Township's new site to be open 7 days

By Michelle Johnson
staff writer

There's added convenience to recycling in Canton.

A recycling station at the Canton Township administration building opened last Thursday.

The center will supplement the Woodland Meadows and Canton Recycling stations on Van Born Road. The new site will be open seven days a week.

DAVID DENSKI, Canton waste hauler, said the new site will encourage more people to recycle because they can do it at convenient hours without driving a long distance.

"This is a step closer for people who would participate," Denski said.

"There was a woman out here putting stuff in as they set this up," said Kim Scherschlight, Canton resource development manager.

During the opening, another woman arrived with her son to see if the facility was open.

Denski said the site is important because it is accessible to most children and offers them a chance to learn about recycling.

"Children will want to come here," Denski said.

He said it is important to teach children how to recycle. A recycling center in Toledo, Ohio, has animal-shaped receptacles to help make recycling fun for children.

The administration building station accepts newspapers, cardboard, glass containers, plastics, steel cans, and mixed office paper.

Denski said the difficult thing about recycling is getting people to load the bins properly.

"When people throw the wrong thing in the wrong compartment, it contaminates," he said.

ALTHOUGH, SOME mistakes will be made, contamination makes the recycling process more lengthy and expensive.

Denski said recycling does cost money and time.

"It's easier to just dump everything on the curb and let it go to the landfill," he said. But, he added, recycling provides jobs and a better future.

"What's really important is doing something," Denski said. "Everyone is talking. Canton is doing something."

The staff at the township administration building has recycled its office paper. Canton Clerk Loren Bennett said the building used to have recycling stations in his office.

"Now we are in the process of setting up stations throughout the building," he said.

These stations will be emptied into the administration building recepta-

Last year a developer cut down more than 30 acres of trees at Ford and Lotz roads, above. Canton Township officials expect the hiring of a landscape architect will stop a repeat performance.

Landscaper to protect trees, beautify area

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton residents complained and passersby mourned last year when more than 30 acres of trees at Ford and Lotz road were cut down by a developer.

But there probably won't be a repeat performance in Canton because of a newly created township job, according to Aaron Machnick, Canton municipal services director.

Canton will hire a landscape architect sometime this summer. The job pays about $30,000 annually and $10,500 annually for fringe benefits.

Voting in favor of creating the position last week were Clerk Loren Bennett, Supervisor Tom Yack and Trustees Bob Shefferly, John Prenizcky and Elaine Kirchgatter. Treasurer Gerald Brown voted against creating the job and Trustee Phil LaJoy was absent.

Along with saving trees, the landscape architect will work with developers on anything relating to the "environment and aesthetics," including flowers, trees, maintenance and shrubbery, Machnik said.

'We would like to be able to have some landmark trees. With a little planning a lot of times you can save existing landscape.'

— Aaron Machnick, Canton municipal services director

Of the leveled trees at Ford and Lotz, Machnik said, the trees were "literally stripped off the land." Some could have been saved.

"We would like to be able to have some landmark trees," Machnik said. "With a little planning a lot of times you can save existing landscape."

Landscaping plays an important role in the public's perception of a development, Prenizcky said. He said a landscape architect could help improve the township's image, but added that he has reservations about the cost.

THE IDEA for a landscape architect came out of the Bartell and Bartell employee reorganization plan that has been put into practice. The study suggested changing, adding and eliminating township jobs.

Brown said the township is over budget on the proposed new jobs and changes.

"All the positions we talked about and discussed are done," Machnik said.

If the Bartell firm would promise to stay out of Canton the township "would save money," Brown said during a board meeting.

The Bartell study suggested that the township hire an arborist, someone who would save the trees in the township. Referring to the landscape architect job, Machnik said, "We're trying to mix what was almost a good idea with something that is truly a good idea."

Before trustees voted last week on whether to hire a landscape architect, Machnik said, "I have taken the position that there will be no new positions in 1991 at all."

Dead girl's mom keeps close eye on court case

By Diane Gale

Lisa Pearson of Canton would have celebrated her 18th birthday Tuesday.

But instead of a birthday party, Pearson's family was in court watching the arraignment of Jack E. Young, Jr., 22, of Taylor, charged with involuntary manslaughter in Pearson's death in a May 13 automobile accident.

District Judge Anthony Nicita entered a not-guilty plea for Young, who was released on a $5,000 personal bond. He faces a July 10 preliminary hearing to determine if there is enough evidence to send the case to trial.

Manslaughter carries a 15-year prison term.

Pearson's family and friends will follow the court proceedings and hope for a conviction, said her mother, Andrea Puchalsky of Canton.

PRIOR TO THE arraignment, Puchalsky talked about her daughter and the man charged in the accident.

"I don't feel hatred, but I'd be very bitter if they slapped him on the wrist and gave him probation," she said. "I know I won't feel better. I won't find answers of why or that there will be vindication. But I feel it's something we have to do for Lisa."

The accident happened at 1:34 a.m. on Mother's Day in a Taylor subdivision. A 19-year-old Taylor man was driving the car in which Pearson and an 18-year-old Taylor man were passengers. Young is charged with causing the accident after running a stop sign. Police say he had been drinking.

Pearson was pronounced dead at 2:15 a.m. at Heritage Hospital after her spine was severed in the accident.

Andrea Puchalsky: "I don't feel hatred, but I'd be very bitter if they slapped him on the wrist and gave him probation."

PEARSON was about to graduate from Grosse Ile High School and had gone through some positive changes shortly before her death, said Puchalsky, 35.

"She went through a lot of trying times and for a while was a difficult person," Puchalsky said. "In the past six months she had really matured. She had developed a materialistic attitude and realized that really wasn't important."

Lisa Pearson of Canton should have been part of the class of 1990.

Poem laments girl's death

A student at Grosse Ile High School, where Lisa Pearson attended, wrote an unsigned poem to the Ile newspaper.

"I don't want to leave my name because I don't want to deal with others," the note on the letter said. "I only want others to know that someone out there cares."

The poem, entitled "Too Young to Die," said:

"Although I didn't know you that well,
My heart, it hurts, and my eyes, they swell.
I really don't know how I should feel.
It all seems like a dream, but I know that it's real.
You were here for Friday and we all shared the time,
But Saturday took you, it was an awful crime.
I hear many songs, and they all make me cry,
Because they tell of the young, but none say they'll die.
And all of us feel sorrow, and all of us feel pain,
Mother's Day may have been sunny, but for us it was rain.
So the worst may be over but my mind will not rest,
Why did this happen? It was not for the best.
But we leave you with love and the times that we shared.
This poem was for you, to tell you I cared.
"Too young to die," my heart it cries.
"Too young to die, too young to die!"

Anti-airport sale petitions presented

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A Canton man opposed to the proposed township purchase of Mettetal Airport on Wednesday presented a committee studying the issue with petitions signed by more than 1,000 people.

The petitions, which oppose the proposed $4 million purchase of the privately owned airport, were presented to the committee during a public hearing on the issue.

A final decision on the purchase will be made by the Canton Township Board but will be based on a recommendation by the committee. A date hasn't been set for the decision.

"I think it would be a definite tax drain on the taxpayers," said Joe Aninos, the Canton man who is spearheading the petition drive.

The hearing at Canton Township Hall attracted more than 125 people, and included pilots who support the purchase of the airport on Lilley and Joy roads in Canton.

Residents opposed to the purchase said they don't want to subsidize pilots' recreation, and they are worried about safety and noise.

Apart from recreation, some pilots said the airport lures businesses to Canton and can be used for medical emergencies.

The pilots say federal and state grants will pay up to 95 percent of the purchase price and maintenance costs if the township agrees to take ownership.

Tom Klochko, a spokesperson for the airport owners, said many people who are against municipal ownership mistakenly believe money will come from taxpayers' pockets.

He said the grants are from aviation uses, like airplane gas taxes, registrations and other fees. Since the airport is privately owned it can't benefit from these user fees.

"We're (pilots) paying to fix everyone else's (publicly owned) airport," Klochko said, who added that state and federal grants could be used to make improvements to the airport, Klochko said.

A municipality wouldn't pay taxes or put down purchase costs, Klochko said. "Take away tax charges, take away expenses to buy the property and guess what? It can make money. This municipality is being offered free money."

Klochko said he has been approached by other municipalities interested in buying and maintaining the land as an airport. Private firms also have approached the company with purchase offers, he said.

HOWEVER, HE said the owners would prefer to maintain Mettetal as an airport.

One resident disagreed and said the township is losing tax money from an industrial park that could be built on the land instead of the airport.

cle. Bennett and Denski estimated that the building recycles 50 cubic yards of paper a month, including newspapers.

"Everyone wants to be part of the solution," Denski said.

Scherschlight said a second recycling center should be open within six weeks and two more stations will open in the fall.

crazy about school, but recently decided to attend college anyway. She thought she might become a nurse.

"The day before the accident she had given blood," Puchalsky said. "She always did things like that.

"She seemed like she was getting her life together. We started to be friends instead of like a mother and daughter."

Pearson was fun-loving and easy to get along with, her mother said. She liked to be playful and pose for pictures in silly ways.

SHE LIVED off and on with her father, James Pearson, in Grosse Ile, and her mother and her husband, Roy, in Canton. Pearson moved back to Canton about six months ago, but continued to attend high school in Grosse Ile.

Puchalsky said the family had booked a hall for a June 13 high school graduation party. Instead, the family had a picnic in Lisa's memory.

She said she didn't know what to expect before the arraignment. "Maybe I'll have compassion for him."

"I would like the person who did this to know that people beyond his family care," Puchalsky said.

"This has to stop," she said. "But I guess in a sense we can't stop it."

A MEMBER of Mothers Against Drunk Driving called Pearson the day before Young's arraignment. The group's members attend court proceedings in such cases to offer moral support to the family of the victim, and to demonstrate the community demand for strict sentences.

"I told her (the MADD representative) I don't feel anything," Puchalsky said. "I think I'm mad, because he hasn't expressed his sorrow to me. Like we don't exist. I thought about being his mother. Maybe it would be harder than what we're going through with Lisa. Maybe they have a big burden."

The driver of the car that Lisa was in told Puchalsky that her daughter reminded him to wear his seat belt the night of the accident.

Some days are tougher to get through than others, she said.

"The priest at the funeral said: 'God gives people freedom. The person driving the other car had the freedom to drink and drive and he decided to drink and drive as well.'

"And when something awful like this happens God, gives us the freedom to choose what to do," she said.

Family, friends and strangers can learn from what happened to Pearson, she said.

"When I talk to some people, I feel like people are forgetting," Puchalsky said. "I want people to realize how devastating something like this is."

Police on lookout for would-be tire thieves

Canton police are on the lookout for two suspects who fled when police responded to a report of tires being stolen from a vehicle at a used car lot.

The incident occurred about 3:30 a.m. Saturday at a dealership in the 44000 block of Michigan Ave. Officers found a pickup truck up on cinder blocks and saw two men run from the scene. Upon closer inspection, they discovered that one of the truck's tires was lying next to the vehicle and another one was in the bed of a pickup truck parked nearby.

Police found two wallets on the seat of that truck, which they believe belongs to one of the suspects. The two tires recovered at the scene were estimated to be worth $400.

SHAVING CREAM MISHAP: A 17-year-old man suffered a broken elbow after being knocked to the ground by a suspect who sprayed shaving cream into the victim's face and eyes.

Canton police said the victim was getting into his car at Plymouth-Canton High School on Thursday, June 14, when he was approached by two students who sprayed shaving cream into the car.

One of the young men with the shaving cream used a "martial arts leg sweep motion" to knock the victim to the ground, police said. The victim could not see which of the aggressors assaulted him, but he identified both of the attackers through yearbook pictures.

MOTOR MISSING: An outboard motor worth $600 was reported stolen from a Canton trailer park resident Monday. The owner told police the motor was removed from a boat parked in the north end of the trailer park. Police said cables that attached the motor to the boat had been cut. The damage was estimated at $100. The motor was removed sometime between June 10 and 18, police said.

STEREO STOLEN: A painter working at the Canton Crossing Apartment Complex reported the theft Friday of a $540 portable stereo. The victim, who lives in the complex, told police he'd left the stereo in a townhouse he was painting. Someone smashed a doorwall to gain entry into the apartment. The incident occurred about 6 p.m.

CELLULAR PHONE SNATCHED: A Heathmore man told Canton police someone stole his car phone and a beeper from his 1988 Oldsmobile late Thursday or early Friday. The stolen items were estimated to be worth a total of $500.

"The taxpayers would lose a potential $700,000 in taxes the property could make if it were privately owned," the resident said.

Most of the flights that go in and out of Mettetal are recreational in nature. However, some businesses people said they depend on the airport and that the amenity lured them to the community.

A Charlevoix resident, with a business in Livonia, said he was thinking about building in Canton, but the decision was based on whether the township had an airport.

"I use the airport for business and for recreation," he said. "I'm putting a hold on the lease until this is solved. I would hate to think that Canton would suffer because of the ignorance of some people."

One pilot said the need for the airport goes beyond money.

"This is a quality of life issue," he said. "If you take the airport away you damage the quality of life."

Four Questions to Ask Your Pharmacist

A large number of consumers routinely ask their pharmacists about over-the-counter (OTC) products for headache, cough, cold, skin rash, PMS, arthritis – the list goes on and on. When talking with your pharmacist about such products, ask these four questions:

1. Will this medicine cure my health problem? While most OTCs do not cure health problems, relief of bothersome symptoms may be achieved.

2. How much should I take? The U.S. Food and Drug Administration requires that doses for adults and children be printed on OTC product package materials. Discuss the dose with your pharmacist.

3. How long should I take the medicine? This has much to do with the nature of the condition. If symptoms "come and go," as in the case of fever, headache, and colds, a few hours or days of therapy is usually adequate.

4. Are there activities or other medicines I should avoid while taking this medicine? Medicines which cause drowsiness may interfere with driving or the operation of equipment. And some prescription medicines may interact with OTC medicines.

Winners of chili contest share secrets

Some like it hot.

And others fine tune old family recipes to tempt chili lovers.

Others, yet, use whatever they have around the house, they throw it into the pot, write down what went in and find out they just came up with an award winning chili recipe.

THE THREE winners of the Canton Challenge Fest Observer Chili Cook off earlier this month have their own secrets to making their chili dishes the best in the land. All of the winners live in Canton.

And the chili wizards, who received a $25 check each, shared their culinary magic with us.

Mark Nieman said he developed his first-place winning recipe 10 years ago. It was an answer to too many tomatoes around the house.

"My wife (Susan) loves to plant tomato plants," Nieman said. "We had all these tomatoes."

Nieman got to work developing sauces. From that his chili sauce was created.

For second place winners, Nina and Bob Wiswell, entering the contest was fun, because it allowed the family to get involved in a community activity, Nina Wiswell said. Their recipe was a pleasant result of accidental circumstances.

"Nina said one day: 'Let's have chili.' With what we had in the house we made chili. We made up the recipe with what we had."

THIRD PLACE winner, Ginny Kappler, said she planned to use the money she won for an anniversary dinner out with her husband. They celebrated six years together June 3.

Her recipe evolved over the years.

"It was partly my mother's recipe, my sister's recipe and partly a friend's recipe," Kappler said. "I cultivated it into my own recipe over the last five years."

She said the chili usually tastes a slightly different every time.

The one thing she's sure to have is a giant pot. Kappler said she always makes a lot of chili so that she can freeze some for future meals.

Chili tastes better reheated, she said.

Cooks offer winning recipes

NIEMAN'S CHILI

1 12-ounce can of beer
3 large green peppers
6 hot peppers
2 pounds of ground pork
2 pounds ground turkey
6 cups of tomatoes, cut
1 teaspoon black pepper
1 ounce ground cumin
½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon all spice
1 tablespoon sugar
1 4-ounce can diced green chilies
3 large onions, chopped
2 full bulbs of garlic
1 bunch celery
2 pounds ground round
2 pounds round steak, cut in ¼ inch pieces
3 14-ounce cans of tomato puree
6 ounces chili powder
4 bay leaves
¼ teaspoon dried basil
1 ounce onion powder
4 ounce beef base granules
½ ounce season salt
3 6-ounce cans tomato juice

To cook, brown meats; chop onions, green peppers and celery. Dice garlic. Saute onions, green peppers, celery and garlic in beer 'til soft. Add hot peppers and meat, then spices. Finally add the cut tomatoes, puree and juice. Mix well and simmer for 5-6 hours.

I like served with Tabasco sauce, with fresh chopped onions topped with colbyjack cheese. Makes about 2 (two) gallons.

KAPPLER'S CHILI

5 pounds hamburger, browned and drained
1 large Spanish onion, chopped
4 large celery, chopped
1 large green pepper, chopped
3 large garlic cloves, minced
1 jar mild banana peppers

1 29-ounce jar tomato sauce
5 tablespoon beef bouillon (or 5 cubes)
2 tablespoon chili powder
2 tablespoon cumin
1 teaspoon basil
1 teaspoon thyme
3 bay leaves
1 large can kidney beans

Simmer all ingredients, except 1 large can kidney beans, uncovered for 2 hours, then covered for 1 hour. Add 1 large can kidney beans. Simmer 1 more hour.

Chili tastes best when prepared a day ahead and then reheated.

NINA'S CHILE

1 medium onion, chopped
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 large clove garlic, chopped
½ pound ground sirloin (bought at Bob's of Canton)

Note: Uncooked Moppin sauce can be kept in the refrigerator to be used as needed for occasional slow-cooking barbecueing.

Board has rare public feud

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

Wayne-Westland school board president Andrew Spisak and several board members were openly critical and reacted angrily to remarks by colleagues at a special meeting Monday.

The rare display of emotion by members of the usually low-key board came during discussion of an administrative proposal to give assistant superintendent Woody London a promotion and raise as part of the district's cabinet reorganization.

About 300 students from Canton Township attend the Wayne-Westland schools.

London was elevated to associate superintendent and given a raise of "about $1,000" in the $74,788 annual salary as part of the package approved 5-2 by the board.

The reorganization was approved in concept by the board last spring as part of $5 million in administrative and program cuts to head off a district deficit in 1990-91.

Wayne-Westland School District

The district serves southeast Canton.

SPISAK, DURING remarks by Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek, threw up his hands, forcefully removed his eyeglasses and shouted a profanity. The board president later engaged in a shouting match with Ken Barnhill over his actions.

Kathleen Chorbagian criticized what she said was shortsightedness of residents. During closing comments by board members, she made a tearful plea for "better communication (among school officials)" as the district implements cuts triggered by the failure of voters this month to approve a tax increase.

The cabinet-level changes approved by the board Monday eliminate two of seven positions and increase responsibilities for four of the five remaining jobs effective July 2.

Eliminated posts are associate superintendent for instruction and planning, currently held by William Harvey, who is retiring; and assistant superintendent for student services and adult education, a position held by Elizabeth Kobe, who will remain with the district in another capacity.

The board Monday also approved other administrative changes, including shared principalships affecting four elementary schools (see related story).

BUT THE promotion and raise for London, who will be responsible for buildings, grounds, food services and transportation in addition to his current responsibilities as head of business operations, drew criticism from Barnhill and Kozorosky-Wiacek, voted against the proposal.

Both also said they weren't informed of the raise in previous discussions about the changes.

"This came as a shock to me," Barnhill said. "Nothing was said about it (previously).

"We've had to lay off people at every level. Others who will be here have been asked to bite the bullet. Whether it's a penny or $1,000, he's getting additional compensation and I cannot, in good conscience, approve such a plan."

Kozorosky-Wiacek reiterated previous statements that she wouldn't support administrative callbacks or raises for any administrators until the district was financially secure and could restore K-12 program cuts.

The raise wouldn't affect the overall cuts approved by the board last spring, Superintendent Dennis O'Neill said. He said the addition of buildings and grounds to London's duties was "one of the primary responsibilities" of the district.

THE RAISE drew vocal support from Spisak and Chorbagian.

"I cannot see where we can give a man more duties to do and not compensate him — and then we sit up here and nitpick over $1,000," the board president said.

The district had to "be fair, have a conscience in dealing with our employees," Chorbagian said.

She spoke of residents "who don't think anybody should be making more (money) than they do," alluding to the failed June 11 millage proposal.

Adam Podolan shows off his drawings.

Adam Podolan, 11, was the youngest contestant in the Canton Challenge Fest Art Contest. The fifth grader entered drawings of two ducks, his dog and a grizzly bear.

Adam has been studying art seriously for about two years.

"I started drawing Mickey Mouse, and I liked doing that," he said.

He said his fourth grade teacher at Walker Elementary encouraged his art interest.

For the last 18 months, Adam has been taking art lessons at The Art Store in Canton. In his lessons Adam explores new art media.

However, he says, "I like just to draw."

Adam, who draws on his own and in his art class at school, said he prefers to sketch animals.

Adam's art teacher at Walker encouraged him to enter the Challenge Fest Art Contest.

"He kept giving me papers about it," Adam said.

This week's question:

What is your opinion of Bart Simpson as a role model for young people?

We asked this question at the Post Office in Canton.

'I don't think he's a good role model. I don't think kids should listen to what he says because of how he talks to his parents.'
— Laura Tchorzynski

'He rules. He's like every American youth. He's screwed in the head, he doesn't like school. He's the perfect epitome of every American youth. He's not really a role model. He's just what every American kid is.'
— Jason Kyczynski

'I think he's pretty stupid. I don't think kids should take after him. The show's funny, but all the shirts and everything is just a big waste of time.'
— Mitch Dodes

'I think he's pretty cool. He's a good influence on kids. They probably admire him. He's got a good attitude. I like how he talks to people.'

Bargain-hunters to find unusal items at garage sale

By Leonard Poger
staff writer

If you are a garage sale fan looking for bargains in computers, windmills, lawnmowers or printing presses, the parents of the Penrickton Center for Blind Children have something for you.

Donna Green, whose son is one of the 25 Detroit and suburban students at the private school, said she has been working for the past five months on what she describes as "more than just a garage sale."

It has become a mission for her and volunteers working on the project, scheduled for 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. today, tomorrow and Saturday at St. John Lutheran School, on Wayne Road south of Glenwood in Westland.

"We held our first sale two years ago and raised $2,000," said Green, 45. "The next year, we doubled our proceeds to $4,000. Now we want to double it again."

ALL THE items at the sale are donated, including food to be served to bargain hunters for the three days.

Green has been working with 10 to 12 parents on the sale. Also helping are laid-off General Motors employees who are performing community service work in the company's Job Bank program.

Area businesses are donating items for the sale or sending in checks for the school's support, Green said. Donated items are kept in five large storage lockers in the area.

Proceeds from the event will be used to support the Penrickton School, which has an annual $550,000 operating budget.

The center has 35 full-time and part-time employees, including eight professionals.

The school, on Eureka between Beech Daly and Inkster roads in Taylor, is privately operated and receives no money from any governmental agency, said Kurt Sebaly, the school's executive director.

Money comes through donations from civic and service organizations, a mail campaign, individual contributions and the annual garage sale.

The school doesn't charge parents any fees, but requires that they become involved in the center.

THE EVENT this week will help provide needed money for the school's students, said Sebaly and Green, whose son, Nicky, 7, has been at the facility for three years.

Nicky, who lives at the school during the week and comes home on weekends, has been blind since birth. He is partially deaf and developmentally disabled and had a severe behavioral problem.

Sebaly and Green agreed that the behavior problem has been virtually eliminated and that Nicky is making progress in other areas.

Green took time out from taking about the upcoming garage sale to describe Nicky's earlier problems and how the Penrickton Center has helped him and other children from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties who are disabled.

"Nicky came to our home as a foster child when he was only 2 months old. He is totally blind and deaf in one ear, but as we grew to know and love Nicky, we decided to adopt him."

Initially, the parents were led to believe by professionals that Nicky was untrainable.

"Although his behavior was erratic, we thought this wasn't too unusual, considering his handicaps. We didn't understand the full extend of his disabilities. His teachers felt that he was stubborn, hot-tempered and very manipulative."

BUT SHE then heard about the Penrickton Center from a teacher who knew about the center but had never visited it.

Making substantial progress, Nicky can now ice skate, roller skate, bowl and swim, said his mother.

"Nicky may never be 'normal,' but Penrickton has given hope that he will continue to develop."

She described the center, which opened in 1952, as a "miracle," not just another school.

"It is a place of love and understanding in a sometimes hostile world of misunderstanding."

About two years ago, Green, the mother of three birth children and five adopted children, decided to repay the school by organizing and working on the first garage sale.

With the proceeds doubling last year, the project became a source of pride for what Green calls a small group of "housewives."

"This year, we wanted to do even more. Although we could never repay the school, we would like to make it possible for the school to do even more than it already has for more and more children.

"This can only be done with more money."

AMONG THE volunteers for the sale who don't have children at the center was one elderly man in Green's Garden City neighborhood who collected items for the sale for three months and delivered them to the sale's location.

He also gave Green a rusty tobacco can filled with coins. Among the coins was a silver bar valued at $125, Green said.

"This act of love, and many more like it, make all of the work (on the garage sale) worthwhile," Green said.

Volunteers are "overwhelmed" by the generosity of others in helping make the garage sale a success, she said.

Green and other Penrickton Center parents will find out this weekend how local bargain hunters will contribute to the success.

Board changes office hours

Office hours at the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education building have been changed for the summer to 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The building, at 454 S. Harvey in Plymouth, will return to the fall schedule, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on August 27.

Area group plans campaign to protect U.S flag

The Southfield-based American Freedom Coalition of Michigan soon will launch a statewide campaign, lobbying federal and state legislators to pass a constitutional amendment to protect the U.S. flag.

"Save Our Stars and Stripes" will commence as soon as the amendment is introduced into Congress with people encouraged to write or call their congressman in Washington D.C.

If the effort is successful there, the focus will shift to Lansing, where organizers are hopeful that Michigan will be one of the first states to ratify the amendment.

"During the summer we will be networking with various patriotic and veteran's organizations to plan our strategy," said Edward Taub, vice-president of the AFC of Michigan, an educational and lobbying organization headquartered in Southfield. He also is director of SOSS.

"We cannot afford to let our flag and nation be shamed. The flag is like a holy symbol to the nation, similar to the cross for Christians and the Star of David for Jews. It's that important to us and we want to protect it," Taub said.

THE SOSS CAMPAIGN is being initiated in response to a recent Supreme Court decision, which struck down a federal law that makes flag burning a crime.

Coalition president Pollie Pinkins, a math teacher at Denby High School in Detroit, said AFC of Michigan "will continue to work for a revival of moral, religious and patriotic values whenever a relevant issue arises.

"The flag issue is a hot potato and we think it's worth fighting for," Pinkins said. "After all, it's one of the few national symbols we've got."

The coalition was founded in 1987 as one of 50 state chapters. It has 10,000 members in Michigan and has previously been involved in the "Ollie North Slide Show" tour.

Use of drug fund sparks county controversy

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Members of the Wayne County Commission audit committee are investigating what they believe could be a potential misuse of money and material set aside for new offices for the sheriff's Drug Enforcement Unit.

But a county executive's spokesman said the issue involves little more than a borrowed air conditioner.

The situation arises from an auditor's report on construction work at a county building on 640 Temple, Detroit.

County Auditor General Ramona Henderson said her April 23 inspection of the site produced evidence material — including a cooling unit — was being diverted from the as-yet unfinished fifth floor Drug Enforcement Unit office to a seventh floor office being built for the county Air Pollution Control Division and possibly to other, unnamed county projects.

THE MATTER was an issue, Henderson wrote, because the material was bought with seized drug dealer assets, transferred from the federal government, and is required by federal guidelines to be spent only for drug-related activites.

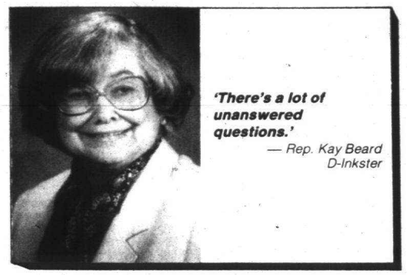
Use for any other projects, warned Henderson in her report, could cause the federal government to revoke future contributions of seized drug assets earmarked for Wayne County.

Audit committee chairwoman Kay Beard, D-Inkster, said she called for a meeting with Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara and heads of the county building, management and budget, purchasing and air pollution departments and divisions to discuss the situation.

"I don't want to accuse anybody," said Beard. "I'm not sure whether it was incompetence, poor judgment or bad management. We're trying to get to the bottom of the issue."

The committee has also requested county records involved in both construction projects and hoped to receive them by today. Audit committee members first discussed the report at a meeting Tuesday.

"There's a lot of unanswered questions," Beard said.



'There's a lot of unanswered questions.'
— Rep. Kay Beard D-Inkster

Deputy county executive Michael Duggan, however, said the situation was a non-issue.

"The issue is we borrowed an air conditioner for a couple of days and we returned it," he said.

Duggan said county workers moved an air conditioning unit from the county-owned building's fifth floor because finishing the air pollution offices took priority.

"We're trying to get them (air pollution control) in new offices by August," Duggan said. "What happened was the air pollution offices are being evicted from their current building on Jefferson," Duggan said.

"We will provide the Drug Enforcement Unit with very nice offices, but right now the other project takes priority."

Eviction wasn't unusual, Duggan added, because the county no longer has any interest in widespread space leasing.

"We're trying to move offices into buildings we already own to save money," he said. "When we took over, only one floor of the Temple building was being used."

Drug Enforcement offices would receive all the material promised them, Duggan said.

But a department spokesman said he wasn't sure how much material had already been shipped to other departments.

"The problem is, we don't know how much has been used and what its dollar value is," said unit Commander Melvin Turner.

In addition to the cooling system, the audit report indicated more sheet metal had been bought than was apparently needed by the Drug Enforcement Unit offices. The material was being stored on the fifth floor and all material stored in the building was inadequately protected.

Delay in construction of Drug Unit offices was apparently a concern for both the auditor and Beard. Henderson reported that material bought as long ago as October 1988 had not been installed.

Beard said a drug lab promised with the new offices was "badly needed."

Duggan, though, called the issue "election year politics."

"It's an election year. We resigned ourselves to that," he said.

Plastics recycling gains momentum

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

The future, according to the famous line from "The Graduate," could once be summed up in one word: plastics.

Today, the future could lie in plastics recycling.

From Washington to local city halls, elected officials are grappling with ways to reduce America's prodigious solid waste output. And plastics recycling ranks high on everyone's list.

"It's definitely an important issue," said Daniel Gilmartin of the Conference of Western Wayne, a multi-government group considering a recycling plan for western Wayne County.

Plastics recycling also weighs heavily in a state plan to reduce the waste going into Michigan landfills by 80 percent within the next 15 years. The state has created a $3 million Plastics Recycling Fund from the $800 million Quality of Life Bond issue approved by voters in 1988.

Recycling plastic goods — even those involving such made from scarcely recycled polystyrene — is an achieveable goal, said a spokeswoman for the Council for Solid Waste Solutions, a Washington-based group affiliated with the plastics industry.

"WE HATE to quote figures, but information we've seen indicates recycling plastic bottles could increase from 20 percent to 50 percent by 1993," said council spokeswoman Susan Vadney. "We've even seen figures indicating polystyrene (the material commonly used for coffee cups and fast food packaging) which was at zero last year could grow to 25 percent by 1995."

Nationally, plastics recycling is like the morning sun: rising in the East, streaming slowly into the Midwest but not yet visable in the West.

"New Jersey and Rhode Island are leading the pack in recycling generally, not just for plastics," Vadney said. "At the same time we haven't seen too much being done in Western states."

Because of its 12-year-old beverage container recycling law, Vadney added, Michgian is already ahead of many other Midwestern states.

Michigan's ability to remain in the forefront could lie in its ability to attract plastic recycling plants.

One plant, operated by Clean Tech, a division of Plymouth-based Plastipak Packaging Inc., began recycling operations March 1.

The Dundee plant, south of western Wayne, near Monroe, has been accepting milk jugs and clear plastic containers. Its goal is to recycle them into new bottles.

Company officials said the plant could recycle 24 million pounds of plastic goods a year. Clean Tech has qualified for $900,000 in state grant money to buy equipment.

That figure has caught the attention of governmental officials, Gilmartin said.

"We've talked a great deal with them," he said.

Recycling's success, Gilmartin added, could depend as much on trash haulers as on communities themselves.

"I hear a lot of the haulers that serve our communities are taking it out of state," Gilmartin said.

Plastics currently account for about 13 percent of the material now stored in landfills, said Wayne Koser, environmental quality analyst for the Michgian Department of Natural Resources.

"A lot of this stuff can be used three and four times, so why create new (plastic) resins?" Koser said.

Gilmartin appeared to agree.

"There's a lot of plastic out there, what we need are ways of managing it," he said.

Crunch over: Board fills vacant position

By Michele Johnson and M.B. Dillon staff writers

Thanks to voters who passed a tax increase proposal last year, Plymouth-Canton school officials are reinstating the position of executive director of secondary education.

Canton Principal Tom Tattan was named to the post by the school board last week.

The job was left vacant to cut costs after Kent Buikema, also a former Canton High School principal, retired in 1988. Tattan's salary isn't yet set. It will fall somewhere between $48,500 and $68,400.

"When Kent retired, we went for a year or more without filling the job because of the financial crunch," said Norm Kee, assistant superintendent/employee relations.

Mike Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction, has handled Buikema's duties.

"IT'S BEEN a strain and drain on Dr. Homes," said Kee. "It's been a little too hectic to cover well."

Of Tattan's appointment, Homes said, "It's a pleasure for us to be able to recommend to the board someone from within our own ranks."

Tattan leaves his job, which has not yet been filled, with mixed emotions.

"The last day of school as well as graduation was sad," he said. "I think I've spent five very good years."

Tattan, who will complete his doctorate next June, is eager to get started.

"It's an advantage to come from a district knowing its curriculum and its shortcomings," he said. "I can bring a lot of energy and insight to the district."

Among Tattan's first priorities will be meeting with middle school principals, working on curriculum development and reviewing a middle school study.

"The first thing we have to implement is a belief system," said Tattan. "We need to determine what kids should learn so we can provide more opportunities, like summer tutorial programs."

She was nominated by other administrators and will participate in a week-long seminar July 8-14 at the Claremont McKenna College Campus in Claremont, Calif.

Spaniel to attend seminar

Shirley A. Spaniel, executive director for elementary education of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, has been selected as a member of the Institute for Development of Educational Activities, Inc.

Gotta get a job

Summer jobs still hot, but many work year-round

By Michelle Johnson
staff writer

Summer jobs, like the times, are a changin'.

The summer jobs any of us remember still exist. For instance, Burger King manager Sandy Brockmiller said she expects to double the restaurant's number of student employees during the summer months.

But more and more businesses look for year-round help, and more and more students are looking for year-round jobs.

Plymouth-Salem High School senior Trevor Lee said he started working at Jerry's Bicycling and Fitness at the beginning of the school year so that he could get an early start earning college money.

KIM WONG, a senior at Plymouth-Salem, said she has been working as a restaurant hostess for the past three years to save money for college and earn spending money. She said she intends to work on weekends while she is in college.

Managers at Great Scott! and Metro News said they look for employees who will work year-round.

Kathy Ayers, Colonial Card and Camera manager, said she usually hires high school students to work year-round. Then some of them come back to work during the summers after they have gone away to college.

That arrangement suits many high school students.

Plymouth-Salem sophomore Brett Petroskey is looking for a job.

"If I get it this summer, I'll probably keep it next year," he said.

Sandra Manning, assistant manager at Sherwin Williams, said a part-time job with their company could turn into a career.

"This is an excellent company to work for," she said. "We're a firm believer in hiring the young."

She said Sherwin Williams usually hires high school students who work year-round. During college, former employees return to work over the summer. The company will then hire college graduates in management positions.

Manning said about 50 percent of the store's employees go on to work in one of the corporation's diverse offices.

SCHOOLCRAFT COLLEGE junior Ami Henderson works at Sherwin Williams year-round. She said she has learned a lot through her job.

"I love it," she said. "It's the best job I've had in my life."

Manning and Brockwell said the most important factor in their hiring was the interview. Manning emphasized the importance of self-motivation.

Linda Price, Salvation Army community center director, said personal interviews are the main determinates in her hiring of summer camp counselors.

She said that while she prefers to hire college students, age is not a barrier. She often hires high school students who return each summer while they are in college.

"It's very rare that you get someone in high school or college that can't work with children," Price said.

Todd Piwowar, Plymouth-Salem junior, said he worked in a summer camp and plans to return there this year.

"It doesn't pay as much as the other one (job), but that's where I have a lot of friends."

Price said many students have a hard time finding a summer job because they lack work experience.

"If you don't have experience, they don't want you," she said. "But how do you get the experience?"

Kathy Rische, assistant manager at the Rainbow Shop, said they don't hire many students because their business isn't big enough. The Rainbow Shop has two student employees.

However, many businesses have plenty of summer and year-round positions available. John Kownacki, owner of Cloverdale's, said he employs 30 students during the year and adds 30 extra to the staff during the summer.

His wife, Phyllis, said she has seen a lot of signs asking for summer help.

"I think businesses are busier in the summer when the kids are out of school," she said.

One final factor in students' job search is age. Some businesses can't hire students who are not 18 or 21.

Hollie Bell said her age is limiting her job search. The 15-year-old Plymouth-Canton freshman plans on applying for a job at Winkleman's because, "They hire at 15."

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.

Half of the children in Mary Hoffan's PLUS class gather around her in a circle. They prepare for their day's activities. Jamie says she plans to work with Play-doh. She expects the Play-doh to feel mushy. Later, she works on the classroom's typewriter writing "letters to my mommy."

Down the hall in Mary Lou Boyd's class, Jessica and Kristen play with a set of crutches and a walker. They were introduced to these tools earlier in a handicapped awareness session. At some point in their play, Boyd will encourage them to visit one of the centers set up around the room. She said she tries to have the children visit each center once during the day.

JAMIE, JESSICA, and Kristen are part of the PLUS program in Central Middle School. PLUS is an early learning program, with two components, Head Start and Chapter 1. The Head Start program is recruiting children for next year.

Jan Metzner, assistant director, said, "Head Start is not just a preschool program, it's for the whole family."

Parent participation is a large part of the program, Metzner emphasized. All of the parents work on a center committee which generates ideas for the children's classroom projects and field trips.

This year parents decided to send some of the children to Safety Town, a summer program run by the Plymouth-Canton schools. Through garage and bake sales, the parents raised $300 to send some of the children to the program.

Head Start parents also volunteer in the classrooms and attend parent education programs where they learn to make cheap activities and projects for their children to use at home.

"That really helps the parents too, to get ideas what to do at home and to further their education at the home level, not just always here at school," said Metzner. "Every day, every moment is a learning activity for children this age."

WHILE THE classroom activites are for four year olds, Head Start also has a home visit program for three year olds in which a home visitor meets with parents and child once a week for an hour and a half. The home visitor provides nutrition counseling and learning materials the parent follow through with during the week. They also arrange for social services.

"What we are really out there for is to help to teach the parent how to work with their child," said Kay Wilson, parent coordinator.

Both the classroom and home programs provide more than learning activities. They provide mental health care, dental and physical exams, and teach nutrition. Children in the classroom program receive breakfast and lunch and brush their teeth. Metzner said the children and their parents learn to change their eating habits through this part of the program.

"We teach foods that are most nutritious," she said. "Money is scarce so we need to spend that dollar wisely. A bag of chips, which sells for $2.50, can also buy something more nutritious like fruit or vegetables."

Saving money is emphasized in the program since many of the parents are out of work or in school themselves. Family income plays a large part in determining the child's eligibility for the program. Foster children and some handicapped children are also eligible.

MARY FRITZ, program director, urged all potentially eligible candidates to apply for the program.

"It's a very good foundation for all of their future education," she said.

The children are taught with the HI-SCOPE method. They plan their activities, carry them out, and then review them.

Carol Dombkowski, a Field Elementary School kindergarten teacher, said this method helps the children learn a school routine. Plymouth-Canton kindergarten classes use the same center approach as the Head Start program.

Dombkowski said Head Start provides the children with a chance to develop motor and language skills that they might not use at home. For instance, many children do not cut, trace, or paste when they play at home.

"I think it gives them a wonderful experience," Dombkowski said about the Head Start program. "It helps them to relate, to learn better because they have more background."

Both PLUS programs are funded jointly by the federal government and the local school district.

"The hard dollars all come from the federal government," Pritz said. "But our school district supports this in terms of space, administrative talent, accounting and support service. Head Start would not be able to run unless there was a big contribution, chiefly, by the school district."

She and Metzner also emphasized the big contribution parents play. In celebration of the local program's 13th anniversary, an open house was held and former participants were invited back.

"Some parents came back," Metzner said. "And they were really amazed to see how much we have grown. We've added on another classroom and staff people. We're really pleased with the kind of progress we're making here."

Vote keeps Amtrak rolling

Here's how Observer & Eccentric area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending June 8.

Roll Call Report

HOUSE

AMTRAK VETO By a vote of 294 for and 123 against, the House achieved the two-thirds majority required to override President George Bush's veto of a bill (HR 2364) giving Amtrak the federal subsidy it needs to stay in business. The Senate also must reject the veto if the bill is to prevail. A Senate vote was upcoming.

The bill authorized an annual average subsidy of $684 million through fiscal 1992, and tightened ICC review of railroad takeovers by non-railroad companies. Taxpayers last year covered about 30 percent of the rail passenger agency's budget. Though Bush has long opposed the federal payment, he based his veto on the ICC provision.

Override supporter Edward Madigan, R-Ill., said "the taxpayers ought to be allowed to put a little money into a rail transportation system," considering how much federal money subsidizes air travel.

Veto supporter Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., said passengers in areas unprofitable to Amtrak "should take the bus rather than look to the rest of America to subsidize their ride."

A yes vote was to fund Amtrak.

Michigan voting no: William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

TO EASE EXPORT CONTROLS By a vote of 312 for and 86 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR4653) making it easier for American companies to get U.S. government clearance to sell certain computers, telecommunications systems and other high technology to countries in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary would be major beneficiaries of this bill to relax Cold War-era restraints on exports. The bill eases controls based on national security and does not deal with those based on foreign policy.

Supporter Toby Roth, R-Wis., said "maintaining superpower status in the 1990's means being able to compete economically" for new markets with forces such as Japan and a reunified Germany.

Opponent William Dickinson, R-Ala., said the bill is a policy reversal in that "trade and economic considerations, not national security, will drive our export controls" on sensitive technology.

A yes vote supported the bill.

Michigan voting yes: Hertel, D-Harper Woods and Levin, D-Southfield.

Michigan voting no: Pursell, D-Plymouth, Ford, D-Taylor, and Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS EXPORTS By a vote of 348 for and 45 against, the House broadened the range of telecommunications products that can be sold under a bill to liberalize the Export Act of 1949 (above). The amendment enables American manufacturers to sell entire systems including service, latitude they say they need to compete with Germany and Japan for customers in emerging democracies.

Sponsor Ron Wyden, D-Ore., said "communications is exactly the area we should be moving into. That is how you promote democracy."

Opponent Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., said amendment supporters "are determined to drive a Mack truck" through the newly-loosened export rules.

A yes vote was to broaden the export of telecommunications products to certain countries now shedding communist rule.

Voting yes: Pursell, D-Plymouth, Hertel, D-Harper Woods, Levin, D-Southfield, and Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

Not voting: Ford, D-Taylor.

SENATE

CRIME BILL DEBATE By a vote of 57 for and 37 against, the Senate fell short of the 60 votes needed to limit debate on a massive anti-crime bill that had been on the floor since May 21.

This failure to invoke cloture threatened the bill. It was attributed mainly to lobbying by the National Rifle Association, which opposes a provision outlawing certain semi-automatic assault weapons. But a few votes against ending debate were from liberals concerned that the bill would expand the federal death penalty. Senate leaders were trying to salvage the bill.

Nothing that most votes against cloture were cast by Republicans, Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Main., said "let there be no mistake or misunderstanding as to where the cause lies for no crime bill."

Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kans., said a crime bill "is within their grasp" if Democrats show more flexibility on acception amendments.

A yes vote was to move to final passage of the crime bill.

Voting yes: Carl Levin, D-Southfield and Donald Riegle.

AIDS AND FOOD HANDLING By a vote of 40 for and 53 against, the Senate failed to table language aimed keeping AIDS-infected persons out of food-handling position.

The vote endorsed a House-passed proposal making it legal for employers to transfer workers infected with a communicable disease from food-handling jobs at no loss of pay. It instructed Senate conferees on disability rights legislation (HG 2273) to accept the House proposal.

David Durenberger, R-Minn., said the House provision runs contrary to "all medical knowledge about the spread of AIDS."

William Armstrong, R-Colo., said "people who have communicable diseases should not be working at the salad bar.

A yes vote opposed the House position on food handling by those with communicable diseases.

Voting yes: Carl Levin, D-Southfield and Donald Riegle.

Plan to ease jail overcrowding gets mixed reviews

By Darrell Pressley
staff writer

Legislation passed earlier this year by the state House to help alleviate prison crowding has received mixed reviews from local officials.

The four bills supported by Gov. James Blanchard would allow the state to reimburse building costs to local or county governments that construct minimum security additions to jails, security camps and community corrections centers.

The counties that accommodate prisoners who would go to state prison, would be reimbursed for the cost of housing those prisoners.

THE COST, which varies among counties, would be determined annually based on a method set up by the Department of Corrections.

"There's always been support of the concept by Partners Against Crime (PAC)," said Judge Gail McKnight of 18th District court in Westland.

McKnight, who is a member of PAC, said most of the people she sentences go up north where the prisoners can be accommodated.

"They all go north, because there is no space," said McKnight.

Because of the lack of beds locally for minimum security risk and short term prisoners, the northern communities see this as almost a business, the judge said.

"A lot of the out-state counties have become entrepeneurs," said McKnight.

About one-fourth of the people who have sentences of less than two years in jail, are not the people who were thought to need the beds, McKnight said.

"They are not the worst people in the world. They aren't the criminals."

IT WOULD be good to have local beds for minor offenders to give them a "taste of jail," said the Westland judge.

> 'I think it's a waste of time . . . All of this should have been done a long time ago. Everything is running along smoothly.'
> 16th District Court

In 1987, 45.6 percent of the new admissions to the state prison system were sentenced to two years or less. They made up 49 percent in 1988, and 53.6 percent through July 1988, according to an Associated Press report.

Not all judges feel there is a need for new legislation.

"I think it's a waste of time," said Judge Robert Brzezinski of the 16th District court in Livonia.

Brzezinski said area communities send their prisoners to other facilities and there are work programs available.

"Three to five years ago, when jail problems first came into being, the state shrugged their shoulders," Brzezinski said, adding that many of the communities have solved their problems locally.

"All of this should have been done a long time ago. Everything is running along smoothly," Brzezinski said.

The $11.3 million package would permit courts to sentence offenders to up to 24 months in a local jail or security camp. To date, any convict sentenced to more than a year has to serve the time in a state prison.

A county commission would have to vote in order to participate in a state-local partnership.

The Livonia judge said he doesn't know where the funding for this project will come from.

"How they're going to fund this, I have no idea," said Brzezinski.

Dale Davis, executive director of the Michigan Sheriffs Association, said he opposed a change in the bill allowing an inmate sentenced to up to two years to serve all the time in jail.

The bill originally states that inmates could not serve longer than 12 months in a jail. The rest of the sentence would be served in an alternative security camp.

"That's almost double the capacity in jails that are overcrowded now," Davis said.

UNDER THE proposal an inmate could not serve longer than 12 months in a jail. The rest of the sentence would be served in a work program.

"We need it because 90 percent of the prisoners at the local level are housed in jail for above minimum security classification, even though less than 10 percent require more than a minimum security incarceration," said Rep. Greg Pitoniak, D-Taylor.

"The judge could sentence the same person to a state prison," said Pitoniak sponsor of the bills. "The discretion remains with the judge."

Wayne County Sheriff William Ficano, who hasn't reviewed the legislation completely, believes it will help the jail overcrowding situation here.

"There's so much overcrowding, you need every tool in your arsenal," Ficano said.

"I'm hoping this will eventually give us more space," said Ficano.

"This is something for the future."

New state aid fight emerges

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Not a shot is being fired in the biggest state school aid battle in years in Lansing.

The issue is whether the state will stop making $600 million in payments for Social Security, pensions and other "categorical" aids to well-heeled districts which get not general state aid.

"The House is being tough, and the Senate's being tough," said lobbyist Jerry Dunn, who represents many suburban out-of-formula districts in the western Wayne County suburbs.

THE ISSUE is before a so-called conference committee — three senators and three representatives — whose job is to work out a settlement.

"We're in a stalemate. Everybody is digging in," said Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City, a member of the conference panel.

Keith was sponsor of the House version which seeks to reduce categoricals and use the money in the general state aid formula.

Other members are Reps. James O'Neill, D-Saginaw, the House's school finance expert, and Don Gilmer, R-Augusta; and Sens. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, and Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills.

REP. MAXINE Berman, D-Southfield, represents an out-of-formula district and formerly taught in another, Oak Park.

"Only one-third of House members have out-of-formula school districts in their legislative districts," said Berman. "A few have all out-of-formula districts," she said, pointing to the Observer & Eccentric suburbs.

"So there's not much feeling in the House for the problems of out-of-formula districts.

"But the majority of senators have at least one out-of-formula district; they have a more balanced perspective," she said.

If they lose categorical aid, out-of-formula districts either must dip into working capital to balance their budgets or seek property tax increases from voters.

NO MEETINGS of the conference committee on the state aid measure, Senate Bill 830, have been called. That could change at any moment, because the chair can call one at a moment's notice.

The stalemate over school aid is having an impact on another conference committee handling Senate Bill 827, public employees school retirement. That panel is chaired by Sen. Doug Cruce, R-Troy.

"When you add the two bills together," said Cruce, "there's a $44 million shortfall. It can come out of their bill (830) or this one," he said after a 40-minute meeting Tuesday.

GOV. JAMES J. Blanchard has joined Keith's team opposing categorical aids to out-of-formula districts, which generally have large property tax bases.

"Given the resources," a budget staffer told lawmakers, "we felt the most responsible use of the money ws to put as much as possible in the school aid formula."

The budget aide said the $44 million shortfall was due to school districts' hiring many new service personnel in recent years.

The out-of-formula districts are waging a battle to keep their categorical aids, but some lawmakers concede privately the end of the road is near.

Keith says only 70 percent of school districts currently receive general state aid.

"If we took every dollar on the state level that we have available for K-12 schools and put it in the formula," he said at a recent rally on the Capitol steps, "we would equalize close to 90 percent of the children in this state and bring 80 districts tht are out of formula back into formula."

CRUCE, MEANWHILE, has another budget battle on his hands — over the so-called "regulatory" budget.

It covers the departments of Commerce, Labor and Licensing & Regulation, and it includes one of the governor's pet projects — the Youth Corps.

The Democratic-controlled House version gives Blanchard $24 million. The Republican Senate version whacked it to $7 million. The underlying GOP complaint is that the recession-born program doesn'tneed to be the largest in the country, and that Blanchard uses too much Commerce money for political promotion.

Cruce said he almost had a deal Tuesday morning with Rep. Morris Hood, D-Detroit, chair of the conference panel on the regulatory bill. "I told him I'd compromise at $18 million," Cruce said. "He agreed, then came later and said he couldn't agree. The wheels came off the cart."

Hood called a sudden meeting of the conference committe at 1 p.m. Tuesday, precisely the same time Cruce was holding a previously scheduled meeting on the pension bill. Hood said he would keep calling meetings twice a day until the matter is settled.

"I've got other meetings," Cruce said. "This is a lousy use of my time."

THE SENATE isn't meeting at all this week, and the House is holding only brief morning sessions, as the conference process moves on.

Overall, the state general fund budget will be about $7.3 billion, with $3 billion going to schools.

The new fiscal year starts Oct. 1.

OU increases summer tuition

If summer school tuition is going up, can fall tuition increases Le far behind?

Oakland University is raising summer tuition about 6.5 percent, in anticipation of less state aid this fall.

The OU Board of Trustees last week authorized a $4.75 per credit hour increase for freshmen and sophomores and a $4.25 per credit hour hike for juniors and seniors. Graduate students will pay $9.25 per credit hour more.

Raising summer tuition was a bitter pill for OU officials, but one that was "absolutely necessary, if we are to continue providing quality education," said Jim Llewellyn, OU spokesman.

"Nobody wants to raise tuition," he said. "But you can only cut so far before quality starts to suffer."

Ken Morris, the only trustee to vote against the increase, called the tuition hike "indecent." He warned that OU is close to putting the price of an education beyond the means of many students.

Llewellyn said the tuition hike is necessary if, as expected, the State of Michigan cuts its appropriation for the 1990-91 budget.

Gov. Blanchard has recommended a 5 percent increase over the $37 million in state aid it received in 1989-90. But OU officials are concerned it will be cut when the appropriations are announced later this summer.

OU is in the middle of summer registration. Thus, the total number of students affected is not known.

Last year, however, 3,398 students enrolled in summer classes, according to Anne Sandoval, associate director of admissions.

UNDER THE NEW rates, freshmen and sophomores taking three hours — the equivalent of one course — will pay $197.25 this summer, instead of $183; juniors and seniors will pay $225, instead of $209.25 and graduate students will pay $363.75, instead of $336.

While the recently approved tuition hike will be noticed, Sandoval said she expects most students — particularly "guests," or students attending other schools during the year who take summer classes at OU — to again be "pleasantly surprised" at the cost.

MYTHS ABOUT CHRISTIANITY
THE MYTH OF THE MONTH
Jesus Christ was only a great moral teacher
What are we to make of this man? The joys and hardships of two thousand years of western history have been pinned on him. Controversy has constantly surrounded his claims. Religious life in the West has been dominated by allusions to his teachings. No self-aware, intelligent person dare avoid this intriguing individual and his impact on society.
No one doubts any more that Jesus actually existed. Most people also believe that he was a great moral teacher. Religious and political leaders throughout the world, including many of the great opponents of Christianity, hail the moral superiority of his life. Mohandas Gandhi aspired to the ideals of the Sermon on the Mount. The philosopher John Stuart Mill thought Jesus a genius and probably the greatest moral reformer who ever existed. Even Napoleon Bonaparte considered him a superior leader of men.
The New Testament documents record the radical servant-like attitude which lent power and credibility to Jesus' teachings. He has truly led humanity in the expression of compassion and humility, as well as in anger against evil and hypocrisy. Jesus combined a realistic understanding of human nature with an idealism for what human beings could become. His words have tested and challenged the minds and hearts of millions for centuries.
Of course, this is not the whole story. When we begin to consider Jesus' claims about his identity, the controversy begins. This is where people (including the world's religious leaders) have problems. This is where the label "moral teacher" is put to the test. It begins to seem inadequate, if not naive.
A thirty year old peasant carpenter turned itinerant teacher, Jesus laid claim both by word and action to be more than a mere man. He operated on the assumption that he was God himself.
How do we know this? From his explicit statements and the very way he lived. His self-disclosures are interwoven in the very fabric of the New Testament. He claimed equality with God. He said he had lived before Abraham. He assumed the right to forgive sins. He accepted worship. There seems to be no escaping it.
Jesus of Nazareth could not be simply a harmless jhoral teacher. He cuts too deep and steps out too far from the crowd of moral teachers and philosophers. We can call him a liar. We might even discuss his mental imbalance. But the tag of "only a great moral teacher" doesn't stick.
It was never an option in his own day. Some of his contemporaries thought him mad, others loved him. He was regarded with disdain and sometimes even hatred, or alternately with amazement and adoration. But he never received mild approval.
Neither is it an option for today. We have to shut him up or hear him out. What are we to make of this man? What of his moral integrity? His fulfillment of centuries of aspirations? His prediction of death and resurrection? What are we to make of his claims to be the one and only Godman of history? What are we to do with this great moral teacher who makes such impossible claims?

Bill outlines plan to insure adopted children

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Adopted children could be covered by health insurance the day they enter their new homes under a bill in a state Senate committee.

"Basically, if you adopt a child in Michigan, you can't get health insurance for a year," said Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield, sponsor of the corrective House-passed measures.

"That's a hindrance to adopting children, especially older ones," Berman said.

"It's a step forward that's gotta be taken," said Don Marengere, president of Adoption Option, a major supporter of Berman's bills.

HOUSE BILLS 5443-5 would require health insurers to cover adopted children the day they enter their new homes, the same as children born to the family. Handicapped adoptees couldn't be denied coverage.

Under Michigan law, an adoption isn't final until a year after placement.

One bill applies to health maintenance organizations, the second to Blue Cross and the third to independent insurers, Berman said.

"Many companies will not cover medical situations that our child had prior to his placement in our family," said Marengere, a Bloomfield Township resident. "Yet if our biological child has the same medical condition, he would receive coverage."

"A child is a child is a child," said Berman, summarizing her philosophy.

CURRENTLY, adopting parents must buy separate coverage for the child or have it covered by governmental Medicaid.

"Medicaid is a significant barrier," said Berman. "It's a very difficult process — 42 pages of forms.

"And a lot of doctors don't take Medicaid. (Rep.) Mary Brown told us not one doctor in Kalamazoo County accepts Medicaid."

The situation puts parents in the difficult position of telling adopted children whom they are treating as a member of their families, "You can't go to our doctor; you have to go to another doctor," she said.

Marengere said there are about 2,000 adoptions a year in Michigan (of 100,00 live births).

It's possible, said Marengere, for a young woman living with her parents to keep the child and have it covered under her parents' Blue Cross policy. But if the child is placed for adoption, it couldn't be covered under the family policy for a year.

THE BILLS would apply to insurers but not to companies like General Motors which self-insure, he said.

Berman said the HMOs and the Blues had no problem agreeing to the bills, but independent insurers objected. "They believe the bills are harmful, but they made no case," she said.

The bills are in the Senate Commerce Committee where independent insurers are continuing to object.

Appointed

Livonia resident Robert Miljan has been appointed coordinator of the Detroit-Wayne County Emergency Medical Services council, part of the county department of public health. He will also serve as executive director of Health Emergency Medical Services Inc., a 16-hospital disaster preparedness group based at the county's Westland complex.

Tax-cut petition leaders launch drive for signatures

AP — Two property tax cut petition drives still need thousands of signatures as they move into their final days, but organizers said they remain optimistic.

Patrick Anderson and former Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson launched an "action plan" recently to get the signatures they need.

So far, their petition drive has collected about 110,000 signatures. Anderson said they're shooting for 300,000 to make sure they get the 239,657 valid signatures necessary to put their plan on the Nov. 6 ballot.

"THAT'S A lot of signatures, but I'm optimistic. Certainly, I'd like to have more signatures in the till. It's going to be a tough fight," Anderson said.

Anderson, an assistant vice president with the Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co., said about 9,000 people have volunteered to collect signatures.

He added the drive recently got a boost by getting the endorsement of the Michigan Association of Realtors and regional Realtor groups, which have sent out thousands of petitions.

The Patterson-Anderson group will have 100,000 petitions out by the end of this week, he said, adding if only 40,000 come back in by the July 4 deadline, that should do the trick.

Meanwhile, Taxpayers United had gathered about 170,000 signatures as of last week, said Peggy McMaster, a spokeswoman for the group.

That group needs to collect the valid signatures of 191,726 registered voters to put its plan, spearheaded by tax foe Richard Headlee, before the Legislature.

Lawmakers would have 40 days to approve or it goes on to a vote of the people.

McMaster said the group actually has until Sept. 15 to gather signatures.

Headlee's latest plan calls for cutting property tax assessments to 40 percent of a property's cash value by 1991 and forcing the Legislature to make up the difference to schools and local governments.

He estimates the plan would cut taxes by $200 million the first year, then by $600 million in the second and following years. That would be about 8 percent of the projected $7.6 billion state budget for the next fiscal year.

The Patterson-Anderson plan would cut property taxes by about $550 million, limit property tax assessment increases to the inflation rate, and force the state to spend more money on schools.

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.
It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Program helps seniors share with students

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Mamie Holien, 90, speaking in the clipped tones of a Swedish native from Minnesota, describes the second grade students who visit her and others at American House Elmwood in Rochester Hills as "a very loving group."

"They were here the other day, 19 of them. They did a little square dance for us. It was quite cute, you know," Holien said of the 7- and 8-year olds who attend R. Grant Graham Elementary School in Auburn Hills.

The exchange between seniors and students, a sharing of interests and care, is in full bloom at American House, with elderly and youth mounting age differences to forge meaningful relationships.

Holien is perhaps typical of American House residents.

Active and alert, she recently celebrated her 90th birthday with an only son who is retired from the automotive industry, two grandchildren who are in their 40s and a pair of great-grandchildren.

Like the majority of American House residents, Holien's family lives near enough to maintain ongoing contact. But now that the great-grandchildren are grown, there are no youngsters in the family.

"CHILDREN ARE SO GREAT around the elderly. They don't see their disabilities and they are so open," said Pat Markell, manager of the Rochester Hills American House residence, one of a dozen such facilities in the metropolitan area.

Markell, involved with the elderly since 1984, is active in Generations Unlimited, an organization that promotes intergenerational exchanges.

"The elderly like to see little ones in small doses. They have a lot to share, a lot of wisdom to pass along," Markell said. And children who are exposed to the elderly are more able to accept and appreciate such lessons in wisdom.

American House residences have long provided opportunities for such exchanges. A number of houses receive regular visits from honor students and scouts. The Birmingham American House hosts monthly visits from Derby Middle School students. The Farmington Hills facility encourages visits from Forest Elementary and senior high students and promotes a pen pal program.

One of the older exchanges is Adopt-a-Grandparent at American House Westland. Funded by a grant from the Wayne-Westland School Foundation, the program is five years old, according to 20-year teaching veteran Charlann Ogilvie who founded the exchange.

"Of all the teaching I do, this is the most rewarding. It's a lot of extra work but it's worth every single minute," Ogilvie said. Adopt-a-Grandparent is the only program funded in successive years by the school foundation.

"MY FAVORITE is John," said 9-year-old Kristin Quint of Westland's Kettering Elementary. Kristin's third grade class participated in Ogilvie's exchange this past school year.

"He's funny. He likes to tell jokes and he tells you to be careful," Kristin continued, explaining why John is her favorite resident of American House.

"One day we were planting flowers and he said, 'Don't plant them in the sewer or they'll die,' " she said, giggling anew at the retelling.

Once each month last school year, Kristin and her classmates walked the short distance from Kettering Elementary to American House to visit with the elderly, fashion crafts and, during the Christmas holiday, enjoy a magic show.

Commons

It could be Canton's heart

WE HOPE CANTON Township obtains enough support to put together the village commons project envisioned by officials.

The $5 million to $6 million project calls for a parklike 85 acre downtown area that would include a farmer's market, bicycle path and park where outdoor concerts and other cultural activities could be held.

We think it's needed.

However, there's one stumbling block so far. It's a property owner in the area who won't go along with the program. The owner, who owns about half of the 85 acres, through his attorney has told the township that he intends to build a strip mall on his portion of the land slated for the project.

Canton Township can do without land owners like that. The township needs another strip mall like the city of Detroit needs another empty lot.

The development history of the Detroit area was written by people like that, throw up a building, get the highest rent possible from it and then sell it and move on.

Such developers often can't even fill up the strip malls they build before moving on to new turf.

WE THINK Canton needs a heart, and the village commons is it.

The projects planned for the commons are far more beneficial to the community in the long run than another strip mall.

With a strip mall you usually get a party store and video store. Having another video store in Canton would mean residents of one neighborhood would have to travel about a minute less to pick up a copy of "Batman." And as for party stores, it seems like you can't travel 10 feet between them.

The village commons offers so much more. One is a farmer's market. We think it's the perfect thing for Canton, which has a farming tradition.

Such a market could be the centerpiece of the commons, a place where people can stroll, buy fresh fruits and produce, or just sit and people watch. It's the kind of place that brings people into the community, and gives Canton an identity.

The park for concerts offers a central gathering place for Canton residents, and the bicycle paths offer a link with neighborhoods.

But there's more. Canton now has open space, but we suspect that such space will become scarce as the western portion of the township is developed.

Creating a village commons would help preserve some of that open space. Also, it could become a model for other portions of the township.

BUT WHILE WE support the project, we can understand the criticism of Planning Commissioner Richard Kirchgatter, who questioned if visitors would be able to find the commons.

The commons is proposed for a now vacant parcel north of Ford and east of Sheldon. The commons would be accessible from Ford, Sheldon and Morton Taylor roads.

Part of the project would entail extending Morton Taylor Road south from Warren Road and building secondary roads and extending utility lines to the proposed commons.

The architects for the project say landscaping along Ford Road will help identify the commons. Also, special street signs would be erected.

We suspect that even with the landscaping and signs, some people will have trouble finding the commons.

One way to remedy such a problem is for the township to produce a map showing major public areas and points of interest in the township.

Another reason we support the project is the cost. At an estimated $5 million to $6 million, we think it's a bargain.

The money for the commons would come from property taxes that were increased but not collected because they were frozen by the state and through the sale of municipal bonds.

The time is right for the project. We just hope it gets off the ground and the commons isn't turned into a strip mall.

Warning labels

T nd of intolerance dangerous

A FEW WEEKS ago the recording industry announced, with little fanfare, the creation of a uniform label that will be used to warn parents of "explicit lyrics" on recorded albums.

Little outcry accompanied the announcement, probably in part because the decision to use the labels is, on its face, a voluntary one.

But it should be protested in the strongest terms possible.

First, there is little that is voluntary about the industry's adoption of the labels. Record companies have been pressured strongly for at least two years by groups such as the Parents Music Resource Center (of Tipper Gore fame) to censor lyrics that these groups find offensive. And with 21 state legislatures considering bills to require record labeling, it's clear the industry's action was meant to pre-empt outside meddling.

There seems to be a mood of intolerance out there that tells some people they do good when they impose their values on others. Nothing could be further from the truth.

THIS ATTACK on song lyrics, which has occurred nationwide, goes hand-in-hand with efforts by other groups, local ones among them, to stamp out thoughts and ideas they don't like. In Plymouth a Christian group called Citizens for Better Education has decided it will purge the schools of books that convey "satanic" ideas. A crusade against a high school play recently hit Rochester.

There seems to be a mood of intolerance out there that tells some people they do good when they impose their values on others. Nothing could be further from the truth, however, and our Founding Fathers knew that so very well. Tampering with other people's rights to read, write, say or hear what they please is an affront to our nation's most fundamental principles.

The arrest in Florida June 10 of members of the 2-Live Crew rap group that performed songs a federal judge has ruled are obscene shows just where this intolerance can lead. The image on the evening news of two young men being led into a police van, not for what they did but for what they said, was a sad commentary on the current mood of America. This country was meant to be bigger than that.

Even "voluntary" actions such as the labels the record industry has adopted are more than a symbolic affront to our freedoms. The ratings given to movies, after all, are voluntary, but just try releasing a movie without first submitting it for a rating. Very few theaters will touch it, and the diminished exposure means diminished profits. Moviemakers, in effect, are punished monetarily for not "voluntarily" submitting their work to be rated.

If the moviemaker makes a film that his audience believes is credible as an artistic work but the raters believes deserves an X, he's in trouble. Only pornographic theaters will show it. If he wants his audience to see his film, he has to make it conform to the prescribed tastes.

A small dinner party. Candles sparkled off wine glasses. Dessert had just been served.

"The country's stuck in the mud. We need some leadership, some vision, an agenda. I just hope the president and Congress can come up with it," said a senior business executive whose company employs tens of thousands.

Heads nodded gravely. Conventional wisdom.

Rubbish, I thought.

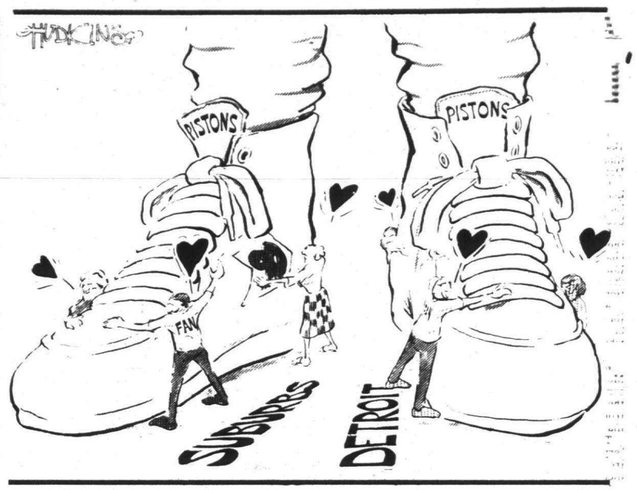
To think the solution to our nation's problems will come out of Washington is both naive and masochistic.

Naive because Washington, whether ruled by Republicans or Democrats, is concerned solely with what goes on in Washington, not the rest of the country. Visit DC. People ask, "What's going on out there in the real world?"

Masochistic because Washington, whether run by liberals or conservatives, is at bottom nothing more than a vast monument to enduring bureaucracies. The vast changes sweeping our economics and government mean an end to the central role of bureaucracies.

HISTORICALLY, bureaucracies evolved to coordinate and control many individual transactions — Social Security claims, tax payments, property tax payments to the bank, ordering a car at the dealer, children's report cards from school.

But today, when the personal computer, phone modem and voice mail are becoming common, the need for bureaucracies — ravenous, centralized, inflexible — is fast disappearing.



Don't look to Washington for solutions to problems

Philip Power

The vast changes sweeping our economics and government mean an end to the central role of bureaucracies.

While Washington remains captive to its bureaucracies, the real action is in the real world. Examples:

- In Minnesota, a new law lets parents choose their child's school anywhere in the state, eliminating residence requirements and forcing schools to compete.
- Near Miami, Fla., an experiment in "school-basing autonomy" lets 32 schools be managed by teachers and parents, not central school bureaucrats. A similar test is under way in Rochester, N.Y.
- Michigan's State Board of Education is developing a core curriculum — setting out what kids should learn in our schools. But the plan is that school districts will be free to choose how to achieve the defined educational outcomes. (Indeed, Gov. James Blanchard recently called for abolition of the State Board of Education, in part on the ground it is excessively centralized and bureaucratic and unresponsive to parents and teachers.)
- In New York, a company called America Works is paid $5,000 by the state for each welfare recipient placed in a job (average salary: $14,000), but only after the employee has stayed seven months. Taxpayers win: The fee is less than half the $12,000 per year to keep a family of three on welfare.

Everywhere, experiments in decentralizing are cropping up.

I THINK this issue will come to the fore in politics, too.

The start is that the workings of government — especially the federal — have become less and less efficient. Next came the Republican charge that Democrats were apologists for taxing and spending, regardless of results.

Michiganians from both parties are working on new models of how governments might work. Community self-help groups, funded by diversion of local property taxes and managed by networks of personal computers, are being designed.

Certificates of minimum skill attainment are being talked about as a precondition of jobs for youth. Not far off is a rule requiring that those who collect unemployment checks also be enrolled in training programs.

Never has politics been so filled with imagination and experiment. But you would never know it if you lived and worked in Washington.

Phil Power is chairman of the company that owns this newspaper. His award-winning column will appear periodically.

Pedestrian bridges are needed

To the editor:

What will it take to get pedestrian bridges over Ford Road? Another tragic death such as Melissa Chisholm's? Being a lifetime resident of the Ford Road area, I know how dangerous crossing Ford Road can be. One may think that crossing Ford Road at the intersection, like Melissa did, is safer than crossing in the middle of the road, but that is not always true.

The amount of cars that run red lights, turn, stop over the crosswalk and just aren't careful make it almost impossible to cross, especially when the crossing lights flash, "Walk."

Pedestrian bridges would be most effective along Ford Road between Canton Center and Lilley Roads. Most of the major stores and restaurants, including a cinema, are along Ford Road.

Between Canton Center and Lilley, having pedestrian bridges would not only save lives, but they would provide access to more stores and attractions for people without transportation, thus resulting in better business for those attractions.

The downtown Canton area businesses and citizens need pedestrian bridges to keep them on their feet.

Charity game a success

To the editor:

The Plymouth Knights of Columbus wish to thank the people of the city of Plymouth for the support they provided at our charity softball game on June 3.

The number of people that came to our outing with the Detroit Red Wings, as well as the behavior of the fans, is truly an example of the type of people who reside in our city.

The Knights of Columbus are proud to provide and organize activities such as a charity softball game, and are equally proud to report that this event allowed us to collect over $3,000 for Detroit Pediatric Hospice for children with cancer.

The support of the community is extremely important for the success for these activities. We thank the people from the bottom of our hearts.

We also wish to make known that the cooperation we received from the city of Plymouth, the Department of Parks and Recreation and the Department of Public Works was beyond our expectations. The people of Plymouth can be proud of the city officials that watch over the local activities. We could not have done this without them.

Thank you to all.

Let's keep Earth Day spirit going

To the editor:

Earth Day is long gone now and so is some of its spirit.

I think Earth Day is a good way to get many people involved in cleaning up the earth. The only thing wrong with this one day is that when it is over, people just give up and forget what it is meant for.

I think Earth Day should be extended to a week, maybe even a month. It should at least last longer than a day.

Earth Day should be a continuing effort, not a one-day effort.

'Let's start the healing

Jackie Klein

What a shame that once again the mother city got bad publicity, and that many suburbanites are saying, "We told you so. Detroit is a lost cause."

And once again, we are turning our backs on Detroit's problems. Suburban leaders don't want to be painted with the same brush. It's all about "image." The suburbs have an image to defend and Detroit has an image to live down.

MEDIA COVERAGE of Detroit's problems has been condemned as negative sensationalism. New Detroit Inc. has asked for a moratorium on stories about the negative aspects of Motown.

The media is blamed for portraying violence and crime whether it be in Detroit, Southfield or Livonia. Mayor Coleman Young would have preferred all stories focused on the Piston's victory and the fans' celebration.

I would have liked to keep that feeling of pride, elation and "Three cheers for Detroit" enthusiasm that I experienced when the brave Pistons whipped the Trail Brazers.

It's a lot more satisfying to see the world through rose-colored glasses than to face reality. But you can't cover up the facts, no matter how shameful.

YOU CAN'T rationalize that it's the image, the perception of crime that we fear. Violence and crime are harsh realities. We can't begin to fight them if they're swept under the rug in the name of community pride.

Robert Trojanowicz, director of Michigan State University's school of Criminal Justice was quoted as saying, "Detroit is more complex in terms of economics, the political rhetoric, a government that is closed, that is reluctant to openly talk about problems and build bridges and develop solutions.

"The vitality and the people are here to deal with it, but they don't talk about it straightforwardly enough."

Other analysts blamed Friday's violence on desperation on the streets of the city, poverty, alienation, low self-esteem, little hope for the future and pent-up emotion.

They talked about anger in the souls of people hemmed in by perceptions of dead-end lives.

A PSYCHOLOGIST who spoke in Southfield about drug abuse said the same thing about Detroit youths who use and sell dope to make them feel powerful among the haves rather than the have-nots.

I don't know if all these explanations for lawlessness are valid or if they're excuses to take some of the onus off of the celebration that turned into tragedy.

I only know that the spirit of Detroit, its very heart, is sorely damaged. And those of us in the suburbs will have another reason not to go downtown.

Once again, Detroit has lost respect — respect for itself and the respect of others. The city evidently has failed to deal with its own problems.

But it seems to me that all of us in the Detroit metropolitan area are responsible for one another. We share in the glory and the triumphs. But we disassociate ourselves when our parent city is ailing.

It's like letting your own mother or father down when they're sick or in trouble. It's time to stop worrying so much about image and to become part of the healing process Detroit so sorely needs.

Abandoning the city doesn't make us superior. It just makes that invisible line between us more impossible to cross.

'Rambo' has his day

Jack Gladden

"I CAN'T MOW the lawn," I protested. "The mower's broken."

"Trish has two mowers. She says we can borrow one of theirs."

Thanks a lot. It's nice to have friends.

"And be sure you fill it with gasoline before you return it."

"Yeah, yeah."

What does she think I'll fill it with Perrier?

"Do the back yard first so you can set up the croquet set. I promised the girls we'd play croquet when we get back from the movie."

Croquet? KRO-KAY?? With two 6-year-olds? That's my idea of a fun afternoon.

"And don't forget to set up the pool. I promised them they could go in the pool as soon as we get back."

The pool. Right. It's been sitting in the garage since last summer.

"It's dirty. I'll have to clean it up first."

"That's OK. And be sure to start the coals so we can have dinner by 5. Lizzie has to be home by 6."

"Dinner by 5. What are we having?"

"Hamburgers. You're cooking."

HAMBURGERS, DINNER by 5. The pool. Croquet. Back yard first. Better get started.

Sure seems hot. What's the temperature? 85 degrees. And it's only 10:30.

OK. First around the flower beds and the patio. The garage and the swing set. Now, near the raspberry bushes and the pine trees.

Whew! It's hot. 90 degrees. Time for a break.

"Sweetheart! I can't find my sweatband. Can I use a dish towel to wrap around my head?"

"Use whatever you want."

That's better. At least it keeps the sweat out of my eyes and off my glasses. Oh, oh. Here she comes.

Why's she laughing?

She's really cracking up. The dish towel makes a pretty good sweatband. So what's so funny?

"You look like a Civil War casualty. Like something that just walked out of the woods."

"Humph! I thought I looked like Rambo."

Was that a shriek? Yes, that was a shriek. Now she's doubled over. After a few minutes, she wipes the tears out of her eyes and regains her composure.

"Boy, am I tired. I just cleaned the bathroom and scrubbed the floor. In this 90-degree heat."

"95," I corrected her. "I'm impressed."

"Anyway, we're going to the movies now. Don't forget the coals. And the pool."

THE DISH TOWEL isn't working anymore. I'm soaking wet. But the back yard is done. Now, where's that pool?

Oh, sheesh! It's got a hole in it. Better go to Target.

They've got pools on sale, but none like this. What about a "Vinyl Patch Kit for Inflatables"? Yeah, that might work.

It doesn't. The patch keeps coming off and the air keeps whistling out.

Oh, no! They're home. Time to start the coals.

"Where's the croquet set?"

"It's too late to play croquet. We're having dinner soon."

"My pool's got a hole in it!"

"Never mind. Eat your hamburger."

"Can we have more?"

"No. There aren't any more. Besides, you never eat more than one."

"I wanna go in the pool!"

"I'm fixing it. I'm filling it. Just be patient."

"We've got to take Lizzie home. See you later."

OK, gotta get the front yard cut so we can take the lawnmower back to Trish. Whew! Still 90 degrees. Just a couple more passes with the mower. That's it. I'm done. I've had it.

"HI, DAD! We're home." Whispers in the kitchen.

"Well, go ahead. Give it to him."

"What's this?"

"A present."

"For what?"

"For you. Happy Father's Day!"

"Uhhhh, thanks, sweetie. I'd forgotten all about it."

IN A SMALL TOWN IN VERMONT CONCERNED CRAFTSMEN STILL MAKE THE STUFF DREAMS ARE MADE OF

Even though we travel all over the world to bring home the best values and most innovative designs, we're delighted when we find exactly what we've been looking for right in our own backyard. The case in point here, a superbly crafted contemporary bedroom made in a small Vermont factory, solidly built to last not for years—but for generations. The workers start with a solid hardwood inner frame, then they finish each piece with details such as sturdy, generously sized wood drawers that slide smoothly on nylon and steel glides. All pieces are stocked in oak. Most pieces may be ordered in teak or white melamine at slightly higher prices. Our American bedroom. It is the finest we have ever sold.

Book-lovers find bargains galore

By Julie Brown
staff writer

THE WORK of authors ranging from William Shakespeare to Barbara Cartland was available for the asking this past weekend at Tanger Elementary School.

The school doesn't usually house such an extensive selection of literature. The used book sale sponsored by the Plymouth branch, American Association of University Women, brought many book-lovers to the school's gymnasium to do some browsing and buying.

"I think it's going very well, considering that we're in a new place," said Carol Davis of Plymouth Township, an AAUW member who worked on the book sale.

The sale was Friday-Saturday, June 15-16. In previous years, it has been at Westland Center the first weekend in May, but AAUW members weren't able to use that facility this year.

"A lot of people have asked what happened," said Davis, who was in charge of old and rare books for the sale. "That's what it's been for a long time, but not this year."

SHE AND other AAUW members were pleased with the turnout for the two-day event. Some book-lovers were already waiting in line when the sale got under way Friday morning.

"We were really pretty crowded."

Some book dealers were waiting in line first thing Friday. It's customary for book dealers to show up when the sale begins each year, Davis said.

DEALERS WEREN'T the only people who found their way to the sale. Avid readers also showed up. Plymouth resident Sharon Coll has been to previous AAUW book sales at Westland Center, and was glad she came to this year's event.

"There's a huge selection," said Coll, who was looking for some novels to read.

"Anything that's good" is what Coll likes. "Just a good, meaty novel."

AAUW members got some rather detailed requests about books, and did their best to answer those questions. One sale visitor wanted a specific hardcover book about Abraham Lincoln, although that didn't ring a bell with Davis.

BOOKS WERE sorted into categories — including mysteries, literature, cookbooks and children's books — making it easier for book-lovers to find what they wanted. Many sale visitors appreciated that, Davis said.

"We got some really great old and rare (books) this year."

Davis found some Tom Swift books that had been donated for the sale, along with a number of Nancy Drew books written by Carolyn Keene.

Saturday was bargain day at the sale, with book prices reduced. That day, some sale visitors left with bulging bags and boxes full of books.

George Ryan checks out the selection of books at the used book sale. Sale proceeds are used for scholarships and fellowships, including assistance for local women who are returning to school.

IN RECENT years, AAUW members have had a paperback book sale during the Plymouth Fall Festival in September. They plan to have a booth at this year's festival. They're considering having another more extensive sale later this fall at Tanger Elementary School, Davis said.

Sale proceeds are used for scholarships and fellowships, including financial assistance for local women who are returning to school.

New arts council president enjoys getting involved

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Carolyn Simons came to Plymouth 27 years ago and has seen a few changes.

"The downtown area has grown," said Simons, a Plymouth Township resident. "But it's kept its small-town appeal. The outlying areas are there too, but you still have the center.

"I think this community is very strong. It's just been a super place to live and to raise children."

Community involvement has long been a way of life for Simons, who recently became president of the Plymouth Community Arts Council. When she moved to Plymouth in the 1960s, she became involved with the Plymouth Newcomers Club and later with the Western Suburban Junior Woman's Club.

MORE RECENTLY, she's been active with the arts council and the Plymouth Symphony League, the fund-raising arm of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. Simons just finished her term as league president, and had about a week off before assuming the arts council presidency, a one-year commitment.

"I think it's going to be a challenging year with a lot of changes." PCAC leaders are negotiating to lease the Wilcox Mill as a new facility. Those plans haven't been finalized, but council members are looking forward to renovating and moving into a more spacious facility.

The facility will provide more classroom space than the current office on Main in downtown Plymouth, making it possible to offer more classes for students and adults, Simons said. It will put the council's art rental gallery, now housed at the Dunning-Hough Library, under the same roof as other PCAC operations. The facility will also include an exhibit gallery "to afford the public more opportunity to view and enjoy the art."

Simons recently finished a three-year commitment as the arts council's vice president for development. She knows her experience in fund-raising will help. The PCAC received a grant for the new facility, but leaders will also need to seek the support of local people and businesses.

"It's going to be many people working very hard to raise the monies," she said. Simons is looking forward to working with Kay Jaegen, new PCAC executive director.

SIMONS ISN'T an artist, although she enjoys learning about art and making children aware of the art in the world around them.

"I'll leave the drawing to others," she said with a smile.

Simons first became involved when artist Peter Rockwell came to Plymouth for a two-week exhibit at the Snowflake House. She remembers being asked in 1985 if she would help with the reception for Rockwell.

She went on to serve for several years as co-chairwoman of the council's artists and craftsmen show, held during the Plymouth Fall Festival, and will wear that hat again this September.

Simons grew up in Indianapolis and went to Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., earning a bachelor's degree in elementary education. She taught school for several years after graduation.

She took some time off from the profession while her sons were young. Simons later taught in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, including teaching kindergarten and first grade in 1966-67 at the Stone School, a one-room schoolhouse no longer in use.

SHE TAUGHT at the Plymouth Cooperative Nursery School in the mid and late 1970s, and then taught kindergarten, first and second grade for several years at Hulsing Elementary School in Canton.

"I think being a teacher you have to be very organized. One of my assets is that I am organized." Teaching also gave her experience working with people.

Simons has done some substitute teaching over the years, but is now devoting her time to community activities.

She's a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth, and has been a Sunday school teacher, deacon and chairwoman of the deacons. Simons also belongs to the P.E.O., a philanthropic/educational organization.

She recently began volunteering at First Step, an anti-domestic violence agency. She doesn't work with agency clients, but would like to at some point.

She'd encourage more recent arrivals to the area to get involved.

"Try to get involved in the community as much as you feel you can, because it's the way to get to know people."

Vacation visits can help absent father keep in touch

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Since one year of age, Angela Crooks, now 17, has boarded a commercial jet three times a year and traveled from New Hampshire to Michigan for holiday and summer vacations with her father, David Crooks of Livonia.

Aside from weekly phone calls, the visits are their only contact, a father-daughter relationship forged by miles of separation when Angela's mother moved her to New Hampshire shortly after a divorce 16 years ago.

"It's the only fathering I've ever had; I've had no control or involvement in her life other than when she was here," Crooks said of his only child.

The visits have meant personal sacrifice for Crooks, something his daughter may never realize. In 16 years, he has never made vacation plans of his own. They always center on Angela's visits.

Air fare and other costs have been enormous, especially in the beginning when she was too young to fly alone and Crooks had to both collect and return her to New Hampshire.

"It left me no personal time, but I accepted that, and in my opinion, I'm luckier than most," he said. Throughout the years, his support payments have remained low, allowing him to more easily assume huge travel expenses.

In spite of the effort and expense, Crooks said he has made no lasting impression in his daughter's life.

"I'VE HAD NO INFLUENCE, other than maybe in personality or something like that," he said. "There just has not been enough time spent with her."

More frustrating, now that Angela is a teen, she is increasingly reluctant to leave friends, a social life and summer employment in New Hampshire for dutiful visits with a father she knows only slightly.

Based on an 11-year study of disrupted families, done by the University of Pennsylvania, the problem of maintaining contact with an absent father affects millions of children. (Mothers are absent less than 10 percent of the time.) And the problem of on-going paternal contact is compounded when fathers no longer live nearby.

In Crooks' case, his ex-wife decided to move away. Had he legally protested the move under Michigan court rules of 1963, the relationship with his daughter might be decidedly different today. Children of divorce may not be moved out-of-state without judicial permission.

Crooks consented to the move at the advice of legal counsel.

Such advice is not uncommon, according to Birmingham attorney Richard Victor who specializes in family law. Too often, Victor said, attorneys involved in divorce action are poorly informed about domicile rules and once invoked, it is nearly impossible to repeal a ruling once a move occurs.

VICTOR IS presently representing a non-custodial father who is challenging a proposed move to California by his ex-wife, maintaining "the paternal relationship will be irrevocably impaired" by such a move. The child now lives one week in three with his father.

"Divorce is volatile; there are no courses on how to behave," Victor said. To assist in making sound decisions in issues of importance, like residency, Victor co-founded SMILE, a new support group for families in the process of divorce.

During a decade of visits to his father in Virginia, Indiana, Missouri and Texas, Eric Reynolds of Birmingham recalls a single trip, the time his father had remarried. Reynolds' parents divorced when he was 6 years old and his father moved away shortly after.

"I don't remember my feelings but suddenly, I had a second mother," said Reynolds, now a 20-year-old senior at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Visits to his father continued until age 16, when Reynolds decided to "even things out" between his natural parents and live with his father. The arrangement lasted one year. The two have had only occasional contact since.

IN RECALLING the many trips back and forth, Reynolds said it was emotionally draining, years of anxiety and apprehension over impending visits, sadness at leaving either parent and overall, "pretty difficult. I basically felt torn apart."

During the earlier years, "I didn't exactly know what was going on." In later years, his father, short on cash and wanting to see the boy, asked Reynolds to help with the cost of air fare.

"It was very uncomfortable," Reynolds said.

Still, Reynolds is luckier than many. Based on the University of Pennsylvania report, less than half of the 1,000 children in the study maintain regular contact with absent fathers and a quarter have no contact.

"It's a real nice Father's Day gift for me," said a West Bloomfield businessman, anticipating the arrival of two sons from California the following day.

Divorced five years ago, his wife was awarded custody of the boys, now 12 and 15 years old. The following year, she requested judicial approval for a move west with her boyfriend.

The businessman, who asked his name not be used since "the boys have friends and family here," agreed, stipulating certain conditions.

His ex-wife must assist in the cost of round-trip air fare three times annually, an estimated $2,700. She pays 30 percent.

SHE ALSO had to marry the boyfriend by a certain date or return to Michigan, a requirement she accepted and met.

Now facing an age when his 15-year-old might well be reluctant to leave friends and activities in California, the boy "is really charged up about coming home for the summer," according to his father.

During his last visit at Easter, he obtained the promise of summer employment, his first job ever.

"At this age, he needs to spend more time with me," the father said. "There are things he needs to know. Let him mature a little with me."

The relationship contrasts with results of the University of Pennsylvania report.

"When the marriage ends," the report noted, "the paternal bond usually withers within a few years, too."

'I've had no influence, other than maybe in personality or something like that. There just has not been enough time spent with her.'

Airlines help kids handle flying alone

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

One commercial airline pilot refers to it as "mailing children."

A flight attendant said it signals a change in seasons, from spring to summer and then to fall.

Northwest Airlines has given it a name — WorldKid.

They are children ages 5 through 11 years who travel alone, almost always to visit an absent parent who lives far away. (Children under 5 years must be accompanied.)

Beginning this month through August, the airline will transport some 1,000 youngsters daily, unaccompanied minors who last year accounted for 1 percent of Northwest's total passenger load. In 1989, 100,000 children traveled alone.

For some, it will be their first solo voyage. Many others are seasoned travelers. At least half will shed tears, both coming and going.

"I've seen it many times, kids getting mailed back and forth between (disrupted) families," said Steve Cramer of Birmingham, a veteran pilot for an airline that services Detroit's Metropolitan Airport. "For a lot of them, it's not a real happy deal."

In both instances, they leave behind a parent, Cramer added.

ELAINE WARREN of Westland, a flight attendant with a major carrier for 13 years, predicts the change in season by the increase in young children traveling alone. June signals summer vacation has arrived.

Warren said she and others who fly for a living attempt to make the journey as pleasant as possible, consoling children who are upset and occasionally providing babysitting chores when family or guardians are late in meeting the flight.

Northwest WorldKid policy caters to the young set. Children traveling alone are seated first, normally placed forward in the cabin. Parents may board and help them settle in. Flight attendants provide individual briefings on flight procedures.

Northwest also implements chain-of-custody control. At each point of transfer, from parent to gate agent to flight crew and back again, signatures are required of adults-in-charge. The procedure is also available for youngsters 12 years and older at an additional cost of $25.

"I'm never afraid or worry about their safety; the airlines are great," said Toni Masterson of Westland, whose children are experienced flyers.

During the past 10 years, her son and daughter have visited their father in Florida, Illinois and Arizona. This summer, it's Nevada.

Bargain-hunters search for quarry

BARGAIN HUNTERS don't let a little rain stand in their way.

The Thursday, June 14, tent sale at Oakwood Canton Health Center attracted a good-sized crowd of shoppers, and the day's rainfall didn't keep people away.

"People started coming around 8:30 (a.m.)," said Jan Brawn of Canton, chairwoman for the tent sale. "We've sold quite a bit."

The sale was on the grounds at Oakwood's facility on Canton Center Road. Toys, games, children's clothes and household goods were among the things sold, along with craft items and a few antiques.

The weather has rarely cooperated in the number of years the fund-raising sale has taken place.

"We've always had rain," said Brawn, who works in radiology at Oakwood. "Rain or wind, one or the other."

IN THE EARLY years, sales were at the homes of Oakwood volunteers. Over time, the sale's popularity increased and the move to Oakwood became necessary.

"It's unreal, the people that come in the rain," said Lois Rudolph of Canton, who has volunteered at Oakwood since the facility opened in 1981.

Some organizers of this year's sale were concerned about the rain and considered canceling the event, but Rudolph knew the crowds would show up.

Organizers had to set up for the sale in heavy rain. The rented tent provided some protection from the elements, but organizers still ended up getting drenched.

"I was very disappointed, but then that's par for the course," Rudolph said of the rain. "We still manage to raise some money for a worthy cause, so it's worth it."

PROCEEDS FROM this year's sale will be used to buy equipment for Oakwood's "Safe Sitter" program. That program teaches students ages 11-15 how to be responsible baby sitters. Dolls, mannequins for teaching CPR, and videotapes on baby-sitting safety are among the things used.

Items that weren't sold were donated to the local Salvation Army. Baked goods were also sold, and a number of craft tables were set up. Craftspeople donated 20 percent of what they made to Oakwood for the "Safe Sitter" course.

In previous years, the sale has been sponsored by the Volunteer Guild, although this year's event was sponsored by the health care facility.

A number of volunteers helped out at the sale, including Rudolph, Betty Round, Ginny Attwood and Jean Schmidt.

"We even recruit our friends and relatives," Rudolph said.

Oakwood staffers also helped at the sale.

'We've always had rain. Rain or wind, one or the other.'

Quiet time: what we need

moral perspectives

Rev. David Strong

Summer has begun, but I am still doing too much. I look forward to the time when I can stop running and just sit. I call it the switch from "doing" to just "being." But it is a most difficult switch to make.

Maybe this is why so many of us go to a cottage up north. There we can leave the business behind. We can stare out upon nature, hopefully, and just be ourselves. The place that we go has no television and no telephone. We have resisted getting both.

I remember the day that my young son ran home to this cottage to proclaim the fact that it was possible to receive television. He had always thought that we were too far north to get the signal.

We need relief from the pressures of the world, a time for just being instead of doing. Religion plays an important part in this ability to phase in and out of activity. The current word that stands for this quiet, reflective time is meditation.

THIS IS A time of retreat. This is a time for listening to nature and to God. This is a time for presenting ourselves before the creator of all that is. At this moment, we can forget all our roles, our titles, our responsibilities and soak in life.

The Grubb Institute in London, England, tells us that religion has this function of helping us switch from the active to the receptive. This is their theory of oscillation. Religion helps us to make the switch from active to receptive. The traditional name of this is the Sabbath; "and God rested on the seventh day."

During this receptive time, we can just be ourselves. We no longer have to control life. We have left the pressures to organize behind. But, believe me, it is a very difficult switch for most of us to make. The old need to plan and control seems to creep in.

Perhaps we can remind ourselves that vacation time is a particularly good time to soak up love as well as life. Are we not loved for who we are, not because we can produce anything?

THIS MOST important quality in life, love, is only possible when we let down the controls and open ourselves to another. This is essentially true also of life itself, and certainly of God.

Even when we find difficulty in the generations, there may be nothing we can do for parents or children than to love them. Just be there and tell them we love them. This is the essence of life.

Summer may well be the time to learn about our need to do nothing, just be present and receptive. It is a time to receive the gifts that are freely given. There are rare moments when we are open to the gift that may come. This is part of what religion is all about.

The Rev. David T. Strong is pastor of St. Matthew's United Methodist Church in Livonia.

She's enjoyed being involved takes some effort these days. Simons knows that women who work outside the home and have young children don't have a lot of time to spare. She was a single parent for several years and taught school.

"There was no way I could do volunteer work at that time." She'd encourage potential volunteers to get involved in activities that don't require too much time. The arts council also welcomes new members who don't wish to volunteer but want to support the organization.

SIMONS HAS two sons, Kurt Zecman, a business administration student at Michigan State University, and Kris Zecman, who is serving with the U.S. Air Force in Las Vegas, Nev. Kris Zecman and his wife have a daughter, Sara, 1½.

Simons's husband, Robert Simons, works for the Ford Motor Co. She has two stepsons, Ron Simons, an engineer for the city of Los Angeles, and Bill Simons, who works for Ford Motor Credit.

In her free time, Simons enjoys gardening, playing bridge and bowling with her husband.

She enjoyed being home with her children when they were younger, and is proud of what they've achieved. She also enjoyed her involvement in church and club activities during those years.

"That was my time."

Book-lovers find rare treasures lovers through the more than 30 years it has taken place. Many people mark their calendars and make plans to attend each year.

"I think there are book people, and book people will look for books wherever."

'I think it's going very well considering that we're in a new place. We were really pretty crowded.'

— Carol Davis AAUW member

AAUW MEMBERS price and sort books for the sale throughout the year, using a classroom at Tanger for that work. Many donated books they received are dropped off at the association's book box at the Dunning-Hough Library in downtown Plymouth.

Sorting and pricing books means the hard-working volunteers get to see what's available prior to the sale each year. They're allowed to borrow books to read before the sale, and many take that opportunity.

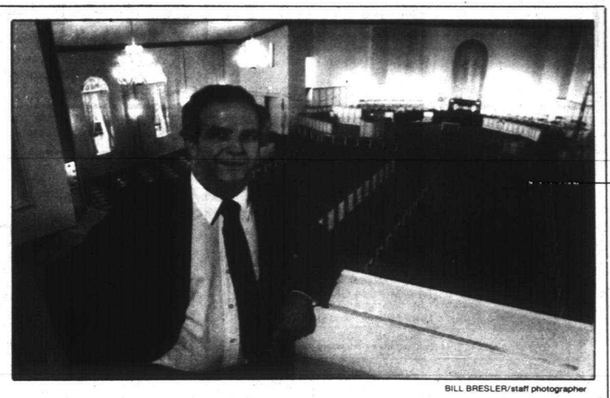
Plymouth pastor heeds God's call

By Julie Brown
staff writer



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

The Rev. David Stewart is the new associate pastor at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth. He worked in government for a number of years before entering the ministry.

The Rev. David Stewart remembers being called to the ministry at age 16.

"The Lord called me to be a pastor. At that time, I didn't want anything to do with it and ran from it."

It wasn't until he was in his mid-30s that Stewart realized the ministry was where he belonged. Stewart, 41, recently became the associate pastor at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth.

He previously served as pastor to three small churches in Peck, Buel and Melvin in Michigan's Thumb area. He took that job following his May 1986 graduation from Asbury Theological Seminary in Wilmore, Ky., where he earned a master of divinity degree.

Serving as pastor at three United Methodist churches took some effort. Stewart traveled from church to church, preaching at Sunday services at each one.

"By the third time, I was really good and really hoarse," he said with a smile.

STEWART'S RESPONSIBILITIES at the Plymouth church will be primarily in youth programs, evangelization and visitation. He'll do some preaching, handle some pastoral care duties, and officiate at funerals and weddings.

His predecessor, the Rev. Douglas McMunn, left to serve at two Methodist churches in the Iron Mountain, Mich., area in the Upper Peninsula.

Stewart brings extensive government experience to his work at the Plymouth church. He worked for 6½ years in regional planning at an agency in the Upper Peninsula's Houghton-Hancock area. He then served for about 6½ years as the controller for Iron County, also in the Upper Peninsula.

Stewart attended Adrian College and earned a bachelor's degree in geography from Eastern Michigan University. He earned a master's degree in urban planning from Wayne State University.

While in his 30s, Stewart began to give serious thought to entering the ministry. He'd recommitted his life to Christ, and found himself in positions of leadership within his church.

"I just began to seek God's will. God called me to it."

RETURNING TO school took some getting used to for Stewart, who grew up in northwest Detroit and graduated from Cooley High School. He was accustomed to a technical writing format he'd acquired working in government, and had to learn to write in an academic style again. Studying Greek and other subjects took time and effort, and his first semester was particularly tough.

"I really relished the experience." His graduate work at Asbury Theological Seminary was demanding yet rewarding.

Stewart and his wife, Ellen, are now making their home in Canton. They have two children, Kirk, 15½, a Centennial Educational Park student, and Elizabeth, 13, a Central Middle School student. Ellen Stewart has taught adult education classes and is currently job-hunting.

"Receiving this appointment's like coming back home," Stewart said. "My mother's prayers were answered."

His parents, John and Esther Stewart, live in Redford Township. His wife also grew up in northwest Detroit and graduated from Cooley High School.

Stewart is just about all settled in at the Plymouth church, having started work June 1. He's enjoying his new home and new responsibilities.

MOVING TO a more urban area has taken a little getting used to for Stewart. He preached his first sermon at the Plymouth church on June 3, talking about Abraham being called to the promised land, "not knowing where he was going yet having faith in God." Modern-day Christians too are challenged to be doing what God wants and to go where God wants them to go.

Stewart's found his work in government helped prepare him for the ministry. He has administrative training and experience working with people. His goals include "just basically expansion of the youth and evangelization programs in the church."

He finds working with young people rewarding. He's found the church is able to help meet their spiritual needs.

"Teens are exceptionally open and searching, especially during the junior high years. Our job is to meet those needs."

Stewart, who's called Dave by most people, enjoys seeing the physical and spiritual healing the church is able to provide. Seeing worshipers grow in their faith is rewarding.

He's hoping to be at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth for at least five years.

"I'm really looking forward to the friendships we'll be making. It seems like a very friendly, loving church."

Many shadows engulf cities

Rev. Lloyd Buss

Architects would be well-advised to consider the effects of shadows in their design of cities.

So writes George Kennan in his encompassing description of St. Petersburg, or Petrograd or Leningrad. He calls it "one of the strangest, loveliest, most terrible and most dramatic of the world's great urban centers."

As a member of the United States Foreign Service, stationed in Russia for most of his career, George Kennan was particularly qualified to write about Leningrad, but it is on his return visit in 1974 that he wrote about the shadows in his "Sketches From a Life."

"It would behoove the architects in far-northern cities to bear in mind that all the effects of their handiwork, beautiful or ugly, hopeful or discouraging, are destined to be lengthened, like the shadows, in a world where the sun, if visible at all, is always at a somewhat lower angle than elsewhere."

SHADOWS CAUSED by the low-lying sun are not the only shadows one experiences in cities.

The writer of the familiar 23rd Psalm was not thinking about cities when he wrote about "the valley of the shadow of death," but the shadow of death is ever present in cities, as well as in all life. Cities live and cities die. Cities are alive and cities are dying. The shadow of death is always there.

There are other shadows that engulf a city. Like the shadow of illiteracy falling from school systems graduating students who can barely read and write.

In a country that requires students to remain in school until they are 16, and prides itself on its post-secondary educational opportunities, the United States still fails to graduate one of every four students starting high school. The shadows of illiteracy hide menacing powers.

THE SHADOWS of poverty are equally devastating.

Per capita income in Detroit, Flint and Pontiac was never higher when the automobile companies were operating at full strength, and the cities showed it. City centers were alive and robust, streets in good repair, housing intact.

The continuing exodus of the automotive industry has created a desolation. City centers are hollow, streets pockmarked and housing dilapidated.

THE SHADOWS of pollution continue to lengthen. One of the gifts of life is potable drinking water, and more than 90 percent of the people in the United States have clean water readily available.

But our pollution of earth, water and air makes it increasing difficult to provide. We, who live in metro Detroit, pipe in our water from Lake Huron. We worry more and more about the contamination of our water.

Racism and sexism are shadows that we had hoped to eliminate, but they grow ever longer.

Detroit, the model city, turns to a violence that uses human life as a mere commodity . . . an object to be exploited. The dignity of human life given to each individual has not been ignored, it has been destroyed in pursuit of things considered more valuable.

AND THE shadows of crime and fear . . . no one escapes their reach. Even the presence of police and security guards cannot calm the inner-most fears generated by the violence that crimes create. The rate of crimes can decrease, but the fear remains. Children who fear for life become adults who fear for life.

Architects, obviously, are not responsible for these shadows. It is the cityscape that shapes and forms the shadows of life. And the cityscape is what you and I create with the lives we live.

The Rev. Lloyd Buss is pastor of the Abiding Presence Lutheran Church in Rochester Hills.

MARGE ALPERN

The downtown area of Katmandu is filled with bustling markets, palaces and temples. Local Nepalese make good use of the day, knowing they must beat the home-by-dark curfew.

This market in downtown Katmandu is always filled with fresh fruits and vegtables from local vendors.

AGING IN

Shangri-La

By Sally Davis
special writer

Shangri-La is a fictional Eden where people never age unless they leave. It's somewhere in the Himalayan Mountains. We were headed for Nepal, at the foot of the Himalayas, perhaps to find eternal youth.

The morning of our departure from Varanasi, India, to Katmandu, Nepal, began with a 6 a.m. visit to the river Ganges. To witness the spiritually uplifting process of prayer and immersion into the holy river at sunrise was rejuvenating for us as well as the devout.

Our boat paddled slowly and silently past people bathing, holy men at prayer along the banks and others who were washing clothes. The cremation ghats (steps) reminded us of our own mortality.

Returning to our hotel, we had a quick breakfast before leaving for our flight to Katmandu. Goodbye to India until our return to Bombay for our flight to the United States.

WHEN WE arrived in Katmandu, we enjoyed the cooler temperatures and the clean and modern airport. Our hotel, in the far suburbs, was luxurious, with lovely grounds, gardens and fountains.

Our tour started with a hasty excursion to the downtown area and the old city, with its market, palaces, temples and Durbar (government) Square.

Trying to beat the home-by-dark curfew, people were stepping at a lively pace throughout downtown.

Returning to the hotel, we had dinner and anticipated the next morning's flight over Mount Everest. This is why we had come: to see the beauty and enormity of the highest mountain in the world.

HOWEVER, OUR anticipation turned to frustration as our tour escort told us the plane might not be flying. He would let us know later in the evening.

"Later in the evening" came, with an ominous message that the flight had been canceled due to a strike by the Royal Nepal Airlines. We were flexible, quoth he, and could take the flight at a later time. A murmur of hope passed among my group.

A new day dawned with the same old message. We were not going to see Mount Everest. Not this trip anyway.

Oh well, on to Tiger Tops in Chitwan National Park, for a safari on elephant-back to photograph elusive tigers and other wildlife. The group brightened.

Our escort had arranged for a bus to drive us there and to wait two days while we explored the jungle and nearby historical sites.

Royal Nepal Airlines was still having difficulties.

ACTUALLY, THE whole Katmandu valley was having difficulties. Political unrest and civil disturbances were escalating to dangerous proportions. Within a short period of time, we were confined to the hotel grounds.

The next day, escorted by a museum guide, we were able to visit the Archeological Museum of Nepal, a 15-minute hike from the hotel. He led us through back alleys and terraced levels to reach the museum.

It wasn't particularly interesting, but it was something to do, since there was no transportation and nowhere else to go, except a Monkey Temple atop a steep hill, an hour's hike in the hot sun.

LATER IN the afternoon, we learned we would not be going to Tiger Tops either. Our dream trip to Nepal had rapidly turned into a nightmare.

We decided that if we had to be stuck, what better place to be stuck in than our hotel? It had everything, including Nepal's only casino. Not to worry.

But we did worry. Hotel personnel knocked on doors, advising guests to close their shutters; there was a blackout. Rumors ran through the hotel lobby.

Unrest was everywhere in Nepal. Putting it simply, the people want a two-party system of government, with the king as a benevolent figurehead.

Early that morning, the king had fired the prime minister. The people's joy quickly turned to anger when he appointed another.

AT LEAST 25,000 people stormed the palace. The military, who were armed with rifles and tear gas, took control. They battled the citizens, who had only sticks and stones for weapons. Roadblocks were set up and the fighting continued.

We were advised the next morning that a daylong curfew was in effect. The curfew would end at 4 p.m. and resume at 6 p.m until 7 a.m. the next morning. Our bags were packed in case a plane got through during the two-hour "window" in the curfew let-up.

No luck. The two-hour window was slammed shut by the government.

THE U.S. EMBASSY'S request for emergency phone numbers and next-of-kin forms from our tour escort was enough to add a few gray hairs.

We heard that planes might get in the next day if the Royal Nepal Airlines didn't go on strike again.

Bumper to bumper on Florida's coast

By Patrick Costello
special writer

When I'm old, I'll move up North and drive real slow.

Juan Ponce de Leon came with Christopher Columbus to this hemisphere almost 500 years ago and in 1510 he became governor of Puerto Rico.

I started with nothing and I still have a piece of it left.

In 1513, he sailed to what is now Florida to seek out the fountain of youth.

When you're perfect, you have to do everything yourself.

Here he was greeted by natives whose people had been living there for more than 3000 years.

As a matter of fact, I do own the road.

The place was a marsh and swampland infested with all kinds of bugs and animals but with such a beautiful abundance of flowers he gave it the Spanish name, Florida. He was injured, went to Cuba to die and is buried in Puerto Rico.

I love humanity, it's people I can't stand.

Today, Florida has changed greatly with people arriving daily by ship, car and plane.

Someday my ship will come in and with my luck, I'll be at the airport.

The swamps are now drained and the orchards are reduced. There are buildings, roads, highways, shopping malls, parking lots, hotels, motels, campgrounds, restaurants, trailer parks, condominiums, amusement parks and cars, cars, cars, along with people, people, people throughout the land, without the abundance of flowers and pleasant aromas.

I don't give a damn how cold it is up North.

Driving in Florida is one continuous line of cars.

If you don't like my driving call 1-800-Cry-Baby.

The slow relaxed pace and lovely little towns has given way to progress and congestion.

Go ahead tailgate, I need the money.

The eating places are plentiful but are typified by the description of one restaurant. The chefs haven't move down there yet.

Every broken heart takes a year off your life.

The Canadians flock to Florida but have to use American dollars to buy; or so the signs say.

A baseball game in Lakeland watching the Toledo Mudhens, a Tiger farm club, was worth the money. Real big time. Some players to watch for in the future are: Rick Sellers, a catcher from Remus; Steve Greene, outfielder who hit two home runs back to back; and LaVell Freeman, an outfielder who made five hits for five.

Let's not meet by accident.

The increased congestion brings on Florida's problems such as where to dump all the rubbish without affecting the water table that is very low because the state is desperate for rain.

This is a speedster. It goes from 0 to 60 mph in 15 minutes.

Patrick Costello

The locals don't get sunburned so you can easily spot the visitors who don't believe when in Roma, do as the Romans. The golf courses are flat and Michigan players find them a snap.

All the towns are big on a St. Patrick's Day parade with over 100 units in the Venice parade. A Georgia visitor said they have over 500,000 attending the parade in Savannah.

I'd rather push a Ford than drive a Honda or Volvo.

Silver hair rinse and walkers are popular. The old-timers know for sure Florida has changed when license plates from states along the east coast start showing up on the Gulf Coast.

I'd rather push a Ford than drive a Toyota or Yugo.

Florida's St. Augustine, founded in 1513 is the oldest city in these United States. That is where the earliest of American history began.

I may be stupid, but I'm ahead of you.

All was progressing between the

Scene One:

It was August in the Caribbean. Day one of a weeklong trip aboard one of those boats where the passengers help to hoist the sails before breakfast and after Pina Colada time.

Two young women from western Canada were stretched out on the deck, broiling in the summer sun. Micky and I wore loose long-sleeved shirts, floppy hats and a quart of sunscreening lotion.

Was it too hot to vacation in the Caribbean? It was our first time in emerald seas, and we didn't know the answer to that one yet.

Scene Two:

Day Three. The young bikini-clad pair were still in their skin but they too were wearing hats, sunglasses and lotion. When we snorkeled in the warm waters off a sand beach, we kept our bodies completely underwater so we wouldn't sizzle. When we startled a giant Manta Ray from its afternoon nap at the bottom of the sea, it waved its fins and we got back into the hot sun like a rocket.

Was it too hot to vacation in the Caribbean, as all our friends had warned us it would be? Summer rates are much lower than winter rates, and we were determined to find out. So far we were sunburned but happy.

Scene Three:

Day Five. We were all broiled. We put-putted ashore to enjoy lunch on the beach of another island and migrated, as we always did, to the warm water sea. Even our two sun-lovers were covered up by this time.

Picture us, floating a few hundred yards from shore, in our bathing suits, sunglasses, floppy hats, handkerchiefs pinned to the back of our hats to keep the sun from our necks, each of us clad in long-sleeved shirts or pyjama tops to protect our tenderized bodies from the sun.

We were an island of laundry and we didn't care a bit until we heard a boat with a band playing "When the Saints Come Marching In." It was the Club Med boat, from the CM village on Paradise Island.

As it neared shore, shining bikini-clad bodies flung themselves into the sea, shortly followed by a large

Air India had ceased service due to the unrest. Planes can't fly in or out without ground crews, which are controlled by Royal Nepal Airlines.

About 10 a.m. the next day, two nine-passenger vans arrived. Our entire group of 16, plus our escort, three people from another group, the driver and luggage, squeezed into our groaning vehicle. We were getting out of Nepal.

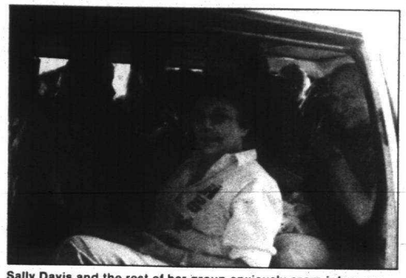
The following day was Constitution Day, the day celebrated when the present king's father had installed the Nepalese Constitution. The dissenters were promising to destroy it and all other legal documents pertaining to the government.

IF WE didn't get out when we did, I don't know when we would have. It was imperative that we and all other foreigners leave the country. Both vans left under police escort. The curfew was in effect, but permits had been issued to vehicles transporting to the airport.

As we drove through, the city was deathly quiet. A few incautious Caucasian young people who opted to stay dared to come out. From vantage points inside of their homes, locals watched our vans pass.

Broken glass all over the streets glittered like polished diamonds. Our driver dodged piles of broken bricks. Remnants of fires blackened the curbsides and gutters.

It seemed to be a ghost town. We couldn't see Durbar Square, where much of the action had taken place.



Sally Davis and the rest of her group anxiously cram into a van for what seems to be their last chance to leave Shangri-La.

Ancient temples and palaces had been smashed and destroyed.

WHEN WE arrived at the airport, we quickly sent two from our group to stand in line for boarding passes. Two planes were supposed to be there; one from Delhi and the other from Bangkok. Neither had arrived. We were to be on the second one. Royal Nepal Airlines has five larger transport planes in its fleet.

We took turns standing in line. A couple of hours later, we were issued boarding passes, which allowed us to go upstairs to the departure lounge.

There was no food or water or pop to quench our thirst. We bought up whatever candy was left from the candy stand, so we would have something to keep us going.

The downstairs area was a sea of incoming foreigners who were trying to leave.

HOURS PASSED. Lunchtime arrived and we put all of our candy out for a "buffet lunch." Miraculously, our tour escort produced a bottle of orange pop for each of us.

About 2 p.m. the snack bar opened. Like fish in a feeding frenzy, people were buying snacks. We crowded around to buy bottled water. Then, magically, huge box lunches appeared for our group. Our escort performed wonders.

About 4 p.m., the plane from Delhi arrived, refueled and left with the first load of passengers. There was hope.

At 5:45, our plane landed. We wouldn't be out of danger until it departed, with us on board. After 8½ hours at the airport, we were ready for takeoff at 6:30 p.m. Amid cheers and applause, we did take off!

The next morning, with a youthful spring to my step, I walked out into the heat and humidity that is Delhi. This was Shangri-La!

Taking it slow on Florida roads new arrivals from Europe and the Florida natives until one day Andrew Jackson rounded up the natives, known as Seminoles, and moved them to Oklahoma. That is, all but 150 who escaped into the swamps.

If you don't like my driving, get off the sidewalk.

This gave the new arrivals a free hand to develop and use the entire peninsula of Florida.

Campaign to save people.

One should note that Florida is surrounded by large and small pieces of land called islands. The French call them "isles" and the Spanish call them "keys."

If you ain't from Austin, Texas, you ain't.

These islands are connected to the mainland by drawbridges. Some by two or three drawbridges. The islands are heavily populated and popular with travellers. So there is a steady to and fro flow of automobiles on the four lane bridges.

I love vacations, paydays and weekends.

When sailboats or yachts wish to travel down the coastal waterway, which the bridges span, the drawbridges are raised and hundreds of cars, on both sides of the drawbridges are stopped with their engines running for 20 minutes or more until the boat has passed and the bridge is lowered. Anyone interested in energy conservation could start at the fuel expended by the hundreds of autos waiting for the bridges to be lowered.

My other car is a Cadillac.

Florida has one of the longest coastlines, no income or inheritance taxes, which prompts out-of-staters to establish a seven month residence there. It even has restaurants which promise "same day delivery" but there is an old saying in the Sunshine State, "Once you have its sand in your sandals, you'll be back."

Old age and treachery will overcome youth and skill.

Summer offers cheap heat in the Caribbean floating tub of rum punch. Soon the sands a few hundred yards away were alive with barely covered flesh. We sank lower and lower into the sea as the beautiful bodies began to dance and sing. By the time they spotted us we were a patch of floating cloth, with only our hats and sun glasses visible above the water line.

"Come on in! Join the party!"

You've heard about people who dream they are walking naked down the street. None of the semi-naked fun-lovers on the beach were the least bit self-conscious. We, on the other hand, were too embarassed to get out of the water with our clothes dripping around us.

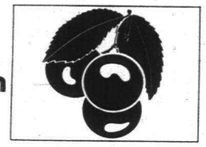
There was a happy ending. They cajoled; we swam closer. Sooner or later we had to stand up, like shipwrecked ghosts, and join them.

After drinking some Club Med rum punch we didn't care what we wore or whether it was too hot to vacation off-season in the Caribbean.

The truth is that the Caribbean is hot year-round and not much hotter in July than it is in January. The reason we go to the Caribbean in winter has nothing to do with the Caribbean. We go because its too cold to stay home, because we want to get away from the snow. We stay home in summer because it's wonderful here in Michigan; why go somewhere hotter? But that is changing.

Joan Brooks of Cruises Only tells me that more and more families are cruising in the summer, that the numbers are getting larger every year. Book now if you want to cruise through the emerald seas in July or August.

Cherries perk up celebration



The National Cherry Festival in Traverse City will offer another eight-day celebration, July 7-14, with nearly 125 activities and events throughout the week.

The National Cherry Festival honors the Michigan cherry industry and the history of the Grand Traverse area.

From fresh-picked sweet cherries to a variety of cherry products, native Michiganians and visitors alike can enjoy the delicious fruit industry and views of Grand Traverse Bay.

The week begins with the festival's Taste of Cherries, featuring unique cuisine from some of the area's restaurateurs. And Cherry Industry Day offers first-hand tours of the cherry orchards.

The festival plans "fun for kids" each day including the Witmark Big Wheel Race, a bike rodeo, pet show, cherry bubble gum blow, turtle races, frog races, cherry pie eating contest and sand sculpturing.

Three parades will be presented throughout the week beginning with the AAA Heritage Parade, then the Junior Royale Parade and finally the Cherry Royale Parade, a grand finale to the week's activities.

Indians educate and entertain

Heritage Day, July 10, midway through the festival salutes our Native American Heritage and looks back in the history of the Grand Traverse region. The American Indian Business Development Consortium will display many arts and crafts of Michigan's Indian tribes.

Hand crafted Indian items and on-site demonstrations of craft making will run throughout the day. Also, several Indian owned businesses from around the state will be in attendance with displays of their commercially made products.

Joining the merchants in celebrating Heritage Day is Four Winds Drum Group, a group of native American singers and dancers. The group has been featured at several festivals and school functions including "The Michigan Folklife Festival" at Michigan State University.

Four Winds' performance includes a mini-Pow-wow, several intertribal dances and a question-and-answer period about culture and religion.

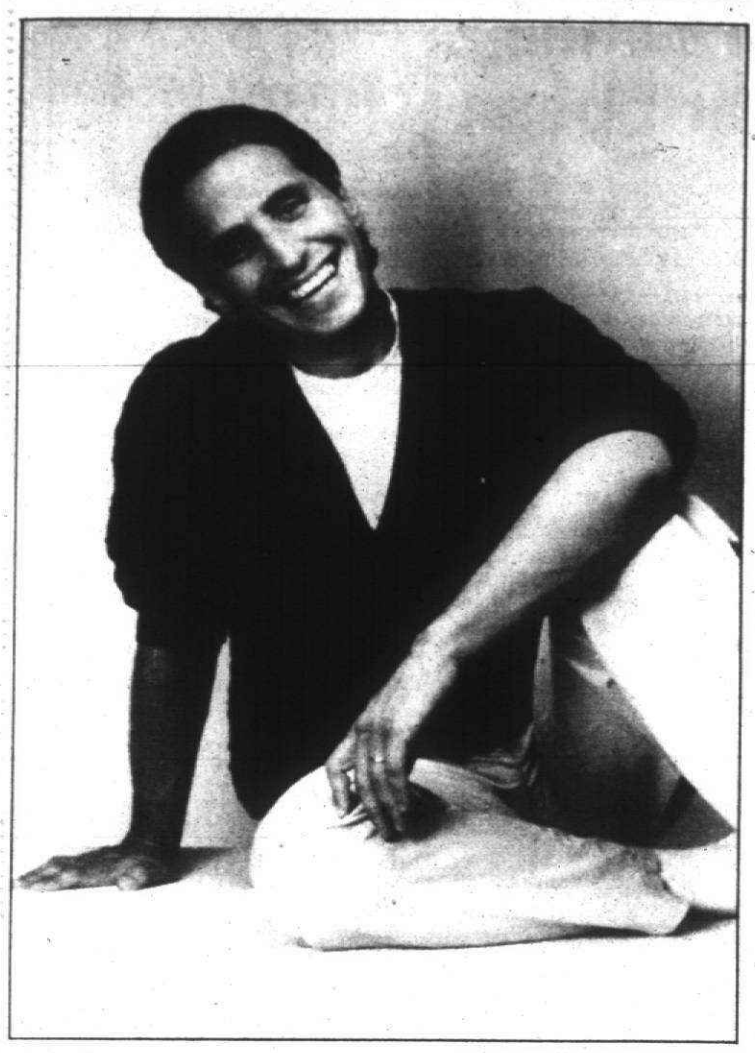
He brings youthful sounds to mall



David Jack, called the "Tiffany of the Toddler Set," will perform at Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi Saturday, June 23.

He's been described as America's answer to Raffi, the well-known Canadian children's performer, and called the "Tiffany of the Toddler Set."

Award-winning children's performer David Jack will bring his brand of upbeat humor and a hip new kind of musical energy to Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 23.

Jack's performance is part of a special Saturday morning series of cultural events for children at the mall during June.

All of the songs Jack performs are original, unusual in the children's field. He composes the music and the lyrics are written by his older sister, Susan Jack Cooper, a former "Captain Kangaroo" staff writer.

Jack's most recent album is "Dance in Your Pants," which he describes as a collection of great new songs for little kids to dance to. And it was the birth of his first child, Benjamin, which inspired Jack's first album, "Don't Wake Up the Baby."

The duo is working on a third album, "Gotta Hop," due out later this year.

Jack comes from a musical family and that has helped with producing the recordings.

Through his Ta-Dum Production company, the family helped in the production and distribution of the first tapes, a collection of lullabies "that would give a child a sense of family," Jack said.

His father, a retired music teacher, played the oboe, his brother Louis the piccolo and Jack supplied the drums, keyboard and vocals. His wife Vicky is educational consultant.

And his mother, also a music teacher, served as a marketing manager, taking the tapes to nursery schools and stores until it was picked up by the Columbia House Record Club and other national distributors.

Jack has since been picked up by Western Publishing and his albums appear on the Golden Music label.

"I find it especially rewarding to bring parents and kids together so both can have a good time," Jack said. "Right now, there's an explosion going on in children's music and I'm happy to be right in the middle of it."

Twelve Oaks is co-sponsoring the Youth Enrichment Series with "All Kids Considered," a family magazine. Twelve Oaks is at I-96 and Novi Road, Novi.

Drug tests in use

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
staff writer

Many Oakland County-based companies have turned to drug-testing and treatment programs to combat drug abuse that affects job performance.

However, their methods and degree of intrusiveness vary. Some companies require everyone they hire to test negative for drugs, while others only test employees who seem to have a problem.

Some companies offer counseling or treatment programs for employees with drug-abuse problems, while others simply fire employees who test positive for illegal drugs.

Electronic Data Systems, an information handling company, requires all new hires to submit to a urinalysis test. However, in general, once an employee is hired, he won't be asked to take another drug test unless there is reason to be suspicious, according to company spokesman Tony Good.

"We're selling expertise," he said. "It's unfair to our customers if anyone working for them is not 100 percent."

SOME EDS EMPLOYEES, however, are subject to unannounced random drug tests. Company officers, security personnel, pilots and airplane mechanics are among the few EDS employees who are tested several times a year, Good said.

"To be doing the kind of things they've got to be doing for EDS, they've got to be sharp."

While he couldn't supply figures, Good said few potential new hires have been disqualified for drugs and few randomly tested employees turn up positive.

Nevertheless, EDS initiated an experimental employee assistance program last August to "help our employees with depression, marital conflicts, alcohol and drug abuse." EDS insurance picks up between 80 and 100 percent of the cost.

Troy-based K mart Corporation tests only employees hired to work at its distribution centers. These people must pass a urinalysis test before they're hired. Further testing can be required if an employee is suspected of illegal drug use.

"There is a greater risk of accident with the heavy equipment used in the distribution centers," said Janet Potter, public communications coordinator. K mart headquarters staff and store employees are not tested.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON Life Insurance Co. of Farmington Hills has a program similar to that at EDS. Since last June, all new hires are tested for illegal drugs. If they fail the test they aren't hired.

In addition, current employees who "definitely have impaired performance" can be forced to submit to a urinalysis and sent to a counseling program, according to company spokesman Jeff Kulesus.

"We don't want to fire people," he said. "We want them to be productive employees. (If we don't help them) they'll just take their problem to the next location." Still, employees who don't submit to the counseling are fired.

Another local company, Charley's Restaurant Group, began a drug testing program in January. Like EDS, the company uses the most accurate, i.e. expensive, urinalysis test available: $90 each.

FAMILY FINANCES

By Alan Ferrara and Dan Boyce
staff writer

Local financial planning experts reviewed the data of the family profiled here and made general recommendations based on the participant's resources and goals. The information is for educational purposes only; references are not intended as discrimination or endorsements by the Observer & Eccentric or the advisers.

To receive a free financial planning brochure or to obtain a questionnaire to have your finances reviewed in this column, contact the Center for Financial Planning, Dept. 100, 26211 Central Park Blvd., Suite 604, Southfield 48076, or call 948-7900.

Little by little, it is important to build a solid financial foundation. Our financial profile this month provides Rob and Shirley Bell of Canton with directions on how to begin building their financial future step by step.

Rob and Shirley are the youngest couple to be profiled in our monthly column. He is 23 and has just completed his first year as a physical education teacher. Shirley is 22 and just graduated from college last month. She will be starting a job soon as an assistant store manager. Their incomes are $21,000 and $15,000 respectively.

Married in December, they are living in an apartment and would like to buy a house within two years and start a family in four to five years. Rob will begin work toward a master's degree in educational administration by taking summer classes.

We applaud and encourage their interest in financial planning at the beginning of their careers. A comment we frequently hear from pre-retirees is that they wish they had started planning years earlier. Shirley's father encouraged them to write to us and pursue the possibility of receiving advice in this column. To their credit, they followed through on his advice.

ONE OF THEIR major strengths is the fact that they will shortly have two incomes. They project they will be able to save almost one-half of Shirley's income when she begins work next month. This will allow them to strengthen their current financial situation.

Right now, they have nothing to fall back on if a major expense unexpectedly materializes. Not only do they have no emergency reserves, but they have not worked at establishing their credit history. This limits their options should a financial emergency arise.

Shirley's extra income should first be directed toward establishing an emergency fund of approximately $3,000 to $5,000 in a bank or money market fund. They also want to pay off a $700 personal loan. This can be easily accomplished when the reserve is in place.

Once those two goals have been achieved, they can start a fund to establish the down payment for a house. They should be able to accumulate that down payment within two to three years.

THEY SHOULD also take steps to establish their credit-worthiness. This could be important when they apply for a mortgage. Also, it gives them an emergency outlet to fall back on if they truly need it.

Actually, although they do not realize it, they do have a short credit history. By virtue that they are paying back their auto loan on a timely basis, they have begun to establish a positive credit record. But they should take steps to broaden their credit history.

For example, at some point during the next year, they may want to buy some relatively small items on credit even though they may have the cash in hand. Paying back this loan on time will strengthen their credit history.

THEY MAY also want to apply for a major credit card. Although Rob has been offered credit cards in the past, they have avoided them for fear they might be taking too many financial obligations.

It is true that credit cards can be abused. By using them improperly, some people become financially strapped or worse. Used prudently, a credit card can be convenient and can help to reinforce a good credit record.

In a way, credit can be compared to alcohol — some people can handle it well in moderation. Others avoid it entirely as a matter of principle, and still others get hooked on it and abuse it until it ruins their lives. Rob and Shirley need to do some self-assessment to decide if they can successfully handle this responsibility.

A MAJOR GAP in their financial situation is their lack of any insurance for their possessions.

They were under the mistaken impression that they had to own a house to obtain such coverage. But there is a form of homeowners insurance specifically designed for renters.

They should contact their insurance agent with whom they have their auto insurance to find out about such coverage. It is relatively inexpensive and would stand them in good stead if they ever need it.

As an additional part of their financial foundation, we would recommend that they create written wills. It is the most important document they need in their current estate planning. When they have children or when their circumstances change, they should review and update their estate plan with an attorney.

Although they both have modest group term life insurance at their places of work, they might want to consider buying some insurance that is personally held. Certainly this should be done when they buy a house. Due to their ages and good health, the premiums would be relatively low.

ALTHOUGH RETIREMENT is far into the future, Rob should give some thought to contributing $75 per pay period into a tax-sheltered annuity (TSA) — this type of retirement plan available to employees of non-profit organizations, such as schools, hospitals and churches. Contributions to this plan are tax-deductible, and they grow on a tax-deferred basis.

With the magic of compounding over the next 40 years, a TSA started now and added to regularly will grow to a significant sum in the future. If necessary, most TSA plans allow the participant to borrow against the plan to pay for a major purchase such as the down payment on a house. Thus the participant has access to this money if needed.

By starting early, Rob and Shirley have a major financial advantage over their peers. If they continue to show the foresight that prompted them to write us, we have no question they they will be successful, both financially and in other aspects of their lives.

Dan Boyce, a certified financial planner at the Center for Financial Planning in Southfield, has been recognized by Money magazine as one of the top financial planners in the nation. Alan Ferrara is a partner in the Farmington Hills law firm of Couzens, Lansky, Fealk, Ellis, Roeder & Lazar.

Banks notify of big cash moves

By Dave Varga
staff writer

Drug dealers and other scofflaws are giving bank tellers more to do than count money.

Tellers are regularly called upon to keep tabs on suspicious customers, including when they come in, what they look like and what they drive.

And it isn't often as obvious as the recent incident at Manufacturer's National Bank in Southfield. There, $65,000 in cash brought in by a law firm from a client to pay his taxes was coated with cocaine.

Federal law requires some basic precautions to keep track of cash-only transactions — all banks must file a Currency Transaction Report describing every cash activity over $10,000, unless a business obtains an exemption.

Most drug dealers, and for that matter anyone trying to "launder" or exchange ill-gotten money, know about that rule, so the banks have gotten smarter.

'Where we suspect anything out of the ordinary, we fill out the report.'

— Bank manager

"A lot of people are aware (of the law) so they deal with $9,000," said Norman Sonnenberg, savings supervisor at Standard Federal Bank, 13 Mile and Lahser.

"WITH OUR institution, any cash transaction in or out of over $5,000 we have to report to our loss prevention department," Sonnenberg said.

Another local bank manager who requested anonymity noted that bank tellers are told to fill out the CTRs whenever they're suspicious.

"Our obligation falls, where we suspect anything out of the ordinary, we fill out the report," she said. Tellers are also told to write memos to alert the corporate office about their suspicions.

Randy Boileau, a spokesman for Comerica, said their tellers "do what's necessary to be in compliance with the spirit of the law."

Last year, Comerica tellers filled out around 27,000 CTRs, with transactions numbering "well into the millions."

Branch offices are often also called upon by corporate security officials to keep an eye out for people who may be under investigation by the police or FBI.

"We'll have to note how often the person comes into the branch, what type of car he drives and how he's dressed," she said.

Sonnenberg said his branch is also frequently notified about what they call "a round robin."

"(IT'S) A MESSAGE of a suspicious customer in an area and they're expecting this to happen," Sonnenberg said. Such a notice, he said, travels from branch to branch.

Several other bank officials refused to discuss the procedures the branches use to keep track of drug dealers or suspicious customers.

Boileau of Comerica said his bank cooperates with police agencies "to the extent we can," but he noted that the bank cannot unilaterally turn records over to the FBI or others due to customer confidentiality requirements.

Drug testing now popular with business

Charley's policy, however, varies from that of EDS in that employees are tested only if they seem to have a problem. As yet, the company has not found reason to test anyone, according to Ken Walter, vice president.

"We will not ask an employee to be tested unless that person has been acting strange," he said. "We're not attempting to invade one's privacy."

Should a Charley's employee test positive for illegal drugs, Walter said, he would be fired immediately.

'We feel (testing of hair) is far better than urine. It's a simple, cost-effective method that is quantitative, gives you historical information, is non-intrusive and convenient.'

— Wayne Carey
Michigan National

TROY-BASED VOLKSWAGEN of America has had a drug testing and treatment program for 13 years, according to company spokeswoman Jennifer Hurshell.

Like Charley's, Volkswagen only tests employees who are suspected of illegal drug use. New hires are not tested. Only if there is "repeated suspicion of a problem" will an employee be tested, Hurshell said.

"Of course, that happens in very, very rare instances."

Volkswagen employees who need help with drug-abuse problems can take advantage of the company's deal with its insurance providers for counseling or treatment.

Michigan National Bank, based in Farmington Hills, began testing all new hires for illegal drugs two years ago. Eschewing the urinalysis, Michigan National tests employees' hair to see if they're high.

"We feel this method of testing is far better than urine," said human resources director Wayne Carey. "It's a simple, cost-effective method that is quantitative, gives you historical information, is non-intrusive and convenient."

Carey said 2.6 percent of potential new hires have been disqualified by the hair analysis over the last two years.

Michigan National Bank, however, does not test employees once hired. For them there is an employee assistance program with which they can get confidential counseling and/or treatment.

SIEMENS BENDIX Auto Electronics of Troy has a similar assistance program and, of course, a drug testing policy. Since October 1988, Siemens has tested all new hires for drugs. If you don't pass, you aren't hired.

"My interest is how we can control the industrial accident rate," said Sam Seabright, Siemens safety manager, who estimated that 60 percent of employees involved in industrial accidents are high. Siemens does not test employees once they are hired, though.

"We have not experienced any substance abuse problems," Seabright said.

Perhaps he's just in the wrong business. Steve Jar, a contractor who did some work for a Farmington Hills restaurant, said experience has taught him that construction workers are some of the most livid drug users in the area.

He tells his employees they might be asked to give a urine sample at any time. But Jar doesn't test for marijuana, which he doesn't consider a problem drug. Although he stays away from illegal drugs now, Jar said he used to smoke marijuana in college and doesn't see anything radically wrong with it.

Jar and his partner have had their personal urinalysis results posted in the office. He said that employees have a right to know their boss is clean if they're also required to submit to a drug test.

Workers staying free of drugs — for the most part

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
staff writer

Many county small business owners and managers say they haven't been plagued with employees high on drugs.

"To be honest, I haven't (had a problem)," said Larry Reynolds, assistant manager of Foland's in Rochester. "If there has been, it hasn't been at the surface. I think I'd be able to tell.

"We've got a good bunch of kids here. As a manager you kind of keep an eye out for it. Unless we've got a bunch of people really pulling the wool over our eyes, I don't think (there's a problem)."

Damman Hardware of Troy manager Paul Amoroso concurred.

"I've been with Dammons for eight years and can't remember one incident of drug related problems," he said. "That would be cause for immediate dismissal."

However, not all local business people are so lucky. Cindie Gade, owner of Aunt Clara's, a Rochester bakery, said she had to fire a female employee last year for suspected drug abuse and theft.

"We had a suspicion (that she was using illegal drugs) because we had money problems," Gade said. "Her behavior patterns were bad. Sometimes in the mornings she looked like she crawled out from under a rock."

'I'm a little more skeptical of people. I'm a little more selective (about who I hire).'

— Cindie Gade
owner of Aunt Clara's bakery

GADE SUSPECTED the employee was in debt for drugs because some people came into the bakery and said she owed them money. Then cash began to disappear from the register, although no one could prove who took it.

"Nobody saw her do anything," Gade said. Altogether, about $450 was missing.

"I'm a little more skeptical of people," Gade said. "I'm a little more selective (about who I hire)."

Some employers said they're confident they could tell if one of their charges was working high.

"With a smaller business, you're pretty much closer in touch with your people," said Dave Daenzer, who has managed Radio Shack stores for eight years. "If there are any changes (in employee behavior), I think I'd pick them up here."

Joanne Spreitzer, manager of Bloomfield Market in Bloomfield Township, hasn't had a problem with drugged employees recently, but past experience has taught her to screen applicants carefully.

Three times since the early 1970s Spreitzer has dealt with employees on illegal drugs. An employee whose parents Spreitzer knew collapsed in front of a pizza oven, apparently overcome by the effect of the drug he was using.

Spreitzer said the young man's parents told her to take him directly to a treatment center.

"He didn't know what was happening until he got there," she said.

As it turned out, the fellow ultimately recovered.

SPREITZER SAID she commiserates with drug-abusing employees, but can't see an alternative to dismissal.

"It's so unfair to have a substance abuser take advantage of those who are giving their employer a good effort," she said. "They had a problem, but they just had to work it out themselves."

Spreitzer's employees have to work around some potentially dangerous equipment like meat slicers, knives and ovens.

"You could literally lose a hand (if you work high)," Spreitzer said. "I suppose down deep in my heart I was thinking of their safety (when I fired them)."

Experience, it is said, is the best teacher, and Spreitzer is a good example.

"I try to screen them as best I can," she said. "I try to look for things that they would cart back and forth (to work) themselves. If it's 90 degrees, why is he wearing a long-sleeve shirt?"

Spreitzer recently noticed a roach clip hanging from a job applicant's rear-view mirror. "I knew right away that wasn't the kid I wanted to hire," she said.

Julie Williamson, manager of the Orchard 14 Soft Cloth Car Wash in Farmington Hills, said "from time to time I've had an employee who had a (drug) problem."

But she doesn't consider that sort of thing a firing offense unless they do drugs on the job.

One employee in particular was "so strung out and not thinking clearly," Williamson said, that she offered him a leave of absence if he would get help. The employee quit, but got into a treatment program and returned to the car wash six months later.

ONE SOMEWHAT flippant Bloomfield Township pharmacist who declined to give her name seemed unconcerned that her employees might be using illegal drugs. "We do have people who abuse drugs here," she said. "Several people come in here that have smoked marijuana and take diet pills."

On the other side of the spectrum, you might find Delores Dabrowski, owner of Video Junction of Rochester. With a chiropractor husband, Dabrowski takes a holistic approach to drugs. She doesn't tolerate them, legal or otherwise.

"This is a pure workplace," she said. "We do not take drugs whether pushed or prescribed. We encourage our employees to take vitamin therapy."

A fervent non-smoker, Dabrowski also maintains a nicotine-free staff. "A smoker wouldn't come here to work because of the attitudes (of my employees)," she said.

While some Oakland County small-business people admit having had an employee with a drug problem, most replied to questioning like Joanne Huston did.

The manager of Thingz of Rochester, an unusual-gift shop, said, "I have never had anybody that's worked for me that had a (drug) problem. We've had a couple that didn't want to come to work now and then, but it wasn't because of drugs."

Banks tell when lots of money is moved

"We are not a law enforcement agency and we can't do law enforcement work," Boileau said.

Talking about internal security measures, such as keeping tabs on customers, would be "counterproductive," Boileau said.

As for the amount of drug money coming into local banks, Sonnenberg noted that at his Southfield branch, "It is difficult to spot because you get a lot of party store money.

"I would have to say, as an opinion, yes we do get more than our fair share (of drug money.)" Sonnenberg said.

On the other hand, the female bank official noted, "You never know for sure. All you can do is speculate. Nobody says, 'This is my drug money.' "

Building hot cars can be fun, even for executives

Dan McCosh

Probably one of the more romantic notions in the auto business is building a hot car in the back of your garage, putting it into production in some small shop and then filling the orders coming from people pounding on your door after you take the world championship at LeMans.

Even boardroom types at the major auto companies aren't immune to the notion. Even before someone borrowed the words "skunk works" from the cartoon Li'l Abner to describe in-house projects presumably unfettered by corporate egos and bottom lines, there were substantial numbers of neat cars put out by people who weren't exactly aiming to make a mint for the stockholders.

Ford's GT-40 program that led to the world championship, for example. Or the original Corvette program, or even the original Continental.

More recently, there was the Fiero and the SVO Mustang which had their brief day in the sun after emerging from so-called skunkworks.

THEN THERE was the Toyota MR2 and the Mazda Miata, both successful sports cars done in corporate-sponsored back-alley operations.

Lessee . . . you might argue Ferrari, Lamborghini, Maserati and maybe even Porsche fall in the category as well.

Now comes Chrysler's Bob Lutz, who has been teasing the press for a half-dozen years or more, even before he got to Chrysler, with back-alley projects that seemed like a great idea at the time.

Lutz' interest goes a bit beyond automobiles. He is, for instance, a former Marine Corps fighter pilot who recently held up a flight of the corporate jet while he was wandering around in an airplane junkyard full of neat stuff like a defunct B-47.

I noticed this because I was looking at the neat old airplanes too, and figured the plane wasn't going to leave as long as Lutz hadn't returned.

Lutz is one of those auto executives who has a passion for fast machinery, which is something you would expect all auto executives would share. Not really, since a genuine interest in the product seems to have the same effect on boards of directors deciding who the next chairman will be as finding large Trump holdings in your portfolio has on people reviewing your Visa application.

But I digress.

It's as the father figure for a new auto skunkworks program where Lutz may yet find his identity.

THE PROGRAM will produce the Viper sports car, a 400 hp, two seater that has a spiritual resemblance to Carroll Shelby's old Cobras. The resemblance is not strictly coincidental, since Shelby was trying to sell a similar concept to Chrysler a few years ago, which was to have resurrected the Cobra mystique and performance (A well-tuned Cobra could do 0-100 mph in under 10 seconds).

The Viper is the brainchild of Chrysler styling as much as anything, being blessed with the kind of looks that provide a visual statement of speed, rather than the esoteric aerodynamic nonsense that plagues most cars today.

The plan is to do a more or less handmade frame, have the engine built up of scrap parts from a truck engine and some work done by an Italian casting firm and then bolt it together at a supplier.

If this seems a little crude, it also seems cheap and do-able. The result is a factory-sponsored car built in someone's garage, which ought to do good things for the company, like fitting neatly into Chrysler's image machine, which is getting a little rusty these days, and lure more dreamers into the showrooms.

Ironically, it is the rough-and-ready approach to getting the car built that makes it likely it will survive more or less as shown to the public on the last round of auto shows, where it stunned the design world while touring as a concept car.

Now Lutz is saying the Viper is harbinger of a new way of building niche cars, hitting a target market in a hurry and all that. It's a good thing to say to make the project sound serious to the board.

Otherwise he seems to be having too much fun.

Long-term care insurance protects you from disaster

Part III

finances and you
Sid Mittra

The recent death of an Alzheimer's patient by using a do-it-yourself suicide kit raises an extremely important question: If I am sick for a long time, who in the world will care for me? I will discuss this issue in detail at a retirement seminar (see details below). Here are some random thoughts on this subject.

Medicare - Not Hardly

Even after Medicare pays its share of health costs, you may still owe large debts to hospitals, physicians and other service providers. For instance, Medicare does not cover the biggest catastrophic cost of all — long-term nursing home care — which averages about $25,000 a year. Nor does it cover the following: (1) private-duty nursing; (2) skilled nursing care beyond 150 days; (3) treatments outside the United States; (4) dental work; (5) most immunizations; (6) cosmetic surgery; (7) routine foot care; (8) eye and hearing exams; and (9) prescription glasses and hearing aids.

The Answer: LTC

The gaps in Medicare can be covered by a long-term care (LTC) insurance. But selecting the right policy can be very complicated. There can be confusing words, exclusions, and differing costs for various coverages to understand. Even more important, long-term care does not refer only to nursing home care. It can be provided in your own home if you need help with activities such as bathing, walking or doing chores.

Here are some grave statistics to demonstrate the need for long-term care insurance. By 2000, more than 8 million Americans aged 65 or older will need some long-term care due to disability or chronic illness. Those aged 85 or older are the most at risk for needing long-term care.

It is also estimated that two out of five people aged 65 or more risk entering a nursing home. Half of them will need to stay about six months or less; and half will need to stay an average of 2.5 years.

A Confusing World

More than 100 companies offer private long-term care insurance today. No policy provides full coverage for all expenses. In addition, any policies do not increase the indemnity amount as the cost of care increases over time. Several newer policies do offer increased benefits over time to allow for increased costs.

LTC coverage also is offered as part of individual life insurance policies. Under this arrangement, a certain percentage of the policy's death benefit is paid for each month the policyholder requires long-term care.

Each policy is priced differently. Today, individual policy annual premiums range anywhere from $250 to $2,500, depending upon several factors.

Some Key Questions

Here are some of the questions you must ask before deciding which policy is the best for you:

- What services are covered?
- How much does the policy pay, and for what?
- Does the policy offer a means for increasing benefits to account for expected future costs? If so, how?
- Is Alzheimer's disease covered?
- How many days is the elimination or deductible period before benefits begin?

Dissatisfied pregnant woman now leases maternity clothing

Mary DiPaolo

Two years ago, Yvette Kotlarczyk was pregnant and dissatisfied with the choices of maternity clothing available to the professional working woman.

"I felt lost in a sea of tent dresses and casual clothes whenever I went shopping," Kotlarczyk said. "And on the rare occasion when I found a suit that was appropriate for work, it was either much too expensive or looked awful on me."

An executive secretary at a Detroit actuarial firm, Kotlarczyk began creating her own designs during her free time.

"I used to enjoy sewing as a hobby, but it quickly lost its appeal. With two teenage daughters and a baby on the way, all I could think about was the time I was forced to spend behind my sewing machine every week."

After the birth of her daughter, Kotlarczyk came across an article in Income Opportunities magazine that changed her life. She read about the owner of a company in Portland, Ore., who was making it big in the maternity leasewear business. Six months and several phone calls later, she made the transition from employee to employer by investing $10,000 to become the exclusive Michigan distributor for ProCreations Maternity Leasewear.

As a distributor, Kotlarczyk days she received all the support and benefits typical of a franchise relationship without any of its limitations. "When customers have suggested new design ideas or service, I've been free to act without needing to call Portland for approval."

In business since November, Kotlarczyk projects sales will be in the high five-figure range by the end of the year.

Targeting a core market of pregnant women between 26 and 40 who earn between $25,000 and $75,000 a year, Kotlarczyk's company leases maternity clothing designed for individual clients on a custom basis. Available in sizes 2 to 24, the clothes have weekly rental fees ranging from $2.75 for blouses to $8.95 for business suits.

Each rented garment may also be replaced, free of charge, if a client grows out of it during the minimum nine-week contract period. Recently, Kotlarczyk added resort clothing, outerwear and formal dresses to the line based on increased demand.

"It takes three weeks to fill custom orders," she said, "but we've had many situations where customers see finished garments that they like and have altered to fit immediately."

Future plans include giving customers the opportunity to buy custom garments or rent formal dresses and resort wear on a short-term basis. "We've also been approached about carrying after-5 accessory items on a rental basis, which we're now working on."

Pick growth mutual fund with good 10-year record

today's investor

Thomas E. O'Hara

of the National Association of Investors Corp.

Q. I would like to invest in a mutual fund, but I am confused by the number and variety of funds available. Have you any suggestions about how to go about choosing the best fund?

A. I think you really have to start with yourself and decide what you are looking for as an investor.

The latest Mutual Fund Fact Book issued by the Investment Company Institute, which is the trade association for the mutual fund industry, says there are 2,918 funds available to the investor. And new ones are being started almost every day.

The first thing you should decide is whether you are a long-term investor or a trader.

Mutual funds are basically long-term investments, and if you aren't planning on holding the fund for a number of years, there is a big question as to whether you should buy it in the first place.

There are funds that allow you to switch from one kind of fund to another as you believe opportunities in the market are shifting. It's hard to find evidence that individuals are any more successful shifting from mutual fund to mutual fund than they are in moving stocks, bonds and money market items directly on their own.

Most individuals who are making a long-term investment in a mutual fund are likely to decide that they want a fund that emphasizes growth to a considerable extent, That, after all, is the reason why most of us invest in stock rather than bonds.

There are a lot of listings where growth funds are separated as a group and their particular objectives are briefly described. You should be able to find some of these in your nearest public library. The Lipper Analytical Services is widely available.

Each year magazines such as Forbes, Money and Business Week have a special issue listing mutual funds by investment objectives and giving their records.

The record is something that you want to give special attention to.The record for the past years is not very important. Often the top-performing funds in one year are far from that position a year later. But the five-year and 10-year record is important.

In short, I would suggest a fund that emphasizes growth. This will give greater value and income as the years go on. Then I would pick from among the five with the best five-year or 1-year record.

In the case of a new fund without a long record, I would be hesitant unless it is being managed by someone with a long-term record.

Thomas O'Hara of Bloomfield Hills welcomes your questions and comments but will answer them only through this column.

How to qualify for emergency subsidized housing on aging

Renee Mahler

Q. I need subsidized housing. I know there is a waiting list for most government housing but I have also heard that there is a separate list for people in emergency situations.

A. There is a serious need for publicly subsidized housing for older adults. Most waiting lists are up to an average of five years waiting time.

There is, however, a Federal Preference Standard and a special list for those who qualify. The qualifications are:

- Your rent is more than 50 percent of your income,
- You now live in sub-standard housing,
- You have been involuntarily displaced by government action,
- You live in an unsafe or unhealthy environment.

You must be able to prove that you fulfill the above requirements. If you meet the above standards, you should inform the rental personnel in the subsidized apartments to which you are applying. The amount of your subsidy will be based on your income and may vary from building to building.

Q. I've recently heard of a computer that will read. I am losing my eyesight and would be very interested in learning more about this machine.

A. I believe the piece of equipment you are referring to is the Xerox/Kurzweil Personal Reader. This reading device converts the printed page into an easily understood synthetic voice. It is excellent for books, magazines and personal documents, but there is a problem with newspapers as the paper is so thin.

The Personal Reader is expensive, selling for $8,000 to $12,000 per unit. It would seem to me, however, that it would be a worthwhile investment for libraries. Low interest financing is available through the American Foundation for the Blind.

For additional information, call, toll free, 800-343-0311, Ext. 231, Monday-Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Q. How do I nominate someone for the Senior Citizen of the Year Award? My next door neighbor, who is 83, helps me almost daily, he takes care of my lawn and keeps my sick husband company when I have to go out. I really think he deserves a prize.

A. Presented each year on Senior Citizens Day at the Michigan State Fair, the Senior Citizen of the Year award recognizes older adults for their commitment, dedication and work for the benefit of their community in either a leadership or service role.

To compete for this award, people must be nominated by an organization, such as a local senior citizen center or Area Agency on Aging, and the nomination must be endorsed by the organization's presiding officer.

Nominations must be submitted on official Senior Citizen of the Year applications. Applications are available from the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging or your nearest Area Agency on Aging.

The deadline to submit applications is July 23. Applications may be requested by calling (517) 373-8230 or (517) 373-4096 (TDD). Completed forms should be sent to the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, P.O. Box 30026, Lansing 48909. All nominees will receive a certificate.

The award is sponsored by the Commission and Office of Services to the Aging and the Michigan State Fair. It is a good way to recognize older adults who go out of their way to serve the aging community.

For further information, contact Wendi Middleton at (517) 373-4070, Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Q. I have heard that there is someone who will make daily telephone calls to homebound elderly. My 87-year-old mother lives in Westland. Is there anyone there who would call to check on her every day?

A. The Wayne County Office on Aging offers Telephone Reassurance to older adults living in Westland, Belleville, Canton Township, Garden City, Inkster, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Romulus, Sumpter Township and Van Buren Township. Daily in-home telephone contact is made. A specific time is arranged for the phone call. If the person cannot be reached at the designated time, a family member or friend is called.

To arrange for the telephone contact, call 467-3450 before noon. This service is limited to homebound seniors only.

Renee Mahler is a gerontologist and the director of communications and admissions at a Rochester Hills nursing facility. Send your questions to her at the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 805 East Maple, Birmingham 48009.

Incumbent won't seek board term

AP — A Detroit man who was one of the subjects of a failed recall effort said he won't seek another eight-year term on Michigan State University's board of trustees.

Malcolm Dade, 59, was appointed by Gov. James Blanchard in 1982. His term expires Dec. 31.

"That will take me past my normal retirement," Dade said. "Maybe I ought to give someone else a chance."

The Democratic incumbent was one of five Michigan State trustees targeted by a recall drive after a board decision in January to appoint football Coach George Perles as athletic director.

Dade voted in favor of the move, despite opposition from President John DiBiaggio. The recall drive ended in May and was unsuccessful.

Dade said the recall played a small part in his decision to retire.

"There's never been an issue in 7 1¼ years on the board that has demanded so much attention," he said. "It's an added stress, but you have to be responsible for the decisions you make."

Dade, vice president of human resources for Detroit Edison Co., said he hopes another black trustee will replace him.

The only other board member whose term expires this year is Democrat Larry Owen, the board chairman. He said he hopes to serve another term.

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.
It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Homer,
Well, you forgot my Birthday again and I don't want another bowling ball. I hope you find a nice Hotel!!

Area family to greet Mandela in L.A.

By Alice Collins
staff writer

When Nelson Mandela's whirlwind North American tour goes to Los Angeles on June 29, the day after his Detroit visit, at least two Southfield residents and a former resident will be there to greet him.

That's because Darlene Donloe, formerly of Southfield and now of Los Angeles, is press coordinator for the Mandela reception committee in that city. And her parents, Freeman and Juanita Donloe of Southfield, will be in California visiting her when he arrives.

"I'm really excited, this is the highlight of my career, it's a real honor," Darlene Donloe said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Mandela's press headquarters in Los Angeles.

"His struggle is important for everyone," she continued. "He's out of jail but he's not yet free. Here in America we have our own form of apartheid. It's called racism and discrimination.

"I RESPECT HIM so much," she said. "Just look at his character. He's released from jail after 27 years. Not once has he spoken any ill will against the people who kept him there. He continued right in step with what he was doing before being jailed."

The pace at the reception committee headquarters is hectic, she said. "The phones have been ringing off the hook all day." Calls are coming in from the media all over the country, Europe and from South Africa.

As press coordinator, Donloe said her group is involved with the logistics of the three sites the deputy president of the African National Congress will visit in that city, with distributing press releases and press kits and various other responsibilities.

DONLOE SAID she has full U.S. State Department clearance and access to Mandela and is looking forward to personally meeting him. "I'm not sure yet if it will be at the airport or later at city hall."

Donloe, who came home from work one evening and found she had been recommended for the job, took a leave of absence to handle it. She's with the program/analysis department of CBS and also is editor of the Los Angeles Community College newsletter.

Donloe moved from Detroit to Southfield with her family in the mid '70s after graduating from MacKenzie High School in Detroit. She received a bachelor's degree in journalism from Michigan State University in 1979, then moved to California.

Freeman Donloe said he and his wife are "very proud" of their daughter and are looking forward to their trip. Freeman Donloe is retired from Chrysler Corp. where he was a quality control supervisor. His wife still works for Chrysler in sales.

Wrestlers meet to help youth program

Professional wrestling returns to the Redford Arena Saturday in a fund-raiser to benefit Redford Assisting Local Youth.

The matches will begin at 8 p.m. and the doors of the air-conditioned ice arena will open at 7 p.m.

General admission tickets are $5 and ringside seats are $7.

All proceeds will help support the youth counseling program operated by RALY and the Redford Youth Center.

THE MAIN event will feature a Michigan Heavyweight Championship and the Great Lakes States Championship unification bout.

Michigan Heavyweight Champ Ricky Cortez of Garden City will bring his 228-pound frame into the ring against the 300-pounds of Iron Mike Wayne of Boston, the Great Lakes states champion.

Cortez has wrestled six world champions and none have ever defeated him. Included in the six are Buddy Rodgers, Lou Thesz, Bruno Sammartino, Killer Kowalski, Don Leo Jonathon and Art Thomas. Cortez, who has never been beaten on TV for 10 years, has beaten the likes of the Sheik, Gorgeous George, Lou Klein, and Leaping Larry Chene.

Also appearing will on the card from Topeka, Kansas, will be the tag team of the Kansas Outlaws who will take on The Flying Tigers of Little Chicago, one of wrestling's most exciting teams, said Tom O'Connor of RALY. The Kansas Outlaws have been virtually unstoppable in recent months, he said, and so "this bout is sure to be a humdinger."

The arena's concessions tand will be open, parking will be free, and there will be enough wrestling action to make Saturday a night to remember, added O'Connor. The show will last about two hours.

GOOD SEATS still are available. Tickets are available at RALY offices in the Redford Community Center, Hemingway at Capitol, at the Redford Ice Arena, 12400 BEecvh Daly, and at other locations in Redford. For information call 937-8118.

In other bouts, Spike O'Toole of Elkhart, Ind., will wrestle Steve Gordon of Pittsburgh, Mid-West Heavyweight champion Big Jim Lancaster from Dayton, will be challenged by Max Klever of Houston.

Lancaster, more than 6-feet tall and 375 pounds, has special advice for his opponents: "Wrestling is not for sissies. If you can't take it, then you'd better get out." His most effective move is the Big Splash.

Malcolm "Heavy Metal" Monroe, 318 pounds from Buffalo, N.Y., will wrestle Billy Curtis of Cincinnati.

The matches are being billed as professional wrestling even though a state lawmaker, Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, has introduced a bill in Lansing to have pro wrestling designated as entertainment. Sidestepping the political issue, O'Connor promises these professional wrestling matches will be entertaining.

McDonald's satisfies neighborhood; gets OK to build

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

McDonald's will build a restaurant at the southeast corner of Joy and Merriman, ending a three-year battle waged by neighborhood residents and developers over the fate of the property.

The fast-food giant won special approval for the restaurant from the Westland City Council Monday. Construction is expected to begin late this year or early in 1991, according to company officials.

A 7-Eleven store has already been approved for the adjacent property.

Residents who have fought previous projects expressed some nagging concerns but said overall they are satisfied with changes in the site plan worked out after a series of meetings with McDonald's representatives.

Councilman Thomas Artley cast the only dissenting vote, citing problems with additional noise, traffic and "perhaps even fumes."

"McDonald's would certainly be a better citizen there than what (was previously) proposed and what is going (directly) on the corner (the 7-Eleven)," Artley said. "But I still don't think (the site plan) addresses homeowners' needs."

BUT OTHER council members praised McDonald's for its cooperation with the city and residents.

Residents on Cooley, which backs up to the property, and other nearby streets have played a vocal role in development of the site.

McDonald's has agreed to increase the height of a wall at the south end of the property from six to seven feet and add a gate to the wall so residents will be able to maintain their yards.

Other barriers have been moved further away from residents' property lines, to create a greenbelt and prevent access for vandals, said Alan Helmkamp, an attorney representing McDonald's.

A corporate spokesman said last week the restaurant would probably be open 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. during the week and until midnight on Fridays and Saturdays. But, he said, if the hours "do become a nuisance to neighbors, certainly we can talk about it and adjust them."

McDonald's will also pay to have a sidewalk installed in front of several homes and has agreed to a "No Left Turn" sign in front of the Merriman entrance for safety reasons.

Wilhelmina Lawson, who has acted as spokeswoman for local residents, said Monday she was pleased "in general" with the changes.

BUT SHE SAID attempts to place commercial projects in the area have resulted in years of "assaults on residents and the integrity of this neighborhood."

She was critical of the adjacent convenience store and said it's late-night patrons would be tempted to "sit and visit" in the McDonald's parking lot when the restaurant was closed.

The 7-Eleven property is owned by Glenn Shaw, who sold a portion of the site to McDonald's for an undisclosed price last January. His efforts to build a strip mall failed when Blockbuster video backed out as the major tenant.

Area residents have been fighting commercial development of the property since 1987 when Burger King announced plans to build a restaurant on the site. That fast-food chain refused to accommodate residents' and city council requests limiting hours of operation.

Please Help A Neighbor's Child In Need!

In Third World countries, hundreds of thousands of children are in desperate need of food, clothing, medical care – the basics of life. These girls and boys are even denied the opportunity to attend school.

They are our neighbors in a world that grows smaller every day.

Through CCF, you can sponsor a neighbor's child. The cost is $18 a month – just 60¢ a day – to help a poor child in Asia, Africa or Latin America – a child who has virtually nothing.

Please pick up your phone now and dial the toll-free number below. Be a good neighbor by helping an innocent child.

TIM NOWICKI

According to a Native American legend, butterflies got their colors after the Great Spirit had created the beautiful mountains, valleys, and streams for people to see.

Color helps nature survive nature

Timothy Nowicki

To a scientist, the colors of animals are adaptive, that is they help the animal to survive. Many animals, such as female birds are brown or grey so that they do not attract predators to the nest. Camouflage coloration is also very effective in insects such as moths.

Coloration other than camouflage is also adaptive in animals. Distinct colors and patterns help individuals distinguish one species from another. Some areas of bright color are only exposed during aggressive encounters. Exposing them all the time would nullify their effect.

There is also some evidence that brighter colors may be an indication of fitness, or health, or the ability to defend a territory. Females that must choose a mate will choose the one with the brightest colors.

Colors of animals are also produced in different ways. Pigments in feathers, fur or skin can produce various hues. Many colors are created by the configuration of the structure. Iridescent colors are formed in this manner.

Though we can give reasons for the many shades of an animal, legends and stories passed down through the ages to explain this phenomenon are just as colorful.

According to a Native American legend, butterflies got their colors after the Great Spirit had created the beautiful mountains, valleys, and streams for people to see. The Great Spirit wanted his people to enjoy nature and to seek it out often, so he created piles of colorful pebbles and hid them in the streambeds so people would have to intentionally look for them.

These pebbles were all the colors of the rainbow, and when he saw how beautiful they were, he decided that they were too beautiful to hide. So he summoned the South Wind to breath life into the brightly colored pebbles. As the South Wind blew, the pebbles began to rise from the stream on colorful wings. These were the first butterflies and moths.

It seems that through the years, men seeking to explain the unknown have developed many explanations to answer the same question.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

Shock Absorbers Receive Punishment From Vacation Loads, Potholes, Bumps

Spring is traditionally a time to perform routine maintenance and get the family car ready for summer driving, especially vacation travel. It's also a good time to carefully examine the effects of winter's potholes on your vehicle's suspension.

Many vacations involve loading the car with the family luggage, sports equipment and perhaps towing a boat or trailer. Good suspension performance is vital to a smooth comfortable ride and an enjoyable trip. Not to mention safe handling, better control, and less tire wear.

It's a common belief that shock absorbers do the most to improve a car's ride quality. While they do make a difference, the primary suspension part affecting ride quality actually is the springs. The springs carry the vehicle's weight, support it when making turns or stopping, and absorb bumps and dips.

The function of the spring becomes more critical as you add more weight to your vehicle. Some shocks, such as air shocks, may help, but they put stress on the shock mounting bolts, which aren't designed to carry weight.

The best place to compensate for the effects of additional loads is the coil springs. There are two options to consider with coil springs: install heavy duty models, or ones with a variable-rate design. Heavy-duty springs will help with the loads, but leave the vehicle with a harsh ride when empty. The variable-rate coil spring design offers the advantage of increasing its resistance as weight is increased, automatically adjusting to the load. The result: a smooth, comfortable ride when loaded or empty.

The variable-rate design coil spring was introduced by Moog Automotive, Inc., a leading producer of steering and suspension parts. Available are applications for both the front and rear where coil springs are used.

Another suspension problem is sagged springs. Springs are the only parts on the vehicle that work 24 hours a day, 365 days a year—always supporting the weight of the vehicle. Over time they can sag—actually lowering the ride height of the vehicle. This affects many other steering and suspension parts and can lead to poor handling, alignment problems and shortened tire life.

To check for sag, have a professional mechanic check your car for proper height. The procedure isn't difficult, but requires a trained expert to accurately measure and determine the condition of your springs.

This is especially important for many of today's front-wheel-drive vehicles. The suspension system used in most is lighter and has fewer parts. Damage caused from sagged springs or excessive bottoming out (when you get a bone jarring jolt from a big bump) can be very expensive.

If components absorb sustained impact, their life will be severely shortened. This is because bottoming out produces an impact absorbed by the upper strut mounts, which can damage their shock absorbing ability. The force of the impact is also transmitted to other suspension parts. A variable-rate spring in the front will seldom bottom out.

Alignment angles are also affected by bottoming out, and accelerated tire wear is the result.

Front-wheel-drive vehicles with severely sagged coil springs can also suffer damage to what are known as CV (constant velocity) joints. These joints deliver power from the transmission to the front wheels and are usually very expensive to replace. Replacing sagged springs by installing variable-rate springs can help prevent this costly damage.

So when you get your car ready for summer driving, don't ignore the suspension system—especially the springs. The advantages of the variable-rate coil spring design will not only restore ride height, but also automatically adjust to varying loads. Whether on the front or rear, they'll resist sagging and bottoming out, and reduce sway and dipping. You'll enjoy better handling and a smoother ride.

VALUE OF SPRINGS—Springs carry a vehicle's weight, support it during turns or stopping and absorb bumps and dips. As weight is added, springs are even more critical. This vehicle would benefit from variable-rate springs.

FLOODED OUT—Splashing through flooded streets is not in the best interest of any automobile. Avoid such streets, if possible, but if you must drive through them, do so slowly, with patience and caution.

Save Your Fun On Water For Ride In Boat

Cars were not intended to be water-borne vehicles, and encounters with flooded streets can only increase the chance of a car malfunction.

During the rainy season, avoid standing water at intersections or elsewhere if possible, particularly if it is above the bottom of the wheel rims. However, if you have no alternative but to drive through, here are some tips to help you safely navigate these water hazards:

Drive through the water very slowly. Rapid movement might cause the water to "swamp" or stall the engine, and perhaps leave you stranded.

If you do stall as you cross a deep puddle, try to coast toward the side of the road and wait for the engine to dry out before trying to start it. Wiping off the spark plugs, wires, and other parts of the ignition system with a dry cloth can help you get moving faster.

Remember that the car's brakes may be affected by driving through standing water, and you should check their stopping ability before an emergency demands their use.

Selecting Correct Summer Sunglasss Can Be Difficult

Sunglasses are an important daytime driving aid yet, with so many types available, it is difficult for drivers to know what to choose.

According to the American Optometric Association, the choice is highly individual. It depends largely on a person's eyes, lifestyle and preferences. There are, however, some general guidelines to follow in selecting sunglasses for driving.

Look for sun lenses that screen out 75 to 90 percent of light; are prefectly matched in color and absorption; and are free of distortion and imperfection.

Good color choices are gray, which does not modify colors, or green. Brown is also okay for most people. Drivers should avoid medium and dark blue tinted lenses, which can seriously interfere with some people's ability to distinguish the colors of traffic signals.

Polarizing lenses can be a good choice for drivers, particularly those who are on the road a lot, because they are effective in combating reflected glare. An anti-reflection coating applied to the back of sun lenses also is helpful in preventing light from reflecting into the eyes.

Light-sensitive or photochromic lenses, which darken and lighten with the amount of available light, may not get dark enough inside a car for some drivers. This is because windshields can block the rays needed to trigger the darkening process.

LIVONIA STEVENSON'S 2-1 victory over Rochester Adams in the Class A championship girls soccer game returned the title to where most Observerland fans believe it belongs: In the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Last year, Troy Athens clipped Northville 1-0 in the title game and upset a six-year streak in which a WLAA team had won the state championship. But thanks to Stevenson's victory, the coveted crown is back where it belongs in the center of the hottest soccer area of the state.

With the abundance of talent in Obsererland, selecting an All-Area team is no easy task. But a panel of area coaches finally agreed on an all-star cast that would make a concrete winner out of even the losingest coach.

The players on the 1990 All-Area team combined for 132 goals and 90 assists this season, led by Farmington's Carrie Maier, recipient of the Miss Soccer Award. Five other members of the team earned All-State recognition and three received All-State honorable mention.

The following teams are represented on the All-Area squad:

- Stevenson, which survived possibly the state's most competitive district tournament and eventually won the Class A title despite finishing fifth in the WLAA.
- Farmington Hills Mercy, which won district and regional championships and advanced to the state semifinals.
- Farmington, which won the WLAA title and was ranked No. 1 in Class A most of the year before falling to Mercy (1-0) in the district final via a sudden-death shootout.
- Plymouth Canton, a district champion and regional finalist which held the No. 1 ranking late in the season.
- Plymouth Salem, which was ranked in the state throughout the year but fell to Canton for the third straight year in the district tournament.
- Livonia Churchill, which was ranked No. 1 at the start of the season and finished second to Farmington in the WLAA.
- Livonia Franklin, which was defeated by Livonia Churchill in the district tournament at Northville, which Stevenson won.

Six of the 11 members of the All-Area first team are underclassmen and will return to action next spring. Michele Minton, Jenny Russell, Amy Trunk, Carrie Maier, Ragen Coyne, Margaret Martin and Sue Gibson are first-team repeaters.

Henry Klimes, in his second year at the helm of the Mercy program, guided the Marlins to the state semis and was selected Coach of the Year.

The Marlins were Catholic League runners-up to Birmingham Marian and finished the season with a 13-2-4 overall record. But they caught fire in the state tournament, beating then top-ranked Farmington in the district final, and avenging their loss to Marian in the regional final.

The following is a brief profile of each member of the first team:

Dairy King reaps early Mantle wins

baseball

Plymouth Dairy King has won five of its first seven games and leads the closed division of the Little Caesars Baseball Federation's Mickey Mantle League.

Dairy King's latest game resulted in only its second loss, but it came outside the division. Dearborn Heights, an open team in the LCBF, won 9-4 Saturday.

Dairy King led 4-1 in the sixth inning of that game but saw Dearborn Heights tie 4-4 and score five runs in the seventh.

In its previous game on Thursday, Dairy King raised its division record to 5-1 with a 6-4 victory over Dearborn.

Dan Conrad was the winning pitcher in relief, holding the line on Dearborn's 4-1 lead and enabled Dairy King to rally for the win. Conrad limited the opponent to two hits and three walks over the final two innings.

TODD PNIEWSKI went 3-for-3 and had the game-winning hit in the seventh. Marc Pennebaker's bases-clearing double tied the score at 4-4. Brian Tiell added two hits, and Pniewski and Tiell had one RBI each.

Dairy King suffered a late-inning letdown on June 11 when Northville scored three unearned runs in the sixth inning, erased a 6-4 deficit and defeated Dairy King 7-6.

Frank Learned, who pitched in relief, was the loser. Chris Johnson was 3-for-3 with two RBI.

Dairy King had won its first four games, including a 5-1 defeat of Redford Union on June 7 and a double-header sweep of New Boston Huron on June 9.

Conrad went the distance against RU, allowing only three hits and no walks. He struck out four.

Pennebaker's two hits included a double, and Johnson and Learned drove in two runs apiece. RU's lone run came on a home run by Brian Theis.

IN THE FIRST New Boston contest, Michael Stafford pitched a three-hit, complete game as Dairy King routed Huron 15-1. He struck out seven and walked one.

Jon Paupore had two hits, including a bases-loaded triple that gave Dairy King a 7-0 advantage, and four RBI. Brad Paskievitch also had two hits, and Learned, Eric Cunningham and Ben Hendricks knocked in two runs each.

Dairy King eked out a 3-2 victory in the nightcap as Craig Benedict also pitched a complete game. Huron had six hits and five walks in seven innings but only two runs off Benedict, who fanned four.

Johnson produced the game-winning hit, and Paskievitch was 2-for-2 with two RBI.

Dairy King plays host to Dearborn Heights No. 7 tonight at 6:30 and is on the road Saturday at Highland. Home games are played at Plymouth Canton High School.

Salem edges Highland

Plymouth Salem won its second straight Mickey Mantle baseball game without a loss Saturday with a 5-4 victory over host Highland.

Jeff Belisle scattered five hits over five innings for the victory, which took less than two hours to complete at Milford High School.

Chris Tomas pitched two scoreless, hitless innings in relief. He didn't walk any while fanning one.

Belisle, who struck out five and walked four, also had two of Salem's six hits, including a solo home run, and two RBI.

Craiger win streak hits 5

Scott Bright and Tom Davey contributed RBI singles, and Aaron Rumberger knocked in another run with a fielder's choice.

CRAIGER EXTENDED its unbeaten streak in Babe Ruth baseball to five with two victories over Grosse Pointe Farms last weekend.

Craiger jumped ahead of the Indians with 12 first-inning runs and coasted to a 22-12 win. Mike Setlock and Josh Wiegand led the 17-hit attack with three apiece.

The second game was a pitchers battle which Craiger won 2-1 over the Tigers. Dave Kapla knocked in the winning run with a two-strike, suicide squeeze in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Despite Ryan Niemiec's 5-for-7 performance that include two doubles, Twist 'N Shake lost two games in the other double-header Sunday.

Rangers claim rights to goalie

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

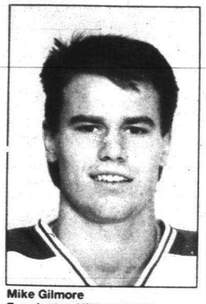
Mike Gilmore hadn't thought much about playing professional hockey until Friday.

The Farmington Hills resident went to Michigan State as a walk-on goalkeeper, worked his way up from third string and is currently the backup to Jason Muzzatti.

But Gilmore's long-term prospects got a shot-in-the-arm last week when the New York Rangers selected him 18th overall in the NHL supplemental draft.

Gilmore, who appeared in 12 games for the Central Collegiate Hockey Association champion Spartans, expects to remain at MSU for the time being, however.

"They more or less drafted me to get the rights," said Gilmore, a 1986 graduate of Redford Catholic Central and former Compuware Junior A player.



Mike Gilmore
Farmington Hills resident

I TALKED TO one of their scouts (Dave McNabb), and he told me they liked my development so far and are eager to see what happens next year. He said they've been watching me the last couple years and believe I'll develop some more down the road."

Gilmore, who was redshirted his first year, is a junior academically with two years of eligibility remaining. Muzzatti will be a senior next season, and Gilmore appears to be the heir apparent the following year.

"I've got one more year left on my undergraduate, and I'll take graduate courses my last year of hockey," he said. "I want to get my undergraduate out of the way before I decide to do anything NHL wise."

"I don't want to count anything out (after next season), but I'm probably looking at playing the next two years here. Education is pretty important."

Gilmore, who made the all-CCHA academic team with a 3.5 grade point average in engineering, puts school first.

"That's what my parents sent me to college for, not to be an NHL player," he said, "although maybe that will happen."

LIKE ALL aspiring athletes, having that opportunity would be a dream come true for Gilmore, who won 11 straight games before dropping a 3-2 decision to Lake Superior State in the final regular season game. Gilmore, who earned a partial scholarship, had a 2.71 goals-against average last season.

"I always hoped some day I'd have a shot at it," he said. "Now that they've drafted me, that changes things a bit — that maybe after college is over I might play in the farm system.

"(Being drafted) told me some people were actually interested in my ability. It's nice to know people at that level have some interest in me."

Pat's place: Pitt

Penguins select former CC player

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

There's no denying Pat Neaton his place, at least for the next three years — a place which happens to be cold and slick, full of bumps and bruises and hard work.

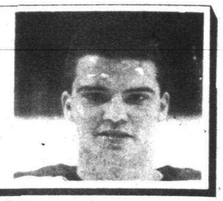
Neaton, from Redford, is currently a member of the University of Michigan hockey team. He was a big reason the Wolverines enjoyed one of their finest seasons ever in 1989-90; a freshman defenseman, Neaton collected three goals and 23 assists in 42 games, the second-best scoring totals among U-M blueliners.

The Wolverines' 24-12-6 record attracted some attention. So did their players in last Saturday's National Hockey League draft. Six were drafted: five freshmen and one freshman-to-be.

Neaton was one of the draftees. He was picked by the Pittsburgh Penguins in the seventh round. His teammate and roommate, freshman defenseman Chris Tamer from Dearborn Heights (Crestwood), was also chosen by Pittsburgh, in the fourth round.

'If you're picked in the middle rounds, you have to work like crazy to make it. If you can play, it doesn't matter what round you're drafted in.'

— Pat Neaton
former CC player



NEITHER WILL be playing pro soon, however. That's not the way the NHL operates. Pittsburgh will retain both players' pro rights. The Penguins could sign them now, but why? The thinking is to let them develop at the collegiate level, then sign them after they graduate.

Which suits Neaton fine. The former Redford Catholic Central student (he left CC after his junior year and graduated from Toronto's DeLaSalle prep school) has plenty of plans between now and then.

For instance: Neaton is currently at St. Cloud (Minn.) University attending a hockey camp that will help determine which U.S.-born players go where, as part of national teams.

"Making a college team and making the Olympic team and getting drafted, those are all goals everyone has when they're young," said Neaton, recalling his childhood ambitions. "They're always out there."

BUT, IN Neaton's mind, first things first. He has work to do between now and his pro debut. "My size and stuff (6-foot, 180 pounds), I have to work out hard. Plus, my education has always been a goal I had.

"I definitely want to get my degree, and I'll work hard at hockey. Then, whatever happens with hockey, I'll have my degree."

His selection in the seventh round neither surprised nor disappointed him. "It was expected," Neaton said. "I figured I'd go in the middle rounds somewhere.

"If you're picked in the middle rounds, you have to work like crazy to make it."

But, as Neaton added: "If you can play, it doesn't matter what round you're drafted in."

While his size may be a drawback, his talent is not. An offensive-minded defenseman, one of Neaton's strong points is his ability to move the puck quickly up the ice. He was the quarterback on U-M's power play much of last season, quite a responsibility for a freshman.

"The coach (Red Berenson) showed a lot of confidence in me, putting me in there," said Neaton. "That helped a lot."

NEATON WAS teamed with David Harlock, another freshman, on defense. The twosome were U-M's second defensive unit, which meant the freshmen were often on the ice in pressure situations. Harlock was also drafted, by the New Jersey Devils in the second round.

When the camp at St. Cloud University ends this week, Neaton will be on his way back to Ann Arbor, where he and Tamer will continue to work out as Neaton tries to bulk up. On July 5, it will be back on the road, this time to the 10-day Olympic Festival training camp.

Hockey has become a year-round activity for Neaton. But he doesn't mind. "It's fun. It's something I enjoy, but it does fill my time. My freshman year, everything just flew by. It was over before I knew it."

And before he knows it, he'll be signing a pro contract with Pittsburgh after his senior year as U-M. How well Neaton performs — both for the Wolverines and other national teams — in the next three years will determine the amount of that contract.

Russell, Minton represent CEP teams

ALL-AREA FIRST TEAM

Renee Larabell, junior, Mercy, goalkeeper: In just her second year of varsity competition, Larabell compiled an impressive 14-2-4 personal record which included seven shutouts — one each in the district and regional finals. She owns a career .924 save percentage and a career 1.21 goals-against average. Larabell earned All-State honorable mention and was selected to the All-Catholic first team.

"Renee had an outstanding season," Mercy coach Henry Klimes said. "Without Renee playing her best in the district and regional finals, we wouldn't have advanced to the semifinals. She has great hands and the talent to be one of the best keepers in the state."

Michele Minton, senior, Salem, forward: With 17 goals and 17 assists this season, Minton pushed her career totals to 78 goals and 35 assists.

Minton is a two-time, first-team, All-State selection. She earned all-conference honors in the WLAA.

"She was a co-MVP this year and one of our tri-captains," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "She was a team leader on the field. She is very fast and has developed into a terrific scorer."

Jenny Russell, senior, Canton, forward: A four-year starter for the Chiefs, Russell compiled 57 goals and 33 assists during her high school career at Canton including 19 goals and 10 assists this year.

She received Class A first team All-State honors in both her junior and senior years. Russell, an All-American last year, will attend Kalamazoo College in the fall. She was also an all-conference selection in the WLAA.

"Jenny Russell is a true team leader and not only on game day," Canton coach Don Smith said. "She's the first to practice and the last to leave. Jenny gives 147 percent of herself not only in sports, but in her school work as well, where she holds a 3.8 grade-point-average."

Amy Trunk, senior, Farmington, forward: Trunk totaled 73 goals and 53 assists during her four-year career, finishing this season with 13 goals and 13 assists. She earned all-conference, all-county and all-state honorable mention honors.

"Amy has an extremely high work ethic and has dedicated a lot of her time to her high school soccer career," Farmington coach Cathy Cole said. "Because of her hard work she has developed into one of the state's best team players."

Carrie Maier, senior, Farmington, halfback: Maier finished her career with a flair, scoring 21 goals and assisting on seven this season. She improved her career totals to 87 goals and 36 assists. Maier was Farmington's co-MVP, earned all-conference, all-county and all-state honors.

"Carrie is a very skilled soccer player," Cole said. "She has the ability to deny a player the ball, then generate a highly offensive attack. She will be a fine asset to (the University of) Wisconsin's program."

Ragen Coyne, sophomore, Stevenson, halfback: Coyne was instrumental in leading the Spartans to the Class A title by scoring 16 goals and passing for 13 assists. He two-year totals are 20 goals and 38 assists.

Coyne is a two-time, all-state, first-team representative, a member of the Junior Olympic Development national team and the under-17 All-America team. She has been playing soccer for 10 years and has been a member of the state and region champion Michigan Hawks.

"Ragen has excellent ball skills and is at an excellent fitness level," Stevenson coach Mary Kay Boots said. "She is able to run the center of the field the entire game and turn it up a notch near the end of the game.

"Ragen was one of our co-captains and she displays a tremendous desire to win. She has extreme quickness with the ball, which enhances her ability to take on players and threaten opponent's defense."

Patty Shea, sophomore, Franklin, halfback: Shea scored 12 goals and finished with eight assists for the Patriots this spring and earned an All-State honorable mention. Shea earned all-conference honors in the WLAA and graces the All-Area first team for the first time.

"Patty was a co-captain for Franklin this year," Franklin coach Joe Galea said. "She is very aggressive on the field and is a very hard worker. She doesn't back down from anyone, has good ball control and a tremendous shot."

Margaret Martin, senior, Farmington, defender: The captain of the Farmington team, Martin capped her high school career with 17 goals and 13 assists this season, giving her career totals of 68 goals and a school record 63 assists.

She earned all-county and all-conference honors and was selected to the Class A second team. Martin plans to continue her career at Michigan State.

"Margaret is one of the state's best play makers," Cole said. "She has the ability to win the ball, then set up a teammate for a quality shot. She is also a very good field general because she has the ability to see and anticipate play."

Stephanie Speen, junior, Churchill, defender: With one year of varsity eligibility remaining, Speen should be a leader for the Chargers next year after winning the team MVP award this season. She earned all-WLAA honors and was selected to the Class A second team.

"Stephanie has great speed and reads the play well," Churchill coach Nick O'Shea said.

Lori Godlewski, junior, Stevenson, defender: The junior sweeper scored 17 goals and finished the season with nine assists, boosting her career totals to 22 goals and 11 assists.

She earned All-Lakes Division (WLAA) honors and is featured on the All-Area squad for the first time.

"We moved Lori to the sweeper position at the start of the playoffs to strengthen our defense," Boots said. "Although she loves to play forward, she accepted the move to benefit the team. Lori's play on defense added another dimension to our team, which was a major factor in us moving through the playoffs.

"Lori handles pressure well and remains composed in the defensive third of the field. She is able to carry the ball out and initiate our offensive attack. She has tremendous speed and vision and also holds a 3.4 grade-point average."

Sue Gibson, sophomore, Farmington, defender: Gibson scored nine goals and had eight assists as a defender this year, increasing her two-year varsity totals to 16 goals and 18 assists.

She returns to the All-Area first team for the second straight year, earned all-county honors and all-Lakes Division honors in the WLAA.

"Sue is a talented athlete," Cole said. "She is powerful, quick and can carry the ball well. She is an intelligent player in her sweeper position. Our defensive back line had a combined effort of nine shutouts and only eight goals against. She, along with her defensive counterparts, was largely responsible for those two fine statistics. She will be a player to watch in the next two years."

Bass fishing tourney is blast

The Bass Blastoff is a catch-and-release tournament and has been held on Cass Lake for the last five years.

PLASTIC WORMS seemed to be the bait of choice, at least as far as the fish were concerned, in Saturday's Bass Blastoff, held on West Bloomfield's Cass Lake.

When questioned about the type of bait used, members of the top four teams each mentioned plastic worms. Gitzits and spinner bait were also mentioned, but the unanimous choice was the plastic worm — dark colors were preferred.

Twenty-one two-man teams registered for the tournament and reeled in a total of 58 fish.

The Bass Blastoff is a catch-and-release tournament and has been held on Cass Lake for the last five years. It is cosponsored by Metro Bass Anglers and the Walled Lake Community Education program.

Brothers Joe and Mike Durand, of Farmington Hills and Union Lake respectively, earned big fish honors for a lunker 2.7-pound largemouth. Mike actually caught the fish — on a K&P purple worm — in about eight feet of water over a weed bed on the edge of a drop off. He won the "big fish pool" of $84.

"This is actually the second tournament we've fished, because we fished this same tournament two years ago," explained Joe. "That was the only other time we fished the lake so we were fishing just on luck.

"We fish this tournament because it's not too big and its close to home. We both love fishing. We do it just for fun. We never expect to win."

The Durands finished the tournament in seventh place with five legal bass that tipped the scale at 4 pounds.

RALPH BLASEY, of Pinckney, and Whitmore Lake's William Jones won the tournament with seven fish for a hefty 2.7-pound largemouth. Mike actually caught the fish — on a K&P purple worm — in about eight feet of water over a weed bed on the edge of a drop off. He won the "big fish pool" of $84.

"Basically, this year's tournament was about the same as last year's except the fish were a little bigger last year," admitted tournament director Jim Arnold. "We had 21 boats and that's right about where we want to be. We want to keep it to a maximum of 25 boats. The tournament is designed for fun — get together with your buddy and go fishing. There aren't any big prizes or cash awards. It's just a fun way to spend the day."

Rockers schedule rally during Spree

Soccer enthusiasts can help welcome Detroit's newest professional soccer franchise, the Detroit Rockers of the American Indoor Soccer Association, at a "Rocker Rally," 2 p.m. Saturday at the Ford Field Bandstand as part of Livonia's Spree celebration.

Rockers team owners and players will be introduced at the rally, which is sponsored by the Livonia Jaycees and Livonia Paragon Soccer.

Among the dignitaries scheduled to appear are Major Indoor Soccer League All-Star and former Detroit Express All-Star Andy Chapman, and Drago, the MVP of January's American Indoor Soccer Association's All-Star game against the Soviet team, played at Detroit's Joe Louis Arena.

Drago, born in 1960 in Zagrelo, Yugoslavia, played for five years in the rival Major Indoor Soccer League before joining the AISA last year as a member of the Hershey Impact. While in the MISL, Drago scored 166 goals and dished off 96 assists. Last year he led the league in scoring and set a record for the number of points in one season at 167.

CHAPMAN, born in 1959 in London, England, played 10 seasons in the MISL and scored 339 goals and 185 assists. He also played on the 1982 American Soccer League champion Detroit Express and led the league in scoring that year with 23 goals.

Various area soccer teams will also be honored at the rally including the Livonia Wolves '76, national boys indoor champs; the Livonia Hawks under-19, women's national champs; the Livonia Stevenson girls Class A state high school champs; the Livonia Paragon, state men's indoor champs 1990; and the Redford Marauders, men's national and regional champs.

Free Rocker pictures, autographs and souvenirs will be handed out to the first 500 fans, as well as season tickets, soccer balls and Rocker warm-ups to be raffled off.

Admission is free, and the rally will be held at the Ford Field bandstand (weather permitting), or at nearby Edgar Arena.

Duffy's on LCBL roll

baseball

Duffy's Plumbing won three games last weekend to improve its Livonia Collegiate Baseball League record to 7-3-1.

The team swept a double-header from Total Travel Values on Sunday, 11-4 and 13-5, after beating Tom Holzer Ford 6-1 on Friday.

Todd Fracassi and Mike Siwajek had six hits apiece to lead Duffy's, which amassed 27 hits in the twinbill Sunday. Siwajek also racked up six RBI and Fracassi three.

In the first game, in which Duffy's outhit Total Travel 17-9, Fracassi went 4-for-4 with one RBI, and Siwajek was 3-for-5 with an inside-the-park home run and three RBI.

Brett Haywood, Lee Tappy and Rob Puckett chipped in two hits apiece. Tappy and Puckett had solo RBI and, along with Fracassi and Siwajek, scored two runs each.

DAVID JONES pitched three innings for the victory, leaving with an 11-4 lead. Bill Wicker worked the last four.

Rob MacDonald and Mike Mackie had two hits apiece for Total Travel. Rick Rachner collected three RBI. Losing pitcher Fred Higgins surrendered 11 runs (eight earned) on 11 hits in 2⅔ innings.

The nightcap included a three-hit, three-RBI performance by Siwajek. Fracassi and Bill Flohr supported with two hits each. Fracassi also had two RBI, and Puckett scored three runs.

Haywood, the winning pitcher, started and left after three innings with an 8-3 lead after Duffy's scored its first eight runs in the opening inning. John Scheska finished the game, which was shortened to six innings because of a time limit.

Craig Murray was the losing pitcher, allowing eight runs on six hits and three walks in two-thirds of an inning. Overall, Duffy's took advantage of nine walks and three errors from Total Travel, a new team in the LCBL.

"We're discovering the league is very competitive," Total Travel coach Rich Rachner said. "We haven't been able to overcome that one bad inning in every game."

JACK HERBERHOLZ went 3-for-3, and Fred Higgins and Mike Julian had two hits apiece for the losers. All three players had one RBI.

Duffy's started the weekend by beating Holzer Ford as pitcher Doug McGregor turned in six innings to earn the victory. Tappy hit a two-run single, and Lee Shymanski, Steve Michelz and Matt Scalf contributed one RBI apiece.

The Duffy's-Little Caesars game on June 13 was suspended, with the teams tied 5-5, after eight innings because of the time limit.

Scheska had pitched the last six innings for Duffy's and was still on the mound, having allowed only one run.

Kevin Adams hit a two-run homer for Duffy's. He and teammates Siwajek and Michelz had two hits apiece, and Andy Weighill, Joe Brusseau and Bill Bertera did likewise for Caesars.

Total Travel was a 9-3 loser to Ann Arbor Wendy's in its previous game.

Losing pitcher Darren Clark went four innings and walked six at Washtenaw Community College. Tom Kutcher went the distance for Wendy's, which had only four hits but benefited from nine walks.

"We haven't put together all phases of our game," Rachner said. "We're just going to keep at it. We're a better team than we've shown."

Higgins had two of Total Travel's five hits, and Jason Lichtman's double was the only extra-base hit.

Concealed topples Trenton

baseball

The first three innings were all Farmington Concealed Security needed to knock the Trenton Travelers from the ranks of the unbeaten Thursday.

Concealed Security ravaged the Travelers for 11 runs in that span and rolled to an 11-5 victory in a Little Caesars Connie Mack baseball game at Capitol Park.

Trenton (now 2-1) opened the scoring with a two-run homer by John Torok in the top of the first inning.

Farmington (2-0) answered with four runs in the bottom half of the inning, a rally that included run-scoring singles by Paul Pirronello (from Farmington and Redford Catholic Central) and Shannon Deagan.

Concealed Security had a 5-2 lead after two innings, then exploded for six runs in the third.

Deagan had a two-run double in the inning. He finished with two hits and three runs batted in. Pirronello had two hits and two RBI. Joe Brusseau, a sophomore-to-be at Madonna College (from Redford Bishop Borgess), had two hits and an RBI.

Louie McKaig was the winning pitcher. He went the distance, allowing five runs on eight hits and three walks, striking out eight.

ON TUESDAY, Concealed Security outslugged Ann Arbor 17-6 at Capitol Park. A nine-run outburst in the bottom of the second allowed the Farmington team to overcome a 5-0 deficit.

Dan Lezotte (Redford Union) paced the attack by going 3-for-3, including two home runs: a solo shot in the second that followed a two-run homer by Jason Gabel (Livonia Churchill), and a two-run blast in the fourth. Lezotte also scored four times.

Deagan contributed two hits and three RBI to the offense, while Keith Bozyk (CC) and Shondell Currie had two hits and two RBI apiece.

Brusseau and Pirronello added two hits and an RBI each. Pirronello stole three bases and Currie had two steals.

Mike Grahl was the winning pitcher, going all six innings (the game was called at that point because of darkness), surrendering three earned runs on eight hits and four walks and fanning nine. Rob Clem was the loser for Ann Arbor (now 1-2).

Family Night

New series for kids, grown-ups

By Carolyn Barnett-Goldstein
special writer

THIS IS A FAMILY music alert! Finally, there's an evening concert series for the entire family.

The Meadow Brook Music Festival will present the first of three Family Night series concerts, "Serious Fun with the DSO," with David Daniels conducting the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 11, at Baldwin Pavilion on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills.

Second concert in the series is the "New Vaudeville Night," starring Fred Garbo and the Wright Bros., with juggling, acrobatics and clowning, Wednesday, July 25. The family series concludes with "Santa's Summertime Stage," on Thursday, Aug. 16. It features Thanksgiving Parade floats four months early, plus marching bands and drum and bugle corps. As promised, Santa will make an early appearance.

Gregg Bloomfield, managing director of the music festival, places so much importance on instituting the family series he decided to open it by engaging the DSO and "giving up one of its pops concert series to do this."

HE EXPLAINS the festival also is recognizing and considering the existence of single-parent families. "What we are attempting to do with this whole family night series is to make it possible for single parents, as well as other parents, to come together with children of all ages," he says.

Admission prices reflect the sincerity of the festival's intentions, along with the desire to expose classical music to more people, to younger audiences. Pavilion seats are $7.50 and $10; no lawn seating is available.

Bloomfield says, "Where is the audience going to come from in regard to orchestral music," in the future, if the public doesn't hear the music? "Well, maybe it's high time we did something for young people."

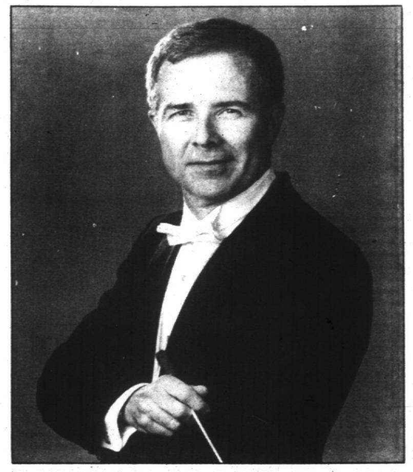
The series is not to be confused with the (daytime) children's series concerts. It differs in its evening performance, in its age recommendation of 7 and up, and in its musical programming to appeal to all ages.

The opening family concert also is billed as a behind-the-scenes look at classical music. Bloomfield says, "The audience will see what goes into preparing one of these pieces, and what went on with the composers when they were working. It will see how different parts (of a piece) came together. It didn't just always exist. Somebody had to put it together." This applies to the performance as well as a composition.

MAESTRO DANIELS, a professor of conducting in the graduate school at Oakland University, programmed the concert with this in mind. "We tried to put together pieces that are fun to play and to listen to. I will speak to the audience directly, and there will be musical excerpts played by the orchestra, along with the discussion," he says. Daniels also previews the selections.

The concert opens with British composer Benjamin Britten's "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra," which certainly is "not exclusively for young people," Daniels says. It is for everyone.

Based on a timeless and memorable theme by another British composer, Henry Purcell (1659-1695), it is written on several levels and gives a range of the technical and expressive capabilities of the instruments of the four families of the orchestra (woodwind, strings, brass and percussion). Written for orchestra and narrator, it is to be presented in its entirety.



David Daniels conducts the first Family Night concert, with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, on Wednesday, July 11, at the Meadow Brook Music Festival.

Next is an excerpt called "Hungarian March" from "The Damnation of Faust" by Fresh composer Hector Berlióz. It is the first of eight sketches in which Berlioz locates Faust in Hungary. He is observing the Hungarian army marching across the plain while he is in deep though.

The piece was written in one night in Vienna. Berlioz based the march — originally a composition unto itself — on a Hungarian air, the Rakoczy theme, later including it in "Faust." Listen for the soft trumpet fanfare as it opens. Like Britten's piece, it uses a fugue form as it builds to a climax, or crescendo. At its debut in Hungary in 1846, the audience went wild.

THE WILLIAM TELL Overture by the Italian composer Rossini will immediately be recognized as the "Lone Ranger" theme. Daniels says, "It's a great overture with imaginative orchestration." He reveals this is one of the first orchestral pieces he heard.

The theme of Russian composer Mussorgsky's opera "Khovanshchina," from which the next piece "Persian Dances" is excerpted, remains of current interest today. It is one of an epic tragedy of a country fighting to render itself free from its past. While it is a medieval past from which it is wrenching itself, and the main characters fight between themselves, challenging the young Czar Peter, the people of Russia suffer.

Prince Khovansky signals his Persian slave girls to dance. "It starts out slow and languorous and then becomes kind of wild toward the end," Daniels says.

This opera was left uncompleted. Rimsky-Korsakov, a contemporary of Mussorgsky, finished and orechestrated it. Korsakov also taught Stravinsky, the Russian composer whose "Infernal Dance" from "The Firebird" follows. Consequently, Daniels says, "There are two Russian dances representing two generations of Russian composers."

Similarly, the "Grand March" from Verdi's opera "Aida" demonstrates Berlioz's influence on Verdi in its expansive orchestration. "Aida" is considered as having something for everyone.

NEXT IS BIZET'S "Carillon" from his piece "L'Arlesienne," written for a stage work. Listen for the horns as the piece begins. They sound like bells. Then the flutes come in with the strings. The horns' theme returns as the end of the piece recapitulates its opening. Moviegoers may know this French composer's opera "Carmen."

Next piece is from Hungarian composer Bela Bartok's "Hungarian Sketches." The sketch to be performed depicts a "slightly tipsy" peasant.

The concert concludes with a 60-second piece. While cute and clever are not usually coupled to describe a musical composition, these words do illustrate American composer Paul White's "Mosquito Dance" from his "Five Miniatures." The instruments of the orchestra imitate the sound of a mosquito buzzing for a minute around and around until a slapstick is heard, and the music ends.

Daniels hopes "there will be something to capture everybody's imagination. When I was a kid, I grew up in this little town, and I never saw a real orchestra until I was in my teens. It's great to be in a place where there is a great symphony orchestra like the Detroit Symphony right here and, for that matter, community orchestras, and on TV. I envy kids today, I must say."

His first introduction to symphony orchestras was the old 78 RPM record. "I was a teenager with a disposable income when LP's were coming in," he says. "And when they came in, the 78 records went on sale. I remember saving my allowance and buying the 'Rite of Spring' (by Stravinsky). It was a famous piece. I'd read about it, but I'd never heard it. It was so exciting to finally hear it at last. It was really an exciting time. I had an older brother in college, and he began bring home records. He introduced me to so much."

TO HEAR a concert, Daniels' mother would take him to Rochester, N.Y., when he was in high school. Yet his most vivid memories are in junior high school when the got "the fever." Eventually, he acquired his bachelor degree at Oberlin, his master's degree from Boston University and his doctorate in conducting at the University of Iowa.

He came to Oakland University in 1969. For the last 15 years he has been conductor of the Warren Symphony Orchestra. He also is music director of the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony.

Fox Centre

Tres Vite, modern cafe that is the joint endeavor of Chef Jimmy Schmidt and Little Caesars President Michael Ilitch, has opened in the Fox Centre Building in downtown Detroit. The interior design combines custom woodwork, Italian lighting and an exposed kitchen. Photo blow-ups from the Paris restaurant scene of the '50s are hung on the walls. There is furniture crafted by Michigan artisans and Memphis Collection chairs. Menu at the casual, moderately priced eatery (average $6 for lunch, $14 for dinners) features grilled entrees, homemade breads, pasta and desserts, with an emphasis on seasonal ingredients.

Shore dinner

A shore dinner will be presented at the special monthly dinner at 7 p.m. Monday-Tuesday at the Lark in West Bloomfield. The menu includes codfish beignets, clams casino, oysters provencal, soft-shelled crab with sherry cream sauce (or a choice of clam and leek soup), champagne and cranberry sorbet cocktail, roast Maine lobster, lemon mousse in a pecan shell, coffee or tea and a bonbon, for $67.50 per person. Servers in white dinner jackets and long white aprons present the new menu, which is highlighted by 11 grill selections and eight house specialties. The grill's club-like setting includes mahogany woodwork, 18th and 19th century artworks and a marble fireplace. The Grill Luncheon Buffet, for executives on the go, continues this summer.

Executive Chef Max Weeks has introduced a summer menu at the Ritz-Carlton, Dearborn. Dinner choices include Atlantic Red Snapper with Fennel in a Saffron Broth, Beef Tenderloin Medallions with Corn and Asparagus Relish with a Port Wine Sauce and Baked Cornish Hen with a Bean and Spinach Cassoulet in a Rosemary and Thyme Glaze. Drama powerfully interpreted Performances of the Jewish Ensemble Theatre production of "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground" continue through Sunday, July 1, at the Jewish Community Center in West Bloomfield. For ticket information call the box office at 788-2900.

Roosevelt T. Johnson (left), David Fox and Stacie Passon appear in Jewish Ensemble Theatre production of "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground."

As its title suggests, "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground" is not the most conventional of dramas. As skillfully presented by the Jewish Ensemble Theatre, this little-known play by William Hanley is powerful, puzzling and thought-provoking.

Set in a small Brooklyn candy store in 1962, on the same day that Adolf Eichmann was hung for war crimes, the drama explores guilt and the universal need for love and acceptance. Circumstances bring three very disparate characters together for some soul-searching.

Glas (David Fox), a non-Jewish German who purports to have been a political prisoner in a concentration camp, now leads a quiet existence as the owner of the store. Randall (Roosevelt T. Johnson) is a very strange black teen who comes bounding into the store late at night, clearly hiding from the law. In Act I the pair does a slow dance, circling each other with accusations and hostility.

The first act ends with the sudden arrival of Rosie (Stacie Passon), a young woman who got lost on her way to an abortionist and faints as soon as she reaches the store. In the remainder of the play, Rosie will serve as the catalyst that brings Glas and Randall to confess their truths and reach new understanding while both try to convince her to forget the abortion.

Barbara Michals

ALL THREE performers are excellent, but Johnson's role is clearly the most demanding. Super-charged with energy most of the time, Randall is a manic-depressive who occasionally runs out of gas and changes his whole persona. Incongruously dressd in dark glasses, top hat and short flowing cape, Randall all but swings from the light fixtures as he nervously hops around the small store. He mixes mispronounced big words with an exaggerated street-hip style of speech, his delivery at times as staccato as machine-gun fire.

Occasionally one glimpses the other Randall, a ghetto victim who thinks his brilliant mind and educated speech make him a freak in the beartless "killing ground" of his world.

Fox is thoroughly convincing as the morose, antisocial Glas who has shut himself away from the world and internalized all his anger. Passon is likewise very believable as the plain-looking Rosie, low in self-esteem but compassionate to others' pain.

Director Evelyn Orbach does a fine job orchestrating the trio of actors to react from each other. Pacing is smooth throughout. There is nothing "slow" about the production, despite its title and sparse physical action.

Melinda Pacha's set design for the seedy candy store is wonderful. One can almost see the dust stirring when Glas inventories the shelves, and feel the compactness of the world in which he has enclosed himself.

Barbara Michals teaches high school English in Southfield. A theater critic for the last 16 years, she is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

Polio changed conductor's musical focus

By Carolyn Barnett-Goldstein
special writer

James De Preist, guest conductor with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at Meadow Brook Festival this evening and Sunday, works from a sitting position for a valid reason.

In 1962 when he was 26 years old, he went to Bangkok as conductor on a State Department tour and returned a changed person. "I had met (Leonard) Bernstein before I left and he said the tour would be good because in the course of the tour I would be able to do all the things I could do and find the one thing I couldn't do without. And that was true.

"I contracted polio on the tour, but I had no frame of reference of doing any serious conducting before I had polio. So the career with polio began at the same time. The polio was irrelevant as far as I was concerned. It helped me focus, certainly, during the time when I was in the rehabilitation center."

Both of this week's guest soloists, pianist Garrick Ohlsson (Thursday) and violinist Itzak Perlman (Sunday) are two of his "oldest friends."

De Preist said, "Itzak is important to me for a variety of reasons. He was one of the first artists I worked with and I was standing up conducting in Stockholm and he (also afflicted with polio) said, 'What are you standing up for?' and I had no real answer. So from that point I sat down to conduct and it was freeing. Because when I was standing I had to worry if a gesture I would make would throw me off balance. So, I owe Itzak that.

"Garrick and I are just sort of like hand and glove. I know what he's going to do. He knows what I am going to do."

WHAT STOOD OUT in conversation with De Preist is his enthusiasm for life and for his music. A Phildelphia native, he came from a home where music was "just a natural part. There was singing, piano lessons . . . and we listened to the Metropolitan Opera and Toncanini broadcasts."

He said his family were all musical, but only his aunt, internationally known contralto, Marian Anderson, pursued a musical career. Once he was a teenager, she gave him scores and recordings of symphonies, which gave him "a daily opportunity" to listen.

He remembered receiving Schubert's C Major Symphony ("The Great") and the "Unfinished" Symphony." "Schubert was obviously important to her," he said. Then she presented him with the scores of Beethoven's Second, Fourth and Sixth symphonies which he still carries around with him. He described her influence as essentially "subliminal."

James De Preist

He said while his aunt, at 93, no longer performs, "We just have fun together . . . and share experiences of places and people." He had just been to a meeting at WETA-TV about a documentary on his aunt whom he visited before coming here.

LIKE THE DETROIT Symphony Orchestra and its audiences, the late Antal Dorati, conductor of the DSO in the late 70s, has a special place in De Preist's life. They met when Dorati judged the Metropoulos International Conducting Competition in 1964 in which De Preist took first place.

"In the midst of the euphoria . . . and dinner at 21," Dorati pulled me aside and said, 'You know, I want you to realize there will be careers that will go along faster and careers that will be flashier . . . you must keep focused on the music-making and let the career take care of itself'."

De Preist served as assistant conductor under Dorati at the National Symphopny Orchestra. He said Dorati didn't "bury" him. "I had the opportunity to do real repertoire, and do it in New York. Yeah, I owed him a great deal. I owe a lot of people a lot," he said.

De Preist is carrying on that tradition in Oregon where he is principal conductor of the Oregon Symphony through his orchestra's program for assistant conductors. He said,". . . let the people conduct and, if you can be helpful, help them say what they want to say, not what you would do if you were there."

De Preist said he had originally planned to be a lawyer and he graduated with a degree in economics from the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce. While he was studying composition with Vincent Persichetti at Phildelphia Conservatory of Music he majored in film at the Annenberg School of Communications.

Aviva Robinson talks about how the paper-making process is a new and exciting form of art for her.

Artist finds new medium

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

Think of Aviva Robinson's art and you think painstaking precision made more accessible by a fine, often subtle, sense of color. Control, above all control.

Well, a funny thing happened on the way to the studio. From all the paper cutting she did to create those precise sculptural forms, all that careful, exacting work, she developed the modern bugaboo of wrist muscle repetition, carpel tunnel syndrome.

One operation later, doubtless followed by warnings about never picking up a pair of scissors again, she's still making excellent art. Instead of cutting paper, she's making it and for what some viewers might think she loses in precision, she gains in emotion.

In truth, it's quite amazing how Robinson has taken to-paper making, turning this, like her paper cutting, into a sculptural form and adopted her eye and skill with color to the new medium.

"I took two-paper making workshops a year and a half ago . . . but, it was six months before I got something I liked," she said as she stood by some of the pieces in her first show of this new work at Robert Kidd Gallery of Birmingham.

SHE TAKES OVER at the point where she buys the pulp. She speaks with great enthusiasm about pouring the pulp, the vacuuming process and watching it take shape over the forms she places underneath and on top to get the dimensional forms in the paper.

"I've never had so much fun before," she said. "I'd been working so technically for so many years, this quick result is a high. It takes about 20 minutes." That of course, doesn't include the coloring, the drawing, painting and sometimes incising which she does on these works.

She is elated with the results she has gotten and her satisfactions with her art at this moment. Like any fine artist in any field, she has been a professional long enough to know immediately what she wants it to do and how it should look. The fun of paper making is the surprise and delight of pulling off the covering after it has formed and seeing what happened.

THE LOOSENESS WHICH COMES with this medium is also a welcome change for her. There is a level of happenstance in it that was never there previously and that makes for a freer style and looser approach that suits her well. It's a more laid back kind of art. She still does the geometric fans and bands of graded color, but these are a part of the work rather than the sum total.

After she told her story about the problem, the operation and the challenge of a new medium, she said, "It's fun to come out of it with something like this.

Robert Kidd Gallery, 107 Townsend, Birmingham, is open 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday.

This vertical piece in warm golds and reds,"Done/Dun," is the largest one of its kind Aviva Robinson has made.

Garden walk to benefit renovation project

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

If you're going to tiptoe through the tulips with the Friends for the Development of Greenmead next week, they have just one request — be a pal and don't wear high heels.

The organization, which raises money for the Livonia city-owned historical park, is sponsoring a Garden Walk on Saturday, June 30. It has lined up seven private homes for public strolling, and the various gardens at Greenmead will also be part of the tour.

The show will go on rain or shine, said Theresa Jaye, chairperson of the walk. So she has been telling people to dress in accordance with the day's weather.

And the tender ground can act like quicksand when poked by high heels, especially after it rains.

"Wear comfortable, flat walking shoes," she suggested. Besides protecting the volunteers' gardens, it will serve well the feet of the garden walkers, who have a lot ground available to cover.

Maps of the garden locations will available at Greenmead the day of the walk. The homes will be numbered, but there is no order in which they must be visited.

"Instead of everybody going from number one to number two, with all congestion at one house, we are letting them go at their own pace, whereever they want to go," Jaye said.

Some of the gardens on the tour are professionally landscaped; others are done by the homeowner, Jaye said. And some of the homeowners will be on hand to give guided tours.

One home features a rock garden and more than 100 varieties of dwarf trees. It also has 40 varieties of lilies and nearly that many types of hostas.

A garden in Rosedale features a backyard hot tub with a privacy wall surrounded by pyramid junipers and globular yews. There are rare shades of impatiens in the yard, and all the flowers and shrubs are watered by a computerized sprinkling system.

One of the backyards has a creek over which there is a rustic bridge. The flowers include several varieties of lilies, veronica, margurites, evening primrose, oriental poppies and lavender.

The gardens at Greenmead are maintained by volunteers. They are near the Hill House, which was built in 1841 and is on the National Register of Historic Places. The Hill House Museum will also be open during the garden tour.

Tickets for the event are $4 in advance or $5 on the day of the walk. Proceeds will go toward the renovation of the Alexander Blue House. The Italianate-style farmhouse, which is more than 130 years old, was moved to Greenmead from another Livonia location about three years ago. Jaye said it will cost almost $200,000 to restore the place.

Tickets can be purchased at Greenmead, in all Livonia libraries and on the fifth floor of Livonia City Hall. Greenmead is at Eight Mile and Newburg roads.

The home owner who tends the garden shown at right is especially interested in perennials and this year lilies are the focus. Two years ago a deck was added to the yard and it provides a summer location for indoor plants as well as for many container plantings of colorful annuals.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Now, we're talkin' ugh-ly

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

Take it from a person who looked at hundreds of pictures of ugly bathrooms on a recent afternoon: One person's pit is another's palace.

A couple from Birmingham, who own an otherwise gorgeous English stone colonial, complained about what was indeed a horrible color scheme in the bath off their master bedroom.

But a visit to their fully functional facilities would probably seem like a weekend at the Hyatt to the West Bloomfield woman whose bathroom sink is a plastic foam tub with its handle hooked onto a faucet.

These were but two of more than 400 entries in an Ugly Bath contest, sponsored by Herald Wholesale Inc. and other companies that deal in home and bath accessories.

The rules were simple: Send in a picture and, in 100 words or less, a description of the pitiful privy.

THE FIRST prize, worth at least $7,000, was a remodeled bathroom. That went to the McGaffey family, whose six members share a single bathroom in a home near the University of Detroit campus.

"Hoping for hot water from the bathroom sink is a pipe dream," their entry said. "When my 3-year-old runs out yelling the sky is falling, I know it is true."

Their peeling ceiling hangs above cracked walls and loose floor tiles. And there's a crack in the toilet.

"We've all been watching this toilet slowly deteriorate," Mary Lou McGaffey said.

THE McGAFFEY family got an architect friend to certify their bathroom is deserving of preferential treatment.

"I can honestly say that in all of my 20 years as an architect, I haven't seen a bathroom more in need of renovation than the McGaffey's," their neighbor, Ted Berlinghof, wrote in a letter attached to the contest entry.

"You really have to be in it to realize what those photos mean," said McGaffey, who still couldn't believe her good fortune a few days after being notified that she was the grand prize winner.

"The bathroom will outdazzle the rest of the house and will be a real incentive to get the rest of the house in order."

THE IDEA for the contest was hatched by Janice Katz, whose husband, Gerald, owns Herald Wholesale, on Coolidge near Eight Mile in Oak Park.

Though she had nothing to do with choosing the winner, she said she was pleased the McGaffeys were chosen. Mary Lou McGaffey is a divorced mother of eight, five of whom still live at home.

"We just thought it was fun, but now I can see it was more than fun. We are really going to impact a family's life here," Janice Katz said.

A few weeks after an advertisement for the contest ran in area publications, the store had received less than a dozen entries, and Katz thought maybe the idea was a bust.

"All of a sudden — I think people were getting their pictures developed — we started to get 40 a day," she said.

She was still getting entries the day after the winner was picked by a panel of judges, made up of journalists who write about interior design. The co-sponsors were Perspectives in Laminate and Virginia Tile.

IF THE contest participants were as handy with a toolbox as they are with the written word, they wouldn't need help with their lavatories.

Janice St. Pierre of Royal Oak wrote a four-stanza limerick that began:

"There once was a lady named Jan.
She tried to fix up her can.
She worked night and day on such little pay.
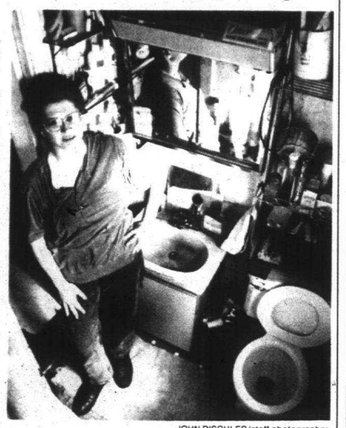
She really could use a hand."



JOHN DISCHLER/staff photographer

One family said it got 10 phone calls from people urging them to enter. Several said of their baths, "Must see to appreciate." And others simply cried, "Help."

One photo showed a leopard toilet seat. Another seat had red and white stripes. A contestant said of his tub, "Would you feel clean after you bathed in here?" And another said his medicine cabinet "needs a cure."

JOE AND TONI Grinnan, the Birmingham couple with the English colonial, also have a sense of humor about their bath, which they referred to as the 'torture chamber."

"A previous owner, with a serious dungeon fetish, did the place up in his favorite shades of navy, purple, black, dark brown and red," they wrote.

And they included a warning about the photos in their entry materials: "If your constitution is strong, peruse the pictures."

The bath features a free standing sink, above which there is a mirror suspended by gold chains. A closeup of the blue, purple and black tiles was captioned, "This may be the ugliest ceramic tile ever produced."

The title of the Grinnan entry, by the way, was "Why we should win your contest or rent a port-a-john."

THEY WEREN'T alone in their belief that outdoor plumbing would be an improvement over what their house has to offer.

"My mother-in-law walks to the corner gas station to use their clean restroom," said the entry by Jerry and Judy Olli of Royal Oak.

And their in-laws aren't the only ones who prefer to meet their bodily needs elsewhere.

"Our dog, Goldie, won't drink out of the toilet," the Ollis said.

The Beaudrie family of Trenton took second place and will receive a $500 gift certificate from Herald Wholesale. Ten third place winners will get $100 gift certificates, and 25 fourth place winners will receive "Goodie Bags" from the store.

gardener's book nook

Marty Figley

Here are several books that should please the youngsters.

Workman Publishing has recently released "The Garden Book and The Greenhouse" (a real, small plastic one) by Wes Porter, a just-the-right-size book and 'house' for children 10 and under. It tells how to plant seeds, transplant, and care for more than over 20 plants. Included are understandable lessons in botany. What a wonderful way to introduce a child to gardening at any time of the year.

A Book-of-the-Month-Club selection, it is one in a series of Workman's "Hand in Hand with Nature" series. The complete kit is $9.95, paper cover.

"Kids Nature Book," Susan Milford, Williamson Publishing, ($12.95) tradepaper, washable) will keep youngsters from 2 to 10 busy, busy, busy all year long. Any project involving nature, such as learning how to preserve a spider web, how crickets indicate temperature (these are some June activities) are included in this delightful book. A project for each day of the year is given, including quiet days with suggested reading. It won a Parent's Choice Award. The Children's Museum in Detroit will offer this gem at the Childrens' Day Celebration. Purchase may be combined with a visit. For information, call 494-1210.

"Let's Grow!," Linda Tilgner (Garden Way $10.95 soft) should inspire parents, teachers, and others to take a child by the hand and learn about growing and having fun with foods. Seventy-two projects suitable for toddlers to 12-year olds are explained; black and white photos accompany instructions. Grow lettuce in a dish pan, make a bird house, watch a seed sprout, plan and plant a garden — all are explained here. This book is sure to be a hit.

The Brooklyn Botanic Garden handbooks are always well-researched and worth adding to a garden library. "Gardening with Wildflowers & Native Plants," (No. 119) shows the reader how to care for and maintain a garden using such plants. It lists sources, since often one can become enthused about a particular plant and then not be able to find it.

Native plant societies are listed by state and gardens, many associated with universities, which display native plants, are shown. Sources for purchase are included. I believe, like many people, that natural gardens are the wave of the future, and this book helps in the preparation of a more natural landscape.

"Garden Photography" No. 120, begins with a chapter on equipment and takes the photographer through steps to be successful in this undertaking. How to compose the shots, take closeups and tips from professionals will help the amateur to take quality photographs and thus derive more enjoyment from the bobby. I'll study this one.

"Gardening for Fragrance" No. 121 suggests how to place fragrant plants indoors and out so that they can be a source of pleasure. It details how insects are attracted and/or repelled by specific ones. For instance beetles and butterflies and moths are pollinaters. Fragrance, more often associated with something from the past than sound, has played an important part in civilization since the beginning of man. All kinds of fragrant plants can be used — perennials, annuals, herbs, trees and shrubs — to make a memorable setting. This handbook will help.

Each is $15.95 plus $1.50 for postage and handling.

"Herbs & Cooking" (No. 122), a subject dear to my heart, is a help to the cook who wants to use herbs with fresh foods to enhance the flavors, without becoming overwhelmed with the idea. Scattered among the chapters are recipes of the authors using favorite herbs with something about their experiences growing them. The reader will find ideas for using herbs in the garden and various ways in which they can be enjoyed. This handbook is $6.95, plus $1.50 postage and handling. All of the above can be ordered from Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Order Dept., 1000 Washington Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11225.

Call for entertainers goes out

The call has just gone out across the state for artists and entertainers who are interested in performing during First Night/Birmingham, the city's first New Year's Eve celebration, sponsored by the Cultural Council of Birmingham/Bloomfield.

This eight-hour long, family-oriented celebration will be in the streets, parks and buildings of downtown Birmingham. The Artist/Performers Review Committee, headed by Kathy Walgren, sent out application forms last week to visual artists, musicians, dancers, mimes, theater and film performers.

All forms of each of these arts will be considered including participatory, interdisciplinary, environmental and performance arts, murals, installations, constructions and assemblages. Events and performances appropriate for children, teens, seniors and the general public will be considered. Quality will be judged on resumes of key participants, reviews, slides or tapes and/or auditions. Jurors have been appointed for each category and July 1 is the deadline for responses to the call.

For application forms, call or write First Night/Birmingham, 30400 Telegraph, Suite 375, Birmingham, 48010, 540-6688.

Authors sign books

Julia Fenton, the pseudonym for two writers from Troy, will be autographing copies of their newest release, "Black Tie Only," 6-8 p.m. Friday, June 22, at Waldenbooks and More in the Woodland Square Mall, 30200 Plymouth Road, Livonia.

Art works on display

Sixteen works by award-winning artist Marilyn Blinder are on exhibit now through June 30 at the Atrium Gallery, 113 North Center, Northville. Blinder is a recipient of a national art award, Water Color U.S.A. For more information, call 349-4131.

With careful storage of the negative Monte Nagler will be able to print and enjoy this photograph of Monument Valley for a long time to come.

Organize those prints and negs

Monte Nagler

How many times have you searched for a box of slides or set of prints from that special occasion years ago only to be stymied as to where you put them?

Do you have boxes of loose slides and drawers full of loose prints that are totally disorganized?

You're not alone. Many photographers regard the filing and storage of negatives, slides and prints as a disheartening task to be avoided.

Imagine how convenient it would be to have an organized filing system, to have your prints and negatives orderly, neat and readily available. It's easier than you think.

Over the years cardboard boxes will emit discernable amounts of gases and peroxides that will tarnish the silver in films and prints and cause fading and loss of picture detail.

The same is true for brown paper envelopes often used to hold prints and negatives. Glue in the seams of many envelopes can cause discoloration if it gets too close to the emulsion of a picture.

EVEN RUBBER bands wrapped around a roll of negatives or stack of prints contain compounds that can cause damage.

Here are some ideas on how to avoid these dangers and assure the safety of a photographer's most valuable possession — pictures and negatives.

Negatives: Care in preserving your prints must naturally begin with your negatives. Store them in transparent polyethylene holders which in turn can be stored in vinyl binders. Larger negetives can be placed in polythylene sleeves and housed in small steel cabinets.

Polyethylene will resist moisture and won't decay or grow misty with age. Furthermore, contact sheets can be made of the negatives without removing them from the holders.

Prints: Sunlight fades and bleaches some color prints. To avoid this, spend a few extra dollars and have a Cibachrome or Fuji "Super Gloss" print made from your favorite slides or negatives. They will last for many years without any fading and will give you prints of superior quality.

When mounting your prints, be sure to use acid-free rag board. Acids in regular mounting boards will eventually cause discoloration to the board as well as your print.

When buying a photo album, make sure the pages are made of an acid-free material.

Finally, never hang photographs (or any artwork) where direct sunlight will strike them.

Slides: The biggest enemy to color slides is moisture. In an atmosphere of more than 60 percent humidity, fungus can form on your slides and damage them. Storage methods for slides should therefore provide for circulating air. Most slide trays and metal slide storage boxes are specifically manufactured to permit air circulation and thus reduce moisture.

Preserving your photographic memories is easy. A few simple measures will ensure that they'll be around to enjoy for a long time to come.

Where would Her Majesty live in Birmingham?

At Buckingham, naturally.

She'd love the royal park across the street. She'd dote on the spacious two-bedroom apartment with fresh new interiors from the most modern appliances to the best lighting fixtures to designer carpeting to contemporary verticals.
She'd like the uncommon amount of room and royal way the service staff treats her. After all, a person's home ought to be their palace.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, You make me see everything & show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be seperated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen.

DRESSED FOR SUCCESS ?

Developers are now realizing that a building can be more uniquely designed to serve as a drawing card for the potential lessee.

The Pierce Building, above, in downtown Birmingham has a pedestrian presence with a plaza. Combermere Stage, left below, in Troy has a stagelike presence. First of America, right below, was designed with a strong architectural theme.

By Dale Northup
special writer

THE PLETHORA of surrounding commercial buildings is exactly that — commercial — in taste and design. For the most part, these buildings are stereotyped with horizontal bands of precast aggregate panels topped with ribbons of windows that stretch around all four sides.

This is nothing new. Mies van der Rohe, America's "less is more" advocate, visualized this type of design in 1921 as a reaction against the extraneous use of ornamentation prevalent in architecture around the turn of the century. He also wanted to "have an architecture that anybody can do." His omen continues to bear fruit and satisfies commercial developers' cost effectiveness with a pedestrian countenance.

Admittedly, these developers have to work within a fixed budget while, at the same time, showing a net capital gain on their investment. But they also have become cognizant of a more competitive market indicated by a discerning prospective tenant who is seeking an identifiable address.

With a few more bucks added to the budget, developers are now realizing that a building can be more uniquely designed to serve as a drawing card for the potential lessee. Why not enhance spending eight hours a day in a building that has a visual sense of place? Sometimes the magic kingdom of business is better served with a yellow brick road, which could wind around the building to become a crenelated parapet at the top and perhaps facilitating a crowning glory of success. Wasn't that the name of a book — "Dress for Success"? Why not expand the circumference of the business image from the beltline to the building?

INTO SUCH A visionary setting have come a number of buildings that are realistic attempts at establishing some semblance of business identity.

The Benjamin K. Pierce Building, by Luckenback, Ziegelman and Partners of Birmingham, on the corner of Brown and Pierce in downtown Birmingham, supplants a pre-existing building and incorporates another one. The 77,000-square-foot, three-story building is clad in Indiana limestone with a polished black granite base. The seams of limestone intersect at the vertical and horizontal junctures, thus serving to define squares and the scale of the building. They also help frame the square windows that punctuate the facade.

One of the interesting features of the building is a concave facade at the corner of a busy intersection, helping to resolve a problem with motorists' sight lines. In addition, it serves to define a pedestrian plaza that immediately links the building with the community. On the Brown Street side, the building steps back, yet the facade on the ground level is continued with a colonnade behind wnich is another landscaped plaza.

The new operations center for First of America in downtown Royal Oak by Hobbs & Black of Ann Arbor, is a 180,000-square-foot, four-story building that has a similar facade treatment to the Pierce Building in Birmingham, raising the question of who was looking over whose shoulder.

MORE IMPORTANT, both buildings work in a contextualist manner. Clad in a reddish-orange brick and limestone, First of America has strong link with the downtown cityscape, the intention of Hobbs & Black. The pilaster treatment of the piers on the middle two floors gives the building a classical appearance and extends to the ground floor framing the display windows behind which are 30,000 square feet of retail space further linking the building with the retail district.

The Atrium Building in Brewery Park in downtown Detroit is a joint venture by Kirco Realty of Troy and River Place Properties. Designed by Gensler & Associates of Denver, the four-story building consists of 144,000 square feet that rests atop a plaza level under which is parking for 900 cars. The entrance is marked by a mock gable clad in brick and limestone behind which is a six-story atrium with a tinted glass enclosure. The piers supporting the skylight over the atrium are encased in black columns with gold leaf capitals serving to define the floor. The building is an interesting amalgam of modern and post-modern elements. Brewery Park offers the amenities of suburbia in an urban setting.

For a commercial building the Combermere Stage Building in Troy is probably the most bizarre. Adhering to its function as a filming studio, it has a facade that could function as a movie set for a western movie. Owner Vern Hammarlund sought an idenity of this building that would separate it from another building he works out of down the street in a light industrial park in Troy. Working with Troy architect Art Kalajian, Hammarlund studied older commercial buildings on the west side of the state, a cross-section of buildings along U.S. 12, to create an old-time flavor.

Unlike so many small, light industrial buildings with false fronts over a concrete block box, this one is unique. The viewer is suddenly transported in space and time much as at Greenfield Village. Kalajian has melded some interesting elements. The brick detail is accentuated by arches, a string course of projecting soldier formations and topped with wooden cornices and a gable framing what else — a stage coach. The dream of filming, which takes place inside, extends outside.

Action!

Builders fight code changes

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

BOCA codes, the building regulations model on which many communities base building requirements, are the subject of a growing national debate pitting builders against the materials manufacturing industry.

Caught between them are the building professionals who will actually make the decisions.

Builders say if they lose, the end result will be higher housing costs. Building supply manufacturers contend that a victory for them will mean better, safer buildings.

According to Dick Morris, BOCA has come under increasing pressures from outside interest groups to enact changes that, while beneficial to the proponents, will eventually drive up housing costs.

"Unreasonable code changes must be challenged."

Morris is the construction, technology and code specialist for the National Association of Home Builders.

Each year, BOCA (Building Officials and Code Administrators) members gather to consider changes to the codes that are used as a model for local ordinances.

BOCA WILL HAVE its annual meeting Sunday-Friday, June 24-29, to discuss changes that will address general construction, light, ventilation, space, plumbing facilities and fixtures, mechanical, electrical, fire safety, responsibility of peo-

Builders can reduce indoor polluting materials

By Stephanie Stubbs
special writer

Bubble, bubble: radon gas, smoke, bacteria, mold and mildew, carbon monoxide, nitrogen dioxide, formaldehyde, pesticides, asbestos, lead.

What sounds like a modern-day witches' brew is in reality the list of major pollutants in the home, according to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Many of these airborn contaminants can be eliminated with sound construction practices. A booklet recently published by the EPA and the Consumer Products Safety Council (CPSC), entitled "The Inside Story: A Guide to Indoor Air Quality," lists a set of guidelines for owners to consider when building a new home.

The premise is to prevent indoor air problems before they occur, and the first recommendation is for the owner to express concerns about indoor air quality to the architect or builder and enlist cooperation in taking measures to provide a healthy environment. Two major topics that should be on the list for discussion are specifying and purchasing building materials and furnishings that emit low amounts of pollution, and providing an adequate amount of ventilation.

The EPA/CPSC report reccommends the following steps:

- Use radon-resistant construction techniques, which include providing proper drainage and sealing foundations in new construction.
- Choose building materials and furnishings that will keep indoor air pollution to a minimum. For instance, exterior grade pressed wood products can be used instead of interior-grade for floors, cabinetry and wall surfaces.

EXTERIOR-GRADE pressed wood is made with phenol-formaldehyde, which has a much lower emission rate compared to urea-formaldehyde used in interior grade wood. An even safer alternative, although a more expensive one, is to use solid wood components. Another good practice is to avoid adhering carpets directly to concrete floors, which get cold, causing moisture to condense on the carpet and provide a breeding ground for biological contaminants.

- Consider installing a type of heating/cooling system that draws in comparatively more fresh air. A whole-house heat recovery system, for instance, draws in outside air and conserves energy as well by capturing heat from air that is vented to the outdoors.
- Install exterior-vented air ducts into wood stove fireboxes and near fireplaces to let in oxygen that encourages more complete combustion and prevents backdraft from drawing smoke and soot back down the chimney.

IF YOUR DREAM house currently is not on the drawing boards, don't despair. Techniques for improving air quality in an existing house can be relatively inexpensive, and follow similar lines of reason: first, control the source, then improve ventilation, and then, if necessary, install air cleaners.

A small but growing number of architects and builders specialize in the design and constuction of low-toxic homes, in which natural materials — solid wood, brick, natural paints and natural fibers — replace synthetic construction materials and furnishings.

The owner must express concerns about indoor air quality to the builder.

Builders square off against manufacturers

ple, and hazard abatement requirements.

Bill Evens, publications manager for BOCA International, said there are more than 200 code revisions to be discussed at the annual convention — all of which will generate some controversy.

The annual meetings often become combative as both sides of each issue argue vehemently to convince building officials that their side is right, Evens said.

"I don't think we do things strictly from self-interest," Morris of NAHB said. "We're concerned about the lack of frugality of these code changes."

THE EVER-INCREASING cost of housing and the growing anti-growth efforts are making choosing and buying homes more difficult, Morris said.

Changes can be critical to the builder who must follow the adopted building codes of a given community, Morris said.

"Many communities and states adopt BOCA changes without question."

BECAUSE OF the importance, the NAHB is sending its members to local building inspectors to voice the builders' side on the proposed changes and also to encourage them to go to the meeting.

"We're not as well organized as we would like to be, but we're hopeful we'll be ready for the meeting.

"In the past, a small minority of BOCA members are making decisions that will effect building throughout the country," Morris said. "With almost 5,500 voting members, only 300 members attended."

MORRIS SAID this is the first concentrated effort the builders have put together, but many code changes of the past have had vocal and active industry advocates.

"Without naming names or specific code changes, there may have been some cases where special interests were able to send people who would vote on their behalf."

At the very least, the NAHB has faced extremely organized opposition when it comes to BOCA changes, Morris said.

Evens of BOCA said he has seen no evidence of behind-the-scenes tampering, but the group does not discourage groups from talking to individual building officials.

"These people are professionals — they're not going to be swayed by an argument unless it's a good argument."

MORRIS OF NAHB said three specific changes concern the group the most — one relating to insulation requirements and two relating to fire protection sprinklers.

The insulation code change (B171-90) would require more insulation than practical and add substantially to costs, Morris said.

"Homeowners would not recoup (the costs) in a decade of energy conservation."

Proponents, including insulation manufacturers and chemical companies, argue the changes are necessary to promote energy conservation and improve insulation in above and below grade walls, according to written comments on file with BOCA.

NAHB OPPOSES a code amendment (B108-90) that would require sprinklers in townhouses with independent exit ways or units separated by two-hour fire walls.

Proponents of the code change argue that townhouses are no different from apartments — there are common areas and adjoining walls — and therefore fire sprinklers should be required in townhouses, according to written comments on file with BOCA.

NAHB supports an amendment to the BOCA code (B106-90) that would eliminate the need for fire sprinklers in apartments of two stories or less and apartments of four stories or less and a basement, Morris said.

NAHB argues these apartments are already protected by smoke detection systems and fire sprinklers are redundant. Another argument is that many areas do not have adequate public water supplies — and therefore fire sprinklers can fail from lack of pressure.

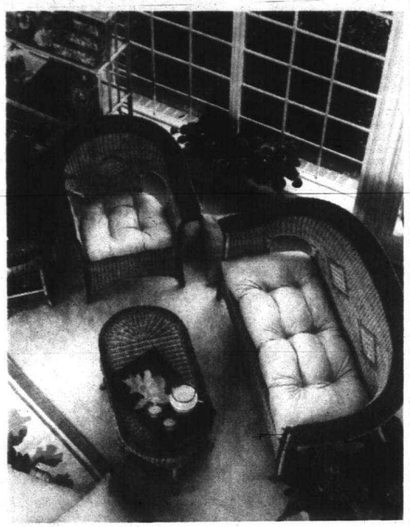
Let the sun shine — indoors



With today's sun rooms you no longer have to step out of doors to enjoy the gentle, lazy streams of light that warm both body and soul. Large windows, skylights and casual furniture help maintain the mood.

Welcome to the decade in which you can sun worship from your sofa and garden high and dry in a downpour. Or swing in the shade on a scorching afternoon.

Solariums, porches, gazebos and greenhouses all but erase the dividing line that separates what's inside and what's out. Through architecture, they allow homeowners to commune with Mother Nature, while steering clear of her stormier side.

Acquiring such an addition doesn't mean you have to buy a new home, take on a night job or suffer through months of painful renovation.

Here's a rundown of what's hot in rooms and spaces build for prime exposure or shelter from earth's largest star.

● Porches: The porch is affectionately known as the apron of the house. Or the piazza. Or the portico. Or veranda.

No matter what the name, this famed wooden facade is a timeless as lemonade. And today, it's trendy — the perfect addition for the new breeds of couch potatoes and homebodies.

From Queen Anne wraparounds to plain farm platforms, porches are popping up on new homes.

● Gazebos: With their lacy, latticework and fragile form, gazebos rank not only as the largest and most elaborate of garden ornaments but also as the most functional. And they're almost as popular now as they were in Victorian times.

While its charm elevates it to focal point status, the gazebo also provides shelter, a place for the homeowner to escape the April shower or harsh July sun. The gazebo can serve as a breakfast nook, napping spot, tearoom, library and lookout.

Distinguished by upcurved eaves, latticework, turned finials or scrollwork brackets, these miniature buildings are still most famous for their shapes — either simply square or octagonal.

Most echo the Victorian era in styling, but there are countless designs available with the most modern featuring screens or shutters for protecting those within.

A 1990s twist on the gazebo borrows its latticework, using the open-pattern panels to create walls around a patio or deck. The result? An airy, indoor-outdoor room that lets homeowners move furniture in and out with the seasons and weather.

● Solariums and greenhouses. The quintessential sun space — or solarium — combines the greenhouse effect with the charms of grandmother's sun porch.

Yesterday's homeowner wanted it so he or she could grow tomatoes and tulips indoors.

Wood's versatility leads to popularity

Wood, one of the world's oldest building materials, is aging well.

Processes to improve its wearing and weathering qualities and a new appreciation of its natural insulating qualities contribute to its continued popularity as a building and remodeling material.

The trade association for makers of wood windows and doors as well as suppliers of pressure-treated wood for outdoor use both report healthy and growing sales, despite the fact that housing starts dropped in 1988.

"Because of its honeycomb-shaped cell structure, wood is a natural thermal insulator containing a high percentage of insulating-rich air within the wood fibers," says John W. Shoemaker of the National Wood Window and Door Association, which reported a 20 percent rise in sales last year.

The association's research on wood doors showed that wood expands and contracts less than steel during temperature changes, thus maintaining a tighter fit with weatherstripping.

Paint can dramatize rooms

(AP) The proper materials and some basic painting tips are all that is needed to change walls from drab to dramatic.

The following suggestions from Window & Wall Ideas magazine can even help a novice achieve professional results.

The first step in any painting project is choosing a color scheme. Color can work magic on a room. It can create a mood, accentuate furnishings, or add visual interest. When choosing colors, keep in mind these tips:

- Neutral colors, such as cream, gray, and white, are soothing colors. Light colors are airy and expansive; use them to help make areas appear larger. Dark colors can create a cozy feeling in an oversize room.
- Using contrasting or accent colors can lend interest to a room. For example, a favorite piece of furniture or art will stand out against a wall painted a contrasting color. In addition, interest can be added to a barren room by using contrasting colors or accent colors on moldings.
- Color can seemingly alter a room's proportions. A long, narrow room will appear wider if both shorter walls are painted a darker color than the longer walls. Use bold, bright colors selectively to draw in a wall or lower a ceiling.

Paint is available in various types. The following information will help determine which one is best suited to specific needs.

For almost all interior projects, choose between water- and solvent-thinned paints. Water-thinned, or latex, paints include acrylic, thixotropic (dripless), epoxy, urethane and polyurethane. All are relatively quick drying, odorless, easy to apply and non-flammable. Latex paints come in a variety of glosses.

Solvent-thinned, or alkyd, paints include oil-based, or resin-based enamels, which produce durable, easy-to-clean surfaces. Solvent-thinned paints are often preferred where constant upkeep is necessary, such as in a kitchen or bath. Enamels in the highest gloss ranges are usually solvent-thinned.

Texture paint, available premixed or in a powder form that requires mixing, produces a rough, patterned surface. Similarly, sand paint is mixed with coarse granules that produce a grainy effect. Both types are ideal for camouflaging minor wall flaws.
