Township approves tough new party law

By Diane Gale
staff writer

In many cases adults are aware of the parties, public safety director John Santomauro said, but they shy away from the responsibility.

If you decide to turn your head the next time your kid throws a party with alcohol and drugs around, you could find yourself paying a $500 fine and spending 90 days in jail.

Canton board of trustees Tuesday voted unanimously to approve an ordinance holding people 17 and older, who are in charge of a home, responsible for minors who consume alcohol or take drugs in their homes or in hotel rooms they've rented. Four of seven board members voted.

THE ORDINANCE is to curb unsupervised parties that are becoming rampant in Canton, said John Santomauro, public safety director.

"We had an incident where parents were out of town, and there were two nights of partying where the police were repeatedly there," Santomauro said.

Canton police contacted the parents when they returned to town, Santomauro said, and the couple said it was a police problem, not a parental problem.

"And we are saying that they have that responsibility," he said. "We've seen that scenario to a point that I think it's time the adults will assume responsibility.

"I would say we have had numerous occasions of that happening," said Santomauro adding that the parties result in minors in possession of alcohol or drugs, destruction of property and assault and battery.

Parents aren't the only ones held responsible, Santomauro said. The ordinance says any person who is 17 or older, who is in control of the residence and fails to take reasonable steps to prevent the possession or

School millage rally draws 600 residents

Approximately 600 supporters packed the Canton High School cafeteria Tuesday to learn how they can help the school district pass a 4-mill tax increase June 12.

"I think it's absolutely incredible to see all of you here tonight and know you are here because you care about quality education in our schools," said Jack Farrow, co-chair of I CARE, the citizen's committee formed for the campaign.

The 90-minute presentation included comments from school personnel, I CARE members and students as well as a question-and-answer session. Residents interviewed after the rally said they had already supported the ballot issue but the program strengthened their convictions.

THE DISTRICT is asking voters to renew an 8-mill levy and approve a 4-mill property tax increase. School officials have said $3.1 million in cuts will be made if the increase fails.

"The students of Plymouth Canton are facing a crisis, a crisis that we haven't really had to this level in our district before," said William Pearson, principal of Hoben Elementary School, who outlined the financial situation.

So far, Plymouth Canton District has received state aid. But because property is increasing in value, the amount of state aid is decreasing. When property values go up, "the state says we need less money," Pearson said.

To keep the district's income from rising faster than the inflation rate, it will have to reduce the tax rate next year. That reduction is known as a Headlee rollback.

Last year the district collected 34.17 of the 37 mills it is authorized to get. The Headlee Tax Limitation Amendment would allow the district to collect 32.25 mills this year. The proposed 4-mill increase would bring the rate levied to 36.25 mills.

The owner of a $100,000 house would see a tax increase of $200 per year if the 4 mills is approved, in addition to the additional money he will owe because of inflation.

At least one member of the crowd said the information provided at the rally erased his skepti-

Young accident victim wanted to donate eyes

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A couple of months before 8-year-old Erik Mason was struck by a car and killed on Sheldon Road on March 11, he watched a television show with his mother about a woman who donated her body limbs.

Erik said he wanted to donate his eyes. Following the accident, his eyes were the only part of his body that could be donated for medical purposes.

Erik Mason

"I DIDN'T want to at first," said Sharrie Mason, his mother. "When they asked me in the hospital I remembered what he said. That was his decision, not mine."

His grandmother, Alice Mathis, said Erik learned to call home when he knew he would be late.

"He called just before the accident," she said. "I told him, Erik come home I have chicken for you.

"But he never made it home," she added, wiping her eyes.

The two women are constantly reminded of the joy he brought by his belongings and especially by his foot and hand prints on a cement step outside the family's townhouse.

When Mason saw prints in the wet cement, she called to have it smoothed out, Mathis said. When the workers left, Erik returned and left his prints.

"I guess he thought he would make his mark," said Mathis, who cared for Erik while Mason was at work.

"If you bumped your foot or something, he would say, 'Oh, are you all right,'" Mathis said. "I told him he was a good go-fer. He would go for this and go for that. He never ran out of things to say."

MASON IS trying to better understand what happened before Erik was hit. She wants to know why the driver, who failed to stop her vehicle after Erik ran out in the street, wasn't given a test to determine her blood-alcohol level.

Dave Boljesic, Canton police spokesman, said: "Generally a breathalyzer test is given when you have probable cause to believe a person has been drinking." The driver was never charged and an investigation is pending, Boljesic said.

Meanwhile, a group of residents is lobbying to lower the 40 mph speed limit on Sheldon Road where the youth was struck. Township officials said it would take between three and eight weeks before changes can be made by the Wayne County Road Commission.

While Mason talked on the telephone during a recent interview, a small boy came to the door and yelled out: "Is Erik home?"

Mason asked Mathis to explain what happened to Erik to the young visitor. She told him Erik is gone and isn't come back.

"We had a little family," Mason said. "My mother was the housewife and I went to work and paid the bills. Our whole lives will never be the same.

"Erik was my whole life. I'm empty. I don't know anything. I feel the loss. I keep thinking if I say the right words or do something I'll bring him back. The only thing I have left is if someone came in and hacked off my arms and legs. I don't have anything left to lose. I just wish people would know that you might look at someone in the eye and you might not ever see that person again. The last

Programs share block grant funds

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

Ten Canton Township programs will share this year's $273,000 allotment of Community Development Block Grant funds.

Trustees last week approved the dispersement plan, with grants ranging from $55,000 to $1,225. Many of the recipients are programs that have been awarded CDBG money in the past.

The $55,000 project involves building sidewalks on the south side of Michigan Avenue between Canton Center and Morton-Taylor roads. Many senior citizens use the walkway to get to the Seniors Center building at Michigan and Sheldon.

The Seniors Center will get $15,000 worth of reroofing through the CDBG program. And the nearby Sheldon School, a historic structure, is getting $29,150 for renovation.

The $1,225 allotment will go to establishing an information center for Homeshare, a program that matches homeowners with live-in companions. It is the second year CDBG money is being given to Homeshare.

Other programs that are getting continued CDBG support are:

- Growth Works, $7,500 for drug counseling services.
- Salvation Army Day Camp, $25,000 for day camp for young residents of Canton Commons and Fellows Creek.
- First Step, $26,000 for spouse abuse counseling.
- Suburban West, $25,000 for counseling services for mentally ill adults.

Some $25,000 in CDBG money will be used to buy a recreation department van to enable handicapped people to participate in township recreation programs.

A $30,000 grant is being awarded to low-to-moderate income homeowners for housing rehabilitation.

The remaining $34,125 will go to administering the CDBG program.

Trustee Elaine Kirchgatter said she had some reservations about where some of the money is going.

"I'm not so sure it goes directly to the needs of individuals, as I would like to see it," she said, mentioning the van purchase and administrative costs.

But Kirchgatter joined in the unanimous approval of the allotment, saying she voted yes "because I feel strongly positive about some of the programs."

The township's block grant dispersement must be reviewed at the county level then forwarded to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD typically releases CDBG funds in September.

Police sort out tips on rapist

Canton police are wading through more than 120 tips about a man who is suspected of sexually assaulting two women during separate incidents in a Canton cemetery.

Both women said they were picked up in the Dearborn area and driven to Knollwood Memorial Park on Ridge Road in Canton where they were raped.

Canton detectives have followed up on more than half of the tips, said Dave Boljesic, Canton police spokesman.

"Nothing too substantial was found," he added.

The most recent incident was last January. A 37-year-old Taylor woman said she was abducted in Dearborn Heights when she ran out of gas and the assailant lured her into his car by offering her a ride to a service station.

He drove her to the cemetery and raped her. The woman told police she was able to escape after the attack.

The man is described as a white man in his mid 20s, with brown curly hair and a mustache. He was wearing jeans and a gold watch and driving an older model brown car with plastic covering the driver's side window.

A man fitting that description is linked to a similar case last August. In that incident, a Westland woman was picked up in Dearborn and taken to the same cemetery and raped.

Anyone with information is asked to call Canton police, 397-3000.

time I saw him alive, he was standing at the door and I said, 'I love you Erik,' and he said, 'I love you mommy.'

"It's just not real," said Mason, who is involved in Ann Arbor's Human Growth Center to help her deal with the trauma.

MASON SAID she's trying to find a boy Erik's age, whose family is struggling, who would appreciate Erik's race car bed.

"I want to see his face light up," Mason said.

"He was a caring little boy. He was no saint. He was a normal little boy. He would tell my mom, 'You're the best grandma in the whole world,' and he would tell me, 'You're the best mom,' " said Mason, adding that Erik would try to stick up for neighborhood boys who were picked on. "People would say, 'He's a happy little boy.' "

Erik had a learning disability and attended Bird Elementary School.

"He made up his mind that he was going to be an Air Force pilot," Mathis said. "He really loved that. He said, 'I want to go back to Hoben (Elementary School), being in this class is hurting my ego,' " his grandmother said, smiling.

Thinking he didn't understand what he was saying, they asked him what an ego was and he explained.

"He would pull out the mirror before he went to school and see if he was color-coordinated," Mathis said.

"He was so much company. We'd take walks and we would go to the park," Mathis said. "Most kids wouldn't let you hold their hands but he didn't mind. He thought a lot of his dad (Robert Michael Mason, who lives in Colorado). He's a good dad. He sent him gifts and clothes. Erik appreciated everything you did for him."

MASON SAID she had a dream he was hurt a week before he was killed. That night he was staying with his father's mother. "I wanted to call him and get him," said Mason. "I wanted to tell them not to let him outside."

"All week (before he died) I was hugging him," she said. "I thought I had the dream so I would appreciate him more."

Ridge Road work 90 percent funded

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A Ridge Road paving project in Plymouth Township is nearly 90 percent funded, thanks to an allocation of $71,000 last week by the township board.

The paving, about 4,000 feet from the Plymouth Hills Mobile Court and the Oak Haven Trailer Court north to Five Mile, probably will be done this fall or the spring of 1990, said James Anulewicz, township planning director.

"It's all been approved by the county," he said. "We've gone through the engineering study.

"Before we go ahead and expend any money, I'm in the process of preparing a letter to HUD so they can look at it and give us their blessing," Anulewicz said.

The department of housing and urban development is involved because the township is funding the paving with federal Community Development Block Grant money.

THE WORK — one lane of asphalt in each direction — will be done when HUD signs off and the county schedules the project, Anulewicz said.

This year's allocation plus nearly $195,000 from CDBG allocations in previous years still leaves the township some $34,000 short of the $300,000 cost, Anulewicz said.

The balance probably will come from 1990 CDBG funds, he said.

CDBG money must be spent on projects or services geared to moderate or low income areas.

The mobile home courts is the only census tract in the township that meets income guidelines, Anulewicz said.

The township board has adopted a spending plan for 1989 CDBG money that provides:

- $71,000 for the Ridge Road paving.
- $10,000 for a subsidized transportation shuttle for senior citizens.
- $9,000 for local grant administration expenses.

cism about the district's financial situation.

"I FELT that the teachers and the people in the school were just making this thing a lot worse than it was. We found tonight that that's not the case. The money is really short," said David O'Rear of Canton. "If I felt that way I wonder how many other people felt that way."

District officials said they will lay off teachers and cut the school day from six to five hours if the ballot issue fails. If the high school goes to a five-hour day, its state accreditation will be jeopardized.

Other cuts include after-school activities, high school and middle school athletics, eliminating the print shop and ceasing operation of the student radio station.

If voters approve a tax increase, $1.8 million in personnel and programming cuts will be restored.

Participants Tuesday were asked to sign up for at least one of eight campaign committees.

Township approves new party ordinance consumption of the alcoholic beverage or drugs is in violation of the ordinance.

Santomauro said he presented the ordinance now because parties — especially celebrating high school graduations — flourish during spring.

In many cases adults are aware of the parties, Santomauro said, but they shy away from the responsibility.

THE TYPICAL scenario for enforcement is that Canton police will respond to a noise complaint, ask for the person 17 or older responsible for the premises, watch whether minors are consuming and ticket the responsible adult.

The ordinance doesn't apply to parties celebrating religious events or "legally protected educational parties."

Getting a ticket would be "miniscule to what would happen to a person from a liability standpoint," said Santomauro referring to lawsuits filed against adults responsible for minors under the influence of drugs or alcohol who injure people in an accident, or the like.

Trustee Hank Whalen said he is "all for regulations tightening down on alcohol abuse."

Voting for the ordinance were clerk Loren Bennett, trustees Elaine Kirchgatter, Hank Whalen and Bob Shefferly.

A similar ordinance was adopted in Farmington Hills in May 1985 for the same reasons cited by Santomauro in Canton.

Area sees Japanese tourist influx

Hotel owner making appeal for trips to state

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Scott Lorenz envisions the day when groups of Japanese tourists make a stopover in the Plymouth area while on junkets to Niagara Falls, Chicago or Toronto.

To build on that dream, Lorenz recently spent several days in Los Angeles trying to sell tour operators and travel agents on the benefits of sending vacationers Michigan's way.

"It's going to be a little while yet before the market blossoms. When it does, we'll be there," he said.

Lorenz, owner of the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth, made the trip as a member of the Michigan International Trade Association. The group dined, wined and offered hot air balloon rides to travel consultants who specialize in lining up tours from the Orient.

"We talked about our facilities, what the state has to offer — golf, Greenfield Village, salmon fishing," Lorenz said. "We're in an education program here."

DETROIT HAS a tough reputation to overcome, with Toyota-bashing and the killing of Vincent Chin, Lorenz said. Outstate Michigan and suburbia — with golf, fishing and cultural opportunities — is an easier sell.

The state and Plymouth most likely would draw Japanese tourists making their second or third visits to the U.S., Lorenz speculated.

Suburban Detroit probably would be just one stop on a multi-city tour. "If you're going to Japan, you're not just going to do Tokyo," he said.

Greenfield Village reports drawing more and more visitors from Japan, especially with the increase in Japanese companies doing business here.

Local festivals like the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular also could prove to be good drawing cards.

TOURISTS BENEFIT the entire business community in Plymouth, Lorenz maintained.

"Japanese, of all people on the face of the planet, are the most gift-oriented people I know of. Japanese coming to America consider it a bargain. They'll spend," he said.

Familiarization trips here for Japanese tour operators is next on the agenda, Lorenz said. "After they see it, taste it, do it, they can sell it.

"The main thing now is introducing them and indoctrinating them to what we have to offer. Like water on a stone, it takes time to develop a market. Once they start coming, it will develop," Lorenz said.

Must be spring

Chamber exec on county team

Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara has reappointed Mary Roehr to serve as a board member of the Business Development Team of Wayne County.

Roehr, executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce, will provide direction to a program that helps Wayne County businesses start up, expand or become more efficient, McNamara said.

The Business Development Team board has 24 members representing 25 communities. The board directs activities of several Wayne County Economic Development Department staff members and the Business Development Center at Schoolcraft College under a cooperative program with the Michigan Department of Commerce. The team serves Plymouth, Canton and other Wayne County communities.

This is a partnership of private and public resources working together to help businesses grow and create jobs, McNamara said.

Staff members provide assistance in such areas as finding sites, arranging business loans, developing business plans, modernizing technology, providing help with permits and exports, helping to win contracts with federal and state governments and developing a trained work force.

Canton students among winners of French contest

For the second consecutive year, Catholic Central High in Redford emerged with multiple winners in several levels of the National French Contest.

Five students from Canton were among the winners in the contest.

In all, Catholic Central had nine winners and four honorable mentions in the contest involving more than 80,000 students nationwide.

University Liggett of Grosse Pointe is the only school in the Detroit metropolitan area with more "top 10" scores on levels 1-4 of the contest sponsored the second week in March by the American Association of Teachers of French.

Other top schools from the region that entered the contest were Detroit Country Day, Grosse Pointe South, and Cranbrook-Kingswood.

THE RESULTS at the Detroit chapter level were announced March 31 by Suzie Martin, contest administrator for metropolitan Detroit.

Among Catholic Central's winners was Leo Kowalyk of Livonia, competing at the third-year level. His score of 74 from a perfect 80 was the highest among hte 720 competitors at that level, giving him sole possession of first place in the Detroit area.

The Rev. John Wheeler, French teacher at Catholic Central for the past three years, said Kowalyk was a national winner last year and "will definitely repeat" this year. Kowalyk is a member of hte varsity football and track teams for the Shamrocks.

On Level IV of the contest Catholic Central had three winners: Erik Sunday of Westland (second); Jeff Macy of Taylor (third); and Scott Hauncher of Canton (fourth). Pat Fuelling of Livonia (ninth) was awarded an honorable mention.

All four are advanced placement French students taught by Josette Poirier and are repeat winners from last year.

Hauncher was quarterback of Catholic Central's state runner-up football team, and both he and Fuelling played on this year's basketball team that took the Catholic League and state district titles.

BESIDES KOWALYK'S first place on Level III, Sam Rauch of Ann Arbor placed fifth and Jason Blankenship of Canton sixth.

The Shamrocks also had two Level III honorable mentions, Bob Safranski of Livonia (eighth) and Pat Dimmer of Farmington Hills (10th). All are in Wheeler's third-year honors class.

Wheeler's first-year classes also produced winners: Matt Morrison fifth, Mat Suhy sixth, and Matt Roney, seventh. All three are from Canton. Honorable mention went to Sudhir Nagaraja of Northville (ninth).

Students with a "top seven" score at the Detroit chapter level are now in competiton for the regional and national honors, the results of which should be announced the third week in April.

Thieves take shoppers' wallets

Three Canton shoppers were victims of wallet or purse snatchers last weekend.

A 37-year-old Canton woman was shopping March 31 at Great Scott! when another woman started talking to her, police reported. When the Canton woman attempted to walk away, a third woman grabbed the Canton woman by the arm and the other woman grabbed her wallet and ran away.

The wallet had $80, police reported.

A manager detained three woman, police reported. They were arrested by Canton police.

crime watch

In a separate case, a woman shopping March 31 at Meijers said while she was shopping between 6:30 and 8 p.m. her blue leather wallet was stolen from her purse, police reported. She had $115 in cash. There are no suspects.

Sometime between 7:15 and 7:45 p.m. March 31 a purse, belonging to a 61-year-old Belleville woman, was stolen from her shopping cart at Meijers. The purse had $20 in cash.

THEFTS FROM CARS: A resident in the 43000 block of Londonderry Court on April 4 reported goods were stolen from his 1981 auto, police reported.

A $60 spotlight, $200 worth of cassette tapes and garage door opener were taken.

These are some of the crimes reported to Canton Township Police. If you have information about them or others, call Canton police at 397-3000.

Victim's mother sues saloon

The mother of a murder victim who met his assailant in the Plymouthrock Saloon is suing the bar and the convicted killer.

Eleanor Kinney, of Plymouth Township, filed the suit as a result of the death of her son Kevin, who was 23 when he was killed last October.

The suit contends the tavern was liable because it served alcohol to Patrick Dennis, 22, of Plymouth Township prior to the murder.

Dennis was found guilty of first-degree murder last month. He faces a life term and is to be sentenced April 10.

Kinney referred questions about the suit to her attorney, David Kannan. Kannan said the suit is "based upon our belief that Mr. Dennis was served while he was intoxicated in the bar."

In testimony during the trial, witnesses said Dennis and Kinney met at the bar and left together after the establishment closed.

The defendant's brother testified the two each had about four beers over a five-hour period earlier that day. And the bar manager testified that Dennis had a tab for beer that night and that he "didn't appear" drunk as he was leaving.

The suit, filed in Wayne County Circuit Court in January, asks for "whatever amount we are found to be entitled to in excess of $10,000," Kannan said.

Upon learning the Plymouthrock was closed last week, Kannan said: "We may never to able to collect anything, I don't know."

Dentist keeps Detroit Red Wings smiling

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

If a Detroit Red Wing takes an errant stick or slap shot to the mouth in tonight's playoff game, Livonia dentist Dr. Chet Regula will be there to treat him.

Team dentist for the Wings since 1981, Regula attends all home games and out-of-town playoff games — like those scheduled this weekend in Chicago.

Because he will likely arrive back home at 2:30 a.m. Monday from the road trip, Regula said he might appear bleary-eyed to his 8:30 a.m. patients.

"It's a lot of work. But it's a lot of fun, I enjoy it.

"It's a second job; it's a hobby I take very seriously."

AS A PATIENT leaves the waiting room and enters the treatment area of his office on Ann Arbor Road, eight framed photos of Red Wings players — including Joe Kocur, Rick Zombo and captain Steve Yzerman — are easily spotted.

"To everyone at Preferred Dental Group," Yzerman signed the photo, "My mouth will never be the same."

"Stevie's got real nice teeth," commented Regula. "Stevie's got all his teeth, so does Gerard Gallant, (Petr) Klima, (Adam) Oates, Paul MacLean," he added.

Forward Dave Barr still has all his teeth — even after a puck rolled up his stick and hit him in the mouth, knocking out four teeth during the first period of a game last year.

"He reached down and picked them up, he walked in with them.

"We re-implanted them, put on orthodontic braces, put a wire in, and fitted them with a mouth guard," Regula said — and Barr was back out for the third period.

"My main function is to eliminate lost ice time and handle the trauma (injuries) on site," Regula explained.

ASK REGULA of the worst injury he's seen on the ice, and he recalls the time Gerard Gallant accidently stepped on Toronto defenseman Bjore Salming's face.

"The skin on the whole side of his face was peeled back, his nasal passages were exposed," he recalled.

Most injuries to the mouth or teeth involve a stick or puck, Regula said. Many could be prevented if players would only wear their mouth guards — fitted during pre-season out of a special acrylic which dissipates the impact of a blow.

A graduate of Colgate University in New York, Regula, who also holds an advanced degree in orthodontics from Fairleigh Dickinson in New Jersey, came to metro Detroit to start a large dental center in Dearborn to serve Ford Motor Co.'s UAW employees.

"When you came in to us, there was nothing that we couldn't do — from soup to nuts," he explained. A long-time hockey fan, he soon approached the Red Wings and offered the same service.

"They came out and reviewed my credentials, they interviewed me," he said, and Regula was hired.

"My function was to have them totally never worry about a dental problem. They'd have one source they can call, and bingo — that's that."

EACH YEAR, he sees the players during training camp for a check-up, and places them in three categories:

" 1) Those needing immediate attention; 2) Those needing a filling, treatment of a non-active cavity or other problem not needing quick attention, and; 3) The category where no dental work is necessary.

"My objective is to move all the players and their families into category three."

Yzerman visited the clinic just west of Ann Arbor Trail for a routine check up about three weeks ago, and had to sign 30 or 40 autographs before leaving. Regula said he'd prefer that the players not be bothered that much on their visits.

"I'd like their dental experience to be very personal, an intimate type of thing."

"The hockey players are young, usually from very rural type of backgrounds; they're thankful and appreciative of what you do."

"We try to obviously let them know what their dental needs are" when players come into the office. "Dentistry is very frustrating, very anxiety provoking," Regula said. "You do whatever you can" to make them feel at ease.

While Regula said Zombo is one of his favorites on the team, "I knock my head against the wall" to get him to come into the office. Regula said if he has to go to coach Jacques Demers or general manager Jimmy Develano to get a player to come in for a check up or treatment, he'll do it, and said the Wings' management cooperates.

Area dentist Chet Regula, here flanked by Detroit Red Wings coach Jacques Demers and captain Steve Yzerman, also serves as Red Wings team dentist.

ON THE playoff season road trips, Regula said he tends to spend time with the other two team doctors but is friendly with some players, including goalies Greg Stefan and Glen Hanlon.

Regula describes Zombo as "quite an accomplished artist; he does Western art," and Barr as "quite a learned and well-read guy. He took a trip down the Amazon at the end of last year, to do some biological study type of stuff."

„Kocur, he said, is a good all-around athlete and near-scratch golfer.

Regula, who will leave for Chicago following tonight's game, said he suspected Kocur in a prank during the playoffs last year.

"I'm still trying to figure out who greased the inside of my shoes. I thought it was Kocur, but (defenseman Steve) Chaisson keeps asking me about it."

Rouge Rescue '89 set

Nankin site is featured

Nankin Mills will play a prominent role in Rouge Rescue '89, the fourth annual volunteer river cleanup.

Special attention will be paid to the stretch of the Rouge River running between the Westland recreation area and Warren Valley Golf Course in Dearborn Heights.

"What the county parks people would like to do is to have canoeing there next summer," Friends of the Rouge Director William Jakeway said. "So, we're going to put a special effort into getting rid of log jams and debris."

Friends of the Rouge, a volunteer agency dedicated to cleaning the heavily polluted river, has scheduled the cleanup for Saturday, June 4.

Though previous efforts were morning-only, Jakeway said this year's plans call for volunteers to work until the early afternoon.

"In the past, things tended to wind down around noon," he said. "This year, we'd like to see the sites worked until 1 or 2 p.m. We may even see some Sunday work, depending upon the site coordinators."

At the cleanups, municipal public works departments clear log jams from the river, while volunteers remove branches and other debris from the river bank.

Recent cleanups included sites in Birmingham, Canton Township, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Livonia, Plymouth, Southfield and Westland. Those sites are expected to be included again. Friends of the Rouge is also seeking new sites in Wayne and Oakland counties.

Some 2,500 volunteers participated in last year's event and a similar number is sought this year.

Volunteers like Karen Swift of Plymouth helped bolster the ranks of the Friends of the Rouge during last year's cleanup. The fourth annual river cleanup is scheduled for Saturday, June 4, and William Jakeway, director of Friends of the Rouge, hopes that volunteers will once again head for the river banks in what is expected to be a daylong cleanup.

Rouge cleanup plan described

● What is the Rouge River Remedial Action Plan?

The Rouge River Remedial Action Plan (RAP) is a comprehensive, nine-volume document that presents a 20-year program aimed at beginning to solve the river's worst pollution problems and protecting public health. The RAP includes:

- Description of past and present water quality.
- Identification of pollution sources and impact.
- Identification of additional research and data needs.
- Statement of goals and objectives for the Rouge River.
- Recommended action.
- Identification of parties responsible for implementation.
- A timetable for plan implementation.

● Why a RAP for the Rouge River?

The International Joint Commission (IJC), a United States and Canadian bi-national organization, has defined the Rouge River as one of the 42 worst pollution "hot spots" in the Great Lakes Basin. Untreated sewage, storm water and toxic pollutants entering the Rouge River pose a threat to public health and result in frequent and severe violations of the state water quality standards throughout the basin. The Rouge is so polluted that it further degrades the water of the Great Lakes.

The serious pollution problems in the Rouge River have been recognized for many years, yet the problems persist. The Remedial Action Plan provides a comprehensive approach for dealing with pollution in the Rouge basin. Not only have the problems been identified, but pollution abatement strategies have been developed for each pollution source (combined sewer overflows, non-point pollution and others). Strategies include identifying specific programs or projects needed and the parties responsible for their implementation.

● Why must we act now to clean up the Rouge River?

There really is no choice except to act now. Federal and state law mandate that progress be made toward the ultimate goal of a "fishable and swimmable" river. The Rouge RAP acknowledges that the first priority must be to protect public health, while making reasonable progress toward the goal of a restored Rouge River. This priority means that by the year 2005 untreated discharges of raw sewage must be eliminated and the discharge of toxic pollutants addressed. The goal of achieving state water quality standards remains as a long-term goal. The RAP recommends a program that is achievable and makes the necessary progress toward meeting federal and state requirements.

● How was the RAP developed?

The Water Resources Commission (WRC) on Oct. 1, 1985 adopted the Rouge River Basin Strategy, calling for the development of the RAP. Great emphasis was placed on involving the 48 Rouge Basin communities throughout the planning process. Two oversight committees, the Basin Committee and the Executive Steering Committee and eight technical advisory committees were formed to guide the planning process.

Development of the RAP has truly been a basin-wide effort, with representatives from most of the 48 basin communities, federal and state agencies, business and industry and private citizens participating at every level of plan participation.

● What are the RAP goals?

The commission strategy set an overall goal of restoration of the Rouge River by the year 2005. Accomplishment of strategy goals was to be completed by implementing cost-efficient projects as soon as possible without waiting for the completion of the "grand plan" that would take years of further study to prepare.

The preparation of the Rouge River RAP has been guided by the direction set by the commission. Based on this guidance, the original WRC goal statements have been revised by the Basin Committee and the Executive Steering Committee with input by sub-committees and technical advisory committees.

RAP planning determined that full restoration of the Rouge cannot be achieved within 20 years. While achievement of restoration of designated uses by meeting water quality standards remains as a long-term goal, the primary short-term goal must be to protect public health. The primary goals of the RAP are:

- Protect public health by the elimination of discharges of untreated sewage and the control of discharges of toxic substances to the Rouge River.
- As a long-term goal, meet des-

Special ed students sought

School districts throughout Wayne County seek to enroll students in special education programs this month as part of a nationwide program.

Project Find, the nationwide program, identifies learning impaired children under age five and helps them find appropriate preschool programs.

Parents in western Wayne County are encouraged to call their local district's special education director.

Local directors include:

- Clarenceville — Cheryl Leach, 473-8910
- Garden City — Jack Houser, 425-5660
- Livonia — Robert Dietiker, 523-6809
- Plymouth-Canton — Patrick O'Donnell, 451-6590
- Redford Union — C. Gus Kaselemis, 592-3427
- South Redford — John Baluci, 535-4000.
- Wayne-Westland — Mary Anne Garzon, 595-2066.

Special education directors are interested in identifying children with difficulty walking, talking, hearing or speaking or with physical, emotional or mental conditions. Parents who aren't sure of the district in which they live can call Elizabeth Lockwood at the Wayne County Intermediate Schools, 467-1363.

Upon receiving a call from parents, local districts will an evaluation program to determine the extent of the child's disability.

Parents are given a series of brochures describing the kind of communication and motor skills their child should display at each age, as well as their rights as parents of learning disabled children.

Parents in western Wayne County are encouraged to call their local district's special education director.

Testing is free. Education programs for learning impaired Michigan children are also free under state law.

Referrals are also made through area hospitals, including Children's and Henry Ford hospitals.

Seventy-eight children have been identified and match with appropriate programs thus far this year, according to county statistics.

Each district operates its own special education programs, though more than 6,000 children with severe disabilities attend regional programs.

Wayne County recently boosted its regional special education programs through a voter-approved, one-mill county tax.

Similar programs are conducted for youngsters in each of Michigan's 83 counties.

Additional information can be obtained by calling Michigan Project Find's toll-free hot line, 1-800-252-0052.

Response mixed to jail mediation bid

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

An attempt by the Wayne County Commission to forge a settlement in the county's long-running jail control battle has received support from only one of the parties at the dispute's core.

Ficano

Sheriff Robert Ficano said he'd be willing to "explore the possibility of an out-of-court settlement in his dispute with county Executive Edward McNamara.

McNamara, however, believes the commission's action is an attempt to revive a mediation plan that was rejected when first proposed several months ago.

Ficano has appealed a Feb. 16 ruling giving McNamara full administrative power over the jail. The issue is currently before the Michigan Court of Appeals. Though the court has been ordered to hear Ficano's appeal by mid-May, a ruling could come later.

"THIS COULD run through June or beyond," Ficano said. "I'm amenable to sitting down with anybody to try to find a settlement."

County commissioners David Cavanaugh, D-Grosse Pointe, and Jackie Currie, D-Detroit, the proposal's chief sponsors, said a settlement could save the county thousands of dollars in legal fees.

"Too much energy is being wasted and too many dollars are being spent in prolonging this controversy," Cavanaugh said.

UNDER THE commission proposal, McNamara and Ficano would jointly appoint a jail administrator while the county auditor general would establish a timetable for correcting jail problems.

Cavanaugh and Currie announced their proposal Monday. The full commission is expected to discuss the matter Tuesday, April 11.

Currie, head of the commission's public safety and judiciary committee, said the proposal would force all county officials to work together toward a jail settlement.

Deputy county executive Michael Duggan, who has represented McNamara in court, said the commission's earlier attempt to mediate a settlement was rejected because it didn't solve the jail issue's primary problem.

"This was rejected four months ago," Duggan said. "At the time, we felt the problem was that there was no one single entity responsible for the jail. This is an old proposal. I'm kind of surprised we're still talking about it."

CHIEF WAYNE County Circuit Judge Richard Kaufman named McNamara jail receiver. In the Feb. 16 ruling taking the jail from Ficano, the judge ruled the sheriff wasn't doing enough to improve jail conditions under terms of a 1971 inmate lawsuit.

The appeals court initially rejected Ficano's motion to block McNamara's appointment. In subsequent action, Michigan Supreme Court justices set aside the appointment and ordered the appeals court to rule on Ficano's appeal within 60 days.

Jail control has temporarily reverted to Ficano pending the appeals court's ruling.

The issue stems from a 1971 lawsuit. At that time, inmates alleged they were being housed three to a cell, often without mattresses or blankets, that the jail suicide rate was excessively high and that recreational activities and psychological counseling are inadequate or non-existent.

ignated uses through the eventual achievement of Water Quality Standards to the greatest extent practical.

● What are the RAP findings?
For planning purposes, the basin was divided into 11 sub-basins. A problem assessment found that all 11 sub-basins are affected by pollution problems. Problems are severe enough that every sub-basin fails the State of Michigan standards for stream use in at least three of the five categories. Examples of the extent of the Rouge's problems include:

● Sewer discharges from combined sewer overflows (CSOs), overcapacity separate sanitary sewers and sewage improperly discharged to storm drains result in bacterial contamination of 10 of 11 sub-basins.

● Storm runoff is rapid due to the paved surfaces and rooftops in the basin, which causes stream scouring and bank erosion. This runoff carries large quantities of pollutants.

● River sediment continues to be of concern because of toxic contaminants such as metals and PCBs.

● Near zero stream flow in upper portions of the watershed during dry weather makes it difficult to maintain oxygen levels sufficient for fish and stream organisms to survive.

● What recommendation does the RAP make?
The RAP calls for a phased approach to solving the Rouge's problems. The plan identifies specific projects needed between now and the year 2005. The approach followed in the recommendations is based on the guidance set forth in the WRC Strategy: address the entire Rouge River Basin, implement improvement projects as soon as they are identified and determine implementation costs and schedules. In addition, the RAP recommends a financing strategy as an essential part of the overall plan.

The phases of RAP implementation, as contained in the recommendations, generally can be described as follows.

PHASE I (Present to 1993.)

● Construct separate sanitary sewer improvement projects.

● Monitor and optimize the existing combined sewer system.

● Conduct detailed local planning for CSO controls.

● Implement programs to remove improper connections to storm drains and prepare local storm water management plans.

● Study and implement resource improvements, such as log jam removal and habitat enhancement.

● Control industrial pollutants at the source through NPDES permits for direct discharges and through source controls for discharges to the sewer system.

● Continue regular monitoring and conduct special intensive studies in identified problem areas.

● Implement financing methods at the local, state and federal levels to pay for improvements.

● Issue discharge permits that specify requirements for CSOs and storm water discharges.

PHASE II (1994-2005).

● Implement CSO improvements that will eliminate untreated raw sewage discharges. Meet the minimum objective of point-by-point control with settling, skimming and disinfection for all overflows.

● Complete implementation of improper connections program and other programs that address problems identified in special studies.

● Implement further storm water controls as needed based on monitoring and the storm water management plan.

PHASE III (After Phase II completion.)

● Evaluate results of CSO controls and initiate planning and implementation of further improvements necessary to meet Water Quality Standards.

● Evaluate further needs for storm water discharge controls and implement where needed to meet Water Quality Standards.

Low unemployment rate linked to education

By Tim Richard
staff writer

The more people in town with college degrees, the lower the unemployment rate.

"Education matters to communities," said Mark Murray, director of business research for the Michigan Department of Commerce.

Murray spoke last week at a University of Michigan economic conference called "Beyond the Rust Belt," which celebrated the diversifying of industry and the state's economic recovery.

"Education reduces unemployment. The disparity has grown during the '80s," he said, citing 11 metropolitan areas.

ANN ARBOR, U-M's headquarters, has the state's highest concentration of college degrees — 36 percent. It also ranks first (best) in the state with a 1988 unemployment rate of 3.8 percent, his chart showed.

Here's how other metro areas fared:

- Kalamazoo ranked second in college degrees with 23 percent and had the second-lowest jobless rate, 4.8 percent.
- Grand Rapids ranked fourth in college degrees with 15.9 percent and third in unemployment with 5.4 percent.

'Good jobs are available, but not to the unskilled.'
— Paul N. Courant
U-M professor

- Lansing, including the university town of East Lansing, ranked third at 21.7 percent in college degrees and fourth at 6.0 percent in unemployment.
- No separate figures were available for Oakland, Macomb and western Wayne counties, which were lumped into the Detroit metropolitan area. But the link held. Detroit was fifth with 14 percent college degrees and ninth with 7.7 percent unemployment.
- At the bottom of the list were Muskegon, 11th in degrees at 10.6 and 10th in joblessness at 8.9 percent, and Flint, 10th in degrees at 10.9 percent and 11th in joblessness at 13.8 percent.

"GOOD JOBS are available, but not to the unskilled," said Paul N. Courant, U-M professor of economics and public policy.

While unskilled auto factory workers took a severe beating in the 1979-82 recession and never did recover, other kinds of jobs grew and more than made up for the loss of "rust belt" work in the 1972-87 period, economists said.

Managerial, technical and professional people saw their ranks grow from 20.5 percent to 25.6 percent of the labor force — a category where 78 percent have some college education.

Operatives and laborers, where only 16 percent have any college, fell from 24.3 percent of the labor force to 18.9 percent, Murray reported.

BUSINESSES WILL invest in Michigan without tax and other gimmicks, said Courant.

Asked why the series of eight speakers said nothing about the need to lure investment, Courant replied, "Capital is not unwilling to come here. It is not a principal concern."

"That doesn't seem to be a problem," added Murray.

Courant deplored local property tax abatements — which he branded "bribes" — as poor incentives to industry. "It's impossible to engage in a bidding game. The only winner is the industry bid for," he said.

Although Courant said he is "no fan" of Michigan's workers' comp program and that the "business climate" issue is not gone, he said "Governments can provide what they're good at — roads, bridges, education. The most valuable thing is education and skills; no gimmicks."

"MICHIGAN HAS outperformed the Great Lakes region in both employment and earnings since 1982," said Janet C. Wolfe, an economic researcher and Ph.D. candidate at U-M.

George Fulton, a U-M economist, said the state is gaining "export" jobs — that is, in industries which bring in out-of-state money — in several non-traditional areas.

In manufacturing, Michigan is doing well in plastics, scientific instruments, office furniture and printing.

In non-manufacturing, the state is gaining in tourism, medical services, professional services, finance, air transportation and trucking.

Michigan has little problem attracting capital, say U-M and state economists. This chart, from the state Department of Commerce, illustrates the interstate differences.

Poll: Voters like sales tax hike

Nearly two-thirds of Michigan voters told a pollster they would support hiking the sales tax by 2 cents if one-quarter of the money were used to fund schools and three-quarters to cut property taxes.

The poll was conducted March 6-8 by supporters of school finance reform proposals. Gov. James J. Blanchard discounts the poll.

Some 65 percent said they would support a constitutional amendment to increase the state sales tax by 2 cents under specified conditions.

More than three-fifths (61 percent) of respondents felt that Michigan currently spends too little, or much too little, on public schools.

NEARLY FOUR-FIFTHS (79 percent) agreed that the proposed constitutional amendment to increase Michigan's sales tax is an investment needed today in order to ensure a quality future for children and the nation.

Respondents were provided with 11 compelling reasons that potential voters might vote 'no' on a proposal to raise the sales tax to finance education and reduce local property taxes.

Respondents indicated strong resistance to all arguments against the proposal. Furthermore, when asked how the proposal would affect children in their communities, respondents indicated by a margin of nearly 3-1 (49 percent versus 17 percent) that the proposal would be beneficial.

When respondents were asked if the principal reason they would vote for the proposal was because of funding for education or local property tax relief, nearly two-fifths (39 percent) cited funding for education, while one-fifth (25 percent) cited property tax relief. An additional one-third (33 percent) cited both reasons.

THE STATEWIDE telephone survey of 850 potential voters was conducted by Greenberg-Lake: The Analysis Group, Inc. on behalf of Equal Partners for Education in Michigan.

The survey used a series of questions to screen for likely voters in a special election. Survey results have an error margin of plus or minus 3.5 percent at the 95 percent confidence level, according to Colleen Hudgens of Equal Partners for Education in Michigan, and Stan Greenberg of Greenberg-Lake: The Analysis Group, Inc.

Linguists needed as state goes international

By Tim Richard
staff writer

It used to be a sick joke. Vacation in Detroit — it's a riot.

No longer. Southeastern Michigan, with Greenfield Village as the centerpiece, is successfully recruiting Japanese tourism. And experts warn that business are operating at an economic disadvantage if they aren't familiar with foreign languages and cultures.

"We are a major destination for Japanese tourism and Japanese businessmen," said Harold Skramstad, president of the village and Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn. They come here with a reverence. The technology they use was formed in this country. As our international audience grows, we need to accommodate them," said Skramstad.

Village brochures are printed in seven languages: Japanese, Chinese, Italian, French, Spanish, German and Arabic. Skramstad has people on staff who speak all of those languages except Chinese.

GREENFIELD VILLAGE and the Ford museum generate $50 million in revenues each year. And two plans are under way to boost that business.

- Village, business and state officials led by Gov. James J. Blanchard last week unveiled a plan for a $5 million "Made in America" a special exhibit showing the impact of technology on social change.
- With the floor space of three or four medium-sized houses, "Made in America" will be no mere exhibit to stare at but "theatrical and interactive," Skramstad said. It will take visitors from the handcraft beginnings of production through the present and into the future. It's due to open in 1992.
- A Michigan International Trade Association (MITA) invaded Los Angeles last week for a sales blitz of Japanese travel operators. Purpose: to inform operators who book Japanese travel in the U.S. of the many tourist, golf, technological and cultural attractions in Michigan.

MITA member Scott Lorenz, of the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth, treated prospects to his famed hot-air balloon rides. Targets were such major Japanese travel firms as Fuji Tours International, Hokubei tours, Japan Travel Bureau International, Tokyo Travel America, Inc., Nippon Express, Pacific Creative Tours and Yusen Travel.

"THE NUMBER of Japanese visitors to Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum has been increasing over the past couple years, especially with the increase of Japanese firms doing business in southeast Michigan," said Dave Schulte, manager of group marketing for Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum.

Harold Skramstad

'We are a major destination for Japanese tourism and Japanese businessmen.'
— Harold Skramstad
village-museum president

Referring to a 1988 sales blitz, Schulte said, "We did get a better reception in LA last year than I anticipated. Several major tour operators had done a little business in Michigan and had a good idea of what Michigan has to offer, and most were somewhat familiar with Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum."

The sale of Michigan travel services become exports on the international market," said Schulte, "and this form of international trade will expand our state's economy."

THE MUSEUM announcement followed by one day a major economic conference at the University of Michigan on diversification of the state's economy. "I call it 'From the Rust Belt to the Brain Wave,'" said Rick Cole, former press aide to Gov. Blanchard and now an associate professor of advertising at Michigan State University.

Doug Ross, state Commerce Department director, said Michigan is competing effectively in the international market, but more attention needs to be given to teaching foreign languages.

"Most CEOs (chief executive officers) you run into from other parts of the world are already multi-lingual," said Ross. "If our future is international markets — and it is — you operate at a great disadvantage if you don't know other languages and cultures.

"If you can't speak other people's language, you're telling them they're not very important," he said.

ONE FEATURED speaker at the Greenfield Village reception was Dr. Theodore Cooper, president of Upjohn Co., Kalamazoo-based maker of pharmaceutical and agricultural products.

"We do hire a few U.S. citizens with language skills. We find, however, that non-Americans have more than one language and offer versatility.

"Increasingly, English becomes the technical language of our field. However, it is not sufficient for the vigor of an entrepreneurial business.

"The Japanese didn't sell us cars by speaking Japanese. Their ads weren't in Japanese," Cooper said.

County names building chief

Stanley M. Wyre of Detroit has been appointed Wayne County's new buildings director.

Wyre, 36, is a graduate of Cass Technical High School. He holds a bachelor's degree in architecture from Lawrence Institute of Technology and a juris doctorate from the Detroit College of Law. He has taught at both institutions.

County Executive Edward McNamara said Wyre possessed the dual expertise to plan projects and execute contracts.

In his new position, Wyre will manage all county-owned buildings, including the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice, youth home, jail and park buildings.

He was affiliated with Barton-Malow, a construction and general contracting firm before joining the county. He was previously associated with the law firm of Charfoos, Christensen & Archer.

Wyre is a member of the Wolverine Bar Association, Detroit Bar Association, National Bar Association, the Construction Specifications Institute and the Engineering Society of Detroit.

Wyre is the first black to hold the position in county history.

A warning

Take precautions to save lives

And we hope that Canton officials take notice of the death of an 8-year-old Canton boy in a traffic accident recently and take appropriate action to slow traffic on Sheldon Road near Hoben Elementary School.

WHEN A CHILD dies in an accident, it's a tragedy. It's a life snuffed out before it had time to burn brightly.

And we hope that Canton officials take notice of the death of an 8-year-old Canton boy in a traffic accident recently and take appropriate action to slow traffic on Sheldon Road near Hoben Elementary School.

The boy died after being struck by an auto on Sheldon Road.

Since that accident, Canton residents have started a campaign to reduce the speed limit on Sheldon from 40 miles per hour to 25 mph, and to place a traffic light on the corner of Sheldon and Saltz, which is a block from Hoben Elementary School.

The residents appeared before the township board to request those changed and were told that any changes would take three to eight weeks.

We hope some changes result.

We can well understand the fears of parents who must trust the lives of their children to crossing guards and motorists. Traffic seems to be getting faster and faster, as our lives become more complex with more places to go and things to do in a normal business day.

We would like to see the pace of traffic slowed along Sheldon, but 25 miles per hour seems too slow.

Also, it's confusing for drivers who must negotiate three different speed limits while traveling along Sheldon.

THE SPEED limit on that road south of Cherry Hill is 45 miles an hour and north of Ford Road it's 35 miles an hour.

To throw a 25 mph zone in the middle of 45 mph and 35 mph zones would probably cause as many problems as it would solve.

It reminds us of the 55 mph speed limit on Michigan's freeway system. It was too slow and it was violated wholesale by most drivers, no matter what any state police report said.

Speeds often hit about 70 mph, which was the old speed.

Anyway, back to Sheldon Road. We'd suggest that the speed limit be set at 35 mph for the entire stretch. That would lower it by 5 mph near the school and also be less confusing for drivers.

We would also support the installation of a pedestrian-style traffic light that blinks yellow when it's not needed, but turns red when children need it to cross the street.

But there are other matters that come up when setting speed limits: the responsibility for setting them and enforcement.

The speed limit on Sheldon Road is set by the Wayne County Department of Public Services, the state police and Canton police. And according to officials the speed limit on Sheldon and other township roads are reviewed every ten years.

That sounds like too long for us, especially in areas like Canton where subdivisions spring up quickly. Ten years in a place like Canton can see a farmers' field turned into the home for thousands of persons.

Some system should be developed in Canton to anticipate traffic problems and deal with them before there are injuries or deaths.

Volunteers

They deserve thanks, respect

IF YOU SAY you have no time for volunteerism because you work, the 49 percent of the 1.6 million metropolitan area people who perform an average 4.2 hours a week of volunteerism prove you wrong.

That's a good indication that the "me" generation is turning into the "we" generation. It says that volunteerism has taken on well-deserved respectability, banishing the thinking that volunteers were those who couldn't find paid work or had nothing better to do.

A committee message to volunteers explains the feeling:

"Everyone wins in volunteerism: the individual, businesses, not-for-profit organizations, our community and the nation. Through giving of themselves for others, volunteers broaden their lives and add a sense of well-being and accomplishment to family friends and co-workers."

Indeed, when the first kickoff recognition breakfast was held, 90 people attended. This year more than 900 people are expected at the Monday, April 10, event.

The breakfast opens National Volunteer Week, April 9-15, here in Michigan. It's also a good time to re-evaluate your commitment to the community. After all, 4.2 hours is just one night of TV.

That's a small price for a big win.

New ballpark

Taxpayers should not pay

Even though a baseball stadium would receive far more use than the debt-plagued Pontiac Silverdome, we don't believe it's in the public's interest to help subsidize professional sports teams.

A LOT HAS happened since we examined the plight of Tiger Stadium this time last year.

Back then, we knew there was the possibility a new Tiger Stadium would someday replace the old. Now, we have some vision of what a new stadium would look like.

As far as the plans for a new, open air park go, we're impressed. We have a strong preference for natural turf and fresh air.

But there are bigger issues at stake.

First off, we reiterate our belief that a new Tiger Stadium, whenever built, should be easily accessible for city dwellers as well as suburbanites. We've said this before and it bears repeating — Tiger Stadium remains one of a dwindling number of places where city and suburban dwellers can routinely gather to pull for a common cause. That's not true with all our area's sports teams. While we don't believe the Detroit Pistons display a "plantation mentality," we do know the Auburn Hills Palace is a far drive — even from suburban Livonia.

Second, we strongly prefer a privately-built and operated stadium to one using public financing. Even though a baseball stadium would receive far more use than the debt-plagued Pontiac Silverdome, we don't believe it's in the public's interest to help subsidize professional sports teams. Regardless of the good will they generate, professional sports teams are businesses. The city, indeed our region as a whole, could put the stadium money to better use.

That said, there's an issue that gnaws at us. It's this — professional sports is increasingly becoming the province of the very rich. In some cities, far more attention is paid to luxury box holders than to everyday fans who weather sun, rain and wind, not to mention long lines, for the chance to spend a relaxing afternoon or evening at the ballpark.

CUTTING DOWN on the number of bleacher seats in the proposed ballpark is a troubling sign. It seems that Tiger management is moving in this direction.

Our third issue, then, is this: Keep the everyday fans in mind.

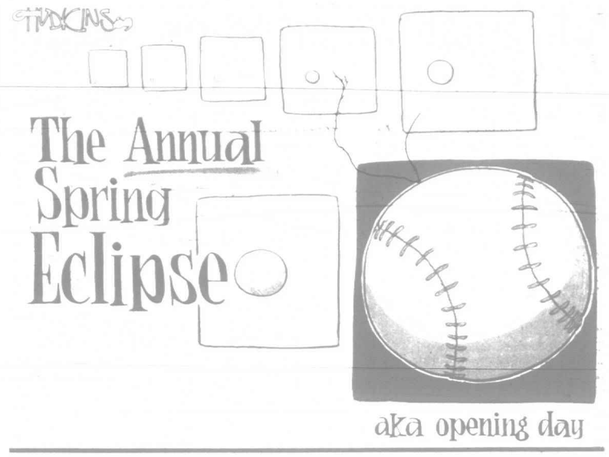
We understand that luxury boxes are a bottom-line necessity, especially in privately built stadiums.

But it should also be remembered that the working men and women of Detroit have long made the Tigers one of baseball's most consistently successful teams at the gate. It would be a tragedy if they were somehow "priced out" of the new ballpark.

Though they are a private business — and we suggest they play in a privately built and operated stadium — we still believe the Tigers should remain accessible to all area residents, regardless of geographic location or income level.

Whatever it's flaws, the old Tiger Stadium provides that kind of accessibility. That doesn't mean that the old ballpark couldn't be improved upon. Remember, few of the thousands of hockey fans streaming into comfortable new Joe Louis Arena express a preference for Olympia.

A new Tiger Stadium could also be a sports fans' paradise. Or it could be a fool's paradise. The choices Tiger management makes in the next few years will tell.



Dedicate some time for hometown needs

Steve Barnaby

AFTER HEARING that only 3 percent of registered voters cast ballots in the recent Birmingham election, I could only think of Catherine Walker and the recent conversation we engaged in at our newspaper office on Bowers.

Catherine is a feisty woman who enjoys getting about town and shaking the bushes. It doesn't matter what side of an issue you're on — hers or the other side — she will get your attention.

Last Friday she caught mine.

"Say, there you are, Mr. Barnaby. Well I recognize you by your picture," said a voice from the lobby.

Now before Friday I had never met Catherine Walker, but when I turned around, I instantly knew that I was facing a determined and charming woman. Now, I've always enjoyed that mixture of determination and charm that one rarely finds in combination, so I was ready to listen.

Of course, being recognized from my column picture did nothing to bruise the ego, either.

Catherine, a lady somewhere in her 70s, was concerned that younger persons in the community were less than ardent in exercising their franchise. With paper in hand she was strongly recommending that we run the voting precinct locations in the front of the newspaper rather than just in a legal advertisement in the sports section.

We speculated for a while on how this could best be accomplished in upcoming elections and she continued on from there.

"You know, I get concerned that some of the newer people in Birmingham just aren't paying enough attention. They need to participate more. I know this election isn't a big thing. But getting out to vote is a way to show you care."

SHE NOTED that reading a local newspaper was another important way to stay updated on community happenings "even when you always don't agree with how the newspaper stands on an issue," she said, throwing a mischievious grin my way.

She continued by saying that she was urging one of her friends to renew her subscription to the newspaper, even though she didn't agree with some of our editorial stands.

Admittedly, I felt good after talking with Catherine Walker. She's the type of person that makes a community solid.

She grew up and has lived her life in Birmingham. She knows it like few others ever will.

Every community needs a Catherine Walker. Most have them. But we need more. You very well might be that kind of person, or have the potential to be one.

Unfortunately, in today's world, many have become "too busy" to care about their community. Working, hustling the kids to school, hanging out at the right spots, going to the health club and driving that Mercedes has put a strain on the cohesiveness of one of America's traditional strengths — the community.

Recently, a news report outlined how, in one eastern bloc country, a plan has been devised wherein entire villages are being bulldozed and replaced by cities of multi-story apartments. Workers are being forced to leave towns which have seen generations of their families grow and prosper, where traditions have been built, rituals ingrained.

Pretty drastic stuff, likely to never happen here. But think about that for a second. We may not be tearing down entire towns. But if we don't care enough to participate in the process, aid our communities to grow and prosper, we might as well bring in the bulldozers.

Millage supported

To the editor:

On June 11, there are some people who will probably vote against the school board's request for an additional 4 mills. For most voters who choose this course, we will never know why. However, Dan Holton has told us why in no uncertain terms in his letter to the Observer on Monday, March 13. He claims that a 27 percent increase in his SEV will result in this paying an additional $400 in school tax, based on 37 mills. He also asserts that the board is "out of touch" with the voters. Let's look at the real situation.

1. Plymouth currently has voter authorization to collect 37 mills. But because of the past effect of the Headlee limitation, the allowable rate for 1989-90, without the 4-mill increase, would only be 32.22 mills.

2. If the 4 mills pass, Headlee will kick in and the district will only be able to collect 2.05 mills out of the 4.

3. If the 4 mills pass, the effective school tax rate for 1989-90 will be 34.27 mills (32.22 plus 2.05), not the 37 mills that Mr. Holton is so outraged about. Headlee does exactly what Mr. Holton requests; it limits any increase to the rate of inflation.

Mr. Holton claims that the school board is "out of touch." If he had even once attended a school board meeting, or called any one of the board members about this issue, he would not have said this. The school board has done an excellent job of providing a quality education for our children in the face of sharply declining levels of State aid. But you can only pinch pennies for so long. Our district is now one of the lowest in Wayne county in expenditures per pupil. We are also way down the list on the state level.

The board is well aware of voter sentiment (informed and uninformed). It is not asking for a Headlee override. It is only asking for a small increase to offset the accumulated effects of Headlee and the reduction in State support. It wants to stop the slide and reinstate some of the critical cuts it was forced to make last year. This is a very modest request, and it deserves voter support.

While we are on the subject of the facts about school millage, it is also important to remind all taxpayers of the Homestead Tax Credit Law. This law says that no one should pay more than 3.5 percent of their household income in property tax. If your tax bill is more than 3.5 percent of your household income, you can get 100 percent of the difference back if you are over 65, and 60 percent of the difference back if you are under 65. In both cases, the maximum rebate is $1,200. If you were not aware of this, talk to the person who does your taxes and get your refund if you have one coming. Please, play fair if you do get a refund. Subtract it from the figure you give out the next time you complain to someone about your tax burden.

No one in this school district is insensitive to the voters. No one is asking for pie-in-the sky. Get your facts straight, Mr. Horton, and vote for good schools. They're worth it.

Dirty floor irks woman

To the editor:

I went to the movies with my daughter this past Easter Sunday. We attended the 10:20 p.m. showing of "Lean On Me."

I could not believe the filthy floor as we entered the row in which we chose to sit. My shoes, with crepe soles, stuck to the floor. We tried several other rows, only to find the same problem.

I literally stuck to the sidewalk while walking to my car upon leaving the theater after seeing the movie. I removed my shoes once I got home, and the following morning, had to scrub them with Wisk to remove the sticky substances, whether it was pop, beer, gum, etc.

I think this is a crime when the theater charges $5.25 to see a movie and then one must endure such filthy conditions. I might add further that it took us several rows to find seats that were not broken.

The theater used to be first rate, but I am sorry to say this is no longer true. This is not the first time I have encountered this problem. I am sure I speak for many other people.

It is no wonder that people tend to rent videos today, which enables them to watch in the comfort of their own home and need not be exposed to such conditions.

I would strongly suggest the theater be cleaned up. (The owner) certainly will not see me in it's theater again. There are many theaters around with clean floors and good seats.

Homeless-to-be pose concern

Philip Sherman

YOU DON'T have to worry about going to downtown Detroit and seeing the homeless.

They're coming to western Wayne County to see you.

That may sound flippant, but it's not meant to be.

Most of the homeless are people who've been evicted. "That's the biggest" group, said Diane Fike, manager of program planning for United Community Services, one of the planning arms for the United Foundation.

She said a few of them sink all their money into drugs and haven't anything left to live on. "They're emotionally, or psychologically, temporarily unable to meet their obligations," Fike said. Some of the homeless end up homeless as a result of a marital problem, where the wage earner abandons the family. In that situation, Fike said the remaining spouse can't pick up the pieces in time ... and the family is evicted.

The reasons why people become homeless, what they do when they're homeless and what communities can do to help them will be discussed with "community leaders during 'Families With No Place to Go,' a one-day conference sponsored by the UCS April 14 at Madonna College in Livonia.

THE "FAMILIES" part of the program's title is what worries Fike. According to statistics for fiscal 1986, she estimates there were 2,313 actual homeless people in her "service area," a term which includes all of Wayne County except Detroit.

But there were 175,000 "economically vulnerable" people as of last September, Fike said. The economically vulnerable are the homeless-to-be, the people most likely to lose their homes because they're barely making it on a minimum wage income and could be monetarily devastated by any additional drain on their resources, such as a large medical bill.

These people can then turn into the "working homeless," a term Fike defined as employed people who simply can't afford housing. They go to work and then live on the streets, in shelters ... wherever.

Mary Dumas, vice chairwoman of the UCS Wayne division, said the program at Madonna also will discuss zoning laws and general community acceptance of the newly homeless, particularly families with children. The conference is not open to the public; Dumas said local officials, housing directors, supervisors and mayors are being invited to enhance their awareness of the situation.

In talking with Dumas and Fike, it became obvious that some of the homeless are the people we've met on the street or seen on television — addled, weathered souls without light in their eyes. But it also was clear that the majority are people who were hanging on and just lost their grip.

They're not a roving pack of drug addicts and prostitutes. They're people. They're off track. They could use a little help getting back on track.

That's the message that should come across at the April 14 conference.

Doc Doyle

Q: What is the predictor for success in college and, more importantly, after college?

A: The most important study that I recall when I taught Educational Research at Wayne State University was by a professor who studied National Merit Scholarship finalists over a period of 15 years. His purpose was to determine which National Merit Scholars were successful and which National Merit Scholars were not successful and what were the major factors for those who were successful.

The National Merit Scholarship test is the toughest test given to high school students and breaks out the top one percent of high school scholars in the country.

The professor extended the study to students who had average test scores and average grades to find out what were the most common factors for those people who were successful. Was it grades, aptitude (test scores), luck — what factors determined success?

Why any professor would spend 15 years on this project is beyond me, but the results are interesting. Whether a student had high grades and/or high test scores was not the major factor for those who were successful after college.

The single factor that the professor found in tracking his entire sample of students for 15 years was what he called "achievement motivation." That is, the motivation and drive to achieve was so strong that the person overcame every obstacle — social, political or otherwise — and was, in his own mind, a success.

Grades and test scores helped to initally break into a good job market but did not guarantee success. Success was defined as a person's achieving what he/she wanted to achieve in life with evidence from peers that the person was a winner, a success regardless of the occupation.

Having attended 10-, 15- and 20-year high school class reunions, I have seen National Merit Scholarship finalists who failed miserably in life and I have seen high school "C" students at these class reunions who, while in high school, went through school by the path of least resistance but who now are corporate lawyers. There seems to be an innate drive in the "A" or "C" student who is "successful," an ability to focus with a single-minded purpose on what they want in life.

Although good grades and good test scores open the door for students to numerous opportunities and in the long run pay the most dividends for the majority of students, they alone do not guarantee success in life. Those people who, if we believe the professor's study, are totally engrossed and motivated to achieve, who have a clear focus, who have overcome any, maybe many, obstacles were the successes.

Beau loved his mud

Tim Richard

Early spring was Beau's favorite because it is the season of mud.

EARLY SPRING brings fond memories of Beau, the Head Poodle.

Beau (1964-80) relished every season of the year. In late spring he leaped into rivers to land trout on the hook. Summer was devoted to scampering after waterbirds on the Lake Michigan shoreline.

Fall was his time for flushing pheasants from fields that have since been bulldozed away for I-275 and the Northville State Police headquarters. On sunny days in winter, he burrowed into a snowdrift to hunt field mice.

But early spring was Beau's favorite because it is the season of mud.

YOU HAVE to understand that in the German language, "poodle" and "puddle" come from the same root word. Poodles love mud.

It's in their genes. Poodles were waterfowl retrievers in Germany long before the French gave them those close haircuts and put 'em in circuses.

Beau relished puddles. He wouldn't leap across them. He didn't prance around them. No, Beau paraded through puddles. The long way.

As winter's snows melted, he would locate the first square foot of mud in an entire vacant lot and excavate it.

Beau's most glorious spring was the year we moved into a new suburban subdivision. No fences. No lawns. No flowers. No trees. Just acres and acres of mud, mud, glorious mud.

Daily he had to be bathed, or at least rinsed because you don't want to wash the protective oil out of a dog's coat. He endured it because of the rapture he had just experienced outdoors.

Once we made the mistake of bathing him with a scented shampoo. Angry and snorting, Beau barked to go outside where he immediately found some evil-smelling gunk and rolled in it, just to get even.

That partly used bottle of scented shampoo is still on a pantry shelf, its label faded, a monument to Beau's indomitable desire to play in dirt.

THE POODLE, according to the book, was originally a hunter's retriever of 50 pounds or so.

The instinct to retrieve stayed with the breed, even when poodles were bred down to the 21-pound size of Beau or the 10-pound size of the toy.

Beau's favorite game, until his eyesight began to go at 14, was fetch. He would fetch old tennis balls or sticks, then bark for me to throw it again.

One warm spring afternoon, he visited the green of the Kalamazoo College campus and espied a student lounging in the sun with his sandals off. Guess what Beau fetched.

Fortunately, the student was good natured. In addition, Beau was boldly handsome, and that helped. People will tolerate more mischief from a good-looking, well-groomed dog than from a frazzly brown mutt.

Beau (1964-80) relished puddles. He wouldn't leap across them. He didn't prance around them. No, Beau paraded through puddles. The long way.

Beau exploited his advantage his entire 16 years.

ONE SPRING day we visited a pond in the Grand Mere area near Beau's favorite haunts of Lake Michigan. The ice hadn't been melted long, but Beau was chasing sticks into the water.

Now Beau didn't just walk or run into the water. His style was to take a flying leap through the air and land several feet from shore. Saved paddling time.

On this occasion, Beau halted his leap, turned in mid-air, dived to the bottom of the pond and emerged seconds later with a baby muskrat in his mouth.

A mighty hunter often will show off his kill to other people, even if he doesn't intend to share it, and Beau's audience this time was a group of Camp Fire girls hiking by. Standing directly in front of them, Beau cracked the unfortunate muskrat's skull in his jaws.

"Yec-c-c-c-ch!" said the Camp Fire girls.

Beau went to Doggy Heaven in the fullness of years, as they say, and I'm certain he has a dominant spot because he devoted his entire life to honoring The Poodle Creed:

"A filthy dog is a happy dog."

Airport officials are mum about Northwest rumor

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Metro Airport officials are declining comment on a possible takeover bid for Northwest Airlines. But new ownership of Metro's largest passenger carrier could have long term repercussions for the county airport.

Northwest is rumored to be the subject of a hostile takeover. Airport officials declined comment on the situation, calling it the product of speculation more than reality.

"It's all speculative at this point," airport spokesman Michael Conway said. As of midweek the name of Northwest's prospective new owner had yet to surface publicly.

Northwest, however, is by far Metro's largest passenger carrier. As such, it has the largest say in airport financing at a time when the airport seeks to expand.

Minneapolis-based Northwest accounts for nearly 60 percent of all passenger flights at the Romulus airport. In contrast, troubled Eastern Airlines accounts for about three percent.

Under the airport's financing system, airlines pay for airport operations through landing fees — an assessment levied against the number of flights using the airport.

"NOT ONE cent of county property taxes go into the airport," Conway said. In addition to landing fees, fees from concessions, on-site parking, souvenirs and car rentals also support airport operations.

Airlines also finance bonds used to pay for airport expansion. Northwest prompted a county panic in October 1987 by threatening to withhold its share of bond payments because it didn't approve of aspects of the county's airport expansion plan. Negotiations between county and airline officials helped resolve the dispute.

Rumors of a Northwest takeover come at a time when the airport seeks a new terminal, air traffic control tower and two new runways. Metro's passenger use rose from 4.2 million in 1982 to 9.9 million five years later. It is expected to top 14.5 million by the mid-1990s.

Ironically, Metro's expansion was prompted to a large degree by Northwest's making the airport its major hub. As such, Metro is the main connecting route for intercontinental Northwest flights regardless of the point of original or final destination.

Northwest's decision to boost its presence at Metro, however, came after a business dealings of its own.

Republic Airlines initially sought to create a Metro hub before its 1986 merger with Northwest.

That move was a positive step for airport growth, officials said.

"Northwest brought in a wider mix of planes, including more larger planes than Republic could have," Conway said.

Business, economic ethics stressed

The University of Detroit is now registering students for a lecture/discussion course called "Human and Ethical Values in Our Economic World."

The course will cover topics such as economic justice in society; ethical behavior in business and finance; corporate, governmental and individual responsibility; and the significance of faith and values in work.

John Schwartz, a religious educator specializing in social justice and peace issues will conduct the course.

Through lectures and discussion, the class will examine current issues and possible directions. Although a theological approach is taken, individuals of any religious affiliation, or none at all, are invited to enroll.

Beginning April 3 and running through May 15, classes will be held every Monday from 7-9:30 p.m. at the First United Presbyterian Church in Plymouth.

Fees for the two credit hour course are $200 for non credit students, $250 for undergraduates, and $300 for graduate students. For more information, call the University of Detroit division of continuing education at 927-1026.

Kids learn, have fun

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Learning didn't come to a halt for local youngsters last week.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools students were on vacation, but many still found time for learning. Arts classes offered by the Plymouth Community Arts Council provided the perfect opportunity.

Steve Paulsen of Belleville taught a mask-making class for 9-12-year-olds.

"It worked out real well, I think," said Paulsen, who also teaches classes for the Ann Arbor Art Association.

The class included two sessions. At the first session, students learned the basics.

Instructor Henry Pahlkotter works on an origami creation. Pahlkotter taught two origami classes offered last week by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

"We did hands first, just to get them used to the material." After making casts of hands, students watched as Paulsen demonstrated how to make a face mask.

At the second session, students worked in teams of two. They took turns being models for the mask-making.

THEIR FACES were coated with Vaseline and then covered with strips of a plaster-impregnated gauze that had been soaked in water. The students had straws in their nostrils, making it possible for them to breathe during the procedure.

"They got a kick out of that," Paulsen said.

The masks took 10 to 15 minutes to dry to the point where they could be removed. After the masks had dried completely, students had the chance to paint their creations, spray them with an airbrush or use a paint brush and tempera paint.

"I think they did real well," said Paulsen, who was teaching his first Plymouth Community Arts Council class last week.

He also talked with the students about aspects of sculpture. Paulsen has a bachelor's in fine arts from Eastern Michigan University and a teaching certificate. He's working on a master's in art education at EMU.

Younger children had a chance to learn about art last week as well. An origami class for 6-8-year-olds was taught by Henry Pahlkotter of Ann Arbor.

The Christian Conciliation Service of Southeastern Michigan helps people resolve a variety of disputes. "It's a way of helping people to get their needs met, as well as resolve the issues," said Judy Darlington, executive director. "Sometimes that takes a long time."

Agency helps people settle disagreements

PUTTING CHRISTIAN beliefs into practice isn't easy. When disputes arise, those beliefs are put to the test.

"As Christians, we're told to love one another," said Judy Darlington, executive director of the Christian Conciliation Service of Southeastern Michigan.

CCS is an interdenominational peacemaking ministry. Its purpose is to promote a Biblically faithful approach to resolving disputes.

"It's a way of helping people to get their needs met as well as resolve the issues," Darlington said.

The service is for people, churches, businesses and organizations throughout the metropolitan area. It's been operating for about five years locally, and nationally for about 10 years.

THE SERVICE was started by a group of California attorneys who realized the adversarial way of resolving disputes didn't help relationships.

"The court is not equipped to handle relationships and that's what this is all about."

CCS helps people in "any arena in which disputes arise in all of life," Darlington said. The service isn't limited to Christians, although participants are told that it has a Christian framework.

Marital disputes are the most common ones seen at CCS, which is housed at the Trinity Church of the Brethren in Redford.

"We tell them if they're willing to look at their marriage in another way, we can help them," said Darlington, a Plymouth Township resident who worships at Trinity Presbyterian Church of Plymouth. "We call it marriage mediation and conciliation counseling, learning how to bring some harmony into the relationship."

Spouses learn to respect each other's differences, to understand their own needs and anticipate the other person's needs.

"That seems to be the key and that isn't easy."

For some couples, that may involve a separation. In one situation, CCS volunteers weren't able to help a couple involved in a divorce. That case had a resolution but not a reconciliation.

"When you're dealing with people, it's never going to be perfect," she said.

PEOPLE WITH substance abuse problems use the service. Darlington, who earned a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan, has training in that field.

She was with Plymouth Family Service in 1986-87 as a substance abuse specialist and was with Family Service of Detroit and Wayne County for two years before

The expansion at the church was in the planning stages for several years. "We weighed very carefully the demographics of the area," said the Rev. John Grenfell Jr., pastor at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth.

Growing in faith, size

Construction work is under way at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth. The project is scheduled to be done at some point in 1990.

By Julie Brown
staff writer

The Rev. John Grenfell Jr. can certainly be forgiven if he's a bit distracted at work these days. The noise of bulldozers and other construction equipment can make concentrating difficult.

Grenfell has been pastor at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth for nearly nine years. He and other church leaders are overseeing a major expansion project at the church, on North Territorial west of Sheldon in Plymouth Township.

The construction vehicles are rolling just outside of Grenfell's office, generating a bit of noise. Work began in November 1988, and is scheduled to be done some time in 1990.

"Just when I'm not sure," Grenfell said. Church leaders hope to be in the new sanctuary by Easter 1990.

"This winter has been good to us, so that may not be too impossible."

THE FINAL part of the project will be remodeling the present sanctuary into a fellowship hall.

On the east side of the church, a new administrative office wing is being built. West of the present sanctuary, a new parlor, kitchen and enclosed garden — possibly a memorial garden — are being added. That portion of the building will include a new sanctuary with a full basement, a new choir room and library with a basement underneath, and new restrooms.

The entire facility will be barrier-free.

The general contractor for the project is T.H. Marsh Construction Co. of Livonia. Cost of the project is just under $3.2 million, not including the building and purchase of a new pipe organ for the sanctuary. The total cost for that will be approximately $220,000.

Plans for the expansion started about five years ago, Grenfell said. A future planning task force at the church looked at the need for expansion.

"We weighed very carefully the demographics of the area," Church leaders realized they needed more space for worship services.

"We needed more building to provide flexibility for programming," Grenfell said.

THE CHURCH has some 1,300 to 1,400 members and has been growing in recent years. A writer from the United Methodist Reporter, a church publication based in Dallas, traveled to Plymouth to do a story on the church's growth.

The focus of the church upon fellowship has helped attract members, the focus on the church being a mission has helped as well. Members work at soup kitchens in Detroit and Pontiac, and are excited about being involved in Christian service.

The construction project followed a three-year pledge program, in which some $1.2 million was raised. The remaining money was borrowed, Grenfell said, with the understanding that additional funds would be sought.

"It is going to be a large facility when we get through with it." The sanctuary will seat some 700, doubling the seating capacity of the current sanctuary.

Church members moved into the building on North Territorial in early 1972. The First United Methodist Church of Plymouth has a long and proud history; its members celebrated the church's 160th anniversary last fall.

Smaller projects at the church, such as building library shelves and kitchen cabinets, will be taken care of by church members.

Church members Sandy Burr and George Trinka are responsible for the upbeat sign posted on North Territorial. The sign, visible to passing motorists, reads "In Faith We Grow, Come Grow With Us." The theme for the capital funds drive was "In Faith We Grow."

Grenfell has been through one other building project during his ministry. When he was at St. Matthew's United Methodist Church in Livonia, that project took place right next to the parsonage.

"So I knew what to expect because of those days and experiences."

Church members will hold a dedication service when the new facility is completed. They're excited about the expansion but know there's more to the church than the building.

"The church is still people," Grenfell said.

Disputes can create strain that. While at Plymouth Family Service, Darlington received post-graduate training in family therapy.

Business disputes are handled at CCS. Those may include a disagreement between two business partners or a landlord-tenant dispute.

Resolving disputes takes time. In one case, two business partners met for eight months before coming to any kind of conciliation. They then continued to meet to keep the communication lines open.

Dispute resolution starts with conciliation counseling. If the parties aren't able to resolve the dispute on their own, they may submit it for mediation.

A panel of volunteer peacemakers is appointed. Each of the parties fills out a workbook, which is given to the panelists. Each then tells his or her story in a non-hurting way.

"Then you can go to solving the problem after that, or problems."

VOLUNTEERS AREN'T required to have any specific professional background. They need the gift of understanding and must be able to listen to and respect people. Efforts are made to include a person that each party respects, that person isn't necessarily trained as a peacemaker.

"Then they can feel safe that their needs will be addressed." If possible, each party's pastor is involved as well.

CCS also does arbitration.

"We use that rarely if people are not able to come to a reconciliation," Darlington said. "Child custody issues sometimes have to come to that."

In that process, peacemakers hear testimony from people with pertinent information. They then render a decision which is legally binding.

CCS is governed by a 14-member board of directors. Darlington served on that board for three years before becoming executive director in the summer of 1987.

As a volunteer organization, its staff is minimal, including Darlington and a part-time secretary. Office space is donated by the Trinity Church of the Brethren, at 27350 W. Chicago in Redford. An answering service is provided by the Restoration Christian Fellowship Church in Farmington Hills.

CCS is funded by individual and church donations.

"We would never turn anybody away because of fees," Darlington said. Those using the service are asked to make a donation, based on their ability to give. People who have gone through counseling or made use of the legal system are more likely to contribute, she said.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Judy Darlington has been executive director of the Christian Conciliation Service of Southeastern Michigan since the summer of 1987. Before that, she was with Plymouth Family Service as a substance abuse specialist.

CCS is a member of the Association of Christian Conciliation Services, a national association of peacemaking ministries. ACCS is associated with the Christian Legal Society, a national group of Christian attorneys based in Merrifield, Va.

Darlington tries to practice what she preaches with her own family. She and her husband have two daughters, ages 22 and 25.

The hardest part "is learning to apply it on a consistent basis at home," she said. "That's where you're real. It's a very humbling experience."

CCS is among some 50 such organizations in the U.S., she said. Services also are starting in other countries.

Some people are surprised to find such a service available; they're not accustomed to thinking of the church as a place to resolve disputes.

"It's a fairly new field, dispute resolution. Dealing with it in this manner is fairly new in our culture. I just see tremendous room for growth."

Church groups plan conference

Clergy and lay people will soon have an opportunity to learn more about conciliation services.

A one-day conference on "The Necessity of the Ministry of Reconciliation Within the Church Community" is planned for April. The conference will be offered from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at three locations:

- Tuesday, April 11, at William Tyndale College, 35700 W. 12 Mile in Farmington Hills;
- Thursday, April 13, at the Metropolitan Church of God in Detroit;
- Saturday, April 15, at the Zion Evangelistic Temple in Clawson.

The conference is sponsored by the Christian Conciliation Service of Southeastern Michigan, William Tyndale College, the Metropolitan Church of God and Single Point Ministries of Ward Presbyterian Church.

Conference leaders will be the Rev. Sam Soleyn, an ordained minister and attorney, and the Rev. Charlie Richards, an ordained minister. Soleyn and Richards will also speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 12, at Knox Presbyterian Church in Mount Clemens and Friday, April 14, at Ward Presbyterian Church, 17000 Farmington Road in Livonia.

The $25 registration fee for the conference includes a continental breakfast and lunch. Additional participants may register for $20 each.

For more information, call the Christian Conciliation Service of Southeastern Michigan, 937-3939.

the arts council office in Plymouth. A class in fabric painting was offered by the PCAC as well.

THE YOUNGER children in the origami class used colored paper to make a variety of creations, including bracelets or headbands, peacocks, whales, sailboats and balloons.

Each origami class had two sessions. Students learned facts about origami, the art of paper folding. Origami got its start some 2,000 years ago in China, it then moved to Japan where it was perfected.

"It became a large part of their culture," said Pahlkotter, who works as an admissions counselor for Concordia College in Ann Arbor.

Pahlkotter, a Concordia College graduate, has a bachelor's with an education major and English and art minors. He taught art for two years in Muskegon before returning to this area, and plans to go to EMU for a master's in an educational field.

In the origami classes, Pahlkotter used simpler designs for the younger children. Those designs also helped introduce the older group to origami.

"And some are very gifted." Some already had experience with origami.

"They think it's really neat to be able to create things out of paper," Pahlkotter said.

Students were glad they were able to take their creations home with them. The students in the mask-making class had that opportunity as well.

Pahlkotter found his students were most fascinated by the balloon, created by folding paper a certain way and then inflating it.

"It became three-dimensional, so they think that's neat."

He showed the students a couple of books on origami, and reminded them that becoming proficient takes time and effort.

"You just have to keep practicing until you know what you're doing because paper doesn't always want to work with you," Pahlkotter said.

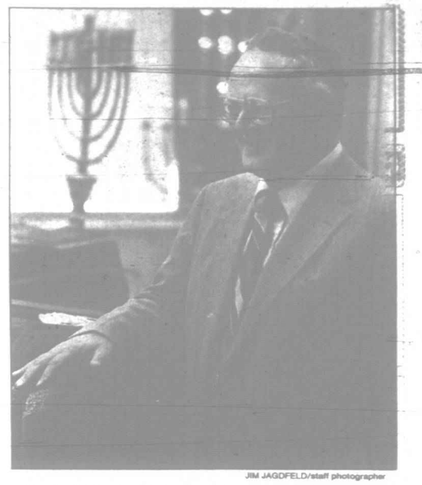
Synagogue thrives with help of members



JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Rabbi Martin Gordon has been at Livonia Jewish Congregation since 1967. The synagogue serves 75 families and is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Hey, it's not easy being the rabbi for the only conservative synagogue in Western Wayne County. Just ask Martin Gordon.

"Non-Jews call me all the time and ask me questions," said Rabbi Martin Gordon, who heads the Livonia Jewish Congregation, which is celebrating its 30th anniversary Sunday. "One person calls up and asks me for a recipe for matzo. A person who is a Christian Scientist the other day calls up and wants to know what fish are kosher.

"It's a little awesome serving 75 families in the congregation, but when you're the only rabbi serving in Western Wayne County it's quite a task."

The Livonia Jewish Congregation has not only survived, but thrives. And that's no easy task.

The congregation has always been faced with the continual movement of Jewish people from Wayne County to Oakland County. Yet congregation members still come from all over the tri-county area to attend services, including from as far as Oak Park, Southfield, Detroit, Lathrup Village, Pontiac, Whitmore Lake and Walled Lake.

And everyone pitches in to make the congregation vibrant. Many of the members perform numerous tasks. For instance, one member, Phyllis Scherman of Livonia, serves in a variety of roles, including publicity chairwoman, community services director and chairwoman for the upcoming Chai Dinner Sunday.

"I'm embarrassed sometimes. People are working four nights a week and I have to ask them to work a fifth night," Gordon said.

OF COURSE, Gordon does his share as well. In addition to his normal duties of officiating Shabbot services on Fridays and Saturdays, not to mention holiday services, Yarseits, weddings and funerals, he visits hospital patients, nursing homes and prisoners.

Gordon also takes an active role in the community. He is chaplain for the Livonia Police Department. He's on the steering committee for the annual Livonia Prayer Breakfast and is a chaplain at Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital.

One recent visit found him in the unusual position of counseling black Muslims.

"There was only one Jewish patient in the hospital," Gordon said, "and he didn't want to see me."

Since arriving at Livonia Jewish Congregation in 1967 from Maine, the experience hasn't been what Gordon quite expected.

Not only has he provided guidance for black Muslims, Gordon has counseled Syrians and Lebanese. He said some of his most rewarding experiences have come from working in the community.

"I pictured myself working with youths. I'm working in geriatrics. I'm working with the emotionally impaired. I'm working in fields I never thought I would," Gordon said.

Gordon's fulfilling experiences are perhaps only exceeded by the rich history of the congregation.

THE ROOTS of the Livonia Jewish Congregation can be traced back to a meeting of 10 men at Clarenceville Central Elementary School to organize services. The Livonia Jewish Congregation was organized in 1959.

Services were held in a variety places, including a tent at the Botsford Inn, until a church was bought and converted into a synagogue in 1964. The congregation then moved to its present spot on Seven Mile Road in 1970 when The United Hebrew School vacated operations there.

Cantor Henry Blank was the congregation's first full-time spiritual leader. Gordon was hired in 1967 to work with the cantor.

Blank retired from his full-time duties in 1960 after serving as a cantor for 70 years.

The Livonia Jewish Congregation also had the distinction of installing Helen Bayles as the first woman president of a conservative Jewish synagogue in metropolitan Detroit. She was one of only 50 women to have done so.

For members, the Livonia Jewish Congregation has a myriad of activities. There is Sunday School and adult education, as well as services conducted in both Hebrew and English.

Due to its size, the congregation operates on a tight budget. A small membership does have its benefits.

"As a rabbi, I can spend an hour or two hours with members," Gordon said. "With a larger congregation, that would be difficult."

moral perspectives
Rabbi Irwin Groner

Spiritual erosion is as devastating

We live in two worlds. One is the natural world of plants and animals, soil and water that preceded us by billions of years. The other is the world of institutions and artifacts, the world shaped by man's intellect, tools and industry.

Man is endangering the natural world.

The ecological crisis in America — indeed, the world — is obvious and alarming. Environmentalists say we must clean up the atmosphere and live or continue to pollute and die.

The atmosphere we breathe is extremely important. In fact, individuals frequently move from one geographical area to another in search of more compatible health conditions.

However, the spread of noxious substances in the atmosphere has become so extensive that it is becoming very difficult to find a major urban center that does not have a problem with air pollution.

While we have become sensitized to the deteriorating condition of our physical environment, we have ignored moral and spiritual erosion, even more devastating than general ecology.

Never have human beings been exposed to so many pollutants of mind, body and spirit. The American city is a bizarre scene, a veritable cornucopia of corruption, a weird marketplace of distorted values.

ON THE streets of America's cities, one encounters trafficking in drugs, the proliferation of handguns, a frightening increase in prostitution and crimes against property and people so numerous and regular as to evoke little or no notice in the press.

It is not only the criminal aspect of our society that is so disturbing, but also, and even more important, the social unrest that festers in the middle of America's urban centers — poverty, unemployment, homelessness, frustration and despair.

Whether it be physical or spiritual, to change the atmosphere is both difficult and costly. But it must be done, if we are to survive as a nation. The first and most important step toward correction is the recognition that serious and urgent problems confront us.

However, desirable, improvement will not occur — in either the physical or spiritual world — until people change, until they are willing to assume new responsibilities, new challenges and new obligations.

A better society will not emerge until people surrender their selfishness, make a commitment to the welfare of the community and give more generously of themselves and their substance to assist the poor, the unfortunate and those trapped in dying cities.

WHILE THE government can conduct studies, initiate programs and finance projects, the ultimate force that determines the outcome exists within people who will provide the initiative and integrity necessary to transform and control both the outer and inner environment.

The psalmist of old declared: "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world and those who dwell therein." That which egotistical and avaricious human beings proudly call their own may revert to the Creator because of neglect, apathy and corruption.

It is time we start behaving like guests in God's world.

Most medicines available as over-the-counter drugs

Q. What is the difference between prescription medications and non-prescription? I've gotten some that seemed the same.

A. Your family's medicine cabinet may look as if it's a small size pharmacy — stocked with a variety of remedies for all types of ailments.

The first-aid spray, laxative, antihistamine, decongestant and painkiller are all available over-the-counter (OTC), without a doctor's prescription. In fact, six of every 10 medicines in the average home is an OTC.

According to a recent survey, we Americans treat four times as many of our common health problems ourselves with OTCs than we take to our doctor.

Terry Gibb

The difference between prescription and OTC drugs is spelled out in the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. It says that drugs that are habit-forming or unsafe for use except under a doctor's supervision can be dispensed only with a prescription.

Drugs that are generally considered safe for the consumer to use by following the required label directions and warnings are available over-the-counter.

The OTC market is expanding as Americans become more health conscious. The widespread availability of good products with a clear margin of safety, more comprehensive labeling and an affordable price have combined to increase sales in recent years.

OTCS NOT ONLY relieve symptoms, some can even cure an illness. Others are used to prevent diseases, such as fluoride toothpaste to prevent tooth decay. Still others are used to help people manage chronic conditions.

In 1972, the FDA started reviewing all OTCs on the market to insure that these products met the criteria for safety, effectiveness and proper labeling. As a result, some products have been taken off the market while some 20 others have changed status from prescription to OTC.

Ibuprofen is an example. Originally it was only dispensed through a doctor's prescription. Now it is a common OTC pain reliever.

Outbreaks prompt warning about fever

A damaging disease that attacked mostly school-age children during the 1950s and '60s seems to be on the upsurge again after decades of dormancy.

The American Osteopathic Association said incidents of rheumatic fever are on the upsurge, pointing to outbreaks in Utah and other areas of the country. Rheumatic fever can cause serious health problems, especially in young children, if left untreated.

Caused by a streptococcus bacteria, which commonly occurs in the throat, rheumatic fever can develop within three weeks after an episode of strep throat.

Sometime symptomless, although more often causing fever and inflammation of the large joints of the body, the disease can progress to endocarditis, or swelling of the heart, which may cripple its young victims with permanent heart damage.

While less than one out of every 10 sore throats in children is caused by strep, the AOA recommends a trip to the doctor, if your child has a fever of more than 101 degrees, swollen neck glands or infected tonsils.

Only through a throat culture can the presence of the bacteria be determined and antibiotic treatment begun to prevent the occurence of rheumatic fever.

Health care chief wrestles with industry

Can't return to 'good old days'

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Despite the perception that there is a health-care crisis in this country, Edward Connors, new chairman of the American Hospital Association and president of Mercy Health Services in Farmington Hills, isn't caught up in doom and gloom.

"I reject the notion it (health administration) used to be fun and now it's a series of headaches," said Connors from his offices on 12 Mile. "Yes, it's tough, but the possibilities for leadership are enormous. I don't subscribe to the theory of returning to the good old days."

That's not to say he doesn't realize there are serious problems (see related story) like rapidly rising costs, cutbacks in Medicaid and Medicare, failing hospitals, skyrocketing malpractice insurance, low levels of consumer confidence, a dangerous shortage of nurses.

"It is sobering that nowhere in this nation, not in this association and not among any legitimate stakeholders in health, does there exist a clear, unambiguous vision of what health care in the United States could and should be in the future," said Connors at his investiture in Washington, D.C., in January as AHA chairman. The 6,000 member institutions of the AHA comprise 92 percent of the hospitals nationwide.

Deciding, as a nation, what kind of health care we want and then making the tough decisions on how to pay for it won't come easy. As AHA chairman, he will testify in Washington, speak to groups around the country, give advice to member institutions and hope that in his one year as head of the trade association, he can help get health care back on track.

Connors will be honored Tuesday by the Southeast Michigan Hospital Council at a dinner at the Hotel St. Regis in downtown Detroit.)

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Edward Connors, new chairman of the American Hospital Association and president of Mercy Health Services in Farmington Hills, believes the nation must adopt a vision of what its health care should and could be.

CONNORS, WHO grew up in a small, farming community in South Dakota, was the starting quarterback on the University of South Dakota football team and still holds the school record for pass-completion percentage — he graduated in 1951 and back then, his team still ran the old single wing, where passing by the quarterback was nearly nonexistent. In desperation one game, he threw the only pass of his career and to his surprise, it was caught.

His leadership skills were more sharply honed in infantry combat in Korea, which he entered as a second lieutenant and left as a first lieutenant and company commander.

"I learned about leadership of people at stressful times, though I wasn't conscious of it at the time. People look to you for leadership, and you have to provide it whether you're ready for it or not."

Coincidentally, it was during combat that Connors received notification that he had been accepted to graduate school at the University of Minnesota, a career move that was linked to his football days. A tight end on his team who was a year ahead of him had touted the field of health administration.

Connors, a math major as an undergraduate, had planned on a career in education. On the basis of his friend's urging, and despite no background in the field, he applied to Minnesota's School of Public Health and resumed his schooling after getting out of the Army in 1953.

Connors earned his master's degree in health administration in 1955, completed an administrative residency at Rhode Island, then joined the staff at the University of Michigan, where he attained the position of assistant professor. In 1960, he was named superintendent of the University of Wisconsin hospitals. In 1969, he returned to U-M as director of University Hospital, a post he left in 1974 for the Sisters of Mercy.

In 1976, he was named president of Mercy Health Corp. and in 1984, president of its parent corporation, Mercy Health Services (see related story on Mercy and its subsidiaries). In January, he assumed the chairmanship of the AHA, a trade association that represents the health-care industry in the formulation of public policy and which helps the industry develop education and management programs.

IT'S BEEN A BUSY couple of months for Connors. As AHA chair, he has been to Washington (twice), Idaho, Phoenix, Traverse City, Iowa and New Jersey.

The work for the AHA takes up "30-40 percent of a seven-day week," said Connors, an Ann Arbor resident and avid U-M fan, who managed to get tickets to the Final Four in Seattle. "Since there's no pay, it takes a very supportive organization back home, an understanding board and staff."

Despite the seven-day week, Connors, 60, finds time to support his hobbies of reading (mysteries, politics, history and the New York Sunday Times), the theater and ballet.

His artistic bent was passed on to his two daughters, Colleen Connors Long, a novelist and aspiring screenplay writer living in California, and Bridget, a singer, dancer and actress who graduated from the U-M Music School. His sons, Timothy and Patrick, are attorneys.

Human, financial resources stand as difficult questions

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Just because Edward Connors is an optimist doesn't make him a Pollyanna. Though he heads the American Hospital Association, he is candid in his criticisms of the health-care industry and the problems facing it.

He said, for example, that too much money is spent at too many teaching institutions and that the industry must restrain itself in the use of expensive technology.

These are the key issues facing health-care administrators, Connors said:

- Finding an adequate and stable source of financing.

Because of cuts in government reimbursement for Medicare and Medicaid patients, hospitals in Michigan now get back only approximately 80 cents of each dollar in care they provide. A survey by the accounting firm of Coopers and Lybrand estimates that next year, state hospitals will lose an average of $792 for each Medicaid inpatient, or $113 a day.

- Too much competition.

Hospitals must collaborate rather than compete, Connors said. Competition was encouraged under the Reagan administration, but "it pitted one hospital against another. But who wants to compete for the poor or the uninsured?" As a result, the burden of caring for the poor has fallen on a small pool of hospitals and doctors.

- The availability of human resources, primarily a shortage of nurses.

"We're on the edge of a crisis and it's likely to get a lot worse."

- Making sure that the care given is really needed and is indicated by national industry standards.

Connors said standards work well with drugs — what to give to whom and in what dosages — but there are no standards for many other treatments and tests.

Connors said there are too many tests, both by doctors who profit by them or doctors who don't. "It's the way they're trained," he said. They are taught to do all they can, though in the long run, because of cost-ineffectiveness, too much health care can lead to poorer, not better, service, given a finite amount of money available.

CONNORS ISN'T afraid to discuss the issues bluntly with his peers. At his investiture in Washington, D.C., in January as chairman of the American Hospital Association, he said, in part:

"It is sobering that nowhere in this nation . . . does there exist a clear, unambiguous vision of what health care in the United States could and should be in the future. (Such) lack of consensus . . . leads inevitably to short-term fragmented public policy decisions, political manipulation, divisiveness among providers, underfunding and discontent with the status quo."

And, "all persons have a basic right to needed health services and that this right flows not from policy judgment by society but rather from the dignity and worth of each human being."

And that industry must place "as much emphasis on compassion as on technical and scientific competence (and) must strive to deliver uniformly the same high standard of care to all, regardless of economic classification, payment sources or patient characteristics . . . .

"Our mission calls for us now to give our time, energy and resources to shaping a better tomorrow — a tomorrow characterized by a new vision, a clear goal, a set of values and principles that distinguishes this field from commercial, commodity-oriented businesses, and a tomorrow that will be better for those whom we serve."

Outlining Mercy Health services

Edward Connors, the new chairman of the American Hospital Association, whose 6,000-member institutions comprise 92 percent of all hospitals in the United States, is also president of the Farmington-based Mercy Health Services, a vast, non-profit system of healthcare services sponsored by the Sisters of Mercy-Province of Detroit.

Mercy Health Services employs about 15,000, has a variety of non-profit subsidiaries, runs 33 hospitals in the United States and stands as fifth in the Grand Orphan Islands.

In the United States, the Sisters of Mercy sponsored more than 100 health-care facilities, 104 colleges and many subsidiary and elementary schools.

Mercy Health Services includes:

- Sisters of Mercy Health Corp., which owns 20 hospitals in Michigan, Iowa, New York and Indiana, and which manages 13 others. Michigan institutions include Catherine McAuley Health Center in Ann Arbor; Mercy hospitals in Cadillac, Grayling, Muskegon and Port Huron; Mt. Carmel Mercy and Samaritan Health Center in Detroit; St. Joseph Mercy in Pontiac; St. Lawrence Hospital in Lansing, and St. Mary's in Grand Rapids.
- Mercy Alternative, which develops and manages alternative financing, including contracts with HMOs and indemnity insurers.
- Mercy International, which manages hospitals in underdeveloped countries.

SCORE helps small business

Lee Douglas

Do you need to seek advice about going into business for yourself? If you own or operate a small business, are you experiencing some problems that you can't solve?

Or are you already involved in a successful business but lack the expertise to help it grow?

If your answer is yes to any of these questions, the good news is that help is available; better yet, it's free.

Nearly 25 years ago, the U.S. Small Business Administration, in looking for ways to help small businesses prosper, formed a national non-profit association called SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives).

INCORPORATED UNDER the laws of the District of Columbia for charitable and educational purposes, SCORE is made up of 12,000 mostly retired executives who have vast experience in all areas of business.

Described today as "teachers of good business practices, doctors of sick businesses, and architects of future growth," SCORE is made up of former lawyers, bankers, accountants, production managers, engineers, public relations experts, and other specialists.

These men and women voluntarily commit their time to share their management and technical expertise with more than 150,000 present and prospective owners/managers of small businesses annually.

THEY OFFER training and confidential counseling sessions geared toward identifying basic management problems and determining their cause. Companies can obtain advice in such areas as modifying their products, correcting distribution channels or expanding their business.

Every effort is made to match a client's need with an executive who has experience in that line of business. Because the executives are counselors rather than consultants, implementation of suggestions are up to the client.

Important to the program is the continuous in-house training and other updating of skills SCORE executives are given to keep pace with the fast-moving world of business.

MORE THAN 30 percent of SCORE's clients are referrals from former clients, an indication of the program's success.

Counseling sessions are provided at the client's place of business, a Small Business Administration or SCORE office. Call SCORE at 226-7947.

Michigan will keep tax offices open late

The Michigan Treasury Department will expand services to accommodate taxpayers who have not yet filed their 1988 state income tax return. The tax filing deadline is April 17.

On Saturday, April 8, Treasury District Offices will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. to help taxpayers fill out their return. Representatives will answer state tax questions until 5 p.m. for taxpayers who call the toll-free Treasury hot line, 1-800-877-MICH.

On Friday, April 14, Treasury District Offices will be open until 7 p.m. The telephone representatives will be available until 8 p.m.

On Saturday, April 15, all Treasury District Offices and the telephone hot line will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

On Monday, April 17, the Treasury telephone representatives will be available until 9 p.m., and District Offices will be open until the last taxpayer is served.

Taxpayers filing their returns now can expect to wait four to five weeks to receive a refund, state officials say. The 250 taxpayers who have already filed their returns through the Treasury's new direct computer filing system at the Treasury Taxpayer Assistance office in Lansing received their refund in just one week.

Reader bought good stock but bought it at wrong time

today's investor

Thomas E. O'Hara

of the National Association of Investors Corp.

My broker persuaded me to buy Upjohn stock a couple of years ago. I bought it at $52, which was just about as high as it went. It then started down and is below $30 most of the time. Would you give me your opinion of that stock?

Upjohn is the featured company in the March issue of Better Investing, and I have had the opportunity to see a great deal of information about it. It is unfortunate that you paid the price you did for Upjohn, but I would not doubt that in the next three to five years you will see it selling in the $80 to $100 range. It might pay you to add to your holdings while it is selling below $30.

WHEN YOU bought Upjohn, it was enjoying a lot of publicity over its development of Rogaine, a drug that seems to have the ability to promote the growth of hair. At that time, stories were circulating that the new drug would be tremendously successful and produce huge profits for Upjohn.

Now, as so often happens in the investment world, the stories have changed and suggest that it may be years, if ever, before Rogaine sales become big enough to send Upjohn sales soaring.

THE FACT of the matter is that Upjohn is a very good company with or without Rogaine. Rogaine seems to be able to grow hair as it is reputed to do and almost certainly some day will make an important contribution to Upjohn's earnings.

In the meantime, the company has other products that seem capable of moving its sales and earnings ahead and its historical rate. The company has expanded its spending for research from 12 percent to 14 percent of sales. The drug industry on the average spends 9 percent.

AS RECENTLY as December the company received permission to proceed with clinical testing on its lazaroid compound for treatment of central nervous systems trauma. The company also recently filed an Investigational New Drug exemption for a compound for inhibiting renin, which plays a major role in the development of hypertension.

Upjohn's figures are pleasing to investors. Over the past 10 years, sales have increased at 7½ compounded annually.

EARNINGS PER share have increased at 10 percent compounded annually. In the past five years the growth in a percent of sales got up to 18.1 percent. Its average price/earnings ratio over the past five years is 16. Recently the stock as sold as low as 28½ and a price/earnings ratio of 15. Value Line investment service projects a three-five year high of 80.

"Choosing Sean's doctor was easy. I called Mount Carmel."

"I don't believe that one doctor is the same as another, so looking in the phone book for a pediatrician for Sean didn't seem right to me. When I found out that Mount Carmel has a physician referral number, I was relieved. Relying on a good hospital to help me find a good doctor just seemed to make sense. And I was right. I got a lot of information from the service before I made our first doctor's appointment. Now, Sean sees his pediatrician regularly and we're both very comfortable with him."

Youngsters aren't better off than we were auto talk

Dan McCosh

The average American baby boomer is beginning to wake up to the fact that he not only didn't leave enough children behind to take care of him in old age, but that many of those who were fathered (or mothered) can't read or write too well.

Maybe this is why there is a sudden rush of remorse about the state of American education.

Corporate guilt frequently expresses itself in a donation to public television, which may be the reason I recently received a notice from Chrysler that it is sponsoring a PBS series on Learning in America — the kind of predictable documentary about why American kids aren't doing so well in school, unless, of course, they are recent Asian immigrants.

IT'S A subject that might seem a bit far afield from the auto industry. But in fact, the car business has a rich history of involvement in education.

Directly, as in the foundation of institutions such as Antioch College and the General Motors Institute, not to mention the social engineering attempted by Henry Ford. And indirectly, through payments of property taxes, still the most common form of financial support for local schools.

In many ways this was enlightened self-interest, since the industry in its early days was on a technological roll that demanded highly trained technicians, engineers and managers, while the workers it attracted often came from backgrounds slightly less than Ivy League.

BUT THINGS changed.

Ford pulled out of Antioch long ago, and GM set GMI off on its own approximately 10 years ago. GM also stopped the science shows that used to tour the country and ended the Fisher Body design contest.

More significantly, American Motors chairman George Romney, as head of constitutional reform for the state of Michigan, altered the assessment base and shifted much of the tax burden away from heavy industry to local homeowners, setting off a series of financial shocks in the city of Detroit and elsewhere, where industry was paying much of the school tab, that nearly bankrupt once-affluent school districts.

MORE RECENTLY, Chrysler led the way to building new facilities in urban areas only with huge concessions from local school taxing districts, while GM and Ford have quietly beaten back local assessments — and local school revenue — through a series of court actions.

I was a little startled to notice that Chrysler today claims to pay $25 million in school taxes in the whole country. I did some quick arithmetic and discovered if it paid at the rate of the average homeowner, it would owe twice that in the city of Detroit alone — and Detroit coughed up $150 million in direct subsidies to Chrysler last year to build them a new plant.

BROKE SCHOOLS obviously aren't the fault of the auto industry. The whole system of tax support for public schools has become so fragmented, perverted and inequitable, it would be unfair to blame the mess on a single industry.

Corporate executives are, after all, merely reacting to public policy and controlling costs.

Still, I don't think there is anyone who spent his life in this town that can honestly say things are being left for the next generation as good as we had it when we were kids.

Dan McCosh is the automotive editor of Popular Science.

Get help for a workshop

Is it possible to plan, organize and run a conference or workshop on the first try?

Authors Lois B. Hart and J. Gordon Schleicher say no. They have published the "Conference and Workshop Planner's Manual" to help small-business owners and managers "create a workable system" for this type of decision making.

For many, planning a conference or workshop represents a one-time experience that may involve as few as 10 or as many as 1,000 participants.

Still, a growing number of independent businesses have taken advantage of opportunities to coordinate their own industry-related events on a periodic basis.

The Farmington Community Library has repeated its workshop series for 15 years, said Beverly Paoal, director of the library.

"WE OFFER six business and management-related workshops each year, free of charge to participants. The feedback we've received from the local business community more than justifies our decision to continue with the series indefinitely."

HART AND Schleicher advise would-be organizers to follow seven basic steps in developing the "how to's" of their company's events-planning system.

First, a needs analysis determines the purpose of the event from the participants' point of view. Next, the key people, groups or organizations whose support is necessary should be identified and the appropriate commitment made.

After assessing the needs analysis and any barriers affecting support, alternative strategies should be developed.

Once the best plan has been chosen from among available alternatives, the facilities, materials, equipment and personnel needed to carry out the plan should be identified and acquired.

Personnel is a crucial variable for the success of any event and will result in the formation of committees to handle program, arrangements, promotion, registration, exhibits (if offered), budget and evaluation.

Next week, we will conclude this discussion on planning the perfect business event as a new or existing business.

focus: small business

Mary DiPaolo

The library rents its facilities to companies choosing to coordinate their own sessions.

"Not many small businesses have the space to hold seven to 200 people at the same time — and often stop before they even start planning an event for this reason."

The library charges a $10 minimum to non-profit organizations that conduct conference sessions; non-profit companies are charged a minimum of $60.

Actress repeats role in 'Quilters'

Performances of the Meadow Brook Theatre production of "Quilters" continue through Sunday, April 23, on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For ticket information, call 377-3300.

'I didn't want to teach, and here I am teaching. It always works out that way, doesn't it?'

The musical "Quilters" stitches together vignettes from the lives of pioneer women who settled the American heartland. In word, dance and song, Meadow Brook Theatre's high-energy production recreates the vast horizons and open skies of the plains in the days when families first settled the prairies.

The cast of seven women portrays a panoply of characters who survived the hardships of cold-to-the-bone winters in sod houses and raging prairie fires in those good-old-bad-old days. To balance the pain of hardships, "Quilters" shines with the comedy of cowboys, the highjinks of children and some fine toe-tapping fiddle music.

Authors Molly Newman and Barbara Damashek use motifs of traditional quilt designs — Log Cabin, Windmill and the Tree of Life to name a few — and mingle old folk songs and new melodies to piece together the scraps and remnants of ordinary women's lives into a patchwork musical of pioneer history.

They tell their tales from women's points of view and celebrate history through a woman's art form — quilting. Like a good quilt design, the vignettes in Meadow Brook Theatre's production combine in an entertaining show that's greater and more moving than the sum of it separate parts.

DIRECTOR ROBERT Spenser's lively direction of the excellent cast falters only when he emphasizes stereotypes and cliches in the script. Why would a play that celebrates the strength of women fall back on hackneyed sexist cliches and have the lone boy in the schoolhouse scene pull the girls' pigtails and harass them with a squiggly snake?

In scenes recreating childhood memories, why must the cast resort to the silly, shrill voices used only by make-believe children from the land of stereotype? And why must Shirleyann Kaladjian overplay the big-eyed, innocent effervescence of her characters?

Despite her indisputable cuteness, an overdose of irrepressible perkiness cloys like Pollyanna's optimism or Beth's goody-goodness in "Little Women." Thankfully, cliches can't undermine the feisty honesty of the musical. For the most part "Quilters" remains true to the harsh land and the resilient, realistic folk who tamed it.

Robert Spencer's creative staging of the vignettes reaches a peak at a Baptist baptism in a river of undulating fabric, a fitting medium for a play that acclaims fabrics and revels in their colors and designs.

In another memorable vignette, Papa splurges to buy a whole bolt of scarlet fabric so his womenfolk can spark their quilts with the joy of red. Riding back home in the wagon with the bolt of scarlet jouncing in the back, frugal Papa, the Baptist preacher, justifies his extravagance by quoting from the Bible all the way home.

QUILTS NOT ONLY figure in the plotlines of many vignettes and provide the structural framework for the musical, they decorate the theater as well. Fine examples of traditional quilt designs hang from Meadow Brook Theatre's walls.

The musical lets a quilt tell the life story of Sarah McKendree Bonham. Mary Rausch as Sarah portrays splendidly the practical toughness and wisdom of pioneer women. Nancy Krebs, another outstanding player in the fine cast, uses her deep voice and comic timing to create winning papas, cowpokes and tomboys.

Cheryl Carr, Shirleyann Kaladjian, Patti Perkins, Judith Reagan and Heidi White round out the able cast of women. Their voices harmonize well as they sing hymns that strengthened the faithful and tunes whose lyrics and melodies echo the folk songs sung round campfires when Conestoga wagons rolled West.

'Quilters' recaptures pioneer women's spirit

IT'S THE SECOND time around appearing in a production of "Quilters" for actress-singer-musician Nancy Krebs.

The performer from Baltimore, Maryland, is one of the cast members in the Meadow Brook Theatre production of the musical, which continues its metropolitan-Detroit premiere engagement through Sunday, April 23.

She first played in "Quilters" about three years ago when she was hired by director Robert Spencer for a production at the Totem Pole Playhouse in Fayetteville, Pa.

After the show closed, Krebs went back to teaching and performing. Recently, Terence Kilburn, artistic director at Meadow Brook, told Spencer he was going to present "Quilters," and Spencer recommended hiring Krebs.

Show for charity rewards players

By Bob Weibel
special writer

WRITING AND producing an original musical comedy has to rank right up there with the most challenging ways to raise money for charity.

"But it's also one of the most rewarding," said Marcia Myers of Northville, representing the Redford Suburban League Theatre Guild, which will present its 32nd annual original musical comedy this weekend.

"We experience not only applause and the warmth of the spotlight for a moment or two, but a continuing 'feel good' glow," Myers said. "We are able to donate $3,000-$4,000 annually for causes that need and deserve community support."

These include Special Olympics, Boys Club and a variety of Western Wayne County organizations for the mentally retarded.

THE SHOW, "Hardly Hollywood" (with a subtitle of "They Don't Shoot Stars Do They?"), is a spoof of the classic tale about a young woman who wins a screen test and goes to la-la land in search of fame and fortune. Markae Rupp of Livonia has the lead role of Irma Horseshack, and as you might suspect, our heroine meets up with a variety of interesting characters and bizarre situations.

"Hardly Hollywood" will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday at Redford Union High School. Tickets at $6 ($5 seniors and students on Sunday) will be available at the door. For ticket information, call 534-1447.

Myers' association with the theater guild goes back a long way. Her mother, Roberta Ramsey, who helped found the guild in 1957, appeared in more than 25 productions (including the first, "Around the World in 80 Minutes").

Myers is a relative newcomer. This is her fifth show. And, as with many in the cast of 35, she is a dancer and bit player.

There are six dance lines. "We've been rehearsing at Miss Harriet's Dance Studio in Livonia two or three times a week since mid-January," she said. Two of her favorite routines are the opening jazz number and a hot Conga dance featuring men dressed as women. Carmen Miranda would love it.

MYERS SAID the audience will get a kick out of seeing their friends and neighbors in unusual roles. For example, West Bloomfield Police Chief Al McGhee appears as gangster "Al Capon" (any connection to an eunuchized rooster is, of course, purely coincidental). As an extra added attraction he belts out a stirring rendition of "Razzle Dazzle."

Music is performed by an orchestra under the baton of professional Tom Aquino and features Broadway show tunes with new lyrics.

The writing started in September. Director Jackie Galazka of Livonia cast the show in January — and now three months later it's all coming together for opening night.

One of the biggest jobs has been costumes. $1,600 was budgeted to give the show that splashy, flashy Hollywood look. Costume head Audrey Maihofer and producer Diane Bateman, both of Redford, have been overseeing the fitting and cutting and predict the last few stitches will be completed about 15 minutes before curtain.

"We not only want to sell a lot of tickets," said Myers, "but we're always looking for new members (women and men over 21), so we can do an even better job next year." For membership information, call 937-9121.

Local community interest organizations which would like to be considered for financial support by the Redford Suburban League Theatre Guild can inquire by writing Diane Bateman, 11324 Beech Daly, Redford 48239.

'We experience not only applause and the warmth of the spotlight for a moment or two, but a continuing "feel good" glow.'

show opened at Meadow Brook, Krebs described the plotline, saying, "'Quilters' is a musical based on a series of books that were written about women — pioneer women — going out West, and how quilts figured very heavily in their lives and the art of quilt making and, not only their lives but, in extension, the lives of their men. It's a very powerful show, a very powerful show."

Written by Molly Newman and Barbara Dameshek, "Quilters" was first performed a number of years ago at the Denver Center for the Performing Arts.

Krebs is one of seven performers in the production, but she is the only one who is acting and playing two unique musical instruments — a mandolin and a violin, which is much more than the standard violin, the instrument on which she started her musical career in seventh grade.

Both instruments were made by Mac Barnes III, a craftsman who is in his 30s. Her violin is a string instrument patterned after a Kuiffanpruggar, which was popular in the mid-1800s. There are a several reasons why it's special, besides the tone. It has five strings; a standard violin only has four strings. Fifth string on Krebs' instrument is a C-string. Krebs' instrument has a lot of intricate carving in the wood, such as a carving of a head. The instrument also is special because it's the first one crafted by Barnes.

Krebs obtained the violin several years ago when her when she and her husband, Pete Baden, a professional studio musician, were visiting his close friend, violinmaker Kennie Lamb in Baton Rouge, La.

SHE BOUGHT the violin from Lamb, fell in love with the instrument, and later bought a mandolin from him. The mandolin is the second one Barnes handcrafted. Krebs and Lamb believe when historians write about the violin makers of the 20th century, Barnes' name will be high on the list.

Krebs plays the instruments at the opening of act two, which is like a hoedown — loud and loaded with dancing and fun, and at the end of the production.

Raised in Baltimore, Krebs was trained in classical violin. One day she switched to fiddle-type music. "I had more fun playing the bass fiddle than I ever had playing the violin," she said.

For much of the 1970s, after graduating from the University of Maryland and doing graduate work at the Dallas Theater Center, she did sort of abandon her violin.

From 1980-1986, mostly in the summers, Krebs taught and performed in summer theater in Alaska, such as with the Alaska Repertory Company. "I was really lucky," she recalled. "I got to go — when working for Alaska Rep — I got to go places where normal Alaskans don't get to travel because travel in Alaska is so expensive — it's huge."

SHE AND A PARTNER would go to small villages and teach acting workshops.

"I learned a lot from that experience about how to treat natives," she said. She learned how the Eskimos, as a people, are "not verbal people."

She remembered how roll call took getting used to. At first, when she announced a person's name, she expected some shout or a "yes" or something else. That never happened. She learned to call a name out and look up. If a person, such as a boy, raised his eyebrows, it meant that he was the person and that he was indicating "yes."

Chefs honored

Stacey Thompson returns to handle most of the pitching duties this spring for the Plymouth Canton softball team. Thompson also is a good hitter who batted over .400 last year and was named to the all-WLAA team. The Chiefs have a veteran player at nearly every position this year.

Chiefs return quality pitcher

softball

Coach Dave Racer treated the eight seniors on the Plymouth Canton softball team to dinner at a Chinese restaurant last week.

If it was up to Racer, all the fortune cookies would have read: A league championship is in your future.

The event was intended to be a get-acquainted session for the first-year coach and the team leaders he hopes will make the Chiefs contenders in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

All eight return from a team that was 6-4 in the Western Division and runner-up to Northville, and each is expected to fill a starting a role this spring.

Canton, 11-5 in the WLAA and 11-10 overall, will have to contend with the Mustangs and defending champion Westland John Glenn — both of which are expected to be just as formidable again.

"I'M ENTHUSED about it," said Racer, who was the assistant varsity baseball coach at Canton the previous 11 years. "We've had two-hour practices, and the girls are keeping me 1-1½ hours after practice. It seems they're really enthused and wanting to work. I like the attitude.

"We may have set our goals too high," he added, "but we want to win 20 this year. If the girls play up to their potential, I don't think it's out of range for them."

The Chiefs will be a senior-dominated team, but the leading returnee is junior Stacey Thompson, an all-league player last year.

She gives Canton what every softball team needs — a quality pitcher. She pitched 93 innings and was 8-5 last year, and she was also an excellent hitter with a .431 batting average.

Backing up Thompson will be junior Jennifer Vanootighem, another right-hander who pitched for the JV a year ago.

But doing the catching and manning the defensive positions behind Thompson and Vanootighem will be a nearly solid senior lineup. Two of them, infielder Alison Flaskamp and outfielder Mary George, earned all-division honors last season.

Flaskamp, a .333 hitter, was the starter at second base, but she's moving to shortstop this year under Racer, who likes her fielding range and good hands. George will be back in left field after hitting .306 last year.

SENIOR STACEY Arnold returns to first base after having a down year in which she hit .205, according to Racer. "I look for a lot of good things out of her this year," he said.

State has champs besides Michigan

Dan O'Meara

MICHIGAN IS a state beaming with pride in the wake of Monday night's victory by the Wolverines in the final game of the NCAA men's tournament.

But this state has more national champions in the sport of collegiate basketball than many Michiganians probably realize.

The sports-minded people in the Plymouth and Canton communities are not so unaware. They know what I mean.

Michigan-bred talent also played a prominent role in the University of Tennessee's 76-60 defeat of Auburn in the NCAA women's championship game on Sunday — and none more so than Dena Head, the Salem High School product who still lists Canton Township as home.

Head, starting at point guard, scored a career-high 19 points in the Tacoma (Wash.) Dome, including 15 in the second half to help the Lady Volunteers win their second national title in three years.

HEAD IS one of four Michigan players on the Tennessee team — the others being Daedra Charles of Detroit, Regina Clark of Saginaw and Tonya Edwards of Flint, the player whom Head replaced in the starting lineup after Edwards suffered a season-ending injury in late January.

Following their victory, the newly crowned women champions were in the Seattle Kingdome to be honored at halftime of the men's game Monday night and watch the Wolverines tip Seton Hall 80-79 in overtime.

Head, whom I managed to contact by telephone at her Seattle hotel room later Monday — just hours after the U-M had won its first national title — had two reasons to celebrate.

"I think it's great," she said of Michigan's triumph. "I think it's great not only for the state but the individual players who come from Michigan and played on that team — Glen Rice, Terry Mills.

"THOSE ARE the names we heard about when I was in school, and I'm really excited for those guys winning a national championship.

"Michigan has always had a good men's program, and the women players are highly recruited all over the state," she added. "Most of those players are doing well wherever they've gone."

After her performance the last two months and in Sunday's finale, Head is foremost among those products of Michigan women's basketball.

For her parents, friends, former teammates and coaches and people who saw Head play high school ball in the area, it was a thrill to see her introduced on national television as one of the starting players and then hear all the accolades CBS announcers Tim Brant and Mimi Griffin said about her play.

AS HEAD directed the Lady Vols' half-court offense and handled the ball against Auburn's occasional pressure, Brant called her "a well-composed freshman" and observed that she was performing well under the pressure of being in a championship game, not to mention the glare of TV cameras and national media exposure.

"'You have to be impressed with Dena Head,'" he said. "'She's a freshman and the youngest player on the floor, and she has controlled this game as the point guard.'"

Elite unit has Blazer look

STATE CLASS A CHAMPION Livonia Ladywood again leads this year's All-Observer Volleyball Team.

The Blazers, who captured their second straight crown under coach Tom Teeters, placed three players on the first team — Sarah Adzima, Stacey Girard and Kari Domanski.

Five juniors were also selected to the first team in a meeting held recently by area coaches.

Representatives from Ladywood, Farmington Hills Mercy, Livonia Stevenson, Livonia Churchill, Garden City, Redford Thurston, Wayne Memorial, Redford Bishop Borgess and North Farmington took part in the selection process.

Two players, Girard and Melissa Mars of Borgess, are each making their second appearances on the first team.

Teeters, who led Ladywood to a 47-5 record, has been selected as Coach of the Year by the Observer sports staff.

The energetic coach also led Schoolcraft College to the 1988 National Junior College Athletic Association crown and also has a Class B state prep crown to his credit, leading Livonia Clarenceville to the 1978 title.

Introducing the 1988-89 All-Area Volleyball Team.

FIRST TEAM

Sarah Adzima, Liv. Ladywood: Generally regarded as the top all-around player in the area, the 5-foot-10 middle blocker is a third-year starter.

Bound for highly-regarded Western Michigan University, Adzima (3.35 GPA) was named to the All-State Dream Team (Coaches Association) and All-Catholic squad.

She hit in the 40 percent-plus range and was team's top service reception passer along with teammate Stacey Girard.

"As our co-captain, Sarah's attitude made our team a more relaxed squad to practice and play on, particularly in crucial situations," said coach Tom Teeters.

Jenny Sproul, Liv. Churchill: The 5-8 senior co-captain led the Chargers to a 30-4 record en route to the Western Lakes Activities Association crown.

Statistically, Sproul paced Churchill in a number of categories including service aces (15.5 percent), attacks (29 percent), passing (90.2 percent), digs (11.7 per match) and setting (98.7 percent).

Rocks counting on development of junior hurler

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

softball

Plymouth Salem softball coach Rob Willette might want August to arrive in the spring instead of the late summer.

August — as in Chris August — is a junior pitcher who last year threw on the junior varsity squad. August and junior Holly Hinzmann are the leading candidates to replace graduated pitcher Kim Berrie, who was 12-6 a year ago.

The sooner the two develop as varsity pitchers the better.

"I still have a week and a half before our opener, and whoever looks best between now and then will start," Willette said. "I made no promises to anybody."

Hinzmann was called up at the end of the '88 season and looked impressive, tossing a no-hitter.

Salem finished the season at 15-6 and was runner-up in the Lakes Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association. How well the Rocks do this spring depends on how the younger players respond to new roles.

BERRIE IS one of five Salem starters who graduated, but Willette is confident the replacements will do just fine.

"I've got decent replacements," Willette said. "I'm not worried. Some of the players that graduated didn't have great seasons, anyway.

"Pitching is a question mark," he added. "Any time a pitcher graduates that raises questions."

The Rocks return three of their four starting infielders from a year ago, including All-Observer shortstop Ann Mundinger, who hit .446. Mundinger, a two-time, all-WLAA selection, drove in 20 runs and is a four-year starter.

"She's a real good player with a good arm, range and pretty good speed," Willette said. "I'm sure she's of all-state caliber. Whether she'll get it or not is something else. She's always batted over .400 for me."

Also back for her senior season is third baseman Tracy Robinson, a co-captain who hit .315 with 17 RBIs last year.

THE OTHER returning infield starter is second baseman Jo Wiklund, a fine fielder who hit .235. The first baseman will probably be junior Jenny Justice, who played JV last year.

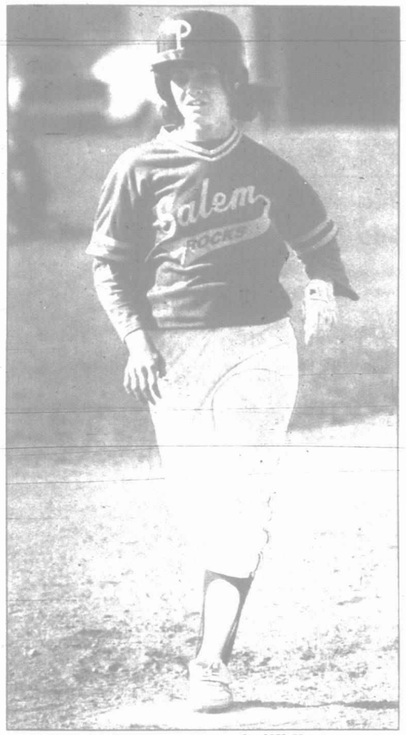
The catching duties belong to either Jenny Jencks, a backup as a sophomore last year, or senior Cris Bradley, a transfer student from Jackson.

The outfield is a concern for Willette, with center fielder Katie Vesnaugh being the only returning starter.

Vesnaugh started in right field last year, but Willette has moved her to center to take advantage of her speed. She batted .278 in 1988.

"She covers a lot of ground," Willette said. "She came on toward the end of the year when she got her confidence at the plate. I think she'll hit well this year, too."

The other outfield positions are still to be decided with six players having an opportunity to win the jobs, Willette said. The six players are seniors Kim Bere and Jenet Idrizi, juniors Sue Stegman, Wendy Bailey and Amy Miles and sophomore Missy Holmes.



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Kim Bere is a returning player who is contending for a starting berth in the Plymouth Salem outfield.

The infield shift has senior Kim Schulte, who was the shortstop and batted .306, moving over to third base. Senior Beth Racer, who missed most of the 1988 season with mononucleosis, rounds out the starting infield at second base.

Canton also returns senior Karen Keenan, who started at third base last year but missed two weeks of preseason practice and is behind the others, Racer said.

"When she does get back in shape, she'll be battling at third base," he said, "and the other girl (who doesn't get the regular job) is good enough that she'll have to play some place and will move to the outfield."

Along with George in the outfield, Rhonda Kibilko, another returning senior, has won a starting job in center.

"I wish all the girls had the attitude of this girl," Racer said. "She's a super hustler who doesn't know when to quit. I look for a lot of great things out of her."

The right-field position is unfilled at this time, but junior Kelly Rische, who played JV last year, is the leading candidate, according to Racer.

CANTON HAS a veteran catcher in senior Jennifer Clark, who finished last season with a .421 average. But she's getting competition from junior Dawn Butske.

softball

"When Jennie wants to be a strong player, she's a strong player," Racer said. "In the last week, she's been swinging the bat real well. If she keeps playing that way, she's going to lock the starting job down. But she is being pushed by Dawn."

In addition to Rische, Butske and Vanootighem, the Chiefs will look to juniors Fiona Stehler and Val Gildhaus for depth.

"We're trying to build a program at Canton," Racer said. "The eight seniors will probably start, but we'll be backing up at every position with a junior."

The Chiefs intend to play a hit-and-run style of softball, and Racer will have Schulte batting in the lead-off spot because of her speed. Flaskamp, a good contact hitter, will bat second followed by the left-handed Arnold, Thompson and possibly George.

"We're going to play a wide-open game," Racer said. "We'll hit, run, steal, squeeze. The girls already let me know they didn't hit any home runs last year."

Shamrocks sweep DH

Well, there's no doubting Redford Catholic Central's pitching is in shape.

The Shamrocks opened their 1989 baseball season by blanking Detroit Benedictine twice, 8-0 and 1-0, Saturday at Benedictine. Keith Bozyk hurled the first four innings of the opener and got the win, allowing just one hit while walking four and striking out nine. Ryan Bell pitched the final three innings.

Paul Rirronello's three hits — including two doubles — and two runs batted in paced the offense. Brett Welling also had a double, two walks and two RBI.

In the second game, Leo Hutchinson fired a three-hitter in shutting out Benedictine. He walked three and struck out 11.

The Shamrocks got their only run in the third. Tom Hill walked and went to third on an error by the third baseman, then scored on Hutchinson's ground out.

CC hosts University of Detroit High in a double-header starting at 3:45 p.m. today.

Salem eyes first WLAA title

By Dan O'Meara

tennis

It's been 10 years since Plymouth Salem last won a league championship in boys tennis, and that was in the old Suburban Eight League.

If preseason assessments are a good barometer, the Rocks might celebrate the anniversary of that success with their first title in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Salem, which tied for third place in the WLAA with North Farmington last year, returns the majority of players from that team, and the Rocks should have one of the area's best and most experienced lineups.

"I would like to think (Salem is a contender)," coach Judy Braun said, "and I keep telling the boys they are — and I think they believe it, which is what it's all about."

Despite the number of returning players, the Rocks have such quality in the ranks that sorting out individual abilities to the point of deciding on a lineup has been virtually impossible for Braun thus far.

THE ONLY one certain of his position earlier this week was senior Rich Cundiff, who will play No. 1 singles for a third straight year. Braun believes Cundiff, a latecomer to the sport, has become a bonafide No. 1 singles player by virtue of his extensive experience.

"I always thought he was a young first singles player," Braun said, "because I don't think Rich started playing competitive tennis until he got into high school.

"He went from three and four singles to one in one year. He tried to change his game that hard and worked at it that much. I'm hoping this year that experience is going to show up."

Five returning players — seniors Wade Garard, Matt Lore, Scott Hobbs, Ryan Bannan and Chris Marschak — are vying for the other singles positions.

Braun said Lore and Hobbs, who were WLAA champions and regional runners-up at No. 1 doubles, could have played singles before now, but they saw an opportunity "to take everything and came close" as a doubles team.

Garard played No. 3 singles last year. Bob Barr and Jeff Stomber at Nos. 2 and 4 singles, respectively, have graduated. Bannan played No. 2 doubles with Ryan Fitzpatrick, but the latter is playing soccer this year instead.

"It's very difficult for me to come up with a lineup before the start of the season," Braun said.

"To tell you the truth, I probably won't put a lineup together until two or three days before the first match. That's how close they are.

"AFTER RICH Cundiff, we have five or six players who are about equal. I tell the boys we can always make changes after the first match, and last year we did."

The list of prospective doubles players includes Jeff Elliott, who teamed with Marschak at No. 3 last year. Other top contenders are seniors Mike Sell and Pat Alphonso, junior Dave Donaldson, sophomores Prakash Chinnaiyan, Jeff Rearick and Casey Kirkpatrick and freshman Wilson Lee.

"We're having challenge matches — as many as we can get in — and trying to go from there," Braun said. "Unfortunately, over the Easter vacation, we only had three challenge matches," because so few players were available to practice.

"In doubles, winning at singles means nothing," she said. "Unfortunately, tennis is the kind of sport when you learn to play you learn to play singles. You could be a weak doubles player, and the first time anybody plays doubles is when they're on a tennis team."

If the Rocks are to win the WLAA, it will mean unseating cross-campus rival Plymouth Canton, the defending champ and team Salem meets on Wednesday, April 19, in dual-meet competition. Salem's first meet is Saturday, April 15, at Essexville Garber.

"If we can put the team together the way we should and all work together, I think we can have high hopes," Braun said. "I think this is our chance if the boys make the commitment.

"We're doing everything we can to get ourselves in gear. The only problem is coming up with a lineup."

"Jenny has the ability to really crunch the ball and intimidate a defensive player," said Churchill coach Mike Hughes. "On defense, she plays the important position of middle back and plays it aggressively when she hits.

"She does not have a volleyball weakness."

Stacey Girard, Liv. Ladywood: Injured most of her junior year, the 5-6½ outside hitter bounced back to enjoy a fine senior year, making All-Catholic and third team All-State.

"Stacey is known for her powerful outside hits and her great defense," Teeters said. "Her biggest improvement was in her attitude toward competition. She is one of the best outside hitters we've ever had."

Girard carries a 3.0 GPA.

Mazie Pilut, Bishop Borgess: The 5-10 junior setter established a career best with only 27 errors in 2,949 sets.

She also compiled a serving percentage of 94, while hitting at a .326 clip and averaging 2.4 digs per game.

Last season she led Borgess to the state Class B final, and this season she sparked the Spartans to a district crown.

A first-team All-Region and All-Catholic League pick, Pilut is described by coach Jerry Abraham as a "great game performer.

"She seems to respond best under pressure situations," said the Borgess coach. "She is truly the finest all-around setter I've ever coached."

Tiffany Goodlow, Wayne: Only a junior, Goodlow paced the Wolverine A League champion Zebras in service aces (151), and kills (278). Her kill average was .342.

Tiffany is an excellent, all-around player," said coach Ann Kolnitys. She has a top-spin serve that can't be beat. Tiffany is a very intense player that strives to give her all.

"Next year she should be one of the best players in the state. Academically, she is also a top student."

Nikki Burns, Farmington Mercy: A first-team All-Catholic League and third-team All-Region pick, Burns is was one of the area's top setters.

She racked up 2,161 assist attempts in 76 games (.324 percent), averaging 9.2 assists per game. Burns was also a .92 percent server.

"Nikki handled the pressure of running our team very well," said Mercy coach Tim DeBeliso. "She has excellent athletic ability and has the potential to be a top-might setter."

Anne Marie Moss, Red. Thurston: One of the area's most unheralded players, Moss, a four-year starter and team captain, averaged three kills per game during her senior year.

She served at an 86 percent clip, including 45 aces. Moss did not miss a serve in 28 games. Her serve and attack reception averages were 72 and 65 percent, respectively.

With 219 kills this season, Thurston coach Bob Burns called Moss "a powerful hitter who also excels defensively.

"Through all her varsity years, she has consistently demonstrated a volleyball commitment. She's a true leader who understands practice time, team play and school spirit."

Glenda Cobrea, Wayne: A senior, Cobrea is a two-time All-Wolverine A League pick.

She won the team's Best Defensive Player trophy and led the team with 61 ace serves and 156 kills.

"Glenda has a natural quick reaction to make great plays look easy," said the Wayne coach. "She is one defensive player that will be difficult, if not impossible to replace.

"Her sights were always set to benefit the team."

Melissa will be hard to replace," said Borgess' Jerry Abraham, who has signed Mars on to play for him at Madonna College.

Debbie Weintraub, N. Farmington: The 5-3 senior paced the Raiders to an impressive 26-7 record.

From the back row she scored 219 points out of 381 service tries, including 59 aces. The school's all-time server, she missed only 12 serves in 393 attempts this season.

Directing North's 4-2 offensive set, Weintraub set up 612 kills and added 140 digs.

The All-WLAA pick was definitely the team leader, according to North coach Sandy Lubenieck.

"She had that special quality that pulled the girls together," Lubenieck said. "She got the ball to the hitters and played team volleyball."

Kari Domanski, Liv. Ladywood: The 5-9 junior provided the missing piece to the Blazers' state championship puzzle, assuming the role as the team's setter.

"She's probably the only one in the state who plays a 5-1 (alignment) as both a setter and middle blocker," Teeters said. "She's the kind of person who likes a challenge. We chose her as our floor captain."

A two-year starter, Domanski's older sister Dana also was a member of the All-Area squad (third team).

Kari is All-Area team's top student, carrying a 4.0 grade-point average in accelerated courses. She is only 15 years old and will be back next season.

Christy Clark, Liv. Churchill: An All-Western Division (WLAA) selection, Clark directed the Chargers' attack with 1,292 sets in 1,310 attempts for a 98.6 percent average. She also served at a 94 percent clip and averaged 3.7 digs per match.

"Christy back-set the ball as well as anyone in the area," said the Churchill coach of the 5-4 dynamo. "Last year she was a defensive specialist and this year she prevented opposing hitters from going down the line against our defense.

"As the year developed, Christy gained experience and became confident that she could take any five hitters and win."

Jennifer Goff, Farmington Mercy: The junior outside hitter was voted a first-team All-Catholic and All-Oakland County (Oakland Press) pick.

She averaged 2.54 kills and 2.8 digs per game.

Goff was an .89 percent server and averaged 29 percent with her kills.

"Jenny showed steady improvement all year in her hitting, but her most dramatic improvement, and what contributed to her becoming a good all-around player was her passing and defense," said DeBeliso. "She has a great work ethic and the proper attitude. She has the desire to become a great player."

Melissa Mars, Bishop Borgess: The 5-10 outside hitter averaged 2.5 kills and 2.4 digs per game.

She blocked at a .299 clip and served at 88 percent.

Mars has led Borgess to over 100 victories as a three-year starter. This season she made All-Division, All-Catholic and All-Region.

Head ends first year in style

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

college sports

Dena Head has no interest in making movies, but her freshman season in women's college basketball involved a little bit of Hollywood.

Consider this script:

A star player at a key position gets hurt at midseason. A first-year player with great high school credentials enters the picture and picks up as if she had been in that role all along.

Furthermore, she's playing for the No. 1-ranked team in the country, a team with aspirations of winning a national championship. What she's able to contribute will affect the team's destiny.

Then it all comes down to the final game — the one to decide that national championship. In front of a national television audience, the freshman has a starring role as her team wins it all.

THAT WAS Dena Head on Sunday as she played possibly her best game of the season, scoring a career-high 19 points as the University of Tennessee defeated Southeastern Conference rival and No. 2-rated Auburn 76-60 and won the NCAA women's tournament for the second time in three years.

"I can't say I expected it, but I'm glad it happened," said Head, who spoke by telephone Monday night from her Seattle hotel room after she and her teammates attended the NCAA men's basketball final.

"When you leave for school, you can't predict the future. I'm real happy my first year at Tennessee turned out so well, because I didn't know how it was going to go."

"When I chose Tennessee, I wanted the opportunity to contend for a national title and play in the Final Four," she added.

Comparing high school and college achievements is like comparing apples and oranges, but Head and her former teammates at Plymouth Salem advanced to the Final Four in Class A twice without getting to the championship round. In a slightly ironic twist, Head has that long-coveted title, but it's a national award instead of a statewide honor.

Now it's time to savor the victory and prepare for that proverbial destiny of all national champions — a trip to the White House and a meeting with the President.

"When we won on Friay night in the semis (by beating Maryland 77-65), it was a new experience for me," Head said. "We were going to the championship game. Winning a championship has always been my goal.

"IT HASN'T hit me yet. I'll need a little time to let it sink in and say 'Hey, this really has happened. It's not something I'm dreaming about.'"

In late January when Tonya Edwards of Flint, the veteran point guard, was injured, Tennessee coach Pat Summitt moved Head from a backup role as the off guard into the starting lineup.

Head gradually adjusted to her new role and, by the time the Volunteers reached the NCAA final, she had become a veteran player.

"I tried to approach it as another game and not get nervous," Head said. "If I don't, then I've taken away from what we've done all year.

"I think the freshman bit is something that's been on peoples' minds the last three months. But when Tonya went down, I pushed the freshman bit aside.

"When January came, (Head and teammates Regina Clark, Kelli Casteel, Debbie Scott and Debbie Hawhee) were freshmen no longer," she added. "We were part of the group. (On Sunday) I was thinking about being on the court and playing with my teammates. Me being a freshman had nothing to do with what Tennessee did on the court."

Head played like a veteran and drew rave reviews from the CBS announcers. She scored four points in the first half but hit three perimeter baskets early in the second half and eventually scored 15 in the last 20 minutes.

HEAD SHOWED her cool late in the game when by going 7-of-9 at the free throw line and helping Tennessee spread the point differential to its eventual 16-point margin.

"I was pretty confident with the way I was shooting," she said. "(All-America teammate) Bridgette Gordon (who scored 27 points to lead Tennessee) is a great player, but Pat Summitt said we had to make it a 5-on-5 game. Sometimes my shots fell at the right moment, and I was happy they did."

Head was also the take-charge person on the court at times. She could be seen issuing instructions and exhorting her teammates. That was part of her duty as the point guard, but it also reflected Summitt's emphasis on team unity and the 'We are family' approach.

"That's all part of team communication and everybody accepting a little bit of responsibility," Head said.

After a tough game with Maryland in the semifinals Friday night, the Vols had a team meeting before playing Auburn, a team with whom they had split during the regular season.

"We talked about the game in general," Head said. "We said we had nothing to lose and everything to gain. We decided we were going to play all out. It was the last game. There wasn't going to be any more games.

"There is no No. 1 or 2 team. You have to go out there and prove it. We had to go out there and perform."

Yes, it was quite a performance, some act indeed, put in by a particular college freshman.

Ex-area great becomes star on national TV

Griffin later offered more insight into Head's clutch performance in the big game — she was 6-of-12 from the floor and 7-of-9 shooting free throws late in the contest — when she said:

"(Tennessee coach) Pat Summitt said Dena Head came to college being the best-prepared player she's ever had — which is saying a lot, considering all the (good) players she has coached."

I'm sure viewers familiar with high school hoop in Michigan, especially this area, knew what that implied. It was a huge compliment to Salem girls coach Fred Thomann, who takes a back seat to no one in terms of basketball knowledge.

"I WOULD definitely say Fred Thomann was a great contributor to how I came to college prepared," Head said. "I felt he always had a great game plan and knew the game.

"That's something (Summitt) said and I don't know if it's true, but if she said it I'll accept it.

"I'm just happy to play with such a top-notch team and have the opportunity to play with a great player like (All-American and Olympian) Bridgette Gordon."

When Summitt substituted for Head in the final minute of the game and Head started for the bench, Brant said: "What a future she has with the Volunteers."

After watching Sunday's game, nobody can disagree with that prospect.

It's almost certain Michigan will have reason to be proud of a particular home-grown basketball talent again in the future.

Chiefs set sights on state tourney

By Steve Kowalski

golf

Plymouth Canton girls golf coach Dan Riggs hopes returning letter winners and an impressive list of newcomers will blead together well enough to qualify later for the state tournament.

The Chiefs return five members off a 1988 team that finished the season at 9-8 overall. Six newcomers — including two out-of-state transfers — should provide depth for Canton, which placed sixth in the Central Eight Conference and seventh at the Fellows Creek Regional.

The top four teams in each regional advance to the state tournament, and Riggs figures the Chiefs need to trim about 30 strokes off their four-player total.

Last year, Canton scored 429 at the regional, which was won by Saline.

"THE GIRLS' goal is to qualify for the state, and that might depend on what region we're in," Riggs said. "My goal is to improve our record. The girls are really into it this year. In order for us to qualify for the state, we need to shoot about 400 or better, 405 on down."

Riggs lost his No. 1 shooter, Stacey Broschay, to graduation, but the Chiefs' best performer at the regional, sophomore Kerri Kittleson, returns.

Kittleson has the potential to shoot rounds under 50, Riggs said.

"She's going to battle the older kids for No. 1," Riggs said. "She's a good athlete. I was afraid I'd lose her to basketball or softball (at Canton). She's a natural."

The lone senior on the roster is Kelly Theisen, who last year averaged in the upper 50s.

"SHE'S A natural leader," Riggs said. "It's almost like having an assistant coach out there. She's on top of getting girls to practice and stuff like that."

Other returnees include juniors Meggan Olesky and Sarah Broshay and sophomore Sarah Beckman.

Riggs is excited about the additions of sophomore Melissa Vernon and junior Jenny Brunet, both transfers from other states. The other newcomers are Ann Vernon, Katy Konovalin and Melissa King and junior Sarah Monroe.

Vernon has a "real nice natural swing and will get a lot of playing time," according to Riggs, and Brunet last year was a member of a state championship team in Missouri.

Riggs expects to get quality contributions out of the freshman class.

"It will be a learning experience, but Ann and Katy will break in some where. They won't be one, two or three, but four, five or six sometime in the year."

EXTRA Wolmanized WEATHER-RESISTANT TREATED LUMBER
Weather-Resistant Lumber
It really weathers the elements!
Water beads right off Wolmanized EXTRA Weather-Resistant Lumber because it's got something "extra" — it's pressure treated with a special water repellent to prevent moisture penetration from rain and snow. All wood swells and expands when it absorbs moisture. As it dries, it releases moisture and shrinks. Constant expansion and contraction causes grain raising, checking, splintering and warping. Spray or brush-on water sealers just can't repel water like Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber — in laboratory tests Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber shows almost two-thirds more moisture resistance than pressure-treated lumber protected with a leading water sealer. Of course, this fantastic lumber is also pressure treated with chemicals for lifelong protection against termites, rot and decay. Don't settle for ordinary treated lumber. Insist on Wolmanized EXTRA!

Nature has no 'opening day'

Knowing nature has many advantages and virtues.

For one thing, it's always there. One does not have to wait for opening day or a special season. Nature can be appreciated by people of all ages.

And learning about nature and living things can help us appreciate our own place in this world and realize how complex it really is.

FOR THESE and for many other reasons, thousands of people in the United States are enjoying wildlife for its own sake.

The U.S. Department of the Interior Fish and Wildlife Service, in its newly published 1985 National Survey of Fishing, Hunting, and Wildlife Associated Recreation, calls it "non-consumptive use of wildlife." In other words, the 85 million people feeding birds are not doing it so they can eat the chickadees.

This survey has been conducted since 1955, but only in the 1980 and the 1985 survey did it measure the non-consumptive use of wildlife.

nature

Timothy Nowicki

In 1980, 93.2 million people over age 15 reported observing, photographing, or feeding wildlife. That figure rose to 134.7 million people in 1985 — a 44 percent increase.

THE INITIAL purpose of the survey was to determine the number of people fishing and hunting. But its purpose has expanded.

When the wildlife service in 1980 surveyed sportsmen who hunt and fish, it learned 46 percent of them also fed birds, and that one of every four took trips just to observe wildlife.

Learning about nature and living things can help us appreciate our own place in this world and realize how complex it really is.

In 1985, nine out of 10 sportsmen participated in non-consumptive wildlife use, such as feeding or observing wildlife.

Of those people who are non-consumptive wildlife users, many travel more than one mile specifically to enjoy wildlife. And that number grew slightly, too, from 28.8 million in 1980 to 29.3 million in 1985.

Our Great Lakes region boosts the second highest use by residents who enjoy wildlife in their backyards. Their numbers rose from 79.7 million in 1980 to 105.3 million in 1985 — a 32 percent increase.

REVIEWING STATISTICS such as these, we can see that almost one out of two adults 16 years and older enjoys wildlife for its own sake. Even 17.8 million youths, 6-15 years of age, are enjoying wildlife by photographing, feeding or observing.

The more people learn about what they can see while walking through the woods and fields, the more people will appreciate wildlife. Walking trails, visiting a wildlife refuge, or traveling the roads to look for deer are just some of the ways that people can enjoy wildlife and the natural world.

We often only think of large animals when we think of wildlife, but exposure to the natural world can open your eyes to a multitude of marvelous natural living subjects — wildflowers, insects, mushrooms, trees, rocks and minerals, and many others.

The writer is staff naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park and winner of the Michigan Audubon Society's "nature writer of the year" award.

Minimum wage is Michigan issue, too

(AP) — With Congress reviewing an increase in the federal minimum wage, the Michigan Legislature also is considering legislation that would raise the current minimum of $3.55 an hour.

Supporters of the Michigan bills cite the plight of Julia Jefferson, a Saginaw mother of two who returned to government assistance after saying she couldn't afford to hold a job paying $4.15 an hour.

For Jefferson, 31, the question is one of survival. She said she left her seasonal job at a Saginaw-area food processing plant because "you can't support two kids on those kinds of wages. You just can't do it."

Stephen G. Scofes, chairman of the Michigan chapter of a business group called the Minimum Wage Coalition to Save Jobs, estimated that Michigan would lose more than 23,000 jobs by 1990 if the minimum wage was increased.

MICHIGAN HAD about 182,000 people working at the current minimum wage of $3.35 an hour in 1988, according to U.S. Labor Department statistics.

The federal measure, now in the U.S. Senate for action in May, would mean increases not only for $3.35-an-hour employees but for anyone else making less than $4.55.

Of 2.6 million hourly employees in Michigan in 1988, 542,000 made less than $4.50 an hour, and 352,000 of those made less than $4, according to federal figures.

Michigan's minimum wage law matches the federal $3.35 an hour minimum but extends it to some areas not covered by federal law, such as small retail stores.

STATE REP. ROBERT L. Emerson, D-Flint, has introduced a bill in the Michigan House that would raise the state minimum to $4.45 in 1990, $4.65 in 1991, $4.85 in 1992 and $5.10 in 1993.

A similar bill sponsored by Sen. John D. Cherry Jr., D-Clio, is pending in the state Senate Human Resources Committee. Aides for Emerson and Cherry said Friday that no immediate action was expected.

Log home of their dreams from a kit

This is the second of two articles on log homes.

By Arlene Funke
special writer

Carol Sheehan Krauch is just an old-fashioned girl at heart.

Krauch and her husband, Ken, are living in the home of her dreams — a spacious log house the couple had built themselves on a five-acre spread west of Plymouth.

"My mother always says I was born a few years too late," she said with a laugh. "I love old-fashioned things. I bake. I love antiques. And I enjoy being home with my family."

The Krauches, who have been married a little more than a year, took on a task that would dismay many people: They designed a house, then ordered materials from a kit and hired local construction crews to do much of the work.

Carol, a Redford native who has lived in Livonia and Plymouth, confesses that she has always wanted to live in a log house because it evokes nature and a throwback to earlier times.

"I had seen log cabins up north, and I've always liked them," said Carol, 39.

BUT THE KRAUCH HOME IS no rustic wilderness cottage. It's a natural, country style with warmth and comfort. The house encompasses 4,000 square feet of living space, with five bedrooms, one full bathroom, three half-baths and a great room with cathedral ceiling and stone-and-oak custom fireplace.

The rounded log walls lend an outdoorsy ambience. "I can't stand little cubbyholes," Carol said of the open, flowing style.

The home serves as a model for Wilderness Log Homes of Wisconsin, the firm from which the Krauches purchased their kit and supplies. The company projects a saving of 15-25 percent for people who act as their own contractors.

Artists' concerns is workshop focus

In a little bit of a switcheroo, the Livonia Arts Commission will do something for artists themselves other than show their handwork.

The event will be an all-day workshop Saturday, April 15, focusing on concerns artists have in their search for success.

Open to all area artists, the workshop will meet from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Livonia Civic Center Library. A "brownbag" lunch break will enable the group to tour the new library facility on Five Mile Road and also view the public art collection the city is assembling, thanks to efforts of the arts commission and other civic organizations, including the Livonia Cultural League.

FEATURED SPEAKERS will be Nancy Thayer and Edee Joppich. Thayer will address the topic of "The Business of Being an Artist."

Edee Joppich
workshop speaker

Her morning lecture will cover goals, resumes, portfolios and studios — in and out of the home. In the afternoon Joppich will discuss "The Artist's Life — Making It Work."

Untidy soul's love affair with books

O&E feature writer Victoria Diaz is the new Book Break columnist. She replaces Mona Grigg, who gave up the column to do some serious fiction writing. This is Diaz's first column. It will appear every other week in the Creative Living section.

ASK ANYBODY what they like to read, and their answer will tell you a lot about who they are. It's a question I almost always bring up when I'm interviewing someone for an article, and trying to find out what they're really like.

So, as a way of introducing myself, I thought I'd take you on a brief tour of my bookshelves and show you some of my favorite books.

It won't tell you everything there is to know about me — I seriously doubt you want to know that, anyway — but I think the little trek will go far toward getting us much better acquainted.

TO BEGIN with, my bookshelves are a godawful mess. In fact, if clutter makes you nervous, maybe you'd better just skip this altogether, for we are talking major league disarray here.

One of the reasons my bookshelves are so messy, I suppose, is because many of them aren't really bookshelves. Come to the place I call home and you will find books scattered over desks, tables, chairs, floors, stairways, dresser drawers, cardboard boxes and other books.

Another reason for the mess is that the bookshelves are not just bookshelves. They are also resting spots for the Free Press, the News, The Observer and Eccentric, the New York Times, weekly magazines, monthly magazines, catalogs, comic books, every crossword puzzle ever devised, church bulletins, school newsletters . . .

BUT ENOUGH about that. Let's get this tour under way by taking a quick look at what's in this teetering stack of books you're about to trip over.

How's this for eclectic taste? "Great Experiments in Biology" alongside Dickens' "Bleak House." "The Big Broadcast," a history of the golden days of radio, atop "The Poems of Tennyson" and Jackie Cooper's 1981 autobiography, "Please Don't Shoot My Dog." A volume of Sylvia Plath poetry and "Your Own Computer" and "How To Grow Roses." Melvyn Bragg's new biography of Richard Burton, side by side by side with "Gulliver's Travels" and Oliver Sacks' offbeat psychological studies, "The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat."

Just last week, I added John Gardner's new novel, "A Prayer For Owen Meany," and Paul Theroux's "Half Moon Street" to all this.

Somewhere around here, I have to find room for E.L. Doctorow's new novel, "Billy Bathgate," and Dutch Leonard's latest, "Killshot," and Rebecca Fraser's "The Brontes."

The other day, I found a hardbound collection of short stories by John Updike for only $3.98. I think I could wedge it in over here, somewhere between "The Annotated Alice" and "The Official NFL Record Book." What do you think?

And so it goes.

IT'S HARD to choose a favorite.

Maybe Pat Conroy's "The Prince of Tides"? Tom Wolfe's "The Bonfire of the Vanities"? "Wuthering Heights"? Joan Givner's biography

Several readers had questions about leather.

Q. I found your column on leather interesting. I am considering leather for my living room, but have no idea as to who would be a good source for me. I have been shopping the furniture stores and find a very small selection in the various lines I have seen.

Can you suggest a place where I might be able to see a diversified line of leather that is a reputable source?

A. Baker Knapp and Tubbs represent a fine leather line called Contemporary Hides. I have used their leather over many years. I find their line imaginative and most reputable. If you are working with an interior designer, ask to see the line at the Design Center. If you are considering furniture from a store, tell them you would like to see the Contemporary Hides line. They will be able to get the leather from the showroom.

Q. Would it be good decorating to have leather in the living room and the library or den?

A. Limit the leather to one room. I would use the leather in the room that would be most used.

Q. After reading your column on leather, I have decided to reupholster our family room sofa in leather. The sofa has a wood frame. How should I have the sofa finished, with welt or nailheads? The style is country French.

A. Nailheads.

A resident of Lathrup Village, Thayer is presently an instructor at the Center for Creative Studies and the Detroit Institute of Arts. Her art work is in galleries in Chicago, New York, Boston and Detroit, as well as in corporate collections at General Motors, Ford Motor, Dow Chemical, Michigan, and at least 20 other collections out of state.

Joppich, of Farmington Hills, will share practical ideas and suggestions based on 30 years' experience as an artist that includes being curator of her own gallery, Joppich's Bay Street Gallery in Northport in the heart of the picturesque Leelanau peninsula. Currently a teacher with the Visual Arts Association of Livonia (VAAL), she has taught at the University of Detroit Architectural School, at Marygrove College and at Midland Center for the Arts. She also juries art exhibits, gives critiques and lectures for art groups and schools across the state.

Time will be allowed during both sessions for questions.

Cost per session is $3 or $5 for both. For more information or to register, call the arts commission at 421-2000.

Greenhouse meets

The Hobby Greenhouse Association will host a program on the Matthaei Botanical Gardens at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Farmington Hills Public Library, 32737 W. 12 Mile, Farmington Hills.

The speaker will be Patricia Hopkinson of Ann Arbor. The meeting is free and open to non-members.

Wayne U choruses featured

Under the direction of Professor Dennis J. Tini, the Wayne State University School of Fine and Performing Arts will present the university choruses and orchestra in Beethoven's Mass in C at a 3:30 p.m. program Sunday, April 16, in St. Aidan Catholic Church, 17500 Farmington Road, Livonia.

The concert is sponsored by the St. Aidan Cultural Society. Admission is $5; senior citizens and students, $4.

of Katherine Anne Porter? Reynolds Price's "Kate Vaiden"?

See what I mean?

I like short story collections, biographies, books on writing, books that assure me I can look 21 again, and books on books.

I like art books, gardening books, books on the theater, on psychology and psychiatry, books on movies, nature, sports.

I am always attracted to travel books, and probably the most beautiful book I own is "Journey Across Russia."

FOR SOME reason, somewhere along the line, I seem to have developed an inordinate affinity for what some call Tales of Terror.

I happen to believe that you haven't lived if you have not yet spent a dark and stormy night with Daphne du Maurier's "Don't Look Now" or "Kiss Me Again, Stranger." The same goes for Rachel Ingalls' creepy love story, "Mrs. Caliban," or Thomas Tryon's strange tale, "The Other."

No, I don't have any rare or antique books. The closest thing to that that you'll find here is an 1899 copy of James Lane Allen's American classic, "The Choir Invisible."

It is, as they say, one of my most prized possessions, and is absolutely the only book I own that is worth more than a pittance in dollars and cents.

In good condition and in its original binding, I stole it for 25 cents at a used book sale at Westland Mall a few years ago. If I gave up the rest of my life to bargain hunting, I'd never unearth a better treasure for a quarter.

I HOPE, as we've moved along, that none of you has been shocked at the dog-eared, coffee-stained, finger-marked conditions of some of the books.

Some that are especially "well-read," like Denise Levertov's "The Poet in the World," or any of the short story collections I own, may even harbor a cookie crumb or two, since one of my favorite ways to spend my allotted moments in this vale of tears is to eat and read at the same time.

I also write notes to myself in the margins of these pages at times, underline phrases I want to remember, or embellish whole paragraphs with exclamation points — sins considered by many bibliophiles to be as red as the ink I use to commit the crime. Sorry, but it's just the way I am. I suppose that's what happens when such an untidy soul falls in love with books.

The Krauches are part-time dealers for Wilderness. They conduct periodic seminars and open houses for prospective customers. For information, call 455-0484.

At first Ken Krauch, 33, was startled back when Carol expressed her wish for a log home, a popular style in western states. At the time the two were engaged to be married.

"He looked at me like I had 10 heads," Carol recalled.

Once the decision was made, the couple ordered brochures from companies that deal in log housing. They finally settled on Wilderness, based in Plymouth, Wis., north of Milwaukee. Wilderness offered more than 50 model choices, starting from as small as one-bedroom, one-bath units.

The Krauches' custom-designed kit cost approximately $60,000. That price covered logs, interior tongue-in-groove walls, insulation, doors, shingles and other components. It also included the cost of shipping.

APPROXIMATELY $35,000 THAT Carol had realized from the sale of her house in Plymouth was used to buy a 5.5-acre parcel of land on North Territorial, about five miles west of Sheldon Road, in largely rural Salem Township.

"We used the property as collateral," Carol said. "I think it helps to have your land."

The Krauches said they experienced no difficulty in obtaining either a mortgage or insurance for their home, which carries a Plymouth mailing address and is located in the Plymouth-Canton school district.

The couple attended a two-day seminar in Wisconsin. They hired a crew from Wilderness to put up the shell, including logs and insulation. That procedure, which cost $15,000, took about two months.

Panic set in the day the "kit" of building materials arrived in four, 45-foot semitractor trailers.

"They were all lined up on North Territorial, Carol recalled. "There were all these bundles of logs. I thought, what have we done? Are we ever going to be able to do this?"

The Krauches selected pine for its warmth and utilized an option that incorporates extra insulation. The logs also are available in cedar.

"It's a 13-inch thick wall," Carol said. "It's just a very warm house."

Interior walls are flat, tongue-in-groove panels which fit together. Only the bathrooms, because of dampness, were constructed with drywall, rather than wood.

It took about six months to construct the house.

Local crews were hired, at a total cost of around $26,000, to do the interior work. For some, it was their first experience with log construction. Coordinating the different tasks required much juggling, and some crews had to be replaced.

"REALLY, IN THE LONG RUN, we were just glad it was built and over with," Carol said.

A few weeks after the house was completed, about 80 friends and family members celebrated as Carol and Ken were married in front of Carol's cherished fireplace. The fireplace is encircled with eye-catching stonework. The mellow, honey-hued oak fireplace cover dates to around 1910 and came from a home in Detroit that was going to be razed.

The log house has become a haven for the busy Krauches. Both Ken and Carol hold full-time sales jobs. Carol also has additional demands as a part-time college student and mother of four children from her prior marriage.

Son Patrick Sheehan, 20, a construction worker and college student, helped a lot with the interior.

Erik, 18, and Sarah, 15, are students at Plymouth Salem High School. Jennie, 13, has severe mental and physical impairments and attends Our Lady of Providence, a private school in Northville Township.

"I finally found a townhome as large as a home."

"I looked long and hard to find a 2000 sq. ft., cathedral ceiling elegant three-bedroom townhome. (Of course, I could have chosen a two or three-bedroom ranch.) With my own two-car attached garage, my own private basement and patio. And-luxury touches like deluxe kitchens and whirlpool tubs plus landscaping that I love. Nothing could get me to move from Covington. Nothing."
