School officials oppose 'cut and cap'

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

Plymouth-Canton school officials say that while Gov. John Engler's "cut and cap" tax-cutting proposal has voter appeal, it's really nothing more than another irresponsible action by the Republican state Legislature.

"Cut and cap," which voters will see as Proposal C on the ballot in November, would amend the state Constitution to phase in over five years a 30 percent property tax cut.

Increases in individual property assessments would be capped at three percent or the rate of inflation, whichever is less.

The state's general fund would reimburse school districts for revenue lost through the tax cut, but not through the assessment cap.

"Cut and cap could mean having to cut 5 percent out of our budget each year for the next five years," said Superintendent John Hoben. "There's no equity here whatsoever, yet it has appeal to voters."

Cut and cap "would be devastating to schools," said associate superindent for business Ray Hoedel. "The plan reduces operating taxes by 30 percent over five years; 10 percent the first year, 15 the next and 20 the next until you get to the fifth year when you get a 30-percent reduction. That cut is supposed to be reimbursed by the state. But since no new taxes are associated with this, the big question is, where is the state going to get the money to reimburse school districts?

1st day back challenge for young students

It was back to school day on Tuesday for Plymouth Canton students. Some were nervous, others just excited. But which ever, it was time to put away summer toys and hit the books. After some anxious moments, Fiegel Elementary students adapted.

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

The doors at Fiegel Elementary opened on the first day of school to apprehensive students, nervous parents and more than a few crying kindergartners.

But by mid-morning, staff and parents on hand to help out had things humming along smoothly.

Principal Barbara Young said it wouldn't have been nearly as easy getting Fiegel's 670 students settled without help of parents who return year after year to volunteer.

"We have 30 parents coming every day this week to help us out," said Young, adding that it's become a Fiegel tradition to have moms and dads helping staff each fall with the opening of school.

"We have parents who come back even though their children are now in middle school because they enjoy it so much. It's really something special."

Learning specialist Diane Layng said, "It all went really well this morning.

"We had moms here in every nook and cranny to help. We had a few little ones who were uneasy and we had a couple criers in kindergarten." Patience and a lot of gentleness went a long way toward soothing nerves and calming students not quite ready to say goodbye to summer vacation, she said.

"I guess what really struck me were the big smiles on the children's faces and their big, big eyes," said Layng. "A lot of students just looked relieved to actually come in the doors and see that their teachers really are here."

Friends Mike King and Clarence Broadnax, both 14, were enjoying themselves in the sunshine outside Fiegel Tuesday morning. Both live across the street at the Crossings of Canton, and Broadnax's two little sisters attend Fiegel.

Donations pour in for hurricane victims

By Barbara Wilson
Staff Writer

Donations are coming in quickly from Canton Township residents anxious to help the Florida victims of Hurricane Andrew, according to Linda Shapona, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce.

Local businesses are supplying drop-off sites and transportation for the drive, Shapona said, and many are contributing goods to send.

"The truck is nearly half full already," Shapona said Tuesday.

Donations began coming in Monday and will be cut off at noon Friday. Kmart Distribution and Simpson Transportation are trying to come up with a second truck to handle any overload.

The Kmart Distribution Center, 41425 Joy Road, will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. this week to accept non-perishable food items, clothing, blankets and other goods.

The trucks will drop off items at the National Guard station near Homestead, Fla., Shapona said. They are expected to fly the goods into the hardest hit areas because there have been problems getting donated items to the people who need them most.

Businesses acting as drop-off sites for donations include:

- KMart Distribution
- Pace Warehouse, all locations
- Kroger on Ford Road (food and health aid items only)

Other local business people brought items to donate to the Wednesday Chamber of Commerce meeting.

"We're really pleased with all of the things people are donating," Shapona said.

Court orders cleanup of Greenwood home

By Barbara Wilson
Staff Writer

Residents of Greenwood Street in Canton Township are finally seeing some progress in the cleaning up of what they considered a neighborhood eyesore.

Property owner Alexander Biedron pleaded guilty Monday to five ordinance violations, according to Ordinance Officer Miles Davis.

ENFORCEMENT

District Court Judge James Garber ordered Biedron to clean up his yard within 14 days or the township would clean it up and send the bill to him.

Biedron also had to pay $375 in court costs and fines, and will be on probation for one year.

"During the year we will check up on him and if the yard is not maintained, the township can step in," Davis said.

Biedron did not show up on his court date, so he was picked up by police on a bench warrant, Davis said. He was released on his own recognizance and appeared in court Monday for a hearing.

Greenwood residents have been complaining to the township for three years about their neighbor. Grass had grown to nearly three feet and the inground swimming pool was filled with black, stagnant water. Several residents said they saw rats on the property going through garbage which had been left in piles.

As of Monday afternoon, the grass had been cut and many of the shrubs had been trimmed back. Neighbors expressed relief and said they hoped the home would be maintained on a regular basis.

Anti-abortionists protest eatery opening

A small group of protesters picketed the new Olive Garden restaurant on Ford Road in Canton Township Monday, but did not dampen opening day festivities.

"The Olive Garden has one goal and one goal only and that is to provide the best food and guest service available," said Charles Tate, vice president for consumer affairs for the Olive Garden.

The eight protesters said the restaurant supports abortion efforts by providing donations to Planned Parenthood. Members of the Right to Life group carried signs at the entrance to the new business at 41980 Ford Road making their presence known.

"I went out and asked the people (protesters) if they had talked with anyone at our office and they said they hadn't," said George Carey, regional vice president of the Olive Garden.

Protesters' welcome: *A handful of protesters showed up at the grand opening of the Olive Garden restaurant in Canton Township Monday. Protester Barbara Graham said Olive Garden appeared on a list of Planned Parenthood supporters prepared by the group LifeSpan.

"That's their right to donate to any organization they choose, but it is my right to show my concern," Graham said.

While the Olive Garden itself makes no such donations, the General Mills Foundation contributes a small portion of its funding to a Planned Parenthood chapter in Minneapolis, according to officials from the restaurant.

The Olive Garden is owned by General Mills.

"The Olive Garden does not take a stand on abortion," Tate said. "That is viewed as a strictly personal decision and not a business decision."

The General Mills Foundation is operated as a separate entity, Tate said. The Foundation contributes in excess of $10 million each year to groups such as the Boy Scouts of America and the American Red Cross. Funds that are given to Planned Parenthood are earmarked for specific education purposes and not for any issue related to abortion, Tate said.

Graham argues that money is easily shifted to one account from another.

"Our position is that we have no position on abortion and these protesters should have done their homework before showing up," Carey said.

Graham said she opposes Planned Parenthood because it was founded on the premise of "zero population growth" which she said has now left "white children in the minority."

"I don't think too many people would like to think of their grandchildren being found in that position," Graham said. "I'm one of a group of individuals who feel we need to pay attention to family values again."

The new Canton Township Olive Garden employs more than 150 people.

Ump attacked after ejecting player

CRIME

Throwing a player out of a softball game put one umpire in a potentially dangerous situation.

According to police reports, a player at the Michigan Softball Center on Michigan Avenue was so angered when he was thrown out of the game that he assaulted the umpire.

The player was thrown out of a Saturday game, he then turned and pushed the umpire to the ground and proceeded to choke him.

Charges have been filed, according to reports, and an investigation continues.

Knife report

Two youngsters playing in the sand pit at Flodin Park recently were approached by two young people carrying knives, according to police reports.

Neither of the youngsters was injured, but they were told to stop "harassing" the suspects' cousin, a toddler also playing in the park.

The victims said they had no contact with the toddler.

An investigation continues.

5 family generations to celebrate wedding

BY BILL CASPER
STAFF WRITER

Weddings are always family affairs, but the Sept. 4 nuptial of Jennifer Blalock and Mark Presson, both of Canton Township, will feature the bride being married by her great-grandmother.

The couple will be wed by the Rev. Mary Crouch, 76, the pastor for 35 years at the non-denominational Bethel Tabernacle in Pontiac.

In keeping with the all-in-the-family wedding theme, Crouch has recruited her son, John J. Williams, a pastor at a church in Alpena, to assist with the ceremony and his daughter, Mary, 13, will play the keyboard.

It will be the first trip down the marital aisle for both Jennifer, 18, and Mark, 25. But marrying off family members is old hat for Crouch, who hasn't missed one yet and owns a perfect string of tied knots.

"I've married everyone in the family that's gotten married," said Crouch, who has been in the ministry for 41 years. "I'm just so happy they're all still married."

There are so many that Couch can't count them all, but she knows Jennifer, a former Redford Township resident, will be the fifth-generation of Blalock women for whom she will administer wedding vows, including Jennifer's mother.

"I marry them as they come along — at no charge," said Crouch, who has no shortage of great-great grandchildren waiting in line. "They're little kids now, but God willing, I'll marry some of them too. I always look forward to marrying family members."

Jennifer said she never gave a second thought to who would marry her.

"It's tradition so I didn't think twice. Right off the bat I wanted her to marry me. We're a close family and that makes it special to be married by my great-grandmother."

Jennifer lived in Redford with her parents, Edward and Diane, for eight years before moving to a mobile home park in Canton, where she met Presson, a resident of the same complex. She attended Bulman Elementary, Hilbert Junior High and Redford Union High in Redford.

Presson, a machine operator for Murray Equipment, is originally from Southgate and a 1985 graduate of Southgate High.

"We met at a pay phone in the trailer park in January," Jennifer said. "I was waiting to call my mom and he was calling his parents. It was about zero-degrees and he asked me to an Ozzie Ozborne concert."

Jennifer didn't go to the concert, but they started dating and now they're ready to take the plunge into marital bliss.

Jennifer admits she's getting a little scared and nervous as her wedding day approaches. But first they have to meet with Crouch, who aims to keep intact her record of successful marriages.

"She's in for a long Bible school video on marriage," Crouch said. "Marriage is not all as Jennifer sees it and the video talks about what she can expect in a marriage and how to take care of the marriage. I'm also going to have a conference with the couple.

"She's going to need a lot of love and help because she's so young," Crouch said. "But I think she'll do fine."

Bits of history

Collectors may buy pieces of old barn, farm

BY BARBARA WILSON
STAFF WRITER

The 150-year-old farmhouse and barn are going to be demolished anyway, so Pat Mills is selling it off bit by bit.

The farmhouse and barn located in western Canton Township is slated to be razed yet this fall. The property owner has told tenant Mills to sell whatever is there.

"The house has been changed so much over the years and the barn is in such poor shape there is no reason to save it," Mills said. "It is sad to see something that has survived so many years be torn down, but at least this way bits of it will be put to use."

Mills rents the house from developers of a neighboring subdivision. They purchased the land in 1988 for $1.5 million.

Mills searched for the reasons and means to save the structure, but found the costs to be extravagant and very little true historic value.

The mortise-and-tenon construction of the barn is appealing to those searching for bits of history, and several people have stopped by asking to have pieces of the siding. To dismantle the entire barn would be quite expensive, Mills said, but the siding comes off fairly easily.

The barn is nearly two stories tall and was once used to house horses. The loft was taken years ago and the south end is nearly destroyed as a result of the more recent construction. There are a few pieces of original hardware in the structure, but Mills plans to take those with her.

There are some usable timbers in the barn and an old pulley, but both would be difficult to remove without knocking the entire structure down. The siding is worth rescuing first.

"There was one man who was interested in paneling his family room with the siding," said Mills who has put up with questions from passersby since she moved into the house.

The house belonged to tenant farmers so the woodwork and floors are not of much value, Mills said. It was once occupied by some of the first settlers of the area.

"The house is really very sound," Mills said. "The plaster walls in the front of the house are original and you can barely even drive a nail into them they're so hard."

Mills will be taking along some old light fixtures, but there is little else from the house that she wants to keep.

She just hopes others will find some enjoyment in the pieces of the house that will live on.

Renovations cause some pains as school resumes

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

The good news: Voters' recent approval of a $59 million bond issue spelled capital improvements for just about every building in the Plymouth-Canton school district.

The bad news: Not all the renovations are complete, and that's going to cause some inconvenience for students and staff during the new school year.

Administrators say the work is scheduled to create as little disruption as possible.

"Some of the projects are ongoing," said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business. "We're trying to keep any disruption down to a minimum. There will be some little inconveniences in some cases, but we are making an all-out effort to keep that to a minimum."

Expenditures per building range from $390,000 at Hulsing Elementary to $1.3 million at each of the high schools.

When Salem High School students started school this week, they were happy to see their cramped cafeteria has been expanded to more than double its original size. New roofs at Salem and the Phase Three building mean leaks will be a thing of the past.

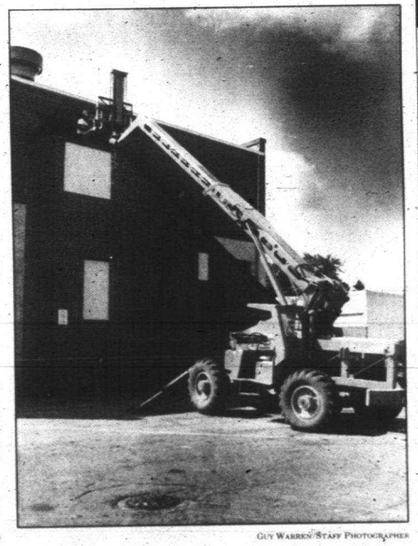
Canton High School's athletic facilities have been upgraded, and renovations are scheduled for classrooms there.

Fiber-optic lines and cable are being laid in all school buildings for the eventual installation of high-tech equipment that will give teachers access to materials via satellite communications, cable TV, laser and video discs, and tele-conferencing.

Electrical, plumbing, and playground improvements have been made at several schools.

Construction of two new elementary schools in Canton — one on Warren Road and a second on Sheldon — should be completed by September, 1993.

Work at Central Middle School hit a few snags. Some teachers who came to the former high school last week to organize their classrooms found rolls of electrical cables, lumber, carpet and other materials in their rooms.



GUY WARREN/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Renovation: Crews worked throughout the summer at Central Middle School, removing asbestos, remodeling offices and lounges, replacing plumbing and electrical equipment, painting and polishing. Lindsay Walker (above, left) of Lydell and Hart, a Livonia mason contractor, readies Central for the installation of an elevator.

A sub-standard painting job and time-consuming asbestos removal among other things contributed to delays, Central Principal Pat Moore said.

"The original paint crew that came into this building did a very sub-standard job. The main office and teachers' lounge — two major areas for renovation — were painted in white flat ceiling paint. That had to be re-painted three or four times simply because it couldn't stay clean. We really needed semi-gloss.

"Our office (which was re-modeled) was promised to us July 8. We got in this week Monday."

Problems notwithstanding, Central was ready for students when school started Tuesday.

"Our custodians worked almost round the clock all weekend long just to get things presentable," Moore said.

"We already had our half day," said King of his first day at Salem High School. "It's our first year at the high school and it's sort of scary. You had to find all your classes. Salem is big. It's huge. And there are tons of people," said King, taking a time out from practicing kick flips on his skateboard.

Broadnax agreed. "It's pretty scary at first because it's so big. It's easy to get lost," said Broadnax, who's looking forward to playing football for the Rocks.

How did Broadnax's little sisters like their first day back?

■ 'We have 30 parents coming every day this week to help us out.'

Stephanie, 8, "was scared to go to third grade. She knew there'd be new kids in her class and she was scared she wasn't going to know anything," said Broadnax.

For Shannon Broadnax, 6, it was the first day of first grade. "She was really happy about staying all day," said her big brother. "She was pretty happy about it."

'Cut and cap'

"We believe they are not going to get the revenue, so what will happen to out-of-formula districts like Plymouth Canton?"

Hoedel predicts the state will discontinue paying its share of employees' Social Security and retirement.

"Cut and cap has the tendency to limit funds again to schools, which we think is a little bit on the border of irresponsibility," said Hoedel. Everyone wants a tax cut of course, but to not consider the major impact it's going to have on the public school system is ridiculous. We're urging a no vote."

The school board will host a workshop Saturday, Oct. 24, on cut and cap and other tax proposals to be decided in November's general election.

"We're inviting the community to come, as well as our legislators, to discuss the impact of the tax proposals on the schools," said Hoedel. "What we're trying to do for the board of education leading up to that is to gather data and information to project the impact to the school system in terms of revenues."

Hoedel says the future under cut and cap would be unpleasant at best. "It would force local school districts, really, to have millage elections to make up for losses. Where else would you go?" he said.

"The school board and district really are wrestling with implications of this to maintain a good program.

"The state hasn't been able to fund the school-aid formula the last few years. There's a tough road ahead."

School board president Roland Thomas also opposes cut and cap.

"This is property tax relief without dealing with school finance reform, and that to me has got to be tied together," said Thomas. "That's one of the major reasons I'm opposed to it.

"The second major reason is that this thing is akin to the scam legislators perpetrated on the taxpayers of this state when they created the lottery (to fund education). The state is working with a finite amount of money. Where are they going to get the extra bucks to pay us back?"

The result, said Thomas, will be "to put an additional burden on schools to either cut costs further and really take our educational level down, or we will have to come back to local taxpayers and say, 'We need more money.'

"Our founding fathers in this state, and in other states that rely heavily on the property tax, realized schools need a stable source of funding to be stable in the community. It's an absolute necessity for good schools.

Tax proposal headed back to ballot

It's back.

A proposed 0.5-mill county tax increase for social service programs to benefit the "neediest" Wayne County residents, was placed on the fall ballot last week by county commissioners.

A similar proposal failed by a 60-40 margin during the Aug. 4 county primary.

Also on the ballot, at least for now, are a series of county charter amendments.

The amendments would: "use the separation of powers concept" to determine the relationship between county branches of government; boost the county auditor general's ability to conduct audits; require county commission approval of pay and benefits for non-union executive's office employees and require the executive to file an office reorganization plan with the commission every four years.

The measures are opposed by Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara but were approved for the ballot by county Clerk James Killeen.

McNamara could appeal to the county election commission, a three-member panel including Killeen, county Treasuer Raymond Wojtowicz and chief Probate Judge Freddie Burton.

Supporters say the measures would make county government more responsive; foes say they would unfairly limit the executive's authority.

Realtors: HUD pact will boost open housing

BY WAYNE PEAL
STAFF WRITER

Studies show metro Detroit is one of the most heavily segregated areas in the U.S., but area Realtors point to a newly-signed agreement as proof of their continuing commitment to fair housing.

A voluntary affirmative marketing agreement — VAMA for short — was signed Wednesday by the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development regional office.

The agreement is a pledge by Realtors to support fair housing. It also provides guidelines for Realtor training.

Approved by HUD Secretary Jack Kemp in July, the document replaces a previous, 17-year-old agreement between the federal government and housing professionals.

"This is a much simpler document," association spokeswoman Marta Saint-James said. "The older one had some very specific provisions."

Despite its less restrictive nature, Saint-James said the document would prove effective.

She noted, however, that fair housing progress in metro Detroit has been slow.

"Bigotry is still a problem," she said. "You're dealing with people's guts, how they feel inside."

Though it didn't prompt the new agreement, housing segregation has long been a major area issue.

Robert Willis, vice president of the South Oakland NAACP chapter, said "steering" is still a problem.

"I've never been told I couldn't buy a home in a specific neighborhood, but when I was looking to buy a home in Beverly Hills I had a real estate person try to steer me into another area," he said.

Minorities who integrate certain communities still feel a "chilling effect," including cross burnings and additional harassment.

"You're not going to find a lot of African Americans in Dearborn or Sterling Heights," he said. "African Americans don't feel comfortable there."

There were 102 complaints filed with the HUD fair housing office over the past 12 months, including rentals and home sales, office director Ruth Featherstone said.

"That's fairly typical," she said.

Realtors currently receive six hours of training in fair housing law provisions — one hour through the state Department of Commerce, three through the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and two more through a Realtors association program called "Project: Pride."

Realtors are members of a trade organization representing about 750,000 real estate professionals nationwide.

Saint-James, a native of Argentina, said fair housing is her personal crusade.

"I've lived all over the world," she said. "In some places, I was in the majority, in others the minority. I know what it feels like."

Fine gifts shop thrives under husband and wife team

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

Plymouth's Ronald and Barbara Heslop say they're considering expanding their successful bridal registry and tabletop business to Ohio, or even farther.

"There's the possibility of maybe taking it nationwide," said company president Ronald Heslop.

"We're definitely thinking of Ohio in '93. We'd like to see what happens this fall and Christmas."

Since opening their first card and gift store in 1975, the business has grown to include 14 stores in Michigan — nine in metro Detroit.

The Heslops built their business around the premise that today's time-constrained shoppers, including bridal registrants, want to see the entire china assortment on the selling floor.

Customers can enter any Heslop's location and choose from 1,500 patterns of china, crystal stemware and silverware.

They've also succeeded at running a business together for 17 years and staying together.

That contradicted the advice of their lawyer back in 1975, who told them he'd never seen a lasting husband-and-wife business partnership.

"That was probably the best thing he could have told us," Ronald Heslop said.

"We decided this wasn't going to happen," he said, so they set up some ground rules about running the business.

"They haven't been put to the test a lot, but they have from time to time," he said.

Barbara decides the look of the stores, supervising all merchandising and store operations. Ronald handles all financial matters, including negotiating leases, determining new store locations and overseeing the accounting and purchasing departments.

"It's like you draw this invisible line," she said.

And if there is a difference of opinion, Barbara, being the vice president, defers to the president — Ronald.

One might view the bridal registry-tabletop industry as somewhat recession-proof, as people are always getting married.

"It is recession-proof, but yes, the recession has also affected us," Ronald Heslop said.

Then again, "There is a trend toward more formal dining and entertaining at home," Barbara Heslop said.

Of other trends, the Heslops say brides and grooms are older now than they were when they started the business. "The average age is 24 and a half," Ronald Heslop said.

"It's an older, more sophisticated couple. And we're seeing more and more of the grooms accompanying the brides," he said.

As for china, "There is a trend toward a more sophisticated type of pattern, rather than the old traditional tiny flowers."

The Heslops have recently completed three major remodelings of current stores, in Livonia, Novi and Dearborn Heights.

Since moving here a year ago, the couple said they really enjoy Plymouth.

"Last week, we took a day off and walked the entire downtown," Ronald Heslop said. "We had lunch at the Cozy Cafe and I bought a suit next door, at Milano's."

The company maintains a 70,000-square-foot corporate office and distribution center at the headquarters in Novi, on Heslop Drive.

The youngest of the family's two sons, Tom, supervises the staff in the corporate office and distribution center.

Wedding business: Ronald and Barbara Heslop are more than a couple, they're business partners. And the business is weddings.

Of course, Ronald and Barbara have their favorite china patterns. In fall and winter, they dine off of Ronald's favorite setting — Carlyle by Royal Doulton.

And during the spring and summer, the Heslops use Barbara's favorite, the Jasmine pattern, also by Royal Doulton.

OPEN LABOR DAY 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

Park walkers win Mackinac trip

Everett Mullins, 61, of Garden City, and Howard Skovland, 69, of Farmington, have their plans for Labor Day weekend all set.

They will be traveling to Mackinac Island and the Labor Day Bridge Walk as Wayne County Park System's Walk Michigan grand prize winners.

"I can't believe I won. My wife and I are very excited about the trip," Skovland said. Meanwhile, Mullins was all smiles as he accepted his grand prize.

"I've never been up to Mackinac Island," he said.

Walk Michigan is an annual fitness program organized to promote good health and to highlight recreational facilities in the state. Walkers of all ages have an opportunity to participate in walks sponsored by their local recreation departments.

Skovlund, Mullins and their wives will be joining grand prize winners from more than 80 communities throughout Michigan.

Wayne County Parks System sponsored 12 Walk Michigan events in July. More than 155 Walk Michigan participants strolled 300 miles.

"I am very pleased with the response of the Walk Michigan program," said Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara. "Local mall walkers are coming out to the parks. We plan on making Walk Michigan a year-round program."

Walk Michigan started in 1985 as a cooperative effort between the Michigan Recreation and Park Association and Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Michigan. Today, more than 15,000 walkers from across the state participate in the program, which has been recognized by the President's Citation Program on Private Sector Initiatives as an example of cooperation between business, government and the private sector.

Conservation district sponsors tree sale

The Wayne County Soil and Water Conservation District is accepting orders for its fall tree sale. Orders will be accepted on a first-come, first served basis until Sept. 25. Seedlings are scheduled for distribution on Friday, Oct. 16.

Planting stock available this fall includes: Austrian pine, red pine, Scotch pine, white pine, misty blue spruce, white spruce, Douglas fir and concolor fir.

The district's tree program is designed to help landowners obtain planting stock at low cost for reforestation, windbreaks, erosion control and wildlife habitat improvement.

Order forms with more information on trees available, site preference, uses and prices can be obtained at the Soil Conservation District Office, 5454 Venoy Road, Wayne, Mich. 48184. For more information, call 326-7787.

Al Gore to speak at Labor day rally

Democratic vice presidential nominee Al Gore will speak at a noon rally in Detroit's Hart Plaza following the Labor Day Parade on Monday, Sept. 7.

More than 100,000 unionists and their families are expected to march in the traditional parade which will once again have two lines of march down Woodward and Michigan avenues. The Woodward line of march will commence at 9 a.m. at Sibley and Woodward; the Michigan line of march will start at 10:30 a.m. at Perry and Trumbull.

This year's parade theme is "Unite and Fight Back! Protect Our Jobs and Families!" Leading the parade will be members of three unions: The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1991; The United Steelworkers of America, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year; and The Utility Workers Union of America.

HUDSON'S OPTICAL

Mallett calls high court rival 'part of the problem'

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. says his election challenger is part of the state Supreme Court's problem, not its solution.

Mallett was appointed in 1990 by outgoing Gov. James Blanchard and nominated Sunday for a two-year term by Michigan Democrats.

Michael Talbot, a Wayne Circuit judge and the Republican nominee, gained fame in 1989 when he handed out a so-called "basketball score" sentence of 100 to 200 years for second-degree murder.

"That case," said Mallett, "caused the Michigan Supreme Court to develop a rule of law called proportionality in direct response to what it perceived as Judge Talbot's irresponsibility.

"They had to create, at great taxpayer expense, a huge examination process because of the imposition of a disproportionate sentence. In the past, the Supreme Court relied on the trial judges to behave in a constitutionally appropriate manner.

"They had to create a new constitutional rule to compensate for his abrupt departure from the norm of judicial decorum," Mallett said.

Talbot was reversed on a 4-3 vote of the justices in 1989, a year before Mallett was on the bench. Talbot is making that ruling an election issue.

"People rely on the Michigan Supreme Court to behave in a constitutionally responsible manner," Mallett said. "We are not charged with the responsibility of putting people in jail.

"The court in People vs. Moore said you cannot circumvent the law by sentencing them to death (dying in prison). The Legislature said nothing about that being a life offense. But you say, 'I'm going to depart from the statutes created by the Legislature and sentence them to 300 years.'

"A judge cannot sentence someone to a term greater than the people of Michigan demand."

■ 'People rely on the Michigan Supreme Court to behave in a constitutionally responsible manner.'

Conrad Mallett court nominee

Open the doors

Talbot cites a study showing the Michigan Supreme Court ranks 49th in the number of opinions it writes. Mallett called it an "apples and oranges" comparison.

"Michigan is one of the few supreme courts in the country that has a purely discretionary responsibility," said Mallett, meaning the court can choose which appeals it will hear.

"Some states, like Virginia, must take death penalty appeals. Some must take all workers compensation appeals. They automatically take more cases than Michigan."

Speaking to the Democratic State Convention, Mallett said he will ask the high court to open the doors on proceedings of the Judicial Tenure Commission, the disciplinary body for judges.

"To date, the practice has been that the commission only makes public those orders rendered by the Michigan Supreme Court that result in the public censure of a member of the judiciary. Private censures and reprimands have been shielded from public view.

"In this age of public cynicism ... I will urge Chief Justice Cavanagh and our colleagues to consider making public every final action taken by the Judicial Tenure Commission."

Mallett was 36 when Blanchard appointed him two years ago, and the ex-governor strongly endorsed him as "a new, youthful justice to give some energy to our state ... who can serve us for years."

Talbot has attacked Mallett for never having tried a case, but Justice Patricia Boyle, a Democratic appointee, rose to Mallett's defense.

"You're going to hear a lot from the opposition about being a trial judge," said Boyle as she nominated Mallett. "There's more than one way to prepare to be a justice, and I give you one example: G. Mennen Williams. His courage didn't start the day he put on a black robe."

Boyle said Mallett has "an instinct for truth, a nose for what's false."

Ironically, Boyle voted in the minority to uphold Talbot's 100-200 year sentence in the murder case.

Kelly nominated

Democrats also nominated Court of Appeals Judge Marilyn J. Kelly, 54, of Bloomfield Township to face Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley, the GOP nominee.

Kelly, who served two terms as a Democrat on the state Board of Education in the 1960s and '70s, noted that all three times she had the support of the party, the United Auto Workers, the AF of L and the Michigan Education Association.

Kelly said her campaign would emphasize her knowledge of family law, environmental law, and the concerns of labor and women.

Kelly wrote the Court of Appeals decision that overturned Gov. John Engler's reorganization of the state Department of Natural Resources and elimination of many subordinate panels.

Oakland man tapped for U-M board

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Business attorney Larry Deitch, a top money raiser for Michigan Democrats, has been tapped by his party to oversee a $2 billion public corporation — the University of Michigan.

"U-M is one of our state's most precious resources, one of the five or 10 best universities in America," said the 45-year-old Bloomfield Hills resident with a practice in Southfield.

"But in the last 15 years, Michigan's state appropriation for higher education has declined from fifth among the states to the bottom 30s. I think that is shameful.

"I would like as a member of the board, in cooperation with the other boards, to be a vigorous advocacy group for better funding of higher education.

"That ties into finding ways to hold the line on tuition. We need to continue to make Michigan accessible to people of talent, no matter what their means are," said the father of a UM sophomore.

Deitch noted that Republican regent Neal Nielsen, a Brighton attorney, was quoted as saying he couldn't think of anything nice about the job. "I feel passionately about the University of Michigan and the need to maintain its excellence," Deitch said.

Besides being party treasurer, Deitch also has been a trustee of the Michigan Cancer Foundation, a director of Birmingham's Community House and president of Temple Beth El, general counsel of a bank and a director of several corporations.

MEA 0 for 3

It was a bad weekend in Detroit for the Michigan Education Association, the state's largest teachers union. MEA batted 0 for 3 in nominations for eight state education posts.

Deitch was nominated unanimously only after the MEA-endorsed Jack D. Minore, a Flint councilman, conceded.

The other UM nomination went to Rebecca McGowan, an Ann Arbor resident and manager for governmental affairs for the Industrial Technology Institute, a non-profit institute formed in Gov. James Blanchard's years to promote renewal of Michigan's manufacturing base.

Married since 1984 to attorney Michael Staebler, McGowan has been an aide to U.S. Sens. Adlai Stevenson III of Illinois and Frank Church of Idaho and Vice President Walter F. Mondale, working on federal educational issues. She was deputy manager of Mondale's 1984 run for the White House.

"I've been working as a volunteer, particularly with the Center for the Education of Women, which is the organization that provides service and advocacy for women on all three campuses." She expects her six-month-old daughter Margo to be in the UM class of 2014.

Vouchers hit

A name familiar to area school and community college board members — Kathleen Straus of Detroit — will be a Democratic candidate for State Board of Education.

Formerly a staff member of the Michigan Association of School Boards, Straus now is president of the Center for Creative Studies, with 3,000 students, 30 full-time faculty and many part-time faculty teaching art, design, music and dance in Detroit.

Straus denounced a voucher plan floated at the Republican convention by the Mackinac Center, a conservative think tank in Midland.

"I want to do everything I can to strengthen public education, the backbone of this country. The voucher plan, which would give money to private schools as well as public schools, is the opposite of what I want to do," Straus said.

Straus said it will be "very hard to work out" a state board-endorsed schools-of-choice plan between public school districts. "How do the kids get to the schools if the parents don't have the resources to get them to the schools?"

Her running mate will be Roman Bochenek, a Detroiter endorsed by the Michigan Federation of Teachers.

Democrats also nominated:

- For Michigan State University trustees — Dorothy Gonzalez, director of multicultural affairs for the state Department of Mental Health, and retiring U.S. Rep. Bob Traxler of Bay City. Defeated was Shirley Rogers, a Lansing Community College trustee, an officer in an educational secretaries union and endorsed by the MEA.
- For Wayne State University board of governors — Ed Scribner, president of the Metropolitan Detroit AFL-CIO and Teamster official, and Denise J. Lewis, attorney and former personnel director of the city of Detroit. MEA's candidate, Javier H. Aguilar, a pharmacist, conceded defeat before a roll call could be taken.

High court nominee ruled against guv

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

A former language teacher nominated last Saturday by the Democratic party to run against Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley for the Michigan Supreme Court recently gave Gov. John Engler a constitutional spanking over his effort to wipe out boards under the Department of Natural Resources.

Judge Marilyn J. Kelly, of Bloomfield Hills, wrote the majority opinion when the state Court of Appeals declared Engler's sweeping change violated the state constitution.

"(A)lthough he is empowered to transfer (functions), nowhere is the governor granted authority to abolish functions of the boards and commissions of a principal department," Kelly wrote.

"The boards and commissions which (Engler's order) would abolish allow citizens to voice their opinions through public hearings . . . Some commissions have the authority to make substantial decisions or issue permits."

Kelly said Engler and DNR director Roland Harmes "have failed to set forth any credible evidence establishing that the functions would be preserved under the new DNR. They ask, as a leap of faith, that we believe the new DNR director and staff would have time and resources to perform the functions of 18 boards and commissions.

"We cannot but believe, instead, that the governor's actions have eliminated the hearing function. Therefore, we agree with the trial court that the governor was without authority to abolish the boards and commissions as he did."

Kelly was joined by Judge Myron Wahls. Dissenting was Judge Maureen Pulte Reilly.

Engler will appeal to the state Supreme Court.

Political case

The case has enormous political significance.

It was filed by House Speaker Lewis Dodak, D-Birch Run, two other Democratic representatives and the Senate Democrataic floor leader.

Joining as plaintiffs were the nonpartisan Michigan United Conservation Clubs, several Democratic-leaning environmental groups and David Dempsey, an adviser to former Gov. James Blanchard, a Democrat.

The United Auto Workers and state AFL-CIO filed briefs on behalf of the Democratic position.

Dodak said the ruling "preserves the integrity of the legislative process in our state by upholding the principle of separation of powers."

Former Gov. George Romney, 84 and retired in Bloomfield Hills, filed a brief on behalf of Engler's position. Romney, a leader of the 1961-2 Constitutional Convention, argued that the reorganization section was "self-executing" — that is, it alone gives a governor authority to reorganize a department.

Not so, said Kelly. "The Michigan Supreme Court has specifically found that the provisions . . . are not self-executing" and that the subsequent Executive Organization Act must be read alongside the constitution.

Kelly also wrote that the governor is not immune from a lawsuit which sought only equitable relief, not monetary damages; and that he lacks authority to appoint the chair of the Natural Resources Commission.

Room for dissent

When the appellate court splits 2-1, the loser frequently goes to the state Supreme Court, and this case is no exception.

The dissenting judge, Reilly, wrote a detailed opinion saying the majority misinterpreted Supreme Court precedents. She attacked the idea that Engler had intruded on the Legislature's power.

"Because the governor has concurrent legislative power with the Legislature . . . to "make changes in the organization of the executive branch or the assignment of functions among its units," the governor may accomplish by executive order in that limited area whatever the Legislature might accomplish by the enactment of a statute. Each has veto power over the other," Reilly said.

Oakland University plans its first all-class reunion

By Wayne Peal
Staff Writer

It's not just an Oakland University reunion, it's a coming of age party.

Each of Oakland's estimated 33,000 alumni are invited to the university's first-ever All Class Reunion, Saturday, Oct. 3.

The event is billed as a milestone in Oakland's still-brief history.

"We've never had anything like this before but there are a lot of reasons why the time is right," said Colleen Ochoa of Waterford, a 1987 alumni who has been a driving force behind the event. "For starters, we're now 35 years old and we have a new president."

OU President Sandra Packard is scheduled to meet with alumni at an afternoon reception at Kresge Library, but Ochoa said many Oakland grads see the reunion as a way to boost or re-establish business ties.

"We conducted a telephone survey of our alumni last year and we found out people were more interested in attending for professional reasons than even for social reasons," she said.

Not that there won't be opportunity for socializing.

Luncheons, picnics, swim events and golf outings are all on the agenda.

But each of the university's schools and colleges are expected to hold their own reunions, allowing students the opportunity to boost the telephone numbers in their rolodex.

"One of the things that makes Oakland unique is that we're largely a commuter school with an average student age of 27," Ochoa said. "So, we're trying to tailor the event to our students' needs."

A reunion of Oakland's 1963 charter class, its honors college and black alumni are also planned.

Entertainment ranges from matinee and evening performances at Meadow Brook Theater, a music recital at Varner Hall and a rock 'n' roll event in the Oakland Center Crockery.

Ochoa, a member of U.S. Rep. Bob Carr's staff, was joined by by OU residence hall administrator Jean Ann Miller of Rochester Hills and former OU employee Marion Burt of West Bloomfield in bringing about the event.

"They're really the ones who got it started," said Susan Jurkiewicz of the OU alumni relations office.

"This really is an OU Alumni Association event," added Burt. "We've had homecomings before, but never anything on this scale."

To attend the reunion, or for more information, call the alumni association at 370-2158.

Nancy Diehl to address business group

Nancy Diehl, Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney, will be the featured speaker at the Thursday, Sept. 17, meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Organization.

Diehl, an advocate for children during her seven years as director of the child abuse unit for the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office, will discuss the community approach to child sexual abuse and empowering children in the criminal justice system.

A graduate of Wayne State University Law School, Diehl is a member of Gov. John Engler's Task Force on Children's Justice.

On the Board of Directors of the Out Wayne County Council on Child Abuse and Neglect since 1987, she received that organization's Service to Children Award in 1990.

A social hour begins at 6 p.m. followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m. and program at 7 p.m. The meeting will be held in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia (southeast corner of Schoolcraft and Levan roads off the Jeffries Freeway).

Cost is $7 per person which includes dinner and program.

Reservations must be made by noon Monday, Sept. 14 to Joyce Pappas of the Garden City BPW at 422-7030.

YWCA seeks achievement award nominees

The YWCA of Western Wayne County is seeking nominees for its first Women of Achievement awards luncheon, to be held in November.

"We want to honor women who have demonstrated outstanding leadership and excellence in their professional and personal endeavors for the betterment of the community," said Corinne Vincent, director of the YWCA of Western Wayne County.

The Women of Achievement program recognizes women who have distinguished themselves in the arts, business, education, government, the professions, or teen achievement.

Anyone may submit a name or names for consideration by contacting the YWCA for a nomination form.

The awards luncheon will be at noon on Friday, Nov. 13 in the Fairlane Club in Dearborn.

ROLL CALL REPORT

Senate blocks Treasury from paying for bilingual ballots

Here's how Observer & Eccentric-area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Aug. 14.

■ SENATE

No on paying for bilingual ballots: By a vote of 35 for and 60 against, the Senate refused to make the U.S. Treasury pick up the costs incurred by states and localities in complying with bilingual ballot legislation (HR 4312).

A yes vote supported federal payment of the cost of bilingual election materials. Sens. Carl Levin, D, and Donald Riegle, D, voted no.

Yes on transportation appropriations: By a vote of 74 for and 22 against, the Senate approved a bill to appropriate $13.5 billion for the Department of Transportation and related agencies in fiscal 1993, including $282 million for the Federal Highway Administration.

While the Senate version of the bill (HR 5518) authorizes no new congressionally mandated highways, it provides nearly $300 million for demonstration projects previously authorized by Congress.

A yes vote was to pass the bill. Carl Levin and Riegle voted no.

Yes on aid to Bosnia: The Senate passed, 74 for and 22 against, a non-binding resolution (S Res 330) urging the United Nations to use multinational military force to ensure that emergency food and medicine reaches civilians in wartown Bosnia-Hercegovina.

Supporter Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the international community has ignored too long a crisis "all too reminiscent of the atrocities perpetuated half a century ago by Nazi Germany."

"Let us not trip willy-nilly into a combat commitment of American GIs in the Balkans," said opponent Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

A yes vote was to approve the resolution. Carl Levin and Riegle voted yes.

No vote cuts SDI: The Senate failed, 43 for and 49 against, to spend even more money for the Strategic Defense Initiative during debate on a fiscal 1993 defense budget of $274 billion (S 3114).

The vote preserved an amendment trimming $1 billion from the $4.3 billion SDI level recommended by the Senate Armed Services Committee for the anti-missile defense system that would be based in space and on land. About $30 billion has been appropriated during SDI's 10 developmental years.

A no vote was to cut SDI by nearly 25 percent below the committee-approved level. Carl Levin and Riegle both voted no.

Yes to expand IRAs: The Senate voted 72 for and 25 against to expand individual retirement account tax benefits.

This retained language in pending tax legislation (HR 11) sharply raising income limits for the full $2,000 IRA deduction. This new limits would be $120,000 for couples and $80,000 for individuals, up from $40,000 and $25,000. The language creates a special IRA in which taxes are waived on withdrawals of non-deductible contributions held in savings at least five years.

A yes vote was to expand IRAs. Carl Levin and Riegle voted yes.

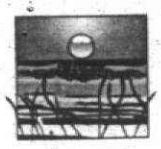
Conservationist: It's great outdoors



Robert Laich is retired from Ford Motor Co., but has turned his energies to conservation. He's the new president of the Michigan United Conservation Club, a powerful group of sportsmen who lobby the state to perserve wildlife habitat.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

This man can make you lose the end-of-summer blues.

Robert Laich, longtime president of a local conservation club headquartered in Plymouth Township, says the best season is just beginning.

"It's a fantastic time of year to be out in the field," Laich said, of approaching autumn.

"Whether you hunt or whether you don't, get out there early, an hour or so before sunrise. Lean back against a tree at about 5 o'clock in the morning.

"All of a sudden, some critter is starting to crunch something, a blue jay lets out a squawk, the place just comes alive."

Laich, was recently elected president of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, which have more than 130,000 members.

This week, Laich was scheduled to attend a lunch with Gov. John Engler at the Michigan State Fair. The MUCC is fighting Engler over his elimination of several wildlife-conservation related commissions and Engler's efforts to use money earmarked for conservation elsewhere in the state budget.

■ 'The public has public input. This is still our state — people want to have a little bit to say about this.'

Robert Laich

When a commission oversees such an area, "The public has public input," Laich explains. "This is still our state — people want to have a little bit to say about this."

Laich, 62, of Westland, says his favorite outdoor activities are bass fishing and pheasant hunting.

"I grew up on a farm near Ford and Wayne roads. You basically learn everything's got a reason for being, one thing depends on the other."

Knowing his interest in the outdoors, a friend once said he should look into the Western Wayne County Conservation Association. The club meets on Napier between North Territorial and Five Mile.

Before long, it was, "Why don't you run for a position in our organization?" Laich said. Now, the Ford Motor Co. retiree has served as president of the association, as MUCC Region IV vice president and five years as district chairman of the organization.

He's also received the Hackett Award last year, for outstanding service as a member.

A main goal of the MUCC is to maintain wildlife habitat. The group has supported the state's bottle bill and wetlands act, and the maintaining of a trust fund to buy recreational lands paid for by gas and oil drilling lease fees.

The western Wayne club is working with Browning-Ferris Industries to get a nature center going on 47 acres near the BFI dump near Five Mile Road in Salem Township.

Conservationist: Michigan United Conservation Clubs president Robert Laich first got active in conservation in Plymouth Township.

"We want to leave something for the future," Laich said.

Laich is considering a program to get retirees involved in reporting poachers. "The more eyes we've got looking, the more we can get accomplished."

In meeting with Department of Natural Resources people, Laich has been talking about "how we can figure out how to get more public access ramps to the Detroit River, Lake Erie, Lake St. Clair," for fishing.

Laich said he'd also like to see some action to stop the spreading of a plant native to the southern states that has been introduced here and is killing cattails and other plants native to wetlands.

The MUCC has been involved in a project to reintroduce trout to the west Rouge River, and is "working to get a fish ladder in Flat Rock," to boost the fish population in the Huron-Clinton metroparks system.

"I don't consider myself an environmentalist, I consider myself a conservationist," Laich said.

"I try to listen to their theories, but they don't want to look at the whole big picture," he said.

For example, at Kensington Metropark, "The paths are all covered with goose droppings," Laich said, adding that not managing wildlife leads to problems.

Area outdoors enthusiasts interested in joining the Western Wayne County Conservation Association can call Laich at 425-1685 for information.

Presidential visit

It's politics as usual

Autumn weather isn't the only thing that came early this year. The presidential campaign blew into Canton last week with all the subtlety of Hurricane Andrew.

In the wake of Hurricane George, the debate has centered on the question: Was it a campaign visit or a presidential visit?

It's one of those which came first, the chicken or the political party questions that will probably never be resolved. Both sides are right and wrong on this one. It was both and always will be unless we force a sitting president running for re-election to step down during the campaign year.

The anti-Bush folks contend the president used his office to make a campaign speech in Canton, taking advantage of local government. They also argue that protesters were denied freedom of speech because they weren't asked to get up on the podium with Bush.

They also want the Republicans to pay for every paper clip used that week in the Canton Township Hall.

None of those charges hold water. First of all, nobody's free speech was taken away. The idea behind it is to give everybody a voice, not an audience, they have to do that on their own.

The Bush rally was bought and paid for by the Republicans. It was their party and they had the right to make up the guest list.

Chances are Bill Clinton and company will do the same thing. There just isn't an obligation to invite party crashers.

But the Democrats and UAW folks who came to heckle the president weren't the only ones caught off base.

During the visit a legion of clean cut Republican kids worked the crowd making sure there were no offending signs and calling a photographer a "media faggot" for taking pictures of a demonstrator at the rally.

Many walked away from the rally with their political perspectives unchallenged, and that's probably why they came. The Republican faithful where there to hear "their president" and the Democrats were there to make trouble.

And it was all for television. Every candidate loves to see him or herself surrounded by red, white and blue in a clean, neat, middle America community like Canton.

It's what gets folks elected, and probably always will.

Get to work

Inaction lengthens state ballot

It's November 1994 and Michiganians will vote on:

- A proposal that could slash property taxes by 10-20 percent in big cities and up to 90 percent on lakefronts and other desirable living areas. The proposal was placed on the ballot after a statewide Realtors association gathered the required 275,000 signatures in a petition drive.
- A referendum that eliminates sales tax on big-ticket purchases. Metro Detroit car dealerships distributed petitions at summer tent sales and in showrooms.
- A Michigan Education Association-backed proposal that ties teacher salary increases directly to property assessments. Local PTAs collected the signatures for this one.

Of course, none of this is true. But neither are the proposals listed above all that far-fetched, given the current climate of inaction in Lansing.

It's time for the Michigan Legislature to shake off the cobwebs and go back to work.

Michigan's representatives and senators — frozen by special-interest politics and fear of voter reprisals — have pretty much abandoned their essential legislative duty. That is setting government policy.

The proof is on this November's ballot, where voters will decide on a rate reform proposal pushed by AAA, the state's largest auto insurer.

Without debating the merits of the AAA proposal, we are troubled by its necessity in the first place and the trend it signals.

Auto insurance executives were pushed into action by a legislature that, together with Gov. John Engler, waffled on any meaningful insurance reform bill. When Engler vetoed the compromise that eventually worked its way out of the House and Senate, there weren't enough votes to override.

Elected officials have taken nearly the same non-approach on all but a handful of major issues to pass through Lansing in recent years. Failing to pass workable legislation, they dump complex issues in the hands of voters, usually in competing ballot proposals that often end up canceling each other out.

School finance reform was the sacrificial issue two years ago.

This fall, in addition to the AAA proposal, voters get two options on property taxes.

Ballot initiatives are fine. And the Constitutions (both state and U.S.) are emphatic in the right of the people to decide.

But handing special interest groups and regional power brokers with considerable resources free reign over the ballot is neither practical nor ethical.

The solution is for our legislators to stop playing footsie with lobbyists, stop worrying about public opinion polls and start doing what taxpayers elect them for and pay them to do.

Legislate, guys. It's your job.

A treasure

I don't know if you're following the Tiger Stadium controversy at all, but there is always a lot of controversy on the topic because everyone has an opinion on it, strong opinions. With this in mind, as University of Michigan film students, Eddie Neuwirth and I made a 26-minute documentary on the issue called "Shared Treasures: The Battle for Tiger Stadium." The film explores the controversy and includes interviews with former Tigers' announcer Ernie Harwell, Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara, actor/comedian Thom Sharp, musician Mike Ridley and the Tiger Stadium Fan Club.

Since the film's release a few months ago, it is sold in stores on video cassette and out of our home (for only $12 plus $1.50 shipping). "Baseball Weekly" ran an article on June 3, and since then we get calls and letters from all over the nation asking about our film and where to buy it (almost 150). The point is, people are very interested in this topic.

The film is good, has been on the news, people are interested in the topic, and it's a professional film made by students. Because you are a city near Detroit, I'm sure your residents have opinions on the topic.

PHILIP POWER

■ In these days of TV-driven politics, both parties have tended to bring in as many people as possible, to fudge their differences, to occupy the middle of the spectrum. Lee Atwater, the late national GOP chair, put it best when he talked about the necessity of the Republican Party's being "one big tent" in the context of the abortion issue.

In the good ol' days, presidential candidates used the Labor Day weekend to rouse the troops on Detroit's Cadillac Square. This year the crowds will be sparse, the streets dirty, the candidates somehow less mythic. But the stakes will be just as high, maybe higher.

Michigan, the archetypical example of the hollowing out of America's manufacturing might, will be a key state in determining the next president.

Following the state Republican and Democratic conventions last weekend, the Labor Day break offers a time for a few reflections before we are overwhelmed by political hype and pander.

A political party defines itself by determining "what to keep in, what to keep out," as the Bob Seger song says. Whom you try to attract or repel will define what your party is, what it stands for, to what swing groups it can appeal.

In these days of TV-driven politics, both parties have tended to bring in as many people as possible, to fudge their differences, to occupy the middle of the spectrum. Lee Atwater, the late national GOP chair, put it best when he talked about the necessity of the Republican Party's being "one big tent" in the context of the abortion issue.

So I was surprised to listen to the different rhetoric coming out of the national and then the Michigan state conventions last weekend.

Republicans were full of talk that I can describe only as exclusionary. Speakers defined the party in terms of what it was against.

Homosexuals and lesbians, certainly. Mothers who chose to work rather than staying home with the kids, probably. People who had been divorced or had a single-parent family, maybe. Taxers and liberals, by all means.

The litmus test, of course, was opposition to abortion. Gov. John Engler won the major fight of the convention when his candidate for the University of Michigan Board of Regents was opposed by Right to Life of Michigan because she was insufficiently ferocious in her opposition to abortion rights.

By contrast, the Democrats (for once thinking seriously they might win the presidency) were full of inclusionary talk. I heard the phrase "one big tent" more than once last weekend in Detroit.

Why the difference? History, as usual. The Republican coalition that has dominated American politics for the last 20 years appears to be falling apart.

Southern conservatives, Bloomfield Hills business types, anti-abortion blue-collar families from western Wayne and Macomb counties all could rally behind a program featuring social values, opposition to taxes and anti-Communism. But now that the Cold War is over and the spiraling deficit has gutted traditional economic theory, splits are starting to show up between the component groups.

And any complex group whose constituents are pulling in different directions is likely to value highly doctrinal purity. This entails defining who and what are out in exclusionary rhetoric.

Whether that gets votes in November remains to be seen.

Postal problems

The residents and business people of the Plymouth community are being conned by the Postal Service.

How many of you realize the downtown post office which has been there for 57 years is closed on Saturday mornings? Not many I'm sure, based upon the numbers of you I saw walk up those steps, try the door, look for a sign, shake your heads and walk off last Saturday. After noticing the first five people in less than five minutes, I realized what was going on and stopped them before they climbed the steps. After driving over three miles to mail my package, I discovered that our post office downtown will continue to be closed on Saturdays.

Then, have you tried to do business at the downtown post office at lunch time? They are closed. Isn't that quaint?

I've lived here for over 30 years, raised a family in this community, have a business on Main Street and I am president of the Chamber of Commerce. My family has enjoyed all the benefits of having a downtown — the shopping, the market, the festivals, the concerts, the camaraderie and the opportunity to stroll in this wonderful town.

I dislike what I see the Postal Service is doing to "My Plymouth." They promise us a downtown facility after our tax dollars buy their building — but will they have the dollars to staff it?

I urge each of you and those who walked up those stairs to write all your present representatives in all phases of government as well as those running against them. Try the new Postmaster General. He is said to be service oriented.

Don't let the Postal Service contribute to the deterioration of the central core of the Plymouth community.

Bush visit helpful

What a great day for the Canton Community. Regardless of a person's political beliefs, it has to be a good feeling to know that politics and visits by a president can pull people together in a very positive way. I doubt that I will vote for George Bush but I certainly felt good knowing that my good neighbors from Plymouth, Northville and Livonia had an opportunity to visit a growing dynamic community, and observe first hand the beautiful Heritage Park and all the planning that is going into developing a first class recreation center!

I encourage those that visited the rally to come back and see more of Canton. Come and visit the Annual Liberty Fest, attend our Annual Celebrate Canton Dinner Dance, or even sign up for our communitywide Canton Night at EMU on Oct. 3. And don't forget the high energy Canton Economic Club meetings.

The Canton leaders should be congratulated for seizing the moment and saying yes to a visit by President George Bush. Yes, even if it was a political visit, the assurances of payment by the Bush Quayle Committee are enough to make this Democrat say "Right On" Canton. Congratulations on a job well done.

R. William Joyner, Plymouth Township

Visit spoiled

Being a native Michiganian, I felt proud to see President Bush visit our fair township. Canton has been one of the nation's fastest growing communities. Here recently roamed the fox and deer — here, the colorful pheasant graced the sky — here flourished beautiful wild flowers — here swam fish in winding creeks.

Now Canton is a mushroomed galaxy of modern houses, garages and paved roads. Here shopping centers adorn the mosaic landscape — here historical green houses still flourish and there is also an airport. Canton is a pluralistic community of people. We Cantonites were honored to have the president stop here at Heritage Park during his busy schedule recently.

As an American, I found it appalling that certain Democratic activists pushed their way into obstructing the president's message by heckling. There is something drastically wrong with our judicial system when even a President is not respected in public. It was the same tactic used by radicals in the notorious '70s. I am sure President Bush drew more respect by the audience because of the ludicrous heckling. This kind of nonsense is an offense to the lawful right to freedom of speech. It should be outlawed now and forever. It's not the American way to the pursuit of life, liberty, happiness and peace.

Charles Zazula, Canton

No sense

I listened to Warren Pierce on WJR today. He was interviewing the president of the National Federation of Teachers Union. He was complaining that the teachers' wages hadn't kept up with inflation. Our local teachers are with another union (NEA) and that isn't the case in Plymouth and Northville.

Plymouth teachers received a 7½ percent increase for six years. A teacher making $40,000 at the beginning of the contract will be making $61,732 at the end. You think you have problems today, wait until next year. The board will really be screaming.

A caller asked why they ever approved a smoking section for students. That shows we have had educated lame brains on our school boards and they finally got up enough guts this year to take care of the situation.

Why should voters approve more millage when the school board approves a $7,200 lease per year on a Cadillac for the superintendent? For his $109,000 salary he can afford his own Cadillac. The board doesn't show any common sense so what do they expect. Do they think the voters are nincompoops?

My Ford Crown Victoria LX gets me every place his Cadillac does at one half the price with the same comfort.

I don't worry about prestige at 69. I am just happy as hell being alive and well.

Dean H. Lenheiser, Plymouth

Rude majority

Yesterday, I took my children to Heritage Park to see the president. Despite the fact that I believe another four years of Bush's presidency would be even more disastrous for America than his first four years have proven to be, an opportunity to see the president of the United States was one I did not want my children to miss.

As the president began to speak, a young man in front of us held up his Bill Clinton sign. One young man, holding one sign, making no comments. He was harassed for the remainder of the rally as Bush supporters rounded up bigger and bigger signs, handing them to people around him to hold in front of him.

I doubt that anyone in our general area actually heard much of the president's speech, as we were distracted by the ridiculous antics of those who felt this man had no right to stand there very quietly expressing his displeasure by holding a Clinton sign that I'm sure Mr. Bush would never have seen anyway from our position behind the privileged "blue ticket" crowd.

My children and I came away from the rally having learned this lesson — the right of free speech belongs to the majority and the rude. There is no right of free speech in America to those who attempt to make their point in a quiet, peaceful, respectful, polite manner.

Lois Carlson, Canton

No respect

Picture this if you will. It's 12:20 a.m. on a Monday night and you are driving home from a friend's house. Your speed is between 42 and 45 miles per hour on Ann Arbor Road. Suddenly you see a flash of blue and red. It's a cop. You pull over and wonder what the problem could be.

Here's the problem. Five teenagers pull on to Ann Arbor Road from Harvey at 12:18 a.m. on August 17th. The destination is to drive a friend home in Plymouth Township, that's me. As I was giving the driver directions the same blue and red flashes appeared. We stopped and waited with confused looks.

An officer appears at the side of our Escort and asks the driver for his license, registration and insurance. Naturally the driver is shaken up so I find all the paperwork for the officer. As the driver hands over his identification the officer says, "She's on the ball." Some humor.

The officer then asks us a series of questions such as: "Where are you going?" and "Where did you come from?" We told him we just came from a friend's house. His reply was, "I don't know your friend." Then the big question, "Is there any alcohol in the car?" Our reply is no of course. But inside my head I was thinking "Well we did consume three bags of Orville Redenbacher's Microwave Popcorn. How would that test?"

Finally he walks back to his vehicle and checks us out. Once he returns he questions us more. The officer asks the driver why he isn't wearing his glasses. "I'm wearing my contacts," replies the driver most respectfully. "Well I'm not about to have you pop them out," the officer says sarcastically as he shines a flashlight in the driver's eyes. I assume it was to check for the contacts. I guess my friend's Escort had a burned out license plate light, because that was all the officer could find.

All teens are not alike. All adults are not alike. Perhaps if adults in authority could see fit to treat teens with respect until that respect is no longer deserved, they might receive that same respect in return.

When my routine pregnancy suddenly wasn't...

I was glad I'd chosen Hutzel. From the beginning, my pregnancy was described as "normal." So when I wanted a private room—one where labor, delivery, and recovery could all take place—my doctor had no objections. But if something went wrong

I wanted to know my baby and I would also have the most knowledgeable specialists and the latest medical technology nearby. So I chose The Detroit Medical Center's Hutzel Hospital.

To my surprise, Hutzel's private LDRP (Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Post-Partum) rooms were among the most spacious and beautiful I'd seen. I was glad I could be in one—and that I'd chosen Hutzel. Because at the last minute, my baby developed complications and a team of Hutzel specialists was right there to provide the care we both needed.

Like a lot of other women, I've learned there's no such thing as a "routine" pregnancy. Thank goodness there's Hutzel Hospital.

Mother-daughter team

They share Madonna classes, career goals

They care for children who are victims of domestic violence, take classes at the same university and place a high priority on physical exercise. This mother and daughter team from Royal Oak have a lot in common, particularly their interest in children.

Maida Dresbach works full-time as the director of child care at Pontiac Area Transitional Housing (PATH). Daughter, Elizabeth, works as a library assistant at Troy Public Library and also cares for the children at PATH on a part-time basis.

Both are students at Madonna University in Livonia. Maida is majoring in child development with a minor in psychology and Elizabeth is majoring in English with a minor in early childhood education. Maida plans to go on to get a master's degree in infant mental health, while Elizabeth plans to teach grades K-3.

■ 'We do spend a lot of hours together between work and school, but it's always fun.'
Maida Dresbach

"We do spend a lot of hours together between work and school, but it's always fun," said Maida. "We've even been in some of the same classes. I try to let Elizabeth be with her friends, but when we were in the same music class, she came and sat with me."

Maida has an associate degree in early childhood from Oakland Community College and has worked as assistant director in OCC's Child Care Center before moving on to PATH. She finds her current position rewarding in many ways.

"I'm primarily in charge of taking care of children whose mothers are attending classes, seeking counseling or searching the job market," says Maida. "We've made tremendous progress. When I first started there were only five children enrolled. Now we have 31 kids whose families are getting a better chance in life," she added.

Besides studying to become a teacher and helping her mother at PATH, Elizabeth coaches fifth and sixth graders in cheerleading at Guardian Angels Catholic School in Clawson.

"Our cheerleading team won first place in the Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) competition, and I was named coach of the year," said Elizabeth.

And Elizabeth isn't the only physically active one in the family. Maida wouldn't miss her daily workout.

"I'm really a fanatic. No matter how busy my schedule, I make sure I swim and walk each morning," says Maida. "I even take water aerobics with my husband several evenings a week."

Although their study habits tend to differ — Maida studies during the day while the children nap and on weekends, and Elizabeth, primarily in the evenings — the two work together on certain things.

"I help my mother when she needs an assignment done on the computer and when projects come up we collaborate," Elizabeth says.

The program that Elizabeth is enrolled in at Madonna is new to the university this fall. It is now possible to receive an elementary education certificate with the early childhood endorsement at the undergraduate level.

"Upon completion of this program, students will be certified by the state to teach their major in grades K-8, all subjects in grades K-5, and will receive the early childhood endorsement," explains Bess Kypros, director of early childhood education and child development at Madonna.

Teamwork: Maida and Elizabeth Dresbach, a mother-daughter team at Madonna College, have a lot in common — particularly their interest in children.

Rocks repeat as tourney champs

Plymouth Salem won the Plymouth Invitational, an annual boys soccer tournament, for the sixth time in nine years Saturday with a 2-1 victory over Plymouth Canton.

BY LARRY O'CONNOR
STAFF WRITER

In Europe, it's called a derby.

There, teams from the same city or region do battle on the soccer pitch, dueling fiercely in evenly matched affair where there is little regard for records or stately appearance.

Rank any Canton-Salem match in that category. On Saturday, the Rocks edged the Chiefs 2-1 in the Plymouth Invitational Soccer Tournament at Griffin Park.

A goal on a sterling individual effort by Salem midfielder Mike Kley in the 65th minute capped off a furious 80 minutes of soccer befit any Glasgow Rangers-Celtic or Inter-A.C. Milan encounter.

The result provided the Rocks a 3-0 start to their season, which has included downing Brighton last week and Portage Central in the tournament semifinal. Moreover, the victory provides another scratch of achievement on the Salem side of the ledger against a chief rival.

The euphoria and dejection is always short-lived, though, with knowledge the two teams will meet again during the course of the season.

"It's not going to hurt us for the season," said Canton coach Don Smith, whose team was 1-1. "It will be all right."

"The win does give you a lift," said Salem coach Ken Johnson, betraying a hint of self-contained glee.

A Canton-Salem match always provides moments worthy to be framed. There were plenty of those Saturday.

One would likely recall the free kick from 18 yards out by lanky Salem midfielder Tom Baker that deflected off a Canton defender and into the net. The goal, which came in the 20th minute, gave the Rocks a short-lived 1-0 lead.

Another sparkling play resulted in the game-tying goal by Canton. Salem forward Mark MacGinnis broke free of some tight marking and blasted a shot from 10 yards out at Canton's all-state candidate goalkeeper Ryan Henkel, who wrestled the drive to the ground.

Henkel then rushed the ball up field, which eventually found its way to Chiefs front liner Kirk Wahtera, who promptly buried a 16-yard shot past Rocks' keeper Paul Dood. The goal came in the 37th minute.

Dood provided his own goalkeeping heroics. Midway through the second half, Canton's Jeff Fliss headed down what seemed to be a sure goal before Dood dove to his right and grabbed the shot.

The save gave Salem inspiration. Baker, who moved up front in the second half, sent Kley free along the right flank. The crafty midfielder weaved through two Canton defenders.

Chiefs inexperienced but show potential

Plymouth Canton's football team is dominated by youth and inexperience but also has the potential for rapid growth and success.

The Chiefs, who open Friday with a home game against Monroe, have 16 seniors on their team, which consists mostly of juniors. Two sophomores will start on the varsity.

In addition to putting a good many new players into action, Canton will play a new defense this year, making the transition from a 5-2 to 4-4.

"I'm excited about this team and this year," coach Bob Khoenle said. "I think we have the people who can do a lot of things on offense. The defense is new and the kids are responding to it. I'm eager to see what we can do.

"I feel real comfortable with this group, more so this time than last year. We have a good team atmosphere."

The Chiefs dropped to 3-6 last year following a 9-2 season in which they made the state playoffs for the first time. Canton arguably could have been 5-4 a year ago had close losses to Northville (28-23) and Livonia Franklin (6-3) gone the other way.

"We have a good chance to win more than we lose," Khoenle said. "It depends how things go. We're young but have a good blend of seniors. We're hoping to progress and get better each week.

"The question is 'Will our kids adapt to the new defense and will our youth get going fast enough?' "

The Chiefs have an experienced quarterback in junior Kevin Shankie (5-10, 175), who started last year with the exception of a couple games when he was injured. Junior Scott Valimont (6-1, 150) is his backup.

The fullback is sophomore Mike Marsh (6-1, 230), a fine athlete with a lot of desire, according to Khoenle. The tailback will be sophomore Lenny Gardner (5-8, 160), who has "great running instincts" and rushed for 1,000 yards on the freshman team.

Other backs are senior Neil Haremski (5-10, 165) and juniors Eric Arnold (6-0, 185), Steve Acevedo (5-10, 160), Brett Neiiendam (5-6, 140) and Sam Stafford (6-1, 230), who moved here from Maryland.

"All of them are good runners, and I wouldn't hesitate to use any of them in a minute," Khoenle said.

Shankie will have big passing targets in junior letterman Tim Moritz (6-2, 180), junior Ryan Ostach (6-3, 185) and senior tri-captain Mark Koziol (6-2, 180). The tight end is junior Chris Mazur (6-0, 175).

Breaking in a new offensive line is a major concern for the Chiefs. Senior Bill Talbot (5-10, 210) takes over at center for senior Rich LaBret (5-8, 185), who moves to guard.

Junior Stu Hayes (5-9, 185) started at guard until he was injured in the fourth game last year, and junior Tom Tsallis (5-9, 155) and senior tri-captain Matt Horn (6-1, 195) also are guard prospects.

Seniors Tom Raven (6-3, 210), the other tri-captain, and Albert Hollingsworth lettered last year and will start at the offensive tackles. Other linemen are junior John Mogelnicki (6-1, 185), senior John Bauman (5-10, 205), junior Keith Larson (6-2, 190) and junior Dan Reese (6-4, 200).

"They're doing a pretty good job up to this point," said Khoenle of his linemen. "It's a matter of them not having enough playing time. They have to learn and get experience."

Khoenle said the Canton coaches thought the 4-4 defense suited their personnel and hope it will confuse the opposing line's blocking schemes.

The defensive line will have Stafford and Bauman at the tackles, Raven and Mazur at the ends. Marsh, Talbot, Mogelnicki, Hollingsworth and Reese will play, too.

Horn is a returning starter at inside linebacker, and the other will be either junior Tony DeGiorgio (5-11, 180), junior Willy Linsgesedor (5-8, 160) or LaBret.

Spitz returns to coach Canton runners

BY NEAL ZIPSER
SPECIAL WRITER

When Mike Spitz returned to coach Plymouth Canton cross country this season, he might have pinched himself to make sure he wasn't dreaming.

"It's like night and day from when I coached," he admitted.

When Spitz coached the Chiefs in the 1970s until 1981, the squad was well back in the Western Lakes Activities Association pack.

"We were 0 and forever back then," Spitz said. "I can remember when we won our first dual meet. We were working for respectability back then, and we weren't worried about winning championships."

But in 1981, Spitz left coaching and teaching to pursue a career in hospital management. Jim Hayes entered and developed Canton into a title contender. In 1989, the Chiefs won the conference title and finished seventh in Class A.

Hayes retired last season and Spitz decided to return to education and inherit a substantially different program.

"When I woke up in the mornings, I would think about 'What do I really enjoy doing,' " Spitz said. "I've always enjoyed teaching. When I decided to return to education, returning to Canton was my first pick.

"One of the most important things in a good program is consistency in coaching and Jim gave that to Canton. The goals now are a lot different from when I was here."

David Washenko and Chris Burns are the only runners lost from last season's team, which finished third in the Western Division and fourth overall in the WLAA.

Sophomore Kasey Moothart, a qualifier for the state meet as a freshman last season, returns to lead the Chiefs and appears to have kept himself in excellent shape, Spitz said.

Seniors Shawn McNamara, David Yack and Michael Boland will share Canton's captain responsibilities.

"They are three hard workers," Spitz said. "They are good leaders and will set good examples for the underclassmen, as well as contributing in terms of scoring."

Seniors Kevin Guteth, Justin McClain, David Stroscheim and Tom DeGiorgio also will be important for scoring.

"We have a good group of hard working seniors," Spitz said. "You can tell Jim did a good job installing a work ethic in the runners."

Juniors Jeff Keith and Todd Smith, along with sophomores Augie Ray, Brian Crocket, Colin Astley and Chris Boland are also fighting it out for spots on the varsity team.

Spitz is impressed with the running of freshman Ian Bedford, who is competing for one of the final openings. Freshmen Erik McClain and Brandon Hartke have also shown promise.

"I'm not sure who will start off running for us," Spitz said. "We have nine or 10 runners who are battling it out for spots and that's a good problem to have."

With Spitz returning to the team's helm, and to the classroom as a life science teacher, he can't stop feeling fortunate.

"I feel fortunate that Jim has built a solid program," Spitz said. "I also feel lucky that he has left me a good group of hard workers who are interested and excited about what they're doing."

"We have set some goals for this season, one being that everyone on the team achieve a 3.0 grade-point average and that everybody supports each other on and off the track. That is important."

Chiefs romp past Powers

Plymouth Canton outscored visiting Flint Powers 23-6 in the third quarter Saturday en route to a 75-48 victory in the season opener for both teams.

Powers, the defending Class B champion, trailed 34-27 entering the second half before the Chiefs relied on aggressive defense to pull away.

"We didn't do anything different in the second half. I just think Powers got fatigued," Canton coach Bob Blohm said. "Our defense got some scores for us. We got some layups and easy baskets in transition."

Senior Stephanie Gray paced the Canton attack with 15 points and 10 rebounds. Junior guard Alyson Noune netted 11 points, while junior Britta Anderson and senior Christie Saffron scored 10 apiece.

The Chiefs shot 51 percent (32-of-63) from the floor and converted 71 percent (10-of-14) of their free throws.

"It was a good opener," Blohm said. "Everyone had the opportunity to play and everyone scored."

Powers lost several of its top players from last year's championship season and will be rebuilding this year, according to Blohm.

Shelley Waggoner led Powers with 15 points. Darci Stocker and Katie Cushman added 13 and 12 for the Chargers, respectively.

Canton soccer rebounds

Behind hat tricks from Graham Wilk and Mike Hayes, Plymouth Canton rebounded from a tough, weekend loss in boys soccer and defeated host Ann Arbor Huron 6-2 on Monday.

The Chiefs (2-1), who lost to Plymouth Salem 2-1 in the final of the Plymouth Invitational Saturday, took the lead on Wilk's first goal and never looked back.

"We played well against Salem but not well enough to win," Canton coach Don Smith said. "We stepped it up a notch against Ann Arbor, which is a good team. We finished a little better, and that's the objective of the game — to put the ball in the net."

Wilk, a sophomore forward, opened the scoring after receiving a pass from Chad Dale. Mike Hayes gave Canton a 2-0 lead at the half with an assist by Paul Gumber.

Wilk found the net two more times to open the second half. Jeff Fliss and Jeff Cohen received an assist on Wilk's second and third goals, respectively.

"Graham scored seven goals last season as a freshman and is a good solid player," Smith said. "He has good ball control and is a good passer."

Hayes, a senior forward, scored Canton's final two goals. Cohen added an assist on the final goal. Goalkeeper Ryan Henkel shut out Huron during his 55 minutes in the nets.

● Anthony Verino scored on a penalty shot with only eight minutes remaining to give host Redford Catholic Central a 3-2 boys soccer triumph over Dearborn Tuesday at Bell Creek Park.

Junior midfielders Rich Walos and Matt Kopmeyer also scored goals for the Shamrocks, now 2-0 overall.

The teams were tied at 1-1 at intermission. CC outshot the Pioneers, 16-6.

Kicks are tourney winners

August was a good month for the 1981 and the 1982 Plymouth Kicks Premier boys soccer teams.

The 1981 Kicks won two tournaments to end the month. After claiming the Maumee (Ohio) International Soccer Festival two weeks ago, the Kicks captured the under-12 division of the Dearborn Invitational last weekend by shutting out crosstown rival Canton Magic 2-0.

In semifinal action, the Kicks defeated the Waterford Warriors 8-1. Their previous games ended in a 3-1 win over the host Dearborn Cougars, a 2-0 win over the Birmingham Burners and a 7-2 rout of Sterling Heights.

The 1981 Kicks are coached by Paul Kogut and Watson Zdrodowski. Team members include Nick Bostic, Jacob Gray, Patrick Griffin, Jeremy Hornak, Andrew Kogut, Chris Longpre, Aaron MacDonald, Jason Mayol, Kirt McKee, Aaron Rypkowski, Michael Slack, Brett Stinar, Ken Szydlowski, Dan Wielechowski, Brian Wozniak and Tim Zdrodowski.

The 1982 Kicks weren't to be outdone as they also won two tournaments in August, including the under-11 division in the Maumee tournament.

The Kicks shut out the Troy Thunder 4-0 in the championship game. The march to the title began with a 3-1 victory over the Genessee Star Elite followed by a 2-1 defeat of the Fraser Strikers, a 2-1 win over the Pacesetters and a 5-2 rout of the Whitehouse Warriors in the semifinal game.

The Kicks were coming off a win in the Jarosi Invitational in Columbus, Ohio.

Prep gridders gear up for weekend tests

By Brad Emons and Dan O'Meara
Staff Writers

PREDICTIONS

Pigskin predictions are back with a slew of weekend action, primarily all non-league encounters.

The reigning champion is the smiling Irishman (O'Meara), who hit the century mark last year, correctly picking 100 of 131 games last season.

Meanwhile, the frowning Welshman (Emons) is looking for a quick start after going 94-37 a year ago.

The first week is always the most difficult — it's time to wing it.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
(all 7:30 unless noted)

Westland Glenn at Det. Murray-Wright (3:30 p.m.): Glenn returns only three starters from last year's 7-2 squad, but some talented underclassmen are ready to step in. Murray-Wright, 2-7 a year ago, features one of the state's top college prospects in two-way back Kyle Taylor, who rushed for close to 1,000 yards last year. Quarterback William Messenger is also a threat to break the big one, while Jerry Jeter is a top-notch two-way tackle. Linebacker/guard Terry Parson is also tough. PICKS — The Rockets '92 launch is a successful one.

Liv. Churchill at Dearborn (4 p.m.): Churchill coach Steve Naumcheff makes his debut with the Chargers (0-9) in a rare Friday afternoon encounter against the host Pioneers (6-3). This is a battle between pay-to-participate districts. PICKS — Dearborn gets its money's worth.

Liv. Franklin at Lake Orion (7 p.m.): The Dragons have a new coach in North Farmington High product Rich Burrell, who is taking over for Mike Berry. Quarterback Maison Robertson is also coming off knee surgery, while junior Kurt Dubowski returns at running back. Franklin, meanwhile, is optimistic that a big season is at hand. PICKS — O'Meara likes the Patriots, but Emons says Orion is tough to beat at home.

Bishop Borgess vs. Portland St. Patrick (7 p.m. at Garden City Junior High): Portland St. Pat's (12-1) went all the way to the Class D state championship game in 1991 before losing to Frankfort at the Silverdome. Only five starters return for the Shamrocks. Borgess (5-4), meanwhile, promises a wide-open offense under first-year coach Craig James, who guided Allen Park Cabrini to a 6-3 record last season. PICKS — O'Meara feels lucky with the Shamrocks, but Emons likes Borgess.

Garden City at Dbp. Hts. Crestwood: The Cougars are determined to do better than last year's 1-8 record with added size and strength up front. Crestwood (8-2), a Class BB playoff qualifier a year ago, will miss running back Chuck Reynolds, but fields a team with good size. PICKS — GC pulls the surprise, Emons says, but O'Meara sticks with Crestwood.

Redford Union at Liv. Stevenson: This long-standing season-opening rivalry has been dominated by Stevenson (4-5), but RU (5-4) is always within striking distance. Micah Lietzau is Stevenson's main offensive weapon, while RU hopes to make up for the loss of quarterback Brian Theis. PICKS — Both prognosticators like the host Spartans.

Adrian at Wayne Memorial: Word has it that Adrian may be the top teams in the state. The Maples reached the state Class AA semifinals before being spanked by Saginaw Arthur Hill, 29-0, Ironically, Adrian starts its season opener to Wayne (4-5), 20-19. PICKS — Adrian is tough to stop, both agree.

Ply. Salem at Trenton: The Rocks (7-3), a Class AA playoff qualifier a year ago, were hard hit by graduation. Ply. wing back Rob Shepley and linebacker Andy Sydlowski return for the Rocks. Trenton, meanwhile, is trying to avoid another 0-9 season, but word is the Trojans are much improved. PICKS — Emons says the Rocks are solid in their opener, but O'Meara tries Trenton.

Monroe at Ply. Canton: The young Chiefs (3-6) are somewhat of a mystery squad, while Monroe (3-6), home of the Lazy-Boy chairs, unveils a new coaching staff. This battle could go down to the wire, perhaps even overtime. PICKS — It's a tossup, but Emons votes for Canton, while O'Meara says Monroe will by sitting in the recliner.

SATURDAY'S GAMES
(all 1 p.m. unless noted

Dbn. Divine Child at Farm. Harrison: Is this supposed to be the year that Harrison, defending state Class BB champions, becomes human again? Word has it that only four seniors are starting for the Hawks, leaving the rebuilding task up to underclassmen. DC, meanwhile, is loaded for bear in the Catholic League's AA Division of tailback Joe Bourcher, who had 700 yards in six games last year. Quarterback Steve Guibord is a threat to pass, while other standouts include tight end/linebacker David Terski, a college prospect, and fullback/linebacker Kevin Babcock. PICKS — When was the last time two sports writers picked against Harrison?

W. Bloomfield at Farmington: The Falcons were improved last year under second-year coach Bernie Call, going 4-5. Farmington, however, lost a ton of starters, including All-Area linebacker Matt Siskosky. The Lakers went 7-2 last year, losing 19 starters. Coach Joe Brandell is rebuilding, but West Bloomfield owns a 5-0 record in the series against Farmington (since 1987), including a scoring margin of 126-24. PICKS — The Lakers will be sailing, both agree.

Pontiac Northern at N. Farmington: This could be a high-scoring affair featuring two of the top backs in Oakland County. All-American Charles Talley (1,490 yards) leads the Huskies, while Todd Anderson (1,175) counters for North. Remember, Pontiac Northern (6-3) beat the Raiders (6-4) in last year's opener. Picks — North avenges last year's loss, both concur.

St. Agatha at Red. Thurston: A unique and rare matchup between two area schools. The Aggies (8-2) went to the Class C state playoffs last season, but lost top backs Cardell Davis and Pete Mulka to graduation. Thurston (2-7) returns quarterback John Adams and receiver Jeff Lance. PICKS — The Aggies have the edge, O'Meara says, but Emons flies with the Eagles.

Lutheran Westland at Cardinal Mooney: The Warriors (4-5) have a lot of untested varsity players while the Cardinals (2-7) will run a varied Wing-T offense and a 4-4 defense under first-year coach Phil Coles, who returns 15 seniors on his 30-player roster, led by fullback/linebacker Mark Bajis, tackle Chris Fraley and quarterback/defensive end Mike Ward. PICKS — The Warriors do a dance, O'Meara says but Emons likes the Cards he's been dealt.

Redford CC vs. Toledo St. John's (7 p.m. at Silverdome): The Shamrocks (11-2) are loaded up front, led by Dan Liebau and Aaron Babicz, but Toledo St. John's, 8-3 a year ago, is predicted by the experts to win the city championship. St. John's has 32 seniors, including 17 returning letter winners and eight returning starters. Ryan Daniels, 6-foot-5, 255 pounds, is a preseason All-American. The quarterback is converted wide receiver Chad Maxon. PICKS — The Silverdome is home-sweet-home for CC.

Clarenceville at C.L. St. Clement (7:30 p.m.): The Trojans (1-8) are going with the Wing-T under first-year coach Russ McKenzie, who went 1-4 last year as interim coach. St. Clement (6-4), which made the Class D state playoffs last year, will miss tight end Mike Sakalas (Iowa State), but return tailback/defensive back Ray Henke (1,200 yards rushing and 400 receiving) and quarterback Phil Doherty (1,300 yards passing). PICKS — St. Clement's Crusaders cannot be stopped, both agree.

Blazers upset Saginaw in hoop final

By Brad Emons
Staff Writer

The girls basketball season has hardly started, but adjustments already need to be made in the state rankings.

Livonia Ladywood broke in its new 1.7-million gym in a big way Saturday night, scoring a 69-61 victory over No. 1-rated Saginaw.

Sparked by the efforts of tournament most valuable player Mary Jo Kelly and sophomore Tara Overaitis, the Blazers not only won their own invitational championship, but also served notice to state's other contending teams in Class A.

Ladywood also held 5-foot-6 Erinn Reed, considered the state's top player, to 21 points on 10-of-21 shooting. Reed had 11 in the fourth quarter, but the visiting Trojans could get no closer than four points during the final eight minutes.

Kelly, a 5-8 senior forward, was deadly for Ladywood from outside, hitting five three-pointers en route to a 21-point performance.

And the 5-10 Overaitis turned in a Larry Bird-type performance, scoring 21 points (on 10-of-15 shooting), to go along with 11 rebounds. She also helped break Saginaw's full-court pressure with some steady ball-handling and passing.

"Mary Jo played super both offensively and defensively, and she hit some big threes for us," Ladywood coach Ed Kavanaugh said. "And Tara was our big-play person. When we needed a board (rebound), she was there. When we needed a bucket, she was there."

Ladywood committed 22 turnovers (to Saginaw's 18), but the Trojans converted few into points.

"I thought we handled their pressure well for the most part," Kavanaugh said. "In fact, we looked at breaking their press with a chance to score a layup."

Saginaw hit its first four shots to go up 8-3, but the Blazers trailed by only four after period, 17-13.

Ladywood pulled out to a 33-27 halftime lead after outscoring the Trojans 20-12 in the second period.

In the third quarter, Ladywood went up by as many as 10 on Tracy Prybylski's layup with 5:13 to go.

Saginaw then closed the gap to four on two different occasions, both near the end of the period and the start of the fourth, but couldn't get over the hump.

Kelly nailed a pair of three-pointers, at 6:48 and 4:54, to give Ladywood cushions of 10 and 11 points. Andrea Putti's basket with 3:45 remaining pushed the Blazers ahead 58-51. They were never behind the rest of the way despite shooting only 13 of 29 from the free throw stripe (44.8 percent).

The key, however, was holding the cat-quick Reed to 11 points through the first three quarters.

"We used a lot of double teams against her," Kavanaugh said. "We wanted Mary Jo to slow her down and have the others help out.

"But there's only so much you can do against a player of that caliber. We knew she was going to score points, but we wanted to hold everyone else down."

Guard Tanisha Johnson, another All-Tourney pick, and Jessica Perkins, added 13 points each for Saginaw. But the Trojans seemed out of sync all night, even with No. 1 fan Mark Macon of the Denver Nuggets in attendance. (Macon played under Reed's father, Norwaine, at Saginaw Buena Vista.)

Jacinta Seals, a 6-3 senior, got into foul trouble early in the second half. The Trojans also felt they got the short end of the foul differential, going to the line only 12 times and hitting four.

"It's a learning situation. Maybe we need a rude awakening this early in the season," Saginaw coach James Milan said. "I thought we played well under the conditions. Sometimes the officiating can intimidate players, but I don't want take anything away from Ladywood because they're a good team."

Officials aside, the only thing that could be taken away on this night was Saginaw's No. 1 ranking, compliments of Ladywood.

Canton free throws stop Kettering cagers

Free throws by Stephanie Gray and Alyson Noune helped Plymouth Canton secure a 39-34 win over host Waterford Kettering in girls basketball Tuesday.

The Chiefs (2-0) led by one point with 2¼ minutes remaining when Gray and Noune sank two free throw each.

Canton's edge was at the line, in fact. The Chiefs made 11 of 15 chances, Kettering (1-1) four of six.

Gray scored a game-high 14 points. Amy Westerhold (eight steals) and Noune six each. Jori Welchans came off the bench to grab nine rebounds. Amber Simmons led the Captains with nine points.

Junior Britta Anderson, who injured a knee last spring but didn't need surgery, has appeared in both games and played 15 minutes Tuesday.

She has made good progress but got a little winded, according to coach Bob Blohm. Senior Kelly Holmes and junior Lisa Nicastri are expected back next week.

The Chiefs play host to Birmingham Marian tonight.

Eagles grounded.

A 16-6 scoring spurt in the second period carried Lutheran High Westland to a season-opening 47-40 girls basketball victory Tuesday over Plymouth Christian.

The win moves the Warriors into the championship of the Whitmore Lake Tournament. Lutheran Westland will play the winner of the Whitmore Lake-Flint Valley Christian game at 8 tonight.

Mindy Hardy, Lori Mackay and Sarah Pfeiffer each tallied eight points for the winners, while Amy Gentz chipped in with 7.

Lauren Horton paced Plymouth Christian (0-2) and all scorers with 15. Nancy Kobernik added eight.

Ladywood stops Berkley

Livonia Ladywood, despite a sluggish performance and a slow opening quarter Tuesday, defeated host Berkley, 46-33, in a non-leaguer.

Sophomore Melissa Campeau paced the Blazers, fresh from their upset win Saturday of No. 1 Saginaw, with a game-high 15 points.

"It was one of those where you either get brought down or have the goalkeeper pounce on it," Johnson said.

Instead Kley slotted the ball past Henkel to give the Rocks the tournament trophy for the sixth time in nine years.

Afterward, both coaches saw need for improvement after the early season clash.

Canton started the campaign off in fine form, downing Grand Blanc 2-0 in the tournament semifinal. Alam Samouelian and Mike Hayes accounted for the goal scoring while Henkel earned the shutout.

The final match against Salem was a different account.

"I don't think we attacked well as a team," Smith said. "That's what hurt us out there. They (Salem) attack us more as a group, and they were able to take advantage of it in certain situations."

For Salem, the day was perfect. The Rocks trounced Portage Central 6-2 in the opening game with Joe Perron and MacGinnis both nabbing two goals. Scot Buczek and Ryan Smith collected the others.

"I like the team speed this year," Johnson said. "We don't have a lot of height, but we have a lot of speed."

Arnold and Koziol are the outside linebackers, with backup from senior Bob Mooney (5-7, 165) and Justin Buchhop (6-0, 175).

Senior Eric Baden (5-9, 160) has experience in the defensive secondary and will be joined by Moritz and Ostach in the starting lineup. Neliendam, junior Josh Lee (5-11, 155) and senior Mike Applegate (5-10, 150) provide depth.

"I think our secondary is pretty good even though only one played (Baden)," Khoenle said, "but Moritz and Ostach are good athletes with good hands. Pass rush and containment are important, but the secondary plays a big role in all that.

"If the defense gets better as much as it has in the last week, we'll be OK."

Gavie Invite begins season

10-PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

It's bowling's equivalent of opening day at Tiger Stadium.

In bowling, the 56th annual John P. Gavie Invitational Tournament traditionally launches the season.

The Gavie, however, is more than just competition, it's a chance for old friends to reacquaint themselves and receive awards for past contributions to the bowling community.

Entry to the event is by invitation, and only the top teams in our area are able to compete.

The men's order of finish was Bowl One (first place), State Farm Bowlers Paddock (second) and Ansara's No. 2 team (third).

Metro Staff and Jay's Pro Shop finished one-two in the ladies.

Meanwhile, the bowling writers fared well against the Stroh's management team, winning all three games handily.

And by the way, who is John P. Gavie?

The answer would take much more space than this entire sports section could contain.

He started his career in Detroit in 1920, earning more awards, honors and accolades than any other individual. He was noted for his bowling feats against the highest levels of competition. He was also a "mover and doer," always getting the job done.

Gavie originated and organized tourneys, while serving city government for over 44 years.

He was instrumental in bringing a pair of American Bowling Congress tournaments to Detroit. Gavie also initiated the Judge John D. Watts Award.

In 1964 he was elected to the Detroit Bowling Hall of Fame, and was honored as Bowlers Man of the Year in 1967.

Today's bowlers can thank people like Gavie for making the sport what it is today.

● To report information for the Honor Roll, check with your league secretary or bowling center manager.

Normally the scores from each league should be turned in at the bowling center control counter before being forwarded to me.

It is not necessary to bowl a perfect game, or even come close. Scores are relative. Who, what and where are taken into consideration, along with the individual average or age category.

● There are some very good league spots still available, and if you're looking for just the right one, try some of these:

Every day is a fiesta at Old Mexico

By Keely Wygonik
Staff Writer

If you feel like you're in Acapulco at Old Mexico Restaurant in West Bloomfield, it's no accident. Owners Ramon and Vickie Castaneda visit there regularly to see "what's new."

The Castanedas own two restaurants, both named Old Mexico. The one in Livonia seats about 34 people, and is more casual.

Old Mexico in West Bloomfield is open daily for dinner, and for lunch on Fridays only, it seats about 90 people, and offers entertainment.

The West Bloomfield restaurant is a fun place to celebrate a birthday, or have fun with friends. Be brave, try a flaming Ramon — a drink with a little bit of everything including Grand Marnier, Cointreau, tequila and rum. If it's your birthday, it's a Mexican tradition to have a tequila popper — 7-Up, Kauluha and tequila. In Mexico it's called a tequila slammer because they put a hardhat on the birthday boy or girl's head and slam the shot-glass on their head to mix the drink.

They have a hardhat hanging on the wall at both Old Mexico restaurants, but slam the drink on the table.

Bring your camera and take a picture of your friends wearing one of the Mexican hats, and do the limbo or Mexican Hat Dance. If you're shy, just sit in your seat, enjoy dinner and the show. Non-smokers have a room all to themselves in West Bloomfield.

Both restaurants have recently been renovated to increase their capacity and the Livonia restaurant was awarded a liquor license on Aug. 3.

Vickie Castaneda describes the motif of the Livonia restaurant as "Uptown, modern Mexico." The tablecloths are bold with shades of blue, yellow and red. West Bloomfield has more of a Southwest flavor with an interior of dark greens, gray and maroon. Miniature lights on the wall add to the festive atmosphere. Daughter, Alicia, 25, who helps out wherever she's needed in the restaurant including cooking, and waitressing, is responsible for the decorations including the clever lights in Livonia made out of clay floral pots.

"I love the food, it's excellent, I love the nachos," said Carllyn Rembacz of Livonia, an Old Mexico customer for 20 years. She used to go to the first Old Mexico in the old Redford section of Detroit, and followed the family to Livonia where they opened in 1975. The West Bloomfield restaurant has been open for about five years.

Old Mexico makes their own hot sauce and nacho chips. They don't take any shortcuts by using instant rice or canned beans either. Both are cooked fresh daily.

Specialties at the Livonia restaurant include the deluxe nachos, Alicia's combo — one small chimichanga, one burrito and one flour taco and wet burrito dinner.

Some unusual items on the menu are Flautas Mexicana — three rolled tortillas filled with shredded beef or chicken, fried and topped with sour cream, guacamole, lettuce and tomatoes, and Chilaquiles — Cut-up tortillas scrambled with eggs, onions and tomatoes, served with tortillas.

For something different, try Chocolate Mexicano — hot milk flavored with a square of Mexican chocolate and cinnamon.

What's your favorite restaurant? To recommend a restaurant to be featured in "Eating Out," call Keely Wygonik, Taste/Entertainment editor, 953-2105.

Mallow accents marshy areas

NATURE TRAILS

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

The only place in southeastern Michigan where shorebirds concentrate in any numbers is Pte. Mouillee State Game Area near Rockwood.

Areas enclosed by dikes retain water and provide shorelines where the birds can feed. It's still not the greatest staging area for shorebirds, but it it is the best we have in this area.

Viewing any animal can be hit or miss. And although I did not see as many shorebirds when I visited Pte. Mouillee as people did the week before, I still enjoyed those I saw. Along the mud flats there were lesser yellowlegs, killdeer, short-billed dowitchers, semi-palmated sandpipers, semi-palmated plovers and a mostly summer plumage black-bellied plover. Several species of ducks were also spotted, along with herons, egrets and a young bald eagle.

Walking the dikes and watching for birds, insects and observing flowers blooming along the way was a great way to spend a morning. Even as I was returning to my car I spotted an osprey, a bird of prey that eats fish.

Though I was visiting the area primarily to see shorebirds, there were many other things to see and enjoy. A broad interest in nature can make any outdoor experience enjoyable. Even if I did not see one shorebird, I would have enjoyed the walk because there were lots of mallow blooming along the dikes.

Mallow likes to grow in marshes, and if you see the connection between marsh and mallow as in marshmallow your connection and suspicion is correct. Marshmallows originally came from a species of mallow that grows in the marshes along the Atlantic coast.

Fruits of the mallow were boiled in water which released a substance into the water. When the water was whipped it would form a frothy product like meringue or whipped cream.

Roots of marsh mallow contain a gelatinous substance that was used to make many different medicinal products and marshmallows. Mallow means soft and in earlier times the root was given to babies when they were teething. As the baby chewed the root it softened and released a mucilage that was thought, at that time, to soothe the baby's stomach.

Marsh mallow was used for bee stings, coughs, sore throats, swollen glands and even dandruff.

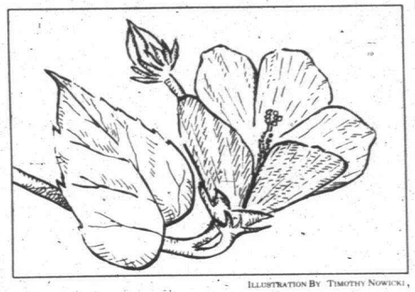

ILLUSTRATION BY TIMOTHY NOWICKI

Floral Accent: Marsh mallow was used for bee stings, coughs, sore throats, swollen glands and even dandruff. But aside from its historical significance, it is a beautiful large pink flower found along wetlands.

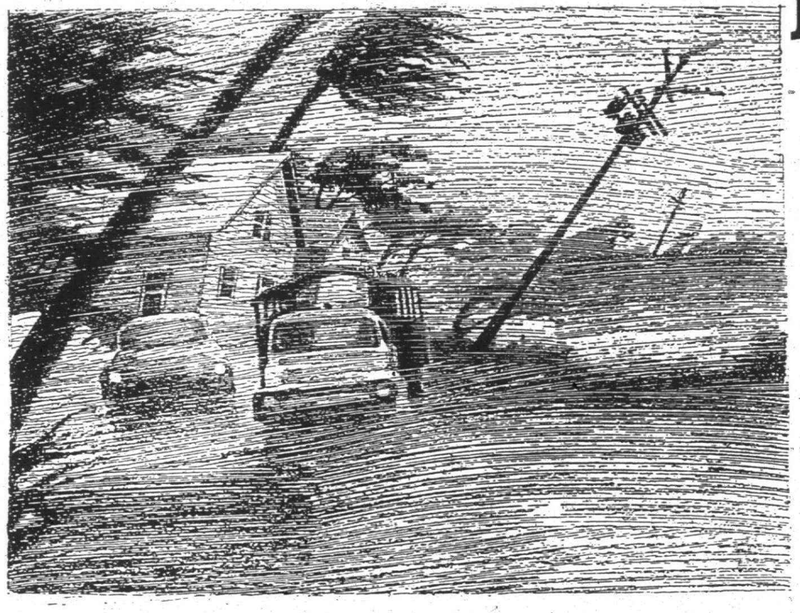
THE Observer & Eccentric NEWSPAPERS
HOMELINE 953-2020

Now it's time to help



Forced out of their homes by Hurricane Andrew, more than 100,000 people have found refuge in American Red Cross shelters in Florida, Louisiana, Texas, and Mississippi since the storm hit on Monday, August 24, 1992.

Disaster assistance offered by the Red Cross also includes paying for what they need most—from groceries, new clothing and rent, to emergency home repairs, transportation and household items. This assistance is given free—as a gift from the American people.

Therefore, the Red Cross is appealing to the general public for assistance in the form of financial contributions. To contribute to the disaster relief, send a check or money order to:

American Red Cross

Disaster Relief Fund

Box 33351 Detroit MI 48232-5351

Bank card contributions can be made by calling 1-800-842-2200. For corporation or business donations, call 833-2632. All donations will go directly for the relief of disaster victims.

Note: Because of the great need to provide basic needs to disaster victims and the changing face of the disaster situation, the Red Cross has placed a moratorium on tracing requests. When this moratorium is lifted, the Red Cross will assist people in locating their friends and family members in the hurricane areas.

Franchises enter fertile computer training grounds

■ Computer training is no longer just the chore of the office hacker or the outside consultant. Franchises have entered the picture with a network of support to keep them current on the latest models and software.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY
STAFF WRITER

A computer isn't worth the plastic and metal it's made with if it sits on a desk and no one uses it.

That's why hundreds of consultants have set up shop to train employees how to use computers in the past two decades.

Today, a new type of consultant has come on the scene. While computer training was once the purview of former executives and managers from the larger computer companies starting their own businesses, the future holds promise of national franchises dedicated to pure instruction in the use of commercial software applications.

Mark McManus, Sr., president of Computer Training and Support Corp. in Livonia, was the first in the nation to acquire a franchise from New Horizons, a computer training firm started in 1982 in Santa Ana, Cal.

After beginning franchising earlier this year, New Horizons has grown to 15 outlets in major metropolitan regions throughout the country; within days, that number will reach 16.

Unlike in the past where computer consultants came to the business and taught employees on the business's equipment, in the future employees will go to the computer training centers with classrooms equipped with state-of-the-art computers, up-to-the-minute software and full-time instructors, McManus said.

Still a role for the consultant

While there will always be room for the many computer consultants working today, the thriving computer education centers are here to stay, he said.

The consultants will continue doing the work they do best, including specialized computer security, systems analysis, equipment consulting and needs assessment. But McManus said the plain vanilla computer training needed by the vast majority of computer users will be the bailiwick of the franchised computer training centers.

That's a big difference from less than a decade ago, he said.

Prior to 1984, McManus said many companies used custom-made software packages or some of the early generation commercial packages.

Computer industry consolidates forces

BY R.J. KING
SPECIAL WRITER

The computer industry today reminds many observers of the consolidation of the auto industry 70 years ago.

As more and more players entered an industry generating double-digit profit margins, prices dropped and growth sputtered. The auto industry's answer to the increased competition was to meld a number of individual enterprises into a handful of dominant companies.

The computer industry is chartering the same path. In turn, due to a recession and a move toward standard components, where competing manufacturers now produce almost the same basic parts in their computers, rivals have turned from highlighting technological differences to slashing prices.

Businesses and consumers taking advantage of lower costs have saved as much as 40 percent from prices a year ago, but the cuts have put some manufacturers on shaky ground and left buyers to wonder if service contracts and warranties will be honored down the road.

"In its infancy 15 years ago, the computer industry was marked by wild growth, but today the industry has matured so much that earnings are in the single digits and even strong companies are struggling," said Rick Inatome, chairman of the InaCom Corp. in Troy.

"Over the next two or three years, struggling companies will either strike a deal with someone else or fall by the wayside. That puts much more pressure on the consumer, who must now make sure he's dealing with stability at all angles."

Inatome knows of what he speaks. Last year, his former company, InaComp Computers, merged with Velcom Inc. of Omaha to better position both businesses in a market now driven by less expen-

DiPaolo to repeat her small business series

Teaching budding or present entrepreneurs to "run a successful business by design rather than by accident" will be the aim of Mary DiPaolo when she offers her four-class series, "Making it Big in Small Business," starting Thursday, Sept. 10, at Schoolcraft College.

"Running a successful company of any size or type isn't about selling what may be easiest or cheapest to provide to customers," she said. "Nor is it about opening up one of the 'hot' new businesses for the '90s."

Instead, she explains small-business success in terms of marketing to customer needs.

"The companies that make it biggest in small business are the ones that keep making customers needs' and satisfaction their top priority," she said. "When I hear a business owner tell me that 'everyone' is a current or potential customer of his business, I know there's a problem."

She stresses that identifying the key customer markets is the crucial first step toward better marketing. "Relying on demographic characteristics such as annual sales, number of employees or type of location just doesn't cut it any more."

Instead she believes that obtaining appropriate attitudes and lifestyles data is the most meaningful customer identification tool.

DiPaolo is the owner of MarkeTrends, a Northville marketing management consulting firm. The seminar is a repeat of one taught in March that drew close to 100 present and future business owners.

Classes will run 6-8 p.m. Thursdays in Room 200 of the Liberal Arts Building. Individual sessions are $25; all four are $80. Increasing Sales and Profits (Part I) will be offered Sept 10, followed by Beter Market Planning (Part II) on Sept. 17, Attracting the Right Customers on Sept. 24, and Cultivating Customers through Networking on Oct. 1. To register call Continuing Education Services at 462-4448. Registration will also be taken at the door, space permitting.

Rapid software changes

As commercially available software programs like WordPerfect, Lotus 1-2-3, and dBase became sophisticated enough to meet the needs of a wide variety of business users, the software industry has become dominated by a small number of software houses.

"These programs control probably 90 percent of the market," he said.

Thomas December, general manager and owner of Executrain in Southfield, a franchise of the largest computer training firm in the country, said while the number of software programs available to the users is smaller, the complexity and speed with which these programs are changing is what has made the computer training industry what it is today.

Executrain training centers number 60 offices in the U.S. and abroad. The company projects 90 centers within two years.

Executrain in Southfield was the 15th franchise 34 months ago.

"Technology is changing so rapidly because of the battle going on between software giants like WordPerfect, Microsoft and Lotus," he said. "There are all these changes happening and no one can keep up without large resources."

Some companies have attempted to develop their own computer training divisions, but those have generally not worked well.

"It's hard to provide quality on a consistent basis," December said. But by specializing and only doing one thing, computer training firms can succeed.

"We can offer more and offer it more efficiently," he said.

Training people to use computers means overcoming several obstacles; for example, the fear many people feel over using the computer.

"Because of the reduction in costs, personal computers are ending up lower in organizations and people who never had to operate them are going to have to learn.

"Corporations are starting to set basic skill levels," December said.

Share of a large pie

December estimates the national computer training market is worth about $2.5 billion a year. The Detroit area, as the ninth largest computer market, is capable of generating at least $25 million a year.

"No one has been able to capitalize on this market," he said.

Just about any business office with a computer can benefit from training, he said. The days when people were plopped down in front of a computer and told to figure it out for themselves are long gone.

"Coporate America is finding out it just doesn't work that way," he said, adding research done by Executrain indicates a 50-percent increase in computer proficiency and employee productivity for people who participate in its training programs.

Accomplishing this is no easy task, he said, and it is simply impossible for a small computer consultant to do so without the benefits of being part of a larger corporation.

McManus of New Horizons said chief among the benefits of being part of the a larger corporation is the way in which a franchises pool the resources of its members and consolidates expenses.

"Each software company has a new release every five or six months," McManus said. While many of these releases are updates or maintenance versions, some offer major enhancements.

Each new release means new training materials and alterations to course work.

"Coming up with course work, text books and lesson plans for each of the programs we train for is a monumental task," he said.

Word processing programs like WordPerfect and Microsoft Word, desktop publishing and presentation graphics programs like Pagemaker, Harvard Graphics, and Freelance Graphics, databases like dBase and Pardox, Spreadsheets like Lotus and Excel — these programs are involved and require extensive testing.

That doesn't even begin to address the growing popularity of project planning programs or Novell Networking and Macintosh applications that businesses demand today, he said.

Franchises also share in marketing, testing and research and other services like computer hotlines and on-site service.

sive and easier-to use systems. That move strengthened the two companies, said Inatome, as recent quarterly earnings were up 40 percent at $253 million.

But the merger's success is an industry aberration. IBM, the industry giant, has seen its revenues rise by an average rate of 6.6 percent over the last five years. Apple, the No. 2 player, and once a high-flying growth company, has seen its revenues and earnings level off as well. What's more, IBM and Apple, long-time bitter rivals, recently announced a unique alliance: IBM would swap chip technology for Apple software.

Such development mergers are expected to increase; a sign the industry has met its goal of putting a computer in every office and now must rely on new advances such as greater speed and computing power to boost profit margins.

"The consumer today can now mix and match virtually any combination of hardware, operating system and software so that price really becomes the main selling point," said Alan Baum, president of Computer City Supercenters, which opened a store in Troy last year.

■ 'Over the next two or three years, struggling companies will either strike a deal with someone else or fail by the wayside.'

Rick Inatome
InaCom Corp. chairman

"People no longer feel they have to hire a consultant for every purchase. They can boost power with an add-on component or upgrade software for a third of the price the original program sold for. All of these savings are good for the consumer, but not very helpful for the manufacturer."

While the recession is part of the low-price strategy of computers, many point to the standardization of technology in the mid-'80s as the great equalizer. Once small firms were able to offer IBM and Apple clones, they dropped their prices and gobbled up market share. Before standardization, consumers often purchased software, computers and mainframes from one manufacturer, reasoning the high cost and technical difficulty of switching to a totally different system was prohibitive.

Today manufacturers face the worry of a different sort as one of the largest users of computers, the defense industry, has seen the federal government impose annual budget cuts of 5 percent since 1990, which further hamper sales of mainframes and work stations. For concerned PC buyers, the best advice in an industry where price cuts are eroding earnings and forcing mergers is to stick with name players.

"Putting together a computer system today is akin to building a stereo system, where you take the best products from each category and connect them together," said Bruce Burns, president of Lighthouse Computer Systems, a consulting and installation firm in Plymouth.

"When I buy for my clients, I stick with name-brand products, so even if a retailer or supplier goes out of business, the warranty will still be there. If you don't buy the industry standard or a name brand, there certainly is a greater risk involved."

To learn more about the industry, Burns suggested first-time buyers and other users subscribe to any number of trade magazines. Titles include PC Week, PC World and Home Office Computing.

'Tis the time to gather up those cards

Summer still has a while before it ends and there's still a whole fall season to go through. So why start thinking about winter stuff?

'Tis better to plan ahead than wait to the last minute, especially when you're talking about Christmas cards.

Not in the mood to hear about Christmas-type things?

Well, charities in the metropolitan area are.

Now is the time for them to get their holiday card selection ready for public purusal. And The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers are here to lend a helping hand.

Each year The O&E compiles a collection of the holiday greeting cards available from area charities and non-profit organizations. The cards are assembled into books that are kept for public purusal at our five offices in Livonia, Plymouth, Farmington, Birmingham and Rochester Hills.

Whether you're looking for serious cards, humorous cards or even all occasion cards, the books provide easy one-stop shopping that in turn benefits programs for children, the homeless, abused and neglected, even animals, in the metropolitan area.

Charities and nonprofit agencies are invited to send five samples of each card (one for each of the catalogs) they have available for the 1992 holiday season and pertinent ordering information to The O&E prior by Thursday, Oct. 15.

The books will be in our offices — 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia; 805 E. Maple, Birmingham; 744 Wing St., Plymouth; 21898 Farmingto Road, Farmington; and 1814 S. Rochester Road, Rochester Hills — beginning Nov. 5.

Sample cards and information should be sent to the attention of Wayne County Suburban Life Editor Sue Mason at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. For more information, call 953-2131.

Group assists survivors of sexual abuse

■ Helping women who were sexually abused as children cope is the goal of a new group being formed at Plymouth Family Service. The trauma and tragedy of such abuse is all too common, and isn't limited to low-income families. The first group session will be Monday, Sept. 21.

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Surviving the trauma of childhood sexual abuse is difficult, but Ann Bradley knows it can be done.

Trauma: "It's hard to imagine, but it certainly happens, more than we'd like to think," David Breeden, Plymouth Family Service director, said of sexual abuse of children.

In many cases, survivors will, for years, deny that the abuse occurred. "Denial, I think, comes from shame also. I want the shame to be addressed, and that it doesn't continue to belong to them," said Bradley, a clinical social worker at Plymouth Family Service.

A group for women who were sexually abused as children is being formed at Family Service, a Plymouth Community United Way agency. The first session will be 5:30-7 p.m. Monday, Sept. 21, at the agency office, 880 Wing in Plymouth.

"Percentages seem to be pretty high. It shows up pretty regularly," said Bradley, who also does work with women in the areas of substance abuse and domestic violence.

In adolescence, those who are being abused may run away from home or become chemically dependent. In adulthood, women who were abused may have difficulty with parenting and other relationships. Eating disorders and anxiety-panic attacks are common among women who've been abused.

"It seems to show up in their 30s and 40s more often," said Bradley, a Salem Township resident. She decided to include only women in the group, because of "safety issues women have to work through first before they can address the gender issues."

Group sessions will be ongoing and open-ended. Bradley would like the group to run for at least a year, and to have participants stay as long as they need to work through issues. She hopes to have an array of participants, not only in age and background but also in terms of where they are in treatment.

The group, which will meet each Monday evening at Plymouth Family Service, will be limited to six women over age 18. A second group will be added if needed, said David Breeden, a clinical social worker and Plymouth Family Service director.

Helping survivors: Ann Bradley, a clinical social worker with Plymouth Family Service, will lead sessions of the group, designed to help women who were sexually abused as children.

Safety's the key

Bradley will concentrate on developing a safe, supportive environment within the group, so that members are able to discuss their experiences. Group sessions will deal with memories, relationships with partners, the community, children and parents, and with the dynamics of families where sexual abuse occurs.

Discussions will also include socialization of women "and the way they end up handling their anger," she said.

Her philosophy is that survivors "are incredible people. They take that on, yet they continue to do fantastic things." Survivors can and do learn to deal with the trauma, and go on to have rewarding, fulfilling lives, both personal and professional.

Advance registration for the group is required, and can be completed through Family Service, (313) 453-0890. Fee is $25 per session, with many insurance

For kids, lazy days of summer are becoming a distant memory

Back-to-school time has arrived, and area students have mixed feelings about that.

"I'm disappointed," said Nicholas Tucker, 13, an eighth grader at Franklin Junior High School in Wayne. "I want the summer to be longer, but I am happy because I get to see my friends."

His brother, Justin Tucker, 10, is less enthused about the ringing of the school bell. "Terrible" is the reaction of Justin, a fifth grader at Monroe Elementary School in Wayne.

They visited the Plymouth Historical Museum the afternoon of Thursday, Aug. 27, with their moms, grandmother, sister and cousin. Seeing the doll exhibit wasn't at the top of the list for Nicholas and Justin, but their grandmother, who lives in Chicago, wanted to see it.

Their sister, Alana Tucker, 12, is pleased school's beginning. She's a seventh grader at Franklin Junior High.

"I'm excited because it's a whole new school," said Alana, who's looking forward to making new friends and having new teachers — six teachers rather than the one she had in grade school last year.

"I guess you could say I'm nervous because I don't know what it's going to be like." Even so, she doesn't mind seeing summer end.

"I love school," said Alana, who lists math as her favorite subject.

Their cousin, Christopher Jagalla, "6 going on 7," is a second grader at Allen Elementary School in Plymouth. "I feel proud," he said in describing his thoughts on school starting.

Being among the big kids at Allen is one source of pride for Christopher, who lists art as his favorite class.

Their group was among those visiting the museum in downtown Plymouth last week. Many visitors decided to stop by prior to the beginning of school, and museum staffers and volunteers were kept busy.

"I was surprised this last week how busy we've been," said Beth Stewart, museum director. The cold, damp weather boosted attendance as well, with visitors bypassing area parks and looking for an indoor activity.

"Lots of moms with little girls" have visited, Stewart said. "The little girls like it a lot." The doll exhibit, which will continue through early October, isn't as popular with boys who visit, although it does appeal to women of all ages, she said.

Stewart and her husband have two daughters, students at Farrand Elementary School in Plymouth Township. The girls were looking forward to getting their school supplies and starting classes, and their mom had similar feelings.

ANNIVERSARIES

Edward and Mildred Wesley

Edward S. and Mildred Wesley recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at an afternoon champagne reception held in their honor and hosted by their children. After the reception, they repeated their wedding vows during a Mass at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Plymouth. Dinner and entertainment at the Top Hat in Windsor followed.

The Wesleys have six married children: Brian Wesley of Garden City, Penny Honke of Westland, Priscilla Piwowar of Canton, Georgan Matthews of Plymouth, Maureen Kisabeth of Plymouth and Sharon Kelley of Plymouth. They also have 22 grandchildren.

They met while both were employed at the Kelsey-Hayes plant on Eckles Road. They were married Aug. 1, 1942, in Indiana.

Mildred Allen moved to the Plymouth community as a child. She worked at the Daisy plant in Plymouth until it closed. She then worked at Burroughs before receiving a teaching certificate and master's degree. She retired from the South Lyon School District in June 1989.

Ed Wesley moved to Plymouth about 1940. He fought in the South Pacific during World War II. He then worked on his bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration and was employed at the Ford Livonia Transmission plant until he retired in June 1989.

plans accepted and a reduced-fee option for those who have difficulty paying.

Bradley, who earned a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan, has found in some cases survivors of abuse feel they're responsible for what happened. Some won't seek treatment or even talk to others about what occurred.

She wants survivors to know it's all right to be angry "as long as you deal with how that person continues to impact your life."

"They all need to come to terms with where that relationship is and how they're going to handle it," said Breeden, a Plymouth resident who earned a master's degree in social work from St. Louis University.

More awareness

Publicity related to high-profile cases of abuse helps to increase awareness and understanding, they agree. "You certainly find more discussion of it," Breeden said. "I think that's good." That helps survivors realize they're not alone.

He's pleased to have someone with Bradley's expertise available. She's done volunteer work with the Domestic Violence Project in Ann Arbor and runs a women's support group at the Assault Crisis Center in Ann Arbor.

Bradley, who has three teenage children, has worked with women at Huron Valley Women's Facility and the Washtenaw County Jail, dealing with chemical dependency, sexual abuse and parenting concerns. She's also led women's groups within an outpatient chemical dependency program.

She and Breeden know that sexual abuse doesn't occur only in low-income areas. School counselors and police officers see the harsh realities of such abuse in the Plymouth-Canton community and other affluent areas.

Newmans are well-known for their bridge game

The Bridge Crowd
By Woody Boyd

One of Oakland's fairest pairs and most vivacious participants are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newman of Sylvan Lake, affectionately known to everyone as Pat and Bob. They have been two of the many stem-winders involved in Farmington Hills' new club, the Bridge Connection. Their Tuesday afternoon game in West Bloomfield at Temple Israel on Walnut Lake Road is one of our big ones (usually some 60-odd tables of enthusiasts) in this wonderful suburb of ours. There is unanimity that the Newman two run a game, and handle the wonderful assemblage of diverse personalities playing, as well as any of our best ACBL club directors. Bob graciously bestows most of the glory upon Pat, but that knack alone wouldn't merit their exceptional identity.

Have you ever noticed that the player whose single purpose at the table is to win is the first one we lose interest in once that limitation has been uncovered? Bob suggests there's a worth-its-weight-in-gold antidote for this malady. "Pat and I believe that the best way a bridge player can control his ego is to pray that success comes only as fast as he is able to handle it."

I believe there is an invisible measure of friendliness and good grace woven into all of us from our earliest days. If this is nurtured wholesomely and truly it will affect the way we greet and treat people — the way of our tastes and the way we behave, and especially the way we play the game of life. The Newmans personify this benevolence, and I believe it is the significant seed for their prestige.

Management and virtue aren't the limits of their skills. They can play this game of ours with the best and oh-so-well together. Witness this performance.

Luckily Pat didn't have the fourth king or Bob might have put her in the unmakeable grandy, but six diamonds was the only playable resting place with the clubs breaking badly. In fact, some went down in that contract, but not the lovely Mrs. Newman who overcame the illusionary fantasy that she had to lose a spade and a club too.

She won the spade lead. Played three rounds of diamonds, hearts and clubs. At trick 11, she threw West in with the spade jack to the queen. At trick 12, West had to play either his remaining heart or spade, giving declarer a sluff and a ruff which eliminated her club loser.

Woody Boyd teaches local bridge classes and is working toward becoming a life master. He lives in Bloomfield Township.

Have you ever wondered what is the purpose of baptism? A number of religious denominations teach that baptism is necessary for salvation. But the Bible teaches that baptism is only the answer of a good conscience toward God (1 Peter 3:21). Baptism is for those who ALREADY have a good conscience. Someone with a good conscience has ALREADY been saved! If you would like to learn more about the true purpose of baptism, come learn with us.

Inspiring People to Serve Jesus

This church is growing in faith and size

When it comes to church construction projects, the Rev. Jerry Yarnell's a veteran.

Yarnell has been senior pastor of St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton for nearly 14 years. The current renovation of the church, on Sheldon south of Warren, is the third one to take place during his tenure.

"One more time, and hopefully that'll do it."

Worshipers hope to have the work completed by February or March of next year, so that they'll be able to hold Easter services in the new sanctuary.

"We're building a new sanctuary and some offices and, nurseries," said Yarnell, a Canton resident. Seating capacity in the sanctuary will be about 450 to 500, compared to 270-300 in the current one.

The building project's been in the planning stages for several years, and will include creating meeting rooms and a chapel area from the current sanctuary space. Some existing space will be converted for classroom use.

"It'll give us more space for our educational programs, Christian education," the pastor said.

Carl Gaiser is architect for the project, and Oak Builders the general contractor. Cost of the project is an estimated $1 million.

"It's all our members doing it," Yarnell said of the fund-raising, which has included a fund drive. There will also be a mortgage for the addition.

The project was undertaken "to make room for our current congregation and for growth in the future." The Lutheran congregation currently has about 1,000 adult members, Yarnell said.

When he came to the church in 1978, there was a small first unit at the current site in Canton. A new sanctuary was added in the early 1980s, and several years later the fellowship hall and classrooms were added.

The current sanctuary will remain in use until the new one's available next year. Worship services and activities at the church are proceeding as usual, although the noise and dust associated with construction have caused some inconvenience.

"It does tell you that the Lord is doing something," Yarnell said recently, taking a break from his sermon-writing duties.

He works with two full-time pastors, the Rev. Drex Morton and the Rev. Dave Woodby, a visitation pastor and a youth worker at the congregation. They're pleased with the growth at St. Michael Lutheran, and don't mind the short-term inconvenience of construction.

"I believe that everyone has a need to know Jesus Christ," Yarnell said. "It meets needs in all areas of their lives."

Making space for those people in the pews at church makes perfect sense. "More and more people will find out he has the answers."

Painter finds purpose mixing nature and art

She's a dancer turned artist.

And the change came without much ado.

"I began painting as a hobby, then people wanted to buy my work. Things took off from there," recalls Plymouth native Jana Conger, a wildlife watercolorist who has lived in Michigan's Irish Hills, near Jackson, for 15 years.

The former professional ballet dancer and instructor has put brush to paper since the early '80s. Five of her works are in limited-edition prints.

Nature and art drive her.

In a milestone achievement, her 60-foot-tall by 40-foot-wide depiction of Japanese cranes was picked for the prestigious "Birds in Art" exhibition hosted by Leigh Yawkey Woodson Art Museum in Wausau, Wis.

The 120-piece, 17th-annual international show will feature famous wildlife artists like Robert Bateman, Maynard Reece, Lars Jonsson, Larry Barth, Carl Brenders and the museum's 1992 master wildlife artist, George McLean. The show will be open to the public Sept. 12 to Nov. 11.

The museum will host artists for a four-day opening weekend Sept. 10-13.

"It's sounds pretty exciting — meeting all these internationally known artists and seeing their work. I don't really have the opportunity to do that," Conger said.

"I'd hope to meet a publisher who may be interested in publishing my Japanese cranes as a limited-edition print. That'd be a nice happening. It'd be too costly for me to publish it at that size but its size is what makes it so-striking."

"Her work rose to the top from a field of more than 1,100 entries," said Marcia Theel, museum interim director. "It obviously stood out from the crowd. That speaks very highly of her work."

Jurying the show were Theodore Wolff, former art critic for the Christian Science Monitor; Lynette Pohlman, director of the Brunnier Gallery at Iowa State University at Ames; and Martina Norelli, former curator at the National Museum of American Art in Washington, D.C.

They looked for the best art that represents a broad range of species, habitats and poses. Some works are realistic, others impressionistic, Theel said.

Theel welcomes new names on the roster of artists in the show.

"That adds an exciting new dimension and a shot of fresh air," she said. "You need turnover in a juried exhibition so you don't keep exhibiting the same artists over and over again."

Plymouth roots

During her years in Plymouth, Conger danced with the Ann Arbor Civic Ballet Company, taught ballet through the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department and Schoolcraft College in Livonia, and co-owned a local dance studio. A product of Plymouth schools, she had studied ballet since age 5.

Conger began working with watercolors about eight years ago. A self-taught artist, she hits the Midwest juried art show circuit 30 times a year. Her original and collectible prints sell for $25 to $3,000.

She specializes in wildlife art.

Recounting what hooked her on brushwork, she said: "My husband, Jim, and I do a lot of camping, sometimes for weeks at a time, traveling to places like Newfoundland, the Virgin Islands and the Black Hills.

"Jim's a graphic artist and photographer and takes photos wherever we go. The wilderness inspired me to come home and do something creatively with our experiences."

An environmentalist, Conger says she's "trying to do my bit to preserve what we can and to share a little bit of my love for the outdoors with the public."

Focuses on birds

Conger has painted some landscapes, like of the Taquamenon Falls and sunsets, as well as realistic florals.

But birds are her prime focus. "There's something about their capacity for flight that's spiritual to me — maybe the freedom they exhibit coming and going."

Her themes are contemporary, "real loose," as she put it. "I'm into emotional statements instead of detail. My main philosophy — and what shows up in most of my work — is the oneness we all share as living things."

Backing up her beliefs with deeds, Conger has donated artwork to save rain forests, for avian research and to promote the arts.

Conger describes her art career as "a slow building process. It's really becoming a business. But I'm sure enjoying it."

Exhibit focusing on state photographers

Livonia Arts Commission and Friends of the Library present a 53-piece exhibition by Friends of Michigan Photography through Sept. 26 in the art gallery of the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Award-winning photographers, including Joanne Leonard, Bill Sanders, Michael Sarnacki, Carol Toth, John Carney, Hugh Grannum and Carlos Diaz, reveal an array of statements in black and white as well as color at the fourth show in the second-floor gallery.

"This exhibit, in its entirety, was recently shown at Trappers Alley in Greektown and while only a segment of it is exhibited in Livonia, the show is very impressive and a beautiful eye-opener," said Jack Olds, arts commission chairman. "Don't come expecting the usual. Be ready to see new visions."

Diaz, well-known for his images documenting the life and everyday struggles of the common man, unemployed auto worker, laborer and low man on the totem pole, exhibits a powerful black and white montage of nine larger-than-life images in "Artifacts of the Working Class."

An associate professor at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit, Diaz plays workman's gloves, most worn and covered by dirt and materials inherent to a trade, some with fingertips removed, against a virgin white background.

"We could submit two pieces for the show. I felt comfortable submitting one piece. It's very self-contained," Diaz said in an interview at the gallery.

"It's what I feel to be my strongest piece. I like it more and more I have it around. Conceptually, the idea was solid. It basically came about because of my 'Unknown Landscape Series.'"

Diaz found most of the gloves on the street while shooting the series. He uses an eight- by 10-inch view camera built by Kodak during World War II for military photographers. The large negative size creates finely detailed images and a crisp, clean focus, heightening the sharp sense of realism.

"I kept noticing gloves on the streets. I picked up about 30 of them. I thought they looked interesting. I ended up shooting about 15 of them, then narrowed it down to nine," Diaz said.

"It's nice to know that an object came from the hands of someone. The gloves contrast and complement one another. The dark glove belonged to a guy who tarred rooftops. The rubberized one is from someone who works with caustic or chemical materials. You can actually imagine what the person who owned the glove did for a living."

"Artifacts" pays homage to people who work with their hands, subtly stating that it happens less and less. Diaz foresees a future trend where "most things done with the hand will be done by machine."

"It isn't the crafts person anymore," Diaz said. "The idea for this piece is that in the future an archaeologist will catalog these strange findings as artifacts," Diaz said, nodding to the catalog numbers labeling each glove.

Diaz uses rough-looking iron framework to compartmentalize each 16- by 16-inch image, ultimately encompassing the poignant statement in a 4½- by 4½-foot format.

"I used the grid as a design element," he said. "It defines space. It isolates parts of the scene. It gives a personality to each of the gloves. Putting them on a white background, it acts as an icon. With the gloves larger-than-life size, it sort of engulfs the viewer."

The "10th Anniversary Celebration Exhibition" at Urban Park Gallery in July showcased 80 photographs by Michigan Friends of Photography members.

"The show is an excellent cross-section of contemporary photography, from classic landscapes to monumental pieces that use socio-political statements and text," said Laurie Tennent, MFP board member and newsletter editor.

"Photographers in the show come from all over the state of Michigan. A lot of them are from Birmingham and Royal Oak. Carol Toth is head of the photo department at Cranbrook. Hugh Grannum is a photographer for the (Detroit) Free Press.

"We included our collector's portfolio to get people interested in collecting photography as fine art."

Prints by Toth, Sanders, Sarnacki, Leonard and Carney comprise the collector's portfolio available to patrons and benefactors supporting the Michigan Friends of Photography. Ellen Sharp, Detroit Institute of Arts graphic arts curator, served as curatorial advisor for the portfolio collection.

MFP is a 400-member nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting and advancing creative photography in Michigan.

Exhibit hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday.

past chairmen of the event," said Judy Lore, show co-chairwoman.

Tickets for the gala event are $15 per person. They include admission to the show all three days. Admission on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 11-12, is $3.

"The Plymouth antique show always holds excitement for both the dealers and antiquers because it's the start of the fall season," said Peggy Blaisdell, show co-chair and a dealer.

Throughout the show, tickets will be sold for a hand-pieced, hand-quilted calico on muslin Michigan quilt from the 1930s. Designed in a pinwheel/star-like pattern, the quilt is 73 by 77½ inches. Tickets are $1, or six for $5.

"If you want to know where you are and where you're going, you must first know where you've been. If you want to find out where you have been, start by going to the Plymouth antique show," said Mike Hubert in an interview at his Plymouth antique shop.

Hubert and wife, Margaret, will display a variety of items at the show from M. Hubert & Co. Antiques, the Plymouth shop they opened in April 1991 on Forest Avenue.

"I've always been interested in history. It's always fascinated me. It's a connection to the past," said Hubert, motioning to bits of history showcased in the shop. "I've always felt this should be maintained. We're custodians. If we don't take care of it, it won't be here for future generations."

Hubert first became interested in the field 25 years ago with mail order buying and selling of coins. He started collecting antiques 20 years ago and selling them nine years ago.

Hubert buys antiques at estate sales, out of state, and from customers who bring their pieces of history into the shop.

"It is a perpetual treasure hunt. You never know what you're going to find. There's always a surprise," Hubert said. "I look for uniqueness or unusualness in a piece and that it's a good quality item. I love old furniture. I love art glass. I try to buy the best that I can.

"I'm constantly reading or studying. I'll drive down to Toledo (Museum of Art) to see their glass collection. If I read enough and look enough, the more I'm able to know."

Hubert makes it a policy to ask customers what they collect, because there isn't enough room to put everything on display. He also maintains computerized searches for that hard to find antique. "We're going to get a good variety for the show, a little bit of everything," Hubert said.

"We'll have an 1840 butler's desk, art pottery and art glass, Fiesta ware from the 1930s, one or two rugs and paintings, lamps, lighting, costume jewelry, plus 1930s sports medals, a clock or two, a piece or two of porcelain, furniture and decorative pieces, and a theater ticket taker."

For the second time, Sharon Burton will participate in a league antique show; her first was last January. She owns the Plymouth antique shop, Burton Gallery Antiques, on Penniman next to Cafe Bon Homme.

She'll feature a Victorian hall seat from an old Plymouth home, a twig love seat and two chairs plus twig plant stands, lots of bed and table linens, a large selection of Victorian silver plate, wooden house brackets from a historic house in Plymouth, and fancy iron fence trim similar to the Wilcox house for decorating a brick fence or house peak.

"They're always wonderful shows," Blaisdell said. "It's such an affordable show and it's an accessible show. All the dealers are very knowledgeable and eager to answer any questions people have about antiques."

Blaisdell, co-owner of Blaisdell Antiques with husband John, will offer a Victorian walnut dresser, a walnut dropleaf two-drawer stand, a mission oak coat rack, an unusual late 1800s golden oak junior chair, a golden oak child's desk with chair, lamps, ironstone with tea leaf pattern, antique linens, candlesticks, pitchers, kitchenware, vases, a Victorian photo album and sewing baskets.

Pauline and Jacki Work of Farmington Hills will once again display estate jewelry and silver.

To refresh antique shoppers Friday and Saturday, the Penniman Dell will serve a mini deli of sandwiches, salads and desserts. Coffee and soft drinks also will be available.

Hubert compares enjoying a concert by the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra to antiques.

"The PSO promotes a function or service to the community to interest people in an art form. It's adding something to your life that adds quality. It's like the antiques," Hubert said.

"If they liked Back to the Future 1, 2 and 3 films, they ought to come to this show."

Antique show hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 11, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 12.

Memoir captures growing up on farm

BOOK BREAK

VICTORIA DIAZ

"Eighty Acres, Elegy for a Family Farm," by Ronald Jager (257 pp., Beacon Press, $9).

In these economically trying times, I've made a decision. In the future, I plan to devote a bit more space here to paperback books, especially if the books seem to be of exceptional quality or of particular interest to Michigan readers.

Some may be newly published, some not so new. All will be currently available on bookstore shelves, though, and many you'll be able to take home for about half the price of a hardcover.

First published in 1990, "Eighty Acres" is the first-person account of a boy's childhood on a Michigan farm during the 1930s and '40s. If you grew up on a farm — anywhere, at any time — this finely crafted memoir will speak to you in a very special way. If you didn't grow up on a farm, this book may make you wish that you had.

Jager, born into a Dutch Calvinist farming community in Michigan ("at the second knuckle of the ring finger") writes from the perspective of his present home in New England, where he was a long-time professor of philosophy at Yale before his retirement several years ago.

His aim in this book, he writes, is "to capture and exhibit the experience of being young and on a farm — work and whimsy, warts and all."

Lucky for us, that's pretty much what Jager does. Although his always sympathetic portrait of his parents is a bit much at times, overall, "Eighty Acres" is no rose-colored Valentine, memorializing the wonderful way we were back in the good old days. While life was good down on the farm, it was not all bright and beautiful, he emphasizes. In fact, some of it was horrible.

Case in point: One dark morning, Jager and his father discovered one of their young cows, after calving, had "spent the night quietly expelling (her intestines)."

The veterinarian was quickly called — something resorted to only in the direst emergencies — and, along with Jager's father, set about trying to remedy the situation by easing what the cow had lost back into its proper place.

Incredibly, the men succeeded in their gory task, only to have the hapless cow do the same thing all over again the next morning.

Then there was hog-butchering day, a singular event firmly embedded in the memory of any child who has ever happened to witness it.

"Calamity is riveting," Jager writes, in connection with the bloody drama.

Seated atop the granary steps, he and his brothers and a sister viewed the spectacle: As the porcine squeals "would die away into a raucous gurgle . . . the hog's legs would stiffen, and she would . . . stagger, and collapse into a red sea of her own blood," he remembers.

Life on the Missaukee County farm had its lighter moments, of course. In fact, some of them were uproariously funny. For example, there was the strange case of the eager beagle puppy, born oddly unaware of the power of its own nose. If Chips happened to lose sight of his quarry in a tall bean field, using his canine olfactory senses never seemed to occur to him. Instead, "he leapt high into the air above the beans and jerked his head in a quick semicircle . . . until he glimpsed his quarry . . . then . . . charged off in the new direction . . . popping into the air every few seconds as if riding a pogo stick."

Jager possesses a distinct gift for bringing a reader to the scene and also for evoking considerable amounts of nostalgia without descending into treacly sentiment. Both are to be credited for most of the success of this book.

Some especially pleasurable nostalgic moments he shares here: gathering milkweed pods for the war effort (the pods were used in life jackets), listening to the spiel of the Watkins man ("like an hour-long TV commercial in a world without TV"), simmering sap toward maple syrup in the big farm kitchen, answering calls of nature on icy Michigan mornings, and, with the help of God and a peppermint, enduring the excruciatingly long Calvinist church services.

Jager also provides here a memorable picture of a part of the Michigan landscape, plus an engaging, brief history of the Dutch Calvinists, their values, and how they came to settle this particular community in Missaukee County.

Historic house tour slated

Suburbanites can enjoy the charm of one of Detroit's most resilient neighborhoods during the 27th annual West Village Home and Restaurant Tour 10 a.m. 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 27. Last year's tour drew many Observerland residents.

West Village, west of historic Indian Village and three miles east of downtown Detroit, is bounded by East Jefferson on the south and Kercheval on the north. It consists of Seyburn, Van Dyke and Parker. The area has 3,000 residents.

Ticket holders will be treated to lunch (hourly seatings between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.) at the Van Dyke Place. The restaurant will serve complimentary refreshments in designated gardens throughout the tour. Village buildings date back to the 1880s on the former strip farm of James A. Van Dyke.

The tour begins at Parkstone Apartments, Parker and Agnas. Advance tickets, including lunch, tour and refreshments, are $25; tickets without lunch are $15. Tickets the day of the tour are $30 and $20 respectively.

To order tickets in advance, send a check or money order, payable to West Village Association, by Sept. 15, to: West Village Tour, P.O. Box 14075, Detroit 48214. Group rates are available.

Crafters aid Greenmead

Livonia Historical Commission raised $5,900 at the fifth annual Americana Craft Show Aug. 22-23 to benefit Greenmead Historical Village.

"It's about $1,500 more than late year," said Sue Daniel, commission chairwoman.

Crafts include hooked rugs, wooden toys, woven baskets and country wares, many with an old-time theme.

This year's show drew 100 crafters. "We've tried to reach that magic number for several years, and we've finally made it," Daniel said jubilantly.

Money is raised through booth rentals and concession sales. Show proceeds go toward historical preservation at Greenmead.

Two fall fund-raisers at Greenmead will focus on old-time fashion. Sand Hill Questers will show early 20th century fashions at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 13 in Newburg Church. In November, the women's auxiliary of a Civil War re-enactment group will show Civil War-era fashions. Tickets are not yet available.

Psychological boost seen in under-8 percent mortgages

(AP) — Rates on 30-year mortgages jumped back above 8 percent nationally, pushed up by a plunge in the value of the dollar.

Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.01 percent, up from 7.87 percent last week, according to a national survey released Friday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

The jump brings the rate back to its level of early August, before it sunk to last week's 19-year low.

Because of uncertainty surrounding the dollar, economists were uncertain whether mortgage rates would continue to rise or whether this week's increase would prove to be a blip.

"At this juncture it's too early to tell," said economist David Lereah of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. "Rates could come down or they could rise. But I don't think they could edge up too much further because the economy is so lackluster."

The value of the dollar began crashing last Friday as investors, attracted by high interest rates in Germany, began selling dollars to buy German marks. The plunge of the greenback in turn, put upward pressure on U.S. interest rates. The dollar hit a post-World War II low against the mark earlier this week before stabilizing.

■ 'Late June, early July was when it really started to sink in that people that missed the boat back in January and February had another chance. But then, the average was about much higher than it is now. So you're starting to see people who only bought three or four years ago who are in a position to refinance.'

Paul Haveman

Real estate agents and analysts said that when mortgage rates dropped below 8 percent for the first time in almost 20 years it made a psychological difference to consumers, even though rates have been dropping for months.

"This (8 percent) is an attention grabber," said Paul Havemann, vice president of HSH Associates, a Butler, N.J-based publisher of mortgage information. "It's a psychological boost equal to the moment when the rates first fell below 10 percent — way back in November 1990."

Even though rates have been dropping incrementally, each new mark makes a difference, Havemann said.

Haveman sees 8 percent rates as offering the possibility of being able to to overcome a major obstacle — consumer confidence. "Now it's getting down to the point where you can actually buy and pay less than if you rent."

Recent home buyers also have already started to refinance, Havemann said.

"Late June, early July was when it really started to sink in that people that missed the boat back in January and February had another chance. But then, the average was about 8½ — much higher than it is now," he said. "So you're starting to see people who only bought three or four years ago who are in a position to refinance."

It may not be worth banking on rates going down further, said Dorcas T. Helfant, president of the National Association of Realtors.

"I think people are going to ask themselves, 'Why am I waiting when I can lock in these rates for 30 years?'" Helfant said.

Condo becomes landing strip for errant hot air balloons

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Some co-owners are using a field adjacent to our condominium for use of a hot air balloon. Sometimes the balloon lands on the condominium site, causing concern for our residents. What can we do about this?

You should check your condominium documents to determine whether there are any restrictions or prohibitions on landing balloons or other airborne devices in your condominium. It would seem to me that this area may not be covered by your specific documents and a regulation may be necessary. You should get a legal opinion so that the board is not left up in the air on this issue. You may also wish to speak to the co-owner involved requesting his cooperation and explaining that damage to the residents or the condominium premises could result as well as to the person in the balloon.

We have insects in our condominium coming from the ground and I am concerned that they may be termites. The board of directors has been mum about this question when asked by my husband. What can I do?

Get an investigation by a reputable company who specializes in termite or insect infestation. If there is a problem, bring it to the attention of the board of directors and request that the board reimburse you for the costs involved since it is apparently unwilling to do the investigatory work themselves.

To the extent that the insects are coming from common elements, it is the association's responsibility. Perhaps when the members read this article, they will assume their responsibility themselves and relieve you of that task.

One of our tenants parades around the condominium project in less than skimpy clothes. Some of the residents think that she is an exhibitionist. I believe she has violated ordinances regarding proper attire. How can the board handle this delicate situation?

I am not sure that this is the type of issue that the board wants to get involved in unless there is some potential harm to the residents of the association. Perhaps it might be a good idea to have a general statement made in the newsletter regarding proper attire on the premises without directing attention to the resident in question.

I also believe that this more properly might be left to an individual co-owner to suggest that he or she is personally offended by the attire, stated in judicious terms. In the case of peeping Toms and the like in condominiums, the whole issue must be considered before any action is taken that might result in potential liability for the association or its directors.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

Senior housing: design challenges

■ Architects are beginning to take notices of the changes housing must undergo to attract senior citizens who want to maintain an independent lifestyle.

BY R.J. KING
SPECIAL WRITER

It can be difficult to grow old in a house built for the young. With each year's passing, stairs are more difficult to climb, showers develop into a painful chore and faucets become an agonizing test of strength.

Most seniors take the inevitable irritation in stride, but some are being driven from their homes as once user-friendly amenities such as door knobs and window latches no longer turn or open as easily as before.

While surveys show most people nearing retirement age prefer to remain at their current address, many potential seniors and those in their golden years can stay in their homes longer than anticipated by taking advantage of a number of new products designed to make residences more accessible, both inside and out.

Mike Rein, a partner with Bowers and Rein Associates, an architectural planning firm in Ann Arbor, which is helping design Botsford Commons, a retirement community in Farmington Hills set to break ground in the fall, said senior housing offers its own challenges.

"We have to keep reminding ourselves that we're designing homes for people who are more prone to take it a little easier," said Rein. "That means all floors must be flush. Even sliding doors are out because they have that little track.

Lighting a concern

"We also found seniors tend to live in the middle of rooms because they have a problem with depth perception and can't distinguish between the floor and walls. To counteract that, we put in put in more lighting than normal.

"In the kitchen, appliances are closer together, with the sink next to the stove so a pot of water doesn't have to go far."

Scheduled to open a model home by spring, Botsford Commons will include 90 privately owned homes, 48 apartments and 50 assisted living units. The project is being developed by Botsford General Hospital on the grounds of the Botsford Continuing Health Center (formerly the Farmington Nursing Home).

Each residence will include such features as non-slip flooring, adjustable closets, energy-efficient appliances, lower counter tops and cabinets, removable cabinet doors under sinks and other amenities. The total cost of the development is $22 million.

"The project is for people who feel their present home is too large or would prefer living with people their own age," said Faine. "We'll also be putting in such services as a pharmacy, health club, barber shop and beauty salon so people won't have to travel far to take care of their needs."

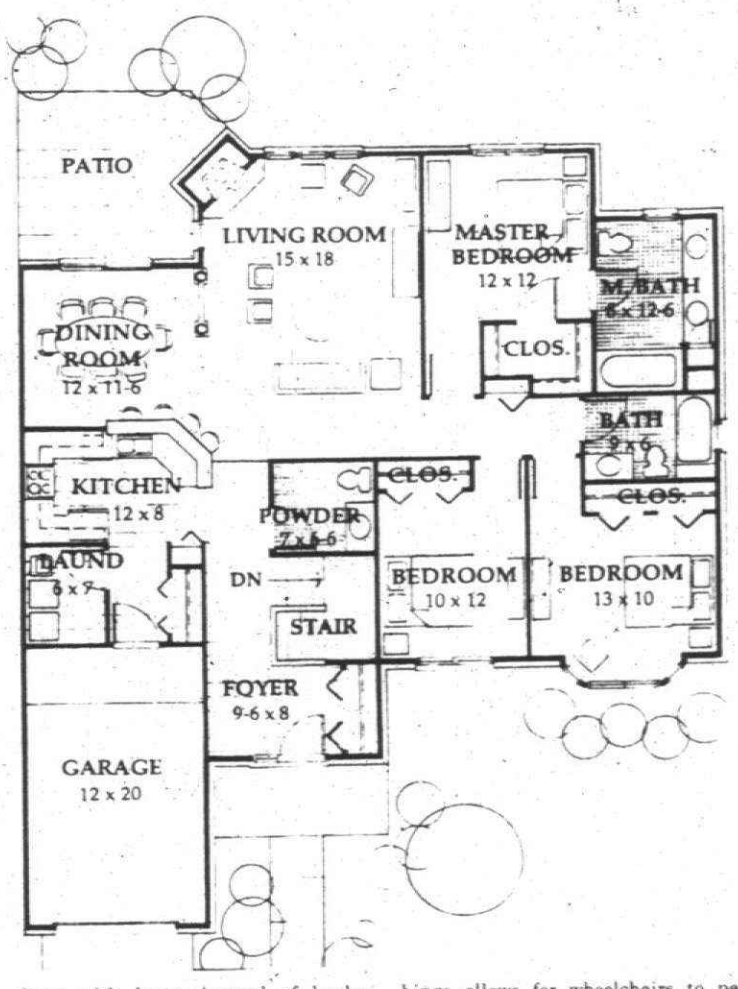
Senior-friendly features

Among the building trends of the future aimed at the older homeowner are driveway and sidewalk slopes that do not exceed 5 percent, eliminating all steps, in-home elevators for those who can afford it, wider hallways and doors, higher electrical outlets and more lighting.

Those hoping to stay in their present houses have the option of adding some do-it-yourself features. "There's no reason people can't slowly adjust their homes to fit their needs," said Steve Faine, administrator of professional and support services for Botsford General Hospital in Farmington Hills.

"Windows that open out instead of up are a good choice for those thinking long-term. As the nation's grows older, builders and merchants are beginning to specialize in products which are easier to use."

Among the senior-friendly features available today, many of which are being displayed at area home shows, are doors with levers instead of knobs, French doors in place of sliding glass doors, backing for grab bars should they ever be needed and shower stalls with built-in seats.



In the kitchen, new appliances have doors that are easier to open and controls that operate with a tap of the finger. Countertops for sinks are available that adjust to three different levels, complete with insulated piping. And once the cabinet is open, it permits easy wheelchair access.

"We've seen a great deal of business in child-safe products for the home, and now senior-friendly products are drawing more and more sales," said Frank Flynn, sales manager for Russell Hardware in Birmingham.

"Grab bars are probably our biggest seller in that category. We also have a swing-free hinge which allows a door to be offset from the jamb so people passing through have a clear opening. The hinge allows for wheelchairs to pass through much more easily, and it's a lot less expensive ($50 for a pair) than tearing out a door to make a larger opening."

While senior-friendly products are a tad on the expensive side, Flynn said prices should drop as demand picks up. According to the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), the number of people aged 65 and older will double between 1990 and 2030. And from a survey by the NAHB's National Council on Seniors Housing, approximately 86 percent of those 55 and older say they prefer to remain in their own homes.

Mortgage break for energy-efficient houses

BY R.J. KING
SPECIAL WRITER

For home buyers who lower their energy bills by adding such improvements as heavier insulation or more energy-efficient windows, the mortgage industry will reward their conservation by offering more generous loan deals.

As long as home owners show monthly savings on electricity, gas and other energy consumption, participating lenders will count those savings as income when qualifying prospective buyers for a mortgage.

Most of the plans, commonly referred to as energy-efficient mortgages, are patterned after a new marketing push by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac), one of the nation's largest sources of mortgage money. The plan is open to first-time and move-up buyers, sellers and refinancers.

"Energy-efficient mortgages are very helpful for people who have trouble qualifying for a specific home and need that extra bit of cushion to be approved," said William Yaw, vice president and director of marketing for Standard Federal Bank in Troy.

"But for someone who puts 50 percent down on a home, and has a good, steady income, the energy-efficient mortgage wouldn't come into play. The plan is for people who want to buy a little more than the maximum house they can afford."

Many of the plans offered by area lenders are tied to the buyer's housing debt-to-income ratio, where the maximum permissible monthly mortgage payment, often limited to 28 percent of a borrower's income, is raised by as much as 33 percent after an inspection by an energy consultant or appraiser.

For example, if household income is $38,000 a year, the maximum mortgage payment permitted by most lenders will be around $886 a month. The payment includes principal, interest, taxes and property insurance. At that rate, the homeowner would be limited to a loan of roughly $90,000, using the standard 28 percent ratio and a monthly mortgage payment of $886 at a fixed mortgage rate of 9 percent.

But with an energy-efficient mortgage, an energy consultant may find a future home owner could save as much as $90 a month on utility bills by adding $5,000 worth of improvements such as an attic ventilation system or selective window replacements.

The $90 savings would then be added as income so buyers could qualify for a larger home. Monthly payments would be higher but the lender would be willing to view the buyer as an acceptable credit risk due to the savings on energy bills.

Under this new scenario, the home owner could qualify for a loan of roughly $103,000, using a 31 percent ratio instead of 28 percent. The $5,000 worth of improvements, though, would have to be added within a year after the buyer moves in.

"The whole idea is to give borrowers a little compensation for doing what basically makes a lot of sense anyway, buying a house that wastes as little energy as possible," said John Hemschoot, director of mortgage policy for Freddie Mac. "Why should buyers be penalized for spending money in an intelligent way?"

Newly constructed homes are also part of the package, as qualified buyers can add any energy savings below an average scale to the mortgage equation at the time of application. Again, an appraiser would likely determine what amount would be saved on more energy-conscious systems.

What's more, some area banks have put their own spin on the concept. Comerica offers what it calls a community homebuyer program where the minimum down payment is 5 perecent, paid either by the buyer, a relative of the buyer or a non-profit neighborhood organization. Under traditional lending guidelines, banks often require a minimum down payment of 10 percent with little room for flexibility. But the current economic climate and poor consumer confidence have made it more

Compact size with plenty of features

Compact in size, the Monarach can fit on a standard city lot and is also economical to build and maintain. At the same time, the plan includes features demanded by today's homeowners.

The kitchen has a work island and pantry, and the master suite is vaulted and has a private bathroom.

A covered porch, complete with wood dowels, posts and railings sends a welcoming message to visitors. Planter boxes in front of the garage and an old-fashioned weather vane on the roof add to the visual interest.

The main bathroom is placed just inside the front door. Toilet and tub are separately enclosed and two basins are in the outer section.

Family living takes place in the great room, richly windowed space at the back of the home. A fireplace with a tile hearth faces into the family room.

The L-shaped kitchen is open to the dining room, and a small utility room is tucked into an alcove that joins the kitchen to the garage.

For a study plan of the Monarch (332-021), send $7.50 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Or. 97402, specifying plan name and number when ordering.

Rocky road to garden beauty

(AP) — Rocks and stones in a garden are a little bit like weeds — if correctly put to use, they can add value and interest to the garden. Size is not a factor; from pebbles to boulders, rocks can be put to good use.

Rocks add strength, texture and color that complement plants. For the most dramatic display, use rocks that are indigenous to your area. If you are attempting to create a natural setting, rocks and stones should look like they belong.

With a little imagination, every size and shape can be used. Small stones can be raked over a weed barrier, like black plastic or landscape fabric, to create a fine-textured mulch. Stone mulches around trees and shrubs help protect trunks and stems from mower damage during the summer.

Larger rocks make attractive edging along paths and around irregular-shaped beds of flowers, shrubs, or a mix of ground covers and spring bulbs. Rocks can be set on the surface or slightly into the soil to produce variety. Large rocks can also be used to hold back mounds of soil raised planter beds. A slightly irregular shape helps create a natural appearance to your garden design.

A large, interestingly shaped boulder can serve as an accent point in the landscape. It can mark the entrance to a driveway or tone down an exposed water or gas meter. When rocks are used to cover a problem, make certain that all items in the design blend well together. Too often, the rocks and related landscaping only draw attention to the problem.

Flat stones make ideal stepping stones and pathways in the garden. When they are set into the soil level with the surrounding lawn, you will be able to mow right over them. Sunken stones are also easier and safer to walk on and they also can be used for a rough-textured patio or set of steps.

If you are able to get enough flat stone and rock, you may even be able to construct an attractive stone wall, which can be a work of art and add greatly to the appearance of your landscape or garden.

Stone walls add height and can be constructed for a planting space on top. Wall can also be functional to hold soil or stabilize a slope on the property.

Natural rock ledges that crop out of the ground also can be used to advantage. When the soil is so shallow that mowing is a problem, you can expose more of the rock to create small planting pockets of soil.

If the existing stone is set quite low, add more rock layers to give some additional height to the final design.

difficult for some prospective buyers to meet such guidelines.

"These plans are designed to meet the needs and desires of the consumer by allowing eligible applicants to finance a home under a variety of scenarios," said Kathy Pitton, a spokeswoman for Comerica in Detroit.

"Flexibility is the driving force of the industry today." Comerica also offers a home-rehabilitation mortgage, a plan sponsored by the Federal Housing Administration, which allows buyers to finance the purchase and improvements to a home at the same time. Again, an energy consultant or appraiser helps determine what amount can be borrowed.

National Bank of Detroit does not offer energy-efficient mortgages, but will, on a case-by-case basis, allow extra credit for buyers who install new windows or other significant home improvements, said Renee Ahee, second vice president for NBD.

13 new homes showcased

Homearama/Condorama Fall 1992, a group of 13 newly designed, decorated and landscaped homes, will be open for public viewing Sept. 3-27 at The Vineyards, a new master-planned subdivision, on Ryan Road, south of Hall Road (M-59), in northwest Sterling Heights.

In this fall edition of the 10th annual showcase of idea homes sponsored by the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan are: 71 single-family homes (The Orchards, by several builders, from $200,000), 52 detached condominium homes (The Parc, by MJC Sterling of Mount Clemens, from $150,000) and 66 attached condominium homes (The Village, by JAD Homes of Bloomfield Hills, from $130,000).

Each home is the product of a different team of BASM builders, architects, interior designers and landscapers.

"We have a wonderful range of ideas and innovations this year," said Bernard Glieberman, president of BASM and of Crosswinds Communities, Inc. in West Bloomfield. "The setting — with over 55 acres of open space, ponds, wooded and wetland areas — can only be described as spectacular."

The 250-acre community, eventually with nine separate neighborhoods, was developed by Moceri Development in Grand Blanc and Trinity Land Development in Mount Clemens, a subsidiary of John Carlo, Inc.

Admission is $6 per person. A plan book covering all the homes is available. Discount coupons for admission weekdays only are available at Consumers Power, Detroit Edison and First Federal of Michigan offices and at Lakeside Center's information center, southeast of Hall Road (M-59) and Schoenherr, Sterling Heights.

On-site refreshments will be available to buy. On-site ample free parking is available.

Homearama/Condorama Fall 1992 hours are 3-10:30 p.m. weekdays and noon to 10:30 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and Labor Day.

See trends in design, decor

Take in the highlights of single-family and condominium home design and decor when visiting the 13 homes of Homearama/Condorama Fall 1992, the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan's 10th annual showcase of idea homes at The Vineyards subdivision in Sterling Heights.

For instance:

● "The Franklin," built by J.B.A. Homes, Inc. of Troy, has high dramatic ceilings in the formal dining room and master bedroom not typically found in 2,150-square-foot ranches.

● Exterior steps to the basement use an old style in "The Beverly Ann," built by Dynacraft Custom Home Builders Ltd. of Mount Clemens. The home has farmhouse-style "walk-up" steps from the basement.

● Angled walls throughout "The Manhattan," built by M.J.C. Sterling of Mount Clemens, give the detached condominium home a distinctive look.

Co-sponsors active

Co-sponsors for Homearama/Condorama Fall 1992 will play an active part in the parade of new idea homes.

Visitors will see natural gas furnaces, ranges, water heaters and fireplaces throughout the 13 showcase homes, thanks to Consumers Power.

"Several of the homes will feature the latest in natural gas technology and energy conservation measures, which are increasingly being asked for by today's prospective homeowners," said Dick Kravick, residential marketing director for the company's metro region.

All electric kitchens are another highlight, thanks to Detroit Edison.

First Federal of Michigan is a lender for the event. It provided funding for lot development in the subdivision and is financing several of the model homes, which range in value from $130,000 to $299,000.

"We look forward to having the opportunity of also providing the long term, end-loan financing to buyers of homes in the subdivision," said Albert Marshall, First Federal vice president for business development.

Stores fashion a lifestyle

By Sue Buck
Staff Writer

Too many chefs may spoil the broth, but when it comes to interior design, the more ideas the better.

That's why 45 stores and nine decorators have pooled their goods and talents to create "The Lakeside Lifestyle," one of 13 model homes featured in Homearama/Condorama Fall 1992.

"This is our 10th year of Homearama but the first time a shopping center has decorated an entire home," said Roy Maly, Homearama Show committee chairman and president of R.A. Maly Building Co., New Baltimore.

"The Lakeside Lifestyle" was built by Sorrentino Builders, Clinton Township, as an example of a contemporary, livable family home.

"The decor reflects the family of the '90s," said Karen Mac Donald, Lakeside marketing director. "It's for people who work hard and play hard. They are health-conscious, environmentally safe and believe that the family comes first."

If you can imagine the tremendous detail and scope of the merchandise from Lakeside's stores, "you can get some idea of what we've done in 'The Lakeside Lifestyle,'" Mac Donald said.

"On top of that, we had eight top decorators coordinating every detail — from the reading glasses and fax machine in the study to the espresso candies and champagne bottle with cork chocolates in the butler's pantry."

The two-story home includes an exercise room, a kitchen nook, a butler's pantry, a cathedral ceiling and a loft over the gathering room, and a patio.

There are lots of surprises, like the animated golden retriever at the front door and the long-haired Calico cat in the child's room. There's a back-yard hot tub and a video workout in the exercise room. "It creates a very lived-in effect," Mac Donald said.

Details include everything from a front-door wreath to a bottle of vitamins in the exercise room.

Throughout Homearama, Cinnabon will be cooking. The warm scent will welcome home visitors. "There will be coffee brewing from The Coffee Beanery and a Julia Childs video in the kitchen," Mac Donald said.

The home features a Mike Irvin canvas mural on the garage door that creates the three-dimensional effect of looking inside a garage holding a van, a 1954 Mercury, bikes and other recreational equipment.

James Cousens, of James Cousens Designs in West Bloomfield, served as design director. Karen Szymanski, Lakeside Center display specialist, was his assistant. Cousens, who designed music celebrity Bob Seger's personal home interior, is known for distinctive designs blending contemporary and traditional styles.

Homearama visitors can take advantage of two-for-one specials from Lakeside Center restaurants and food specialty stores. "All they have to do is show their Homearama brochure," Mac Donald said.

Homearama tickets, at $6 per person, and a complimentary plan book covering all model homes, are available at Lakeside Center's information center, which will distribute $1 discount coupons for weekday tours (except Labor Day).

Lakeside Center, southeast of Hall Road (M-59) and Schoenherr in Sterling Heights, features more than 180 stores and services along with Hudson's, Lord & Taylor, JC Penney, Sears and Crowley's.

History

Schoenherr, said developer Dominic J. Moceri Jr. of Moceri Development, Grand Blanc.

Builders covet the M-59 corridor, which follows the natural progression and population growth pattern.

The Vineyards represents some of the last available, buildable land in Sterling Heights, which became a city in 1969. Utilities only came to this area of the city last year. "The site is pristine with 55 acres of wooded area, ponds and creeks," Moceri said.

More than 25 percent of the site will remain natural with wildlife, woods and a stream. Two spring-fed lakes boast lit fountains and stocked fish. Brick and limestone privacy walls surround the site's perimeter berms. Colorful green belts flourish. Each entrance is marked by a brick monument with a hand-carved redwood logo lettered with gold leaf.

"The landscaping will rival anything in Bloomfield Hills," said Moceri, who in 1989 participated in the Homearama held at the Hills of Oakland in Oakland Township.

The Vineyards offers move-up homes — a family's second, third or fourth home — as well as maintenance-free condominium living for singles, couples with grown children, first-time buyers and smaller families.

"The Vineyards neighborhood represents some of the most appealing styles in residential design today," Moceri said.

The homes "share a casual elegance" and many, he said, "feature multiple levels, dramatic rooflines and flexible interiors that welcome the use of high volume ceilings, window walls, sunrooms and decks."

"This will be one of the first cluster developments in the city to include detached and attached condominiums, single-family homes with open spaces and retention basins used as landscape amenities," said Jerry Vertongstraete, Sterling Heights community development director.
