Friends meet to remember hit, run victim

By Diane Gale
staff writer

One year ago Tuesday evening Melissa Chisholm, 14, was killed by a hit-and-run driver.

Her friends and family observed the anniversary by placing flowers at a light post at the Ford and Lilley intersection where she died.

Schoolmates made a pilgrimage to the light post decorated with crosses, flowers, plaques, a Merry Christmas message and other notes. They brought a picture of their lost friend.

DRESSED IN SUMMER clothes, Terri Sculthorpe explained that they didn't want to wear traditional mourning clothes, because Chisholm "wouldn't want us to be wearing black."

Karlye Schmitt and Michelle Taucher said she wanted to be part of the memorial to remember her.

They explained that the bands around the cross attached to the post are friendship bracelets that her friends had been wearing when they heard Chisholm was dead.

It's important to keep the accident in the public eye, said Melissa Stoelt, because it "will haunt" the driver of the car that killed Chisholm.

Wendy Vea said she was there to "feel close" to Chisholm.

"She'd be happy that we were out here," said Traci Sculthorpe.

A few miles away at Pioneer Middle School, where the girls attended classes with Chisholm, a tree was planted in memory of their friend. Fresh flowers, notes, ribbon and a plaque set the tree apart from the Gulf War vet has vivid memories of bodies, buddies

By Diane Gale

Helen Hayes of Garden City was jumping for joy when her grandson, Kenneth Hayes made a surprise visit recently after returning from the Gulf War.

She was working at a drugstore and literally leaped over the counter to greet him.

AND SHE has ideas about how to prevent any future problems with Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"I'd like to go over there and blow him apart," she said sitting across from Hayes, who was flanked by his parents Mary and Ron in their Canton living room.

Hayes said he walked away from his war experience with two things he'll always have: Lifelong friends and memories of dead bodies lying in the streets.

Hayes was at the front serving in the Army First Infantry when the war began.

"We saw a lot of destruction and a lot of death. It was crazy.

"The dead bodies and stuff, that's something I'll never forget and Kuwait City was totally demolished."

He was amazed, too, to see Iraqi children, some as young as 12 years old, fighting.

Hayes' grimace turned into a smile when he explained that U.S. troops followed Iraqi restrictions on magazines and liquor while the British troops ignored the rules and traded the scarce commodities.

Home for four days Monday, Hayes planned to pick up a brand new Escort GT. Future plans include finishing the remaining six months of his enlistment, and hopefully, getting a job in the area. If a job doesn't surface, Hayes said, he'll re-enlist.

Initially, he joined the Army to help pay his college tuition. But, when he was shipped to the war zone, Hayes said, he knew he couldn't back out.

"We had people who didn't want to go," Hayes said. "I signed up, I knew I had to go. I was going to do my job."

HE SHOOK his shortly cropped head when he recalled the fear that

Kindermusik

Program gives youngsters early taste of music

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Plymouth and Canton youngsters are the first in metro Detroit to participate in a preschool music program born in Germany and spreading throughout the United States.

In the Kindermusik program, children get comfortable with singing and get their first understanding of basic music theory — including notes of a scale and their time values.

If that sounds like something a bit heavy to lay on a 4-year-old, know that the lessons are part of activities that are fun.

In a class session Tuesday, the final class of the first year, a student was able to identify what a cello was from music played on a tape player. The children can also play notes of the scale on a glockenspiel, or xylophone, and can clap quarter notes and whole notes.

AFTER READING about the program in a music trade magazine, piano teachers Brenda Krachenberg of Plymouth and Thomasine Preniczky of Canton attended training sessions in Toronto. They began teaching the 75-minute weekly sessions last fall at Arnoldt Williams Music in Canton.

"There were a lot of non-singers in the beginning," Krachenberg said.

But Tuesday, the 11 youngsters in her class were singing mostly on key, and applying themselves to activities.

"DOES ANYONE know what a carnival is?" Krachenberg asked the class midway through the Tuesday session.

Soon, she played "Carnival of the Animals" by Saint-Seams on the tape player, and encouraged the class to listen to musical passages and guess which animals are suggested by each part.

As a chaotic passage was played, one boy suggested, "A wild pig," and a girl said, "An ant."

"He called it the waking up of the birds," Krachenberg told them. "When you go to a carnival, have you ever been on a merry-go-round?"

Soon, she passed out 3-foot dowels, and encouraged the children to hold them in front of their bodies and raise them up and down in time to the music as they marched in a circle.

Next, Preniczky passed out strips of white crepe paper. The youngsters were encouraged to wave them to the music of "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star."

"WHATEVER MUSIC they're getting is good," Krachenberg said, describing the typical music education given to elementary school students.

But the value of Kindermusik — besides getting youngsters started earlier — "is that it's sequential and integrated," she said.

Each student has a red tote bag that holds the glockenspiel and other materials, which include cards that show musical symbols for loud and soft.

Amoco Oil to pay $600,000 in lawsuit

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Amoco Oil Co. has agreed to pay Ralph Lorenz and Lorenz Square Inc. $600,000 in damages and to clean up contamination caused by leaking underground storage tanks at Amoco's closed service station at Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail.

Fuel oil and petroleum products for years seeped into soil and ground water surrounding the former gas station. Lorenz's Mayflower Meeting House is next door.

Lorenz spent thousands of dollars replacing oil-damaged sump pumps and drain tiles at the Meeting House. He lost numerous tenants who complained of fuel oil fumes and health problems at the Meeting House.

Since 1979, the area has been listed as a contaminated site by the state Department of Natural Resources.

THE OUT-OF-COURT settlement was reached May 9, a few weeks before the case was scheduled to be tried by U.S. District Judge Patrick Duggan.

"I'd say the beauty of this settle-others in the courtyard. Even though the girls have gone on to high school without their friend, they haven't forgotten her.

CHISHOLM'S MOTHER, Debbie Chisholm, said she was touched by their loyalty.

"Melissa knew how to pick her friends," she said. "You tend to think that people forget. But the kids have been great. They went to the cemetery on her birthday."

Newspaper articles and television coverage of the accident have sparked a few tips, but none have led police to the driver.

Debbie Chisholm said she has a hard time driving Ford Road, and even though the family lives near the thoroughfare, she avoids it.

The memories of 9:45 p.m. May 14, 1990 are too strong and painful.

She and her husband, Joe, were sitting in Johnson's restaurant while their daughters ran across the street to buy school folders from Richardson's.

Someone screamed out that a girl had been hit. They ran across the parking lot and saw their daughter lying on the street.

Debbie and Joe Chisholm have kept a yearlong battle trying to get media attention that will lead to a tip about the driver. They say they won't rest until they know who killed their daughter.

Witness accounts vary, however, police believe the automobile was dark gray metallic colored, small to mid-size 1988-1990 Ford or Mercury-Lincoln product.

The car likely had damage to the headlight area, with a broken windshield or rear window and possible damage to the hood or trunk.

The car drove east on Ford Road after leaving the accident scene.

A $3,000 reward has been offered for information leading to an arrest and conviction. Anyone with information should call Canton police at 397-3000.

ment is that it was done via a consent judgment, which means Judge Duggan will have his contempt powers available for the cleanup in the event things don't proceed as they should," said Michael Southerland, Lorenz's attorney.

"The consent judgment reads that Amoco will clean up the site according to whatever standards are required by the DNR. And it includes sanctions for non-compliance with the court. The dilemma is, we don't know yet what will be required."

Lorenz was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Some cleanup of the site has been done, "enough to where officials can be leased," Southerland said. One new tenant, a hair dresser, has moved in, Smith said.

"Amoco hopes Mr. Lorenz feels he's been made whole all through the pendency of this action," Amoco attorney John Gerald Gleeson said. "We've compensated him for lost rent, and to my way of thinking, this is a good deal for everyone."

UNDER THE consent decree, Amoco agrees to "mitigate and minimize threats to and provide adequate protection of public health and welfare and the environment" by cleaning up the site.

The $600,000 Amoco is paying, plus the $225,000 Amoco previously paid Lorenz in past damages, "act as full and final settlement of any and all claims for damages, including personal injury and property damage; emotional distress; toxic exposure; medical monitoring to Ralph Lorenz; loss of business revenue; damage to reputation; damage to and devaluation of the Meeting House;" and attorneys' fees, the agreement says.

THE CLEANUP procedure isn't finalized.

"The proposed plan is to just pull the ground water and the sub-surface oil out from underneath the Meeting House and the gas station through pumping, and treat it," Gleeson said.

"I don't think you will see a lot of activity. This particular type of remediation isn't visible."

Plans call for equipment housed in what was the station's service bay to draw ground water up through wells drilled throughout the contaminated area, which extends south of the Meeting House, underneath Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail and east of the Box Bar. Estimates are the cleanup will take two to five years.

GLEESON COULDN'T say whether contaminated soil and clay will be remediated.

"Whatever the DNR sets as a cleanup standard will be met," he said. "We have no way of predicting what the DNR will do."

To proceed, Amoco needs an air quality discharge permit from Wayne County, said Amoco spokesman Howard Miller.

"When we treat anything brought out of the ground, there are some slight emissions into the air when you strip petroleum products from the water. Our permit is pending."

LORENZ SUED Amoco in 1989 after Amoco claimed that under the statute of limitations, it was responsible for damages dating back just three years.

overwhelmed him after hearing the allied forces were going to attack. But Hayes said if he had the chance to turn back the clocks, he would enlist again.

The support from people back home was tremendous, he said. While he appreciated the letters and packages that poured in from family and strangers, the most special delivery, by far, was a banner that spanned the length of his tent. It was sent by his brother, Shaun, 8, and his classmates at Gallimore Elementary School.

Hayes plans to personally thank those students, as well as, youngsters in a Saginaw elementary school who became pen pals.

While Hayes was in the Saudi desert, his family worried constantly. His mom joined a Canton support group to help her through the toughest times. At a rally last February, she said: "I've had a really hard time dealing with this. There are days that all I do is cry. I hold a lot of it in and I get to the point that you need someone to talk to."

On Monday, Mary Hayes, was all smiles. She said she was thrilled when she learned that the war ended: "But I didn't realize that he was still in a bad situation," she said referring to Iraqi attacks on barracks after the war ended.

"And he certainly didn't tell us," she added.

Ron Hayes said he feared for his son's safety, "but I was proud of the fact that he was there."

He's not alone. Signs have gone up around Canton and Plymouth welcoming the young military man home. Some strangers shake his hand. Others say: "Thank you."

"It makes you feel really good," Hayes said. "I love all the attention."

Schoolcraft College: BOARD RACE '91

Election draws varied field

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Voters in the Monday, June 10 school election can choose among candidates with backgrounds in social service, public service, medicine, law and education.

Ronaele Bowman of Livonia, Willis Brauer of Livonia, Paulette Cebulski of Plymouth Township, Robert Gordon of Plymouth Township, Bruce Patterson of Canton Township, Stephen Ragan of Plymouth, M. Andrea Taylor of Livonia and Patricia Watson of Northville all seek a four-year term on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees.

Ragan is currently a member of the Schoolcraft board, appointed last month to fill a vacancy. He must defeat the others to keep his seat.

Incumbents Michael Burley of Canton Township and Jeanne Stempien of Northville Township will face challenger Subramanian Ramamurthy of Canton Township in the race for two 6-year seats. (Profiles of all candidates appear on this page)

SCHOOLCRAFT WAS recently judged in good shape academically and fiscally.

College classes received 10-year accreditation, the maximum allowable, last month from the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

The college also received a favorable audit from Plante & Moran in June 1990.

Despite the rosy picture, there are issues. Schoolcraft is negotiating a new contract with faculty members this year, amid shrinking state support and concerns about a breakdown in communications between administrators and staff.

Finance is a long range college concern, with this year's one percent cut in state revenue expected to increase in future years. Trustees are also uncertain, at this point, whether they can expect the necessary state financing to build a new student services center.

Though board meetings are usually harmonious, controversy erupted last year over selection of the college law firm. Trustee Jack Kirksey, outraged over what he saw as a biased selection process, resigned from the board — putting his seat up for election this year.

Trustees oversee the college budget, authorize college class offerings, evaluate the college president and set the college tax rate, among other duties.

The new trustee will help decide whether to develop additional college land. Seven Mile Crossing, a private office complex built on land leased from Schoolcraft opened in 1988. Additional college land on Six Mile Road has been considered for a similar project, currently on hold due to the slumping construction market.

BOARD MEMBERS serve without pay. The board meets once a month, generally on the fourth Wednesday.

More than 13,000 students attended Schoolcraft in the past semester. The figure includes more than 9,000 students who attended degree-oriented classes and more than 4,000 others who attended continuing education classes.

In addition to its main Haggerty Road campus in Livonia, the college includes Schoolcraft College-Radcliff in Garden City and additional extension programs in the Plymouth-Canton school district.

Homeowners in the college service area, which includes the school districts of Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, Clarenceville, Northville and Garden City, paid 1.94 mills in community college taxes last year. The tax rate translated to $97 for those living in homes assessed at $100,000.

Here are profiles of the eight candidates running for a four-year seat on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees:

Former Plymouth mayor dies

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Richard Wernette, a former mayor who helped seek money to build the Plymouth City Hall in the early 1960s, died Sunday in Lake City, Mich. after a lengthy illness.

Wernette, 83, served on the city commission from 1957-65. He was Plymouth mayor from 1963-65.

Richard Wernette

"He was a very, very good man," recalled Commissioner James Jabara, who first served on the commission with Wernette. "He was very low-key but he was very strong. I remember that deep, commanding voice."

"He and my father went to Washington (D.C.) to get funding for the city hall," said Paul Sincock, assistant city manager. His father Robert preceded Wernette as mayor.

"The old city hall was on Church Street, the roof was falling down," Sincock said.

Jabara recalls the period as a time when "things went along smoother. You didn't have the controversy we had in recent years."

In announcing Wernette's election as mayor, the Plymouth Mail described him as "a straight-from-the-shoulder talker and a down-to-earth thinker."

Born June 11, 1907, in Remus, Mich., Wernette married Jean Lawless on Dec. 12, 1942, in Dearborn.

He was a graduate of Ferris State College and the University of Detroit law school, and served 22 years in Wayne County Probate Court as an estate analyst.

A few years after retiring in 1973, Wernette and his wife moved to their vacation cottage in Lake City near Cadillac. He enjoyed hunting and fishing. "It was a choice of one place (Plymouth) or the other," she said.

"It's a small town and we built a home right on the lake, it's a beautiful spot," said Jean Wernette, who taught 20 years at Starkweather school in Plymouth.

In recent years Wernette served on the historical society board and on the the 10 county council on aging representing Lake City, his wife said.

Survivors include his wife Jean of Lake City; two sons, Dee of Hinsdale, Ill. and Timothy of Tuscon, Ariz; two grandchildren, Mark and Joanna both of Hisndale, Ill.; five brothers and one sister; and several nieces and nephews.

A memorial service is scheduled for 11 a.m. June 1 at the First Presbyterian Church of Lake City, where Wernette had served as a trustee.

He was also a member of the state bar of Michigan, the Rotary Club and Masonic brotherhood.

No charges against driver whose car hit 4-year-old

By Diane Gale
staff writer

No charges will be filed against a 22-year-old Canton woman whose car struck a 4-year-old boy Friday after he stepped out from behind a parked vehicle on Holly Drive.

William Hurlin was treated and released on Monday from the University of Michigan Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Police said neither alcohol nor speed were a factor in the accident.

"The investigation revealed that the driver is not at fault," said Pat Nemecek, Canton police information officer.

"It's just an unfortunate situation," he said.

Hurlin was playing across the street from his house around 5:45 p.m. when the accident happened.

The woman told police she was on her way to work, driving north on Holly when she heard a woman screaming.

"The next thing I knew I had hit the boy," according to police reports.

She got out of her car to see if he was all right. The boy's mother and father took the boy inside the house.

"I didn't know what to do so I went to work and called my mother," the woman said.

Shortly later she returned to the accident scene.

IN ANOTHER accident Saturday, a 25-year-old man died in a two-car crash on Ford Road. Police reported that the victim, John Albert Snore Jr., caused the accident when the 1983 Ford Escort he was driving crossed the center line.

Snore, a South Lyon resident, was driving east on Ford Road near Ridge about 3 a.m. when his car struck a Chevy Suburban, driven by Lee Endress Skyles, a 39-year-old Chelsea man.

The Suburban rolled over and it was believed that Skyles suffered broken legs, police said.

Both drivers were alone in their vehicles. Snore was wearing a seatbelt. There was no report of whether Skyles was wearing a safety harness, Nemecek said.

A medical examiners report had not been finished earlier this week.

Snore was the second fatality in Canton this year. The first fatality was a pedestrian who was struck by a vehicle on Michigan and Canton Center.

ON CLIENT'S PERSONAL STYLE
I listen and I keep my agenda quiet. So when I go into a project, it's not about me. It's a collaboration. It's the client's concepts and my concepts, what emerges is a self-expression of my client. That's the ideal.

ON CARING & RELATIONSHIPS
Probably the main quality that I can bring to a project is taking care of my clients. The service and the commitment to the project emanate from that care. It's being there, with the painter on a touch up, on delivery. It's all of that attention and developing a relationship of trust, which is fundamental for a project to even get off the ground. It's an integral part of a successful design.

ON WHAT DESIGNERS OFFER
I can create a vision out of what a client says to me. Secondly, I have a source of materials not available to the client. What I bring to the party is my availability, materials, artists, workrooms, tradespeople and sources. I come with baggage.

ON USING MICHIGAN DESIGN CENTER
The Michigan Design Center is wonderful for me. I'm there a lot and it's great to be able to take a client there. My clients can see the service that the showrooms provide the designers. If I ask the showroom to please communicate to the factory the importance of having the upholstery tailored in a particular way, they share my concern, and that is what is important to me in representing my client. I support the people that support me.

Motion to reduce charges in I-275 accident denied

By Todd Schneider
staff writer

A Westland man in a red Toyota Celica was zig-zagging his way through mornig rush-hour traffic on the I-275 Expressway at faster than 80 miles per hour when he caused the May 3 collision that killed two people, including a Canton resident, according to court testimony Tuesday.

Arthur Joseph Bowes was bound over for trial on two counts of manslaughter following a preliminary examination in 16th District Court.

Killed in the accident near the Six Mile overpass were Mrija Kalaj, 47, of Canton Township and Karl Jay Beebe, 34, of Shepherd, Mich.

Judge James R. McCann refused a defense motion to bind Bowes, 22, over on a lesser charge of negligent homicide.

MCCANN HOWEVER, lowered bond from $5,000 cash to $5,000/10 percent which requires $500 cash payment.

"He was going so fast," Albert Pistonetti, who witnessed the chain-reaction collision from several car lengths behind, told the court.

"He made three lane changes to the right and then three back to the left, probably in no more than 10 seconds," Pistonetti testified.

Pistonetti told the court he looked down at his own speedometer when the Celica passed him and saw it registered 78 miles per hour. He estimated the Celica was going at least 5 miles per hour faster.

Other witnesses, including a front-seat passenger in Bowes' car, gave conflicting testimony regarding the Celica's speed.

Edward Miskovich, a co-worker on his way with Bowes to the Wixom plastics plant where they worked, estimated the car was traveling 55-60 on the northbound freeway when it struck the rear of a Ford Tempo driven by Kalaj.

The impact sent Kalaj out of control, careening across a 52-foot wide grass median onto the southbound portion of the freeway, where she collided head-on with a Ford pickup truck driven by Beebe in the extreme right lane.

JAROSLAW DOBROWOLSKYJ, Bowes' court-appointed attorney, called the crash "an unavoidable, tragic, tragic accident."

But Dobrowolskyj said there was no evidence of the "gross recklessness" by his client necessary to support the manslaughter charge, which is punishable by a maximum 15-year prison sentence.

"He may have been passing a lot of cars to get where he was going. That, in itself, is not gross, reckless behavior," the attorney said.

McCann, though, ruled that there was probable cause for a trial on the original charge and referred to Pistonetti's testimony as "the most damaging here."

Pistonetti testified Kalaj's car acted "like a slingshot" after its was struck from behind by the Celica. Parts from both cars showered other drivers after the initial impact, he told the court.

Pistonetti, who pulled over to see if he could help, also testified that he physically restrained the defendant, whom he felt was about to leave the scene before police arrived.

"I was a little upset. At that point I knew that already one person was dead," he said of his actions during cross examination Tuesday.

IN OTHER testimony, Michigan State Police trooper Gregory Stevens read the written statement Bowes gave police.

Bowes refers several times in the statement to slow-moving traffic on the freeway and characterizes his actions behind the wheel as "aggressive, but driving safely in my opinion."

A report from the Wayne County Medical Examiner, entered as a prior stipulation, lists the cause of death for both victims as multiple injuries resulting from the crash.

Kalaj suffered tears to the aorta, liver and spleen, brain impact injuries and fractures to both legs.

Beebe suffered a fractured neck, back, pelvis and ribs in the crash.

District pact offer is rejected

Plymouth-Canton paraprofessionals have rejected a contract proposal offered last week by the school district.

The district's paraprofessionals, who assist teachers with instruction and supervision, have worked under a contract extension since their contract expired last summer.

"They presented an oral proposal which was not acceptable to us," said Maryann Ligato-Freydl, the paraprofessionals' chief negotiator and Michigan Education Association executive director.

"It did not provide for our members the same vacation arrangements that are provided to other school-year employees," added Ligato-Freydl, who represents four Plymouth-Canton employee groups, including teachers. School-year employees are those who have the summer off.

Ligato-Freydel said morale among paraprofessionals "is not good. They're united in terms of seeking their goals, but they are not happy that the school district is refusing to treat them equal with other employees," she said. "They want equity; they want to be treated in an equitable fashion."

District negotiators were unavailable for comment.

Bargainers for the district and employees will resume negotiations with a state mediator May 24. A state mediator was not present for the May 1 bargaining session.

Tiny Olympians

The race was on at the recent Nursery School Olympics in Hines Park. Youngsters on three-wheel bikes lined up for the mini grand prix, one of several contests featured during the annual Wayne County Park System event. Meanwhile, Tabith Butler, 5, of Westland took another kind of drive during the "miniature miniature golf" event. Other events included paper plate discus, marshmallow shot and a checkerboard penny toss. -Events were sponsored by the county parks, Livonia Parks and Recreation and the Greater Detroit Cooperative Nursery Council.

Motorcycle classes set at SC

Three motorcycle riding courses are being offered at Schoolcraft College this spring and summer.

Courses include:

• Motorcycle Rider — The 20-hour Motorcycle Safety Foundation course is designed for new riders. Motorcycles are provided. Riders must be at least 15 and should proyide their own helmet, gloves and protective gear. Classroom and field instruction is included. Weekend and weekday classes are scheduled through July. Fee is $20.

• Performance Based Better Biking — The course provides licensed cyclists the opportunity to improve skills in braking, turning and avoiding obstacles. It begins with a riding skill test that covers areas included in the Michigan Secretary of State Alternate Motorcycle Operator Skills Test. Students must provide their own motorcycle, helmet, gloves and protective gear. The one-day course is scheduled for June 2 and 29, July 14 and Aug. 17. Fee is $20.

• Experienced Rider — The course emphasizes advanced riding skills for those who ride large touring motorcycles and sport motorcycles. Emphasis is placed on advanced riding skills for experienced riders. Students must provide their own motorcycles, helmet, gloves and protective gear. The one-day class is scheduled for June 9, July 13 and Aug. 25. Fee is $20.

Additional information is available by calling the college continuing education services office, 462-4448. Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty, between Six and Seven Mile roads, Livonia.

WHAT EVERY MAN SHOULD KNOW ABOUT IMPOTENCE.

IT'S TREATABLE.

The real tragedy of impotence is letting it go untreated even one more day. Stop denying yourself and your sexual partner an important part of your life. Impotence can be treated in almost every case.

The STAR® program developed by Grace Hospital provides complete diagnosis and treatment of male impotence. This confidential program is directed first at determining the cause of the problem. Diseases such as diabetes, cancer, multiple sclerosis and problems with prostate, heart and high blood pressure are common causes. There are many others. Injuries to the spinal cord, and low hormone levels can also cause erection failure. So, too, can fatigue, alcohol, drugs, smoking, stress and depression. Medicines used to treat such things as depression, high blood pressure and ulcers can be part of the problem. Age alone is not a cause of impotence. And, yes, some impotence problems are psychologically based; even organic impotence has an important psychological component that requires identification and treatment. An accurate diagnosis is the key to effective treatment. Sometimes, only a change in medication is needed. More serious problems may require surgery. But help is available. Complete, confidential and supportive. Call today and talk to one of our professionals.

Volunteers are needed for river cleanup June 1

Volunteers many register by telephone or in person but are asked to be present at work sites by 8:30 a.m. the day of the event.

It's that time of year again. The sixth annual Rouge River Rescue is scheduled for Saturday, June 1, at 25 sites throughout Wayne and Oakland counties.

A combined 10,000 volunteers have participated in past cleanups, with an estimated 3,000 people expected to volunteer this year.

Debris and more than 300 log jams have been cleared from the Rouge, improving the river's flow and its ability to rid itself of pollution.

Tires, refrigerators, bicycles, sinks and television sets are routinely pulled from the river during the annual cleanups.

Volunteers are asked to wear long pants and long-sleeved shirts. They are also asked to wear sturdy boots and gloves. Children are encouraged to participate, but they must be accompanied by adults.

Rouge Rescue '91 is sponsored by Friends of the Rouge, a Livonia-based volunteer group. Other sponsors include Ford Motor Co., Waste Mangement, Inc., City Management Corp., Coors Brewing Co., Don Lee distributors, WDFX 99.5 FM and WJBK-TV, Channel 2, Detroit.

Volunteers many register by telephone or in person but are asked to be present at their work sites 8:30 a.m. the day of the event.

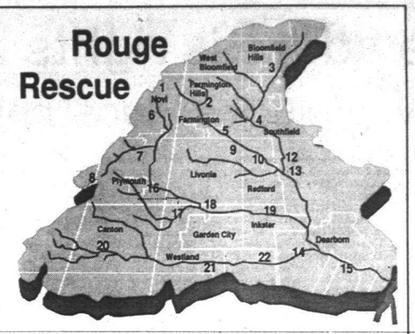
- 4) Southfield — Beech Woods Park, Beech, south of Nine Mile. To register or for additional information call Heidi Wayco, 354-9548 between 3:30-5:30 p.m.



The sixth annual Rouge River Rescue is scheduled for Saturday, June 1, at 25 sites throughout Wayne and Oakland counties. More information on the local sites can be found in the accompanying story.

Exchange students seek homes

Homes are sought for French exchange students who will be coming to the Detroit area this summer.

Students 13-19 will be coming to the U.S. through Leisure and Educational Culture, a non-profit French cultural exchange organization.

Host families accept a French student for one month. American families need only provide room and board.

Students are provided with their own pocket money. All students speak English, though fluency levels vary.

Students and families are fully insured. Parents also receive support through a network of coordinators. Students are accompanied by a French chaperone, who stays in the area.

Although not an official part of the program, U.S. hosts are often later welcomed as overseas guests in the home of their exchange student.

Students will be in the U.S. in July and August. An estimated 40,000 students have participated in LEC exchange programs since 1972.

Additional information, including a host family guidebook, is available by calling area coordinator Chris Hall, 525-0134.

Police address rights issue

'Can't allow prejudice,' local chief says

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Only a half dozen discrimination complaints were filed against western Wayne police departments over the past decade, according to the state Department of Civil Rights.

But area civil rights officials say the number of claims does not necessarily indicate discrimination and brutality isn't a problem.

Relations between police and minorities became a national issue after the recent beating of a black motorist by Los Angeles police. Civil rights officials contend that incident would never have ever come to light if not captured on videotape.

DISCRIMINATION and brutality are "very difficult to prove," civil rights department spokesman Jim Horn said. "(In L.A.) had it not been for a videotape, the public might never have known."

Likewise, the most serious allegation against an area police department is largely unsubstantiated.

Ernest Jarrett, a Detroit attorney specializing in civil rights cases, claims he saw Livonia officers beat a trio of teenage car thieves. The incident occurred on a summer night about three years ago, Jarrett said, after police followed the youngsters into Detroit on a high speed chase.

"I reported it to Detroit police as an assault and battery," he said. "But it seemed their attitude was that it wasn't much of a big deal." Livonia police were equally unreceptive to his concerns, Jarrett said.

Though he sought to represent one of the youngsters in a civil suit, Jarrett said the youngster told him police reduced the car theft charge in exchange for a pledge not to file suit against the department.

Livonia Police acknowledged the incident occurred, but the department's description differs from Jarrett's.

"It was a situation where the suspect jumped the officer," Livonia Police Chief Lee Grieve said. "Sure, he hit him, but the officer was being assaulted."

The incident was judged minor, Grieve said, and no report was made.

If there had been a claim of brutality, he said, it would have been investigated.

"WE INVESTIGATE every claim and, if the officer was wrong, we take disciplinary action," he said. "But often what's considered excessive force depends upon whose viewpoint you hear. For some people, using handcuffs constitutes excessive force."

Civil rights officials, said punishment, in itself, isn't enough to solve problems.

What is needed, they say, are preventative steps — and possibly a new outlook on law enforcement.

"After the Detroit riot, there was the Kerner Commission report," Horn said. "Sadly, while there's been much progress, we find many of the same things that were problems then are still problems today."

In many ways, Horn said, people seem even more tolerant of police brutality today than they were a quarter century ago.

"We still live in a society that values property over human rights," Horn said. "And that can lead to problems."

For police, however, the issue comes down to good administration versus bad.

"YOU HAVE to make it clear, right at the top, that this kind of thing won't be tolerated," Canton Public Safety Director John Santomauro said. "You have to reinforce it through discipline and peer pressure."

With a 7 percent non-white population, Canton boasts the largest percentage, and second largest number, of minority residents in any area community. Westland's non-white population is 5 percent, though its 4,102 non-white residents slightly outnumber Canton's total.

Plymouth Township's non-white population is 3 percent. In contract, racial minorities make up less than 2 percent of the population in Livonia, Redford, Garden City and Plymouth.

But integration of a community, or police force, in itself might not prevent brutality as the Los Angeles incident illustrated.

The beating is the talk of the national police community, said Santomauro, who recently attended an FBI training session for the nation's police chiefs in Quantico, Va.

The message, he said, should be clear.

"You can't allow it (prejudice) in any form," he said. "You can't allow an officer to verbally abuse someone because there's only a thin line between verbal abuse and physical abuse."

Still, Santomauro admitted, incidents occur.

"You have to realize that a police department comes into contact

Tax petition drives organized, here's how to join

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Three groups are organizing petition drives to put tax questions on the 1992 Michigan ballot.

One would cut property taxes and raise the sales tax rate 2.5 percent to 6.5 percent. The other pair would limit property assessment growth to 2 percent a year and limit the tenures of U.S. congressmen and state legislators.

Meanwhile, the state Legislature has put a proposal on the 1992 ballot to limit property assessment growth at 5 percent or the rate of inflation, whichever is less.

Still unknown is the fate of Headlee II, the Taxpayers United proposal to cut assessments 20 percent over two years. The state Board of Canvassers last week failed to certify it for consideration by the Legislature and voters. TU chair Richard Headlee of Farmington Hills said the next step is the state Court of Appeals.

Here is a rundown of the new petition drives.

SALES TAX SHIFT

Committee name: Fair Share School Financing Committee, 304 S. State, Ann Arbor 48104.

Principals: George W. Sallade, Democrat of Ann Arbor, former state representative; Roy Smith, Republican of Ypsilanti, former representative, now Washtenaw County commissioner; Fred Veigel, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. IBEW paid for the petitions.

Proposal: Amend state constitution to increase sales tax rate by 2.5 percent; require state to refund 85 percent of property taxes on homesteads and resident farms (up to $10,000 per home, $12,000 per resident farm); give a 100 percent refund of school operating taxes for persons 62 or older; provide proportional refunds for renters.

Unaffected: Circuit breaker rebates of 100 percent for persons over 65 would continue; no break for commercial, industrial, personal and mining property.

"Our news release made a big hit," said Feigel, IBEW's assistant business manager in Ypsilanti. "We got many calls from southwestern Michigan, farmers around Grand Rapids and the Upper Peninsula."

Impact: $2 billion in new state revenue under the sales tax increase would be earmarked for property tax reduction. An estimated 25 percent of sales tax is paid by non-Michiganians, resulting in a shift away from state residents.

How to join: Call George Sallade (pronounced Sal-a-day) at 662-1218 or Roy Smith at 434-9347.

TERMS, ASSESSMENTS

Committees working together: Committee to Limit Politicians Terms, Committee to Lower and Limit Taxes, headquartered locally at 3309 Rochester Road, Royal Oak 48073.

Principals: Dick Jacobs, of Taxpayers Association of Michigan, Holland; Tim Purdy and Tish Berkey in Royal Oak; Mike Pray in Saginaw area. Affiliated groups are the Oakland County Taxpayers Association, Citizens for a Better Northville, and Justice Pro Se of Dearborn. A former Libertarian candidate, Jacobs said the Libertarian Party has not taken a position yet.

Term limitation proposal: three terms for state representative, two terms for state senator, two terms for each executive office branch (governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general; three terms during a 12-year period for U.S. representative, two terms during a 24-year period for U.S. senator.

Impact: "Fed up with career politicians? Put citizens back in charge," according to the literature. Jacobs said Colorado has such a state constitutional amendment. Incumbent congressmen, in particular, are sure to oppose this on the ground Michiganians could never accumulate enough seniority to gain powerful committee chairs.

Tax proposal: No new taxes or increases without voter approval; a 20 percent property tax refund from the state; no assessment increases beyond 2 percent; inheritance tax prohibited.

Impact: Property taxes would grow slower than inflation. Unlike the Headlee and Gov. John Engler proposals, local units would not be reimbursed for their $1.5 billion loss of revenue.

How to join: Call Tim Purdy or Tish Berkey at the Royal Oak office, 585-8776.

Both sides say training is key to force issue

with the public hundreds of thousands of times in a given year," he said. "Sometimes, it's a matter of someone thinking government has deep pockets."

While concerned about major incidents, civil rights officials said they were equally concerned about incidents that normally wouldn't be the basis of court action.

Robert Willis,\ vice president of the South Oakland chapter of the NAACP, said black drivers are often unfairly targeted by police in predominantly white suburban communities.

"THEY EVEN have code phrases. They'll radio to each other "BIL", meaning black in Livonia," Willis said.

Greive said that doesn't happen.

"It doesn't happen here now, I can tell you that," he said. "I can't speak about what might have happened years ago."

Santomauro also said he was unaware of any such incident, but said any of his officers using such improper radio code would be swiftly disciplined.

Training, he said, was the key.

"We try very hard to weed out the bad apples before we hire them," Santomauro said. "If you have a psychological problem, this job certainly isn't going to make you get any better."

Weeding out bad recruits is what the Wayne County Regional Police Training Center attempts to do.

"This is semi-stress training," said Orville Kappen, who supervises the training center. "If someone has a problem, they're not going to make it."

Of the 520 hours of training officer candidates receive, eight are specifically designed to teach officers to keep cool; under pressure.

"We teach them how their body language can help defuse a dangerous situation," Kappen said. "We also teach them how to use the least amount of force necessary if it comes to that."

Civil rights leaders, though, said all officers should receive more training in dealing with those different from themselves.

"There's a lot we can all learn about each other," Horn said.

Pat Murphy contributed to this story.

Claims filed against local departments

Here are the highlights of claims filed against local police departments with the Michigan Civil Rights Department over the past decade.

● Livonia — Incident date: Oct. 21, 1988.

Claim: A black man alleged unfair and arbitrary police actions in a traffic stop. He was pulled over for failing to observe flashing lights of police. The man claimed police deliberately bumped his car, causing extensive damage.

Result: After investigation, the civil rights department found no evidence of unlawful discrimination.

● Livonia — Incident date: Oct. 27, 1987.

Claim: A 25-year-old black man said a police officer accused him of lying after reporting stolen car. The car was subsequently used in a breaking and entry.

Result: The man later dropped the claim.

● Wayne County Sheriff's Department — Incident date: June 17, 1985.

Claim: A black Canton resident claims harassment. He was sitting in a car with his girlfriend, who was white, when approached by deputies.

Result: The man later dropped the claim.

● Livonia — Incident date: Feb. 14, 1980.

Claim: A black woman claimed she was shot in the leg by a Livonia officer after an auto chase. A passenger in the car was thought to match description of the robbery suspect but turned out not to be a suspect.

Result: The civil rights claim was withdrawn for the woman to pursue a civil suit against the department.

● Livonia — Incident date: Aug. 23, 1989.

Claim: A black man claimed he was unlawfully arrested at Detroit Race Course.

Result: The civil rights department dismissed its investigation pending outcome of the case in 16th district Court.

● Garden City — Incident date: Jan. 12, 1989.

Claim: A black McDonald's driver, claimed verbal harassment by police who approached his truck. The man was waiting outside a Garden City McDonald's to transport workers to another location.

Result: After investigation, the civil rights department found no evidence of unlawful discrimination.

Scholarships available at SC

Eriksson school fair presents world tour

Traveling around the world in 80 days is a wonderful thing — you can't argue with Jules Verne — but at Canton's Eriksson Elementary School on May 9, students, teachers, parents and visitors could tour 35 countries in eight minutes if they wanted to.

The "World Fair" resembled a miniaturized Epcot Center — replete with costumed students who manned booths and offered information about the customs, traditions and features of each country.

Ethnic music and dances, origami, games, photos, maps, mummies in model pyramids, flags, food, newspapers and videos all added to the festive atmosphere.

"Each of our fifth graders researched a country and did an extensive report," said teacher Donna Jeziorski. "They put together booths and displays showing what they've learned."

"One of the things that turned out to be so exciting was that parents, and even grandparents, were so involved helping put the booths together," said principal Judy Ireson. "This is a festive way to celebrate what we are; a multi-cultural, multi-ethnic school."

As they strolled from displays on Zimbabwe to Hong Kong, China, Mexico, Hawaii, Egypt, Austria, Brazil, Finland, Argentina, Australia, Canada, Chile, Japan, Jamaica and others, there was no doubt students were enjoying themselves.

Third grader Jamila Zavala was all smiles. "I like the candy, and the koala bears," she said.

Arrangements were made by Brown-Edwards-Toale Funeral Home in Ellenton, Fla.

You may ask for agendas

Under provisions of Michigan's Open Meetings Act, you're entitled to receive notices of government meetings. A public body must mail notices to people who, on an annual basis, request such notification. Under the act, payment of a reasonable fee may be required before notices are mailed. This provision applies to all local, county and state governments. At the local level this includes city councils, school boards and various boards and commissions. Locally, requests may be submitted to the city or township clerk, or to the school superintendent.

Home sought for exchange student

A host family from Plymouth, Livonia, Canton, Redford, Westland or Garden City is sought for a teenage German hockey player who will be coming to the U.S. to study and play in the 1991-92 school year.

Florian Jentzmik, 16, wants to attend an area high school to improve his English and hockey skills. Jentzmik has studied English for six years and has played in international hockey tournaments throughout Europe and Canada. He plans to study medicine after graduating from high school.

Sponsored by the American Institute for Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation, he will pay his own expenses and has full medical and liability insurance.

The host family automatically earns a tax deduction and scholarship for foreign travel or study.

Additional information is available by calling Scott Willson, 1-800-322-4678 or Lynne Levenbach, 453-8562.

Residents win honors

Schoolcraft College employees from Plymouth, Westland, and Birmingham were among the recipients of the college Presidential Recognition Award during recent ceremonies.

Honored employees included Elaine Larkin, Jeffrey Puhlman and Janice Weide of Westland, Gordon Snyder of Plymouth and Richard Perry of Birmingham.

All employees were nominated by supervisors and co-workers.

SC, Gibson offer summer programs for gifted kids

Plenty of activities will be available for gifted students this summer, with both day and sleepaway programs on the menu.

Classes will be offered at Schoolcraft College, Livonia, Gibson School for the Gifted, Redford and at various other sites in Michigan and surrounding states.

Schoolcraft's Talented and Gifted series includes classes in computer programming, typing, science and foreign language for students 4-14.

Among the highlights are creative drama, an opportunity for students to learn about theater history, costuming and mak-eup, as well as share in class dramatic productions. Another class, Plants and Animals in the Environment, allows students to learn ecology. Beginning, intermediate and advanced computer programming classes will be offered in the BASIC computer language.

A full class schedule, class fees and other information is available by calling the Schoolcraft Continuing Education Services Office, 462-4448.

Gibson's programs also include computer education, as well as, cooking, science, arts and crafts, drama, literature and other topics. Flexible programming allows students to take one or a series of classes.

Additional information is available by calling Susan Gross, 994-4560 or Florence Steinberg, 541-8446.

Other programs are described in "Summer Sundries", a guidebook available through the Wayne County Regional Education Services Agency.

The book includes information on summer camps, including the Interlochen (Mich.) Center For the Arts, college and university programs, including those at Michigan State, Wayne State and the University of Michigan-Dearborn, and community programs, including those at Cranbrook and Roeper schools.

Out-state programs, including those at Northwestern and Iowa universities, as well as at National Wildlife headquarters in Washington, are also detailed.

Day trips in Michigan and Canada are also featured, as are a host of festivals and fairs, including the Ann Arbor Street Fair and Novi 1950s Festival.

A copy of "Summer Sundries" can be reserved by calling Wayne County RESA offices, 467-1459.

Other questions on issues and programs related to gifted and talented students can be answered by calling the Western Wayne Alliance for Gifted Educatiuon. The W2 MAGE telephone number is 421-8220.

Blue collar

SHAME ON Robert Halso.

Halso is the head of operations for Pulte Homes in Michigan and recently spoke to the Canton Economic Club. His message was that Canton isn't a blue collar town. He claims it's a rumor that Canton is blue collar.

The implication of his message is that living in a blue collar town isn't cool. That's disgusting.

Blue collar workers are the economic base of Metro Detroit. They build the cars, the houses, the roads and schools that we all use. Without them, we folks who make our living with word processors would be out of luck.

But while the implications of Halso's speech are disconcerting, it points out a question. If Halso had made those same comments about an ethnic or racial group, he would have been accused of racism, and rightly so.

SOMEHOW IT seems all right these days to beat on blue collar workers. That's what Halso seems to be saying. It's the downside in Canton's effort to change it's image.

He was saying that it's OK for you to live in Canton because your neighbor won't come home from work in a pair of navy blue pants and shirt, carrying a lunch bucket. Instead he or she will come home from work wearing a navy blue suit and carrying a briefcase that chances are held a lunch.

We find a certain bit of irony in the blue collar bashing that's going on because it comes at a time when we're all learning to appreciate the ethnic and cultural diversity of our neighbors.

The folks who work with their hands should receive the same amount of respect as somebody who comes from a different culture.

The follies

Volunteers keep arts going

THE COSTUMES have been packed up in the trunks and the greasepaint has been washed off the faces of the cast of the follies, but the memories will linger.

For a week, volunteers from the Plymouth and Canton community danced, sang and sweated under the hot lights at Plymouth Salem High School to help raise money for the Plymouth Arts Council. The product was "Moments of Madness," a stage show that was performed Friday and Saturday.

Volunteers rarely get the recognition they deserve. That's partly because nobody really sits down to figure out the economics of their work. The cast of the follies gave a million dollar performance.

AND THAT becomes even more important these days because it looks like state financing for the arts is on its way out. So, if Plymouth and Canton want to continue to have arts programs, it's going to be up to them.

That makes the volunteer even more important.

After a while the memories of the performances will fade, and nobody will remember who sang what, or who told the best joke.

But the contributions made by the volunteers to the community will help the arts council keep going.

And that's a reward for everybody in Canton and Plymouth.

Priorities

Clear heads can handle crisis

IT'S MICHIGAN WEEK — a time of celebration but also one of concern as the state faces troubling issues.

The slumping economy, however, shouldn't be used as an excuse to dismantle a state infrastructure that has served Michigan residents well.

With a budget deficit looming, this is clearly the time to hold the line on government spending. But there is a difference between keeping costs in line and eliminating programs altogether.

Cutting funding for state fine arts programs, selling state park land and dumping able bodied people off state welfare rolls may be popular, but it sets a troubling precedent.

FINE ARTS is not for the few. State funding for art and music is the best way to assure that all Michigan residents have equal opportunity for cultural enrichment.

Selling park land likewise sets a dangerous precedent at a time when many Michigan residents and communities are diligently working to halt development. Keeping park land open, if only as a green belt, also makes Michigan a much more livable place.

Welfare, like other state expenses, must face close scrutiny in tough financial times. It may well prove that dropping able bodied workers without children from welfare rolls will preserve programs for other, more needy state residents.

Still, with joblessness high — and with infant mortality rates rivaling those of Third World countries in some parts our state — the need is clearly there.

IT COMES down to choosing priorities and the governor may not be making the right choices.

The trade-off seems to be cuts in social services and other programs in return for a boost in state education spending.

Even though increased education spending is politically popular, spending more on education may mean inflating teacher salaries in poor, outstate districts. It also may mean keeping small, no-longer economically viable districts afloat in an era when they should consolidate.

The governor's clinging to a property tax cut is puzzling in light of his concern about education, knowing that could take hundreds of thousands of dollars away from Michigan public school districts.

The budget deficit requires clear headed thinking. It's time the governor and legislators started displaying some.

Lucrative

Expense fund revisions due

IN THE WAKE of recent revelations of political misjudgments and conflicts of interest, the elimination of a special fund that lends itself to just such problems is long overdue.

A state Senate panel has unanimously supported a bill that would elimintate officeholder expense funds. The bill would allow officeholders who leave the state Legislature by a certain date to keep whatever is left in the fund or return it to contributors or give it to charity. If they don't leave, they automatically forfeit the money. That is similar to the federal law regarding campaign funds.

The OEFs allow incumbents an unfair advantage over challengers, who are not allowed a similar fund. Corporations, which cannot contribute to campaign committees, are allowed to contribute to OEFs. Chucking this fund would further "Michigan's longstanding objective of eliminating undue corporate influence on elected officials," in the words of Secretary of State Richard Austin.

THE LEGISLATION would severely limit the amount of money a candidate could spend at another candidate's fund-raiser. It would also eliminate uses of the money for questionable travel and entertainment expenses.

The bill to eliminate the fund has already passed the Senate, as it did last year. It awaits action by the House Oversight Committee, of which Farmington Hills Rep. Jan Dolan is a member.

Dolan said that she doesn't have an OEF and would be glad to be rid of them. But a lot of other legislation is getting attention in Lansing. The bill could die, as it did in the last session. In fact, one wonders about a bill that almost nobody opposes not getting action. The delay provokes questions.

Although this may seem like an administrative detail to some legislators, it isn't. They could help restore some needed credibility and eliminate a potential source of trouble.

Legistators should not put this off, but take care of this messy detail before it blows up in their face — and ours.

Children will be children.

Suburbs ignore unrest growing within the city

Steve Barnaby

THE IMAGES COME back into focus too easily. And the pictures are always the same.

Scenario One: A young man stands on the corner watching the billows of black and gray smoke roll across the summer sky. For as far as the eye can see, the horizon is filled with smoke while his ears are full of the sounds of sirens piercing the usual calm of a summer evening.

Scenario Two: A bus maneuvers through a devastated city. The young man gazes in disbelief as he passes block after block of burned out houses and businesses. Olive green jeeps are posted at the street corners, each manned with an M-60 machine gun, silent sentinels watching over the rubble of a once proud city.

That was a lifetime ago, those horror filled days and nights in 1967 when Detroit exploded and it was forever dismissed in most people's minds as a desirable place to live.

Now we face a much different America. Short on cash, short on patience. The rumblings of discontent are heard in just about every corner.

CERTAINLY MUCH has changed in the the last 24 years. It would be folly to seek similarities between social conditions of today and in 1967. While many of us are better off, with our collective inability, or maybe our unwillingness, to deal with the racial situation, Metropolitan Detroit lingers in a strange limbo of instability.

The economic fortunes of the black majority have only gotten worse since 1967. For those who remember, as civil unrest swept the country that year, many predicted that riots could never happen in Detroit. Blacks, the experts said, were better off in Detroit than any place else in America.

So much for the experts.

Now we face a much different America. Short on cash, short on patience. The rumblings of discontent are heard in just about every corner.

The warning signs are ominous and once again few are paying attention. Some residents of the the nation's capital seethe with rage and the police are called to quell the disturbance.

In Detroit a group of community leaders show up at city council to warn that with dwindling government funds, restlessness is sweeping the city.

"I think we're on the verge of that kind (Washington D.C.) of uprising here if we don't put resources into supporting the community groups that are out there to hold everything together," said Wayne County commissioner Bernard Parker recently.

MAKING THE siuation worse, we have saddled ourselves with a governor who has little understanding of the deplorable social conditions in urban areas.

And Detroit, for most suburbanites, seems so far away. Who needs it, many suburbanites say, with all its problems.

But this time it will be different. There is nothing left in Detroit to burn. The young and restless of the underclass stand on the street corners, waiting for something to happen. Nothing does.

And please notice, it is hot already in May. So very hot. And when it's hot, trouble is bound to follow.

GOP didn't rig political appointments

By Thaddeus G. McCotter guest columnist

guest column

As chairman of the Wayne 2nd Congressional District Republican Committee, which encompasses Plymouth, Northville and half of Livonia, I am disappointed in the mendacious partisan rhetoric of your editorial, "The big fix: GOP bosses decide elections."

At no time did I or any member of Wayne II's executive committee participate in the planning or implementation of a "signed, sealed and delivered political script."

For the editorial's assertions to be accurate, the hierarchy of the local Republican Party would have to have been involved in such a power play; but the immutable truth is that Wayne II would never be a party to the repugnant practice of "political fixing."

THE EDITORIAL has made the classic error of inductive reasoning by discerning a grand conspiracy within circumstances that are easily explicable if examined objectively and separately.

Take Mr. Breen's appointment to the county commission. The editorial admits he is qualified for his new position; however, the editorial degenerates into a polemic by neglecting to add the crucial facts that under the law the county commission had to appoint a Republican, and that 10 Democrats of the 14 Democrats on the commission appointed Mr. Breen — not an editor's imaginary Republican demons.

Concerning Mr. Law's appointment as Plymouth Township supervisor, the editorial never identifies an individual who could better perform the job, and fails to report that the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees appointed Mr. Law. (Where are the Republican demons?)

Regarding the state representative race, if there truly were a Republican conspiracy, there would be only one Republican candidate for the seat. The editorial's claims are contradicted by its own recognition that there is a crowded field of able Republicans for the seat.

As for these events transpiring within a week, why is this grounds for conjecture? Is it not common knowledge that the political field is fluid? And are not the needs of the public at the county and township level pressing enough to require prompt appointments?

WHILE mistakenly bemoaning the area's "one-party system, the Republicans," the editorial is myopic in its staunch refusal to glimpse the larger truth that Wayne County government has been, is and will continue in the foreseeable future to be a Democratic monopoly.

There is a greater degree of one-party rule in Wayne County than there is in the Soviet Union. If Plymouth, Northville and part of Canton are fortunate enough to be the exception to Democratic rule and be represented to some extent by Republicans, it is due to the efforts of the Republican Party in the area; the lengths to which the Democratic Party will go to gerrymander Republican votes; and, most importantly, the electoral will of the voters.

Herein rests the editorial's fatal flaw. The editorial implies that "arrogance and cynicism" are solely the traits of political bosses. But arrogance and cynicism afflict all human beings, whatever their station in life, be they political bosses, ordinary citizens or editorial writers.

TO CLAIM that the "voters are also to blame" for supporting a position one does not agree with is the height of arrogance. Thankfully, voters can and do vote as they please, and their collective judgments will be levied against all of the newly appointed officials and candidates.

While the potential outcome of these upcoming elections might not please the Plymouth Observer, voters should be spared from embittered personal attacks by editors who disagree with whatever electoral decisions are rendered.

Voters must be equally free from both "Boss Hoggs" and "Citizen Kanes."

Unjust rule strikes out on rights

Judith Doner Berne

BASEBALL IS AMERICA'S game. And the belief that a person is innocent until proven otherwise is an American's right.

But the South Farmington Baseball Club, a Farmington area little league, is undermining both those tenets by overreacting to an understandably upsetting incident.

James William Stoller, a Southfield resident, is awaiting trial on charges of sexually molesting boys between the ages of 10 and 13 whom he coached in the Garden City Youth Athletic Association. Stoller, a teacher and coach in DeWitt, was previously convicted for gross indecency involving young boys which was apparently not discovered until the Garden City incident. He, unlike the majority of sandlot coaches, happens not to be a parent.

South Farmington Baseball Club officials are worried that such an incident could occur in their league as well. But in their haste to reduce that possibility, they struck out — by passing a blanket rule prohibiting anyone who doesn't have a child in the program from coaching or managing a team beginning next season.

STRIKE ONE: Many other sports beat the bushes trying to get non-parents who love the particular game and who are unfettered by having to react to their own child to serve as coaches.

Strike two: Whether or not you have a child isn't pertinent to whether or not you would molest or abuse a child.

Strike three: The move casts unfair aspersions on all non-parent coaches in the league.

If this off-base play is allowed to stand, there could be further reverberations. Schools could be asked to terminate all teachers and extracurricular advisers who aren't parents; camps could eliminate all counselors who aren't parents; and how about the military eliminating all training officers who aren't parents.

IN WESTLAND recently, a pastor pleaded guilty, along with his wife, to abusing their two eldest children. But they are parents, so under the South Farmington league's criteria, they still might make it as coaches or managers.

South Farmington baseball officials are very clearly out in left field. It is they, not the non-parent coaches, who need to be pulled out of the line up and replaced with solid, non-hysterical leaders.

Stop flailing your bats at the non-parent coaches who give of their time and expertise. And start carefully reviewing your procedures in signing up coaches — parents and non-parents — to make them as failsafe as possible.

Although local police can't check out individuals on a routine basis, the Michigan State Police can. Background checks can be conducted on prospective paid workers or volunteers at the request of individuals or organizations.

The background checks can be conducted by mail with a response in a week to 10 days.

"IF WE MADE a rule that looks like an injustice to someone, we're sorry but we didn't do it to hurt anyone," said Roxanne Fitzpatrick, commissioner of the South Farmington league. "I'm having a difficult time understanding why they can't see the good in us. They're only seeing the bad."

What we're seeing is an ill-thought out decision made in panic which undercuts what we are trying to teach our children — about fairness and freedom.

Instant replay shows that it needs to be immediately reversed.

Doc Doyle

Q. My daughter was so excited about being accepted to the University of Michigan last fall. Now she is not so sure. Some of her freshman classes had more than 450 students. Can 450 students in a class be a good learning experience?

A. This is not an educational experience. Some might say it is a ploy to earn big money fast.

The worst case scenario I heard of at the University of Michigan was a freshman psychology class of 650 students.

Students were told (I am told) that the 650-student class would be reduced in size. It never was. Some students walked out in disgust and enrolled in other schools the next semester.

THIS SEEMS to me almost a white collar holdup by a university that knows it can get as many freshmen as it wants, so take it or leave it. And be advised this is not just the U-M; it is a common practice at MSU and other very large major universities.

Indeed, many students skip the sessions, and have their buddies take notes or tape the sessions, especially in classes where no attendance records are kept, which is most common. If attendance is taken, students often sign in their friends.

IT MIGHT be better to videotape the lectures and hand students copies when they pay their tuition rather than go to class. At least then the students could review and re-review what was said in the quiet of their rooms.

Furthermore, many of these "cattle yard" learning experiences are taught by graduate assistants, those with little or no previous teaching experience, some who just graduated themselves.

The more experienced and tenured professors generally teach the juniors and seniors or graduate students.

THE BOTTOM line, however, is that most students accepted by the U-M admission office will opt for the Ann Arbor campus rather than taking their first two years at the U-M-Dearborn, where small class sizes and experienced professors teach the classes.

Why? For prestige, to get away from living at home and to cheer for the maize and blue.

The U-M and MSU are excellent institutions, especially for juniors, seniors and graduate students. The first two years, from my view, leave much to be desired.

James "Doc" Doyle, a former teacher/school administrator/university instructor, is president of Doyle and Associates, an educational consulting firm.

No middle ground with digital time

Jack Gladden

THERE ARE 10 clocks in our house — 11 if you count the one inside the computer.

Actually only three of them are clock clocks — that is, devices whose purpose is to tell time and nothing else. The others are components of the VCRs, the kitchen range, the radio, the coffee maker, the kitchen timer and the microwave.

The one in the microwave gets the most use, which is why you hear conversations like:

"What time is it, daddy?"

"What does it say on the microwave?"

Therein, of course, lies the problem. Of the 10 visible clocks, four of them are analog — they have the traditional face with hands moving around — and the other six are digital, the kind that display a series of numbers glowing or flashing at you.

I realized this the other morning when the second grader remembered, just before time for school, that she had homework. The homework involved a series of pictures of a clock face (the analog type) with the hands in different positions. She was supposed to fill in the blanks to the questions: "It is — minutes before — o'clock."

She had done the work at school and had gotten all but one of the answers wrong. Her assignment was to correct them. And she was frustrated.

After much discussion, explanation and frustration on both sides, the light finally dawned and, once she had figured out the system, she filled in the blanks with the right answers.

THE PROBLEM, of course, was that we had relied too much on the microwave with its bells and whistles and digital display and not enough on the traditional Howard Miller creation that hangs on the wall in the dining room.

We had sworn that we would not do this. We would not let her rely on digital time-tellers until she had mastered the analog system.

But there was the microwave. And the VCRs. And the clock radio. And all the others.

So here we were, trying to interpret the time on a round clock face with one big hand and one little one and the numbers 1 through 12 encircling it.

For a second-grader, growing up in a digital age, it was, understandably, confusing.

I remembered a study conducted by a U-M professor a few years ago. He had postulated that digital time pieces had altered our whole thought process, and I think he was right.

Looking at a traditional analog clock, we say things like "It's half-past 12" or it's "a quarter to 3." Time becomes relative, and we think of the present moment in relation to that which has gone before or that which is to come.

Not so with a digital timepiece. It tells us that the time is 12:31 or 2:46. Time becomes an absolute and life is a series of isolated minutes, each having no relationship to the past or the future.

And, of course, with an analog clock, we must learn to tell time. A digital display tells us what time it is. We don't have to think; it does it for us.

IT'S TOUGH being an analog person in a digital world. But it's even harder trying to take a digital person of the '90s into the analog world of times past.

But I can't think about this any longer. My deadline is 10 a.m. and, according to the display on my computer screen, it's already 09:58:49.21.

Canton wins 4th crown the 'Hart' way

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Make way Detroit Pistons, because the Plymouth Canton boys tennis team has broken new ground.

How does "Four-peat" sound?

The Chiefs, despite some anxious moments from neighborhood rival Plymouth Salem, like the ring to their fourth consecutive Western Lakes Activities Association championship Tuesday as 11 schools competed in the tourney held at Livonia Stevenson.

Canton, thanks to Shawn Hart's victory at No. 4 singles, won the meet outright with a team-high 21 points, nudging out the rival Rocks who scored 20. See statistical summary.

As the sun was setting late Tuesday afternoon and temperatures still hovering near the 88-degree mark, only Hart and Livonia Churchill's Nadir Khan were the only two players remaining on the courts.

A victory by the Canton senior would give his school their unprecedented fourth straight title, while a loss would leave the Chiefs tied with their neighbors.

Khan put up a fight, but Hart was in control from start to finish, wrapping up the match and the team championship with a 6-3, 6-2 triumph.

"I'D RATHER not know, I would have choked if I knew I was under pressure to win," said Hart after he was told the outcome of the meet was riding on his match. "I really kind of blocked everything out. I was just glad to have my teammates behind me.

"His (Khan's) backhand and ground strokes have improved since the last time I played him. He's an overall better player."

Canton captured four of seven flights, a pair of titles each in singles and doubles.

While Hart's win sealed the outcome, the victory by Canton's No. 3 doubles team of junior Mike Donhost and sophomore Eric Baden proved pivotal.

The Chiefs took advantage of a two-point swing when Donhost and Baden outlasted Salem's duo of David Bell and Spanish exchange student Javier Angulo, 7-6, 5-7, 6-3.

The entire meet may have come down to the first-set nine-point tiebreaker which Donhost and Baden won, 7-2.

Bell and Angulo put up a real fight after going down earlier in the season against the same Canton duo, 6-2, 6-2.

"THERE'S ALWAYS some kind of strategy, but I just told them (Bell and Angulo) to keep the ball in play," Salem coach Judy Braun said. "It would have been nice to win it outright, but this tournament is always tough. There's always good competition in this tournament."

Canton's other doubles victory occurred at No. 2 where senior Dan Rosario and junior Stu Levenbach capped an unbeaten WLAA season with a 6-2, 6-3 win over Churchill's Todd Estes and Chris Machniak.

Canton, with juniors Adam Majewski and Joe Binder teaming up, also reached the finals at No. 1 doubles, only to fall to Salem's Mike Mulder and Jeff Rearick in three sets, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2.

At No. 2 singles, senior Rod Jesena of Canton beat Salem's Jason Grimm, 6-2, 7-5 for the title. (Canton also picked up a valuable point when Scott Jones won his first match at No. 3 singles before being eliminated.)

"Rod played over the winter and his tennis has really improved," Canton coach Jim Hayes said. "He's a tough kid."

Hayes attributes Canton's success to "hard work."

"We have more and more kids playing indoor tennis," he said. "And the kids at Salem do the same thing. We're fortunate that the families are interested and willing to spend money for their kids to play."

Mackenzie Emmett of Salem comes over the back of Kristin Oswandel as each player tries to put a head on the ball Monday. The teams tied 0-0 and shared the Lakes Division crown.

Kennedy KO's Northville

Plymouth Canton clinched a tie for the Western Division baseball title in the Western Lakes Activities Association behind another solid pitching effort by senior Scott Kennedy.

Kennedy hurled a one-hitter and struck out 16 opposing batters Monday as the Chiefs blanked host Northville 6-0. He walked only two in seven innings.

It was the fourth shutout for Kennedy, who is 7-2 and averaging 13 strikeouts per seven innings. He has more than 100 strikeouts for the season.

"He's had the kind of year he's capable of having," Canton coach Fred Crissey said. "We knew it would take a while because of the surgery (to repair a tendon in one hand), but he has shown what he can do in the last two weeks."

baseball

The Chiefs, 8-1 in the division and 15-4 overall, had nine hits with Mike Wougamon and Brian Tiell getting two apiece.

Canton took a 2-0 lead in the second inning. Following walks to Jason Crain and Todd Pniewski, Brian Stidham sacrificed the runners ahead a base, and Jon Paupore and Wougamon followed with back-to-back singles.

The Chiefs added four more in the third. Ben Hendricks smashed a two-run triple after Jason Riggs had walked and Tiell singled. The other runs scored on an error and a fielder's choice.

Canton can win the division outright with a victory Monday over visiting Farmington Hills Harrison. The Chiefs will represent the Western Division in the WLAA championship game on Tuesday, May 28, regardless of what happens Monday since they have beaten second-place Walled Lake Western twice.

Canton plays a pre-district tournament contest with Romulus at home on Thursday, May 23.

"Obviously, we're pleased (with the direction the team is headed)" Crissey said. "We're getting there

Rocks share Lakes title

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Livonia Stevenson girls soccer coach Mary Kay Hussey didn't know what to make of the Spartans' scoreless tie Monday against visiting Plymouth Salem.

"It either shows poor offense or great defense," she said. "I don't know which one."

Considering both teams entered the week ranked among the top five teams in Class A, the outcome probably had something to do with both teams' superior defenses.

Despite the tie, the Spartans still earned a berth in the Western Lakes Activities Association final game at 7 p.m. Friday at Livonia Churchill.

Both Salem and Stevenson finished tied atop Lakes Division at 3-0-1. The Spartans won the tiebreaker, however, by virtue of their 8-0-2 overall conference mark compared to Salem's record of 8-1-1.

Churchill, Northville and Canton were all 4-1 in the Western Division, but Churchill won the Western Division tiebreaker because it had a better overall conference record.

THIS WAS THE first Lakes Division title won in three years of coaching for Hussey, but she wasn't ready to go out and celebrate.

"I guess it's good but the state's are what matters," Hussey said. "Last year we were fifth place in the league and we ended up winning the state."

Salem, which is 11-1-1 overall, meets Plymouth Canton tonight at 7 p.m. for the battle of third place in the WLAA.

The Rocks' best scoring chance in the first half Monday came when senior forward Erin Harvey dribbled through a couple Spartans and shot the ball past goalkeeper Alicia Smith, but wide of the left goalpost.

In the second half, Smith came out of her net to make a save and the rebound was kicked toward the wide-open net, but defender Andrea Wittrock kicked the ball the other way.

Harvey later left the game with a knee injury and is questionable for tonight's game.

"We should have won 2-0," said Salem coach Ken Johnson. "We had more chances than them. It was a good game, though; the toughest game of the season and we expected it. This could have been a state final game."

HUSSEY CREDITED the goalkeeping on both sides for part of the shutout. But she was upset as well with her team's inability to score on Salem keeper Jenny Emmett, whom Johnson calls the best in the state "by far."

Stevenson kept the ball in Salem's end the last couple minutes in a desperation attempt to score, but Hussey believes the Spartans wouldn't have needed a late goal if they capitalized earlier.

"We missed two open nets in the first half and didn't finish when we should have," Hussey said. "I don't think we played well. We were very anxious and a bit confused. Plymouth Salem is a good team. They won 80 percent of the balls and are very fast, strong and physical. We played hard but I don't think we were very smart about it."

LaJoy accepts CC soccer post

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Phil LaJoy, Plymouth Salem's boys and girls junior varsity soccer coach since 1987, has accepted the Redford Catholic Central varsity boys soccer head coach's job.

LaJoy takes over in the fall for John Boots, whose contract was not renewed by CC despite leading the Shamrocks to a combined 32-8-3 record over two years. CC athletic director Bob Santello said several factors were considered in choosing LaJoy, one of which included his availability in making all practices and games.

LaJoy owns Norrell Temporary Services in Ann Arbor, and it allows him to juggle his schedule to his own needs. Santello said in an earlier interview that Boots was not asked back because of his sales representative job, which took him from two weeks of practice and two games last fall.

LaJoy also has an impressive coaching background on both the club and high school level. He was the first and only JV head coach at Salem and his boys and girls teams have a combined record of 96-11-3 in 4½ years.

LaJoy would not comment on whether he will continue as Salem's JV girls soccer coach next spring.

"We think Phil will do a great job for CC," Santello said. "His occupation allows him to have flexible hours where he can adapt to our schedules. That's always an inherent problem when you're hiring someone outside your building.

'We think Phil (LaJoy) will do a great job for CC . . . In looking at Phil's resume and talking to him and others who know him, it looks like he has a great background.'

— Bob Santello
CC athletic director

"IN LOOKING at Phil's resume and talking to him and others who know him, it looks like he has a great background. He's coached at the club level a long time and has organized major tournaments in Plymouth and that tells me he's very good at the organizational level. He's a licensed soccer coach so he's done his homework there, and he's a registered official (referee) so he knows what it's like being on the other side."

Besides his duties as JV coach at Salem, LaJoy also has assisted Ken Johnson on the varsity level for both the girls and boys soccer teams. Salem won the girls Class A 1987 state title and this year the Rocks are one of the favorites to win it again.

Johnson, Dave Monk and LaJoy started the Canton Soccer Club in 1976. Johnson was the Canton Soccer Club's first president and LaJoy took over those duties in 1981 when Johnson resigned to become the Salem boys soccer varsity coach.

LaJoy graduated from high school in 1962 from St. Mary's High School in Wayne, and received a degree from the University of Detroit.

"CC is an excellent school, and I look forward to contributing in a positive way to the soccer program," said LaJoy, who organizes the Canton Memorial Day Tournament every year. "I felt I was qualified, and I certainly hoped I'd be a serious candidate, and as it turned out, I obviously was.

"CERTAINLY, MY time at Plymouth Salem was a very positive experience. I enjoyed every minute at Salem, but golly, I really look forward to (head) coaching at CC."

Said Johnson: "I'm sorry to see him go. He's a good man, very interested in the game. He didn't play the game when he was younger, but he got interested in it when his boys (former Salem players Chris and Todd) were young. Maybe down the line we'll knock heads again."

CC plays its games off campus at Bell Creek Park in Redford, but LaJoy doesn't have any complaints about the site and having to put up and take down the goal posts after each game and practice.

"I certainly understand what I have to do, but I don't have a major problem with the field," LaJoy said. "Hopefully, I can make the soccer program grow and be better tomorrow than it is today. My goal is to build an excellent program and continue the tradition of excellence of the other sports at CC."

CC lost in the Class A regional semifinal in the fall to eventual state champion Warren De La Salle. The Shamrocks should have solid personnel again, led by Kerry Zavagnin, who was an All-Observer first-team choice with 20 goals and 24 assists.

"I won't be classified as a kickball coach," LaJoy said. "I'm more of a short-passing disciple, with an emphasis on defense. Plymouth Salem has played that game over the years.

"I always believe we have to have an excellent work ethic. When you work hard and work smart and have an excellent attitude, you go a long way."

Rocks, Spartans tie

"Ragen starts out at midfield and our midfielder, Kris Goff, marks her as she moves around, then hands her off to our other girls," Johnson said. "Whatever zone she's in, she was marked. Everyone was aware of No. 11."

Coyne wasn't too discouraged about the outcome.

"All in all it's an improvement over last year's regular season because we had four losses," she said. "I believe Salem is the toughest team we've faced. They played tight defense, but the balls weren't necessarily there."

Canton gets share of Western crown

Plymouth Canton's girls soccer team finished in a three-way tie for first place in the Western Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association.

The Chiefs ended with a 4-1 record after beating Farmington Hills Harrison 10-0 Monday at Centennial Educational Park.

Livonia Churchill and Northville also were 4-1, but Churchill won the tiebreaker based on overall conference records.

The Chargers will play Lakes Division co-champ Livonia Stevenson for the WLAA title at 7 p.m. Friday at Churchill. The Spartans shared the Lakes crown with Plymouth Salem but won that tiebreaker.

Churchill was 8-2 in the WLAA, Canton 7-2-1 and Northville 7-3. Stevenson had an 8-0-2 league record, Salem 8-1-1.

TEN PLAYERS figured in the Canton scoring Monday. The list of goal getters included Leah Hutko, Colleen Connell, Mandi Salin, Jori Welchans, Amy Westerhold, Kathy Bahr, Ayana Nash, Laurie McNamara, Denise Koontz and Danielle Meyka.

The Chiefs, 11-3-1 overall, led 5-0 at halftime and scored the last five goals on headers.

"We've been playing well, and I think we're going into the state playoffs on the right foot," Canton coach Don Smith said.

The Chiefs and Salem play at 7 p.m. tonight to determine third place in the WLAA, and they meet again Monday night in the first round of the district tournament. The Rocks won the previous game 1-0 early in the season.

On Saturday, Canton returned from Midland with a 3-0 victory over host Dow High School. Nash, Britta Anderson and Salin scored the goals, and Connell, Anderson and Westerhold had assists.

Welchans has 10 shutouts as the Canton goalkeeper. The Chiefs outshot Dow 21-5.

Erin Harvey had a single-game, season-best of five goals and two assists Saturday in Salem's 8-0 victory over visiting Grand Blanc.

The Rocks are 11-1-1 overall after their tie Monday with Livonia Stevenson, the Bobcats 7-4-1.

Amy Krajewski scored one goal and had two assists. Erin Bagozzi and Kris Goff rounded out the scoring, and Mandy Drummond, Shelby Carey and Michelle Cronan got credit for assists.

Salem goalkeeper Jenny Emmett has 11 shutouts and has allowed only three goals all season.

IT TOOK TWO days to accomplish but Farmington Hills Mercy advanced in the Catholic League soccer playoffs.

The Marlins defeated Harper Woods Regina 3-1 Tuesday at Mercy after the game was suspended Monday because of bad weather.

The teams had played 17 minutes and the Marlins had a 1-0 lead when play was stopped Monday. The game was resumed at that point.

"It's and good and it's bad," said Mercy coach Deepak Shivraman of the delay. "It's good in the sense we can play defensively with a 1-0 lead, just kick the ball out and play a little secure.

"But it's bad in that you can play overconfidently. We played using it as an advantage. We played defensively but kept pushing offensively as well."

Senior forward Kathryn Dudley assisted on two goals and scored the third one. Tania Macioce and Carrie Dziadosz staked Mercy to a 2-0 lead, and Dana Lehmkuhl set up the score by Dudley.

Regina's goal was the result of a penalty kick.

The Marlins, 12-2-2, were scheduled to play the winner of the Riverview Gabriel Richard-Allen Park Cabrini game in the second round Wednesday. The final will be played Saturday at Oakland University.

FARMINGTON COACH Cathy Kansman and possibly some of her players will be out to see the Marlins play this week.

The Falcons play at Northville tonight in a Western Lakes Activities Association crossover game, but Farmington is preparing for a rematch with Mercy on the opening day of post-season tournament play Monday.

The teams, which played for the district championship last year, meet at 4 p.m. on the Mercy field. The Marlins upset No. 1-ranked Farmington last year and advanced to the state semifinals.

"We're going to go at them; we'll have to play our best game," Kansman said. "I'm sure our girls will bring a lot of emotion with them from last year. Mercy is a very good team, and we know we have to play a good game."

Trio earns district honor

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Madonna sports

The statistics are impressive. Certainly, the three Madonna University players named to the all-NAIA District 25 baseball team — and one who just missed — seemed deserving of the honor.

But that's not what made them dinstinctive. Nor was that what made them successful.

It was their "Who cares?" attitude that separated them from the rest.

Don't be misled. It wasn't arrogance — it was disdain for past accomplishments. Stats can be analyzed and admired during the offseason, but the goal is to delay the off-season's starting time as long as possible.

In talking to these four members of the Fighting Crusaders, that belief was prevalent. Ernie Bowling, the man who set team records with 16 homers and 54 runs batted in, said it best: "I would have given up the whole season to do well in the tournament."

BOWLING NARROWLY missed being named the all-district player of the year. That honor went to Aquinas College pitcher Tim Sullivan (10-0 record, 1.45 earned run average). So what the junior first baseman was offering to surrender — a .370 batting average, 14 doubles and a team-high 50 runs scored — were accomplishments worth relishing.

But his numbers, like those of teammates Joe Brusseau and John Bonham, also named to the first team, meant less than the outcome of last week's double-elimination district tournament. Madonna lost its first game 8-5 to Aquinas in 10 innings, won its second game over Northwood Institute 4-3 (also in 10 innings), then lost to Aquinas again 8-1.

He wasn't the only one with mixed feelings regarding a year in which Madonna recorded a school-record 32 victories (against 20 losses and a tie).

Said Brusseau, a sophomore second baseman from Redford Bishop Borgess who had six hits in 11 at-bats in the tournament: "I'd give them all up for that one hit." And the hit he referred to? Any one that would have won a playoff game.

BRUSSEAU'S NUMBERS — a .369 average (more than 100 points higher than a year ago), eight doubles, four triples, eight homers, 33 RBI and 41 runs scored — were nice, in his estimation, but they weren't what stuck in his mind.

"The one thing I remember is at Northwood earlier in the season, with runners on second and third, nobody out, and I struck out," said Brusseau.

Success is in the eye of the beholder? It's relative? Both are true, as far as Madonna's three all-district selections and senior outfielder Mike Wozniak, who just missed being chosen, are concerned.

Post-season honors are great, but reaching the post-season so soon sure isn't.

Bonham provides a perfect example. He and Wozniak were the team's only seniors; Bonham wanted to get all he could out of his last season. "This is my last year," he remembered thinking. "You're going to have to shoot me to get me out of the lineup."

WORDS WITHOUT action are worthless. Bonham backed up his statement by volunteering, during the preseason, to become the team's catcher. A utility player in years past, he hadn't caught since he was 13.

It was a gamble Madonna coach Mike George had to take, though. His catcher from a year ago, Steve Coffell, had back problems and couldn't play. The only other catcher on the roster was freshman Chris Gajewski.

The move paid incredible dividends. Bonham caught 46 (of 53) games and made just five errors; he threw out 29 of 65 baserunners (45 percent). And offensively, Bonham broke new ground for a catcher by batting lead-off and stealing a team-best 27 bases (in 33 attempts). He batted .281 with four doubles, two triples, 11 RBI and 39 runs scored.

"I was kind of worried," he answered when asked his feelings about stepping behind the plate after an eight-year absense. "I thought it might hurt my speed."

But he wasn't about to leave the lineup, not as long as he could contribute. At one point, Bonham said he approached George about moving him into the outfield and putting Gajewski — whom Bonham felt was better defensively — behind the plate. George opted not to.

THE FINAL week of the season was filled with frustration for Wozniak, a Westland native (Livonia Franklin HS). He had five hits in 12 playoff at-bats (.417 average); he batted a team-best .375 during the season with six doubles, two triples, three homers and 25 RBI.

But, in the all-district voting, he tied for a spot on the team. In the ensuing vote-off, Wozniak lost.

Still, that loss wasn't as bothersome as the 20 games the team lost during the season. Nevermind the 32 wins.

"If we had played every game like we did after getting off the plane in Florida (the Crusaders were 6-2-1 on their spring trip), we wouldn't have lost a game," he said.

Which made part of the season's conclusion happy. During the long season, Wozniak said, "We started falling off. We got a little bit laid back. That's when we started talking about being a team.

"We finally got back together, playing as a group instead of individuals."

Like his three teammates who were named to the all-district squad, Wozniak will remember the big hits, the victories. But — for the near-future, anyway — not as well as the few disappointments from a successful season.

Which serves, as well as anything, as a definition of a winner.

Salem topples Vikings

(Walled Lake) Central staged another seventh-inning rally Monday, but the Rocks cut it short and claimed the win that previously escaped them.

Plymouth Salem refused to let another possible victory get away Monday as the Rocks upset Lakes Division co-leader Walled Lake Central 6-5 in softball.

When the teams played April 25, Salem led 6-3 entering the seventh inning, but the Vikings rallied to score four runs and take a 7-6 victory.

Central staged another seventh-inning rally Monday, but the Rocks cut it short and claimed the win that previously escaped them.

Salem again led 6-3 going into the last inning, but the Vikings got only two runs this time.

"They left the bases loaded; I thought it was going to happen again," Salem coach Rob Willette said. "It's nice to win a close one, because we've been losing these close ones."

The Rocks had only two hits off losing pitcher Jenny Czach. Both hits were singles by Emily Giuliani and Kristin Stackpoole. Caryn Tatterton walked four times and scored a run for Salem.

Czach struck out six and walked 10. Wild pitches accounted for four Salem runs. Jenny Garvey was the winning pitcher, going the distance and scattering six hits. She struck out five and also walked 10.

Carrie Cassinski had two hits and knocked in Central's runs in the seventh inning.

The Rocks are 2-7 in the division and 5-15 overall. The Vikings dipped to 7-2 in the Lakes and are tied for first place with North Farmington and Westland John Glenn.

PLYMOUTH CANTON defeated Northville 5-0 in league play Monday after winning the Novi Invitational on Saturday.

The Chiefs are 6-2 in the Western Division of the WLAA and 14-2 overall.

Kelly Holmes pitched a two-hitter against the Mustangs and struck out seven. She walked two while raising her record to 11-2.

Canton had only two hits, too, but Kris Ford's single contributed to a four-run first inning for the Chiefs. The game was stopped after five innings because of bad weather.

There was no shortage of hits Saturday as Canton defeated the host Wildcats 8-3 in the tournament final. The Chiefs outhit the opposition 12-3.

Jenny Sekovich was 3-for-3 and Sarah Schimmelpfenneg 3-for-4. Julie Nicastri and Renee Dory had two hits apiece, and Nicastri knocked in two runs.

The Chiefs trailed 3-2 when they broke loose with six runs on six hits in the sixth inning.

"I was very pleased with the final game," Canton coach Jim Arnold said. "We're playing some good ball, and it's a good time to start playing well."

Canton began with a 7-4 win over Northville. Holmes struck out eight in seven innings to get the victory. Dory was 3-for-4, and Nicastri had two doubles and three RBI.

Shannon Murphy was the winning pitcher in Canton's 10-2 defeat of Redford Thurston in the next game. The Chiefs scored six runs in the sixth inning on walks, passed balls and errors.

Salem lost 8-0 to Novi and 5-3 to Northville in the tournament. The 13 runs allowed by the Rocks were unearned.

Amber Trombetta had Salem's lone hit in the Novi game. Andrea Welling walked only four but suffered the loss.

Welling and Stackpoole had two hits apiece in the second game. The Rocks committed four errors, and Garvey, who allowed four hits and five walks, took the loss.

and we're hoping to make a tournament run."

PLYMOUTH SALEM needed a run in the top of the seventh inning Monday to edge host Walled Lake Central 6-5 and remain in contention for the WLAA's Lakes Division crown.

Scott Rodgers hit a single to center field, and Ed Gundry scored the winning run from second base.

"You have to send him in the seventh, and Ed got in under the tag," Salem coach John Gravlin said.

Scott Niemiec's solo homer in the fourth inning trimmed a 3-0 lead by Central, and Scott Bright slammed a two-run shot in the fifth when Salem took a 4-3 lead.

Kurt Singleton (2-0) pitched the fifth and sixth innings and got the victory. Chris Tomas earned a save.

The Rocks are 7-2 in the division with one game remaining Monday at last-place Farmington. Salem, 15-4 overall, trails first-place Westland John Glenn by one game.

Salem was one of five state-ranked teams competing Saturday in the eight-team Midland Invitational.

Grandville won the championship and eliminated the Rocks 8-3 after they had beaten Traverse City 5-0 in their first game. Midland, Mount Pleasant and Midland Dow were the other rated teams.

Rodgers was pitching a no-hitter through five innings in the Traverse City game. He went six to earn the victory and struck out 10.

Gundry started the game with a solo homer, and Jeff Belisle had three hits and two RBI.

Grandville jumped in front 7-2 in the first inning of the next game, tagging Dan Hutchinson with the loss.

Canton wins 4th consecutive title

HAYES ALSO believes the team's success stems from a popular physical education class the high school offers.

"We're fortunate to have an elective P.E. program," he said. "The tennis classes are open to everybody, from novice players to the kids on the high school team. During the fall semester I taught three classes. In the winter I got all the gyms. I taught four classes this spring. The popularity is enormous."

Despite having the distinction of of being "Three-peat" champions, Hayes was not totally confident going into the mee.

His No. 1 singles player, Brian Schmidt was scratched from the lineup after spraining his knee over the weekend. Hayes got the bad news Monday morning when Schmidt showed up for school wearing a cumbersome brace.

"We just had to set different goals as far as points go and the kids just accepted it," Hayes said.

Schmidt, who watched in frustration all day from the sidelines, is hoping to return for Friday's Class A regional at Ann Arbor.

"I'm mad at myself, I was playing around in a park," Schmidt said. "The team was also kind of upset with me."

Jeff Fuerst, who along with Eric Mitchell back up the 10-man varsity squad, filled in for Schmidt, but lost in the first round.

"CANTON DID WELL since their No. 1 singles player (Schmidt) didn't play," Braun said. "If he had played, I think he would have taken at least two points."

The No. 1 singles draw became anti-climatic after North Farmington's Seth Hoffman, a nationally-ranked player, parted ways with the Raiders' squad only a week prior to the WLAA tournament.

That left the door wide open for state Class A singles runnerup Mark Schwagle of Northville, who beat Hoffman earlier this year, 6-1, 6-4.

Schwagle breezed through his three matches, including a 6-0, 6-0 triumph in the final over Farmington's Manoj Trivedi. (The two had to play their match on Wednesday because Trivedi had already used his allotted three matches on Tuesday.)

OVERALL SEASON STANDINGS

Western Division champ: Plymouth Canton, 5-0 record.
Lakes Division champ: Plymouth Salem, 5-0 record.
Overall WLAA dual meet records: 1. Plymouth Canton, 10-0; 2. (tie) Plymouth Salem and North Farmington, 8-2 each; 4. (tie) Northville and Livonia Stevenson, 7-3 each; 6. Livonia Churchill, 5-5; 7. Walled Lake Central, 4-6; 8. Farmington Harrison, 3-7; 9. Livonia Franklin, 2-8; 10. Walled Lake Western, 1-9; 11. Farmington, 0-10; 12. Westland John Glenn (did not field a team this season).
Overall champion: Plymouth Canton.

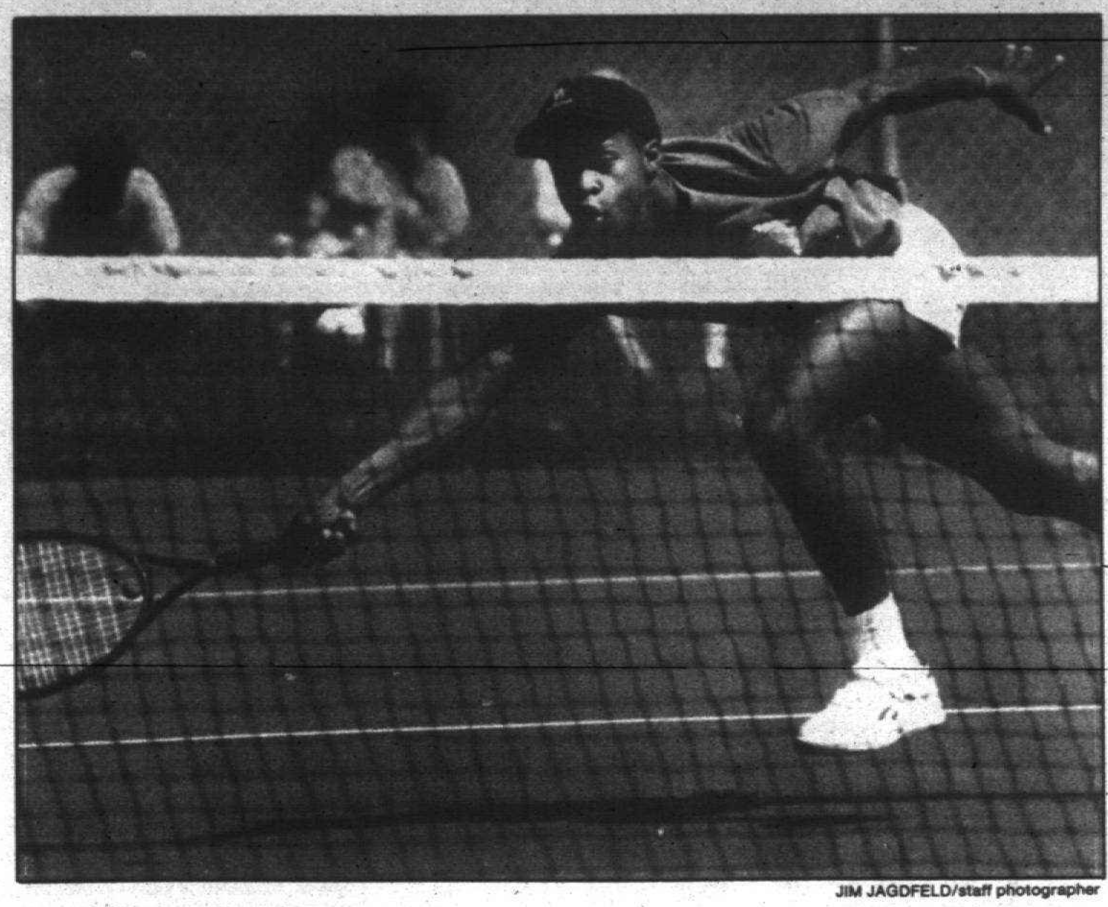
The other singles champ was K.C. Kirkpatrick, the 6-foot-6 senior from Salem, who upended Northville's Brad Telepo in the finals, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Kirkpatrick, a first-team All-Observer basketball player, finds tennis to be relaxing.

"I was happy to win this because I lost in the finals the last two years," he said. "This sport is less tense. In basketall there's more pressure. At tennis practice you just go out and hit balls."

Amazingly, Kirkpatrick lost only one match in WLAA play while juggling his busy schedule between AAU basketball and track (where he's a 6-2 high jumper).

This weekend he'll be at two regionals (tennis and track), while tryng to fit in AAU games.



JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Fred Staten played No. 1 singles for Salem, winning his first match before losing to eventual champion Mark Schwagle of Northville.

CC captures league tennis crown

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

The key to Redford Catholic Central's tennis victory at the Catholic League Championships — depth — is what Shamrock coach Bob Miller hopes will carry his team towards a Class A state title.

It certainly was too much for CC's only true challenger at the league meet, Birmingham Brother Rice. The Shamrocks, who narrowly defeated Rice earlier in the season on a dual-meet tiebreaker, rebounded Saturday to win six of the eight flights at the 10-team meet, held at Farwell Field in Detroit Saturday.

Rice won two flights and opposed CC in the other six finals. CC finished with 60 points to the Warriors' 52. University of Detroit-Jesuit was a distant third (24), followed by Warren DeLaSalle (22); Allen Park Cabrini (19); Harper Woods Notre Dame (16); Royal Oak Shrine (15); Redford Bishop Borgess (eight); Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher (six); and Pontiac Oakland Catholic (two).

"I felt somewhat confident (about our chances)," said Miller. "We beat Brother Rice on a tiebreaker earlier, but I felt we were the better team."

HOW MUCH better? Does the league championship — CC's first since 1987 — prove anything?

"I think what it shows is we've got depth," answered Miller. "Our teams are fairly even in singles, but where it shows is at the No. 2, 3 and 4 doubles. And we were able to win the close matches this time."

Indeed, the Shamrocks were good enough to win six matches this time. Paul Bozyk started it off by capturing his second-straight No. 1 singles championship, bettering Rice's Tom Herb 7-6, 5-7, 6-1 in the final.

At No. 3 singles, Scott Hazlett topped the Warriors' Enzo Garcia 6-3, 6-2. Rice collected wins in the other two singles, with Geoff Prentice topping Paul Thieme 4-6, 6-0, 6-2 at No. 2 and Joe Vincler defeating Bob Bhatia 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 at No. 4.

The doubles' flights belonged to CC, however. The No. 1 team of Jayson Torres and Chris Alonte outlasted Rice's Victor Morales and Eric Podgorny with a come-from-behind effort, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4. Torres and Alonte trailed 3-0 in the second set before battling back to win.

WHILE CC'S No. 1 pair scrapped to win, the No. 2 team of Dave Gallagher and Chris Matson completely dominated. They whipped the Warriors' Jon Hoffley and John Newman 6-0, 6-0 to win the title and complete a clean sweep — three-straight match wins without losing a game.

The Shamrocks' No. 3 and 4 teams weren't quite as dominant, but they didn't lose a set in the finals. No. 3s Chip Shade and Dave Lombardi topped Rice's Jason Emory and Jim Molloy 6-3, 6-4, and No. 4s Steve Englehart and Mark Shaya ripped Chris Kowal and Chris Millar 6-3, 6-0.

The significance of winning the team title was not lost on Miller. "1987 was the last time CC had won the league championship in tennis, and Brother Rice had won the last three, so this was the first time any of these kids had been on a championship team, which is nice," he noted.

Now, if only CC can carry that success on to the state meet . . . The Shamrocks will begin their quest at the Dearborn Regional Friday and Saturday.

Church investigates pastor who abused children

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Michael Enersen, the Westland minister who admitted he abused his children, has come under investigation by higher church authorities who could oust him from his Assemblies of God pulpit, The Observer learned Tuesday.

Enersen, minister of Westland Full Gospel Church, is being investigated by his church's parent organization, the Michigan District Assemblies of God, and could face disciplinary action "as is deemed appropriate," district Superintendent William Leach confirmed Tuesday.

A decision to remove 36-year-old Enersen as an Assemblies of God minister would come from national headquarters in Springfield, Mo., Leach said.

The latest development came as word spread that Enersen's 700-member congregation, which continues to strongly support him, may vote to secede from the Assemblies of God.

Enersen again didn't return a telephone call from the Observer, and church members declined to respond to inquiries about the possible secession.

"That would be something that you would have to speak to the pastor about," said a woman who answered the church telephone Tuesday.

Former church members who have friends still attending Westland Full Gospel said their friends had talked about the possible secession.

MEANWHILE, LEACH confirmed that a six-member executive panel of the Assemblies' Michigan District has launched an investigation of Ensersen, who, along with his 33-year-old wife, Carol, admitted in Detroit Recorder's Court on April 25 that they abused their children.

Two of the children — a 16-year-old girl and a 13-year-old boy — have been taken from the Enersens and placed in a foster home. Those children are Carol Enersen's stepchildren; Michael Enersen fathered them during a previous marriage.

The Enersens' four younger children, ages 9 months to 10 years, remain in their parents' custody.

Leach declined to comment at length about the Enersen case, which came to the attention of Westland police after two of the Enersen children escaped from home and sought help from a former church member.

"I just want to be careful that I say the right thing," Leach said.

The district superintendent said a decision to discipline Enersen would be made by the Springfield-based General Council of the Assemblies of God, which will consider evidence obtained by district officials.

The investigation "undoubtedly" will be completed in time for the national council to consider the matter when it meets in June, Leach said.

Few details of the investigation were revealed in a written statement that Leach submitted to the Observer on Tuesday.

"WHEN ALLEGATIONS or charges of misconduct by an Assemblies of God minister are brought to the attention of the district in which a minister is a member, it is the responsibility of that district to initiate an investigation and action as is deemed appropriate," Leach wrote. "The matter of charges against Michael Enersen is being referred to our parent organization, the General Council of the Assemblies of God, for action.

Leach continued, "It would not be proper to publicize this matter further until the charges have been resolved in the court system and the General Council has had an opportunity to investigate and make a decision."

The Enersens are scheduled for sentencing May 31 in Recorder's Court. Michael Enersen has pleaded guilty to one count of second-degree, punishable by up to four years in prison. Carol Enersen pleaded guilty to one count of third-degree child abuse, punishable by up to two years in prison.

Westland Police Sgt. Laura Moore, who investigated the case, said the Enersen children had injuries that included human bite marks and bloody buttocks, caused by beatings with a wooden paddle.

Attorneys have indicated the Enersens will be placed on probation for five years and forbidden to see the two older children.

LAST WEEK, Joseph Flower, the general secretary of the Springfield-based Assemblies of God, addressed the Enersen case briefly, though he had not heard of the controversy when contacted by the Observer.

"We certainly do not approve of child abuse," Flower said.

Though he declined to comment at length, Flower questioned why the Enersens would plead guilty in court, only to later deny their guilt to their congregation.

The Enersens have said they wanted to spare their children the trauma of testifying in court. Moreover, they've said they wanted to avoid expensive legal fees.

We Need Volunteers Who Love Happy Campers!

Sun Deer® campers are happy campers and it's no wonder because most severely asthmatic kids are forced to spend their summers indoors. At Camp Sun Deer® asthmatic kids ages 9-12 participate in a variety of outdoor activities, but they can't do it without your help. The limitations and doubts they face can be diminished by a volunteer who cares. Your participation at Camp Sun Deer® can make all the difference in an asthmatic child's summer.

39th season gets under way at Stratford Festival

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

ACTORS HAVE been in rehearsal and already are doing preview performances for some of the 14 productions to highlight the 39th season at the Stratford Festival in Ontario.

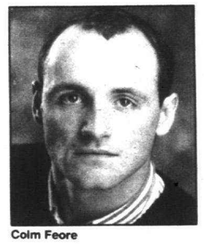
This week, during breaks in rehearsal, a few of the stars took time to talk by phone to the Observer & Eccentric about their roles in shows that range from tragedy to light-hearted fare by Shakespeare and other playwrights.

For ticket information, call the Stratford (Ont.) Festival box office free from metropolitan Detroit, 964-4668.

A direct approach to playing Hamlet

COLM FEORE has the plum role as Hamlet in the Bard's "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark," now in preview and opening the season Monday, May 27, at Stratford's Festival Theatre.

Feore takes his work seriously but he is not mesmerised by the character. He has played Richard III and Iago. "Now it's Hamlet," he said. "We're just doing the play — very simple - as honest and direct as we can be."



Colm Feore

Asked what approach this production would take to Shakespeare's drama, Feore said, "We've let each of the elements be featured." He believes it's dangerous to assume you can put a single interpretation onto a role as great as Hamlet.

"Nothing gets in the way of the words," he stressed. "You see more of the play and less of the art."

ANOTHER ROLE Feore will play at Stratford is Benedick in Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," also in preview and opening May 29 at the Festival Theatre. Hero and Claudio are the young lovers and Benedick and Beatrice are the cynical, older couple. In addition, he is cast as Horace, the boyfriend, in Moliere's classic comedy "The School for Wives," opening Aug. 2 at the Avon Theatre.

Feore, who is of Irish heritage, was born in Boston and raised in Ottawa and Windsor. He spent three years with the National Theatre School in Montreal and later worked at the National Arts Centre in Toronto.

Actors at Stratford usually progress from the the young stage to the main stage. But when Feore arrived at Stratford 12 years ago, "I started playing all sorts of big things," for two years on the main stage. Then, "I played smaller parts," on the young stage, which gave him further opportunity to develop his craft.

In 1989, he took a year off to do film and television. "I was terrified to leave. I was terrified to come back," he said. "It's great to grow and develop," he said contrasting his year away with his years at Stratford, "but you can get seduced by the security of this place."

Feore praised the festival's artistic director, David William, saying, "He's interested in the qualities of clarity and honesty and serving up the plays so that they're understood. He said Richard Monette, director of "Much Ado About Nothing," also is interested in everything being clear.

Actress can identify with sensitive Emily

IN CONTRAST to Colm Feore's longtime Stratford stardom is the theatrical career of Ann Baggley, who is making her Stratford debut this season as Emily in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town."

Ann Baggley

Baggley first played the role of Emily four years ago at George Brown College, where she attended theater school for three years.

The actress, who was born and raised in Toronto, also has studied at the Banff School of Fine Arts. "I'm not in the Young Company show," she pointed out, "although I'm still a part of the Young Company." She considers herself very fortunate to have been chosen for the production of "Our Town," which is in preview and opens May 28 at Stratford's Avon Theatre.

She described the Young Company as a training ground for young actors, who have been working one or two years, and for apprentices. "Stratford likes to take young people and bring them up in the ranks," she said.

BAGGLEY SAID the character of Emily is "a bit precocious but she's very smart and sensible and simple. She's a girl, who becomes a woman by the third act. She's an example of a very sensitive young woman. I identify with her."

The performer also plays Agnes, the young, convent-educated woman in "The School for Wives." She said that in many ways Agnes is similar to Emily. A totally different character is the part of Ginette in the world-premiere of a new English translation of Michel Tremblay's "Les Belles Soeurs," in preview and opening June 1 the Avon Theatre. "She's the kind of girl nobody wants to listen to. She's a real loser."

Baggley said that for the role she wears little round eyeglasses, a red wig and freckles. "I don't usually get to play this type of character. She's the opposite of Emily," The Canadian play has a cast of 15 women.

It's a comedy but very black humor," she said.

Character actor is a director as well

THE YOUNG Company is directed by Bernard Hopkins, who came to Stratford in 1975 as "one of the senior actors" with the company. In 1981, it became the Young Company at Third Stage, now renamed the Tom Patterson Theatre.

"It's an absolute extension of the main company," said Hopkins of the Young Company. "It attempts to give some of our younger talents the chance to play roles that are not in their immediate range."

Actors in the Young Company are between 18-30 years old. Hopkins is in his third year as company director. A character actor, he appears in several Stratford productions this season. He is Philip, a chef in "The Rules of the Game" by Luigi Pirandello, opening July 5 at the Tom Patterson Theatre, and also appears in "An Enemy of the People" by Henrik Ibsen, opening Aug. 23 at the Avon Theatre.

For the later production, director Martha Henry wanted to use more mature actors for a scene at a town council meeting. Artistic director David William will be one of the people with him in the crowd scene, Hopkins said.

Hopkins is directing "Twelfth Night," with the main company, opening May 30 at the Avon Theatre, and "The Knight of the Burning Pestle," with the Young Company, opening Aug. 2 at the Tom Patterson Theatre.

Bernard Hopkins

Asked to comment on director Martha Henry (a former Bloomfield Hills resident, who is unavailable for an interview at this time because she is directing a production in London, England), Hopkins said, "She's an extraordinarily talented person. She played Violet in 'Twelfth Night' in 1966 at this theater."

Hopkins continued, in reference to the production of "Twelfth Night" he is directing, "The play is so beautiful. It's a grave responsibility to do it."

English-born, the actor came to Canada in 1970, to play in "The Comedy of Errors" in Winnipeg. One theater job led to another and, "I'm still here." He described himself as "very short, inclined to fat and with gray hair." His appearance helps him get roles that are different. "The public doesn't come to see who you are. They come to see the character," he said.

Billy Bigelow role keeps getting better

ANOTHER ACTOR at Stratford with a specialty is John Devorski, who has gotten some parts because of his singing, as well as his dramatic, ability.

Devorski explained his strong musical-theater background, "Because I can sing, I got to go to those auditions as well."

In his second season at Stratford, he is thrilled to be playing the lead of Billy Bigelow in the musical "Carousel." He calls the role, "Quite a bonus for me."

This is the third time he has played Bigelow in productions of "Carousel." He described the character: "He's a ne'er-do-well, he's pompous, he's egocentric, but at the base of all that, there's a sensitivity to him, which you don't get to see until he launches into 'Soliloquy.'"

John Devorski

"IT'S A WONDERFUL, wonderful part," he said enthusiastically. "I could just do it forever. Coming to it for the third time, it just seems to be getting richer and richer all the time."

Other roles taken by Devorski at Stratford this season are Fortenbras, Prince of Norway, in "Hamlet," and Balthasar, an attendant to Don Pedro in "Much Ado About Nothing." Devorski said, "It's a busy opening for me. All three shows are in preview."

Raised in Guelph, Ont., the actor has lived in Toronto for the last 12 years. He has been in professional theater for 10 years and performed with local little theater groups before going to Toronto. He also studied at Ryerson Theatre School and the Banff School of Fine Arts.

"I worked regionally across the country. I auditioned for Stratford over the years, and last year got in," he said.

Suspense is missing in 'Ten Little Indians'

Performances of the Smith Theatre production of "Ten Little Indians" continue through Saturday on the Oakland Community College Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills. For ticket information call 471-7500.

review

A saving grace of the show is Matthew Bierl as Detective Blore. Bierl possesses the self-confidence required of Blore and believably portrays the gruff but likeable detective.

By Sally Dubats
special writer

The production of Agatha Christie's "Ten Little Indians" at the Smith Theatre has a questionable amount of the famed Christie suspense. Although well acted and paced, it sometimes misses the whodunit quality of the classic mystery/thriller.

Christie employs a famous nursery rhyme to the letter for her plot. In the play, typical of a Christie mystery, several unsuspecting guests are invited for a weekend stay at an ominous country estate. In this case, however, the home is on an island with no means of escape.

Director William W. Sharpe's staging of "Ten Little Indians" evidences little forethought or attention to detail. Entrances are made with other onstage actors blocking the view of the new arrival, actors are walking backwards and many times positioned to converse with other actors in a contorted fashion anything but conducive to conversation.

Lead player Lee Martin as victim/suspect/guest Philip Lombard delivers quickly said lines which lack meaning and innuendo. Martin, although an adept wisecracker, falls short of the playboy aspect of his character's ability to woo any woman, especially the intended target, Vera Claythorne (Cara Remund), another guest for the weekend.

PRETTY CARA REMUND'S technical style of acting does little to enhance the love interest in the plot, as no chemistry whatsoever is set up between Vera and Lombard, and her character doesn't show an ounce of visible nervousness as various characters are murdered.

The third leg of this flirt triangle, but only according to the script, is Matthew Scarlett as Anthony Marston. Scarlett chooses sarcasm for his character rather than the impetuous rich boy Christie intended. His delivery of lines leaves little room for the early-in-the-play flirting with Vera.

A saving grace of the show is Matthew Bierl as Detective Blore. Bierl possesses the self-confidence required of Blore and believably portrays the gruff but likeable detective. Tom Williams also renders a credible performance as Sir Lawrence Wargrave.

As various characters die off, the audience is traditionally inclined to wonder who the murderer is, but the staging, with few notable exceptions, creates no tension through the use of suspicious characters. Scott Mancha and Gail Bohacek as the manservant and cook are neither suspicious nor nervous. Mancha's "aging" make-up looks more like white and black cat whiskers, making his character all the more unconvincing.

Kristen Williams as Emily Brent, the forthwright religious fanatic foreshadowing doom, would do better to make her character a little more eccentric and her lines more significant, to add to her suspicion.

BY CONTRAST, supporting player Khaled Hanna is excellent as General MacKenzie. His performance as the lonely, feeble-minded old widower possesses the subtleties and complexities of excellent acting, and his quirky characterization succeeds in creating a mysterious atmosphere.

OAKWOOD CARDIOLOGY CENTER

"I Used To Think I Was Indestructible, But Now I Know I'm Not. That's Why I Chose Oakwood."

"I didn't think anything could stop me...not until I had a heart attack. It was lucky for me I got to Oakwood's Cardiology Center, where an expert staff took excellent care of me. Their specialists looked me over with all their state-of-the-art equipment, and put me on a personal treatment program. And with follow-up care, educational courses and monitoring, Oakwood will have me back to an active life. Which is how it should be. Just because a guy has a little heart attack, doesn't mean he has to stop living."

For 30 years, Oakwood Cardiologists have been dedicated to the treatment of cardiovascular disease with the latest treatment programs and surgical techniques. It's part of the Oakwood health care system, one of the largest health care systems in Michigan, with six hospitals, more than 30 local health care and specialty centers and more than 1,000 physicians. Middle-income family can meet cost of education tribute more substantially to Mike's 401(K) plan, sell their stock at a capital gain in 1991, carefully reconsider whether Jo should go back to work (it may be worthwhile) and not shift any more of their assets into the children's names. All of these factors affect the expected family contribution and thus directly affect the children's eligibility for financial aid. This topic will be dealt with in depth in next week's column.

It is worth noting that having two children so close together in age may actually work to their advantage. With the children overlapping three years during their undergraduate studies, they will likely be eligible for greater financial aid than if there were no overlap. This is a result of the family's expected contribution per child decreasing in the years when more than one family member is in college.

Although the Austins have not been able to provide money for their children's education to date, it is not too late to begin planning. In fact, it is a very good time for them to review their situation and create their own opportunities.

Next week, we'll examine those complex financial aid forms and tell the Austins how they might qualify for more financial aid.

Auto makers are bypassing dealerships, selling directly to fleets

Dan McCosh

It is one of those ironies of the U.S. auto business that car companies are willing to pay as much to sell a car as they pay wages to workers to build it. The relatively steep markup between the price of a delivered vehicle and the full retail sticker price (which can run between 8 percent and 16 percent, oddly, higher for more expensive cars), is sufficient to make some dealers richer than the chairman of the board at GM, a situation that was quite shocking to the Japanese when they first started marketing their wares.

In fact, until relatively recently, the Japanese didn't even use dealers, instead sent salaried salesmen door-to-door. Of course, their chairmen weren't making much either, which tended to keep everybody's nose to the grindstone until recently, when a few too many Harvard Business School graduates went back to the home islands.

The independent sales franchise in the United States, as a result, is the most aggressive in the world and manages to push an amazing variety of hardware, while maintaining some semblance of a service network as well. But the system is seeing some unlikely pressure these days.

MUCH OF it is coming from the companies themselves, who have been attempting to maintain sales volume by shipping large quantities of cars to the big rental fleets, thus short-cutting the retail markup and adding a substantial discount for big fleet orders to boot.

By itself, this cuts a substantial volume out of the retail franchise system. But it also means that the cars will return in a year or so as even-more-heavily discounted used cars, sold in blocks by either the rental companies, or in some cases by the auto companies themselves.

It is, of course, dirty pool if you happen to have a substantial investment in a retail franchise, which supposedly means in principal that you won't be competing directly with the wholesale supplier.

On the other hand, the fleet sales game has kept Chrysler, notably, afloat since anyone can remember. It's no coincidence that the recently retired chief marketing guy at Chrysler, Ben Bidwell, was a former top gun at Hertz.

Curiously, while the practice of undercutting the dealer network is disquieting to dealers, it results in some tremendous savings for consumers, since they can buy a low-mileage car minus both the retail markup and the first-year depreciation.

The pressure coming from fleet sales is destabilizing the market and has the unfortunate side effect of also putting downward pressure on used car prices, thus hurting trade in values.

All of these are the kinds of things you would expect in a business recession, however. In fact, it is the way the real world reacts to cut prices in the face of the dismal demand for new cars these days.

In short, it is the downside of the same system that allows successful dealerships to rake in profits when times are good. At least some customers are benefiting, and that ultimately is what it will take to turn the current slide in retail sales around.

Dan McCosh is automotive editor of Popular Science magazine.

Colleges pump economy while educating students

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Higher education means big dollars as well as sense.

There's Oakland University in Rochester with an annual budget of $61.8 million, Lawrence Technological University in Southfield with a budget of $18-20 million and Madonna University in Livonia with a budget of $17.5 million.

Those three institutions, along with Walsh College in Troy, St. Mary's College in Orchard Lake and William Tyndale College in Farmington Hills provide some 2,400 jobs.

While colleges are exempt from property taxes, people with jobs there pay all kinds of taxes, buy houses, cars, appliances,food and other things associated with day-to-day living. And often right in the community.

"Higher education is a major industry in southeast Michigan," said Robert Ellis, provost at Lawrence Tech.

David A. Spencer, interim president at Walsh, added, "There are some folks aware of the impact, but more probably see it as a community service rather than economic development operations."

Sister Mary Francilene Van de Vyver, Madonna president, figures that her university annually pumps some $42 million directly and through dollar turnover into the economy.

"WE HAVE a mathematical formula the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities of Michigan has developed based on college revenue, student expenditures, college visits,' increased alumni earnings," she said.

"Obviously, our faculty and staff and school does a lot of purchasing in the area," said Edward Meyer, St. Mary's president. "I would say the vast majority of money out of this institution goes locally. I know we make an impact, but to pin it down would be tough."

Oakland University spearheaded development of the 1,100-acre Oakland Technology Park adjacent to its campus in the early 1980s, said Keith Kleckner, provost there.

"Tremendous dollars are getting pumped into the area," he said. "This will ensure the economic viability of Michigan's basic industry, the auto industry."

RESEARCH PROJECTS conducted at OU, especially on health-care issues, should lead to cost avoidance in the future, Kleckner added.

Ellis believes that a campus contributes more to a local economy than an industrial plant with the same number of workers due to the student factor.

"Most of our students do commute," he said. "Those who do use gas, eat lunches here. Restaurants around campus get an enormous amount of business from faculty and students.

"Lawrence Tech engineering students are very paramount at all major industrial and manufacturing companies in the area," Ellis said. "Engineers are out there generating knowledge, jobs and income for other people."

Spencer concurred. "As we produce graduates, they go out and create businesses, new jobs . . . and maintain growth in the community."

COLLEGES HAVE to survive to remain economic factors.

Together, OU, Lawrence Tech, Madonna, Walsh, St. Mary's and William Tyndale serve some 26,500 students pursuing degrees. All six of those institutions have been around a while. OU, which opened as a branch of Michigan State University in 1959, is the youngest.

The competition includes Wayne State University, University of Detroit Mercy, University of Michigan-Dearborn, Eastern Michigan University and the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, some a short drive from local campuses.

Central Michigan University and MSU also offer degree programs in O&E communities through extension classes.

The key is carving a niche, then getting that information out to prospective students.

COLLEGES STILL recruit at high schools and community colleges. But more and more focus on older, part-time, non-traditional students who earn while they learn.

"Because of diversity and the number of adult learners, there's a strong market as long as colleges relate to schedule needs, content needs and pricing needs," Van de Vyver said.

Madonna is especially known for its nursing program, Walsh, a concentrated approach to business, Lawrence Tech, for architecture and engineering.

"Eighty to 85 percent of our students are here because they heard about us from other students," Van de Vyver said. "Happy students will bring in other students."

St. Mary's is reluctant to accept an application from a prospective student unless meeting the candidate first, Meyer said. "It's silly for us to recruit a student if we can't prepare him.

"WE'RE A SMALL school . . . where research isn't so strong. We are a Catholic school. We market that. Students are drawn to that, drawn to the smallness (486) of the place. We have high standards. They want to be pushed," he said.

"We try to market ourselves as a university offering a broad background," Kleckner said. "Students don't know where they're going to end up, so all of our programs have a strong liberal arts background.

"We're sort of in the middle," he continued. "We don't have as many programs as Ann Arbor or Michigan State, but more than a small place like Walsh or Madonna that is much more specialized."

Price isn't the major reason most students settle on a particular college or university, administrators agree.

"One fact we find in research is price is the third or fourth determinant," Spencer said. "First is program, second is the institution's reputation or image. A real close third is location."

Education advice sought

"Some people get the breaks; others make their own."

Mike and Jo Austin are beginning to face the harsh realities of college costs for their two children, Jill, who will be finishing her sophomore year in high school, and Ted, who is just completing his freshman year. A modest income and and other financial pressures have kept them from saving more than a modest amount for future college costs. They wonder what steps they should be taking now to allow their children the opportunity of attending the college of their choice.

The Austins have managed their financial resources relatively well over the past 20 years. Mike, 43, is a construction foreman and earns $39,000 per year. Jo is 42 and has remained home with the children, but she is thinking of going back to work as a receptionist to help pay for some of the college bills. This possibility will be discussed in a subsequent article.

They live in a comfortable house in Westland and have done a good job of setting a solid financial foundation. Mike's employer has a good insurance package of covering life and disability, and Mike has personal life insurance coverage of $250,000.

Mike insisted years ago that they establish an emergency nest egg. Despite the temptation a number of times to use this money to pay off debts or make a major purchase, it has grown to more than $15,000 and is currently in a certificate of deposit at a local bank.

THEIR FINANCIAL condition will receive a boost in June when they expect to receive a significant inheritance from Jo's mother, who recently died. They expect to receive $50,000. This was the catalyst that motivated them to write to us.

They were mulling over whether to use the inheritance to provide for Jill's and Ted's educational needs. But Jo's mother had specifically requested that the money be retained by Jo and used to ensure her personal future financial security.

They also believe that this money will be needed at retirement since Mike has no pension plan at work. The only retirement plan in place is a 401(K) savings plan that became available to Mike three years ago and which he immediately joined at the rate of 5 percent of his salary.

Financial Strengths:

- ✔ Some regular savings in place through 401(k) plan.
- ✔ Have sufficient emergency reserves.
- ✔ Appropriate estate plan in place.
- ✔ Insurance coverages are adequate.
- ✔ Inheritance provides nice boost to assets.

Financial Weaknesses:

- ✔ Minimal savings for upcoming educational costs.
- ✔ Mike has no pension plan at work.
- ✔ Little thought given to future planning until recently.
- ✔ Assets improperly positioned to obtain college financial aid.

FAMILY FINANCES

To use this inheritance and nest egg for college costs would turn a college funding problem into a retirement problem. They ask, "We know that it is asking to have our cake and eat it too, but is there any way we can protect this asset and still provide significant help with our children's educational costs? You need to know that we put a high priority on providing the children with a good education."

First, let's review the cost of college education. Jill is an excellent student and would like to go to a small private college in the Midwest. She has looked at Albion College and Miami University of Ohio, but it appears that those institutions may be far out of grasp financially.

The cost is $15,000 per year now, and it could well be $20,000 per year by the time she enters college. Ted has had his eye on going to Michgian State University ever since he was in late elementary school. As a result, his costs would be about half of Jill's, or about $7,500 per year in current dollars.

BOTH CHILDREN plan to work at summer jobs to add to the $5,000 savings accumulated over the years from gifts and odd jobs. They are somewhat aware of their family's financial limitations.

An important point for the Austins to understand is that the cost of the institution should not necessarily be the primary factor in their choice of college for the children. This concept is sometimes hard to grasp for families of modest means, but it does not make it any less true. There are usually ways to find enough money and aid for college expenses, even after the governmental belt-tightening of the past several years.

The Austins need to start their planning right away. Some of the actions they take this year or next may significantly effect financial aid available. The earlier the process is started, the more likely it is the children will be able to attend the institutions of their choice.

A basic concept for them to understand in applying for financial aid is the concept of financial need. Each family is expected to pick up a certain specific amount of college costs, called the "expected family contribution." This family contribution does not change based upon the cost of educational institution. If the family contribution is $4,000 at College A where yearly expenses are $3,500, the family contribution will also be $4,000 at College B, which may have an annual cost of $12,000.

FINANCIAL NEED is simply defined as the difference between the cost of the college and the expected family contribution. In the illustration, financial need at College A is zero, and it is $8,000 at College B. In this case, College B can help the Austins put together a financial aid package of $8,000. This aid package may be a combination of grants, scholarships, loans and work-study programs. It bears repeating that the family's expected contribution should be no larger than $4,000 regardless of the institution.

A major part of planning for college education costs can be pursuing strategies that reduce the expected family contribution. There are a number of significant strategies that the Austins can pursue to increase their eligibility for financial aid.

As a brief overview, we would suggest that the Austins consider repositioning certain assets (including the inheritance), take out a home equity loan to consolidate debt, con-

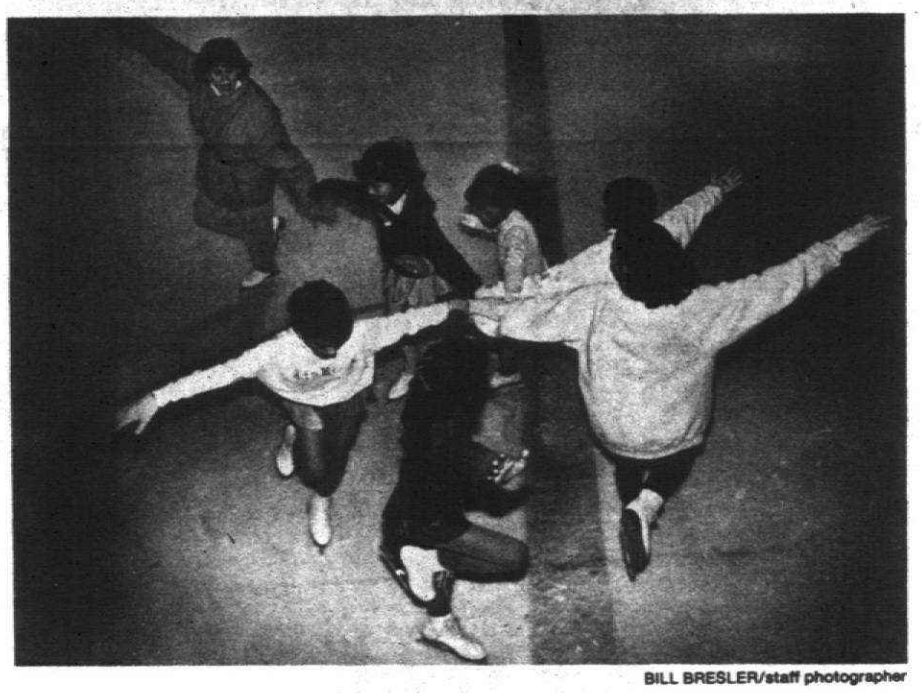
Ice skaters slide into spring in style



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Rachel Brown, Krista Skillman, Anjel Shehigian, Sarah Townsend, Molly Townsend and Ani Shehigian practice for their spring show under the watchful eye of teacher Barb Miller.

ICE SKATING isn't typically a springtime activity, but more than 200 skaters nevertheless plan to take to the ice this weekend.

The city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department will present its eighth annual ice show. Performances are scheduled 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 17, 1:30 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday, May 18, and 3 p.m. Sunday, May 19, at the Plymouth Cultural Center ice rink, 525 Farmer.

"It's kind of a reward at the end of the skating season," said Theresa McKendry, co-director of the "Celebration on Ice 91" show. The show will highlight the talents of students enrolled in the Plymouth Parks and Recreation skating program.

"They look forward to it all year long," said McKendry, a Canton resident. The show gives students a chance to show what they've learned.

Barb Miller of Plymouth is working with McKendry as co-director. The women work with other skating instructors at the Plymouth Cultural Center to present a topnotch show.

Performances are scheduled 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 17, 1:30 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday, May 18, and 3 p.m. Sunday, May 19.

THE SHOW will feature some advanced skaters who belong to the Plymouth Figure Skating Club and participate in competition. Basic skills students also will perform.

Preschoolers through adults will skate this weekend.

"We get a pretty good crowd," McKendry said. The arena's been close to full for shows in previous years. The community has a number of strong skaters, and that helps to attract people to the show, she said.

Friends and family members of the skaters come each year. They don't consider it unusual to watch skaters perform in May.

"Actually, no. I think a lot of people are interested in it. A lot of people seem to be really interested in the sport."

Skating classes are offered through the summer at the Cultural Center and have been popular, she said. Skaters who compete continue to practice during the summer.

Show skaters have been rehearsing for about six weeks, and are looking forward to their time on the ice. Neither McKendry nor Miller will skate in the show, but their weekend won't exactly be a leisurely one.

"We're too busy coordinating everything," McKendry said.

Ticket price for the "Celebration on Ice 91" show is $3 for adults, $1.50 for children age 12 and younger and for senior citizens. Tickets are available in advance at the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department, Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer, during weekday business hours. Tickets will also be sold at the door. For information, call 455-6620.

AAUW sale a (Danielle) Steel for some readers

By Julie Brown
staff writer

A book doesn't have to be written by a Shakespeare or a Chaucer to surface at the annual book sale of the Plymouth Branch, American Association of University Women.

"Oh, no," said Lynne Homes, an AAUW member who's working on the used book sale. "We have everything."

Books by such popular authors as Sidney Sheldon and Danielle Steel will be sold, as will classics by Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck, Pearl S. Buck and others.

This year's sale will be Friday, May 31, and Saturday, June 1, in the gym at Starkweather Center, 550 N. Holbrook in Plymouth's Old Village. Hours will be from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. Saturday will be half-price day.

"A mystery lover's heaven this year," said Homes, a Plymouth Township resident. "We've got lots and lots of mysteries."

ROMANCE NOVELS by such authors as LaVyrle Spencer and others will be sold during the two-day event. Proceeds will be used for student scholarships.

"It's one of two major fund-raisers we have, the other being the play," said Carol Davis of Plymouth Township, an AAUW member involved in the sale. Each year, branch members stage a play for local children.

"The book sale is just a wonderful opportunity for bargains," said Davis. Many hardcover books originally priced at $20 or more will go for a few dollars. Paperback bargains will be available, with choices to suit just about all reading tastes.

AAUW members work on pricing and sorting books all year long. They tend to toss a few titles they consider too raunchy.

This is the 37th annual sale, and the event has been popular through the years. In the past, some book-lovers have been lined up at the door for the opening day of the sale.

"So yes, they do like to read," said Davis, who also serves on the Dunning-Hough Library board in Plymouth.

IN RECENT years, branch members have held a smaller-scale paperback sale during the Plymouth Fall Festival. Proceeds from the used book sales provide scholarships for women who are returning to school.

Plymouth-Canton Community Education, the University of Michigan, Michigan State University, Wayne State University, Eastern Michigan University, Madonna University and Schoolcraft College are among schools receiving support from the sale.

Books are sorted by general category at the sale each year, although book-lovers are on their own when it comes to finding individual titles. There will be 26 categories, "one for each letter of the alphabet," Homes said. "This gym will be full."

Davis has found that people look for certain things at the sale.

"Cookbooks, cookbooks go really quickly," she said. Children's books are perennial favorites, as are biographies and sports/games books.

"The Satanic Verses" by Salman Rushdie, the book that caused such a flap a while back, turned up among items donated for this year's sale. Books are donated throughout the year. A drop box is stationed in the Dunning-Hough Library for donated books.

Some records will be offered for sale, and some old and rare books will be available.

This is the first year the sale will be held at Starkweather, and organizers hope to get the word out about the new location, on Holbrook in Plymouth's Old Village. Signs will indicate where to park on sale days.

Former band members tune-up for reunion concert

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Some former members of the Symphony Band and Concert Band at Centennial Educational Park are now members of the "30-something" generation — or a bit beyond.

It has been a few years since some picked up their musical instruments, but they remember how enjoyable it was to play. That's why the musically inclined alumni decided to have a reunion weekend.

Former band members will perform 3 p.m. Sunday, May 26, in Kellogg Park, Ann Arbor Trail at Main in downtown Plymouth. The concert will be moved to Plymouth Salem High School's auditorium, on Joy west of Canton Center in Canton, if it rains.

"We're really looking forward to it," said Betty Smith, a co-chairwoman for the reunion. "It'll be a fun weekend filled with a lot of good music."

THE CONCERT, offered free of charge, will be co-sponsored by the city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department.

Several of the committee members got things going, said Smith, who teaches physical education at East Middle School in Plymouth. Graduates Tracy Massel, Jack Overhiser and Lew and Karen Burton thought such a reunion weekend would be a great idea.

An alumni picnic took place a few years ago in conjunction with a Marching Band reunion. Jim Griffith, director of bands at CEP, encouraged the other band students to organize such an event.

"I volunteered after it got going," said Smith, a 1978 Plymouth Salem High School graduate.

ORGANIZERS SENT out invitations and heard from about 80 graduates who "would be willing to dust off their cases and give it a go, give it a whirl.

"We were pleasantly surprised. For the committee members, it was encouraging. It'll be exciting, it'll be real exciting."

Organizers heard from many former band members who live in southeastern Michigan; in some cases, they weren't aware those graduates still lived in the area. Some plan to travel from more distant communities. Smith's brother, 1975 graduate Bob DeLano, lives in Virginia and will come to the reunion weekend.

For Jim Griffith's former musicians, it'll be deja vu all over again as Plymouth-Canton graduates gather to stage a free concert in Kellogg Park.

Others will come from New Jersey, Minnesota, California and other states. A Plymouth High School graduate from the late 1960s plans to attend. Most participants graduated between 1974 and 1979 or thereabouts.

MUSICIANS WILL begin the weekend with a Friday, May 24, rehearsal, followed by a social get-together. Saturday, May 25, will include about five hours of rehearsal time, followed by Sunday morning rehearsal "if the powers that be decide we need it," Smith said.

After the May 26 concert, a dinner party for alumni and spouses will take place. A Monday, May 27, family picnic is planned at Plymouth Township Park for those who can stay the extra day.

Some musicians have called in advance to get the music so they can practice. Organizers polled alumni on what they remembered best and wanted to play again.

The concert will include "Russian Christmas Music" by Reed and "Broadway Curtain Time" by Krance, two alumni favorites, along with a number of other selections.

"We've emphasized the fact that some of us might have to spend a little time practicing," said Smith, who grew up in Plymouth and now lives in Brighton. "We do have a number of professional musicians."

Some have remained active in the Plymouth Community Band or other musical groups.

THE ALUMNI will perform under the direction of Jim Griffith, who has been with the school district since 1957.

"I'm looking forward to it, I really am," said Griffith, CEP director of bands.

He doesn't plan to take it easy during rehearsals.

"Oh, absolutely. I'm going to give them more grief," he said. "I want to make them feel right at home.

"I'm sure they want to come back and make some beautiful music. We'll all work together to that end."

THE GRADUATES will be busy rehearsing and performing, but will find time to do some visiting. They'll talk about "kids, what we do, our careers and I'm sure a number of 'I remember this' stories," Smith said.

Most of the graduates played their final high school concert in Kellogg Park, so the weekend will bring back memories, she said. It's also beneficial for current students to see that friendship — and musical ability — can last through the years.

Marching Band alumni have returned to CEP through the years to perform at football games, Griffith said. Current students see them and realize that their involvement in the band meant a lot.

"I'm sure that that's had an impact," he said. "I don't think it's lost on them at all."

For information, call Karen Burton, 453-2475.

French students find adventure on trip to area

By Julie Brown
staff writer

MANY CHILDREN visit the Plymouth Historical Museum each year, but few travel all the way from France.

Youngsters from France did travel a few miles — or kilometers — to visit the museum last week. They're from Ormesson, outside of Paris, and are visiting the community as part of the French Back-to-Back program.

The 30 children arrived May 1 and are staying with Plymouth-Canton families during their three-week visit. They'll head home May 22.

"Oh, very nice," Eric Piedfer, teacher for the group, said of the warm welcome they've received. "It's a dream for us. All parents and teachers are very nice. The mood is very comfortable, very nice."

A Back-to-Back program has been held in the Plymouth-Canton community for the past several years. French children visit the community, attend classes at a local school and do some sightseeing.

THE VISITORS stay with families during their visit. As part of the program, a group of local children then travels to France.

About 25 youngsters will visit Ormesson this June and July. They'll stay with the same French child they hosted in May.

Hoben Elementary School in Canton is the host school for this year's program. The French children are attending classes at Hoben. One day a week, children attend classes at their host child's school.

The travelers have visited a number of places, including Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn.

"We were very impressed by the cars, the planes and especially the steam locomotive," Piedfer said.

They enjoyed hearing the explanations of auto production and the assembly line as envisioned by Henry Ford. A Frenchman, Andre Citroen, was a contemporary of Ford's and had similar ideas about technological progress and social progress going hand in hand, Piedfer said.

"These two men are very near, very close."

Children have visited the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum and the Plymouth Historical Museum. They followed their Thursday, May 9, trip to the Plymouth museum with a stop for ice cream at Cloverdale's in Plymouth.

MOST OF THE French children are 10 or 11. Their teacher hasn't seen much evidence of homesickness.

"It depends. Some are more homesick," Piedfer said.

He's had some help in taking care of the children. His parents, Gerard and Jackie Piedfer, are traveling with the group as counselors.

"Oh, I think people are so nice," Jackie Piedfer said. "Parents are so involved in this program. They did a lot with them."

The children haven't learned too much English yet, she said, although they have learned some basic phrases to help them get by.

"It's so lovely to see French and Americans to speak together." The language barrier doesn't keep participants from communicating, she said.

This is the first time in the United States for most of the children, and they've seen a few differences.

"What was very surprising for the children was the big cars," she said. Houses in the United States are often larger than in Europe.

"We like. Very nice houses," she said.

This is Eric Piedfer's first trip to the U.S., although he has been to Canada previously.

"It's a great experience for me as teacher," Piedfer said. "It's quite different, very different."

HE'S NOTICED that Hoben Elementary School is quite modern. It was built just a few years ago and is the newest grade school in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

"Our schools are not so modern and well-organized," he said. There isn't as much administrative and clerical help available for educators in France, particularly at the elementary level.

The French visitors aren't the only people who are learning about a different country. American participants are learning as well.

Sarah Pong, an 11-year-old from Ormesson, is staying with the Ross family in Plymouth. Lynn Ross and her husband, Ron, are the parents of Kari Ross, 11, a fifth grader at Allen Elementary School in Plymouth. This is the first year the family's participated in the Back-to-Back program.

"It just sounded so exciting," said Lynn Ross, a psychologist in the Livonia Public Schools. "We just thought it would be a real growth opportunity.

"It's just been a wonderful, wonderful opportunity. I've seen all our youngsters mature."

They've enjoyed having Sarah stay with them.

"She's just absolutely delightful, she's just charming," Ross said.

Sarah's learned to speak more English throughout her stay. The two girls enjoy playing the piano together. Sarah's enjoyed roller skating at the Skatin' Station in Canton and other fun-filled activities.

The two families have been communicating since last November, so Sarah knew a little bit about what to expect. Kari Ross will be among local children traveling to France next month.

"She's very independent and very outgoing, and is just looking forward to the adventure," Lynn Ross said. "She can hardly wait to study French in high school."

Neither Ross nor her husband speak French.

"We rely on our daughter totally," she said with a smile.

BAHA'I FAITH

All the people of the world are buried in the graves of nature, or are slumbering, heedless and unaware. Just as Christ saith: "I may come when you are not aware. The coming of the Son of Man is like the coming of a thief into a house, the owner of which is utterly unaware."

Church music directors are fast becoming like baseball players who know to bunt; politicians who don't break promises and gas station attendants who wipe the windshield and check the oil.

A dying breed.

Concert pianist Gerald Goslin estimates 20 churches in the area are currently without music directors. "Unfortunately, it's getting worse," said Goslin, who lives in Redford.

Of course, Garden City Presbyterian isn't one of them.

The adjunct professor in both piano and voice at Oakland Community College arrived in February at the church near the corner of Ford and Middlebelt. GC Presbyterian was without a permanent music director.

Several people filled in in the interim, but the position was far too important to let slide with temporaries.

"(People) don't recognize what would happen if there wasn't any music," said the Rev. Gareth Baker, pastor of Garden City Presbyterian Church. "If you took it away, the service would be dead . . . I think it's taken for granted."

Enter Goslin, who is a highly regarded concert pianist and raised in the Presbyterian church. More importantly, he's been music director at several churches, most recently for two years at Southwestern United Presbyterian Church in Detroit.

ALREADY IN just a few months since Goslin arrived, Baker said there is consistent attendance by choir members and a better variety in the music.

The longtime pastor of the church paints a picture of a musical director who possesses an odd combination of perfectionism and patience.

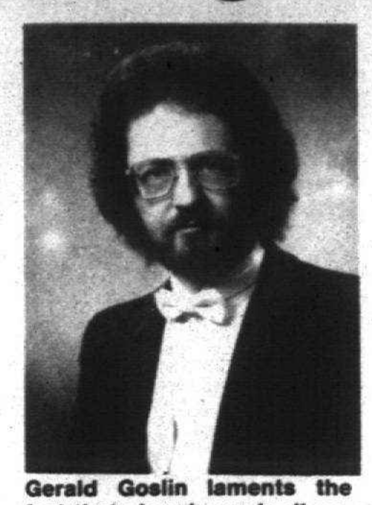
"I guess I would say, musically, he's very enthusiastic," Baker said. "He wants it to be perfect. He wants to do his part right and he wants everyone to do their part right. He's always trying to improve.

"He's willing to give extra time in order for someone to become better."

The quest for excellence doesn't stop at the church steps. Goslin's managers, Brian Harris and Shane Taugher, relate how 18-hour practice sessions on the keyboards are not uncommon for Goslin.

Goslin's Redford quad-level home has four pianos, including a restored 1891 Steinway, two church organs and a harpsichord. His wife, Margaret Goslin, is music director at First Baptist of Ferndale and works with the Livonia Schools.

"She's on level four and I'm on level three. There's little (sound) bleed through at the house," he said.



Gerald Goslin laments the fact that church music directors are decreasing in number.

Somehow Goslin finds time to give private lessons in piano, voice and music theory in addition to performing on the concert circuit.

He's also released two albums, one is of sacred music and the other a piano solo LP. The piano solo, "Magic of the Masters," is available at Dearborn Music.

GOSLIN BEGAN taking piano lessons at age 4½; started on the organ soon after. His involvement in music stems to Westminster Church in Detroit where there were 19 pianos and seven organs. He would play the organ for Sunday school classes and sang in the youth choir.

"You're there to help people worship God," said Goslin, explaining his role as a church music director. "Outside of the church, when you're in concert, you're more of a performer.

"I think everything a Christian does is a service to God. When you're in church, it's more directed at God."

At Garden City Presbyterian, Goslin directs the adult, children's, men's and women's choirs and the Brass Ensemble. He also has to coordinate the anthems with the sermons planned by the pastor.

"Some of the themes, you have to look really hard . . . I've never had a Sunday where I wasn't able to find something."

Part of the reason is the staff at Garden City Presbyterian is quite organized and the people are friendly, according to Goslin. Also, there's a strong base of young couples, something that appears to be missing with mainline denominations.

But Goslin believes something else is amiss at some churches.

"I've always felt Christian musicians should be the best," Goslin said.

moral perspectives
Rev. David Strong

One of the great values of the area in which we live is good housing. Our homes are important to us. The dream for people in the Detroit area is to own your home. Individual home ownership has been strong. It has also been a powerful force for building community.

We all realize that it is getting more and more difficult for young families to move into a home of their own. We have heard something about the homeless in our country. What we do not hear about is people who work but cannot afford a home.

More and more people in America are renting at prices they cannot afford. They may never be able to afford a home of their own. According to the Economic Policy Institute in Washington, D.C., 78 million Americans cannot afford the housing in which they are living. The shocking thing is that our nation is less and less committed to addressing this problem.

ALL OF THE current economic trends reduce the probability that our nation will have affordable housing. The recession reduces the chance that private interests will build low-cost housing. The banks are not eager to lend money for this kind of purpose. The federal and state governments have reduced their investment in housing.

Ten years ago, the federal government spent $1 on housing for every $7 it spent on the military, according to The Christian Science Monitor. Now the ratio is $1 to $44. We in America just do not care if people can afford to live in a decent home.

While the homeless and almost homeless try to cope in the Detroit area, we hear that there are 35,000 homes which are abandoned but could be lived in. The political climate in both our city and state favors money-making schemes and sports stadiums but not decent housing.

Rehabilitating homes is not a priority. Where will this lead us? How bad does the problem have to get before there will be political pressure to address this critical problem?

Religious people should care. People become righteous about a war in the Middle East; at the same time, we refuse to acknowledge the economic and social changes that are making decent homes impossible for so many. Could most of us who have a decent home afford to buy it today?

I BELIEVE that there is a moral and religious blindness in too many people today. "Am I my brother's or sister's keeper?" Many people answer "No!"

How does this live itself out with regard to building community, preventing people from turning to crime, or aiding the next generation? If we ignore housing and continue in this direction I believe we will reap awful rewards.

The Detroit area has a great and long tradition of good homes. We have a heritage and a stewardship to uphold. Even more, we have a responsibility to our whole society, especially to the next generations to give them a chance to live a decent, full life.

We need a change in our attitudes. We need a change in what we define as a religious issue. We need compassion for the plight of so many in our nation.

The Rev. David T. Strong is pastor of Central United Methodist Church in Detroit.

Area residents elected to board

Several Plymouth-Canton area residents were recently elected to the board of directors for the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council. Elections were April 30 at the council's annual meeting.

Jenny Weir of Canton and Elizabeth Johnson, Amelia Chan and Allison Partain of Plymouth will serve on the board.

Johnson and her husband, Ted, are attorneys. She has been active in the Plymouth-Canton Jaycees, Plymouth Historical Society and the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. Johnson is a member of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

This will be Johnson's second term on the board.

Amelia Chan is an assistant dean in the Eastern Michigan University College of Business. She and her husband, David, have four grown children. Chan's interests include travel, music, arts and antiques.

Weir has been a Girl Scout since the first grade, and is a member of Senior Troop 501. She is a student at Plymouth Canton High School and will serve as a girl adviser on the board.

She has gone on a number of trips as a Girl Scout, and enjoyed meeting Canadian Guides in Niagara Falls, making new friends at National Center West, and meeting British and Canadian Girl Guides during American Adventure.

The Huron Valley Girl Scout Council serves parts of Wayne, Monroe, Washtenaw and Livingston counties. Its offices are in downtown Ypsilanti.

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON—A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Researchers in Europe found that an ingredient in the aptly named produce Food Source One actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in intestinal absorption of calories.

While the development of Food Source One, a project of National Dietary Research, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the discovery has been a windfall for overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds, but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 15 days on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One is available through physicians and pharmacies without a prescription because it is not a drug and contains only natural ingredients already known to be safe. Copies of the referenced style are available free from National Dietary Research, Suite 553, 1377 K St., Washington, DC 20005, however, please include $2 Postage & Handling for each request.

Novelist weaves international intrigue

S.K. Wolf
mystery writer

☐ Meet Livonia author Barbara Hood Burgess, 5D

By Steve O'Leary
special writer

As her Livonia neighbors go about their work as accountants, bankers, salespeople or whatever, Sarah Wolf Shoemaker has other things on her mind.

S.K. Wolf, novelist, sweats over what would happen if the grandson of a Russian premier, as well as the son of the editor of Pravda, walks up to the door of an American embassy in a small African nation seeking asylum.

He says the film cannisters he's holding can prove valuable, and deadly if handled wrong, since it shows American and Soviet operatives working together with African rebels to overthrow an American-supported regime.

That was the starting point for Wolf's last book, "The Harbinger Effect," recently out in paperback from Ivy Books.

The agency worker who decides to help is young (aren't they all?), attractive Molly Davidson, who, when she learns the KGB and CIA are, shall we say, unhappy with her and would like her, like defector Yuri Klebanoff (also, no doubt, young and handsome) and the information they have, buried forever.

"The Harbinger Effect" was Wolf's first foray into international espionage. Her first book, published in 1987, was more of a traditional thriller, fast-paced and exciting with good characterization in the vain of MacDonald, Kienzle and Collins.

HER LATEST has just been released in hardcover from Simon & Schuster. "They (the publishers) seem to be solidly behind this book, which is something, because you'd think all of their time would be taken up by Kitty Kelly's book on Nancy Reagan. It's good to know I'm not forgotten," she said with a chuckle as she signed copies of "MacKinnon's Machine" at Coopersmith's booksellers in Livonia May 4.

S.K. Wolf will be a guest author at the Metro Detroit Book & Author Society Spring Book & Author Luncheon Monday, May 20, at Fairlane Manor in Dearborn.

"I'm hoping that this will be my 'breakthrough' book," she said. "I'm very optimistic about the new book. It's gotten terrific reviews everywhere. Television and movie people have already shown interest. This looks like it could be the one!"

The publisher has shown so much faith in her ability to sell that another major hardcover is set to be released next year. "It'll be titled 'Blowback,' will be another in the international espionage genre and, well, that's all I'll Arts council executive director Kathryn Savitskie displays architectural renderings of a renovated Plymouth Mills. The architects estimate the renovation cost at $685,000.

The Plymouth Community Arts Council and Kathryn Savitskie, its executive director (above), hope to renovate historic Plymouth Mills. The second floor would be subdivided into art classrooms and studios.

Plymouth Mills: It's forecast as new arts center

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

THE FUTURE home of the Plymouth Community Arts Council rests on a historic site, one of Henry Ford I's water-powered village industries, now called Plymouth Mills (Wilcox Yard).

–The yellow building — with peeling paint, dark red trim and broken glass panes boarded over — lies on a crest overlooking Wilcox Lake. The Rouge River runs directly beneath the 68-year-old mill.

"We want to keep the feel of this old, historic mill," said Kathryn Savitskie, arts council executive director. "We are reclaiming it, bringing it back."

With the mustard-colored, concrete-block building, the arts council hopes to build bridges outward to western Wayne County's communities and businesses.

"We're very interested in all our neighboring communities," Savitskie said. "We want to start fostering the arts, and strengthen the whole arts community."

'We want to give more exposure to all the arts and, in so doing, make the community a place where people want to live.'

— Carolyn Simons

THE ARCHITECTURAL firm, Quinn-Evans of Ann Arbor, estimates the cost of renovating the 4,200-square-foot mill at $685,000.

"We want to work with area contractors and break this down into steps, increments of revisions that can be afforded as we go along," Savitskie said. "The best-case scenario is that we could complete it (the renovations) in six months."

Once renovation is done, the historic mill's first floor will Left: "When it comes to sustaining life, we go to the fields," Henry Ford I said. "Factory and farm should have been adjuncts, one of the other and not as competitors. With one foot in industry and one foot in agriculture, America is safe." With this in mind, Ford developed 20 village industries in rural areas of the Rouge, Huron and Raisin river valleys between 1918 and 1944.

OL' HENRY might not recognize it. But he'd probably crow about it.

Converting the old Plymouth Plant, one of Henry Ford I's village mill industries, into an arts center would make it much more of a community resource than its current use as a county parks maintenance garage.

And a community resource is precisely how Ford envisioned it when he opened the mill in 1923.

A MASTER innovator, Ford offered farmers jobs at small branch plants within their communities "to ensure the values and experiences of the rural way of life." Ford fiddlers even served up country tunes at community square dances.

Between 1818 and 1944, 20 such branch plants went up in the Rouge, Huron and Raisin river valleys to offer industrial work during the slack season for farmers.

The design of these water-power plants, many adaptive restorations of 19th-century grist mills, reflected Ford's love for nature, history and technology.

The still-sturdy but drab-looking Plymouth Plant was named to the state historic register in 1989.

IF THE $685,000 restoration estimate can be raised as arts financing is plunging, and if the architectural phase-in plans indeed prove workable, the mill could make an ideal center for the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

Everything from offices and classrooms to an exhibit gallery and a rental/consignment shop are envisioned.

I'll reserve final judgment until fund-raising kicks into full swing and programming for the center takes shape.

But with Wilcox Lake across the road, I will say that a spruced-up historic site at the corner of Wilcox Road and Edward Hines Drive could well turn the crossroads into an eye-catching eastern gateway to Plymouth.

Arts to highlight 'A Day at the Mill'

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

Plymouth Community Arts Council members invite you to join them Friday, May 17, for "A Day at the Mill," at their future home, soon-to-be-renovated Plymouth Mills, popularly called Wilcox Mill.

The arts-filled day begins at noon and runs to 5 p.m.

Musicians, artists and historians will join hands to introduce the planned new home of the arts council.

Pottery and printmaking demonstrations, art exhibits, hands-on art activities, face painting and free refreshments will combine to make this a special day full of fun and excitement for the entire family.

"We're presenting 'A Day at the Mill' to showcase our new home," said Kathryn Savitskie, arts council executive director.

"There will be an exhibit by the Plymouth Historical Museum on the history of Wilcox mill, musicians and art from the Rental Gallery," Savitskie said.

"We're going to set up a display that shows the original mill," said Beth Stewart, Plymouth Historical Museum director. "We'll also have some of the actual products made at the mill."

CHRISTA GRIX, harpist, will perform 3:30-4:30 p.m. Grix, a professional musician, recently performed with Johnny Mathis, with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and in the recent Michigan Opera Theatre production, "Ariadne auf Naxos."

She earned a master's of music degree from Boston University and a bachelor of music degree from Michigan State University.

Grix acts as administrative assistant to the Plymouth Symphony and coordinates the Music in the Park summer concert series sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

On the program for Grix's performance is "Canon in D" by Pachelbel, "Concerto in B flat" by Handel and excerpts from "Phantom of the Opera" and "Les Miserables."

The Wilcox mill project is important because "the Plymouth Community Arts Council needs a home to expand its programs so that not only visual artists, but musicians as well as other performers can find a place to be creative," Grix said.

"The mill could bring more visibility to the community and the arts," Stewart said. "I think this could be a tourist attraction instead of being forgotten."

THE "A Day at the Mill" program includes:

- noon to 12:30 p.m. — Green Elementary School Band, Mary Kleam, director.
- 1-1:30 p.m. — Clarinet Octet, Centennial Educational Park students.
- noon to 3:30 p.m. — National Art Honor Society students from Centennial Educational Park, Kris Darby, teacher, pottery and printmaking demonstrations.
- 3:30-4:30 p.m.— Christa Grix, harpist.
- noon to 5 p.m. — Local artists, Sharon Lee Dillenbeck, oil and watercolor; Julie Giordano, oil; Bladen McClelland, pastels; Donald Getschman, photography; Mary Getschman, oils; Jim DeArmond, oil and watercolor; Hugh Burley, oil; Phyllis Hocklowski, watercolor; Joan Thayer, oil and watercolor.
- noon to 5 p.m. — Exhibit coordinated by Plymouth Historical Museum with historical background of Wilcox Mill, including examples of products manufactured at the mill. Audrey Crain, Beth Stewart.

certain gallery space for the art rental program as well as art for purchase. The gallery might even be suitable for chamber concerts.

Upstairs, classrooms for art instruction combine with studios, which lend themselves to painting, sculpture and pottery capabilities.

"A glass and brick addition to the building is for a barrier-free entrance and will house the elevator and stairwell," Savitskie said.

SINCE ITS founding in 1969, the Plymouth Community Arts Council has pursued the ideal of generating interest and appreciation for the arts. It works within a budget of $41,000.

The Art Lady program brings art into local schools. Music in the Park fills Plymouth's Kellogg Park with strains of beautiful music every summer.

The arts council holds competitions for scholarships in the arts each year. And it hosts cultural enhancement tours to art meccas such as Pewabic Pottery and Du-Mouchelle's Art Galleries in Detroit.

The Art Rental Gallery is on the second floor of the Dunning-Hough Library on Main Street.

The main office of the Plymouth Community Arts Council is in cramped quarters on the second floor above Fred Hill Haberdashers on Main Street.

"We want to consolidate the Art Rental Gallery and all our programs under one roof," Savitskie said.

A MILL has occupied the corner of Wilcox Road and Edward Hines Drive since 1850, when Henry Holbrook bought the property from a Mr. Rogers. In 1921, Henry Ford I bought the mill from David Wilcox, who had owned and operated it since 1879.

In a booklet on Plymouth written in 1898, the Wilcox mill was said to have the capacity of processing 125 barrels per day. Using water and steam power, the mill ground wheat into Magnolia straight grade flour.

Henry Ford, industrialist and revolutionary thinker, razed the mill to build one of his water-driven village industries. There, Ford Motor manufactured generator cutouts and later screw taps.

In 1948, Ford's widow, Clara, donated the then-closed mill to the county, which owned the surrounding Middle Rouge Parkway.

"Henry Ford always called it the Plymouth Plant," said Beth Stewart, Plymouth Historical Museum director. "It was state of the art for his time for two reasons: for trying to use water-power and for having a modern factory."

"The water-powered plants were based on Ford's idea to employ farmers during the winter season in village industries. "Ford loved the American farmer and wanted them not to be left out of technology and history," Stewart said.

"THROUGH THE years," Stewart said, "the mill has been called the Hardenberg Mill, Wilcox Mill and Plymouth Mill. Henry Ford put a lot of women to work (in the mills)."

The mill is now owned by the Wayne County Parks Division, which uses it as a maintenance garage.

"We have a cooperative agreement where we are leasing the mill relatively without charge to the Plymouth Community Arts Council," said Hurley Coleman, Wayne County Parks Division director.

The arts council signed a $1-a-year, 20-year agreement with Wayne County Parks with five-year increments after that.

For now, the parks division is "going to participate with the arts council in cleaning up the grounds," Coleman said. "We're also participating in writing a grant (to cover future landscaping costs) from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources."

PLYMOUTH MILLS (Wilcox Yard), as it's officially known today, is part of a historical trail project jointly being developed by the Wayne County Parks Division, Michigan Department of Transportation and Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane.

The project is called the "Ford Heritage Trails." The mill is part of the Rouge Valley route that follows a trail of Henry Ford's village industries along the Rouge River. Other trails follow village industries along the Huron and Raisin rivers.

"This mill happens to have a critical position in western Wayne County's history, not only automotive history but to manufacturing industries as a whole," Coleman said. "Western Wayne County is the seat of major manufacturing industries."

The arts council's major setback for now is funding.

"We've written one grant already with Wayne County called a recreation bond grant from the Michigan Natural Resources for a historical site within the parks," Savitskie said.

SAVITSKIE AND the arts council have spoken with the Kresge Foundation on obtaining money.

"Besides seeking block grants, we are going to seek funds from the Ford Foundation and Ford Motor Co. because it's part of their heritage," Savitskie said.

There is no doubt in president Carolyn Simons mind that Gov. John Engler's budget cuts have hurt the Plymouth Community Arts Council. The council has lost a $6,800 grant for the current budget year.

"We welcome everyone's support and help," Simons said. "We hope we're an enrichment to the community. We want to give more exposure to all the arts and, in so doing, make the community a place where people want to live.

"This has been thought about for a very long time. It's been a dream and hope of board members and council members," Simons said. "We're going to take a garage and turn it into a viable place for the total community, something very new and exciting."

Novelist shares career pathways say about it, except that like all my books, they are unrelated to one another," Shoemaker said.

One of the extraordinary things that makes the writing career of S.K. Wolf so different is that unlike so many, she was never a co-called [illegible] struggling young artist. "I'm 54 years old," she said casually, as if it were not unusual to have your first novel published when you were 50.

This is the dust jacket of S.K. Wolf's "MacKinnon's Machine."

"Well, I was busy, raising kids and everything that comes along with that. When my oldest started school in 1969, I started writing seriously, if not full time. Believe me, it wasn't full time." That came years later.

TO SHOW for those years, Shoemaker has four unpublished novels: two mystery ("You know, whodunnit stuff") and two mainstream books.

"They were learning experiences, and there's only one that I want to try and salvage, with a complete rewrite of course, but there are some good ideas in that one," she said.

She reads many works for enjoyment, from "trashy novels" to works by her favorite mystery authors, Loren Estleman and Thomas Sullivan, who teaches at Fordson High School in Dearborn.

Shoemaker also taught at one time, in another state. "Also, I was never a highly lauded author during my teaching days as Tom is," she said with a laugh.

Sarah Wolf became Sarah Shoemaker when she got married. But her publisher, Simon & Schuster, one of the biggest houses in the world, became worried no one would buy a mystery novel written by a woman. So she dropped the Shoemaker (the name, not the husband), used her maiden name of Wolf, her first initial and the K "because I liked the sound of it!"

GOOD FICTION is hard to find, but the buzz on the streets these days is that "MacKinnon's Machine" is just that. It takes you on a roller-coaster ride through, among other places, New Zealand, Tel Aviv, Mexico, New York, Nicosia and Washington.

All of this takes place after retired British commando A.C. MacKinnon, who, like Wolf, is Scottish, finds out he has been training his troops to kill the wrong guys for years, but no more.

For $100,000, he slips 15 of his highly trained men into Libya to dispose of that country's loathsome dictator, Moammar Qaddafi. What happens? A lot.

For instance, after every "job well done," MacKinnon's employer tries to gun him down as he leaves by the front gate. Also, what does the "A" in his name stand for? And what exactly is MacKinnon's machine? And what of Qaddafi?

Read it and find out. It's a lot more enjoyable than having someone spill the beans on a well-written book that takes you on some unexpected turns.

"MacKinnon's Machine," by S.K. Wolf, Simon & Schuster, 315 pgs. $19.95

Dance program slated

A dance program at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, May 16-17, will culminate a year's work and study in modern dance and choreography by 70 dancers from the Cranbrook Kingswood Upper School.

"An Evening of Dance," directed by the school's dance instructor, will be at the Cranbrook Performing Arts Center, 520 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills. Tickets will be available at the door.

Jessica Sinclair, artist-in-residence last fall at the Tblisi Choreographic Institute in Tblisi, Georgia, in the Soviet Union, has choreographed a work based on her experiences there.

Greenmead to sport vintage privies

History group leads fund-raising

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

The Livonia Historical Society put some fun in fund-raising by selling chocolate outhouses, outhouse-shaped cedar birdfeeders and Privy Board buttons to raise enough cash to outfit Greenmead with two authentic vintage outhouses. To kick off the fund-raiser at a society meeting, the group also sold outhouse postcards and a special outhouse edition of "Good Old Days" magazine.

'You could say it was a theme meeting. We had prune bread with butter and crescent and moon-shaped cookies (symbols used on male/female outhouses) for refreshments.'
— Joanne Potter, history buff

When the folks at Greenmead Historical Village designed a master plan for the park, they covered every detail, including the placement of at least two authentic vintage outhouses.

But until Joanne Potter, corresponding secretary of the Livonia Historical Society, made outdoor plumbing a priority, obtaining the old privies took a back seat to the restoration of the park's 25 historic houses and buildings at Eight Mile and Newburgh.

Potter, maybe the area's only collector of outhouse paraphernalia, is serious about preserving the privies, but not above putting some fun in an ambitious fund drive to equip Greenmead with a couple of "necessary houses" or, ah . . . "facilities."

"Nobody can say the word 'outhouse' without grinning or saying something silly," said Potter of Livonia, who has a replica of an old outhouse in her back yard and a basement full of wooden and ceramic outhouses, which she affectionately calls collectibles.

BUT SINCE she doesn't take her hobby too seriously, Potter decided to commercialize the old rest stations by selling chocolate outhouses for $6, outhouse-shaped cedar birdfeeders at $20 each and Privy Board Buttons for $1 to raise money for Greenmead's own outhouses which, by the the way, will be for looks only.

"The outhouses will just make the park more authentic," Potter said.

Outhouses, the butt of jokes for centuries, are serious business to members of the Livonia Historical Society, who've raised more than $400 since March through the sale of outhouse novelties.

The outhouse fund drive started when Potter, a former antique dealer, decided it was time to outfit Greenmead with authentic outdoor plumbing.

She recruited members of the Privy Board and invited a Macomb County park ranger, an expert on the subject of outdoor rest stops, to a Livonia Historical Society meeting to talk about vintage outhouses.

Maybe the subject didn't draw a crowd, but it did result in generous orders for chocolate outhouses, two orders for birdfeeders and a fair amount of chuckling among the members.

"You could say it was a theme meeting," Potter said. "We had prune bread with butter and crescent and moon-shaped cookies (symbols used on male/female outhouses) for refreshments."

AND SINCE the latest census reports that 4.5 million year-round houses in the U.S. are without any or all indoor plumbing, it's not surprising that Potter has had four calls from local and out-of-state residents donating authentic outhouses to Greenmead. Two are in Livonia, one is near Fowlerville and another is in Vermillion, Ohio.

Potter plans to check the condition of the outhouses and hopes to bring at least two back to Greenmead by September.

"We've had a lot of fun with this," Potter said. "Anybody over 40 has an outhouse story from camp or vacation, so the fund drive has been well-received."

One woman, for example, bought chocolate outhouses for table favors for a formal dinner she's giving at her cabin in rural Michigan, where indoor plumbing is a luxury.

Another buyer ordered chocolate privies for members of her bike club, who know the location of every outdoor facility in the state.

Potter also has filled orders for red and green chocolate outhouses for Christmas and pink for Valentine's Day.

The Livonia Historical Society plans to . . . well . . . put the lid on its fund drive at the group's annual Heritage Fair on Sunday, June 2, at Greenmead. Place orders then or call Greenmead at 477-7375.

Any money not used to procure the privies will go toward the restoration of Greenmead's Alexander Blue House, an Italianate-style house built before 1850.

Art show fare: canvas creations

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

MORE THAN 25 artists will display paintings at the Visual Art Association of Livonia's annual spring show through May 29 at Livonia City Hall, 33000 Civic Center Drive (Farmington Road at Five Mile).

Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Admission is free.

VAAL, formed in 1973 by the Livonia Arts Commission, was set up to encourage community interest in the visual arts through shows, workshops and classes, said Marge Masek, the club's class coordinator.

Today, the group has about 80 members from Livonia, Northville, Westland, West Bloomfield, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Redford, Royal Oak, Plymouth and Dearborn.

"WE'LL HAVE many painting styles on exhibit this year," said VAAL president Irene Kallas of Dearborn Heights.

"Our members are serious, dedicated artists who continually take lessons from excellent art teachers."

Kallas, a former art teacher in the Detroit schools, also belongs to the Farmington Art Club, Pallet and Brush, Dearborn Arts and Crafts and the Ann Arbor Arts Association.

Her colorful painting, "Burst of Spring," won first place in the show's oil category.

VAAL OFFERS a variety of art classes for serious painters and is an excellent place to make contact with other working artists, said Toni Stevens, whose painting, "Rainbow Sale," won first place in the watercolor category.

Stevens, a retired teacher from Westland's Edison School, earned a bachelor of fine arts degree from Syracuse University, but let her own art work take a back seat to family and career until her retirement.

The Plymouth artist joined VAAL two years ago. She also belongs to Pallet and Brush and the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association.

THIS YEAR'S VAAL show, juried by Alice Nichols, a private art teacher from Farmington, includes collages and paintings done in oil, watercolor and mixed media.

The artwork, ranging from $65 to $450, may be bought by contacting the artist.

The winner of this year's Best of Show category is Eileen Bibby, Livonia, for her watercolor, "Autumn Beauty."

Other winners in the category of oils are Stanley Hench, Livonia, second place, and June Hillman, Livonia, third place.

Rhonda Harrison, Redford, won second place in the watercolor category, and Marge Masek, Livonia, took third place in the categories of watercolor and mixed media.

Other winners in mixed media are Beverly Johnson, Livonia, first place, and Kathleen Montgomery, Plymouth, second place.

Honorable mention awards went to Audrey Harkins and Mary Elhart, both of Livonia.

Besides ribbons, this year's winners earned $50 for Best of Show, $30 for first place, $20 for second place and $10 for third place.

Plant sale on weekend

Cranbrook Gardens' 19th annual spring plant sale will take place Wednesday-Thursday, May 15-16, at Cranbrook Greenhouse, 380 Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Hills.

Unusual house plants, orchids,, ferns, perennials, geraniums, herbs and Michigan wildflowers are some of many varieties, which will be available for purchase.

A special feature this year will be the painted containers available for purchase.

The sale, sponsored by Cranbrook Gardens Auxiliary, will be open to the public at no charge. Hours are: 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 15 and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday, May 16.

Free parking is available across Lone Pine Road in Christ Church Cranbrook parking lot. A free shuttle bus to the greenhouse and sale will be available.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to maintain and improve the 40 acres of gardens and grounds around Cranbrook House, the former home of Cranbrook founders George and Ellen Scripps Booth, and for upkeep of and improvements to the greenhouse.

Cranbrook House and Gardens are part of the Cranbrook Educational Community, comprising Cranbrook Academy of Art and Museum, Cranbrook Institute of Science and Cranbrook Schools.

For information, call 645-3149.

Institute charges admission

Visitors to the Detroit Institute of Arts are now paying admission, but the actual amount is for the visitor to determine.

Museum director Samuel Sachs II called this a "mandatory-discretionary" admission policy. He said the recommended amounts would be $4 per adult and $1 for students and children.

"In the present financial crisis, we must take every means to generate revenue, whether the results be great or small," Sachs said. "Our hope is to raise $200,000 in the first year from this change in admission policy. The total amount will help defray operating expenses, but $200,000 is less than 1 percent of our $26.5-million annual operating budget."

Budget cuts thus far have caused the museum to adopt a series of cost-effective measures, principally:

● Initiate a rotation schedule, with half the permanent collection galleries open 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.; the remainder open 1:30-5:30 p.m.

● Reduce the number of open days from a six-day to a five-day week, Wednesday through Sunday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

● Leave unfilled some 22 staff positions vacated by attrition and retirement.

● Make additional major budget reductions in exhibitions, programs and capital repairs.

Members of the Founders Society will be admitted upon showing a membership card.

Livonia author pens 'real life' novel for kids

Victoria Diaz

To the list of talented children's writers in Michigan (Joan Blos, Gilbert Cross, Zibby Oneal, Alfred Slote, etc.), add a new name: Barbara Hood Burgess.

It's not really accurate to call the Livonia author a "new writer." But she is newly published. Her first book, "Oren Bell," a set-in-Detroit novel for kids 8-12, appears in bookstores across the country this month.

The Horn Book, the pre-eminent review publication for children's literature, gave high marks to "Oren Bell", calling the book a "big-hearted, sprawling first novel . . . crammed full of the key elements of first-rate entertainment."

How did a Livonia grandmother-of-six come to write a book about a 12-year-old black boy (Oren Bell) who lives in the inner city with his hard-working mother, hard-drinking grandfather, two eccentric sisters and a ghost named Spiro?

IT STARTED about 20 years ago, when Burgess put together a musical for kids in her Livonia church group to perform. One thing led to another, and so enthusiastic was the response to the production, it went on a kind of tour of several metro area churches.

The pastor of a Cass Corridor church happened to catch a performance one day. Soon after, he asked Burgess if she would put together a similar show, working with a group of children at his church. Never one to pass up a chance to work with kids, the ex-teacher's aide said yes.

Almost 10 years later, as part of an independent human studies class she took at Schoolcraft College, she would write "Oren Bell," inspired by her experience working with the children at that inner-city church.

Did she base any of her unusually vivid characters on any specific individuals she came to know that summer?

"Not really," she said. "I think, if you're a writer, you usually don't write about anybody specific; instead, you sort of combine everybody you've ever known.

"Actually," she adds some time later, "if Oren is any one person, he's mostly me. I often write from a male point of view. Maybe it's because I have three sons. You're always so involved in their lives."

ACCORDING TO Burgess, many of the incidents in the book have been taken from real-life experiences, some of them involving those three sons and her one daughter as they grew up.

One such incident, which makes for a particularly moving segment in "Oren Bell," involves the birth and death of nine mortally ill puppies belonging to the children.

The coming-of-age tale is set mainly in a real-life, still-existing Detroit neighborhood, near Fourth and Hancock. One of Burgess' sons once worked as a police officer in Detroit's 13th Precinct. He lived next door to one of the city's deserted, condemned mansions, a house that figures prominently in Burgess' lively, ghost story.

When she first sent out "Oren Bell," hoping to see it published, the book met with rejection, although she did receive some positive comments. Thinking that perhaps she'd wasted her time, she decided to try her hand at romance writing for awhile.

But her one-and-only attempt at putting together a romance novel was rejected "by everybody," she said.

IT WAS, however, her interest in romance writing that would eventually bring about publication of "Oren Bell." Through the Romance Writers of America newsletter, she learned of a contest conducted each year by Dell Publishing, in which unsolicited works of fiction, for readers ages 12 and up, are considered for publication. (Otherwise, Dell does not look at unsolicited work.)

After some re-working of the manuscript, Burgess decided to send "Oren Bell" off to the contest.

She'd almost forgotten about it when, some months later, in the midst of the Christmas rush, she received a telephone call from a senior editor at Dell. She had not won the contest, he told her. Dell considered "Oren Bell" to be a book better directed toward the 8-12 age group. But if she were agreeable, Dell would like to publish the book for that group, he added.

"I almost fainted," Burgess said. "It was the strangest experience; I'd dealt with rejection so much that I think I'd gotten good at it. When the time came, I didn't quite know how to cope with an acceptance. He made me an offer immediately, which I somehow did manage to accept," she said.

SINCE THEN, Burgess has completed a second children's novel, "The Lake Loon Monster," now with her editor at Dell. Set in the heart of Michigan, it's a spooky, mysterious tale about a strange creature that appears in one of Michigan's inland lakes.

You can meet the first-time novelist at Borders-Novi, 7 p.m. Friday, June 14, where she'll sign copies of "Oren Bell."

Ann Arbor author Alfred Slote will also be on hand to autograph copies of his latest novel for intermediate readers, "Finding Buck McHenry."

LAST WORDS: Westland crime writer Rob Kantner has just signed a new deal with Harper Collins for books seven, eight and nine of the popular Ben Perkins private-eye series. The first book through Harper Collins, "The Quick and the Dead," is due out in July 1992.

Coming this August, from Bantam, is Kantner's sixth book in the Perkins series, "The Thousand Yard Stare." The story revolves around the 25th reunion of Ben Perkins' graduating class at Detroit's Redford High School, and a killer he's after who's been free for a quarter of a century.

Victoria Diaz is a book reviewer based in Livonia. Her column runs the first and third Thursdays of each month.

● DANCE CONCERT

Rosalind Jones of Farmington Hills will take part in the fourth annual Henry Ford Community College spring dance concert Thursday-Friday, May 16-17, as part of the Dearborn college's 1991 fine arts festival.

The free concert will feature college dancers and a special appearance by the Oakland Community College Detroit Dance Collective at 7 p.m. May 17. The fare will include a variety of ballet, jazz and modern works.

A highlight will be original piano compositions by jazz pianist and composer Vincent Mancinelli, performed live by Robert Conway, Detroit Symphony pianist and a chamber musician.

Show times are 2 p.m. May 16 and 2 and 7 p.m. May 17 in the Adray Auditorium of the MacKenzie Fine Arts Center.

● IN CONCERT

The Ford Chorus presents the music of Irving Berlin and Leonard Bernstein plus the variety hit "SRO" Friday-Sunday, May 17-19, at Ford World Headquarters Auditorium, Michigan Avenue and Southfield Road, Dearborn.

Hours are 8 p.m. Friday, 8 p.m. Saturday, and 3 p.m. Sunday.

For tickets, call 322-6602.

● AUTHOR SIGNING

Plymouth Township resident John Vraniak will sign copies of his book, "The Polish Trivia Book," 1-2:30 p.m. Saturday, May 18, at the Little Professor Book Center, Brighton Mall, 8387 Grand River. Call 227-3357.

● ARTISAN VISITS

Country Charm, a Plymouth shop specializing in fine gifts and decorative accessories, will host Jim Rowe, founder of Rowe Pottery, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 18.

Rowe began throwing pots in the old Blacksmith's shop (now Cambridge Village Forge in Cambridge, Wis.) in 1975. For many years, he operated a one-man shop producing contemporary studio salt-glaze stoneware.

In 1981, after studying the design and techniques of his earlier counterparts, Rowe and his wife, Tina, put together a line of traditional early American salt-glaze stoneware.

Today, Rowe Pottery and its staff of 100 produces authentic adaptations of 19th century, salt-glaze stoneware.

● PLANT SALE

The volunteer gardeners of the Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane will have a spring plant sale 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday-Sunday, May 18-19, to benefit continued restoration of the gardens.

On sale will be herbs, perennials, hanging baskets, greenhouse plants, water plants similar to those grown in the estate's rock garden pond and plants reminiscent of those once grown in the estate's greenhouse.

The estate is at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, Evergreen, between Ford Road and Michigan Avenue.

● LAMPWORKING DEMO

Plymouth resident Don Schneider will demonstrate lampworking — the art of glassblowing using a torch — 1-4 p.m. Sunday, May 19 at Detroit Institute of Arts Prentiss Court, 5200 Woodward.

He also will have examples of his furnace work: blown glass, earrings, beads.

His demonstration will be part of a Founders Society program, but is open to the public. There is a new museum admission fee.

● ART AUCTION

The Scarab Club annual art auction will be Sunday, May 19.

The silent auction will be 5-7 p.m. The live auction starts at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $25 per person (a $10 rebate may be applied to any art purchase). Contributions to the auction will be accepted by special arrangement.

The Scarab Club, at 217 Farnsworth in Detroit's Cultural Center, was founded in 1910 as a fellowship of the arts. It receives no government financing. The annual art auction is the primary fund-raiser.

Sales generated by contributions to this auction will be used to support ongoing programs and continuing restoration of the historic clubhouse. Call Darlene Carroll, executive director, 831-1250.

Sellers can save on traditional commissions

By Doug Funke
staff writer

You neither have to pay a commission of about 6 percent to an agent for selling your house nor tend to all the details yourself to pocket the savings.

Some firms will find a buyer and shepherd the paperwork during the sale for a flat fee or a much smaller percentage.

There is one catch — sellers have to show their houses to prospects.

"The biggest advantage as opposed to the old-fashioned Realtor is sellers are paying much less and receiving as much or more services and expertise," said J.R. Paine, owner of Home Marketing Specialists.

Her company, with offices in Southfield, Rochester, Fraser and Romulus, charges an up-front listing fee of $298, then $20.20 per $1,000 of the sales price at closing.

That totals $1,914 on a sale of $80,000 or 2.4 percent.

"We can offer a full line of services to the seller and save them thousands of dollars. That's the bottom line," said Mario Ferrante, marketing manager for a Help-U-Sell franchise in Plymouth.

His firm charges a flat fee at closing based on the sales price of the house — $2,250, for instance, on a sale of less than $80,000 and $2,950 on sales from $80,000 to $150,000.

A 6-PERCENT commission, fairly common in real estate transactions here, amounts to $4,800 on an $80,000 house.

Joel Schmidt had nothing but good things to say about the work of HMS. He listed in Farmington for $118,000 and sold for $114,000. Schmidt thought he had sold the house on his own a year earlier, but the deal fell through when the prospective buyer failed to qualify for a mortgage.

"They (HMS) sold my house in a hurry, in about a three-week time frame. They were very professional," Schmidt said. "It was worth the money to have them handle all the phone calls and paperwork."

It took Help-U-Sell only 24 hours to sell his house listed at $82,000 in Westland for $80,000, said Dennis Beaver.

"I really did struggle with (a decision to hire) a 6-7 percent (agent) to sell the house," he said. "I thought there's no reason we can't do some of the work ourselves like showing it. We needed someone to do the paperwork."

Both Ferrante and Paine described their firms as full-service brokerages.

"I GIVE market analysis, just like any other Realtor," Ferrante said. "I will list your property, supply signage. I do all the paperwork along the way through closing. I will guarantee classified advertising. They're guaranteed to be part of an exclusive marketing system."

"We find the buyers," Paine said. "We provide every service from listing to closing. We extensively advertise."

Paine and Ferrante disagreed with a popular belief that sellers, because they're too emotionally attached, shouldn't walk prospects through their houses.

"I hear every day from buyers how grateful they were to have the seller show the house," she said.

"We feel a seller knows more about his own particular home than a Realtor," he said.

Paine and Ferrante try to avoid the Multi-List Service, an advertising network, because its use results in higher sales commissions and expenses to the seller.

Both recogize that their pricing practices aren't all that popular with agents who work within the traditional commission network.

"Our goal is to sell homes," Ferrante said. "I'm not against my peers."

"The idea is not to be critical of any system," Paine said. "We have a free enterprise system and an owner should have a choice."

'The idea is not to be critical of any system. We have a free enterprise system and an owner should have a choice.'

Tax act provides relief for builders of low-income housing

condo queries

Robert M. Meisner

I am a developer and understand that under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Congress created new incentives to encourage the private sector to participate in the provision of affordable housing. Could your briefly give me some insight into that?

You are correct. In 1986 Congress created new incentives to encourage the private sector, especially corporations, to participate in developing affordable housing. The Low Income Housing Tax Credit was established as part of the tax reform act as a credit against federal income taxes. Corporations (other than personal service and sub-chapter S corporations) can use unlimited amount of LIHTC to reduce federal tax liability from business income (subject to the general limitations on business tax credits). But LIHTC cannot be used to reduce the alternative minimum tax. LIHTC is granted over a 10-year period. Depending upon the type of mortgage utilized to finance the housing, the total credit over the 10-year period may approximate up to 40 percent or 90 percent of the original cost of the housing. Unlike the repealed investment tax credit, LIHTC does not reduce the tax basis of real estate assets.

Additionally, the LIHTC may be carried back to recover income taxes previously paid or carried forward to reduce future tax liabilities. Investment corporations may also use the passive tax losses generated by the housing. These losses, which are mainly due to tax deductions for interest and appreciation, may be used to offset regular business income as well as passive income and, for certain corporations, portfolio income. Obviously, this is a detailed and complex subject, and you are best advised to consult with a tax adviser of your choosing to get the exact details of this credit and whether it is applicable to your situation.

How Much Do You Think Our Top Salespeople Made This Year?
Probably two, three or four times more than what you earned this year. In fact, our top salespeople earned more than many "professional" people in our city.
We're seeking more hard-working men and women who have the desire and determination to take advantage of the opportunities that exist in automotive sales.
Talk to us today about this high-paying opportunity. Please, no telephone calls. Apply in person between 8 a.m.-9 a.m.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, You make me see everything & show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen.

Troy photographer Balthazar Korab shot this photo of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Columbus, Ind. The church was designed by Birmingham architect Gunnar Birkerts.

Photographs capture architecture's essence

By Dale Northup
special writer

Photography is about 150 years old, and within that time frame it has been considered the mirror of history. As a pictorial medium, the photograph tells us something about ourselves and how we live; it becomes a visual manifestation of our societal values.

Pioneering photographer Alfred Stiegliz called photography "the sharp focusing of an idea." Within a wide range of ideas and subjects, the architectural photograph came to objectify our social structure.

Beginning with the impressionistic photo by Edward Steichen of the Flatiron Building in New York (1905), or the clear-sighted photo image of a West Virginia coal miner's house (1935) by Walker Evans, the built environment became more than just an illustration. It had composition and dramatic views that transcended the temporal world and was further brought to life by the discerning eye of more recent photographers who specialize in architectural photography.

But how does the architectural photographer capture the image of a three-dimensional object that occupies time and space on a two-dimensional surface? Buildings are fixed objects. But there is something that transcends their corporality. The space within and without a building is a transitory element often difficult to record with a camera lens.

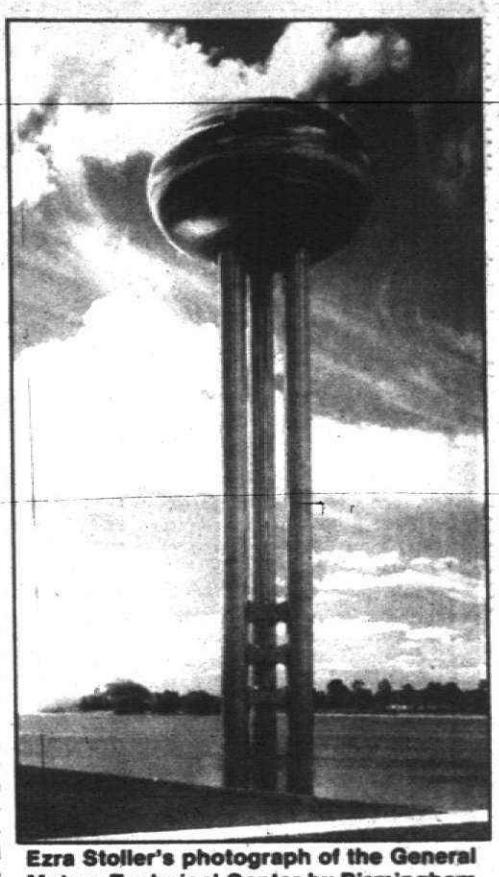
Just as the Renaissance artist mastered the art of perspective, 20th century architectural photographers have imparted a sense of form and space in their medium. Two noted architectural photographers have done exactly that, and their dossiers testify to the significance of architecture in the United States spanning a period of 50 years to become what has been termed a "moment arrested for eternity."

Balthazar Korab of Troy and Ezra Stoller of Mamaroneck, N.Y., are among a first generation of photographers in the United States whose specialty is architectural photography. Korab was educated at the Polytechnicum in Budapest, Hungary, and the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. Later he worked with the French architect LeCorbusier before emigrating to the United States to work for another noted architect, Eero Saarinen in Birmingham.

While with Saarinen, Korab photographed building models. His architectural education, combined with photography, subsequently evolved into his becoming an architecural photograher.

Stoller was educated at the New York University School of Architecture in industrial design. He became a freelance photographer specializing in architecture and industrial subjects. Both photographers are recipients of the American Institute of Architects Gold Medal Award — Stoller in 1961 and Korab in 1964. Korab is an honorary member of the Michigan Society of Architects and the Detroit Chapter of the AIA.

Their photo documentation of architecture can be seen in two recently published books: Korab's "Columbus, Indiana" (Documan Press) and "Modern Architecture: Photogrpahs by Ezra Stoller" (Abrams). Both books should be primers for anyone interested in architecture or the building field. They provide visual insight into the way modern buildings are put together and how they visually interact with the environment.



Ezra Stoller's photograph of the General Motors Technical Center by Birmingham architect Eero Saarinen highlights the stainless steel water tower marking one of America's first corporate campuses.

Korab has captured the many facets of Columbus, Ind., with photographs of the buildings in this small town of 30,000. He also focuses on J. Irwin Miller who built the Cummins Engine Co. into a $3 billion international industry and helped gain world attention for Columbus. Miller's company underwrote a fund that would pay the architect's fee of any public or private enterprise who chose a top-rank American architect with the conviction that a good environment exerts a positive force on humanity.

There are now 55 buildings designed by prominent architects that lend visual evidence to this pursuit. The idea took root in 1939 when Miller hired Eliel Saarinen to design Columbus' First Christian Church. Korab presents an amusing anecdote in the book, noting that Frank Lloyd Wright was also considered for the commission. He writes that Saarinen was chosen because he "favored adaptation over dominance." The First Christian Church can be considered a visual testament to Saarinen's monumental simplicity.

Stoller's book is more voluminous with 436 illustrations. It is a sort of retrospective of his 50 years in architectural photography. Not only do the photographs enhance our appreciation of American architecture, but the author's comments help us to gain insight into the character of the many architects covered. About Eero Saarinen: "He was able to find more flexibility in the modern idiom than most of the others and certainly drove himself and his staff beyond what most would consider reasonable in the exploration of possibilities."

Both books contain black and white photos, raising the oft-debated question about the viability of color vs. black and white. Whereas color gives more information about the building, black and white forces the viewer to look at the structure of the building. Color is also considered to appeal more to a decorator's eye. Stoller's architectural photos are largely uninhabited spaces that reflect concern for composition whereas Korab often incorporates people lending a sense of scale. These books are major contributions to the fields of American and architectural photography.

Dale Northup is a Troy college professor and architectural historian whose new book, "Frank Lloyd Wright in Michigan" (a Habitat book with Reference Publications) contains photographs by both Korab and Stoller.

The bathroom is a child's oasis, a place where spongy cars squeak across tubside freeways, plastic boats float amid sudsy glaciers and washcloths become soaking, skin-tight clothes.

Here's how to make a just-for-kids bath in your new home a safe, stylish place, according to Decorating magazine.

An adult vision of the childhood dream bath might not jibe with the child's vision, so start the project with a consultation.

West Coast interior designer Tony Torrice, a specialist in designs for children and the handicapped, uses crayons to make wish lists on bright shopping bags for his young clients.

"Where should dry towels go?" he asks. "How about soaps and shampoos?" He also displays colored cards. "Pick one," he says, rather than ask a child for their favorite color.

When kids share a bath, he acknowledges their preferences with different colors on separate walls. He's careful, though, not to overdo.

"You wouldn't want to bombard them with Sesame Street on the walls, circus clown toys in the tub and rainbows and stars on the ceiling," he says. "Kids want it simple and to the point."

Although Torrice starts by determining what the children want, he leaves room for parents to incorporate their design ideas. For example, one mother requested that the bathtub have no sliding doors because she didn't want to lean over a track at her daughter's bath time.

ANOTHER PROVISION that will be welcomed by both parents and children is storage. By including plenty of places to put things away, parents encourage children to keep the bathroom tidy. Nylon fastening strips hold combs, brushes, and toothbrushes in many of Torrice's baths, and for one handicapped youngster, he designed a pouch-covered vinyl organizer that straddles the shower door.

Easy-to-reach towels line the walls in architect John Nalevanko's bath.

"So often people don't have enough towel racks in the bathroom and they end up draping towels over the sink," he observes. Built-in hampers keep pajamas and socks out of the traffic zone, too.

To add to the room's appeal from a child's point of view:

- Keep mirrors and grooming supplies at a level where your child can easily reach them.
- Include tactile elements that add interest. Torrice puts animal-shape sponges on the wall; Nalevanko likes the feel of nylon-coated fixtures.
- Have fun. Encourage children to give honest input as to their likes and dislikes. Don't be afraid to add an extra splash of color or some zany designs.

ABOUT 25 PERCENT of all household mishaps occur in bathrooms. Because children enjoy playing in and around water, extra caution is advisable in a kids' bath.

A slip-resistant floor is a good place to start. Add traction around sink and tub splash zones with slip-resistant strips. Anchor area rugs with pads or double-face tape.

To avoid burns, set the household water temperature no hotter than 115 degrees. Shop around for fixtures. Some manufacturers make a single-lever control that requires extra turning to draw hot water.

Choose shower and tub enclosures of impact-resistant safety glass or acrylic plastic. Also, be sure that permanently installed soap dishes in tub and shower are recessed, so there's no chance of bumping a head or limb.

- Put safety latches or locks on cabinets that stow cleaning supplies, medicines, even shampoo and soap. Putting dangerous substances on a high, unsecured shelf is an inadequate precaution.

'Tis the season for remodeling scams

By By J.R. King
special writer

The greatest risk for anyone remodeling their house is finding out the contractor won't be around to finish the work.

Even in robust times, industry insiders estimate half of all newcomers fold within five years. With spring and summer traditionally the busiest time for remodeling work, whether it's a family room addition or a kitchen makeover, a little advance prudence could spare you from costly lessons later.

Below are common mistakes homeowners can make when remodeling their home, along with strategies gleaned from area contractors on how to avoid them. To make a smart deal, know what to avoid. The first step is thorough research.

A contractor must be licensed by the state. A candidate must pass a tough exam that includes just as many questions on legal issues as it does building codes. It is illegal for a contractor to operate without a license. As far as references, anyone can provide a glowing review from two close friends and a mother-in-law.

Janet Compo, CEO of James D. Compo Inc., a Farmington Hills building company in operation since 1961, advised homeowners to request at least three references.

"Most contractors today will provide you with a computer list of their last 25 or so clients, and I don't think anyone would mind if you made some phone calls," Compo said. "This is where the homeowner can find out just who it is they are hiring."

KEY QUESTIONS to ask, Compo said, are whether the contractor finished the job on time and at the promised price. And what he did do if he made a mistake? Was the contractor willing to bend when he and the homeowner were at odds?

Turning to bid reviews, Compo said homeowners can prevent surprises by providing the contractor with a detailed list of what materials should be used. The homeowner should insist on equally detailed work plans, with a list of materials.

"You should really spell out beforehand what exactly you want done, and what materials are to be used or it could come back to haunt you," Compo said. "If insulation is called for, write down how thick and what its R value is."

With the number of new homes built in 1991 expected to be at a nine-year low, more home builders are expected to elbow into the remodeling market, or at least concentrate more of their efforts toward building additions.

Given this scenario, Tom Adamusik, president of the Regal Construction Co. in Canton and a licensed contractor for nine years, said homeowners should not hand over large sums of money early in the game.

"Normally a contractor asks for one-third down and then ties the rest of the payments to work actually completed," Adamusik said. "But if a contractor tells you he wants all the money before the job is complete, you won't have any leverage in case some problems arise."

Upon completion of the job, Adamusik advised homeowners to hold the last payment for 30 days, making sure the schedule is written into the contract.

"That way you'll know the contractor will have an incentive to correct mistakes."

ANOTHER GAMBIT to watch out for is if the remodeler wants an advance to buy materials, especially as most building supply companies will allow contractors to buy such things as lumber and plywood on 30-day credit.

In addition, homeowners should request their contractor sign a waiver of lien, which precludes a remodeler from putting a lien on your house in case work stops because of a disagreement over some facet of the job.

Homeowners also need to be aware of liability issues.

"I've heard of contractors who pay for worker's compensation and liability insurance, show papers to the homeowner, then cancel the policy to save money,' said Norm Abram, master carpenter for "This Old House," the PBS remodeling television show.

A reputable contractor, Abram said, will provide a homeowner with copies of workers' compensation and liability and vehicle insurance. Liability insurance, for example, protects you if your house is damaged or a family member is injured by the crew.

Builder Janet Compo: 'You should really spell out beforehand what exactly you want done, and what materials are to be used or it could come back to haunt you.'

Remodeling reflects consumer confidence

The metro Detroit area ranks fourth in the nation in the number of permits issued for residential building, according to Anthony Bellomo, co-chairman of the Professional Builder Remodelers Council of the Buuilders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

"There is a tremendous amount of remodeling activity in this area despite any previous softening in the economy," Bellomo said.

Remodelers Council co-chairwoman Janet Compo agreed.

"With the Persian Gulf conflict over, consumer confidence is picking up. We expect that remodeling activity will continue to increase as the economy improves."

According to the U.S. Bureau of Census reports, American homeowners spent $13.4 billion on permitted residential remodeling last year.

Because only about 12 percent of all remodeling projects are issued permits, these figures represent a small portion of the estimated $105 billion total.

The 1990 permitted projects are nearly $27 million ahead of 1989 figures, and the industry is expected to reach $110 billion in 1991.
