Mom: Son left to fend for self

The ice storm that hit the area last week has one woman angry. She said a school bus driver sent her child on a two-mile walk because of icy roads.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Because a school bus couldn't navigate wet, icy roads Thursday, a Canton woman said, her 8-year-old son was let off the bus and told to walk the two miles home.

She's unhappy with the action.

Deborah Havlik said she wants to make a formal complaint to the Plymouth-Canton Schools board of education, as she wasn't notified about the situation.

Her son and an 8-year-old neighbor boy were dropped off just west of Beck, she said.

"They would have had to cross Ridge," she said, to get to their homes on Hanford Road, adding that darkness was approaching.

"There are no street lights, it was pouring rain, and they were sent off on their own," she said.

By 6:30 p.m., she got a call from the parents of her son's classmate. Havlik said her neighbor's husband went to pick up the boys.

"I don't have a problem with the bus not being able to go through. I do have a problem that they sent these children off on their own," she said.

"To me it was really poor judgment; it was irresponsible."

The school district's director of transportation and safety was unavailable to comment Friday, as schools were closed. One employee of the transportation department said trucks and other vehicles were sent to places where buses were forced to stop, and kids were picked up and taken to their homes.

"My husband's called transportation twice; they called the board of education; they said they'd make a note of it — that's not good enough," Havlik said.

"One way or another we're going to have a resolution to this," she added.

Helping out: Many have contributed to the effort to help Marilyn Wiltsie, a Field Elementary School third-grade teacher.

Love surrounds ill teacher

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

There's no doubt who's rooting for Marilyn Wiltsie.

"Her spirits are high and she has a support system that won't quit. That combination has been remarkable," said Field Elementary School principal Larry Miller.

Wiltsie may be hundreds of miles away at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute at Harvard University, but she's been in the thoughts and hearts of her co-workers at Field and within the Plymouth-Canton school district.

Wiltsie, 39, is one of 12 people in the world diagnosed with monocytoid B-cell low grade non-Hodgkins lymphoma. The rare form of cancer generally strikes the elderly.

Diagnosed last January, the third-grade teacher began treatment at the University of Michigan Hospitals and was then sent to Harvard for chemotherapy, radiation and a bone marrow transplant.

That transplant alone costs $80,000-$120,000, which insurance won't pay. "Insurance doesn't want to pay because they say it's experimental," said Sonia Culver, a secretary at Field who organized fund-raisers to help Wiltsie, who is unmarried, and her parents who rented an apartment in Boston to stay nearby while their daughter is undergoing treatment.

Altogether, fund-raising efforts have raised $4,072 from a raffle and $2,905 from school employees' direct donations. Culver began her efforts by sending district employees a letter asking for help. The next step was a raffle Jan. 17 in which Culver contacted businesses and individuals to donate items for the event.

"Everything given away on the raffle was given from the community. We want to thank them for their generosity. There was $5,000 of value in items," Culver said.

Anyone who would like to donate to help Wiltsie may write checks to Field Elementary School, 1000 S. Haggerty, Canton.

It's uncertain when Wiltsie will return to her Ypsilanti home. She's expected to stay in Boston about another month for checkups. But Culver says all reports so far about

Postal Service weighs new facility for Canton

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

The U.S. Postal Service is preparing the necessary information to request a full-service post office for Canton.

"We (Canton officials) are entirely out of it now," said township trustee Bob Shefferly, co-chairman of the Canton Township Essential Services Committee, which has spearheaded a movement to convince postal officials that the township needs its own post office.

The postal service is preparing what is called request justification and other necessary documents to send to federal authorities. Lloyd Wesley, manager of postal operations, Detroit district, could not be reached for comment.

"In the meantime, the committee plans on continuing their efforts to convince postal and governmental authorities of the need and benefits to both Canton residents and the U.S. Postal Service in providing a full-service postal facility within Canton's 36 square miles," according to the essential services committee.

The committee has been receiving support from residents as well as state and federal elected officials. On the local front, a petition requesting a full-service post office boasts more than 2,000 signatures. And more are expected.

Jean LaJoy, essential services committee member, is working with Close Up students at Plymouth-Canton high schools who work on civic projects, to secure more signatures.

Manufacturer moves headquarters to Canton

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Gil-Mar Manufacturing, a defense contractor and automotive parts manufacturing firm, is moving its headquarters to Canton from Farmington Hills as part of a $3-million expansion project.

"We're the largest manufacturer of tank track components," said Bob Zulker, plant manager.

With approval from the township board of trustees for a 12-year tax abatement following a public hearing Tuesday, the company is moving its entire operations from the Oakland County community to three vacant acres on Ronda Drive, where it already has facilities.

Thirty-eight employees work in the Farmington Hills location. Fifteen employees work in the Canton facilities and Zulker said he expects that 12 additional jobs will be created due to a new contract from Ford Motor Co. New jobs are expected to pay $12.82 per hour.

"There are some people who will not make that drive, and that creates some job openings," Zulker said, referring to the Farmington Hills employees.

The new corporate headquarters will be situated between the existing Gil-Mar buildings. The company is planning to build an additional 50,000 square feet of manufacturing and office space.

"We've already purchased equipment for the new building," Zulker said.

Despite a decrease in defense work, Zulker told township officials that Gil-Mar's business has grown. "We have grown faster than our expectations."

The original recommendation was to give a tax abatement to Gil-Mar for nine years. Twelve years is the maximum available. The company already has a tax abatement on one of its existing buildings that is due to expire in 2001. Gil-Mar did not have a tax abatement in Farmington Hills, which generally does not offer tax breaks.

"I, for one, would like to give them 12 years," said trustee Phil LaJoy, adding that their move from another community, as well as the potential for new jobs and business potential in Canton, would justify the maximum number of years.

Gil-Mar makes tracks for tanks that are generally designed for 2,000 miles. In the rough terrain of the 1991 Desert Storm effort in the Persian Gulf, the tracks lasted 600 miles. For its work, the company received a national award for outstanding performance, Zulker said.

In addition, there will be a 10-ton ice sculpture carved from glacier water ice. Frankenmuth will be one of only four cities in the world — the others are Paris, Lillehammer and Sapporo, Japan, — to obtain the aqua-blue glacier ice in 1994.

Financial reports net township award

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

For the second consecutive year, Canton Township is among a select group of governmental units in the United States and Canada that earned a prestigious award for its financial reports.

"This award is not an easy award to receive," said Larry Gordier, Government Finance Officers Association state representative and Eastpointe finance director.

Gordier presented township officials with the certificate at a township board meeting Jan. 25. "This demonstrates the commitment and hard work on behalf of the board of trustees and the financial staff," Gordier said.

Township Supervisor Tom Yack accepted the award and lauded the organization for its concern for working to establish standards and targets for governmental units. "All of our residents benefit from those targets and standards," he said.

Of 80,000 eligible governments, only 1,921 units received the certificate of achievement award from the Government Finance Officers Association. Of that total, only 52 governmental units in Michigan received the award, including Canton.

"Last year we were the very first township in Michigan to receive this," said Susan Kopinski, Canton financial services manager. "This is a very prestigious award."

Kopinski and township accountant Karen Fox are responsible for earning the award, which is given for the township's Comprehensive Annual Financial Report for the financial year ending Dec. 31, 1992.

In order to be awarded a certificate of achievement, a governmental unit, such as Canton, must publish an easily readable and efficiently organized financial report. But the report must conform to standards set by the association, as well as accepted accounting principles and legal requirements.

"The whole idea is that someone can understand how to read the township's financial statements," said Kopinski, president of the 600-member Michigan Municipal Finance Officers Association.

The financial report includes auditors' opinions, actual financial statements, an overview of what's in the financial statements, the general condition of the township, and a 10-year statistical history. "It's about the financial state of the township," Kopinski said.

Financial reports go through a rigorous six-month review by a three-member panel, which judges the work on 26 criteria, including clear communication and standard reporting practices, Gordier said. The association also includes comments for further improvement, to which Kopinski and Fox must respond.

"We believe each governmental unit has the responsibility to its constituents to report particular activities going on in their organization," Gordier said.

Canton received the certificate of achievement for the first time last year. It was also the first time the report was submitted for consideration. "It's highly unusual to submit for the first time and get it," Kopinski said.

USING SALICYLATES OTHER THAN ASPIRIN

Aspirin remains the medicine of choice for treating the inflammation of arthritis. Newer formulations include enteric coated aspirin which allow the medication to bypass digestion in the stomach. As a result, the risk of aspirin-related gastric ulcers is substantially reduced.

However the cost of coated aspirin is high and likely to increase as one of the manufacturers has gone out of the market. Also the coated aspirin is a large tablet and difficult for many people to swallow, particularly when the individual needs to take three-to-four tablets each day.

These problems are leading physicians to prescribe other aspirin-like products. Those alternatives contain the salicylate portion of aspirin but not the acetyl molecule which gives aspirin its distinction.

The alternative products need not be coated as they are not irritating to the stomach. The other salicylates come in a variety of tablet forms for easy swallowing and one product-trisalate - can be taken as a liquid.

Unlike aspirin, these other salicylates do not hamper blood clotting, and can be taken up to the day of surgery with no concern. Also, these alternatives have generic forms which helps keep their cost reasonable.

Aspirin remains the best for arthritis, but the other medication can substitute if called upon.

Local cleric helps Kevorkian's right to die drive

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER

As a clergyman, Rev. Thomas Eggebeen has walked through both the valley of the living and the near dead.

"The suffering person grabs you by the collar and says, 'Please help me die'," Eggebeen said.

Call it fate or coincidence then, that the petition drive to attach the "Mercy Amendment" to the Michigan ban on physician-assisted suicide was launched Sunday at Eggebeen's St. Paul Presbyterian Church in Livonia.

The church regularly holds a forum session Sunday mornings between scheduled church services to give congregation members an opportunity to explore and discuss current issues and the church's interactive role.

The stage for Dr. Jack Kevorkian's first scheduled public speech in three years was set there when Farmington Hills resident Janet Good, president of Hemlock of Michigan, who was originally scheduled as Sunday's speaker, relinquished her spot after learning Kevorkian was available.

"You're trying to raise me up to the level of hero," Kevorkian began. "There's no hero in this anygame. We are all in this together."

Kevorkian was recently freed from an electronic tether imposed by Oakland Circuit Court.

Applause followed his repeated assertions that all people have a right to not suffer. He referred to Lansing legislators as "tyrants" and the "mentally infirm."

A person's right not to suffer when he is dying is as important as the right of freedom of speech and assembly when a person is healthy, Kevorkian said. He referenced President Franklin Roosevelt's "four freedoms" speech equating freedom from fear as being directly related to freedom from fear of suffering.

"The legislature has said, 'You must suffer'," Kevorkian said.

Geoffrey Feiger, Kevorkian's attorney, preceded Kevokian's speech. "This transcends religion," Feiger said. "It's a metter of choice, a constitutional right to be left alone. I know damn well that the government does not own my life."

Feiger stressed that the amendment is aimed at mentally competent adults, not minors.

Life and death decisions are made every day, Feiger added. "Who gets a heart transpant? And, who doesn't? Who gets kidney dialysis? And who doesn't."

Joycelyn Koenig, of Redford, said that her grandfather committed suicide when he learned that he, like his two sisters before him, had cancer of the stomach. Because her mother-in-law had no living relatives, Koenig felt frustrated when she didn't have a legal say in her fate. Her mother-in-law died in a nursing home. "I could have saved the taxpayers a lot of money," Koenig said.

Added Koenig's son, Fabian Lanzy of Redford: "I'd like to see the voters decide."

Phil Farhat, 13, of Livonia, joined his family in their support of Kevorkian. "People should have the right to die if they are suffering and have nothing to live for."

Good first contacted Eggebeen when she read his rebuttal of Archbishop Adam Maida's February 1993 letter to a daily newspaper in which Maida called every moment of life precious. "Even terminal suffering has value and meaning," Maida wrote. "In a strange sort of way, as the saying goes, suffering is good for the soul."

Eggebeen's letter responded, in part: "The power of medicine to interrupt the process of dying is a gift from the hand of God, but even Jesus brought Lazarus back from the grave only once."

Hemlock members wearing "I Back Jack" buttons, energetically passed out petition forms in the church basement during the reception hour following Kevorkian's speech. Eggebeen is a Hemlock member, supporting the option of voluntary euthanasia for the terminally ill.

Several family members of the 20 persons Kevorkian assisted were also present, including members of the Donald O'Keefe family of Redford.

Carol Poenisch, daughter of Merian Frederick, who took her life in Kevorkian's Royal Oak apartment last October, said her mother was single-mindedly focused on suicide as soon as she learned she had ALS or Lou Gehrig's disease. But, Frederick also grappled with who would assume care of a mentally retarded daughter who lived at home. Poenisch now does.

"Even my sister asked Dr. Kevorkian, 'How come animals have the right to die, but people don't?,' "

Youth Chorale offers kids something to sing about

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Young singers looking for a place to perform don't have to travel far. The Plymouth Youth Chorale, formed in September 1992, provides a perfect outlet for those talents.

"We're trying to promote musicianship and develop their own skills as a musician," said Susan Lindquist of Plymouth Township, one of the directors. The group, which now has 25 singers, is open to young people ages 9-14 with unchanged voices.

"So it remains a treble choir, a children's choir," Lindquist said of the group. Members come from Plymouth, Canton, Livonia, Northville, Dearborn and Novi. Membership isn't restricted to those from certain communities.

Other directors are Margarete Thomsen and Richard Sneider. All three directors are music educators and church musicians.

Weekly rehearsals are 5:30-7 p.m. Mondays at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 1160 Penniman, in Plymouth, although the youth chorale isn't church-affiliated. Members come from public and private schools.

"It's open to anyone," said Lindquist, who has an 11-year-old daughter in the group. Open auditions are being scheduled; for audition information, call 451-1200.

Boys and girls perform fine chorale literature written or arranged for children. They don't perform music from "Aladdin" or other popular films. Some, but not all, of the music has a religious orientation. Some is modern, "but not modern in the sense of what you hear on the radio."

"It's gotten around mostly by word of mouth," she said of the membership. About 25 percent of the membership is male, "which is pretty good. Most choirs of our situation are not that lucky." The boys' voices have an incredible beautiful quality, she said.

Members typically do four concerts during a season, which corresponds with the school year. They recently performed with the concert choir at Northville High School during two Christmas concert performances.

Last year, Plymouth Youth Chorale members sang in the lobby for a Plymouth Community Chorus spring concert, welcoming music-lovers to the concert.

The group got its start when organizers realized churches and schools offered only so much in terms of musical opportunities for youngsters. Other communities have organized youth chorales, Lindquist said, so organizers decided to give it a go.

During performances, children wear the attire of professional musicians, white tops with black pants or skirts. For springtime performances around the community, they wear specially designed T-shirts and present lighter music.

Basic singing skills are required for the audition, although children don't have to know how to read music and no preparation is required for auditions. Young musicians learn to read music while singing with the group.

"They're having a great time doing it," Lindquist said. "We think this is a great thing for kids."

Resident saw community grow

Andrew Smith Jr. recalls watching his father in the old Canton Township hall at Cherry Hill and Canton Center roads counting votes in the 1940s and 1950s.

"I can remember going with him and it was a small, wooden building," Smith said, recalling his father, Andrew G. Smith Sr., who died in Florida Jan 23.

Andrew G. Smith Sr. was Canton Township clerk for about 17 years in the 1940s and 1950s. Yet he's remembered for the buildings he constructed in Canton and Plymouth under the business name of A.J. Smith & Sons.

"I was 12 years old when he formed the company and put "sons" in the name," recalled Andrew Jr., who never went into the construction business. When Andrew Sr. was about 65 years old, the business was changed to Smith & Young Construction Co.

Smith was well-known for the schools and other commercial buildings he constructed. Among the more notable buildings were the Walker and Truesdell schools, both of which no longer exist. He also built a school for St. Mary's Church in Plymouth. That's not to mention a number of car dealerships.

Smith, who would have turned 101 March 11, was born and raised in Canton. His family owned a farm, which still stands on Lilley Road. Smith took over the family farm at age 15 when his father died. He stayed in farming until he was about 25 and then went into building contracting, Andrew Jr. said.

A photograph of Smith's wife's house on Michigan Avenue — then called Plank Road — remains in the Henry Ford Museum at Greenfield Village. When the road went through, the house, which sat in the right-of-way, had to be cut in half, Andrew Jr. said.

Smith was a member of the Wayne Rotary and helped many a Boy Scout troop with carpentry skills, family members said.

Smith was buried in Sheldon Cemetery with his ancestors. His granddaughter, Linda, said that family members gathered round following the funeral to talk of the good times they had with Smith.

"People who met him just fell in love with him. He was a unique, fun-loving person," Linda said. "There wasn't a single person who could say a bad word about him. He had a sense of humor until the end."

Handling conflict school focus

To learn ways to deal with conflict, students from Central Middle School are participating in a peer mediation program.

More than 40 students in grades six, seven and eight were trained this school year to serve as peer mediators at the school.

Led by Renee Eley, Central Middle School counselor, and Lynn Sandmann, Central Middle School teacher, the program taught students how to deal with conflict without resorting to fighting and violence. The program, which began last year, was continued this year.

Other staff members at Central who are involved in the program are Fred Crissey, Joan Davis, Andrea Dubrinsky, Sandra Fuller and Karen Janer-Hanson.

During the training, students learned the definitions of conflict, denial and confrontation. Students gained skills in problem solving, decision making, critical thinking and listening. By learning how to see both sides of a dispute, the mediators learned to look beyond the emotions that typically prevent understanding an opposite point of view.

Students participated in brainstorming sessions to consider such questions as, "What are things that prevent people from resolving conflicts?" As a part of the training, students participated in role playing exercises to practice how various conflicts could be solved.

Students may choose to seek out a peer mediator to assist in solving a conflict or may be referred by another student, teacher, counselor, administrator or classroom aide. Some of the conflicts peer mediators help students solve involve rumors, teasing, fighting, gossiping, name-calling and lying.

Eighth-grader Adam Covington, a second-year peer mediator, believes the peer-mediation program helps other students, as well as him.

"This program has given me a boost in my life," he said. "People see me as someone who stands out and can help them with their problems."

According to Covington, peer mediators serve as guides to help direct students when they are trying to solve a conflict.

"We are there to guide students along," he commented. "The students are usually able to solve the problem on their own."

Peer mediators encourage students to discuss differences, respect individual needs and make decisions that lead to healthy solutions to problems.

The peer mediators visited all of the homerooms in the school recently to talk to students about the program. One of the main points they stressed was that using the peer mediation program is completely confidential.

For more information on the peer mediation program, call Renee Eley at 451-6580.

Icy, wet road conditions reportedly sent one school bus into a ditch near Gordon and Elmhurst streets in Canton at 3:30 p.m. There were no children in the bus, and the driver was uninjured, the Canton Fire Department reported.

In another incident sparked by icy roads, a school bus slid off the roadway at Ridge and Hanford at 3:50 p.m. There were two students and a driver in the bus, but there were no injuries, the fire department reported.

Following that incident, police transported the students home — with a firefighter carrying one child piggyback a quarter-mile because of an impassable street.

Close Up students will be at the Canton Kroger and Kmart 3-5 p.m. today and 3-5 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 2. Residents may also go to township hall, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, where there is a petition available at the reception-ist's desk.

U.S. Rep. Bill Ford arranged a meeting last November with township officials and Vernita Martin, district manager of customer services and sales, Detroit postal district, to get the ball rolling on the effort.

Meanwhile, other legislators have come to Canton's aid. "I ask that the postal service undertake a thorough and prompt review of their proposal and provide to both Canton officials and me a detailed response," U.S. Sen. Carl Levin wrote to U.S. Postmaster General Marvin Runyon.

U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle Jr. also wrote to postal headquarters in Washington, D.C. "Clearly, locating a post office branch in Canton would provide more efficient service to the residents of that community," he wrote.

The committee also had been making efforts to move the existing finance branch in the Harvard Square shopping center to another location within the center, where more room and more accessible parking could be provided.

"We haven't heard anything more about that," Shefferly said.

Plymouth reviews train delay options

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

The city of Plymouth legal department is close to wrapping up a review of options on dealing with trains that block street crossings for five minutes or more.

The review follows Gov. John Engler's signing of a bill earlier this month that increased the time trains could legally block those crossings, from five to seven minutes.

City officials and state Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth, fought the legislation, saying long crossing blockages hamper emergency vehicle access to problems and cause inconvenience for drivers.

City attorney Ron Lowe said the city got a response from the governor's office on his approval of the legislation. "They said they did carefully consider it, but in the end we were but one community objecting to the signing of the bill," Lowe said.

At the Jan. 17 city commission meeting, Lowe outlined four options the city legal department and the city manager would consider, for writing tickets against trains that block crossings for long periods.

"We've eliminated writing tickets under the state statute," Lowe said, and eliminated the option of creating a city ordinance "that will reflect the current state law (seven minutes)."

That leaves the options of writing tickets under the state's uniform traffic code, which could retain the five-minute provision, or writing tickets under the current city ordinance, which also specifies five minutes.

Writing tickets under that current ordinance could be the best way to go, Lowe said, as any change in how the city writes tickets against CSX for crossing delays could suggest a weakness in the city's position related to the suit.

"Because we're in litigation with CSX, we're trying to determine if Plymouth has a constitutional right to prohibit a train from blocking a crossing for more than five minutes," Lowe said.

Wiltsie's progress are positive. Her bone marrow was removed in November and replaced Jan. 14. She had been placed in isolation to prevent infection.

"They are amazed with her," Culver said, referring to physicians working with Wiltsie. "They expected her to run a temperature, she never did. They are using her as a case study."

For sure, doctors say Wiltsie will be able to keep her dog, Shadow, but her habitat for frogs of a variety of species — for which she won a Detroit News science award — in her backyard will have to go, Culver said.

Doctors aren't saying Wiltsie is in remission. "Just because it's been done and there's no signs (of the cancer), they base it all on when it might reappear," Culver said.

Without a doubt, Wiltsie's goal is to return to Field where the 40-45 employees will welcome her with open arms. "Her spirits are so good," Culver said.

Businesses support fund-raising efforts

Proposal A

Vacation homes get taxed more

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Q. I have a northern Michigan summer home as well as one in town. Will the cut in property taxes affect both homes?

A. No, only "your principal legal residence," according to the state treasury department.

Your principal residence will be taxed at six mills if Proposal A passses March 15, and at 12 mills if it doesn't. All non-homestead property will be taxed at 24 mills.

Q. How will the local treasurer know the difference?

A. The state treasury department will mail you a form in which you get to choose. Forms are due out in a couple of weeks. You have until March 1 to return it to the city or township in which the property is located.

"Vacation homes and income property which you do not occupy as your principal residence may not be claimed," says the treasury notice.

Q. Suppose I claim both homes to get the six mill rate. How can they catch me?

A. We have calls into Lansing to determine that. Meanwhile, if you do get caught in a false claim, you can be ordered to pay (1) the extra 12 or 18 mills, (2) interest at one percent above the current prime rate, and (3) a penalty at 5 percent per month of the due tax to a maximum of 50 percent.

Q. We're empty nesters. We have just a small home in town where I work but a much larger lakefront home up north. Can I declare the lakefront home as my principal legal residence?

A. treasury says to use the one that is your "domicile" — that is, "your principal residence, the place you intend to return to whenever you go away. You can have only one domicile at a time."

Q. How much paperwork is there to fill out to get my property tax cut?

A. Very little. Your name(s) and address, social security number(s) and the tax identification number of the property.

Q. I live in a condo. Can I get the lower rate, too?

A. Yes. The treasury form says: "If you own and live in a unit in a multiple-unit dwelling, or in a multipurpose building, give the percentage of the entire building that your unit (your principal residence) occupies."

Another section of the form covers cooperative housing corporations.

Q. How do farmers fare in all of this?

A. Farmers always fare well. Not only the house but the entire farm gets the lower homestead tax rate. The city dweller who lives above his store gets a break only on the residential portion.

There are farmers, however, who have lakefront homes and commute to their farms the way a city person drives to work. We have no word on whether such agricultural property will be taxed as homestead.

Schools upgrade phone system

The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will have a new phone system on Feb. 21 as a part of the technology package voters approved in the 1991 bond project.

Between Feb. 11 and 20, Ameritech will be activating and testing the new Centrex System. All schools will receive the new Centrex lines and will be able to communicate within the district using five-digit dialing.

Every building within the district will have a new main phone number. It will be answered electronically. When a call comes to a building's new main number, the caller will be offered the options of dialing a person's extension, dialing the letters of a person's name, or reaching the building's secretary.

After Feb. 11, if a person dials the building's old number the person will receive a recorded message giving the new number. Ameritech directory assistance will also give out the new building telephone numbers when people call for information.

In addition to the new Centrex lines, Allen, Bird, Central, PCEP, East, Fiegel, Isbister, Pioneer, Smith, Truesdell, West, Hoben, Administration, Maintenance and Transportation/Curriculum buildings will receive new telephone equipment in February. All other buildings will receive new telephone equipment during the fall semester of the 1994-95 school year.

This new communication system also includes voice mail. The voice mail will be phased in throughout the district between now and the end of 1994.

From a classroom phone, teachers will be able to call 911, dial any classroom or office within the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, access their voice mail, transfer a call to another employee, or hold a three-way conference call with colleagues. Teachers will be able to use the volume control to prevent an internal call from ringing into an active classroom.

With the exception of 911, no outside calls can be made from the classroom phones. Outside calls coming into a classroom phone will go directly to voice mail so that class will not be interrupted.

"While decreasing the costs of internal phone service, the system will provide district employees and the community with an effective, easy means of communication," said Donna Aveck, the district's director of computer services and instructional technology. "As with any new system, there will be a period of adjustment. But when we are fully operational, we'll have a phone system that serves well the communication needs of the staff and the community."

The following is a list of the new phone numbers:

E. J. McClendon Building, 416-2700; Maintenance Department, 416-2950; Starkweather Center, 416-4900; Tanger Center, 420-7000; Transportation/Curriculum, 416-3000; Wayne County ISD, 416-2750.

Elementary schools: Allen, 416-3050; Bird, 416-3100; Bentley, 981-2740, Eriksson, 981-5560; Farrand, 420-7100; Fiegel, 416-6030; Field, 397-6330; Gallimore, 416-3150; Hoben, 981-8670; Hulsing, 416-6150; Isbister, 416-6050; Miller, 416-4800; Smith, 416-4850; Tonda, 416-6100.

Middle Schools: Central, 416-2990; East, 416-4950; Lowell, 416-2880; Pioneer, 416-2770; West, 416-7550.

High Schools: Canton, 416-2850; Canton Phase III, 416-2900; Salem, 416-2800; PCEP Complex, 416-7500.

Kindergarten signup planned

Kindergarten registration for the 1994-95 school year will be March 7-11 in the Plymouth-Canton Community School District. Children are eligible to attend kindergarten if they will be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1, 1994.

To register, parents or guardians must bring the child's birth certificate, Social Security number and record of immunization to the elementary school in the child's current attendance area. If you are uncertain about the attendance area, call Ginnie Murdoch, pupil accountant, at 451-3137. Proof of residency in the district also is required.

Immunization includes four doses of diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus; three doses of the polio vaccine; and two doses of the measles, rubella and mumps vaccine. Additional doses of diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus and polio vaccines are required if the series was administered when the child was under 4 years old. Immunizations are available from local physicians or can be obtained free at the Wayne County Health Department on Merriman Road near Michigan Avenue in Wayne. The phone number for the Wayne County Health Department is (313) 467-3319.

Birth certificates for children born in Michigan can be obtained from the Office of the State Registrar and Center for Health Statistics, Michigan Department of Public Health, at 3423 North Logan St., Lansing 48909. The cost is $13. The phone number is (517) 335-8655.

While registration can be made anytime during the year, parents are urged to register their children during this period to permit adequate planning for fall kindergarten.

Students take PRIDE in reading

To promote reading for personal pleasure, the staff of East Middle School has started a reading program.

PRIDE (Put Reading Into the Day at East) program began at the school this fall. Students and staff read during the 20 minute PRIDE reading time daily. Students were expected to come to class prepared with appropriate reading material.

The building schedule was altered slightly to allow for the PRIDE reading time. By taking five minutes from each class period and adding them to the end of the school day, students now have 20 minutes of uninterrupted sustained silent reading.

According to East principal Thomas Workman and assistant principal David Farquharson, PRIDE supports the 1986 "Nation at Risk" recommendation that students need to do more independent reading.

"Silent reading is one of the most important activities for reading development of students of all ages," Workman said. "Independent reading enhances reading comprehension, provides a wide range of background knowledge and promotes reading as a lifelong activity. In addition, independent reading accounts for at least one-third of vocabulary growth."

"Research shows that reading skills improve significantly if students read silently for at least 60 minutes a week," Farquharson commented. "Research also shows that the most effective independent reading programs are implemented on a school-wide basis."

Gardening discussed

A free workshop, "The Indoor Gardener," will be held 10 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 5, at the Plymouth District Library, 223 S. Main. The workshop is being conducted by Wesley Berry Flowers.

This workshop will cover many aspects of indoor home gardening. A question and answer session will be conducted. A free gift will be given to those who attend.

Former drug addict undergoes a renaissance

JOHN TELFORD

Remember the name David Michael Holifield. No, not the heavyweight boxing champion, although he's the same height and weight, and his body is built like a weapon. David Michael Holifield is an ex-drug addict newly paroled from an Ohio prison. Presently he's living in a shelter for the homeless near Detroit's Trombly Adult Day High School on Harper and Van Dyke, where I'm developing a counseling program.

He won't be living there long. Impeccably groomed and dressed in a clean suit and tie, David walked into my counseling center one hot day last September and asked for my help. Technically, I wasn't supposed to give him any, because he already had a high school diploma. But after speaking with him at length and carefully sizing him up, I took him across the street to a clothing store called Off-the-Rack and asked the owner, Richard Jarrett, to give him a job. I had met Richard through his lifelong friend, Cliff Hatcher, the swift leadoff man on Wayne State University's Ohio and Penn Relays champion quartets I anchored in the 1950s.

Richard has a canny cautiousness born of six decades' worth of street experience. "Doc," he told me, "I'll hire this kid, but I confess I'm reluctant. He's a grenade that could explode any second."

Far from exploding, David became one of Richard's most dependable employees, getting paid $20 a day for guarding the racks of merchandise displayed on the street. In the meantime, I contacted MESC and other agencies, and friends such as Reggie Bradford of Detroit's Club West, Greg Blaney of Vic Tanny's, and Spencer Haywood of the Haywood Anti-Drug Foundation to see if I could find David a better-paying job so he could move out of the shelter. Reggie, a University of Michigan All-American, was one of my all-state quarter-milers at Pershing High. And you'll recall that Spencer is the ex-NBA all-star whom I had coached in track.

When recently I brought Spencer to my school to speak, I introduced him to David. Spencer immediately offered him a foundation job that will include an apartment in the Brewster projects and a leased automobile. David's Detroit renaissance was under way.

Earlier, I had suggested that David write to seek employment in the Archer administration. When I read David's handwritten letter, I was pleased to note that he is as eloquent on paper as he is orally. After having a Trombly co-op student type it for him, I wrote a cover letter assuring Archer's people that David, with his reformed reformer's controlled zeal, will make a perfect spokesman for the city's downtrodden legions of ex-cons. David hasn't heard from the mayor's staff yet, but he will.

I also introduced him to Delta Saulsberry of Wayne State, who helped him get financial aid to attend Wayne. In the first session of his sociology class there, he scared his professor and fascinated some coed classmates with a self-introduction detailing his prison experiences. In many ways, he reminds me of a young Malcom X.

I have absolutely no doubt you'll frequently be hearing David Michael Holifield talk on television someday. Remember the name, and mark my words.

John Telford, a Rochester Hills resident, most recently was an administrative assistant in the Rochester School District. He previously was executive director for secondary education in the Plymouth-Canton district.

Superintendents must balance finance, public relations

DOC DOYLE

QUESTION: I've been a high school teacher for over 27 years. During that time I have seen five superintendents in our district come and go. Now our district is looking for a new superintendent. What qualities do boards of education look for in a new candidate? Why didn't you ever become a superintendent?

ANSWER: To set the stage, it is my belief a school superintendent has the toughest job of any job in any given community.

The superintendent is responsible from the time he/she wakes up for the safety of every child who gets on a school bus (the largest transportation system in any city); responsible for the largest lunch room in any city (let's hope no child gets ptomaine poisoning); responsible for gifted, special, college and non college bound students' education; the major caretaker of homeowners tax money, while constantly under the local newspaper's microscope; and always a possible target of the teacher's union, while working up to 70 hours a week.

It is a tough job and the most singular reason why I never sought to go beyond the assistant superintendent for instruction level. Indeed, the one time I was approached by a superintendent head hunter organization (and had my ego inflated), I put on my running shoes and ran six miles (I was a runner at that time) just to clear my head of such insanity.

It is a tough job. I worked with seven superintendents. Three were canned (contracts not renewed); one took a job in Washington (his time was up); one was reassigned to an embarrassing non-entity position (school farm director); another moved on to other challenges; one — a warm, kind man — died right after teacher negotiations went into effect in 1965 (and I know grievances, arbitrations and contracts did him in); one, a survivor, is still a superintendent in the metropolitan Detroit suburban area.

You ask what qualities does a community look for in a new superintendent. The canned answer is they are looking for an educational and instructional leader. But there is more to the story. Let's look primarily at superintendents hired from outside the district. Most internally hired superintendents are well known commodities.

Often, a new superintendent, hired from outside the district, is a contrast to the departing superintendent. Say the departing superintendent was outstanding at public relations and did an excellent PR job with the teachers and community for years.

His/her only weakness was in school finance, budgeting and money in general. The money issue was a low interest area; he/she wanted peace at any price (and the union knew this). He/she pleased many teachers and principals with purchases beyond the budget, while driving the business manager up the wall.

Money gets tight, the board begins to ask tough questions. The business manager takes some heat (most have documentation of every penny requested and by whom). But put your money on the superintendent getting nailed. No different than the head coach of a professional football team. When things get bad, who goes? The head coach goes.

Typically the above district, suffering from financial problems, will now go looking for a candidate with a strong business/financial record.

An opposite example can be made. Say the superintendent is great at school finance but is perceived (right or wrong) as an uncaring, cold person, who is poor at community and teacher/administrator relations. Over the years, the superintendent starts becoming a bit paranoid of the teacher's union and some of the independent thinking administrators.

Anger leads to vindictive language, normal relationships begin to break down. The union leadership starts complaining about a negative environment (and leaks word to the board). The union is not necessarily the problem; that's their job! It is when the superintendent loses support of too many building administrators, the die may then be cast.

Many building administrators are highly respected by their parents, and many of these parents know board members personally. Indeed, there are administrators in some districts so powerful that they could get a superintendent fired. I've seen it happen.

My 30-plus years of experience tell me that the superintendents I've known are a unique breed. Most are extremely bright, have tremendous energy, are able to "juggle 10 problems at one time," a most resilient species, one who took the job for a challenge and not just the money.

Indeed, some superintendents I know, if they had entered the business or the industrial world rather than education, would now be in major corporate positions making five times what education pays.

There are many superintendents who are winners and a few who should have "chickened out" like I did. But my daddy didn't raise any dummies. I knew I had too sensitive a nature for the position.

James "Doc" Doyle, a former teacher/school administrator/university instructor, is president of Doyle and Associates, an educational consulting firm.

When Beach Bound, look good, feel great via custom swimsuit

Frustrated by bathing suits that never fit right? A Birmingham shop lets you design your own and then sews it up. It's a key stop for the smart Beach Bound crowd.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

Sometimes, the walk from the lounge chair to the pool can be a nightmare.

Stress and anxiety can grip even the shapliest sunbather as they worry about their swimsuit riding up their backside, the bathing suit straps falling off their shoulder or the suit's french cut revealing too thick a thigh.

Carol Bross of Bloomfield Hills is out to fix all that. She maintains that women can and should feel great, poolside. At her shop, Beach Bound Ltd., you can create your own bathing suit, custom fit from a variety of designs, fabrics and patterns.

Bross, with the help of seamstress Theresia Oppermann of Rochester Hills, has been creating custom swimsuits and cover-ups for nine years. Locations in Farmington Hills and Rochester were recently consolidated to a centralized location at Adams Square in Birmingham, south of Maple.

"There are a lot of reasons why women can't buy swimsuits off the rack," Bross said. "And I've seen them all. Some people have scarring, others have undergone mastectomies or colostomies. Others are one size on the top and two sizes different on the bottom.

"Some women are just too modest for the swimsuit designs that are currently available. At Beach Bound, we can help them create a bathing suit that compliments their figure, fits properly and comes in a color that enhances their skin tones."

Many customers also order matching cover-ups, culottes, short and wrap skirts.

The cost for such personalized service is amazingly affordable. After an hourlong fitting, fabric consultation and follow-up fitting, complete with last-minute alterations, shoppers spend $65 to $140. The process usually takes a week or less, depending on how busy the shop is.

"We prefer that customers call and make an appointment before coming," Bross said. "This way, we can schedule the necessary time and no one is rushed. Spring and summer are the busiest times. Everyone wants their suit by the Fourth of July. However, right now we're seeing a lot of people who want swimwear for a cruise."

Designer Sigrid Olsen inspired by nature

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

BEHIND THE LABEL

OK. OK. You know it's cruisewear because it's got little nautical flags all over the front and it comes in red, white and blue.

Don't these designers have any imagination?

Sigrid Olsen does.

In 1984, the silk-screen print artist joined forces with a sales representative eager to start a clothing company — and SEGRETS was born. (Their first collection of cotton sportswear was called SEGRETS, a combination of Sigrid and her favorite bird, the egret.)

Sigrid Olsen: Stays close to roots as handweaver.

Today the collections are called Sigrid Olsen and Sigrid Olsen sport, with the motto Vision/Art/Clothing/Life and annual sales in the millions.

Olsen traveled to Livonia recently to raise money for the Angela Hospice at a fashion show of her latest collection at Jacobson's in the Laurel Park Place Mall.

"I stay close to my roots as a handweaver by relying on natural fibers such as textural linens, washed cottons and twills, shaping them in colors that run the gamut from ultranatural to vibrant," she said. "My prints are all one-of-a kind, inspired by my love of nature."

Olsen's primitive-looking prints appear on sweaters, suit lapels, vests, and dresses. She said she is one of few designers who actually design their own prints from scratch.

"All the forms we create as human beings really come from nature in one form or another," she said. "It's always been a big influence on me. I love going to the beach, the sand, the waves . . . The color of sand is really a million different colors. I take them and interpret them into whatever it is I'm doing."

Olsen found she could create decorative motifs for clothing the way primitive man decorated shields, jars or stools. She creates designs in their pure state, reflecting the art in places like Jakarta, the Ivory Coast, Nepal and Morocco.

"The most common-asked question of me is, 'Aren't you afraid of running out of ideas?' But, I'm so happy that I've found something that can keep up with the number of ideas I have!"

Olsen said the first time she knew her fashions would be exciting was the first time she saw yardage of her fabric printed.

"I learned all the aspects of getting prints onto clothing," she said. "The styles and silhouttes I like best are simple, direct, flattering and comfortable so when you put a garment on, it feels like your best friend."

She compares creating prints to composing music, where the colors are like notes of a melody that come together to give a "thrill."

This season's hottest staple will be knits that turn up in one-of-a-kind patterns on chunky sweaters that ward off spring's cool breezes.

"I like wearing Olsen's designs because they're comfortable and unique," said Laura Wolf of Farmington Hills. She was shopping for a "few fun and funky" evening looks to wear in Jamaica next month.

"I may buy this print vest to wear over a long skirt," she said. "It's really neat and I can pair it with shorts or a blouse."

Decorative design: Festive embroidery livens Sigrid Olsen's white cotton shirt, which ties over multicolor floral pants in rayon.

Retail businesses in suburban malls and on suburban Main Streets are invited to submit announcements of upcoming special events and promotions for Added Attractions. The deadline to submit news is the Wednesday before publication on Monday. Send announcements to Malls & Mainstreets, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, 48150, or fax them to 313-591-7279.

assistant Sharon Feury of Troy, asks questions about the customer's swimsuit needs and preferences. When the salesperson gets an idea of what the customer is all about, the two enter the fitting room in the back of the shop to select appropriate tops, bottoms or one-piece designs — and the first fitting begins.

"A customer will tell us if they want the waistband higher or lower, the neckline with or without straps, the thighline cut longer or higher," Bross said. "We talk about what would look best and why."

Next, the customer selects her swimsuit fabric from various color and print samples that can be mixed and matched for a custom creation. In the privacy of a dressing room, measurements are taken and entered into a computer for a numerical pattern from which to cut.

The order and fabric go into a bag for Oppermann to stitch into a Beach Bound Ltd. special. Her work is so perfected that the inside of the suits look as smooth and professional as the outside, with no open seams.

Bross said she bought the idea for the company nine years ago from a woman who had a similar store in Florida.

"I stopped in her shop while on vacation and thought it was a great business idea. The woman warned me that custom bathing suits would never sell well in Michigan, but she was wrong," Bross said. "Our swimsuit season is actually longer than hers because so many people travel and vacation year-round.

"I really enjoy my work. I know I'm helping people feel together when they are in a situation where other people are looking at them. My swimwear gives confidence that you normally don't have when you go to the pool or the beach."

Donna Herron of Waterford stopped in to order her fourth bathing suit from Beach Bound before a trip to Cancun.

"I can get the fit I want by asking them to drop an inch or two here or there, tighten the suit on top or add a tummy liner or sock-up bra," she said.

"So many of the bathing suits in department stores are too skimpy or there's no bra inside. If there is a bra, then the suit is too old fashioned. I can get just what I want here and they do a great job. I've sent five of my girlfriends to Beach Bound."

The shop no longer makes men's or children's swimsuits. It's for women only.

■ HOLIDAY RETAIL REPORT

The Michigan Retailers Association said holiday sales rose on average 16.5 percent over 1992 sales from Thanksgiving to Christmas.

According to Larry Meyer, MRA vice chairman, the increase was better than the 12 percent predicted by the association in a pre-holiday poll. Sales were highest in Lansing, Battle Creek and Jackson where 68 percent of the retailers reported an average increase of 20 percent over the 1992 holiday figures.

Here in southeast Michigan, 63 percent of the retailers reported increases averaging 14 percent over last year's figures.

The association attributes the sales increases to "greater consumer confidence, larger inventories, more effective advertising, and higher levels of customer service."

The association represents 3,900 retail companies operating more than 5,500 stores across the state.

■ WARNER BROS. DEBUTS

CHEF LARRY JANES

Casino food safe bet, odds favor you in Vegas

Planning any late winter or early spring travel? If you're headed to sunny Las Vegas, you might be interested in hearing about what I encountered recently. It could help steer you clear of any mishaps along the way. Not that yours truly is a travel expert, but experience has taught me many lessons.

I'm writing this column somewhere over Utah heading back to the wintry Midwest after spending four glorious days in Las Vegas. The Janes Gang - momma, dad, twin sister Mary and a host of cousins - descended on Glitter Gulch hoping momma would win the slot tournament at the Westward Ho, and we would return with our pockets bulging.

Momma didn't win, and we were all bulging, not from winning Megabucks or Quartermania, but from experiencing one of Las Vegas' finer qualities, the all-you-can-eat buffet. Before we regress to the buffet, allow me a few insights on "air" fare.

Travel insights

I firmly believe you get what you pay for. When you pay a little over $220 for round trip airfare prime rib and fresh grilled tuna are certainly not expected on the in-flight catering menu.

Having experienced charter air service in the past, my expectations were not those of one flying first class. Suffice it to say that the four hours spent on the charter were as pleasant as the tub of chicken and pasta (made with overcooked noodles and lunch meat-style chicken chunks) complete with a plastic fork (no knife).

There is only one thing to say about charter airline food folks, and that is simply to forget it and bring your own.

Casino cuisine

On a much more positive, and somewhat suprising note, I am pleased to report that there seems to be a changing of the guard in corporate food service offices throughout the casinos. Don't be misled here folks, you can still find "beef ala Dutch" (the ingredients still undefinable to this writer) and leather tough roast beef carved by someone wearing a white jacket and a hair net in any casino buffet. You might even have to bypass the "stuffed sole" sitting under a heat lamp, but on Friday night, Harrah's chefs were char-grilling, much to my suprise, fresh Alaskan salmon fillets, and the tab was only $5.95.

Saturday night at Circus Circus rivaled Harrah's with steamed crab legs, and they weren't snow crab either, while the Mirage breakfast buffet was resplendent with fresh fruit, hot and cold cereal assortment and sausage that actually looked edible.

It wasn't served on a plastic plate or smothered in what Las Vegans think is country gravy. For the uninitiated, let me pass along a little secret - some casinos actually use the rendered grease from cooking your sausage and bacon to make their gravy.

One last word on casino food and that is simply that anyone who dares eat a half pound hot dog deserves exactly what they get. If the slots don't pay out, your gut certainly will. If the thought of dining during normal times and waiting like a pen of cattle in the buffet line concerns you, the best times to buffet are between normal hours, Las Vegas offers some consistently good restaurant dining experiences.

Again, as with air travel, you get what you pay for. Remember that the person serving you at some cheap sandwich shop probably couldn't cut the mustard at a hotel. Service can be spotty if downright nonexistent.

Pietro's offers center strip visitors a particularly enjoyable Italian dining experience, but for good food and a great value, cab it over to Warren Klien's Garlic Cafe. If you love garlic you'll find it in everything from soup to ice cream there. One of my Las Vegas contacts snuck me a privy copy of the new menu for the Planet Hollywood restaurant soon to open in the Forum Shops at Caesar's Palace.

Movie memorabilia lovers will go wild, but so will those who enjoy cutting edge cuisine from La-La land. Look for a March opening. Old downtown Las Vegas sandwich lovers will certainly appreciate the hot pastrami sandwiches at the Four Queens (momma's favorite) and if you go there, go at night when the lights are as wild as the city itself.

Dining experiences abound everywhere in Las Vegas from the 49 cent breakfast to the $50 dinner, but remember, if you fly there via charter, pack your own lunch.

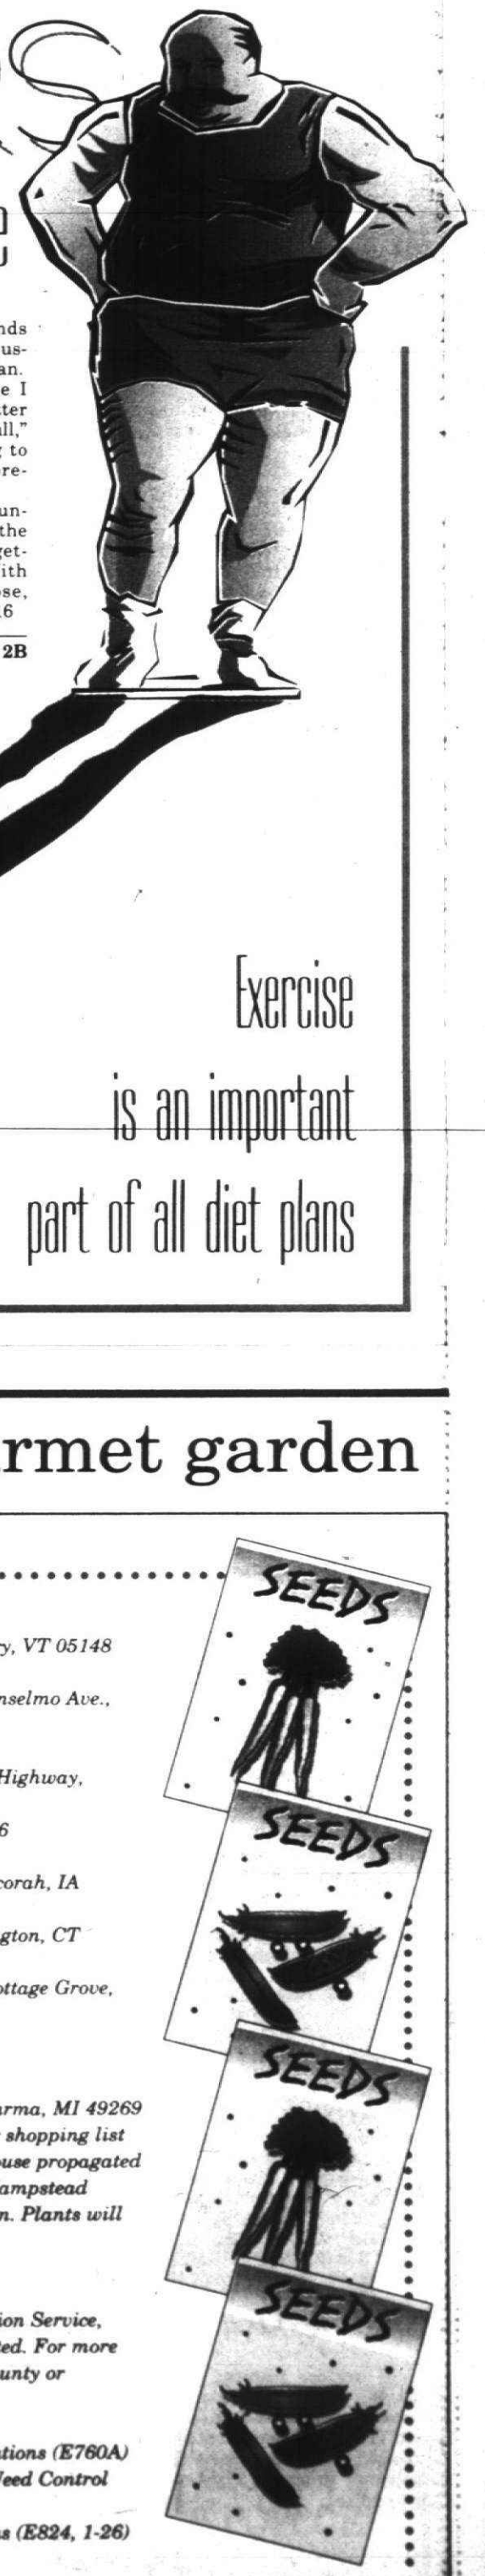
BIG LOSERS

Lose weight gradually to win battle of the bulge



Healthy Resolves

Forget the word diet. Don't set yourself up for failure with unrealistic expectations. Dietitians agree the best weight-loss strategy is exercise and a well-balanced, low-fat food plan that includes healthy snacks.

BY BARBARA WILSON
STAFF WRITER

The words successful and loser are seldom applied to the same individuals. In the case of people who have managed to lose weight and maintain that loss, however, the term "successful losers" fits.

There are a score of diet plans on the market, each competing for the money and the attention of those who have battled the bulge most of their lives.

Some of the support offered by these programs is helpful to those who need a little extra hand-holding, but dietitians agree the best plan is a well-balanced diet with an eye to preparation, fat content, snacking and exercise.

"Forget the word diet," said Annapolis Hospital dietitian Cinde Rutkowski. "For long-lasting weight loss, it is best to make reasonable changes to the daily food plan and keep track of the foods you eat."

Strict diets can set people up for failure and then even more weight gain, according to Robin Ferris, director of the Institute for the Study of Eating Disorders in Novi.

"Gradual weight loss is the best," Ferris said. "Understand that a half pound loss a week is just fine and don't put such high expectations on yourself."

Rose Marie Noble of Canton Township and Cheryl Keller of Southfield are determined, this time, to maintain their weight. Noble lost 52 pounds and Keller lost 214 pounds using the Weight Watchers plan.

"I don't really feel like I gave up anything, as a matter of fact I usually feel quite full," Noble said. "I'm learning to watch what I eat and to prepare foods with lower fat."

Keller admits she felt hungry when she first started the plan, but said things are getting a little easier now. With another 66 pounds to lose, Keller tipped the scale at 416

Dig into catalogs to plot gourmet garden

BY ELEANORE AND RAY HEALD
SPECIAL WRITERS

If you'd like to make your summer dinner table a place of delight and discovery, you need to start planning. If you've only planted packaged seeds from a local garden supply center, you may want to expand your horizons by investigating heir loom seeds available through catalogs.

Will Horwath of Southfield is an avid gardener. "It has always been a joy for me to watch things grow," Horwath said. "Weeding was never a chore."

Horwath makes a point of choosing vegetables that are unique. "I grow things you can't get at a produce market in high season like tomatillos. They make incredible salsas. Silver Queen corn doesn't transport well even when Michigan's commerical farmers grow it so that's a good one to choose. There's nothing like the flavor of fresh-picked vegetables. Everyone realizes this about corn, but it's true for all vegetables.

Horwath emphasizes the beauty of a garden. "Eggplants are pretty to grow, especially the small Oriental varieties suitable for stuffing," he said. "Where else, but in your own garden, can you get a zucchini as big as your little finger with the flower still on the end? Grow red cabbage, it's beautiful."

As soon as the ground can be worked, Horwath plants snow peas and spinach, but because Michigan's growing season is short, a part of his garden focuses on vegetables that can be harvested during the fall, and frequently into early win ter if plants are covered with straw.

"I refer to these vegetables as the cabbage and tuber varieties including potatoes, onions, celeriac, carrots, leeks and parsnips," he said. "It's nice in the fall and early winter, when everything's dying, to continue picking a vegetable from a garden."

Horwath also grows what are affectionately called winter greens including Bok choy (Chinese cabbage), Swiss chard (both red and green), broccoli, kale and collard greens. "When frost hits cabbage and tuber crops, they don't die, they get sweeter," Horwath said.

Because Oakland University professor Bob Christina savors the taste of homegrown tomatoes, he plants "long keepers" in his Rochester Hills backyard garden. "You need to be conscious of fall weather patterns and monitor the first frost," he said. "But if you cover long keeper tomato plants on a frosty night and pick as late pounds on her first trip to Weight Watchers in 1991.

"I learned I had multiple sclerosis and pictured myself someday lying somewhere unable to care for myself," Keller said. "I prayed a long time for the desire to lose the weight, hoping in the back of my mind that it wouldn't be granted. But it was and a friend asked me to go to a meeting with her."

Now, Keller said, it feels great to know that if she falls down she can pick herself up again.

"We find that most people eat for emotional reasons," Ferris said. "They find food has a numbing effect and are used just like drugs and alcohol."

The therapist said it is important to understand why we eat too much and consider what is at the root of the binging before sitting down with a box of Little Debbie's.

"We tell people that when they get an urge to binge, they should put the craving off for 15 minutes and gradually extend that time. Most of the time, they find the craving passes," said Ferris.

Keller said there is little chance of eliminating desserts and snacks from her life, so she has just learned to accommodate the treat into her daily food plan.

"If I'm going to fix a dessert, I plan for it all day and cut back someplace else," she said.

Noble finds herself snacking during the day, so instead of getting out the whole bag of pretzels and munching during the course of the day, she measures out a cup of pretzels and puts that on the counter.

"That's all the pretzels I get for the day," she said. "I eat them more slowly and am more conscious of how many I am eating."

Rutkowski, a Plymouth resident and immediate past president of the Michigan Dietetic Association, said these are good ways to curb the amount of food you eat during the day and to better plan meals.

"It's important to make trades sometimes," she said. "You can't eliminate junk food completely. It's just important to consider what we are eating."

Fat is perhaps the most important dietary avoidance there is. We all need a certain amount of fat in our diet, but Rutkowski said Americans eat far more fat than is necessary. Chicken, fish and pasta are all healthy alternatives to the high-fat, red meat diet most of us grew up with.

Rutkowski said it is also important to consider calorie density when selecting fruits and vegetables. Fruits with lower calorie density have a greater amount of water — a banana has greater density than watermelon. The banana is still good for you, but you may want to limit the amount of bananas you eat to promote weight loss.

Here are some other tips Rutkowski offers on weight loss and just healthy eating in general:

- Consider the size of the plate used. A luncheon plate will look full with less food on it.
- Sit down and slow down to eat. By eating slowly, the body has more time to digest the food and know that it is full. Try putting utensils down between bites of food and don't watch television while eating.
- Avoid convenience foods. They are fatty, salty and expensive.
- Bake rather than fry.
- Try salsas and chutneys in place of sour cream, butter or creamy dips.
- Make a menu for the week with everything included and make a grocery list using that menu. Buy only as much as is needed for the meal and buy only what is on the list.
- Plan meals with the meat or protein source as the side dish and the vegetable as the main course. This creates a wonderful opportunity to try new side dish recipes.
- Take some time before going back for second helpings or start with small portions, leaving yourself the option of going back for another small serving.
- Exercise is an important part of all diet plans and is an important part of a healthy lifestyle.

as possible into October, they'll last another month on the kitchen counter and extend homegrown tomato delights long after vine-ripened tomatoes are unavailable in the produce section."

Horwath is interested in ordering from seed companies specializing in heirloom varieties. "This year, I'm ordering Radiator Charley's Mortgage Lifter tomatoes for the first time. I understand they are especially flavorful in addition to having an intriguing name."

Horwath's garden also includes herbs. "I buy basil plants from a garden supply/nursery house," he said. "Once started from plants, the perennials such as thyme, oregano, rosemary, sage and mint come up every year. Mint is an underused and undervalued herb. Mediterranean cooking, which is popular today, has discovered the use of mint."

Much creative gardening is being done by several California wineries. The most innovative is at Fetzer Vineyards Valley Oaks Ranch in Hopland, California. Always on the cutting edge of food trends, the Fetzer garden abounds with an infinite variety of vegetables, especially peppers. Southwest cooking is hot!

Fetzer's gardening coordinator Jeff Dawson starts peppers in a greenhouse with heat underneath the trays. "After the frost-free date in your area, harden seedlings for a week or two by setting them out for a few hours on warm days," Dawson advises. "Don't plant seedlings too early. They will react negatively if the ground or night air is cold and they may never recover. Pepper plants need staking if you live in an area subject to gusty summer thunderstorms."

Dawson's remark about transplanting too early holds for all seedlings. They all need warm soil and warm air. A cold spell can set them back all season. The recommended planting period in Wayne and Oakland counties is May 20 to June 1. Plants can go into the ground earlier than May 20, but then the gardener must monitor weather forecasts and cover tender plants with cut-off milk cartons to protect them. Frost-free dates are statistical and only provide guidelines.

Dawson agrees with Horwath that a garden offers ornamental attraction. "Peppers perform well in containers and enhance the attractiveness of a patio or terrace," he says. "In cooler climates, containers make good sense. You can move them into the sun during the day and keep them sheltered at night."

Herbs grow equally well in containers and in the ground. Using planters in a variety of colors provides instant outdoor beauty. When using a planter, drill drainage holes in the pot bottom and for enhanced drainage, fill the bottom with pebbles.

Most modern seed companies concentrate on hybrid varieties that are bred for uniform size, high yield, disease resistance and shipability with little flavor consideration. If you haven't been able to grow tasty tomatoes like the ones your grandpa used to grow, you need to research heirloom seeds. These are the beloved, old varietals passed from gardener to gardener over the backyard fence for many generations.

Flavor is foremost with heirlooms. Horwath is enchanted by the very name of Radiator Charley's Mortgage Lifter tomatoes. But try the following on for size — Jenny Lind melons, January King cabbage, Purple Giant cauliflower, King Denmark spinach, White Egg turnips, Chioggia beets, Peaches and Cream corn and Dragon Tongue beans.

Horwath paraphrases Robert Frost's poem "Putting in the Seed" — "All this probably isn't going to work unless you're a slave to the Springtime Passion for the Earth."

Savory Middle Eastern salad rich in fiber

Americans are discovering the distinctive flavors and textures of three delicious whole grains — barley, buckwheat and bulgur — that are versatile additions to almost any meal. These grains are excellent sources of fiber, nutrients and complex carbohydrates, and they give you more vitamins and minerals than most refined or processed grain products.

Trying new types of grains can add new interest to your meals and, by replacing some of the meat in your menu with grains, you can also cut back on fat and calories. Here's a guide to barley, buckwheat and bulgur.

Barley is generally available as either pearl or pot (Scotch) barley. Refined pearl barley is white and translucent with its husk removed, while whole-grain pot barley has only the outer layer of the husk removed and must be soaked overnight before cooking. Barley's chewy texture is delicious in a pilaf, stir-fry or stuffing, and can be used to flavor and thicken soups and stews.

Use three cups of boiling liquid for one cup barley and simmer for 30 to 50 minutes. Or use quick-cooking barley, which uses less water and cooks in 10 to 12 minutes.

Buckwheat is actually a fruit, but it looks, cooks and tastes like a grain. Groats, the pale kernels in the buckwheat shells, are used most often as flour in pancakes, biscuits and muffins. However, groats make a fine breakfast cereal and are a good substitute for rice or pasta. Add one cup groats to two cups boiling water or broth, then cover, reduce heat, and simmer about 15 minutes or until the liquid is absorbed. Kasha, the roasted, hulled buckwheat kernels, have a light brown color and nutty flavor that is very different from groats and makes a good substitute for potatoes. Kasha can be cooked the same way as buckwheat.

Bulgur is the parched, steamed and dried berry of wheat. The process conserves most of the nutrients in the grain by leaching them from the outer layer into the center of the grain. In the Middle East where bulgur originated, it is best known for its use in tabouli salad.

With its crunchy texture and mild flavor, bulgur is also excellent in casseroles, vegetables dishes and as a rice substitute. Add one cup of bulgur to two cups of boiling liquid, then reduce heat and simmer for about 20 minutes, or until liquid is absorbed.

Tabouli is an easy-to-prepare Middle Eastern-style bulgur salad that is rich in nutrients and fiber. You can add more vegetables to this salad, such as grated carrots, chopped green pepper and chopped cucumber. This recipe is from the American Institute for Cancer Research.

TABOULI

1 cup dry bulgur
1 cup cooked garbanzo beans (chickpeas)
1 teaspoon crushed garlic
3 medium tomatoes, chopped
2 cups fresh parsley, minced
6 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup scallions
Freshly ground pepper and salt to taste
½ teaspoon dried or 1 teaspoon fresh mint (optional)

Combine the bulgur with 1½ cups boiling water in a bowl. Cover and let it stand 30-60 minutes, or until the grains are firm but no longer hard in the center. If necessary, shake in a strainer and squeeze to remove extra water.

Mix the bulgur with the remaining ingredients and chill for at least 1 hour.

Each of the 6 servings contains 230 calories and 8 grams of fat.

Cool food fast for safety

"Cold weather inspires many people to cook up a large pot of homemade soup these days," said Sylvia Treitman, home economist for the Michigan State University Extension Program, Oakland County office.

"However, if hot soup is not cooled quickly and properly, you may get more than you bargained for," said Treitman.

If a large pot of soup is left to cool by itself, it will need many hours to reach a cool temperature. By that time it may have already begun to grow dangerous bacteria, which can result in food poisoning.

Rapid cooling of food is a food safety practice to avoid a food poisoning incident. The best advice we can give is to cool that large pot of food quickly.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Consumers are baraged with a steady stream of food labeling claims for "light" (or "lite"). Soon, these terms will have to shed their ambiguity as the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) forces retailers to comply with new labeling rules by July, 1994. Under the new regulations, "light" may be used to describe a product that contains at least one-third fewer calories or 50 percent less fat than the reference food. "Light" may also be used to describe the sodium content of a low-calorie, low-fat product if it has been reduced by half. On the other hand, the term "more" may be used to describe any food containing at least ten percent more of the daily value for protein, vitamins, dietary fiber, or potassium than the reference food.

Instead of trusting the labeling of foods designated as "light", learn to read the labels for fat content. Fats are measured in grams, and the more grams of fat in a product, the higher its fat content. At the GOOD FOOD CO., a natural food supermarket, we offer an amazing variety of vitamins, supplements, and whole food products. We are committed to offering the lowest prices possible for the highest quality food. If you have any questions, please call us at 981-8100. We are located at 42615 Ford Rd. We are open Monday-Saturday from 9:00 to 9:00, and Sundays from 10:00 to 6:00. Remember, food can be good for you and also taste great!

P.S. The term "light" may also be used to describe the color or texture of a food, as long as the label indicates such.

Chef's secret: Vegetarians can omit the bacon and substitute steamed broccoli, sauted mushrooms, corn and sauted onions for a great taste too!

Even though it didn't finish in the top five, this recipe was a national finalist at the Beef Cook-off in Cheyenne, Wyo., this fall.

ITALIAN BISTRO STEAK SUBS

1½ pound boneless beef top sirloin, cut 1-inch thick
6 hogie or crusty Italian rolls (split lengthwise)
12 romaine lettuce leaves
½ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅓ cups shredded fontinella or mozzarella cheese
Pepper relish:
1 jar (9½ ounces) mixed pepper salad
½ cup prepared chunky mild salsa
¼ cup sliced ripe olives

Drain pepper salad, reserving 2 teaspoons of the oil mixture. Coarsely chop pepper salad. In a small bowl, combine chopped pepper salad, salsa and olives; set aside.

Brush reserved oil mixture over both sides of beef steaks. Place steak on a hot grill (or under a broiler) and cook for 16-20 minutes for rare to medium doneness, turning once.

Trim fat from steak. Carve steak crosswise into thin slices; season with garlic salt and pepper. Line bottom half of each roll with romaine lettuce leaves. Arrange steak slices over the top. Top each sandwich with 2 tablespoons pepper relish; sprinkle with shredded cheese. Close sandwiches. Serves 6.

Include economical rice in your supper plans

LOIS THIELEKE

Rice deserves a place on the dinner table. A half cup of almost any kind of plain rice contains about 110 calories, lots of complex carbohydrates, a little protein, and except for some packaged mixes, scarcely any fat. Rice is a staple for over half of the world's population. The Japanese eat about 158 pounds of rice per person yearly compared to Americans which eat only about 18 pounds per person.

Rice costs just pennies a serving, and is a big budget booster. Since there's no waste in fixing, no loss in cooking, you get exactly what you pay for. There are thousands of rice varieties, but for most cooks, the length of the grain is the most important difference.

Cooking rice

Short grained rice tends to be sticky and glutinous when cooked. These short grained rice varieties are used most frequently in croquettes, rice puddings, casseroles and molded rice rings. Long grained rice cooks fluffy and is a good choice for salads, pilafs and Chinese style dishes.

To cook rice, it is not necessary to wash it before cooking. This old method probably dates back to the time when rice was dusted with talcum powder that needed to be washed off before cooking. It should not be necessary to rinse it after cooking either. When properly cooked, rice shouldn't need to be drained.

The secret in cooking is measuring accurately, and making sure your cooking pot has a snug cover. One cup raw rice will yield three cups when cooked. One cup of brown rice yields three to four cups cooked. One cup of pre-processed rice will yield about one to two cups cooked.

Parboiled rice, also known as "converted" rice, is processed white rice that has been partly cooked before milling. This rice is long-grain with a light golden color and cooks the same as regular rice. The reason they parboil it before milling is to make it more nutritious. Usually converted rice will give you a fluffy product every time.

Precooked rice or "instant" needs only the briefest cooking. This rice has been fully or partially precooked before being dehydrated. It's sole advantage is a short cooking time, as it is more expensive than regular rice.

Flavorful varieties

Brown rice (long-grain), retains the bran but not the hulls. Brown rice has a hearty flavor and chewy texture that many people like. Nutritionally, however, brown rice is similar to enriched white varieties, except that it contains slightly more trace minerals, a bit more fat and up to three times more fiber. But unless you eat several cups of it a day, brown rice is not a significant fiber source. Brown rice has about 89 calories per half cup whereas white rice is about 82 calories. Brown rice is usually packaged in smaller boxes or bags because the oil in the bran can go rancid if stored too long. It is recommended that brown rice be stored in the refrigerator for the best quality.

Wild rice, is not a rice at all, but the seeds of a grass native to North America. Now grown in paddies in California, Minnesota and Wisconsin, it is available in most supermarkets. Nutty and rich in flavor, it has more protein and fewer calories than rice (about 70 calories per half-cup cooked), plus some B vitamins. It yields double the volume of regular rice when cooked, which partly makes up for its high price.

Basmati rice, (white or brown), means "queen of fragrance" in Hindi. This rice, grown in India and Pakistan, has a sweet nutty flavor and smell. It is similar nutritionally to other rice but more expensive than plain white long-grains. Basmati rice is great for western dishes as well as for Indian cooking. Texmati, Wehani and wild pecan rice are all basmati hybrids or crosses. Usually these should be picked over and washed before cooking to remove any small stones.

Pre-seasoned rices, mixes are popular and easy to prepare. These are long-grain rice mixed with various seasonings such as beef, chicken, herb, curry, chili, or cheese. Generally, they're very high in sodium as well as price. They may also contain partially hydrogenated oils and cooking instructions call for large amounts of fat. Sugars such as corn syrup and dextrose, may also be ingredients. Read the label.

Flavor ordinary rice with herbs, defatted stock and vegetables to keep the dish low in fat and sodium.

Apple pie with figs sweet

AP — Dried figs add a new wrinkle to old-fashioned apple pie, along with a sweet, melonlike flavor. To make this full-of-fruit pie, you can use light Calimyrna figs or dark Mission figs. Both types are available all year long.

APPLE-FIG PIE

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon purchased or Homemade Apple Pie Spice (recipe below)
6 ounces dried figs, stems removed and finely chopped (1 cup)
1 cup cold water
2 tablespoons honey
1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel
2 tablespoons lemon juice
4 cups thinly sliced, peeled, cooking apples (about 1½ pounds)
1 5-ounce package folded, refrigerated, unbaked pie crusts (2 crusts), at room temperature
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
Whipped cream (optional).

For filling, in a large saucepan stir together sugar, cornstarch and spice. Stir in figs, the 1 cup water, honey, lemon peel and lemon juice. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Remove from heat; gently stir in apples.

Line a 9-inch pie plate with one of the piecrusts. Pour filling into pie plate; spread evenly. Trim pastry to edge of pie plate.

Using an hors d'oeuvre or cookie cutter, cut leaf shapes out of center of top crust; place crust over filling. Arrange leaf cutouts on pastry. Seal and flute pastry edges. In a small bowl beat egg; stir in the 1 tablespoon water. Brush egg mixture onto crust.

To prevent overbrowning, cover edge of pie with foil. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 25 minutes. Remove foil; bake about 25 minutes more or until golden. Cool on a wire rack. Serve with whipped cream. Makes 8 servings.

To Freeze: Prepare pie as directed, except do not make cutouts in top crust, brush with egg mixture, or bake. Cover unbaked pie with an inverted 10-inch paper plate. Wrap tightly in foil; seal, label and freeze for up to 4 months.

To bake, uncover frozen pie. Prick or cut slits in top crust. Rewrap with foil. Bake in a 375-degree F oven for 45 minutes. Uncover and brush with egg mixture. Bake about 40 minutes more or until crust is golden brown. Cover edge of piecrust with foil the last 15 minutes of baking to prevent overbrowning, if necessary.

Homemade Apple Pie Spice: In a storage container combine 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon, 1¼ teaspoons ground nutmeg, 1 teaspoon ground allspice and ¼ teaspoon ground cloves. Store, tightly covered, in a cool, dry place.

MUSIC NOTES

CHRISTINA FUOCO

Soundgarden fans can preview the band's new 15-song album "Superunknown" one month before it hits the stores. By dialing (800) 204-ROCK, fans will hear excerpts of four songs — the funk metal of "Spoonman" (the first single and video), the slow groove of "The Day I Tried to Live," the AOR-made "Fell on Black Days" and the hook-laden "My Wave," one of the songs previewed at their Pine Knob show in the fall.

The band, who begins their U.S. tour in May, will release vinyl copies of their album on Feb. 22, two weeks before the CD and cassette street date of March 8. There will also be a limited amount of colored vinyl — blue, orange and clear.

Excerpts of songs by Swervedriver (who plays the Blind Pig Friday, Feb. 4, with Medicine), Doughboys, Therapy? and Paw can also be heard by calling the number.

Here's a warning for current or future girlfriends of Greta singer Paul Plagens: If your clothes start disappearing from your closet, you can count on an impending breakup. "A girl can tell when we're getting close to the end (of a relationship) when I borrow a couple dresses and don't give them back."

Plagens, you see, has a penchant for wearing dresses. At a recent Harpo's show, he donned a dress on stage and while judging the "sexy ladies" contest. Inside the CD booklet, he was photographed wearing a simple, "Little House on the Prairie" number.

Like his dresses, the band's lyrics are innocent and simple — discussing things like their hatred of school ("School on Fire") and ex-girlfriends ("Dirtbag"). That's a far cry from the intense lyrics their former bandmates — Pearl Jam's Eddie Vedder and Rage Against the Machine's drummer Brad Wilk — are now throwing out. "It's so totally irrelevant," said lead guitarist Kyle Baer when his former bandmates are mentioned. "If this band got really famous, it would be an interesting footnote." But until then, it's a forbidden subject.

Gangster Fun: To be ska free

■ Fed up with being exclusively labeled as "ska," Gangster Fun is trying to show people that the horn-laden form of music isn't just a novelty.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

A "new" label: Few people know what "ska" music is, so Gangster Fun wishes that more people would just call them "alternative."

There's no way to misinterpret how Gangster Fun feels about being pigeonholed as a ska band.

"Ska sucks," drummer Brian Bowie and lead vocalist John Bunkley said almost in sync.

"We're tired of being labeled as a ska band. We're pigeonholed as some sort of novelty act . . . As if ska is any different from alternative. We're just as alternative as any other alternative music," Bowie said.

"Really, we're just like every other rock band in Detroit except we have a little different beat," Bunkley added.

Most people don't realize that, according to Bunkley. He's tired of explaining ska music to people who are unfamiliar with it. (For the record, "The Rolling Stone Encyclopedia of Rock & Roll" describes it as "quicker and less brooding than reggae.")

Because of the ambiguity of ska music, many people assume that it's "this weird, weird fringe thing," Bowie said. In response, they're trying to clear up that misconception. Many things have hindered their quest, however, they said.

For example, winning the "Best World Beat Band" prize at the Detroit Music Awards has caused further confusion. Bowie said that being incorrectly lumped into "world beat" is insulting because they're "alternative."

"When somebody gives you an award that says 'Best World Beat Band,' that's a put down to every world beat band in Detroit," said Bowie, a Pontiac resident.

Also, compilations like "American Ska-thic: A Portrait of Midwest ska Past to Present" further pigeonholes ska, he added. Members of Gangster Fun appear on the CD with the Steady Earnest horns playing a cover of AC/DC's "You Shook Me All Night Long." They're unhappy with the track because it was recorded with another member singing lead — not Bunkley.

At any rate Midwestern ska, they said, doesn't offer Gangster Fun any competition because many bands are just studio projects.

"We don't want anything to do with it," Bunkley said of Midwestern ska.

Chuck Wren, a Chicago ska DJ and organizer of "American Ska-thic," said the "ska" or "Midwestern ska" labels aren't all that bad.

"'Alternative' means nothing today. For them to want to be called that means nothing."

■ STREET BEATS

Bowie and Bunkley stressed that they're not being "pompous" by wanting to nix the musical pigeonhole.

"If you've been listening to it for as long as we have, (you'd be sick of it, too). . . . Our music is different because it's our own. If you can't stand your own music, then you quit the band," Bowie said.

Gangster Fun has been around since the late 1980s when it released "Come See, Come Ska" on England's ska Records in 1989. The album proved successful for the band, which has since gigged with bands such as Fugazi, Bad Brains, Bad Manners and Bim Skala Bim. Bunkley said the key to their success is that musically and lyrically, they use a light-hearted approach to get serious messages across.

"I think we're more light-hearted people than most bands. They take themselves and their music 'way too seriously. They use it as a means to an end . . . just have a good time until you break up," Bunkley said.

Despite general unhappiness with the music business, the duo didn't see Gangster Fun breaking up any time soon. In fact, they're recording an EP at The Disc in Eastpointe for possible release in June. The CD, which will include a cover and a few originals, is their first since 1991's "Time Flies When You're Gangster Fun." It took three years to record their new record, they said, because they were "lazy."

"We just didn't get around to doing it. It's expensive to run a band with 10 people in it," Bowie said. (Gangster Fun also includes keyboardist Andy Birko of Livonia, guitarist/vocalist David Minnick of Center Line, percussionist/vocalist Josh Silverstein of Southfield, saxophonist Chris Minnick of Ann Arbor, trumpeter Tony Albano of Sterling Heights, trombonist John Ferry of Milan and bassist Ron Hill of Detroit.)

"We're a bunch of slackers. We're never on time," Bowie said. (Well, not never: They were on time for their interview.)

The yet-to-be-named EP will carry Gangster Fun's trademark sound. After all, Bowie said, they may be sick of ska, but they're not sick of their music.

Gangster Fun performs Saturday, Feb. 5, along with Gun Rack at the Falcon Club, 3515 Caniff, Hamtramck. Doors open at 9 p.m. Must be 18 to enter. Cover charge is $5. For more information, call (313) 368-6010.

Rising stars: Hot Footin' Puddin' Pie — Kim Marro (left), Dee Boman, Deb Agolli and Lenny Pops — is quickly becoming one of the most talked-about Detroit bands.

Proof is in Puddin' for charming band

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Hot Footin' Puddin' Pie has an undeniable charm about them.

When lead singer Lenny Pops enters a room, he commands attention with his somewhat pompous air, trademark curly reddish-brown hair and 1970s-style black leather coat. In tow are three females who ooze "cool" — suave drummer Deb Agolli, the platinum-blonde cherubic Kim Marro, and the sweet-talking smiling Dee Boman.

This quartet may be an eyeful to look at but don't underestimate their musical talent. They've become one of the most talked about up-and-coming Detroit bands.

Modestly Marro explained how she thinks the buzz about Hot Footin' was created:

"We're not so serious. We have a playful, charming aspect. It's contagious when people see us," she said.

Try to take your eyes away from the stage on which Hot Footin' is playing and you'll find yourself subconsciously returning to them.

The sweet vocal harmonies of Agolli, Marro and Boman in songs like "Willow Tree" will swirl around in

Blink' suffers from chronic eye strain

By John Monaghan
Staff Writer

In "Blink," Madeleine Stowe plays Emma, a raven-haired Celtic violinist who has been blind for most of her 28 years. Following a cornea transplant, her vision blurs in and out of murky focus as she becomes accustomed to her second sight.

Emma isn't overjoyed with what she sees. She lives in a dingy section of Chicago, where everything appears ugly and crass. On the first night with the bandages off, she sees the foggy image of a murderer who killed the woman in the apartment upstairs.

For her part, Stowe is quite believable as a strong-willed woman coping with a dramatic change in her life. The script for "Blink," however, degenerates into your standard serial killer scenario with only an occasional twist.

■ MOVIES

Likable Irish actor Aidan Quinn is the police detective assigned to the murder case. Not surprisingly, he falls in love with his star witness.

There's an appealing Chicago/Celtic background to "Blink," but it's only on the surface. A brief chase through the annual St. Patrick's Day Parade adds up to nothing and only serves to remind you how cleverly the same event was used in last year's "The Fugitive."

Fans of the genre will find a few surprises, a decent red herring and a perverse quality that goes beyond the killer's penchant for necrophillia and blood-letting. The cop himself has a weird view of the victims. As a dead woman lies in her own blood in a bathtub, he pretends to interrogate her.

And as much as we're outraged by the murder, our only images of the victim are of a spoiled, noisy young woman who made faces at Emma as they passed on the stairs.

Among the movie's assets is Michael Apted, perhaps the only director in Hollywood who jumps nimbly between documentary and narrative projects. He's still best known for his ongoing portrait of English classmates from children to adults. (The latest installment was called "35 Up.")

He uses the heroine's blurry vision to effectively keep you on edge, messing with the part of your body which many might consider the most sensitive. Faces transform in a yellow haze, sometimes into the killer or her mother, who blinded Emma at age eight by slamming her face into a mirror.

A tough, smart woman plagued by memories of the past, was one of the keys to "Silence of the Lambs," but that's overshadowed here by typical dumb movie conventions. The love-hate relationship with Quinn's chauvinistic cop leads to a steamy scene in her apartment where they can't hide their passions any longer.

The Oscar for "Silence" proved that you don't need a dopey love relationship to sell a thriller. Movies like "Blink" remain blind to that idea.

your head long after the show is over. In sync with their influences that begin as far back as the 1950s, the three women dress the part. Sometimes it's calf-length poodle-like skirts and scarves tied around their hair, or tight T-shirts and jeans. But in Hot Footin's case, it's not the clothes that make the band, Pops said.

"We work really hard in writing songs that we'd like to listen to and play," said Pops, whose band plays The Falcon Club in Hamtramck on Thursday.

That list includes influences like The Velvet Underground, David Bowie's Ziggy Stardust years, Parliament-Funkadelic and The Stooges.

"P.J., P.J. Harvey," interjected Boman, dressed in shorts, thigh-high leg warmers and a bulky sweater.

"Old disco," energetically added Agolli, who chose that day to wear a tight Peter Frampton T-shirt, faded jeans and a tan cardigan sweater.

Hot Footin', a name that Marro and Boman came up with while driving back from a trip down south, blends these influences into a groovy, sometimes bluesy and hypnotic sound. Pops said it is their way of honoring their main influences, such as "the Detroit sound of the '70s."

"We like to pay homage to it in our own way," said Pops, a Philadelphia, Pa., native.

They don't mimic any sound, however. It's one that's definitely their own.

"We just play what's true to us; we're not trying to jump on any bandwagon," Pops said.

"I don't think there's any bandwagon we could jump on," interrupted Agolli, who also plays with the band Outrageous Cherry.

"We just want to make eardrums bleed," Pops added with a suspicious smile.

Folks attending this year's Mardi Gras festival in New Orleans will get to feel that pleasantly painful experience. The band will head down there later this month to play on the street for partiers. Boman and Marro, one-time members of an Irish folk band, are veterans of the festival. They made a whopping $6.66 in donations from the crowd.

"We felt so stupid singing to the air," Marro said sweetly. "But it's the whole vibe."

Most of the people down there are too, well, pre-occupied to pay attention to the music. Marro said nevertheless it's fun playing along side of national alternative rock acts like the Chickasaw Mudpuppies.

"It's like it doesn't matter who you are . . . There's a whole diverse musical range (performing)," she said.

Although they don't plan on making tons of money down there, the scene is befitting of the attitude they have about their shows.

"We try to create a party atmosphere. We want it to be laid back. Forget about the big show business vibe," Pops said.

CC ices Stevenson

Redford Catholic Central, rated No. 2 in the latest statewide coaches Class A hockey poll, ran its overall record to 11-0-1 with a 7-2 win over Livonia Stevenson in a non-leaguer Wednesday at Eddie Edgar Arena.

Greg Vaquera, Pete Davis, Eric Vaquera and Bob Klemmer scored during a third-period surge. Kevin Pedersen assisted on two of the goals. Davis, Dan Hunt, Greg Vaquera, Ken Lauer and Chris Gonzalez also drew assists.

The Shamrocks led 3-0 after one period on goals by Jon Heady, Mark Holdridge and Greg Vaquera. Assists went to Jeff Helner, Jason Couture, Heady and Holdridge.

Stevenson got second-period goals from Kevin Berger and Dave Gorton, but the Spartans (8-6 overall) couldn't beat CC netminder Mike Brusseau in the final period.

CC outshot the Spartans, 31-12.

Ocelots can't keep pace with Henry Ford

■ SC SPORTS

After losing for the ninth time in 10 Eastern Conference games, it's easy to understand why Schoolcraft College men's basketball coach Dave Bogataj would be a bit short on patience.

Particularly when history keeps repeating itself, which it seemingly did in Wednesday's 92-74 loss to Henry Ford CC at SC.

"We talked about it last time," said Bogataj. "We got destroyed in the second half. And we didn't get the rebounding when we needed it."

Against St. Clair CC four days earlier, the Ocelots had pulled to within five with 7½ minutes left to play, then ended up losing by 20.

They never got that close to the Hawks in the second half. The best SC could do was narrow the gap to 10.

Henry Ford, which shared the conference lead at 7-3 with Highland Park going into Saturday's games, opened the game with a 13-2 run and was never headed.

Mickey Brown proved overpowering for the Hawks; he scored 39 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and limited SC's Todd McNeil, the conference's leading scorer and fourth-best rebounder, to 17 points and five boards.

Chris Ireland added 18 points and Aaron Bailey scored 15 for Henry Ford.

In addition to McNeil, SC got double-figure scoring from Dan Perttula (17 points) and Tony Maciejewski (16). Maciejewski also had a team-high seven rebounds. Fadi Bazzi played well at point guard, collecting six points and nine assists while committing just two turnovers.

The Ocelots, now 7-13 overall, were without starting forward Steve Whitlow for the third-straight game. Whitlow was suffering from a mild case of pneumonia; he is expected to be able to play Wednesday against Delta.

■ HENRY FORD 69, SC 61 (WOMEN): A terrible first half proved more than the Lady Ocelots could overcome Wednesday at SC.

The loss left them at 7-8 overall, 3-6 in the conference. Henry Ford improved to 6-3 in the conference.

SC coach Jack Grenan estimated that his team "missed 10 layups" in the first half, one good reason the Lady Hawks were up 43-23 at the break. But the Lady Ocelots kept hammering away at the deficit, thanks to strong inside play from Jennifer Samson (14 points) and Tricia Kazyaka (12).

Canton rally clips Pats

■ There was no giving up in this match. Plymouth Canton and Livonia Franklin struggled through five full games, with the decisive final game going into overtime. And in the end, it was a player off the bench who decided the outcome.

Smart subbing.

Laura Logsdon had played well at middle blocker for Plymouth Canton's volleyball team, but now the Chiefs needed a strong server if they were to overtake Livonia Franklin. They were down to their final substitution, and it was Logsdon's turn to serve.

And they trailed 14-10.

So Canton coach Melinda Cain inserted Michelle Moreno into the lineup for Logsdon. It proved to be an exceptional move; Moreno served six consecutive points, and the Chiefs battled their way back from the brink of defeat to beat Franklin in five games, 7-15, 15-10, 15-3, 11-15, 16-14 Wednesday at Franklin.

"Michelle Moreno was a big plus for us," said Cain. "She doesn't get to play very much, she's kind of a specific role player. She's a good server, though; she'll consistently get her serves in."

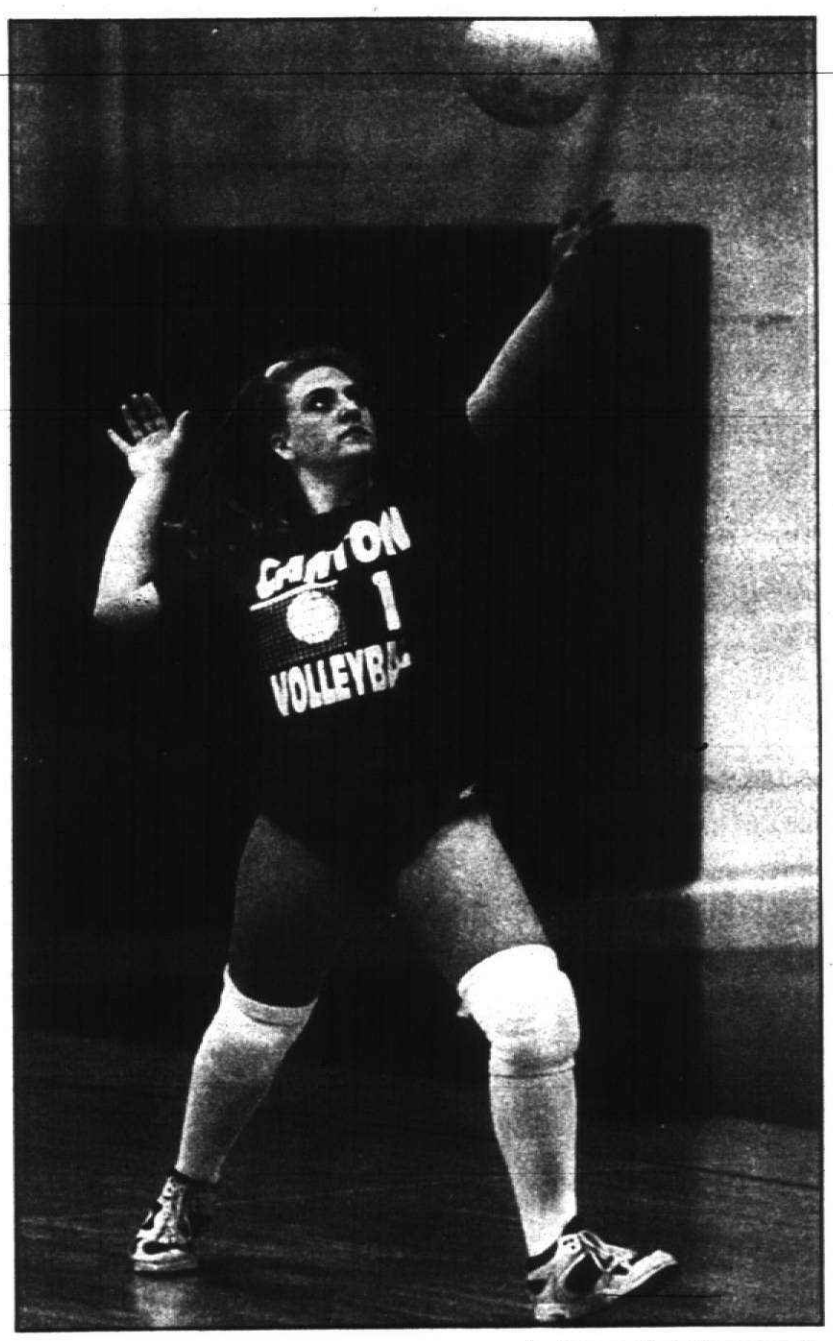
Which is exactly what she did against the Patriots. Of the six points she served, two went unreturned — including a floater that the Patriots got a hand on but could not get back over the net on game-point.

"The kids played really well," said Cain. "The Farmington loss (Jan. 24) was very disappointing to us. We had a long talk about mental intensity after that.

"They came back and really put their heads into the game. They're still not playing the way I'd like, but at least they're heading in the right direction. They're learning to adjust to game situations."

The win evened Canton's overall dual-match record at 2-2; the Chiefs are 1-2 in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Ndu Okwumabua topped the Chiefs in kills with 15. Beth Ostach and Janet Zabivnik had five apiece. In addition, Ostach had three key blocks — one on a Franklin serve that broke a string of Patriot points in the fourth game. Canton trailed 11-3 in that game but fought back to challenge before losing it.



JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

On target: Amber Wells helped set up Canton's comeback win over Franklin with some strong serving. She led the Chiefs with two aces.

Setter Amber Wells also had a strong match with 22 assists to kills and two service aces.

No defense leads to loss for Crusaders

There are signs of improvement.

For example, check out the shooting from the floor. Madonna University was consistent Wednesday against visiting Aquinas College, converting 40 percent of its first-half shots (15 of 37) and 44 percent in the second half (15 of 34). And the Fighting Crusaders hit 6 of 18 three-pointers (33 percent), too.

■ MADONNA

But they still showed little ability on defense. Aquinas — hardly a powerhouse; the Saints were 3-15 coming into the game — connected on 70.4 percent from the floor in the first half (31 of 44) to pull out to a 72-41 halftime lead. That was more than enough cushion; Aquinas won easily, 125-89.

The loss dropped Madonna to 2-21 overall.

"People have figured out if they go down low on us, they can do anything they want," said Madonna coach Bill Sharpe. "(Aquinas) usually doesn't try to force the ball inside, but knowing how weak we are they're going to take it inside.

"Our freshmen big men are clearly overmatched by upperclassmen."

For the Crusaders to challenge, they needed an emotional effort. They didn't get it, offensively or defensively. They committed 24 turnovers to Aquinas' 11 and were outrebounded 38-27.

"As long as we let a team put us in a 30-point hole in the first half, we're not going to win any ball games," said Sharpe, adding sarcastically, "Our stellar defense was incredible as usual. When you play with a lack of emotion, and lazy, you're going to get blown out of ball games."

It didn't help that two start-

In case anyone doubted that Plymouth Salem was capable of defending the Class A state gymnastics title it captured last season, please take note.

The Rocks put on a show Wednesday against Westland John Glenn while recording their fifth-straight dual meet victory. They took the top three positions in each event, and their two all-arounders, Melissa Hopson and Sarah Makins, finished one-two.

But that's just part of the picture. Examine that final score — 140.7 points. Salem's total tied Holland for the highest recorded by a team this season.

And that means the Rocks are certainly capable of defending their title.

"I don't think we're up to full strength yet," said coach Johanna Anderson, calling her team "tired" after its second dual meet in two days (the Rocks beat Ann Arbor Pioneer 132.6-123.6 Tuesday). "We're just getting stronger as a team.

"We were slow getting started (this season) because we're a young team. They're not used to competing 15 times in a season. But they're warming up to the competition."

Hopson was superb against Glenn, winning the uneven parallel bars (9.15), the balance beam (9.3) and the floor exercise (9.3). She was second in the vault (8.9) to teammate Kristin Kosik (9.2); Makins placed third in vault (8.65). Hopson totaled 36.65 in the all-around, with Makins scoring 35.9.

Makins was second in the bars (9.05), beam (9.05) and floor exercise (9.15), and Zoe Yockey took third in the bars (8.9) and floor exercise (9.05).

"They're gaining experience," said Anderson. "They need to gain confidence. There's still a long way for us to go."

Perhaps so, but does the trail travel to the state title? "I think it is possible," Anderson replied. "But we still have to put those difficult tricks into the routines."

Those additional stunts could appear at Saturday's Plymouth Invitational. Salem will have 10 days without competition to prepare. "Hopefully," said Anderson, "our scores will rise by then."

In the win over Pioneer, Kosik (33.55) and Yockey (32.65) posted the top all-around scores. Kosik finished first in the vault (8.7) and was second on the beam (8.55).

Makins won the bars (9.05) and tied Yockey for first in the floor exercise (8.7). Makins also finished second in the vault (8.45); Yockey was third (8.1).

Hopkins finished first in the beam (9.25) and third in the bars (8.35).

Plymouth Canton

The Chiefs continued to excel Wednesday, beating North Farmington 132.1-128.6 in a dual meet at Canton.

Katey Gilles dominated once again for Canton, finishing first in all four events and scoring a meet-best 36.8 in the all-around.

Gilles won the vault (9.1), the uneven parallel bars (9.25), the balance beam (9.15) and the floor exercise (9.3).

Other strong performances were turned in by Canton's Angie Lamerato, second in the floor exercise (8.55); Brie Wall, third in the bars (8.15), tied for third in the vault (8.3) and fourth in the all-around (32.15); and Adrienne Brenner, tied for fourth in both the beam (7.95) and floor exercise (8.25).

North (3-3 overall, 1-3 in the Western Lakes) was led by Michelle Tsai, who was second in the vault (8.7), bars (8.75) and beam (8.55), and took third in the floor exercise (8.35). Her 34.35 total was good for second in the all-around.

Both teams compete in the Plymouth Invitational, which starts at 9 a.m. Saturday at Canton High School.

Rolling a 700 series makes the pain worthwhile

TEN-PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

It was a cold and snowy day in Farmington Hills, so Mark Silverstein went out with his shovel to clear the snow. When he struck a crack in the cement, the shock went right up his arm — his bowling arm.

The next day he was bowling with his Inter-Lodge League, and all that happened was his best ever — a 710 series with a 277 game. I asked him about bowling with the pain. His reply: "It was worth the pain!"

■ The St. Linus Men's League has been active for 35 years. It had an 800 series until last week when David B. Bazner fired an 824 with games of 278, 258 and 288.

This was the second 800 series in the house, Garden Lanes in Garden City. Bazner, who works for Mastercraft Carpets, averages 207. He had 30 out of a possible 36 strikes in the series. After his first game, he knew he was in a good groove. He just wanted to stay focused and see how far he could go.

■ Country Lanes is setting up an "Ashley Ponke Fund" to help the 9-year-old whose mother was killed recently. Bowlers can donate at the counter or send donations to: The Ashley Ponke Fund c/o Country Lanes, 30250 W. Nine Mile Road, Farmington 48336.

You might recall the incident, which made front page and TV news, in which her mother, Jackie, was killed. Her father has been charged in the killing. Ashley is a very talented young bowler.

■ Barb Sroka bowls with the "AMers" at Mayflower Lanes and carries a 144 average in the league. Wednesday was somewhat different, for after a slow start with a 119 game, she rolled her highest game ever, 222. The third game was better yet; she started with eight strikes in a row and finished with a new high game of 250!

Well, the way we see it, your experience shouldn't be any different if you want to lease a Saturn. After all, what could we possibly gain by making things any less straightforward than they have to be?

HOROSCOPE

By C. C. Clark

Aries (March 21 - April 20)
You will have a more optimistic attitude, especially where matters of the heart are concerned. Valentine's Day cannot come too soon for you.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)
Take your health problems seriously and do what has to be done. There is a good chance you will receive a message containing great news.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)
You need to do your best to get rid of some outstanding debts. It will probably be difficult for you to make the necessary budget changes.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)
Use your head when dealing with stubborn people. Do not compromise your moral standards, for a get-rich-quick scheme.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)
Self-improvement classes usually do not appeal to you, but this might be a good time to check one out. A loved one may disappoint you.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)
Your mind and body need a release from stress, and there is no better way than exercise. Making necessary dietary changes will also help.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
You may be dealing with a person who is not what he or she may seem to be. It will not be easy, but it may be time for a reality check.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)
Add some color to your life and buy some art work you have been admiring. You may get financial assistance, but not in the way you expected.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)
Break from your regular routine and head out for some fun. A young person may give you some valuable information.

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)
You may have to put another person's needs ahead of your own for now. Don't worry; you will one day be rewarded for your good deeds.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
Problems are probably not as bad as you think. Get yourself in gear and know that you can tackle anything that comes your way.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)
A psychic premonition could have some validity. Spend some quality time with a neglected loved one. A short trip could prove interesting.

Behind-the-scenes stories heighten Olympic drama

By SARA BENNETT

Will freestyle skier Donna Weinbrecht be healthy enough to win another gold medal for the United States in the 1994 Olympic Winter Games?

How will bobsled driver Brian Shimer apply the techniques of auto racing to his sport?

Will the shortened two-year break between Winter Olympics help or hurt CBS' coverage of the Games, beginning Saturday, Feb. 12, and concluding Sunday, Feb. 27?

Because of a new format, this year's Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, will be the only Games to get underway after such a short hiatus. Subsequent Summer and Winter Games will take place at alternating two-year intervals.

After the recent 1992 Olympic Winter Games in Albertville, France, analysts should be accustomed to the pace and style of Olympic events, from the booth, in the studio and at event-level.

Multifaceted analyst Greg Gumbel, who served as a morning host in Albertville, serves as prime-time anchor for CBS' coverage in Lillehammer.

"It benefits all of us at CBS that we've just done it recently," he says. "I think it will be that much better this time around."

However, Gumbel concedes, there's still plenty to work on.

"One of the things that we all have to learn is just how is this going to work physically," he says. "Actually getting there, and putting a show together, and getting it on the air, and getting off the air, and everything (that goes along with) it tends to be something you can plan all you want, but there's nothing like doing it."

Gumbel's segments will come to the United States taped because of the six-hour time difference between the U.S. and Norway.

Live or taped, Gumbel and other analysts have a job to do in Lillehammer: They must show the audience the events, but perhaps more importantly, they must show viewers what they wouldn't see otherwise.

"Every competition kind of has its own stories within," Gumbel says. "The people involved in figure skating, for instance, are probably very (well known), especially the comeback people, Brian Boitano and Katarina Witt, who appears on her way back to the Olympics after a layoff.

"In mogul skiing," Gumbel continues. "Donna Weinbrecht is a terrifically interesting story because she won the gold medal in Albertville and then ripped up her knee. She's been going through rehab, and now the question is, is she still the best in the world?"

Gumbel adds, "In bobsledding, the United States has made terrific strides. Brian Shimer is a young guy who has worked hard and diligently at it, and he's been assisted by Geoff Bodine, the race car driver, who has tried to apply some of the aerodynamics that go into auto racing and into the construction of race cars, and tried to combine that into the bobsled that Brian drives."

Just as interesting, and more controversial, are the varying opinions on the reinstatement of professional athletes to the Games. Some people believe the amateur spirit of the Olympics is lost. Others just aren't sure who the United States is up against.

"We beat the Russians," says CBS late-night Olympics anchor Pat O'Brien, in reference to the U.S. hockey team's performance during its pre-Olympic tour "But we don't know if it's the real Russian team. And the real Russian team could be somewhere else, beating the (stuffing) out of other countries."

Tim Taylor, coach of the hockey squad that won or tied approximately 75 percent of its John Hancock USA Hockey Tour matchups, also has mixed feelings on reinstatement.

"Philosophically and romantically I believe in the traditional Olympic ideal," he says. "A player has to make a sacrifice of huge proportions to be an effective Olympian, especially in a team sport. (But) I think it's fine if they reinstate themselves in time to be part of a program that we've put together that's gonna help us win a medal."

From plans for a "goalie-cam" to the performance of U.S. figure skater Nancy Kerrigan, who will test her strength and courage after an assault that captured the world's attention, all eyes look to the Olympics to answer questions and, of course, to entertain.

SOAP WORLD

'Days Into Night' special airs on NBC

BY CANDACE HAVENS

"Days of Our Lives" is hitting the prime-time scene with its "Days Into Night" special, airing Friday, Feb. 4, on NBC. This is the third year for "Days" to air a prime-time special preceding the "Soap Opera Digest Awards," which airs live.

James Reilly, who scripted the night-time episode with Maura Penders, promises the hour-long program will be filled with romance and intrigue.

The show was written so that fans and those who are not so familiar with "Days" can enjoy the special.

There will be two different remotes with Bo (Robert Kelker-Kelly) and Billie (Lisa Rinna) in a tropical paradise shot in Puerto Rico, and Austin (Patrick Muldoon) and Carrie (Christie Clark) in the snow-covered mountains of Big Bear, Calif.

Then, as usual, there will be the wicked Vivian stirring up trouble at the Pine Haven sanitarium.

The featured cast for this year's event includes Jaime Lyn Bauer, Jason Brooks, Christie Clark, Bryan Dattilo, Ivan G'Vera and Melissa Reeves.

Last year's special served as a catalyst for events that are still being played out. Fans may remember the gala celebration held at Titan Publishing, where John (Drake Hogestyn) would not leave Marlena alone (Deidre Hall). (They later made a baby together, which caused a great deal of problems, because Marlena is married to Roman.)

It was also the night when the disgruntled boxing promoter, Gus, threw acid on Carrie's face. (Carrie and Austin eventually broke up because she didn't want him to feel sorry for her.)

Carly (Crystal Chappell) was trying desperately to get Nicky (Erik Von Detten) out of the country and was shocked when Lawrence (Michael Sabatino) showed up to help her. (Carly, Lawrence and Nikki ended up leaving Salem for good.)

It will be interesting to see what happens with the story lines from this year's special.
