkas, associate, ASID; Thomas R. Martin, ASID; and Susan Zinger, ASID, all of Hudson's Interior Design Studios.

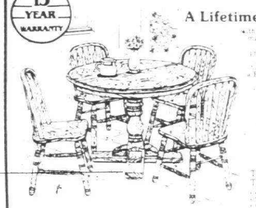

What is shown is a strong neo-classical architectural form and jewel tone colors that set the stage for this inviting grand "Great Room." An inspiring assemblage of traditional styles in furniture one would expect to see in continental Manor House — an ambience and setting for elegant entertaining, the designers note.

A large patio area was added as well as a two-story glassed-in addition that stretches across the entire back of the house for a panoramic view of the backyard from various rooms in the one-time Spanish-style colonial. A ledge just inside the addition allows the homeowners to putter around with a hobby of growing flowers.

Simplicity is the hallmark of the living room. Focal point is a piano that also was born again — from its original natural finish to its present black lacquer state. changed to add to the feeling of openness.

Now the cozy feeling of country left in the house is the one you get when you look out those back windows. Somehow that view of the trees makes you feel like you're far away from the city, Johnstone enjoyed.

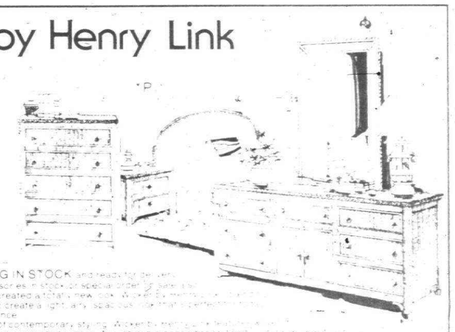

Once all the major architectural changes by Garnett Cousin, AIA, were in place, interior designer Sandra Johnstone, ASID, set out to create the setting that reflected the change in her clients' lifestyle and incorporate their growing art collection.

They knew they were going to collect art," said Johnstone, and wanted a color scheme to enhance the collection.

SHE CHOSE TONES of off-white, soft beiges and grays as the main sounds for carpeting and seating fabrics. Accent colors were mauve, soft rose, turquoise and lavender. The strong accent was black.

The living room furnishes the simplicity and the feeling of openness that dominates the entire house, Johnstone noted.

Space wars

Ideas to make small space big on livability

HOORAY FOR small spaces. Thanks to the high cost of housing and a renewed interest in city living, small is chic and bigger is not necessarily better anymore.

Lack of space isn't a decorating roadblock for creative home owners and tenants who seek new ways to make their small spaces great spaces. And today more than ever, they have the interior design industry on their team.

Furniture designers have gotten in on the act, creating a new wave of furniture designed to provide flexibility and storage as well as add beauty to the home, from entertainment centers to sophisticated shelving systems to the newly popular Murphy bed.

Meanwhile, contractors and architects constantly are seeking new ways to add space through remodeling — knocking out a wall here, adding a raised platform or loft there — to make the most of every square inch.

Whether you choose to increase your space structurally or visually — or simply scale down your decorating scheme to fit the room, these tactics can help make any room that's short on space one that's big on innovation and livability.

• To open up a small space, decorate in lighter, brighter colors. Besides paint, use upholstered furniture in white and soft shades to make a room appear bigger.

• Explore the latest home furnishings by browsing through the pages of decorating magazines, stores and showrooms. Many people don't realize just how far furnature design has come in the last decade, especially in the area of flexible design.

(For instance, Carson's of High Point makes a "gravity chair," which shifts from an arched ottoman into a lounger with various positions and a sleek contemporary design — an update on the old-fashioned recliner. Modular units and double-duty ottomans provide plenty of sitting space, yet don't gobble up the room.)

• Take a tape measure with you when shopping. What your eye sees on an open floor may be too big when you bring it to a small room.

• Consider glass tables in a room that otherwise may appear cluttered — such as a small dining room or breakfast nook. Glass tables appear to take up next to no space at all, yet are functional.

• Create the illusion of more space with mirrors — either by covering a wall with them or hanging them at eye level.

• For a small living room area with no room for a coffee table, consider the new occasional tables that actually slide over a sofa cushion and take up no floor space. If you move into a larger space, they can be used as side tables.

• With furniture in small spaces, less definitely is more. Don't worry about filling up every corner of the room — instead, choose a few knockout pieces for decorating drama.

• It also helps if furniture can serve two purposes. Upholstered chairs have a versatile look as appropriate in a living room as a dining room, enabling you to have just one set of chairs. What is a couch by day can be a bed by night with futons, daybeds and sofa beds.

• In a small space, surprise the senses with bright color such as a yellow, green, orange or purple sofa. Color will become the focal point of the room, and deflect the eye from the smallness of your environment. However, be sure to invest in the finest quality you can and choose a timeless design such as one with soft styling and tailoring.

• Use area rugs to define space on a shiny hardwood or tile floor. Create "walls" with dividers and screens. Or, use a glass etagere or open shelving system as a divider, an etagere does double-duty for storage and display, while giving an airy look to your living environment.

• Light-colored wall-to-wall carpet can increase the appearance and feeling of spaciousness — especially when used with furnishings of the same shade. A soft, monochromatic color scheme highlighted with a plush saxony texture softens a room's sharp angles and diffuses light.

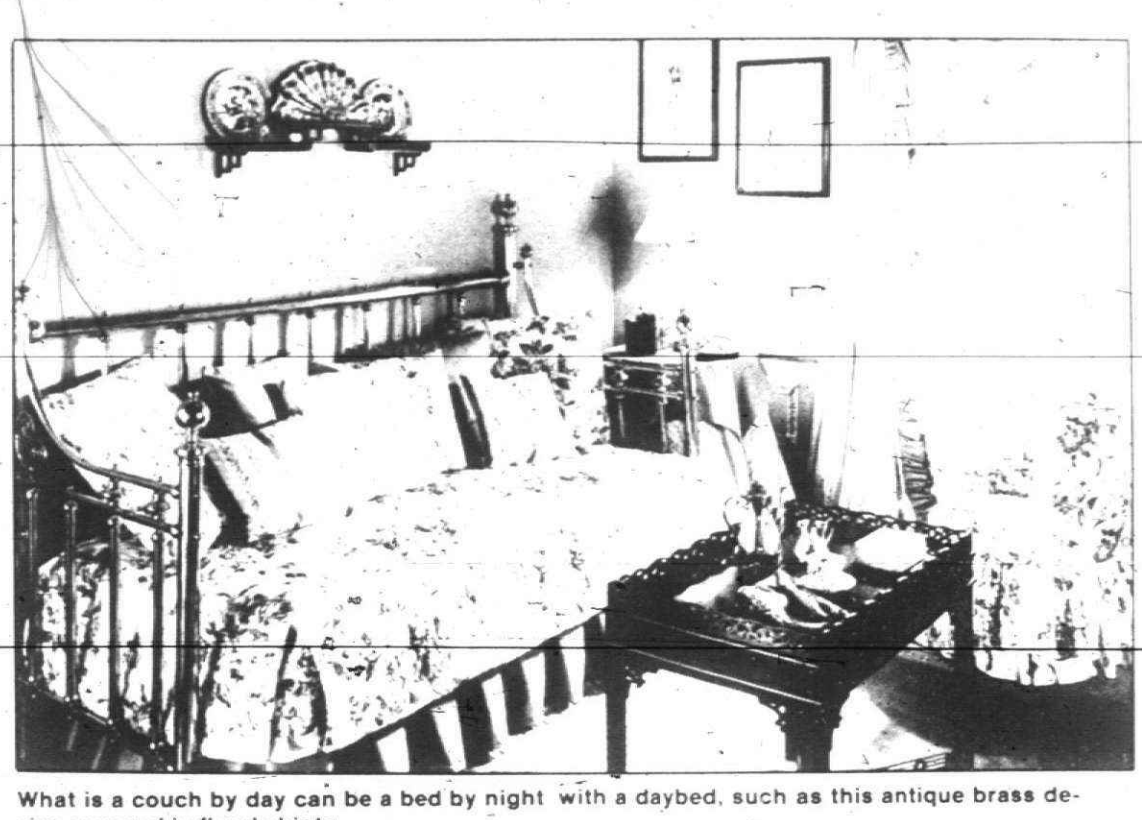

• Carpet also can help to increase apparent space when used as a construction material. By covering simple, geometrical structures with the same dense carpet used on the floor, you can create a bed platform, a sofa base, extra seating or a table. Used in a living dining room area, a raised dining platform can gracefully divide the two spaces, helping to give each a distinct personality.

• Use whatever space you have creatively. With the help of an interior designer or contractor, a nook can become a home office, a windowed alcove, a small sitting room or an unused closet a sewing space.

• Search your home for hidden storage possibilities. There often is space behind the drywall and paneling in your home between the two-by-four studs to which the finished walls are attached. If you're a handy do-it-yourselfer (or with the help of a skilled contractor), you can create bookshelves, cubbyholes for knickknacks, even a second medicine closet.

• Replace an ordinary window with a bay window for a decorative sitting niche.

• Rather than hiding behind doors, storage areas now are being integrated into the total design of the room, thus taking advantage of spaces that normally would be ignored. Some examples: open bookshelves, armoires, free-standing closets, nesting tables, platform beds, and bedside cabinets.

What is a couch by day can be a bed by night with a daybed, such as this antique brass design covered in floral chintz.

• Mini-blinds and shades take up virtually no space.

• Shine light on small spaces with wall-mounted lamps that never need a table. Uplighting with tracks or torchieres can push the ceilings and walls outward.

• Finally, make the most of what you have. If your closet is overflowing, give a closet customizer a call — most guarantee they can double your existing space through shelves, bars, storage units and wall attachments. Or, do it yourself with supplies from your favorite retailer.

AP — If you're tired of the same old furniture but can't afford to replace everything, try mix-and-match decorating.

According to Marian Artinger, an Atlanta-based furniture and interior designer, you can easily change the look of your home without spending a fortune.

All it takes, she says, is one or two pieces to breathe new life into old rooms. It's no longer necessary to throw out all the traditional to make way for the contemporary or to trade in the Early American for the country French.

"There's a big move toward eclectic decorating," said Artinger. "It's very acceptable to take a piece with a traditional feel, like a camelback sofa, and mix it with something that has clean, contemporary lines. Furniture periods can intermingle very successfully."

ARTINGER BELIEVES the quickest way to update your rooms is to invest in furniture that looks like it was made for a lifetime of lounging.

"The key word is comfort. Anything that's plush or luxurious is in," said the designer, who adds that furniture that is soft, sexy, sensual and seriously overscaled — with a softened contemporary look — is hot.

Included in this category are sectionals that feature lush, plump backs, generously tufted or channeled arms and deep seats.

Overscaled chairs are "perfect for snuggling with a book or a pet or both," said Artinger, who is a consultant to ARCO Chemical Co., a supplier of basic chemicals used to make polyurethane foam for the furniture field.

Many of today's styles recall the glamour of the 1930s and 1940s, with such details as scalloped shell backs and rolled arms, she said.

The current comfort craze is underscored by the popularity of motion furniture and extra-comfortable sleep sofas, Artinger added.

"THE BIGGEST piece of furniture that's hitting the market is anything with motion," including inclines and recliners, she said, adding that the recliner can now be found anywhere in the home, from contemporary to formal living rooms.

And it's almost always surrounded by an interior shell that's been given a playful color treatment — plain white walls, perhaps, with woodwork and window trim outlined in bright blue or mustard yellow.

WITH JUST A HINT of studied nonchalance, the postmoderns are quick to borrow and domesticate the exotic allure of distant cultures and ethnic style. They will appropriate Mexican equipales chairs or Middle Eastern fabrics — whatever seems to be the newest and latest. They are just as quick to abandon a trend and move on. Next month, blond wood furniture from the '50s?

The look is undeniably urban, yet it can be just as happily at home in a beach cottage or a suburban ranch house. Wherever they're found, postmodern rooms share a close attention to scale and proportion, so that disparate pieces work well together. And there's an emphasis on bold, but coordinating colors to aid visual unity.
