Money, CBE fuel school campaign

Group stands to gain from low voter turnout

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

To a greater extent than in previous years, major factors influencing the Plymouth-Canton school board race are the power of money and Citizens for Better Education.

Incumbent trustees Jeanette Wines and Marilyn Schwinn have both opted against seeking re-election June 11. Names on the ballot will be Robert Anderson, Carl Battishill, John Engdahl, Toni Hartke, K.C. Mueller, Diane Stamp, Richard Sumpter and Les Walker.

Engdahl, a nuclear scientist from Plymouth, chose after the withdrawal deadline to throw his support to Mueller. He is not campaigning.

Both Engdahl and Jack Farrow, who initially filed to run, dropped out of the race to lessen the chances of CBE electing a candidate. CBE, a conservative Christian group, supports Anderson and Stamp. Current school board member Barbara Graham is backed by CBE.

Because no millage questions will be put to voters, a low turnout is expected; something many predict will work in CBE's favor.

"I think the first five spots will be real close," said Anderson, running for the third time.

"A low turnout could help us. I don't know if the people behind CBE will get out and vote. If they do, a low turnout could help."

CBE claims a membership of more than 2,000 Plymouth-Canton residents.

In 1985, the last time no millage questions appeared on the ballot, just 1,719 voters cast ballots for candidates.

Stamp, running for the first time, has been been campaigning door-to-door "whenever it's sunny — about 25 or 30 hours a week."

Stamp, who plans to spend $3,000 to $4,000, sees finances as playing a big part in the election. "It's kind of bad for people who can't get their hands on that kind of money," she said.

Stamp and Anderson say they view Battishill, Mueller and Walker as the candidates to beat.

Both Battishill and Walker are endorsed by Plymouth-Canton teachers, food service and maintenance staffers, paraprofessionals and secretaries. They're also endorsed by the Committee for Academic Freedom and Excellence. Walker is endorsed by all the current board members with the exception of Graham.

Mueller, a Plymouth realtor, sees turnout as the key to her election.

"I feel it's very important that people do get out and vote and let the district know where they're coming from. What I represent probably won't get me elected, because I won't play dirty politics," she said.

"I don't want to accuse anyone of dirty pool. The campaign should be run on issues where schools are concerned and what it means to kids in our district as opposed to the sign situation and the flier situation; who has the right to put them in teachers' boxes and who doesn't," Mueller said.

As in every election, rumors are circulating and signs are disappearing. But other incidents have occurred as well.

Dr. Sid Disbrow said his office is among several in the area to receive a call from someone claiming he wouldn't be availing himself of services offered there because of a political sign posted at the office.

Disbrow responded to the caller in a letter to the editor saying, "You did not state which was the specific candidate of your choice, but I suppose that really doesn't make much difference as you made it quite plain which group you supported. No where in my church education as an adult or in Sunday school as a child did I learn any type of Christianity that remotely resembles what you did."

Season Barnes, 2, of Canton points to the temporary home of a duck family.

Firefighters rescue duck family from storm drain

Nobody hit the deck when 2-year-old Season Barnes started yelling, "Duck, duck" Sunday afternoon.

The youngster wasn't sending out a warning to anyone. She was looking out the window at a group of ducklings following their mother down Oakview Street in Canton.

And as she watched, six of the ducklings fell down a storm drain.

"I was frantic," Season's mother, Callie, said Tuesday. So she called the Canton Fire Department, half expecting to be told the firefighters had more important matters to attend to.

As it turned out, they didn't.

"It was Sunday afternoon and we weren't busy," said Lt. Don Adams of the Canton Fire Department.

Firefighters had to remove two manhole covers and the storm drain cover through which the ducklings had fallen. They also had to borrow a neighbor's pool skimmer and put a ladder down the holes before they were able to rescue all six ducklings.

Barnes said that before the fire trucks arrived she was on her knees beside the storm drain cover making noises in an attempt to get the attention of the ducklings. Instead, she got the attention of some neighbors.

"Finally, they got together to try and figure out what I was doing. I think they thought I went bonkers," Barnes said.

The ducklings had followed their mother out of a pond behind the home of one of Barnes' neighbors. After the rescue, Barnes put the ducklings in a box and carried them back into the wilderness.

"When I had them in the box, they were so quiet and when we walked away they just started quacking. They knew that was home," Barnes said.

Family of shot man says cops overreacted

By Diane Gale
staff writer

The family of Dr. Paul Vachher, who was shot three times by police after allegedly threatening to kill his father, charged police with overreacting and failing to help Vachher after he was shot.

During the three-hour standoff with police, Vachher apparently tried to suture himself, according to a four page press release from the Vachher family.

The press release called on Canton officials to conduct an investigation and charge the officers involved.

A STATE police investigation of the May 21 incident is pending completion of interviews with the Vachher family and police officers, according to state police.

The Canton officers involved in the case, Brian Darow, Eddie Tanner and Dave Boljesic, have not returned to duty since the shooting awaiting recommendation by a psychologist, said Canton police Capt. Al Wilson.

The officers receive full pay while off duty, he said.

Earlier this week Vachher, 25, was in critical condition at St. Joseph Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Vachher recently graduated from medical school and broke-up with his girlfriend, police said. He was taking anti-depressant medication, police and family said.

VACHHER'S FATHER, Dr. Prehlad Vachher is a Livonia psychiatrist, past Canton Chamber of Commerce president and active in other community events.

"He was having a nervous breakdown," the elder Vachher said of son. "He's in very serious, critical condition. He's near death and we're praying for him."

The incident began on Sunday, May 20, when the younger Vachher started threatening his family in their home on Brooklan in an affluent Canton neighborhood, according to police and family.

Vachher's parents flagged down a police car at the corner of Ford Road and Canton Center Road to report that their son was going berserk.

"They (Vachher family) asked the police officer to subdue Paul and take him to a psychiatric hospital so that he could receive the treatment he needed," the family said.

Firefighters, police wary of fitness test

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A mixup caused Canton firefighters to miss taking a controversial fitness test, one that 19 police officers passed.

But several firefighters and police officers have reservations about the test.

Because of a schedule mixup, no firefighters took the test. Nineteen police officers passed and two failed the agility test, according to Dan Durack, Canton administrative services director.

A MIX-UP on the test date caused the zero turnout from firefighters, according to Canton police and fire officials.

"There's been a lot of controversy about where, when and how it was given," said Dave Hamilton, of Canton's firefighter union Local 2289. He declined to be specific.

Most officers didn't show for the test, because they didn't have enough time to complete a required McAuley's Health Center physical fitness program, according to police Lt. Robin Cripe, who administered the test.

The test last winter was the first offered to Canton police and fire employees, Durack said. Those who passed it received a $250 bonus.

Cripe said he expected all Canton officers to take the second agility test planned at an unspecified date this summer.

"Last year was just a start," Durack said. "As we go along more and more people will participate. If you're in pretty good shape it's a good way to pick-up some bucks. If you're not in shape it's a good incentive to get in good shape."

THE PARTS of the test, which must be completed in succession are:

- Performing as many push-ups as possible in one minute;
- Measuring hand grip strength;
- Completing an obstacle course, running 20 feet, going through a 6-foot tunnel, running another 20 feet, clearing a 6-wall, running 20 more feet, turning and clearing the same 6-foot wall all within a certain time limit;
- Dragging a 160-pound life form dummy, named Rugged Ron, 50 feet;
- Showing flexibility by sitting on the floor, bending forward at the waist and reaching past their toes. The farther they reach the higher score they received;
- And running one mile.

"You're not going to pass course if you're totally out of shape," Cripe said. "You don't have to be a body builder, but you have to have some degree of physical condition or you're not going to pass this."

A similar fitness test is given to new applicants.

Record crowd sees candidates debate

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

A candidate debate Tuesday night sponsored by the League of Women Voters was the most heavily attended such event in 15 years.

About 200 people heard the seven candidates vying for two seats in the June 11 school board election. Incumbents Jeanette Wines and Marilyn Schwinn are not seeking re-election.

Running for four-year terms are Robert Anderson, Carl Battishill, Toni Hartke, K.C. Mueller, Diane Stamp, Richard Sumpter and Les Walker. John Engdahl's name will be on the ballot, but he has dropped out of the race.

Candidates gave two-minute opening statements and answered questions from the audience before concluding with 30-second summaries.

The candidates' night at Plymouth-Canton High School was televised by Omnicom cable television. For broadcast dates and times, call 459-7300.

Walker, a former school board member, said he's running because he sees one basic issue: "quality education for our children. Of the (seven) people here, I have the best experience and opportunity to bring to that table."

Stamp, supported by Citizens for Better Education, said she's running because she's concerned about "the quality of education, high taxes, school board accountability, the isolation of the superintendent, parental involvement, selling Central Middle School to developers" and controversial teaching materials.

She said she'd work to reinstate an open door policy in the schools, to eliminate R-rated movies, institute a no smoking policy and encourage the school board to meet in locations throughout the district.

"While this election isn't Republican or Democrat, there are three separate factions; they, them and us," Sumpter said. "Carl Battishill and Les Walker are not only endorsed by the Plymouth-Canton Education Association, but they're also funded by the PCEA. I don't object to the endorsement, but the campaign contributions could put into question decisions made by them.

"Diane Stamp and Robert Anderson are supported by CBE. This group can't be ignored, but this district doesn't need three board members supported by CBE. K.C. Mueller, Toni Hartke and I are independents with no allegiance to any special interest group."

"I think by the time this evening is over, you will see that the experience, knowledge, vision and determination I have qualify me for the position," Battishill said.

"After running and losing last year, in order to keep on top of issues, I decided to attend meetings and workshops," he said. "I did my homework."

Hartke said she is running because the district "can no longer allow sensational issues" to get in the way of education.

"I understand parents' concerns, and I also understand the limitations of the district," she said.

Hartke said she'd work to foster parental participation and the cooperation of the entire district in order to restore "the leadership position we once enjoyed in the 1970's."

"The future of our community is directly related to the success of our schools," K.C. Mueller said. "I have been concerned with the negative publicity our schools have been receiving. Having to defend the district shouldn't be necessary."

Mueller said she's alarmed about groups that oppose drug and sex education and believe schools are interfering with the roles of families. Mueller also wants to ensure that the search for a successor to Superintendent John Hoben is conducted carefully.

Anderson, supported by CBE, said he is running because "I feel I have a perspective held by a large segment of the community that is greatly needed on the board." Anderson, a financial consultant with teaching experience, said he wants to increase parental involvement in education; possibly reduce taxes; emphasize strong skill development and learning in subjects such as math, science, English, foreign language, government and history; and remove R-rated movies.

Man's condition critical; State police investigate shooting

The Vachhers told police that there were no guns in the house, the press release said.

"Paul came out of the house holding a few small knives," the press release said. "Several additional police officers arrived on the scene almost immediately and could easily have subdued Paul.

"At this point, nobody was in danger, and the officers should have remained calm, backed-off and waited him out in their squad cars," the press release said.

"To our horror and astonishment, the police officers fired several rounds of rapid gunfire at Paul," the press release said.

"They fired no warning shot, nor did they fire into the air to scare Paul with the noise. They aimed at Paul's head, chest and abdomen and they shot to kill even though nobody was in immediate danger."

POLICE REPORTED, however, that officers shot at Vachher after he allegedly lunged at an one officer and later threw a knife at another officer.

"It's our position in these incidents that there's always going to be some discrepancy from witnesses," Wilson said in regard to the Vachher press release.

"That's why we conduct investigations," Wilson said.

The family claims that: "For three hours, Paul wandered through the house in pain and shock, bleeding from his wounds, and trying to suture himself."

When Vachher surrendered he was wounded in the hip, neck and abdomen. Vachher has undergone three abdominal surgeries, the release said.

Vachher's father said there are no immediate plans to file a lawsuit against the township.

"We're too concerned about his well being," Vachher's father said.

Stolen King Kong decapitated

Vandals kidnapped and decapitated an inflatable King Kong doll from its perch atop Blockbuster Video on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth last weekend.

The remains of the victim were found early Sunday on the grounds of Plymouth Salem High School.

"The damaged, deflated Kong was draped over the rock in front of the school," a Canton police report said.

King Kong was being displayed on the roof of the video rental emporium as part of a promotion for a video game.

Blockbuster had rented the balloon from Keego & Company in Farmington Hills.

Plymouth Township police said the thieves probably got on the roof of the video store by scaling milk crates placed on top of a garbage compacter near an adjoining hardware store. Keego president Mike Cammarata said repairs will cost $9,000.

Plymouth-Canton candidate profiles

Diane E. Stamp

Diane Stamp

If Diane Stamp is elected to the Plymouth-Canton school board she said she would support turning Central Middle School into a high school to solve the overcrowing problem at the district's two high schools.

Stamp, 45, said Central could be turned into a 1,200-student high school that would have a conservative tone.

"They could have a dress code and no smoking," she said.

She estimated that it would cost about $1 million to renovate the school.

Stamp is backed by Citizens for Better Education, a conservative Christian group opposed to the showing of R-rated movies in the schools. She is a licensed day care provider and the mother of five children.

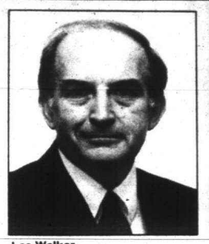

On the issue of selling Central Middle School to developers, she said she's opposed to it. "That would mean the people in Canton would have to pay for development in Plymouth," she said, and added that taxpayers would have to pay to replace the middle school and that Plymouth, not Canton, would benefit from such a sale.

When it comes to the use of controversial materials in classrooms, she said the district needs to find a middle ground.

"Education is too important to trust it to Hollywood," she said, adding that the school district needs a better movie preview policy.

She said that some PG-13 rated movies are worse than R-rated movies.

Les Walker

Les Walker

Les Walker, 53, a quality control engineer at Detroit Diesel, is one of seven candidates seeking election to the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education. He served on the Plymouth-Canton board 1984-88.

Walker is running "to represent all the community's interests," not those of a special interest group.

"I feel the need to run based on the candidates who filed. None have any direct experience in a board situation," he said.

"I've also been concerned with the controversy going on and saw a need to heal that. It seems the only time people get together is when there's a challenge and then they sit and argue with each other."

Walker worked behind the scenes during his previous term, he said.

"I see the need to exert more leadership" this time.

IN RESPONSE to a question on accommodating increasing enrollment, "probably the logical way to go is an addition at the high school that lends itself to multiple use," he said.

"Going to a free-standing high school looks like it would take too much money for what a bond issue could support."

Renovating Central Middle School might have merit, but there are a lot of cross issues, he said. The best way to finance expansion at CEP would be with a bond issue in the area of $30 million, Walker said.

Walker's inclination would be not to sell Central Middle School to de-

Toni K. Hartke

Toni Hartke

Toni K. Hartke decided to run in the Plymouth-Canton school board race because the confidence level in the district is low, she said.

"I was proud of the school district when we came here and that's why we chose this area," Hartke said. "Everyone is feeling that something is wrong. People are thinking that they (the school board members) are spending money incorrectly."

Hartke's 20 years of experience in education make her a top candidate, she said.

"And being a parent of two children in the Plymouth/Canton School District for the past 12 years, I can bring understanding from both perspectives," said the Plymouth resident and past Canton homeowner.

HARTKE CURRENTLY works in the Head Start program for the Wayne County Intermediate School District/Inkster Child Development Center, and is a lecturer and adviser for the University of Michigan child development associate program.

She worked in the Head Start program in other school districts as a kindergarten teacher and in preschool programs.

If elected to the board, her goal is to encourage involvement in the school district.

"I'm seeing too much apathy. I want to see people get involved."

HARTKE DOESN'T want Diane Stamp or Robert Anderson to win the election, she said. Both candidates have been supported by Citi-

Please turn to Page 4

Carl E. Battishill

Carl Battishill

Carl Battishill stresses his experience and perspective as a teacher in talking of his candidacy for the Plymouth-Canton board of education.

"I don't think a lot of the candidates have that informed perspective," said the Plymouth resident, a former band director here. Since 1984, he has served as director of bands for the West Bloomfield Public Schools.

"Growth and advancement and curriculum development are a constant part of my job," said Battishill, adding some West Bloomfield schools he was worked with have been named national exemplary schools by the U.S. Department of Education.

"If I can help push these schools toward excellence in education, I'd like to do that," said Battishill, 37.

Turning to campaign issues, Battishill said that high school expansion would be best served by expanding at the Centennial Education Park and paying for it through a bond issue.

One option considered by the school board is to use or expand Central Middle School in Plymouth as an extra high school. Battishill rejects this.

"It's not a facility built for that, it doesn't have the equipment needed for the 1990s," he said. "And you'd have to build another middle school."

On the question of whether the Central site should be sold to developers, Battishill said, "You'd have to

Robert E. Anderson

R. Anderson

Robert Anderson, a 33-year-old financial consultant from Canton, is running for Plymouth-Canton school board because "I feel I have a perspective held by a large segment of the community that is largely unrepresented by the current board. This perspective is greatly needed on our board and I believe I can provide it."

Backed by Citizens for Better Education, Anderson said he wants to "increase parental participation in education and control unnecessary spending, possibly reducing taxes."

He also wants the district "to emphasize strong skill development and learning in math, science, English, foreign languages, government and history."

As a board member, Anderson would try to "eliminate controversial subject matter based on sociological or psychological teaching goals."

On the subject of accommodating growing enrollment, Anderson said, "I don't know if we need another high school. I'm leaning toward an idea of solving two problems with one solution by using Central Middle School as a third high school geared to the basics, not athletics, maybe going more in depth in certain areas."

Enrollment would be on a first-come, first-served basis. The school would appeal to those who like the "small school concept. Children going there might expect fewer controversial things," such as "R-rated movies and courses that address

K.C. Mueller

K.C. Mueller

Candidate K.C. Mueller emphasizes her involvement in community affairs and her desire to help develop a quality school system.

"I sell Plymouth and Canton every day of my life," said Mueller, a real estate broker and owner of K.C. Colonial Real Estate in Plymouth.

She wanted to run several years ago, but chose to wait until her daughter, a University of Michigan student, graduated from Centennial Educational Park. Mueller, a Plymouth Township resident, also wanted to improve her voting record in school elections.

Mueller, 45, has been active with the Plymouth Symphony League, Plymouth Community United Way, Woman's Club of Plymouth and other organizations.

She favors expanding space available at Centennial Educational Park. "We do need more space, obviously."

Having a separate building as CEP for ninth graders could be considered. Mueller would like to reduce the number of students in each school and is concerned the district is losing students to such private schools as Plymouth Christian Academy, Catholic Central, Ladywood and Mercy.

SHE'S OPPOSED to selling Central Middle School to developers.

"I think it's got some years of life." The building could be used by the district as an alternative-choice trade school for high school students.

A bond issue would be the most effective way to deal with costs, Mueller said.

Richard Sumpter

Richard Sumpter, of Canton, a paint sales representative, agrees with school administrators who say that an addition at Centennial Education Park is the way to handle more students.

He said a new high school could be built, but it would be too expensive.

Also, he said the proposal to turn Central Middle School into a high school is too costly.

But while he agrees with officials that an addition to the high schools is the best option, he conceded that there are problems at the park. He said parking is already a problem and would probably be made worse by an expansion.

To pay for such an addition, he favors a bond issue of between $30 million and $45 million.

On the issue of selling Central Middle School to developers, he said he would oppose that unless the price was such that the school district couldn't refuse the offer.

His position on controversial materials in classrooms is: "I don't have a problem with them overall."

"I think we could look to using the television version of movies when they're used in classrooms," he said, adding that network television edits such movies before they are shown on television.

He said the school administration isn't communicating well enough with the public, and added that: "It never will do that well enough as long as people are upset."

Sumpter said he's running because he "wasn't excited about the candidates in the race."

He also said he didn't like the situation with Citizens for Better Education candidates in the race.

Richard Sumpter

"I thought I'd enter the race as an alternative," he said. "On the board I'd try to remain objective. There are a lot of special interest groups involved. I'd be open to all view points. I don't object to groups. People should be listened to."

Money fuels school board campaign

Sumpter said Trustee Dave Artley asked him the night before the withdrawal deadline to pull out of the race.

Artley says he spoke with several candidates, not to encourage them to pull out because of CBE, but because he wanted them to "assess the political reality of running. I didn't use the word withdraw, I just asked him to think about why he was in the race, what were his goals, and how he could accomplish those goals on the board."

Sumpter has run a low-key campaign.

He sees the key to his success as newspaper endorsements and getting information out at the least cost.

"I am neutral, and open to all comments and all ideas. If I can't do that, I'm not going to win because I am not going to spend more than $100. I don't want to have to sell myself to get a seat on the school board."

Sumpter says a low turnout "will probably hurt me." The people he has to beat are Battishill, Walker, Stamp and Anderson, he said.

Battishill says he has to beat the CBE candidates — Diane especially. She's running a very high profile campaign. She's aggressive about walking the streets. Les has name recognition, and K.C. is aggressively pounding the pavement and putting stuff in the mail," he added.

"I believe I need to have every endorsement out there. I have to work hard in Canton.

"I'm spending more than I can afford," added Battishill. "I've already got $1,000 in it. I'm calculating this will be a very expensive election.

Walker also views Stamp and Anderson as tough opposition. "As any candidate, I see myself as a frontrunner. I think I have a very good chance. But Diane Stamp and Bob Anderson have a strong dedicated group of people who want to see them elected."

Hartke also is concerned about CBE electing a majority to the board.

"CBE has some good views, but I don't like their tactics. I respect where they're coming from and their right to run, but they're not the voice of the whole community. What we need is people concerned about quality education.

"I haven't got $5,000 or $6,000," Hartke said. "I can't generate that kind of funds. My budget will be in the neighborhood of $1,000."

Most people came away from the League of Women Voters' candidates night at Plymouth Canton High School Tuesday convinced that their choices for school board are the right ones.

Voters will elect two candidates in the Plymouth-Canton school board election June 11.

Hearing the candidates "just made my feelings stronger," said a bus driver who didn't want her name used. "I like (Les) Walker and (Carl) Battishill; Walker because he has experience and I've seen him in action. Battishill answers questions really well and seems to really care."

"My impressions didn't change," said Deanna Huff. "I like Battishill and Walker. Walker has experience, and so does Carl in education. They don't seem to be leaning toward one faction or another" and both know the realities they're dealing with.

Eileen Hewett, a teacher, is supporting Battishill and Walker, "I guess because of Walker's experience, Battishill's concern for kids and the fact that both have been involved in education."

David Calzone said the forum "just confirmed" his opinions of Battishill and Walker. Carl is articulate, intelligent and well-versed in the issues. And he knows education. Walker has similar qualities and has school board experience."

A woman who didn't want her name used favors Battishill and Toni Hartke.

"Hartke really impressed me with her views. She came in as an unknown with a lot of good ideas."

"It just reinforced who I was going to vote for," said Joann Berg of Plymouth.

Carol Davis of Plymouth said none of the comments made changed her mind. "I'm going to vote for Battishill and Walker."

"I'm going with Battishill and K.C. (Mueller)," said John Hewett, of Plymouth. "I didn't change my mind."

go up and down those streets and find out how they (residents) feel about it."

On teaching materials used in school classrooms, Battishill said, "This is 1990 and movies are a part of our society. To say we're not going to show movies is ludicrous. The question is, what movies and what setting."

Of the film "The Breakfast Club," criticized by Citizens for Better Education for including the "F-word," Battishill said, "You can walk down any hallway and hear it many more times than you'll hear it in that film."

Stressing that "Teachers are the front line of communication," he added, "There isn't any reason that every elementary teacher can't have a personal relationship with these parents. Frequent phone contacts are important."

Battishill criticized the current school board for being "thin skinned" about criticism, adding, "The board and the central administration is isolated" from the public. He supports rotating school board meetings from school to school, to encourage attendance and interest.

Les Walker

velopers, should a lucrative offer be presented, he said.

"I'd want to look at the offer, but my inclination would be to vote against it. We put money into Central in the last bond issue. That was kind of a pledge to the people not to sell."

If the district were to lose its Lowell Middle School lease with Livonia Public Schools and sell Central, "we'd be without two schools."

CONCERNING THE use of movies and other controversial materials in the classroom, "I'm certainly against saying all R-rated movies are bad or good," he said.

"I was on the board when most of the challenges (by Citizens for Better Education) came down. I think each one of those challenges got a fair evaluation. (All movies were approved for continued use in the schools.) I agreed with the committee recommendations.

"The process doesn't involve just board members; it provides for citizen, staff and lower-level administration involvement."

Asked whether school administration is communicating well enough with the public, "There's a great deal of good communication out there, but it certainly could be improved," he said.

"We've done well, but it needs to be done better.

"The structure for the proposed bond issue has been laid out, but there is no mechanism to communicate it. It's an important thing to communicate to the district."

parental roles, ethics and more of a social, psychological agenda."

Anderson would favor a $30- to $50-million bond to pay for expansion. "Maybe we should think about having a middle school in Canton," he said.

Anderson opposes the idea of selling Central to developers.

"The building is sound and can be renovated and useful. The location is good, and it's a historical building. It lends itself to the small town concept of Plymouth. Not having it would take away from that image and feel."

Regarding controversial materials in the classroom, Anderson said, "I'm not against academic freedom . . . but you have to draw the line when complaints arise. This school board has done a good job of handling complaints the last few years, but I think the issue has really hurt our school district.

"They shouldn't be showing Hollywood movies," he added. "They can be a good tool, but they also can encourage teachers not to do their homework."

Communication on the part of administration is "one thing that's missing," Anderson said. "I try to give people an idea of why I believe in what I believe in. I'd like to know more about what motivates them and what they think education should be doing. Problems aren't dealt with ahead of time."

zens for Better Education, a conservative Christian group.

"If Carl Battishill won I'd feel OK. CBE has good views, but I don't like their tactics. They're not really the voice of the whole community."

Also, Hartke was in favor of expanding the Centennial Education Park where the district's two high schools are now located, she said. She wasn't in favor of building a new high school at a different location or making Plymouth's Central Elementary School a high school.

And Hartke is against selling Central Middle School to developers, she said.

"It's (Central) a good part of the history of the school system and of the town. I really like buildings like that and it's part of what the community is all about."

HARTKE BELIEVES the district needs "a better viewing system" before showing movies in classrooms, she said. The district should give teachers and principals more freedom in making decisions, she said.

"Some R rated movies that have been shown, I think are excellent."

One solution would be to hold group discussions for teachers during which such movies would be talked about before being used.

When asked if school administrators are communicating well enough, Stamp said that principals are doing a good job, but that Superintendent Mike Hoben and school board members aren't.

"The board decides issues before they get input," she said. "They don't want to know what people think."

She said she's in the race because the district seems to keep ending up in a controversy.

"There's a lack of communication on the part of the school board, and the superintendent is isolated from the public," she said.

K.C. Mueller

After additional construction at CEP, Mueller would like to see an in-depth evaluation of where students attend school. It's best for students to attend a school close to home.

Mueller's not opposed to all uses of R-rated movies in school. Some movies are excellent, and may include one objectionable scene or line designed to boost box-office appeal.

Citizens for Better Education members should have the right to review material, she said, and be allowed to excuse their children from class when material is found objectionable.

"Interested parents will make their wishes known as they have in the past."

School administrators need to communicate more effectively. Administrators have a great deal of expertise, but need to look at the whole picture and at public perceptions.

"They don't take the time to explain all the things that are necessary." Administrators, including John Hoben, the superintendent, need to do more to communicate with the public and with district employees.

Realtors in Plymouth and Canton are concerned about the district's image, Mueller said. School officials need to take time to counteract negative publicity related to "The Breakfast Club" viewing and other controversies.

"I think we have a lot of good candidates running," said Mueller, who declined to name those she considers front-runners. She's hoping for a heavy turnout.

"I want the whole community to be heard."

Everyone pitches in during Rouge Rescue

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Come Saturday, June 2, three generations of the Hicks family in Redford Township will have a unique family gathering along the shores of the River Rouge.

Lenore Hicks, 64, son Don and his wife Karen, daughter Joyce Caudill and grandchildren Carla and Rob Caudill, 19 and 16, have volunteered for Rouge Rescue '90, a massive one-day effort aimed at cleaning key sites of a river noted for its metropolitan pollution.

Lenore will again register participants, many of them motivated into action by Karen who for two years has organized township volunteers. Don, Joyce, Carla and Rob are among those who will haul away debris.

"We don't like seeing the river looking so bad," said Lenore of the family effort, an endeavor she believes is paying off. On daily walks in Bell Creek and Lola Valley parks that abut the river, "there are ducks and pheasants," wild fowl that for the first time in years are attracted to a cleaner river.

The annual cleanup project, founded in 1986 and targeting 14 areas this year, is expected to attract 2,700 volunteers, including Scouts, students and senior citizens, members of church, social and recreational clubs, environmentalists, housewives and civic and business leaders.

"IT CULTIVATES the notion we must do something and that by working together on one small part of the river, we can do something," said Bill Gretzinger of the high school students he encourages to participate annually in the Rouge Rescue.

A 19-year staffer at Plymouth Salem High School where he teaches government, Gretzinger and colleague Mike McCauley of Plymouth Canton High School "twist arms" and otherwise motivate sophomore, junior and senior students into volunteering even though the event nearly always conflicts with school prom night.

"Last year, one kid went from the prom (Friday night) to the clean up (Saturday) with no sleep," Gretzinger said. Some 120 students participated. This year, the prom is on the same day. Still, 100 students are expected.

"One issue we study is the environment. We take the kids on educational excursions, including along the Rouge, the terrible parts of the river," Gretzinger said.

Members of the Divine Savior Catholic Parish in Westland view involvement as part of their Christain duty, according to Jeanine Gillikin, a hospital marketing coordinator who suggested the effort after reading about it in the newspaper.

"I suggested it as a Christian service project and everyone agreed," Gillikin said.

'We originally got into it to help the name of the club. But since then, we've found it to be a really worthwhile cause.'
— Dan Morano

DAN MORANO, a member of the metropolitan Rough Country 4-Wheelers Club, suggested it as a club project after hearing a radio appeal for volunteers.

"We originally got into it to help the name of the club," Morano said of the 18 families who are members of the group. "But since then, we've found it to be a really worthwhile cause."

Volunteering for a third year running, four-wheeler members use their powerful trucks to haul fallen trees and other heavy debris from the river. The debris is loaded onto trucks supplied by Waste Management and carted away at a cost to the company of over $54,000, according to Chris Wipp of Waste Management.

The firm, a trash disposal company that services Wayne County communities, became involved at the recommendation of an employee and is one of seven major corporate sponsors of this year's project.

Another is the General Motors Livonia Engine Plant. In addition, some 30 smaller firms contribute services, staff power and money.

SUCH COMBINED efforts of individuals, groups and businesses promote ecological preservation, according to Pat Kobylarz, a Westland native and environmentalist who is active in the Holliday Nature Preserve, a 250-acre park in Westland, Livonia and Canton Township. The Tonquish Creek, a branch of the Rouge, flows through the preserve.

"My father instilled in me a sense of caring about the environment. In order to know where we came from, it's important to keep some areas in a nice natural state," Morano said.

Individuals interested in volunteering for Rouge Rescue '90 may call 427-1234.

Saturday's annual Rouge Rescue will be a family affair for Carla Caudill, left, her mother, Joyce Caudill, grandmother and Lenore Hicks and aunt Karen Hicks. The Redford residents, along with other family members will participate in the cleanup.

Rouge rally is Friday

Rouge Rescue '90 kicks off at 9 a.m. Friday, June 1, with the fourth annual Rouge 2000 Legislative Conference and Rouge Rescue Rally at the Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane on the campus of the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

This year's conference, a prelude to the river clean-up on Saturday, addresses reclamation of the river and future restoration to a position of recreational prominence in southeast Michigan.

The conference begins at 9 a.m. in the Music Room of the Fair Lane mansion.

Among those scheduled to talk are Nancy Watkins of Wayne County Parks and Al Hutchings of the National Park Service, Midwest Environmental Office.

Following the conference, sponsors and community leaders will gather for the Rouge Rescue 90 kick-off rally at noon near the Estate Powerhouse.

The rally will feature James Murray of the Friends of the Rouge environmental oraganization, entertainment and a buffet luncheon.

Elderly care discussed

A symposium on ethics in caring for the elderly, "Ethics and Aging: Continuing Controversies," will be hosted by the Geriatric Education Center of Michigan, Wednesday through Friday, June 13-15, at Eastern Michigan University's Corporate Education Center and Radisson Resort.

The event, the third annual symposium sponsored by the education center, will focus on medical ethics among the elderly, including economics, autonomy and incompetency.

Topics of discussion include living wills, autonomy and informed consent, "do-not-hospitalize" orders in nursing homes, dilemmas in the health care of elderly prisoners, cultural perspectives, elder abuse, health care financing, drug use in the elderly and ethics in long-term care.

Keynote speakers include Dr. Howard Brody of the Center for Ethics and Humanities in the Life Sciences at Michigan State University and the Rev. Thomas Schindler of Mercy Health Services in Farminton Hills.

William Lovett of the state Department of Corrections' Chronically Ill and Geriatraic Prisoners Committee and staff from EMS and MSU will also speak. The education center is a joint venture between the two universities.

The Oldsters, a troupe of performers ages 66 to 83 years, will perform on Friday.

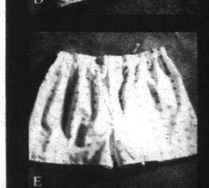

Cost is $180 or $135 for senior citizens and students. Daily attendance is $75 each for Wednesday and Thursday or $60 each for seniors and students. Friday is $50 or $35.

Art work created by students at the Centennial Educational Park was on display this week in the Lower Commons at Plymouth-Salem High School.

The display featured a variety of art forms, including photographs, sketches, paintings and ink drawings.

The work was done by students in Kris Darby and Graham Martin's art classes. The students study drawing and painting.

Many exhibitors are in AP Art, which allows them to apply for college credit for their work.

Darby also teaches a class in Raku pottery.

Lindsey is a 5-year-old diabetic. Her daily insulin shots, diet restrictions and constant blood monitoring only provide day-to-day control over the disease. They do not cure it. So Lindsey, along with 11 million other Americans, still faces the long-term risks of diabetes — like heart disease, blindness, stroke, amputation and kidney disease. The complications of diabetes will account for an estimated 150,000 deaths this year alone.

But thanks to your contributions to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Lindsey and millions like her have something more to look forward to. In the past decade, JDF research has made great strides in isolating the causes and conditions of diabetes, bringing us closer to a cure. At the same time, diabetes increases by 6% every year. And in ten years the number of diabetics will have doubled.

So you see, your help is needed more desperately than ever before. For more information on the warning signs of diabetes and its treatment, and what you can do to help, call JDF at (313) 569-6171.

Marathoners in France aid M.S. research

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Under the French system of socialized medicine, handicapped people are placed in convalescent centers or homes for the disabled in sparsely populated areas. Public buildings aren't accessible to the handicapped, and curb cuts are unheard of. People in wheelchairs are a rare sight.

So imagine the amazement of spectators at the Paris Marathon earlier this month when they realized a wheelchair entrant with multiple sclerosis was among the thousands of competitors in the 26.2-mile race.

For the second straight year, Jim Keskeny completed the marathon with the help of more than a dozen semi-pro football players. Members of "Les Dogues de Suresnes" took turns pushing the 45-year-old Pinckney resident along the fabled boulevards of Paris. They did it in 3:35, knocking 20 minutes off last year's time.

It also marked the second time Keskeny assembled an "M.S. Squad" of marathoners and raised money for multiple sclerosis research.

M.S. is the most common handicapping disease of the central nervous system among young adults in the United States. Nearly 200 new cases are diagnosed each week.

Keskeny and runners John Peters of Plymouth Township, Larry Van Horn of Troy, and Ed and Donna Goettl of Lake Orion raised more than $13,000 in pledges from supporters across the United States, Canada and France.

This year's squad was sponsored by Siemens Automotive, a global automotive electronics systems supplier based in Troy, and British Airways.

Keskeny, an investment manager and counselor, took a disability retirement from Ford Motor Co. in 1977. The University of Michigan graduate was diagnosed with M.S. in 1966.

The home he shares with wife Nancy is equipped with an elaborate ramp system that enables him to wheel from floor to floor. Keskeny also uses the ramps for workouts.

MARATHONERS BEGAN the May 6 race in the shadows of the Arc de Triomphe.

While the temperature climbed into the mid-80's, they ran along the Champs d' Elysees, past the mayor's palace, along the Right Bank of the River Seine, The Tour Eiffel and the French kings' old hunting preserve before reaching the finish line on the Avenue de Foch, Paris' answer to Park Avenue.

"Cobblestones were everywhere, intermittently along the whole course," said Keskeny, who's still sore from the experience.

"There were a good 10 miles of real nasty ones. I seriously believe the French found a way to inject their cobblestones with steroids.

"The Dogues were intent on beating their times from last year, so we were flying," he said.

"My front wheels were vibrating. Those suckers were rattling like they were going to fly off. If the cobblestones were doing that to my chair, imagine what they did to my body. I was a little bloody, but they didn't dump me."

Keskeny describes the finish line, "on a wide boulevard that just reeks of money," as "a dream you might have had sometime. It was like a movie. It was too good to be true. Somehow the Dogues worked it out so that everyone who pushed me took the Metro or subway from whatever point they were along the course to the finish line.

"As we came the last 100 or 200 yards, they were jumping up and down in the air, cheering and yelling. They were happier than I was, really enthused about what we'd done."

Keskeny and the Dogues beat the rest of the M.S. Squad, all able-bodied runners. Peters crossed the finish line in 4:10. Van Horn and the Goettls finished together in 4:50.

MOST GRATIFYING for Keskeny was the realization that in just a year's time, awareness of the handicapped has increased in France.

"At our hotel, the Meridien Paris Etoile, our host Jean-Pierre Waldbauer told me he remembered something I'd said last year. He said, 'I remember you said you're not disabled, you're differently abled.' It really pleased me, naturally," said Keskeny, who was asked by hotel management to advise them on ways to make their rooms and facilities handicapped accessible.

"They're starting to employ handicapped people, including a few with M.S., on the switchboard and behind the scenes," Keskeny added.

What's more, the Dogues and the French Multiple Sclerosis Society have staged benefit football games during the past year to raise money for research.

"Something like that is surprising because from everything I've heard if you had multiple sclerosis, you were shoved off into the back room and forgotten about," said Keskeny. "Now, almost every weekend there are high society benefit dinners, movie premieres and concerts. That was unheard of a few years ago."

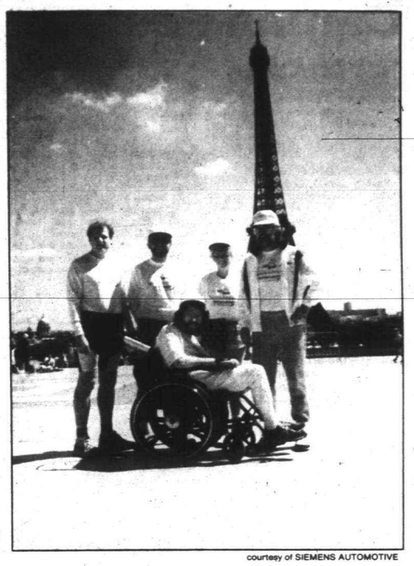

Keskeny said he was treated like a star by government, marathon and M.S. officials, the Dogues and fellow runners.

"To have all the different people touched by it respond as favorably to the idea was really an unbelievably satisfying feeling," Keskeny said. "It amazed me that we could create such interest and enthusiasm."

The London-based International Federation of Multiple Sclerosis Societies is among those caught up in the excitement. In commemoration of the organization's 25th anniversary in 1992, it plans to send Keskeny and an M.S. Squad to marathons in Paris, Berlin, Sydney, Rio de Janeiro, London and New York.

As for Siemens, sponsoring the squad was a pleasure, said Tim Leuliette, company president.

"As corporate sponsors of the M.S. Paris Marathon, it has been extremely satisfying to be able to help raise the consciousness of the public regarding this debilitating disease on a worldwide basis. And it has been particularly moving to watch M.S. marathoners like Jim Keskeny take such a positive approach to life."

Inflammatory Bowel Diseases

As many as 2 million Americans suffer from either of two major inflammatory diseases of the bowel or intestine. These two conditions – ulcerative colitis and Crohn's disease – can occur at any age, most often affecting individuals between ages 12 and 18.

Inflammatory bowel diseases often cause fever, cramps, weight loss and "bloody" diarrhea. Although the exact reason for bowel inflammation is unknown, some health experts believe a toxic or infectious material triggers an immune response that ultimately results in a painful and swollen intestine. The swelling may become so pronounced that it becomes difficult for waste materials to pass to the rectum.

Prescription steroids, such as prednisone, may relieve inflammation. Because of the potential side effects, oral steroids should be used with caution. Topical application of steroids such as beclomethasone, is accomplished through the use of steroid enemas. Other prescription medicines which have shown to be effective in the relief of bowel inflammation include sulfasalazine, 5-ASA, and ACTH. Diarrhea, if present, may be treated with diphenoxylate and loperamide. If anemia becomes a problem, iron and folic acid supplements may be needed.

Candidates, causes could get 'McMoney'

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

While it's possible Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara's hefty campaign fund may be spent on a re-election campaign this fall, it is as likely much of the money will be spent on other matters, according to his chief fund-raiser David Katz.

Options include a full or scaled-down campaign aimed at maintaining McNamara's public image, an August campaign in support of renewed millage for the Wayne County jail, financing items in the county budget now frozen or entirely deleted and supporting other Democrats running for election.

"It's a moving decision, not one cast in concrete. We meet frequently and discuss the options," said Katz, an assistant Wayne County executive in charge of lobbying who also serves as chief fund-raiser for the Friends of McNamara election committee.

McNamara's campaign chest, reported to be nearly $400,000 in February, was boosted considerably May 4. An annual breakfast raised $500,000, Katz said. Another five to 10 events, expected to raise $5,000 to $10,000 each, are scheduled in upcoming months and campaign cards soliciting funds have been mailed to McNamara supporters.

Re-election fund-raising activities were planned prior to May 15, the filing deadline for opposing candidates, Katz said.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara has an estimated $900,000 in his campaign war chest — with no announced opponent. McNamara is considering using some of his cash to support other county and state candidates and causes, according to staff members.

"WE WERE PREPARING for the toughest possible candidate, in anticipation of a rough campaign. Now that we don't have an opponent, we have scaled back our (fund-raising) efforts considerably. We're not actively twisting arms for donations," Katz said, adding, "The best time for peace is when you're prepared for war."

Four years ago, when McNamara first ran for the county executive office, he spent $500,000.

Advisers to McNamara's election committee may yet decide to run a full campaign this time around, including mailings and radio and television commercials, Katz said, because "it's a normal election cycle. It keeps his name in the public light. I anticipate his running again in four years."

McNamara may also opt to use a portion of the money in mounting a campaign in support of renewing the jail millage, according to Katz. Such expenditures are legal if the money is first transferred to McNamara's office holder expense fund.

Transferred funds are now used to support other candidates for office by purchasing tickets to fund-raising affairs. Five such tickets were purchased at $200 each for a "shish-kebash" in honor of Gov. James Blanchard.

"WE ARE PUTTING effort into getting good Democrats elected. During 20 years in public life, (McNamara) has always been a loyal patron to other Democrats, his friends," Katz said.

Campaign money transferred to the expense fund is also used to finance such budget items as travel for employees who are required to do so in the course of their employment.

As a lobbyist for the county, for example, Katz said he frequently travels to Lansing and Washington D.C. Funds for such purposes, frozen this fiscal year, are paid for from the expense fund.

A full accounting of all such expenditures will be submitted as required by law the last week of July, Katz said.

WCCC to seek tax increase

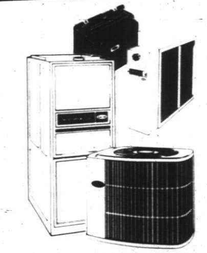

The Wayne County Community College Board of Trustees, seeking increased county funding of the school, will ask voters for a 1-mill increase in tax funding during primary elections on Aug. 7. The tax rate for participating school districts, including South Redford, Redford Union and Wayne-Westland, is currently one-quarter mill.

The request, expected to generate an estimated $15 million, would significantly increase income. In a total operating budget this school year of $36 million, $3.9 million came from district participation. Another $24.7 was provided by the state, with student tuition providing the remainder.

If the new millage is approved, $14.3 million income from state funds would be eliminated, according to trustee president Charles Morton.

"Since we are not asking for new or increased funding, we will be looking at ways to reduce our expenditures while at the same time holding down tuition costs," Morton said.

Japanese firm coming to Plymouth

A Japanese subsidiary firm's $5 million technical center is planned for Plymouth Township.

Koyo Seiko Ltd., a worldwide maker of anti-friction bearings, plans to break ground on the facility any day. Completion is scheduled for December 1990, a company spokeswoman said.

The 27,000-square-foot facility "at the outset will house a staff of 20 engineering and sales personnel," said Susan Kinkoph, American Koyo Corp. spokeswoman.

"The new technical center, Koyo's first outside of Japan, will serve as the research and development center in the United States for Koyo bearings and bearing-related products," Kinkoph said.

The facility is planned for the Metro West Technology Park, west of Beck Road and north of M-14.

"In addition to the technical center, the new facility will also house (the firm's) sales offices for automotive bearings and machine tools, now located in Southfield.

"The facility will also be devoted to the promotion of non-bearing products like machine tools and will also house a machine demonstration area," Kinkoph continued.

Township clerk Esther Hulsing said the firm has not filed for a tax abatement, but has roughly six months to do so.

Township officials have approved 12-year, 50-percent tax breaks for several firms leaving neighboring suburbs for the township's developing industrial parks.

Instructor Tim O'Hare, left, and his students, Ciaron Ferns of Livonia, Paul Cusick and Patrick McInerney, both of Plymouth, prepare for the Detroit International Feis, a competition in Irish cultural events. Traditional Irish music and dance will be performed. Performers from throughout the Midwest and Canada will be featured. Events begin 9 a.m. Saturday, June 2 at the Eddie Edgar Arena, Livonia.

Fest highlights Irish song, dance

The Detroit International Feis, with support from the Detroit Council for the Arts and Michigan Council for the Arts, will present a program of competition in Irish cultural events Saturday, June 2, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Eddie Edgar Arena off Farmington Road at Livonia.

Admission is $5 per adult. Children will be admitted free.

Included will be Irish step and figure dancing, original choreography, recitation, singing and competition in traditional instruments.

The 28th annual Feis is a continuation of an ancient heritage going back to the second millenium B.C. It has survived despite centuries of oppression.

The Feis provides a forum for young Americans to demonstrate the cultural heritage of Ireland. Through competition, young people try to perfect their skills in the disciplines of Irish dancing, music and song.

Entrants from Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Canada are entered in the Livonia competition.

Michigan's competitors come from Plymouth, Canton, Northville, Livonia, Warren, Jackson, Brighton and Saginaw.

Timothy O'Hare, who teaches at Dance Unlimited in Plymouth; Michael O'Hare, who teaches in Warren and Jackson; and Patricia O'Neill, a teacher in Brighton are helping students prepare for the event.

More than 75 of the 300 competitors will be representing Michigan cities.

"Irish music and dance is delightful to hear and see, especially when it is performed by children wearing traditional costumes and keeping alive the traditions of their heritage," said Noreen Cusick, whose son, Paul is an accomplished Irish step dancer.

Equal education amendment eyed for ballot

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A House panel is advancing a state constitutional amendment requiring "equal opportunity for education" amid fears it will hurt affluent suburbs in the name of helping the poor.

The measure also would raise the proportion of the state budget spent on all education — kindergarten through the doctorate level — from the current 45.6 percent to 52 percent in five years.

"Educational opportunity has been determined by property wealth," the sponsor, Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, told the Education Committee Tuesday.

But an opponent, Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, said, "There's no guarantee this will help my school district. I'm elected to represent my district."

CHAIRMAN William Keith, D-Garden City, won passage of the plan, known as House Joint Resolution Q, and sent it to the House floor. The vote was 13-4 with two absent.

Area members voting yes were Keith and Justine Barns, D-Westland.

Voting no were Bankes and James Kosteva, D-Canton. Their major school districts get no state aid and are fighting Keith's efforts to eliminate their categorical aids.

The measure requires a two-thirds vote of both chambers to go on the Nov. 6 ballot and majority approval by voters to become part of the state constitution.

HJRQ would:

- Require the Legislature to provide "equal opportunity for education for each public elementary and secondary school pupil." (Currently, the constitution requires only "free" K-12 schooling without racial or religious bias.)
- Dedicate all lottery profits and interest to the school aid fund.
- Mandate the Legislature to raise spending for elementary, secondary, community college and higher education to at least 47.5 percent of available state revenue in fiscal 1991-2, then to 49, 50.5 and 52 percent by 1994-5.

"Available revenue" is defined as the general fund budget plus the dedicated school aid fund.

First year improvement would be $179 million, a co-sponsor said.

PROFIT SAID his proposal would provide "a constitutional foundation" for equal opportunity — "not dollar for dollar; it would allow local school districts to enhance their programs."

Bankes said poor school districts which want to sue the state for more aid found their case was badly harmed because the state constitution currently fails to require equal opportunity.

"This would allow a judicial opportunity to override the Legislature and local control," said Bankes, pointing to court rulings in Kentucky and Texas.

"These 100 poor, in-formula school districts need 'equal opportunity' for their lawsuit to be successful," Bankes said after the meeting.

KEITH SAID said it's wise to lump all education funding into one budget category because "if you have a bulge (population boom) running through the system, you need the flexibility between higher education and K-12."

Another supporter, Rep. Joe Young Jr., D-Detroit, agreed, calling the measure a "holistic" system. "I'd want heavy emphasis on K-12," Young added.

Bankes, however, fears the money will be dispersed too broadly.

"It can be dispersed without paying for social security, retirement or categoricals," she said.

"If there's a recession," Bankes said, "maintaining 52 percent for education could mean cuts in social services and mental health.

"It was a philosophical vote and not a practical vote. Philosophically, I'm for it — but this is the real world."

A BUSINESS group opposed the measure, but three education groups supported it.

Steve Young, lobbyist for the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, objected to the "trigger language of equal opportunity . . . We don't need the buzzword language of equal opportunity." But he liked the section raising the state budget's percentage for all education.

Lobbyist Al Short said the Michigan Education Association, the state's largest teachers' union, "fully supports it. Public education has to be priority number one for state government."

Ellen Hoekstra, representing the Michigan Federation Teachers, said that union "strongly supports" the measure. "If we look at other states' court rulings, we see 'equal opportunity' is more than an educational buzzword, as the State Chamber says."

Tom White, lobbyist for the Michigan Association of School Boards, said local elected officials "support the general concepts. 'Equal opportunity' provides a useful constitutional policy statement."

A proposed state constitutional amendment requiring "equal opportunity for education" would raise the proportion of the state budget spent on all education — kindergarten through the doctorate level — from the current 45.6 percent to 52 percent in five years.

Candidates

Battishill, Sumpter the best

DURING A DEBATE for Plymouth-Canton school board candidates held Tuesday by the League of Women Voters, Carl Battishill sounded like the front runner.

We hope he is.

We think Battishill should be elected to the school board when voters go to the polls June 11.

Selecting another candidate from the field is tough. We think most could do a good job.

But we're endorsing Richard Sumpter. He's not the most glitzy candidate but is a plain-speaking man who can get to the heart of an issue and come up with a sensible solution.

We think the board needs somebody like Sumpter.

THE SCHOOL board hasn't been the most responsive public body in the area, and we think that Battishill and Sumpter will help change that.

We also think the school board should be asking school administrators tougher questions. We think Battishill and Sumpter will do that.

Battishill has a firm grasp on the issues. He knows school financing, buildings and, most of all, kids. He's a band director with the West Bloomfield schools, and that shows. He has a real sensitivity for kids.

What impressed us about Sumpter is his ability to cut through the muck surrounding a controversial issue and come up with a sensible solution. When asked about the use of R-rated movies in the classroom, he noted that many such movies are shown on television. "Why not show the television version in the schools?" he asked.

WE ALSO noticed that Sumpter has the ability to cut through the educational-style language use by educators to confuse everyone else. We've often thought that school board members often hide their decisions behind such language.

And we would look to Sumpter to cut through it and summarize the situation for the rest of us.

But while we think that Sumpter and Battishill can do the job, there are other candidates who sounded good to us.

One is Toni Hartke of Plymouth. She's a professional educator who seems sane and sensible and who we hope stays involved in school board politics. She reminds us a bit of Carl Battishill a year ago — a person with something to say but without the political experience. There's another election coming up next year, and we hope that Hartke is around.

WE ALSO think that K.C. Mueller should stick with it. We admire Mueller's outspokeness. It's a good trait for a board member. However, we think that Mueller needs to become more aware of the entire Plymouth-Canton community. We think she should try again next year.

And then there are Diane Stamp and Robert Anderson. The two are backed by Citizens for Better Education, a conservative Christian group seeking more conservative-style education for children.

Anderson has mellowed during the past year and has seemed to realize the complexity of this community. He seems to know now that a quick fix of conservatism in the schools isn't going to solve everything.

HOWEVER, WE question his ability to represent the entire school district. His idea to turn Central Middle School into a small, conservative high school smacks of Christian conservative elitism. To us the idea says: "We want our own little school inside of the system."

That's something the school district can't do. It can't cater to every special interest group. If it did, public education would disintegrate.

That's why we think Battishill and Sumpter are the best in the field. We think they will represent everybody in the Plymouth-Canton School District fairly, openly and honestly.

Time for board to address how to assess school plan

While the state board is preparing its new core curriculum, it might well think how it will assess success. We shouldn't make old mistakes while starting in new directions.

Philip Power

THE BIG city papers and TV news shows missed it, of course, because it's hard to sensationalize. But a revolution is brewing in the schools.

Last month the State Board of Education adopted a plan to develop a core curriculum for all schools. It is a fundamental change in direction for our kindergarten-through-12th grade system — away from specifying hours of study and years of attendance and toward defining subjects and testing students for what they actually learn.

Here's how it's supposed to work:

THE STATE board has set out five broad subject areas — arts (such as music and painting), health and physical education, language, math and science, and world studies (history, civics).

Next, "Measurement of student attainment of the desired educational outcomes at the state, district and building levels is an integral part of a good core curriculum model." I think this means: "Students will be tested to verify they have learned what they are supposed to."

Local school boards also are supposed to comment on the proposal to the state board during summer.

In September, the state board is scheduled to approve the model core curriculum and distribute it to every public and non-public school. By July 1991 all districts are to start working to the new standard.

UNTIL NOW, a high school diploma has been one of our society's greatest rip-offs.

To parents and prospective employers, a diploma has been marketed as a proof of education. In fact, a diploma proves nothing except that a kid sat in class 12 years without being expelled.

The state board says it will require that Michigan children learn, and be examined in, specified subjects. I didn't see anything in the handout from the state Department of Education about denying diplomas to kids who fail the exam, but it seems silly to test and do nothing about those who didn't measure up.

Just maybe we are developing an education system interested in outcomes and not process — i.e., one concerned about what kids actually learn instead of the process by which they are supposed to learn.

GOOD. NOW we should focus on the way we test in America.

American school kids take more tests than kids in any other country. But those tests are almost always about small bits of fact or answers to little problems. They don't assess a student's ability to think or put facts together into a pattern.

Worse, few Americans are ever subjected to an external exam — by someone other than their own teacher. Until recently, achievement tests prepared and administered by a body independent of the local school were rare. The Michigan Education Achievement Test is now routinely administered to children in our schools. The results (or lack) are driving the state to introduce a core curriculum.

Even worse: The tests with significant effect on a kid's career — like the SAT college entrance test — are deliberately decoupled from the school curriculum. There is no syllabus to be followed in preparing for them, on the theory that students aren't supposed to "cram" for them.

Result: Our education system doesn't clearly reward academic efforts of either students or teachers. Unlike athletic coaches, who know what kind of contest their teams face and can both coach and motivate their squads, academic teachers are cut off from effort, achievement and reward.

While the state board is preparing its new core curriculum, it might well think out how it will assess success. We shouldn't make old mistakes while starting in new directions.

Rouge Rescue

Keep Earth Day spirit alive

Earth Day told us we could make a difference. Rouge Rescue '90 gives us that opportunity. Call your city or township hall or Friends of the Rouge, 427-1234, for site details.

GET OUT THAT Earth Day T-shirt — and wear it to Rouge Rescue '90 on Saturday, June 2.

Organizers hope the Earth Day spirit carries over for this year's Rescue.

The Rouge Rescue is a good followup to Earth Day because it gives people the chance to roll up their sleeves and do some needed work to help clean up the environment.

First organized in 1986, the Rouge Rescue has already made a difference. Log jams and debris already cleared have helped the heavily polluted Rouge clean itself.

Though there's much work still to be done, Wayne County officials are already talking about returning canoes to sections of the Rouge — something almost impossible to conceive just a few years back.

But the Rouge isn't vital to just Wayne County. It flows through many southern and eastern Oakland County communities as well.

IN A SENSE, Rouge Rescue organizers anticipated the environmental movement that's now sweeping the country. But there's a price to be paid for being ahead of the times. While interest has remained high among a core group of workers, the Rouge Rescue needs new, energetic workers if it's to remain a vital area event. Organizers are hoping for 2,000-3,000 people this time around.

Earth Day told us we could make a difference. Rouge Rescue '90 gives us that opportunity.

Wayne County cleanup sites are being offered in Livonia, Westland, Plymouth and Redford.

Oakland cleanup sites are being offered in Birmingham, Southfield, Farmington Hills, Walled Lake and on the Oakland Community College Orchard Ridge campus.

Call your city or township hall or Friends of the Rouge, 427-1234, for site details.

Fond farewell

OCC chief leaves lasting mark

Standing on the shoulders of giants, R. Stephen Nicholson was able to put his own stamp of advancement on Oakland Community College during his 4½ years as chief executive.

STANDING ON the shoulders of giants, R. Stephen Nicholson was able to put his own stamp of advancement on Oakland Community College during his 4½ years as chief executive.

OCC started life 25 years ago with Jack Tirrell, the president who effectively got the show on the road and operating. Joe Hill was the theoretician on cognitive learning styles, which means different people learn by different techniques. Bob Roelofs brought many vocational-technical programs on stream for a changing industrial job market, and never let anyone see him sweat about the grim revenue picture of the big recession.

Nicholson — a sociologist, cultural anthropologist and former missionary in Japan — made OCC conscious of the area's place in a world economy.

His years produced a Futures Institute, scanning future scenarios for the county; two speeches by futurist Robert Theobald; a view of the World Game, an exercise in understanding world resources distribution developed by Buckminster Fuller; growth of the Business & Professional Institute; development of a college presence in downtown Pontiac; a computer integrated manufacturing program with the help of international corporate giants who happen to have located here; advancment of an OCC Foundation; leadership of a study group to Israel and Jordan . . . and so on.

The attention he got in Jordan led the United Arab Emirates to recruit Nicholson as vice chancellor in charge of the country's technological schools. At 64, a man who has led community colleges in Las Vegas, Chicago, Oregon and Oakland County is heading for new adventures in the Middle East.

Fondly we wish him well.

And we wish the OCC Board of Trustees happy hunting in its search for a fifth giant.

CBE bashing isn't fair

To the editor:

I have been a member of CBE (Citizens for Better Education) since its beginning. I still can't understand a few things. Will some fair-minded member of the opposition educate me, and also themselves.

Why is it that anyone opposed, when advocating fair mindedness and freedom from name calling, will always refer to us in this way — CBE (Citizens Banning All Education — Citizens Bashing Education) and six or eight other choice phrases. I think that's dishonest, like many other arguments of theirs.

Then again, the basic argument in these 3½ years has been "censorship." It seems that censorship is the greatest evil in the world. According to the dictionary censorship means criticism. If we criticize the school board, that's censorship. If we are criticized and lied about that's plainly only honest, truthful criticism.

Let me remind that school authorities have made serious mistakes in the past. Doing away with phonics in teaching reading. And the new math didn't turn out so well. Also assuming that third graders will evaluate what they hear and see (all about both good and bad) in the same way an educated Phd. will.

Columnist prejudiced

To the editor:

Your columnist Jack Gladden expresses an alarming degree of prejudice against the pro-life movement. One wonders what motivates such hostility, as he condemns the picketing of abortionists' homes and ridicules pro-life leaders (May 17 Observer op/ed page).

This century has seen the unprecedented rise of legislation to protect the handicapped, the disadvantaged, ethnic minorities, etc. I am sure that Mr. Gladden supports such advances in human and civil rights. But the abortion rights movement is a giant step backwards.

Who is more helpless or less able to speak on his/her own behalf than an unborn child? When the abortionist dismembers and suctions from the womb the tiny body of a developing baby (for a substantial profit) is this not an assault upon all who are "dependent" or in need of special care?

I would certainly feel greater respect for your newspaper's commitment to human rights and free speech if you would provide for more balanced coverage of the pro-life cause.

A legacy of kindness left by friend to many

Steve Barnaby

SAYING GOODBYE to a special friend is never easy, especially when that friend has died.

But this past week, hundreds of us found comfort in the sheer numbers of those saying goodbye to Marie McGee. From congressmen, county executive and mayor, from friends of decades past, from colleagues and corporate executives, the community mourned.

Marie's death was a surprise to everyone. She just wasn't the sickly type. Just the opposite. She was always there, always working and doing it with a vigor unparalleled by most.

WHEN THINKING of Marie you thought of energy and laughing. You thought of a person who cared more than most, whether it be for her children, her co-workers, her company or her community. She was just that way.

For those of us in the newspaper business, she was the essence of what a journalist should be — diligent in the quest for truth, but compassionate in the pursuit.

She set a high standard, a very high standard. And the one thing that irritated her more than anything else were those who were willing to settle for less than perfection, no matter the excuse.

Those lacking perception often missed that very important quality about Marie. Unlike a lot of the power brokers lounging around our society, Marie was devoid of a large ego.

She concentrated on more important things, like listening and doing. She was a very wise listener and a great doer.

And as many of you realize, Marie wore many hats, often on the same day.

We at the Observer & Eccentric knew her as a journalist who touched all segments of the community through her work on the multitude of special sections, from fashion, to weddings, to home furnishings, to the arts. She could do it all.

HER children knew her as a mother who for the past 12 years raised her five children on her own after her husband died. Many in the Livonia community knew her as a civic activist, serving at one time or another on the Livonia Arts Commission, Historical Commission, the advisory committee of the Women's Resource Center at Schoolcraft College and, of course there was Greenmead.

My, how she loved Greenmead, the historical village on Eight Mile Road. And just last week she was elected to the board of directors of the local Zonta chapter, a woman's professional organization.

And although her depth of participation represented how much she cared for her community, just knowing Marie was the real bonus. She added to everyone's life who allowed themselves to be touched by her quiet wisdom and kindness.

I'll always feel sorry for those who didn't avail themselves of the opportunity to know Marie. They missed out on knowing a very important person.

But then, as John Donne tells us, death "comes equally to us all." Being the democrat that Marie was, big "D" and small "d", alike, she would understand that better than many.

Know names behind school finance equity

Tim Richard

Few people in these parts realize that many school districts in the state are genuinely hurting financially. An increasing number are bumping up against the absolute constitutional limit of 50 mills as a property tax rate. Most people around the metro suburbs don't know there is such a thing.

BILL KEITH and James O'Neill Jr. are two state representatives whose names aren't exactly household words outside their home towns of Garden City and Saginaw, respectively.

Better learn those names. Now that voters have rejected higher taxes for schools, these two lawmakers are pushing for the goal of equity in state school funding.

Keith, 60, a banker and former school board member, chairs the House Education Committee. He has 17 years seniority. O'Neill, 61, a former school administrator, chairs the House Appropriations school aid subcommittee. He has 23 years seniority.

Some of Michigan's 562 public school districts spend only $2,500 per pupil. They are mostly small and rural, with no industry, no high technology plants, no offices, no giant malls, no movie houses with four theaters.

Other districts spend as much as $8,000 per pupil. They have most of the above. Many are clustered in a belt from Troy to Ann Arbor. Most get no general state aid because of their healthy property tax bases.

Many Observer & Eccentric areas are in that belt. I live in that belt, too.

Life is not all luxury, however. Our property values are rising, but so are our assessments and taxes.

Yet few people in these parts realize that many school districts in the state are genuinely hurting financially. An increasing number are bumping up against the absolute constitutional limit of 50 mills as a property tax rate. Most people around the metro suburbs don't know there is such a thing.

KEITH AND O'Neill came up with a revolutionary plan to take what few categorical grants the high tech belt gets and pump as much as possible into the general state aid bill. The categoricals are mainly Social Security, pensions and grants for specialized programs.

Naturally, the reps from Troy, Birmingham, Southfield, Livonia, Redford and Plymouth either ganged up to vote no or else didn't vote, the equivalent of voting no. In the O&E circulation area, only Keith and Justine Barns of Westland voted yes on Senate Bill 830 (House substitute 3), the Keith sponsored version of the school aid bill.

In the high tech belt's eyes, it was a Soviet version of Robin Hood — take from the rich so that everybody will be mediocre. It added no new money to the overall state aid bill.

BUT IN THE outstate counties of Eaton and Clinton and Livingston, they loved SB 830 (H-3), giving it 56 votes, a bare majority. It goes to a House Senate conference committee to iron out the differences.

Even if the Keith sub doesn't prevail this year, it will be back next year. The economic forces of nature are behind him. My bet is he will prevail.

Keith argues it's false to say, as many editorials do, that out of formula school districts in the high tech belt get no state aid. They get millions for the retirement benefits.

To his mind, "equity" is not robbing the rich to make everybody mediocre. Equity became a necessity in Kentucky, where the courts declared the whole funding system unconstitutional. Kentucky's repair bill is running to $1.2 billion, the equivalent of nearly $3 billion in Michigan.

Keith's goal isn't just taking from the rich but making more districts eligible for general state aid — 90 percent instead of the current 70 percent.

Frankly, I am cool to the Keith plan. I'd rather raise everybody up to an adequate level than knock down a few rich districts for the sake of equity.

But the political realities are that many outstate districts are hurting.

So we need to know those two names: Keith and O'Neill.

Some teachers, pupils play hooky

Doc Doyle

The bottom line is some 4-year-olds are very ready for school, some are not and each has to be considered as the unique individual he/she is.

Q: I read your article about teachers using their sick days for vacation days and, as a teacher I take exception. This give us a bad image and I don't appreciate it.

A: You obviously didn't read the entire article, which stated that the majority of teachers will go to work when they are not feeling well to be with their children.

You have been in education for 22 years and haven't heard of hooky by students and some teachers? Shame on you.

Frankly, I have received comments from several teachers and administrators in different districts who say those who complained the most about the articles are the greatest abusers of sick days and personal business days.

Obviously, you have never played hooky.

Q: Your article about a young 5-year-old who it seems was not ready for school and should be held back a year was interesting. What do you mean by a young 5-year-old kindergarten child? How young is young? I don't understand.

A: Children are eligible for kindergarten if they are 5 years old on or before Dec. 1 of the school year in which they are enrolled. Therefore, a child could be 4 years old and eligible for school if the child's birthday is in November of the year he/she is enrolled.

That 4-year-old child could be in a class with children who become 5 a year earlier. All things being equal, it is tough for 4-year-old children entering kindergarten and competing with 5-year-olds who could turn 6 after a few months in school.

The bottom line is some 4-year-olds are very ready for school, some are not and each has to be considered as the unique individual he/she is.

Use the advice of the building principal, kindergarten teacher, speech therapist, school psychologist, all who are involved in cases which take a closer look. They really want the best for your child.

Adventures await young readers

Programs offer fun for children

By Julie Brown
staff writer

YOUNGSTERS IN the Plymouth-Canton community will soon finish another school year, but that doesn't mean they have to stop learning.

Local public libraries offer summer reading programs for school-age children who can read on their own and for preschoolers.

"I think that most parents are interested in having their children continue with their reading," said Pam Rawlinson, assistant director of the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth.

Registration for the summer reading program at the Dunning-Hough Library will begin Monday, June 18. The Canton Public Library also offers summertime programs for children. (See related story.)

"Batches of Books" is the theme of this year's summer reading program at the Dunning-Hough Library. The program is for children ages 6-12 who can read on their own.

THE LIBRARY'S preschool "Read to Me" program is for youngsters age 6 and under who don't yet read on their own. Registration for that program will also begin Monday, June 18, in person at the library, 223 S. Main in Plymouth.

Parents and children who wish to register are asked to come to the library's youth room. Registration for the programs in Plymouth will continue throughout the summer.

School-age youngsters are asked to sign a contract indicating how many books they'll read, and must read a minimum of three books. Librarians try to encourage them to have realistic expectations.

"We let them decide how many books they think they can read. Sometimes they think, 'Oh, I can read 50 books in six weeks,'" Rawlinson said. Many of the children are avid readers, but other summertime activities, such as sports and camp, keep them busy as well.

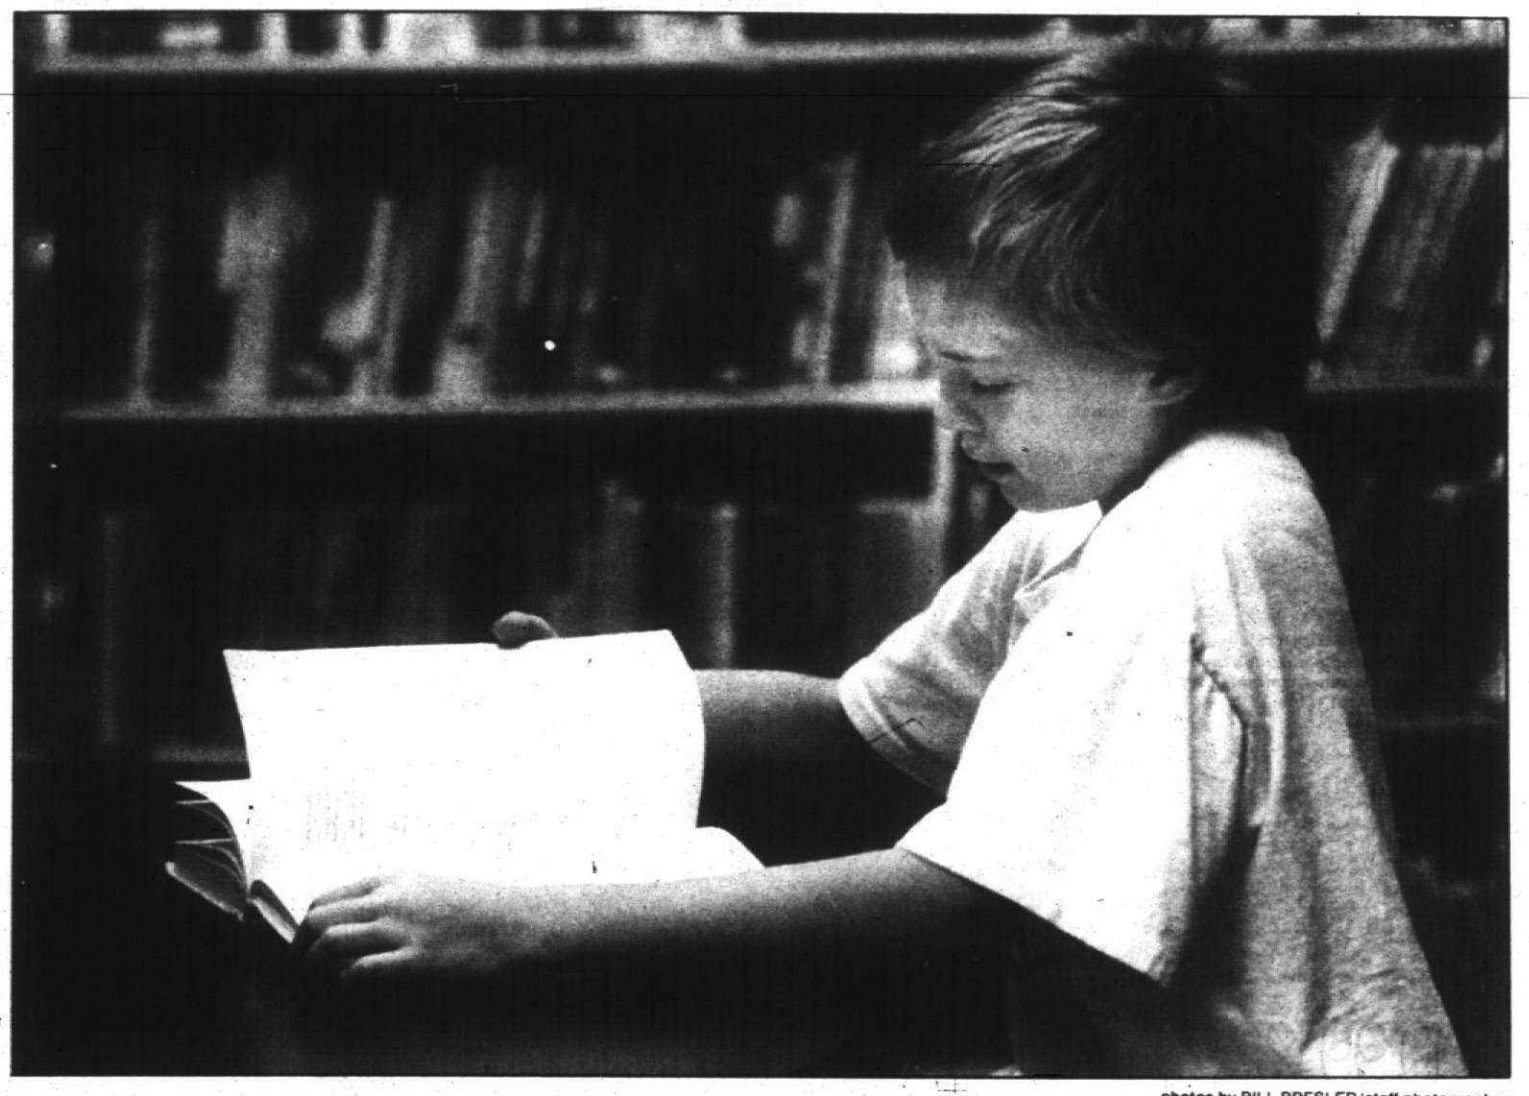

The summer reading program will end with a 2 p.m. Friday, Aug. 3, awards celebration at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer. Children must complete their contracts to be eligible to go to the party.

School-age children are asked to come to the library once a week to report on books they've read. Children will keep a record of what they've read throughout the summer.

A NUMBER of fun-filled activity sessions are planned for school-age children, including:

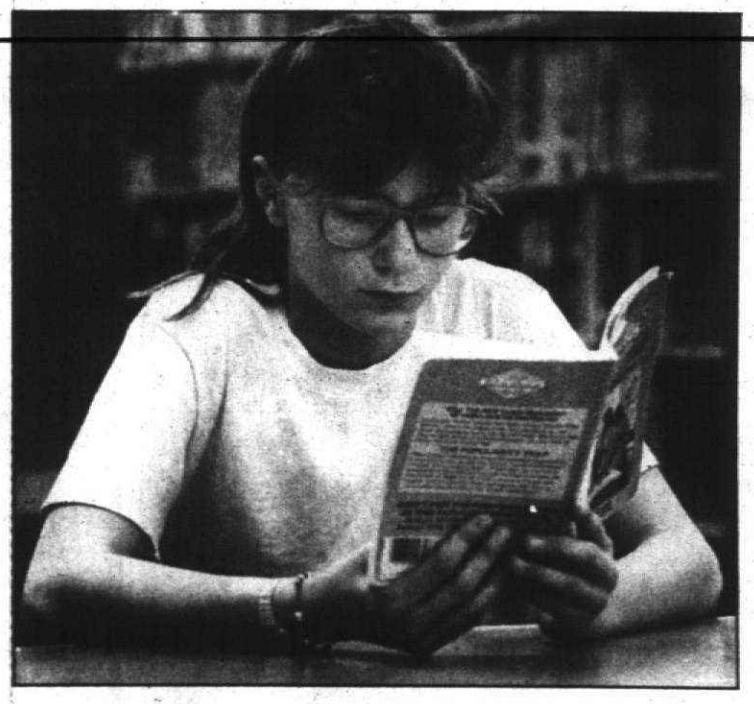

- 2 p.m. Thursday, June 21, at the library, a program for children ages 6-8. Singer and storyteller Maureen Schiffman will present a "Menu of Books," a collection of songs, stories and puppetry about food.
- 2 p.m. Thursday, June 28, at the library, a program for children ages 9-12. Maureen Schiffman will present a "Menu of Books."

Library: A lively place to be

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Last year, some 1,100 children signed up for summer reading activities at the Canton Public Library.

"I think they enjoy reading," said Judy Teachworth, head of youth services. "They like to come to the library."

In 1989, about 400 preschool children participated in the "Read to Me" program and about 700 school-age kids signed up for the summer reading program.

Registration for both of this year's programs will begin Monday, June 18, at the youth department of the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center, south of Cherry Hill. The summer reading program, which has a "Batches of Books" theme, is for children in first through eighth grades who read independently.

"It's to encourage reading in the summer," Teachworth said. Participating in the program helps children develop their reading skills while having fun.

PARTICIPANTS WILL get a certificate if they read at least five books. Registration for the programs must be done in person at the library and will continue through Wednesday, July 18.

Several activity sessions are planned for the summer reading program. Participants must also register for each program, and that can be done by telephone or in person.

Sessions for school-age children will be held:

- 2-2:30 p.m. Monday, July 2, in the library meeting room, a program featuring Ming the Magnificent, a magician, and his assistant, Barbara. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. Monday, June 25.
- 2-2:45 p.m. Tuesday, July 10, in the library meeting room, a "Chautauqua Express" musical adventure led by Guy Sferlazza. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. Monday, July 2.
- 2-2:45 p.m. Wednesday, July 18, in the meeting room, a program featuring Professor Bloono's magic tricks and balloon sculpture. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, July 11.
- 2-2:45 p.m. Thursday, July 26, in the meeting room, a musical program featuring Maureen Schiffman's "Menu of Books." Friends of the Canton Public Library members will serve refreshments at the final celebration event. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, July 19.

LIBRARIANS DECIDED to hold activity sessions on different days of the week this year, so that as many children as possible could attend, Teachworth said. Parents aren't required to attend activity sessions with school-age children.

Two activity sessions are planned for younger children in the "Read to Me" program, and an adult needs to attend with each child or group. Sessions will feature a brown bag lunch and story time.

"There will be a simple craft," she said. Youngsters are to bring their own markers and crayons for the craft activities.

The first "Read to Me" session will be held, rain or shine, 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 11, at

Flair

Going in style: just a matter of principle

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Gerald Ostoin doesn't wear casual clothes to work.

"Occasionally, I'll wear a sport jacket, but predominantly suits," said Ostoin, principal of Plymouth Salem High School. "I really can't explain it. It's just part of my responsibility to the pride of the school."

Gerald Ostoin wears suits to work most days. This is Ostoin's fourth year as principal at Plymouth Salem High School.

This is Ostoin's fourth year as Salem principal. He joined the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools in the early 1970s and was an area coordinator at Centennial Educational Park before becoming principal.

Before that, Ostoin was a junior high assistant principal and a teacher with the Willow Run school district. He's dressed in a business-like way throughout his professional life, and believes that's appropriate for someone in his position.

"I tend to be real traditional when it comes to how I dress. I've always worn a tie and a suit or sport jacket."

SCHOOL WILL soon be out for the year, but Ostoin will continue to work. He wears slightly more casual attire to work in the summer, including white and pastel clothing, "cotton stuff, lightweight sport jackets." Even during the summer, he likes to wear clothes that project a professional image.

off the cuff

Rustle Shand

Ostoin, a Dearborn Heights resident, owns a power boat and wears clothes with a "yachting flair" for boating. That might include a double-breasted navy blue jacket and white slacks.

"When I'm not at school, the last thing I do is wear a suit."

In his younger days, Ostoin worked for several years as a musician while getting his degree. That's had an influence on his wardrobe.

"I've always liked jazz, so I give a jazz lecture to the humanities classes. I get a tuxedo every time I do that."

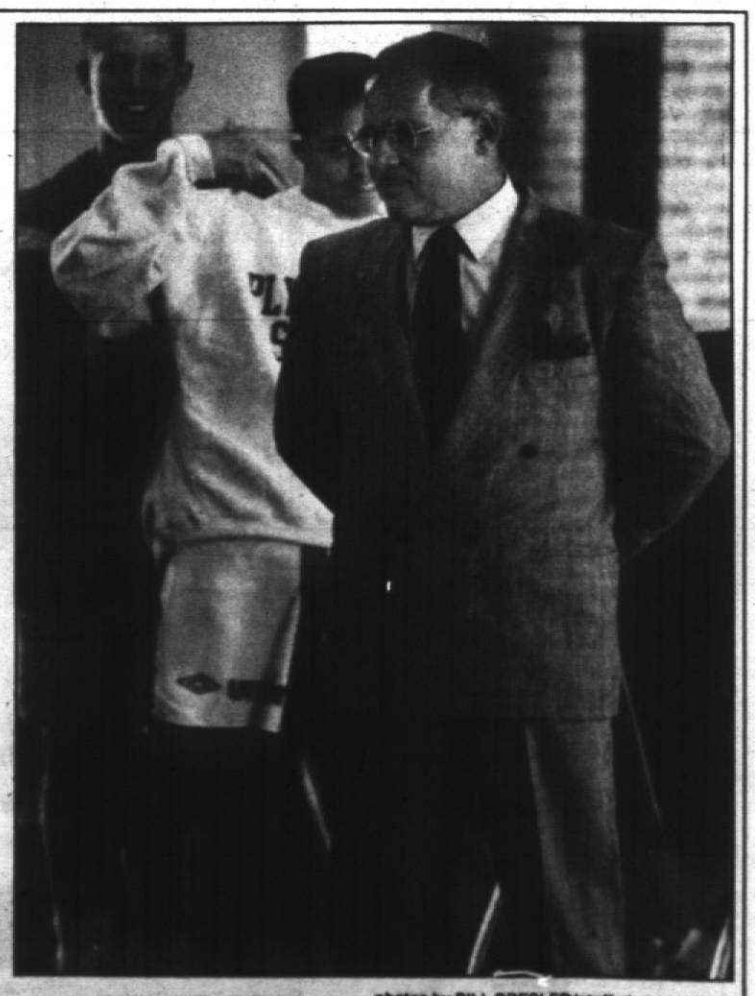

'I tend to be real traditional when it comes to how I dress.'
— Gerald Ostoin, Salem principal

Ostoin also wears a tuxedo to the school prom each year. Some years, he's worn a traditional black tuxedo and added a more colorful cummerbund. For this year's senior prom, he's thinking about wearing a white dinner jacket.

Ostoin finds a lot of his clothes at Chelsea's, a men's clothing store. He buys most of his clothing himself.

"My wife does not buy my ties." He's particular about what he wears, so it's difficult for others to buy clothing for him at Christmas and other special occasions.

Know someone in the Plymouth-Canton community who dresses with a certain sense of style and flair? Drop us a line at the Observer Newspapers, 744 Wing, Plymouth, Mich. 48170. Please include your name and daytime telephone number, along with a brief description of why you think that person should be featured in "Off the Cuff."

● REUNION FUN
Single Place has planned a reunion to begin at 1 p.m. Sunday, June 3, in the pavilion at Maybury State Park, Eight Mile west of Beck in Northville. A daily or annual state park permit is required for admission. Participants should bring a dish to pass, meat to grill, beverages and game equipment. The day will include volleyball, softball, hiking, horseback riding and other activities. Guests may attend. For more information, call 349-0911.

● SENIOR DANCE
A monthly senior dance will be held 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday, June 4, in the auditorium at Westland Center, Warren and Wayne roads in Westland. Music will be provided by the Standard Five, a group of senior musicians. Refreshments will be served. Admission to the dance is free of charge.

● U-M CLUB
The University of Michigan Club-Plymouth Community will hold its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday, June 4, at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer. A short business meeting will be held to elect officers and board of governors members for 1990-91. The club's 1990 scholarship winner will be introduced at the meeting, and plans for next year will be discussed. Henry Johnson, a U-M vice president, will speak. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call Bill Carter, 455-2912.

● 50-UP CLUB
The St. John Neumann Seniors/50-Up Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 5, at the church, on Warren between Sheldon and Canton Center in Canton. New members and guests may attend. For more information, call 495-1307 or 459-4091.

● ATTENTION DEFICIT
The Attention Deficit Disorder Association will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 7, at the Livonia Civic Center Library, on Five Mile east of Farmington Road. This will be a "rap session" meeting. The public may attend. For more information, call 464-8233.

● LAMAZE CLASSES
The Lamaze Childbirth Education Association of Livonia will offer several series of classes. Classes should be started two to three months before the due date. Weekday classes will be 7-9:30 p.m., and Saturday classes 9-11:30 a.m. Classes will be: Saturdays, June 9-July 14, at Holy Cross Lutheran Church in Livonia; Wednesdays, June 13-July 25, at Garden City Health and Education Center; and Thursdays, June 21-July 26, at St. Matthew's United Methodist Church in Livonia. Participants will learn about pregnancy, labor, delivery, breathing techniques and other topics. For registration information, call 462-0890 between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday or 4-8 p.m. Thursday.

● EQUAL RIGHTS
Single Place will meet at 7 p.m. Sunday, June 10, at the First Presbyterian Church of Northville, 200 E. Main. Speaker Alan Z. Lebow of Fathers for Equal Rights of America will discuss "How Sexism Negatively Affects Fathers and Other Men." Donation of $2.50 will include refreshments and child care. For more information, call 349-0911.

● CHILDBIRTH GROUP
The Lamaze Childbirth Education Association of Livonia will show a Caesarean childbirth film 7-8 p.m. Tuesday, June 12. Participants will receive certificates of attendance. The association will also present a program on breast-feeding 8-9 p.m. that day. Both sessions will be at St. Matthew's United Methodist Church, 30900 Six Mile, Livonia. For registration information, call 462-0890 between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday or 4-8 p.m. Thursday.

● NIGHT OUT
Single Place will sponsor a "Night Out" starting at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 19, at the Key Largo Restaurant in Walled Lake. The get-together is for singles who don't like to cook or to eat alone. The group is sponsored by the First Presbyterian Church in Northville. For more information, call 349-0911.

● BIKE AND HIKE
Single Place has planned a "Bike and Hike" for adults and kids at Kensington Metropark. The bike ride will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 23, at the concession stand at Martindale Beach. The picnic will begin at noon at the same location. A daily or annual Metropark sticker is required for admission to the park. Participants should bring lunch, beverages and lawn chairs. The hike will start after 1:15 p.m. at the nature center/trails area. For more information or in case of inclement weather, call 349-4062 or 669-6772.

● STEPFAMILIES
Single Place will meet at 7 p.m. Sunday, June 24, at the First Presbyterian Church in Northville, 200 E. Main. Speaker Cora Webb will discuss "Step Families: The Myths and the Facts." Webb is president of the Step Family Association. Donation of $2.50 will include refreshments and child care. For more information, call 349-0911.

● BICYCLE RIDE
Single Place is planning a bike ride in Hines Park, beginning at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 30, at the Nankin Mills area, Ann Arbor Trail and Hines Drive. The event is for adults and kids. Participants should bring lunch, water and other beverages. For more information or in case of inclement weather, call 349-4062.

● NEWCOMERS PROJECT
Earlier this year, members of the Plymouth Newcomers Club held a fund-raising art auction at the Plymouth Cultural Center. Several representatives of the club recently met with officials from Growth Works Inc. and Plymouth Opportunity House and presented a check for $1,785 to each organization. Ann Talbot, club president, Lynn Murtagh-Hartje, ways and means chairwoman, and Emily Barth, publicity chairwoman, presented the checks. Club members hold a fund-raising event each year to raise money for local social service organizations.

● CIVITAN CLUB
The Plymouth-Canton Civitan Club is a community service organization for men and women. It meets at 7:30 p.m. the first Thursday of the month for a business meeting at the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce office. The club meets at 6:30 p.m. the third Thursday of the month at the Italian Cucina, 39500 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth Township, for a dinner meeting and program. For more information, call 981-2411 or 981-7259.

● NEW BEGINNINGS
New Beginnings, a grief support group, meets 7-9 p.m. Mondays at the Plymouth Church of Christ, 9301 Sheldon, just south of Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth. Meetings are open to those grieving as a result of a death or divorce. Free admission. For more information, call 453-7630.

Sweet Adelines choose officers

Several area residents were named officers of the Spirit of Detroit Chapter of Sweet Adelines-Harmony International at the organization's recent installation dinner.

Ruth Pencak of Southfield was elected president. Betty Koch of Canton was named vice president. Dorothy Davenport of Plymouth was elected recording secretary and Linda Clements of Plymouth corresponding secretary.

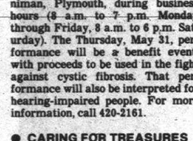

New board members are Mary Thompson of Plymouth and Janet Dillon of Redford Township.

Sweet Adelines-Harmony International is an organization devoted to the art of teaching and singing four-part harmony, barbershop style. The organization boasts a membership of 32,000 women from the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, Sweden, Netherlands, Australia, Japan and New Zealand.

The Spirit of Detroit chapter performs regularly for clubs and organizations and donates its talents to hospitals and for charitable functions.

The chapter's philanthropic donations support cancer research and the Child and Family Services of Michigan Entitlement Fund.

Rehearsals are at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays throughout the year at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall, on I-96 east of Inkster in Redford Township. New members and guests may attend.

Homegrown talent highlighted in play

staff writer

Authors Marc Holland and Mike Davis started writing during their student days at Centennial Educational Park.

"We've been friends for 11 years," said Holland, 25. "We've been writing mostly bad stuff for those 11 years."

They're both Plymouth Canton High School graduates, Holland in 1982 and Davis in 1981. The men, Plymouth residents, are the authors of "Dooley's Deli," an upcoming Plymouth Theatre Guild production.

"It's a musical comedy," said Davis, 26. "It's about love, hate, big business and good soup."

The play's set in the mythical small town of Wiley Falls. There have been rumblings that a huge corporation is about to buy up all the land, including the site of the best — and only — deli in town.

Pianist Mark Mainero also wrote the music for "Dooley's Deli." The play was presented earlier this year at Eastern Michigan University.

THE CORPORATION'S intent, Holland said, is to tear down the deli and build an "18-story monument to overindulgence." The deli employees and customers aren't too happy about that.

"We're not trying to enlighten people about anything," Holland said. "There are no deep investigations into the human soul. It's just a feel-good show."

Davis and Holland wrote "Dooley's Deli" and also wrote the lyrics for all but the opening number. The play began to take shape when a friend of theirs, Mark O'Brien, suggested doing a play set in a deli. O'Brien was working at Zingerman's, a deli in Ann Arbor.

"We thought it was easily the dumbest idea we'd ever heard," Holland said. Davis also remembers feeling that way.

"We both thought he was out of his mind."

They sat down and began to work on the play, and realized the idea was a good one. "Dooley's Deli" was produced this past April at Eastern Michigan University for O'Brien's master's degree project. O'Brien directed and produced the show in Ypsilanti. Holland and Davis are directing the PTG production and are in the cast.

Those involved in the production

attended EMU. Holland studied theater there for several years and Davis graduated in 1989 with a bachelor's degree in telecommunications and film.

O'BRIEN WROTE additional lyrics for "Dooley's Deli" and another EMU friend, Mark Mainero, wrote the music. Holland and Davis have been working together since high school.

"We started doing standup comedy, which was pretty dreadful to be honest," Davis said. "We began writing stuff together."

They wrote song parodies and worked on other projects. Davis and Holland, who work at the Fairfield Inn in Canton, have also written a three-act play and are pushing to get that produced.

They're looking forward to the opening of the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Dooley's Deli."

"We've got a really good cast," Davis said. "It makes a good chemistry on stage."

Holland and Davis recently got some good news about the local production. Detroit Tigers announcer Ernie Harwell has agreed to help out, and a play-by-play tape made by Harwell as the voice of the Wiley Falls Wildcats will be used in the second act.

The play was well-received in Ypsilanti, Holland said, and he's confident the local production will do well.

"To me, laughs are laughs. Funny is funny," he said. "I think people are ready for some new musicals." He and others involved in the production hope to attract about 500 people to each of the six performances.

Nancy Keough (appearing as Lucy) and Gregory Lea (Sticks Stafford) rehearse a scene from "Dooley's Deli," a Plymouth Theatre Guild production.

THEY'RE WORKING to get "Dooley's Deli" performed in Ann Arbor and in Chicago later this year.

"And next year the world," Holland said.

Plymouth Theatre Guild performances of "Dooley's Deli" will be at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 31; 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, June 1-2 and 8-9; and at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 3. Performances will be in The Water Tower Theater, by the water tower on the campus of Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital, 41001 W. Seven Mile, between Haggerty and Northville roads in Northville Township.

Ticket prices are $6 for adults, $5 for students and seniors. Advance sale tickets at $1 off are available, appropriately enough, at The Penniman Deli, 820 Penniman in Plymouth, during business hours (8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday). For ticket information, call 420-2161.

The Thursday, May 31, performance will be a benefit, with proceeds to be used in the fight against cystic fibrosis. That evening's performance will also be interpreted for hearing impaired people.

Director Marc Holland watches a rehearsal session. Holland and Mike Davis wrote the play.

MYTHS ABOUT CHRISTIANITY
THE MYTH OF THE MONTH
Jesus Christ was only a great moral teacher

What are we to make of this man? The joys and hardships of two thousand years of western history have been pinned on him. Controversy has constantly surrounded his claims. Religious life in the West has been dominated by allusions to his teachings. No self-aware, intelligent person dare avoid this intriguing individual and his impact on society.

No one doubts any more that Jesus actually existed. Most people also believe that he was a great moral teacher. Religious and political leaders throughout the world, including many of the great opponents of Christianity, hail the moral superiority of his life. Mohandas Gandhi aspired to the ideals of the Sermon on the Mount. The philosopher John Stuart Mill thought Jesus a genius and probably the greatest moral reformer who ever existed. Even Napoleon Bonaparte considered him a superior leader of men.

credibility to Jesus' teachings. He has truly led humanity in the expression of compassion and humility, as well as in anger against evil and hypocrisy. Jesus combined a realistic understanding of human nature with an idealism for what human beings could become. His words have tested and challenged the minds and hearts of millions for centuries.

Of course, this is not the whole story. When we begin to consider Jesus' claims about his identity, the controversy begins. This is where people (including the world's religious leaders) have problems. This is where the label "moral teacher" is put to the test. It begins to seem inadequate, if not naive.

A thirty year old peasant carpenter turned itinerant teacher, Jesus laid claim both by word and action to be more than a mere man. He operated on the assumption that he was God himself.

How do we know this? From his explicit statements and the very way he lived. His self-disclosures are interwoven in the very fabric of the New Testament. He claimed equality with God. He said he had lived before Abraham. He assumed the right to forgive sins. He accepted worship. There seems to be no escaping it.

Jesus of Nazareth could not be simply a harmless moral teacher. He cuts too deep and steps out too far from the crowd of moral teachers and philosophers. We can call him a liar. We might even discuss his mental imbalance. But the tag of "only a great moral teacher" doesn't stick.

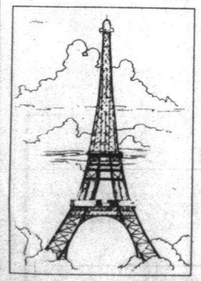

It was never an option in his own day. Some of his contemporaries thought him mad, others loved him. He was regarded with disdain and sometimes even hatred, or alternately with amazement and adoration. But he never received mild approval.

Neither is it an option for today. We have to shut him up or hear him out. What are we to make of this man? What of his moral integrity? His fulfillment of centuries of aspirations? His prediction of death and resurrection? What are we to make of his claims to be the one and only God-man of history? What are we to do with this great moral teacher who makes such impossible claims?

• 2 p.m. Thursday, July 5, at the library, a program for children ages 6-8. Two movies, "Adventures of J. Thadius Toad" and "Ben and Me," will be shown.

• 2 p.m. Thursday, July 12, at the library, a program for children ages 9-12. A movie, "The Hound Who Thought He Was a Raccoon," will be shown.

• 2 p.m. Thursday, July 19, at the library, a program for children ages 6-8. The "Food Frolics" session will feature games involving food, such as having kids push peanuts across the floor with their noses.

• 2 p.m. Thursday, July 26, at the library, a "Food Frolics" program for children ages 9-12.

Saturday, July 28, will be the final day for school-age children to record books and complete their contracts.

TWO ACTIVITY sessions are planned for children and parents in the "Read to Me" program, which also has a "Batches of Books" theme this year. The kickoff program will be held at 10 a.m. Monday, June 25, at the Plymouth Cultural Center, and will feature Maureen Schiffman's "Menu of Books."

Throughout the six-week "Read to Me" program, parents should read to children at home and come to the library weekly to get that week's incentive or prize. Balloons, bookmarks, stickers and other items will be given out.

The "Read to Me" program will end with a 10 a.m. Monday, July 30, party at the Plymouth Cultural Center. At that party, singer Brenda McDonald will entertain with songs about food.

Both the "Read to Me" program and summer reading program are sponsored by the Friends of the Dunning-Hough Library. Last year, more than 400 school-age children registered for the summer reading program. Some Canton children participate in the Plymouth program if that's more convenient for their families.

Participating in the program helps guarantee that children do more than watch TV, Rawlinson said. She's found many children enjoy reading lighter fiction in the summer, just as adults do.

"I think it's important that they do get to enjoy their summer." Librarians encourage children to read books at the appropriate reading level, but let children decide what subjects they'd like to read about. Some children are interested in a particular subject, such as dinosaurs, and enjoy reading those books all summer long.

Weekly poster contests, in which children connect the dots, unscramble words or do other tasks, will be part of the summer reading program. In another contest, school-age children will guess the number of peanuts in a jar. Stickers, balloons and other small prizes will be given to summer reading program participants, and a "Read-A-Lottery" drawing for prizes will be held.

For more information on summer programs for children, call the Dunning-Hough Library, 453-0750.

the Canton Recreation Complex, behind township hall, 1150 S. Canton Center. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, July 5, by phone or in person.

The second session for preschoolers will be held, rain or shine, 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 25, at the Canton Recreation Complex. Registration will begin 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, July 18, by phone or in person. Children in the "Read to Me" program will get colorful stickers.

There's some flexibility when it comes to the ages of program participants, Teachworth said. Children younger than first grade age may participate in the reading program if they're able to read on their own.

CHILDREN IN both programs will keep a record of books they've read or had read to them. Participants are asked to read books from the Canton Public Library collection, and comic or cartoon books aren't recommended.

"In other words, Garfield doesn't count," Teachworth said with a smile.

Children in the "Read to Me" program will also receive a certificate if they have at least five books read to them or spend a certain amount of time listening to books being read.

This is the 10th year a summer reading program has been held for school-age children. Those children will get a Read-A-Lottery ticket for each book read, and a drawing will be held for prizes of paperback books.

The school-age program will also include various poster contests, in which children will connect the dots, unscramble words or do other tasks. Winners of the poster contests and Read-A-Lottery winners will be announced at the Thursday, July 26, party.

There aren't any residency restrictions, Teachworth said, and Plymouth children may participate in the Canton program if that's more convenient. Children in the Canton program aren't required to give reports on books they've read.

"Sometimes, we talk to the children about the books."

Children are encouraged to read books at their own reading level, but librarians let youngsters decide what to read. Teachworth has found children enjoy reading a variety of books in the summer.

"A lot of fiction goes out during that time." Children often enjoy reading fairy tales or books by their favorite authors. Some youngsters read books from the Babysitters Club, American Girls series or other series.

For more information, call the Canton Public Library, 397-0999.

Rabbi takes on a role of leadership

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

The man who has officiated at bar mitzvahs for children whose parents he married, now talks of stemming the tide of growing anti-Semitism in Eastern Europe and reforming the Israeli political system.

Rabbi Irwin Groner certainly has a job ahead of him.

The spiritual leader of Congregation Shaarey Zedek in Southfield was recently elected president of the Rabbinical Assembly.

Founded in 1900, the international association oversees 1,300 Conservative Rabbis in North America, Israel, Latin America and Europe. There are 1.5 million Conservative Jews in North America alone.

Groner was officially installed as president recently at the Concord Hotel in Kiamesha Lake, N.Y. More than 80 people made the difficult trek from Congregation Shaarey Zedek, where Groner has been since 1959, to attend the installation.

"It lifted me; it honored me," said Groner in his study at Shaarey Zedek.

Any euphoria will be short lived, though. Groner has already gotten down to business. His new position will take him away from his duties at Congregation Shaarey Zedek at least four to five days a month.

GRONER IS the voice of 1,300 Conservative rabbis and will be instrumental in setting policies for the Rabbinical Assembly.

He chooses his words carefully discussing the upcoming tasks. One pressing issue is what many Jewish people believe is rekindling of hatred toward them in Eastern Europe.

Already, Groner and the Rabbinical Assembly have discussed the issue with Catholic leaders on the East Coast. He said leaders of both religious bodies agree it's a special opportunity for the church to help moderate and overcome the "passions that have been unleashed."

"The Rabbinical Assembly and the leadership needs to — as it has in the past — encourage Catholics in dialogue that helps to focus attention, not on the issues that divide us, but of values shared," Groner said.

The Rabbinical Assembly also encourages political reform in Israel. With the present system, Groner believes small parties are able to manipulate issues that "are injurious to the welfare of Israeli society."

The Assembly encourages the leaders of both major parties, Likud and Labor, to discuss the situation.

Overall, Groner added, his group would like to see the growth of Conservative Judaism in Israel. Between 30-40 congregations are in the country. A school system also exists along with a seminary training Israeli Conservative rabbis.

As president of the Rabbinical Assembly, Rabbi Irwin Groner will be the voice for 1,300 Conservative rabbis worldwide. Groner is a Moral Perspectives columnist for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

"IN ISRAEL at the present time, people have two alternatives," he said. "They are either secular in their outlook, or they join the extreme orthodox community. We believe they should be given an alternative, which is Conservative Judaism."

The tasks would seem immense. Groner is not exactly new to this.

Prior to the presidency, Groner has served as secretary and treasurer in the Rabbinical Assembly during the past eight years.

He has also served as vice president of the Synagogue Council of America; co-chairman of the National Youth Commission of the United Synagogue from 1972-76; vice chairman of the Jewish Community Council of Detroit from 1974-76.

Closer to home, Groner is well known as a preacher, community activist, writer and teacher in addition to being a leader of the Conservative movement.

In 1984, Gov. James Blanchard appointed Groner as the first clergyman to serve on the Judicial Tenure Commission of Michigan. He later was named vice chairman.

"That was a special kind of experience for me," he said. "I could apply the ethical and moral teachings of my tradition."

His tradition started on the west-side of Chicago where Groner grew up. He was a graduate student studying clinical psychology when he decided to join the rabbinate.

GRONER HAS degrees from the University of Chicago and the Hebrew Theological College of Chicago, where he was ordained.

In 1959, Groner came to Congregation Shaarey Zedek as an assistant rabbi. He arrived from Congregation Agudath Achim in Little Rock, Ark.

Groner became rabbi in 1967 following the death of Rabbi Morris Adler. He was elected rabbi of the Congregation for life in 1978.

"I have been privileged to help them bear the burden of their sorrows and add to their joys through the years," he said. "I have literally seen generations mature."

We all need time to pause, reflect moral perspectives

Rabbi Irwin Groner

About 200 years ago, a wise teacher offered a profound insight into the nature of human existence when he said "A human being who has not a single hour for his own every day is no human being." Every day we need to take time to think, to dream, to imagine, to contemplate, a time to be ourselves.

We all have the need to socialize and interact with others. We need to share ourselves with others, to engage in social activities. But in the crowded schedules of our daily lives, the "social experience" tends to become too pervasive. Many are afraid to be alone.

Several years ago, Erich Fromm, in a book called "Escape From Freedom," pointed out today people are running away from the freedom and leisure time they struggled so valiantly to achieve for themselves. They don't know how to cope with the opportunities of unstructured time.

IT IS A strange phenomenon that unless we are engaged in activity, we feel that life is drab and unexciting. We are constantly "on the go" whether it is in business or in pleasure.

But must we always be doing something? Is there no place in life for moments of contemplation? We all share a fundamental need to cultivate our inner world. People require a sense of privacy; they need moments when they can be by themselves.

This is not easily achieved in a noisy and turbulent world. Even the privacy of the home is invaded by the constant blare of the television set and the interruption of the telephone.

Each of us needs an island of quiet each day in which we can think about ourselves, about the goals we truly wish to reach, where we have fallen short, and where we are going. We need to remove ourselves from the tumult and din of the outer world and concentrate upon the universe of the spirit.

A doctor once pointed out that "Be still and know that I am God' is not an arbitrary command; it is a psychological necessity."

EACH OF US assumes certain roles in the course of a day: husband, father, wife, mother, student, employee. We are expected to fulfill our responsibilities to our work and our family; to complete our assignments; and to carry out our obligations.

How often we find the days produce too many unforeseen burdens, too many unanticipated demands.

We need some fraction of a day to let our souls catch up with our bodies. We ought to turn our gaze inward not to evade the duties of life, but to gather strength that we may perform them wisely and effectively.

If we are to live significant lives, then we must cultivate our private world. There must be times in every day when we bang up a sign "Please do not disturb." We require time for contemplation, meditation and evaluation.

Rabbi Irwin Groner is with Congregation Shaarey Zedek in Southfield.

church bulletin

The church bulletin is published every Thursday in The Observer. Information must be received in the Livonia office by noon the Monday prior to publication.

● DEDICATION CEREMONY
The formal dedication ceremony for the expanded First Church of the Nazarene, I-275 north of Eight Mile, Farmington Hills, will be Sunday, June 3, beginning with the Christian education hour at 9:30 a.m. and culminating with a concert of sacred music at 6 p.m. For information, call 348-7600.

● CHICKEN BARBECUE
The Lola Valley United Methodist Church, 16175 Delaware at Puritan, Redford, will hold its annual chicken barbecue 3:30-6:30 p.m. Sunday, June 3, at the church. Admission price is $4 for adults, $3 for seniors, $2 for children under 12. For information, call 538-0182.

● SOLO FLIGHT
Solo Flight and Central Carpeting Co. will present a concert by Christian musician Paul Smith at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 2, at the Fairlane Assembly of God, 22575 Ann Arbor Trail, Dearborn Heights. Admission price is $3. For information, call 422-1854.

● CHOIR PRESENTATION
St. Matthew's United Methodist Chancel Choir, directed by Roger Bingaman, will join St. Aidan's Catholic Church Choir, directed by Barbara Youngerman, for a special presentation of Vivaldi's "Gloria" at 4 p.m. Sunday, June 3, at St. Aidan's Church, 17500 Farmington, north of Six Mile, Livonia. For information, call Nancy Wasson, 425-2325.

● PENTECOST
The Day of Pentecost, or White Sunday, will be observed Sunday, June 3, at 8 and 10:30 a.m. services at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 120 N. Huron, Ypsilanti. The gospel will be read in ancient and modern languages at the services. Nursery care is provided 10 a.m. to noon, and fellowship times follow both services. For information, call 483-4253.

● SPECIAL SERVICES
Leonard C. Albert will speak at special services at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday, June 3, at the Praise Chapel Church of God in Plymouth. Albert is secretary of lay ministries for the International Office of Lay Ministries for the Church of God. He has lectured at conferences and seminars, served as a Bible teacher at major conferences and Bible schools, and authored six books on evangelism. He received a bachelor's degree in biblical education from Lee College. Albert, a Cleveland, Tenn., resident, formerly served as director of evangelism at the North Cleveland Church of God.

● GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY
To celebrate its 50th anniversary, the Alpha Baptist Church, 28051 W. Chicago, Livonia, will present a weekend of activities, beginning with a men's golden anniversary breakfast at 8 a.m. Saturday, June 2. Sunday services begin at 9:45 a.m. For information, call 421-6300.

● GUEST SPEAKER
Christian Science speaker Nola A. Cook of Cleveland, Ohio, will speak on "Coming Home to the Father: A Spiritual Journey That Heals Life's Hurts" at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 5, at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Five Mile east of Farmington Road, Livonia.

The public may attend the speech, which is sponsored by the First Church of Christ Scientist, Plymouth. Care for small children will be provided. For information, call 464-0365 or 683-8883.

● ANNIVERSARY
Sister Mary Wivell, an Adrian Dominican sister at St. Thomas a Becket Church in Canton, is celebrating her 50th anniversary as a sister. A celebration in honor of that anniversary will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday, June 2, at the church. The pastor, the Rev. Ernest Porcari, will be the main celebrant. A reception in the Family Life Center will follow the liturgy.

● CONFERENCE PLANS
The Rev. Dr. Jasper Pennington will attend the Christian-Muslim encounter June 7-9 at the Hartford Seminary Foundation in Hartford, Conn. Pennington is rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Ypsilanti and ecumenical officer for the Diocese of Michigan. Pennington coordinates the Anglican/Orthodox Fellowship of St. Alban & St. Sergius in North America. At the conference, scholars from various disciplines will assess relationships between the two communities from historical and ideological perspectives.

● BENEFIT FOR HOMELESS
Mariners' Inn, an agency of the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan, will hold a "Bobo Cruise of the Detroit River" Thursday, June 14, to benefit Detroit's homeless men. Snakeman immune to temple viper bites

Hussian bin Mat has been at the snake temple in Penang, Malaysia, for 40 years. He has been bitten by the snake vipers at least fifty times, but "they are gentle in the temple. They don't bite hard."

I did not see Hussian when I walked up the stairs, between the market stalls, to Sungai Ara, but I knew the story of the snake temple. An Englishman named David Brown had a mysterious ailment, incurable until he visited a Chinese doctor and was treated with herbs. In thanks, Brown gave land to build a temple, but as construction progressed the pit vipers from adjoining jungle began to fill the temple site.

The construction crew tried to chase them away but the snakes kept coming back, so the crew decided that the gods had sent them. The snakes were meant to be there.

The temple, like all Taoist temples I have seen in southeast Asia, is a vision in red and gold. You enter it to the smell of joss sticks and you may be so mesmerized that you do not see the snakes coiled on two dried tree branches at the back of the altar.

Hussian and a woman were standing beside a book of names. I like to check for midwestern American names when I travel, so I signed up, gave a small donation and heard a man's voice say:

"Would you like to see the maternity ward?"

Hussian bin Mat pointed to a space behind the altar where a very large and lumpy pregant snake reposed on a branch, with a chicken egg nearby as food.

I followed Hussian into another room, where tiny snakes were the color of a young green branch, and to another room, where a photographer had marked defanged snakes with red to show they were harmless. You are supposed to wrap these snakes around your neck while the photographer takes your picture. I declined.

It was in the temple garden, where a 15-year-old boy was dragging snakes out of a bush with a long pole, that I asked Hussian if he had ever been bitten.

"Very gentle," he said. "Only soft mouth."

"But poisonous?"

"Kill in ten minutes," he said.

That's also when I learned that Hussian, who was born Malay and therefore a Moslem, had come to the snake temple with Chinese friends as a young man, and had been there ever since.

"Nobody pay me," he said.

"You don't get paid?"

"Tourists pay me."

Aha. "You've been bitten?'

He showed me his index finger, permanently bent out of shape.

"A snake did that?"

"He was a fresh snake and nobody told me," Hussian said. "A lady found it in a tree and brought it in, but nobody told me it was fresh from a tree! The snakes in the temple, they are very gentle, they brush by you or if you put your finger in their mouth, they don't really bite."

"How many times have you been bitten?"

"At least 50 times."

"Why aren't you dead?"

"I'm immune!"

If you can believe what is told, no worshipper has ever been bitten by the temple snakes. The Taoists don't worship the snakes, of course. They worship Chor Soo Kong.

The nearby jungle is gone now, so there are only about 30 snakes in the temple, plus those in Hussian's "maternity ward." On special days, such as the day of the Goddess of Mercy, they must bring snakes in from the "fresh trees."

Clean shavers fill Freak Street

(AP) — Twenty years have changed the Eden Hotel, which called itself the "oldest and favorite shop in town serving the best Nepalese hash." Now it caters to clean-shaven trekkers.

The ready availablility of hashish at the Eden and nearby establishments, and the bearded, long-haired Westerners who bought it, earned Jhochhen Road the nickname Freak Street.

Although the hashish and flower children are gone a generation later, along with the Eden posters saying "Let us take you higher," Jhochhen Road is still known as Freak Street.

Nepal has outlawed the sale of drugs and the Eden now serves a credible approximation of European cuisine to Western tourists who happen by. About 150,000 visit Nepal each year.

Hippies have given way to trippies, says the Insight Guide to Nepal, and there is "rarely a whiff of illicit smoke, and not a bare breast to be seen in public."

Many trekkers prefer Thamel, a district for budget travelers about a mile to the north, where such amenities as private baths and hot water are easier to find than on Freak Street.

TIMES HAVE changed, but the old ones linger in many minds.

Chaitanya Lal Sresthe, a doctor who uses the initials W.F. (for World Famous) before his name, remembers the visitors of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

"So many of them came to me for cures," he said in an interview at his clinic, a tiny, ill-ventilated alcove lined with herbs in glass bottles. "I

From a bus in Tiananmen Square, students are seen storming the square, demonstrating their plight against communism. Tiananmen is the largest public square in the world and is reported to hold one million people. The square was filled in May and June 1989.

IN MEMORY OF

TIANANMEN SQUARE

June 4 marks the anniversary of the Tiananmen Square massacre in Beijing. This story serves to remind us of the 600 students who were killed by military troops who were ordered by Chinese government officials to end the two month-long demonstrations in which students rallied for democracy in China.

By Gorry Forster
special writer

Last spring, I traveled to China with 39 other students to see what it is like on the other side of the world. Since we were members of a Chinese/American Educational Exchange program, we stayed mainly on college campuses in small towns where we could take classes and talk with students and professors. The primary goal of our trip was to learn more about Chinese history and culture.

During the time I was in China the student demonstrations were taking place in Tiananmen Square. In class, our professors discussed political events freely. They told us the students were asking for two things:

First, they wanted better paying jobs when they graduated. A doctor, for example, makes the same money as a peddler. While the peasants are better off than ever before, the professional class feels it is not being treated fairly.

The second demand was for political reform. Throughout its history, China has never had a tradition of government elected by the people. Now, in the wake of modernization, many are calling for a new system which will allow the people to have a say in who runs their government.

Last May, as the situation heated up and martial law was declared, we returned to Beijing. A week earlier the city had been calm, but now as we pulled into the trian station the air was electric. Hundreds of young men were scrambling in and out of train windows and pushing through doorways. The streets were jammed with thousands of students converging on Tiananmen Square from all directions, carrying red cloth banners and shouting slogans. The streets were so mobbed that our bus couldn't move, so there was nothing we could do but sit there for several hours right in the middle of it all. Mr. Soong cautioned us, as foreigners, to stay completely neutral.

It was now the fourth day since the students had begun their hunger strike in the square and many were beginning to pass out from dehydration. All night long we heard the ambulances going by our hotel carrying students to the hospital. As one group of students collapsed, a new group would march in to take their place.

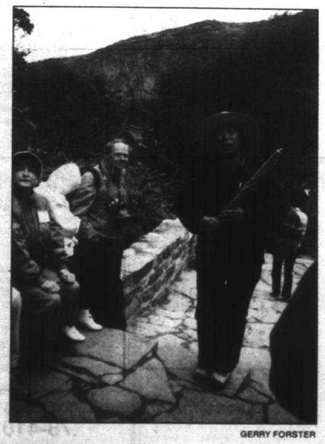

THE NEXT night, seven of us decided to go down to the Square and see for ourselves what was going on. Tiananmen is the largest public square in the world and reputed to hold one million people. Surely, there were a million people in the square that night and thousands more spilling over into the adjoining side streets. Those moving bodies were packed so densely there wasn't a crack we could squeeze through to try to inch our way closer to the action. From somewhere ahead in the milling shadows, I could faintly make out the sound of a loudspeaker and intermittent cheers. I could also make

China: another world through a deep hole

By Gerry Forster
special writer

"If you could dig straight through the center of the earth," my mother once said, "you would come out in China."

As a child, we used to try to do that. A smile of recognition crossed the face of Mr. Liu, one of our Chinese hosts, when I told him this.

"The children in China try to dig through the earth to America," he said.

During my trip to China with the Chinese/American Educational Exchange program, we were determined to learn more about Chinese history and culture.

We joined our professors for Tai Chi before breakfast every morning, took classes until noon and then were taken on excursions in the afternoons. We ate our meals with chop sticks in the school dining rooms and noted the guesthouse rules posted in our rooms: "No spitting in the corners," "No putting dirty things on the floor," and "No committing adultry."

I took some used college textbooks as gifts for the universities where we stayed and our hosts were touchingly grateful. They told us most of their books had been burned during the "cultural revolution."

We visited the Forbidden City, once the home of China's emperors, and we climbed the Great Wall, which according to the guidebook is the only man-made object that can be seen from the moon. We floated down the silent, fog-enshrouded Li River and took a boat up the bustling Grand Canal. We marveled at the terra cotta warriors of Xian and visited a Buddhist temple high up in the moutains where we heard the monks chanting to the accompaniment of strange, clanging bells. But my most enduring memory of China is the people.

CHINA, A country about the size of the United States, contains one-fourth of all the earth's people, yet only one-seventh of its land is suitable for growing food. In the south where the climate is good, the soil is not fertile and in the north the soil is fertile but there isn't enough rain.

For centuries the Chinese have lived with the spector of starvation. Food is still so important that people greet one another with "Have you eaten?" rather than "How are you?"

But the China I saw was well fed and well clothed. It is a land determined to rise off its knees and as their slogan goes, "Walk on two legs."

Tackling the housing problem is the biggest priority now and in every city, we saw huge cranes erecting new high rise apartment buildings so that the centuries old hovels can be torn down. "The crane is the national bird of China," Mr. Liu joked.

was famous on Freak Street because I used the ayurvedic system of medicine, which does not have any side effects, unlike the Western allopathic system."

Few tourists visit Srestha now. He spends much of his time visiting friends on Freak Street, a stooping man in his 50s who shambles from restaurants to shops, reflecting with their owners on more affluent days.

Dipendra Purush Dhakal, Nepal's director of tourism, said today's tourist spends more money and stays in Katmandu three days during a trip to Nepal that averages 12 days.

That means "most visitors go to other places," he said. "The hippies didn't go anywhere outside Katmandu and didn't spend much money."

Two reasons the hippies have disappeared are the 1972 ban on the sale of narcotics and the requirement that a Western visitor who stays in Nepal more than 30 days buy $10 worth of the local currency for each of those days.

Only two shops still have address boards proclaiming Freak Street. The scores of others have reverted to the original Jhochhen, which means a "line of houses."

Chinese students lead the struggle for democracy out the chant which we had come to recognize as, "Long live democracy!"

It was a warm evening, but dark. The only light was from the bare electric light bulbs strung overhead that served as Beijing street lights. Our group hung onto each other's hands with all our strength, knowing that if we ever let go we would never find each other again in the crowd. People often ask me if I was afraid. I tell them that I was never at any time in fear of the crowds, but I was terrified of getting lost from the others and with my poor sense of direction, not being able to find my way back to the hotel.

Once the crowds did part to make way for a little band of about 15 students, marching toward the center of the Square and carrying a large flag held aloft. As they passed the light, I could see the kerchiefs around their heads, their shirt sleeves rolled up and the deadly determination on their faces. These were the young men preparing to join the fast.

Our group spent the next two weeks traveling in the south of China, where I saw no evidence of student unrest except on TV. In my opinion, the people from the south seemed to be more sophisticated, more Westernized and less friendly.

I heard one shopkeeper grumble, "Those students have always had full bellies. When you have a full belly, you can worry about things like democracy."

Nobody was prepared for the massacre that occurred on June 4 in Tianenmen Square. The embassies called the hotels and told their citizens to leave China. A plane carrying a group of tourists landed in Beijing, only to turn right around and take off again. Nobody had any idea what might happen next.

We all felt great sadness for the many friends we left on the other side of the world.

Art and antiques come to Midland

The 80-acre fairground at the edge of Midland is poised to come alive again soon with the season's first Michigan Antique Festival, slated for June 2-3.

And come alive it does.

More than 1,000 dealers from all over the country sell antiques, collectibles, crafts, folk art, and just about anything else — including special-interest vehicles of every description. More than 30,000 folks stream through the gates during the two-day show to browse and buy. Together, they make up what is now one of the largest events of its kind in the Midwest.

Those browsers and buyers will find every sort of treasure, from baseball cards to birdcages, from sideboards to salt shakers, displayed in miles of colorful outdoor booths and in five large buildings on the grounds. And they won't go hungry while they search; the selection of food vendors is ample, adding to the carnival atmosphere.

Now in its 22nd year, the festival premiered as an antique car show and swap meet. Thanks to plenty of bored spouses, who yearned for something to do other than "talk cars," the event soon grew into the multi-faceted extravaganza it is today.

SIMULTANEOUSLY, IT became an annual tradition, enjoyed equally by serious collectors and by those seeking nothing more than an entertaining day in the sun.

What's more, it now takes place three times each summer. In addition to the June 2-3 event, Michigan Antique Festivals will also be held July 28-29 and Sept. 22-23, rain or shine.

The antique car show and swap meet didn't get lost in the shuffle as things grew, either; 400-plus antique, custom, and special interest cars, trucks and vans of all descriptions take their places in the display area at each festival, for an enjoyable "Show and Shine" weekened.

In addition to the regular car show, each event will include a special "Featured" display. June's focus will be Trucks and Vans; in July, Volkswagen "Bugs" will take center stage; and in September, the Street Machines will strut their stuff.

ALL IN ALL, there's something for everyone, and the $3-per-person per day entry fee makes the Michigan Antique Festival one of the least expensive forms of family entertainment around — particularly since kids under 11 enter free. Weekend campsites are available, too, right at the fairgrounds.

The Michigan Antique Festival will be open from 8 a.m. until dark on Saturday, June 2, and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, June 3. The Midland Fairgrounds are located at U.S.10 and Eastman Road, Midland. For information or to reserve a campsite, call the Festival Hotline, (517) 793-8393, between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Chinese give warm welcome

There are few cars and trucks, but most people get where they're going on sturdy bicycles. Refrigerators, washing machines and TV's are shared by groups of neighbors who pool their money in order to buy them. Nothing is wasted.

I saw none of the drabness usually associated with European Communist countries. The people seem to exude energy, always smiling, chattering, gesturing. Parents love to hold up their colorfully dressed toddlers for us to admire.

Everywhere we went, people were friendly and wanted to practice their English. Over and over again we heard such phrases as "our American friends," and "Our two countries are growing closer and closer." We were able to wander where ever we liked and always felt safe and surrounded by well-wishers.

WE TRAVELED by train to Shijiazhuang, a town about 200 miles south of Beijing, where the mayor came out to greet us that first evening. When we disembarked from the train, we caused quite a stir. Several hundred blue-clad peasants jumped out of their train to line the platform and stare dumfounded at us as though they could not believe we were human beings. On the other hand, in the market place in Shijiazhuang, I was very moved when a woman with tears in her eyes, hugged me and kissed me on both cheeks for no other apparent reason than that I was American.

One evening, our group attended a performance at the Heibei Theatre of Performing Arts. As we entered the theatre, the entire audience rose to their feet and gave us a 10 minute standing ovation. It occurred to me that perhaps we had unwittingly paid all their admission fees and they were thanking us, but when I asked Mr. Soong, our leader, what the season was, he told me that they were applauding us because we were honoring them by traveling so far to visit their city.

Danes train

Be a Dane for a day and join the Bluewater Michigan Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society in a one day train ride to the annual Danish Festival in Greenville.

The Trains for Danes excursion is offered Aug. 17 and 18 and will depart each day from the former C&O depot on East Grove St. at 10 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 1 p.m., 2:30 p.m. and 4 p.m.

The ride takes a historical look at rail travel, recalling an era when the railroads were the most popular form of transportation used. The train will roll along the Mid-Michigan Railroad's former C&O trackage through southern Montcalm and northern Ionia counties to Belding and return.

Tickets may be purchased from the Danish Festival headquarters in the Greenville Chamber of Commerce Office, 202 South Lafayette St., Greenville.

Mapped out

The west Michigan area will be all mapped out with asparagus, blueberries and cherries marking festival events and other attractions listed in a guide recently published by West Michigan Tourist Association.

Historic villages, museums, dinner cruises, harness racing, dune rides, canoe liveries and a showboat are also listed on the map.

A Michigan highway map is folded into the guide with location numbers of attractions and festivals.

Maps are available at Midwest tourist information centers or write to WMTA, 136 E. Fulton, Grand Rapids, 49503.

Science with sports

Flint's Sloan Museum in the Cultural Center is displaying Science of Sports, a hands-on exhibit that uses sports as a springboard into science discovery.

The idea behind the exhibit is to illustrate and teach scientific principles through the use of sports.

Visitors participate in most displays and are given a score card for tests, trivia quizzes and computer games. The gallery is divided into six areas: locker room gymnasium, training room, arena, dugout and science decathlon.

The most graphic presentation occurs in the arena. Kids stand, strapped for safety, in the middle of a spinning platform. As they extend their limbs and then tuck them closer to their bodies, they learn how twirling skaters speed up and slow down.

The locker room comes complete with jerseys and equipment.

The training room is used to test breath control, reaction time, peripheral vision and hand-to-eye coordination. And the dugout has a display of championship trophies and rings surrounded by photos and illustrations.

Science of Sports will be on display May 15 through Aug. 26 in the Sloan Museum located in Flint's Cultural Center, 1221 E. Kearsley St. Admission is $3 for adults, $2.50 for senior citizens and $2 for children ages 5-12.

Smoking: Years puffing increase chance of disease

A new study of cigarette smokers finds that it's not the number of puffs but the number of years spent puffing that determines a person's risk of getting carotid atherosclerosis, a disease that plugs up the arteries supplying blood to the brain and can lead to a stroke.

This is the first time that the duration of smoking has been found to be more important in influencing the risk of carotid atherosclerosis than the number of cigarettes smoked over a lifetime, said the report's co-author, Dr. Jack Whisnant, a neurologist at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

The study, published in the May issue of Stroke, an American Heart Association journal, found that a 60-year-old man or woman who smoked for 40 years is 3.5 times more likely to have carotid atherosclerosis than a non-smoker. The level of risk was unaffected by the number of cigarettes smoked.

THE ANALYSIS by Mayo researchers included several different measurements of smoking — ever or never smoked, pack-years (the number of packs a day multiplied by the number of years smoked), number of cigarettes smoked per day and duration of smoking.

The scientists also looked at factors not associated with smoking that can contribute to carotid atherosclerosis risk, including age, current blood pressure, history of high blood pressure and diabetes mellitus.

> 'The length of time a person smokes has a greater impact on the arteries than the actual number of cigarettes smoked.'
> — Dr. Jack Whisnant

Duration of smoking "overwhelmed" the effect of pack-years or cigarettes per day, the study found.

Furthermore, "years smoked was also the most important risk factor for severe carotid atherosclerosis, even surpassing age, diabetes mellitus and high blood pressure," the investigators said.

WHISNANT ALSO concluded that the major benefit of smoking cessation comes from limiting the accumulation of smoking years.

"The length of time a person smokes has a greater impact on the arteries than the actual number of cigarettes smoked," Whisnant said. "People who smoke lightly may get a false sense of security and not realize the dangers from the long-term effects of smoking."

Most earlier studies of smoking and blood vessel disease — such as the Framingham Heart Study, which found that smokers had a 20-30 percent increased stroke risk compared to non-smokers — measured smoking only in terms of the number of cigarettes smoked per day or pack-years, he said.

This is the first study to look at duration of smoking as a separate risk factor for carotid atherosclerosis.

Carotid atherosclerosis is caused by fatty deposits from the walls of the carotid artery, the major blood vessel in the neck that supplies blood to the brain.

Symptoms may include temporary loss of vision or paralysis. If the condition becomes severe and the carotid is completely blocked by the deposits or by a blood clot, a stroke may occur.

THE NEW study included 752 men and women who had undergone carotid arteriography, a diagnostic technique that allows visualization of the inside of the arteries in the neck.

The patients were asked questions regarding smoking, alcohol and exercise habits. They were tested for high blood pressure, diabetes mellitus and blood sugar levels.

The men and women taking part in the study came to the Mayo Clinic with various symptoms of brain disease, including transient ishemic attacks, which are temporary interruptions of blood flow to the brain and stroke. Of the 752 subjects, 315 had normal arteries. The remaining 437 had carotid atherosclerosis.

In another study, reported last July in the journal, Circulation, Finnish scientists found that among 49 sets of identical twins, the ones who smoked had more fatty deposits in their carotids than their non-smoking siblings, suggesting a casual role of smoking in carotid atherosclerosis.

"Some consumers loyal to Great Scott, when the flag goes down, they may go somewhere else."

-Jerry McVety
Consultant

Opportunity beckons

Grocers eye customers

Owners of independent food markets, trade associations and a consultant in the industry are split on what impact the acquisition of Great Scott supermarkets by Kroger will have on independents.

Some speculated that a portion of Great Scott's customers, who account for an 8-percent Detroit area market share, could take a closer look at independents, especially if those stores are convenient to the home or work place.

Others, citing the neighborhood niche carved by many independents, projected little or no gain in their customer base.

Still others suggested that as fewer big players get in the game and competition heats up, independents will have to work hard to keep the customers they now have.

"As long as independents have competitive prices and good service, they may do better," said Jerry McVety, a West Bloomfield consultant in the hospitality industry.

"SOME CONSUMERS loyal to Great Scott, when the flag goes down, they may go somewhere else," he said.

Bob Coleman, owner of Bob's of Canton, and William Welch, an owner of five Hollywood Markets including one in Troy, believe the merger presents opportunities for their businesses.

"They (large chains) can't give the service I do," Coleman said. "Kroger is known for slow checkout. Three things I dwell on — cleanliness, friendliness, quality and price. Quality and price are one."

"The perception was Great Scott was high (prices), Kroger, too," said Welch. "That should leave room for me.

"I would hope to think that someone left out in the dark . . . would give Hollywood Market a shot," Welch said. "That could conceivably happen."

JERRY ZAJDEL, owner of Your Better Market in Redford, isn't as optimistic as Coleman or Welch.

"I don't think there will be any change," he said. "They'll stay right there, unless they close the store."

Linda Gobler, president of the Michigan Grocers Association, doesn't expect that independents will reap a windfall as a result of the Kroger/Great Scott marriage.

"I'm not sure a merger or buyout impacts on smaller stores," she said. "Most independents really create a niche for themselves. You get into different neighborhoods, and retailers are accepted and become part of the community."

Gobler sees more competition among the three large remaining chains, A&P/Farmer Jack, Meijer and Kroger/Great Scott, than between them and the independents.

"THE INDUSTRY is very competitive . . . and operates on a 1-percent profit margin," she said.

Ryan Mathews, editor of Grocery Marketing, envisions two possible outcomes with recent local developments.

"Kroger would absorb Great Scott units and go through merge and purge locations . . . if they have two stores close to each other," Mathews said. "Typically, independents can do well in those situations with niche marketing.

"The worst case scenario is Kroger has made a firm commitment to the Detroit market, will keep the majority of stores, open new units and get very aggressive marketing." Mathews expects Kroger to come out fighting.

"Convenience is a key to independents' survival," said McVety.

Edward Deeb, president of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, mentioned a couple of other factors.

"INDEPENDENTS ARE a little more flexible," he said. "Smaller operators usually offer some kind of unique service you can't get at chain stores.

"Independents usually don't have buying power or cash flow. They have to find ways to compete. Usually they compete very well in fresh meats and fresh produce."

"Independents are in an excellent position to compete if they get aggressive themselves," Mathews said. "They have to become more responsive to the market, maybe more specialized merchandising. People are willing to shop if you can provide them access to unique products and services."

Stepped-up advertising may be in the independents' future — especially in their immediate environs — not only to attract new customers, but to retain the old, Deeb said.

Robotics conference coming

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

And some people thought all the Detroit area has to offer was the automobile.

The largest robotics show and conference in North America is coming to the Motor City June 5-7 at Cobo Hall with three days of seminars and nearly 200 manufacturers and service suppliers.

Jeff Bernstein, spokesman for the Robotics Industry Association (RIA), which is located in Ann Arbor, said Michigan has strived for years to become more than just an automotive-dependent state and the growing robotics manufacturing is evidence of that.

"This is an important issue — one of the things Michigan has wanted to do is to attract high-tech businesses and the fact that we're here is a reflection that (to some degree) the state has succeeded.

"That's one of the reasons we're (holding the show and conference) it here," he said. Another, paradoxically, is that the largest customers of robotics manufacturers and service providers is still the automotive industry.

Unlike the North American Auto show, the Robotics & Visions Automation conference show is more of a marketing than entertainment event, he said. The show is being cosponsored by the RIA, the National Service Robot Association, the Automated Imaging Association, and the Engineering Society of Detroit.

THERE MAY be some things of interest to the general public, but for the most part the exhibits and presentations are geared to the corporate executives, engineers, research and development people and plant managers who will use the products.

Sales of robotic grew steadily from their introduction almost three decades ago until 1985, when sales fell sharply. After a two year slump, sales have grown consistently and industry watchers heralded the booming years as an incredible comeback.

Advertising buyer finds success attainable here

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Media buying in a male-dominated automobile area like southeastern Michigan can be tough — especially for a home town woman.

Karen Ritchie, senior vice president, director of media services at McCann-Erickson Detroit in Troy, is the exception to the rule. Ritchie was chosen as the advertising woman of the year by the Women's Advertising Club of Detroit because she has made great strides in an advertising market, which even as late as the 1970s, was dominated by the automotive companies and men.

Not bad for a young Mount Clemens woman who was encouraged to leave southeast Michigan to pursue a media career in a city more friendly to women, Ritchie said. "I've done a lot of things in my life, and later, I'll probably do more, but right now I'm having a lot of fun doing what I'm doing."

Her ascent to the top of her field as a local person may be a significant factor in her being chosen advertising woman of the year.

"I'm not the first woman media director, nor am I the first one on a big automotive account, but I may be the first woman to make it this far in her own town.

"I think there's some of that in it," Ritchie continued. "My appointment may be considered a victory for the home town woman."

Regardless, it is a personal victory in which she takes great pride, she said.

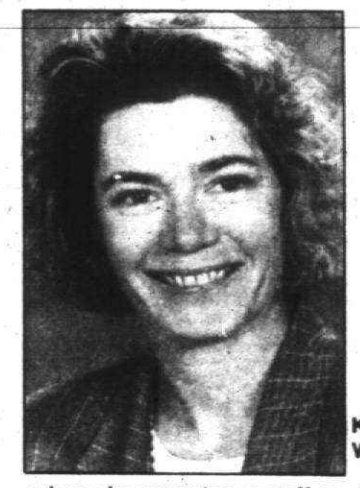

RITCHIE BEGAN her media career in 1975 at Campbell Ewald as a secretary and literally worked 70 hours a week until her supervisor noted her devotion and made her a media buyer.

Ritchie continued to take on added responsibilities with the firm until 1980, when Ritchie was promoted to media supervisor, which culminated in her taking part in the introductions of the 1982 Camaro and Celebrity automobiles.

Later that year, Ritchie moved to the firm Batten Barton Durstine & Osborne Inc. in Southfield, as vice president, media director, Dodge cars and trucks. While there, she was involved with the launch of the Dodge Caravan.

Ritchie returned to Campbell-Ewald (now Lintas:Campbell-Ewald) in 1984 as senior vice president, manager, media planning for Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks. She was promoted to group media director in 1988.

In 1989, she joined McCann-Erickson Detroit as senior vice president, director of media services, where she supervises a staff servicing the accounts of General Motors, Buick Motor Division, GMC Truck, as well as Champion Spark Plug and Kelsey-Hayes.

Karen Ritchie
Woman of the Year

"In many ways, we're the nuts and bolts of the agency. Once the ad is correct you have to get it to the people so it will be seen. We're like the wheels on a car — it can be beautiful, but it won't go without wheels.

"What I do is buy time and place — I guess it sounds real cosmic," Ritchie said. Essentially, her job is to efficiently frame a product or message in a place and time so it is brought to the desired audience.

A DIRECTOR of media services can be both a creative and administrative position, Ritchie said.

"One thing we're always struggling with is that we're trying to make it a science, but it's really an art," she said.

"You try to buy by the numbers, but how do you know what's hot? How do you know what the public will accept? Unless you have an intuitive sense, you're going to fail."

Intuition, she said she has found, can be taught, but it can also be drummed out of a person in the wrong environment. "What we're really talking about is popular culture." Media buyers are, more than anything else, students of popular culture, she said.

"Which means I work in everything from television to matchbook covers," he said.

Buying media time is becoming an increasingly more complicated job because the once obvious options of newspaper and network television are declining in attractiveness.

DAILY NEWSPAPERS, once the backbone of national promotions, are seeing less of the advertising budget, Ritchie said. In addition to a decade-long decline in readership, national advertisers resent the treatment they've received at the newspapers hands, she said.

Because newspapers were the only game in town for such a long time, they exacted (in the national advertiser's mind) exorbitant advertising rates and forced them into poor placements, she said. They were unkind to the advertiser.

The same applies, to some degree, to national television networks. "Networks were a good answer when 9.5 of 10 households were tuned into one of the networks — now it's almost half of that."

Both newspapers and television now face increased competition from other areas. Cable and independent stations, video rentals, home video games, computers, and sporting events are taking up an increasingly large part of the consumer's leisure time that was once devoted to watching network television.

The media buyer must be far more sophisticated today than in the past, she continued.

Magazines have a very specialized target audience, certain shows relate only to certain people, and some people rarely watch network television. "People relate to the media in a very personalized way."

As director of media services, Ritchie is not confined to merely buying time and advertising space.

On a given day, she may be acting as a consultant with magazine publishers trying to establish themselves, or working with universities like the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on new ways of reaching people.

The future of advertising will be a far cry from network television and newspapers, she said. "We've raise a whole generation of people who look to the electronic medium as a source for entertainment, news and information and now their children are turning to computers."

"The future will probably be a (synthesis) of the two," she said. Finding ways to reach that group will be the big challenge of the coming decades.

Yet another drive-in service caters to our needs

Drive-in funeral parlors were one of those ideas that never quite caught on, despite the success of drive-in movies, drive-in restaurants, drive-in beer stores, drive-in dry cleaners, drive-in oil changers and drive-in banks.

Most seemed like a good idea at the time, particularly in a society that is so much on the run that most of us are living out lives out mainly in transit, the social equivalent of a kited check racing the deposit to the bank.

With the windows rolled up, the air conditioning on automatic and the CD player programmed, we have become insulated from all kinds of street noise that would intrude if we were walking down a city street, from street vendors, to panhandlers to the physical bump of another pedestrian. This can, of course, be downright relaxing, but the fact is that most of us have to some extent rolled up the windows on our fellow man.

All this has led to a growing subculture of people who, for one reason or another, take their case, literally, to the streets.

The annual Goodfellows paper drive is generally credited to be among the first recorded instance of achieving stoplight guilt for a local charity. The sight of a middle-aged man cringing in the snow and sleet with a bagful of newspapers is bad enough, but the Goodfellows also are credited with developing the technique of standing right in the center of the intersection, holding their ground like running with the bulls at Pamplona, and fixing you with The Stare when you had to stop for the light. This leaves you with the option of either paying up, and getting a paper (of course you would have done it anyway) or trying to offset The Stare with the feeble counter of looking straight ahead, sort of like you are looking at TV, with your arms locked until the light changes.

Dan McCosh

The Goodfellows were quickly followed by the Rotary, the VFW and probably the worst of all, the police and firement selling field day tickets, who add to the intimidation, leaving the impression that you are going to get a ticket if you don't buy one.

But after charities broke the ice, things started getting a little wierd. First came the vaguely oriental-looking waifs who stuffed a few dying roses in an old potato chip can and leaned heavily on holidays like Mother's Day, developing their own version of The Stare, this time directed at any lady who happened to be sitting in the passenger seat, effectively communicating the nonverbal message 'cheapskate, cheapskate . . .' until you coughed up.

This was also the begining of some sinister undertones, particularly after the rumor started that the rose people were turning over the money to followers of Rev. Sun Moon. I tended to discredit this one, until a rose guy showed up downtown at the on-ramp to I-75 with a sign "I am not a Mooney." Yeah, sure.

Now comes the beginning of a trend I first noticed in Manhattan, which is a guy with a windshield cleaner in his hand who runs up to you at a stoplight, gives a few quick wipes and then fixes you with The Stare.

In the Big Apple, this sort of thing is best done by a tough-looking black kid who is leaning on the window of a naive suburbanite, who has heard stories about how if you don't pay these guys they will snap your windshield wipers off, so they pay up even if it's raining. Seasoned urbanites adopt the basic Goodfellow TV stare, and wait for the light to change. Smart guys turn their windshield wipers on, and then the washer guy usually snaps the wiper blade off.

Now that I think about it, maybe the drive-in funeral parlor might be an idea whose time has come.

Understand your own skills before hiring a PR specialist

Mary DiPaolo

Although imitation is the highest form of flattery, it by no means guarantees success when attempting to make news as part of your company's publicity and public relations program.

Rather than finding out what other similar businesses have done in the past, take time to initially identify your existing skills, talents and experience. Do you like to write? If so, you may take advantage of the opportunity to contribute articles about your business or industry to relevant trade publications, newspapers and magazines.

Do you have teaching or training skills? Use them to pursue public speaking opportunities as a seminar leader, luncheon speaker, guest lecturer or workshop instructor. Even an ability to entertain can lead to successful publicity and public relations opportunities.

I am reminded of one suburban mayor, who, as a city council candidate, publicized his political intentions while playing trumpet at various social functions.

THERE ARE several important concerns that must also be addressed prior to the planning and implementation of a company's publicity and public relations program. First someone must be selected to oversee the program. This person would need to maintain full control of the program, be organized but flexible enough to successfully manage last-minute changes when they occur.

Because any good publicity and public relations program is driven by a steady stream of meetings and deadlines involving outside organizations and individuals, the person in charge must be well prepared and, at the same time, very flexible. This person may be the company community relations director, public relations liaison or marketing manager. You may also obtain this type of support from an outside marketing consultant or public relations professional on a per-project or program basis.

In terms of program timing, keep in mind that the publicity and public relations activities associated with a single event may take as much time to plan and execute as several programs. A year ahead is not too soon to begin work; six months ahead is possible, and six weeks ahead is foolish.

From a budgeting perspective, the cost of any given project may range anywhere from zero to several hundred dollars considering the costs of postage, telephone, paper, printing and graphics. Lastly, staffing requirements will depend entirely on the nature of the program you are working on. If you need the assistance of volunteers, excellent sources include local community service groups, senior citizen clubs and student organizations.

Gifts can deflect tax man's ax

By Sid Mittra
special writer

Part II

finances and you
Sid Mittra

In this column I will explore several planning ideas involving gifts.

Annual exclusion: The annual exclusion of a $10,000 gift per donee provides an excellent opportunity for planning.

Assume Mr. and Mrs. Litle have two children and an estate of $1.5 million. They make gifts of $20,000 to each child for eight years, or a total of $320,000, thereby reducing the estate to $1,800,000.

When he dies, Mr. Litle leaves $600,000 directly to his wife and the balance of $580,000 in a trust. The $1.18 million ($600,000 plus $580,000) goes to the children at the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Litle.

The result is that the entire $1.5 million is transferred to the children, and no tax is paid either when the lifetime gifts are made or when the $1.18 million passes to the children.

Special property: Another strategy relates to the gift of property with a potential for significant appreciation.

Let us assume Lisa Brown owns an undeveloped piece of real estate property which she hopes will greatly appreciate in value. The current value of the property is $300,000 and she gives it to her daughter.

Several years later when Lisa dies, the fair market value of the property is estimated at $1 million. However, the gift is added back to Lisa's estate at the original value of $300,000 and not at the fair market value of $1 million estimated at the time of her death.

Gifting via a trust: Gifting to minors via trusts constitutes the third gift planning strategy. Trusts permit the grantor to postpone the donee's receipt of the trust property at a prespecified age.

Under the terms of a trust, a trustee can by given broad investment powers and through the use of a trust, the donor is able to designate the distributions of trust property to the minors at the ages considered most desirable by the donor.

Gifts to charity: Gifts to qualified charities offer another important estate planning strategy. As a general rule, gifts to qualified charities are deducted from the gross estate before estate taxes are calculated.

Gifts to charities can be made either outright or through the use of a trust. Depending upon the type of charitable trust selected by the donor, the trust property can assure an income stream to the donor, the surviving spouse, or other beneficiaries.

For instance, a living charitable remainder trust provides a current income tax deduction equal to the present value of the remainder interest left to the charity. In this case, the donor's estate is reduced by the value of the property transferred, and future income from the asset is taxed to the income beneficiary rather than the donor.

Disadvantage of Gifts: While gift giving has great potential to reduce the donor's income tax and future estate taxes, it has several drawbacks.

● Without proper consideration for future needs, a person may give away too much property during earning years and become financially strapped after retirement.

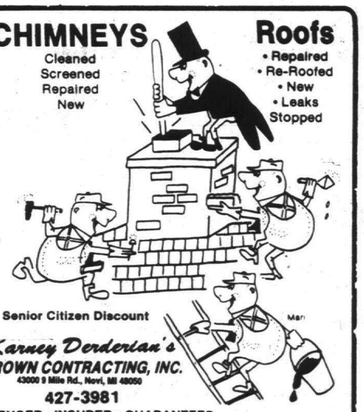

● If a husband decides to give substantial gifts to his wife under the assumption that both will continue to live together, but later on is divorced, then he will have given the gift to someone who no longer shares his life. Similar limitations apply to charitable gifts.

● If a taxable gift or bequest is given to grandchildren, a generation-skipping tax may be imposed on the gift. The tax is imposed at a flat rate of 55 percent, but there is a $1 million exemption to be allocated among all of the grandchildren.

Consequently, lifetime gifts should not be allowed to compromise the trade-offs among various objectives established for maximizing financial welfare.

ASK·A·NURSE
24-Hour Health Care Answers
When it comes to our health, most of us could use more information. Now, thanks to Mercy Hospitals, there's a convenient way to get it. From Ask-A-Nurse.
Ask-A-Nurse is a professional health care information and referral service staffed by registered nurses. It's confidential, free of charge and available 24 hours a day. In addition to answering health care questions, Ask-A-Nurse will make doctor referrals, fill you in on health care programs — even assess symptoms and help you decide what to do about them.
So now you know. When you have health care questions, Mercy Hospitals have the answer: Ask-A-Nurse.

Take your profit but don't sell all your Pfizer stock

Q. I have had some Pfizer stock for 15 years and have been reinvesting the dividends. After reading the excellent recent article in Barron's, I am wondering if I should sell and cut further losses and/or at least discontinue reinvesting dividends. Do you think this could be another A. H Robins?

A. It is difficult to tell what will happen to Pfizer as a result of the heart valve produce problem. It hasn't sold near as many of its products as Robins did, but the cost per person could be very large.

Pfizer has stated that it believes its reserves and insurance are enough to handle any liability. It is difficult to judge whether that will prove to be the case or not.

IT WOULD seem that is very likely that this matter will take a great deal of management's time and very likely disrupt the business for some period of time. However, the company has some excellent products in the pipeline and is likely to continue to grow.

Pfizer has been a well-managed company, and if I had the stock personally, I would be included to draw out about 125 percent to 150 perent of my original investment and continue the program of holding the balance and reinvesting dividends as you have in the past.

You mention that you have held the stock for 15 years, and that suggest to me that you have tripled or quadrupled your original investment.

I WOULD split the money you draw out between two good growing companies. For instance, you might consider Sigma Aldrice. It is in a different business supplying thousands of chemical compounds to businesses for research and testing. It has a record of growing about 15 percent a year for the past two decades and seems capable of continuing that performance.

A very different type of company, but one where growth is excellent, is Safety-Kleen Corp. This company is engaged in the business of disposing of hazardous materials from businesses that produce them as a part of their operation. There seems to be plenty of room for growth and management has been producing good margins.

IF YOU like banks, you also might consider Hibernia Corp. A or NBD Bancorp. Banks are out of favor with investors currently, but this makes them cheaper and these two have excellent mangements and records. Their growth has been at above-average rates.

skywatch
Raymond E. Bullock

The month of June ushers in the official start of summer, the days with the maximum hours of sunlight, and the full moon with the lowest altitude of the year.

Two planets, the gas giants Jupiter and Saturn, will be visible in the evening sky this month. Mercury, Venus and Mars will be in the predawn sky.

The amount of sunlight we receive increases by a mere ten minutes in June. On June 1, sunrise is at 5:58 A.M. and sunset is at 9:02 P.M., allowing for a possible 15 hours and four minutes of sunlight. On June 30 these times are 5:59 A.M. and 9:13 P.M., for a possible 15 hours and 18 minutes of sunlight.

Look toward the eastern horizon on June 1, 45 minutes before sunrise, and you will see brilliant Venus. Above and to the south (right) of Venus is the red planet Mars.

If you draw a line from Mars through Venus and continue in the same direction toward the horizon, you will come to Mercury. Mercury will be a VERY difficult object to see; it is located only one degree above the horizon.

Jupiter is easy to see on the evening of the 1st. The giant planet is located 32 degrees east (left) of the sun, and stands twelve degrees above the horizon 45 minutes after sunset. Twelve degrees above Jupiter is the star Pollux. This is one "head" of the Gemini twins. The other, Castor, is five degrees to the north (right).

JUPITER IS MOVING eastward through the constellation of Gemini. In two week's time Jupiter will be two degrees closer to Pollux, and both will be closer to the horizon.

Twenty degrees to the south (left) of Jupiter, and two degrees closer to the horizon, is a star named Procyon (PRO cee on).

Procyon is the eighth brightest star in the sky and, of the naked-eye stars, the fifth closest to us. Its distance is estimated to be eleven light years; the light we see tonight left Procyon in 1979. the star is approaching us with a velocity of about two miles per second. The name Procyon means "Before the dog" because this star rises shortly before the "dog star" Sirius.

Look for the moon in the south on the evening of the 2nd. The bright star to the east (left) of the moon is Spica (SPY ka) in Virgo. The moon will be passing near this same spot four weeks from tonight. On the night of the 3rd, the moon will be four degrees directly below Spica. While these two objects may look like they are side by side, they are really trillions of miles apart.

The moon is the nearest object in space to us. It's a mere 240,000 miles away, the distance to Spica, on the other hand, is so great it is difficult to grasp. To make the distance more meaningful, astronomers use a term called a light year. Light travels at the speed of 186,000 miles per SECOND. In one year (31,536,000 seconds) light will travel a distance of nearly six trillion miles. Six trillion multiplied by 275 (the estimated number of years it takes light to reach us from Spica) equals 165 trillion miles. And Spica is one of the CLOSER stars to us!

From June 3 through the 6th, the moon moves from Virgo, through Libra, and into Scorpius. The orange-red star to the east (left) of the moon, on the evening of the 6th, is Antares (an TAR ees). Antares is about the same brightness and color as Mars. On the following night, the moon will be below and to the east of Antares.

FULL MOON OCCURS at 7:01 A.M. on June 8. The moon is opposite the sun (as seen from the earth) and fully lighted. It will rise in the east as the sun sets in the west, be visible all night, and set as the sun rises.

A full moon is always located opposite the sun. Since the sun is at its HIGHEST altitude of the year in June (on the 22nd), the June full moon is always at its LOWEST altitude. Indeed, at midnight when the moon is due south and at its highest point of the night, it will be only 21 degrees above the horizon.

Three hours after sunset on the 10th, Saturn and the moon will be rising in the southwest. The moon will be about three degrees to the south (right) of Saturn. A patient observer, spending the night keeping close watch on the moon, will find it one degree closer to Saturn by the morning of the 11th. Both objects are high in the west southwest.

Eighteen degrees to the north (left) of Venus, on the morning of the 13th, is the Pleiades (PLEE a dees) star cluster. This star cluster marks the shoulder of Taurus and is a beautiful sight in binoculars. Watch as Venus drifts past the Pleiades during the next three weeks.

Last Quarter Moon is a 12:48 A.M. on June 16. The moon is entering the last quarter of its orbit around the earth. It will rise at 1:27 A.M. and be due south at sunrise.

A day in the life of a water molecule

Timothy Nowicki

A long time ago I remember being pushed aside as a gigantic long-necked creature came sloshing by. As its four legs whooshed me into a whirlpool, I began spinning for a time only to be splashed into the air by its tail.

On a hot sunny day not long after that episode, I felt a vibrating sensation and the next thing I knew I began floating up into the sky. It was the first time I ever recall having so much space around me.

This would not be the last time I felt this sensation of floating, but the first encounter of any experience is often the most memorable.

As I continued upward I could see the landscape around where I had been for several years.

As I floated higher I could see more but nothing could see me. By now the wind had begun to move me, and several of my kind, toward the horizon. It seemed like I would never reach it. All of a sudden I bumped into a tiny dust particle that had been floating around from some of the volcanic eruptions that had been going on.

The wind had taken me to a much colder area and I began to feel stiff. Not long after I felt that way, I began to have that floating sensation again. I seemed to tumble and drift and glide and swirl for a long time. Finally it stopped.

My location and this confined feeling were new to me. But just when I was getting comfortable with that feeling, the sun began to shine and I began to loosen up.

I noticed several of my kind being shunted in different directions. Some would remain at their stations for years. On the other hand, I kept moving upward. There were some twists and turns and eventually my surroundings became brighter. I could almost distinguish trees that were close by.

Those were the days long ago. Today I am doing the same things as I did back then, but the scenery and the company is different. As a I reminisce, I often wonder if I will ever meet up with those other water molecules that made up that first snowflake with me.

Mary Frances McCatty likes the challenge of the dances in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

Dancer is back for 'Superstar'

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

Mary Frances McCatty, who grew up in Troy, is in town to dance and sing in "Jesus Christ Superstar," the rock opera playing at the Birmingham Theatre.

"Dance may not be a sport, but dancers are athletes," she says. McCatty, explains both dancers and athletes require flexibility, precision, timing, strength and a high level of fitness. She sees the overlap between dance and sports because she came to dancing by way of gymnastics.

McCatty also comes from a family immersed in sports and involved in music. Her sister, Peggy Hursley, is coordinator for the Birmingham Ice Arena and teaches ice skating there. Brother Steve played for the Oakland A's and brother Don plays banjo and guitar as a hobby. Her parents still live in Troy where McCatty is staying through Sunday, June 17, during the run of "Superstar."

When she was young, McCatty remembers being "bat girl for my dad when he coached Class A hardball in Pontiac." Her mother danced "tap and point" as a girl, and McCatty boasts that her mother "was doing cartwheels in the living room until she was in her late 50s." On opening night, 11 enthusiastic relatives came to see McCatty perform her multiple, high-energy dances in "Superstar."

ANYONE INCLINED to dismiss chorus dancing as non-demanding should see the show-stopper routines McCatty does in "Superstar." McCatty admits to getting weary of the undemanding, look-pretty routines often relegated to women dancers in some shows. Not in "Superstar."

Director/choreographer Victor Valentine has included not only more dancing but more challenging dancing in the update of the Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice musical about the last days of Christ. The challenging dancing is one reason McCatty is delighted to work the show, plus the fact that she gets to sing while dancing. "But dancing's my first love. I love the physicalness of it," she says.

Her dance as a "tormentor" in the Birmingham Theatre production is decidedly demanding and reminiscent of the style of the late Bob Fosse. In the Tormentor dance, she wears a suit and "dances with the boys in the androgynous number." Before they even get on stage, the group must "worm fast underneath the raked (tilted toward the audience) stage" to emerge from a trap door amid furling smoke.

"We can't see a thing," she says of the danger of leaping smoke-blind through the trap door. Add to that the difficulty of dancing on the raked stage. "You feel like you're going to roll right down it," she says, adding they have changed some of the choreography to minimize the danger. McCatty points to the tormentor number as the kind of dancing that keeps her in the business, and she applauds the dy-

'Jesus Christ Superstar' was a role that beckoned

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

HAPPY TO HAVE his first day off in three weeks, Adrian Zmed was relaxed and enthused as he talked about his starring role in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

Interviewed in the lobby of the Birmingham Theatre, he sprawled comfortably in one of the high-backed chairs there. "It's tough for me to do a show where all you do is sing. It's my first show doing an opera, where I don't speak," he said.

The darkly handsome young performer said he was a kid in 1969 when the rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" first came out as a London album — before the Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice musical was ever staged. "I always wanted to do 'J.C.' I flipped over the music as a kid."

"Playing Christ is a scary thing," he declared. "You have to be up on cross, getting flogged (in Act II), but I got past that. He's a human being, who got to live on this earth."

During the flogging, "I'm five feet from the front row," he said, explaining how he has to make the physical suffering seem real. "It's very physically and emotionally draining for me." After the show is over, "I don't even want to come out for the curtain call."

The second act is in sharp contrast to the Act I. "The first half is a blast. I'm on top of the world and everyone loves me," he said. In the updated version of the show, Jesus Christ is presented in a rock star image.

ZMED, WHO WAS raised in Chicago, got his Broadway break starring as Danny Zuko in the smash hit "Grease." He had traveled with the second national tour of the show for a year, and played Detroit, before taking over the role in the New York production.

Son of a Romanian Orthodox minister, Zmed got his theatrical training at the Goodman School of Drama in Chicago. "I just naturally sing and dance very well," he said of his abilities to perform in musical theater and movies. He said he did not study singing or dancing formally but learned to how to sing and do folk dancing in the church. "It was like a little Romania."

At the Goodman Theatre, "They have a wonderful children's theater," Zmed said. Appearing in "The Emperor's New Clothes" and other shows for youngsters, "I was the king of song and dance."

Back in high school, he had wanted to be a football player but got injured during football practice. He was in a body cast for four months and after the cast was removed, when he was still walking with a cane, wandered into a play rehearsal at school. His English teacher cast him in a student production of "Guys and Dolls," and he was on his way to a new career.

"I wanted to go to professional acting school and work in regional theater," he said. Instead, he found himself on Broadway, then in television and the movies. As a TV star, he played Officer Vince Romano for five years on "T.J. Hooker." In a change of pace, he took over as host of "Dance Fever" for the last two years of the show that ran 10 years.

He was attracted to "Dance Fever," because, "How often do you get to sing and dance in Hollywood?" The problem was that after "Dance Fever," everyone forgot about his acting skills. "The only offers I got were to be hosts of TV variety shows," Zmed said.

THERE WAS a lull. "I got a chance to get reacquainted with my children," he said. (Zmed and his wife, Barbara, met in Chicago and were married there by his minister father. The couple lives in Los Angeles with their sons, ages 7 and 3.)

In his last year at Goodman, Zmed had struggled unsuccessfully to get his Actors Equity Card. He was already enrolled in college to switch to architecture when the chance came up to go with the national tour of "Grease." "It's one of the greatest parts a guy can do if you can act, sing and dance," he said.

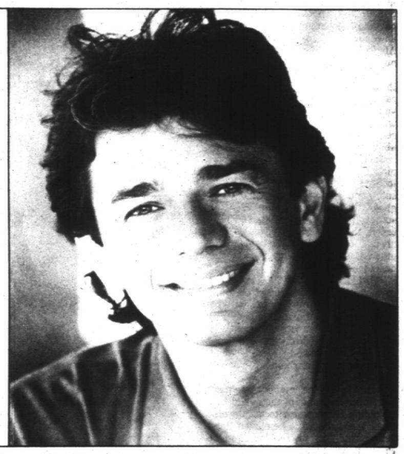

Later, he got to do his form of Danny Zucco, as Johnny in "Grease 2," an original movie musical and sequel to the blockbuster film "Grease." The plot was about the T-Birds and the Pink Ladies, new kids at the high school two years later. Although the sequel wasn't the sensation that the original was, "We did $75-80 million in business. It was not a flop." Zmed said that "Grease 2" outdistances "Grease" 10 to 1 in VCR rentals.

Zmed also appeared in the movies in the offbeat comedy "Bachelor Party," with Tom Hanks, and slasher film "The Final Terror," with Daryl Hannah and Rachel Ward. He said, "There's talk of doing a 'Bachelor Party II,' where I get married and Tom throws a party for me."

The actor's latest film is "Eyewitness to Murder," which is about to be released. He and co-star Andrew Stevens play policemen. Zmed recently completed a sci-fi thriller, cast as a detective. His next movie project is "Mad Bear Anderson," to be filmed in Germany, with him as an American Indian in the military.

THEN, HE WILL go back to the theater, playing Seymour in "The Little Shop of Horrors" at the Muny Opera House in St. Louis. The role of Seymour seems an unlikely one for Zmed, but he has played it before, at the Santa Barbara Theater Festival, and claims, "I can be a nerd with the best of them."

Last fall he appeared off-Broadway as the title character in "Eating Raoul," a movie turned into a musical. "It's a combination of 'The Little Shop of Horrors' and 'The Rocky Horror Show,'" he said. Paul Bartel did the original screenplay and the book for the show. "It was workshoped off-Broadway, and we hope to bring it to Broadway this fall," Zmed said.

'It's tough for me to do a show where all you do is sing. It's my first show doing an opera, where I don't speak.'
— Adrian Zmed

Dancer is back in town appearing in 'Superstar' namic routines and updating of the 1970 musical.

Valentine has brought the show into the high-tech, media-mad age of television religion and persecution by publicity. In the updated version, the traditionally male priests, Caiaphas and Annas, have been transformed into a manipulative, TV evangelist couple and the traditional money changers in the temple become Wall Street stockbrokers.

WITH VIDEO MONITORS posted high on both sides of the stage and an on-stage camera to zoom in for close-ups of the action, Valentine's version of "Superstar" expands the controversial rock opera into a multi-media statement about the way technology has tranformed how we treat those we call messiahs, heroes and superstars.

During her years in New York, McCatty has become savvy about auditioning for shows. She says, "I know which shows have a lot of dancing and I know which choreographers I like." She has danced with some of the best and laments, "A lot of wonderful choreographers have died in recent years."

One never-to-be-fulfilled wish is to have danced with Bob Fosse, but she counts herself lucky to have danced with Gregg Burge on German television and with Tommy Tune in "My One and Only." She liked the way Tune treats his casts.

"He hires you because he thinks you can do it, so he gives you a lot of freedom, but he cares about every little thing," McCatty says. "Tommy loves women. He wants all his women to look beautiful. That's nice because you know you won't get stuck with a really ugly wig or costume."

She admits to enjoying the moments of glamor in "dressing up in sequins and glitter and being somebody else or being outrageous." An added pleasure is going back in time. "I feel truly more at home in the '20s, '30s and '40s," she says. As a flapper in "My One and Only," she loved being "peppy and crazy" and believes she physically fit the '20s image. "I'm thin, have little lips, round eyes and thin oval face."

SINCE MCCATTY moved permanently to New York, she has danced in "Guys and Dolls" and "Animal Crackers," in "Sophisticated Ladies" at the Kennedy Center and on a tour of Japan, and in "My One and Only" — big name shows. She has performed in the films "Family Business," "A Shock to the System" and in Spike Lee's "Love Supreme."

How did the gymnast from Troy end up living the life of a Broadway dancer? When McCatty was in high school, her mother suggested she take ballet to enhance her gymnastic skills. That began the circuitous journey to find her niche in dance.

From ballet, she discovered she loved dancing, and after graduating from high school, McCatty enrolled in the Joffrey Ballet School in New York. At five feet eight and 124 pounds, she is trim and leggy, but she didn't look the part of the classic ballerina. "I was taller and bigger than any girl there," she says. "And I didn't like the stuffy attitude. It was too serious." So she left the school and came home to Troy — knowing she wanted to dance but not knowing where she fit in.

Then she auditioned to be a Detroit Pistons Cheerleader and got the job — a radical shift from classic ballet. Even though the Pistons only won 16 games during the 1979-80 season, she enjoyed being a cheerleader for the season. But she wanted to dance, so she returned to New York to study jazz and tap under Phil Blade. "I had the technique from ballet and the strength from gymnastics and I found fun people and freedom in movement.

Her first dance job was at the Atlantic City Playboy Club where she danced for a year in "a million dollar Vegas-type show with clothes." Meanwhile she realized she needed to develop her talents. She began taking voice and acting lessons in addition to dance classes. "It's a mistake for performers not to take class," she says, and studies both jazz and tap.

WHEN IN A SHOW, she loves the life of a dancer. Between shows she does occasional modeling jobs and performs at parties through an entertainment company. The reality is, "You're either doing a show, on unemployment, or looking for work."

When she is looking for work, "Auditions can be brutal about 50 percent of the time." As she describes it, "You walk out on stage all by yourself and see only shadows of people in the dark audience. Then you sing eight or so bars of a song until they cut you off. You might hear a 'Thank you.'"

Recently she began auditioning through an agent for principal parts in shows. That ups the ante, but McCatty's a veteran now of the business and says, "I usually don't take auditions personally.

● KIDS' SHOWS
Live music, dance, theater — and a python or two — are all part of a Saturday morning series of cultural events for children at Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi during June. Participants include children's recording artist David Jack, the Living Science Foundation, TheatreEtcetera and the Suzuki Violinists. The MOPO Bears, three bears with a song in their hearts, will also appear every Saturday to perform hits such as "Great Bears O' Fire." The shopping center is co-sponsoring the Youth Enrichment Series with "All Kids Considered," the family magazine. Program events take place in Center Court at 11 a.m. every Saturday during June. Opening the series June 2 is a performance of "Imagine That," 45 minutes of stories and songs done in story-theater style, presented by TheatreEtcetera.

● THE PALACE
Pop-duo Air Supply will appear at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 3, at the Palace of Auburn Hills, as part of "Vernors AmericaFest" — the arena's week-long Fourth of July holiday celebration. Additional events during the fest will be named later. Tickets at $22.50 reserved are on sale at 10 a.m. at the Palace box office and all Ticketmaster outlets. Tickets also may be charged by calling 645-6666.

● SUMMER FESTIVALS
Millender Center presents a lineup of summer festivities to coincide with Hart Plaza's Ethnic Festivals in downtown Detroit. The center's Atrium will be filled with the sounds of German singer/accordianist Ed Adamek from 12:30-2 p.m. Friday, June 8. Dressed in full-German garb, Adamek will parade through the Skywalk Shops. Bratwurst and sauerkraut will be served at Deli-Plus (near the City-County skywalk).

● MOONLITE CRUISES
Metro Detroit bands set their sound to sail with Boblo Island's 1990 Miller Lite Moonlite Cruises. From rock 'n' roll to rhythm and blues, this year's roster of bands boasts local favorites including the Detroit Blues Band, D.C. Drive, the Sun Messengers, Broken Yoyo, and Steve King and the Dittlies. The Boblo boat sets sail at 11 p.m. Friday-Saturday through Labor Day weekend. A holiday cruise is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 2. The Detroit Blues Band will play blues, rock 'n' roll and oldies June 1; Broken Yoyo will play progressive rock June 2. Tickets may be purchased at any Boblo dock or Ticketmaster Ticket Center. For general information call 843-0700.

● IRISH MUSIC
An Irish Festival will be held from noon to 10 p.m. Friday-Sunday, June 1-3, at Hart Plaza in Detroit. Performers direct from Ireland are Martin and Seamus Connolly — Martin is all-Ireland accordian champion and Seamus, all-Ireland fiddle champion; Norman Payne and Michael Fitzpatrick; the Potato Dogs with Bob O'Donavan; and Tip Splinter. Many of Detroit's Irish musicians, singers and dancers also will perform.

● BOB POSCH
Duffy's Waterfront Inn in Union Lake presents "The Bob Posch Comedy Show" at 9 and 11 p.m. every Friday-Saturday in June. Cover charge is $7. Call 363-9469 for reservations.

● BALLROOM BLITZ
Oakland Mall presents Ballroom Blitz from Saturday, June 2, to Sunday, June 10, as the mall in Troy celebrates dance with daily presentations of tap, jazz, modern dance, square dancing and the tango, plus the sensual Latin rhythms of lambada and other dances. Following many of the presentations will be lectures and Q and A sessions to help educate the audience on the history and aesthetics of the dances. In addition, Saturday-Sunday, June 2-3, and Saturday-Sunday, June 9-10, area ballet students will give recitals on the center court stage.

RECYCLING IS GOOD NEWS:

Overcrowded landfills. Garbage barges no one wants to deal with. Terminal trash.

News.

Bad news.

The good news? More and more people, businesses and industries are finding ways to recycle.

It takes more than 6,000 tons of newsprint each year to print The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers plus a number of other publications, so we're doing a number of things to help the solid waste situation:

1.For years we've sold our waste newsprint to a recycling firm.

2. 25% of the newsprint we print on is recycled and we're increasing this amount by another 25% this year.

3. Our employees have begun to routinely put office paper (memos, computer paper, waste copy paper) in recycle bins instead of waste baskets.

Of course, we still deliver thousands of newspapers twice each week. It's our business to bring you news of your local government, schools, sports scene and community events; the news you need to know.

And when you're finished reading your hometown newspaper there are places that will recycle them.

We've listed a few for you on this page because we think recycling is Good News.

What do an apple, a cow, and a car door have in common?

Recycled newspapers play a role in all three. Apple growers in the northwest use recycled newsprint for packing, farmers use it for bedding instead of straw and auto manufacturers use it in car doors. There are many uses for your used newspapers, why not start saving them today?

No. 1 Chiefs dump East Lansing, 2-1

Plymouth Canton coach Don Smith promised his girls soccer team would "come back and play next year" after losing to East Lansing in a first-round regional game in 1989.

Smith's words proved to be more prophetic than even he imagined they might a year ago.

The Chiefs, despite being a young team with only three seniors among its 23 members, have certainly come back from that defeat and played well in 1990. Because of it they're in the regional finals for the second time in three years.

Canton went back to East Lansing for another first-round regional clash Wednesday night, and this time the Chiefs avenged last year's 3-2 loss by eliminating the Trojans 2-1.

The state's top-ranked team in the final poll, Canton takes a 13-2-2 record into the regional championship game Saturday against Kalamazoo Central at Okemos High School.

CENTRAL DEFEATED Grand Haven 10-1 in its regional opener Wednesday and is 16-1-1. East Lansing finishes 15-2-2.

"This means a lot, especially with all the young players," Canton senior Jenny Russell said of Wednesday's win. "We know, when we go into big games, we have to play our best and we did."

After jumping to a 2-0 lead, the Chiefs maintained a 2-1 halftime lead through the final 40 minutes with good defensive play.

Canton left no doubt in the first half it was the better team, which made the one-goal margin of victory a bit surprising, but the Trojans shrugged off their poor first half and played better defense, too.

"We were a step slow and a little hesitant," East Lansing coach Nick Archer said of the first half. "It's a matter of who's on. Whoever hesitates is lost.

"Canton was all over the field. They played a mobile front six. They seemed to always have 10 fast players out there."

THE CHIEFS fired nearly 15 shots at the East Lansing goal in the first half, while the Trojans went almost 10 minutes without an attempt and had only four.

Refusing to allow the ball out of the East Lansing end, Canton took a 1-0 lead on Christina Reilly's goal in the first 10 minutes, and Lynne Nichols fired a rocket from 30 yards away that was unstoppable.

"The first goal snuck in," Archer said, "but the second was a bullet. That was a big-time, major-league goal."

Reilly dug a cross from Ayana Nash out of the corner and, with virtually no angle on the goal, managed to score. Nichols, who helped Canton control the action with her physical play in the midfield, lifted a hard shot that was on target.

East Lansing's Carrie Thomas, who scored the winning goal last year, made it 2-1 when she chipped in the rebound from a corner kick, which Canton goalkeeper Jori Welchans had deflected.

The Chiefs had little to worry about to that point because of their dominance at the offensive end, but Canton played just well on defense.

"I THINK WE got tired out a little bit, but I have to give a lot of credit to Jori Welchans and the defense," Russell said. "I think we realized if we're going to win we have to play as a team.

"It might not be pretty, but it's a win. We didn't have as many shots in the second half, but we played all 80 minutes and the defense held up."

Canton had a 4-3 edge in shots attempted in the second half, and the only big moment occurred when Canton sophomore Danielle Meyka knocked away a shot by Nicole Mitchell.

"We moved the ball nicely in the second half," Smith said. "We just didn't make anything happen like we did earlier.

"We moved the ball well enough, and (East Lansing) had to come back and play a lot of defense. They definitely didn't control the ball. It was a good back-and-forth game. They were throwing the ball down to their forwards mostly and trying to make a run at us."

Smith said he was worried about the angle of the setting sun, too. The Trojans had to deal with that in the first half, but Welchans was in the unshaded goal later.

THAT BROUGHT back images of Thomas lofting a rising ball for the game winner last year, Smith said, and the close game made those concerns more pronounced.

"I had a feeling we could score on them," he said. "Their defense didn't look that quick, but they seemed to run us off the ball at the last.

"We could have put them right out of the ballgame (in the first half) and didn't. They hung on and hung on. When they scored, they were right back in it. If we could have kept them off the board, I think the second half would have been a lot different."

Ex-champ struggles to overcome injuries

track

When Angie Miller left Plymouth Canton High School with consecutive state titles in the high jump in tow, it seemed logical to assume records would continue to tumble in her track career at Western Michigan University.

That hasn't happened.

Miller completed her sophomore season at WMU at the Mid-American Conference championship meet in Oxford, Ohio, by tying for fifth in the high jump with her second-best effort of the season: 5-feet, 7¾-inches.

Earlier in the season, she tied the school record, clearing 5-8 at the Hillsdale Relays.

So to infer Miller's two seasons at WMU have been disasterous would be wrong. But she hasn't been happy with them.

She expected more.

Angie Miller
injury-plagued jumper

"I WISH I could have done a little better at the MAC meet," Miller said from her family's home, which is now in Waynesboro, Pa. "In practice I had been jumping 5-8½, so I thought I might do better."

Indeed, Miller had hoped for far more this season. She still holds the Canton school record for the high jump — 5-7¼. Which means, in two years of college, she has improved by just three-quarters of an inch.

There are reasons. Serious shin splints have left her below par the last two seasons. "I'm supposed to run the quarter (mile)," Miller said. "But my shin splints have been so bad . . . Against Central Michigan, I was going to run the quarter in the mile relay, but I couldn't.

"I had the same problem last year. In a couple of meets (this year), I had to pull out early they hurt so bad. Not being able to run, I figure it has to hurt my jumping, too."

No doubt. Her physical problems have a source, Miller figures. "Our workouts are all wrong," she said. "(Coach Debbie Hunt) starts running us real hard. The very first day of practice, we're running 800 (meter) repeats.

"My legs just can't take that."

HUNT AGREED. "High school athletes don't train for track year round," she explained. "When they get to college, they're not used to it. It's hard to say if they'll adapt or not. Some just don't adjust well.

"Angie's freshman year was definitely hampered by lower leg problems. Lessening the severity of her injury helped her improvement this year. Hopefully, next year we'll see more training and less injury, and more improvement."

However, Hunt said she had no training adjustments planned for Miller. The WMU coach still hoped Miller would be able to run the 400, too. "We would dearly love to run Angie in the quarter," said Hunt. "I don't know how effective she would be in the open quarter, but she would be a welcome addition to our mile relay."

However, Hunt added, "We'll wait and see how she does in the fall. If she holds up, we'll gradually work her into training for the quarter. But Angie's premier event is the high jump."

ON THAT subject, both coach and athlete are in accordance.

Miller's goals for next season could hardly be considered pie-in-the-sky. The past two injury-plagued years have seen to that.

"I'd like to qualify for the NCAA provisionals," she said, which would mean clearing 5-10 (the NCAA qualifying standard in the high jump is 6-0¾. If there aren't enough competitors who have cleared that height, it is lowered to the provisional height of 5-10).

But that, Miller explained, "is my goal for my senior year. Next year, I just want to run."

To reach that end, Miller will "get into training hard this summer," she vowed, including competing in local runs and lifting weights.

She hopes it will help, but she isn't certain. Miller does know she can't continue at WMU under the same conditions. "There were some practices that I couldn't do anything," she said. "I'd just high jump and leave. It was terrible."

A repeat next year, whatever the reason, is something Miller won't — and doesn't plan on having to — tolerate.

Salem runner-up in WLAA girls meet

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Last year a thunderstorm cut short Livonia Stevenson's bid to win the Western Lakes Activities Association girls track championship.

But lightning wouldn't strike twice as the Spartans won their first-ever WLAA crown Tuesday under clear skies, holding off a stern challenges from hosts Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton.

Stevenson, which had to settle for second in last year's storm-shortened meet, came back strong to score a team-high 154.5 points, followed by Salem (146.20) and Canton (111.5). Farmington was a distant fourth with 71.20. See statistical summary.

"It's been a long time," said Stevenson coach Paul Holmberg. "We won the Inter-Lakes, the old league we used to be in 10 years in a row, but never in this league.

"What makes this nice is that this team works extremely hard. They're very coachable."

Stevenson trailed much of the night until the 200-meter dash — the 13th of 16 events — when Lisa Christensen, Debbie Walsh and Nicole Todd combined for 13 points, finishing fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively. That offset the 10 points Salem's Andrea Kinnelly picked up by finishing second.

AND BY TIME the meet's final event, the 1,600 relay, had rolled around, all the Spartans needed was to finish one place ahead of Salem.

Stevenson's foursome of Christensen, Julie Martin, Tracy Clark and Becky Adamczyk made sure the team trophy was in their possession, nosing out Farmington Harrison for first place with a time of 4:14.31.

"I was crying before the race," said Christensen, the lead-off leg. "I just wanted to win. I had a pretty good day, but for our team to win, that's what we really wanted."

Tears flowed among the Stevenson contingent after Adamczyk held off Harrison's Audra Cockerham at the wire. Farmington wound up third in the race and Salem was fourth.

"It was exciting, nerve-wracking," said Stevenson's Jessann Martin, who won the shot put (35 feet, 3¼ inches) and discus (125-5). "I told my sister (Julie Martin) to 'just do your best, we got to win it.'"

GUY WARREN/staff photographer

Yolanda Jackson of Salem crosses the finish line, winning the 100-meter dash in 12.3. The freshman athlete was third in the high jump and anchored two winning relay teams for the second-place Rocks.

"WE GOT SOME points where we didn't expect to get points, and we didn't score where I thought we'd score some points," said Holmberg. "We got a second (Todd) in the 100 (dash) where we had just hoped to score, and we placed three girls in the 200.

"And we just had fantastic senior leadership with Nicole Todd, Tracy (Clark), Jessann (Martin) and Lisa (Christensen). That was important."

Christensen was nosed out by Salem's Jennifer Harris in the 100 hurdles, but came back to beat Harris in the 300 hurdles.

Clark, a regional champion in the 800, was not at her best, but picked up eight valuable points by finishing fifth in both the 800 and 1,600 runs.

Salem, meanwhile, made a serious challenge thanks to a strong showing by freshman Yolanda Jackson, who won the 100 in 12.31 and anchored the victorious 400 and 800 relays.

Another standout for the Rocks was Tracey Livermore, who won the long jump (16-7). She was also a member of both winning relay teams as was Tonya Wheeler. (Kim Ploucha was the fourth member of the 400 team.)

"We did just about everything we expected," said Salem coach Mark Gregor. "They (Stevenson) scored some points in the 200 that we didn't expect, and we didn't score in the 400, which hurt us a little bit.

"WE DIDN'T expect to score in the throwing events, but we offset that with our jumpers. Our girls gave it their best shot, unfortunately we were 10 points short."

The Rocks excelled in long jump as Livermore took first. In the high jump, Harris garnered first and tied a league record.

The only WLAA record broken was the 3,200 run, where Farmington senior Jennifer Kiel posted a time of 11:29.78, shattering the mark of 11:39.4, set by Livonia Churchill's Julie Recla in 1984.

Kiel also won the 1,600 run (5:29.1), staving off a late bid by Canton's Amy Smith.

Canton, the Western Division dual meet champs, stayed close throughout the meet, but fell off when two competitors were disqualified for false starts in the 100 hurdles.

"Our two best kids were DQ'd and you hate to see that happen," said Canton coach George Przygodski. "But that's part of track and field. I'm not disputing that part of the meet. I just think we finished where we thought. We gave it our best shot."

Canton's best event was the 400, where Kim Gudeth took first in 1:02.5. Teammates Kristy Brugar and Christie Saffron finished third and seventh, respectively.

GUDETH AND Saffron were also members of the victorious 3,200 relay squad (10:03.1) along with Smith and Adrienne Garrow.

Fifth place Walled Lake Western was led by Jodi Pettibone, who won the 800 in 2:32.04, edging North Farmington's Jenny Weh and Westland John Glenn's Dana Nowicki.

Sixth place Walled Lake Central got a sterling performance from Shannon Capstick, who won the 200 in 26.28. She was also second in the long jump.

But overall, the night belonged to the Lakes Division champion Spartans, who took a victory lap around the track to celebrate their efforts.

Area track athletes prep for state meets

Nine regional champions will be among the area athletes competing for additional honors Saturday in the Class A track and field championships in Midland High School.

Farmington's Jennifer Kiel won regional titles in the 1600- and 3200-meter runs but is expected to concentrate on one or the other in the state meet.

The girls 3200 figures to be an event filled with area athletes. Plymouth Canton's Amy Smith, Plymouth Salem's Tammy Hickey, Farmington Hills Mercy's Heather Noll and North Farmington's Lisa Rives also qualified for that race.

Jeanette Turner was regional champ in the discus, and the Marlins had the region's best 3200 relay team with Lauren Hood, Kathleen Gerigk, Carrie Walton and Kathy Cook.

IN ADDITION to Noll, the Marlins had runner-up finishes from Gail Murie (high jump) and Hood (800 run) in the regional. The top two automatically qualify and any others who meet the qualifying standard.

Mercy will have three relays in the state meet. Its 800 team of Kim Cook, Heather Sullivan, Nicole Pryor and Kathy Cook and the 1600 unit of Sullivan, Dawn DiPonio, Kathy Cook and Hood were second in regional competition.

Other girls regional champions include Canton's Stephanie Gray (high jump), Salem's Jennifer Harris (100 hurdles) and Farmington's Sue Gibson (long jump).

Harris also qualified in the high jump at the Ypsilanti regional. Salem freshman Yolanda Jackson will compete in the high jump and the 100 dash. Canton's Kim Gudeth had a second in the 800 run.

Rives also anchored North's second-place 3200 relay team, which included Jenny Weh, Lisa Wantuck and Emily Shively. The Raiders will send Adrienne Mocello (discus) and Liza Handziak (long jump) to the state meet, too.

Mike DeJarnett of Canton, Jason Gutting of Farmington and Todd Pawlowski of North go into the boy state meet as regional winners.

Canton underdog in district

By Bob Stebbins
staff writer

Plymouth Canton's softball team enters district play Saturday as an underdog, a role the Chiefs are unaccustomed to filling.

Canton plays Belleville in the first round of the Westland John Glenn district at noon, and the winner faces the Adrian-Ann Arbor Pioneer survivor at 2 p.m.

In the baseball district at Glenn, Plymouth Salem meets No. 10-ranked Ypsilanti at 12:30 p.m. Ann Arbor Huron and Adrian play at 10 a.m., the winners at 3 p.m.

Even though the Chiefs own a 24-3 softball record, Canton coach Dave Racer doesn't think his team is the favorite to take the district. Instead, he puts Pioneer — a team ranked as high as third in the state and currently No. 10 — in that position.

"To be honest, I think you have to favor Pioneer, but I like to think we have a chance," Racer said. "We're going to come out and play ball."

softball

FIRST, THE Chiefs must get past Belleville, a team Canton beat 10-4 earlier in the year at the Milford Lakeland tournament.

"They have a good center fielder and a decent third baseman, but they are not the quality team they have been in the past," Racer said. "They are a team we should beat, but we can't get overconfident.

Racer hasn't decided who will be his starting pitcher against Belleville — Kelly Holmes, who defeated the Tigers earlier, or Stacey Thompson.

The possibility of playing back-to-back games could affect Racer's decision. He prefers to pitch Thompson in the first game and catch her in the second game, believing it's too hard on her legs to catch first and pitch second.

No matter what order he pitches his hurlers in, Racer feels fortunate to have both players.

"It is nice to have a senior pitcher, and it is nice to have a pitcher like Kelly who throws hard," he said.

CANTON GOES into district play with five players batting over .300. Thompson leads the Chiefs with an impressive .549 average. She hit .450 as a junior and .445 as a sophomore.

Center fielder Jennifer Vanootighem batted .346 as the lead-off hitter and stole 40 bases.

Second baseman Jenny Sekovich hit .368, Renee Dory .338 and Julie Nicastri, whom Racer calls "a good defensive first baseman," .310.

On the mound, Thompson and Holmes also posted strong numbers. Thompson compiled a 10-1 with a 0.88 earned run average. She threw 72 innings and struck out 48 batters while allowing 22 walks.

Holmes posted 14 wins against two losses and struck out 152 hitters in 96 innings. She allowed only 11 earned runs in putting together a 0.88 ERA. Holmes walked 90 hitters.

Observer's best ready for battle

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The prospect of a Redford Catholic Central-Farmington showdown for a district baseball championship would also be a battle for Observerland supremacy.

The two powers have emerged as the area's top teams this year, but they might not get to the final of the Southfield tournament if they look too far ahead Saturday.

A pair of Livonia schools would like a district title just as much. In the first game, Franklin opposes Farmington at 9:30 a.m., and Churchill tackles CC at noon. The final is scheduled for 2:30 p.m.

"People are going to take an objective look and say it's a probability," said Farmington coach Kevin Kansman of seeing the Shamrocks in the final. "But, when it's one game and it's over, you can never do that. We're going there to play two, but we're not playing the second game before the first one."

The Falcons won the Western Lakes Activities Association crown and own a 19-2 record. CC, which played for the Catholic League title Wednesday, was 21-9 going into that game.

BUT CHURCHILL has won its last five games to improve its record to 7-10 and counts a victory over Farmington among its successes. Franklin is 8-12 but lost a number of one-run games.

"We're just happy we're there," Churchill coach Herb Osterland said. "We were 0-7 at the start of the year, but our ballclub has gotten stronger as we've gone along.

"If the kids continue to play the way they have the last few games, we'll hold our own. There's more pressure on them than on us."

CC is expected to throw Keith Bozyk against the Chargers, but coach John Salter was waiting to see how the pitching situation played out Wednesday. Bozyk is 5-2 with 83 strikeouts and 38 walks in 53 innings.

"I might think about saving him for the second game, but that's always a gamble," Salter said. "I'll think about it a few days before deciding."

The Shamrocks, who were Class A champs three years ago and semifinalists last year, are led offensively by the Pirronello brothers. Paul, a senior, is hitting .457 and leads the team with 28 RBI, and Dennis, a junior, carries a .372 average.

CC HAS SIX others hitting between .270 and .330, and the Shamrocks, with a .298 team average, are the most potent club CC has fielded in several years, Salter said.

"From what I've heard, (the Chargers) have a good left-hander," he said. "Left-handers are usually tough because you don't see that many of them, especially if they have a good breaking ball."

The pitcher is junior Mike Thomas, who is 4-2 after starting 0-2. He's walked only two in his last two outings while striking out 12. Osterland isn't afraid to use Dan Ackerman on the mound, and freshman Mark Rutherford is 2-0.

Salter also knows about Churchill first baseman Jason Gabel, a senior hitting .475 and leading the Chargers with 27 RBI and seven doubles. Third baseman Russ McQuaid has less at-bats than Gabel (60-38) but is hitting .474.

"Jason has one of the liveliest bats I've ever seen," Osterland said.

Farmington's ace is senior Chris Schmid, who is 7-0. Kansman might throw Kevin Young (5-0 with one save) against Franklin and hold Schmid for the final.

"Even though people might say you're not pitching Chris because you're looking past the first game, someone has to pitch the second game if you win the first," he said. "You have to have some strategy."

YOUNG AND Schmid have been the team leaders at the plate besides the mound. Young is batting .540 and leads in runs scored, RBI and stolen bases. Schmid, who also plays first base, is the second-leading hitter at .506.

Kansman said the loss to Churchill late in the season taught the Falcons a lesson.

"We have a good team and we're having a good year, but we're not looking at the (total) year," he said. "We have to treat each game as it comes. We'll celebrate when it's over. Right now we have to go out on any given day and play."

Tad Dennis is the likely starter for Franklin. He's 3-2 and has pitched well against good teams, coach Gerry Cullin. Steve McCool has a 3-1 record.

"If (Dennis) has a good ballgame, we could be in it, but we have to play good defense behind him because he doesn't strikeout many," Cullin said. "That could be the key. Our hitting has not been real consistent. A couple players have been hitting well all year, but the rest are kind of spotty."

Franklin's top threats are Scott Marinkovich and Craig Overaitis, both .400-plus hitters.

Past champions begin with wins

Defending regular-season champ Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury and reigning post-season champ Walter's Home Appliance opened the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League season with victories Friday.

Derek Darkowski and David Houghtby were the winning pitchers as Hines Park defeated Duffy's Plumbing and Walter's blasted Tom Holzer Ford 8-1.

The other scheduled game resulted in a forfeit victory for Little Caesars over Wendy's of Ann Arbor, which didn't have enough players at game time.

Darkowski, the Michigan State pitcher, scattered Duffy's five hits over five innings and walked only one. He struck out eight.

Todd Marion, who set a single-season save record for the University of Michigan this year, pitched two innings of no-hit ball as the closer for Hines Park. He fanned three and walked none.

DEREK HUMPHRIES and Mike Culver, both former teammates at Plymouth Canton, had two hits and one RBI for the winners. Kevin Learned and Mike Gray chipped in RBI sacrifice flies.

Steve Michelz drove in a run for Duffy's with a double, and Mike Siwajek hit an RBI single.

Doug McGregor worked five innings and suffered the loss, allowing four of Hines Park's five hits and three walks. John Schefka finished up.

Houghtby checked Holzer Ford on two hits over four innings for Walter's. Holzer took a 1-0 lead in the second inning, but Walter's got two in the top of the second for Houghtby, who walked two and struck out one.

Chad Wrona pitched the last two innings in relief of Houghtby, striking out four against just one walk.

Ken Dropiewski had two hits, including a triple, scored three runs and knocked in a run for Walter's. John Gotts' two-run single keyed a five-run sixth inning that sealed the victory.

Holzer Ford's run was unearned, coming on an error.

● TENNIS LESSONS

Canton Parks and Recreation Services is offering tennis lessons (six) from Monday, June 18, to Friday, July 6, for children age 8 to adults and players of all ability levels. The fee is $23 for Canton residents, $25 for non-residents.

There also will be a six-week league session for players with intermediate and/or excellent ability. Matches will be played on Fridays. The fee, including league play, is $42.

The age groups are youth (8-12), juniors (13-18) and adult (18 and over). Kristen Harrison, a certified professional, will be the instructor. Call 397-5110 for exact class times and days.

● SOCCER TRYOUTS

The Plymouth Lightning and Plymouth Thunder under-19 girls soccer teams will have tryouts on June 11, 13 and 14 from 6-8 p.m. at Hines Park.

The Lightning will be applying to Ilitch Division and the Thunder will be a Division I team. Girls with birth years through 1973 are welcome. Questions regarding the Lightning should be addressed to Frank Carey (459-0824) or Marilyn Goff (459-1804) and the Thunder to Gary Cifaldi (459-3757).

● Canton Hornets and Canton Bulldogs will have tryouts for its 1979 boys teams, May 31 and June 4, 6 and 7, at Canton High School. Call Phil Tajoy (981-4296) or Gary Best (397-1897). The Canton Strikers 1978 boys will have tryouts June 16 and 17 at Canton High. Call Bill Friend (422-6657).

CC, Canton gear for state

By Ray Setlock
staff writer

With the Class A Tennis Championships slated for Friday and Saturday at the Midland Tennis Center, it appears that Redford Catholic Central will make some noise.

According to coach Frank Garlicki, the Shamrocks will put plenty of stock in their Nos. 2 and 3 doubles teams. The No. 2 team of Jayson Torres and Chris Alonte are 10-1 this season, while the No. 3 team of Chip Shade and Chris Matson is 9-2.

"Our greatest strength comes from our doubles players," he said. "They should give us a boost."

The No. 2 doubles team is seeded third and will get a bye in the first round. The No. 3 team is seeded sixth and will play Grand Blanc in the opening round.

CC IS ALSO expected to get contributions from No. 1 singles player Paul Bozyk and No. 2 singles player Marko Habekovic.

tennis

Bozyk (9-8) is seeded seventh, while Habekovic (9-6) is seeded fourth. Both players will receive a bye in the first round.

"Realistically, I think we will finish somewhere around fifth," Garlicki said. "But with a few surprises anything can happen."

Plymouth Canton will also make a trip to the championships, but coach Jim Hayes isn't lokking too far ahead.

"None of our guys won their regional, therefore they won't be seeded," Hayes said. "Much of our hope lies in the first round. If the seedings work in our favor, we can maybe get through the opening round and get to the better players."

ACCORDING TO Hayes, No. 3 singles player Scott Jones may surprise a few people.

"Lane has a 12-1 record," the coach said. "He's a scrappy player and you just never know what can happen."

Hayes says the Chiefs' No. 3 doubles tandem of Joe Binder and Adam Majewski may also surprise.

"The No. 3 team got to the finals in the regional," Hayes said. "They had a 12-1 record and could get some attention."

North Farmington freshman Seth Hoffman will enter the championships with a 19-0 record. He is ranked No. 1 in the Midwest by the Western Tennis Association in the 14-and-under age bracket and is ranked No. 6 nationally by the U.S. Tennis Association.

PUNEET AILAWADI of Livonia Churchill will also participate this weekend and is hoping for an upset.

"I will try my best," he said. "I hope to make things happen and surprise someone."

Ailawadi will take a 17-3 record into the competition. He lost to Bozyk at the regional, 6-0, 6-2.

WE HAVE THE BEST WEATHER-RESISTANT LUMBER IN TOWN
It really weathers the elements! Water beads right off Wolmanized EXTRA Weather Resistant Lumber because it's got something "extra" – it's pressure treated with a special water repellent to prevent moisture penetration from rain and snow. As wood swells and expands when it absorbs moisture, as it dries it releases moisture and shrinks. Constant expansion and contraction causes grain raising, checking, splintering and warping. Spray or brush on water sealers can't reopen water like Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber – in laboratory tests, Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber shows almost two thirds more moisture resistance than pressure treated lumber protected with a leading water sealer. Of course, this fantastic lumber is also pressure treated for lasting protection against termites, rot and decay. Don't settle for ordinary treated lumber. Insist on Wolmanized EXTRA!

Exercise may ease varicose vein look

Dear Myrna: I'm a middle-aged woman who runs six days a week, usually three miles a day. I have a varicose vein problem...I had surgery about 10 years ago and I'm starting to see a little veining again.

I really dislike the way my legs look — I am vain. There is no pain or discomfort when I run. I do love running — it keeps me sane.

Can you give me advice? Will my veins get bad again?

You should really be talking to a doctor about this. I can only give you basic, general information about varicose veins. I cannot advise you medically.

Varicose veins are veins that become swollen. Blood flowing back to the heart is directed in veins by valves that act as gates, opening in only one direction. This stepladder effect gets blood back from the legs to the heart. If the valves are impaired, then back pressure develops, causing the veins to swell.

Generally, swelling is the only symptom. Varicose veins usually occur in the legs, especially in people whose jobs require a lot of standing. Does yours? Avoid sitting in the same position for a long time also.

Exercise is generally good for varicose vein problems. Please talk to your doctor and have him recommend a course for exercise. Actually, a sports medicine physician might even be better acquainted with your problem.

Possibly, an exercise prescription is the way to go.

(Myrna Partrich, co-owner of The Workout Company Inc. of Bloomfield Township and a recent appointee of the President's Council on Physical Fitness, is happy to answer any questions readers may have regarding exercise. Please send your letters to: Sports Department, Myrna Partrich, 805 East Maple, Birmingham 48009.)

Stibel qualifies for regional

Doug Stibel of Canton earned himself a trip to Anderson, Ind., for the U.S. Gymnastics Federation Regional Championships this weekend with a strong performance at the State Boys' Gymnastics Championships May 19-20 in Flint.

Stibel, competing in Class II (ages 13-15), finished third in the combined optional and compulsory scoring with a 95.2 total. To qualify for the regional meet, a Class II gymnast must score 40 or above in both compulsory and optional categories, or 40 or above in compulsory-only competition.

A member of Livonia's All Around Gymnastics Center team, Stibel placed third in the floor exercise with a 17.3 combined score; seventh in the pommel horse (12.3); third in the still rings (15.5); third on vault (18.1); sixth on parallel bars (13.9); and first on high bar (18.1). He scored 51.4 points in compulsory and 43.8 in optional routines.

The regional meet will feature gymnasts from six states: Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Michigan.

Other local standouts at the state meet included Justin Semion of Canton, who placed sixth overall in the Class II optional-only competition with a 30.6 total. Semion was fourth on the parallel bars (5.8) and fifth on the high bar (4.5). Matt Friday of Plymouth finished ninth in Class II optionals with a 27.9 total score.

Neighbors pitch in to revive park area

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

A group of northeast Westland residents has succeeded this spring in putting the "park" back into a previously neglected portion of Edward Hines Park, according to Sandra Egan.

"We're seeing much more use of the park for what it was meant for," said Egan, who helped organize the cleanup effort among her neighbors. "There are a lot of people walking, families strolling with their pets, bicycle riders using the area now."

In previous years, the portion of the 2,200-acre Wayne County-owned park that backs up to Hartel street has served more as an overgrown dumping ground than a recreational area, Egan said.

The area was littered with bottles, broken glass, carpeting and other garbage. Overgrown brush served as cover for illegal dumping, vandals and drug dealers, Egan said.

BUT EGAN and a rotating corps of volunteers has spent the last two months collecting trash, pruning trees and bushes and watching for vandals.

They spend a few hours two days each week — usually Wednesday nights and one weekend afternoon — working in the park, Egan said. The crew usually numbers about 20 or 25 individuals and includes a number of neighborhood children.

"The (involvement by) kids are great. It's good to see that they're interested in the environment at that age," Egan said.

"We have one girl, Tracy (Takach), who even went down on her own one night and there were two little boys on mini bikes who rode by one night and asked if they could join us."

Adults have pitched in as well, including a neighbor who has donated flowers to be planted this summer.

Egan praised county parks officials, who have supported the project from the beginning and have said they will try to install a rail fence or some decorative rocks surrounding the site. "I guess everybody was kind of surprised by that," she said.

She said parks employees Joe Ashburn and Andy Gojkov have stopped by periodically to check their progress.

"This is the first time in my life I've gotten this involved in a volunteer project," said the 53-year-old Egan, who doesn't like to talk about herself. "I guess with all the talk about Earth Day, this sounded like something I could do right here at home (to improve the environment), she said.

THE CLEANUP campaign began as an offshoot of Hartel Neighborhood Watch Group activities. In March she sent a letter to group members to see if they would be interested in the project, she said.

The response has been good and volunteers plan to work throughout the summer and into the fall, she said.

Their goal is to make the neighborhood a cleaner, safer and more enjoyable place to live, she said.

10-SPEED WINNERS

Pictured here are thirteen Observer & Eccentric carriers--recent 10-speed bicycle winners Their names were put into a lotto contest every time they brought their collections in on time. On April 10, a lotto drawing was held and one slip was pulled from the accumulated contest slips from each of our circulation areas.

Our carriers are encouraged to be conscientious and businesslike in delivering their hometown paper and prompt in turning in their collections. Every month they can earn prizes by handling their route reliably.

David Higgenbotham Troy | Mike Cromwell Farmington | Alan Garrett Canton | Christine Feisel Southfield

If you are a young person, 11 to 14 years of age, and would like to be a happy carrier and maybe even a winner, too, call our circulation department and ask for a carrier route.

Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending May 18.

HOUSE:

TRANSMITTABLE DISEASES — By a vote of 199 for and 187 against, the House adopted an amendment permitting employers to switch workers with transmittable diseases such as AIDS from food-handling positions to other jobs at no loss of pay.

This occurred as the House debated legislation (HR 2273) to protect the estimated 43 million disabled Americans against discrimination in public accommodations, on the job and in receiving basic services. The Americans With Disabilities Act remained in debate.

A yes vote supported the amendment. Area Michigan members voting yes were Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods; William Broomfield, R-Birmingham; William Ford, D-Taylor and Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Voting against the amendment was Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth.

TO TAP COSTS — By a vote of 187 for and 213 against, the House rejected an amendment to limit the cost to businesses of accommodating disabled worker under the Americans with Disabilities Act (above). The cost of providing for a handicapped employee was to have been capped at 10 percent of the pay for the job in question.

A yes vote was to cap the bill's cost to employers.

Broomfield voted yes while Hertel, Ford and Levin voted no. Pursell did not vote.

SENATE:

DEALING WITH AIDS — By a vote of 47 for and 52 against, the Senate rejected an amendment making it a federal crime for individuals to donate blood if they know they have AIDS or its virus, take drugs by needle or are prostitutes.

The Senate then approved language inducing states to ensure the purity of blood and organ donations. This occurred as the Senate passed, by a near-unanimous vote, a bill (S 2240) authorizing $1.2 billion over two years to help states and cities cope with AIDS.

Sponsor Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said a federal solution is needed to protect the nations blood supply.

Opponent Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the amendment extends federal authority "into an area best left to state regulation."

Aye votes supported federal criminal penalties for certain blood donors. Both Michigan Senators Donald Riegle-D, and Carl Levin-D voted no.

DRUG USERS — By a vote of 28 for and 70 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to S 2240 (above) to prevent state and local governments from providing intravenous drug users with sterile needles or bleach for cleaning needles. Governments doing that were to have been denied the bill's funding for AIDS care.

This amendment went beyond the bill's ban on using any of its $1.2 billion-plus for distributing clean needles to addicts. The bill does not address the practice of providing bleach to needle users.

A yes vote supported the amendment. Both Riegle and Levin voted no.

TREATY COMPLIANCE — By a vote of 56 for and 39 against, the Senate tabled a measure condemning the Soviet Union for apparently violating the U.S.-Soviet INF (intermediate-range nuclear force) arms reduction treaty. U.S. inspectors reportedly were barred from checking missiles shipped from the Votkinsk factory March 9-10. The vote occurred as the Senate debated and approved without dissent a bill (HR 3033) to slow the global spread of chemical and biological weapons.

Senators voting to kill the measure said it could undercut arms talks at the upcoming superpower summit, while supporters argued the Votkinsk incident casts doubt on Soviet compliance with any new treaty.

A yes vote was against condemning the Soviet Union. Both Levin and Riegle voted yes.

The intent from the beginning for Forrester, Carnovale and interior designer Shirley Maddalena was to maintain the integrity of the house, which is on a rise about 50 feet above the shoreline.

Lake Luxury

Updating Turner's design, Wright's influence

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

BEFORE HE SET ABOUT building beautiful houses in the metropolitan Detroit area some 30 years ago, Harold Turner worked for and with Frank Lloyd Wright for about 15 years.

In fact, Turner was the builder of the house that Wright designed for the Affleck family in Bloomfield Hills, which now belongs to Lawrence Technological University.

So, it's natural that houses designed and built by Turner have a Wright feeling. While Turner put something of himself into these houses and modified the master's designs, the Wright influence is there.

A CASE IN point is Alan Forrester's house on Lower Long Lake. Almost two years' worth of refurbishment, enhancement and several outstanding additions have been completed.

Birmingham-based architect Frank Carnovale, AIA, sighed a bit as he thought back on all the study and the challenges this project demanded, then said quickly, "It was a tremendous amount of fun."

The intent from the beginning for Forrester, Carnovale and interior designer Shirley Maddalena was to maintain the integrity of the house, which is on a rise about 50 above the shoreline.

"It is built on an octagonal grid — everything is a hexagon," Carnovale said.

Most of the angles are either 60 or 120 degrees. The exterior and some interior walls are coal-fired brick. This firing process gives it a multi-color look, ranging from deep terra cotta to pale lavender, beige and gray green.

Pecky cypress, a favorite Wright material, is used lavishly inside and on the underside of the roof's 4-foot overhang. In true Wright style, the house almost seems to fold itself into the rolling terrain.

THE LIVING room windows and doorwall to the terrace facing the lake go from the ceiling right to the floor.

"That's not code anymore," Forrester said. "The whole purpose was to bring the outdoors right into the house."

There is no weight on the glass where it comes together at shallow angles across the front or the glass would break, he said. And since the roof goes four feet beyond the glass, the weight had to be trussed back to keep it off the glass.

FOR THE furniture and accessories, Maddalena, whose firm is also based in Birmingham, chose furniture designed by Wright, Eliel Saarinen (a contemporary of Wright) and Josef Hofmann. Many pieces are covered in Wright-designed fabrics. The living room rug is a copy of one at Cranbrook/Kingswood School, designed by Loja Saarinen.

"It was my goal to put in all of these wonderful pieces and not detract from the house," Maddalena said.

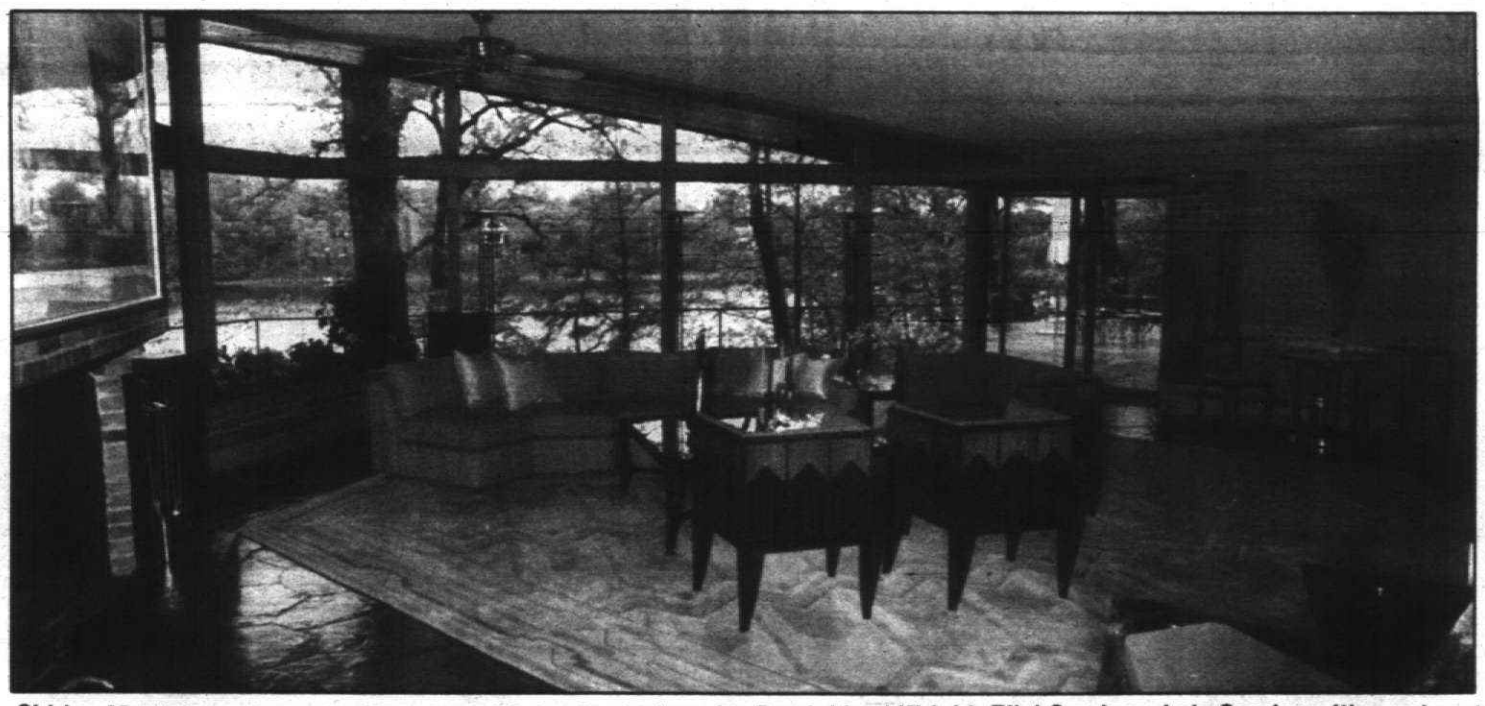

The original house, built in 1960, had a small kitchen and a carport.

The previous owners had enlarged the kitchen to more than double the original size and added a garage. Forrester added two more garage spaces and a hobby room on the far side in the same style as the original.

"One thing Turner did was put a rush mat on the ceiling," Forrester said. "I didn't feel bad about taking that out and putting up dry wall."

The mat was impractical, he said.

One of Turner's signatures is a low ceiling at the entrance to a room that explodes into a high ceiling inside. This creates a sense of drama and a feeling of awe; he used that very successfully throughout the house.

Shirley Maddalena chose furniture and fabrics in designs by Frank Lloyd Wright, Eliel Saarinen, Loja Saarinen (the rug) and Josef Hofmann to compliment the architecture of the home.

THE INTERIOR RENOVATION included every room but the kitchen. Walls were moved, the pecky cypress replaced and stained in many areas. It's not an easy commodity to find. They finally had it milled and kiln dried in Arkansas and shipped here, Carnovale said.

Carnovale said that as he and Maddalena worked together, "We used Wright's vocabulary and brought it into this century."

The new master bathroom is an example of that. It has the odd angles expected in a Wright room, but it is larger and far more gracious than its predecessor.

"We took every single thing out and redid it completely," Maddalena said.

The walls and floor are a buff marble, a match to the bleached pecky cypress. The counter tops are rosario marble, which looks like warm apricot, and the sinks are a jade marble with gold fittings.

The open shower, 6 by 6 feet with two shower heads, has a half marble wall and a recessed step into it. A Wright-like block design is inlaid in the marble on the back shower wall and repeated on the half-wall. A large recessed skylight gives the master bath a soft, luminous look.

BECAUSE FORRESTER so admires Wright's famous house in Pennsylvania, Falling Water, he has created what he calls "Falling Water II."

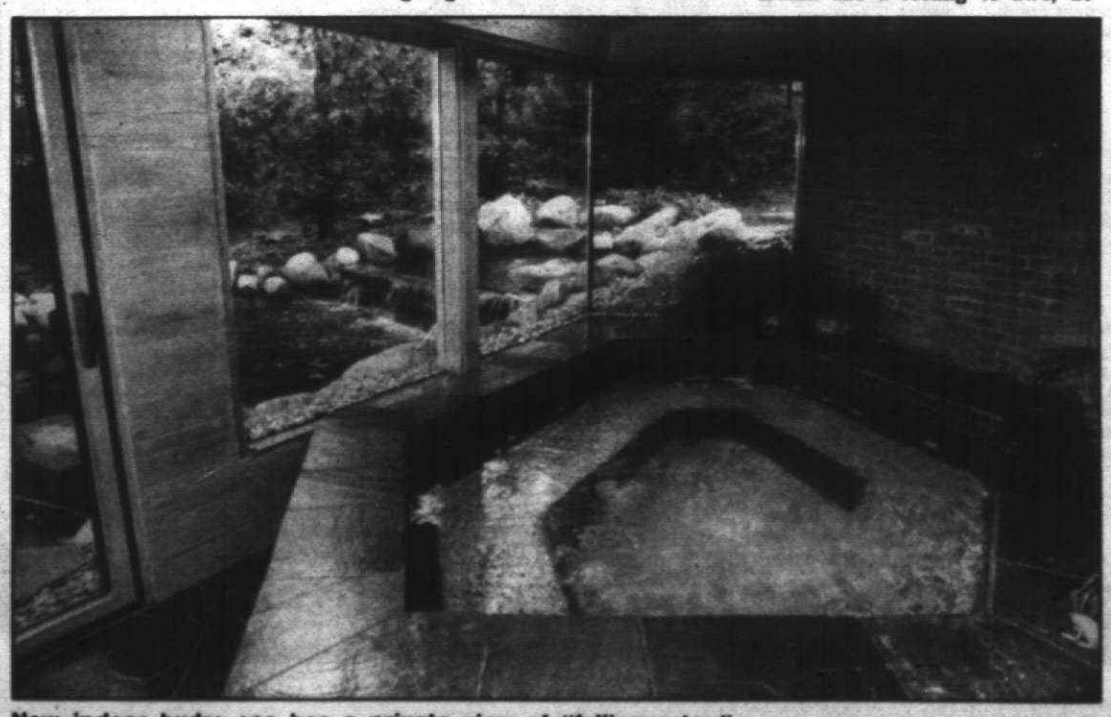

In addition to all new decking and improved and enlarged terraces down to the lake, two hydro spas have been added, an indoor one off the master bedroom and an outdoor one off the lower level family room.

Streams that fall to ponds below and ripple over rocks and dams have been built on both sides of the house. They are maintained by two pumps on a recirculating system, so no water goes into the lake.

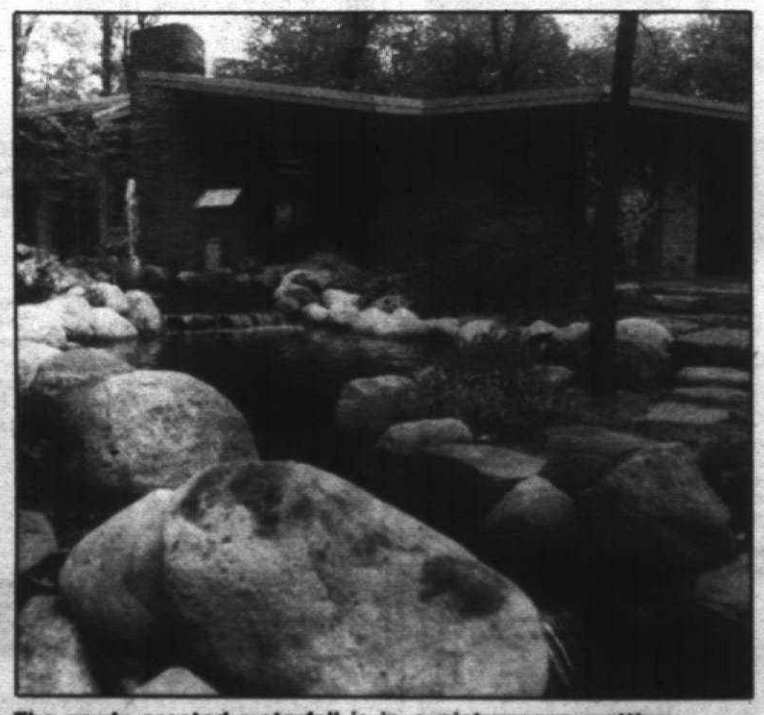

"The water comes up against the house in a number of different places," Carnovale said.

"That's what Wright did at Falling Water and that's what we tried to do here," Forrester said.

Forrester has commissioned works for his house. One marble sculpture in the living room by David Sabaroff is titled "Falling Water." Another imposing marble sculpture by Jay Lefkowitz, a local artist, stands like a graceful sentinel near the front door.

New indoor hydro spa has a private view of "falling water."

The newly created waterfall is in a picturesque setting.

3 Michigan authors on Sunday programs

Authors Tom Sullivan of Lathrup Village, Ann duMais McCormick of Grosse Pointe and Beaufort Cranford of Birmingham will read from their latest novels at 6:15 p.m. Sunday at Borders Book Shop of Novi. A reception for authors and audience will follow the readings. To register to attend, call 347-0789.

Though they all live in Michigan, these authors have widely different writing styles. McCormick, who lives with her husband and two teenage sons, looks at women's friendships in her new novel, "Northern Exposure." It's about two best friends," she said, "and how their relationship changes through husbands, babies and the losses of adult life."

It is the story of photographer Dianna Jarrett as she travels from San Francisco to Boston for a reunion with her best friend Emily. They haven't seen each other in 10 years — since Emily ran off with Alan, Diana's first husband.

"The book isn't based on a real incident," McCormick said, "But, when I was a teenager, my father was in the military and so I moved around quite a bit. I was always leaving good friends, and I think those experiences were the starting point of the book."

"Born Burning" is Sullivan's latest book. He has produced three other novels and more than 50 short stories in every fiction category from westerns to social satire. "My writing is diverse," he said, "I don't fit into any particular category. Paradoxically, this seems also to have meant that I fit into all of them."

"Born Burning" is about a family torn apart by their fears and suspicious about a bizarre family heirloom. Sullivan describes the story as "incidious and psychological." Sullivan first book, "The Phases of Harry Moon," has been very successful.

Though he has been living and working in Michigan for many years, Cranford returned to his native Georgia for the setting of his first novel, "The Rattlesnake Master."

"The South is what I know, most of the time in a first novel, a writer will draw heavily on what he knows best," Cranford said. "The Rattlesnake Master" has the people, idioms and surroundings I'm most familiar with."

Like T.R. Pearson's "A Short History of a Small Place," Cranford's book focuses on small town life in the South. "It's really several stories, that, by the end of the book, become one story," he said.

Borders Book Shop is in Novi Town Center, 43263 Crescent Blvd., Novi.

Dybek remembers adolescence

Victoria Diaz

"The Coast of Chicago" by Stuart Dybek (173 pp., Alfred A. Knopf, $17.95).

Although the lazy, hazy days are almost upon us, I am not, repeat not, going to recommend that you add Stuart Dybek's "The Coast of Chicago" to your summer reading list.

Rather, I am going to strongly advise that you run-don't walk to your nearest library or bookstore and grab a copy of this short story collection now. Should you pass it up, you will have missed so very much.

In these 14 stories and vignettes, Dybek (who, when not writing, teaches English at Western Michigan University) takes the reader to the dream-like never-never land of a remembered adolescence in the Windy City during the 50s and 60s.

Dybek's work differs from much contemporary fiction in one important respect: he writes almost always of people who, though existing in a large urban milieu, remain essentially ethnic neighborhood people. His characters here, as in his first collection, "Childhood and Other Neighborhoods," are not the usual jaded urban souls, or the troubled spirits of modern-day Academe, as are seen in so much of today's literary short fiction.

In "The Coast of Chicago," his characters seem to be poised somewhere between then and now, between adolescence and adulthood, between innocence and knowledge. And, though these are certainly not ghost stories in the usual sense, his characters have about them a ghostly quality. But they are ordinary at the same time that they are bizarre, charmingly mundane at the same time that they are surreal.

Begin with "Chopin in Winter," set "in Mrs. Kubiac's building on Eighteenth Street" during a winter in which Mrs. Kubiac's unmarried daughter, Marcy, comes home, pregnant and disgraced, from a New York college where she has been studying music. The narrator, as a young boy, spends the winter evenings listening to her play Chopin's preludes, polonaises, mazurkas, waltzes, nocturnes, ballades in the apartment above the one in which he lives with his mother and his unspeaking grandfather. When winter is over and Marcy moves away, the music seems to remain in the airshafts, the walls and ceilings, the pipes, the flues, the dark hallways of the old building. And, after the echoes of the music finally fade away, "a pure silence beyond daydream and memory" remains. "Even after I no longer missed her," the narrator relates, "I could still hear the silence . . . "

In "Blight" (which won Dybek the 1985 Nelson Algren Award for fiction), four young friends are perplexed to discover that their neighborhood/world has been proclaimed an Official Blight Area by Chicago's Mayor Daley.

"They call this blight?" says one of them. "Hey, man, there's weeds and trees and everything . . ."

Perhaps more than any other story in the collection, "Blight" reveals Dybek's great gift for dialogue, plus his fine ability to create characters that seem to walk right off the page. One of the most memorable of these is Ziggy Zilinsky.

Even though Zig is just one of the boys, he wasn't really "reliable" even in the days before Pepper Rosado accidentally beaned him with a baseball bat. Zig sees Nikita Khrushchev on the streets of Chicago fairly often, along with Bo Diddley and Dwight Eisenhower, and Mayor Daley rummaging around in alleyway garbage cans. Plaster saints in the neighborhood churches often wink at him, too. But his biggest problem is a recurrent nightmare: on the night the Sox win the pennant, Chicago is nuked, and Comiskey Park is at ground zero.

The story, vivid and dream-like at once, is one of Dybek's personal favorites, he has said, because it manages to "defeat time, and capture the past."

Other stories in the collection include:

"Hot Ice," a winner in "Prize Stories: The O. Henry Awards" for 1985, which has at its center a drowned neighborhood girl whose body is rumored to be sequestered away in an abandoned, neighborhood ice house.

"Death of a Right Fielder," an offbeat, tragic comic tale with a special appeal for anyone who has ever played right field in a neighborhood baseball game.

"Pet Milk," the concluding story in the collection, was included in the O. Henry collection for 1986. The story focuses on a young man who appears to be on the brink of leaving "the old neighborhood" to make his way in the "real" world.

"Today I've been drinking instant coffee and Pet milk, and watching it snow," it begins.

Irresistible opening lines. Irresistible story, too.

25% CASH REBATE ON REAL ESTATE COMMISSIONS

By J. R. Paine
Realtor and Broker

Imagine getting 25% of the commission you paid your broker rebated back to you at closing! While there are no fixed commission rates, most Brokers charge six percent of the sale price of your home as commission at the time of closing. There are few homeowners who do not experience a pang of remorse as they watch a big piece of the gain from the sale of their home spent on real estate commissions. For instance, on a $200,000 home, the homeowner has to pay $12,000 in commission. Wouldn't it be wonderful to have the Broker hand you a cash rebate of $3,000 at closing?! Most homeowners will say yes, I want it.

Move over GM, Ford and Chrysler. HMS is ushering in its exclusive real estate commission rebate program. It is known as the "HMS Cashback Listing"* and all homes listed under this exclusive program are guaranteed a 25% cash rebate at closing out of the full commission paid for complete real estate services. The "HMS Cashback Listing" guarantees each homeowner full real estate multilisting services plus the full-time services of efficient, experienced, and professional Realtors, attorneys, agents, as well as mortgage and title experts. With HMS, you list, sell, close and move! The HMS staff works around the clock when necessary to consumate the sale of the home.

The "HMS Cashback Listing" program starts on May 21, 1990 and ends on July 21, 1990. It is a special program designed to add some excitement to the 1990 homeselling season. Homes are selling well despite interest rates and despite gloom and doom predictions by some self-serving groups.

HMS, Home Marketing Specialists Inc. is leading America toward lowering the high cost of selling homes. HMS sells homes priced from $70,000 to $2,000,000 everywhere in Michigan. At HMS, homeowners can choose from several home marketing programs that best fit their requirements. At HMS, each home receives customized services because each home is special in its own way.

HMS has offices throughout the tri-county area. HMS' national office is located at 26222 Telegraph Road in Southfield. You can call (313) 353-7170 to reach HMS. In North Oakland County, you can call (313) 656-3030. In Macomb County, call (313) 228-2090 and in Wayne County, call (313) 592-0929.

The HMS commission rebate program is the first of its kind in the history of real estate sales. Who but HMS would have thought of it!

Helen Diane Vincent

Q: We're renovating our vacation cottage near Traverse City. By all accounts it is very ordinary, but we would like to make something more out of it without a major investment in renovations. The two-story, wood-frame building is surrounded by tall pine trees and is open to a view of Lake Michigan. What are your recommendations using color to achieve a fresh, more elegant look?

A: When no particular architectural style or traditional setting prevails, it's highly advisable to take color clues from the natural environment. For most people, the environmental, or biogeographical approach is usually overlooked in favor of traditionally acceptable colors or trendy colors. Only by chance are environmentally colors used when they happen to be incorporated within these other categories.

In more recent years, an ever-growing body of research and experimental projects on the relationship between the individual and the environment has been considered by a select group of architects, color consultants, and environmental psychologists. Perhaps without coincidence, all of this is happening as the general public is becoming more aware of the importance of the environment to their own survival.

We can all learn from some of the techniques these professionals use. One of these techniques is the semantic scale. All this means is that you psychologically classify your response to the environment under consideration. You end up with an inventory, or profile which helps you decide how to approach your color — and design — problem. For example, you ask, to what extent do you perceive your cottage setting as warm, or cool? Is it spacious, or closed-in? Is it dramatic or cheerful?

Once you objectively describe what you are dealing with, you then ask, to what extent do you need to exaggerate or minimize the dominant feature. After all, you must include your response, or attitude toward the environment to make a suitable yet livable color harmony.

From your brief description and from what I know about this area, your cottage setting can be described as "cool," fairly "hard" and "spacious," among other attributes. For all its beauty, there's an impersonal and distant sense about this location, quite typical of many naturally rugged places.

My recommendation, therefore, would be to paint your cottage exterior in a warm, slightly grayed sage green. This is a middle-value, somewhat yellow-cast color that would blend in with the landscape. I would then paint all of the trim, shutters, and any columns in an ivory white to both accent and lend a sense of structure to the building. Don't try to match the actual color of pine green or any other natural element. What you will invariably achieve is an overly bright, harsh effect. You have to see nature's colors influenced by light, mist, and other climate and seasonal conditions.

For the interior of the cottage, I would compensate, or minimize the cool greens and blues of the surroundings with a palette of soft corals complemented by natural wood tones. Reserve small touches of blues and greens only for a few decoratrive accessories.

Q: I really love wearing white for summer. But because I'm very light complected, I've always used bright accents to liven up the overall look. Now, I'm looking for something more subtle to combine with white without looking too washed-out myself. I thought you might have some new ideas on how to combine subtle colors with white.

A: When your coloring is quite delicate, white can overwhelm you just as much as an overly bright or dark color does. Adding bright accents to white has been the conventional way of compensating for the depleting effects of white. You can use another option by combining two or three softer colors that themselves are complementary opposites. An example would be to add a scarf in a soft pink, green, and yellow pattern, and coordinate your shoes and belt, and any other accessory in any one of these colors. The optical contrast among the soft, but contrasting colors will provide a sparkling, but subtle impression. The conventional brights, such as red and blue, actually do not achieve the quality of these softer colors because brights actually look darker when set off against white. Also these softer colors will complement your coloring better than brights.

The Crossings At Canton.
Apartment living just got better.
We're making The Crossings a better place to live and a better value. You'll feel it in the new hallways and newly refurbished clubhouse. You'll see it in the plush landscaping when you enter the grounds. And that's just the beginning. It's the new look and feel of The Crossings at Canton—and it's for you.
The Crossings at Canton offers 19 different floorplans with 1 to 4 bedrooms. And whether you choose a 2-level townhome or a luxury apartment, the renewed beauty of this charming rental community shines through in every one—the result of our recent "Capital Improvements & Upgrading" program. These apartments and townhomes are the largest in the area, yet are still incredibly affordable.
Discover these features at The Crossings at Canton:
- Dens & Fireplaces
- Fully-appliances Kitchens
- Patios or Balconies
- Central Air Conditioning
- A Clubhouse with sauna, indoor pool, exercise room, a new party room, and more!

Visit The Crossings at Canton today. We're just 20 minutes from Ann Arbor and downtown Detroit, yet comfortably away from it all. From I-275, just exit Arbor Rd. West to Haggerty Rd., follow south to Joy Rd., then east to The Crossings. Open Mon.-Fri., 10-6, Sat. 10-5, Sun. 12-5 Phone 455-2424 today.

Where would Her Majesty live in Birmingham?
At Buckingham, naturally.
She'd love the royal park across the street. She'd dote on the spacious two-bedroom apartment with fresh new interiors from the most modern appliances to the best lighting fixtures to designer carpeting to contemporary verticals.
She'd like the uncommon amount of room and royal way the service staff treats her. After all, a person's home ought to be their palace.

WRITE IT AND REAP!

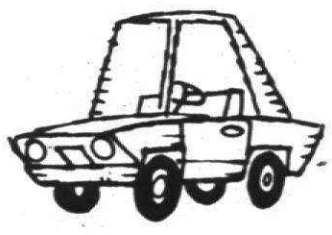

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

610 Card of Thanks

PRAYER TO The Holy Spirit- Holy Spirit, You make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me and You are in all instances of my life with me. I in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you & my loved Ones, in your Perpetual Glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me & my loved ones. Persons must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. After 3 days your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then, promise to publish this dialogue as soon as the favor has been granted. Thanks. J.P.

THANK YOU Holy Spirit
for favor granted.
M.O.

610 Card of Thanks

MAY the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved & preserved throughout the world, now & forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day; by the 9th day your prayers will be answered. Publication must be promised. Thank You Saint Jude. A.H.

PRAYER TO ST. CLARE
Say 9 Hail Marys once a day for 9 days. On 9th day publish this prayer & wish 3 things. Even though you do not have faith, your prayer will be answered. P.D

PRAYER TO ST. CLARE. Pray nine Hail Marys once a day, for nine days. On the 9th day publish this prayer & wish for three things. Even though you don't have faith, your prayers will be answered.

School daze

High-tech surroundings aid in teaching of 3Rs

If it's been a while since you've set foot in a new school, you could get the idea — erroneous, educators and architects say — that the little red school house has evolved into a palace.

Carpeted classrooms and corridors. Separate outside entrances to each classroom. Theaters. Child development centers. Auxiliary rooms for counseling and individual tutoring.

Computer centers. Lavatories in every classroom. Audio-visual communication capabilities between the office and classrooms. Air conditioning.

Not necessarily all in the same building, mind you, but representative of what's going into new schools.

Palaces?

Get real, said William Pearson, principal at Plymouth-Canton's Hoben Elementary School, which opened in 1988.

"An analogy to me is the medical profession. Forty years ago, we didn't know anything about polio. We didn't stop doing research."

'You have 4- and 5-year-olds who have had a couple of years on a computer. We just have a lot of high-tech parts to our lives.

— Kathryn Wilson

"WE HAVE learned through research and experience that kids need hands-on manipulatives to learn. Some do well pushing pencil pencil across paper. Some need more visual, some need tactile manipulatives to learn."

That requires more storage space, more work stations and building areas with multiple uses such as a music room behind the stage at one end of a lunch room.

Listen to Alfred Goebel. His architectural firm, Hastings & Chivett, designed the new South Lyon High School now under construction.

"It (a palace mentality) is ridiculous. It's a knee-jerk reaction. That's just an emotional statement. If people just understand what's provided, they would understand it's not a palace or Taj Mahal," Goebel said.

TEACHING METHODS have changed from line-'em-up-and-tell-'em-how-it-is to small group, hands-on instruction. So if form follows function, it's reasonable to expect that school buildings would change, too.

"You have 4- and 5-year-olds who have had a couple of years on a computer," said Kathryn Wilson, next year's principal at Deerfield Elementary under construction in the Avondale School District. "We just have a lot of high-tech parts to our lives."

Working in small groups, developing thinking skills, asking questions are key elements to cooperative learning, she said.

That leads to computer rooms built into media centers and smaller rooms within individual classrooms for directed activities.

THE DAYS when a school board gives an architect carte blance on a school project are over.

"You're just not allowed to go through and selectively design a building and hope everyone likes it," said Thomas Kowalski, a project manager for TMP Associates, whose firm designed the new Deerfield Elementary.

Nowadays, committees of staff, administration and parents work with architects. Four hundred participated in the design and promotion of South Lyon High, Goebel said.

Some school administrators hire a construction manager even before an architect to get a better handle on costs and to smooth communications between themselves, architects and parents.

"IT'S NOT that architects are failing in their task or duty. It's just lay people haven't had exposure and opportunity to work with graphic tools," said Charles Opferman, director of design phase services for Barton Malow, a construction management/general contracting firm.

"We're trying to put together the best set of minds so we can anticipate problems down the road and solve them now rather than waiting to pop up later."

Perhaps the biggest change in school architecture in recent years is the realization that buildings are used beyond 3 p.m. by other than traditional students.

"I like the idea of a school being used day and night," said William Brubaker, vice chairman of Perkins & Will, which designed the new Troy High School.

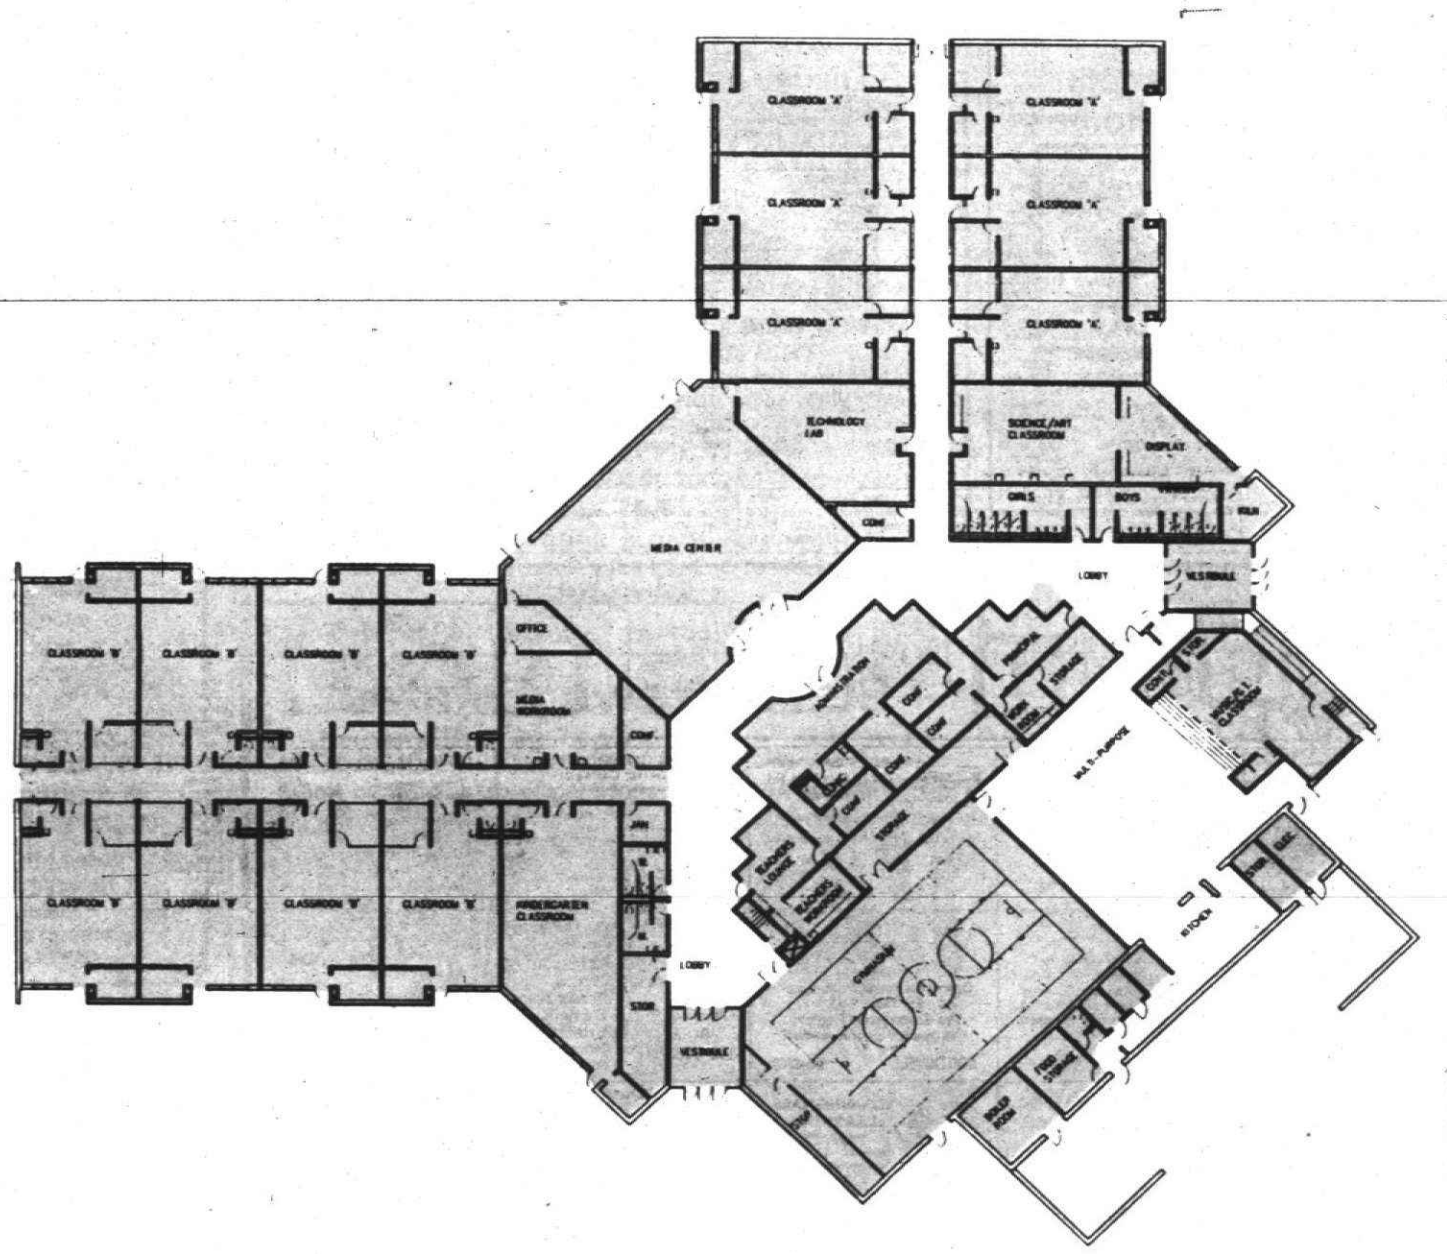

That's why high schools have pools, theaters and gyms that can be used by community groups and students, he said.

The new South Lyon High School will have a lounge and activity room specifically for senior citizens, plus a child-development center as part of the home economics wing.

"It (school design) acknowledges that not everyone in high school is between 16 and 18," Goebel said. "We're trying to make this building have a real-world feel to it."

The floor plan and model of Deerfield Elementary School in Rochester Hills reflect architectural features that promote current philosophies in education.

Today's schools designed for all ages, all activities

Hoben Elementary School, built at a cost of $4.4 million, consists of 22 classrooms, a gym, a separate cafeteria/stage with a music room behind the stage, an art/activity room, several small conference rooms and a media center with a connecting computer room.

Two pairs of classrooms in the Canton Township school have dividing walls that can be removed for team teaching. The hallways and classrooms are carpeted. Each classroom has its own lavatory, drinking fountain and exterior extrance.

Blackboards extend all the way to the floor to allow for more participation. Walls are magnetized for easier display of class work.

Everything was included for an educational reason, said William Pearson, principal.

Conference rooms? "We use them for social workers, psychologists, if they're working with kids, speech teachers," Pearson said. "They're very helpful because there's so much specialization."

Carpeting? "It's cheaper, looks nicer, it's softer, quieter," Pearson added.

LAVATORIES, drinking fountains and separate exterior entrances cut down on foot traffic in the corridors. Also, there's some sentiment that classrooms should reflect a friendlier, homelike environment to facilitate learning.

Kathryn Wilson will be principal of Deerfield Elementary when it opens in Rochester Hills next fall.

"We would never presume to replace the home," she said. "We try to make our environment relate to children . . . a responsiveness to the need for light, color, comfort."

Unique features of Deerfield, to be built and equipped at an estimated cost of $5.1 million, include:

- A multipurpose room which can be divided by a movable wall into a gym and lunchroom. An area behind the stage of the lunchroom will be used as a music room and classroom for talented and gifted classes.
- A combination art/science room.
- A separate enclosed room within each classroom for small group projects or instruction.

DIVERSITY, shared uses, storage space all have become important when designing new schools.

Projected cost of a new Troy High School now under construction is $33.5 million.

"Troy High School has been given a lot of attention to classrooms and labs," said William Brubaker, whose architectural firm designed the facility.

"Science labs will be state of the art. It will have a better music facility — more functional, more flexible, better acoustics," Brubaker said.

Then there's building use after regular class hours regardless of the size of the school.

"You keep finding greater expectations on the educational system," said Charles Opferman, who oversees school projects for a contracting/construction management company.

"Schools roles in society are continuing to change," he said. "We find demands on the building in that it's no longer a six-hour day building.

"WHAT IS forcing change is outside the curriculum itself, things like latchkey programs, community use for athletics, meetings. Some Troy (elementary) schools operate as branches of the (city) library," Opferman said.

Taxpayers are getting better value for their dollars today with advances in building technology and energy conservation, architects say. Involving many segments of the community in the planning process also assures consensus on value.

"I'm a great believer in schools ought to respond to the unique nature of the community," Brubaker said.

"A high school is like a flagship," said Alfred Goebel, principal in an architectural firm. "It's a symbol of a community's highest aspirations."

"That's what education is all about — preparing for the next generation, the future," said Opferman. "Someone paid for us and it's our responsibility to care for the next generation."

A Note from Herman Frankel

After 39 years of building homes, I've learned that it is impossible to forecast when any particular home will sell, but I've seen many disappointed people who missed the home that they thought would be there when they were ready.

Simsbury's first phase is now almost complete. This is the last time we will be able to offer all of our most popular models because we are down to 1 availability on several of them. We are also offering a special builder package *including a jacuzzi whirlpool tub. Builders fight 'credit crunch'

(AP) — House builders and some congressmen are mounting a campaign against a "credit crunch" they say is crippling the construction industry and threatening the loss of 200,000 jobs.

Coinciding with a recent Commerce Department report about the smallest number of housing starts since the last recession, the National Association of Home Builders called a news conference to announce the details of its latest industry survey.

Association President Martin Perlman said the survey showed that "builders are being indiscriminately cut off from the credit markets. Production is dropping. People are losing their jobs and businesses. The disruptions in the housing delivery system are far more severe than anyone anticipated."

The Commerce report said housing starts had dropped 5.8 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.25 million units, the lowest level since 1.17 million units were started at an annual rate in October 1982.

At issue, the house builders said, is the new savings and loan bailout law that limits the amount of loans to an individual and tightens requirements for loans by commercial banks.

At issue is the new savings and loan bailout law that limits the amount of loans to an individual and tightens requirements for loans by commercial banks.

BUT OTHER housing industry observers say steep mortgage rates, overbuilding and the high cost of new houses also contribute to the downturn in construction.

The S&L reform law limits to 15 percent the amount of capital that a thrift institution can lend to one borrower. Before the law was enacted last August, thrifts could lend all their money to a single builder.

U.S. Rep. Peter Hoagland, a Democrat from Nebraska, told the news conference that 68 congressmen have joined him in sponsoring a bill that would remedy the problem by permitting a transition period during which builders could find alternative sources of money for construction.

Hoagland said he believes the bill will reach the House floor within two weeks. A similar bill has been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala.

"Further complicating the situation is the fact that commercial banks have not been able to pick up the slack and are tightening their lending requirements due to a February bulletin from the Comptroller of the Currency warning commercial banks about the dangers of real estate lending and urging bank examiners to look closely at all of the real estate loans in the banks under their jurisdiction," Perlman said.

"This is having an inhibiting effect on housing finance that is clearly reflected in our survey results," he said. He welcomed a statement last week by bank regulators saying that banks should keep making loans to qualified customers.

"Hopefully that message will get out to the bank examiners," Perlman said.

The credit crunch has caused the builders group to revise its 1990 housing starts forecast downward from 1.42 million units to 1.28 million.

"This decrease of 140,000 housing starts translates into the loss of 200,000 jobs for an entire year, $6 billion in wages and $2 billion in taxes at all levels," Perlman said.

Window of opportunity opens for home buyers

(AP) — The time may be approaching when younger couples can stop grousing and take action to buy a house.

Why?

Prices, for one reason. While those prices may still look high in relation to the prospective buyer's income, conceivably they could look like bargains when matched against prices five years or 10 years from now.

Interest rates are another reason. The investment climate may be changing for the better. Rate increases are unlikely, and some decline is even possible, a situation that experience shows may be temporary.

Market conditions constitute another reason. Some houses have had for sale signs for a year, meaning their sellers are eager for action and possibly willing to help with financing.

Add at least one more reason: Opportunity exists in a time frame. Youth comes once in a lifetime, and real estate bargains appear only a few times more often. Few segments of the marketplace are more cyclical.

There is little question that younger buyers have had difficulties in recent years.

WHILE THE ownership rate fell generally in the 1980s, from more than 65 percent at the beginning to less than 64 percent near the end, the decline was a consequence solely of bad times in the younger age groups.

Opportunity exists in a time frame. Youth comes once in a lifetime, and real estate bargains appear only a few times more often. Few segments of the marketplace are more cyclical.

In the age group 25-29 years, for example, the 1979 ownership rate was 44 percent but just over 35 percent in mid-1989. In that time the rate for ages 30-34 fell from 62 percent to less than 54 percent.

Meanwhile, in every five-year age grouping from 60 years or more, the ownership rate rose. Since 1980, the rate for ages 60-64 has been more than 80 percent.

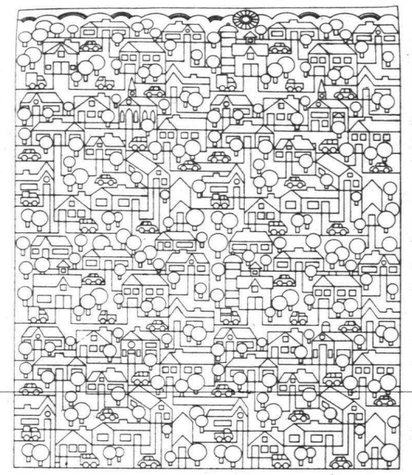

Real estate people point out that in those statistics lie opportunity. They call attention to the likelihood that many older homeowners are not just eager to sell but may be in a position to help with financing.

Why should a seller want to help with financing? First, of course, to sell the house but then to obtain a double-digit rate of return backed by solid collateral.

The financing picture is ever-changing, usually for the better. While it is true that many banks have been burned, and therefore are increasingly strict in appraising properties and potential buyers, most still want to lend.

Finding the best lender isn't nearly as difficult as it once was, either.

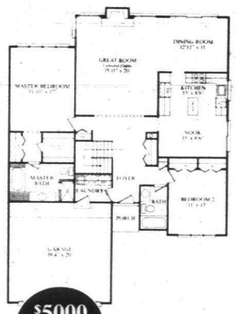

WITH THE multiplication of mortgage products, mortgage specialists have become institutions in many communities and are thoroughly knowledgeable about what individual banks offer. They can choose the right one — and for no fee.
