Smokers rally on the south mall of Plymouth Canton High School.

Smoking ban plan draws fire

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Following the lead of neighboring districts including Livonia and Northville, school board members were discussing their desire to ban smoking throughout the Plymouth-Canton school district.

"We need to get moving and have the public involved so we can get going sooner than 1993." The speaker was former trustee Jeanette Wines; the setting a December, 1989 board meeting; and the topic the proposed "smoke-free by '93" policy.

At the board's first workshop of 1992, the subject resurfaced. Since 1989, a committee has studied the smoking issue, but Plymouth-Canton's policy has remained the same.

'Enforceability is a real obvious consideration. It's a tough, tough issue. Administration is doing everything possible to make sure smokers remain outside the buildings.'

— Michael Homes
assistant superintendent

High school students 18 or older and staff at Centennial Educational Park still are allowed to smoke in designated areas. For students, smoking is permitted in the outdoor malls behind the Salem and Canton High School cafeterias. Employees may smoke in designated areas indoors.

Smoking was among board concerns discussed at Monday's school board workshop in the Salem High School cafeteria.

Errol Goldman, executive director for employee relations, said he's prepared pros and cons of a smoke-free policy for the board to review in closed session.

AT THE 1989 meeting, Trustee Dave Artley said 1993 was "far too long to wait" to ban smoking.

He reiterated the thought Monday

Prayers are answered for kids, mother

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Just as one prayer seemed to go unanswered, Rev. Bill Myers, pastor of Faith Moravian Church in Canton, spotted four "miracles" in its wake.

For months the congregation prayed for Karen Barnett, a 33-year-old widow with three children, 14, 6 and 5, to recover from her serious illness.

Nikolaus Mattiello

When she died earlier this month their hopes were dashed. But only for awhile.

"Technically speaking our prayers for her life were not answered," Myers said.

Angela Mattiello

But looking back, the story of Barnett's illness and death gave birth to miracles, he said.

Less than two months before Barnett died, Canton resident Christine Mattiello's two children, Angela, 10, and Nikolaus, 5, died in a Livonia house fire.

Mattiello heard the Barnett children needed a place to stay while services were held for their mother. She offered to watch them for a while, calling it "no big deal."

MYERS SAID in a sermon last week: "Chris has not even touched a child since (the death of her children), and she was miserable.

"All that love to give, a mother of 10 years, suddenly without her children, and nobody to give all that love to. And three children without a mother. They spent about six hours together that day. I think that is a miracle."

Mattiello became involved with Faith Moravian when she volunteered for a vacation bible school program her children were enrolled in last summer.

She thought she might be of special help to the Barnett children, whom she imagined were suffering in much the same way she was.

"I thought by watching them there would be a connection, because they had so recently lost their mother. I thought I could help them, because of the recent deaths of my children. I thought they might want to talk about death," Mattiello said adding that she also hoped it would be helpful, too, in dealing with her own grief.

She learned it was difficult hearing children's voices in the house.

"IT WASN'T a bad experience, but it was very sad, because there's no children like your own children." But in some way she felt better after their stay.

"I can't put my finger on what happened," she said adding that she was happy to help them in their time of need.

Myers said the miracles didn't end there.

He told his congregation how Barnett's plight galvanized a campaign to establish the long awaited local counseling service, Canton Family Services, which opened its doors last week. The organization has received about 40 calls for help.

Last October Myers tried to obtain help for Barnett's oldest child who was having behavioral problems. There were no services in Canton and when he was turned away from a United Way organization in Plymouth, Myers began his drive to get a local program.

Joe Van Esley is characteristically animated as he talks about developments he's had a hand in.

Real estate man turns dream into big success

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A lot of real estate deals have passed through Joe Van Esley's hands since he had long hair, braces and knocked on doors in Canton asking people if they wanted to sell their houses.

Now his green and white Van Esley Real Estate signs are dotting Canton fields like some new wildflower that has taken root and is spreading through the township and area communities.

"I met a lot of closed doors," said Van Esley, 35, of the early days.

The Plymouth Township resident with an office in downtown Plymouth proved his point when he said his first year netted him about $400. And four years later he still wasn't making much.

BUT HE he was luckier than most young businessmen, because he was able to depend on his wife, Elizabeth's, General Motors paycheck until he was able to establish himself.

In the past five years he closed on $55 million in real estate deals in the Canton and Plymouth area even though 1991 was slow.

"But things are changing," he said, crediting lower interest rates.

How much Canton property has he sold? The curly haired real estate agent let out his trademark burst of laughter and said: "There'll be time enough for countin' when the dealin's done."

Like any true gambler, he's had a hand in a lot of influential developments in Canton, including the golf course residential project, Pheasant Run; the upscale Beck Road Fox Run and Lexington Square to name a few.

Council brings art into the classroom for kids to enjoy

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

Whether it's called the Art Lady or Picture Lady program, the purpose of the Plymouth Community Arts Council is the same, to instill an appreciation for art throughout history in Plymouth and Canton school children.

The arts council along with Friends of the Plymouth District Library will hold a meeting on the art in the classroom program at 2 p.m. Sunday in the upstairs meeting room of the Dunning-Hough Library, 223 S. Main, Plymouth.

"The purpose of the presentation is to provide the community with an idea of what the program is. It's for their pleasure," said Karen Berrie, arts council president.

The arts council originated in part, because of the Art Lady or Picture/Sculpture Lady program. After giving a brief history of the arts council and statement of purpose, Berrie will introduce the presentation.

"This is one of the programs that got the council started," Berrie said. "This is a service we provide to the community, an enrichment program. We provide the materials but if we don't have volunteers in the schools, we can't run the program."

'The purpose of the presentation is to provide the community with an idea of what the program is. It's for their pleasure.'

— Karen Berrie
arts council president

THE PROGRAM covers 11 elementary schools in the Plymouth Canton Community Schools. Students of Gallimore, Hulsing and Hoben schools do not participate in the program for lack of volunteers.

"We have 102 volunteer moms, dads and grandparents in the program right now. We need close to 50 more. We'd like to have enough for three more schools," said Nancy Palewski, program chairperson.

Palewski will outline the Picture/Sculpture Lady program and demonstrate firsthand with children in attendance, how a presentation might proceed.

"If you have the volunteers all the grades are covered once a month. The kids really get excited and it's not structured. There's no one way to present the art material to the kids. You can pull out one painting from the portfolio at a time or all of them. It usually takes 20 minutes but you could be there an hour if you wanted to," Palewski said.

The program introduces students to two facets of art-sculpture, and two-dimensional art, including paintings. The arts council provides volunteers with a portfolio complete with reproductions. Written material included with the reproductions contain lists of presentation ideas in general and suggestions by grade level for discussion.

PORTFOLIOS HIGHLIGHT artists and themes like music, Monet or Dali, animals, still life, birds, occupations, self portraits, sports, winter, masks, Oriental arts, fire, boats, buildings, trains and red.

School smoking ban proposal stirs debate

night. "It ought to be talked about really soon. If my memory serves me, we haven't revisited that," Artley said.

Superintendent John Hoben said a closed session is scheduled for the board's Jan. 27 meeting.

Goldman has said that while an administrative procedure permits the no-smoking policy, it's opposed by employees. They would object to any change in the current policy, he said.

Larry Masteller, who heads up the district's adult education program, said a smoking ban would probably please some adult students and displease others. "I'm a little bit concerned that if we enforce a real stringent policy saying you can't smoke anywhere on campus that these people might just go next door to Belleville or Livonia. That would be money out of our pocket," Masteller said.

Enforcing a no-smoking policy presents a costly problem, said Dr. Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction.

"Enforceability is a real obvious consideration," he said. "It's a tough, tough issue. Administration is doing everything possible to make sure smokers remain outside the buildings."

THE DISTRICT'S administration building has been smoke-free for several years. Homes said that to his knowledge, cigarettes aren't sold anywhere in district buildings.

Students are divided on the issue.

Canton junior Clay Garvin supports a smoke-free policy.

"I think it would be better. Right now, kids stand by the doors and smoke," Garvin said. "It chokes you as you go out. I'd like to see a smoking ban."

Garvin said the smokers include students under the legal age of 18.

"I see bunches of freshmen smoking," he said. "They're 13 and 14, just trying to be cool."

Tuesday afternoon, three upperclassmen stood smoking outside the Salem High School entrance, visiting with friends and killing time before their cosmetology class.

All oppose a smoke-free policy.

"I think it really stinks," said Salem senior Heidi Wilder, 17. "As long as we don't smoke in the building, I don't see what's wrong with smoking outside. Non-smokers can go wherever they want. So can we."

"I think the policy should be the same for everybody. I figure if teachers can smoke, we should be able to smoke," said Lisa Lureau, a Canton junior.

CHRIS SCHROEDER, a Salem senior, said, "Kids smoke anywhere they want to. I've never seen anyone smoke inside, but a lot of kids light their cigarettes before they go outside."

Schroeder said she'd favor a smoking ban, "because I don't like smoke. I get mad walking through the south mall. You get smoke blown in your face," she said.

Real estate man turns dream into success

"I got into Canton when there was a sewer moratorium and then things turned around. And when I got into it, the area wasn't that competitive," said Van Esley adding that his first dream-was to become a professional basketball player and today he holds onto that dream by referring to himself as Canton's one-on-one basketball champion.

If future dreams are realized, he'll open an antique ice cream parlor in Plymouth someday.

There have been other unexpected changes in his life.

"When I was 17, 18 and 21, I used to drive down the street looking at girls," he said. "Now I look at signs and take down numbers."

When he spots property he likes, Van Esley said, "I know someone has to own it. I find the owner and sometimes it just so happens they want to sell."

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Sitting in his downtown Plymouth office, Joe Van Esley describes his business policies.

REAL ESTATE takes dedication and you have to be able to take rejection, he said adding, "I've seen a lot of people die from the stress."

Currently, Van Esley said, he noticed a trend: Immigrants buying land in groups.

"The people I grew up with went out and did it individually," Van Esley said. "It definitely is the melting pot theory. Either that or it's the selling off of America."

Growing up with four brothers in a lower-middle class family in west Detroit near Warren and Evergreen he saw a big mixture of nationalities.

He learned that family strength was important and often lacking in people who are foundering. He described his father, Lou, a retired Detroit policeman, as having endless energy.

"He wasn't out to make a fortune. He was out to raise a family, Van Esley said adding that he'd like to follow that example.

"I've seen what a lot of money does to a lot of people. They start losing their ethics and trying to beat you out of commissions here and there, which is one of the down sides of this business."

Attending Catholic schools and finally graduating from Cody High School in 1974, Van Esley said the self-discipline he learned then he uses now.

"People want to know that you know what you're doing," he said, explaining that owners of million dollar properties want informed agents.

RULES INFLUENCE his opinion on other issues, too. For instance, a real estate creed: Care, obedience, accountability, loyalty and notice, should be applied to everyone, he said.

"I put myself in my situation, because I worked to get here," he said. "I see that some Americans can be weak. A lot of people give up. How are we going to cope with Japan and other countries?"

Talking about the importance of people getting involved in their community, Van Esley said you have to give back some of what you've taken out.

Local politicians back his claim.

"A lot of people talk about sense of community, and they either don't put in the labor or the money behind that, said Canton Supervisor Thomas Yack.

"Joe does both."

Returning a picture of his three daughters, Ashley, Brooke and Christie, to a wall unit in his office, Van Esley said, "I've got it made. I'm very fortunate. I thank God and I thank the American Dream. The American Dream is not dead.

"We live in a little world here. There are opportunities everywhere, but people put limits on themselves."

Noting that much of his conversation comes back to societal woes, Van Esley said, "Social problems affect me. When people around here don't work, I don't work."

Festival heats up

Attendence thrills organizers of annual ice- sculpture show

By Julie Brown
staff writer

THE TEMPERATURES rose Tuesday, but organizers of the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular didn't particularly mind.

The weather cooperated this year, and festival organizers were thrilled. In previous years, warm weather and melting ice sculptures have been a perennial problem.

"Just plain old good luck," said Michael Watts, festival director. "We were wishing for it."

This was his first year directing the festival, so Watts finds it a little difficult to compare it to previous ones. He's pleased with the way things went during the 10th annual ice festival, held Jan. 15-20.

'We had wonderful crowds. It was a big, big crowd.'
— Michael Watts

"I think it was one of the most successful ever," said Watts, a Plymouth Township resident. "We had wonderful crowds. It was a big, big crowd."

IT'S DIFFICULT to come up with a precise attendance figure, but Watts estimated that more than 400,000 people visited some time during the week, including many from outside of southeastern Michigan who hadn't previously been to Plymouth.

"We were getting calls from all over the place. It was great."

Cooperation from city of Plymouth officials helped in keeping Main Street traffic moving most of the time, he said. Watts was pleased with the work done by his own staff, which led to extensive media coverage and increased attendance.

People who'd been cooped up indoors for some time were eager "to get out and see some beautiful ice carvings," he said. "Plus, the cold weather obviously helped."

Last year's festival was overshadowed by the outbreak of war in the Persian Gulf, something organizers didn't have to contepd with this January.

"I hope we never have another war," said Watts, a pacifist.

The ice festival didn't officially begin until Wednesday, Jan. 15, although work got under way the previous Monday. Many visitors were out to see the work being done even before it opened. This past Tuesday, the day after the festival ended, many others visited Kellogg Park and the surrounding area to see the sculptures.

SOME NEW activities this year, such as the gingerbread house display/competition and cooking demonstrations, were popular, he said. Those helped to add variety to the festival and to cut down on crowded conditions in the main festival area.

Watts is pleased his company, Watts-Up Inc., was able to be involved in the 1992 International Ice Sculpture Spectacular. Organizers would like to continue to improve the event, he said, perhaps by adding to the light shows and scheduling additional activities such as evening dances.

Council brings art into the school classroom

"By using a theme, you bring something from the untouchable into their world. You're talking about how it makes you feel. One parent asked the kids to get under the desk, tape a piece of paper up and pretend they were Michelangelo," Palewski said.

Sculpture presentation packages include similar written material and reproductions of sculpture dating from Egyptian times down through the history of man.

Millie Albers of Canton is chairwoman of the volunteers at Fiegel School. She became involved with the program five years ago because of daughter, Amanda who is in the fourth grade at Fiegel.

"The kids love to see that red portfolio coming down the hallway. I think parents have lost sight of how important it is for their children to see them in the schools. Anytime parents volunteer it is very beneficial to the children, not to mention what they learn," Millie Albers said.

DURING REGULAR school art classes held once a week students are involved with working on their own projects, how much they learn about art history or art appreciation is very limited, Albers said. Without the arts council's program brought into area schools by volunteers, students wouldn't be exposed to the arts. The program provides a well-rounded education.

Fiegel currently has 18 volunteer moms, dads, and grandparents involved in the program.

"I'd love to see more volunteers. We can always use more parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles in the program at Fiegel," Albers said.

Quite a few dads volunteer their time at the school. Albers would like to see more involved but feels the Art Lady name might hinder participation.

"My own personal feeling is to change the name from art lady, to art person or people to where it encompasses all the volunteers. I have one father who if he'd been intimidated by the name, the children wouldn't have benefited from his art background."

BUT ALBERS was quick to point out that volunteers do not need to know anything about art.

If you'd like to know more about becoming a spokesperson for art in local classrooms, plan to attend the Jan. 26 presentation at the downtown Plymouth library. For information call the arts council office at 455-5260.

Advanced registration is required since seating capacity is limited. To register call 453-0750.

Local reps star in Dems reply

Local Democrats James Kosteva of Canton and William Keith of Garden City won starring roles in their party's reply to Gov. John Engler's state of the state message.

Democratic orators on a 22-minute videotape used the term "middle class" 14 times and accused Engler of "shredding the safety net" of social services for the poor.

Kosteva, chair of the House Colleges and Universities Committee, sponsored the Michigan Education Trust (MET), the prepaid college tuition program Engler is trying to shut down.

"One evidence of the success of the MET program is that it's not only the 55,000 enrollees who have signed up, but we currently have 1,300 students in Michigan colleges and universities today who are there largely because of MET," Kosteva said.

He accused Engler of "political motivations" in trying to "discredit" MET.

KEITH, de facto chair of Speaker Lewis Dodak's commission on worker training, said the goal is to bring business into vocational education so it's "no longer a dumping ground" for the academically weak.

Keith added, "Many of these middle class people are one paycheck away form disaster.

"And with massive layoffs and massive cutbacks such as we're facing in the state of Michigan, many of those people need to be retrained so that they could get jobs, even in their own fields, today, with more technical knowledge."

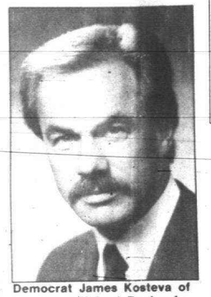
But as Democrats bashed Engler on behalf of the middle class and poor, one Republican bashed back. "What we don't need is people thinking in terms of one class against another," said Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia.

REP. MAXINE Berman, D-Southfield, found one line in Engler's speech to praise.

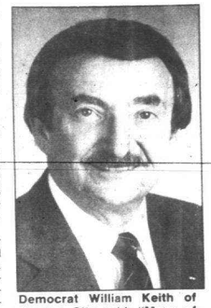
"The governor struck the right chord on Michigan workers being quality workers. He may have learned from last year that if he comes waving a machete, people are going to wave a machete back," she said.

"But I don't like his (property) tax proposal. First, it will decimate our budget — there's no money to replace that. Second, the residential property taxpayer has been paying more (than business). I suspect it won't win at the polls."

But Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford, found much more to agree with. A $1,000 per job tax credit for business? "That's pretty good. I like that." Promoting tourism and giving business tax incentives in Detroit? "I'm for that." Cleaning up more toxic sites? "I've been preaching that for five years."



Democrat James Kosteva of Canton criticized Engler for trying to shut down the Michigan Education Trust Fund.



Democrat William Keith of Garden City said: "Many of these middle class people are one paycheck away form disaster.

BENNETT RAISED an eyebrow at Engler's opposition to a fuel tax increase. "How are we gonna improve roads?" he asked.

Said Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit, chair of the House Transportation Committee: "Without additional revenue, it (road building) is going to be jeopardized."

Two outstate Republicans also were unhappy at Engler's opposition to a fuel tax increase.

"I'm disappointed. We've got a lot of work to do," said Rep. Susan Munsell of Howell.

Engler calls for tax cuts, better schools

By Tim Richard
staff writer

"Change," Gov. John Engler said 23 times in his 1992 state of the state address.

More tax cuts, improved schools and better delivery of social services will be the themes of his second year as chief executive.

The conservative Republican insisted Tuesday there would be "no retreat down the path of failure — liberal, big government, tax and spend approach — $150 billion worth during the 1980s."

Engler disappointed many on both sides of the aisle with his refusal to support a fuel tax increase for roads. "Now is not the time," he said, pledging Michigan would come up with a 20 percent match for an anticipated $3 billion in federal aid without a tax hike.

How? "We have ways. There are things we can do," said Patrick Nowak, the former Oakland County politico who heads the Department of Transportation.

DEMOCRATS, WHO control the House, sat in icy silence 18 of the 22 times Republicans interrupted his speech with applause.

Democrats joined when Engler praised American cars and auto workers, said he would work to keep open the General Motors plant at Willow Run, introduced former hostage Alann Steen and praised Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld's commission to improve adoption laws.

"We all share that. I worked there (at Willow Run) as a kid, when it was a bomber plant," said

Prayers answered for kids, mother in grief

United Way officials saw a story about the Barnett's plight and agreed to establish Canton Family Services.

"CANTON FAMILY Services came into being from her efforts," Myers said.

Another miracle realized, he said.

"But what about miracles? Well, they have been happening. Her children were already into the homes of Karen's brother and sister," Myers said in his sermon.

"There was never a question as to whether they would be taken care of or not," he said.

And then during a wake for Barnett at the church, her daughter wandered into a YMCA preschool class.

"She just saw kids and the teacher and wanted to be with them instead of all the adults at the luncheon," Myers said.

Mingling a bit with the other children, the young girl shared their snacks and found a place to talk about her pain when she blurted out to the other children that her mom had died.

"I simply can't chalk this all up to coincidence," Myers said in his sermon. "The scope is too broad. Its range just too far reaching.

"I don't know about you, but I believe miracles still happen."

Snow can't stop donut shop heist

An armed robber reportedly stole $140 cash and a check for $111.84 Friday night at Dawn Donuts on Ford Road.

When the man, described as 5-foot-8-inches tall with blond hair and weighing about 170 pounds, entered the doughnut shop he asked the clerk: "Don't you ever shovel your walk?"

When the clerk said that wasn't her job the man pulled out a hand gun from his pocket.

By this time two people came up to the register and started screaming once they saw the gun.

When the gunman ordered them to the floor and they didn't respond quick enough, the man gritted his teeth and said: "Now."

The clerk and witnesses waited about two minutes on the floor until a customer entered the shop.

Police are investigating. Anyone with information about the robber is asked to call Canton police at 397-3000.

RANGERS PICKED-OFF: At least 14 Ford Ranger pick-up trucks were hit by thieves last weekend and earlier this week in a rash of larcenies at Stoneybrooke Apartments, the Crossings and Fairway Club apartments, said Tammie Colling, Canton police information officer.

Computer parts were stolen from each of the trucks.

STRESSED OUT: A 32-year-old woman from Bath, Mich. remained inside her car on Sheldon at Sheldon Center in a 1981 Cadillac Coupe DeVille.

When police arrived they noticed she was likely having emotional problems. They took the woman and her dog, who was in the back seat of the car, to the Canton police department.

Police took the woman to an area hospital. Police contacted a man, who identified himself as the woman's fiance, who picked-up the dog from the police station.

In an unrelated case, the wife and son of a 42-year-old Canton man called police to confiscate a rifle that the man threatened to use on himself and his family.

The man, who was apparently upset about financial problems, was looking for rounds to put in the gun when his family called for help.

The man fled the house before police arrived. Police confiscated the rifle.

SNOW FOLLIES: Snow blades, a toboggan, a sled and a bicycle were reported stolen from Crossings apartments on Honeycomb. The goods were valued at almost $500.

TRACTOR TAKEN: A lawn tractor, valued by the owner at $3,800, was reported stolen from the rear of a barn on Barr Road.

These are only some of the incidents recently filed with Canton police. For police and fire emergencies, dial 9-1-1 and for business calls, dial 397-3000.

Magazine features Plymouth teenager

Sarah Chester, 13, of Plymouth appears in Teen magazine's February issue as a 1992 Great Model Search regional semifinalist.

If she is chosen as the 1992 Model Discovery of the Year, Sarah will receive a $5,000 cash award from Maybelline, an appearance in a national Maybelline ad and a Sassaby cosmetics organizer. She'll also receive modeling opportunities with the program's sponsors.

Of the approximately 24,000 entries received each year, only 480 are chosen as regional semifinalists. Sixteen girls are chosen in each of the six regions for five months, appearing in the January to May issues for a total of 96 per month.

The field is then narrowed to 16 super semifinalists for each region, and finally to 12 finalists. Finalists receive an all-expenses paid trip to the National Finals Week.

The winner, selected from the 12 finalists, will appear on the cover of the October issue of Teen.

"A modest gas tax is justified. I'm disappointed," said Rep. Robert Bender, R-Middleville.

BUT OTHERS on both sides of the aisle wanted no part of any tax increase.

"He's not allowing himself to waver," said freshman Rep. John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Township. "His position on the fuel tax goes in stride with his no tax position."

"I'm delighted he's not going to ask for a gas tax," said freshman Rep. Georgina Goss, R-Northville. "If he can find a way (to pay for roads), more power to him."

"I'm opposed to any tax increase, including a cigarette tax," said Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn.

"It's gratifying his road program does not include a gas tax increase," said freshman Rep. Barbara Dobb, R-West Bloomfield, repeating Engler's line. "Now is not the time."

An accountant with small business clients, Dobb warmly praised Engler's proposal to lighten the single business tax burden for small business. "I know first hand the impact it can have on small business."

REP. JAN Dolan, R-Farmington Hills, underlined an Engler theme that few others noticed. "Rebuilding cities our distressed areas. They're costing us either way," she said, referring to social services versus attracting new business.

In a news conference, Senate minority leader Art Miller, D-Warren, said Engler's "rhetoric is geared to the corporate board room — the country club — not neighborhoods."

But Engler fired his own salvo, citing his conversations with 400 individual Michiganians last year in his open door chats. "I listened to a single mother . . . I listened to a factory worker . . . I listened to senior citizens . . . I listened to a mother of three in a Salvation Army shelter," he said. "I know people want change."

Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn.

"The governor and I are walking hand in hand on Willow Run. First time," said Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, whose district include the auto plant. Profit handed out red teddy bear badges saying "I love Willow Run."

Despite his oratorical emphasis, Engler offered no specific plan for persuading GM to consolidate operations there rather than in Texas.

MORE TAX cuts are on Engler's general agenda:

- Voter approval of his "cut and cap" plan to slice all property taxes 30 percent and hold assessment increases to 3 percent annually. The plan is likely to be on the 1992 ballot.
- A $1,000 tax credit for every business that hires a person unemployed for six months. Engler gave no revenue loss estimate.
- "An increase in the number of smaller enterprises eligible for relief under the single business tax." His business ombudsman, Judy Miller of Bloomfield Township, said she hadn't seen any detail. Again, Engler gave no revenue loss estimate.
- "Additional tax incentives to revitalize Detroit and other urban centers" through enterprise zones.

UNLIKE GOVS. William Milliken (1969-82) and James Blanchard (1983-90), Engler did not issue a lengthy pamphlet with dozens of detailed recommendations and extract 30 minutes' worth for a speech.

His total message was the eight-page speech, printed on recycled paper and paid for by his officeholder expense fund. The spartan appearance underscored his theme of attracting business investment by slashing state spending except for schools and social services for families.

Engler proposed two methods to improve delivery of social services:

- Expansion of "Families First — an intensive, in-home service (to) reduce the need for foster care by successfully keeping at-risk families together."

Retirement assets grow

State of Michigan Retirement Systems showed "substantial growth in assets during 1991," according to state Treasurer Douglas Roberts.

At year-end, the systems' assets totaled a record $20.73 billion, up nearly $3 billion for the year. This growth continued the trend of the 1980s, a period in which the funds' assets increased fivefold, Roberts said. But he cautioned that the future growth rate is likely to slow.

State retirement systems cover 500,000 active and retired members and their beneficiaries.

The portfolio is broadly diversified with investments in stocks, corporate and government bonds, notes, mortgages, real estate, commercial paper and alternative investments.

'Amazing' Grace Burley dies at 96

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Amazing Grace Burley didn't mope around after her husband died. 'When (World War II) hostilities ended and our factories resumed making cars instead of tanks and planes, Grace went to work for Ford Motor Co. She remained their loyal employee until she retired in the early '60s,' said the Rev. William Myers.

Grace N. Burley, who died Jan. 17, just 10 days shy of her 97th birthday, was an inspiration to everyone who knew her, or for that matter, knew of her.

Her friends called her "Amazing" Grace, a nickname given her by her doctor, and with good reason.

Burley, who came to the Plymouth area in 1920 and lived in the house that later became the Hillside Inn and Ernesto's, moved at the age of 94 to Gaylord to be near her son and daughter-in-law. She lasted six months.

"She said that all she saw was snow," said Eileen Williams, a longtime friend of Burley's with the Plymouth VFW. "She said she was sick of it and was coming back to Plymouth. While her son was down in Alabama, she moved back. All her friends were here, and this is where she wanted to be."

"IT SEEMS TO me that the world began to see Grace's amazing qualities after her husband died," said the Rev. William Myers of Faith Community Moravian Church at her funeral service Monday.

"Her children remember that after the funeral, their mother was all alone. Our country was fighting a war, and that drew her family away from home. Instead of moping around, Grace got a job and worked at a small factory. When hostilities ended and our factories resumed making cars instead of tanks and planes, Grace went to work for Ford Motor Co. She remained their loyal employee until she retired in the early '60s."

For Grace, retirement didn't mean slowing down. She drove until the age of 95, and not just to the doctor's office and the grocery store. A typical week saw her at the Elks Club for lunch on Tuesday, the Cultural Center to play pinochle on Wednesday, at Tonquish Creek Manor for lunch on Thursday, and at the Mayflower Lt. Gamble VFW Post much of the rest of the time. A charter member of the VFW's Ladies' Auxiliary, Burley served as auxiliary chaplain for 14 years.

"She was on hand for everything, being active, doing things — she was a very, very nice dependable lady," said Williams, auxiliary treasurer.

Burley's VFW friends many years ago dubbed her the "Rose Kennedy of the Auxiliary," because of the many tragedies life dealt her.

Burley lost her mother when she was a child. Her husband Chester died in 1942 at the age of 50. The couple lost a daughter at eight months, and a second daughter when she was 56. A son and his wife were killed in a car accident several years ago, and another son died at 56.

Grace re-charged her batteries by spending time with young people, said Myers.

Williams said Burley "took a couple of bad spills. She moved last year to a nursing home in Westland and was pretty much in a wheel chair. Toward the end, she was still very alert, until her death when she just collapsed. Her heart just quit."

Funeral services for Grace Burley were Monday, Jan. 20, at Schrader Funeral Home. Burial was in Riverside Cemetery.

Mrs. Burley was born Jan. 27, 1895 in Oxford. She was active with the Plymouth senior citizens, and was named VFW's "Poppy Queen."

She is survived by one son, Harold Burley of Gaylord; eight grandchildren, including Debra Krauss, previously of Plymouth, Barbara Ward, previously of Plymouth, Janet Chaplowsky, previously of Plymouth and Nancy Millross, previously of Plymouth and 15 great-grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Mayflower Lt. Gamble Post No. 6695, VFW, Plymouth.

Snow & ice on sidewalks

The city of Plymouth Department of Public Works warns property owners that snow and ice must be removed from their sidewalks within 14 hours after a snowfall.

Failure to do so may result in the DPW removing the snow or ice and charging the property owner $40 an hour.

Magazine features local teen

Sarah Chester, 13, of Plymouth appears in Teen magazine's February issue as a 1992 Great Model Search regional semifinalist.

If she is chosen as the 1992 Model Discovery of the Year, Sarah will receive a $5,000 cash award from Maybelline, an appearance in a national Maybelline ad and a Sassaby cosmetics organizer. She'll also receive modeling opportunities with the program's sponsors.

Sarah Chester

Of the approximately 24,000 entries received each year, only 480 are chosen as regional semifinalists. Sixteen girls are chosen in each of the six regions for five months, appearing in the January to May issues for a total of 96 per month.

The field is then narrowed to 16 super semifinalists for each region, and finally to 12 finalists. Finalists receive an all-expenses paid trip to the National Finals Week.

The winner, selected from the 12 finalists, will appear on the cover of the October issue of Teen.

'Author, Author' comes back to SC

Schoolcraft College's popular "Author Author" program resumes Tuesday, Feb. 4.

Published authors will offer tips to budding writers during the five week program. Students learn about each author's area of expertise and acquire writing techniques and publishing tips.

Authors scheduled to appear include: children's author Paul Stawski, Feb. 4; suspense writer Sarah Wolf, Feb. 11; romance writer Terese Daly Ramin, Feb. 18; poet Lorene Erickson, Feb. 25 and nonfiction writer Victoria Diaz, March 3.

Stawski recently was a winner in the fourth annual Highlights for Children magazine fiction contest.

Wolf, a former teacher and research librarian, is author of several books, including the recent best seller "MacKinnon's Machine."

Ramin, author of several books, is a recipient of the Romance Writers of America's Golden Heart Award.

Erickson is a recipient of a Creative Artist Grant, through the Michigan Council for the Arts, and has contributed to Woman Poet, Midwest, Isis, Third Coast, and other publications.

Diaz is a freelance writer specializing in personal profiles. Her work has appeared in several area newspapers, including Observer & Eccentric.

The series fee is $75, or $58 for senior citizens. Individual sessions are $18. Sessions are held 6-8 p.m. at Schoolcraft's main campus, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

To register, or for additional information, call the college continuing education services office, 462-4448.

Alcohol laws discussed

A class advising bar and restaurant employees of their responsibility under Michigan liquor law is being taught beginning Monday, Feb. 3, at Schoolcraft College.

The class, Traning for Intervention Procedures, is designed to help bartenders and other employees recognize and respond to intoxicated customers.

The class is taught by Scott Forbes, who has trained more than 5,000 bar and restaurant employees. He is one of four master trainers in the U.S. He will discuss Michigan laws, as well as designated driver and cab programs.

Insurance companies offer discounts of up to 20 percent for those who complete the four-week program.

Fee is $50 per person to register, or for additional information, call 462-4448.

Michigan Eyecare Institute
At The Forefront Of Ophthalmology

The Michigan Eyecare Institute is known for its pioneering breakthroughs. Staffed by specialists who have developed and refined the latest medical techniques, the Michigan Eyecare Institute specializes in treating and eliminating disabling eye disease.

As founders of The Michigan Eyecare Institute, Dr. William Myers and Dr. Mark Rubinstein have been at the forefront of Ophthalmologic breakthroughs. They were the first Ophthalmologists in the state to develop or utilize:
• YAG laser surgery for treatment of secondary cataracts
• Nova Curve lens, designed especially for the YAG laser surgery
• Excimer laser surgery for treatment of glaucoma
• Radial Keratotomy for correction of nearsightedness
These laser surgeries are fast, virtually painless and they require no hospital stay or recovery time.
The founders of Michigan Eyecare Institute conduct courses in surgery and have lectured on their state of the art surgical techniques to other physicians throughout North America, Europe, Russia and the Far East. If you are nearsighted, farsighted, or suffer from cataracts or glaucoma, Michigan Eyecare Institute can help.

Local Dems, GOP expect big name visitors

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

The 1988 presidential election was a mere four days away and there he was — GOP nominee George Bush — at a campaign rally at Livonia's Schoolcraft College.

Bush wasn't the only candidate to set foot in western Wayne County that year, either.

Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis made a fall campaign stop at the Central Wayne Sanitation Authority incinerator in Dearborn Heights. Democratic hopeful Richard Gephardt made several area stops during the March party caucuses.

Will candidates make similar western Wayne appearances this time around? Local party activists hope so. Moreover, they expect so.

"THIS IS an important area, I'm sure there's going to be a major event sometime this year," said GOP 2nd district chairman Harry Greenleaf of Livonia, who helped coordinate the president's 1988 Schoolcraft rally. The 2nd District includes such GOP local strongholds as Livonia, Plymouth and Plymouth Township.

Area Republicans seek to bring a heavyweight visitor to the area early on in the campaign.

"We're going to be holding a spring fund-raiser and we are looking for a major, name speaker," said Ed Haroutunian, president of the newly formed Wayne County Republican Party organization.

David Duke need not apply, however. "With regard to Duke, there's little, if any, question with the Republican organizations (that he wouldn't be welcome)," Harotunian said, of the former Ku Klux Klan leader and recent Louisiana gubernatorial candidate.

As for conservative political columnist Patrick Buchanan, the question remains open.

"It's really premature to say," Harotunian said, regarding the kind of local welcome Buchanan might receive.

While Republicans look to minimize the candidacy of Duke — and possibly Buchanan — area Democrats say their field is wide open.

"Our role is as a facilitator," said 15th district chairman Richard McKnight of Westland. "We want to make sure each of our candidates has access."

TWO MAJOR Democratic candidates have already pressed the flesh with area activists.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara held receptions for Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Iowa Sen. Thomas Harkin while both attended December's UAW convention in Detroit.

"They appear to be the frontrunner, at least in our area," said McKnight, whose district organization includes southern Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Canton.

A straw vote during a recent meeting of 15th district committee members split 12-12 between the two, McKnight said.

Still, McKnight noted, party regulars don't appear to be falling in behind any one candidate this time — in contrast to 1984 and 1988.

McNamara, meanwhile, isn't expecting to hold any more meet-the-candidate events.

"He's going to be issuing an endorsement pretty soon," deputy county executive Michael Duggan said, while declining comment on who McNamara would endorse.

With two contested primaries for the first time in 16 years, Michigan could be a frequent campaign stop in the days leading to the March 17 primary — or not.

Michigan shares its March 17 primary date with neighboring Illinois, an attractive pairing in an election where declining American industrial strength looms as a major issue.

BUT A massive, nationwide cluster of primaries the week before could all but settle both nominations.

On the Republican side, Buchanan and Duke are at best considered irritants to the president, not potential nominees. A strong presidential showing could put an end to both as soon as the upcoming New Hampshire primary.

The cluster of Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Missouri, Mississippi, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Texas, meanwhile could add up to a coronation for any Democrat lucky enough to string together victories in all 10.

But Michigan is a state Democrats ignore at their peril. Jimmy Carter skipped the 1976 Michgian primary, nearly suffering a momentum-halting defeat to Morris Udall. Likewise, Dukakis' low Michigan profile spelled an upset win for Jesse Jackson in the 1988 caucuses.

Whatever the party, whoever the candidate, a local appearance can have a long lasting effect on local party alleigance.

"Any time a presidential candidate come here it's a major event," Greenleaf said. "It's something that is felt for a long time."

Making tracks

We'd like to know the name of this cross country skier, gliding over the snow in Hines Park earlier this week, but our photographer couldn't keep up. All that proves, we suppose, is that on snowy days like these a good pair of skis may be the best way to go.

Stadium vote followed — from afar

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A stadium vote is expected this year in San Jose, but that doesn't mean friends and foes of Wayne County's own proposal will bump into each other on the way west.

Wayne County's stadium proposal "isn't on the front burner" at present, according to deputy county executive Michael Duggan. But that doesn't mean County Executive Edward McNamara and his staff will be doing any field research in California.

"We don't see any reason to go out there," Duggan said. "We have the press clippings, we're keeping on top of what's going on."

Tiger Stadium Fan Club members said they wouldn't be spending time in the Bay Area, either.

"THERE ARE similarities, but the issue out there isn't exactly like the one we have here," said fan club member William Dow of Birmingham.

Voters in San Jose are being asked to approve bonds for a $155 million, 48,000-seat, open-air stadium that would lure the San Franciso Giants baseball team south.

One major difference, at least according to fan club members, is that Tiger Stadium is beloved by baseball fans while San Franciso's chilly Candlestick Park is beloved by no one.

"There, they're trying to build a baseball stadium," Dow said. "While, here, we already have a perfectly good one."

Duggan, however, sees more similarities than differences.

"The San Jose proposal is essentially the same one we have before the Tigers in terms of bonds and revenue," he said.

One other similarity: voters, not baseball officials, would have the final say on each proposal.

Despite an estimated 50 mile distance, San Jose and San Francisco are considered part of the same geographic region by major league baseball. That means the Giants' move wouldn't be subject to a vote by other team owners.

Similar provisions would also apply to an attempt to move the Tigers to another metro site — though baseball's American League would have to authorize an out-of-state move.

Despite several months of negotiating, the county and Tigers management have yet to agree on a stadium deal.

With talks stalled, it looks increasingly doubtful that there will be a Wayne County stadium vote this year — though Duggan didn't rule out the possibility.

"It could happen, but it isn't on the front burner at this time," he said.

At the same, time fan club members are going to Wayne County Circuit Court this month to answer a challenge to their petitions calling for a Detroit-only vote on strict enforcement of the Tiger Stadium lease.

The lease, fan club members said, binds the ballclub to the stadium through 2008.

If they seek precedent, fan club members need look no further than San Francisco. Provisions of their Candlestick Park lease prevented the Giants from moving to Toronto some 15 years ago.

Detroit Zoo-goers can hear condor tales

Detroit Zoo fans soon can learn more about the two local Andean condors which helped provide research for the successful reintroduction of the California condor last week.

The Detroit Zoological Society, the private group which aids the city-owned zoo, will sponsor a lecture about the California condors at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 23, in the auditorium of Cranbrook Institute of Science, Lone Pine Road in Bloomfield Hills.

In "California Condors: Back to the Wild," Dr. William Toone, curator of birds from the San Diego Wild Animal Park, will tell of his conservation work with the California condor population.

Tickets are $5 for the public and $3 for Detroit Zoological Society members. Call (313) 541-5717 for ticket information.

"Our condors' siblings were actually used to develop the release techniques for the California condors," said Detroit Zoo bird curator Tom Schneider.

The local zoo is a member of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums Condor Propagation Group. Located on 10 Mile Road at Woodward Avenue in Royal Oak next to the I-696 freeway, the Detroit Zoo is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.

"BECAUSE THE reproductive biology of the California condor is similar to that of the Andean condor, which breeds well in captivity, zoo biologists were successful in reproducing this species at selected zoos," said Schneider.

The zoo's bird exhibit is located to the right of the zoo's main entrance. The 6- and 7-year-old Andean condors are in the courtyard.

In 1987, when the last California condor was captured, the species no longer occurred in the wild. A two-phased program to recover the condors was developed.

It included increasing the captive population so birds would be available for release and developing the necessary release techniques.

Buy American hearing re-set

A public hearing on a proposed Wayne County "Buy American" ordinance has been rescheduled to 10 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 28 in Room 402 of the Wayne County Building, 600 Randolph, Detroit.

The hearing was initially scheduled for Jan. 14, but canceled due to heavy snowfall.

IN BRIEF

Seniors get help with prescription costs

The Michigan Emergency Pharmaceutical Program for Seniors is once again available to assist qualifying seniors with payments for prescription drugs on an emergency basis.

The program is available to seniors 65 years and older who have an income of less than $827 monthly, or $1,108 for a couple, and who spend more than 10 percent of their monthly household income on prescriptions.

Qualifying seniors receive vouchers to be used for purchasing prescription medications at any one of the approximately 185 participating pharmacies in southern and western Wayne County.

Individuals can receive help filling out MEPPS self-certification forms at 16 locations, including the Canton Recreation center, 44237 Michigan Avenue. The telephone number is 397-5444.

Applicants should bring their medication bottles to verify the prescription is refillable. Applicants who qualify for MEPPS assistance they will receive a voucher at that time.

For more information call, 722-2830.

Scholarships available

The Canton Community Foundation will be providing $7,500 in scholarships to Canton residents.

A Charles W. Heidt Music scholarship, valued at $500, five traditional college grants, valued at $1,000 each and four Catherine Johnson non-traditional awards, valued at $500 each will be awarded.

The deadline for applications is March 2. For more information call the foundation at 454-5427.

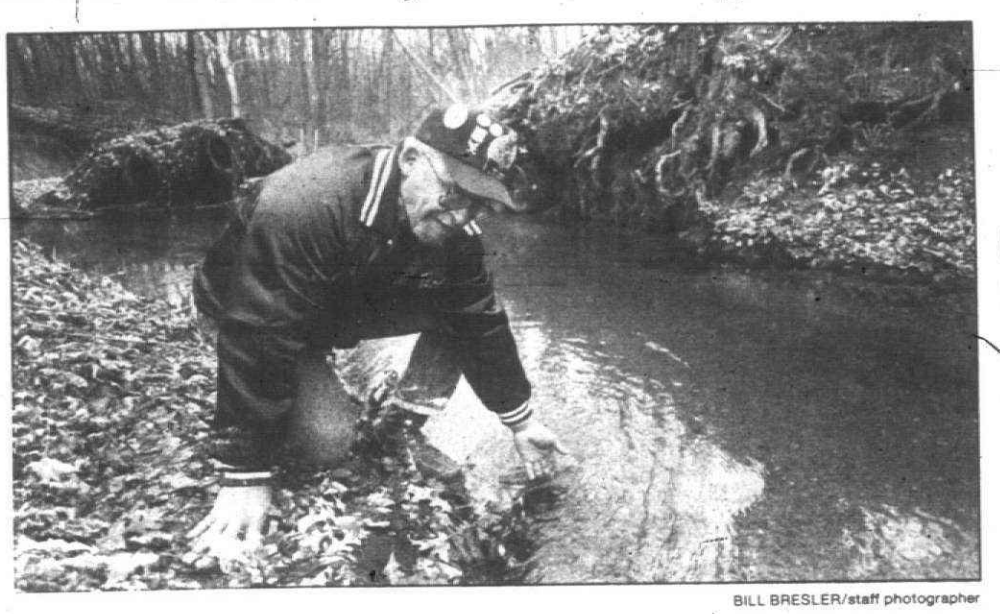
Absentee ballots are easy to obtain

The Canton clerk's office has started a new computer program that permanently puts voters on a list to receive absentee ballot applications before elections.

The purpose of this is to eliminate the need for voters who commonly request these ballots, such as senior citizens, to have to call and inquire before every election.

Rouge runs clean; fishery could fly

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Bob Laich of the Western Wayne Conservation Association tests the waters of the upper Rouge River where brown trout could be planted by the state.

For the first time in recent memory, a river once considered among the most polluted in the Midwest will be home to brown trout — a fish that requires extremely clean water to survive.

That is if all goes as planned by Bob Laich and his cohorts at Plymouth Township's Western Wayne County Conservation Association and the state Department of Natural Resources.

Seven years ago, about the time the Friends of the Rouge initiated its annual "Clean the Rouge" day, Laich seized the opportunity to work on the WWCCA's section of the river, a tributary that flows through Salem, Northville and Plymouth townships.

Known as Johnson Creek or the Johnson Drain, the tributary flows through a beautiful wooded area that's home to wild turkeys, white-tailed deer, snapping turtles, opossums, raccoons, and enough birds go though 1,500 pounds of bird seed furnished each winter by the WWCCA.

"MY DREAM WAS to make this into a viable trout fishery in Wayne County said Westland's Laich, who is vice president of the Michigan United Conservation Club and a past WWCCA president.

It was an uphill battle. Unfortunately, many used the river as a junkyard. It was so far gone that people who heard about Laich's idea thought he was dreaming.

"When Bob started this six or seven years ago, I thought he was crazy," said longtime WWCCA member John Goulet. "That stream has a reputation of being as polluted as any of them."

It didn't dissuade the retired Laich, who grew accustomed to envisioning the future as an automotive design sculptor with Ford Motor Co.

"That was my goal. Seven years later, it's going to become a reality. I'm looking so forward to when I get the next phone call" from the DNR, informing the WWCCA that fingerlings actually will be stocked in the Johnson Drain, he said. "Then I'll know it's a reality. Since I got the first call, I've been walking high. It makes me feel so good," said Laich, who fished and swam in the Rouge as a kid growing up in Westland.

While the Clean Water Act of 1972 is responsible in many ways for the enhancement of water quality in southeastern Michigan, so is the elbow grease of Laich and WWCCA members. They've rolled up their sleeves and climbed into the river, hauling out everything from engine blocks to ice boxes.

"All of us got dirty, bit up, and what have you, but we kept at it throughout the years," Laich said.

WHILE THERE'S PLENTY of credit to go around — including to folks like Plymouth Township officials Chuch Van Vleck, Esther Hulsing and Ron Griffith, Laich says stocking trout in the Rouge wouldn't be possible without Liz Hay.

Hay is a fisheries biologist with the DNR's Southeast Michigan District Field Office in Livonia.

"At the beginning, I could see the look of skepticism in her eyes," said Laich of Hay. Laich and Hay quickly saw eye-to-eye. To Laich's delight, Hay has worked diligently on the project for the past two years. Laich says you can work all you want independently cleaning a stream. But "if you don't find someone (in the DNR) who thinks like you do, it isn't going to fly. I give Liz a whole lot of credit for making this a reality."

Historical records on trout in Wayne County are tough to come by, and conventional wisdom varies. Some say this will mark the first time in 40 years trout have thrived in this area. Others claim it'll be the first time ever.

Hay learned that "historically, Johnson Creek has been a brook trout stream. The first fish hatchery in the state was established in Northville in 1874 by Nelson Clark," she said.

"They used to have whitefish and brook trout. Both require cold water, and their water source was Johnson Creek, so there had to be good water quality. They had a very successful hatchery."

Hay said she looked at the stream to see if that type of condition still existed, despite all the urbanization which has gone on in Wayne County.

After monitoring the stream's temperature; oxygen levels; sediment load; and pollution levels for two years, Hay proposed that "we try and re-establish a fishery in there using brown trout. This tributary has clearly come back from a state where it wasn't as good in the 1970's. It's come back much more now."

Hay said she's optimistic the DNR will approve her recommendation.

"I think the data supports putting trout in there." Hay has found in the Johnson Creek mayflies, caddisflies and stoneflies — all preferred trout foods — as well as blacknose dace and mottled sculpin, fish normally found in places inhabited by trout.

Plans call for five-inch fingerlings to be planted sometime in April, which means fishing by the summer of 1993. While the presence of two bubbling feeder streams and plans for enhancing the stream make spawning a good possibility, reproductivity will be in question for a while, says Hay.

There's a difference of opinion on whether the rule will be catch-and-release or catch-and-keep. Hay favors the former, Laich the latter.

Van Vleck, a WWCCA member who works in emergency preparedness for Plymouth Township, says "I am really tickled with the news. What it tells me is how we've cleaned up the quality of the water."

Chairman of the WWCCA's Rouge clean-up team, Van Vleck for four years has donned old clothes and helped clear the river of refrigerators, tires, rusted car parts and tree cuttings on the Friends of the Rouge day in June, and on other occasions.

"We'll be back out there June 6 with our chain saws and sweat, making sure the river stays clean and running free," Van Vleck said.

Does all this mean the Rouge can come back?

"I think any river can heal itself," says Hay.

'All of us got dirty, bit up, and what have you, but we kept at it throughout the years.'
— Bob Laich

"Parts of the Main River and some of the tributaries are in good shape, and with the ongoing projects on the Rouge, a lot of money is being spent to try and correct the problems."

Firm seeks local input in schools chief search

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

The search firm hired to help the Wayne-Westland school board find a new superintendent plans to receive extensive input from board members, school employees and community representatives before launching its nationwide search.

The Chicago-based firm of Hazard, Young, Bickert & Associates plans to send two representatives here on Jan. 30-31 to conduct interviews aimed at learning more about what the district wants in a new superintendent.

The school board in December hired the firm for $10,000 to lead the search for a successor to Superintendent Dennis O'Neill, who announced plans to retire Aug. 31 amid pressure from a majority of board members. The firm also will be paid up to $3,000 for travel and other expenses.

Board President Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek, giving board members an update Monday on the pending search, said the firm plans to conduct one-on-one interviews with each board member and top-level administrator. The firm also wants to meet in larger groups with teachers, district union leaders and parent representatives, among others, she said.

Rouge trout

Cleaner river a victory for all

WHEN IT COMES to the environment, the news usually isn't good. Acid rain falls on remote Isle Royale and fish have problems with their PCB levels. But there is some good news in western Wayne County.

And it's about the Rouge River, a name usually associated with chemicals and the smell of an open sewer.

The Western Wayne Conservation Association and the state Department of Natural Resources want to plant brown trout in the upper reaches of the Rouge River.

Trout are the thoroughbreds of fish. Unlike the lowly carp or catfish, they need the cleanest of water that's fast running and full of oxygen. Stagant, murky water just won't do.

That's why there's a certain incongruity when you use the word trout and Rouge River in the same sentence.

JUST HAVING a portion of the Rouge being considered for a trout planting is an environmental victory. If the members of the salmonoid family do decide to put down roots, it's truly a turning point in the battle to clean up the river.

Much of the credit for the proposed trout plantings goes to Bob Laich, a member of the conservation club. Seven years ago, about the time the Friends of the Rouge started its annual clean up day, Laich and other club members started work on the portion of the Rouge that runs through and near the club's property in Salem, Northville and Plymouth Township.

Members pulled everything from engine blocks to ice boxes out of the river and kept up the work over the years.

And now thanks to their work and the efforts of others interested in the Rouge, trout may be living in the river's water.

It's good news for all of us.

Ice fest recaptures reputation

SEVERAL YEARS of warm weather and the Gulf War put a jinx on the International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

But this year the jinx came off and thousands of folks flocked to see the ice carvings in and around Plymouth's Kellogg Park.

Mother Nature cooperated, dumping as much as 11 inches of snow to set the scene and providing temperatures in the teens that kept the sculptures in top form.

But it was more than good weather and the lack of a war that set the stage for a successful festival. There was good planning.

Mike Watts, festival director, did another fine job. This past summer, Watts put on the Plymouth Music Festival, a weekend of jazz, blues and country music. It was a top notch event.

And as new ice festival director, he helped enhance an event that had become shop worn with time. He added colored lights to the ice sculptures in The Gathering, giving them a new dimension.

Also, there were the so-called melt proof events, designed to pull the weekend-long festival through if Ma Nature had taken a disliking to Plymouth.

There were also the corporate tie-ins, ice sculptures sponsored by corporations. Some would be critical of such sponsorship. We're not. The cost of the ice festival is high, and it's important to ensure that the cost doesn't become too much of a burden on the city and local merchants.

We don't know what Watts' plans are for next year, but we would hope that the ice festival is in them.

Between Watts and Ma Nature, the ice festival has become a top drawer event once again.

Physical plant

Health, safety depend on tax

OUR ROADS, bridges and sewers must function or we all suffer in many ways. And in Michigan, we've come to a point where we have to take care of our physical plant now, or risk the loss of tourism, business and the public's health and safety for years to come.

Failing roads and sewers also will fuel continued urban sprawl.

The fuel tax is a fair tax because it is a user fee and must be increased. Those motorists who don't drive much, won't buy as much gas or pay as much tax. The state also needs a similar user fee mechanism or a bond issue earmarked for sewers and water system improvements.

Michigan has a lower gas tax than all but one Midwestern state (Indiana) at 15 cents and ranks 43rd in per capita spending on roads. The fuel tax was last raised eight years ago. And because we are driving more fuel efficient cars, we end up paying less gas tax each year. That has brought us to the point where we have less tax money to build and maintain roads and bridges then we did when construction costs were lower. Counties are also hampered by smaller budgets for road repairs.

WHILE CUTTING back on "big government" sounds nice, especially when it means lowering taxes, there are some legitimate functions of state government that are necessities; put them off now and taxpayers will have to pay more later.

Wayne County is on the state's short list of "distressed communities" suffering from combined sewer overflows. The antiquated sewers can't handle the increased storm and waste streams that overflow in the lakes and streams endangering public health and lowering property values.

Add to that the list of roads and bridges that the state has on its "critical list" and the problem is plain as a pothole at rush hour on Eight Mile Road.

A state study completed in April 1985 made specific recommendations concerning sewer and other infrastructure improvements and ways to pay for them.

Gov. Engler needs to move on this now because a poor state infrastructure can only hurt the state's business climate and tourist industry. Waiting for the recession to end before tackling this issue would be penny wise and pound foolish.

Metroparks

Dream preserves outdoors

TODAY IT couldn't be done. Southeast Michigan couldn't launch a series of 13 metroparks covering 23,000 acres.

Tax fighters would battle the quarter-mill of property tax the metroparks cost. Politicians would be unable to cooperate on a multi-county basis.

Indeed, the state is shutting down campgrounds and spinning off parks rather than preserving scarce open space.

IN 1942 it was different — better.

Dr. Henry S. Curtis, one-time playgrounds director from New York City, and Professor Harlow O. Whittemore, landscape designer from the University of Michigan, had a vision: a series of parks along the Huron and Clinton rivers, encircling the urban area.

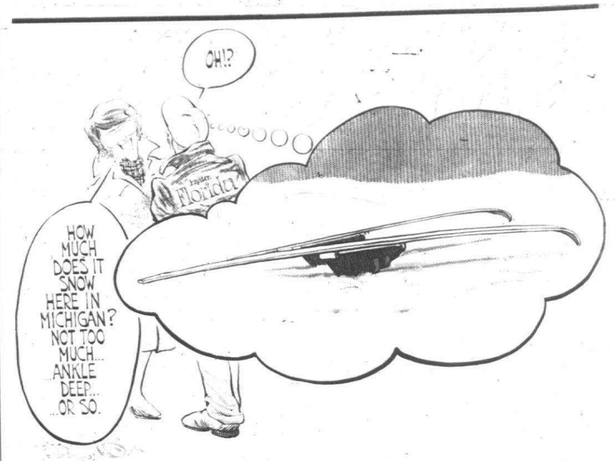
Leroy C. Smith of the Wayne County Road Commission put the dream together politically, winning legislative approval of a law to incorporate the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority and winning 2-1 approval of voters in five counties for a property tax.

This year it celebrates its 50th anniversary. We toast HCMA not just for running good parks but for keeping alive that stupendous dream in the face of political pressure, backlashes and power grabs.

TO MOST folks, the HCMA name doesn't ring a bell, but we all know its good works: Kensington Metropark, 4,300 acres, opened in 1948; Stony Creek Metropark, 4,500 acres, 1964; Metropolitan Beach, 770 acres on Lake St. Clair, 1950; the western Wayne four — Lower Huron, Willow, Oakwoods and Lake Erie metropark; Indian Springs, near Clarkston, and others.

Where cities and townships are fighting to preserve open space and wetlands, HCMA did the job by starting a half-century ago.

We can thank the visionaries of the 1940s for the unspoiled outdoors we enjoy today.



Politics paralyzes any action on deficit growth

Philip Power

HERE ARE some simple facts that underline how badly governed we are:

- The annual national budget deficit is nearly $400 billion:
- Our total national debt is more than $3 trillion, the majority run up over the last 20 years. That's more than $10,000 for every man, woman and child in this country.
- America has gone in the past 10 years from the world's largest creditor nation to the largest borrower.
- Despite window dressings like "national deficit summits" and Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction bills, absolutely no progress has been made on cutting our nation's deficit. In fact, the deficit has doubled since 1985, when Gramm-Rudman was first talked about.
- In an election year when the economy is terrible and the middle class howling, both Republicans and Democrats can confidently be expected to pander for popularity by cutting taxes . . . and driving the deficit still higher.

FOR YEARS, I have been asking members of our Michigan congressional delegation (now among the most powerful in the country) what exactly they proposed to do about this. And for years I have been getting the polite runaround.

I had a chance to talk with Carl Pursell, a GOP congressman from Plymouth, over the holidays. He had some very interesting and — for somebody who works in Washington — very unusual things to say.

The deficit will make tomorrow's generation pay for the excesses of today's spending. "How can we look our children and grandchildren in the eye knowing full well what is happening on our watch?"

Amazing! Somebody actually prepared to accept responsibility!

What would he do about it? Simple. First, get both political parties to prepare their own unified national budgets, their own statement of their political priorities. With a sitting Republican president, get the administration to buy into the GOP budget. Have the president say to Congress, in effect, "Any spending bill above the levels in this budget will be vetoed."

Then, when Democrats who control Congress offer their budgets and pass appropriations above this limit, have the president simply veto them. Force a crisis in continuation of government spending in order to rein in spending.

Astonishing! Somebody actually willing to force partisan clarity and cause some conflict to get something done!

I DON'T know whether Carl Pursell's idea is good or bad, realistic or not. But I do know that he, at least, is prepared to suggest something.

Not only that, but last year Pursell proposed in 1990 a total freeze with no inflation adjustment — for all federal discretionary spending. Not surprisingly, that lost.

He also shocked colleagues on the House Appropriations Committee that year by requesting deletion from the spending bill of a $3 million cleanup project for the Rouge River, much of which is in his district. That lost, too.

Some people in Washington think Pursell is naive or a grandstander or both. I can't agree.

He is deeply concerned about the deficit and alarmed at the political paralysis in our government. And he's not afraid to try to do something about it.

Keep it up, Carl.

Snow plowing called chaotic

To the editor:

How about doing your West Livonia and Plymouth/Canton readers a big favor. We can't do it alone, but the power of the press can get some answers.

For years I've noticed Wayne County snow plows and salt trucks going no farther west than Wayne Road on Plymouth/Ann Arbor Roads.

It was especially noticable this week after the Jan. 14, snow storm. Plymouth Road was clean up to Wayne Road. It was quite obvious nothing was done beyond that point. Why?

The underpass east of Newburgh and the bridge over I-275 are particularly hazardous and heavily traveled.

If Wayne County salt stops at Wayne Road, then by God, so should Wayne County taxes (which are considerable in this area).

Please do your loyal readers a favor and question County authorities about this policy. Remind them that we exist out here and contribute a great deal to their salaries.

Looking forward to a safe ride to work with your help. Hope to see an article on this (with a successful solution) in a very near future edition.

Recycle old buildings

To the editor:

Recycling newspaper and plastics requires quite a public effort and perhaps questionable savings. But, why not recycle old buildings? Instead of wrecking condemned buildings and burying the debris in scarce landfill space, why not encourage individuals to salvage useable material by dismantling condemned buildings? Detroit has plenty of structures that need to be recycled.

It may not be practical for a wrecking company to salvage old two-by-fours. However, an individual, who may be laid off his regular job, could well use his time cleaning bricks and salvaging lumber. Each could add to his personal wealth by dismantling condemned buildings to erect a building on his own property, or sell the useable material.

Each individual would be a private contractor on his own responsibility. He would sign a waiver in the event that he should get hurt while salvaging material on a demolition site, such as a defunct industrial plant, commercial building, or residence.

The only tools needed would be a crow bar, a nail puller, a tool to clean bricks, a strong utility trailer, or/and a pick-up truck.

There are some excellent houses and out buildings in Monroe County that were built with used material. Why shouldn't individuals be encouraged to reclaim and recycle building material all over Michigan? We salvaged a lot of material from barns and houses during the Great Depression of the 1930s. It can be done again.

Gornick will be missed

To the editor:

Sadly, I note the loss of one of this area's distinguished citizens and respected community leaders. Dr. Richard Gornick was a member and chairman of the Plymouth Township Planning Commission for many years.

During his tenure, our community faced countless growth management issues. Through his insight, leadership and sheer tenaciousness, Dr. Gornick was able to influence the direction of community development, the result of which is the enviable qualities of Plymouth Township today.

I salute the late Dr. Gornick for that contribution and respectfully offer my condolences to his family.

Join in railing against system

Jeffrey Miller

ON THE SOUTH side of Chicago in the year 1969, there was a radio station commentator on WVON who always railed against the system. Some called him an agitator.

Also on the south side of Chicago, circa 1969, there was a young black man freshly graduated from the university who thought he knew life's answers, always challenging the status quo. Some said he had a chip on his shoulder.

The young man listened to the radio while the old man railed: "Taxes too high; the war in Nam must stop; busing is the answer. Black Panthers hounded by Hoover; Richard Nixon can't be trusted."

This was interspersed with Marvin Gaye, the OJays, the Isley Brothers and Maze. Sometimes, when the commentator spoke of Martin Luther King, Lyndon Johnson, Viet Nam, racism, poverty and the ghetto, the young man tuned out figuratively and literally. Stopped listening. Closed off. Pushed the button to WLS for Janis or Mick Jagger or maybe some Sly and the Family Stone.

THE WIZENED veteran, up the hard way from an all-black, southern blues station, now talking on an all-black Chicago urban station with white owners, took a helluva chance back in 1969. If you wanted to keep your job, you didn't talk about the system — you joined. Then if you were lucky, you milked it. If you wanted longevity, you went along to get along.

The young man, brazenly upstart, dared to climb the corporate ladder. Or so he thought. Trainee positions led to account positions which led to management positions. Those led to the suburban upwardly mobile lifestyle, the wife, the kid, the traveling job, the high five-figure income. The young man on the fast track forgot what he'd been when the old commentator spoke.

It was during the heady, anything goes '80s that this brash, some thought arrogant, man began to be humbled. The Reagan years: tax reductions, junk bonds, leveraged buy outs, greenmail, T. Boone Pickens and H. Ross Perot. The '80s — those go-go years when as Gheko said greed was good; as Bush said voodoo economics reigned and our future was sold to tomorrow.

This upstart, a black man who sought to defy the odds, proceeded, missing all the cues and crashed upon the glass ceiling.

THE CHICAGO Radio Seer, a man named Roy Wood, retired to the south after years of battling the system. He lost more battles than he won. The thing is that he fought them. Who will fight them now?

Many thought the cocky, now aging man had not only crashed but burned against the glass ceiling. Corporate America with its clubs and cliques and rules and pecking order and politics, was not compatible with this rebel who had early on been influenced by the fire of Roy Wood who always ended his controversial commentary with the verbal challenge:

"This is just one black man's opinion? What's yours?"

The man, now pushing the four decade mark, was through the years forged. Life had taught some of the hard knocks a black man in this country will take. Affirmative action, discrimination, fear and misperception were common occurences which ultimately brought him again to the point of the fiery commentary of Roy Wood.

The point. The only way to fix the system is to challenge it. How? By providing balance, perspective and provocative new ideas.

I'M JEFFREY MILLER, that once brash man, a Detroit area transplant since the mid-'80s, who is fed up to the eyebrows with the way things are. Racial fear, production cutbacks, layoffs, the New World Order, AIDS, car jackings, Detroit bashing, minority scapegoating and the litany goes on.

I'm tired of dealing with the same old mindset that has the President in Japan, hat-in-hand, whining for a fair U.S. trade deal. In tow, like puppies on a leash, 20 of this country's most powerful businessmen expose the plea for fairness as the sham it is. Their monstrous salaries point up the very management/worker practices that have encouraged the deficit.

I happen to think that we can fix what ails us and so does the managing editor of this paper, Steve Barnaby, who watches a TV show called Transition that I produce. Since the show talks to these issues, Steve thought it would be a good idea to express some of those ideas in your paper.

So here I am: not quite so young anymore, still with a chip on my shoulder, committed to shaking things up. Committed to change.

In this column, every other week I'll be railing against the system like Roy Wood, the old Chicago commentator. From him I'll take the words:

"This is just one black man's opinion!" What's yours?

I hope you read this space and get involved.

Jeffrey Miller is a Southfield resident. Transition can be seen on WXON-TV 20, Continental Cable and United Cable.

Check variables on success

Doc Doyle

QUESTION: We are often told that money spent per child, higher teacher salaries and small class sizes impact on graduation rates, SAT scores and the like. What is the relationship?

ANSWER: After 14 years South Dakota's teachers make $21,300, the lowest teacher salary in the country. Yet South Dakota has the fourth highest graduation rate in the country and ranks seventh highest nationally in SAT scores.

Washington D.C. spends the most money per child ($7,850), has the third highest average teacher salary ($39,850) and the worst graduation rate in the country (57.7 percent). Salaries and money spent on students meant little if anything in Washington D.C.

Michigan has the fifth best class size ratio and the seventh best average teacher salary ($36,427) in the country but ranks 18th in SAT scores and 36th nationally in their graduation rate. Detroit has a 50 percent drop out rate.

There is a relationship between money spent on children and school success, but numerous other variables (crime rate in Washington D.C.) need to be considered. You need to look at your own district, its expenditures, graduation rate, the social economics existing and determine if you are getting your money's worth.

No end in sight to tax spending

Tim Richard

HOW DID we get this way? How did Michigan and America get to the point where one person in five draws some kind of welfare and one baby in four is born to a single mother who likely will join the welfare rolls?

Agnes Mansour, once director of the state Department of Social Services, had her answer: "the media." Stories on movie stars showed girls it was OK to have babies without a husband.

Coretta Scott King, widow of the civil rights leader, in a 1988 Oakland University talk, had her scapegoat: "conservative economists" of the '80s. She was blissfully ignorant that the trend started under John Kennedy in the '60s. (Happily, Gov. John Engler vetoed the program that paid for King's misinformation.)

A BETTER answer to why welfare dependency is growing came in a 1987 report by U.S. Senate Republicans. They blamed a series of U.S. Supreme Court decisions, saying:

- Loving v. Virginia (1967) "strikes down law against interracial marriage. This approach limits the ability of the state to regulate any aspect of marriage, remarriage after divorce, cohabitation, or legitimacy — central matters in welfare debates over the following two decades."
- King v. Smith (1968) "strikes down Alabama law denying AFDC eligibility to households which include 'substitute fathers,' i.e., adult males unrelated to the mother by blood or marriage. Decision makes cohabitation more profitable than marriage in most states."
- Weber v. Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. (1972) says "workmen's compensation benefits cannot be limited to legitimate children, sets stage for barring any government preference for legitimacy."
- New Jersey Welfare Rights Organization v. Cahill (1973) "forbids state preference for marriage over cohabitation in welfare programs."
- USDA v. Moreno (1973) "invalidates a provision of the food stamp program basing household eligibility upon ties of blood, marriage or adoption — the traditional definition of family."
- Moore v. East Cleveland (1977) "invalidate(s) municipal zoning ordinance based on the traditional family. . .(The court found this effort by a black community to strengthen family life 'senseless and arbitrary.'" The court says government can't "standardize" people by "forcing all to live in certain narrowly defined family patterns."
- Zablocki v. Redhail (1979) strikes down Wisconsin law that had required people obtaining a marriage license to show that "remarriage would not prevent them from continuing to support their children. Right to marry is given precedence over responsibility to spouse and children of former marriage."

THE BOTTOM line is that the U.S. Supreme Court prohibited states from showing preference to people who marry over people who cohabit.

By 1983 the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights was reporting that increases in marital disruption and illegitimacy "are responsible for essentially all of the growth in poverty since 1970. . .and that they show no signs of abating as the unwed birth and divorce rates continue to climb rapidly."

So today we have 52 million people soaking up hundreds of billions of tax dollars in 59 major programs — with no end in sight.

OK, some states overdid it by outlawing contraceptives and interracial marriage. But do the justices make fiscal impact studies of what their narrow legal decisions cost? taxpayers, businesses and other social needs like education? We don't know. The justices meet in secret.

Plymouth Salem did the supposedly impossible in high school gymnastics Saturday and won the Midland Invitational.

The Rocks finished ahead of defending state champion Muskegon Mona Shores and subsequently replaced the Sailors as the No. 1-ranked team in Michigan.

Salem, the runner-up behind Mona Shores in the last state meet, edged the Sailors by one quarter of a point, 143.45 to 143.20.

"Before the meet, I would have been surprised," Salem coach Becky Martin said, "but after watching (the Mona Shores gymnasts) they didn't look as good as they did last year. But it was still a great meet."

THE ROCKS were led by junior Courtney Gonyea, who overcame several formidable opponents from Mona Shores to win the all-around title with a 36.55 score.

Mona Shores' Heather Schneller and Becky Swelnis, the 1991 all-around state champ, were second and fourth in the invitational and Freeland's Sarah Kelly third.

Gonyea was second on the vault (9.35) and floor exercise (9.15), third on bars (9.05) and seventh on beam (9.0).

"Courtney had an excellent day, probably the best day she's had," Martin said. "Actually, everybody did very well. They all contributed and helped us win the meet."

Others who had a role in Salem's success were freshman Melissa Hopson — a winner in two events — senior Autumn Bunch and sophomores Alysia Sofios, Stephanie Skeppstrom and Sarah Makins.

Hopson was fifth in the all-around competition (36.15) and received the highest scores of the meet on beam (9.45) and floor exercise (9.25). She also placed 10th on vault (8.65) and had a non-scoring 8.8 on bars.

SOFIOS WAS fourth on bars (9.25) and floor (8.9), and she was seventh on vault (8.85). She scored 8.45 but didn't place on beam. Sofios finished seventh among the all-around contestants with a 35.45.

Skeppstrom and Bunch tied for eighth on vault (8.8). Skeppstrom placed sixth on beam (8.75) and eighth on floor (8.6), and Makins took fifth place on floor (8.8). Scoring well but not placing, Skeppstrom had 8.45 on bars, Makins 8.05 on beam and 8.8 on bars.

Martin said the Salem girls are proud of their new status as the top-ranked team in the state and hope to stay there for the remainder of the season.

"We just have a great team with a lot of depth and, hopefully, we can hold our status," she said. "I think we really have a chance of doing that, because we have more depth than (Mona Shores)."

Other teams competing in the Midland meet were Holt (135.15), Rochester (134.5), Hartland (133.8), Freeland (133.55), Traverse City (129.15), Trenton (119.9), Howell (115.05), Vassar (109.75), Midland (79.4) and Midland Dow (77.9).

Salem has a Western Lakes Activities Association dual meet tonight at Northville.

Plymouth Salem looks like an up-and-coming power in Observerland volleyball after winning its own tournament and Western Lakes Activities Association opener.

The Rocks won the six-team Plymouth Tournament Saturday, defeating Canton in the final, and began league play Monday with a three-game victory over host North Farmington.

Salem defeated the Raiders (15-5, 15-12, 15-8) despite having somewhat an off night, according to co-coach Allie Suffety. Of the 89 attacks by the Rocks, they had only 24 kills and more errors, 29.

But Salem managed to overcome the lack of a strong hitting attack by doing all the other things right, Suffety said.

"We had to work hard to get our points from them (in the second and third games). We played well in the first game and then slowed down the pace of play. They started digging us and took us right out of our game. But we passed pretty well and did everything we needed to do but attack, and that kept us in the game."

The Rocks were down 6-11 in the third game but rallied to within a point (12-11) before Jenna Stanton served the last four of the match, finishing with an ace.

Julianna DeLaRocque led the Rocks with 12 kills, and Shelby Carey had three kills and four blocks. Martha Bol added four kills and Cyndi Platter four blocks.

Caryn Tatterton recorded 18 assists, and Thomas led the defense with 12 digs out of 13 attempts. Michelle Cronan was 4-of-4 digging, DeLaRocque 5-of-6 and Nikki Santilli 6-of-7. Salem made only four errors defensively. Jenny Garvey served half of the team's six aces.

"It was a good win and we hope we are going forward," Suffety said.

Chiefs win invitational title again

Plymouth Canton turned a potential minus into a plus Saturday and captured the championship of the Rockford Invitational for the second straight year.

The Chiefs began the meet on the balance beam, arguably the most difficult of the four gymnastic events.

But Canton was nearly flawless on beam and eventually posted a 136.35

Fighter imitates Ali after Canton win

By Neal Zipser
staff writer

Craig Payne doesn't admit to being the next Muhammad Ali — yet — but he's starting to sound like the great former champion.

The 28-year-old Livonia Boxing Club heavyweight improved his professional record to 5-0-1 after a four-round unanimous decision Tuesday over Luis Torrez at Canton's Center Stage.

Payne, listed at 260 pounds, doesn't resemble the great champion but started to sound like him after he battered Torrez throughout the fight.

"In '92, I'm going to show you what I can do; so in '93, I can say look at me," Payne chanted in his locker room. "I'm still six to eight months away from being all the way back, but when I am, I'll be hell to contend with. They're going to think I'm Ali out of retirement."

Coming off a December draw against Robert Smith, Payne continued on his comeback trail by dominating Torrez, a Cleveland native, before a enthusiastic home crowd. Payne was unable to knock down the portly Torrez, but made sure his punches left damage.

"He can take a punch," Payne said. "I hit him good in the left side a couple of times and thought he was going to collapse."

BY THE END of the fight, Torrez's entire left side was as red as his trunks and blood trickled from his nose and upper lip.

The fight looked as if it wouldn't last one round as Payne pounded Torrez with a flurry of 15 straight right hooks to Torrez's left side.

Craig Payne (left) of Livonia won a unanimous four-round decision Tuesday night at Canton's Center Stage against Luis Torres of Cleveland. Payne is now 5-0-1 as a professional.

Payne claims ring decision

The second round was also all Payne, as he landed several punches to Torrez's mid-section. Payne, fighting in new look zebra-like shorts, hammered away at Torrez, who landed only one combination for the entire fight.

With Torrez's face starting to show signs of the fight in the third round, Payne mistakenly nailed Torrez with a low blow. The delay seemed to give Torrez time to regroup.

The fight ended with both fighters leaning on each other with Payne, looking somewhat frustrated, unable to record a knockdown. The judges awarded Payne a 40-36 decision.

"I'm not at my best — I'm still a little weak," Payne admitted. "I still have to lose some weight. I have to keep on working. I'm still proud of myself.

"He made me work which may prove to be good for me in later fights with stiffer competition. I have to keep on fighting. I'll be in the gym tomorrow morning."

boxing

UNSURPRISINGLY, Torrez (1-2) was unimpressed with Payne and welcomes a rematch.

"If he wants to come back, he's got to lose about 50 pounds," Torrez said. "Whatever he threw at me, I didn't feel. I hit him with some good punches by I'm only 214 pounds. If he was 214 pounds, then it would be a better fight.

"I know when I fight, win or lose, it will be a good fight. If he wants to fight me again, fine. I'm confident. I'll fight him next month if he wants."

Paul Soucy, Payne's manager, said Payne may fight as many as three bouts in February. The caliber of competition may improve after some television appearances, he added. The USA Cable Network was present for Tuesday's card, but technical problems caused Payne's fight to be omitted from the telecast.

"He has to lose about 40 more pounds," Soucy said. "It'll take three to four months to take the weight off. He'll have to keep fighting to keep intense. You can practice and work out and lose your intensity. But I like his attitude. He wants it more than ever. He's back and he's here to stay."

IN OTHER BOUTS: Super bantamweight Jemal Hinton of Detroit's Kronk Gym improved to 22-0 with a 10-round unanimous decision over Locido Norasco (33-13-2) in featured bout; Lansing's Joe Lipsey (12-0) scored a technical knockout over Californian Ricky Haynes in middleweight action; and Fritz Bruney of Toronto (5-1) won a majority decision over Brian Blakley of Grand Rapids in junior middleweight action.

Delta grounds S'craft cagers

Done in by foul trouble and a long-range shooting game that had deserted it, Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team was chopped down again, 95-77 by Delta CC Saturday at the Saginaw Civic Center.

"We shot from downtown and that hurt us," said coach Dave Bogataj after his team had fallen to 8-12 overall, 2-6 in the Eastern Conference. Delta improved to 9-8 overall, 3-5 in the conference.

Delta packed in their defense in an attempt to neutralize SC inside threats Jarvis Murray and Scott Meredith. It worked: Murray managed just seven points and six rebounds, and Meredith got 12 points and six boards.

Both ended up fouling out. So did Gamal Ahmed. The Ocelots sent the Pioneers to the free throw line 42 times; they made 27 (64 percent). SC was just 5-of-11 (45 percent).

SC got 15 points and seven boards from Jeff Wagner. Fred Frieman led Delta with 28 points.

SC WOMEN: The Lady Ocelots suffered from a power outage Saturday. It started at SC when a generator went out, forcing the game — which SC was supposed to host — to be changed to Delta CC.

Then the loss of power followed the Lady Ocelots all the way to Saginaw.

It started to show at the end of the first half. Delta went to the free throw line seven times in the final two minutes, making six; in that same span, the Lady Ocelots missed the front end of two one-and-ones.

That gave the Lady Pioneers a 37-29 halftime advantage, and sent them on their way to a 74-63 triumph over SC.

The Lady Ocelots did not surrender meekly in the second half. With 12 minutes remaining, a Donna Galli basket put them ahead 52-50. The game remained tight until SC point guard Jen Audet fouled out with five minutes left. Delta took immediate advantage, stealing the ball twice in a row and scoring to open up a six-point (60-54) lead.

That started the Lady Pioneers on a 20-9 closing run, which elevated them to 11-6 overall and 4-3 in the Eastern Conference.

Tournament trophy goes to Salem girls

In the tournament pool play, Salem defeated Ann Arbor Huron (15-3, 15-3), Bloomfield Hills Lahser (15-10, 15-11) and Ann Arbor Pioneer (15-11, 15-7) and split with Dexter (15-11, 12-15).

The Rocks were the No. 1-seeded team after pool play and drew a bye in the first round of the playoffs. They defeated Huron (15-11, 15-2) in the semfinals and Canton (15-3, 15-4) in the final.

"We peaked at a good time," Suffety said. "We played the best we have all year against Huron and Canton.

We had a variety of attacks and people doing the attacking. Later in the day when we needed to take care of business, (the Salem players) did the job. We got some great play out of a lot of players. It was a fun day for us."

DeLaRocque had a team-high 10 kills in the Canton match, Carey six and Tatterton four despite being the setter. Bol and Thomas added three kills each.

"We had a couple situations where (Tatterton) had the ball set to her, and once in a while she will dump the tip in," Suffety said.

DeLaRocque served four of Salem's eight aces in the Canton match, and Carey and Thomas accounted for the other four. Garvey was a standout on defense, according to Suffety.

In pool play, DeLaRocque had 24 kills in 39 attempts and 11 aces. Carey had nine aces, Thomas eight and Garvey seven. Thomas also made seven blocks for points, Bol six and Platter four. Tatterton had 48 assists out of 99 sets. DeLaRocque and Bol had six kills each against Huron, Carey three kills and four blocks.

PLYMOUTH CANTON got better with each game Monday, but the Chiefs took too long to get started and lost to visiting Farmington in three games (8-15, 10-15, 14-16).

"Time ran out on us," Canton coach Jacqueline Getz said. "Farmington did a pretty good job pulling apart our defense, and it took time for us to adjust. Where we broke down was in communication, and that really hurt us in the first two games.

"But the girls played well in the third game. The longer we play the better we do, and that was never more evident tonight. We just have to get them started earlier."

Erin Olenech and Angela Fountain played well in the front and back row for the Chiefs, 0-1 in the WLAA and 14-9-3 overall in games played. Canton's Karrie Drinkhahn, Michelle Metzger and Jenny Davis blocked well, Getz said.

The Chiefs were 3-5 in tournament pool play Saturday. They split with Lahser (9-15, 15-5), Pioneer (15-17, 15-7) and Huron (4-15, 15-11).

Canton lost its last match to Dexter (5-11, 6-15) but found new life in the playoffs, defeating Lahser (15-10, 15-10) and avenging its loss to Dexter (15-12, 15-12).

"It was the best we played all day, the highlight of the tournament," Getz said.

"We were warmed up and ready to play. We played as a team, and each person took care of her own position. When it came down to do-or-die, the girls played with heart and won."

Salem halted Canton's playoff surge with a 15-3, 15-4 victory in the final, however.

"Salem is a very good team," Getz said. "They're strong in all areas. They don't have a weak spot in their game.

"It was an emotional match. Our girls played well but probably not as well as they could have."

Davis and Danielle Meyka played consistently well overall, said Getz. who also cited the contributions of Colleen Connell (back row), Olenech (front row) and Drinkhahn, who was an aggressive hitter.

Titans edge Shamrocks

Southgate Anderson's Chris Siemans scored what proved to be the game-winning goal with only 3:21 remaining in the final period, lifting the visiting Titans to a 5-4 triumph Saturday over host Catholic Central at the Redford Arena.

Each team entered the Michigan Metro matchup ranked in the top ten in the state (Class A coaches poll).

The loss drops Redford CC to 8-2-1 overall and 4-2 in West Division of the Metro. The Shamrocks fell to No. 8 in the rankings.

Meanwhile, Anderson, now 4-1 in the East Division, is ranked No. 5 statewide.

"We didn't play well from beginning to end," CC assistant coach Ron Repicky said. "We made more good passes to them in our own end than we made to ourselves."

It was 1-1 after one period as Eric Jay Prato scored for Southgate, while Joe Blaznek, from Mike Giordano and Pat Casey, countered for CC.

Each team scored twice in the second period.

Mules remain champs of CC mat invitational

Temperance Bedford, ranked No. 1 in Class A, had five individual champions Saturday and won its third straight Redford Catholic Central Wrestling Invitational.

The Kicking Mules have now won 13 of the 28 CC Invitationals and eight of the last 11.

Westland John Glenn was the highest-placing Observerland team, taking seventh place with 86 points, followed by CC in eighth place (85½). Birmingham Brother Rice in 12th (53½) and Wayne Memorial, in 15th place (15½). Fifteen of the scheduled 16 teams showed.

Holt, rated ninth in Class A prior to the meet, placed ninth with 82½ points. Four of the individual winners are past champions at the CC Invitational.

For statistical summary, see page 4B.

JOHN GLENN'S Mike Reeves turned in the surprise performance of the meet, winning the 152-pound division after receiving a No. 2 seed. Reeves started his assault on the title with a 17-0 win over Mount Pleasant's Matt Daniels. In the second round, Reeves beat Howell's Brad Barron because of a default and then outdueled Warren Lincoln's Sean Pearse, the ninth-seed, 6-4, to reach the finals.

Reeves outlasted the No. 1 seed, Bedford's Jess Hurley, 10-5, to win the championship and cement himself as a legitimate contender for the state title. Reeves is currently undefeated overall.

The Rockets had strong depth as defined by their three third place finishes. Tom Pace took third place in the 103-pound division with a 4-1 win over Holt's Rob Hernandez; Mike Mancini captured third in the 112 division with a default over CC's Mario Sciciuna, who broke an ankle earlier in the day; and Shane Hall picked up third-place recognition with a 7-5 win over Utica Ford's Jason Kass.

CC, which won the meet in 1987, '88 and '89, finished with two champions — junior Jason Krueger and senior Dan Kelly.

Krueger, seeded first, won the title with a 10-4 win over Holt's Jim Workman in the final round. To reach the final round, Krueger won his first match by void, beat Mount Pleasant's Tom Hutchins, 15-0, and East Detroit's Brian Carr, 10-0.

KELLY ALSO WAS seeded first and after a first-round victory by void he pinned his remaining three opponents for the 171-pound title. Kelly pinned Howell's Bernie Gibbons in 1 minute, 46 seconds, Mount Pleasant's Janey Ervin in 3:39 and Davison's Jeff Lewis in the finals in :55.

Bedford's Fred Schaumacher, the defending 119-pound Class A champion, was named the invitational's Most Valuable Wrestler. Schaumacher, the second seed, defeated No. 1 seed Derek Moscovic of Birmingham Brother Rice, 9-6, in the finals. Moscovic, who is the defending 112 pound state champion and a CC Invitational winner in 1991, recorded two pins and a 22-7 win sandwiched in-between to reach the final round against Schaumacher.

Rice also had a runnerup in the 189-pound division, where John McGuire was pinned in the final by Howell's Jason Steinacker in 3:01.

McGuire, the second seed, received a bye into the second round, won a 16-14 decision over Bedford's Jay Woodbury, and pinned Davison's Rob Gould in 3:12 to reach the finals.

Canton 2-peats at Rockford meet team score — almost seven points better than runner-up East Lansing (129.65). Holland was third (128.10) and East Kentwood fourth (126.65) in the 15-team meet.

The No. 3-ranked Chiefs moved to floor exercise next, finished on vault and bars and saw their lead grow from two points after two events as other teams took their turn on beam.

"I thought it would be a disadvantage, but it turned out to be an advantage," Canton coach John Cunningham said. "We had a very solid beam, and beam is the one you have to be careful on because anyone can fall.

"THEY ALLOW only four (to compete) so every single gymnast counts. You have to count every mistake, every fall. That's what happened to East Lansing. They had a number of falls on beam and literally fell into a seven-point deficit."

gymnastics

Canton junior Kim Rennolds, who won two events and was the highest scoring all-around gymnast, was first on beam (8.65), Jenny Tedesco third (8.35) and Dawn Clifford eighth (8.1).

Each one performed a no-fall routine and would have scored 9-plus at any other meet, but Cunningham said judges in the West Michigan area are not as likely to award those kind of scores.

"To start on beam before you get any rhythm or know how the judges are going to score the meet can be difficult," Cunningham said, adding beam is where meets tend to be won or lost.

"At the Athens Invitational, we went early on vault and after watching us lose because of it I was very uncomfortable starting on beam. But we had a good early performance, and it contributed to a momentum that carried through the rest of the meet."

Rennolds was first again on floor exercise with a 9.25 and Tedesco was fifth (8.55).

THE CHIEFS placed four among the top six on vault, which was "pretty decent considering the number of girls who competed," Cunningham said.

Kim Lewke and Rennolds tied for third place, each with a 9.15. Tedesco was fifth (8.95) and Clifford sixth (8.9).

Canton fared well on bars, too. Rennolds was second (8.85), Tedesco third (8.8) and Laura Anderson fifth (8.55).

Rennolds finished with a 35.9 cumulative score, and Tedesco was second in the all-around competition with a 34.65.

"If Kim would have had those performances anywhere else but Rockford, she would have been a high 36, maybe 37," Cunningham said.

"I was very pleased with the performances. It was a solid, team effort. The kids pulled together and had an excellent meet as a team, and that is what this had to be when you only count four scores."

Cunningham also cited the performances of Cara Stillings on floor, an event she hadn't worked previously in an invitational and Anderson on bars, the only event in which she competed, as being indicative of the team effort.

"I told (Stillings) all I wanted from her was an eight and she had an 8.1," he said. "Those are the kind of performances we need."

Area trio commits to Bowling Green

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Bowling Green, which won last fall's Mid-American Conference football race and the 1991 California Raisin Bowl, appears to have won its share of recruiting battles in Observerland as well.

BG received commitments this week from Farmington Hills Harrison seniors Mike Story and Duante Anderson and Redford Catholic Central's Dave Bruhowzki.

Story, a 6-foot-6, 280-pound offensive lineman, picked BG over Central Michigan, while Anderson, a 6-2, 165-pound receiver, selected the Falcons over Western Michigan. Bruhowzki, a 6-5, 235-pound defensive end, chose BG over the University of Toledo.

Another Harrison standout, defensive tackle Leon Jefferson, has committed to Eastern Michigan, while Westland John Glenn defensive tackle Jason Hagelthorn has committed to Central Michigan.

Players can sign binding national letters-of-intent on Wednesday, Feb. 5.

Bowling Green finished 11-1 last fall and earned a No. 30 national ranking by the Associated Press and USA Today after a 28-21 upset victory over Fresno State in the Raisin Bowl. The players seemed encouraged by those numbers as well as coach Gary Blackney's commitment to the program.

Blackney, who was an assistant at Ohio State University prior to taking over last fall at BG, recently signed a five-year contract extension. The Falcons return most of their skilled players, including 6-5 quarterback Erik White, who will be a senior.

"I THOUGHT THE coaches were a lot more friendly and there was more of a family atmosphere," said Anderson, who was a first-team All-Observer choice last fall — only his second season of organized football. "And the California Bowl win was definitely a push toward the school. I'm really excited about it."

Anderson, who plans to study business, is looking forward to being Story's teammate again.

"It's great having a fellow state champion going with me," he said.

Story began his career at Harrison on the golf team before finally putting football pads on his massive frame as a junior.

"I guess there was a lot of peer pressure for me to play because of my size — everyone thought it would be great if I played — and I guess it paid off," Story said. "All the BG coaches told me I was just starting to reach my peak."

Like Anderson, Story was impressed most by the coaching staff and the players' winning attitudes. BG is playing at Ohio State University on Sept. 12 next fall and the following week at the University of Wisconsin.

"Overall, their team spirit is on fire and they can't wait to play again — that's kind of the way we were," Story said. "A winning attitude was a determining factor, but academics were also important because I felt academically it'll be challenging at Bowling Green."

BRUHOWZKI DIDN'T catch a pass as a tight end for CC last fall but, he showed promise as a defensive end — and that's where he'll play at BG.

"What I liked about BG most is the players — they seemed to be a lot like myself, dedicated and hard working," Bruhowzki said. "It seemed to be the program I wanted to be in. My host (BG defensive tackle Bob Dudley) was a guy full of enthusiasm."

football

Jefferson selected EMU after visiting the Ypsilanti campus as well as Grand Valley. He canceled a visit to Toledo. EMU plays in the MAC with Bowling Green and Jefferson looks forward to future battles with his former Harrison teammates.

"It's not going to change our friendships," he said. "We knocked heads all year in practice, so we might as well go at it again. I felt comfortable at Eastern. There's a lot of other guys from Harrison there like Bryan Wauldron, Chris Cox and Scott Nichols."

Hagelthorn picked Central over the University of Toledo. Hagelthorn was a linebacker in high school but the Chippewas plan on playing the 6-3, 236-pounder as a defensive lineman.

Hagelthorn, who has been selected to play in this summer's Michigan High School All-Star game, said knowing former Glenn players Chris Scheffer are prospering at CMU helped sway his decision.

'The Sound and Fury'

Playwright introduces Faulkner

"Oh, Mr. Faulkner, Do You Write," 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 30, at the Livonia City Hall Auditorium, and 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 1, at a dinner theater in the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth. Tickets for the Jan. 30 performance are $5 in advance, or $6 at the door. Dinner theater tickets, $25, available at the Plymouth Community Arts Council office 322 S. Main. For reservations call 455-5260.

'It's entertaining. It's not an academic piece. It makes Faulkner accessible to those who knew his work, and those who never heard of the man.'
— John Maxwell

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

Actor/playwright John Maxwell presents his one-man play "Oh, Mr. Faulkner, Do You Write?", at the Livonia City Hall Auditorium, Farmington Road at Five Mile, 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 30, and at a dinner theater 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 1, in the Mayflower Meeting House, 455 S. Main Plymouth.

"I ENJOY introducing people to the man," said Maxwell who performs the part in a soft, Southern drawl using some of Faulkner's personal belongings such as his pipe and hat as props.

"I read all of his novels, screen plays and poetry," said Maxwell, who spent six years researching the book, and six months co-writing it with Tom Dupree.

"I spoke with people who had known him for their personal recollections. The key was the letters. There was a volatileness there about the man. I didn't start off with a grand plan to it. It formed on its own as I began writing."

Set in the author's Mississippi den, the action takes place prior to Faulkner's receiving the Nobel Prize in 1949 as he wrestles with wether or not to travel to Stockholmo accept it.

"Oh, Mr. Faulkner" strikes delicate balance between drama and humor as Maxwell's script focus on Faulkner's human side. In oneearrending scene, Faulkner reves details of his brother Dean's death in an airplane. He blames himsf because he bought the plane ar paid for his brother's lessons.

"It's entertaining. It's not a academic piece. It makes Faulkr accessible to those who knew hiwork, and those who never heard f the man. He has such a dry, darkense of humor. He's an abundant rich storyteller."

TO SHOWCASE Faulkner dry wit, the play travels back to tl hard drinking author's unhappy reen writing days in Hollywood wre his famous conversation with Clark Gable took place.

Gable asked Faulkner to nae the top writers in America. Fdkner named them, and included hinelf in the list. Gable replied "O Mr. Faulkner, do you write?"

Faulkner countered, "Ye Mr. Gable, what do you do?"

The play ends with Faulkr deciding to go to Stockholm toaccept the Nobel Prize because, as e puts it, he owes it to a lot of people who have "waited a long time to be proud of me."

Like Faulkner, Maxwell was born in Mississippi. Maxwell graduated from the University of Mississippi with a master's degree in theater after completing undergraduate work in English. After a decade as a professor of speech and theater at a community college outside Jackson, Miss., he said he felt burned out. Taking a leave of absence, he applied for a grant from the Mississippi Arts Commission to write, "Oh, Mr. Faulkner."

The play made its debut in April 1981 at the New State Theatre in Jackson, Miss. Since then, Maxwell has taken the play throughout the United States and to 12 other countries including U.S. Information Agency tours to the Middle East and Africa. Later this year, he will perform in Japan.

"We're very excited to be bringing such an acclaimed performer to our area, and that so many people including students will have a chance to see this play," said Nancy Pilon, chairwoman of community programs for the Plymouth Community Arts Council which is hosting the performance.

The Jan. 30 performance is hosted in conjunction with the Livonia Arts Commission. Advance tickets are available at the City of Livonia's Department of Community Resources office in city hall, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

BESIDES MAXWELL'S two public performances, he will give theater workshops, and perform for students at Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton High School, Divine Child High School in Dearborn, and Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. All are funded in part by a grant from Arts Midwest.

"I'm interested in presenting the Livonia performance because it's another service that the arts commission can offer the community. Any money we receive will go to help pay the fee of the artist," said Jack Olds, chairman of the Livonia Arts Commission.

"We'd like to make it as affordable as possible," said Kathy Savitskie, Plymouth Arts Council executive director. "This is one of the things we'd like to do with our Wilcox Mill Arts Center to bring in events for all of the surrounding communities, a kind of sharing and collaborating with each other."

Actor/playwright John Maxwell brings to life William Faulkner's humorous side as well as tragic in "Oh, Mr. Faulkner, Do You Write?" Thursday, Jan. 30, in Livonia and Saturday, Feb. 1, in Plymouth.

Youngster breaks into show biz

By William Coutant
staff writer

Marvin Brennan probably won't be watching TV tonight.

While some of his friends play video games, watch their favorite sitcoms or play some one-on-one basketball, the 10-year-old will likely be taking dance lessons or acting lessons, or he might even be in front of a TV camera.

Brennan, a fourth grade student at Guardian Angel School in Birmingham, tried his hand at performing two and a half years ago and has been at it ever since.

"My sisters took a tap dancing class, and I went with them," Brennan said. "I watched what they were doing and practiced it myself."

That imitation of sisters Stacey, 16, and Bridgette, 14, brought out the young dancer's love of performing, and got him started. His mother Kathy said her son's abilities and interest soon took him beyond regular dance lessons, which led to private lessons.

Since then, Marvin has appeared on stage in musicals, plays and operas, on TV specials and commercials, and in industrial and commercial films. His most recent Detroit area appearance came on "Never Lose Hope," a Christmas special that featured Pistons star Isiah Thomas.

And despite those accomplishments, Marvin is like any other boy who likes baseball and playing with friends.

"I got his (Thomas') autograph," he said. "He was nice."

ALTHOUGH HIS parts are sometimes small, Marvin has excelled in a variety of media, from Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," which played at the Fisher Theatre in December, to a principal part in the American Academy of Dance's Soviet Union Cultural Tour to commercial films and a part in a Walt Disney Movie, "Wild Hearts Can't Be Broken."

Being ready for a variety of roles requires hours of training in dancing, acting and voice (Marvin has twice won national dance competitions). And even then, a director might want some one with "a different look."

"They want (the performer) to be good at everything," said Kathy Brennan. "You never know. They may want some singing or dancing in a role. So you've got to be prepared."

So far, Marvin has not been too disappointed with being passed up for parts. He's certainly had his share of roles in his brief career.

And friends don't have a problem with his celebrity status either.

"They think it's pretty neat," he said. "They didn't know I could do that work."

Sue Martin, of the Talent Shop in Birmingham, said with few companies that direct their message to audiences with children, such as those that produce toy or baby products, opportunities for young actors are limited. Marvin's good work ethic and professional attitude have helped him get parts.

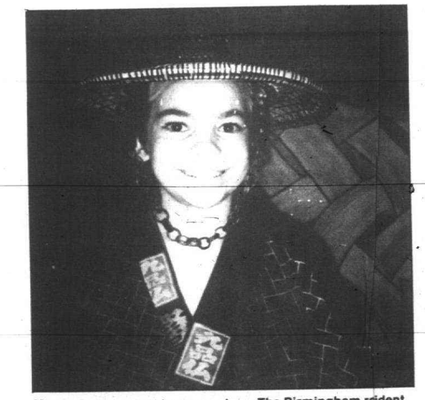
"Marvin is a very skilled young man," she said. "He has professional experience and he wants to do this. They either want to or they don't. He really does a good job."

Already, in his brief career, Marvin has traveled to Poland, Russia, Denmark and Sweden, and has auditioned for shows in New York, North Carolina and, most recently, San Francisco.

That travel has a price. Marvin has to make up school work, and if he's on the road, he has to work with a tutor. After a recent trip to San Francisco for an audition, the young Thespian returned only to have to cram for seven exams.

"It's a lot of fun, but a lot of work," Kathy Brennan said. "I told him 'If you want to do this, you have to do your school work.' We don't want to push."

Marvin may be missing out on some things, but he doesn't seem to mind. After all, he might just end up on the other side of the TV screen his friends are watching.



Marvin Brennan is at home on stage. The Birmingham resident was in costume for the Detroit production of "The Mikado" at the Fisher Theatre in December.

American Artists Series sheds light on obscure works

Avigdor Zaromp

The American Artists Series, which has had a dedicated core of followers during its more than 20 years of existence, is distinguished with its unusual repertoire.

Joann Freeman, pianist and musical director of the series, seems to have an inexhaustible ability to dig through libraries and archives and come up with new musical treasures that seldom, if ever, see the light of day.

The latest program of this series, given Jan. 12, marked a certain departure from this approach. While some non-standard material will still be presented on future programs, it will be intermingled with established selections from the standard repertoire.

Starting with the recent program, the selections on all events have been changed to reflect the new trend.

THE LATEST program opened with Mozart's Quartet in F major for Oboe and Strings. It concluded with the Piano Trio in C major by Brahms. In between were two less familiar works that were in the original schedule — a Larghetto and Humoreske by John Knowles Paine (1839-1906) and a quartet for Oboe and Strings by Malcolm Arnold (b. 1921).

The regular contingent of DSO musicians consisted of violinists Linda Snedden-Smith and Ronald Fischer, violist Hart Hollman, cellist John Thurman and oboist Donald Baker.

Such change in format is, in my opinion, a step in the right direction. In his introductory notes to the Mozart Oboe quartet, Baker elicited chuckles from the audience when he remarked that the Mozart masterpiece was of a much higher quality than the obscure work by Crusell originally scheduled.

THIS, IN itself, may not be a great revelation to most of us — few would seriously dispute the superiority of the established masters. This, however, doesn't make the less established works obsolete.

Unknown works with reasonable qualifications may be analogous, if not outright equivalent, to a voyage into foreign lands. Such a voyage can be enjoyable provided one doesn't remain stranded. The established repertoire serves as a secure home base of return from such a journey.

Possibly a less desirable side effect is that programming obscure works side by side with the more-established masterpieces tends to put the former at a distinct disadvantage.

THIS WAS the case, for example, with Paine's work for the same instrumental combination as the Brahms Trio. This Larghetto and Humoreske, in itself, reflects some central aspects of the endowed Romantic tradition,: imitating generously the styles of Schumann and Brahms. But it was a far cry from the artistic excellence of Brahms.

Among the factors that made this chasm even more pronounced was the fact that the performance of the Brahms Trio was among the better, more-inspired live performances of this work that I have heard — complete with a sense of perspective and subtle nuances.

The energy flowed from the music itself, rather than from brute force. The latter was more apparent in the Paine work. One had to strain to find something humorous in the Humoreske.

THE Oboe Quartet by Arnold fared better.

With its style and period so far removed from Mozart, it avoided the futile prospect of a direct comparison. Its English idyllic style provided this program with a dimension that was not duplicated in the other works. It also benefited from Baker's ability to make almost any work for oboe sound like a masterpiece.

There was some concern on the part of the organizers that the Detroit Lions game, which took place that day, would reduce attendance. Kingswood Auditorium turned out to be more full than ever. This may have been one significant albeit indirect contribution to the advancement of the arts by a most-inspired invention — the VCR.

THE NEXT program, on March 8, will feature works by Mozart (Flute Quartet), Amy Beach, Villa-Lobos and Mendelssohn (C minor Trio).

Beach has been put on the map recently by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and its director, Neeme Jarvi, who recorded her Gaelic Symphony. Her work on this program will be Theme and Variations for Flute and String Quartet.

Avigdor Zaromp, born in Poland, educated in Israel and the United States, has a Ph.D. in math and has studied piano, music theory and history.

Foland's planning overhaul; lenders want liquidation

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A bankruptcy judge apparently will decide Foland's short-term future after negotiations between creditors and the Livonia-based showroom retailer failed.

Foland's this week announced plans to file a Chapter 11 petition in which the company reorganizes under court supervision and continues to operate.

A committee representing several hundred creditors announced an intention to force a Chapter 7 filing — an involuntary liquidation. In that situation, a court-appointed trustee sells assets and the debtor is discharged of further responsibility.

Bankruptcy laws will allow Foland's a shot at devising a survival plan.

Foland's announced it would reopen all six of its metro Detroit stores including-outlets in Rochester, Southfield and Livonia as of yesterday (Wednesday).

"It will be business as usual," said David Castlegrant, director of stores for Foland's. "We plan to continue operating all six locations, expanding our strongest categories, namely fine jewelry, bridal registry, gift and tabletop.

"Weaker business segments will be eliminated through aggressive inventory liquidations," he added.

ALL SIX FOLAND'S stores closed Jan. 3. The Livonia store opened Jan. 14, but only to process layaway purchases and repairs.

Upwards of 250 of the 450 employees who had been laid off have been called back to work, Castlegrant said. Others are expected in the weeks ahead, but he couldn't provide an exact number or timetable.

Cost cutting moves contemplated by Foland's include combining positions at the Livonia headquarters.

Foland's also plans to discontinue its annual catalogue book.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Foland's plans to open all six of its catalgue showrooms and file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization, despite plans by creditors to force the company to liquidate under Chapter 7.

Shelly Mishal, a lawyer representing the creditor's committee, said a majority of businesses owed money opted to call for a forced liquidation after negotiations failed.

"At this point, the creditors have an obligation to recover as much as they can," Mishal said. "They've provided goods and services in good faith. Foland's has an obligation to pay them.

"Our goal is to maximize return or minimize losses for hundreds of businesses," Mishal added. "We worked hard to come to a satisfactory solution for everyone. It hasn't happened yet. We're still hoping for a resolution good for everyone.

Foland's, established in 1973, is a privately-owned company.

Standard Federal sets new mortgage record

Standard Federal Bank in 1991 set a new record for home mortgage lending volume, said Thomas R. Ricketts, chairman and president.

The Troy-based lender closed 20,960 home loans for a total of $1.67 billion — a 65-percent increase over last year's record $1.01 billion.

Standard Federal also:

- Doubled its net income for the final quarter of 1991 to $21.4 million or 68 cents a share, compared to $10.6 million and 34 cents share in the same quarter of 1990. It credited the showing to relatively lower levels of market interest rates for deposits.
- Raised the quarterly dividend 10 percent — to 11 cents from 10 cents for holders of record Feb. 17, payable March 2.

Of the loan closings, 28.1 percent were refinances of current Standard Federal loans compared to 9.0 percent in 1990. Standard Federal is by far the largest home mortgage lender in Michigan, closing more loans than the next two largest home lenders put together.

'With our current outstanding loan commitments of over $199 million, we anticipate another very large volume of home mortgage loan closings in 1992.'
— Thomas R. Ricketts chairman and president

- Non-performing assets are less than 0.5 percent of total assets, a continued drop.

"With our current outstanding loan commitments of over $199 million, we anticipate another very large volume of home mortgage loan closings in 1992," said Ricketts, whose bank has 120 branches in Michigan, Indiana and Ohio.

Laid-off retail employees face slim pickings

By Doug Funke
staff writer

The 500 or so Highland Superstores employees who have been or will be laid off in a cost-cutting move face a difficult time finding comparable jobs, consultants familiar with the industry said.

Highland, a publicly-owned company that sells appliances and home entertainment equipment, has headquarters in Plymouth and 49 stores in the Midwest including Westland, Southfield and Troy.

The layoffs — in all areas of the company's operations — were announced last week to stem a tide of red financial ink. Most have already occurred, said Danette Wineberg, a Highland spokeswoman.

The 500 jobs due to be cut represent nearly 18 percent of Highland's current work force of 2,800 full and part-timers.

"People unemployed will have a hard time finding jobs," said James V. McTevia, president of an East Detroit distressed debtor consulting firm that carries his name. "With the situation in the retail industry today, there are simply not going to be jobs out there.

"In the retail industry, January, February and March generally are downers anyway," McTevia said. "It's going to be a long time before they (employers) even start taking resumes.

"IN METRO Detroit, look at what usually happens after Christmas. Even in good times, people brought in temporarily are laid off. These aren't good times," he said.

Ronald P. Leonetti, who owns a senior management strategist company in Southfield specializing in retail, concurred with McTevia's observations.

"Those detached are going to have a very difficult time getting re-attached," he said. "The trend in retailing doesn't suggest there's an abundance of jobs.

"It doesn't seem like we're going through a cycle, but a transition," Leonetti said. "Other large employers have also gone through reductions through attritions, buyouts or other methods."

Joseph O'Connor, president of Consumer Market Analysts in Birmingham, echoed similar thoughts.

"The job market is tight now, especially for professionals, especially in retail where they're cutting back," O'Connor said. "I would think it would be difficult (to find jobs) with the recession we're in.

"I KNOW from personal experience, people we work with, retail or otherwise, are going through restructurings," he said. "Whoever you are today, if you're in middle management, you have a heckuva job to convince someone you have something to offer them."

McTevia doesn't see much hope for improvement any time soon. "Can people go out of Michigan? No. It's a recession trend nationally," he said. "You can go to West Palm Beach and shoot off a cannon in the malls and not hit anyone.

"A repairman may be able to eke out some income, but other stores surviving have their own work force," McTevia said.

Jay A. Wedeven, an owner of Strategic Edge, a Southfield retail planning firm, sees a mixed bag of opportunity.

"There's two ways to look at it. If you have a highly productive professional salesperson on commission, they may get a job with another organization," he said. "Corporate staff may have a difficult time. So many companies are consolidating and merging."

PEOPLE WHO lose their jobs should take advantage of any outplacement services Highland might offer, Leonetti advised.

"Knock on doors, respond to ads, make yourself available to people you know — friends, church members, old associates," he said. "You can make a substantial list of contacts. Make phone calls, set up breakfast meetings or coffee meetings."

Highland has offered "severance pay, various job counseling and referral assistance" to employees who were laid off, Wineberg said.

Highland reported a loss of $156.9 million on revenues of $420.8 million through the first nine months of its current budget year.

Highland reported a loss of $11.7 million on sales of $860.8 million during fiscal 1990 and a loss of $12.4 million on sales of $924.7 million in 1989.

"The streamling of our work force and operations, both in our stores and in our corporate office, is designed to enable Highland to become an even lower-cost operator," said Ira Mondry, president and CEO.

"The lower our costs, the lower our prices can be. At the same time, we have designed the changes to maintain our high level of in-store and after-the-sale customer service," he added.

Highland also was to meet with creditors this week in an effort to restructure debt payments. A lawyer representing suppliers said his clients were owed in excess of $100 million.

Mondry confirmed that Highland has no plans to close any of its existing stores.

'People unemployed will have a hard time finding jobs. In the retail industry, January, February and March generally are downers anyway. It's going to be a long time before they (employers) even start taking resumes.

"Beware of little expenses; small leaks will sink a great ship," said Benjamin Franklin. This month's profiled couple, Joe and Phyllis Harris, need to plug those expense leaks from their monthly budget lest their entire financial ship flounder.

Last week, when we reviewed their credit card and debt problems, we saw that there were two methods that would work well in making these debts more manageable. Our comments this week will focus on helping them get the most from their $45,000 income.

The Harrises are living at the edge. Any unforseen major expense or temporary loss of income could push them into insolvency. They need to take steps now to build a more secure foundation.

This financial dilemma is one that is faced by people of all income levels — from people who earn $15,000 per year to those earning more than $250,000 per year. It is probably difficult for the Harrises to believe that someone earning $250,000 per year could get into financial difficulty. But it is not how much one makes that determines financial success. It is the rate of expenditures in relation to that income that is the primary factor influencing financial security.

Most people think they would be in great shape if their income were about 20 percent higher than it is currently. But there are always more consumer goods on which to spend money. We all face choices, and Joe and Phyllis have sufficient income to be successful financially if they choose.

Understanding and accepting this basic financial truth is a powerful key to helping the Harrises to make progress toward their goals. They need to make sure that their dollars are being put toward those areas that are of greatest importance to them. They should ask themselves the golden question: When does "more" become "enough?"

THE HARRISES should begin by developing a formal spending plan. They have been operating by the "seat of their pants" ever since they were married. Despite the best intentions to pay off debts each month, when the end of the month comes there is rarely any money left.

Instead of handling their money in this haphazard fashion, they need to run their financial affairs like a small business. In essence, their family unit has revenues of $45,000, and they should plan to have a "profit" (money left over) at the end of each year or month.

The first step in preparing this spending plan is to track their expenditures. If their situation was not so critical they could start keeping records on a month-by-month basis in 1992. But they need to start this process immediately.

They should look back over their records for 1991 and come as close as they can in estimating their monthly outlays. They may want to use the format in the Cash Flow Worksheet (accompanying this article). It summarizes the expense categories in a monthly format, and it minimizes the need to flip pages or get mired in unnecessary detail.

Joe and Phyllis don't need to track down how every dollar was spent. Their checkbook and charge statements should provide them with 90 percent of the detail necessary to categorize expenses. Their cash expenditures can simply be lumped together under the "allowance" category, or they can create a new category called "cash expenditures." They can add or subtract categories to reflect their own expenditure patterns.

They should continue to track expenditures at the end of each month. Again, they don't need to write down every dollar they spend. Check register, credit card statements, and cash withdrawals should be adequate. They should have to spend no more than one-half hour per month on their recordkeeping.

THESE RECORDS become a vital tool in helping them plan for future expenditures. First, they can look at the month-by-month expenditures for 1991 and have a fairly accurate picture of the expenses for each month in 1992. Having the previous year's actual monthly expnditures is an advantage because it picks up the occasional major items that are part of everybody's budget, including auto insurance premiums, property taxes and the like.

Second, this past record gives them a good idea of their cumulative spending in each category. Upon review, they may be surprised to see where some of their money has been spent.

Expenditures can then be prioritized. They should plan to end the year with a surplus. Even if unexpected contingencies arise, they can use this information to adjust future years' spending plans.

In reviewing priorities, they might review whether it is of primary importance to replace one of their cars every two years with a new car. Is the boat bought two years ago a wise use of their recreational dollars? Did they really need to upgrade their computer system last year? These are some of the choices they made.

Joe and Phyllis have the capability of taking control of their monthly expenditures. By taking the steps recommended last week to eliminate their credit card debt and then following the steps outlined in this article, they will avoid the month-to-month struggle to make ends meet. They will have plugged the leaks in their financial foundation and made major progress toward setting their financial ship on the proper course.

War hero shares stories of courage

By Julie Brown
staff writer

For years, Lt. Col. Matt Urban couldn't speak.

Urban, a World War II veteran and Congressional Medal of Honor recipient, was wounded many times while serving with the U.S. Army in Europe. One serious wound to his neck left him unable to speak for five to six years.

The damage required years of hospitalization, surgery and therapy followed by convalescing at home. Urban remembers getting up early in the morning before his family awoke. He'd read the daily paper from front to back.

At first, he couldn't make any sounds. "After several months came a whisper." That was followed by the semblance of a voice.

Urban, from Holland, Mich., now does a great deal of traveling and speaking. He spoke at a Plymouth Lions Club meeting Thursday, Jan. 16, at the Mayflower Hotel.

"Try, try, try," he told club members and guests. "You never give up. You live for the future."

THAT DETERMINATION made it possible for Urban, 72, to overcome his injuries. He worked for many years in Holland as a city recreation director and civic center manager before retiring. Urban and his wife have one daughter, a law student at Harvard University.

He remained in the Army until the war ended in 1945, rather than making it his lifetime career.

"They wanted to keep me in and give me a desk job, but I wouldn't have it." He's proud of the military and of the contributions veterans have made.

"Our military of today is as great as anyone could imagine."

Urban has received a number of military decorations, including seven Purple Hearts and many other combat awards. President Jimmy Carter awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor to Urban on July 18, 1980.

Urban's military records had been lost for many years. He got some help in tracking down that information from a veterans' organization, and on that summer day in 1980 the president draped the medal around Urban's neck.

"I was so proud," Urban said in recalling that day in Washington, D.C. "He gave me a big bear hug. He had tears in his eyes. That was the greatest thing in the world."

URBAN WAS proud to receive the award, but took it in stride and continued to work each day. "It didn't faze me, you know."

During his speech to the Plymouth Lions Club, Urban talked about patriotism, pride and dedication. Those qualities helped him and others do what had to be done during World War II.

He described combat as "a world of hell." Seeing friends injured and killed was a constant reality for the soldiers.

"We had a brotherhood, a feeling of even being closer than to our family brothers."

During wartime, it was either kill or be killed.

"What makes a hero? We knew it then and realize it now." Whenever danger exists, "our God Almighty is always there to give you that deep-down strength and will to do what has to be done. You do what you have to do."

The contributions of American soldiers and sailors, including those who died in combat, are important and should be remembered, he said.

"All this was not in vain. They established a legacy for the younger generation to come, a legacy envied throughout the world." That legacy is one of freedom, peace and dignity.

"The ones who died are the heroes. They're the forgotten heroes. This is the reason why we should always remember."

Working outside

They take winter weather in stride

The ice carvers may have gotten all the glory recently, but they're not the only people in the Plymouth-Canton community who spend at least part of the workday outside.

Police officers, firefighters, Department of Public Works staffers and others spend some time in the great outdoors. School crossing guards, mail carriers, construction workers and others are expected to do their jobs heedless of the wind and weather.

Mail carrier Lee Weatherford has a route in downtown Plymouth. He's been with the U.S. Postal Service in Plymouth for about seven years, and does his best to keep warm when temperatures drop.

"It's tough today," Weatherford said during the recent snowstorm. He offers basic advice to those who work outdoors.

"Just layers, and wear a hat. The hat keeps your heat in." Weatherford also finds it helpful to wear gloves.

HE'S HEARD that wearing layers of light clothing helps in keeping warm. Weatherford doesn't wear piles of clothing to work, due to the fact that he tends to stay reasonably warm even in winter.

"I know some carriers, it gets cold, they're cold." Clothing and metabolism have a lot to do with that, said Weatherford, who doesn't usually wear long underwear when he's out on his route.

"The only time I wear it is if it gets down to zero and there's a wind factor."

Weatherford has a "park and loop" route, which means he spends some time in a mail truck. He parks the truck and walks much of the route to deliver mail. The truck's not running while he's out walking, so Weatherford doesn't get to warm up too much while driving.

Canton Township firefighters work at an accident scene at I-275 and Michigan Avenue during the recent snowstorm.

WE'RE THE PLACE FOR SKIERS

Wartime exhibit has local focus

Learning about World War II has been a new experience for some local residents.

Recent visitors to the Plymouth Historical Museum have enjoyed seeing an exhibit on World War II's local impact. The "For the Duration" exhibit opened the weekend of Dec. 7-8 and will continue through this Sunday, Jan. 26.

Museum director Beth Stewart has been pleased with the response.

"Oh, it's been tremendous. People have really enjoyed it."

When the exhibit first opened, many of the visitors were older people who had lived through the war years. More recently, younger people born after the 1940s have come to the museum in downtown Plymouth to see the exhibit.

"It's really been popular," Stewart said. "We've been busy."

The 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor has renewed interest in the war era, she said. Many museum visitors were impressed with the quantity and variety of items exhibited.

Posters emphasizing patriotism are included in the museum's exhibit.

JEEPS, UNIFORMS, weapons and other items are included, as are many things that show what life was like on the home front during the war.

"It just reminds people of an era, I think."

The World War II era hadn't necessarily been forgotten, Stewart said, although many who had lived through those days wanted to put the war behind them and move on.

The next exhibit at the Plymouth Historical Museum, "Images of Lincoln," is scheduled to open Saturday, Feb. 1. It will include many items from the collection of Weldon Petz.

Petz, a retired educator, is an authority on the life of Abraham Lincoln, who served as the 16th U.S. president from 1861 to 1865.

That exhibit will also focus on a war era, that of the Civil War. Some exhibit items will be from the museum's collection.

Regular hours at the Plymouth Historical Museum, 155 S. Main, are 1-4 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, 2-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission price is $1.50 for adults, 50 cents for students ages 5-17, free for children under 5. Family rate is $4. For more information, call 455-8940.

Veteran remembers courage of others

HE'S PLEASED to see such strong patriotism these days, including that found among young people. "The American people are the greatest people in the world."

His wartime experiences are described in a book, "The Hero We Nearly Forgot — The Matt Urban Story" by John G. Hubbell. Urban signed copies of the book for those at the Lions Club meeting.

He's pleased to see that schools, churches, clubs, veterans' groups and others "are promoting so much patriotism. They're teaching World War II."

Urban encouraged those attending to continue to make the world a better place. Love of God, of family and of neighbors is essential, he said.

"We do have a great, proud America. Walk tall, hold your head high. You are a part of a great, proud America."

Lions Club members and guests enjoyed meeting Urban and hearing him speak. A longtime friend of Urban's, Leon Piekarski, is a member and former president of the club.

Ed Kerstens of Plymouth, current club president, was impressed with Urban's courage and determination.

"I was involved in World War II," said Kerstens, who served in what is now the U.S. Air Force. "It was an emotional thing for me to hear him speaking."

Kerstens, who is retired, agreed it's important to remember the contributions of those who served in the military. The 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor made Urban's presentation particularly timely, he said.

"I think that a lot of people have to be reminded," Kerstens said. "We do have a tendency to forget."

HOMELINE 953-2020

Play tells story of a magical time and place

MUSIC AND magic will take center stage this weekend with the opening of the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Camelot."

The musical tells of the legend of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. The cast for the local production includes more than 40 people.

"It's a wonderful show," said Karen Groves, PTG board president. "We knew it would be a good draw. Because it's a large cast, we think it's a big draw."

"Camelot" performances will be 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Jan. 24-25, 31, and Feb. 1, 7-8, and 6 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 26 and Feb. 2. Performances will be in the Water Tower Theatre, on the campus of Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital, 41001 W. Seven Mile, west of I-275 between Haggerty and Northville roads in Northville Township.

James R. Morisi is directing the show, which features music by Frederick Loewe and lyrics by Alan J. Lerner. "Camelot" is a favorite of the director's, said Groves, a Northville Township resident.

"He picked an unusual set design for the show."

COSTUMES FROM previous PTG productions were available that could be used for "Camelot." The show features plenty of good music that audience members will recognize, another reason it was chosen, she said.

"Everybody is interested in that sort of thing." "Camelot" hadn't been done locally in recent years, Groves said, so PTG members decided to present the play.

Ticket price is $9 for adults, $8 for senior citizens age 62 and older and youths age 18 and younger. Price is $1 less if tickets are bought in advance. Those advance sale tickets are available at the Penniman Deli, 820 Penniman in Plymouth, and Sir Speedy Printing, 485 S. Main in Plymouth.

Group rates and an opening night special are also available, as are student group discounts for Sunday performances. Ticket price for student groups is $5 per person on both Sundays, provided there are at least 20 students in the group. (The $5 price on Sunday also applies to adults who accompany such groups.) Those tickets must be bought in advance. For ticket reservations or information, call 349-7110.

Rehearsals for "Camelot" started about two and half months ago, "long before Christmas so they could have the holidays off," Groves said. Many people are working behind the scenes on the production.

SHOW ORGANIZERS were a bit concerned when last week's snowstorm hit the Detroit area. During a previous season, they had to cancel one performance of "Brigadoon" due to a heavy snowfall.

"To cancel a show is a pretty major decision," she said. "Hopefully, we won't have to go through that this time."

On Sunday, Jan. 26, those working on "Camelot" will also have to compete with the Super Bowl. Groves and the others know some people will choose televised football over live theater, but they're still optimistic about attendance that day.

The fact that the Detroit Lions won't play in the Super Bowl will, in all probability, help boost attendance at the Plymouth Theatre Guild show. That's led to some mixed feelings among those working on the local production.

"I would have liked to have them be there," Groves said of the Lions. "It helps us if they're not."

The "Camelot" cast includes Brent D. Billock, appearing as Arthur, King of England; Janis Bender, Guenevere, Princess of Camilliard; Kevin Kowalski, Sir Dinadan, Russ Lamoureaux, King Pellinore; James R. Morisi, Lancelot dulac; Ford Sutherland, Merlyn; Michael Hammonds, Mordred; Linda Piccoli, Morgan LeFey; Randy Polega, Sir Lionel; Tani Ann Mough, Lady Anne; Heidi Schuster, Lady Margaret.

OTHER CAST members are: Lisa Brandow, Nimue; Dean Kuschell, Clarius; Anthony Mosti, Dap; Squire to Lancelot; Rami Farhat, Page/Herald; Jeannette Sowman, Lady Sybil; Scott Fisher, Sir Sagramore; Thom Price, Tom of Warwick; Kristie Hass, Lady Bess; Dan Gauvin, Sir Brackly of Colgrevance; Jeff Baker, Sir Castor of Cornwall.

The ensemble includes: Irene Abdelnour, Janice Anderson, John Basher, Kelli Basher, Jill Bodnar, Janelle Boncella; Michelle Capobres; Lilianna-Marya Juhasz; Dave Llewellyn; Philip Lukasik; Yvonne Neimann; Muff Price; Elizabeth Racer; Eric Ryckman, Judy Ryckman; Michael Shulman; Dave Signor; Cathy Smith; Ve Stanbersky; Gail Waggoner; Daryl Ziegelman.

Those working behind the scenes on the production include: James R. Morisi, director; Fuad Kandah, assistant director; Janice Anderson, Tani Ann Mough and Daryl Ziegelman, producers; Jeff Hammonds, set design and light design; Jeff Baker, set construction; Kathy Lietz, property; Nancy Schuster and Carol Blazic, publicity; Karen Groves, tickets; Marsha Hinton and Tani Ann Mough, costumes; Daryl Ziegelman and Kevin Kowalski; advertising; Sharon Anthony, hospitality; Bobbie Judd, programs; Cheryl A. Bubar, conductor and pianist.

Janis Bender will appear as Guenevere in the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Camelot."

The Damaris Student Fine Arts Awards, given by the Plymouth Community Arts Council, recognize outstanding middle school artists from the Plymouth-Canton community.

The annual arts competition is for sixth through eighth graders from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district, including those from public and private schools.

According to chairwoman Beth Lurtz, this year's winners will share a total of $1,500. Areas of interest for student artists include: dance; drama; instrumental music; piano; vocal music; visual art and photography; creative writing; fiction; and poetry.

Area middle school fine arts teachers, private teachers and studios will be notified of the competition and will receive applications. Applications are also available at the Plymouth District Library, 223 S. Main, and the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center, and at the Plymouth Community Arts Council office, 332 S. Main, between Ann Arbor Trail and Penniman in downtown Plymouth.

Completed applications will be accepted by mail or in person at the PCAC office during these times: 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday, Jan. 27-31; 3-5 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Jan. 30-31. Jan. 31 is the deadline to submit applications.

The competition is scheduled for March 5-6 in the Little Theatre of Plymouth Canton High School. Students will be notified of their specific performance time. Parents and friends are invited to attend the competition.

For more information, call the Plymouth Community Arts Council, 455-5260. The awards are named in honor of artist Damaris "Dee" Schulte.

Notestine-Fennema

Anna Christine Fennema of Edina, Minn., and Randolph J. Notestine of Plymouth were married Aug. 10 at the Minnesota Landscape Arboretum in Chanhassen, Minn. Judge Par Beloit performed the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Judy and Eric Brindly of Minnesota, Claude Fennema Jr. of Massachusetts, and Hadyn and Carolyn Notestine of Plymouth.

The bride is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where she earned a bachelor of science degree in cognitive sciences. She is a graduate student at the University of California in San Diego, where she is working on a doctorate in experimental psychology.

Her husband is a graduate of Plymouth Salem High School and of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he earned bachelor's and master's degrees in aerospace engineering. He is employed with Cade Composites in San Diego.

Katy Bloedel was the matron of honor. The bride's other attendants were Ning Peng, sister of the bride Kate Fennema and sister of the bride Betsy Fennema.

John Geddes was the best man. The groomsmen were Peter Rovelstad, Joe Beninato and Kevin Moschetti.

A reception was held at the Braemar Golf Club in Edina, Minn.

Stropkai-Ervin

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stropkai of Plymouth announce the engagement of their daughter, Ann Marie, to Robert Theisen Ervin of Plymouth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dillon Ervin of Plymouth.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Plymouth Salem High School. She is a student at Eastern Michigan University, where she is completing her final semester and will earn a bachelor's degree in family and child development.

Her fiance is a graduate of Divine Child High School in Dearborn. He is a student at Eastern Michigan University, where he is completing his final semester and will earn a bachelor's degree in human resources management.

An early September wedding is planned at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Plymouth.

Plymouth shop caters to bargain-hunters

By Julie Brown
staff writer

'A lot of people who come in really need the clothing.'
Lynne Porter

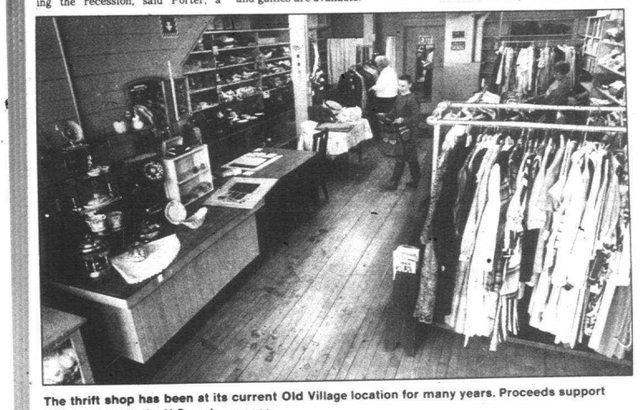
BARGAINS ABOUND at the ~~Presbyterian Thrift Shop in~~ Plymouth's Old Village.

Members of the Presbyterian Women at the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth volunteer their time and talents to keep the shop running smoothly. Proceeds are used for mission work in the U.S. and overseas.

"We have a lot of people who come in for clothing," said Lynne Porter, Presbyterian Women president. "A lot of people who come in really need the clothing."

That's particularly true now during the recession, said Porter, a Northville Township resident and First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth member. Many young single mothers come to the shop at 187 W. Liberty to look for clothing, shoes and boots for their children.

The shop carries used clothing for men, women and children. It also carries small household goods, such as toasters, dishes and knickknacks, but doesn't have the space for furniture or large appliances. Some toys and games are available.



The thrift shop has been at its current Old Village location for many years. Proceeds support mission work in the U.S. and overseas.

THE WOMEN who volunteer at the shop are proud of the work they do. Last year, they raised nearly $10,000 for mission work, Porter said.

The shop's open to customers 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each Thursday. During the holiday season, additional hours of noon to 4 p.m. Saturday were added.

Many customers indicated they were at work during the week, Porter said, so shop volunteers decided to add Saturday hours. Those have been well-received, although she recommends that customers first call on Saturdays to make sure the thrift shop is open. The shop is also open 9-11 a.m. each Tuesday for donation acceptance only.

"We can always use donations," said Porter, who's been involved as a shop volunteer for about seven years. Donations are tax-deductible and much appreciated.

First Presbyterian Church members donate used clothing and other items, as do people from other churches and the community. Some designer clothing finds its way to the shop and is priced to sell.

"We're backed 100 percent by our church," said Porter, who works part time as a seamstress and does volunteer work. The support of church members is a tremendous help.

CLOTHING DONATIONS are always needed, she said. Jewelry, plates, cups and other items are needed as well.

When she first started as a volunteer at the shop, Porter was surprised to discover that so many needy people live in the community. She and other volunteers find it rewarding to help those in need.

Another volunteer, Lila Vincent, has worked at the shop for about six years. She's a registered nurse who was on the staff for 31 years at Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital, when she retired as assistant director of nursing. Vincent decided to get involved in volunteer work.

Members of the three Presbyterian Women Circles — A.C.T.S., Handicraft and Helen Beavers — contribute their time and talents to run the shop. The shop's been around for some 37 years at several Plymouth locations and has been at its current Old Village location for a long time, Porter said.

Vincent, a Plymouth Township resident and church member, is pleased to see younger women from the A.C.T.S. Circle getting involved. Those women and their husbands recently worked on cleaning up and repairing the shop's back room, which is used for storage. That effort included putting up shelves.

"They're really a great group," Vincent said. "They're so capable and competent."

MANY OF THE younger women have small children, so it's difficult for them to volunteer during the day, Vincent said.

"The rest of us are older and don't have children at home." Women employed outside the home don't generally volunteer to work at the shop, Vincent said, because they're on the job during the day.

She hasn't seen much difficulty in finding dedicated volunteers to work at the shop. "A lot of them have been there for many, many years," said Vincent, who considers herself a newcomer to the shop's volunteer force.

Each Tuesday morning, women gather at the store to price articles. Volunteer Leora Norgrove coordinates thrift shop activities.

"She deserves a lot of credit because she's devoted a lot of time to this," said Vincent, chairwoman for the Helen Beavers Circle.

Some brand-name men's suits are priced far below what they'd cost in a retail store, she said. Many faithful customers come to the shop nearly every week, in some cases waiting outside the door for it to open "so they can have first crack at the new things."

"It's really a good place to shop," Vincent said. "You can really find some bargains in there."

The women are pleased they're able to support mission work to the extent that they do. Proceeds from the shop and other fund-raising efforts support mission work in foreign countries and the U.S. in "Appalachia and various areas where they need assistance," Vincent said.

Items that don't sell are given to the Salvation Army, rather than being thrown away. Shop volunteers are proud of their "recycling" efforts. They even recycle shopping bags, Porter said.

For more information, call the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth, 453-6464, or the Presbyterian Thrift Shop, 459-1250, during shop hours. The shop is at 187 W. Liberty, between Mill and Starkweather.

We should celebrate our religious diversity moral perspectives

Rev. David Strong

Some time ago, a scholar pointed out that the United States was the first nation in the world not to have an established religion. Some would argue this point. Nevertheless, we might agree that the idea of the separation of religion and state has marked our history.

There are religious groups that would like the United States to be run according to their dogma. Most Americans believe that this will never happen here. Our diversity may prevent what is happening today in Algeria. Let us hope so.

Fundamentalists are on the verge of taking control of the government of Algeria. The Prime Minister has resigned and the military has taken control of the government so as to prevent an election which would have gone to the fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front. In the minds of some people, freedom has been sacrificed to prevent the freedom of the nation from being lost.

WE NEED to acknowledge the fact that in every religion there are factions who have a goal of taking over the leadership of the country. In the not too distant past, religion and state were one entity.

We see the pressure being exerted in Israel to run the state from the law and will of the religious leaders. We saw this happen in Iran. Yet we need to admit that there are Christian groups that have as their goal turning the United States into a nation run by a church. Let us hope it never happens.

Democracy, freedom, indeed the realities of a shrinking inter-dependent world require that we not build nations into religious fundamental bodies. How can we understand this trend? How can we address such a need on the part of a religious body to dominate a nation?

This will be a question for the 1990s and to the turn of the century. Individual attention and community concern needs to be directed to such questions.

Deep below such movements, I believe, are the issues of diversity and identity. At the basic level, a person must be able to say "I am a human being." This means many things in terms of human rights, and unique identity, culturally and racially.

Close to this is the issue which is so much before us today, sex. I am a human being who is male or female. What is unique about being a man or a woman? We are not sure in this society. What are the choices of roles available for men and women? We are not certain. Let us hope that we work these out.

TWO MONTHS ago, a friend and I offered a weekend workshop addressing the male experience, the male role. So few registered that we had to cancel the weekend. It was designed as a non-threatening experience. When I talked with several men and a few women the reason stated for the lack of registration was "fear." Men are afraid to deal with these issues.

I have to believe that the same is true of serious interaction between religions. We are afraid. We want the issue of a diversity of world religions to go away. It will not go away. It will become a stronger and stronger force in the world.

My religion is very close to my identity. Each religion not only embraces ultimate beliefs, each religion embraces a culture. These items, being a human being, being male or female and being a person with a religion and a culture summarize most of what it means to be a person on this planet earth.

Since the next phase of our work as human beings on earth has to do with the question of how we live in community with one another and with the other creatures on this planet, religion will be a major issue.

What I believe we are facing is nothing less than a spiritual evolution of the earth. This evolution is not best accomplished by killing one another. Some social scientists would argue that killing one another will indeed reduce the numbers of humans.

It might possibly save stress on the environment. I abhor such thinking. However, such predictions simply are based upon what is happening today and extending the same trends into the future.

If we believe in a God of love, mercy and justice, we human beings will find a perilous path. It is a path that affirms the necessity of the full expression of religion and culture, and at the same time does not exclude those who are diverse. Someone has said that the new martyrs must be persons who lived and died for all human and natural life, not only for their own cause.

The sad thing is that few religious people or institutions are prepared to live in this way. The tragic thing is that too many people and religious groups are ready to give their life to make everyone act, believe and look like themselves. It is a terrible illusion which ignores every clue as to what creation and God are all about.

Peace and a future for the earth are possible only if we become acquainted with other religions. We must give up any illusions that suggest we will be all the same. We must affirm the gift of human identity and diversity to the future.

The Rev. David T. Strong is pastor of Central United Methodist Church in Detroit.

"It can't hurt to try."

So says chairwoman Sue Daniel about the Livonia Historical Commission's bid for a Michigan equity grant to help restore the Quaker Meeting House at Greenmead Historical Village.

The commission would match the $90,000 grant to generate the $180,000 needed to restore the 146-year-old house to 1850s vintage. Word from the state is expected by March.

Local Quakers have chipped in $1,000. Restoration of the one-story, white-clapboard house has been on the burner for eight years.

The hope, Daniel said, "is to put it back as meeting house. I also can see us using it for weddings, although it won't have quite the appeal Newburg School at Greenmead does."

Without the grant, restoration probably will take to 1994.

"It's really a job of finishing gutting the building and doing quite a bit of structural work," Daniel said. "In the '40s, the ceiling was lowered and hand-hewn beams were cut to make room for a studio in the attic. We want to put the support pieces back so the house is like it was."

By 1860, with the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) no longer meeting there, owner David Lapham sold the house to Sarah and William Roberts. They converted it to a dwelling, which it remained until the city bought it in 1962.

The house later served as a historical museum and a meeting place for historians. It was moved from its original location to Greenmead in 1981.

Two other Greenmead restoration projects were done thanks in part to Michigan equity grants: the Newburg School, built in 1861, and the pre-Civil War Cranson/Hinbern House.

They're on the way.

Livonia City Council last week approved the arts commission's share of the cost to buy art exhibition panels for the glass-enclosed, second-floor gallery in the Livonia Civic Center Library.

Friends of the Library and the arts commission will split the $16,000 cost for the panels, made by Designs Fabrications, Troy. The city's share will come from the commission's trust fund, not Livonia's general fund.

The lightweight, freestanding slatwall display panels will be expansive enough to accommodate a typical 45-piece individual exhibit and versatile enough to showcase three-dimensional pieces.

Monthly art exhibits will come to the library by spring. Similar shows will continue in the city hall lobby.

Arts commissioners Dorothy Wilshaw and Jack Olds will coordinate library art exhibitions. Olds is the commission's liaison to the Friends. Wilshaw oversees the city hall shows.

Dancing light

Library spotlights stained glass

Stained-glass centerpiece bowls and window panels featuring coat-of-arms by Plymouth artisan Joe Slezak are on display through Jan. 30 in the Livonia Arts Commission's second-floor showcases at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Flashing prisms of light dance throughout Slezak's green, amber, crystal and burgundy glass, fascinating the viewer, catching and holding the eye with its movement.

"I enjoy beautiful things. I always liked the beauty of stained glass and one day decided to try it. I took an adult education class at night in stained glass at Schoolcraft College," Slezak said.

After serving 18 years as a firefighter in Wayne County, where he attained the rank of sergeant, Slezak retired in 1983. Shortly thereafter, his stained glass-making skills blossomed. Two years ago, he decided to pursue his art professionally. Now, he displays his work at six shows a year.

"If I have orders to fill, I put in more than 40 hours a week," he said.

IN 1990 at the Arts and Crafts Festival sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission at Greenmead Historical Village, Slezak took a first-

Antique fest benefits Plymouth Symphony

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

FROM ANTIQUE violins and valentines to oil paintings, Plymouth Symphony League's Winter Antique Show, on behalf of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, promises two days filled with historical treasures and old-time fun.

Dates for the sixth annual fund-raiser are Friday and Saturday, Jan. 24-25, at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer.

The benefit show will feature 25 Michigan dealers specializing in such wares as European and American furniture, classic country, Victorian, oil paintings, prints, art glass and pottery, folk art, estate jewelry, linens and lace, vintage clothing, antique maps and paper items, silver, quilts, rugs and leaded glass lamps.

The Plymouth Symphony League has added new dealers as well as a new attraction, a consignment booth, to the popular event, making for a nicely seasoned, historically spiced show.

Toys

They prove more than child's play

Exhibitions, 4D

By Janice Tigar-Kramer

The 1961 Nash Metropolitan parked outside Dave Hudson's Westland home is a clue that a collector of some sort of American memorabilia lives inside.

Though Hudson won't rule out collecting classic cars some day, for now he's concentrating on his vast collection of antique and collectible toys ranging from simple wind-up cartoon characters produced in the 1960s to motorized wooden boats dating to the 1940s.

Hudson will show his toys with 60 other collectors at the seventh annual Clarkston Toy Show from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 25 at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 5690 Maybee, Clarkston. (Take I-75 north to exit 89, one mile south on Sashabaw Road, turn east on Maybee). Toys for sale will range from $5 to over $1,000. Admission is $2; children younger than 12 are free.

"The size of the show grows every year," said Barry Young, president of the Flint Area Toy Collectors Club, which sponsors the show. "Toy collecting is a way to become involved with the past and the show gives people an idea of how to begin."

FOR HUDSON, 34, toy collecting began by accident just eight years ago at a car swap meet in Pennsylvania.

Browsing through tables of auto parts and other odds-and-ends, he found a display of plastic western figures from classic television shows such as The Lawman, The Rifleman and Gunsmoke. He bought two figures for $30 each and, like most new

Exhibitions help artists brush up on finding fulfillment

TAKE IT from two veteran Observerland artists — preparing a fine art exhibition is tedious but richly fulfilling.

● By day, she's a graphics designer and illustrator for a Southfield advertising company. By night, she's a professional artist, painstakingly putting pencil to paper or brush to canvas in her Canton home studio.

"My evenings are dedicated to creating my own art. That takes great discipline after working all day," says Gwen Dietrich, a graduate of the Parsons School of Design in New York.

Dietrich calls her 40-piece exhibit planned for February at the Livonia City Hall a mini retrospective. It will trace her work in colored pencil and pastel over the past 15 years.

"I'm thinking of having 10 to 20 new pieces," she said, "because show goers typically want to see where you were to where you are now."

The exhibit, Dietrich's second one-person show, will run Feb. 3-28 in the lobby of Livonia City Hall, Farmington Road at Five Mile. Pieces will range in price from $100 to $800.

Dietrich has come a long way since her days as a youngster, when she first started to draw at her father's drafting table.

She considers drawing "the foundation of good artwork. You have to draw constantly to be good at it." As a means of discipline and a source of development, she studies drawing each semester at Oakland Community College.

Dietrich has exhibited more than 20 times in Michigan and New York. That includes a 1990 exhibit at the Scarab Club in Detroit.

Her first one-person show, "Dogs and Dames" last April at Nelson's Gallery in Livonia, reinforced her depth and dimension as a traditional artist.

Her themes focus on ethnicity, beauty, animals, nature and, only recently, landscape.

While grateful the Livonia Arts Commission invited her to show her work at the city hall next month, Dietrich said show preparation takes lots of time. "Larger new pieces take up to 40 hours to do. That's after I do my research and initial drawing."

Then there's the cost of mats, frames, glass and invitations — upwards of $1,000 or more.

The cost and time aside, Dietrich wouldn't pass up the chance to share the fruits of what she calls "a God-given talent."

"I have a certain insight into the beauty of the world," she said. "And I feel a need to expose and educate people to that beauty."

The world, she said, "is bombarded by so many negative things. There's so much junk, from pornography to nasty pictures. We need to grace our walls with what beauty there is — in nature, animals and people."

● She always has time to paint, even after a full day at work sharing with her Livonia Churchill High School visual arts students the art of using light, color and composition to paint broadstroked scenes of nature and life.

"If you want to be a painter, you have to paint — pure and simple," says Barb Demgen, who studied fine arts at Wayne State University and Marygrove College in Detroit.

Persistence in honing what came naturally to her has reaped reward — the sale of hundreds of pieces.

"My parents fostered in me a sense of self-esteem, that it's almost a disgrace not to pursue a talent," the Livonia artist said. "What I am today has to do with my art. There's a lot of me out there."

Six of Demgen's oils and watercolors, including landscapes of Maybury State Park and Lake Charlevoix, are on exhibit through January at Atrium Gallery, 113 N. Center, Northville. Prices range from $200 to $500.

Although she has appeared in 35 shows over 30 years, Demgen is just now planning perhaps her most important ever: a 43-piece retrospective hosted by the Livonia Arts Commission July 1-31 at Livonia City Hall. Works will range from a 1966 acrylic of an Upper Peninsula woodpile to a new watercolor of layered birch leaves in Maybury State Park.

Her themes touch on landscapes ("It's a challenge to depict nature and its beauty"), portraits ("They can take up to 175 hours") and still life ("Painting a flame is very challenging because it's like a living thing").

She loves to paint on location, whether in Livonia's Greenmead Historical Village, at Lake Charlevoix or in the Arizona desert.

Curiosity — for example, painting everything from trains to wildlife to Oriental art — keeps her fresh. "I'm compulsive. I love to try different things."

Despite the investment of time and money, Demgen loves to display her work — in a gallery, in a show or at home. "It's incredibly fulfilling to see your work side by side, for others to enjoy.

"Sure there's a lot of work involved in a show, but the end result is a feeling of pride. Sales, of course, not only are a source of pleasure but also motivation."

● ART AS A BUSINESS

Artist Nancy Thayer of the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit will present a workshop addressing "The Business of Being an Artist" 7-10 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 30 at The Scarab Club, 217 Farnsworth, Detroit.

She'll address entering into legal contracts, tax issues, pricing and record keeping and building a portfolio.

To register, call the club, 831-1250. Registration is limited. Cost is $15; the non-member fee is $20.

● DANCE SESSIONS

The Center for Creative Studies offers ballet, tap and East Indian dancing at its North Branch campus, 13 Mile and Evergreen, Southfield.

Winter/spring sessions begin for new students at the end of January. Prospective students can view classes throughout January.

Classical ballet for adults is scheduled for 10-40 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. Pointe for all levels, teen and adults, runs 5:30-7 p.m. Mondays.

Introductory and advanced ballet for teens and adults begins at 5:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Beginner level ballet for teens and adults is set for 7 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Children's ballet classes are scheduled for Thursday afternoons and Saturday mornings.

● ANTIQUE FEST

Two Plymouth dealers will be featured in the Dearborn Historical Museum and the Museum Guild of Dearborn's first Dearborn Historic Guild Anitque Show Saturday-Sunday, Feb. 1-2, at the Dearborn Civic Center, Michigan Avenue near Greenfield Road.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Plymouth participants include Plymouth Antique Emporium and Little Shop Antiques.

Show dealers will feature jewelry, glass, china, vintage clothing, linens and lace, toys, dolls, clocks, primitives, furniture and select collectibles.

The entry fee is $3; parking is free. There will be live music. Food will be available.

All proceeds will go to the Dearborn Historical Foundation and Museum Guild of Dearborn's "Building and Restoration Fund," reports Winfield Arneson, chief curator.

● ART CLASSES

Plymouth Community Arts Council announces the winter schedule of art classes to begin the week of Feb. 3.

The classes are taught by qualified art instructors and include a variety of media for children and adults.

Classes are appropriate for beginners and those who want to improve their skills.

To register, visit the PCAC office, 332 S. Main, Plymouth, from 9 a.m. to noon weekdays. Or call 455-5260. Information on class locations can be obtained through the PCAC office.

● SING OUT

The Michigan Federation of Music Clubs announces auditions for the Elizabeth Gardner Vocal Award, taking place at 1 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 23, at the First Baptist Church in Birmingham.

Application deadline is Saturday, Feb. 15. For application forms, call 375-9534.

Applicants for the $400 award must be between 17 and 23 years old on Feb. 23, 1992.

For the audition, an applicant must play one selection from each of these four categories: Opera or Oratorio, Old Italian, Romantic — French or German, and 20th Century — American or British — in English. All selections, except the Oratorio, must be memorized.

A letter of recommendation from a voice teacher is also required.

The entrance fee is $5, plus $7.50 for student MFMC membership, if applicable. Exceptions are students of these federated schools: Interlochen Center for the Arts, Michigan State University, Oakland University, Olivet College, Spring Arbor College and Western Michigan University.

place blue ribbon for best overall presentation in glass.

"Mr. Slezak's decorative centerpiece bowls are beautiful. I've never seen anything like his stained-glass bowls before and they're all original designs," said Livonia arts commissioner Lee Alanskas.

Tulip shapes encircle a stained-glass decorative centerpiece bowl. Opaque white glass intermingles with translucent purple in a bowl of a different design. Lead channels between the cut-glass shapes are colored copper, silver or black.

Six-sided bowls are priced at $70, eight-sided bowls at $85. Coat-of-arms window panels run between $125 to $150 or more depending on the intricacy of design.

Slezak takes order for custom designs on request. "Window panels or sidelight panels, if they want bevels or geometric designs or florals, I would draw something up for their approval," he said.

A FEW verses Slezak wrote in 1986 describe his feelings about stained glass: "Sunlight passing through caresses the glass and the glow from that embrace grants it life."

The history of manmade glass spans 3,500 centuries. Stained glass, one of the oldest crafts in the world, existed in Europe before painting. Stained glass today is no longer a tool of the church but a respected art form.

Display hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. To reach Slezak for custom design work, call 455-3674.

Antique show to bolster symphony budget

"We have four new dealers this time. We have the consignment booth, Booth No. 3, and we have a 1920s quilt for the drawing," said Peggy Blaisdell, antique show co-chair with Judy Lore.

STAFFED BY league members, the booth will sell antiques on consignment. The league will donate 25 percent of the selling price to the symphony.

"Anyone with an antique or collectible from before 1950 that they'd like us to sell can drop by Thursday, Jan. 23, between 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.," Blaisdell said.

Sharon Burton, owner of Burton Gallery Antiques, is one of the new dealers in the show. Burton's Plymouth antique shop, adjacent to Cafe Bon Homme, strikes a Victorian note the moment visitors step behind its beveled glass, oak door.

"I buy the things I love. Sometimes I buy whole estates if there are lots of wonderful things, or I buy the lots of wonderful things," Burton said.

Burton began to buy antiques for resale during her school days. Her booth at the show will include architectural details, jewelry, linens and laces, Victorian glassware, perfume bottles, violins, valentines, greeting cards and birth announcements from the 1930s aged an ivory color, Victorian clothing and hats, and vintage handbags.

"THAT'S GOING to be a wonderful show. One half of the booth will be Victorian, the other half will be country," Burton said. "One of the things I'm going to feature at the Plymouth show is vintage hat flowers. People need spring, so I'm going to bring some of these special trims."

A room full of blue velvet morning glories, linen lilacs and rosebuds were indirectly bought at auction from a downtown Detroit milliner who went out of business.

Burton has a story relating the history behind each and every item she sells.

"I'll have architectural details taken from the Wilcox House during the renovations, also from the house next door to it that was torn down," Burton said.

Many of the antiques she will offer for sale in the Plymouth show have stayed in the same families for generations.

"A lot of things I buy from local estates. The majority of things have never been for sale. A lot of them are from families that had never been for sale."

BURTON ENTERED the retail business arena 20 years ago when she and a partner opened Elderly Instruments in Lansing, a store selling vintage guitars and violins. She then opened an East Lansing shop, Somebody Else's Closet, that sold clothing from 1860 to the 1940s.

After a move to Plymouth four years ago, she opened Burton Gallery Antiques and moved to the present location on Penniman Avenue 15 months ago. After nearly three decades of selling antiques, she continues to study and read in quest of knowledge.

"It takes studying history, art and design. The trick of all this is to study, study. The more you know, the better you are at appraisal. At night I go home and read books and magazines. There's so much to learn."

Beside Burton, new dealers in the show include Margaret and Mike Hubert, owners of the antique shop, M. Hubert & Co. The Huberts opened their Plymouth shop, specializing in fine antiques, art and accessories, last April.

"We're excited about the show. We'll have a variety of things, art glass from the 1880s to 1920s, oil paintings, furniture, Oriental rugs, 16th-century city view maps, art pottery and leaded glass lamps," Mike Hubert said.

"If I don't have what they want, I'll search and try to find it for them. I maintain a computer search series for people."

POPULAR ESTATE jewelry and silver dealers, Pauline and Jacki Work of Farmington Hills will display their wares at the show again this winter.

For a fourth year, Brookville Gardens of Plymouth will sell dried flowers, potpourri, herb wreaths and teas. Brookville grows 250 varieties of herbs. It sells fresh-cuts to restaurants and live plants to gardeners in spring.

"Once again, we'll have Muriel Koske, who does china painting. If you're missing a particular piece of china and searched but can't find a replacement, she can paint one to match your set," said Judy Lore, show co-chair.

Peggy Blaisdell, of Blaisdell Antiques, will feature mainly oak in her booth. Items include a golden oak dresser and commode, a children's freestanding slate chalk board, and plant stands and occasional tables, all from the turn-of-the-century.

She also will have an 1880s pine blanket chest, a Victorian walnut dresser, a set of four kitchen chairs, an oak kindergarten table and chairs, high chairs, junior chairs, a children's rocker, one-drawer stands, mirrors, picture frames, china, tin kitchen items, and brass and children's toys, including blocks.

"THE QUILT we're raffling off to benefit the symphony this time is a 1920s queen size, postage stamp design with a navy blue and white-checked background from Burton Gallery Antiques. It's multicolored and includes more than 50 different patterns and types of material," Blaisdell said.

Tickets for the quilt drawing are $7 apiece, or six for $5.

The Penniman Deli will sell sandwiches, salads, soup and desserts at a mini deli inside the show. Coffee and soft drinks also will be available.

Admission to the Plymouth Symphony League's winter antique show is $3. All proceeds from the event are presented to the Plymouth Symphony Society for use in operating the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

Winter Antique Show hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. For information on the antique booth, call Peggy Blaisdell at 459-1358 or Judy Lore at 453-5181.

Don't be too camera shy to vie

Monte Nagler

Well, there's a competitive spirit in all of us, and unless you enter your picture in a contest, you'll never know how you'd do.

Did you ever take what you knew was a prize-winning shot and then wonder if it could capture first place in a photography contest?

Well, there's a competitive spirit in all of us, and unless you enter your picture in a contest, you'll never know how you'd do.

Today, I'm going to give you some advice about photo contests — where to locate them and how best to go about entering the competition. After all, you may win an exciting trip, new camera equipment or some useful cash.

THE BEST source for finding contests is the news media. Your local newspapers always announce photography contests and quite frequently sponsor their own contests. Check out one of the many photography magazines available. They always announce contests, too.

Major shopping malls in the area often conduct contests and, of course, camera clubs in the vicinity welcome your best shots in their competitions. And your favorite camera store can also keep you up to date on photo happenings.

Knowing what judges look for in a good photograph can be a valuable guide when entering a photo contest. Usually, judges base their score on three criteria.

FIRST IS subject matter. A judge will ask: Is the subject unusual, or, if commonplace, is it treated in an unusual way? Does it stand apart from other entries and command attention? Are my emotions stirred and is the picture communicating anything to me? In short, does the image have impact and "stopping power"?

Second, judges will take a critical look at composition to determine if all the elements of the picture are arranged in the most effective way.

They'll ask themselves: Is this photograph simplified and uncluttered? Is there a strong idea being expressed and does the composition complement the subject?

Third, and equally important, is the technical quality of the photograph. A judge will look for sharpness, proper exposure and good color saturation. He or she will look for a clean slide or print, and, if the photo is matted, will want to see neat, well-cut mats.

MAKE SURE you read all the entry rules carefully and abide by them. You wouldn't want that special shot to be disqualified on a minor technicality.

Very important, shoot those subjects that interest you. By putting your own feelings and emotions in your photography, you most certainly will increase your chances of producing a prizewinning photo with impact.

Shooting for the judges and not for yourself will result in pictures that will lack that all important ingredient — you!

Keep it fun, enjoy the competition and try to use photo contests as a means of improving your own photographic skills and interest.

Dave Hudson began collecting antique toys eight years ago. Today his collecton includes hundreds of toys, mostly from the 1950s and 1960s.

Collector toying with Americana

collectors, started to research the toys.

The plastic figures, about 8½ inches high, were made by The Hartland Co. in the 1950s, when television westerns were popular. The company made 47 different characters, most with a horse and rider.

"Growing up, I was a big western fan, so I recognized these characters right away," said Hudson. "I think most toy collectors start by buying a toy they remember from their childhood."

Call it beginner's luck, but in just six years, Hudson collected the whole set, all boxed in mint condition. To complete the Hartland set, of course, he began attending local toy shows and antique sales, picking up other pieces along the way.

To a toy collector, an antique is any piece at least 25 years old. A collectible could be a new, limited production toy or one no longer being made. New or old, a toy in the original box could cost three times more than the un-boxed toy.

THOUGH HUDSON'S collection mostly includes American-made toys from the 1950s and 1960s (the years he grew up), many pieces date to the early and mid-1900s: a tin wind-up ship made in 1900 by the German toymaker Carette is valued at $2,000; a replica of Adolph Hitler's Mercedes-Benz made in 1937 by Germany's Tipp Company is valued at $2,500, and a pressed steel truck made in the early 1930s by the Tipton Co. is worth $275.

Over the years, Hudson, a senior coordinator for General Motors, has collected all of the Hanna-Barbera characters made in 1962, such as the Flintstones and Jetsons. The tin, wind-up and friction-operated toys that originally sold for just 50 cents could cost up to $1,000 today.

Hudson's permanent collection includes 50 motorized wooden boats made by Japanese toymakers in the 1940s and 1950s. Each highly detailed boat is about 18 inches long and worth $100 to $1,000 each.

To complete his collection, Hudson wants to find the wooden cruiser he played with as a child. Ironically, he sold it to another collector years ago, but believes it will turn up one day at a Detroit-area sale. His permanent collection also includes his own American Flyer train set from 1957 and a set of Hot Wheels from the late 1960s.

"IT'S SMART for a collector to buy what he likes. That way, you get the most enjoyment from the hobby and you never feel like you've paid too much for a piece," said Hudson.

Part of toy collecting is anticipating what might be valuable in the future. So far, Hudson has purchased all of the current Batman figures and several of each of the McDonald characters that come with the restaurant's Happy Meal.

"Knowing what's collectible today gives me an idea of what might be in demand in years to come. But you never know for sure," said Hudson.

There is a camaraderie among toy hobbyists who use the shows as a meeting place to share information and trade or buy toys from each other. At one show, for example, Hudson exchanged a toy in his collection for a battery-operated Popeye character worth $1,500.

"The real fun is in the search," said Hudson. "Sometimes you find a toy you've only read about or seen in pictures. It's a thrill to find it and get it for a good price."

A true hobbyist, like Hudson, researches every toy by looking for identifying marks, such as the manufacturer's name, factory marks or a patent date or number. Toy directories listing the dates a factory operated give collectors a general idea when a piece was produced. But even without a manufacturer's name, a patent number can be traced to the date of issue.

Though a sluggish economy has caused some antique toy buyers to shop around and buy more cautiously, there still is a demand for hard-to-find toys, said Hudson. And though some hobbyists collect strictly for investment, Hudson's goal for now is simply to break even.

"I reinvest everything I make. If this hobby was just for profit I'd stop right now," he said.

● SWORDS INTO PLOWSHARES

Friday, Jan. 24 — First midwest showing of "U.S. Detention Camps: 1942-1946," a photographic exhibit through April 25 chronicling the experience of 120,000 persons of Japanese ancestry, the majority American citizens, who were forced from their homes into 10 concentration camps in the U.S. during World War II. The 90 photos, some never before publicly shown, capture the upheaval in the lives of families and communities and the hostility expressed to them by the government and their fellow West Coast citizens. Despite government censorship, a few revealing images by U.S. Army photographers and others were smuggled out and are part of the exhibit. Opening reception is 5-8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 24. 33 E. Adams on Grand Circus Park, Detroit. Hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday.

● COMMUNITY ARTS AUDITORIUM

To Jan. 24 — The "Unseen Landscape" art exhibition, featuring 19 paintings by seven major Michigan artist at Wayne State University. Call the WSU department of art hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, closed Dec. 23 to Jan. 6.

● PEWABIC POTTERY

Friday, Jan. 24 — Work in clay by Pi Benio, Thom Bohnert, Kathy Dambach, Graham Marks, Tom Phardel and Georgette Zirbes will be shown in "Progressions," Jan. 25 through March 7. Opening reception, which the public may attend, 5:30-7:30 p.m. Jan. 24. As a counterpart to a March exhibition of their students' work, this show will include work by six Michigan artists who are also faculty in area ceramics departments. Pewabic has exhibited student work in clay from Michigan universities and art schools regularly, and will show work from the Cranbrook Academy of Art, the University of Michigan, Adrian College, Henry Ford Community College, the Center for Creative Studies and Mott Community College from March 14 through April 25. Pewabic is at 10125 E. Jefferson, Detroit. Call 822-0954.

● BIRMINGHAM BLOOMFIELD ART ASSOCIATION

To Jan. 25 — Oriental brush painting exhibition. This is a joint exhibition involving the Los Angeles Chinese Artists Association and the Midwest Oriental Art Club.

The contemporary paintings will include landscapes, figures, animal and still lifes, plus calligraphy works, seals and seal carvings. Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday-Saturday, 1516 S. Cranbrook Road, Birmingham, 644-0866.

● O.K. HARRIS WORKS OF ART

Saturday, Jan. 25 — Mariano Del Rosario, working with cement, wax and acrylic, will bring his new paintings to the gallery. Opening reception 2-5 p.m. Saturday, at which Del Rosario will speak informally about his fresh new body of work. The exhibition will run through Feb. 22.

Also running Jan. 25 through Feb. 22 will be a display of egg tempera paintings on lead by Tamara Carlisle. Hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, extended to 8:30 p.m. the first Thursday of each month, Mondays by appointment, 430 N. Woodward, Birmingham, 433-3700.

● SCARAB CLUB

To Jan. 25 — The 1991 Annual Printmaking and Works on Paper Exhibition continues. The purpose of the display is to recognize achievement among Michigan and Ontario artists.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Home sales buck national trend

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Home sales reported last year by Metro MLS, an affiliate of the Western Wayne Oakland Association of Realtors, were up 5.1 percent from 1990.

Some 17,150 houses and condominiums were sold in its jurisdiction during 1991 — nearly 850 more than the previous year.

Nationally, home sales through the first 11 months of 1991 were down slightly, 1.1 percent, from the comparable period in 1990, according to Ruth Clevers, Metro MLS and Western Wayne/Oakland president. End-of-year numbers from the national association aren't yet available, she added.

The median (half higher, half lower) sales price of a house in its territory during 1991 was $84,900 compared to $79,900 the previous year — a 6¼ percent increase, Metro MLS reported.

'With an area as automobile-oriented as this area is and their industry in the shape it's in, we're pleased our industry didn't come out with the same effect. This area has become more diversified. A lot of people are working; they're stable and taking advantage of market conditions.'

— Ruth Clevers

"With an area as automobile-oriented as this area is and their industry in the shape it's in, we're pleased our industry didn't come out with the same effect," said Clevers, vice president and sales manager for Ralph Manuel Associates-West, Farmington Hills.

"This area has become more diversified. A lot of people are working; they're stable and taking advantage of market conditions. Interest rates are the lowest they've been in 14 years. It's especially good for first-time buyers," she added.

CLEVERS EXPECTS that more homes will be sold this year.

"We're hoping and believe we'll continue to increase. We anticipate an 8-10 percent increase for 1992," she said. "We anticipate interest staying at a favorable rate.

"It keeps the industry viable and buyers willing to change (move) interested," Clevers said. "Rates are the biggest thing we work with."

Increases last year were recorded for Canton, to 807 from 711; Plymouth/Plymouth Township, 553 from 475; Livonia, 1,451 from 1,406; Westland, 943 from 924; and Southfield, 767 from 765.

Decreases were recorded in Redford, 928 from 972, and Farmington/Farmington Hills, 1,185 from 1,208.

Median sales priced increased in every Observer & Eccentric community except Plymouth/Plymouth Township, which dipped to $114,000 from $119,900.

Metro MLS, the state's largest multiple listing service with 4,200 agents, covers a 1,600-square-mile territory including northwest Detroit and major portions of Wayne, Oakland and Livingston counties.

Reimbursement of 'owner's equity' is negotiable

I am the president of our condominium association, which is approximately 15 years old. One of the original purchasers is now in the process of selling his unit and wants his original "working capital deposit" returned. Do we have any responsibility to return this money to him?

It depends upon the condominium documents and the original purchase agreement that was signed. In most condominiums, a buyer is obligated at the time of purchase to provide a two-month working capital deposit that is generally non-refundable and which is used for the operation of the association.

Some older condominium documents provided for a refund of these monies and some condominiums, perhaps in the absence of authority, have either refunded or allowed a transfer on the associaton's books of a "co-owner's equity" in the association's funds to a new purchaser. Generally, the matter of whether a seller is entitled to reimbursement of "owners' equity" for any contribution that was made on behalf of his account is a matter of negotiation between the buyer and seller. I would suggest that you have a knowledgeable condominium attorney look at various legal documents of your condominium and provide the association with a legal opinion on this issue.

Our board does not respect our master deed and bylaws. Notifications, election procedures and due process have been ignored, and I believe that the condominium act has been violated and maintenance fees and assessments levied contrary to the percentages of value requirements of the documents. Unfortunately, the vast majority of co-owners are uninformed and complacent. How can a minority of co-owners protect themselves from abuse without resorting to a court hearing at their own expense? Does the state enforce the condominium act?

Unfortunately, the state has gone out of the enforcement business as it relates to condominiums. The only recourse through the state would be to complain to the Deparmtent of Commerce, which might turn the matter over to the attorney general for investigation.

More appropriately, the members of the association may have political recourse against the board of directors if they are not complying with the condominium documents and they can convince a sufficient number of association members of that fact. As to protecting your rights from abuse without resorting to a court hearing at your expense, you may wish to consider bringing a class action or stockholder's derivative suit against the association, hoping that if you prevail the attorney fees and costs will be reimbursed to you by the corporation.

Perhaps you can resolve the matter without legal proceedings if your attorney is successful in convincing the board of its wrongdoing.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy Spirit, You make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrongs that are done to me and You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with You, my loved One, in your Perpetual Glory. Amen. Persons must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. After 3 days your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then, promise to publish this dialogue as soon as the favor has been granted. Thanks, St. Jude, for favors received.

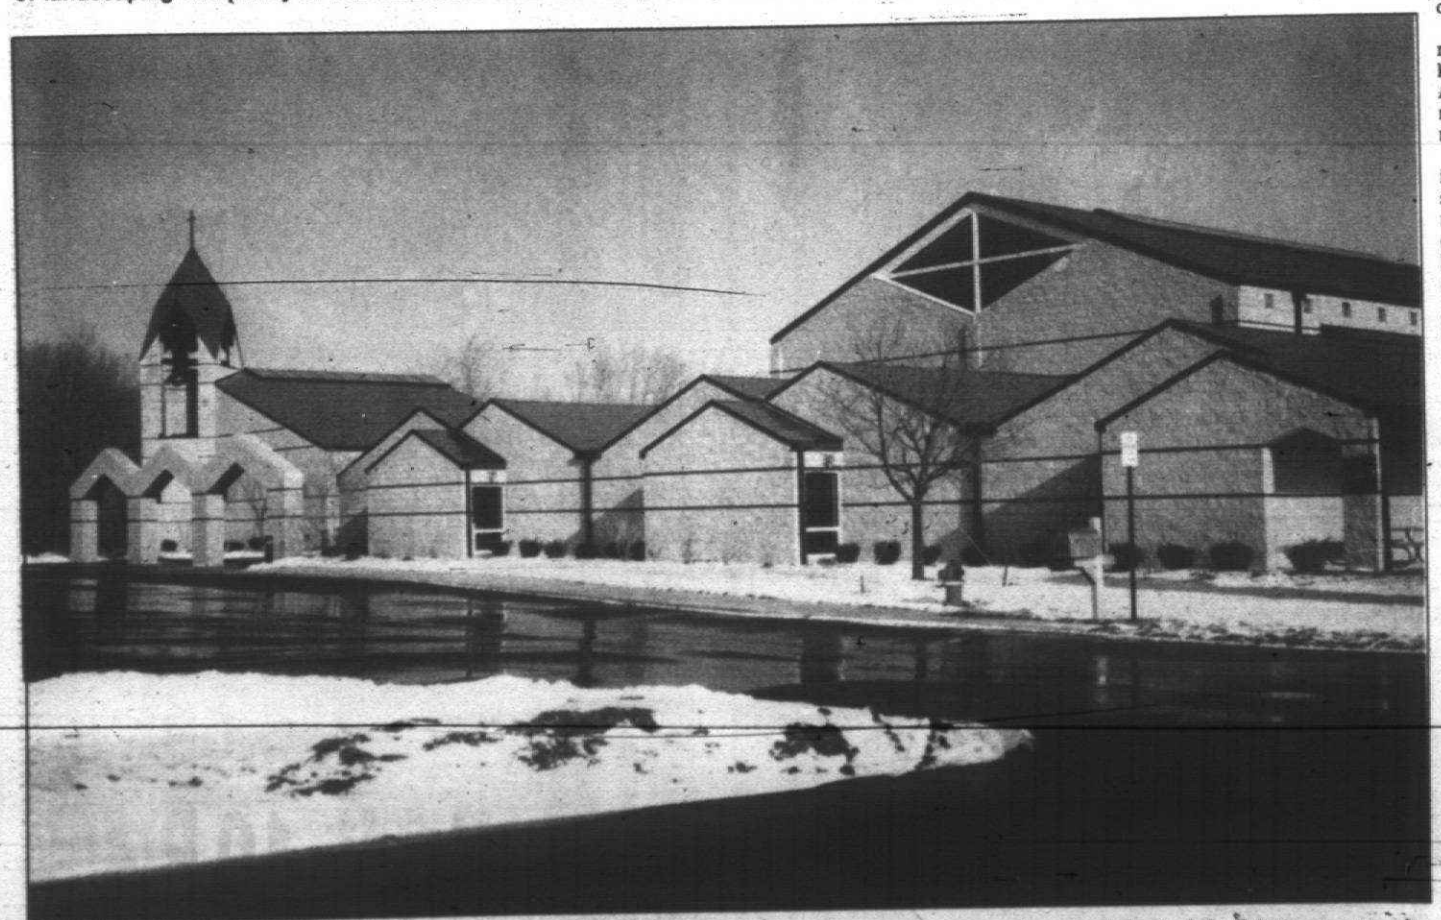
Construction industry showcases top projects

photos by LASZLO REGOS

The Timberland Four office building incorporates extensive use of landscaping and plenty of windows from which to enjoy the parklike view. The lobby features granite and wood materials, a water display and indirect neon cove lighting.



St. Mary's of the Hills features a large multipurpose room towering over classrooms with varying roof lines. A bell tower connects to the chapel.

BUILDERS AND architects with local connections were highly regarded by their peers this year in voting for Showcase Awards sponsored by the Construction Association of Michigan.

Seven of the 10 projects selected as best examples of quality design and construction craftsmanship in the state by members of the professional association involved firms in the Observer & Eccentric circulation area.

"This is one of the few award programs in existence where people who actually build projects every day determine which jobs represent outstanding work," said John DeMattia, CAM chairman and president of a Novi construction company.

Each of the CAM 3,000 members could nominate up to three projects that were built within the past four years and included both a Michigan contractor and architect. More than 300 were submitted. Showcase award winners include:

TMP Associates of Bloomfield Hills designed the Northern Michigan University Sports Training Complex in Marquette and the Saginaw Regional Correctional Facility, a state prison, in Freeland.

R.E. Dailey & Co. of Southfield was the contractor on both of those projects.

A.J. Etkin Construction of Farmington Hills was the contractor for Timberland Four, a Troy office building, and Volkswagen of America, North American Headquarters in Auburn Hills.

St. Mary's of the Hills Church in Rochester Hills was designed by Brown Associates Architects of Bloomfield Hills. Payne-Hickey of Livonia was the general contractor.

Hubbell, Roth & Clark of Bloomfield Hills was the project engineer for the Wixom Wastewater Treatment Plant and Coquillard/Dundon/Peterson & Argenta of Southfield was the architect for Madison Heights Police headquarters. Both are Showcase Award winners.

"We think it's important to highlight architects that show innovation in design and innovation in construction," DeMattia said of the awards.

TOM LANDRY, president of A.J. Etkin Construction, elaborated.

"Awards are given by people in the industry. It's like players in the National Basketball Association deciding on the all-stars, not the fans. It's contemporaries who judge who are in the trenches with you," he said.

Following is a brief description of the award winners with information provided by CAM. Comments from principals involved also follow.

● St. Mary's of the Hills Church, Rochester Hills.

The initial phase of 19,000 square feet consists of a multipurpose room currently used for worship, a smaller chapel, narthex with coffee bar, kitchen and office facilities, and five instructional rooms. All at a cost of $2.2 million.

"We did a very nice project for the money, a good value," said Doug Atkinson, project architect for Brown Associates. "We used a lot of masonry, a lot of block. We used shingle roof on everything.

"By keeping the cost of the building down, we could spend money inside," he added. "The chapel has ceramic tile. Pavers are at the front entrance. The multipurpose room has an inexpensive (57-foot) skylight."

Raising the bell tower proved to be a unique experience, said Dale Payne, president of Payne-Hickey.

"The top section was completed on the ground including gypsum board, roofing, all flashings, finish paint and the cross installed at the very peak," he said.

"The completed tower section then had to be lifted from the bottom because there was nowhere else to lift from. This, of course, made balancing it extremely difficult because it was topheavy. Once set in place, the mason contractor was able to enclose the columns," Payne said.

● Timberland Four office building, Troy.

The fourth building in the complex, 126,000 square feet at a cost of $6.5 million, incorporates extensive landscaping in a park-like atmosphere. The lobby features granite and wood materials, a water display and indirect neon cove lighting.

Disruptions of other tenants was kept to a minimum during construction, Landry said.

"Basically, we maintained the same theme. All buildings are brick. Maximum trees were left on the site and landscaping enhances overall development," he added.

● Volkswagen of America, Auburn Hills.

This four-story structure of 360,000 square feet integrates offices with research and development functions. The building, erected at a cost of $25 million, has a high ratio of perimeter windows to interior space providing natural light and a good view of the outdoors.

"It's an office building that encompasses two wings that has an atrium in the middle that connects both areas," Landry said. "It was built in 13½ months — including all interior and tenant work — extremely good for a building that size."

● Northern Michigan University Sports Training Complex, Marquette.

The timber-domed sports arena rises 132 feet above the ground at its highest point and measures 533 feet in diameter. The dome is formed by 400 preassembled wooden triangles in a grid system, a wooden deck, insulation, then a roof of synthetic rubber.

The structure cost $21.8 million.

"They (university officials) said we want to play football in it," said Stephen Smith, project architect. "We researched what materials were the most cost effective for the climate and we arrived at a wooden dome."

Tolerances were plus or minus ¼ inch at the foundation for all of the precut pieces to merge at the top, Smith said, adding, "It fit like a glove."

"It's unique in that once it was enclosed, completion schedule was accelerated," said Larry Dailey, the general contractor. "Usually you do the frame, then the exterior walls, then the roof. In this case . . . exterior walls are really the roof."

● Saginaw Regional Correctional Facility, Freeland.

The $33-million, 612-bed multisecurity state prison consists of six housing units, an educational/recreational building, administrative building, clinic, food service and warehouse.

Again, both TMP and Dailey combined on the work.

"Things representative of a successful project are to come in within the budget and we did that, come in on schedule and we did that," said George A. Rogers, project manager for TMP.

"There was great coordination between building trades," he added, "and the product is a fine example of craftsmanship. "The site is pleasing. In the psychology of reform and incarceration, a more pleasant yard helps morale and in the healing process to return to society," Rogers said.

"One thing important to the construction aspect because there were so many buildings was sequencing the work so the project was adequately manned to maintain schedule," Dailey said.

"A complicated part of most prisons is hardware and security systems and coordinating those with the owner," Dailey added.

The prison hasn't yet open due to the state money crunch.

● Wixom Wastewater Treatment Plant, Wixom.

A new technology never applied before to municipal wastewater treatment — parallel plate settlers and continuous backwash filters — was engineered to treat three million gallons of water daily. The $16 million plant discharges treated water into Kent Lake in Kensington Park.

"Basically, the treatment plant was designed like other plants, then this additional equipment was tacked on at the end of the process to bring the phosphorus level down," said Curt Christeson, project manager for Hubbell, Roth & Clark.

"It really does expand the state of the art, in effect," he added. "We think it's easier to maintain and operate. The plant after one year is operating beautifully.

● Madison Heights Police headquarters.

The 35,000-square-foot facility built at a cost of $2.7 million contains a central command area, a pistol training range, exercise rooms and office and locker areas.

"We have a lot of very functional floor space in a very economical package," said Dennis Dundon, principal in charge of the project. "We kept the complications to a minimum and were able to get a lot of value for the owner.

"We have brought together positions manned 24-hours a day — dispatch, lockup, desk where people first come in and shift commander," Dundon added. "This gives flexibility for one person to cover for another during peak times."

Showcase Award winners will be displayed during the CAM Expo Feb. 12-13 at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Builders see tax credit boosting home sales

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Give you $2,000 if you buy a house.

That's what builders are hoping President George Bush will say during his State of the Union address on Jan. 28.

In an attempt to kick start the economy, the administration has been kicking around a notion — among other ideas — that would offer a $2,000 tax credit for middle income, first-time house buyers. The program, according to information leaked to the media, would last for only a short time — six months to a year.

Every little bit will help, according to area builders, who despite a better sales year than many expected, are expecting a hard time if the economy continues to plod along like a ballet dancer in snow shoes.

BERNARD GLIEBERMAN, president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, said he doesn't think a $2,000 tax credit would have made much of a difference several months ago. But coupled with low interest rates, the offer may be too good for people who are considering buying a home — but still haven't made a commitment — to pass up.

"For any young person considering buying a house, the low interest rates (and $2,000 tax credit) is the chance of a lifetime," Glieberman said. "If they were having doubts, that's a great reason to buy now.

Getting the housing industry going again is critical, Glieberman said, and not just because he happens to be in the business of selling houses.

"One thing I believe, and that is because I've seen it before, is the housing industry always pulls the country out of a slow turn," he said.

House building creates construction jobs, adds to the tax base, and once a house is bought, stimulates the economy when new homeowners buy goods to use in their homes.

The fact that what is being proposed is a tax credit — which means the $2,000 comes right of the top of the tax bill — would also spur home sales.

A tax deduction, which would give consumers only a percentage of the $2,000 after buying a home, would be far less successful, he said.

DEVELOPER HERBERT LAWSON, president of Herbert Lawson Inc. in West Bloomfield, said that he's leary about speculating on a proposal before it's penned in ink, but he is encouraged at what he's heard from the rumor mill and media reports.

"Anything that will help people buy homes should be encouraged," he said.

How much difference an incentive like a $2,000 tax credit will make is difficult to say.

"Everything is relative; the car companies have done very well with their rebate program."

Like Glieberman, Lawson said he believes many people are sitting on the fence because they are afraid the economy is not going to improve. A tax credit could send the right message.

Still, the major obstacle to buying a house — especially for first-time buyers who have not built equity in an existing home — is coming up with a down payment, he said.

If a tax credit becomes reality, that may make a difference. When people buy a home they need money for more than a down payment. Furniture, appliances, taxes, association fees and other home basics are associated expenses.

"With the $2,000 they know they are getting right back, they may be able to buy a home now or borrow money to get them through to tax return time."

The limited time frame would give consumers a reason to buy now, rather than wait until the economy is fully recovered.

"All in all, it may be enough to take (potential buyers) off the fence," he said.

JAY SKACKFORD, vice president of public affairs for the National Association of Home Builders, the group that began spearheading a drive for a housing tax credit as far back as September, said such an incentive would get the housing market moving again. He mentioned that housing starts (nationwide) in 1991 were the lowest since 1945.

"Builders are on the cutting edge of the economy — we see the downturns and the upturns first.

"Basically, we came up with three suggestions. One, put an end to the credit crunch," Shakford said. Despite the availability of money, lenders were being very conservative after the savings and loan debacle.

"You can't run a free, open market unless there is money available," he said.

"Second, we felt pressure had to be kept on the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates," Shackford said.

The final piece of the puzzle was to restore consumer confidence. "We felt the government really had to step in here."

A tax credit for first-time, new home buyers was proposed, he said, because buying new homes would have an immediate effect on the economy.

The NAHB has since relaxed this stance, and opted for a tax credit for buyers of new and existing houses.

"The impact would be less dramatic but will accomplish the same goal, he said. Once older homes are sold, move-up buyers can afford to buy new homes.

"Our figures said that such a tax credit will result in an additional 250,000 housing starts over last year, which will generate 450,000 jobs," he said. The measure will cost approximately $1 billion, but should generate $4 billion.

Builders are hoping President Bush will announce a tax credit plan that will allow more buyers to open the door to new houses.

'One thing I believe, and that is because I've seen it before, is the housing industry always pulls the country out of a slow turn.'
