Candidates face elimination

The Canton trustee and treasurer's races are up for grabs as voters go to the polls Aug. 4 for the Republican primary election to decide which candidates will be around for the general election and which ones will be sent packing.

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Canton Republicans who cast ballots in the Aug. 4 primary will eliminate two candidates for trustee and decide which treasurer hopeful will face Democrat Bruce Phillips in the general election.

The treasurer's job, vacated by the resignation of Jerry Brown for health reasons, represents the greatest opportunity for candidates this year. With an annual salary of almost $47,000, the position affords a significant amount of visibility to the candidate who wins it and also a fair amount of financial compensation, plus health insurance.

Republicans Elaine Kirchgatter and Tim McCurley want your vote for treasurer.

Kirchgatter, 52, is a former school board member and current trustee who is giving up that position to run for treasurer. Her husband is Richard Kirchgatter, a veterinarian and former planning commissioner. They have been married 29 years and have three children.

McCurley, 35, is a certified public accountant and former Canton Township deputy finance director (February 1984 to January 1986) under former finance director Mike Gorman. McCurley is the Westland budget director where he continues to work for Gorman, who left Canton for Westland shortly before McCurley did.

McCurley's wife, Jackie, works as a records clerk in the Canton Police Department. They have a daughter age 19 and a son age 2.

Republican primary voters must also decide which four of the six GOP trustee candidates will face Democrats Stuart Schuch and John Cleaver Sr. in the November general election.

Bar bear wrestling will go on

BY BARBARA WILSON
STAFF WRITER

Caesar the wrestling bear's appearance Thursday at a Canton Township saloon has been scarred by controversy, but the show will go on.

Celebrity wrestlers Denny McLain and Eli Zaret canceled their participation in the wrestling event when Channel 2 officials were bombarded with protest letters from the group People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

CONTROVERSY

McLain and Zaret's matchup with Caesar was to be used on an upcoming segment of the "Eli and Denny Show," according to a spokesman for the station.

The show will go on, however, with Caesar taking on members of the audience at the Urban Cowboy Saloon.

The 900-pound black bear is owned by World Animal Studios of Columbia Station, Ohio. Owner and trainer Sam Mazzola bills his business as "educational entertainment exhibitions." He travels throughout the region with Caesar participating in wrestling events and doing educational programs.

"It is educational for people to see the bear up close and to touch him. When would most people ever get a chance like that?" Mazzola said.

The event was set to mark the grand opening of the saloon located in the old Center Stage building on Ford Road, one block east of I-275. A portion of the cover charges were to go to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The evening is also set to feature matches with "eight of Michigan's biggest bar bouncers," according to saloon owner John Sassak.

Mazzola maintains that Caesar is treated quite well. He travels in an air-conditioned trailer and there are rules that are enforced to ensure the safety of the bear as well as his opponents in the ring.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals claim that Caesar's teeth and claws have been inhumanely removed, and that he bit the fingers off of one of his opponents.

"Where is there proof?" Mazzola asks.

He said Caesar has all of his teeth and claws and has never injured anyone.

"I have had the same insurance carrier for five years and I have never had a claim filed against me," Mazzola said.

Patrons who are able to pin Caesar will win a $1,000 cash prize Thursday night.

The 1,000-pound bear is not muzzled, according to Mazzola. Caesar was born in captivity 10 years ago in Wisconsin.

Community Foundation 'Great Sit-in' to benefit literacy council and hospice

STAFF WRITER

Just sittin' in the window watching the world go by.

That's what several local celebrities will be doing to help two local service organizations.

The Canton Community Foundation is helping to organize "One Great Sit-in For A Great Cause." The event will benefit the Literacy Council and Hospice Services.

"In addition to raising some money, we hope the event will be a consciousness-raising activity for the community," said R. William Joyner, executive director of the Canton Community Foundation.

CHARITY

Plymouth City Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury will "sit" a total of 70 hours on behalf of Hospice, while Observer editor Jeff Counts will represent the Literacy Council for the entire weekend.

"There will be celebrity "sitters" who will sit in the other two windows for one-hour shifts," Joyner said.

Celebrities are still being sought for those positions, according to Joyner.

The "sitters" will be on display along with their favorite reading material and they will have a bucket nearby for contributions from passersby.

They will enter the windows at noon Sept. 11, and will remain there until 2 p.m. Sept. 13.

The Literacy Council, under the direction of Cheryl Laubacher, serves area residents who lack reading and writing skills. They may be learning English as a second language or they may have missed out on these studies as youngsters.

Hospice Services, under the direction of Maureen Butrico, helps families cope when one of their relatives has a terminal disease. Through hospice, terminally-ill patients may choose to die at home rather than in a hospital environment.

Housing rehabilitation unaffected by council action

STAFF WRITER

A new manual scheduled for adoption Tuesday by the Canton Township Board of Trustees will not affect the operation of the township's Housing Rehabilitation Program.

Trustees were slated to adopt the manual which is the first one put in place by the township since the program's beginnings in the early 1970s, according to Gerry Martin, development specialist for the township.

"We have been using the county manual for years. This is the first township manual we will have in place," he said.

Martin said the manual will not dramatically affect how the program is operated, but it does set specific guidelines for use of Community Development Block Grants through the rehabilitation program.

The program is operated with 7.5 percent, about $23,000, of the annual block grant budget.

The money allows residents to bring their homes up to building code and to provide for access to handicapped residents when certain income requirements are met.

Income guidelines are based on the median income levels in the Detroit area, according to Martin.

Because housing stock in Canton Township is newer, Martin said there are only three or four applications filed each year.

"The applications are usually for repairs costing between $3,000 and $4,000 rather than the maximum amount of $15,000, so the funding level is adequate," Martin said.

Funds are only made available when the dwelling is owner-occupied. Absentee landlords are not eligible to receive the funding.

Firm to study schools administration

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

WAYNE-WESTLAND

A consulting firm will be paid as much as $23,000 to study and recommend possible changes in the organization of the Wayne-Westland school administration.

In another move, a California consultant will be paid $1,400 plus travel expenses to conduct a workshop in August to help new Superintendent Larry Thomas and the Wayne-Westland school board develop a working relationship.

The two measures were approved unanimously Monday by the school board. The money will come from a $3-million superintendent's contingency fund that the board had earlier set aside.

In a study that will cost $21,000 to $23,000, the consulting firm of Plante Moran will examine the administration's organizational structure and central office staffing levels.

The firm will interview about 70 district employees, including central office administrators and school principals, and survey comparable districts before issuing recommendations for the district's administration.

Noting that most administrators and school board members are relatively new on the job because of a large turnover rate, Thomas suggested that school officials "look for outside expertise."

The 10-week study, in part, is expected to result in a recommended reorganization of the administration, Thomas said.

"We're a little thin," he said. "There are some areas that we need additional help in."

Right now, for example, the district has no deputy superintendent because of the departure of Thomas Svitkovich, who took a new job in the Carman-Ainsworth district.

The study is also expected to focus on cost-efficiency and accountability of the administration, Thomas said.

"I want the people in the community to feel comfortable that we're efficient (and) accountable," he said, adding later, "This is something that I think is needed to improve the school district."

Board President Leonard Posey said Monday that his initial reaction is that "$23,000 is a lot of money," but he joined five other board members in approving the proposal. Posey also suggested that more than one firm should be contacted for any future studies to compare costs.

Former board member Andrew Spisak, who resigned last week, has been critical of the money the board has begun spending on consulting fees.

"I am unable to forget that these same people, under the guise of saving taxpayers money, have spent more money on consultants and new attorneys and reports than you can imagine," Spisak said in a statement July 6 announcing his immediate resignation.

In a second proposal Monday, the board agreed to hire consultant Dick Foster to visit the district to conduct a workshop on relations between the Thomas administration and the school board.

The workshop will help school officials develop a plan for becoming "effective leaders," Thomas said.

Foster will be paid $1,400 for two days, plus expenses. He has been hired by such districts as Livonia, Taylor and West Bloomfield. Thomas worked in the latter district before being named Wayne-Westland superintendent.

Foster will help the school officials develop a process for improving working relations and improving the district.

Activist 'fought city hall' on airport issue

Warren Dusbiber showed you could fight city hall — and win.

Dusbiber, 70, who helped organize citizens opposition to public ownership of Mettetal Airport in Canton Township, died early Saturday from an apparent heart attack, friends said.

He celebrated his 70th birthday the day before.

"If it hadn't been for Warren Dusbiber, the city of Plymouth and Plymouth Township would own an airport right now," said Dennis Shrewsbury, Plymouth city commissioner who opposed the airport-purchase effort as a commission candidate.

"He taught people that they could fight city hall," Shrewsbury said.

"Warren was really the father of the Plymouth Township Concerned Citizens," said Robert Zaetta, a co-founder of the group.

"He was the one who first noticed the township was going to buy an airport," Zaetta said. Dusbiber got citizens in the city and township together to meet to oppose the effort, and took reams of notes and made tapes of government meetings where the airport issue was discussed.

In the face of strong citizen opposition, the Plymouth Township government got together with Canton to seek federal grants to buy the airport, abandoning an earlier effort to seek those grants with the city of Plymouth.

Warren Dusbiber

Some observers saw the move as an attempt to abandon the airport purchase, as federal officials have been asked to approve restrictions some say they are unlikely to approve.

The Federal Aviation Administration has yet to notify Canton and Plymouth Township if the grant application will be approved.

Dusbiber was born July 10, 1922, in Ypsilanti. He was a chemical engineer with Burroughs Corp., retiring in 1981. He was a member of the St. Andrew Episcopal Church in Livonia.

Survivors include wife Lois; sons, Darry of Ypsilanti and Brian of St. Paul, Minn.; a daughter, Wendy Porter of Canton; and six grandchildren.

Funeral services were Monday at the Vermeulen Funeral Home in Plymouth. The Rev. Robert Clapp officiated. Burial was Wednesday at Highland Cemetery, Ypsilanti.

Memorials can be made to the Michigan Heart Association.

With Kirchgatter giving up her trusteeship to run for treasurer, Canton residents are assured of at least one new trustee after November.

The remaining three incument trustees are seeking re-election. They are Bob Shefferly, Phil LaJoy and John Burdziak. Their challengers are Jim Panos, Melissa McLaughlin and Catherine Tyree.

Shefferly, 66, was elected to the board four years ago after 10 years on the planning commission. He has continued on the planning commission since as the board of trustees' representative.

A retired Detroit News advertising executive, Shefferly has been married to the former Lorraine Laiklam for 42 years and has three children and seven grandchildren.

LaJoy, 48, was appointed to his position three years ago to fill a vacancy. The owner and manager of a Norrell Temporary Services franchise, LaJoy served on Canton's merit commission for nine years and is the founder of Canton's annual Memorial Day Soccer Tournament. LaJoy is also the chairman of the Canton Cable Committee and a business owner.

Burdziak, 56, was appointed to the board of trustees last year to fill a vacancy. Before his appointment, Burdziak spent 14 years on Canton's zoning board of appeals, downtown development authority and planning commission.

Burdziak is a telephone engineering consultant to Michigan Bell and married with three adult children.

Among the Republican challengers for trustee, Panos and McLaughlin seem to have the best chance. Tyree, 46, who works at Ruby's Produce Market on Michigan Avenue, declined to complete the Observer questionaire and refused to have her picture taken.

Panos, 51, is the director of public works for Romulus and a member of Canton's zoning board of appeals. He was among the first of the trustee candidates to put signs out this year. Panos and his wife, Sandy, have one adult son.

McLaughlin, a 35-year-old homemaker, has lived in Canton for 30 years and served on the planning commission since last year. She and her husband, John, have two young children.

In the race for supervisor and clerk, Republican voters have no choice. Incumbent Supervisor Tom Yack is unopposed and clerk Loren Bennett has no GOP opposition.

On the other side of the primary coin, Carol Bodenmiller is the only Democrat candidate for clerk. Bruce Phillips is the only Democrat candidate for treasurer. And Schuch and Cleaver are the Democrats running for trustee. (Schuch did not return the Observer's questionaire and did not schedule an interview.)

The trainer said Channel 2 director Jeff Forster has agreed to attend the event Thursday evening and if he finds everything in order the match with Zaret and Mc Lain will be rescheduled for next month.

Republicans square off in trustee primary

McLaughlin

Melissa McLaughlin

Melissa McLaughlin, 35, is a Republican candidate for trustee who has spent the last year on Canton's planning commission.

"I thought running for the board would give me an opportunity to take a more direct approach to getting things done that I'd like to see done," she said when asked why she's running.

McLaughlin is a graduate of Plymouth-Salem High School and has a bachelor's degree in education for the emotionally impaired from Eastern Michigan University.

On township strip malls, McLaughlin said, "I hope they're a thing of the past. They don't breed a sense of community." She would like to see the strip-mall vacancies filled and also said Canton needs more fancy restaurants and clothing stores.

On cityhood, McLaughlin said "there may come a time when being a city is going to be a choice, (but) I don't know that being a city is going to make (things) any better (now)."

As a member of the planning commission, McLaughlin keeps a close eye on development. "I think planning is one of the most important aspects of a local government's responsibility," she said in her answer to the Observer questionnaire. McLaughlin wants the west side to develop as a residential area with large lots.

Where industry is concerned, McLaughlin said "Canton has to take an aggressive and creative stance toward industrial development. I will work to see industrial development not only be a financial asset to Canton, but also an aesthetic asset as well."

In addition, McLaughlin supports the WTUA sewer project and the construction of a recreation building.

Shefferly

Bob Shefferly

Republican Bob Shefferly, 66, was first elected as a Canton trustee in 1988 and spent the last 14 years on the planning commission.

Shefferly also represents Canton on the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments and the Nankin Transit Commission. He's a member of the Canton Election Commission and a board member of the Carriage Hills Homeowners Association.

The retired Detroit News advertising executive has a bachelor's degree in business administration from Wayne State University.

Of all the candidates, Shefferly alone suggested that township officials should consider cityhood for Canton. "I opposed the idea of a city structure in 1988, but after seeing the problems we have when we must deal with the county and pay twice for our roads, I feel the need to re-evaluate the good and bad between the two community forms to see what alternatives we have available to us," he wrote.

In his candidate interview, Shefferly said, "I'm certainly ready to give (cityhood) a real close look."

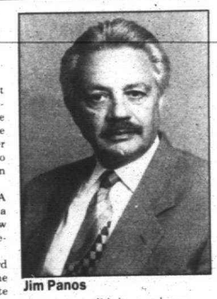
As a city, Shefferly said, Canton would not have to depend on the county for road improvements.

On industrial development, Shefferly said "the area we need it most is right around the airport." He added that Mettetal will eventually become an industrial park.

For the long term, Shefferly said Canton needs "to tie its various components together to make a community we can all relate to." To that end, he suggests that Canton should have only one school district, one newspaper, an economic development manager, a post office and a large hotel.

Shefferly also supports the WTUA sewer project, low-density residential development on the west side and the construction of a recreation center, but not with additional taxes.

Panos



Jim Panos

Jim Panos, 51, is a Republican candidate for trustee and sits on the township's zoning board of appeals.

Asked why he's running, Panos said, "I have the experience and I know the system and I'm not a yes man."

On development, Panos said he would work to maintain the rural nature of the west side. "Redford is just wall-to-wall houses, and I hope to God we don't get to that here," he said.

On strip malls, Panos said, "They have to be controlled. We don't want vacancies everywhere. That looks bad."

Panos favors the current board's road improvement policy whereby Canton pays 50 percent of the cost of Wayne County projects in Canton. "This program must continue and be expanded if possible," he said in his answer to the Observer questionaire. He likewise wants to see Lilley, Sheldon and Canton Center roads widened.

Panos also supports the WTUA sewer project, the construction of a recreation center (but not with new taxes) and additional industrial development.

Panos has attended several board meetings recently, and although he says the board members "operate OK," he doesn't believe they ask enough questions and lack knowledge of some basic things. "Some of the trustees didn't even know the simple stuff (like ordering vehicles)," he said.

LaJoy

Phil LaJoy

Republican Phil LaJoy, 48, was appointed to fill a trustee vacancy three years ago after Hank Walen died. "I'd love to have a chance to get elected to it once," he said.

The owner and manager of Norrell Temporary Services (in Ann Arbor) and Canton Township Hall of Fame member was a township merit commissioner for nine years.

LaJoy characterized the approach to development on Canton's east side as "damage control" in his answer to the Observer questionaire. "When opportunities present themselves, (we should) work on reducing density."

On the west side, LaJoy is "in complete agreement with the restriction of all commercial development." He favors the idea of having large lots on the west side.

On Canton's roads, LaJoy said, "We must continue to develop a relationship with Wayne County to lobby for road improvements to ensure that with more families moving in we do not become gridlocked like most of Oakland County."

LaJoy also approves of the WTUA sewer project, supports the construction of a recreation center (but not with new taxes), opposes cityhood and wants more industrial development.

Burdziak

John Burdziak

Republican John Burdziak, 56, was appointed to fill a trustee vacancy on the town board last year.

Burdziak's government experience includes four years on Canton's zoning board of appeals and downtown development authority and 10 years on the planning commission.

Burdziak backs the current plan to have large residential lots on the west side because Canton residents would then be able to move up to a better house without leaving the township.

On strip malls, Burdziak said that "enough strip stores are vacant that we don't need any more." The township government, he added, is doing everything it can to encourage businesses to fill the vacancies. "We try to cut the red tape as much as we can," he said.

Burdziak favors additional industrial development because it would "ease the tax base" and ease the tax burden on residents.

On road improvement, Burdziak likes the policy of paying 50 percent of the cost of Wayne County projects. "If you want paved roads, that's the only way you're going to get it," he said. "Otherwise we'd never get it done."

Regarding cityhood for Canton, Burdziak said "it's getting to the point where we'll probably have to consider it, (even though) taxes would have to go up to buy road maintenance equipment." (City's are responsible for road maintenance within their boundaries, whereas townships are not.)

Tyree

Catherine Tyree, 46, is a Republican candidate for trustee who has lived in Canton all her life.

She is a graduate of Wayne-Memorial High School and spent two years at Schoolcraft Community College. "Canton is growing and I just want to be a part of it," she said when asked why she's running.

As a trustee, Tyree said she would push for a deferment of special assessment taxes for people 65 and older until they sell their houses or die.

Tyree also supports the WTUA sewer project and favors the construction of a recreation center.

On bringing more industry to Canton, Tyree said she "doesn't know how much is really here" and opposes additional industrial development "at this time."

Board splits on extended leaves

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

A school board clampdown appears imminent against Wayne-Westland employees who seek long-term leaves of absence to try out new jobs in other districts.

School officials have strongly indicated they're weary of protecting positions for employees who want to maintain job security here — sometimes for several years — while working in other districts.

"I have a real problem with people using the system to protect themselves for future jobs," Superintendent Larry Thomas said.

The new school chief's strong stance emerged Monday as the board continued an ongoing, philosophical debate about the issue of long-term leaves. Thomas drew applause from the audience for his frank remarks.

In a 4-2 vote during Monday's meeting, the board approved a second-year leave for former Marshall Junior High School assistant principal Thomas Drummond, who accepted a similar post in the Walled Lake district.

Board members Richard LeBlanc and Fred Warmbier opposed extending Drummond's leave. Warmbier has repeatedly denounced such extensions, and LeBlanc said Monday he opposes leaves beyond one year unless an employee is laid off.

Board members Vicki Welty, Laurel Raisanen, Leonard Posey and Francis "Bud" Winter approved Drummond's leave, but some indicated they would support a tighter policy on job leaves.

Earlier this year, the board denied a fifth-year leave for Thomas Yack, a former employee who's unopposed in his bid for a second term as Canton Township supervisor.

School officials said they don't oppose extended job leaves for employees who are pregnant or ill. Moreover, the superintendent said employees should receive special consideration if they are elected to public office or receive an opportunity to teach in a foreign country.

"I think that's a good reason," he said.

Head-on collision kills one, injures four

A Farmington Hills man was killed and four people injured Tuesday night when a driver fleeing an accident in Plymouth Township collided head-on with a second car at Schoolcraft and Eckles in Livonia, police said.

Killed was a 23-year-old, front-seat passenger in the second car, a 1985 Buick Skylark headed westbound on Schoolcraft.

Police on Wednesday declined to identify the victim, saying relatives hadn't been notified.

The victim wasn't wearing a safety belt, police said.

The driver and two additional passengers in the Buick, as well as the driver of the fleeing car, a 1988 Oldsmobile Cutlas, were injured in the 8:30 p.m. accident, said Sgt. Kevin Dawley of the Livonia Police Department traffic bureau.

The injured included a 20-year-old Livonia man and two Northville residents, 24 and 25, all in the Buick; and the driver of the Oldsmobile, a 35-year-old Northville man.

All were taken to St. Mary Hospital in Livonia and Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills. The Livonia man was airlifted to University of Michigan Hospital, Ann Arbor, in critical condition with unspecified injuries, police said.

The accident was still under investigation Wednesday and police were unsure whether alcohol was a factor.

There were no injuries in the earlier accident, which Dawley termed "a fender bender" on Schoolcraft Road, west of Haggerty.

"He was driving at a high rate of speed and on the wrong side of the road when the cars collided" in Livonia, Dawley said.

Basket ace teaches at Jubilee

Stella Delap, of Basket Kreations in Canton, will be heading to Chicago Aug. 22 and 23, to participate in the JUBILEE! Creative College.

Delap will be one of 10 instructors representing gift basket professionals as part of the Creative College faculty at the Holiday Jubilee, at the Fairmont Hotel.

The Jubilee is the nation's largest symposium for creative small business entrepreneurs and provides training in the areas of gift baskets, balloon and party decorating, holiday gift deliveries, and marketing and promotion classes.

Delap will teach the foundations of a gift basket business and how to use home parties to increase and expand a home-based business.

Delap opened Basket Kreations in her home in June 1989. Business boomed for Delap and in November 1991 she moved into the Golden Gate Shopping Plaza on Lilley Road.

Area Democrats helping to build party's platform

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

NEW YORK — Democrats needed 17 days in 1860 and nine in 1920 to pick a presidential candidate. This year they knew weeks ago that Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton had the nomination sewed up. Why five days of activities?

"A convention touches only the superficial role of the delegates," said Birmingham attorney Don Tucker, attending his sixth conclave.

"The delegate selection process is part of the realignment of power every four years. That's the principal reason people are here," said Tucker, a Paul Tsongas supporter.

Dick McKnight, a Livonia school board member and 15th District Clinton delegate, watched a non-partisan news conference by the Childrens Defense Fund in the media center Ramada Hotel.

"Hillary Clinton is chair of it. It's interested in Head Start, prenatal care, children born with drug addiction, education, children who go to bed hungry," he said.

"Whoever you send to the Republican convention will see the same event," added wife Gail McKnight, a district judge in Westland. "It's like a Sunday church service with rabbis, ministers, men women, black, white, all denominations."

Dick: 'Campaign magazine has a number of seminars, free — direct mail, raising money. "The magazine bought a full-page ad in the party's convention paper listing seminars on opposition research, 'lightning attacks to exploit weakness,' 'combating the press,' women candidates, high-donor fund-raising, polling and best campaign commercials.

Visiting was son Edward (Ted), an Army private first class stationed at Fort Stevart, Ga. "We haven't seen him in three or four months," said Gail.

By the numbers

Michigan has 159 delegates (73 for Clinton, 38 for Jerry Brown, 20 for Paul Tsongas and 28 unpledged) and 22 alternates (17 Clinton, three Brown, two Tsongas).

"In 1980, they (Coleman Young's forces) froze us out," recalled Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara. "This year we were with Clinton from the beginning. We were very magnanimous and gave them some delegates."

McNamara's tale underscored how delegates were selected: by the camps of the candidates, based on voter turnout in the March 17 primary.

"We've got to leave here like the Republicans do — unified. They pull together all their divergent groups" said McNamara who as mayor of Livonia for a quarter-century had plenty of time to watch the Grand Old Party ascend.

"I think we've got the guy (Clinton) who can do it," McNamara said.

Because of his high office holder position, McNamara and wife Lucille will be attending several VIP functions such as a cocktail reception for national chairman Ron Brown and a breakfast hosted by Clinton confidante Jim Blanchard, Michigan's former governor.

Emily's network

"I'm going from event to event to event . . . in a word networking," said state Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor.

"The business of the convention is essentially completed. There are no battles to be fought. It's not a contentious environment," said the third-term lawmaker who is an add-on delegate for Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas.

Unlike Jerry Brown, another rival of Bill Clinton for the presidential nomination, Tsongas quietly folded his effort, endorsed relatively minor changes in the party platform.

Pollack planned to attend an "Emily's List" reception Tuesday, a closed gathering in the New York Hilton Grand Ballroom. The purpose is to raise $750,000 for women Democrats running for the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives this year. (Emily means Early Money Is Like Yeast — it raises the dough.)

Pollack herself benefitted from the Emily fund in her 1988 bid against Republican U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell of Plymouth.

"I'll spend the week meeting people, discussing how we win the November election," Pollack said, admitting Michigan has few interesting races from the point of view of women Democrats.

3 candidates in line for vacant W-W board post

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

Three candidates have lined up for the Wayne-Westland school board post that Andrew Spisak quit amid concerns he would doom to failure the administration of new Superintendent Larry Thomas.

Veteran school board candidate Linda Pratt, Westland landlord Walter Warren and Wayne resident Don Ruark — cousin of board member Vicki Welty, — have entered the race to fill Spisak's seat.

The three board hopefuls became the first to submit their names to the school board, in hopes of being chosen to fulfill the last year of Spisak's unexpired four-year term.

At least three other candidates have stated that they, too, will seek the post, though they hadn't officially submitted their names to the school board office as of Tuesday afternoon. They are former board member Mathew McCusker and former candidates John Albrecht and Kenneth Raupp — all losers in the June 8 school board election.

More candidates could emerge before Monday's 4 p.m. deadline for applying at the school board office, 36745 Marquette, between Newburgh and Wayne roads.

The school board plans to interview all candidates during special sessions scheduled for 6 p.m. Tuesday and 7 p.m. Wednesday. The board expects to name Spisak's successor at the conclusion of Wednesday's meeting.

Spisak announced his immediate resignation July 6, during the first meeting presided over by Thomas. Spisak said he fears he would become a divisive force because he remains bitter over the forced retirement of former schools chief Dennis O'Neill, who stepped down in October under pressure from a board majority.

Pratt, a longtime school volunteer and Westland resident who works for a family business, has applied on three occasions for a board appointment and has also lost in two elections in 1990 and 1991. She is a volunteer at the Wayne-Westland clothing bank for needy children.

Pratt said she applied for Spisak's seat because of the "potential for new and innovative" moves to improve the district, in the wake of a near-sweeping turnover of board members in two years and the recent hiring of a new superintendent.

"There's only so far you can go in school volunteer work or by being Joe Blow at the microphone" at school board meetings, Pratt said.

"What kind of decisions that are made now will determine whether the district is going to go forward or stand still," she said.

Neither Warren, a Westland landlord, nor Ruark, a Wayne resident and employee of RN Home Health Care of Westland, could be reached Tuesday for comment about their candidacies.

Ruark had sought a school board vacancy in 1989, but lost to board member Leonard Posey. Posey is now in the third year of an elected four-year term and was recently named board president.

Minimum ratings change for air-conditioning units

On Jan. 1 of this year "10" became the minimum standard SEER rating for newly manufactured air conditioning units, as mandated by the federal government

Many homeowners this summer will be faced with the decision to repair the old A/C unit or install a new one, and they should be aware of the ratings and new energy-efficient models.

Regulations requiring the higher SEER rating and others controlling the use of Freon-type refrigerants were reviewed this week by Dan Bergstrom of Bergstrom's Inc. in Livonia.

Shoppers will still find some "eight" and "nine" SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating) units being sold, but they were manufactured before Jan. 1.

Less costly

The higher the SEER rating, the greater the efficiency; in effect, the less electricity it takes to cool your home.

The typical home central air conditioner that is being replaced today is 15 to 20 years old, and probably rated at 6.5 SEER, said Bergstrom.

Putting in a new 10 SEER unit can cut your electric bill by some 35 percent, Bergstrom said. That means that savings in electricity costs can pay for the new unit in five to eight years, while reducing pollution from electrical power generating plants in the bargain.

Home owners can even opt for an 11 or 12 SEER rated model available in Michigan. In warmer climates like Florida, SEER ratings of up to 15 can be purchased.

■ 'Home repairs may have been cheaper and quicker, but often they were not done correctly. This means less efficiency of the unit.'

Dan Bergstrom
Bergstrom's Inc.

Having the proper level of refrigerant is key to a unit operating at the highest level of efficiency, according to Dan Bergstrom.

"Home repairs may have been cheaper and quicker, but often they were not done correctly," Bergstrom said. "This means less efficiency of the unit."

Having a professional technician check your air conditioning unit and balance the refrigerant level is actually less expensive in the long run, he said. A home service call typically runs only about $53 for minor service needs.

His firm offers to answer questions from the public about the new rules or about air conditioning systems in general.

Located in the Redford and Livonia for 34 years, Bergstrom Inc. is one of the largest air conditioning, heating and plumbing firms serving the western metropolitan area.

Freon controls

Bergstrom also noted that effective July 1, all Freon-type gases and liquids — such as the refrigerant in air conditioners and refrigerators — must be captured and properly disposed of, according to the federal Clean Air Act.

Thought to deplete the earth's ozone layer, Freon-type refrigerants — chlorofluorocarbons (CFCS) — can no longer be allowed to escape into the atmosphere.

Until now, many home and auto owners were able to purchase a can of refrigerant and do their own servicing of auto and home air conditioners and refrigerators. They allowed the old refrigerant to escape into the air.

Those who do so now can be subject to a fine of $25,000 and five years in jail, enforceable by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Bergstrom said.

Local physician voice for Asian-Americans

NEW YORK -- If unions are half the Michigan delegation to the Democratic National Convention, Stella Evangelista is the smallest bloc. One.

"I'm the only Asian," said the Bloomfield Hills pediatrician who practices in Livonia, attending her first national conclave with husband, Jose, also a pediatrician.

"We are hoping to mobilize the Asian-Pacific group to vote. They are concentrated in the metro Detroit area. There is probably 200,000."

Her support of Bill Clinton for president is tied directly to the support of former Gov. James Blanchard, whom she backed in 1982.

"We helped during the Blanchard campaigns and since then have been active in the Democratic Party.

"Blanchard set up the first Asian Advisory Council in Michigan (of which she was a member). The problems we run into are discrimination, Japan bashing - we tend to be the racial scapegoats for the economic ills of the U.S. In Michigan it's mainly discrimination in employment.

"Asians were considered the 'model minority' in the Reagan Administration. That has hurt rather than helped us.

"In health care, Asians have special problems such as TB and hepatitis."

Born in Cebu, the Philippines, in 1945, Evangelista came with her husband to the United States in 1968, first to Cook County Hospital in Illinois, then to Wayne County and the University of Michigan. Their practice is on Farmington Road in Livonia. They have six children ranging in age from 8 to 24.

Her activities include American Citizens for Justice, which helps Asians with discrimination and immigration problems; the Philippine Medical Association and the Philippine-American Community Council.

"Democrats have always - a long time - advocated civil rights, reform and social legislation. I think that's why a lot of Asians look up to that," she said.

Deli elects to bring politics into kitchen

By Suzanne Parker
Staff Writer

Nobody really knows what's inside, but everyone seems to like it anyway.

No, it's not another presidential candidate, but it is called the H. Ross Perot-gi, the latest culinary concoction of the Deli Unique.

Unveiled and taste-tested last week by the morning crews of local radio station, including Dick Purtan on WKQI and J.J. and the Morning Crew on WLLZ, the Polish delectable is now available at the deli's West Bloomfield and Bingham Farms locations, as well as the Plaza Deli in Southfield.

While all H. Ross Perot-gies look the same on the outside, Keith Schofield, who co-owns the delicatessens with Mathew Prentice, revealed that cheese and mushroom and cabbage fillings are the hidden agendas that delight the tastebuds of faithful followers.

"And of course, we have a Perot-gi that is potatoe-filled, that's with an e, that is, in honor of Dan Quayle," Schofield said.

This is not the first time Schofield and Prentice have given their repast a political twist. Months ago, at the beginning of the primaries, they named five sandwiches after the leading candidates.

"We figured we'd take a straw vote and see whose sandwich was ordered the most," Schofield said.

George Bush won by a landslide, but that might not be saying much considering The George Bush was a turkey sandwich, minus the broccoli. Other sandwiches included The Pat Buchanan, which consisted of bologna and American cheese on white bread, and The Jerry Brown, a vegetarian sandwich with lots of bean sprouts.

While the H. Ross Perot-gi is not officially endorsed, Schofield said the deli has informed Perot's Texas headquarters of the independent's new namesake. They are awaiting a response, he said, but not holding their breath.

Her AIDS battle moves local delegates to tears

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

NEW YORK — "Just a mom" stole the Democratic National Convention's hearts away from Jesse Jackson's oratory.

"Sh-h-h-h!" the Michiganians hissed as Elizabeth Glaser stopped the noisy convention in its tracks with the story of how she acquired AIDS through a blood transfusion in 1981, passed it onto a daughter who died and then to a son, and faces death itself.

If Rev. Jackson brought the convention to its feet in prime TV time, Glaser silenced it and sent out her message: "Not just for people who have HIV, but for many, many people — poor people, gay people, people of color, children. A strange spokesperson for such a group - a well-to-do-white woman," she said of herself.

"I was crying," said Eileen DeHart, Westland resident and Clinton delegate. "To lose your children is the most traumatic thing. The though of losing them tears you apart."

■ 'I was crying. To lose your children is the most traumatic thing. The though of losing them tears you apart.'

Eileen DeHart
Westland resident
Clinton delegate

"A moving moment. It strikes you like a thunderbolt. Unfortunately, she was not on in prime time," said U.S. Rep. Sander Levin of Southfield. "For years George Bush wouldn't mention the word AIDS. I was on a subcommittee of Government Operations in 1983 when the undersecretary of Health said there was adequate money for AIDS research and later acknowledged he fibbed through his teeth. As a result, the nation lost valuable time."

"People identify with someone who says 'I'm experiencing this,'" said Keith Geiger, president of the National Education Association. Geiger visited his native state's delegation Wednesday morning.

"The speeches by Mrs. Glaser and Jesse Jackson," moved Walter O. Briggs IV, Democratic hopeful in the 11th congressional District. "She told about the concerns and trial she's been through, relating them to an average family. It makes you realize this is not just a disease of the underprivileged and gays.

"I'm staying with my parents in Connecticut during the convention. My mother wanted to know about that (speech). My wife, too," said Briggs.

"Only the most heartless would fail to be taken by emotion," said Don Tucker, Birmingham attorney, Tsongas delegate and Oakland County chair."A middle-class family woman contracted AIDS through a transfusion . . . The link should cause us to recognize this is truly a plague."

"Too bad it wasn't on prime time. It (Glaser's speech) showed the lack of compassion in this government," said Gail Nolin, Clinton delegate from Waterford and MEA official.

"Enormously moving," said Mary Ryan Taras, Birmingham teacher, Clinton delegate and an MEA leader. "As a mother — as a parent — the loss of a child has to be the worst experience."

Married to Paul Michael Glaser, a director and former Starsky on the "Starsky and Hutch" television series, Mrs. Glaser, 44, blistered the Reagan and Bush administration for indifference to Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, which attacks the body's immune system and has been spread through body fluids by blood transfusions, use of shared intravenous needles and sexual activity.

"Exactly four years ago my daughter died of AIDS. She did not survive the Reagan administration. I am here because my son and I may not survive four more years of leaders who say they care but do nothing," she said.

"Now I realize that they don't hear because they don't want to listen . . .

"Do you know how much my AIDS care costs? Over $40,000 a year. Someone without insurance can't afford this . . .

"This is not the America I was raised to be proud of — where rich people get care and drugs that poor people can't. We need health care for all."

Blanchard: Clinton's old friend is also Gore's pal

Less known is that he's also tight with running mate Albert Gore Jr.

"He supported the Chrysler package," said Blanchard, who was elected to the U.S. House in 1974 with Gore following in '76.

"Then Rep. Dan) Quayle tried to kill it and Bush was opposed," Blanchard said. The federal underwriting of Chrysler Corp.'s loans helped save the No.3 automaker in 1979 and propelled Blanchard into the governor's office in 1982.

"I served on the Science and Technology Committee with Gore. He and I were part of the congressional committee on the house of the future.

"The last time he was in Oakland County I introduced him at a Phil Hart dinner and said one day he will be president of the United States. He's close," Blanchard said.

Blanchard turns 50 on Aug. 8 and looks thinner than in his 30s. He and wife Janet had a hectic schedule of speeches and events. Although listed as chair of the Michigan Clinton caucus, Blanchard is staying in Clinton's hotel. A ground-floor Clinton supporter, Blanchard may be due for a presidential appointment if Clinton wins the White House.

"I'm a little upset that both (Clinton and Gore) are younger than I am," Blanchard told Michigan delegates at their Mouday morning caucus. Clinton is 43, Gore 44.

The irreverent Blanchard humor was still there: "Clinton was so brilliant a student at Georgetown University that all the Jesuits thought he was Catholic and not Baptist."

Clinton and Blanchard freely borrowed each other's ideas on education and job training as governors.

Like old times: Former Governor James Blanchard still commands media attention as he addresses Michigan reporters during this week's convention.

Veep choice called 'workhorse'

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

NEW YORK - "In Congress there are workhorses and show horses. He has been mostly a workhorse" said U.S. Rep. Bill Ford of vice presidential nominee Albert Gore Jr.

Gore moved from the House to the Senate in 1984, but Ford sees him often anyway.

"On the Post Office and Civil Service Committe, I've had to work with the Senate because the Senate would put military stuff in bills in my jurisdiction. I wound up as a conferee (member of the joint House-Senate conference committee)," Ford said.

The 28-year congressional veteran who now calls Ypsilanti home said "Gore helped" resolve those bills. Gore is considered an expert on the armed services.

"In the real world, we had to decide whether scientists would be hired at scientists' wages or pay 'em like civil service. We hired the scientists," Ford said.

"I did not, unfortunately play basketball with him in the House, but he was an avid basketball player," Ford added.

"Albert is one of our graduates," said U.S. Rep. John Dingell of Trenton. A 35-year member of Congress, Dingell heads the Energy and Commerce Committee, one of the most powerful in Washington. Gore served on it during his House tenure.

"Capable, Smart, Strong on environment and consumer issues. A strong liberal. Very talented," Dingell said of Gore.

Sens. Tim Wirth of Colorado and Phil Gramm of Texas also were on Dingell's panel before moving up. "They all brag about the fact that the (House) Commerce Committee was a great education," Dingell said. "Few in the Senate would stand up to them."

Mideast peace

Both sides say U.S. should do more

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

NEW YORK -- Both Jewish and Arab American Democrats say Republican President George Bush has lost ground with their groups in the Middle East peace process.

"Bush has done a lot for the peace process, but we are no longer the respected country," said Terry Ahwal, Livonia resident and leader in the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination League.

Though not a delegate, Ahwal was placed on the convention credentials committee and sees her group gaining respect in the Democratic Party.

"Arabs were always left out. Things are tremendously improving. For the first time in the history of the convention, we have two delegates from Michigan, four in the U.S. on the credentials committee and one on the platform committee," she said.

"I'm not happy with how they addressed the Arab-Israeli conflict. They're recognizing that Palestinians have human rights because they're human beings. That's a little positive change.

"But we differ on Jerusalem. They (Democratic platform) are taking Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. We say it should be an international city. No one should have exclusive rights to the holy city," Ahwal said.

U.S. Rep. Sander Levin and state Rep. Maxine Berman, both of Southfield, say Bush grievously offended American Jews with press conference remarks about the Israeli lobby.

"He very much offended the Jewish community when he criticized them for lobbying for loan guarantees (for settlements of immigrants)," Levin said.

"All they were doing was exercising an American right. Obviously, the Bush administration will attempt some kind of smoothing over of the relationship -- some kind of loan guarantees. But it will be difficult for Buah to repair the damage."

Berman, who attended an American Israeli PAC meeting, said the mood was calm but echoed Levin's remark that Bush had offended Jews over lobbying. She sees Republicans as losing some of the gains they made with the Jewish vote in past elections.

The mood in the Michigan delegation is far smoother compared to 1988 when the Palestinian intifada (uprising) was starting in Israel. Michigan's Jesse Jackson delegates in 1988 kept to themselves outside the caucus room in Atlanta, and there was ill will over Jackson's "Hymietown" remark about New York. In hotel lobbies, one could see an invisible 4-foot wall between Jackson and other delegates.

Convention bigwig touts his state ties

STAFF WRITER

NEW YORK — Keith Geiger has changed in only two ways since he was a Livonia teacher and active in the Michigan Education Association. His graying hair has turned almost white. And his perpetual smile is a big grin.

"We have the most - 400 delegates and alternates," said the president of the National Education Association.

"We had a staff person as part of the (Democratic platform) drafting Committee. It's more a centralist platform than in the past. But we're very pleased because we have the candidate that goes with it," he said of Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

Geiger and wife Janet were on their way to guest seats in Madison Square Garden. They live in Fairfax County, Va., outside Washington.

"We (NEA) eliminated Bush real early because of his record. Zero. Jerry Brown didn't respond to our questionnaire."

Brown supporters few among state delegates

"Talk to your whips and say, 'Please let Jerry Brown speak,'" Southfield attorney Tom Boyd, chair of the 38-member caucus supporting the former California governor, told the Michigan delegation Tuesday morning.

But Boyd acknowledged Michiganians were showing no enthusiasm as other Brown supporters waved signs for the dissident Californian Monday night on the convention floor in Madison Square Garden. Brown got 26 percent in the March 17 primary.

"He (Brown) is kind of a kook," said Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara. "He's had his day in the sun. Others who challenged Clinton and lost came into the fold. Brown relishes the spotlight.

"Brown has 600 delegates to the convention, but there are only about 200 solid supporters. A helluva lot of them are UAW people who became Broun delegates just to get to the convention. They're hitchhikers. They should have joined Clinton earlier," McNamara said.

As of Tuesday, convention officials were holding to their position that Brown wouldn't speak before ratification of the platform unless he endorsed nominee Bill Clinton, the way Sens. Bob Kerry, Tom Harkin and ex-Sen. Paul Tsongas had.

Shrugged U.S. Rep. Sander Levin of Southfield: "Jerry Brown, in terms of the November elections, is really not a major factor."

State party chair Gary Corbin said most delegates' "eyes are on the prize" rather than Brown. He said convention leaders gave him no instructions to hold down demonstrations for Brown. A party newspaper article was headlined: "Brown Hotline in New York: 1-800-NUISANCE."

Young detectives learn how tos of solving crimes

One kid wanted to visit the morgue. Another hoped to learn how to bug a room.

Young super sleuths in the making are learning to solve imaginary crimes in a two-week enrichment class offered by Schoolcraft College this summer.

"I'm trying to gear everything to keep the majority interested and entertained," said Ed Davis, a retired Michigan State trooper and a private detective who is teaching the course. His daughter, Kristen Davis, a criminology student at Grand Valley State College, is assisting in the teaching of 28 grade school students interested in crime solving.

Davis has taught the class to adult students at Schoolcraft and Washtenaw Community colleges, but this is his first stint with pint-sized detectives.

"The class is supposed to be limited to fifth, sixth and seventh graders, but we have some second graders and others taking driver's education — so it's quite an age gap," Davis said.

During the first week, the kids dealt with a simulated crime site — a garage burglary which resulted in a stolen bike. Davis had originally planned a mock homicide scene, but some parents nixed that idea.

Kids play the role of crime scene technician and learn to decipher evidence. Fingerprinting, casting footprints, taking photographs and securing the scene are some of the lessons covered.

Gays say delegates ignore them

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

NEW YORK — Two self-styled "transplanted queer Michiganders" had little success approaching the Michigan delegation to the Democratic National Convention for changes back home.

"There are no openly gay Democratic delegates from Michigan," said Bill Dobbs, who lived in Birmingham in the '70s and is a law graduate from the University of Michigan.

"Queers are trash in this country," Dobbs said in literature he distributed to Michigan delegates. "Just as Eric (a friend from Birmingham who died in New York City of AIDS) couldn't be frank about his life with his owu family, America . . . can't seem to talk about or deal with AIDS or queers. How many more have to die?"

Dobbs and Jon Nalley, a former Grand Haven and East Lansing resident, tried to hop a bus ride with Michigan delegates from the UN Plaza Hotel to a Sunday night reception at the American Museum of the Moving Image. Lacking delegate or preas credentials, they were asked to leave.

"Our being thrown off the bus is a metaphor for how Michigan treats gays," Dobbs said.

They managed to beat the bus to the museum and were passing out literature when five New York police officers stopped them. After five minutes conversation, the police backed away, and the pair went off to work.

"A classic gambit by the NYPD," Dobbs said later. 'I have a Corrections pass, and I'm a lawyer." The reception they got from Michigan delegatas varied from warm to hostile.

In contrast to their native state, Dobbs said, Texas has 11 gay delegates, California "a couple dozen" New York has some. In his view, political meetings shouldn't be conducted without representation from women, gays and ethnic groups. "They (gays) were frozen out," he said after contacting a Michigan gay lesbian group.

Nalley listed 12 friends from Michigan State University who died of AIDS.

He is 32. And his literature listed "A Queer Dozen" things Michigan Democrats should do back home, including:

- A state law prohibiting nonhiring of gays, as Cracker Barrel announced it would do.
- Repeal of Michigan's sodomy law which police in Adrian used in a park sting operation.
- University board rules at U-M, MSU and Wayne State prohibiting anti-gay discrimination.
- Repeal of Public Act 490 under which Jeffrey Hanlon was extradited from New York State to Michigan for infecting people with HIV positive virus. Dobb worked on Hanlon's defense.
- Restore and fund the Michigan Council for the Arts, who boldly stood up for free expression.
- 'Dump (Gov. John) Engler."

CLARIFICATION

A story on the Wayne County Sheriff's race in Monday's Obsever should have made it clear that the Wayne County director of jail operations reports to the county executive on all budget matters pertaining to county jails. The director reports to the sheriff on security and operational matters.

Carver sees visions in wood blocks

■ Judy Shellhaas is carving out a reputation as a talented woodcarver, as she's graduated from making miniature pieces of furniture to producing more imaginative carvings.

BY BARBARA WILSON
STAFF WRITER

If we were all to live in a world carved out of the imagination of Judy Shellhaas, we would be bizarre beings with haunting eyes and enchanted lives.

Unfortunately, we can only visit her world by glancing at the figures this Plymouth resident carves from chunks of wood.

Eighteen years ago Shellhaas translated her artistic talent into miniature pieces of furniture. Her pieces sold across the country with price tags as high as $3,800.

Now Shellhaas prefers to find more animated and imaginative figures in the blocks of wood.

"I'm still trying to decide what I want to be when I grow up," Shellhaas admits proudly as she sits in a room that she built in the family 'homestead' in Plymouth.

When Shellhaas began carving 18 years ago it wasn't as a hobby. The very detailed miniature furniture she created was highly regarded by collectors, but they were not pieces she would select for herself from a gallery.

"They weren't exactly the kind of pieces you would have your 3-year-old play with. As a matter of fact I couldn't afford to even buy some of my pieces," she said.

She studied the designs of three centuries of furniture and yet never copied the pictures she saw in the books.

"I studied the designs, but never felt it was mine if I copied it from a picture," Shellhaas said.

Wood carver: Judy Shellhaas has sold her work for as much as $3,800.

For the first 15 years of her career she worked 80-hour weeks carving pieces for galleries and shops across the country. She took care to make sure her creations were sold by only one dealer per state so that they would not become commonplace. In those first years of her career she carved 4,600 pieces.

She also built two dollhouses drawing on her love of architecture and recreated Mark Twain's legendary bed for a museum in Connecticut.

"I was trying to gracefully get out of the business, but people kept tracking me down, so I decided to go back to school," she said.

Shellhaas attended Schoolcraft and then went on to Eastern Michigan University where she studied under sculptor John Pappas.

"He got me to make things bigger and bigger and made it more interesting to me," she said.

Now, Shellhaas has happily expanded her horizons. She still teaches a class in miniature furniture carving for the Miniature Makers' Workshop in Royal Oak and she taught for awhile at Greenfield Village, but she finds greater rewards in teaching her small class of carvers in her home and exploring her imagination and the blocks of wood for more eclectic figures.

"I love carving and I love teaching. I'm just not sure where to go from there," she said.

Shellhaas is not selling any of her wares these days. She is finding great serenity, however, in creating a sort of medieval carousel. The figures are either charmingly gruesome or graceful and elegant. The carousel itself lives only in Shellhaas' mind.

"I love working on them. I thrive on intense detail and love all the variations." Shellhaas said with great excitement as she runs her fingers down the scaled back of a 'beautiful' dragon. "It's difficult to go back to doing the furniture where you're locked into the high renaissance."

Shellhaas works the figures out of blocks of basswood. She makes a model on paper and then works on a prototype from wood. She keeps all of the prototypes for herself.

"They're not usually the best pieces, but they are the first ones. It's where it starts."

Once the figure has emerged, Shellhaas goes at it with paint and brush. Many sculptors, she said, are afraid of color, but she thrives on it.

Each piece can take from 50 to 500 hours and Shellhaas takes care to document every hour spent.

She has carved a few full-size carousel horses, one of which will someday be sold. The other horse, which never made it past the head piece, will remain on display in her home.

"This one I will just never sell. I really have strong feelings toward it," Shellhaas said of the horse's head on display in her family room.

The artist, however, has learned that she cannot keep everything she makes.

"I am attached to the piece as I am working on it. It's an extension of while you're working on it, but you have to let it go."

While Shellhaas' current work is unusual, she maintains some sense of reality by studying the way muscles move and hair flows. She studies animal books to select body parts for the creatures she sees in her mind before they take shape in the wood.

"There are some absolutes that you cannot change," she explains. "Muscles move a certain way on the skeleton. That doesn't change."

Shellhaas has made efforts to pass her art onto her children. Her son has no interest at all, she said, and while her daughter has a real flair for it, she does not share her love for the wood.

"Most people who try it love it," Shellhaas said. "I've only had one student who just really hated it."

While the local sculptor is now doing something she loves, she is not ready to stop exploring new options for her skills. After building a new deck this summer, she has become interested in landscape architecture and may take some classes in that area. She would also like to make special carvings for the garden.

Wherever Shellhaas chooses to build her world of elegant wood figures, someone is sure to feel privileged to be among the visitors to her imagination.

Ribcrackers take to skies over fest

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER

Air traffic was high above North Farmington High School last weekend as the Ribcrackers, a radio control plane group, took over the sky in celebration of the Farmington Founders Festival.

Members of the group are frequently kidded about their club name and asked whether the club is made up of retired chiropractors.

Not so, say members.

A club member's 9-year old daughter coined the group's name during the 1950s after watching and taking note of the amount of ribs in the plane's airfoil that were broken as a result of flying.

The Ribcrackers were originally organized as a non-profit model airplane club under the auspices of the Livonia Department of Parks and Recreation. The group numbers 130 and emphasizes safe sports flying.

Watching a show is addicting. "I came and watched a show," said Dan Wamboldt, the club's current club president and West Bloomfield resident, as he explained how he got started.

Ribcrackers members host several events throughout the year including pylon races, limbo contests, balloon Bursts and fun flying.

Hilda, the witch, a plane dressed up as a witch atop a broom, is a hit at every air show, Wamboldt said. "Barry Killick, a club member, built the witch seven or eight years ago," Wamboldt said.

Hilda usually sustains some damage after flight but Saturday she completely lost her head when she collided with another plane.

"When she gets near the ground, her legs actually drag on the ground like she's walking," said Jac Mosier, club treasurer, who lives in South Lyon.

Dr. Keith Shaw, of Ann Arbor, who Wamboldt termed a "top electric modeler in the world" was on hand to fly his electric planes (electric motor and battery). One achieved a speed of 140 mph.

"Blink and it's in the next county," said the announcer when Shaw's plane buzzed by.

Shaw helped John Buck, 14, of Redford, a first-time flyer, learn to fly a plane via a buddy box training system, which consists of a cord and two transmitters so that the expert can step in whenever there is an error or mistake.

Don Krzysik's Fisher Flying Products 303, an ultralite plane, was displayed but not flown at the airshow, sponsored by the Farmington Area Jaycees. "I plan to take the plane to Fowlerville for its maiden flight this summer," said Krzysik, a Wixom resident.

It took Krzysik six years to finish building the plane, which was constructed in his second floor apartment. "The 28 foot wing span took part of the living room and part of the dining room," Krzysik said.

Model airscraft kits suitable for beginners are available in hobby shops starting at about $350 and will take about 50-60 hours or "a month of spare time" to build, according to club information.

The club also owns an ICOM scanner to check for potential radio interference at flying sites and a library of aircraft videotapes.

Club officers say that learning to fly varies with the student's proficiency — some require several years, others take one flying season. The club has two flying sites: Russell Field, just south of 10 Mile, between Taft and Novi roads, in Novi, and Ray Field, on Grand River, one mile east of New Hudson.

Annual club dues are $30 with a one-time initiation fee of $10. Junior members (younger than 18) may join the club at no cost. A youth group is currently being formed. Members are also urged to join the Academy of Model Aeronautics, which provides insurance coverage. An AMA membership is required for flying radio control aircraft at club fields.

The club meets the first and third Mondays during the school year at Holmes Middle school in Livonia. During the summer, business meetings are held at the Livonia Senior Center with the second meeting of the month held at Ray Field, on Grand River, one mile east of New Hudson.

For more information, contact Wamboldt, 360-4623 or Mosier, 437-1629.

Great Sit In benefits literacy council, hospice

STAFF WRITER

Just sittin' in the window watching the world go by.

That's what several local celebrities will be doing to help two local service organizations.

The Canton Community Foundation is helping to organize "One Great Sit In For A Great Cause." The event will benefit the Literacy Council and Hospice.

"In addition to raising some money, we hope the event will be a consciousness-raising activity for the community," said R. William Joyner, executive director of the Canton Community Foundation.

The Little Professor Book Center, South Main Street in Plymouth, will donate use of their windows for the "sitters" to sit in during the weekend of Sept. 11.

Plymouth City Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury will "sit" a total of 70 hours on behalf of Hospice, while Observer editor Jeff Counts will represent the Literacy Council for the entire weekend.

"There will be celebrity "sitters" who will sit in the other two windows for one-hour shifts," Joyner said.

Celebrities are still being sought for those positions, according to Joyner.

The "sitters" will be on display along with their favorite reading material and they will have a bucket nearby for contributions from passersby.

They will enter the windows at noon Sept. 11, and will remain there until 2 p.m. Sept. 13.

The Literacy Council, under the direction of Cheryl Laubacher, serves area residents who lack reading and writing skills. They may be learning English as a second language or they may have missed out on these studies as youngsters.

Hospice Services, under the direction of Maureen Bütrico, helps families cope when one of their relatives has a terminal disease. Through hospice, terminally-ill patients may choose to die at home rather than in a hospital environment.

OPINION

Primary race

These 4 are best for trustee post

There will be plenty of points of view from which to choose when Canton voters go to the polls on Aug. 4 to cast their ballots in the Republican and Democratic primary elections for members of the Canton Township Board of Trustees.

The election will narrow a field of six Republicans down to four candidates who, in November, will face two Democrats on the ballot.

In the Republican primary race, we recommend Jim Panos, Melissa McLaughlin, Phil LaJoy and John Burdziak.

Panos is a newcomer, but he has qualities needed by the board. He's the kind of person who likes to sit down and talk to residents about their community. Also, as director of public works for the city of Romulus, he has knowledge about government contracts and the bidding process. Such experience is needed on the board. Matched with his ability to listen, he will make a good trustee.

McLaughlin, another political newcomer, is a long time Canton resident who has worked hard on historical preservation in the community. That, coupled with her vision of Canton as a place where the rural character can be retained, will make her a fine trustee.

LaJoy was appointed to the board, but has been an independent voice. As the owner-operator of a temporary employee placement firm, he brings experience in employee relations to the board. Also, he is a soccer buff who has volunteered as a coach. Canton is a young community where recreation is important. LaJoy's background in soccer will make the board aware of the needs of young people in the community.

Burdziak is another appointee to the board, but has served as chairman of the township planning commission. That knowledge is a help to a township board that faces development issues on a daily basis.

Running in the Democratic primary are Stuart Schuch and John Cleaver. Both expressed their desires to make Canton a better place to live. We're glad they're in the race.

Because they're the only Democrats on the ballot, they will face the winners of the Republican race in November.

But first there is the primary on Aug. 4. We urge everyone to vote. When they do, they empower the entire community.

Vote on Aug. 4.

Stadium sale good for suburbs too

While the trend in the '70s was to build about as far out of town as the freeways ran, the newest stadiums in the American League — Minnesota, Chicago and Baltimore — were all built in the center city.

The serious competition between Mike Ilitch and Edsel Ford II for the Detroit Tigers means suburban Detroiters can breathe a collective sigh of relief. The latest reports have hockey/pizza magnate Ilitch edging out Ford as the leading contender to take the Tigers off cash-short Tom Monaghan's hands.

The pending sale — which still needs approval of other American League team owners — means no stadium will likely be plunked down in western Wayne or northern Oakland County.

Both men, but particularly Ilitch, are business visionaries who take a long-term, regional approach to major decisions. That's one reason Ilitch kept the Red Wings on the Detroit River front instead of skating off to Pontiac. The city's revived theater district and moving Little Caesar's corporate headquarters from Farmington Hills to the Fox Theatre building also demonstrate Ilitch's gutsy style.

That kind of civic commitment indicates a solid effort will be made to keep the Tigers where they belong — in Detroit.

The sale will hopefully kick-start stalled negotiations with Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara over the site and financing for a new stadium, preferably downtown.

It would be even better, of course, if the Tigers' new playing field was built without public financing. Ilitch of Bloomfield Hills and Ford of Grosse Pointe, like Monaghan, are wealthy enough to sink their own money into the project, or at the very least obtain credit or attract private investors.

Wayne County voters could have a chance to shape the new owner's thinking on that issue as early as this fall with a referendum on a hotel/entertainment tax.

We are not naive. A downtown location, while vibrant and easily accessible, won't be the cure-all for Detroit's massive socioeconomic problems.

But that solution would be far better for baseball fans and suburban residents alike than building a $200-million diamond fortress in Plymouth Township, Auburn Hills or some other remote location identified in surveys as "the center of the team's customer base for the 21st century."

A suburban stadium would undoubtedly provide Tigers patrons with a safe environment and ensure the team's profitability.

But it would also contribute heavily to urban sprawl and put the Tigers about 20 years behind the times. While the trend in the '70s was to build about as far out of town as the freeways ran, the newest stadiums in the American League — Minnesota, Chicago and Baltimore — were all built in the center city.

Coverage disappoints

As chairman of the 1992 Canton Liberty Fest Committee, I want to thank you and your staff for helping to publicize our First Annual Community Liberty Fest. The special insert published in your Thursday, June 25, paper was wonderful. As a committee, however, we were somewhat disappointed with the Monday, June 29, article by Mr. Ralph Echtinaw. As the leading newspaper in the Plymouth-Canton area, we did not feel this article was up to your standards of professional journalism and it did not reflect the essence or quality of our First Liberty Fest. I have had many of the festival workers and participants call me voicing their displeasure with the tone of the article.

I feel the Canton community now has a festival in which to take pride in and to call its own. We are striving to make Liberty Fest 93 even better. Thank you.

Bob Dates, Recreation Supervisor
1992 Liberty Fest Chairman

Poor taste

As one of the founding board members of the Canton Challenge Fest, forerunner of this year's Liberty Fest, I was surprised and disappointed to read Ralph Echtinaw's front page article on the festival. The Liberty Fest, along with the Challenge Fest before it, provides residents and visitors with an excellent opportunity to enjoy the Canton community. The festival is staffed by hundreds of volunteers who work long hours to make it a success, and I believe that Mr. Echtinaw has done a great disservice to both the community and to those dedicated people with his article.

Lawsuit awards spell tax increase

TIM RICHARD

The state Court of Claims let the other shoe start falling to the floor last month.

Just as I told you last year it would.

Ingham Circuit Judge James Giddings, sitting as the Court of Claims, ruled state government is obliged to pay the costs of operating trial courts. These are the circuit, probate and district courts in 82½ counties.

All sorts of figures are bouncing around about the cost. I would put it at $400 million per year to the state general fund.

What happened is that in 1980 the state began paying for local courts, starting and stopping with Wayne County and Detroit. The state left out suburban Wayne and the other 82 counties.

Now, most people reading Detroit papers and watching Detroit TV have no idea how bitterly outstaters resent that funneling of their taxes down I-96 to 2 Woodward Avenue. So 76 counties and 56 local units hired Grand Rapids attorney Doug Van Essen to sue.

It took three years. The appeals process will take another three years. But Van Essen's clients are sure to prevail, since many Supreme Court justices are committed to full state funding of trial courts.

Let's put the money into perspective. The state budget currently is in the $7.5 billion ballpark, putting this cost at 5 percent of the total.

Consider what has happened in the last two punk economic years:

- Gov. John Engler settled the Oakland County mental health suit for several hundred million.
- The state has whacked the welfare, commerce, regulatory and other budget segments hundreds of millions more, holding education levels but throwing more burdens on universities and out-of-formula school districts.
- Engler's "cut and cap" property tax plan is on the ballot and getting enthusiastic support from most Republican legislative candidates. If approved, it will cost more than $1 billion when phased in over five years.

My prediction has been that if any two of a long list of things happened, Michiganians will face a substantial tax increase. The Oakland suit was first on the list. The court suit is likely to be the second. The money just isn't there, and the economic growth isn't possible.

There was an interesting wrinkle to the Patterson-Anderson tax cut proposal — remember? The one that didn't get on the ballot. Hidden in the fine print was a section saying the state couldn't raise taxes to pay for lawsuit awards. Brooks Patterson and Patrick Anderson clearly recognized what could happen.

Again: In the next one to eight years, we face a substantial increase in state taxes, whether anyone likes it or not.

The forces are in motion. We can't legislate against them any more than we can legislate against an earthquake or a heat wave.

Meanwhile, we can breathe a sigh of relief that the "KIDS" proposal fell flat on getting signatures for the ballot.

Never mind what the letters K-I-D-S stand for because it's a sham. This Ypsilanti-based group wants to reword the Michigan Constitution to make equitable school funding a constitutional right. In short, they are inviting, asking for, begging for a lawsuit to narrow the gap between rich and poor school districts.

And in these suburbs, our kids' school programs would have been reduced.

POINTS OF VIEW

Fest story negative

I was extremely disappointed at the article in the Observer, "Fest features fun for all ages." The article was entirely too negative to depict the real success that the Liberty Fest was for Canton Township.

I also felt disturbed at being misquoted. I had told the reporter that many people had misinterpreted my painting of my dog and cat, and since the dog was only yawning, I had to title it, "The dog is yawning," so that people would not be alarmed by it. I also told of an incident where the original photo had been displayed at a photo store in Westland Mall, and a woman claiming to be an animal rights activist had insisted on the removal of the photo from the store. I would never call a person a "wacko" and felt that the article made me sound insensitive to the feelings of those who feel strongly about animals' rights.

This was the first year for the Libertyfest in Canton, and I feel that it was a great success. We had the strong support of the Canton community and the township officials. I think Bob Dates, Dianne Neihengen and Kevin Mill did a terrific job of putting this event together and seeing that it ran smoothly. I also think that credit should be given to Sharon Dillenbeck of D&M Studios for putting on the first fine arts fair that Canton has ever had. The fine artists had experience ranging from this being their first show to more than 20 years of experience, and a good time was had by all.

Article was bizarre

I must register my emphatic irritation at the bizarre article on the Canton Liberty Fest that appeared in the Canton Observer on June 29. Given my experience that the Observer has historically been the most accurate and editorially even-handed of the three newspapers serving Canton, I am more than annoyed that my first-ever letter to its editor must be a complaint over its reporting quality.

I will readily admit my bias: I work for Canton Township and I did participate marginally in the work that went into the mounting of Liberty Fest. However, while I of course hoped for the normal press boosterism that accompanies such a community event, I was also more than ready to accept a certain amount of print criticism for its shortcomings, real or imagined.

What I was not prepared to accept was dementia.

The primary culprit is Ralph R. Echtinaw, identified as staff writer. Monday's article was Mr. Echtinaw's third on Liberty Fest. The first article, printed on June 11, was thoroughly snide in tone and seemed to be deliberately hurtful. The second article, published June 25, the day before Liberty Fest began, went a reasonable distance in making amends for the earlier article. Mr. Echtinaw's article on June 29, however, was in unrelenting bad taste. I finished it with a feeling of revulsion. (Mr. Echtinaw's writing sadly negated the impact of Sherrie Buzby's fine photography, which accompanied his article.)

I remain puzzled why a writer displaying such bald and inappropriate hostility was ever assigned to write about Liberty Fest. Because all three articles were page one stories, the implication is that the Observer was intent on damaging the event. If this is not the case, then one would think it self-evident that a reporter should not work his personal demons out in public and his editor should not abet him.

Gerald Martin, Canton

Thanks to fest worker

Special thanks also to the major sponsors of the Liberty Fest, without whom we certainly could not have put on such a wonderful show.

Lack maturity

Voting for the right person this year will be very hard. Choosing someone that you think will be the lesser evil seems to be the common method of making a voting decision this year.

Your front page article on Dan Calabrese and Deborah Whyman, running for Jim Kosteva's House seat, shows us two young people who need to learn a little more about life before they can represent a community.

I am not against youth running for office, but I am leery of a youth that has absolutist views about social issues or any issues, for that matter. Life is made up of relatives i.e. not everything is black or white. There is a little gray out there. Both candidates are against abortion in any case except when danger to a mother's life exists. This kind of absolutist position shows me that these candidates lack the experience, compassion and maturity to represent a diverse community like Canton.

Janusz M. Szyszko, Canton

Arms cuts wrong

I was deeply concerned about the recent announcement by the Bush Administration that the U.S. plans to massively reduce its remaining nuclear capability by a whopping two thirds of what is left after previous cuts. I believe such massive cuts are not justified and in fact put the very liberty of every citizen at the mercy of the word of a nation which has never kept a major treaty in 50 years, but now claims to have changed.

I believe this whole "change" in the U.S.S.R. is a hoax to get the tens of billions we are now pouring on them. Occasionally a story slips through our pro Soviet news media, indicating that the KGB is still calling the shots over there. After our nation and the west have been bled dry, a quick staged "coup" will put the "bad guys" back in power. Our government can then explain the wasted billions as a "mistake" as was done for the billions wasted in Vietnam, on a no-win war.

I urge your readers to inform their representatives in Washington that further cuts in our military capability, including the latest cut of two thirds of our present nuclear arsenal, is endangering our very liberty. This may bode well for the new world order, but not for the citizens of the U.S.

I also urge them to let their representatives know that the interest on the national debt is approaching the size of our total budget for defense. We can no longer afford to play Santa Claus, even if the cause was good. No more billions for Mr. Bush's friends, the Soviets.

Gerald Wiggins, Northville

Protect our rights

Your recent article, "Taking God's word door-to-door," has prompted me to write this response. In these United States, we all have the God given right to choose the faith "religion" we wish to practice, and not have other people try and shove their religion down our throats. The Jehovah Witnesses said in the article, "We don't try to solicit membership, but what we try to do is encourage people to learn about the bible."

I find this statement to be very untrue. Last summer, 1991, when the J.W. were in my neighborhood, I just happened to be working in my front yard. The gentlemen stopped to talk with me. I informed them that they were not welcomed on my property, that I am a Roman Catholic, and my father was/or is a Jehovah Witness. They proceeded to inform me that my father had made the "right choice" of religion, and that I was wrong with the "religion" that I choose to practice. Needless to say I became very hot (angry) with them. I have asked them on several occasions to stay away from my home and they were not welcomed here. Needless to say they have returned to my home, even on Thanksgiving Day.

My point is this: Where is my freedom of my own home? The right not to be hounded by unwelcomed solicitors? Others' denominations do not invade the privacy of our homes, like the Jehovah Witnesses do. I (like many other people) don't need to be taught or be reminded about the Bible.

Wake up to life

Few things in life have more effect on my blood pressure than the actions of some animal advocates and their attitudes. Recently, the transplant of a baboon's liver to save the life of a patient dying of liver disease brought out the activists and their inane protest.

Irene Simko, a member of Animal Advocates, was quoted on July 1 as stating "We don't believe you should sacrifice one species for another. No one asked the baboon what he thought." Really, can you picture the act of asking a baboon or any animal what they think! What other contribution to the world has this baboon made in his lifetime? Can you equate the saving of a baboon's life for the loss of a human's? Wake up Irene, smell the coffee and GET REAL. Would Irene give her life to save a baboon? . . . I wonder.

MADD marks 10th year

To commemorate 10 years in Michigan, Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) is creating a memorial collage of drunk driving victim photos. The photos will represent the thousands of alcohol-related traffic fatalities over the many decades.

The display is being done during MADD in Michigan's 10th anniversary year (1982-1992) to emphasize the scope of alcohol-impaired driving and the overwhelming loss caused by this crime. The memorial also provides families with a way to outwardly express remembrance of their loved ones.

The public is being asked to participate in the project by submitting a photo of a family member whose life ended as the result of an alcohol-related traffic crash for placement in the display. While the project will primarily feature Michigan victims, others will also be remembered. Since the impact of drunk driving knows no boundaries, Michigan families or those with close ties to the state may also submit a photo whether or not the fatality occurred in the state.

The MADD, Michigan Victim Memorial Photo Board will be unveiled before the end of the year and will be exhibited throughout the state.

To obtain an Official Project Entry Form or for further information contact: MADD, Michigan, 910 Eastlawn, Midland, Mich. 48642; (517) 631-6233; there is no fee to participate. Photos and the required form must be submitted to the MADD, Michigan State Office by Sept. 1, 1992.

Mai Kai is step closer to reopening

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER
STAFF WRITER

The vacant Mai Kai theater moved a step closer Tuesday to reopening as a Broadway-style showcase — but opening night may be pushed back a few weeks, according to the theater's new owner.

Stuart Gorelick said late delivery of some theatrical equipment might force an early October premiere for the George Burns Theater for the Performing Arts, rather than the announced Sept. 11 date.

Meanwhile, the planning commission voted 7-0 to forward a recommendation of approval to the Livonia City Council for waiver use of a Class C liquor license. The waiver is necessary because another establishment — Newport Richies — serves alcohol within 1,000 feet of the theater at Plymouth and Farmington roads.

Commissioners also suggested some tight restrictions on the sale of alcoholic beverages to theater patrons. They include:

- Limiting liquor sales to a section of the lobby.
- Opening the bar no earlier than an hour before shows, during intermission and closing no later than an hour after the performance.
- No sales when the attraction is geared toward people younger than 21.

Gorelick quickly agreed to the conditions and appeared eager to please city officials and quell concerns about his business background raised at an earlier planning commission hearing.

"I want to assure you that (the restrictions) are what I will live with," he told commissioners.

The liquor license request was tabled June 16 by the commission after Chuck Fox, a Livonia resident and employee at the Royal Oak Music Theater, alleged previous involvement by Gorelick in an adult movie theater and numerous lawsuits.

Gorelick was sued by the city of Ferndale and Oakland County in the early 1970s when he ran the Studio North theater on Woodward. The separate lawsuits were eventually dropped.

Gorelick, who leased the theater to Paragon Investments (Fox's employers), has a pending lawsuit against the company in Oakland Circuit Court for its renovations to the now-closed Royal Oak theater.

Gorelick said that lawsuit, and others filed against him regarding previous ventures, "are just part of doing business, resolving disputes."

Jack Engebretson, commission chairman, said Tuesday that Gorelick has "submitted substantial documentation that appears to refute" the claims by Fox.

Gorelick said Tuesday he plans about $4 million in renovations at the 1,400 seat theater.

Some — like resealing the parking lot and adding a canopy to the entrance — will be done before the 96-year-old entertainer dedicates his namesake theater this fall. Others will be "done in stages, over a period of time," he said.

Gorelick is the sole investor in the theater through a land contract with former owner Louis George. He has Ron Rea of Peterhansrea, a Birmingham-based design firm, to oversee the renovation.

Wheeler wins gold medal

Tonya Wheeler

Wheeler was among teen athletes from 25 states who were invited to represent the United States in the European Junior Championships.

World Sports Exchange of Hillsdale sponsored the American team on the eight-day trip during which team members were able to visit Italy, Germany and Switzerland.

Individuals had to raise $2,000 to pay their own way, which Wheeler did by selling candy, participating in a jogathon and receiving support from her church and friends.

Wheeler also won the 400-meter dash championship with a 59.1 time at the state Class A track finals in June, adding to her 600-meter victory in the Michigan indoor meet last March.

Two qualify for TAC finals

Plymouth Salem and Spitfires runners Stacy Witthoff and Emily Farrell qualifed for The Athletic Congress national championships in the 1,500-meter run Saturday at the TAC regional in Dayton, Ohio.

Witthoff finished second in the youth division (girls born in 1973-74) with a 5:16 time, and Farrell was third in the intermediate (1976-77) competition at 5:29. The Spitfires are amateur track team.

"Both turned in great performances on a difficult day," Spitfires coach Mike Krafchak said. "It was humid and the air was quite stale, so they kind of surprised themselves.

"I'm proud of them and so are their moms and dads. Not too many get to go to the nationals, so this is a great accomplishment."

The TAC finals will be July 31-Aug. 3 in Walnut, Calif. Anyone wishing to make a donation to help cover the cost of the trip should call Krafchak at 425-2212.

Team Canada beats collegiate all-stars

Team Canada had too much power Sunday and easily prevailed over an all-star team from the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League, 12-2.

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

The Livonia Collegiate Baseball League All-Stars couldn't raise their game up a notch Saturday against Team Canada in an exhibition game at Ford Field.

The visitors from north of the border may not be going to the Olympics after failing to qualify in last summer's Pan American Games (2-6 record), but the Canadians proved to be more than a formidable opponent.

A local team of 20-and-under sandlotters learned a valuable lesson in international play after being drubbed, 12-2.

"It was a good experience for the kids to play kids of that caliber," said LCBL manager Mike Keller (Walter's Appliance). "They swing the bat well.

"We hope to do something with Team Canada on a yearly basis. Maybe sometime we'll get back to Tiger Stadium (where the old Adray All-Star games were played)."

Team Canada must have felt it was at Tiger Stadium, pounding out 14 hits and a pair of homers against the LCBL.

In the opening inning, Derek Gauthier, a Toronto native who plays at Northeastern University (Mass.), belted a two-run homer over the right field fence off LCBL starter Mike Coleman.

Ryan Ferby, who collected three hits for Team Canada, rapped a two-run single off Wendy's Rob Hartman in the fourth inning to make it 4-0.

The LCBL got a run back in the fourth on an RBI sacrifice fly by ex-Plymouth Salem standout and University of Michigan catcher Scott Niemiec (Hines Park Lincoln/Mercury).

Team Canada, featuring players on its roster from Wichita State and Texas A&M, added another run in the fifth and two more in the sixth to make it 6-1. The Canadians blew it open against Dave Wood (Walter's Appliance) in the seventh with five runs, capped by Curtis Green's solo homer.

"We had three different chances for a double play with Wood out there . . . we could have been out of that inning earlier," Keller said. "We made some errors (five on the day)."

Rob Barber, Chris Unrat, Keith Fluet and Rob Tanaka each added two hits for the winners, who moved on to play the U.S. Olympic Team in a four-game series this week in Louisville, Millington, Tenn., and Philadelphia.

"We're going right up the ladder," said Team Canada coach John Upham, a Windsor native. "This is a good experience for the kids. We'll find out where we stand against the U.S. This is a totally revamped team from last year (only two holdovers remain)."

Belding bash

Macker puts game in perspective

STEVE KOWALSKI

I didn't need to get wet Sunday afternoon to feel all washed-up as a basketball player.

Long before the rain started to fall on last weekend's Gus Macker 3-on-3 basketball tournament in Belding, I knew my role.

Our team was called the "Slow-Motion All-Stars," and while I did a great job moving in slow motion (especially on the rain-soaked asphalt late Sunday), I was no all-star.

Normally I play in the media division where it's easy to look good against guys who write about sports rather than play them.

But last weekend's competition was like none I've ever played against. Our team was in an advanced division which included several players with college experience.

The eventual champion, Carlson ± 3, came from Hope Colege and was led by 1991 Division III college All-American Eric Elliott, a guard who has signed a professional contract to play in Sweden. (Rick Laven, a 1990 Livonia Stevenson graduate now playing at Grand Rapids Baptist College, also had a team in the our division.)

When a buddy from college, Mike DeVilling, asked last month if I wanted to play in the Belding tournament — the granddaddy of all Mackers — I jumped (probably not too high) at the chance.

DeVilling said his friends, Ken George and Jerry Royce, also were on the team.

"Ken George — wow," I said. "Count me in."

George, a 1986 Farmington Hills Harrison graduate, scored more than 1,100 points while starting four years at guard for Albion College.

Royce was named Most Valuable Player of Troy Athens' 1984 basketball team and he still has an incredibly accurate turnaround jump shot from 20 feet.

DeVilling, meanwhile, is pretty modest about his game. "I was sixth man on my intramural team at Central (Michigan)," he quipped.

But DeVilling also played at Athens with Royce. His other claim to fame is once traveling to Milwaukee, Wisc. to compete in a Pepsi Hot-Shot Contest along with John McIntyre, former all-stater at Redford Catholic Central now playing professionally in Israel.

That leaves me, whose role was to rebound, set screens and play good defense — and look good in warm-ups.

A bad start

When our first game began at 8:30 a.m. Saturday I was driving on I-96 somewhere between Detroit and Lansing. By blowing off my alarm clock I also blew a chance to play against a team that we dominated, 20-6.

"We must have won in 12 minutes — record time," DeVilling said.

"Just my luck," I thought.

I arrived in Belding around 10:30 a.m. in plenty of time for our next game which started at 6 p.m.

While I spent the afternoon checking out the sights at Mackerville (it seemed like half the girls in western Michigan showed up to watch or play), DeVilling spent time at his in-laws near Grand Rapids, George was at a friend's house and Royce did his best Michael Jordan impression — golfing nine holes before a game.

"I shot a 39," Royce said.

What sport can't this guy play?

We won our 6 p.m. game 20-18 on a clutch two-point shot (behind the take-back line) by George after an intentional foul.

With our next game scheduled for 11 a.m. the next morning against one of the division favorites, it was wise to follow a disciplined training regime.

Unfortunately, DeVilling and I accidentally walked past my car after the tournament and ended up walking another three miles before finding it.

I don't know how much good that did us.

Our first game Sunday was played up to 15 by one and we narrowly won again, 16-13, over the eventual division runner-up Blacktop Players. Again, George buried a two to win the game but the most important shot might have been a two-pointer by DeVilling with a man in his face to put us up 14-13.

DeVilling also made a key coaching move, bringing me in for him as a defensive replacement at crunch time.

I can't ever remember being used as a defensive specialist.

After a long rain delay, we lost our last two games to be eliminated but I left at least with the satisfaction of finally scoring a couple of points. We also gained a third-place trophy, which went home with DeVilling.

"If you want to look at it come by the apartment," DeVilling said.

Camaraderie 2nd to none

Belding has hosted the Gus Macker since 1987 when some folks in Lowell, the original site, wanted it out of town because of all the people the tournament drew.

Bad move, Lowell.

This year's tourney attracted more than 5,000 teams and about 350,000 people came out to watch. Imagine how much money they all spent in town.

Most of the Belding streets are lined with backboards and for one weekend the townies don't mind using their front yards as cheering sections.

While walking around Mackerville on Saturday I heard a voice from a distance call out an old nickname of mine.

Walter's closing in on first place

Walter's Appliance kept itself in the thick of the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League race Sunday by sweeping a twin bill from the Tecumseh Green Giants, winning the opener 7-4 and the nightcap 12-8 at Ford Field.

Walter's (14-8-1) is clustered near the top of the standings with Little Caesars (14-8) and Hines Park (15-9).

In the first game, Mike Coleman went the first five innings for the win. He struck out two and allowed three runs, two of which were earned. Steve Ross (Redford Catholic Central/Henry Ford Community College) went the final two innings and recorded the save.

Walter's compiled four runs in the fifth, sparked by Jason Gabel's RBI single. He also slammed a two-run homer in the second and finished with three hits and three RBI.

Paul Pirronello (Redford CC) contributed a pair of hits for the winners.

In the second game, Walter's tallied 19 hits, including another solid offensive game from Gabel, who went 4-for-4.

Dave Wood went 3-for-4 with three RBI, while Kevin Young (Farmington High/Central Michigan) and Jeff Schaeffer (Livonia Franklin) each added three hits.

Walter's scored five runs in the second and four in the first. Young smacked a two-run double off the left field wall in the second.

Bryan Pfeifer, Ross and Sean Henkel (Livonia Stevenson/Madonna University) all pitched for Walter's.

On Friday, Walter's defeated Little Caesars 12-6 at Ford Field thanks to a pair of big hits from Gabel, a Livonia Churchill High product now playing at Central Michigan. The first baseman delivered an RBI double, along with a three-run homer in the third.

Wood was the winning pitcher, going the first 4⅓ innings, fanning three and allowing four runs. Henkel finished up for the winners.

Hines Park takes one

Hines Park split a doubleheader with Wendy's Sunday at Willow Run High School, losing the first game 9-3 and winning the second by forfeit.

Wendy's struggled with field conditions in the nightcap. The game was originally supposed to be played at Eastern Michigan's Oestrike Stadium. It was later switched to Ypsilanti High School and finally ended up at Willow Run.

In the opener, Bob Hartman was the winner, going the first five innings. Rob Clem finished in relief.

Jeff Paluk suffered the loss for Hines Park.

Feldman leads Delwal

On Friday, Brian Feldman (1-1) tossed a three-hitter and walked only two as Delwal blanked Hines Park, 6-0, in a game at Plymouth Canton High School.

Keith Bozyk (Redford CC/Adrian College) was the losing pitcher.

Delwal broke it open in the sixth when Farmington Harrison product Mike Pesci doubled in two runs. Chad Chapman and Mike Swartzenberger each added RBI singles during the surge.

Tom Kretschmer collected two hits and two RBI for the winners. Valente and Pesci also had two hits apiece.

Canton's Sinke leads Mustangs to 2nd place showing at tourney

The Mid-America Mustangs won three of five games and finished second in a 16-and-under girls softball tournament at Southgate last weekend.

The Mustangs faced early elimination after losing their first game, 7-3 to the Clinton Valley Travelers.

Leslee Dickerson and Julie Jones had two hits apiece for Mid-America, which outhit the Travelers 9-7. Jones also drove in two runs and Sue Huber one.

Stacy Sinke pitched all five games for the Mustangs and saw her tournament record improve to 10-6.

Mid-America rebounded in its next game with a 27-5 rout of its sister team, the Marvels. Sinke allowed eight hits but was supported by 27 from her teammates.

Amy Yocum, Jones and Heidi Wahl led the offense with four hits each. Stephanie Smith and Lisa Rozum had three hits apiece, and Sinke, Dickerson, Carah Best and Nikki Wisniewski chipped in two each.

Rozum also drove in three runs while Smith, Wahl and Best had two RBI apiece. Yocum, Jones and Best scored three runs each.

It was Dickerson's turn to have a four-hit game as the Mustangs defeated the Southgate All-Stars 11-6. She also scored three runs and had one RBI. Wisniewski (one RBI) and Jones (two RBI) added three and two hits apiece.

Mid-America avenged its earlier loss to the Travelers and won its third in a row, 17-5.

The Mustangs outhit Clinton Valley 22-8. Yocum, Huber (two RBI), Jones (three RBI) and Wahl (two RBI) were 3-for-4. Tricia Kesner, Best and Sinke added two hits each. Yocum and Huber also scored three runs apiece.

Mid-America was eliminated by Finesse of Novi/Walled Lake in the next round, 5-4. The Mustangs scored four runs in the bottom of the first inning to lead 4-2, but a three-run homer in the third was the difference.

Yocum, Jones and Wisniewski had two hits each for the Mustangs, who had the bases loaded in the third inning and failed to capitalize. The Mustangs turned six double plays in the tournament.

The Mid-America Motion was first in the 12-and-under tournament and the Mid-America Magic third in 14-and-under competition.

Kings enjoy slim lead in Metro

The Kings won their last two games in the Metro Summer Hockey League to hold a half-game advantage over the Wolves.

Both teams are undefeated, but the Kings are the leaders based on their 5-0-1 record and 11 total points as of Monday. The Wolves are 5-0-0 with 10 points.

The Kings outscored the third-place Falcons 8-6 Monday behind a pair of goals by Joe Sellers and George Kuczulian. Sellers and Matt Brush (one goal) also had two assists each.

The Falcons (4-3-1) had a balanced attack as Chris Freeman, Bob Bowen and Robert Cielieska recorded one goal and two assists apiece.

Sellers was the main offensive threat Sunday as the Kings defeated the winless Wildcats 8-4. Sellers had three goals and teammate Chris Smith two goals and one assist.

The Wolves maintained their unbeaten record Monday, winning a shootout with the Lakers, 10-9.

Charles Case had the most goals with two (one assist), but Tim Osborn (one goal) and Joe Burton were the top point scorers with four assists apiece.

Jeff Lupu also had four assists and teammate Ian Crockford two goals and one assist for the Lakers, who are 1-3-1 and in eighth place.

The Falcons suffered their second loss in as many days Tuesday when they were routed 14-5 by the Broncos.

Grant Patterson (three assists) and Matt Csekei recorded hat tricks for the Broncos (3-3-0). Robert Cielieska had three goals and one assist for the Falcons.

The fourth-place Huskies (3-1-2) pulled within one point of the Falcons by winning 6-3 over the Bulldogs on Monday and playing the Falcons to a 5-5 tie on Sunday.

Tony Guzzo scored three goals and Mark Issel had a goal and two assists Monday for the Huskies. Joe Huntsicker had two goals, Scott Wright a goal and one assist, for the Bulldogs.

Doug Stromback led the Huskies against the Falcons with two goals and one assist. Brian Mulcahy had one goal and two assists for the Falcons.

In another game Sunday, the fifth-place Canadiens (3-2-1) defeated the ninth-place Bulldogs (1-5-0). No player had more than one point in the 5-3 outcome.

Local entries place at Games

Qualifying for last weekend's Great Lakes State Games (Southeast Regional) at Ann Arbor was a pleasant experience for several local folks.

It wasn't necessary to qualify for the Great Lakes finals in half the sports offered at the games. Qualifying standards, however, did have to be met at the regionals in bowling, diving, soccer, swimming, track and field and volleyball.

The top four finishers at the regionals will advance to the state games, which will be July 31 to Aug. 2 in East Lansing.

Robert Leeds of Plymouth, competing in the 50-59 years-old men's division, collected two first-place finishes and tied for first in a third. Leeds won the 100-meter dash (13.1) and the 400 run (1:02.5), and tied for first in the long jump (12 feet, 9¼ inches).

Other local regional winners in track and field were Timothy Falk of Garden City in the men's 30-39 age group long jump (16-8); Alexander Johnston of Farmington Hills in the men's 40-49 long jump (14-8); Brandon Burney of Livonia in the boys 13-14 70 hurdles (14.0); and Ian Bedford of Plymouth in the men's 13-14 1,600 run (5:02.8).

Johnston also qualified for the state games with a third in the men's 40-49 100 dash (12.7).

Robert Block of Livonia and Dirk Schmiedel of Canton, both competing in the 13-14 boys division, have each qualified in two events. Block was third in the 1,600 (6:21.1) and fourth in the 800 (2:53.0); Schmiedel was second in both the 200 (26.0) and 400 (56.7).

Other track and field qualifiers included Kevin Borowski of Canton, who was second in the 13-14 boys 100 dash (12.9), and Gerald Lynch of Farmington Hills, who took third in the 50-59 men's long jump (11-10).

Taekwondo, which competed in the regional although qualifying for the state games was not necessary, produced some solid performances from local athletes.

Aaron Sellers of Canton, in the 9-10 boys and girls category, won the red and black belt in the Forms Division and was third in 11-12 boys and girls black belt sparring.

Jason McNew of Westland placed second in both boys and girls 13-16 yellow, green and blue belt forms and yellow and green belt sparring. Robert Tasnow, also of Westland, took third in the men's 18-35 yellow belt sparring and was second in the yellow, green and blue belt forms. Gary Mann of Livonia placed second in the men's 141-167 pound black belt sparring.

Results for other events were not available.

Madonna adding basketball strength

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

The time a college basketball coach spends between the end of his recruiting and the start of the season is wonderful. The influx of new players sends his optimism soaring higher than a jump ball; there are no injuries to worry about, no bad officials to fret over, no missed buzzer shots to lament.

Every team is a world-beater — or at least a title-contender — during this time. And that includes a team like Madonna University's women's squad, which is entering only its second season after the near-disaster of 1990-91, when the schedule was forfeited after a rash of early injuries.

Bill Potter took over the program in May of 1991. He was faced with putting together an entire team before the start of classes in September, not an easy task. He did it, and the Lady Crusaders performed creditably, posting a 7-17 overall record and going 5-7 in the NAIA's District 23.

Foundation intact

With a foundation to build upon and more time to devote to recruiting, Potter was expecting big things this year. And for the most part — even taking into consideration a coach's normal tendency toward optimism — he got them.

"We were looking for diversity," the Madonna coach said, "someone who could play two or three positions for us."

A second important need was depth. Injuries ravaged Madonna again last season, leaving the Crusaders with just six healthy players at times.

With only three players lost — Lori Creten, a sophomore who left school to return home to Escanaba; Karen Sangregorio, who's decided to devote her full attention to her studies in her senior year; and walk-on Janette Rioux, who transferred to Oakland University — Potter had a solid returning corps.

Leading scorer Jill Burt is back, and so are starters Cheri Sangregorio, Lyndell Ingalls and Stephanie Niebauer. Others returning are Marianne Ervin, Kim Kibbey and Samantha Yesh.

As he did last year, Potter went to a source he knew for his recruiting: Oakland Community College, where Potter served as an assistant coach before getting the Madonna post. Three of his five additions have an OCC background, bringing the team total to six.

Big guns coming

At the top of the list must be Lori Montante, a 5-foot-9 guard who left OCC two years ago and enrolled at Oakland University. She never played for the Pioneers — an ankle injury kept her sidelined — and when she decided to major in education, she transferred to Madonna.

Montante will have junior eligibility. At OCC in 1990, she was an all-Region 12 selection after averaging 20 points a game. Scoring is her forte; she led Oakland County in points scored during both her junior and senior years at Milford HS, averaging over 25 points both seasons.

"She's going to bring us some instant offense," said Potter. "She has a three-point shot, and she can also drive to the basket."

The other two OCC recruits are Stephanie Crelley, a 5-11 do-everything from Fenton, and Dana Sevcech, a 5-6 point guard from Waterford Our Lady of the Lakes. Crelley will have sophomore status; Sevcech will be a junior.

Crelley "will do everything for us," said Potter, noting that she's the type of player who will make Madonna more diversified. "She can play all five spots, and she has three-point range, too. She can guard centers and guards."

Crelley averaged 10.5 points and seven rebounds while playing 38 minutes a game for OCC last year.

Sevcech attended St. John's Fisher in New York for a year before transferring to OCC. Last year for the Raiders, she averaged eight points, eight rebounds and eight assists a game. "She's an unbelievable passer," said Potter. "We may put her and (returning point guard) Lyndell (Ingalls) side by side."

Freshmen won't sit

The two freshmen Potter is bringing in won't necessarily be confined to the end of the bench. "I'm not too set on a starting lineup right now," he said. "If a freshmen or sophomore outplays a junior or senior, she'll play."

That probably sounds just fine to Mary Bieniewicz, a 5-10 guard-forward from Farmington Hills Mercy, and Emily Chedister, a 5-9 forward from Davison.

Bieniewicz comes from the kind of program that Potter — and every other coach — likes. "She comes from a real strong program," he said. "So she's fundamentally strong. She'll give us a little offense and a little defense. And she takes it to the basket real well."

Girls love to come watch their boyfriends play.

"This is awesome, they should have it every weekend," said Kristen Dressel, a 16-year-old from Jenison.

While Scott McNeal, alias Gus Macker, appreciates the compliment he's glad there's only one tournament each year in Belding.

"That would be pretty crazy (having one every weekend); I feel like a balloon ready to burst," said McNeal, whose all-world tour is making 53 stops in 1992.

Next year is the 20th anniversary of the Gus Macker and McNeal is planning to make it one to remember in Belding. He'd like to bring the garage from his parents' former home in Lowell to Belding to mark the occasion.

"We have the backboard and rim, we just don't have the garage," he said. "We'd also like to have a 'legends' game for some former players."

Since I'm no legend I'll probably go back to playing in the media division. I think that's a better move than any I made all weekend.

The Gus Macker Tournament will be held Aug. 22 and 23 at Oakland University in Rochester. Team entree fee is $65 and registration deadline is July 24. Call 1-800 876-HOOP or (616) 294-1500 for more details and application information.

Eating Out

Take a mini vacation, have lunch at Bates Street Cafe on the new Van Dusen Terrace on the north side of the Community House at 380 Bates Street in downtown Birmingham.

Made possible by a gift from Helen Van Dusen (Mrs. C. Theron) of Bloomfield Hills in recognition of her family and their involvement in the greater Detroit metro area, the brick terrace seats 125 people, and is landscapped with flowers, shrubbery and 16 tall shade trees. Some of the tables have umbrellas.

Bates Street Cafe is also open 5:30-7:30 p.m. Thursdays. After dinner, walk across the street to Shain Park to listen to the free concert which starts at 7:30 p.m. The Birmingham/Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra is performing tonight, "Blackthorn" & "Kitty Heinzman Celtic Dancers," will take the stage 7:30 p.m. Thursday, July 23. Concerts are scheduled 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays through Aug. 27.

Getting back to the food, it's simple, elegant and eye-appealing. Salads and entrees range in price from $5.95 to $8.95, sandwiches are $5.95-$4.95. Thursday nights' menu is heartier for dinnertime appetites. Prices range from $4.95 to $7.95 for dinner entrees, and $3.95 to $6.95 for appetizers.

"All of the food is made from scratch," said Chef Dan Shaughnessy of Farmington Hills, a graduate of the Schoolcraft College Culinary Arts program in Livonia.

"We're trying to stick with healthier items. Our grilled lamb salad (served over marinated asparagus spears, garnished with Jalsberg cheese, and sprinkled with walnuts) is unique, you won't find it anywhere else in the area," he said.

Salads are the focal point of the menu, starting with the Cafe Salad, a spicy combination of summer squash, zucchini, peppers and quinoa (a healthy grain), garnished with avacado and tomatoes, topped with shrimp. There's a chargrilled Chicken Ceasar Salad, Nicoise Salad, that features albacore tuna, red skin potatoes, fresh green beans, tomato, olives, tossed in vinaigrette. The chicken salad, is served on a bed lettuce, and garnished with cantaloupe. Steak salad is marinated beef tenderloin served on fresh greens with new potatoes vinaigrette.

The cold poached salmon with cucumber dressing, and Shrimp Jambalaya, are also popular items.

On the sandwich board are the Bates Street Sandwich, — roast beef, turkey, cheese, lettuce and tomato served on an onion roll, your choice of chicken salad, tuna salad, turkey and Swiss cheese or vegetarian, served on a croissant or in a pita pocket with tomato and sprouts. Gazpacho is also available.

Start dinner with an appetizer like one pound steamed mussels, veggies with dip, cheese board, or one pound peel & eat shrimp.

On the dinner menu is fried chicken, also available for carryout for people who prefer to eat in the park, Grilled Bates Street Hot Dog or Hamburger served with cole slaw, seasoned fries and dill pickle, and specials like Gold Coast Stew and Shrimp Jambalya served with tossed salad and homemade baked bread.

Save room for dessert, upside down carmel apple pie, $2.25 and lemon drum pie, $2.25 are specialties.

Check out the wines which range in price from $3 to $6 a glass, or $9.50 to $12.50 a bottle. "We feature reasonably priced, quality wines," said Joanne Wright, director of banquets and catering. "It's a nice way to introduce people to wines they would not usually try." Beer and cocktails are also available. The terrace can be rented for private parties. Solid acting in Stratford's 'World of Wonders'

The Stratford Theater production of "World of Wonders" continues through Aug. 9 at the Avon Theater. For ticket information, call the Stratford-Festival Detroit box office line, 964-4668.

By Hugh Gallagher
Staff Writer

Small acts often have grave consequences. This is the central theme of Canadian novelist Robertson Davies' Deptford Trilogy, a complex examination of the good, the evil and the banal.

Elliot Hayes has fashioned a new dramatic version of the last novel in this trilogy "World of Wonders." The presentation at the Avon Theater is a valiant effort to deal with philosophy through drama by drawing on the horrific and magical in the novel. It is a production blessed by solid acting and some clever effects but is never quite magical enough to overcome murkiness and pedantry.

"World of Wonders" is the story of Magnus Eisengrim, a world famous magician at the end of his days. A television producer has come to persuade the magician to allow a biographical documentary. Magnus' two closest friends recount the true story of Eisengrim's very grim life.

Through dreamlike flashbacks into which the adult characters intrude and offer commentary, we are shown a story of Dickensian horror. Eisengrim's life begins with a thoughtless act that has wide reverberations. Subsequently, he is sexually abused by a carnival illusionist, kidnapped into a freak show, patronized by a grand theatrical couple of the old school and finally elevated to worldwide acclaim. Behind all of this is a mystery involving a misthrown stone and the peculiar death of a friend.

The pluses here are many. Though the characters are not all well defined, they are well played. Stratford stalwart Nicholas Pennell is a flamboyant but haunted Eisengrim. Leon Pownall is forcefully blunt as his friend Ramsay. Pat Galloway is sardonic, intellectual, a character from a German expressionist work as the deformed Liesl. Other fine performances are given by Douglas Chamberlain, Peter Donaldson and Edward Atienza (in two quite dissimilar but related roles as Eisengrim's tormentor and mentor).

Melodrama keeps audience laughing

Performances of Three Guys Productions' first show "Foiled Again" continue through Aug. 1. Shows 8 p.m. Thursday-Saturday, 7 p.m. Sundays at the Magic Bag Theatre Cafe on Woodward north of Nine Mile Road in Ferndale. For ticket information, call 544-3030.

SALLY DUBATS

The Birmingham-based Three Guys Productions' first effort, an original work, could very well be re-titled "Talent, Talent, Talent!," but instead carries the appropriate title "Foiled Again!"

The three guys — Gerry Castle, Mike Vigilant and Dan Castle, have created two side-splitting musical-ettes; each act is a musical within itself. Act 1 is "Curse You, Jack Dalton!" Act 2 is "He Ain't Done Right By Nell."

The original music by Gerry Castle is lively, and a superb match to the witty lyrics of Mike Vigilant. Tying the musical knot is Wilbur Braun's books which both include a villain, a lady in distress, a hero to save her, and a curmudgeonly old woman. Hilarious dialogue flows smoothly into comic and sometimes bawdy song. The story and music, however, seem an appropriately incidental backdrop for jokes and an absolutely wonderful time.

Director Bill Haycook, Music Director Gerry Castle, Choreographer Carollee Castle and Vocal Director Sally Castle, squeeze every nuance from the material to provide an uproarious evening of melodramatic/farcical entertainment. The fast-paced show never stops the gags, jokes and movement.

Before the show begins, the audience is warned by a flight attendant of several rules, the two most important are, "Do not crinkle irritating, little cellophane wrappers," and "Feel free to boo or hiss at the villain, or cheer for the hero." In other words, audience participation is a must.

Act 1 is unbridled British melodramatic humor which alternately provides the shenanigans of "Laugh In," Benny Hill, and perhaps, just a twist of Carol Burnett. Onstage chemistry crackles and Cindy Pritchard and Dan Castle dance, sing and joke through Act 1 as Bertha and Jack, secret lovers who cannot keep their plump hands from dipping into cupcakes; Little Debbies and the like.

Dan Castle as Jack is a combination of Jackie Gleason, Bud Costello and John Belushi. He is absolutely hilarious while crooning "Bertha," a song which takes wide poetic license with such wonderfully, mentally abusive lyrics as "Bertha, Bertha, you're the most precious thing on Eartha!"

With exaggerated quivering lips and fluttering eyelashes, Pritchard is the perfect coquette, and has mastered the art of musical melodrama. Her smokey, jazzy song, "Chemistry," is a true entertainment gem.

Sharon Hendricks and Diana Marie Balsama give marvelous performances as Mother Dalton and Anna, an opportunistic, money hungry woman who is vying for Mother Dalton's son's affections. Their duet, "Men Are Animals," stops the show, and their comic timing is flawless.

Steve Tadevic plays Egbert (also called Egg Yolk, Egg Plant, Egg White, etc.), the evil villain ("Booo! Hisss!). Tadevic possesses irrefutable comic timing during his funny "The Best Darn Thing My Heart Has Ever Seen" while reluctantly ogling ugly duckling Eloise (Tania L. Velinsky).

Ken Ebaugh portrays Richard, the hero ("Hooraay!") who comes to save the day. Ebaugh's performance is polished; he offers a nice equilibrium for the remainder of the cast. Velinsky plays a very energetic and zany Eloise.

Between the story line, Act 1 interjects from across the century from the "Wizard of Oz" and "Les Melodrambles'" (A "Forbidden Broadway" style spoof from "Les Miserables"). Act 2 provides more of the same fun and frolic, but instead of the the British farce style, Act 2 is "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" meets "Hee Haw."

Three Guys Productions' premiere work, "Foiled Again!," is a wonderful opportunity to laugh.

Sally Dubats of Madison Heights is an an actress, director and teacher, who teaches at community theaters in the metropolitan area. She is artistic director of West End Productions headquartered in Southfield.

Some good performances in DSO concert

AVIGDOR ZAROMP

Artistic integrity can be a costly commodity in our present cultural environment. All too often it seems unaffordable when one has to consider its limited appeal, and the declining financial support by a government that is hostile to the arts.

This was the reason behind the elimination of the Classical Series at the Meadow Brook Music Festival this summer, and its substitution by a lighter pop series with the hope that it would attract greater crowds.

The selling of artistic integrity for hard cash is a difficult step for a true artist. The sense of frustration is multiplied when the compensating cash fails to materialize.

This was the case at Meadow Brook on July 10 when the Detroit Symphony Orchestra with its music director Neeme Jarvi presented a program based on the old Disney movie "Fantasia." There were even more empty seats and deserted areas on the lawn than one could witness in previous seasons with the regular heavy duty programs.

Most of the selections, to be sure, are not objectionable in themselves, and could be incorporated into a more substantial program. The one exception is the Stokowski arrangement of Bach's Tocata and Fugue which, in my opinion, is among the worst tasteless monstrosities and gross desecrations of a work of art. Much as with many elections, however, I am reconciled with the fact that mine is destined to remain a minority view.

This is not meant to be a denunciation of fun and entertainment, which I do enjoy as much as anyone else. But an entire summer without any program of more tangible substance is analogous to several months of a steady diet of low calorie ice cream. The menu on that program, in its manner of presentation, could not be analogous even to real, full bodied ice cream.

There were some individual efforts that deserve full credit, to be sure. Among them is that of WQRS announcer Dave Wagner, who hosted the program, and was shedding light on the light subject in a very light way. Among the soloists, harpist Patricia Masri Fletcher was impressive in her virtuoistic solo parts in the "Dance of the Flowers" from Tchaikosky's "Nutcracker Suite." So were assistant trumpet principal Stephen Andersen and concertmaster Emanuelle Boisvert in the arrangement by Moses of Schubert's Ave Maria. The name of the arranger not withstanding, this was not quite the version that came down to us from Mount Sinai.

Jarvi attempted to breathe life into the music by creating some unusual effects. Some of those, however, sounded contrived, such as the slowed scales in the "Dance of the Sugar Plum Fairy." Among other movements of this suite, which appeared in a different order than printed on the program, the "Arabian Dance" was stretched out to the extent that it appeared as long as the Sahara Desert.

Among the few items that sounded credible were Dukas' Sorcerer's Apprentice and Mussorgsky's Night on Bald Mountain. The Dance of the Hour from La Gioconda emerged radiant and entertaining with its popular themes.

Among the noteworthy unscheduled features was some extraordinary virtuoso balalaika playing by Genady Zut, who immigrated here from Russia. His rendition of Liszt's Rhapsody No 2, with piano accompaniment, pushed his instrument far beyond its conventional outer limits. This was followed by some Russia folk themes.

As a partial atonement for the light content of the program, Jarvi presented the Prelude to the third act of Wagner's Lohengrin as an encore. This short piece, has indeed, more substance than the rest of the program combined.

While maintaining artistic integrity may be difficult under present circumstances, this event proves that its compromise can be even more costly. This should be a good reason for restoring artistic content to Meadow Brook next season.

Avigdor Zaromp, born in Poland, educated in Israel and the United States, has a Ph.D. in math and has studied piano, music theory and history.

Concert features love songs

An evening of "Love Songs of the Night," featuring vocalist Marsha Rofel of West Bloomfield, will be presented at Heritage Park on Farmington Road between 10 and 11 Mile, 8 p.m. Thursday, July 16.

The free outdoor concert sponsored by the Department of Parks and Recreation features Rofel performing a variety of 25 classics including: "Wind Beneath My Wings," from the movie "Beaches," "Memory," from the Broadway hit, "Cats," "Music of the Night," from "Phantom of the Opera," and favorites by Cole Porter and George Gershwin.

"I love performing at Heritage Park," said Rofel. "I call it 'my family event' because friends and family of all ages come to listen to good music in a perfectly beautiful setting."

Rofel has established herself as the consummate performer over the past 20 years by appearing in dozens of area productions. She has been calling Punchinello's in Birmingham her home as she has been featured in several variety shows. Her most recent was a Pierce Street Production called, "Three Gals & A Guy."

For information about upcoming concerts, call the Farmington Department of Parks and Recreation at 473-9570.

Zany radio crew tackles leukemia

STAFF WRITER

At rock radio station WLLZ in Farmington Hills, things can get a little crazy when J.J. and the Morning Crew are on the air.

With Jim Johnson at the controls and airwaves cohort George Baier switching between his character voices of The Bruiser, Bob Rashbuns, Al Kaline and others faster than you can hit your radio's scan button, even your basic Byron McGregor newscast can become a hilarious episode.

Few topics are hallowed to this raucous cast, but one thing the morning crew is serious about is its fund-raising efforts for the Leukemia Society. They began a month of preparation with a fund-raising art show July 8 of the John Lennon Imagine exhibit at the Omni International in Detroit.

But the long haul will begin July 30, when J.J. and The Morning Crew broadcast from the studio for 28 hours straight for the radio station's third annual Leukemia Radiothon.

Approached by hundreds of charitable organizations a year, disc jockey Jim Johnson said the disease of leukemia seemed like an area where the station could make a difference.

"A lot of groups do research, which is good, but they're not finding any cures," Johnson said. "Leukemia seems to be something they've made great strides in. People with the disease are living through it now."

Being able to see tangible results of their efforts is encouraging as well, Johnson said. In the last few years, the crew at WLLZ has come to know Denny Sims, a young boy with leukemia, pretty well. He became involved with the organization as a poster child and began visiting the station during the radiothon.

"We've been following him for years," Johnson said. "He's cured now and it's great to be able to watch him growing up."

According to Karen Pyle, director of the Michigan chapter of the Leukemia Society, the station's radiothon is the chapter's largest and most lucrative fundraiser. The air wave marathon netted more than $90,000 in its first year, 1990, and more than $100,000 last year. All funds raised go to help pay for treatment of the more than 900 Michigan lukemia patients registered with the organization. A seven-year-old chapter, Pyle said WLLZ's efforts have been integral to the group's growth in recent years.

"It's unheard of that a radio station would virtually shut down business to help out something like this program," Pyle said. "It just blew us away when this started. We couldn't believe that their audience could bring in that much money."

During the morning ruffian's 28 hours on the air, another crew will be answering telephones taking pledges from callers. For a donation of $50 or more, callers may also make a song request, which will be played during the radiothon.

After all, you use it six days a week, 52 weeks a year... make it special.

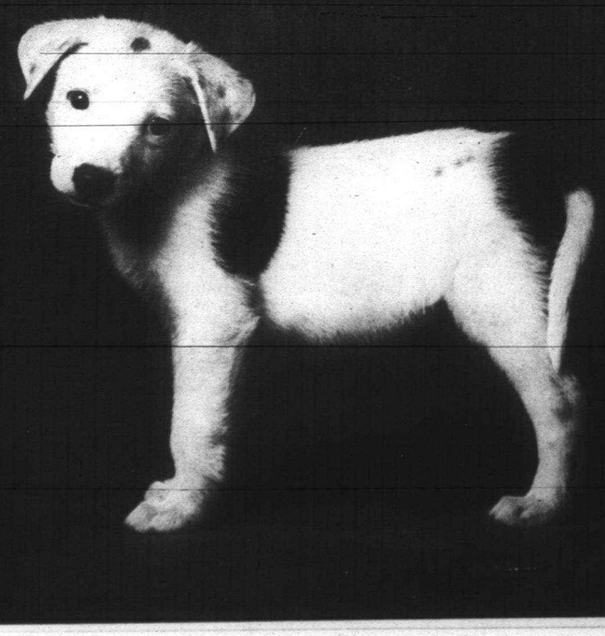
The average dog can expect to live 12 years. Unfortunately, Sammy might have to lower his expectations.



Imagine being only 8 weeks old, and already having the best days of your life behind you. That just might be the case with Sammy.

Sammy wasn't picked up on the streets. He wasn't beaten or abused. But he is a victim. A victim of the biggest problem facing the Michigan Humane Society today–animal over-population. As a result, there are more animals without homes than there are homes to give. It's a problem that only threatens to grow larger.

And it will continue to grow without your help. If you have a pet, have him spayed or neutered. If you don't have a pet, please find room in your heart and your home for Sammy or any one of the hundreds of animals at the Michigan Humane Society.

Or you can do the next best thing. You can make a donation, big or small, to the MHS. Your donations enable us to operate low cost spay and neuter clinics. Clinics that last year alone sterilized over 8,000 animals. They help us educate the public and bring us closer to finding a solution to the over-population problem. And most importantly, your contribution helps shelter and care for these animals until that solution can be found.

Just one look at Sammy and you can tell that within this one small puppy is enough love to last a lifetime. With your help, he might one day have a chance to prove it.

Jewelry offered for sale through video

■ Borrowing an idea from the home shopping networks, two entrepreneurs are hoping they can sell jewelry via video by selling more conveniently and less expensively than other retailers.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY
STAFF WRITER

Build a better mousetrap and the world will beat a path to your door; video tape a jewelry store and you'll get in the customer's door.

That, at least, is the hopes behind a new venture being launched by Birmingham natives Glenn M. Wachler and Jeff Linklater.

The two have formed Video Shopping Club, a jewelry and gift warehouse that keeps its inventory at the manufacturer and uses the consumer's television as its showroom.

"I've been around jewelry my whole life," said Wachler, whose family owns David Wachler & Sons Jewelers. A little more than three years ago, Wachler said he decided to cut out on his own.

That's when he began operating Gem World Co., a shop-at-home and office jewelry service. Linklater joined the firm last year.

"Being able to distribute on video has given us an opportunity to reach people we might not have had," Wachler said. Home jewelry shows have been rewarding, he said, but it was limited in the number of people who could be reached.

Wachler said the two were driving on a business trip between Birmingham and Grand Rapids when the idea came to them. "It seemed like we could describe something better with video than the written word."

Linklater noted, "I've read through jewelry catalogs and even I can't always tell what exactly I'm buying. On video, you can see how something really looks. You can turn it and twist it in the light and see it how it really is."

The look is classic

The forbearer to the idea, the two admit, is the home video shopping networks that have cropped up on cable television. Linklater noted that the industry earned more than a billion in revenues last year.

"But we didn't want to be like that," he said. Those networks sell lower quality merchandise at outrageously quoted discounts.

"In America, you can't buy a watch for $200 when the list price is $1,000," Wachler added. "We don't want to slam something down people's throats. Television tries to catch the spur-of-the-moment buyer — our videos are not meant to be hard sell."

When they were knocking around ideas on how they could expand their business, their game plan was two-fold: sell more conveniently and less expensively.

The idea, they decided, is to sell "classic" jewelry that never goes out of style, rather than elaborate pieces that few would want, Wachler said. Custom pieces and special occasion, expensive jewelry for the corporate executive wife

Working couple raises financial questions before starting family

"This time, like all times, is a very good one if we but know what to do with it." Ralph Waldo Emerson's words are as true today as they were when first spoken in 1837. They certainly apply to this month's profiled couple, Bob and Sara Temple.

Both are 32 and have computer-related careers. Bob works for EDS and earns $37,000, and Sara is a computer specialist for a smaller manufacturer, earning $35,000. Their biggest concern is making sure they are doing those things necessary to move them toward their long-term and short-term financial goals.

They have been married for three years and are hoping to start a family next year. They would like to start planning for education expenses right after the child is born. At this point, Sara plans to continue working full-time.

They would like to buy a larger home in perhaps five years. When asked about their most important goal, Bob replies, "We feel that it is important to start a long-term savings plan while maintaining a comfortable current lifestyle."

Lack master plan

They have not yet started any significant retirement savings because their focus has been saving for the home they bought last year. They have managed to avoid significant debt, borrowing only for their home and cars. With two steady incomes, they have the ability to start a retirement savings plan while still meeting current goals.

As a couple just getting started in planning their financial future, we would recommend that they read "The Wealthy Barber" by David Chilton. This easy-to-read book is an excellent source of basic financial planning information in an entertaining format.

They ask, "How much should we be putting away toward retirement? What is the best place for these dollars?" Both are fortunate to have a deferred compensation arrangement available through their employer. Under this plan, they agree to reduce their current salaries by a specific amount. These dollars are placed into an account that earns interest until they retire. Both the amount contributed and the interest are not taxable to them until they receive it, so there is a significant tax advantage.

Employer plan benefits

We'd suggest that each of them place 10 percent of their salaries into this deferred compensation plan. This is the single most important thing they can do for their financial future. For individuals in their 30s who are eligible for company pension plans (like Bob and Sara), 10 percent of income placed in retirement savings is frequently sufficient to meet long-term needs.

Because of the longtime horizon for the investment of these funds, the majority of their deferred compensation should be allocated to growth accounts that invest in stocks.

Bob also has access to an employer stock purchase plan, which allows him to buy EDS stock at a 15 percent discount. He should take advantage of this. Although there may be some risk in the ownership of the stock, the 15 percent bonus significantly reduces this risk. This money might be earmarked for the purchase of their new house in five years. Though the stock has to be held for at least two years before it can be sold, Bob should subsequently watch for a good time to sell his stock and lock in a profit.

They also requested information on the types of insurance they should purchase. They both have excellent health and disability policies though their employers. The only weakness in their auto and homeowners policies are their coverages for liability, currently at $100,000 in each policy.

Liability coverage of $100,000 is inadequate in these days of high court judgments. They should increase this amount to $300,000 or $500,000. The cost of this increase would be perhaps $30 per year.

Insurance a weakness

They carry only the life insurance provided by their employers at two times their annual salaries or about $75,000 each. They ask, "Is this adequate? How should we change our coverage when we have a child?"

We would recommend that they own a personal policy. Their current insurance would not even cover the mortgage should either of them pass away, and they are dependent on two incomes to support their current lifestyle. At this time, $100,000 of additional personal coverage would be a minimum. This also gives them insurance protections should they leave their current employers.

At the time they have their child, their situation should be reviewed. They may very well need to increase their coverage again. The point is to plan their insurance program, rather than simply purchasing whatever they feel inclined to buy at any given time. If they just need temporary coverage during the period that their child is growing up, they might check with their employers to find out whether additional optional coverage is available through their employers' group plans.

They have no estate plan. At this time, simple wills that include naming a personal representative for their respective estates and detailing their distribution desires would be adequate. They may also want to create a durable power of attorney that allows them to manage their financial affairs more easily if one of them becomes incapacitated.

This simple estate plan would be fine until they have a child, at which point they should review it with their attorney.

"The trick is getting the jewelry into people's hands who will buy," Wachler said.

Low overhead

The video catalog, which customers can view at their leisure in their homes, fulfilled the convenience aim and it also established the groundwork for selling less expensively.

Without the overhead of owning a retail location and hiring a sales staff, the two could offer jewelry at a substantial savings, Wachler said. Which doesn't mean there were no obstacles to setting up the venture.

"We didn't have a tremendous amount of capital to work with so we were fortunate to find several jewelry manufacturers who would work with us."

To keep costs low — it was important to keep overhead down — that meant no inventory of jewelry. After flying to New York and negotiating for several weeks, the two were able to convince several manufacturers to loan them several hundred thousand dollars worth of jewelry for their video.

The other hurdle, Wachler said, was to find a way to distribute. Obviously, they couldn't go the traditional retail route. They've settle on four basic distribution methods.

Distributor network

The first is a network of independent distributors who purchase memberships at wholesale and then sell them for the suggested price of $20. "Our independent distributor is not a salesperson; they are a channel to the customer," Wachler said.

"We don't want people misrepresenting what we're selling and we don't have time to train them," he said. "The video catalog is the salesperson."

Each person who buys a membership is given a club identification number, he said. In addition to any profits earned in the sale of memberships, independent distributors earn a commission when a club member purchases an item from the catalog.

Wachler has also made arrangements for organizations to sell video club memberships as a fund-raising mechanism. Instead of an individual selling memberships and gaining a commission, the group would be the beneficiary.

Wachler and Linklater are also planning on distributing the video catalog through video rental stores and mass market retail outlets.

"Our target audience is the working, professional woman who shops at the catalog showrooms for jewelry," Linklater said. That market, he said, spends between $200 and $500 on jewelry each year.

Merchandise in the video catalog ranges from simple pieces costing $35 to more elaborate items priced as high as $8,500.

"There are some people who will never buy this way," he said. "We expect most of our customers will convert from catalog showrooms."

Wachler said some of the best customers so far have been people in small towns who would have to travel miles to find jewelry otherwise. "We've even talked of setting up some of the hair salons and florists in smaller communities as independent distributors," he said.

"We feel that may eventually be our niche," Wachler said.

New book has what it takes to stay young

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Old age. It happens to all of us. Some of us see it as a curse, others as a challenge. There's no way of avoiding it, but there are ways of delaying it. Just ask Kathy Keeton.

It's obvious Keeton, the author of "Longevity: The Science of Staying Young" (Viking, $24), practices what she preaches. She doesn't look a day over 35 even though she's 53. And, if she has her way, she'll live to age 120.

"There's so many things I want to do and see," said Keeton on wanting to live so long. "I want to die as late as possible."

Based on the belief that each and every person holds the power to lengthen their life, Keeton has spent four years working with researchers to come up with the definitive book on staying young.

While it contains as much information as an encyclopedia, the book shouldn't be mistaken for a reference work. What Keeton does is examine the latest in anti-aging theories and take a close look at the many things available today to delay the aging process . . . to keep people looking, acting and feeling younger than they are.

Kathy Keeton

The depth of the work reflects her almost lifelong interest in living longer. It was her grandmother, she said, who got her interested in the subject as a young child.

"I had a grandmother who taught me that middle age started at 70," she said. "She lived until she was 98 and died in her sleep. She exercised daily, ate chicken, fish, fruit and vegetables . . . all those things doctors want us to do now."

The wife of Bob Guccione of Penthouse magazine fame, Keeton's first brush with the issue of longevity came in an article on scientific efforts to extend the human life span that appeared in her first issue of Omni, the leading consumer science lifestyle magazine.

Response to the article was so great that Keeton kept printing articles about aging. That in turn lead to her founding of Longevity, a magazine dedicated to the art and science of staying young, in 1986.

For all ages

Admittedly, the book is geared for younger people, but what Keeton puts forth in the book are things that even older people should be doing to revitalize their lives.

"The human life span is 115-120 years (the optimum number of years you could live) and the life expectancy (the number of years you do live is around 70," Keeton said. "A number of people are living into their 80s, 90s and beyond and it's important to keep these people active.

"The reality is that everybody should be doing this whether they're 18 or 80."

Keeton's lifestyle includes an hour workout each day — "It's wonderful." She also indulges in fruit peel masques and collagen injections, watches her diet and uses vitamin therapy to keep her youthful appearance.

In fact, her vitamin therapy is a supplement package of 40 different minerals and vitamins, developed by Michael Colgan of the Colgan Institute. Colgan believes each person has his or her own vitamin profile. He does extensive series of blood tests, hair and nail analysis and a comprehensive lifestyle questionnaire to determine exactly what supplements in what amount should be taken.

The basics

But, she stresses staying younger doesn't involve just one change in a lifestyle. Massive doses of vitamins isn't going to hold back the wrinkles or keep the physique sleek. Staving off aging involves 10 "very, very basic" things that "will change your lifestyle and your attitude about life," she said.

Some of those basics? Some are simple like eating right, using a sunscreen and getting more exercise. Keeton also recommends staying slim by not dieting. Rather than a life of up and down weight gains, she favors finding a weight that you feel comfortable with and keep it relatively constant.

She also recommends the power of love. Experts have found that strong emotional bonds pay off in better health and longer life and, while the jury is still out on sex and longevity, it does help lower the blood pressure, relieve arthritic pain and alleviate insomnia, Keeton said.

"If you look in the mirror and you look good, then that makes you feel good," she said. "And if you feel good, it helps your immune system and makes you treat others better."

Copies of Kathy Keeton's "10 Tips on Staying Alive" from her book are available free of charge by writing to Longevity, 1965 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10023-5965, Attn: TIPS.

Brent Kossick and Brian Welton can chew gum in school these days, and not have to worry about getting in any trouble.

The boys, seventh graders at East Middle School in Plymouth, are participating in a Plymouth-Canton summer school program. The program, based at West Middle School, includes 150 students.

"Actually, it's kind of fun," said Brian, 11. "No homework" is one thing he likes about the four-week program, being offered for the first time this summer.

He, Brent and the others have been taking "A Look at Michigan." Students, most in seventh and eighth grades with a few sixth graders, have been studying math, language arts and other subjects as they relate to Michigan.

"It's fun," said Brent, 12. "I like the easy work, I like no homework." He's been studying fractions, "things about Michigan and the ships that have sunk, shipwrecks. And we're learning to read better."

"We tried to give it a camp flavor, more than a traditional school," said Karen Tripp-Opple, director and lead teacher. Students can chew gum; boys are allowed to wear their hats indoors, something that isn't permitted during the regular school year.

Mary Fritz, a Plymouth-Canton school administrator, wrote a grant proposal, and the district received program funding through the state Department of Education. Student participants were identified based on MEAP test scores, grades and teacher observations.

Some are reluctant readers and writers, while others need help with math skills, Tripp-Opple said. Students aren't necessarily learning disabled, but all have strengths and areas where they need some assistance.

"For some, it was self-esteem." Students who have difficulty with reading are benefitting from literature discussions this summer, she said. In their regular classes, students may tend to take a back seat to classmates who lead the discussions.

This summer, students have been learning how to understand and enjoy literature. "They're not competing with those kids they view as smarter," said Tripp-Opple, a Plymouth resident.

A number of field trips are included in the middle school program, which began in late June. On Thursday, July 9, students, teachers and aides went to Maybury State Park in Northville Township to do some math and measuring.

Teachers Ellison Franklin and Tracy Massel designed the Maybury math hike, which included use of metric mea-

He swaps a career for a bit of magic

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Keith Haddrill was able to find a job as an engineer after his 1987 graduation from the University of Michigan. Even so, he decided not to make that his life's work.

"A lot of people are really amazed that I gave up an engineering career to do what I want to do full time," said Haddrill, 28, of Ypsilanti.

These days, he's working as a magician and ventriloquist. That brought him to the Canton Public Library for a July 6 performance for summer reading program students.

Youngsters in the Plymouth District Library reading program also enjoyed a fun-filled session July 9 featuring a gymnastics demonstration at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Haddrill's first-time performance at the library in Canton included plenty of audience participation and combined magic and ventriloquism.

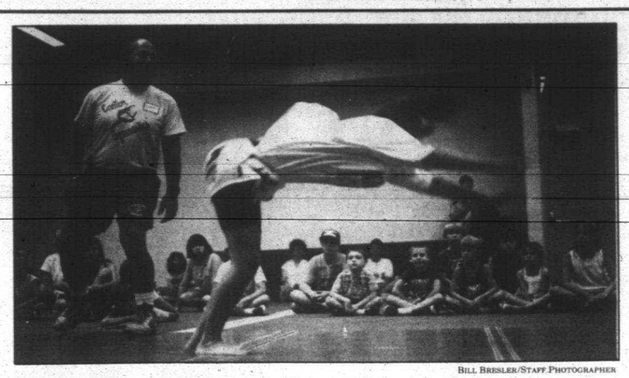
"Engineering was a little bit different from this," said Haddrill, who grew up in Dearborn Heights and earned a bachelor's degree in aerospace engineering from U-M. He worked as an air-to-air combat analyst with Boeing Co. in Seattle, Wash., and as a co-op student with McDonnell Douglas Corp. in St. Louis, Mo.

He began doing magic while in college, although his vaudeville/musical performances go back to early childhood. Haddrill and his father, a musician and music teacher, often performed together.

"When I was 4 years old, I sang my first solo in front of about 400 people." He continued to perform, and was doing three or four shows per week while working for Boeing in Seattle.

Haddrill decided to go into performing full time after he turned down his third offer to be a cruise ship entertainer. He performs at schools and libraries throughout Michigan and also entertains adult audiences.

"You'd be amazed at how much of the same material I do for adults as I do for kids," said Haddrill, who's married and has a dog, cat and rabbit, but no human kids just yet. The style of showmanship is quite different for kids than for an adult audience, but much of the same material can be used.



BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Haddrill performs for senior citizens and for other adult audiences at corporate functions. He enjoys that work, although he wasn't as enthused about working at comedy clubs and doesn't do that anymore.

He does educational programs at schools and promotional programs at libraries and shopping centers, along with birthday parties, Scout gatherings and other functions.

Haddrill brought his puppet, Mury the cockatoo, to the Canton Public Library last week. Schoolage youngsters in the audience enjoyed their ventriloquism show, along with a variety of magical feats.

"This one was primarily for entertainment." In his performances, Haddrill encourages kids to keep on reading, although the extent to which that's emphasized is left up to library staffers.

His career switch is an unusual one, and Haddrill finds people are often interested in learning more about that. He studied everything he could get his hands on and talked to others before making the change. Haddrill's putting together a seminar and book designed for those looking to make a career change.

He had to give up some benefits when he left engineering, but does just fine financially and doesn't regret his decision. Those who love doing something and have the determination to stick with it shouldn't hesitate to make a move, he said. "Then you can make a living doing pretty much anything."

surements.

One group of youngsters got started by determining what — length, area, volume or angle — would be used to describe the size of the parking lot. Students moved around the park in teams, figuring out such things as how many times the pump had to be pumped to fill a cup of the number of students it would take, one standing on top of another, to reach the flagpole's top.

"They're collaborating really well," Tripp-Opple said. "We try to mix them up, so they have to work with different people."

Teachers and aides had expected youngsters would have more difficulty concentrating on their studies in the summer. Instead, the kids get involved in a project and forget to watch the clock.

"All of a sudden, 55 minutes is gone," Tripp-Opple said. "My biggest frustration is I don't have more time with them."

Reading the book "Brothers of the Heart" by Joan Blos is part of the program, and the Ann Arbor author will speak to the students later this month. An all-day field trip to Lansing, including stops at the capitol and state museum, is also planned.

Tripp-Opple knows students benefit from learning about their own state. Fifth graders in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools have a study unit on Michigan, and she likes to see those efforts continued.

"Oh, absolutely. I really believe it should be revisited every year because their appreciation will develop and grow." Knowledge will serve students well for their rest of their lives.

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Hi, Lorene,

I'm not a regular reader of the Eccentric so I'm not sure if your column is brand new or recent. Anyway, I'm sure it is going to be popular.

I'm a 45-year-old right-handed male and all of a sudden I'm becoming very self-conscious about how this letter is turning out! I am also seeing some changes in my handwriting recently.

Thank you.

M.C.,
Bloomfield Hills

The first impression we gain from the overall picture of this legible handwriting is that the man is disciplined and results-oriented. Regardless of how he may be feeling at any given time, he can be counted on to do his work before taking time out for leisure.

A conscientious and thorough manner cannot be missed. Neither can the orderly organization of his affairs.

Full involvement and hard work are both expected and enjoyed by our writer. He is disinclined to skip steps or short-cut his tasks. He is loyal to the commitments he makes.

Seemingly, he needs challenges in his life. Obligations are taken seriously. He dislikes being rushed or working with deadlines. Occasionally, he can be a tad deliberate.

There is a rigid quality to this man. He may experience stress when things do not progress as planned.

He cares very much how other people perceive him. Most of the time he can be counted on to do the things that society expects of people.

Basically, he is traditional in his approach to life and living. He conforms to many of the values and beliefs learned in the formative years. I suspect he heard may "shoulds" and "should nots."

At times, he has a little difficulty separating himself from past experiences. Remnants of disappointment with the early father figure still remain.

Feelings are often intense and can also be of long duration. Currently, he is carrying some resentment. He may want to consider the cause. It has a way of wasting emotional energy and is counter productive to the many positive qualities in his personality.

Our writer needs people but also needs time by himself. He appears to be cautious and protective of his own interests. He has learned not to reveal his feelings freely and to be somewhat guarded in his conversations. Few people probably know him intimately.

This is a man of integrity. He is appreciative of the rules of fair play and desirous of playing a contributing role in society. He takes pride in himself and his work. And he is interested in being recognized for his achievements. In fact, approval from others is quite important to him.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are all helpful and objective feedback is always welcome.

'Dutch' Leonard lends a hand

The Bridge Crowd By Woody Boyd

The extremely successful fictionist Elmore "Dutch" Leonard of Birmingham has created some of the best adventure legends of our time. One of his current works, "Get Shorty," may be his best who-done-it-to-whom to date. Certainly his reader-approval quotient continues to cant up dramatically.

Such an astonishing imagination as he must have stirs my thirst to determine why he never developed a bridge acquisitiveness. I don't want you to conclude that I am one of those people who believes only those who play bridge or polo make the world go round, but a man of such fertile inventiveness certainly qualifies for a high place in our card-playing society. Conceivably he has a playing interest, but it has been masked by his aptitude and chosen style of life.

To get a better fix on this man, I turned one of my snoopers loose to determine his diversion when his quick wit wasn't cresting with the help of his quill. Unfortunately, his answering service is only programmed to promote his manuscripts so I have nothing to apprise you of in my sleuth's pursuit.

Firm in my determination, I personally tried the back door approach in the guise of the gas company's friendly meter man. This got the novelist by surprise, and I want you to know that Leonard has a keen bridge interest. Didn't his pen give us that best seller "Fifty-Two Pick Up?"

He was pleasingly agreeable to be associated with today's vagary if three conditions were carefully pursued. 1: Today's hand had to have been played by one of the greats. 2: It had to keep the reader in suspense till nearly the end. 3: Never darken his door, front or back, again.

Tall order, but I began to tackle this challenge three moons back. Finally, I found in the ancient archives of the ACBL the perfect hand, as recounted by Charlie Goren.

Sidney Lenz was a sparkling raconteur, a high-ranking amateur table tennis player and a bewildering parlor magician. The magic he produced on today's hand had nothing to do with his powers as a prestidigitator even though it may seem so. The auction might suggest that clairvoyance was one of his talents, bidding the grant slam without an ace, but his partner had clearly revealed the controls he needed.

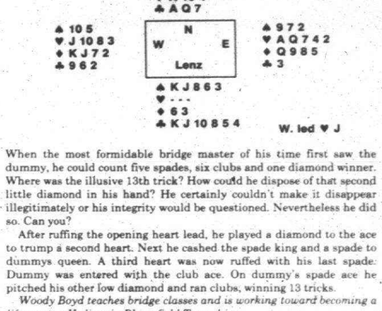
N/S Vulnerable



When the most formidable bridge master of his time first saw the dummy, he could count five spades, six clubs and one diamond winner. Where was the illusive 13th trick? How could he dispose of that second little diamond in his hand? He certainly couldn't make it disappear illegitimately or his integrity would be questioned. Nevertheless he did so. Can you?

After ruffing the opening heart lead, he played a diamond to the ace to trump a second heart. Next he cashed the spade king and a spade to dummys queen. A third heart was now ruffed with his last spade. Dummy was entered with the club ace. On dummy's spade ace he pitched his other low diamond and ran clubs, winning 13 tricks.

Do you realize that many Christians believe that Jesus came to earth to bring peace? Most have never noticed what Jesus said in Matthew 10:34 "I came not to send peace, but a sword." If you're interested in really knowing what the Bible teaches, then you should find a church that emphasizes what the Bible says. We live by every word of God. Come see for yourself!

Making room for God takes time

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

The Rev. Jack Williams most likely won't be interested in starting a major home improvement project anytime soon.

Williams is pastor of the Plymouth United Assembly of God. He and other worshipers at the church on North Territorial in Plymouth Township are finishing up an extensive building project.

"We purchased the property a number of years ago," said Williams, 52, of Plymouth Township. The vacant property was bought in the late 1970s, and in 1986 the first phase of the building project was completed.

"It took us a little longer than we anticipated." That first phase included a fellowship hall, classrooms and most of the landscaping.

Previously, members had worshiped in a building on Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth Township. That building was sold and now is the Plymouth Baptist Church.

When United Assembly of God worshipers moved to the North Territorial address in the mid-1980s, they met for services in the fellowship hall downstairs, which seats approximately 300. That facility was a bit cramped, but worshipers have more room in the new sanctuary.

The second phase of the project included the addition of a sanctuary with seating for approximately 600. Staff offices were added as well.

Worshipers began using the new sanctuary in mid-April, and it was dedicated the final Sunday in May.

Total cost for the project was approximately $2 million. The building sits on 10½ acres of land.

Williams, who's served as the congregation's pastor for 13 years, is pleased to have the work done. "I would say total jubilation and somewhat relief too because it had been longer than we'd anticipated."

The project was financed through several sources, including the sale of the previous church, fund-raising by members, and local banks. Many church members provided both financial contributions and good old-fashioned elbow grease.

"Our members actually did a good share of the labor up here," Williams said, looking around the sanctuary. Some helped with carpentry. Nearly all of the painting and staining of wood was done by church members.

One member who had experience creating Tiffany lamps did the stained glass windows for the sanctuary. Many pitched in to help with the constant cleanup that goes with construction.

The church has approximately 350 members. Down the road, worshipers plan to add a gymnasium and expand the educational area "as the growth allows that or dictates it." The educational area now includes 16 classrooms and is laid out in a hexagonal shape.

"This is where the growth is coming. We're right in the middle of the growth. Everything is new since we've been out here," Williams said. "This was partly swamp and partly hills.

"The changes have been nothing but progressive, wonderfully progressive. The best community I've ever lived in."

Now that the project is just about done (there's some work left to do on the kitchen), United Assembly of God members have other goals in mind. Those include community outreach efforts, such as a recent multimedia patriotic presentation at the church.

"Our real desire now is to let the community know we're here to serve them in any positive way we can," Williams said. "Just to be of service to them, that's what we want to be. We're concentrating on really ministering to our community and trying to meet the needs of the community."

How we use language affects our perceptions of God

MORAL PERSPECTIVES

REV. DAVID STRONG

Language reveals a great deal about a person. We seldom are aware of this unless a person's language style is quite different from ours. As I prepare to visit Europe I reflect upon this. Americans are typically unwilling to deal with the way that language affects our perspective upon life.

How we use language also affects our perceptions of God. One Sunday a lawyer, who is a man, approached me and observed that I had used a male pronoun for God some 20 times in a worship hour. What difference does this make, I thought?

I resisted his suggestion that I change my language regarding God. My mind has changed. It does make a difference how we use language with regard to God.

Words for God are metaphors. Metaphors matter. We know that God is not an old man up in the sky. Yet we focus upon familiar patterns of words. We will often defend them. Everything else may change in this world but do not ask me to stop referring to God as "he." Yes, words are important.

One day I offered a prayer in a group. At one point I said, "Father, Mother God." An older woman came up to me later and in an angry voice said, "Don't ever do that again or I will leave this church!" Language makes a difference.

It feels more familiar and secure to stick with the old versions. Security lies in sameness. Strong passions are aroused when we start raising questions about how we speak of God. Yet, it is a most important issue.

■ It feels more familiar and secure to stick with the old versions. Security lies in sameness. Strong passions are aroused when we start raising questions about how we speak of God.

Changing words

A change of language makes us freshly aware of how God language connects us with other values. For example, if we have any concern about the ecological crisis of the planet, our language may need to expand to phrases like, "Ever creating Spirit."

Maybe it doesn't sound as comforting as the word Father. Yet, if we reach for new metaphors for God we might expand our vision of what matters in the dawning of the 21st century.

Our God language is important. Language points us to ultimate concerns and values. Not only fathers are important to us as a new century dawns. The natural world, ending war and violence, racism, the value of each and every human being — these all need to be connected with our language for God.

Some time ago a film was made with the theme, "If God is Father, then we are all brothers and sisters." This is a new definition of the word which points us to something more than an individualistic identification with God as my parent.

In working with our language for God we must not reduce the experience of God. Expand our words and images and we will expand our sense of God's reality. Multiply the images and reduce our dependence upon male-dominated words. God must not be kept in the religion and the individualistic box.

If God lives on our neighborhood street then how would we address God? If God reveals God's presence in the whole universe, in the issues of peace and justice, in the midst of human suffering and vulnerability, we will search for additional words. Much of this whole issue has to do with how expanded our world is and how much we are willing to encounter mystery.

Breaking away

Whatever we do we need to break out of the exclusive male imagery. It is difficult to do this, but if we are unwilling we need to ask whether we are driven by fear to resist new, fuller more inclusive words.

Skilled psychologists can simply listen to a client and can pretty closely determine what is the structure of the person's life which is giving them a pain. It is simply a case of listening to language.

So it is with our language with God. If we are stuck with he and Father, then there is a potential rigidity which can collectively cause us pain.

Fear can be the focus of our struggle with language as we encounter God. If there is fear of making changes in our language it should remind us of our lack of love. The poet tells us of the question: "How many ways can I call thee my love?" If a person is afraid of expanding language for God they need to ask the question of where fear and love come into this issue?

Language use with God needs to be an adventure. The adventure has to do with meaning and consciousness. Expand your use. God is honored not harmed by such a desire to reflect a larger reality. Get away from the male usage.

There is a final issue of God related to language. It is for many an issue of peace and justice. The word for peace in Hebrew is shalom. It is a particularly inclusive word. It means that each and everyone belongs. It is a wonderful word of hospitality. Peace includes everyone, especially those without power, often children and women.

How we use words and God tells us something about who is included and who is excluded. Shalom includes everyone.

Words for God are very personal. Yet God does not need to be defended against feminine or child oriented language. Language with regard to God is not an easy issue, but let us pursue the adventure.

First-time delegate enjoys convention

By Zina Kramer
Special Writer

NEW YORK -- When I was in the fourth grade, I learned that in order to be president of the United States, you had to be born here. Having been born in Poland, I would never ascend to the presidency.

I may never be president, but I am helping to select the Democratic presidential candidate this week as I take my place as a delegate at the national convention - my first.

Being enough of a political realist to know many important policy decisions had already been made, I decided to learn as much as I could, meet as many interesting people as possible and really listen to the speeches.

Shortly after arriving on Sunday we attended a small gathering at Carnegie Hall hosted by Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson and Hand, former Gov. James Blanchard's Washington law firm. The event honored Sen. Patrick Moynihan of New York and his wife. My husband Michael and I were greeted by the warm hospitality of the principals of the firm and had an opportunity to see my old Michigan friends, Jim and Janet Blanchard, Ralph Gerson, Bob Larson and Bob Smith.

A highlight for me, as an admirer of fine photographs, was seeing Richard Avedon, who photographed so many famous faces so brilliantly.

Our next stop was a reception given for the Michigan delegation by General Motors and hosted by Alan Smith. Among the beautifully displayed Saturns and Corvettes in the GM building, the delegates dined on potato-zucchini pancakes, beautifully presented vegetables, chicken tidbits and other hors d'oeuvres.

Among those from our area were Ron and Kitty Thayer, U.S. Rep. John and Debbie Dingell, the Blanchards, Gail Nolin, Steven Yokich, Donald Tucker and his daughter Megan, Mickey Meltzer and Jonathan Grossman.

The delegates were looking forward to the next day and the beginning of the convention. I was looking forward to learning from many of the candidates I admire.

Monday morning after a Michigan delegation meeting, I attended an American-Israeli PAC briefing with Mickey Meltzer of Birmingham. U.S. Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana spoke of his strong support for Israel and was only cut short when Sen. Gore arrived. After a strong introduction to this group of Israel supporters, Gore impressed the gathering with his strength, sincerity and dynamic style.

Convention color

As I left the room, I sighted Thomas Friedman, author of "From Beirut to Lebanon," in hot debate with actor Richard Dreyfus. Somehow I was brought in as arbiter on how much or little foreign policy would mean at this convention. Dreyfus was concerned and involved, fitting nicely into my preconceived image of him. Friedman ended our discussion by interviewing me for an article in the New York Times addressing the role of foreign policy in this year's election.

Because the women's caucus had taken place at the same time as the AIPAC meeting, I had to wait until the next day to attend women's events.

The last social occasion before the serious business of the convention was a reception at the Whitney hosted by numerous New York organizations honoring Sen. Jay and Sharon Rockefeller. After admiring the Robert Rauschenbergs and Joseph Johns on the fourth floor, I want to a beautiful event on the first floor.

Plymouth again home for painter in acrylics

He mingled with the arts patrons in Palm Beach and Boca Raton while living in Florida from 1988 to 1991.

But moving back to his hometown of Plymouth, within walking range of Kellogg Park, and showing in the 1991 Art in the Park last summer proved to be something very special.

"It was good to be back in Plymouth," said Tom LeGault, an acrylicist and a 1974 Plymouth Salem High School graduate. "Getting away gave us a new perspective, a new appreciation, for the midwest."

While living in Florida, his family summered in Canton. He described Florida arts patrons as harder-edged, less-congenial than midwesterners. "Many were high-intense New Yorkers," he said.

At the 12th annual Art in the Park Saturday-Sunday, July 18-19, LeGault will show 40 original acrylics priced from $100 to $550.

He'll also unveil a line of large, contemporary landscapes — "wet-on-wet acrylics."

"Because they set up quickly, you have to move really fast on these big pieces. It's almost like sculpting the paint," he said. "I've shown some experimental pieces at shows and they were the first to fly out of the booth in the first 20 minutes."

Early art start

LeGault got his art start at age 14 when "my sister dragged me to an evening art class in Plymouth.

"As a kid, I always played with clay and sculpted, but I had no idea I'd paint an incredible still life that first night in class. I didn't expect it to happen. It just did. It was just a progression from there."

At 18, he opened his first art studio.

Despite demand for his work from galleries and buyers, LeGault says he's having more fun now than after he caught the eye of a New York gallery and auction network while working in Florida.

"Flexibility to get out and about, instead of sticking to the studio, has put me in the fun zone," he said.

Starting in acrylics as a teenager let him hone a distinctive, dividend-paying style.

"There's a million artists in Florida," he said. "To have a New York gallery and auction operation pick out my work is a real compliment. I'm breaking and bending the rules, but getting away with it."

His move into contemporary themes over the last three years bridges his traditional landscapes and highly textured floral abstracts.

"I've just done a contemporary tree scene with a real simple, clean look, incorporating all three styles," LeGault said.

"People look at my work and think different artists are involved because it's so opposite," he said. "Basically, I'm a jack-of-all-trades."

"Giving people a chance to watch a painting go from a raw canvas to a finished look adds to the overall interest level," he said. "There's no commercially produced techniques involved. It eliminates skepticism. I actually create some of my best pieces at shows."

Style now freer

Meanwhile, LeGault continues to loosen his style and tackle contemporary themes. As he sees it, larger contemporary homes have triggered a new market: larger contemporary paintings.

"I've done some contemporary harbor scenes completely with a palette knife," he said. "There's no brushwork involved. It suggests buildings and water but because it'd done with a knife, it has a nice, soft 'wet on wet' look in pastel colors."

The trend toward contemporary has moved bouncing pastels or Sante Fe earth tones into the color scheme.

"Everything has shifted into balanced colors — for example, bouncing greens and lavenders off blues. It's subtle, not an abrupt blend," LeGault said.

LeGault relishes the chance to experiment with technique and fine-tune his work. But he still hits the Midwest art show circuit 35 times a year. "After all, it's a people business I'm involved."

With painting a pastime-turned-profession, LeGault says he's busy looking for a new hobby — "one that doesn't have dollars attached to it."

Art to fill downtown Plymouth

- Families, food, fun and art are on tap for fair goers this weekend in and around Kellogg Park. Art in the Park celebrates its 12th year by showcasing more than 300 exhibitors, 270 more than at the first fair in 1981.

By Linda Ann Chomin
Special Writer

Art in the Park will spotlight fine art and crafts by more than 300 exhibitors, adding a festive air to the streets and sidewalks in and around Kellogg Park in the heart of historic Plymouth Saturday-Sunday, July 18-19.

Artists and crafters from New York, North Carolina, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and 110 Michigan communities will offer a bonanza of handmade artwork for browsing and buying. The fair began with 30 artists in 1981.

Fair-goers will choose from among hundreds of personal and home decor accents, including paintings, pottery, jewelry, basketry, Chinese brush painting, photography, wearable art, weaving, wood craft, calligraphy, and stained, blown and leaded glass.

"We're real excited about this year's show. There'll be more artists demonstrating and a lot more variety. New to this year's show are silhouette cuttings, weathervanes, big pieces of furniture, beautiful woodwork, fabric batik, marbleizing and jewelry — everything from gold and diamonds to silver and dough," said Dianne Quinn, Art in the Park founder/producer.

Strolling musicians will accent the festivities. Barbry-ellen will perform North American folk songs while music by the Mike Burst Dulcimer Ensemble will add a medieval touch. Rochester musician Guy Sferlazza and Chautauqua Express also will perform along with Trilogy, a mime group and clowns with balloons.

"The atmosphere is very festive and we have something for everyone's home, a unique individual piece," Quinn said.

Last year, 14 artists demonstrated their talents on Sunday under "The Gathering" on Penniman. This year, Quinn has asked artists to demonstrate on both days at locations throughout the fair, one of the largest arts and crafts fairs in the state.

He'll do portrait sketches

A special treat offered on Sunday only by Plymouth artist Gordon Eddy will be 10-minute portrait sketches in charcoal (8½ by 11 inches) for $8, and larger sketches from longer sittings on pastel-colored paper for $15.

Native American jewelry, rugs showcased

By Linda Ann Chomin

She'll demonstrate her award-winning skills on a five-foot loom during a Native American jewelry and Navajo rug show Friday-Sunday, July 17-19, at Native West Gallery, 863 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

"I think it's exciting that people can see a piece of American history being demonstrated right here in Michigan and that Sarah's so willing to share her culture with us," said Becky Dodson, Native West co-owner with husband, Doug.

Two leading New Mexico authorities on jewelry and rugs will accompany Natani. Edmond "Bing" Crosby of Albuquerque Mexico and Tom Wheeler of Waterflow will be on hand to answer questions about the Navajo culture as well as relay its myths and legends.

Crosby, who has more than 35 years' experience as a trader, will bring thousands of pieces of traditional and contemporary jewelry handcrafted from silver and gold by the Navajo, Hopi, Zuni and Santo Domingan.

"Bing will have a spectacular selection of jewelry, the old and the new, thousands of pieces from $4 to $4,000, and he's willing to take special orders," said Dodson, a Farmington Hills resident.

Wheeler, fourth-generation owner of Hogback Trading Post established in 1971, will display traditional and contemporary Navajo rugs, old regional trading post patterns like Two Grey Hills, Wild Ruins, Burntwater, Ganado, Storm Pattern, and Teec Nos Pos as well as pictorial weavings of scenes from everyday life in Navajo culture.

■ IN MINIATURE

Judy Shellhaas of Plymouth is teaching a four-week class on carving and marbling techniques for a parlor fireplace at the Miniature Makers' Workshop in Royal Oak. The class began last week.

Shellhaas has been a miniature artisan and teacher for 18 years. She leads weekly class for advanced students at her home.

Her fondness is for carving animals, all on the standard miniature scale of one inch to the actual foot.

She has taught continuing ed classes in Livonia, Plymouth and Farmington and wood carving and other arts at Greenfield Village.

■ SPRUCING UP

To promote beautification, the Garden City Parks and Recreation Department has teamed with Barson's Greenhouse to sponsor the first Garden of the Year contest.

Residential gardens will be honored in four categories: best overall garden, best use of annuals, best use of perennials, best vegetable garden.

Barson's will award the overall winner $100 worth of plants and the other winners $50 worth. Five Wayne County Extension Service master gardeners will judge the nominated gardens the week of Aug. 10.

To be considered, gardens, except vegetable gardens, must be visible from the street. "That's because our intent is to honor gardens that visibly contribute to beautifying the city," says Marie Sather, Maplewood Community Center supervisor.

Nominating forms are available at Maplewood Community Center, 31735 Maplewood, and Barson's Greenhouse, 6414 Merriman. Entries close July 27.

"Tom Wheeler's a wealth of knowledge. He will talk about all aspects of Navajo rug making, from the carding of the wool to the spinning of it," Dodson said.

"Tom's still the largest supplier of Navajo rugs in America. He's going to bring hundreds of rugs priced from $150 to $12,000. At the last show, people asked for the lighter colors so he's also bringing lighter colors in traditional and contemporary styles."

Navajo weavers developed and refined their craft before the arrival of the Spanish. The Navajo loom is upright as opposed to the horizontal loom of the Mexican and Spanish-American weavers.

Demonstrations will run continuously throughout the show, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, July 17-18, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, July 19. Natani expects to weave three inches during that time.

"I do very small weaving. Within a hundred years, it might wear out," Natani said in an interview from her home on the Navajo reservation in New Mexico. "I will show how to card wool and how to spin it. I usually bring some vegetal dye, what we use on the reservation."

Vegetal dyes are made by the Navajo from plants such as lupine, liatris, sunflower, alder bark, snake weed, prickly pear cactus fruit, and elder, choke and black berries. Plants gathered for dye in summer and early fall produce richer colors, while plants gathered in winter and early spring provide colors lighter in shade.

■ 'What I find most interesting is the Navajo's development and their history, the outside influences of the traders encouraging certain designs.'

Lisa Roberts
Native West staff

Weaving skills are passed down through the generations of Navajo women. Designs for the rugs are not sketched before hand. Young weavers are taught to plan their pattern and colors in their head, to visualize it in its entirety from the beginning.

"Mom's a weaver. She taught me," Natani said. "Weaving, it relaxes you. You have lot of problems. It makes you forget all but weaving."

Shearing the sheep, washing the wool, gathering plants for the dye and stringing the loom can take the Navajo many days or weeks of work before weaving begins.

"What I find most interesting is the Navajo's development and their history, the outside influences of the traders encouraging certain designs," said Plymouth resident Lisa Roberts, Native West assistant manager.

Roberts, who will receive her master's degree in art history from Wayne State University in April, spent untold hours researching materials and preparing handouts on the different styles of Navajo rugs in the show.

"Two Grey Hills has come to be known as the finest of all Navajo weaves with 90 to 130 threads per inch. Teec Nos Pos has an Oriental influence, probably from the photographs of Persian rugs that had been circulated among the weavers in the early 1900s by the traders," Roberts said.

"Even if people aren't interested in buying a rug, they should come and see them. They won't be able to see the rugs if they never go out West. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity."

Everyone who attends the show can enter the drawing for a Navajo rug at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Treasure trove: (Clockwise) Indian jewelry at Native West will include a turquoise necklace ($300), silver bead necklace ($395), fetish necklace ($165), and turquoise and silver bracelet ($132) and pin ($44).

Functional art: Native West co-owner Becky Dodson displays a Navajo rug, Teec Nos Pos by Daisy Kee ($1,800). Thrown over the Toton-style bed behind her is the finest of all Navajo weaves with 90 to 130 threads per inch, Two Grey Hills by James Sherman ($3,600). The Plymouth gallery will host a Native American rug and jewelry show Friday-Sunday.

Since retiring six years ago from Campbell Ewald after 29 years as an art director, Eddy devotes his energies to sketching and painting watercolors of homes and historic architecture on location. He will offer six different handcolored prints of notable sites in Plymouth, including Kellogg Park, Main Street, the Mayflower Hotel, Plymouth City Hall, Baker House and the gazebo.

"I knew I wanted to do some painting after I retired. I've been doing this (watercolor) since I was in high school," Eddy said. "It's what I'm happiest doing. I'm happiest when I'm painting."

Eddy studied commercial art and painting two years at Society for Arts and Crafts, since renamed Center for Creative Studies. He received a bachelor of art education degree in 1974 from Wayne State University.

"I took the advertising job because it gave me a chance to draw, to keep active in drawing," Eddy said. "I think it's drawing that drew me into advertising."

Eddy taught advertising design at Oakland Community College and Macomb County Community College and art history at William Tyndale College in Farmington Hills.

In the last few years, he has taken watercolor workshops with Fred Graf and Tony Couch because he would "like to be more of a fine artist, painting more landscapes, more nature, more rivers and more barns."

"I love watercolor, the way it looks, the looseness of the flowing colors and the freshness," Eddy said.

"Renoir is one of my inspirations, but more importantly, I am an admirer of Monet. Monet's garden paintings appeal to me, the spontaneity, the impressionist style, the fresh approach to painting the quality of light."

"I try to capture the way sunlight works on the shapes. I get my values down," Eddy said. "I think there's a basic palette I got attached to back in art school: ultramarine blue, burnt sienna. Now I find myself using cobalt blue and, in the landscapes, lemon yellow."

Short on painting time

Eddy admits he doesn't spend as many hours as he would like to painting. Instead, he spends mornings working to develop compositions for paintings. Light and design, he stresses, are important ingredients in his paintings, worth sacrificing painting time.

"The subject matter isn't that important. It's the approach," Eddy said.

While working for Campbell Ewald, he ran Gordon Eddy Graphic Design on the side, creating brochures and logos for local businesses. Six years ago, he changed the name to Plymouth Art Studio.

"I have a value sketch of a little white water stream up north that I'm going to paint next," Eddy said.

"I'm putting what I see in my paintings. The beauty of the design and play of the light, it's something that's all around us in nature and I would like to share that."

Hours for Art in the Park are: 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday-Sunday. Kellogg Park is at Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail.

VICTORIA DIAZ

By way of explaining how she happened recently to sell her very first children's novels, "Neptune Princess" and "Grandfather's Day," Ingrid Tomey just shrugs and mumbles something about "dumb luck."

The modest, 48-year-old West Bloomfield author's "dumb luck," however, looks more like a decade's worth of hard work on closer inspection.

Actually, you might even say her efforts go back farther than that — to the time when she was a youngster growing up in Midland, and striving to emulate her mother, the late Georgena Goff, also a writer.

"I've always written," says Tomey. "And when I grew up and got married, I thought that's what mothers did. That's what my mother did every day, even with five kids."

Tomey's fiction-writing career started off with a bang 11 years ago when the first story she ever submitted for publication, a Christmas tale titled "A Very Special Present," was snapped up by Woman's Day magazine and featured in their issue for Christmas week 1981. (Based on the relationship between her son, Paul, and his grandfather, the story was inspired by real-life characters and events, as is much of Tomey's fiction.)

"As far as my writing career goes, that was the best thing that ever happened to me," Tomey said. "And it was also the worst thing. I thought it was all going to be so easy. Then I didn't sell another story for nine years."

Ingrid Tomey

It wasn't because she stopped trying. She enrolled in the MFA program at the University of Michigan and set to work on a mainstream novel. She honed her skills by writing, and selling, a number of personal essays and other non-fiction pieces. And she continued to write short fiction, much of it submitted to Woman's Day, all of it returned with rejection slips.

The novel itself, which took several years to complete, met with the same fate.

Then one day about a year-and-a-half ago, a teacher-friend suggested to Tomey that she try her hand at writing children's literature.

It turned out to be an excellent suggestion.

Tomey, who'd always enjoyed children's literature, but never written any, sat down and began to put together a story about a feisty, 9-year-old redhead named Raydeen Grimley, whose life is opened when her grandmother dies and her grandfather comes to live with Raydeen and her family. Tomey modeled the character of the grandfather very closely on her own father she says, and his reaction to her mother's death several years earlier.

Before she had completed "Grandfather's Day," an idea for a second story was already simmering. It would be a slightly less serious tale than "Grandfather's Day" but "Neptune Princess" would again center around a mischievous redhead. ("I have a sister who's a redhead," says Tomey.)

The athletic adolescent, Poppy Field, who early in the story suffers a broken leg, would very much resemble Tomey's real-life daughter, Kristin (now 23).

A secondary character, Cootie, would be based on a former neighbor, who Tomey remembers as "a true eccentric." Tomey would even include bits and pieces of herself and her own mother as she created the character of Poppy's mother, a poet. (To understand more about her main character's temporary disability, Tomey hobbled around on a pair of borrowed crutches for several days, interviewed doctors and made friends with a young girl who'd recently broken her leg.)

After finishing the books, she packed them up and, with fingers firmly crossed, sent them off to separate publishers. Although she had no hard-and-fast rules, she says she sent "Neptune Princess" to Bradbury Press because it was a division of Macmillan and "they publish a lot of books." On the other hand, she chose to submit "Grandfather's Day" to Boyds Mills Press because it was small and new and she had read that the publisher was looking for new writers.

Both books sold quickly and, as it happened, within weeks of each other.

"It simply amazed me," says Tomey.

"Neptune Princess' was brought out in April. "Grandfather's Day" will be in bookstores this September.

A third book, "Savage Carrot," is expected to be out next year (yes, there's a redhaired heroine again). And Tomey is working to finish up her fourth, a young adult novel she has titled "Dreamland."

All the "dumb luck" continues.

Local artistry to flavor Ann Arbor Art Fairs

Nearly 1,000 artists and artisans will converge on Ann Arbor Wednesday-Saturday, July 22-25, for the Ann Arbor Art Fairs, one of the largest celebrations of the arts in the country.

Three separate fairs will line the streets of Ann Arbor during the midsummer festival: The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, the original juried fair; the State Street Area Art Fair and the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans Summer Art Fair.

Media include ceramics, drawing, sculpture, photography, metal/jewelry, printmaking, mixed, painting, fiber, glass and wood. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday-Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Children may do supervised art projects in a booth run by the Ann Arbor Artist Coop on Church, north of S. University. Hours are 10 a.m. to noon and 2-4 p.m.

The Graceful Arch Stage, featuring live entertainment from dance to music, will be set up at the northwest corner of S. University and E. University. There also will be strolling musicians.

Twenty artist demonstrations in a variety of media will take place throughout the fair.

The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, on S. University, E. University and Church, is the granddaddy event. The 33rd annual juried fair will boast 197 exhibitors, 63 of whom are new this year. Artists are expected from 36 states and Canada. Observer & Eccentric area artists taking part are Elizabeth Lurie (ceramics) and Judith (Yvonne) Fitzpatrick (jewelry) of Farmington Hills.

The 25th annual State Street Art Fair, on Maynard, Liberty, Thompson, William and N. University, will feature more than 200 juried booths. Exhibitors will include Cynthia Gaffield (fiber) of Livonia, Robert Mueller (photography) of Rochester, Jonathan Stopper (jewelry) of Rochester and William Thayer (photography) of Redford Township.

Also Peggie Koroncey (painting, printmaking) of Troy, Tom LeGault (painting) of Plymouth, Terry Luke (photography) of Birmingham, Marilyn Lyons-Austin (painting) of Troy, Charles Maher (painting) of Bloomfield Hills, Paul Miller (photography) of Livonia, Lance Munn (wood) of Bloomfield Hills, Fran Nicolson (mixed media) of Bloomfield Hills and Janis Parsons (fiber) of Troy.

Also Constance Powell (painting) of Birmingham, David Snabes (clay) of Farmington Hills, Sam Sottile (metals) of Rochester, Andrea Striewski (mixed media) of Farmington Hills, Ted Striewski (jewelry) of Farmington Hills; Claudia Tann (jewelry) of Farmington Hills, Mariella TerBeest (fiber) of Rochester, Maureen Voorheis (sculpture) of West Bloomfield and Kim and Frank Yanke (jewelry) of Franklin.

Museum docents needed

Training can be challenging. The pay is nonexistent. But longtime docents say they've been repaid with a better knowledge of 20th century art. Some of them even do it for love.

The museum's current corps of 32 docents meets every Monday morning from September to June to sharpen their knowledge of current and coming exhibitions.

Because of the time and effort the museum's staff puts into training the docents, volunteers are asked to make a two-year commitment to the program. New docents must complete a 15-week survey course conducted on Monday afternoons throughout the fall.

Based on the book, "Design in America — The Cranbrook Vision 1925-1950," the course covers a different medium each week. Beginning docents conduct practice tours and hone their public speaking skills. Graduation includes a tour of 15 objects in the main gallery.

Members must be able to give one- to two-hour tours at least once a week for a minimum of 10 tours a year.

Unlike other museums' programs that require docents to repeat the same lecture throughout their tenure, Cranbrook's volunteers need to be flexible enough to handle changing exhibitions.

Instead of giving a lecture, docents learn to engage tour groups in an ongoing conversation about the exhibit. That means incorporating visitors' opinions into the tour conversation.

SPECIAL WRITER

Fascinated by the growth habits of prairie grasses and flowers, Livonia photographer Max Nemazi focuses on their beauty in a 20-piece collection displayed to July 31 in the Livonia City Hall lobby, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

The collection is on loan from Matthaei Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor.

Nemazi captures the blooms, seed pods and meadows of perennial wildflowers like the Prairie Blazing Star, Goldenrod, Queen of the Prairie, Purple Coneflower, Big Bluestem, Rattlesnake Master and Butterfly Weed complete with butterflies.

Along with Nemazi's work, the July show, presented by the Livonia Arts Commission, features gouache paintings of Packards, Bentleys, Rolls Royces and Thunderbirds by Westland artist Roger Hardnock, a Center for Creative Studies graduate.

Hardnock's artwork publishing credits include Automotive Quarterly, Car Styling, and International Lady (Rolls Royce). He recently exhibited work in a two-person show at Nelson's Gallery in Livonia.

Nemazi, a retired engineer who worked 35 years for General Motors, coordinates the wildflower gardens at Matthaei. He shot many of his first photographs as a youngster with a Kodak box camera.

"I like nature and I like photography," Nemazi said in a telephone interview before embarking on a three-week hiking and biking trip to Alaska in June. "I like the prairie flowers because they're unique unto themselves. Prairies generally don't have trees. It's open land but it's undeveloped."

Early French explorers named the open, treeless, grassy lands of middle North America, prairies. The prairie's ecological system consists of level or slightly rolling grasslands.

Lacking shrubs and trees, the ecosystem is home to plants, insects, birds and animals not found anywhere else. Animals such as prairie chickens, dogs, and squirrels thrive on the prairie's grasses and wildflowers, shying from forests and wetlands.

Prairies have bloomed in late summer for centuries. The purple Kansas coneflower, Echinacea purpurea, was a herb favored by the Plains Indians in illnesses. It's especially popular in Europe. More than 300 published scientific studies illustrate how Echinacea strengthens the immune system.

"The roots of these prairie flowers live for years and years," Nemazi said. "They're perennials if you don't cut or mow or use weed killers."

"Prairie flowers thrive in few places locally anymore because of development. Today, they are mainly found in Kansas, Nebraska and out West, although many homeowners in California and New York forego lawns for meadows of wildflowers, requiring little care.

Steel Case Corp. in Grand Rapids, instead of a lawn, has a prairie, Nemazi said.

The botanical gardens in Ann Arbor have a restored prairie.

"We do burn ours at Ann Arbor every so often," Nemazi said. "Prairie flowers like the ashes. Fire helps destroy seeds of the annuals and weeds, while prairie plants can survive."

Since retiring, Nemazi has hiked and biked his way through New Zealand, Australia, Peru and Africa, all the while clicking away.

"I like traveling. I try to get there at the right time so the flower is blooming. Sometimes, I enlarge them and give them to friends," Nemazi said.

"Composition is the main thing. Exposure and shutter speed is part of technique. Composition and lighting is critical. If the lighting isn't right, you don't want a flat picture. You change the depth of field so the background is blurred, so your subject stands out."

The traditional micaceous pottery of Picuris, situated in the Sangre de Cristo mountain range of northern New Mexico, was first recorded in 1598 shortly after the first Spanish settlements.

Since 1600, this pueblo has been widely known for its beautiful and utilitarian wares.

Although the primary clay source at Picuris has been destroyed by road construction and mining, Durand and his grandmother, Cora, have struggled to keep the Picuris pottery tradition alive on their pueblo.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

You're smitten with an older home, but you want to take a second look to give it a cursory inspection before you call in the professionals.

Here are a few items to look at, according to the pros at HomeMaster of America:

- Structural: Look for horizontal and vertical cracking at foundation walls, cracks in house slabs, missing supports, bowing walls. Patching a crack is a minor repair, but it will cost a few thousand dollars to resupport a wall.
- Roofing: Many leaks are caused by faulty flashings. Look for excessive roof wear, missing shingles or slates. A bow in the roof may indicate a framing deficiency, particularly if there are more than two layers of roofing.
- Heating and cooling: Check operation and heating and cooling effect room by room. As with all mechanical equipment, these systems have an expected life span, which can be extended with proper maintenance.
- Plumbing: Look for older galvanized/brass piping (usually dull-silver/bronze in color), poor water pressure and sluggish drains. They all can signal the need for a major replumbing job. Stains or leaks in a ceiling below a bathroom can mean a bad shower pan, or the need for retiling, new fixtures or regrouting.
- Inadequate electrical service: Look for 220-volt service and at least 100 amps with a disconnect switch at the panel box.

System	Expected Life Span	Average $ to Replace
Roof:
Wood Shingles	15 - 25 yrs.	2,000 - 3,000
Asphalt Shingles	15 - 20 yrs.	1,500 - 2,200
Cedar Shakes	20 - 40 yrs.	3,000 - 5,000
Gutters/Downspouts:	20 - 30 yrs.	600 - 900
Heating Systems:
Hot Air Furnace	15 - 20 yrs.	1,500 - 1,800
Hot Water Boiler	20 - 25 yrs.	2,000 - 2,500
Water Heater	7 - 12 yrs.	350 - 500
Central Air Conditioning:
Compressor	6 - 10 yrs.	800 - 1,000
Compressor/Condenser:	10 - 20 yrs.	1,500 - 2,000
Other:
Kitchen Appliances:	8 - 15 yrs.	500 - 1,000

By Robert Meisner
Special Writer

I bought three condominium units at a campground condominium in northern Michigan. The board of directors is telling me that my trailer is too large because it extends beyond the six-foot boundary setback requirements. Is there any way to resolve this problem?

Yes. If your condominium documents expressly permit the relocation of boundaries between adjoining condominium units, then you may wish to make written request to your board to amend the master deed to relocate your unit boundaries to enlarge the condominium unit to bring you in compliance with the setback restrictions. Typically, campground condominium documents allow for the relocation of boundaraies between adjoining units. The Michigan Condominium Act allows for unit boundary relocation by by recording an amendment to the master deed, provided the condominium documents expressly permit this, and mortgagee approval on the affected condominium units is obtained.

Realty board awards scholarships

The South Oakland County Board of Realtors has presented 31 scholarships to graduating seniors and renewed a handful of others for students who already have begun their college studies.

The scholarships ranged in value from $125 to $250. A portion of members dues plus donations from member agents funded the scholarships.

- Stephanie Berk, Troy High School.
- Cheryl Collis, Birmingham Groves.
- Sarah Jouppi, Birmingham Detroit Country Day.
- Seema Khurana, Southfield High School.
- Amy Labriola, Groves.
- Katy Marsh, Groves.
- Katherine Saputo, Troy Athens High School.
- Caroline Spata, Athens.
- Esther Vinson, Southfield Christian High School.
- Kristin Wolf, Athens.
- Kerrie Wolfe, Athens.

Trustees continued the scholarship award for Daniel Barringer of Troy, a U-M student.

The average grade point of winners this year was 3.72 on a 4.00 scale. Eight of the winners were valedictorians. Nearly half of the recipients will attend the University of Michigan.

The scholarship fund was started in 1973, the first grants awarded in 1982.

City slickers at home on the range

■ Equestrian communities are becoming more popular, but a successful development means building a community around people, not horses.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY
STAFF WRITER

It is a small development in size, but not in scope. It is a development of traditionally inspired single family and custom homes, of gentle hills and green pastures, of rural life on the edge of urban reach.

And horses, don't forget the horses.

Berwyck on the Park and Berwyck Place, which sit a couple of miles south of the Village of Milford, is a private equestrian community developed by the Farmington Hills-based Irvine Group.

This isn't just another project for the company, according to Norm Finkelstein, vice president.

Both he and Paul Levine, Irvine Group president, were looking to develop something "different."

"We had been looking at the Milford area for some time — we liked the tone of the area and hoped to get ahead of the developing pack."

On one of their scouting trips they stumbled on the parcel. Another developer already had designs on the property, Finkelstein said, but as luck would have it, the plans fell through.

Several months after first seeing the land, the owner called and asked if they were still interested.

They were.

"Paul is a longtime horse lover, and I have an appreciation for horses myself," he said. Both have been around horses all of their life, he said, and the property just appealed to them as a special site.

"I could say it was the stables (the property had once been a horse farm), but it was more than that," he said.

"We just looked at each other and said, 'Boy, if we could just . . .' and we knew we had something."

Although the idea seemed natural, and the project was built partly because it was something they wanted to do, they didn't charge into the project blindly.

The basic home designs were settled after consulting with area Realtors on what types of houses were popular. Getting all the necessary permit approvals took longer than expected because the idea was something new. Several trips were made to other equestrian communities throughout the country.

"There just wasn't anything like it around here," he said.

"We thought we could bring the whole concept down to earth."

Taking shape

After more than three years of work, the development is taking shape. At the heart of the development is the recently renovated historic stables built in 1941, the centerpiece of the Berwyck Saddle Club, said Holly Osborn director of operations for the Saddle Club.

The Saddle Club is the private equestrian facility that Berwyck members are enrolled in upon purchasing a home. Residents board their horses in the stables and can have Saddle Club employees care for the animals.

"We can do as much or as little as the person wants," she said. Fees vary depending on what horse owners want the club to provide.

Osborn said every effort has been made to make the Saddle Club a top-notch facility.

During the renovation, a clubhouse with fitness room, kitchen and dressing rooms were added. An indoor arena is being refurbished for more stables and new indoor and outdoor arenas are being constructed.

Surrounding the development is a bridle path, pastures and a paddock area. The bridle path leads to horse trails in Kensington Metro Park, Osborn said.

The 58 country contemporary homes in Berwyck on the Park are detached single family homes ranging from 1,760 square feet to 2,800 square feet; priced from $169,00 to $269,000.

Across Milford Road lies Berwyck Place, a 14-site development of custom houses sized 2,800 square feet and up and starting at $300,000, she said.

Takes commitment

Elric S. Pinckney Jr., president of ESP & Associates Inc., a Denver, Col., real estate marketing firm specializing in consulting and feasibility studies for equestrian communities, said the number of these developments has grown steadily in the past decade.

Equestrian commmunities come in varying sizes. Sometimes they are packaged with other amenities like golf, and sometimes they cater to select horse fanciers.

"An awful lot of whether an equestrian community will work depends on the

The Fourmidable Group, reputedly one of the largest apartment management firms in southeastern Michigan, has been accused of racial discrimination in its leasing practices.

The Fair Housing Center of Metropolitan Detroit filed the complaint in federal court earlier this month after sending testing teams to 23 of Fourmidable's complexes since August of 1990.

Fourmidable is headquartered in Farmington Hills.

The complaint alleges civil rights violations and negligent performance of duty. Unspecified punitive monetary damages have been sought from Fourmidable as well as recovery of legal fees.

Douglas Hyman, a lawyer for Fourmidable, declined to comment on specifics of the complaint. But he defended the firm's record.

"Some areas defined as discrimination are so far-fetched, it's unbelievable to me," Hyman said. "This company is in the business of renting apartments and they rent to anyone regardless of color, creed or national origin."

One of Fourmidable's complexes identified in the complaint has a minority population of 92 percent, Hyman said.

"My experience with this company is that its minority occupancy rate substantiates its fair housing policies," he said.

"This is blown way, way out of proportion. You're going to see a vigorous defense of this matter," Hyman said.

Victoria Roberts, a lawyer representing the Fair Housing Center, sees things a bit differently.

"I believe the testing evidence we have is very compelling," she said. "We're hopeful that if we prove the allegations, Fourmidable will enter an agreement to cease and desist practices."

Fourmidable was targeted due to the number of complaints received by the Fair Housing Center over the years, Roberts said. Several complexes managed by Fourmidable in O&E communities were mentioned in the filing.

A summary of those allegations follows.

● Great Oaks Apartments, Rochester. A black tester allegedly was informed about only one available unit, while a white tester was informed of several available units a week later.

Also, the white tester received a mailed follow-up card from the rental agent, while the black tester didn't.

● Essex at Hampton, Rochester Hills. A black tester was told that a two-bedroom unit would be available in a week. She was told that there were no models to show and wasn't informed of rent specials.

Victorian styling, contemporary flair

GRANDEE

A covered front porch stretches across the front and wraps around the left side. Clean, simple lines prevail in the railings and dowels, but turned columns and decorative trim at the top add Victorian flavor as do the arched bay windows above, capped by gazebo-like roof lines.

Inside, nine-foot ceilings throughout harken back to the Victorian era. The rest of the house is contemporary. Family room and lobby are vaulted to the second story ceiling and spanned by a wide balcony that overlooks both rooms. Seven-foot high bookshelves flank the front door and a spacious living room is to the left.

Cooking and eating areas are to the right where choices include a formal dining room, a sunny nook or an extra-long eating bar. The walk-in pantry that separates the kitchen from the dining room has cupboard doors that allow direct kitchen access to some of the shelves.

The swing room is a multi-purpose space that could be used as guest quarters, a home office or hobby room. French doors open onto a private deck.

Although all of the sleeping areas are upstairs, the master suite is separated from the other three bedrooms. Large enough to include a sitting area, this space serves as an adult retreat from the activities in the rest of the house. The bedroom has a raised spa, enclosed lavatory and shower, and twin basins. An additional vanity is just outside the walk-in closet.

For a study plan of the Grandee (332-023), send $7.50 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 23007, Eugene, Or. 97402, including the name and number of the plan.

The biggest mistake developers make when building an equestrian community is to "over-horse it.

"Everything is horse, horse, horse," Pinckney said. Equestrian communities succeed because they treat projects as developments that incorporate horses, not as stables that incorporate houses.

Pinckney said he has found equestrian communities attract a wide variety of people — a majority, in fact, are not even what one might consider horse people.

"Typically, slightly less than 20 percent of residents will have a hands-on interest in horses," he said. "A lot of people are just attracted to the ambiance of the horses."

"These people may want to see a horse trotting by the back door, but they're not likely to actually ride one," he said.

Pinckney said he could not stress enough that a developer who views an equestrian development as a sales gimmick will not be successful.

"I would say that probably 90 percent of the time, when I look at a planned equestrian community, I recommend (the developer) not do it," he said.

While equestrian communities typically sell well, other types of developments sell as well or better for developers, he said.

"A lot of developers think they can hang up a shingle, slap up a barn and call it equestrian," he said. "(An equestrian community) takes a real commitment on the part of the developer."

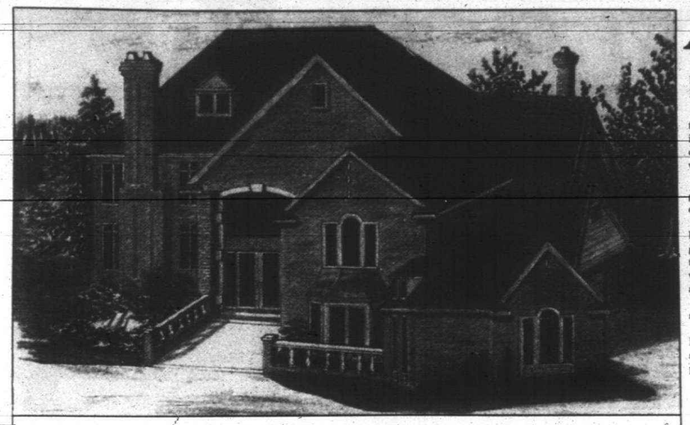
American scores hat trick



The American, a 4,400-square-foot model built by James Joseph Enterprises of Rochester Hills, continues to receive rave reviews.

The house, voted the most popular among attendees at the Oakland Township Homearama in May, also reaped several awards from a panel of builders and suppliers at that show. Architect was Thomas Kurmas of Bloomfield Hills.

The house features four bedrooms and three baths upstairs, dining room, kitchen/solarium, great room, living room, den and bathroom on the main level and a lower-level recreation room with neon lighting, jukebox, pool table, theater and black-and-white tile.

The Stratford model by M.J.C. Homes of Mount Clements, was voted favorite exterior design. Bryce & Palazzola of West Bloomfield was project architect.

The Knorrwood model built by Robert R Jones Associates of West Bloomfield was judged to have the favorite foyer/entry and the Porto Fino II by Capitol Homes Associates of Mount Clemens impressed as the favorite family/great room.

Ten models were in that Homearama sponsored by the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.
