Library opens to rave reviews

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A stream of visitors flooded Canton's new library on opening day Monday.

And responses about the new digs glowed.

"It's absolutely gorgeous," said Mary Giera, a Westland resident at the library Monday. Her husband, Chuck, said he was surprised by the large collection of computer related books.

"The layout is great," Mary said. "A lot of planning went into it."

The 31,500-square-foot library, next to township hall on Canton Center south of Proctor, features reading areas with a fireplace and tapestry, study areas, meeting rooms and an expansive children's section.

"It's a lot bigger than I expected," said Michele McGrail, who was researching astrology in preparation for a speech.

DEBORAH CRAWFORD, a teaching graduate student at Eastern Michigan University, was perched in a reading area lined by windows overlooking scenic open land and trees in the distance. Crawford marveled about the view and excellent lighting.

The Canton resident rented two videos; took advantage of the typewriter room with workers who are "very friendly and willing to help right away;" and was impressed by the "large" selection of children's books. The library is "ultra-modern," she said.

Opening gets a bit wet

Firefighters, arriving in engines and rescue units, showed for the library's opening day Monday afternoon.

They bypassed the bookshelves and headed toward the storage room where about an inch of water had accumulated on the floor.

"A little pebble caught in the back (pressure control) valve," caused the minor flooding, said Jean Tabor, library director.

The water didn't cause damage.

"Luckily we have everything up on shelving in there," Tabor said.

"We're looking for a way that it will never happen again so it will go into a drain or outside," she said. "That's one of the wrinkles in a new building."

New board facing laundry-list agenda

By Diane Gale

> supervisor-elect

A request for full-time pay for the supervisors' post is among the items expected to be discussed at the newly elected board's first meeting Tuesday.

Top on supervisor-elect Tom Yack's list is upgrading the supervisor position to full time.

Earlier this year, the board cut the post and the pay from $36,000 to $18,000 beginning this term anticipating the township would hire a superintendent.

However, voters gave thumbs down and supported a full-time supervisor.

YACK SAID he planned to ask the board to follow a township Merit Commission recommendation to increase the pay to $43,200 during his term.

And Yack, a Wayne-Westland school teacher, still must receive leave approval from the school board before he can devote normal day hours to the supervisors' job.

While Yack campaigned for the supervisor position, he strongly supported hiring a superintendent. Ironically, voters gave him the nod and rejected the superintendent idea.

Earlier this week, Yack said he planned to teach full time until late January and then begin working full time as supervisor. However, that leave depends on Wayne-Westland school board approval.

"I would love to submit a letter saying I will be available for four years," said Yack, adding he believes the Wayne-Westland school board will deal with his leave request on a year-by-year basis.

AT THE BOARD'S first meeting, Yack also plans to suggest adopting a temporary set of board by-laws dealing with the way meetings are conducted.

"Right now it's (the agenda) a laundry list of items," Yack said. "It will look more like a business agenda."

The public is invited to the 2:30 p.m. Sunday swearing in ceremony at township hall, as well as, the board's first meeting.

During the election, candidates for the board listed a number of goals for the next four years.

Yazaki investigated by health department

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Noxious fumes and other health concerns at American Yazaki have been investigated by the state on at least three occasions this year, according to a health department spokesman.

Findings from one of the reviews are complete and resulted in a citation. Results on the others are pending further investigation, said William Cleary, deputy chief of occupational health, a division of the state health department.

THE CITATION resulted from violation of the federal occupational health standard requiring employers who use hazardous material to collect safety data sheets, prepare written programs, train employees and label all hazardous materials.

"They didn't have a written program and hadn't trained employees," Cleary said.

American Yazaki, a car component manufacturer and research center on I-275 and Haggerty Road, was given a written citation; however, no monetary costs were added, Cleary said.

"Following that investigation there were additional complaints received," he said. "We went back in and continued investigation of other health issues. We can't elaborate until the investigations are completed."

Cleary predicted results sometime this month.

The remaining investigations deal with carbon monoxide levels, he said.

School projects need benefactors

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Students in Plymouth-Canton schools are looking for a few good benefactors.

If they materialize, a program bringing together third graders and senior citizens will be initiated, high school seniors will be able to attend a state conference on drunk driving, and student reporters can put issues of their school paper on micro-fiche.

On students' behalf, members of the Plymouth-Canton Educational Excellence Foundation made a pitch to the Plymouth Rotary Club's funding committee Tuesday night. Set up in 1985, the foundation collects tax-deductible contributions and allocates funding for special educational programs.

About $55,000 is in the foundation's treasury right now. Roughly $40,000 is earmarked for the renovation of historic Geer School.

Thus far, 17 projects, excluding those mentioned above, have been approved by the foundation board.

"THESE PROJECTS that aren't funded are ones that don't easily fit in with the criteria for mini-grants funded by the Educational Excellence Foundation," said school board member Dean Swartzwelter, who serves as liaison between the board and foundation.

Tae kwon do family kicks together

By Arlene Funke

David Kotcher II of Canton hardly resembles a youth who can break boards and make devastating kicks with his bare feet.

David, a fresh-faced seventh grade student in the Talented and Gifted program at East Middle School, has just earned two black belts in tae kwon do, the popular Korean martial art.

"There is a saying that when the student reaches black belt he opens his eyes and realizes his training has just begun," said David who will turn 13 Dec. 6. "I'm working on it all the time."

In fact, the entire Kotcher family has embraced tae kwon do. David's parents, Joan and David, each have their black belt. And David's 18-year-old sister, Ann, a student at

Education column debuts

Is your daughter receiving A's in English, yet has difficulty composing a simple sentence? Is your 5-year-old "slow" because he's in beginder-garten? Are teachers overpaid?

Concerned with today's educational system? If so, answers are at hand.

Beginning today, Dr. James R. Doyle, an educator with wide experience, will answer questions in a weekly column on education in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

His answers are direct and simple, written in a no-nonsense, down-to-earth style reflecting years of experience.

"I respond in different ways, from being informative to being angry with some of the stupidity I've seen in education the past 30 years," he said.

Q: Our child is in grade 7 at a middle school. Yet when I look at his schedule, it looks like a high school schedule, six periods, six different classes.

A: A real middle school program is different from what your child is experiencing. Districts that call schools "middle school" and then track students similar to a high school schedule, are simply using the term because it has a ring of innovativeness and credibility. It may be a junior high disguised as a middle school.

DOYLE, NOW assistant superintendent of instruction for the Troy School District, has previously taught high school and college. He is a federally certified educational auditor and is completing certification as a licensed psychologist.

He has consulted on numerous educational projects at the district, state and federal levels, including career counseling at Madonna College in Livonia, the Michigan bilingual program and substance abuse for the U.S. Department of Education which later became a model for area educators.

He has also consulted on such varied programs as training on diesel engines for General Motors, inter-

Money sought for programs

"The total cost of projects the board was not able to fund was $3,092. We're hoping the Rotary Club will see fit to help out on some of these projects.

"We always have more requests than we have funds available," said Swartzwelter, who with foundation member Cindy Merrifield petitioned Rotary members.

The cost of sending local officers of against Students Against Driving Drunk to a spring conference will be $707, said Swartzwelter.

The third-grade, senior citizen project would cost $150.

Setting up a micro-fiche system for the C.E.P. Perspective would cost $750. Buying awards for a writing contest for elementary students would cost $200, he said.

APPROVED PROJECTS are ones that "tend to relate directly to the classroom," said Swartzwelter.

It's hoped that the potential for foundation funding will "provide incentive for teachers in the classroom to work with students to come up with creative enrichment programs that can't be funded with regular school funding," said Swartzwelter.

School board president David Artley said the foundation, even in its infancy, has been a success.

"The Excellence Foundation has given a number of grants to staff people for projects that otherwise would not be funded," said Artley. "Projects were in the $100 and $200 range that in fact enhanced the quality of educational life in the building where they did it.

"They've done some good things, and have given the public an opportunity to contribute in a longer-range scope and contribute to education not just in K-12, but through scholarships.

"This is a way to make contributions to education and have them grow," he said.

SCHOOL DISTRICT suppliers will be asked to contribute to the foundation in a letter "probably sometime before the end of the year," said Swartzwelter.

"The most important thing about the foundation is that. .people who have interest in a specific area can contribute toward that and know that it is a tax deductible amount."

Because the foundation has IRS-approved status, corporations and individuals as well as non-profit groups can deduct contributions.

Schools OK security contract

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Operating a districtwide alarm system will cost Plymouth-Canton Community Schools $52,356 for each of the next two years.

The same service cost taxpayers $36,720 in 1984-85.

School board members unanimously approved a two-year contract with Audio Sentry Corporation of Fraser at their meeting Monday.

The contract was to be considered earlier, but Trustee Dean Swartzwelter asked administrators to go back to the company and request a two-year deal.

Audio Sentry agreed to a price freeze for 1989-90, saving the district about $2,600.

"My thought was we should try to freeze a lot of these prices for the subsequent school year," said Swartzwelter. "You got to get it everywhere you can. Times are tough."

"THE COST of being secure has gone up," said school board president David Artley. "There's a variety of things involved in that — utilities, and in particular, the phone company.

"I'm not knocking the phone company, but when they broke up the phone company, they didn't do people a lot of favors," Artley said.

Michigan Bell charges are up 400 percent over 1984-85 levels, due to rate increases and because more school buildings were added to the system.

The cost of insurance for firms in the security industry rose 400-800 percent between 1984 and 1987, said school officials. Labor costs have also risen.

The surveillance system, installed in all district buildings, detects motion electronically. When the device is triggered, Audio Sentry is alerted. The company then calls the local police department.

SO FAR, the system has worked well, administrators say.

> 'The cost of being secure has gone up.'
> — David Artley
> school board president

"There have been very few break-ins where materials are broken or taken or destroyed with the alarm system," said Dan Menghini, director of maintenance and operations for the schools.

"Police have been there quickly enough to apprehend someone or scare them off."

In the 12 months through August 1988, there were 18 incidences of break-ins, vandalism and broken windows in the schools. Between 10 and 15 times a year, temperature sensors go off, alerting Audio Sentry to malfunctioning boilers and heaters and fire in school buildings.

The district's land, buildings and property are valued at $130 million. The schools' insurance premium was $378,000 last year.

Trustee E.J. McClendon said that given the financial crunch the district is in, "One of our concerns is to hold down costs. This two-year contract is helpful in achieving that."

School, area officials plan 2nd joint meeting

By Susan Buck

Dave Artley

The first joint meeting in recent history between Plymouth-Canton Community School officials and neighboring Plymouth and Canton government representatives went so well last May, that another one is planned for Wednesday, Nov. 30.

Last week's election brought new names and faces to key positions. It is hoped new ideas and renewed cooperation will also go hand-in-hand.

"We have some new people," said Richard Egli, director of community relations for Plymouth-Canton schools. "Basically, we will get acquainted again."

As with the last meeting, this month's meeting will include, but will not be limited, to the following topics: joint recreation authority, tax abatements, sale and purchase of property, and joint warehouse and purchasing.

This meeting is scheduled 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 30, in the Plymouth Canton High School Little Theater.

AS A result of the meeting in May, a subcommittee was able to seal the sale of a Barchester site off Canton Center Road to Canton Township from Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Consequently, the homeowners in the area, who had used the parcel as a neighborhood park, were able to preserve the area for their use as a community park.

Officials hope the general public will attend. They were in sparse attendance at the last meeting.

"I think there are things that can be discussed," said Esther Hulsing, Plymouth Township clerk. "The schools have the facilities and we, as a governmental unit, could probably get the people to help."

Although Thomas Yack, who assumes his position as Canton township supervisor in January did not attend the last meeting, he looks forward to meeting with other officials.

"IT'S AN opportunity to build bridges and for them to get to know us," said Yack.

A final agenda will be drawn up as the meeting day approaches. David Artley, president of Plymouth-Canton Board of Education is currently receiving ideas.

He added that it is unwise to set expectations too high at this stage.

"It is important for the public to remember that this joint meeting is unique," said Artley. "It doesn't happen in many communities."

Library gets rave reviews

"We wanted to come down here and see what we're paying for," said Lee Schulte, a Canton resident, referring to a 1-mill tax approved in 1986. "It looks like they made plans for expansions."

He was on a self-guided tour Monday with his wife, Mary Ann, who said she was "eager to go home and tell" their two daughters in high school and college "that they have a great place to study."

MARY LINK of Canton compared the new with the old location, 12,000 square feet on the third floor of township hall. "It's nice and roomy" as opposed to "crowded and noisy," she said. "It's a lot easier to find things."

Visiting the library with her two children who are 6 and 8 years old, Link said, she appreciated the separation of older and younger childrens' books. "They usually take 10 books apiece," she said.

David Cwikla, a library volunteer diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis, uses a battery operated chair to manuever about. The Canton resident was burdened more than anyone by the tight aisles in township hall. "I didn't know what do with all this room," he said Monday.

John Wright, teaching himself how to use one of the self-explaining computers, said the library was "very nice indeed." He hadn't had a chance to tour the entire library but liked what he'd seen so far.

Harold Baker of Canton missed access to any library since the township hall location closed Oct. 16. "I've been looking forward to having either one open," he said.

With carpenters making finishing touches throughout the building, library director Jean Tabor said the $4.5 million project will be complete by the first week in December.

A library open house and dedication Sunday drew more than 1,000 visitors. The library operates 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and 12-5 p.m. Sunday.

Band takes 5th place in national competition

The Plymouth Centennial Educational Park Marching Band finished in fifth place at the Bands of America Grand National Championship Saturday at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Placement in the top five bands establishes a national reputation for the PCEP Marching Band. Defending champion Marion Catholic from Chicago Heights, Ill., took first.

Fifty-four bands from throughout the United States competed in the preliminary competition Friday and Saturday. The PCEP Band was the only Michigan Band selected to perform in the top 13 bands Evening Finalist Competition. Although the band has competed in the national competition since 1985, this is the first time it has been selected as a finalist band.

More than 500 Plymouth-Canton band boosters, family members and friends cheered as the band took the field in finals competition.

"THIS IS what we have been working for," said James R. Griffith, band director. "All the hours of practice and attention to detail in music and marching were rewarded Saturday evening. We matched ourselves against the top bands in the nation and we showed that we can hold our own. This is the highest honor we have ever received."

The band also received honors Tuesday night at the annual band banquet. The evening recognized the accomplishments of the entire band and paid special tribute to the 40 seniors. Twenty-three of the seniors have been in the band all four years, 12 have been in for three years, four for two years, and one for one year.

The band has received many awards and honors during the years the class of 1985 has been in band. The band was State Champion in 1985, 1986 and 1988. It was awarded the Governor's Trophy at the Michigan Invitational in 1986, 1987 and 1988.

THE BAND was the Honor Band for President Reagan at Cobo Hall in 1986. All four years it was the Overall Championship Band at the Durand Invitational. It has been named Overall Championship Band at the Lakers Invitational since that annual competition began in 1986. In 1985 it was named Overall Grand Champion at the Tropicana Music Bowl in Cincinnati.

During 1988, the PCEP Band was named Best Overall Band at five competitions. It received five Flight One Division Champion Trophies, three Best Winds Trophies, four Best Marching and Maneuvering Trophies, five Best Percussion Trophies, and three Best Color Guard Trophies.

The instructional staff for the band includes Griffith; Glen Adist, assistant director; Ralph Johnson, music arranger and special music instructor; Jay Koupal and Jeff Fiedler, marching instructors; Jerry Hotchkin Jr., Chris Johnson and Ben Wharton, percussion instructors; and Larry Medrano and Lori Soules, color guard instructors.

Moving the 161 members of the band from competition to competition and setting the equipment up on the field in a short period of time requires many workers. The young people who have helped this year are Billy Soules, Eric Langley and Chris Konovaliv. They are the younger brothers of girls in the band.

PARENTS WHO have assisted with the equipment for each competition are Roy Monk, Steve Tims, Jim Resler and Charlie Sciberras. Dianna Romanowski has been the mom in charge of uniforms.

Next on the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park Marching Band program is preparation for the December Orange Bowl trip. The band is still trying to earn money to help each student defray the $530 cost.

Because no student will be denied the trip for financial reasons the Music Boosters are also trying to raise scholarship money. Those interested interested in helping the students with the cost of the trip can call, Linda Gasparott, 453-1905, or Judy Lore, 453-5181.

Donations can be sent to the P.C.E.P. Marching Band Orange Bowl Trip, c/o Canton High School, 8415 Canton Center Road, Canton 48187.

The band will play for Santa's arrival in downtown Plymouth Friday, Nov. 25. Band members also will ask viewers for donations for the trip. Every person who donates will be given a PCEP Orange Bowl decal.

Q: Is seventh grade an appropriate age for sex education?

A: - Michigan Public Act 226 allows parents to review all materials prior to class. Typically, sex education deals with anatomy and physiology, the basic plumbing. I have found very few parents opt their children out of the experience, less than .5 percent. The bottom line is, children are going to get a sex education one way or another — from talking with peers, jokes, magazine, cable TV. Better to get at least factual information in an educational environment than in the locker room.

Tae kwon do brings this family together

Hillsdale College, will take her black-belt test next month.

Black belt is the highest rank within tae kwon do. Students of the art learn a variety of foot, hand and body moves to gain advantage over the opponent.

"TAE KWON do emphasizes feet and high flying kicks to the head," Joan Kotcher said. "Plus, there is quite a bit of hand (movement). They emphasize balance and body control."

David had to learn 27 "forms," or patterns of movement to earn his black belt status. He successfully completed black-belt requirements for two tae kwon do associations.

Both David and Ann began studying tae kwon do almost five years ago. Each has won several trophies. David takes two or three two-hour classes per week at the Ypsilanti Township Community Center.

There are a total of nine degrees within the black belt designation.

"It's a lifelong sport," said Joan, noting that the sport doesn't render its enthusiasts over the hill at a young age.

Joan, 47, has an investment consulting business and manages a 110-acre Christmas tree plantation in Kalkaska. David, 46, is a professor of business and law at St. Mary's College in Orchard Lake and an adjunct professor at Concordia College in Ann Arbor. Both are longtime enthusiasts of the martial arts.

Joan discovered judo, a fitness form of wrestling, while in Korea during the mid-1960s. Fresh from her graduation from the University of Michigan she took a job as a recreation worker with the American Red Cross. She was based one year each in South Korea and Vietnam.

"WE WERE airlifted by helicopter to the isolated combat areas where the American soldiers were," she said of her work. The workers planned recreational activites and served refreshments.

Judo allowed her to develop effective self-defense skills.

"I was in a foreign country, on a military base," she said. "Every man could overpower me if he took a notion. When I realized I was no longer helpless it was the most wonderful feeling."

Her husband, too, had learned savate, which he describes as "French foot fighting." The martial art, also known as European kick boxing, is a rough form of fighting that proliferated in the gritty waterfront areas of Marseilles, France.

"I would probably say there are about 100 different kinds of martial arts," he said.

The family took up tae kwon do to give David a chance to develop confidence and physical strength.

"David was being picked on in school because he is a TAG kid," Joan said. "He used words other people didn't understand. He was different. They were beating him up. This (tae kwon do) was a response, to help his self-confidence, to realize he is important."

Initially, the family was affiliated with a tae kwon do association that emphasizes a "hard" style, which Joan describes as "hit and be hit at full power."

Almost one year ago, the family switched to a "soft" style, and now they are affiliated with the Universal Tae Kwon Do Brotherhood.

"IT'S A different emphasis on how you use your ability," Joan explained. "With soft style they practice on a punching bag instead of each other.

"We left hard style because we thought David had a concussion," she added. "He was kicked in the side of the face. The hard styles predominate. What we wanted was a sport that promoted physical fitness, coordination and health."

During a match, players first bow to one another, then go through a series of carefully executed movements. Each part of the hands, arms and feet has a specific function.

Players emit shrill cries, designed to startle and distract the opponent. Careful breathing exercises protect against having the wind knocked out of the player.

"Doing it all correctly is important," David said. "It also helps the power of your technique."

An important aspect for the Kotchers is the mental discipline and philosophy of the art, and the development of perseverance, strength of character, courtesy and self-control.

When done properly, the sport is highly effective.

"YES, A 12-year-old kid can defend himself against a grown man," David's father said.

The elder Kotchers donate their time and expertise. They serve on the board of directors for the Universal Tae Kwon Do Brotherhood and counsel students. Joan expressed the importance of parents' checking a teacher's credentials and philosophy before enrolling youngsters for instruction.

She likes the fact that students generally aren't permitted to take the test to advance in rank unless the instructor feels he or she is ready.

"They like to set you up for success," she said. "That is very important element. They do everything they can to help you succeed."

For this family, tae kwon do is a vehicle for growth.

"It's a way of life — a philosophy," said the older David Kotcher. "You're always learning, you're perfecting."

Board sets first meeting

Here's a summary of some of those goals.

Yack: Canton must promote a positive image, work on upgrading development projects, especially along I-275 and improve home values.

Treasurer Gerald Brown: Officials need to tighten their belts and act more prudently. Brown said he would "pretty much overhaul" the investing process and look for federal money for the Ypsilanti Community Utilities Authority, a joint sewer plan the township recently signed unto.

Clerk Loren Bennett: Maintains land management and development are key issues. But his first line of action is find ways to cut long voting lines. Dealing with staff issues in the department also topped his list.

Trustee Elaine Kirchgatter: Resolves to limit future problems associated with development by establishing and enforcing stricter and higher standards.

Trustee John Preniczky: Promises to hold the line on spending and property taxes, while providing the most efficient services to keep our community a very desirable place to live and raise our children.

Trustee Robert Shefferly: Canton must continue to oversee the proper landscaping of commercial and industrial developments. We must also promote projects assuring Canton's marketing and tax supportive needs.

Trustee Hank Whalen: Resolves to resist efforts for cityhood or additional taxes. He wants to develop a fresh awareness of current role definitions, linking all sectors together and viewing the balance sheet for fixed and variable costs efficiencies.

Yazaki investigated

"IN ANY investigation you get bits and pieces," Cleary said. "But we need all of it before we draw a conclusion. We have not drawn a conclusion."

Excessive exposure to carbon monoxide causes nausea, vomiting, headaches and other reactions.

An occupational health department spokesman, who asked not to be named, said Yazaki employees and temporary workers hired from a placement service filed complaints.

ONE OF the cases investigated by the health department deals with emissions from propane engines from hi-lo or fork-lift trucks, the spokesman said.

Carbon monoxide levels "higher than the legal limit" were discovered, the spokesman said. However, he wouldn't elaborate until more investigations were complete.

Exposure was high enough that people should have had headaches, the spokesman said.

American Yazaki officials could not be reached for comment Tuesday afternoon.

The Canton fire department "received a hazardous reading" of carbon monoxide levels last week, according to a report.

However, the significance of the reading was downplayed due to the reliability of the monitor.

Gene Gonya, president of Gleaners Food Bank, lifts a frozen turkey out of a bin. Gleaners got a good price on the turkeys, which were butchered due to the summer's heat. The food bank has freezers and semi-trucks for storing some perishables for later pickup by emergency pantries.

Help needed

Hunger problem is widespread

By Sandra Armbruster
staff writer

See editorial opinion elsewhere in this section

Food drives and good organization are needed to help feed the hungry this holiday season, already beset by a shortage of federal commodities.

"We have about the same number of people who need help as in past years," said Gene Gonya of the Gleaners Food Bank. "But one of the dilemmas is that federal subsidies of butter and cheese are slowly being used up."

A study by the Hunger Task Force found 673,000 people in metropolitan Detroit went hungry despite food banks that operate throughout southeastern Michigan. The task force is a coalition of civic, corporate and volunteer organizations.

THAT'S DESPITE the best efforts of volunteer-based community groups to feed the hungry. In Oakland County, 68 groups provided an average of 305,800 emergency meals to 15,250 people every month, according to Richard Trice of the Southeast Michigan Food Coalition.

SEMFCO is an umbrella organization for other area food banks, acting as an information or resource center, and operating education and advocacy efforts with groups such as the legislators.

In Wayne County outside of Detroit, there are 63 groups providing 245,100 emergency meals every month to 11,700 individuals in western suburbs including Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and Canton.

The greatest growth in poverty has been in rural areas because there is no infrastructure to distribute food, Gonya said.

"Whenever farms are in trouble, people move to the city and the city doesn't need anymore," he continued.

BEHIND THE numbers are 41,000 people on public assistance in Oakland County, many of whom don't receive enough stamps to cover their monthly needs, according to Jim Macy of the Food Bank of Oakland County. The food bank is a network of 60 emergency pantries.

"They have a four-week month with a three-week supply of food," he said.

According to state officials, the monthly average in 1988 of people on public assistance in Wayne County is 380,000. Of that, about 327,000, or 86 percent, are in Detroit.

Public assistance includes food stamps, aid to dependent children, supplemental security income, general assistance and medical assistance.

Thousands of other people work low paying service jobs that don't pay enough to cover their needs.

"A couple can work a 70-hour week and still fall below the poverty level," said Macy.

Tom Frommeyer, human resources director for the city of Southfield, recalled one such couple who just had a baby but no money for formula.

"It's more difficult to be poor in an affluent community than in a community where everyone is poor," he said.

Relief effort under way

Five supermarket chains are working in cooperation with area food banks and the food industry to gather canned and dry goods for the hungry.

The unprecedented effort involves Kroger, Farmer Jack, A&P, Great Scott and Foodland Distributors. Fifty manufacturers of national brand food products also are participating in the "Help Food Banks Feed the Hungry" campaign, which kicks off today and runs through December.

While shopping, customers will be able to purchase designated "food bank specials" for the metropolitan area-wide food drive.

The food will be distributed by area food banks to emergency pantries in the area.

Lag in Medicare funding concerns local hospitals

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Hospital closings and cutbacks in medical service could become commonplace, health care providers warn, unless the government acts to increase Medicare funding.

"We're approaching a point where half of all hospital payments are coming from Medicare, but it's just not enough," said Donald Potter, president of the Southeast Michigan Hospital Council (SEMHC) in Southfield.

While Medicare payment rates have risen over the past five years, Potter said cost increases for hospital goods and services were nearly double that amount.

Area hospitals aren't exempt from the Medicare crisis.

The situation prompted St. Mary Hospital of Livonia, to begin a letter-writing campaign to federal lawmakers.

"WITH THE increased costs of new, high-tech equipment, a declining pool of nursing and other professionals and a sicker, under-insured population, St. Mary may eventually be forced to begin curtailing some patient services," the hospital said in an official statement.

St. Mary employees are urging their federal representatives to support a joint Congressional resolution calling for greater Medicare financing.

While other area hospitals haven't gone quite that far, administrators agree lagging Medicare payments present a growing problem.

"If you could find an extra $5 million for area hospitals, you'd be the gem of the day," said Allan Breakie, president of Garden City Osteopathic Hospital. Roughly 30 percent of the Garden City hospital's patients are eligible for Medicare, Breakie said.

Lumping states together in regional payment plans hasn't helped, said Thomas Beeman, vice president of financial services at Westland Medical Center.

"While there are regional 'bumps' due to different economies, we're still essentially getting the same payment rate as a hospital in Mississippi," Beeman said. "What they've done is shift federal money out of the Midwest and given it to the West and South."

About one of every four patients at the former Wayne County General Hospital is financed through Medicare, Beeman said.

While they criticized Reagan-era changes, health professionals said federal health policy wasn't likely to change under the new administration.

> 'We're approaching a point where half of all hospital payments are coming from Medicare, but it's just not enough.'
> — Donald Potter
> president hospital council

"CHANGE IN Washington is evolutionary, not revolutionary," Potter said. "And with Bush's election, there's nothing to suggest a revolution."

Hospitals may have fired the opening shot in their own revolution, however, with the joint resolution. The resolution calls for Medicare to be exempt from federal budget cuts in fiscal 1990. Its Senate sponsors include former presidential candidate Paul Simon, D-Ill. and Nancy Kassenbaum, R-Kan. It has also received bi-partisan sponsorship in the House.

The resolution seeks to protect Medicare Part A payments. Part A payments are supported by Social Security withholding.

Medicare provides health care payments for an estimated 33 million aged and disabled Americans.

Medicare payments to hospitals have risen 11.2 percent since the federal government changed the Medicare formula in 1983, according to SEMHC. The cost for hospital goods and services rose 21.7 percent over the same period, the council reported.

The difference cost the nation's hospitals $48 billion over the past five years, according to a study by The Catholic Health Association of the United States, a St. Louis-based agency representing St. Mary and other Catholic hospitals.

The problem, Potter said, is that the nation's Medicare trust fund was long-ago incorporated into the federal operating budget.

The healthy Medicare trust fund has faced cuts because of federal debt in other areas, Potter said.

"MEDICARE MAKES up 9 percent of the federal budget but has made up more than 30 percent of budget cuts," Potter said. "If there are to be cuts, we want them to be based upon health policy, not politics."

While the Medicare trust is expected to be withdrawn from the nation's general operating budget by 1992, that isn't soon enough for health professionals.

"It's time to do something now," Potter said.

one in the metropolitan area, usually receives nine million pounds of food a year. This year the federal subsidy is amounting to less than half a million, according to Gonya.

Unless reserves are found to support community groups that act as emergency food distribution points, area soup kitchens can expect to be hard hit this year.

Gonya describes it as a "well-kept secret" that politicians aren't talking about.

The problem is beginning to "stabilize at this point," SEMFCO's Trice said.

SOME OF THE shortages of commodities occurred when the U.S. Department of Agriculture stopped further purchases after believing it had met the objectives of an earlier program, Trice said.

Other shortages are because of the drought last summer.

A Hunger-Emergency Relief Act passed last month will provide for 1988-89 about half of what previous allocations amounted to.

"We look for a resumption, but not up to normal level. It's not written in stone," he said.

That's only one of the problems facing food banks, according to Trice. Federal Emergency Management Agency grants are usually received in April and spent by midsummer. That leaves church-related and other volunteer food distribution centers, which make up 85 percent of the total, paying operating costs on their own.

Added to those problems are the heavy demand during the months of November and December, when "we go into our campaigns to raise as much money as we can," Trice said. "The the time the holidays are over, we've exhausted all our resources."

FOOD BANKS such as Gleaners are operating in facilities purchased by foundations and corporations who also help pay operating costs. The food banks store a wide variety of food, which is repackaged to fit the needs of smaller emergency pantries.

Besides collecting donations of food, food banks also must find the money to pay for transportation of donations. Macy recalled that the Oakland County bank recently got 8,000 boxes of cereal simply by paying the freight of six cents each.

Trice warned that people shouldn't expect the need to go away when the holidays are over.

""They should know that hunger is a problem year round it doesn't stop. If people are interested, they can contact us at 963-4230 and we'll put them in touch with a group (emergency pantry) in their area."

Special interests rate lawmakers

Now that the 100th Congress is history, special-interest groups ranging across the political spectrum are rating the performances of individual senators and House members. They use the 1987-88 roll call votes they consider most important.

Roll Call Report Syndicate, in its annual feature, The Ratings Game, shows the grades area members of Congress have received on their most basic representative function — voting on the House and Senate floors.

The accompanying chart presents an across-the-board compilation of many of these ratings.

Area congressmen are: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, whose district includes part of Livonia; Dennis Hertel, R-Harper Woods, whose district includes part of Troy; William D. Ford, D-Taylor, whose district includes Garden City, Westland, Canton and southern Livonia; Sander Levin, D-Southfield, whose district includes Redford Township; and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, whose district includes the Rochester area, most of Troy, Birmingham-Bloomfield, West Bloomfield and the Farmington area.

Interest groups decide whether a yea or nay on a limited number of selected issues is the "right" vote and calculate "correct" voting percentages. Groups sometimes give any congressman scoring above a specified percentage an automatic re-election endorsement, while calling for defeat of those whose ratings fall too low.

CONGRESSMEN frequently trumpet high ratings from groups whose causes they believe to be popular among their constituents.

But when they receive a low score, they often criticize the group's rating methodology and claim the result understates their concern for the group's members.

While congressmen prefer high scores, election year politics can produce strange twists. Earlier this year Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, normally the proud owner of a liberal voting record, complained to the liberal Americans for Democratic Action when it gave him a 100 percent rating for 1987.

The 10 group included in the The Ratings Game for 1987-88 range from liberal organizations like the American Civil Liberties Union to the right-of-center American Conservative Union.

THE GROUPS are:

American Civil Liberties Union, often mentioned during the presidential campaign, lobbies on behalf of individual liberties. (Ratings cover 1987-88.)

Public Citizen, a liberal group founded by Ralph Nader, concentrates on consumer and environmental issues. (1987-88)

League of Conservation Voters is the political arm of the nation's leading environmental groups. (1987-88)

National Education Association represents many of the nation's public school teachers and advocates expanded federal education programs. (1987)

Americans for Democratic Action is a leading national liberal lobby. (1987)

American Conservative Union is a leading representative of the conservative cause in the capital. (1987)

American Farm Bureau Federation represents many of the nation's farmers and agricultural firms with a conservative, free-trade voice. (1987-88)

National Committee to Preserve and Protect Social Security and Medicare opposes attempts to restrain Social Security benefit increases or to use Social Security trust fund revenues for purposes other than benefits. (1987-88)

National Taxpayers Union bases its ratings on every note in Congress that affects federal spending levels. (1987)

U.S. Chamber of Commerce is the leading Washington voice of the nation's business community. (1987)

Blanchard calls for property tax cut, sales tax hike

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Gov. James Blanchard proposes an-across-the-board cut in homeowner property taxes of 25 percent and an increase in the state sales tax from 4 to 5 percent as part of a reform in financing public schools.

Blanchard, who unveiled the plan Wednesday at a press conference in downtown Detroit, also recommends a 10 percent cut in business property taxes and a residential millage ceiling of 28 mills.

State Sen. Dan DeGrow (R-Port Huron), whose joint Senate-House committee was to announce its own reform next Tuesday, said he felt "betrayed" by Blanchard.

Blanchard said that while tax cuts would be across the board, reform ultimately might mean an increase in property taxes in some affluent communities.

"A lot of the rich districts are under 28 mills now because they have such a high SEV (state equalized valuation). So they would have the means to help themselves (through tax increases to the 28-mill limit to offset any future cuts). The state wouldn't do it for them," Blanchard said.

An increase in the sales tax would require a constitutional amendment, which means approval of ballot language by two-thirds of the Legislature and approval in an election by a majority of the state's voters.

Blanchard said he would ask legislators to begin action on school tax reform before the end of the year and hoped to have it passed and in place sometime in 1989.

"We want it on the ballot at the earliest possible moment," he said.

BLANCHARD'S PRESS conference came as a surprise to DeGrow, who said he and state Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, were to announce next Tuesday a joint Senate-House tax reform proposal that would have cut property taxes and raised the state sales tax from 4 to 6 percent.

He said that Blanchard's office had been notified Tuesday that the Senate and House had agreed on tax reform. "We had reached an agreement. There were just a few i's to dot and t's to cross," said DeGrow. "I feel betrayed in the sense that we shared our stuff with them, and then they went ahead without telling us."

At the press conference, Blanchard said tax-reform in Lansing was at "a logjam" and that House and Senate negotiators had grown "further apart."

"That's not true. I don't know what he bases that on," said DeGrow, who canceled a scheduled press conference for today to announce some details of the proposed legislation. "I think he's effectively nuked us for Thursday," he said. "I don't want to do anything out of the anger I feel now."

He said he would meet with fellow legislators over the weekend to discuss whether to proceed with their proposed reform. "Obviously we have to rethink our position."

BLANCHARD SAID his proposal would mean property tax decreases of $810 million, which would be offset by an increase in sales-tax revenues by the same amount. In the first year, then, there would be no extra money for poorer districts, but Blanchard said in the following four years, the sales-tax increase would result in a windfall of a total of $1.5 billion, which would be distributed to poor districts.

"We will have to develop a distribution formula," he said.

BLANCHARD SAID: "The most burdensome tax in Michigan is the property tax, and it is out of line with property taxes in other states.

He said all businesses would have their property taxes cut by 10 percent and would have a ceiling placed at that level.

Blanchard criticized the current proposal to raise the sales tax to 6 percent. "We think that is excessive," he said.

He seemed to imply that current efforts were more for show than for serious reform. "This is not designed as a mind game, where we can say we tried our best and failed.

"This is a good enough plan that as long as we're given enough time to lead a campaign, it will pass."

When asked if he would support a two-cent increase if that is what legislators insist on, Blanchard said: "Absolutely not."

DeGrow said: "Blanchard told me and Lynn Jondahl in his office that a 2-cent increase wasn't his first preference, but he would support it. It would have been nice if he would have conveyed his opposition earlier. I suggested a 1-cent increase a long time ago, but House Democrats didn't want it."

Blanchard said tax reform would be accompanied by measures to increase the quality of education in sub-par districts, including reduced class size, teacher accountability and better core curriculum.

DeGrow said it was details on just such improvements that were to have been announced at his canceled press conference today.

THOUGH BLANCHARD first said that wealthier districts may have to bear some of the burden by raising their millages to the 28-mill level, he and state treasurer Robert Bowman later insisted that reform would not result in less financing of affluent districts, a worry of many suburban administrators.

"The wealthy would stay whole," said Blanchard. "We will bring the poor up."

"This proposal will not bring anybody down," said Bowman. "We are not a redistribution society." Currently, seven states limit school property taxes.

The neighboring states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin have sales-tax rates of 5 percent.

Teenage girls see lots of sex on TV, in films

AP — The average teenage American girl views 1,500 sexual acts or references to sexual acts on television annually, according to a study at Michigan State University.

The study was based on girls 14 to 15 years old who watch television four to five hours each school day.

The study found the same girl sees at least 25 R-rated movies in theaters each year.

In comparison, boys of that age view an average of nearly 1,300 sexual acts or references to sexual acts on television and attend 17 R-rated movies annually.

THE DATA were compiled by Bradley S. Greenberg, head of MSU's telecommunication department, and Renato Linsangan, an MSU graduate student. The study was funded by the Office of Adolescent Pregnancy Programs of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

According to the teens studied, parents "never" or "not often" limit their television viewing.

"There's little indication that parents exercise any control, positive or negative, over TV viewing by teens," Greenberg said.

Research was based on interviews with 1,200 high school students, half of them black and half of them white, in urban public schools in the United States.

"THE COMBINATION of sex on TV and in the movies provides a tantalizing aura of a sexually oriented society that's difficult for teen girls to resist or demean," Greenberg says.

"At 14 or 15, they are a vulnerable group, particularly intrigued with what's ahead for their own sexual experiences."

Greenberg reported the findings at a meeting of the International Association of Mass Communication Research in Barcelona, Spain.

Safety belts reduce state injuries

Fewer people have been injured on Michigan roads since the state introduced its mandatory safety belt law in 1985 and their injuries have been less severe, according to a new report.

There has been a 19 percent reduction in the number of car crash victims admitted to state hospitals since the law was introduced, according to a University of Michigan study.

The study also said the number of accident victims requiring hospital stays of one week or more decreased by 43 percent.

Auto fatalities decreased 19.7 percent in Michigan over the same period, U-M researcher Alexander Wagenaar said. Wagenaar presented his findings at the American Public Health Association annual meeting Nov. 15 in Boston.

Researchers gathered information on 8,661 patients at 14 Michigan hospitals. The study was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Transportation and Michigan Office of Highway Safety Planning.

Long lines, vote count delays to be reviewed

State officials say they hope to prevent chaos in future elections by reviewing why citizens had to wait longer to vote and candidates had to wait longer for results this time.

"We saw longer lines and more delays in counting the votes than in previous elections," state elections director Chris Thomas said last week. "We're looking into that, trying to determine how it occurred — whether it was not enough voter equipment or precincts that were too large."

In Canton Township, residents at some precincts waited up to three hours to vote. Loren Bennett, the newly-elected township clerk, said he'll investigate why it took so long to vote. Only 53 percent of the township's registered voters cast ballots in the Nov. 8 election. That figure is lower than other western Wayne County communities and much lower than the statewide average of 63.3 percent.

In Plymouth Township 74 percent of registered voters cast ballotts while 66 percent of those registered voted in the city of Plymouth. The totals for other western Wayne communities include: Livonia, 69 percent, Redford Township, 74 percent, Westland 60.2 percent and Garden City, 57 percent.

"I don't recall any place I talked to that didn't have lines," said Dave Peterson, election specialist in the Secretary of State's office.

Statewide, voter turnout was heavy. More than 3.7 million of Michigan 5.9 million registered voters cast ballots.

Another example of election night chaos was in Southfield, where lines up to 2 1¼ hours long prompted a federal court order that allowed 16 polling places to stay open until 11 p.m., rather than the statewide closing hour of 8 p.m.

"We had instances when people got real angry after 8 p.m. because they weren't allowed to vote, while others were," Southfield Mayor Donald Fracassi said. "We had to call in police because we had people screaming and yelling at the top of their lungs and some of the senior citizens working the polls got pretty frightened.

"They had been getting abused all day long and were at the end of their wits."

State Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield, who chairs the House Elections Committee, attributed the problem to an insufficient number of voting machines.

"If the problem occurred somewhere else, I would probably say the state should do something," said Berman, who thinks the city should be responsible for correcting the problem. "But it didn't happen anywhere else to this magnitude.

Partnerships

School plan needs volunteers

IT'S EASY TO SIT back and complain about how poor the educational system has become.

It's much more difficult to get involved and work toward solutions.

But an opportunity is being created in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools where getting involved can make a difference.

It's called Partnerships For Education and the program is worth a look.

Partnerships for Education, sponsored by the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, offers an excellent way to help not only your children, community and yourself, but your business as well.

EVEN THOUGH the program is in its infancy, volunteers are needed to make sure the program can achieve its lofty and important goals.

You've probably heard or read about business leaders complaining about graduates entering the workforce without the necessary skills and experience. Many companies have been forced to retrain these students at tremendous costs.

The schools have tried to answer those complaints through career counseling, job fairs and other programs.

But business can re-emphasize and broaden that focus by showing students first-hand how companies work and what is expected of employees.

That's where Partnerships for Education fits in.

A committee studying the program for the chamber has identified four main areas that must be improved to make students better equipped to handle work.

The committee found students had a:

- Lack of awareness on how curriculum relates to the real world.
- Lack of awareness of job opportunities.
- Lack of awareness of how personal attributes play a part in future success.
- Lack of understanding that learning is continuous, lifelong process.

Partnerships for Education offers an excellent way to help not only your children, community and yourself, but your business as well.

The chamber has come up with five programs designed to eliminate that lack of awareness and understanding.

AND ALL of these programs need your help.

A speaker's bureau will have business people share information about careers and the business world with students in the classroom.

Business representatives can bring classes to work and teach students on-site about careers.

Sponsors also can have students spend a day with them on the job.

A business can choose to become part of the rotation program. Students will be rotated through several firms to give them a look at different career choices.

And an internship program also is in the works.

Some of these programs are scheduled to start early next year.

Exact time requirements and specific details about the various programs still must be ironed out.

But the chamber is looking for people who want to help and are willing to put in the time to prepare students for the future.

The choice is up to you. You can either continue complaining about the younger generation or help equip them with the tools they will need to succeed.

For more information about Partnerships for Education, call the chamber, 453-1540.

Many go hungry

How you can help this season

WHEN THANKSGIVING comes around this time next week, there will be one slice of life tough to swallow. That's because hundreds of thousands of people in Wayne and Oakland counties won't have a decent meal.

When Thanksgiving comes around this time next week, there will be one slice of life tough to swallow. That's because hundreds of thousands of people in Wayne and Oakland counties won't have a decent meal.

A Hunger Task Force recently reported that 673,000 area people go without food every month.

Coping with the problem is a network of emergency and other special food programs, which is unable to keep up with the demand despite a well-organized distribution system.

IN WAYNE County outside of Detroit, 63 emergency food pantries are able to serve each month only 11,700 of those who need help, according to the Southeastern Michigan Food Coalition. In Oakland County, 68 groups average service each month to just 15,250 people.

Being poor during times of abundance or in areas of affluence can be especially trying, according to those who deal with the hungry on a daily basis.

One human services professional recalled the case of a young, working couple who just had a baby but couldn't afford formula.

It's not just bellyaching or an isolated case. Jim Macy of the Food Bank of Oakland County said a couple can work a 70-hour week and still fall below the poverty level.

For those on public assistance — and they're throughout the metropolitan area — food stamps provide three weeks worth of food in a four-week month, he added.

PERHAPS THE cruelest fact of all is the way emergency food service providers were left hungering for promised federal commodities like butter and cheese, only to find them cut back and delivered erratically.

"Politicians aren't saying boo about that well-kept secret," said Gene Gonya of the Gleaners Food Bank.

A new Hunger Emergency Relief Act may stabilize the situation in 1989, but officials don't expect the amount of federal relief to reach previous efforts.

Faced with high demand during the holidays, area food banks are girding for the task, keeping a wary eye on what will happen when stores are depleted after the holidays.

But this is one problem that everyone can have a hand in solving. Civic and religious organizations throughout metropolitan Detroit are sponsoring drives for food and donations. Here are some of the larger programs:

- The Boy Scouts have 400 units from the Detroit Area, Clinton Valley and Wolverine councils going door-to-door from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, collecting canned goods and dry food stuffs. The program is being conducted in cooperation with the WXYZ-Channel 7 Can Do program.

Scouts will turn the collections in at Elias Brothers Restaurants, which will distribute the donations to food banks, according to Jerry Landorf, assistant director of field services for the Boy Scouts. Those missing the Scouts on Saturday can take their donations directly to the restaurant.

- In Wayne County's Plymouth and Canton areas, Omnicom Cable Television and the Salvation Army will have a telethon on Saturday, Dec. 10, for their "baskets filled with love" campaign. Viewers will be asked to bring canned goods to the station. The army's social worker, Heather Doherty, said boxes also are placed in local stores, schools and businesses.
- In Oakland County, the 12th annual Lighthouse Thanksgiving food basket distribution project is under way. Last year baskets were provided to 1,236 families. Volunteers, food and money are needed. Call 335-2462 or write the agency at 109 Williams Street, P.O. Box 405, Pontiac 48056.
- For those who wish to get in contact with an emergency food pantry, call the Southeastern Michigan Food Coalition at 963-4230.
- A major food drive this year is being conducted at five supermarket chains through the area. The stores are Kroger, Farmer Jack, Foodland, Great Scott and A&P. Food suppliers offer special products to shoppers who may buy them at reduced prices for donation or for taking home. The collection will run throughout the holiday season.

That brief list shows the variety of opportunities to make these holidays fulfilling ones for you — and for emergency pantries.

Veterans now, they once were just kids

Veterans Day brings to mind a classroom question that stumped the son of a sailor.

Rich Perlberg

HE WAS A fifth grader in a strange school in a new town. The teacher was trying to tell the class about the military. How many of your fathers, she asked, served in the armed forces? Of those, how many were in the war?

A simple question. Around him, the boy saw hands shoot up. His remained down. Was his father in the war? He simply didn't know. If he raised his hand like most of his classmates, would his ruse be discovered? What if the teacher asked him which branch? He wouldn't be able to answer. He decided to take the cautious course. He didn't raise his hand.

He berated himself on the way home. What a fool you are! You don't even know if your dad was in the war.

He shouldn't have been so hard on himself. His dad was in the war. But only if you asked him carefully could you learn that fact. Or that he served on a ship that was off the shore of France on D-Day.

HIS FATHER seldom talked of the Navy, much less the war. When he did, it was usually in a self-deprecating way. He talked about his quick-study officers training course which supposedly taught a college boy all there was to know about being a sailor.

Fat chance. He never came close to learning how to navigate, which was one his responsibilities. He loved to tell of how he used a sextant to determine his ship's location — and proudly placed the USS Doyle 30 miles south of Paris.

To this day, he insists that the only way his ship returned home was to follow another across the Atlantic.

When he does get serious he talks about how frightening it all was. And how he and his mates unabashedly cheered at the news of the A-bomb. They cheered because the war was ending but also because the sudden strike meant they would not have to sail off for the brutal fighting in the Pacific.

EVEN WHEN his father was serious, the boy could not picture him in the war. He was so old. People that old didn't fight in wars. (This was before the boy knew of Robert Mitchum.) Try as he might, the boy could not imagine his father to be a young man.

If was far easier to picture in uniform a sailor he had never met. The boy's aunt was a teacher and years before had made a deal with a troublesome student: he could teach her about football plays if he would let her teach him about fractions.

The fractions were learned, the football games were played, the student went on to the Navy. It was easy to picture him at war because he never got old. He was killed at sea.

Veteran's Day was Friday. Many people, including many veterans, don't give it a first thought. They should. They should also think about a future day when a teacher asks her class if their fathers served in the war. And no one can raise his hand.

Lottery hurts school spirit

To the editor:

This is a letter in response to the letter of Philip T. LaVeck printed Oct. 31.

My family has lived in the Plymouth/Canton community for 12 years. We would have lived here 14 years, like Mr. LaVeck, but our brick was discontinued and then there was the dry-wallers strike.

I have come to exactly the same conclusions as Mr. LaVeck regarding school spirit. I really can't comment on football strategy, or the lack of it. I broke a wishbone last Thanksgiving and as yet none of my children have relocated to Katmandu. That's all I know about wishbones.

Unlike Mr. LaVeck, I know exactly why there is no school spirit at our high schools. It's the greenhouse effect. No, that was a joke. It's the present lottery system of school assignment.

This system divides friends, neighbors and families. This system may have been needed at one time, but is not needed now. As some may have noticed, Canton has been developing and prospering and some of us even have indoor plumbing.

You don't need a downtown shopping district to support a high school. Besides, Canton has 17 downtown shopping districts, but that's a whole other letter to the editor.

Why can't our district have two high schools like every other district in the universe? Plymouth kids could go to Plymouth High School and Canton kids could go to Canton High School. What an innovation! Of course the two schools could continue to share some facilities as needed.

Now, let me irritate a few more people. How about two bands. One at each school. Another innovation. I'll bet even the yellow-jacketed fans would develop some school spirit if they all had one school to cheer for. (Hi Sue and Ken.)

Of course the bands probably could not continue to win every award on the planet, but are these awards won fairly anyway? I attended all of the away football games this year and last year and I don't remember one band deserting after halftime.

Getting the kids to sit in the bleachers is a tough one. I suppose Crazy Glue is out. How about this? All pompon girls (Hi Heather) and all J.V. cheerleaders (Hi Jenny) are required to sit in the stands. Their admirers alone would take up several rows.

If I should be so lucky as to have my senior actually graduate this June, it's a shame I can't see your friends Jim and Angie and Julie and Meridith graduate, too. I'll never forgive Jim for selling me a defective hamster cage, but I've grown to care about these kids that live within 100 yards of our house, but go to another school.

High school only lasts four years. It's too bad our kids have been denied the chance to "be true to your school" and to get goosebumps when they hear old Beach Boys songs on the radio.

Marilyn Best,
Canton

Election day should be holiday

To the editor:

My friend Dave Thorton couldn't vote Tuesday because he is a college student at Eastern Michigan University and his hometown is 100 miles away in Port Huron.

Dave is an excellent student and he works 30 hours a week. There is no way he could have gone home and voted; he just couldn't afford that much time. Sure, he could have used the absentee ballot, but he had decided too late for that.

Dave is not alone. Three of my college roommates were in the same situation. What's the solution? Make the election day a national holiday. Employees who vote get the day off with pay; employees who don't vote get the day off with no pay. Proof of voting could be a sticker.

I know this would increase voting among 18-34 year-olds. And what about our senior citizens? There must be thousands of them who do not vote because it is physically to hard for them to stand in line. A special public service must be offered to make voting convenient to our senior citizens.

Convenience is the main issue, if it isn't convenient, people are not going to vote. Making the absentee ballot process simpler is the first step. Educating the public about the absentee ballot process is the next step.

It is time to stop complaining about poor voter turn out and start doing something about it!

Voters still support familiar ethnic names

Tim Richard

LITTLE CHANGED in the 1988 election. It was as if an elephant strained and strained, and gave birth to a gnat.

American voters are adding their own lesson to the civics textbooks, which tell you about the division of power among the legislative, executive and judicial branches and the separation of powers between the national government and the states.

The voters' notion is to divide power between the political parties, too. As Dick Van Dusen, the Republican Wayne State University board member put it, folks seem to want one set of rascals looking over the shoulder of the other set of rascals.

THE NEW PRESIDENT, George Bush, will continue to be Republican, though of a more moderate stripe on "rust belt" issues.

The U.S. Senate will continue to be Democratic, and then some, with two new senators of that faith. Democrats also picked up a handful of seats in the U.S. House. Little change there as 99 percent of incumbents won re-election.

Purists such as Zolton Ferency and I prefer the parliamentary system, where you get to pick only one candidate, and where the prime minister and the legislative majority are necessarily of the same faith. Makes for accountability.

Lana Pollack, the liberal Democrat from Ann Arbor, managed to get her feminist contacts from other states to make the 2nd Congressional District a national target.

After spending three-quarters of a million dollars, Pollack chipped only a few points from Republican Congressman Carl Pursell's margin, cutting it from 59 in 1986 to 55 percent. It's still a safe Republican district.

Michigan voters split their tickets for the three university boards, electing one Republican and one Democrat to each. One gets the impression that about 70,000 voters picked one name first, then automatically picked the second name from the other party.

THE MORNING after the election, I was compiling results as they dribbled into the Oakland County building when Ed Sosnick, who had won a circuit judgeship, came in.

"You know," he said, "they do exit polling on why someone voted for Bush or Dukakais for president. They oughta do exit polling on why people vote the way they do for judges."

The judicial results reflected poorly on voters. Take the state Court of Appeals races, for instance. In the 1st District, which includes Wayne County, voters picked two Irish names — Reilly and Brennan. In the 2nd District, which includes Oakland and 14 other counties, they picked two Irish names — Cavanagh and Kelly, neither of whom ever had been a judge, ignoring two circuit judges named Jansen and Kuhn.

In an even more dramatic example, Joan Young, who seemed to have 50 signs in each of Oakland's 900 square miles, barely scraped by against a candidate named Brennan, who ran a virtually invisible campaign and has his office in Macomb County.

This is not to cast aspersions on the legal abilities of the Irish — just to say that voters favor an Irish name.

Certain Jewish names do well, too — such as Kaufman. In the Supreme Court race, an obscure and relatively young chap named Jerry J. Kaufman, nominated by the Tisch Party, drew a bigger vote than Marvin Stempien, a former leader in the Legislature, a Wayne Circuit Court judge who handled the Dearborn parks bias case, and the nominee of the Democrats.

Like Sosnick, I wonder what goes through voters' minds when hordes of Brennans, Cavanaghs and Kaufmans do so well at the polls. Check the index of names in the back of the red-covered Michigan Manual in your local library if you think I exaggerate.

Class reunion helps get ex-classmates together through bifocals

CURIOSITY about the scope of the antique business led me recently into conversation with a dealer named Sharon McInturff Burton whose true-life tale of the romance that resulted in her marriage last February is too good not to share. In fact, this really should be written to the accompaniment of bubbly music, for that is the way Sharon talks.

Husband Doug is an inspector and computer operator in the experimental department of the Ford Transmission plant in Livonia. He and Sharon both are graduates of Whitmore Lake High School. Against a backdrop of the thousands of items in Burton Galleries, which she founded in Plymouth, this is what she told me of the interesting ways in which cupid works.

In a world overweighted with troubles, it's nice to come across a story like this now and then. Visualize a 40-year-old woman in love and just listen to her words:

"I never lived any place in my life for four years until I went to high school in one town, which was Whitmore Lake. I never talked to Doug because he was captain of the football team and on the wrestling team. He was a big star, and I was editor of the yearbook.

"A FEW years after high school I moved to East Lansing and started a music store. We specialized in international folk music and sponsored a radio show. Doug had gone a different direction, but he loved folk music and he used to listen to our show.

"Then, in 1985, it was time for our 20th high school class reunion. While talking to a friend who was in charge on invitations, he kept asking 'What's so-and-so doing?' one after another. When they got to my name the friend said I was running the Elderly Instruments music store in East Lansing. 'No!' he exclaimed. 'I love that radio show; if she likes that kind of music, she can't be all bad.'

"He asked if I had ever gotten married and was told I had not. Then, out of the blue, Doug Burton called me up and asked if I was going to the class reunion. He said he hadn't married either and would I be his date at the reunion. I hadn't seen him in 20 years, and when I got there he didn't look at all like he did in high school. I didn't know who he was until he laughed. And he didn't recognize me until I laughed. We had a lovely time and have been seeing each other ever since.

"MEANWHILE, THE music store grew from one room to a three-story brick building, and a friend and I also had a brainstorm about selling vintage clothing and opened a store called Somebody Else's Closet. I was still living in Lansing, but Doug had wound up in Plymouth.

"The house I lived in is full with thousands of items that I haven't had time to put on display. Most of the time when Doug came to visit we couldn't even get into the living room. The house was full of treasurers.

"One day he called me up, and I said I had decided to move to an apartment and just take the things I really, really wanted. We were truly in love, and he said, 'Don't do that; come live with me.'

"I said, 'I couldn't do that unless we were married,' and he answered, 'Then marry me.' So we wound up getting married Feb. 28 because I had so much stuff I couldn't live there."

She actually did tell me a lot of things about the antique business and her other interests, which stem from the fact that Sharon's major areas of study at three colleges (Michigan State, Eastern and Washtenaw Community College) were journalism, horticulture and welding. The one treasure that I took home was a vintage 1930 wooden-shafted putter like the one Bobby Jones used in his grand slam. I'll put it to the test among my own antique friends in the Silver Duffers golf group come spring.

Mom: High marks, poor work

Doc Doyle

Q: I have a daughter that has received As every marking period in an eighth grade English class. Yet when I reviewed her papers I see many grammatical errors, some poor sentence structure and other areas she could improve. My daughter tells me that most of the children in this class get As or Bs. I don't believe her work is A work.

A: Some teachers use the generosity or halo effect. They are very generous in grading and tend to literally give high grades because of their kind nature or because they want to please children and parents or just want to keep parents off their back. It is unfortunate that this occurs because it does not give the child a true picture of what his/her capabilities and real needs are.

Conversely, there are many teachers that Einstein could not get an A from because no one is as brilliant as their expectations. Furthermore, some teachers use grades to control behavior in the class; that is, act-out in class and your grade goes down. It is a tough choice for students as to which teacher to take for a class. Fortunately, most teachers are reasonable and fair.

I tell young adults going to college to never take a college or university course by the nice sound of the course title. Find out all you can about the teacher . . . get one that is fair but has high standards.

The answers provided here are the opinions of Dr. James Doyle and not the Troy School District. Questions for this column should sent to Doc Doyle c/o the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, Mi. 48150.

Early risers are staying in shape while having fun

Instructor Darlene Lopez changes the routines in her fitness classes, to keep class sessions from becoming boring. "What I try to do is put a good variety in them."

SOME PEOPLE believe in getting a head start on holiday fitness.

Taking an aerobic fitness class, offered by the Plymouth Community Family YMCA, is one way to stay in shape this time of year.

A low-intensity aerobics class, taught by Darlene Lopez, is held at 8 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Classes are held at Masters of Dance Arts in Canton.

"What I try to do is put a good variety in them," Lopez said of her classes. She changes the routines and uses different music to keep the sessions from getting boring.

Each class starts with a warm-up session. That's important because it helps prevent muscle strain. The aerobic part of the class follows the warm-up.

Aerobic routines are designed to boost cardiovascular fitness. Those routines are followed by cool-down work and by a floor workout of stretching exercises.

The Plymouth Community Family YMCA offers a variety of fitness classes.

LOPEZ ALSO teaches a body conditioning class for men and women. That class is offered through Garden City Continuing Education. Lopez teaches ballroom and partner dancing through the Livonia Public Schools.

Lopez, a Westland resident, has also taught classes in fast walking and belly dancing.

"A little bit of everything. I've done some weightlifting on my own, too."

Holidays can be difficult to handle

By Julie Brown
staff writer

For many of us, 'tis the season to be frazzled.

Heavy duty demands on our time, talents and energy can leave us exhausted. Few, if any of us, can live up to the expectations of the season, celebrating in picture-perfect Norman Rockwell style.

It's helpful to look at your pattern in celebrating the holidays, said David Breeden, branch director for Plymouth Family Service. Each of us has such a pattern, and we often fall into that without thinking.

At different points in that pattern, there are sources of stress, said Breeden, a social worker. That pattern comes in part from the way we were raised.

"We have an image of what Christmas should look like in a family." Trying to live up to that inevitably leads to disappointment.

"Without realizing it, we're always falling short of that."

BREEDEN SUGGESTED starting with a list of "to do" items for the holidays.

"And then see if you really need to do it." About half of those items can most likely be crossed off the list. It's not necessary to bake eight kinds of cookies or to make popcorn balls.

Staffers at Plymouth Family Service don't see many more people for counseling these days before the holidays, but do see more people after the holidays. Those people often hope the season will help lift their spirits.

"Holidays can be a reminder of what they don't have," Breeden said.

Breeden, Marti Simms and Sue Pierson recently talked about stresses of the holiday season and ways to cope with those stresses. Simms and Pierson are social workers with Plymouth Family Service, a Plymouth Community United Way agency offering counseling and other services.

Letting go of certain traditions can help make the season more enjoyable. Families need to be open to new ways of celebrating, especially after experiencing a loss, such as a death or divorce.

"Maybe this is the year that a trip would be better," Simms said. Going out to dinner on Thanksgiving, rather than fixing a meal at home, can be more enjoyable for some people.

ONE FAMILY member shouldn't be responsible for the entire holiday celebration; everyone needs to contribute.

"Don't be afraid to ask other family members to pitch in and help," Simms said. "A little communication among family members will go a long way."

For many, the season can be one of overspending. There are a variety of ways to tackle that problem.

It may be best to take cash for shopping, and to leave your checkbook and credit cards at home,

Please turn to Page 3

Season has stresses

The spiritual aspect of Christmas is comforting to many people.

Looking beyond the hype to the most meaningful part of the season, whatever that may be for you, helps.

"It seems to be a time when people just have very high expectations," said Carolyn Stark, director of the Employee Assistance Program at Catherine McAuley Health Center in Ann Arbor.

People often remember what the holidays were like in their childhood days. They may have unrealistic expectations and may try to do too much for others.

"Sometimes, families will put individuals in that role," Stark said. Families may expect one person to cook huge meals, decorate the house, entertain and handle other duties.

Stark supervises a program for Catherine McAuley Health Center employees. The program's also offered to some outside businesses on a contract basis.

CONFIDENTIAL HELP is available for personal and family problems, including stress, depression, alcoholism, drug abuse, and legal or financial difficulties.

"Generally, we do see more people about this time of year," said Stark, who received a master's degree in psychology from the University of Missouri-Columbia. They don't see a lot of people just before the holidays, but they are busy in October and November.

The time after the holidays can be difficult as well, with bills to pay and wintry weather to contend with. Substance abuse or relationship problems can come to a head at that time.

"Some families feel a lot of pressure just at the idea of getting together with other family members."

Families with an alcoholic or drug-dependent member can have a tough time during the holidays.

"It can be a real tense time, not knowing how that person will react." A death or divorce in the family can contribute to holiday stress.

"The whole Christmas season brings up past holiday seasons," Stark said. That loss can be painful for many.

TRYING TO get too much done in too little time creates stress.

"Some people take that to heart. They try to push themselves to the limits. They just literally don't take care of themselves."

People dependent on alcohol or those having emotional problems may be just barely coping, she said. The added responsibilities of the season can tip that balance.

When it comes to celebrating the holidays, it's not all doom and gloom, however. There are ways to cope with the season's demands and to enjoy its blessings.

It's important to take a good look at your expectations, Stark said, and to try to make those more realistic. It's also important to ask for help, so the holidays don't become an unbearable burden. Being a martyr won't help.

You don't have to do everything you haven't done during the rest of the year, Stark said. It's fine to give to others at other times of the year.

"I think the other thing is just taking time out for yourself."

Eating nutritious meals and getting sufficient sleep during the holidays helps. Regular exercise is helpful as well; YMCAs and recreation departments offer a variety of low-cost classes designed to help people stay active.

Those who will be alone during the holidays can think of social activities, and plan ways to spend their time.

"Talking about it, you can find others in the same situation, rather than keeping it all to yourself."

They stay in shape

She started dancing at age 5, and has experience in tap, ballet, jazz, Hawaiian and Spanish dancing.

Getting out and walking regularly also helps people stay in shape.

"Try not to eat too much." Lopez, who's known as D.J., realizes that advice can be tough to follow during the holidays.

"They forget their exercise, they forget what they're eating. Everybody does. They want to eat, but they don't want to put on too much weight."

Age is no barrier to staying fit, according to Lopez. Older people can sign up for fitness classes or do some walking.

"I've had some young kids in my class that didn't do as well. So age is no problem."

On days when she's not teaching, Lopez tries to keep up with her stretching routines. She knows the holidays are a fitness challenge.

"I'll put on a little bit, but then I take it off in January."

Car radios weren't always so common

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Most of us don't give much thought to our car radios.

We tend to take them for granted, knowing they'll provide us with entertainment and information at the twist of a dial or push of the button. Car radios weren't always so common, however. It took many years to get to where we are today.

Donald Matteson knows a great deal about those technological developments. He worked for many years in the electronics/communications field, including 10 years as a curatorial consultant in communications at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village.

Matteson, the author of "The Auto Radio: A Romantic Genealogy," has studied the development of cars, radios and phonographs for years.

Matteson, who lives in Jackson with his wife, Sally, shared his knowledge with those attending the annual fall potluck of the Plymouth Historical Society. The meeting was held Thursday, Nov. 10, at the Plymouth Historical Museum.

HIS STORY began in the late 19th century, an era of rapid development in communications and transportation. Matteson showed slides demonstrating those inventions and improvements and the pioneers associated with them.

In 1887, Thomas Edison developed his first tinfoil phonograph; subsequent improvements in phonographs were made. In the late 1890s, the disc phonograph was developed.

"Many of you remember the old gramophone," Matteson said. The Victor Corp. began selling such a gramophone; that company was known for its trademark incorporating a gramophone and a curious dog.

"This trademark is still used by RCA."

Developments in transportation occurred at the same time in the U.S. and abroad. Railroad, horses and foot power had been the primary modes of transportation for many years until the automobile arrived.

Cars became more common in the early 20th century, setting the stage for the revolution in morals and manners of the 1920s, known as the Jazz Age.

The era was reflected in the novels of F. Scott Fitzgerald. For moonlit drives, musical accompaniment was what was missing.

Radio became more common in U.S. homes in that part of the 20th century. The Detroit News station that later became WWJ was among the pioneers in broadcasting.

ONE SLIDE Matteson included showed a radio on a car's running board, "obviously not for driving down the road." A slide of a 1922 Chevy showed people of that era listening to radio with earphones.

"It looks pretty crude by today's standards."

In those early days, antenna size and engine noise were obstacles to enjoying listening to a car radio. There was a demand for improvements in car radios, and radio manufacturers and auto companies responded.

A radio for a 1941 Ford featured a foot control switch, sometimes confused with the dimmer switch by motorists.

The 1940s saw further refinements in radio, as needed for military use in World War II. The postwar era included manufacturing of a car radio by Motorola for Tucker automobiles.

"Unfortunately, there were more radios than there were automobiles." Those buying Tuckers got the radio when making a deposit for the car.

"Of course, you never got the car, but you had the radio for collateral," Matteson said.

The postwar era saw development of touch-tuning and improvements in FM, frequency modulation. FM radio provided listeners with a greater variety, needed as AM's dramas and soaps moved to television.

TAPES ALSO were developed and provided motorists with a new listening option.

Among Matteson's final slides was one showing a 1987 ad for Ford JBL Audio Systems. That system plays CDs and has 12 speakers, strategically located throughout the Lincoln Town Car.

"We wonder what the next step is," Matteson said. "It's anybody's guess."

Matteson, who worked at Henry Ford Museum from 1976 to 1986, has long been interested in communications. Since age 12, he's built and experimented with radios, and used to install and repair car radios as a hobby.

Matteson worked in communications and electronics, as a civilian and in the military. He served with the U.S. Air Force in that field, including service during World War II and Korea, and is a retired lieutenant colonel.

It's difficult to conceive what's next, according to Matteson, who received a bachelor's degree in industrial technology from Eastern Michigan University. Refinements of existing developments are likely.

"As far as new media, I just can't imagine." In this computer age, floppy discs store thousands of bits of information. Use of those could prove to be less costly than use of CDs.

Those at the meeting enjoyed Matteson's presentation.

"It was very interesting. It really tied in with some of my past history," said Bruce Richard, president of the Plymouth Historical Society.

In 1939, Richard bought a 1929 Model A and put a radio in it.

"There weren't many radios in 1929 Model As."

Richard operated a radio on merchant ships during World War II.

"I kind of got away from radio after the war." Richard spent 33 years with the Ford Motor Co.

He's among those who remember an era of radio younger people know only through history books. The first radio his family owned was made by his uncle.

"We used earphones to listen to WWJ."

Season can be a time for celebration

Breeden said. Doing so can help you avoid going into debt and having to pay large bills after the holidays, which can contribute to depression.

Children need to understand that they can't have it all. Parents can't buy every toy or game advertised.

"It's a great lesson in learning limits that you give to your children," Breeden said. "Who doesn't struggle with limits?"

Children will generally understand those limits, Simms said.

"I think kids can be a lot more reasonable than we give them credit for," she said.

Young families face more specific types of holiday stress. They may find themselves running around all day, trying to visit one family member after another.

YOUNG FAMILIES need to communicate openly with others, Breeden said. Shortened visits — or alternating visits from year to year — may be more realistic.

"That's not an easy one, that's for sure," he said.

Taking charge of the time you do spend with family members can help. Changing part of the routine, perhaps by preparing a meal differently, can help you avoid feeling powerless.

The holidays can be difficult for people who are alone.

"They may even be people who don't normally mind being that alone," Pierson said. The season's emphasis is on togetherness, and the contrast can be painful.

"It highlights it for them," Pierson said.

Those people can attend community dinners, or hook up with groups that will help them get through the holiday season. Doing for others, by pitching in on a volunteer project, can help.

"You may have to search out something like that," Simms said.

The social workers do their best to practice what they preach, by trying not to let the season overwhelm them.

For Simms, the biggest stress reducer "is just remembering the real significance of what the holiday's about."

Simms has a budget for holiday gifts. She works within that budget, and has found it requires her to be creative and to give more thought to gifts.

She works to stagger her holiday duties throughout the season, and has found that helpful.

"There's a lot of things you can start to do even now," Simms said.

Breeden's doing a better job of juggling, giving him an opportunity to relax and to appreciate the holidays. His holiday stereotype is that people should always be busy and active, but he knows it's fine to relax some of the time.

"It's taken me a while, I think, to get things in balance," Pierson said. She's doing better now at relaxing and enjoying the season.

Attitude's the key to success

By Julie Brown
staff writer

As far as Bill Joyner is concerned, most of us "have a fatal attraction to short-term thinking."

That attraction isn't the same kind as in the movie "Fatal Attraction." Even so, it does have negative consequences.

"We tend to lose sight of long-term goals," said Joyner, a Plymouth Township resident who teaches public speaking at Wayne State University. Most of us think in terms of immediate success, pleasure and need fulfillment.

"It has to happen right now." Even when we're watching a half-hour program on TV, we'll switch channels again and again, to see what else is on.

The tendency to think of short-term goals is having negative consequences, not only for us personally, but also for our nation and its businesses.

Motivation was what Joyner talked about during a Monday, Nov. 14, meeting of the Canton Business and Professional Women, held at the Roman Forum Restaurant in Canton.

JOYNER, WHO also teaches creative writing and business communication, served for six years on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners. He's active in political campaigns, having recently managed Thomas Yack's successful campaign for Canton Township supervisor. Joyner managed Cindy Burgess's unsuccessful campaign for clerk in Canton.

One aspect of motivation is action, Joyner said. Having a positive attitude, being aware, and following through with actions are essential.

Joyner used the example of a Fourth of July parade, held at 10 a.m. in Anytown, U.S.A.

"Only in America do we have parades for anything."

Of the 100 people living in Anytown about 60 don't know and don't care about the parade. Another 30 or so would like to go but don't know about the parade because nobody's bothered to invite them.

The remaining 10 people include the viewers, participants and leaders for the parade. Only two or so of that number will be leaders.

Those percentages of participation and leadership can be boosted, however Joyner recommended that those at the meeting "touch the lives of someone else every day."

DOING THAT will help those people feel more a part of life.

"We don't do it enough, my friends." Being aware of the needs of co-workers, neighbors, friends, families and others — and doing something to meet those needs — is essential.

Most of us don't make enough of an effort to involve people, in the workplace and elsewhere, according to Joyner.

"We don't involve people and let them make some of the decisions themselves."

Sometimes, it's enough simply to thank employees for a job well done, "making them feel good about the contribution they're making to the organization you belong to."

Joyner asked those at the meeting to give some thought to what motivates them. For many, achieving success — however that's defined — is the key factor.

Our basic needs start with food, clothing and shelter. Beyond that, a sense of security, including a daily routine, is important.

"We need to feel secure. Once we get that, what are we going to do?"

For Joyner, a sense of belonging is important. People also need a sense of self-esteem and self-fulfillment.

Joyner asked those at the meeting to think back to their younger days, at age 17 or 18.

"The barriers aren't up, the walls aren't up. We're feeling good about life."

That attitude doesn't have to disappear later in life, he said. We can feel good about life and don't need to adopt a negative, cynical attitude.

"Show people by doing, by attitude."

Celebration set at library

Children will have an opportunity to celebrate the opening of the new Canton Public Library's children's department.

At noon Saturday, Nov. 19, Jim Dandy the clown will be at the library. He'll pass out balloons and clown around with the children.

From 2-2:45 p.m. that day, children will enjoy a magic show presented by master magician Daryl Hurst.

When youngsters arrive at the library, they should enter their names for the raffle. A drawing for the raffle will be held after the magic show, with a life-sized stuffed puppy as the prize. The winner must be present.

The program is for children of all ages; parents are to use their own discretion in deciding whether their children would enjoy the session. Advance registration is not required.

The new Canton Public Library is just south of the Canton Township Administration Building, 1150 S. Canton Center Road.

Shooting makes pastor committed

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

He doesn't wait for someone to ask. After a handshake, the Rev. Donald Lintelman begins, without missing a detail, on how a robber's bullet nearly left him dead.

"I hope you don't mind me giving you all the gory details," said Lintelman.

A year has nearly passed, but the memory is very fresh in the mind of the pastor of Nativity United Church of Christ in Livonia. Lintelman and his wife, Joan, had returned to their westside Detroit home from a gathering at a church member's home.

Lintelman parked the car and led his wife to the house. She wasn't feeling well that day. He returned later to put the car in the garage.

When Lintelman went outside, he noticed another car in the drive way. Two men jumped out. Lintelman said "hello." The men returned the greeting and pulled guns. One grabbed him from behind while another yelled for his wallet and his watch.

In shock, Lintelman couldn't speak. He couldn't tell the two men that he didn't have his wallet. He was in his robe.

"The immediate thing that went through my mind was 'This is it,' " he said. "I thought they would kill me."

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

The Rev. Donald Lintelman, pastor of Nativity United Church of Christ, is glad to be back at the pulpit after being shot in the jaw in December of last year in a robbery attempt.

FRIENDS TOLD the Lintelmans not to come to Detroit. Crime was bad, they said. It was only three months after they had moved from Erie, Pa., to take over as pastor of Nativity United Church of Christ.

With two gunmen in front of him, Lintelman could say they were right.

A shot rang off. Lintelman said it sounded like a cap gun. The men fled and Lintelman found himself on the ground with blood all over his face.

A neighbor took him to the hospital. The bullet broke his jaw, went under his tongue and out the other side of his face.

He still has a slight slur. He can trace the other reminder of the incident by running his index finger along the scar on the side of face.

Later, it would take a bone from a cadaver and some bone marrow from his hip to piece his jaw back together. The doctor told him a centimeter more and he would've been dead.

Of course from this there is the Donald Lintelman who is glad to be alive, thankful God has spared his life. Then there is the Donald Lintelman who wonders why it happened.

"We have to have an all-out war against crime and drugs," he said. "No longer should we just assume the Detroit area is a bad place to live because it's harmful to think that way. . . . What's happening in Detroit will eventually happen here."

Lintelman admits not having any quick answers on how to stop the flow of drugs or crime. He doesn't believe guns are the solution.

He wants people to learn from experience. He recently had officers from the Livonia Police Department discuss crime prevention with his congregation.

HE HOLDS no malice towards those who shot him. He's convinced the assailants were on drugs, wanting money for a fix.

"When you ask me about forgiveness, I forgive because the person is not normal," Lintelman said. "I feel violated. . . .Nobody has the right to go around shooting people for $20 to buy crack. No one has the right."

As a minister, though, there was always a sense of security. That has been destroyed.

The fear is still there a year later. Lintelman said he has nightmares.

The brush with death won't deter him from his work, though. Involvement has been the hallmark of his ministry. Both he and his wife are active in environmental and justice issues.

He was ordained in the United Methodist Church, but moved on to the United Church of Christ. Lintelman left the ministry for 10 years to work as the director of a YMCA in Sharon, Pa.

He went back into pulpit in 1979 as pastor of Community United Church in Erie. Then he received the calling for Nativity Church of Christ. Despite the shooting, Lintelman plans to stay here for awhile.

"I feel good about life," he said. "God has spared my life. I know there is more work for me to do."

ClergyCard: Don't leave the pulpit without it

AP — Those who find satisfaction in doing God's work can also find cheer in their wallet with the ClergyCard, created staffers.

The Rev. William McPhail, pastor of the independent West Shore Christian Fellowship Church, came up with the idea while on a nationwide lecture several years ago.

"Why shouldn't clergymen, who are professionals, get what other professionals get — corporate discounts?" said McPhail, 48.

Members of McPhail's church embarked on the project, calling companies around the country and asking if they would be willing to offer cleric discounts.

"There are still a lot of people nationwide who have a soft spot for clergy and they've said they'd like to provide something for us because we're the ones who are always there for their weddings, baptisms, and funerals," McPhail said.

THE CARD — which bears a cross and a Star of David — is available to clerics and staffers of all denominations for $40 a year.

Nationwide, there are 10,000 people using the card for discounts of up to 50 percent on a number of purchases, including hotel rooms, car rentals and visits to amusement parks.

McPhail said his Muskegon company, ClergyCard International, is at a "break-even" point. Profits will go toward philanthropic causes, he said.

The company is pushing for more members, sending out 70,000 flyers every month advertising the card. Also, a flier advertising a 24-hour free telephone line was mailed out with copies of Christianity Today magazine.

While McPhail thinks the discounts are deserved, the company acknowledges there's plenty of opportunity for abuse because it has no way of checking if an applicant really is employed by a church.

"OBVIOUSLY, that's a weakness," marketing director Steve Britton said. "We have to go on people's good faith and integrity when they fill out the application."

But McPhail is ready to tout the benefits of the card, after saving a bundle on a recent vacation in Florida.

"If I had walked up to the desk of that condo resort in Delray Beach and asked for rooms for a week, it would have cost us $1,500," he said.

"But with the card, it cost only $800 for two weeks, and we got to take the whole family."

The Rev. Robert Seltz holds an antique edition of the Bible, while Paul Hoernschmeyer models the garb of a colonial-era churchgoer — which he'll be wearing at Holy Trinity Lutheran's special Thanksgiving services.

The church bulletin is published every Thursday in the Observer. Information for the church bulletin must be received in the Livonia office by noon the Monday preceding publication. Send information to the Observer, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

● JOHNNY HALL FEATURED

A free concert by singer Johnny Hall will be presented Sunday, Nov. 20, at Calvary Baptist Church of Canton. Hall is a contemporary recording artist who has appeared with Billy Graham. His concert begins at 6 p.m. Calvary Baptist also will feature its choir in a special Thanksgiving service Wednesday, Nov. 23, at 7:30 p.m. A nursery will be available for toddlers during both events. The church is at 43065 Joy, between Main and Lilley.

● THANKSGIVING, OLD STYLE

Worship leaders and participants will dress in colonial garb as Holy Trinity Lutheran Church of Livonia hosts a Thanksgiving service preceded by a potluck turkey dinner on Sunday, Nov. 20. In keeping with practice in colonial times, no musical instruments will be used in the service, psalms and hymns will be sung a capella, and a "tything" man will keep worshipers awake with his pole, ball and feather. Dinner will be accompanied by bell players and musicians, beginning at 7 p.m. at the church, 39020 Five Mile.

● SPEERS IN CONCERT

The Speers, nominated for four Grammy awards and known as the First Family of Gospel Music, will appear in concert Sunday, Nov. 20, at Detroit First Church of the Nazarene, 21260 Haggerty, Farmington Hills. Performances will be at 9:30 and 11 a.m. and at 6 p.m.

● ECUMENICAL GATHERINGS

Clergy, choirs and members of various Livonia churches will participate in a Thanksgiving eve gathering at the newly completed St. Aidan's Parish, 17500 Farmington Rd., Livonia. The theme "We Gather Together" highlights the ecumencial nature of the prayer service and celebration, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 23.

Five Redford and Livonia churches will participate in the Annual Thanksgiving Eve Ecumenical Worship Service at Village United Presbyterian Church, 25250 W. Six Mile, east of Beech Daly, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Participating churches are Our Lady of Loretto Catholic, Redford Baptist, St. Martin's Episcopal, Good Shepheerd Lutheran and Village Presbyterian.

● SHARING THANKS

Plymouth Christian Scientists will uphold the tradition of inviting friends and neighbors to join them in a special Thanksgiving service, at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 24, at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 1100 W. Ann Arbor Trail. A large portion of the service will be devoted to spontaneous sharing from the congregation, expressing gratitude to God for spiritual healing in their own experience.

● MUSICAL THANKSGIVING

The Redford Civic Symphony and several area choirs will present a free performance of Handel's "Messiah" on Sunday, Nov. 27, as part of the Village Presbyterian Church's Sundays at Four concert series. Village Minister of Music Craig Scott Symons will conduct. An offering will be taken for expansion of the sanctuary organ. The church is on Six Mile between Telegraph and Beech Daly.

● NO HUMBUG

"A Christmas Carol" will come to life at First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth, thanks to the dramatic reading skills of University of Michigan English professor Bert Hornback. Ben Maibach in front of the Standard Federal building in Troy, a Barton-Malow construciton project.

Ben Maibach marks 50 years in construction

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

In 1938 when Ben Maibach was 18, he wanted to work construction at Barton-Malow just long enough to save up a down payment on a farm in Bay City — one or two years, three at the most, and then he'd go back to milking cows.

He only made 60 cents an hour, but that was more than double what he made in his previous job in a grocery store. So he thought he'd be able to set a dollar or two aside now and then.

But "I never made enough to buy the farm," says Maibach, laughing.

Instead, the former high school dropout ended up making enough to buy the Southfield-based company, which currently has 208 contracts in 20 states, with a total contract value of $2.9 billion.

Rags to riches? Horatio Alger would have called it a pipe dream, the stuff of novels, maybe, but too implausible for real life.

MAIBACH IS one of those bigger-than-life characters. He is chairman of the board of his seven companies (all construction related), is on the board of 20-some corporations or charities (including several Amerisure companies, First of America Bank-Detroit, United Foundation and the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the Red Cross) and is a trustee of Lawrence Institute of Technology. Maibach (pronounced "my-back") recently retired as an arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association and has been an ordained minister since 1949; he does weddings regularly, did a funeral last Friday and preaches most Sundays at the Apostolic Christian Church in Livonia.

"To whom much is given, much is expected," is one of his mottos.

Another? "I've said many times: The good Lord put me in the right place at the right time."

A lot of people are in the right place in the right time. That's just another way of saying you have a foot in the door. What you do with an opportunity is what counts. Sure, it helped that when he hired on, neither Carl Barton or Arnold Malow had any sons and treated him like one. But once Maibach was given the ball and told to run with it, he scored touchdown after touchdown.

To toast his 50 years with the company and his contributions to society, Maibach was honored recently at the Detroit Athletic Club by 200 friends and associates.

A BRIEF HISTORY:

1935 — Maibach's grandfather dies, and Maibach drops out of Detroit's Redford High so he can go to Bay City and help get the crops in. (Several years later, though he is working long hours and making decent money, Maibach goes to night school and gets his diploma. Later, he takes engineering courses from U-D and U-M.)

1937 — Maibach makes $14 for a 60-hour week as an assistant manager in a grocery store. He decides he'd rather grow food than sell it.

1938 — Maibach's father, Ben Sr., is a supervisor with Barton-Malow and hires his son on as general laborer and timekeeper.

1939 — The company likes him so well he gets a raise — to 63 cents an hour.

1940 — At 20, he marries, and the same year, at 21, he gets his big break. He is put in charge of an industrial project in Wayne, where two immigrant laborers take him under their wings. "They really carried me," he says.

The project is a success and he goes on to bigger things. He builds a house in Redford Township "when it was still semi-rural. It was on Kinloch, when it was a new subdivision." (He later moved to Fox in Redford and this month is moving to a new home in Farmington Hills.)

1942 — A turning point: His wife, Harriet, dies in childbirth. His son is buried in her arms. Though his father and grandfather had been bishops, he hadn't been active in the church until now. He hurls himself into his religion.

He also solidifies his reputation in the business. Barton-Malow gets a big contract for an Alcoa office and factory in Detroit. Steel is scarce because of the war, so Maibach gets his demolition license, tears down the building on the site and salvages the scrap. "No one had ever done that before," he says.

1944 — He marries Lorene, with whom he has eight children.

1949 — The company is reorganized and he is made vice president and offered an ownership position for $15,000. He is short of ready cash, so Barton and Malow loan him the money. And he is ordained.

1955 — Barton retires. Malow semi-retires to Florida and Maibach, now the executive vice president, takes over most day-to-day duties.

1960 — Maibach buys out another part-owner and, at 40, owns 80 percent of the company, which soon joins the big leagues of national firms when it gets the contract for the Ford Woodhaven stamping plant, a rush-rush job for Lee Iacocca's Mustang. "They developed the plans as we built the plant. We were still putting on the roof when the line started."

The plant was 2.6 million square feet, one of the largest in the world at the time and a precursor of Barton-Malow's later huge auto projects, GM's Poletown and Orion plants.

WHEN MAIBACH joined Barton-Malow, it was a local company doing less than $1 million worth of business a year. Today, it is the largest general contractor in the state, and

FAMILY FINANCES

Local financial planning experts reviewed the data of the family profiled here and made general recommendations based on the participants' resources and goals. The information is for educational purposes only; references are not intended as discrimination or endorsements by Observer & Eccentric Newspapers or the advisers interviewed.

To receive a free financial planning brochure or to obtain a questionnaire to have your finances reviewed in this column, contact the Center for Financial Planning, Dept. '100, 877 S. Adams, Suite 202, Birmingham 48009 or call 642-4000.

To plan for the future, it's necessary to know where you are today. This month's couple, Pete and Wendy White, know this. The Whites have maintained excellent organized records. They have a very good idea of where their money is going and periodically update income, expenses, assets and their net worth. This helps them react quickly to any changes in circumstances that might affect their financial planning.

Pete and Wendy, both in their late 40s, live in Rochester Hills with their 14-year-old son. Pete earns $75,000 in a computer position; Wendy is not employed. They have given careful thought to their priorities and concerns for their financial future. Their primary concerns include building wealth, providing for their retirement and building funds for the education of their son. They already set up an education account for their son and are currently funding it.

The Whites are having a new house built and are trying to determine the best type of mortgage to take on the new house. Their current mortgage is a variable rate mortgage currently at 10 percent. They anticipate closing on the new mortgage in January. Current rates on fixed mortgages are running between 10 and 10¼ at most lending institutions.

Assuming they will be in their house more than three or four years, we strongly suggest they consider a fixed rate mortgage. With the substantial size of the mortgage they are contemplating, any significant interest rate increases could cause severe cash flow and financial difficulties. If interest rates move down, the Whites can always refinance at the lower rates. Although there is a cost for refinancing, that cost is modest in comparison to the risk assumed with a large variable rate mortgage.

THE WHITES HAVE already have amassed a substantial estate, which will undoubtedly grow over time. They should review their estate planning in order to minimize estate and inheritance taxes and provide for an orderly distribution of assets, especially to their son.

The majority of their assets are jointly held, and the surviving spouse will be entitled to ownership of all of the assets. This may create both probate problems and federal estate tax problems upon the death of the surviving spouse.

To the extent that the assets of the surviving spouse are in his or her own name, all of the assets will be subject to probate, which can be time-consuming and expensive. To the extent that all of the assets owned by the surviving spouse exceed $600,000, federal estate ta may be generated that could b avoided. Currently every taxpaye has a unified credit against federa estate taxes at death (or for gift ta es during lifetime) that will protec $600,000 of property from transfe taxes. In addition, any assets give to a surviving spouse pass free of es tate tax under the allowable marita deduction.

THE IMPLEMENTATION of a revocable living trust, with proper funding, can help the Whites avoid estate tax. The living trust is designed to provide both a marital trust portion and a residuary trust portion to the surviving spouse.

The marital trust portion can be put under the full control of the spouse, while the residuary trust portion is available for uses needed by the surviving spouse. By properly allocating assets into the residuary trust, the unified credit in both estates can be used, thus eliminating estate taxes on both deaths.

In addition, the living trust can provide for the eventual distribution to all beneficiaries including any distributions to the Whites' son on the death of Pete and Wendy. A children's trust can provide for immediate distribution of gifts if it is felt that the son is capable of handling such amounts of money, or can provide for a payout of income and principal over a specified period of time.

Finally, the living trust can also aid in avoiding probate. If assets are titled in the name of the trust prior to death, those assets are not subject to the probate process.

WE NOTE that the Whites have an umbrella liability policy, which is desirable. But it appears that they have only $100,000 of liability on their automobile and homeowners policies. Most umbrella liability policies require that $300,000 of liability be maintained on their basic policies. They should check this point with their agent.

Although the Whites have made good progress toward diversification of their investment portfolio, we note some points of concern. Currently, 22 percent of the Whites' portfolio is in stock of Pete's company, and he is purchasing even more stock through his employer stock purchase program.

Assuming the price of the company stock is of reasonable value, we would suggest that he consider starting to divest himself of some of the stock to give the portfolio greater diversity. It appears that he will always have a significant position in the company stock, so if the value goes up he will not miss out on the portfolio growth. But the greater risk is that the company's fortunes might not do so well, causing a major loss in the portfolio. A good rule is that no more than 10 percent of any portfolio should be represented by a single stock issue.

California car insurance fight goes to court

Dan McCosh

There's an old story about how to train a mule. First you get a sledgehammer, then hit him in the forehead. Why? Because first you've got to get his attention.

California voters, three hours too late as usual to elect a president, managed to swing a pretty vicious sledgehammer at the auto insurance business Nov. 4 by voting in a referendum calling for an across-the-board 20 percent cut in liability insurance premiums.

The California insurance companies lost no time getting a stay from the California Supreme Court. This wasn't much trouble because insurance companies have a big pool of idle young lawyers.

These insurance company lawyers are hired to lose lawsuits filed by contingency-fee attorneys who used to chase ambulances and now advertise on television after "Hill Street Blues" goes off the air. Insurance company lawyers work for insurance companies until they start to win, then they quit and sue insurance companies on contingency fees.

This is one reason why auto insurance rates are so high, and why if voters really wanted to cut their auto insurance rates they should have banned "Hill Street Blues" reruns. But I digress.

CALIFORNIA VOTERS were upset at the insurance companies because the cost of insurance was beginning to pass the cost of a new car. Auto insurance was rising faster than a Beverly Hills house. You could picture the day was near when a tour bus would be coming down the street and you would hear, "And this insurance policy once belonged to Jack Benny. . . ."

Road and Track and sports car enthusiasts were upset because cars that go 150 mph were paying even more than anybody else, which seemed unfair since you were that much more likely to kill yourself rather than file a lawsuit.

People who lived in rotten, high-crime neighborhoods were upset because insurance companies red-lined their neighborhoods and raised insurance rates as if they were stealing their own cars, instead of realizing that it was the people from expensive neighborhoods — where rates were low — that were parking their cars around and getting them stolen, so maybe they ought to get their rates raised instead.

Although the 20 percent rate cut was the one that passed, there were a total of five insurance-rate propositions on the California ballot this election.

The California insurance companies also had a proposition on the ballot, which was rejected by the voters, that would have set up a no-fault insurance system and a cap on attorneys' contingency fees.

Half of this is familiar to Michigan residents who swallowed the no-fault argument a few years ago, which mainly seems to mean that rates can be raised because it isn't the insurance companies' fault. Unfortunately, Michigan ignored the contingency fee system, and then "Hill Street Blues" went back on the air, and any hope was lost.

California attorneys also sponsored a proposition of their own, which said they didn't want anything to change. Surprise.

Anyway, all this is in the hands of the California Supreme Court now and will be settled as soon as they get the Mike and Robin divorce off the docket. Meanwhile, a few insurance companies are contemplating a new policy where if you can make the payments, they toss the care in for free.

Family finances: protect estates

Another weakness in the Whites' portfolio is in the utility preferred stocks. Some of the utilities represented are weak financially, and there is the possibility at some point that the preferred dividend could be cut or stopped altogether. This would not only reduce the Whites' income but would cause a major move downward in the price of the preferred stock.

These stocks are also subject to significant interest rate risks; that is, as the interest rates move up, the preferred stock value declines. It would be preferable to have this preferred stock liquidated and reinvested in either high quality short-term maturity bonds or perhaps into convertible bonds or bond funds.

With continued monitoring of goals and assets, the Whites are well on their way to attaining their goal of financial security.

the 14th largest in the United States, according to Engineering News Record. It does gross business of close to $1 billion a year, has seven divisions and employs about 1,200 persons.

(Though Maibach stepped down as CEO in 1976, when he is in town he goes to the office every day.)

Over the years, the company has built some of the biggest projects in the Detroit area, including Joe Louis Arena, U-M Hospital, Manufacturers National Bank building, the old Michigan Mutual Building and the Jeffersonian, a high-rise apartment building on Jefferson that was the first of the modern apartment buildings that are now abundant in and around downtown.

In 1960, the company began work on the post office downtown, which was to become the largest post office in the country. (In 1961, Maibach's father, the project supervisor, died on the site of a heart attack.)

Nationally, Barton-Mallow is best known for its hospital projects. Currently it is working on 37 such projects and past work includes Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak and several projects for the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota.

Barton-Malow currently is building, at a cost of more than $70 million, the huge Standard Federal Savings headquarters on Big Beaver in Troy.

Nicknamed the Taj Mahal of Detroit by fans and critics alike, the granite structure rises more like a pyramid from the surrounding landscape. About 450,000 square feet, with generous exterior and interior granite, glass handrails, and a breathtaking six-story atrium, it is scheduled to open in April.

WHEN SPEAKING of the business, Maibach isn't most proud of bottom lines, or huge square footages. It is that, despite its huge size, Barton-Malow is a family business.

Son-in-law Tom Moilanen is president of the family-owned Cloverdale Equipment Co., which rents, leases and sells heavy construction equipment; son-in-law Mark Bahr is executive VP and chief financial officer for Barton-Malow; son-in-law Tom Hitz is a project administrator for Barton-Malow; daughter Sheryl is in marketing and is head of publicity for Barton-Malow; youngest son, Douglas, a civil engineer with an MBA, is a job superintendent with Barton-Malow; and another son, Ben III, is Barton-Malow's president and CEO.

"And they all started in the field," said Maibach.

"Nowadays, it's hard to pass a family business from one generation to another. But I think we've been very, very successful," said Maibach.

Tom Lucas has known Maibach for 20 years, first as an architect at another firm, more recently as president of one of Barton-Malow's subsidiaries, the Argosy Group, which does architectural engineering.

"If I thought he was an SOB, I'd tell you. I don't pull any punches," said Lucas. "He's a gentleman. That's a good description right there: a gentleman.

"Every company develops a culture, and basically, the culture at Barton-Malow has been one of caring. They care about their people, their clients and the work they do. They're just a caring firm."

Crystal ball says economy will grow in '89

By Sid Mittra
special writer

finances and you

Sid Mittra

Through this column, I generally attempt to analyze, inform and interpret useful information for my valued readers. Today is an exception, for in this column I plan to forecast the year 1989 by looking into my crystal ball.

First, a word about the political backdrop. We have a Republican president in the White House who must contend with a Democratic Congress. Bush's vision is close to that of Reagan, but he does not have Reagan's charisma. In fact, his vision is consistent with the old cliche, "Don't fix it if it ain't broken." Here, now, are my predictions for next year.

The Economy

The economy will continue to grow at a healthy rate. Obviously, the rate of growth of GNP will vary from one quarter to another, but there will be no surprises in the way the overall economy will behave.

Budget Deficit

Reagan's supply-side economics was based on the premise that tax and other incentives created for the suppliers will accelerate the growth rate of GNP, which, in turn, will generate additional revenues for the government. Obviously, that did not happen.

The largest budget deficit on record is a living testimony to the partial failure of the supply-side economics. Clearly, Bush considers the reduction in the budget deficit to be his top priority. I predict that the government will take the following actions to drastically reduce the deficit:

1. The Congress has already changed the tax laws to wipe out most tax shelters and the tax advantages of insurance-related investments. The Congress will refine, tighten and modify these laws even further.

2. The Congress will also look for additional ways of increasing the tax revenue which may include such revolutionary ideas as the taxing of municipal bond interest.

3. The IRS will speed up its tax collections and will ruthlessly enforce the current laws.

4. The personal and corporate tax rates will not be raised, because Bush will be hard put to break his campaign promises, at least during the first year.

5. Large deficits will continue to be a matter of concern, both for the government and the Federal Reserve.

Inflation

The inflation rate will rise a little from its present level, but will remain at the "moderate level." That is, inflationary worries will not become a major concern for us.

Interest Rates

Interest rates will rise, but only moderately. There will be constant threat of rate increases, but these will not materialize. The Fed will continue to pursue a moderate to mildly tight monetary policy to insure the stability of the dollar.

Investment Climate

1. The investment scene will be dominated by the proliferation of a wide variety of investment products. As always, the insurance industry will be highly creative in introducing new and attractive investment products.

2. Closed-end bond funds will become more popular especially because of their high yield and potential for growth.

3. Investors will continue to be leery of investing in individual stocks and bonds, especially because October 19, 1987 would still be fresh on their minds.

4. The number of market timers will rise, as anxious investors attempt to minimize their risk of mutual fund investments.

5. Economically sound limited partnerships will continue to dominate the market.

6. The industry will be creative in bringing out new investment products in order to attract the savings of investors sitting on the sidelines.

7. There will be a dramatic development in the market for CDs.

8. Finally, investors will continue to be distrustful as "investment salespersons" intensify their efforts to lure investors into buying products from them. However, the true professionals, who have made a long-term commitment to their clients, will ultimately be victorious.

Summing Up

I hope that this economic prediction for 1989, albeit tenuous, will help you better plan for the future.

Educational Seminar: Main Topics: 1. New President in 1989 — Good or Bad? 2. Making Money in a Sideways Market; 3. Annuity — a Booming Market. 4. CD: No Penalty For Early Withdrawal; 5. Trading in Limited Partnerships.

The Seminar, sponsored by the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and Coordinated Financial Planning will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 6, in the offices of Coordinated Financial Planning, Sheffield Office Park, 3250 West Big Beaver, Suite 540, Troy, MI 48084. Growing threat: plastic trash

Terry Gibb

This is the second of three parts about plastics and their effect on our environment:

The current plastics proliferation is having a dual impact on our environment. First, many of the chemicals used in the manufacture and processing of plastics are highly toxic (poisonous). This results in hazardous wastes, toxic emissions and discharges of toxic chemicals into nearby waterways.

Second, at the end of the lifetime for this throw-away plastic packaging and products, these materials become "post-consumer" trash ending up along the roads as litter or contributing to our overflowing solid waste landfills.

As consumers, we don't think of plastics as toxic simply because by the time they reach us — they're not. However, the ingredients in plastics production have dangerous properties to those who work in plastics factories or those who live near a plastics factory.

In 1986, 20 chemicals were cited by the EPA for having generated the most hazardous waste. Five of the top six chemicals are commonly used in plastics production. They are: propylene (no. 1 on the EPA list), phenol (no. 3), ethylene (no. 4), polystyrene (no. 5), and benezene (no. 6).

In addition, a 1983 scientific review reported that people living within 20 miles of a PVC plant have more risk of cancer due to vinyl chloride emissions, a known carcinogen, than does the general population.

In the post-production period, plastics continue to pollute through litter and solid waste disposal.

A 1986 litter survey performed by the Michigan Department of Transportation revealed that plastic containers had increased 32 percent over the amount counted in 1980. The department also reported that Stryofoam containers were the most frequent item littered along roadways.

Litter is only a small part of the post-consumer pollution, however. Our rapidly filling landfills are where plastics have their greatest impact.

A recent study commissioned by the EPA found that plastics accounted for 9.6 million tons or 7.2 percent by weight of our municipal solid waste. Over half of this, 5 million tons, was plastic packaging.

The 7.2 percent by weight figure at first seems like a small percentage of the total solid waste. And, in fact, the plastics industry quotes that figure to show "how small" the plastic disposal problem is.

However, because plastics are so lightweight, it is estimated that plastics actually make up 25-32 percent in volume of our trash.

Currently, as with all our trash, 85 percent of all plastics are landfilled. Within the next few years, that will change because usable landfill space will be filled. There are three alternatives to landfilling plastic: source reduction, recycling or incineration.

NEXT WEEK: The alternative disposal methods for plastics.

UP spruce picked for State Capitol

A 75-foot Norway spruce from state-owned land in the Upper Peninsula has been selected as Michigan's official holiday tree this year, Gov. James J. Blanchard said.

The tree is on the grounds of the Newberry Regional Mental Health Center and will be donated by the Michigan Department of Mental Health. The governor and Lansing city officials will light it during the capital city's annual celebration on Friday, Nov. 18.

The state's official holiday tree was to be cut down "the old-fashioned way," with ax and crosscut saw, last week and stands in front of the state Capitol building.

A 50-foot Michigan balsam fir from Huron-Manistee National Forest, near Cadillac, will stand in front of the U.S. Capitol in Washington this year.

Wayne County honors DSO

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara has declared November to be Detroit Symphony Orchestra Month in honor of the orchestra's diamond jubilee.

Founded in 1914, the symphony has enhanced the lives of music lovers throughout the world, McNamara said, in issuing the proclamation.

The orchestra has been under the direction of maestro Gunther Herbig since 1983.

Posse to track medical waste

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Michigan may join a 10-state pilot program run by the national Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to track medical waste.

The topic became a major concern last summer when medical waste, including used hypodermic needles, washed ashore on beaches in New Jersey and in the state along Lake Michigan near Ludington.

It became a summer of record heat, no rain and editorial cartoons showing kids playing with needles instead of sea shells at the seashore.

According to Tom Scott, press spokesman for Gov. James Blanchard, one of the governor's aides, J.D. Snyder, was in Maryland this week discussing the proposed pilot program with EPA officials.

Barbara Lambert of the EPA, who was in Michigan recently for a conference of municipal officials, identified the 10 likely states for the project as New Jersey and Connecticut and the Great Lakes states of New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio, Minnesota and Indiana.

The program is a result of recent federal legislation requiring the EPA to come up with regulations curbing hospital waste.

ACCORDING TO SCOTT, "At this point, we are working with the EPA to help develop and shape these rules. We're trying to develop rules we think would be beneficial to the Great Lakes. And whether we get involved or not depends on those rules.

"Right now, if we find medical waste we can impose penalties, but we'd be better off if we had a tracking system."

Snyder is chairman of a Great Lakes task force on medical waste.

Scott said the EPA has until Feb. 1 to work out details of its proposed program. Most states, including Michigan, will then have the option of joining the program or not. Lambert said New York and New Jersey would be required by federal officials to participate.

Officials think the medical waste that washed up on Michigan shores last summer came from a hospital in Wisconsin. How it got on Michigan beaches, forcing their closing, no one knows.

The EPA says if it studies waste from the time it is generated till it is disposed — including who has the contract to haul it away and where it is supposed to go — they can better find and punish violators, and come up with better regulations to insure its proper disposal.

UNDER CURRENT federal law, hospitals are responsible only for hazardous waste they generate. There are no state or federal rules for other wastes.

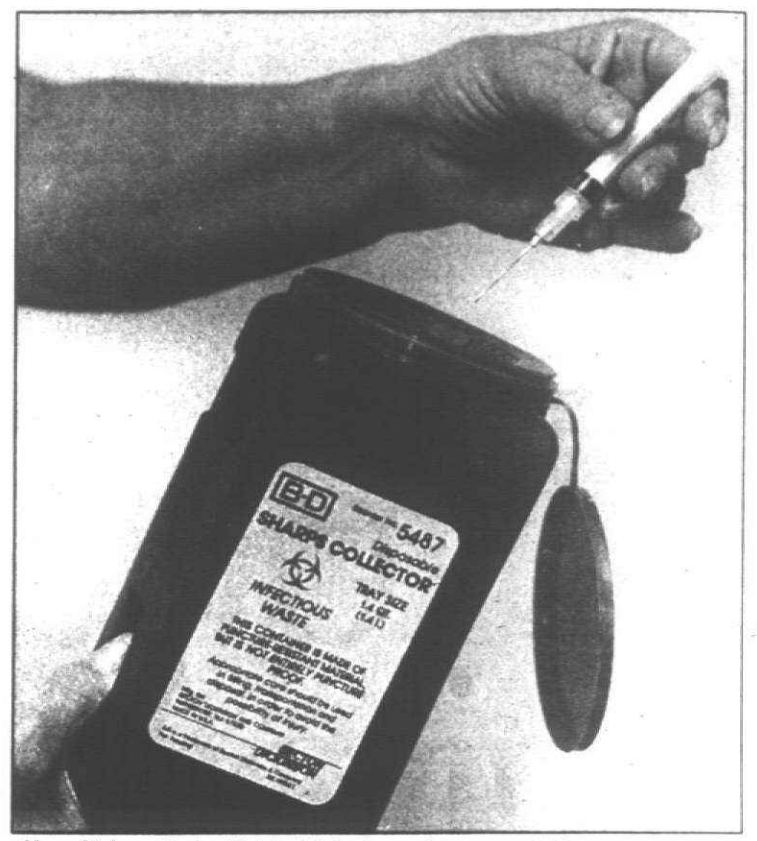
Hospital waste is divided into four classes — infectious or "red bag" waste, hazardous waste, waste that may be hazardous and routine trash.

Infectious waste includes used needles, human tissue and body parts.

Hazardous waste includes laboratory agents like cyanide and acids.

State Rep. Michael Bennane, D-Detroit, has introduced legislation that would regulate the disposal of infectious medical waste. He chairs the house Committee on Public Health.

Hospital officials have downplayed the chances of getting infected from hospital waste, but in light of the furor over AIDS, public response to used needles washing ashore on beaches was vocal. And it was heard in Washington.



Hospital waste is divided into four classes — infectious or "red bag" waste, hazardous waste, waste that may be hazardous and routine trash.

John Neville, artistic director of Stratford Festival in Stratford, Ontario, is bringing a festival production to Detroit's Music Hall.

A 'dictator' at Stratford

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

DESCRIBING THE WAY he carries out his function as artistic director of Canada's Stratford Festival, John Neville said emphatically, "I'm a dictator." Then, he qualified it — a benevolent one."

"You can't run a theater by committee," he pointed out.

Neville, actor, director, and artistic director of the internationally acclaimed festival since 1986, visited the Livonia office of the Observer & Eccentric on Monday. He told how he turned around the fortunes of the festival, which had gone heavily into debt and had dropped in quality of productions.

The 1988 season, which ended recently, was "the best season in the history of the theater's 36 years," he said.

Neville was in this area to taik about the festival's first production ever in Detroit, of Shakespeare's "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," opening Tuesday at the Music Hall Center.

The production, which was presented last season at Stratford's Avon Theatre, continues through Sunday, Nov. 27, at the Music Hall. For ticket information, call the box office at 963-7680.

THE ENGLISH-BORN Neville studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London during the late 1940s and starred on stage at the Old Vic in Shakespearean roles.

King of Siam has appeal

By Victor E. Swanson
special writer

YUL BRYNNER is not the only actor to be attracted to the role of the king in "The King and I."

Jerry Sima of Birmingham, an actor, director and teacher, has played the king three times in local theater productions, the first time in 1968 and the last time in 1981 for the Avon Players.

Sima will enthusiastically re-create the king again, beginning Friday, in the first of nine performances with the Players Guild of Dearborn.

For more than 30 years, Rodgers and Hammerstein's stage production "The King and I" has been thrilling theatergoers. The music is great, and the story, based on the novel "Anna and the King of Siam" by Margaret Landon, is a terrific stage story.

Late actor Brynner performed the king on stage for years and appeared in this role in a 1956 movie and in a 1972 television series called "Anna and the King."

'IT'S A PART that I have a real affinity with," Sima said, during an interview in the library of Andover High School in Bloomfield Township, where he is an English teacher. "I don't know why. I think there's a lot of kid in me, and the king is a kid.

"It's also an opportunity to play a completely different role from the way I see myself — step out of me for awhile and be somebody totally different."

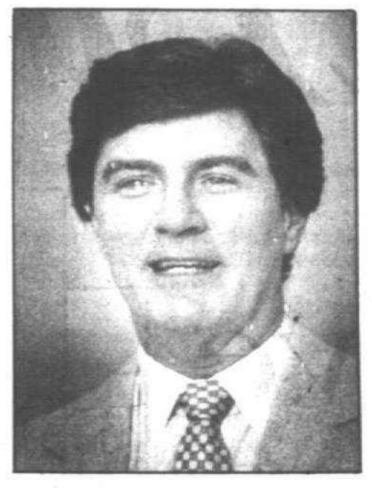
Sima said the real king of 1860s' Siam "was a barbarian, who whipped people and actually killed people . . . He was arrogant, pompous."

"I don't have those emotions in me, so to conjure them up is really a challenge and exciting."

Since playing the role in 1968 or 1976 or even 1981, he has matured, and "In some ways, I feel more . . . psychologically and emotionally prepared now at age 50. I understand the king better."

This 1988 production of "The King and I" is the first time Sima has worked with the Players Guild of Dearborn, which Sima calls "one of the three oldest community theaters in the State of Michigan."

"I got the part and was really, really pleased to have my first performance with that group. It's personally exciting to me. It's a very large membership — I don't know — hundreds of people in that group, like 600 membership."



Sima stars once again as the king.

THIS TIME, Sima is working with actress Jackie Bacus as Anna, the teacher. "Always, the Annas I've played with have been extraordinarily strong women, strong personality."

He talked about some of the great moments with the actresses who have played Anna and the children who have played the king's children. One of his fondest memories of rehearsing deals with a scene in which the king angrily orders the children out, with the line, "Out! Out! Out!"

Sima recalled he was trying to hold back laughter when one child came up to him one day and said, "Mr. King, you know, when you say that 'Out! Out! Out!' and you howl at us, don't look at me. That really scares me." Sima asked the boy if he knew they were only play acting, and the boy answered, "I know, I know, but don't look at me."

For this production, Sima works with about 14 children. Working with children is what he really enjoys, which is why he teaches at Andover. He has taught courses there in English, acting, mime and stagecraft and has directed such stage productions as "My Fair Lady," "The Sound of Music," "Oliver!" and, of course, "The King and I."

Here's how Jerry Sima, English teacher at Andover High School in Bloomfield Hills, looked as the King of Siam in a previous production of "The King and I."

"I love being here with the kids. I don't feel any difference in my enthusiasm, my excitement for learning or for teaching as I did in 1959 when I began. I can't wait to get here in the morning."

SIMA ARRIVES for school at about 7:15 a.m. and goes and goes and goes all day. After school he's still going.

"I tutor after school. I get kids prepared for ACTs and SATs. I work with them on composition and get them prepared for college . . . I do that from 3 o'clock until 10 p.m."

He also leads groups of students on educational trips. During the coming spring break — March 23 to April 2 — he will lead his 17th excursion, this time to England, Switzerland and Italy. Interested students from the Bloomfield Hills, West Bloomfield and Birmingham School Districts can get more information about the trip by telephoning Sima at 540-9800, Ext. 209.

He declared, "I was a very serious student — very serious. Grade seven through 12, I never skipped school once. I had perfect attendance."

It was in seventh grade that Sima decided to become a teacher. He was

Neville a 'dictator' at Stratford

He created the title role of "Alfie" in its premiere run.

After serving as theater director of England's Nottingham Playhouse, he came to Canada to direct a play, then served as artistic director for theaters in Edmonton and Halifax before coming to Stratford.

He performed as a senior member of Stratford's Young Company, the next season acted on the Main Stage and then became director of the Young Company. In 1989 he will start his fourth and final season as artistic director at Stratford. Newville's contract was for three years, but he was "persuaded to renew."

He was polite, composed, unpretentious, as he answered questions in his distinctive but untheatrical voice.

"I'm tired. It's a very exhausting job," he declared. "It's time I had a rest. I may just freelance — direct or act."

He said he had just finished performing three times a week, as well as carrying out his administrative duties. The actor starred as Henry Higgins in the festival's 1988 production of the musical "My Fair Lady."

"I've acted all my life. I don't enjoy acting all that much anymore," he said. But he enjoyed the challenge of playing Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady" (he had previously played the old dustman in Shaw's "Pygmalion" in Edmonton). "It was a huge success" he said of Stratford's "My Fair Lady."

NEVILLE SAID the idea of bringing Stratford to the Music Hall originated with him three years ago when "I was doing something with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at Temple Bethel in Birmingham. I was taken around to the Music Hall. It was dark, and they were trying to refurbish it. I thought it would be a good place for Stratford to perform."

He noted, "The audience from the United States is quite substantial, particularly from here." Neville said there's always a part of the "audience" that cannot make the trip to Stratford, so bringing "Two Gentlemen of Verona" to Detroit offers "a taste" of the festival.

Stratford started out as a Shakespearean Festival but, "We do other things as well," Neville said. "The festival has grown enormously since. It started off in a tent, with an eight-week summer season. Now it runs from May to October, with 11-12 productions each season."

Neville is a Canadian citizen. He and his wife, a former actress, whom he married in England, have six children — five in Canada and one in Great Britain. None of their children has gone into acting, although one has become a stage manager.

"I not unhappy," he said, when asked how he feels about them not following in his footsteps. He believes one should become an actor only "if you feel you'd die if you didn't — because it's tough. It's fraught with rejection."

> 'The audience from the United States is quite substantial, particularly from here.'

King has appeal inspired by his teacher Olga Neumoff. He described her as "a wild teacher, fresh out of college."

"I don't know what I learned in her class. All I know is that when I came out of it, that was it. There was nothing left for me to do except teach high school English.

"I've been teaching for 30 years. I'm 50 years old. And when you're 50 and you've taught for 30 years, you're going to retire. And I'm looking at that, not immediately, but in the real near future. There are a lot of other things I want to do, travel extensively and have time for the family . . . and just time — time to have time for things I want to do, whether it's gardening or reading."

For ticket information about the production, which runs through Sunday, Dec. 4, call the Players Guild of Dearborn at 356-0951.

Chamber Winds to play

"Windworks," a performance by the Detroit Chamber Winds, will be given at 8 p.m. Friday at Christ Church Cranbrook, Cranbrook and Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills.

Hornist Bryan Kennedy will be the soloist in Schmitt's Lied and Scherzo, Victoria King, bassoon, will be featured in Andriessen's Concerto for Bassoon and Winds and Kevin Good will join the ensemble for Hertel's Concerto for Five Winds. Also on the program are works by Krommer and Gordon Jacob.

Kennedy, King and Good are members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra as are a a majority of the Detroit Chamber Winds musicians. This ensemble specializes in the large body of wind chamber works that largely go unheard due to unusual instrumentation.

"Windworks" is sponsored by Coopers & Lybrand and Renaissance Printing. The concert is supported by Michigan Council for the Arts and National Endowment for the Arts. Tickets, $12 and $8 for students and seniors, are available at the door. To order, call 851-8DCW.

'Sentenced to Life' uneven

Performances of the Trinity House Theatre production of "Sentenced to Life" continue through Saturday, Nov. 26, in Livonia. For ticket information call 464-6302.

Victoria Diaz

By Victoria Diaz
special writer

Livonia's Trinity House Theatre opened its 1988-89 season last weekend with "Sentenced to Life," a challenging contemporary drama about euthanasia, by Malcolm Muggeridge and Alan Thornhill. While the production has its good points, unfortunately it also has some significant flaws.

The sometimes-didactic play, directed here by Laura Niesen, centers around a beautiful, talented woman who was once an accomplished pianist. As the play opens, she is almost totally paralyzed, the result of an illness which occurred a few years earlier.

Eileen has no real hope of recovery and, more than anything else, wants to die. Incapacitated as she is, she cannot kill herself, however, and must depend on someone else to do it. When her doctor rejects her plea, she desperately turns for help to her husband, Gerald, an articulate, respected proponent of euthanasia. But he finds himself with an apparent inability to act on his own expressed beliefs.

Eileen and Gerald, beset with a morally significant struggle that cannot be happily resolved, are in the classical sense tragic characters.

PAUL PATTON'S Gerald has his touching moments (most notably at the climax of the play), but generally he seems not beset by tragedy but merely befuddled, and often amusingly so. Patton appears miscast in a tragic role. It's almost as if he has wandered in from another play, a comedy, and is struggling to keep his face straight and a twinkle in his eyes under control.

He is charming, appealing, good-looking, and isn't at all wooden onstage. But rarely does he appear tortured or genuinely caught up in a tragic dilemma.

Kari Curmi, as the complex Eileen, fares somewhat better, although at times she seems to be suffering from a similar problem, especially in the first act. As the play opens, we see an Eileen who is so bright-eyed and almost perky it's difficult to believe this character wants nothing more than to die.

As the play progresses, however, Curmi does manage to become more convincing. Some of her best moments appear on a videotape, directed by Mark Barrera, which augments the onstage action and takes full advantage, in tight close-ups, of her remarkably photogenic, expressive face.

Beth Temple is a stand-out as the Vickorys' young German maid who believes, "The right to die will someday become the right to kill." Gary Brda as a prying television producer does a nice job, as does Lucien Chocron as Eileen's well-meaning doctor and Elizabeth Bradford as an effusive, right-to-die advocate.

"SENTENCED TO LIFE" is nicely paced, although one extra-long scene change, plus two 15-minute intermissions (during which the audience is asked to leave the auditorium), do impede progress a bit. Videotapes shown in the tiny Trinity House lobby between acts are intended as part of the play. An inventive touch, but a lot of their effect is lost in all the confusion and noise of an intermission.

Much of the background music for the production was composed by Frank Schenk, and deserves special mention, as does impressive lighting effects by Lee Peterman and Dave Denis.

Victoria Diaz is a Livonia-based free-lancer, who specializes in arts and entertainment articles in the metro area.

Barrel arriving

The Kingsley Inn in Bloomfield Hills will roll out the only barrel of 1988 Nouveau Beaujolais to reach Michigan at noon Thursday (Nov. 17). Official uncorking in the dining room lobby celebrates the release of this year's harvest of the Gamay Noir a Jus Blanc grapes. Complimentary tastings of Nouveau Beaujolais and hors d'oeuvres will be featured throughout the day.

Joins Kingsley

Michael Russell has joined the Kingsley Inn (which recently celebrated its 50th anniversary) as executive chef. He is one of five Certified Master Chefs in Michigan and was a Gold Medal winner on the U.S. National Culinary Team, which recently returned from the Culinary Olympics in West Germany. Prior to joining the Kingsley, he served as executive chef for the Travis Pointe Country Club in Ann Arbor. Fresh smoked salmon is a speciality of Russell's that he intends to add to the Kingsley menu.

Panda opens

A restaurant called the Panda, with authentic Chinese food, is new to West Bloomfield, in the Drake Summit Shopping Center at the location that used to be the Wildflower, then the Drake, then Oliverio's. Service is "Trader Vic style," or the team system. A buffet with mostly Chinese foods is served Sundays. Tropical drinks are available. Hours are 11:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Mondays-Thursdays, 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays, noon to 9 p.m. Sundays. The restaurant is owned by Paul Leung and Associates. Leung also owns the Oceania Inn in Rochester Hills.

SC soccer squad wronged by rules

C.J. Risak

☐ College sports, 6D

THE RULES will change.

Ask any of the 14 members of Schoolcraft College's womens soccer team if knowing that is soothing. Ask any of the four sophomores — Jennifer Belhart, Lisa Hysko, Shari Acitelli and Maureen Frampus — if they are comforted knowing that, in future years, what happened to them won't happen again.

The Lady Ocelots, reigning NJCAA champions, won't be allowed to defend their title. They have been ousted from the tournament, not by a lack of skill or poor on-field performance, but by those "governing" the sport.

Coach Nick O'Shea learned his team wasn't going to be invited to the national tournament a week ago. "I thought she was playing a joke on me," O'Shea said when Nita Dorsey, secretary to SC assistant dean Marv Gans, called with the news.

NO JOKE. The Lady Ocelots were out, a victim of the written rules, rules which hadn't been followed the past few years but — for reasons that will become plainly evident — were strictly enforced this year.

The plain truth is, they were a juicy target. Had these same rules been followed strictly in years past, SC would still be waiting to make its first appearance at the NJCAA "invitational" tournament.

Here's what happened:

The NJCAA divides the nation into regions for all sports. SC has the only women's soccer team in Region 12. Only 10 regions have womens soccer.

The criteria in deciding who gets one of the eight berths in the tournament is, in order of importance, the champion of a region with two or more rounds of playoffs (in other words, a region with at least three teams); the champion of a region with a championship game (or a region with at least two teams); the declared champion of a region or another region's second-place team.

SC is the declared champion of its region. Six of the eight berths went to teams in the first criteria (two or more rounds of playoffs). Another went under the second criteria (a regional championship game).

THAT LEFT one berth. Monroe (N.Y.) CC was awarded the spot as the next best team.

That angered O'Shea, for several good reasons. "We were 1-1-1 against junior college teams," he said. "We came back from that New York trip with a 3-1-2 record and were ranked third in the nation. We won every match after that and dropped to seventh."

The national ranking was important. It served as a determining factor in deciding which should get a berth, a second-place team in a region already represented or a team (like SC) from a region unrepresented.

Monroe was ranked fifth after being upset in its regional final by Herkimer (N.Y.) CC.

Here's the kicker. Who does the national rankings? Chuck Salamone — Monroe's coach.

"HOW CAN they lose and still be ranked ahead of us?" O'Shea pleaded. There was no answer — none that made sense, anyway.

Fact is, SC may have been doomed anyway. Besides national ranking, other determining factors — as presented in the NJCAA handbook — are number of teams in the region and record against NJCAA teams. SC, which has no competition in its region and played only three JC teams, would lose on both counts.

But if those rules had been followed in previous years, SC never would have made it to the tournament. Even last year, when the Lady Ocelots destroyed all competition en route to the title, the same rules could have kept them from even playing.

O'Shea appealed to George Killian, the executive director of the NJCAA. SC athletic director Ed Kavanaugh protested to Killian. So did school president Dick McDowell. All to no avail.

"We're out," O'Shea grudgingly admitted.

THE PROBLEM wasn't just the rankings. It wasn't just Salamone (whose team beat SC 3-1 in New York this season). SC's schedule was terrible. The Lady Ocelots finished 14-2-2, with several matches against club teams but with only three against JC teams. They were asking for trouble.

"We normally play the St. Louis schools," explained O'Shea. One year SC goes to St. Louis and the next it hosts Florissant Valley and Meramec. It was their turn to come to SC, but they decided not to renew the contract. The expense in coming here to play one JC team was too great, they claimed.

O'Shea offered to bring his team to St. Louis, but both teams turned him down, insisting no date was available.

That was bad enough. But when Oakland University and Central Michigan canceled matches against SC, it left a gaping hole in the schedule at the end of the season. That couldn't have helped the Lady Ocelots' selection chances.

REMEMBER, THOUGH. All this is going to change. Next year, a playoff system will be devised to prevent such a travesty. O'Shea doesn't particularly like what's proposed — combining the SC and St. Louis regions — when the tournament is already heavy with New York entries (three of this year's eight teams are New Yorkers).

But, as the SC coach said, "At least we'll have a chance to play for the right to go. It's one thing if you're beaten, but we didn't even have that chance this year."

In O'Shea's mind, there's no question his team is one of the top eight in the nation. "Without a doubt, we belong there," he said.

That's little solace to SC's players. "They had a chance to repeat," said O'Shea.

Until the rules intervened. SC did nothing wrong; the school violated no NJCAA standard. It's biggest transgression was in having teams back out of playing — that and being located in a region barren of other JC womens soccer programs.

It isn't fair. It's not right. And yet, because it's written in a handbook never before adhered to, the Lady Ocelots are being cheated out of the opportunity of a lifetime.

STATE-RANKED Redford Catholic Central is the leader of the pack for the 1988 All-Observer boys cross country team.

The Shamrocks, Catholic League champions and ranked in the top 10 all season long in Class A, garnered four of the top 10 first-team berths.

Area coaches, who gathered recently to select Observerland's best harriers, also picked two each from Western Lakes Activities Association champion Farmington and Wayne of the Wolverine A League.

Coaches also selected a second team and compiled an honorable mention list.

Only two harriers repeated as first-team performers. They include CC's Jeff Fedewa and Wayne's Dave Richards.

Observerland Coach of the Year is, who else, CC's Tony Magni, who led the Shamrocks to an undefeated dual-meet season, a regional title and a fifth-place finish at the Class A meet.

CC won the Catholic League title this fall. The veteran coach has two Class A titles to his credit.

Introducing the 1988 All-Area boys cross country team:

FIRST TEAM

Mike Sheridan, junior, Redford CC: He helped the Shamrocks to a fifth-place finish in the Class A team standings. In the team race, Sheridan finished 10th with a time of 16:36 for 5,000 meters.

He also won the Shrine-Shamrock Invitational and the Catholic League meet. The CC standout was second in the regional, Operation-Friendship and Holly meets.

Sheridan was unbeaten in duals.

"His record speaks for itself," said CC coach Tony Magni. "He was very competitive in every race. He's consistent, works hard and is a determined, well-rounded individual."

Chris Woolley, senior, Wayne: Woolley ran impressively, particularly in the state Class A individual race where he took fourth with a time of 16:46.

Only a strong contingent from state Class A champion Monroe kept Woolley from winning the Wolverine A League and regional meets. He was sixth in the league and fifth in the regional.

"Chris, as our team captain, led the team very well," said Wayne coach Ron Tolson. "He finished the season very well."

Woolley said he hopes to attend either Central or Eastern Michigan University.

Jeff Fedewa, senior, Redford CC: He had only one bad meet all year and unfortunately it was the state finals where he took 81st.

The two-time All-Area pick finished fourth in the regional, fifth at Operation-Friendship, seventh in the Catholic League and fifth in both the Shrine-Shamrock and Sturgis invitationals.

"Jeff was a real team leader," said Magni. "He was well liked by everyone and a good runner who often sacrificed his personal gain for team gain."

Dave Richards, senior, Wayne: Richards won two invitational crowns (Dearborn and Wayne), setting course records in the process.

He finished fifth at Gibraltar Carlson with a personal best of 16:18.

In post-season meets, Richards gained eighth in the league, seventh in the regional and ninth in the Class A individual race.

"Dave is a very good pace runner," said Tolson. "It seems that he can run a good pace forever."

Richards also sets a good pace in the classroom, carrying a 3.5 grade-point average.

Canton, Salem cagers meet in tourney opener

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Jill Estey has been a stabilizing force on Salem's team.

The long-awaited rematch between the Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem girls basketball teams was postponed one week.

Instead of meeting in the Western Lakes Activities Association final last Saturday night, the teams have to wait until the district tournament to see each other again.

The Chiefs, 19-1 and the newly-crowned league champs, and the Rocks, 16-4 and the defending district champs, play at 6 p.m. Saturday at Northville.

Canton defeated Salem 50-46 in early September, and it looked as if the two rivals would meet in the WLAA final for the fourth consecutive year as the season progressed and each won its respective division title.

Those plans got sidetracked when Walled Lake Western upset the Rocks in the first round of the WLAA playoffs. The Chiefs went on to win their first league title after losing to Salem the last three years, whipping WLW in the final 57-37.

"WE WOULD LIKED to have played (Salem) in the final and were looking forward to it," Canton coach Rob Neu said. "But winning the league was just as satisfying."

But, as happened last year, the teams drew each other again in their first district encounter.

The winner of tonight's Northville-South Lyon game plays Novi at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, and the survivor faces either Canton or Salem for the championship at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

"We've never gotten out of the district as long as I've been here, and we'll be shooting to do that," said Neu, in his fourth year as coach of the Chiefs. "That's what makes this game so big.

"When we look at the season, at this point in time, the first one is over and the second is about to begin. We're longer 19-1; we're 0-0 and so is everybody else."

It was due to Salem's dominance in recent years that Canton has failed to win a district title, but the Rocks offer formidable opposition once again.

"WE FELT ALL along we'd have a chance to play Canton again," Salem coach Fred Thomann said.

"We had hoped to play them in the conference championship, but we can't worry about what's happened. We look forward to playing against a very fine Canton team."

Regardless, it has been another successful year for the Rocks, whom some figured would be in a down year after losing a wealth of talent to graduation.

"I'm sure we performed better than a lot of people expected," Thomann said. "Some coaches figured there was an opportunity to come out and do some damage, because Salem lost all its players.

"We prepared very well and had a ton of success. It was gratifying for me, but more gratifying for the players involved. It says a lot about the girls in our program."

The Chiefs were considered a team to watch based on their combination of experience and talent. And they have lived up to expectations, losing only to Catholic League champion Birmingham Marian and holding down the No. 5 ranking in Class A at the end of the regular season.

"WE NOT ONLY have a veteran group but an intelligent, hard-working group that has the ability to solve problems on the court on its own," Neu said.

The Chiefs rolled through the league playoffs and appear to be at the top of their game. The return of junior Stacey Thompson, who missed 11 games with a back injury, provided a boost in the WLAA final in which she scored a game-high 15 points.

"Our goal in every game was to improve from Game 1 to Game 20," said Neu, assuring there would be no letdown for the Chiefs after winning the WLAA crown.

"Our goal was to get ready for (the state tournament). There won't be any loss of concentration. It's time to play."

Center Susan Ferko, a 5-foot-11 junior, is Canton's leading scorer with a 16-point average. She and senior Candi Jones are the top rebounders with nine a game.

The Chiefs are a balanced team without any dominating players, though senior guard Michelle Fortier has played at a level that won her a scholarship to Western Michigan.

FORTIER AND Amanda Bell average 10 points and Jones eight. Fortier and senior Jenny Russell give Canton one of the best guard tandems around.

Fortier also averages ~~six~~ assists and three steals, and Russell's role is to spearhead the defense and get the ball to the scorers.

"There are no stats that can measure Jenny's contributions," Neu said. "She would probably lead us in what we call the effort area. She's forever diving for loose balls."

Salem had just two players back from its Class A semifinalist ballclub, but one, senior guard Jill Estey, is a Miss Basketball candidate and the player who provided continuity in the transition to a younger, restructured team.

Estey is averaging 16.3 points, nearly 10 assists and five steals, and Teri King, the other holdover, turned in a good senior year, averaging nine points and eight rebounds.

But '88 has seen Thomann do a masterful coaching job, molding his veterans and newcomers into another winning outfit.

Wendy Bailey and Lydia White have shared time in the post, with Bailey (7½ points) providing more offense and White (10-plus rebounds) more board strength. Sarah Ruete has helped with the scoring, also averaging 7½ points.

"We've really been a team of players," Thomann said. "It's been a different player or group of players each night, while being led by the two seniors. For us, it's just been a delightful season."

Scribe beefs up for task of assessing area teams

By Brad Emons

Brad Emons

THE HECK WITH those vegetarians.

If Cybill Shepherd thinks it's OK to eat beef, who should argue?

It may sound a little raw, but tonight the girls basketball season gets into the meat of things.

State district play begins in earnest this weekend for over 700 teams across Michigan trying to win coveted spots to the tournament finals, Dec. 9-10 at Grand Valley State.

Who is a cut above the rest?

It's it going to be a lean year for area teams?

Let's throw a little salt and tenderizer on the the grill to see how things will taste the next three weeks.

PRIME RIB

Plymouth Canton (19-1): The Chiefs have a major hurdle to clear Saturday against neighbor Plymouth Salem at the Northville district. But it should be clear sailing all the way to the Class A quarterfinals if the Chiefs get past the Rocks. Junior center Susan Ferko must provide strong inside play and a thin bench must answer the challenge. Put a little A-1 sauce on this club.

FILET MIGNON

Livonia Ladywood (13-6): The Blazers have been up and down all season, but a tough schedule and a weak district (Southfield-Lathrup) should be enough to earn a spot in the Southfield regional, which is up for grabs. Senior guard Yvonne Barnett is the key.

Farmington Hills Mercy (8-12): The record is very deceiving as the Marlins have played one of the toughest schedules around. The Walled Lake Central district is winable, but the regional at Berkley is a different story. Waiting in the wings is Catholic League champion Birmingham Marian.

Wayne Memorial (17-3): One of the area's most improved teams, the Zebras will host their own district, which should help them immensely. A lopsided loss to Trenton last week can't help Wayne's confidence. The Zebras will have to hit on all cylinders to get into the Southfield regional where they will most likely meet Taylor Center, a team they beat early in the season.

TOP SIRLOIN

Plymouth Salem (15-5): This could be the Rocks' shortest run ever. Coach Fred Thomann's team is capable of pulling off the upset over Canton, but they've been struggling of late. Playing on a neutral floor (Northville) will help. Did Salem reach its peak too early?

RIBEYE

North Farmington (12-8): If the Raiders hit their shots, they could pull off an upset in the Walled Lake Central district. North opens tonight against host Central, which turned back the Raiders 60-54 only four days earlier in the third place game in the Western Lakes Activities Association playoffs. North is capable.

Livonia Franklin (13-7): The Patriots have played the better teams tough down the stretch, but open Friday against host Wayne. Coach Dan Freeman's team, however, lacks tournament experience. But a victory over Wayne could land Franklin a district crown.

Garden City (11-9): This team plays well at home, but how about on the road? Kim Falkowski is a fierce rebounder and guard Kim Reith is capable of getting hot. A lot depends on the supporting cast.

Redford Bishop Borgess (8-8): The Spartans, now in Class B, have as good a chance as anybody of advancing through the district. They could meet formidable Oak Park in the district final. Injuries have plagued the Spartans in what looked to be a promising season. Playing in the Catholic League's tough Central Division should help coach Mike Resmer's club.

CHOPPED STEAK

Westland Glenn (8-12): The Rockets open district play against Garden City in what should be a tossup. Coach Pat Bennett's team has not done well against the area's better clubs, but the talent is there to make a run at the Wayne district crown.

GROUND CHUCK

Redford Temple Christian (15-4): The Patriots have enjoyed a good season, but must get through by tough Wyandotte Mount Carmel in a first-round Class D district test. Mount Carmel is also the host. The odds are against it, but you never know with the Cannon sisters, Mandy and Rachael, if they're loaded with ammunition.

Livonia Churchill (7-13): Coach Dave Van Wagoner has worked wonders with this team. The Chargers drew a first-round bye and have already beaten Garden City. Stranger things have happened.

Redford Union (9-11): The Panthers have built a near .500 record playing a lot of patsies, but beating host Southfield in a first-round district game is a strong possibility. Winning the district is not.

CHOPPED LIVER

Lutheran Westland (8-12): The Warriors, who play the winner of Redford Temple and Wyandotte Mount Carmel, rely on sophomore Stephanie Locke to show the way. It appears the Warriors will be without the key after one night of district play.

Livonia Stevenson (4-16): Don't let the Spartans' modest season-ending three-game winning streak fool you. It took Stevenson 15 games to win a ballgame only after coach Chuck Hebestreit called up some reserves. A bye won't help the Spartans.

Farmington (6-14): Things didn't bode well for the Falcons, who were beaten thoroughly last week by Stevenson. Farmington is history tonight against Mercy.

Redford Thurston (5-14): The Eagles are a young team under first-year coach Dave Mann. It may take a few years for these young players to hatch. But give Mann an "A" for teaching hard-nosed defense. Better luck next year.

Redford St. Agatha (1-16): The Aggies are sky high after snapping their 32-game losing streak. They could win one or two at the Southfield Christian district, but state-ranked Detroit Country Day should breeze to the title.

Livonia Clarenceville (4-15): Kari Watson and Kelly Anspach have been a two-man team most of the year. It takes five or more to make a run.

Farmington Harrison (0-20): The Hawks showed promise last year, snapping their their 99-game losing streak. It's been a long and hard season again. What else can you say?

See tournament pairings.

QB duel key in 'A' semifinal

By Brad Emons
staff writer

It's high school football's version of "Dueling Banjos."

Which quarterback will pick apart the opposing defense with more regularity and play a victory tune en route to the Class A finals at the Pontiac Silverdome?

Saturday's state semifinal battle of the unbeatens at Westland John Glenn (kickoff 1:30 p.m.) pits a pair of outstanding signal callers in Redford Catholic Central's Scott Hauncher and Utica Eisenhower's Joel Youngblood.

Hauncher, a 6-foot-4, 190-pound senior, is described by Eisenhower coach Bob Lantzy as "a guy who gets the job done."

"When he passes, he's very accurate," said the Eisenhower coach. "He fits their power-type game perfectly. He doesn't have to do it all because they have others they can go to. They don't have a weak spot at all on offense."

Hauncher hasn't put big numbers on the board, but he is by far the most successful throwing quarterback Tom Mach has had in his 12 years as coach.

"WE'VE NEVER thrown for over 1,000 yards since I've been here," chuckles Mach, who is noted for his conservative offensive approach. "But with Scott he puts us in the position to run and throw. He gives us an advantage."

Through 11 games, Hauncher has completed 53 percent of his passes (76-of-142 for 1,076 yards). Last week, during the first half against Westland John Glenn in the Region III championship, Hauncher completed 8 of 10 for 104 yards and two touchdowns en route to a 21-6 victory.

Mach said that last year's playoff experience helped Hauncher immensely.

"He started 13 games last year when most kids got in only nine," said the CC coach. "And once the playoffs started, he started coming into his own. It helped his confidence and he's gotten better each game.

"This year we have good receivers and everything seems to be jelling. We seem to have the key elements. We've got more than one person that can catch and run."

Hauncher, a Plymouth native, leads by example. He carries a 4.2 grade-point average. His conduct on and off the field is exemplary.

"HE'S SMART and intelligent," Mach said. "He does a great job of leading. He has great huddle control. He's a great help when things get tough and tense. He just takes control. The team respects him. When he speaks, the team listens."

On the other side is Youngblood, a Terry Bradshaw-type who can strike fear in the opposition.

"Our scouts say he's the best quarterback they've seen all year," said Mach of the 6-1, 175-pound senior. "He's a rollout type. He runs the bootleg and has a strong arm. He can hit the out-pass from hashmark to hashmark.

"He can hurt you in a lot of ways. He's got quick feet and he's heady."

Youngblood is a two-year starter and only one of two Eisenhower players who go both ways, offensively and defensively. (He also doubles as a defensive back.)

"Joel is very versatile," Lantzy said. "We don't run him on the option, but he's a scrambler. He's a real competitor, very outgoing and well-liked. He's a 'B' student."

THIS SEASON, Youngblood has thrown for 1,560 yards (104-for-161) and 18 touchdowns. He's been intercepted seven times.

"Joel has a lot of receivers he can go to," Lantzy said. "We have four guys with at least 20 catches or more."

But even with Youngblood, Lantzy said the Eagles are not really a big-play team.

"We're more of a ball-control offense," he said. "We have one back that's gone for over 1,000 yards (Mike Nezich) and another that's around 600. We like to control the ball if we can."

But Lantzy knows CC can control the ball effectively, too.

"They are big offensively," said the Eisenhower coach. "That offensive line is huge by most high school standards. They're able to power you, especially No. 70, the right tackle (Jack Dankert). And with No. 77 (Rod Vernier), they can handle you on that side of the line and push you around."

Lantzy does not see a defensive struggle developing even though both sides pride themselves on defense. He said both teams have a hard-hitting attack.

"I NEVER GO into any game and expect it to be low scoring," he said. "I think there will be some scoring, but because of the elements, you never know. It could be rainy, wet and windy and that could affect things."

Despite the adverse weather conditions over the past few weeks, it's amazing that Hauncher and Youngblood have continued to impress.

Each has delivered in his own way.

John Herrington's teaching specialty is the American Civil War. But he knows his football history, too.

Herrington, who doubles as the Harrison High School varsity football coach, was conducting class for members of the media last Saturday afternoon.

The Hawks had just polished off Riverview 35-0 in the state playoffs and began looking ahead to their game against Auburn Hills Avondale. Kickoff for the Class B semifinal is slated for 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Flint Atwood Stadium.

Herrington said the schools have met twice before on the gridiron, and each time Harrison won and subsequently went on to capture state championships.

"If we beat Avondale, maybe that's a good sign," he said.

IN THE FINAL game of the regular seasons, Harrison defeated the Rhinos 37-0 in 1981 and 9-0 in 1982. The Hawks kept on rolling in the post-season, taking Class B honors the first year and Class A the next.

Those are the only years Harrison has won it all, but the Hawks can earn a shot at No. 3 and a fifth appearance in the finals with a victory Saturday. The Harrison-Avondale winner plays either St. Joseph or Frankenmuth at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 26, in the Pontiac Silverdome.

"This is the hardest game to win in the whole tournament," Herrington said. "The most pressure is in the semifinals, because you want to get to the Dome.

"We've lost it twice, and it's the worst feeling in the world when you know you're that close to getting to the Dome."

The 10th-ranked Rhinos, also 11-0, entered post-season play as an underdog to Marysville, but Avondale upset the Vikings 6-0. They became the Cinderella team of the tournament by beating Mount Morris 27-13 last Friday night in Atwood.

Throughout the regular season, it appeared the Hawks and Marysville, by now perennial playoff rivals, would meet for a third straight year. The Vikings beat Harrison 22-6 two years ago, and the Hawks won the rematch 35-20 last year.

"WE THOUGHT Marysville might be in there, but we knew Avondale had done well against them last year," Herrington said. "So it was not as big a surprise to me as it might have been to some people.

"Now we're playing a team that's better than Marysville, so that makes it even harder."

Of particular concern was Avondale's success at shutting down a potent Mount Morris passing attack, which happens to be Harrison's main offensive weapon, too.

The Rhinos gave up a 41-yard touchdown pass on the first play of the game, but they stopped the Panthers after that and rallied for a 21-7 halftime lead.

"Mount Morris only threw the ball, and Avondale was able to sit back and defend the pass," Herrington said. "Against Avondale, we'll have to be balanced. So we're going to run (quarterback) Mill (Coleman) left or right."

Herrington wasn't understating Coleman's importance as a runner, either. He broke up a tough Riverview defense when he scrambled and rushed for 158 yards and two TDs.

BECAUSE OF THAT, the Hawks were able to keep the Pirates honest and mix in the pass. Coleman also threw for 124 yards and two TDs, bringing his respective season totals to 1,695 and 24. He has completed 59 percent of his passes (83 of 141).

Coleman's big day as a ball carrier also made him Harrison's leading rusher. He has 432 yards and seven TDs on 48 attempts.

Tailback Joe George, who is second with 321 yards and seven TDs, left the Riverview game with a mild concussion but is expected to play Saturday and split time with Matt Conley again.

In contrast to Avondale's success at defensing Mount Morris, Coleman had one of his finest games in Atwood Stadium a year ago when the Hawks rallied from a 20-7 deficit to beat Marysville.

He was 15-of-22 passing that afternoon for 258 yards and two TDs, and he did the same as he did against Riverview, leading the Hawks with 94 yards and one TD rushing.

"We'd like to establish the run, so they can't just sit back there against the pass," Herrington said, "and we have to control their inside linebackers, who are good, strong defensive players."

MARK HARPER (6-0, 205) and Rod Fakhoury (5-10, 185) are vital to Avondale's 4-3 defense, and Brad Davis, who returned an interception 36 yards for a TD against the Panthers, spearheads the secondary.

Sophomore tackle Dedrick Johnson (6-1, 190) developed into a strong player as the season progressed, and 6-foot-2, 260-pound tackle Tate Andersen gives the Rhinos a big man in the middle.

Harrison's leading receiver, Bryan Wauldron, needs just 16 yards to set a school record for career pass receiving yards. In two years, he has 69 catches for 1,643 yards, bringing him within 15 of Brian Smolinski's mark of 1,658 set in 1984-85. The latter did it with 91 receptions.

The 6-foot-2, 170-pound senior, who also has eight interceptions on defense, has made 40 catches for an amazing 931 yards and has caught 12 of his 18 career TD passes this year.

The record should fall easily since Wauldron is averaging 23.2 yards per catch, as well as 3½ receptions and 84.6 yards per game.

"I think he's had an outstanding year on offense and defense," Herrington said. "I think he's an all-stater — a Dream Team player. I don't think there's a better two-way player in the state."

Stevenson back on top in Class A

By Marty Budner
staff writer

soccer

Livonia Stevenson boys soccer fans have enjoyed a pleasant thought over the past 48 hours: "The state championship trophy is back home."

The Spartans staged a furious second-half rally and clipped stubborn Birmingham Brother Rice, 3-1, in Saturday's Class A state championship game at Bloomfield Hills Andover.

Stevenson now owns three of the past four Class A state-championship trophies, and four titles overall since the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) began sponsoring the tournament in 1982. The Spartans were upset by Southfield in last year's tourney and relinquished the 1987 state title to East Lansing.

But the jubiliant Spartan players, ignoring the light evening mist, took a victory lap around the soggy Andover field after accepting the 1988 championship trophy from MHSAA representative Sue Martin.

"It feels good after last year. I feel good for the seniors," said Stevenson coach Pete Scerri. "I guess we've been kind of lucky over the years and I'm happy for that. But the main thing is that the kids learn how to work hard. If they don't work hard to achieve the goals then you can forget it."

THE SPARTANS worked hard through the first 70 minutes of the game but it was Brother Rice who owned the 1-0 lead.

Speedy Warriors forward LaMarr Peters scored the only first-half goal when he kicked the ball into the left corner of the net at the 17:05 mark. Derek Loosvelt set the goal up with a nice header.

With two minutes left before halftime, Rice missed a glorious opportunity to take a 2-0 advantage. Peters used his speed to beat Spartan goalie Jerry Smolenski to a loose ball. Even though he was at a wide angle, Peters got a kick off which caromed off the post. Rice's Peter Duggan got the rebound but couldn't kick it past a few Spartan defenders.

Peters narrowly missed another chance early in the second half on a turn-around kick which went just wide of the goal. A few minutes later a mix-up between Smolenski and the Spartan defenders almost resulted in a Rice goal.

But the Spartans weathered all those Warrior attacks and took control of the game the best way they know how — on a restart.

Stevenson's Shane Millner hit a perfect corner kick into the Rice net area and senior defender Kurt Will headed the tying goal into the net with 10:45 left in the game.

Just two minutes later, Eric Schwedt, Stevenson's leading scorer, headed the go-ahead goal past startled Rice goalie Pat Trese who had no chance for the save. The game-winning tally was set up on a beautiful cross from junior forward Peter Galea.

"Pete got the ball through on a perfect pass and I was just in the right place at the right time," said Schwedt. "I knew it was going in. On those kind of plays you just try and stick the far post. It was just a great game."

THE SAME DUO hooked up for the game's final goal with under two minutes left to ice the victory. The goal capped a three-goal outburst by Stevenson in the game's final 10 minutes.

"I knew sooner or later it would come for us," said Scerri, whose team finished with an overall 18-0-2 record. "I didn't lose faith in them. I knew we had a good team because we beat Churchill two of the three times we played them this year.

"We were against the wind in the first half and we just wanted to make sure we defended our goal well," he said. "We were hoping for 0-0 halftime score with the thought that we'd play everybody up in the second half. But you can't leave a guy like Peters around the net too long."

It was a disappointing end to a fine season for Rice, which also lost the 1985 state-championship game to Livonia Stevenson. The Warriors (21-3) seemed to be in control throughout most of the game, and, at worst, would be able to force an overtime situation.

But the Spartans had other ideas.

"We know they are a very dangerous team in restart situations," said Rice coach Alex Maderal, who will not be back to coach the Warriors next season. "Our kids overplayed the ball on that corner kick and they played it beautifully.

"I think that goal rattled us a little. We were confident up to that point. Stevenson scored once, then all of a sudden there's penetration on the right wing and they scored again. We didn't have anybody on the cross and that was the game.

"But I have to give Stevenson credit," he said. "They didn't lose their composure and that's why they are the winners they are."

Yes. The state championship trophy will rest in familiar territory for another year.

CC dominates all-area honors

Brad Moore, senior, Farmington: One of coach Jerry Young's top big guns, Moore seemed to have a knack for running well in the big meets.

He placed ninth at Schoolcraft Invitational (16:28.8), second in the Western Lakes meet (16:54), seventh in the regional and 11th in the Class A individual race.

He was one of the big reasons why Farmington repeated as WLAA champions.

Ben Goba, sophomore, Farmington: The 10th grader is only going to improve as his career runs along.

This season, Goba finished 13th at Schoolcraft (16:43), fourth in the WLAA (16:58), sixth in the regional and 12th in the Class A individual race.

He is the future for the Falcons, a perennial area power.

Dave Galvin, junior, Redford CC: Galvin overcame some early-season injuries to become one of the Shamrocks' most dependable runners.

His best finish occurred in the regional at Grosse Pointe where he took 10th with a time of 16:48.

He was 32nd in the Class A team race, 16th in the Catholic League and 15th at the Shrine-Shamrock Invitational.

"Once he regained some strength, he gave us good performances when we needed them the most in the last three big races," said the CC coach.

Jeff Barringer, senior, Farm. Harrison: The 12th grader was Mr. Consistency in 1988.

He finished 30th overall in the Class B individual race, fifth in the WLAA, fourth in the regional and eighth at Schoolcraft. Barringer also set a school and Oakland Community College course record with a time of 16:53.

"He gave us 110 percent at all times," said Harrison coach Jeff Reed. "More importantly, Jeff is a tremendously well-rounded person who is capable of succeeding with whatever he puts his mind to."

Chris Antczak, junior, Redford CC: The good news for Shamrock fans is that Antczak returns.

He was 35th in the Class A team race, seventh in the regional (16:41), 14th at the Catholic League meet and seventh at Holly.

"We knew early in the season that he wasn't the No. 1 runner on the team, but he consistently maintained his third-place position," Magni said. "He was very effective at bridging the gaps.

James Handel, senior, Redford Borgess: A virtual unknown a year ago, Handel made great strides for the Spartans this season.

He finished 23rd in the Class B individual finals, eighth in the regional, 10th in the Catholic League and sixth at Schoolcraft.

His best time of the season was 16.27.

Handel also is an outstanding student, sporting a 3.9 GPA.

PLYMOUTH CANTON had the area's best girls cross country team this year, and the 1988 edition of the All-Observer team reflects that.

The Chiefs placed four runners on the 10-member first team and another three on the second unit.

Canton breezed to its second straight Western Lakes Activities Association championship and finished ninth in the Class A meet.

The Chiefs also were second in the state's most competitive regional, taking a back seat only to eventual state champion Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Canton is represented on the elite squad by repeat selections Lori Penland and Cindy Spessard, as well as Missy Jasnowski and Kris Marquard.

Karen Kuphal of Livonia Stevenson and Michelle Gayney of Redford Bishop Borgess also appear on the Observerland honor roll again. Farmington's Jennifer Kiel, a second-teamer a year ago, moves up to the No. 1 unit.

Redford Union's future looks bright following a 19th-place finish in the Class A meet. The Panthers were led by a pair of underclassmen — sophomore Kelly Murray and freshman Tracey James — both of whom made the all-area team.

Coach of the Year honors go to Canton coach George Przygodski, who guided the Chiefs to another successful season, which saw Canton improve upon its 11th-place standing in the state a year ago.

Presenting the 1988 all-area girls cross country team:

Lisa Rives, junior, N. Farmington: She is the first girl from her school to earn all-state honors in cross country, finishing sixth in the Class A individual race (19:47).

Rives also set a school record (19:51) for the Oakland Community College course. She ran her best time of 19:30 in the WLAA championships in which she was second.

In addition, Rives was third in the regional, second in the Walled Lake Western Invitational, third at West Bloomfield, fourth at Redford Union and fourth in Oakland County.

"Lisa is a very hard worker," coach Bill Pinnell said. "During the summer, she established a good distance base, and she has seen her efforts pay off.

"Her dedication has allowed her to have an excellent season in which she has proven she is a front runner."

Jennifer Kiel, junior, Farmington: She also was named an all-stater after placing fifth in the Class A individual meet (19:48).

Kiel ran her best time of 19:32 in a dual meet with Walled Lake Central. The school-record holder was third in the league, third in the county and fourth in the regional.

"Jennifer is a dedicated and determined athlete," coach John Barrett said. "She sets goals and works hard to achieve them.

"She inspires her fellow team members by her attitude and perseverance. She is also an honor student and very coachable runner."

Lori Penland, junior Canton: She was consistently one of the team's top runners in every meet. She ran a season-best of 20:23 at Cass Benton Park and was 34th in the Class A team race.

Penland was fifth in the WLAA, sixth at Ypsilanti, seventh at RU and 15th in the regional.

"Lori adds a lot to our team with her vibrant and outgoing personality," coach George Przygodski said.

"Lori is a very talented athlete who has developed into an outstanding athlete by working hard both during the season and over the past summer."

Cindy Spessard, senior, Canton: She was the other team leader, in terms of highest finishes, along with Penland and had her best race when she was second in the Ypsilanti Invitational.

Spessard was fourth in the league, sixth at Schoolcraft, 13th in the regional and 37th in the Class A team race. She also ran her best time (20:30) as Cass Benton.

"Cindy has been an outstanding performer for the last three years," Przygodski said. "Cindy is a silent leader on our team who leads by example. She is a very dedicated and hard-working student/athlete."

Michelle Gayney, senior, Bishop Borgess: She makes her third appearance as a member of the All-Observer first team. Gayney, who has been an All-Catholic runner for four years and All-City selection the last three, was an Observer second-team pick her freshman year.

She was undefeated in dual meets this year and posted a season-best time of 19:52. Gayney won the Spartan and Eastern Michigan invitationals.

She also was second in the league meet, third in the regional and Operation Friendship races, third at Schoolcraft, fourth at Gabriel Richard and fifth at West Bloomfield. Gayney competed in the state finals all four years, placing 20th in Class B as a senior.

"Michelle has proven to be one of the best runners in the area the last four years," coach John McGreevy said.

"She has established herself as the best distance runner to run at Bishop Borgess. She has been a joy to coach."

Farmington: Angie Martin.

Karen Kuphal, senior, Stevenson: She has been honored as the most valuable athlete on her team the last three years — a mark of her consistency, according to coach Paul Holmberg.

Kuphal, who was a member of the all-area second team two years ago, was first in the Livonia city meet, second at Wayne Memorial, fourth at Schoolcraft, fifth at Ypsilanti and 11th in the WLAA. She also ran her best time of 20:41 at Cass Benton.

Kris Marquard, senior, Canton: Marquard played basketball until this year when she switched to cross country and another successful program, becoming a team leader in terms of spirit and performance.

Canton's team captain was seventh in the league, eighth at Schoolcraft where she ran her best time of 20:26, ninth at Ypsilanti and 14th at RU. She finished 29th in the regional and 72nd in the Class A team race.

"Kris is an outstanding athlete and leader," Przygodski said. "Kris is a very strong runner who competes best in high pressure situations."

Missy Jasnowski, junior, Canton: Runners such as Jasnowski promise to keep the Chiefs among the area's best teams when she returns for her high school finale next fall.

She saved her best for last, posting her best time of 20:56 in the Class A team race at Flint's Brookwood Golf Course. She was 55th in the state.

Jasnowski also was seventh at Ypsilanti, 10th in the league, 13th at Schoolcraft and 27th in the regional.

"Missy has worked very hard to develop her running ability," Przygodski said. "She has been a consistent performer all year.

"Missy is an intense competitor who runs particularly well in big races."

Kelly Murray, sophomore, Redford Union: Murray was a key to RU's top-20 showing in Class A, placing 39th in the team race.

She was third in the Division II race at Ann Arbor Pioneer earlier in the year, fourth in the regional, fifth at Walled Lake, 10th in the Northwest Suburban League and 36th at RU.

"Kelly is an excellent competitor," coach Bob Ouellette said. "She races to win and likes to beat people. Her goal is to be No. 1. She will also be an excellent 800-meter runner in track."

Tracey James, freshman, Redford Union: In her first year of high school competition, James accomplished some impressive feats.

She was the first-place runner at Ann Arbor and Walled Lake, fifth in the regional, seventh in the league and 12th at RU. She capped the season by finishing 44th in the Class A team competition.

"Tracey improved a great deal during the season," Ouellette said. "As her confidence grew, she took over as our No. 1 runner.

"With added experience, she can become an all-state caliber runner. She has not realized her potential. She's a freshman with true promise."

S'craft headed for nationals

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

volleyball

SC, ranked third in the NJCAA with a 40-4 record, begins its trek in the national tournament with a pool-play match at 11 a.m. Monday against sixth-ranked Ricks (Idaho) CC.

The streak ended for Schoolcraft College's womens volleyball team. Not that it mattered. The Lady Ocelots don't mind trading a streak for a trip to Miami and a berth in the 16-team NJCAA tournament.

The streak that came to a close was SC's consecutive home games won. Not once this season had the Lady Ocelots lost even a game at home.

Southwestern CC halted that in the second game of Saturday's match between the tournament's two unbeaten teams, winning by a 15-9 margin. Unfortunately for SWCC, SC won three other games — 15-4, 16-14, 15-12.

It was a key moment in the double-elimination tournament. The loser had to play another match immediately against Lake Michigan CC and win, then come back and beat the team they lost to previously twice to capture the tournament.

That proved too tall an order for SWCC, which did beat Lake Michigan but lost to SC in the final 15-11, 15-2, 15-8.

"We had control of the match, and that was something we did not want to give up," said SC coach Tom Teeters.

CHRIS PACIERO, a sophomore from Livonia Churchill, made certain SC stayed in command in the first SWCC match. A 5-foot-4 setter, Paciero provided the biggest hit of the day for the Lady Ocelots with a kill from the back court in game No. 3. Her spike trimmed SWCC's lead to 14-11. She then served five-straight points to give her team a 16-14 victory.

That type of performance was common for SC. "We played out of our minds," said Teeters. "It's the best we've played all year."

In the first win over SWCC, Nikki Stubbs had 16 kills and Marla Evans, Sarah Heddle and Paciero each had 12. Stubbs also had 12 digs, two service aces and two block assists; Evans had three aces and 13 digs; Heddle had 10 digs and three block assists; Paciero had 14 digs, one solo block and one block assist; and Alisha Love had 10 aces and 16 digs.

IN THE SECOND win, Stubbs had 11 kills and 10 digs; Heddle had 11 kills and three block assists; Evans had six kills, one solo block and one block assist; JoAnn Kolnitys had 18 digs, one solo and two block assists; Paciero had four aces and 12 digs; and Love had four aces and 11 digs.

Stubbs, Evans, Paciero, Love and Heddle were all named to the all-Eastern Conference team. Kolnitys was honorable mention.

SC, ranked third in the NJCAA with a 40-4 record, begins its trek in the national tournament with a pool-play match at 11 a.m. Monday against sixth-ranked Ricks (Idaho) CC. Other teams in the Lady Ocelots pool are Western Nebraska (ranked 11th) and Delaware Tech (14th).

The top two teams in each pool will advance to the double-elimination, best-three-of-five-games round, which begins Tuesday. Final matches will be played Wednesday.

Teeters, whose team is making its third trip to the NJCAA finals in four years, was certain of one thing: "I'm sure we're going to enjoy ourselves — that's my prediction."

● SPORTS SALE

Canton Parks and Recreation Department will have its Fourth Annual Used Sports Equipment Sale Saturday, Dec. 3.

The public can bring its sale items to the Canton Township Administration Building Thursday, Dec. 1, between 6 and 9 p.m., to be priced and tagged. The seller sets the price and keeps all but 15 percent of the money, which goes to the recreation department.

Volunteers will be on hand to do the selling, so the seller need not be present. Money can be collected or unsold items reclaimed Saturday, Dec. 3, 2-3 p.m. Call Bob Dates at 397-5110 for information.

● SPORTS COLLECTORS

The third annual Plymouth-In-The-Fall Sports Collectors Convention will take place the weekend of Nov. 25-27 at the Plymouth Hilton.

The show attracts nationally known baseball card and sports memorabilia dealers to sell, buy and trade their wares. The cost is $3 per day and $7 for a weekend pass.

New York Yankee outfielder Dave Winfield and Hall of Famers Willie Stargell and Juan Marichal will be on hand to sign autographs.

● MEN'S RACQUETBALL

A men's racquetball league, sponsored by the Canton Parks and Recreation Department, starts Wednesday, Nov. 30, at Rose Shores of Canton.

The fee is $82 per person for 13 weeks. Court times are 7:30 and 8 p.m. The league is divided into divisions based upon player ability.

An organizational meeting will take place the first night of league play. Call 397-5110 for information.

Guards key Ocelot victory

basketball

The guards would be the difference, Schoolcraft College women's basketball coach Jack Grenan predicted before the season. In the Lady Ocelots' opener at Kalamazoo Valley CC Friday, they were just that in a 96-57 romp.

Tracy Osborne, one of six guards Grenan says he will employ in a full-game, full-court pressing attack, set the tone early for SC. Osborne connected on a pair of three-pointers on her team's first two possessions, and the rout was on.

Michelle Dyksinski took control inside for the Lady Ocelots, scoring 18 points on nine-of-11 floor shooting, grabbing 10 rebounds and making five steals — all in the first half. Dyksinski hurt her knee (not seriously) and sat out the second half.

It hardly mattered. The Lady Ocelots were up 52-31 at the break, and committed just four second-half turnovers.

Joining Dyksinski in double-figures in scoring were Darlene Bazner (17 points), Ann Hardy and Barb Krug (14 each — Krug also had 13 rebounds) and Denise Wendt (10 points).

"I know with those guards, we're going to have to go full-court," said Grenan. "I've got to play them all, so we'll pressure the whole game."

SC plays at Lakeland (Ohio) CC Friday.

THE SC MEN didn't fare as well. An inexperienced group of 13 freshmen, they showed it in losing twice at the Macomb CC Tip-Off.

On Friday, Kellogg CC defeated the Ocelots 107-101, thanks to six players in double-figures in scoring — led by Lamont Johnson's 22 points. But Kellogg got plenty of help.

SC made 33 turnovers, surrendered 15 offensive rebounds (the Ocelots were outrebounded 35-25) and played too loose defensively. "We turned it over any way and every way possible," coach Dave Bogataj said.

Dameon Smith came off the bench to score 18 points and grab eight rebounds for SC. Ed Hudson added 15 points and Mark Koronka and John Moran had 12 apiece.

ON SATURDAY against Detroit Jordan, the Ocelots played much better but still got killed on the boards (37-23, including 17 offensive rebounds) and failed to sustain their intensity. The result: a 102-82 hammering.

With 7:10 left in the game, SC led 78-75. But Jordan coach Rocky Watkins, who coached at SC three years ago, switched from a full-court press to a half-court trap. The effect was immediate; Jordan went on a 19-0 run over the next six minutes.

"We just missed our shots," said Bogataj. "The kids did what they were supposed to do (against the half-court trap), but they just missed their shots."

Mike Simpson, a former Ocelot, did most of the damage for Jordan with 31 points, including 10 in the 19-0 run. David Talley added 20.

Koronka's 23 points and eight boards topped SC. Joe Miskovich added 19 and Hudson had 18.

The Ocelots play in the Kellogg CC Classic this weekend. They meet Grand Rapids JC Friday and have a rematch with Kellogg Saturday.

The Trane XL 90 gas furnace is up to 95% efficient!

You can really save on energy use with the Trane XL90 gas furnace. It's a super efficient furnace...up to 95% efficient. If your present furnace is over ten years old, chances are it's only 60-65% efficient. Which means as much as 40% of the heat is going up the flue, not into your home. So replacing your furnace with the XL90 can make a big difference on the amount you spend for heating.

The Trane XL90 gas furnace is loaded with quality features...a hot surface ignitor instead of an old fashioned pilot light, and a unique 2-speed inducer motor for quiet operation.

One of the twin porches was added, replacing a cement one, making the 1843 Royal Aldrich House of Farmington Hills true to its original Greek Revival architecture.

Lynn Wilsher and Steve Olson met through First Congregational Church in Bloomfield Hills and immediately shared an interest in antiques.

Restoration

Original beauty finally uncovered

By C.L. Rugenstein
special writer

Turning into the gravel drive of the restored Royal Aldrich House in Farmington Hills is like time-tripping back to the 1850s.

The visitor alights from a gas-powered car to be greeted by six noisy geese and three curious sheep in their pens. A carriage house, original to the property and still in use, seems to await its owners' return in a one-horse powered buggy. The house and yard look much as they must have 150 years ago when they were new, thanks to the efforts of owners Stephen Olson and Lynn Wilsher.

"Our whole philosophy has been to take it back as close to the original as possible," Olson said. "It turned out to be just about the perfect project because there was so much we would be the first to discover."

To get back to the original though, the husband and wife team had their work cut out for them. The Greek Revival style house had never been totally empty since it was built in 1843. But former owners had left their marks in the form of "improvements" over the years: a fireplace and chimney in the 1950s, a kitchen and bath addition and eight layers of wall paper.

"WE HAD TO TEAR OUT two layers of floor boards to get down to the original floor," Olson said as he pointed out the worn wooden floors in the Sunday parlor. The boards were covered in places by equally well-used oriental carpets, and part of the couple's collection of antique furniture.

They also dispensed with a cement porch on one side of the house and replaced it with a wooden one to match the porch on the other. The twin porches, opening into one-story rooms on either side of the central two-story main building, are typical of Greek Revival architecture as are the graceful, white columns on the porches.

One of Olson's discoveries was the original gray color of the moldings. He found it in one of those old-house oddities — a strange little, three-shelf cabinet in the upper bedroom, seemingly put in in an illogical place.

The house was originally heated by three free-standing wood-burning stoves. Olson pointed out the patch in the wall where the stove pipe had come through, angling down right in front of the cabinet.

Work on the house led to curiosity about the owners' history, and more discoveries. They found by researching probate records that the house was built by Royal Aldrich, a settler from Farmington, N. Y. Aldrich followed by several years the first wave of settlers from Farmington, but within two years of arriving had built the house.

He also died without a will, leaving a wife, three young children and a probate court record of his belongings and farmyard stock for future owner-researchers like Olson.

"The family held onto the property for another 20 years," Olson said, "But one thing the records didn't tell that I'd like to know is what he died of. He was only 40 years old at the time."

ONE OF THE FIRST THINGS Olson did when he moved to Farmington in 1983 was to join the Historical Society. He's since become president, and participated in the old house heritage tours sponsored by the group. There were no tours this year, however.

"It's a lot of work to put together a tour like that," he said, "People are not always interested in showing their houses." He said there are guides to train, publicity, printing and sale of tickets, as well as transportation to be arranged to the houses scattered through Farmington and Farmington Hills adding, "We'll probably have tours again in another year or so."

Another of the couple's discoveries has been how time-consuming restoration work can be. Perseverance is a must.

"It seems like any job will take three to four times longer than you think it will. Something will break or you run out of plaster." Olson said. "You have to have a sense of humor."

Dealing with geese also takes a sense of humor.

"They came with the house," Olson said, "Three geese and one sheep."

The couple acquired two more sheep when a neighbor presented them with a pregnant ewe, then they added three hatchling geese.

The animals are self-sufficient, even in winter Olson said. They live off the land, although Olson supplements with hay and water.

About the irascible geese Olson said, "They're weird. We can't tell if they're being affectionate or mad at us when they bite. They're the most ornery animal you'll ever meet, but I guess that's part of their charm."

And they in turn are part of the charm of the old farmhouse Olson and Wilsher have restored "as close to the original as possible."

The only room which the couple may modernize is the kitchen neatly hidden behind the folding doors. Collecting antiques is a special pleasure they share.

Helping autistic kids is a work of art

ART EMANUELE

Art is used by preschool teacher's aide Barbara O'Neill to help autistic youngsters communicate their feelings. Here, she gets some help from one of the youngsters in showing off a unit book of children's art that has proven so successful.

By Leonard Poger
staff writer

BARBARA O'Neill is using her creative and artistic background and skills to help a special group of handicapped preschoolers communicate and relate to others.

O'Neill spends most of her spare time creating imaginative jewelry designs earrings, and pen and ink drawings.

But during the day, she is a teacher's aide working with autistic preschoolers — one of the hardest group of handicapped children to deal with.

Autistic persons are those who are unable to communicate or relate to others.

"Art is a good form of communication for the children," said O'Neill, who works at the Wayne County-funded Burger Center for autistic children and adults in Garden City. While the county provides the money, the center is run by the Garden City Public Schools.

With 240 students, the center is the largest autistic program in the country and has won several national awards for its programming.

O'Neill, 31, described how she used her art skills to help one of her preschoolers.

"THE YOUNGSTER was a 4-year-old boy who frequently laid on the floor and kicked and screamed," she said. "There was no language."

Now the boy has vastly improved — mainly with the help of a unit book that is produced by children each month and features plenty of art work.

The unit books are a collection of materials maintained by the students.

O'Neill draws the pictures and makes the cutouts.

"The children learn many things from the unit books," O'Neill said, citing colors, textures, and feelings as three examples.

In the unit books, children make entries every day, she said.

The art work gives the children a form of leisure activity and helps them feel good about themselves, she said.

"The art work they do is also a reward for them.

Since most autistic youngsters don't communicate verbally, the art work they did is a good form of communication, O'Neill said.

Besides her using art skills to help children communicate and progress, O'Neill created a logo for Burger Center T-shirts.

Last May, she also sold her creations at a benefit at the Attic Theater, held to raise money for the center.

O'NEILL, WHO works with preschool teacher Carol Shepard, got into the autistic program 11 years ago when it located in a Downriver school.

"I was taking art classes at Henry Ford Community College when my sister, Mary, a teacher in the autistic program, asked me to work as a teacher's aide for the summer."

Barbara accepted the position, but became quickly frustrated "because the children couldn't comprehend art.

"They miss so much we take for granted," she said, looking back on her first experience with autistic students.

But she remembered what her sister told her about working with autistic children.

"Your sympathy won't help them," Mary told her. "Once you get over that, then you can start teaching."

The young O'Neill was also reminded by her sister, now a co-principal at Burger Center, that Barbara can teach the youngsters how to appreciate art and share it with them.

"Teach them what they are missing," Mary told Barbara.

Since then, Barbara said, "I have shared my art with the children."

And it's not all a one-way street.

"THERE'S SO much I get back from the children in seeing them growing," she said.

O'Neill also commented that she has the "perfect" professional situation in that she loves being a teacher's aid and working after school pursuing her art career.

With seeing the children grow and progress, "I have the best of both worlds," O'Neill said.

Her goal is to give her students an appreciation of art, specifically using the monthly unit books.

"Children respond well to art and music," she said. "And there are so few books for autistic children."

Because of that scarcity of books, O'Neill and Shepard create their own unit books for their students.

O'Neill got into the art field because of teachers she had at Fordson High School in Dearborn.

She remembers her parents giving a kiln and casting machine, used for creating jewelry as a high school graduation gift.

O'Neill used to take part in art shows but now enjoys working one-to-one with persons in creating jewelry.

Among her customers are Burger Center teachers or employees, of which one asked her to design a ring for her upcoming wedding.

"My designs are based on what interests me," she said. "I went through an Oriental stage. Now I'm in the metaphysical stage, dealing with abstracts."

On her pen and ink drawings, O'Neill has a simple starting technique.

"I begin with a cross, add a pyramid and then go from there," she said.

O'NEILL TALKED excitedly about her new "studio," the second floor of ta two-flat in Dearborn she bought this summer. Before, she worked mainly out of a basement without window light.

Looking to the future, O'Neill admitted even if she won a Michigan Lotto jackpot, "I'm torn" between her school position or expanding her art career.

But she added that art "is becoming more and more important and filling up my life."

O'Neill can be contacted at 584-5349.

'Cats' meow

Braun books land on their feet

Mona Grigg

THE LAST time I asked our local book store staff to recommend books, Lilian Jackson Braun's "The Cat Who . . ." series came up again and again. Now, those of you who might have known (or known of) Braun when she was the Good Living section editor at the Detroit Free Press (she retired in 1979) might guess that there was some local loyalty involved in those recommendations. Not so. The book people I interviewed weren't even aware of her local ties. They just got a kick out of her books.

"The Cat Who Knew Shakespeare" is the latest in the paperback series published by Jove. Joe has published eight titles in the "Cat" series, accounting for 1,350,000 copies in print, and sales of some 4,000 per month.

In the last two years they published "The Cat Who Played Brahms," "The Cat Who Played Post Office," and a collection of short stories called "The Cat Who Had 14 Tales." Several of the stories were originally published in "Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine," including "The Sing of Madame Phloi," the first of the "Cat" stories written in 1963 by a heartbroken Braun after her own cat, Koko, either fell or was pushed from a 10th floor apartment window.

BRAUN'S SIAMESE protagonists, Koko and Yum Yum, are named for real-life, long-ago counterparts, and while Yum Yum just goes along enjoying the life of a cat, Koko fancies himself a bit of a detective.

Jim Qwilleran, Braun's human protagonist, came along in 1966, when Braun switched from short stories to novels. Qwilleran is a newspaper writer given to writing feature stories, but there any resemblance to the author ends. "He is just about as far from what I am as possible," Braun said of the burly six-foot-two, pipe-smoking, mustachioed, recovered alcoholic.

In each novel, Qwilleran becomes involved in an increasingly complex mystery. He is maddeningly slow at guessing that things are not as they seem, though Koko does everything a cat can do to present him with clues.

IN "THE CAT Who Knew Shakespeare," Koko takes to flipping rare volumes of Shakespeare's works off the shelves to give Qwilleran clues. He sends "Julius Caesar" flying to hint at a conspiracy — then flings out "Macbeth" for good measure. "Hamlet" tells the story of a father who dies suddenly and a mother who remarries too soon — just as it happens in the hamlet of Pickax, where Qwilleran lives in a garage apartment behind the mansion he has inherited. (But that's another story.)

Braun's books are easy reading and great fun, even for non-cat lovers, as their growing popularity indicates. Putnam is coming out soon with "The Cat Who Sniffed Glue," Braun's first hardcover novel in 22 years, and the first of four titles to be published by Putnam. "The Cat Who Went Underground" is due out next April, and "The Cat Who Knew a Cardinal" will be out next fall. "The Cat Who Talked to Ghosts" is scheduled for spring, 1990. Jove will release the paperback editions.

Braun now lives in Bad Axe in the winter and in Caseville in summer. When she's not writing novels, she's working on one-man historical plays for her actor-husband to perform. He also does interpretive readings of her cat stories.

Concerning her age, she said, "Psychologically I am 35, physically I am about 50, chronologically I never discuss it."

THE MICHIGAN Council for the Arts announced its latest series of grants to Michigan artists. Eleven Individual Artists grants were awarded in literature. Grants ranging from $3,000 to $7,000 were awarded to: Jose Levva Garza Jr., Ypsilanti, for poetry/prose and short stories; James Leslie Gustafson, Pontiac, for novel and book-length poem; Rose-marie Johnson, Interlochen, for non-fictional book; Thomas G. Jurek, Ann Arbor, book-length prose; Janet Kauffman, Hudson, short story collection; Ken Mikolowski, Grindstone City, book of poems; Nubia Salaam, Detroit, poems on African-American historical figures; Marc Christopher Sanchez, Detroit, short story collection; Kathleen Stocking, Lake Leelanau, book, "Letters from Leelanau;" Diane Wakoski, East Lansing, book length epic poem; Rayfield Allen Waller, Detroit, book of essays.

Detroit Tigers announcer Ernie Harwell will talk about his book, "Tiger Tales," at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 29 in West Bloomfield Township library, main branch. This event is free, but advance registration is requested. Call 682-2120.

Entertainment includes the Silver Swan Singers of East Lansing. The singing group, taking their name from Orlando Gibbon's madrigal, "The Silver Swan," have delighted audiences with their music and revelry at many celebrations, including the Michigan Renaissance Festival.

Tickets are $27.50 per reveler, with tables of six or 10 reserved at a discount. For information or reservations, call 591-5046 or 522-7846.

Chamber group to perform 'Soldier's Tale'

An intriguing collection of episodes of one soldier's war-time encounters is musically portrayed by Stravinsky in his "Soldier's Tale," to be performed Sunday by the Plymouth Chamber Orchestra.

Whether marching, resting by a stream, playing a tune, or making a deal with the devil, narrators from Eastern Michigan University will dramatically interpret the story accompanying the musical score.

Also on the program is Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 and Copland's "Appalachian Spring."

The concert will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Plymouth-Salem High School auditorium, 46181 Joy Road, Canton. Tickets are $8 for adults; $7 for seniors and students K-12 are free. Tickets may be purchased at the box office the night of the performance, or in advance at Beitner's Jewelry, 904 Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth, or Arnoldt Williams Music, 5701 Canton Center Road.

Winter art classes registration opens

Open registration for the winter session of art classes at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association begins Dec. 12. The 10-week term runs from Jan. 5 through April 2. Adults classes include drawing, painting, design, ceramics and jewelry.

Tickets are also available for a series of lectures featuring Rick Axsom. He will present three lectures on Frank Stella, Ellsworth Kelly and Robert Rauschenberg.

designing ways

Color is the most exciting, the most immediately noticeable and least expensive element in interior design.

Different combinations of colors can make the same room seem to say welcome or appear very impersonal.

The effect of color can be warm or cool, restful of stimulating. The choice we make when decorating is both central to our moods and the impression our home makes on the people who frequent it.

Some people are able to carry a color around in their head and match or blend absolutely. They are fortunate because they can look at a room and instantly know what is suitable.

Others have to work at developing that sense. To do that they look at pleasurable combinations and consciously analyze the make-up of colors within that image.

Yellow is one of my favorite colors because it makes me think of sunlight, daffodils, gold, and spring flowers. It is a happy color. Yellow is, of course, a primary color along with blue and red. When combined these three produce purple. So it is important when mixing these colors, whether in wallpaper or fabric to stand away from either to make sure the mix of colors doesn't create another color completely.

Yellow and orange are next to each other on the color wheel and should not be used together in equal amounts in a decorating scheme or they will cancel each other out.

Yellow accents are instant freshners — revivers. Brilliant yellow walls will provide a vibrant contrast to a navy and white room. It is a particularly good accent color — brightening and illuminating almost any color from white, neutrals, tawny browns to blacks and the full range of blues, rose, pinks and reds.

Many people feel more comfortable with a neutral background because they find grays, beiges, creams and buffs restful. They may also feel there is less chance of a mistake with subtle colors.

These same background colors will become marvelously alive with yellow and white accents. Buff and beiges will have'zing when accented with a bowl of yellow roses or chrysanthemums.

ANTIQUE
SHOW & SALE... NOV. 26-27

RANDY BORST/staff photographer

Dorothy O'Bara (left), promoter of the upcoming antique show, and Lois Scupholm of Scupholm Antiques fasten the sign announcing the show at the historic Botsford Inn.

Affordable is a key word at Botsford show

The Botsford Inn Antique Show celebrates its 20th year as it stages its Christmas show and sale during the Thanksgiving weekend. The event will be open to the public from noon to 8 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 26 and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 27.

The historic inn is proud of the fact that this is one of the oldest continuously-run shows in the state, with at least three shows a year over that 20-year history. The holiday show highlights 20 dealers, selling everything from antique jewelry to Victorian furniture. They represent a selected group of dealers who are known for their reasonable prices, said Dorothy O'Bara, one of the show's promoters.

Admission is free and guests are invited to tour the inn and views its remarkable collection of antiques. Meals are available in the dining room from noon to 10:30 p.m. on Saturday and on Sunday a brunch is offered from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. with dinners until 8 p.m.

Two dealers who have been involved in every show over the last 20 years. They are Ruth Heilmann of Livonia, who will feature her jewelry and china, and Lois Scupholm of Redford Township who will have children's kindergarten table and chair sets.

Leave a

Who says lake living's just fun in the summer?

Living on Ford Lake's great 365 days a year. In summer there are all the water-sports, tennis and sun-worshipping pleasures. In fall, the color change is spectacular when you take a walk or jog. In winter, the cross-country skiing, snowmobiling, snowman-building, ice-skating and ice-boating are tops. (So are the indoor pleasures of watching the snow fall through your balcony window.) It's active, Year-round on the outside. Quiet and peaceful on the inside. See all that the designer-decorated 1 and 2 bedroom contemporary apartments can offer you. Now.

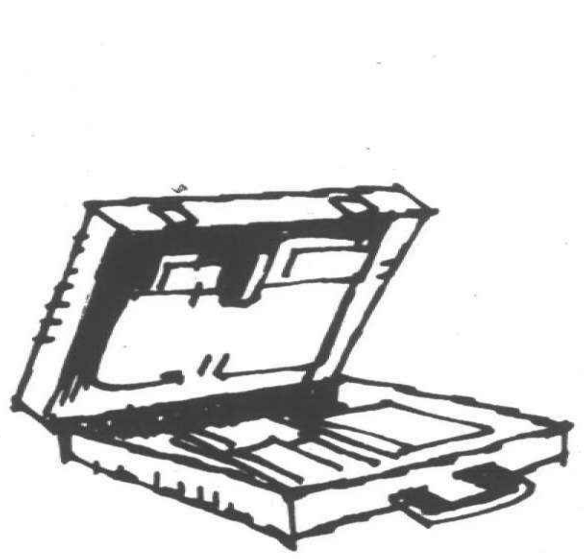
WRITE IT AND REAP!

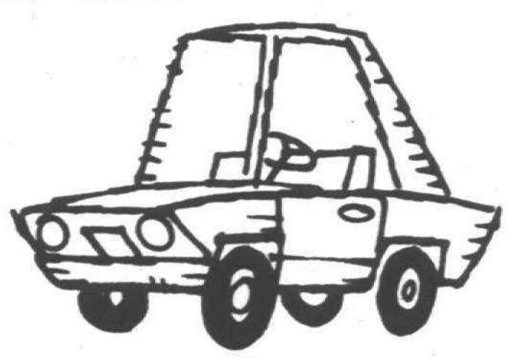
Writing a classified ad that gets results—whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise— is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

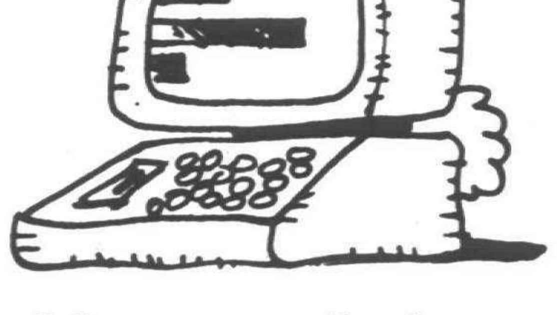


2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.



4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!



5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, You make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideals, You give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrongs that are done to me and You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with You, my loved One, in your Perpetual Glory. Amen. Persons must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. After 3 days your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then, promise to publish this dialogue as soon as the favor has been granted. Thanks, St. Jude, for favors received.

May the Sacred Heart Of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved & preserved throughout the world, now & forever. Sacred Heart Of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. THANKSGIVING TO ST. JUDE
O, Holy St. Jude, Apostle & Martyr, great in virtue & rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you I have recourse from the depth of my heart & humbly beg whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help in my present & urgent petition. In return, I promise to make your name known & cause you to be invoked. St. Jude pray for us all who invoke your name. Amen. Say three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys, three Glorias. Publication must be promised. Say this novena for 9 consecutive days. This novena has never been known to fail.
