MC Timz special edition

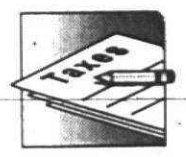
The Michigan Chronicle, considered the newspaper of record for metro Detroit's African American community, and the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, which serves 19 suburban communities in the area, are concurrently running this week's edition of MC Timz.

The Timz is the Chronicle's nationally recognized, award-winning section written by and for high school students. Through corporate sponsors and cooperation with the Detroit Public Schools and the Pontiac Board of Education, the Timz goes out free to more than 50,000 young people in the region.

And now, through the widely circulated Observer & Eccentric papers, the Timz will reach a combined readership of more than 650,000.

Appropriately, suburban and city writers in this week's MC Timz tackle race relations, city-suburb conflict and a variety of related concerns.

Schools cool to Proposal A



Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Superintendent John Hoben suggested the school board delay taking a stand on Proposal A, but several board members expressed strong feelings against the plan Monday.

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Is the Plymouth-Canton Community School District for or against Proposal A? Depends what day it is.

Proposal A is the school finance reform proposal favored by Gov. John Engler that voters will decide June 2. The plan would limit property tax assessment increases to 5 percent or the inflation rate, whichever is less. School districts would receive a guaranteed 18 mills and the power to levy an additional 9 voted mills.

The state sales tax would be increased from 4 percent to 6 percent, with the additional revenue and lottery funds going to schools. School employees' Social Security and retirement costs previously paid by the state would be local districts' responsibility under Proposal A.

Until Monday, most Plymouth-Canton administrators and board members were neutral on Proposal A, as they believed it was the pick of the litter among the recently drafted school finance reform packages. But as Proposal A's enabling legislation is written in Lansing — a process expected to continue through June 2 — the impact on the district is coming into focus.

Cost higher

Superintendent John Hoben told the school board Monday night that the latest figures from Lansing show that Proposal A would mean a deficit for the school district of $6.9 million, not $4.7 million as earlier projected.

Regardless of what happens with Proposal A, the district plans to go ahead with its June 14 election,

Canton library to stay in federation for 1 year

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

The Canton Public Library is in.

"We will remain in WOLF. We will work with WOLF to change the basic cooperative structure of the organization," said Jean Tabor, Canton library director.

Under a one-year compromise worked out by the Library of Michigan, seven of the larger libraries, including Canton, in the Wayne Oakland Library Federation, will remain as members. The Canton Library Board of Trustees has approved the compromise.

Canton and six other library districts — Farmington, Rochester, Southfield, Birmingham, Bloomfield and Independence Township — wanted to leave WOLF and form their own organization, Metro Net.

WOLF, an inter-library system, provides library services to many major communities in Wayne and Oakland counties. WOLF allows shared borrowing privileges for residents and discount buying power for member libraries.

The compromise will allow the seven libraries WOLF membership, while providing them with a portion of state aid to conduct a special technological project library directors have had their eye on.

"I think it's a workable solution that gives both sides what they wanted and gives each some breathing space," said Harry Courtright, WOLF executive director.

During the yearlong compromise, which extends to Oct. 1, 1994, Courtright hopes both sides can work out their differences, such as the voting structure of the WOLF board. Metro Net libraries, for example, were upset

Confused or satisfied?

That's what is difficult to figure out with the lack of response from Canton residents to an invitation to be part of a cablecast community dialogue 7-8:30 p.m. June 10.

"We need people interested in being in the audience," said Ken Voyles, administrative assistant to Tom Yack, township supervisor.

But as of Monday, Voyles had received only six phone calls from interested residents. He was hoping for a maximum 125, from which 75 would be randomly chosen to sit in the audience of the forum.

Now, Voyles would be happy to get 60-70 people calling in for reservations. The plan was to give residents a chance to talk to Yack; Elaine Kirchgatter, treasurer; and Loren Bennett, clerk.

Voyles asked residents to call in with their name and the topic or question they would like to address to the three elected officials. A reception is scheduled to follow the program where residents can ask more questions.

Voyles, however, acknowledged that perhaps his plan was too complicated or confusing for residents to bother. "We may have done that," he said.

Voyles also acknowledged that perhaps residents don't like the idea of telling township officials in advance the question they want answered.

"We would like to have a handle on the type of questions that will be asked," he said. "I need to know a topic."

But that doesn't mean elected officials know exactly which questions will be asked. During the program, the questions will be drawn randomly.

"I agree, this is not without some foreknowledge," Voyles added.

Then again, Voyles wondered if residents thought they could just show up to the event. That's not the preferred method because Voyles wants to know if there will be an audience that night. The program requires scheduling with Omnicom and scheduling for a location.

To be on the safe side, Voyles is extending the May 14 deadline to call in with your name and question May 21. To make a reservation, call Voyles at 397-5472.

Union backs state plan

Plymouth-Canton teachers' union, the Michigan Education Association, endorses both Proposal A and the school district's request for an additional 4 mills that will appear on the June 14 ballot.

Maryann Ligato-Freydl, MEA executive director, said that "although Proposal A does not provide all that we wanted, it does correct many inequities in the current school funding process.

"The proposal cuts property taxes by lowering the millage rates, guarantees that the money from the increase in the sales tax are earmarked constitutionally for education, as well as guaranteeing in the state constitution that the base grant, $4,800 per student, can only increase, not decrease. This prevents the lottery shell game."

Ligato-Freydl said that although Plymouth-Canton "got caught in a technicality and its foundation millage is only 19.26 mills, the passage of the four mills in new millage will provide sufficient funding to restore cuts and prevent future cuts.

"Some seem inclined to oppose Proposal A because they feel that we will be deeper in the hole if A passes," she added. "This is only true if the four mills is defeated. If both A and the four mills pass, we will be better off. Those making such comparisons are basing them on a false assumption — that the property tax will remain the same. The handwriting is on the wall. There will be a significant property tax reduction.

"If Proposal A passes, it will be with replacement money. If Proposal A is defeated, the property tax will not be accompanied by replacement money and we will be much worse off. Proposal A is the best compromise among many divergent positions. It deserves support."

The MEA also supports both millage proposals on the June 14 ballot — the 17.74-mill renewal and the 4 mills in additional taxes. A mill is $1 of tax per $1,000 of assessed property value.

"The district needs this money to avoid layoffs and to restore the program to its 1991-92 levels," she said.

Tom Workman, principal of East Middle School, said his professional association also supports Proposal A. "We recognize it has many loopholes, but we based our decision on what is in A for the state of Michigan," he said.

"I haven't heard any decision about what is following A by our board," said Workman. There is support for a "personal proposal" of Gov. Engler's that — should A fail — "will be far more disastrous than A."

Proposal A

requesting that voters approve an additional 4 mills. Ballot language will be finalized after the results of the June 2 election are known.

If Proposal A fails, the district will ask voters to renew 17.74 expiring mills and approve 4 additional mills for two years.

If Proposal A passes, the district will ask for 4 mills for four years.

Plymouth-Canton school board members discussed the situation at their meeting Monday night.

"Finally, it now appears that we have answers to most of our questions to project the impact Proposal A will have on the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools," said school board president Roland Thomas.

"According to the best advice from the Michigan Department of Treasury, our district would only be allowed to levy for operating purposes 19.26 mills without a vote, which falls short of the district's guaranteed base foundation millage of 20.95 mills," he said.

Unknown factors

The shortfall of 1.69 mills equates to $3.5 million, or $237 per pupil, he said. (The foundation millage is more than 18 mills because Proposal A makes allowances for previously voted millage based on enrollment.)

Complicating the financial picture is that the district "still does not know what its official state equalized valuation will be. We may not know until sometime in June," Thomas said.

"Regardless of the June 2 statewide election, the district urgently needs 4 extra mills to avoid another serious round of cuts," he added. "These cuts, depending on the outcome of June 2, will range from over $4 million to $6.9 million."

The cut list includes:

- pink-slipping 83 staff (Half of those are likely to be called back.);
- not opening the two new elementary schools to save $900,000;
- eliminating all middle school co-curricular activities to save $100,500;
- eliminating custodial overtime to save $115,000;
- eliminating high school co-curricular activities to save $381,900;
- closing all buildings after school hours, saving $154,200;
- closing the Central Middle School pool, saving $70,000;
- restructuring the Talented and Gifted program, a savings of $58,000;
- eliminating textbook purchases to save $293,000;
- reducing block grants to save $46,300;
- reducing vocational education supplies, saving $33,500;
- reducing office supplies to save $14,800;
- reducing the co-op budget to trim $8,500;
- other cuts to be determined to save $130,000.

No position

Several board members said it's urgent that the district take a position immediately on Proposal A.

Hoben suggested the board wait until Monday, as Phillip Runkel — a former state school superintendent lobbying for Proposal A — "is supposedly trying to help us."

Nonetheless, board members vented strong feelings.

"We should take a position against it, because it's bad for the district," said Trustee Dean Swartzwelter. "We have an obligation to the people in our district to tell them what effect it will have. Our deficit now will be $2 million more than we thought, and it could get worse."

"I can't support A even in my wildest dreams. We need to make a real strong case against it," said Trustee Dave Artley.

Said Thomas of a Proposal A rally being held by Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara: "I wouldn't go to his rally if I was offered $1 million tax free."

Trustee Jack Farrow said, "I think it's a little early to decide.

Composting to return

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

The starting date is still being worked out, but Canton will again have a composting program.

"It takes time for them to gear up and hire people," said Loren Bennett, township clerk.

The composting program is the result of a contract between the Western Townships Utilities Authority and Browning Ferris Industries for the townships of Canton, Plymouth and Northville.

The cost for Canton Township, based on cubic yards composted in 1991-92 during the township's first and only composting program, is $22,144.50. That is based on a $2.25-per-cubic-yard dumping fee.

When you put your grass in bags out on the curb on your usual garbage day, Canton Waste Recycling — which now picks up your garbage — will pick up the compost. The bags of grass clippings will then be taken to a BFI-owned facility in Salem Township.

"Equipment was purchased with a grant for the three communities," said Tom Yack, township supervisor, referring to a grant from the state Department of Natural Resources. "The equipment is jointly owned."

WTUA had an agreement with Compost Systems Inc. in the Michigan Avenue-Washburn area to accept yard waste from the three communities. But CSI closed in May 1992 as nearby residents complained of odors and filed suit against the facility.

Last summer, grass clippings were taken to the landfill with other trash.

Meanwhile, Bennett is in the process of getting bids for a new waste hauling contract, a job Canton Waste Recycling now does.

"We've been extraordinarily satisfied with their services," Bennett said of Canton Waste Recycling, which is expected to bid on the new contract.

Fire in bush extinguished

A homeowner on Rustic Ridge called Canton firefighters and police after she discovered a bush in her yard was on fire while a neighbor was shooting off bottle rockets, May 8.

After the resident saw the neighbor playing with the fireworks, she went inside her house. A short time later she heard someone banging on her window, apparently to alert her to the fire, according to a Canton police report.

The neighbor told police he saw the bush catch on fire while he was playing with the fireworks, according to a Canton police report.

Shooting investigation

A 43-year-old man contacted Canton police after he witnessed a passenger in one car shooting at another car on Haggerty, May 5, according to a Canton police report.

The man told police he was on southbound Haggerty near Canton Commons Apartments when he saw a gray Ford Ranger turn left in front of him. He then saw a dark blue Ford Escort follow the truck.

While the Ranger was headed westbound to Palmer, the Escort stopped. The passenger in the Escort leaned out of the car window and fired a round of ammunition from what was believed to be a .22-caliber or .38-caliber handgun.

Schools plan building dedication

Members of the public are welcome to attend the dedication of the Plymouth-Canton Community School District's E.J. McClendon Educational Center at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, May 16.

The building is at 454 S. Harvey in Plymouth.

The E.J. McClendon Educational Center, formerly known as the Board of Education building, houses the district's administrative offices. The board of education voted to name the building for McClendon, a longtime school board member in Plymouth-Canton who completed his last term in June.

A plaque honoring McClendon, to be displayed in the building's lobby, will be unveiled. Speakers at the half-hour ceremony will include school board president Roland Thomas; Superintendent John Hoben; Eric Carne of Carne and Associates, the architectural firm that designed the building renovations; and Flossie Tonda, former board of education member.

Open house opens minds to mystique of Hinduism

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Narendra — Ned — Nagar and Tom Patel understand that many Americans don't know much about Hinduism. But they hope area residents are willing to learn.

"It is a mystique religion. We don't even know much about it. But everything we do symbolizes something," said Nagar, president of the Hindu Temple on Cherry Hill Road, between Sheldon and Canton Center roads, in Canton.

That lack of understanding Americans have for the ancient religion is one of the reasons the public is invited 8 a.m.-11 a.m. Saturday, for the murti pratistha, or installation of 10 deities (murti), or statues.

There's another reason the public is invited: "Part of our religion says that next to God is an invited guest in your home," Nagar said.

The colorfully adorned marble statues, most standing approximately three feet tall, symbolize gods, each representing a certain force. Until Saturday, the statues are considered works of art from India and may be touched.

When Saturday and the installation arrives, the statues are transformed. Hymns and rituals will accompany the installation. Because the more than 2-year-old Canton temple doesn't have its own priest, a Hindu priest from Troy will lead the ceremony.

"We are purifying these. Through all these rituals we are transforming these from stone to god. Where they will then sit will be sanctified and restricted. We start to treat them as god," Nagar said. "Each statue is unique and has its own story."

While waiting for the hand-carved statues, each made from one piece of stone, the temple's 400-450 families have worshiped replicas, which are framed pictures of the deities. "This is a milestone," said Patel, temple chairman.

It's no surprise that the Hindu Temple is in Canton. More than 1,000 Indian families live in the Plymouth-Canton area. "We are first generation. We are known to be a close-knit family," Nagar said.

In 1988, a few members of the area's Indian community got together and decided they could support a temple of their own. "It had a snowball effect," Nagar said, adding volunteers came forth with a concept and architectural plans.

On Dec. 25, 1990, the families had their first functions in their new home. But compromises had to be made. One of them was that the temple has no official priest or shastri, and they couldn't immediately get the 10 deities.

Because Nagar comes from a family of Brahmans, who usually become priests, he sort of sits in for a priest until member families can afford to have one full time.

While each of the 10 deities is important, families in the Hin-

Stories behind the gods

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Here's a glimpse at the stories behind the statues of 10 deities that will be installed at the Hindu Temple of Canton Saturday morning:

- Ganesh has an elephant head on a human body with four hands. He is a symbol of good luck and God blessing new beginnings. Consequently, he is to be prayed to first.
- Shanker is the god of force. His wife is Parvati. When the river Ganges came from heaven it was so forceful that no one in the world could stop it. "We think God (Shanker) opened up his hair and had enough power to take in the whole Ganges in his head," said Ned Nagar, Hindu Temple president. Shanker has snakes wrapped around him and he wears a loin cloth, symbolizing he is a naturalist. Shanker also lived in the Himalaya mountains.
- The deities Nandi and Shiv Ling are associated with Shanker. Nandi, who is a bull, served as transporation for Shankar. Shiv Ling is another form of Shankar when he is living in the Himalayas.
- Rama represents the perfection of humans in the form of God. "We believe this is the one person who didn't do anything wrong. Rama is with his wife, Sita, his brother Laxman, and Hanuman, who has a monkey's face and who served Rama.

'We believe this (Rama) is the one person who didn't do anything wrong. Rama is with his wife, Sita, his brother Laxman, and Hanuman, who has a monkey's face and who served Rama.'

Ned Nagar
Hindu Temple president

The story of Rama is contained in one of many holy books and it is a story of how the ideal life can be lead, Nagar said.

At the command of Rama's father, Rama and his wife had to leave the kingly life behind and live in the forest for 14 years. To be fair, his brother Luxman joined him. While there Rama met Hanuman, who represents the ultimate in devotion.

- The story of Krishna and his spiritual companion Radha is narrated in the holy book, Mahabharat. The Hindu Temple in Canton worships these most because they are from the western part of India, where most of the families in the congregation also are from.

Going On-Line
Greg Day of the computer services department says On-Line was designed to be "an extension of the newspaper."

O&E's computer network delivers the news, services

Folks looking for a quick access to local news plus information to help plan everything from their investment portfolio to tomorrow's dinner can now turn to "On-Line," The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers' new information computer network.

O&E On-Line is a potpourri of information kept inside the belly of a computer at the O&E's main office in Livonia. Besides the 12 O&E editions, the bulletin board service also includes two magazines, Associated Press news stories, stock market listings, games, computer programs and more.

You can plug into all this if you have an IBM-type computer and a modem that hooks your computer to the telephone lines. Service for Apple computer users is coming soon.

"The public is relying more and more on computers to gather their information," said Steve Barnaby, O&E managing editor. "We want to help them do just that. We'll offer as many services as possible. Not only can we communicate with the readers, they can communicate directly with us and with each other."

The software to run On-Line is available through the mail for $5, or free if picked up at one of several locations. These are: Libraries in Canton, Farmington and Livonia, plus the Soft-House Computer Center in Garden City and PC Outlet in Westland. The software is also available at the O&E's Birmingham office.

If purchasing the service by mail, send $5 to On-Line!, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, Mich. 48150.

"We designed this system to be an extension of the newspaper," said Greg Day of the O&E computer services department. "We're one of the first newspaper companies to attempt this kind of thing." Other newspapers with "electronic delivery" include the San Jose (Calif.) Mercury-News and the Chicago Tribune.

Eventually, a data base of old stories from all of the Observer & Eccentric newspapers will be built. On-Line users will eventually be able to scan the system for articles that appeared in past editions of a particular paper.

Bulletin Board services are a rapidly evolving technology which, in the near future, will allow readers to access their local newspaper from hand-held computers, said Day.

Although in its infancy, this type of communication already is having an impact on local readership.

Garden City resident Jerry Scott, a Realtor, said he likes the stock market listings and the O&E news stories in On-Line. "It seems like every time I go into it they've updated it and added new things," he said. "For a free service it has an awful lot to offer."

But perhaps the best part of On-Line is that you can meet new people, send electronic mail, have group discussions and write opinion pieces on any subject you chose, all without revealing who you really are.

A recent category, for example, is "What should we do about Canada geese in Livonia?" This one generated several comments including one from "Bubba" saying that there should be a hunting season for geese so our children can learn how to use shotguns instead of pistols.

Livonia resident Ted Hillebrand called On-Line "the best thing since sliced bread."

"I'm very happy with it, extremely happy. You get opinions from everybody," he said.

On-Line users can also exchange messages in pairs or with a whole group. You can even write a document on your word-processing program of up to 800 pages and transmit it through On-Line to your new friends.

Southfield inhabitant Andrew Garlick said On-Line is more or less the future of newspapers. "You're not in the newspaper business," he said. "You're in the information business. I support companies that are forward-looking like that."

Kids enjoy a capital time

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

Rob Johnson, an eighth grader at Central Middle School, was chosen to lay a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier during his class's recent trip to Washington, D.C.

"I will remember it the rest of my life," Rob said of his experience. "It will be something to tell my kids and grandkids about."

Just one of every 25 schools that visits Washington is chosen for the honor. Johnson, who lives in Canton, was one of four Central students selected to lay a wreath of gold mums on the above-ground tomb of the World War II Unknown Soldier. Buried nearby are unknown soldiers from World War I and the Korean and Vietnam wars.

Eighth grader Julie Glaza said visiting the tomb was the highlight of the trip for her, too. "It made me feel special. Not all schools get to do it," said the Canton resident. "It was sort of like an honor. I felt proud to be American. It was solemn. Some people were crying."

The four-day trip was packed with activity. Days began at 6:30 a.m. Students toured the Washington Monument, Ford's Theater, the National Archives, FBI Headquarters and Mt. Vernon. The 96 students and their 15 chaperones took an illuminated tour of the Vietnam Memorial, Einstein Memorial, Kennedy Center, Lincoln Memorial, Iwo Jima Memorial, and Jefferson Memorial.

They visited the White House, Smithsonian museums, the Capitol, the Supreme Court, the National Zoo, Embassy Row, the National Aquarium and Gettysburg.

For Keith Finney of Canton, the highlight was visiting Gettysburg. "It was sort of weird, knowing a famous president stood there," said Keith, whose mother, Pat Finney, helped out with fund-raising and went to D.C. as a chaperone.

"I will remember the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum," added Keith, who said he was impressed with all the planes and their realism.

Students sold candy, pop and popcorn at school events to raise money for the bus trip, which cost $389 per person.

For Jessica Ash of Plymouth, the highlight was Gettysburg, too.

"It was fun. There was a weird feeling in the air. You could tell something really major happened there."

Students visited "Devil's Den," an outcropping of rocks over a cave that collapsed and killed dozens of Confederate soldiers at Gettysburg.

Central Principal Pat Moore said 647 soldiers from Wayne County marched from Michigan to Pennsylvania to fight in that battle. "They walked all that way, and 482 of them died the first day. Michigan lost the third or fourth most men of any state in that battle."

Fred Chrissey, a teacher who accompanied students along with Central staff Dolores Krikorian, Margo Panko and Dorothy Crews, said he enjoyed the dinner theater at the Dobbin House, a turn of the century inn where waiters and waitresses dress in colonial garb.

Moore said she was impressed with how well students behaved, even when they found themselves in the midst of the gay-rights march on the Mall.

At the wreath-laying ceremony, "I was impressed that given their age, they could grasp the sacrifice others made so that they could be free. They were respectful of all they saw."

The gay march was an eye-opener, Moore added. "Students saw people of the same sex holding hands or kissing; and people who were holding signs about their cause or cross-dressed. It was a great way to learn tolerance — by total immersion."

that as larger libraries they had no more voting power than smaller districts.

"The Library of Michigan agreed we had a lot of justified complaints," Tabor said. "We will be watching closely to see if WOLF changes."

A task force has been established with three Metro Net and three WOLF representatives and Courtright. "We have begun the process of looking at the current cooperative plan," he said. "Our hope is that during the year we can find ways of resolving our problems."

Also under the compromise, WOLF will get cooperative state aid on behalf of the seven districts. Ninety percent of what is called swing aid will go to the seven districts for their technology project. WOLF will keep the other 10 percent. Local state aid will continue to go to the local libraries, Courtright said.

Tabor is optimistic about the compromise. "I'm encouraged by speaking with some of the members. I think they are willing to change."

Hindu

du Temple worship one family of the deities the most because, like the Canton area families, the deities are also from the same western area of India.

"It has a lot to do with where you come from in India," Nagar said.

Patel and Nagar hope Canton residents join them for the special installation. They and other Indian families want Americans to know who they are and what their religion is about. "There are a lot of stereotypes," Nagar added.

For example, it is true Hindus do not eat meat. There's nothing mysterious about it. The reason is simple. "Non-killing, non-violence is our supreme religion," Patel said.

If Hindus eat meat, which means an animal must be killed, "the day will come when you won't hesitate killing a person," he added.

It's also true that Hindus prefer not to shake a person's hand. Nothing personal. It's not their way. Instead, Hindus greet people by folding their hands in front of them solemnly and bowing slightly. "You don't do it like Arsenio Hall does it," Nagar said.

The folding of the hands is a sign of humbleness. "It means you are forgetting all your ego," Patel said.

Proposal A

Your questions may be answered here

Here are answers to some questions about Proposal A on the Wednesday, June 2, ballot. Please call your question to Tim Richard at 953-2047, mailbox 1881. Be as brief as possible.

Q. I'm a senior citizen paying high property taxes, so I get a rebate on my state income tax. If Proposal A is passed June 2, my property taxes will be cut. But what about my rebate?

A. Your rebate would be cut, too. You may wind up with no net property tax cut at all. You'll have to check your own tax returns.

The rebate, sometimes called the "circuit breaker," is an income tax refund to people whose property taxes are more than 3.5 percent of household income. For example, if 3.5 percent of your income is $2,000 and your total property taxes are $2,500, the "excess" is $500.

Senior citizens get a refund of 100 percent of the excess, or $500. Others get a 60 percent refund, or $300.

Obviously if your property taxes are cut by Proposal A, your refund will be, too.

Q. Doesn't that mean many of us won't get the full property tax cut you're talking about? Is that fair?

A. We've talked it over with Gov. John Engler and state Treasurer Doug Roberts. Their position is that senior citizens and low-income people already are getting some relief through the rebate. Now it's time to give across-the-board relief.

Q. What happens if Proposal A is rejected? Is it business as usual?

A. No, says Engler. He is targeting out-of-formula districts — those that get no general state aid but do get categorical aid. He and a majority of legislators intend to cut as much of their categorical aid as possible.

That alternative "will be worse because it's not likely we can continue to subsidize the districts that are spending the most money in the state," Engler tells us.

Engler cites an example: Bridgman, with a nuclear power plant and lots of money. Its tax rate is only eight mills, but that raises a whopping $6,700 per student, yet the state still gives Bridgman $400,000 a year.

Q. Proposal A's supporters say every school district will get a 3 percent revenue boost if A is passed. Why are some districts dragging their feet about supporting it?

A. Because their costs will go up, too. They'll have to pay more of their retirement costs and their categoricals' costs.

Ask your local superintendent for details.

Q. It looks as if suburban districts close to Detroit are going to get little property tax relief. The big cuts will go to Detroit, Pontiac, Flint and rural school districts. What will result?

A. Engler says it will benefit older cities by giving them lower tax rates and helping them recruit industry.

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young says that won't help enough. Detroit's combined property tax rate tops 80 mills. Even with a 19-mill cut, Detroit still is heavily taxed.

Some believe Proposal A will encourage "urban sprawl" into undeveloped rural suburbs. The Southeast Michigan Council of Governments has deplored urban sprawl but hasn't studied the impact of Proposal A on sprawl.

Engler says Proposal A will actually relieve sprawl by taking pressure off owners of rural land to sell to developers. He says this is so because of the "cap" on assessment increases.

The counter-argument is that low rural tax rates will lure developers to build in greenfields, woods, lake shore and wetlands, and they'll simply persuade owners to sell. Opponents see Proposal A as a big inducement to developers to abandon older areas.

Engler to address county GOP

Gov. John Engler will be the featured speaker at a reception and dinner Tuesday, June 8, honoring 30 political volunteers from Wayne County's five congressional districts.

The 6 p.m. reception and 7 p.m. dinner hosted by the Wayne County Republican Committee will be in the Fairlane Club, 5000 Fairlane Woods Drive (off Hubbard Drive between Southfield and Evergreen), Dearborn.

Tickets are $30 per person and available from co-chairs Cheryl Preston or Donzell Green at 884-9118 or Jerry Wall at 374-0312.

Names of the 30 outstanding volunteers, (six each from the 11th, 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th districts), will be elected later this month.

"It is clear to us that the 1994 gubernatorial election will be decided in Wayne County. We want to take advantage of the regeneration of GOP enthusiasm," said Edward Haroutunian, Detroit attorney and committee leader.

Group puts teeth into meetings

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

There are all kinds of new materials and procedures in dentistry these days — just ask a group of Plymouth dentists.

They're part of a study group formed nearly three years ago by Plymouth prosthodontist Laurence Seluk to keep up on advances in dentistry.

"There have been a lot of changes in technology, more in the last 15 years than in the last 100 years," Seluk said.

The group of 30-40 meets each month at a Northville restaurant for dinner and a talk from a visiting speaker or one of the members.

Topics have included electrical anesthesia, new techniques in cosmetic dentistry, implants and more.

"All of the things we use in dentistry are materials primarily, not drugs," Seluk said.

Seluk is the president elect of the Michigan Society of Prosthodontists.

There are so many new materials, it's hard for many dentists to keep up, Seluk said, explaining one benefit of the study group.

And once new materials are introduced, it takes time for them to be accepted, "You have to teach the teachers," Seluk said.

One new material is a glass ionomer. This finely ground material, when spread around a filling, releases fluoride, strengthening the tooth.

Being a prosthodontist, Seluk is concerned with crowns and aesthetic procedures. It was while studying biology in college that he first got interested in dentistry.

"I worked with the Kerr Company; they made dental supplies. I noticed that people there were really concerned with what they did; it was like reverence," he said.

After graduating from the University of Michigan, he taught and worked part-time as a dentist in Ann Arbor, before starting a Plymouth practice in the late '70s.

Seluk sends a newsletter to patients quarterly, in which he and associate dentists talk about new procedures or answer questions.

In a recent issue, Seluk discussed the four cosmetic options available to patients: bleaching, bonding, veneers and enamel shaping.

While some have questions as to the safety of in-office bleaching, "It is considered by the American Dental Association to be safe and effective," Seluk wrote.

"Orthodontic treatment can also be an option, depending on the problem," he said.

High schoolers go commercial on the radio

■ 'I wanted to work with the students at 88.1-FM because I feel they're creative and don't get the recognition they deserve.'

Jack Trabue
Word of Mouth Foods

Students at Plymouth Salem and Canton high schools have joined with Word of Mouth Foods of Plymouth to create a commercial for its pasta and barbecue sauces.

Word of Mouth Foods specializes in gourmet sauces and seasonings. The idea to use students was the brainchild of Jack and Kristin Trabue, owners of Word of Mouth Foods. They contacted WSDP radio, the student-run station at Plymouth Salem High School, to find students for the project.

"I wanted to work with the students at 88.1-FM because I feel they're creative and don't get the recognition they deserve," said Jack Trabue, owner of Word of Mouth Foods. "I also feel this is my chance to give back to the community that has been there for our business." Both Jack and Kristin are former Plymouth Salem students.

"We enjoy working with Jack and Kristin," said Bill Keith, station manager at WSDP. "They brought the sauces to the students and have encouraged them to pull out all the stops."

If Word of Mouth Foods selects one of the students' productions it will air on WXYT, 1270-AM, during the Rush Limbaugh show.

"The students are excited to have the extra exposure," said Keith. "I'm looking forward to hearing them on WXYT."

WSDP is owned and operated by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. The station has been serving the Plymouth and Canton area since signing on February 14, 1972.

Crash injures man

A 41-year-old Plymouth man was in critical condition Wednesday after the motorcycle he was driving was pinned under a van on M-14 Saturday night.

The motorcycle driver was in the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Apparently the motorcycle driver lost control while driving on the ramp of northbound I-275 toward westbound M-14 when it crossed into the path of a full-size van being driven by a Jackson man driving west on M-14 at 8:20 p.m.

State police, Plymouth Township police and firefighters, as well as Huron Valley ambulances and the University of Michigan helicopter units, worked to free the motorcycle driver, who was pinned under the van.

No one else was injured.

The accident is under investigation.

Alliance of cops strives to capture area auto thieves

By LeAnne Rogers
Staff Writer

If there is any doubt that auto theft is big business, look at the annual statistics compiled by the Western Wayne Auto Theft Elimination Effort.

In 1992, the regional team, headed by the Michigan State Police, recovered stolen vehicles and parts worth just over $2.3 million.

"Most thefts are related to easily disposable items. Jimmys and Blazers are very popular. The tires, radio and rear hatch are easily disposable," said state police Lt. Sandra Miller, who heads WWATEE. "The manufacturers don't mark those items. You could fence all those for $600 to $1,200."

Officers assigned to WWATEE investigate vehicle-related crimes including theft rings, chop shops, retagging operations and insurance fraud. The auto theft investigations aren't limited to cars or light trucks but includes commercial trucks, semi-tractors and trailers, heavy construction equipment and motorcycles.

"We have a surveillance team that targets areas. In Northville Township we were having cars taken at Meijer," said Miller. "They'll sit on an area. They followed a group out of there that was obviously shopping (for vehicles to steal). They made an arrest in Livonia and in Detroit a couple times."

Complementing the surveillance team is an investigative crew of officers which works on more complicated investigations such as re-tagged vehicles, those with vehicle identification numbers that have been altered and chop shops.

"It's a two-pronged approach. It's been very successful," said Miller. "We can see how much impact there had been because they have changed their method of operation. When I first started in auto theft, you could find a chop shop anywhere. You used to walk in and find stripped auto parts around."

These days, she said, most chop shops work on one car at a time and don't keep the vehicle or parts around long.

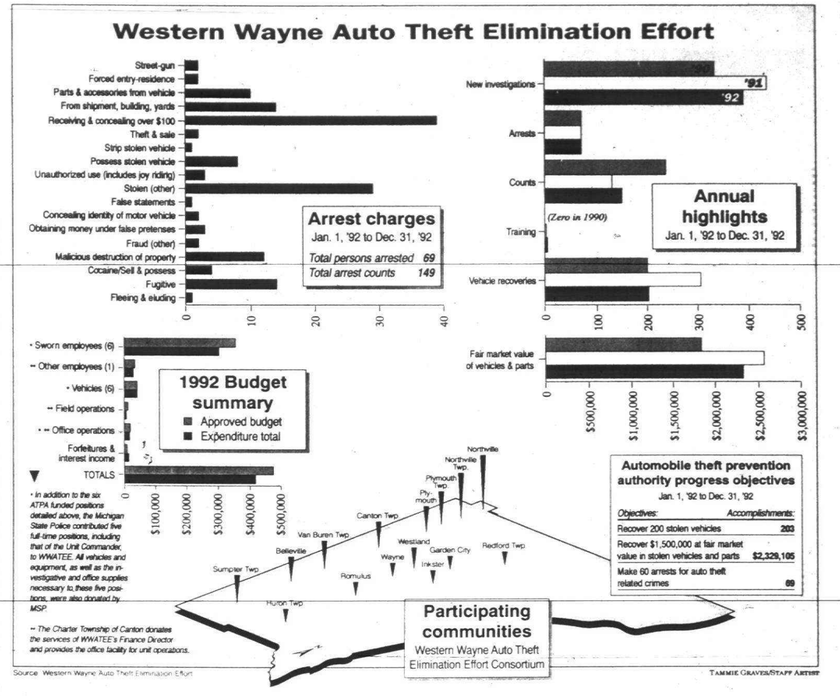
WWATEE receives funding to reimburse local departments providing officers through the Automobile Theft Prevention Authority, which is financed by a $1 fee on every insured private passenger vehicle in the state.

Enforcement has been helped, according to Miller, by the state's part marking law which requires major components to be marked with mylar stickers. Locating a stolen marked part in a vehicle is prima facie evidence, she said, which allows the person to be charged and their vehicle seized.

"Auto thieves pretty much stick to auto theft. With street thieves, their main activity is drugs or breaking and entering," said Miller. "We target the commerce minded ones who stick to autos and know which salvage yards to use."

The majority of fencing operations pass stolen parts on to legitimate dealers, she said. To keep the honest automotive business clean, Miller said WWATEE officers work with the state Bureau of Automotive Regulation on random inspection.

"We can go into a business on an enforcement action but most are administrative search warrants," she said. "Occasionally we find stolen parts but good thing it's rare."



WWATEE is working closer with the Western Wayne Narcotics Enforcement Team, which shares office space with the auto theft unit, since Miller took over command of NET a year ago.

Head of WWATEE since it formation in 1987, Miller said the dual role was a result of budget reductions and an effort for more efficiency.

"There was not a lot of sharing of information. Command felt that it would be better as one operation," she said. "There have been some benefits for the way we serve the public. The narcotics people know to call auto theft if they go in a place and see auto parts and vice versa."

In 1992, WWATEE had six grant funded positions filled by local officers and five Michigan State police positions. This year for the first time, the Wayne County Sheriff's Department is assigning an officer to the unit.

"We're breaking ground. The sheriff's department has never been involved with the state police on a task force before other than at the airport," said Miller.

School celebrates anniversary with picnic

New Morning School welcomes the community to an anniversary celebration from 1-5 p.m. Sunday, May 16. The non-profit school is located at 14501 Haggerty in Plymouth.

The event will feature a potluck picnic for families and children, face painting, pony rides and art activities. New Morning School strives to provide an environment in which children plan, set goals and achieve them, and solve problems.

A cooperative attended by students between 2 and 14 years of age, New Morning School is nonsectarian, ungraded and state-certified.

Catholic schools struggle with enrollment loss

BY DIANE GALE
SPECIAL WRITER

Like the public schools, enrollment is dropping in most Catholic schools in the Detroit Archdiocese.

In some schools, the numbers have remained steady.

"In higher growth areas there's bigger demand in schools and space and they're full," according to Ned McGrath, archdiocese director of communications.

"In some city parishes where the population in the neighborhoods have gone down, the school enrollments go down," he said.

The archdiocese, which includes Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Lapeer and St. Clair counties, runs 35 high schools and 143 elementary schools, with more than a third in Detroit.

Only 40 percent of the students in Detroit Catholic schools are Catholic. In the suburbs, however, 60 percent are Catholic.

In past years, most Catholic school students were from the neighborhood parish, McGrath said. "That's changed. Students may not be a member of the parish and they may not be Catholic. Those are trends that have developed over the past 20 years or so."

Another change is that lay teachers far outnumber nuns in the classrooms.

St. Dunstan School in Garden City has only three nuns, according to principal Sister Mariella, a Felician nun who began her vocation when she was in the eighth grade.

"The way the trend seems to be going, we'll be lucky to have one person (nun) at each school," she said.

"Young people have so much more freedom and invitations elsewhere, it might be more difficult for them to back off and become a nun," the principal added, but the choice isn't hard for women who have a calling from God.

Today there are 328 Felician nuns in the Livonia-based religious order, which is substantially lower than the 800 nuns of only 10 years ago.

The order likely will continue to dwindle since only six women are in preparation to become nuns in the Livonia congregation.

On the other side of the city, St. Raphael School has only one nun, Sister Patricia Donnelly, who serves as religious education coordinator and assistant principal.

Students are also exposed to another religious figure, St. Raphael pastor the Rev. Edward Prus, who has a strong influence in the school, according to Judith McBride, St. Raphael principal.

McBride links the increasing costs to operate Catholic schools to the decline in nuns who teach. The personnel costs to pay stipends to nuns, who took vows of poverty, are far lower than the costs to pay lay teachers.

Expenses rose even though lay teachers in Catholic schools usually earn from 50 to 75 percent "what these same people would earn in public schools," McBride said. Sister Mariella said lay teachers often choose Catholic schools, because it's "not only a job, but a dedication."

However, increased operating costs helped inflate tuition from $15 annually a generation ago, McBride said.

The average tuition for elementary schools in the Detroit Archdiocese is $1,250 annually, with the figure rising to $2,700 for Catholic high schools. Family discounts are available.

The archdiocese is reacting to the decline in enrollment with a plan by Archbishop Adam Maida encouraging neighboring parishes to identify their needs, assess resources, and share programs and facilities, like buildings, McGrath said.

Also, in bigger communities where parishes are newer, rather than open-new Catholic schools, parishes offer weekly after-school religious education for Catholic students attending public schools.

New college students need help in math, writing, reading

BY MARY RODRIQUE
STAFF WRITER

As many as half of all students entering two year colleges in the metro area are not prepared to handle college level course work, an informal survey reveals.

Approximately 50 percent of new students at Schoolcraft, Henry Ford, Wayne County and Oakland community colleges require remedial courses in math, writing skills and/or reading before they're ready to move on.

"High schools are re-evaluating their programs. This is something they are very concerned about," said Saundra Florek, a spokeswoman for Schoolcraft Community College in Livonia.

Florek estimates 45 percent of incoming Schoolcraft students need remedial help in at least one area.

"I think four year colleges are finding this is true for them, too," she said. "I don't think we're taking such a lower calibre student."

Things have become so critical that high schools are looking at offering two types of diplomas now — one certified for those who meet academic requirements and a basic diploma for attendance, she said. High school exit tests and educational guarantees are becoming more commonplace.

"Some students end up doing fantastic once they've got the basics down," she said. "What happens in high school is that without strong outside influence, many students choose easy options. Then they're not prepared (for college)."

One four credit remedial class at Schoolcraft can cost $160 ($40 per credit hour) for subject matter commonly covered in high school, like algebra or writing composition.

Like other metro area community colleges, Schoolcraft requires new students with less than 30 college credits to take the standardized ASSET test which evaluates basic academic skills.

"Fifty to 60 percent of our students need remedial help in reading, math or writing skills," said Terry Foley, a spokesman for Henry Ford Community College in Dearborn.

■ 'What happens in high school is that without strong outside influence, many students choose easy options. Then they're not prepared (for college).'
Saundra Florek, Schoolcraft College

"They're just not as well prepared as in past years. I think students today don't read as much as they used to or should," Foley said.

Henry Ford students have access to a learning lab to strengthen math, reading and writing skills.

At Oakland Community College, Orchard Ridge campus, winter term tallies show 48 percent of incoming students scored at the remedial level in writing skills, 45 percent in reading, and in math, at least half of all tested scored below the college entry level. Of four math areas tested, students performed worst in elementary algebra — with 72 percent at the remedial level.

"Developmental classes are not necessarily a sign that someone is educationally deficient," said George Cartsonis, a spokesman for OCC, where 29,000 students are currently enrolled.

"Very often people have been out of school for 20 years. They've long since forgotten algebra.

"Also, basic typing (keyboarding) is a pre-requisite for all computer classes. And many don't have typing skills."

Each college has its own breakdown of basic academic courses — from math focusing on fractions, decimals and percentages to refresher courses on high school algebra and geometry.

Students who don't do well in the reading component of the test at Schoolcraft take reading power, an individualized tutorial approach to improving reading skills. Schoolcraft also has a class in critical thinking skills.

Adds Schoolcraft's Florek: "Some people just don't test well. We don't place students in remedial courses just on the basis of the test. We look at high school records, too. If a student did poorly in math because he's been away from it for awhile, we take that into account."

John Bolden, director of academic support services at Wayne County Community College, says the average age of WCCC's students — 29 — plays a big part in the fact that half to 60 percent of all students there need remedial help.

"They've been out of school for awhile and need to brush up on the fundamentals. Most students need assistance in one area," Bolden said.

Bolden says the college also plans to start sharing its assessment data with Detroit public schools.

Michigan AFSCME opposes property, sales tax plan

AFSCME, the nation's largest public sector union, has announced its opposition to Proposal A, the property and sales tax measure scheduled for a special referendum on Wednesday, June 2.

"Proposal A would shift education funding from one unfair tax to another unfair tax. Both the property tax and the sales tax place a heavier burden on low- and middle-income families than on the wealthy," said AFSCME Michigan area director Leamon Hood, Michigan Council 25 president Flora Walker, and Michigan State Employees Association/ AFSCME Local 5 president John Denniston in a joint statement.

The union leaders said that under Proposal A, low- and middle-income Michigan families will lose the Homestead Tax Credit now available to them, resulting in higher state and federal income taxes, in addition to the 50 percent increase in the sales tax. Low- and middle-income families can expect little or no net tax savings under Proposal A, according to the union.

"However, the wealthy will enjoy significant tax benefits under Proposal A. The wealthy have never qualified for the Homestead Tax Credit anyway, and will spend proportionately less of their income on the higher sales tax.

"Proposal A will place a disproportionately heavy burden on the elderly and on renters. In many cases, the elderly now qualify for a bigger Homestead Tax Credit, which will be lost or greatly reduced. Renters do not qualify for the Homestead Tax Credit. Both groups will, however, be subject to the 50 percent increase in the sales and use tax," the union leaders said.

"Because Proposal A lumps together current categorical aid, it creates the risk that children with special needs may be neglected in the future. In addition, Proposal A provides no consideration for urban districts and those in depressed industrial areas, where income, population and tax bases are currently declining.

"School districts will face a loss of local tax autonomy as control is surrendered to the state, and schools must compete with other local units of government for funds. Fees for many public services will rise; other public services will be reduced or eliminated."

The union leaders urged Michigan voters to reject Proposal A because "Michigan needs tax reform — but Proposal A is only a tax shift, not tax reform."

AFSCME represents more than 65,000 public workers in Michigan.

Local PDs like deputy drive plan

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Area police departments can spend more time crime busting and less time chauffeuring prisoners around now that the Wayne County Sheriff's Department has taken over the latter duty.

A new program that started March 22 makes sheriff's deputies available to drive prisoners to and from court appearances. Until now that duty was performed by the city and township police departments that made the arrests.

"So far it's worked out very well for us," Westland patrolman Carl Glaser said. "It's saving our people a lot of time and saving a lot of miles on our cars. It keeps our cars closer to the city and keeps more cars available in the city."

The way it worked before was that two police officers had to drive to the county jail in the morning, pick up prisoners and deliver them to court. Another trip was usually necessary in the afternoon to return the prisoners to the jail.

In Westland this process was necessary about three times a week, Glaser said, tying up two officers for 45-60 minutes every trip. Now the three officers assigned to prisoner transport can spend more time in Westland tracking down ordinance violators.

In Redford Township, police officers used to transport prisoners every Tuesday at the expense of the road patrol, Inspector William Russell said.

Since the sheriff's department has taken over that job, Russell said, "it allows the (Redford officers) to do their jobs instead of driving downtown."

The program was initiated by Lt. Wayne Wolf of the sheriff's department, according to Sheriff Robert Ficano. It started small, with just five police departments, but is expected to include every department in Wayne County by June 14.

Plymouth Township, Canton Township and Plymouth are expected to come on line May 17. Livonia will be added June 1.

Ficano said that even the newly formed Metro Airport Police Department will get the service, although that department doesn't appear on the start-up list Ficano provided. Ficano opposed the April formation of the airport police, which is comprised of 95 former sheriff's department officers.

Statistics for April show that the sheriff's deputies drove 7,860 miles that month in the course of transporting prisoners. Ficano said no overtime hours are needed to run the program, and no other duties and responsibilities have been cut.

The only negative comments on the program come from Bob Sheldon, president of Local 3317 representing the sheriff's department lieutenants and sergeants. Sheldon believes Ficano is cutting services in other areas to run the new program.

"He's doing this simply as Bob Ficano the politician," Sheldon said.

Madonna to host confab on older learner

Acknowledging that more and more older adults are attending education classes and benefitting from alternative types of learning experiences, Madonna University, in conjunction with the Michigan Department of Education and the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, will hold a one day older learner conference on Friday, May 21.

Titled "Always Able: A Dynamic Conference Designed to Enable," the day is co-sponsored by the Southeast Michigan Council for Older Adult Learning, and is designed to provide staff development, program ideas, promotional techniques and encouragement to meet the needs of older adult learners for continuing education, employment, community service, volunteerism, wellness and enrichment.

Keynote speakers will be Dr. Jack Minzey, retired director of the center for continuing education at Eastern Michigan University, "Education for all: A necessity — a right"; and Louise Churches, a noted speaker and enthusiastic senior advocate for life-long learning, "The choice: growing old or old and growing."

The popularity of the conference last year prompted a repeat this year, says Dr. Anita Herman, professor of gerontology at Madonna University.

The seminar will be held from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on the Madonna campus. Preregistration before May 14 for the event, which includes lunch, is $10 for retirees and $15 for others.

Participants may also register the day of the conference for $15, not including lunch.

Topics include: ethnic diversity and older learners; fitness is ageless; computers and older learners; "I forgot where I put my memory"; educational needs of senior immigrants; the three C's of volunteerism; intergenerational learning; and a team approach.

For more information, call Dr. Anita Herman at 591-5089. Madonna is located at I-96 and Levan in Livonia.

Small business group backs Proposal A

The largest small-business organization in Michigan has thrown its support behind Proposal A for property tax relief and school finance reform.

The National Federation of Independent Businesses/Michigan, which represents more than 24,000 members statewide, calls Proposal A "fair, balanced and good for business," according to Will Mudge, NFIB/Michigan's acting director.

Proposal A is essentially a 2 percent sales tax increase to finance property tax reductions and school finance reform. Specific benefits of the proposal include a $1.9 billion net reduction in property taxes, accomplished by reducing school operating millages for most districts and placing a cap on property tax assessments of 5 percent on the inflation rate, whichever is less.

The plan also would establish a more equitable method of providing state aid to schools. The proposal goes before the voters in a statewide special election June 2.

"Unlike other options, Proposal A offers relief for all classes of property equally, including business property," said Mudge. "Small-business owners have been telling us for a long time that business need property tax relief just as much as homeowners."

NFIB/Michigan contends that lower taxes on business will have positive effect on economic growth and job creation. In several recent surveys of NFIB/Michigan members, 64 percent of small-business owners came out in support of the sales tax increase in exchange for significant property tax relief.

While many small-business owners are distrustful of the government's handling of money, Mudge said Proposal A should ensure that sales tax revenues will go to fund education and reduce the state's reliance on property tax revenue.

"It's time the state moved award from a 19th Century method of taxation and toward a more broad-based approach," Mudge said. "We believe Proposal A accomplishes that goal."

Hines closed to traffic Saturday

Bicycle riders, runners and walkers will rule the Middle Rouge Parkway 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. every Saturday now through Oct. 2, when the county parks and recreation department closes six miles of Hines Drive to motorized transportation devices.

Hines Drive will be closed from the Warrendale Picnic Area (west of Outer Drive) to the Nankin Mills Station at Ann Arbor Trail. Parking is available at Warrendale, Merriman Hollow and Nankin Mills. For additional data, call 261-1990.

Insurance reform bill stalls again

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Michigan drivers are no closer to getting lower auto insurance premiums and reduced benefits as the state Senate stalled again on a reform bill.

Senators passed the bill 50 days ago but failed to muster the two-thirds supermajority necessary to give House Bill 4156 immediate effect. So the bill can't become law until about April 1994.

"This is Day 48 that the auto insurance bill has been held hostage," Sen. Paul Wartner, R-Portage, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, said Tuesday.

"It's costing consumers $1.7 million a day by this body's failing to give immediate effect to an auto insurance reform bill we passed 48 days ago."

Wartner said "special interests" — Michigan Trial Lawyers Association and the Michigan Citizens Lobby — benefit because the delay allowed them to seek a referendum to derail the bill.

Wartner made no attempt to force a vote. Instead, he asked the full Senate for "permission to make a comment."

So did many others.

Sen. John Kelly, D-Grosse Pointe, said the Senate's inaction isn't hostage taking but "closer to imprisonment of a heinous criminal."

Kelly added, "This would take away from those hurt in auto accidents through no fault of their own and condemn them for life."

The bill would cut insurance premiums 15 percent and cap so-called "catastrophic claims" at $1 million; motorists could spend more to buy up to $5 million. The current law mandates unlimited coverage.The reform bill also mandates many cost-cutting measures.

Generally, Republicans and business backed the bill while Democrats and labor opposed it. But sometimes the battle lines are smudged.

The bill's sponsor was Democrat Michael Griffin of Jackson. One of its most vocal opponents was maverick Republican Sen. Fred Dillingham of Fowlerville.

"I've been talking with a lot of groups about Proposal A (school tax reform)," said Dillingham. "Invariably there will be a question from the audience: 'Why does the Legislature expect us to support A when they are forcing down our throats the Son of D (the 1992 ballot proposal) that we defeated overwhelmingly?'

"The heavy hands of the insurance industry are on this. You may fool some people in here, but you can't fool many people out there," said Dillingham, who voted against the bill.

Senate majority leader Dick Posthumus, R-Alto, deplored the lack of an immediate effect vote. "The majority prevailed.

Rotary raffle

The Canton Rotary Club will host its annual fund-raising raffle at 6:30 p.m., Monday, May 17, at the Roman Forum restaurant on Ford Road.

Raffle tickets are now on sale for $150 each. Only 120 tickets will be sold. The top prize includes a trip for two to Hawaii and $3,000 spending money. Prizes also include weekend trips.

The club is looking for area individuals and businesses to donate prizes and gifts for the raffle, which is the rotary's biggest fund-raiser.

The club uses proceeds from fund-raisers for community projects.

For more information, call club president Sam Marshall at 981-6291 or 347-3290.

Resident recognized

Kathi Ransier of Canton, a branch supervisor with the Michigan Department of State, was honored for a suggestion to improve state government.

Ransier received $840 for her idea to discontinue the practice of typing restrictions on the back of temporary operators permits. The time-saving procedure was adopted by the department of state.

Thirteen state employees were recognized for their suggestions. The employees and their suggestions saved the state $286,176. Awards for the suggestions cost $16,965.

Make an appointment

State Rep. Deborah Whyman of Canton is holding office hours in the district at various restaurants. In consideration of the restaurant owner and other patrons, Whyman is asking constituents who wish to meet with her to call and make an appointment at (517)373-2575.

Office hours are 8-10 a.m., Mondays. On the first Monday of the month, Whyman meets at Platos in Canton; the second and fourth Mondays at Golden Boy and Reflections in Belleville; and the third Monday is flexible.

Boss helps sniff out bad guys

■ Canton Township police have a new recruit, Boss. Yep, that's his full name. He's a dog. The Dutch shepherd is on duty with his trainer and will be used for searches.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Don't be surprised the next time you get stopped for a traffic violation and a dog jumps out of the patrol car with a Canton police officer.

"If someone is doing something wrong, they don't want to see the dog," said officer Todd Koch, master and trainer of Boss, Canton Public Safety Department's trained police dog.

"Regular people though, they get a kick out of it," said Koch, who runs Boss around the car he has stopped.

But 3-year-old Boss, a Dutch shepherd, is not a pet. He's a working police dog. He arrived in Canton more than five weeks ago. And he took a roundabout route to getting here.

Boss was born and raised in the Netherlands where he had already been trained as a police dog. In fact, Boss is a titled dog. And he only understands Dutch. From the Netherlands, Boss was sent to Louisiana, where his training continued. Once Canton officials gave the OK to the canine program, Koch joined Boss in Louisiana for a three-week training session.

"It was basically training me and the dog together," said Koch, who had to learn the Dutch commands on which Boss was trained.

Boss, who lives with Koch and his wife, joins officers on his shift's roll call. His job is to assist Koch, in particular, and other officers as well, in traffic stops, narcotics searches, building searches and tracking. Boss probably will work with the D.A.R.E. drug education program in the schools, as well.

"There's a need for a dog because he's so time efficient in searching," Koch said. "He can search a whole building in 5-10 minutes while it would take an officer one hour. He can do a better job."

Teamwork: Canton police officer Todd Koch trained in Louisiana for three weeks with Boss, the department's new police dog. Boss, a Dutch shepherd, is from the Netherlands.

Koch has no doubts about this pilot program, one he suggested, based on his work with dogs in the U.S. Air Force. "We're looking at putting another dog on."

Boss definitely has a nose for narcotics. Recently when a man was found dead in his home and drugs of some sort were suspected, Boss was brought in to search the place.

"It's like Pavlov's dog. It's scent association," Koch said. "The dog scents a toy with the odor of narcotics on it. Trainers play with the dog and the toy. Trainers make a big game out of it."

When a dog like Boss is out in the field searching for narcotics, he thinks he's looking for a toy. Everything he learns is based on repetition. Koch also runs with him on an obstacle course for training and exercise.

"He is a dog and he hunts. That's why he likes to search and retrieve. Most police dogs are hunting dogs but here they are hunting for people or something else involving crime," said Koch, who puts a muzzle on Boss for 30 minutes to an hour daily for training. "It neutralizes him."

While at the police station, Boss has his own kennel. He's also got one at home. Like other pets, Boss is in the house and is treated like a pet. But Boss knows who he is. "He's still a work dog. He still does normal work dog stuff."

Boss, however, is not a rescue dog. That's altogether different training. But he's good at tracking and will be used to pursue if necessary. "We do that only in certain situations. He stops the person by grabbing him," Koch said.

When you see Boss, your first inclination might be to wrap your arms around him. Don't. He is a police dog. "He's got to be social, but not so social. We can't make him human."

Woman prepares for racial diversity

By Marie Chestney
Staff Writer

By the year 2020, futurists say, white people will no longer dominate the American workplace. In fact, they'll be a minority, replaced by the new majority — Asian and Hispanic workers.

This prediction disturbed Ronaele Bowman when she heard it, not because the white majority will be replaced but because she isn't sure how well Americans will accept and adapt to this monumental change.

How are cities such as Livonia preparing its children to be a minority population, Bowman asked herself. She decided Livonia's children weren't getting this preparation, and from that answer evolved one of the cities newest organizations, People of Livonia Addressing Issues of Diversity (PLAID).

"When I heard that prediction, it threw me," said Bowman, a 16-year resident of Livonia who is Westland's director of youth assistance. "I'm concerned that we're not preparing our kids for this future."

Bowman turned to Scott Heinzman, chairman of the Livonia Human Relations Commission, for help in getting the new group under way. Since last summer, Bowman, Heinzman and about 10 other Livonia residents have been meeting monthly to find ways to teach youngsters to accept, respect and understand people who are different.

'When people think of diversity, they mostly think of blacks and whites," Bowman said. "But diversity covers many things. It's cultural, ethnic, religious. There's short people and tall people. There's young and old. There's handicapped people. Our mission is to get our children to accept all people who are different."

"We know we will hit people's nerves and it's because of fear," Heinzman said. "People are afraid that they'll take our jobs, ruin our property values, poison our society.

"That's why PLAID's focus is on younger kids. We want to teach them about diversity before stereotypes set in. We want to get youngsters to ask questions."

3M cleanup

Company acted responsibly

■ Although the old paints and adhesives are now considered to be hazardous waste, they weren't at the time they were produced.

It would be a much better world if all corporations acted as responsibly as 3M manufacturing last week when it announced the impending cleanup of a 3.5 acre site in Canton Township.

Nearly 25 years ago old paints and adhesives from a 3M plant in Wayne were dumped in an abandoned channel of the Rouge River. The dumping was done by subcontractors hired by 3M, so there was no direct responsibility on the part of the firm.

But that didn't bother 3M when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency discovered the site on Michigan Avenue near Haggerty Road. The firm stepped up to its responsibility as a corporate citizen.

Too often, corporations that operate in communities around the nation basically skip out when the EPA or local government tries to force a cleanup. Court battles end up costing taxpayers a bundle.

The EPA and 3M have negotiated a consent agreement for the cleanup of the wooded site behind Keller-Stein Florist north of Michigan Avenue, east of Lilley. Such an agreement has a certain element of volunteerism.

But the action did more than guarantee a speedy cleanup. It takes away the cloud of suspicion that hangs over a contaminated site. If a corporation fights cleaning up its mess, the public jumps to the conclusion that the firm is guilty and the pollutants are pretty nasty stuff.

And that's not the case with the material. Although the old paints and adhesives are now considered to be hazardous waste, they weren't at the time they were produced.

Also, the much maligned EPA should be lauded for obtaining a consent agreement with 3M. Often cleanup sites become lost in the wrangling between the bureaucracies of a government agency and a large corporation.

Another winner is the Rouge River system, which has the potential to be a vast recreational resource in western Wayne County. Tests indicated there has been no seepage of the materials into the river. However, the elimination of any potential source of contamination is a victory.

With all the horror stories we hear about contaminated sites and inept handling by government officials and the stonewalling by corporate officials, it's good to see the system can work.

It gives us some hope that something can be done to clean up our air, water and land.

Court must consider our right

■ Old Henry Ford perceived he had such security problems in the 1920s. He bought himself Haven Hill Lake in Oakland County's Highland Township and fenced it off. No navigable river ran through it. The younger Fords should have emulated old Henry.

Two wealthy children of the powerful Ford family made a bad investment in 1984, and now they want the public courts to fix it up at public expense.

William Clay Ford Jr. and Sheila Ford Hamp, children of the Detroit Lions owner, bought a 2,000 acre tract on the Sturgeon River in Otsego County between Gaylord and Wolverine. They spent their money unwisely because, in addition to trout fishing, they also wanted security and privacy.

Under Michigan law, a river is public if it ever floated a commercial log. The public is entitled to fish and canoe it but cannot trespass the land except to portage around obstructions.

The public has access to the Sturgeon by way of a county road. The Fords want the court to let them close off access to the river and make the heretofore public river their domain. They contend there are litter and security problems.

Old Henry Ford perceived he had such security problems in the 1920s. He bought himself Haven Hill Lake in Oakland County's Highland Township and fenced it off. No navigable river ran through it. The younger Fords should have emulated old Henry.

How valuable is this river?

"The Sturgeon River between Gaylord and Indian River offers trout enthusiasts some of the most challenging brown trout battles they will ever encounter . . . The Sturgeon is not fished as heavily as many of Michigan's other rivers. Access points are limited in number . . . one of the few rivers to support runs of anadromous browns. . . . The browns are large enough to bring the water to a boil — five to 10 pounds — and are taken on flies, worms, spawn, spinners and other lures."

— "Trout Steams of Michigan" Vol. II by Janet D. Mehl.

But even if the river were sterile, there's a bigger principle at work: Monkey see, monkey do.

If the Fords can get away with closing a public river, others will be encouraged to try it on their rivers and lakes. They'll seek to block use of abandoned railroad rights of way for hiking trails. They'll continue to resist public boat launches on "their" lakes.

They have a poisoned mind set that says, "I've got mine, you get out." This poison leads otherwise civilized people to conclude that, in order to use a natural resource two hours a day a few days a year, they need to lock it up 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, and are entitled to order officers of the law to enforce their paranoid selfishness.

It used to be called the nouveau riche — newly rich — mentality, but clearly it's still at work in the fourth generation of Ford wealth.

The attorney general and Michigan United Conservation Clubs are fighting the Fords in circuit court. Judge R.C. Livo has given everyone another couple of weeks to file more briefs.

Then the judge will decide: Should he break a Michigan tradition? Should he let the I've-got-mine types padlock our natural resources? Should he use judicial authority to bail out the younger Fords' bad investment?

If the Fords prevail, all of Michigan has a lot to lose, and not just a portion of the Sturgeon River.

LETTERS

Millage needed

According to the May issue of the Plymouth Township letter, the board of trustees is faced with a critical financial condition and essential services are in jeopardy.

If you read the newsletter, I believe you will agree it is abundantly clear the township trustees have no acceptable choice except to request a substantial millage increase.

If you did not read the letter, I urge you to do so. If you did not retain the letter you can more than likely get the information from the township supervisor or any one of the board members would welcome questions and suggestions.

The current administration did not create this situation, but to say the previous administration did not take timely or proper corrective action will not solve the problem. It is now the responsibility of the current administration and in my opinion, the only solution is to request voter approval for additional millage.

Plymouth Township taxes compared to neighboring communities are extremely low. Only seven cents of each tax dollar we pay goes to support our township government. The remainder goes to schools, library and other government agencies.

We must not continue to permit a potentially dangerous condition to exist due to inadequate staffing of fire, EMT and police departments. Lack of adequate services will also have a serious impact on growth and property value as no one wants to build or buy property in a community that has a poor level of response for fire, EMT, police and other services.

The township supervisor will receive a copy of this letter and I hope other township residents that have opinions and suggestions will also contact the supervisor or one of the board members.

Millage supported

I have two children in the Plymouth Canton Schools and I have been very happy with the schools and feel that they are receiving a good education which is preparing them for college.

Our children's education is something that we consider the moment they are born. We start planning for their college education when they are infants to ensure that they are given every opportunity for a college education.

I want the best education that my children can possibly get. They are in school 12 years prior to college and I would like them to have a quality foundation.

That is why I am in support of the school millage renewal and the millage increase and I will be supporting our schools at the polls on June 14.

Dead trees live

Keeping those dead trees in your woodlands and backyards is really an aid to Mother Nature. Many birds such as kestrels, bluebirds, and owls rely on dead trees for nests. With the decrease of dead trees, there has been a dramatic decrease in kestrels. Nest boxes can be specially built and provided on tall poles or in large old trees adjacent to fields. Also, nest boxes for wood ducks can be provided along waterways.

Happy home

I am writing in regards to an article printed in the Canton Observer on Monday, April 26, titled "Sub's residents protest operation of Association."

As a resident of the Glengarry Village Subdivision, I am very happy. I would suggest your writers get all the facts before printing an article. If they had, they would have found that in the association bylaws it stated there would be a management company. Now we still have a Homeowners Association, but the management company is there to oversee the operation. They want to make sure our beautiful subdivision does not become run down as many others do that are run strictly by a homeowners association.

If others in our subdivision had read the bylaws before closing on their home, they would know also that there would be a management company.

My husband and I were the second home in the subdivision and we did read the bylaws. We were very pleased to know there would be a management company. We know for a fact that other subdivisions that are run strictly by a homeowners association can't get a mere $10-$20 yearly dues from the residents and so nothing gets done in the subdivision.

I also hope in the future when articles are printed, that you don't speak for everyone. This article stated "residents," meaning all in the subdivision. I am a resident and disagree with your article and I felt my rights were violated.

I am very happy where I live and have been for almost two years. If I was not, I'd move. I wish the best of luck to Wolverine Management Company.

As far as Observer Newspaper goes, I'm disappointed and hope you contact myself for facts on the bright side of Glengarry Village Subdivision.

Proposed law would help

In a recent article ("Proposed law would let fines replace court dates," April 29, 1993), Tim Richard detailed pending legislation which would allow municipalities to decriminalize ordinance violations by treating them as civil infractions.

A person convicted of violating an ordinance generally is viewed by the criminal courts as having a misdemeanor on his record. Since most ordinance violations stem from inadvertence, carelessness, or unawareness of the local rules, it is unfair for a violator to be considered a misdemeanant.

A second reason for decriminalizing ordinance violations is to promote judicial economy. Therefore, ordinance violations should be handled by the courts in the same manner as traffic violations. Court hearings will be simplified, and the resident, if found responsible for violating an ordinance, would avoid the stigma of a criminal conviction.

Community attitudes affect tragedy of AIDS

QUESTION: The Huron Valley Schools in Oakland County rejected a gay AIDS speaker, Steven Wood, as a presenter for his group called the Midwest AIDS Prevention Project. Reading what he says in the newspapers about his commitment to helping children understand the tragedy of AIDS, he seems to be a sincere person. Why do you think the school superintendent rejected him as the speaker?

ANSWER: The school superintendent didn't reject Steven Woods as a speaker . . . the community did. Boards of education are voted in by the citizens, voted in to represent their values and the board looks for a superintendent who will reflect those values, educational or otherwise.

Most school administrators I know are accepting and tolerant human beings. The successful ones have to be tolerant or they wouldn't last in a job where they have to assimilate the values of diverse groups, with their own group values and group thinking.

In conversations with school leadership on the "gay" issue, I find a rational degree of tolerance and have not found any "straight" school administrator wishing to persecute nor condemn a "gay" person as a human being.

However, the thin line between having a "gay" speaker in the school (on any subject, AIDS or otherwise) and the fear of that "gay" person subtly promoting their life style in a classroom or in an informal student setting is a nightmare no school superintendent nor board of education can tolerate.

Consider the last superintendent of schools in New York City who supported a curriculum which had 1st and 2nd grade books relating how mother lives with mother (two lesbians raising a child) and daddy lives with daddy raising a child . . . part of what (I believe) is called the Rainbow Curriculum. Whether appropriate or inappropriate curriculum is not the question, the superintendent was fired.

And every superintendent in the country knew that the New York superintendent was fired within a day. And superintendents, some with two or three kids in college, generally want to keep their job.

Social issue

This may be considered by the gay community to be the lowest level of rational thought on a critical social issue, but this is reality.

DOC DOYLE

And if a superintendent in a cosmopolitan community such as New York can get the "can tied to him" while in good faith trying to bring about an understanding of the gay community, what ramifications await school administrators in some of the Observer & Eccentric's suburban readership areas, let alone the response "gay speakers" will find in the small quasi-farming communities outstate?

The problem goes beyond a superintendent adhering to the mores of his/her community or trying to stay gainfully employed. It is a reflection of our societal thinking at large.

Nature of prejudice

Review what Dr. Gordon Allport, one of the greatest social-psychologists of all times, says in his classic book, "The Nature of Prejudice." He believes human beings find it most difficult to make judgments on each individual person (such as Mr. Wood in this case).

So rather than extend the effort to consider each person individually, most people use The Process of Categorization. Putting people into categories is easier, it takes less effort. Mexicans are lazy, blacks are ignorant, Germans are all Huns.

And how do many, if not most, of our straight citizens categorize the "gay"community? I believe many envision San Francisco, with two guys holding hands and kissing on the street, or exhibitionists on the Mall in Washington, D.C. (played up by the media) dressed in nuns' clothes . . . interpreted as a general "in your face" by common people.

How people make such a leap of faith from a San Francisco street scene to a guy speaking on AIDS is again clearly pointed out by Dr. Allport.

He says, "People can lump millions into a simple negative category . . . taking the traits of a few of their population and projecting to all in that group . . . allowing them to adopt a rejection for all who make up the group."

The bottom line is that AIDS is a major health problem and children . . . at an appropriate age . . . must be educated. And the other bottom line, as committed as Mr. Wood seems to be, is that many communities do not believe or are not ready for an out of the closet "gay" to be the message carrier.

The great irony of all this is that there are gays that are teaching kids in Michigan school districts every day and have been for years. Indeed, one college (gay) classmate from Central Michigan University received the outstanding teaching award in his district in the '80s.

One wonders if Mr. Wood may be triggering an "out of the closet" movement by teachers who could perceive his situation as a cause.

Frankly, I'm a poor philosopher of homosexuality because I simply don't understand homosexuality, its genetic or environmental factors as well as some of my heterosexual peers who seem to have the answers.

Hall of famer outdistanced others in his own way

Today's column is going to be about halls of fame. More specifically, it's about last month's induction of a very uncontroversial 75-year-old named Bob Luby into Wayne State University's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Halls of fame are mausoleums. Majestically marbled, perhaps, and ivy-covered, but they are mausoleums nonetheless. This is particularly so of the venerable Wayne State hall — which made me its youngest member in 1978 over 20 years after my All-American track days there.

Sharing membership with me are my mentors — the late WSU coach Dave Holmes, the late Denby High coach Jack Rice, the late Detroit Public Schools League supervisor and Olympian Lorenzo Wright, and the very much alive ex-Mumford High principal Irving "Pete" Petross.

With the addition of Luby, the hall now claims a full five mentors of mine.

Robert Luby — father of concert violinist Richard and brother of Harper Hospital's top psychiatrist Elliott — never was an All-American or Olympian. However, he did dash 440 yards in 49 seconds when that time approached world caliber. In 1937, he returned three punts for touchdowns against Hillsdale and scored against Michigan State.

JOHN TELFORD

For 18 years he directed Detroit Public Schools' physical educational programs. He gave me my chance to coach champions and opened a local market among coaches for the first edition of my best-selling book on the quarter mile.

In the 1960s and '70s, Bob Luby and I were the only white men on the board of directors of the Detroit Varsity Club, a group of old athletes who raised money to send indigent kids to college.

It would take 20 columns to list the full litany of Luby's good deeds, including his teaming with Birmingham's Walt Bazylewicz to co-found Operation Friendship, the human relations cooperative with the Catholic schools. Suffice it to say that he staunchly supported urban youngsters and urban-suburban interplay long before such support became fashionably laudable — so maybe he's a pretty controversial guy after all.

John Telford, a Rochester Hills resident, most recently was an assistant superintendent in the Rochester School District. He previously was executive director for secondary education in the Plymouth Canton district. To leave a message for him from a touchtone phone, dial 953-2047 mailbox number 1879.

Time to treat the 'shame' of having mental illness

JUDITH DONER BERNE

■ The breakthroughs of modern medicine allow most people who are treated for clinical depression, like most people who are treated for diabetes, hypertension and other lifelong diseases to live normal lives. What they retain is the shame. Now is the time to relieve them of that shame by breaking through our ignorance.

I remember thinking when I saw it in a press release sent a couple of years ago to our newspapers, that if we had been able to attend a group like that, our family's anguish might have been less.

I'm talking about a support group for the loved ones and friends of people who have manic depressive illness.

But back when I was growing up with a mother who about twice a year exhibited behavior so bizarre and unpredictable that I was afraid to bring friends home, there was no effective treatment for the disease much less a support group.

It happened on a cyclical basis — but as a child I couldn't see that. And when as a young adult, I could, it caused me to cancel a wedding shower rather than risk being embarassed by her behavior.

In those days, her treatment consisted of confinement in one mental hospital or another for the couple of months it took for the manic phase of the disease to run its course, then a return home until the next episode. In her case, there was no major depression.

My mother has been free of the symptoms of the disease for about seven years because of new treatments. What she retains is the shame.

The breakthroughs of modern medicine allow most people who are treated for clinical depression, like most people who are treated for diabetes, hypertension and other lifelong diseases to live normal lives.

What they retain is the shame. Now is the time to relieve them of that shame by breaking through our ignorance.

Monday, the pink and white blossomed trees which line the Wayne State University campus ushered us into a press conference on depression moderated by James Haveman, director of the Michigan Department of Mental Health. (It's probably no accident that we wait for the state's most beautiful month to deal with mental illness.)

To help us understand depression, Haveman repeated a description told to him by a friend who had tried to commit suicide twice, been successfully treated and had resumed a productive life.

"My friend told me it was like falling into a vat of concrete that hasn't hardened. The concrete starts to harden. He feels things tightening around him. He needs to do something dramatic to break out of that concrete.

"Once he knelt at a train tracks. Another time he jumped from a four-story building."

Here are some important facts:

Depression is an illness caused by biochemical changes or chemical imbalances in the brain, and is only, on occasion, prompted by stressful situations. It can affect anyone, but research suggests that individuals whose mother or father has the illness are three times as likely to have it.

Clinical depression affects 18 percent of the population right here in Detroit and its suburbs — that's 600,000 people. Of these, 400,000 never seek treatment. And 60,000 will attempt or successfully commit suicide.

It is highly treatable. Dr. John Greden, chairman of the department of psychiatry at the University of Michigan, and keynote speaker said it "is a disorder that has kind of come out of the closet in the last 10-15 years." Yet, he says, many doctors still treat it symptomatically, rather than recognizing it as the syndrome it is.

If I had to have a mental illness, Greden says, "first I'd grab a phobia. But next, give me a major depression and send me to somebody who knows how to treat it."

Greden also reports that depression affects three times as many women as men.

He said simply: "In this year of the woman, it is time to attend to it."

That means recognizing it; getting yourself or your loved one who is experiencing it professional help; and treating people who have it as if they have an illness, not a weakness.

Otherwise, shame on us.

Canton clinches division title, 2-0

Plymouth Canton successfully defended its Western Division title in girls soccer Monday by defeating Northville, 2-0.

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

Plymouth Canton met its first objective for the 1993 girls soccer season Monday by winning its late-season showdown at Northville.

The 2-0 victory made Canton champion of the Western Division again and gives it the chance to defend its Western Lakes Activities Association title next week.

But while the No. 2-ranked Chiefs (5-0, 11-0-1) were blessed with good fortune for the most part, there was enough misfortune to keep them focused and challenged.

The victory came with a cost, resembling a war of attrition as Canton suffered injuries to five players on top of those from previous games.

Junior forward Mandy Salin was carried from the field and appeared to have the most serious injury (knee). Defender Kara Moylan sprained an ankle, goalie Jori Welchans and defender Kelly Reeves suffered foot bruises and defender Stacey Miller was shaken after hitting her head on the ground.

The Chiefs also lost defender Beth Ostach with a leg injury Saturday during a 4-1 win over Dearborn, and forward Erika Swegles has been sidelined with an arm injury.

Canton did have good news in the return of senior forward Colleen Connell after a bout with meningitis.

Salin and Ostach will be out indefinitely, according to coach Don Smith, who must get his team healthy again for the WLAA championship and post-season tournaments.

Shamrocks blank Cubs

Redford Catholic Central lacrosse goaltender Alex Alviar recorded his first shutout of the year Tuesday, leading the host Shamrocks past the University of Detroit-Jesuit, 6-0.

The Shamrocks, who led 2-0 at halftime, are 9-1 overall and 7-1 in the Michigan Scholastic Lacrosse Association.

Brian Rice led CC with two goals and one assist. Brian Ronayne, Paul Nemzek, Tim MacArthur and Jeff Lachapelle also scored goals for the Shamrocks.

Brian Ronayne assisted on two goals, while Tim Williams, Jamie Ronayne and Gerry Mato had one assist each.

Spikers win tourney

The Crusader AAU Junior Elite volleyball team, coached by Carol Hall, won the Walled Lake tournament last weekend.

Members of the squad include: Jaclyn Deane and Andrea Greer, both of Livonia Franklin High; Paula Dombrowski, Erin Koch and Shelleye Sills, Plymouth Salem; Jean Herron and Jenn McEwen, Redford Thurston; Jill Millington and Angie Piippo, Livonia Stevenson; Yvette Sixbey, Garden City; Peggy Agusti and Emily Gibson, Dearborn Divine Child.

Hornets runners-up

The Canton Hornets, an under-11 boys soccer team, finished second in tournament play Sunday in Midland.

The Hornets won their division by defeating the Saginaw Storm (5-0) and tying the East Lansing Tornado (1-1) and the Birmingham Blazers (1-1). Canton lost to the Brighton Express in the championship game, 1-0.

The players are Nick Allen, Trevor Davis, Matt Dent, Jason Furr, Brian Guzowski, Steve Hulin, Ritchie Ikeh, Danny Jaeger, Matt Kardel, Adam Keller, Kale Leftwich, Graeme McDonald, Jean Peltier, Billy Voyles and Brendan Welsh.

Al Davis is the Hornets head coach, and the assistant coaches are Steve Furr and Jim Dent.

Chiefs are repeat champs in Farmington tournament

■ SOFTBALL

Kelly Holmes pitched her second perfect game of the season and Plymouth Canton repeated as champion of the Farmington softball tournament Saturday.

Holmes hurled the gem against Plymouth Salem in the second game of the tournament, a 7-0 victory.

The second-ranked Chiefs (15-2) defeated Troy 8-1 in the championship game in which Holmes tossed a one-hitter at Farmington City Park.

Holmes struck out 14 batters in the final and 13 in the Salem game. She had no walks in two games.

Michelle Metzger had four RBI against Troy, three with a bases-loaded double and another on a sacrifice fly.

Tina Schafer drove in three runs with a single (two) and sacrifice fly. Dani Mortiere, Holmes and Karrie Drinkhahn had two hits apiece.

Schafer swung the hot bat for Canton in the tournament, going 7-for-10 overall. She was 4-for-4 (two doubles and a triple) against Salem and scored three runs. She also had one RBI.

Drinkhahn had two RBI with a pair of sacrifice flies, Sarah Rowe and Kate Strahan had two hits each and Mortiere knocked in one run.

The Chiefs had 10 hits off Salem pitcher Jenny Garvey, who walked one. Salem committed four errors while Canton played an error-free tournament.

Canton advanced to the final with a forfeit win over Birmingham Groves, which withdrew from the tournament so its players could attend the school prom.

The Chiefs began the day with a 12-2, six-inning mercy win over Farmington.

Colleen Baker tossed a two-hitter and was the winning pitcher. She struck out five and walked three.

Drinkhahn led the 13-hit offensive, going 3-for-4 with three RBI. The hit parade included Heather Lagrow, Schafer, Mortiere and Heather Schafer with two apiece.

Mortiere drove in two runs while Lagrow, the Schafers and Baker had one RBI each.

The Chiefs will try to repeat as champions of their own Canton Classic this weekend. The first games begin at 10:30 a.m. at the Canton and Salem fields.

North Farmington, Rochester Adams, Dearborn Divine Child, Farmington Hills Mercy, Livonia Ladywood and Pinckney will be represented.

■ CANTON 8, WESTERN 2: The Chiefs ran their Western Division-leading record to 6-0 Monday with the win over visiting Walled Lake Western.

Baker (4-2) allowed only three hits while going the distance for the victory. She struck out four and walked one.

Rowe had three hits (two doubles) and two RBI; Drinkhahn two hits, two walks and one RBI.

Canton tops in dual, relays

■ GIRLS TRACK

The Plymouth Canton girls track team continued to bulldoze its competition Tuesday with a 95-33 victory in a Western Lakes Activities Association dual meet at Farmington Hills Harrison.

The Chiefs (4-0 in the Western Division and 5-1 overall) won all but three events. Lana Boroditsch, Selena Bastine and Ndu Okwumabua paced Canton with two wins each.

Boroditsch took the 1,600-meter run in 5:26.9 and the 3,200 in 12:11.5. Bastine won the shot put with a toss of 35-1 and the discus with a throw of 117-1½. Okwumabua captured the high jump (5-6) and the 100 dash (12.9).

Other Canton winners were Olive Ikeh in the 200 dash (27.2), Karina Kilpelainen the 300 hurdles (48.5), Tracey Cavin the 400 dash (1:04) and Christie Saffron the 800 run (2:31.2).

The Chiefs also were first in the 400 (52.5), 800 (1:49.9) and 3,200 (10:35.2) relays.

Canton was coming off a first-place finish Saturday in the Troy Athens Relays. The Chiefs scored 64 points and runner-up Troy 49.

The Chiefs won six of 13 events and set school records in the high jump and distance medley relays.

The jumps of Okwumabua (5-2), Stephanie Gray (4-11) and Ikeh (4-11) totaled 15 feet — one inch higher than the record set last season.

The distance medley team of Laura McWilliams, Saffron, Cavin and Boroditsch raced to a time of 13:05.7, easily shattering the record time of 13:17.3 set just last week.

The shot put relay team of Gray, Bastine and Mary Israel took first with a 91-7½ total, and the discus team of Bastine, Gray and Becky Baigrie also placed first (282-9).

Kilpelainen, Shawn Champlin, Lisa Soash and Angela Fountain teamed up to win the shuttle hurdle relay in 1:10.7, and Ikeh, Becky Bockstanz, Kilpelainen and Okwumabua won the 400 relay in 51.7.

"It was our goal to come here and win the meet," Canton coach George Przygodaki said. "We finished second here last year to Troy and figured they would be our main competition. Overall this was our best team performance of the year."

CC grad Bozyk has fine influence

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

The clock is ticking. Time is nearly up. The expiration of a coaching legend is upon us.

For Seth Denawetz and Paul Bozyk, next season is difficult to focus on. The man they know only as "Coach" won't be coaching them any longer. And that will take some adjusting, because he is the most successful coach in NCAA history.

George Acker, who has guided men's tennis at Kalamazoo College for 35 years, will retire after the completion of this season. Acker's record is unusual — 35 consecutive Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association championships have been captured by Kalamazoo in his era.

Indeed, the Hornets have never lost an MIAA title. The most recent championship came April 30 to May 1 at Kalamazoo's Stowe Stadium; they won all nine matches to push their MIAA streak to 55-straight titles, something no other NCAA team anywhere in the country has matched, whatever the sport.

Bozyk

The only blemish, if one can call it that, on Acker's record came in his fourth season. It was 1962, and Kalamazoo was shocked by Hope College 4-3, ending a 27-year string of MIAA dual-meet wins at 156. The Hornets won the season-ending tournament to share the title with Hope. They have not lost an MIAA dual meet since.

Playing for such a man isn't easy. Playing for him in his final year adds pressure. There's no way to win in such a situation — whatever happens, Acker will still be gone. All that Denawetz and Bozyk and their teammates can do is prolong the season as much as possible, and make the finish a memorable one.

The date of departure for Acker is now confirmed: May 24. That's when the weeklong NCAA Division III Tournament will conclude. Kalamazoo is hosting the tournament, which could make Acker's departure even more memorable — especially if the Hornets are able to gain their third-straight NCAA III title.

The incentives are well-established. Now, it's just a matter of accomplishing them.

A caring coach

"I'll miss seeing Coach every day, for one," said Denawetz, a junior from West Bloomfield who has played No. 2 singles and No. 2 doubles this season. He has a 22-5 singles record. "He genuinely cares about every player on the team. Everyone feels important in the program.

"If Timon gets anything from coach, I hope that's it."

"Timon" is Timon Corwin, Acker's assistant the past four years. He is expected to be named the next coach.

"Coach is great," Denawetz said. "I wish he'd coach another 20 years. When we go to a tournament, I feel almost jealous. Everyone knows Coach."

Certainly, both Denawetz and Bozyk have benefited from the relationship. Denawetz spent five months studying in Japan prior to the season. "It's taken me three or four months to get into shape," he said.

Acker's strict program — 2½ hours of practice a day, with the emphasis on drills, match play and conditioning — has helped Denawetz get his game on track. He now feels he can reach the quarterfinals in the NCAA III Tournament, which would earn him All-American status.

Bozyk, a sophomore from Westland (Redford Catholic Central), finds Acker's method "very structured. It's a totally different world than junior tennis. It's what Coach calls the Kalamazoo-way of tennis: keep the ball in play with good, solid placement.

"I've grown to be a smarter player in that respect. I'm not looking for quick winners. I couldn't be happier with the way my game has taken shape."

Bozyk missed 1½ weeks of the season with bronchitis, but came back strongly. He finished the regular season with an 18-2 record at No. 6 singles, including a 6-1, 6-0 lashing of Calvin's Jeff Admiraal in the MIAA final. Denawetz won the No. 2 title with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Calvin's Brad Sytsma.

"There's lots of stuff to remember about him," Bozyk said of Acker. "On court, he is always in the right mood for a coach in his position, very serious and very calm. Off court, he is very relaxed, very caring for his players. He treats us just like family.

"But on court, he's the strict father."

Denawetz admits he has clashed with Acker. "He's very set in his ways. After all, he's been doing it for 35 years. He doesn't feel it's necessary to listen to some college kid.

"Plus," Denawetz said, "he's right 95 percent of the time. I've never taken it personal or anything. It's kind of like clashing with your parents.

"Coach Acker really made me feel special."

It's something he was proficient at for the past 35 years. Denawetz and Bozyk will finish their collegiate careers under a different coach, and that, in itself, will be different.

Madonna gains confidence

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

■ BASEBALL

If confidence makes kings, there's no need for the other five teams to even show up at the NAIA District 23 baseball playoffs.

Madonna University, the regular-season champion at 22-4, is certain of triumph.

At least coach Mike George is. Asked who his Fighting Crusaders would play if they win their tourney opener against sixth-seeded Tri-State University (6-16 in the district), George replied, "When we win, we'll play the loser of the Northwood-Spring Arbor game."

OK, so it isn't much of a prediction considering Tri-State's and Madonna's records. But George is so certain of a first-game triumph, he's gambling by saving his top pitchers for games later in the tournament. He'll start junior righthander Joe Jentzer, a part-time starter with a 4-2 record and a 2.48 earned run average.

"Us getting that No. 1 seed, then winning that first game are vital," said George. "Everyone else has to throw their ace (in the opening round). They have no choice. We do."

Other first-round match-ups are No. 2 Aquinas (16-6 in the district) vs. No. 5 Siena Heights (14-12), and No. 3 Spring Arbor (14-8) vs. No. 4 Northwood (10-4). All first-round games in the double-elimination tournament are at noon Thursday, at three fields in Grand Rapids. Madonna plays at Belnap Park.

Second-round games are at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, again at all three fields. On Friday, there will be two games at noon and one (or two) at 3:30 p.m. The championship round starts at noon Saturday at Kimball Park. If a second game is needed, it will be at 3:30 p.m. at Kimball.

The district winner will host the NAIA Area Tournament, with winners from the Ohio, Illinois and Indiana districts competing.

"We're ready to play," said George. "I'm not going to sit here and say we're going to win it, but we're ready. We'll show up to play."

Madonna's relatively simple first-round game magnifies what George thinks is his team's biggest asset: starting pitching. "Any one of those five teams could win it," he said, including all but Tri-State as possible champs. "But we have more starting pitching than anyone."

George plans to pitch sophomore lefthander Jeff Kugelman (5-2, 2.77) in Thursday's second game. On Friday, all-district selection Shaun Hayward (6-0, 1.45), a senior righthander, will pitch the first game, followed by Ryan Grabetz (4-2, 3.18), a sophomore righthander.

Saturday's championship is reserved — at least for now — for Louie McKaig (7-2, 2.61), a junior righthander.

There are pitching problems, however. Sean Henkel and Mike Grahl will both be unavailable due to injuries, and Mike Coleman probably won't play because of academic problems.

But that can't alter George's optimism. His biggest concern: "Have to say Spring Arbor because of their experience, because they've been to the big show (the NAIA World Series) the last two years. They're a good team, a very good team, but they're not the caliber of team they have been."

District stars

Madonna placed four players on the all-district team: senior second baseman Joe Brusseau; Hayward; senior utility player Rich Roy; and junior third baseman Jeff Pendell.

For Brusseau, this is nothing new — it's his third time as an all-district selection. The Redford Bishop Borgess graduate hit .310 with 13 doubles, three triples, five home runs and 26 runs batted in, and he led the team in runs scored (60) and stolen bases (17, in 24 attempts). Brusseau holds Madonna's career records in hits, runs, at-bats and games played.

Hayward is a first-team choice for the second time, at a second school. He transferred to Madonna from Concordia, where he was a first-team pick last year. Hayward was 6-0 with a 1.45 ERA, pitching 58 innings, striking out 34 and walking 17. He also batted .270, with seven doubles, four homers and 13 RBI, playing first base and designated hitter.

Roy, from Livonia Clarenceville, took advantage of his first full season by leading Madonna with a .338 average and 40 RBI. His eight homers tied for the team lead. He also had 11 doubles and a triple, and made just one error playing four different positions (third, short, outfield, pitcher).

Pendell, from Livonia Churchill, was chosen as the designated hitter. His 61 hits (a Madonna season record) and 43 walks paced the Crusaders; he batted .322, with eight doubles, two triples, two homers and 27 RBI. He made just one error in district play at third.

Twinbill split

The Crusaders got locked up in a pitching duel Saturday against St. Xavier (of Chicago), losing the opener 3-2 and winning the nightcap 2-0 at Madonna University Park.

Grabetz was the loser in the first game, allowing two earned runs on seven hits and two walks, striking out five. Jim Kuhn was the winner; he handcuffed Madonna on five hits and three walks, with both runs unearned.

Craig Overaitis' sacrifice fly in the second scored the Crusaders' first run. A Jim Solak single, a wild pitch and a Chris Gajewski single produced a second run in the second.

Madonna had a chance to win it in the seventh, loading the bases with none out. But after Brusseau hit into a force out, Pendell's long fly was caught by right fielder Mike Nemeyer, and he threw out Scott Anderson at the plate for a game-ending double play. Solak had two hits.

In the second game, McKaig was the story. He tossed a two-hit shutout, walking two and striking out five. Jim Robinson was the loser for Xavier, giving up two runs on six hits, striking out four.

Madonna's runs came in the second and third. Bill Terski singled to start the second-inning rally, moving to third on Overaitis' single and scoring on Solak's ground out. In the third, Pendell doubled and came home on Jeff Miller's single. Pendell was 3-for-3 in the game.

The split left Madonna with a 40-20 regular-season record, the most wins ever by a Crusader team.

Schoolcraft struggles in golf tournament

■ GOLF

Schoolcraft College's golf team wasn't quite up to par in the NJCAA Region 12 Golf Tournament, finishing seventh out of 10 teams last Saturday and Sunday at Bedford Valley Golf Course in Battle Creek.

Dan Alcock, however, came very close to advancing to the NJCAA National Championship at St. Simons Island, Ga. Alcock's 54-hole total of 231 put him in a three-way tie for the fifth, and final, at-large berth from the region. Alcock lost in the sudden-death playoff against Lake Michigan's Dan Arend and Henry Ford's Mark Villemur.

Alcock finished tied for seventh overall, earning him all-region honors. Other SC scorers were Dennis Alcock, 243; Steve Brining, 247; Michael Brady, 251; and Pete Theophelis, 259.

SC totaled 962 strokes. Grand Rapids won with 931, followed by Lansing (949), Cuyahoga and Vincennes (951 apiece), St. Clair County (953), Muskegon (959), SC, Sinclair (963), Oakland CC (978) and Kellogg (991). Grand Rapids' Brandon Mayard won medalist honors with a 225 total.

After a non-league game Saturday at Portage Central and a WLAA crossover Monday at Farmington, the Chiefs will play host to Livonia Stevenson in the league final Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Canton had good fortune early Monday, scoring two quick goals, eliminating most of the suspense and all but assuring itself of the victory.

"It made the game long," Smith said. "We didn't play much after that. It was ugly, but we came out ahead."

Becky Cifaldi's shot from the top of the circle gave Canton the lead at 37:51, and the Chiefs made it 2-0 when Amy Westerhold got open in front of the net for an easy shot at 37:05. Leah Hutko and Erica Anderson assisted on the goals.

"My girls were nervous in the first few minutes, and that was real obvious on a couple of missed marking assignments," Northville coach Bobby Paul said. "Canton is an excellent team; that's for sure."

The Chiefs had five good shots in the first half and the Mustangs none, but No. 3 Northville (2-1-1, 6-1-4) did better after halftime when it outshot Canton 4-3 and sent several others wide of the goal.

"We were just protecting our lead; we weren't mustering any offense," Smith said. "Usually, we don't fall back into a shell."

The Chiefs approached the second half more conservatively in view of the importance of the game, Smith said.

"Usually, I won't keep the kids in there as long as I did," he said. "but there were enough stoppages of play — the ball going out of bounds, yellow cards and injuries — that everybody was getting a break. It wasn't a high intensity-game like we're used to.

"We just wanted to make sure we stayed ahead, because this was for the division. We wanted to make sure we got a shot at the championship. It would have been a sad tale if we didn't after working so hard."

The Mustangs showed what they could do in the second half and started taking some risks — something they should have done in the first half, according to Paul.

"We made some tactical changes," he said. "We left their right halfback completely uncovered, which allowed us to play an extra player up front and an extra midfielder.

"If the right halfback got the ball, we rotated over to compensate. We took some chances and it was paying off."

■ CANTON 4, D'BORN 1: Leah Hutko scored three goals Saturday and raised her team-leading total to 15 in the non-league win over visiting Dearborn.

Julie Majewski scored the other goal and four players had one assist each: Kathy Bahr, Lynn Haines, Alyson Noune and Melissa Tomei. Welchans and Sarah Warnke played one half each in goal.

Hutko also has four assists and leads the Chiefs with 34 total points through the Northville game on Monday.

Tatterton paces Salem soccer victory

It's looking more and more like Plymouth Salem's senior striker Caryn Tatterton made the right decision to quit playing softball and join the soccer team last year.

Tatterton, Salem's second-leading scorer in 1992, has a team-high 17 goals after getting hat trick in an 8-1 win Monday over visiting Farmington.

Tatterton also scored three goals Saturday in a 3-2 victory over visiting Troy.

"She's an athlete, a tough, fast, wiry girl," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "She's opportunistic, seizes the situation, moves in quick and has the shot."

Mari Hoff scored two goals in the win over Farmington, which pushed the Rocks to 5-2-3 overall.

Kris Goff scored one goal with two assists and Kelly Lukasik and Stacy Delong scored one goal each. Lukasik, Michelle Cronan, Jenny Bazzarelli, Jodee Wilsher and Mackenzie Emmett had one assist apiece.

Mandy Blumberg played goalkeeper for Salem.

Salem used a pair of goals by Tatterton to lead 2-1 at halftime Saturday. Tatterton scored another in the second half for a 3-1 lead before Troy added a goal to make the final 3-2.

Lukasik, Wilsher and Hoff had one assist each. Blumberg was the winning goalie after stopping six shots.

■ LADYWOOD 3, REGINA 0: Val Adzima, Kelli Colliton and Jamie Marinos scored first-half goals Monday and keeper Liz Gunn made 17 saves for the Blazers.

Ladywood improved to 3-2-1 in the Catholic League and 7-2-1 overall. The Blazers are in second place in the league behind Farmington Hills Mercy.

Salem batters have feast in mercy win over North

Plymouth Salem's baseball team showed how good it can be on Monday with an 18-4, five-inning mercy victory over host North Farmington.

The Rocks, who at times have struggled because of inexperience, jumped to a 10-0 lead in the top of the first inning in support of starting pitcher Eric Kida.

The Rocks had eight of their 15 hits in the first inning, including consecutive doubles to start the game by Jamie Owens and Bryan Zarosely.

Kida, Brandon Los, Jim Cunningham, John Klask, Owens and Zarosely contributed RBI singles later in the inning.

Salem coach John Gravlin believes the Rocks gained confidence after splitting a pair of games Saturday in the Midland Tournament.

"We were due," Gravlin said. "We had been playing good teams and losing close ones. We just exploded today.

"We're on the edge of being a good team. Hopefully, it can carry over into the post-season."

Kida improved to 5-0 on the mound, allowing three North hits, striking out five and walking three in four innings.

Zarosely and Owens each went 3-for-3 to pace the Rocks. Zarosely had three RBI and scored two runs, and Owens had an RBI and scored three runs. Klask had a two-run homer and three RBI.

North's Mark Herman hit a three-run homer and a double in three trips to the plate.

The Rocks defeated Traverse City 5-3 and lost 9-8 to Midland, the No. 4-ranked team in Class A Saturday.

The Rocks trailed 9-2 against Midland before rallying for six runs with two outs in the sixth.

The game was called after 5⅓ innings because of a 2¼-hour time limit.

Klask delivered a two-out double with the bases loaded to drive home three runs and highlight the rally. Klask had fouled six straight pitches before the hit into right-center field. The Rocks outhit Midland 10-8.

"That was a monster at-bat," Gravlin said. "Who knows? That might have got us going today (against North)."

Charlie Winstel, Zarosely and Los also had RBI singles in the sixth.

Salem had five errors and allowed five unearned runs. Sophomore pitcher Dan Quain suffered the loss, despite not allowing an earned run. He left after three innings with a 5-1 deficit.

Mike Marsella was the winning pitcher in the win over Traverse City. He allowed seven hits, struck out eight and walked three.

Los led off three innings with hits, while Owens had two hits and two RBI and Winstel had two hits and an RBI.

■ CATHOLIC CENTRAL

Eric Justice delivered his version of the law Saturday to help pull Redford Catholic Central to within one game of clinching a spot in the Catholic League baseball playoffs.

Justice's game-winning single knocked in Dave Susalla in the first game of a doubleheader sweep at Birmingham Brother Rice. The Shamrocks won the opener 2-1, before winning the nightcap, 4-1, behind the splendid pitching of Brian Paluk.

CC, now 19-7 overall, leads the Central Division with a 9-3 mark. Warren DeLaSalle is second at 9-5 while Harper Woods' Notre Dame is 7-5. Rice fell to 7-7 in the division.

CC trailed 1-0 in the opener before breaking on the scoreboard in the sixth. Tom Wyroba, pinch-running for Paluk after he had walked to lead off the inning, advanced to third on an error by the second baseman. With two outs, Wyroba raced home as the Rice catcher missed threw the ball errantly to first base on a dropped third strike.

Susalla walked to lead off the seventh and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Andy Slankster. Susalla then scored on Justice's hit.

Jerry Nozewski scattered three hits, walked three and struck out 11 in 6⅓ innings of work. Paluk got the final two to record the save.

Paluk (7-1) then completed the sweep by striking out 12 while walking only two and allowing five hits. Brian Donohue took the loss for the Warriors.

CC took the lead early with a four-run first. After an Aaron Babicz RBI single, the Shamrocks scored twice on two Rice errors. Juan Sanchez then completed the CC scoring with a sacrifice fly.

Mike Brusseau went 3-4 for the Shamrocks.

■ NORTH 12, SALEM 9: The Raiders scored six runs in the bottom of the seventh inning Monday to earn a come-from-behind victory over the host Rocks.

North batters erupted for 15 hits and were led by Jennifer Cassidy, who was 4-for-4 (triple) and had two RBI.

Allison Stein and Kate Mackie (two doubles) had three hits apiece. Stein also scored two runs. Becky Thursam, who had two hits, and Mackie chipped in one RBI each.

Kristin Stackpoole had two hits and Jenny Coleman two RBI for Salem, which made five errors.

The Raiders, who made three miscues, improved to 3-2 in the Lakes Division and 8-7 overall. The Rocks are 2-3 in the Lakes.

Lahser student makes MOT debut

MARY JANE DOERR

Wall-to-wall mirrors at the Lascu School of Ballet in Bloomfield Hills reflected ballerina Kelly Knechtel's petite form in black tights and white leggings rehearsing the Grand Pas de Deux with her T-shirted partner, Dmitri Mikheyenko.

The famous dance is from Tchaikovsky's "The Sleeping Beauty" a production in which the couple debut as Aurora and Prince Florimund, with Michigan Opera Theatre in the 10 a.m. Thursday, May 27, student matinee.

Both are longtime students of Iacob Lascu of West Bloomfield. Kelly is a beauty, but, despite the late hour and long rehearsals, she is not sleeping.

"This is the reason we need a ballet company in Detroit," said Lascu seated in front of an old magazine picture of him and Kelly when she was 11. "I teach them and when they become good, they leave and go to other cities." The 20-year-old Mikheyenko, formerly of Southfield, recently joined the Miami Ballet as a principal dancer.

Last year Lascu, who has made his mark in Detroit as the choreographer of the ever-popular "Nutcracker" with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, joined MOT to choreograph "King Roger" and "Samson and Delilah." This year he is working on "Aida" and the full scale production of "The Sleeping Beauty."

Drawing his professional talent from the vacationing National Ballet of Canada, whose dancers are available in May, Lascu has Karen Kain alternating with Kimberly Glasco and Margaret Illmann as Aurora (Sleeping Beauty), and Serge Lavoie dancing Prince Florimund (Desire), all from the CNB.

"I am not quite used to the idea of alternating with Karen Kain but I am so honored," said the 16-year-old Kelly, a sophomore at Lahser High School in Bloomfield Hills. Since the end of April, Kelly has been going to school for two hours each day and then leaving for all day ballet rehearsals.

"I have to make up all of my work on my own for these five weeks," said Kelly. "It is very hard for me but it is all worth it. It is so exciting for me to be learning these new dances."

Lascu has changed Marius Petipa's original choreography for "The Sleeping Beauty," eliminating many dances from the Vision and the Wedding scenes making this production much shorter than the full length three hours.

"I am trying to emphasize the story," said Lascu. "With so many dances the public loses the focus."

Anyone of the 80,000 people who saw Lascu's "Nutcracker" this year will expect him to add his magical tricks and clever buffoonery to this production. One advantage he has at Masonic Temple over the Fox Theatre is the larger stage. "I will use everything technically possible," said Lascu not giving away secrets.

Another advantage Lascu has is Dr. Leslie Dunner, the DSO's expert ballet conductor, (conductor of the "Nutcracker" and Dance Theatre of Harlem) who will conduct the MOT Orchestra for the six performances.

"I am a very happy man to have such a large family in this area who support and appreciate what I have done over the last 20 years," said Lascu about his many successes as a choreographer and teacher at Marygrove College. "I am proud of what I have accomplished."

Mary Jane Doerr of Troy is a full-time teacher and freelance writer who specializes in opera and musical theater.

Plymouth Theatre's 'Noises Off' hilarious

BY KRIS SPENCER
SPECIAL WRITER

REVIEW

■ If it sounds like an amusement park ride, then you're right on target. The PTG delivers the laughs.

In "Noises Off," the Plymouth Theatre Guild definitely saved the best for last. This British farce by Michael Frayn is the height of hilarity. Get ready for a ride.

The physical comedy which drives this PTG production is the secret to the play's success. From pratfalls to mock British mannerisms, the cast pulls in its audience with constant activity and cartoonish energy.

As a play within a play, "Noises Off" benefits greatly from this treatment. With "the director" among them, the audience watches the cast fumble through a dress rehearsal, then two performances of "Nothing On," a situation comedy.

Thanks to a newly built revolving stage (courtesy of PTG member John Jordan), we see "Nothing On" from both sides of the stage.

In Act 1, a dress rehearsal, the cast bungles both script and choreography, causing "the director" much anxiety.

Act 2, offers a behind-the-scenes glimpse, during which the characters recklessly juggle a performance and backstage shenanigans. In a mostly non-verbal manner, the PTG cast pulls off physical comedy at its finest.

As if there were any stops left to pull, the cast returns for Act 3, with a vengeance. In yet another performance of "Nothing On," this time from stageside, each character contributes to a totally chaotic performance complete with hilarious ad libs and outrageous stunts.

If it sounds like an amusement park ride, then you're right on target. The PTG delivers the laughs.

Bobbie Judd turns in an astonishing surreal performance as the forgetful housekeeper/backstage Pandora.

Larry Pelliccioni comes through loud and clear as the egotist director/backstage Casanova.

Ernie Nolan, a sophomore at the University of Detroit Jesuit High School, comes on strong as the conniving real estate agent/backstage jealous lover.

Deborah Kandler is absolutely charming as the witless bombshell playing a witless bombshell.

Sally Dubata, co-director of the PTG production with Francine Jo Hachem, gives an ironic turn as the frazzled stage manager/jilted lover.

James W. Dereniak is a stitch as the aristocratic neurotic playing a tax-evading, neurotic aristocrat.

Lisa Brandow's jaded veteran of stage and boudoir is sharp as nails and just as funny.

GOING TO THE MOVIES

Neil Simon's 'Lost in Yonkers' opens Friday

Set in 1942 Yonkers, N. Y., Neil Simon's "Lost in Yonkers," opening at suburban theaters Friday, May 14, is a comedy-drama about two young brothers forced by circumstances to live with their grandmother (Irene Worth), aunt (Mercedes Ruehl) and uncle (Richard Dreyfuss).

". . . Ever notice there's something wrong with everyone on pop's side of the family?" 15-year-old Jay Kurnitz (Brad Stoll) asks his 13-year-old brother Arty (Mike Damus). "Mom told me that."

The two boys, sent by their recently widowed father Eddie (Jack Laufer) to live with the unforgiving Grandma Kurnitz while he pursues a job opportunity in the South, learns how right mom was. What they learn will change their lives.

Grandma owns a candy store and comes from the old European tradition of, "You will obey, you will work hard." She teaches the boys the hard lessons life has taught her, but not the compassion that makes them bearable.

Their Uncle Louie (Richard Dreyfuss), a tough-talking gangster, who learned the hard truths of survival from Grandma, will give them lessons in larceny.

Uncle Louie is in trouble with this hoodlum, Hollywood Harry (Robert Guy Miranda), from whom he's stolen money. The ability to defy danger — whether from a gangster or Grandma — is what Louis teaches the boys; that's something they've never seen in their father and didn't know existed.

"They're enamored of him, and he's a romantic figure in their eyes," said director Martha Coolidge. "They don't realize he's a third-rate gangster."

Eccentric and childlike Aunt Bella (Mercedes Ruehl), who has a learning disability, and was over-protected by her mother, will teach the boys the most amazing lesson of all — how to generate and sustain love in an atmosphere where it has never been permitted to exist.

Presented by Rastar Productions and Columbia Pictures, "Lost in Yonkers" is based on Neil Simon's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, produced by Ray Stark and directed by Coolidge from Simon's screenplay.

The executive producer is Joseph M. Caracciolo. Emanuel Azenberg is co-producer.

"I'm always trying to find the human comedy in whatever I write," Simon said. "In this, the boys provide a lot of it because they're sort of the Greek chorus who look at the family from the outside and say, 'What a crazy bunch.'"

Other characters Jay and Arty encounter include Bella's mentally slow beau, Johnny (David Strathairn), who works as an usher at a movie theater where Bella makes regular escapist expeditions, and their speech-impaired Aunt Gert (Susan Merson).

"Jay is a nervous guy who wants to make everything all right and take care of Arty," Stoll said. "He's a lot like his father. He also looks like his mother, which is one reason why Grandma really picks on him and treats him so badly. She didn't get along with his mother too well."

"Arty is almost the complete opposite of Jay," Damas said. "He's very laid back, doesn't have many worries. He's very sheltered by Jay, who also keeps him from getting in trouble."

JOHN MONAGHAN

The exaggerated hand gestures, wire-rimmed glasses and fragmented speeches recall George Bush. The sexual appetite, however, is strictly John F. Kennedy.

When President Bill Mitchell suffers a stroke while dallying with a pretty young aide, the White House staff is anxious to cover it up. They hire look alike nobody Dave Kovic to temporarily step into the oval office.

While the spin is slightly different, "Dave" offers only mildly entertaining presidential hijinks. There's little here that you haven't seen before.

Actor Kevin Kline resurrects another Hollywood version of the wide-eyed everyman, the Mr. Smith who finds himself in a Washington rife with waste and corruption. One person can make a difference, movies like this say, and Dave is up to the task at hand.

With Dave in charge, popularity polls soar. Where President Mitchell could have cared less about homeless shelters in the past, he now appears to show great compassion.

With the help of an accountant friend, Dave finds $650 million in the budget to help fund a homeless bill.

"Who does these books?" the friend asks while perusing the budget. "If I ran my accounting office like this, I'd be out of business."

Directed by Ivan "Ghostbusters" Reitman, "Dave" works because it does exactly what Ross Perot still harps on. It puts government in the hands of the little guy who, after replacing bureaucratic red tape with old-fashioned common sense, can actually get something done.

Kevin Kline, whose bland theatricality has always irritated me, screams oddball sincerity in every shot. His Dave knows presidential speeches by heart, yet he's naive enough to be strung along by an evil Chief of Staff (Frank Langella) who has his own sights set on the top position.

In one of the few funny gags, aides brief Dave over breakfast on the fundamentals of his executive power. A large sign marked "YOU" at the top splits down into the different branches of government.

Sigourney Weaver was born to play the First Lady and she registers passionate hatred for her husband. When she discovers the masquerade, the movie stops dead in its tracks with a predictably plotted love story and climax.

One of the few surprises in "Dave" comes from spotting the celebrity cameos, probably the largest number in a movie since "The Player." Arnold Schwarzenegger, Jay Leno, Larry King, and Oliver Stone all appear, along with actual senators and news media people.

"Dave," which has already proved successful in its opening weekend, is probably too good-natured to write off completely. Look elsewhere, however, if you want some real fun in the White House. "Dave" delivers toothless, not biting, political satire.

Now showing at these suburban theaters: AMC Abbey, AMC Old Orchard, AMC Wonderland, AMC Southfield City, AMC Laurel Park, Showcase Westland, Star Rochester.

Children's show features local talent

■ 'Raggedy Ann and Andy' is directed by Jeffrey Weiner of Farmington Hills, and Cindy Zeltz of Canton.

The Cotton Candy Theatre Kids of Northville's historic Marquis Theatre at 135 E. Main Street, will be entertaining young audiences with the presentation of "Raggedy Ann and Andy," by Patricia Thackray, May 15 through June 19.

Performance dates and times are — 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturdays May 15, 22, 29 and June 5, 12 & 19, and 2:30 p.m. Sundays May 16 and 23, 2:30 p.m.

Tickets are $5. For ticket information call 349-8110. To arrange for special school performance times and rates, call 349-8110. Children under the age of 3½ will not be admitted.

America's most beloved folk dolls come to life in this fun-filled story. Babette, a French, porcelain doll has been kidnapped from the playroom by the Loonies! Babette is Marcella's surprise birthday present and she must be returned. To search for her, Raggedy Ann & Andy venture bravely into Looneyland.

"Raggedy Ann and Andy" is directed by Jeffrey Weiner of Farmington Hills, and Cindy Zeitz of Canton. Featured in the cast Carla Freshwater (Raggedy Ann) and Cindy Gontko of Canton; Meghan Nisch and Robyn Ellison of Plymouth, Ed Lendrum, Emily Liddel, Julia Siciliano, Anna Bonde, Allison Johnson and Erin Martell of Livonia; and Kalli Fortune of Farmington Hills.

The Marquis Theatre is also offering professional theater training at their summer day camps, for children ages 5-16.

Classes will be taught in acting, voice, movement and audition technique.

Two week sessions will be held June 21 through August 20.

through three states around the Ohio River Valley — Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana — before finishing on the Sony Pictures lot in Culver City, Calif., on Oct. 16.

"We looked at Yonkers, as well as some other places in and around New York," said executive producer Caracciolo. "But there were more buildings that had the architecture of that era, without modern buildings either obstructing or in the background, in the Ohio-Kentucky region. It also had the terrain and the river, which we doubled for the Hudson."

Another important set was the theater where Johnny works and Bella goes to escape the severity of life with Grandma. They chose the historic Murphy Theatre, built in 1918 in Wilmington, Ohio.

"We actually went to the National Historic Register of Theatres," said production designer David Chapman. "We found the Murphy and then fell in love with the town of Wilmington. We wanted Wilmington to represent 'Uptown' where Bella goes to get away from the dreariness of her own neighborhood."

Starts Friday at these suburban theaters: AMC Laurel Park, AMC Maple, AMC Wonderland, AMC Southfield City, Star Rochester, AMC Abbey, Showcase Westland.

Mark Minken's turn as the over-worked, out-of-his-head stagehand is straight out of Tex Avery.

And last, but certainly not least, is Val Sisto's boozy actor as a slothlike, philosophizing burglar. Sisto gives the most eccentric and engaging performance seen on the PTG stage this season.

Through three decisive acts, the PTG cast takes you on a ride as memorable as it is thrilling. It's a season closer rivaling the best metro area has to offer.

Kris Spencer of Birmingham is a freelance writer who specializes in arts and entertainment.

"Small manufacturers probably have the biggest need," Cole said. "Maybe he got tired of working for someone else, put his own shop together and has three or four people working for him. No one told him what to do.

"Part of what we're running into when you get down to very small companies is they don't know they have to have a documented safety plan," he said. "We're trying to get across that they must have a plan.

"Are they going to be visited by MIOSHA? Probably not. But if someone files a complaint or there's an injury, they could have an occupational safety officer at their door," Cole said.

A plan for safety

A safety plan must address how an employer will provide a safe work place including attention to Michigan's right to know law on hazardous materials.

"We found there's a lot less education about safety than we expected to find," Cole said. "We have to get education out first before they get to the point where they want to talk about doing business.

"Somehow or another, safety got tagged that it's an expensive thing to do, it costs a lot of money," he said. "Some people just can't be bothered. One willful violation and the minimum fine is $5,000 and willful is considered to mean that you know a condition exists and allow it to continue."

Overhead is fairly low, so the principals don't feel pressured to expand too quickly.

"We'll let it grow as big as the market demands," Cole said. "We went to a Wayne State University seminar. One thing they caution you about is not to grow too fast.

"We'll bring in office people to handle the office end, people to go out and work with people. We'd like to hire a full-time marketing person," he said. "We'll let it happen when it gets here."

And eventually get out of the house and into an office, Hanson said.

Safety seminars and industrial accident investigations also were identified by the principals as areas for potential growth.

Russell said he has no problem with businesses doing their own safety programs, but figures that more often than not he and Cole can do it better.

"That's our expertise — to read and give them a better understanding of their particular type work," Russell said. "We have the expertise to make that go a lot easier and faster."

"I know there are consultants out there who will train what's in (safety) standards, but they don't follow through and do a specialized program like we do," Hanson said.

SUBURBAN BUSINESS LEADERS

Amy Plassins, of Livonia has been named a leading district sales manager for 1992 by I.C. System, Inc., a national collection agency.

Plassins ranked twelfth in I.C. System's President's Sales Club.

The rankings are determined by sales volume, number of sales and collection fees derived from their accounts.

Plassins has represented I.C. System since May 1991. TMs was the first Awards Banquet to which she has been invited. Plassins has also earned an Honor Roll for a monthly sales performance.

Livonia representative Dennis A. Wallot, CFP, regional vice president Frank Kenny, district managers James Tillman, Larry Lumsden, and account executive Russell Navarre, attended the Money Concepts International Financial Planning Congress recently where Wallot was a featured speaker due to his outstanding achievements the past year.

Kenneth R. Hale, CIC, owner of Cambridge Underwriters of Livnia, has been elected a member of the board of governors of the society of Certified INsurance Counselors, a national not-for-profitorganization dedicated to professional insurance education.

Lori A. Buhl of Sporrs Florists and Green Houses in Plymouth has been certified as a senior designer by Florists' Transworld Delivery Association. Achieving certification means Buhl has completed flower identification and design style identification tests, and passed a series of tests requiring the design of specific floral arrangements from predetermined categories.

Paul Martin, Pella sales representative in Livonia, has been recognized as a Pella Most Valuable Performer for outstanding sales and customer satisfaction.

Auto investing is risky — want to buy an MG?

AUTO TALK

DAN McCOSH

With the Meadowbrook Concourse D'Elegance only a couple of months away, I note that the price of a vintage Ferrari has dropped a million or so, according to a note in the Wall Street Journal.

This is bad news for Ferrari owners, but good news for the possum living in my garage.

The possum built a nest out of twigs he dragged in and tucked them behind the SU carburetors on my vintage MG. This was discovered the other day when my daughter opened the hood to show the SU carburetors to a friend.

The possum snarled, apparently feeling he was unlikely to be disturbed, considering the declining market for vintage cars. My daughter screamed.

I considered giving the possum the book on how to adjust the SU carburetors, figuring he had as good a chance as anybody to figure it out.

The MG is the last in a long series of cars I have owned with the thought in the back of my mind that they would be worth a lot of money some day. So far, I have not put down $3 million for a $10,000 Ferrari and watched it drop to a paltry $2 million. I have been more likely to invest an amount in the high three figures in something like a Corvair Greenbriar van, with low miles that runs good. This is a classic, of sorts, which by its scarcity should have surpassed the Ferrari long ago.

The problem with keeping a good Corvair running is getting parts, just like the Ferrari.

My main problem was the fan belt that is about 12 feet long and runs everything on the car, including the cooling fan. The Greenbriar was eventually towed away, and I think I had to pay for that, setting a pattern that seems to have continued to this day.

A Fiat 128; a Volkwagen squareback sedan (the only old VW that nobody is interested in nowadays); a 1971 Pinto; and of course the Gucci Concord squareback were among the vehicles I have owned that never seemed to catch on with the Meadowbrook Concourse D'Elegance crowd.

Then again, there is the MG.

It was a bargain to begin with, since I bought it from a mechanic who had towed it out into a field after it was half-repaired and the owner had died. My wife and I rebuilt the engine in the kitchen sink of a small apartment we were renting at the time, since we were both suffering from a serious case of British sports car disease.

Actually, we drove it for years, back in the days when holding a hand-held window squeegee out the side curtain was an acceptable substitute for an operating window wiper. It started pretty well with a crank, and holding your hand straight up in the air was then legal as a way of indicating that you had applied the brakes.

It was sort of retired to the garage a couple of houses ago. It seems to follow us, like a cat you leave on a country road that never gets the point. We have towed it to two storage sheds, never under its own power.

Regardless, I understand that MGs are a good investment, unlike the risk inherent in Ferraris. Meanwhile, the possum is getting covered with oil from the leaks, and I am considering getting him one of those caps with the belt in the back, if he decides to stick around.

Be Safe

Duo rings off Bell for job safety firm

■ A pair of former Michigan Bell employees are hoping businesses will put their money where their mouths are when it comes to safety issues.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

It's not state and federal inspectors who present the greatest financial threat to businesses with unsafe working conditions.

It's injuries on the job, loss of productivity and the possibility of higher insurance premiums that cause bigger and more lasting headaches.

That's the conclusion of Michael E. Cole and Frank E. Russell, former Michigan Bell employees who are principals in a fledgling consulting firm, Be Safe Inc.

Cole, 44, a Troy resident, worked at the phone company for 24 years, most recently in technical training. Russell, 52, of Canton, served 26 years, most recently in corporate safety.

Both accepted job buyouts a year and a half ago and went into business for themselves.

"A lot of people figure safety programs take a horrendous amount of time," Cole said. "You can make it take a lot of time, so overbearing, that you have a body to throw at it full time.

"If properly presented, we think we can get people working safely on the job and off the job," he added.

Said Russell: "I really believe that no company has the intention of getting their employees hurt."

$20,000 and a dream

The partners pooled about $20,000 from their buyout packages to start the business, purchasing computers, facsimile machines, beepers and safety standard books.

They currently have an office in Cole's house.

Cole and Russell found a guinea pig in Lesnau Printing while pulling their business plans together and still working for Bell.

"We were trying to get a feel for how much time is involved in each phase of the project," Cole said. "What we ended up with is a generic package, all the little pieces you would need to implement a program, train people.

"All material went right into a word processor. It will always be customized," he said.

The basic four-point plan consists of an on-premises safety review, correcting violations in the work place, development of a written safety plan, and, if necessary, a training phase.

Costs vary greatly depending on the scope of the job, Cole said. A simple walk-through safety inspection at a small factory could start at about $250, a written safety plan at $2,000-$3,000.

MCI got the ball rolling

Russell and Cole picked up their first and, so far, biggest client, MCI, just before launching their business. MCI acquired Western Union and had no experience in manhole safety, Cole said.

The two heard about that development through the professional grapevine, made a presentation and got the job.

Last year, while working out the bugs and scavenging for clients, Be Safe had sales between $30,000 and $40,000, Cole said. The goal this year is $150,000-$200,000.

The firm has pitched proposals to a soap distribution company in Brighton, a pipe supply company in Livonia and a plastics company in Marine City.

"We do some cold calling, radio advertising, word of mouth. We're in networking committees," said Cindy Hanson, Cole's wife and the only other person currently involved in the firm.

They also attend trade shows, advertise in business specialty publications and mail out brochures.

Even though their first client was a giant, the prime target group is job shops with a small employee base.

Conference aims to take mystery out of exporting

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Exporting services don't have to be a mysterious or gut-wrenching experience, as a one-day conference on selling in foreign markets will try to explain.

With Canada just a short drive away from the Observer & Eccentric coverage area, it may be worthy of look-see and the $95 registration fee.

The conference, scheduled 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday at the Radisson Hotel Pontchartrain in Detroit, is co-sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration, Comerica Bank, Central Business District Association and AT&T Commercial Markets.

"We're not closing the door on anybody, but it's kind of targeted to women business owners who have a service business," said John O'Gara, an international trade officer with the Small Business Administration.

"Typically, you would characterize an exporter as a manufacturer with an end product. It's appropriate for services as well," he said, identifying architectural and environmental evaluation services as two possibilities.

"It's not really a mystery, it's fear of the unknown," O'Gara said of the exporting process. "It's a foreign country, a foreign culture — how do you get paid?

"If you look at it all at once, it looks formidable. What you have to do is take it in pieces. There's steps you go through. It need not be more difficult from domestic business," O'Gara said.

Women have made strides, but still have a way to go in the business world, said Diane Edgecomb, president of the Central Business District Association.

"I don't feel there are a lot of new jobs coming out in the future," she said. "Women have to become independent themselves.

"I think this gives women the opportunity to do things they might not have felt possible before. This allows the opportunity to become a trader. Global thinking is just as important as domestic thinking. You can't isolate yourself," Edgecomb said.

Export woes? Doing business across the Ambassador Bridge or any other border doesn't have to be tough duty. A seminar sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration offers useful tips.

Morning concurrent seminars include "Learning to Go International: Seven Steps to Exporting;" "Easy Entry to Mexico and Canada: How Will NAFTA Affect the Service Industries;" and "How to Benefit from Trade Shows and Missions."

Concurrent afternoon seminars include "Getting in Touch with the World: Methods of Communicating with Your Customers;" "Selling Abroad: Creating a Presence in the Global Market;" and "Bridging the Cultural Gap."

A panel discussion during breakfast will feature business owners who have successfully exported their services.

During lunch, Florine Mark, president of WW Group headquartered in Farmington Hills, will share her experiences of entering the Mexican market with the Weight Watchers program.

"I plan to talk about what not to do when you go to a foreign country," Mark said. "I was very successful in the U.S. I was going to take everything I know and do it there. It didn't work until I learned the culture, understood the people.

"We are different and we have to understand and respect each others' differences," Mark said. "I think learning the language is very important."

All attendees will participate in a closing session "Putting it All Together: Creating an Export Plan," "Preparing for Tax Implications and Learning Financial Options."

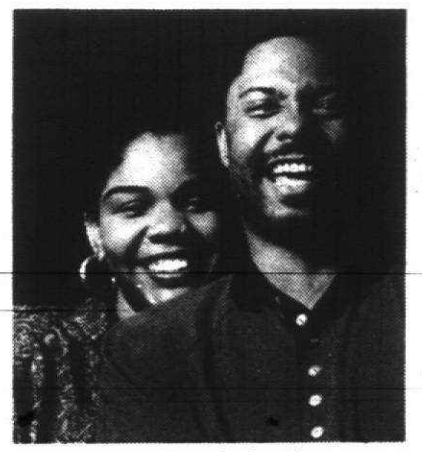
A reception and informal networking session will cap the day.

People may register by contacting Darsi Martin of the CBDA at 961-1403 during business hours.

"We estimate that 40-45 percent of all small businesses by the year 2000 will be woman owned," O'Gara said. "Typically, women-owned businesses are service type business.

"I think there's something there for anyone with something to export," he said of the conference. "If we could get 100 and 80 percent are bonafide business owners there, I think we'd be hitting our mark."

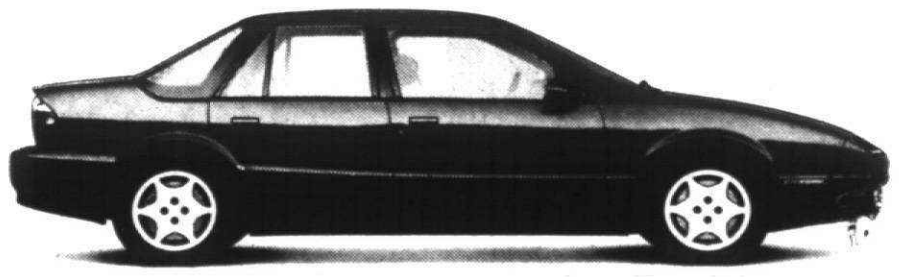
Fifteen dealerships into their search for a new car, BARRY AND CYNTHIA NELSON felt like throwing in the towel.



Then someone suggested us. Because our prices are about the same as the imports they'd seen. So the Nelsons dropped into our showroom, prepared for the worst. (If you've ever shopped for a new car, you probably know what they felt like.)

But the showroom staff took the Nelsons completely by surprise. No pressure. No gimmicks. Just the service you might expect from someone you've known for a long time.

Which, Barry and Cynthia say, is how long they plan to know us.



*The Saturn SL2—one of the main reasons people find their way to a Saturn showroom. Usually because they see one, and then find out the price. It's our top-of-the-line sedan, and it starts at only $11,595.

'Good' talk: 2-way street with children

How well do you communicate with your child? If you're a child care professional, do you tell children what to do rather than what not to do?

Using do's and don'ts is quite difficult especially if adults already have the "don't" habit. Using do's versus don'ts require practice and a concentrated effort to impact children in a more positive way.

Think about it really. Too many don'ts implies to a child, or anyone for that matter, that "I can't do anything right;" "I'm not expected to do anything right;" and "You lack trust in my judgment."

When communicating with children, talk to them as if you're talking to a friend.

Communicating will be more effective if adults view children as unique thinking individuals versus little kids who have little to say . . . little thinking capabilities.

Adults should put thought and consideration into their conversations with a child. The improvement of your relationship with your child or other people's children make it worth it. Let's discuss the do's and don'ts further. Here's a few examples:

(1) Don't talk with your mouth full, or better yet, chew your food first, swallow and then talk.

(2) Don't eat all the bread, or better yet, you can have two slices.

(3) Don't color on the kitchen table, or better yet, you can color on this sheet of paper.

Another winning way to communicate with a child is simply listening. Try it; you might like it. Practice it. Gain from it. Children know when you're not really listening. Your "ah-huh, oh really," weak nods, no eye contact and body language — facial expressions — tell all. The conversation is then one-sided and the child doesn't receive the proper feedback from the so-called "receiver."

The child may feel unimportant at the time and/or what he or she has to say means little to the adult. Listen attentively. Get rid of the distractions, if possible, and pay attention.

You can turn a child off, especially teenagers, by making the mistake of pretending to listen, when, in fact, you're just hearing. When this happens, the "on" button of a teenager may be harder to reach the next time.

Here are five more effective communication commandments to remember when talking to children:

(1)First Commandment — Avoid talking at young people like "Pick up your mess," "Get a hair cut," "You need to do it this way." Instead talk with the child. Too many directives frequently turn into one-sided conversations. You then may be viewed by a child as an authoritarian, a bully. Just because "you can," doesn't necessarily mean you should.

(2) Second Commandment — Criticize less. Criticizing or correcting a child's style or manner in which they present information tears down self-expression.

Children who are creative express themselves in a variety of ways. These children are most likely to try new things and be leaders and good problem solvers. Criticizing is a negative, but positive encouragement and guidance fits winning communication.

(3) Third Commandment — Avoid interrupting a child before they complete their thoughts. Listen, ask questions for clarification, listen some more. Respond — feedback. That's communicating.

(4) Fourth Commmandment — Use "I" messages to communicate your (adult) thoughts and feelings and "you" messages to help children reflect their ideas and feelings. For example, "You may feel sad because your bird died." "I need help cleaning the yard." When "you" messages are used inappropriately, it places blame and is directed at the person/child instead of the behavior that may need correcting.

(5) Fifth Commandment — Communicate real acceptance. When a child knows that you accept them as they are, not being judgmental, but fair and loving, then chances are greater for the child to count on your being receptive.

Remember, if a sender sends a verbal message and it is not received by the receptor, it has not been properly communicated or the person and the receiving end is turned off.

High-tech gem has local glow

In the three months since opening at the Gem Theater, "The Rudy Coby Show" has developed a cult following. Good news for former Redford resident Steve Altman who not only performs in the show but created its musical score.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Comedian and former Redford resident Steve Altman hoped to sneak into town and perfect his role in "The Rudy Coby Show" before telling friends and family about it.

Perhaps a sign of things to come, Coby's show, which was making its world premiere here, received so much hype before it started that it was impossible to keep the secret.

"I didn't want to tell anyone . . . (but) it really came together great," Altman said.

Three months after the high-tech magic show debuted, "The Rudy Coby Show" is still selling out at the Gem Theatre in Detroit, elevating it to cult status. Last week its run was extended until the end of June and recently the Gem ended a midnight show.

"What's amazing is it's become like the 'Rocky Horror Picture Show.' People see it over and over and over again," Coby said.

In the show's loosely based plot, Coby plays the big-haired "Lab Man," a scientist/magician who accidentally cuts in half his assistant "Nikki Terminator," played by Kristine Bonds of Southfield. Outside of the plot, Coby performs magic tricks with the rest of the cast, while Altman performs digital comedy with his keyboard.

Paul Ebejer, formerly of West Bloomfield, plays Elfis; former "Head of the Class" star Daniel Rosen juggles myriad of items including a "Swiss Army Cat;" Karen Remijan plays Miss Modern; Robert W. Self, who helped develop the TV movies "Sarah Plain and Tall" and "Skylark," is the Hentchman; and John Simone plays the lab assistant. (Rosen is leaving the show at the end of May.)

The three former or current locals — Ebejer, Altman and Bonds — play key roles in the show.

Coby met Altman and Ebejer while travelling with his one-man mod magic show. Ebejer was touring with his midget "Quiddlers" show. Altman, who wrote all the music for "The Rudy Coby Show," was doing stand-up comedy using strange and some familiar noises programmed in his keyboard.

Coby called Altman, a "late 20th century" graduate of St. Mary's High School, one of the major stars in his show.

"He is a genius. He will be a major, major star. He's brilliant. All the music is original." Coby said. "It's like watching a Warner Bros. cartoon live."

When the show ends its run, Altman's planning to return to California to finish recording a CD of the songs included in his comedy act and an hour-long video.

A Gem Theatre veteran, Bonds was discovered while rehearsing for the "All Night Strut!" in her dressing room. Coby and his manager immediately pegged the graduate of Our Lady of Mercy High School in Farmington Hills as "Nikki Terminator." He even rounded up her father, newsman Bill Bonds, to make a cameo appearance in the show.

"He absolutely loved it," Bonds said of her father's reaction to the show.

Apparently, however, Bill Bonds still doesn't realize his daughter's a cut-up, so to speak.

"My dad, he thinks that I could be doing something else," she said grinning.

Ebejer turned his boredom in class at Oakland University in Rochester to create his midget act. Doodling it in class, he went home, acted it out and realized the gag was feasible.

"The class was worth something," he said with a laugh.

Since then, he's appeared on television and stage worldwide, including Monte Carlo, Paris, Tokyo (where he first met Coby), Spain, Germany, Montreal and Hollywood.

Families are first for Family First

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Hulda Piercecchi has a deep, abiding concern about the family — hers and others. As she sees it, the family is the basic unit of society and the strength of the nation rests on the strength of its families.

Maybe that's why she's sees little greatness in the society envisioned by then President Lyndon Johnson in his social reforms of the '60s, referred to as "The Great Society."

"We had the Great Society with LBJ; it was going to eliminate poverty," but when government gets involved, it only gets worse. This (Great Society) has produced this (today's society), with children having children."

Piercecchi might be considered radical by some in that her views, steeped in tradition, are contrary to the more liberal "do your own thing" fostered in the '60s. In fact, she has on occasion been called that, but name calling hasn't changed her beliefs. It's family first, the same name of the metro Detroit organization she presides over.

The Livonia resident became interested in preserving the family in the 1970s when she took a stand against the Equal Rights Amendment. When she read the proposed amendment, Piercecchi saw it to mean that "men wouldn't have to be responsible for child support." Her response was to form Women Against ERA.

"It appeared to me to be an onslaught against the family," said Piercecchi who has two children and four grandchildren. "The whole thrust was rights rather than responsibility, do your own thing rather than have a concern for the family and society."

Surgeon foregoes 'luxury' to treat Pacific islanders

No hotels. No restaurants. No electricity or running water. Not your idea of the perfect vacation?

Well, for more than two weeks dentist Dr. Robert Weaver and 15 others experienced a lack of luxury on a mission to the State of Chunk, remote South Pacific islands in Micronesia.

It was the first medical team from the United States to visit the islands.

"There weren't even any showers or bathrooms," said Weaver, a St. Mary Hospital oral surgeon.

But roughing it is nothing new for Weaver. The son of Wayne State University head and neck surgeon Dr. Arthur Weaver, he has been on missions with his family since he was a boy.

"Every year we used to do a mission project as a family," Weaver said. "Dad saw a brochure on this particular mission, so I called and asked if they needed an oral surgeon."

■ 'Every year we used to do a mission project as a family. Dad saw a brochure on this particular mission, so I called and asked if they needed an oral surgeon.'

Dr. Robert Weaver

Canvasback Missions of San Bernadino, Calif., organized the mission, then the group of health care professionals flew to the island of Moen where they boarded a catamaran and sailed to the remote islands of Chunk State. Mission members included three physicians, Dr. Weaver and his wife, Jeanie, a health educator, a general dentist, dental coordinator, medical coordinator, several nurses, a captain, engineer and cook.

The dentists had no X-ray equipment or suction, and only local anesthetic was available. Yet, Weaver extracted 268 teeth in seven hours one day. Each member of the mission saw between 100 and 120 patients a day.

The most common ailments were middle ear infections, intestinal parasites, fungal infections, multiple cavities and abscessed teeth, foreign objects in the feet and adult onset diabetes.

Health education provided to the islanders focused on tooth brushing and general hygiene. Everyone on the island received a toothbrush. All children were evaluated first, then the more critical adults and lastly clinic patients with more general medical complaints. Immunizations were also performed on the children.

The goal of the missions is to establish a clinic with a local medical officer at each of the 23 islands in Micronesia.

"We want them to be self-sufficient medically in five years," Weaver explained.

After sleeping on a catamaran for three weeks and attempting to eat the unusual dishes prepared on the islands, this particular mission was an experience he will never forget.

Last year Weaver was part of a mission to Montserrat, one of the Leeward Islands in the Caribbean. But the mission to the South Pacific took him to the most remote area he has visited. "It was 22 hours flying time," he recalled.

The trip was rewarding because of the amazing courage of the islanders, many whom had never seen a dentist or doctor.

"I treated more than 500 children, and I would say that less than five shed a tear," he said. "They were so thankful."

LORENE GREEN

Dear Mrs. Green,

I am 30 years old, soon to be 31 years old. I have been married for four years. I have no children and not planning on having any children at all. Although I do have a cat which I spoil like a child. I have recently moved into the Westland area.

Since I have received the Observer I have read your column. I think it's very interesting on how you can analyze someone's handwriting. I'm very interested in what you have to say about my handwriting. Thank you and have a nice day.

Scanning today's handwriting we see a young woman who is a practical thinker with intelligence that promotes efficiency and maturity. She can rid herself of extraneous details and then see and act on the essentials.

In her work she likes good equipment. She can readily adapt to products that help her do the job better.

Our writer is self-directed. Her mind is well organized and she can plan ahead. I doubt if we'll ever hear her say "But this is the way we have always done it."

When getting started, she is a little cautious or hesitant at times. However, once into a task, she is a productive worker who concentrates on getting it done in the most effective manner.

At times she can be a little defensive, also decisive. She appears to be rejecting from consciousness certain painful ideas, memories or feelings from the past. Some resentment toward a parental figure is suggested.

Our writer is hypersensitive to personal criticism. I think she received too much of it as a younger person and it has made her self-conscious. It has also caused her to imagine slights and hurts even when they aren't intended. This keeps her on guard with others much of the time. It also makes it difficult to develop long-term relationships with others.

She enjoys compliments and is rather susceptible to flattery.

When choosing friends she is selective and limits the number of people in whom she confides to a small number. She is cautious not to reveal things about her personal life that she does not wish others to know. And nosey people turn her right off.

I wonder if she is aware of the dominant manner she sometimes assumes with people. She has a very strong need to be in control.

This is an independent young woman. In some area(s), she seems to feel she has been more successful than her spouse.

She does not have to be surrounded by people all of the time. She needs time by herself to relax and develop her inner resources. Music probably furnishes enjoyment.

Tastes often lean toward things which are on the plain side. Frufru does not hold too much appeal for her.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. And feedback is always welcomed.

I want to thank Mrs. M. of Plymouth for her detailed feedback. I do appreciate the time you spent on it.

God and country

ERA failed to marshall the necessary state support and Piercecchi decided to switch gears, forming Family First, its philosophy based on the principles God, family and country.

Family First supports the Declaration of Independence and U.S. Constitution. It supports the right of families to practice the religion of their choice, noting that "cultivation of a religious atmosphere inspirers respect for law and order."

It believes that people owe their existence to a Creator and supports Holy Scriptures as the foundation of moral values. It defines family as those persons related by blood, adoption and marriage and affirms the traditional role of homemaker.

And in support of its philosophy, Family First actively lobbies for legislation beneficial to the family.

"There has been such a decline in the family," Piercecchi said. "Divorce is up and the fallout is the children. They've really suffered."

She points to article in April edition of "The Atlantic Monthly." Written by Barbara DaFoe Whitehead, it notes that 22 percent of children in single parent families will experience poverty during childhood for seven or more years, while the figure is 2 percent for children in two-parent families.

Family First has some 200 members and a mailing list of 125. Most of the members come from throughout the metro area while the mailing lists reaches supporters living in Lansing and areas further north.

The age of the membership is varied and both men and women belong. The group meets at Grand River Baptist Church on Six Mile Road in Livonia and has speakers who reflect its philosophy. Recent guests included Elaine Donnelly, a former member of the Defense Advisory Commission on Women in the Service, Women in Combat, and Anna Ebling, a Russian immigrant and researcher.

Ebling looked at American elections from Franklin Roosevelt through Ronald Reagan and found that over the years government has become more involved in people's lives, slowly leading the country down the road that Soviet Union just abandoned.

Favorite causes

Family First's conservative bent is reflected in other causes it supports. The group favors adoption over abortion — "There are one million families ready and waiting for babies," she said — and has taken to writing letters in support of the DeBoers, the Ann Arbor couple caught up in a legal battle over adoption of their two-year-old daughter.

The group also supports the work of Molly Kelly who travels around the country, speaking to young people about sex respect. Kelly's approach is that if you want the teenage birth rate to drop, you have to tell children what not to do, Piercecchi said.

Piercecchi has been a family activist for so long that it has become a part of her life. Like her husband, she is active in the Republican party and each is supportive of the other's interests.

"When we did the ERA thing, people saw it as a matter of women's rights, but now they see the feminists as radicals," she said. "I think there's a large element of the population that needs a voice and we're (Family First) their voice."

Family First meets at the Grand River Baptist Church on Six Mile between Farmington and Newburgh roads, Livonia. Child care is available. For more information on meeting days and times, call 591-1980.

His character, a midget Elvis, is perfect for Coby's show, he said.

"What I do is so weird that I blend in very easily," Ebejer explained about his act.

Throughout the show, Coby and his cast of eight share some of their magic secrets with the audience. Coby, who has performed in 40 different countries, admits some of his tricks are perfect for scaring parents. After all, he got his start startling his parents with "deep wounds" in his neck and other parts of his body.

"The show will fool people. We use goofy visuals. It's so goofy we go right up to the goofy limit," Coby said.

"It's like 'Ren and Stimpy' live."

The Rudy Coby show continues at the Gem Theatre, 58 E. Columbia St., Detroit, through the end of June. Show times and prices vary. Call 963-9800 for more information.

Judges' benefit helps First Step

They'll be singing the blues at St. Andrew's Hall Thursday, May 20, and for a good reason. It's the second annual Judges Against Domestic Violence benefit for First Step, the Western Wayne County Project on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault.

The benefit begins at 5:30 p.m. at St. Andrew's, 431 E. Congress, Detroit, and will feature the music a leading Detroit rock and blues band. There will be hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. The tax-deductible tickets are $20 in advance and $25 at the door.

Thirty-five judges from the area are serving as honorary guests for the event, including Carolyn Archbold of Wayne, C. Charles Bokas of Westland, Richard Hammer Jr. of Garden City and Gail McKnight of Westland.

The First Step Board of Directors believe that domestic violence can be prevented by providing critical support services to victims and by increasing community awareness of the problem. Hopes are that the event will increase that awareness throughout the legal community while raising needed funds for First Step's continued operation.

"Domestic violence is a common problem in our society," said board member Kelly Machado. "Fifty percent of the 47 million couples in the U.S. will experience violence in their relationship at least once — a woman is assaulted in her home every 15 seconds.

"Battering is the single most common cause of injury to women, exceeding rapes, muggings and automobile accidents. Twenty percent of all emergency room hospital visits are domestic violence related."

All components of the criminal justice system, including police, prosecutors and judges have a critical role to play in deterring domestic violence, according to the National Woman Abuse Prevention Project. Unfortunately, the system's traditional response has been one of non-intervention unless severe injury or death was involved.

Reflecting the general attitude held by society, the system viewed domestic violence as a private family problem, not a criminal issue. Offenders were rarely arrested or convicted of their crimes, and victims received little, if any, protection or support.

In recent years, however, the system has begun to take a tougher stance against domestic violence. The current trend is toward the arrest and prosecution of offenders. These changes are largely the result of the efforts of the battered women's movement, which continues to pressure the system into ensuring justice for domestic violence victims.

In 1984, the report of the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence reaffirmed the need for an improved criminal justice response to domestic violence, stating: "The legal response to family violence must be guided primarily by the nature of the abusive act, not the relationship between the victim and the abuser."

First Step provides support services to families experiencing violence in the 35 communities of western Wayne County, including a 24-hour crisis line, temporary emergency shelter, free legal representation, individual and family counseling, support groups and assistance with legal, financial, housing and educational information and referrals.

Tickets for the benefit are available by sending a check, payable to First Step, to 8381 Farmington Road, Westland 48185. For more information, call 525-2230.

Many churches teach that a person must put their faith in Christ in order to be saved. However, the Bible teaches that faith is a fruit or result of the Spirit of God (Gal. 5:22). If a man has faith in God, it is because he is ALREADY indwelt by the Spirit of God and is ALREADY a saved child of God (Rom. 8:14 & I Cor. 12:3). If you would like to learn more about the true purpose of faith, come worship with us on Sunday.

Churches' 'I do' proves successful

By Diane Hanson
Special Writer

Significant adjustments are sometimes necessary when two people get married and begin their life together. If one moves into the other's already established household, the adjustments can become more difficult and involved . . . "Let's use my toaster, it doesn't hum the toast like yours . . . I know you love that chair but it's such an eyesore . . . It would be easier if we stored the pots and pans down here."

Now, just imagine the marriage of 120 people from one congregation to 120 people from another congregation and you have some idea of what it was like for Sword of the Spirit Lutheran Church and Ascension Lutheran Church, both of Livonia, when they merged nearly two years ago.

"It's like a marriage. There has to be openness and acceptance on both sides," explained J. Philip Wahl, bishop of the Southeast Michigan Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America.

Wahl was the celebrant for the dedication ceremonies April 25 for the new Emmanuel Lutheran Church which resulted from the merger. Emmanuel is now one of 153 congregations in the 11 counties under Wahl's direction.

"I feel great," he said. "They've come a long way from where this whole thing started."

Indeed, things looked pretty bleak for Sword of the Spirit when their church, on Seven Mile near Farmington Road burned down on Jan. 11, 1991, destroying almost everything.

The Rev. Walter Dickinson, pastor of Sword of the Spirit, and his congregation made overtures to Ascension and the Rev. Darwin Polesky, pastor, about the possibility of merging their respective and similar sized congregations. They began to worship together as a new congregation in July 1991 at the Ascension Church building.

As always, there were some families who left when the merger took place. After the "two became one," they were averaging around 170 members at worship service.

"Part of the reality is that today people are not as loyal to their denomination that they grew up with," Dickinson said. "They're more willing to look at alternatives. A whole different denomination.

Alternatives

"So, if you merge and they don't want to go that merger, they're willing to try a different denomination that's closer and meets their needs. They're not necessarily saying, 'if two Lutheran churches come together, we're going to stick with them.' "

While it's not always easy to do, merging can be a way for churches to survive from an economic viewpoint.

"There's a lot of mixed feelings about how that goes," said Dickinson. "People try anything to keep their own identity. I know that the Protestant churches, particularly the Methodists, have a lot that worship under 35 and 50 people at church.

"I heard a statistic that says to keep a congregation and a pastor there, you now have to have up to 120 people at least in worship. That is changing drastically because of the economics. Everything's more expensive, including a full-time pastor. So what's the alternative? Closing down, merging? I don't know."

Even though the two congregations voted to merge, the sailing wasn't always smooth. According to both pastors, there were some strained feelings on both sides when the Sword congregation moved into Ascension's building.

"Ascension people were saying, 'Who are these new people coming in here thinking they can get into my kitchen or to my working space or sit in my pew,' " recalled Dickinson. "And Sword people were saying, 'We almost feel uncomfortable. This is their place. Where are things kept? What are the rules here?' At meetings you would often hear, 'Well, we always did it this way. Well, who's we?' That kind of language makes it difficult for other people to feel comfortable."

Polesky agreed: "I think that was the hard part. People who had been former Ascension members were reluctant to let go of things and at the same time former Sword people were also reluctant to let go of things.

"In some ways we let go of things and in some ways we compromised."

New focus

The decision was then made to sell the old building where Ascension had been worshiping for 30 years and to build a new church on the land where the Sword of the Spirit had once stood. The name Emmanuel was chosen for the new church and the pastors began to witness a new atmosphere and focus for their congregation. A new sense of ownership began to emerge.

"A new building is a new focus; it's a new start," Polesky said. "Everybody's equal. Nobody can say, 'It's my church and not yours,' or 'This has been my building for 30 some years and now you're coming in here and taking it.' You can't say that anymore."

The congregation and the pastors are pleased with the beautiful new building with a seating capacity of 225. On the other hand, they are well aware of the fact that it is necessary to have more than comfortably upholstered chairs, bright, airy meeting rooms, a modern kitchen and a larger, cheery assembly hall to maintain and expand their congregation.

"You've got to be careful that it's not left to say that the building will be the attraction," Dickinson conceded. "We have to make the effort, not only to get people to join and to visit, but to keep them. It's one thing to have a nice new building, but it's another thing to have people come in there and feel that it's a warm, friendly environment to worship in. So we have to do that part of it. The building's not going to do that."

That effort is definitely being made. They have sent out an invitation in a mailer advertising package that goes to some 10,000 area homes. This is a relatively new concept for a church and they are hoping for some positive responses.

Many new homes are sprouting in the area surrounding the church and the pastors have already visited some of the new homes there as well.

Bishop Wahl has high hopes for the new Emmanuel Lutheran. There have been other very successful mergers.

"We had three congregations in Detroit that came together and formed one," he said. "They formed Genesis, maybe 10 years ago. Three very small city congregations came together and they've been self-supporting since they did that and they've got a very fine ministry going."

If the enthusiasm of both the pastors at Emmanuel and the warmth of the pastors and the congregation is any indication, Emmanuel has nowhere to grow . . . but up.

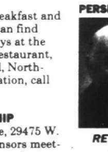
We need to connect for common good

MORAL PERSPECTIVES



REV. DAVID STRONG

■ How can this be other than God's will to affirm who we are and to live in peace with people different from us? The battle ground may appear to be Bosnia. The battle ground for this reality is right here in the metro Detroit area.

Often when I visit with my mother and her friends their conversation eventually comes around to the subject of Detroit. They speak about how wonderful a city Detroit used to be. They remember the shopping on Woodward Avenue. They speak of how busy and safe the streets were. They remember riding the streetcars.

When I leave them, I think of change. I think of the fact that none of these older people live in the homes in which they once lived. If they were to return to their homes of 50 years ago they would want to see changes. They would want the kitchen updated. They would discover that repairs and replacements must be made. They would want the community to be a safe and healthy place to be. They would simply not want to return to the past.

I hear suburban people say that they care about the city. Recently, I read a letter written by an artist who lives in Birmingham. She writes about Detroit and her hope for the city. There is a difference between having a positive feeling about Detroit and doing something about this feeling.

I believe that much good will exists between the city and the suburbs. I believe there are many people living outside of Detroit who care about the city. On the other hand, I see very few structures through which this connection is made real.

One of the reasons we need to connect is to make diversity a positive element in America again. We do not want a "melting pot" where everyone tries to look and act the same. We do not want racism, or cultural or religious domination. We do not want a Bosnia type war here between the cultures.

We seek a world of diversity and harmony in which to discover our connetedness. In spite of the fact that this is the most segregated area in the nation, I believe that diversity and peace are possible.

Churches, synagogues, temples, scouts, YMCA, YWCA and other community organizations can be the means to reconnect. I hear of signs of renewal among such organizations. When we look at the direction the world is taking, we must make our commitment where it is possible. We must contribute to a peaceful diversity.

How can this be other than God's will to affirm who we are and to live in peace with people different from us? The battle ground may appear to be Bosnia. The battle ground for this reality is right here in the metro Detroit area.

Those who have the most capacity to make the connection must make the first steps. Core city churches have many social programs which need help. Our congregation feeds people, provides clothing, prescriptions, a senior center, youth programs, legal aid for women, tutoring for children and youth, help for a public school near us, and a peace center and gallery. In all of these programs, we need more people and more money. This is true of most of the churches I know in the area. The most important part is people.

This can be a beginning. Our choir sings joint concerts with a suburban church. Are you a part of organizations which connect in such ways? Face-to-face encounters are needed. People to people connecting the core city and the suburbs is what will transform "my hope for the city" into reality.

We also need regional organizations which will make possible such interaction. Most of all we need political structures in which people from the whole region can participate. But religious institutions already exist which enable this cooperation.

These are difficult challenges. For too long we have looked out at the world far away and demanded that someone do something to stop the killing or the starvation. We can look closer to home and lay the essential groundwork for this wonderful combination of diversity and peace.

I look out upon my small flower garden in the middle of Detroit. It is bursting with the blooms of wild flowers, spring bulbs and flowering azaleas. My garden is a real joy. Each variety adds to the beauty of the garden. The most rare flowers give special joy. Yet the common ones are to be cherished as well. Is this view possible for Detroit and its area? You and I will decide.

How much did you lose last year on nondeductible interest?
8.50% APR.*
FIXED RATE
Maybe you've noticed it while getting your taxes ready. All the interest you've paid on consumer loans that's not deductible.
Well, now's the time to think of a strategy for next year's taxes. And consider borrowing against the equity in your home.
At First of America, we can lock you into a low fixed 8.50 percent APR loan with terms of up to 7 years. To make the offer even more attractive, all fees will be waived, so there will be no annual fee, appraisal fees, closing costs or points. And you'll have a fixed monthly payment that will never change.
The sooner you take advantage of it, the more you can save on financing home improvements, education, a car or anything else worthwhile. You can even refinance a loan that you have somewhere else.
Be sure to consult your tax advisor to make sure the interest is deductible.
We can give qualified applicants fast approval—usually within 24 hours. So stop by any First of America office or call 1-313-339-5644 to apply today. And make last year's nondeductible interest a thing of the past.

Foundation in works to benefit Greenmead

She chairs the Livonia Historical Commission.

So Sue Daniel often flirts with structural foundations during restoration work at Greenmead, a historical village boasting the Simmons/Hill farmstead and 14 relocated buildings. The main farmhouse, a museum since 1977, is the mid-19th-century home of Greenmead founder Joshua Simmons.

In light of citywide budget cuts, Daniel now is flirting with a different kind of foundation.

She's working with the Livonia Historical Society to create a historical foundation to supplement capital funding for Greenmead — an idea first floated in 1983. She hopes to present a final proposal to the full society by fall.

In 1989, the city sold 3½ of Greenmead's 98 acres to the U.S. Postal Service for $375,000. So far, the commission has spent $150,000 of that on improvements around the village.

That development windfall notwithstanding, this is the first year since the mid-'70s the commission also won't receive a capital allocation from the city general fund for Greenmead. In the past, it received up to $30,000 a year.

"We need to look for other means of funding," Daniel said. "It's as simple as that. I don't see things getting any better. I'm glad we've made as much progress as we have."

Multipurpose foundation

Daniel foresees a Greenmead Historical Foundation with three funds. An endowment fund would pay for programs and materials to teach kids about local history. A second such fund would cover major exhibits at the Simmons/Hills House Museum. The third fund, a capital fund, would help finance major restoration projects.

The historical commission has $60,000 in a development trust fund. But that cache will be gone quickly if forced to be Greenmead's main capital fund.

A historical foundation based partly on endowments would be supported by fund-raisers, mailings, a public appeal and corporate sponsorships.

"It's getting harder and harder for the city to support us. That's no complaint — the city's been very good to Greenmead. But money's getting scarcer all around so we've got to become more self-sufficient," said Livonia Historical Society president Marian Lynch.

Livonia Mayor Bob Bennett lauds the cooperative spirit between the historical commission and the historical society. But he reminds that a citizens committee is looking into forming a community foundation to help finance artistic, cultural and historical pursuits.

Still, two foundations might not duplicate efforts. "In terms of a community foundation's success in developing meaningful amounts of money for purposes of a trust, that remains to be seen, particularly in today's changing economy," Bennett said.

Since its founding in the '50s, the historical society has raised more than $100,000 for historical preservation and education. It's the leading fundraiser for Greenmead's costliest restoration, the Alexander Blue House, kicking in $88,000 so far.

Historians hope to turn that 143-year-old house into a self-supporting conference and meeting center and a reception hall for Newburg Church. Period furnishings will reflect 1880 Livonia Township.

Projected restoration costs for the two-story, 12-room house have spiraled to $500,000. Improvements so far have cost $73,000. This year, $55,000 is budgeted for floor, roof, wall, doorway, stair, porch and exterior improvements. Funding sources include Friends for Development of Greenmead, the historical society, the historical commission trust fund and contributions.

Meanwhile, restoration marches on at the Quaker Meeting House ($148,000), the Alexander Blue Office ($4,800) and the Newburg Church parsonage ($1,800). Facing stone is planned for the basement foundations of the Shaw and Kingsley houses ($15,200).

Farmstead facelift eyed

Future plans call for restoring the farmstead at upwards of $700,000. Work would include rebuilding the now-gone north corn crib and south carriage house, plus restoring the 1829 north barn, 1830s farmhands house, 1841 main farmhouse, north carriage house, greenhouse, caretakers cottage, chicken coop and garage.

To supplement the post office development fund, Mayor Bennett is preparing to ask the city council for permission to sell land adjacent to the Greenmead Post Office and ticket proceeds of at least $200,000 for Greenmead.

Daniel realizes a historical foundation won't develop overnight. But she's willing to wait it out:

"It's going to take a while, I know that. But I think, in the long run, a foundation is necessary. It's the only way we're going to make it. We'll start out slow, but eventually we'll get there."

Learn to develop a fictional plot that sells

■ While the seminar focuses on fiction, it will offer timely tips for writers in every genre.

"Plotting to Sell," something every writer thinks about as he or she puts each word on paper, is the subject of an important seminar for fiction writers Saturday, June 5, in the Oakland Center at Oakland University in Rochester Hills.

Co-sponsored by OU and Detroit Women Writers, the seminar begins with registration at 8:15 a.m. and closes at 4:45 p.m. It is open to the public. Luncheon is included in the $130 registration fee. For more information, call the OU Division of Continuing Education at 370-3120.

While the seminar focuses on fiction, it will offer timely tips for writers in every genre.

Keynote speaker is prominent author Elmore "Dutch" Leonard, longtime friend and mentor to aspiring writers.

Leonard's newest book, "Pronto," will be published by Delacorte in September, joining his impressive list of bestsellers, including "Get Shorty," "Glitz," "Freaky Deaky" and "Killshot." Leonard will discuss how he writes a novel: not knowing too far ahead what is going to happen and not wanting to know.

Other speakers at the seminar include Nancy Dibble, holder of three advanced degrees from The Writer's Workshop, who was a senior editor with Writer's Digest Books for more than six years.

Often writing under the pseudonym Ansen Dibell, and author of nine published books of fiction and nonfiction, her topselling book on the writing craft, "Plot," has sold more than 40,000 copies and been published in several foreign countries.

Among her fiction are the five-novel sci-fi series "The Rule of One" and her most recent novel, "Beyond Words, Beyond Silence," dealing with the much-loved TV series "Beauty and the Beast." Dibble will take the mystery out of "Writing the Mystery" for her audience.

Also on the literary docket is Anita Diamant, head of a New York literary agency representing more than 125 writers. Diamant handles book-length adult and young adult fiction and nonfiction as well as film, drama, TV and foreign rights to most markets. A graduate of New York University, Diamant has been an adjunct professor at Long Island University. She will talk about "Books That Sell."

Other speakers on this seminar's literary agenda include Bettie Cannon, who will discuss "Giving Form to Life," Kathe Koja, who will talk about "Structuring the Plot," and Ruth Ryan Langan, who will discuss the intricacies of "The Romance Novel."

Cannon is the author of numerous books for young adults as well as short stories, poetry and travel articles.

Koja is author of the newly released "Skin" as well as "Bad Brains" and "The Cipher." She has also written short fiction that has appeared in a variety of anthologies and magazines.

Langan is author of 31 original paperback novels, both historical and contemporary. Her first hardcover book, the romantic thriller "Addy Starr," was published this year by Severn House. She has also completed a contemporary romantic thriller for Harper Monogram, "All That Glitters," and a feature-length screenplay along with two other Michigan authors. Langan has already been contracted to write three more original screenplays.

Cranbrook to focus on film and video production

Cranbrook Schools, Western Michigan University and Detroit Area Film and Television (DAFT) announce the 21st annual Focal Point Program June 21-26 at Cranbrook's Gordon Science Hall in Bloomfield Hills.

The adult workshop offers hands-on instruction in 16mm film and video production for beginning students through professionals.

Along with a Focal Point T-shirt, meals, materials and equipment will be provided as students explore live action production, animation, claymation, single camera operation, portable studio sets, talent tips and location shooting.

All participants will produce a short program to be showcased that Saturday in their own film and video festival.

Tuition is $510 for video and $535 for film. Two hours of graduate or undergraduate credit is available with WMU. For more information, call Margaret Culver at 335-0844 or the Cranbrook Summer Programs Office at 645-3678.

Demonstrations of advanced MacIntosh applications in editing and graphics are planned. Apple MacIntosh computers will be available for script writing and hypercard storyboarding, and an Amiga Toaster special effects computer will also be available. An audio technician will assist with sound effects and music.

The staff is comprised of educators who are also independent film and video professionals.

Focal Point director Margaret Culver is an award-winning independent video producer who specializes in educational videos. She holds an educational specialist degree in industrial technology, teaches in Farmington schools and is the vice president of DAFT.

Film instructor John Prusak is a national award-winning cinematographer known for his work in "Roger and Me," "Suite Harry" and most recently "Hefty's." He is the media instructor at the William D. Ford Vocational/Technical Center in Westland and teaches film at Wayne State University.

Video instructor Dick Rockwell is the station manager for WOAK and video instructor for Royal Oak Schools. An award-winning producer and scriptwriter, he has worked in video production for more than 17 years, including as executive director of OC-4, the public access granting agency of United Cable.

DAFT is a not-for-profit organization whose stated mission is to promote visual literacy. It has monthly general membership meetings, at which a short informational session is followed by the screening of a pre-released feature film.

DAFT conducts workshops, conferences and festivals for teachers and students, and gives support to emerging film and video producers. For information on DAFT, call 557-3133.

Benefit offers unusual student-made furniture

Furniture and art enthusiasts alike won't want to miss an upcoming showcase of fresh creative talent as Scott Shuptrine Furniture and the Center for Creative Studies team up to present an evening of one-of-a-kind student creations 5:30-8:30 p.m. Thursday, May 20.

Scott Shuptrine's Troy showroom, 977 E. 14 Mile, will host a one-time opportunity to preview and buy unusual furniture pieces created by CCS industrial design students as part of scholarship competition sponsored by Scott Shuptrine. As an added highlight, John Mascheroni, Swaim Furniture's leading designer and fashion trendsetter, will be on hand as a special guest host.

Admission is $35 per person, with all proceeds benefiting the CCS Student Scholarship Fund. The dress for the evening is business attire. Wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served. All in attendance will be eligible to win a magnificent customized Swaim sofa.

To RSVP, call Scott Shuptrine at 589-1100 or mail a check, payable to the Center for Creative Studies, in care of Scott Shuptrine Furniture, 977 E. 14 Mile, Troy 48083.

Months of hard work will soon pay off for the CCS students who, as part of this competition, were instructed to create innovative furniture designs to be taken all the way from concept to full-size production.

On display will be the students' 25 full-size pieces and 45 miniature pieces or maquettes, as well as many of their preliminary sketches. Guests will be able to see the students' design processes, as they view the steps taken from initial concepts to final production.

Focus: human figure

Urban Park Detroit Art Center will present "Corpus Mutilatio," an innovative and exciting exhibit showing a contemporary rereading of one of the oldest themes in art, the body.

The exhibit will be juried by Urban Park director Dave Roberts and artist Diana Gamerman. Entry is open to all artists living within a 300-mile radius of Detroit.

Works will be accepted in any media. They should be hand-delivered to Urban Park, on the third floor at 508 Monroe in Trappers Alley in Detroit, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday-Saturday, May 13-15. The limit is two works by each artist. Entry fee is $15. For more information, call Urban Park at 963-5445.

First, second and third prizes of $500, $200 and $100 respectively will be awarded. Winners will be announced at the opening reception 6-9 p.m. Friday, May 21. The show will run through June 21.

Livonia artists to meet

Livonia Artists Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 17, in Room C of the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Civic Center Drive.

The program will include potluck and an artwork critique.

Prospective members may attend.

Meet creator of Native American masks

Ancient spirit: Chippewa artist Sally Thielen, in a special guest appearance, brings her raku masks to Native West Gallery this weekend.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Chippewa artist Sally Thielen, also known as South Eagle Woman, will make a personal appearance Saturday-Sunday, May 15-16, at Native West Gallery, 863 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

Hours to meet the artist are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Thielen, creator of dolls and haunting raku porcelain masks, which seem to take on a life of their own, will display 20-30 masks and six to 10 dolls.

"Sally Thielen is an internationally known and exhibited Michigan artist," said Becky Dodson, who owns the gallery with her husband, Doug.

"We were at the Indian Market in Arizona when her exhibit stopped me dead in my tracks. You feel something coming from these masks. She molds them on the faces of Chippewa."

The concept behind the masks is spiritual, says Thielen. The masks are portraits of American Indians. They are meant to represent "the people."

Looking at the masks, they seem alive with the spirit of an extinct culture. The vacant eyes haunt with untold tales of ancient warriors. "She uses horse hair, skunk fur and turkey feathers. They're definitely one-of-a-kind items," Dodson said.

■ 'We were at the Indian Market in Arizona when her exhibit stopped me dead in my tracks. You feel something coming from these masks. She molds them on the faces of Chippewa.'

Becky Dodson
gallery co-owner

Thielen creates art with harmony and balance of ancient and contemporary ideas. The dolls are her interpretation of artifacts from an archeological dig. The heads and visible body parts of the dolls are made of porcelain. Each is mounted on a cradle board just as American Indian infants traditionally were fastened to boards and carried on the back, side or front. The heads are adorned with feathers, fur, horsehair or a combination. Many of the dolls are also decorated with Chippewa-style beadwork.

Thielen, a graduate of Michigan Practical Nursing School in Flint, worked as a nurse for 10 years. Disenchanted with nursing, she sought a path that would combine her cultural heritage and creativity. She found working with clay satisfied this longing. She studied pottery and sculpture at the Flint Institute of Arts for four years. For more than 15 years, Thielen has worked as a professional artist.

She has exhibited throughout the United States as well as in Moscow and St. Petersburg, Russia. Her work is in the collections of the Museum of Natural History in Denver; Jessie Desser Museum, Alpena; Museum of Mann, San Diego; and Museum of Folk Art and Museum of Craft, Moscow.

Prices for the masks will range on average from $250 to $1,200, the dolls from $395 to $900.

Native West also will display the alabaster carvings of Dennis Christy this weekend. Christy is a member of the Saginaw Chippewa tribe. He studied at the Native American Institute of Art in Santa Fe. He has exhibited across the United States. His work is in the collections of the Herd Museum in Phoenix and the Wheelright Museum in Sante Fe.

In conjunction with Thielen's appearance and Christy's carvings, Native West hosts its second annual Home Accessory Extravaganza May 15-24. It features ideas for home decor, including paintings, prints, wallhangings, pillows, baskets, rugs, pottery, furniture, and kachinas.

Native West hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Thursday and Saturday, until 8 p.m. Friday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Unlike other adjustable rate mortgages, the 4Most can only jump so high.

15-Year 4Most Mortgage
4.5% rate 6.402% APR
30-Year rate is 4.95% with 6.405% APR. Typical APR (annual percentage rate) includes interest on loan and other fees, and is based on a $100,000 loan with an 80% loan-to-value ratio. The APR may increase after closing. Interest rates and terms are subject to change at any time without notice.

While most ARMs can jump 6% over the life of the loan, our 4Most can jump by no more than 4%. Coupled with today's low interest rates, the 4Most is a smart choice for homebuyers who want to start with low monthly payments, and stay with them. The 4Most Mortgage. "I paint for my own amazement. I believe in what Winston Churchill said: The only quality you need is audacity," Davison said in an interview at his Plymouth home.

"There's no right way to do anything. With acrylic, if you make a big mistake, you can gesso it out. I don't try to correct watercolors because once you've lost it, the spontaneity's gone."

Born in England, Davison lived there until age 17 before moving to the U.S. with his family. He originally began painting with oils in the 1940s at the beginning of the war, he said.

"I saw so many shades of green and blue, I had to record them. I've had no formal training in art. I've just felt my way very crudely," Davison said.

"Somewhere in me, there's a budding artist. I always have something on the easel. I get carried away with something I've seen and then go from there. I like boats. I have a sailing boat and sail quite a bit."

Davison paints from his own black and white photographs whenever possible. "I find that I can do better working from a black and white and a Brownie camera," he said. "I don't like to have a color photograph because the color intimidates you."

Sketching on canvas is key to a well-executed painting for Davison.

"Contrast is the life of the painting. I will sketch it out with acrylics in black and white first," Davison said. "I get all the values in, then put in the color."

Although Davison never paints outdoors, he does make quick sketches on location. "I'll make color notes, pastels and watercolors," he said.

Davison's oil paintings have a European flair to them. Dark train stations bathed only in the yellow light of a midnight train, a sepia-colored portrait of his mother in the 1930s, and cows grazing in the English countryside tell stories of another time and place.

A recent oil of an old white clapboard gristmill, and an acrylic painting of a lighthouse, breathe fresh country air.

Before retiring at the age of 76, Davison worked for Detroit Edison 43 years, first as a meter reader, then in the speaker's bureau, and finally in the public relations department.

He has been a member of 3 Cities Art Club for 15 years, group treasurer for three.

"I don't consider my painting work. Anything pleasurable, even if it's your job, isn't work."

Davison's travels have taken him as far as Europe, Egypt and Australia, and as close to home as New England. He agrees with Thoreau's philosophy to "simplify, simplify."

"I have my life now narrowed down to a few important things," said the octagenarian.

Davison makes sure to write something everyday for the Sunday school lessons he teaches weekly at Calvary Methodist Church in Redford Township. Monday mornings, he works as a volunteer in pastoral care at Oakwood Hospital, Dearborn.

"It's important to keep an active mind and a sense of humor," he said.

"Seventy to 75 are tough years. No one wants you around, but when you get to be 80, people do a lot for you. Everybody wants to carry your suitcase."

Davison hopes his artwork triggers an interest in others for painting what they see in an effort to communicate their feelings.

"That's what life is all about, passing it on. The biggest thing a person can do is to inspire others. People say I can't draw a straight line. A straight line is very boring," Davison said.

"They should be in competition, but with nobody but themselves, strive for excellence. We're the one we have to beat."

The 60-piece exhibition by club members will be judged by artist Ellen Moucoulis of Ann Arbor. She will award ribbons and gift certificates from local merchants for Best of Show, People's Choice, first, second and third place, honorable mention and the Grumbacher Award for best use of color.

"Our show is very diversified. There's something pleasing to virtually everyone. We have numerous types of art ranging from not only watercolor, acrylic, oil and marbling, but abstract as well as realism," said club president Andrea DeZell of Plymouth.

Frame Works hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday-Wednesday and Friday, till 8 p.m. Thursday and 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Ray of hope: Like a beacon shining from the lighthhouse in this acrylic painting, John Davison's philosophies cut through the complexities of life.

Simpler times: A recent oil painting by John Davison of an old, white clapboard gristmill breathes fresh country air.

Community rich in 'charm and sophistication'

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

Plymouth Symphony League's biennial home tour, "Town and Country," gives visitors a glimpse of seven homes that show the efforts of local designers and creative homeowners whose imagination and use of color rivals the pros.

A committee of 11 League members looked for a mixture of decorating and architectural styles around town that represent "a community that's loaded with old-world charm and sophistication," said Judy Lore, tour chairwoman.

Decorating styles include traditional, French country, early American, contemporary and Oriental with some surprising mixes in between. Tour participants will see a compendium of Plymouth's architecture ranging from a 1927 French colonial to a new detached condominium.

"This is a wonderful way for people to get a feel of what the town is like," said Jill Seypta, League vice president. "This is an important fund-raiser for the symphony. We've had good support from community sponsors and we're hoping for a big turnout on tour day."

Tour hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, May 21. Tickets are $15 at Frameworks, Plymouth; Frameworks II, Canton; Orin Jewelers, Northville; Me and Mrs. Jones Petite, Plymouth, and Beitner Jewelry, Plymouth.

Included in the ticket price is a 20 percent discount on tour day from several in-town restaurants: Cafe Bon Homme, The Mayflower Hotel, Plymouth Landing, Penniman Deli and Main Street Deli.

Floral arrangements in each home are donated by Keller & Stein of Wayne, Premiere Designs Flowers & Gifts and French's Flowers & Gifts, both of Livonia. Plymouth florists include Ribar Floral Co., Friendly Persuasions, Heide's Flowers and Gifts and Flower Garden.

About half way through the tour, there's an outdoor garden boutique selling lawn statuary and perennial plants supplied by Good's Nursery, Plymouth.

Besides being a place to pick up decorating ideas, proceeds from the League's biggest fund-raiser will support the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. The 85-member group begins its 48th season this fall. Proceeds from the 1991 tour totaled $10,000; this time around, members expect to sell at least 1,000 tickets, Lore said.

Each year, proceeds from about 12 League fund-raisers make up 25 percent of the symphony's annual operating budget of $99,000, said Linda Alvarado, president of the Plymouth Symphony Society, the orchestra's management branch.

"The League has provided (the orchestra) with wonderful support," Alvarado said. "The tour is a great way to see some lovely homes, enjoy the atmosphere of Plymouth and support the symphony."

For now, the PSO is fiscally sound, though corporate contributions and ticket sales for the 1991-92 season were down about 3 percent, Alvarado said.

"We're feeling the effects of the recession a little. The orchestra stopped relying on state grants several years ago, so we don't expect any major financial problems," she said.

Anticipating cuts in state funding several years ago, the PSO reduced its 1989-90 season from seven concerts to five.

"It only took one season to get our revenue and income in line," Alvarado said. The following season, the orchestra resumed it regular schedule, which includes a pops concert, chamber and symphony music and The Nutcracker ballet.

PSO didn't receive state support for the 1991-92 concert season. For 1992-93, it expects to receive a $4,600 grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs and another from Arts Midwest.

"We're fortunate not to have a season in the red," said Russell Reed, PSO conductor. "We're well supported. This year, we had funds left over from the previous season."

Kiyo Morse, PSO violinist and liaison to the society, says the orchestra's strength in uncertain economic times is mostly due to wise financial planning.

"We've never been in a position not to pay. Our budget is written without counting on grants. If we receive one, we put special programs in place," she said.

which begins its 48th season this fall. (See related story for ticket information).

In place of window treatments that could block views of a wooded commons, the Stellas opted for Pella windows with built-in blinds throughout the 11-room house.

"Above all, we didn't want to lose the views from the back of the house. We wanted to bring nature inside," Kathie Stella said.

Since it was the couple's fourth house, and the first they'd occupy without their three children, they worked closely with their builder to modify room sizes to suit their new lifestyle.

Because they like informal entertaining, they enlarged the kitchen to include a spacious eating area and reduced the dining room size. They also eliminated linen closets in favor of more living area.

"We used the Shaker philosophy of designing — simplicity, simplicity, simplicity," Kathie Stella said. "We constantly asked ourselves, 'Do we really need that?' "

The couple, who owns Ray Stella Constructing in Plymouth, designed the kitchen and four baths using cabinets and fixtures they have recommended to their own customers. They also tried new materials, like a metal countertop, in the lower level kitchen.

The main kitchen has loads of built-in storage and a cooking island set up for lefthanded use. They choose frosted oak cabinets from Pennville and black speckled Corian countertops that give the room a sleek look. Cabinets, with acid etched glass fronts, "hide clutter" and add texture to the contemporary room. All built-in appliances have frosted oak fronts to give the room an uninterrupted look. For the first time, they used a mirrored backsplash that visually enlarges work spaces and is surprisingly easy to clean, Kathie Stella says.

Light oak flooring connecting the entry, hallway, kitchen and guest bath adds to the openness. All rooms are painted eggshell; recessed lighting is used throughout.

An intimate dining area, used infrequently, includes a sleek parson's table, a server and matching Queen Anne chairs covered in dark botanical tapestry.

"Over the years, I've learned to pull furniture together and adapt it to different rooms. All our furnishings are recycled from three other homes," Kathie Stella said.

A year-round sun porch backing to woods is comfortably decorated with over-sized rattan furniture and brass accents. The adjacent great room, with expansive windows, fireplace and cathedral ceiling, includes a natural-colored contemporary sofa and a pair of side chairs in earth-tone tapestry. The couple found the highback leather chair at a Palmer Park estate sale.

The Victorian sofa and chairs in the library, also from an estate sale, are recovered in a floral silk blend fabric. Kathie had the furniture's original down replaced with denser filling, but reused it in a new comforter.

"I'm not big on department stores," she said. "I love going to estate sales and auctions. So far, I haven't made any mistakes."

A spacious lower level (where the couple lived when painters recently took over) includes a master suite, fireplace, living room, den and kitchen. The room's navy and green stripe sofa and parson's desk are the only pieces bought after the move.

Old amber glass bi-fold doors (used as a screen in another home) separate the lower level's living area from the master suite. The couple found the mission-style mantle at a Saline antiques market. Family collectibles and children's toy chests are used for accents and an English tapestry that belonged to Kathie's great grandmother hangs on a decorative rod over the staircase.

Tour-goers also will see Hugh Harsha's colonial-style house near Hough Park, which includes a pleasing mix of American antiques and Oriental rugs.

Four years ago, almost on impulse, Harsha brought portraits of his wife's great-great grandparents from the basement to hang over the living room fireplace. He took up carpeting throughout the house and, room by room, bought Oriental area rugs to use over the pristine oak flooring.

"I can't say that I had a decorating plan at the time," Harsha said. "I started with color, then asked myself what I wanted the rooms to look like."

Then he was stumped. Mixing colorful Orientals with early American furnishings and other heirlooms dating to the 1800s isn't easy. It took Plymouth designer Dawn McAllister Buda of Designer's Choice to come up with the colorful wallcoverings needed to tie rugs and furnishings together.

Bold paisley wallpaper in the hall picks up colors in the burgundy Bidjar rugs in the living room and foyer. For accent, moldings in the hall and living room are painted colonial blue or rose. Harsha also re-covered two side chairs and a highback chair in the living room with rose and navy chintz selected by the decorator.

Large scale colonial floral wallpaper in the dining room picks up colors in the burgundy Keshan rug. An ash table (one of Harsha's many family antiques), cane chairs and poplar and walnut chests dating to the 1800s fill the room.

The den, which includes a large Sino rug, is decorated with pen and ink illustrations of four generations of family homes. The oldest is a Detroit farmhouse Harsha discovered in a family picture. His grandfather's regulator clock, still working, fills one wall. Other pieces include a reproduction Tiger maple secretary's desk and a turn-of-the-century thread chest used as a coffee table.

An adjacent powder room is boldly decorated with burgundy stripe wallpaper and a marbleized hunter green vanity.

Harsha, retired from Ford Motor Co., is careful about keeping his heirloom furnishings to a minimum so that area rugs can be seen.

"I've always liked the look of Oriental rugs over wood. It's like putting art on the floor," he said.

Plan on sampling eclectic interiors

Here's what you'll see on the Plymouth Symphony League's home tour Friday, May 21:

■ This spacious Dutch colonial offers relaxed country living, the owners say. Features include wood floors and braided rugs, nine-foot ceilings, window seats, four fireplaces and stained glass windows. Two staircases lead to a den overlooking the kitchen.

■ Antiques, quilts and souvenirs collected during worldwide travel fill this traditional home decorated with an English flair. Recently remodeled, the home has a sunroom overlooking an in-ground pool and restful yard.

■ Asian art and collectibles fill this contemporary home primarily decorated in black and white. Custom made living and dining room furnishings come from Korea.

■ The new owners are renovating this traditional home's lower level, but upstairs you'll see views from five bedrooms. A loft overlooks the two-story fieldstone fireplace, which was built from stone hand-selected by the original owner.

■ Inside and out, this country-style home, built in 1927, has a French flair. From French doors to a marbleized foyer floor, the designer-owner has added unique appointments in every room, including a mix of antiques and 20th century collectibles.

■ This new detached condominium has expansive windows to view the wooded commons. The pleasing mix of traditional and contemporary furnishings and collectibles fills the main floor and a spacious lower level.

■ This colonial near Hough Park is filled with American antiques, early American furnishings and Oriental rugs. Bright wallcoverings tie rugs and furniture together.

■ DETROIT GALLERY OF CONTEMPORARY CRAFTS
Friday, May 21 — Michigan artists Richard Kooyman and Barbara Browning, "Constructions in Wood, Metal and Found Objects." They create everyday objects such as lamps and clocks, challenging a long-held separation between work that's purely artistic from that which has a specific function. 104 Fisher Building. Hours: 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

■ SWORDS INTO PLOWSHARES PEACE CENTER AND GALLERY
Friday, May 21 — Opening reception for "European Images of Peace," art of Mirsolav Rada and Ondrej Rada of Prague, the Czech Republic, 5:30-8:30 p.m. Mirsolav's prints and colored ink drawings explore human life in all its values and varieties, expressed in biblical and humanitarian images. Ondrej's art, oils, acrylics and lithographs, reflects his father's influence but embodies his own style. 33 E. Adams, on Grand Circus Park, Detroit. Hours: 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday.

■ DETROIT ARTISTS MARKET
To May 21 — The 16th annual Michigan Potters Association Juried Show. REAL ESTATE NEWS

Decode alphabet soup, find realtors' specialties

To the uninitiated, it may as well be alphabet soup.

But to real estate professionals, letters like CRE, RNMI and SIOR designate training and competency in specialty areas of the business.

"Many people are surprised to learn how many of our members specialize in real estate services other than home sales," said Mary M. Arlinghaus, president of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Board of Realtors.

"We would like community residents to be aware of what specializations are available so when special real estate needs arise, such as investment, property management or counseling, they can best choose a real estate professional who best will meet these needs," Arlinghaus said.

The National Association of Realtors offers memberships in seven affiliated institutes, societies and councils.

Each group awards specialty designations that recognize a member's advanced education and experience in a particular field.

The Commercial Investment Real Estate Institute, the newest of association affiliates, was established in 1990. Prior to that, it was called the Commercial/Investment Council and was housed withinthe National Marketing Institute.

CEREI enhances the professional competence of persons involved in commercial investment real estate and offers the Certified Commercial Investment Member (CCIM) designation.

The Realtors National Marketing Institute (RNMI), founded in 1923, is comprised of two independent councils — the Real Estate Brokerage Council and the Residential Sales Council.

Their purpose is to promote professionalism and competency through education in sales and marketing, and real estate brokerage management.

Professional designations offered are CRB, certified real estate brokerage manager, and CRS, certified residential specialist.

Members of the Realtors Land Institute specialize in such areas as subdivision development, real estate marketing, foreign investment, urban and investment land, farms and ranches, commercial and development properties and residential sales.

Established in 1944 as a trade association for urban and rural real estate practitioners, RLI offers the designation of Accredited Land Consultant (ALC).

The Counselors of Real Estate (CRE) was formed in 1954 to enhance the quality of advice available to the public on property matters. CRE members offer independent advice and guidance on a fee basis.

The Institute of Real Estate Management, established in 1933 to advance professionalism in property management, awards several designations.

They including Certified Property Manager (CPM), Accredited Management Organization (AMO) to management firms and Accredited Residential Manager (ARM) to on-site managers.

The Society of Industrial and Office Realtors was established in 1941 for individuals specializing in all phases of industrial and office real estate activity.

An international organization, SIOR offers educational courses in marketing and the SIOR and Professional Real Estate Executive (PRE) designations.

The Women's Council of Realtors, founded in 1938, provides a referral network, programs and systems for personal and career growth.

WCR offers the Leadership Training Graduate (LTG) designation and Referral and Relocation Certification (RRC).

Brokers are liable for discriminatory acts of its agents

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

I am a real estate broker and am concerned about my potential liability for discriminatory acts of my agents, even though they are independent contractors under contract with me. Do I have any concern?

According to the Seventh Circuit of the Federal Court, you do have something to be concerned about in that it affirmed an award of compensatory damages against a sole shareholder and manager of a real estate brokerage office for the discriminatory acts of his agents, even though the owner/manager had not condoned the discriminatory acts and, in fact, had a history of working against housing discrimination.

The court basically determined that a principal cannot free itself of liability under anti-discrimination laws by delegating its duty not to discriminate and, indeed, the broker was liable even though it had specifically instructed its agents not to discriminate. Moreover, the court reasoned that the agent's contracts, calling them independent contractors, made no difference since they were deemed the broker's agent bound to follow the broker's policies and to take day to day supervision from the broker.

I am buying a home and was promised that the septic system would be connected into a sewer line in the near future. I relied on the listing broker to review the purchase agreement and now find that there is no likelihood that a sewer will be coming in in the near future. I have already signed the purchase agreement but have not closed. What can I do?

First, you should appreciate that the broker that was assisting you was an agent of the seller and that, in any event, the broker is not a substitute for retaining a competent attorney to review your purchase agreement before you sign it.

Most people seek advice from an attorney, if at all, before the closing, but do not seek a lawyer's input at the most important time, that is, during the negotiation stage concerning the terms and conditions of the purchase agreement.

You may well have recourse against the seller and broker for misrepresentations and/or breach of contract depending upon what the listing ticket said and/or what representations were made in the purchase agreement by the seller and/or broker. Better late than never, you should consult with a competent attorney as soon as possible.

BUILDING SCENE

F

Builders face new horizons

The name of the building game is change. Putting the same product on the market year after year is injurious to the health of a building company.

Here's some of the facts and trends builders are dealing with to keep their businesses healthy now and into the next century.

■ Large-scale production in automated factories is a myth; almost all new houses are custom assembled on site.

■ The typical builder produces less than one new house per month operating in a very small geographic area. Housing markets are local in character, and what works in one suburb could very well fail in another.

■ Between now and the year 2000, the United States Census Bureau expects the largest increase in population to be in the 45-54 age group, which will grow 49 percent. This leads experts to predict a tremendous gain forecast for households headed by this age group. And combined with the solid gains that will be scored in the 35 to 44 age group, this represents an attractive customer base for builders.

■ One of the most attractive segment of the market for builders has been married couples with children. But between now and the turn of the century, that group is expected to increase only 1 percent. The traditional nuclear family household, which accounted for 39 percent of total households in 1970, 30 percent in 1980 and 27 percent in 1990 will continue to decline to 24 percent in 2000.

■ Single persons living alone will grow a robust 28 percent by 2000, and then single person households will comprise 29 percent of the total in 2000, up from 26 percent in 1990.

■ Builder's primary market segments are first-time buyers, first-time move-up builders, ultimate move-up buyers, luxury move-up buyers and move-down buyers.

■ The regulatory environment and land and materials cost are seen by the building industry as restricting its ability to serve the entry-level market, which is increasingly opting for the resale market to find affordable, "palatable" housing.

■ The shift toward more single-person households in virtually all age groups and the rising influence of immigration as a contributor to overall population trends are believed to have a strong effect on consumer lifestyle pressures and preferences. These include mellowing, cocooning, time starvation, two-income households, latchkey kids, and elders at home.

Mellowing and cocooning are two sides of the same coin. The shift is becoming evident away from the showy consumption of the '80s toward a quieter, less formal lifestyle characterizes mellow-

No boxes here: Retail architecture rarely receives the attention that its sibling forms — housing and office — architecture does. Unless, of course, it happens to be a design by Farmington Hills-based James P. Ryan Associates.

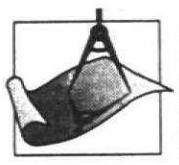
SOMERSET ARCHITECT

He pushes mall design envelope



James P. Ryan is helping change the face of retail architecture. In fact, he and his associates have gone a long way in giving it a face. His new Somerset Collection II project will show that retail architecture should no longer be ignored.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY
STAFF WRITER

When people talk of great architecture, homes and office buildings get most of the attention.

"What a house!"

"Wow, look at that building!"

When was the last time you heard someone say what a great mall?

If James Ryan, president of James P. Ryan Associates Architects and Planners P.C. in Farmington Hills, had the time, he might be irritated.

He's too busy.

In fact, the architectural firm for the just-announced Somerset Collection II, Somerset Collection renovation and numerous award winning retail architecture designs throughout the country has been remarkably busy despite the recent economic doldrums.

Still, Ryan wonders why retail architecture is often overlooked when compared to its more prominent counterparts.

It is unfathomable to him, Ryan said, that in America — where shopping is king — that retail architecture has been one of the most ignored forms.

"This is an industry that is flamboyant — but for some reason, you just don't hear about it."

Who is to blame?

Part of the blame rests with developers and consumers who didn't demand more from retail architecture in the past, he said. Architects who didn't stress the importance of good architecture are also partly to blame.

"We should strive for something meaningful, something elegant, something long-lasting," he said.

These are his goals for every project, Ryan said. "We're searching for something customers can walk away from and then talk about it later."

Retail architecture, as he envisions it, should do more than just create space. "It should make people want to spend time there."

Registered to work in 17 states, James Ryan Associates is currently involved in projects in Michigan, California, Virginia, Illinois and New York and is poised to make the jump to the international scene with several projects that are still in the discussion stage.

Despite this international renown, James P. Ryan Associates maintains a fairly low profile outside of the retail design community.

Ryan said that when he lectures to architecture and engineering students, they're often surprised at what his firm's been able to accomplish in a retail setting.

It's important, Ryan said, to include the "human element" in the consideration of a design.

Ryan says he finds it reassuring that mall managers and owners have begun to realize that it takes more than square footage to make a mall successful. "The malls built in the '50s, '60s and '70s are coming of age

Office vacancy rates down, landlords remain cautious

STAFF WRITER

The vacancy rate and average asking rent for office space in suburban markets decreased slightly during the first three months of this year compared to the first quarter of 1992, according to the Southfield commercial real estate firm of Cushman & Wakefield.

The survey found a vacancy rate of 18.9 percent compared to 20.8 percent and weighted average asking rent of $16.75 per square foot compared to $16.90.

Stagnant new construction and steady absorption accounted for a decrease in the suburban vacancy rate, the report indicated. Stiff competition for tenants resulted in a general decrease in rents.

The only new office space reported under construction in the metro Detroit area is Bloom-Wood Centre, 145,000 square feet, in the Birmingham submarket.

"It's still a good time to be a tenant," said Keith Sant, vice president and branch manager for Cushman & Wakefield.

"What we're finding is, indeed, vacancy rates are starting to trend downward. But they're not coming down as quickly as you might anticipate . . . and the reason is the economy.

"People are not in an expansion mode on the office side. They're still in a contracting or holding mode.

"It poses a challenge for landlords to manage and market effectively," Sant said. "I think long-term owners out there are looking to refinance, if possible, and hold on until they can anticipate a move upwards in rates."

It may take four or five years for the market to rebound to where vacancies are 10 percent or less, Sant said. Meanwhile, it's important that owners maintain their properties to retain tenants.

Different submarkets in the O&E coverage area fared differently, according to Cushman & Wakefield.

Birmingham: This market, with leasing activity of nearly 195,000 square feet and net absorption of nearly 95,000 square feet, was described as the top quarterly performer in the area.

Inventory of 5.6 million square feet had a vacancy rate of 14.9 percent, down from 18.1 percent the previous year. Asking rents ranged from $11-25.50 per square foot with a weighted average of $18.33.

"Demand for Class B (few services not in prime locations) space was strong and Birmingham is a predominantly Class B market (52.7 percent) which was a benefit," the report indicated. "The stability of the market has kept asking rents relatively unchanged."

I-275 corridor, Livonia/Novi: Leasing activity of 73,533 square feet was up by 8.5 percent. Vacancy rates plunged 5.7 percentage points to 13.2 percent, the lowest among O&E communities.

Total inventory of 2.8 million square feet had asking rents ranging from $12-$19.30 per square foot. The weighted average was $16.38.

"Asking rents have experienced only minor fluctuations over the past year and are expected to hold firm over the remainder of 1993 with concessions decreasing," the report indicated.

Southfield: This community has the largest total inventory, 15.3 million square feet, and the highest vacancy rate, 24 percent, in the O&E coverage area.

Asking rents ranged from $8.50-$25.05 with a weighted average of $16.44.

Absorption improved dramatically during the first three months after going into a tailspin during the comparable period in '92.

"Asking rents in Southfield are declining again after a short increase when the new construction (Oakland Towne Square) was added," the report stated.

Troy: Slight improvement was recorded here during the year.

Inventory of 11.5 million square feet had asking rents in a range of $11.55 to $22.50 with a weighted average of $16.71. The vacancy rate was 19 percent.

Most transactions so far this year have been small, averaging less than 5,000 square feet.

"Motives for the slower activity in this market were that there has been no major upturn in the auto industry and that deals and decisions are taking a greater amount of time to consummate," the report indicated.

"With continued equilibrium in the market, asking rates are not expected to change dramatically in the next year."

Farmington Hills: All kinds of reshuffling took place in this market last quarter, but net absorption increased by only 18,300 square feet.

Asking rental rates ranged from $10 to $18.50 with a weighted average of $15.72 for an inventory of 4.7 million square feet.

"Competitive rents continued to be the motivating factor behind most activity," the report said.

Midwest No. 1 in affordability

AP — Looking for a place where housing is still reasonable? Consider the Saginaw-Bay City-Midland area of Michigan, the most affordable housing market in America, a builders' survey says.

Saginaw topped the list of affordable housing markets as the National Association of Home Builders released its Housing Opportunity Index last Thursday.

Five other Michigan markets were among the 25 most affordable areas. And California accounted for 19 of the 25 least affordable areas.

The index is based on a survey of 330,190 sales of both new and previously owned homes in 187 metropolitan areas during the October-December quarter. It measures the typical family's ability to buy a home — not just the price.

The survey found that the Midwest and South remained the most affordable areas in the nation. The Midwest had 20 of the 25 most affordable markets. Of the others, three were in the Northeast and two were in the South.

In common with Saginaw, Brazoria, Texas; Manchester, N.H., and Greeley, Colo., all were the most affordable housing markets in their regions.

On the other hand, San Francisco, New York City, the Hamilton-Middletown, Ohio, area and Sarasota, Fla., were the least affordable markets in their regions. San Francisco remained at the bottom of the affordability list.

Saginaw replaced the Champaign-Urbana-Rantoul, Ill., area at the top of the affordability index. The Champaign market was not included in the latest ranking because sales there fell below the 200 minimum.

The Housing Opportunity Index records the percentage of both new and existing homes sold in the market during the quarter that could have been purchased at prevailing interest rates by a family earning the area's median income.

The Saginaw area scored 93.5 percent on the index. San Francisco got only a 9.3 percent grade.

The median income in the Saginaw area during the fourth quarter was $39,700 and the median price of a home was $63,000. The median means half of the incomes were higher and half were lower, or that half of the homes cost more and half less.

BEST MARKETS

The 10 most affordable (plus the top-ranking Michigan areas) and five least affordable U.S. housing markets in the fourth quarter of 1992, according to the National Association of Home Builders. The number corresponding to each area is the percentage of the homes sold that were within reach of the median-income household at the prevailing mortgage interest rate.

According to the mortgage underwriting standards used for calculating the index, at the prevailing interest rate of 7.76 percent, a family could afford to purchase a home costing 3.23 times its annual income, or in this case $128,231.

In the Saginaw area, 93.5 percent of the homes sold during the fourth quarter were priced at or below $128,231.

On the other hand, San Francisco's median income was $49,900 and its median price of a home was $276,000, meaning that the typical family could afford a home costing $161,177. Only 9.3 percent of the homes there were priced at or below $161,177.

The Home Builders said the national median home price during the fourth quarter was $114,000, up $9,000 from the July-October period. Households earning the national median income of $36,800 were able to afford to buy 60 percent of the homes offer for sale nationally, up from 57.5 percent in the third quarter.

"The jump in affordability was due primarily to falling interest rates," said Home Builders President J. Roger Glunt.

Home values on rise in Detroit, Midwest

AP — Home values rose in much of the Midwest, South and Pacific Northwest during the first quarter, but stagnated in many of the nation's coastal areas, according to a real estate trade group survey.

For the second straight quarter, the Richland-Kennewick-Pasco market of Washington state led the nation in the price appreciation of previously owned single-family homes, the National Association of Realtors said.

The Richland area had a 24.5 percent increase from the first quarter of 1992, to a median price of $96,400, following a 26.1 percent during the October-December quarter. The median means half of the homes cost more and half cost less.

The Detroit area saw home values shoot up by 19 percent, to $92,200. That helped boost the median price in the Midwest by 7.8 percent, to $83,900.

The South experienced a 2.7 percent increase, to $90,700, including a 10.2 percent advance in the Fort Myers-Cape Coral, Fla., market, where the median price was $76,400.

The Realtors survey of 129 metropolitan areas found that home values were unchanged at $137,400 in the Northeast and actually fell 0.5 percent, to $142,200, in the West, where much of California remained mired in recession.

The Realtors said many of the price increases occurred in less-expensive metropolitan areas where the lowest mortgage rates in two decades spurred buyer demand in the lower price ranges.

"We are seeing more and more people buying starter homes," said William S. Chee, the Realtors president. That activity also is triggering sales in the move-up market, he added.

Interest on fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages dropped from 8 percent to 7.5 percent between January and March, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. That was about 1 percentage point less than a year earlier.

The Realtors said the cold, wet winter helped hold sales of previously owned homes to a 3.4 percent gain during the first quarter, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.92 million units.

That was considerably below the 18.3 percent surge recorded during the same quarter last year. Sales in 1993 were up in 29 states and the District of Columbia, ranging from 25.7 percent in Hawaii to 0.1 percent in Texas. They fell in 18 others and were unchanged in two. Information was not available from two other states.

Honolulu continued to have the most expensive existing homes. Prices there rose another 1.5 percent during the first quarter, to $347,000.

After lull, state building market is back on track

The president of the Michigan Association of Home Builders says Michigan's residential building market is stable and is expected to rebound during the second quarter.

Winter weather conditions in March slowed the progress of home building, wiping out several weeks of production time. But Mike Hofer said that March units of 2,916 represent a 52 percent increase over February.

Lumber prices also posed a problem for builders.

"The doubling of lumber prices between October and March compelled many builders to put their projects on hold until prices receded," Hofer said.

"Lumber costs are receding and builders are moving forward with their housing projects," Hofer said.

Buying power: Older women do, older men don't

AP — Older women spend a larger proportion of their income on housing than older men do, and female homeowners are more likely to borrow against their property to pay living expenses, according to a study by the Older Women's League.

The advocacy group said its study, released last week, found that "Women, especially midlife and older women, find it difficult to keep a roof over their heads."

Many more women than men live alone, and they have much less money with which to make ends meet, according to the report, based largely on data compiled by the Census Bureau and the American Association of Retired Persons.

"And the older they get, the poorer they get — in part because an increasing percentage of their income is tied up in housing," according to the report, entitled, "Room for Improvement: The Lack of Affordable, Adaptable and Accessible Housing for Midlife and Older Women."

The group defines midlife as ages 45-64, and older as age 65 and up.

Older women homeowners have lower monthly housing costs than men in the same age group, but pay a larger percentage of their income for shelter, the study found.

Of homeowners age 65 to 74, 18 percent of white women, 24 percent of black women and 23 percent of Hispanic women spend 40 percent or more of their income on housing, the study said.

For male homeowners in the same age group, 8 percent of white men, 17 percent of black men and 19 percent of Hispanic men spend 40 percent or more of their income on housing, according to the report.

While older women who own their homes have built up substantial equity in their properties (40 percent of net worth, on average), they have little cash because they tend to be living on fixed incomes.

Older women living alone are also much more likely to borrow against their homes because they need money to live on, the study found. Fifty-six percent of those who have borrowed against their homes are women living alone, 14 percent are men, and 29 percent are couples. The median age of women borrowers was 76; the median age for all older homeowners was 73.

Mortgage rates decrease

(AP) — Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 7.42 percent this week, down from 7.43 percent last week, according to a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the lowest since mortgages averaged 7.38 percent during the week ended April 22. That had been the lowest since the week ended Aug. 4, 1972 when rates also averaged 7.38.

The rates do not include add-on fees known as points.

Homeowners ask, magazine answers

AP — Questions by homeowners, answers by Popular Mechanics magazine:

Q. My cement slab garage floor is starting to wear and show rough spots. Is there a way I can apply a topping layer to renew the surface?

A. You can top a slab, but you must be careful about getting the topping material too thin. Topping over hardened concrete should not be less than two inches thick at any point.

To top a concrete slab, clean the surface with muriatic acid or concrete cleaner (available in paint and hardware stores). To ensure the topping bonds well, roughen the surface of any slab that has a shiny, smooth surface. Use a wire brush and full-strength muriatic acid to do this.

Next, mix a slurry of cement, sand and water and scrub this onto the surface with a throwaway scrub brush. Apply the concrete topping mix on top of the slurry before the slurry starts to dry.

Q. We are repainting our textured ceiling and we're having a difficult time trying to get an even finish. Are there special considerations to be aware of when doing this type of job?

Yes there are. Here is some background on this type of ceiling and tips to help you with your job:

- Spray-textured ceilings became the most popular ceiling finish about 30 years ago. Early texture materials were odd blends of taping compounds, perlite or vermiculite and whiteners, all mixed with water. The resulting texture finish was a super-porous material that absorbs paint unevenly.
- All spray texture finishes are, even today, mill mixes, meaning they are a mixture of powder ingredients that must be mixed with water. Painting such finishes is about equal to painting a sponge: there is heavy and unequal paint suction.
- To overcome this paint suction you must apply a good sealer. Use an alkyd (oil) sealer and apply it with a long-nap roller.
- The easiest way to seal — or to paint — a ceiling is to cover the entire floor with a canvas cloth or tarp. Buy a roller and extension handle to apply the sealer or paint.
- Apply a generous coat of sealer, and check the ceiling from several angles.

— they're getting tired and old.

The owners of these malls and open air centers realize that if they're going to keep tenants from bolting to other, newer malls, they have to improve them.

Ryan said the lion's share of his business in the '90s will be in the rejuvenation of some of the older centers.

The Taubman-Ryan connection

It's worth noting, however, that even Ryan didn't always give retail architecture its due.

Ryan started out designing office buildings, hotels and it wasn't until he began working with Wah Yee Associates, now in Troy, back in the early '70s that he began to see retail architecture as his niche.

"I can remember Wah Yee asking me if I would like to do retail architecture, and of course, I said yes," he said. "Meanwhile, I'm thinking what the heck is retail architecture?"

It was then that Ryan met someone who would become one of the country's most prominent retail developers, Al Taubman.

"Wah Yee introduced me to him as one of the foremost experts on retail architecture," Ryan, said, relating his first meeting with Taubman. It wasn't until years later that Taubman was informed of Wah Yee's "fib."

As an associate and later as a partner at Wah Yee, Ryan's designed many of Taubman's ventures until 1978 when he decided to start his own firm in a small office at 10 Mile and Lahser roads — ironically in the same two-story building Wah Yee had originally set up shop in decades earlier.

In the 15 years since starting James P. Ryan Associates, the firm has evolved from a small practice meeting the needs of small retailers to a nationally-recognized retail architect.

Retail architecture on rise

Ryan is quick to a spread the credit for James Ryan Associates' success. Partner and vice president James R. Grigsby, AIA, (who joined in 1983) and William J. Beitz, AIA, (who joined in 1987) are integral parts — as are the other 25 members of the firm — of what the company has been able to accomplish.

Award winning developments like the Plaza of Birmingham, The Gardens of Palm Beach Gardens, Florida, along with projects like the Centre at Salisbury in Maryland and the renovation of the Somerset Collection have demonstrated some of what retail architecture can aspire to.

Retail architecture has always been very cost-conscious, he said. "It's taken a while for (retail architecture) to evolve."

"(Now that it has,) the nature of retail architecture has taken us far beyond the mom and pop store," Ryan said.

Cost does remain important, Ryan said, but it shouldn't be the motivating force behind a project. One of the reasons James P. Ryan Associates has developed from a simple architecture firm to full scale project design, planning and construction management firm is to help control costs, he said.

"We know how to control costs, but our first obligation is to make the best design," he said.

Ryan said he has never believed that architects should have a particular style, Ryan said. "We're more interested in quality of work."

Like all good architecture, retail architecture should reflect the area in which it is built, he said.

An area's geography, history and climate is critical in the design of any structure. "You don't put art deco in Utah. We don't want to insult the shopper or the user of the project."

Selling? Fix up the kitchen, bath

News flash: Home remodeling and addition projects, especially kitchens and baths, can return up to 104 percent on investment.

That's what Remodeling magazine says, anyway. And, naturally, home improvement experts agree.

"Being able to enjoy the new comforts and conveniences of the improvements immediately, however, is the best return," said Jim Sutter, vice president and general merchandise manager of Handy Andy Home Improvement Centers, Inc. "If and when it comes time to sell, homeowners can recoup all or most of what they invested."

There are four Handy Andy locations in the Observer & Eccentric area: Livonia, Westland, Troy and Southfield.

Besides the direct return on investment, the added value of kitchen and bath improvements go beyond dollars and cents. For people selling their homes, well-executed improvements can:

- Increase the market appeal of the home;
- Shorten the home's selling time;
- Put the sellers in better position to name their price.

"Current lifestyle trends are leaning toward more informal dining and entertaining and people are spending more time in the kitchen," Sutter said. "Kitchens are becoming the focal point of a home today."

Kitchen magic: Here is one of the many efficient and appealing kitchen designs from Handy Andy. It features wipe-clean vinyl interiors, adjustable shelves, and a variety of door styles in woods and laminates.

Sutter suggests such projects as new cabinetry, modern, resilient flooring and attractive ceiling treatments.

"At sale time, a home with a kitchen that doesn't need a lot of work and blends utility and visual appeal will attract a potential buyer more than one with an outdated kitchen," he said.

Retailers like Handy Andy offer in-house installation experts for non-do-it-yourselfers. Design experts are also on staff. Using in-store computers and a specialized software package, Handy Andy and other retail professionals can generate blueprints and layout options based on the basic room dimensions supplied by the customer.

As for bathroom remodeling, "Leisure and glamour are two increasingly popular features that homeowners seek — a room to work out and relax in," Sutter said. "A bright, spacious look is important; skylights in bathrooms are great additions."

Sutter also advises to pay particular attention to storage. Most older homes, he said, aren't equipped with much space.

Remodeling magazine said the addition of a new bathroom to a home with only one or one-and-a-half baths yields a 95 percent return on investment.

ing. Cocooning reflects the importance of the house as a place to spend more leisure time.

Time starvation is reflected in a loss of time in which to relax and recharge. The trend toward home-centered activities is seen as having tremendous significance for homebuilders.

Countryside Living

BUY NOW BUILD LATER – THREE YEAR TERMS

Starling model: The first floor plan is above and the basement plan is at right. The overall dimensions are 40-foot X 47-foot. Living space is 1,985 square feet. Garage space is 478 square feet.

Starling design works well on sloping land sites

The Starling is designed for construction on land that slopes down at the back. But the lot doesn't have to be huge, because this compact two-story home is only 47 feet deep and 40 feet wide if you don't count the deck.

Two bedrooms, a large family room, a bathroom and a hall lined with storage space are all below the main level in the daylight basement. Sliding glass doors in the family room open onto a covered patio, and all three rooms have large windows to allow appreciation of a vista to the rear.

A woodstove is seated on a wide tile hearth in the central living area on the main floor. In winter, it serves as a focal point as well as a heat source.

Storage space in the kitchen is augmented by a large step-in pantry. Sink and dishwasher face into the vaulted dining room and are set in along a counter that could be an eating bar.

But some families might feel an eating bar is unnecessary here, since the skylit nook is such a bright and cheerful eating space.

A powder room is close to the kitchen and not far from the front door. It is also just a few steps from the pass-through utility room, which connects the house to the garage.

Extra space for a shop and storage is available in the two-car garage.

Sliding glass doors in the dining room and master suite open onto a deck that spans the back of the home. The master suite has a vaulted ceiling, walk-in closet and private bath.

For a study plan of the Starling (332-280), send $7.50 or for a collection of plan books, send $20 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Ore. 97402.
