Slow economy leaves many mall stores vacant

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Vacant stores are the hottest commodity in Canton strip malls.

The average vacancy rate in Canton's strip malls is 25 percent and in some small shopping malls more than half the units are vacant.

Grand Central Station, on Ford Road between Lilley and Sheldon roads, has 24 units and 18 vacancies, a 75 percent vacancy rate, the highest among the 26 strip malls in Canton, according to a Canton municipal services department report.

"With the economy the way it is going in recent months and the competition, there is a higher number of vacancies in the metropolitan area than in the last few years," said Sandy Weber, president of LaKritz-Weber and Company, real estate brokers specializing in retail. The company has "For Lease" signs throughout Canton.

The future depends largely on the health of an unpredictable economy, fierce competition and continued population growth in Canton, Weber said. The township's population is estimated to grow from 54,824 in 1990 to 91,438 in 2010, according to the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

Between 350 and 400 single-family homes are expected to be built in Canton this year, according to Aaron Machnik, Canton municipal services director. "That's up a little from previous years," he said.

The smaller shops are fighting for the same dollars as the discount stores, like Target, Mervyns and Kohls, Weber said. "Everytime you're competing for the same dollars someone suffers," he added.

Retailers in the desolate malls feel the effects of vacancies the most.

Chris Essa, owner of Checkers Dry Cleaners in Grand Central Station, said the vacancies have affected sales because "there's not enough traffic coming into the mall." And customers often ask why, Essa said.

However, he's been at the Ford Road location for three years and a lot of his business is repeat customers.

Vacant storefronts in Canton strip malls, like these in the Coventry Commons mall at Morton Taylor and Joy, are a concern for retailers and residents.

— Sandy Weber

Sheldon Crossings, on Sheldon and Sheldon Center, has 10 units and seven vacancies, a 70 percent vacancy rate, according to the data provided by the municipal services department.

AN ADDITIONAL problem for small retailers in Canton is their proximity to Westland Shopping Mall, Weber said.

Retailers came to Canton because new homes meant young couples with growing incomes who are willing to spend their money in a lot of different areas.

On the other hand, Canton doesn't have enough residents to attract a regional mall, Weber said.

Dave Nicholson, Canton planner, said the standard line among developers is that commercial businesses follow rooftops.

"As subdivisions were built in the '70s, commercial developments

Schuette opens club's 2nd season

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton's answer to the Detroit Economic Club will begin its second season Sept. 4 after a two-month summer break.

Canton's Economic Club meetings resume with Bill Schuette, the Republican candidate for U.S. senate, as the first speaker Tuesday, Sept. 4. Schuette is opposing Sen. Carl Levin in the November general election.

PLANS ARE to build an economic club that will attract people from all of the western Wayne County communities, according to club president Bob Wade, chairman of the board of Wade Trim & Associates, an engineering, architectural and planning consulting firm for area communities including Canton.

During the first season, most of the speakers and audience were from Canton, Plymouth and Northville.

"Last season we were really trying to introduce the idea to the community," Wade said. "We had a good turnout for the short season that we had. This year I would like to see us solidify the program. I would like to see it mature.

"I still don't see us going far out of our community," Wade said. "I'd like to see it expand. We'd like to turn it into more of an institution. I don't want it to be a passing thing."

Wade said the club has been successful in attracting a high caliber of speakers.

SPEAKERS LINED UP this season include Phil Power, publisher of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, at the Oct. 9 meeting.

"I find it exciting that people of his stature are interested enough in the idea to literally clear their calendar," Wade said.

Paul Hubbard, president of New Detroit, is scheduled to speak at the Nov. 6 meeting. And Micheal Horowitz, president of the Selective Group, has promised to be the guest speaker for the Dec. 4 meeting.

A speaker has not been assigned to the January

Schools find money to expand offices

By Peggy Aulino

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education shuffled some funds Monday in order to cover the cost of renovating and building an addition to the board offices. At the same time, the board rejected some construction bids in an effort to lower the cost of the project.

The board has set aside $1.9 million for the project, which involves the offices at 454 S. Harvey in Plymouth. But board members hope to lower costs by rebidding some of the work.

"When we opened the bids we saw we had a lot of problems in these areas," said board president Dean Swartzwelter, referring to four aspects of the project. The board rejected all bids submitted for mechanical and electrical work, masonry and general construction.

"We are going to try to lower or reduce the kind of work these contractors do," Swartzwelter said.

The board voted to direct the district's architects to do some redesigning and revising of specifications.

THE BOARD did award five contracts, totaling more than $326,000, for site work, landscaping, asphalt, concrete, windows and glass and elevator installation. Public facilities are required to provide elevator service for people with handicaps when additions are constructed.

The school district has $925,000 in an account that was generated from a bond issue voters approved in 1986. The board transferred funds total-

School film policy gets 1st OK with reservations

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

A proposal requiring teachers to get approval before using films and audio/visual materials in the classroom got a lukewarm reception from the Plymouth-Canton school board Monday.

The board voted 6-1 to approve the first posting of the proposal but noted that a second vote is needed before the policy can be implemented.

Trustee Carl Battishill voted against the plan, which would require teachers to preview the materials, then submit to the school's principal a form requesting approval. The form asks the teacher to provide a description of the material and explain the purpose and objectives for using it.

'I have a sense the classroom teachers are going to have a problem with it. I think the amount of paperwork is going to be strangling.'

— Carl Battishill
school board member

Battishill said he does "absolutely support" the concept, but he called the procedure "a tad restrictive.

"I have a sense the classroom teachers are going to have a problem with it. I think the amount of paperwork is going to be strangling," Battishill said.

Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction, acknowledged that a teacher's workload could be increased, but it may only be temporary.

"Obviously it could become very time consuming the first time around," said Homes. "Some of those items (on the form) would not be very time consuming. Others might."

He said that if the materials were used more than once, or by different teachers, they would not be subject to review. But he said if the context of the use changed, a second review would be required.

Trustee Barbara Graham said she supports the policy.

"I don't feel that there is anything in here that is that restrictive or demanding. If it were, I think all those seats would have been filled," Graham said, motioning toward the audience.

Lottery tickets stolen in party store heist

Canton Party Store on Michigan Avenue was burglarized Saturday of more than $2,000 worth of merchandise.

Canton police responded to an alarm about 2 a.m. and discovered that the store had been burglarized. Three rolls of lottery tickets worth $1,080, $108 worth of beer, $48.84 worth of liquor, three bottles of whiskey valued at $200 and $250 worth of cigarettes were reported stolen.

A safe and rolls of coins in cash registers were untouched, police said.

SUSPECT SPOTTED: More than $2,000 worth of stereo equipment and tools were stolen from a garage on Hanford early Monday morning. Some of the stolen goods included a telephone valued at $90 and a stereo worth $150.

A witness told police he saw a man leaving the garage with a black trash bag. He was described as about 6 feet tall and 160 pounds, wearing a hooded sweat shirt and blue jeans. When police arrived there were fresh mud marks in the garage.

PICKUP RIPOFF: Goods stored in the flatbed of a GMC pickup parked on Harsdale were stolen Monday. Golf clubs, valued at $600, a $25 card table and a $30 grill were stolen from the truck that was parked in the driveway.

GAS TAKEN: Hop-In gas station on Michigan Avenue reported three cases of people pumping gas and leaving without paying. Two cases were reported Saturday and another Monday morning.

More than $40 worth of gas was taken. The gas was priced at $1.19 and $1.20 per gallon.

DIAPER CAPER: A police report involving a 6-year-old girl was filed Monday morning by her neighbor after the youngster threw sand and a dirty diaper on the hood of the neighbor's car in front of their home on Stacy.

The neighbor told police that the families had quarrels before.

In another dispute, a man threw two bricks at his neighbor's property, on Carlisle Court, Friday and caused more than $250 worth of damage. Police said the man was extremely intoxicated.

were bound to occur in the '80s," Nicholson said. "There were too many commercial developments descending on us at once."

Nicholson points to banks providing the loans necessary to build the mini-shopping centers and developers willing to take risks.

Loans have become tighter since the savings and loans failure, and that will keep new developers from falling into the same trap, said Canton supervisor Tom Yack.

THE SEEMINGLY continuous strip mall north and south of Ford Road from I-275 to Canton Center likely will stop before it penetrates into western Canton. Canton's Master Plan calls for residential development west of Canton Center.

"We're not eager to continue the commercial strip west of Canton Center," Yack said. "We want to discourage it (strip mall development) whenever possible."

Canton police also frown on vacancies in strip malls, because it invites thieves, according to John Santomauro, Canton public safety director. Ocassionally burglars will use an empty store to gain entry into an occupied store, Santomauro said.

"I would have a real concern if we had a large amount of vacancies in one of the malls," he said.

However, if one or two stores are operating, that usually provides enough customer traffic to discourage break-ins.

ing $290,939 from related accounts to the bond project account. It also transferred $406,061 from the general operating budget. With the capital improvements fund balance at $278,000, the funds available now equal $1.9 million.

The board intends to replace the general operating funds with money raised through the sale of unused school district property.

"We are officially borrowing from the fund balance . . . so it will always be delineated and separated so no one can come in and say 'I don't know how you can do this with that,'" Swartzwelter said.

RENOVATION OF the existing building is estimated to cost $550,000, and the addition will cost $1,350,000. Board members opted to have both jobs completed at the same time for the sake of efficiency.

"We wanted to do this and get it over as quickly as possible before we get nipped with any more inflation," Swartzwelter said. "It's better to do it all at once, instead of putzing around and trying to do it piecemeal."

'We wanted to do this and get it over as quickly as possible . before we get nipped with any more inflation.'

— Dean Swartzwelter

The redesigning and rebidding will not affect the building schedule. Officials have said the work can begin within two weeks of the award of contracts. It is expected to be completed by Sept. 15, 1991.

meeting. However, William Shelton, president of Eastern Michigan University, will speak at the Feb. 5 meeting.

The March meeting will be an open forum discussion among Canton, Plymouth and Northville public officials discussing how the communities can share public services.

The townships of Canton, Plymouth and Northville began a consortium, Western Townships Utilities Authority, to deal with sewer, solid waste and other issues.

The Economic Club was launched earlier this year by the Canton Community Foundation.

Last season Sen. John Engler, Republican candidate for governor, developer Robert DeMattia and Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara were among the club's guest speakers.

Canton's Economic Club meetings are noon at the Geneva Presbyterian Church, on Sheldon north of Ford, the first Tuesday monthly, except July and August. Luncheons are $10 or $90 for a 10-month seasonal pass.

Reservations are available by calling 454-5427.

Canton man reports robbery at gunpoint

A 24-year-old City of Wayne man told Canton police last week that five men robbed him at gunpoint Friday.

He was driving west on Michigan Avenue before Lotz when he noticed a dark-colored Ford or Dodge van following his car. When he turned north on Lotz the van also turned north and pulled in front of him. The van stopped, which forced him to stop.

Five men, described as being in their early to late 20s, got out of the van and approached the man's car. They yelled for him to get out of the car and started to beat on the window, the man told police. They broke the passenger's door window with a pipe and grabbed his keys, police said.

They dragged him out of the car, demanded his wallet and beat him with their fists and a pipe, the man told police. The thieves stole $50, the man said.

The man drove himself to Annapolis Hospital, Wayne and was treated for numerous bruises on his neck and arms and released.

He reported the incident to police eight hours after the incident.

There were no witnesses and the man was unable to provide detailed descriptions of the thieves.

Police are investigating, according to Pat Nemecek, Canton public information officer.

Other board members expressed concerns about the technical aspects of the procedure. For instance, the forms have no space for the principal's signature.

The board discussed tabling the issue until the details could be worked out, but decided instead to approve the matter on first posting.

"We can give the administration two weeks, then at the second posting let them talk about it and see if we can come to some consensus," said Trustee Roland Thomas.

The board's next regular meeting is scheduled for Monday, Aug. 27. If it passes the second posting, the matter is officially approved.

A Light Choice for your Dinner Table

Our lighting consultants recommend the overall size of a dining room chandelier be about 12" smaller than the shortest dimension of your table. Use the light to create a mood for the room and your lifestyle.

For example, the Forecast chandelier shown above uses the new halogen light source for a pure white light that adds drama to a room. Livestock auction ends lively year for 4-H

"Princess" Amy Brown and "Prince" Joey Stachowski of Canton wait to greet buyers at the 4-H auction. Amy's shoes and dress made her a little uncomfortable, according to her mom. She's used to wearing jeans.

Leslie and Jim Ehrhart of Canton auction their Grand Champion lambs.

A livestock auction recently was the grand finale to a year of work and fun in the Wayne County 4-H Club for area youngsters.

And the kids raised $15,595 for their cattle, lambs, hogs, chickens, ducks and turkeys during the Wayne County Fair Auction in Belleville. Five percent of what the kids raised during the auction goes back to the 4-H Club.

Restaurant owners and representatives from supermarket chains were among the crowd of people who bid on the animals. And from the prices they paid, they weren't looking so much for a good buy as they were to applaud the kids' hard work.

Two chickens sold for $200 to Boyers Processing in Canton.

"The buyers are what makes the auction," said Joanie Stachowski of Canton, who runs Canton's 4-H Club.

"They see that potential in those little kids and that they do a job and get it done," Stachowski said.

4-H stands for Head, Heart, Hands and Health. Stachowski stresses that it's the type of club that keeps kids from getting into trouble.

Area and U of M have much in common

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

It's no secret that the Plymouth area has ties to the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

But some figures on the extent of those ties are striking, when you consider that:

- There are 3,469 U of M alumni living in the city of Plymouth and Plymouth Township.
- People living in Plymouth earn $6.6 million annually working for the University of Michigan.
- The university buys $6.8 million in goods and services annually from Plymouth and Plymouth Township.

While Plymouth has traditionally had ties to U of M, completion of M-14 in the early '80s "knocked down the time to drive between Plymouth and north campus, where we've had our major growth," said Pete Pellerito.

Pellerito promotes the university as director of community relations. He and his family also make their home in Plymouth, where he served as a planning commissioner between 1987-89.

"Another factor is it's really expensive to live in Ann Arbor," he said. "A lot of people have decided a commute of 20-25 minutes (from Plymouth) isn't so much at all."

Pellerito, 45, held a variety of newspaper and broadcast media jobs before starting public relations work at U of M in 1978. In his current job, "My responsibility is to represent the university to the legislature, state associations and trade organizations," he said.

One project involves selling the idea that a low-level nuclear waste site in Michigan is needed, as the university generates such waste through research.

He's also been promoting U of M with organizers of the 1994 soccer World Cup scheduled for the United States, in hopes of bringing some matches to the university.

During his tenure on the Plymouth planning commission, commissioners revised the sign ordinance to reduce the size of signs. "That will do great things for the appearance of the community," Pellerito said.

"We also made some changes in the potential height of development in the community and also the density."

Pellerito said it's hard at times for someone in local government to know what residents want. "The community only expresses something when it doesn't like something," he said. He urges residents to start "a hands-on relationship with their city committees."

As city officials have been encouraging Borman Inc. officials to sublease the now vacant Farmer Jack store downtown, Pellerito suggests some sort of food store at the site. "If it was successfully thought through, you could put several specialty (food) stores there," he said, similar to Ann Arbor's Kerrytown development, next to that city's farmer's market.

Pellerito decided to leave the planning commission to accept an appointment to the Wayne County Business Development Committee board.

A main goal of that committee is to seek out high-tech companies, and determine "how we can attract them to the area and keep the companies that are here," he said.

What did you do in the war — grandma?

By Marilyn Allen
special writer

"They also serve who only stand and wait." — John Milton

We know quite a bit about what men did during World War II. We have seen pictures of men in uniform, heard war stories, seen movies and read history books extolling bravery and hardship, but about what women did during that time?

Now area senior citizens in their 70s, these women are singing in the church choir, shopping at malls, standing in lines at the post office. What were their lives like during the war years? How did the war shape their future?

Whether married or single, factory or office worker, or homemaker and mother, all had ties to the war and feelings about it. Each one's life is a thread in the tapestry of that era. Each has special memories and all share similar experiences and insights.

The former Florence Smith met Ed Deyo, an Air Force enlistee at a USO dance. They corresponded for three years. At the end of the war, they married. This photograph was taken in 1946 when the happy couple celebrated Ed's homecoming.

"I PUT MY heart and soul into it (job)," said Eva Leus, a former Livonia resident now living in Dearborn.

The war brought about a new industrial revolution, a social change in the workplace. Just as tanks and airplanes replaced automobiles on production lines, so women replaced men in nearly every type of job.

"If women didn't do it, it wouldn't get done," said Aileen Lewis of Redford Township.

Prior to the bombing of Pearl Harbor, 15 percent of married women worked. This increased dramatically as the escalating war decreased the civilian male population. Called upon to handle tasks they were unaccustomed to, women performed willingly and well, according to a government report issued by the Special Service Division of the Office of War Information.

The era of "Rosie the riveter" also was the time of increased personal and financial independence for women.

They earned their own money, took on total responsibility for caring for children and home.

As a riveter on fighter planes, Jeanette Markle, now of Livonia, found the work "monotonous and unbelievably noisy."

Leus considered her salary of $1 an hour good pay, but making tank parts was physically demanding.

LIVONIAN Loretta Klimczak inspected airplane parts at Cadillac Motors in Detroit.

Across the the Atlantic, Catherine Gailey, now of Livonia, was similarly employed, at Rolls Royce in Scotland. Another woman made parachutes. All the women said the responsibilities of these jobs weighed upon them all, because men's lives depended upon their work.

Florence Deyo of Livonia did clerical work for the Navy Department, and Lewis worked at an advertising agency contracted by the government to produce technical manuals.

In England, Pauline Merrill, now of Livonia, performed in shows for servicemen, often just ahead of the action.

Others baby-sat for working mothers, or clerked in stores. Some women had to work to support themselves, other chose to work.

No matter what their jobs, or why they worked, all agree that they were working 'for the war effort."

Though rationing was the thing most of these women recalled, they agreed it wasn't much of a hardship. Because people had little during the Depression, just prior to the war, they were accustomed to making do or doing without.

Sugar, gas and meat were among the rationed goods. Long lines formed and when word passed among neighbors that the local grocery had butter, long lines formed. Nylon stockings were particularly missed and in such demand that "we stood in line for hours" to buy a pair at Hudson's, said Deyo.

During the war, women such as Leus worked more than 40-hour weeks, raised children and did volunteer work.

THE WAR brought couples together in many ways. Deyo met an Air Force enlistee at a USO dance. They corresponded for three years while he was overseas. She wrote to him every day. At the end of the war, they married.

"We wouldn't have met, if not for the war," said Deyo.

Gailey's family billeted two Canadian servicemen in their home in Scotland. She married one.

But not all single men were away. Some were servicemen stationed stateside. Others were being shipped out or returning. Just 19, Dolores Pope, now of Redford Township, went to Miami with a friend.

"It was a like a fantasy. We had dates every night. The men were lined up," recalled Pope.

Until the bombing of Pearl Harbor, the war had been — as the song goes "over there," remote despite the number of U.S. servicemen involved. That war had come directly to the United States jarred people into reality.

Disbelief was the initial reaction to the news that a U.S. base had been attacked by the Japanese.

"I thought it was a joke at first," said Jordis Johnsen of Livonia.

For women who lived in the Detroit area, the attack brought fears that war could come to their doorstep. Detroit was a center of war materiel production, a likely target for the enemy. Merrill in England and Gailey in Scotland often heard the sounds of gunfire, bombs and air raid sirens. They said it was a frightening way to live.

GUY WARREN/staff photographer

Despite their fear and worries, many women shared an underlying, unspoken compassion for the enemy servicemen.

WHEN MERRILL witnessed the crash of a German plane, she thought, "that man in the plane is someone's son."

Yet none of these women opposed the bombing of Japan. The attitude was that "Japan had it coming" and would have "done it to us if they had the capability."

The war in Europe ended May 1945. Japan surrendered on Aug. 14 that year. World War II was over.

"People were delirious with joy," said Markle. "The streets were packed with people."

The phrase "the war effort" was a matter of pride to work and sacrifice on behalf of the cause of freedom. Patriotism was assumed, not scorned.

None of these women complained about conditions they endured, nor did any speak negatively of the government's policies during the war. Every woman, however, agreed that "things are so different now" — that women are more independent, more politically astute, more publicly vocal and have greater influence in international matters. But not all agreed these are necessarily positive changes.

All said they seldom speak of that early time in their lives. It was a just a period of their lives, they said, with good and bad aspects. Most agreed that, "we didn't think we were doing anything special."

Marilyn Allen is a freelance writer who lives in Livonia.

Prior to the bombing of Pearl Harbor, 15 percent of married women worked. This increased dramatically as the escalating war decreased the civilian male population. The former Florence Smith, now Florence Deyo and her twin sister (back row, second and third from left) of Livonia did clerical work along with these other women for the Navy Department in downtown Detroit.

Used air conditioners wanted

Save those old window air conditioners — they could help improve the quality of life for a home-bound lung disease patient.

The American Lung Association of Southeast Michigan is urging area residents to donate used window air conditioners to its Medical Equipment Loan Program. Window air conditioners can help lung disease patients who find it difficult to breathe humid or allergen-laden air.

Volunteers from the Lung Association will pick up used air conditioners (in working condition) at your home or office. Your tax-deductible contribution can make a big difference to patients with lung cancer, emphysema, asthma and other debilitating lung diseases.

For information on donating air conditioners or any of a vast array of breathing support equipment such as oxygen concentrators, nebulizers, c-pap machines or wheelchairs, call 559-5100 or 1-800-543-LUNG.

"Serving the Metro Area Since 1938"

Both sides rally supporters in airport dispute

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Business, union and civic leaders could square off against an ad hoc Wayne County homeowners group in what could prove November's oddest, most compelling, election race.

At issue is jet engine noise from Metro Airport — and possibly the airport's future.

The homeowners group, Citizens Against Aircraft Noise (CAAN), has already filed petitions calling for an election day vote on airport expansion.

The issue involves $100 in bonds for a new 3,200-car airport parking structure — a small part of a planned $1 billion airport improvement project.

But both sides admit there's more to it than that.

CAAN members say voting against the bonds is a way to show that county residents are fed up with airport noise.

Though their budget is limited, group members appear committed to doing whatever is necessary to get their point across.

"WE'RE GOING in with the idea we'll be outspent," said CAAN spokesman David J. Esper, a Dearborn attorney. "Our goal is to mount a grassroots information campaign — to let people know what the issues are and to reach them one-on-one."

County officials, fearful the entire airport project would be at risk, say they've begun putting together a coalition of community leaders to back the bonds.

"We want to show there's broad support for airport plans," deputy county executive Michael Duggan said.

Though a county clerk's ruling on the petitions' validity isn't expected until Aug. 20, petitions appear certain to be certified. Circulators gathered 19,000 signatures — 4,000 more than would be necessary to force the vote.

It is doubtful the county would challenge many signatures, according to Duggan.

"We're preparing for an election," he said.

Noise complaints have increased since November, when flight patterns at the Romulus airport changed.

More flights have been routed over Dearborn, Dearborn Heights and Taylor. CAAN supporters, many of whom live in those three cities, say increased jet noise is ruining their neighborhoods. Complaints have also surfaced among Livonia, Garden City, Westland and Redford neighborhoods.

"We had no trouble getting signatures," Esper said. "Our circulators tell us only about one in every 10 people they approached refused to sign."

Though petitions were primarily circulated in the Dearborn area, Esper said signers came from "every community in the county."

Duggan, who lives in Livonia, admits even he hears the jets' roar. "I'm not sure my wife would vote for the bonds," he said.

Blocking the bond sale would force the county to come to grips with the noise problem, Esper said, as well as potential air pollution and traffic tie-ups posed by expansion.

"We're not opposed to expansion, but we are opposed to immediate expansion without consideration of its impact," Esper said.

County officials, however, said airport improvements are desperately needed.

"What we have is a 1950s airport trying to compete in the 1990s," Duggan said.

Arrivals and departures have grown dramatically since Metro became a Northwest Airlines hub in the mid-1980s, increasing the number of direct routes, as well as the number of flights routed through Detroit.

Expansion plans call for a new terminal and two new runways, as well as increasing the current 85 arrival and departure gates.

Metro, which handled roughly 8 million departing passengers in 1985, is expected to handle 12 million this year and more than 15 million by 1995.

Without changes, Duggan said, Northwest might look elsewhere.

"You can't expect Northwest to stay at an outmoded airport," Duggan said.

Many of the airport's 10,000 jobs — and 30,000 nearby jobs — would be at risk if Metro ceased to be a hub.

"It's not about expansion, it's about (keeping) what we have now," Duggan said.

Nonetheless, the issue could turn on noise — and on just who is responsible.

County officials blame the Federal Aviation Administration, saying new FAA takeoff and landing requirements are the major reason for homeowner disatisfaction.

"It's not the new routes, it's altitude," Duggan said. "The issue is that the FAA is allowing planes to accelerate faster."

Pilots can now accelerate their engines at 3,000 feet, Duggan said, instead of the old 10,000-foot standard.

Changes in flight patterns and takeoff and landing procedures were necessitated by a series of near misses between large jets taking off

Grant goes to Madonna

Madonna College's nursing program was recently named recipient of a $150,000 grant from the Katherine Tuck Fund.

The grant will be used, in part, for computers and software, college administrators said.

Interest from remaining grant money will be used to support nursing programs, officials said.

The Tuck Fund has also supported construction and renovation of the college educational development center and library.

or landing at Metro and smaller planes flying nearby, according to Sen. Carl Levin's staff.

"Clearly the current (noise) situation is intolerable," Levin said in an Aug. 10 letter to the FAA.

County officials have also protested to the feds. But CAAN members remain unconvinced their elected leaders are doing enough.

Discussion with Duggan, airport director Richard Jamison and assistant county "noise czar" Bryan Amann have only left group members confused, Esper said.

"It seems we're getting two different answers from the county, on whether it can do anything or not," Esper said.

By becoming a hub, Metro began accepting a larger number of Stage 2 commercial aircraft — larger and noisier than more modern Stage 3 craft.

Northwest, through its acquisition of Republic Airlines, includes a large number of Stage 2 aircraft in its fleet.

"Ideally, there should be restrictions on the Stage 2 planes — maybe flying them only in the day," Duggan said. "But Northwest is competing against other airlines that have their hubs in other midwestern cities. They don't want to be the only one facing restriction."

Toward that end, he said, the county is lobbying for new nationwide guidelines for the older aircraft.

CAAN members filed petitions under a little-used provision of state bond law.

"We had to do it the way we did," Esper said. "Unfortunately, there's no provision calling for a direct vote."

Though the county would issue bonds, airport renovations would be financed by the airlines. Minneapolis-based Northwest, which handles roughly 60 percent of airports flights, would be assessed 60 percent of the cost.

"You can't expect Northwest to make a commitment if we can't sell the bonds," Duggan said.

But when it comes to the final vote, Duggan admitted, emotion is on the side of expansion opponents.

"If the issue comes down to noise, we'll lose," he said. "But if it comes down to whether the area needs a modern airport, we feel we'll win."

Esper the issue is more a question of whose needs will be met.

"Wayne County government is acting in the best interest of Northwest Airlines and regional and national transportation," he said. "It should be acting in the best interest of its people."

Publisher's premiere

New firm debuts with Blanchard book

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Imagine starting a new publishing firm and having the ex-wife of Gov. James Blanchard offer to tell all about her embattled marriage and divorce.

That's just what happened to Robert Mandel of West Bloomfield and Nick Altwerger of Farmington Hills.

"We couldn't have picked a better book to lead off," Mandel said Monday, the day Paula Blanchard's book, "'Til Politics Do Us Part," hit the bookstores. "It worked out just perfectly."

BLANCHARD HAD considered using a New York publisher for her book, but she said that would have delayed its release by a year. Her choice of a local firm resulted in her story becoming public during an election season that has the governor seeking a third term.

Yet she denied Monday that the book's release was timed to capitalize on the gubernatorial race or hurt her ex-husband's chances for re-election.

"I have not written a kiss-and-tell book," the 45-year-old Birmingham resident said. "It is not a bitter book. It is not a vengeful book."

Blanchard said her publishers did not pressure her to finish writing the book prior to the election, but Mandel conceded that releasing the book "was more attractive at this point."

And though Mandel agreed that "it's not really a kiss-and-tell book, there are some elements of kiss and tell."

Blanchard, now an associate vice president of the Southfield-based Casey Communications Management Inc., said she thought of writing a book as soon as the divorce became final in December 1987. But moving from the governor's residence and starting a new life took all of her time, she said.

She began writing the book in July of last year and finished it four months ago. As she sought a publisher, Blanchard learned that using a New York firm would delay publication by at least a year.

"I DIDN'T THINK it would be nearly as relevant or timely," she said. Moreover, she feared "turning my book over to strangers," whom she thought would "want to sensationalize" her troubled, 21-year marriage.

Mandel and Altwerger came highly recommended to her by Bill Haney, a Bloomfield Hills advertising executive, and George Weeks, a Detroit News political writer — both of whom had worked with the publishers.

"They (the publishers) were very interested in my book right off the bat," Blanchard said. "They had an instinctive sense of what I wanted to accomplish with the book."

She wanted to bury the past, she said. "It was important for me to get the book done and get it behind me and in the past. Now I can take both feet out of my past and get on with my life."

However, Blanchard insisted that "it was not a specific objective to bring the book out before the election."

Her book became the first published by the A&M Publishing Co. — a firm started a year ago by Mandel and Altwerger. Though the company was new, Mandel and Altwerger each had an extensive background in publishing.

MANDEL HAD been in the business for 15 years — most recently as director of Wayne State University Press. Altwerger, who heads the Farmington Hills-based Altwerger Associates, had 20 years of publishing experience.

The partners had published hundreds of books by the time they decided to start their own company, which currently operates out of their residences as they seek a permanent office. Mandel's wife, Dena, a Birmingham teacher, was one of the copy editors for the Blanchard book, along with John Klemme, another Birmingham teacher.

The response to the book, which has drawn attention from national newspapers, magazines such as "Cosmopolitan" and "Forbes," and television networks, surprised the publishers and Blanchard. The first 6,000 copies were sold quickly.

"We were literally sold out the day we printed it," Mandel said. The 240-page, cloth-bound book, which sells for $18.95, has gone to its second printing.

Levin, Schuette agree on Middle East action

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Don't look for a major disagreement between U.S. Sen. Carl Levin and GOP challenger Bill Schuette on U.S. military action in the Middle East. Both support U.S. action to date.

But they disagree sharply on necessary steps to keep oil prices low at home.

Both candidates support recent deployment of U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia as a necessary step to prevent regional domination by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"You don't want someone like Saddam Hussein controlling the Arabian peninsula said Levin, D-Detroit. "To have him controlling 75 percent of the world's oil reserves is unacceptable and could be devastating to the world's economy."

Schuette, R-Sanford, agreed the situation was dangerous to U.S. interests.

"If Hussein succeeds, he'll control the spigot that can turn on or off the oil that flows into the free world," Schuette said. "That's something we obviously don't want to have happen."

'You don't want someone like Saddam Hussein controlling the Arabian peninsula.'
— Sen. Carl Levin, D-Detroit.

Both also support the multinational effort to block sale of Iraqi oil and restrict the flow of goods into the middle eastern nation in retaliation for its invasion of Kuwait.

ECONOMIC PRESSURE represents a "do-able, achievable" effort to dislodge Iraqi troops from Kuwait, Levin said.

"If that boycott sticks, Iraq is a total basketcase and maybe the military will dispose of Saddam Hussein," Levin said.

Schuette praised president U.S. President George Bush's efforts in securing a multinational response.

"We're taking the lead, quite properly, ,but we're not going it alone," Schuette said.

Despite recent rollbacks, a heavy increase in domestic oil prices has triggered fears of a recession.

And it's on economic issues where Levin and Schuette disagree.

Oil companies should "show a little patriotism and not gouge the consumer" Levin said, a line also quoted by Michigan Gov. James Blanchard.

To prevent prices from rising further, Levin suggested selling off some of the U.S. strategic oil reserves, coupled with the sale of West German and Japanese reserves.

"If we are willing to sell oil from our reserve, then Germany and Japan should be opening up their reserve proportionally," he said.

AT THE SAME time, Levin encouraged President Bush to press oil companies for voluntary restraint in passing increases along to the consumer.

"I think that the president jawboning the oil companies can be very effective," Levin said. "They (oil companies) were very interested in seeing him elected."

Schuette has called for a U.S. Attorney general's investigation into oil price rises — with "rollbacks and rebates" for consumers if oil companies are found guilty of artificially raising prices.

But Schuette also said the U.S. should use the opportunity in expand domestic oil exploration.

"We need incentives for oil and gas exploration," he said. "By saying that, I'm not talking about opening new wells off the Florida Keys, but in re-opening wells that were forced to close, including some right here in Michigan."

U.S. troops have been arriving daily in Saudi Arabia. As many as 250,000 troops could be dispatched, augmented by contingents from Egypt and other Arab and western countries.

'If (Saddam) Hussein succeeds, he'll control the spigot that can turn on or off the oil that flows into the free world.'
— Rep. Bill Schuette R-Sanford

Iraq's subsequent annexation of Kuwait, stated by Hussein as a re-aquisiton of tradionally Iraqi territory, was "reminiscent of the events of the 1930s," Levin said — citing Nazi leader Adolf Hitler's stated rationale for annexing territory in central Europe.

"It's reminiscent of Hitler," Levin said.

At the same time the senator joined the chorus of elected officials criticizing oil companies for steep, rapid price increases in the face of the crisis.

If it comes to war, Levin said the U.S. has substantial air and naval power in the region, plus an apparent commitment from the Soviets not to intervene.

"If this invasion occurred a year ago, I think the dynamics might have been different," he said. "You might have had the Soviet Union playing off countries against each other. Now, the Soviet Union is really yearning to become part of the world order."

While also saying the situation reminded him of Nazi expansion, Schuette said the West's response would be different this time.

"He'll (Hussein) find that 1990 is not like 1939 when other nations pursued a policy of appeasement."

Chaldeans state support for U.S. policy

Carl Levin and Bill Scheutte aren't the only ones expressing support for U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The Chaldean Federation of America, a group whose area members can trace their family heritage to Iraq has placed, "confidence . . . behind President Bush," according to a statement released by area spokesman Tom George.

At the same time, the group denounced "aggressive action" in the region.

The group endorsed a "peaceful, speedy situation to this conflict in the Middle East."

"Many U.S. Chaldeans have relatives still living in Iraq," George said. "This gives us cause for even greater concern."

Chaldeans are Christians whose ancestry can be traced back to northern Iraq.

"As with any large group, Chaldeans have individual likes, dislikes and opinions," George said. "Because we are fortunate enough to be American citizens, we are free to express these feelings. Our confidence is behind President Bush and the government of the United States of America."

'Granny flats': Are they a blessing, or zoning nightmare?

By Pat Murphy
staff writer

In New Jersey and California, where they've caught on, they're called Elder Cottages, or ECHO (Elderly Cottage Housing Opportunity) housing.

In Australia, where they reportedly originated, they're called "Granny Flats."

By any name, however, they're a golden opportunity, according to a Bloomfield Hills businessman who plans to introducing them to the Detroit area.

"One of our biggest problems is affordable housing for the elderly," said J. Robert Gillette, who sees a marketing niche that coincides with a growing societal concern.

Gillette is well versed in the housing needs of the elderly. He is president of American House Retirement Residences with 14 senior citizen communities in southeast Michigan.

With the number of senior citizens growing rapidly — and federal assistance decreasing almost as rapidly — granny flats may be the wave of the future.

Gillette and associates said they are approaching the cities of Farmington Hills, Rochester Hills and Dearborn Heights with a two-part proposition.

They plan to submit site plans for granny flats — or elder cottages — at their retirement communities in each of those cities as prototypes. They envision 22 in Farmington Hills, 8 in Rochester Hills and 41 in Dearborn Heights.

They will be offered as an option for seniors who don't want, or can't afford, more expensive quarters like those at American House facilities, that can run as high as $1,400 per month.

Gillette also wants to offer granny flats to families that want to buy or lease the units to provide independent living for relatives near their residence.

Having a granny flat in the back yard for elderly parents offers numerous advantages, said Gillette, which explains why they have been accepted in areas of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and California.

"The seniors can live independently," he said. "Yet they're close enough to see the grandkids grow up.

"The beauty of this concept is that the cottages can be quickly set up (because they are manufactured and modular) and they can be easily removed when they are no longer needed."

The concept has been popular in Australia for years, but hasn't caught on in the United States because conditions haven't been ripe, he said, "Until now."

The units range from 500 to 700 square feet, with kitchen and laundry facilities. The costs are still tentative, but as envisioned by Gillette granny flats will lease for around $650 per month and sell for about $35,000.

Gillette said as with most new concepts, granny flats may generate some controversy, especially in density-conscious communities with restrictive zoning regulations.

"I don't see many problems with building the prototypes," he said. "We own the property" and already have favorable zoning.

But enabling families to lease or buy granny flats may take require some zoning changes or special use permits, he said.

"Once city officials and council members understand the critical need for this kind of housing, the cost savings for citizens and the improvement in the quality of life for our elderly, they will welcome it (granny flats) with open arms," Gillette said.

'The beauty of this concept is that the cottages can be quickly set up (because they are manufactured and modular) and they can be easily removed when they are no longer needed.'
—J. Robert Gillette, president American House Retirement Residences

That prediction may prove true in the long run. But the idea of putting modular housing units into single-family neighborhoods struck a decidedly sour note in the communities Gillette has targeted.

"Oh, my God," gasped Matt Marchand, deputy building director in Dearborn Heights, when informed of the proposal to put granny flats in areas zoned single-family.

Marchand said he hadn't seen the specifics of Gillette's proposal. "But it sounds like allowing multiple-family zoning in single-family areas. That's a 'no, no,' at least under existing regulations."

On second thought, however, Marchand said any proposal would be extensively researched. "Maybe they could be allowed with special land use permits."

In Farmington Hills, current zoning regulations for single family areas require minimum yard sizes and set backs, according to Katie Ulrich, staff planner. "And there are density limitations.

"I don't see many problems with them (granny flats) on their property (American House at 24400 Middlebelt)," said Ulrich, who had not yet seen any specific proposals.

But the planning commission would have to give serious review before granny flats would be allowed in residential areas, she said.

In Rochester Hills, existing zoning would not permit granny flats, according to Susan Danielewicz, associate planner.

"We have restrictions on minimum lot sizes," said, Danielewicz said. "There's also the question of how they would be taxed."

In other areas of the country, according to information provided by Gillette, granny flats are generally taxed as real property (like regular homes), personal property (like travel trailers) or temporary structures. The difference, of course, would affect the cost.

Brigit Hassig, community planner and housing specialist in the Southfield office of the Area Agency on Aging, said she is pleased to see the idea of granny flats coming to southeastern Michigan.

"There are zoning considerations to be worked out," she said. "But granny flats are an excellent alternative for the elderly."

Granny flats enable seniors to live independently while retaining their privacy, she said, and close to a usually good support system — their families or relatives.

She was concerned, however, the granny flats proposed by Gillette are simply too expensive for most families.

Board not listening to Walker

THE PLYMOUTH-CANTON school board isn't listening. It's nothing new. But this time there's a twist. Board members aren't listening to one of their own.

We think Les Walker has said some important things at recent school board meetings. Nobody seemed to be listening.

Here are some examples:

- Walker proposed a workshop-style meeting between the board and Citizens for Better Education. CBE is a conservative group that contends schools promote Satanism and not Christian values. Other board members rejected the proposed workshop.
- Walker suggested bringing the salaries of school administrators in line with community expectations. The board shrugged off the idea.
- Walker suggested setting up a plan to select a successor to Superintendent John Hoben. Again, nobody listened.

All three of Walker's proposals have merit and show that he's more in touch with the public than other board members. We suspect the reason for his sensitivity is that he recently was out stumping for votes in a tough election. Other board members weren't.

GOING TO THE PUBLIC to ask for votes keeps those in political office in touch with people. It's not a perfect system, but it's the only hope we as taxpayers have of controlling bureaucracies that are often more intent on feathering their own nests than on doing the job to which they were hired.

However, too often politicans end up identifying more with the institution they are running than with the voters who put them there. They forget they're supposed to represent the public.

We think that's happened with the bulk of the Plymouth-Canton school board. And that's why we're glad Walker is speaking up.

There has been plenty of criticism leveled at the school administration, much of which is misplaced. However, we think Walker's suggestions address some of the deep-seated problems in the district.

CBE has been a thorn in the side of the school district for several years. We suspect that school officials just wish it would go away. It won't. And the reality is that the school board is going to have to deal with the group's concerns. Holding a workshop-style meeting with CBE members, as Walker proposed, is a good start.

The salaries of school administrators are always a community concern. And we think Walker was doing the right thing when he proposed a five-year plan to bring salaries and benefits into line with community expectations.

WALKER IMPRESSED us on that one. It's easy to grandstand on administrative salaries and benefits. There's always the conference that somebody went to or a business meal that was suspect.

However, Walker was professional about the issue. He suggested a five-year plan to look at salaries and benefits. It sounds like he's thought the issue through.

Then there's the eventual retirement of Superintendent John Hoben. It was much talked about during the campaign, but it barely gets lip service at school board meetings.

And when Walker raised the issue, nobody was listening. And again, Walker had a plan well worth listening to. He wants a plan put in place so the public will have confidence in the board.

We think Walker is on the right track. He has brought issues to the board that surfaced during the campaign. And that's the way our political system is supposed to work.

It's just too bad the board isn't listening.

Legal literacy

Court can be effective classroom

"I feel if I get mugged by someone who can read at grade level, then the schools are failing us."

— Linda Start, director, Michigan Law Education Project

THE FBI's NEW crime statistics confirm what we all already know: Violent crime is up, many communities in southeast Michigan are suffering from it and the problem seems unsolvable.

There may not be an answer today, because the problem already has gotten away from us and is roaring around loose on its own. But there could be an answer tomorrow.

Information is the key. The solution is to make people aware of and familiar with the laws and mechanisms of our district and circuit courts.

The goal is to stop problems before they start.

Information is the key. The solution is to make people aware of and familiar with the laws and mechanisms of our district and circuit courts.

WE'RE ADVOCATING A graduation requirement that would make every high school student spend time in court and study law as it pertains to the average person. A course would be developed around the time spent in court and discussed, for a grade, in class.

That's been at least part of the the goal of the Michigan Law Education Project since it came into existence in 1982, says project director Start. The project's goal, in part, is to create what Start calls "legally literate citizens."

Start said Oakland County schools are well ahead in this area, but others are 'way behind.

"We want to help teachers teach young kids about our legal system. Years ago, they got civics and government classes, and that was supposed to make them better citizens," Start said. "We do recommend every school in the state offer a course called practical law."

In that course, Start said students not only would visit courtrooms but also would learn about day-to-day law, such as signing leases and learning about how mortgages work.

They would also spend time in actual courtrooms. "Most judges love to have kids" in their courtrooms and frequently make an effort to explain the proceedings, Start said.

ANYONE WHO'S SAT through a few days in court knows why this would be an effective educational tool for most, and a deterrent for some. It's too easy to read about or watch a trial as an uninvolved participator.

It's a whole different world in court.

Lives come apart at the seams in a court rooms. Cases that sound like small disputes take on monumental proportions when the judgment is personalized. One gets a sense of the seriousness of it all.

It's an opportunity to get a real feeling for just how much civilian traffic is pushed through the judicial system and for what reasons. One realizes drunk driving charges aren't reserved just for teenagers, drug charges are oblivious to income levels and addresses, and murder cases are sometimes so horrible that they play out like a bad Saturday afternoon movie.

In a column a while ago, one of our writers wondered if the horror of crime might be driven home by forcing students to witness the results of criminal acts, such as through an autopsy. It was a suggestion made with the best intentions while knowing the suggestion probably wasn't workable.

The suggestions came about in a discussion of how to rekindle feeling in a population repeatedly exposed, and now numb, to crime, particularly violent crime. Students who pretend to be tough and violent might reconsider if they saw the effect of a bullet.

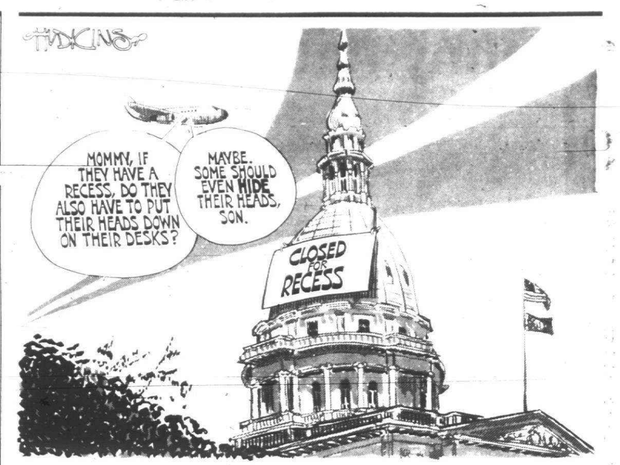
Start, however, has a better idea. She advocates tours of prisons as a way of making a point.

TOURING A LOCAL prison was her suggestion. Touring Jackson or Marquette might have more impact. In either case, it's an idea to support.

This is the beginning of a campaign to make what Start calls "legal literacy" a reality in our schools. Those schools that already have such a program probably can attest to its value.

The goal would be twofold: for the majority, it would provide an education in practical matters that will serve students well as they mature. For the minority, who sometimes seem to be in the majority because of the hideous crimes they commit, it might make them think twice before becoming involved in a criminal act.

Thinking once, actually, might be enough.



Profit supersedes life in Middle East action

GOD FORGIVE us if we let one American die for the price of a gallon of gasoline.

Again our sons and daughters are being sent off to war. By the hundreds and the thousands those once-smiling high school graduates load up on airplanes and fly off to a foreign land.

And America cringes.

Most of us realize the criminality of fighting wars that only serve to kill our children and fill the pockets of the wealthy.

The conversations in coffee shops, restaurants and board rooms, from Plymouth to Rochester, from the heart of America, really tell the story of how America feels about this newest bit of military adventurism.

The President should listen.

We have no business playing this dangerous game. And for once the leaders of our country can't fool us into believing this war is justified. They have no strawman to burn in effigy.

ALREADY THIS war is so very close to home. The names of those in danger mount. The anticipation of casualty lists, another wall of names, lingers.

Farmington Hills resident Pati Heath waits to find out the fate of her brother Kevin Bazner, who, along with his wife and children, is being detained in Baghdad, Iraq.

She is not alone in her vigil.

Karen Shamus, an administrator at Birmingham's Barnum Health Clinic, also finds herself caught up in this conflict. Visiting Kuwait, she has been taken to Iraq. And in Southfield, lawyer Tom Kuhn wonders when his partner, N. Peter Antone, will be coming home from his visit to family in Iraq.

Saddam Hussein was a Hitlerian figure intent on gaining lebensraum, the term used by Third Reich officials to excuse their invasion of the Soviet Union.

The truth is difficult to determine when such inflammatory phrases are so easily bandied about.

But a few things are for sure.

We have no business playing this dangerous game. And for once the leaders of our country can't fool us into believing this war is justified. They have no straw man to burn in effigy.

Fighting Communism as an excuse has run its course. And neither can democracy be used to cover our transgressions. The Arab oil sheiks are anything but democratic.

This is a war over oil, oil we don't even need. This is a war so that American oil barons can control their profits and so well-to-do Americans can keep consuming at a record pace.

CANTON Township's Faye Barbee pays special attention to the Middle East's phoney war. Her son, Brian, 20, a 1988 Plymouth-Salem graduate, now in the U.S. Army, is a part of the biggest American military buildup since Vietnam.

Joining in this macabre vigil is Plymouth Township's Sharon Fleming, whose stepson, Stephen, a member of the 82nd Airborne, also is part of the operation.

Nothing is more important than our children, our family, our friends.

We don't want them killed.

Yet the President persists in sending in more troops everyday to raise the ante and play a dangerous game of dare.

THE PROPAGANDA grows like a death-threatening cancer.

After 3 years, logjam is cleared

To the editor:

On behalf of my neighbors and myself, I wish to thank Susan Heintz, Carl Pursell and many others, for finally clearing up the logjam in the river behind our homes. The area is between Edward Hines and Five Mile Road.

Over the past three years as the jam worsened it caused flooding, resulting in more trees falling. That section is not mowed and has become very overgrown and wild. How many residents see a young deer in the back yard as I did in July?

I have been calling for three years. Karl, a supervisor, had stopped several times, assuring me that as soon as men were available, "Maybe." Susan Heintz's secretary walked down to check for her, but nothing happened.

Then, miracle of miracles, the big machines lumbered down across the river the first of August, cutting trees and pulling the deadfalls out. It was a tremendous effort by this time, but the river is free.

We are so blessed with a beautiful waterway in our area — how could we not appreciate it?

Again, may a 75-year-old resident — 73½ of them spent happily in the Plymouth area — offer sincere thanks to all those involved in helping us with our problem?

Helen A. Wallace,
(for our neighborhood)

Non-voters have no right to gripe

To the editor:

I went to the polls today to cast my vote in our primary.

I thought I'd have to wait in line, and was prepared to do so. What a shock. No lines. No people.

It was 10 a.m. and the lady at the desk told me I was number four. No wonder we see the same old faces in Lansing and Washington. No one cares enough to vote.

When we find ourselves without proper representation, everyone starts shouting and complaining. When we have a chance to change things, no one has time.

When our lawmakers vote themselves a hefty raise, everyone screams. Still we are too busy to be counted at the polls. Sure hope no one complains to me because I'll be more than happy to tell them where to go.

Are you aware of the recent cuts the veteran has had to endure? Oh, I forgot, you're too busy.

Karl McNulty,

2 left out in list of inns

To the editor:

We read your Observer & Eccentric Travel Scene issue of July 26 with mixed feelings.

Your article concerning bed and breakfasts in Antrim County left out two important ones. One, Torch Lake Sunrise Bed and Breakfast (5 years) is the only one right on Torch Lake. The other, Bay Bed and Breakfast on Lake Michigan is the oldest (6 years) and also the only one on Lake Michigan in Antrim County. Both are "step out the door into the water" bed and breakfasts.

Your article was interesting and well-written, but not as inclusive or accurate as we could wish.

Stand up for the Crayola 8

Jack Gladden

IN CASE YOU missed it because of all the stories about turmoil in the Middle East, local elections and the usual fare of murder and mayhem, there was a small protest down in Easton, Pa., last week that didn't make the headlines.

But in its own way, it has a place in the annals of American culture.

A handful of people gathered outside the offices of Binney & Smith Inc., makers of, among other things, Crayola crayons, to protest the company's decision to "retire" eight colors from its familiar 64-pack.

The protest was timed to coincide with the opening of the Crayola Hall of Fame, where the deposed colors will be on permanent display for anyone wishing to visit them.

There was plenty of well-orchestrated hoopla. The mayor of Easton and a congressman offered proclamations, Bloomingdale's staged a fashion show and Miss Pennsylvania, Marla Wynne, presided over the official opening.

Outside, picketers carried signs reading "Indians Call It Maize, We Call It Gone" and "Binney & Smith, America Takes Umber-Age."

THE SIGNS referred to the company's decision to "retire" the colors maize and raw umber along with blue gray, green blue, lemon yellow, orange red, orange yellow and violet blue.

According to company officials, today's kids, who grew up with color television and elaborate video games, find those colors drab. They're being replaced with cerulean, dandelion, fuchsia, jungle green, royal purple, teal blue, vivid tangerine and wild strawberry.

A cynic might see all of this as just a marketing ploy to sell more crayons — and certainly that has to be a factor.

But the fact that a decision by a crayon manufacturer to change eight out of 64 colors in one of its products received any kind of media attention at all says something about the importance of color in American culture. It also says something about the role that crayons have played in that culture.

The first set of eight Crayola crayons came out in 1903 and almost all of us around today grew up with them. The coloring book is as much a part of American life as comics and movies.

And if you doubt the magic that color can add to any medium, take another look at "The Wizard of Oz." When Dorothy walks through that door and the black and white image turns to color, audiences, even watching it on a small-screen television today, still react. Americans just love color, wherever it pops up.

AND CRAYON makers are not the only ones to capitalize on that fact. Many of us in the newspaper business laughed loudly a few years ago when Al Neuharth and Gannett launched USA Today, a national newspaper filled with short-short stories and with vivid colors splattered liberally throughout its pages.

It was generally viewed as a newspaper for a color television generation and some of us figured it would never make it. We were wrong, and before long other papers across the country began copying its techniques: dramatic graphics, bright colors, lots of bells and whistles.

And when Ted Turner announced his intention to "colorize" some classic black and white movies, many of us were horrified. Some of us still are, but a lot of people like seeing their old favorites in living, computer-generated color.

Old Al and Ted knew what they were doing and so do those people down in Easton.

For those who grew up with black and white television — or, for some of us who grew up with no television at all, just radio — lemon yellow and raw umber crayons were exotic enough.

But in today's world, apparently, that's no longer true. Welcome the age of cerulean and wild strawberry. But shed no tears for maize or blue gray. They've got their own hall of fame down in Easton. You can visit them anytime you feel like it.

New approach to reading is effective

Doc Doyle

Q: Our school district newsletter talks about a whole language approach that is going to be used this year for teaching elementary children to read. From what I understand, this method of learning to read is different than my older children had when in our elementary school. Are other school districts using this method? What is the difference in this new method from the way my older children learned to read? Is it just another fad?

A: The whole language approach to reading has hit the educational scene in the last couple years like a tidal wave. It is based on the theory that a child will learn to be a better reader through continuous literature reading experiences followed by massive writing experiences.

Whole language advocates tend to reject some of the traditional, long standing methods used for teaching children to read. Whole language advocates believe children need to spend more time in reading literature than into responding to isolated words on a flash card.

Whole language advocates want children to read literature as opposed to isolated sentences in a textbook so they can develop critical thinking skills. They believe the stories in textbooks are still good but rely too much on short sentence understanding as opposed to the natural flow of the author's language and over-all intent.

The whole language approach encourages children to interact with the author's writing, to agree or disagree . . . not to just regurgitate what has been read. It says, "Let the child release a free flow of expression. Then let the child write, edit, share with peers, re-write and publish the internalized perception of what he/she has read."

Whole language advocates would say don't inhibit creative thought with repetitive drill and practice exercises. They believe drill and practice should be meaningful as opposed to drills children do while not knowing how, when or where to apply it.

The whole language approach is like teaching kids to swim by getting them into the deep end as soon as possible. Let's not wait until each child has mastered every isolated swimming technique before exposing the kids to their first swimming experience.

Until the recent whole language approach movement many children have been reading stories (Dick and Jane) from their textbooks and filling out workbook sheets or dittos.

Today, the whole language approach is found in many classroooms. However, it is not embraced by all elementary teachers.

Some teachers prefer the more traditional teaching of isolated reading skills with an emphasis on sounding out words. Many teachers blend what they consider to be the best of both concepts.

All this notwithstanding, the whole language approach must ensure that kids do edit, do re-write, do correct their spelling errors, do master grammar or this process will come and go.

Let's remember that many teachers were using this approach long before it was given an official title.

Indeed, many teachers always have blended literature reading for personal growth with drill and practice. Great high school bands and great high school athletic teams all use drill and practice.

I favor the whole language approach, but let's not throw the baby out with the bath water. Children must master the fundamentals.

Badly timed lights pack double loss

Tim Richard

EIGHTEEN TRAITORS sat at the traffic light on Farmington Road. Ten vehicles were headed north, eight south.

We waited there with engines running, burning precious fossil fuel, some of us listening to news reports about Iraq and why our gasoline prices were rising.

No one came out of the side street on the west. No one came out of the side street on the east. But 18 vehicles were halted on Farmington Road, waiting for the red light to turn green.

That light is timed so that vehicles starting on a green light at Nine Mile and heading south can't possibly make that traffic light at the half-mile mark on green.

Those of us coming from the south had had to wait for a red light at Eight Mile, another red at the half mile, with still another red light awaiting us at Nine Mile.

OUR EFFECTIVE traveling speed was not 45 mph but about 25 because we spent half our time waiting for nobody at red lights.

Moreover, there is a factor called "inertia." That means it takes more fuel to accelerate from 0 to 45 than to travel the same distance at a steady 45.

And so those badly timed traffic signals were us a double loss of fuel — idle time and inertia.

OAKLAND COUNTY, where the aforementioned abomination occurs, has fairly good road management with a few notable exceptions.

John Grubba and the gang at the Road Commission have installed a number of computerized traffic signals which give longer green lights during rush hours. Oakland has far more signals with delayed left turn green arrows than its derelict neighbor, Wayne County.

When you drive up to any traffic signal in the world, the mathematical odds are 50 percent that it will be green and 50 percent red, right? Only in mathematical theory.

In most communities, particularly on western Wayne County's mile roads, the odds are 80 percent that you will hit a red light. I have done repeated tests on Eight Mile, Six Mile, Joy and others. Traffic engineer Alan Richardson is doing a dismal job.

IT'S POSSIBLE to set traffic lights so that you can reach most on green.

Get on Eight Mile at Vernier outside Eastland Shopping Center, accelerate to the posted speed limit and head west. You can travel 19 miles — even in heavy traffic, even on a wet day — and never have to stop for a red light.

But Inkster Road is an automatic red. A half mile later is Brentwood — another red. Middlebelt — another red. After 19 miles of green lights, you now hit three reds in one mile.

It's bad traffic engineering by both counties.

I DOUBT many drivers are conscious that they hit the majority of lights on red. They just cuss "traffic."

I live near an intersection where there are lots of bad collisions between a vehicle coming through and one trying to make a left turn.

I know why. The guy making the left turn wants to do it on the yellow light. The guy coming through goes like a bat out of hell because he doesn't want to stop for another red light.

In fact, my observation is that after 10 a.m. on a Saturday, the majority of left turns in suburbia must be completed on red because drivers coming through simply refuse to halt for the warning yellow.

It's possible to reverse the odds — to hit 80 percent of traffic lights on green. Just travel 10 miles in excess of the speed limit.

Of course, as a law-respecting journalist, I would never encourage you to break the speed limit. But I can report that you can save fuel, reduce your frustration level and get to your destination in half the time by driving 10 mph too fast.

Our traffic engineers designed it that way.

Scientists find fun at this camp

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Melody Kindraka, 9, thinks she'd like to be a scientist when she grows up.

She got a good start on that career path last week while participating in a science camp at New Morning School in Plymouth Township.

"I thought it would be fun and I like to learn things," said Melody, a Canton resident and Miller Elementary School student. "We've learned about dinosaurs, fish, the human body, and teddy bears in space, how the environment is being ruined."

The science camp for children ages 6-11 was held Monday through Friday, Aug. 6-10, at the parent cooperative school. Each day's activities were based on a different theme.

"The main reason is we want the kids to have fun and we want to get them excited about science," said staff member who coordinated the program. "We've had a fun-filled week."

ABOUT 40 CHILDREN signed up for the camp. Another camp is being held at the school this week, and those children are learning all about animals.

During one session, children explored the mystery of "Nelson New Morning's Case of the Sudden Sickness."

They moved from station to station at the school, learning all about how the body works. At one station, children danced and jumped around, and then found their heart rates had risen as a result of that activity. A real stethoscope was used, and each child got to listen to his or her heartbeat.

At another station, children made bacteria cultures, using material from their mouths. Youngsters made two cultures, one before brushing their teeth and the other afterward.

Other stations were set up so kids could learn about the respiratory system, digestive system, brain and other organs. It turned out that a simple case of too much junk food led to Nelson New Morning's illness. That day's activities ended with Jeannette Forest, a public health nurse for Wayne County, talking to the children about the importance of good nutrition and good health habits.

A NUMBER OF hands-on activities were included during each day at camp.

"That's how we make it exciting and get the message across," Martin said. Oceanography, dinosaurs, space exploration and animals were among other subjects children learned about at camp.

Martin's seen educators try to make science more interesting, getting away from the idea that it's a boring and difficult subject suitable only for geniuses.

"I think the schools are trying to get away from that. I don't feel that's so prevalent today."

Martin, a Northville resident, teaches specialty classes in science at New Morning School. She earned a bachelor's degree in biochemistry from Pennsylvania State University and did graduate work in analytical chemistry at Penn State.

More boys than girls signed up for last week's camp. It can be a challenge to get girls interested in science, Martin said, and some grade-school girls may have other interests.

"Girls mature differently, and that's a lot of it. But these girls are really enjoying themselves."

Rebecca Himm, 11, is among girls who went to the science camp. Her mom helped at the camp, and Rebecca decided she'd like to go.

"I want to be a doctor when I grow up," said Rebecca, a student at Fairlane Christian School West in Northville. She's interested in pediatrics.

"We're learning about all sorts of things like dinosaurs and the body." Rebecca, a Livonia resident, and the others also learned about protecting the environment.

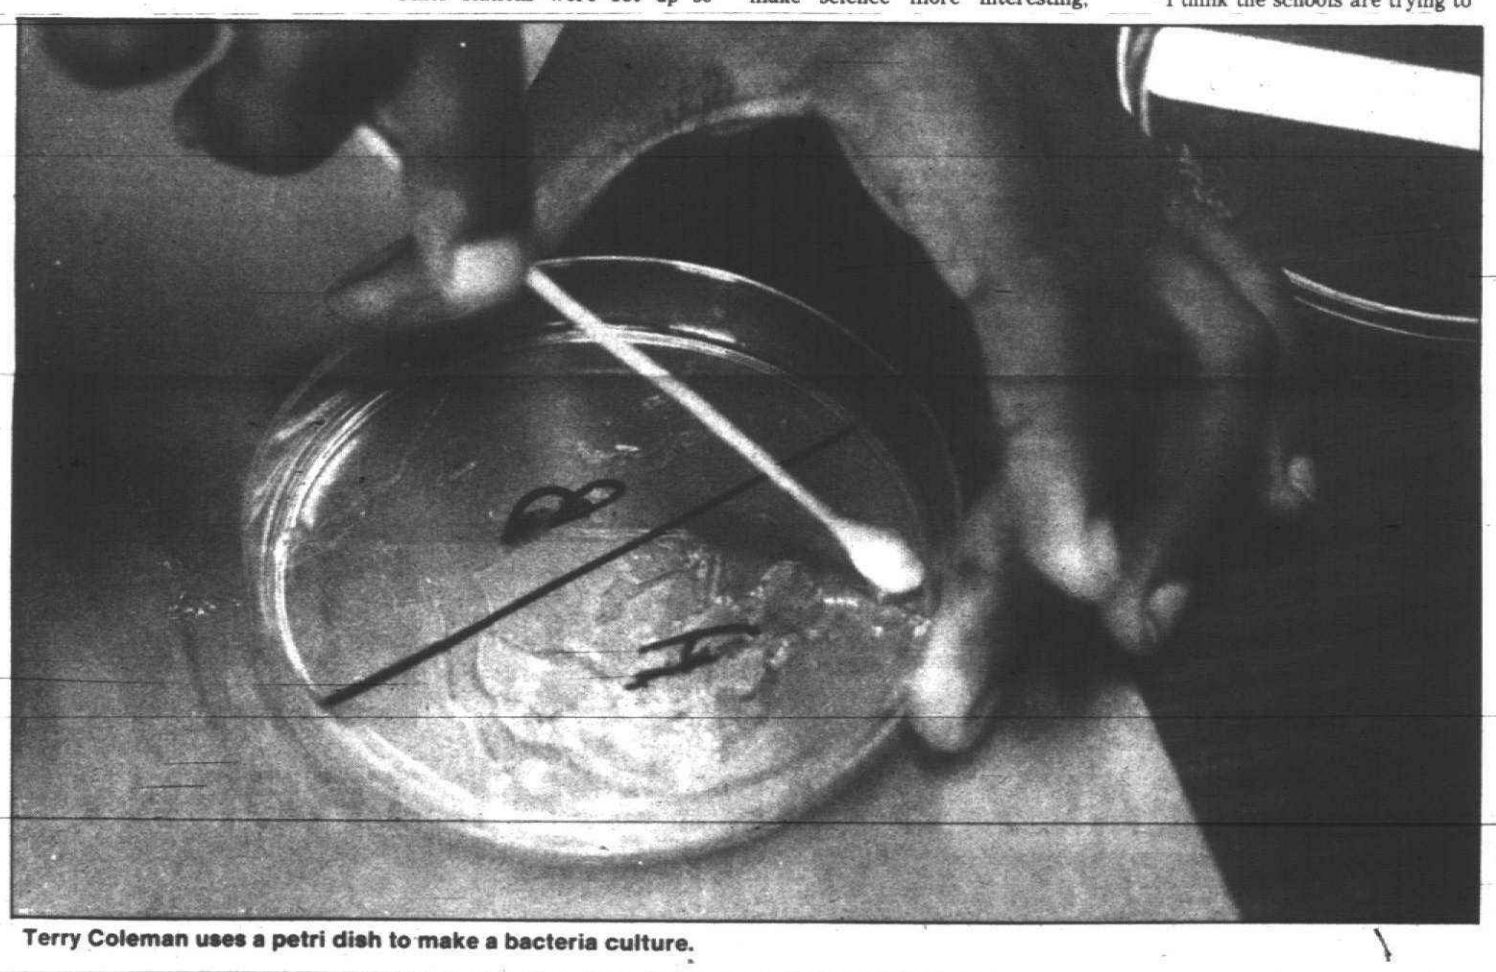
Going to camp was a bit different from going to school.

"I like it better because you don't get homework and stuff," she said with a smile.

Martin Treppa, 8, signed up for camp "because I thought it would be fun." He lives in Livonia, goes to Hoover Elementary School and is interested in becoming a chemist.

"I'm learning about the human body, the ocean, dinosaurs," Martin said of his time at camp. "It's a very good thing."

Melissa Shankwiler scoops up a handful of cold spaghetti to get a sense of what brain tissue is like. Human anatomy was among the subjects studied at the week long science camp.



Terry Coleman uses a petri dish to make a bacteria culture.

Garrett Marshall measures his lung capacity, getting some help from Laura Sasek as the other students watch.

Back to school

Parents can help students adjust to new challenges

By Julie Brown
staff writer

It's just about time to go back to school, and that can be a little frightening for some children.

Some will be going to kindergarten for the first time, and first-graders will need to get used to attending school all day. Teachers agree there are steps parents can take to help.

"Make sure your child has at least seen the building," said Lynda Zahm, apreschool and kindergarten teacher at New Morning School in Plymouth Township. Visiting the school before the first day of classes — and meeting the teacher if possible — is a good idea.

Walking around the school and playground before the first day of classes can ease a child's fears, said Sharon Belobraidich, a first grade teacher at Hoben Elementary School in Canton. Walking the route to school several times in advance is helpful, as is having an older sibling or neighbor child walk with a brand-new student to school.

'Make sure your child has at least seen the building.'

— Lynda Zahm, New Morning teacher

EDUCATORS AGREE the process of getting a child ready for school begins long before that youngster is 5 or 6.

"The biggest thing, I think, is reading to them," said Belobraidich, a Plymouth resident. Her colleague at Hoben, first grade teacher Barbara Greanya, agreed that reading's important.

Visiting the library and "reading that favorite book over and over again" can help youngsters prepare for school, said Greanya, a Plymouth resident. Limiting time spent watching TV is also important.

"The kids watch too much TV, far too much, and the wrong kind of TV," Belobraidich said. Parents need to be aware of what their children are watching, and also should limit time spent playing Nintendo, she said.

Taking children to museums and other places is a help, Zahm said, and those excursions don't have to be unusual or expensive.

Zahm recently took her children, ages 6 and 8, to the grocery store. One took care of the shopping list and the other used a calculator to keep track of prices.

"They both had something to keep them very busy. They were learning things in the process," she said.

IT'S IMPORTANT to give children some responsibility for making decisions, such as choosing what to wear, Belobraidich said. Doing simple chores around the house, such as picking up toys, helps children learn to be responsible.

Some programs, such as kindergarten round-up in the spring, are designed to help children feel comfortable about starting school. At New Morning School, picnics are held in August for children who are about to start preschool and kindergarten.

"That really helps a lot," said Zahm, a Canton resident with 12 years of teaching experience.

Some younger students at New Morning, a parent cooperative school, have brought family photos with them to school.

"One little girl just clutched it that first day, and then she didn't need it after that," Zahm said.

Taking a small toy or, doll to school can help make a younger child feel more comfortable, said Greanya, who has taught in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools for 10 years. A child can keep that toy in his or her backpack and just know that it's there.

"When they come home the first day, talk about what happened," Greanya said. Children may be apprehensive about the lunchtime routine for the first full day of school, and parents can go over that routine.

OTHER SUGGESTIONS include:

- Make sure your child has all the supplies he or she will need. Some teachers provide a list of suggested supplies the first day of school.
- Make sure your child is dressed in clean, comfortable clothing. Styles appropriate for the child's age are recommended, and children need to dress for the weather.
- Don't put a child's name on clothing or backpacks where the name will be visible. It's important to label supplies and clothing, but labels should be put inside clothing or backpacks.
- For a child who will ride the bus, follow the bus to school that first day and make sure the child gets to the right classroom.
- Avoid having children stay at home if they're not really ill. Missing school days makes it tough for students to keep up.
- Avoid calling a child names or comparing a child to an older sibling.

"They're all at a different speed," said Greanya, who has two children, one in eighth grade and the other in 12th. Children learn to read at different times, and the first-grader who learns next February is doing just as well as the child who learned last year.

'It's important to be accepting of where your child is. Self-esteem, attitude, is a really important part in that whole learning process.'

— First grade teacher Barbara Greanya

"It's important to be accepting of where your child is," Greanya said. "Self-esteem, attitude, is a really important part in that whole learning process."

EDUCATORS AGREE that parents who have concerns about their child's progress shouldn't hesitate to contact the teacher.

It's best to start with the teacher, said Belobraidich, who has more than 20 years of teaching experience. If a parent's not satisfied, he or she can then contact the principal.

"I think that's only common courtesy and it's the way they would want to be treated too. This is a team approach. We're trying to educate your child."

Parents should be open-minded, she said, and should remember there are two sides to a story. Belobraidich found that was the case when her own children were younger.

"They don't lie." Children have been known to exaggerate a bit, or they might simply not understand a situation.

Teachers need to know about crises at home, such as a divorce or the death of a grandparent. Telling a teacher about a crisis may be difficult for some parents, but they need to consider their child's best interests, Belobraidich said.

"A teacher needs to know that, and that isn't something we go into the lounge and talk about."

Even a smaller problem, such as bickering on the playground or difficulty with a seating assignment, can be upsetting to a child. Parents should let the teacher know about such situations, Greanya said.

"Often that's an eye-opener for the teacher."

Helping

Social worker's seen family life change

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Sue Davis wasn't really thinking about a career when she started college in the early 1960s.

"Women were teachers, nurses or secretaries," said Davis, who started her studies at Delta College, a community college near Midland. After two years there, she went to New Jersey, where her sister lived, and worked for a couple of years. She then came back to Michigan and trained as a dental assistant.

"I did that until my first child was born," said Davis, now the director of community services for Growth Works Inc. in Plymouth. The agency provides counseling, substance abuse treatment, job assistance and other services.

She started at Growth Works in 1984 as an intern and was hired for a part-time position the following year. Davis, a certified social worker, has been in her current job for about a year and a half.

IN THE LATE 1970s, one of her children was in special education and Davis got involved with the parent advisory group for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

"I started doing some advocacy work with parents of handicapped children." Davis, a Canton resident, realized she found that work rewarding.

She went on to earn a bachelor's degree in social work from Madonna College and a master's degree in guidance and counseling from Eastern Michigan University.

"I went back to school when I was 35. I had always really wanted to go back to school."

Davis had been involved in her children's school and scouting activities, and had done volunteer work. She realized it was time to make a change, and her husband supported her decision.

"I loved going to school." When Davis was 18 and earning Cs, she didn't realize she was intelligent and able to handle college-level work. In her 30s, she found she could indeed handle that work. She's considering taking some management courses, and may earn an associate's degree in that field at some point.

HER RESPONSIBILITIES at Growth Works are varied. She's responsible for the Youth Assistance program, a diversion program for juvenile offenders from Plymouth and Canton.

"I write grants for the agency."

She supervises the Community Employment Service, including the job bank and workshops in such areas as interviewing and resume writing. Davis also does some group work with parents in the diversion program and some work with the Youth Assistance students.

"The hands-on stuff is exciting." She enjoys her job because it allows her to use many skills. She's been able to develop programs and to provide services.

"There's so much flexibility." She appreciates the support of her colleagues at Growth Works, a Plymouth Community United Way/United Foundation agency.

Davis, who grew up in Midland, has found her job's required her to identify her own limitations. She realizes she can't solve all the problems she encounters. She recently had a parent call her to say thank you, and that was rewarding.

"Parents, I think, are real frustrated today." They're less likely to have other family members nearby who can help.

"I think parenting's tough. I think it can be real fun. It's not a popularity contest."

RAISING CHILDREN costs more these days, and those financial constraints mean more women need to work outside the home. The social changes of the 1960s led to more permissive and democratic attitudes, and some parents find it tough to say "no" to their children.

"I'm not sure democracy always works in a family. You can give them 500 reasons and they still want to know why."

Davis and her husband have three children, one going on 17 and twins going on 15. All will be students at Plymouth Canton High School this fall.

Her husband retired this past June following a 23-year career with the Michigan State Police, including laboratory work and work with the fire marshal's division. He now does private investigative consulting and some teaching.

Davis was glad she could be with her children when they were younger.

"I enjoyed it. I enjoyed being real involved in their lives. I also knew when it was time not to do that."

When her children started middle school, Davis realized it was time to pursue other options.

"You cannot be Supermom. I tried it for two or three years, and it was horrible. There wasn't a balance."

Her professional expertise hasn't turned Davis into the perfect parent.

"When I go home sometimes I'm a regular parent." She makes the same mistakes other parents do, and doesn't always handle things as effectively as she could.

"Then you sometimes become harder on yourself. I'm just so much more aware of things, sooner maybe than other parents. I know all the dangers out there."

Her children have been known to tell her to leave that mindset at work.

Davis returns to Midland periodically to visit, but has enjoyed living in the Detroit area.

"I like being down here. It's exciting down here and there are things to do."

In her free time, Davis enjoys reading fiction and doing needlework. Her family also likes to travel. She's planning to take a painting class this fall, and is considering doing some volunteer work in the community.

"Literacy is something I'm wanting to check out." She's interested in volunteer work that's different from her job.

Faith leads teams onward to victory

Before the game begins, members of the Guardian Lutheran team pause for a moment of prayer.

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

At a picnic table nearby, three guys with beards and motorcycle helmets talk and drink from quart-sized bottles of beer. The bikers pay little attention to what's taking place only a few yards away.

In this case, the foul lines mark a contrast in lifestyles.

Mount Hope Congregational Church and Christ Our Savior Lutheran Church are locked into battle in a Northwest Christian Women's Softball League (N.C.W.S.L.) contest in Hines Park.

The women's circuit is in its first season. Eight teams representing churches from around the area participate, including Christ Our Savior, Mount Hope Congregational, St. Michael Lutheran in Wayne, St. Paul Lutheran, Kenwood Church of Christ in Livonia, Memorial Church of Christ in Livonia, Timothy Lutheran Church in Livonia and Guardian Lutheran Church in Dearborn.

Jill Metz pitches for the Kenwood Church of Christ.

AT FIRST glance, the action is like what one would expect at any other softball game. Dust rises from the diamond as runners round the bases and ground balls are turned into outs.

But there's more than just runs, hits and errors to this league, according to organizers.

"We're not nearly as competitive as other leagues," said Pat Larson of Livonia, president of N.C.W.S.L. and first baseman for Christ Our Savior Lutheran. "It's just our attitude — promoting Christian fellowship."

Promoting Christian values means there's no swearing or rough play in this league. Umpires have the mandate to toss anyone who violates those rules.

Those are included in the bylaws that were adopted by league members, who just want to enjoy some friendship and softball.

"I think it ties the secular with the Christian," said Laura Thomas of Livonia, league secretary and treasurer and outfielder for Christ Our Savior. "You can take something secular and make it Christian.

"For those who love the game of softball, we know we can play in a non-threatening environment."

The idea for a new women's league came from a need to find playing fields closer to home. Thomas and Larson played for Christ Our Savior women's team in a YMCA Women's Church League.

BOTH DECIDED to form their own league. The pair hand-delivered 45 letters and received a response from 12 churches in the area.

League play commenced with eight teams on May 1. St. Michael Lutheran won the regular season championship with a 13-1 record.

All eight teams are involved in a double-elimination tournament and will conclude the season with an all-star game, awards and picnic Saturday, Aug. 18, at Bicentennial Park.

"It wasn't as difficult as I thought it would be," said Larson, deeming the inaugural season a success.

The level of play has been surprisingly good. All the teams have been evenly matched, according to Don Rauch of St. Michael Lutheran.

"The girls seemed to be having fun," Rauch said.

One reason for that is the league requires 51 percent of the roster to consist of church members. A letter from the church pastor is needed for a player to join another team, a practice designed to cut down on ringers.

The league has been a success in more important ways.

"I wanted to get together with churches of other faiths to let everyone know we're all one Christian faith," Thomas said.

● VISIT TO EGYPT

A Livonia man visited Egypt for five weeks this summer on behalf of the New Wilmington Missionary Conference and returned more interested than ever in doing missions work in the U.S.

Chris Ockerman, a 1988 graduate of Temple Christian High, went to Egypt with four other college students.

The New Wilmington Missionary Conference takes place annually on the campus of Westminister College in New Wilmington, Pa. Each year, the conference sends a team of students overseas to get a taste of life in the missions field. The students return and share their experiences with the conference's 1,000 participants.

● GUEST SPEAKER

Catherine Green will provide insights through her topic, "This Gift Called Life," 9:30 and 11 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 19, at Unity Church, 28660 Five Mile, between Inkster and Middlebelt, Livonia. Green teaches meditation classes. For information, call 421-1760.

● SONS OF SONG

The Sons of Song will perform in concert 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 19, at United Assembly of God Church, 46500 N. Territorial, Plymouth. The group was reunited last September following a 14-year absence in which members worked in their own respective church and musical ministries. They will sing southern gospel, traditional and some contemporary songs. Deo Young is the master of ceremonies. The public may attend. Baby-sitting will be available for preschool children.

● PARENTING

"Reading with Children" and "The Home Environment" will be topics covered in a parenting class 6 p.m. Monday, Aug. 20, at Redford United Methodist Church, 22400 Grand River. Participation is free of charge. Child care is provided. Participants can register at the door or by calling 531-1415.

Choosing peace: our best course

The recent events in the Middle East should not have surprised us. The actual timing for the invasion of Kuwait might have been somewhat unexpected, but surely no one can suggest that this capacity for evil and harm is restricted to Iraqi leaders. That kind of blindness can only lead to chaos.

Greed has always been an engine for evil and harm. Included as one of the seven deadly sins in the Middle Ages, Homer realized its native power long before, when he observed in the Odyssey that greed doubles all human suffering.

It is important to acknowledge our own capacity for evil as we once again move onto the soil of other countries to join with them in their defense of land and property. Any pretense to self-righteousness will only compound the evil already begun.

THE CURBING of this greed that dwells within all of us must therefore begin with ourselves. The observation that Jesus made in his Sermon on the Mount that one "should take out the log of your own eye and then see clearly to take the speck out of your brother's eye" is always relevant, even though not always appreciated.

It is entirely possible that lives will be taken from both sides in weeks to come. The horrors of war will again be experienced in homes of our land. But the battleground for this war cannot be restricted to the desert lands of the Middle East.

The battleground for greed is within the mind and heart of each person. The conflict in the Middle East did not spring up out of desert sands heavily laden with oil. The conflict in the Middle East was nurtured to full growth by uncontrolled desires for personal gain. The conflict will be restrained by controlling those same desires.

Checking and restraining personal desires might not seem as decisive or consequential as charging into battle astride an Abrams tank, or blowing up an enemy pipeline, but the kind of acts we engage in here will be equally significant to the final resolution. Expressing it plainly, one can say that the quickest way to have our soldiers returned to the United States is to stop being greedy.

Voting more funds for national defense, denouncing the evil ways of foreign powers and marshaling powers behind flag and country might be politically productive, but until each and every one of us is part of the solution, we are part of the problem.

But that should be the springboard of hope. If we are part of the problem, then we can also be part of the solution. We can choose. For God, country and self, let that choice "be peace on earth, and let it begin with me."

Traveler's sit at round table to share tips

By Iris Sanderson Jones
travel editor

I called Sally Sawyer of Birmingham because I wanted the name of a bed-and-breakfast where she stays in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario; Bonnie Binary of Livonia wrote to me for information about London, England; a friend from Northville called Pearl Ahnen of Brighton for a restaurant suggestion near Saugatuck, where Pearl has a summer cottage; Mary Schoen of Birmingham told a business associate from Plymouth about a great little inn in France.

Isn't that how you get your best travel information? By word of mouth between friends and acquaintances?

You tell travel stories while you sit around the dinner table with friends. So do I. Let's expand the table and the conversation. You have a travel question? Put me or a reader in the Traveler's Round Table and ask away.

I have travel questions. I'd like to seat you around the round table and ask for your suggestions.

Starting this week, you're all invited to pull up a chair. I'll start the conversation by telling you about my upcoming trips and ask for your advice. If you want information that I can gather for you while I'm out of town, tell me what you need to know.

If you want information about other destinations, I probably already have it; if not, one of our readers does.

What recommendations do you have for me based on your own travel experiences about the following trips?

ViaRail Canada: This time I'm traveling through eastern Canada to the maritime provinces. I've seen the west by rail, but never often enough.

Amtrak: I'm traveling from Boston to Toledo/Detroit. Maybe you have been that way, or on some other Amtrak itinerary?

St. John: New Brunswick and other parts of maritime Canada.

New England: There is too much to see along that small strip of coastline. Where should I go?

Boston: Too little time, too much to do. Suggestions?

Bermuda: Can I see this small island in a day or two?

Cruises: They're all different. Which one did you choose?

Fall getaways: Can you suggest a great one?

Toronto: If you could pick only one thing to do there, what would it be?

Winter and holiday season trips: Are you thinking ahead, as I am?

Barbara McGrew-Beckstrom and Jim Beckstrom, owners of Hibbard Tavern in Milford, prepare a cozy room for overnighters to hide out in peace at the historic bed and breakfast.

Nestled in comfort

Milford B&B is cosy escape from big city life

By Iris Sanderson Jones
travel editor

John and Denise McMillan of Bloomfield Hills got married in the Hibbard Tavern in Milford this summer. Owen and Marilyn White of South Lyon celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary there in June. Allan and Lisa Wing of Farmington Hills, who had never stayed in a bed-and-breakfast before, stayed overnight New Year's Eve because they wanted to get away from the kids without going too far from home.

I found all of those area residents in the Hibbard Tavern guest book, but they are only a few of the southwest Michigan travelers who have learned that you need not travel a thousand miles to enjoy a vacation or to explore an interesting town like Milford.

If you live in Milford, you live a contemporary small-town life on the edge of a city, but if you visit the house owned by Barbara McGrew-Beckstrom and her husband Jim Beckstrom on Summit Street you find yourself in the 1990 version of a tavern built in 1838 as a stagecoach stop between Pontiac and Howell. Most of us like to foray into the past occasionally as long as the beds are new and the toilets flush.

My first glimpse of the 19th century was when I turned off Interstate-96 at the Milford exit; a sign read, "Milford Township, Established 1832." I followed Milford Road to where it dead-ends at General Motors Road; locals turn left to the General Motors Proving Grounds and right into town, leaving strangers to guess the way. Follow Main Street through downtown Milford and up the hill to the Hibbard Tavern.

There is no way for a passerby to know that the house on the corner of Union and Summit was once half of the Hibbard Tavern, that the owners cut it off and log-rolled it next-door when they sold the tavern in the late 1850s.

Brochure sketches always make you think that bed-and-breakfasts like this stand alone, but the Hibbard Tavern is just another house on the street until you see the sign that reads "Michigan Historic Site" and turn uphill into the gravel drive. Guests park beside the picket fence or behind the two-story carriage house.

At the moment, Carol McElroy lives upstairs in Berlin travelers bring back tales with pieces of the wall

Two weeks ago we asked readers to let us know if they have visited Berlin since the wall came down. We couldn't find anyone on our travel staff or among the travel agents we knew who had done so. The phone started ringing that afternoon and the letters started coming in the next morning.

From Richard C. McNight of Westland:

Dear Ms. Jones:
My son and I visited Berlin and East Germany between June 28 and July 11. Besides carrying home several pounds of fragments from the Berlin Wall, we had a chance to spend time in both East and West Berlin.

'The contrast between the two Berlins is dramatic. The West has bright shopping avenues lined with cafes, restaurants and discos. The East has strikingly well preserved public monuments and museums and beautifully kept public areas.'
— Richard McNight Westland

The contrast between the two Berlins is dramatic. The West has bright shopping avenues lined with cafes, restaurants and discos. The East has strikingly well preserved public monuments and museums and beautifully kept public areas. West Berlin is up to date in all respects, while East Berlin is something out of a 1930's time capsule.

Huge Mercedes sedans from the West traveling over 100 mph on the autobahn pass the boxy little East German Trabants and Wartburgs struggling to reach 60 mph. There are only a handful of gas stations in any region of East Germany and long lines stretch along crossroads

each one. Lead-free gas is in short supply. Russian soldiers are frequently seen traveling the autobahn, identified by the red star on their trucks.

There are several main corridors open between the two cities and many more unofficial openings that allow foot traffic to cross. There are no border checks or formalities of any kind. The customs booths sit empty and closed. But mile upon mile of the wall still remains, more than enough to supply souvenir seekers for several years. Actually, there are two walls, with a no man's land in between.

While in East Germany, we visited Limbach-Oberfrohna, the birthplace of my grandfather, Herbert Franke, who is 92 and lives in Alma. The little town he left in 1904 is just four miles from Karl Marx Stadt, a large city in the process of reassuming its pre-war name of Chemnitz.

It is located in the rolling green hills of Saxony, adjacent to the Czechoslovakian border. We found the exact place of his birth, took lots of pictures, and returned with exciting memories. At the same time, we got a chance to see the spartan living conditions of the East Germans, the stores with few items on the shelves, the long lines at the bank to exchange their old East German marks for new West German marks and the beautiful old houses little changed or updated in 40 years.

May I recommend Berlin and East Germany to anyone who would enjoy experiencing social change at its most dramatic. Go soon, though, before the contrasts between East and West have worn away.

From Dr. Marcia De Cass Andersen of Plymouth and Geoffrey Smereck of Farmington Hills:

DR. MARCIA ANDERSEN

Geoffrey Smereck of Farmington Hills takes to the wall with a chisel for a momento of his time in Berlin.

Andersen and Smereck were on a business trip to Berlin in June and brought 100 pounds of the wall home for family and friends. They are president and vice-president respectively of Personalized Nursing Care of Detroit.

"We presented our research on the treatment of intravenous drug users to the 18th International Institute on the Prevention and Treatment of Drug Dependence in West Berlin," Andersen said. "The conference was sponsored by the International Council on Alchohol and Addiction, a United Nations affiliate.

"We also toured the area. We went back and forth across the border of East Germany several times without the slightest problem."

From Lauren Pearson of Plymouth:

Pearson was on a six-week European tour with a college friend when she took the train into East Germany for the day. One of her experiences puzzled me as well as the German experts I consulted.

"I was told by a traveler that there was a 75 Deutsch Mark charge to enter East Germany. They didn't charge me going in but they did charge me coming out. It was a government charge for crossing the border."

Officially you must still have a visa to enter East Germany but the visa is free and the border patrol seldom asks for it any more, according to the German National Tourist Office, (212) 308-3300. The Berlin Desk, which represents Berlin tourism in North America, said that Berlin no longer forced visitors to exchange their money for East German currency on a one-to-one basis as they once did, but they knew nothing about a 75 deutsch mark entry or exit charge.

All U.S. visitors need valid passports to enter either

the carriage house, coming down the outside stairway from the second floor every weekday morning to drive to her job in Auburn Hills. Carol used to live in Livonia, but she will marry and settle in Milford this year, not too far from Barbara McGrew's kitchen.

That's how you go into Hibbard Tavern, through the gate, between the herb garden and the lawn, and through the screened back door that goes "whap" when you close it. When I entered the kitchen, the first thing I noticed was cats and goats. The cats are real, especially Ollie. The goats were stenciled on walls and cupboards by Barbara McGrew.

One stenciled farmyard reads "Coes Goat Farm." The Coe family owned this house for 75 years after it stopped being a tavern. Frank Coe Jr., son of the last resident Coe, lives in Indiana but visited the house after it became a bed-and-breakfast last year.

The house on Summit might have stayed a private home if Barbara McGrew had not driven by on her way to a doctor's appointment in 1988. She had been a travel agent in Westland, a tour director for Corporate Travel in Dearborn and a representative for Clipper Cruises when a car accident changed her life.

"I was grounded," she said.

She had always dreamed of owning a bed-and-breakfast and decided to do something with all those small pieces of folk art she had gathered in her travels. The Mennonite quilt from Elora, Ontario. The ceramic beverage container made by artist Mary Alice Hadley in Kentucky. The Belleek china from Northern Ireland.

"I was once a tour guide in this house during the Milford home tour," Barbara McGrew said. "A year later, I was on my way to a doctor's appointment when I saw a 'for sale' sign on the lawn. I never did get to the doctor's office, but we bought the house."

When the kitchen door whapped behind me, and I had been welcomed with a cup of tea, Barbara McGrew took my bag through to the living room which has two doors. One door opens for popular events like the Herbal Garden Lecture Aug. 25 or the Milford Musicale Folkfest Sept. 9.

The other one is permanently left and stays closed. Barbara pried it open one cold January day and nearly froze to death waiting for her husband Jim to come home and force it shut. Jim works for Michigan Bell Telephone in Southfield and if the house is full, which is seldom except during summer weekends, he parks around the corner so he can get out again in the morning.

If you turn one way from the living room and office of Hibbard Tavern, you enter a large room at the end of the house. It is Jim and Barbara's room during the week and the Coe Suite on weekends. On Friday and Saturday nights, the couple move into the Ira Hibbard Room, a bedroom with a queen-sized bed off the other end of the living room.

I went up steep stairs to the half-story that runs the length of the house, between roof-slanted walls. The first small room is assigned to grandson Andrew Danowski of Dearborn. Formerly Noon's single bed in an open alcove under the eave, is almost all American. It holds Flowe. Garden Room. The Garden Room has flowered spreads on twin beds, flowered curtains over low windows on either side of the room, flowered cushion on white wicker furniture and Barbara's vines stenciled on the wall. It can get hot up in that 19th century room, but there is a 20th century air conditioner in the window.

Hibbard Tavern has two bathrooms; one is in the Coe Suite. All other rooms, including the carriage house, share the bathroom that opens between the kitchen and the Ira Hibbard Room downstairs.

Rates at the Hibbard Tavern, including either a cold or hot breakfast, are $56 for the Ira Hibbard Room; $60 for the Garden Room (Granny's Nook $20); and $70 for the Coe Suite. The carriage house room has a double bed, is booked through October and presently not winterized, but when available it rents for $35 per person, $70 per couple. All other rates cover one or two people in a room.

For more information, contact the Hibbard Tavern, 115 East Summit St., Milford, 48042 or call 685-1435.

It is an easy walk into town, or across the river, from Hibbard Tavern. The Appeteaser restaurant which was damaged by fire this year, hopes to reopen in October. Hector and Jimmy's is popular for its ribs. Folk musician Dusty Rhodes (who will play at Hibbard Tavern during Heritage Day and Home Tour Sept. 16) plays regularly at Hooter Tavern.

Activities in Milford are plentiful, especially if you like the outdoors," according to Jan Glaab, who lives in Milford.

side of Berlin. For stays in East Berlin exceeding 24 hours, a visa is required which can be obtained upon arrival at the airport or at your hotel. No visa is required to overnight in West Berlin. For more information call the Berlin Desk at (212) 232-3134.

I finally got the answer from German Rail (212) 308-5975: anyone traveling on a Eurailpass pays a 75 DM surcharge by the railroad when they cross the East German border. That's about $48 at present exchange rates."

From the A.B. Hargunani family of Farmington Hills:

Karin, Andre and Christopher Hargunani found no border controls or charges of any kind when they crossed from West to East.

"It was like traveling between the Upper and Lower peninsulas of Michigan, or between Michigan and Ohio. Big sections of the Berlin Wall have already disappeared between East and West. People drive and walk freely between the two parts of Berlin."

To Laura Patrell of Farmington Hills:

Laura has lived in Germany during the past year, the most striking thing about Berlin after the wall came down is the change in personal communications.

"What is very striking, since I was also in Berlin three years ago during the Cold War, are the East Germans; they are much more friendly and unafraid to speak to Westerners....It was a fantastic year to be there and see old dictatorships crumble and fall, and to experience the reunification and the 'invasion of the Trabis.' Trabi is a nickname for the Trabant, an East German car.

There are some travelers who always question whether it is safe to travel in Europe. My own experience was echoed over and over again by everyone who traveled to Europe this summer. They felt not only safe but welcomed, with no qualms at all about walking around European cities including Berlin."

For example, Roy and Barbara Birmingham of Livonia:

The Birminghams traveled to Berlin in late June and said "we would have no qualms about recommending that people go to either Berlin or to other parts of Germany."

Like most people, their memories are recorded in photographs brought home for friends and family. Walking through gardens in Hanover; touring the Cologne cathedral; doing a day tour down the Rhine from Rudesheim to Goarshausen. "That's the most scenic part of the Rhine, past castles and the famous rock of Lorelei."

Carol Agar of Livonia:

Carol sent one ofthe most moving letters we received. She hasn't been to Berlin since the wall came down but her son Rex and his wife Wendy, both graduates of Clarenceville High Schoool, have lived there for the past eight months.

"My son is an M.P. (military policeman) for the Army and is stationed at the American base in Berlin. His job is to patrol the American sector....They live off-base so they are required to live on the Berlin economy. Wendy is going to school over there. 'Over the past eight months my son has seen the Berlin Wall come totally down....Wendy received a piece of Check-point Charlie, which has since been removed. In fact my son guarded Check-point Charlie...and was there when it was removed. "I am proud and thrilled for both Rex and Wendy that they are involved, in a manner of speaking, in a part of history."

Paula Jones of Birmingham:

Paula isalso a proud mother. Her oldest son Brian, who is a floor clerk for the House of Representatives in Lansing, took a month off from work to travel through Europe and see Berlin.

"He has written to tell us how excited the German people are about the pending unification. According to Brian, there are a lot of tourists in Berlin, and you can tell the people of East Germany are having a tough time of by the cars they drive and the way they dress."

Isn't it great to know that your neighbors have such a good current grasp on what's new in tourism?

Lauren Pearson of Plymouth didn't pass up a chance to stop in Berlin during her recent six-week European tour with a college friend.

"Look before you leap" is good advice in many life circumstances; it certainly applies to the situation discussed in this month's Financial Profile column.

Toni Peskar is a 29-year-old widow whose husband died in an accident four years ago. She has a 5-year-old daughter and she lives in a modest house in Redford. She has been making ends meet with income from her job as a bookkeeper, Social Security benefits for Emily and interest from life insurance proceeds of almost $100,000.

With child care costs and other household expenditures, it has been difficult for Toni. But she has been able to balance her budget and has avoided using the principal from the life insurance proceeds paid at the death of her husband. It appears to us she has been doing an excellent job managing her financial resources.

She wrote to us with a concern about her fiance, Jack Moore. They plan to be married in October. Jack is also 29 but has lived a very different lifestyle financially. He works for GM as a design engineer and lives in a Birmingham apartment. Despite an income of $42,000 per year, he has little in the way of assets except for a two-year-old Corvette. His liabilities include charge account debts of $8,700.

Toni writes, "I'm very uncomfortable with the prospect of combining our financial situations. We've talked openly about finances, and although Jack has agreed that he sometimes spends money unnecessarily, we can't agree on how to plan for the future."

We agree with her that this is a serious issue that needs to be addressed soon.

She asks, "What pitfalls should we be avoiding when combining our households? I bring in more assets, but Jack provides a higher income."

WE SEE THE biggest concern is their conflicting views on the han-

Telemarketers take on image

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

The table is set, the food is hot, and everyone is ready for dinner — and then the phone rings.

"Hello, I'm with Zippo Wonder Products and I'm selling the new Orinco slicer-dicer-spicer-flab-removing-kitchen-plastic tool with free, count 'em free, Ginzo knives that can cut through toxic waste. Only $19.95 if you act now. Buy, buy, buy, buy!!!!"

That's the common concept of telemarketing, but not the reality, according to Bill Kast of DP Corporate Services in Livonia. "We recognize the bad rap telemarketers get and frankly often deserve."

Actually, telemarketers provide a vital link between businesses, and only a small number of telemarketing involves calls to an individual's home, he said.

In the next decade, telemarketers hope to not only improve their services, but to improve their image.

"The trick for the industry is to make a telemarketing call that is not annoying, but a call you want to receive."

Boiler room telemarketing operations in which minimum-wage workers toil while dialing randomly through phone numbers have given the industry a bad name and in the long run, probably aren't very successful.

"Cold calls don't work," Kast said.

Chet Dalzell, manager of media relations for the Direct Marketing Association, said people often get the wrong impression about telemarketing.

"Basically, telemarketing is a business-to-business media," Dalzell said. "It's impossible to say how much business is done by phone, but it's well in excess of $100 billion last year."

Of that $100 billion, 80 percent involves businesses selling to businesses, he said. Of the remaining 20 percent, probably 15 percent of telemarketing originates with the consumer. "The remaining five percent — only a sliver — originates from the business side."

It is that five percent — actually less than five percent since most telemarketers are responsible businesses — that give telemarketing a bad name, Dalzell said.

RANDOM DIALERS that call unlisted phone numbers, computerized questionnaires, fraud — the telemarketers are just as concerned about these telemarketing abuses as annoyed consumers, Dalzell said, but telemarketing has become too much a part of the way people do business.

Prior to the 1970s, businesses relied on their sales forces to do much of the selling and buying for corporate America, but rising business trip costs forced businesses to rely more and more on the phone.

"In 1987 alone, (the cost of) business visits leaped by $250 (per trip) — most small businesses can't handle that," Dalzell said.

Lorna Christie, vice president of ethics and consumer affairs for the Direct Marketing Association, said telemarketing is proliferating to such a degree that the industry has turned to self regulation.

"The receipt of unwelcome telephone calls is going to generate complaints," she said, adding it benefits the industry to ensure the telephone is not used improperly.

There really isn't any need for blind calling anymore, Christie continued, because lists of potential customers are readily available. "The same type of segmentation used in direct mail can be used in telemarketing.

"The majority of annoyance calls come from small businesses that don't consider themselves professional telemarketers," she explained. "That's what we're trying to do — reach them."

'The trick for the industry is to make a telemarketing call that is not annoying, but a call you want to receive.'

— Bill Kast
DP Corporate Services

"IT'S IN THE professional telemarketers' best interests to make sure the telemarketers are not using the telephone improperly," she said. "People have a right to control the privacy through the phones."

Professional telemarketers follow simple guidelines to mitigate annoyance calls, she said.

First, she said, the telemarketer should promptly disclose who they are, what they're selling and full documentation explaining the offer. All costs and conditions should follow the phone call so people can make an unhurried, unpressured decision.

Guidelines also frown upon calling unlisted numbers, using automatic dialing machines, calling at unreasonable hours.

"The problem is this is a fairly easy access media — it doesn't take much to get into," Christie said. "Some guy can buy an auto dialer at a garage sale, make 300 calls a night and get one response — that's a good day for him."

Kast of DP Corporate Services said telemarketers are constantly trying to improve their services to

Bell proposes cuts for distance rates, increases for local

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A Birmingham or Farmington Hills resident who places a 10-minute long-distance call to friends in Flint would pay $2.16 rather than $2.81, a decrease of 23 percent, under a new rate plan proposed by Michigan Bell.

That same Farmington Hills or Birmingham resident who now pays $11.44 per month for unlimited local telephone service would pay $13.95 — an increase of 22 percent.

It's all part of a residential rate restructuring plan prepared by Bell to offer more competitive long distance rates. Bell filed the proposal last week with the Michigan Public Service Commission.

"With so many people moving from the city to suburbs and friends still there, and from suburb to suburb, this provides an opportunity for reduced rates to keep in touch," said Marcia Buhl, a spokeswoman for Bell.

"I think there's been a cry for reduced long distance rates," she said.

"WE WANT the privilege to lower our (long distance) rate to become more competitive and move the local rate closer to what it costs us to provide that service."

Buhl described the restructuring proposal as a revenue wash, meaning that Bell doesn't expect to earn more money as a result.

Address budgeting differences before marriage dling of money. Fortunately, they are both aware of each other's concerns, and Toni indicates that they are willing to make compromises.

Planning together is the key. We frequently define financial planning as "balancing the use of financial resources to meet both short-term and long-term goals." They should keep this definition in mind.

We fear that without some controls, they could end up using Toni's nest egg to pay off Jack's debts and expand their standard of living, a scenario that Toni adamantly opposes. It would be difficult for them subsequently to rebuild this sum of money.

We believe that Toni should keep her stocks and certificate of deposit separate from their other assets. In fact, we would suggest that she consider a pre-nuptial agreement clearly stating that these assets are separate from any marital assets, and they they would be set aside for Emily's benefit should Toni die prematurely.

They may want to combine their other assets and incomes, but a viable alternative is keeping their finances separate except for joint expenditures. We have worked with couples who have been very successful adopting this philosophy.

Whatever method they decide is best, both must agree on the ground rules.

Upon review, it appears that most of their insurance coverages are in good shape.

Toni has a good homeowners policy, and their combined auto insurance premium should actually be lower than their two individual policies.

Jack has excellent benefits at work, with good medical and disability coverages.

JACK HAS OPTED for the minimum amount of life insurance provided by GM — twice his annual salary. Toni, with her previous experience, strongly believes he needs additional life insurance.

We agree. He has the option of buying additional term insurance through GM at a very low cost through payroll deduction. We suggest that he consider taking out five times his salary, which is the maximum coverage for which he is eligible.

It is likely that he will barely notice the difference in his paycheck. He may also want to consider a personally owned policy.

Jack's credit card debts are very expensive. At an average interest rate of close to 18 percent, they will cost more than $1,500 in interest charges alone over the next year.

With their combined incomes, they should set a target of reducing this credit each month until it is entirely eliminated. Given their circumstances, a one-year or two-year time frame seems reasonable as a target to be free of this debt.

Jack is missing a good opportunity in not joining GM's 401(k) plan. For every dollar he puts into the plan, GM matches it with 60 cents. This applies on contributions up to 10 percent of his income. There is no other investment in which Jack could receive an immediate 60 percent on his investment without risk.

And any contributions he makes to this plan are tax deductible. In effect, Uncle Sam is contributing one-third of the dollars that go into his retirement plan.

ANOTHER ADVANTAGE of this plan from Jack's standpoint is that it is an easy, automatic plan that does not require a great deal of effort on Jack's part. Money is taken directly out of his paycheck and placed into the plan before he has a chance to spend it.

It may be overly ambitious to attempt to allocate the full 10 percent of Jack's income to this plan immediately. We would suggest he start at a 5-percent level. Over time, he can work toward that 10-percent target.

We would also suggest that they review their estate planning. Jack has no plan in place; Toni has a simple will that leaves everything to Emily.

With this new marriage, they will want to review their estate planning objectives for each other and for Emily. Toni may want to set up a trust arrangement for Emily's benefit should something happen to her. The trustee after Toni's death can control the assets for Emily's benefit.

Because Emily is so young, the trust terms can provide for discretionary income and principal payments, with specific ages used for required distribution of principal.

Jack, at the very least, should have a will.

Once these documents are in place, they should review the titling of their assets to determine whether they should be owned individually or jointly. They also should review the beneficiary designations on life insurance policies and on any retirement plans, such as the IRA, to be sure they are in line with their estate plan.

Finally, they may want to seek advice from a qualified financial planner especially if they are unable to resolve some of the financial issues between them. Often, an objective third party can be most helpful in identifying problem issues and priorities and then help in to resolve them.

With their willingness to discuss their differences, Toni and Jack have a real chance to come to terms with their differences in the way they handle money. With discussion and planning they should be able to balance their desire to enjoy a comfortable current standard of living with the need to accumulate money to reach their goals.

ensure they're not annoying potential customers. "Our livelihood depends on it," he said.

AFTER RECEIVING an assignment, a telemarketer should work with an established client list or begin looking for the potential customers by contacting friendly competitors or similar, but not competing companies, he said.

"We do a lot of front-end work finding out who we want to sell to," Kast said. "One of the main reasons we've been successful is we know who we're dealing with."

After finding out who potential customers may be, telemarketing firms have to establish a relationship with the customers.

"If you don't know me, how can you trust me to do business with me? Follow up calls — that is a better business builder, that type of caring is what works," Kast said.

With advances in computers, databases and telephone equipment, there is little need for the cold calls that dominated the telemarketing industry since its birth, Kast said.

Computers and databases can hold and retrieve massive amounts of information with the press of a button, and the sophisticated phone systems that can reroute calls to available personnel or to get the least expensive phone rates.

Christie of the Direct Marketing Association, said the biggest problem faced by telemarketers is combating fraud. "If a product defrauds consumers, it also defrauds telemarketers."

"And if anything, (fraud) is getting worse," she added. People are naturally trusting when talking on the phone and sometimes common sense goes out the window.

"Whoever you are, a private person in a home or a company buyer, ask for written information and know who you're dealing with," she said. "If it sounds too good to be true, it usually is."

Christie also warned that people can be victimized when they make the call. A slick advertisements with phone number and direct mail that promise prizes "if you act fast and call this number" can lead to disaster, she said.

Local rates would pay for long-distance rate cuts

Bell has proposed four measured local service options to customers who don't want to pay more for unlimited service.

They are:

- Call Plan Basic, which would provide basic access to the network for $6 per month with all local calls metered at 6.2 cents apiece.
- Call Plan 50, which would provide 50 local calls for $8 per month with additional local calls over 50 metered at 6.2 cents each.
- Call Plan 150, which would provide 150 local calls for $10.50 monthly with additional local calls metered at 6.2 cents each.
- Call Plan 300, which would provide 300 local calls for $11.75 per month with additional calls metered at 6.2 cents each.

A safety net — a maximum charge of $15 per month — would protect against extraordinary usage under all four options.

CUSTOMERS WITH unlimited service are expected to switch to one of the metered options, Buhl said. Nearly 75 percent of Bell's residential 2.9 million customers now have unlimited local service.

There are few customers from our viewpoint that would make more than 300 (residential) calls per month," she said.

Buhl doesn't expect the PSC to act on the rate request until sometime next year.

"When this is approved, we'll help customers with a tremendous education program," she said. "We'll run at the bottom of bills usage — how many calls a month for a couple of months — so they can look at usage and select the proper plan."

Other elements of Bell's proposal include:

- Offering optional long distance discount plans within the 313 area code for a monthly fee.
- Increasing the cost of calls from its public telephones to 25 from 20 cents.
- Limiting residential information service calls without a fee from 20 per month to 25 every three months.

Not all consumer watchdog groups are excited about Bell's restructuring proposal.

"What they're doing is cutting prices in the areas where they face competition, and they're loading it up on the basic service customers who have nowhere else to go," said Rick Stoddard, president of Michigan Citizens' Lobby in Lansing.

This is the conflict of a company that has a monopoly in one area and tries to compete in another," Stoddard added.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

Investors panic over foreign news, market swings finances and you

Sid Mittra

My phones have been ringing off the hook. Nervous readers of this column are petrified. Only a few weeks ago they were arguing about how far the Dow Jones will climb beyond 3000. Now the predictions are for 2500 or even 2000.

There are plenty of reasons for their worry. If oil prices reach $30 a barrel, inflation could be as high as 10 percent whereas unemployment might reach 8 percent. Can the Fed pump enough money into circulation to keep the economy from plunging into a severe recession?

That's not all. Thanks to the higher oil prices, energy prices have escalated to the point that it is no longer possible to impose additional energy taxes to bring the budget deficit down.

Also, the escalation of the conflict in the Middle East makes it unlikely that the defense expenditure can be significantly reduced.

That means a further deterioration of the budget crisis.

The tumultuous events of the past few weeks have also raised fears of another market crash similar to the 1987 crash. The accompanying table shows that the currently prevailing economic situation is far worse than the major economic and financial economic indicators in October 1987.

In addition, the budget situation today is much worse than what it was three years ago.

What does all of this mean? Very briefly it means that if you do not get good advice you may capitulate and throw in the towel. That is the worst thing you can do at a time like this.

Simply procrastinating and sitting tight won't help you either. My advice to you is to find a financial adviser you can trust and have her or him develop a long-term action plan for you. Only then can you weather the storm and come out a real winner.

Young adults have enough money to attract small businesses

Mary DiPaolo

What would you guess that junior high school and high schools students, non-college-bound young adults and college students have in common?

Besides MTV, I would bet that an annual discretionary income of $200 billion never crossed your mind. Ten times the size of the yuppie market, these 50 million consumers between the ages of 13 and 25 buy everything from sports equipment, securities and computers to single-serving prepared foods, movie tickets and cosmetics each year.

Attracting and serving this market has proven to be a lucrative strategy for companies of all sizes.

"From a strictly economic point of view, the youth market should be of great significance to any business owner," said New York investor Reginald Lewis, chairman of the TLC Group, which acquired such businesses as McCall Patterns Co.

"WHEN I look at a company, I know what type of potential it has, and young people are generally a part of that untapped potential."

Companies that focus on youth marketing have reaped not only great financial benefits but have also enhanced their images as contemporary trend-setters among the larger adult market.

From anything Simpson to bubble pendants, all of us are affected by the trends and mindset of youth. What's hot among young people today often becomes the rage of all Americans tomorrow and, as a result, affects hundreds of billions of dollars of spending each year.

RELATIVE TO the three major segments that make up the overall youth market, the $100 billion non-student young adult market is by far the largest and the most ignored. This market consists of 18- to 25-year-olds who work full-time and do not attend college. Because this group is not concentrated in specific and identifiable areas such as high schools or college campuses, marketers claim it is difficult to reach it directly through paid advertising and promotion.

Second, marketers claim that they do not understand this group as well as they do the teenage and college market segments. This is unfortunate because having the right clothing, car and apartment, using the right products and services and being involved in the right leisure time pursuits are all important to these young consumers.

Interested small business owners seeking additional information about the youth market and its segments are encouraged to obtain a copy of the book, "YouthTrends," written by Lawrence Graham and Lawrence Hamdan. The book is available at most bookstores or may be ordered though St. Martin's Press, 175 5th Ave., New York, NY 10010.

Next week, we will review the most common mistakes made in youth-directed advertising and promotion.

Plymouth retirees may get more cash

The pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation is trying to find former employees of Evans Products Co. of Plymouth who were covered by one of three union pension plans and who may be entitled to additional pension benefits.

The affected pension plans, which terminated July 31, 1976, are the International Brotherhood of Firement and Oilers, Local 32; Almagamated Plant Guards, Local 114; and United Steelworkers, Local 2340.

The additional pension benefits are the result of a legal settlement involving participants in pension plans that terminated between 1976 and 1981 who where denied pension benefits because of the application of federal rules to a change in pension law. Benefits were denied because of the application by the plan administrator or the pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation of a rule on phase-in of vesting improvements required by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act.

To receive additional benefits, you must file a claim with the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation. Claims may be made by writing to the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation, Settlement Implementation Group, PO Box 57410, Wasington, DC, 20037-0410.

Church's has the Best Weather Resistant Lumber in Town!!!
Water beads right off Wolmanized EXTRA Weather-Resistant Lumber because it's got something "extra" – it's pressure treated with a special water repellent to prevent moisture penetration from rain and snow. All wood swells and expands when it absorbs moisture. As it dries, it releases moisture and shrinks. Constant expansion and contraction causes grain raising, checking, splintering and warping. Spray or brush-on water sealers can't repel water like Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber – in laboratory tests Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber shows almost two-thirds more moisture resistance than pressure-treated lumber protected with a leading water sealer. Of course, this fantastic lumber is also pressure treated for lifelong protection against termites, rot and decay. Don't settle for ordinary treated lumber. Insist on Wolmanized EXTRA!

Landfills, dumpsters serve as smorgasbord for crows nature

Timothy Nowicki

Have you noticed that there seems to be more crows around these days compared to 15-20 years ago?

In some cases of observed increases in annual numbers, it may just be a person is more aware of a particular subject and thus they see more of them.

Animals seeking food become very good at finding seasonally abundant sources. They may even pass by usual food items.

This phenomenon may occur in some situations but it is not true with crows.

I HAVE been aware of various species of birds for several years and I never recall observing as many crows in the metropolitan area as I see today.

I am not the only one who has noticed this change. A Southfield resident called and said that she has more crows in her area than ever before.

She was also concerned about the noise they make. If you have ever been in an area where young crows are being fed by their parents, you know how loud they can be.

Well after her phone call, I decided to check if there was some survey data that would help support this observation.

THOUGH I did not have breeding season data available, I did have Christmas Count data from the Detroit Audubon Society.

Since 1945 the same 15-mile diameter area has been surveyed during the Christmas season.

Results of the survey indicate that from 1945 to 1974 the average number of crows seen per year was 99.6. From 1975 to 1988 the average number of crows seen per year was 301.9. That surely confirms our general observations of more crows in the area.

WHY ARE there more crows? I do not know for certain the reason for their increase, but I would suggest it is related to our method of waste disposal.

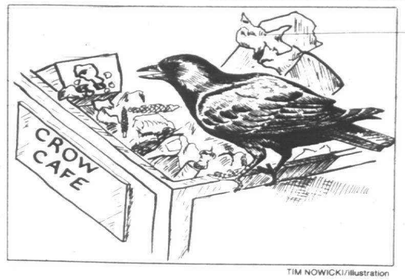
Sanitary landfills serve as a smorgasbord for birds like crows and gulls that eat most anything. Even local dumpsters allow birds to feed on discarded food for several days before it is picked up and hauled away.

Another review of the Christmas Count data reflects an increased number of house finches in the area.

In 1984 house finches were first observed in the count area. By 1989 their number had increased more than 16 times.

Natural fluctuations occur in animal populations regularly. Monitoring and determining why they fluctuate is the challenging part.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.



TIM NOWICKI/Illustration

From 1945 to 1974 the average number of crows seen per year was 99.6. From 1975 to 1988 the average number of crows seen per year was 301.9. That surely confirms our general observations of more crows in the area.

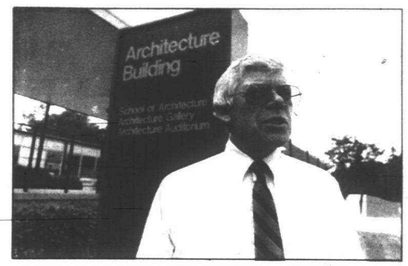
New LTU architecture dean believes in teamwork

By Tim Smith
staff writer

The team approach to education is something special to Dr. Neville Clouten, the new dean of Lawrence Technological University's school of architecture.

In fact, it's important enough for the Australian native to want to relocate his office — from an out-of-the-way suite inhabited by his predecessor to a makeshift room in the middle of faculty headquarters.

"I'm coming from down there (the suite) to be part of the faculty, to be part of the team," said the 50-year-old Clouten, who Aug. 1 became the third dean in the history of the LTU architecture school.



JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

One of Neville Clouten's first tasks as new architecture dean at Lawrence Tech is to talk to faculty members, to help attain "a climate so people can achieve what they want to achieve."

The longevity of Lawrence Tech faculty members also impresses Clouten. The man he replaced, Karl Greimel, returned to teaching after a 16-year stint as dean of the 800-student architecture school, the largest in Michigan. The first dean was Earl Pellerin, who served from 1932-1974.

"I've noticed that faculty stays around here for a long time, there's a sense of identity with the institution," Clouten said. "And I've been surprised and pleased that this occurs with part-time faculty as well."

CLOUTEN, WHOSE architecture career began in the early 1960s doing research and public relations work for Australia's landmark Sydney Opera House, is a proponent of mixing the science of architecture with how humans live in their surroundings.

"We're designing spaces for human beings so they can live and work and play," Clouten said, glancing across campus toward Southfield's gleaming skyline. "We want to improve their lives. The physical environment can be a very important part of it."

Speaking of environment, work is slowly progressing on getting Clouten's new office in shape, something that needs to be done before he can really get down to business.

Last Thursday, a busy maintenance employee temporarily pushed Clouten out of his office and into the halls of the architecture building, which he strolled through while talking about the fresh challenges awaiting him at LTU.

One of those includes making sure students carry lessons learned in classrooms both to their professional endeavors and community life.

"I want them to integrate what is learned out into the community," both in their jobs and in special projects."

THE ARTICULATE Clouten, who sports a 12-page resume, is no stranger to the latter.

He has been published in scientific journals, lectured at Harvard, Yale and Notre Dame and is completing a book on architecture to be published by the American Institute of Architects.

"It deals with various themes of architecture," Clouten said. "I've decided to look at the three main building types we've grown up in — homes, schools and churches.

"And if you look at designing for other cultures, you look at the day-to-day rituals of individuals."

The veteran educator, who is moving to Farmington Hills from Berrien Springs (where his family temporarily will remain), plans to soon find out what kinds of daily regimen await him at Lawrence Tech.

Clouten's routine will start in his office, which he finally unveiled to a visitor after the workers had gone.

IT CONTAINED a modest desk and chair, empty shelves and a conference room, complete with a table covered with boxes of the dean's books, manuals and slides.

Meanwhile, furniture more consistent with what upper management of a university usually gets eventually will be delivered to the office, said an almost-embarrassed Clouten.

And after a series of important management meetings is completed, Clouten will be spotted out and about the school of architecture, not cloistered.

With the fall start-up of classes just around the corner, Clouten soon will meet with every faculty member of the school he now heads.

Again, he's thinking about teamwork.

"I WANT to know them, I want them to meet me and talk about what's important to them," Clouten said. "Then we can go forward."

Officials differ on funding for historic trail

By Joe Bauman
staff writer

A historical trail documenting one of the many innovative projects by Henry Ford will include a stop in Livonia but city leaders can't agree on which government entity should foot the bill to sponsor the project.

The Ford Heritage Trail is being developed by the Wayne County parks department with the state Department of Transportation and the Henry Ford Estate-Fairlane to recognize the automobile pioneer's contributions in water-powered mills.

The trail will follow the paths of 20 village industry mills built by Ford from 1918 to 1944 to generate power in the Rouge River basin.

ONE OF the mills to be featured is the Newburgh Mill, at Newburgh and Ann Arbor Road.

The mill was built in 1934 on the site of an old cider mill, and was used in the manufacturing of twist drills.

While there is unanimous support for the project among city leaders, a dispute has broken out over where the $1,000 sponsor fee should come from.

Livonia community resources director Suzanne Wisler's request to spend the money from the city budget's unexpended fund balance was challenged Aug. 9 by several council members.

The most vocal of the dissenters was Livonia councilman Robert Bishop, who told Wisler he believed the city's historical commission should use some of its budget to cover the cost.

"It seems to me that this again is the commission taking the easy route to come to the council and reach into the general fund whenever it wants to fund something. I don't think this is right."

RESPONDING TO Bishop's comments, Wisler said having the commission fund the project would take needed dollars away from other existing projects, such as the continuing development of Greenmead historical village.

"All of the commission's funds are geared toward restoration projects and not for enhancement or promotion which this project is. They don't have that kind of money to designate for another use."

Wisler's response, however, did little to convince Bishop the expense was necessary from the general fund.

"I don't see why the council should spend money on a project if the commission itself does not view it as a priority."

Councilman Ron Ochala sided with Bishop, suggesting the council go on record in support of the project but referring the matter of financing back to the Historical Commission.

Laura Toy was the only council member voicing support for the general fund expenditure.

"I don't have a problem with it because this is something that will benefit all of Livonia."

Wisler said the commission discussed the trail project in detail but decided it could not make it a priority item for funding over already established projects.

Auction of celebrity items to benefit MD

A celebrities auction will be held later this month to benefit Muscular Dystrophy.

A T-shirt autographed and donated by Anita Baker; a script from Mash autographed, written and sent by Alan Alda; autographed photographs from Muhammad Ali, Tom Jones, Dolly Parton, Charlton Heston, Julie Andrews, Ray Charles and others in the fields of entertainment, sports, art and politics will be available.

The auction will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 25, at Livonia Mall, 7 Mile at Middlebelt.

Joe Glover of TV-2 will host the event along with Livonia Mall manager Jeanne Hildebrandt and Kim Sidwell, district MDA director.

Some items wil be displayed in the mall prior to the auction and a catalog listing items will be available on Thursday, Aug. 23.

Several gift certificates and merchandise donated by local businesses also will be auctioned.

Also on the auction block will be autographed baseballs and photographs, an autographed Bo Jackson baseball card, autographed Bob Probert hockey puck donated by the Red Wings, autographed copies of books from Terry Bradshaw, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicholas, Steve Allen, William F. Dog team to perform

The Dogmatics Inc., a precision canine drill team, will be performing at 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 25, at Wonderland Mall.

The demonstration, co-sponsored by Docktor Pet, will be part of the "Dog Days of Summer" promotion at the mall at Plymouth Road and Middlebelt. All proceeds will be donated to Leader Dogs for the Blind Inc.

The Dogmatics is a non-profit, 16-member canine precision drill team directed by Dan Morris of Dan Morris Dog Training and Grooming in Livonia.

All members have completed basic obedience training, a 17-week off-leash obedience training course and attended training sessions for two years. During that time, the dog handlers were trained on proper leash control, basic grooming, animal behavior and the importance of maintaining control of their dogs at all times.

The Dogmatics has performed in parades, nursing homes, convalescent centers and churches.

The demonstation will consist of a precision drill, tricks, safety tips, a novelty act and a question-answer period.

The Dogmatics began precision drill training in September 1988 and incorporated in March 1989.

Canton coach Bob Blohm takes the basketball from senior Mary Barna to make a point during the first day of official preseason practice Monday. Barna is the lone returning starter from a team that was 22-4 and a Class A semifinalist last year. One goal the Chiefs will have is to 3-peat as Western Lakes Activities Association champions.

Swedish team signs Podrasky to pro contract

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

As a hockey player, Pete Podrasky is accustomed to going where the opportunities are in his sport.

Podrasky, who grew up in Canton, spent his college days in Marquette, playing hockey at Northern Michigan University.

Now, the next stage of his career is taking him to Europe and a job with a Swedish professional team. Podrasky, a defenseman, will play for Roma IF in Visby, an island city near Stockholm.

Podrasky, who leaves at the end of August for a seven-month season, answered a questionnaire put out by the European teams when he completed his eligibility at NMU earlier this year.

"Nothing happened for the longest time," he said, "until a promoter called and said he saw some film of me last year. He said he liked the way I played and sent me a contract."

PODRASKY MIGHT get a little homesick during his first pro season. Not only is he going abroad but he'll be the only American on the team. One foreigner per team is the rule.

"I don't speak any of the language," Podrasky said. "But if you live there for seven or eight months things come pretty easy after a while. Most of the guys speak some English."

Podrasky is concerned about fitting in but not because of a possible language barrier.

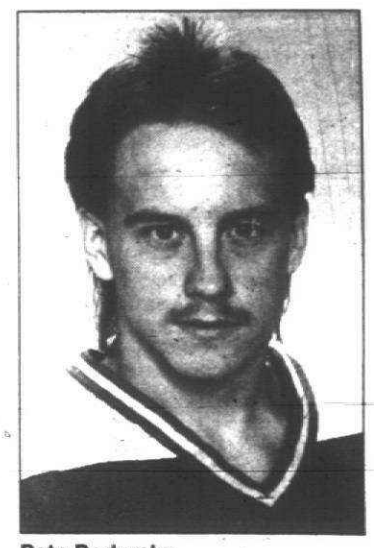
"I wonder a little bit about the competition side of it, filling a spot that some Swedish guy could be playing," he said. "But that's been happening ever since I was 4 or 5 years old, taking someone else's spot."

Each European country has its own professional league, and there are four levels of hockey in Sweden. The Visby team is a Division II team and comparable to minor league hockey in North America, according to Podrasky. Division I is the best and the Swedish equivalent of the NHL.

The 5-foot-9, 170-pound Podrasky thinks the European style of hockey is actually better suited for him.

"IT'S NOT AS physical and more dependent on skill," he said. "There's more skating, and the ice is international size. It's perfect for me because I'm not the biggest player. My main assets are puck handling and speed."

Though he's a defenseman, Podrasky has always been active at the offensive end. He had 28 points — six goals and 22 assists — in 30-plus games with the Wildcats last season. As a junior, he led the Western Collegiate Hockey Association in points by a defenseman with 36 while playing in more than 40 games.



Pete Podrasky to play professionally in Sweden

hockey

"As far as hockey, (the European game) is very fast paced, a lot of puck movement," he said, adding the Visby team is eager to increase its offensive production. "I always like to move up with the rush and create power plays. As far as speed, it won't be that much of an adjustment."

At present, Podrasky doesn't envision using his European experience as a springboard to an NHL tryout.

"First of all, I hope to go there and play well in Division II and sign a contract to play Division I," he said. "The only detriment against playing in the NHL has been my size."

In the meantime, Podrasky will be doing all right for himself playing Division II hockey. Besides taking home a salary, the team will arrange accommodations and cover living expenses for him.

"I'm just going to take it one year at a time and sign one-year contracts," he said. "For Division II, they pay pretty well. I won't come back with empty pockets."

Roster remake

Chiefs reload following 22-4 season

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The start of the 1990 girls basketball season is less than two weeks away.

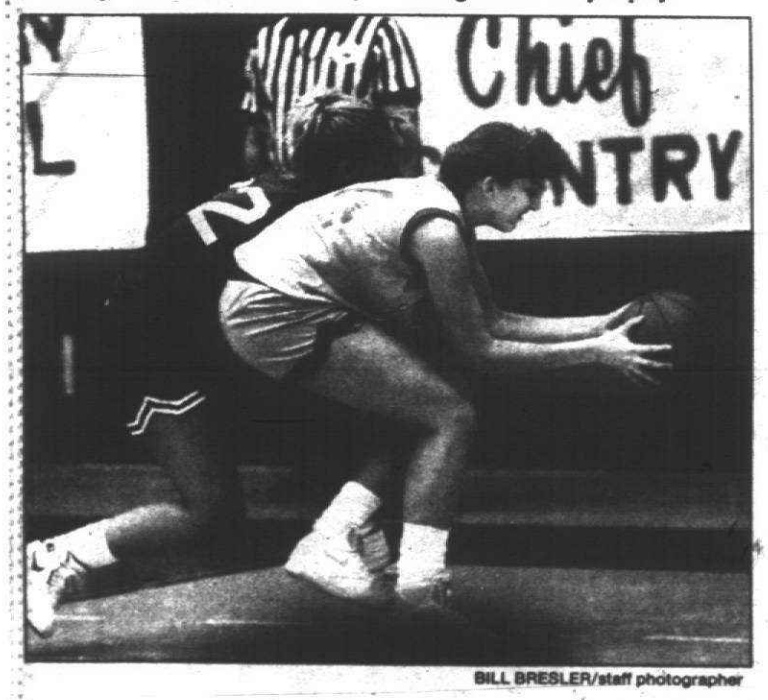
But before that date arrives, Plymouth Canton is entitled to one more look back at its outstanding season of a year ago.

The Chiefs, in their first year under veteran coach Bob Blohm, repeated as Western Lakes Activities Association champion, reached the semifinals of the Class A tournament and compiled a 22-4 record.

Having defeated Livonia Ladywood, Plymouth Salem, Southgate Anderson and Trenton, Canton upset Benton Harbor 61-50 in the quarterfinals before losing to West Bloomfield 45-40 in the Final Four.

"Once we started the tournament and had that great run, it was hard to think about it at the time," Blohm said, "because we were always gearing up for the next game.

"BUT IT was a tremendous season. We had great seniors, not just as basketball players but as students and people. When it came time to play in the big contests, that team could get itself ready to play."



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Julie Toma is one of four seniors who return to the Canton varsity. The others are Kris Ford, Mary Barna and Shannon Murphy.

girls basketball

Returning to the present, the Chiefs are minus the five seniors, which included four starters, who were largely responsible for Canton's 1989 success.

Two of them are playing college basketball — all-state center Susan Ferko at Miami of Ohio and Stacey Thompson at the University of Pennsylvania. Point guard Jenny Russell intends to play soccer for Kalamazoo College.

Jenny Clark, a starting post player, is enrolled at the University of Michigan, and Christyn Halliday, who was usually first off the bench, is attending Brigham Young University.

"I don't think we're going to be down, but when you graduate the number of players we did, there is always the unknown," Blohm said. "How are we going to do? Coaches ask the same question. Part of the learning process is time and game experience."

Senior guard Mary Barna is the lone returning starter, but Canton has enough potential that one can envision the Chiefs being among the area powers again.

FELLOW SENIORS Kris Ford, Julie Toma and Shannon Murphy also are holdovers from the last team. Plus junior Julie Nicastri got varsity playing time during the tournament.

Junior Renee Dory spent last season on the JV team, and four sophomores hold much promise for Canton's future. All four — Stephanie Gray, Kelly Holmes, Christie Saffron and Amy Westerhold — are excellent athletes who distinguished themselves in spring sports. Gray and Saffron excelled in track, Holmes was all-area softball pitcher, and Westerhold played for the school's top-ranked soccer team.

"I hate to use the word rebuilding, because it implies your ability is in question," Blohm said. "Last year we struggled early. We got beat by Marian and (by St. Joseph) in the Mercy Hoops.

"Because most of the kids don't have varsity playing time, we'll have to put them out there and see how they do. During a 20-game season, you hope they're going to get better.

"I'd rather have a great tournament run and struggle through the season. That means they listened,

Wendy's upsets Adray Sound

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

It wasn't among the best-run tournaments of all-time, with discord running rampant in the championship game. But Wendy's of Ann Arbor isn't unhappy with the final results.

The Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoff runners-up stunned Adray Sound, the second-place team in the Detroit Adray League playoffs, 11-5 in the National Amateur Baseball Federation's Collegiate Division regional final at Ford Field Sunday.

The victory propelled Wendy's into the four-team NABF national tournament, to be hosted by Sterling Heights starting Friday. Wendy's will meet Canton (Ohio) in Friday's first game of the double-elimination tourney; host Sterling Heights goes against the New York Cubs in the second. Three more games are slated for Saturday, with the final Sunday.

Although Wendy's win won't be rewarded with a trip to a far-off locale for a fun-filled tournament week, team manager Brien Lang wasn't disappointed. "We are playing at home," he noted. "That may be to our advantage.

"We have excellent pitching. Stuart Hirschman (5-1 for the season) is the best pitcher I've ever had."

HIRSCHMAN WASN'T on the mound for Sunday's title game, although he came close to ending up there. Poor weather, lousy fielding and frustration ruled, as Wendy's took command early, repelled an Adray Sound comeback attempt and finished the rain-shortened contest with bats blasting.

Sound manager Rodger George was still simmering on Tuesday because the game was called in the middle of the sixth inning, after he said he was assured they "would get in the full nine innings."

The reason and the party responsible for calling the game, which started at noon and wasn't stopped until 7:45 p.m., is unclear. George blamed LCBL director Gary Gray; Lang disagreed, saying the umpires halted play because of poor playing conditions.

"I don't like to lose, but I really don't like to get jobbed," said George. "I felt I was taken advantage of, lied to."

The game was suspended with two out in the top of the fifth, during Wendy's at-bat, with the score 11-5. After an hour delay, play was resumed. The two teams got in one more inning before stoppage. Sound did not score, but Wendy's had pushed across three more runs in the top of the sixth on Mike Julien's three-run home run.

SINCE THE game was called before completion of the inning, Julien's homer — his second of the game — did not count; the score reverted back to the end of the previous inning. George was upset because the game was resumed in poor weather, instead of being postponed until Monday, and the promise to finish the game was broken.

Lang disputed that. Umpires, he said, were moved to call the game partially because they feared a bench-clearing incident after Hirschman — the next Wendy's batter after Julien's homer — was hit by a Darrin Clark fastball.

"(Sound's) pride was really hurt," said Lang. "They're not used to losing, and they couldn't deal with it."

Julien's first homer was instrumental in Wendy's six-run first inning. The three-run shot came off starter, and loser, Leo Hutchinson — after two Sound errors (they had four in the game). Hirschman contributed three hits and three runs batted in, while Steve Sonnett and Jeff Herrin had two hits apiece. Sonnett drove in two runs.

Sound climbed back into it with power — a two-run dinger by Joe Delfgauw in the first, a solo shot by Mark Avery in the second and a run-scoring double by Jim Bostock in the third. Bostock then scored on a wild pitch, narrowing Wendy's lead to 6-5.

But Sound could get no closer. Derek Darkowski was the winning pitcher.

WENDY'S REACHED the championship with a 9-6 victory over LCBL rival Duffy's Saturday and a 12-4 mercy of the Roseville Royals Friday. Hirschman got the pitching victory over Duffy's, going all nine innings and striking out 10; Tom Nester was the loser.

Herrin's 4-for-4 performance, which included a triple, a two-run homer and three RBI, sparked Wendy's. David Frick and Kevin Learned added two hits each.

The win did not come easily. Mike Siwajek slugged a grand slam homer in the fourth — one of his three hits in the game — to put Duffy's up 6-4. But Hirschman buckled down and Herrin, with a two-run single in the sixth and his eighth-inning homer, ignited the comeback.

In the win over Roseville, Jon Chadiha and Learned each collected three hits, Chadiha driving home four runs. Frick also had two hits and two RBI. Tom Kutcher was the winning pitcher.

Duffy's opened the tournament in style Friday, rallying with two out in the ninth to clip Sound 10-7. With relief ace Todd Menard on the mound and no one on base, Sound's 7-6 lead seemed safe. But Menard walked the next batter, then surrendered doubles to Bill Flohr, Steve Michelz and Mike Kaczmarek.

BILL WICKER was the winning pitcher; Menard took the defeat. Dan Kuschell and Jeff Andrews had three hits apiece for Sound. Kuschell knocked in a pair of runs. Avery connected on a solo homer; he had four homers in the tournament.

On Saturday, Sound got serious with a pair of wins, a 12-4 mercy of the Royals and a 12-11, 10-inning triumph over Duffy's. Matt Byrd was the winning pitcher against the Royals. Kuschell had three hits and two RBI, Mark Stokes had two hits and two RBI, and Avery had two hits and three RBI, with a two-run homer.

Kesson rescues Boyle softball team

Cecil Kesson answered the call for help Monday night, and it was help he provided for the Boyle Chevrolet men's fast-pitch softball team.

Kesson, father of team member Mike Kesson, came out of the stands to drive in the go-ahead run in Boyle's 5-2 victory over Total Foods in the Plymouth Modified League.

Kesson's RBI single broke a 2-2 tie in the top of the ninth inning, and winning pitcher Al White followed with a two-run single that finished the scoring.

Boyle was left short-handed after one of its players was ejected following a minor scuffle earlier in the game.

Kesson, who is on the roster in the event of just such an emergency, donned a pair of spikes, took a position in the outfield and eventually had the game-winning hit.

White had two hits and three RBI, and Ron Wandzel also knocked in a run with a base hit. White's single in the fifth inning tied the score 2-2.

In the second game of a Monday double-header, Boyle clinched the league championship with an 11-4 win over Belle River Packaging that gave the team an 11-0 record.

Doug Kirkpatrick, Steve Dawson, White and Dave Brubaker had two hits apiece. One of Dawson's hits was a solo homer, and Wandzel chipped in another RBI single.

Curt White was the winning pitcher, scattering six hits and four walks.

Dan Gabriele
New Britain pitcher

The summer of 1990 probably won't make the top 10 list of memorable summers in the Gabriele household. In fact, it may be remembered as one of the most disappointing.

Walled Lake's top two major league baseball prospects, brothers Dan and Mike Gabriele, each suffered major setbacks this summer in their respective quests to break into the major league.

Dan, a 1985 Western grad, underwent surgery for carpal tunnel syndrome in May and is currently recuperating at home in Walled Lake.

Mike, a 1986 Western grad, also returned home recently, having been released by the Atlanta Braves after a brief stint with the Braves' minor-league affiliates.

"It hasn't been a great summer for us," admitted Dan, but added that the future was beginning to look a little brighter.

FOR DAN, the elder of the two right handed pitchers, the problems actually began last summer when he ran into control problems while pitching for Boston's Double-A affiliate in New Britain.

"The first half of the season I was on fire. I had a no-hitter and everything," he said. "But in the second half of the season I just crumbled. All of a sudden I couldn't throw a strike. I was getting real wild and I didn't know why. It was real confusing. Before I recognized the problem I thought it was all in my head."

Dan finished the '89 season at New Britain with a 5-11 personal record and was assigned to the winter instructional league in Florida. During play in the instructional league he was diagnosed as having carpal tunnel syndrome.

"Before being diagnosed I really thought about not playing anymore," explained Dan. "I thought it was just in my head."

Thanks to encouragement and support by a close personal friend, Stephanie Stricker, Dan stuck it out. "I really owe her a lot," he said "She stuck by me through everything and was always there when I needed her. I probably would have given up without her support."

WALLED LAKE BASEBALL fans probably remember Dan best from his high school success with the Warriors.

He was a four-year varsity player and helped pitch the Warriors to the Class A state championship in 1984 as a junior.

In his senior year the Warriors advanced to the district finals before being eliminated by Plymouth Canton.

"I remember that game because a guy hit a double off me to win the game in the bottom of the seventh inning," Dan said.

He finished his high school career with a 34-6 personal record and was drafted by the Red Sox in the first round (21st pick overall) of the 1985 June draft.

MIKE'S FUTURE in professional baseball remains a question mark after being released recently by the Atlanta Braves' rookie team in Idaho Falls.

Mike signed with the Braves as a free agent in June of 1989 after pitching for the University of Detroit for three years.

"I started the year with the Class A team in Sumter, South Carolina," explained Mike. "I didn't start out too well and had some mechanical problems early, but I think part of the problem was that I didn't get very much work. I only pitched 24 innings."

Midway through the season he was sent to Idaho Falls where he joined the rookie team. He was used mostly as a reliever at Idaho, a role he just started to become accustomed to.

"I was a starter in college," Mike said. "I had one start (in Idaho Falls) and didn't do real well and they started using me in relief."

Mike was surprised he was released by the team.

"They had a lot of pitchers out there (Idaho Falls) so they had to let someone go," he said. "I don't know why I went first. I was number one out of the bull pen. I started throwing pretty well, but only got in eight innings before they released me.

MIKE WILL JOIN his brother at Boston's spring training camp in March.

"I'll go to spring training with the Red Sox unless someone else picks me up," Mike said. "I hope someone picks me up. I love to play. I've been playing baseball all my life."

Mike feels the experience he gained while with the Braves will benefit him down the road.

"I don't know if anyone really knows me because I didn't see that much work," he said. "I'll be a year older and I've learned a lot. I'll get a new start with a new team and hopefully I'll earn a spot."

"He's a tough competitor," said Dan, of his younger brother. "There are no guarantees, but hopefully he'll make one of the (Red Sox's) teams."

MIKE STARTED on Western's varsity baseball team for three years. As a sophomore, he and Dan threw back-to-back shutouts in a double-header against Southfield Lathrup. Mike is also second on Western's career strikeout list behind only his older brother.

Mike's collegiate highlights include leading the Titans to a Midwestern Collegiate Conference title as a freshman by pitching a four-hit shutout in the championship game against Xavier of Ohio.

Mike will spend the fall and winter attending classes at Eastern Michigan University while continuing to work on a degree in business management.

Livonia's Mazzoni still calling shots at Adrian

By C.J. Risak

football

Defense rules.

Or at least it does in preseason football meetings. The team with the best (and most) returning defenders usually gets picked as the conference favorite.

That's just what happened at the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association's get-together Thursday at Adrian College. Albion College — with 10 defensive players back from the 1989 MIAA co-champions — was the coaches' selection as No. 1.

Mazzoni, Adrian's 6-foot-3, 195-pound senior quarterback from Livonia (Stevenson), was first team all-MIAA last season. It was the second-consecutive season he had received the honor. Mazzoni led the Bulldogs to an incredible comeback, regrouping from a 1-4 start to win their last four games and tie Albion for first.

INCLUDED IN that season-ending string was a come-from-behind 14-10 win over Albion. With three minutes left, Adrian trailed 10-7 and faced a fourth-down-and-12 situation at its own 24. Mazzoni's pass to Brad Gross was tipped, but Gross grabbed it and rambled 76 yards for the winning score.

"That one play against Albion turned (our season) around for us," Mazzoni said.

The turnaround did not come easily. Adrian had never finished lower than second in the MIAA in the last decade. The Bulldogs had won the title in 1988. But losing four of their first five games left them staggering.

"A lot of guys did some soul-searching," said Mazzoni. "They took a step back and took a long look at themselves."

Mazzoni did the same. "I prepared more mentally for the games," he said. "And I concentrated better."

It showed. Mazzoni finished with 108 completions in 220 attempts (49.1 percent) for 1,504 yards and nine touchdowns, with eight interceptions.

The preseason poll meant as much to Mazzoni as his past numbers. "I could care less about stats," he said. "As long as we win."

THE BULLDOGS should do plenty of that, with eight offensive and eight defensive players with starting experience returning. They were the No. 2 choice of the MIAA coaches.

His biggest task will be replacing four all-conference defensive linemen. Those losses will put a lot of pressure on the linebacking corps, which includes senior Kevin Messner (5-11, 195), from Redford (Union), and senior Mark Kerpet (6-0, 195), from Westland (Livonia Franklin). Messner had 139 tackles and two interceptions in '89.

"There's no doubt the seniors are going to have to shoulder a lot of the responsibility," said Lyall.

One senior Lyall is counting on is Mazzoni. "Besides his obvious athletic ability, he gives us leadership and experience," the first-year coach said. "He leads our team — not just with what he says, but with his work ethic."

DESPITE ADRIAN'S returning talent and winning tradition, Albion was the choice because of defensive stalwarts like senior safety Scott Bissell (6-0, 180), from West Bloomfield (Farmington Harrison); senior linebacker Bill Deery (6-1, 210), from Rochester (Adams); and senior defensive tackle Bill Johansson (6-3, 230), from Troy.

Bissell is a hitter in the secondary; he had 56 tackles in '89, fourth-best on the team, and four quarterback sacks. He intercepted one pass. Deery was right behind Bissell in tackles, with 54.

Johansson numbered 46 tackles and three sacks in a season that earned him all-MIAA honors. Sophomores Pat Ong (6-1, 210), from Bloomfield Hills (Lahser), and Scott Merchant (5-10, 205), also from Bloomfield Hills (Birmingham Brother Rice), will see plenty of action at linebacker.

On offense, Albion must replace seven departed starters, including quarterback Jan Firek and running back Bill Barker, the MIAA's offensive MVP. Senior Brian Dawood (5-10, 205), from Troy, will try to make up for Barker's loss; Dawood gained 353 yards on 84 carries (4.2 average) and caught 11 passes for 146 yards (13.3) in '89.

ONE TEAM no one seems able to figure out is Olivet's. With former West Bloomfield coach Dominic Livedoti starting his third season, the other MIAA schools are wary of the Comets.

According to Livedoti, for Olivet (4-5 overall, 1-4 in the MIAA) to contend, they must do two things: develop depth and replace five linebackers. "I want to be very realistic," he said. "We've made a dent (in the MIAA), but we're not quite there yet. We've gained some respect, closed the gap."

Leading the defense are junior defensive back Chris Alexander (6-2, 185), from West Bloomfield; senior lineman Tom Bondy (5-11, 220), from Walled Lake Central; senior defensive back Russell Johnson (6-0, 180), from Southfield; and junior inside linebacker Tom Lamb (5-9, 210), from West Bloomfield.

Alexander, second team all-MIAA in '89, was in on 61 tackles last season and, together with Johnson (31 tackles, one interception), anchors a secondary that returns seven players with experience. Bondy had 50 tackles and caused a fumble last season.

LAMB, THOUGH, is in the pivotal position, with the linebacking corps decimated by graduation losses. A part-timer a year ago, he got 28 tackles. "If there's a player with a bigger heart or better work ethic than Tom Lamb, I want to know," said Livedoti.

The Olivet coach had similar praise for returning running back Dan Shrewsberry (6-0, 195), a junior from West Bloomfield. In '89, Shrewsberry led the Comet ground-gainers with 334 yards on 94 attempts (3.7). He also caught 17 passes for 126 yards.

Hope was a perennial contender — until 1988. In '89, they rebounded somewhat to post a 3-2 MIAA mark (4-5 overall). Coach Ray Smith, entering his 21st year with the Flying Dutchmen, will count on nine offensive and eight defensive returnees to keep his team in the hunt.

Included in that number is senior guard Brian Etzel (6-2, 215), from Bloomfield Hills (Lahser), a second-team all-MIAA selection in '89, and senior defensive back Jim Myers (6-0, 194), from Rochester, a three-year starter. Myers had 52 tackles, three interceptions and a fumble recovery last season.

KALAMAZOO COLLEGE is in a situation like Hope's, except the Hornets lack the football tradition. For first-year coach Dave Warmack, Kalamazoo's third coach in four years, there will be 18 starters returning, including defensive stalwarts John Knittel and Jim Naif, both from Livonia (Churchill).

Knittel (6-0, 180), a senior defensive back, had 49 tackles and three interceptions last season; Naif (6-0, 210), a senior middle linebacker, led the Hornets with 62 tackles.

Another Kalamazoo returnee is senior tight end Eric Johnson (6-3, 210), from Livonia (Stevenson). Johnson caught nine passes for 125 yards last season. Still, it will take a big effort for the Hornets to improve on last year's 1-7-1 overall, 1-4 MIAA records.

learned and got better."

While the Chiefs had a stable lineup last year and usually went no deeper than seven players, that's apt to change this fall, especially early while Blohm sorts things out and searches for a strong combination. Even then, due to the lack of returning starters, Canton is likely to use a 10-player rotation.

"WE'RE GOING to be blending players, and that's always a challenge," Blohm said. "There's no guarantee who will play where and for how long, but I think we have a good group of seniors to provide leadership and show the younger players what they have to do.

"Last year we knew what (the seniors) could do. You had an idea what was going to happen. Here, the feeling is these kids are going to develop into a good team. The question is when that is going to happen."

Blohm has three post players in the 5-10 Holmes, 5-11 Nicastri and 6-foot Gray and might use one or all three in the game at a given time. Gray also is an accurate shooter from 15 feet as was Ferko.

Nicastri could emerge as a real asset for this year's team.

"Right now she's one of the best defensive players we've had in the program in a long time," Blohm said. "She can guard a perimeter player, and she can go inside and guard a post player. That will be her main contribution this year, but we have to get her going offensively."

The Chiefs have another 6-footer in Murphy, but she's considered a perimeter player, as are all the others. Canton could put a team with dominating height on the floor if Blohm chooses to play Murphy and the three post players together.

BLOHM GOT the idea of having Murphy at the high post, where she can use her height to see and pass inside, from watching the Soviet Union women's team.

"There's no kid in our program who has worked any harder than her," said Blohm, who added "Shannon can shoot the ball."

Barna, a three-year varsity player, is probably the one player who can be assured of having lots of playing time. She'll be a key player at guard, and Ford came off the bench to spell either Russell or Barna in the backcourt last year.

"Mary was one of the bright spots because she could do anything you asked her to do. She's real adaptable. Give her a job to do, and she'll do it for you.

"But her role is changing. Last year we needed players who could get the ball to Ferko and Thompson when it needed to be there. We need her to score more.

"One of the question marks early is 'Where is the scoring going to come from?' That's the fun of sports, having to make adjustments and learning what you have to do to be successful."

Blohm expects Livonia Franklin, Northville and Walled Lake Western to challenge Canton's reign in the Western Division of the WLAA. Before that race starts, the Chiefs begin the season with games against Waterford Kettering, Trenton, Marian and Farmington Hills Mercy. The opener is Tuesday, Aug. 28.

MSHL champ splits Chicago series

The Bulldogs, champions of the Metro Summer Hockey League, split their annual two-game series with the representative of a Chicago-based league.

The Demons of the Windy City Summer League won the first game 10-5 in Evanston, Ill., Saturday. The Bulldogs rallied from a 4-0 deficit to win the rematch Sunday in Robert Crown Center, 10-9.

The Bulldogs were behind 4-0 early in the second period of Sunday's game and 6-4 at the end. But Alan Carnes' goal with 19:59 left in the period closed the gap to two goals and gave the Bulldogs a momentum boost.

The MSHL champs outscored the Demons 6-3 in the third period to take a come-from-behind victory and salvage a split.

Carnes finished with three goals and Joe Burton two. Craig Johnston had one goal and four assists.

MARK JOHNSON, who also tallied one score, and Burton recorded two assists each.

In the first game, the Bulldogs were behind 3-0 after one period and could never catch up, trailing 8-4 after two.

Joe Bonnett and Johnson scored two goals apiece.

MSHL Commissioner A.J. Baker also announced the all-league selections for the 1990 season.

● BIG FISH

John Urbonas' first deep sea fishing trip was a memorable one.

Fishing out of Key West, Fla., on June 30, Urbonas reeled in a 38-pound dolphin fish (not the mammal) on 30-pound test line.

"The exciting part is that he (charter boat skipper) told me it could be a record for 30-pound test line," said Urbonas, a Livonia resident.

The odd part is that Urbonis hadn't planned to go deep sea fishing.

"I've done some fishing (on inland lakes) in the past, but I'm not an avid fisherman," Urbonas said. "I was vacationing in Florida with a friend (Mike Brykalski) and he talked me into going deep sea fishing. He said it would be a great time and it certainly was."

● STATE RECORDS

Three new state record fish have been confirmed by the Department of Natural Resources this year.

The most recent record was a 1-pound, 10-inch pumpkinseed sunfish, hooked by Donald Walsh of Bellaire on May 2 while baitcasting a worm on Thayer Lake in Antrim County.

Port Huron's Dennis Kish set a state record when he landed a 3-pound 8-ounce, 19½-inch gizzard shad while baitcasting a minnow on April 14 on the St. Clair River in St. Clair County.

The third new record goes to Chad Markham of Mt. Clemens for a 7-pound 7-ounce, 43-inch American eel, taken from Lake St. Clair in Macomb County.

● OUTDOOR WEEKEND

Howard Shelly (of Mort Neff's Michigan Outdoors), Bob Garner (of Fred Trost's Michigan Outdoors) and Tom Huggler (Michigan Editor of Outdoor Life) will join a host of other speakers at the 4th Annual Woods-N-Water Weekend, Sept. 7-9 at the Eastern Michigan Fairgrounds Imlay City.

More than 100 exhibitors will have close-out sales on fishing and camping gear as well as per season discounts on hunting equipment. Archers can try their luck at the "running deer" and the "long-range elk" shoots as well as have their bows tuned, speed tested and camo painted.

Other attractions include: a frontier camp by the Attica Muzzleloaders including demonstrations on tomahawk and knife throwing; a Camp Chili Cook-Off with $500 going to the winner; turkey and deer calling contests and much more.

Admission is $4 per person with children under 12 admitted free. A three-day pass is $5. Show hours are 5-9 p.m. Friday, Sept. 7, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9. Parking is free.

The Eastern Michigan Fairgrounds are located on M-53 (Vandyke), one-half mile north of I-69 between Flint and Port Huron.

● DUCK NUMBERS DOWN

Numbers of breeding ducks in the United States and Canada remain low with the 1990 spring population virtually unchanged from last year, according to the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The breeding population for ducks in all surveyed areas totaled 31.3 million, up less than one-percent from last year's total of 30.9 million. The 1990 count is the third lowest on record, after 1985 and 1989. Overall, duck population in the surveyed areas is down 22-percent from the 1955-1989 average.

The breeding duck population estimates represent the largest wildlife census in the world. The counts are based on aerial and ground surveys of prime nesting habitat in the U.S. and Canada, conducted by the U.S. Wildlife Service, Canadian Wildlife Service and cooperating provinces and states.

Softball player aims to strengthen skills

Dear Myrna: I am on a men's softball team. I'm 32 years old and in great shape. Can you give me some tips on specifically what I should do to strengthen the areas needed for my sport? Am I getting too old for softball?

Too old for anything? Never.

You say you are in great shape — I am not sure what you mean if you need greater energy when playing baseball.

Basically, your muscles rely on two different energy systems; aerobic and anaerobic.

When you work out aerobically, you primarily use oxygen for energy. The oxygen in your blood is delivered to your muscles through capillaries. Then, tiny organs within your muscles, called mitochondria, use oxygen to produce energy.

As you continue to exercise aerobically over a period of time, an increase in the number of capillaries and mitochondria makes this energy-producing system more efficient.

Anaerobic movement uses glycogen to produce energy instead of oxygen. Glycogen stored in muscles can be a powerful, but short burst of energy when it's released.

SO, THE bottom line about energy for you and softball is a good combination of aerobic activity four to six times a week and controlled calisthenic training three times per week.

When working with muscle groups, you have to think specifically about tricep extensions, hamstring curls, rear lat pulls, bicep curls, trunk twists with bar across shoulders, rotator cuffs by shoulders at 90 degrees, abdominal curls and squats.

By strengthening these specific areas, you can eliminate injury and improve your game. We have workouts with several types of sports teams — always with good results.

Wolves '76 claim tournament crown

The Wolves '76 boys soccer team won the Portage City On The Grow Tournament July 21-22, defeating the Cleveland Internationals 2-0 in the final.

In the semifinals, the Wolves beat the Wolverines of the Livonia Youth Soccer Club. In five tournament games, they outscored their opponents 21-0.

In the last year, the Wolves have compiled a record of 80-3-1 and have amassed a goal differential of 333-28.

Along the way, the Wolves won two Little Caesars Premier League championships and tournaments in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Kitchener (Ontario), Maumee (Ohio), Okemos and Potomac (Maryland) in addition to the annual Wolverine Tournament in Livonia. They also were runners-up in Dallas Cup XI.

The players are Adam Borchert, Daniel Brody, David Garlick, Neal Grode, Jamie Heitert, Bill Hensley, Adam Hunter, Mike Kley, Matt Kopmeyer, Justin Marshall, Kenny Perlin, Alan Placek, Goran Rauker, Seamus Rustin, Tino Scicluna, Rich Walos and Jamie Whitmore.

The team is coached by Paul Scicluna. His assistant coaches are Jack Hensley and Zlatko Rauker.

The Wolves are sponsored by the Livonia Family Y Soccer Club and affiliated with the Little Caesars Premier Soccer League.

Anne Murray has come a long way since she first sang "Snowbird."

Stardom is having your own museum

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Anne Murray has sold more than 20 million albums, won four Grammys, three Country Music Awards, 28 Juno Awards and has 11 gold albums.

But is a star really a star if they don't have their own museum? Elvis had Graceland. Anne Murray has the Anne Murray Centre in Springhill, Nova Scotia.

What's left?

"I was overwhelmed the first time I saw it," said Murray, who performs Monday at the Riverfront Music Theatre in Detroit. "When I first walked through it, it was like tippy-toeing through your life."

The center includes everything from gold records to old hockey skates from Murray's life. So far, the tourist attraction has spruced up the economy of Springhill, a mining town feeling the economic ills of an ailing industry.

The Anne Murray Centre is non-profit. Money from T-shirt and souvenirs sales goes back into the center.

A museum, though, doesn't mean Murray is ready to become a relic herself. The husky-voiced Canadian songstress has released her 29th album on Capitol Nashville, "You Will."

THE LATEST release marks a back-to-basics approach for Murray, who fluttered onto the music scene in the early 1970s on the "Glen Campbell Show" on CBS-TV and with the hit "Snowbird."

Gone are the synthesizers, drum machines and other techno apparatus. "You Will" is basically Anne Murray working in different genres such as calypso, rock 'n' roll and country.

"I went through that phase and got bogged down by that," said Murray in a telephone interview from Springhill. "I got tired of that synthesizer sound, too. It's so cold. It's so impersonal."

All of which belies a voice that has always been a breath of honesty and warmth. Murray believes her resonant vocals are getting better with age.

She points out vocalists hit their

Writer plays bartender, as extra

Thomas Sullivan's writing credits span some four novels and 50 short stories. These include "The Phases of Harry Moon" (Pulitzer Prize nomination in 1989) and "Born Burning," his latest novel. Sullivan is a Lathrup Village resident.

By Thomas Sullivan
special writer

THE LATE NIGHT phone call from the talent agent reached me through third parties and had all the earmarks of an ultimate let-down. Still, when the invitation came to be an extra in the new Harrison Ford film, "Presumed Innocent," shot last year in Detroit, I went.

They wanted a "blond" family man. My son qualified. The daughter of the friend who had called qualified. Me, I used to be blond. Whereas God numbers the very hairs of your head, I name mine. But what the heck, you don't tell Warner Brothers, "I'll call you."

Security was tight on the rooftop parking lot of the International Plaza Inn for the first shot at 7 a.m. With so many police officers, it looked like the filming of "Police Academy 43."

You get your first rush of vanity from the eyes of those denied access, and the true cost of movies may be reckoned in the lost productivity of employees gaping down from nearby office towers. Talent agent Marcee Haney was there, and I signed the pay voucher and release on the hood of a pickup truck, missing the irony.

ONE OF MY KIDS stepped on a bug, and I told them it was a trained bug and that they'd just killed the star of the movie. They consoled me.

For the next 90 minutes, wheeled islands of sound, lights and camera paraphernalia rose out of nowhere, manned by a one-arm crew (the other arms cradled clipboards) who spoke to each other, face-to-face, through headsets. It was like a ventriloquists convention. You'd be talking to someone and voices would be cackling out of their hip speaker, headset and walkie-talkie.

Five "father" extras were asked to park their cars in a certain configuration. I had an '82 stretch Honda with leprosy and was relegated to the perimeter. It was a hot, muggy day and my windshield looked like a dirty aquarium wall. But there wasn't any question who it was when Harrison Ford stood on the other side.

The man has a certain maverick independence no matter how rigid the role (an assistant county prosecutor in this case), and that's why you like him beyond the consummate skill of his art. Quietly intense but affable, he was unphased by the many delays — airplanes, intermittent rain, car alarms going off.

Given the large number of people on the set, his polite smile and hello caught me off guard the first time they was offered and I barely responded in passing.

BY 11 WE WERE on our way to the day's main shoot at the Woodbridge Tavern, and that was the first time I heard the dreaded word: "Wardrobe." There were a couple dozen extras in the sit-down restaurant scene, and it seemed everyone had been told to bring changes of clothes. Except me.

Suddenly there were suitcases and garment bags everywhere. The holding area was the terrace of the Woodbridge, another rooftop (casting seems to favor making escape difficult but suicide easy). A succession of wardrobe people swept through us like the wind off the river, sanctioning or condemning.

"This one won't do," one of them said about me, and the next thing I knew I was being escorted away.

I thought it was all over. "I swear I played tennis with you 15 years ago, and you won," I told my warder, but he wasn't buying it.

As it turned out, we were merely going to the wardrobe trucks. There were two, one with air conditioning, one without. The one without was a jumble of racks and boxes, and for 20 minutes I played Superman, fast-changing from casual to preppie to formal while we stumbled over each other.

THE WARDROBE MASTER had done "The Godfather" and recounted a history of violence for each jacket and shirt I tried on. Undressing was a trial. I had had an unfortunate mishap that morning, lowering the electric razor from my face and accidentally shaving a swath down my chest with the groomer.

What the heck, I'm not going to do a nude scene, I had thought. But now I had to keep turning away or explain that I was into "punk."

The steady stream of one-liners out of my mouth had pretty well acquitted me of the chaste father figure image by this time, and a hasty meeting of casting people decided I was too flamboyant to grace a table. They elected to make me a bartender. "I dance on the bar and sing 'Pagliacci' whenever I do vodka," I warned, foreseeing that my children would be orphaned from the scene if I was re-cast.

There was a man lying on the ground below the rooftop rail. "What role did you give him?" I asked. "Is that the last bartender?" They assured me it was only a napping crew member and that my children would be adopted. Meanwhile, agile fingers were rolling up my sleeves and the Godfather's tailor was slapping an apron on me.

Bow tie, no tie, silk tie, I was back and forth to wardrobe (the a-c truck this time — the reason stars always look so cool is because their stuff is flash-frozen in a vault). The bar they ordered me behind said, "Waitresses only."

peak between 40-50 years of age. "Well, I'm in the middle of that right now," said Murray, 45.

It used to take her all day to do one vocal. Now she can do four in the same amount of time, in the studio. More than anything, Murray simply enjoys performing.

Her tour schedule is kept between 70-80 dates a year. Her pared-down concert itinerary allows Murray to spend time with her two children, William, 13, and Dawn, 10, and husband of 15 years, Bill Langstroth, who discovered her on the CBC-TV show "Singalong Jubilee."

MURRAY IS one of the few artists who has enjoyed longevity and has maintained a stable home life as well.

She admits it was a little difficult at first, especially with the sudden surge of fame, after "Snowbird" became a hit. She had a physical education degree from the University of New Brunswick and was set to teach.

"I was reluctant to be successful," Murray said. "I thought I would change. You always hear of people becoming successful and then they become monsters.

"Everyone told me not to change, and stay the way I was. The 'down home' type of approach was very attractive. It took me awhile to find out that it doesn't necessarily have to happen (become big-headed)." Murray has remained down to earth despite becoming one of Canada's most recognizable citizens, not to mention musical exports. So, it comes as no surprise she is quite the hockey fan.

"Detroit's going to have to do something there," said Murray, sounding more like hockey analyst Don Cherry. "That's a sad state of affairs. All those dumb trades. They have Steve Yzerman. They have the nucleus for a good team."

Though she professes an allegiance to the Toronto Maple Leafs (she lives in Toronto), Murray followed the Detroit Red Wings as a child. Her favorite player was Gordie Howe.

Anne Murray will perform on Monday at the Riverfront Music Theatre at Chene Park, 2600 Atwater, Detroit. For information, call 393-0066.

SWISHING MY APRON, I pronounced myself a snappy crossdresser, but the casting director laughed lethally and said, "You get points for style and character, I'll give you that," and for better or worse, I, who cannot drink, was a bartender.

Lunch had been rumored for some time, and here the true caste system emerged. The order of "doing" lunch is first stars, then crew, then extras. The food, however, is redemptive. We were to walk down the street to Taboo for the feast. But a sudden downpour put all of us to flight — Judge Willie Lipscombe, Jr., Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor George Ward and a pregnant mom, inclusive.

It was another hour after lunch before the scene was set. By then I had grown weary of bartendering for child extras and was threatening to instigate dwarf tossing. But at last we were briefed. As a handicap, they hung a tie around my neck that knotted like Mike Tyson's fist and hung like a plumb bob.

There were eight takes of Harrison Ford, Bonnie Bedelia and Jesse Bradford sitting at a table. I did my peripheral thing in pantomime, fearing lest I tip over a tray of glasses or complusively write, "Surrender Dorothy!" across the bar mirror in whipped cream.

The man has a certain maverick independence no matter how rigid the role (an assistant county prosecutor in this case), and that's why you like him beyond the consummate skill of his art.

"Presumed Innocent," now at Detroit movie theaters, stars Harrison Ford, shown here in a scene with Raul Julia and Bonnie Bedelia. Much of the film was shot in Detroit.

At one point the shot top on the Seagram's I was fake-pouring came off, and everyone within sniffing distance salivated like a Pavlov dog.

WHEN THE DIRECTOR herded the extras out of the room after the second take, I was left leaning on the bar. And, lo, the director and the star came and sat down opposite me.

"Got anything to . . . ?" Indiana Jones gestured toward me as if he held a cup handle between his fingers.

"You think I do ties funny, you ought to see me do drinks," I said.

He gave me that famous languid laugh. "Oh, you're not — a real-ly."

"No," I acknowledged. "Usually I walk backward and wag my head."

Now, I don't know why I said that. But the laugh lingered for a few seconds this time, and the director iced me as if I were breaking his man's concentration. Indiana Jones wanted coffee. He got it. The next 20 minutes were a quiet pep talk about the scene. I dry whistled Beethoven's Fifth twice and counted the bubbles in the jukebox. Show biz. Love it.

The rest of it went about the same. "Cameras rolling . . . background action . . . cut . . . print . . . that's a wrap." The kid, Jesse, had to eat three plates of food for another angle and a trio of takes, but it didn't deter his sweet tooth. He brought the bartender his sucker stick to throw away.

Then they took away my apron, my shirt, my Mike Tyson tie. Then they smiled and gave me my kids back. Then they said, "The check's in the mail." Then they signed me out. I went home.

I guess I'm not — a real-ly.

Garden veggies

Cafe Cortina in Farmington Hills is serving dishes with vegetables that are fresh from its garden behind the restaurant. One of the most popular luncheon dishes is grilled eggplant. The chef also uses the fresh veggies in the primaveras, veal with sauteed tomatoes and basil, and in sauteed green tomatoes with olive oil and basil. Besides garden fare from owners Adriano and Rina Tonon, the restaurant also uses grapes and arugula from Vic's garden next to theirs.

Apple strudel

Pastry Chef Doug Flick of the Ritz-Carlton, Dearborn, has introduced a new Fitness Cuisine dessert. Apple Strudel has 197 calories for one serving. The dessert was created after a program "Weight Watchers at Work" got under way at the hotel. Participants lost a combined total of 52 pounds during an eight-week period.

Whine, dine

The Whine & Dine Club has opened at Meadowbrook Village Mall in Rochester Hills. The mall supervises the "whiners" (children between the age of 4-12) at the Village Players Puppet Theatre in the mall, while parents dine at any of the mall's restaurants and eateries between the hours of 7-9 p.m. the second Friday of each month. Restaurants included are Kruse & Muer, Max & Erma's, Oceania Inn, Ember's Deli and Jimmy's Coney Island.

Top honors

Two Birmingham restaurants and their chefs have been awarded top honors for dessert entries at United Community Services of Metropolitan Detroit's Sporting Goodtimes Auction and Buffet fund-raiser. They are Machus restaurant, chef Pearl Thouin, and Alban's Bottle and Basket, chef Daniel Shaughnessy. Machus created basketball-shaped truffles surrounded by basketball nets made of royal icing.

How to be an advertising whiz.
You have to buy a newspaper ad in the Detroit market and you're faced with a real dilemma. Circulation is down for the Detroit News and Free Press. Ad rates are up. How do you juggle the numbers, stretch your budget, and get the biggest bang for your buck?
CUM LAUDE
See for yourself how SPRING measures up.
You don't need a yardstick to see that your advertising dollar can buy more in SPRING. SPRING's network of 39 suburban Detroit newspapers reaches more than 1,000,000 readers at a cost-per-inch that's below that of the News or Free Press — daily or Sunday editions.
That means you can run bigger ads or run more ads when you put SPRING in your media buy.
Get the lowest CPMs.
This is pretty easy — even for math phobics. Just take the total cost of your newspaper ad and divide that number by the circulation (the DNAs un-audited figures, or SPRING's audited numbers).
You'll find SPRING delivers Detroit's upscale suburban market at a lower cost per thousand than either the News or the Free Press.
So, you can reach more consumers for less money when you place your ad in SPRING's newspaper network.
SPRING CPMS
1,000,000 SPRING
The bottom line? SPRING delivers the suburbs best.
No matter how you add it up, the bottom line is this: SPRING is simply a better buy.
SPRING reaches more than one million readers. SPRING's circulation is strong and stable. And all SPRING newspapers are audited by either CAC or ABC.
Best of all, SPRING costs less per thousand — and less per inch — than the Detroit dailies.
Now that you know the score, shouldn't you put SPRING in your advertising plan?

Old Village: a trip back in time

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

IF YOU squint your eyes and use your imagination, you'll be transported back to the late 19th century when visiting Plymouth's historic Liberty Street in the heart of Old Village.

In the 1800s, the village shops housed a collection of dry goods, groceries and general merchandise. Today, an eclectic array of shops, both traditional and trendy, line Old Village streets.

As you travel north on Starkweather off Main Street, past the Olde English sign that welcomes visitors, many thriving antique shops compete for your attention with window displays from the past.

More than a dozen antique shops can be found on the village streets of Liberty, Starkweather and Mill, alone. Many of the shops are cooperatives, housing five or six antique dealers under one business sign, thus creating an unusual assortment of antiques from which to choose.

Inside the antique shops of Old Village, you'll find furniture, art deco items, old radios, sheet music and stained glass alongside oak fireplace hearths. Strewn upon the bare floor boards are carpet sweepers and coffee grinders, which work without electricity. Art deco pieces, such as mirrors and Louis Icart prints, sit next to washboards, Oriental rugs and black, wrought-iron bells.

"ALL OF the storefronts were vacant when I started the first antique shop on Liberty Street 24 years ago," said Dee Morgan of Dee Morgan Antiques, now on Starkweather.

"You have to be creative to make it in this business," she said, referring to the antique trade.

Why do people like to shop Old Village? Shopper Don McDowell of Livonia said, "Because I like to see new things, not the same merchandise." He added, "I'm fascinated by history."

On Liberty Street, Jim Stuart of Old Town Antiques said, "Money is the main reason people purchase antiques, as an investment."

Debbie Thompson of Canton Township browses at Evelyn O'Connor's Liberty Bell Antiques on Liberty Street.

"Under $10 is firm," offered Stuart, summing up the unwritten sales bartering policy of Old Town Antiques.

Concurring with this policy was Evelyn O'Connor of Liberty Bell Antiques. "You can always ask," she said, referring to the price of a specific item. "You can always make offers."

"In fact, you should make offers," she said.

IN THE newer end of the village is the Plymouth Antique Mall, with 5,000 square feet of wall-to-wall antiques. The owner of the mini mall, Paul Kalik, said he "imports a lot of merchandise. We ship a lot of our furniture from England and France."

"We go over, pick what we want, then have it shipped here."

Perhaps for all of these reasons, people like to shop Old Village.

Across from the mini mall is Briar Rose Antiques. Owner Mary Hedgien provided her own brand of philosophy while perched behind an antique

Detroit Symphony: It's a part of state's fabric

Bob Sklar

SAVED, ONCE more.

A $3-million state grant has staved off the Detroit Symphony's latest budget crisis.

But the 77-year-old orchestra isn't financially solvent — not by a long bow.

As part of its five-year business plan to wipe out current and projected deficits, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall sought $8 million in supplemental state support to match $8 million in corporate pledges.

Though well short of that request, the $3-million state grant still bolsters the $2.55 million the state approved in annual operating budget support for the DSOH.

Ever the optimist, DSOH chairman Bob Miller says: "With this $3 million commitment, we're finally past the immediate financial crisis and are confident that we will have the operating funds to continue through next season until the state can respond to our request for the remaining funds."

IT'S IMPOSSIBLE to say how generous state lawmakers, courted by countless special interests, will be next year.

But they can't help but be swayed by the jump in ticket sales and the willingness of musicians to agree to an unprecedented four-year contract with major concessions, including a nearly 10-percent pay cut the first year. Staff salaries also were frozen.

Last season, the DOSH exceeded its 1988-89 ticket sales by 49,000 tickets, or 28 percent, and its ticket revenue by $3.9 million, or 45 percent. Subscription season concerts at Orchestra Hall operated at 81 percent of capacity with 17 sold-out concerts.

Subscription sales for the eight-week, 1990-91 season are up 12 percent and include a 77-percent renewal rate. Stepped-up marketing is only part of the reason behind this stunning turnaround.

More compelling reasons include the completed move back to Orchestra Hall, the appointment of Neeme Jarvi as new music director and the planned performance of all 15 Nutcrackers at the Fox Theatre.

Back from last year will be the African-American Composers Forum showcasing music by minority conductors. New this year is the Michigan Artists In Recital series, which showcases new Michigan artists.

TOM GULICK, DSOH marketing vice president, is right: The DSO, fresh off a 24-city state tour, is a vital artistic force.

But the jury is still out on how long state lawmakers, corporations and residents can afford to bankroll the financially beleaguered orchestra.

When the feeling grows that maybe the sounds of classical music have outlived their time in Michigan, we'd do well to weigh the words of state Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, one of the arts' best friends:

"Cultural institutions have the awesome responsibility for carrying forth our cultural and historical legacy.

"It's not so simple to close a library, a museum or a symphony. That's not a worthwhile alternative.

"Cultural resources are a very important part of the quality of Michigan life."

Well put, Mr. Senator.

John Luoma, 21, of Livonia, touches up his award-winning caricature of Henry VIII. Luoma's poster was selected as official poster of the 11th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival, which runs weekends from Aug. 18 through Sept. 30. The festival also is open on Labor Day.

Festival's poster embodies Henry VIII

DAYS OF olde. Boisterous. Drink. Noble. Food. Fun. Knights. Kings. Queens. Ladies. Servants. Serfs. Wenches. Chivalry. Jousting. Majestic. Bazaar.

How do you fit all that into a 2-by 3-foot poster for the Michigan Renaissance Festival.

Answer? You don't, according to Livonia art student Jon Luoma, but you can instill the embodiment of all that into a lighthearted caricature of Henry the VIII, King of England from 1509 to 1547.

Okay, so Henry the VIII wasn't one of the great leaders during the learning and artistry revival movement following the Dark Ages, but the dude did like to party.

Luoma, 21, took first place in a contest sponsored by the Michigan Renaissance Festival. The contest was to select the official poster of the festival, which runs from Aug. 18 through Sept. 30.

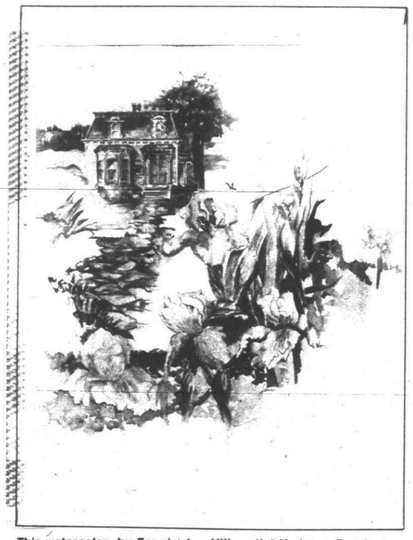
Artist's work displayed in Livonia City Hall



This watercolor, by Farmington Hills artist V. Janus Benda, is entitled House Across the Street.

The art of native Detroiter V. Janus Benda will be on display through Aug. 31 in Livonia City Hall, 33000 Civic Center Drive, south of Five Mile.

The Farmington Hills resident's work will be on display in the city hall lobby 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. For evening viewing times, call the Livonia Arts Commission: 421-2000, Ext. 351.

Her works — acrylic, mixed media, painted silk, watercolor, collage, oil, ink — range in price from $50 to $400.

Benda graduated from the University of Detroit with a bachelor of architectural engineering degree in design.

Her professional career began by practicing architecture with companies specializing in structural engineering of commercial buildings.

She also studied art at the Society of Arts and Crafts in Detroit. More recently, she studied silkscreen and blockprinting at Madonna College, Livonia.

"As a result of the technical aspects of her daily routine, she experienced an inherent need for artistic expression. This was nurtured by the continued study and experimentation with various media," according to the artist's statement available in the city hall.

BENDA FIRST entered shows and competitions in 1988. A still life done in oil won a bronze medal at the International Art Challenge, Los Angeles.

In addition to the Livonia City Hall, she has exhibited at the Southfield Civic Center and the Community Center of Farmington-Farmington Hills.

She also has displayed in many local juried shows, including the Michigan State Fair, the Oakland Community College Helen DeRoy Show and the Historic Trinity Church Ecclesiastical Art Show in Detroit.

She has earned:

- Oakland County Art Show, Pontiac, 1990, third place, mixed media.
- Pontiac Artists Show, Rochester, 1990, best of show, watercolor.
- South Oakland Artists Show, Southfield, 1990, two honorable mentions, watercolor and ink on rice paper and watercolor monoprint.
- Visual Art Association of Livonia, Livonia, 1990, third place, mixed media.

V. Janus Benda hangs one of her paintings in the Livonia City Hall. The painting, Bridge at Chartres, is India ink and watercolor on rice paper.

oak desk at the back of the store that she and husband, James, own.

"I don't subscribe to the theory, 'People can't afford antiques.' There's something for everyone," Hedgien said.

"I'd like to encourage people to come to Old Village to shop for unusual gift items, a bud vase, a special wine glass," she said. "There's something to fit every budget."

NEXT DOOR to Briar Rose Antiques is Sweet Afton's Tea Room, where you can rest and refresh yourself before proceeding with your trip. An alternative to tea was offered by visitor Deborah Thompson of Farmington.

"We always hit Bryan's Sweet Shop, first," she said. "It's nice to come with the kids."

Each of her hands held a child's hand, while four other children waited outside on the sidewalk.

Diversity is what makes Plymouth's Old Village special. The old sits right alongside the new. In the 1870s, the railroads arrived in the village of Plymouth; with them came growth. Along with the touch of big-city atmosphere, the trains brought a longing for what was new.

What's new is just around the corner on Mill and Starkweather in the village shops of Critter Country and Kites & Fun Things.

Critter Country, an environmentalist's haven, is the future if we want to save the planet. The shop is filled with bird feeders, seeds, bird houses, bat houses. Bat houses?

"Individually, bats will eat up to 6,000 mosquitoes a night," said Ann Arbor resident David Barr, a University of Michigan student who works at Critter Country.

"The idea behind Critter Country is to use birds, bats and natural methods such as landscaping to attract them, in order to eliminate the use of chemical pesticides."

Animal rights activists will be happy to know, Critter Control, Inc. of which Critter Country is a division, uses only non-harmful methods to trap pesky animals. Then they release them into the wilderness.

KITES & FUN Things will shock your senses with color the moment you walk through the door. "Basically, we sell kites," said owner Jon Trennepohl. "Every kite is a piece of art."

Sport kites started on the West Coast. "Kiting has been around for a very long time," Trennepohl said. "Now there is competition kiting, precision flying, even ballet teams, which fly to music."

Plymouth's historic Old Village is definitely the old, alongside what's new. Railroad tracks run parallel to, and within a foot of, Brenda Ellington-Wallace's shop, Born Again Resale.

Antique refinishing shops, hobby train shops, pastry shops and restaurants, antiques are only the beginning in the village.

So grab an Old Village Walking Map from the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce on Main Street, across from Kellogg Park. Spend a day in Plymouth's historic Old Village, simply browsing or even daydreaming.

Livonia artist designs poster for festival

"The theme (of the Renaissance Festival) is 'Live the dream,' so I tried to come up with something that brings (that) to mind," Luoma said. "I also tried to keep it light."

After brainstorming a number of ideas — including images of knights, castles and several concepts with kings — Luoma settled on a caricature of a king modeled after Henry the VIII.

"Coming up with the idea is always the hardest part for any artist, I think," he said. "People don't realize how much planning goes into it.

"If you're going to make a mistake," he added, "that's where it's going to happen."

LUOMA WANTED his king to be full of life, and since the Renaissance Festival focuses on food and drink, he wanted the image of a large, festive nobleman with a drumstick in one hand, a mug in the other.

Even now, he concedes, he might like to alter the poster a little bit. "I'm never really completely happy with what I do — I think that's an important (quality for an artist)."

Luoma attends the Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design in Detroit. He intends to become a commercial artist when he graduates later this year.

Actually, the illustration for the Renaissance Festival poster is a bit of a departure for Luoma. "I like working with colored pencils and doing illustrations, but that normally doesn't apply to what I'm doing."

Instead, he's training to be a graphic designer. Graphic design is more than merely drawing, he said. Graphic design requires both visual and analytical skills in taking a concept from a rough sketch to a workable solution.

Graphic design entails not just illustration, but the combination, placement and juxtaposition of the illustration with accompanying copy, he said. "It's the whole thing."

BEING AN art student, and training to be a graphic artist, sometimes takes the fun out of art, he conceded, because he is doing it all the time. Then art can take on more of a job quality to it.

Every once in a while, however, as in the case of the Renaissance Festival poster, he gets more enthusiastic about a project so he forgets it's work. Then it's more like discovering art all over again.

"I've been drawing all my life," he said, adding that he was indeed one of those students commonly found in school halls with heavily doodled upon notebooks under his arm. "Hey, sometimes I would draw in school at the expense of other things."

"But it wasn't until high school that I considered doing it for a living," he said.

While attending high school, Luoma began taking courses at the Livonia Public Schools career center, where a commercial arts teacher motivated him to take his talent and do something with it.

"I always knew I could draw, but he's the one who told me I could make it," Luoma said.

LUOMA DOESN'T kid himself into thinking that "making it" as a commercial artist will be easy. "It's tough to get in, but once you're in and establish yourself, you can move up."

Hopefully, he added, his prize winning poster will — if not to gain him entry into the field — will at least open a few doors. "It's something with my name on so it should at least help."

The 11th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival runs weekends and Labor Day 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., rain or shine. The festival site is one mile north of Mt. Holly, on Dixie Highway.

Music links flutist's worldly experiences

By Carolyn Barnett-Goldstein
special writer

In the middle of the night in Baghdad, Iraq in 1950, a little boy and his brother are awakened by their parents. One is saying, "This is it. Our time has come to leave."

Shaul Ben-Meir, flutist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, was recounting his family's escape to Israel as he sat in an Indian restaurant in Farmington Hills. Having driven from his business, Flute World, in his late-model car, he is successful, but he hasn't forgotten his early years.

"You see," he said, "they made it possible for the Jews to leave. After they announced it, we said, 'Yes, we want to go to Israel.'

"They said 'Then, you have to give up your Iraqi citizenship.' Then after the Jews gave up their citizenship, they froze all their assets.

"'Because,' the Iraqis said, 'we're not going to send all that wealth to Israel. We're in a state of war with Israel.'

"I feel the best gift in my life was getting out of there."

Thus began a life composed of many worlds, of many cultures stretching from the Middle East to the United States, from professional musician to businessman with an international clientele. Music is the link that holds all of these elements in place.

He was dressed in casual clothes, his attitude was optimistic. His manner was open and humble.

Ben-Meir's slight accent only served to deepen his voice as he described his childhood on Kibbutz Ayn Herod. Located in the Jezereel Valley, it is near Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee, where he used to swim as a boy.

"I think (the kibbutzniks) have terrific values. It's a farm community, but the people were intellectuals, idealistic people that formed that unit."

The musical life on the kibbutz included concerts by an adult and a youth orchestra, made up of qualified members from all kibbutzim. His mother, who loves music, belonged to the Western type chorus while his father was an amateur violinist. For Shaul it was natural to seek out an available instrument, such as a recorder.

"Every kid could play a recorder. But the people really had culture there. They needed it, but there was no money to get instruments like here.

"I used to dream, literally, that one day I would have a flute. I always loved music. The music teacher noticed that I could play OK, that I had talent.

CONSEQUENTLY, SHE presented requests for a flute for him to the kibbutz leaders. Eventually he received a used flute and got "the best teachers." He was 14.

To study as a teenager with Israel Philharmonic principal flutist Uri Toeplitz, he got up early to take the bus to get to Tel Aviv by 1 p.m. Returning home consumed the rest of the day.

"I had to miss a day of school. Until now I have a copy he wrote for me of (Ravel's) "Daphne and Chloe" flute solo. He wrote it in pencil, because it was unavailable.

"Even today you can only rent that part." Ben-Meir remembered how difficult it was to get music in Israel then. "I had to travel about two hours to Haifa. A lot of stuff I had to order. I mean, Flute World would have been a dream there."

Having to struggle so much to get a piece of sheet music gave him a special appreciation for it.

He is a professional musician because of "something in him," he said. "If you have it, you have it. You're a slave to it. If you don't have it, the sooner you decide you're not going to be in it, the better off you are."

After a year of hard musical work, Ben-Meir knew he needed a better instrument. He saved his gifts and allowance until he had $500. He stuffed the money in a paper bag and presented it to his teacher, from whom he bought a Haynes flute, the Rolls Royce of flutes.

BEN-MEIR PLAYED in the kibbutzim's youth orchestra, graduated from the conservatory and attended the music academy. He was first flute in the Haifa Symphony when it played with the Jerusalem Symphony, under composer Igor Stravinsky.

"Stravinsky didn't even have to conduct. All he had to do was stand on the podium, lift his hand, and we would kill to play the right note.

"I can remember during some of the soft passages you could hear the surf. You could hear the water as a faded kind of back up. It was part of the whole picture. That's what I miss about Israel, the ancient dimension."

By 1965 he was awarded an American/Israel Cultural Foundation Scholarship to study in England with Geoffrey Gilbert. He was also invited to Ithaca College in New York State to teach.

"I came for one year with two suitcases and without a penny at 22 years old."

Finishing there, he went to Buffalo to work with Lukas Foss. Then, hearing in New York City about an opening with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, he went to the Wellington Hotel near Carnegie Hall to audition,

'I used to dream, literally, that one day I would have a flute. I always loved music. The music teacher noticed that I could play OK, that I had talent.'

— Shaul Ben-Meir

with no idea of what was required. With 50 players warming up in every room and hall, it was "a flutist's nightmare."

By midnight, he received a call that he was accepted by the orchestra whose recordings with conductor Paul Paray he had heard in Israel as a child and whose members included legendary flutist Albert Tipton.

He arrived in Detroit in June 1967. When the Arab-Israeli War broke out, he called the embassy, only to learn they didn't need a flute player. But "I was so scared because my brother was in the war, and I didn't know if he was alive."

Finally his mother called with a single message, "He's alive.

"So what happens the next week in Detroit? We get the riots. The next week with the tanks in the street and the burning and shooting, I thought, 'What did I come here for? I could have gone to Israel.' What a way to start."

IN 1983 BEN-MEIR and Ervin Monroe, the DSO's principal flutist, opened Flute World. "Flute, I feel, is a part of me and that shop is another extension of it."

Later he bought Monroe's share. Sitting next to Monroe, who is from southern United States, is an example of how "music brings people together."

Entering the shop is coming into another world. The array of flutes, recorders, music, educational materials, books, recordings and flute paraphernalia is as impressive as the mail order catalog business on the lower level. There orders are being filled for customers from many parts of the world. While he compiled the catalog, his wife, Liz, handled the business.

Ben-Meir's office is upstairs. Down the hall are lesson rooms. In his office he transcribes and edits pieces for flute for his publishing company that has the same name as his record label, Megido.

Sitting on the couch in his office he says he feels like he is "hanging in the ocean somewhere. I had to fight and struggle to be an American, and I don't take it for granted."

It's a warm summer day. The only thing that doesn't seem to be here are nickel flutes.

At Meadow Brook

Inner beauty found in Tchaikovsky compositions

Avigdor Zaromp

THE IDEA of devoting a program to a single composer has been implemented frequently at the Meadow Brook Music Festival. The success depends on the soloists, the conductor, but above all - on the composer himself.

Tchaikovsky was the featured composer in the final week of the series this season. If one were to compare this to the all-Vivaldi program a week earlier, one could hardly imagine two greater extremes. For one thing, nobody could possibly claim that Tchaikovsky wrote the same piece over again and again.

This in spite of the fact that the three works on this program — the Capriccio Italien, the Variations on a Rococo Theme and the Symphony No. 4 — have been heard by the average listener many times.

It is difficult, indeed, to come up with fresh ideas to an overly exposed work without bending it out of shape. There are many attempts to be different for difference's sake with results that sound contrived and distorted. This was one of the few exceptions. This program was unique despite the familiar titles.

One essential ingredient of this achievement was visiting conductor Vassily Sinaisky, who at the age of 43 is one of the most prominent conductors of the Soviet Union.

A more local ingredient is principal cellist Italo Babini, who was the soloist in the Rococo Variations. Finally, there is the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, which is capable of rising to great heights under the right kind of artistic inspiration.

TCHAIKOVSKY'S IMPRESSIVE abilities in orchestration are often mentioned, but few know how to utilize these rich scores to their fullest. Sinaisky is one of those few. With him on the podium, one could hardly find a wasted note even in the most heavily orchestrated segments.

At the center of the program were the Rococo Variations. Babini, who is frequently favorably compared with the best known cello artists, showed again his art is first-class quality.

At the beginning, his theme would rest snuggly and comfortably on the orchestral support, creating a sense of close, inseparable unity. Then, in the minor-key variation, the tender, emotional expressiveness was profound, without getting carried away to the point of breaking contact with the orchestra.

It took some time for the brass to adjust to the tempo in the opening Capriccio Italien, some of the players went their separate ways for a while. But when a sense of unity prevailed - the result was one of the brightest versions of this cheerful work that I have heard.

The percussions, including an unusual emphasis of the triangle, together with uncommon attention to the inner voice, produced sounds that one would hardly be aware of in a more routine performance.

THE LAVISH sound prevailed over most of the Fourth Symphony, with the exception of the delicate, precise and disciplined execution of the pizzicato of the Scherzo movement. The tempo of the final movement was the fastest that I can recall in recent performances - while still keeping the music and the musicians together.

The remarkable aspect of this performance was that it sounded authentic, balanced and natural in spite of some unconventional emphasis on inner voices that are most commonly too passive to be noticed.

The language of music is universal, and that of Tchaikovsky is no exception, in spite of its many Russian themes. Here, however, it took the inspiration of an energetic Russian conductor to reveal the magnitude of its spirit. Sinaisky is a conductor who deserves to be engaged here again.

Give your outdoor portraits a natural look

Monte Nagler

OUTDOOR, INFORMAL portraits can be the most exciting and attention getting of all your people pictures. Here is some advice on how to do them.

First, and very important, remember that outdoor portraits should be natural. Your subjects should be dressed in what they enjoy and as they wish to appear. If so, they'll be far more relaxed in the finished pictures.

Build a rapport with your subjects. Whether it's a family member, friend or stranger, taking a few moments to chat will relax both of you. Also, your subject will be more likely to follow your posing suggestions.

READY TO shoot? Look for a meaningful outdoor setting. A cluster of trees, a quiet pond, an old farmhouse, perhaps even an urban setting will all provide a natural scene. Just make sure your setting complements, rather than dominates, your subjects.

You also have the option of photographing against a grouping of trees or bushes and blurring out the background in order to keep attention in the finished print only on the subjects.

In the photograph shown here, Shanny and Harold Keller appear relaxed and natural as they pose in their back yard for a "family" shot. Notice how Shanny's sweater really "hits the spot" in matching the dalmations.

FOR OUTDOOR portraits, I prefer a normal focal length lens. This way, the subject will be shown in a pleasing size relationship to the surroundings.

A wide angle lens may distort or make the subject appear too small in the picture. A telephoto lens is ideal if it's a head shot you're after.

It is important to pay close attention to lighting. Back or side lighting will enhance the picture and make your subject stand out from the background. Consider using fill-in flash to add further "sparkle" to the subject's face.

Remember, direct frontal lighting will cause unflattering shadows and squinty eyes that will most assuredly spoil your shot. Best of all is an overcast day.

Shoot a number of pictures altering the pose and perhaps the background. You're bound to capture that special mood, that fleeting expression that says it all about your special subject.

Monte Nagler's "Photography" is a regular feature in Creative Living.

Shanny and Harold Keller of Royal Oak appear relaxed and natural as they casually pose in their back yard with family "members." All agreed this photo really hit the spot.

Chamber Winds plans 9th season

For the five-concert 1990-91 season, Detroit Chamber Winds will have the largest concert in the ensemble's history, a major world premiere and Donald Sinta and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Chorale as special guest artists.

Detroit Chamber Winds is made up of musicians from the Detroit Symphony and Michigan Opera Theatre orchestras. The ensemble specializes in music for winds that is infrequently performed by professional musicians because of unusual instrumentation.

The ninth season will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 12, with "Classics for Winds" at Smith Theatre on the OCC Orchard Ridge campus in Farmington Hills. The program will include works by Mozart, Beethoven, Hummel and Ernst Toch.

The "Holiday Brass" program at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9, at Christ Church Cranbrook will be enhanced by the presence of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Chorale.

In addition to seasonal favorites, the chorale and the ensemble will collaborate in a performance of John Rutter's "Gloria."

THE ENSEMBLE will return to Orchestra Hall on Friday, March 15, for "Wind Ensemble Spectacular," with about 40 musicians to perform in the largest concert the Detroit Chamber Winds has ever presented.

The program will include classics for traditional wind ensembles, such as the Suite No. 1 in E minor by Gustav Holst, English Folk Song Suite by Vaughan Williams and "Lincolnshire Posy" by Percy Grainger.

Saxophone virtuoso Donald Sinta will join the group for a performance of Ingolf Dahl's Concerto for Saxophone and Winds.

THE SEASON will conclude with "Diverse Winds," at 8 p.m. Friday, May 31, at Smith Theatre at OCC in Farmington Hills. The ensemble will present a world premiere by composer John Thow, a faculty member at the University of California/Berkeley. The program will include Octet for Winds by Stravinsky and "Facade" by Walton.

H. Robert Reynolds, the ensemble's conductor and artistic adviser, will be on the podium for all five concerts. He is chairman of the conducting department at the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor.

Season tickets for the five concerts are $50 and $36 for students and seniors. Pre-concert dinners at Smith Theatre are available for an additional fee. For tickets and information, call 851-8DCW.

Ypsilanti's heritage homes to be shown

To the discerning eye, a Queen Anne house is as different from a Greek Revival as a rose from a tulip.

See the difference and appreciate Ypsilanti's many other old house styles during the Ypsilanti Heritage Festival on Sunday with a home tour sponsored by the Ypsilanti Heritage Foundation.

Seven private homes and historic St. Luke's Episcopal Church will be on view during the tour, which runs from noon to 5 p.m.

Cottages and other homes set the range:

● 230 NORTH GROVE

The 230 North Grove home is a lovely, open gabled Victorian cottage built in the 1860s or 1870s by Hiram Allen, a miller. The Allen family owned the house for nearly a century. Cheryl and Vince Zuellig, current owners, saved the home in 1986 and performed a total renovation. The home boasts a maple bannister, parquet floor and special plasterwork. Intricate brackets lace the outside and columns and decorative window trim contrast with the simple structure.

● 212 WASHTENAW

In 1871, members of the First Methodist Church paid $4,000 to build the stately parsonage at 212 Washtenaw Ave. Today, the parsonage is the home of Wanda McGlassen and Al Heezen. The owners have made careful repairs to the Italian designed building, which maintains a low-pitched hip roof, extended eaves and deep cornices with ornate brackets. The original wall colors remain with grain painting and stenciling to enhance the period wallpaper. As an added touch of elegance, the house is surrounded by a full garden befitting its years.

● 120 N. HURON

St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 120 N. Huron, is the oldest church in Ypsilanti and one of the oldest Gothic Revival churches in Michigan. The church was designed in 1858 by Detroit architects Jordan and Anderson. The interior is a treasure chest of Victorian leaded glass, vintage oak and contemporary art. The brick exterior is a gabled roof, flanked by a tall tower or spire on one side, a small turret on the other.

● 302 S. HURON

The house at 302 S. Huron is said to be made of long-lived cypress wood. The tan and cream house is now owned by Roberta and Richard Suthard. The original portion of the home was built in 1838 by Abraham Craddock, a grocer, with a rectangular shape and is now located in the back. The two-story front was added in the 1850s.

● 116 S. ADAMS

Built in 1911, the house at 116 S. Adams is a sturdy American Four-Square style house. After years of neglect, the house was condemned in 1978. Sue Lindsey rescued and resold the house soon after to current owners, John and Valoree Sprentall, who have continued the restoration. Both design professionals, the Sprentalls art and gardening interests are reflected throughout the home.

● 510 PEARL

In 1874, after five years of planning and construction, Jack Harris and Cliff Larkings completed the romantic cottage home at 510 Pearl. The central hall leads to parlors and a morning room. A corner staircase reaches upstairs bedrooms. Throughout the house, a lovely Victorian ambience prevails in old maple and pine floors, an old-fashioned kitchen and intimate terrace. The English garden out back, originally planted by publisher Henry Morely, has been expanded and coddled.

● 112 PERRIN

In 1873, a dainty Greek Revival home was moved to 112 Perrin. Rooms have been added to the original house, along with a side-columned porch and deck. The cozy, country style, second-floor apartment of Pat Wadke will be on tour. A geranium-laden deck, sloping ceilings and oak floors mark her urban retreat.

● 929 PLEASANT DRIVE

When the farmhouse at 929 Pleasant Drive was built in 1900, the building stood alone at the edge of the county race track.

The house is now surrounded by the bustling city and is being restored to its Victorian heritage by Emily Jean McFadden, the owner. The house blends Queen Anne and Colonial Revival styles. Its interior reflects its origins with American Empire and Victorian antiques.

Tour tickets are $6 for adults, $5 for senior citizens and $4 for children younger than 12. Tickets are available at the Ypsilanti Historical Museum, 220 N. Huron, and at the Cross Street Bridge.

Viewers are welcome to stroll from site to site or take a 60-cent shuttle service provided by the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority.

State art awards given

Two local residents and a Southfield-based company were among those chosen to receive the Governor's Arts Awards presented annually by Concerned Citizens for the Arts of Michigan (CCAM).

The Dayton Hudson Department Store Company of Southfield was chosen for the Business Honor Roll Award.

The two other individuals to be honored are: Bess Bonnier of Detroit, musician/pianist, Michigan Artist Award; and Walter B. Ford II, chairman of the board, Ford & Earl Associates Inc. of Warren, Civic Leader Award.

Governor's Arts Organization Awards will be presented to the Michigan Artrain Inc.; Kalamazoo Civic Players; and the William Bonifas Fine Arts Center, Escanaba. The Governor's International Achievement Award winner will be announced later this month.

THE PRESENTATIONS will be made at the sixth annual Governor's Arts Awards dinner Monday, Dec. 3, at the State Theatre (Clubland).

"This year's ceremony will be bigger and better than ever," said Judith Dow Alexander, who is co-chairing the Arts Awards Committee with CCAM president Cameron B. (Sandy) Duncan.

Patron tickets for the Governor's Arts Awards black-tie dinner and ceremony are $150 per person and $1,500 for a table of 10. Tickets for the awards ceremony and afterglow only are $25 per person.

A statewide committee of 12 people reviewed nominations and selected the individuals and organizations to receive the 1990 awards.

CCAM is a not-for-profit organization formed in 1983 to be the advocate for the arts. The goal of its activities and programs is to raise the awareness level and the profile of the arts in Michigan and to increase support for them among individuals, corporations, foundations and government.

For information on the Governor's Arts Awards dinner or CCAM, contact the CCAM office 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday at 961-1776, 350 Madison Ave., Suite 503, Detroit 48226.

Local works will flavor art show

Eight area residents will exhibit at the 14th annual Art at Meadow Brook Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 18-19.

The works of 100 contemporary artists will be on display for show and sale in the courtyard and gardens of Meadow Brook Hall on the Oakland Univrsity Campus, Walton and Adams, Rochester Hills.

The OU Creative Council will sponsor the juried art exhibit.

Local exhibiters will include Garden City resident Barbara Bridges (baskets), Farmington Hills residents Sue Leon (graphics), Suzanne Lifton (mixed media), Ted Striewski (jewelry), Andrea Striewski (mixed media) and Gail Yurasek (clay), and Redford Township resident William Thayer (photography).

Using the finest of materials and workmanship, Meadow Brook Hall embodies beauty, craftsmanship and fine art. Nothing was spared to include the best designs throughout the home of Matilda Dodge Wilson, wife of auto mogul John Dodge and lumber baron Alfred Wilson.

Event hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 18, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 19.

Admission and parking is free. Refreshments will be available. Meadow Brook Hall will be open for tours.

"The Creative Council has selected artists from many states to bring that same sense of art and beauty to our own times," said Helena Sadowski, Art at Meadow Brook publicity chairwoman.

"Since its founding on the campus of Oakland University, the Creative Council has maintained its intention to bring the best of art to area patrons."

"Just as the glass, fibers and paintings created for Meadow Brook Hall in the 1920s are now priceless and irreplaceable, she added, "so the original works of these contemporary artists will enrich our lives now and in the future."

Music fest quarterfinalists chosen

The 80 quarterfinalists for the "Quest For Excellence" music competition have been selected by the Dodge, WJR and Tri-County Dodge Dealers.

These 80 15-24-year-old musicians and singers will compete before a live audience and panel of judges at the one-hour quarter final rounds beginning at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 29, at the Smith Theatre, Oakland Community College, Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills.

The quarterfinals will run every Wednesday Aug. 29 until Nov. 14 with the exception of Oct. 3 and Nov. 14, which are the two-hour semifinal rounds. All shows begin at 8 p.m.

More than 300 tapes were submitted for the audition round. The contest consists of three categories: classical, jazz and pop music. Of the 80 quarterfinalists, 62 are from Michigan. Others finalists come from California, Texas, Lousianna and Ontario, Canada.

Local performers will include:

● Vocalists Michelle Rott, 18, and Amy Heard, 20, of Farmington Hills, will compete in the pop and jazz categories, respectively, on Sept. 12.

● Pianist Peter Hopersberger, 18, of Livonia, will compete in the jazz category on Oct. 10.

● Kim Murley, 20, of Plymouth, will compete on the hammer dulcimer Aug. 29.

Just 16 performers will be selected for the Grand Finals Jan. 8, 1991, at the Fisher Theatre in Detroit.

To attend any of the final rounds, send a self-addressed stamped envelope for free tickets to: Quest For Excellence, WJR Radio, 2100 Fisher Building, Detroit 48202, or call 873-9780.

Archives boosters to celebrate

Members and friends of the Archives of American Art will be tasting the delights of late August as they celebrate "Summer Magic" Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The distinctly Detroit flavored dinner will mark the unveiling of the Van Dyke Place Restaurant.

Billed as "an evening of casual elegance," the event begins 7 p.m. with a reception offering musical entertainment by Sheri Nichols with accompanist Richard Berent. The dinner features a menu created by Chef Patrick Dunn.

Guests will be able to participate in a sealed bid, silent auction of antiques donated by Van Dyke Place owners John McCarthy and Ronald Fox.

For information, call the Archives of American Art, 226-7544.

Since 1970, the Archives has been a bureau of the Smithsonian Institution where original documents are processed and preserved.

The Midwest Regional Center is in the Detroit Institute of Arts where researchers can use Archives documents on microfilm.

Special considerations go into planning municipal buildings like the West Bloomfield Police Station, designed by Louis G. Redstone Associates of Livonia. Not only are there obvious considerations like security, but public accessibility and the functions of the police department must also be designed into the structure.

Municipal buildings pose design concerns

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Municipal buildings — town, city and village halls, courthouses, police stations, county buildings — without them open public meetings might mean more than just accessible.

The end user, architects agree, is the ultimate factor in municipal building design. As architects say, form follows function and the function of a public building is different from the average office building.

Daniel Redstone, AIA, president of Louis G. Redstone Associates Inc. in Livonia, said function and the end user are the two most critical factors to consider in designing a municipal building.

"In a speculative building, we don't know who the end user is going to be," Redstone said.

REDSTONE ASSOCIATES designed the West Bloomfield Police Station, the Livonia police station addition, as well as several libraries, schools and public works buildings in the area.

Most speculative office space has a fairly generic function. Reception, offices, desks, phones, water, rest rooms — just about every office, no matter its intended use, has these basic components.

But public buildings have these and more. Generally, municipal buildings have higher traffic, and therefore need more durable materials, Redstone said. Maintenance-free building materials and energy efficient heating systems are also a higher priority for the municipal building.

"A developer building an office building in which the tenant will be paying the utility bills may not be as concerned about heating," he said.

Another concern with municipal buildings, especially for police stations, is security, Redstone said. There are two key principles guiding design: one, make sure the prisoners stay where they're put, and two, make sure the prisoners can be removed quickly.

It may sound contradictory, he said, but security, and the ability to remove prisoners quickly in case of fire, natural disaster or other emergency are key elements in police station design, he said.

Security considerations range from holding cells, where prisoners are kept before transfer to the county jail, to electronic monitoring and controling prisoner movement when away from cells, Redstone said.

Then there are the other functions of the police force to consider. Police stations need an office-like environment for detective work, a classroom type environment for roll call, storage for police records, a computer area, exercise and shooting ranges and a dispatch area.

But a police station must also be accessible to the public, Redstone said. "A police station is used for more than just police work and holding prisoners — people get licenses there, fill out accident reports, get fingerprints taken — there are a lot of concerns.

SAM DORCHEN, of Dorchen/Martin Associates Inc. in Southfield, which in addition to designing the 48th District Court building in Bloomfield Township has also designed courts throughout the state, said security is also an important criteria in court house.

Court design was largely a hit-and-miss design process until the 1970s when the state restructured the court system, Dorchen said. Then, University of Michigan professor John King did a study of the courts and facilities and found them lacking.

"The most glaring problem was how to hold prisoners," he said. "Many were just held in a small room where they could crawl out the window."

Architects usually meet with local law enforcement officers and incorporate their idea before designing a court, Dorchen said.

Meeting the needs of the handicapped was also a great problem for court houses, he said. "Every single room, because of new laws, must be accessible to the handicapped," Dorchen said, adding most architects — in anticipation of the laws have designed barrier-free buildings for years.

GARY JELIN, associate senior designer with TMP Associates Inc. in Bloomfield Hills, agreed the end user is the critical issue in planning.

Color schemes will be different depending on the user as well, Jelin said. Vibrant colors are used in schools, but more subdued, conservative colors are used in municipal offices.

"Even exterior design is different," Jelin continued. Libraries tend to be more serene and blend into the landscape, schools tend to match the residential architecture surrounding them, and municipal offices tend to make a statement about the community.

"The trend today, however, is not to be as showy with public buildings because the taxpayers aren't willing to pay for a Taj Mahal," he said. "They don't want cheap and flimsy — they want something substantial."

Building education earns push from women's group

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

She sounds like an executive's dream: a secretary who starts a professional organization so she can learn more about the industry in which she's working.

"When I got the idea I thought, 'I wish I had a place I could turn where I could have some education'," said Esther Winer.

Winer works as an executive secretary to Mike Tobin, president of Mike Building Co. in Farmington Hills. She got the idea for a professional organization for secretaries and administrative assistants last year, and the first meeting of the Professional Women in Construction Council was in January.

Since then, membership has been opened to "all office staff and professionals in and dealing with the building industry and the property management industry." The thinking, Winer said, was that the "valuable information gained at each meeting should be available to all."

Winer, who serves as the council's chairwoman, said she realized how little she knew about the industry when her boss used terms she didn't understand, then expected her to perform some duty.

The organization's goal, said Winer, is to "educate ourselves to become more of an asset to our bosses, to be more well-informed about the industry in general.

"That's our main goal so that when our bosses say, 'Get me a closing package for this,' we'll know exactly what steps to take. We won't have to bother them so much."

ORGANIZATION MEMBERS educate themselves by attending monthly meetings at which speakers address a pertinent topic. So far, speakers have discussed such things as how to survey land, what blueprints tell the reader and why wetlands are valuable. One speaker talked about something a bit less specific to the building field: how to stay safe while working late in the office.

Winer has been employed at Mike Building for 15 months. She said she faces challenges that weren't present in other secretarial positions she held.

"In the building business you have to be in touch with a lot of various people. You're dealing with contractors, banks, mortgage companies, title companies, attorneys. There's an awful lot of people contact."

Because Mike Building also handles property management, she has had to deal with irate tenants as well, she said.

"The scope is so wide. You don't get

Area office vacancy rates hover around 20 percent

By Doug Funkestaff writer

Office vacancy rates as of July 1 in suburban Detroit communities ranged from 10.8 in Dearborn to 46.5 percent in Novi, according to Cushman & Wakefield of Michigan, a commercial real estate firm.

The overall office vacancy rate in the metro area except for downtown Detroit was 20.5 percent for the first half of 1990. Nationally, the non-central business district vacancy rate averaged 21.1 percent.

In Detroit's central business district, the vacancy rate stood at 14.4 percent. The national downtown vacancy figure was 16.7 percent.

"Office markets have remained stable," said Keith D. Sant, vice president and manager of Cushman & Wakefield's Michigan office in Southfield.

"Markets here have not gone from bad to worse or fantastic to the doldrums. I see a continuation of slow growth of construction," he said.

An overabundance of vacant offices here has prompted financial institutions to make more lending requirements of office developers. Landlords also have been giving rent concessions.

"A year ago, five million square feet of office space was under construction in the Detroit area compared to the 1.6 million square feet now under construction," Sant said.

"This lower construction activity continues to allow the demand for office space to catch up with the supply," he said.

Locate laundry using these tips

(AP) — There's no perfect spot to locate a laundry. The best location depends on a family's lifestyle and the available space.

The following tips from Home Plan Ideas magazine will give you and your builder something to think about when designing the floor plan and locating the laundry where it will be easiest to use.

One of the most popular locations for a laundry center is the kitchen. There are several advantages to this site. By concentrating labor-intensive tasks in one area, time, steps and energy are saved. This is an especially important consideration for homemakers with limited mobility or for those who work outside the home.

Locating the laundry in the kitchen lets one double up on the use of plumbing lines, reducing installation costs. The kitchen sink can be used for soaking clothes, and countertops can serve as a folding table.

In warm climates, it makes sense to locate the laundry center with its added heat and humidity outside the main living areas in a garage or carport.

FOR THOSE WHO enjoy watching television or sharing family conversation while doing the laundry, a laundry center near the family room may be ideal. If there's a bar sink in the family room, it can serve as a laundry sink.

ventory of 15.1 million, had a vacancy rate of 22.8 percent, according to Cushman & Wakefield.

Additionally, 160,000 square feet are under construction there.

Figures for other O&E communities provided by Cushman & Wakefield show:

● West Bloomfield — availability of 112,600 square feet on inventory of 523,700 for a vacancy rate of 21.5 percent.

● Farmington Hills — availability of 786,000 square feet on inventory of 3.9 million for a vacancy rate of 20.1 percent. An additional 42,000 square feet is under construction.

Look for plants that do double seasonal duty

(AP) — Many spring and summer flowering plants do double duty by adding beauty to gardens in the fall and winter. Some add an unusual character with their bark texture and color or the basic lines and form they present against a stark winter landscape.

No plant list is ever complete or includes everyone's favorite. But the following list of trees and shrubs contains a variety of materials that add interest and color to the winter landscape.

Stewartia is a small genus of native and Oriental trees, whose winter bark falls off to exposed multicolored tones underneath. The colors generally range from soft grays and brown to orange browns in an irregular pattern on the mature trunks. Stewartia also has interesting flowers and bright colored fall leaves.

The most famous birch for winter interest is probably our paper or canoe birch, which is native to the Northeast. Several cultural problems keep this magnificent tree from surviving in the warmer summer conditions in some areas. Fortunately, a selection of river birch called "Heritage" with salmon-white bark does thrive in hot climates.

Other exfoliating birches include the Monarch birch, which has reddish-brown bark on young twigs and branches and a tawny-gray bark that peels off the trunk in long, wide sheets. The gray birch also develops a white to grayish exfoliating bark and is a good tree in areas where it may be too warm for canoe birch.

With a little thought and planning, you should be able to create a landscape with interest and color all year long.

Winterberry holly, a deciduous holly that often grows up to 10 feet, is probably at its best in fall and winter when its crop of bright red fruit is in full display on the female plant. Both male and females are needed to produce fruit on all the hollies. "Sparkleberry" and "Winter Red" are worth considering.

The evergreen hollies, and in particular the blue hollies, provide excellent winter color with their foliage and bright red fruit.

THE VIBURNUMS, with their fruit and form, offer a lot to a garden in the winter. The most notable are the linden viburnum and the recently introduced cultivar "Oneida," which are deciduous shrubs that have bright-red berries in the fall and throughout the winter long after the foliage has dropped. It is not uncommon to have fruit on these plants all year.

that in a normal company when you are just dealing with an executive."

Another difference, she said, is that in the building industry the executives are often out in the field, leaving the office staff to fend for itself.

The council is a program of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, which has its headquarters in Farmington Hills. Membership in the council is free to employees of BASM members.

CAREY PETERS, the activities and special projects director for BASM, said sending office staff to meetings "can only help the builder.

"If you're going to have a right hand person in the office, it's just to the benefit of the company that the person handling the day-to-day business is as knowledgeable as they can be," Peters said.

The council has 85 members, but Winer said there are plans to establish satellite branches of the organization.

"They are going to be formed in the future to enable members from various areas to be able to attend meetings. We've had people coming from as far as outside of Flint."

Meeting places vary. They are held in hotel meeting rooms at 7 a.m. weekdays. Those eligible for membership may call Winer at 474-9500.

Sprays effective killing wasps

(AP) — To people who are highly allergic to their venom, the sting of hornets, wasps and mud daubers can be fatal.

Even to those who are not allergic, these insects' stings are painful. And, unlike honeybees, they can sting repeatedly.

Because of the potential danger they present, it is a good idea to destroy nests close to human habitat.

Hornets, wasps and mud daubers look similar. Most are black with white, yellow or orange stripes. They are distinguishable from bees by their slender waists and long, slim bodies. All three nest above ground. The easiest way to tell them from bees is by the nests they build.

A hornet nest is grayish, shaped somewhat like a football, and has a papery shell. Wasps build flat paper nests with many open, circular cells. Mud daubers make mud formations with a number of side-by-side tubes.

HORNETS AND wasps nest in shrubbery and trees, as well as under the eaves of houses and high on the walls and on the undersides of the roofs of attics, garages and outbuildings.

In the fall, both insects abandon their nests and don't reuse them.

Mud daubers nest under eaves, porch roofs or behind shutters, building their mud tubes on wood siding, brick and concrete. They spend the winter as larvae in the nest.

Now that you know what you're dealing with, how do you control the little pests?

- Locate the nest in daylight when the insects are most active. If you observe them around a building, try to follow them at a good distance as they return to the nest.
- To lessen the risk of being stung, spray at dusk or at night when all the insects have returned to the nest and are inactive. Wear protective garments including gloves, hat, cheesecloth veil and long sleeves. Button and turn up your collar.

If you use a flashlight, place it away from you because escaping insects will fly toward it. Have someone nearby in case you have an extreme reaction to a sting.

- Spray exposed nests with carbaryl (Sevin), malathion or with a liquid commercial wasp and hornet formula available at hardware stores or garden centers. Some containers can spray from as far as 12 feet away.
- If activity in the nest continues after several days, repeat the treatment.

Fashions reflect global influence

Denise Lucas

It's old news to say fashion is changing.

What's making the front page headlines are the global transformations taking place around the world.

At the height of hope, walls came down, nations achieved newfound freedoms and the Earth united for one cause — to save our planet.

New attitudes, individual style, mood changes and ethnic traditions have affected the American and European couture design for the autumn-winter collections of 1990.

Strongly influenced by global attitudes and ethnic costumes, fall's fashion forecast explores the world's vision of the future along with a renaissance of the past.

The theme for the Observer & Eccentric fall fashion supplement, "World Images," reflects the fashion language of the most influential countries that have made an important impact on the outlook of fashion for the coming season.

ENGLAND

The miniskirt of the late '80s tries again under the pseudonym of "London mod." Hot pants, wide headbands accessorizing faux falls and switches of the '60s crash the fashion scene as well as short-as-you-dare minis and "placemat" skirts explored with a British sense of humor.

Another noteworthy autumn inspiration is British equestrian toggery for royal city slickers. Complete with riding jodhpurs and authentic tweeds or slightly fitted plaid jackets, the sensation is a wonderful stylish snobbery.

FRANCE

Fashions from France epitomize the classics with a quest for luxury and attention to detail, as French designers continue the exquisite chapeau-to-shoe total image. More '60s but in a Brigitte Bardot style, demonstrated in the loose "up do" coiffure recently viewed on Ivana.

Veiled evening hats and sheer ruffled big brims hold the spotlight for that unforgettable entrance topping the immortal little black dress or fishtailed evening gown.

The French mystique is eternalized with the femme fatale swing coats for day to evening as well as the short-skirted Chanel suit in lavish fabrics of velvet and wool.

ITALY

From Italy emerges the contemporary catsuit and the Old World mystique of 16th century monk hoods, the most important accessory of the season.

Butter soft Italian suedes and skins offer added character and confidence to '90s fashions and footwear.

SOVIET UNION

The Beatles predicted we would be back in the U.S.S.R. From czars to peasants, Soviet style shows cloaks, draping, long, flowing fabrics, hooded intrigue, fur head wraps, black velvet, woolen scarves and babushkas. The free and uninhibited look is strongly inspired by Eastern European Gypsies.

INDIA

Spices and treasures are found amidst opulent beading and sarong skirts — autumn's essence discovered in the multi-jeweled and beaded affluence of the maharajah. India's sheer veiled fabrics translate to haute couture with the magic of sheer chiffon layered over everything (or without anything), revealing the dazzling charm of transparent fabrics.

USA

From New York to Texas, the United States makes its fashion statement around the world.

Free-spirited New York trendsetters display attitudes of bare shouldered, miniskirted night life. Feel the energy of the Big Apple with abstract prints by Mattise on hip-skimming jackets and sweaters influenced by the Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art.

Fashion rediscovers the adventurers of the Old West, with cowboys and Indians donning fringe-trimmed suede suits, rugged Western boots with cozy plaids and Navajo prints.

Thanks to those who helped

The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers would like to extend a very special thanks to everyone who helped us put together the special fall fashion section appearing today in all O&E editions.

- The Radisson Plaza Hotel in Southfield's Prudential Town Center and several hotel employees: Steve Hedberg, executive assistant manager; Todd Knudson, banquets manager; and Sally Alvarez, catering. They rolled out the red carpet for our photographic staff and provided the perfect location for our photo shoot.
- Rhonda Verona of RSVP Public Relations for helping us secure the Radisson location.
- Anthony Colorite of Le Look Salon in Bloomfield Hills and Nadwa Breda, Sherri Burrows, Irene Onickel and Todd Skogg from Farmington Hills' Salon Kennice Bashar for their talent in styling the models' hair to perfectly complement each fashion look and photograph.
- Tamara's Institute De Beaute, Farmington Hills, and Christine Lakatos for providing makeup services for the models.
- Classique Boutique in Southfield and Troy and Salon Kennice Bashar for the fabulous hair pieces and wigs used by the models.
- And many thanks to the airbrusher, Denis Konkel, who spent hours on the exceptional designs you see in each photograph. For more information on his work, call (313) 383-0183.

ABOUT THE COVER: The jewel of the Nile tapestry Jacquard jacket from Bogner is for city streets or mountain slopes. The strong Egyptian influence provides the hood's mysterious intrigue. From Don Thomas Sporthaus, $798.

Cleopatra's treasures, also from Don Thomas, include pearl strands necklace, pearl and coin necklaces, and gold chain links with crystals. The cover shot was taken by Jerry Zolynsky, chief photographer for the fall fashion supplement.

This section was coordinated by special fashion writer Denise Lucas and O&E section editor Rebecca Haynes. Design was done by Randy Borst, O&E graphics editor. Photographers were Zolynsky, Dan Dean and Stephen Cantrell. Staff photographer Jim Jagdfeld assisted.

Advertising coordinators were Jill Hayes and Heather Paddison.

Also, the quotes scattered throughout this section are the fall fashion forecasts from area stores and boutiques.

Questions about the section should be directed to Haynes at 644-1100, Ext. 243.

Ethnicity plays an important role in fashion

By Stanley Winkelman
special writer

Ethnic influences are significant and continuing factors in fashion design.

Sometimes subtle and sometimes blatant, these ethnic ideas are apparent season after season but to varying degrees.

This is because contemporary designers are themselves influenced by the world's many cultures as well as by their history.

But the most important points of departure for the designer today are current news events, social developments and, above all, extensive opportunities to travel in search of inspiration.

ONE OF my early experiences with the influence of contemporary events on fashion design took place almost 50 years ago as the result of a major retrospective exhibition of the art of Henri Matisse.

Matisse was a member of a group of French artists known as the Fauves, literally translated as "wild beasts" because of their use of brilliant colors.

The Matisse colors had a direct effect on fashion color and color combinations for more than one season.

While this was not precisely an ethnic influence, it is an excellent example of the influence of a specific culture event on fashion design.

THE TOREADOR hat, currently featured by Christian Lacroix, reflects Spanish influence. Boleros and the use of sutache braid as well as embroidered boots are further examples of Spanish influence in one Lacroix collection.

Since Christian Lacroix's origin was the Provence area of France, it is not surprising that his use of flamboyant colors so characteristic of the region are prevalent in his collections.

Certain products have their origin in specific geographic areas. From Bohemia, a part of present-day Czechoslovakia, come rhinestones and semiprecious garnets that are often part of a Bohemian look that extends into gypsy dressing.

Gypsy is a mix of folk ideas that stem from the many ethnic groups of Eastern Europe.

BY THE same token, peasant dressing stems from the manner of peasant dress in bygone years in areas of middle Europe that extend all the way into Russia.

Peasant blouses are subject to frequent fashion interpretation, usually in long sleeve, off-the-shoulder versions made of white cotton and often embroidered to some degree reflective of a particular ethnic culture.

The same is true of peasant skirts, which are usually full, colorful and often trimmed with bric-brac braid, sometimes tiered, and frequently flounced.

FASHION DESIGNERS are constantly searching for appropriate, timely ideas that can be interpreted into their collections. While a Mondrian painting may have inspired Yves St. Laurent in one season, it may have been a Scotch clan plaid in the next.

A designer's interpretation may be as obvious as a literal copy of a Black Watch plaid or a Prince of Wales check.

Or, the interpretation may be very subtle where the size of the plaid or check is changed along with the color combinations.

Whichever way it is done, the result still reflects a specific ethnic influence.

THE KILT is another Scottish ethnic development that is usually with us in one form or another.

The same is true of the Irish knit, the natural wool hand-knit sweater that is indigenous to Ireland. Irish knits are copied all over the world today, as are Shetland sweaters, which come from the Shetland Islands off the coast of Scotland.

The French beret, the Moroccan fez, the Mexican sombrero are examples of ethnic head coverings that are frequently interpreted either literally or indirectly into fashion designs.

CHINA, HISTORICALLY and again today, is the major center of luxurious silk design and manufacturing.

The design of the silk fabrics themselves often reflects a specific Chinese ethnic idea, as in the case with palace brocades and also with the shantung weave, which emanates from Shantung Province.

In Japan, the kimono and the obi sash are characteristic ethnic influences.

We all remember when a few years back a number of Japanese designers arrived on the Paris scene interpreting traditional Japanese dress into modern wearable designs using soft black wool or cotton fabrics.

LACE, TOO, has a number of specific ethnic origins. The finest laces come from Alencon, France, and have been known for several hundred years as Alencon lace.

Other fine laces with specific ethnic influence originated in Spain and Belgium.

We all recognize that silk tussah emanates from India, as do Madras plaids. The sari is a traditional Indian robe that influences fashions from time to time, as does the Oriental kaftan.

INDIGENOUS AFRICAN designs have influenced great artists of this century, expecially Braque and Picasso.

These same design ideas have been translated into prints that reflect African life as well as the jungle — its colors, its flowers, its birds and its animal life.

From Indonesia we recognize Batik prints created with natural vegetable dyes. We also recognize tie-dyed fabrics from this and other areas.

OUR LIFESTYLES today determine how we dress. We wear blue jeans at home and usually suits at work, although casual dress has become more and more dominant in our lives.

The bottom line is that ethnic influences have always affected fashion design.

They will continue to influence fashion design even as some of our own street fashions of today become the American ethnic influence of tomorrow.

LET'S TALK BREASTS

There is no substitute for specialized expertise. For your Cosmetic Breast Enlargement, we use the peri-areolar serpentine technique as well as the axillary (armpit) technique. Your body's natural lines are used so there is hardly a visible mark from the surgery. We use only textured implants that feel soft and natural. Since they have been so successful at eliminating hardening, we often use them to replace older style implants which have become uncomfortable. Medical Director, Joseph Stern, M.D. of the Cosmetic Surgery Center, is Certified by three Specialty Boards and has many years of surgical experience. Dr. Stern is a world renowned teacher of cosmetic surgery procedures.

The Cosmetic Surgery Center is composed of two separate entities; the patient consultation area with full computer analysis of problem areas so that you might arrive at a more informed, realistic idea of your outcome, and a fully equipped out-patient surgical area. Here, we take care of all your needs related to Cosmetic Surgery of your Body.

If you are considering cosmetic surgery, we invite you to call for your complimentary consultation.
