Canton sloshes through rain

January usually means chill winds, but this year winter brought heavy rains that swelled creeks, spilling water on to roads. But Canton residents are slogging along, checking their basements.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Despite the continuing rains that greeted Canton Township early Monday morning, Jim Sienko was still able to walk across Fellows Creek, which traverses his mother's acreage on Palmer Road.

By Monday afternoon, it was a different matter. "It's usually 25 feet across. Now it's 250-300 feet across," Sienko said.

"This is bad, but wait until April. My mother has lived here 30 years. And in the past 15, it's just gotten worse," Sienko said.

The Sienkos weren't alone. Just about anyone who lives near any body of water — creek or retention pond — had a pretty good chance of watching the water rise.

"We've got water everywhere. The things you expect to happen in this kind of rain are happening," said Tom Casari, township engineer. "All of the creeks are at the top of their limits."

So were plenty of Canton's roads. As the rain continued to fall Monday, motorists began to slow down so they could wade their cars through the water gathering at the sides — and in some cases all the way across — the roads. And yes, Wayne County was called in.

The county also was called in to do something about road ditches that swiftly filled to the brim. "We asked them to see if the drains were plugged," Casari said.

"With several inches of rain and frost in the ground, sometimes there's an inability to drain," Casari added.

Township crews were checking retention ponds, particularly in new construction areas, to be sure drains weren't obstructed. Straw is used to protect grass seedlings in the ponds. "That straw becomes an obstruction," Casari said.

Sanitary sewers also were pretty full and some pumping was necessary. Some backyards already had some pretty big ponds by early Monday afternoon. The township hadn't received complaints about flooded basements by early Monday. But by Tuesday, Casari said he had received complaints about sump pumps.

"We got through it," Casari said Tuesday morning after the rains had stopped.

The township is still offering its free sump pump program for homes that are hooked up to sanitary sewers. The township has targeted certain neighborhoods for the program, including Windsor Park, Carriage Park, Mayfair, Sunflower and Holiday Park.

The township has put in about 1,500 new sump pumps free of charge. But about 12,000 houses were built in the 1960s and 1970s without sump pumps. Those homes, as long as they are hooked up to sanitary sewers, are eligible for the free program, Casari said. For more information, contact township engineering services at 397-5405.

Glut of rooms part of hotel's problems

BY KEVIN BROWN

■ 'The problem was that there was overbuilding in the 1980s and the economy ever since the Persian Gulf War has never gotten back up to speed, but it is starting to build up for 1993.'

Dee Clark
President, Michigan Travel and Tourism Association

It's not surprising that the Mayflower Hotel is in financial trouble, when you look at the financial health of hotels around the country.

That's the word from Mayflower shareholder Scott Lorenz and some observers of the plight of Plymouth's landmark hotel, currently in receivership.

While there are some differing opinions on why the Mayflower is in trouble, several agree that the No. 1 problem is posed by a hotel building glut in the 1980s.

Some national publications have talked of a "hotel crash" in the '90s, as several Detroit area hotels and others throughout the country have sought Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in this decade.

For hotels in general, "The problem was that there was overbuilding in the 1980s and the economy ever since the Persian Gulf War has never gotten back up to speed, but it is starting to build up for 1993," said Dee Clark, president of the Michigan Travel and Tourism Association.

Ronald Cichy, director of Michigan State University's hotel restaurant and institutional management school, said, "The hotels that are successful are banding together in joint ventures with business to bring people to communities."

"I think that's really the secret. Anything you can do to capitalize on that," Cichy said. "The strategy is very clear; implementation isn't as easy."

The hotel glut hurts not just small town hotels like the Mayflower. Even the Marriott Co. is facing trouble, as reported in a December story in the Wall Street Journal.

"I know there are a lot of hotels in Chapter 11; it (the building glut) has caught up with them," Clark said.

The idea of promoting downtown events that are tied to the hotel is nothing new for Scott Lorenz, a Mayflower shareholder who promoted the successful Mayflower balloon festival in the 1980s and helped found the ice festival.

Police believe death was accidental

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

Canton police believe the death of a 44-year-old Canton woman found in her 1992 Ford near her apartment late New Year's Day was accidental.

"It does not appear to be foul play at this time," said Tammie Colling, community relations officer for the Canton Department of Public Safety. "There were no signs of trauma. We are treating it as an accidental."

Three witnesses told police they saw Linda Mae Nawrocki's car with the engine running in the parking lot of Saratoga Apartments at Lilley and Warren roads New Year's Day. But only one of the witnesses said he saw a person, whom he thought was a man, in the car, and said the person leaning over as though vomiting, according to police.

■ PUBLIC SAFETY

Police were still awaiting results of an autopsy to be conducted by the Wayne County Medical Examiner. "We are having her blood alcohol level checked. We are still awaiting medical examiner information (on the cause of death)," Colling said.

Police found the woman dead lying across both front seats of the car with her head against the passenger side front door. She had no socks or shoes on when she was found. Police also found a liquor bottle and beer cans in the car, according to the report.

The woman's 38-year-old live-in boyfriend told police he and Nawrocki had been drinking heavily all night. He said he had a fifth of Southern Comfort and a case of beer, and Nawrocki had a fifth herself, according to the police report.

When police arrived at the apartment they found the boyfriend sleeping in a blood-soaked shirt. He told police that Nawrocki had gone to the store and he believed she had not yet returned from shopping.

The boyfriend had a bleeding nose and the pillows on the bed were blood-stained, as were his hands. He also had bruises on his arms and back. He told police he had fallen on a table in the apartment and hit his head. The man refused medical treatment.

According to the report, the apartment was littered with beer cans and liquor bottles, clothing on the floor, chairs knocked over and garbage strewn about.

Vandals spray car on Manton with black paint

A homeowner on Manton woke up Jan. 3 to find that the hood of 1980 Chevrolet was spray painted with black paint. She also found nearby stop signs and a wall at the end of the block spray painted, according to a Canton police report.

The woman told police she had seen a group of kids hanging around at the dead end of the street the day before, according to the report.

car crashes into house

A homeowner was not injured early Monday morning after a 30-year-old Lansing man drove into the front of her house on Michigan Ave., east of Sheldon, according to police and fire officials.

"The man said he was going eastbound when he lost control," said Tammie Colling, Canton police information officer. He and his two passengers were not injured.

The car slammed into a house at 44125 East Michigan Ave., at about 2:22 a.m. The car ran over a couch inside the house, where just a half hour earlier the homeowner had been sleeping, said Canton Fire Chief Mike Rorabacher.

Following the accident, firefighters had to help the woman, who had gone upstairs to bed, out of the house because the car and debris blocked the only exit, Colling said.

"When the car struck the house it pushed the debris into the stairwell. We took a ladder and had her come out of a window at the top of the house," Rorabacher said.

The driver was charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of liquor, Colling said.

larcenies reported

Between Nov. 1 and Dec. 1, 1992, larcenies were on the increase, 230 cases compared to 143 the previous year to be exact. According to the number of larcenies reported in just the past few days, it appears the trend is continuing. The following are some of the larcenies reported Dec. 25-Jan. 3:

■ On Palisades, a car phone valued at $500 was reported stolen from a 1993 GMC. Another homeowner on the street reported 60 cassettes, a radar detector and two tape cases, valued at $850 were stolen from a 1992 Pontiac.

■ On Gloria, a homeowner reported his snowblower, valued at $250 stolen from his garage. Another homeowner reported that her 1990 Ford had been broken into and her purse with about $80 cash was stolen. A brick had been thrown through one of the car's windows, resulting in $120 damage.

■ On Harsdale, a radio valued at $300 was reported stolen from a 1990 Chevrolet. On Longfellow, a stereo and amplifiers valued at $900 were reported stolen from a 1992 Chevrolet. A car phone valued at $250 was reported stolen from a 1986 Ford parked on Princess Drive.

■ A resident on Twykingham reported that gift certificates valued at $450 and cash were stolen. On Parklawn, lumber valued at $200 was reported stolen from a house under construction.

■ Tools valued at $1,000 were, as well as a 1977 Ford pickup valued at $500, reported stolen from a business on Van Born. A 1992 Chevrolet valued at $10,000 was reported stolen from the Superbowl, 45100 Ford Road.

■ Rear tires valued at $500 were reported stolen from a 1988 Ford parked on Greenleaf in the Village Green Apartments. At the same complex, two tires valued at $600 were reported stolen from a 1990 Ford.

Canton continues its debate on cluster housing option

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Perhaps Canton trustees and planning commissioners should have said "no" more often to developers wanting to use cluster housing options.

"The reality is I don't think very many of them would have sued," said Tom Yack, township supervisor.

But township officials didn't say no and the result is that they aren't totally pleased with some of the cluster developments that require open space in lieu of greater density. "When we get drainage ditches as open space, we've missed," Yack said.

Yet trustees and planning commissioners Tuesday still weren't sure what they want cluster housing to be. The option was deleted from zoning ordinances temporarily in December while the concept is studied and new language prepared to better suit what officials believe the option should provide in open space and lot sizes.

"We have not come to a concensus of what we expect," said trustee Melissa McLaughlin, adding that until then it's difficult to write, let alone administer, a new ordinance.

Not so, said Jeff Goulet, the township's new planner. "I think everybody knows what they want. But they don't know how to get there."

Goulet told officials that he and associate planner Judy Bocklage would research alternatives available for cluster housing, including pros and cons for each and take them back to both boards for discussion. "There are a lot of different alternatives out there," Goulet added.

The cluster option was intended to allow developers creativity with projects on land that boasts wooded areas, creeks, creekbeds and floodplains, for example.

But township officials don't believe developers have been all that creative, and in some cases misused the cluster option.

The language in the ordinance, however, made it difficult to deny developers their requests, according to township officials.

Yack said he is frustrated because he wants larger lots in the township and the cluster option has forced the township to give that up in many cases.

"We need language that allows us to differentiate between a good deal and a bad deal," Yack said.

McLaughlin said density should be considered. Perhaps cluster options should be available in only certain residential zoning where larger lots can be required. "If we want a 4,000-square- foot home to sit on a 16,000-square-foot lot with open space, we are going to be miserable with that," she said.

Marching band wins competition at Fiesta Bowl

By Bill Joyner
Special Writer

■ 'All I could do was ask them to do their best, not for the judges, but for themselves and the people in the stands. I am real proud of them.'
Glen Adsit, band director

Jim Vassallo called it before they ever took the field in Tempe, Ariz. "The Fiesta Bowl has never seen anything like the show they are about to see." As incoming president of the Centennial Education Park Marching Band Boosters, Vassallo knew what he was talking about as the two-time national champions added the Fiesta Bowl National Pageant of Bands to their list of growing accomplishments.

Before an audience of 7,000 fans at the band competition, over 2,000 dedicated musicians performed their best 10-minute halftime show. The nine bands, from the states of Minnesota, Tennessee, Illinois, California, Arizona, Indiana, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Michigan were rated in seven categories. The CEP Marching Band took first place in two categories, Drum Majors and General Effect, and second place in two other categories, Music and Marching. But most important, it was selected Pageant Champion with an overall score of 97 (out of 100). Second place belonged to Center Grove High School from Greenwood, Indiana.

"We had heard about the other bands. They were at the peak of their season, and ours had just ended. I was surprised and happy," said Jeff Jun, a senior from Canton.

"Wow," was all Shawn Walters, a 10th grade saxophone player, could say after the judges announced the winner.

"All I could do was ask them to do their best, not for the judges, but for themselves and the people in the stands. I am real proud of them," added Glen Adsit, director of the Marching Band.

Proud also were the parents who crowded the hotel lobby after the competition as the 200 musicians entered single file, taking in the applause and shouts of "way to go," "great show," and "you are the best." Parents and musicians are going to remember this win for a long time. You can be assured that so, too, will the Fiesta Bowl remember this near perfect performance from the band from Plymouth — Canton, Michigan.

But for those who have followed the CEP Marching Band, this feat should come as no surprise. Watching the band members pile into six buses at 7 p.m. on the Sunday before the parade one got the feeling that this group had practiced this all before.

In fact it had. The Orange Bowl in Miami in 1988. National Championships in Indianapolis in 1990 and 1991. Trips to Illinois, Ohio and all across Michigan. Parents and friends have combined to ensure that this educational experience called the marching band is one that these 200 students will always remember and appreciate.

"I have really learned to work and get along with people. This trip to Arizona with my friends is great," said Carrie Swanson, a senior flute player planning to attend MSU next year.

These sentiments were shared by Rachael Nassko, a senior, who felt that the trip to the Fiesta Bowl was "awesome. Traveling with a group of friends in a big group of friends is cool because you can share the experiences."

"I really liked the fact that we were competing against bands that we have never competed against before" said Jennifer Paulowicz, a junior from Canton who plays the flute.

In addition to the competition, the parade, and the football game, the band members took a trip to the Grand Canyon and celebrated New Year's Eve on the campus of Arizona State University with over 2,000 other band members. Some even found time on the last day of the seven-day trip to go skiing.

"Education goes beyond the four walls of a classroom. This is the best education I could ever hope to receive," said Rob Myers, a junior and one of the three field directors.

Two hundred band members, 200 instruments and 200 uniforms packed up once again for another trip, bringing recognition once again to the Plymouth Canton School District. But rest assured that this trip will also bring back 200 new educational experiences that will be talked about for years to come.

Bill Joyner is the executive director of the Canton Community Foundation and accompanied the band on its Fiesta Bowl trip.

Day raccoons are usually sick pups

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

■ If the nocturnal animals are out in daytime that probably means there's a problem with them. 'That's not normal behavior. If you scare them they can bite.'
Debbie Wade, animal technologist

Think about it. Have you seen a raccoon out in your yard or near your house in the daylight?

"Anytime someone sees a raccoon during the daytime, they should stay away," said Debbie Wade, animal technologist with Critter Control in Plymouth.

If the nocturnal animals are out in daytime that probably means there's a problem with them. "That's not normal behavior. If you scare them they can bite," Wade said.

Illness is the likely cause of raccoons behaving against their mature. Though most people immediately assume rabies, there's not a high incidence of that. Distemper is really the problem.

"We see it every year," Wade said.

Distemper — a viral disease that can be transmitted through breathing — is different in raccoons than in domesticated animals, such as dogs and cats. Plus, dog and cats are vaccinated against the disease; raccoons are not.

Wade suggests that people who see a raccoon in their yard or near their house in the daytime stay away from it. A sick raccoon can be unpredictable and may bite. The disease is not transmittable to humans.

Tammie Colling, community relations officer with the Canton Department of Public Safety, suggests that residents who find a sick or injured animal in their houses should call police at 397-3000. Canton has a contract with Critter Control.

Signs of distemper include matted-looking eyes, nasal drainage, foaming saliva, diarrhea, as well as not eating or drinking. Death comes as a result of the disease as well as the elements. Raccoons with distemper tend not to care for themselves either, Wade said.

If residents call Critter Control for help, a healthy animal will be relocated to the wild. If the animal is ill, it will be taken to the Michigan Humane Society.

nancial problems, "It's external," he said, citing a doubling in the number of hotel rooms nationally and in metro Detroit.

As to service, "There's always room for improvement," Lorenz said.

Some cite service

Some prominent members of the Plymouth community suggested that restaurant service in recent years at the Mayflower had declined, and that the business would be better served if the Mayflower tried to reach out to a younger crowd.

"In the late '60s and early '70s the hotel didn't have any competition," one observer said. "Maybe it needs a whole new energy level."

"The service did go down and the quality of the food in the hotel," remarked another.

While Lorenz said service can always be improved, he rejected the notion that service has been poor. The Mayflower, he said, has been identified in recent years as "one of the best 250 hotels in the nation," and as the favorite hotel in the state, by groups that rate service.

But he said the hotel could seek to locate a bar-restaurant right on the corner of Ann Arbor Trail and Main, in a space now occupied by a kitchen and bathroom fixtures business.

Taxes due on 4 of 6 Lorenz parcels

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

The Lorenz family owns six properties in downtown Plymouth, with taxes due on four of them.

Lorenz-owned property includes the Mayflower Hotel at 827 W. Ann Arbor Trail; the hotel addition; Mayflower Meeting House; 505-509 S. Main; the motel at 444 Deer, and 707 Deer.

Taxes are paid on the Meeting House and commercial properties at 505-509 S. Main. Summer and winter 1992 taxes are owed in the amount of $24,256 for the hotel and $15,720 on the hotel addition. Owed in delinquent 1991 taxes on the hotel is $27,242, according to the Wayne County Treasurer's Office.

Taxes on the hotel would be higher had the family not been successful with their appeal before the board of review in 1991. The oldest portion of the hotel was re-appraised and the value reduced from $668,600 to $368,130, cutting the assessment in half.

A total of $15,430 in 1992 summer and winter taxes is due on the motel. Owed on 707 Deer is $3,999.

The Lorenz family first became associated with the Mayflower Hotel in 1939 when the late Ralph Lorenz was hired to manage the bankrupt, community-owned hotel.

Lorenz gained control of the hotel in 1954 and sold it to sons Scott and Randy and long-time employee Creon Smith in the mid-1980s.

Randy is general manager of the hotel. Smith, who was co-manager, is now devoting his time to raising money.

Austrian-born Ralph Lorenz, who maintained throughout his life that to thrive a city needs a good hotel, bank, and newspaper, built the First of America Bank on Main Street. The bank eventually bought the building.

Lorenz Square was formed to manage the five properties owned by the Lorenz family, including the Meeting House across Main from the hotel.

The RTL Corp. was formed by Ralph Lorenz, son Rick, and their wives Terry and Tammie Lorenz to develop an upscale condominium complex at the former Lorenz homestead on Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth Township.

Kay Beard: She stills plays hardball after all these years

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Kay Beard was playing baseball in Detroit less than five years after Ty Cobb retired.

Currently a county commissioner representing Garden City, Westland and Inkster, Beard grew up in Detroit fn the 1930s playing ball in the alleys. Cobb retired after the 1928 season. Beard's baseball career began in the early '30s.

"I always loved to play baseball," Beard said. "I was never into playing house and playing with dolls. I liked to get out and play sports with the boys."

Upon hearing of Beard's past athletic endeavors, fellow county commissioner Bryan Amann, D-Wayne (a frequent opponent of Beard's), said, "She learned how to play hardball at a young age and she's still doing it."

Known for maintaining a sober, business-like demeanor in commission meetings even when the other commissioners are joking around, Beard has survived 14 years, eight elections, three county executives and many fellow commissioners since she arrived downtown.

■ 'I've always been interested in what's going on because government has such a major role in the lives of all of us.'
Kay Beard
vice chair

A sign posted "just for fun" next to her office door says, "I can go from zero to bitch in 4.3 seconds."

Yet this is also a woman who took a tumble down the cellar stairs at the age of 3, broke her collarbone and "had nightmares about stairs for years and years after that."

Once her first child was born, Beard insisted that her husband carry the baby on staircases because she was so afraid of falling again.

Opposes Mister Ed

A liberal Democrat, Beard frequently finds herself at odds with the latest county executive, Edward McNamara, not to mention fellow suburban commissioners who often vote against the coalition led by commission chairman Arthur Blackwell, D-Detroit whom Beard usually supports.

In fact, Beard turned down a chance to replace Blackwell as chairman last Tuesday after a group of suburban commissioners promised her their votes.

Beard wouldn't admit that the offer was made, but other commissioners said she turned it down out of loyalty to Blackwell, who helped her stave off a primary challenge in 1990. Beard was appointed vice chairman instead.

Christened as Kathryn Williams when she was born, Beard began calling herself Kay because "nobody ever spelled (Kathryn) right and that always bugged me. If it's good enough for Jimmy

Beard rejects top board post

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Wayne County commissioner Kay Beard, D-Westland, turned down an offer to be the next chair of the board of commissioners, leaving the door open for the reappointment of chairman Arthur Blackwell, D-Detroit, last Tuesday.

No commissioner the Observer talked to would admit publicly that Beard was offered the job, but a coalition of suburban commissioners had promised Beard their votes last week, according to several commissioners.

Beard considered the offer, and admitted in a speech at Tuesday's meeting that she "agonized over the last weekend," but the 14-year commission veteran wouldn't admit later that she'd been offered the chair post.

(Other commissioners speculated privately that Beard felt she owed allegience to Blackwell because he helped her in 1990 when Westland City Councilwoman Terri Johnson, heavily backed by Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, challenged Beard in the Democratic primary.)

Blackwell also alluded to the failed coup that nearly ousted him Tuesday. "This has probably been the hardest 90 days of my political life," he said in an acceptance speech. "I'll be honest. I lost a little sleep over the last couple of weeks. Maybe now I can lose some weight, because I won't be eating so much."

Long accused by suburban commissioners of abusing the power of the chairmanship to grant political favors to his allies

Nature has interesting way of warming up

NATURE TRAILS

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

On cold winter mornings when I start my car it takes awhile before it runs smoothly. When it first starts, I have to make sure the heater is off because there is no heat from the engine. As I accelerate there is a sluggishness that I don't notice after the car warms up.

After the spark plugs have been firing for a few minutes and as the internal parts begin to create some friction, the engine runs smoothly and heat is created.

This sequence of events reminds me of insects on cool mornings. Twice this summer, I happened upon a dragonfly that was sitting on the ground. There was a distinct chill in the air, but the sun was beginning its warming effect.

When I picked up the insect it remained motionless on my hand. The insect was unharmed and remained on my hand in a upright position for a short time and them it began to idle. It was as though the warmth of my hand was enough to turn the insect's "engine" on, but it was not enough to make it go.

While in the idle mode, it held on tightly to my fingers and vibrated its wings rapidly a short distance up and down. Vibrations were easily sensed by my hand. There was also a tighter grip on my hands by its legs. It took a minute or so of idling before they took off in an instant.

Because insects cannot control their body temperature as well as warm blooded animals, like birds and mammals, they are much more dependent on the environment. That is why we do not seem them during winter — except for a few species.

Idling, or shivering, helps to accelerate warming of the body so they can become active or airborne.

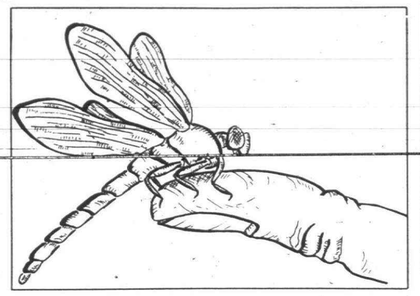
Some insects help warm themselves by positioning themselves on the sunny side of a tree so they can receive the direct rays of the sun. In addition, they will press their body against the tree to absorb some heat from the already warmed surface.

Arctic butterflies have dark bodies and dark coloration on their wings near their body so they can absorb more heat, which will warm the important body and flight muscles.

When warm-blooded animals need to get warm, they form goose pimples, which is just a way of erecting hairs to form a thick insulation. They also shiver to cause the body muscles to generate heat.

Not many things work well when cold, so several mechanisms have been developed to get warm.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia. You can reach him by Touch Tone phone at 953-2047, Ext. 1874.



The warmth of a hand was enough to turn on the dragonfly's "engine" but it wasn't enough to make it go. While in the idle mode, it vibrated its wings rapidly a short distance up and down.

IRS: Dependents need social security number

Taxpayers must provide a Social Security number on the federal income tax return for any dependent age 1 and older says IRS district director John Hummel.

"Taxpayers should be aware that they may be fined $50 for each social security number not shown on the return and, in some cases, the exemption may be disallowed," Hummel said.

The 1986 tax reform act required social security numbers for dependents age 5 and over. In 1989, the requirement changed to age 2 and over. Beginning in 1991, the age limit dropped to 1.

To be issued a social security number, a person must have proof of the following items: age, U.S. citizenship or legal alien status and identity.

For more information, contact the Social Security Administration toll free on 1-800-772-1213 or visit any office for Form SS-5, application for a social security number card and for the brochure, "Applying for a Social Security Number."

Beard

Carter it should be good enough for Kay Beard," she said, laughing.

Beard was married right after World War II to Jerry Beard, a commercial artist. Together they had five children, which led to Beard's political involvement.

In the early 1960s, when her kids were in school, Beard got tight with an organization called Citizens for Educational Freedom. All kids, regardless of where they live, or family income, or their racial or religious background, should have an equitable share of public finding for their education," she said.

As she was sucked into the malestrom of activity with CEF, Beard found herself writing and publishing a newsletter, making public speeches, testifying in Lansing and Washington D.C. and even lobbying the Legislature in Lansing part time.

A big surprise

"I've always been interested in what's going on because government has such a major role in the lives of all of us," she said. "But I never expected to ever be part of it."

Her civic activities continued into the early 1970s when "a lot of people encouraged me" to run for the state House seat representing Inkster and Garden City. "In those days people weren't as apt to vote for women as they are now," Beard said, explaining perhaps why she lost the 1972 Democratic primary to a fellow named William Keith, who still holds the seat.

Donald Beard, 40, the third child of Kay and Jerry, said he wasn't "the least bit surprised" when his mother turned to politics. "She was always real outspoken," he said. "When she gets into something, she gets in with both feet."

Major surgery in 1974 prevented Beard from challenging Keith again, but two years later she took a shot at the county commission seat held by John Barr, in part because Barr led an effort to sell the Walter Reuther Longterm Care Facility, which Beard opposed.

"I didn't think that I could beat him, but I decided to run just to get my name out again."

Busy, busy, busy

Barr won the election that year, but two years later in 1978 he resigned to take a position on the state civil service commission. Beard was appointed to the county commission seat, won election the following November, and has never relinquished it, even in the face of a 1990 challenge from Westland Councilwoman Terri Johnson, who was heavily backed by McNamara.

Beard can probably attribute her popularity with Westland and Garden City voters to the fact that her schedule of community activities is so packed that a secretary keeps track of it all and tells Beard where to go every week.

"I'm on the run constantly," Beard said. "The more I know about the community the better commissioner I can be. It's a rare weekend that I don't have something on Saturday and/or Sunday."

Perhaps she's making up for all those years she stayed home with the children while her husband worked. "We struggled and it was hard," she said. "We could have had a little easier time if I had gone to work while the kids were small, but I always hoped and prayed that until they were all in school I wouldn't have to. Those are such important years."

Beard's husband died three years ago, but 80 percent of her children still reside in the Detroit area, and four grandchildren have been produced with a fifth on the way.

On Jan. 18, the annual President's Luncheon at noon in the Radisson Resort will feature Barbara Sizemore, dean of the school of education at DePaul University. Sizemore will discuss "King and Education." Tickets to the luncheon are $22 general admission and $6 for students.

Sizemore's address will be broadcast live on WEMU Radio (89.1 FM) at 1 p.m.

At 7 p.m. Sizemore will discuss issues in education at 7 p.m. in McKenny Union ballroom. The program is sponsored by the EMU offices of equity programs and campus life.

The EMU Multicultural Center in Goodison Hall will hold an open house all day Monday with a variety of activities, exhibits and refreshments planned. At 12:30 p.m. campus bells will toll and a moment of silence will be observed.

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc., will sponsor a memorial program at 3:30 p.m. at the King Plaza between Boone and Ford halls on the EMU campus.

A candlelight march in honor of King, sponsored by the Minority Peer Advisors, will begin at 8:30 p.m. in Hill Hall.

and oppress his foes, Blackwell was clearly shaken by the challenge to his leadership.

In his acceptance speech, he promised to change the way he operates and grant suburban commissioners access to information that has previously been kept secret from them.

Apparently in exchange for turning down the chair post, Beard was appointed vice chair instead. "(Blackwell) has promised me I'll have much more activity than vice chairs in the past," she said.

At a reception following the meeting, Beard didn't admit she'd been offered the top spot, but alluded to it nonetheless by saying, "I think I'm better off as vice chairman."

The first commission meeting of 1993 also saw the swearing in of three new commissioners: Thadeus McCotter, R-Livonia, replacing Plymouth Republican Maurice Breen, Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, replacing Kevin Kelley of Redford Township, and Andrew Richner, R-Grosse Pointe, replacing Democrat David Cavanagh.

Ice festival gets early start at Smith School

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Whirring chainsaws wooed dozens of wide-eyed kindergartners to the courtyard at Smith Elementary, where the first signs of the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular took shape Tuesday afternoon.

Expected to draw nearly half a million people to Plymouth, the festival kicks off Jan. 13 and will run through the 18th.

Creating a frozen replica of Bugs Bunny from a block of ice taller than the students was Richard Teeple, executive chef instructor at Henry Ford Community College. Keeping warm in the sub-freezing temperatures was a challenge for Teeple. He'd returned at 11 p.m. the night before from his honeymoon in sunny Mexico.

With him and carving a Mickey Mouse look-alike was chilly Hawaiian Roy Calo, who recently moved to Motown from the Pacific.

"I bought some winter clothes, but not enough, I guess. I didn't expect it to be this cold," said Calo.

Carving a charming Donald Duck was Shawn Mulville, a student at Henry Ford Community College and a resident of Plymouth.

The artistic trio clearly impressed the gallery as well as the students inside, who were pressing their noses against classroom windows and peering sideways to get the best possible view.

"I want to be an ice sculptor, because it's fun," announced 5-year-old John Thomas Tatman, unfazed by the cold.

Andrew Riedy, 5-and-a-half, watched in amazement as Calo, using just an electric chainsaw and a miniature Mickey Mouse, fashioned a lifelike Disney character.

"He is starting to look like Mickey Mouse," Andrew said.

Nick Foster — staying warm in a Chicago Bulls hat and jacket, and proud to be "5-and-two-thirds" years old — said, "I just like this, because I just do. I like seeing it."

Marissa Malcom, 6, also was enjoying herself. "I'm going to go to the ice festival with my mom," she said.

"I love the Donald Duck," said Jimmy Jouppi, 5.

Teeple also was having fun, and was glad for the carving time. "We're just practicing for next week," said Teeple, who heads up HFCC's Ice and Snow Club.

Teeple and fellow carver and teammate Ted Wakar of Canton will travel to Japan next month to compete in the World Ice Carving championships.

■ PLYMOUTH RESIDENTS received associate degrees and certificates from Washtenaw Community College. They are E. Michael Davis and Lou Ann Hamblin. Winter commencement was held on campus Dec. 12.

■ TONYA L. THOMAS and Drellick Thomas, juniors at Western Michigan University and residents of Canton, wrote the bid for the "Peace'n it Together" effort to help combat many of the problems that Western Michigan University and Central Michigan University had in the past, following the traditional football game. Both students are members of the executive board of Western's Residence Hall Association (RHA). RHA was named 1991-92 Regional School of the Year by the Great Lakes Affiliate of College and University Residence Halls (GLACURH). This designation was one of four honors received by the group at the region's annual conference Nov. 20-22 at Central Michigan University. The School of the Year Award is the highest honor bestowed to any school. This marks the fifth year that WMU's RHA, the student governing body for the residence halls, received the honor since the association was formed in 1980-81. WMU also earned the award in 1981, 1986, 1988 and 1990. "Over the last decade, RHA has consistently displayed an outstanding record of performance in its programming attempts, visionary leadership, and influence on campus and in the Kalamazoo community," said Danny E. Sledge, acting dean of students at WMU. There are 49 colleges and universities in the GLACURH region from Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Ontario, Canada. Criteria for selection included effectiveness in the residence hall system and the university, quality of programming for residence hall students, involvement in on-campus issues, including collaboration with other organizations, and contributions to the regional, state and national residence hall associations.

Cable coverage

Live meetings enlighten public

The move to televise the Canton Township Board meetings live on cable is a good one and we wish it success.

However, it should go further: The public should be able to call in questions to the meeting. Such live, call-in television shows helped make both President Bush and Bill Clinton accessible to the public during the recent presidential election.

And both candidates got the message that the public was interested in health care and the economy, not gossip or Clinton's draft status 20 years ago.

The call-in shows kept the campaign on track. And it could do the same thing on the local level.

Canton, like all communities, has a forum for public comments on issues before the township board. People are allowed to speak. Those comments help board members measure the public's opinion.

But too often those comments come from small bands of people with a direct self-interest in a proposal.

By expanding the public comment section of a meeting to all those at home viewing cable television, the board would be exposed to a broader cross section of views.

Gavel-to-gavel coverage of government and of press conferences is helping to change our world for the better. It opens up the process of government to more light.

But before Canton meetings can be aired live, technical problems must be overcome. We hope Canton and Omnicom can agree on a solution.

Chances are they will. Canton is in the process of negotiating a new contract with Omnicom and hopefully live broadcasts will be part of the new deal. The current contract expires in 1995.

Also, when it comes to live cable coverage, the Plymouth Canton school district should be involved. The schools take about a 70 percent bite out of the local tax bill and residents should be able to see what the board is doing.

The potential for live broadcasts of local government meetings is great. They put the eye on the folks who are spending tax dollars. And that eye should be live and there should be call-in public comments.

We would all be better served by such a system.

Closing stabs health care

■ Mental health care is the latest victim of Engler's cold-blooded crusade to provide Michigan with a balanced budget at any cost — any human cost, that is.

It becomes increasingly difficult to see the benefit of dismembering Michigan's public services, but that doesn't seem to stop opportunist Gov. John Engler from keeping his knife at the ready.

Mental health care is the latest victim of Engler's cold-blooded crusade to provide Michigan with a balanced budget at any cost — any human cost, that is. Remember, this is the man who, lacking a plan to separate the needy from the greedy, adopted the wholesale approach to welfare cheats and cut off all checks just in time for Thanksgiving 1991.

His latest victim in the mental health category: Wayne County's Lafayette Clinic.

The clinic was closed last year. The argument, from a state administration intricately explaining only one side of the issue, said the clinic had very few inpatients and therefore couldn't justify the cost of staying open.

Hey, what's the problem, Engler's administrators said. We'll just transfer this handful of patients to other area hospitals, close the clinic and save a whopping payroll by locking down an empty building.

If that's all there was to it — and Engler's people swore it was as simple as that — then it would have been hard to argue with.

Dr. Elliott Luby, a former executive administrator of the Lafayette Clinic and now professor of psychiatry at Wayne State University, found plenty to argue with.

True, Luby said, there were few inpatients at Lafayette when it closed. But he wanted to know what would happen to the more than 700 outpatients who depended on Lafayette for their well-being.

Luby also raised a point the governor's crew conveniently forgot — Lafayette wasn't designed primarily for inpatient care. Research was the clinic's reason for being.

Luby cited schizophrenia treatment, the study of sleep disorders, research into Alzheimer's disease and development of neuropharmacology as just a few of the areas that attracted some of the world's most prominent doctors to the Lafayette Clinic.

The clinic's closing put an end to all that. With the closing, all those top-flight researchers left for hospitals willing to invest in the future of mental health care.

Luby says they won't be coming back, and it will be extraordinarily difficult to attract top talent without research opportunities.

So, the clinic that literally invented lithium is shuttered due to a narrow interpretation of its worth and a colossal inability on the part of an amateur surgeon to grasp the significance of work that doesn't always fit neatly on the bottom line.

If asked, few would line up to live in a society where the budget's, and not the society's, health comes first. Yet, here we are.

Saying yes to Michigan is important so long as one says no to the collapse of its infrastructure. The Lafayette Clinic closing pulled yet another beam out from under the state; too many more similar scenarios will be disastrous.

Deaf ears

I applaud your newspaper for having the "guts" to take a stand concerning the replacement of Mr. Hoben. I believe that the majority of your readers will agree that Mr. Hoben has served well past his time.

However, I feel that our position will fall on deaf ears. Certainly Mr. Hoben will not retire because he is overpaid and overfringed to the point that a retirement would not permit him to live in the style to which he has become accustomed. We have chosen to pay our superintendent more than most cabinet secretaries, Supreme Court justices and three times the salary of the governor of Arkansas.

The school board will not take a tough stand on this subject. In my 20 years in the area, I have found that most school board members who are elected have good intentions. After a short time in office they become puppets of the school administration and I believe that is because the new members fall under the influence of standing members. When I read where one member said they might have to spend $30,000 to $35,000 for a headhunter to replace Mr. Hoben, I was shocked. We do not need to hire a headhunter to find a replacement.

Perhaps if the PCEA were to support your position, the school board would act. However, I am sure this will not happen because Mr. Hoben is in their hip pocket. Why do you suppose he got the two year extension in the first place?

At any rate, thanks for your efforts and keep up the good work. At least somebody speaks for the people.

J. W. Brennan, Canton

GOP politicos will be rowdy

At this season the journalistic instinct to predict events of the coming year runs the greatest risk of overwhelming common sense.

OK. So what follows is less prediction and more informed guess.

Michigan politics is teetering on the edge of fundamental change. After many years of Lansing gridlock caused by divided control of the House/Senate/governor (you pick), Republicans are one measly House vote away from full control.

Last year's elections wound up with a 55-55 split in the House of Representatives. That funny sound you hear in the distance is Gov. John Engler and his GOP friends constructing bribes to get some (any!) Democrat to switch parties and so gain control of the House.

My guess is they'll do it, after a fair amount of huffing and puffing.

"It's very clear that the gridlock has been broken in Lansing, and this is going to be a very active town in the next few months," says Engler, already sensing victory.

If that happens, you could see a lot of activity on a lot of issues that have been around for a very long time: property tax reduction, school finance, legal (tort) reform, auto insurance reform and education.

In the minds of the governor and GOP legislators, resolution of these issues has been stymied for years by the way Democratic control of the House allowed special interests to block progress. The trial lawyers, in the GOP's view, killed tort reform and maintained the auto insurance scandal, while teachers unions stopped property tax reduction and educational performance reform.

That may or may not be so. But my guess is that not long after gaining control, the Republicans will have their hands full trying to manage their own.

Take property tax reduction and, the other side of the coin, school finance reform. The business community and many suburban property owners sure would like to see property taxes cut. But Republican lawmakers representing wealthy school districts are not about to roll over while financing for their schools dries up.

Or try to reconcile two traditional Republican interest groups — insurance companies and doctors — over changes in auto insurance.

My guess is that Engler, if left to himself, is both clever and tough enough to manage this kind of reconciliation. But I don't think he'll be left entirely to himself.

There is a tremendous civil war brewing in the Michigan Republican Party, the fallout from last year's national defeat.

Ordinary "country club" Republicans blame the religious right for driving women and suburbanites away with their exclusionary rhetoric, while "hard conservatives" of the Pat Buchanan variety accuse the country clubbers of betraying true GOP principles. The war for control will be long and savage.

My guess is that Engler won't be able to hold a boiling and fissioning Republican legislative caucus together.

Whether and how he does that will determine in large part what he gets from the end of Lansing gridlock.

Columns draw concern, complaints from readers

Today's column will feature my reactions to some of my "reactors." (I hesitate to call them reactionaries.) One reactor is an AT&T vice president for public relations, no less. Since the expense of his salary is passed on to the public via your phone bill, we can hope that he is indeed the public's protector rather than merely the protector of AT&T's image.

He expressed the concern that in an October column I blamed AT&T for the impending area code split between Wayne and Oakland counties as a further symbolic division between the core city and suburbs. I had gleaned this misinformation from a metro daily and neglected to verify it. I later learned that, rather than AT&T, the responsible party is Bellcore — Michigan Bell's New Jersey research arm — which acted on the advice of Consumer Market Analysts in Birmingham.

Another reactor called to complain that I had confused him by saying in a December column that I'd "been brooding about the blindly partisan voters who cast votes against Democrat Jon Buller for state Representative and yet voted for Proposal C, which his opponent supported and he opposed." That passage should have read: "and yet voted against Proposal C."

A third reactor wanted to know how I predicted Detroiter Quincy Watts' Olympic 400-meter victory and the U.S. team's world record in the 4 by 400 meters relay. All I can say is that my familiarity with the 400-meter race was gained through winning over a hundred of them (including five in which I outran Olympic champions in times within tenths of a second of the world record), writing a best-selling techniques book on the event and coaching high school record-breakers.

JOHN TELFORD

Also, I was lucky.

A fourth reactor wrote to advise me that former presidential candidate Pat Buchanan is "pusillanimous" and "pulchritudinous" (as well as "platitudinous," which I called him in November). This letter-writer was making fun of my use of alliteration and big words, and I confess she sent me scurrying to my dictionary. Buchanan my be "pusillanimous," but he sure isn't "pulchritudinous." (I should add that another reactor called to praise that column, which proclaimed language as our greatest creation.)

A sixth reactor scolded me for suggesting that Ross Perot is a potential demagogue. She then added that she hadn't been particularly enchanted with my "arrogant attitude" when I was assistant superintendent of Rochester Schools, and she's even less so now that she continuously has to look at my "leering, bewhiskered mug" in her Observer & Eccentric newspaper. (At least I'm getting read.)

A seventh reactor complained that I credited the city of Rochester Hills with contributing money to the Oakland Center for Open housing last year when actually it was the city of Rochester that did it. He's right — and Rochester contributed again this year. It's time her sister city followed suit.

An eighth reactor, demanding to know why I'm always slamming the state government for underfunding education, cited Representative Richard "Posthumus' claim that the Legislature has "continued" to make education its top priority. Posthumus' assertion is even more preposterous than the notion that a "vice president for public relations" exists solely to serve the public.

John Telford, a Rochester Hills resident, most recently was assistant superintendent in the Rochester School District. He previously was executive director for secondary education in the Plymouth Canton district. To leave a message for him from a touchtone phone, dial 953-2047 mailbox 1879.

Unfair attack

Re: Professor "Politically Correct" Ponytail, Michigan State University, an afternoon of poetry reading and an evening discussion.

What a sad commentary your article is with regard to any intelligent disagreement one might have had with the way this afternoon/reading was conducted. Instead of sticking to the issue at hand you found it necessary to:

1. Wander from the issue at hand and bring up the age old rivalry between Michigan State and the U of M. What did that have to do with anything? Except to feed old hostilities.

2. Denigrate a professor by childishly naming him "Professor Ponytail" and "Professor Politically Correct" — what does his ponytail have to do with the matter at hand?

Get a load of your picture! One could childishly cite: "Hemingwayesque character;" "macho loudmouth;" bragging, name-dropping, lackluster dodo who must belittle another to make himself look grand.

You write as though it were somehow "unique" that "The Harrison at the poetry reading is not the Harrison we know." "The Harrison, who we know from an Upper Peninsula bar that we frequent during trout season . . . " Get real — where have you been living? "In bars he talks about hunting dogs, trout, etc. etc." Are you really an adult? Is the picture in the paper a phony?

Is it realistic, adult, to expect anyone's conversation — yours included — not to change from one venue to another? You mean to say you speak the same in a group of business persons as you would with a group of trout fishing buddies? Or do you speak the same when you are with educators as you would when talking with your wife?

Anyone who has attended an author/poetry reading — luncheon or whatever — is aware of the difference in the author/poet's speech compared to meeting these same individuals in a more relaxed atmosphere or on a one-to-one basis.

Do you only feel secure, competent enough when you can "attack" someone in your forum where the other person has no recourse for responding at the same instant?

If you really, truly, had a legitimate concern — why didn't you express it then and there instead of attacking a professor who happens to have a ponytail in the paper?

A very cowardly thing to do, which only shows a side of you that is not very pleasant or honest, or decent!

Think it over before attacking someone in print the next time. Try and instill in yourself some semblance of "journalistic ethics."

Wasted newsprint

When our forefathers were in the process of setting up this great nation and saw fit to add a magnificent 'Bill of Rights' that begins "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof . . . " they could not have foreseen the need for a parallel 'Bill Of Rights' that should have began: "The Supreme Court shall hand down no decision respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof . . . "

If such a 'Bill' had been so enacted, the issue of prayer in our public schools and colleges (i.e.: Schoolcraft College) would not have arisen and the likes of Ralph Echtinaw would have nothing to write about, (Observer, Dec. 14, 1992 page 5A) especially his waste of good newsprint espousing Santa Claus as an instrument of the devil (Same issue as above, page 8A).

Bah — Humbug to you, Ralphie!

PS: I used to cancel my subscriptions, but the only thing that accomplished was to get the poor circulation manager fired for doing a lousy job.

Misplaced faith

I am writing this letter in response to the article written by Mr. Echtinaw. Not only was his article blasphemous, but also very insulting. As a Christian I can't see any similarities between Santa Claus and Satan. Granted, over the years the true meaning of Christmas has gotten off track, but in recent years Jesus has once more become the focal point. The true spirit of Christmas has far less to do with toys and gifts than it does concerning helping those less fortunate than ourselves. This is a principle embraced by Christians year round.

Mr. Echtinaw, I am also insulted that you would have the nerve to imply that Jesus leaves us with empty hands and taking this lambast one step further, to refer to our Lord as "a busybody who dictates how life should be lived." Have you ever seriously weighed such words in your mind? You, Mr. Echtinaw, are being deceived and the degree of your deception is obvious. By choosing not to believe in God you have misplaced your faith. In closing, I must once again say how massively offensive your article was, and I'm sure not just to Christians but to persons of every denomination.

Exam troubles

It has been recently brought to my attention that the school office gave the teachers a chance to vote on what kind of final exam schedule to have.

There was one problem with the vote. The teachers were given a choice between A, the old schedule that we have used which is three days each with two three hour exams, or B, the regular six hour a day schedule finishing off the semester.

This is like asking people to choose between living next to a chemical plant or a nuclear reactor. You don't want to live next to either. You also don't want either plan. There obviously must be something wrong if about half of the teachers abstained from the vote. Ever hear of civil disobedience? With the two three-hour periods a day time was wasted. The first hour, meant for studying, was mostly spent worrying about the test to come.

On the other hand, continuing the regular schedule is also non-productive. What that is doing is giving students four days where each day they have to be prepared for six finals. That is totally absurd. Whatever happened to the final exam schedule that was implemented last year? It consisted of two one hour and 45 minute periods a day. Almost everyone liked this plan. It gave the students time to go home and relax a while before studying for the next day's exams. It also gave the teachers time to start correcting the exams so they wouldn't get overloaded during this hectic time. I'm sure this plan would have easily received many more than half the votes.

If everyone liked this plan so much why was it not on the ballot? Because the office is playing an immature game with the teachers. They're mad because the teachers didn't take a pay cut last year. They figure they now have a chance to get even with them. It doesn't take a doctorate to figure out that the only people that this game is hurting is the students. Last time I checked the main goal of the school system was to give the best possible education for its students. It seems like that goal has been lost in the game. I don't feel sorry for myself because this is my last year in this school system.

I feel sorry for the students that are being fired upon by the big guys downtown and have to come back next year. From what I have seen this problem is only going to get worse. Some people will have to swallow their little prides to solve it. I hope they have the heart to.

Program working

My wife and I have read and discussed the recent articles in your newspaper regarding opposition to the developmental teaching approach at Canton-Plymouth Schools. We both agree that our son's educational growth is due, in most part, to this very approach! Our son is not, in our opinion, an exceptional first-grader, he is one of many children under the guidance of a fine teacher who understands and believes the developmental teaching technique and how this approach does instill an element of personal self-esteem.

We believe, as our son continues his education in this manner, that he will begin to learn the proper spelling of words in due time. His ability to read and write simple words and associate pictures and words in the first grade is phenomenal. As parents it is our duty to be involved with this teaching approach and help by reading to our children and allowing them to read to us. Our son's ability to read has already spurred his sisters, age 4, to begin attempting the reading process.

Maybe all of our son's success is due to his teacher, who demonstrates genuine concern and responsibility to teach. We suggest the school system adopt Susan Domeracki's style and approach that many students and families at Hoben Elementary can attest really works.

Millage debate centers on semantics

STAFF WRITER

■ The Conference of Western Wayne and Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara are at odds over a 1988 millage that was arguably supposed to be spent on a juvenile training center. McNamara would rather spend that money on youth programs, not a building.

Political battles in Wayne County have sunk to the point now where they're arguing about whether an "institution" is a building or a program.

To whit, the Conference of Western Wayne is criticizing the county about a 1988 millage that was arguably supposed to be spent on a juvenile training center, but hasn't been.

One-tenth of the 10-year, 1-mill levy approved by county voters four years ago was supposed to be used to "build and operate a juvenile offender work/training institution," according to the ballot language.

The county still has about $7 million of what the millage has generated so far, and an additional $2.5 million is expected to be generated every year through 1997.

But Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara would rather spend that money on youth programs, not a building, and last October cut a deal with the state to start a program whereby nonviolent juvenile offenders would be dealt with in their homes instead of putting them in some juvenile jail.

McNamara avoided putting up a building, as some say the ballot proposal requires, by getting county lawyers to say that the word "institution" isn't necessarily synonymous with "edifice," but could also mean "program."

County commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, believes the proposal calls for a building, and that's what he wants. "They can have an attorney say whatever they want," said McCotter, an attorney. "Every time Wayne County does something like this it ruins its credibility."

McCotter referred to McNamara's youth programs as "just pork barrel stuff."

The CWW, an alliance of western Wayne County communities, had a part in getting a question put on the ballot last November asking voters if the county should build a building with the 0.1 mill or give the money back to the communities from which it was taken.

The ballot proposal failed, but Livonia Mayor Robert Bennett said the wording of the question wasn't what CWW had in mind. "We weren't too happy with that proposal as it was put on the ballot," he said. "We kind of feel that the (county) commission played a little game with us" when it drew up the ballot proposal.

So CWW's executive committee has created a resolution asking the county to build a building with the money. Failing that, CWW wants the county to return the already-collected money to the cities and townships, then stop levying the 0.1 mill forever.

The resolution is expected to be considered for approval at the CWW's next meeting Friday. Although it wouldn't be technically binding on the county, the resolution would carries political weight because CWW is comprised of mayors and supervisors from every community in western Wayne County.

County commissioner Kay Beard, D-Westland, said she agrees with CWW that the 0.1 mill should be spent on a building, in part, because the current county youth home is in "unbelievably bad" condition. "It would cost millions to bring it up to code," she said.

Deputy Wayne County Executive Michael Duggan agreed that the youth home is decrepit, but added that a bond proposal is being prepared to pay for the home's renovation.

McNamara's critics, Duggan said, should be glad the administration spent the other nine-tenths of that millage (dedicated to the jail) so efficiently that money was left over to add 40 beds to the youth home, bringing the total to 240.

"We ought to be applauded for it instead of criticized for it," he said.

College hockey games

The Eastern Michigan University Hockey Club returns to action this weekend against the University of Michigan-Dearborn in a home-and-home series.

The Eagles, who defeated Northwood Institute 12-4 Saturday, resume Central States Collegiate Hockey League play at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Plymouth Cultural Center and Ice Arena, 525 Farmer St.

Admission to all EMU home games is $4 for adults, $2 for students and $1 for senior citizens. Children under 12 are admitted free.

EMU travels the short distance Saturday to UM-Dearborn for the second game at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Mike Donnelly considers the series pivotal to EMU's chances of moving up in the ACHA national poll and earning a post-season berth.

The Eagles (6-3 in the CSCHL, 12-9) are ranked eighth in the country among college club teams, the Wolves (8-2-1, 11-6-1) fifth.

"We're sitting on the bubble right now with regards to making it to the nationals at Fargo, North Dakota, in March," Donnelly said.

"These games are probably the two most critical games of our season and could very well make or break us in our bid for a respectable finish within our league and an invitation to national competition."

The Eagles travel to Purdue next weekend and return home Jan. 22-23 to play the University of Minnesota and defending CSCHL national champ Iowa State.

Kicks under-11 champs

The 1983 Plymouth Kicks under-10 boys select soccer team won the under-11 championship of the Canton Soccerdome's first indoor session. The Kicks were 7-0-1 with three shutouts, scoring 83 goals and allowing 21.

The players are Kenny Wuorenma, Oliver Wolcott, Derek Vermeulen, T.J. Tomasso, Nick Tochman, Brian Thiess, Jay Sofen, Shane Smith, Jay Smith, Jon McGlone, Chris LaMasse, Phil Marrone, Marty Kane, Justin Griffin, Danny Gill and Brian Conway.

The Kicks are coached by Dennis Tochman and Bill Thiess.

Salem gymnasts still state power

How best to describe the state of Plymouth Salem gymnastics? How about: The rich get richer.

The Rocks, already one of the best high school teams in Michigan, got even better with the return of senior Kim Miller.

After two outstanding seasons at Salem, Miller put prep competition aside last year and concentrated on club gymnastics but has opted to rejoin the Salem squad.

"She decided to do high school gymnastics because there's more recognition," said first-year coach Johanna Anderson, a former Plymouth Canton standout (1989-91) who replaces Becky Martin. "She's looking for scholarship offers, and it can only help her."

Miller adds her talents to a team that already includes such fine gymnasts as senior Courtney Gonyea, juniors Alysia Sofios and Sarah Makins and sophomore Melissa Hopson.

With a lineup like that, the Rocks will be highly ranked again and favored to win a fourth straight Western Lakes Activities Association title.

Salem was ranked No. 1 in the state most of last season before finishing second behind two-time defending champion Muskegon Mona Shores.

"I don't have much doubt they will (win the WLAA)," Anderson said. "I'd say we'll be in the top three at state, but it all comes down to who stays healthy.

Rocks, Chiefs notch swim wins

As far as Plymouth Salem swim coach Chuck Olson is concerned, one out of two isn't bad at all.

The Rocks, who lost their dual-meet opener to perennial state power Dearborn, dunked Ann Arbor Huron, another state power, on Tuesday, 111-75.

"We've swum a couple of real good teams and we're 1-1, so we aren't feeling too bad right now," said Olson.

Leading the charge for Salem Tuesday were Scott Helmstadter and Alex Beard. Helmstadter won the 100-yard backstroke (1:00.66) and Beard the 100 breaststroke (1:06.85). They combined with Chris Lynn and Fred Locke to win the 200 medley relay (1:44.74).

Joe Ervin won the 200 individual medley (2:13.09) and Tim Nixon won the 100 butterfly (59.77).

Salem also took first in both freestyle relays. Beard, Marc Levitt, David Bracht and Matt Erickson took the 200 free relay (1:35.70). Erickson, Phil Hoffmeyer, Locke and Aaron Berlin won the 500 (3:35.16).

Salem will host the Livonia Stevenson Relays Saturday.

■ CANTON 107, BRIGHTON 79: The Chiefs also evened their dual-meet mark at 1-1. Craig Steshetz and Jeff Clark each won a pair of events. Steshetz took the 200 IM (2:12.31) and the 100 breaststroke (1:07.19). Clark won the 50 free (23.33) and the 100 free (51.58).

The two combined with Todd Gillihan and Joe Foster to win the 200 medley relay (1:50.37). Steshetz also teamed with Joe Foster, Ryan Henkel and Scott Mulder to win the 200 free relay (1:39.83).

Foster won the 100 butterfly (59.63) and Jason Fowler won the diving (209.55 points).

It came as little surprise that Jacques Smiley was wearing a Chicago Bulls jacket as he exited the Warren Bethesda locker room Tuesday following the Eagles' 69-50 rout of host Plymouth Christian Academy.

Even though the senior forward is far from being Michael Jordan, Smiley resembled the high-flying guard with several spectacular dunks en route to his 24-point, 15-rebound performance.

"You can say I kind of like him. He's my idol," said Smiley, who also wears the same No. 23 as Jordan.

Smiley led a second-half surge that doomed PCA, which fell to 1-5. Bethesda evened its record at 3-3.

The first half was close, featuring 14 lead changes. Bethesda, which led 30-26 at the half, used a 14-0 run late in the third quarter to pull away.

The game started as a duel between Smiley and PCA senior center Jason Neil, who finished with a team-high 21 points. Neil erupted for 11 points in the first quarter as he scored on several driving layups after giving a ball-and-head fake. But Bethesda adjusted and Neil was shut down for the remainder of the game.

Chiefs anticipate successful season

By Dan O'Meara

Plymouth Canton has had one of the state's top gymnastics teams for several years and is expected to retain that lofty status in 1993.

With most of his top gymnasts returning from a team that finished third in the state, coach John Cunningham anticipates another successful season.

"I figure this will be a good year late in the season," Cunningham said, adding the Chiefs need to develop depth. "It will be a building process. If someone wanted to rank us now, we'd be about fifth in the state."

Canton returns its top three performers in seniors Kim Rennolds and Jenny Tedesco and junior Kim Lewke.

"They're going to have to carry the team with the maturity and ability they have," Cunningham said.

Rennolds has been a standout for three seasons and was the Western Lakes Activities Association all-around champion last year with a 37.10 score. She was sixth on balance beam and floor exercise in the state meet as a Division I gymnast.

"She has actually improved," Cunningham said. "As the season progresses, she'll be doing some things she hasn't done: double folds on floor and a Tsukahara vault."

Tedesco and Lewke tied for sixth place among WLAA all-arounders. Tedesco also finished 11th in the state on vault in Division II. Lewke, who was third on vault in the league, has the option of competing in either Division I or II this year.

"(Tedesco) added a couple new tricks in early workouts," Cunningham said, adding she is trying to overcome a sprained ankle.

"This year Jenny has the potential to do some good things. Her bars routine is state caliber, and she's doing a front-hand-front vault (with a 10-point difficulty rating)."

"Kim is much stronger and lighter this year. Her floor routine is better already. She'll be much improved by the end of the year."

Canton lost Dawn Clifford, its fourth all-arounder, and Laura Anderson, its No. 2 performer on bars, to graduation.

Junior returnee Adrienne Brenner and freshman Kim Nowak will challenge for the fourth all-around position. Nowak has been out of gymnastics for three years but scored an 8.65 in her first floor exercise at the Freeland Invitational last month.

"As the season develops, we're going to be a powerful team if we have no injuries and the kids keep developing," Cunningham said. "We have a Kim-Kim-Kim-Jenny combination that will be real strong. Brenner could be the fourth or fifth in each event, and we have a number of others who can fill in."

Three gymnasts who provided depth last year and would have helped again are gone. Kathy Tiffin moved to Kansas City, Cara Stillings is a Congressional page in Washington, D.C., and won't be back until February and Kim Wagenschutz is not competing this year.

The Chiefs do return junior Julie Bak and sophomores Michelle Cimeot, Kari Jackson and Mindy Sofin. Freshmen Katie Demey and Jamie Sidley specialize in vaulting.

Bak is one of the top six vaulters, Cimeot is good on beam and floor and Jackson will compete on beam. Sofin was a regional qualifier on floor and does vault and bars, too.

The Chiefs began the dual-meet season Wednesday with a WLAA meet at Walled Lake Western. Canton competes Saturday in the Troy Athens Invitational.

because we had beaten (Mona Shores) twice, but Alysia got sick and Stephanie (Skeppstrom) and Melissa got hurt."

Miller was the state all-around champion as a freshman, and she placed second on balance beam and floor exercise, third on vault and fifth on bars two years ago.

"We'll be stronger than last year with Kim on the team," Anderson said. "I think she has improved tremendously on beam. She has more composure and more difficult tricks."

Gonyea is the top returning gymnast based on last season's performance. She was the third-best all-arounder at the state meet and finished second on vault, third on beam, fourth on floor and eighth on bars.

"She stands out on floor and beam because she's so graceful," Anderson said. "Bars is her weak spot, but she has improved — and she's always good on vault.

"We don't know who's new or out there yet, but I'm sure she'll be a contender for one of the top five (all-around) spots at state."

Sofios was unable to compete at the regional and state meets last year while she recovered from mononucleosis.

But she had the best all-around score in the area and undoubtedly would have fared well in state competition. As a freshman, Sofios tied Miller for second on floor, was 10th on bars and placed ninth in the all-around.

"She's an explosive competitor," Anderson said. "She always does much better in competition; she comes alive in front of a crowd.

"You can never count her out, because she always gets those big scores."

Hopson, who has recovered from her knee injury, excels on beam and floor. She was fifth in the state in those events and was sixth on vault. Hopson also managed a ninth-place finish among all-arounders.

"She'll be strong this year because (her knee) is not bothering her any more," Anderson said. "The judges always like her, because she has long, thin legs and is always graceful. She's technically precise on everything she does."

Makins is another all-around gymnast who has contributed to Salem's team success the last two years. She was eighth or better in every event except bars at the WLAA meet.

"She has improved tremendously on bars," Anderson said. "You can always count on her to get a good score. She's very consistent and helps with team scores."

Skeppstrom's knee injury prevented her from "continuing in gymnastics, but the Rocks return senior Stefanie Angiulo, who will perform on beam and floor. She's a veteran who will help a great deal in terms of depth.

Sophomore Nicole Teller, who has club experience and is best on bars, also returns, and Salem has added freshman Zoe Yockey, another club gymnast who will concentrate on bars and floor.

The Rocks began the season Wednesday with a WLAA dual meet against Farmington and will compete in the Troy Athens Invitational Saturday.

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slowly. The "slows", or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. Just like the "ring" that sticks to the side walls of your bathtub, this gook sticks to the inner side walls of your pipes.

Old-fashioned drain openers cannot remove this build up. They run along the bottom of your pipes. Even a small tunnel in the gook lets them flow out to the sewer, leaving the gook behind!

Now you can make your pipes run like new with Plumb Clean®. Not a drain opener, it's an advanced plumbing cleaner. Its revolutionary one-of-a-kind formula attaches and penetrates into the waste. Then, in just one to three weeks, it liquifies years of build up that drain openers can't even reach. Cleans from sink to sewer, not just the trap. Plumb Clean® is so effective it is money-back guaranteed!

SAVE MONEY. Because drain openers can't reach the gook on the sides of your pipes you have two choices. Call a plumber and spend $60-$120, or save money and use Plumb Clean®.

Now don't be fooled by look-alikes. Their label has safety cautions instead of a guarantee. And since they aren't as strong, their directions have you use twice as much. So, if your drains have the "slows", get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean® today!

head fakes. That's not what we planned. We eventually doubled down on him and didn't get for his fakes."

"They moved to a zone, but that's no excuse," Neil said. "I was having trouble getting the ball down low with my back to the basket. Every time I got the ball I was at the three-point line."

Bethesda clung to a 16-15 lead after the first quarter thanks to 14 second-chance points. Bethesda ripped down 10 offensive rebounds in the first quarter.

For the game Bethesda held a 46-26 rebound advantage, including a 25-12 edge on the offensive boards.

"Our biggest problem was their rebounding," PCA coach Dan Brandel said. "It wasn't necessarily their size, but we didn't put a body on them."

Despite 10 turnovers in the second quarter, Bethesda was able to open its lead to 30-26 at halftime after a scoring six points in the final minute of the quarter.

Bethesda put the game away by breaking open a 36-32 game with 14 unanswered points. Smiley and senior forward John Winowiecki led the charge with seven and five points, respectively.

Smiley supplied the game's highlight with a break-away, one-handed tomahawk dunk midway through the final quarter.

"In my opinion, he doesn't have good inside moves," Neil said. "He does have a great shot and can jump higher than anyone else, though."

Junior guard John Anderson added 18 points for Bethesda, which also got 11 points from Winowiecki.

"We only had one full day of practice since the Christmas break and it showed, because we didn't execute well in the first half," Mitchell said. "We executed better in the second half and also got balanced scoring, something we haven't been getting."

Neil and Brandel had different views on the effects of the holiday break.

"I think it showed," Neil said.

Post players lead Borgess to victory over CC cagers

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer

Some of the best help Redford Catholic Central basketball coach Bernie Holowicki received from his bench Tuesday night came from a guy wearing a suit and tie.

Assistant coach Jeff Suspeck, uh, you could say suspected quite a bit from Redford Bishop Borgess first-year coach Glen Donahue. After all, Suspeck played the last four years for Donahue at St. Mary's College in Orchard Lake.

"In the third quarter, I said to an assistant, 'They're going to go to the four corners any second,' and 10 seconds later, I heard Donahue yell, 'Four, four,' " Suspeck said. "I knew everything he was going to do. But knowing what they're doing and being able to stop it are two different things."

CC hung tough but the inside tandem of 6-foot-7 Perry Robinson and 6-5 Randy Whitfield led Borgess to a 70-61 victory in the Catholic League Central Division opener.

Robinson scored 19 of his team-high 20 points in the second half and tied Whitfield for the rebounding lead with 12. Robinson scored 11 straight points in the third quarter as Borgess went from owning a 36-33 lead to a commanding 49-35 advantage with about three minutes left in the quarter.

Robinson finished with 15 third-quarter points, including a pair of three-point plays and a baseline dunk. Borgess swatted several CC shots and enjoyed a 20-5 rebounding edge in the second half. For the game, the Spartans outrebounded CC 37-22.

■ 'Their big guys played tough and made us alter shots. I'd say they changed 10 to 12 of our shots. (Perry) Robinson came out of nowhere and shot with no fear.'

Bernie Holowicki
CC basketball coach

CC senior forward Brian Paluk scored a game-high 26 points on 11-21 shooting but managed only five rebounds. He had been averaging near 15 per game for the Shamrocks who are 2-4.

"Their big guys played tough and made us alter shots," Holowicki said. "I'd say they changed 10 to 12 of our shots. Robinson came out of nowhere and shot with no fear. We competed but, besides competing, we've got to beat people."

The win leaves Borgess at 4-1 overall. Each team made 26 field goals but Borgess made 18 of 24 free throws compared to CC's 6 of 9. Whitfield and Charles Smith joined Robinson in double figures with 17 and 16 points, respectively.

"We're still struggling to find an identity and haven't played a good game yet, but somewhere down the line we will," Donahue said. "Perry's been coming on every game."

One of CC's best inside players, 6-3 sophomore Mitch Anderson, transferred to South Lyon after Christmas break and that hurt CC's depth. The Shamrocks started normal-reserve Sean Gallagher and their best contribution off the bench came from senior forward Jeff Gutt who had seven points and five rebounds.

"I knew we'd be hurting (without Anderson)," Holowicki said. "I wish him good luck. His rebounding and athletic ability for a sophomore was very good."

CC trailed only 32-29 at halftime as junior guard Andy Kummer, playing with the flu, scored nine of his 11 points in the first half. But Kummer didn't take a shot in the second half until scoring on a running bank shot with 2:51 left that made the score 66-56 in Borgess' favor.

Point guard Damien Baskerville also kept the Shamrocks close, scoring six of his 10 points in the fourth quarter.

"Andy played one of his better games and he wanted to win bad," Holowicki said. "He's a great leader."

Salem remains unbeaten at 5-0

Plymouth Salem's basketball team began the New Year with a victory Tuesday, winning its fifth game without a loss.

The No. 8-ranked Rocks outscored host Waterford Kettering 39-19 in the second half and pulled away to a 58-34 victory after a close first half that had Salem ahead 19-15.

"It was a typical back-from-vacation game," Salem coach Bob Brodie said. "We had a real slow start. We shot too quick, but our defense was real good and we held them in check.

"Finally, in the second half, we picked up the tempo on offense and got the running game going."

Mike Slone scored 21 points, including 14 in the second half, to lead Salem. Brandon Slone added 11 and Adam Hammons 10. Hammons also had 10 rebounds.

Scott Harris was high scorer for Kettering (3-2) with eight points.

The Rocks begin Western Lakes Activities Association competition Friday when they play host to Livonia Churchill.

■ YPSI 73, CANTON 49: Ypsilanti turned up the heat in the third quarter Tuesday and outscored the visiting Chiefs 31-11 en route to the non-league victory.

Canton (1-4) trailed by only two points (26-24) at halftime, but the Braves (4-1) led 57-35 after three periods and outscored the Chiefs 47-25 in the second half.

"They'd been pressing the whole game, but they really cranked up the intensity in the third quarter and we really struggled against it," Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner said.

"They picked our pockets four or five times for uncontested baskets. At this point, we're struggling against full-court, man-to-man pressure, but we'll go back to work on it tomorrow."

Marlos Long scored 20 points, which included four three-point field goals, to lead Ypsilanti. Keith Grant added 18 for the Braves.

Canton's Matt Paupore had 12 points, Bryan Whittle 10, Al Hollingsworth and Owen Crosby eight apiece. Crosby also pulled down 11 rebounds.

The Chiefs led 15-12 after one quarter but were outscored 14-9 in the second.

"We played pretty good defense in the first half, and that's what kept us close," Van Wagoner said, adding he was disappointed with the offensive execution.

"We worked hard the last three days at being patient with the ball. Then we get in a game and throw it up after two or three passes. There's no way we can play a run-and-gun game with a team like Ypsilanti."

Canton plays its first WLAA game Friday at North Farmington.

"We've played some awfully tough (non-league) teams," Van Wagoner said, "and we're looking forward to league play and doing well in our league."

Bowling leagues have big meeting

AL HARRISON

It's important that all leagues are represented as the Greater Detroit Bowling Association will hold its semi-annual meeting beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday at Sunnybrook Lanes, 7191 E. 17 Mile Road, Sterling Heights.

One officer from each GDBA-sanctioned league should be present. Refreshments and door prizes will follow the meeting.

The officer must be either a president or secretary, unless other representatives have written authorization.

Nominations will be made at the meeting for president, all four vice-presidents, along with four at-large board of directorships, one from each district. Delegates to the ABC convention, March 19 in Tulsa, Okla., will be elected at this meeting.

■ The 1993 GDBA Tournament (team, doubles and singles) will be held again this year at Cloverlanes in Livonia.

Teams with a 951 average and over are slated for the Classic Division (first prize $2,500), with those under 950 in the Regular Division (first prize $5,000).

Closing date for entries is Feb. 28.

Meanwhile, the third annual Mixed Team tournament will be March 28 through April 25. First place is $3,000 (based on 300 entries). The cost is $15 per person. Teams must be comprised of two men and two women.

For more information, call 773-6350. (Secretaries are asked to send in mid-season averages as of Dec. 31.)

■ Local area bowlers have seen the exploits of Gene Stus, who is among the Classic competitors in the Stroh's All-Stars and has been seen on national TV in the Senior Pro Bowlers tour.

Stus was recently named Bowler of the Year by the Senior Tour. He is the first senior to shoot a 300 game on TV (ESPN), a feat he accomplished last year. Stus also won a pair of Tour titles.

■ Dennis Berryman of Redford, a member of the Michigan State University bowling squad, fired a 300 game recently for the Spartans during competition in Jackson.

It was his first perfect game after coming close with a 298 earlier. He is the son of Keith and Debbie Berryman of Redford.

SC cagers try to solve offensive woes

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

The nearly three weeks off during the holiday break were put to good use by Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team.

Or at least that's what Ocelot coach Dave Bogataj hopes.

The team did put in the time on court, said Bogataj. Back to basics they went, trying to unravel the reasons behind an 0-for-7 December and what Bogataj called "the five-minute mystery."

"We went at it," said Bogataj, whose team enters the second half of the season with a 3-10 overall record (0-4 in the Eastern Conference). "Two hours of good work a day and then some."

That didn't include the shooting drills, aimed at restoring some lagging confidence and curing that "five-minute mystery," Bogataj's name for the stretch in each game during which SC went into a shell offensively and failed to score.

The goal during the three weeks off was to "iron out some things." At the top of the list is 6-7 sophomore Jarvis Murray, an all-conference player a year ago whose production has lagged somewhat this season.

Because Murray is the only returning starter from a year ago, it would seem logical that the Ocelots try to get the ball inside to him often — a lesson Bogataj continued to preach. "Jarvis has got to touch the ball," he said simply.

And he will, if the team Bogataj is coaching returns intact. First semester grades were to be posted Wednesday; any academic casualties wouldn't be known for sure until then.

Bogataj's optimism remained intact, despite the pressure of a seven-game losing skid. "I think the time we spent over Christmas really helped us," he said. "I really believe we can do some things and be efficient.

"Obviously, depth is going to hurt us. But I think we've eliminated the five-minute mystery."

Of the 14 players who were on the roster at the start of the season, only seven remain. The lack of players will probably cause Bogataj to use more zone defense than he would like to. "But it'll be an aggressive zone," he vowed.

During holiday practices, Bogataj was impressed with the play of Shawn Branum and Lamonte Fondren, and he noted that point guard Vince Turner "was gaining confidence." Also, Steve Whitlow, a Redford Catholic Central graduate who did not play for nearly two years, is rounding into shape and improving every game.

Fondren, the 6-5 freshman from Oak Park, has switched from small forward to power forward, where he'll share time with Courtney Williamsonbey.

The question now is: Will the work, the additional drills, the "attention to detail," as Bogataj described it, help?

Only time will tell, and the clock starts anew Saturday when SC hosts Alpena CC (2-2 in the conference). The Lumberjacks are led by 6-5 J.B. Gould, but they've also added Detroit Mackenzie graduate Terrance Williams, a 6-7 forward, to their roster.

If the Ocelots are to turn things around, this is the month to do it. One reason for their poor record was a lack of home work: They played all but two of their first 13 games on the road.

The next seven games SC plays are at home. At the end of the month, they hit the road again — traveling to Oakland CC. After that, it's back home to SC for two games.

Bogataj would make no predictions on how his team would fare during the January stretch, particularly considering there was no way to tell who would still be eligible.

But sooner or later, if the Ocelots are to succeed, they're going to have to find that corner — and turn it.

'Two Into One' feast of laughter

Performances of the Birmingham Theatre production of "Two Into One," continue through Jan. 31. For ticket information, call the box office at 644-3533.

BARBARA MICHALS

"Two Into One" is about a married congressman trying for a romantic tryst with a Washington secretary. That may sound too true to be funny, but in the very capable hands of author Ray Cooney, director Ron Holgate, and an excellent cast, The Birmingham Theatre's production of "Two Into One," provides an absolute feast of laughter.

Cooney, best known for his comedy "Run for Your Wife," is a master at writing classic farce. This time he turns his characters loose in adjoining hotel suites where they can whirl in and out of multiple doors, walking in mistaken identities, and generally create mayhem.

By the middle of Act Two, the lunacy has built to such a crescendo that it seems as if the plot could have nowhere further to go, but a surprise development sets in motion a whole new set of absurd situations; the hilarity continues right to the closing lines.

Under Holgate's direction, the actors' comic timing is impeccable, and the laughs flow smoothly throughout the show. After directing and starring in the farce "Lend Me a Tenor" at the Birmingham Theatre last fall, and triumphing as the lead in "Man of LaMancha" there last spring, Holgate has become one of the Birmingham Theatre's best assets.

Terrence Caza is enormously appealing as the prominent congressman who lusts after a White House secretary. Initially smooth and debonair, he hilariously loses his cool when his carefully laid plans fall completely apart.

The congressman relies on the help of his devoted personal private secretary George, who is so uptight about the proposed assignation that he botches everything. Anderson Matthews is outstanding as George. He has a wonderfully expressive face that never quits as he deftly handles the heaviest comic load.

In George's attempts to cover for his employer he finds himself embroiled in the amorous advances of the congressman's wife, Pamela (Mary O'Brady), while he dodges a meddlesome hotel manager (David Rogers), a nosy Chinese waiter (Stephen Xavier Lea), and a prudish congresswoman (Dorothy Stinnette) bent on sniffing out vice.

O'Brady and Stinnette are both very credible and amusing. Rogers' soulful eyes and droll delivery are enormously funny, and Lea's bungling waiter, dumb like a fox, is memorably comic.

As Jennifer, the bombshell secretary, Traci Lyn Thomas never quite seems like a femme fatale, but John Schiappa does a nice turn as her very perplexed husband.

"Two Into One" is a merry way to kick off the new year. Word-of-mouth on the show should be excellent providing theatergoers can stop laughing long enough to tout its praises.

Barbara Michals is a retired Southfield English teacher. A theater critic for the last 19 years, she is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

Toy instrumental in musician's career

By Keely Wygonik
Staff Writer

Children's toys often become instruments for developing talents. Remember that when your child starts banging on a new drum set.

Laura Oltman who will be performing with her husband Michael Newman in the second concert of the American Artists Series 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 17, never planned to play the $7 toy guitar she ordered from a Sears catalog.

It was supposed to be a prop in a rock and roll band she formed with some friends who lived across the street from her in Livonia when she was eight, and Motown was hot.

"We never played music, we turned the stereo up and stood in front of the house lip syncing," said Oltman. "We listened to records, and the radio and were up on the latest music. We had a steel string acoustic guitar that no one could play, and for drums we used boxes and coffee cans."

Oltman said she didn't even especially like the guitar until her mother figured out how to play "Down In the Valley," on it.

"I learned chords, and mostly taught myself how to play," she said. "I really did like playing it."

When she was 12 Oltman started studying classical guitar, and continued her education by studying with the masters including Andres Segovia. She met her husband Michael at the Aspen Music Festival in 1977. They got married in 1981, and have been performing together as the Newman & Oltman Guitar Duo ever since. Both are 35.

Concert tours have taken them to 49 states, Canada, Europe, the Far East and the Carribbean. This year they'll tour California, Arizona, and make their third trip to Alaksa. They have recorded with MusicMasters, Sheffield Lab and the Musical Heritage Society. Their most recent CD "Tango Suite," was issued on the MusicMasters label, and another one is "in the works."

Both are currently Ensemble-in-Residence at the Mannes College of Music in New York. Newman is on the faculty of the college, and Oltman teaches at Princeton and Rutgers universities.

Besides being a sort of homecoming, their concert on Jan. 17 at the Kingswood Auditorium, Cranbrook, 500 Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Hills, is special for another reason. One of the pieces they will be performing is "Laments and Dances, from the Irish for two guitars and string quartet," by contemporary American composer, Arnold Black.

It is the first time the piece, which was commissioned by the duo, will be played in Michigan. Black will attend the concert and give the 2 p.m. preview program which is open free of charge to concert goers. Concert tickets are $12.50, students $7.50, call 851-5044.

"It's very melodic, and beautifully written," said Newman.

"It's based on an Irish harp tune by Turlough O'Carolan," said Oltman.

"When we were looking for ideas, my cousin Sally Rogers, who is a folk singer, told me about O'Carolan, and said we should look him up. He lived in the 1600s. It was the tradition then to tell the story of a clan through harp tunes. It's a serious piece of music."

The American Artists Chamber Players who will be performing with the duo for the selection by Black, and a work by Francois de Fossa are: Marguerite Deslippes, violin; Hart Hollman, viola; Linda Sneeden Smith, violin; and John Thurman, cello.

The program will also include "Cordoba" and "Seville" by Spanish composer Issac Albeniz, works by Fernando Sor, Jean Francaix and selections from the duo's CD.

The school fundraising season was just a couple of weeks away. What could they do?

"We decided to do a test run and overprint the existing name in metallic silver to see if it would work," Shelby said. "They loved the product and it came out better than anticipated."

Graphic Enterprises of Detroit, a large-run commercial printer in their network, did the job.

"The printer who originally did the brochure wanted no part of it," Shelby said. "He said, 'God bless them.'

The two salespeople probably saved $25,000 by making over the old brochures rather than starting from scratch, Larry said.

■ A firm needed some transparencies prepared and colorized for an out-of-town sales presentation the next day. EPN got the call only a few hours before the rep's plane was scheduled to depart.

A courier was placed on standby. When the prototypes were finished, the product was quickly dispatched to Apha 21 of Southfield, a network company, which handled the technical duties, then returned 20 minutes before the flight departed.

"They could have had 10 people looking at one art board with 35 pages, but it would have been ridiculous," Larry said.

■ A business needed a flier prepared to be distributed with payroll checks later that afternoon. It had the art work, but its regular printer was loaded that day and just couldn't get to the job.

EPN got a call from a PR/marketing firm that was aware of its service. EPN lined up Kipco Services of Wixom, a printer in the network to handle the project.

The deadline was met and the customer was happy. "They ordered a reprint the day it was delivered, more of the same pictures," Larry said.

Human nature being what it is and the unnerving propensity for things to go wrong if they possibly can sometimes override good intentions.

"From my experience, one person thinks another handled it, another person may have been overloaded and it just slipped through the cracks," Shelby said.

"To tell people how to solve problems most efficiently and meet deadlines, that's my first choice," he said. "I just don't want to sell."

The network participants, which are paid only when they're used on a job, benefit from the association, too, Shelby said.

"We're selling for them," he said. "They don't have to pay us. They're getting business they otherwise wouldn't get in many cases. It's unique."

EPN is a logical extension of Fox Printing, which subcontracts all of the special forms work it gets.

"We're marriage makers," Larry said. "After seeing what's going on, telemarketing accomplishments, projects we have . . . I'm proposing that in two or three years, we'll double our total business."

■ 'This is no different than if your car breaks down on the freeway. You have your own mechanic, but you're going to call road service. You want that comfort zone.'

extend memory retention.

While such results are difficult to measure, Jim Flaherty, vice president of Hiram Walker & Sons, a Windsor-based liquor importer and distributor, said he was pleased after using the Great Imposters to spice up several sales meetings.

"Every year we have a national sales meeting, and the puppets were brought in to add some humor to the event. They've worked out very well, and the people who saw and were impersonated by them, remark about the puppets frequently," said Flaherty.

North said the Great Imposters was on the verge of signing a contract with a company based in Oakland County. Clients of the Fort Wayne headquarters include General Motors, Shell Oil, IBM, Isuzu, Kraft Cheese and Texaco.

The Great Imposters offer a series of products and services which range from a rental library of generic puppets on video to customized productions written and produced for a specific client.

North said 95 percent of the puppets appear on video, with either a live speaker engaging an on-screen personality or an imposter delivering the message without interruption. The remaining work is live. The cost to create a customized puppet of a president or sales manager is $1,250 for the first minute, said North.

"The prices go down after that, and most presentations average between three and five minutes," she said. The Great Imposters even spoof well-known television shows, such as "60 Minutes" and "This is Your Life." In the puppet version of "60 Minutes," the Great Imposters send their ace reporter, Mike Malice, to investigate the working style of a selected employee.

For custom videos, a profile of the individual along with a photograph or video tape is required. Lead time is 30 to 60 days, and the puppets can mimic gestures, looks, movements and anecdotes. Voices are produced using regional accents.

"We do all the taping and creating in Fort Wayne, and then ship out the shows or tapes as needed," said Miller. "We've even had some people who have asked to keep the puppets after seeing a likeness of themselves live or on screen."

■ 'Business meetings can be dull, boring affairs, but when a puppet is added, it becomes a real ice breaker.'

Puppets deliver business messages

■ Introducing a little levity to business meetings is one reason to invite a dummy. But Great Imposters are also used to aid in responsiveness and retention of materials.

BY R.J. KING
SPECIAL WRITER

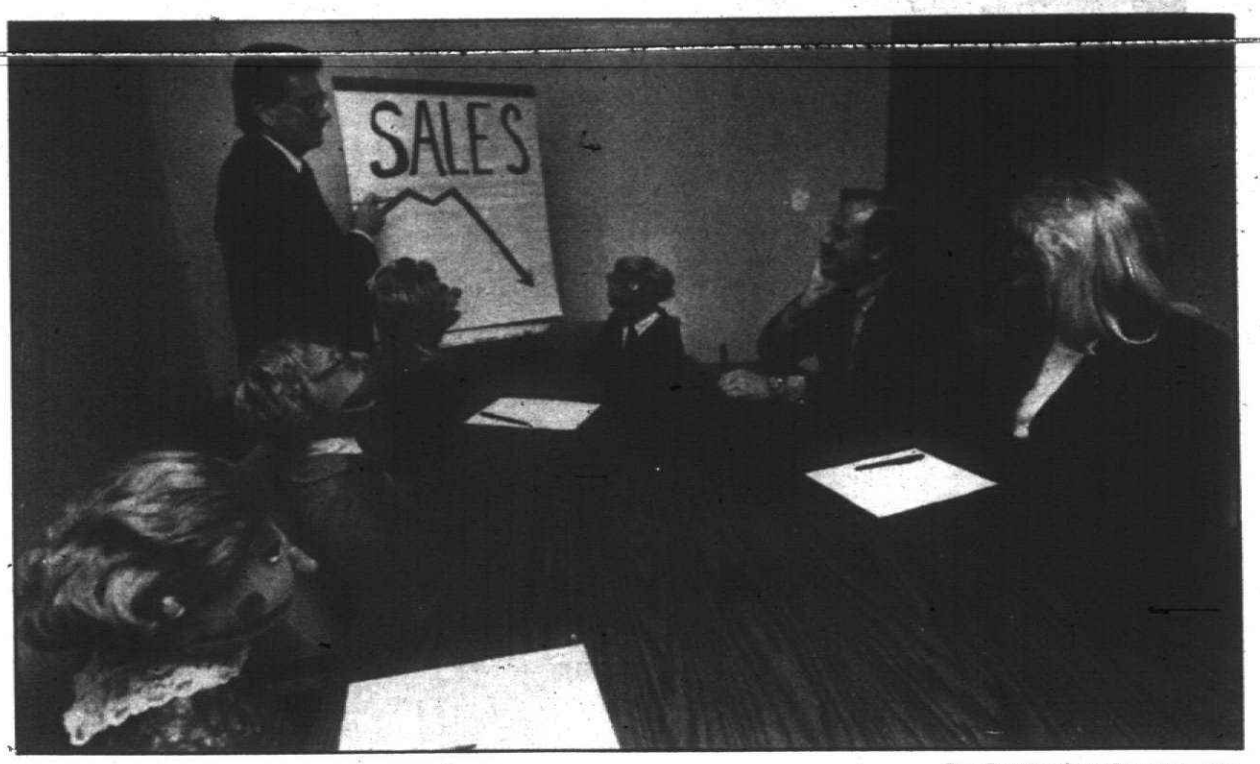
For that next sales meeting or new product announcement, why not go the route of Sesame Street? After all, if puppets like Ernie and Bert can hold the attention span of children, they should engage adult minds as well.

At least, that's the logic of a new marketing firm in Farmington Hills, which touts a staff of over 40 employees, 95 percent of which are puppets made to look like famous celebrities or corporate personnel.

"Business meetings can be dull, boring affairs, but when a puppet is added, it becomes a real ice breaker," said Jennifer North, director of sales and marketing for Great Imposters Marketing, which opened in October.

"Everyone loves to be immortalized, and a puppet can say things about a company president that employees could never get away with. The puppets are kind of goofy and are meant to bring a touch of fun to the workplace."

The Great Imposters opened its Farmington Hills marketing office based on projections the metro Detroit market was ripe for laughter. The company was founded by Dick Miller in 1980, a self-taught puppeteer based in Fort Wayne, Ind.



BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Puppet power: Bob Eissfeldt (left) and associates conduct a sales meeting for Dick Miller, company founder, and Jennifer North, director of sales and marketing of the Great Imposters.

"Before starting the company, I was in advertising, and one day someone asked if I could make some puppets," said Miller, who was inspired by the late Muppets creator Jim Henson, a founder of the children's show, Sesame Street, which appears on public television.

"Soon after I purchased some blank puppets and went into business for myself. We have over 200 wigs, and hundreds of ears, eyes and other components. But it's hard work. We have to lay on our backs to move the puppets, while the Muppets are presented from elevated sets."

By enlivening a sales meeting with a puppet who looks, acts and speaks like John Wayne or George Patton, North said the Great Imposters can generate a more receptive and responsive audience, while at the same time

Print network established to 'douse fires'

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

The principals of Emergency Printing Network in Farmington figure that human nature and Murphy's Law will go a long way toward priming the pump of their fledgling venture.

Brothers Larry and Shelby Fox launched EPN last summer for businesses of all sizes facing last-minute rush jobs or emergencies involving reports, brochures, fliers or other printing needs.

The Foxes first lined up about a dozen keylining, graphics, die cutting, engraving, binding and printing specialists who agreed to be available at a moment's notice to expedite problems that might arise.

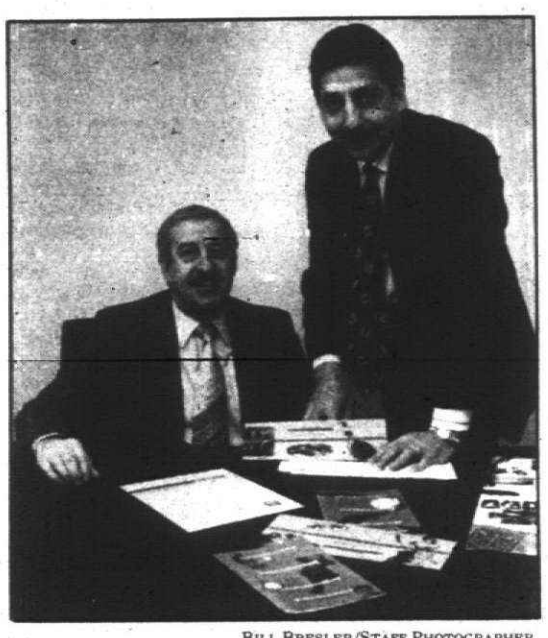
Then they contacted PR firms, ad agencies, designers and marketing directors to spread the word about the service's availability through an 800 telephone number 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"We go as far as to say EPN is not looking to be your regular printer or supplier," Shelby said. "We understand most businesses have existing relationships with printing partners.

"This is no different than if your car breaks down on the freeway. You have your own mechanic, but you're going to call road service. You want that comfort zone."

Larry Fox, who established Fox Printing Services 14 years ago, shakes his head when recalling some of the glitches he's seen with 40 years in the business. Some of them were clearly preventable, he said, using a driving analogy to make the point.

"How could a guy run out of gas?" Larry said.



BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Expediters: Larry and Shelby Fox started Emergency Printing Network to help business people deal with unexpected printing problems that develop at the 11th hour.

"It happens all the time, every day. It shouldn't happen. You know, 'I could've, should've, would've.' But it always happens."

Shelby illustrated how EPN has responded to three specific challenges since its founding.

■ Two sales people decided to go out on their own when a company unexpectedly closed a fundraising candy sales division. The pair obtained 40,000 four-color brochures but couldn't use the existing name.

Money transfer needs care

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

If you change jobs this year and are entitled to a pension, profit sharing or 401(k) distribution, make sure that your former employer sends the money directly to another financial custodian rather than pass it along for you to make the transfer.

It could save you cash and grief at income tax time.

After the first of the year, employers of employees who leave must send to the IRS a 20-percent withholding on all pension distributions not directly sent by the company to another trustee.

Congress mandated the change last summer to fund an extension of unemployment benefits. The law formerly allowed distributions to employees with no withholding, then gave employees up to 60 days to transfer the funds themselves without penalty.

Employers must notify employees of the law's ramifications when employees leave.

Here's a theoretical example of how an employee who doesn't designate a direct transfer and is entitled to a $10,000 pension distribution can be hurt when changing jobs.

First off, the employee will receive only $8,000 because the company must withhold 20 percent or $2,000. Then, the employee must designate on his 1040 tax form additional income for the year of the $2,000 withheld. That will result in additional tax of $300 at the 15-percent bracket.

The employee also will be assessed a 10-percent penalty tax on the $2,000 withholding if he's less than 59½ years for tapping into retirement funds at too young an age. That amounts to another $200 and a grand total of $500 of tax due in this example.

The employee can claim $2,000 of overwithholding on tax forms for a net refund of $1,500 — but he's still out $500 he wouldn't have been had the company directly transferred the entire $10,000.

The employee could avoid all additional taxes and penalties by making up the difference in withholding from other personal funds, but a lot of people don't have the resources or inclination to do that.

"The most important thing is to be knowledgeable about the change," said Arthur Meyers, a lawyer with Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone. "If you know you want to put it (distribution) into an IRA, have the company do it directly and don't take the distribution yourself."

If you're in your upper 50s and have a pension distribution of at least $50,000, Miller advises tax counsel to determine whether it's more advantageous to use forward tax averaging and pay immediately or roll over a pension distribution into an IRA.

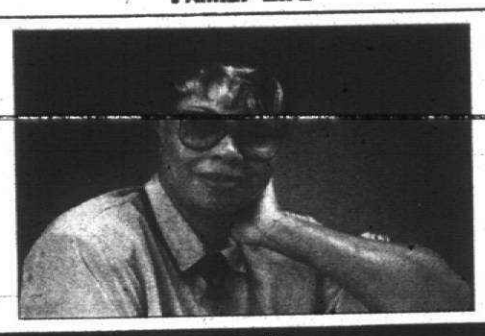
FAMILY LIFE



EARTHA DEYAMPERT

Family life readers are valued source

A New Year can bring new beginnings, new directions, revised strategies, goals and renewal. As the newest Suburban Life columnist who discusses family issues, I would like to hear from you, the reader. What are some of the topics or issues you would like to appear in this column during 1993?

Family issues are quite extensive, ranging from budgeting household dollars to each member sharing responsibilities that are pertinent to the family management structure.

Family issues are about getting along with other family members, or being able to recognize and respond to common childhood illness, developmental stages, emergencies, signs and symptoms of child abuse and special needs.

Family issues and concerns also reach outside the home. They touch practically all sectors of society, as indicated in previous articles. In as much as it presents a sober focal point for rehabilitation, restructuring and revitalization, building on it appears to be highly rated on the political scale.

Harmony: It comes in 4 parts

To watch them rehearse is like watching a ballet of the hands and mouth. The hands belong to the director the mouths are those of the members of the Rennissance Chorus, an all-male group that sings in four-part harmony.

"Get these out there," says Matt Coombs, pursing his lips in an exaggerated pucker. "You can do it."

He may be tired from ringing the Salvation Army bell all day, but Coombs comes alive before the all-male chorus. With the precision of a surgeon, he leads the group through rehearsal. His hands move up, down, all around, as he polishes the harmonizing in the group's newest song, "Old Friends Just Like Old Songs."

Gathered on risers in a hall at Newburg United Methodist Church in Livonia, the chorus responds to each and every one of Coombs' directions. Keep the music from sounding flat? No problem. Pick up the tune in mid-verse? On the count of three.

It sounds like hard work, but the final product is a melodious mix of bass, tenor, barritone and lead . . . what four-part harmony, or barbershop singing, is all about.

And rightly so for the Wayne Chapter of the Renaissance Chorus (formerly the Wonderland Chorus), a part of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America Inc. The chorus has been Pioneer District champions eight times and were international contest representatives six times.

"It's easy and it's fun," said Al Truax, who sings lead in the 55-member chorus. "People who like to sing like to perform and they like to hear the applause."

Childhood experience helps with her new job

BY JULIE BROWN

Carol Thompson grew up in a family with four girls and one boy, so she's used to being in a strong female environment. When she was growing up and active in Girl Scouting, she found that organization offered many opportunities.

"It was a place where it was acceptable to take a leadership role." That wasn't always the case when Thompson, 38, was in school.

Her experience as a Brownie, Junior and Cadette Girl Scout is coming in handy these days. Thompson, a Trenton resident, is the new Plymouth-Canton-Northville field director for the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council.

"I've been out of the state for 14 years," said Thompson, who grew up in Trenton, graduating from Trenton High School and from Eastern Michigan University with a bachelor's degree in arts administration in 1978. "I was ready to come home and be closer to family."

Thompson, who started work with the Girl Scout council in early December, had been in eastern Kentucky before she moved back to Michigan this past summer. She'd just finished a project with an art center there.

She'd done a lot of arts education and social service projects with Girl Scout councils. Much of her work in Kentucky was community-based, "how it can help communities."

Her attraction to Girl Scouting was its strong connection to communities, and the way in which girls are trained to be responsible for their community and interact with it on issues on a daily basis.

She has volunteer contacts in Northville, Plymouth and Canton who work with her to develop goals, programming and training. Volunteers help troop leaders and girls at the troop level with programming and membership.

Scouting focuses a great deal on how teams work, she said. It acknowledges and encourages girls "so that everyone gets a chance to excel at what they're good at. So it raises self-esteem as well as ability."

She knows what she wants girls to get from Scouting. "I think if they each can have a sense of who they are and their place in the world." Scouting provides that for girls, allowing them to try new things and be themselves without competitive pressure.

Thompson got such things from Scouting, and has fond memories of her involvement as a girl. "Lots of great camping stories. I don't know if there's one particular memory or not." She still has friends from her Scouting days.

The birth of a new Saturn showroom is hardly an everyday event. And not just because it weighs so much. In fact, once you consider the kind of sales consultants waiting inside, and the kind of cars they sell, it can turn out to be a pretty happy occasion.

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Mrs. Green,

I am 80 years old. Don't feel like it. So far had six brain seizures, two mild strokes, cancer of the colon — no chemo — cancer of the stomach — no radiation — high risk stomach surgery, blockage of the bowels — no stomach problems — eat three meals a day.

Tests show no damage to my brain. Lost my hearing after the seizures and a lot of strength. Walk like a penguin but still get around in the house. Past the door, a wheel chair.

Thanks for taking your time.

J.M.,
Farmington Hills

The writer in today's column appears to be a modern day Job who has been tested by numerous severe illnesses that would have vanquished a person of lesser strength and faith.

At the age of 80, determination and persistence are traits which are quickly recognized in this handwriting. She intends to accomplish what she sets about to do. Problems are seen as challenges.

This is an extrovert who needs other people to share her life. She is uninhibited and wants to live her life to the fullest.

This is also a woman of maturity with interests that cover a wide spectrum. She is mentally active and spiritually seeking.

Pervasive in this handwriting is a good imagination. She is creative and resourceful. These qualities should make her an interesting companion. However, I can't help wondering if she is aware of her tendency to be critical and argumentative at times.

Large handwriting with showy capital letters reflects a desire for attention. Some of the things she does for others may be calculated. She enjoys the attention this brings her.

With all her health problems she is still willing to handle responsibility. The ability to organize and structure her daily life seems apparent.

This woman feels her experiences deeply. She fondly recalls the happy ones and does not always forget those that are not so happy.

Our writer is vocal and shares many things about herself. Currently, however, there appears to be something bothering her which she cannot share.

At times, she is restless and longs to be more physically active. She is also cognizant of her health limitations and does not allow them to get the best of her.

Even when feeling a little down, it seldom lasts very long. She appears to have commendable ability to pull herself up by her own bootstraps! I salute this remarkable lady!

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are all helpful. If you have various styles of handwriting, please include them. Lorene Green regrets that she cannot send out personal replies.

Bridge veteran is a nice guy too

THE BRIDGE CROWD

WOODY BOYD

Leonard Harmon is a well-medaled veteran of many world-class championships who lives in East Hampton, Long Island, with his lovely wife (from Southfield) Marion. Today Lenny may be caught on occasion playing in Manhattan some Monday night with friends, but other than that his expertise at the table is seldom paraded in this modern age of bridge.

Thirty-odd years ago, Lenny's name was in lights on the major bridge marquees of America. He was a member of the American team in the 1959 Bermuda Bowl and the 1960 World Team Olympiad. Coupled with these world-class acclamations are many North American championships. Admittedly his greatest year was 1958 when he won the McKenny Trophy competing against the strongest field of United States players ever seated.

The ACBL doesn't give an award for "Mr. Nice Guy," but he would have won such a mythical tribute in a landslide for his gentlemanly manner and dignified presence at play or away from the table. He saves his sageness for his favorites, but if you are lucky enough to be with him when he's moved to do so, you can learn an awful lot about this magnificent game from his scholarly tutorial discourses.

Many of Lenny's most notable achievements were in partnership with the brilliant Ivar Stakgold, professor of mathematics at Northwestern University. It wasn't easy far either to keep even with their demanding professions (Lenny owned a very successful insurance agency in New York City) and the rigorous major tournament schedule of that era, but together they succeeded in capturing many of the laurels awarded in that period of bridge history.

Today's layout is one of the famous Harmon's Maxima Cum Laudes of contract bridge. The hand is devilish for two reasons. It isn't easy to bid and even harder to play at the 12-trick level. Confronted with a trump lead, not the spade suit which the opponents bid, the probability of success dissipates considerably.

With the spade lead, declarer has time to win the diamond king and still ruff two diamonds in dummy. As the cards are, this line of play is invincible as he only loses to the trump queen. With the diabolical heart lead, the second diamond ruff is gone and that loser must be attended to. This can only be achieved by finding the clubs right and then correctly guessing the card to play. The club honors must be divided or with East. If West has a winning honor, he must have a singleton trump so he can't eliminate dummy's last trump. Now you have seen 52, but Harmon had only the benefit of the dummy, his own and West's lead, yet his suspicion of the out cards position was clairvoyant, and he accomplished the task with deftness.

At trick one — the heart jack, winning the queen with the king. Now, a diamond to the king and dummy's club king. When East didn't play the ace, he pitched a diamond. West spade return was won in dummy and now the club jack. It mattered not whether East played his queen. If he didn't, a diamond is discarded. If he did, Lenny ruffs and re-enters dummy with a diamond ruff and then the club 10 for the other low-diamond loser.

You say lucky, and I say Lenny certainly was, but great players make their own luck and they do it usually by using their gifted skills adroitly.

Nothing to do? Trying skating

STAFF WRITER

The plaintive cry "There's nothing to do" during the holiday vacation was easily answered in the Plymouth-Canton community.

Open skating at the Plymouth Cultural Center ice rink provided plenty to do for those vacationing students and their elders. Many took advantage of open skating last week, including Ryan Porte, 14, of Canton.

"There's no other place to skate," said Porte, who was waiting for open skating to begin Monday. He was concentrating on improving his form. Porte, who plays hockey with his friends, was enjoying the break from his studies.

"Pretty good. I don't have to do work."

Older skaters also took to the ice, including Lyman Bittman, 77, of Ann Arbor. "I skate over there mostly," he said, referring to Ann Arbor. Bittman came to Plymouth for the "opportunity to skate on ice that's usually not quite so loaded with people."

He takes ice dancing lessons at the Plymouth Cultural Center and skates strictly for fun. He's found the general skating time gives him an opportunity to improve his skills.

Dave Schmidt came to the rink one recent Monday with his children, Matt, 8, and Christine, 7.

"We've only been here twice," said Schmidt, a Plymouth Township resident. "My son is interested in getting into hockey. We come up here to see how he likes it."

He's considering getting his son into hockey lessons at the Cultural Center. Schmidt didn't take to the ice himself during his recent visit, although he considered it when he saw that the ice was relatively clear.

"Last time we came up it was quite crowded."

Carol Lee, who owns the pro shop at the Cultural Center, sees plenty of skaters arrive for open skating, particularly this time of year. She rents skates in all sizes, from those for very small children on up through adults.

"It's real popular, especially in the wintertime. When it gets cold they think of outdoor activities like skiing and skating, things like that," Lee said. "It's an inexpensive activity that a family can bring its kids to. It's a lot cheaper than going to the show.

"Plus, on top of that it's healthy," added Lee, who doesn't skate anymore due to a bad back. "We've been having a lot of seniors come back to skating."

For information on open skating at the Plymouth Cultural Center ice rink, 525 Farmer, call 455-6620.

"I think that's really wonderful."

Her immediate goal is getting connected with the Plymouth-Canton-Northville area. She and volunteers will spend the next six months or so working on a long-range plan for the next two to three years.

What's key is that the girls and volunteers decide which direction to head in, she added. "They really have to decide where their interests are and where their concerns are, and then we'll figure out how to achieve those."

The Plymouth-Canton-Northville area has more than 2,000 girls participating in Scouting, more than one-fifth of the 10,000 or so girls served by the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council last year.

She's noticed some changes in the area since she was in college. "It seems like it's grown a lot in the 20 years since I've known it."

The local volunteers have diverse backgrounds, but know how to cooperate and share. They're committed to the community and to girls, and to making the community a better place.

"They look like good communities to live and work in," said Thompson, who's considering a move to the area in the next four to sixth months.

She's been impressed with the caliber of people who work at the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council, noting the low turnover. "It seems like a really strong group. People seem pretty happy most of the time. That all reflects well on the organization."

She has several leisure-time interests. "I garden a lot. This isn't the best time of year for it, but I'm already looking at seed catalogs."

Do you know that a day of judgment is coming for every person on earth? Yes, the Bible teaches that "it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment" (Heb 9:27). Judgment Day is coming when Jesus Christ, the King of Kings and Lord of Lords, shall judge the living and the dead at his appearing (II Tim 4:1). Are you ready for that judgment day? If you love Jesus Christ and look for his coming, join us on Sunday.

After 400 years, Catholics get a new catechism

By Sue Mason
Staff Writer

What can Catholics expect from their first new catechism in 400 years?

If they're expecting the return of something like the Baltimore Catechism, which was used as a teaching text, just the opposite is true, according to Fr. Daniel Trapp, director of the Office of Catechetics/Religious Education for the Archdiocese of Detroit.

"Some people thought it would be like the old Baltimore Catechism and they would be taught directly from it it," Trapp said. "This catechism pulls together the basic teachings of the church into one volume. It's more like a resource document, like an encyclopedia."

The new catechism will be introduced in the United States this month. It is intended to serve as a guide for bishops in spreading the church's beliefs worldwide. It will consist of four basic sections: the creed, the faith, sacraments, and commandments and prayers.

Among the changes from the catechism drafted after the Council of Trent in the 16th century is a larger section on sexual sins. Both church liberals and conservatives might find some surprises, according to the document's official English translator, who spent months finding the right words to portray the church's newer approach to old questions.

"The immoral section is always tricky," said the Rev. Douglas Clark, a Georgia priest who translated the document while working at St. John's Seminary in Boston. "These issues were treated with reticence 400 years ago but they aren't anymore. People ask very blunt questions."

Expanded teachings

Clark says the new expanded teaching on sexual sins that take up 10 pages will address among other things, contraceptives and artificial insemination.

"Here were are talking about how medical morality has changed," said Clark. "And in a culture that is saturated with sex the questions are more blunt than they used to be. That doesn't mean the answers will be more blunt."

According to Trapp, the new catechism is part of a natural progression. The teachings of Christ continue to unfold through the Holy Spirit and there have been "substantial developments" in the last 400 years, he said.

The new catechism — the Latin version was approved by Pope John Paul II in June — was originally written in French and will also be translated to German and Spanish. The pope requested the catechism after a conference of bishops in 1985 called for uniform guidelines to help interpret major reforms in the church from the 1960s.

"While this won't hit people at the level of going to church and finding the Mass in a different language, I suppose both liberals and conservatives will be surprised," Clark said.

The 43-year-old priest beat out his British counterparts to become the English translator of the catechism after working with Cardinal Bernard F. Law of the Boston archdiocese, who attended the 1985 conference of bishops.

Clark spent nine months at St. John's Seminary pouring over the documents. His work was reviewed by two editorial committees that included British and American scholars.

Reasonable expression

He described the text as "reasonable and broad in its expression," and said he expects conservatives to be pleased with its heavy use of traditional church philosophers, including St. John Damascene from Damascus.

However, Monsignor Timothy Moran, the rector of St. John's, who also worked to redraft the original text, said, "It will be a challenge to more conservative sectors of the church."

Trapp is in the process of setting up a workshop for directors of religious education to introduce them to the new catechism. It will serve as a resource for their programs and he is sure "they will have questions" about its contents.

As for the return of a catechism like the Baltimore version, he doesn't expect that to happen. The church stopped using that catechism, which taught church principles in a question-and-answer format, some 25 years ago.

The Council of Trent undertook Catholic reform and defined church doctrine. The council produced a summary of church teaching, which was followed by catechisms produced by individual countries. The Baltimore Catechism was the U.S. version and has been around for about 100 years, according to Trapp.

"It's a good document," he said of the new catechism. "It will be a help fulldocument but will be more for behind the scenes. It's a great resource book for the people."

Like its release date, there is one for sure thing about the new catechism. It's sure to cause a stir.

"It's safe to say there will be controversy. Some don't want a new catechism," said John Walsh, a spokesman for the Archdiocese of Boston.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

Lutheran: Building committee chairman David Koskela (left), pastor Darwin Polesky and pastor Walter Dickinson were on hand for the laying of the cornerstone of Emanuel Lutheran Church's new church building in November. The facility will include a worship center with seating for 200, new offices, an educational wing and fellowship hall. They hope to move in March from the existing church on Five Mile to the new facility on Seven Mile.

We have power over our lives

MORAL PERSPECTIVES

RABBI IRWIN GRONER

This is the time for making New Year's resolutions.

Such resolutions often evoke ridicule or derision. We laugh because we recognize the frailty of human nature, the weakness of the will and the short-lived span of good intentions.

We tend to believe that human error is a product of heredity and environment, that society functions according to social and economic forces not subject to human control.

This writer maintains that we have a measure of power over our lives and significant influence over the character of our communities.

Man is the only creature capable of defining his life, changing his environment and creating his world. Therefore, the impulse of self-improvement that inspires the making of resolutions should be neither discouraged nor ridiculed. Instead, it should be fortified and commended.

We all need to take an inventory of our personal habits, our relationships with family and friends, our weaknesses and deficiencies.

Each of us has resources of spirit and strengths of character that can enable us to achieve greater heights of self-realization.

But we should make collective resolutions as well. As we consider the state of our community and our country, we see serious challenges that need to be met by informed and responsive citizens. We should address with renewed determination the social and economic problems of our time.

The 90's have shaken our trust in America's economic system, our faith in America's future. The mood of 1993 is marked by both uncertainty and hope. We recognize that our country is the only super-power in the family of nations, and we are challenged, therefore, to defend freedom, alleviate mass starvation, and resolve bloody conflicts throughout the world. We must deal with our domestic agenda, and, at the same time, strengthen the force of democracy and justice everywhere.

We need to recover our sense of confidence in the power of the collective will of the American people. That will is capable of harnessing the prodigious resources of this land for the good of everyone.

The phrase "manifest destiny" issues out of an earlier period of American history. We need to restore our belief that we can shape our destiny. It is by reaffirming that faith that we shall renew our sense of purpose and our vitality.

Eddy's book has place in literature

When the Women's National Book Association asked its members from around the United States to respond to the question of what books had been the most important ones in their lives, books by authors like Jane Addams, Louisa May Alcott, Jane Austen, Charlotte and Emily Bronte, Pearl S. Buck, Emily Dickinson, Anne Frank, Betty Friedan and Margaret Mitchell were mentioned.

And one of the 75 books by women whose words have changed the world was "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," written by Mary Baker Eddy more than 100 years ago.

The list was published by the WNBA as part of its 75th-anniversary celebration. Members from WNBA chapters in Binghamton, N.Y., Boston, Detroit, Los Angeles, Nashville, New York City, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., participated in the survey.

The WNBA is a non-profit organization sponsoring educational and literary programs for the public and those professionally engaged in the book world.

Since its first publication in 1875, more than 8 million copies of "Science and Health" have been sold. Published in 17 languages by The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, it had a 1991-92 sales record of more than 80,000 copies.

"At a time when many churches are struggling with the role of women in religion, Mary Baker Eddy's contribution more than 100 hundred years ago is being acknowledged," said William E. Mooday, editor of the The Christian Science Journal." "In 'Science and Health,' she discusses the deep spiritual import of the basic themes of Biblical Christianity, such as salvation, sacrifice, sin, baptism, grace and redemption, and presents a scientific approach that brings healing and comfort."

"Science and Health," the Christian Science textbook, also is the subject of a special issue of the journal, a monthly religious magazine founded by Baker Eddy in 1883 and published by The Christian Science Publishing Society.

"Because of the healing and transforming power of its message, 'Science and Health' has been a best seller for more than 80 years," said Virginia S. Harris, a former Michigan resident and now publisher for the writings of Mary Baker Eddy.

"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is available in bookstores and public libraries, or by call (800) 675-7805. The book also is available at the Christian Science Reading Room in Forest Place Mall, 470 Forest Ave., Plymouth.

metropolitan area — from as close as Livonia and Westland to as distant as Rochester, Brighton and St. Clair Shores. The chorus has three out-of-state members and even had one in Essex, England, a Ford employee on assignment in the British Isles.

And there's a mix of ages. The youngest member is 27, the oldest 72. The honor of longest years of service to the society goes to Al Fricker of Livonia, who has been a member for 39 years.

Truax, a Livonia resident, is a fairly new member. He joined three years ago. He had gone to the chorus' annual show at Mercy High School in Farmington Hills and "fell in love" with the singing.

"The guys had been trying to get me to join for years," said Truax, "but I didn't want to then."

Ed Wojtan, membership chairman, joined in 1986. Like Truax he got hooked by the annual show.

"A guy at my church sold me a ticket to the show and then I came to a meeting," he said. "But since the mid-'60s, my wife and I have been following barbershopping. Our neighbor Ted Stasser would emcee shows at Ford Auditorium and we would go, so you could say the interest was there for years, but it took awhile to get involved."

Ironically, one of the first people Truax saw when he went to his first meeting was Wojtan.

"When I saw Ed he said 'Hi, haven't seen you since we were in glee club at U-D (University of Detroit) High School," Truax said. That was 45 years ago, they admit later.

The group meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays at the church. Chapter meetings are blended in with the rehearsals that generally last until 10 p.m.

The practices prepare the chorus for competitions, held twice a year, its annual fund-raising show, set for March 5-6, and performances at places like Tiger Stadium, St. Mary Hospital and before the Chrysler Management Club.

Sing to speak

Their charitable work benefits the Institute of Logopedics in Wichita, Kan. Members ante up $1 a week for the institute which works with children who have serious speech disorders. And the group's motto — "We Sing that They Shall Speak" — reflects their support of its work.

Their repertoire also includes a song by that name. Song titles range from traditional barbershop and patriotic — the national anthems of the United States and Canada, "Battle Hymn of the Republic" — to religious — "Nearer My God to Me" — and show tunes — "Give My Regards to Broadway."

Wojtan and Truax admit that barbershop singing can be hard work. (The English language may have five vowel sounds, but in barbershop singing the number jumps to 12.) But they stress that it's the camaraderie that makes it fun.

'We walk in on another chapter without them knowing we're coming," Truax said. "Last time we did it to the Grosse Pointe Chapter. We sang to them; they sang to us and then we sang together."

Many of the members also sing in their church choirs and that is one area the group would like to "mine" to expand its ranks. At one time, the chapter had 100 members and had 80 perform on stage together. Now, it's a very good night when 30 members show up for a meeting/rehearsal.

That's one reason why the group is holding an open house 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 12, for perspective members, especially choir members who have Tuesdays free. Wojtan would like to attract 24 men "who'd rather sing along than sing alone."

Potential members are tested to see if their one of the four parts of barbershop singing — tenor, bass, barritone and lead. The only criteria is the ability to carry a tune.

"We want men to come and enjoy themselves, to learn how to be a better singer and take part in competition," said Truax. "It's hard work, but when it's right, it's beautiful . . . and that makes it fun."

The Wayne Chapter of the Renaissance Chours meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays at New Burgh United Methodist Church, 36500 Ann Arbor Trail, between Wayne and Newburgh roads, Livonia. For more information, call All Truax at 464-1719 or Ed Wojtan at 425-2727.

Guide offers insightful look at country music

I once met cowboy singing star Gene Autry. I once stood under an umbrella with a guy who played back-up for Hank Williams (Sr.). I once dated a Nashville singer.

Despite all of these utterly earth-shaking events, I never developed much of an interest in country music.

Recently, that's changed. Though I'm still not particularly fond of the music itself, I find myself increasingly fascinated with the world of country music, its colorful history and its performers. This is due in large part of an unpretentious little volume titled "All American Guide to Country Music," which crossed my desk a few weeks back, compliments of Country Roads Press.

Surprisingly, the book's creators, Frank and Patricia Eichenlaub, don't hail from the backwoods of the Smoky Mountains or the hills of Tennessee and they have never been at home on the range in Texas, or any other place where there is much of a range to be at home on. Frank, a teacher, and Patricia, an Episcopal priest, live in Redford Township.

Back in the days when her work took her on long road trips alone, Patricia writes in the book's introduction, she began tuning in to country music stations on her car radio to while away the hours. Soon she discovered she'd taken a liking to "the stories told in song" she could pick up on radio stations across the nation.

Gilley's visit fateful

Then a few years ago, she and husband Frank traveled to Houston and found themselves wondering what to do one night out on the town.

As it happened, they visited Gilley's — of "Urban Cowboy" fame — and danced the night away. Then, they went home and discovered they had both become absolutely and completely hooked on country music. They couldn't seem to get enough of it. Soon they began looking for a guidebook to help them find the best and the most of it. Only one problem: no guidebook could be found.

So the resourceful couple decided to do their own research, conduct their own treasure hunt and, finally, put the guide together themselves.

Before long, they were combing the country, seeking answers to their questions, either firsthand, through correspondance with friends or via helpful country music experts.

Just where and when were the biggest and best annual country music festivals held? What were the hottest country music nightspots in the United States? What were the top country music recordings of all time? What radio staions kept country music fans entertained all night long?

Country publisher bites

One thing led to another. The book, at first self-published (under the title, "Travelin' Country"), grew so popular that the authors sought an outside publisher and found one quickly in Country Roads Press. Then they decided to enlarge and elaborate on the original publication — which was essentially a compilation of lists — and the "All American Guide" is the result.

The book illustrates delightfully what is one of the most important things about country music: its diversity and farflung roots. Country is bluegrass. Country is cowboy. Country is gospel music. Country is Cajun. Country is your basic, git-down-at-the-Grand-Ole-Opry stuff. And these days, it's also over, under, around and through all of this, and a lot more besides.

In lively chapters written by the Eichenlaubs and other authorities on the subject, you can get closer to Cajun, meet the physician-cowboy-poet Kent Stockton, find out about the great bluegrass musician Bill Monroe, delve into a short history of gospel music or go backstage at the Grand Ole Opry.

You can also get up-close-and-personal with country talk show host Ralph Emery, learn "Why Concert Tickets Cost So Much," find out more about the changing roles of women in the country music business or drop in on an aspiring music group from upstate New York who travel the country music roads in a 1988 Chevy Suburban (mileage: 80,000 plus). There's even a segment on how to dance the Texas Two-Step and a chapter on "Country Food" (what it is and where to find it).

If you're hankering to listen to some of the real thing as you read along, there's plenty to get you started here. The guide includes special compilations of 30 top bluegrass recordings, 10 Cajun classics, "The Ernest Tubb Record Shop List of Essential Recordings," "Twenty-five Old-Time Recordings," and "Spectrum Music Video Country Top 40" (number one is Alabama, "Greatest Hits").

"All American Guide to Country Music" is not yet available in bookstores, but you can order it through Country Roads Press, Box 286, Castine, Maine 04421. Price is $12.95, plus $3 shipping and handling.

Rivers' art flows with feeling

■ A lively exhibit by Larry Rivers at the Robert Kidd Gallery in Birmingham shows humor and other aspects of the artist's personality.

By Mary Klemic
Staff Writer

The walls are alive with the exhibit of paintings and drawings by Larry Rivers, continuing through Jan. 24 at the Robert Kidd Gallery in Birmingham.

That's partly because of the images themselves, which seem to jump and sing in their spaces. That's partly because of the memories some of them generate. And that's partly because of the personality of the artist that comes through.

"They're active. They really are alive," said Ray Frost Fleming, Kidd Gallery director.

Both recent and earlier works by Rivers are on display at the gallery, 107 Townsend.

"He's what they call an artist's artist. Other artists really respected him."

Rivers, who was born in 1925, exploded on the art scene in the early 1950s with his plays on old master paintings and appropriated images from advertising.

He was amused that a cigar company used a Rembrandt painting to sell tobacco, and he added an artistic touch to that idea. He created oils and collages with images and logos for Dutch Masters, Camels and other tobacco products.

"Everybody thinks Andy Warhol (is) pop art. (Rivers) was actually pre-Andy Warhol.

"He's (Rivers) a very great appropriator. I think he has a great sense of humor.

"He takes things from popular culture, what's being used, and makes art out of it."

One such example at the Kidd Gallery is "Seated Webster: Beyond Stature." The three-dimensional work resembles a large Webster cigar box, with the rest of the figure's body drawn under Webster's portrait on the inside of the lid. The figure appears to be sitting in the cigars.

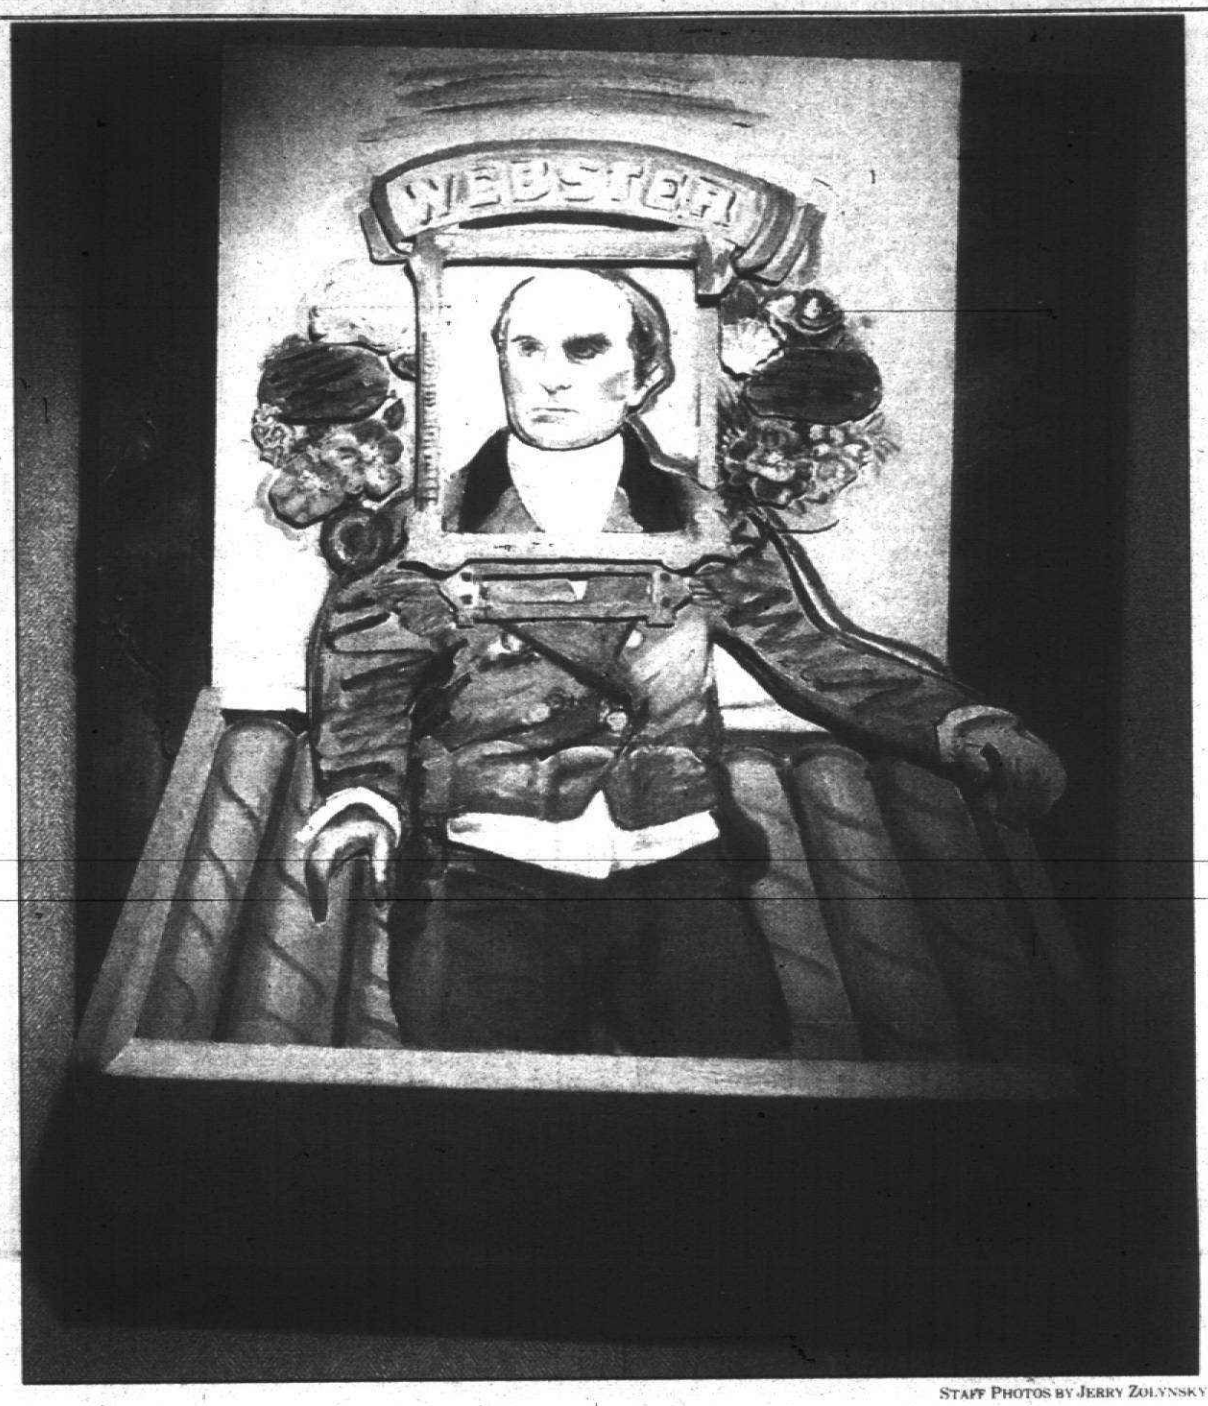
Drawing is very strong in Rivers' art. His works have skeleton drawings that are fleshed out by the paint. In some of them, graph lines show through.

"I get the feeling that he's very, very intelligent but likes to cover it up by joking around."

Rivers didn't stick to one style.

"He's the kind of guy who wants to try everything, taste everything."

When Rivers tried his hand at abstract art, "Summer of 1930" was one result. The work is a combination of broad strokes in deep, rich red, blue, white and black, and thin lines. It suggests different things, such as a woman's gartered leg, or someone holding a pair of glasses.



Staff Photos by Jerry Zolynsky

But once they are pointed out, the two heads in the background and the upraised foot in the foreground become apparent, and it is realized that the work shows one person pushing another in a swing.

Rivers' sculpted, dimensional paintings are more recent. One of these works at the gallery, "Berdie 35 Years Later," is a takeoff on cubism. The chair in which the woman (Rivers' mother-in-law) is sitting is shown as a series of geometric fragments, as seen in cubist art.

"Dancing With Bomberg's Dancer: Relief" features an image of Fred Astaire before a jazzy jumble of lines and shapes that convey a rhythmic, sophisticated feeling.

Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday. Call 642-3909.

Start new year by sharpening art skills

By Linda Ann Chomin
Special Writer

Basic birdcarving, quiltmaking or ceramic classes could enrich you with skills to hand craft gifts straight from the heart.

Start the New Year by learning to draw portraits of your grandchildren, weave baskets for holding flower arrangements or work clay into sculptures or a bowl for your pet.

Art and craft classes, covering a spectrum of media, begin in the next few weeks. From traditional painting, drawing and basket weaving to oriental brushwork, handprinting in relief and arteology, a hands-on study of art in different cultures, classes challenge creativeness and stretch the imagination for as little as $7 a week.

Along with weekly classes offered by area arts organizations, studios, businesses, high school/college adult education programs, parks and recreation departments and art clubs, students have options like one-day workshops and ongoing studies to fit the busiest schedules.

"One of the biggest classes this fall and on through this spring has been the twist paper, making the big angels and bunnies, baskets and a Valentine doll," said Dottie Johnson, owner of Which-Craft in Livonia.

Which-Craft, a full line arts and crafts shop, offers an array of classes, including watercolor, decorative painting with oils and acrylics, fabric painting, calligraphy, fabric-covered albums and lampshades, design-a-shirt, Sculpy and Friendly Plastic.

"Friendly Plastic is used to make jewelry. It comes in 80 different colors and you heat it in a pan to shape it. The topselling book for the process is, 'Who Put My Jewelry in the Frying Pan,' " Johnson said.

Children as well as adults benefit from a boost in self-esteem from the classes. Beginning at pre-school age, art nourishes the soul and encourages a 'Yes, I can attitude.' Sculpy classes are so popular that on Saturday morning, we run them for the chil-

■ EAST MEETS WEST

Artists Saundra Weed of Westland and Edythe Newbourne of Dearborn will lead "East Meets West," a five-day seminar that teaches Chinese brush painting techniques and how to incorporate them into Western watercolors, Aug. 16-20 at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City.

Both studied Chinese brush painting under Professor I-Hsiung Ju at Washington & Lee University in Lexington, Va. Newbourne recently refined her skills in a visit to China.

The duo will conclude their week with a one-day workshop on marketing your arts and crafts and painting with crumpled paper Aug. 21.

For registration information for either offering, call Weed at her home studio: 728-2535.

"Both are open to beginners as well as advanced artists," Weed said. "We'll send a list of supplies but a lot of things we'll have available for purchase on site."

Cranbrook showcases German graphics

By Mary Klemic
Staff Writer

■ Architecture is a theme that runs through many of the works. Gunther Forg presents prints of houses and windows.

The crumbling, collapsing Berlin Wall is arguably the strongest image of Germany in the 1980s.

But other images from Germany in that decade could come to mind after a visit to an exhibit continuing through Jan. 31 at the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum, 500 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills.

The display, "Graphics of the '80s from the Federal Republic of Germany," features prints and photographs showing the diversity of German art.

Architecture is a theme that runs through many of the works. Gunther Forg presents prints of houses and windows, with clean, simple lines. His work also includes sheets with bold vertical lines. Markus Lupertz's linocuts, "Harlequin," feature a figure in a chair, so rigid it could be part of the chair.

Helmut Middendorf's silkscreen prints "Large Urban Head" and "Untitled" convey the feeling of the city. The former shows buildings in the background that become part of the large face dominating the scene. "Untitled" depicts a vague structure at night, partly supported by what resembles the silhouette of a human head.

Some artists use bright, sometimes primary, colors and sweeping strokes. Karl Horst Hodicke presents powerful silkscreen prints of a jaguar and of a hand holding a dismembered arm. Rainer Fetting's untitled silkscreen suggests a figure holding a blazing fire in its hand.

Katharina Sieverding's color photograph "Gazing at the Sun Around Midnight" features faces partly coated in red. By comparison, the silkscreen works of Walter Dahn suggest childlike innocence. His "Big Brother" shows stick figures before a tower topped by a head that looks out over them. "Hornets," with a black background, shows elongated human and insect figures. One insect may be inserting a wing into the human's ears.

Other events at the museum explore contemporary cultural practices in the German arts. (A symposium Nov. 21 featured six internationally prominent scholars.) A series, "German Films of the 1980s," continues 2 p.m. Sundays to Jan. 31. A four-part series, "Video Art 1976-1990, The German Contribution: A Selection," will be shown at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 23 and 30.

Both series are shown in the deSalle Auditorium at the museum. Costs are covered with general museum admission. The events and exhibit are sponsored by the Goethe-Institut in Ann Arbor.

The museum is open for general viewing 1-5 p.m. Wednesday-Sunday. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for children, senior citizens and full-time students, free for children younger than 7 and museum members. Call 645-3312.

German-born artist states his case for public art

By Mary Klemic
Staff Writer

"The funny thing is in Germany and Europe they always called me the American German. In Detroit they called me the German all the time."

So said artist Georg Ettl, who emigrated to Detroit from his native Germany when he was 18. He studied literature, philosophy and art at Wayne State University and the Sorbonne in Paris, lectured at WSU and Macomb Community College, and was associated with Detroit's Cass Corridor artists before he returned to the Federal Republic of Germany in 1973.

Ettl, who was born in 1940, was at the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum in Bloomfield Hills recently to speak on "Being an Artist in Germany Today: A Personal View" at a symposium. The symposium was connected to an exhibit and other events about German art. (See related story.)

German art draws from a variety of sources, both the emotional, free and the architectural, rational mainstreams. The Cranbrook exhibit, "Graphics of the '80s from the Federal Republic of Germany," is a good representation of this, Ettl said in an interview.

"I think it's a very good reflection of the German kind of mind, the German thought," said the artist, whose studio is in a small town (population 40,000) near the Dutch border. "I like to do something that (has the) possibility someone else can build on it."

The progression of German art was interrupted by the war, as some artists fled. It is now where it should have been after the war.

"After the war, nobody wanted to build on anything . . . That whole continuation was interrupted."

Ettl originally wanted to be a philosopher. "I realized (working with) words was too tedious for me."

He preferred the "direct visual image" of graphics. "I spent most of my life drawing . . . I draw everything first."

The Cranbrook exhibit includes Ettl's silkscreen print triptych of a head with various hats. The triptych is a traditional form often used with sacred art. Ettl's heads in profile have a contemporary look. An architectural influence is seen in their shelf-like chins.

In Germany, the government subsidized the arts through a program that said 2 percent of any public building had to go to the arts.

The program didn't work because "art was considered an afterthought." This was the fault of the artists, who should have insisted on working with the architect from the beginning, Ettl said.

Ettl does a lot of art work in squares and other public spaces. You find nothing has changed when you constantly do gallery work year after year, he said. Public art work deals more with bureaucracy and compromise.

"I do work with museums and galleries but in a very limited way. When you work in a public space it's a completely different ball game. You have to be a little more humble (and have) nerves of steel sometimes."

Ettl recently worked on a castle in France that is being transformed into a museum for contemporary art. He depicted the favorite horses of Henry II. The response from local residents delighted the artist.

"I never had so many people (comment on a work). They really loved this work. (It was) something they could identify with."

Ettl disagrees with critics who say public art must be diluted. Viewers who have less education in art tend to be much more honest, he said.

The artist was glad to be back in the Detroit area.

"I had a little bit of homesickness for Detroit. I really enjoyed the art department at Wayne State University. It's still a lot looser here, a freer spirit in general.

"I think that the complete lack of discipline can lead to chaos, although at heart I'm a very chaotic person.

"I couldn't have thought of a better school to go to than American art schools."

The violence of neo-Nazi groups in Germany disturbs and angers Ettl. When you see such violence, the art becomes secondary, he said.

"I'm not so much worried about the arts as the politics. The arts will be OK.

Tryouts cater to ballet students

Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp will hold auditions in January and February for ballet students who want to participate in the summer arts school's 1993 dance program.

The 90-minute auditions, which include a masterclass, will be conducted by Jefferson Baum, director of the West Michigan fine arts camp's dance program.

■ Dearborn Heights — 1 p.m. Jan. 17 at the Milligan School of Ballet, 24355 Joy.

■ Ann Arbor — 4 p.m. Jan. 17 at Studio No. 1 of the School of Dance, 220 S. Main.

Baum, who has been principal dancer with several ballet companies in the U.S. and Europe and recently toured Russia with a group from the New York City Ballet and American Ballet Theatre, is in his fourth year as director of Blue Lake's dance program.

The auditions are being held to select 80 students for Blue Lake's advanced ballet and intermediate dance programs.

The four-week advanced ballet program, which begins June 29 and ends July 25, is for junior and senior high school students. Enrollment is limited to 20 students. This marks the fourth year Blue Lake has offered advanced training in classical ballet.

A total of 60 students will be enrolled in two intermediate dance programs. The first two-week session for high school students will be July 27 to Aug. 8 while the second session for junior high students will be from Aug. 10-22.

Blue Lake, on an 800-acre campus about 15 miles north of Muskegon, is one of the U.S.'s largest summer arts schools. In addition to dance, it offers programs in music, theater and art.

All dance students are required to audition for acceptance in the program. The cost of participating in the audition/masterclass is $8. Students unable to attend the audition may send a VHS video cassette containing center classroom work and at least one variation to: Jefferson Baum, Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, Twin Lake MI 49457.

Focus on Photorama

Photographers of all description — beginners and professionals, shutterbugs, snapshooters and camera collectors — from all over the Midwest will meet Saturday-Sunday, Jan. 9-10, at the Southfield Pavilion, on Evergreen at 10-½ Mile in Southfield, for Winter Photorama USA.

Photorama will be open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $5 for both days. For more information, call the Photorama hot line at 884-2243.

A free shutter check will be offered by Mid-West Camera.

Dealers will display new and used hard-to-find photo equipment, including cameras and lenses, as well as antique and collectible photographia. Most of the dealers will be prepared to buy, sell or trade equipment.

Visitors may clean out their closets to bring their old camera equipment, as well as photographs, stereo cards, books or anything photographic to swap or sell. Free appraisals of old photo items will be made. The event is a chance to see both rare and unusual cameras and photographs.

dren," Johnson said. "It's very rewarding to say, 'I made it myself.' "

Sculpy is oven-cured clay figures. In the next few weeks, Which-Craft will feature carousel animals and seasonal projects for Valentine's Day and Easter.

Which-Craft, a Livonia mainstay at the corner of Six Mile and Farmington Road for 17 years, carries supplies for general crafts and 400 different painting books and counted cross-stitch.

"We have all the materials here," Johnson said. "I've been on the receiving end, taking so many classes over the years, so I know what the students want."

New this winter from D & M Art Studios of Plymouth, students paint Egyptian hieroglyphics and Native American sand-paintings in Arteology classes held through Canton Parks and Recreation and the Plymouth Cultural Center.

D & M offers group, private and semiprivate classes at four area locations, including a pre-school program for ages 2½ and up that introduces your child to the joys of creating.

Classes have already filled for Farmington Hills artist Edee Joppich's "Creative Approach to Watercolor," held at the Visual Arts Association of Livonia. A waiting list of names will determine if there are enough people interested for the addition of a second class starting Jan. 27.

Vacancies remain, however, in the two- and three-day workshops with Lily Dudgeon, Donna Vogelhiem, Callie Thomson, Marge Chellstorp and Ann Loveland in monotypes, color harmony and techniques, tissue collage, winter landscape and realistic watercolor still life, respectively.

Madonna University in Livonia has designed a studio course based on the theory and practice of Chinese and Japanese ink brush painting. Oriental brushwork classes will feature weekly lectures as well as grinding of ink. For $290, students may earn two academic credits or for $170, continuing education credits.

Schoolcraft College's Continuing Education Services in Livonia is offering classes ranging from basic birdcarving to the art of quiltmaking, plus color design and handprinting in relief.

Art and craft classes serve to stimulate creativity in what may seem like unrelated areas of life. They also provide a means of relaxation and a place to meet people, not to mention the opportunity to learn about other cultures.

"It's great therapy. It's a social hour, too. A lot of people make friends here," Johnson said, "and it's a great help in decorating your home, for home decor."

Challenge yourself this winter, learn something new about an art or craft. Broock leads state Realtor association

Bowen R. Broock: Heads Michigan Association of Realtors.

By Doug Funke
Staff Writer

This year should shape up as especially eventful in the professional career of Bowen R. Broock.

Broock, president and chief executive officer of a real estate firm founded by his grandfather, Max, will serve as president of the Michigan Association of Realtors.

"Our theme for 1993 has everything to do with communication," Broock said. "We have a logo that says Let's Connect.

"We'd like to shine our light a little more outstanding so we and our public can get a little clearer picture of what we do and our relevance," he added.

Some 23,000 agents belong to the statewide professional association.

Broock, active in the business for 32 years, has Max Broock Inc. offices in West Bloomfield, Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Rochester and Clarkston with 120 agents.

"Perhaps the most visible, prominent issue now is expansion of the agency," he said. "The opportunity for buyer brokerage to the residential side of the business is fairly new. We're going to find buyer broker more prevalent.

"We're going to introduce a new computer system this year," Broock added. "It's like a bulletin board system electronically linking an agent at his desk to a very broad information network at the state association.

"A glimpse of the future shows that brokers and associates will increasingly rely on electronic media to stay abreast of the market and assist in promotion," he said.

Broock, 58, is a GRI, Graduate Realtors Institute, a certified residential specialist and a certified residential broker. He's a director of the National Association of Realtors and a past president of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Board of Realtors.

Broock also recently was named to the board of directors of RELO/The International Relocation Network, a worldwide association of independent owners not affiliated with franchise operations.

"It's a way for me to put someone (transferee) in the hands of a capable counterpart in another city," Broock said. "For that, they send back a small referral fee as a courtesy."

Broock, who lives in Orchard Lake, enjoys tennis, golf, singing, shooting and fishing. He also collects vintage fountain pens.

He is married to Joy and father to Kathy, who is in the real estate business, and Konrad, a musician in California.

Broock said he got started because he thought it would be fun working with his dad, Ferd.

"It's a people business, most enjoyable," Broock said. "The challenge of problem solving — that's what real estate is all about. You meet a need."

Dissatisfied condo owner may have case against seller

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Since I bought my condominium a year ago, I have been trying to sell it because the condominium association is not enforcing the bylaws and is allowing co-owners to intentionally create damage to the common areas. The co-owners across the hall from me have warped the condominium doors with continuous slamming and have disturbed my selling prospects to the extent that it has killed every sales attempt.

I also was not aware of a major suit that the association was involved in with the municipality and a neighboring industrial firm when I purchased. I was also not advised of the percentage of rentals in the buildings at the time of purchase. What can I do?

To the extent that the seller of the condominium unit did not disclose material information that would have had an effect on your purchase of the condominium unit, you may have a cause of action against the seller. It also appears that the board or the managing agent is lax in regard to enforcing the condominium documents against the residents, particularly as it relates to the protection of common element property and the deprivation of your rights as a member of the association from excessive noise.

I would write a letter to the board demanding that it take action against the co-owners involved, threatening legal action should that not be done. I would also point out to the board that you will hold it and the association responsible for the damages you are sustaining in being unable to sell your unit because of the failure of the part of the association to enforce the rules and restrictions.

I am a businessman on our board of directors and find that our other board members have their head in the sand. All they are concerned about is whether the co-owners at the condominium will find difficulty with them or criticize them because we need to raise the assessments. They don't seem to care about their fiduciary duties. How can I instill in them the need to be businesslike in the operation of the association?

Call your insurance carrier and have it provide you with documented figures in regard to the number of liability lawsuits that are being brought against boards of directors for mismanagement, including the failure to adequately fund the association to meet the reasonable needs of the association.

You are correct that too many boards are overly concerned with what other co-owners will think of them when they raise assessments. My experience in more than 20 years of law practice dictates that those same people who scream the loudest about the increase in assessments will be the first in line to sue the board it if does not do its job properly. Directors of associations have a fiduciary duty to run the business in a proper fashion. You are correct in your concerns, which should be expressed to the members of the board on a regular basis.

BUILDING SCENE'S NAMES & PLACES

ESD award program

ESD is accepting entries for its 1993 construction and design awards program, now in its 19th year. The award honors projects designed and built by Michigan firms, ranging from private homes to public work projects. Winners are the building teams of architects and engineers, general contractors and owners.

Buildings must have been completed after Jan. 1, 1989 to qualify. March 1 is the deadline for entries. Winners will be announced in late March and honored at ESD's 98th annual meeting June 4.

To submit an entry, call Jill Van Doornik at 995-4440.

ESD — the Engineering Society, is a multi-disciplinary engineering and scientific society.

Project management

Lawrence Technological University will hold a series of reviews starting Feb. 6 to prepare persons for the certification examination leading to the project management professional (PMP) designation.

Project management course of study is being pursued in the fields of architecture, interior design, engineering, computer services and information process, and business. The all-day reviews will be offered on four consecutive Saturdays in February.

Topics to be covered are: cost, scope, time, quality, risk, communications, human resources and contract/procurement. Participants will receive course materials approved by the Project Management Institute, a sample exam, and strategies in taking the exam. All instructors are certified PMPs. Cost is $495 for PMI members and $595 for non-members.

LTU is at 10 mile and Northwestern Highway in Southfield. For more information, call Karen Todd at 356-0200, ext. 4020.

New president: Fred Capaldi of Rochester Hills will serve as president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan this year. "You never quit learning about your business," he said. "You've got to read, attend meetings, find out what's going on."

Builder pushes continuing education

■ Cooperation between builders and the community on growth/no-growth issues is among items on the agenda of the newly elected president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Fred Capaldi, a Rochester Hills builder and resident, can recall more than 25 years after the fact how he happened to join what was then known as the Builders Association of Metropolitan Detroit.

"My dad, M. Fred, had been a member many years ago but, frankly, I forgot why he dropped out," Capaldi said. "We got a call from Dick Forbush of Kimball & Russell, a supplier. He invited us to join.

"I asked my dad, 'What do you think?'

"He asked, 'Are you going to make this a profession?'

"I answered, 'Yes, I'm going to be a builder.'

"Then join a professional builder's association," he said. "It gives you professional credibility. Attorneys, doctors have their own. It says you're a professional.' "

Now, Capaldi, 49, is incoming president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, which he said is the third largest nationally with some 1,750 members.

"Going to meetings, national and state conventions, I always learn something, whether it's a legislative matter coming up or a seminar to teach you how to do something," Capaldi said. "I think it's made a better businessman out of me.

"I don't care what you're in — journalism, medicine or building — you never quit learning about your business," he said. "You've got to read, attend meetings, find out what's going on."

Annual dues — $420 for builders, suppliers and service organizations like financial institutions and utilities, $345 for subcontractors — provide professional staff assistance, discounts on office supplies and insurances, publications, and seminars, he said.

Capaldi said he annually builds about 10 custom houses ranging from $175,000 to $600,000 on scattered lots. Remodeling and restoration projects now account for about 40 percent of his work, he said.

At one time, Capaldi thought that he might want to be a doctor. But he found himself attracted to the Wall Street Journal and real estate publications more than biology and chemistry texts and eventually earned a degree in economics from the University of Detroit.

"I started working when I was 12 and I've done everything on a job site — plumbing, electrical, roofing — except excavating," Capaldi said. "And I will do that, too. At the same time, I've done everything in the office.

"I like to do things with my hands," he said. "As a teenager, I had a good buddy and we were always building things like cars with lawnmower engines. I was always building something.

"I'd spend hours playing with an Erector set. I had a summer job all the time, a weekend job. We talked about building at the dinner table. I guess I was drawn in and never knew it was happening."

Capaldi's goals as BASM president are straightforward.

"I still think we're facing issues like wetlands and woodlands. We'd like to add our input to communities when they're writing ordinances . . . so others can see what our problems are and we can write ordinances that are fair and equitable to everybody.

"One of the main things I'd like to see happen is cooperation between builders and the community on growth where everyone is happy. I think we've made some real strides and I'd like to carry that further.

"Good growth, instead of explosiveness, is steady, something that blends in with the community," he said. "It's cooperative and tries to meet demands of people moving into the community."

Capaldi also wants to provide more professional enhancement opportunities for builders and expand the membership rolls.

Capaldi's wife, Barbara, is office manager for the family-owned building company. Son, Tim, a student at Lawrence Technological University, has expressed interest in joining the business. Daughters Marisa, Angela and Cristi have other interests.

When not building or participating in BASM activities Capaldi likes to play tennis and golf and tinker.

"Any time spent in this association is an education," he said. "You don't have to put in a lot if you don't want to, but the more you put in, the more you get out."

Architect welcomes industry upturn

BY R.J. KING
SPECIAL WRITER

The lamps are beginning to glow in greater numbers over drafting tables and in design studios as the architectural profession slowly recovers from one of the industry's worst downturns.

As the economy fell into a recession, and a glut of office space outpaced demand, the trauma of pink slips and red ink forced many architects to rethink the way they did business, or whether to stay in business at all.

"We see some signs that we're coming out of the downturn. There are more proposals out there, and health care still remains a viable market," said Gary Skog, vice president and principal with Harley Ellington Pierce Yee Associates in Southfield.

Skog, who was recently selected president of the metro Detroit chapter of the American Institute of Architects for a one-year term, said firms in business today have survived due to diversification and a demand for educational and large corporate facilities.

But other markets — industrial, office, residential and retail — are slow, as many firms continue to downsize and banks hold fast on lending, though the banking industry recently reported 1992 would be its most profitable year, leading some to project more favorable credit opportunities.

It is estimated that as many as 25 percent of architects are out of work, due in large part to more stringent

Government revises home sales methodology

(AP) — Sales of new homes in November dropped sharply for the second consecutive month, but economists said the number probably was depressed by a fluke in government statistical methods.

Sales fell 8.3 percent, the worst since March, the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development said Wednesday. That came on top of an 8.2 percent drop in October, originally reported as a 10.3 percent decline.

Economists complain that the department's statistical methods were doing an inadequate job of estimating the number of new homes that are "pre-sold" before construction begins. That type of sale is becoming increasingly more common because banks and savings institutions in recent years have become reluctant to make construction loans unless builders line up buyers in advance.

For the past 14 months, the government has underreported the number of new home sales and has increased its estimate every time. It said Wednesday it was changing its methods, starting with next month's report.

"There's little doubt that the November figure will get revised up," said economist David Seiders of the National Association of Home Builders. "Hopefully, starting next month the pattern of errors won't be as systematic."

Sales in November totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 565,000, the lowest in six months and down from a rate of 616,000 in October. The latest drop in new home sales stands in contrast to a 5.8-percent increase in sales of existing homes in November to the highest level since 1986.

Economist Leonard Mills of the Federal National Mortgage Association said he expects 1993 will be the best year for existing home sales since 1979. New home sales also should be up, but not as strongly.

"What we need to get that, and we've started to see a little bit of it already, is some job growth," he said.

He said the expected continuation of low mortgage rates should contribute to healthy sales. Interest charged on 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages, as reported by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., hit a 19-year low of 7.84 percent in mid-September. It rose to 8.32 percent by late November but has since declined to 8.13 percent.

At the end of November, the seasonally adjusted estimate of new homes for sale was 267,000, representing a 5.9 months supply at the current sales pace, the biggest supply since May.

Sales for the first 11 months of the year were 19 percent above the same period of 1991.

The median price of a new home in November, meaning half sold for more and half for less, was $128,800, up 4.9 percent from October and 8.7 percent from a year ago.

Regionally, sales dropped 18.5 percent in the South to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 229,000. They fell 9.1 percent in the West to a rate of 150,000 units. They were unchanged in the Midwest at 113,000 units and rose 28 percent in the Northeast to 73,000 units.

credit practices following an overhaul of the tax laws in 1986, and the aftermath of the savings-and-loan crisis, both of which severely curtailed new building prospects.

"The orders began picking up in late October, and new programs from auto makers and suppliers are starting to perk up, but some of those, like emission testing labs, are being driven by government legislation," said Skog, a Bloomfield Hills resident.

"Right now, our firm is in the hiring mode. Some projects which were shelved by the state are just now loosening up, and in the future we'll see more university projects, due in part to major fund-raising campaigns."

Skog was speaking to the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, which recently announced a major fund drive — Partners in Leadership — that will attempt to raise $1 billion over the next five years. Other state universities have announced similar campaigns.

Meanwhile, area residents can expect to see several new buildings break the skyline of state-based universities. A $38 million science and technology building is planned for Oakland University in Rochester. Saginaw Valley State University in Saginaw is expected to open a $18 million building for the business school, while Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant has proposed a building for the music school.

All of the projects are being designed by Harley Ellington, which has 155 employees and affiliated offices in Denver, Orlando and Los Angeles. The firm was founded in Detroit in 1908, with one of its most famed designs the headquarters for the original Stroh's Brewery Co.

Skog, who succeeds Robert Ziegelman, chairman of Luckenbach Ziegelman and Partners, Birmingham, said he plans to create stronger ties with architects of the future by encouraging more student-professional interaction at schools like Lawrence Technological University in Southfield.

"We also want to be more responsive to our membership, especially among smaller firms, which often have different needs and interests than larger firms, as well as providing continuing education programs," said Skog of the 1,000-member Detroit chapter.

Currently, the AIA is lobbying legislators in Lansing to bring more uniformity to building licenses. There is also a great need to streamline code inspections, as many cities and communities have cut back on inspectors due to financial considerations.

Chemicals pose disposal problem

You may have more hazardous substances in your home than you think.

Leftover paint, household cleaners, bug spray and weed killers are examples of hazardous wastes. Flushing them down the drain can damage sewage treatment systems. Putting them out with the garbage sends them to the landfill where they eventually seep into ground water.

If you can't use up a potentially hazardous product, think of someone who can, such as schools, neighbors or churches.

Call your local health department, recycling center or environmental agency to see if they organize collection drives. If they do, make sure the wastes are in sealed, watertight containers. If a container is rusting or leaking, put it in a larger, secure container.

If your community doesn't have a collection drive, call the local health department or your county's Cooperative Extension Service to find out the best way to dispose of hazardous products.

Always follow state regulations in disposing of hazardous materials. You can also reduce the amount of these substances in your home by buying only what you need; if possible, choose alternatives that are known to be less toxic.

Keep abreast of information about the disposal of hazardous materials. Always follow disposal directions on package labels.

Here's how you can discard common household products that may be hazardous in your own garbage:

■ Empty aerosol cans and abrasive powder cleaners can be thrown out with the garbage. Rinse containers with water before disposal. Aerosol cans should go out only with garbage that will go to a sanitary landfill instead of being incinerated.

■ You can dilute small amounts of certain chemicals with plenty of water and pour them down a drain or toilet — but not if you have a septic system. These include lye drain and oven cleaner, lye paint and varnish stripper, phosphate paintbrush cleaner, and phosphoric acid rust remover.

■ Some substances or items should be wrapped in newspapers and plastic before going into household refuse. In this category are mildew cleaner containers and warfarin-type rat- or mouse-poison packages.

■ Certain substances can be allowed to evaporate before disposal but be sure this is done away from children or pets. These include gasoline, solvent- or water-base glue, mineral spirits, turpentine, latex paint, paint remover or thinner, and spot remover solvent. When evaporated, double-wrap in plastic and dispose with household refuse.

■ Leftover latex paint, can also be solidified by adding an absorbent material such as cat litter, sand, charcoal or sawdust. When it's dry, wrap the container twice in plastic and then place it with household trash.

There are a host of wastes that should not be discarded with your regular trash:

■ Save degreasing chemicals, fiberglassing substances (after solidifying or evaporating), flea collars, and fluorescent lamp ballasts that are pre-1978 or without a label saying they contain no PCBs for a special collection day or consult your local Cooperative Extension Service.

■ Varnish, mothballs and flakes, solvent-type paintbrush cleaner, oil-base (alkyd) paint, rust-inhibiting paint, garden insecticides, roach and ant killer, arsenic-type rat and mouse poison, weed killer, solvent-base furniture polish, and wood preservatives or stains should also be saved for a special collection day.

Building class set

The Michigan Builders Institute of Rochester Hills will be offering classes in constructing your own house in Farmington, Troy and Wayne-Westland in January and February.

"The class is for those who are working with a contractor as well as those who want to do all or some of the work themselves," said Bill Lawson, principal and faculty member of the school.

Classes will be held for eight three-hour sessions over four weeks held in conjunction with community education divisions of local school districts.

"The course is really a course in preventive strategies," Lawson said. "It helps the consumer avoid pitfalls and helps people talk the same language as building professionals so there are few unpleasant surprises."

How to estimate materials in terms of price and quality, building codes, construction lien law and state regulations will be covered.

Farmington class begins Jan. 18; call 489-3333. Troy class begins Jan. 26; call 879-7582. Wayne-Westland class begins Feb. 2; call 728-0100. Preregistration is required.

The most important introductions at the 1993 North American International Auto Show have nothing to do with handshakes.

For the automotive executives, designers, engineers and staff responsible for the more than 25 vehicles that will make their debut at this year's show, the result of years of sweating the details on cars they have developed will come under public scrutiny for the first time as their pet projects are introduced to the world.

Millions of dollars in vehicle investment, not to mention reputations and careers, are riding on the success or failure of new or upgraded models.

The extent of the general public's reaction to their efforts may only entail a long glance before they move on to the next car. But there will be thousands of journalists, designers, engineers, and executives roaming the aisles and more critically checking the offerings of the auto companies.

"The cars introduced in Detroit are some of the most important models on the market, including those introduced at the Tokyo and Frankfurt shows," said Kathleen Hamilton, senior editor of Automobile magazine. "It's interesting to see the public reaction to them as well as hear the executives' opinions on them."

A few thousand auto executives from around the world are planning to attend the 1993 auto show, according to Showtalk, a publication of the Detroit Auto Dealers Association. They will join the general public in looking at more than 750 cars and trucks that will be on display from the world's manufacturers.

The show brings everyone in the auto industry out of the woodwork — and auto dealers look for customers to come out of hibernation in what would otherwise be a so-so wintertime month.

"At this time of year, we always look for a little boost from the auto show, and hope things improve," said John Hofstra, new car sales manager for George Matick Chevrolet in Redford.

Said Jeff Rogers, assistant general sales manager for Don Massey Cadillac in Plymouth: "We find that the auto show stimulates an interest in new cars, not just Cadillacs, but all models."

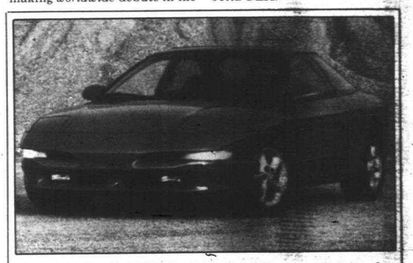
Added Bob Faust, General Sales Manager of Dick Scott Dodge in Plymouth: "The auto show always stimulates interest, generally a week or two after the show. The holidays are over, there are usually new products, and I think the show creates some excitement."

The Detroit auto show added the "international" to its moniker in 1989 when area auto dealers and manufacturers decided the show should move into a new direction.

The show went beyond being just a blip on the automotive showcase circuit to a huge event for 40 auto manufacturers worldwide. It is now an event that appeals to die-hard afficianados who fly in to Detroit because they can't wait to see a new car introduced, and to the lunch bucket crowd that wants to check out new vehicles that are all conveniently under one roof.

Following are new vehicles making worldwide debuts in the 1993 North American International Auto Show: ASC Buick Park Avenue Touring Car, ASC Cadillac Seville 2 door, ASC Ford Ranger Rap Around, ASC LT1 Spyder Corvette, ASC Saturn 4-2 Convartible, Chevrolet Highlander Concept, Chrysler LHS Concept, Chrysler New Yorker, Chrysler Thunderbolt Concept, Dodge Ram, GMC Truck Santa Fe Concept, Hyundai HCD-II, Jeep ECCO Concept Vehicle, Lexus GS 300, Lincoln-Mercury Villager Concept, Plymouth Prowler Concept, Pontiac Grand Prix GTP Concept, and Porshe Concept.

New vehicles making their North American debut include ASC Nissan 300ZX (with articulating hardtop), Bentley Brooklands, Bugatti EB 110, Isuzu Trooper RS, Jaguar XJR-S, Mitsubishi 1994 Galant, Porsche 911 Speedster, Range Rover County with sport package, Rolls-Royce Corniche IV Convertible, Toyota AXV-III Concept, and the Volkswagen Jetta GLX.



The redesigned 1993 Ford Probe GT appearing at the North American International Auto Show has been redesigned on the outside, and will offer a new twin-cam, 24-valve V-6 under the hood. The 164 hp engine has a cast aluminum block and cylinder heads, and will be mated to a standard five-speed manual transaxle. An electronically controlled four-speed automatic transaxle is optional. The people at Motor Trend obviously liked the Probe: they named it their 1993 Car of the Year.

It's showtime!

General Motors' 1,400 pound Ultralite is a working prototype of a high-mileage, four-door passenger car that debuted in 1992. The Ultralite isn't intended for actual production but is a test machine to explore materials and efficient systems. The car can achieve 100 miles per gallon at 50 miles per hour cruising speed, powered by an experimental 173-pound three-cylinder two-stroke engine. It's lightweight carbon fiber body is similar to materials used in jet fighter bodies.

Concept cars: perennial favorites

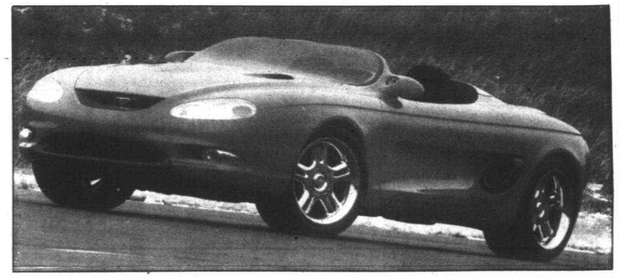
One of the feature attractions at any auto show are concept cars, those sleek, futuristic, and often radical products of an auto designer's imagination.

Detroit's 1993 North American International Auto Show will again have those car concepts on display. Who knows what variations of the cars will actually make it into production. Will the concepts become forgotten, or the shape of things to come?

Automakers pour millions into concept cars every year, and they undoubtedly must give designers a sense of pride when their car — or at least a concept that results from it — makes it into production.

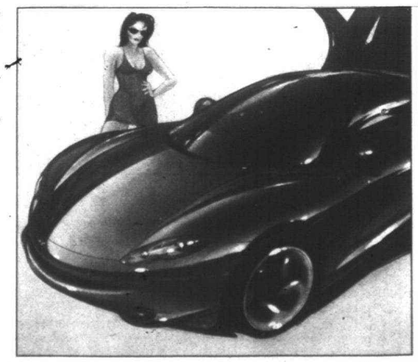
On this page you will find some of the automakers' offerings that will be on display.

The Jeep ECCO is Chrysler's concept of an aerodynamic, "environmentally aware" car that will be easy on gas and most assuredly easy to fit into tight parking spots. The ECCO produces 85 horsepower powered by a lean-burn 1.5-liter, 2-stroke engine. The vehicle is constructed of recyclable aluminum and plastic components. The car carries on some of the Jeep go-anywhere, do-anything tradition, with high ground clearance, great use of glass, and wheels on the corners of the vehicle to give stability and maneuverability under any road condition.



Ford went back to the future in designing their Mustang Mach III concept car, which the company says, "blends the styling cues of the classic (1965) Mustang with Ford's state-of-the-art design and technology." The open air roadster features sculpted body panels, a short, low windshield, a wraparound rear bumper, cat's eye headlamps, and 19-inch, five-spoke chrome wheels. Look for a three-spoke, wood-rimmed steering wheel, leather-trimmed seats, and high-output speakers mounted directly behind the head restraints. The Mach III is equipped with a supercharged 4.6 liter, 4-valve, V8 engine that can develop 450 horsepower. The engine works in conjunction with a six speed manual transmission with overdrive. It registers a 0-60 mph time of 4.5 seconds. "It's no secret that our new Mustang is coming and there's no doubt that people will readily recognize some of the styling cues from the Mach III," said Ford designer Fritz Mayhew.

The Hyundai HCD-II is a prototype that will be unveiled at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit. The sports coupe features extensive use of ultra-light composites, front-wheel drive, four-wheel disc brakes, ABS, traction control, dual airbags, a 2.0 liter engine, and a collision-avoidance system.



You can slide out of winter driving hazards

Winter in Michigan has its advantages: there's plenty of good skiing and ice skating, and all the mosquitos die.

But driving in snow, ice, and slush isn't one of the good parts of living in a winter wonderland. How many people have you heard say, "I have never been so scared in my life," after a winter driving experience?

To help motorists drive a little more confidently when Old Man Winter hits, automaker Saab has offered a few tips:

● Clear the windows! Motorists sometimes drive around in veritable rolling igloos with no more than a peep hole in the windshield. If scraping ice from the glass isn't sufficient, wait for the car to fully warm up and keep the defroster on.

● A seemingly clear and dry road may also have a treacherous covering of black ice, which forms as a clear, thin layer that's difficult to see. Bridges and overpasses are especially susceptible to black ice. One way to avoid problems is to always drive at a speed slightly below that which you are certain you can handle your car safely.

● Avoid sudden maneuvers while driving under slippery conditions. Sudden acceleration may cause wheel spin, and the increase in road speed will be negligible. Ragardless of the steering efforts of the driver, a front-wheel drive car will tend to go straight ahead.

● Sudden braking and locking of the wheels will have about the same effect as wheel spin. The locked wheels will lose all lateral stabilizing effect, the car will not respond to the steering and it will skid, possibly sideways.

● Skidding is best avoided by slowing down before a bend and taking the curve at steady throttle. Skidding is usually caused by the speed of the car being too high. If your speed is too high, don't panic: don't brake heavily and don't jerk the steering wheel.

● For a rear-wheel skid, Saab suggests steering in the same direction as the rear wheels are skidding; this applies to either a front-wheel or rear-wheel drive car. In a skid, take your foot off the accelerator and depress the clutch, if so equipped. Wait until the rear wheels have stopped skidding and then steer the car gently back, so that the front wheels point straight ahead when the rear wheels are back on course. Release the clutch and depress the accelerator gently so the engine speed matches the road speed, and accelerate gently. On rear-wheel drive cars, be careful not to over-correct the first skid.

● A front wheel-drive skid is less common and easier to correct than a rear-wheel drive skid. Saab suggests that you don't move the steering wheel. Take your foot off the accelerator and depress the clutch pedal, if so equipped. Since the wheels are skidding sideways, they exert a certain braking effort. Wait for the front wheels to grip again. As soon as the speed has dropped off enough, the car will start to steer again. Release the clutch and accelerate gently.

● Don't lock the wheels when braking. When a wheel is heavily braked, heat will be generated by the friction between the tire and the road surface. The surface of the ice will then melt immediately under the tire, which becomes a lubricating surface of water.

● Hydroplaning takes place when water causes a car's tires to lose contact with the road surface. A wedge of water forms in front of the tire because the water is not being expelled towards the rear and to the sides of the tread. The car becomes completely uncontrollable. The weapons against hydroplaning are primarily good tires, proper tire pressure and low speeds. The wider the tire, the greater the risk of hydroplaning.

● However competent a driver you are, getting stuck in the snow is not uncommon. The most important thing to remember is, never spin the driving wheels. Spinning the tires creates a polished surface underneath, and you may become firmly stuck. If you get in such a rut, switch off the fan, radio, windshield wipers, and other distractions, open the window and listen to the engine speed. Use any grip the car may have to struggle forward or backward. Change between forward and reverse and rock the car out.

Big 3 execs share stage at economic club lunch

The chief executive officers of the Big Three auto companies will be guest speakers at the Economic Club of Detroit during the 1993 North American International Auto Show's press days.

It will be the first time the CEOs of Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. will appear together in a public forum.

The speakers offer a mix of the incoming and the outgoing. Robert Eaton will have been chairman and chief executive officer of Chrysler for only a week when he appears at the Economic Club. Formerly vice chairman of Chrysler, Eaton succeeds Lee Iacocca.

GM President John F. "Jack" Smith, Jr. assumed his role in November. Ford Chairman Harold "Red" Poling will retire in 1993.

The luncheon will be held on Friday, Jan. 8, the day before the public opening of the auto show at Cobo Center.

Chrysler Corp. stakes a bundle on LH line

The year 1993 has long had a red circle around it on the Chrysler Corporation's calendar.

This is the year the pentastar company introduces the product line expected to define the company in the 1990s: the Dodge Intrepid, Chrysler Concorde and Eagle Vision. They're code-named the LH sedans, and about $1.5 billion has been spent on their production.

"Our new LH sedans have been developed to be world-class in every respect, taking on the best competitors in their class, regardless of whether they're from Japan, Europe or America," said Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca.

Chrysler has positioned its LH line to compete against world-class sedans in the world like the Ford Taurus and Honda Accord. An expanse of interior room was made possible by pushing the rear wheels rearward on the vehicle, while extending the base of the windshield forward. The car line also features dual air bags, anti-lock brakes on most models, a 113-inch wheelbase, and a more rigid body.

Other features include:

● Chrysler's first domestically-produced 24-valve engine, a new, multi-point injected 3.5 liter SOHC V-6 with 214 horsepower will be offered standard on the Vision Tsi and optional on all other models. A standard 3.3 liter V-6 is also offered.

● Intrepid, Concorde and Vision will offer five passenger seating with front bucket seats. Intrepid will also offer a front-bench seat arrangement for six-passenger capacity.

● The climate control system is totally new, and Chrysler calls it the "most versatile and powerful system yet devised" by the company.

● A cab-forward design, which entails taking the entire interior cabin of a vehicle and moving it forward, extending the windshield over the front wheels, while moving the rear wheels closer to the rear of the car. Interior space is thus increased.

Each car line was designed with its own identity: the sporty Intrepid, the tough Vision, and the upscale Concorde. The cars will be built in Chrysler's Bramalea, Ont. plant, and the engines will be manufactured at the Trenton Engine Plant.

Of the Intrepid, Car and Driver magazine said: "In a word, Chrysler's futuristic four-door is a keeper." The magazine had relatively minor beefs about the stereo and climate control knobs, wind and road noise leaks, and a jerky cruise control. But overall, "The Intrepid in ES trim is terrifically roomy and comfortable, yet reassuringly quick and poised — indeed Intrepid," the publication said.

According to Bob Faust, general sales manager for Dick Scott Dodge in Plymouth, the LH cars arrived on his showroom floor in November, and the cost, depending on options, ranges from $16,000 to $24,000.

"The LH series is probably the most fabulous car ever put out by the Big Three," Faust said. "It offers superior quality and value." He said initially, production has been slow so the automaker can maintain quality.

"The LH in one sense, is our chance to re-establish the feeling that we can perform in the car business as well as anybody," said Francois J. Castaing, vice president — Vehicle Engineering. "That's our primary objective. Of course, it's not a make or break proposition for the company because it's only one car line. We're not betting the company, but sure enough we're betting our self-esteem."

Service more of a selling point

The 1993 Audi 90 series includes the CS Quattro Sport pictured here. In the 90, the automaker offers a redesigned car line that's more powerful than its predecessors. The "Audi Advantage" is also offered.

Keeping the customer satisfied has not always been atop the list of automakers' priorities.

When American-made cars were the only show in town, automakers and dealers could afford to let service slip. Service after the sale, a knowledgeable sales staff, and the use of quality components could not always be counted on.

As we fast forward to 1993, the situation has turned around 180 degrees. There are still poor dealers and poor products, but automakers know and appreciate that customers aren't buying as many cars as they did 20 years ago, and have plenty of other cars to choose from next time if they aren't satisfied now with their service.

"Customer satisfaction has eclipsed fuel economy, quality, and even safety as the top concern of virtually every manufacturer selling automobiles and light trucks in the American market," Oldsmobile proclaims.

The GM division touts its Oldsmobile Edge plan as "the most comprehensive guarantee of customer satisfaction available in the U.S. market."

Oldsmobile: provides corrosion protection for six years or 100,000 miles; covers towing charges (except for parking infractions); provides roadside repairs, and offers courtesy transportation while the car is undergoing warranty repair.

If you're 150 or more miles from home and your car breaks down, Olds will cover food and lodging expenses up to $500.

Cadillac offers a four-year, 50,000-mile protection on covered parts with no deductible, plus a six-year, 100,000-mile corrosion protection warranty.

In addition, all Cadillacs, regardless of the model year, are covered by 24-hour roadside service for the life of the vehicle. The service is available at 585 Cadillac dealerships nationwide without any membership fee for the life of the vehicle.

Trained telephone operator advisors are available 24 hours to provide assistance and information to Cadillac owners that could put the driver back on the road without sending a technician. In the event of a more complex problem, a dealer technician is dispatched to repair the problem roadside, or towing will be arranged.

Other available services available at no cost in the first 12 months of new ownership include lockout assistance, gasoline delivery, towing, battery jump starts, and flat tire changes.

For Allante, service includes a four-year, 50,000-mile protection warranty with supplemental Gold Key Plus bumper-to-bumper coverage, which extends coverage to a seven-year, 100,000-mile protection on covered parts with no deductible.

"Cadillac is seriously committed to service after the sale," said Jeff Rogers, assistant general sales manager for Don Massey Cadillac in Plymouth. "We find that customers coming in the door don't know about the service, but when they buy a car, it gives them a real sense of assurance knowing they have it."

The "Audi Advantage" offers car-buyers expense-free scheduled maintenance and routine repairs for three years or 50,000 miles throughout its model line. Audi also offers a 10-year limited warranty against corrosion and 24-hour roadside assistance through a club membership.

Pontiac has enhanced its customer service by expanding its roadside assistance services (including finding someone to change your flat tire or to remedy a locked-out of car or lost-key situation free-of-charge), and new courtesy transportation during 1993 model year warranty repairs.

Van conversions on display

In addition to cars and trucks from manufacturers around the world, the 1993 North American International Auto Show will include one of the largest retail displays of van conversions in North America.

Twenty companies will display about 35 van conversions on the lower level of Cobo Hall during the auto show, as they have done for more than a decade. Van conversions are sold through retail car dealers.

"The auto show is important to our dealers because it sells a lot of van conversions," said Daniel Hayes, executive vice president of the Detroit Auto Dealers Association. "We've received reports of dealers selling as many as 50 van conversions in the two weeks following the show."

There is no additional charge for the van conversion show.

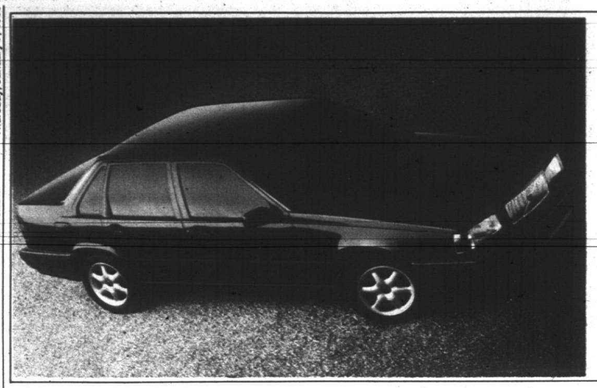
THE HEARTBEAT OF AMERICA



Volvo calls its 850 line "the most exciting Volvo since the 444 hit American shores in the mid-50s." The all-new front-wheel drive sedan is equipped with semi-independent rear suspension, a transverse-mounted 2.4 liter five-cylinder engine, five-speed manual transmission, four-wheel disc brakes with ABS, and driver- and passenger-side air bags.

"The 850 is a new kind of Volvo," said Mats Ola Palm, chairman of Volvo Cars of North America, Inc. "Its nimble handling and lively performance will appeal to people who may never have considered a Volvo before."

Ford tries to build on Ranger's success

Trying to make what's been a success even better, designers at Ford Motor Co. have given a slippery new look and made mechanical improvements to the 1993 Ford Ranger.

The nation's best-selling compact pickup truck the past six years, the Ranger is "a truck for the 90s and beyond. The 1993 Ford Ranger blends Ford Compact toughness and versatility with contemporary styling and car-like comfort and convenience," said Ford Vice President Ross H. Roberts.

The Ranger received a total facelift: a new hood, headlamps, grille, bumper, and an optional front valance panel. The hood is lower than on earlier Ranger models and there are four more inches of overhang.

New sheet metal and flush glass contribute to vehicle aerodynamics and reduces wind noise. New cast aluminum wheels and tri-color taillamps round out the new look. The four-wheel-drive models have an even more aggressive appearance.

The Ranger line offers three different types of engines, a 2.3 liter, four-cylinder Twin Plug engine; the 4.0 liter V6, while the 4x4 offers Ford's 3.0 liter 145 horsepower V6.

Underneath, suspension and steering systems have been modified to accomodate the pickup's wider stance.

Car and Driver complimented a "neatly laid out" interior of the Ranger, a 4.0 liter engine with more than enough power to "stave off embarrassment," and a "reasonably quiet" cabin. C/D panned the pickup's rear-end bounce on severe bumps and the cab's lack of space.

But the magazine concluded,"A good thing has been made much better."

The '93 Camaro: a new look

Since its introduction on Sept. 18, 1966, the Chevrolet Camaro has survived, occasionally thrived, and undergone more facelifts than Phyllis Diller.

Orignally designed and built to take on the Ford Mustang, the Camaro has entered and reentered phases of being a muscle car, econo-cruiser, and refined sports car.

At the 1993 Detroit International Auto Show, the latest version of the Camaro will be introduced. Completely redesigned, "the fourth-generation Camaro wears a sculptured, contemporary skin over hardware that's been thoroughly updated to meet the needs of today's most demanding sports car enthusiasts," said Chevrolet's press material.

The car will be available in two coupe versions: standard and the more muscular Z28. The new Camaro retains the old 101.1-inch wheelbase, but is longer, wider, and taller than its predecessor. Standard features include driver- and passenger-side airbags and an anti-lock braking system.

"Though virtually every component is all-new or significantly modified, this fourth-generation Camaro is heavily based on the previous design, which first appeared in 1982," said Road and Track magazine. "This is a radical evolution, not a clean sheet revolution."

Standard Camaros are powered by a new overhead-valve 3.4 liter V-6, which kicks out 160 horsepower at 4600 RPM. This engine can be linked with either a four-speed automatic transmission or five-speed manual.

Enter into the Z28 realm and the power increases substantially. The Z28 is powered by the 5.7 liter V8 found in the Corvette. Known as the LT1, the motor produces 275 horsepower at 5000 rpm in the Camaro: a gain of 30 horses over last year's engine. The Z28 is available in both manual and automatic transmissions.

The Camaro's interior has been redesigned and includes a wraparound instrument panel with analog gauges, The rear seat can fold down flat for a cargo volume index of 22.3 cubic feet.

With an estimated base price of $17,200, Motor Trend said buyers can expect a lot for their money. The magazine mentioned its reduced interior noise, excellent braking, and solid feel, while panning occasional throttle clunks.

"While the Z28 continues to offer near-Corvette performance at below-Honda Prelude price, it now challenges the best in ergonomics, solidity, ride, and quietness," the magazine said.

Redesigned for '93, the Camaro features a standard 3.4 liter V-6, wraparound instrument panel, and 16-inch wheels.

Saturn welcomes wagon family

Changes in this year's offerings from Saturn will be significant in 1993, the car line's third model year.

Saturn debuts a new family of wagons and a "high-value" coupe — which join a Saturn sedan and a performance-oriented coupe. Saturn now offers seven models.

A driver's side airbag will be installed on all seven models in 1993. Saturn also offers a new optional traction control system to improve driving on slippery surfaces.

Saturn's SW1 and SW2 wagons are extensions of the four-door line. When the split folding rear seat backs are lowered, the wagons' cargo volume is 56.3 cubic feet. With the seats up, volume is 28.8 cubic feet. Modifications were made to the sedan's spaceframe to accommodate the design of the larger rear cargo area.

Last year's single coupe model is renamed SC2 for 1993, while "SC1" has been reserved for the entry-level SC1. Both models share the same space frame and a 99.2 inch wheelbase, but the SC1 has different fenders and exposed headlamps.

The Saturn SL/SL1 sedans, SW1 wagon, and SC1 coupe are powered by a 1.9-liter single-overhead cam four cylinder. Saturn's SL2 sedans, SW2 wagons and SC2 coupes have a single dual overhead cam variant of the 1.9-liter design, fitted with 16 valves.

In reviewing the SW2 station wagon, Motor Trend said they were "most impressed" by progress made in quieting the car's 16-valve engine, calling it "smooth, powerful, and well-behaved." They also complimented the car's "sprightly handling" and "pleasant ride." The magazine had a beef with rear seat room, but overall, dubbed it a "nifty piece with attractive styling."

GM seeks to fine-tune airbags

It can be a deadly meeting when a car meets a deer. General Motors can't do much for the deer, but the automaker is trying to fine-tune its airbag technology to assure that drivers don't become victims, too.

Air bag designers face a special problem: autos equipped with the devices must have sensors able to detect in milliseconds if a crash is severe enough to require the protection of an air bag. Michigan has 48,000 car-deer accidents annually.

"As many motorists have learned, not every vehicle collision requires the deployment of an air-bag systm," said Dr. David Viano, a researcher at the General Motors Biomedical Science Department. "This system must be sensitive enough to quickly detect if the collision that is occuring will be severe enough that the occupants need the extra protection that the air bag system provides.

"Striking a deer running across a highway is certainly an unnerving occurence, but is usually not one that requires an air bag deployment . . . ."

GM tries to strike the right balance with low-speed crash testing with styrofoam and sand bags to simulate deer. Also, rough road tests help verify that the GM system won't trigger on harsh road surfaces or off road when an air bag deployment is not needed.

The automaker's research and accident data analysis have helped GM set an impact speed threshold for air bag deployment higher than many manufacturers, lowering the risk and expense of unnecessary deployments.

Buick has bright idea

Are you in the habit of leaving your car lights on? For its 1993 Skylark, Buick is offering a system that saves battery life by automatically turning off the juice if any interior light is left on with the ignition off. Lights can be reactivated by turning the light switch on and off.

A winning design for Lexus?

A car of Italian design and Japanese engineering will be making its debut on U.S. soil at the North American International Auto Show.

Aimed at the luxury performance market, the Lexus GS 300 sedan will be positioned between what the company calls the "near-luxury" ES 300 and the flagship LS 400. The GS 300 is a four-door, five-passenger car designed by Italian Giorgetto Giugiaro.

Lexus' press literature states: "If the new Lexus GS 300 doesn't look like anything else in the Lexus lineup there's a reason . . . ."

That reason, said Lexus chief designer Kunihiro Uchida, is that Toyota, as it often does, held a styling competition when working on the design of the car. This time, the Giugiaro group's design won.

The car is powered by a twin-cam 24-valve 3.0 liter inline six cylinder engine. The powerplant is mated to an Electronically Controlled Transmission with intelligence (ECT-i) which retards ignition timing during shifts, momentarily lowering engine torque and making for "virtually unnoticeable" shifts, according to Lexus.

The car features anti-lock brakes, dual air bags, four-wheel disc brakes, genuine walnut on the console, and a telescoping and tilting steering wheel. Optional on the GS 300 is the Portable Plus Cellular phone, which Lexus says is the first system to offer voice activiation in the car. The system comes with a "hands-free" command module located on the steering column, which automatically mutes the sound system and reduces fan speed noise during voice activation when a call is placed.

Okay, so you're not dragging a shopping cart to the auto show.

You can still see our polymer body-side panels. The ones our engineers have been banging things against for years.

Take our word for it, these panels are strong enough to fend off most of the usual dents from errant carts, car doors and other enemies of the beautiful finish.

And you can ask how we solved all the other uphill-and-downhill, stop-and-go, load-up, squeeze-through, everyday driving and parking situations. We've got three answers for you.

A Different Kind of Company. A Different Kind of Car.

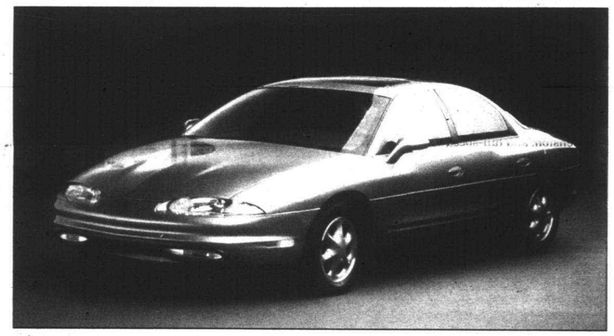
Chevrolet's Highlander "fun runner" borrows from the S-10 Extended Cab Pickup. It features a 165 hp 4.3 liter V-6, a four speed automatic transmission, a front brush bar, fog lamps, and a front and rear winch. An automatic weather "roll top," like a roll-top desk, can cover the truck bed.



The Olds Aurora

New dawn for Olds Aurora

The Oldsmobile Aurora, the new flagship sedan that will be introduced at the North American International Auto Show, is a harbinger of things to come for the division.

The front-wheel drive Aurora replaces the Olds division's Toronado, and is aimed at "customers seeking engineering sophistication, bold design, and refined interior appointments at an exceptional value," the manufacturer says. The car is positioned at the lower end of the luxury auto market.

Under the hood is a transverse-mounted 32-valve V-8 engine mated to a four-speed electronically controlled automatic transmission. The powerplant, the Aurora V-8, produces 250 horsepower and has a torque curve that emphasizes mid-range response.

Major engine and transmission components are made of aluminum, magnesium, or composite materials. The car features an all-independent suspension and four-wheel disc brakes with standard ABS.

"We purposely took some risks with the Aurora," said Dennis Burke, chief designer of the Oldsmobile One exterior studio. "There is no grill, no add-ons of any kind. In fact, none of the traditional luxury cues are present in this car.

"Instead, we emphasized strong muscular shapes to achieve a visual presence of substance and stability."

The Aurora will be manufactured at GM's Orion Township plant. To improve quality, some special steps are being taken with the Aurora. A silicon-bronze material will be used to fill critical body seams prior to painting. The powertrain will be installed off-line to minimize errors.

In the wake of reports that the Olds division would be discontinued by GM, general manager John Rock said the Oldsmobile product lineup will be remolded around Aurora.

"Aurora will send a strong signal that Oldsmobile will be marketing world class products in the years to come," he said.

Cadillac's style

Fleetwood, Northstar: they're key in 1993

In 1903, the first Cadillac was assembled in Detroit, featuring a 10-horsepower, single-cylinder engine at a cost of $750.

Today's Cadillac line still has four wheels and an engine, but to say the least, times and technology have changed.

Around the turn of the century, automakers had yet to conceive of a Northstar powertrain and suspension, Speed Sensitive Steering, or antilock brakes. But in today's market, introducing such new automotive features and standardizing existing technologies is what keeps an automaker at the top of the game.

Cadillac's television and print advertising theme this year is "changing the way you think about American automobiles," perhaps because the company is changing the way it's doing business.

"Cadillac has changed," said Peter R. Levin, Cadillac's director of advertising. "We know that the market has also changed and the luxury market is increasingly segmented. The campaign will focus on the new Northstar system and the all-new Fleetwood Brougham sedan."

The GM division is focused on retaining its traditional luxury market customer base, while aiming part of its pitch at younger, more affluent, and highly educated customers. Cadillac categorizes its product in the "ultimate sport," "prestige luxury" and "traditional large luxury models," recognizing that each segment has diverse needs.

In the car line's prestige luxury segment, the Northstar system will be installed, including a 32-valve, 4.6 liter Northstar V-8 engine, 4-speed electronic automatic transmission, speed sensitive steering, road-sensing suspension, and full-speed traction control.

Introduced on the Allante earlier this year, the Northstar powertrain will be standard equipment on the Eldorado Touring Coupe and the Seville Touring Sedan. The Eldorado, Seville, De Ville and Sixty Special models will retain the 4.9 liter V8.

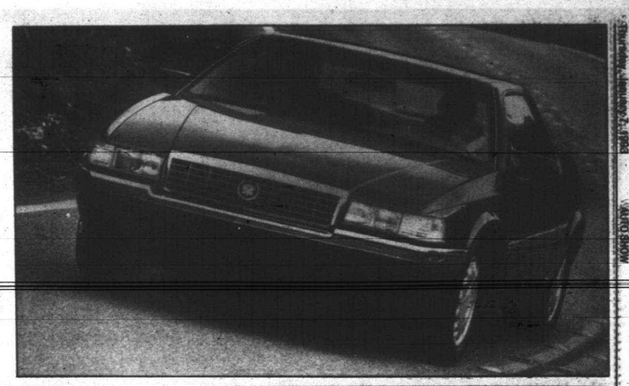
The six-passenger Fleetwood is also seen as critical to Cadillac's success in 1993. The automaker hopes the car will have a wide appeal.

"The Fleetwood holds a strategic place in the Cadillac portfolio," said John O. Grettenberger, general manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Division. "This new model lays claim to a solid core of specific Cadillac customers, plus we believe it will be attractive to new buyers who want comfort and safety in a technically contemporary large rear-wheel-drive luxury car."

The car has been helped by its high visibility in the limousine trade and is targeted for export to Japan and the Middle East. A 7,000-lb. trailer towing package option provides the highest available capacity of any passenger car in the world.

The 1993 Fleetwood and Fleetwood Brougham represent an all new body style: at 225.1 inches, it's 4.1 inches longer than last year's model, and it's aerodynamic appearance is .36, dramatically down from .49 in the 1992 model.

For its 1993 front-drive models, Cadillac has introduced Speed Sensitive Steering, to provide optimum steering feel and response throughout the operating range of the vehicle. Low effort steering for city driving means motorists won't have muscle strain while parallel parking. As vehicle speed increases, so does the driver's steering effort. Cadillac touts the system as helping to make the driver "feel confident in the way the car will react" and less fatigued.



The Eldorado sports coupe, right, is equipped with a 4.9 liter V-8. The Cadillac Fleetwood Brougham, below, includes a new body style, and at 225.1 inches, is the longest regular production car built in the U.S. The car rides on 15 x 7 inch cast aluminum wheels. It will be available in 12 exterior colors for 1993.

Automobile award given to Chrysler

The 1993 Chrysler Concorde, Dodge Intrepid, and Eagle Vision have been selected by the editors of Automobile Magazine as the 1993 "Automobile of the Year."

"These are great American cars that can hold their own in any company on any kind of road, said the magazine's publisher, David E. Davis, Jr. "They are a full-throated rendition of 'America the Beautiful' on wheels."

In addition to the Chrysler line, other candidates included BMW 318i, Ford Probe GT, Ford Taurus SHO, Infiniti J30t, Mazda MX-6, Mazda RX-7, Mercedes Benz 400E, Nissan Altima SE, Saturn SW2, Subaru SVX, and Volkswagen Corrado SLC.

"All during the Concorde, Intrepid, and Vision development period we knew we had the potential to meet, and perhaps even exceed, what we challenged ourselves to do," said Chrysler President Robert Lutz. "However, you never truly know if you've succeeded until you hand over your new baby to the experts and to the customer. And judging by early sales, our customers feel the same as Automobile Magazine does."

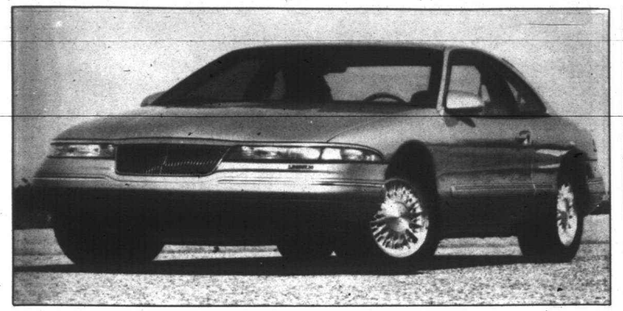
CHRYSLER MOTORS PRESENTS



The 1993 Lincoln Mark VIII features aerodynamic styling and a new interior.

Mark VIII: more car, less hump

If you're trying to find the 1993 Lincoln Mark VIII at the Detroit auto show, you won't recognize it by looking for the characteristic spare tire hump on the trunk. It's barely perceptible.

Instead, keep your eyes peeled for a bigger and swoopier version of the discontinued Mark VII, which was introduced as a 1984 model. Compared to the Mark VII, the Mark VIII is 4.1 inches longer and 3.7 inches wider, with a significantly more aerodynamic look.

"The Mark VIII is our flagship vehicle of the future," said Lee Miskowski, Ford vice president and Lincoln Mercury general manager. "This car will change the way people think about the Lincoln brand and Ford Motor Co.

"It is a no-compromise model focused on what a Mark VIII should be: no optional engines or nonperformance models."

The Mark VIII is powered by a 4.6-liter "four cam" 32-valve V-8 aluminum engine. The engine is mated to an electronic four-speed automatic overdrive transmission. Standard equipment includes driver and passenger air bags, four-wheel disc brakes, and anti-lock brakes.

The Mark VIII utilizes a new microprocessor to control independent air-spring suspension at all four wheels, providing continuous load leveling. The system also provides for automatic lowering of the vehicle, about .8 inches, to reduce drag at cruising speeds.

Said Car and Driver: "If the Lexus SC400's ride and handling were Lincoln's target — and we think they were — the Dearborn engineers have hit their Mark. Terrific." The magazine also had compliments about the car's speed sensitive steering, interior roominess, smooth transmission, and 0-60 mph time (6.8 seconds). Complaints were registered about the placement of gauges.

"Dynamically, this new Lincoln is a high-water Mark," said Car and Driver.

Said Lee R. Miskowski, Ford vice president and Lincoln-Mercury general manager: "Mark VIII is our flagship of the future — a car that will take on the luxury cars of the world."

The 1993 Mercury Villager brings Ford's Lincoln-Mercury Division into the minivan market. The front-wheel drive vehicle is powered by a 3.0 liter V-6 and a four-speed automatic transmission. A flexible seating system allows 14 different seating and cargo-carrying configurations.

Audi renews entire line

With the introduction of its redesigned 1993 90 series, Audi has renewed its entire range of luxury cars.

The automaker offers a car line that's larger and more powerful than its predecessors: as Audi says, a "sports flair in a personal-size luxury sedan."

Audi is aiming the 90 series at Lexus ES 300, the Acura Vigor, the BMW 325i, and the Mercedes 190E 2.6.

Introduced in July 1992, the new 90s followed the 1991 debut of the all-new Audi 100 line, the 1992 introductions of all-wheel-drive Quattro versions of the 100, the high performance s4 sports sedan, and the more-powerful V-8 Quattro.

The 90 series includes the 90 S, 90 CS, and 90 CS Quattro Sport. They feature split/folding rear seats, alloy wheels, headlight washers, automatic climate control, and standard leather seats on two of the three models. All the 90s are powered by a 2.8 liter V-6 generating 172 horsepower.

The grill, bumpers, and most exterior panels are new. Trunk space has been increased, and an airbag and an anti-lock braking system are standard on most models.

The V-6 engine's horsepower is increased by 32 percent from the previous model. On the front-drive 90 S and 90 CS, the engine is mated to a standard five-speed manual transmission. An optional four-speed automatic is also available.

The 90 series "has been very well-received," said Mario DeFrancisco, sales manager of Fred Lavery Audi in Birmingham. "The car is beautiful, it has a smooth V-6, people like the front-wheel drive, and with the fold-down rear seat, it turns into a mini-station wagon. The car is a very, very nice package."

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

The 1993 Range Rover County LWB is the first sport utility vehicle in the world to use adjustable air suspension, which can raise the vehicle to wade through water 22 inches deep. The Rover is powered by a 4.2 liter V-8 which creates 200 horsepower. This year's Range Rover's have received more than four dozen engineering refinements.

Prizm reflects a change in style

Meet the new Geo Prizm, the first major overhaul of a GEO model since the brand was established in 1988.

The car will be on showroom floors this year at Chevrolet/Geo dealers. The Prizm is built at NUMMI, the GM-Toyota joint venture in Fremont, Calif., and has been the best-selling car in the Geo lineup since the brand was established.

The new Prizm front-wheel-drive family sedan offers several under-the-skin improvements, including:

- a longer wheelbase and overall length for a roomier interior;
- A move up from subcompact to compact class;
- Standard driver-side airbag and available anti-lock brakes;
- A new optional 1.8 litre fuel-injected engine.

This year, the GSi model has been discontinued, but the standard and LSi trim levels are available.

In the area of safety, all Prizms have a driver's side airbag, active 3-point safety belts, and rear child safety door locks. The airbag design allows horn operation from the middle of the four-spoke steering wheel, eliminating fumbling for thumb-shaped horn buttons. The front belts have a five-position vertical height adjustment for added comfort.

The uplevel Prizm LSi features specific seat and door trim and a 60/40 split folding rear seat with a convenient trunk "pass through" feature.

The multiport fuel injected engine is a standard 16-valve DOHC 1.6 liter engine that generates 108 HP at 6000 RPM. A 1.8 liter DOHC engine rated at 115 HP at 5600 RPM is optional.

The Geo line is aimed at entry-level buyers, first-time buyers and young families. Four distinct vehicles comprise the Geo line: the redesigned Prizm sedan, the sporty Storm coupe, the economical Metro and the versatile Tracker sport-utility vehicle.

Larger Toyota pickup challenges the domestics

The lucrative U.S. pickup market will get another competitor in 1993, as Toyota introduces its T100, the automaker's first intermediate-sized pickup.

Powered by a standard 3.0 liter, 150 HP V-6, the Toyota offers three-across seating, a 4x8 foot panel capacity on the floor, and a 1,550-lb standard payload capacity.

The pickup is available in either 2WD or 4WD. All 4WD models feature Toyota's 4Wheel Demand system, which has a differential that changes on the fly from 2WD to 4WD at speeds up to 50 mph by simply shifting the transfer case lever.

Other features include standard rear-wheel anti-lock brakes, rack-and-pinion steering for responsive control, reduced noise through the use of more insulation, and a distinctive new aerodynamic style.

Car and Driver magazine says the T100 drives plainly and gets by with a small six cylinder engine.

But the big pickup "is the first import to challenge the Big Three's monopoly in the American large-truck market," said the magazine, which could lead to "reduced market share and quicker turnaround times to produce new trucks . . . ."

The Toyota's dimensions attempt to fill a market need between small and large trucks, and Car and Driver commented on its "excellent" automatic and manual gearboxes, good handling, and low noise.

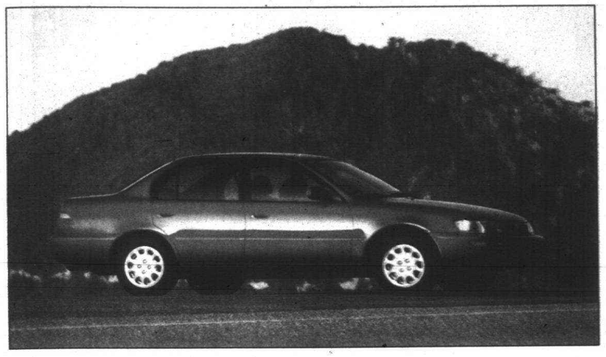
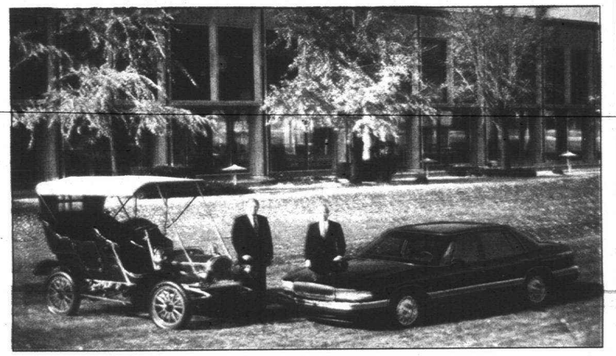
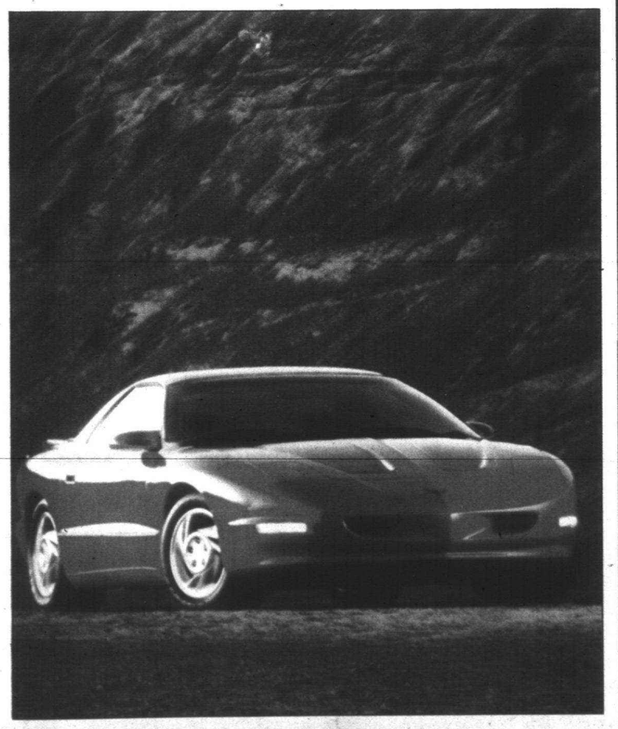
What's new (and old) in '93



Moving up from subcompact to compact is the 1993 Toyota Corolla, which has a new and larger interior and exterior this year. The car comes with a standard 1.6-liter engine, or buyers can choose a 1.8 liter powerplant. The Corolla is equipped with driver's-side air bag and optional anti-lock brakes. The J.D. Power survey ranked it best in its class.



Buick Motor Division celebrates its 90th birthday this year, recovering from near-bankruptcy in 1904 to become the financial pillar on which General Motors was created. Here, a 1905 Model C Buick and a 1993 Park Avenue Ultra are admired by Chief Engineer Tony Derhake (left) and General Manager Ed Mertz. This Model C is believed to be the fourth oldest Buick in existence.



The newly styled and engineered Pontiac Firebird will make a landing at the 1993 North American Auto Show. The three models, the Firebird, Formula, and Trans Am have 90 percent new content, including two new engines, standard anti-lock brakes, and dual air bags. The '93 model is the fourth generation Firebird.

Corvette blows out candles, blows away competitors

Happy birthday, Chevrolet Corvette.

For most of its 40 years, the 'vette has been the nation's standard-bearer in the area of high performance cars. This year, the line will offer a 40th Anniversary Edition, a significant increase in horsepower and torque in for the LT5-powered ZR-1 and a new standard keyless entry system.

The ZR-1 is the Corvette line's showcase model, and for 1993, it will become a limited-production sports car with a maximum of 380 units available per year through 1995.

"The ZR-1 option is a great image-builder for Chevrolet. It allows us to showcase technology that just isn't available anywhere else," said Chevrolet General manager Jim Perkins. "However, the ZR-1 competes in a very limited market niche, and our decision to limit production reflects that reality."

Equipment on the ZR-1 includes a V-8 engine upgraded to 405 horsepower wih a dual overhead cam.

About 4,800 Corvettes equipped with the ZR-1 option have been sold since the car was introduced in the fall of 1989. Overall, the one millionth Corvette was built July 2.

Suburban gets new transmission

The 1993 Chevrolet Suburban gets GM's new Hydra-matic 4160-E electronic four speed automatic transmission for 1993 after an extensive redesign in '92.

The Suburban comes with a standard 5.7 liter eight cylinder engine, with an optional 7.4 liter engine also available. The K2500 has a maximum payload of 3,065 to 3,565 pounds.

Refinements also include more underhood and underbody corrosion protection, tilt steering column improvements to reduce theft, and more extensive use of anti-chip paint coating.

At the fuel pump, the Suburban's gas tank will accept a whopping 42 gallons of gas.

The manufacturer's suggested retail price for the Suburban is $19,080.
