Township RV rule parked — for now

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

After nearly three hours of public comment that was characterized by one speaker as "hisses, boos, catcalls and redundant speeches," the Canton Township Planning Commission voted 6-1 Monday not to act on a proposed zoning ordinance that would limit the storage of recreational vehicles at homes.

Commissioners also voted to form a committee from its membership to study the comments made by members of the standing room-only crowd of more than 200.

Many members of the audience own recreational vehicles and nearly all opposed the proposal, which would limit RV storage around homes to periods of up to 24 hours before and after use. Such vehicles may now be stored on side yards and in back yards.

During the meeting, which was chaired by Commissioner John Burdziak, members of the public rambled, repeated themselves and engaged in bashing Cathy Johnson.

Commissioner Cathy Johnson, who supports the proposal, was the target of many of the crowd's comments, including comments by Fred Beinke, who suggested Canton Township be renamed after Johnson.

"WELCOME TO Cathy Johnson township. Your liberty ends when you step on my toes," Beinke said.

Commissioner Sandy Preblich, who opposes the ordinance and voted to delay it, came to Johnson's defense, cautioning the audience about making personal attacks on commissioners.

The issue, according to many who spoke, is emotional because of a perceived violation of personal rights, inconvenience, anticipated costs, lack of adequate public storage and the threat of the theft of stored vehicles.

"You don't have the right to tell me I can't put my RV on my own property," one man shouted. Another asked, "Am I suppose to use my Saturday just getting it from storage?"

Others said the proposal "changes rules in the middle of the stream," penalizing residents who bought homes under existing regulations. Many said they would not have purchased homes if the proposal had then been law.

Michael Plunkett said he was "insulted" at having his $30,000 motor home considered "a blight," and Lee Atkins called the proposal "unique. We support a garbage dump in our back yard but oppose RVs by the side of the house."

Dorthea Groom, a self-described "avid camper of 18 years," said she conducted a survey of existing storage facilities in metropolitan Detroit and found only eight with suitable space. None, she added, permit on-site maintenance.

"The restriction is unfair and unreasonable," said Mike McKeon, handing out signs reading "RV Proposal Unfair."

JAMES LANNING, a teacher confined to a wheelchair, called the proposal "discriminatory." His primary form of transportation is a specially equipped motor home. If the new ordinance is approved, Lanning could no longer park the vehicle on his own property.

Sandy Pattock, a former township employee who owns a boat, said she polled neighboring communities and found that only two, Dearborn and Wayne, do not permit residential storage. Dearborn provides municipal storage areas and Wayne ordinances apply only to new homeowners.

Margaret DeConinck, one of only two speakers to support the ordinance, said, "Your home is the biggest investment in life" and that property values are adversely af-

District Court Judge John MacDonald steps off the elevator after presiding over the arraignment of a Westland man in Westland Medical Center on charges of robbing a Canton store. The suspect was in the hospital recovering from injuries suffered when he was shot by Canton police when arrested.

A 31-year-old Westland man charged with one count of armed robbery was arraigned Tuesday in the Westland Medical Center where he is recovering from three bullet wounds fired by Canton police.

Jeffery A. Bushbacher, whose condition is listed as stable, is charged with robbing the Dairy Mart in Canton Township Sunday evening, threatening a clerk with an unidentified weapon and escaping with an estimated $350 in cash and lottery tickets.

Bushbacher, attended by wife Susie, was arraigned bedside by Judge John MacDonald, of 35th District Court in Plymouth. Bail was set at $500,000 cash and a preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 13.

Defense attorney Mary Jane Bevelheimer of Westland waived Bushbacher's right to a hearing in 12 days because of his medical condition.

"He is obviously a sick man. He appeared to be in pain and uncomfortable" during arraignment, Bevelheimer said. "But his wife told me she expects him to recover."

A Canton Township grocery clerk who was threatened and robbed on the job by an armed bandit said she was able to return to work immediately following the incident because of the professionalism displayed by Canton police.

"If it was not for the police, I would not have gone back. I know that if I need them, they'll be here," Carol Alterman said following the Sunday evening robbery of Dairy Mart where she is employed.

Alterman, 49, was working alone Sunday evening when a man entered the store, threatened her with a weapon resembling a screw driver or an ice pick and took more than $350 from the cash register. The man fled in a car.

The incident occurred at 7:15 p.m. Alterman said the entire situation was done and over, including an arrest of the suspect, within an hour. She then returned briefly to work before being relieved by another employee.

The first officers arrived at the scene of the robbery "while I was calling them to report the crime." The suspect was apprehended "while I was writing out my report" at the police station.

"THE WAY THE police handled me is the only reason I'm not in the hospital right this minute," Alterman said the day after the robbery. "They treated me like family. They calmed me down."

Canton foundation to help arts, education and needy

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Translating vision into reality, more than 100 Canton residents and friends broke bread Wednesday during a kickoff breakfast of the newly organized Canton Community Foundation, a coalition of community activists.

The event launched foundation activities which are aimed at improving civic pride and renewing community action.

The foundation will also get involved in arts and scholarship committees, a communitywide service council and fund-raising events.

Area businesses like American Yazaki, Donovan Investments and Woodland Meadows Landfill have contributed over $50,000 toward the effort and the Canton Historical Commission has provided office space in the recently renovated Cherry Hill school.

"There is no community doing anything this ambitious. The idea of bringing everything together under one roof is wonderful," said the morning's keynote speaker Michael Duggan, deputy Wayne County executive.

"It's time to re-establish the idea that each of us has an obligation to put something back into the community. I hope other communities duplicate your efforts," Duggan added.

BETWEEN 1969 AND 1989, Canton Township underwent a "soundless explosion," an enormous spurt of development resulting in increased growth from 12,000 to 60,000 residents, according to township Supervisor Thomas Yack in opening remarks.

"We grew up overnight, with little time to respond to human needs. The Canton Community Foundation is a response to those needs, certain to enhance the community's vitality, character and personality," he said.

Canton businessman Dan Heskett, the foundation's first elected president, told the audience "we are friends, neighbors and business partners caring about the people within the borders of our community."

In addition to art and educational pursuits, the foundation will also provide a safety net for the area's needy, eventually offering referral services and direct assistance.

On-going fund-raising efforts include Canton Football Night on Oct. 14, a game between Eastern Michigan University and Liberty College. Tickets are available from the Canton Chamber of Commerce or township offices at $4 each.

Will the Foundation's goals be realized? "With the combination of these people and this money, it can't miss," said Judith Crimboli of Crimboli Nursery who has contributed hundreds of trees for planting alongside Canton roadways.

Schools can't choose proposal

By M.B. Dillon

Plymouth-Canton school board members grappled Monday with school finance Proposals A and B, dubbed "the two-headed monster" by president Dean Swartzwelter.

A disenchanted board failed to reach a consensus on whether to support the proposals, that will appear on the Nov. 7 general election ballot.

Proposal A would increase the sales tax by a half cent, providing $400 million in new revenue for education.

Proposal B would raise the sales tax two cents, generating $325 million. B also would provide property

At a hearing on rail safety at Wayne City Hall, state Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, said more data is needed from the National Transportation Safety Board on the causes of train accidents.

Training key in chemical train fires

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Fire officials and concerned citizens from around the state converged at a legislative hearing on rail transportation in Wayne on Monday, sounding a plea for stricter safety regulations and more training and financing for firefighters.

"We have a serious hazardous materials problem in this state. We tried to address it and failed," said Jim Carr, coordinator of the Hazardous Materials Response Team serving western Wayne County.

"We don't have the funds to train people in this area. We've done it, but it's a great financial burden."

STATE REP. James Kosteva, D-Canton, who chairs the house Rail Safety Subcommittee, scheduled the hearing after the derailment in July of a CSX freight train.

The train derailed in the rural Saginaw County town of Freeland en route to the Dow Chemical complex in Midland.

Three tanker cars caught fire, emitting toxic fumes and causing the weeklong evacuation of 3,000 residents from a 25-square-mile area. The train, which travels every week from Dow's Texas facility to Midland, passes through the Plymouth-Canton and Westland area.

Since February 1989, three derailments have occurred in Michigan.

Kosteva, whose district is crisscrossed by railroads, conducted the hearing along with State Rep. Curtis Hertel, D-Detroit, chairman of the House Transportation Committee.

In attendance were representatives of organizations including the Federal Railroad Administration; State Police; Firefighters Training Council of Michigan; Citizens Against Toxic Trains and the Michigan State Firefighters Union.

HAD THE CSX train derailed in western Wayne County, "could we have evacuated 28 square miles for all that time? Could we have lived with that situation? I don't think so," said Carr, deputy chief of the Dearborn Heights Fire Department.

"This is the most populated area that chemical train goes through."

While coordination is good among Michigan agencies, "we haven't come close to achieving a coordinated response plan," said Charles Griffith, research director with the Michigan State Firefighters Union. "The metropolitan area is as far behind as anyone.

"Unless the whole community is aware of the dangers and has some confidence in local agencies, the public has little trust in the process. When you lose public confidence, you also lose public safety, because people don't react in an organized manner."

"MICHIGAN RANKS third in the nation in the incidence of hazardous materials accidents with 5.63 per 1,000 miles of track," Frank Lieder of Citizens Against Toxic Trains told the legislators.

"The people of Michigan feel they can no longer entrust our lives to the Federal Railroad Administration.

Officers cleared in shooting

BUSHBACHER WAS SHOT by officers Joseph Bippus and David Boljesic who, acting on tips supplied by two paper boys standing outside Dairy Mart during the incident, stopped Bushbacher at Joy and Haggerty roads shortly after the robbery.

Police charge that Bushbacher got out of his Ford Mustang and charged officers, brandishing a knife. A knife with a blade 5- or 6-inches long was found at the scene, according to officer Patrick Nemecek.

Canton police investigated the shooting and found no cause for action against the officers.

"Our findings show the officers followed full department policy. They exercised extremely good judgment and extreme restraint. As the defendant rushed them, they ordered him to halt twice before firing. We have five witnesses to the incident," said John Santomauro, Canton director of public safety.

Boljesic, former public information officer for Canton police, is a four year veteran of the force and Bippus has been an officer for one year.

A second investigation currently underway by Michigan State Police will likely be completed by week's end, according to Santomauro, who said additional charges against Bushbacher may be pending.

The weapon used during the commission of the robbery, described as possibly an ice pick or a long screw driver, has not been recovered.

NEMECEK, IN ATTENDANCE during Tuesday's arraignment, said Bushbacher "appeared fully able to understand the proceedings."

MacDonald, in his first bedside arraignment in five years as a judge, said Bushbacher answered all questions put to him and Bevelheimer, also in her first bedside arraignment in six years as an attorney, said she and Bushbacher "had a coherent conversation."

daily since the incident, also said she is not frightened. "I can't tell you how safe I feel and it's because of how quick the police reacted" to the Sunday, Sept. 10, incident.

Based on Alterman's account, a man entered the store about 7 p.m. and asked to buy meat. As Alterman walked to the counter, the man grabbed her from behind and forced her to lock the front door of the small grocery store. He then made her stand in the store's walk-in cooler, threatening to kill her if she moved.

After taking the money, he returned to the cooler twice, once demanding keys to the safe and a second time for keys to the back door of the store. Alterman said she had neither key.

Two youths, boys Alterman said are regular customers at the store, followed the man to his car, noting the vehicle's license number, which they supplied to police.

A man was apprehended a short time later and arraigned Tuesday on robbery charges. (See related story).

Alterman, a Canton resident for 16 years, has worked at Dairy Mart on Warren Road at Morton Taylor Road for two years.

School finance plans 'legislative cop-out'

tax relief and limit voter-approved tax increases to 4 mills.

If voters approve both proposals, the one with the most yes votes will be imposed.

"It's highly unlikely either will pass, just based on math," said Swartzwelter. "This is a hypothetical exercise to get people all stirred up. We're taking positions disagreeing with each other, and camouflaging the truth. This just lulls the educational community to sleep."

"It's a legislative cop-out," agreed Supt. John Hoben. "At the last minute so they could go home, they threw both on the ballot. They haven't come up with a clearly articulated school reform plan. This doesn't address school reform so much as tax shift.

"I don't think either one will pass," said Hoben. "The proposals are too confusing. I don't know how they will squeeze them into 100 words (for placement on the ballot)."

Monday's meeting began with Trustee Dave Artley proposing a resolution supporting both.

"A and B don't address all the needs of the Plymouth-Canton district, but this appears to be a significant effort on the part of the Legislature to allow the people to have a voice," Artley said.

"If neither passes, we won't see school finance reform until the next century. We have to start somewhere."

Trustee E.J. McClendon said, "I don't know how I can vote for either, given their inadequacies. They're trying to punish everyone with a growing tax base. We're betting on a dead horse.

"We can no longer deduct sales tax. We're sending more and more money to Washington, and getting less and less of it back."

"I'm concerned that supporting one or both would be misleading to the people of Plymouth-Canton," said Trustee Marilyn Schwinn.

"Equity is not truly addressed. The poor stay poor and the rich stay rich. I don't go along with saying something is better than nothing."

Trustee Roland Thomas said, "I have a fundamental belief that local districts must have maximum local control. Using the process to legislate through a constitutional amendment will continue to shrink local control. I don't think that's appropriate.

"They haven't done their job," said Thomas. "There's too much dependence on sales tax, without consideration for changing economic times. If this one gets in as a constitutional amendment, the likelihood of change is little or none."

"If I had to choose one, I would choose B," said Trustee Barbara Graham. "But I agree that just to support something for the sake of supporting something doesn't do anyone any good."

"I'm concerned that we rely on our Legislature to listen to us," said school board member Jeanette Wines.

"They say they understand us, then turn around and do something totally opposite. It seems like we are always getting the ball thrown in our court."

Artley's resolution lost 3-4. Supporting it were Artley, Swartzwelter and Wines.

Ray Buckman, who has served on district committees, said, "We just got through telling the citizens we need new millage. What are we going to tell the people now? That we can't depend on what we voted? How is the public going to keep up with this?"

"Our intent is to come out with a position before Nov. 7, certainly," said Swartzwelter.

Response to hazardous fires needed, but costly

The cost of training firefighters to deal with hazardous materials is staggering, an area fire chief said.

"Just for two people to be trained to be on the response team cost us $13,500 in manpower, equipment costs and the city's share of response team expenses," Westland fire Chief Larry Lane said, speaking at a legislative hearing on rail transportation in Wayne on Monday. "And it has to be ongoing training."

State Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, who chairs the house Rail Safety Subcommittee, scheduled the hearing after the derailment in July of a CSX freight train.

It's hoped that setting up more response teams and and establishing a state-run training center in Lansing will help lessen the burden on local communities. But financing is an obstacle, said Lt. Arthur Nash Jr. of the State Police fire marshal division.

"THE GOAL is to ensure that well-trained response teams can respond within an hour anywhere in Michigan. We have 16 response teams now, but all are in the southern part of the state," he said at Monday's hearing.

"Just to establish the response teams there'll be an initial cost of $1.5 million, with continuing costs of $340,000 a year to train those response teams.

"If we can't come up with the funding, the Legislature is going to have to look at this and say, 'Is this something we want to fund?' That's the only way those who need training will receive it," Nash said.

Metro response lags

"We beseech the state to lower speed limits and adopt stricter guidelines," Lieder said.

The CSX Dow train "stops right in front of my house in Highland," he said.

"IT'S CLEAR we can put an emphasis on training, but in other areas, it's difficult to know where and how we could have the most effectiveness," Kosteva said.

"We don't have accurate enough data yet. Hopefully, we can get some data from the National Transportation Safety Board as to the specific causes of accidents.

"Hopefully this will result in concrete proposals we can take to the Legislature that show here is where money is needed, and here's what the funding can do."

A representative of the NTSB was unable to attend the hearing.

"MR. KOSTEVA has a tough task," said Richard Powell, executive secretary of the Firefighters Training Council. "Statewide, 85 percent of our fire departments are staffed by volunteers. There's no response team in the Upper Peninsula, and nothing near Bay City.

"In Michigan, we've had pretty good relationships with industry. But we're finding it's not enough. Dow Chemical creates 60,000 to 70,000 chemicals. Fire departments don't have chemists. The expectation that fire departments can handle everything just isn't there."

KOSTEVA ASKED fire officials to forward documentation of costs to the subcommittee.

"One of the consternations I'm having is that money is needed at a number of levels. If we expect to go advocate for additional funding, having exact figures and what they'd buy would be a great help," Kosteva said.

Francis Ray of the United Transportation Union in Lansing proposed defraying costs by imposing "a ton mileage tax on shippers and haulers of hazardous materials."

Charles Griffith, research director with the Michigan State Firefighters Union, supported the idea.

"Ohio has passed one of the nation's best pieces of transportation legislation," Griffith said. "So far, CSX has been successful in holding it up as it pertains to rail, but its primary provisions include registration of hazardous material carriers in the state and route assessments.

The state "may assess penalties to the carriers, and fees to carriers to finance training," he said.

The refurbished school was operated as a plant by Henry Ford.

It took a few Saturdays and 3,208 bricks, but a crew of Canton residents has finished building a brick patio for the one-room Cherry Hill School in the township's historic district near Ridge and Cherry Hill roads.

The refurbished school at Cherry Hill and Ridge was operated as a plant by Henry Ford.

"Ford agreed to take over the school after he built the cottage industry in 1942 so disabled veterans would have a place to work," said David Artley — members of whose family attended school there more than 100 years ago.

Since then, the school has changed hands several times. It's now owned by Canton Township, which restored it for use as a community center.

The restoration "has been a labor of love for me," said Artley. "I really enjoy it. It's a bridge of knowledge from yesterday to tomorrow.

"One hundred years ago, the one-room school was the center of activity. Those values are still in existence today."

Canton Township and the Canton Historic District Commission will hold a grand opening of the school at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 8.

Festival rain dampens profits, not spirits

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Plymouth Fall Festival profits will be down this year, due to rain Saturday and a tornado threat Friday that forced people to evacuate the festival site.

But things were better Sunday, and "the Sunday crowd was one of the best we've ever had," said Joe Bida, who organized the festival.

He said that because of the rains we'll probably be down from the last year or two."

The rain didn't dampen Bida's assessment of the relative success of the festival.

"It was great," he said.

Profits from the annual four-day festival won't be known until the next meeting of the Fall Festival Board of Directors in October, he said.

Plymouth Fall Festival profits will be down this year, due to rain Saturday and a tornado threat Friday that forced people to evacuate the festival site.

But with attendance down an estimated 20 percent due to bad weather, reduced profits "will curtail some of the improvements they (service clubs) wanted to do next year," Bida said.

Among those improvements likely to be put off are repairs to the booths, Bida said.

While inclement weather affected attendance at some outdoor events, Bida said indoor events — antique sales and art at the school among them — gained. "That's where they got the crowds," Bida said.

Food events not affected by the weather were successful. The Plymouth Rotary Foundation sold out of 11,500 chicken barbecue dinners by 3:30 p.m. Sunday, the Lions Club sold out of 1,500 fish dinners Friday and the Kiwanis Club sold out of pancake breakfasts on Saturday.

But Saturday night, the Kiwanians sold just 650 of a planned 1,500 steak dinners, thanks to thundershowers. "They're going to package them and sell them to their members," Bida said.

Yet, festival changes and improvements implemented this year were successful, Bida said.

Among those improvements was an expanded entertainment schedule. Bida said "more chairs than ever before" were set up to accommodate crowds attending performances by the Plymouth Irish Dancers Club, polka music, and the Johnny Trudell big band.

That expanded entertainment schedule will definitely be continued at the next festival, Bida said.

Of the return of food on a festival Thursday — veal parmigian and spaghetti served up by Knights of Columbus — "We got a good reception on that," Bida said.

Verla Petryl said she wished "my property values would be reduced, but my assessments keep going up, even with an RV parked on my property."

THE PROPOSED ORDINANCE is the result of countless requests by the township's Homeowners Association, which represents 17 of 21 subdivisions in Canton, according to Johnson. She said her efforts on the issue are aimed at "bettering this community."

Commissioner Victor Gustafson, who also attends monthly meetings of the Homeowners Association, said, "This is first and foremost on the list of topics at each meeting."

Commissioner Richard Kirchgatter said, "We are not trying to disenfranchise any citizen. We are trying to come up with a reasonable regulation for both viewpoints."

Commissioner Robert Shotwirty, also a township trustee, said the evening's public comments provided many new points for consideration, and commissioner Richard Palmer moved to table the issue for further study, an action that evoked audience criticism.

Former township trustee and Commissioner Carol Bodesmiller, a member of the audience, told commissioners "We need you to tell us exactly what you plan to do," prompting Burdziak to assure those present the issue would be publicized prior to any vote by commissioners.

Drafts of proposed changes in township ordinances will be made available at the Canton Township Library, commissioners said.

Fall Festival reaps variety

THERE WAS plenty for everybody to do at Plymouth's annual Fall Festival last weekend.

You name it — pumpkins to look at, entertainment at Kellogg Park and a variety of food that ranged from Italian sausage and peppers to a chicken barbecue.

You've got to have art, too. And it was in the park.

Other features included rides for children, and some sightseeing for the adults.

Geoff Gladden, 16, of Canton likes the computer games he can call up through computer bulletin boards. Other users conduct business functions, solve problems or just shoot the electronic breeze.

Now see this

Computer boards grow

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Wade Hampton saw the future once.

In his days as a U.S. Navy electronics specialist, the 54-year-old Canton man gained an advance look at a number of technological breakthroughs.

"I remember the first time I saw color radar," he said. "It was top secret stuff back then, they didn't want us to tell anyone about it even after we left the Navy."

These days, Hampton believes he's seeing the future again — every time he calls a computer bulletin board to his video screen.

The new frontier of mass communications, computer bulletin boards allow users to share information without regard to international boundaries or government regulation.

Someday, enthusiasts say, it will be commonplace to shop, bank and pay taxes, all through an electronic blip.

"THIS IS really Jetsons stuff," Hampton said.

Computer bulletin boards have fast become a staple of business and government. President George Bush and Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev can share information on global warming trends through a U.S.-U.S.S.R. link-up.

But the growing personal use market may prove even more intriguing.

Bulletin boards provide access to business programs and computer games, allowing users to check spelling or organize mailing lists while providing inexpensive entertainment for their children.

"There's just tons of things out there for people to use," said Russ Delaney of Great Lakes Computer Systems Inc., an area dealer. "Many of the programs that people buy, they can load into their systems free of charge."

Yet bulletin boards aren't called the "electronic back fence" for nothing.

They allow like-minded computer operators to borrow each other's programs or just shoot the electronic breeze.

"I'D SAY, yes, you could borrow a computer program the way you'd borrow a pair of hedge clippers," Hampton said. "It's also a good way to get in touch with folks."

Bulletin boards also allow professionals to share sophisticated information on a wide-ranging variety of topics.

One enterprising news reporter recently told a national computer magazine how he scooped his competitors on a secretive space shuttle launch by reading information astro-

Program divides AIDS fact, fiction

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Fact or fiction:

• You can become infected with the AIDS virus by giving blood.

• You can contract AIDS by caring for someone with the disease, sharing their bathroom facilities, bathing them or assisting in feedings and medication.

• Being very selective in your choice of sexual partners is the best protection against contracting AIDS.

Each of these statements are false but such myths are unfortunately believed by many, according to Jan Thaxton, a registered nurse from Westland. Thaxton hopes to help set the record straight in a lecture "AIDS: Fact, Fiction and Fear," Oct. 4 at Schoolcraft College.

'As a result of new drugs, AIDS is becoming a chronic disease. More and more people (infected with the virus) are living longer and leading productive lives.'
— Jan Thaxton, program director

"As a result of new drugs, AIDS is becoming a chronic disease. More and more people (infected with the virus) are living longer and leading productive lives. Both quality and quantity of life have been extended," Thaxton said. A graduate of Schoolcraft's nursing program, Thaxton now directs AIDS public education for the American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Chapter.

"AIDS may not personally affect most of us, but it indirectly affects all of us," reads a description of the lecture in Schoolcraft College's fall brochure announcing Continuing Education Services.

In addition to dispelling myths, Thaxton has other goals as well, including public education about a disease that conjures up visions of horror for most.

Some news is even heartening.

PATIENTS NOW diagnosed with Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) that accounts for AIDS, can expect to live longer than those diagnosed previously because of such new drugs as Vidovudine (AZT).

"If treatment is begun before the final stages of illness, these new medications help the immune system fight off deadly infections. People live longer," Thaxton said.

Of the 1,257 Michiganians who have developed full blown cases of AIDS, 58 percent have died, figures that reflect national trends. Of 100,000 cases nationwide, 57 percent have died.

The majority of Michigan patients live in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, nearly half are between the ages of 30 and 39 years and 80 percent have contracted the disease through high risk behavior, 59 percent through male to male sex and 21 percent through intravenous drug use.

"Most people are aware of how transmission occurs but not many are able to change their behavior, like using condoms or clean needles. Behavior modification is a very difficult thing to do. Anyone who has ever tried to loose weight or quit smoking knows that," Thaxton said.

The remainder of AIDS cases in Michigan were contracted through blood transfusions (5 percent), heterosexual sex (3 percent) and at birth (2 percent). The origins of 4 percent are unknown, according to Thaxton.

Nationally, an estimated 1.5 million persons are believed to be infected with the virus and may or may not be displaying symptoms at this time.

Thaxton's lecture is 6-10 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 4, at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty Road. Cost is $10. To register or for more information, call 462-4448.

Parks land sale off

Wayne County won't be selling park land to a Westland golf course, County Executive Edward McNamara announced.

McNamara said the sale "is not in the best interst of the county" in a letter to golf course owners.

County parks director Hurley Coleman had recommended against the sale, county officials said.

The county was considering whether to sell 40 acres of parkland to owners of Hawthorne Valley, a public course on Merriman. Golf course owners sought the property to add nine additional holes.

Though a survey found support among some nearby residents, others vehemently opposed the sale to the point of picketing in the park.

Walk-a-thon is set

Wayne County is joining communities throughout the nation in sponsoring the first annual "Walk America" walkathon to raise money for local meals-on-wheels programs.

The walk will be held 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nov. 11, at the University of Michigan-Dearborn fieldhouse.

Proceeds will be used to provide meals to seniors in western Wayne County and Downriver. The Detroit Area Agency on Aging is also participating and will raise money for programs in the city and eastern suburbs.

Walkers can designate where they want their contributions to go. They can also choose whether to the complete the 3.1 mile walk inside or outside the fieldhouse.

Additional information is available by calling Judith Pozan, 453-2808.

Teachers talk technology

Teachers, administrators and school board members from throughout the area are expected to participate in the third annual State Of Educational Technology conference, Sept. 18-19 at Michigan State University, East Lansing.

The conference will describe the use of laser discs, microcomputers and microwave and satellite technology in the classroom.

Among items to be demonstrated is Channel One, a student television channel currently being tested at Mumford High School, Detroit.

Junior basketball signup Saturday

The Pymouth-Canton Junior Basketball Association will conduct registration for its three leagues from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Sept. 16, in Canton High School Phase III.

Boys and girls from grades three to eight are eligible. Experience isn't required. Players must live in Canton Township and be enrolled in the Plymouth/Canton School District.

Third and fourth grade students enter the C league. Fifth and sixth grade players are in the B league. Seventh and eighth graders participate in A league. Each member of C league plays in a maximum of 50 percent of the games. Members of the A and B leagues play in a minimum of 33 percent of the games and a maximum of 66 percent. In addition to league games, there are year-end tournaments for B and A league teams.

In the past the association has attracted 800 players and 200 adults to its programs. People who want to coach are encouraged to sign up during player registration.

Tryouts will determine players' abilities and to help assign members to teams. Practice sessions are scheduled for one night a week.

High school students are selected by the association as referees. These students, who sign up during player registration, hold the only paid positions in the leagues.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center.

For more information, call 397-0999.

The association is a voluntary health agency, concerned with the detection, care and education of the 250,000 diabetics it serves in Michigan.

Computers turning into 'electronic back fence'

nomers had placed into one nationwide computer service.

Delaney, who maintains a bulletin board at his company's Canton store, estimates there are more than 450 bulletin boards in the 313 area code alone.

Hampton, a trucker by trade, was well acquainted with the last communications craze. CB radios, but predicts computer bulletin boards won't fade from general use like 1970s CBs.

"The difference from CB and ham radio is that, there, you're sending out a signal to whoever will listen," he said. "Here, you can target your audience."

A list of area bulletin boards is available at computer stores, including Great Lakes outlets in Canton and Farmington Hills.

Though you couldn't tell by reading a list of names, area bulletin board topics range from word processing programs to dating services. Targeted interest groups range from homosexuals to born-again Christians.

MOST SERVICES are geared to computer enthusiasts themselves, allowing them to share tips and work out problems.

Users see computer bulletin boards as an inexpensive, fun way to get in touch with like-minded individuals.

"I'd say 98-99 percent of all bulletin boards are free," Hampton said. "And I'd say most of us eventually meet face-to-face."

Computer services that charge for information include Prodigy, the heavily promoted marriage of computer giant IBM and retail giant Sears.

With shop-at-home, bank-at-home and news service features, Prodigy and its rivals represent the next wave, Delaney said.

One rival, CompuServe, a 10-year veteran in the field, offers more than 160 different bulletin boards, which the company calls "forums."

The Columbus, Ohio-based firm bills itself as the largest information system of its kind.

"We're more than just a bulletin board, we're a full service organization," said company spokeswoman Kitty Thomas. "We have over a half million subscribers and it's growing all the time."

The key to the home use market, Thomas said, is that people are only now becoming aware of what computers can do.

"PEOPLE WHO may have bought computers to balance their check books now want to get something more out from their investment," she said.

Despite the presence of Prodigy, CompuServe and other giants like Dow Jones, enthusiasts said the bulk of the action is generated by the do-it-yourself home bulletin boards.

What programs users choose often depends upon their age.

"I don't use the news services. I'm mostly interested in the computer games," said 16-year-old Geoff Gladden of Canton.

Creating a bulletin board isn't complex, according to Delaney.

"Once you have a personal computer, it isn't too expensive to start one," he said. "Though you have to add another telephone line."

Some lines have short lifespans, however, because operators find it tough to pay their new telephone bills. That is why some operators ask for voluntary payment.

"It's really an honor system type of thing," Hampton said.

For now, the do-it-yourself bulletin boards are jammed.

"Bulletin boards come and go," Delaney said. "But what we're finding is that there are far more interested users than there are bulletin boards to handle them."

Nearly 700 people access his company bulletin board, Delaney said.

There is, however, a less-than-positive side to the craze.

Computer bulletin boards are supposed to reside in the public domain, using material that carries no company's copyright.

While the Federal Communications Commission isn't interested in regulating their content, enthusiasts said law enforcement officials keep an eye out for copyright infringements and hackers.

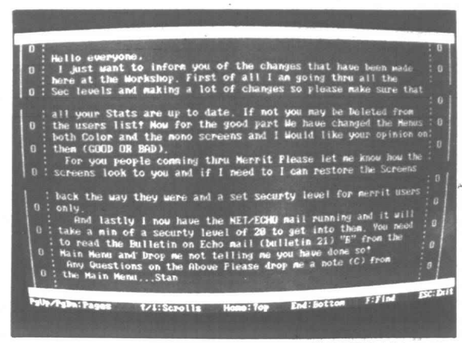
"Computer hackers are a problem" Hampton said. "There's also the risk of someone putting in a computer virus, though it hasn't happened to me."

Computer outlaws face even stiffer penalties from foreign governments.

"I had one hacker access my system from Australia," Hampton said. "It just beard he was arrested for what he was doing over there and could face up to 100 years in jail."

That means the unlucky Australian, if he lives long enough, could be released back into a world where computer bulletin boards are as common as telephones.

After all, Hampton said, the future is on its way.



JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Exchanging information on computers or any other topic is a key element of computer bulletin boards. Boards allow users to link on a national or international level.

Families help Irish kids spend peaceful holiday

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

One minute, Paul Casey, an 8-year-old from Belfast, Northern Ireland, was clowning around with his friends, posing for a photographer on the front lawn of his American host family's home.

The next minute, Paul, long lashes framing his large green eyes, was in a more serious mood. He was sitting by the driveway, talking about what he likes and dislikes about the United States and Northern Ireland.

"The food here is kind of different. It's good," said Paul, a few hours before he and his brother Kevin, 6, ended their recent six-week stay in the United States.

"The only thing I like about living in Ireland is when my mom takes us to the beach.

"The thing I don't like is when the Brits are around," Paul said, folded arms resting on his blue jams, eyes focused straight ahead.

"They break into the houses. They shot Daddy. It happened in my house."

Please turn to Page 10

Paul and his brother, a chaperone and three other children were sponsored by families from Wayne, Oakland and Livingston counties through a program called Irish Political Prisoners' Children's Holidays.

Among those who donated airfare and expenses were Daniel and Gertie O'Kennedy of Livonia and Michael and Barbara Sullivan of Farmington Hills. This marked the first time Michigan participated in the program.

Like Kevin and Paul, the other youngsters have parents who've been involved in the ongoing struggle in Northern Ireland.

Kelly Skolarus, 16, and her parents Ed and Polly of Livingston County, hosted Kathleen Murray, 13, of West Belfast. Murray's father has been in prison for 11 years.

Said Kelly Skolarus, "We went out a lot with my friends — they really liked Kathleen. They called her 'Miss Ireland.'"

"We took her out to eat, and to Bahama Mamas in Taylor. We had a great time dancing."

Kelly said what Kathy told her about Northern Ireland "sounds like the Russian government. There are soldiers on the streets. Some are nice, but some can be really mean. They yell and swear at people. I don't believe things till I'm right there. But now I understand better."

KATHY, WHO has blue eyes and long, wavy strawberry blonde hair, said she's going to miss her new friends and "going to the beach." She's looking forward to Irish food, and "playing soccer and hurling with my brothers and friends."

What she dreads about going home is "just all the British soldiers shooting and fighting all the time, and just the feeling of people dying.

"Ever since I was little, two or three times every year, the soldiers have raided our house. It's scary. They come really early, at 1 or 3 in the morning. They kick the door. If no one answers, they try and kick it in.

"They have guns and dogs and they get everyone downstairs, and search the house. They look under the carpet, and look in the attic. They wreck the house looking for guns and bombs. They've never found any.

"If all the British soldiers were put out of Ireland, there would be no more trouble over there," she said. "If the British don't leave, there will just be sadness. It will always be the same."

HOST FAMILIES and folks ranging from the manager at Meijer to Detroit Tigers owner Tom Monaghan did what they could to help the children forget about their war-torn country for a while.

"The manager at Meijer's gave toys to Kevin and Paul," said Pat Ranger of Brighton, who with her husband Ray organized the trip and hosted three of the young visitors.

"People said Tom Monaghan would never do anything, but he sent the kids Tigers yearbooks and key chains. We had a lot of neighbors and friends donate clothing, toys and money.

"The children are all going home with new shoes, jeans, shirts and toys," she added.

The Matthews family of Howell hosted Rossa Quigley, who celebrated his 12th birthday during his visit.

"Rossa had never had a birthday party, and Anne (Matthews) gave him one," said Ranger. "They hired a magician, and had balloons, favors and crepe paper decorations, and served dinner to 25 kids. The kids wore birthday hats. Rossa may have thought that was kind of dorky, but he's going home with a birthday party under his belt."

Chaperone Rosie Murray, whose husband and brothers have been political prisoners, enjoyed a welcome respite as well. The top of Rangers' garage served as her sun deck, and Meijer as her second home. Just hours before the Irish entourage was about to leave, she was still shopping for clothes for family and friends.

Ranger hopes that next year more children and wives of political prisoners can visit the United States. Anyone interested in information, or in contributing to next year's exchange trip, can write P.O. Box 24744, Detroit, 48224.

MIRACLE.

George Washington said its creation was "little short of a miracle." James Madison said, "It is impossible for the man of pious reflection not to perceive in it a finger of that Almighty hand," when describing the process that created it.

Washington and Madison were commenting on nothing less than the document that created our government: The Constitution of the United States. The Constitution is the foundation of our country and the means by which we achieve the rule of law and protect our freedom.

The week of September 17th is Constitution Week. Many libraries will have displays and information on this incredible document.

Why not take a look at it. After all, it isn't often you can hold a miracle in your hands.

Eastern streamlines class registration

Beginning with the 1990 winter semester, Eastern Michigan University will implement a new course registration system designed to simplify the process and cut down on long lines.

The main feature of the new system will be early registration, in which students will mail or drop-off completed course request forms at the registration office between Oct. 10 and Nov. 1. No tuition payment will be required with that initial registration, but will be billed to the students with 50 percent of tuition and all fees due by Dec. 1.

Students who fail to make a payment by Dec. 1 will be dropped from their classes and will have to re-register.

The course request forms will be processed by class level to ensure that upperclass students are registered on a priority basis to get the courses they need to meet graduation requirements.

In addition to cutting down on long registration lines, the earlier mail/drop-off registration will allow academic departments time to add new course sections if enrollments exceed the number of sections offered.

Students who participate in the mail/drop-off registration, as well as newly admitted sutdents, will be permitted to participate in a drop/add phase Nov. 29-Dec. 15 to make necessary changes in their schedules. Students who do not register early will have to wait until Jan. 2, 1990, to register for the winter semester, and will be required to pay 50 percent of their tuition and all fees at the time.

Expo targets new breed of retirees

From cosmetic surgery to the myths of aging, from traveling alone to protecting yourself in your house and on the street, adults looking to add some sparkle to their retirement years might want to attend Michigan's first Retirement LifeStyle Expo this Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Cobo Hall.

The Expo will offer the over-50 population an opportunity to learn about services, community programs and lifestyle options that can enhance the quality of their retirement years.

Some highlights include:

• Special guest appearances by Willard Scott of NBC's Today show and Alex Haley, author of Roots.

• More than 40 seminars and 200 exhibitors covering areas such as retirement and financial planning, health and fitness.

• Health screenings — including checks of blood pressure, body fat, cholesterol, vision, hearing and lung functions.

Tickets for the Expo are $3 each, but complimentary tickets are available at Henry Ford Hospital centers, Comerica branches, Great Scott! supermarkets and Little Caesars Pizza.

Many local senior centers are providing transportation. For more information, call 882-3860.

Lindsey is a 5-year-old diabetic. Her daily insulin shots, diet restrictions and constant blood monitoring only provide day-to-day control over the disease. They do not cure it. So Lindsey, along with 11 million other Americans, still faces the long-term risks of diabetes — like heart disease, blindness, stroke, amputation and kidney disease. The complications of diabetes will account for an estimated 150,000 deaths this year alone.
But thanks to your contributions to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Lindsey and millions like her have something more to look forward to. In the past decade, JDF research has made great strides in isolating the causes and conditions of diabetes, bringing us closer to a cure. At the same time, diabetes increases by 6% every year. And in ten years the number of diabetics will have doubled.
So you see, your help is needed more desperately than ever before. For more information on the warning signs of diabetes and its treatment, and what you can do to help, call JDF at (313) 569-6171.

A $2 donation is requested but indigent residents may receive a waiver.
"Absolutely no one will be turned away due to inability to pay," said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara. "The donations will permit us to purchase additional vaccine to provide protection for that many more people."
Donald Lawrenchuk, medical director for the Wayne County Health Department, urges that senior citizens with chronic conditions of the cardiovascular, pulmonary and/or renal systems as well as those with diabetes, severe anemia or impaired immune functions be inoculated after consulting with their physician.
The county health department will offer a trivalent split virus vaccine for individuals with chronic conditions and to all residents aged 65 or older.
"The typical influenza season runs from November to April, but the maximum protection provided by the vaccine occurs when it is given early before the influenza season starts," Lawrenchuk said.
The 1989-90 vaccine has been developed to protect against strain of A/Taiwan/1/86-like (H1N1), A/Shanghai/11/87-like (H3N2) and B/Yamagata/16/88-like viruses.
For more information, call the county health department disease control division office 467-3325.

Wetlands

Preserving them is important

WETLANDS ARE often seen as swampy places where insects breed and that should be filled in and built upon.

But we don't see it that way.

Wetlands are magical places that provide food for wildlife. That's something we value.

And Canton will be able to preserve some of those lands. The Southeast Michigan Land Conservancy has set its sights on preserving 40 acres of wetlands along Koppernick near Hix and Joy roads.

The group, which is dedicated to preserving open lands, plans on purchasing the tract for $150,000 from a group of private investors. The conservancy plans on adding it to the William P. Holliday Forest and Wildlife Preserve, which borders Westland, Livonia and Canton.

We applaud that action and hope that it isn't the last purchase by the group in Canton.

According to the group's president, Jack Smiley, the conservancy may eventually play a role in preserving farm lands and other endangered open spaces in Canton.

Also, one goal of the group is to help prevent urban sprawl from engulfing the metro area. For that reason we're glad that Canton has attracted the attention of the group.

There is intense pressure to develop western Canton, and having a group like the conservancy around is good news.

But a group like the conservancy can't function alone. It needs community and government support. We would hope that Canton officials do what they can to help the conservancy operate in the township.

Also, if the conservancy is buying land in the township, residents should consider lending financial support because they're the ones benefiting from it.

It looks like there will be another 40 acres of open land preserved in Canton. That benefits all of us. But we just hope it doesn't stop there. More land in Canton should be preserved, and the contributions of groups such as the conservancy should be recognized by the community.

Smoking

It must be stopped at schools

WE WERE DISMAYED by comments made recently by John Hoben, the superintendent of the Plymouth Canton schools, about a survey of local residents.

The survey, conducted by state Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, asked residents if smoking by students and adults should be banned at schools. Of those surveyed, 81 percent said the state Legislature should pass such a law.

However, when Hoben was asked to comment, he said the survey is something that should be taken into account when the school formulates policy.

WE COULD understand that stance, if it only applied to teachers. However, at the Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem High schools there are designated smoking areas for students.

By keeping those smoking areas, the district is giving its backhanded endorsement to smoking.

One reason the district gives for keeping the designated smoking areas is that it doesn't have the money to hire security guards to police those areas.

We find that a lame excuse. Teachers, principals and others already on the payroll could check those areas.

It would send students the message that smoking isn't the thing to do at school.

Fighting drugs

More local action needed now

PRESIDENT GEORGE Bush's message is clear. If we want to rid our nation of illegal drugs, it's up to us.

If it's war we want, we'll have to be the ones who wage it — in our home towns and in our homes.

Though far-reaching, the president's proposal is woefully short of money. Consider this: the federal government will spend just $32 for each man, woman and child in its new war on drugs. And that is with a $2.2 billion increase.

The president's speech set a moral tone. For now, however, it's up to us to put it into action. Whatever our disagreements with the president's proposal, now is no time to be sitting on our hands.

WHAT CAN be done to combat drugs? Plenty.

First, let's not kid ourselves into believing illegal drugs are solely an urban problem.

If our suburban communities are free from crack houses — and that point is debatable — law enforcement officials agree that dealers live here — even in the nicest of neighborhoods.

Government officials need to understand that.

Western Wayne County, for example, has a multi-department police task force dedicated to knocking down suburban drug kingpins. Unfortunately, not every community contributes officers.

THIS ISN'T any time to slack off on community pressure, either. Parents need to continue spreading the word about the dangers of drug abuse.

We know of one large suburban community whose parental drug abuse task force has lapsed into obscurity.

But if it's an anti-drug abuse message we are sending, that message should be clear.

We know of another parental task force that financed anti-drug abuse programs through a cocktail party fund-raiser — without seeing the irony in its action.

Our proposed solutions are these:

We call on area police to redouble cooperative efforts. And we call on local elected officials to come forth with the money and manpower to make those efforts a success.

Also we call on all of us to re-examine our own behavior. Are we, like that parents group, sending mixed messages?

But if we shouldn't kid ourselves about suburban drug abuse, then neither should we kid ourselves that these steps, alone will be successful.

They, and the initial level of federal spending, establish a beachhead, not a war.

WHILE LOCAL police can be wonderfully effective in bringing down local pushers, they can't be expected to wage war against sophisticated South American cartels.

While parental guidance can help a child choose not to use illegal drugs, it is no substitute for the professional guidance needed for those children who have already made that choice.

And while clear, unambiguous anti-drug messages may work for suburban youths, it might not prove enough for urban youths trapped in poverty with no jobs or any on the horizon.

Make no mistake, we believe President Bush's program should be ratified by Congress. But it's only a start. We challenge Congress to come up with more money — without cheating programs designed to benefit poor Americans, as has been charged of the president's plan.

FINDING THE $1.8 billion necessary to pay for last year's Anti-Drug Abuse Act is a start. Just $1 billion has been appropriated of the $2.8 billion authorized.

But more money will be needed not only to punish the pusher but also to treat the victim.

The president has called drug users, even casual ones, a major part of the problem. Dealers wouldn't deal, he argues, if users didn't buy.

But health care professionals believe there must be more money to get users off drugs.

There is a national cry for a balanced approach: one part law enforcement, another part education and yet another part treatment.

We spend billions on weapons to protect us from outside attack, yet we're bleeding internally. What enemy ever devastated as many lives as illegal drugs? What enemy ever wasted so much human potential?

President Bush has given all of us our marching orders. And we should follow them.

But the president and Congress must realize that while it's war we want, we can't win it without their support.

Excitement on the field, not in bottle this season

Judith Doner Berne

OUR SUBURBS will be pretty empty Saturday.

A good percentage of local residents will be hightailing it for East Lansing or Ann Arbor, as Michigan State and the University of Michigan launch their football seasons.

And this year, the excitement at the games (at least by the second half) will be generated from what's going on on the field and not from what's coming out of a bottle.

The University of Michigan, exhibiting one more facet of the leadership that should come from a world-class university, last month banned bringing containers into the stadium — anything that could hold food or drink.

Last week, MSU followed suit.

As U-M season ticket holders, who like many fans have been relegated to the same seats in the same row and section for the past five years, we've become accustomed to the people and tone of our section. It doesn't matter that from row 16, section 20, we can't see the far side of the field at all — we've got a great view when it's on our goal line.

SINCE RUMOR has it you have to be willed tickets or pay the hefty price to join The Victors Club to change season ticket seats, we expect to be seeing these same folks for quite a while.

But I wonder what the funny guy in front of us will be like — without a drink in his hand. He usually starts out quiet, but by the half he's getting into it — no matter what's happening on the field — and his high fives are extended to a broader and broader audience as the game goes on.

I wonder what the funny guy in front of us will be like — without a drink in his hand?. . . It would be a shame if it turned out that without spirits he is spiritless.

And, as a member of one of the few sections with its own cheerleader, I wonder if he will still have the courage to stand up on the divider between the field and the seats and lead us in the M-I-C-H-I-G-A-N chant after a score — then gesture pointedly to the end-zone section reserved for fans of the opposing team.

I sure hope so. He is an institution. It would be a shame if it turned out that without spirits he is spiritless.

ON A LIGHTER note, lost in all the press given the crackdown on alcohol consumption is U-M's crackdown on umbrellas.

That's really sticking it to us.

We'll certainly be able to tell who's a fair-weather fan now.

As the seasons change, half the fun is waking up to that gray Saturday morning, contemplating whether it will or it won't, then tossing that blue and yellow umbrella into the car and hoping that the old adage holds — if you're prepared for rain, it won't.

And what's going to happen to all those blue and yellow umbrellas? They'll have to be left at the tailgate, taken to the golf course or — in the worst possible scenario — given to your neighbor and season ticket holder for Michigan State, where they stopped short of the umbrella ban.

"If you can cram anything into it, go ahead and try," laughed an MSU spokeswoman.

You could say that MSU fans are more fragile, less staunch--Officials were afraid that, threatened with wet weather, fans wouldn't show up if they couldn't be protected by an umbrella.

You could. But I won't.

Happy football season.

Alternatives to abortion

To the editor:

I am responding to the recent letter (Aug. 24 Observer) from Debra Darvick regarding freedom to choose abortion.

In her letter she asks Ms. Shea (who wrote a letter against abortion) several questions such as, "What would Ms. Shea say to the women whose birth control fails them, to the rape victim who finds herself pregnant, or to a woman who learns through prenatal testing that the fetus she is carrying suffers from handicaps she is incapable of handling?"

All of these are tough questions with no easy answers. Let's face it, life is full of many problems with no easy solutions. But there are alternatives to abortion.

Ms. Darvick ends her letter in this manner: "Ms. Shea, let your conscience guide your reproductive decisions. And please, allow me the freedom to have my conscience be my guide as well."

Conscience deals with morality and morality in my eyes has to do with God's laws. So my question is, "What would God say?"

I looked up "conscience" in the dictionary and it is defined: "knowledge or feeling of right and wrong, with a compulsion to do right; moral judgment that opposes the violation of a previously recognized ethical principle." However, to make a good decision, one must have an informed conscience. Unfortunately, many people tend to believe that since something is legal, it must also be morally correct. Not so. There is a higher order involved.

Those of us who believe in God understand that no matter what life deals us, he will help us to "hang on" and if we but trust — tough as it may be — he will bring good from it. "I believe in the sun when it isn't shining; I believe in God when he is silent."

Schools don't really care

To the editor:

We have lived in Plymouth Township for 20 years. Generally speaking, ours is a very caring community.

However, there is one exception — the school administrative system personnel. I won't go into previous unpleasant experiences with them, but a current situation reveals that nothing has changed: Their attitude is still very indifferent and uncaring!

About six weeks ago, the Observer carried an ad for Plymouth District school bus drivers. My husband applied. After a reasonable amount of time had passed and he had not heard anything, he went back to the Administrative Office and asked to see a person from the Personnel Department.

THAT PERSON promised to check his application and let him know if he might be considered. Time passed and no telephone call was received, so my husband went to the bus yard and talked with management there.

Again, a call was promised, but none was received. He has since returned to both the Administrative Office and the bus yard, and again received promises of a telephone call to advise if he had the necessary qualifications for the job.

To this date, no one has shown the courtesy of a call.

By the way, one has to wonder which applicant would be more qualified than he is — a Brink's armored truck driver for 29 years with a perfect safe-driving record along with an exemplary personal driving record. He is in perfect health, taking no medication and has never used alcoholic beverages in his life.

Well, I guess the millage has passed and the "I Care Committee" has again retired.

Enjoyment of 'my lake'

Tim Richard

MY LITTLE lake is one that thousands of other folks know about.

On Labor Day weekend, nearly all 200 campsites are awash with trailers, motor homes, RVs and tents.

The water is of pristine clarity, the way you imagine water was when Nicolet and Joliet canoed into Michigan. It takes two solid days of boats powered by 150 horse power engines towing water skiers to stir up even a little sediment.

The air is abuzz with engines — four-wheel drives, inboards, outboards, chain saws, all-terrain vehicles, the truck of a guy who sells campers firewood at $1.50 a bundle, even though the forest is full of dead-fall pine and oak branches.

One chap with a guitar played about 15 minutes. The rest of the time, you hear rock music on radios.

Families mostly take over the place, nice folks from the metro Detroit suburbs, Midland, Bay City, Monroe. Much of the sound is made by children at play. This little lake doesn't attract partying, foul-mouthed drunks.

The park manager, a career DNR type, takes pride in its maintenance and regrets only that he can't make improvements faster.

MY LITTLE LAKE reveals another side when the weekend hordes evaporate.

Last year, the Tuesday following Labor Day, an adult bald eagle visited the dead tree next to the picnic beach. I was able to glide the boat within 100 feet of our national bird, who looked past me as if I were a worthless worm.

This year, one cool morning before the water skiers were out, an osprey did a diving act.

The lake level is down, given the dry summers of recent years, so the beach is wide. The woods are dry and free of mosquitoes. You can take a leisurely stroll a few hundred yards from the campground. If you can sit there with a book, or maybe read about the Posen Potato Festival in the Alpena paper, all sorts of birds reappear.

Did you know there was such a thing as a hairy woodpecker? Did you realize that despite a "snipe hunt" being a game, there really is such a long-beaked bird as a snipe?

And if you drive at a leisurely pace down a county road instead of the maniacal pace of I-696, you can see big flocks of wild turkeys, families of deer and grouse.

WHEN IT'S QUIET after the hordes depart, you can hear the high-pitched bugling of the elk as he stakes out his territory and serenades for mates.

You must listen carefully. Any transistor radio will obscure his 'O-o-o-o-o-E-e-e-e-e." I doubt many water skiers ever hear it.

Across the two-lane highway from my little lake is a gravel pit. The pit and the neighboring woods are used only by ATV drivers, as near as I can tell from the sandy ruts that carve the hills, and guys who shoot holes in Busch beer cans.

Too bad, because the flatter rocks contain tiny fossils of sea creatures from millions of years ago. The glaciers that covered the North American continent to the Ohio River picked them up and laid them down again.

I had the place pretty much to myself. Maybe fossils of ancient creates aren't as much fun as running gasoline toys. Or maybe the people are all fundamentalists who insist the world was created in six days in 4004 B.C. and that fossiles are tricks of the devil. Or maybe people just don't know.

Other prizes are nearby. One lake has a loon, with its wobbling, plaintive cry. That lake is small and shallow, not much good for water skiing, so just a few quiet boaters get to enjoy it.

That lake connects to a flooding with a million zillion ducks, herons and geese. One can't run a 140-hp engine in that swamp, so quiet people can savor it at will.

"My lake" isn't private property at all. But if you proceed quietly, you soon possess an immense amount of wealth.

Wage war on whom?

By Jack Gladden
staff writer

WHEN GEORGE BUSH announced his plans for cracking down on drugs last week, he said twice that he wanted to send the message to drug traffickers that "the rules have changed."

The phrase was intended to show that the kind and gentle president was getting tough . . . on drugs at least. And since politicians are always changing the rules in the middle of the game, that idea didn't seem to bother anyone. Except maybe me.

What bothered me about the phrase was not the words but the concept. We are in the middle of an era when changing the rules has become all too common and all too easy.

Rules are changed by government bodies, public officials and private organizations to meet what are perceived to be the needs of the moment without any regard to the long-term effects.

All too often individual liberties are eroded in the process.

The rule-changers are acting with the kind of panic mentality that exists in wartime. And that, I suspect, is at the heart of the matter.

"War" has become the buzzword of the current era. We don't try to solve the problems of crime or racism or drugs or hunger. We declare war on them.

Thus, we have the "War on Racism," the "War on Drugs," the "War on Crime." But in any war, some liberties are lost.

THAT'S THE reason the American Civil Liberties Union attacked parts of the president's drug program, which includes, among other things, more drug testing of workers, more penalties for first-time users and more pre-trial forfeiture of vehicles and other assets.

The ACLU issued a statement calling some of the measures "attacks on basic values like the presumption of innocence, the right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures and the right to due process of the law."

Yet we seem to be forfeiting bits and pieces of these rights every time some official or organization "changes the rules."

Consider just one minor skirmish in this series of Social Wars — the "War on Smoking." Smokers, in the eyes of the warmongers, have forfeited all rights just by lighting up.

A classic example of this showed up in a small help-wanted ad that appeared in this newspaper a few months ago. The last line in the ad read: "EOE — Non-smokers only."

How any company could proclaim itself to be an "equal opportunity employer" that discriminates only against smokers is beyond me. But that's the kind of logic that even the most liberal among us accept as perfectly reasonable today.

IN ITS FERVOR to join the "War on Racism," the University of Michigan — one of the hotbeds of liberalism — recently adopted a policy that was so strident in its attack that a federal judge ruled that parts of the document were in clear violation of the First Amendment.

That ruling has caused Birmingham schools to delay adopting a similar policy for their system.

Troy Schools, joining the crusaders against gambling, drugs and tobacco, recently added a catch-all phrase to the student rule book that could play absolute havoc with individual rights. In listing things that students are not allowed to possess, the term "etc." was added after the words "drug paraphernalia."

At least one board member worried about that small addition, saying that police liaison officers could be "exceedingly zealous" in enforcing the rules.

And in Southfield, when the question of drug testing of school employees was raised, one teacher said it didn't bother him. "It may be a violation of my rights," he added, "but the kids have rights, too."

Yes, they do. We all have rights. But little by little they are being chipped away in the panic of waging war on societal problems. And we're giving them up without a protest.

We need to find solutions to the problems of drugs and crime and poverty. But we dare not give up our individual liberties in the process.

Our best teachers usually get the 'splits'

Doc Doyle

Q: I just found out my fourth-grade daughter is going to be mixed in a class with fifth-grade students. I think fourth-grade students should be in a class with other fourth graders and fifth-grade students with other fifth graders. Is this going to be a problem for my daughter? What is the real reason for mixing fourth and fifth graders?

A: What you are referring to is called a "split" class. Although not always popular, "splits" are not unusual, especially in communities such as yours, which is experiencing a surge of student growth.

We need to understand there is no such thing as a fourth-grade student. For instance, a reading level for a fourth- or fifth-grade student can range from the third to the ninth grade. Furthermore, students for a "split" are selected based on their academic and intellectual ability and may indeed be closer in their range of skills than students in a regular fourth- or fifth-grade classroom.

Students selected for "splits" usually have comparable test scores, similar reading abilities, interests and work habits.

Indeed, a greater "split" can occur in a 12th-grade government class (a required course for graduation) in which students can range in reading skills from a second-year college level to a ninth-grade high school level.

If we grouped only by chronological age for all education experiences, your school band and football team may have to disband. Musicians and athletes range in ability. A freshman may blow the trumpet while a sophomore may be the best halfback.

All this withstanding, the "split" issue always raises its head at the start of the school year.

You asked for the real reasons for "splits." There are many, but the most common is the sudden increase in enrollment at a specific grade level.

Let us assume there are two fourth-grade and two fifth-grade classes, both filled with students according to the teacher contract or by district philosophy.

Assume that in August, nine fourth graders and seven fifth graders move into an elementary attendance area. There is only one classroom available. Two classrooms simply don't exist to have separate fourth and fifth grades.

If two classrooms are available, the school board must hire two teachers to avoid a "split." If there are 10 potential "splits" in a school district (with moderate funds) and the administration decides not to use "split" sections, the cost is 10 extra teachers or $350,000 (with benefits). The question then becomes, "Is the district being fiscally responsible?"

Principals generally place one of their most experienced and competent teachers in a "split" to grant a quality experience for children and to reduce parental anxiety.

Therefore, the most critical variable for a positive experience is the teacher who you have indicated — in your case — is a well-respected, quality educator.

Her family acts as her haven, career

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Diane Nuoffer enjoys being a mom.

"We always wanted to have lots of kids," said Nuoffer, a 33-year-old Canton resident. She and her husband, John, have five children: Jessica, 11; Jacob, 6; Amelia, 4; Julia, 2; and Paul, 5 months.

"This is probably it," she said. "It keeps you busy with this many children."

John Nuoffer, 34, works at the General Motors Hydra-Matic Division plant in Ypsilanti. She has been a full-time homemaker for approximately eight years, and before that worked at the U.S. Post Office in Plymouth. She worked every other Saturday as a substitute, delivering mail on a rural route.

Nuoffer does some baby-sitting for a few people she knows.

"It's just to help people out for short periods of time."

She frequently hears from other parents seeking care for their children.

AFTER THEIR oldest daughter was born, the Nuoffers, who started dating in high school, waited a few years for their next child. After Jacob arrived, they remembered how much fun it was to have a baby around.

"They're so lovable and they're so sweet," Diane said. "They're nice when they get big, too."

Working outside of the home isn't something Nuoffer's interested in.

"I wouldn't even consider it. If I had to work, I would take kids into my home and charge."

If necessary, she'd do some other kind of work at home.

THE FAMILY worships at St. Michael's Lutheran Church in Wayne each Sunday. They pray together, and try to teach the children Christian values.

Nuoffer limits the amount of television her children watch. She enjoys being there when they need a hug or are celebrating a new accomplishment.

"I like to cook too and I like to bake. I like the kids to be around that."

John Nuoffer works mostly days and comes home in the middle of the afternoon. She has found that's a help. He's refreshed and looking forward to seeing the children at a time when she may be out of patience.

"My husband's real good about baby-sitting in the evening."

That gives her time to run errands and to be with friends.

"I think moms need that, too."

NUOFFER BELIEVES it's best for children if their mothers stay at home. She has seen some bias against mothers who stay at home full time.

"I don't think as much in our church family as in society at large."

Church members recognize the value of teaching morals to children, and the important role parents play.

Working outside the home is a possibility for her when the children are older. She may seek some kind of work that can be done at home.

"I don't really have any special things I would do outside home."

She's considering taking a class to learn typesetting. Nuoffer is interested in photography, has many hobbies and enjoys meeting and talking with people.

She knows some mothers who work outside the home at part-time jobs with flexible hours. Such jobs are good for mothers who can handle those responsibilities, Nuoffer said. It's good for all mothers to have some outside interests.

GETTING BY on a single income isn't as difficult as some might imagine, she has found. Nuoffer drives an older car and doesn't drive far. If she had a paid job, she'd need more reliable transportation.

Working involves other additional costs, such as bills for clothing. Nuoffer gets some clothing for the children at garage sales. Church members also exchange clothing that their children have outgrown.

The Nuoffers have credit cards they use for some items, such as birthday gifts and school supplies. The three older children receive a weekly allowance. The children are expected to do small jobs around the house.

Taking care of necessary tasks at their Canton home has included some bartering. They help friends and family with certain tasks, and those people help them.

DIANE DOESN'T judge other moms who work at paid jobs.

"I think every situation's different. I've got a lot of blessings that a lot of other people don't have."

At the same time, she knows the importance of differentiating between wants and such needs as shelter, food, clothing and education. The Nuoffers try to teach their children about that difference.

"You can always think of more things you want. Needs are basics you need to get by."

Day care: Who has my baby?

By Shirlee Rose Iden
staff writer

Who will care for my child?

Grandma works as a grocery checker or may be off on a cruise. Relatives are in far away cities. Dad walked out when the kids were tiny babies, so mommy has to work. Who will care for her child?

With the sun's light at morning, more than half of American mothers are off to the job, facing the challenges of the work place only after having deposited their preschool children in some type of day care.

According to agencies involved in child care services, as many as two-thirds of preschool children in the country will have working mothers by 1995.

Doctors, lawyers, educators, engineers, clerks, waitresses and office cleaners all ponder the child care question. They are mothers and fathers who ask: "How can we insure the care, cuddling, feeding, socialization of the children we must work to support?

For many mothers, child care choices boil down to bringing a relative or helper into the home or seeking a care center or family day care elsewhere.

RESEARCH ON the social development of young children in non-maternal care is just beginning. Moreover, even the early researchers don't always agree.

One study, by psychologist Deborah Phillips of Yale University and colleagues, indicates that the kind of day care received is of key importance to children's social growth, perhaps as important as family background.

Another study, flashing caution signs for parents, suggests that daily separation from mother during the first year of life, even with the child at home, is a risk factor which could lead to a disturbed mother-infant relationship.

Rosalind Gilson, preschool educator, is an educational observer for Head Start and the Merrill-Palmer Institute and was director of the Beth Hayeled Nursery of Congregation Shaarey Zedek in Southfield.

On home day care, she commented: "There are two types of child care in homes, first, group care for up to 12 children requiring a license; and secondly, family care, for up to six children requiring registration."

"The advantage of family care for the child is that the staff won't pick up and leave. Frequent changes in staff is a big problem in day care."

Gilson, and others involved, indicate that the only discernable difference between children in day care and kids at home with mother is that the day care kids are "more outgoing and adjustable."

Dr. Berry T. Brazelton, a nationally known child expert, is alarmed because he sees a society of families and parents "not seeming to care about kids."

"Teens are acting out all over the country and no one relates them to the parenting of little kids," he said recently. "A working parent coming home has to save some energy, stride in and grab all the kids in a warm hug, then maybe move to a rocking chair and just rock and rock."

"There are too many children in overcrowded rooms with a TV as the teacher," he said. "Money spent on child care does pay off, if its quality child care."

LINDA BOLTON, a Birmingham pediatrician on the staff of Providence Hospital in Southfield, has many tools to ply her trade. But beside the stethoscope and blood pressure machine, she stocks booklets such as "Breast-feeding Guide for Working Mothers" circulated by a company involved in infant nutrition.

"It has instruction for breast-feeding mothers whose babies are in day care while they work," Dr. Bolton said. "Mothers don't have to wean because they are returning to work."

Linda Bolton

Bolton, a social worker before going to medical school, is well versed in the problems of child care. "I know every permutation of the child raising situation," she said.

"Some women need to be home with their babies. Other can't. I know bankers, doctors and a pediatrician who stayed home and others who couldn't cope with being at home.

"Some have the luxury of choice, others don't. People who have the most stress are those who don't have to work but have a good job. The major question in this country today is career vs. child raising.

"Remember, almost no pregnancies are accidents now."

BOLTON SAID studies about child care do not confirm parental guilt. "The 2-, 3- and 4-year-olds love day care centers and many in this area have excellent equipment, even music facilities.

"But, checking out day care is just plain tough. Mothers should talk to other parents, check licensing, look the place over, and make sure its clean, neat, and flexible where you're always welcome."

Married to attorney Michael Bolton, she decided to go to medical school at Michigan State University partly because she was unable to get pregnant herself. "I thought medicine would fulfill me, but I got pregnant in med school. As a social worker, I thought I should stay home and care for my child, but there were pressures on me to stay in medicine.

"It was very hard to work out satisfactory child care for Jordan, my first son, and then I got pregnant again. Ian was born right after graduation. I thought

Giving special care to infants

Gerri Coran has been caring for children in her Canton home for a little more than seven years. She's feeding Angela Vendettelli, 1. Corbett Spoone, 1½, and Andy Gron, 2½, also stay at Coran's home during the day.

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Gerri Coran doesn't want parents to rush into a decision about day care.

Coran's been providing child care for about seven years in the Canton home she shares with her husband and children. She's seen the results of other children being in bad care situations.

"It's heartbreaking to see it."

Coran has three children, ages 9, 18 and 20.

"With my first two, I always took them to day care." Circumstances required her to work outside the home. She tried a variety of day care arrangements.

When her youngest son was 2, she decided to stay home and become a care provider. Her own care provider helped with suggestions.

Coran approaches child care as a profession. She doesn't shop or run errands during the day, concentrating instead on caring for the children.

State regulations allow Coran to have six children in her home, including no more than two under the age of 12 months. Her day starts at 7:15 a.m. with the first child's arrival and continues to 6 p.m.

CORAN CARES for children 6 weeks up to age 5. She doesn't usually take a child who's older than 18 months and just starting out in day care. Instead, she has children stay with her as they grow, and gradually filters in more infants.

Infant care is particularly difficult for parents to find, as few caregivers offer such a service.

When Coran has an opening, she first tells parents of children she's caring for. If the space isn't taken then, she'll occasionally post a notice at the Meijer store in Canton.

"By that night, I have a telephone call."

A couple of years ago, Coran wrote a booklet, "A Realistic Guide to Finding Safe Day Care for Your Child." She provides parents who are considering her services with a copy of that booklet and with a copy of the state's licensing rules for family day care homes.

Coran spends up to two hours in interviews with parents who are seeking child care and provides them with references.

Two evenings a week, Kathe Hetter leaves her home and goes to work at the Toys R Us distribution center in Canton.

Hetter, 32, spends her time there checking shipping logs. Her work commitment — six hours a week — leaves her time to spend with her two children.

Hetter and her husband, Chuck, live in Canton with their children, Allison, 2, and Christian, 4. For now, she's pretty much a full-time mom.

"You're responsible for your own kids," said Chuck Hetter, 31, a Ford Motor Co. engineer at the Rawsonville plant. "We try to be as responsible as possible."

The couple lived in St. Louis, Mo., where Kathe Hetter had worked as a lab technician before the children were born. They moved to Michigan when Christian was just a few months old.

They're glad they decided she would stay at home to care for the children.

"You can always be replaced in your job, no matter what your situation is," she said.

THERE ARE a few little things they've put off fixing at their home, but don't regret their decision. They know money's not what matters the most.

"I think we glorify work," Chuck Hetter said. "I think we glorify material possessions too much."

He sees too many people running after too many possessions.

"Your project goes bad, you go into a new project." Being a parent involves a great deal more risk, he said.

Kathe Hetter became active in the Canton Newcomers after they moved to Michigan, and met other mothers in similar circumstances through that group. She has worked for Toys R Us since February.

Before that, she'd worked for a short time during the holiday season at a cross stitch store. She heard about the Toys R Us job, which had better hours, and decided to make the switch.

Shirley Ewald's love of children led her to become a lead teacher at the Gerber Children's Center in Canton.

Ewald and her husband have two sons, ages 16 and 19. When they were younger, Ewald was a full-time homemaker. She later decided to seek a paid position, and looked into several child care centers.

"I was just thoroughly pleased with all of Gerber's policies," the Canton resident said. The program for children is well-planned, with the necessary guidelines in place,

"It allows us as teachers to be as creative as we want to be," said Ewald. She also has words of praise for Lee Weber of Livonia, director of the center.

Ewald's the lead teacher in a room for 2½-year-olds. She works mostly with children that age and has some younger 3-year-olds in her room.

The Gerber Children's Center, on Lilley in Canton, has been open for about 2½ years. It provides care for children from the age of 12 months to 10 years. Parents pay $99 a week for five days of care for a toddler and $78 a week for care of an older child.

EWALD'S WORKED at the center for about a year and a half. In her younger days, she pursued a business career, including managing a building construction company. She doesn't have a degree in education, but has plenty of experience caring for her own children.

She starts work at the Gerber Children's Center at 6:30 a.m. when the first children arrive and works until 2:30 p.m. Other staff members work during the late afternoon hours. The for-profit center, a Gerber subsidiary, is licensed for 135 children.

Ewald and her assistant are responsible for about 14 children each day in the summer. Enrollment tends to increase in the fall, and they're responsible for about 20 children during the rest of the year.

Songs, science experiments, crafts, story times and other activities are planned for the children.

Youngsters can choose some of their own activities.

"They learn really through fun, fun projects," Ewald said. "It's just fantastic what they absorb and what they know."

The children recite letters and numbers, and learn about different colors and shapes. The emphasis, however, isn't on formal instruction.

ONE PROJECT had the children in Ewald's room learning about shapes. Some time later, the children were able to point out without prompting that crackers come in such shapes as a square, rectangle or circle.

"It's just so rewarding to see that, and that's what's fun." Ewald and other staffers try to create a homey, fun-filled atmosphere for the children.

The children have a morning snack, lunch and an afternoon snack. For school-age children, latchkey care is available after school, along with a Camp Discovery program in the summer.

Days are busy at the center.

"It can be hectic, sure," Ewald said. "I found it hectic with my two sons."

Ewald enjoys her work, but is also glad she had time to be home with her sons when they were younger. M.J. Ewald, a University of Detroit student, also works at the Gerber Children's Center in Canton. His brother, Tracey Ewald, is a senior at Plymouth Salem High School.

Ewald and her husband, the assistant varsity baseball coach at Salem, are proud their sons have become responsible young men. She wouldn't be concerned if, a few years down the road, her daughters-in-law continued working after having children.

Shirley Ewald is the lead teacher for a room of 2½-year-old children at the Gerber Children's Center in Canton. Ewald and her husband, Canton residents, have two teenage sons. She stayed at home with her children when they were younger, and started work at the center about a year and a half ago.

"That's perfectly OK. That's an individual choice." She's seen that choice work out just fine, and she's seen cases where problems have developed.

Ewald knows today's parents need good day care.

"Absolutely. It's just going to increase and people will be looking for better programs constantly."

Day care kids adjust to life would just have to delay my internship, but my mom came to the rescue.

"She never once got up for us when I was little, but she came every day at 7 a.m. to care for the kids so I could do the internship and be licensed. Shortly after, we found a housekeeper who stayed five years."

Bolton would work every day of the week, then stay home every other night, but hers were difficult trade-offs, and she hasn't forgotten though her boys are half grown now.

JANET PONT, director of the Beth Hayeled Nursery School, says that Congregation Shaarey Zedek has parenting classes for parents who are "juggling the physical and emotional needs of their kids."

"We're also investigating feasibility of younger day care (infants) in a program to be supervised by the Conservative Jewish Movement," Pont said.

A recent recipient of her master's in preschool and parent education, Pont will shortly begin work on her doctorate at Wayne State University.

"There is a trend right now for all day kindergartens, but this is for need rather than education," she said. "The needs of parents have changed drastically, but the needs of children are to be children. Play is a child's learning. Overall, children need to develop self-esteem."

"Many children in day care are quite resilient and sometimes even more independent than others, but we have to look at long range results."

Today's working parents shop for day care even before conception. Finding just the right place to have a child nurtured is tedious and demanding, but vital.

Shelly Moss Brooks, who heads the child development department at Oakland Community College, hasn't learned about day care in the ivory tower, but as a working mother, a former nursery school owner, and a quality home day care provider. She estimates she has raised more than 10,000 children.

"I practice what I teach, and I try to do it well," she said. "Kids are special and so are parents. Some of our children are spending 11 hours a day in child care, so it is vital to work at developing their self-esteem and security."

Brooks contends that day care is especially advantageous for only children. She figures that some parents drive a long way to the center, usually on the way to or from their job. "I'm seeing a lot of father involvement. Maybe mom's on a business trip."

Brooks believes that family centers offer children a view of normal family life, that employers should be conscious of the stress over child care and can benefit from taking a part in the solution of these problems, and alleviating work place stress.

"Flex time is wonderful. Part time workers have the best of both worlds," she said.

Keeping a career while building a family

Maria Holmes and her 5-year-old daughter, Karissa, take a break for lunch. Holmes, community affairs and program director for Omnicom of Michigan, sometimes brings her daughter to work at the Omnicom office in Canton. Holmes and her husband, Solomon, are expecting their second child in November.

Maria Holmes went back to work when her daughter was three-months old.

"This is all she's ever known," said Holmes, community affairs and program director for Omnicom of Michigan.

Karissa, five, sometimes comes to work with her mother at the Omnicom office in Canton. Karissa's even been out on shoots for local cable television programs.

"The best thing I can say is that your children become much more flexible," Holmes said. "I think they're much more understanding."

Holmes and her husband, Solomon, are expecting their second child in November. She plans to take a few months off when the baby is born and then return to work.

Holmes has worked at Omnicom full-time since January 1983, and did a college internship there in 1981. She's been in her current position for about three years.

HER HUSBAND works for General Motors in production at the Willow Run plant. The family lives in Ypsilanti Township.

Karissa, who is starting kindergarten this fall, has done just fine in day care.

"It takes some adapting, but they generally do well," Holmes said. "She's a very outgoing child and I think that helps a lot."

During the first year Karissa was in day care, she stayed with Holmes' mother-in-law.

"That worked out well," she said.

Karissa went to her grandmother's Ypsilanti home on those days. Holmes paid her mother-in-law for providing child care, just as she would have for any baby sitter.

When Karissa was about 1¼, her parents decided to put her in a home-based, day-care facility. That home, in Ypsilanti, was licensed to provide care for 12 children.

A local woman, assisted by her mother, ran the facility. Some children there had physical disabilities.

"They became very normal to her," Holmes said.

The home also had children from various nationalities and ethnic backgrounds, an experience that helped Karissa.

FLEXIBLE HOURS were another plus at the Ypsilanti facility. Holmes works varied hours; her husband works mostly afternoons.

Karissa went to the facility for several years. At that point, the care giver had a family situation that required her to cut back day care hours. Karissa again went to her grandmother's for child care.

"You know there are always going to be crises here and there," Holmes said.

She recalled interviewing an applicant who seemed nervous and reluctant to reveal information. Holmes was concerned about that person's qualifications.

"I think it's tough to find good day care," she said. "I think unfortunately there are not enough people who are well-trained who are available."

Holmes, 30, is grateful her husband has helped out with child care and household tasks. She occasionally goes on business trips and feels comfortable leaving their daughter at home.

She's also found being a mother has helped her as a manager.

"I think that being a parent makes you generally a more understanding person," she said. "You understand home crises because you have them yourself. You're less apt to jump to conclusions."

The couple's lives will change with the arrival of a new baby.

THEY KNOW more about caring for an infant than they did when Karissa was born and their daughter will help them care for the new baby.

"She's been a real help to me and she's real excited about the baby coming."

They are considering having someone come to their home to care for their children. The couple will like day care for the children at their home, particularly during the first six months, she said.

Holmes is active in her church and is president of the Plymouth Business and Professional Women's Club. She enjoys her job and plans to work for another five years or so.

She'd like to stay home at some point while her children are still young. She would also like to do volunteer work, including involvement in the school PTO, Girl Scouts and other activities.

"It makes such a difference when the kids see their parents there," she said.

Holmes is satisfied just having the basics in life, and doesn't need to be a millionaire. She lost both of her parents when she was younger and knows family ties should be treasured.

"I've learned in life that nothing's here for always."

Patience is her job description

If there's a problem during the first 30 days a child is with her, Coran may suggest a parent find another option.

"Everybody has their own way of raising children." She believes caregivers should follow the parents' basic system.

CORAN EARNED an associate's degree in accounting, and worked as an assistant corporate controller before becoming a day care provider.

"So I know both sides of the fence."

Canton was the place where Coran found a true professional care provider. That person cared for her youngest son.

Coran has parents sign a contract outlining such things as rates, hours, vacation plans, and parental responsibilities. Parents provide medical information and permission slips for emergencies.

"Mine is strictly a play home." There isn't much teaching, although the group does listen to stories and sing songs.

Coran provides breakfast, lunch and a daily snack for the children. She belongs to a federally-funded food program, the Association for Child Development.

As part of that program, she's required to fill out daily forms indicating what foods were served. Every three months, a representative visits her home to check on things.

"It does give the parents some protection." Three of the four visits are scheduled each year, with the fourth unannounced.

Coran, who is "over 40," has found it takes a good deal of patience to be an effective caregiver.

"The rough days are when babies are teething." Those infants cry and make their presence known to those around them.

"You don't drink a lot of coffee in this job, either."

Coran's older son and daughter have other jobs and can occasionally help care for the children.

Ease youngsters into day care

Spending time at care center with child can help

By Julie Brown

Getting kids ready to go to a child care facility can be challenging, but there are steps parents can take to help.

"I think the biggest thing is for parents to have worked through and become comfortable with the notion," said David Breeden, a social worker and director of Plymouth Family Service. "Then everything will flow from that."

Young children are more attuned to body language than to words, he said. A sense of uneasiness on a parent's part won't go unnoticed by a child.

Parents can go slowly in getting children used to spending time at a day-care facility. Parents can spend some time with the child at the child care center or caregiver's home.

It's a good idea to give some thought to how to say goodbye, Breeden said. It can be detrimental to make too much of a production out of goodbyes.

"On the other hand, you don't want to sneak out."

PARENTS CAN help children adjust by being consistent in their preparation and by providing as much structure and predictability as possible. Children need to know, for example, who is to pick them up and at what time.

"They'll grasp some of it and some of it they won't," he said. Minimizing surprises helps reduce a child's anxiety level.

Some parents find it helpful to say their goodbyes at home and have someone else drop the child off.

"You don't have to be the martyr."

Parents need to help children develop a sense of autonomy. Children need to be aware that they have rights and should speak up if they're uncomfortable.

Children should know, for example, that it's not OK to be hit.

"Your best monitor of that is your child." Children can let their parents know if problems develop, Breeden said.

Some families find goodbye rituals helpful. Parents may, for example, wave goodbye each day at the front door. Some children take a favorite doll or toy with them to the child-care facility.

There's no definitive answer on the question of whether children benefit or suffer from being in a child-care setting.

"I don't think we have a choice anymore," said Breeden. Recent research seems to suggest that spending time in a child-care setting is all right, and can be beneficial in terms of children developing social skills.

SOME CLIENTS at Plymouth Family Service, a Plymouth Community United Way agency, worry about their children being in child-care settings. That's particularly common for women.

"All of them seem to struggle with the issue of whether to leave their children or not," Breeden said. He's seen that concern, not only among agency clients but among women in general.

"My impression is that it's an uneasy peace, particularly for a lot of mothers. I see very much that kind of struggle in them over trying to blend those two roles."

His sense is that parents benefit from having their children in care facilities on-site or close to work. Having greater access to their children helps ease parents' fears.

It's changing. Men are a little more involved, and they should be . . . It's because they miss something as fathers by being less involved.'

— David Breeden
director, Plymouth Family Service

ECONOMIC CIRCUMSTANCES require many women to work outside of the home these days, and balancing those responsibilities is difficult.

"Maybe that's where fathers need to come in more," said Breeden, the father of two young adult children. "Maybe that's the next step."

It's become more acceptable for fathers to take an active part in child care. Even TV commercials show more men in that role.

"I think it's happening," he said. "It's changing. Men are a little more involved, and they should be."

Children and mothers aren't the only ones who benefit when fathers take on an active role, Breeden said.

"It's because they miss something as fathers by being less involved."

Motherhood is her career

She's also a graduate student at Eastern Michigan University, where she is working on math/science certification for secondary education. She'll start her student teaching in January.

"I'll have to put the kids in full-time day care for 16 weeks." That's still a few months off, but she'll be looking into different options for short-term care.

For her student teaching, Hetter listed the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools as her first choice and followed that with a list of nearby school districts.

FOR NOW, on days that she goes to work, a neighborhood teenager cares for their children for a couple hours until Chuck Hetter gets home. Kathe Hetter's not sure if she'll look for a teaching job in the near future.

She may put out some job search feelers for the fall of 1990. Having another baby is also an option.

She chose teaching in part because it means she'll be home summers with her children. Hetter knows children reach an age when they're too old for a sitter, but still need some supervision.

Child care: 'Benefit of the '90s'

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Child care benefits, long overlooked by corporate America, are receiving renewed attention by employers scrambling to fill jobs from a shrinking labor pool.

"The benefit of the '90s," predicts Georgiana Jasnowski of the 4-C Child Care Coordinating Council in Wayne County. "Employers have to do something," she said, in view of "a decreasing work force and more jobs."

Jasnowski's 4-C counterpart in Oakland County, Paulette Chaplin, agrees.

"Severe labor shortages at entry level positions already exist. While big employers aren't feeling the crunch yet, they very soon will. And I think they're going to be forced into providing child care services," Chaplin said.

To date, few firms offer such benefits. Of an estimated 6 million companies nationwide, a mere 4,150 have programs, based on figures maintained by the National Commission on Working Women.

In Michigan, an estimated 200 firms, 30 percent located in metropolitan Detroit, offer various programs, but most are limited because "the whole concept is new to corporate America," according to one corporate official whose firm launched benefits this summer.

"A CAFETERIA-STYLE benefit program" offering a variety of options is the ideal, according to John Szutarski of Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance in Farmington Hills. Last May, the firm offered a flexible payment account, today's benefit of choice by most corporations.

Under such a plan, untaxed salary is earmarked for child care costs, saving the employee and the corporation taxes on withheld sums. While actual benefits are small, the program is considered by many to be at least a beginning.

Fidelity Bank, a community bank with branches in Birmingham, Bloomfield Township, Southfield and Troy, and Olin Industries in Livonia maintain such accounts.

Alexander Hamilton also implemented flexible work schedules this summer. From May to September, work hours were extended Mondays through Thursdays. Each Friday, the workday ended at noon.

Flexible working hours "provide extended opportunity for families to be together, increased R and R time on the weekend," Szutarski said. The firm is now considering flexible work schedules on a permanent basis.

Six years ago, employees of the city of Southfield decided an on-site day care would be an asset for them. With the passage of years, all of those parents' children are now in school, but the idea didn't fade.

Within a month the Southfield Employees Day Care Center will open in the old Tennis and Arts Center of the Civic Center. It will be the first municipal child care center in Oakland County.

SHARON LeMIEUX/staff photographer

Christine Gregory of the Botsford Hospital child care center tries to get 1½-year-old Katie Tourangeau to take a nap.

Other possibilities for consideration include child care subsidies in lieu of health, vacation or other benefits now earned by employees and resource and referral systems that assist in tailored child care, rather than settling for what is readily available.

Presently, Burger King of Michigan subsidizes wages of employees at 19 outlets in Kent, Ottawa and Montcalm counties, paying an additional $1.50 hourly to those with young children. The big three auto firms, GM, Ford and Chrysler, each offer resource and referral services.

"MORE WOMEN THAN ever before are majoring in accounting, some 50 percent of all students," said Barbara Fornasiero of Plante & Moran, an accounting firm with offices in Southfield and Rochester.

"We looked at our demographics, who we are hiring, and decided it's necessary to do these kinds of things for the viability of the company," Fornasiero said of child care benefits offered by that firm.

In addition to extended parental leave (18 weeks beyond accrued paid leave) and flexible funding, the firm offers free on-site child care each Saturday in the Southfield office during tax season, from January to mid-April. Up to 20 children ages 18 months to 12 years are cared for in a specially outfitted conference room that is converted into a day care center.

Quality on-site child care is costly and almost always requires some corporate funding, especially when starting up and if infants and toddlers are included, according to Janet Munson.

"It's expensive bringing child care onto your campus," said Munson, an early childhood specialist whose firm, on-site Child Care Services, has assisted in establishing many of the 17 on-site corporate centers now in Michigan, including those at Pontiac Osteopathic and St. Joseph hospitals in Pontiac, St. Mary in Livonia and William Beaumont in Troy.

Hospitals, responding to critical nursing shortages (many of whom are child-bearing age females) and the expense in training new employees, are setting trends in on-site care, aimed at stabilizing employee pools.

BOTSFORD HOSPITAL in Farmington Hills operates a state-of-the-art facility, featuring furnishings scaled in size to fit small children and felt-covered walls.

Launched three years ago by Munson and partner Kathleen Boylan, the center has an open door policy that permits unscheduled parental visits throughout the day, creating a "fish bowl" effect that Munson and Boylan said results in quality care.

Still, in spite of recent expansion that now accommodates 80 children, admission waits are lengthy and hours of operation, 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., do not accommodate employees on night shifts. Costs range from $105 weekly or $3 hourly for infants and toddlers to $80 weekly or $2.50 hourly for children ages 2 to 5 years.

The Botsford center is a corporate model, according to Munson and Boylan.

The wave of the future, Boylan added, are centers catering to both the young and the old, "combined care for sandwiched families" responsible for the care of children and aging parents.

Employers, Munson said, "need to realize how important the entire family picture is to the health of the employee and then be responsive to those needs. If not, everyone — the employer and taxpayers like — is going to be paying costs four or five times over down the road when the children who aren't getting quality care today are grown."

Complex to offer on-site day care

By Janice Brunson

When Birmingham-based developer Peter Burton married Sandi Burton in 1980, she had a son, Christopher, then 9.

Her tales about the difficulty in finding adequate child care as a working single parent before the marriage impressed Burton, seeding an idea he has translated into an innovative touch in an enormous commercial project under way by Burton and partners Robert Katzman and Ronald Hughes.

The Arboretum Office Park Complex in Farmington Hills, a six-stage development containing a million square feet of office space, will contain an onsite child care center for tenants of the six massive buildings in the project.

"It's a commitment to society at large, a way of making the world a better place to live," said Burton, 36, describing himself as "sensitive to social issues" as a result of the 1960s.

The center will be located in the fifth building, slated for construction next year when space in the recently completed fourth building is fully let.

Mercy Health Services, Delta Dental and TRW, a credit bureau, now occupy space in the complex. They and another 30 or so tenants were polled about interest in a child care center.

OF THOSE WHO responded, "100 percent were very supppportive of the idea," according to Joanne Fletcher of Arboretum Properties, the firm developing the project. Fletcher recently completed an exhaustive search for a child care operator.

"We wanted to use a local vendor, someone able to adapt to the interest of the develoment. We didn't feel the (national) chains were flexible enough for us," Fletcher said.

A decision will be made later this month from an array of possible providers, including existing child care centers seeking expanded facilities, area consultants and national firms specializing in the development of child care centers.

Such firms are relatively new on the horizon, in the forefront of a promising industry now that corporate child care is emerging as "the employee benefit of the '90s."

Gerber Children's Centers, a division of Gerber Products in Fremont, offers a franchised turnkey operation such as that now in operation at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. Children's World and Kindercare offer similar franchises.

Some 20 firms in metropolitan Detroit provide more individualized services, including Americare, noted for expertise in establishing resource and referral systems, and the Merrill-Palmer Institute at Wayne State University that offers a host of services.

Sandi Burton's tales about the difficulty in finding adequate child care prompted her husband, Birmingham-based developer Peter Burton, to include on-site child care at the new Arboretum Office Complex in Farmington Hills.

State lawmakers prefer volunteer child care plans

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Republicans and Democrats agree: State government shouldn't mandate child care benefits, but it's wonderful if businesses provide benefits voluntarily.

"We did not want government-mandated benefits," said state Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, chair of a GOP task force that is producing how-to booklets for business and giving non-cash awards to employers that run a good program. "We need to stroke companies for new ideas."

"We're not handling it as a women's issue. It's not a women's issue," said Jeanette Hercik, a high-ranking official in Gov. James Blanchard's state Commerce Department.

"I'm not a child development person. I'm a working mother," added Hercik, who is putting together a 21-member, business-dominated task force on child care this fall.

THERE ARE virtually no bills in Michigan's legislative hopper on child care, although in time there may be cautious advances in licensing.

There are federal income tax benefits to setting up child care programs, and both parties are scurrying to make the 1986 tax law better known.

House Republicans have a free booklet called "The Michigan Employers' Guide to Child Care" that covers taxes and other ideas.

The Blanchard administration is setting up tax-free accounts for state employees. And his Treasury Department is working on a plan to do the bookkeeping for small businesses unable to do it themselves.

It works like this: The employee has up to $5,000 of pre-tax earnings deducted and set up in a special "child/dependent care account." A couple earning $36,000 can save $1,244 on federal income taxes, $230 on state income taxes and $375 on social security taxes for a total of $1,849.

There's a short-run disadvantage: Social security taxes and benefits are also reduced, lawmakers point out.

The worker draws on this account to pay for child care.

Blanchard announced in his State of the State address that Treasury will do "care accounts plus" bookkeeping for small businesses. Beier said it's "not up and running yet" but will be ready about Jan. 1.

Under that, employers will withhold employees' care account money as well as taxes and submit them to Treasury, which will do the accounting. Employees would submit reimbursement requests to the state, which would make payments from individual "care accounts plus."

If 30,000 Michigan families set up child care accounts, the state Treasury estimates it would lose only about $7 million in revenue — 1/10th of 1 percent of the budget.

JEANETTE Hercik of the Commerce Department said Blanchard will announce the 21 members of the child care task force sometime this month.

"Fifteen will come from the private sector. The private sector should have a majority," she said.

"It will have a business perspective — the economic climate — not a social service perspective. We want to maintain Michigan's competitive advantage."

Hercik said Blanchard himself will chair the group's few meetings in its 90 days of life.

Her view is that many businesses want to do the right thing but don't know how. "Companies are calling me on how to do child care because they're not in the kid business," she said.

WHAT KINDS of changes could a task force recommend?

- A child care ombudsman in the Commerce Department.
- Training of day care providers. At present, a provider working at home with fewer than six children need only register with the state Department of Social Services. Larger establishments must be licensed.
- A study of capital needs of providers.
- Mechanisms to help groups of employers provide joint programs.
- A statewide how-to conference for employers. (The Michigan Small Business Forum, held in Novi in May, had a seminar on the topic.)

MEANWHILE, the state and federal governments continue to provide $863,000 to the "Four C's" — Child Care Coordinating Council.

"It has 13 regional offices in the state," said Sue Allen, who manages that account for the state in the Office of Children and Youth.

Senate child care measure broadens role of government

Senate Bill 55 (ABC) the Act for Better Child Care, was passed on June 23, 1989, authorizing subsidies and tax credits for child care.

Final version of the the Senate bill authorized $1.75 billion in grants to the states for subsidies to child care providers and payments to parents. States would be required to set standards for child care providers.

In the House, the bill is now being moved along by the Ways and Means Committee.

IT APPEARS both parties in the House and Senate are trying to provide some measure of federal relief for working parents.

HB3, sponsored by California Democrat Augustus Hawkins, would carry out a three-pronged delivery of child care.

Approximately 25 percent would finance full day/full year programs for Head Start, and more children, some from families with somewhat higher incomes, would be served.

Another quarter chunk would flow directly to preschools to establish or expand early childhood programs and before and after school "latchkey" programs.

Approximately 35 percent would be made available to child care providers to pay for day care programs for infants, toddlers and children under 13 years old.

The remainder would finance grants to help states coordinate child care activities, improve standards, provide training and enforce regulations at the local level.

THE BILL would allow the poorest families to get services for free, but moderate-income families would have to pay based on a sliding scale.

A presidential veto is possible, according to Labor Secretary Elisabeth Dole and Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

Dole said in a letter to the committee that the range of choices available to parents would be restricted due to the bias in favor of center based care and against informal arrangements favored by many parents.

Labor Act outlines wages, standards for in-home sitters

Child care workers who receive at least $50 in cash wages in a calendar quarter or work a total of more than eight hours a week are entitled to a minimum wage of $3.35 an hour, according to the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Operators of preschool or day care centers who have fewer than two employees or whose only employees are members of their immediate family are not subject to the act.

The U.S. Department of Labor also distinguishes between casual and full-time baby sitters.

A casual baby sitter, generally one whose employment is irregular or intermittent, need not be paid the minimum wage.

Full-time baby sitters must be paid the required minimum wage and overtime.

Under the act, baby-sitting means care and protection of infants or children in or about the children's own homes. Individuals who take children into their own homes for care and protection are not domestic service employees.

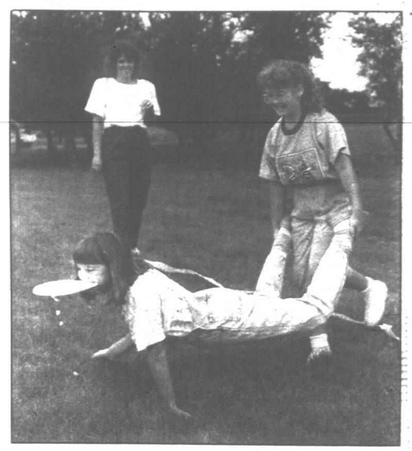
Celebrating a 25th anniversary with prayers, games

Watching a video about evangelism, members of the Risen Christ Lutheran Church observed the church's 25th anniversary.

Beginning with morning worship services Risen Christ Lutheran Church of Plymouth celebrated its 25th anniversary last Sunday. Between services, members shared a continental breakfast on the church lawn.

The Rev. Dr. Paul Foust, former Evangelism Secretary of the Michigan District, Lutheran Church Missouri Synod spoke during the services. He was joined by the congregation's first two called pastors, the Rev. David Romberg and the Rev. Kenneth Zielke. The current pastor, Rev. K.M. Mehrl has served the parish since May 1987.

That afternoon the congregation rallied around an old fashioned family picnic complete with barbequed chicken in Township Park. Children teamed up with partners and tried to outrace and outhop each other to the finish lines. Adults joined in a sing-along and watched a video on evangelism. Former parishioners were invited to attend.



Playing games to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Risen Christ Lutheran Church are Tammy Hermann (left) and Meghan Franck. Sharon Brian watches them from the background.

Carlisle was a panelist on the TV show "To Tell the Truth." She has written a book, "Kitty," an account of her life on and off Broadway and in Hollywood.

Other speakers scheduled to appear in the series are:

● Gerald Posner, Wednesday, Nov. 8. Posner is an investigative reporter and author. He will discuss his new book, "Warlords of Crime: The Chinese Heroin Connection."

● Mary McBride, Tuesday, Feb. 6. McBride, a humorist and author, has collaborated with Joan Rivers and Phyllis Diller on humorous writings in recent years. Select child care that's appropriate

By Marcie Walker
special writer

One of the most difficult decisions that working parents of an infant or preschooler must face is in whose care to place their child during the work day. There are several child-care options to consider:

- A professional nanny
- A full-time baby sitter
- A family or group home
- Day-care center
- Nursery school (in cases where a parent works part-time).

After deciding upon the type of care desired, the next problem is the selection process. Public, non-profit and commercial agencies are available to help in the process. These include:

● The Department of Social Services. For Oakland County, call 858-1612. For Wayne County, call 256-3814. Specify the type of care (family home, group home, day-care center or nursery school) and the communities in which you are looking, and they will send you a computer printout of licensed caregivers at no cost.

● The Wayne or Oakland County Child Care Coordinating (4C) Council. For Oakland County, call 858-5140; for Wayne, call 579-2777. The 4C's referral service also is free.

● Nanny Agencies. The Nanny Network and Nanny of America are two commercial agencies that will match you with a nanny. Delta College, in Bay City, has a free matching service, but it also has a long waiting list.

● Babysitting Agencies. Check the Yellow Pages. There are several agencies that will arrange short or long-term baby sitters.

● Want-ads. Those operating family or group homes often advertise in the newspaper. If you respond to an ad, make sure the home is licensed by the DSS. Baby sitters who will come to your home also advertise. The DSS does not require licensing for these caregivers.

Sick Child Care

When your child becomes ill, a parent inevitably will have to take occasional days off from work. A new type of child care, called sick-child care, is gradually emerging in the Detroit area. These are options to consider if your child is only mildly ill or has to stay in bed for one or two more days before returning to school. Or perhaps you absolutely have to be at work for one reason or another.

Pontiac General Hospital and Botsford General Hospital, in Farmington Hills, both have set up sick-child care centers for the children of their employees.

Two options are available in the Detroit area for the public:

● Oakland General Hospital, in Madison Heights, has opened its Kids' Klinic. For a $20 fee, sick children can be cared for during the work day. Parents must call (967-7594) before bringing in their children.

● Rent-a-Mom. This program, run by Health Care Professionals of Southfield, provides nurse's aides on an hourly basis to care for sick children in your home.

You might also consider contacting a baby-sitting or nanny agency, if your child just has the sniffles. Many of these agencies have short-term, hourly fees.

Desire to serve motivates new associate pastor

By Julie Brown
staff writer

'I would have pursued a Ph.D. in Russian literature, except somewhere along the line God got me.'
— the Rev. Lee Seese

UNTIL RECENTLY, the Rev. Lee Seese hadn't spent much time in Michigan.

Seese, the new associate pastor at the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth, started work Aug. 23.

"Before that, Seese had served as interim pastor at a Presbyterian church in Seattle. He'd been to Michigan to visit pastor friends periodically, while he was passing through the state to other destinations.

"The basic response we got when we said we were moving was 'Where?' "

Seese and his wife, Lisa Konick, recently moved to Plymouth. They have a son, Jeremy, 2½. Lisa Konick, a journalist, has worked for The Seattle Times and done freelance work for The New York Times.

Some people he spoke with before moving thought Michigan was just Detroit and that Detroit was just crime. Seese, however, found the people he met here to be warm and genuine.

"So my first impression was good. I'm more of a people person than a place person."

SEESE SPENT about nine months as interim pastor at the church in Seattle. He grew up in Seattle, leaving to attend the Princeton Theological Seminary in New Jersey.

"Princeton was the first place away from Seattle for me." He received his master of divinity degree from Princeton in June 1988.

Seese, 30, attended the University of Washington as an undergraduate. He was an English major and combined the creative writing and literature sequences, earning a bachelor's degree.

"I would have pursued a Ph.D. in Russian literature, except somewhere along the line God got me," he said with a smile.

He did some graduate work at the University of Washington after college graduation.

"Something was missing. I just realized that felt need to be of service was stronger than anything else. As long as I could remember, I've had a strong desire to serve."

Seese was raised going to church, and at age 14 went through the confirmation program but didn't join the church.

"It just seemed like an overwhelming commitment." For 11 years, he wasn't active in the church.

HIS PARENTS divorced when he was 18, a world-shattering experience for Seese.

"I felt like a real foundation was removed."

He read the works of German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche and others, searching for answers. Over time, he came to realize that trust in God provided a foundation that wouldn't be shaken.

"I think the church is a place that was created for acceptance." The church provides a link between people's basic beauty and the way that's affirmed by Christ's message.

Seese's work at the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth is primarily in pastoral care. He visits people in the hospital, senior citizens, and people considering joining the church.

He preached on Sunday, Aug. 27, for the first time at the church in Plymouth.

"That will be something I'll do about once a month." His first sermon was "Can We Really Stand Peace?"

Seese talked about people's unquenchable thirst for peace, and the fact that peace is nevertheless hard to find. That burden doesn't have to be borne alone, however. The Scriptures remind people that God helps bear that burden.

Seese is enjoying working with the Rev. Philip Rodgers Magee, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth. Magee is both a mentor and a colleague for Seese.

"I can't think of a better person for that," Seese said.

He'll be installed as associate pastor during a special service Sunday, Oct. 15, at the church. For now, Seese is getting settled into his new job.

In his free time, he enjoys movies, including foreign films and comedies. Seese also enjoys reading, opera — and baseball. He played some baseball in his student days, and continues to play softball.

Before coming to the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth last month, the Rev. Lee Seese served as interim pastor at a Presbyterian church in Seattle.

War on drugs begins at home

Rev. Lloyd Buss

The enemy has been located. War has been declared and forces mobilized to destroy the enemy. The war on drugs has turned its course to a war on the drug lords of Colombia.

The drug lords of Colombia are easy to hate. I can't think of a single redeeming feature in any of their actions that bring drugs to the users in any country. Everything they do to produce and provide drugs for street use is among the most reprehensible of all human activity.

The drug lords of Colombia surely need to be brought to justice. Whatever our country can do to assist Colombia in bringing these destroyers of life to the public tribunals of justice and order we must do as surely as we joined with our Allies in defeating the enemies of World War II.

Colombia's decision to reinstate the suspended extradition treaty between the United States and Colombia has been regarded as a key element in our efforts to reduce the sale and use of drugs. At long last, the United States can deal directly with those who have brought unlimited anguish and grief to countless numbers in our land. We can bring them to our land and lock them in our jails. Many are convinced that our war on drugs has taken a turn to victory.

THE COLOMBIAN DECREE to extradite drug traffickers to the United States has been acclaimed as "a courageous move" by President Bush, who was our chief drug czar for eight years as vice president under Ronald Reagan. The treaty providing for the extradition of drug traffickers to the United States was struck down by the Colombian Supreme Court on a technicality in 1987. Colombian drug lords under indictment in the United States are regarded responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine smuggled into the United States. Should one ask if these indictments were instituted since 1987?

The murder of Senator Luis Carlos Galan, an early favorite in Colombia's 1990 presidential election and the declaration of terror by drug lords in Colombia, have created the scapegoats so useful in our war on drugs. At long last, we can sharply focus our efforts on specific people committing specific criminal acts. We have found the enemy.

If only that could be true — that the drug lords of Colombia are the ones responsible for the use and abuse of drugs in the United States. Misplaced judgements are equally false with wrong ones.

There will be no victory in our war on drugs until every hand that passes the drugs to the next is closed and every demand reduced. He treated by need be reinstated or created for that. That is a matter of will and choice, yours and mine.

Book tackles cholesterol issue

By Sue Mason
staff writer

OK, so you went for your yearly checkup and came home with a list of good and bad foods. Your doctor didn't say much, just nodded at your cholesterol level. It's 220, high but considered high normal.

Is it time to join the oat bran generation?

Not necessarily, but it is time to rethink your eating habits, according to Drs. Glenn Griffin and William Castelli, the authors of a new book, "Good Fat, Bad Fat: How to Lower Your Cholesterol and Beat the Odds of a Heart Attack."

In their book, the doctors try to cut through the confusion about how to reduce "cholesterol calories" and focus on the real culprit in the war against clogged arteries — saturated fat.

"Merely reducing the amount of cholesterol you eat is not enough because your body manufactures cholesterol when you eat saturated fat," the doctors said. "If you want clean and open arteries, you can make the decision to change your eating habits and live longer — or don't change and eat yourself into an early grave."

Rest assured, "Good Fat, Bad Fat" doesn't read like a Danielle Steele novel, but it is an eye-opener for the fast-food generation.

According to the doctors, the average cholesterol level of adults in the United States, Canada and similar cultures is 210. And the odds of dying of a heart attack or stroke are 50-50.

HOWEVER, most other people around the world have cholesterol levels of 150 — and they don't have as much coronary-artery disease. The reason is that they don't eat as much saturated fat as most North Americans. Their diets include beans, rice, seafood and fruits.

North Americans, on the other hand, are heavy meat-eaters and dabble in fast-food meals. Think of saturated fat shaped like a stick of butter, then think about a typical fast-food lunch of a big cheeseburger, french fries and milkshake. You've just consumed a half of stick of saturated fat.

This isn't a run-of-the-mill how-to book. It can be technical at times, but for the most part, the book does what its title implies.

It delves into the good and bad cholesterol and fats found in the human body and in foods. It also offers a simple formula for calculating daily saturated fat/cholesterol consumption and as an added bonus, a recipe section that includes the amount of saturated fat and cholesterol in each serving.

The book isn't a cure-all for cholesterol problems, but it does offer tips on how to eat out and not blow your program to reduced saturated fat and cholesterol intake. And throughout, the doctors stress the need to know your cholesterol level and have it checked at a cholesterol screening or monitored by a physician.

The authors aren't just expounding on medical knowledge. In fact, they point out that as recently as 1986, only 40 percent of physicians knew that a high-fat diet has a large effect on coronary-artery disease.

Part of what they write about is from experience.

Griffin knows first-hand the ramifications of eating bad fat. The editor-in-chief of two McGraw Hill medical journals, "Postgraduate Medicine" and "Senior Patient," he had bypass surgery after it was discovered a vital coronary artery was 98 percent blocked and another also was also found in the right coronary artery.

GRIFFIN KNEW about his problem with bad fat, and in his quest to figure out what to eat without worsening his condition, he discovered it was "mind-boggling."

"With the skimpy information available, it seemed I would need a full-time personal mathematician and a gourmet dietician," he said. "I definitely needed better answers and a simpler system than anyone explained to me."

Castelli is considered a crusader, traveling the country and the world to educate people about the dangers of saturated fat and cholesterol.

Appointed medical director of the Framingham Heart Study at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, he has been recognized by the U.S. Public Health Service with a meritorious service medal for his efforts.

So, if you want to beat the odds, "Good Fat, Bad Fat" may be a place to start. And even if you're a healthy eater, it's worth reading. You might find out that a lot of those so-called health choices you make each day are hiding bad fat.

"Good Fat, Bad Fat" is available in bookstores or by sending $10.95 and $2.40 for postage and handling to Fisher Books, P.O. Box 38040, Tuscon, Ariz. 85740-8040.

Focus: Hope walk returns

Supporters of Focus HOPE will be taking a little walk at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 8.

The walk is the organization's 14th annual 18-mile Walk for Justice, designed to rekindle public awareness that social justice still is not enjoyed by everyone and to raise funds for Focus HOPE.

This year's walk will emphasize the need to prepare today's youth for tomorrow's technology — "From High School to High Tech."

Registration and pre-walk festivities will get under way at noon at the Focus HOPE's Industry Mall on Oakman Boulevard, between Linwood and Rosa Parks, in Detroit.

Walkers will obtain pledges for each mile they compete. Volunteers also are needed to help organize and stage the walk.

For more information or to obtain sponsor forms, call Focus HOPE at 883-7440.

Day care guide names resources

A "Day Care/Preschool Guide" for the Canton-Plymouth area is available at the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center, and at the Dunning-Hough Library, 223 S. Main in Plymouth.

The booklet information was compiled by children's librarians from the two libraries. The joint venture got under way in 1987, with the first edition produced that year.

In 1988, the booklet was updated, and copies of that edition are still available. The booklet may be updated next year.

LIBRARIANS GET many questions from parents about child care options, and many parents have picked up copies of the booklet.

"We knew there was a need for it," said Judy Teachworth, department head for youth services at the Canton Public Library.

"I think we have more and more working mothers who need day care for their children," Teachworth said. "This makes it easier."

THE BOOKLET includes a preschool/day care checklist, indicating questions parents should ask about qualifications of caregivers, daily activities, health and safety concerns, licensing and other areas.

Information on day care homes, day care centers and preschool programs is included. The information was collected through questionnaires and follow-up phone calls. Listing doesn't imply endorsement by either library.

Sally DeGraff, a children's librarian at the Canton Public Library, worked on the booklet. DeGraff has since had a baby and left her job to be at home full time for a while.

At the Dunning-Hough Library, children's librarian Peggy Morgan worked on the 1988 booklet.

(For more information, call the Canton Public Library, 397-0999, or the Dunning-Hough Library, 453-0750.)

Caponigro named president at Casey

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Jeffrey R. Caponigro, whose first exposure to the media was as a high-school sports stringer in the mid 1970s, has been appointed president of Casey Communications Management.

The 32-year-old Troy resident will be second in command of Michigan's largest public relations firm, where he had most recently been executive vice president.

Caponigro succeeds Jack Casey, who will remain as chairman and chief executive officer of the Southfield-based firm.

"It will be a continuation of my on-going role — helping to manage the firm, strategic planning with the firm and working on obtaining the best client services we can," Caponigro said.

He also will continue to counsel on crisis communications and planning, and serve on the board of directors of Casey Communications.

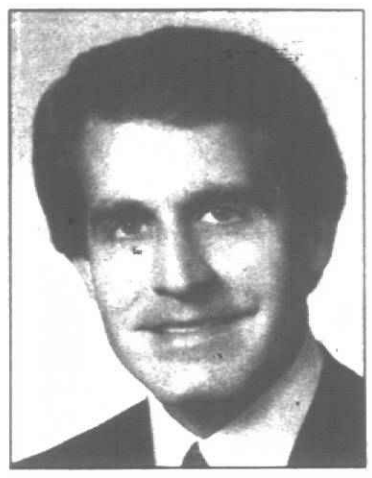
Caponigro has supervised several major accounts including Traffic Safety Now, the American Coalition for Traffic Safety and Audi of America since coming to Casey in 1984.

He previously worked at Anthony M. Franco Inc. and at Kolon Bittker & Desmond Inc.

CAPONIGRO SAID his sports background at the Observer & Eccentric, plus later stints at the Midland Daily News and Mount Pleasant Morning Sun, provided a solid foundation for a career in public relations.

"I had a lot of experience dealing with people, and my writing ability probably gave me a jump," he said.

"I really do feel that has helped me to develop a work ethic, a willingness to work hard, be a good team player, try to motivate people like coaches have to."



Jeffrey Caponigro: 'I had a lot of experience dealing with people, and my writing ability probably gave me a jump. I really do feel that has helped me to develop a work ethic, a willingness to work hard, be a good team player, try to motivate people like coaches have to.'

Caponigro attributed his meteoric rise in the PR business to experience gained from all of his employers — Casey, Franco and John Kolon.

"I was given a lot of opportunities," Caponigro said. "I was fortunate to work with a lot of good people."

Ten years of experience in the pressure cooker of PR and advertising work can translate to 20 years in other fields, he said.

Caponigro envisions changes in the public relations profession as more nd more companies recognize that they have all kinds of "publics" with which to deal.

"YOU HAVE employees, the community, clients, legislators, media people," he said.

Two-way communication — from the different publics up as well as from the client down — will be emphasized, Caponigro said.

Caponigro was described as "one of the top public relations professionals in the nation," by Casey.

"Jeff Caponigro's skill and dedication have been critical to the growth and success of Casey Communications," the chairman said. "As president, he will be able to play an even more important role guiding the firm into the '90s."

Casey has grown from a four-person public relations firm to Michigan's largest (with 45 employees and public relations revenue of $3.6 million in 1988).

THE FIRM was acquired by Shandwick Ltd. of London, England, the largest independent PR firm in the world, in 1987.

Caponigro is a graduate of Central Michigan University, where he majored in journalism and English.

He and his wife, Ellen, are parents of two small sons, Nicholas and Michael.

"I really enjoy playing with the two boys. That's great," Caponigro said. He also admitted to enjoying golf, tennis and working out with weights.

Non-fiction books and magazines also are attractive when he can find the time to read.

Caponigro is a graduate of Leadership Detroit, the program conducted annually by the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce for those considered the Detroit-area's top business and community leaders.

He is a member of the Public Relations Society of America and is a member of its national accreditation board.

Caponigro is a sought-after speaker on professional development, crisis communications and public relations counseling.

Budgeting college expenses

practically speaking

It doesn't take person with a perfect SAT score to determine that the costs of a college education go far beyond tuition, room and board.

The Farmington Hills-based Michigan Association of CPAs advises that college students develop a budget for those miscellaneous expenses that can rapidly empty your wallet.

The easy part is calculating the amount of money you have available to spend. Most students have four possible sources of money: a part-time job, a savings account, a monthly allowance supplied by parents and scholarship or loan money (or what's left after paying for tuition, room and board).

Now comes the hard part: planning for expenses. Some colleges will provide you with an estimate of how much you may need for personal expenses, but these figures can be way off the mark. After all, the college's calculations probably miss important personal expenses, such as those marathon telephone calls to your best friend on the other side of the country.

To simplify the budgeting process, break down your expenses into categories such as books, supplies and lab fees; meals; transportation; toiletries; utilities; and entertainment.

START WITH books and supplies. You may hate to spend $45 on that computer textbook, but if your heart is set on a career as a systems analyst, you better be ready to foot the bill.

Go to the local book store and scan the prices of books you may have to buy over the next year. Some courses will land you in the texts costing top dollar. Find out now when you can anticipate the expenses rather than next term, when you may have already exhausted your budget. Don't forget to include lab fees and the cost of such supplies as notebooks, typewriter ribbons and computer disks.

Even if you are on a meal plan, reserve some money for those midnight snacks. If you can't resist Friday night pizza outings, make sure you include the cost in your budget.

WHETHER YOU are commuting or living in a dorm, you will have to contend with transportation expenses. Calculate how much a visit home costs and how many visits you plan to make. Talk to your parents and find out if they are willing to pay for any trips home. If you own a car, estimate how much gasoline you may use each week. It is likely the car will need repairs or a tune-up during the year?

If you are living away from home, remember that you will now have to pay for such basic necessities as toothpaste, shampoo and laundry. Although these items seem insignificant, they can add up to a sizeable sum by year's end.

Other expenses to consider are utility bills. If these are not included in your room and board fees, ask other students to estimate how much you can expect to spend. And, of course, no budget is complete until it includes entertainment expenses. If you are a movie buff, don't forget to reserve a few dollars for an occasional night out at the movies.

TRY TO ESTIMATE expenses realistically, and as a safeguard against unexpected costs, increase your total by 10 percent. You won't be sure your estimate is on target until you've tested it a few months. So try your budget out and see how it fits. During the first month or two, jot down every dime you spend so you know where your money is going and whether your budget figures are accurate. If the same patterns continue the next month, adjust your budget accordingly.

But what if you can't make ends meet? The solution is easy, even if achieving it isn't. You have to increase your income or decrease your expenses.

Chances are you've already exhausted all the normal options for producing income. If so, maybe it's time for you to try a more creative approach. Some schools offer venture-capital money to help launch student entrepreneurs. Students have successfully initiated businesses to fill obvious needs, such as typing term papers, running a wake-up call service or house sitting.

ALTHOUGH YOU may think you are living on a bare-bones budget, you will be surprised at how much you can still cut back. Often your college ID can be the key to discounts on food, entertainment, haircuts and school supplies. Don't hesitate to ask when paying for goods and services.

Shop for food and personal items wisely, taking advantage of sales and coupons. To save on transportation costs, plan ahead to buy discounted airline tickets. Find out if buses and trains in your area offer discounts to student travelers. To trim your telephone bill, shop around for the best long-distance rates and make your calls at non-peak times when rates tend to be lower.

To ease the burden of buying books, buy used texts from other students or book stores. But plan on shopping early because supplies of used books are generally limited.

Shop around for the bank that best meets your needs. In comparing, consider such convenience factors as location, hours and automated teller machines, as well as savings rates and checking charges. Find out if the bank offers special student accounts such as no-fee checking.

With a little bit of planning, you can have your education and an occasional night out, too.

ONE SLICE AT A TIME

To develop a realistic budget, evaluate each of your expenses individually.

Fancy ad campaign doesn't mean you've arrived

Micro marketing strategies have been used to promote small businesses for years. But these techniques never seemed to command the level of recognition they have deserved.

For some reason, smaller companies were not perceived as having made it until they began sponsoring full-blown ad campaigns that appealed to the masses.

But the good news is that micro marketing works and will continue to as long as customer markets remain fractured.

Mary DiPaolo

RECENT EXAMPLES of micro marketing techniques reflect the creativity and imagination of the companies that have developed them.

Wallboards now appear in high schools, dentist offices and other locations to promote various products and services.

At a Kentucky high school, a giant poster of basketball's Michael Jordan has been used to promote mouthwash and shampoo.

Mobile units have been seen at state fairs and other outdoor events to provide free services for attendees. These services range from providing a diaper-changing facility to conducting seminars on diet and nutrition to performing color analysis.

ONE OF the newest micro marketing techniques has local video store owners renting space at the beginning of videotapes for local advertisements. The completed spots can be spliced in and run up to a minute in length.

"Anyone who rents 'The Wizard of Oz' will see a spot for a nationally distributed fabric softener," said a local video shop owner, "so why not see one for the local restaurant or car dealership as well?"

Non-media sources have also been used to help firms micro market local customer groups. Sponsors of charity functions, summer festivals and sporting events have discovered how business can be successfully mixed with pleasure.

"INFOMERCIALS" represent another means available to promote a company's products and services. Community-based cooking shows that feature local restaurateurs and hair and makeup demonstrations sponsored by local salon owners are among those that serve both as a teaching an promotional tool.

For a list of micro marketing alternatives for small business, call MarkeTrends at 474-1149.

Reformulating gas beats switching to methanol

On a clear day you can barely see Los Angeles, which is why the latest California clean air initiative runs roughshod over political sensibilities and bans barbecues, charcoal lighter fluid and even some house paint, all of which are blamed in some small part for their contribution to the choking clouds of smog that Californians seem to thrive on.

As California goes, so goes the nation, as anyone who has filled in the holes in an abandoned trampoline center can tell you. This is one reason why President Bush is encouraging the use of methanol as an alternate fuel for automobiles.

METHANOL IS a type of alcohol that burns with fewer hydrocarbons than gasoline. It's generally accepted that smog is mainly the result of unburned hydrocarbons that float up into the atmosphere and react in the presence of sunlight to turn into Johnny Carson jokes.

Since gasoline is mainly hydrocarbons, and auto engines burn the stuff, gasoline is a primary culprit in urban air pollution.

But while methanol does burn cleaner than gasoline, it generates fumes that act like peeling onions on your eyes. It also takes twice the amount as gasoline for equivalent mileage, and is so toxic a small amount ingested causes blindness.

Also, there isn't enough produced today to propel more than a handful of cars, and developing a production capacity large enough to supply the stuff would mean building up a whole new industry.

A RECENT copyrighted story in Automotive News suggests that there is a hidden pact between the auto companies and oil refiners to kill the use of methanol as an alternative fuel out of vested self-interest auto talk

Dan McCosh

— an accusation the powers that be vehemently deny.

Still, the suggestion that alternate fuels might work has shaken the industry out if its doldrums.

By now, we are nearing the end of two decades of legislation and engineering work aimed at controlling so-called auto emissions. Early efforts at making cars burn cleaner involved twiddling with the engine tuning and had the side effect of cutting mileage roughly in half just as the Arabs cut off the supplies of crude oil.

THE BREAKTHROUGH was the introduction of the catalytic converter in 1975 by General Motors, an invention that hangs underneath your car and simply burns up the gasoline that isn't burned in your engine. This meant that engines could be retuned and returned to their former mileage, while about 90 percent of the hydrocarbons still were removed from the exhaust.

Arguably the invention of the catalytic converter accounts for almost all the progress in the effort to clean up air. Catalytic converters have been fine tuned, made more durable and ultimately ended up on all the cars on the road, immensely improving air quality.

BUT LIKE they say, there's no free lunch. Catalytic converters don't work with lead additives used to boost octane. The butane-based additives used in unleaded gasoline tend to evaporate easily — creating pollution on their own.

Also, the life of a catalytic converter originally was planned to be only half of the life of the car, which means the guy buying the transportation special gets stuck with replacing it. Of course, he doesn't anyway — killing the effect of the whole system.

Both are reasons why auto companies are interested in reformulating gasoline so that it doesn't evaporate so easily and helps catalysts to live longer. Changing gasoline isn't as simple as it seems, since we consume such huge quantities of the stuff that altering the refining process is a multi-billion dollar change.

REGARDLESS, THE auto companies and oil refiners are starting to see that as preferable to developing a new system to make and distribute something as alien as methanol.

So now the Big Three and major oil refiners are forming a joint research effort to study major fuel alternatives aimed at improving air quality.

Clearly, the spectre of having to develop a separate production and distribution system such as methanol, as proposed both by California and the new clean air legislation, has roused interest in seeking a more viable alternative, and the first priority is an improved gasoline formula.

Dan McCosh is the automotive editor of Popular Science.

Kiddie tax can't prevent deflection

Fourth of five parts

By Sid Mittra
special writer

The fourth tax reduction strategy is deflection, which involves the shifting of taxable income to someone in the lower tax bracket. There are several ways of accomplishing this objective.

Kiddie tax

The kiddie tax is based on a parent's top rate if (1) the child is under 14, and (2) has net investment income after reducing gross investment income by $1,000. This tax is not levied on earned income. Investment income may consist of interest, dividends, royalties, rents and profits on the sale of property.

Only net investment income is subject to tax at the parent's top rate. For purposes of this rule, net investment income equals gross investment income minus $1,000 if the child does not itemize deductions. If itemized deductions is used, net investment income equals gross investment income reduced by the larger of (1) $1,000, or (2) $500 plus itemized deductions that are directly connected with the generation of investment income.

Notwithstanding the new kiddie tax rules, a number of strategies can be used to beat the kiddie tax. For instance, a taxpayer can take advantage of the fact that the first $1,000 of an under-age-14 child's unearned income is tax-favored. This is done by transferring assets that produce up to $1,000 of annual unearned income for the child. Another strategy is to switch the child's savings into investments that pay little or no current taxable income. these investments include U.S. Series EE bonds, municipal bonds and zero coupon bonds. Also, minor's trusts, under which assets and earnings do not have to be turned over to the child until age 21, probably are taxed at a lower trust rate even though the child is under 14 and has income of over $1,000. However, eventually this strategy does result in double taxation.

Gifts

An attractive way to shift income is for an individual with a high marginal tax bracket to give gift to a child in a low tax bracket. A gift of cash benefits the taxpayer to the extent that the after-tax return received by the child would presumably be higher than the after-tax return received by the taxpayer. A gift of appreciated property, such as common stock or income-producing property, can bring even higher tax benefits. For instance, the appreciated stock could be liquidated and reinvested to generate a greater after-tax return for the child than it would be for the taxpayer.

An example can demonstrate the use of gifts as a way of reducing the tax liability. Assume John Smith wishes to create a college fund for his son Mike and has $5,000 in a money market earning 7 percent interest. Assuming a 28 percent tax bracket, John currently pays a tax of $98 (28 percent of $350). If he gives the money to Mike who has no other sources of income, Mike immediately gains $98 because he would not owe this tax to the government.

Area youth symphony expanding orchestras

The American Youth Symphony of Livonia is expanding its service from two to four orchestras plus a concert band.

In preparation for that expansion the youth symphony organization has named four staff conductors and announced one guest conductor. The search is continuing for two other guest conductors.

The staff additions are: Lynne Campbell, conductor of Master Strings; John Renneckar, conductor, Festival Strings; Katherine Iler, conductor, Academic Strings; and Scott Stickley, assistant conductor of orchestra and conductor of the American Youth Concert Band and Renaissance Brass Ensemble.

Robert Phillips has been named guest conductor of the concert orchestra.

MUSICIANS INTERESTED in playing for the various performing groups who have not yet auditioned may attend the first rehearsal beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday at Livonia Churchill High on Newburgh north of Joy.

A mini-breakfast is planned for all musicians and parents at 9 a.m. Reservations may be made for the breakfast as late as Friday by calling 455-1797 or 522-0775. A rehearsal and parent meeting will follow the breakfast.

Musicians from the seven-county area are invited to participate in the youth symphony's expanded program. Students should ask their school band and orchestra teachers about the details of the program, said organizer Bill Savola.

A six-week free trail period is available and half and full scholarships will be awarded on a case-by-case basis.

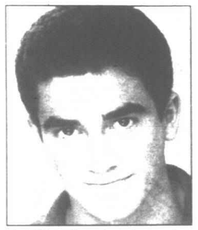
'Cattle call' gets actor in as a dancer

By Victor E. Swanson
special writer



Todd Heughens is a dancer in "Fiddler on the Roof."

Actor Todd Heughens, a former Troy resident, couldn't get an audition for a role in "Fiddler on the Roof" but with ingenuity, he managed to become a dancer in the show.

"Fiddler," which opens Tuesday at the Fox Theatre in Detroit, stars Topol, who played the lead role in the movie version of "Fiddler on the Roof," released by United Artists Pictures in November 1972.

"The producers (of the stage production) were worried that everyone who was interested in seeing 'Fiddler' had already seen it," Heughens said during recent telephone interview from Cincinnati, where the production was playing.

"But they want to see it again — done right. They've all seen the dinner theater and community theater productions, and now they want to see the guy (Topol) from the movie."

"FIDDLER" RUNS through Sunday, Sept. 24, at the Fox. Besides being one of the dancers, Heughens also understudies the part of Mendel, the Rabbi's son. As Heughens said, "I was hired as a dancer — slash — understudy."

He was nearly not hired at all for the production.

"I was out of town working in Cincinnati, which is where I am right now, when they (the producers) were holding principal calls, auditions for the leading roles, and I had my agent submit me anyway, and I was thinking I could always fly in," Flatly he said, "They didn't want to see me for any of the roles."

Determined to get a part, Heughens attended a cattle call for the show when he returned to New York.

"There were about 250 guys auditioning as dancers, and by the end of the day, there were maybe 80 left. They called us back for another day, and throughout the day — the six-hour audition — they weeded it down to eight. It's a pretty grueling process."

What's surprising is that Heughens got a part without really knowing much about "Fiddler on the Roof." "I hadn't even seen 'Fiddler' — the movie or the play — before I auditioned for it," he said.

Heughens explained, as simply as he could, what "Fiddler on the Roof" is about. "The storyline has to do with this man, Tevye (played by Topol) and his relationship with his three daughters, and through the show each of them ends up falling in love, and Tevye has to deal with them wanting to spend the rest of their lives with these three men, when the tradition is that they would be set up with men chosen by a matchmaker . . . The third daughter falls in love with a Russian — a non-Jew . . . and he just can't deal with that. He (Tevye) says, 'I can only bend so far before I break!' "

Heughens described the production as "almost a perfect musical." He added, "It really gets to the heart. It's very funny and very moving. And, certainly, Topol does a wonderful job with it."

ALSO IN THE CAST is Ruth Jaroslow, who plays — as she has for many stage productions over the last 20 years — Yente. Roz Harris, who joined the cast in Cincinnati, is Tevye's wife. In the 1971 movie, she was one of the daughters, Zeitel.

So far, the production has been on the road for about 12 weeks. It's scheduled for a 40-week tour of the country, which has already taken it to audiences in such cities as San Francisco, where it opened; Seattle,

"Les Miserables," the most successful musical of all time, held its opening night Wednesday at Detroit's Fisher Theatre. It is expected to run at least through the end of the year. The show has five casts in North America and 17 casts around the world.

'Les Miserables'

Will it be a smash hit here, too?

By Mary Jane Doerr
special writer

SITTING BACK in a comfortable lounge chair in the lobby of the St. Regis, a casually dressed, long-haired Richard Jay-Alexander declared, "Detroit makes me nervous."

"There are no guarantees in this business. I don't come in here cocky, sure of myself, thinking that we can't lose. I have been told that this is a great theater town but I am not ready to cash in my chips."

Jay-Alexander was still jet-lagged from his flight from Las Vegas the night before. The associate director and executive producer of what has become the most successful musical of all time, "Les Miserables," he was exuberant as he talked about his show. Next door, the sets had been hung at the Fisher Theatre, ready for the first rehearsal of the Chicago cast.

"Les Miz" played for nine months in Boston, six months in Philadelphia and six months in Chicago. There are five casts now playing North America and 17 casts around the world. The Broadway production costs $4-½ million but recouped the investment in only 23 weeks. It now records weekly profits of hundreds of thousands of dollars for the show's English producer Cameron Mackintosh. As mastermind of "Cats," "Les Miz," and "Phantom of the Opera," Mackintosh is the most powerful producer anywhere.

'There are no guarantees in this business. I don't come in here cocky, sure of myself, thinking that we can't lose.'
— Richard Jay-Alexander associate director

"MACKINTOSH WOULD have been here if he could have," added Jay- Alexander. "I talk with him every day. He is really quite simple and basic. He loves his work and is very accessible."

Jay-Alexander arrived in town for 10 days, to rehearse the cast before going to London for the open-

Vancouver (Canada); Los Angeles, and Kansas City.

"We're supposed to end up on Broadway. That's what they keep saying," he said.

However, Heughens did say he was in an off-off Broadway show, "Big River," a Huckleberry Finn musical, that was expected — by the cast — to go to Broadway a few years ago. It did not.

He also appeared in a well-received production at Ford's Theatre in Washington, D.C., called "The Hot Mikado," which looked as if it would go to Broadway.

"They had Broadway in mind and it ('The Hot Mikado') was a huge hit in Washington, and we were given Broadway opening dates (and) rehearsal dates and everything. I wasn't living in New York at the time, and they said, 'Well, you better find an apartment!' And I did, and I never heard anything about it (the show going to Broadway)."

HEUGHENS LIVES in New York, and he even has his own apartment, now, which he got this year. Most of the last six years or so, while he was in New York, he was subletting because apartments are hard to find in New York.

Someday, Heughens would like to live in Seattle. Of course, he loves to travel and that could change.

When he comes to Michigan with "Fiddler on the Roof," he will visit Howell, for that's where his parents now live. His mother has arranged a special party for him, which will include friends and family. He has three brothers,, two of whom live in Alabama.

Heughens attended Berkley High School as a sophomore and spent his junior and senior years at Troy Athens High School. "In high school (Berkley), I just saw a poster one day for auditions for 'The Pajama Game,' he said. "I auditioned and I got the show. And that was it, and I was hooked. I knew as soon as I was at the audition — even before I knew I had been cast in the show — I knew that was what I wanted to do."

He spent a year at Oakland University in Rochester Hills. During the summers of 1979 and 1980, he toured — mostly in Michigan — with the Meadow Brook Estate singing group.

FROM 1980 TO 1984, Heughens attended the Conservatory of Music at the University of Cincinnati. During the last year there and before going to New York, he took a short time off from school to work with the Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park, where he obtained an Equity Card.

"I actually moved to New York with my Equity Card, which was a huge blessing. It's so hard to do anything without it," he said.

Now, Heughens is coming back home. "It's my first time performing in Michigan since school," he said with delight.

Will it be a smash hit here, too?

ing of Mackintosh's newest musical "Miss Saigon."

"When I went to London to interview for this job, I thought I blew the interview. I did not speak French. I hadn't seen the show. That night I went to the Palace and cried my eyes out," he said.

Jay-Alexander does the casting for the American productions. Last week he cast 47 parts. He has worked with at least 20 Fantines, the character who sings one of the show's most popular numbers, "I Dreamed a Dream."

"You can't play the part unless you belt," said Jay-Alexander, who went on to explain how much of the color and finesse of Patti LuPone's voice in the English recording was produced in the recording studio.

"SHE DID NOT play it that way on stage," he said, obviously agitated about insinuations that the London cast is more refined than the American. "Look, I know what it takes to play that part. That role is about a woman who has lost her job. She is screaming about the miserable condition of her life."

"Les Miz" is taken from Victor Hugo's 19th century melodrama about the wretched living conditions of the poor in early 19th century France, a time when the average life expectancy of poor children was 2 years, when incurable diseases plagued the poor, when unemployment meant starvation.

The leading character Jean Valjean spends 19 years in prison for stealing a loaf of bread and his life expiating for his sin while fleeing his policeman pursuer Javert.

"Sure I was handed this job on a platter," Jay-Alexander said. "I haven't had to gamble on this show like Cameron. But I have a lot of blood and guts in it. I have seen it perhaps more times than anyone else — maybe as many as 1,000 times — but it still moves me when I hear the music or see it again."

What makes this "pop opera" different from a traditional opera is the acting demands on the cast. The actress who plays Eponine appears in a variety of roles in the show. She is a pea picker, a drinker, a pedestrian, an unemployed factory worker and a whore before she stars as Marius' rejected lover. After Fantine dies, she is cast as one of the boys at the barricade during the 1832 Paris uprising.

"THE WORD 'OPERA' scares me," Jay-Alexander said. "I think, though, the show will go into the opera house repertoire when the tours finish."

The show highlights the historical struggle between the French Revolutionaries and the Empire, paralleling freedom struggles today in places such as China, one possible reason for the unwaning public appeal.

"Mackintosh was interested in the show long before Tianemen Square," said Jay-Alexander. "I think he picks his shows because of something that happens inside himself. China is expressing an interest in the show and so is the Soviet Union."

"Les Miz" opened in Paris in 1980 as a series of tableaux. The French audience was familiar with the story so no explanation was needed between the scenes. When Mackintosh decided to take the show to London, he had it rewritten, shortening it to three hours and adding many of the famous songs — "Stars," "Empty Chair and Empty Tables" and "Bring Him Home." In New York, the show was again reworked into what is now the "Bible" version.

"When we auditioned the roles for Broadway, it was difficult because no one had seen the show and knew what we wanted. Now everyone is familiar with the parts so when we audition they come out of the woodwork to play the the parts," Jay-Alexander said.

"LES MIZ" got mixed reviews when it opened in London and was "tried" in Washington before it was mounted on Broadway.

"Cameron did not know if he wanted to risk it in New York, but he took a look at his ticket lines and decided it was worth it. I get mad when reporters take cheap shots at the show. We have not hyped it. The public loves it and has made it a success."

The 37-year-old actor-turned-director is himself a trained singer who graduated from State University of New York at Oswego. The last time he played the Fisher was as the stage manager of "Amadeus."

Locals appear in 'Les Mis'

Several area residents are appearing in the cast of "Les Miserables" at the Fisher Theatre.

Traveling with the show are Jennifer Naimo, originally of Farmington, who plays Eponine, and Dan Cooney, originally of Westland, who is in the chorus.

During the Detroit run, Joe Denawetz, 11, of West Bloomfield alternates in the role of the street urchin Gavroche, and Laura Bouno of Sterling Heights, whose family is moving to Rochester Hills, alternates with two other girls in the roles of young Cosette and young Eponine.

WE'D LIKE YOU TO RESERVE THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 17th FOR A MIRACLE.

George Washington said its creation was "little short of a miracle." James Madison said, "It is impossible for the man of pious reflection not to perceive in it a finger of that Almighty hand," when describing the process that created it.

Washington and Madison were commenting on nothing less than the document that created our government: The Constitution of the United States. The Constitution is the foundation of our country and the means by which we achieve the rule of law and protect our freedom.

The week of September 17th is Constitution Week. Many libraries will have displays and information on this incredible document.

Why not take a look at it. After all, it isn't often you can hold a miracle in your hands.

To get your copy, send your name and address to: Bicentennial Commission, 808 17th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006-3999.

Chili prizes

For the very first time, one team of chili cooks took first prize for best chili, as well as an award for showmanship, on Sunday, at the 11th annual Michigan Chili Cookoff at the Lark restaurant in West Bloomfield.

Frank Klancnik of Walled Lake was awarded first prize for his Smoke in the Hole Chili. He will represent Michigan at the World Cookoff on Sunday, Oct. 22, at the abandoned Tropico Gold Mine in California's Mojave Desert.

Second prize went to Kathleen Cummins of Birmingham, who said she had entered the contest for the last six years but was a winner this year for the first time.

Third-prize winner was Joe Swiderski of Wyandotte. Other winners were Lou Filippi of Blissfield and Alan Fabian of Woodhaven, who tied for fourth place.

The Smoke in the Hole group got first prize for showmanship, with its entertainment that included rap singing and a band. Award for best booth went to Fabian of Woodhaven, whose booth had a smoking volcano serving up chili. Klancnik's Smoke in the Hole came in second for best booth.

The judges — myself included — agreed that this year's chili contestants made the finest chilis that had ever been offered at Mary and Jim Lark's competition.

Proceeds go for 10 $1,000 scholarships, awarded to culinary arts students. Among area recipients are Howard Farris of Rochester Hills, Culinary Institute of America; Donald Harwood of Plymouth, Schoolcraft College; Jeffrey LaBine of Canton, Schoolcraft College; Jerry Painter of Westland, Oakland Community College, and Brian Tamm of Livonia, Schoolcraft College.

The restaurants of downtown Windsor welcome you. Whether you like French or Italian, Oriental, German, Mexican or the specialties of Canada, you're going to like lunch or dinner downtown, close to shops and entertainment, and that great waterfront view of Detroit.

A drive along Essex County's south shore makes a perfect afternoon of sightseeing, antique-hunting, lunch at a waterfront restaurant, a walk on the beach, shopping at small town stores, and renting a canoe at Point Pelee.

Welcome to Windsor's newest hotel, the Compri. It's right on the waterfront, two doors down from Cleary Auditorium. It features luxurious guest rooms, central location and the exclusive Compri Club lounge area for hotel guests.

Don't buy any fur before you shop and compare at Constantini Furs, 531 Ouellette downtown... where you get high-fashion styling, quality workmanship and the most competitive prices. Constantini Furs, where fur fashion in Windsor begins.

It's an old-fashioned country fair and it's called the International Plowing Match. 600 exhibitors on 100 acres, from September 19 through 23. You'll like the folk dancing, the big draft horses, the sounds of steam-tractors and a hearty farm dinner. Or shop for pottery and glass, wooden rocking horses, wildlife carvings and handmade quilts. 8 miles east of Windsor on County road 42. On the way home, don't forget to stop at the Duty Free Shop, on the Canadian side of the Windsor-Detroit tunnel, for savings up to fifty percent on Lladro figurines... plus fashionable Fendi Swiss watches, exclusive perfumes like Shalimar, Lancome skin care products, gifts, souvenirs and your favorite Canadian beer!

The best thing to do after any visit to Windsor is plan the next one. It's easy. Just say, "Let's go to Windsor."

These bikers are easy to like...

That's because they are a great bunch of conscientious kids who have turned in their Observer & Eccentric newspaper collections accurately and on time.

Their routes take them out into all kinds of weather all year long.

So what better way to show our appreciation than a 10-speed bike? Because these 12 youngsters are exceptional carriers, they were allowed to enter our annual drawing for a new bike. They are winners in every way!

If you have a potential carrier—someone reliable and responsible— in your family or know of someone who does, call us at one of the numbers below.

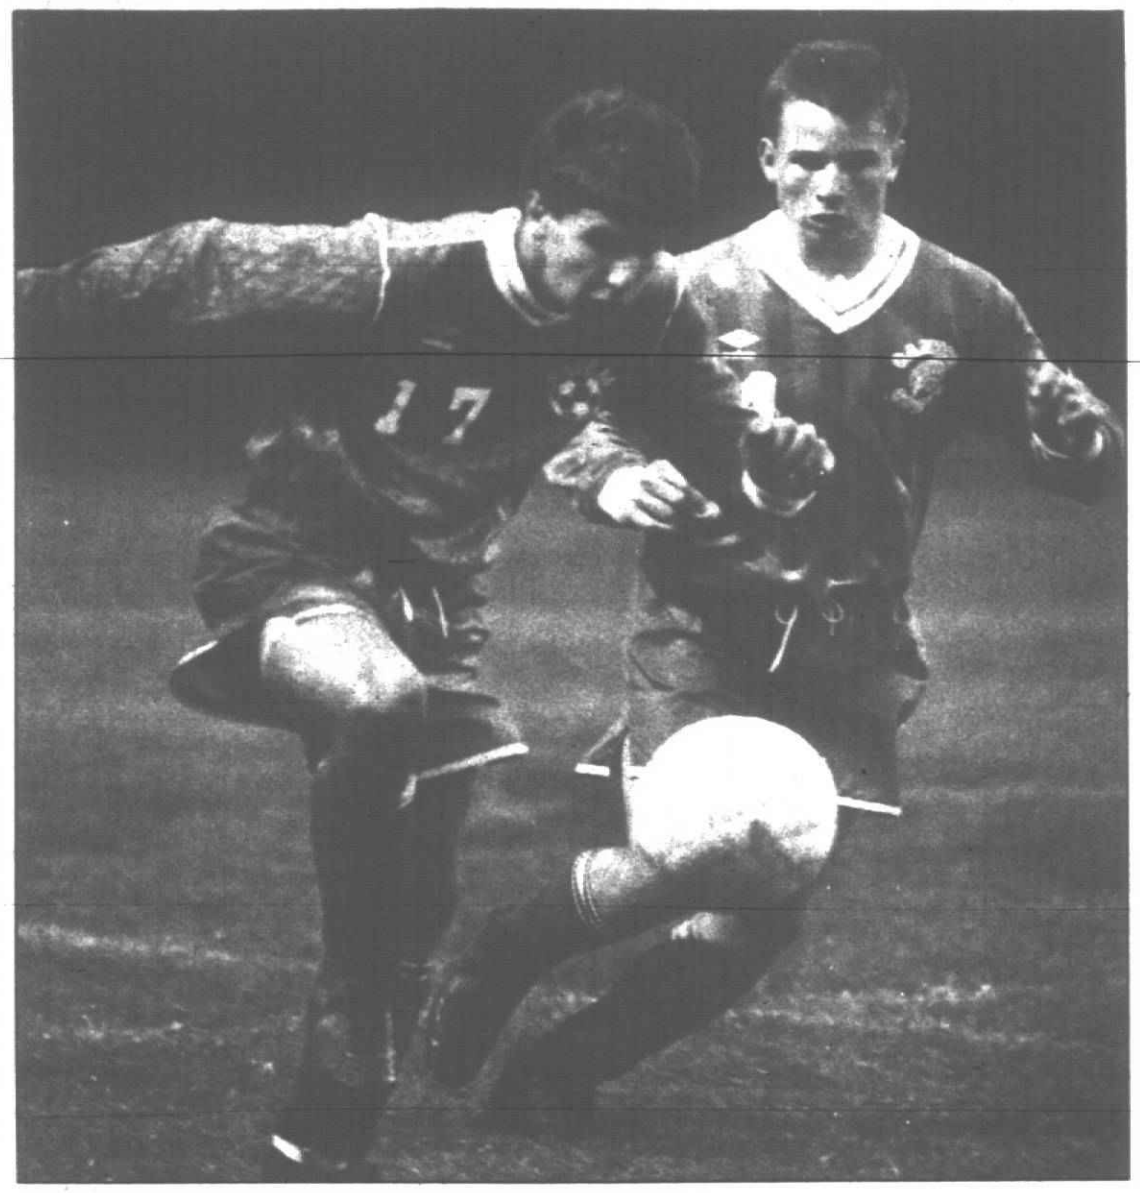
Gold's goal keeps Salem undefeated



SHARON LEMIEUX/staff photographer

Andy Cosenza of Salem (17) takes control of the ball while Jim Yack defends for Canton in the soccer game played Wednesday night at CEP. Jeff Gold scored the lone goal in Salem's 1-0 victory.

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The weather, the field conditions and the opponent caused Jeff Gold to recall a soccer game he'd just as soon forget.

"This reminded me of the district game last year when Canton beat us," said Gold, who scored the only goal Wednesday night as Plymouth Salem beat the Chiefs a second time this season, 1-0.

The chilly air filled with a steady, blowing drizzle and the wet muddy surface at Centennial Educational Park provided a sense of deja vu for both teams.

Gold said the undefeated Rocks, who are rated No. 4 in Class A and have won five of their six games by shutout, used the similarities as motivation, but he also paid tribute to Canton for playing a fine game.

"In school, you keep hearing 'Yeah, we're No. 4 and we'll probably blow them out,' but it's always close when we play Canton," he said. "It was rainy all day, and we knew it was going to be the same kind of game."

Gold, who had a half dozen near-misses in the first half, put Salem in front as a result of an direct free kick just five minutes into the game.

The Rocks were in control in the first half, with their much-heralded defense clearing the ball and the offense, led by Gold, pressing the attack. But there was a shift in tempo in the second half, and Canton (3-3-1), which lost 3-0 to Salem in the Plymouth Invitational on Sept. 2, was a more formidable foe.

"I told them they've gotta play a little harder to the ball and try to keep it a bit longer," Canton coach Don Smith said. "They're a good team. I think we've got to score on them first and get fired up, and then maybe we could hold them off."

Gold, a midfielder who leads Salem with 10 goals, said the playing conditions offered a slight advantage to the Chiefs since it's more difficult for the Rocks to play their finesse game on a slippery track.

"We're a controlled team that passes the ball around," he said. "On a field like this, it's so much harder to work the ball. They're a hustling, aggressive team, and they were beating us to the ball."

Canton appeared to have scored the tying goal with 27 minutes left in the game, but the goal, which resulted from a mad scramble in front of the Salem net, was disallowed.

"Somebody must have been knocked down," said Smith, who couldn't see the play clearly and added he was eager to look at the film to determine why it was waved off. "But there was so much pushing and shoving going on, it was hard to pick anybody out. (The goal) would have been a big lift."

Salem's defense and the play of goalkeeper Matt Tudor were up to par throughout the game, but especially when the heat was on late in the contest.

Chris LaJoy made a big play when, with Tudor unable to reach the ball in time, he screened off Canton's Eric Miller in front of the Salem net and prevented an almost certain goal.

"Our midfield game is attacking and getting back," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "When you slosh through the mud for 80 minutes, you lose energy in your legs, and that's when the defense has to come through."

Gold expressed his appreciation for Tudor's work.

"The defense held strong and Tudor did a great job," he said. "If not for Tudor, I don't know if we would have come out of this game with a win."

Johnson said a year ago he thought the Rocks would field a state contender this year and, while the season is still young, Salem's early success has supported his contention.

"Coach talks a lot about the defense, but I think our midfield is one of the best in the state," Gold said. "With our defense and Tudor, I don't see any weaknesses on our team."

Canton bests field in Plymouth event

golf

Fred Libbing, boys golf coach at Plymouth Canton, likes his team's chances this year in light of what the Chiefs did Tuesday.

Canton, led by the twosome of Rod Jesena and Jon Paupore, won the 19th Annual John F. Sandman Best-Ball Tournament at Brae Burn Golf Course, besting 22 other challengers for the title.

"If we don't do well, it's because a lot of other teams are a helluva lot better," Libbing said, "because the potential is there to win the division or even the league."

Jesena, a junior in his third year on the team, and Paupore, a second-year sophomore, combined for a medal-winning round of 1-under-par 67. In addition, the all-senior duo of Mike Kostick and Geoff Allen provided solid back-up with 69 and helped the Chiefs to a 136 team total.

Par at Brae Burn is 68 since the No. 4 hole — a 600-yard, double-dogleg par-5 — is undergoing reconstruction and has been reduced to a 150-yard par-3. The tee for the tournament was placed at the second dogleg.

"I DIDN'T THINK we'd win it, but I thought we'd come in close," Libbing said. "The guys turned in a helluva round. I don't know what the rest of the season looks like, but if they keep turning in those kind of scores . . .

"I'm real proud of the kids. They work hard in practice every day and want to improve. There has to be lightning or a tornado to cancel practice; that's how motivated they are."

Ann Arbor Pioneer was second with 142. Billy Lyle and Chih Chang also shot 69 and won a sudden-death playoff against Kostick and Allen for second-place honors.

Walled Lake Western was third at 145, and defending champion Plymouth Salem finished one stroke back in fourth place.

Western's Chris Sobieck and Chris Schneider combined for a 70, and Eric Matthews and Jason Taterton paced the Rocks with 71. Salem's Dan Alcock and Dave Weaver carded a 75.

"We won the tournament last year and our score was 146," Salem coach Rick Wilson said. "So I'm not disappointed with our score. Normally, it's a good score."

AMONG OTHER Observerland schools, Redford Thurston and Trenton tied for fifth (148), Redford Union was seventh (149), Walled Lake Central 15th (155), Livonia Stevenson 16th (159), Garden City tied for 17th (161), Livonia Franklin 20th (162) and Westland John Glenn 23rd (170).

Canton also defeated Salem in a dual meet last Thursday at Brae Burn, 201-203. Allen was medalist with 39.

"That's the first time we've beaten Salem in a while," Libbing said, adding it was Canton's first championship in the best-ball tournament, "and that bodes well for the rest of the year. We won over 22 other schools, and that's quite an honor."

Consistency lifts Chiefs

Plymouth Canton demonstrated the benefits of pack running Tuesday as the Chiefs made a clean sweep of Plymouth Salem in cross country.

The Chiefs defeated Salem 22-33 in the boys race at Cass Benton Park, and the Canton girls whipped the Rocks 15-48. It was the first dual meet for each team.

Brendon Masterson was the boys individual winner, but the Chiefs put the next four runners across — all within 34 seconds of each other. In the girls race, Canton had the top five runners and seven of the first eight.

Masterson ran 17:07 to capture first place, and the Canton foursome that followed consisted of Brian Beach (17:11), Mike Ream (17:33), Matt Boland (17:35) and Jason Napolitano (17:45).

Rounding out the Canton scoring was Matt Hall in eighth place at 18:00. Salem's John Thomas (17:52) and Dave Hamway (17:59) were sixth and seventh, and teammates Brian Uryga (18:14) and Todd Cimo (18:20) finished ninth and 10th.

"WE RAN A good race and so did they," Canton coach Jim Hayes said. "They were real tough at the mile mark, but by the time we came around with three minutes to go our guys had separated a little bit.

"We've got that little bubble that is built in there. We have four kids who are right there, and Matt Hall was real close, too. His time is dropping real fast."

A pair of sophomores paced the Canton girls, who have won three straight meetings with the Rocks. Amy Smith was the winner in 22:11, and teammate Carolyn Way was second at 22:43.

The senior trio of Missy Jasnowski, Adrienne Garrow and Kim Rice followed in the next three places with times of 22:59, 23:13 and 23:18, respectively.

Salem's Jenny Harris slipped in the No. 6 spot at 23:36, but Canton's Lara Antczak and Anne Dibble took the next two places with times of 23:44 and 23:45, respectively.

The Rocks claimed the Nos. 9-12 positions. Alison Rybski ran 23:48, Jennifer Marshke 24:01, Payal Parekh 24:04 and Cathy Boyd 25:32.

"It was a real good start for us, running for the first time (this year) at Cass competitively," Canton coach George Przygodski said.

Swim relays rate as toss-up

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Hooker Wellman, coach of the Plymouth Canton girls swim team, became a father for the second time late Monday night.

Sean Marcus Wellman was born at 11:19 p.m., and his arrival could mean good news for more than just the Wellman family.

"Whenever we have a baby around here, something good seems to happen," said Hooker Wellman, referring to Saturday's Western Lakes Activities Association Relays in which the Chiefs are the defending champs.

Plymouth Salem will serve as host for the meet, which begins with diving at 11 a.m. and follows with the swimming portion at 1:30 p.m.

"The last time (when Charlie Wellman was born) Andy Fowler won the state (title in diving)," Wellman said. "Maybe it's an omen. Maybe something good will happen on Saturday."

CANTON HAS the talent to repeat, but a number of other schools, including North Farmington, Livonia Stevenson and Churchill, Plymouth Salem and Northville are strong possibilities, too.

> 'The last time (when Charlie Wellman was born) Andy Fowler won the state (title in diving). Maybe it's an omen. Maybe something good will happen on Saturday.'
> — Hooker Wellman
> Canton swim coach

"We definitely have a shot at it, but the league has changed considerably," Wellman said. "North Farmington has a lot of people back, Northville won the conference meet by over 100 points and Churchill and Salem are real strong."

Instead of submitting entries this year, coaches had only to name the events they will participate in and give seed times.

Wellman hasn't seen any of that information, but he said Bill Faunce, the meet director, told him the Chiefs will have to swim faster than last year if they hope to win again.

Canton's only competition thus far was a scrimmage meet with Novi, so the Chiefs have no time to waste getting their feet wet.

"I think we've got a balanced lineup and as strong as we can put together," Wellman said, "but it depends where other teams put their kids.

"WE HAVE A good 400 medley, but if North Farmington, Churchill, Northville and Salem decide they want to go for it, too, we could end up fourth or fifth."

North coach Pat Duthie, whose Raiders won the meet two years ago, agrees with Wellman's assessment of the unpredictableness of such a meet.

"A couple of teams could load up in one event, and you could have a couple of pretty good swimmers finishing down the road in that event," he said.

"We like to approach it like a fun situation. We don't attach an awful lot of importance to the meet, but we're certainly going to try and do the best we can."

Duthie had not made out his final lineup at midweek, but he was probably no different from the other 11 coaches.

"I have no idea where we'll put our kids or how we'll do," he said. "A number of our kids are pretty versatile, so it's hard to make up your mind. We have the same problem everybody else does."

Marlins repeat as relay champ

Farmington Hills Mercy was impressive to say the least in defending its' title Saturday in the 11th Annual Griffin Memorial Swimming and Diving Relays.

The Marlins, who have won the Brighton High School meet three consecutive years, captured first place in six of the 10 events and set records in three.

It was also the second straight year Mercy has won the meet without any divers, coach Chuck McClune added. The Marlins had 98 points, West Bloomfield 62, Milan 60, Brighton 54, Adrian 50 and Northville 46.

Mercy's record-setting swims came in the 800- and 400-yard freestyles and the 200 medley.

Michelle McCaffrey, Liz DeMattia and Becky Wiquist were on both freestyle relays. They combined with Erika Smith for an 8:19.48 time in the 800 and with Karen Neyer for a 3:47.69 showing in the 400.

DEMATTIA AND Neyer teammed up with Katie Westhoff and Katie Knipper to set a pool record as well as a meet standard of 1:54.75 in the medley.

"We really went after the medley and the 400 and 800 freestyles and stacked those relays," McClune said. "We tried to put our best lineup in those relays to see what they could do."

The Marlins also were the best in the 200 backstroke, 200 freestyle and 200 breaststroke relays.

McCaffrey came back to help win the latter, along with Joan Huellmantel, Jennifer Duda and Katie Scanlon in 2:07.69.

Scanlon, Neyer, Westhoff and Polly Tenuta won the backstroke in 2:02.76, and Wiquist, Mary Quinn, Jenny Mison and Smith recorded a 1:46.4 time in the freestyle event.

Linda Goldstein of West Bloomfield was named the meet's top swimmer. She anchored the Lakers' first-place crescendo relay team with a 5:15 time in the 500-meter portion.

Lansing Waverly won the 400 medley (4:18.86), Milan the diving and Adrian the 400 individual medley (4:36.52). The Marlins would have finished second in the IM but were disqualified when a swimmer started too soon.

MERCY ALSO took second in the 400 medley with Tenuta, Huellmantel, Knipper and Quinn swimming 4:26.94 and fifth in the crescendo as Mison, Quinn, Renee LaForest and Tenuta finished in 9:29.1.

The Marlins will get a major test on Tuesday, Sept. 19, when they swim against Ann Arbor Huron, a leading candidate to win the Class A title, in a dual meet.

"We have a lot of depth," McClune said. "We lost only four seniors, so it's looking real hopeful."

Chiefs contend for S'craft title

cross country

Some of the area's top cross country teams will converge Saturday on Schoolcraft College for the 24th running of the annual high school invitational meet for boys and girls.

The first race begins at 9 a.m. with Plymouth Canton gunning for its third consecutive girls championship under coach George Przygodski.

Returning as favorites for the girls individual crown will be Farmington's Jennifer Kiel, who finished second behind Walled Lake Central's Colleen Yuhn last year. Another challenge should come from Redford Union's Liza Mockeridge, who was fifth in 1988.

Farmington, which defeated Plymouth Canton in a tiebreaker last season, will be gunning for an unprecedented sixth straight boys crown.

Coach Jerry Young's team, however, will be getting a severe challenge from Plymouth Canton, led by Brian Beach, who was fifth a year ago. Walled Lake Central's Mark Kwiatkowski, second a year ago, will also challenge for the individual title vacated by All-American runner Brian Grosso of Walled Lake Western, who has gone on to the University of Arizona.

ROUNDING OUT the field of competing schools from Observer-land will be Plymouth Salem, North Farmington, Farmington Harrison, Livonia Stevenson, Livonia Churchill, Livonia Franklin, Redford Thurston, Wayne Memorial, Garden City, Redford Bishop Borgess and Livonia Ladywood.

Northville, Novi and Trenton will also be in attendance.

The boys race is slated for approximately 10 a.m. with the JV boys and girls race following.

The 22 teams will then head for the auxiliary gym for an awards banquet at approximately 11:30 a.m.

Raiders start fast

North Farmington was going at full speed when it hit the water Tuesday night for its season debut in girls swimming.

The Raiders registered seven state-qualifying swims in defeating host West Bloomfield 103-69. The meet was to have taken place at North, but the roof over its pool is still being repaired.

"It was a good jumping off point for us," North coach Pat Duthie said. "We have lots of tough stuff ahead of us, but it was nice to have a meet and get our minds off the pool situation and focus on what swimming is all about."

Christie Duthie won the 50- and 100-yard freestyles and met the qualifying standards in each with 25.54 and 55.63 times.

Kerry Doran had one individual first but qualified in two events. She won the butterfly in 1:00.95 and was runner-up to West Bloomfield's Linda Goldstein with a 1:57.55 time in the 200 freestyle. Goldstein swam 1:57.31.

In other events, North's Karrie Kranz and freshman Anna Palmer won the individual medley and breaststroke, respectively, with state-cut times of 2:17.98 and 1:11.01.

The Raiders also took first place in the backstroke with Julianne Markey swimming a 1:05.84 time, and North prevailed in both relays, too.

Christie Duthie, Jennifer Wagner, Kranz and Doran posted a qualifying time of 3:48.86 in the freestyle relay, and Markey, Palmer, Kristen Celko and Amy Duthie combined efforts for a 2:00.98 time in the medley relay.

Rocks throttle Mercy cagers

Chiefs plan to defend title in Hoops Classic

Plymouth Canton will return to defend its crown in the Mercy Hoops Classic tonight when it plays St. Joseph in the first round at 6:15 p.m.

The other matchup has the host Marlins playing Trenton at 8 p.m. The championship is slated for 7:45 p.m. Saturday.

The Chiefs were 19-2 a year ago and are 1-1 under first-year coach Bob Blohm. St. Joseph had the same record last season, and Trenton, a loser to Canton in the 1989 opener, was 25-2 and a Class A semifinalist.

Canton defeated Waterford Kettering 54-47 to win the Hoops title last year, and Traverse City downed Mercy 64-45 in the consolation game. Canton guard Michelle Fortier, one of four scholarship players to play in that tournament, was named the most valuable player.

The other players who are also on scholarship in the college ranks were Traverse City's Wendy Merriman and Lisa Anderson (both at Central Michigan) and Kettering's Nicole Leigh (Oakland University). Fortier is at Western Michigan.

Among the top players this year will be Canton center Susan Ferko, a Mercy Hoops all-star last year, guard Jenny Russell and forward Stacey Thompson. The Marlins (1-2) are led by center Lee Albrecht, swing player Joanne Stephens and point guard Jenny Clinton.

Tracey Bloodworth, a Class B all-stater, is the driving force behind the St. Joseph team, and Trenton returns 5-11 Kim Hoppes and 6-0 Katie Mans from its Final Four team.

A young Plymouth Salem girls basketball team did a lot of growing up Saturday night.

After starting the season with three losses, the Rocks defeated a good Farmington Hills Mercy outfit 42-28 in the Salem gymnasium.

"We knew, with this team, it was going to take some time and we've got a long ways to go," Salem coach Fred Thomann said. "But it definitely is a building block. I think we've got it in place and can take this game and grow."

The Rocks, who have two players idle with injuries, used balanced scoring and, most importantly, solid defense to get their first victory.

Salem's objective was to keep Mercy center Lee Albrecht, who had 18 points in a loss to South Lyon last week, away from the basket and point guard Jenny Clinton from penetrating.

"WE WORKED to keep them on the perimeter, and our players did a real nice job of doing that," Thomann said. "We did a great job of controlling the defensive boards, and that was one of the key factors in the game.

"It was one of those games that was very methodically played on our part. We tried not to have a big flurry of points scored by the other team. We're not a sensational offensive team yet, but that's where we're at. It was a workmanlike effort."

Sarah Ruete led the Rocks with 13 points and was the only player on either side to hit double figures. Emily Giuliani added seven, Kelly Austin and Lydia White six apiece.

For the team's young players — Giuliani and Austin are sophomores, Yolanda Jackson a freshman — Thomann said the victory was especially beneficial.

"No question, this was a growth game for them," he said. "They've been feeling the heat from a lot of teams, and Mercy was no different. But they handled the pressure and because of that we were able to be successful."

As a team, Mercy (1-2) never reached double figures in any quarter and was helped by 14-of-21 shooting at the free-throw line. The Rocks made eight of 12 free throws.

Carrie Walton led the Marlins with nine points, and Joanne Stephens and Albrecht followed with four apiece.

Falcons win first basketball

Farmington put an end to Farmington Hills Harrison's modest, two-game winning streak in girls basketball Tuesday night, and North Farmington extended its unbeaten streak to three games.

The Falcons (1-2) notched their first victory 55-44 while dropping the Hawks to 2-2. North trashed winless Ferndale 62-23 and improved its record to 3-0.

Harrison led 38-36 after three quarters, but Farmington outscored the Hawks 19-6 in the final quarter.

"We switched our press to a zone press, and that seemed to do the trick," Farmington coach Diana Fair said.

The Falcons got a second-half lift from Mandy Cannon and Kim Owczarzak, both of whom were injured in last Thursday's game and didn't play in the first half.

Cannon scored 12 points in two quarters to lead Farmington and also made nine steals. Jennifer McGlinch and Rachael Cannon added eight apiece.

"I really think they sparked us," said Fair of Mandy Cannon and Owczarzak. "Mandy and Shelli Gaul had some key steals in the fourth quarter."

Andrea Najarian scored a game-high 16 points, which included four triples, for the Hawks. Heather Hopkins, a freshman forward, tossed in 14 points, and Shari Barnes had 14 rebounds and four points.

"We just made some bad decisions," Harrison coach Jim Neve said. "It's inexperience, I guess. I start two sophomores and a freshman."

NORTH 62, FERNDALE 23: The Raiders scored in double figures in every quarter while the Eagles (0-3) never did. North jumped in front 17-8 and led 30-17 at halftime and 47-21 after three quarters.

Kim Gurecki, the senior point guard for the Raiders, scored a game-high 21 points, Eve Claar (junior guard) supported with 15 and Vikki Seamons (senior center) added 12.

Ferndale's best was Ginger Donoghue, who managed six points and eight rebounds.

OU netters tumble

What started with such promise has turned sour.

Just last week, Oakland University volleyball coach Bob Hurdle was envisioning a bright season. He had a team with dominating middle blockers and a new, improved setter. If they could iron out a few wrinkles, the Pioneers could repeat as Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference champions.

That was a week ago. Since then, OU has endured a mediocre trip north to the Northern Michigan University Tournament — the Pioneers were 2-2 and were whipped in three-straight games in the semifinals by GLIAC nemisis Ferris State — and, worse yet, lost their league-opener at Wayne State Tuesday 15-8, 15-11, 15-17, 15-10.

Hardly the stuff champions are made of. Neither is the hitting which Hurdle figured to be the team's strength this season. Against WSU, the Pioneers hit a dismal .025, connecting on 37 kills in 118 attacks with 34 errors.

ERROR DEFINED their play Tuesday. OU made 10 errors on service and had 16 more on serve reception. Only middle blocker Jennifer Zielinski (nine kills in 15 attacks with three errors, .400 hitting, four block assists) and setter Janice Van Velsen (eight kills, .429 hitting, 27 assists-to-kills) performed well.

At NMU, the hitting was again poor. In Friday's opening loss to North Dakota State (15-4, 15-10, 11-15, 15-6), the Pioneers were -.030; in their 15-5, 15-13, 15-8 loss to FSU, they hit -.012.

There were some bright spots. OU swept NMU 15-8, 17-15, 15-2, with Zielinski getting 11 kills in 18 errorless attacks (.611 hitting). The Pioneers also struggled, but defeated, North Dakota 15-8, 4-15, 15-9, 7-15, 15-9. And the one game they won against North Dakota State was the only game the third-ranked Lady Bison lost in the tournament.

OU will try to get back on track this weekend at the Indiana-Purdue at Fort Wayne Tournament.

St. Agatha coach all wet after victory

By Brad Emons
staff writer

It took five years, but Redford St. Agatha football coach John Goddard finally took a victory dip in the Grand Traverse Bay.

After being kidded and goaded by a couple of local prep prognosticators, Goddard gladly jumped in for a late Saturday night swim after his Aggies defeated host Traverse City St. Francis, 14-0.

"It was great," said Goddard, who removed his shoes before taking the plunge. "It wasn't even 10 seconds after the game had ended when the kids were already yelling: 'Coach is going swimming, Coach is going swimming.'

"It was a big win for us and it definitely felt good because we've taken our lumps there in the past. We had about 100 people follow us out to the Bay. It wasn't bad. I'd go swimming every week if it meant a win."

The Aggies played stingy defense and error-free football.

Both scores came as the result of turnovers. St. Francis (0-2) committed six on the night.

In the first quarter, defensive end John DiPonio caused a fumble and teammate Joe Boards, the other defensive end, scooped it up and rambled in 12 yards for a touchdown. (Agatha added the two-point conversion when holder Ken Kroll hit Kevin Smith with a pass in the end zone.)

In the second quarter, defensive back Fred Schick picked off a pass and ran 51 yards for a touchdown. (He missed the extra point.)

The defense then took over as Brian Kutch added a pair of interceptions and DiPonio recovered two more fumbles.

Spearheaded by the play of Krol, a senior linebacker, the Aggies held St. Francis to 160 yards in total offense.

"We felt we could beat them last year and we wound up getting thumped 46-12, but we said this time we've got to get up early and then see how they would react," Goddard said. "We did just that."

Goddard may have to go swimming again this week.

His Aggies (1-1) travel Friday (4 p.m. start) to Grosse Pointe University-Liggett.

"Lake St. Clair?" quizzed the reporter.

"There are a lot of carp in there," Goddard said, "but I'd guess I'd do it every time if it meant a win for us."

REDFORD CC 7, LANSING EASTERN 0: State-ranked Redford Catholic Central (2-0) beat the elements (thundershowers) and the Quakers (0-2) in a non-leaguer Saturday at Livonia Clarenceville High.

The Shamrocks were outgained in total yardage, 190-45, but scored the game's only touchdown with 38 seconds left to play in the first quarter when junior quarterback Jason Carr hit Leo Kowalyk with a 5-yard pass. (Kerry Zavagnin kicked the extra point.)

CC's defense, meanwhile, got a boost from Mike Mathis, who thwarted an Eastern drive when he picked off a pass at the goal line and returned it 20 yards in the second period.

Defensive end Tim Jackson was the Shamrocks' top tackler with one sack, four solos and five assists. Linebacker Rich Walsh was in on nine tackles, recording a sack, three assists and five solos.

Dave Owens, CC's leading ball carrier with 124 yards in a season-opening 31-0 win over Detroit Osborn, was held in check. The senior tailback had 49 yards in 16 carries, but had a 30-yard TD run wiped out in the fourth quarter because of a holding call. (Junior fullback Jon Barbara led CC with 54 yards in 13 carries.)

CC had 102 yards rushing and only 38 passing (Carr was three of 11).

Eastern quarterback Tom Boyd had 75 yards passing, hitting five of 15.

CC travels Friday to take on nemesis Ann Arbor Pioneer in a battle of top 10 teams.

PECK 6, LUTHERAN WESTLAND 0: On Saturday, the host Pirates slipped by the Warriors as Mike Carson tallied the game-winning touchdown on a 2-yard run in the second quarter.

Both teams are 1-1 on the season.

David Gielow rushed for 69 yards in 15 carries in a losing cause. Jason Zielinski added 46 yards in 10 attempts.

Mike Hardies and Matt Grams each intercepted passes for the Warriors. (Hardies also blocked an extra point.)

The Warriors had trouble going airborne, completing just two of 13 passes. Quarterback Steve Aumann was intercepted three times.

Lions, Steelers in action

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers and Lions kicked off the junior league football season Sunday with a triple-header at Central Middle School.

The varsity teams played to a 0-0 tie. Darren Petras, who completed several long passes to Chris Mazur, Ricky Stults and Eric Burleson were standouts on defense for the Lions.

Mike Brannan's 45-yard run for a touchdown gave the Steelers a 6-0 lead in the junior varsity game, but Andrew Bahrou's TD pulled the Lions even in the final score. Kevin Kovachevich was at quarterback for the Lions, and Romeo Cairo led the defense.

The Lions won the freshman game 6-0 on a pass from Mike Rener to Chris Sample.

The Steelers travel to Garden City to play the Chargers Sunday, and the Lions play host to Ann Arbor East at 1 p.m. Sunday at Central Middle School.

Experts attempt to rebound

By Dan O'Meara and Brad Emons
staff writers

You win some, and you lose some.

As for the Observer prognosticating duo of Emons and O'Meara, there was a little too much of the latter a week ago.

Not only were many of last Friday's games delayed and/or postponed until Saturday because of severe thunderstorms, but the fearless forecasters also took a bath with some erroneous predictions.

O'Meara was 8-5 last week and Emons 7-6. Both were wrong on the Taylor Center-Thurston, Borgess-Redford Union, Wyandotte-Wayne, Clarenceville-Lutheran East and St. Agatha-Traverse City St. Francis games.

After two weeks of making predictions, the lone separator has been the Lutheran Westland-Peck game, because it's the only game the two have disagreed on. O'Meara is 20-7 overall, Emons 19-8.

Oh, well, enough about last week's disasters and poor percentages. It's upward and onward. There's some redeeming to be done.

The prep seers are eager to turn those blues into yellow' rays of sunshine. They are heartened by the prospects of removing crow from a sports writer's diet.

In a pair of games pitting unbeaten teams, Redford Catholic Central plays at Ann Arbor Pioneer on Friday night and Westland John Glenn visits North Farmington on Saturday afternoon.

So let's give it another try. The envelope, please:

grid predictions

In a pair of games pitting unbeaten teams, Redford Catholic Central plays at Ann Arbor Pioneer on Friday night, and Westland John Glenn visits North Farmington on Saturday afternoon.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
(All games 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Farmington at Ply. Salem: The visiting Falcons are 0-2 while the unbeaten Rocks (2-0) are off to a rolling start and building up steam. Can Farmington handle Ryan Johnson and the wishbone offense? Pick: Salem's momentum has a steamroller effect on Farmington.

W.L. Central at Liv. Stevenson: Central (1-1) was manhandled last week by Farmington Hills Harrison, the No. 1-rated team in Class B, and coach Gary Tuz is right when he says the Vikings won't face many better the rest of the year. Stevenson has had two close games but is 0-2 nonetheless. Pick: Central rebounds from that 56-0 shellacking. Emons believes Stevenson will win this one.

W.L. Western at Northville: One team comes away a winner for the first time. Both are 0-2 but have faced tough opponents in each of their first two games. The Warriors played a pair of 1988 playoff teams in Novi and Westland John Glenn, and the Mustangs played South Lyon and Plymouth Salem. Pick: We have to pick a winner, so the edge goes to Northville.

Harper Woods at Clarenceville: Clarenceville has always been trouble for O'Meara, who picks the Trojans to lose when they win and vice versa. But he thinks he has things figured out this week. First-year coach Vic Balaj's team is 2-0, Harper Woods 0-2. Pick: The Trojans take a third victory.

Garden City at Ypsilanti Lincoln: The Railsplitters have been a hard-luck team in the early going, losing twice in overtime to Willow Run and Tecumseh. Garden City also is 0-2 but has been outscored 70-7. Pick: Abe Lincoln would be proud of the 'Splitters' ability to persevere setbacks.

Redford Union at Dearborn, 4 p.m.: Both teams (1-1) have been up and down, and that makes this Northwest Suburban League opener a hard game to predict. RU beat Stevenson and lost to Bishop Borgess. Dearborn lost to Thurston and beat Allen Park Cabrini. Pick: Toss a coin and take the host Pioneers. Emons is sticking with RU.

Red. Thurston at Annapolis, 4 p.m.: The euphoria surrounding Thurston's opening win turned sour last week when the Eagles lost to Taylor Center, but Annapolis is 0-2. If Jesse Walker has a good day, Thurston should do OK. Pick: It's another potential corn-tosser, but give the edge to the Eagles.

Wayne Memorial at Monroe: Monroe has been beaten handily twice, and the 39-0 loss to Fordson indicates the Trojans aren't nearly the team they were last year when they went to the Class A playoffs. Wayne, however, was stung by Wyandotte in one of those games the supposedly omniscient Observer men failed to call correctly. Pick: Wayne wiggles its way into the win column.

Redford CC at A.A. Pioneer: The Shamrocks rallied from an 18-0 halftime deficit last year to beat the defending Class A champs 22-18. That win avenged a 3-0 loss to the Pioneers in the 1987 state final. This should be another classic in what has become an annual rivalry. CC edged Lansing Eastern 7-0 last Saturday to go 2-0, while Pioneer has beaten East Lansing and Pontiac Northern. Pick: This time it's Pioneer's turn to win. Emons says CC can do it.

Red. St. Agatha at Univ. Liggett, 4 p.m.: Liggett boasts a 2-0 record while the Aggies are 1-1, but that doesn't mean anything in this game. The Knights beat Kinde North Huron and Harper Woods, but St. Agatha has played a pair of traditional Class C powers, losing to the likes of Country Day and beating Traverse City St. Francis. Pick: The Aggies harvest another victory.

Lutheran Wsld. at Tekonsha: Where is Tekonsha, you ask? Well, we checked, and it's in the south-central part of the state between Albion and Battle Creek. The Indians (1-1) are coming off a 20-8 loss to Allendale, but Allendale, as well as first-game opponent Wyoming Lee, is a formidable foe. Lutheran Westland (1-1) must also contend with a lengthy bus ride. Pick: Tekonsha scores a TKO.

SATURDAY'S GAMES
(all games at 1 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Churchill at Farm. Harrison: The Chargers are still a decent 0-2 team, losing to powerful Sterling Heights and, in the mud, to North Farmington. But there's no comparison with Harrison. If Mill Coleman doesn't get you, Steve Hill, Joe George, Roy Granger, Matt Conley, Mike Saputo, Jon Schaeffer, etc. ... will. Pick: Maybe Churchill's season will parallel WWII when Ol' Winnie led the British to eventual victory, but that means the Chargers must undergo the blitz this week.

Wsld. John Glenn at N. Farmington: Glenn has held the upper hand in this Lakes Division rivalry, winning key games in 1987 and '88 that helped put the Rockets in the W.L.A.A. final. After a shaky start, Glenn rolled last week. In a close game, North kicked Mike Cowen could be the difference. Pick: The Rockets stay on track for a possible rematch with Harrison for the league title.

Ply. Canton at Liv. Franklin: A victory in the Western Division opener would give Canton (2-0) its finest start in school history. On a dry field, the Chiefs have the skill players to make things happen, but Franklin (1-1) has some mean linemen who might decide differently. Pick: Canton rates the edge.

Divine Child at Red. Bishop Borgess, 7:30 p.m. at Garden City Junior High: Divine Child (1-1) was blanked 22-0 by DePorres while the Spartans (1-1) are coming off a victory over Redford Union. There's no doubt DC, a 7-0 winner over a highly rated Bishop Gallagher team in the opener, has faced the tougher competition. Pick: The Falcons are no fly-by-night operation.

Michele Tyree (No. 54) of Garden City snares a rebound away from Dearborn Fordson's Maggie Parada during the Cougars' 38-37 upset victory.

Tough defense

Garden City stalls Tractors in surprise

Garden City made a stirring comeback in the final quarter Tuesday to pull out a 38-37 girls basketball upset against visiting Dearborn Fordson.

Doreen Malone, a senior forward making her first start, scored seven of her eight points during a 17-8 surge in the decisive final eight minutes of play.

Malone's basket and Michele Tyree's two free throws down the stretch sealed the victory for the Cougars, now 2-2 overall.

"All the pieces of the puzzle came together," said an elated Garden City coach Marshall Henry. "This is one of our biggest wins ever. This is the way we like to play defense."

Malone, subbing for the injured Tracy Thompson (foot), also had eight steals.

"Doreen was all over the floor, anticipating passes," Henry said. "She was just unconscious. I never saw her play like that."

Senior guard-forward Lynn Gowen led the victors with 13 points, hitting seven of 13 free throws. She took over the point-guard spot when junior Carolyn Shanks (nine points and three steals) went down with a minor injury.

GC also got a boost defensively from senior Cindy White, who came off the bench to help limit the Tractors to 37 points.

Junior forward Wanda Baydoun scored 12 for Fordson, which slipped to 2-1 overall.

WAYNE 42, YPSILANTI 39: On Tuesday, Wayne Memorial evened its record at 2-2 by cooling off the Braves' red-hot guard Betsy Brown, who came in averaging 46 points per game.

Brown, who notched 41 in her last outing against Westland John Glenn and 51 in her season debut, was held to just 20 points as the Zebras won for the second straight time.

Wayne rallied in the final period, outscoring Ypsi 11-4.

"It was a real big win because they (Ypsi) are a talented team," said Wayne first-year coach Jack Furlong. "We were conscious as to where she (Brown) was on the floor at all times."

Senior center Dorris Bathwell led Wayne and all scorers with 23 points, while senior guard Maya Lewis contributed 11.

"Maya did a good job of running the point," Furlong said. "She set a nice pace, a good tempo."

In Saturday's consolation final of the Taylor Center Tournament, Wayne leveled Romulus, 45-30, as Bathwell poured in 17 points and Lewis added 15.

Sue Molena tallied 11 in a losing cause.

Taylor Center beat Grosse Ile, 57-51, in the championship final.

girls basketball

STEVENSON 43, CHURCHILL 41: Center Teresa Sarno netted 18 points, including the game-winning basket on a six-foot jumper with three seconds to go Tuesday, giving Livonia Stevenson (3-0) a hard-fought win over upset-minded Livonia Churchill (0-3).

Sarno also grabbed 14 rebounds, while teammate Jessann Martin contributed 12 points and 20 rebounds. Jenny Audet added nine points.

Freshman guard Chrissy Daly continued to impress, scoring a game-high 24 points, including 14 in the final period as Churchill outscored the Spartans, 18-8. (Daly hit a pair of three-pointers during the surge.)

With 14 seconds left to play, Daly made a pair of free throws to knot the count at 41-all.

"We called three straight timeouts, but we couldn't ice her (Daly)," said Stevenson coach Chuck Hebestreit.

Fran Priebe also played well in defeat, scoring 10 points.

She (Priebe) played a heck of a defensive game," said Churchill coach Don Albertson. "She guarded Audet, but her 10 points was a bonus.

"And offensively, Daly is doing a pretty good job for us."

SOUTH LYON 51, JOHN GLENN 42: Westland John Glenn (1-3) lost for the third straight time Tuesday in a non-leaguer to the host Lions.

Jenny Shanks and Carol Pietila each netted 14 points for the winners.

Shuwarren Lee and Jenny Massey each tallied 13 for the Rockets, who were outscored 16-9 in the decisive third quarter. (Lee also grabbed 12 rebounds.)

"We're young and were up against some teams who are playing tough defense on us," said Glenn coach Pat Bennett. "We're getting frustrated."

BORGESS 35, REDFORD UNION 33: Senior forward Tanya Tounsel scored 18 points and added nine rebounds Tuesday, giving Redford Bishop Borgess a two-point victory at RU.

Both teams are 1-2 overall.

Chinetta Austin, who had only four points, tallied the go-ahead basket (34-33) with 20 seconds to play. Austin also had four steals, while teammate Sandy Crenshaw contributed six assists.

Three players netted eight points apiece for the Panthers — Danielle Sorel, Ann Kolar and Shannon Morris. Sorel also had eight assists, while Kolar spared nine rebounds.

RU coach Terri Anthony was not happy with what happened in the final four seconds when Tounsel iced the game with a free throw.

Anthony contended the call, which sent Tounsel to the line, should have been a jump ball (giving RU possession) or a rebounding foul against Borgess.

"But the game was not decided in the final four seconds," Anthony said. "We played horrid, it should not have come down to that."

WILLOW RUN 66, CLARENCEVILLE 24: Junior forward Danielle Rose scored 15 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, but it wasn't enough Tuesday as host Livonia Clarenceville (1-3) was blitzed by the visiting Flyers (1-2).

Willow Run led 24-10 after one quarter, 34-17 at the half and 44-17 after three quarters before coasting home.

Kellie Castle of the Flyers paced all scorers with 20. Rhonda Saunders added six for the Trojans.

NOVI CHRISTIAN 34, GC UNITED 21: Garden City United Christian lost its season opener Tuesday to visiting Novi Christian (1-0).

Elaine Lefevre, a freshman forward, scored all 12 of her points in the second half, but it was too late as GC United couldn't overcome a 10-0 first-quarter deficit.

Debbie Davidson, a sophomore guard, added seven points and 13 rebounds. Shay Owens, a junior center, gabbed eight boards.

Amy and Jill Harlow tallied 16 and 12, respectively, for Novi Christian.

SC shows national champion form

After a shaky start, Schoolcraft College's volleyball team returned to a familiar role — as champions.

The Lady Ocelots lost their first two matches at the Michigan Tech Tournament last weekend, but rallied to win their next two and capture the tournament title. Their 12-15, 15-7, 12-15, 15-6, 15-12 defeat of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in the final clinched the title.

"The key to our success, being we were outsized, was our fast defense and consistent play," said SC coach Tom Teeters.

Sisters Alicia and Angellette Love and JoAnn Kolnitys sparked the defense; Angellette Love also had 21 kills and Kolnitys collected 16. Elena Oparka added nine more. Christy Clark had four aces in 15 serves, without an error.

SC ADVANCED to the final after defeating Indiana-Purdue at Fort Wayne 15-11, 15-4, 15-4. Angellette Love's 12 kills paced the attack; Oparka had 11. Kolnitys contributed two solo blocks, four block assists and three digs, while Alicia Love had seven service aces. Setter Jenny Sproul had 24 assists-to-kills without an error and three block assists.

Teeters was tinkering with his lineup in the first two matches, one reason the Lady Ocelots lost 15-4, 4-15, 15-13, 7-15, 15-9 to Wisconsin-Milwaukee and 3-15, 3-15, 15-13, 15-12, 15-9 to Michigan Tech.

Sproul is both a newcomer to the lineup at setter, replacing Chris Paciero, and a newcomer to the position. At Livonia Churchill, Sproul was an outside hitter.

Against Wisconsin-Milwaukee in the final, Teeters said Sproul "had an excellent match setting. We're turning her into a setter, and the experience she had at Churchill has helped her tremendously. She's handling it very well."

There was one sour note: The Lady Ocelots lost Anjanette Lankford with an injured ankle on the first day of the tournament. Lankford will be out approximately two weeks.

SC plays in the Lake Michigan College Tournament this weekend.

OU kickers win tourney

When the season started, Oakland University soccer coach Gary Parsons voiced concern over the number of newcomers he would have to insert into the starting lineup, particularly on defense.

Those rookies were expected to face a major test at last weekend's Lock Haven (Pa.) University Invitational. But they didn't. Or at least it wasn't much of a test.

The Pioneers steamrolled to a pair of weekend wins, flattening Keene State (N.H.) College 4-0 Saturday, then crushing host-team Lock Haven 4-1 Sunday. The victories ran OU's record to 4-0; the Pioneers have outscored their opponents by a 17-4 margin.

Midfielder Simon Mayo was named the tournament's most valuable player. He scored a goal and had one assist, and was dominating in the midfield.

IN SUNDAY'S victory, forward Paul Phillips opened the scoring early with a goal 3:22 into the match. Alan Stewart, who collected two goals and two assists over the weekend, and Erik Enyedy (from Southfield) assisted.

Forward Earl Parris made it 2-0 at the 18:21 mark, converting a pass from Enyedy, but Lock Haven struck back with a goal by Lance DiPablo at 21:02. The Pioneers regained their two-goal advantage at 35:09, John Brennan punching the ball into the net after a scramble in front. Stewart and Derek Williford (Livonia Stevenson) earned assists.

Mayo capped the scoring with a goal at 41:12; Dan Weinerth (Rochester Adams) and Enyedy assisted. It was Enyedy's third assist of the match, and fourth of the weekend.

In the shutout against Keene State, Phillips and Stewart each had first-half goals. Stewart and Enyedy assisted on Phillips' goal, while Mayo got the assist on Stewart's. Stewart converted a pass from Parris in the second half to make it 3-0, and Parris finished the scoring, with Lang and Brian Drury assisting.

Ralph Torre started in goal in both games; Vince Aliberti played the last 38 minutes against Keene State. OU outshot the Owls 20-4 and Lock Haven 17-4.

Knee problem is always a concern

Dear Myrna: I am a 43-year-old woman and I have enjoyed aerobic exercise on and off for the last 10 years. I have been going to classes regularly — three to four times per week — for the last two years. I go to both high and low impact classes, mostly low. My problem, which recently began, is my knees have been bothering me. I feel an aching under my knee cap, one knee more so than the other. Do you have any idea of what could be causing this? Am I too old for aerobics? Any suggestions would be appreciated. Thank you.

Medically speaking, as far as your knee is concerned, your doctor or an orthopedic surgeon would be able to give you a better answer than myself.

The most famous joint in sports is the knee. A knee-joint problem is the most fearsome type of injury to a professional athlete. They immediately begin to think their careers are shot. Sounds a little like you, yes?

Unfortunately, the knee is not a very stable joint. There are at least five places where the knee cap can be injured — the cartilages, the ligaments, the muscles around the knee, the kneecap (the bone in front of the joint) and the knee cap tendon.

So you see the knee can by a tricky ordeal. You must see a doctor.

As far as your aerobic career coming to a halt — never. We have too many alternatives in aerobics now for that to be a problem.

There are two important factors to look at in your aerobic program — floor surface and your own body alignment (both muscular and skeletal).

What kind of surface are you aerobicizing on?

In our studio we have a floor designed by Russians dedicated to saving their dancers' bodies in the early 1900s. It has been duplicated by us and a few others in the Michigan area. Check it out — it's not just an elevated wood floor. Look for the rubber side moldings with air holes at the top. If you aerobicize on a carpeted floor, it is bad news. Even if there is three inches of padding, a cement floor remains below.

As far as body alignment, skeletal problems are generally from birth. We can increase strength to problem areas by working on the adjoining muscles. No one has been created perfect. Most likely, there could be a variety of tiny areas where your skeletal system is a little off. 'Proper muscle balance' is major to maintain good body alignment.

You need to work with an exercise expert to check your body alignment and make sure you are executing the best movements you possibly can. For example, if you are jogging with your body weight leaning forward, you could be causing damage to your knees. Foot striking (how your foot lands on the floor) could be another factor to cause knee injuries.

It's a good idea to vary your aerobics, both impact and low impact. Low impact aerobics shouldn't bother your knee. Again you need to talk to an exercise expert and learn, if necessary, how to alter your moves a little.

Too old? Don't be silly.

Recent studies show that baby boomers, ages 32 to 46, are the largest exercise population ever. It's happening now and we're all here to enjoy it.

(Myrna Partrich, co-owner of The Workout Company, Inc. of Bloomfield Township, is happy to answer any questions readers may have regarding exercise. Please send your letters to: Sports Department, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Mi. 48009.)

Warriors surprise Falcons

The Walled Lake Western boys cross country team wasn't the only problem Farmington had to deal with Monday.

The Falcons also had to contend with a steep and undulating course at Gilbert Willis Park, and Farmington came up short 24-35.

"We have a real hilly course," Western coach Dennis Keeney said. "I think it played with Farmington a bit.

"We hoped their runners would come out hard and then finally hit the hilly part of the course and be all winded out. That's exactly what happened."

Despite the course's unpredictable terrain, Farmington's Ben Goba ran an exceptional race and posted a first-place time of 17:08.

Finishing second was Western sophomore Bill Crosby (17:21) followed by teammate Jeff Grosso (17:36). Farmington's Kevin Van Ord ran well enough to capture fourth with a time of 18:21.

Tiller helps thwart pass attack

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

It didn't make any sense. Wayne State was attacking a team with one of the worst pass defenses around in 1988; opponents averaged nearly 200 aerial yards a game against Saginaw Valley State's porous defenders last season.

And the Tartars' battle plans were formulated around the suddenly popular run-and-shoot offense, a scheme that replaces the tight end and fullback with two additional wide receivers. The passing formation is supposed to result in a wide-open, high-scoring affair.

It's true that what happened last year hardly matters this year. But consider that two of the Cardinals' four defensive backfield starters against WSU had never started previously.

Add it all together, and it would seem to spell trouble — BIG trouble — for SVSU.

SO WHAT happened?

The Tartars' veteran quarterback, Mike Grennier, was a paltry seven-of-16 passing for 54 yards. WSU had just eight completions in 19 attempts for 63 yards in the game.

Which explains why SVSU won easily, 24-6, Saturday.

Experience, it seems, isn't everything. Chad Burgess is a perfect example. A Farmington Harrison graduate, Burgess has been in college about two weeks. In an era when most football players are redshirted as freshmen and don't step onto the playing field until their third year in school, Burgess is starting at free safety in his first season at SVSU.

Brian Tiller
former Salem player

"I didn't expect to start at first," he said after a game in which his open-field tackling was as impressive as his pass defense (he made six tackles, one for a loss).

"EVERYTHING IS going pretty well, but they're a lot faster (in college) than they were in high school."

A year ago, Burgess was lighting up defenders as a pass receiver for Harrison's Class B state champions. He teammed with Bryan Wauldron to give the Hawks a superb offensive-defensive combination; both were receivers and defensive backs (Wauldron is now a wide receiver at Eastern Michigan).

Burgess has no illusions about his status. He realizes opposing quarterbacks are going to test a freshman.

"I know they're going to come at me," he said. "But the team's there, and that helps. I'm already starting to feel more comfortable.

"I guess I'm going to have to work a lot harder, though."

FOR ONE of his defensive backfield mates, the struggle to reach the starting lineup has been longer but no less impressive. Brian Tiller, a third-year sophomore, earned his starting spot at the short-side cornerback by beating out senior Larry Washington — a second-team all-Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference selection in '88.

Tiller had to learn to play defense. At Plymouth Salem, he was a tailback and quarterback.

"They converted me to defense when I came up here," he said. He worked his way into a part-time starter's role last season, but entering the '89 campaign nothing was assured for him.

"I didn't have (a starting position) coming into camp," Tiller said. "I just took it day by day."

He also knows there's no guarantee he will keep his spot. "I'm just going to have to keep working hard."

THEIR HARD work apparently paid off against WSU. The run-and-shoot offense is supposed to confuse defenders, who aren't used to seeing four fleet wide receivers zipping across the field. Also, the Tartars tried to keep their adoption of the run-and-shoot a secret, to surprise SVSU.

The last ploy didn't work. "We heard about it through the grapevine," said Tiller. Burgess added, "We worked on it during camp."

Still, last season the SVSU pass defenders were well-briefed on opposing offenses, and they were still victimized for 197 yards a game. This year, the pressure is on the Cardinal defense. The offense is solid with the backfield tandem of Kevin Mitchell and Rob Cook, both of whom gained more than 1,000 yards rushing in '88, returning.

But the defense must improve after surrendering an average of 340 yards and 28 points a game last season, a major reason the Cardinals finished 4-5.

"We knew coming into the season we were going to have to work as a unit," said Tiller. How well that unit meshes the rest of the season could make a difference in the GLIAC race.

Pats 4th shutout victim of Rocks

Plymouth Salem boys soccer coach Ken Johnson can't help but be delighted with his team's early success this season.

The Rocks managed to increase their winning streak to five games Monday by beating Livonia Franklin 7-0 on the road.

Both teams could have packed up and gone home after the first half as the Salem built an early lead of 3-0. The Patriots never got on track and, therefore, never scored on Salem goalie Matt Tudor, who recorded his fourth shutout in five games.

Offensively, the Rocks were led by Chris Olson and Greg Christensen. They each fired two goals into the Franklin net. Jeff Gold, Joe Cosenza and Joe Tippmann had one apiece.

Billy Joker had two assists and Matt Gold, John Truskowski, Tom Baker and Cosenza each had one for the Rocks (5-0).

CHURCHILL 1, CANTON 0: Brady Ericson's lone goal proved to be the difference for the visiting Chargers on Monday.

Ten minutes into the contest, John Gentile set up Ericson's shot from 20 yards out.

"They caught us with our backs turned," Canton coach Don Smith said. "Churchill jumped on our mistake, which was good on their part."

Charger goalie Jeff Cassar recorded the shutout as he knocked away all 13 Canton shots.

Canton goalie Andy Collins fought off 19 of Churchill's 20 shots but couldn't get any offensive help from his teammates.

"The playing conditions were ridiculous," Smith said. "You were ankle-deep in mud."

The Chiefs were also in action on Friday and Saturday.

On Friday, the Chiefs traveled to Farmington Hills Harrison, and the Hawks probably wish they hadn't as Canton handed Harrison a 4-0 loss.

Rick McFeely led the Chiefs with a goal and an assist. Steve Shiner, Kristian Kilpelainen and Dan Martin each sent the ball into the Hawk net, as well.

Collins had the shutout in goal for the Chiefs.

Brighton managed to give the Chiefs plenty of grief Saturday, as the two teams played to a 2-2 tie.

The game was close from the beginning, with each team exchanging first-half goals for a 1-1 tie.

Brighton took a 2-1 lead early in the second half, but with five minutes left in the game, Mike Presley tied the score. Canton hit the goal post several times after that but never put the ball in.

Hawks blank WL Central

Farmington Hills Harrison posted its first win of the boys soccer season Monday, making a victim of Walled Lake Central 3-0.

The Hawks (1-4) led 3-0 at halftime on goals by Vince Berg, Mike Jacobs and Ben Pinsky. Berg had an unassisted goal, and Mike Wolters and Shaw Brown assisted on the other two, respectively.

Harrison goalkeeper Chris Schrowe got his first shutout, and stopper Steve Blankenship led the defense.

FARMINGTON 2, W.L. WESTERN 2: Mike Gammerath scored both goals to rally the Falcons from a 2-0 deficit in the Western Lakes Activities Association crossover game Monday at Western.

"I'm looking for him to lead our offense and he came through," Farmington coach Cathy Cole said. "We needed that because we've been having a problem scoring."

The Warriors, who led 2-1 at halftime, got goals from stopper Jimmy Capicchioni, who scored on a penalty kick, and Chris Crawford.

Mike Sheehy spent the first half in goal for the Falcons, and Greg Bjedov stoned Western in the second half.

"In the second half, the game was played mostly in the midfield," Warriors coach Dave Morgan said. "Once they scored their second goal, they settled into a defensive style."

Walking can lower your cholesterol

fitness

Barry Franklin

Did you know that. . .

● Anorexia nervosa is an eating disorder that is characterized by constant dieting, rapid weight loss and the feeling of being too fat in spite of being markedly underweight. Most anorexics are girls or women who are literally starving themselves to death. Unfortunately, this was the case with singer Karen Carpenter, who died of anorexia nervosa in 1983.

● The need for sleep seems to decrease with age. Although an infant may sleep as much as 16 to 20 hours a day, the child's grandparents may need only 5 to 6 hours of sleep a night.

● A recent study of male letter carriers showed that their low cholesterol levels placed them at reduced risk for heart disease. These men, who averaged 25 miles of walking a week, also had extremely high HDL cholesterol levels, which are apparently protective against heart disease. The researchers speculated that their excellent blood fat profiles were a direct result of their long duration, low intensity exercise.

● On the other hand, regular vigorous exercise does not guarantee "immunity from heart disease." According to pooled autopsy studies of 72 conditioned middle-aged subjects who died suddenly during or immediately after exercise, coronary artery blockage was the cause of death in 69 of the individuals.

● The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently announced that an average large egg contains about 213 milligrams (mg) of cholesterol, not 274 mg, the accepted figure for many years. This means that the amount of cholesterol in one egg (the yolk contains all the cholesterol) is comfortably below the daily 300 mg limit recommended by the American Heart Association. But beware — many baked goods and prepared foods also contain egg yolks.

● Continuous passive motion tables, originally developed as therapeutic devices for polio victims, are now appearing in many health clubs across the United States. Such machines move isolated muscle groups through their range of motions without requiring any effort by the user.

Biological clock helps nature cope

AS WE LOOK at our clocks to see what time darkness sets in, we notice that it is much earlier than just a few weeks ago.

In a few days the length of day and night will be equal. During the winter months, days reach their shortest point. We gradually return to days and nights of equal duration again in spring.

This seasonal change, coupled with the daily alternation of day and night resulting from the Earth rotating on its axis, has been occurring for eons. Because these phenomena are so dependable, many animals have come to rely on them to serve as clues for what is most likely to happen next.

BIRDS, FOR instance, are flocking in preparation for their migration south for the winter months. Large groups of starlings, blackbirds, and robins can be seen flying around neighborhoods. What makes them form flocks now and not form flocks several weeks ago?

One factor very influential in stimulating this change of behavior is the length of daylight or photoperiod. When the photoperiod begins to change during the summer months, it serves as a stimulus for animals like woodchucks to begin eating voraciously in order to put on enough fat to sustain them through winter.

Flying squirrels normally collect hickory nuts when they can at the rate of about 20 per night during the summer. When the photoperiod stimulates food storing behavior, flying squirrels can collect as many as 300 nuts per night. If a squirrel did not take advantage of this urge to cache food it might not survive. So through the years, those squirrels that did cache food survived.

Once the flocks of birds decide to move south on migration, they use the sun to help guide them in a southerly direction. At night, when many birds migrate, they use the north star and surrounding constellations as a guide. On cloudy days they can use the Earth's magnetic field.

Using the sun and stars requires the birds to compensate for their movement across the horizon. Birds and many animals have a biological clock that keeps running and tells them what time of the day it is so they can adjust their directional orientation accordingly. Even if placed in a laboratory under constant light conditions, they will maintain their regular daily activities.

The actual source of this biological clock is not known, but given a minimal stimulus it keeps on ticking, enabling animals to know when and how to prepare for life's events.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

AS THE champagne and Perrier flowed, a financial planner, a lawyer, a doctor of radiology, a Ford executive, a former art gallery manager and retired U of M fund-raiser talked together. A typical cross section of people at an art gallery opening, you might think.

Unusual though, is that these same six area professionals, — making up three husband/wife teams — also are business partners hosting the opening of their new contemporary art gallery on Main Street in downtown Plymouth — the Chameleon Gallery.

"And the funny thing is, we didn't even really know any of these folks two months ago," said Joe Hanish, a Farmington resident, and a financial planner with Merrill Lynch. "It came together fast and now we're like family."

Hanish and his wife, Pat, who recently retired as a fund-raiser for the University of Michigan, served as the catalyst for the project. "Pat and I originally were looking into buying a business here on Main Street. Plymouth just attracts all kinds of consumers throughout the year. And we wanted to aim at an opening for the Fall Festival, but we couldn't come to terms with the current owners. Then space became available here at 370 Main Street, absolutely an ideal location with plenty of space (1,800 square feet)."

"THROUGH A MUTUAL friend," said Pat Hanish, "we were introduced to Denni (Englehart) and her husband Jim. Denni used to manage a very successful art gallery in Australia, which was fantastic because we didn't want to manage a place full time."

And through Jim Englehart, a Ford executive, the Hanishes met another couple interested in investing in a new business venture, Walt and Karen Borda. Karen is a radiologist at Henry Ford Hospital and Walt is a lawyer in private practice.

Aside from traveling all over the Orient — China, Japan, Singapore, Hong Kong and Thailand, the Engleharts lived in Australia before resettling in Plymouth. While Jim worked with Ford Motor, Denni went into business, opening what turned out to be the very successful Artist Proof Galleries, in Melbourne. She brings to the Chameleon Galleries her expertise and commitment to contemporary art.

"What's nice is that we immediately fill a retail niche so far unaddressed here in downtown Plymouth," said Denni Englehart. "The country/colonial market is well taken care of. But in Plymouth alone, for example, there are new homes going up that are more contemporary in style. And those homes need furnishing. We're bringing in pieces from around the world and across the U.S."

"And as close to home as Ann Arbor, Flint and Saugatuck," added Denni's husband, Jim, who is executive director of truck operations and light truck product development for Ford Motor Company.

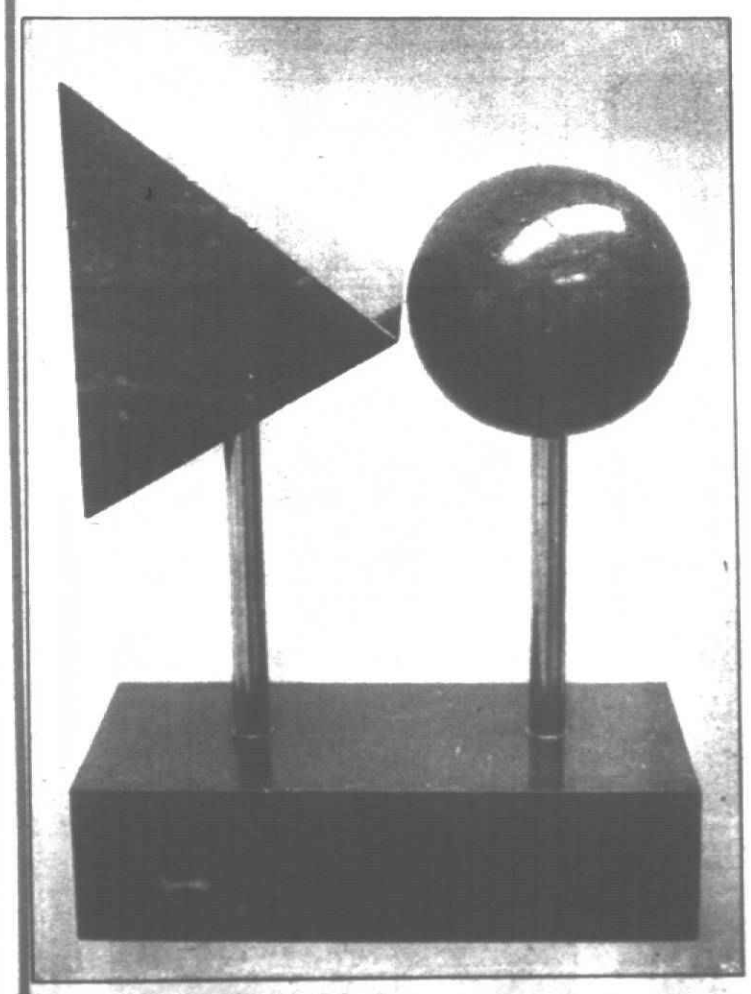
Stone cutter to sculptor—a fine line



Francesco Acitelli refers to his black marble sculpture, "Equal Volumes," as a "little intellectual exercise." It is a pedestal piece, different from anything else in the exhibit.

staff photos by Jerry Zolynsky

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

Francesco Acitelli of Detroit is frequently described as a stone cutter and carver. That's an extremely modest description for a outstanding sculptor who works in stone, metal and wood.

His work is on display at the Americ Centers building, 7 West Square Lake Road, Bloomfield Hills. It will be on display through Nov. 17.

The building, completed in March 1988, is an attractive setting for these 18 works of art. Several handsome outdoor pieces are in the ground level garden patio, opening off the lobby. Others are in the lobby and in two rooms, specially set aside, down the hall.

ACITELLI, SON of Italian immigrant parents, learned stonecutting from his father.

"I worked summers when I was a kid," he said, "I grew up with the tools."

But, this self-taught artist has taken his work far beyond that traditionally associated with skilled stonecutters, although he still does that on commission for residences and commercial buildings.

HE DOES functional and non-functional pieces, but he disagreed on the term non-functional.

"It all functions," he said, "it fills an emotional need."

Then, with a kind of half-smile, he said, "The making of art is about as arrogant a job as a person can have. You can't eat it, you can't make a garden with it, but, it fills a very deep need."

As he spoke of how he laminates marble, in particular the carefully cut and stepped, curved red marble base of a glass-topped table, he said, "One of the things I try to do in designing is to design stuff no one else can do."

The red marble spiral base is hollow, he said, otherwise it would be too heavy to deal with. As it is, it weighs approximately 85 pounds.

HIS PARTICULAR satisfaction or challenge, he said, "is to defy the limits of the materials." He can make marble look as light and pliable as putty. He can stretch and pull metal so it has the same almost weightless look (until lifted).

Many of the handsome marble pedestal pieces in the exhibit arise from his interest in the helix form that he sees in nature. Two examples he cited were chromosomes and the inside of a conch shell.

"Sometimes the simplest things in nature are the most beautiful."

ONE THAT looks different from the mobius and helix forms in the same room is "Equal Volumes." Acitelli referred to it as "a little intellectual exercise." It is a pedestal piece in black marble with a tilted tetrahedron (a solid figure with four triangular faces) beside a sphere.

"It is the juxtaposition of the two that makes it interesting," he said. "The sphere has the least surface for the mass; the tetrahedron has the most, yet they weigh the same."

Acitelli is a master craftsman, but he is also a philosopher, a keen observer of nature and people and a fine artist. He was selected by the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, D.C., to demonstrate the art of stone carving at the Festival of Michigan Folk Life in East Lansing this August.

His furniture pieces have been shown at Billi Born Ltd., Michigan Design Center of Troy. His sculpture is in galleries in Florida and Chicago. He is represented locally by Agnes Derbin.

Francesco Acitelli checks the surface of "Mobius IV" in the courtyard of the AmeriCenters building at the corner of Square Lake and Laheer, Bloomfield Hills. It and "Windsong," in the background, are limestone.

'Meet the artist' series lends a hand

By Kevin Lawrence

They say "you gotta have art." One area businesswoman, Laura Hardy, takes this advertising slogan for the arts seriously enough to give those that will eventually provide the art — young artists, a break by exposing them to the public at her poster and frame shop in Livonia.

Hardy, co-owner of Nelson's Framing on Middlebelt Road, recently hosted the first of her planned series of "meet the artist" open houses.

"It's so hard for artists to get the feedback they need to develop," said Hardy. "I meet so many talented young people here at the shop. They bring their work in and we talk. I want to help them as much as I can."

FEATURED ARTISTS at the first open house included: Kit Gentry, a Livonia Stevenson High School graduate and sophomore art student at the University of Michigan who works in watercolors; and Patricia Galea, an '89 Stevenson grad who work in pottery and oil paintings.

Janel Nowak, the artist in residence, displayed pen and ink sketches, cartooning and examples of glass etching. A young 72-year-old Laura Bird presented paintings in oils and acrylics. Joe Wisniewski, an engineer at Ford Motor Co., exhibited pencil sketches.

Nelsons' frame shop is recognizable by a large neon flamingo in the front wondow and is located at 1637 Middlebelt Road. For information regarding the next artist's open house, call 427-0325.

Easing airbrush goofs

David Messing

YOU MAY know by now that there are a multitude of opportunities to goof with an airbrush.

At the top of the long list most common to man (better make that persons) is the "catch-your-foot-in-hose" complaint. This is the most common reason for breaking an airbrush. The six-to-10-foot hose is usually looped on the floor or over your knee. In the throes of creative expression, it is easy to forget about the airbrush. So when you move, nudge or twist, bump or however it happens — and it is always unexpected and unwanted — your airbrush somehow gets knocked to the floor.

To prevent this from happening you can buy an airbrush hanger which costs about 75 cents. Actually a hanger is only a precautionary measure. I'm sure many readers have managed to nudge their airbrush right out of the hanger.

Next on the list is the "too-much-paint-in-too-little-space" syndrome or the "centipede city" painter. With a single-action airbrush, it is important to stay the right distance away from the paper or board.

For example, if you are too close, too much paint will collect on the board and the air will blow little rivers of paint out of the excess, thus looking much like a centipede. This is an even greater problem with those owning a dual action airbrush.

HERE IS THE cure for "centipede city." Place your second digit on the button rather than your finger tip. It takes a much greater effort to pull your finger back, which seems to give you more "play" with the button. The finger tip is too flexile and gives you too much pull on demand. I guarantee it will feel awkward at first, but I also guarantee it will help.

Third on the list of goofs would have to be the "staccato scribble stroke." This mistake I often hear before I can see.

In my airbrush class, I hear everyone making long continuous sprays, sometimes I will hear a rapid pss . . . pss . . . pss . . . this is often accompanied by a nervous scribble-patterned stroke. Remember, depress the button and spray in slow and controlled patterns.

Of course, there are too many goofs to list, but some noteworthy mistakes are "chief spray in the face," "splatter on the pants," "dirty tip blues" and "clean-it-later complainer."

I feel that ink is the best medium to use with an airbrush while you are learning. It is thin and gives you no trouble becoming atomized. It is rich in coverage, which is important so you can see what pattern you are spraying. Ink cleans easily out of the airbrush and usually a quick rinse with water will do.

Most inks are transparent, but with airbrush, transparancy is of little use. Only because of the nature of the spray, even opaque colors take on a form of transparency. Higgens came out with a line of opaque pigmented inks which are my favorite for teaching. As you increase your ability, it is nice to turn to gouache and/or dyes. With gouache, you will encounter the "dirty tip blues" if you fail to thoroughly clean your airbrush, after each session.

I AM A REALISTIC person and I know that if your painting turns out great, you snap it off the easel and go show your critics, leaving a loaded airbrush behind. Likewise, if your painting goes into the circular file or in the bottom of the bird cage, you walk away head drooped, again leaving behind a loaded airbrush.

A popular informational half-day seminar geared for artists is back by request.

Sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission, the workshop, "The Business of Being An Artist," will be held 1:30-5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 23, in the Livonia Civic Center Library on Five Mile. It is open to all area residents.

Speaker will be well-known area artist Nancy Thayer, who will open her talk on "Record Keeping." Later in the afternoon, Thayer will discuss "Framing," focusing on appropriate choices and the necessity of proper framing.

Cost of the workshop is $3. Registration may be made by sending a check payable to the Livonia Arts Commission, 33000 Civic Center Drive, Livonia 48154-3097, or by registering with the Community Resources Department on the fourth floor of the Livonia City Hall.
