The Canton Connection

On the map

Canton Township may finally be included on the State of Michigan highway map.

An amendment to the 1988-89 Michigan Department of Transportation budget bill requests the addition, according to state Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton.

It asks for townships having a population greater than 15,000 to be included on the map in the 1990 edition.

"That a community of Canton's size, with 60,000 residents and two zip codes, is ignored on the official State of Michigan highway map while other communities with much smaller populations have designation is unacceptable," Kosteva said.

"Visitors to western Wayne County, truckers delivering their products and any other motorist traveling the I-275 corridor should have an easier time locating communities of this size," he said.

The transportation budget bill passed the House of Representatives May 10 and still awaits consideration by the Senate.

Golden brass

Canton Police Sgt. Laura Golles has been awarded the Women Police of Michigan Certificate of Recognition for outstanding service in the criminal justice field.

"In my opinion through Sgt. Golles' initiative and leadership she has established herself as an inspiration and role model to other women in the law enforcement community," said John Santomauro, Canton public safety director. He nominated Golles.

Santomauro commended her for her work in rehabilitating Canton's police reserve program.

Boat safety

Canton may be a little ways from a navigable waterway but that should not stop boaters from participating in a safety class.

The class is scheduled at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Canton Public Library. Members of the Plymouth Canton Coast Guard will give an overview of boating regulations and practices.

To sign up for this program, call 397-0999.

Dropped from suit

Two Canton police officers, Dan Antieau and Roger Pearsall, have been dismissed from a lawsuit filed for circumstances surrounding a 1986 traffic stop that involved the death of a 36-year-old Ypsilanti man.

The suit was filed by the victim's wife who said her husband complained of chest pains and collapsed behind the steering wheel while driving on Michigan Avenue at I-275. His cousin, a passenger in the car, began driving to a hospital.

Pearsall said he stopped her for driving 95 mph westbound on Michigan.

An allegation in the lawsuit said the officers failed to escort the man to a hospital when travel time would have been significantly less than waiting for the ambulance.

Circuit Judge Paul Teranes dismissed the officers from the lawsuit because they were acting in good faith while performing their duties as police officers, said Anne McLaughlin, an attorney representing the officers.

Divert cuts, program backers say

By M.B. Dillon

With phone calls and public pleas, supporters of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' begindergarten program are imploring school officials to make budget cuts around, not into, something they feel is essential.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education has been examining ways to cut the budget since voters turned down a tax increase in March.

The board is laying off 74 teachers, including three alternative education staff members, at the end of the school year.

The alternative education staff is following the lead of the begindergarten proponents, using another plan.

Canton High School Principal Thomas Tattan and nine alternative education teachers and social workers called a press conference last week to spread the word about their program.

Plymouth-Canton alternative programs, recipients of state and national honors and grants, help students deal with substance abuse, death, family break-ups, stress, job loss and personal conflict.

Offered in middle and high schools, the alternative programs include counseling, classes on chemical dependency and referral services.

They get results, staffers say, in the form of improved attendance and grades.

"We've been fighting the rap for a long time that we've been helping just the disenfranchised, when actually kids come to us from all kinds of families and socioeconomic groups," said Diane Matsumoto, alternative education teacher at Canton.

"We got labeled as a program that serves just the bad kids. We feel that's a myth."

Tattan estimated that alternative education services 5 percent of the student body that is "seriously at risk, another 10-15 percent on the fringes, and then others dealing with situational trauma" such as the death of a friend or loved one.

The attempt to deal with the entire student body marks a change from the 1950s when some kids were left behind, Tattan said.

"Our mission says all students can learn and achieve personal success.

"If we truly believe that all kids shall achieve success, we have to deal with all the kids who go to the school," Tattan said.

Nic Cooper, coordinator of middle school alternative education, said, "The question is, do we invest in students' success or in their failure? If we don't invest in their success, we end up paying $30,000 a year to put them in prison. It costs $3,500 a year to educate a student."

Early on, students are getting involved with sex and drugs, and therefore are "making adult decisions and facing adult crises at a very young age," Cooper added.

Staffers defend trauma program

Five Plymouth-Canton students have died this year; more than the total for the previous 10 years.

The latest death came early this month when Julie Monte was killed in a car accident on Ann Arbor Road.

Monte was well-liked and popular. So the atmosphere at Plymouth Salem High School shortly after her death was understandably one of "shock and disbelief."

"There was intense sadness and crying in the halls. Kids were grief stricken," said Mary Vertrees, a Canton High School service specialist.

In past years, there was no organized way to respond during a time of crisis. But Vertrees and about two dozen other staffers at Centennial Educational Park now serve on what's called the Response Team.

"THE TRAUMATIC event may involve large numbers of staff and students, or only a few, but the school must be prepared to intervene," said Canton Principal Thomas Tattan.

"The problem is how can you deal with feelings with an institution of more than 5,000 people. It's like a little city. The idea is to show people we care; that our operation is not put

Board will study impact of 'yes' on override vote

By Doug Funke
staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton school board, which previously reached informal agreement on $4.8 million in spending cuts for next year, will meet Monday to study what restorations to make if voters say yes to a Headlee Amendment override June 13.

Tonight's workshop meeting begins at 7:30 in the board offices, 454 S. Harvey in downtown Plymouth.

"As part of the process of setting a budget, it's a critical step," said David Artley, board president. "I think we've been straightforward (about cuts). Now we're going to start the side-by-side process . . . what we're going to put back."

A presentation on middle school educational philosophy will precede the budget discussion.

A HEADLEE override would allow the school district to levy operating taxes at a rate of $37 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation (half of market value) for the 1988-89 academic year.

Property owners now pay for school operations at a rate of $36.02 per $1,000 of SEV.

State law would require a rollback in the levy to $32.94 without a truth-in-taxation hearing, $34.17 with the hearing and vote by the board.

The board already has set that hearing for May 23 and likely will set the tax rate for operations at $34.17 when adopting its 1988-89 budget May 31.

Property owners now pay for school operations at a rate of $36.02 per $1,000 of SEV.

All of that would change, however, if voters approve the Headlee override June 13.

The board ostensibly then would set the tax rate at $37 and amend the '88-89 budget by rescinding cuts to be identified tonight.

THE DIFFERENCE in taxes due between levies of $37 and $34.17 is about $141 to the owner of a house with a market value of $100,000.

The higher tax rate would mean an additional $3.7 million in revenue for the district, according to school projections.

School officials blame most of their money woes on declining state aid. Aid was projected at $9.2 mil-

Canton brothers win small business award

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Long hours and hard work are the keys to a successful business.

That advice comes from people who should know — two brothers selected as Canton's Small Business Person(s) of the Year last week.

Jack and Bob Koers, owners of Plymouth Construction Equipment Inc. on Ford Road, were applauded by local and state officials for their business operations and civic commitment.

"A lot of hard work paid off," said Bob Koers, 44, after the award ceremony at Fellows Creek Golf Club.

IN THE EARLY 1960s, their father Everett Koers started the company that now sells and rents construction equipment. Shortly after, his sons joined the business following Navy discharges. Their father has since retired.

"We're hoping to pass it on to our sons if we can," said Jack Koers, 43. Both brothers each have one son.

What's it like to work with family?

"Really we're just very fortunate, we see eye to eye on everything," Jack Koers said.

Team fears program cutbacks out of whack in the event of tragedy, so that things can get back to normal and we can respond in a human fashion to the needs of people, " Tattan added.

Steve Foley, a Plymouth Salem social worker, said "we're a school community. When something happens that's serious, it's a matter of concern to everyone. The Response Team should be ready to deal with the rumors, fear and reaction. We're being responsive to kids at a time of grief."

What team members, trained in grief counseling, attempt to accomplish is multi-faceted.

"We try to help kids understand that their feelings are OK. We help kids find resources. In interviews we ask them how they'd feel talking to their parents. We plug kids in to what to do next, and to outside resources. Families are a big part of that," Foley said.

PARENTS TAKE advantage of the program also, calling in for advice and counseling.

Response Team members are pleased they're able to provide a service available at very few other schools. They're unhappy about the prospect of looming budget cuts that could mean the demise or curtailing of the program.

"We're teaching students also to care about other human beings . . . and to learn how to react when they've lost someone they care about," said Tattan. "That's important."

Work to divert cuts —program backers

"Before teachers can expect kids to care about math and science, things like substance abuse, child abuse and alcohol use have to (be) dealt with.

"Those are the major issues in their lives. Without help, those kids will fall through the cracks. They'll drop out," said Tattan.

"Sometimes we ask ourselves, 'Is this really our job?' The answer we come up with is, 'What other institution is going to fill the role when parents don't? Churches aren't, because (students) aren't going to church either."

Deborah Trapp, alternative education teacher at Salem High School, has seen drastic change over the years.

Plymouth-Canton alternative programs, recipients of state and national honors and grants, help students deal with substance abuse, death, family break-ups, stress, job loss and personal conflict.

"Ten years ago, you were made fun of and laughed at if you talked about abstinence. Now kids are proud to be recovering, picking up the pieces and turning their lives around."

Brothers win business award

They have separate duties.

"He takes care of rental and service, and I take care of sales and general office," Jack Koers said. "That seems to work."

Recent business accomplishments include introducing to the auto industry epoxie non-skid surfaces for concrete. And since starting the rental division in 1973, the service has grown to almost half the business.

Plymouth Construction also is available to Canton officials during emergencies, according to chamber file information.

"I appreciate all you've done and the Chamber of Commerce appreciates all you've done," said James Poole, Canton supervisor.

The Plymouth Elks, the Masonic Lodge and the Colony Farms Homeowners Association are some of the business organizations the brothers are involved in.

OTHER WINNERS of the Small Business award are: Service — Gerald Folk, Bill Brown Auto Clinic owner/manager; Retail — Bonnie Berg, Bart's Rustic Lawn Furniture owner; Professional — Timothy Ford, Modern Insurance Agency owner; Financial — Mary Diane Gyorke, Community Federal Credit Union-Canton Branch manager.

Receiving awards from peers is the highest compliment, said James Glinski, chamber president and last year's Small Business Award winner.

Leadership is an important part of government, community and business, said John Santomauro, Canton public safety director during the award ceremony.

"Leaders in business must also be leaders in their community," Santomauro said.

County wants study on area road problems

By Diane Gale
staff writer

You don't need statistics to convince motorists there's a congestion problem on Sheldon approaching Ford Road.

All it takes is a ride during rush hour.

But before improvement efforts are taken, Wayne County wants a study to document problems on Sheldon and other Ford Road feeder streets — Canton Center, Morton Taylor, Lilley and Haggerty.

AT A RECENT board meeting, Supervisor James Poole and Trustee John Preniczky said they would support committing local dollars to help alleviate the back-ups on these connector roads. Ford Road is a state highway and the connector streets are county roads.

"It seems to be a pretty big problem," Preniczky said.

Targeting local dollars for left turn traffic arrows and other remedies are as worthy as using Canton money to pave roads, he added.

Canton, Wayne County and Michigan Department of Transportation representatives recently have met to discuss the problems.

"At the conclusion of the study they would decide what to do on adding a left turn lane on Sheldon and what other measures they could take to help that intersection," said Tom Casari, Canton engineer.

Residents complain about the "tremendous backup" on Lilley more so than any of the other feeder roads, he said.

The Sheldon study is under way now and should be complete in two months, Casari said. A similar review of Lilley is expected to begin in August or later this year.

These studies will include traffic counts, reviewing accident data and intersection layouts, Casari said.

ADDING LEFT TURN lanes and left turn phase signals are among improvement measures that could be taken on the feeder roads.

"On Lilley they want to wait until the completion of Canton Corners — a shopping center on the southwest corner," Casari said.

The Canton Corners developer has committed to widening Lilley on the south side of Ford at the intersection.

"And the county is considering making improvements on the north side of Ford at Lilley," Casari said.

Haggerty Road has five lanes with left turn lanes. Exactly what could be done to improve traffic flow on Haggerty is undecided.

lion this year, $4.6 million next.

Last month, the board reached consensus on about $4.8 million in program cuts and participation fees.

They included:

- Eliminating 62 certified staff positions, including teachers and counselors with a projected savings of $1.4 million.
- Instituting a patchwork maintenance philosophy and cut the major maintenance budget by 35 percent — a savings of $460,000.
- Putting a freeze on buying new textbooks with a projected savings of $315,000.
- Reducing or eliminating five administrative support staff positions with a projected savings of $256,000.
- Cutting the budget for educational aides, who assist in classrooms, offices, lunchrooms and playgrounds by 52 percent — a savings of $244,000.

In addition, the board gave a tentative blessing to participation fees for sports and other afterschool activities next year at the middle school and high school levels.

That fee would raise only about $80,000 — but likely affect students most directly and touch off the most criticism.

Board members have emphasized that all cuts so far identified probably wouldn't be restored even if the Headlee override were to succeed.

Potential cheerleaders go through the motions.

"Easy, isn't it?" asks Wendy West after demonstrating a cheer.

'They learned cheering, jumping, chanting, gymnastics and other moves. This is just a healthy thing for girls to do.'

Laurel Ream, a current Canton cheerleader, demonstrates a cheer.

Cheerleaders catch the spirit

When cheerleaders perform a routine, most spectators don't consider the amount of effort and hours put in to make sure the performance goes smoothly.

But they should according to the coaches of the two high school teams.

"It's not just a cute girl out there," said Beth Whitley, cheerleader coach at Plymouth Salem High School. "This is a demanding job. They work for it."

Her counterpart at Plymouth Canton High School, Bonnie West, agreed.

"We practice three days a week," she said. "During football season we have a game a week, during basketball season two games a week."

The girls also go to camp in the summer and perform other duties, all in the name of school spirit, she said.

And last week, hopefuls tried out for the 20 available cheerleading positions at Salem and 18 at Canton.

A total of 68 Canton and 53 Salem students were hoping to land a spot on the varsity or junior varsity squads. The tryouts were Saturday.

Former cheerleaders served as judges for the tryouts and kept a close eye on the competitors.

But before the tryouts, eighth through 11th graders attended cheerleading clinics during the week in order to brush up on routines and discover the various aspects of cheerleading.

"They learned cheering, jumping, chanting, gymnastics and other moves," West said. "This is just a healthy thing for girls to do."

Local prison omitted from reduction order

A Wayne County circuit judge has ordered the state corrections department to relieve overcrowding at one area prison — but not at two others a stone's throw away, including one in Plymouth Township.

Judge Charles Farmer ordered a reduction in the prison population from 646 to 550 at Scott Regional Facility in Northville Township by June 6.

However, Farmer ruled on narrow grounds and didn't address crowding at the Phoenix Correctional Facility in Northville or at the Western Wayne Correctional Facility in Plymouth Township, said Ernest Essad, a lawyer for the township.

Western Wayne, on Five Mile west of Beck, has a legislative-mandated cap of 500 inmates. The medium-security prison lodged 536 as of Friday, according to Kurt Jones, assistant warden.

WESTERN WAYNE has been over its cap for about a month "because of overcrowding throughout the system," Jones said.

He said he doesn't know when Western Wayne's population will return to 500. "It depends on how many beds the department can open up for us. It's a crunch being felt throughout the system."

Extra beds have been put in the three wards and a few rooms in newly constructed wings to accommodate the overflow at Western Wayne, Jones said.

Essad said he intends to pursue the crowding in court. He also has written to Attorney General Frank Kelley asking him to enforce state law on crowding.

"There's a state law on the books. They (corrections officials) are violating it," Essad said.

Neither Jones nor Supervisor Maurice Breen perceive the crowding as a threat to staff or the community.

"IT'S ALWAYS desirable to stay in your capacity," Jones said. "I do not believe that few (36) bodies creates undue amount of problems for us in facilities or undue burden on the community."

"The reality is when they escape, they tend to keep running," Breen said.

Essad said he doesn't have an answer to the statewide prison crowding problem.

"I'm not privy to department of correction information and what its capabilities. I think Northville knows it's done its part. Plymouth, too."

Land ruling favors schools

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Chalk one up for the Plymouth-Canton schools.

The state attorney general has issued an opinion that undeveloped school-owned land is exempt from property taxes.

Maurice Breen, Plymouth Township supervisor who asked for the opinion, said he'll remove the 17-acre parcel at Ann Arbor Trail and McClumpha Road from the tax rolls.

The property, adjacent to McClumpha Park, was placed on the rolls by township assessors in 1986.

Breen has said the parcel was put on the rolls and the attorney general's opinion sought to get school officials to do something — build or, preferably, donate or sell the land to the township.

The township wants to add the parcel to its park.

The school district purchased the property in 1968 for $59,885. There are no immediate plans to construct a school there.

"THEY KEEP saying they're going to use it for a school site," Breen said. "Demographics (population studies) don't support it. I guess we still have disagreement."

School officials intend to review enrollment rates and recommend a course of action on all surplus property during the next several months, said Raymond Hoedel, associate superintendent for business.

"There's no desire on the part of the board to sell that land until we see there's no need for it," said Superintendent John M. Hoben.

None of three tax bills submitted by the township to the schools for the McClumpha property had been paid. School administrators always maintained the position that the land was exempt.

Breen said he isn't optimistic about ever acquiring the McClumpha property.

"In order to have consensus, you must move off hard positions," he said.

The reference apparently was to a recent joint meeting of school and municipal officials that touched on property, among other things.

Exposure suspect arrested

A 24-year-old Canton man was arrested after an alleged indecent exposure and aggravated assault incident last week.

A Village Squire Apartments maintenance worker said he saw a man with his coat and shirt open and his pants unbuttoned and unzipped about 2:30 p.m. behind the apartment complex on Ford Road near Lotz, said Dave Boljesic, Canton police information officer.

The maintenance worker told police he called out to the man and chased him as he ran away, Boljesic said. When the maintenance worker caught up to the man, he pinned him to the ground.

The man bit the maintenance worker's left arm during the struggle. The maintenance worker released him when the man began clawing and scratching his face, police said.

The man fled on foot toward the woods near Lotz.

Canton police went to the suspect's house and arrested the man in connection with the incident and for outstanding bench warrants from other communities.

He was taken to Canton Township jail pending formal charges late last week.

Investors to meet to decide theater's fate

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

The fate of the Omni Star Performing Arts Theatre in Livonia will likely be decided Wednesday at a meeting of stockholders who have invested in the ill-fated theater.

Stockholders will reportedly decide their next step of action, according to someone who has regularly attended meetings but declined to be named.

"Their mood is somber. They are very discouraged," he said.

For now, doors to the theater are closed and probably will remain so unless a new source of money can be found, the source added.

STOCKHOLDERS ARE described by the source as area professionals and business people who have invested sums of $15,000 to $35,000 each. "Most have limited funds for investment."

The largest stockholder is Therese Morelli, wife of the theater's former manager, Ed Morelli. She owns 3,750 shares.

An additional 18,750 shares are owned by 11 stockholders.

Currently, the Omni's debt amounts to about $600,000, including back wages, contractor and artists' fees, and advance ticket sales.

"It would take an additional $400,000 to reopen," he said, "The only person who made out is the landlord. The building has been totally refurbished.

"It's going to take new investors with money. It's a real shame. The community needed this so badly," he added.

ATTEMPTS TO reach former manager Morelli were unsuccessful.

Morelli resigned as manager of the club at a meeting of stockholders on May 2, according to the source who said he was at the meeting when the resignation took place.

Morelli also operates Omni Limousine in Farmington and Plymouth.

"By customer request," the phone number at Omni Limousine has been changed. The new listing is a recording that asks the caller to leave a message. Morelli did not respond to messages that were left for him.

The last performance at the theater was the Temptations on April 21-24. Performances by Paul Anka, scheduled for April 29-30, and Joan Rivers, scheduled for May 14, were cancelled.

Advance ticket holders to either performance may file complaints with the Livonia Police but doing so has nothing to do with possible future reimbursements, according to Lt. Bobby Duren of the Livonia Police Department.

Police are investigating whether tickets were sold after Omni management knew the performances by Anka and Rivers had been cancelled.

"It's a drawn-out process. We're plugging away at it," Duren said.

A spokesman for Ticketmaster, a Southfield-based agency that sold tickets to cancelled performances, advised those who purchased advanced tickets to be patient.

"We're in the figuring-out stage right now, trying to figure out what we can do to protect our customers," said Bob Garsh of Ticketmaster.

Deficit top local concern

Local residents are mostly worried about the federal budget deficit and its impact on American jobs and the nation's economy, according to U.S. Rep. William Ford's annual survey.

Ford, a Taylor Democrat who has represented the 15th Congressional District for 24 years, said an estimated 12,000 persons answered his annual survey.

Ford's district includes Westland, Garden City, Canton Township and the south half of Livonia.

AN OVERWHELMING 85 percent of those answering the survey supported a provision to the federal trade bill, he said. The provision would require companies with 100 or more workers to give at least 60 days notice of a plant closing and permanent layoffs to employees.

It was the plant closing provision, introduced in every congressional session by Ford since 1974, that President Reagan is using to threaten a veto of the trade bill, Ford said.

The president "is completely out of step with the voters on this issue," Ford said.

LARGE MAJORITIES in the survey favor both the president's major arms control initiatives with the Soviet Union — the INF treaty and the proposal that both the United States and Soviet Union reduce strategic nuclear forces by 50 percent.

Wayne-Westland sets staff layoffs

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

Wayne Memorial High School and Stevenson Junior High School — each projected to lose four teachers next fall — were the schools hardest hit by layoffs approved Monday by the Wayne-Westland school board.

The district layoff list represents the smallest planned cutback by Wayne-Westland Community Schools in at least 10 years, school officials said. The district serves southeast Canton.

In addition to the 30 layoffs districtwide, school officials have proposed the elimination of 12.6 academic positions at Wayne Memorial to compensate for a projected enrollment drop of 304 students. Projected 1988-89 enrollment at Wayne Memorial is 1,600, about 300 fewer students than the projected enrollment figure at John Glenn High School.

Some Wayne Memorial teachers will be reassigned to other schools to make up the difference between the layoffs and number of jobs eliminated.

Scheduled layoffs at other schools are: Adams Junior High, three full-time and one part-time; Marshall Junior High, three; William Ford Vocational/Technical Center, three; John Glenn, two; Franklin Junior High, two; one elementary school teacher, one social worker, one special needs counselor; and five teachers on leave or homebound.

SIX OF THE 30 teachers and counselors may be be recalled to part-time positions.

"Nobody likes to recommend layoffs," said Superintendent Dennis O'Neill. "But I think we have an obligation to recommend the most responsible move for the district."

O'Neill said the district projects a loss of 421 students next fall and a corresponding reduction in the amount of state aid the district will receive. There are 17,331 full-time students enrolled this year, according to the September count.

O'Neill said he expects a 2 percent increase per student in the amount of state aid. The increase, he said, wouldn't be enough to carry extra teachers.

Despite the relatively low number of layoffs, the administration proposal drew criticism from two school board members and William Reece, president of the teachers' union.

"This action is not in the best interest of the kids," said Kathleen Chorbagian, who voted against the layoffs.

"WE CANNOT continue to devastate the classroom by doing this (teacher layoffs) year after year," she said.

How college tuition guarantee plan works

By Tim Richard
staff writer

With a lump sum payment of about $6,400, parents can guarantee their newborn child four years tuition at a state college when the child is ready.

Invested by the state, money in the the Michigan Education Trust (MET) fund will cover fees estimated to total $28,000 for four years of college by the year 2006, said Treasurer Robert Bowman.

The way it works: A parent's capital will earn 10 percent and be compounded; tuitions are estimated to rise 6-7 percent a year; and the 3-percent "spread" enables the state to guarantee the 1988's investment will cover 2006's tuition.

For two hours recently, Bowman fielded dozens of questions in the Southfield-Lathrup High gym. The audience started at nearly 2,000 but dwindled to 100 by what Bowman said was his 10 p.m. bedtime.

"We never dreamed we'd have this kind of turnout," said Gov. James Blanchard, who hired the former Wall Street investment banker as his top economic aide in 1983. Blanchard spoke briefly but left all the tough questions to the 33-year-old graduate of Harvard and Pennsylvania's Wharton School of finance. Some questions and his answers (paraphrased):

Q. Suppose the child doesn't want to go to college.
A. You get back what you paid in, plus interest, minus administrative costs. Same thing if the child dies before enrolling in college.

Q. What if the child wants to go to a private college such as the University of Detroit or an out-of-state school such as Ohio State?
A. The state will pay the equivalent of the average tuition at a Michigan college but can't guarantee to cover 100 percent of the cost, as it will if the child goes to a state college.

Q. When can I enroll my child?
A. There will be a five-day period this June when the state will guarantee to enroll all applicants registered at one of the five state Treasury offices. In future years, there may be a quota on how many can be enrolled.
The Detroit office is at 1200 Sixth St. The main office address is: State Treasurer, Lansing 48922.
To get the enrollment form and a copy of the contract, call toll-free 1-800-MET-4-KID. Request one copy for each child you plan to enroll.

Q. We don't have $6,400 in loose cash. Can we arrange payments?
A. Yes, through any savings and loan association in the state. S&Ls will be the "delivery" arm of the program.

You can borrow your investment from the S&L for payments as low as $25-$30 a month. The loan is guaranteed by the state.

If you use your house as equity, you can deduct the mortgage interest from taxable income. The interest your education trust fund equity earns will be tax free.

Q. Can I invest just enough to guarantee one, two or three years of college?
A. Yes.

Q. If my first child decides against college, can I transfer it to my second child?
A. Yes — to a member of the immediate family.

Q. How are tuition payments handled?
A. The state pays it directly to the college.

Q. You've talked about what it would cost to enroll a newborn, but my children are five and eight years away from college.
A. Costs for older children will be outlined in a brochure. Costs will be higher. For those already in high school, the cost will be about $2,300 per year of college — nearly full prepayment. Those enrolling as high school students must indicate their college of choice because costs vary widely between state colleges.

Q. Can I transfer money into the education trust fund from my IRA without paying income tax?
A. Not under current law.
If you cashed in U.S. savings bonds to buy into the education trust fund, you would have to pay tax on the bond interest.

Q. If my child doesn't go to college and elects to take the money in cash, will he have to pay income tax on it?
A. Yes, but not much. The $20,000 can be spread over four years.

Q. Can my child stretch out his college work over five years?
A. Yes, but the education trust fund will cover only four years of college credits. Likewise, the student can attend summer school and complete degree work in three calendar years, but the state will cover four years worth of college credits.
We're not going to guarantee college for "professional students."

Q. What if my child prodigy is able to start college at 15 or 16?

Pacific rim issues symposium focus

History and ROTC students, professionals in business, labor and commerce and others interested in international trade are invited to attend an Asia-Pacific sea power symposium Wednesday, at the Westin Hotel in downtown Detroit.

Nationally recognized experts will discuss economic, political and security issues facing the U.S. and Michigan and our relations with the Pacific Rim nations of Japan, Korea, China, Singapore, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Malaysia and other rapidly growing countries.

This session, sponsored by the metro Detroit Council of the Navy League of the United States, will follow immediately after the Armed Forces Day luncheon of the Economic Club of Detroit, to be addressed by Admiral J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The luncheon, expected to draw at least 1,000, gets under way at noon. The symposium is scheduled 1:45-4:15 p.m., also at the Westin.

"In Michigan, we are increasingly looking to the nations of the Pacific Rim as markets for our products and as sources of supply for components of products, especially of vehicles, that we make and sell. Already, the Pacific Rim is a greater market for us than all of Europe. And it is growing," said Lee Landes of Livonia, a retired rear admiral in the U.S. Naval Reserve and an organizer of the event.

"We are faced with unique pressures in the area because of increasing pressure from the Soviets, whose fleet in the Pacific far outnumbers ours. We need to understand this.

"Anybody who is involved in anything related to international trade anywhere in the world — business, labor, banking, finance, education, freight handling and forwarding, shipping, insurance, strategic planning — has a vital interest in this subject," Landes said.

Symposium panelists will include Professor A. James Gregor, University of California at Berkeley political scientist and principal investigator of the Pacific Basin Project at the Institute of International Studies; David Littmann, first vice president and senior economist of Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit; and Rear Admiral Edward Baker Jr., director of the East Asia/Pacific Region, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (International Security Affairs).

Littman is a Bloomfield Hills resident.

Moderating the symposium will be Michael Kenny, one-time newscaster for WJR radio in Detroit and a Naval Reserve captain, now an Oakland County attorney.

Tickets for the symposium are $5 and may be obtained from the Navy League at 19250 Berg, Detroit 48219 (535-2113).

Latecomers may buy tickets at the Columbus Ballroom at the Westin Hotel at meeting time Wednesday. To attend the Economic Club luncheon meeting, call the club at 963-8547.

WHAT BLOOD TESTS HELP?
Rheumatologists rarely use blood tests to diagnose rheumatoid arthritis, osteoarthritis, psoriatic arthritis, or ankylosing spondylitis. However, in following rheumatologic conditions, blood studies play an important role in patient care.
One of the most useful examinations is the complete blood count (CBC). This test includes a determination of blood hemoglobin concentration. A normal value means that the patient is not having stomach irritation from medication, and that the arthritis is under sufficient control to permit production of normal red blood cells.
A CBC includes a count of the platelets and white blood cells present in the blood. These values are important for a physician to follow because both arthritis itself, and many of the drugs used to treat the condition, can lower either the platelets, white blood cells, or both.
The CBC is inexpensive, simple to perform, requires but a small amount of blood, and can be repeated often with little inconvenience to the patient. This test illustrates that even in this era of sophisticated technology an honored place remains for the simple and traditional.

How state fund covers college

A. We've factored that into the price. Tuition is guaranteed. It's also guaranteed for up to eight years after the normal college starting age.

Q. What if my child qualifies for a scholarship?
A. Take the scholarship, then apply the education trust fund money to room and board or transfer the education trust fund to another child, or ask for a refund.

Q. Who controls the money — the donor or beneficiary?
A. For tax reasons, you will want the beneficiary to control it.

Q. This program seems to be for middle-income people. What about the child from a welfare family or whose parents can't qualify for a loan to join the education trust fund?
A. You're right — it is for middle-income people, but it's only one of several state educational programs. The TIP program covers two years at a community college for a child who has been on welfare.

Q. Is this limited to middle-income people?
A. No, people of any income level can join. But it's frankly of most benefit to middle-income people.

Q. Suppose my kid flunks out after two years.
A. You'll get the equivalent of a two-year refund. But if he stays in longer than two years, the money stays with the system.

Q. Suppose, because of the popularity of this program, there's an overwhelming demand for one university. Who decides which students get in?
A. The university admissions officer. There may well be stiff competition to get into certain colleges.

Q. Can I, as an adult, enroll in the education trust fund now and go to college 20 years from now?
A. There would be no discount at your age. It wouldn't be worth it.

Q. How many children may I enroll?
A. As many children as you have. You actually have to have the bambino in your arms. A baby can't be enrolled before birth. (There were many pregnant women in the audience.)

Q. Does my child have to have a Social Security number?
A. We'd prefer it, but you don't have to have one.

Q. Why do I have to get a loan from the S&L? Can't the state make loans?
A. I don't want the government to become a banker. Also, S&L's are available everywhere while the state treasurer has only a handful of offices.

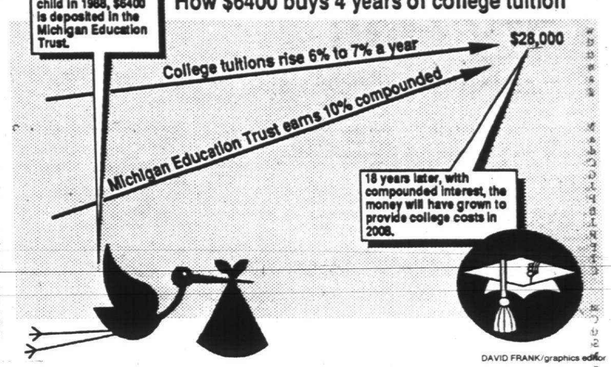
Q. Can I get my investment out early (before the child reaches 18) in case of an emergency?
A. We won't make it easy. This is an education program — we don't want anyone using it to buy a sailboat.

If there were an emergency, you would have to appear before the education trust fund board in order to withdraw your money.

Q. I'm concerned that the University of Michigan is charging a "computer fee" even for students who don't use computers. One of these days, U-M will have a "walk on the grass" fee. Can those be covered by the education trust fund?
A. We saw those sneaky devils coming. All mandatory fees will be covered. But not books, room and board.

Upon the birth of a child in 1988, $6400 is deposited in the Michigan Education Trust.

How $6400 buys 4 years of college tuition



DAVID FRANK/graphics editor

With a lump sum payment of about $6,400, parents can guarantee their newborn child four years tuition at a state college when the child is ready. Invested by the state, money in the Michigan Education Trust fund will cover fees estimated to total $28,000 for four years of college by the year 2006, according to state Treasurer Robert Bowman.

City Hall

Combination plan created fuss past and present

Sam Hudson

"The site upon which old City Hall was erected was purchased in the spring of 1889. Subsequently, there arose a controversy as to what type of structure should be constructed there."

Karl Starkweather, Plymouth historian until his death in 1969, spoke at the laying of the cornerstone of Plymouth's new City Hall in May 1964. Born here in 1899, Starkweather gave his recollections of the old structure, torn down the year it was replaced by the new building.

"One element wanted a combination Village Hall-Village Opera House. The other insisted that the building should be constructed for one purpose only — for a Village Hall and nothing else — no shows permitted. After a court fight, the combination people won. We now had a Village Hall and a Village Opera House combined. The structure continued to be the political, cultural and entertainment center of Plymouth for long years to come."

MINSTREL SHOWS, high school commencement exercises, Memorial Day and other community events were held on the upper floor of the building. Plymouth's first movies and the first demonstration of a new invention called the phonograph took place there.

Starkweather said his grandfather, George W. Starkweather, the first settler's child to be born in Plymouth, spoke at a political rally in the hall, "declaring that he believed the time would come when women would be allowed to vote."

Typical of entertainments put on at the Opera House part of the building was the production, in December 1893, of "The Belles of Blackville." A cast of 21 local girls, including Kate Penniman Allen, staged the show to raise proceeds to buy a village fire alarm — a worthy endeavor since the business block on Main Street, opposite Kellogg Park, had burned to the ground in April of that year, and there was much concern that the community's firefighting system was inadequate.

Old Village Hall served the community for 74 years, being remodeled on several occasions. In 1918, the theater portion was closed to make way for a new fire truck and council chambers.

ALTHOUGH SOME in town favored turning the old building into a recreation center, there was no concerted movement to save it. Many residents said the building was an eyesore. "The windows are dry-rotted, the ceilings in many rooms sag and the floors roll and weave," declared city manager Al Glassford.

Commissioner Bob Sincock suggested the need for a new City Hall as early as 1954. He continued to promote the idea during the years when he was mayor pro-tem and during his term as mayor (1961-63).

Plans to build a new City Hall went into high gear in September 1962, when Congress passed a Public Works Acceleration Act permitting federal grants for projects that would create employment and bolster the economy. The city applied for funds but was told that application had to be made by a municipal building authority that would act as a landlord for the building, renting it to the community.

The authority was quickly appointed. The MBA needed to raise $360,000 and it issued 360 bonds at $1,000 each, selling them at an average interest of 3.46%. They were to be retired over the next 24 years.

The structure continued to be the political, cultural and entertainment center of Plymouth for long years to come.

— Karl Starkweather
Plymouth historian

The new City Hall was leased to the city by the MBA at a rental of $28,000 per year. That rental money was used to pay interest and retire the bond. When the last bond was redeemed (as it was few years ago), the MBA was to be dissolved, turning the building over to the city.

THE FEDERAL grant-in-aid ($255,500) was not to exceed 50 percent of the cost of the building, and did not include land costs. Two parcels of land adjacent to the library were purchased for $70,000. The Christian Science Church, adjacent to old City Hall, had been acquired previously for $25,000.

Groundbreaking for the new building was held on Oct. 6, 1963, when Richard Wernette was mayor. The cornerstone was laid on May 22, 1964, with U.S. Rep. Martha Griffiths and U.S. Sen. Philip Hart at the ceremonies.

Although the City Hall bonds were paid off, the Municipal Building Authority was not dissolved as originally intended. The city soon realized that it was an excellent vehicle for use in financing other community projects.

It has been used as the bonding authority for the construction of the Cultural Center, the addition to the library, the building of the court house, the central parking structure, additions to City Hall, and the new DPW buildings.

City finance officer Bill Graham, who has been a member of the Municipal Authority since 1973, is now the MBA chairman.

Mastering word skills through bifocals

Fred DeLano

THIS WRITER owes an apology to Jean Anne Baker, adult education teacher at the Melby Community Education Center in Warren, and to her students for not having answered their January correspondence long before this. What they had to say brings a sense of deep satisfaction that occasionally Bifocals winds up someplace other than the bottom of a bird cage.

I had written a mid-December column on the power of the written and properly spelled word and Ms. Baker spotted it in our Troy edition. She accompanied her own letter to me with personally addressed letters from several of her students.

"THESE LETTERS were the final component of an assignment based on your article," she wrote. "Our class is one designed to teach the foundations of phonics and spelling. When I read your article, it seemed like the perfect project for my class to tackle.

"After reading the piece together, we discussed (sometimes heatedly) its implications. The students' reactions were varied but as you will read in their letters, there did exist a common thread.

"I hope to see more attention given to the importance of the basic skills being taught and, more importantly, learned by students of all ages.

"You may be interested to know that this class ranges in age from the mid-20s to late 70s. They are a wonderful group, who despite all their responsibilities, have made a commitment to come back to school and fill in those gaps left void in earlier schooling. I cannot tell you how much I admire them."

OK, so let's see if we can identify that common thread by quoting a few comments from the students.

First, though, just to refresh your memory, the column in question was one in which I chided former television newscaster Tom Greene, now a Lansing press agent, for his tongue-in-cheek statement as reported by the Associated Press, "Look, I'm a broadcaster, and we don't have to know how to spell." The AP had claimed to find 17 mistakes in a two-paragraph news release from Greene.

THE FIRST letter I opened started out, "I think your point was well made, but your sarcasm and attitude aren't necessary." Later he added, "If you were genuinely concerned about correct grammar and spelling, you would write articles addressing their importance, not attacking one individual. Why not channel your efforts and try to set a standard in the print media?"

Another gave Greene the benefit of the doubt, saying, "I don't think he wanted to give the impression that spelling is not important. He has an important job and does need to know how to spell and write correctly. Maybe he said what he did because he has a good-paying job."

One of the women wrote, "I'm in English class to learn how to spell and read and write. Everybody should have a dictionary. I myself use the dictionary a lot because I want to know how to spell the words the right way."

Said still another woman, "There are a lot of people in this world who want to spell properly and better themselves. This article touched home with everyone in our class . . . I was skeptical about the article. Now I fully understand it. Spelling is the most important part in communicating one's opinions or feelings."

AND FROM a fifth student came the comment, "I believe your criticism of Tom Greene was correct in showing how a man in his position could write a two-paragraph news release with 17 mistakes, but I don't believe you have any business writing an article and singling Mr. Green out on a personal level.

"I also believe that if you directed more of your articles to our educational system and the importance of learning how to read, write and spell, and making it a point that no child should be passed to a higher grade without knowing his or her basic phonic skills, that it would do more good for our children and improve our school system too.

"I would like to thank you for letting me voice my opinion."

Yes, there's a thread that binds these adult classmates. It's in their sincere quest to master the skills necessary for verbal or written communication. It strikes me that Jean Anne Baker is doing an outstanding job in leading them to that goal.

P.I.P. Fest was success

To the editor:

On Friday, April 29, through Saturday evening, April 30, Plymouth-Canton Schools hosted a Partners In Prevention Festival at Central Middle School for 99 seventh, eighth, and ninth graders.

P.I.P. Fest is a drug prevention overnight conference where students receive training in communication and helping others.

Students gained knowledge and insights through large-group presentations on relationships, feelings and defenses, alcoholic families and stress management. The small-share groups were a highlight for students as they could discuss topics and their feelings with group members and adult facilitators.

Many people were responsible for making Michigan's first overnight Middle School P.I.P. Fest such a great success. The P.I.P. Fest Committee would like to publicly thank the following people:

The students who attended, parents who allowed them to attend, adults who facilitated and co-facilitated the share groups, volunteers who helped chaperone activities, parents who attended presentations and shared in the emotions, middle school administrators who served lunch, the fantastic custodial staff at Central, Bob Schinker for donating his DJ services, the Community Task Force for financial support, and the Canton Rotary for financial support.

The quality of the experience should make us all proud. Our youth deserve this support — they represent the future of Plymouth-Canton.

Thanks so much,

Nic Cooper and Nan Horwood

New jail office not needed: sheriff

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A Wayne County corrections department would increase county bureaucracy without decreasing the county's jail population, Sheriff Robert Ficano said.

The new county department was proposed by county executive Edward McNamara last week during an appearance before a citizens task force on jail conditions.

As proposed, the administrator would oversee county jail operations and draft a jail budget.

Ficano, however, said those jobs were already being efficiently done by the sheriff's department.

"ALL THAT would do is add to the bureaucracy," Ficano said. "Really, we're dancing around the problem — that is, how should we add jail space."

McNamara said the administrator would be a "paid professional," who would directly report to the executive's office.

Sheriff is an elected post, independent of the county executive's office.

'We're dancing around the problem — that is, how should we add jail space.'

— Robert Ficano
Wayne County Sheriff

Ficano will make his own recommendations to the jail task force this afternoon.

Triple bunking, long advocated by Ficano, is one of the ideas that will be discussed. Triple bunking would add a third prisoner to county jail cells, though the process would require approval from the state Legislature.

"We're going to talk about triple bunking, but that's not the only thing we'll be talking about," Ficano said. "We also have recommendations about a misdemeanor facility."

Like other sheriffs, Ficano has opposed legislation that would allow counties to authorize private contractors to build and operate jails to house drunk drivers, shoplifters and misdemeanor offenders.

Among other arguments, Ficano has said he doubted an outside contractor could provide service for as little as his department.

JAIL OPERATIONS have traditionally been the chief duty of Michigan's county sheriff's departments. In Wayne County, sheriff's deputies also provide police protection at Metro Airport and patrol county parks, among other duties.

In other jail news, Ficano said he was pleased proposed cuts in county's jail population were postponed.

Chief Wayne County Circuit Judge Richard Kaufman proposed cutting the jail population to 1,552 inmates, roughly 700 prisoners below the current level. Ficano had protested the cuts. Kaufman is monitoring jail conditions as part of a 16-year-old lawsuit filed by jail inmates.

"We wanted to keep those people off the streets," Ficano said. As of Friday, the jail was 36 inmates over its 1,589 limit.

Actuaries figured tuition trust payment costs

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Figuring what parents must invest in the Michigan Education Trust to prepay their kids' college tuition took more than a knowledge of investments. Much of the work was done by actuaries — people who calculate insurance rates.

"It was a unique job," said Rick Kaye, a West Bloomfield resident who was involved in setting the first-in-the-nation guarantee of college tuition.

"No one's ever done it before. Actuaries don't deal with tuition rates," said Kaye, managing partner of the actuarial benefits consulting division of Coopers & Lybrand, certified public accountants and actuaries.

KAY HAS a degree in math and and master's in actuarial science from the University of Michigan. Coopers & Lybrand's usual line of work is advising businesses on retirement and fringe benefits — how to fund them to keep them solvent. Having the state treasurer as a client was different.

"We're the ones who determine the prices," said Kaye. The MET board is expected to announce soon how much a parent will have to invest, at a child's birth, to guarantee the youngster four years of tuition at one of Michigan's 15 state colleges and universities.

Best guess: $6,400 for a newborn, $8,000 for a high school senior.

The tuition investment trust is kind of a discount plan: Mother and dad pay a lump sum now that earns interest and pays the big bill later on. And it doesn't have to be mother and dad — many grandparents are eyeing the plan, and state officials hope private companies will buy them for employees' kids.

First, Kaye said, the actuaries had to calculate how much tuition will rise between now and 2006 AD. Their guesstimate: 6-7 percent a year.

Second, they had to figure how much the fund would grow. They used a figure of 10 percent, which state Treasurer Robert Bowman says is below what state pension funds have been earning in the high-interest rate days of the last decade.

Third, the MET must pay federal taxes on the investment. Neither parents nor kids will pay taxes on the investment.

THEN THE JOB gets tricky. The goal was a yield equal to the weighted average of tuitions at the 15 four-year colleges.

Kaye said they assume more "borderline" students will set their sights on college knowing it's financially possible.

They had to consider there's a great difference between costs of a "regional" college such as Northern Michigan, in the upper peninsula, and the University of Michigan, with the highest public college tuition in the U.S.

"If more went to NMU, our cost could be lowered," said Kaye. "And the more that join, the more the risk is spread."

Parents asked Bowman last week whether the MET program would stimulate competition for admission into the premier schools — U-M, Michigan State, Wayne State and Michigan Tech.

Bowman said it likely would.

Next task was to look at the historical evidence and see not only how many traditional 18-year-olds would enroll in college, but how many 16-year-old prodigies and how many late bloomers. The more who delay entering college, the more interest can be earned by the MET.

If the actuaries and the MET board guess wrong, Bowman said, they have an opportunity to correct themselves each year by adjusting the entry price for new joiners.

KAYE SAID the company used economic models in its forecasts.

"There are public policy issues, too — issues of why tuition goes up faster than the CPI (consumer price index)," he added.

For example, Bowman publicly urged young parents, legislators and the media to scrutinize the tuition rates of colleges. If public sentiment builds up for containing tuition rates, costs could be reduced.

Kaye has three youngsters himself — one at Central Michigan, one at Country Day and a 3-year-old. He personally likes the MET plan. "It's a guarantee, and it's forced savings. I know the money will be there."

Would he enroll his 3-year-old?

"I would."

Archbishop will dedicate health care building

St. Mary Hospital will dedicate its new health care facilities Thursday, May 19.

Archbishop Edmund Szoka will officiate at dedication ceremonies for the St. Mary Hospital Pavilion and the Marian Professional Building.

Ground was broken for the 178,000-square-foot addition in November 1985.

The new buildings will house advanced diagnostic equipment as well as outpatient services.

The pavilion, a three-story, 78,000-square-foot structure will house an expanded emergency department, outpatient services and respiratory, cardiodiagnostic and radiology departments and a 16-bed special care unit for heart patients. St. Mary is one of eight hospitals in the nation providing advanced Hewlett Packard heart monitoring systems.

The four-story 100,000-square-foot Marian Professional Services building, just south of the pavilion, will house doctors' offices, a multi-specialty doctors group and a community education complex.

A new radiation therapy department will also be housed in the building.

The present 300,000-square-foot hospital is also undergoing renovation.

A three-day open house for the new buildings will be held Sept. 11, 17 and 18.

Juleps perfect outside

With this string of warm weather we've been experiencing, it kind of makes you forget what the temperature was like back on Jan. 18 when the thermometer barely hovered above zero for four days straight.

The nicest thing about spring in the metropolitan area?

A perfect temperature hovering just a tad above 70 degrees, no mosquitoes (yet) and sipping a mint julep out on the veranda while watching the sun go down.

Having just journeyed down and back to Charleston, S.C., I love Southern hospitality, Southern traditions and Southern cooking.

Any good Northerner with respect knows that in order to make an authentic mint julep you take a few fresh mint leaves and, with the back of a long-handled iced-tea spoon, crush them inside a chilled copper mug.

BY THE WAY, authentic mint juleps are meant to be sipped on the veranda, not chug-a-lugged at a go-go bar.

Pretty much the same goes for oysters. Now this Northerner isn't about to discount the flavorful Benoit oysters or those mouth-watering fruits de la mer from the Northern shores, but until you've downed a bucket of shucks — lightly doused with shots of Louisiana hot sauce — right from the shell, while cleansing your palate with a handful of boiled peanuts, you have yet to experience a tried-and-true Southern tradition.

If you're thinking about having a Memorial Day bash with a slight Southern accent, I might suggest buying a bushel or so of oysters from a fish retailer (get a better price) and fill up an old washtub with ice. Pick up a pair of those industrial-strength heavy black vinyl gloves and allow your guests to work up a sweat shucking their own.

If some of your guests can't appreciate the taste sensation of downing a raw oyster, load up the barbecue and top off the oysters with splashes of champagne and some shredded gruyere cheese. An herbed white sauce and a sprinkling of parmesan can top off just about any seafood creation, whether it be oysters, mussels, crab or shrimp.

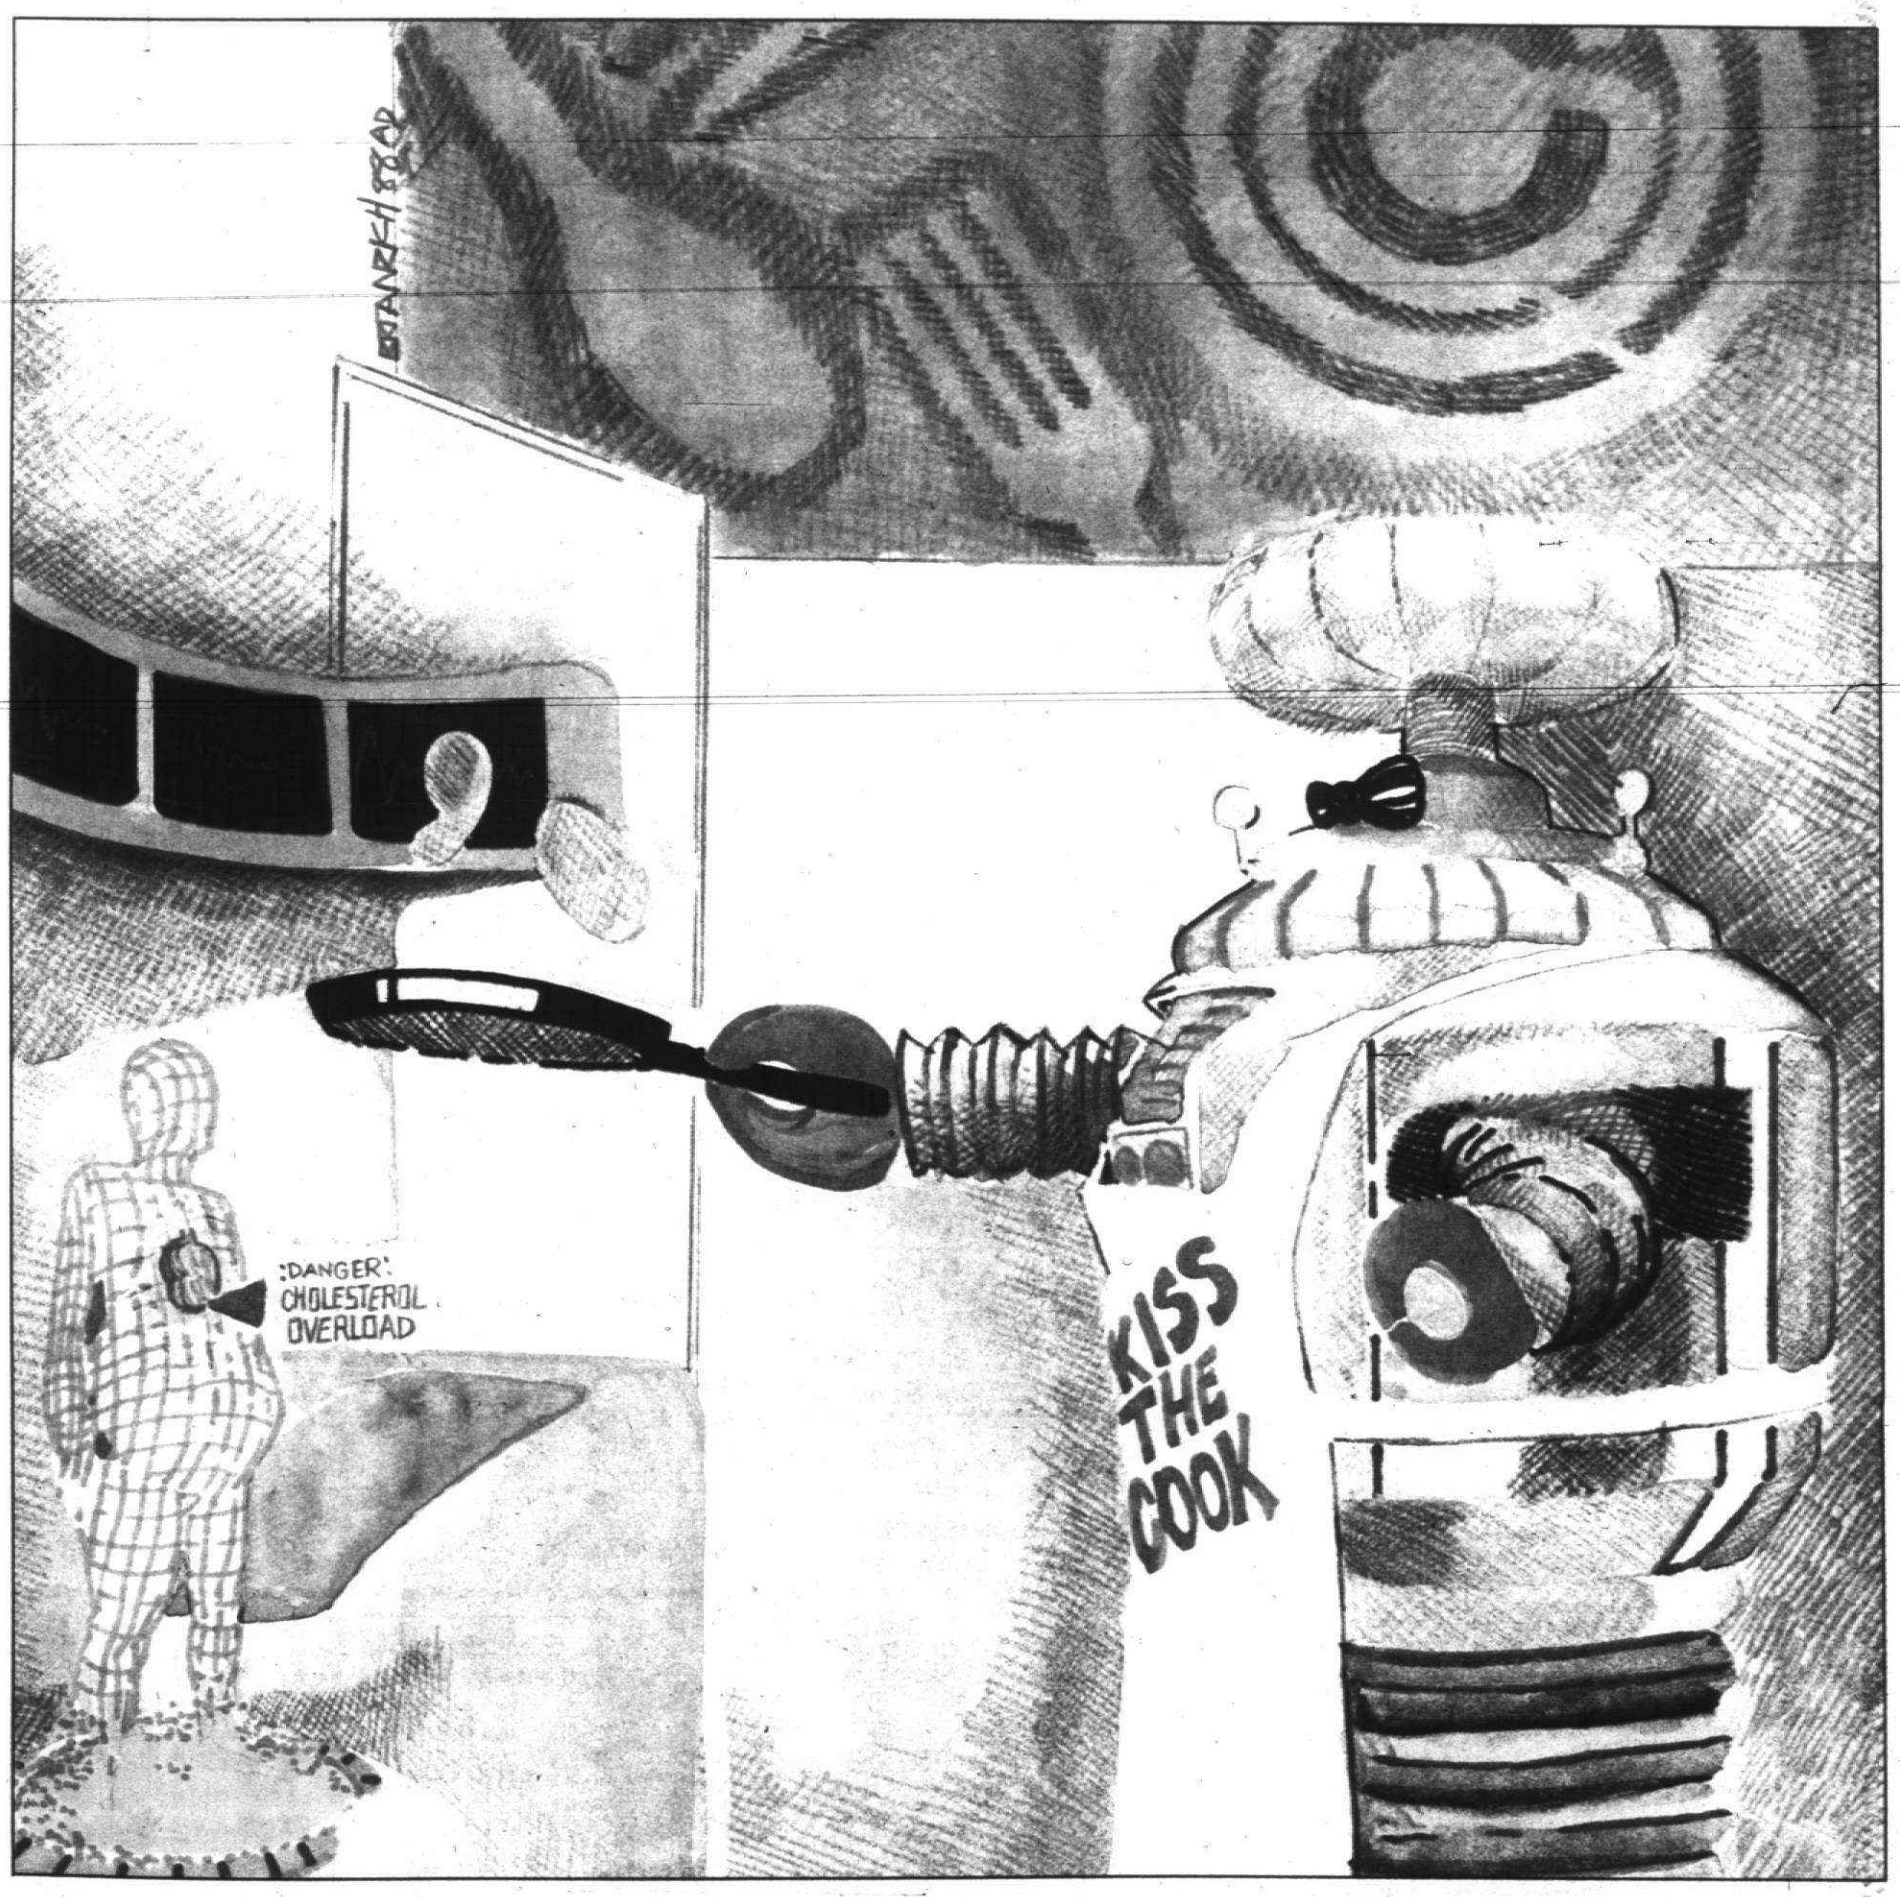
Even if the shucking doesn't seem worth it, you can purchase great-quality oysters already shucked from reputable fishmongers. Skewer the oysters with alternate chunks of fresh pineapple or pick up a few packages of the scallop-shell appetizer holders, available at just about any gourmet shop, and after a mint julep, your guests won't be able to tell the difference.

ANY VISIT down South wouldn't be complete without a bowl of fresh boiled peanuts. Don't even think about picking up a bag of raw peanuts and trying this recipe.

Unfortunately, you have to do a little scouting around to locate some unshelled raw green peanuts. Unlike the raw peanuts we can readily get at most stores, this recipe has us searching for the immature pods that can be found in specialty markets like the farmers markets in Detroit and Windsor.

Most folks think Southern cooking mainly consists of biscuits, grits and gravy. I think Miss Scarlet looked on the wilder side of life. I can just see Miss Scarlet out on the veranda sipping juleps, shucking oysters and boiling peanuts, watching the neighbors head off to Burger Heaven while saying, "Frankly, I just don't give a damn."

Bon Appetit!



What's cooking tomorrow

Look for every kitchen to feature home computers that will do everything from manage checkbooks and order groceries to keep track of nutritional guidelines and daily caloric intake.

Here I sit, gazing into my crystal bowl, reporting to you what will undoubtedly be major trends, now being formulated in the laboratories and test kitchens of leading corporations around the world.

When it comes to cooking, my astrological charts never seem to indicate when would be the perfect time to bake bread, remodel my kitchen or, for that matter, crack open a box of Kraft Macaroni and Cheese. As a matter of fact, the closest I ever got to cooking "with the stars" is when my barbecue coals fail to light and I find myself cooking a super-late dinner under the stars.

So here I sit, frantically rubbing the sides of a crystal bowl I purchased at a garage sale for $1.50 stamped with an official-looking "Waterford" moniker.

In addition to dried bits of last Christmas' divinity fudge, I picked up some very interesting predictions regarding how we eat and what we eat in the future. Here's what tomorrow's Janeses will be enjoying come the year 2001.

LOOK FOR the 1991-model car year to introduce the first microwave-oven option. You just can't drive on I-75 anymore without noticing someone with a beer, pop, burger or pseudo-breakfast sandwich. With more and more of us traveling farther distances to work and play, watch for a glove-compartment-sized microwave oven to appear.

This will undoubted spur an entirely new cottage industry called "catch-alls." Similar to overalls, they will catch the dripping bacon fat and shreds of artificially flavored lettuce on our "shelf bought, stay-fresh-for-100-years BLT."

You heard it here first — watch out McDonald's, Wendy's and Burger King, you are being stalked by a new, previously unheard of competition. Healthy food. No need to worry about tofu burgers or broccoli burritos, but we will see an emergence of "health fast food" operations giving us more nutritional choices such as fruit-on-a-stick, frozen yogurt, salad and vegetable combinations on a pita-type bun. Look for alternative burgers, notably turkey burgers and chicken burgers, and look for french fries not fried in oil but in a new calorie-free fat replacement called "olestra."

Speaking of "olestra," the Proctor and Gamble Co. has already submitted petitions requesting "olestra's" approval. Olestra will provide the rich taste of full calorie fats and oils but will be calorie-free because it will not be absorbed by the body. The secret here being that olestra is not digested by the body, so it passes right through, unabsorbed.

IMAGINE, FRENCH FRIES with half the calories, none of the fat and no cholesterol. Ditto for ice cream, Godiva chocolates, chocolate Easter bunnies, Sander's hot fudge and Amaretto.

Look for every kitchen to feature home computers that will do everything from manage checkbooks and order groceries to keep track of nutritional guidelines and daily caloric intake. Skin monitors that connect

Stay out of kitchen: caterers do the job

By Arlene Funke

Delicious food is an integral part of a memorable gathering.

But many people simply don't have the time — or talent — to cook and serve an elaborate or unusual array of food.

Caterers like Katherine Altinok and Detra Denay Davis are two local businesswomen who bring their special talents right into the client's kitchen. They cook and serve custom meals "on location," rather than bringing food in already prepared.

"I just go into the kitchen and take over," said Altinok, 51, of Rochester. "The host and hostess don't have to go near the kitchen. The food is hot. It's freshly prepared."

Altinok, who works with her husband, Gill, specializes in Armenian and Middle Eastern dishes.

"There is something about the aroma of cooking food," said 32-year-old Davis, a Detroiter who caters mostly in the Oakland County suburbs. "It's enticing to people."

Davis, who likes to cook Louisiana Creole dishes, encourages her clients

Here's what's cooking in tomorrow's kitchens

directly into the machine will tell you if you're lying after indicating on the keyboard that you did not have a piece of cheesecake for dessert.

Menus, recipes, cost-control inventories and shopping lists will be available at the push of a button. This will improve our style of living because the computer will eventually monitor all cash-flow and cash forwarding, leaving us more time to cook "the things Mom used to make."

Although Mom never used an induction range, disposable cookware and sensors will cook Dad's roast medium-rare, Mom's medium, and will grind, chop, form and broil burgers from the same cut of meat for the kids. Bye-bye, non-stick surfaces. Everything we cook on will be made of materials with a non-stick property that can't be scraped or cut off.

Speaking of the kitchen, our pantries will be stocked full of shelf-stable products that are hermetically packaged, requiring no refrigeration. Big, bulky refrigerators will be replaced with more sleek, less energy-consuming models that offer "quick-chill" features for our milk and beverages, similar to the way a microwave heats.

REST ASSURED that little green pills featured in the classic Charlton Heston feature "Soylent Green" will not evolve, at least not until the 22nd century.

Have you opened a box of fish sticks lately? Now, in addition to the fish, you'll notice little "metallic" trays that keep the fish sticks from becoming soggy in the microwave.

All our packaged foods will have multicooking directions for use on a conventional stove, microwave or induction surface. Most will have expiration dates stamped, "Use no later than August 2109."

No need to worry about "Rocky the Robot" pleading to do the dishes. Robotic devices will be streamlined, mainly for use in industrial sectors. Sorry, Charlie, food will still have to be put away and cooked with some manual labor involved.

One good word we're beginning to notice already that will surely have implications for future shopping trends is the emergence of grocery stores that offer service. Don't know about you but I'm sick and tired of having to stand in line to pay for the privilege to shop.

With competition finally realizing that time is money, grocers will wise up. On a sad note, though, cost factors will increase the use of scanners, therefore eliminating baggers. I refuse to shop in one metro food chain now because I just can't get used to a computer voice thanking me for shopping there. Am I supposed to respond and look into the scanner? Person-to-peron contact, please!

WHEN IT COMES to dining out, look for restaurants to zoom in on specialties of the house and not try to be all things to all people. With the influx of immigrants continuing to expand, look for more mom and pop eateries that cater to diverse ethnic groups.

By the year 2000, as food technology continues to rise, so will the quality of food we eat. Of course, with quality comes price, so be prepared to see the average dinner for two in a good 3½ star, suburban restaurant to cost about $150 from your plastic-card collection. This, of course, would be one drink, an inexpensive bottle of wine, salad and entree. A night on the town will cost in excess of $300.

French wines will take the same route as Iranian pistachios, with exceedingly high tariffs and taxes so exports will be dropped. Look for the emergence of a prominent new wine-growing area that will give Napa Valley a run for its money. Look to the Northeast for some indications around 1990.

With beef becoming priced out of the norm for many middle-class Americans, keep your eyes on a massive retail campaign touting the benefits of "farm-raised" anything. Catfish, wild game, buffalo, deer and seafood will be raised in specialized farms that ensure protection against disease and chemical contamination. Of course, with this comes a hefty dollar, so be prepared to pay.

On a healthy note, with the emergence of all these new products that are not digested by the human body, look for people who finally can say, "Now I am too rich and too thin." Personal nutritional counselors will proliferate much like doctors and dentists do now. We will become a society more in tune with our bodies and our minds.

And if all this weren't enough, 20 years from now when someone pulls this article from some obscure time capsule, we will (God willing) sit around and have a good chuckle. The clouds are beginning to form on the sides of the crystal bowl so I guess it's time to get out the ammonia and let it soak in the sun for a few days.

to observe as she chops, dices and stirs up special sauces.

"They get a free cooking lesson that is geared to that particular individual," Davis said. "I also furnish recipes."

BOTH DAVIS and Altinok "fell into" catering at the urging of friends who raved over their meals. Both come from families where good food is prized.

"I like to do small, intimate dinners of no more than 20 to 25 people," said Davis, who began doing just that while serving as an aviation technician with the U.S. Navy in Okinawa. She later worked as a pastry chef at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Dearborn before starting her business, called Cooking With Denay, six years ago.

"I guess I'm a natural," Davis said. "That's what people tell me. Mother is from Louisiana. She is really into French pastries. My grandmother — she's 86 — was a pastry baker for the Fisher (automotive) family."

Katherine Altinok is a former manager for Avon cosmetics and a grocery-store bookkeeper. Gill is a truck driver, born in Istanbul. Both are 51 years of age and both are of Armenian extraction.

The pair launched Catering by Katherine 2½ years ago after a friend asked Katherine to prepare a sweet table for a family wedding. Katherine made 4,000 pieces of dessert, ranging from honey-and-nuts baklava to miniature cream puffs and hand-dipped chocolate-covered cherries.

"I guess cooking has always been a hobby," she said. "My mother was an excellent cook. Many years ago, we owned a family restaurant."

THE ALTINOKS admit to being very fussy. They like to bring in their own highly polished chafing dishes, which they believe add elegance. While Katherine tends to the cooking, Gill concentrates on presentation — garnishes and special touches to make the food visually appealing.

"I don't have a standard menu (and) I probably don't make the same menu twice," Katherine said of her preference.

For these caterers, each booking presents a fresh challenge to create a special dining experience. Maintaining top quality amid spiraling costs is a perennial headache.

The Altinoks cater everything from corporate cocktail parties to road rallies and vegetarian wedding suppers.

Davis has had more than a few unusual requests. Take the Royal Oak man who hired her to cook squirrel for his girlfriend who was visiting from Texas.

"He wanted to surprise her with something special to impress her," Davis said.

Davis purchased the squirrel from an Ortonville farmer and prepared it like smothered chicken — cut into pieces, seasoned with flour and covered with a brown-gravy sauce. Reportedly, the meal was a hit.

"Sometimes gentlemen tell ladies they (cooked the meal) themselves," Davis said. "I don't mind. It's real cute."

DAVIS, WHO ENJOYS adapting and updating old recipes, spent several months teaching a Troy homemaker how to prepare low-fat soups and main dishes for a family member who needed to reduce his intake of cholesterol.

Davis' Louisiana Creole buffet, at $19 per person, features such items as stuffed trout; jambalaya — rice mixed with vegetables, meat or fish; assorted salads; french onion bread; and Southern-style pies and cakes.

Her brunch, at around $11 per person, might include mimosa (champagne mixed with orange juice), feather finger rolls, potato and leek soup, chicken livers and mushrooms in puff pastry, and chestnut bavarian cream for dessert.

"There are some people who want gobs of food," Davis said. "There are people who want small portions of a lot of things. I do work with an individual's budget."

Katherine Altinok also likes to prepare creative dishes, tailored to the client's budget and lifestyle. A buffet luncheon, featuring Armenian specialties, might cost $8 per person. Dinner begins at $10 per person.

Some of her favorite dishes are Armenian pizza, using ground lamb as the meat; spinach and cheese pie; Armenian potato salad, made with fresh herbs and vinegar-and-oil dressing; and baklava, which encases ground nuts and honey in layers of flaky phyllo dough.

For more information, call Cooking with Denay at 892-7310 and Catering by Katherine at 652-0195.

KATHY'S CREOLE SAUCE

Excellent over chicken, rabbit, fish, shrimp, egg dishes, omelets, rice and pasta.

Seasonings:
3 whole bay leaves
1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon sweet paprika
½ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
½ teaspoon dried basil leaves
4 tablespoons margarine
1 cup peeled and chopped tomatoes (may use small can of stewed tomatoes)
1 cup each: chopped onions, chopped green bell peppers and chopped celery
1 teaspoon minced garlic
1 ¼ cups chicken stock
1 cup canned tomato sauce
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon tabasco sauce (optional)

Combine seasonings and set aside.

Melt margarine in large skillet over medium heat. Stir in tomatoes, onions, celery and bell peppers; then add garlic and seasoning mix, stirring thoroughly. Saute until onions are transparent, about five minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in stock, tomato sauce, sugar and tabasco sauce if desired. Bring to boil. Reduce heat to maintain a simmer and cook until veggies are tender and flavors are blended, about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove bay leaves before serving. Freezes well.

Cooked meats may be added at this point or 10-20 mnutes before sauce is finished. Add chicken, fish or smoked sausage and serve over rice or pasta.

FLAMBEED MOCHA CHOCOLATE MOUSSE
Chocolate chips
12 oz. sweet chocolate
16 paper baking cups
Filling:
4 squares semisweet chocolate
¼ cup double-strength coffee
1 ½ tablespoon creme de cacao
1 cup heavy cream
¼ cup sugar
Grand Marnier

Melt 12 oz. chocolate in top of double boiler over hot water; remove from heat and cool slightly. While chocolate is cooling, double up paper cups. Put 2 tablespoons of cooled chocolate in each of the 8 cups. Using back of a teaspoon, spread chocolate around the cup so entire inside is coated.

When all are done, set them in a muffin pan and chill until chocolate is firm. To make filling, melt four squares semisweet chocolate with coffee over low heat. Cool, then stir in creme de cacao.

Whip cream until it starts to thicken, then gradually add sugar and continue whipping until stiff. Gently fold into cooled chocolate mixture. Spoon into prepared chocolate shells and freeze.

To serve, gently peel off paper cups, invert chocolate cups on plate and spoon one tablespoon of Grand Marnier over each. Ignite and serve. Serves 8.

Tips to add party sparkle

By Arlene Funke
special writer

Having a catered party means the host or hostess isn't tied to the kitchen. There's more time to plan the extra touches.

Here are a few simple tips to give sparkle to your dinner. They come from "Better Homes and Gardens Best Buffets Cookbook," a Bantam Book published by arrangement with Meredith Corp.

- Budget: Do you want an intimate, sit-down dinner, a large buffet or an array of appetizers? How many people can you comfortably accommodate? And how much money can you afford to spend for your party? Stick to your plan.
- Theme: A theme can be anything from celebrating a birthday or honoring a time in history. Ethnic themes can provide a focus for food, decorations and entertainment. Be creative.

For example, a Westland woman asked her guests to dress as the person they have always fantasized about becoming. The gamut of costumes, which ranged from beauty queen to beach bum, provided a lot of excitement.

- Table coverings and napkins. The amount of pattern and color needed is largely dependent on the menu. Too much pattern creates an unorganized feeling, while too little produces a table that looks dull or unfinished.

A handsome quilt or a brightly colored sheet can make an interesting conversation piece. Napkins may match the table covering or provide a contrast. Dinnerware and glassware should be appropriate to the occasion. Fine china and delicate stemware are compatible with a formal gathering. A more casual party allows for pottery dishes, mugs, plastic or paper.

- Table decorations: Fresh-cut flowers are always appropriate. A simple array of fresh fruit or vegetables in a pretty bowl. A fancy-decorated birthday cake can hold center stage until it is time to be consumed. A lighted candle adds interest (be sure the flame is not too close to plastic or paper items).

Detroit Symphony benefit offers Armenian feast

An Armenian Buffet will be one of the Musical Feasts given by the Detroit Symphony League to raise funds for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The feast will be held at 5 p.m. Sunday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Berj H. Haidostian in Bloomfield Township. For more information call 823-1509. Following is one of the recipes Alice B. Haidostian will serve at the party.

KHARPERT KIFTEH (STUFFED MEATBALLS)

Filling: (Kifteh Por)
2 cups ground lamb or beef, fatty
4 cups (up to 6 cups) chopped dry onions
¼ cup green pepper, chopped fine
½ cup walnuts, chopped medium
¼ cup parsley, chopped medium fine
1 tablespoon salt
2 teaspoon allspice
2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoon paprika

Cook meat with onions until browned (about 30 minutes), stir frequently. Add green peppers and walnuts, cook about 10 minutes. Add parsley, cook about 5 minutes. Add salt and spices, mix well, taste for flavor. Remove to shallow container, refrigerate until very firm (overnight). Shape into balls, smaller than walnut size. Freeze on tray, balls not touching each other. Frozen balls can be stored in freezer bag. Makes about 30 kifteh pors

Outer Layer: (Kheyma) (also known as Chee Kifteh)
2 cups fine bulghoor
2 cups water
2 cups lamb or beef, meticulously lean, ground three times in clean machine, leg of lamb, sirloin or round steak only ½ cups finely chopped dry onions
½ cups finely chopped parsley
5 teaspoons salt
½ cups ice water, as needed

Soak bulghoor in 2 cups water about 20 minutes. Add all other ingredients, except water. Wash hands thoroughly, do not wipe. Knead mixture together, use ice water as needed until bulghoor and meat are completely mixed and holding together, and bulghoor is soft to taste

Form meat into walnut-size balls, indent a deep hole with thumb or two fingers, drop in frozen Kifteh Por, completely seal, shape into compact, seamless, round ball. Can be frozen on tray, kiftehs not touching each other. Frozen kiftehs can be stored in freezer bag.

To Serve:

Boil kiftehs in one layer in two quarts boiling liquid (either salted water, beef, lamb or chicken broth) until kiftehs rise to surface (about 15 minutes). Remove each kifteh carefully with slotted spoon. Do not leave kiftehs in liquid. Kiftehs can be served plain, or in a broth. Kiftehs can be eaten cold, or reheated in boiling liquid. Makes about 30 kiftehs.

Note: Kheyma can also be eaten raw (uncooked) as an appetizer or an entree, garnished with chopped onions and chopped parsley.

SC tax hearing set

Schoolcraft College trustees will hold a truth-in-taxation hearing 8 p.m. Wednesday.

The hearing will be held in the board meeting room, in the main campus administration building, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

The hearing is necessary because of an increase in property tax assessments within the college's service area.

The Schoolcraft district includes the Livonia, Clarenceville, Plymouth-Canton, Northville and Garden City public school districts.

After the hearing, trustees will hold a closed session to discuss their annual evaluation of Schoolcraft president Richard McDowell. McDowell requested the closed session, as he has done in previous years.

Libertarians to convene

The Libertarian Party will bring in presidential candidate Ron Paul for a weekend convention at the Airport Hilton in Romulus.

Paul, a former four-term Republican congressman from Texas, will speak at 8:30 p.m. Friday. At a Saturday noon luncheon, state Rep. Margaret O'Connor, R-Ann Arbor, will present "screwball of the year" awards. Dinner speaker Saturday will be Don Ernsberger, co-founder of the Society for Individual Liberty.

Libertarians generally oppose governmental taxing and spending programs, restrictions on individual freedom and an interventionist foreign policy. Information on prices and membership is available from Libertarian Party of Michigan, 322 Millinton Blvd., Bloomfield Hills 48013, phone 334-4449.

Metro Airport expansion gets boost

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A Federal Aviation Administration report has recommended at least $100 million expansion for Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport.

While the report itself guarantees no money, county officials believe the FAA recommendation is a valuable tool that can be used to pressure airlines and federal officials into financing airport expansion.

TWO NEW runways were among the report's key recommendations. The report was released Wednesday.

If expansion doesn't occur, the report said the airport's average 11-minute-per-flight delay could rapidly increase to 20 minutes or more. Delays could top 40 minutes per flight by 1996, the report warned.

With the recommended runways, flight delays could drop below five minutes for the near future and stay within current levels, even as airport use eventually increases by an expected 50 percent.

Recommended projects include:

- A second east-west runway.
- A fourth north-south runway.
- Additional terminal space.
- Installation of advanced air traffic control equipment.
- New airplane holding and taxi areas.

The new runways could cost a combined $80 million, airport officials estimated. Land must be acquired for the fourth north-south runway, they added. The east-west runway, also known as a crosswind runway, needs environmental approval. Approval is expected by spring 1989, airport officials said.

Expansion won't be financed by county taxpayers, Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said.

"THIS AIRPORT has an obligation to stand on its own," McNamara said. Airline landing fees and federal grants have traditionally been used to finance airport operations and construction.

McNamara, in fact, needed a change in state law to use a new airport parking tax to help the county avoid bankruptcy.

While the FAA report said additional terminal space was needed, it made no recommendations on whether to expand existing terminals or to build a new one.

Since last fall, the county and airlines serving Metro have been embroiled in a dispute over terminal expansion.

The county has suggested a midfield terminal site. That recommendation and others concerning closing the L.C. Smith terminal for asbestos removal while temporarily housing passengers at a makeshift site, were strongly opposed by Northwest Airlines, the airport's major passenger carrier.

The two sides are still negotiating, airport manager Richard Jamison said.

At least $13 million has already been spent to build airplane holding areas, Jamison said.

The major equipment recommendation involves installation of Doppler weather radar. The advanced $5.1 million system would provide more accurate reading of area weather patterns, reducing operating delays.

AS MANY as 30 major U.S. airports could top 20,000 hours annually in flight delays if they don't move to expand, said FAA spokesman Jim Smith.

"Nine of those 30 airports have new runways planned or under construction, the good news is Detroit is among them," Smith said.

Road work, including possible rerouting of Wayne and Goddard roads may also be needed, airport officials said.

Passenger traffic at Metro Airport increased from 4.2 million to 9.9 million 1982-87. If patterns hold, airport officials said, passenger traffic could increase to 14.8 million by the mid-1990s.

Churchill nips Salem for WLAA title

Chargers prevail in extended game

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

When it comes to shootouts, Livonia Churchill soccer coach Nick O'Shea doesn't follow any elaborate guidelines.

Actually, he employs no strategy at all..

"I just say 'OK, who's going to score the first one?'" said O'Shea. "And whoever says 'me', goes up there and shoots first, and right on down the line."

Lori Place must not have been too eager to shoot, but it was a goal from Place — the last of five Churchill players in the shoot-out — that decided Friday's game at Plymouth Salem. Churchill outscored Salem 4-3 during the shootout, earning the Western Lakes Athletic Association title in a game that was tied 1-1 after regulation, two overtime periods and two sudden deaths.

Naturally, all parties on Churchill's side were relieved afterward, including Place, who is only a freshman.

Place's shot never left the ground, but snuck into the net under the outstretched arms of Ellen Schnackel.

"I JUST TRIED to put it in the corner," Place said. "I hit it good and she got a piece of it, but it went in and that's all that counts.

"It feels awesome to win. The state (title) is what I want to win next."

Churchill earned the right to play for the title by winning the Western Division at 4-1, while Salem won the Lakes crown at 3-0-1. The Chargers are 8-3 overall, and Salem slipped to 8-2-4.

soccer

Salem had a 3-2 advantage early in the shootout, getting goals from its first three shooters. But the Rocks' best offensive threat, Jill Estey hit the post on the next opportunity. Churchill goalie Monya Cervi then stopped a shot by Salem's fifth shooter, Tracey Krajewski, leaving it up to Place.

"I didn't think they'd make five-of-five," said O'Shea. "But surprisingly she (Estey) missed. Maybe she felt more pressure with the younger players making it before her.

"It's all a matter of confidence. If you're confident, chances are you'll make it."

THE GAME lasted nearly 2½ hours, but few fans left, even though the temperature must have dipped 20 degrees by the end.

Churchill had at least three chances to score in the extra sessions. Churchill's Shannon Stacherski was foiled by Schnackel in the second sudden-death overtime. Also, a goal scored by Churchill in the second overtime was disallowed because of goalie interference, and before that, Schnackel made a fine save off a shot by Churchill's Nikki Johnson.

The two teams exchanged momentum throughout the game.

"Really there never was a turning point in the game, because it never turned," O'Shea said. "It was a funny

Churchill's Kerry Strauch (13) and Kellie Davis (9) get out of Jill Estey's way as the Salem player prepares to put a foot on the ball in Friday's Western Lakes championship soccer game. The defending champion Rocks and the Chargers fought to a 1-1 draw before the visiting Chargers won the game in a shootout.

Cashero hurls Rocks past Glenn, 7-4

Plymouth Salem gained a little revenge, and senior pitcher Fidell Cashero experienced the biggest moment of his high school baseball career Friday.

Cashero turned in a sterling pitching effort as the Rocks bumped off their longtime Lakes Division nemesis, Westland John Glenn, 7-4 on the loser's field.

The Rockets, 12-1, suffered their first loss in the Western Lakes Activities Association, while Salem improved to 9-4. The Rocks had lost key ball games to Glenn, both by 3-2 counts, last year and earlier this season.

The left-handed Cashero scattered six hits and struck out 11 in raising his record to 3-1. He walked five in the seven-inning game.

"It was the best game he's ever thrown," Salem coach John Gravlin said. "It was a big win, because he had to pitch out of jams in the second, third and fourth innings."

On the opposite side, Glenn ace Clint Straub held the Rocks to just four hits but was not his usually-sharp self. He struck out nine in a complete-game outing, but he also walked 10.

Salem jumped in front 4-0 in the first inning. Todd Marion had an RBI single, and the Rocks scored three times on wild pitches.

Two errors, two walks and a wild pitch led to two more runs in the fourth and a 6-1 lead. Chris Adams doubled to score Salem's final run in the seventh.

Pat Pettit had two singles for the Rockets.

SALEM 19, FARMINGTON 3: The Rocks had 17 hits in this one-sided victory Wednesday.

Chris Adams was 4-for-4 and drove in six runs, four on a grand slam, and Todd Marion had four RBI on a bases-loaded double and two-run single.

In addition, Mike Stout slugged a solo homer and a triple, and Andy Gee had two hits and one RBI.

Winning pitcher Matt Metikosh worked five innings and scattered five hits. He walked three and struck out the same. Marion and Scott Sanchez worked one inning each in relief.

Darin Magera was the loser, giving up 10 Salem hits, 12 runs and three walks.

The Rocks blanked Walled Lake Central 10-0 on Friday, May 6, behind the three-hit pitching of Howie Blanchard, a junior making his first start. He threw just 60 pitches in six innings.

"He pitched it, they hit it and we picked it up," Gravlin said. "He went out there and just threw strikes."

HARRISON 11, CANTON 10: The Hawks dug a hole for themselves early in this Western Division game last Wednesday, and it took them the rest of the game to dig their way out.

But they eventually did, holding on until two were out in the bottom of the seventh inning to take an 11-10, come-from-behind victory from the Chiefs.

Harrison, which trailed 6-0 after two innings and 10-6 at the end of five, scored four runs in the last inning to hand Canton only its third defeat in 15 ball games.

"I was really happy when we came back like that," Harrison coach John Herrington said. "I was even kinda surprised when we did.

"If we hadn't lost the doubleheader to Franklin, we'd be right in the thick of the (division) race."

With the win, the Hawks improved to 3-4 in the division and 6-5 overall. Canton, which has lost twice to Harrison, is 4-3 and 12-3. The Chiefs were scheduled to play two games Saturday with Franklin, the other contender.

Mike Sulak pitched five innings for the Chiefs and turned over a four-run lead to Chris Kennedy in the sixth. He gave up a run in the sixth and was one out away from ending the game in the seventh when Harrison rallied.

Sean Murray started it with a pinch-hit double and scored on a wild throw after an error that allowed Jason Lichtman to reach base.

Leo Devine, one of the team's big hitters, doubled to put runners at second and third and set up Jason Hicks to hit a game-tying, two-run double. Then, with two strikes on him, Rob MacDonald hit an 0-2 pitch to drive in Hicks with the winning run.

Canton jumped in front when Derek Humphries hit a two-run homer in the early innings. Scott Browne's two-run single in the fourth and two runs in the fifth made it 10-6. Joel Riggs drove in a run with a bunt single, and Humphries drew a bases-loaded walk in the fifth.

But the Hawks came to life in the meantime, scoring twice in the bottom of the third and four times in the fourth. Hicks, Devine and Jeff Skinner slammed two-run doubles.

Hicks was the last of four Harrison pitchers and the winner. He went the last 2⅓ innings, allowed two hits and held the Chiefs scoreless. He walked two and struck out three.

Lichtman started and was followed by Bryan Wauldron and Craig Murray. Sulak gave up five of Harrison's 11 hits, walked six and struck out eight.

At the plate, Devine ended up 3-for-5, scored twice and had three RBI. Hicks was 2-for-5 with two runs and four RBI, and MacDonald and Skinner were 2-for-4 with one and two RBI, respectively.

Riggs, the lead-off batter for Canton, walked three times, scored twice and had one RBI, and Jamie Sisler had two hits and two runs.

Canton slips by Franklin

Two squeakers, two victories. That is the summation of the past week for the Plymouth Canton boys track team.

Just two days after winning an emotional, 67-65 victory from Plymouth Salem on Tuesday, the Chiefs did it again Thursday as they edged Livonia Franklin 69-68 in a Western Division dual meet.

As was the case in the former, the latest meet came down to the final event, the 1,600-meter relay. Canton won only one of the four relays, and that was the one.

Matt Littleton, Eric Miller, Mitch Fyke and Roger Trice put together a 3:32.3 time and finished a safe, three seconds ahead of the Patriots (3:35.5).

In the individual events, Trice, Jerry French, Jay Swiecki and Littleton were the key players.

Trice was a triple winner with a first place in the long jump (20-9½) and two victories in the sprints. He won the 100 and 300 dashes in 11.8 and 33.6.

French also starred in the field events, winning the shot put at 40 feet, 7 inches and the discus with a throw of 145 feet, 7 inches.

Canton captured four of the six running events as Littleton and Swiecki supported Trice's dual effort with firsts in the 400 dash (52.1) and the 1,600 run (4:38.6), respectively.

Franklin's Jeff Dudek won both hurdle races — the highs in 15.3 and the intermediates in 40.4 — and anchored winning performances in the 400 and 800 relays.

Jim Warner and Steve Caris won the 800 and 3,200 runs and were on the Patriots' 3,200 relay squad. They ran 2:00.0 and 10:27.9, respectively, in the individual events.

SALEM 75, FARMINGTON 62: The Rocks bounced back from their loss to Canton and remained undefeated in the Lakes Division, downing a perennial powerhouse in the Falcons.

Salem's victory, making it 2-0 in the division and 2-2 overall, was keyed by several steady contributors and aided by some surprise performances.

Jay Blaylock and Mike Park, both double winners, fit the former description. Blaylock was the shot put and discus champ with tosses of 49-6 and 157-6, respectively, and Park won the high hurdles in 15.62 and the intermediate hurdles in 41.68.

Junior Roger Parry, a first-year trackman, won the high jump at an impressive height of 6 feet, 4 inches.

He had never attempted to high jump until this spring. His previous best, until Tuesday of last week, was 5-10, and he had done that but once. In the dual with Canton, he won the high jump at 6-2 and went out at 6-6 while trying for the school record.

Sophomore Steve Burlison offered another surprise by taking the 400-meter dash in 53.3, edging Farmington's Ron Smedley, an excellent trackman, for first place.

Burlison's previous best was 57.9 in the Elks Relays. On Tuesday, he was a late addition to the 200 dash and won that race in 23.27.

Salem's Scott Stryker, coming off an injury, claimed first place in the 1,600 run, also edging Smedley. Stryker ran 4:37.4, Smedley 4:37.85. Teammate Garrett Bowie, despite being bothered by a sore hip, won the 200 dash in 23.36 and LaMar Crayton the 100 dash with an 11.6 time.

Not surprisingly, the Rocks also prevailed in the sprint relays. Chris Turnbell, Greg Pahl, Bowie and Crayton won the 400 in 45.96, and Burlison, Turnbell, Crayton and Masaki Sugimo finished the 800 in 1:33.36.

Farmington's Brandon London had a 1:55.4 time to win the 800 and anchored a first-place effort of 3:35.3 in the 1,600 relay.

Jason Wright leaped 19 feet, 10½ inches to give the Falcons first in the long jump, and Steve Quenneville won the 3,200 run in 10:12.54. Farmington also took the 3,200 relay in 8:45.35.

Chiefs pummel Patriots

The hurdles were the only events in which Livonia Franklin posed a challenge for Plymouth Canton in girls track Thursday.

Otherwise, it was a one-sided affair as the Chiefs rolled over the Patriots 103-25 on the Centennial Educational Park surface.

Canton, 3-0 in the Western Division and 4-0 overall, won every event except the hurdles, which saw Franklin's Sheryll Bayer break the tape in those two with 16.5 and 49.7 times.

Susan Ferko, Angie Miller and Heather Miller were double winners for the Chiefs in individual events.

Ferko captured the shot put (31-9) and the discus (90-5), Angie Miller won her specialties — the high jump (5-0) and the 400-meter dash (1:03.9) and Heather Miller won the short sprints with times of 13.5 in the 100 and 28.2 in the 200.

Canton made it a clean sweep in the field events as Amy Van Buhler jumped 14 feet, 11 inches to win the long jump.

Coach George Przygodski's system of rotating his many distance runners had Lori Penland winning the 800 run in 2:33.0, Cindy Spessard the 1,600 run in 5:45.0 and Missy Jasnowski the 3,200 run in 12:22.0.

Przygodski, who coached the Chiefs to the Western Lakes Activities Association girls cross country championship last fall, has an abundance of athletes with long-distance ability and limits them to one individual event per meet, thus maintaining fresh legs throughout the season.

Canton slammed the Patriots in the relays with many of the former athletes helping in that regard.

Kristy Brugar, Sherri Emery, Katurah Reid and Heather Miller posted a 53.2 time in the 400, and it was Brugar and Emery again in the 800, teaming up with Tricia Carney and Angie Miller for a 1:51.2 showing.

Canton's depth was evident in the 1,600, which saw Heather Spencer, Melinda Yergin, Michele Young and Heather Meyer win that race in 4:33.0. The veterans made their mark in the 3,200 as Penland, Kris Marquard, Spessard and Marnie Smith each ran two laps for a combined effort 10:24.8.

FARMINGTON 66, SALEM 62: The Falcons stayed unbeaten but had to come from behind late in Thursday's meet to remain so.

Farmington is 3-0 in the Lakes Division, 4-0 overall. The Rocks are 0-3 but have lost those contests by an average of nine points.

The Falcons trailed 53-52 with two events, but they went ahead with a sweep of the 200-meter dash. Carrie Maier won that race in 27.1, Jo Fox was second and Nicole Tocco third.

That gave Farmington a 61-53 lead, and the Falcons locked it up when Jennifer Kiel took first place in the 3,200 run (12:15.5), putting the Falcons out front 66-57.

The Rocks closed the gap by winning the 1,600 relay. Shelley Bohlen, Jennifer Smith, Traci Thomas and Amy Hobgood posted a 4:34.4 time.

In the field events, Farmington's Kristi Devine broke her own school record in the shot put for the third time this season. Having thrown a record 35-4 a week ago, she bettered that with a 35-5½ effort Thursday.

The Falcons also won the high jump with Julie Lawton going 4-10, but the other two events went to Salem. Shelley Bohlen won the discus at 108-11 and Kim Ploucha the long jump at 14-9.

Farmington dominated the running events, winning all but one of the six. Fox captured the 100 dash in 13.4 and Amy Trunk the 400 sprint in 1:04.4. In the longer events, it was Bonnie Stecker winning the 1,600 with a 5:46.8 time and Kiel the 3,200.

Salem's Jennifer Harris had double wins in the hurdles, going 16.9 in the 100-meter contest and 50.8 for 300 meters. Thomas added a first in the 800 run with a 2:29.3 time.

Maier was the lead-off runner on Farmington's winning 400 and 800 relays. Fox, Shelli Gaul and Angie Forge combined with her for a 51.8 time in the 400, and Trunk, Tocco and Forge followed her in the 800 as the Falcons recorded a 1:49.6 time.

In addition to the 1,600 relay, Salem won the 3,200 with Hobgood, Jenny Sample, Kim Mishler and Thomas running 10:46.3.

Lifetime licenses not cheap

Bill Parker

IF YOU'RE tired of worrying about increases on hunting and fishing licenses — and I know a few of us are — the Michigan Department of Natural Resources may have just the thing for you, if you can afford it, that is. How about a lifetime Michigan hunting or fishing license? Starting March 1, 1989, the DNR will be issuing lifetime licenses for a period of one year only.

You may think it's premature to be thinking about purchasing a license next year, but I wanted to give you a little time to save your pennies. Lifetime licenses won't be cheap. A lifetime smallgame, lifetime fishing or lifetime trout and salmon stamp will cost you $220. Lifetime firearm and archery deer licenses will run $285 each while a lifetime sportsperson's license will set you back $1,000.

THAT MAY SOUND like a lot of money, but actually, for a youngster or someone who will be hunting and fishing for say another 23 years or more, a lifetime license may be just the thing.

At 1988 rates — $9.85 for smallgame, fishing and trout and salmon, $12.85 for firearms or archery deer and $46.35 for a sportsperson's license — not including increases that will inevitably come in the future, your license would be paid off in just over 20 years.

At current rates, someone purchasing a sportsperson license each year would pay $1,019.70 in 22 years. Deer hunters would pay $282.70 in 22 years for either a firearms or archery license while someone purchasing a smallgame license, fishing license or trout and salmon stamp would pay $226.55 in 23 years.

Considering the increases we've been stung with in the last 10 years, the payoff may come a little sooner. For example, a fishing license cost $5 in the late '70s. A 1980 increase boosted the price tag to $7.25 while still another increase in 1986 rocketed the price to $9.85. That's almost a 100 percent increase in less than 10 years. At that rate, a fishing license would cost $19.30 in 1998, in which case, the lifetime fishing license would be paid off in 16 years or less. No promises, just a little food for thought.

THE IDEA OF lifetime licenses was proposed three years ago by representative Tom Scott, a Flint Democrat. Several other states have issued lifetime licenses and Scott felt the idea would be received well in Michigan.

According to Dennis Adams, chief officer of the DNR's Budget and Federal Aid Department, lifetime licensing would not create a huge immediate income for the DNR.

"It's a revenue neutral project," explained Adams. "(The DNR) will receive the exact same amount each year for the next 30 years from either a lifetime or an annual license. We're not looking at any gain in revenue. It's just another alternative for the sportsman. In the long run, it might help introduce some young people into hunting and fishing recreation. If someone knows they have a hunting and fishing license they might be more inclined to get involved in the sport than if they had to go out and purchase a license."

Another type of person that would benefit from a lifetime license would be someone moving out of state but planning to return to Michigan to hunt and fish. The lifetime license would still be valid so they wouldn't have to pay the higher non-resident fees. The DNR is also expecting some grandparents to purchase a license as a present for a grandchild.

In the event of a child receiving a license, naturally he/she would still have to wait till reaching legal age to hunt in Michigan.

BRIEFLY, HERE'S how the program will work. First of all, annual license money is put into the DNR's Game and Fish Protection Fund and used each year for fisheries programs, wildlife habitat improvements and law enforcement. Money from the lifetime license purchases will be put into a trust fund. Each year, interest from that trust fund, up to the amount of the annual cost of the license, will be transferred into the Game and Fish Protection Fund. The principle remains in the trust fund and continues to collect interest which will offset any increases down the road.

"We believe, that over the course of 30 years, the interest rate will exceed the inflation rate by 2 percent," explained Adams. "We based that on treasury department records which indicate, that over the past 30 years the interest rate has exceeded the inflation rate by about 2 percent. As long as interest stays about 2 percent over inflation we'll do all right."

Personally, I'm going to start saving my pennies. My bet is, there will be substantial increases in license fees in the future, made possible by additional cuts in the DNR's already reduced budget. With any (bad) luck, my lifetime license could be paid off in 10-15 years.

The human foot: An ignored entity?

Dear Myrna: There are people who judge you by your bare feet. They are called foot fetishers. The (foot is) one area of the body ignored. So, what is a good way to exercise feet?
Vernon C. Kielpinski
Farmington Hills

Yes, foot fetishers can be a real nuisance.

The foot being the one area of the body ignored, as you say, is an understatement. Unfortunately, most feet are mistreated, overworked and encased in poorly fitting shoes.

Briefly, let me describe the foot to arouse a little sympathy and understanding for one of nature's wonders.

The human foot is composed of 28 bones, 33 joints and 30 muscles held together by more than 100 ligaments. The seven tarsal bones comprise the hindfoot, and metatarsal bones form the midfoot and the toes form the forefoot.

These bones are arranged in two arches that bear the body's weight. Running along the bottom of the foot is a thick band of connective tissue — the plantar fascia — which connects the heel to the metatarsal bones.

This structure, together with the two foot arches, provides the foot with flexibility, allowing a certain amount of give and spring as the body weight is forced against unyielding ground during most activity.

The foot can be moved up and down through dorsiflexion and plantar flexion. It can rotate in and out through supenation and pronation.

Now that we have described briefly the inner workings of the foot, let's talk prevention of foot injuries and how to maintain an acceptable-looking foot.

It's about your shoes — starting with the most important factor. Many simple injuries like hammertoe, soft corns, bone spurs, stress fractures, etc. can be a direct result of incorrect shoes.

Fashionable street shoes should fit your foot properly. So many times we buy shoes for only fashion or color, not for comfort. One evening out, on your feet most of the night in tight shoes and you have a good chance of developing a soft corn, which can be very painful.

In our active lives, many foot injuries can be avoided by proper selection of athletic shoes. Consider your special needs. Be cognizant of your foot's problems . . . how you start, where you put the most pressure on your foot during your activity, and any special needs you might have.

Generally, our feet are overexercised, although we need to add flexibility to maintain good "foot health." Flexibility can be increased by massaging the feet. I have consulted my personal massage therapist, Julia Fryer — Ms. T of Farmington Hills — who says:

"When the feet are often stuffed in shoes, people become unaware of their own feet. By self manipulation of the soft tissue and flexibility exercises for the joints, your foot awareness will be beneficial for your overall health. I've noticed through years of experience that when foot massage is applied regularly, the whole body will respond positively.

"The foot and ankle area is a very complicated portion of the body. It is necessary to keep muscles and ligaments flexible and clear of lactic acid buildup. Daily massage is necessary to: 1. Increase blood flow, especially under callous feet; 2. Increase blood flow to help reduce varicose veins in legs; 3. Help prevent injuries to feet; 4. Help reduce edema (swelling) caused by injury or disease.

"These are a few of the many benefits of foot massage. Try to receive instruction by a professional, or refer to the many books available and share the fun with a friend. Daily self massage will make an incredible difference in how you feel overall."

As a physically active person, take it from me. You can become easily addicted to the pleasures of daily foot massage. I just "oil up" my feet and dig in! I find it also releases a lot of stress.

Canton finishes in style

soccer

Plymouth Canton's soccer team eased some of the hurt at being eliminated from the Western Lakes championship picture by toppling Livonia Churchill 2-1 last Wednesday.

The Chiefs needed a victory over Livonia Franklin and Churchill in their last two division games to stay in the hunt, but a 1-1 tie with Franklin last Monday spoiled those hopes.

"That was heartbreaking," Canton coach Don Smith said, "but the girls are ready to play soccer the rest of the way out."

The Chiefs finish 3-1-1 in the division and were 9-2-1 overall after beating the Chargers, who went on to beat Plymouth Salem for the league title Friday night.

Ironically, under the previous format for deciding the league champ — prior to the advent of a playoff this year — Canton would have been the winner based on its 8-1-1 league mark.

"That's the way it is," Smith said. "We can't do much about it. The girls knew we had our chances; we just let it slip by."

Canton led 1-0 at halftime after Julie Stabnick scored after taking a pass from Jenny Russell at the 22-minute mark.

The Chiefs went up 2-0 early in the second half when Shannon Meath scored on a header following a corner kick. Churchill got on the scoreboard the same way with eight minutes left in the game.

Canton dominated the second half, outshooting the Chargers 21-11. The Chiefs had 34 total shots to Churchill's 22.

SALEM 4, FRANKLIN 1: Jill Estey scored two goals, Sarah Hayes and Michelle Minton one apiece, to lift the Rocks past Franklin on Wednesday. The win gave Salem a 7-1-4 overall record.

Toni Stiglmaier scored for the Patriots, tying the score with 13 minutes remaining in the first half. The loss put Franklin at 4-5-1 overall.

game. It was their game for 10 minutes, then our game for 10 minutes and theirs for five and ours for five . . .

"Give credit to (Rosemary) Hally on defense and Kellie Davis is very good back there. Every time anyone got through, she was there to intercept the ball."

CHURCHILL NEVER trailed in regulation, and scored at 8:39 of the first half on a shot from Davis off a corner kick by Stacherski. Missy Smith scored Salem's goal at 19:11.

"It could have gone either way," said Salem coach Ken Johnson. "We had the action for 10 or 15 minutes and then they would. We hit the post (in the shoot-out), but it was six inches from being in. She tried to place it, and it's one of those things.

"But that's soccer. I like shoot-outs. It gives the girls good experience."

Scoring goals in the shoot-out for Salem were Smith, Sara Hayes and Amy Krajewski. Dawn Gabriel, Hally, Davis and Place scored for Churchill.

Michelle Minton controls the ball for Salem in first-half action. The Rocks suffered only their second loss and are 7-2-4 overall.

Salem loss knots loop standings

Plymouth Salem had its share of hits in its Western Lakes' softball showdown against Lakes Division rival Westland John Glenn Friday. It was just that the Rocks' hits didn't travel quite as far.

The Rockets got two triples and three runs batted in from Denise Gumke to highlight a 12-hit attack in their 8-5 victory at Salem. Both teams are now 7-2 in the Lakes Division. Salem is 10-4 overall, 9-3 in the WLAA; Glenn is 13-2 overall, 10-2 in the WLAA.

"We hit the ball a lot better," said Salem coach Rob Willette, whose Rocks had been slumping at the plate. "We had more singles and they had more extra-base hits. That was the difference in the game."

Salem did collect 11 hits, with Sheryll Gildo, Missy Viele and Jo Wiklund getting two apiece. Viele and Gildo each knocked in a run. The Rockets got three hits from Brenda Coots and two hits and three RBI from Christina Hoffman.

Beth Wilson was the winning pitcher for Glenn, walking just one and striking out two. Kim Berrie was the loser, allowing two walks while fanning one.

On Wednesday, Salem clobbered Farmington 19-4 at Farmington. Berrie clubbed a two-run homer and Gildo had a three-run double in an eight-run sixth. Mary Meissner added two hits. Berrie was the winning pitcher.

For Farmington, Melissa Tisdale slugged a two-run homer and Lisa Rockafellow had two hits. Rockafellow was the losing pitcher.

Salem plays a state tournament pre-district qualifying game against Ann Arbor Pioneer at 4 p.m. Thursday at Salem.

FRANKLIN 15-4, CANTON 8-8: Stacey Thompson issued 17 walks in the first game of a WLAA Western Division doubleheader at Livonia Franklin Friday, leading to Plymouth Canton's defeat. In the second game, Kelly McUmber and Cari Herron combined for four hits and five RBI to earn the Chiefs a split.

Canton is 10-9 overall, 9-4 in the division. Franklin is 5-11 overall.

Thompson gave up six hits and struck out four in the opening loss. She also clubbed a two-run homer, one of her two hits. Jen Clark added three hits and two RBI, and Tina McFarland and Allison Flaskamp contributed two hits each.

In the second game, McUmber and Herron collected two hits apiece, with McUmber knocking in three runs and Herron two. Debbie Smith was the winning pitcher, surrendering seven hits and four walks while striking out two.

On Wednesday, Canton whipped Farmington Harr ison 6-1. Thompson was the winning pitcher and also had three hits, including two doubles, and an RBI.

The Chiefs are in action today at Livonia Stevenson in a doubleheader beginning at 3:30 p.m.

What other charity would sit up, roll over, and beg for your money?

The animals at the Michigan Humane Society will do anything for your support because, for many of them, it's the only chance they have.
Animals give so unselfishly, they're begging you to do the same.
Give to the Michigan Humane Society.

'Magnetic' reading

John Killeen has a bone to pick with publishers who opt for blockbuster sales while sending some well written literary works off to the out of print graveyard. He talks about one such book on Page 5D.

Stan gives tinsel town 'write' stuff

By Carol Azizian
staff writer

As an 11-year-old self-proclaimed television mogul, Stan Zimmerman sat in his bedroom reading Variety, chomping on candy cigars and watching "Love American Style."

One of the segments sparked an idea for a TV series, so he programmed it on his "fourth network."

"Two months later, 'Happy Days' came on the air, and I ran downstairs yelling at my mother, 'You must have called Hollywood and told them about my idea!' " Zimmerman, now 28, recalled. "The same thing happened a couple of times. I would cast the show with stars, not kids from the neighborhood.

"It was my fantasy world."

More than a decade later, his fantasy became a reality. Zimmerman, a former Southfield resident, is now developing television programs for Lorimar in Los Angeles. He's been writing TV scripts in Hollywood for five years.

Zimmerman and his partner, James Berg, have created episodes for "Fame," "Brothers," "The Golden Girls" and "Hooperman."

The team earned a Writers Guild nomination for Best Comedy Episode of 1986 for their work on "The Golden Girls," but the honor went to "Kate and Allie."

ZIMMERMAN and Berg also cowrote and co-produced their first feature film, "The Ruthie Ruddick Story," a coming-of-age movie about a suburban housewife who tries to rescue her sister from the hippie lifestyle in Greenwich Village during the summer of 1969. They sold the movie to Universal. Lily Tomlin will star in it.

"The movie gave us a lot of confidence," Zimmerman said, while munching on turkey salad at the Beachwood Cafe, across the street from Ned Beatty's home in the Hollywood hills. (Zimmerman lives in a "hilltop hideaway" with a marble fireplace — toy marbles — a dinette set from a mental institution and sleek, European-designed couches and chairs.)

"When someone like Lily Tomlin, who we've respected since we were kids, responds to something we've created, it's exciting."

The Writers Guild strike has delayed filming of the movie and halted work on TV shows. But Zimmerman and Berg are taking it in stride.

"Writers don't have any control," Berg said. "That's why we're striking."

Added Zimmerman: "We didn't think we could get control on our first movie. But a lot of people were interested in it, and we were able to have a little leverage in negotiations."

CONTROL and freedom are the most sought-after commodities in the industry.

> 'I'd like to be able to make movies like Woody Allen, to have the freedom to write, act and direct like he does.'
> — Stan Zimmerman

"I'd like to be able to make movies like Woody Allen, to have the freedom to write, act and direct like he does," Zimmerman said.

After years of writing for other sitcoms, Zimmerman and Berg look forward to creating their own shows.

"It's hard to go in to work and write somebody else's version of a (program)," Zimmerman admitted. "When you pitch an idea, they tell you to write a show that you wouldn't necessarily watch. They keep lowering the intelligence level.

"We started turning down jobs because we thought, 'Do we want to spend seven days a week until 2 or 3 a.m. on a show that we don't believe in?' "

They both raved about the new dramadies (a new term for drama/comedy) such as "thirtysomething," "Molly Dodd" and "The Wonder Years." But they'd like to inject more comedy in that genre.

"I'd love to do a comedy that's a cross between 'Molly Dodd' and 'The Golden Girls,' " Zimmerman said.

Breaking up serious scenes with comedy is their forte.

For example, in "The Ruthie Ruddick Story," there's an emotional scene where Ruthie's sister kicks her out of her Greenwich Village apartment. While in the cab, Ruthie removes a moist towelette from her purse and wipes her brow. She forgets her purse in the cab and pulls out a dime from her shoe to make a phone call.

"We go more for the quirkiness than the ha-ha slapstick kind of joke," Zimmerman said.

THEIR zany view of life stems from their childhood.

"Neither of us were the most popular kids in school," Berg said. "We each spent time on the sidelines watching other people."

Zimmerman and Berg teamed up eight years ago, when they were students at New York University.

A 1977 graduate of Southfield High School, Zimmerman studied drama at NYU. From the time he was 7 years old, he honed his acting skills at the Cranbrook Summer Theatre School.

Stan Zimmerman may not be as familiar as Clark Gable or Alan Alda, but the former Southfield resident is making a name for himself as a script writer in Hollywood.

Getting away — for one day or two

By Iris Sanderson Jones
contributing travel editor

Q: We are two mothers with special plans for the summer. Our husbands have agreed to look after the kids while we do a series of day trips, and even a couple of short weekends.

We don't want to play golf or sun on the beach. We want something interesting and active. We've thought of an interesting class, some festivals, learning to use a camera somewhere, maybe even a little theater. Both of us are teachers.

A: Best idea I've heard in a long time. You'll love your kids even more after you've had some time for yourself.

The first thing that popped into my head when I read your letter was an image of the National Storytelling Festival held every year in Jonesborough, Tenn. It's great fun and a perfect place for women who are both mothers and teachers.

Too far for you, but the National Storytelling Institute has a number of seminars around the country, including one July 9-14 in Mount Pleasant. Your husbands may not be accommodating enough to look after the kids that long, but if the idea interests you, start planning for another year.

Write to the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling, (NAPPS) P.O. Box 309, Jonesborough, Tenn. 37659. Or contact Celia Goodman of the Detroit Story League at 356 8069 for other storytelling events in the area.

For example, the Michigan Storytelling Festival will take place in Crossroads Village near Flint June 24-25. That could be your first stop.

FESTIVAL! That's the big word in Michigan. Take your cameras and explore some of them. Telephone toll-free (800) 5432-YES for a main list, but you'll need to get detailed lists from all four Michigan travel associations to cover them all — Southeast Michigan, 585-8220; East Michigan (517) 895-8823; West Michigan (616) 456-8557; Upper Peninsula, (906) 774-5480.

Here are some of the festivals scheduled after Memorial Day: Midland Festival of the arts June 1-18; Battle Creek Cereal Festival June 2-4; Festival '88, Grand Rapids, June 3-5;Mackinac Island Lilac Festival June 3-12; Captain Phogg Balloon

MICKY JONES

A vacation without the husband and children could include a trip to the National Storytelling Festival in Jonesborough, Tenn., where animated storytellers entertain audiences at the Swapping Ground.

Setting makes 'Corners' interesting, entertaining

RECENT RELEASES:

"5 Corners" (B) (R) 90 minutes.
Picture the Bronx in 1964: Heinz (John Turturro) returns from prison after being convicted of the attempted rape of Linda (Jodie Foster). Set against the civil rights and political action of those days, this interesting, entertaining film is not bad.

"Bulletproof" (*) (R).
Detective stuff.

"Friday the 13th, Part VII - The New Blood" (*) (R).
Jason is back for number seven — the question is whether that is good luck for him, the audience or the producers who continue to rake it in with this series.

"Stormy Monday" (B) (R) 90 minutes.
British import is OK action/romance of sleazy British night club operator fighting off takeover attempt by Mr. Big from Texas, U.S.A.

STILL PLAYING:

A ragged story filled with holes. Former special forces member, good guy Nico Tasconi (Steven Seagal), is now a street-wise Chicago cop. To thwart an assassination attempt, he employs violence, martial arts and "tough guy talk." More action than substance. Reviewed by Jeff Lirmatta.

"Aria" (B) (R) 80 minutes.
Opera buffs will love these 10 different arias in individual sequences, each by a different director. A collage of top-quality, classical music in unusual settings. Reviewed by Kathy Guyor.

"Au Revoir Les Enfants" (A+) (PG) 103 minutes.
Louis Malle's Oscar-nominated film of intensely personal memories of the Holocaust. Three young Jewish boys are hidden from Gestapo in Catholic school. Quiet film emphasizes Nazi horror with masterful understatement.

"Biloxi Blues" (B+) (PG-13) 105 minutes.
Eugene Jerome (Matthew Broderick) learns about life, Army and otherwise, in this nice period piece set in Biloxi (Mississippi) boot camp, 1945. Good performance by Christopher Walken as tough, but sensitive sergeant, whipping raw recruits into shape.

"Bright Lights, Big City" (B+) (R) 110 minutes.
Jamie Conway (Michael J. Fox) shows the dark side of a young man's life. Cocaine, alcohol and New York at night are his diversions to escape the pain of life and death. Fox finally appears in a mature role and does it well.

"Colors" (F) (R) 120 minutes.
Trite, racially offensive film about veteran cop (Robert Duvall) training rookie (Sean Penn) as they confront Los Angeles street gangs. Besides insulting stereotypes, the film rambles on and Penn's acting reaches new depths of ineptitude. Even the normally excellent Duvall is wooden and uninspiring.

Grading the movies

A+	Top marks - sure to please
A	Close behind - excellent
A-	Still in running for top honors
B+	Pretty good stuff, not perfect
B	Good
B-	Good but notable deficiencies
C+	Just a cut above average
C	Mediocre
C-	Not so hot and slipping fast
D+	The very best of the poor stuff
D	Poor
D-	It doesn't get much worse
F	Truly awful
Z	Reserved for the colossally bad
*	No advanced screening

the movies

Dan Greenberg

Kathy Guyor

He's back. An axe-swinging Jason returns to the screen in Paramount Pictures' "Friday the 13th Part VII — The New Blood."

"The Fox and the Hound" (A) (G) 80 minutes.
Animated Disney film about unusual friendship between young fox and hunting hound. An array of talking forest creatures make this a typical, enjoyable Disney film. Reviewed by Kathy Guyor.

"Good Morning Vietnam" (A) (R) 120 minutes.
Non-stop Robin Williams at his very best as Armed Forces Radio D.J. in Vietnam.

"The Last Emperor" (A) (PG-13) 125 minutes.
Bernardo Bertolucci's stunning presentation of the epic tale of China's last emperor, Pu Yi. A fascinating story of survival through two world wars and Mao's Communist takeover of mainland China.

"The Manchurian Candidate" (B+) (PG-13).
They may not make movies like they used to, but they do re-release the old ones. This 1962 all-star espionage thriller features Frank Sinatra, Laurence Harvey, Angele Lansbury and Janet Leigh. Worth the trip to your local film house.

"Moonstruck" (A+) (PG) 102 minutes.
Cher as a 37-year-old Italian widow in Brooklyn about to remarry. She's terrific and Nicolas Cage, Vincent Gardenia and Danny Aiello are great in this pure distillation of the American ethnic shtick.

"A New Life" (A) (PG-13) 100 minutes.
Alan Alda's latest is a frank, intelligent romantic comedy about divorce, love and remarriage and all the other problems middle-aged people face.

"Permanent Record" (B+) (PG) 85 minutes.
Powerful, thought-provoking drama of teen suicide as family and friends come to grips with pain and confusion of such a useless death. Good acting in well-done script, but bring plenty of tissues. Reviewed by Kathy Guyor.

"Return to Snowy River II" (B) (PG).
Classic, but almost trite story of rugged young adventurer (Tom Burlinson) returning home to claim his land and his love. Naturally, her father (Brian Dennehy) prefers another suitor. Magnificant scenery and more than 250 horses make this an attractive, entertaining film.

Punctuate summer with mini vacations

Classic at Crossroads Village near Flint June 4-5; National Asparagus Festival in Hart and Shelby June 9-11.

Bluegrass Festival, Muskegon June 10-11; Southern Michigan Dulcimer Festival, Marshall, June 17-19; Kite Festival, Mackinaw City June 18; Bavarian Festival, Frankenmuth June 18-25; Great Lumbertown Music Festival, Muskegon, June 25-July 4; Blue Lake Summer Arts Festival, Twin Lake, June 29-Aug.1.

And that is just the list for June!

Consider the Battle Creek International Balloon Championship July 9-16. Colorful photographs there. The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair will be on this year July 20 to 23. The Michigan International Air Show takes place July 22-24.

I could go on and on.

HOW ABOUT driving or taking the Amtrak train to Chicago for either the Chicago Blues Festival June 10-12 or the world's largest outdoor food and entertainment fair, Taste of Chicago, July 1-10. Get a Chicago Events Guide from the Chicago Tourism Council, 806 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Cleveland? The Cuyahoga Valley Line is back in operation after a two-year shutdown, so you can make the 52-mile round trip into one of America's national urban parks. The Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area, including Hale Farm and Village, is great fun. Call (800) 468-4070. Stay at The Taverne of Richfield, in Richfield, between Cleveland and Akron. Visit Quaker Square in Akron.

Cross the border into Canada? Go to the Kettle Creek Inn, Port Stanley, and explore the Niagara peninsula. Go to the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake. Or the Stratford Festival in Stratford. Try the Blyth Festival in Blythe for new Canadiian plays

Closer to home: spend a day in Windsor, go to Bobio via Amherstburg, eat your way through the fruit and vegetable fields of southern Ontario along Highway 18, attend the Leamington Tomato Festival Aug. 19-21, spend a day at one of Canada's national parks in Point Pelee. You can also take a Shop Til You Drop tour of Windsor for $25 each in U.S. money, including accommodations at the Red Oak Inn, by calling (800) 267-7834.

How about an overnight at Wheels Inn, Chatham, Ontario? Inexpensive. Good food, drink and entertainment. Great sports facilities. On the other hand, save that one; your husbands and kids will love it.

Q: I UNDERSTAND that there is a Mackinac Island guide for disabled travelers.

A: Disabled travelers can get "The Wheelchair Users' Guide to Mackinac Island and the Straits Area," a video created by Jan Blanchard, who has had multiple sclerosis for more than 20 years, and her husband, Bill, a Lansing-area film maker.

It recently won an award from the Michigan Outdoor Writers Association.

The 60-minute video shows you how to take a wheelchair on the ferry, go up the hill to Fort Mackinac, join island carriage rides and Grand Hotel tours. Follow Jan around while she points out the accessible attractions.

GS band flirts with notoriety beyond border

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

A little radio airplay can go a long way — even to Toledo, Ohio.

The Greg Stryker Band, whose number "Spellbound," found its way on to both WRIF-FM and WLLZ-FM's play lists, is starting to notice the benefits of its recent flirt with notoriety.

"People have been coming to see us because they have heard the tunes," said Stryker, 23, who grew up in Bloomfield Hills. "When we go to Toledo, people even know us."

Today, Toledo. Tomorrow who knows. Maybe it will be Tallahassee. Granted, reaching the people of northern Ohio is not exactly a national breakout. But, hey, it's a start.

Any day the bus for the national spotlight could be leaving from Detroit. Greg Stryker Band wants the front seat.

The band is ecstatic by the recent radio support, especially from WRIF. The album-oriented rock station has also included the Greg Stryker Band in a few of its promotional "Local Riff" nights at area nightclubs.

BUT ALONG with the encouragement has also come discouragement. Pat Still was recently fired as program director at WRIF.

"Finally we get a break and he gets fired," Stryker said. "From the second we met him, he helped us out immensely.

"You finally accomplish something, then something like this happens. . . . Rock'n'roll is like a roller coaster ride. You take two steps forward and 10 miles backwards. That's what it feels like anyway."

The Greg Stryker Band plans to gain a few miles instead. The group's hard rock product will tell the story.

The sound is high energy rock'n'roll with Stryker leading the way with his distinctive and well-honed vocals. The writing is tight as well. For the most part, the Greg Stryker Band is able to avoid the cliches in its music.

Apparently, people are not avoiding the band. Already, according to Stryker, the band has been scouted by Capitol. And there are six other "major labels" taking a peek as well.

In a short time, the Greg Stryker Band has made a name for itself at hard rock venues such as New York, New York, The Ritz and Harpos. The group possesses a large and rather loyal following.

The Greg Stryker Band's strength lies in the music, according to band members. Stryker said he has anywhere from "500 to 600" songs down on tape.

MOST OF the material is written on the farm where Stryker lives in Marlette, Mich. The rural atmosphere makes for some good tunes, he said.

"I can't say when I sit down I have all these emotions," he said. "I'm a crazy kind of a guy. I just sit down and it happens."

But, as the case for so many bands, the nightclubs seem to outnumber the songs.

"We're in the middle of bar burnout," Stryker said. "It's like every time you walk in to a bar you say to yourself, 'What am I doing here?' "

Stryker and his bandmates know full well the answer to that question. And Billy Craig, guitar; Charlie Grover, drums; Bruce LaFrance, bass; Bruce Fisk, guitar and keyboards, are willing to meet the burned-out bar blues head on.

Some possible opening gigs at Pine Knob are in the works. The group's recent surge has made them optimistic to say the least.

"I know that we can do what the big boys can do," Stryker said. "I've always looked up to B.S.A. (Bittersweet Alley), Toby Redd and Strut. . . . We're finally happening. We know who we are."

The Blanks back up words with action

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Today, the only music Bill Boyer might be making is by dragging a metal cup across the bars of a jail cell.

Yes, that's right. If everything goes according to plan, the drummer of the Blanks could be in the can.

This morning, Boyer and a host of other protesters will have gone to the construction site of controversial the trash incinerator in Detroit and had a sit-in. He expects to be arrested.

"We feel like we're too preachy, if we don't back up what we say," said Boyer, who grew up Birmingham.

What the Blanks have to say about the trash incinerator, now under construction, isn't so nice. But the incinerator, which has drawn the protest of many environmental groups including Greenpeace, is not the only thing burning at the Blanks lately.

The Blanks does benefit gigs for alternative newspapers, fighting censorship and getting the U.S. out of Central America.

On the less volatile side, the group has worked for such causes as the Paradigm Dance Theatre and the Humane Society.

OBVIOUSLY, one can fill in the Blanks as political. Many bands take political stances with their music. Few bands, however, actually take their stances to the street.

The Blanks do. The group's music, though not hardcore punk, carries the electric crunch of protest songs. The band's debut album, "The Blanks," is chock full of political offerings.

Live performances can be anywhere from high schools to clubs like the Hamtramck Pub and Rerun's in Dearborn. During the weekend, the group had a benefit performance at Alvin's to raise money in the fight against the trash incinerator, "Ban the Burn."

The Blanks formed more as a project than a musical group. Two members, Steve Bitto and Chris Israel, were in political bands Heavy Things and Zeramar while in high school at Bloomfield Hills Lahser.

Israel joined forces with Boyer. Bitto, who was "musically hopeless" at the time, later found his way to the Blanks.

The Blanks are a product of their upbringing, they said.

"KIDS IN school used to drive me nuts with their ideas of, 'I can't wait until I turn 16 so I can get a Corvette,' " Bitto said. " . . . They were basically rich, snobbish kids. I wasn't."

The Blanks haven't totally defined its sound yet. Boyer said it's developing more of a bite as time passes. After all, after the trash incinerator there are other issues like casino gambling to tackle.

While the list of causes to embrace is endless, one wonders if the energy is as plentiful. The Blanks think so.

More than anything, the group doesn't want to be dismissed as a bunch of hippies reliving a '60s nostalgia trip.

"Our hair is shorter," Bitto said. "Protest in the '90s isn't going to be a rehash of the '60s," Boyer added. "It might be even more exciting because of the quality of the commitment."

The Blanks feature Bill Boyer, Steve Bitto and Chris Israel.

ALPHABET STREET/ EVERYTHING YOUR HEART DESIRES
— Prince/ Hall & Oates

Two years ago, Prince invited us to "try my new funk." But this single, lead-off track from his upcoming Lovesexy album, shows the Purple One is still refining his funk, still boiling it down to its essence.

As it stands, "Alphabet Street" is one long, fat, funky groove. Melody and harmony are now almost completely abandoned in favor of rhythm.

House music, specifically Prince's own "housequake", seems to have been the inspiration here. It's a brave move. While "Alphabet Street" bristles with shake-your-booty energy, it doesn't appear to have smash hit status written all over it — at least not upon first listen.

Prince, however, has long shown a preference to leading his audience to new, uncharted musical territory, rather than reflecting momentarily on pop chart trends.

Once again, this ever-innovative artist has thrown down the gauntlet. Now, it remains to be seen whether the record-buying masses are ready to pick up on his new (revised) funk.

Prince may push the limits of his talent on his new release but Hall & Oates grow more conservative on their new 45, the pair's first for their new label.

The rock'n'roll crunch displayed on "Big Bam Boom", their last RCA album is, at least momentarily, abandoned for a sound closer to their mid-'70s hits.

"Everything" would easily fit alongside "She's Gone" or "Sara Smile" and it's easy, laid back groove should make it a solid early summer hit — pleasant enough, but at this late date, not much to jump up and down about either.

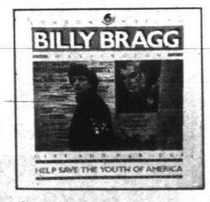
HELP SAVE THE YOUTH OF AMERICA
— Billy Bragg



Needless to say, with Billy Bragg's fur hat and the hammer and sickle on the album cover, this one won't make William F. Buckley's Top 10 list.

"Help Save the Youth of America" (Elektra) is mostly political oratory that's a little lean on the musical side. Recorded live, Billy Bragg's latest effort still manages to capture the raw energy reminiscent of the protest days of the 1960s.

Featured on the album are six songs that run the gamut from nuclear war to unionism to political apathy. Bragg is certainly no Luciano Pavarotti in the vocal department, but he gets the job done.

Bragg's big project stateside is to encourage Americans to vote. Included in the six-song EP is list of places in each of the 50 states where people can register.

"Remember, when you elect a president, you are electing a president for all of us," Bragg writes on the back of the album. "Please be more careful this time."

"Help Save the Youth America," the title track from the album, begins with Bragg telling his Soviet audience how this number could easily apply to them as well. A guy sounding like Yakoff Smirnoff translates what Bragg is saying.

Bragg launches into his electric folk number with undaunted zest. The Soviet audience claps heartily (then again, judging the state of Soviet rock'n'roll, they'll clap at anything).

"Think Again" deals with consequences of nuclear war, reminding us the Soviets want no more of it than we do. "There Is Power in a Union" has all the makings of a Teamsters' anthem.

"Chile, Your Waters Run Red through Soweto" amazingly manages to grapple with the monumental problems of Chile and South Africa in one song. Apparently, nothing is too mighty for Bragg.

THE SEA OF LOVE
— The Adventures

This is a nice album. So nice is this album that you can take it home and play it for mom and dad. And while you're at it, invite Buffy, Jody and Mr. French along, too. Make it a true family affair.

"The Sea of Love" (Elektra) is so syrupy at times you want to look over the album cover for pictures of Aunt Jemima.

For the purely pop ear, there's plenty of sap to keep one happy. But The Adventures is a contradiction in name. This group doesn't take any chances here, playing it safe most of the way.

Sure in "Broken Land," there's political overtones to "The Troubles" in Northern Ireland. But this number makes it sound like the warring factions are out there with pea shooters.

Because of that and a few hooks as well, this number undoubtly will garner a fair amount of airplay.

Let it be said The Adventures have a very clean sound. Nary a scratch or a vocal out of sync. Worst of all, though, there's no thunder.

And take a listen to some of these song titles: "Drowning in the Sea of Love," "Hold Me Now," "When Your Heart Was Young" and "The Sound of Summer." It's easy to see Pat Gribben, the group's chief songwriter, is not exactly breaking new ground here.

Gribben, who is guitarist for The Adventures, actually provides a bit of an edge wfth a few well-placed riffs in "When Your Heart Was Young," but the rest of the album would be lucky to cut butter.

The sad, but true, thing in all this is that with one song, "Broken Land," The Adventures will get its video on MTV and its song on the radio. There are so many other bands, pop and rock alike, with more to offer. But they haven't figured out the formula.

Fantasy becomes reality for writer

Berg started out in journalism and switched to TV when he met Zimmerman.

"We both had jobs after school," Berg said. "I did landscaping in New York City and after work, I'd walk into his apartment in my dirt-filled boots and we'd write sitcoms into the night."

"Our friends didn't understand why we didn't want to go to the movies or do fun things," Zimmerman added. "We'd say, 'no thanks, we're writing for Alice.'"

They sent one of their scripts to a New York agent, who forwarded it to Gary Keeper, a Paramount executive.

"When Gary asked what we had done, we couldn't tell him we were still writing term papers," Zimmerman quipped.

But they decided to take a trip to Hollywood and meet Keeper in person.

"We hit it off, and he gave us a bunch of scripts to study."

IN 1982, a year after they graduated, Zimmerman and Berg made the big move to Los Angeles. Through Keeper's influence, they were able to get tickets to tapings of shows.

After watching a taping of "Cheers," they were inspired to write a script. The work impressed Keeper so much that he recommended them to the producers of a new series created at Lorimar, where he was a development executive.

"The first day, the producers gave us a couple words and told us to develop a story line for a show called 'Just Our Luck.' We were petrified," Zimmerman admitted. "But we pitched the idea, and they loved it."

Immediately, several agents "flocked down" on them.

One agent, who had already wined and dined the duo, sent his "spies" out to follow the writing team. When the agent found out they had lunch with an agent from another firm, he tried to entice them with an invitation to Hugh Heffner's private club.

"He pulled out a card for the club," Zimmerman recalled. "We thought he was going to take us on a shopping spree. But he wanted to shower us with champagne and playmates. Needless to say, we didn't sign."

They're now represented by International Creative Management.

They attribute their success to discipline, assertiveness and an ability to work with people.

"We're pushers, and we have a lot of nerve," Berg said.

"But we also have a real easy manner, and we like to treat people as if they've been our friends for 50 years," Zimmerman said.

WHEN THEY'RE creating episodes for a show, they work with eight to 12 other writers. Teams and individual writers come up with different episodes separately, and the entire staff critiques and rewrites them together.

"We think of each draft as real snarly hair," Zimmerman explained. "We just keep combing it out, and we're confident that when we get to the end, it's going to be beautiful and soft and manageable."

Their business partnership has both tested and strengthened their friendship. Initially, Zimmerman handled the business details because Berg disliked that aspect of their work. Zimmerman learned to relax and enjoy life outside of show business and Berg helped out with the nuts and bolts.

Still, there were some rough times.

"Once, we were writing on a show that we were both unhappy with," Berg said. "Stan was a pain. It got to the point where it wasn't fun anymore. But we had a talk and worked it out."

Although many of their projects were hits, a few were flops. "Just Our Luck," about a nerdy California weatherman who finds a black hip genie on Venice Beach, lasted 13 episodes; "Late Bloomers," developed as a backup to "Kate and Allie," never saw the light of day; and "Gung Ho," a sitcom based on the movie, aired for only nine episodes.

What's their big dream?

Berg: "We want to go on tour with the June Taylor Dancers."

Zimmerman: "We want to bring back folksinging."

Reporter: "It's already making a comeback."

Zimmerman: "Oh well, we've got to do something else. Maybe we could bring back disco."

Berg: "Nah, it's too early. How about political disco?"

Zimmerman: "Seriously, we want to direct and produce."

Reporter: "You don't want to do something totally out of character like 'The Last Emperor,' do you?"

Zimmerman: " 'The Last Kibbutz' maybe."

Berg: "Freedom and a good salary. That's the big dream. What more could you ask for?"

Zimmerman: "And a good hair cut."

Manufacturers newest lure is an interchangeable SLR lens

By Sandy Colton
AP Newsfeatures
staff writer

camera angles

Not so long ago, camera manufacturers set out to woo the amateur photographer away from the 110-size, point-and-shoot camera. The Kodak Instamatic-type cameras and disc cameras were the target.

First, manufacturers came out with simple, inexpensive 35mm cameras with cheap wide-angle lenses. These lenses keep any image relatively sharp from about 4 feet to infinity. There is no need to focus, and the price is very affordable.

Next came autofocus and auto-exposure. Autofocus just manages to get you into a zone of focus close enough to make the picture relatively sharp. Auto-exposure brings the user within the f-stop latitude of most amateur color print films.

Film manufacturers cooperated in this process by improving their films, making them faster, brighter and with finer grain.

The novice photographer, afraid of all those numbers and things associated with 35mm photography, delighted with the autofocus/auto-exposure cameras, forgot about the 110-size camera. The Instamatic is dead; the disc camera is on its way out.

Now manufacturers want amateurs to move another step closer to the top-of-the-line, interchangeable-lens SLR camera — and to spend more money doing so. They have come out with a new camera, called a bridge camera.

With a bridge camera, you can point and shoot, or, with the push of a button, you can use an operating mode similar to what you'd find in a more sophisticated camera.

SOME BRIDGE cameras have a lot of buttons for a lot of options. For example, the Ricoh FF-7, introduced at the recent Photo Marketing Association show in Chicago, does everything — plus a little bit more.

The Ricoh FF-7 has a sleek design. It is compact and light, and it can fit into a shirt pocket.

At first touch, the Ricoh FF-7 feels like a simple point-and-shoot camera. And it is. It does all those things you'd expect of such a camera — just about auto-everything.

"A nice camera," I told a tech rep who was showing it to me, "probably very good for novices, people who just want to point and shoot and get good pictures without worrying about all those numbers and things."

I was in for a big surprise. The tech rep depressed a small button on the side of the camera, and a whole range of sophisticated features became available. It was amazing to find so much in such a small camera.

What options does the camera include?

First, a panorama mode that automatically sets the lens at infinity, even when shooting landscapes through windows (this usually fools most cameras' autofocus mechanisms).

Second, a night photography mode that sets the shutter speed and f-stop for shooting such things as the skyline of a city at night with no flash.

Third, a TV setting mode that sets the shutter speed at 1/30th of a second for shooting pictures from a TV screen without getting the lines.

"Hey," I asked, "why put something like that in there for an amateur?"

THE TECH rep replied: "Think of all the people with computers today who may want to get a photocopy of a graphic they've created."

The camera also has continuous shooting and interval modes.

With the continuous shooting mode, you hold the shutter button down and you have a motor drive that shoots pictures at about one frame per second.

Set the interval mode and the camera automatically takes a picture every 60 seconds until you turn it off. This feature might be useful, if you want to record the budding of a flower, for example, or birds feeding.

Loewinsohn brings craft of poet to work

By John Killeen
special writer

books missed or forgotten

There are times when the logic of publishers seems to be more of a hope than a reality. Times when the lust for blockbuster sales relegates well-written books to the remainder tables or to the realm of out of print.

The illogic of this is never more apparent than when an author writes a book that follows directly from a previous work and the first book is difficult or even impossible to find. It is worse when the books receive critical praise.

This is the case of the works of Ron Loewinsohn. He has published six volumes of poetry. He has edited a work by William Carlos Williams. And the audience for his two fiction works have to search high and low for them.

The sad part of this situation is that Loewinsohn is one of the finest writers I have read in the last several years.

That sad part of it is that so many who would read his fiction must special order the books and still the publishers have made no attempt to make them more widely available.

In 1983, Alfred A. Knopf Inc. published the first novel, "Magnetic Field(s)." After modest sales, the book went into a trade paper edition for a few years. At present, the only way to read the book is to order a hardcover copy.

"Hey," I asked, "why put something like that in there for an amateur?"

THE TECH rep replied: "Think of all the people with computers today who may want to get a photocopy of a graphic they've created."

The camera also has continuous shooting and interval modes.

With the continuous shooting mode, you hold the shutter button down and you have a motor drive that shoots pictures at about one frame per second.

Set the interval mode and the camera automatically takes a picture every 60 seconds until you turn it off. This feature might be useful, if you want to record the budding of a flower, for example, or birds feeding.

LOEWSINSOHN brings the craft of a poet to his work. The words weave and soar. The imagination is given over to pure, full flight.

"Magnetic Field(s)" is a book about connections. About standing in the middle of the lives of others. About how seemingly random events and people touch and form lives.

The book is divided into three parts. The first is about Albert, a burglar. We follow him through his training with Jerome, his mentor. The one thing Jerome can't do, however, is control Albert's penchant for imagining the life of the families whose houses he robs.

"In the houses, the foreignness or difference was actually a heavy charge in the air of each room . . . When they were someplace else, not there, they could think about this kitchen table, but their thought of it did not include him being in this place, while his thought of it did include them."

Albert steals little, useless things to remind himself of the lives he has invaded. These items, and the places they were taken from, continually crop up in the rest of the book. Pictures, toys, lamps and even floor plans recur with unsettling regularity. The randomness of life appears anything but random.

One of the houses Albert breaks in to has a recording studio. This house introduces us to the family in the second part of the book.

DAVID AND June Lyman and their son Danny are the family. David is a composer. With a collaborator, he is working on a piece, called "Champs Magnetiques."

In the summer, the Lymans rent a house in New York. It was lived in by a family of a college researcher. They had a son, who was a prodigy and died an early, accidental death. But the child has left a book of poems and journals David finds.

Once again, we are standing in the middle of other lives. Once again the random play of life eerily transcends happenstance.

At one point, while reading about the father, David learns that when he was stuck in his research, the father would wander in a library and collect the dedications to books.

One of them reads: "For Stephen, Will and Joe and for Kitty, who brought me cups of coffee all that dark autumn in Reykjavik." This is the dedication for "Magnetic Field(s)." Lives inside of lives.

The last part of the book follows the Lymans as they return home at the end of the summer. David has learned that his close friend has left his wife for another woman. He didn't know that Daniel was even seeing anyone else.

David begins to imagine the life his friend has kept from him. He imagines the lies and subterfuge that Daniel must have resorted to carry off the affair.

SLOWLY, WE move through the life of Daniel and his lover. Here again the rooms we have been in earlier in the book are rooms we enter now. Pictures hang on different walls, or do they? Toys pop up on a window sill. We have seen them before.

Given enough time and space, one could do justice to this wonderfully imaginative book. To say that Ron Loewsinsohn is a master of writing is a gross understatement.

At the end of the book, David wonders: "What it must have been like to hear your own breathing and your own heartbeat there in the space where other people had their lives?"

Thanks to "Magnetic Field(s)" and Mr. Lowesinsohn, we know exactly what that feels like.

It is always a delight to see the latest shipment of antiques from Europe and the Far East at Hampton House in Birmingham.

Shirley Lewis, owner and buyer, has an eye for quality and the unusual. Each item has its own story. Lewis is well informed and articulate.

Important French and English antique furniture, Chinese porcelain, engravings, prints and original oil paintings are some the wonderful things you see at Hampton House.

I am most impressed with the detail given to the porcelain pieces which serve as lamps. Rather than go through the porcelain, Lewis designed a stand or base with rod with finial to hold the shade. The porcelain sets on the stand — always a treasure that one can touch, hold and admire. All the shades are designed by Lewis. I found them innovative.

One doesn't have to be an antique collector to appreciate its beauty. I can't think of an accent piece to a contemporary look that would be more smashing than one of the pieces I saw.

A visit to Hampton House is a special treat.

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

Q. I am constantly interrupted by people in my office, both for important issues and just for chitchat. I don't want to offend them, but they take too much of my time. What can I do?

A. You must first remember that you are paid to handle interruptions as a part of your job. Letting people waste your time is another matter, however. Try some of the following techniques.

Since you sound friendly, your first mistake may be as simple as eye contact. Glancing up to see each person passing by may act as an invitation to stop. Worse yet, smiling or saying something to each one is really asking for trouble.

Avoid noticing people when you don't have time. One way to accomplish this might be to change the position of your desk; perhaps facing a wall or window would help.

If you have a private office, close your door during certain hours on a regular basis to do work requiring concentration. If you work in an open area, shutting yourself off is more difficult. Try posting a sign that says, "Virtual Door" when you don't want to be interrupted. This has proven very effective as co-workers soon recognize and respect your need for privacy while that sign is posted.

Chairs near your desk may invite lengthy conversations. If removing them is impractical, consider placing files or boxes on them to discourage loafers.

When you must discuss an issue, stand up, move away from your desk and remain standing throughout the conversation. This encourages brevity and makes moving on more natural. When a co-worker asks, "Do you have a minute?" either ask, 1) "Can we wrap this up in one minute?" or 2) "No. May I meet you at your desk in 15 minutes?"

If all else fails, try behavior modification. Each time subordinates interrupt you needlessly, assign them an added task. Begin saving up little things to do in a special file so you will be ready when offenders appear. They will soon learn that approaching you means more work for them.

Homearama

Builders showing their best stuff

HOMEARAMA, the annual event featuring builders trying to out-do each other in creating "new idea" homes, will have separate spring and summer events in two different locations this year.

HOMEARAMA, begins with a spring event, May 25 to June 19, at Dunham Pointe Subdivision, on Dunham Road just east of Heydenreich Road, south of M-59 and east of Romeo Plank Road in Clinton Township. John Scaccia of Summit Homes of Rochester Hills is chairman of the eastside event.

The summer HOMEARAMA is set for June 29 to July 24 at Autumn Ridge Subdivision, on Orchard Lake Road north of Walnut Lake Road in West Bloomfield.

"THERE'LL BE some spectacular homes in HOMEARAMA this year with new building materials and unique interior layouts," said Herbert Lawson, president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan (BASM), the sponsoring organization.

At Dunham Pointe subdivision, developed by Chateau Land Development Company of Clinton Township, 12 new showcase homes ranging from $125,000 to $250,000, will be open for inspection.

At the Autumn Ridge subdivision, developed by Herbert Lawson, Inc., there will be 18 showcase homes in the $250,000-$400,000 price range.

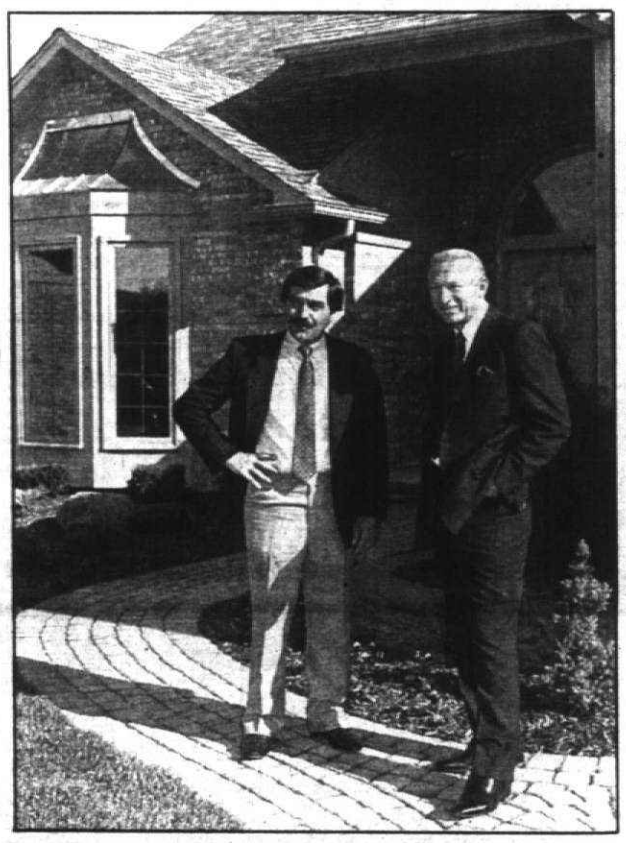
Each is the creation of its own team of architect, BASM builder, interior designer and landscaper, incorporating innovative ideas in design, life style, construction techniques and materials, interior decoration and energy conservation.

HOMEARAMA WILL HAVE new hours this year, too — 7-11 p.m. Monday-Friday, and 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. "By staying open an hour later this year, it will be more convenient for those for those who work during the day," said Lawson.

Admission is $4 per person and includes an extensive plan book covering all homes. Discount coupons, for Monday through Friday, are available at all locations of Detroit Edison and Standard Federal Bank, cosponsors of the spring event.

Free parking is provided, and refreshments are available for purchase.

For the first time, the furniture in most of HOMEARAMA's "idea homes" will be put up for sale on the last day of its spring run, June 19, in Dunham Pointe subdivision in Clinton Township.



Exterior of model, "Trillium," by Lepore Building Co. Inc. of Troy will be at the spring HOMEARAMA. It is a 2,700-square-foot Cape Cod with four bedrooms, three full baths, family room with French doors and formal dining room. Price range $149,000-190,000. At left, John Scaccia of Rochester Hills and John Boll of Grosse Pointe Farms compare notes on the construction progress. Scaccia, president of Summit Homes in Leonard, is chairman of spring HOMEARAMA. Boll is developer of Dunham Pointe.

Home buying tips

You've just bought a new home and you think you're all set. Right? Wrong. If the average proves true, you will be putting that same house on the market again in just eight years.

"Before you start house-hunting," says Gerald Kosmensky, president of Southern Michigan Home Owners Warranty Corporation, "you need to consider the qualities that will make your home a wise investment for resale, the features that will maintain and may increase your home's value even eight years down the road when it's time to sell.

"Location of the home and character of the neighborhood are two of the most important variables in any home-buying decision," he said. Kosmensky also offers more specific advice for making your next home a smart investment:

Don't buy the most expensive or the least expensive home in the neighborhood.

If the neighborhood you are looking at is very nice, but the home you want just can't stand up to the quality of the surrounding homes, you will have a tough time getting a good offer when resale time comes. On the other hand, if the home you are interested in is the only nice one in the area, the surrounding homes will drag down the value of your home when it comes time to have it appraised.

Move into a new development early.

The last buyers to buy a home in a new development will generally pay more for the same model home. In other words, by the time the last residents have moved into the development, the original buyers have made a quick profit on their investment.

Consider a new "trade up" home before a resale start-up home. It is a better investment.

In the next 10 years, baby boomers will reach middle age. More Americans than ever will be approaching retirement age. These changing demographics indicate that in the future, fewer home buyers will be looking for basic, starter homes. Older buyers will want to trade-up to new homes with all the modern conveniences and amenities. By opting to invest in a new home now, you will be in good shape for the housing market of the future.

Find a home backed by a 10-year warranty and insurance plan.

Some builders offer only a one- or two-year personal warranty without insurance backing. That isn't going to provide you or your potential buyers with much protection against structural defects that might surface in later years and reduce the value of your home. You should look for a builder who provides 10 years of insurance and warranty protection.

"With a HOW (Home Owners Warranty) resale home," Kosmensky says, "buyers gain an extra advantage from the transfer of the 10-year protection plan. That can be a key selling point."

Home Owners Warranty is the nation's oldest and largest insurance warranty program. It is the only new home warranty and insurance program endorsed by the National Association of Home Builders.

HOW builders warrant their homes against faulty workmanship and materials for one year and against major structural defects and defects in the wiring, plumbing, heating, cooling, ventilating and mechanical systems for two years.
