The Canton Connection

Hot stuff

Some like it hot, others like it on the mild side.

The first Annual Canton Fest Chili Contest sponsored by the Canton Observer promises to be one hot jalapeno of an event.

The contest, open the public, is part of the Canton Challenge Fest which runs May 25 to June 2.

This year, the chili contest will be 2 p.m. Saturday, June 2 at the Canton Recreation Complex, behind township hall.

We'll offer prizes in three categories: Hot, spicy and smooth. Winners will receive $25 gift certificates for dinner at the restaurant of their choice and we'll print the names, pictures and chili recipes in our newspaper.

However, there will be more on the burner than chili on June 2. Other Canton Fest events will also be taking place that day. They include a fishing derby, kite flying, an art show and ice cream social.

And we'll be selling the chili to the public, with the money going to the Canton Foundation, so entrants should be sure to bring a full pot of their hot stuff.

For more information, call Jeff Counts, Canton Observer editor, 459-2700 during business hours.

Free dumping

Canton Township residents can now take advantage of free delivery service from Canton Recycling as part of the annual spring cleanup.

Dan Calabrese, administrative assistant, said material not normally taken at curbside pickup, like fencing, wood, sod, concrete and dirt can be taken to Canton Recycling, on Van Born road between Haggerty and Lilley roads.

The service is available 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Fridays, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays. It will continue until Aug. 1.

Residents will be limited to one pickup truck load per week.

The estimated value of the free disposal is between $60 and $100, Calabrese said.

"The project is undertaken to discourage residents from dumping items in inappropriate, unauthorized areas of the community," Calabrese said.

Residents will need to show identification when bringing their items to the recycling center.

Residents raise a stink over compost

By Mary Washko
staff writer

About 80 to 100 Canton Township residents turned out at the township hall last week to complain about the proposed compost pile and recycling center at Geddes and Beck roads.

Charles Goff, who owns property near the compost site, is concerned about how the landfill expansion and compost site will affect the community.

Goff said residents in that area are uneasy about the smell the pile would create, the increase in truck traffic and the possible drop in property values.

Goff said he does not want to see final approval on the compost site located across from his farm.

"That compost pile would recreate such a smell out here," Goff said. "I would think that property would have to be rezoned from agricultural to commercial. The land wouldn't be growing anything."

A meeting with township officials is scheduled for today at township hall, Goff said.

Township Supervisor Thomas Yack and Clerk Loren Bennett were out of town at a recycling conference last week and unavailable to comment on the complaints.

A landfill expansion agreement between the township and the Woodland Meadows facility was approved unanimously late last month, along with a waste-hauling contract with Canton Recycling to take items to the landfill.

The cost of picking up trash will drop from $7.30 to $4.21 per home.

The reduction was given to Canton from Waste Management, which owns the landfill, in exchange for the approval of the vertical landfill expansion.

Bennett said the township used to pay Canton Recycling to collect items and to dispose of them. Since Canton now has a reduction in dumping fees at Woodland Meadows, it only has to pay Canton Recycling for collecting rubbish and not for disposal.

In addition to the expansion, the township is completing plans for a composting program, to be operated separately from the recycling program.

The composting program is expected to be implemented in June and will include a weekly curbside collection of yard waste. Canton Recycling will pick up the yard waste and take it to the compost pile at Geddes and Beck roads.

That project was made possible by a $250,000 grant given to the Western Township Utility Authority. Although it has not been completed, Bennett said each community will match the grant by about 25 percent.

Army lands at school to scout for recruits

By Mary Washko
staff writer

It could have been a scene out of a Vietnam War movie as an Army Uh-60 Blackhawk helicopter touched down at the Plymouth-Salem High School football field.

But it wasn't.

Army pilots showed off the aircraft to intrigue students, with hopes of signing up students for the Army.

Staff Sgt. Richard Hopson said bringing in the equipment is more effective than passing out pamphlets and showing movies to classes.

"It gives high school kids a chance to see the equipment we use rather than seeing movies or commercials on TV," Hopson said.

But there is a reason the Army representatives are trying even harder to impress the would-be recruits, Hopson said.

"We've been cut back in the defense department," Hopson said. "We used to have to average six new recruits a month and now we only have to get two."

It's more difficult to recruit students these days because of higher requirements by the Army, Hopson said, and competition with colleges.

No longer can students get into the Army without a high school diploma. They must also pass a military test and score 20 out of 30 on the ACT test.

Jennifer Lazorizhchak, a senior at Plymouth-Salem, signed up with the Army in December. She said she decided to enter the service so she could decide what she wanted to do before going to college.

"I am not sure what I want to do yet and I don't want to go to college right now, so it seemed like a good thing to do in the meantime," Lazorizhchak said.

MOST OF the students who turned out to check out the Blackhawk said they're not looking at the military as a lifelong career. Others just stopped by to take a look at the helicopter.

Scott James, a senior at Plymouth-Canton, said he signed up for the airborne infantry division for the adventure and for college money.

"You get the opportunity and the money to spend anyway you want," James said.

Millage material handout criticized

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

By allowing the distribution of pro-millage materials to students during school hours, the Wayne-Westland school district ignored two Michigan attorney general opinions, a committee opposed to the June 11 ballot proposal has charged.

The district serves southeast Canton.

The charge was made in a letter to Superintendent Dennis O'Neill last month from Dave Moranty, chairman of Wayne-Westland Citizens for Education Committee.

"Such action will not be tolerated and must be stopped immediately," the letter said.

Greg Howes, co-chairman of the Funding Effective Schools Committee, which supports the 7.75-mill renewal and increase proposal, denied the allegations Thursday.

The cards weren't distributed during school hours, Tom Svitkovich, associate superintendent for communication and finance, said Thursday.

HOWES REFUSED to say when the cards were distributed, but said they were distributed by building PTAs in a "similar manner" to PTA letters.

The charge was "begging the issue," Howes said.

"The real issue here is whether the community is going to support something that is desperately needed for the education of their children," he said.

But information provided by Howes, school officials and parents indicates that at least some materials — while not paid for or distributed directly by the district or its employees — were passed out on class time.

ATTORNEY GENERAL opinions, which are based on previous case law, are not by themselves legally binding.

Moranty's letter cited Attorney General Opinion Number 6423, issued in February 1987, and Number 4291, issued in January 1965.

A public school district "may not provide public funds, public property, or the services of public personnel to independent political ballot or candidate committees," the 1987 opinion said.

A board of education "is without authority to spend public funds to advocate a favorable vote at an election on the question of increasing the tax limitation . . . ," the earlier opinion said.

The 1965 opinion cites a New Jersey court ruling that said "use of public funds to advocate only one side of a controversial question, without affording the dissenters the opportunity by means of that financed medium to present their side, (is) unlawful . . . ."

Such conduct, while not a crime, would constitute malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance by public officials, the 1987 opinion said.

THE FUNDING Effective Schools Committee printed cards distributed in all schools last month, Howes said.

The cards, sent home to parents, asked whether they would support a June 11 millage election (which,

Schools eye bond issue to build new high school

A bond issue to raise $30 million to $50 million to build a third high school and pay for other projects will be discussed at 7:30 tonight by the Plymouth-Canton school board in the board office, 454 S. Harvey.

The bond issue could be on the ballot in June 1991. Apart from the high school, the money would also be used to construct other buildings, buy equipment and pay for capital improvements.

The board will discuss what options there are in terms of bond issues and consider the future needs of the community, said Dick Egli, community relations director for the district.

"As part of that we will look at needs in terms of buildings, in terms of projects that have been put off and in terms of purchases of things like computers, and replacement of equipment generally."

The board also will discuss the formation of a citizens steering committee to involve the community, said Egli.

The board will look at what will be needed in the year 2000 and beyond, he added.

Also to be discussed is funding for counselors at the elementary level. Offering counseling to students at all grade levels is something that's been considered for some time, Egli said.

"Sometimes counselors are assisting young people after they've had problems develop. The thought is that if there were counselors at the elementary level, we perhaps could reduce the initial problems."

Station comes to end of road

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

In early June, residents could be seeing the last of a Plymouth tradition.

Doug Swatosh says that he's "99 percent sure" that in the first or second week of June, Doug's Plymouth Amoco at Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail will close.

Swatosh, owner-operator of the service station for 11 years, plans to move his business to Eight Mile and Farmington roads in Livonia.

"It's a good opportunity for me to grow," said Swatosh. "This location is small and very limited," adding "Business was great for 11 years."

He said negative publicity over the underground fuel oil leak downtown has affected business.

"It's an economic decision," Swatosh said. "The land values are so great it makes rent very high.

"Taxes are very high, which does not lend itself to operating a service station and getting a return that's needed," he said.

The decision on whether the site will continue as a service station has yet to be made by Amoco Oil Co., which owns the building and property.

Swatosh, who grew up in northwest Detroit, worked for an Amoco dealer, then operated two stations in Detroit before taking over the Main Street location in 1979.

An Amoco station has operated at the site in Plymouth since the late 1920s or early 1930s, Swatosh said.

"I plan to stay involved in the community," said Swatosh, a Rotary member, adding he and his family will continue to live in Plymouth.

'It's a good opportunity for me to grow. This location is small and very limited. Business was great for 11 years.'
— Doug Swatosh

"It's a tough decision to leave Plymouth. It's a very unique small town.

"It has a small town atmosphere — I hope it doesn't change," he said.

Swatosh added that his current employees will work for him at the Livonia site.

The corner of Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street has been on a state Department of natural Resources list of contaminated sites since 1979. For years, fuel oil and gasoline have seeped into groundwater and soil, allegedly from leaking underground storage tanks at the Amoco service station.

Wells drilled last summer by an Amoco consultant show contamination extends from Doug's Plymouth Amoco to the area south of the Mayflower Meeting House, west of Main Street and east of the Box Bar and Grill.

Swatosh said, "Amoco has spent a half-million (dollars) cleaning this up," adding that nearby business owners have fuel tanks, and it's not proven that Amoco is the source of the contamination.

In February, city engineer Ken West said readings taken by Amoco Oil Co. from sanitary sewers showed evidence of petroleum pollutants — but there was no evidence drinking water is affected, he said.

Mayflower Hotel owner Ralph Lorenz is suing Amoco and seeking damages of more than $300,000 claiming loss of business from the spill.

Asked if he would be interested in acquiring the Amoco property — flanked by the Mayflower Meeting House — Mayflower owner Ralph Lorenz said, "I wouldn't take it for a gift."

"It's a worthless piece of property," he said, due to the contamination problem.

"I'm sorry to see Doug leave," Lorenz added. "He took care of our people in a great fashion."

Pro-millage material distribution irks group at the time, wasn't on the ballot), work to pass the millage and allow their names to be used on campaign literature.

More than 500 cards were returned and Howes has forwarded the responses to the school board. Howes was "encouraged by the response," he said.

Several PTA groups distributed similar surveys in local school buildings.

"I find that really objectionable," said Mary Staley, a Schweitzer Elementary School parent. "It's like they're brainwashing the kids, using children to get to the parents."

Staley's sons, in the third and fourth grade, each came home with a PTA survey distributed April 11, she said.

IF APPROVED, the June 11 ballot proposal would generate $10 million in revenue for the district in 1990-91, school officials said. School officials have projected a $7 million deficit for next fall (without applying a current $2 million reserve).

If the millage passes, the district would be able to restore about $5 million in teacher, program and administrative cuts approved by the board this spring.

The district's contract with 1,050 full- and part-time teachers expires this summer.

Army lands helicopter at school to entice recruits

Doug Scoggins, a Plymouth-Salem senior, said he's hoping for money to pay for college so he can study law enforcement. Scoggins sees the service as a way to get out on his own and become independent.

The students said at both high schools there appear to be only a handful of students interested in joining the service. Most students, they said, plan to go straight to college or trade school after graduation.

Hopson agreed that there seem to be fewer students interested in entering the service.

Wayne Lint, 26, from the Canton area just signed up so he could learn to fly a helicopter.

"I called them up one day and told them I wanted to learn to be a pilot and they said I could do that in the Army," Lint said. "It's something I always wanted to do and now I get the chance."

Hopson said the Army is the only branch of the service that does not require a college degree for people who want to enter flight school.

The Blackhawk took off from the high school Wednesday afternoon and while they were only there a few hours, Hopson said he thinks it makes a real difference in recruiting.

Free concert marks band's 30th year

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If you're a Plymouth Community Band lover — and no doubt you are if you've ever attended one of the band's Thursday evening summer performances in Kellogg Park — May 18 is a date to remember.

At 7:30 p.m. that evening, the Community Band will celebrate its 30th anniversary at a special free concert at Canton High School.

The Community Band has been acclaimed as one of the finest in the state; and after a quarter of a century, it's one of the longest continuously performing community bands in the area.

The band's summer series begins in Kellogg Park Thursday, June 21, and will continue through the end of July.

UNDER THE direction of Carl Battishill, the band will play the First Movement from Symphony in G Minor by Mozart; Isbella Overture by Suppe; Highlights from "How to Succeed in Business without Really Trying" by Loesser; "Prometheus Overture" by Beethoven; "Variations on America" by Ives; and "Variations on a Korean Folksong" by Chance to commemorate its anniversary.

Among the 70-plus musicians on band will be Carolyn Weage, a trumpet player and drummer who's been with the band "since the very first night" and serves as the band's unofficial historian.

Weage recalls that "There was a little item in the Plymouth Mail that said they were going to try to make a Plymouth Community Band. There had been a little German band with about seven guys who were the ones who wanted to start it."

The band of seven made their debut in Plymouth's 1959 Fourth of July parade. Riding in a 1925 Buick convertible were William Edgar, now a retired engineer; Keith Burton, a former band director at Northville High and now a computer instructor at Schoolcraft College; Stanley Roose, a former Dearborn band director; attorney James Garber, now 35th district judge; William Upton, a Ford project engineer; insurance agent Sy Cooper and Gene Burkhardt, an industrial relations director and part-time jet pilot.

"They were the ones who talked to Mr. (James) Griffith, who offered the band room," Weage said. Griffith had joined the Plymouth High School staff as band director two years before.

"Everyone showed up at the high school — 20 people," said Weage.

Just three of the 20 — trumpet player Upton; and alto sax player Jack Wells and Weage, will be on stage May 18.

French horn player Barbara Zdan joined the band last summer.

"I THINK it's nice that for 30 years, the community has been there for the band. People don't forget that they were there for free for all those concerts. It's great to get together to celebrate and realize how far we've come, and that we're still strong," Zdan said.

"The band members come from all walks of life and some of them have been with the band 28 or 30 years. It's so neat to see them, and how much it means to them. They all have a history together."

Weage — a member of Phil Spitalney's "Hour of Charm," a New York radio show featuring an all-women's band in the 1940's — loves the Community Band.

"I think it's great, because I love to play in it and I don't know where else an old lady could keep playing. When we play in the park every Thursday and play for Fall Festival, we always have a real good crowd," said the former board member of the Community Band.

"We have people waiting for us before we get there — senior citizens in the first row, and young couples with babies and strollers. They fill up the park very well."

The musicians motives aren't monetary, she added.

"Everyone just does it because they like to make music. No one gets paid, except the band director. They just do it for their own fun.

"I wouldn't call it a volunteer job, because it's fun. And we really like Carl as our director. He never has to shout at us. He never raises his voice, and he's easy to get along with."

Band fans can get more information by calling 455-2464.

Mitsubishi moving to Plymouth Township

Mitsubishi Electric Sales America Inc. is the third tenant slated for the North Plymouth Commerce Center east of Beck Road and north of M-14.

The firm plans to move its Livonia office, research and warehouse facility to the Plymouth Township site, according to the firm's application filed at the township offices.

The township planning commission gave final site plan approval last month, clearing the way for construction of the facility.

According to the application, Mitsubishi plans to move its 70-80 Livonia employees to the 11-acre Plymouth Township site.

The facility will house sales and marketing operations, testing of radio and auto components, and research operations, according to the application.

A representative of Mitsubishi deferred questions on construction start-up and completion dates to the project developer, Kojaian Properties Inc. of Bloomfield Hills.

Kojaian spokeswoman Joyce Luft said that later this week, the company would release information on the construction schedule for the facility.

Also planned for the commerce center is the Plymouth Hills Technological Center, which has received final approval from the planning commission, and an Isuzu Corp. high-tech testing facility.

"The Isuzu facility has gained tentative site plan approval from the township planning commission.

Area hospital gets OK for $6 million expansion

By LeAnne Rogers
staff writer

Plans for expansion and remodeling at Garden City Hospital got the go-ahead from the city council last week.

"On behalf of the board of trustees and the management team, I thank you for your approval," said hospital spokesman Allan Breakie. "We are very gratified and will make it a showplace."

The council approved the site plan for the project, along with a rezoning from two-family residential to planned development for hospital-owned property along Inkster Road.

The hospital is tentatively expected to break ground next month on a 50,000-square-foot medical building immediately east of the hospital. The new building with three floors above ground and one below will be attached to the hospital.

The existing medical building, on Inkster Road south of Maplewood, will be used for non-patient care operations after physicians move their offices into the new structure.

The $6 million project also includes construction of a new hospital lobby and entryway, along with renovation of the admitting and business offices.

Construction on the entrance and lobby will match the new medical building, giving the hospital an updated appearance, according to Breakie.

TO MAKE way for the new medical building, an historic home on the hospital property was recently demolished.

The Stewart house had been used by the hospital for a variety of purposes, most recently to house medical students.

Neither Garden City nor private parties were able to accept the hospital's offer to donate the home if it was moved to another site.

The hospital has also acquired the nearby Garden City Free Methodist Church and its adjoining land along Maplewood. The church building will be left behind, but the congregation is having the parsonage building moved to its new site in Westland.

Hospital officials estimate that construction of the new building and the renovations will be completed in about 13 months.

This is the hospital's sixth major renovation since it opened at its original site on Ford Road in 1951. The hospital moved to its current site on Inkster just south of Maplewood in 1960.

Bennett bill reduces senior auto insurance

A bill to offer retired senior citizens older than 60 the option of waiving work loss benefits on their automobile insurance coverage has been introduced by state Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford.

"The purpose of the wage loss benefit is to reimburse a worker for wages or salary lost as a result of an injury from an auto accident," said Bennett, whose district includes all of Redford and the eastern portion of Livonia.

"Since most of the retired senior citizens do not receive any wages or salary and since they will never receive any benefit from their wage loss premium, it is unconscionable to make them pay it.

"My bill would allow auto insurance companies to offer a reduced premium rate to those seniors who declined work loss reimbursement coverage. Giving non-working seniors the option of refusing this coverage would help reduce the excessive insurance burden that many are finding difficult to carry."

Current law requires auto insurance policies to provide benefits to cover lost wages, as well as for certain expenses necessary for the injured person's care, recovery and rehabilitation, up to $20 per day.

The policy-holder pays for wage-loss coverage through premiums.

Under Bennett's bill, individuals still would receive reimbursement for expenses but could be exempt from obtaining lost wage coverage.

"Coverage for help with housework, property maintenance and errand running is usually all a retired person needs."

Bennett said his bill, which would eliminate the necessity of coverage some older people don't want or need, is part of an ongoing effort to reduce insurance rates for Michigan residents, in particular for senior citizens.

We Need Volunteers Who Love Happy Campers!

Sun Deer® campers are happy campers and it's no wonder because most severely asthmatic kids are forced to spend their summers indoors. At Camp Sun Deer® asthmatic kids ages 9-12 participate in a variety of outdoor activities, but they can't do it without your help. The limitations and doubts they face can be diminished by a volunteer who cares. Your participation at Camp Sun Deer® can make all the difference in an asthmatic child's summer.

Local students would get SC tuition break

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Out-of-district and out-of-state students would pay a larger percentage increase than those living within the Schoolcraft service area.

Schoolcraft College students will face a tuition increase when they return to fall term classes — but some could face a bigger increase than others.

Out-of-district and out-of-state students would pay a larger percentage increase than those living within the Schoolcraft service area, under a plan proposed by college administrators last week.

Though final action is pending, college trustees expressed a preference for a revised plan that would keep tuition down for students living in the Livonia, Clarenceville, Plymouth-Canton, Northville and Garden City public school districts. Taxpayers in each district pay a portion of their property taxes to support the regional community college.

"It looks good," trustee Jeanne Stempien said of the revised plan. "It's more palatable."

UNDER THE plan, tuition would rise to $35 for in-district students to $53 per credit hour for other Michigan students and $78 for out-of-state students. The increase would be $1.50 for district residents, $6 for other Michigan students and $8.50 for-out-of-state students.

Final approval is expected at the board's Wednesday, May 23, meeting.

Dollar increases have traditionally been larger for non-district students but percentage increases have traditionally been about the same for all students. That was true of the first tuition increase proposed for the 1990-91 school year.

Initial increases would have been 7.46 percent for district residents, 7.45 percent for other Michigan students and 6.47 percent for out-of-state students.

Under the new plan, the increase would be 4.48 percent for district residents, 12.77 percent for other state students and 12.23 percent for out-of-staters.

DESPITE INCREASED tax revenue (see related story), Schoolcraft officials said they still needed at least $556,000 to balance the college operating budget.

This will be the fifth consecutive year Schoolcraft trustees have raised tuition. While they virtually guaranteed they would approve this year's tuition increases, trustees said they were looking for alternatives to head off future increases.

"We shouldn't have to raise tuition every year," Stempien said.

TOWARD THAT end, trustees used Wednesday's budget hearing as a brainstorming session.

Stempien suggested considering an extra fee for students who pay tuition fees with charge cards.

Trustee Michael Burley suggested the college offer more classes for high school seniors whose graduating classes have not yet left school.

"There are a lot of kids sitting around bored. Really, they're already ready to leave high school."

Still, the program could prove controversial, he said.

"It's a matter of getting teachers unions to agree to it."

OTHER TRUSTEES were concerned about a potential new influx of students.

"With a cut in military operations, we can't help but pick up more students," Wendell Smith said.

At the same time, Harry Greeleaf suggested adding weekend block scheduling to allow students to complete their education faster.

Rollback to trim Schoolcraft taxes

There's good news and bad news for taxpayers in the Schoolcraft College District.

The good news is the college tax rate will be going down. The bad news is area property tax assessments have risen so most taxpayers will be paying more anyway.

Schoolcraft's operating tax rate is scheduled to drop from 1.967 mills to 1.853 mills for 1990-91. In addition, Schoolcraft's tax to pay off bond issues is expected to drop from 0.045 mills to 0.040 mills.

The limit on unvoted tax increases is figured from the amount the district can levy — not on how much was levied last year. So taxpayers with houses worth $100,000 will pay just $5.35 less than they would have without the rollback.

A truth-in-taxation hearing about the Schoolcraft tax rate will be 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 16. The tax rate is expected to be adopted by college trustees at their Wednesday, May 23, meeting. Both events are open to the public.

Schoolcraft levies operating and debt retirement taxes in the Livonia, Clarenceville, Plymouth-Canton, Northville and Garden City public school districts, as well as, in a small portion of the Novi Schools.

Overall tax revenue is expected to increase 6.5 percent, said Adelard Raby, vice president for business services, though assessment increases in many communities more than doubled that figure.

"Our revenue isn't increasing as much because of the Headlee rollback," Raby said. The Headlee admendment to the Michigan constitution requires taxing bondies to limit unvoted tax increases to the rate of inflation.

Overall, Schoolcraft tax revenue is expected to be $10.8 million. Taxes account for slightly more than one-third of the college's estimated $27.5 million operating budget.

Tuition and fees, with state aid, accounts for the rest.

'Soapy' is honored

An oil painting of late Michigan Supreme Court Chief Justice G. Mennen Williams was recently unveiled during ceremonies at the City-County Building, Detroit.

The portrait will be on permanent display at Supreme Court offices in Lansing. It is a gift from the Michigan Supreme Court Historical Society, paid for through private donations.

Williams, governor from 1949-61, a state Supreme Court justice from 1971-83 and chief justice from 1984-87, was only the second man in state history to head the state's executive and judicial branches during his public service career. Epaphroditus Ransom, chief justice from 1843-48 and governor from 1848-50, was the first.

Williams died at age 76 in 1988. The portrait is the last completed by noted artist Paul Burns of Ridgewood, N.J. Burns died Feb. 10 at age 79.

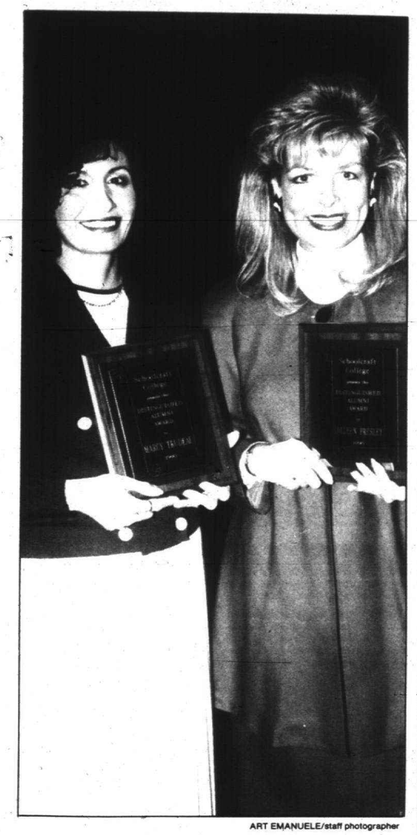
S'craft ceremony brings its grads together



ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Distinguished Schoolcraft College alumni Marcy Trudeau, left, and Colleen Presley were honored for their contributions to the western Wayne County community. Trudeau is an area businesswoman. Presley a special education teacher. Both are Plymouth residents.

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Colleen Presley and Marcy Trudeau have a lot in common — both grew up in Wayne County, both attended Schoolcraft College, both rose to success in their professional careers, both even settled Plymouth.

But it took Saturday's commencement activities at Schoolcraft to bring them together.

"This is the first we've met," said a beaming Presley, who along with Trudeau was honored as a distinguished Schoolcraft alumni.

As such, they shared the spotlight with the more than 900 students who received degrees from the Livonia-based community college.

They also shared the commencement stage with 92-year-old Verna Wright, also of Plymouth. Wright, a longtime college volunteer, received an honorary degree during ceremonies in the college gymnasium.

Presley, a teacher at the Burger Center, Garden City was honored for her work with autistic children.

"IT'S A challenge, but the rewards are so great," said Presley, who has also received honors from the Wayne County Autisitc society, Wayne County Intermediate Schools and the Michigan Education Association and who hosts an award-winning cable television show for children that can be seen in Garden City, Plymouth and Northville.

Trudeau, owner of the McDonald's franchise at Ann Arbor Road and I-275, Livonia, is one of a small number of women fast-food industry franchise holders. Born in Mexico City, she is also one of a small number of Hispanic franchise holders.

Still, she said, she thinks of herself as an entrepreneur, first and foremost.

"My satisfaction is in succeeding as a person," she said.

Both women urged students to use their education to help make a difference in the lives of others.

"What education does is put us all in a position to go beyond and put our dreams into reality," Presley said.

Wright, a great grandmother, has been a volunteer at the college writing concepts center since 1973. She has also been a 20-year volunteer for World Medical Relief and an active member of Ward Presbyterian Church, Livonia. Her church projects have included crocheting hats, mittens and blankets for the area's needy.

"Her bowling average is also pretty high," said college trustee Jeanne Stempien, in introducing Wright to the audience.

Another honorary degree was given Eastern Michigan Univeristy President William Shelton, the evening's commencement speaker.

Shelton urged students to seek new challenges, in a folksy, anecdote-laden address that was warmly received by the audience.

"EVERY CHALLENGE is an opportunity," said Shelton, who succeeded Detroit Schools chief John Porter, as president of the Ypsilanti-based university.

Schoolcraft awarded associate's degrees in arts, applied science, engineering and general studies, as well as certificates for non-degree students, during the ceremonies.

Schoolcraft President Richard McDowell congratulated the graduating class, the 25th in school history.

"You've been challenged, you've set goals," said McDowell.

The president even admitted to a bit of extra pride this year. His daughter, Karen, is a member of the class of 1990 — the third of McDowell's children to have attended Schoolcraft.

Soon-to-be graduates line up for their moment in the spotlight during Saturday's commencement ceremonies at Schoolcraft College. More than 900 students completed their studies this spring, though about one-third that number participated in Saturday's event.

Please Help A Neighbor's Child In Need!

In Third World countries, hundreds of thousands of children are in desperate need of food, clothing, medical care – the basics of life. These girls and boys are even denied the opportunity to attend school.

They are our neighbors in a world that grows smaller every day.

Through CCF, you can sponsor a neighbor's child. The cost is $18 a month – just 60¢ a day – to help a poor child in Asia, Africa or Latin America – a child who has virtually nothing.

Please pick up your phone now and dial the toll-free number below. Be a good neighbor by helping an innocent child.

Jack Gladden

WHEN A FEW parents in Troy protested the production of "Little Shop of Horrors" at Athens High School a while back I just rolled my eyes and thought, "There they go again."

The parents were objecting primarily to the "offensive" language in the play — words like "damn" and "hell" and so forth. They thought it was inappropriate for high school students to be using such words on stage.

And when a group of picketers showed up outside the corporate headquarters of K mart Corp. last Friday (also in Troy, but only coincidentally), I rolled my eyes and thought, "There they go again."

These people claimed to be members of the American Family Association and their complaint was against pornography. So what did that have to do with K mart?

It's a long story, but K mart owns Waldenbooks, which, in addition to selling books about religion and cooking and history and all that stuff, also sells Playboy and Penthouse magazines.

The AFA wants them to stop it because, as one of the picketer's signs read, "Porn Ruins Lives." Waldenbooks has also joined the publishers of Playboy and Penthouse in a lawsuit against the director of AFA, who has called for a boycott against stores selling those publications.

SO WHAT DO these two groups have in common? Ancestors. They have the same family tree. They are descendents of organizations like the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, the Legion of Decency, the Hays Office, etc. Today you can call them the SmutBusters.

They are convinced that pornography (as they define it) or obscenity (as they see it) is going to destroy society and they want it stopped. They are sincere in their beliefs and they mean well.

They've been around for years . . . probably centuries. Sometimes they lie dormant for years at a time, then they surface and start raising hell (Oops! Make that heck) when you least expect them.

I'm not sure what sets off these waves of protests, but they seem to come during periods of prosperity when the country is not involved in a war or facing an economic depression or any other specific crisis. And, during these times, protests seem to beget protests.

The media, of course, jump in, give the protesters more coverage than they deserve and the wave just spreads.

The results are sometimes scary.

Those parents in Troy, for example, want the school district to establish guidelines for school plays — something like a miniature Hays Office, I suspect. The district hasn't done anything yet, but the subject is being discussed and we'll be hearing more about it.

I DON'T have any particular problem with schools establishing some kind of general guidelines for student productions — I don't think "Debbie Does Dallas" would be exactly appropriate for a senior class play — but all of these moral movements have a tendency to get out of hand.

More than 50 years ago, in the mid-1920s, a similar wave of protests swept the country and, in 1927, a congressman from Mississippi introduced a bill in the U.S. House of Representatives to establish a National Board of Magazine Censorship. That bill never made it out of committee, although the congressman was perfectly serious about it and many of his colleagues supported it.

Guidelines for high school plays aren't as ominous as a national board of censorship, but they represent a step in that direction. This time around, how about letting judgment and common sense prevail instead of trying to codify what's good and what's not?

from our readers

Not in my front yard

To the editor:

We are in sharp disagreement with the editorial entitled "Political Protest" in the Thursday, April 28th edition of the Observer. We do not believe, as the editorial writer does, that ordinances curtailing picketing in front of specific individual's homes represent a threat to legitimate protest.

We are longtime members of the ACLU and staunch defenders of the freedoms guaranteed by the U.S. constitution. In this case, however, we feel that important distinctions must be made between public and private selves, and between protest and harassment.

All of us have "public" identities associated with our work or our volunteer activities. If the institution we work for or support comes under attack from individuals or groups objecting to the institution's policies, we recognize the legitimacy of such protest. The owner of a business may be picketed by striking employees. A medical clinic may be picketed by those opposing freedom of choice. These protests are legitimate because they are directed at the institutions involved. If the employees of a store in a mall (especially a store with no outside public access) wanted to set up a picket line, we would support their right to do so (no matter what the mall owners said).

However, when we leave the institutions we work for, even before we reach our homes, we become private selves. This transformation is a cherished aspect of freedom in our democratic society. As private selves, we are not the legitimate target of protest directed at where we work.

Protest directed at private individuals is harassment, not the exercise of free speech. It is a form of terrorism. It is usually engaged in by individuals and groups who are so desperate and fanatical about their position that they are no longer willing to work within the restraints of our democratic system. There is no constitutional right to harass private citizens. There is no loss of freedom in prohibiting such tactics.

Voters are needed for election

To the editor:

A recent event has brought the importance of this year's election of two new school board members into sharp focus. On Monday, April 16, the Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal of a lower court ruling in favor of the school board of Purdy, Mo.

The school board's continued support for a 100-year-old ban against school dances had been challenged by non-fundamentalist students and their parents. The challenge was based on the concept of the separation of church and state.

It is important to realize, in this instance, that the Supreme Court has always been reluctant to enter into matters that could be resolved by legislative action. The Supreme Court's message to the enlightened students and parents of Purdy is simple: If you want to change the rule, elect people to the school board who support your point of view. Don't ask the courts to do it for you.

The implication of this message for voters in the Plymouth-Canton school district is very clear: A school board has wide latitude to support and enact rules governing the conduct of school matters. The fact that a particular policy is consistent with the religious beliefs of, or the position held by, a particular religious group or order, does not mean that the separation of church and state is being violated.

Clearly, a school board has extraordinary power to shape school policy as it wishes. Who we elect to fill school board positions is extremely critical to the conduct of education.

Although eight candidates currently remain in the race, two clear points of view should emerge. The major debate will center around the teaching of values and the dangers of ideas. One of CBE's candidates is already quoted as believing that the teaching of values belongs exclusively in the home and the church.

As the debate continues, we will hopefully see the emergence of an opposing point of view. Our nation is beset by racism, sexism, rape, spouse and child abuse, reckless substance abuse, irresponsible sexuality, rampant white collar crime, abuse of governmental power, and even church activities of questionable propriety. Where have home and church been all these years?

We cannot afford a "What they don't know won't hurt them" mentality. Knowledge is not an invitation to sin. Rather, it is the key to reasonable, lawful behavior.

Doug McClennen,
Plymouth

Let's learn from our mistakes

To the editor:

I feel the need to write this in view of the letters that have been published lately concerning the film at Gallimore.

I am so sick and tired of hearing how people like Wendy Sieloff feel and what her daughter feels. If she was such a concerned parent, why did she pull her daughter out of class to be interviewed by the press? Most of the parents purposely kept our kids from being "exploited" by the press at the expense of Stephen's death. I don't think there is a person in this community who wasn't moved and expressed tremendous grief by this death. But we had the morals and decency to keep it within ourselves and not flap our gums in public. We respected the Nalepas' mourning time and gave them our prayers instead of our opinions.

We have seen the movie, we all have made our own opinions regarding it and nothing we say will ever change what has happened. The issue now is not our opinion or the opinions of Diane Stamp and the CBE (Citizens to Ban Everything). The issue is change. The time has come to work together and bring about a change so that something this tragic does not happen again. Let's put our personal feelings aside and work together as a community to make the education of our children the first priority, if not for the sake of Stephen's memory than for the future of our own children. We have had enough name calling, mud slinging, etc. last year with the millage. Let's not go through that again.

Let us teach our children that we can learn from our mistakes and work together to make things better. It is time.

Kathi Lawrence,
Canton

Children can be affected

To the editor:

Because in the Thursday, April 26, Plymouth Observer I was misquoted, I am compelled to restate and elaborate upon my view regarding the movie "Nobody's Useless." Concerned about my child's future education, I went to see the movie and was determined to remain objective.

The movie started out innocently enough, staged in the 1890s and in a small town. Later in the movie when the boy had to have his leg amputated, I felt the movie had potential and would deal with the child learning to cope with his handicap.

However, what bothered me tremendously was the reaction of the friend to the boy's intent to commit suicide. He seemed surprised and excited more so than shocked. And I cannot believe that anyone could be so easily convinced to help someone kill himself (or should I say rather, to murder a friend). Also, the unbelievable fact that another friend's original motivation to stop the suicide attempts was materialism disgusted me. With friends like that and no support from any adults, I expected him not to regain the will to live.

Having worked as a schoolteacher, I know that young children play make-believe and have imaginary playmates. Furthermore, it is true that all of us have, at times, relived horrifying experiences. Therefore, isn't it entirely plausible that a very young child could be so adversely affected by the graphic scenes as to reenact a scene with the help of an imaginary friend?

Legislative committee eyes school equity proposals

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A subcommittee of state representatives is mulling three proposed constitutional amendments aimed at "equitable opportunity" in state school funding.

They anticipate a lawsuit in which Michigan's school funding system may be held unconstitutional because it provides only $2,500 per pupil in some districts and $8,000 in others.

"There are districts out there twisting in the wind," said Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City. A nine-term lawmaker, Keith chairs both the subcommittee and the House Education Committee.

THE TRICK is to write constitutional language that (1) a court could use in saying Michigan is failing its poorer school districts and (2) allows the Legislature to rewrite the budget itself to meet the "equitable" test.

"It should be illegal to have a $2,500 to $8,000 disparity in school funding," Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, said at last week's meeting. A freshman, Profit has a district that neighbors western Wayne and southern Oakland and Livingston counties.

"The danger," replied the veteran Keith, "is that we're putting ourselves at the mercy of the courts."

Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, agreed, noting that the Kentucky Supreme Court ordered an education program costing $1.2 billion.

A legislative staff analysis said the highest courts in Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Kentucky, Montana, New Jersey, Texas, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming have declared unconstitutional their states' school financing plans.

BUT KOSTEVA, a third-termer, and freshman Susan Grimes Munsell, R-Howell, are uncertain the public will accept an "equitable opportunity" amendment.

Munsell wants to see such an amendment supported by two of the biggest players in educational funding — the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce (business) and the Michigan Education Association (teachers union). "I don't feel we can move forward without those two," she said.

Kosteva has grave questions about whether the public will buy equitable funding. "Politically, there's a real lack of support. No one has fire in their belly," he said.

Kosteva also fears the public will see it as "a pig in a poke" — something costly that fails to benefit their hometown schools.

HERE ARE the three proposed constitutional amendments:

- House Joint Resolution Q requires the Legislature to provide "an efficient system" of public schools ensuring "equitable opportunity for a thorough education."

Sponsored by Profit and co-sponsored by Keith, it is the shortest and simplest of the three. For that reason, Profit says it's the most understandable, the most salable and the best.

- HJR S requires the Legislature to fund schools "on an equitable basis." It also gives constitutional status to local boards of education — the meaning of which puzzles lawmakers. Further, it adds sex to the list of reasons (religion, race, color and national origin) for non-discrimination.

Sponsor is Rep. James O'Neill, D-Saginaw, the acknowledged House expert on school funding. Keith is a co-sponsor.

- Senate Joint Resolution O started out identical to HJR S but was amended in the Senate Education Committee to make education "a fundamental right."

Keith thinks the term is "overkill."

SJR O is sponsored by Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, the Senate GOP expert on school funding. The Senate Education Committee reported it out without recommendation. Thus, SJR O is in limbo, not on the Senate calendar but not dead.

Some subcommittee members, such as Munsell, like the idea of prohibiting sex discrimination. But the consensus is that it doesn't belong in an "equitable funding" proposal.

THE HOUSE and the Senate, each by a two-thirds vote, would have to place the measure on the ballot.

A majority of all Michigan voters would have to say yes to amend the constitution.

And that presents another problem to Keith. "We could put this out (on the ballot), and the public could say no. then what do we do?" he asked. "There would be no pressure on the Legislature."

Members recalled that voters in 1989 rejected two separate sales tax increases for educational funding and virtually all "reform" proposals in the last 20 years.

Said Kosteva to Profit: "Your goal is laudable, but how do we sell it? I'm trying to keep one foot in reality."

Senate OKs watercraft bills; House yet to act

By Tim Richard
staff writer

State Sen. Richard Fessler is pleased his two bills regulating Jet Skis were passed by the Senate in only 90 days.

"I think they're needed in this boating season," said Fessler, R-Commerce. "We've had a problem with them whizzing in front of other boats."

The bills set age limits for use of personal watercraft, make careless operation a misdemeanor and regulate hours of usage.

THE SENATE recently passed SB 763 and 764 by votes of 35-1 and 33-2 with all area area senators supporting them. Fessler introduced them Jan. 30.

The bills are in the House Marine Committee. Neither of Fessler's two GOP primary opponents — David Honigman of West Bloomfield and Judy Miller of Birmingham — is on that committee.

It's common in Lansing for a representative to block a bill sponsored by an enemy senator, and vice versa. The goal is not to let the enemy get credit for something that may turn out to be popular.

PERSONAL watercraft are small motorboats that use either an outboard motor or an inboard motor powering a water jet pump.

The operator, typically young, sits, stands or kneels on top rather than sitting inside the craft.

If enacted, the bills will:

- Prohibit liveries from renting Jet Skis or other personal watercraft to persons under age 16.
- Prohibit persons under 14 from operating them.
- Allow persons between 14 and 16 to operate them only when accompanied by someone 16 or older.
- Require operators to use Coast Guard approved life jackets.
- Restrict time of operation from a half-hour before sunrise to a half-hour after sunset. Fessler said the rule is the same as for water skiing.
- Prohibit "weaving through congested vessel traffic, jumping the wake of another vessel unreasonably or unnecessarily close" to other vessels.

SB 363 amends the Marine Safety Act of 1967, and SB 364 amends the Charter and Livery Boat Safety Act of 1986.

S'craft honors retired professors

Retired professors from Livonia and Farmington Hills were among those recently honored by Schoolcraft College at the annual college employee recognition luncheon.

Honorees included Harriet Morgan of Livonia, a former biology professor, and Leonard Stec of Farmington Hills, former professor of culinary arts.

Morgan, a member of the college's first-year faculty in 1964, was an active member of several college committees during her stay at Schoolcraft.

Stec, who joined the Schoolcraft faculty in 1966, earned a national reputation as an outstanding pastry chef and culinary arts professor.

Other honorees included: former psychology professor John Krato, Grosse Pointe Farms; former biology professor Grover Niergarth, Brighton; former biology professor Roger Sutherland, Ann Arbor and former business education professor Claude Sweet, Dearborn.

Heintz declares

Wayne County Commission Vice Chairwoman Susan Heintz has announced plans to seek a third term on the county board. Heintz, R-Northville Township, is 10th district commissioner, representing Livonia, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township. As a commissioner, Heintz has been involved with health care issues and in the sale of county-owned land in Northville to a private developer. A former Northville Township supervisor, Heintz has been a commissioner since 1986.

Change in exec's succession stalls

A ballot proposal that would have changed the Wayne County Executive's line of succession failed with county commissioners Thursday.

Commissioners tied 7-7 on the proposal, preventing its adoption.

The vote was considered a victory for Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, who opposed the change. McNamara had pledged to use his own campaign money to campaign against the change, if it made it to the ballot.

"We're very pleased with the way the vote went," said assistant executive Bryan Amann, who headed McNamara administration efforts to block the proposal. "We know it was a very tough vote for a lot of people."

Among area commissioners, Kay Beard, D-Inkster, favored the proposal. Commissioners Kevin Kelley, D-Redford, Milton Mack, D-Wayne, and Susan Heintz, R-Northville Township, opposed it.

Downriver commissioner Edward Boike was absent from Thursday's voting. However, he was considered a supporter of McNamara's position.

THE DEPUTY county executive will continue to be first in line for the job should the executive leave office before term's end, as specified under the county charter.

County voters must approve any change to the charter.

Michael Duggan of Livonia has been deputy county executive since 1987. He was appointed to the job by McNamara. The post remained vacant under McNamara's predecessor, William Lucas.

A coalition of commissioners, headed by commission chairman Arthur Blackwell, had said a vacancy should instead be filled by commission appointment.

COMMISSIONERS CAN attempt another vote on the issue, but it was unclear, as of last week, whether they would.

Amann, however, said he believed the commission wouldn't mount another try.

"I think we're all interested in putting this behind us."

Insurance coverage bill awaits Senate action

Car owners with bad driving and accident records may save a few dollars under a House-passed bill awaiting state Senate action.

House Bill 4159 would exclude so-called "comprehensive" coverage (theft, vandalism and glass breakage) from "merit" ratings (accidents and moving violations) by auto insurers.

"If your car was vandalized, we want to make sure you're not surcharged," said an aide to the sponsor, Rep. Mary Brown, D-Kalamazoo.

The aide testified last week before the Senate Commerce Committee. Sen. William Faust, D-Westland, voted with the majority to report out the bill, 5-0.

The bill was welcomed by Sen. Michael O'Brien, D-Detroit, who said, "Having lost two windshields to trucks, I'm told all I gotta do is get one more comprehensive claim and I'm cancelled."

A spokesperson for the Michigan Insurance Bureau said insurers would be unable to cancel policies because of comprehensive claims, although they could charge the car owner a higher deductible.

WHAT TO TELL THE CHILDREN WHEN GRANDMOTHER HAS ARTHRITIS

Before a family visits their grandparent with arthritis, tell the children what arthritis is: a condition in which joints lose their ability to move easily and without pain. It means grandmother may have difficulty in any activity requiring movement.

Let them know that grandmother wants consideration, but no pity. The child should shake hands enthusiastically but gently, and hug grandmother with feeling, but embrace carefully.

Inform the child that arthritis often causes the elderly to develop an unsteady gait. The child should delay getting up until grandmother has arisen from her seat and is actually walking. Then the child can skip to the dining room, taking a route that will avoid brushing past the grandparent's legs, cane, or walker.

Assure the children that grandmother's arthritis does not mean they will have the same condition. Point out that two people may be close relatives, but that they differ in more ways than they are alike.

Prepare children in a calm manner, and give information that they can put to immediate use. Then the family gathering will have the basis for a warm-hearted spirit and a strengthening of relationships.

Garlic 'in' from East to West

Last month I was on the East Coast and I noticed it there.

Last week I was on the West Coast and saw it again but was told that it's been the "in" vegetable for the past six months.

Chicago is going crazy and using it in soups, garnishes, sauces and appetizers. Even here in the metropolitan area, where food trends are running six to nine months behind the coasts, garlic is cropping up as the herb de rigueur.

Even though garlic is experiencing a resurgence, it has been cultivated for at least 5,000 years. Ancient Egyptian writings attest to its importance as a crop as early as 3200 B.C.

And what a crop it was. Bulbs of garlic have been used medicinally, for strength and virility; as a germicide, to ward off vampires; and, lastly, as a food source.

We can credit the poor people of Yunnan, China, with bringing garlic to the culinary forefront.

They used the lily relative by mixing it with chopped liver and ate it raw because they had little fuel for cooking.

The Italians became known as garlic lovers, although it is mainly the Calabrians and Sicilians who used the seasoning in so many of their dishes. Ironically, Northern Italians prefer various other spices.

More than three million metric tons of garlic are produced worldwide each year.

China, South Korea and Thailand rank as the top three garlic producers, followed by Spain, Egypt and India. The United States ranks seventh with about 100,000 metric tons grown annually, all or most being fresh bulbs from California.

. THE U.S. CROP is mainly dehydrated for garlic powder, garlic salt and seasoning salt because these forms are more convenient for the food industry than raw garlic bulbs, which are susceptible to spoilage.

Gaining in popularity (and a big hit in the Janes Gang kitchen) is the processed chopped garlic available packed in oil in small glass jars. This virtually eliminates the peeling, chopping and potential sprouting that always occurs with the fresh variety.

I always keep a few bulbs of the fresh garlic around, and when I see them beginning to sprout, I peel them and place them in a small glass jar filled with oil in the fridge.

The oil is great for stir-frying and the garlic will keep almost forever.

Ah, but what are metropolitan Detroit's best kitchens doing with garlic? A random sampling found baked garlic appearing as an appetizer at R.I.K.'s, tossed with escargot and puff pastry at the Lark and pureed and reduced with top cream as a flavorful sauce for hearty venison and buffalo steaks at MacKinnon's.

Yours truly will never be able to forget the garlic soup which was a staple at the old Aliette's on Porter and 24th streets in De-

DOUG SUSALLA

Ann Gordon of Westland (center); Garlene Gordon of Livonia (left), Ann's daughter-in-law; and Ann Marie Keller of Lincoln Park, Ann's granddaughter, get together at Garlene's house to make pirogi the same way it has been made in the family for generations.

3 generations make pirogi

By Larry Janes
special writer

MEET THE GORDON girls. Well, really, it's two Gordon mommas and one Keller momma-to-be, but they all have the same blood and the same panache for food and cooking.

Family matriarch is Ann Baczewski-Gordon, formerly of Lincoln Park but presently residing in the Greenwood Villa Senior Citizens Apartments in Westland. A gentlemen like myself would never ask a woman her age, but judging from the platter of pirogi I sampled, I will graciously peg Grandma Gordon's age at "something over 60."

These were not the pirogi made by the hands of a 22-year-old but instead were molded with experience and tales prior to the days of Cuisinarts and Kitchen-Aid mixers. Speaking of glitzy kitchen gadgetry, Grandma Gordon was quick to point out, "The fanciest kitchen gadget I own is a good sharp knife." Enough said. Having bought my momma crates of the latest culinary tools known to modern man, it never ceases to amaze me how she still relies on basically her knives, bowls and cookware. Period.

My kitchen looks like the showroom at Foland's. Grandma Gordon's kitchen looks just like a grandma's kitchen, resplendent with a tea kettle and cutting board and nary an electric can opener or, God forbid, an electric wok.

SO WHO GETS the credit for passing along a heritage of Polish, German and basic Eastern-European recipes and cooking skills? Basically, Grandma Gordon was taught by her momma using the proverbial "pinch of this and dollop of that" expertise. Though not trying to take away due credit, this Grandma of two, and soon-to-be great-grandma, said that mainly she learned by doing things herself.

"Sure, my momma showed me the basics, but I got real hands-on experience when I was first married and had to cook," she said. The first cookbook this grandma owned, and still has, was mainly used for guidance and seldom was a recipe followed verbatim.

That must have been a real hands-on home-ec experience because Grandma Gordon says that to this day fellow residents at the Greenwood Villa Senior Apartments get a whiff of whatever she is preparing and, "There's always someone coming over to share lunch or dinner." Ever her two sons, Walter of Livonia and Steve of Highland, still enjoy momma's homemade pirogi, kapusta and kruschiki.

Attempting to get a written recipe from this grandma was about as easy as pulling teeth. "It always turns out different," she said. "Some days you add more milk, some days you add more egg." "You got to feel it" was the final statement before handing over the treasured family pirogi recipe. That's about as real as it gets.

Not to be outdone with her words of wisdom and kitchen skills was another soon-to-be-grandma Gordon, Garlene, who resides in Livonia with husband Walt and son Christopher. Garlene Gordon is a modern momma who works all day as a secretary for the IRS in downtown Detroit, then hightails it home and still has the energy to put dinner on the table. "How do you do it?" I asked.

"I CHEAT EVERY now and then and put together a few things on Sunday afternoon for the week" was her honest reply. We should all be so lucky. If I had a momma who worked all day, our plates would be filled with the likes of microwaved frozen corn, fish sticks and fries.

"What's your favorite dish?" was my next rapid-fire question. "It depends on my feelings" was her answer, with a devilish smile. C'mon, Garlene, tell the truth. What's your favorite? "Going out to dinner to someplace good and casual like the Olive Garden," she replied.

Finally, the truth. Just as I finished writing the last line, Garlene perked up and said, "But when I need to cook, I love to bake. Anything, as long as it's rich, gooey and full of calories." I mean, could this be your mother or what?

When it comes to the advice department, Garlene says that daughter Ann-Marie makes an occasional plea for help, but for the most part, she thinks her daughter has to learn just like she did, by experience. Husband Walt doesn't enjoy working in

Food designed for a Toddler Gourmet

By Arlene Funke

Gourmet applesauce and exotic finger food for pint-sized customers?

Elaine Houlihan of Bloomfield Hills has developed a line of upscale food products for toddlers.

"It's aimed at two-income families who have one or two kids," said Houlihan. "It's a special treat kind of thing. It's a gift item for grandparents to buy. Or for parties."

Houlihan employs four people in her Auburn Hills-based company called Houlihan's Culinary Traditions Ltd. Her line of interesting snacks and sauces is sold in specialty grocery stores.

Of the Toddler Gourmet line, only the chunky applesauce currently is available. But more products will be introduced this summer. These will include a tomato sauce sold with a packet of fresh, dried pasta; a snack mix combining cereal with dried Michigan cherries and raisins; and a sweet-and-sour vegetable, such as green beans, which a toddler can eat out of hand.

"If we start children out with a good taste instead of one so bland, maybe they would enjoy finer foods," Houlihan said.

Mother of five grown children, Houlihan launched her business last year.

THE TODDLER applesauce, which is slightly chunky, is flavored with white and brown sugars and cinnamon. It costs around $4 for a nine-ounce jar.

Houlihan is a native of upstate New York, where her parents ran a restaurant.

"It was called Houlihan's," she recalled. "Dad was as Irish as could be, but they served Italian food. The cooks were my grandmother, my mother and aunts. They were all Italian cooks."

Houlihan, who has a degree in psychology, worked in corporate sales at Eastman Kodak before starting this venture. Her husband of five years, attorney Jay Brant, encouraged her to capitalize on her love of good food and her sales background.

In the fall of 1988, Houlihan's plans began to take shape. While taking daughter Caroline Collins to Michigan State University, Houlihan stopped at a roadside stand and bought a bushel of Empire apples.

"I came home and started making applesauce," she said. "I wasn't into applesauce. It was pasta. But something seemed to click right."

For several months Houlihan experimented with sweeteners and methods of preparing the applesauce. She wanted a slightly chunky consistency reminiscent of homemade.

HOULIHAN, WHO likes the texture and tartness of the Empire apple, doesn't put her applesauce through a sieve. The sugars and cinnamon are added when the applesauce is almost cooked, then allowed to "rest" and permeate the product for extra flavor.

Although more costly than national-brand applesauces, the Houlihan product has a tight-fitting lid and stays fresh in the refrigerator for more than a week.

Houlihan's packaging dishes up a healthy dollop of nostalgia. Each jar has a sticker with a printed promise of "sweet smells and tastes of childhood memories."

Toddler Gourmet is just for kids

And the jar label for each of the toddler foods will contain a reproduced photograph of one of Houlihan's five children as tots. For example, the applesauce has a picture of wide-eyed, smiling Jill Houlihan Collins from many years ago.

Jill, 21, is a senior graduating this month from Central Michigan University. Her siblings, in addition to Caroline, are Kathleen, Trisha and John.

In her non-toddler line, Houlihan has a chunky applesauce, which sells for around $6 for a 16-ounce jar. She suggests that it be served on top of pancakes or waffles, or with a toasted bagel and cream cheese.

There also is an interesting snack mix, which can be served with yogurt, fruit or ice cream. It combines pieces of oat bran cereal, hazelnuts, raisins and Michigan dried cherries. Packed in a 10-ounce Italian crock, the topping sells for around $16. Eight-ounce refill packages cost around $9.

THIS SUMMER Houlihan will introduce a chutney and several flavors of preserves. And a new product line, called Elena, will debut this month. The products, which reflect Houlihan's Italian heritage, will feature such items as basil-flavored tomatoes and special pasta sauces.

Eventually Houlihan hopes to develop a mail-order business for her products.

Houlihan's products are sold at the Quarton Market in Birmingham, Great Scott supermarkets in the Birmingham-Bloomfield area and at all Merchant of Vino locations. They also are available at Get Sauced in Trapper's Alley in Detroit and at the Merry Mouse in Grosse Pointe. For more information call 852-7110 during business hours.

troit's Mexican town.

Last fall, on a business trip to Chicago, upon being seated at Bistro 110 and ordering a glass of chardonnay, the waitperson brought a small breadboard with a few slices of warm bread, a mini-tub of whipped butter and a whole baked bulb of garlic.

I immediately thought about what would happen to my taste buds upon biting into a bulb of garlic, and sensing my trepidation, the waitperson suggested I use my butter knife to pry out the tender cloves and spread them like a paste over the butter-spread bread. For a few minutes, I thought I had died and gone to heaven.

By the way, a side of Listerine is not needed because as the garlic bakes in liquid it mellows out dramatically.

whole heads of garlic
Olive oil

Remove pointed ends from bulbs of garlic. Place in a casserole dish and add enough water to barely cover. Drizzle with olive oil, cover and bake at 375 degrees for 1½ hours.

PEASANT BEEF STEW WITH GARLIC

3 pounds well-trimmed stewing beef, cut into cubes
6 ounces tomato paste
½ cup fresh parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cumin
½ teaspoon sugar
½ cup dry white wine or apple juice
¼ cup wine vinegar
1 pound small pearl onions, parboiled and peeled
30 cloves garlic, parboiled and peeled
½ pound feta cheese, crumbled
1 cup walnuts, chopped
½ cup fresh parsley

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a heavy pot that can be covered, combine all the ingredients except the feta, walnuts and ½ cup parsley. Cover tightly and bake for 1 hour 45 minutes. Skim off the fat, ladle stew into a deep platter. Garnish with feta, walnuts and parsley.

the kitchen at all but says that his job "is driving to the restaurant." Son Christopher, who would rather eat than cook, occasionally gets into the kitchen but mainly leaves the culinary basics up to mömma while he attends grad school.

When queried about her secret for great pirogi, she must have gone to the Grandma Gordon school of responses because her answer mimicked her momma's to a "T." "You have to know how the dough should feel," she responded. "How can you make great pirogi without knowing how they should feel?"

WHICH BRINGS US to Gordon-girl number three, Ann-Marie Keller, previously of Livonia and now hailing from Lincoln Park, with new hubby Frank and a soon-to-be baby. Sonewhere over 20 but way under 30, this bubbly anticipating mom cooks just about everything from scratch — proving the old saying that the acorn never falls far from the tree.

Her specialty is stuffed peppers (Frank's favorite) gleaned from her mother-in-law. She said she also makes a mean pot roast, a great pot of spaghetti and probably the best lasagna money can buy. Spaghetti and lasagna, with a last name like Gordon-Keller? Certainly there must have been an extended stay at the Betty Crocker School for basic dinners. "Not really," Ann-Marie said. "The only cooking classes I took was what they offered in high school."

In order to make great pirogi, you don't just take Home Ec 101 and say that's it. While Ann-Marie was growing up, momma and grandma always used to make pirogi while she was at school, and it was only during recess that she had the chance to watch. But after graduation, and before tying the knot, Ann-Marie had plenty of opportunity to get together with momma and grandma and do her share of "feeling the dough."

By the way, this young momma also works all day as a secretary for Henry Ford Home Care Systems and still finds time to have a hot meal on the table every night. "Of course, that will change when the baby comes" was almost an apology, but before I could interrupt, she added, "But then again, there's no reason why boys shouldn't cook."

Trying to get a recipe from Grandma Gordon was tough, even my attempts from Momma Garlene proved most difficult, but leave it to the kids to come up with everything. These recipes, supposedly from the Gordon family files, have kept this generation of three Gordon girls together and will undoubtedly continue. They hope you enjoy making their recipes as much as they have.

Pirogi is small, savory pastries that can be baked, boiled or fried. It can be made many different ways and the pastry can be puff, short crust, choux or yeast dough. It can be filled with minced meat, poultry, fish, sauerkraut, potatoes or cheese. It is the traditional Polish way of using up oddments.

PIROGI

½ cup soft butter
½ cup sour cream
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
14-16 ounces flour

Cream together butter, sour cream, eggs and salt. Gradually add enough flour to make a workable dough. Knead for 5 minutes. Roll out ⅛-inch thick. Cut into 2-inch squares. Place 1 teaspoon of filling on each square, moisten edges, add top square and press edges together.

Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or boil in rapidly boiling, lightly salted water for 6-7 minutes. Can be fried in butter, margarine or oil over medium heat until golden, about 5-6 minutes.

STUFFED CABBAGE
Golumbki

½ pound ground beef
1 medium head cabbage
1 onion
1 cup cooked rice
1 cup broth
2 tablespoons sour cream
4 ounces cooked mushrooms
2 tablespoons tomato paste
Salt and pepper to taste

Chop onion, fry till soft, add meat. Cook until brown. Add rice and ½ broth. Mix well, season with salt and pepper. Parboil or blanch cabbage. Remove leaves and use leaves to fill with meat mixture. Roll up. Place rolled leaves in casserole. Combine remaining broth with mushrooms, sour cream and tomato paste. Bring to a boil. Add salt and pepper if necessary. Pour over stuffed cabbage. Bake at 350 degrees, covered, for 1 hour and 15 minutes.

CHESTNUT CAKE
Dort Kastanovy

This is a Gordon family favorite, from the "Czechoslovak Cookbook" by Joza Brizova (Crown Publishers, New York).

1 pound chestnuts
2 cups milk
6 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
6 eggs, separated
¾ cup grated almonds
whipped cream

To prepare chestnuts, wash them and make incisions on the rounded sides. Roast in a preheated 350-degree oven for about 15 minutes. Peel. Cook in milk for about 30 minutes. Rub through a strainer while hot, adding to puree whatever liquid has not been absorbed in cooking process, but reserve ¼ cup of the chestnuts for decorating cake.

To prepare cake, cream butter thoroughly with sugar and egg yolks. Add almonds and pureed chestnuts. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a greased springform pan sprinkled with bread crumbs. Bake in a preheated 300 degree oven for 45 to 60 minutes. When cake is cool, split into 2 layers. Fill and cover with whipped cream, and decorate with the ¼ cup chestnuts put through a potato ricer.

Mom, here's a meal for the kids to make

Betsy Brethen

GUY WARREN/staff photographer

Peggy Moshier of Livonia has turned this menu featuring chicken squares into a lower-calorie dinner.

Because Sunday, May 13, is Mother's Day, I thought it was only fitting and proper to dedicate this column to the memory of Miss Anna Jarvis.

It is, after all, thanks to her efforts that we celebrate and honor mothers on the second Sunday of May each year.

In 1907, Miss Jarvis had the gumption to stand up at a public meeting in Philadelphia, Pa., and propose that all mothers wear a carnation on the second Sunday of May. On May 10, 1908, Philadelphia, the City of Brotherly Love, became the first city to adopt a plan to honor mothers. Finally, on May 9, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed the second Sunday of May a national holiday. May 10, 1914, went down in the record books as the first nationally recognized Mother's Day.

The ways in which mothers are honored certainly varies from family to family. I thought, however, it might be fun to feature a Winner Dinner menu that could be prepared by children 10 and over. With a little bit of adult supervision, this offers the kids a chance to part Mom from the potholders and prepare the meal so that she can sit back, relax and enjoy her special day.

Submitted by Peggy Moshier of Livonia, this week's winning menu features chicken squares, steamed broccoli and carrots, tossed garden salad and heavenly tasting ambrosia. The mother of two young girls and a full-time mom, Moshier joined Weight Watchers in January and has lost 29 pounds to date. She has adjusted the menu, for this popular meal with her family, by using low-ericalorie ingredients.

MOSHIER AND HER husband, who is originally from Buffalo, have lived in the Detroit area for three years. They moved their family here from Baltimore so he could accept a position as professor of medicine in the molecular biology/human genetics department at Wayne State Medical School.

They have enjoyed life in Michigan, especially the milder winters, and have had fun taking their young girls camping around the state. Active members of Ward Presbyterian Church in Livonia, Moshier and her family join the Winner Dinner Winner ranks along with two other church members and friends, Marnie Balog and Sharen Rose.

Thank you, Peggy Moshier, for sharing your recipes and congratulations on earning your apron. As a little suggestion to all you moms out there, be sure to highlight with a brightly colored marker the part about children preparing the meal and leave this column out in a conspicuous spot.

Although this is one meal that will work for other days as well as for Mother's Day, buy your crescent rolls early. There might be a run on them. Happy Mother's Day!

As the summer months draw nearer, I would really appreciate it if you would send in some hot-weather menus that work for you and your family. Also, I've had some requests for menus for two people only. Please send them my way. They will be much appreciated.

Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apron with the words Winner Dinner Winner on it.

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping, or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clipping in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

CHICKEN SQUARES
STEAMED CARROTS AND BROCCOLI
TOSSED GARDEN SALAD
FIVE-CUP AMBROSIA

CHICKEN SQUARES

This recipe has been adjusted so that it uses lower-calorie ingredients. Tasty and fun to assemble, these squares are filling and easy to make. This recipe serves 6-8 people.

3 ounces "light" cream cheese
2 cups chicken breast, cooked and cubed
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons skim milk
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon parsley, finely chopped
1 can mushrooms, 4-ounce size, drained
2 cans crescent rolls, 8-ounce-size each
1 beaten egg, if desired
Curry to taste, optional

Mix the first seven ingredients together for the filling. Separate dough into squares and squeeze the diagonal seam together to make eight rectangles. Place 1 scoop of filling onto one side of the dough. Place 1 side of the dough on top of the other and pinch the sides together to form little squares. Brush each square with a little bit of beaten egg. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

STEAMED CARROTS AND BROCCOLI

A healthy and low-cal addition to the dinner. Simply steam some sliced carrots and broccoli pieces together until they are just tender or al dente.

TOSSED GARDEN SALAD

Prepare a tossed salad with the ingredients of your choice and top with a small amount of one of the many kinds of commercially prepared "light" salad dressings that are now available.

FIVE-CUP AMBROSIA

Refreshing and colorful, this dessert takes minutes to put together.

1 can mandarin oranges (no sugar added), 11-ounce size, drained
1 can pineapple chunks (no sugar added), 15-ounce size, drained
1 cup miniature marshmallows
1 cup shredded coconut
1 cup non-fat or low-fat plain yogurt, 8-ounce size.

Combine all 5 cups of ingredients and refrigerate until serving.

Shopping List

1½ pounds chicken breast
3 ounces "light" cream cheese
1 can mushrooms, 4-ounce size
1 onion
1 egg
Skim milk
1 container low-fat or non-fat plain yogurt
2 cans crescent rolls, 8-ounce size each
Fresh or frozen carrots
Fresh or frozen broccoli

How to increase freezer proficiency

AP — Do you toss food into the freezer and hope for the best? You can become more "freezer proficient." All it takes is a little planning.

● Organize your freezer. Label each package with the contents and date it was entered.

● Maintain a "first-in, first-out" policy. Make sure the food that is frozen first is used first. This ensures the best use of food, electricity and space.

● Plan freezer loads with efficiency in mind. For best results, freeze no more than 3 pounds of food per cubic foot.

● Use airtight wraps, including re-sealable freezer bags, freezer paper, sealed plastic containers and aluminum foil. Ideal freezer wrappings should also be moistureproof and vaporproof.

● Don't freeze and forget. Unused freezer items should be removed after 1 year at most. The recommended average storage time varies by food product.

● Frozen food stored for too long may result in "freezer burn." Freezer burn is identified by light, off-color spots on food. It is caused by excessive drying, which speeds up changes in a food's color and texture. This can be eliminated, in part, by using the proper freezer wrap.

● Avoid refreezing foods that have thawed to room temperature. The quality of food suffers when it has been frozen and thawed more than once.

Vegetable greens can be frozen. Wrap them in a resealable plastic bag and place them in the refrigerator. Keep the produce in the refrigerator until it is cold to the touch, then transfer the greens to the freezer.

Not every food can go into the freezer. Cooked egg whites toughen; raw tomatoes become soggy; greens wilt; mayonnaise, sour cream and cottage cheese separate; light cream, yogurt and buttermilk lose texture; custards and puddings become watery; cooked potatoes become soft.

However, milk can be frozen; shake well after defrosting.

Other foods that freeze well:

● Grated hard cheese.
● Soup stocks.
● Leftover bread, processed into bread crumbs.
● Brown sugar.
● Crumbled bacon or chopped ham for use as a topping.
● Chopped raw peppers and onions.
● Most fresh herbs, except cilantro, Chinese parsley and dill.
● Nuts, dried fruit and coconut.

Don't freeze and forget. Unused freezer items should be removed after one year at most.

The recommended times for freezer storage vary by item. Some general guidelines for holding foods at 0 degrees F: fruits, 12 months; vegetables, 8 months; ground hamburger, 3-4 months; beef roasts, steaks and lamb roasts, 9-12 months; pork, cured (ham) 1-3 months; pork chops and pork roasts, 4-8 months; pork sausage, 1-3 months; veal, 8-9 months; cooked meat casseroles, 3-6 months; chicken, 9-12 months; duck and goose, 6 months; turkey, 6-12 months; cooked chicken or turkey, 1-3 months; fish, 3-6 months; bread and yeast rolls, 1-3 months; layer cake, 2-4 months; unbaked fruit pies, 8 months; ice cream and sherbet, 1-2 months.

When a stubborn smell just won't go away, empty the freezer and place cubes of charcoal in it overnight. The charcoal will absorb the hard-to-remove odors.

Cookbook explores Italian pantry

The following recipes are from "The Italian Pantry" by Anna Del Conte (Harper & Row; $24.95; April 11, 1990).

SPAGHETTINI ALLA PURE DI OLIVE (Spaghettini with Olive Puree, Anchovies and Capers)
Serves 4

1 tablespoon capers
salt
¾ pound spaghettini
½ cup dry white wine
5 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
4 garlic cloves, peeled
2 dried chilies
6 anchovy fillets
1 cup chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons Black Olive Puree

Put the capers in a bowl of warm water and let stand to get rid of the vinegar.

Heat a large pot of water with 1½ tablespoons of salt and, when boiling, cook the spaghettini in the usual way.

Bring the wine to the boil and simmer while you prepare the rest of the sauce.

Heat the oil in a large frying pan. Bruise the garlic and add to the oil together with the chilies.

Chop the anchovy fillets and the parsley and add to the frying pan. Cook over very gentle heat while mashing the anchovies to a paste.

Drain and dry the capers and add with the olive pur.e and the wine. Continue cooking very gently until the pasta is ready. Remove and discard the garlic and chilies.

Heat the oil in a large frying pan. Bruise the garlic and add to the oil together with the chilies.

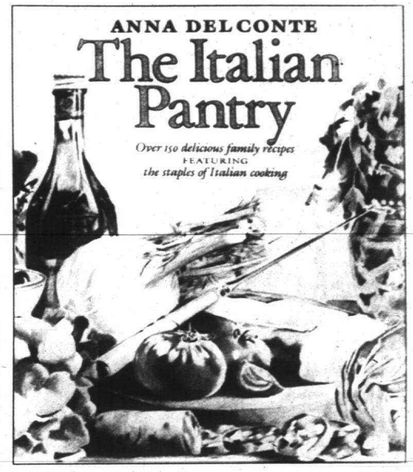
When the pasta is cooked, add 3-4 tablespoons of the pasta water to the sauce. Drain the pasta either through a colander, or by lifting it out with a spaghetti lifter or with 2 wooden forks. Add the spaghettini to the sauce and stir-fry for 1 minute or so. Serve immediately from the pan.

PURE DI OLIVE NERE
Black Olive Puree
Makes 1 ½ cups

This puree is excellent spread on crostini — squares of bread mositened with a little olive oil and toasted in a hot oven for about 8 minutes. It is very easy to make. The only thing you need besides olive is extra-virgin olive oil. It is much nicer than the store-bought puree which, like tapenade, contains other ingredients. If you make your own puree you can add capers, anchovies, garlic, herbs and so on later, according to the way in which you want to use the puree.

The proportion I use is 5 tablespoons of olive oil to 1 pound of loose black olives. Pit the olives and put them in the food processor. Process the olives while pouring the oil through the funnel. I prefer a coarse puree, but this is a matter of taste.

If you make your own puree, you can add capers, anchovies, garlic, herbs and so on later, according to the way in which you want to use the puree.



Authentic recipes of Italy are now readily accessible to American cooks in "The Italian Pantry" by Anna Del Conte.

MANUEL C. LIMCACO

Services were held for Mr. Manuel C. Limcaco, 56, of Canton on Tuesday, May 1, at St. Thomas A'Becket Catholic Church, with burial in United Memorial Gardens.

Mr. Limcaco died Saturday, April 28, at Ford Hospital. He was born May 8, 1933 in the Philippines. He was self-employed in the business of silk screening.

Mr. Limcaco is survived by four sons, Renato S. Limcaco of Daly City, Calif., Theodoro S. Limcaco of the Philippines, Roberto S. Limcaco of the Philippines and Michael S. Limcaco of the Philippines, two daughters Lorenza S. Limcaco of the Philippines and Pilipina S. Limcaco of the Philippines, mother Sofronia C. Limcaco of Canton, two sisters from the Philippines and one brother from the Philippines, seven grandchildren and one niece of Canton.

The Rev. John McPhee officiated the service. Memorial contributions may be given in the form of mass cards.

Arrangements were made by Vermeulen Memorial Trust 100 Funeral Home in Westland.

DONALD E. A. REED SR.

Services were held for Mr. Donald E. A. Reed Sr., 83, of Northville on Wednesday, May 2, at Our Lady of Victory-Northville.

Mr. Reed is survived by his wife, Frances Reed, four sons Stephen Reed of Minnesota, Donald Reed of Ypsilanti, Walter Reed of Ann Arbor and Phillip Reed of Northville, one daughter Patricia McGee of California, one brother Robert Reed of Northville, three sisters Clare Reed of Fowlerville, Ellie Elliott of Plymouth and Lucille Wright of Plymouth, 10 grandchildren and two great-graddchildren.

Mr. Reed was born Nov. 22, 1906, in Grand Rapids. He died Saturday, April 28 at Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills. He came to the Northville area in 1950 and was a member of Our Lady of Victory and the Northville Eagles.

The Rev. Frank Pollie officiated the service. Burial was at Oakland Hills Memorial Gardens in Novi.

Arrangements were made by Casterline Funeral Home in Northville.

FRANK SHIVELY

Services will be held for Mr. Frank Shively, 80, of Valparaiso, Fla. at a future date. Mr. Shively died away Tuesday, May 1.

Mr. Shively was born May 29, 1909, in Bloomington, Ind. He formerly lived in Plymouth. He was a wood carver. He is survived by two grandsons of Michigan and five great-grandchildren of Michigan.

Tell us about your event

Faced with the prospect of writing your first press release in the near future? Don't despair. Don't disparage your fellow club members for giving you the task.

Arm yourself with a paper and pen or typewriter and answer the following questions. You'll be well on your way to providing us with the necessary information.

- What is the event?
- Who's sponsoring it?
- Who are the participants?
- When is it taking place?
- Where is it occurring?
- At what time is the event scheduled?
- Why is this event taking place?
- Where can people buy tickets?
- How much is admission?
- Who can the public call for further information?

Please provide the Observer with the name and telephone number of a person with whom we can verify the information.

If you are submitting a photo for our consideration, please keep in mind that black and white pictures reproduce the best. Snapshots of large groups don't reproduce well and aren't considered suitable for publication. As a rule we don't publish photographs depicting the presentation of checks or plaques.

If you want us to return a photograph, please indicate this on the back of the picture.

Certain nameless individuals are counting on you during Be Kind To Animals Week.

His number is 267909. But at one time he had a name. A name that would cause his ears to perk up whenever he heard it. A name that would send him bounding through the house with joy whenever it was called. Now, no one calls his name.

Now, he sits in a cage. Alone. Confused. You see, a dog doesn't understand why his owner would move and leave him behind. All he knows is that after giving three years of love and devotion, he's been thrust into a strange place with other animals just as nameless. And just as scared.

They're only some of the 47,000 animals that come through the Michigan Humane Society each year. And while we provide each one with food, shelter and care, only you can provide what they need most: a home. Or you can do the next best thing. You can make a donation, big or small, to the MHS during Be Kind To Animals Week (May 6 - 12).

These animals are more than just numbers. With your help we can give them a name. And more importantly...a future.

40 nutrients are vital to your good health

Lois Thieleke
home economist, Cooperative Extension Service

Every day your body needs about 40 different nutrients that work in concert to make it go and grow.

Carbohydrates, protein, fats, water, vitamins and minerals are the essential nutrients in this orchestra. An essential nutrient is any substance that the body must obtain from outside sources to maintain life, normal functioning, growth and repair.

Carbohydrates are not fattening unless you choose a diet of simple carbohydrates. Sugars, honey, syrup and other high-calorie, low-nutrient sugars are the simple carbohydrates. Emphasis should be on the complex carbohydrates such as beans, peas, whole grains and cereals. The primary function of carbohydrates is to supply energy to the body. If you do not eat foods that provide this, the body will break down the proteins and fats from body tissue for energy.

Protein is used by the body to build tissues during growth and for normal repair of tissues and replacement of cells. Excess protein is stored in your body as fat. To make the best use of protein in your body, eat small amounts several times a day. Low-fat proteins include fish, poultry (no skin), veal, low-fat yogurt, dried beans and peas.

Water makes up about 50 to 60 percent of body weight. It also helps to maintain normal body temperature, carry out nutrients to cells, remove waste and aid in digestion. About half the needed water comes from consuming liquids, the other half comes from food.

VITAMINS ARE chemical compounds the body needs in small amounts. Vitamins do not provide energy but help the body to process and use the energy from foods. They are absolutely essential for life and growth. Most vitamins are not made by the body. They must be supplied by the food we eat.

Minerals are found in all body tissues and fluids and do not furnish energy. Some minerals must be carried by proteins in the body. They help the body build tissue, regulate body processes, maintain fluid balance and use the energy from food. Some minerals are toxic in excess. Care needs to be taken with indiscriminately consuming mega-doses of any mineral. Calcium is probably the most essential mineral.

An adequate diet provides a balance of the nutrients needed to promote health and build and restore body tissues. These nutrients work in concert. To maintain health and fitness, you need to combine sound nutrition and adequate exercise. You need not only a variety of nutrients for good health, but you also need them in the right proportions. No single food provides everything in the correct amounts. Don't rely on supplements unless prescribed by a doctor. Eat good wholesome food and make these essential 40 work in perfect harmony for your good health.

DURING NATIONAL NURSING WEEK

WE PROUDLY SALUTE FOUR OF OUR OWN...

Their Dedication, Skill and Training Bring New Levels of Excellence to Health Care!

PEGGY PELLOSKI, RN, currently working in the Medical Intensive Care Unit of a local hospital. A nurse for 14 years, 10 with METROSTAFF, she views her current assignment "to be stressful, yet rewarding." Married and mother of 3 boys, she has sought flexibility in her career, yet always with the goal of "maintaining professionalism."

PAULA JONES, LPN, likes variety in her assignments, either in a Hospital or Home Care setting. An LPN for 5 years, 2 with METROSTAFF, She was previously a Lab Technician who "missed patient contact," resulting in her going back to school for nursing training. She enjoys working with "skilled caring people" at all levels."

GERRY SKELL, RN, received his Nursing degree from Wayne State Univ. Father of six, with a wife who is a nurse, he has been in Health Care for 20 years, 7 with METROSTAFF. He prefers home care where he "can be creative" in challenging patients "to not give up and start living." A Certified Child Birth Educator, he has also worked as a Respiratory Therapist and IV Technician.

SARAH DOKES, Home Health Aide, has worked in her chosen field for 22 years, 12 with METROSTAFF. She took her training at Long Beach Memorial Hosp. (NY) and has made a lifetime career of "taking care of sick people." She stresses "putting her personal life aside, so she can concentrate on taking care of the other person's needs, by putting herself in the patient's place."

In over 20 years of striving to improve health care in Metro-Detroit, we are convinced there is really only one thing that sets our efforts apart; the quality and dedication of the people providing the care.

To those receiving care, it frequently is the warm professionalism of the Registered Nurses, LPNs or Aides who assist them. But, for care programs to be truly effective, additional Support Staff and Skilled, Highly Trained Coordinators must also be available to assist in assessing the care program during the early stages; and later to assure care will be available when needed.

To all of these skilled, caring people who make up the METROSTAFF elite Health Care teams, we offer our sincere appreciation and thanks!

Michigan's first winery got start in Windsor

Eleanor and Ray Heald

St. Julian Winery in Paw Paw is this state's oldest winery. It was founded by Mariano Meconi in Windsor, Ontario, as the Italian Wine Company in 1921. After the repeal of Prohibition in 1933, Meconi moved his operation across the river to Detroit.

To be nearer a source of fresh grapes, the winery relocated to Paw Paw in 1937.

An anti-Italian sentiment, prevalent during World War II as America fought Fascist Italy, caused Meconi to rename the winery. He chose St. Julian, the patron saint of his village birthplace in Italy.

In the late 1940s, Meconi's sons Eugene and Robert and his son-in-law Apollo Braganini expanded the winery's influence. Through the 1970s — a heightened period of interest in dry wine nationwide — St. Julian Winery responded by planting French-American hybrid grape varieties, capable of withstanding the state's sub-freezing winter temperatures.

Since 1978, under the direction of David Braganini, Apollo's son, St. Julian Winery has become the state's largest single buyer of the hybrid grape varieties Chambourcin, Chelois, Cayuga White, deChaunac, Foch, Chancellor Noir, Seyval Blanc and Vidal Blanc. These varieties produce dry, semidry and sparkling wines.

WINE SELECTION OF THE WEEK

1987 St. Julian Chancellor Noir ($9.50). This wine spent a year aging in American oak and is highlighted by blackberry aromas and a touch of spice. It's a solid wine with a good finish. With the softness of a merlot, it is attractive and accessible.

WINE BULLETIN BOARD

Red Wagon Wine Shoppes' Spring Wine Tasting of 50 wines, pates and cheeses, in conjunction with Petruzzello's in Troy, 7-9 p.m. Monday, May 14. Cost is $18 per person with reservations (435-0719) or $20 at the door. Also featured, a tasting of the 1979 and 1983 Chateau Mouton Rothschild.

ADDITIONALLY, St. Julian produces wine from two vinifera varieties, chardonnay and johannisberg riesling, that have shown promise of survival in the cold Michigan winters.

Within the domestic wine industry, winemakers make more hops, skips and jumps among wineries than a fast-paced checker game. This frequently causes product inconsistency. This is not the case at St. Julian since winemaker Chas Catherman has been with the winery since 1974.

St. Julian Winery can lay claim to a host of firsts. Among them, it takes credit for being the first Michigan winery to establish a wine-tasting room — in 1959. Currently, more than a quarter of a million visitors tour and taste at the winery each year.

Additional tasting centers and retail outlets are located throughout the state, in Frankenmuth, Mackinaw City, Parma, Holly, Union Pier, Monroe and South Haven.

In the 1989 Michigan State Fair Wine Competition, St. Julian Winery won two first places (gold medals), for the 1988 Vignoles (Sweet Reserve) and 1986 Chancellor Noir.

With a production of 45,000 cases of wine, made entirely from Michigan grapes, St. Julian is Michigan's largest producer, laying claim to 37 percent of the total sales from Michigan's 20 wineries.

A recent tasting of some of the winery's newest releases gives clear indication that St. Julian has the potential for remaining at the top of the state's wine industry.

BECAUSE OF limited chardonnay plantings within the Lake Michigan Shore appellation, there are only 80 cases of the 1989 Chardonnay ($14). Grapes for this wine were purchased at the premium price of $1,500 per ton. The wine is Chablis-like, with typical earthy, steely aromas, but solid appley, pear flavors.

It was 100 percent barrel-fermented in one-year-old Nevers French oak and left four months sur lie for added complexity. Its crispness makes it a natural seafood accompaniement.

"Vignoles is an interesting wine to sell," Braganini contends. "People are unfamiliar with it and are surprised to find how comparable it is to the style of a California chardonnay."

The 1988 Vignoles ($9.50) is bone dry with good fruit characters. Its bold style is reminiscent of California chardonnay and its clean, fruit finish is appealing.

Punctual harvest (as opposed to late harvest) 1989 Riesling ($9.50) showcases floral, apple blossom and appley fruit with hints of orange zest. The 1.75 percent residual sugar is not evident on the palate because it is balanced by high-side acidity which keeps it fresh and clean. It's a clear winner at this price.

"SEYVAL BLANC is our most popular wine," remarks Braganini. "We call it Paw Paw Piesporter." The 1989 version ($5.50) is too sweet, by our standards, to accompany food, but it is a nice springtime sipper with fruit and mild cheese.

St. Julian produces an outstanding, lighter-style red wine from chambourcin grapes. The 1988 Chambourcin ($9.50) sports berry, cherry, fruit characters with hints of American oak. It's soft and approachable — a red wine for people who say, "I don't like red wine."

If you like cream sherry, St. Julian produces one of the best. It's labeled Michigan Light Solera Cream Sherry ($7.50/500mL). Wines in the solera date back to 1971. It's full, rich, nutty, and a dessert in itself. It could be poured over vanilla ice cream or incorporated in a vanilla cheese cake recipe.

May is Michigan Wine Month. Celebrate it by trying wines from St. Julian or another of Michigan's wineries. New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland are some of the states that have developed a real grassroots pride in their wine industry. Let's get it going in Michigan.

Glenn fights off rival, wins Observer title

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Mike DeJarnett of Plymouth Canton missed this attempt at jumping 6-2, but he still had the best individual jump at 6 feet Saturday in the annual Observerland Relays. DeJarnett's best jump this season is 6-4. Salem finished fourth in the 15-team meet, half a point behind Redford Catholic Central, and the Chiefs were sixth.

By Brad Emons
staff writer

The dual meet between Westland John Glenn and Wayne Memorial is set for Tuesday, but the two boys track teams, for all intents and purposes, got things rolling on Saturday in the 20th running of the Observerland Relays at Livonia Churchill High.

Glenn earned its second Observerland crown with a team-high 98 points.

The Rockets, who last won the title in 1987, found neighbor Wayne, the 1988 champ, right on their heels for most of the night.

Wayne finished a strong second with 82, while Redford Catholic Central edged Plymouth Salem out for third, 59½ to 59. Host Churchill, last year's winner, took fifth with 48½.

With the win came a big sigh of relief from Glenn coach Richard Gordon.

"Everybody didn't think Wayne would be there, but I knew better, I told you so," said the Glenn coach. "It was not won until the end of the meet. When our shuttle hurdles team took fourth, that's when I thought we could win the meet. It was great to see because they weren't expected to score in that event."

BY FINISHING FOURTH, the foursome of Andrew Hodge, Rob Facione, Gamal Ahmed and Ed Kwilos put the Rockets in the catbird's seat with only the 400 and 1,600 relays remaining.

And Glenn sewed up the meet by winning the final two events.

Wayne, meanwhile, came up empty in the shuttle hurdles on a disqualification (false start).

But it was a fruitful day of competition as far as first-year Wayne coach Bob Lynn was concerned. The Zebras, plagued by discipline problems during the first month of the year, realized their enormous potential.

"We did a lot better than people thought, I'm proud of them all," said the Wayne coach. "The DQ in the hurdles hurt and we were missing a key sprinter, but we did very well. I knew Glenn would do well because of their depth, but we were a little bit of a surprise. We got some respect back."

There were plenty of heroes for Glenn, but the most valuable was senior Carl Lowe, who figured in four first-place finishes.

LOWE ANCHORED the winning 1,600 relay (3:31.0) to put an exclamation point on the win, fending off stiff challenges from Wayne's Carlos Horne on the home stretch and CC's Dave Baucus on the back stretch.

Lowe got the baton 15 meters in front, but suddenly found himself in a dogfight with Horne.

"I tried to stride it out and listen to the crowd, but then I saw him (Horne) and I said to myself, 'I got to do something,' " Lowe said. "We've been racing since the eighth grade. It's been me and Horne all the way through. He's like a brother to me."

Chris Gumke, David Ryan and Randy Seach were others on the 1,600 relay.

Lowe also anchored the victorious sprint medley team, which also included Gumke, Seach and Dobbins.

Lowe also led off the anchor (800) leg of the distance medley, joining forces with Gumke, Matt Maybouer and Ryan for first.

Another Glenn first came in the 400 relay (45.2) as Dobbins was the anchor leg for teammates Lamar Ellison, Pizzuti and Brian Schultz. The pole vault relay of Joe Sopko, Rob Conde and Dan Lago also took first.

"WE HAD a lot of unsung heroes," Gordon said. "Joe Rajewski got us two points in the open 1,600. Dan Lago goes 12 feet in the pole vault and gave us a chance to compete in the running events. Our field event kids had to give us some help and there was no position lower than third in those events. And I can't say enough about Dobbins, Ryan and Lowe. And with Ellison, Schultz and Pizzuti, we get three fresh legs in the 400 relay.

"This was not an easy meet. The kids showed a lot of heart and they did not want to get beat. But we have to go again Tuesday against Wayne."

Wayne's long jump relay squad of Jason Hodge, Shawn Ma-Azza and Allen Buford broke the meet's only record with a combined leap of 62 feet, 6 inches, breaking the mark of 62-4 set by Farmington in 1980. (Hodge had the best jump at 21-2¾.)

Wayne also captured the long jump relay as Joe Dumont, James Grady and Terry Hall each cleared 5-10.

CC scored only a half-point in the field events (tied for sixth in the high jump), but it was an all-important point as the Shamrocks edged Salem for third.

"IT WAS TOO much of a deficit to make up," said CC coach Tony Magni. "I thought we'd do better in the high jump, but other than that we got just about every place I thought we'd get."

Mike Sheridan and Mike Krasko each figured in CC's winning 6,400 and 3,200 relay squads. In the open 1,600, CC's Dave Galvin held off Churchill's Scott Westover and Salem's Brian Urgya to win in 4:33.0.

CC's Dave Owens won a close 100 dash, edging Steve Johnson of Redford Bishop Borgess, Ma-Azza of Wayne and Dobbins of Glenn.

In the 110 hurdles, Salem's Steve Burlison went 15.3 to fight off challenges from Pierre Hixon of Wayne and Marcus Pierce of Churchill.

In probably the meet's lightest moment, Churchill sophomore Nathan Loosle made a quick Clark Kent to Superman-like change (to his running attire) just before the starting gun of the shuttle hurdle relay. The only thing missing was the phone booth.

Loosle was apparently unaware of the starting call, but jumped just in time for the third leg, teaming up with Pierce, Chris Muzo and Dennis Leahy for a first-place time of 1:00.3.

Farmington Harrison, meanwhile, owned the throwing events, taking the shot put and discus relays.

Rocks suffer first loss in Lakes clash

By Dan O'Meara

Farmington shared the Lakes Division girls soccer title with Plymouth Salem last year, but that's not likely to happen again.

The Falcons took a giant step toward winning the championship outright Friday when they rallied in the second half to defeat the Rocks 3-1.

"After they scored, it's almost like it lit a fire under us," Farmington coach Cathy Cole said. "They did not want to lose this game."

After a scoreless first half on the soggy, rain-soaked turf at Farmington High School, Salem led 1-0 on Michele Minton's goal, but the Falcons responded with goals by Carrie Maier, Jody Perris and Sue Gibson.

Farmington is 3-0 in the division and 7-1 overall, and the Falcons need a victory today over last-place Walled Lake Central to make sole claim to the Lakes crown.

THE ROCKS suffered their first loss, slipping to 1-1 in the Lakes and 3-1-3 overall.

"We want the division title bad, and we have to play well at Central," Cole said. "We overcame this obstacle, and we're moving on to Central."

Minton took a pass from Mandy Drummond early in the second half to give Salem a short-lived advantage.

Maier tied the score while demonstrating her skill. She brought the ball up on the left side, dribbled into the middle and fired a shot from 25 yards out that was too high for Salem goalkeeper Jenny Emmett to reach.

"Michelle Lorenz took time and looked for an open player," Cole said, "and she was able to hit Carrie on the run."

The winning goal by Perris was slightly controversial and drew a delayed, but nonetheless, jubilant response from the Farmington players.

Perris, redirecting a corner throw-in by Kim Popyk, headed the ball into the Salem goal, but there was some question, momentarily, as to whether or not it actually crossed the goal line. Salem defender Jennifer Marshall quickly kicked the ball out of the net, adding to the impression it was not a goal.

"SOME OF the girls said it was close, so (the ball) was right there," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "It's one of those things that happen in soccer."

"The whole ball went over the line, and it looked like one of their players kicked it back," Cole said. "But the linesman was right there to make the call."

Nobody could accuse Farmington of winning on a fluke goal as the Falcons shut out Salem for the remainder of the half and added an insurance goal from Gibson.

Tonya Slicker's wide-open shot from the right side was deflected, and Gibson fired the rebound back from the opposite side to make it 3-1.

The Falcons dominated the second half despite playing on a wet, slow field that made the footing heavy and slippery, and Gibson's goal was evidence the game had definitely taken a Farmington turn in the last 40 minutes.

Canton, Salem breeze to dual-meet successes

This year's Mangan Meet presents a showdown between a pair of girls track teams undefeated in dual meets.

Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem earned second consecutive victories Thursday as the host Chiefs routed Northville 94-34 and the visiting Rocks smoked Westland John Glenn 77-51.

Canton is 2-0 in the Western Division and overall, and Salem is the same in the Lakes Division and for the season.

The Chiefs and Rocks, who finished one-two in the Tiger Relays at Belleville on April 28, have their annual dual meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday on the Centennial Educational Park track.

Canton's Ifoema Okwumabua and Jessica Souter won two events apiece and also were members of the winning 400-meter relay squad Thursday.

Okwumabua was first in the shot put (30-11) and the discus (98-3). Souter's victories came in the 100 dash (13.8) and the long jump (15-2).

They combined with Angela Fountain, the leadoff runner, and Karina Kilpelainen, the anchor person, to win the 400 relay in 55.1.

Christie Saffron won the open 400 with a 1:04.9 time and also participated in a successful relay, and Kilpelainen and Fountain were individual winners, too, in the hurdles. Fountain won the 100 race (16.9) and Kilpelainen the 300 contest (51.3).

Saffron started the 3200 relay and was followed by Missy Jasnowski, Lara Antczak and Monica Pellow, the Chiefs finishing in 10:57.2.

Other individual winners for Canton were Stephanie Gray in the high jump (5-1), Amy Smith in the 1600 run (5:45.1) and Adrienne Garrow in the 3200 run (12:57.6).

The Chiefs also captured first place in the 1600 relay with Jennifer Hartke, Becky Johnson, Jennifer Sobolak and Kim Gudeth combining efforts for a 4:36.6 showing.

JENNIFER HARRIS won three events to lead Salem, and teammates Yolanda Jackson, Andrea Kinnelly, Tammy Hickey and Stacey Witthoff contributed two victories each.

Harris reached a height of 5-3 in the jump and won both hurdles races with times of 16.2 in the 100 and 49.3 in the 300.

Jackson won the 100 dash (13.01) and anchored the 800 relay that included Kim Ploucha, Tonya Wheeler and Kinnelly and had a 1:53.4 time.

Kinnelly also won the 200 dash (27.5), and Hickey was first in the 1600 and 3200 runs with times of 5:46.9 and 12:11.1.

Witthoff was the lead runner on the 3200 relay, which had an 11:02.8 time with Allison Rybski, Cindi Platter and Corey Gulkewicz contributing to the team effort. Witthoff also won the 800 run (2:36.1) and Marth Boi the 400 run (1:06).

Kalee Smith of Canton was second in her heat of the 100-meter hurdles Thursday. The Chiefs crushed Northville 94-34 for their second dual-meet victory in girls track.

Chiefs stay atop Western

soccer

'Jenny (Russell) kept plugging away at their defense. One of her shots was bound to go in and, luckily for us, it did . . . Jori (Welchans) kept us in it with some nice saves at the end. She has really grown as a player and handled the pressure well at the end of the game.'

Canton soccer coach

It always seems the great players perform at their best when the game is on the line.

Saturday's Plymouth Canton-Northville soccer encounter was no different, as senior standout Jenny Russell broke a scoreless tie with 11 minutes remaining to give the host Chiefs a 1-0 victory.

Russell, an All-American forward, said the play, in which she won the battle for a loose ball, was just a case of being in the right place at the right time.

"I just had to keep putting myself into a position to create opportunities for myself to score," Russell said. "I was just fortunate to get a shot off and have it go in."

CANTON COACH Don Smith said Russell's ability to put pressure on the Northville defenders, allowed her to score and keep the Chiefs unbeaten. Canton is 3-0-1 in the Western Division and 6-0-2 overall.

"Jenny kept plugging away at their defense," he said. "One of her shots was bound to go in and, luckily for us, it did."

Following Russell's goal, the Mustangs applied solid pressure in the Canton zone, forcing Chief goalkeeper Jori Welchans to remain sharp.

Just a freshman, Welchans is highly thought of by Smith, and her performance in the key defense game did not go unnoticed.

"Jori kept us in it with some nice saves at the end," Smith said. "She has really grown as a player and handled the pressure well at the end of the game."

Smith said the win was very big for the Canton team.

"This was a good game for us," he said. "We played hard, made the most of our chances and got the win. We did our job."

NORTHVILLE COACH Bob Paul was quick to praise the effort of Canton and just as quick to criticize his team's play.

"When you have two teams of equal talent like we had on this field today, it all comes down to who wants it more, and they wanted it more here today," Paul said. "We felt confident going into the game, but they outplayed us and they deserved to win."

Northville's record drops to 7-1-2, something Paul would like to see improved.

"We have to rebound from this loss," he said. "We are going to have to regroup and play like we are capable of playing. This was a big game for us. It's too bad we couldn't have gotten more out of it."

THE NORTHVILLE game marked the second straight in which Russell scored the only goal. Her goal with six minutes remaining in the first half Wednesday gave Canton a 1-0 victory over host Livonia Stevenson.

The Chiefs tallied 15 shots on goal in the Western Lakes Activities Association crossover game. The Spartans mustered 12, all of them stopped by Welchans.

"This is a big win for us," Smith said."

Back to basics

Salem flawless in baseball victory

Plymouth Salem got a much-needed baseball victory Thursday while Plymouth Canton added another win as it continues a successful season.

The Rocks whipped visiting Livonia Stevenson 12-1, and the Chiefs prepared for today's clash with Walled Lake Western by beating Livonia Churchill 7-3 at Canton.

Salem is 3-2 in the Lakes Division and 5-6 overall, and the Chiefs lead the Western Division with a 6-0 mark and stand 12-2 for the year.

Tom Noonan and Tracey Ewald had big games at the plate for Salem, helping to make a winner of Jeff Paluk, who pitched five innings for the victory.

Noonan had two hits, including a three-run double during a six-run second inning that gave Salem a 9-0 lead, and collected four RBI. Ewald had three hits in four trips and three RBI.

Paluk, a senior right-hander, allowed only three hits and didn't walk anybody. He also struck out four before giving way to Steve Mantays, who worked the last two innings.

"We needed to get back to pitching and defense — and we did that," Salem coach John Gravlin said.

"We didn't make any errors, and we didn't walk anyone. If we can do that, we can play with anybody. That park has not been kind to us, and I was glad to get a win there."

Additional hitting support came from Kevin Craggs, who had two hits and two RBI, and Mantays, who had a two-run single in the three-run first. The Rocks had 117 hits in their first 11 games for an average of 10½.

John Keblaitis had two hits and one RBI for Stevenson. Matt Slotka pitched the opening 1⅓ innings and took the loss after allowing eight earned runs on six hits and five walks. The Spartans, 1-5 and 4-8, made three errors.

GEOFF ALLEN continues to have a fine season for Canton. He earned a complete-game victory and also helped himself with the bat.

Allen, who scattered five hits over seven innings, had a pair of doubles and three RBI. He recorded nine strikeouts and walked five.

Senior catcher Jason Dembny also had two hits and knocked in one run, and Jason Riggs and Ron Groh added RBI singles.

Jason Gabel's two hits included a two-run homer for Churchill. Dan Ackerman pitched seven innings, giving up nine hits and four walks.

The Chiefs, the division leaders, play second-place Walled Lake Western on the road at 4 p.m. today.

"Having to travel and play out there is always pretty tough," Canton coach Fred Crissey said. "We thought they had pretty good talent (when the Chiefs won the first meeting 2-0), but I don't think it's a make or break situation."

Rocks win slugfest with Spartans softball

Emily Giuliani's eighth inning triple brought in the winning run and gave Plymouth Salem an 18-17 victory over Livonia Stevenson in softball Thursday.

Giuliani, who had three hits in five trips and three RBI, produced the decisive hit after Missy Holmes drew a walk.

The visiting Spartans took a 15-9 lead with a nine-run fifth inning and made it 17-13 with two more in the top of the seventh.

Salem, 2-3 in the Lakes Division and 3-8 overall, scored four times in the bottom of the inning and tied the score on a wild pitch.

Heather English had three hits for the Rocks, and Stephanie Turek had two hits and one RBI. Holly Lewis collected three hits for Stevenson.

Jenny Garvey was the winning pitcher, throwing the last four innings. The Spartans had five of their 12 hits while she was on the mound, and she struck out four and walked seven.

The Rocks had 14 hits. Stevenson pitchers issued 17 walks, Salem 12. Both teams made four errors.

KELLY HOLMES tossed a one-hitter Thursday as Plymouth Canton mercied host Livonia Churchill 14-0 in five innings. Holmes struck out 10 and walked two.

Stacey Thompson continues to swing a hot bat for the Chiefs, 5-0 in the Western Division and 12-1 overall. She had four hits in as many plate appearances, scored two runs and drove in two runs.

Canton had 17 hits with Kris Ford, Jenny Sekovich, Ann Hooper, Renee Dory and Val Gildhaus contributing two apiece. Dory also had three RBI and scored three runs.

Ford, who added two RBI, Sekovich and Hooper also scored two runs each.

In the second game of the doubleheader — a non-league contest — Canton had an 8-2 victory as Thompson pitched a two-hitter and had three hits.

Sekovich hit safely twice. The Chiefs broke a 2-2 tie with a run in the fifth and scored five times in the sixth on three hits, two walks and two errors.

in the field events. Kerstin Henry won the shot put (29-5½) and the discus (88-11) and Lynette Connor the long jump (14-2½).

Catina Connor, Lisa Dupree, Pam Gnacke and Lynette Connor won the 400 relay (53.8) and Dana Nowicki, Amy Finley, Michelle Henry and Michel Bratcher the 1600 relay (4:30.2).

CANTON AND SALEM dominated the Tiger Relays at Belleville High School, the Chiefs scoring 118 points and the Rocks 109.

The host team was third (45) followed by Livonia Churchill (37), Wyandotte (32), Inkster (22), Garden City (21) and Taylor Truman (6).

Canton placed either first or second in 13 of the 15 events, accumulating seven victories.

"Basically, it was a dual meet between Salem and ourselves," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "Kilpelainen had a great meet. Smith and Garrow ran some great races, and Gudeth had a nice meet.

"It's hard to single anyone out when all you're doing is taking firsts and seconds. The key is to score in every event, and we did that again in this meet."

Gina Fuerst, Dawn Kersten and Selena Bastine had a 235-11 total in the discus relay. Karina Kilpelainen ran the open 110 hurdles in 17.1 and combined with Fountain, Michelle Lee and Khristina Kozuch to do the shuttle hurdles in 1:11.3.

Canton victories in running events:

- The four-mile relay (Smith, Garrow, Jasnowski and Antczak), 25:16.5.
- The distance medley relay (Gudeth, Kristy Brugar, Garrow and Smith), 14:09.7.
- The two-mile relay (Gudeth, Christie Saffron, Monica Pellow and Smith), 11:04.1.
- The mile relay (Jennifer Hartke, Saffron, Brugar and Gudeth), 4:24.4.

The trio of Fuerst, Bastine and Kersten also was second in the shot put relay (75-2), and Fountain was runner-up in the open 110 hurdles (17.3).

The Chiefs had four additional seconds:

- The long jump (Souter, Tricia Russo and Heather Pastor), 39-10½.
- The high jump (Gray, Michelle Dean and Amy Lanzon), 14-0.
- The 800 relay (Brugar, Kilpelainen, Dean and Alicia King), 1:53.8.
- The 400 relay (Souter, Brugar, Kilpelainen and King), 54.1.

In the events Canton didn't win or place second, King was fourth (13.3) and Souter fifth (13.6) in the open 100 dash, and Jasnowski (6:13.2) was fifth in the open mile run.

Canton boys undefeated in Western dual meets

The Plymouth Canton boys track team improved its Western Division dual-meet record to 2-0 Thursday by defeating host Northville 79-58.

The Chiefs are 3-0 overall and will run against Plymouth Salem in the annual Mangan Meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday at Centennial Educational Park.

Canton junior Josh Walaskay captured first place in the 100- and 200-meter dashes in 11.2 and 23.8. He also joined with James Holmes, Jeremy Rheault and Craig Piwko to win the 400 relay (46.5).

Other individual winners for Canton include Jeff Pryslak, high hurdles (17.3); Dave Washenko, 400 run (54.6); Ron Staples, 800 run (2:07.2); Mike Ream, 1600 run (4:36.5); and Brian Beach, 3200 run (9:52.4).

The Chiefs were victorious in the 800 and 3200 relays, boasting times of 1:36.1 and 8:44.5, respectively.

Rheault, Karl Wukie, Piwko and Pryslak made up the 800 team, while Staples, Washenko, Ream and Chris Nelson comprised the 3200 team.

PLYMOUTH SALEM was overcome by Lakes Division powerhouse Westland John Glenn, losing to the visiting Rockets 87-50 Thursday.

Rob Casler claimed first place in the discus (132-7) and shot put (44-1½) to lead the Rocks, 1-1 in division duals.

Other Salem winners were Leon Hister, long jump (20-7¼); Steve Burlison, high hurdles (15.2); Mike Patterson, 800 run (2:04); and Brian Uryga, 3200 run (10:24).

David Ryan captured the mile (4:32.3) for John Glenn. He also joined with teammates Randy Seach, Chris Gumke and Carl Lowe to win the 1600 relay (3:38.1).

Other winners for the Rockets include Dan Lago, pole vault; Lowe, 400 run (52.6); Andrew Dobbins, 200 dash (23.0); and Ed Kwilos, 300 hurdles (42.5).

LaMar Ellison, Jason Pizzuti, Brian Schultz and Dobbins combined to win the 400 relay (45.5). Seach, Kwilos, Lowe and Dobbins took the 800 relay (1:34.1).

Bowlers enter banquet season

bowling

BANQUET TIME is upon us, the Ward-Burger King Youth Traveling Classic put on the quite a spread at the Polish Century Club with the awards and trophies handed out to the young bowlers.

The Greenfield Mixed League of Farmington Hills will dine at the American Legion Hall on Newburgh Road in Livonia. They will step back in time with a '50s and '60s theme.

The Inter-Lodge Masonic League is going to en masse to downtown London, Ontario, for two nights and a dinner at the Ramada Hotel.

Many bowling leagues have a simple plan. The Bel Aire Senior House League finished the season with roll-offs and doubles, then enjoyed a nice buffet right at the bowling center in Farmington.

Some leagues just pay out everything in prize money. Without the traditional banquet, some of the members may just get together and dine out with their bowling friends to reflect on the season and plan ahead for the fall.

BANQUET TIME is also trophy time and the winners bring home those nice shiny trophies with the proper words engraved. High games or high series? How about 1989-90 First Place?

For some, the problem may be where to put another trophy. Some of the teams, as I get the information from very reliable sources, will be listed in this column in the next few weeks along with the scores.

- The Michigan Cancer Foundation's fourth annual No-Tap Tournament is currently underway at some of the local bowling centers. The Grand Prize is $4,000 with many door prizes also offered.

The competition has just been concluded at Merri Bowl in Livonia with the top 10 percent advancing to the final roll-offs on Friday, June 8 at Sterling Lanes.

There is still plenty of time to enter with one squad going this Thursday at Plum Hollow Lanes in Southfield based on any available openings.

The other sites still going on are May 15-17 Sterling Lanes in Sterling Heights; May 10-11 at Bonanza/Bronco Lanes; May 19-20 at Frontier Lanes in Mount Clemens. Entry forms are available at the counter of your local bowling center.

THE TOURNAMENT at Merri Bowl was attended by Detroit Red Wing John Chabot. He was unable to bowl because of an injury, but signed plenty of autographs. All proceeds from the tournament support cancer research and patient services.

- In case anyone hasn't gotten word, Seagrams Coolers U.S. Open tournament on the Ladies Pro Tour will be held May 24-31 at Satellite Bowl in Dearborn Heights. The event kicks off with the Pro Am competition on Thursday and Friday, May 24-25. This is open to all league-sanctioned bowlers, both male and female. The finals of the pro portion of the event will be televised live on ESPN at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 31.
- At Bel Aire Lanes, Diggers Office Supply is League Champions. The team consists of Bob Parker, Larry Basham, Gary Sachau, Tom Shaw and John Craig.
- Bel Aire is accepting applications now for a Men's Summer Trio. The league assembles every 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. There is a $1,800 first prize.
- Westland Bowl is now taking applications for the Thursday Night Summer Trio League which offers a $3,000 pay off for first place based on 60 teams. They will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 17 with a league meeting. Bowling starts at 8 p.m.

Falcons claim Lakes leadership

"I think it was just a matter of getting used to what the conditions were like," Cole said. "Once we got our bearings and adjusted, we were able to go.

"YOU COULD feel it. It was like the whole momentum had swung, and you have to capitalize on that. We had good team work. The girls had to do a lot of switching, and they worked well together today."

Maier's goal was the result of a fine individual effort, but the other two reflected the Farmington team work.

"We needed to get a couple good shots on this goalkeeper," Cole said, referring to Emmett, an all-star last year as a freshman. "She's a good goalkeeper, and we knew we'd have to get good shots on goal and catch her moving side to side.

"She was caught turning, and we got her attention away, which is what we wanted to do. I kept sending a player on goal. We wanted to pressure her as much as possible in close to the goal."

Johnson wished the Rocks had capitalized on some of their first-half opportunities. Salem attempted six shots on goal before halftime, the Falcons five. Both teams had four in the second half.

"We played well in the first half but missed about three good chances," Johnson said. "We let the other team off the hook kind of thing by not taking advantage of our chances."

ERIN HARVEY had a close-range shot blocked by a diving Popyk, and Sara Hayes had her rebound attempt stopped by Mandy Cannon, who was in goal the entire game.

Farmington takes turn at winning game in 7th

After losing a one-run baseball game in the bottom of the seventh inning earlier in the week, Farmington beat Westland John Glenn the same way Thursday.

Eric Miller's squeeze bunt with the bases loaded scored Kevin Young and gave the Falcons an 8-7 victory, their second over the Rockets.

Farmington is 4-1 in the Lakes Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association and 7-1 overall. Glenn is 3-2 in the division and one game behind the Falcons and North Farmington.

Farmington loaded the bases with one out in the seventh on back-to-back hits by Young and Chris Schmid and a fielder's choice by Kevin Van Ord.

Van Ord hit a line drive back to the pitcher, who tried unsuccessfully to get the force on Schmid at second. Miller laid down a bunt along the first-base line and beat the throw.

Young, the winning pitcher, and Schmid were 3-for-4, and Young also scored two runs and had one RBI.

Young pitched three innings in relief of Schmid, who left with a 6-5 lead. Brian Stephenson, who allowed three of Farmington's 10 hits and didn't walk anyone, worked 2⅓ innings and was the loser. Glenn made four errors.

Stephenson had two hits and two RBI, Eric Stover two hits and one RBI.

NORTH FARMINGTON scored three runs in the third inning and breezed to a 4-2 victory Thursday over visiting Walled Lake Central.

Dave Rankin had two doubles and a pair of RBI for the winners, who improved to 7-1 overall and 4-1 in the Lakes Division. Jason Horwitz added a two-run single.

"We didn't play particularly well, but Central played well after we beat them 19-2 on Saturday," North coach Irv Horwitz said.

Mike Powers completed 6⅓ innings and picked up the win. The junior right-hander fanned one and walked two. Chris White pitched the final two-thirds of an inning and earned the save.

Central's David Hecox was the losing pitcher, fanning three and walking three in six innings of work.

Joe Sharpe had an RBI double for the Vikings, who slipped to 0-5 and 2-5.

Balaj leaves Clarenceville

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Vic Balaj, who guided Livonia Clarenceville's football team to a 7-2 record last fall, is leaving after only one season to become an assistant coach at Wayne State University.

On Friday, Balaj confirmed that he had turned in his resignation to Clarenceville principal Dave Simowski but has not yet informed his players.

Balaj, who said "It was a hard decision for me and it hurts down inside," plans to meet with underclassmen Friday at the school.

Word, however, has filtered down to some of the players, who are reportedly upset with Balaj's abrupt departure.

"I knew other schools would be after him, especially after the successful season we had," said Simowski. "I was hoping hard to keep him on board, but he saw an opportunity and he felt it was an experience that he couldn't pass up."

Simowski said several persons have asked about Balaj's move during a meeting Monday night.

"IT'S NOT KNOWN by everybody, but I think they (the players) will be disappointed," said the Clarenceville principal. "They're very disappointed because they gave 100 percent-plus for Vic. I'm sure they feel let down, but once we get a new coach and he gets started, they'll put all their energies into the season next fall."

football

Ironically, Clarenceville athletic director Leo Kinsella did not receive a formal letter of resignation, according to the principal.

"Leo knew Vic was talking to other schools and knew he worked with the Wayne State team during spring ball," Simowski said. "He had an idea what was going on."

Balaj said the move to become a college assistant coach "is a normal step of progression in my career."

"Joe Horn's (the Wayne State coach) philosophy is similar to mine," said Balaj. "We'll run the 'run-and-shoot' and I'll be involved with the passing game and work with the receivers. The head coach and I are very compatible in our thinking. I'll be a full-time position coach."

BALAJ, 32, succeeded longtime Clarenceville coach Ralph Weddle, who retired at the end of the 1988 season.

Under Balaj, the Trojans, a Class C school with 512 students, set several offensive records in 1989 en route to a second place finish in the Metro Conference.

Previously, Balaj spent eight seasons a defensive coordinator at Dearborn Divine Child High where he teaches social studies. He was also an offensive coordinator at Utica Ford High.

"When you leave a good relationship it's got to affect you," Balaj said. "The thing I'll remember about Clarenceville is the way the kids played as a team. They played together. If anything, we were a family for three months."

Simowski said finding a replacement for Balaj will be difficult.

"Vic did one heck of a job and we were pleased to have him, even if it's only for a year," said the principal. "We'll try, but finding a good football coach is hard to come by. We'll just have to pound the pavement and see. I'm hoping somebody good can come in there, but I don't know who. We have to move rather quickly."

SIMOWSKI said he is unsure whether any viable candidates within the district will apply.

"We'd like to go inside, just to make daily contact with the kids in the school," said the Clarenceville principal. "But hiring a combination teacher-coach is still a few years down the road."

But where does that road lead to next season?

Vikings edge North in 9th inning

Cindy Muha belted a two-out, solo home run in the bottom of the ninth inning Thursday, lifting Walled Lake Central to a 4-3 softball victory over visiting North Farmington.

The win gives Central sole possession of first place in the Lakes Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association with a 4-1 record. The Vikings are 6-2 overall. North slipped to 3-2 and 8-2.

"It was a real good game," North coach Dave Brubaker said. "It's a shame to see anyone lose, because both teams did a nice job.

"I thought we hit the ball well — we just hit it right at everybody. Their left fielder (freshman Toni Flood) saved the game for them a couple times with a pair of nice running catches. If she wouldn't have got to one of those balls, we would have taken the lead."

North struck first with a run in the top of the second inning. Eve Claar opened the inning with a triple and scored on an RBI single by Kim Gurecki.

Central got on track with three runs in the fifth. With Muha and Carrie Cassinski on base, Kelly Glennie hit a three-run homer.

North closed the gap to 3-2 in the sixth inning when Courtney Knapp singled and scored on an RBI triple by Jennifer Lydon.

Amy Post opened the top of the seventh with a single for North. Pinch runner Andrea Borieo moved to second on a passed ball, took third on a ground out and tied the game at 3-3 on a sacrifice fly by Gurecki.

Jill Glennie and Kelly Glennie led the Central offense with two hits each.

"North is a tough team," Central coach Gordon Glennie said. "They beat us over at their field. We're playing solid defense, and our pitching has been good. Our hitting is starting to get a little better."

Cassinski picked up the win for the Vikings and improved her personal record to 5-2. She went the distance, gave up six hits, struck out three and walked none.

Lyndon took the loss for the Raiders despite fanning eight and walking just one.

WESTLAND JOHN Glenn won its fifth straight game Thursday at the expense of visiting Farmington, 12-5.

The Rockets, 4-2 in the Lakes Division and 7-3 overall, outhit Farmington 10-4 and got two hits apiece from Michelle Myers, Karen Olack and Joan Pitera, who also had two RBI.

Jenny Massey pitched six innings for the victory. She allowed all of the Farmington hits and walked nine. She didn't have any strikeouts.

Patty Hansen was the losing pitcher, going five innings and giving up 11 runs on 10 hits and six walks. Mary Brish had two hits for the Falcons, 1-4 and 2-7.

DEFENDING WLAA champion Northville trounced Farmington Hills Harrison 22-0 Thursday, taking advantage of 13 errors and eight walks by the host Hawks.

Q. I have a small manufacturing plant and would like to be able to hire more seasoned workers. I have a feeling that older workers will be more dependable and reliable and certainly have more experience.

A. Operation of ABLE of Michigan is having their Fourth Annual "Ability Is Ageless" Job Fair on Wednesday, May 23 at the Days Hotel, Southfield. Operation ABLE is a nonprofit organization working to expand employment opportunities for workers 45 years and older. Acting as an employment agency and a liason between older workers and prospective employers, Operation ABLE also promotes the hiring of mature workers by offering information and assistance to the business community.

The Ability is Ageless Job Fair provides businesses and workers the opportunity to meet each other and will probably attract 600 to 800 individuals actively seeking employment. Companies are invited to purchase display booths for $75 for the day. Some space is still available. There is no charge to those seeking jobs. The fair is sponsored by Operation ABLE of Michigan with the support of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation and the member organizations of the Southeast Michigan Older Worker Coordinating Committee.

For additional information call Operation Able at (313) 443-0370, Monday-Friday, 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

She tells of battle with scleroderma

In 1981, Joanne Suhr was told by doctors at the Mayo Clinic that she had three months to live unless she received plasmapheresis.

Suhr scoffed at their prediction. She declined to have the blood treatment and discontinued medications. She literally took her life into her owns hands.

Nine years later, she is alive and well and traveling the country telling people how she restored her health nutritionally and conquered Scleroderma, a connective tissue disease also known as the disease that turns people to stone.

Suhr will speak about her experiences 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 15, in Community Congregational Church in Lathrup Village.

Literally meaning hard skin, the hallmark of the disease is the excessive production of collagen, the major constituent of connective tissue, which invades and destroys normal tissue.

Systemic scleroderma affects the organs, namely the esophagus, heart, lungs, intestines and kidneys.

Suhr first noticed something was wrong in 1970 when her fingers and toes turned purple and she developed ulcerations that wouldn't heal.

EVENTUALLY, a doctor diagnosed her problem as Rayand's phenomenon, a disorder that sometimes develops into Scleroderma. She developed Scleroderma and in 1978, she began visiting the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., where doctors could only treat the symptoms of the disease.

Her hands had been disfigured, her internal organs — one lung and one kidney, the pancreas and esophagus — damaged by the disease. In 1981, she had a serious bout with pneumonia and even though she took 43 pills a day, her health continued to deteriorate.

Suhr shunned the medical treatment and opted for a blood-cleansing juice fast and nutritional supplements. She cleaned her cupboards of processed foods, eliminating sugar, white flour, foods containing preservatives or dyes from her diet. Instead she drank a quart of raw carrot juice a day and vitamin supplements.

As the result of her drastic measures, an ulcer that had been on her hand for seven months healed. The color of her hands changed from a sickly purple to a natural color and she no longer suffered from heartburn, a common side effect that had scarred her esophagus.

TODAY, SHE helps run a family-owned lawn mowing service and manages her own business of holistic diets for treatment of the disease. She also has published a book, "Holiday from Death," which recounts her experiences and what she has done to keep the disease in check.

"I'm not saying I'm cured, but I have learned to control my disease," she said.

While she is delighted with the improvement of her condition, doctors believe that she is in remission. She reasons that in remission a person stays the same, doesn't get better. She, however, believes that her improved state of health is an indication that she is getting better.

"Death comes to us all. It has its place in life, but why accept a premature death sentence if you haven't explored every other avenue open to you?"

Community Congregational Church, is on Southfield Road at 11½ Mile, Lathrup Village. Advance tickets are $3 and available at DalMar & Associates, (program sponsors) 19017 Farmington Road, Livonia 48152. Tickets are $4 at the door. For more information, call 477-0320.

ACT NOW TO CUT YOUR PROPERTY TAX ASSESSMENT 20%

Richard H. Headlee, Chairman
Taxpayers United for Assessment Cuts

Dear Fellow Taxpayer:

Once again our elected public officials have demonstrated an insensitivity to the plight of the homeowners and the taxpayers in our state. Assessments are rising at significant rates. Individuals are being forced out of their homes and life-long neighborhoods. Calloused, insensitive public officials refuse to take meaningful corrective action.

This leaves no alternative to citizens but to take the actions necessary to reduce oppressive unfair property taxes.

Please sign the petition below and obtain the signatures of your neighbors and return it to our headquarters immediately.

Thank you for your assistance in our efforts to roll back your property tax assessments by 20% over the next two years.

Sincerely,

Richard H. Headlee

HEADLEE TAX CUT INITIATIVE

Headlee Tax Cut Initiative will cut your Property Tax Assessment 20%

This is your chance to write your own property tax assessment cut. Counties throughout Michigan have levied 1990 property tax assessments more than double the rate of inflation. That's not fair. If your family is fed up with budget-breaking property tax assessments, join Dick Headlee and Taxpayers United for Assessment Cuts to initiate legislation to:

1. Cut each property tax assessment 10% on December 31, 1990 and approximately 10% the next year.
2. Force the State Legislature to fund from the State General Fund any local revenue lost by the 20% cut.
3. Allow any taxpayer to bring suit in his/her own County Circuit Court to enforce this statute with attorney fees paid by the taxing body at 150% of actual expense if the taxpayer prevails. No cost of any nature shall be levied against a plaintiff taxpayer.

ACTION PLAN for HEADLEE TAX CUT INITIATIVE

A. Obtain 240,000 signatures of registered voters by May 15.
B. State Board of Canvassers, Secretary of State has up to 60 days to certify the validity of the signatures.
C. The Secretary of State will submit the exact petition language, written by taxpayers, to the State Legislature for approval or rejection. The State Legislature has 40 days to adopt or reject the petition language. If the Legislature adopts the petition language, it becomes law.
D. If the Legislature rejects the petition of taxpayers for the 20% cut on each property tax assessment in Michigan, the petition language will automatically go on the November 6, 1990 General Election Ballot.
E. If the Legislature fails to respond to taxpayers, and the Headlee Tax Cut Initiative is put on the November.6 Ballot, voters can effectively vote to cut their own property tax assessment by 20%.

Any Michigan voter may sign this petition known as the Headlee Tax Cut Initiative. First make sure that all signers on the same petition are from the same County. You don't have to have all seven spaces filled in. Any number over one is valid if the Circulator portion in the lower right corner is filled in.
Join Taxpayers United for Assessment Cuts (a registered ballot committee) by writing or calling:

INITIATION OF LEGISLATION

An initiative petition to enact legislation to amend P.A. 1893, No. 206, Sec. 27a, added by P.A. 1982, No. 589, Sec. 1, as follows: We, the people of the State of Michigan enact: Section 27a.(1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2), EACH property ASSESSMENT shall be assessed at REDUCED to 50% 45% of its true cash value ON DECEMBER 31, 1990, EACH PROPERTY ASSESSMENT SHALL BE REDUCED TO 40% OF ITS TRUE CASH VALUE ON EACH SUCCEEDING YEAR THEREAFTER, pursuant to section 3 of Article 9 of the State Constitution of 1963. (1a) A LOCAL ENTITY'S REVENUE LOSS CAUSED BY THIS STATUTE SHALL BE REIMBURSED BY THE STATE GENERAL FUND THE SAME CALENDAR YEAR OF THE LOSS IN ADDITION TO REQUIRED FUNDING IN ART. 9, SEC. 30, CONST. OF 1963. (1b) ANY TAXPAYER SHALL HAVE STANDING TO BRING SUIT, INCLUDING CLASS ACTIONS, IN THE CIRCUIT COURT WHERE THE PROPERTY IS LOCATED, TO ENFORCE THIS STATUTE. A TAXPAYER, PREVAILING ON ANY POINT OF SUCH LITIGATION SHALL HAVE AS DAMAGES FROM THE DEFENDANT, ITS ACTUAL EXPENSES OF LITIGATION INCLUDING ATTORNEY FEES, TIMES 150%. NO COST OF ANY NATURE SHALL BE LEVIED AGAINST PLAINTIFF TAXPAYER. This legislation replaces: Sec. 27a.(1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2), property shall be assessed at 50% of its true cash value pursuant to section 3 of article 9 of the state constitution of 1963.

We, the undersigned qualified and registered electors, residents of _____ County, State of Michigan, hereby respectively petition for said initiation of legislation.

WARNING — Whoever knowingly signs this petition more than once, signs a name other than his or her own, signs when not a qualified and registered elector, or sets opposite his or her signature on a petition, a date other than the actual date such signature was affixed, is violating the provisions of the Michigan Election Law.

Spring is prime season for wildflower production nature

Timothy Nowicki

SPRING is indeed the season to walk through the woods and forests of Michigan. There are few biting insects and the forest floor can be a carpet of wildflowers.

Wildflowers bloom on the forest floor in spring because they can receive enough sunlight. Leaves developing in the forest canopy will soon shade the flowers, but by then, spring wildflowers will already have flowered and set seed. By early to mid-summer, a woodland hiker will not see any evidence that there were flowers around.

One flower that can grow profusely in Michigan forests is the trout lily. The name trout lily refers to the fact that its leaves are mottled on a trout. It may also refer to the fact that it blooms when trout season begins.

Some people call it the adder's-tongue. When the yellow petals and sepals fall off, the swollen ovum where the seeds are developing, a tongue-like structure called the stigma protrudes, hence the name adder's-tongue. It also is called the dogtoothed violet, though it is not related to violets in any way. A white root and a European relative have helped coin this common name.

MOST PLANTS seen carpeting the forest floor will not produce a flower. They are too young and do not have enough energy stored in their roots to produce a flower.

Large leafed plants will produce a single yellow flower on the end of a long stem. Each flower will typically droop or hang downward.

Though yellow petals and sepals are most common, a species that produces a white flower can also be seen occasionally.

Wildflowers bloom on the forest floor in spring because they can receive enough sunlight.

Native Americans probably watched black bear eat the bulbs of this plants, or the white-tailed deer eating the green seed pods, and realized that it might be edible. Greens of this plant can be eaten raw or cooked and eaten with butter as you would a vegetable.

Years ago people made a tea from trout lily, which supposedly cured hiccups.

We do not need it for medicinal purposes today, but it sure can lift your spirits when you see it on a spring woodland walk.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

The name trout lily refers to the fact that its leaves are mottled with an earthy red, similiar to the mottling on a trout.

Pie eyed?

He's got the most famous arms in Detroit television history, but his name is far from a household word. Through the "magic" of Clyde Adler, White Fang, Black Tooth and Pookie the lion were as common to kids in the '50s and '60 as mutant turtles to kids of the '80s. And then, of course, there were those well-aimed pies that sailed across the stage of the "Soupy Sales Show." So who is Clyde Adler. Find out on Page 8D.

GOLF ETIQUETTE

by Kevin Brown

Those who love golf admit there is a certain torture to the game.

One awful tee or fairway shot can louse up the score for an entire 18-hole round.

A too-bold putt can sail past the hole, setting up a three- or four-putt green.

But if you ask golfers what frustrates them most about the sport, many will say it's slow or rude golfers, who don't know basic golf etiquette.

How important is etiquette?

"In 'The Rules of Golf,' that's the first thing you read about," said Tom Colucci who is executive director of the Michigan Professional Golfers Association, headquartered in Walled Lake. "That's what make sgolf what it is."

But alas, What poor golfer hasn't suffered a long wait in the fairway, as the group in front goofs off on the green.

And when the group finishes putting...finally...they stand there and mark scores, instead of moving quickly to the next tee.

These types set bags or park carts in front of the green, instead of off to the side where they ca be speedily recovered on the way to the next tee.

They take forever to look for lost balls and gab when the way is clear to hit tee or fairway shots.

Trying to shoot a decent score is tough enough, but some seem hellbent on putting their fellow golfers through a little extra torture.

"Almost universally these days, they take too long to play a round of golf," Colucci said.

"THE REASON for slow play is so many people are inconsiderate of the people behind them," said John Jawor, golf director of the Hilltop Glen Golf Course in Plymouth Township. "A lot of people don't understand that if you're playing slow, let the other party go through, it helps everybody enjoy the day."

One oft-repeated offense that encourages slow play, Colucci said, is "people aren't prepared to hit their shots when it's their turn."

"It's time to hit, and now they're going to find what club to use, find out what the yardage is; and people take too much time on the putting green," he said. "In most cases people play better when they take less time. But that doesn't mean they have to run through a round of golf."

Jawor laments another common breech of etiquette: "One of the first things they don't do is fix the ball marks, and they do not replace the divots.

"They have to consider these people (other golfers)," Jawor continued. "If they fix their ball mark and one other, the condition of the green would be much smoother."

BILL HANSEN

As a court recorder Angela Silver sometimes hears cases that "are really mind-boggling" or is so in awe of what she's hearing that it's hard to believe she's still typing in the information.

Just workin' '9 to 5' and beyond . . .

By Debbie Sklar
special writer

It appears that "The times, they are a changin' " in the working world. True, Dolly Parton may have screeched at the top of her lungs about "Workin' 9 to 5" in the early 1980s, but the fact is that many of today's career-oriented individuals put in more than an average eight-hour day.

Take 26-year-old court reporter Angela Silver for instance. The Oakland County resident is up at 6:15 a.m. and is out the door by 7:30 for her morning commute to Recorder's Court in Detroit.

Her average work day is usually from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., five days a week.

"It's a challenging profession because I get to hear a variety of cases, and meet a lot of interesting people," she said. 'Some of the cases that I hear are really mind-boggling. Sometimes, I get so involved, it's hard for me to believe I'm still typing in the information while I'm sitting there in awe."

Just because the evening whistle blows at 4:30 p.m. and court is adjourned doesn't mean that Silver's job is finished.

It's not until she gets back to her humble abode and slips out of her work attire into something more comfortable like sweats and a T-shirt with her hair pulled back that she begins to really work at her job.

"This is the time I have to put the transcript together," she said. 'I have to transfer what's on the recorder to paper, and depending on the length of the case, it usually takes me a couple of days to complete one trial transcript."

SILVER CREDITS her typist, Elaine Darga, as helping her out immensely with the large load.

Darga, she said, is the most dependable and accurate typist she's ever worked with. She said Darga has come to her aid many times, relieving a great deal of the stress involved in the preparation of expedited or lengthy trial transcripts.

She said she trusts Darga and considers her a friend, which results in a good working relationship.

"This job has been really great for me," she said. "It's opened my eyes to reality and how many different types of people there are out there. It's definitely made me more rounded."

Prior to her current position, Silver worked for seven months in another court, but finds the details of criminal cases more exciting in Recorder's Court.

"The pace is much busier, and it's much more hectic," she said. "While one jury is deliberating, we are often picking a new one for the next trial . . . that's how quickly we move."

She also enjoys watching a trial progress from beginning to end — "I like watching lawyers and hearing what they have to say."

SILVER GOT interested in court reporting when she was a pre-law student at Michigan State University. Now, she can point out the negatives of the job — dealing with murder cases day in and day out, wanting to escape from hearing bad things all day and having to rehash them again when she comes home at night.

"Sometimes, there are days when I want to come home after eight hours in court and just rest my fingers," she said. "But sometimes I have an obligation that needs to be met that can come as quickly as the next morning.

"And for once in my life that doesn't bother me, because I really love my job. That's pretty rare today and I've made a lot of strides to keep it that way, and that's the bottom line . . . I love what I do."

For those of you who thought the restaurant business was an easy one to work in, guess again.

For Correne Akarakcian, 26, an assistant manager at Salvatore Scallopini in Southfield, the work is difficult, but she enjoys her job.

"This job is funny," she said. "Sometimes I really don't know when one week starts or ends. You'd think by working in a restaurant, one would know what hours to eat, but honestly, I've never eaten lunch at noon or dinner at 6 o'clock sharp."

Akarakcian has a degree in hotel and restaurant institutional management from Michigan

Dabney Coleman is Burt Simpson, a cautious career policeman who becomes a daredevil super cop in "Short Time."

'Time:' So buddy, buddy

Dan Greenberg

The latest in buddy movies — "Short Time" (B, PG-13, 95 minutes) — portrays the standard police beat partners. Seattle Detective Burt Simpson (Dabney Coleman) is the mature, conservative one while his young and wild partner, Ernie (Matt Frewer), is considering the hot tub business as an investment.

Burt is divorced from his wife, (Teri Garr), who lives with their son, Dougie (Kaj-Erik Erikson). Burt is five days from retirement and playing it extremely safe. The twist on the stock buddy situation develops from a medical exam for an insurance policy so Dougie can go to Harvard. Burt gets someone else's lab report — fatal disease, two weeks to live.

No questions asked? Couldn't the lab have made a mistake? Are you sure? Nope, Burt knuckles under with quick and simple acquiescence. Suddenly, careful, conservative Burt is a demon on wheels because the Seattle Police Department's $350,000 insurance policy is only for death in the line of duty.

All this is played out against the backdrop of hijacked experimental weaponry being sold to nasty people. That's one of the problems with "Short Time" — uncredible plot contrivances. It's hard to believe that the U.S. Army would send out a truck loaded with such fantastic weaponry in the middle of the night without an escort.

But this is the movies and they can do anything. The other major fault with "Short Time" is that it keeps shifting gears — too often and too rapidly.

THERE'S THE tension and fear associated with hijacking weapons, some decent repartee between Burt and Ernie, a pretty comic car chase, the rather silly way in which the lab results are confused, the touching moments when Burt meets with his son, and when Burt reconciles with his wife. On occasion it gets overly sentimental, even maudlin, but that's not as bad as the rapid mood shifts.

Well, that keeps "Short Time" from being perfect but it's still good entertainment.

"Tales From The Darkside: The Movie" (R) is a collection of four horror tales written by Stephen King, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Michael McDowell. First a popular television series, this horror collection "brings moviegoers the stories that, frankly, we couldn't make for television," according to film's producer, Richard P. Rubinstein.

Three of the stories are told by a young boy, Timmy (Matthew Lawrence), in an attempt to forstall an unpleasant housewife, Betty (Deborah Harry), who is determined to cook Timmy for dinner.

"Lot 249" was adapted from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and stars Christian Slater as Andy Smith, a college student menaced by a 3,000-year-old mummy.

Number two is "Cat From Hell," a Stephen King story adapted by George A. Romero and starring William Hickey as a millionaire with a murderous household pet.

In addition to writing Timmy's wraparound story, Michael McDowell also penned the concluding tale, "Lover's Vow," a fairy tale, love story and horror story all rolled into one package with Rae Dawn Chong.

"Crackhouse" (R, *) is just what its title promises — woman living in dangerous inner-city area struggles to survive. With Jim Brown, Richard Roundtree, Anthony Geary and Angel Tompkins.

STILL PLAYING:

"Camille Claude" (R).

Irina Kupchenko plays an attractive single woman in need of a husband in "Lonely Woman Seeks Life Companion" at the Michigan Theatre this week. For the Screen Scene listings, see Page 4D.

Oscar-nominated (Best Actress and Foreign Film) story of Auguste Rodin's mistress, a sculptress in her own right.

"Cinema Paradiso" (A-, 120 minutes).

"Crazy People" (C-, R, 90 minutes).

Ad exec (Dudley Moore) proves that mental patients are nicer than sane people but weak and underdeveloped structure undercuts that humorous thought.

"Driving Miss Daisy" (A) (PG) 100 minutes.

Fine acting highlights personal drama of Jewish widow (Jessica Tandy) chauffeured by a black man (Morgan Freeman) set against southern changes from 1948-1973.

"Ernest Goes to Jail" (*, PG).

Excellent performances can't save this weakly plotted story of a wife's (Tracy Ullman) revenge on her unfaithful husband (Kevin Kline).

"Impulse" (D, R, 120 minutes).

Theresa Russell's performance as cop caught on wrong side of murder can't save weak plot.

"Joe Versus the Volcano" (B+, (PG) 102 minutes.

A good, clean fairy tale for all ages with Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan.

"The Little Mermaid" (A) (G) 80 minutes.

Disney animation of Hans Christian Andersen tale of a mermaid in love with a human.

"Look Who's Talking" (C+) (PG-13) 97 minutes.

Contrived, poorly structured story of pregnant CPA (Kirstie Alley) and her search for a perfect father for her baby. Bruce Willis is the baby's voice.

"Miami Blues" (C-, R, 97 minutes).

Cruel psychotic (Alec Baldwin) terrorizes Miami.

"Nuns on the Run" (B, R, 95 minutes).

Two washed-up bank robbers become nuns to elude all the cops and robbers after their loot.

'Sweetie:' Weird is word for family

By John Monaghan
special writer

Back a decade ago, the "Australian New Wave" created some of the screen's best foreign films. Hollywood lured away Australia's best directors (Peter Weir, Bruce Beresford, Gillian Armstrong) and left the country dry of new talent — until now.

Jane Campion's "Sweetie," the bizarre, disjointed, unnerving story of two weird sisters, caused a stir at Cannes last year. It now arrives at the Star Rochester Theatre and the AMC Abbey for a limited run.

First we meet Kay (Karen Colston), a plain Jane clerk who is highly susceptible to superstition. A woman reads her tea leaves, informing her that she will fall for a man with a question mark for a face.

When Kay eyes a sensitive young man named Louis (Tom Lycos) with a questioning curl above a mole on his forehead, she knows he's the one. She awkwardly seduces him in a parking garage. Soon they are living together.

BUT THINGS aren't always so easy with Kay, whose excuse of a bad cold forces her into a separate bedroom exactly 13 months after their meeting. Sweetie's arrival doesn't help the situation.

Sweetie (Genevieve Lemon) is Kay's sister, a black-clad, overweight mental institution escapee with some very nasty habits. She's Kay's skeleton in the closet. "She was just born," Kay insists to Louis. "I didn't have anything to do with her."

We first meet Sweetie in bed with a weasley drug addict named Bob (Michael Lake), whom she claims is her "producer." Actually, Bob can barely produce a conversation and literally falls into his food during lunch with the girls' father.

There's something touching and pathetic about the father's affection for Sweetie, whom he's convinced has natural talent. The problem with the family is that they have let Sweetie run crazy, leaving Kay starved for affection.

Visually, "Sweetie" is striking, featuring unusual color combinations and off-center angles — the opening images of Kay's foot against the antique patterned carpeting and tinted dream sequences that partially explain Kay's distrust of trees.

WHEN LOUIS plants a tree to liven up their dreary concrete back yard, it not only surprises Kay but almost drives her nuts. "Trees scare me. They have hidden powers," Kay admits, but only after she has uprooted the sapling and hidden it under her bed.

Director Campion has been favorably compared to David Lynch, not just for her visual style, but for the way she looks beneath the seemy underside of a supposedly normal life.

Parts of "Sweetie" work better than the whole — the scattered narrative minimizes tensions. But Campion's first feature not only has more original ideas than a dozen movies, it creates a world where the abnormal becomes almost natural and characters exist solely by raw emtions and phobias.

Something concrete about Pavement

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Standing Pavement's hard-edged progressive rock sound is captured on a recently released tape, "Crowded Emptiness."

The bass player gets married and the vocalist leaves town. What's a band to do?

If the band is Standing Pavement, you look to heaven and find a harp player.

Yep, that's right. A harp player.

Shishonee Krupa joined the group in November. She performed for seven years with Art in America, a progressive rock outfit on CBS Records.

"She's the beauty of this beasty band," said percussionist Mark Evans, one of the founding members of the group.

The beauty of Standing Pavement is its hard-edged progressive rock sound, which has been captured on a recently-released tape, "Crowded Emptiness." The tape is available at several record outlets in the area.

Don't bend your ear listening for the harp stylings of Krupa, though. She wasn't around when "Crowded Emptiness" was recorded. Neither were band members Kooz and Steve Haack for that matter.

The lineup is different but the song remains the same.

Guitarist Christopher Herin and Evans are sole participants from the early days. Herin and Evans have been friends for six years, going back to Mount Pleasant when the two played in a cover band. Both moved to Detroit in 1987.

"WITH THE new members, the songs take on a different meaning," Herin said. "In Shishonee's case, she covers a lot of acoustic guitar and keyboard parts. Her harp gives it a different texture."

Also, the massive instrument brings stares from club owners and patrons alike. The person playing the harp, though, is not interested in attention.

If anything, Krupa's involvement in Standing Pavement is a welcome respite from her days with Art in America. She won't elaborate, but the experience on the major rock circuit has left an infinite bad taste.

Krupa returned from California and promptly placed an ad in the Detroit News. She wanted to hook up with a progressive rock band attuned to the music of Yes, Genesis and Supertramp. Standing Pavement found her number.

"It's fun to be out playing again," said Krupa, who lives in Farmington Hills. "I don't necessarily have to be a famous rock star."

"I do," Kooz added. "You can print that."

If that does happen, Standing Pavement will have to rely on its music that bears an undeniable resemblance to Rush or Yes. The sound definitely features a hard rock edge, making Standing Pavement more than welcomed in such venues as The Ritz and the Limelight.

WITH THE new tape, the band hopes to make inroads to clubs in Ann Arbor in the future. The Standing Pavement sound has crossover appeal. The hard rocker — perhaps even the open-minded heavy metal crowd — and the neo-progressive music buff can appreciate the tunes.

"Don't let the harp fool you," Herin said. "We can rock out."

Whatever the final result, Standing Pavement is evidence that a revisit of the '70s is just around the corner. After all, Herin states emphatically Jethro Tull did deserve a Grammy last year.

Or as Kooz added: "Lord knows we don't want to go there from a clothing standpoint, but I think the music was great."

Standing Pavement will perform Saturday, May 26, at New York, New York, 24300 Hoover, south of 10 Mile, Warren. For information, call 756-6142.

Rogers and Schmidt: Coming 'home'

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Internationally known folk artists Sally Rogers and Claudia Schmidt will come home for special Mothe's Day concerts at the Ark in Ann Arbor and Erickson Kiva in East Lansing.

Who says you can't go home?

Internationally known folk artists Sally Rogers and Claudia Schmidt are doing just that this weekend, at special Mother's Day concerts Thursday, May 10, at the Ark in Ann Arbor and Friday, May 11, at the Erickson Kiva in East Lansing.

The performances will mark the eighth annual commemoration of Mother's Day in Michigan for Rogers and Schmidt, and both the Ark and Erickson Kiva are expected to sell out.

Both mothers will attend again this year, avoiding the front row and sitting in what they hope are inconspicuous seats.

Rogers, now a Connecticut resident, was born in the northern Michigan town of Beulah and raised in Lansing. Schmidt was born in Detroit and until her recent marriage and move to Minneapolis, lived on Beaver Island off the shores of Charlevoix.

Their superior talent and refreshing material have catapulted each along divergent paths to acclaim in the worlds of folk, jazz, blues and pop music. They've headlined most major folk festivals, which in fact is how they met, became friends and began performing together.

The artists, both in their mid-30s, have recorded half a dozen solo albums each on national labels. Recently, they collaborated on their first joint effort on the Flying Fish label, "Closing the Distance."

REVIEWERS HAVE credited the duo with managing to avoid the disappointing result that often occurs when two dynamic solo performers team up.

Instead, "Closing the Distance" is a masterful presentation of Roger's homespun charm and Schmidt's funkiness. Of the 12 cuts, each performer has six lead vocals. Included are traditional tunes and a few originals with old chestnuts like Malvina Reynolds' "Gentlemen of Distinction in the Army" and the gospel song "Ezekial Saw the Wheel" sprinkled in.

Rogers, who often performs with her virtuoso banjo-playing husband Howie Bursen, has been a frequent guest on Garrison Keillor's radio show "A Prairie Home Companion." Accompanying herself on guitar and dulcimer, Rogers sings of motherhood, bums in old suits, peace and the environment.

Rogers, also a renowned children's performer and an a capella pro, is due to release her second children's album — "Piggyback Planet — Song for a Whole Earth" next month.

Schmidt sings of relationships, beauty, love, loneliness, food and hardship, deftly accompanying herself on 12-string guitar, dulcimer and the pianolin, an instrument invented in Michigan in the 1940s.

A rectangular wooden box with 52 strings, the pianolin is plucked or strummed with the left hand and bowed with the right. Its eerie sound is reminiscent of the Middle Eastern oud.

FROM SCHMIDT, be prepared for wisecracks, historical and workaday anecdotes, giggles at her own lines and poetry, both original and drawn from such poets as D.H. Lawrence, Vachel Lindsay and Wallace Stevens.

Schmidt, who has appeared on concert stages throughout the world, has been described as a weaver of spells, given her commanding offerings of folk stylings, soulful blues and jazzy pop standards.

Both the Ann Arbor and East Lansing performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Tickets are $10.50 at the Ark and $6 at the Erickson Kiva on the Michigan State University campus. For more information, call the Ark at (313) 761-1451. For details on the East Lansing performance, call the Ten Pound Fiddle at (517) 374-7450.

REVIEWS

HATS — The Blue Nile

When The Blue Nile's debut album, "A Walk Across the Rooftops," came out in 1985, the group was bombarded with praise by such influential publications as The Los Angeles Times.

This sudden attention only served to freak out the members of the band — they stayed in artistic hibernation for four years. This rather lengthy hiatus seems to have paid off — "Hats" is just a s good as "A Walk Across the Rooftops."

"Just as good" means that "Hats" doesn't break any new ground. "Hats" could have just as easily been called "A Walk Across the Rooftops II."

Those familiar with the band will know what this means — dream-like vocals over jazzy, ambient instrumentation. This band's music is so laid-back and so hypnotic that it makes Bryan Ferry seem like a hard rock singer. Well, not exactly, but almost.

This album is the sort that works well as quiet, background music or as a sound track to daydream to. In other words, if you are looking for an album that "kicks out the jams," stay away from "Hats."

The music was made for the night time — mysterious and shadowy, with an underlying sense of anticipation. Many of the song titles, "The Downtown Lights," "Let's Go Out Tonight" and "Saturday Night," for example, add to this late-night-in-the-big-city feel.

Although the album is divided into separate songs, it really plays like one long piece of work. The song, "Headlights on the Parade," blends into "From a Late Night Train" which, in turn, begins themes that are expanded upon in "Seven A.M." and so on. In other words, there is no obvious "hit single."

Like The Cowboy Junkies' album, "The Trinity Session," this unceasing mellowness can get a bit tiresome. You definitely have to be in a certain slow-motion frame of mind to enjoy this album. If you aren't, you might find yourself thinking such thoughts as "Hey guys, liven up."

On the other hand, if you're looking for a good "make out" album or music by which to go into a trance, you'll find that "Hats" is the right stuff.

GOLD AFTERNOON FIX — The Church

On "Gold Afternoon Fix," the Church takes a turn toward quieter and more atmospheric music. The group's best-known effort, 1988's "Starfish," had more of an edge or electricity than this latest offering. "Gold Afternoon Fix" sounds like a Steve Kilbey solo album than a group project.

It's entirely possible that this album wasn't, in fact, much of a group effort. After all, the four members of the band don't even live on the same continent. Marty Willson-Piper makes his home in Stockholm while the rest of the band is scattered throughout Australia.

In addition to this logistics problem, many of the band members have put out solo albums, with varying degrees of success, in the past few years. Lead vocalist Kilbey enjoyed a fair degree of success with his albums, "Earthed, Unearthed" and the lesser-known "Slow Crack," and word has it that he his working on another solo album.

Guitarist Willson-Piper found a small degree of success with "Art Attack" and the more recent "Rhyme." Even guitarist Peter Koppes attracted a small group of devoted Church followers with his two solo efforts.

On this album, Kilbey sings all the songs but two. Willson-Piper takes a turn on lead vocals on the exhilarating tune, "Russian Autumn Heart" and Steve Koppes does a fine job with "Transient." It's an odd situation because all three men seem to be equally talented, but don't get the same amount of album time.

Now, on to the mysterious title. Although it sounds like a thinly veiled reference to drugs, it is actually a reference to something more prominent in the 1990s — money. In a recent interview, Kilbey said that he came up with the title after hearing a reference on the news to fixing the price of gold each afternoon.

Yes, in the 1990s, rock and rollers title their albums after financial matters instead of drugs . . . the times, they really are a changin'.

Some fans will find the gentler sound of the album a turn for the worst. Others will be pleasantly surprised by the less harsh, more dream-like quality of the album. Give it a listen and see what you think.

— Jill Hamilton

CHEMICRAZY — That Petrol Emotion

Yes, it's a warm welcome back to That Petrol Emotion we all knew and loved. Their last two albums were evidence of the band floundering for something of an identity. Despite some strong songs, they were inconsistent and abstract.

Their last release, "End of the Millennium Psychosis Blues," even had them flirting with funk. An Irish funk band . . . almost as believable as a Tennesse ballet!

A notable difference on the packaging of this release, in comparison to their previous ones, is the absence of any printed acknowledgments of their well known sympathy with the Irish Republican cause. Instead, they are reflecting their claustrophobic observations and frustrations lyrically.

Take these examples: "Tingle" — "I couldn't care if we ran out of air" — or in "Gnaw Mark" — "Sitting all alone gnaw mark on my face, your Cuban heels stampede into place/I start shaken/I know why . . . sixth sense from a loaded gun"— from "Hey Venus" — "Figures dance and bebop, take me away from the drop, I cannot help me stand and stare."

Musically, "Chemicrazy" has the band flexing its guitar-strong muscles once again.

Most songs are written by, or have the involvement of, guitarist Ciaran McLoughlin, whose guitar melodies are powerful yet poppy (in the good sense of the word).

His lyrics, when read, are tight, claustrophobic images ("12 seconds into my past, I don't remember so don't even ask, just let it drop, just let it drop") but when delivered by singer Steve Mack's light voice they take on a non-threatening tone that lures you into the song.

Undoubtedly the best song on the album, and a forerunner for best of the year so far, is "Sensitive" with its fake chorus of "Ultrafervor . . . Head to toe . . . Sensities . . . Burns and glows . . . Helter sweiter . . . sweet and slow" leading to the fabulous "Avalanche" chorus.

Coming early on the song list, That Petrol Emotion have a hard time topping this throughout the rest of the LP/CD. But they try hard.

"Chemicrazy" is their strongest LP since their debut and is more focused. It's a marvelous example of raw pop, as it should be.

STREET SENSE

It's time to show your adaptability

Hi, Ms. Schiff:

I have a question for you. What do you do when someone becomes extremely dependent on a therapist?

This happened to me almost two years ago. I was fired from a hospital and forced to see her. I never meant to become so dependent on her, but it happened. We got very close. She was always there for me — by phone or in person — always.

So 1½ weeks before she left for a new job, she tells me, but I could not handle it. I found out where she works, but she will not respond to me. I've tried calling and writing but nothing works and it's very frustrating.

I talked to her boss one time by phone. He said he would not stop her from calling me. He also said she's staying away from me because of me, that it is not in my best interest.

Basically, the reason I will not go to another one is the void it's left, and hoping one day she will see me again. Nobody can give me the answers but her.

My only chance of ever seeing her again is to go back to the hospital, if I can. I could have went back before, but she talked me out of it. I say it's either her or work it out myself, which I cannot seem to do. But it's frustrating and very sad.

If you can suggest something, I will be grateful. Thank you.

J.C.

Dear J.C.,

I felt badly for you and for your inner turmoil. The weakness in your position is that you rigidly say that you can't do what reality dictates must be done.

To find peace rather than the pain that you currently feel, you must give up dwelling on thoughts of your previous therapist. The ideal which is rarely attainable, is to become a flexible, adaptable, coping person who can handle whatever misfortunes comes his way. Because life is uncertain and quirky, we need to be resilient if we are to enjoy it.

You say that you cannot go to another therapist because of the "void" you feel and the hope that the past one will "see you again." If you are saying that you will be unhappy if you can't have things the way you want them then your position is self-defeating.

Having said this, it may also help you to know that others have reacted similarly when their therapy ended prematurely. Independence and dependence are complicated issues in therapy. The relationship between each specific patient and each specific therapist is unique, the only one of its kind.

My best suggestion is that you seek out another counselor. The purpose in this is two-fold. One, it will establish that you are working toward the goal of adaptability.

Barbara Schiff

Two, it will bring you support and guidance for this task.

The following organizations can refer you to licensed mental health professionals: Michigan Psychological Association, 642-2508 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays; Michigan Pyschiatric Society, 552-8666 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, and Michigan Association of Social workers, (517) 487-1548 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Good luck.

Barbara

Dear Barbara,

I am enclosing a portion of an article from the Observer & Eccentric newspaper. I've called a few toy stores and children's bookstores in the Troy and Rochester area and can't find these games. Could you please let me know where I might find them. I, too, have a five-year-old that I would like to teach a little "stranger safety" to.

Thank you.

B.J.R.

Dear B.J.R.,

I was sorry to learn that the games (Pressman's "Safely Home" and Milton Bradley's "Let's Be Safe") I mentioned in a previous column have been discontinued. My only suggestion is to write Milton Bradley Co., Springfield, Mass. 01101, and see if they have any ideas. Joan Lunden of ABC's "Good Morning America" was the spokeswoman for "Let's Be Safe." You could also try writing her.

If you have any luck, let me know, so that others can profit.

Barbara

FEAR & LOAFING

Boomers and oldies: Forever young

Move over, Peter Pan.

Step aside, Dorian Grey.

According to Thia Golson, author of "The Boomer Report," "A boomer looks in the mirror and sees someone 20 years younger than he or she really is."

That must be true. How else can you explain our generation's obsession with '60s nostalgia? Some blame it on acid flashbacks, others on brain damage from watching the "Brady Bunch." But I blame it on a generation that simply refuses to admit it's growing older.

Whatever the cause, the result of this cultural regression is the current fascination with oldies music. By setting the buttons to WKSG, WOM, WCSX and WMTG, a boomer can pretend he's back in high school.

People who live boring, humdrum lives listen to oldies because they associate certain songs with exciting milestones in their lives: "Hearing the Cowsills reminds me of when the fire ants invaded our class picnic and stripped little Johnny Taylor down to a skeleton."

I must confess that hearing the Troggs' "Wild Thing" still sends that lizard part of my brain back to a hot August night in 1965. A freshman in high school, I was inhaling french fries in the parking lot of a Red Barn when a fight broke out.

IT ALL BEGAN when a diner came out to find a rival gang member doing the Twist on the roof of his GTO. The Pontiac wore 13 coats of hand-rubbed metal flake. The dancer wore baseball spikes.

First, the car's owner asked him how he was able to go " 'round and 'round and up and down" at the same time without losing his balance. Then he asked him to hop down and meet sudden death.

For a moment, the two warriors stood toe to toe, trading insults:

"Those fuzzy dice have more brains than you do!"

"You're so dumb you failed metal shop twice."

"How about a knuckle sandwich?"

Suddenly, one of the punks grabbed a Coke bottle and smashed it against the hood of the car. His opponent took one look at the jagged weapon and backed off. As he retreated he vowed, "I'll be back with a zip gun and 10 big friends with bad complexions. We'll punch your nose into the next town. We'll tear your lungs out and throw 'em in a blender and make you drink 'em through a straw."

Can you imagine the same confrontation today? A student pops into a bistro for a quick stir-fry. Stepping out, he spots a rival debate team member standing on the roof of his Isuzu Trooper giving a speech to mutual friends. The truck is wearing a pair of mountain bikes. The orator is wearing pastel deck shoes.

FIRST, THE car's owner asks about blue chip versus junk bonds. The he asks him to hop down and face a verbal and intellectual drubbing.

For a moment, the two economists stand toe to toe, swapping insults:

"Your roots are showing."

"Oh, yeah. Your bronzer is blotchy."

"Can't afford decent earrings?"

Suddenly, one of the preppies grabs a plastic two-liter Coke bottle by the neck and bangs it on the plastic fender of his Fiero. Nothing happens, so he unscrews the cap.

His opponent takes one look at the spurting foam and backs off. As he retreats, he vows, "I'll be back — with a therapist and a lawyer. First, we'll probe your pent-up hostilities and try to help you work through your angst in non-violent ways. Then we'll take civil action against your parents' insurance company. I think we can collect for mental anguish and loss of appetite."

Too bad the kids of today don't have the kind of music I grew up with. Or do they?

A GERIATRIC wave of graybeard rockers are cashing in. Pete Townsend is 45. Jagger is 46, McCartney is 47. Tina Turner is 50. And they're making more moola than ever.

Forget the fact their recent albums are awful. Forget the fact they shuffle around and drool on themselves. It doesn't even matter they forget the words. All that matters is that if they still exist, then I must still be young!

So keep wheeling their aged, comatose bodies on stage forever. Hook up the amplifiers, hook up the respirators, but don't ever, ever stop touring.

If we can't flick our Bics, we'll wave our canes for an encore.

SCREEN SCENE

CONCEPT EAST II, 1144 Pingree, Detroit. Call 972-1030 for information. ($3)

"Spirit of Youth" (USA — 1938), 3 p.m. May 13. A tribute to Joe Louis, starring the legendary athlete as a boxer trying to set a positive example for troubled black youth.

DETROIT FILM SOCIETY, 5201 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Call 833-4048 for information. ($20-30 membership)

Hollywood's Golden Year — "Goodbye Mr. Chips" (USA — 1939) and "Ninotchka" (USA — 1939), starting at 7 p.m. May 11-12. "Mr. Chips" stars Robert Donat as a shy schoolmaster who falls in live. In "Ninotchka," Greta Garbo plays a cold Russian agent who falls for Melvyn Douglas. A grand tribute to Garbo, directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

DETROIT FILM THEATRE, Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Call 833-2323 for information. ($4)

"Black Rain" (Japan — 1989), 7 and 9:30 p.m. May 11-12. Not to be confused with the recent Michael Douglas thriller, this is Shohei Inamura's study of a Japanese family's efforts to come to grips with Hiroshima a decade after the bomb.

Josephine Baker — "Zou Zou" (France — 1934) and "Princess Tam Tam" (France — 1935). Staring at 3 and 7 p.m. May 13. Back by popular demand after a sold-out show last year, a tribute to the St. Louis-born woman who became a sensation on France's cabaret circuit.

"Zou Zou" finds her a Creole laundress who replaces a temperamental performer in a stage review and proves to be a sensation. "Tam Tam" reworks "Pygmalion," where a writer takes a poor, beautiful and wild woman and passes her off as an African princess. Great fun.

HENRY FORD CENTENNIAL LIBRARY, 16301 Michigan Ave., Dearborn. Call 943-2330 for information. (Free)

"The Lady Is Willing" (USA — 1942), 7 p.m. May 7. Marlene Dietrich and Fred MacMurray star in this sophisticated comedy about a glamorous actress intent on having a baby with a befuddled pediatrician.

LIVONIA MALL, Seven Mile at Middlebelt, Livonia. Call 476-1166 for information. (Free)

"Little Women" (USA — 1933), 10 a.m. May 8. Gregory Cukor directed this faithful adaptation of the Louisa May Alcott story. With Katharine Hepburn and Joan Bennett. As part of the mall's monthlong tribute to Mother's Day.

MAPLE THEATRE, 4135 W. Maple, Bloomfield. Call 855-9090 for information. ($5 general, $3 twilight)

The Maple is back in the saddle, highlighting quality foreign films on all three of its screens. Call for show times.

Then, there are the golfers who refuse to let faster groups pass.

"THEY HAVE that image that nobody should go through," Jawor said. "They feel they paid their ticket and they have their time on the golf course."

It's these sorts of attitudes, Jawor said, that increase the normal time to play 18 holes — about four to 4½ hours — to five or six.

Likewise, those who play fast can be guilty of being too impatient with slower groups in front. These golfers sometimes vent their frustrations by driving into slow groups ahead.

"That's the worst thing somebody can do," said Jawor, who then recounts stories of golfers injured by such shots.

And then there are the golfers who throw clubs after hitting a bad shot.

"People don't realize how dangerous club throwing is," Jawor said. He recalled a junior tournament when after missing a putt, a teenage golfer swung his putter up in frustration, and put out the eye of a playing partner.

Of etiquette, Colucci said, "Golf is not a stuffed shirt thing — But it's not 'Caddyshack' either."

Congratulations to our fledgling architects.

Presenting the 37 winners of "The Best Birdhouse Builder Contest", sponsored by the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, and the Department of Natural Resources.

Our 37 winners were selected from over 1,100 seventh and eighth grade students from all over the metro area who entered. Each student had to build a birdhouse for a specific species of bird or bat. Then, each entry was judged for accuracy, materials, creativity, workmanship and suitability for the intended occupants.

We're proud of our winners, and of every student who took the time and effort to enter. The organization, thoroughness, and industry they've demonstrated in this contest will help them spread their wings in the future.

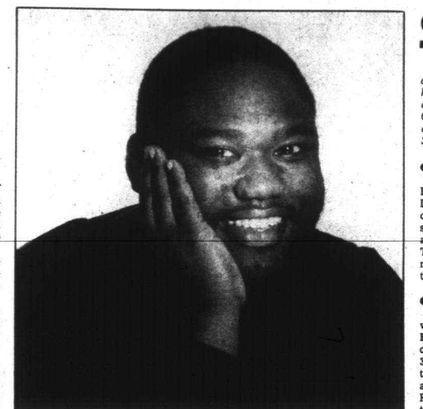
STREET CRACKS

People give him his jokes

By Susan Steinmueller
staff writer



Gary Hardwick, 29, is living a dual life, so to speak. By day, the Ann Arbor resident is an attorney, while at night, he's a successful stand-up comedian.

Some of Gary Hardwick's best jokes come from people who come up to him after a show and tell him about funny things that happened to them.

Such was the case with a lady who told him about some of the "dumb things" written on paper products she noticed at the supermarket.

"From that one joke I have a 10-minute routine now," he said. "The best ones are not really jokes, they are things that happened to someone."

Hardwick, 29, of Ann Arbor, comes across plenty of his own "dumb things" to joke about, too, in his act which features street-smart observations, biting political satire and the time-honored family tale.

"A lot of jokes touch upon subjects that we see in every day life but don't think about," he said.

One of his jokes, for instance, targets a television commercial that describes radon gas as odorless and colorless, and then gives a number to call if viewers suspect their house is contaminated.

"It was dumb because they didn't give a good idea of how you could tell if you had it," he said. "I think most comics do point out the absurdities in life."

HARDWICK, an attorney, began his stand-up comedy career while studying law at Wayne State University. He graduated in 1985 at a time when he was persuaded to try out his skill at tickling funny bones at an open mike night at Mark Ridley' Comedy Castle.

"All my friends always thought I was funny," he said.

The third night he was there, Ridley asked him to work for pay.

"I kind of got jump started in the business," admitted Hardwick. " I like to think I was just funnier," he said of the reason he was hired.

As his popularity increased, he ventured into the national comedy circuit, playing clubs in other major cities.

Although Hardwick has been "on the road" as a full-time comic — and says he likes to think of himself as one — he prefers being an attorney by day and a comic by night.

The two complement each other by virtue of "having another life where you can draw experience from."

"When I first started, you were not legitimate unless you were a road comic," he said. "I think some of us guys who have some other things going on in life are more accepted now."

HARDWICK said in his act, racial issues only come up occasionally.

"My act doesn't have a lot of racial messages in it because I don't think it's good to beat that," he said, but added, "if you don't make too much of it, you can still entertain people."

One popular piece in his act is a true story involving his own birth certificate.

"I think anybody who sees this material will not only laugh quite a bit, but will get a new angle on race relations," he said.

Hardwick performs at least a couple of times a month. Some of the clubs he has performed at include the Comedy Store in Los Angeles, Catch A Rising Star in New York, Improvisation in Los Angeles, Chaplin's and Comedy Castle in Detroit and Funnybone in Toronto.

Hardwick will appear at the Looney Bin at 9 p.m. Friday May 11, and 8 and 10:30 p.m. Saturday, May 12. The Looney Bin is at 1655 Glengary, Walled Lake, in the lower level of the Wolverine Restaurant.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

It was Clyde Adler who brought to life to White Fang, Black Tooth and Pookie the lion on the Soupy Sales show in the '50s and early '60s.

White Fang, Black Tooth and Clyde?

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

He's got the most famous arms in Detroit television history.

That's because Clyde Adler brought to life White Fang, Black Tooth and Pookie the lion on the Soupy Sales show in the '50s and early '60s.

And when those arms weren't wielding puppets, they were busy plopping pies in Soupy's face.

Frank Sinatra even took a pie in the mug from Adler, when Soupy moved the show to California.

Was he tempted to go easy, when planting a pie on old blue eyes' kisser?

"No," the deep-voiced Adler said, smiling.

He did the show with Soupy on Channel 7 from 1953-60. They started at the Maccabees Building on Woodward in Detroit, before moving to the station's present Southfield studios.

After graduating from Grosse Pointe High School, Adler served in the Navy during World War II.

"I was on a destroyer for a while; we ended up in the Aleutians," he said.

When the war ended, he entered Michigan State University.

"I bounced around from one major to another and ended up in radio and TV," he said.

In 1949, Adler began working part-time at WXYZ-TV, then was hired full-time the next year as a stage manager.

"I HAPPENED to be stage managing when Soupy came to the station in 1953," Adler said. "He had been a disc jockey in Cinncinatti and Cleveland before he came up to Detroit. In his radio show he had a dog named White Fang, he included that in his TV show."

At first, White Fang was not seen but only heard — thanks to a record of a dog barking.

"It happened one day that Soupy started talking to White Fang — as usual," Adler said. "I happened to look off camera and the guy who supplied the sound effects said he couldn't find the dog recording.

"I was trying to get Soupy's attention, I couldn't . . . So I growled."

That night, a cameraman's wife fashioned a "paw" for White Fang out of a terry cloth towel to be worn around Adler's arm and even sewed on a couple of claws.

"Soupy used to call White Fang 'the meanest dog in Detroit.' Then I got the idea for Black Tooth, he was the sweetest," Adler said.

Soupy would look just past the camera when talking to either "doggie," as a black or white "paw" gestured in front of the lens.

While talking to Black Tooth, that long black paw would shoot out, grab Soupy around the neck, and yank him off camera for a loud kiss. "Yes, I love you too," was Soupy's usual response.

AND DON'T forget Pookie, the hand-puppet lion that would visit Soupy at the window. Pookie couldn't talk, but would express himself by screwing up his face, or throwing himself against the window frame.

"We went through quite a few Pookies," Adler said.

The inspiration for the show's brand of comedy was Mack Sennett, and Laurel and Hardy. But Soupy and Clyde had their own knack for pulling off gags and skits.

"Soupy and I had a fantastic rapport between us," Adler said. "He could start something, say something, and I would know where to go and vice versa. He had a great sense of timing. It wasn't something, I think, that you can develop.

"The visuals were geared to kids, the lines were geared to adults. Our audience ranged from kids three or four years old to people in their 30s."

"Until we went out to California, everything was ad-lib," he added. "We'd work out a basic outline, figure out what the punch line would be, but there wasn't any script at all."

In one skit, White Fang — who'd always pull something on Soupy — complained that he wanted to read, but the light wasn't good enough.

Reaching out with his "paw," he then pulled a previously unseen cord behind Soupy's ear and a light in Soupy's hand came on. But suddenly, the light went out.

"SOUPY WOULD say, 'I forgot to pay my light bill,' " and smile at the camera. Then, I hit him with the pie," Adler said.

Later, they decided to add a little variety to the cast with a third "dog," Marilyn Monwolf.

"When she'd come on, White Fang would go ape," Adler said. "Of course, she'd have nothing whatsoever to do with him (Marilyn did like Black Tooth)."

Adler also kept a ready supply of props, including rubber knives, toy guns and a bulb syringe and seltzer bottles for squirting Soupy.

The entire crew also came up with daily "Soupy Sez" sayings, which Soupy would write on a blackboard.

Adler's favorite?

"Be true to your teeth and they won't be false to you."

While Adler said it was satisfying that the show was popular in Detroit, he wasn't recognized on the street, since his face didn't appear on TV. Still, when the show moved to the new Southfield studio, Adler would appear in occasional outdoor skits. He also appeared in skits on Soupy's night time variety show, "Soupy's On."

TO SUPPLY pies for all three shows, stage hands made 100-150 per week — "We'd use a regular pie crust and shaving cream," Adler explained.

One gag the crew pulled on Soupy was during his "Breakfast With Soupy" show.

"We put a little orange juice in his glass and filled it up with vodka," Adler said.

"He wanted to go out there and start a local show," said Adler, who went along. The show soon went national on ABC for 11 weeks, as a summer replacement.

While Soupy would ask Adler to join him in a local New York show in the mid-'60s, he declined.

"I stayed out there (California); I continued on with ABC," he said. "By that time, I knew everyone around there."

Adler got to know Jerry Lewis, who visited the Soupy show set, and appeared as an agent in a Lewis film, "The Patsy."

"I did a couple 'Ben Casey's,' just bit parts," Adler said.

He eventually started working as a stage electrician, on "General Hospital," "Where the Action Is," "American Bandstand" and others, before returning to WXYZ in 1971.

Adler, who retired last year, is an avid fisherman, enjoys hunting and follows the Pistons and Lions from his Dearborn home.

"I watch a lot of public television, (Channel) 56," said Adler, who also has a vacation house near Alpena.

What does Adler think of kids' TV today?

He casts a sly, side-long look.

"Somewhere along the line the networks and the parent groups got it in their mind that kids shows should be educational."

State University. Her responsibilities include overseeing the front house staff, the beverage costs and scheduling, among other things.

EMPLOYED AT the restaurant for a year, she doesn't mind working a 60-hour plus work week because it has given her the opportunity to develop a good rapport with her staff, meet a lot of new people, learn the trade and "munch when I want to."

The negatives include "working whenever you're needed or wherever you're needed."

"One day it may be in the kitchen, on the floor or filling in as a bus boy," she said.

Other bad points said Akarakian, include "getting dirty, dealing with mad customers and feeling exhausted most of the time."

"In this field, you can't expect to work 9 to 5, because you could be called to come in at any time," she said. "It's like being a doctor. You're always on call.

"But on the other hand, I enjoy the parties and celebrations at the restaurant. It makes me feel good when I know the customer walks away satisfied."

Imagine working all day as a department manager at a major department store, five days a week and then volunteering for numerous groups after an eight-hour day.

FOR SOME that may be grueling, but for Rebecca Drescher, 31, it's a way of life.

The Oakland County resident is out the door by 8:15 a.m. every morning so she can head to her day job, where she has been a manager for three years.

"My job is hectic, but it hasn't stopped me from what I really enjoy, and that's volunteer work," she said.

One day per week she sheds her skirt and nylons for a pair of Keds and a pink jumpsuit, required attire for her volunteer work at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Pontiac.

As an auxiliary worker she works in the intensive care unit, where she helps the nursing staff, checks on patients and carries blood to the blood bank.

"I've always enjoyed volunteering for several organizations," she said. "I don't do it so people will pat me on the back, I do it because it's always been a way of life for me."

In addition to her volunteer work at the hospital on Monday nights, she also heads up the publicity department for Common Ground, a crisis intervention organization that started out in Birmingham but now has offices in Royal Oak.

Binders will help

Q. I know you are supposed to file all your papers, but files make me nervous. I always have the feeling that if I file a paper away I'll never find it again. I want papers out where I can see them, but of course that results in messy piles. Help.

A. You are not alone in your fear of filing and losing your papers. Wanting to keep papers out where you can see them is a right-brained characteristic. While filing is the most effective way to store papers, one alternative lets you put away papers and keep them out. too.

Three-ring binders may be your answer. Papers can be held by punching holes into the papers themselves or by placing the papers in manilla pocket pages or in various kinds of plastic sheets held in the binders. Categories can be divided by tabs. Subjects might include bank statements; frequently used reference materials; lists of names or numbers; articles clipped and sub-divided into restaurants, travel, psychology; etc.

One binder might hold all car papers with different cars divided into sections by tabs. Included for each car would be title, registration, insurance policy, warranties and repair receipts kept in chronological order. One woman loves her car binder because she takes it along to discuss repairs with her mechanic. Also, when her husband queries her about car mainteinance, she merely hands him the car binder. He likes the system, too.

This idea can also be incorporated into an office calendar, control or project book with various types of oft-used lists and materials kept within one binder.

Not only is this a good plan for visually oriented people, it's also nice for perfectionists because it holds papers firmly in place. Some people are so fastidious that files are not neat enough for them — especially when another person uses them and leaves them awry.

Using many binders is not necessrily practical, since they take more space, are more expensive and it's more time-consuming to place papers in them. The advantages are that papers stay in order and are easy to find. Binder-lovers also testify that small papers don't get crumpled down in the bottom, as can happen in a file folder. Best of all, binders can be left standing out in full view on a bookshelf, so you can see where your papers are, rather than having them closed away in a file drawer.

Try to reserve binders only for those papers you use often, and file the rest. Which system you use is not so important as keeping things organized, so you are able to find what you need when you need it.

Michigan art attack

The first Michigan Art Attack, a statewide lobbying effort by arts advocates, will be held at the Capitol in Lansing on Wednesday.

Where would Her Majesty live in Birmingham?

At Buckingham, naturally.

She'd love the royal park across the street. She'd dote on the spacious one or two-bedroom apartment with fresh new interiors from the most modern appliances to the best lighting fixtures to designer carpeting to contemporary verticals.

She'd like the uncommon amount of room and royal way the service staff treats her. After all, a person's home ought to be their palace.

The Crossings At Canton.

Apartment living just got better.

We're making The Crossings a better place to live and a better value. You'll feel it in the new hallways and newly refurbished clubhouse. You'll see it in the plush landscaping when you enter the grounds. And that's just the beginning. It's the new look and feel of The Crossings at Canton—and it's for you.

The Crossings at Canton offers 19 different floorplans with 1 to 4 bedrooms. And whether you choose a 2-level townhome or a luxury apartment, the renewed beauty of this charming rental community shines through in every one—the result of our recent "Capital Improvements & Upgrading" program. These apartments and townhomes are the largest in the area, yet are still incredibly affordable.

Discover these features at The Crossings at Canton:

- Dens & Fireplaces
- Fully-appliances Kitchens
- Patios or Balconies
- Central Air Conditioning
- A Clubhouse with sauna, indoor pool, exercise room, a new party room, and more!

Visit The Crossings at Canton today. We're just 20 minutes from Ann Arbor and downtown Detroit, yet comfortably away from it all. From I-275, just exit Arbor Rd. West to Haggerty Rd., follow south to Joy Rd., then east to The Crossings. Open Mon.-Fri., 10-6, Sat. 10-5, Sun. 12-5 Phone 455-2424 today.

This deck in Plymouth Township is an example of what can be done in a relatively small area. Multiple tiers provide more space by breaking the floors into sections. At the same time, the deck has an area in sunlight and in the shade.

Deck the house in many levels

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Sometimes built as part of a house and sometimes built as an afterthought, decks have evolved beyond the old concrete patios of a decade ago because of their flexibility in design, durability and just plain splashiness.

John Griffiths, president of the Michigan Deck Builder, a Lake Orion company that has building decks for 13 years, said customers are demanding more intricate decks with multiple levels, irregular shapes, angles, terraces, privacy fences, gazebos and hot tubs.

"Ten years ago, it was fancy if it was a rectangle with a corner cut off," he said.

Most people are interested in decks for one of two reasons, he said. "People want decks for personal use — someplace for kids to go out to play or someplace for them to entertain."

DECK BUILDING really began taking off five years ago. At the time there was some competition between neighbors to "out deck" each other, he said. "But I don't see a lot of that anymore."

Griffiths said he builds decks for builders with homes still under construction and for people who want to add decks years after buying homes. The way some homes are designed — especially the luxury custom homes in affluent subdivisions — a deck is a necessity.

It's not uncommon to see architects design homes with doorwalls 12 or more feet from the ground looking over yards or wooded areas. "They're not really thinking of a deck when they design these, but once they put a door wall 12 feet off the ground, they have to do something."

Builders who contract out for decks are very demanding, he said. "When they're building a custom house with everything topnotch throughout, they want a topnotch deck to go with it."

Gene Vennettilli of Construction Services Group in Rochester said when he is hired to build a deck, he suggests that homeowners go out and look at other decks and to read a book on deck building. "Just so they can get an idea of what they want.

"Many people like to leave the custom designing to us — they have one or two ideas, but that's it," he said. "But it's not my deck. Decks should reflect the person.

"There's nothing wrong with getting ideas from other places, and I always make suggestions, but the (homeowner) should play a part in the decisions."

There's no real secrets to designing a deck, he said. First he draws the shape of the house to scale and then he talks with the owners, Vennettilli said.

THE OWNERS tell him what they want and he puts it together like a puzzle, fitting the deck to the contours of the house, terrain, trees and other objects like pools and flower beds. "Sometimes they want decks built around trees."

Vennettilli said decks are no longer restricted to homes. Retail stores, restaurants, municipal projects and golf courses will contact deck builders for various projects.

Griffiths of Michigan Deck Builders said the hardest thing about designing a deck is figuring out the size. Financing a deck is more costly than people anticipate.

"People usually have an idea of what they want but can't really afford it," he said. The typical deck costs between $7 and $10 per square foot (including labor), but amenities can add dramatically to the costs."

Wood costs can also vary greatly. Cedar, the most popular wood, has decreased in price during recent years and is comparable to pressure treated woods. "Redwood is much more expensive."

Most decks today are built with cedar because the cell structure of the wood naturally prevents water from seeping in. Water absorption causes deck planks to swell and contract depending on the weather and is the leading cause of deck failure, he said.

EVEN CEDAR and pressure-treated lumber should be treated with a wood sealer, he said. Griffiths stressed people considering a deck should make certain the builder is a licensed contractor. "People think building a deck won't hurt their house, and they are willing to take a chance on an unlicensed contractor.

"Anytime your building near a house, you are taking a risk," Griffiths said.

Architects are 'not really thinking of a deck when they design these (houses), but once they put a doorwall 12 feet off the ground, they have to do something.'

Robert M. Meisner

I live in a condominium where the board has to give approval for the planting of flowers in front of our yard. I have petitioned the board, but they indicate that they are not prepared to give us permission because of the additional cost of maintaining the flowers. That makes no sense to me. What can I do?

I presume from your question that the board has the authority under the condominium documents to grant permission with respect to the planting of flowers at the condominium. If it is purely a matter of economics as far as the board is concerned, offer as a condition to their giving you approval to plant the flowers and to maintain them, if necessary. If you can show that the flowers are not going to be a detriment to the condominium project as a whole and you agree to underwrite the costs of maintenance or replacement of the flowers, I believe that the board would be abusing its discretion in not granting you such approval.

I am purchasing a condominium on a land contract and want to run for the board of directors. The president of the association has indicated that I must be a title holder in order to qualify for the board. Is this fair or reasonable?

As a land contract purchaser, you do not have legal title to the property, but what is considered by the law to be equitable title. You must check the condominium documents to determine whether an owner is defined to include a land contract vendee. In many condominium documents, that is the case. If so, you have the right to run for the board of directors since you are, in a sense, a member of the association. On the other hand, if vendees are not deemed co-owners, and the requirement to be on the board is that you be a member of the association, you may not be qualified to serve on the board. Consult with your attorney concerning the particular condominium documents of your project and the State Condominium Act as it relates to your comdomiuium project.

I am on an advisory committee, and the developer is talking about turning over control of the association to the members. I want to know what I should be doing to prepare for the turnover along with the other advisory members. Several members of the board do not think it is necessary to consult an attorney at this early stage, but I tend to think otherwise. Can you help?

The advisory committee is a body established in order to prepare for the transition of control from the developer-controlled board of directors to a co-owner controlled board of the association. There are a number of audits which should be undertaken by the association coincident with the taking over control of the association. One of these audits, namely a legal audit, is designed to insure that the condominium documents are well drafted and in accordance with the condominium statute. There are also other protections that should be undertaken by the association incident to the takeover including a review of the various contracts of the association, including its management contract, as well as its operating procedures. Simply put, legal advice, even before the turnover, is apppropriate, and you should ask the developer to fund the advisory committee out of association funds so as to retain the services of an attorney to prepare the co-owners for the turnover of control of the association.
