Auction offers evening of fun

The Canton Chamber of Commerce is gathering up items for its big annual auction. The March 12 dinner-dance is the top fund-raising event for the chamber.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

What would you bid for a top-of-the-line IBM compatible computer? Or how about homemade desserts each month baked by Canton Place residents?

"The stuff we are getting in is unbelievable," said Ginnie Hauck, co-chairwoman of the Canton Chamber of Commerce annual dinner auction.

Hauck and co-chairwoman Janet Volante are gearing up for the annual chamber fund-raiser that will boast more than 75 items to be auctioned. Blackwell Ford is the major sponsor of the event on Saturday, March 12, at Fellows Creek Golf Course Clubhouse on Lotz Road.

"There will be only 15 live auction items. The rest will be raffle or silent auction," Volante said.

The evening begins with a 5:30 p.m. preview of the auction items including everything from rubies to romance. A variety of jewels will be a major part of the silent auction, while weekend escapes and trips will be up for bidding.

The preview, which will open with a full service bar, will continue until 7 p.m. at which time dinner will be served until 8:30 p.m. The auction will take place 8:30-10 p.m., followed by dancing with Silver Sounds Professional Disc jockeys from 10 p.m. to midnight.

All members of the community are invited. Tickets are $35 per person and include entry to the dinner-auction-dancing. For reservations by March 7, call the chamber at 453-4040.

Proceeds from the auction will be used for the chamber's general operation budget and the building fund, said Linda Shapona, chamber executive director.

Kevorkian attorney brings fervent message

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Some were disappointed that Jack Kevorkian didn't show for an advertised appearance Wednesday at the Mayflower Meeting House.

But Kevorkian's attorney Geoffrey Fieger did, and he gave a spirited defense of the so-called suicide doctor's role in helping 20 people to end their lives to avoid physical suffering.

Fieger, in a voice often rising in emotion, told more than 150 Plymouth and Canton residents that the right not to suffer "is the civil rights issue of the '90s."

"Jack is often packaged as some kind of zealot, that he somehow has taken advantage of people, that he's morbid.

"He's the most caring and compassionate physician I've ever met," Fieger said, adding Kevorkian spends far more time with the people he's counseled than other doctors do.

Kevorkian, he said, has counseled 60-80 people who've not chosen assisted suicide, and have gone on to die of natural causes.

The issue, Fieger said, "is plain and simple — the right not to suffer."

"If a dog or a cat is suffering horribly in front of us, you give them an injection. It's humane," he said.

Fieger attacked Right to Life, the group that has sought to challenge Kevorkian in the state Legislature and the courts, and religious groups that have challenged Kevorkian.

"There are just fringe groups that aren't happy unless they're telling us what to do," Fieger said.

"God bless them," he said, adding, "But don't tell me what to do."

When one member of the audience challenged Fieger on religious grounds, Fieger said that if heaven

Schools look for 'ideal' superintendent

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

There's no guarantee such a person exists, but Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' ideal new superintendent has been profiled in detail by a district consultant and the Superintendent Search Criteria Analysis Committee.

Committee member Liz Givens told the school board last week that "over the last two weeks, 400 to 500 people have shared their concerns about issues the new superintendent will face and the criteria by which we will select a superintendent."

The board hired Bickert, Prophet & Associates Ltd. of Chicago to recommend a replacement for Superintendent John Hoben, who is retiring in June.

The consultant reported that "the major issue mentioned by the majority interviewed dealt with what seemed to be a genuine concern for funding and how the quality programs can continue to exist in light of the fiscal issues facing the district.

"The changing demands due to demographic shifts and the need to address efforts which could improve communication throughout the school district were all deemed worthy of special note."

While residents and the board are working with the consultant, applicants will be known only to the consultant, which will pare the field to six to 10 finalists to be interviewed, under the search process the board outlined.

The board will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 21 to discuss compensation for Hoben's replacement. Hoben earns $116,328 annually.

The criteria analysis committee, itself comprised of a cross-section of the community, sought input from employee groups; students; administrators; representatives from Canton

State starts new search for airport manager

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

The state is starting over in its search for a permanent manager for Canton-Plymouth Mettetal Airport.

State aeronautics officials issued new requests for proposal Friday, Feb. 11, to the 70 individuals and businesses originally interested in bidding to be the airport's manager and fixed base operator, who can sell equipment and services.

A group of six or seven individuals and businesses bid to provide services to Mettetal in late 1993. At the time, aeronautics officials wanted creative bids but soon found that it was difficult to evaluate the bids received, said Randy Coller, Mettetal manager and state Bureau of Aeronautics licensing and enforcement manager.

"We could see the proponents had to struggle to put bids on it," Coller said. "We had a problem evaluating bids we received. It was our fault."

So back to the drawing board. Before the new requests for proposals were completed, however, aeronautics officials talked with those who originally submitted bids about their concerns.

"We tried to consolidate their concerns," Coller said.

The same panel selected in November to review the bids will evaluate the new ones that are due back at the state March 7. The panel includes John Vergonna, a pilot who also sits on the Canton-Plymouth Mettetal Airport Advisory Board.

When the first set of requests for proposals were sent out in late 1993, Coller said the state expected to offer one contract for both services — manager and FBO. The current FBO is Dan Malone with Emerald Aviation. He is expected to submit another bid under the new request for proposal.

Coller said that to be fair, all 70 individuals and businesses originally interested would be sent the new proposals. A bid is expected to be selected by March 30 with a contract hammered out by April 30, Coller added.

Canton gets federal funds for low- income residents

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Canton Township has lucked out once again with another increase in federal money to be used to help low- and moderate-income families and neighborhoods.

"From year to year we can't predict it," said Gerry Martin, development specialist for the township's resources development division. "I would not read too much into this."

In fact, Martin said he hears rumors that next year's allocation of federal Community Development Block Grant money will decrease about 10 percent. "We are just going to get these little blips," Martin said.

For the 1994 block grant program, Canton expects to receive $408,000, compared to $375,000 last year. That amounts to little more than a 9-percent increase for the township.

The CDBG Advisory Council is expected to have a public hearing on the proposed distribution of the money sometime in March. The council will make recommendations to the township trustees, who will make a final decision on how the money is spent.

Of the proposed allocation, about 20 percent is expected to be spent on administration. "It is not all spent on salaries," Martin said, adding the percentage helps run programs and is expected also to be used to conduct a study for the block grant program.

A maximum 15 percent will be distributed to public service agencies, such as the Salvation Army. Approximately $20,000-$24,000 will be allocated to the housing rehabilitation program to help low- and moderate-income families make code and building improvements.

"There has not been a lot of interest in this program," Martin said, adding that on average money is given to help three families at about $8,000 apiece. The no-interest loans are given to income-eligible families.

The housing rehabilitation program, however, may be cut a bit for 1994. "We are being asked if there is a more efficient way of spending that money," Martin said.

The advisory group also will allocate money for projects to benefit low- and moderate-income families. "We do have very good projects that are proposed," Martin said. "We're looking park development for mobile home parks south of Michigan Avenue, as well as drainage improvements," Martin said.

Right now, block grant money is paying for a recreation-playground area at Canterbury Mews Apartments. In the past, money has been used for playground improvements at Canton Commons.

Approximately $150,000 in block grant money will be allocated to the proposed community center, Summit on the Park, until a total of $750,000 is reached over five years. "We're banking the money," Martin said.

Geologist traces tracks of ancient mastodon

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Imagine uncovering tracks of an ancient mastodon.

"You can see where the mud dripped off his foot," said geologist Dave Thomas, who teaches at Washtenaw Community College.

The Canton resident will talk about his experiences excavating the bones of a mastodon and discovering an ancient trail. The program is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 21, at the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road. Interested people may register for the presentation either in person or by calling the library at 397-0999.

With the help of slides and bones from other ancient animals, Thomas will explain the excavation in 1992 at a farm west of Saline where the mastodon was found.

"I'm also going to talk about dinosaurs. I want the public to know there's a lot of prehistoric animals that are not dinosaurs," Thomas said.

In January 1992, as workers at the Harry and Lillian Brennan farm and soil business west of Saline were digging a site, they came across bones. The Brennans called in professionals, such as Daniel Fisher, professor of geological and biological sciences at the University of Michigan.

Thomas assisted Fisher. By the end of the excavation — in an area on the farm that was a glacier-formed lake in another era — Fisher, Thomas and others unearthed the bones of an adult male mastodon.

"We excavated about two-thirds of him," Thomas said. "You rarely get 100 percent of the bones in an old peat bog like this."

Scientists found a jawbone with molars, half a pelvis and two vertebrae, a rib, and half a limb bone as they dug deeper through layers of the land. It's believed the mastodon was about 21 years old, stood eight feet at the shoulder, and weighed about five tons.

"Halfway through the excavation in July (1992), we began to find small depressions in the sand that resembled footprints," Thomas said. "We set up a separate team and indeed we found a set of footprints some 20 inches in diameter. They were not of the same animal that we excavated."

Thomas and other scientists developed a theory about the trail. It's believed the mastodons were hunted by Paleo Indians in the same general area where the bones were found. After killing the mastodon, it's theorized the Indians removed part of the animal and left other remains under the ice of the ancient lake for future retrieval.

"These were old lakes or old ponds," Thomas said. "Bones buried in water are preserved much better."

The trail also gave the scientists some idea of the mastodon's behavior simply by studying the footprints. "We found the prints also at a different place. We found a log. We theorize he either hit the log or stepped over it," Thomas said.

The past: Dave Thomas of Canton, a geologist who teaches at Washtenaw Community College, will talk at the Canton Public Library about his work excavating the bones of an 11,000-year-old mastodon and discovery of an ancient mastodon trail near Saline.

was "so great, "I would think you would encourage them to get to the next life."

Fieger's appearance was sponsored by the Canton Economic Club, which moved the program from its usual Canton meeting place to accompany a larger crowd.

Bill Joyner, president of the Canton Economic Club, said the likely reason Kevorkian didn't show is that he doesn't drive — Kevorkian lives in Royal Oak — and Fieger had come straight from Metro Airport to Plymouth for the program.

Fieger said he has been traveling the country discussing the rights issue.

Of the American Medical Association, which has not backed Kevorkian, he said "You have to drag them into the future."

To illustrate, he said the AMA in the 1930s and '40s challenged women becoming physicians and was opposed to the introduction of Medicare and Medicaid in the 1960s.

He defended Kevorkian's challenge of right to life legislation passed last year, as Kevorkian continued to help individuals wanting to end their lives to avoid suffering.

"We're not lemmings," he said. "There was a brave little Armenian doctor who said 'Hell no.' That's the way social change has always occurred in this country."

Since then, "Three judges have struck down that statute as unconstitutional. Was Dr. Kevorkian right? Absolutely."

While audience members generally supported Fieger's message, some didn't.

"I think he needs to research his religion before he talks about it," said Heidi Davis, a student at Plymouth Christian Academy.

Glen Mackie of Plymouth said Fieger was "certainly passionate. I think what he says makes sense to everybody, that they should make their own kind of decision."

"People have a right to choose," said Jeanne Ragan, a Plymouth Salem High student.

Plymouth Salem student Linda Ragan said, "I agree with his opinion," but added Fieger was "too emotional."

Several audience members signed petitions provided in the meeting house lobby, as Kevorkian and Fieger are seeking to get the issue on the state ballot.

Auction from page 1A

For the silent auction, guests will write their bid number — each guest will get one — their name and amount they bid on for a particular item.

"This will continue for three hours," Shapona said. "The last person on the list will receive the item."

The raffles will be $2, $5 and $10. "This is strictly chance. You put in as many tickets as you want," Shapona said. The live auction will be conducted as is any other live auction with guests showing their bid numbers for the items they want.

Some of the items to be auctioned include the IBM compatible-computer and monitor from Competitive Edge, silk floral arrangement from Mrs. Bee's Flowers, Master Lighting lamps, a child's bicycle from Target, trips to Atlantic City and Chicago from World Travel, gifts from Ginnie and Al Hauck, such as an electronic Rolex and jewelry from My Generation Jewelry.

All items to be auctioned are contributed by area businesses. The chamber is still looking for more sponsors for the event. All donations are tax deductible as a legitimate business expense.

The event already has the following sponsors and amount of merchandise contributed:

■ Gold sponsorships ($800 package): ERA Prime Properties, First of America, Mountain Jack's restaurants, Competitive Edge and My Generation Jewelry.

■ Silver sponsorships ($375 package): Ginnie and Al Hauck, Pulte Homes.

The sponsors are eligible for a "sponsor only" drawing, which is a Las Vegas trip for two, donated by Wayne County Commissioner Bryan Amann, Canton Township Clerk Loren Bennett, and former Canton Economic Club president Bruce Patterson.

Decorations for the evening were provided by the Decorating Den. Any businesses that wish to contribute should contact the chamber at 453-4040.

■ 'I wanted to make sure every segment of the business community had a chance to have a voice in this process.'
E.J. McClendon

Former board member E.J. McClendon served on the committee and represented the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce. "I wanted to make sure every segment of the business community had a chance to have a voice in this process," said McClendon, who also encouraged 100 of his neighbors to complete questionnaires. "A number of them wrote directly to the board," he added.

Trustee Dave Artley said that according to the consultant, "never has there been so much community involvement in 150 searches. They said people were open and dedicated. It was gratifying to have such a group working on the profile. I think that speaks real well of our citizen input."

Bickert and Prophet said the community would like:

- an educational leader with a comprehensive view of elementary and secondary education, and a sound working knowledge of curriculum and instruction, whose primary purpose is full development of all students.
- an educational visionary who can build a shared vision of the district's future and develop and implement a strategic plan to ensure the effective use of human and financial resources.
- a skilled communicator with refined interpersonal skills who values, enjoys and seeks ongoing interaction with students, staff and the community.
- an action-oriented leader who can plan strategically, set priorities, implement decisions and accept responsibility for administrative actions.
- a consensus builder with the ability to attract, guide and empower highly qualified professionals and take satisfaction in their development and success.
- a visible and accessible leader with strong interpersonal skills.
- a moral and ethical person with a secure sense of self and a background of complete integrity.
- a financial manager who exhibits an understanding of funding and budgeting systems.

Board president Roland Thomas commended the criteria analysis committee. "I appreciate the effort that went into this. I think you are all visionaries. You've done a beautiful job."

Former Livonia school trustee named to SC board

BY SUSAN ROSIEK
STAFF WRITER

Carol Strom, a past president of the Livonia Board of Education, has been appointed to the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees.

"I'm thrilled, honored to serve," said Strom, upon learning about her appointment late Wednesday.

Strom emerged as the frontrunner on the fourth ballot. Trustees then cast a unanimous ballot for her appointment. She will be sworn in Feb. 23.

Schoolcraft trustees voted on the appointment after interviewing the final four of 13 candidates. Strom was among the final four interviewed Wednesday.

She will serve the remainder of Michael Burley's term, which expires June 30, 1995. She plans then to seek election to the board.

Burley of Canton Township submitted his resignation in October. His resignation was effective Jan. 26. Burley was elected to the board in 1979 and re-elected in 1985 and 1991.

Strom, who was a member of the Livonia Board of Educaiton for 16 years, said the skills she acquired — consensus building, strong belief in lifelong learning, knowledge of the legislative process and finance — in her local board tenure will help her serve Schoolcraft.

"As I have watched its growth, I have often though that it would be an exciting challenge to serve as a Schoolcraft College trustee," Strom wrote in her application for the Schoolcraft appointment.

Strom holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan. She took graduate classes at U-M, WSU and U-M Dearborn. She is a partner in a Livonia retail business.

Strom in her interview told trustees the Schoolcraft "open door policy serves the college well."

She told the board her "long-term goals (for the college) are not any different from what is currently happening at the college."

Strom stressed that she enjoyed her tenure on the Livonia board but "this is at a different level."

"Being a board member is something you continue to grow in," said Strom.

The Schoolcraft vacancy attracted candidates from Canton Township, Plymouth Township, Northville and Westland.

Others seeking the appointment were Matt Berg of Canton Township, director of administrative services at Cranbrook Schools; Carolyn A. Blanchard of Northville, an attorney in private practice; Linda B. Chuhran of Canton Township, a cost accountant at General Motors Powertrain Division; Michael Dani of Canton Township, a self-employed CPA; William C. Fried of Livonia, CPA, attorney and owner of Fried & Associates, P.C., in Livonia, and Bernadine M. Horan of Livonia, a nurse at Botsford General Hospital.

Also applying for the board seat were: Harriet B. Larson of Livonia, a retired school teacher; John J. Pantalone of Westland, a retired school principal and present owner of a travel agency and motivational seminar firm; Kathleen E. Payne of Plymouth Township, a professor at Detroit College of Law; Michael A. Reynolds of Livonia, an attorney; Mary Y. Sieggreen of Northville, a clinical nurse specialist/case manager at Harper Hospital, Detroit Medical Center; and Luis A. Torres of Livonia, a mechanical engineer working for a Livonia firm.

In addition to Strom, board members interviewed Berg, Blanchard and Payne Wednesday.

Berg, who has lived in Canton for the last five years, stressed his interest and expertise in financial and operational forecasting, information technology and college operations.

He holds bachelor's degrees in communication and business and a master's in business administration.

Blanchard holds a law degree from the University of Detroit Law School, a master's of education from Tufts University and a bachelor's degree with a major in nutrition from Edgecliff College.

Payne, a law professor, said she sought the appointment because of her "lifelong interest in education."

"Most of my life has been spent in schools, either as a student through four degrees or as a teacher in the public schools and now at the professional school level," said Payne, who holds degrees from Michigan State, EMU, Detroit College of Law and U-M.

House twisting travel bureau's arm to promote parks

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

A reluctant Michigan Travel Bureau would be ordered to promote state and local parks under a bill before the House of Representatives.

"Our position is reasonably neutral," Travel Bureau director Tom Altemus told a House panel promoting it.

"We're concerned about being locked into supporting constituency groups rather than responding to needs of tourists. We approach it from a marketing point of view."

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Tom Alley, D-West Branch, bawled out the Legislature and Department of Natural Resources for neglecting state parks in both money and promotion.

"Fat cats" take care of the Waterways Commission and Mackinac Island Commission, Alley said, but no one fights for recreational opportunities for plain families.

"DNR is not boisterous and does not fight for approproiations. DNR itself allowed the parks to slide. We (legislators) have been as negligent," Alley said.

A simple policy statement, the Alley bill is the first of a dozen pieces of legislation to beef up state park funding in a heavy campaign as the park system celebrates its 75th anniversary.

All members of the House Recreation and Tourism Subcommittee, including Rep. John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Township, voted to send the bill to the House floor for debate.

The bill declares it's the Legislature's intention to promote "recognition of state and locally managed recreational opportunities including camping, hunting, fishing, boating and other outdoor recreation experiences."

It tells the Travel Bureau to include that policy in its master plan.

Altemus, however, said the administration should be guided by public demand rather than suppliers' desires to sell.

"We've got to be careful the marketing program isn't so fragmented. We have changed our focus to be customer and demand oriented," he said, citing requests to promote bed & breakfast houses, urban tourism and local theater groups.

Altemus said the Travel Bureau already promotes state parks — "enormously."

In other testimony, Rick Jameson of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs urged lawmakers to establish an endowment fund whose interest earnings would pay for state park operations.

"MUCC has made this a priority — to get our state parks back into shape," said Jameson, chief lobbyist for the conservation and environmental group.

Students need homes

High school students from Germany, France, Spain, Holland, Brazil, Poland, Hungary, Russia and Hong Kong will arrive in Michigan in August to spend five to 10 months studying in area high schools.

WC3 truck driving class cruising along

Wayne County Community College corporate services director Kathleen Gilevich reports that 245 graduates of the college's truck-driving program went to work for the J.B. Hunt trucking company in 1993.

Ninety-seven percent of them were still working after 12 weeks, she added.

Ron Horn, the director of safety at J.B. Hunt's New Boston, Mich. terminal, said, "Out of our 15 training sites, Wayne County Community College's students are No. 1 in job retention and in promotions to first-seat driver status."

WC3 also trains drivers for KLLM Transport Services on contract.

Staff members in WC3's contracted training department are developing a generic truck-driving curriculum that meets recognized safety standards and regulations for the industry, Gilevich said.

The curriculum design will allow flexibility so that employers can add their own company specifications. In addition, instructors will be cross-trained in classroom, road and range curriculum.

The preceding information was taken from the Jan. 26 report from WC3 President Rafael Cortada to the college's board of trustees.

Parks

"Natural resources are a defining aspect of our state," said Jameson. MUCC wants an $800 million fund set up to be fed by $40 million from sale of the State Accident Fund, a state-owned workers comp insurance firm, and annual contributions from oil and natural gas taxes.

Critics say that in the last 10 years, general fund support of the 100 state parks has slipped from 70 percent of their operating budget to 30 percent. The difference has been made up from higher user fees. Critics say many parks have deteriorated and that poorer people are being priced out.

The tourism policy bill is House Bill 5247. The endowment fund bill is House Bill 5064. Refer to bill numbers when writing to your state representative, State Capitol, Lansing 48909.

Toughen domestic violence laws, women tell legislators

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Area women surprised a key lawmaker by asking the definition of "domestic" violence be expanded to include "intimate" relationships where two people haven't lived together.

The women asked a Senate committee to toughen already-tough bills designed to deal more harshly with husband-wife violence.

"We need to include intimate relationships," said Virginia Nicoll of Farmington Hills, "where people are not necessarily living together. I have only anecdotal evidence," said the leader of the Older Women's League (OWL).

"We're looking at homosexual and lesbian partners," added Clementine Rice, who teaches psychiatric nursing at Oakland University.

"There's a lot of date rape and date violence, especially on university campuses," said Rice, adding that 19 to 25 percent of injured adult women in hospital emergency rooms are domestic violence victims who claim 'I fell down the stairs.'"

Hedy Nariel, executive director of the Haven in Oakland County, agreed the definition should be expanded to "dating violence" and to cover women who "have children in common with someone they haven't lived with."

"That (expanding the definition) may prove difficult," replied Sen. William Van Regenmorter, R-Jenison. Author of the Michigan Crime Victims Rights Act and constitutional amendment, Van Regenmorter agreed to study suggestions for a broader definition.

14 bills in hopper

Van Regenmorter chairs the Senate Judiciary Committee, which Monday brought its series of public hearings to Farmington Hills. Reps. Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills, and Sharon Gire, D-Macomb County, sponsors of some of the bills, joined him.

Fourteen bills are designed to make police and prosecutors treat charges of domestic violence more seriously. They limit the number of dismissals, stiffen penalties for what are now short-sentence misdemeanors, provide for more civil penalties such as court orders, and require that domestic reports be entered into the statewide Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN).

In southeastern Michigan suburbs, the situation is improving, but not fast enough, witnesses said.

The Haven's Nicoll praised the 52nd District Court in Walled Lake for referring an increasing flow of violators to her group. "It's not counseling. It's not therapy. It's re-education. It (domestic violence) was a learned behavior, and they have to be retrained."

"Are police becoming more responsive?" asked Rep. Dolan.

"No. I wish we could say yes," Nicoll replied. "Police don't ask, 'Can't you come out and train us (to deal with domestic cases)?' We have to force the issue. It's not happening."

Laws needed

Andrea Solak of the Wayne County prosecutor's office urged prompt adoption of the bills.

"In Wayne County, some of your proposals have been implemented as policy. We will not drop a case," Solak said, adding that the policies need to be made law everywhere.

"There should be automatic prosecution of assault," said Lenore Dunn of Livonia. "It (the law-enforcement system) didn't work in my case, but it's really, really important."

Sandra Abbott, a Redford resident active in First Step, said she fled her abusive husband, now deceased, and spent two months in a shelter. "My spouse filed a missing persons report and told detectives I was abusing my child," she said.

Suzanne Fabian, of the Junior League of Birmingham, said her group has worked in several areas, helping the Haven expand its program to a new Novi location serving southwestern Oakland County.

"People have died," said Jean Prokopow, West Bloomfield resident active in Women's Action for New Directions. "Their lives might have been saved. Use all deliberate speed in moving forward."

"We want to move as quickly as we can," said Van Regenmorter, announcing another hearing at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 22, in 110 Farnum Building, Lansing.

For a synopsis of the domestic violence bills, contact the clerk of the Senate Judiciary Committee, 1-517-373-6920.

DCL eyes moves to Oakland

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

The Detroit College of Law has approached Oakland University about moving the college to the Rochester Hills campus, which would give Oakland County its first law school.

"Should these initial conversations prove fruitful, subcommittees representing constituent groups, on and off both campuses, will be formed to develop specific details of a possible collaboration," said OU board Chairman James Sharp Jr. in a press release.

Sharp and trustee Rex Schlaybaugh Jr. are the only members of the exploratory committee.

Schlaybaugh said DCL officials definitely want to move the college's entire operation to OU. DCL Dean Dave Favre has worried aloud that a new Tiger Stadium built near DCL's campus in downtown Detroit could make it difficult for night students to attend classes.

In business since 1859, DCL is a private college with 745 students, 300 of them taking night classes.

Furthermore, 39 percent of DCL students reside in Oakland County. Thirty percent live in Wayne County and 11 percent in Macomb County.

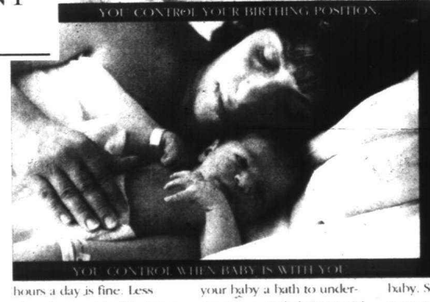
ST. MARY HOSPITAL

IS CONTROL IMPORTANT TO YOU?

YOU CONTROL YOUR BIRTHING POSITION

YOU CONTROL A VISITING



YOU CONTROL WHEN BABY IS WITH YOU

YOU CONTROL WHEN YOU BREAST-FEED

For many women control during childbirth is very important. Of course, some things are out of your control, but many of the options surrounding childbirth don't have to be. At St. Mary Hospital we encourage you to make choices. To ask questions. To learn. To be in control.

More real choices

To control your position during labor. You're in charge of the electronic controls on our state-of-the-art birthing beds. So you can select the position that's most comfortable for you. Or, you can sit in your rocker and admire the view from your birthing room window.

To control when family and friends are with you. During and after the birth. On your schedule, not ours.

To control when your baby is with you. Twenty-four hours a day is fine. Less often if you wish. We bring services to you, so your baby only goes to the nursery when you decide.

To control what you need to learn. Our nurses can teach you everything from giving your baby a bath to understanding your baby's special ways of communicating. We'll ask what's tops on your list.

It's your baby

At St. Mary Hospital, we understand that it's your baby. So if control is important to you, give us a call. We're here to help you.

Bill to bill criminals sent to Engler

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Rep. Jerry Vorva's first bill is on its way to Gov. John Engler's desk to be signed into law.

The Senate on Feb. 10 gave 34 to 0 approval to his bill to charge convicts a $150 fee when the State Police forensic lab is used to help prove their guilt. Judges would be required to levy the fee in addition to any other punishment.

House Bill 4245 is the first by Vorva, a freshman Republican from Plymouth, to make it all the way through the Michigan Legislature. But there was some grumbling.

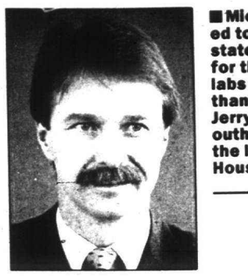
"It sounds innocuous — $150," said Sen. Joe Conroy, D-Flint. "The reason they're thieves in the first place is they don't have any money." Conroy voted yes anyway.

"An estimated 90 percent of people charged with felonies ask for court-appointed lawyers to aid in their defense.

Senate action came almost five months after the House approved it. All area senators voted yes except two who were absent — Robert Geake of Northville and David Honigman of West Bloomfield.

The bill will become law immediately when Engler signs it.

State Police and the city of Detroit run forensic labs, which do drug analyses, toxicology analysis, examination of latent fingerprints, micro chemistry, serology, firearms, tool marks and questioned documents tests.



■ Michigan is expected to become the 17th state to bill convicts for the use of forensic labs in their cases thanks to state Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth, who introduced the legislation in the House.

The State Police lab has a backlog of work on its budget of $10.6 million and staff of 163, according to Capt. Richard Lowthian, lab director.

The Senate Fiscal Agency estimated that if fees were collected in 25 percent of cases, $650,000 in revenue would be generated.

Michigan will become the 17th state to have dedicated fines for forensic labs.

A credit risk?

Deadbeat parents who fail to make child support payments will be reported to credit bureaus under a Senate-passed bill.

The bill, on its way to Engler for signing, will require Friend of the Court offices to report delinquencies in child-support payments to credit bureaus. It's expected to encourage parents to pay up.

Senators voted 35 to 0 on Feb. 10, with Geake and Honigman missing the vote.

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, praised Geake's conduct of public hearings into complaints about the operations of Friend of the Court offices.

"Not one person had anything good to say about the Friend of the Court at the Pontiac hearing," Faxon reported. "We may call it 'Friend of the Court,' but they're the Enemy of the People." Most criticism has centered on the Wayne County office.

Friend of Court offices in each circuit accept child support and alimony payments and forward the money to the custodial parent. Geake's hearings have shown that many custodial parents are destitute because money isn't forwarded although the paying parents have sent checks.

Sue the dealer

People victimized by drug dealers will be able to sue for civil damages under a bill given final Senate approval Feb. 9.

"This opens the opportunity to completely change the war on drugs," said sponsor Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo. Criminal prosecutions would continue, he said, but "a community, individual or parents (could) file a civil lawsuit against the drug dealers."

The idea came from a U.S. attorney in Hawaii and benefited from the work of Michigan drug czar Robert Peterson, Welborn said.

Sen. Virgil Smith, D-Detroit, though often at odds with Republicans, praised the bill as "an excellent idea" and applauded Welborn. "It is time we use every resource we have to go after drug dealers," Smith said.

The Senate concurred 37 to 0 in House amendments and sent the bill to Engler for signing. It will take effect immediately.

Humane Society collects Kal Kan dog food labels

Every three labels from Kal Kan Pedigree or Pedigree Mealtime dog food will mean 50 cents for the homeless animals at the Michigan Humane Society.

Pet owners may mail labels to the Michigan Humane Society, Attention Kal Kan Program, 7401 Chrysler Drive, Detroit, 48211, or drop them off at any of the society shelters or the society booth at the Detroit Kennel Club Dog Show, Sunday, March 13, at Cobo Center.

The society shelters are located at 3600 Auburn Road in Rochester Hills and 37255 Marquette in Westland. And don't forget the Paw Pourri gift shop at 817 N. Main St. in Royal Oak.

County sends out 'user friendly' tax forms

Regardless of whether Proposal A is approved by voters March 15, property owners still must fill out a form to get a big property tax cut.

March 1 is the last day to file Form T-1056, an "Affidavit for Homestead Exemption," with your local assessor. The form allows taxpayers to obtain homestead status for their principal residence and avoid higher school property taxes.

Taxpayers who don't submit the form by March 1 could pay four times more in school taxes.

If you own and occupy your principal residence, and you register your home as a homestead, it will be exempt from a part of the new education finance authority tax.

If Proposal A passes, the state's education tax on homestead property will be 6 mills. If Proposal A fails the tax will be 12 mills.

Vacation homes or income property do not qualify for the exemption. Renters are not eligible, but they may take advantage of a higher renters' credit on the 1994 Homestead Property Tax Credit Claim to be filed in 1995.

Wayne County government has prepared user-friendly homestead forms for registered homeowners in each of its 43 communities. The forms were mailed Friday, February 11. Unlike the forms mailed by the state, these forms are personalized for each homeowner, including name, address and property tax identification number.

All cities and townships in Wayne County except Dearborn, Detroit and Livonia have turned over computer tapes listing all registered homeowners so that the County can directly mail forms to those households.

AROUND CANTON

Clothing drive

For his Boy Scout Eagle project, Canton resident Marc Levitt of Troop 854 is holding a drive to collect blankets and clothing for the Wayne County Shelter for the Homeless on Saturday, Feb. 19.

Items will be picked up in an area bordered by Ford, Warren, Lilley and Sheldon roads. People who live outside this area and would like to donate may bring items in person to project headquarters after 10 a.m. Saturday at the gym of St. Michael Lutheran Church, 7000 N. Sheldon, just south of Warren.

The Plymouth Salem High School junior is hoping to donate blankets, hats, scarves and gloves for the homeless. He is being helped by members of his troop and several members of Salem's National Honor Society.

Musical variety series

The Friends of the Canton Public Library are sponsoring "A Victorian Parlor Evening," featuring Michael Bryce on classical guitar at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 18, in the library meeting room, 1200 S. Canton Center Road.

Bryce will present an elegant time gone by with his guitar and brief dramatic and humorous readings from his great-grandfather's scrapbooks.

Tickets are $5 and are available at the library reception desk or at the door. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call the library at 397-0999.

Save your vision

In honor of Save Your Vision Week, March 6-12, The Vision Center, 43050 Ford, is providing eye exams for children and young adults under the age of 18 for half the normal price. The campaign to promote good vision will continue through March 12.

"Many children suffer needlessly because they are unaware of how well the human eye should see."

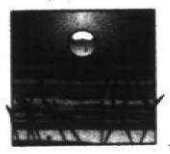
Garden club looking to increase membership



A local garden club is looking for a few good women - or men. Membership in the organization has been on the decline and officers are looking to expand the club.

Local farm and garden clubs aren't just for society ladies holding fancy teas.

The Lake Pointe Village Branch of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, active in the community for more than 30 years, is seeking new members from around Plymouth and Canton, as membership is declining.

Sarah Ann Overs, president of the branch, said that membership has dropped to 20 members since the club's founding.

"We're almost dying out," she said, adding that when the club was founded in 1960, there were 40 members and a waiting list.

Overs said that while the focus is garden-related, the clubs traditionally perform a range of public service activities - from planting perennials to sprucing up public areas to providing scholarships.

The Lake Pointe Village Branch is one of three Plymouth branches of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

Founded in 1936, the Plymouth Branch has 56 members. The Trailwood Garden Club has 14 members. All three branches perform community service projects.

In December, an auction held in conjunction with a potluck dinner coordinated by the Lake Pointe and Trailwood branches raised more than $200 for the Salvation Army.

To accommodate women who work outside the home, monthly meetings - on the second Thursday of the month - are scheduled in the evening, Overs said.

The club meets from September through May. Speakers talk on subjects ranging from backyard plantings to attract birds to winterizing gardens.

"People think our membership is limited to women. It is not," Overs said, adding one East Coast branch is made up entirely of males.

Woman's National Farm and Garden Association branches also typically work with schools and offer scholarships. The Lake Pointe branch has traditionally planted perennials around the subdivision and at Farrand Elementary School.

For people involved in such clubs, winter is not devoid of gardening-related activity.

"Around Christmas, you start getting your garden catalogs," Overs said. "In February, you get your window sills cleaned off," she said, for sprouting seedlings. Spinach and peas can be planted in April and early May, followed by other plantings in May and June.

The Woman's National Farm and Garden Association also sponsors an exchange program by which members travel to foreign countries to discuss farm and garden issues.

A talk on perennials and ground covers is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 11, at the Farrand School library.

For more information on the Lake Pointe branch, call her at 420-2912.

Officer faces charge

A Plymouth Township police officer suspended after allegations he stole jewelry from the police property room appeared in local court Friday on a charge of grand larceny over $100.

District Judge James Garber said a not-guilty plea was entered on behalf of Thomas P. Haas at his arraignment on the charge. Garber said the local district court was disqualifying itself from hearing further proceedings, and Haas faced a preliminary exam Thursday before 16th District Judge James McCann in Livonia.

Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry said he requested an investigation by the Michigan State Police after allegations arose in December that an officer took jewelry from the police property room.

School closing

Board made right decision

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education did the right thing by delaying a decision on the closing of Gallimore Elementary School.

The board was to decide the issue on Feb. 28, but has delayed that decision until April. That makes sense. But it also shows that the board can take the lead on an issue rather than be pushed around by the school administration.

The proposal to close Gallimore and make other housing changes was made by Superintendent John Hoben in an effort to save $1.1 million for the coming school year.

But while the intent was good, the proposal raised many questions. The first was the cost savings. Closing Gallimore would save the school district about $300,000. In the words of one parent: "I don't think $300,000 is enough savings to warrant all this disruption."

We agree. There must be other ways to save that amount. However, there were no public school board discussions about the overall budget and possible savings.

The agenda was set by Hoben and board members haven't challenged it. Other ways to keep Gallimore open should have been discussed. They weren't.

On this issue, the school board failed in its leadership role. Members should have been questioning the administration's school-closing agenda.

Board members also should have been aware of the confusing school financing picture as seen by the average voter. On March 15 the public will be asked to decide on a ballot question that will shift school financing to an increased sales tax. And it that fails, the state income tax will be increased.

According to Raymond Hoedel, associate superintendent for business, the school district's financial picture will look the same no matter which plan is put in place.

However, it would seem that all financial facts and situations should be known before making such a drastic decision as closing an elementary school. Neighborhood schools are near and dear to the hearts of residents in Canton and Plymouth, and even proposing closing one becomes an emotional issue.

So, when it comes to closing a functioning elementary school, the board owes the public a full hearing on the matter. Other options must be discussed.

The board made a good decision to delay a vote on the Gallimore issue. By the time April rolls around, the vote on the way schools are financed will be over and the situation will be clearer.

The board has its homework to do before April. It should make sure the public understands the entire school finance picture and how a decision to close a school fits into it.

Reform taxes best with Prop A

This newspaper endorses Proposal A because it is a good deal for public schools, and because it eases the burden of school property taxes for most people.

When we vote March 15 on Proposal A, the most important thing for suburban districts is protecting school taxes for school use.

Proposal A would lock into the Michigan Constitution the rule that the sales and use tax increase will go into the school aid fund. That money cannot be raided by the Legislature and diverted to any other use such as prisons, perks or pensions. It's reserved for schools.

Proposal A also will cap most of our school operating property taxes. It says those rates may be changed only by "the approval of three-fourths of the members elected to and serving in the Senate and in the House of Representatives."

Not even the Michigan Education Association will be able to pressure a "super-majority" of lawmakers into raising property tax rates, the way it pressured school boards and frightened voters. If Proposal A is rejected, however, a simple majority (50 percent plus one) vote of the Legislature can raise those rates.

Also important statewide is the issue of equity. That is achieved under both plans with a promised minimum of $5,000 per student in aid. The difference comes in how a minimum equity is reached.

People, businesses, labor unions and civic groups can and will debate the merits of a sales tax versus an income tax. They will debate whether various taxes are deductible from the federal income tax. They will hassle over whether tourist money is being tapped. They will fill the air with rhetoric over the incumbent governor's personality.

Those issues are comparatively unimportant. Only one thing is important: locking school revenue into the school aid fund with a constitutional key.

Both Proposal A and plan B, the fallback statutory plan, will raise $10.2 billion for public schools. Both will set a short-term goal of providing $5,000 per pupil in every district. Proposal A will do it by raising the sales tax rate from 4 percent to 6 percent and landing hard on tobacco use; plan B will do it by increasing the income tax rate from 4.6 to 6 percent and the single business tax from 2.35 to 2.75 percent.

■ Proposal A would raise the sales tax, a device often denounced as regressive. We point out, however, that (1) food and prescription drugs would continue to be entirely exempt from the sales tax and (2) the tax on utilities (electricity, gas and telephone) will remain at the old 4 percent rate.

Only Proposal A can lock that money safely into the Michigan Constitution.

The sales tax increase should not be an undue burden on lower income folks. The state ranks about in the middle nationally in sales taxes, which will be partially borne by our tourism industry.

On the other hand, an increase in the income tax will have an impact particularly on residents of Detroit, who also pay a city income tax.

Furthermore, the ballot proposal reduces slightly the income tax from 4.6 to 4.4 percent.

Finally, we note the Legislature, in both plans, preserves some of the property tax — a stable and realistic source of revenue that never can be entirely obliterated, even in recession years.

Proposal A deserves a yes vote on March 15.

Be proud of schools

Do you wonder where your school tax dollars go, and what benefit the community derives from them?

Then you should have attended the "Variety Is . . . " program on Friday and Saturday nights at the High School.

If you had been there, you would have witnessed an incredible, wonderful, fantastic variety show written, produced, staged and performed by the high school students of your high schools.

This program, the 29th annual PCEP Bands presentation was chock full of talent, ability, intelligence, wit, humor, satire, and fun.

But this tremendous show was only one example of the talents and abilities of our children in our schools, both of which we can be justifiably proud. There are also the kids in the National Honor Society, Quiz Bowl, Closeup, Debate, Chess, Fine Arts, and many, many other "co-curricular" activities in which our children participate.

This Plymouth-Canton School District has many fine teachers, administrators, involved parents, and great students. And that's what we pay for. It's not just bricks and mortar.

I am extremely grateful that we have such talented people in our district, and I am especially grateful for the opportunity to see these students grow and mature for all of our benefit. I'm happy to see how beneficially my tax dollars are put to work for the good of all of us.

Kevorkian visit

Several disquieting and confusing questions arise from the Observer account of Dr. Jack Kevorkian's visit to St. Paul Presbyterian Church in Livonia:

Mr. Kevorkian referred to Lansing's legislators as "tyrants" and "mentally infirm" because they took legislative action against his brand of killing which, as legislators, they are supposed to do. Everyone knows that killing has become so popular that Washington experts are trying hard to stem the killing, which they refer to as crime. President Bill Clinton uses the word "felony," which doesn't go as far as killing when he says three of these and you're "in" jail for life. Now all this is quite confusing.

Then a member of St. Paul Church rose to say she didn't have a legal right to determine her mother-in-law's fate so the lady died in a nursing home. "I could have saved the taxpayers a lot of money" said this church-going Christian. How? By killing her off? I happen to be a mother-in-law. Don't you agree this is disquieting?

And then Kevorkian's attorney, Geoffrey Fieger, rose in the sacred precincts of the church named for St. Paul whom writer Taylor Caldwell titled the "Great Lion of God" to proclaim that "This" (meaning killing) "transcends religion." Had St. Paul been there, might he not have asked "Whatever happened to 'Thou Shalt not kill?' " Or are Mr. Kevorkian and Mr. Fieger, in their wisdom, rewriting Exodus? Do you blame me for being confused?

Judge not needed

After spending a day at the 35th District Court, I seriously question the need for a third judgeship. It would appear to me, rather than a third salaried position, the two judges need to be more productive.

Furthermore, the bulk of the cases, 80-85 percent, appear to be traffic related. Rather than "protect and serve," area police departments apparently have the motto, "Stop and cite."

Hey, Jerry Vorva, "There is no need" as a 14-year law enforcement veteran.

Grateful

We wish to thank Norman Weast and Associates and Sue Nelson of the McKesson Drug Co. for donating four microfiche (film) readers to Central Middle School. Norm Weast has taken a special interest in our building because we are right across the street from his business. When Mr. Weast learned of our need for microfiche readers for our career classes, he searched for a source of microfiche readers that he could obtain at no cost to us.

We are very grateful to both Norm Weast and Sue Nelson. Through the generosity of these two businesses, our career classes and library now have four microfiche readers to use during research.

Seeing the light

Looking out for visually impaired's the kind thing to do

GUEST COLUMNIST

SHIRLEY WELCH

With all the current hype and recognition of the civil rights and sympathy for the physically handicapped, it is hard to believe that there is a segment of the population that is quite disabled — yet quite overlooked — and at times actually discriminated against in their daily procedures of life.

This portion of the population is the visually impaired; those people who are not completely blind, but whose limited vision prevents them from doing easily many of the normal things other people take so for granted. Some people are born to this state of life, many reach it through various accidental or medical ways, but the number of them is rapidly growing with the increase in life expectancy.

Perhaps at the top of the list of unfortunate effects of the condition is the inability to drive a car. In today's world, driving a car seems to be as common as sliced bread. For the visually impaired, getting around becomes a very complicated issue. Preparations for doctors' shopping, or personal appointments must be extensively thought through and planned around the cooperation and convenience of friends or relatives.

As public transportation is almost non-existent, and handicapped methods must be arranged far in advance, there are not any quick trips to the drug store for medicine, personal needs or Lotto tickets. The freedom to decide that now is a good time for a haircut or a quick trip to the mall for a spontaneous shopping trip or lunch does not exist for the visually impaired.

The inability to drive is more than an inconvenience, but can be the cause of frustration and discrimination at times because the visually impaired do not have that magic document called a "valid driver's license." These handicapped people must rely on the acceptance of the state's I.D. which is obtained through the Secretary of State driver's license bureau and which numbers are supposed to correlate in the system.

Possession of the state's I.D. does not, however, guarantee, service as it should. For instance, a lady went into a bank to cash a travelers' check, which is said to be generally cashable anywhere — but not in this bank. When the lady reached her turn at the teller's window (at a bank in her own neighborhood) she, as directed by the custom of travelers' checks, signed the check in front of the teller and handed it and her I.D. to the teller for cashing. The teller's reaction was to ask immediately for a valid driver's license. Upon explaining that the condition of legal blindness prevented her from driving, but that her Michigan State I.D. was equal, she was promptly told that without a valid driver's license, there could be no check cashing.

■ The inability to drive is more than an inconvenience, but can be the cause of frustration and discrimination at times because the visually impaired do not have that magic document called a "valid driver's license." These handicapped people must rely on the acceptance of the state's I.D. which is obtained through the Secretary of State driver's license bureau.

Upon demanding the opinion of a supervisor, the answer was still the same. Now the situation was a countersigned travelers check that would be difficult to be cashed elsewhere, with a "valid" banking institution waving its hands with a casual "too bad."

In another instance, a widow was in line at a large discount drug store with a basket of items she had selected. Her married daughter immediately in front of her paid for her selections with a check, showing her driver's license as proof of identification. The widow also attempted to write a check and pay for her items, but was refused acceptance of her check because she did not have a "valid" driver's license. The explanation of legal blindness and the validity of the state I.D. was ignored and the check refused.

There are many situations that daily occur which create problems for the visually impaired that the average person does not realize he or she is causing. A blind person has the immediate identity that indicates the need for aid; a visually impaired person is not easily identifiable. As a result, when we ask for directions or a pricing of an item, we are told "over that way" with a vague point of a hand, or "the price is written on the item." That response is of little use to those who barely see.

Airports have schedules viewed on TV screens high above the heads of travelers; fast-food restaurants have their menus written on a far wall — neither of these items viewable by a visually impaired person.

Public phones and elevators are fast becoming another difficulty for the visually impaired. As the numbers and positioning of these items are lowered for the physically handicapped, they become unseeable for the visually impaired.

Not only does the lack of vision reduce what the visually impaired do for themselves, it also prevents them from participating in any volunteer program for others which necessitates getting to the location of the service.

So if someone asks for information or directions, be patient and helpful; or if someone ignores your smile or wave, don't think they are stuck-up or hard to get along with. They simply may not see your greeting. These people are asking you to "look out" for them for they simply cannot see what you are seeing.

Legalization of drugs presents danger to society

GUEST COLUMNIST

BOB COPLEY

John Telford's advocacy of drug legalization (in previous columns) illustrates how uninformed even the literate can be. That's sad because he fails to recognize the incongruity of what he deems "a gamble worth taking." History shows the odds of his side winning are insurmountable.

For example: Today, most of us agree the increase in the consumption of our two legal addictive drugs, tobacco and alcohol, is responsible for enormous social and individual damage, and therefore steps are being taken to limit their use.

In the face of this social damage, Telford wants to compound the problem by making the illegal addictive drugs — marijuana, cocaine and heroin — legally available. Telford overlooks, or is unaware of, some very significant pharmacological and historical studies.

Any advocate of drug legalization must understand that the distinction between licit and illicit addictive drugs is not arbitrary, for while both types of drugs have properties in common, they also have basic differences. It's these differences we should be aware of.

Legal addictive drugs, the nicotine in tobacco and ethyl alcohol, in moderation do not alter the thought processes. Cocaine, heroin and marijuana do — even in the smallest quantities. Moreover, the addictive power of the latter is far greater than that of the legal drugs, and they are also mind-altering and therefore dangerous.

With a little homework, Telford would learn that studies show the use of illegal drugs affects behavior — even in minute amounts. It takes very low exposure to cocaine or heroin to become addicted to these drugs.

Epidemiological studies on drug-consuming populations show that among those who drink alcohol in whatever form worldwide, only 8 percent drink enough in daily amounts to damage their health and society at large. On the other hand, studies of populations of marijuana, hashish, cocaine and opiate consumers show that about 50, 90 and 95 percent, respectively, will use these drugs daily in doses damaging to the user's health and to society — when these drugs are readily available, as would happen if these drugs were legalized per Telford's gamble.

In the 15th century, all restrictions on hashish were lifted in Moslem medieval society and the general debasement of the people followed. In the mid-1800s, opium was introduced into China and 50 years later, 90 million Chinese were addicted to the drug. In the 1920s in Egypt, the unrestricted commercial availability of cocaine and heroin resulted in a drug epidemic. In the 1960s, Japan experienced a major epidemic of heroin use when it became readily available.

The uninformed intelligentsia who advocate the legalization of drugs are tampering with a trigger that, if ever pulled, might well blow us all away.

Telford is a lousy gambler.

Winter runs ragged over Michigan's fish, wildlife

TIM RICHARD

I caught a mess of fish — enough for two meals — through the ice. With my bare hands. Just like Robert Redford tries to do in the opening scene of "Jeremiah Johnson."

Kirsten the Norwegian elkhound is my witness. All dog fanciers know an elkhound never lies.

It happened one balmy, 22-degree day in mid-February when I took Kirsten out on a picnic in the Island Lake State Recreation Area. To an elkhound, 22 degrees is balmy. Besides, elkhounds are a bit balmy.

Island Lake has lots of oak trees, and dead-fall oak branches make quick, hot-cooking fires. We cooked diet-busting breakfasts of bacon, chopped onions and eggs, mopped up with fire-toasted bagels and the help of a dog tongue. Kirsten used to catch her own warm meals of field mice and sometimes a bunny, but 13 summers, 12 winters and arthritis have slowed her down, so she mainly consumes dog biscuits and polishes the frying pan.

But about the fishing: It actually is a sad story known as "winterkill."

There's a pond about the size of a hockey rink, five feet at its deepest. It drains a large swamp and flows through a narrow channel into the Huron River. I've written about it before. The swamp is where Kirsten found two bodies of beaver that the park rangers didn't even know lived as far south as Livingston County.

The pond was ice-covered except for the upstream end, where a tiny creek oozes out of the swamp and fills the pond. In six feet of open water were dozens of bluegills, some dead, the others gasping at the surface for air.

Winterkill occurs where ice freezes deep in a tiny pond, and snow blocks rays of sunlight that nourish plants. Plants supply oxygen to the pond water. Lack of oxygen suffocates the fish. I had read about it but never had witnessed it.

The fish were going to die, so with a bare hand I scooped up some of the nicer pan-sized bluegills, dropped them in my knapsack and threw in some snow to keep them cool.

It's legal. The DNR fishing rules (page 7) prohibit use of firearms, explosives and poison to catch fish, and limit netting, but nowhere does it say a guy can't use his bare hands.

Since then, I've heard of an angler who visits the area each year during winterkill. He chops a large hole in the ice with an ax and takes out a bucket of dying ones.

Winterkill is a sad phenomenon, but part of nature. Vast proportions of our wildlife populations die during winter. In Wisconsin DNR literature, I've read that 75 to 90 percent of fish populations die in the course of a year. One fry in a million grows into a trophy-sized lunker. First-born fawns of young, inexperienced does have a poor survival rate. Rabbits have several litters a year because so many predators feed on them.

Bluegill are a pretty fish, almost as pretty as the angel fish you see in tropical fish tanks. On the hook, 'gills turn their slab sides perpendicular to the angler and put up a stiff battle on light tackle.

Kirsten likes her 'gills raw — head, fins, scales, bones and all. The rest of us like 'em coated with cracker crumbs and pan fried. Their flavor is sweet and pleasant, unlike the bland packaged fish you get from the supermarket freezer.

Eat your heart out, Robert Redford.

Homestead affidavit

File by March 1 to claim lower tax rate

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

People who are changing homes in the middle of 1994 are in a grey area on their homestead property taxes.

They're flooding this newspaper and local assessors with calls about how to claim the lower six-mill or 12-mill property tax rate on their principal residence.

The law says they must file a simple affidavit declaring a residence by March 1 (although that deadline is likely to be extended to mid-April). Summer tax bills come out July 1.

Q. "We're retired and have two properties, one in Livonia and one in Livingston County. We play to sell the Livonia one in early summer and move to Livingston County." "Our closing date is the middle of March. How does this affect us?" "I live in Clarkston and am moving to Houghton Lake"

Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson has eight trained assessors who took 1,057 calls the first day, and three-quarters asked similar questions.

"Check with the previous homeowners. Encourage them to file the affidavit," Patterson said. "If the present owner files, that protects that residence.

"If they don't, you go ahead and file, even before you move in. Pencil in a note telling us that, and we will accept it.

"If you're closing on a new house, file with the assessor ahead of time. Go ahead and file now and say, 'I'm moving in six weeks.' Any good faith claim will be accepted," Patterson said. Other officials echo the attitude of cooperation.

This is a brand new law and totally new experience for local assessors. Two have called this newspaper to complain they have less information from the state Treasury Department than we have.

The key point is that you may claim the lower tax rate only on the home you declare is your principal residence — not your cottage, your detached farmland, rental property or a property you're selling on land contract.

Q. Where do I get forms to file for the homestead exemption?

Oakland County sent out forms for every community except Novi a week ago.

Livingston County is mailing out forms for all communities.

In other areas, cities and townships are mailing out their own forms.

The form takes literally one minute to fill out and mail — "pretty user friendly," in Patterson's words. It's best to wait for the mailed form because it will contain your PIN (property identification number), an essential piece of information.

If you don't get a form by (say) the end of this week, this newspaper will send you one for a $4.95 service charge. Call toll free at 1-800-967-5904 from anywhere in the U.S. Ask for item 0301. Have your Visa or Mastercard charge card ready.

You may choose delivery by:

- Fax (give the complete number with area code).
- Mail (give complete mailing address with Zip code).
- Federal Express overnight (for an additional $20).

Q. Will they be hard-nosed about the March 1 deadline?

Most offices are unlikely to be hard-nosed. Anything postmarked close to the March 1 deadline is likely to be accepted.

If you're late (say) because of a Florida trip, write the assessor a note of explanation.

Again, the deadline probably will be extended. But don't set the form aside to give to your tax accountant later. Fill it out immediately.

Q. I refuse to give my Social Security number. It's an invasion of privacy!

Prepare to pay the full 24 mills tax rate.

Social Security numbers are used as a cross-check to make sure dishonest folks don't try to claim two exemptions.

Q. What is this "hold harmless" millage, and is it likely to go up? What is "enhancement" millage?

They are two different things.

- "Hold harmless" millage applies to school districts spending more than $6,500 per pupil, mainly in southern Oakland County. Under finance reform, the state will make all school operating payments, but only up to $6,500. The 40 or so school districts spending more than that are permitted to ask voters for more.

A hold-harmless millage will be levied on homestead property only until the rate reaches 18 mills. Beyond that, it's levied on all property. In some districts, millages approved in the past can be continued, but at some point voters must approve a renewal. Every district is different.

The odds are these millages won't rise. School spending will be pretty much tied to the rate of growth of sales tax revenue and property taxes.

- "Enhancement" millage is extra money approved by voters to improve its program. Enhancement money must be pooled within an intermediate (county) district. Says the Senate Fiscal Agency: "If District A levied two mills and District B levied three mills, the districts would have to pool the revenue from two mills (on a per-pupil basis), but District B could keep the revenue from its additional one mill."

Firm makes loans available to individuals with troubled credit

There are many reasons why millions of Americans fall victim to credit problems every year. From maxing out credit cards to more sobering causes including loss of employment, family growth, medical emergencies and poor training in personal and household financial management.

Fortunately, there is now a local company making consolidation and new purchase loans available to people in these situations. We asked Bill Cunnington, Vice President of Security Home Loan...

Who is eligible for one of these loans?

We will work with individuals who have equity in their homes and have had debt problems of one type or another.

How does the loan work?

We take people who are living from paycheck to paycheck and consolidate all of their obligations into one lower payment. In fact, the average person will save from 30 to 40 percent a month with a consolidation of this type.

How can someone apply for one of these loans?

At Security, we pre-approve people over the phone at no charge. At that time, we also give the person an idea of how much money we can save them.

Call Bill Cunnigton at Security Home Loan (810) 669-4334 if you are interested in having a payment anaylsis done.

Head selected

Plymouth Salem senior James Head has been selected to play in the McDonald's Kentucky Derby all-star basketball game on Saturday, April 30, at Freedom Hall on the campus of the University of Louisville. The game, one of the most prestigious high school all-star games, features the top high school seniors in the nation.

Head, who has already signed with Iowa, has helped Salem to a 14-1 record, averaging 20 points and 14 rebounds.

Dead-eye shooter

Scott Brodie, 12, son of Salem basketball coach Bob Brodie, placed third in the state among 12- and 13-year-olds in the Elks Hoop Shoot free-throw contest Saturday in Rochester Hills. Brodie, representing all of southeast Michigan, hit 21-of-25 free throws, one less than the winner.

"That was really something, with all the pressure," said proud papa Bob Brodie. "Hey, I would take 21-of-25 from my varsity guys any day."

Scott, who attends Simpson Intermediate School in Flat Rock, placed fourth in the state a year ago.

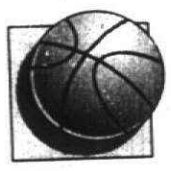
Cheerleading classes

Any girls interested in cheerleading: The Canton Parks and Recreation department is sponsoring cheerleading classes for beginners. The classes, for girls 5-12 years old, start Wednesday, March 9, and run every Wednesday for 12 weeks (no classes April 20).

The sessions for 5- to 7-year-olds will be from 5-5:30 p.m.; the sessions for 8- to 12-year-olds will follow, from 5:30-6 p.m. All classes will be at the Canton Recreation Center, at Michigan and Sheldon. Emphasis will be on pompon and dance routines, basic cheers and jumps.

Cost is $30 per person, with a limit of 30 per age group. For details, call 397-5110.

Wow! Chiefs net 105 in rout



Could it have been worse? For Livonia Stevenson, it's hard to imagine how. The Spartans have been floundering all season, but on Tuesday their struggles reached a new depth, courtesy of Plymouth Canton, which tatooed them with a 105-39 rout.

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Sometimes everything works.

Plymouth Canton is in the midst of just such a streak. On Tuesday, the Chiefs extended it into its ninth game — eight of them are wins — and they did so with an impressive array of offensive fireworks leveled against visiting Livonia Stevenson.

The final score was 105-39, and it was as lopsided as indicated. Indeed, the outcome was never in doubt, not from the start.

Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre should have known what was in store for his Spartans when, in the game's opening 2½ minutes, they grabbed offensive rebounds on their first four possessions — but could score on just one putback.

"If we hit some of those at the beginning, it might have changed some things," he said.

Instead, it merely set the stage for what lay ahead. Canton is not big, but the Chiefs are very quick, very explosive. They apply pressure against opposing guards well, they pass well and they have been rebounding better.

In short, all facets are flowing smoothly, in unison.

Canton took immediate advantage of Stevenson's early struggles. The Spartans managed to convert just one of their first 14 shots; during that same stretch, they turned the ball over six times — which let the door open for the Chiefs. By the time Stevenson got its second basket, Canton had already put 19 points on the board.

By the end of the first quarter, the score was 23-4. It didn't end there, either — not at all. The Chiefs scored 16 straight to start the second quarter; at that point, Stevenson was 2-of-22 from the floor. The score was 39-4.

By halftime, the margin had grown to 51-16. And you know what? Canton's leading scorer, Matt Paupore, had hardly been a factor in the scoring. He had just five points in the first two quarters.

That says a load about how far the Chiefs have come since the start of the season. Tadarius Rachal scored 15 first-half points for them.

"We're definitely playing good ball," said Canton coach Dave VanWagoner, stating the obvious. His team is 10-5 overall, 7-2 in the Western Lakes Activities Association. "This was just one of those games where everything clicked."

Indeed it did. The Chiefs were 20-of-38 (52.6 percent) from the floor in the first half and never let up, hitting 22-of-36 (61 percent) in the second. Overall, they were 42-of-74 (56.8 percent).

"The guys have been talking a lot about starting hard and finishing hard," said VanWagoner, mindful of a near loss at Farmington Harrison earlier this season after the Hawks charged back in the fourth quarter. "We've got a good streak going."

And as VanWagoner has noted: In every game, everyone is contributing. In the humiliation of Stevenson, five Chiefs reached double figures in scoring — including Paupore, who enjoyed a productive second half to finish with 22 points. Rachal scored 20, Ron Hunter and Ryan Ostach had 13 apiece, and Ted Docks netted 10.

By the way: It was Mark Sanborn who converted a short jumper while being fouled with a minute left that put the Chiefs over the century mark.

Stevenson had one player reach double figures: Brett Ferris, with 14 points.

The effect of such a lopsided loss on McIntyre and his assistant coach, Tim Newman, was apparent — especially coming off an impressive 75-71 victory over highly regarded Farmington last Thursday. The Canton loss left the Spartans at 3-13 overall, 3-7 in the WLAA.

Depth difference

Salem just too strong for Canton

SWIMMING

The depth of Plymouth Salem's swim team was again put on display Tuesday in the Rocks' 112-74 win over rival Plymouth Canton at Salem.

Salem improved to 7-2 in dual meets. The Rocks are still unbeaten in the Western Lakes Activities Association, and they are 3-0 against Lakes Division foes.

Canton won five of the 12 events, with Mike Orris accounting for two: the 200-yard freestyle (1:49.59) and the 100 butterfly (57.27). The Chiefs also got wins from Jason Fowler in diving (252.25 points), Jeff Clark in the 100 free (48.85) and Jason McMann in the 100 backstroke (1:03.18).

But the Rocks pretty much dominated everywhere else. Other individual winners for Salem were David Bracht in the 50 free (23.94), Rodolfo Palma in the 200 individual medley (2:12.79), Tom Satwicz in the 500 free (5:26.11), and Andy Dettling in the 100 breast stroke (1:05.36).

Salem also swept all three firsts in the relays. Mark Dettling, Palma, Brian McMullen and Bracht won the 200 medley (1:50.65); Joe Ervin, Bracht, Eric Seidelman and Fred Locke combined in the 200 free (1:33.70); and Aaron Berlin, Ervin, Seidelman and Locke teamed in the 400 free (3:26.55).

Salem hosts Farmington, its biggest rival for the WLAA crown, in its final dual meet at 7 p.m. Thursday. Canton swims at Livonia Franklin at 7 p.m. Thursday. The WLAA meet starts next Wednesday, with Salem again serving as host.

Rocks post state's best

GYMNASTICS

Gymnastics teams from around the state knew it would happen. It was just a matter of when and where.

Plymouth Salem was, after all, the defending state champion. And the Rocks had plenty of talent returning from that team. So a score surpassing the 140-mark was anticipated.

They managed it once in a dual meet, but on Saturday they did it in a more impressive setting: at the Freeland Invitational, in a field of 17 teams that included five of the state's top-10.

Salem won with a 141.1 point-total. Freeland was second with 139.5, followed by Hartland at 137.5, Muskegon Mona Shores at 135.5 and Plymouth Canton at 134.25.

Canton's Katey Gilles remained the state's best gymnast. She won three of the four events to finish first in the all-around once again with a 37.25 total. Gilles, a freshman, has not lost in the all-around this season.

Nearly as impressive was the performance of Salem's Melissa Hopson. Hopson posted a 36.65 all-around score to finish second; she was first on the balance beam with a 9.35.

"She's become more consistent," said Salem coach Johanna Anderson of Hopson. "The beam is definitely her best event. She's very strong, graceful."

Hopson was also third in the floor exercise (9.3), fourth in the vault (9.05) and fifth in the uneven parallel bars (8.95).

Gilles' wins came in the vault (9.55), floor (9.65) and bars (9.15). She was third on the beam (8.95).

"Actually, we had a very good meet," said Canton coach John Cunningham. "Except on the beam. We had four falls on beam for the second-straight (invitational). Again, that's a correctable thing, but it's frustrating because beam's always been a Canton strong point."

Salem also got a strong performance from Sarah Makins, who was sixth in the all-around (35.15). Her best event was the bars, in which she was third (9.05).

Canton got some good second tier scores from Kim Nowak, who was ninth in the all-around (32.7), which included a seventh in the floor (8.65); and Brie Wall, who placed 14th in the all-around (32.4), with a sixth in the bars (8.45).

Feb. 10 at Brighton, Canton won its eighth-straight dual meet, 128.5-120.05. The Chiefs are 8-1.

Cunningham juggled his lineup; there were no all-around performers. Gilles competed in the bars and beam, winning both with scores of 9.25 and 9.05, respectively. Nowak won the floor exercise with an 8.95; she also had fifths in the vault (7.75) and beam (7.45).

Wall placed second in both the bars (8.25) and beam (8.6). Angie Lamerato was second in the vault (8.05), with Katie DeMay third (7.85). Lamerato also placed third in floor (8.55).

Other top scorers: Adrienne Brenner, fourth in beam (8.15) and fifth in bars (7.0), and Kari Jackson, fourth in bars (7.35) and fifth in floor (7.65).

Canton has a busy week ahead. The Chiefs host Westland John Glenn at 7 tonight, travel to Traverse City for a dual meet Saturday, then go against Salem at 7 p.m. Monday.

Ocelots turn up defensive pressure to upset Monarchs

■ SCHOOLCRAFT

The record doesn't show it. Actually, what Schoolcraft College's record in men's basketball indicates, if anything, is that the Ocelots don't deserve any respect.

Maybe that accounts for what happened Monday night. Perhaps Macomb Community College got caught looking ahead. The Monarchs would have two games left after Monday's date against SC, and they were one game out of first place in the Eastern Conference.

Well, now they're two games behind. And they can just about kiss their hopes for a conference title goodbye, courtesy of the Ocelots, who shredded those dreams with a 77-74 upset at Macomb.

What magnified the frustration for the Monarchs against cellar-dwelling SC was that they had a 12-point lead with four minutes left in the game. And they lost — to a team they had beaten on the road by 20 points (88-68) Jan. 8.

The spark that ignited the Ocelots? Defense, according to coach Dave Bogataj.

"This is the best defensive unit I've had there, by far," Bogataj said. "There wasn't a loose ball we didn't have a Scraft jersey going after. The other team wasn't getting the garbage shots they were getting early on.

"The whole defense, every level is so high. They were just playing belly-to-belly . . . just sticking them. It's really nice to see. It was gorgeous."

SC's season will still end Saturday at Alpena. The Ocelots are only 8-17 overall, 2-13 in the conference. Macomb fell to 8-6 in the conference; leader Delta CC was 10-4. Both teams played Wednesday.

The Ocelots trailed 44-36 at the half and were down 70-58 with four minutes left. That's when they found a new level of defense, allowing just one basket and four points the rest of the game.

The offense was sparked by Todd McNeil, who riddled Macomb for 36 points and 16 rebounds. Dan Perttula (from Redford Thurston) added 15 points and Tony Maciejewski contributed 11, including two baskets in SC's closing 19-4 run.

Quincy Bowens topped Macomb with 23 points, but no other Monarch reached double figures in scoring.

Bogataj traced the turnaround in defensive intensity to the last half of the Mott CC game last Wednesday (Feb. 9). It certainly was evident last Saturday against Oakland CC, when the Ocelots nearly bumped off the Raiders, losing 87-86 at SC.

McNeil led SC with 15 points. Tim Burns contributed 12. OCC got 14 from Tony McNeal, 12 from Willie Payne and 10 from Corey Young.

■ SC 82, OAKLAND CC 58 (WOMEN): Woah! Who was that team Saturday night?

The uniforms and scoreboard indicated that it was Schoolcraft's Lady Ocelots, but the team on the floor hardly resembled the team that had struggled around .500 most of the season.

"That was as perfect a game as we can play," said coach Jack Grenan after his team's impressive win against Oakland CC Saturday.

Here's how good they were: The Lady Ocelots shot 69 percent from the floor (33-for-48), 71 percent in the first half (20-for-28). And defensively, they choked the OCC offense, forcing it out to the perimeter where the Lady Raiders were an icy 17 percent (5-for-29) from three-point range.

Lady Crusaders stop Concordia; men

■ MADONNA

A second-straight strong performance from Vikki Koenig helped Madonna University's women's basketball team gain a 64-51 win over visiting Concordia College Saturday.

The victory pushes Madonna's record to 11-12. Concordia falls to 6-19.

Freshman Meegan Marlatt also turned in another excellent performance. She scored 11 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. The Cardinals were paced by Lisa Landershire with 14 points.

■ CONCORDIA 97, MADONNA 96 (OT MEN): The frustration continues.

Madonna's Kurt Carlos hit two free throws with .1 second left to send the game into overtime Saturday, but the Fighting Crusaders couldn't maintain the momentum and Concordia escaped with the victory.

"Our guys have not been in that kind of position too often this season and they made some mistakes," said coach Bill Sharpe, whose team falls to 2-26. "This is all part of the maturing process. We are a young, young team, and we are all finding the transition to be tougher than we ever expected. It's going to take time to grow up."

Many of Madonna's mistakes were made on the defensive end. The Crusaders were cited for 32 fouls (compared to 17 for Concordia) and were outshot 22-10 from the free-throw line.

Concordia, led by Jim Ross (20 points, 12 rebounds) and reserve Anthony Singleton (18 points), built a four-point lead with just seconds left in the overtime. Madonna's Shawn Branum nailed an insufficient three-pointer at the buzzer.

"Maybe us coaches are the only ones who can see it, but we are getting better," Sharpe said. "Our defense isn't where we want it to be, but it has improved. The selfishness that plagued us earlier is gone. In many ways, the kids have dealt with this better than we have. Their development has been amazing."

Mike Slone (from Plymouth Salem), despite frosty 3-for-15 three-point shooting, led Madonna with 26 points. Branum scored 18 off the bench. Brandon Slone (Salem) chipped in with 16 and Eric Furlotte had 10 points in just 13 minutes.

■ GR BAPTIST 113, MADONNA 91 (MEN): The Crusaders' performance Tuesday at home against Grand Rapids Baptist wasn't nearly as impressive. They fell behind by 11 at the half and were fortunate to be that close, considering they hit just 42.5 percent of their floor shots.

But instead of making a run, they stumbled further — against a team that was without three of its best players. Matt Jansen (21 points, nine rebounds) and Jason Pranger (12 points) have been suspended and Jared Crandell (19 points) was sidelined with an eye injury.

"I thought we had made progress, but there are still no wins," said Madonna coach Bill Sharpe. "We still have a problem with them going out and doing what they were told to do. And as long as they do that, we're not going to win."

Madonna's shooting was still poor (39 percent for the game) and the Crusaders' rebounding was worse (53-30, Baptist). They were led by Doug Soper's 17 points; J. Dimes had 14, Kurt Carlos 13, Brandon Slone 12 (and eight rebounds) and Mike Slone and Dan Dombrow 10 each.

Baptist, now 16-13, got 39 points and eight rebounds from Terry Durfee; 25 points, 14 boards and eight assists from Lance Morrow; 18 points from Ted Smith; and 16 points and 12 rebounds from Cameron Currie.

The loss dropped Madonna to 2-27, with three games left.

Lackluster Rocks win

Don't be deceived: Plymouth Salem's volleyball team, despite its impressive record, is struggling.

Sure, the Rocks improved to 9-0 in the Western Lakes Activities Association by beating Westland John Glenn Monday. They are 30-5-4 overall.

But it took them five games to subdue the Rockets: 16-14, 9-15, 15-11, 13-15, 15-8 at Glenn. And it was the second-straight difficult challenge against WLAA competition for Salem — Feb. 9 at Northville, they slipped past Northville 6-15, 15-10, 15-6, 15-5.

"We played up and down," said co-coach Allie Suffety after Monday's narrow victory.

"We're playing just good enough to win right now.

"We lack intensity. We need to mature."

Jamey Viau led the Rocks against Glenn with 15 kills and 26 digs. Shellye Sills contributed 11 kills, three solo blocks and five block assists; Paula Dombrowski had nine kills, three solos and five block assists; and Karen Gundry collected eight kills, 31 digs and four service aces.

Lynn Little's 15 kills and 15 blocks paced Glenn, which fell to 17-7-4 overall, 5-3 in the WLAA.

Salem plays at the Creston Classic Saturday, then hosts Livonia Churchill Monday.

Salem, Canton slip in league

By Dan O'Meara
Staff Writer

■ WRESTLING

Livonia Stevenson unburdened itself of an also-ran label and accepted the new mantle of powerhouse in Western Lakes Activities Association wrestling Saturday.

The Spartans made it official by doing what everyone expected they would and winning their first WLAA title over runnerup Westland John Glenn and defending champ Northville. See results on page 4B.

"I never expected anything like this in my wildest dreams," Stevenson coach Don Berg said after the Spartans earned their fourth first-place trophy. "Maybe Plymouth Salem or Catholic Central have done it, but I don't think anybody ever thought little ol' Livonia Stevenson would do anything like this.

"Last year we won the division, and this year we moved up to the league title. One of these days we'd like to win a regional title. Our team goal all along has been to go to Battle Creek."

The Spartans hadn't won a league championship since 1981 in the old Inter-Lakes League, but Stevenson is back on top as wrestlers who benefitted from a middle school program begin to mature.

"We had some lean years," Berg said. "We had only nine kids one year, but they stuck with it.

"In this sport, nothing replaces hard work, and you get better by wrestling good peoples. And we have great kids, unbelieveable."

With six wrestlers in the championship finals, Stevenson had the title all but locked up after the preliminaries, leading 140-111 over Glenn.

The Spartans had four champions — heavyweight Dave Ross, Chris Jaztrembski (135), Ben Lewis (171) and Craig Martin (189) — and runnersup in Scott Goldman (140) and Chris Mullett (145). All are juniors.

Stevenson wrestlers placed in 11 of the 13 weight classes. Sophomore Jon Sata (130) was third, sophomore Dan Christenson (103) fourth, freshman Matt Allison (112) sixth, sophomore David Falzon (119) and junior Ryan Vartoogian (125) seventh.

"We knew we might not take all the firsts (possible), but it's the fourths, fifths and sixths that get you points and help you win," Berg said.

"We had four champions at Trenton and were elated to be third with 177 points. Other times we've won with two champions, because it's the other kids who win tournaments for you."

Glenn had three champions: seniors Anthony Underwood (119) and Mike Henry (130) and junior Brian Kolb (160). The other winners were Farmington's Matt Michalski (103) and Mike Prough (140), Walled Lake Central's Lee Southard (125) and Frank Lovio (145) and Walled Lake Western's Rob Fritz (112).

Martin (29-0) defended his title at 189, pinning Farmington Harrison's John Amayo in the final as he did a week earlier in the Observerland tournament.

Lewis (28-3), who was runnerup to Livonia Franklin's Jesse Shakarian at Observerland, avenged that loss by winning 4-3 in the WLAA final. Lewis has won four of five bouts between them, and all four have been decided by a point.

"I knew I could beat him; I just had to wrestle good match," Lewis said. "I really wanted to be Observerland champion, but since I couldn't win that I wanted to be sure I won today."

Jaztrembski (26-7) had just wrestled Northville's Corey Keranen in a WLAA crossover match Thursday and won again in the tournament final, 11-4.

"After some people on the team started winning, I went out there fired up," he said. "We came here wanting to win and we did."

Ross (24-8) was one who helped motivate Jaztrembski by beginning the final round of matches with an 8-6 win over Glenn's Shawn Arbogast in the heavyweight bout.

"I just wanted to wrestle smart," said Ross of the seemingly slow, calculated bout. "When you're wrestling bigger guys, you just want to be more cautious and not make a mistake."

The most action-packed bout of the day was between defending champ Goldman (24-6) and Prough, who was third at 135, for the 140 title. Goldman closed a 9-3 deficit at the end, but Prough never gave up the lead.

"I was going to let him shoot on me, spin behind him and get some points that way," Goldman said. "It was working for awhile. I'm disappointed I didn't win, but I'll get another shot at district.

"I'm just really proud of my team. I'm happy we're champions. We've been working really hard for this and finally got it."

Mullett (25-5) also had a disappointing loss in the finals as he ended up second for the second straight year at 145. Lovio, a tall, wiry senior who was second at 135 last year, won an 8-4 decision.

"I wasn't really prepared for him the last time," said Lovio, who won in overtime when they met in a dual meet. "My takedown was a little better. I took him down four times and last time only once. I knew he was going to be tough. He's the only one who gave me a tough match in the league this year.

"I'm very happy with a second-place finish from (Goldman and Mullett)," Berg said. "There's no shame in losing to those guys. Lovio has an advantage being that tall, too. You have to reach a long way to get to him."

Underwood, who was third at 112, and Henry, who was second at 125, had better success at higher weights this year. Underwood won 9-7 over Salem's Scott Hughes, who eliminated defending champ Jason Tarrow of Northville in the semis, and Henry won a hard-fought battle over Franklin's Adam Hill, 5-4.

"I just tried to keep a calm head and stay aggressive all the way to the end," Underwood said. His thoughts in the end? "Finally, yes, a league championship."

"It was the first time I wrestled Hill, and I had to see what he was going to be like in the district," Henry said. "I didn't know how he was going to wrestle."

In a repeat of the Observerland final, Kolb (31-6) defeated Salem's John Svec 15-7. Kolb was fourth at 171 last year while Svec moved up after winning at 152.

"I knew from the first time I could take him down because he didn't defend the legs too well," Kolb said. "Coach has been working with me on taking the arm off the head. That's been the whole key to my season. Once a guy locks up, I take him down, or at least I try."

"On Thursday, they met all the challenges, all the peaks and valleys," McIntyre said. "Tonight, they didn't meet any of the challenges.

"The 'why' is the question, and it's hard to pinpoint. We went from a real give-all effort to . . . ."

"It's frustrating," Newman summarized. "We came off a very good effort to this."

And in the final analysis, "this" wasn't anywhere near enough against a team that's steamily streaking.

■ SALEM 79, W.L. WESTERN 61: Plymouth Salem remained unbeaten in the WLAA as it headed into its final regular-season game — and biggest league challenge, Friday at Westland John Glenn (12-3 overall, 9-1 in the WLAA).

The Rocks got 15 points from Adam Hammonds and 10 from Joe Measel in subduing woeful Walled Lake Western Tuesday at Western. Salem improved to 15-1 overall, 10-0 and first place in the WLAA.

The Warriors remained at the other end of the spectrum: 0-16 overall, 0-10 in the conference. Garon Oseff led them in scoring with 18 points.

Concerts feature young musicians

With a class load of 18 credits, award-winning pianist/composer Anthony Bonamici said he doesn't have much time for composing but adds things are going well for him at the Shepherd School of Music at Rice University in Houston, Texas.

He's majoring in math in science and had been up all night studying for a music history test when we talked on the telephone. With the test behind him, Bonamici was relaxed and enthusiastic as he talked about performing in a new addition to the Cranbrook Music Guild Series called "Undiscovered American Artists" on March 1.

"I'm thrilled," he said. "In choosing a program I chose music from a wide variety of time periods from Baroque to post romantic."

A 1992 graduate of Stevenson High School in Livonia, Bonamici has won numerous performance competitions locally and nationally and performed extensively in the Detroit area. He has studied piano since he was 5.

"Tony is a remarkable young man who appears to have enormous musical talent and yet is definitely not a prodigy. He accepts his gifts without being impressed with himself and also works at the piano long hours," said Elaine DeWolfe, program director for the Cranbrook Music Guild Chamber Series.

Bonamici's concert 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 1, in the library of Cranbrook House will include works of Bach, Beethoven, Brahms and Cesar Franck. Tickets are $15 and available at the door or by calling 751-2435. Cranbrook House is on Lone Pine just west of Cranbrook Road. A reception to meet the artist will be after the concert.

■ Young artists need our support. Don't miss the Pontiac-Oakland Symphony Young Artists Concert 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 20, in Varner Recital Hall on the Oakland University campus in Rochester.

Tickets are $10 general, $5 seniors and students and may be purchased through the Music, Theatre and Dance box office at (810) 370-3013.

Battle of sexes wages on in comedy

HUGH GALLAGHER

The more things change, the more they. . .

George Bernard Shaw, masterful playwright and political wit, had great fun sticking pins in the political correctness of his day. Though Shaw was a socialist, in a rather genteel British fashion, he could aim his barbs in all directions with equal sting.

The Meadow Brook Theatre is presenting a zestful, stylized production of Shaw's still funny, still relevant battle of the sexes comedy "You Never Can Tell."

Though Shaw begins with a tooth extraction, his play is anything but painful. He has a high old time lampooning the feminist movement, the anti-feminist reaction, the British class system, the rudeness of youth, the staidness of age. All these were hot topics in 1896 and are hot topics still 98 years later?

The play, and the production, take a while to pick up steam. The affected British accents are a little too stiff. But once things get rolling they get rollicking.

Mrs. Clandon, femnist author and new age thinker, has returned to England after 18 years in Madeira with her three young adult children. She must face the irascible husband she left behind. Add to this mix an unsuccessful roguish dentist, a once free-spirited but now staid solicitor, a wise waiter and a brilliantly goofy barrister.

The comic heart of this story are the youngest Clandon children, not quite legally adults. These new age children are quick witted, rude, exasperating and totally winning. Shirley Ann Kaladjian nearly steals the show as the effervescent Dolly. Her face is like putty, twisting into one look after another and her continuing retorts are performed with innocent guile and pinpoint timing. Frank Polito as brother and co-agitator Phil keeps pace, especially in their shared word play and verbal games. His cockiness is just right.

This is a production, however, that is also blessed with solid older character actors. Jayne Houdyshell, just recently a triumph in "Shirley Valentine," is a force to be reckoned with as Mrs. Clandon. Arthur Beer sputters and growls as the intimidating but really soft-hearted father Fergus. His emotional shifts are hilarious. But it is Wil Love who draws the heartiest laughs as the waiter who knows his place. Love's wheezy laugh, twinkling eyes and his impeccable timing on Shaw's sly twists on class prejudice are acting perfection.

The rest of the cast is uniformly enjoyable. The centerpiece lovers, played by Peter Gregory Thomson and Deborah Staples, are burdened with Shaw's weighter views on sexual relations but handle the dialog with aplomb. Paul Hopper is fine as once "hippie" idealist transformed into uptight lawyer (see how relevant this still is).

Director Carl Schurr, in addition to staging a clear, witty and fast moving production, comes on at the end to give a splendidly off-the-wall performance as the obligatory character who ties it all together for a happy ending. But he does it in the most bizarre fashion. As a director Schurr uses color and artificial sets, by Peter Hicks, to enhance the playfulness of Shaw's story. He also gives us ensemble acting of the highest quality.

Hugh Gallagher is production editor of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Inc. He has reviewed films and plays for the past 20 years.

His career in Poland included performing as a soloist with leading Polish symphony orchestras and chamber groups. In 1981 he received a fellowship at the University of Michigan Graduate School to further his musical studies.

Schesiuk has been a member of the LSO violin section for 1½ years. In the spring of 1993, he conducted Liszt's "Les Preludes," and two of Brahm's "Hungarian Dances." This December he conducted all five of the LSO performances of Tschaikovsky's "The Nutcracker."

He served a two-year residency at Bolshoi Theatre in the former Soviet Union where he conducted several major operas. In 1991, Schesiuk and his family left their homeland to join relatives already living in Garden City. He serves as choir director at St. Josaphat Ukrainian Catholic Church in Warren and leads an a cappella chorus at the Ukrainian Cultural Center where he also gives joint recitals with his wife, a pianist.

Coach bets on 'Blue Chips' to turn his life around

Coach Pete Bell loves his work. He loves the game. He loves the boys he transforms into disciplined men on the basketball floor. He loves to win.

The coach hates excuses. He hates cheating of any kind. He hates the hypocrisy and the hype that undermine his sport.

Coach Bell is at a crossroads in his career and in his life. Bell's career is in jeopardy, and his devil's choice involves the search for "Blue Chips" — the cream of the high school basketball crop, the players every college program covets — the finest amateur athletes money can buy.

Opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters, "Blue Chips," a Paramount Pictures release, stars Nick Nolte and is directed by Academy Award winner William Friedkin from a screenplay written by executive producer Ron Shelton, and produced by Michele Rappaport.

The film co-stars Mary McDonnell, Ed O'Neill, J.T. Walsh, Alfre Woodward and Shaquille O'Neal. The cast includes Louis Gossett Jr., Anfernee "Penny" Hardaway, Matt Nover and Bob Cousy, with appearances by Larry Bird, Indiana University coach Bobby Knight and other key figures in the game, past and present.

Nick Nolte is Pete Bell, head coach of the Western University Dolphins, former national champions who have slipped out of the national rankings in recent years. Under pressure, Bell and the school's athletic director (Bob Cousy) begin a search for players who can turn their ailing program around.

Bell is tipped to the availability of some bona fide prospects: Neon Bodeaux (Shaquille O'Neal) in New Orleans, Butch McRae (Anfernee "Penny" Hardaway) from a parochial academy in Chicago, and Ricky Roe (Matt Nover) from the Indiana cornfields.

While wrestling with the ethics of using readily available alumni funds to compete for these athletes, the voice of his conscious is echoed by that of his school teacher ex-wife Jenny (Mary McDonnell), who knows his failings don't include a willingness to corrupt the game he loves.

What is less certain is whether his respect for the rules or his desire to win — even at the price of his principles — will determine his actions. A local reporter (Ed O'Neill) is trying to prove he's already lost the battle, and a powerful alumni booster (J.T. Walsh) is waiting to cover the spread that will ensure that loss.

"There are two reasons I'm incapable of cheating," coach Bell explains. "One is, I might get busted and thrown out of coaching — which means I won't be teaching these kids how to play basketball and how to become men."

And the second reason? "I might not get caught."

"I love basketball," said Friedkin, who has worked out with the

■ PREVIEW

Boston Celtics for each of the past 17 years. "For a long time now, I've wanted to make a film set in that world. And 'Blue Chips' was simply the best basketball script I'd ever read."

First written 12 years ago by Ron Shelton, "Blue Chips" dealt with themes of corruption, morality and ambition that have been at the heart of much of Friedkin's work, from his Oscar-winning "The French Connection" and "The Exorcist" to "To Live and Die in L.A."

These conflicts as represented in the world of sports — specifically in basketball — had previously caught Friedkin's attention in "The Killer Instinct," a book written by basketball legend Bob Cousy. In it, Cousy explores his own incessant drive to succeed in a business whose unrelenting pressure often compel its most passionate champions into alliances with the very forces that corrupt the sport they cherish.

In the central roles of the "Blue Chip" recruits, the filmmakers decided to hire athletes who had some acting ability rather than actors who could perform on the court with lesser skill.

"I wanted to look at the players in this film and know that these guys are really playing," said Friedkin. "I wanted there to be no doubt that you are watching great athletes in competition."

"Frankly, I didn't know if we could have found good enough actors in the sports world," said Michele Rappaport. "Now I'm convinced we couldn't have gotten anyone better than Matt (Nover) and Anfernee ("Penny" Hardaway). And Shaquille's smile just lights up the screen."

Explosive thriller marks Seagal's directing debut

Warner Bros.' new action thriller, "On Deadly Ground," starring and directed by Steven Seagal, opens Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters. In addition to Seagal, the film stars Michael Caine and Joan Chen.

Filmed on location in Alaska and northern Washington state, "On Deadly Ground" tells of the aggressive drilling activities of Aegis Oil, an independent company under the leadership of its renegade president, Michael Jennings (Michael Caine). When Forest Taft (Seagal), a roughneck who puts out oil-rig fires for Jennings, learns of Aegis' environment-threatening behavior, he attempts to stop the company from drilling on native Alaskan (Inuit) land, but instead, finds himself fighting for his own life against Jennings and his men.

Taft teams with Masu (Chen), an Inuit activist, to defend himself and his homeland against the oil company, which culminates in an explosive battle of wits and muscle.

After starring in five hit films and becoming one of the world's most popular action stars in recent motion picture history, Seagal now expands his skills as a director on a story which appeals not only to his sense of adventure, but also responsibility to our fellow human and natural surroundings.

As a first-time director, Seagal would have to contend with a script that called for Alaskan blizzards, explosions, oil fires, dogsleds and horse chases.

Chen traveled to Alaska before production began for "On Deadly Ground" to understand her character.

"I tried to learn the Inuit language and something about their culture," said Chen. "Their way of life is so beautiful. It's a simple, basic life, with a complete lack of greed. They have big families and are content to live in and around the same area. They are a very cooperative people, and that's a great learning experience."

Prior to stating the film, Chen had never ridden a horse. "At first I was scared of the horses," recalls Chen, "but after we got to Alaska we started riding three or four hours at a time and they made a rider out of me. I enjoyed it so much, I'm in the process of buying one!"

For Robert Watts, the opportunity to produce an action film with a conscience was too great to resist. "What really appealed to me about "On Deadly Ground" is what underlies the basic action adventure story. I look at it as a film about human responsibility, and that's my reason for doing it. However, Steven's action-adventure fans are not going to be disappointed in the least. This movie is crammed with a great deal of very exciting action."

"We have helicopter explosions, martial arts battles, gun battles, mountains exploding, oil wells blowing up," adds A. Kitman Ho, one of the producers. "The action is exciting, but the majestic Alaskan setting will really remain in people's memories. Watchign this gorgeous — and fast-disappearing landscape, we're all reminded of how priceless our environment is, and how easily we can lose what we take for granted."

Comedy hard on the ears

Here is what some of your friends and neighbors had to say about recently released movies.

■ Barb Iovan of Redford faxed us these comments about "I'll Do Anything."

"If a relaxing night away from screaming kids is what you seek — don't see 'I'll Do Anything,'" wrote Iovan. "My ears actually hurt from listening to this child — the female lead — scream repeatedly. In the days of films like 'Blank Check' and 'Home Alone' sequels I guess we are to find whining, spoiled kids endearing.

"Here is proof that if you expect a certain type of movie when you walk in the door, you may be disappointed. Although I was aware the plot involved a child, I did not know that she was one of the main characters. There is one totally unnecessary adult nude scene which flashes across the screen.

"On the bright side, Julie Kavner gives a solid supporting role, and Nick Nolte gives a fair performance."

■ Betty Jean Awrey of Plymouth Township agreed with Iovan, and said "I'll Do Anything," was "awful, horrible, terrible, I wouldn't recommend it to anyone."

Awrey left her comments on my voice mail, and recommends "Tombstone," "Philadelphia," "Grumpy Old Men," and "Mrs. Doubtfire." She said "Shadowlands" was excellent.

The next time you go to the movies, give us a call and let us know what you thought about the film. See Reel to Reel for information on how to submit your reviews.

Cadillac wins award from women's group

Cadillac Motor Division was honored with this year's Women in Communications Diamond Award, which recognizes companies, organizations and individuals for actively communicating the progress of women as equals in the work force.

WICI also awards annually a Dog Award, good-naturedly citing organizations that are in the dog house because of their communications concerning today's women.

Cadillac's 1994 Auto Show exhibit entitled "He Says, She Says" employed a "sensible and balanced positioning of both man and woman," said WICI President Susan Schwandt. The exhibit featured a female narrator who informed a male narrator about Cadillac innovations.

Cadillac, a former Dog Honorable Mention award winner, was represented at last week's awards dinner by Rory Gambrell, senior sales promotion specialist, who said the company is "going to continue to support women in communication efforts in the future."

Gillette Razor Blade Co. was named winner of the Dog Award. The company charges almost $2 more for its women's Sensor Replacement Razor Blades than for its men's replacement blades. "The blades for both men and women are the same and can be used interchangeably. The only difference is packaging and price," said Schwandt.

The "Doggone Shame Mention" went to Kevin Joyce's WJR Radio program for the talk show host's "countless insults on Hillary Rodham Clinton. He also earned this award for his Jan. 4 show in which he suggested that women on ADC and their children should work in order to receive money.

"This, he claims, will make us more competitive and save tax dollars," Schwandt said.

Dems showcase candidates, Kennedy fires up crowd

Buoyed by an impassioned speech by keynote speaker U.S. Rep. Joseph Kennedy, son of the late Robert Kennedy, area Democrats gathered Sunday at the 34th Annual Phil Hart Dinner at The Adat Shalom Synagogue in Farmington Hills.

Several contestants for Don Riegle's soon-to-be vacated U.S. Senate seat and gubernatorial hopefuls attended along with 650 other area Democrats.

"They're (Republicans) going to throw everything into this Senate election," said Frank Garrison, president of the Michigan AFL-CIO. "They're going to throw everything but a good candidate."

Democratic U.S. Senate contenders in attendance included state Sen. John Kelly, former state Rep. Bill Brodhead of Bingham Farms, state Sen. Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor, U.S. Rep. Bob Carr and Macomb prosecutor Carl Marlinga.

They only received encouragement — not an endorsement — from Riegle, who spoke after receiving an honor for his public service.

Riegle's swan song turned to thunder as Kennedy set the tenor of the program.

Without a prepared text, Kennedy expounded on traditional Democratic themes of social equality and working-class concerns.

He chastised large companies for "gutting the best jobs working people can hope to get" in return for higher returns for investors. He also came down on the banking industry for not providing loans to minority businesses.

In terms of touchy subjects, the Massachusetts congressman was the only one to broach the subject of Riegle's involvement in the savings and loan scandal.

"I have seen all the personal attacks Don Riegle has been through," Kennedy said. "I want tell you something, I serve on the House Banking Committee and I know the kind of influence the banks in this country have . . . There is no one who stood up against the banks and for the people than the way Don Riegle has."

Kennedy, while outlining the social ills plaguing the country, also provided a few lighthearted quips.

He said his "uncle Teddy" wanted him to find out who exported Mitt Romney to Massachusetts. Mitt Romney, son of former Michigan Gov. George Romney, is a Republican running against Ted Kennedy.

On his own wealth and influence Kennedy said, "I made my money the right way; my grandfather gave it to me. I highly recommend it."

Vicki Barnett of Farmington Hills thinks Kennedy's message fit the audience.

"I think the key thing he said is that you don't have to be poor to understand there are people out there who need government assistance and help," said Barnett, who is 11th District Chair for the Oakland County Democratic Party.

FAMILY LIFE

EARTHA DEYAMPERT

Slow meals are good for fast families

You sure can get a lot out of a good meal besides a good burp. Food is one thing, but juicy conversation is another. Simmering pepper steak and rice can get tongues wagging at my house. It's great when teenagers talk about what's going on in their lives and about friends, school, teachers and the special help available from counselors during crisis situations.

Like many other parents of teens, I find it's a precious and sometimes rarer occasion when your schedule and theirs connect, especially around dinner time. At my house, either my husband and I eat together, alone or with one or more of the children or the children eat together.

Getting all the family to sit down to dinner together during the week is an accomplishment. Weekends, usually Sunday, is our breakfast and dinner time together. Cheerleading practice, track, football, basketball and work make it quite difficult for those "Brady Bunch" family dinners. Even my oldest son's part-time job after school keeps him busy on top of being a senior.

But as wonders never cease, just this week there we were, all five of us together, same time and table - and on a week day. Wow! What did we talk about between chewing and swallowing? As if there was nothing to say. Teachers first . . . characteristics about teachers teens can respect.

One thing I found out as I reached for more rice was my younges. son of 13 years experiences displeasure when a teacher makes statements like "Someone in this class is talking and being disruptive." To Brandon, as he explained it, "it's not being upfront" on the teacher's part. "Say who it is that's being disruptive."

He indicated that it didn't make sense, especially when the teacher knew who was yapping it up. In his opinion, kids take it better, respect a teacher's straight-up approach rather than use what he calls a kindergarten statement. Surely they don't expect us to say who it is?

'Getting with them'

A statement, such as this one made by a junior high instructor, even I know can tickle students and cause more good than harm. As Brandon put it, "Give us more credit than that; come to our level." His comments reinforced in my mind the real in connecting with teens, "getting with them," so to speak, and doing away with the hopscotch way of communicating.

Because teens are on the pathway, fast approaching adulthood, already coping with adult problems, adults must step up to the plate and be ready to get to first, second, third base and home in relating to teens.

Another teen and teacher relation tip, according to both Brandon and my 15-year-old daughter Andrace, is for the teacher to use age-appropriate speaking voices for teens. My younger son balked about one teacher talking in a voice suitable for second graders. I didn't get the impression he didn't like teachers being too nice to kids or or even too fair. His concern was "know your audience" - a school load of 12- to 14-year-olds, not second graders.

My daughter joked about a teacher who so sweetly told a student doing one of the latest dances in the classroom, "It's not time to boogie your knees down." Andrace thought her teacher's statement was so funny and sweetly out of touch. I thought it was funny, too, but kind of witty.

A Little character

As my husband, my oldest son John and I listened with great interest for more on what's happening on the school front, something else was said. (Oldest son John was less talkative, giving the floor - table - to the two younger ones.) What both teens shared with us was about a 14-year-old peer who they addressed as Little before his first name. Little is described by the kids at school as being quite a character - not so friendly, irritating and outspoken. He got the name Little because he's extremely short and small in size for his age.

Little kicks chairs and tables, throws ketchup in the lunchroom and disrupts the class. He's a regular visitor in the main school office. His not so friendly attitude and expression of displeasure, kids say, come from not liking as well as his inability to change his physical size and height. Compared to his peers, his size is marked well below other kids. His football uniform had to be altered to accommodate his small frame. Even then a belt was needed to hold his pants in place. The belt end, I was told, met his knees.

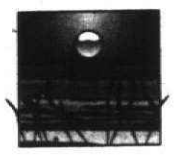
Zoo's gardens get Burton touch

■ Barry Burton's previous jobs didn't quite prepare him for his new position. The landscape architect for the Detroit Zoological Park, he's taken on the task of restoring the once famous grounds to their former splendor.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER



If Barry Burton had his way, the Detroit Zoo's gardens would once again flourish.

"Ideally, my overall goal is to make the grounds as famous as the zoo itself; I'd like to make it as famous as it used to be," said Burton, the zoo's landscape architect.

When the zoo moved to its present location in 1928, the park was known for its memorial flower garden, honoring military personnel killed in the line of duty. Another section of the park was a successful transplanting of a Northern Michigan woodland habitat. Native trees, shrubs, wildflowers and ferns grew along a trout stream.

Through the years, however, ideologies clashed. Weeds and grass were allowed to grow freely because previous zoo directors felt it would create the "natural" look the original planners designed.

That, however, has done more harm than good and will take a lot of work to restore the gardens to their original beauty, according to Burton, Canton Township's landscape architect from September 1990 to December 1992.

The park, modeled after the Hagenbeck Zoo Gardens in Hamburg, Germany, was the first zoo in the United States to be designed with barless exhibits. Instead moats and wells create the safe borders between the animals and zoo visitors.

"Landscaping was a low priority for a long time; there were vines covering specimen trees," Burton said. "I'd like to make it lush . . . balance horticulture and design."

JERRY ZOLYNSKY/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Green thumb: Detroit Zoo landscape architect Barry Burton has plenty to keep him busy during the winter. He and his staff tend to the foliage - and visit with the animals - in the indoor exhibits.

Important asset

Ron Kagan, director of the zoo staff, said that it's thoughts like those that make Burton an important asset to the zoo.

"Barry is extremely qualified, and I think he has exceptional potential. He's very creative; that's important for everything at the zoo," Kagan said. "He has a very profound understanding of people places and natural places and how the two need to come together."

Burton started working at the zoo in July 1993. He has begun replacing the weeds with ornamental grasses and flowers. His design will create privacy for the animals. Zoo visitors will be able to see the animals but grasses will keep viewers on the opposite sides of the exhibit from seeing each other.

Burton's landscape architect position at the Detroit Zoo is his first at a zoological park. Aside from his position in Canton Township, the Michigan State University graduate has worked as a landscape designer for Grosse Pointe Farms, as a city planner in New Rochelle, N.Y., and as a planner and landscape designer in Winnetka, Ill. The Grosse Pointe native said that Detroit is where he belongs.

"I really do like Detroit," Burton said driving through the zoo. "I get to be a part of the Detroit Zoo which plugs me into the rest of the world.

"Although I never thought I'd end up at a zoo, it's the crux of my career."

His former jobs couldn't prepare him for some of the problems he has faced during his tenure at the zoo. Because of the animals, Burton and his 12-member staff stay away from using pesticides and herbicides to kill weeds and bugs.

"When most people want to kill weeds, they take weed killer and spray it. We can't do that. There's so many issues other than just horticulture," said Burton, who has studied in Finland and Japan. For example, in the zebra yard he had to mix grass seeds so the grass could withstand the animals' stomping.

Some play

At times he also gets to be playful with the animals - sometimes without trying. Once while pulling out a mulberry tree he got into a tug of war with a sloth bear.

"I tried to yank it, and I got pulled back and I thought, 'hey, what's going on?' "

Commingling with the animals is an unexpected surprise for Burton.

"I didn't think I'd grow as fond of the animals as I did. I didn't think I'd be as interested to learn about wildlife conservation."

Now he rides around the zoo on what he calls his "wicked witch of the west bike" complete with a basket and a bell. He rides through the zoo feeding the animals vegetation from the zoo's plants. Sometimes he just drives around and rings the bell to perk up the sleepy animals.

Contrary to popular belief, the winter season doesn't give Burton a

Cookie game: It's sales that matter

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Who would have ever thought that ordering Girl Scout Cookies would be confusing?

Sometimes it can be if you're ordering cookies from Girl Scouts on different sides of town. It turns into a name game. What's a Carmel De-Lite in one area is a Samoa in another. Meanwhile some may be ordering Do-si-Does as others prefer Peanut Butter Sandwiches.

The reason is the two area Girl Scout Councils - Michigan Metro and Huron Valley - use different bakers. Girl Scouts in the Westland, Plymouth and Canton areas use ABC InterBake Foods Inc., chosen by their Huron Valley council. Michigan Metro groups, which includes Redford, Garden City and Livonia, use Lil Brownie Bakers.

Huron Valley's cookie committee chose ABC for business and taste reasons.

"We have a committee that has presentations given to them. They felt that ABC had a better product and better support material," said Lisa Miron-Wack, spokeswoman for the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council.

Animals' love: It teaches us how to be more humane

MORAL PERSPECTIVES

REV. KATE THORESEN

Do dogs go to heaven when they die?

That question popped up on the last day in the life of our beloved Blaize, our family's 14-year-old golden retriever.

I wouldn't say that pets go to heaven, but I would say without a doubt that our Blaize has sure brought a bit of heaven to us over these years. We've learned a lot from this kind and gentle companion.

We learned about UNABASHED UNCONDITIONAL LOVE. No matter how we looked, Blaize always warmly welcomed us at the door. There were times when we didn't look so good to other folks. Those times when our kids went through their blue, spiked hair stage, or when I had an eye operation, Blaize was always there for us. She never judged on outward appearance. She accepted us for what we were. She also never shunned us when we made mistakes, never lectured or blamed. She simply kept loving us — no matter what.

And she loved anyone she met — rich, poor, young, old, African-American, white, Japanese, Indian, female, male, noted theologians, custodians, teachers, rock musicians, outstanding students, kids who repeated school, people who warmly petted her, and kids who pulled on her ears. She had no doubts about anyone.

It was beyond her to view any person with eyes of mistrust or suspicion. She simply went up to everyone she met and openly greeted them as her long-lost friend. In short, she gave us a kind of "sensitivity training" in what it means to embrace diversity.

We learned a lot about ASKING FOR WHAT WE NEED. Blaize was never shy about sidling up to any of us and demanding an extra pat on the head or scratch on the back. Her favorite theme song was, "Slow Hands." She asked in clear terms. She was direct and to the point. And she received. There were no games, no second guessing, no expecting us to be mind-readers, no pouting, if she didn't get what she wanted or needed. She was forthright and enthusiastically appreciative when she received.

Blaize taught us a lot about being a FAITHFUL COMPANION. She was always there for us — no matter what. If we were eating dinner in the kitchen, she had to be there — usually right under the table. If we watched television in the family room, she'd plop her old body down as close to one of us as possible. In her younger years, she was the self-appointed walking bean bag pillow for our children. Many an afternoon we'd see this golden girl stretched sideways in front of the TV with three heads propped up on her.

She simply loved to be with us and let us know that all the time. How often do we human beings convey that message to our own family and friends?

Blaize taught us a lot about JOY! Let her go outside and chase after a squirrel, or walk around the green grass with all its promising smells — and she'd have a good-natured grin wrapped around her face for the rest of the afternoon. Simple things made the old girl happy. Her gusto for an extra dog biscuit showed us what it means to give thanks for all things.

Good ole Blaize. Our days are richer for her presence with us. Isn't it amazing how an animal can teach us how to be more humane? With showing one another this kind of unconditional love, forthrightness, faithful companionship and joyful appreciation, perhaps we, too, might simply begin to bring a little bit of heaven right here on earth . . . today!

ANNIVERSARIES

Bolin

A dinner with family members living in Michigan helped kick off a celebration of 60 years of marriage for Fred and Elizabeth Bolin of Canton.

The Bolins exchanged vows on Jan. 20, 1934, in Chicago, Ill. She is the former Elizabeth Warkenhien.

The couple raised three children — Gloria Butzow of Plymouth, Fred Bolin of Gurnee, Ill., and the late Judith O'Connell who had lived in Gurnee at the time of her death. They also have 10 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

The Bolins have lived in Canton since November 1975. Anniversary plans include a celebration at a later date with family members living in Illinois.

He is a retiree of ITT Bell & Gossett of Morton Grove, Ill., where he was employed as an industrial engineer.

They are members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Plymouth, where he worked as a janitor at the church school long after his retirement from Bell & Gossett.

DiGiacomo

Joseph and Stella DiGiacomo of Garden City celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Jan. 15.

The couple exchanged vows in 1944 and renewed those vows in an evening ceremony, followed by a party for family and friends at Roma's of Garden City.

The DiGiacomos have been residents of Garden City since 1955. They have two children, James of Riverview and Charles of Wyandotte. They also have five grandchildren — James Jr., Jamie, Robin, Rebecca and Jessica — and one great-grandchild, Christopher.

He is a retiree of Kelsey Hayes Co. where he worked for more than 30 years. She worked for Cunningham Drug Stores for more than 40 years.

His interests include travel and working around the house. She also enjoys travel and crafts.

HOMELINE 953-2020

Writer is creative, her ideas original and innovative

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Ms. Green,
I am a 34-year-old single mother. I have a beautiful 3-year-old child who is a delight. We live in a lovely home in Oakland County.
I am a graduate student and a health professional. Needless to say I am very busy.
I would appreciate it if you would analyze my handwriting and provide me with some insights as to its significance.
Thank you.
D.D., Beverly Hills

Today's writer is fortunate to have a high degree of vital energy. With her busy schedule this is a real asset.

She is an emotional woman with fluctuating moods. They tend to make her unpredictable and indecisive at times.

This is also a person who feels her experiences deeply. Forgiving and forgetting do not happen without effort.

Signs of high intelligence are pervasive in her handwriting. Her mind is creative and her ideas are often original and innovative.

In finding solutions to problems and the means of accomplishing them our writer is resourceful. She looks for the most expedient and efficient ways to do things. She can devise short cuts and streamline the task.

A rather private person evolves here. She is reticent about sharing her personal life with others. In matters of importance to her she tends to stop and think before she speaks. She tells people what they want to hear, often relying on intuition.

She appears to be gifted in the use of words. She can think on her feet and ad-lib with ease. She may also have literary aptitudes.

Often she comes on strong to make a good first impression on those around her. She may also drive to take command in a relationship.

Authority figures are not easy for her to accept. Some defiance which probably started in early life appears to continue. Evidence of carelessness surfaces and suggests she often finds herself scurrying around trying to get everything done. In her haste, she probably ends up hurting herself in small ways. She might want to consider slowing down before this develops into accident proneness.

She would love to be perceived by others as quite a sophisticated young woman. Although very capable, she appears to have changeable feelings regarding her own self-worth.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful and objective feedback is always welcomed.

break either. He and his staff of 12 tend to the indoor exhibits' gardens which he hopes to make more lush. Year-round he makes plans for the outdoor gardens.

Among his projects this year is to "fine tune" the adopt-a-garden program where volunteers come in and care for gardens within the zoo's confines. Many of the volunteers, he said, feel that they are required to work on their gardens. He plans to weed those people out and replace them with fresh volunteers.

"I'd really like to see that everyone who is here really wants to be here."

When Burton's initial plan is finished, a "demonstration perennial garden" will be the centerpiece of the zoo. He's going to showcase plants that will work well in Michigan gardens.

Hopefully, with the new exhibits and plants, people going to the zoo will also learn about plants as well.

"You never ever stop learning. Naturally, you learn about botany but you can learn about new animals, too."

The Detroit Zoo, at I-696 and Woodward Avenue, is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday during the winter. For more information, call (810) 398-0903.

Yes, Little worked hard at people noticing him in his own way. Some teens thought him to be "fresh," a man on a mission, a person with nerve. He didn't let his size predict his actions, even if his actions were questionable and irritating. By some teens' standards, that's what Little needed to do to keep people off him.

His technique wasn't a favorable one at our house, but even my teens agreed he was doing what he thought he had to do to get respect. In their words, he cries out for help in accepting himself and in being accepted. He just wants to be "in," taking into consideration the many phases of being "in."

Predicting "in" and "out" standards by teens is not predictable. What I can say and feel good about is I'm glad I was "in" that day at dinner time to be a part of their world. And that sharing was a meal on one's plate worth taking in.

If you have a question or comment for Eartha DeYampert, call her at (313) 953-2047, mailbox number 1883, on a Touch-Tone phone, or write her at the Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Her council has used ABC bakers during most of the last 10 years except for one year they used Lil Brownie.

"The volunteers didn't like it at all," she said of the Lil Brownie bakers.

"I think my own observation is it has a better product. As far as my taste buds are concerned, they're moister and more truer to the taste . . . not as dry," she added.

Of course, Wendy Hanson of the Michigan Metro Girl Scouts loves the taste of her council's cookies. That's all she has tried.

The bakeries weren't allowed to comment on the stiff competition.

"We work for Girl Scouts USA. We are not allowed, according to them, to give out information," said a spokeswoman at ABC

The differences don't stop there, however. Cookies may also be sold at different prices and times, said Jeannie Hwang Ng, a Girl Scout USA representative based in New York.

"It's always confusing when someone will say (on TV or radio that) it's the kickoff day for Girl Scout Cookies sales. . . . Sometimes, that's incorrect. There is no (official) kickoff cookie sale date," Hwang Ng said.

But one thing stays the same, according to Hwang Ng: "All proceeds remain in the area where cookies are sold. It benefits the Girl Scouts in the community."

Girl Scout cookies will be sold through March 13 by the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council. The Huron Valley Girl Scout Council will sell them until the end of February. The price is $2.50 per box for each council. For more information, call (313) 964-GIRL, Ext. 230, or (313) 483-2370.

Musician Elliott shares message through singing

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Brian Elliott is an intense believer in sharing the message of his music.

"I feel a need to return in whatever way I can," he said. "If I have some talents, then I have to share them. If I don't share them . . . I have to share them, that's all there is to it. If there's any healing or anything in my message, then I have to share it."

He and the Haney Sisters will perform during an 8 p.m. program Saturday, Feb. 19, "The Spiritual Nature of Addiction," at Church of St. Dennis, 12 Mile and Stephenson Highway in Royal Oak. Dennis Trestain, a recovering addict with Sobriety House in Detroit, will be the guest speaker. His topic will be "The Truth Will Set You Free."

Elliott, who once played drums for Ted Nugent, is a recovering addict himself. He has noticed that his music changes as he recovers.

"My music is evolving as I recover and understand more of who I am," the Plymouth resident said. "My music necessarily has to change. It has to change. It just does. As I grow as a person, my music should expand and grow right along with me."

The Saturday show marks the first time Elliott will perform his songs in public. That makes him a little nervous.

"Yes, these are my lyrics, my music, my idea, the whole shot. I guess if it doesn't go over very well, it's me," he said with a laugh.

Elliott said that his music is fitting for the program because he deals with "real life."

The program is free and open to the public. For more information about the lecture, call the Eastwood Residential Clinic of Royal Oak at (810) 542-6070.

Rule #4 for correct Bible study is PAY ATTENTION TO THE VERBS. Verbs tell us WHEN the action took place. Consider 1 John 5:1 Whosoever BELIEVETH that Jesus is the Christ IS BORN of God." "Believeth" is PRESENT TENSE showing action happening now. Is born is PERFECT TENSE meaning action completed BEFORE he began believing. Thus belief in Christ is PROOF but NOT THE MEANS of eternal salvation

4 area residents are winners in county's award program

Four Observer-area men were among 21 Wayne County government employees awarded recently for outstanding job performance.

The winners are Donald Lawrenchuk and Keith Tait of Livonia, Anthony Cavilli of Westland and Steven Gold of Garden City.

Lawrenchuk and Tait were given the Meritorious Service Team Award for their effort in creating the first school health manual in the state. A two-year project, the manual is designed to help schools educate students and staff on health issues.

Lawrenchuk is the medical director for the Wayne County health department. Tait is the director of the health department's Disease Control Division.

Gold received an Outstanding Performance Award for snaring a $175,000 grant for the immunization action plan and a $201,000 grant for the breast and cervical cancer prevention programs. Gold is the health department's director of planning and evaluation.

Cavalli received a Meritorious Service Award for his work in maintaining and updating bankruptcy petitions. As a result, the treasurer's department has been able to collect more money for county politicians to spend.

"I look forward to the employee awards presentation," said county Executive Ed McNamara in a press release. "It gives us a chance to recognize those employees whose service to this county often goes unnoticed. We want them to know that we could not function as a vital resource in our communities without their efforts."

The cold you feel right now is how thousands of families feel 24 hours a day.

This year, thousands of men, women and children will be cold due to a financial hardship. For them, the thought of snow only brings doubt and fear. Whether they are physically or mentally disabled, unexpectedly unemployed or the working poor, these people will endure the chill of winter without the protection of a warm home. That is until The Heat And Warmth (THAW) Fund.

•

THAW is a non-profit organization which helps struggling families in 11 Southeastern Michigan counties keep their heat on. It is the last resort for families who have exhausted all other possible resources. Since 1986, THAW has assisted over 11,000 families, more than half with children. Yet, THAW is not considered a handout, but a helping hand, for less than 10% of the recipients are repeat cases.

•

Once again, Detroit Edison is supporting THAW's efforts. Every dollar you donate will be matched by Detroit Edison and will go directly to those in need. So, as the nights grow longer, please remember the families who grow colder.

Some species won't survive season's cold temperatures

NATURE TRAILS

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

During the past 12 years or so we have had relatively mild winters. This winter has been more like the ones we had 15 or 20 years ago, causing us to pull out our heavy winter coats that help insulate us against the cold.

Animals must insulate themselves too. They don't go down to Kmart and pick out a new coat, but they do grow new coats. In winter, mammals, like deer and squirrels, grow additional fur. Those additional fibers of hair help to trap air warmed by the body. In the case of white-tailed deer, each hair is hollow like a straw. Warm air is trapped between hairs and inside each, air provides double insulation. A deer's coat also is darker in winter, which allows more heat to be absorbed.

Birds do much the same only they grow more feathers in winter. Some of our winter finches may increase the numbers of feathers on their body by 50 percent. A feather's filamentous features allow air to be trapped easily. By fluffing feathers, birds can control the layer of warm air they trap from escaping to the outside.

Odd as it may seem, snow is a very good insulator. Mammals and some birds burrow into the snow and remain much warmer than if they were on the surface of the snow. Like the air spaces between the hairs of a mammal, or the feathers of a bird, air spaces between snow crystals reduces heat from being drawn away from the animal. As snow gets old and becomes more dense its insulative qualities decline.

Cottontail rabbits and ruffed grouse in southeastern Michigan frequently burrow under the snow for warmth and protection. Temperatures may be 30-60 degrees warmer under a layer of snow. Predators, such as hawks and owls, would not be able to see them under the cover of snow. Some small mammals also group together under the snow to help conserve heat.

Fat on mammals can be beneficial in insulating the animal from cold.

Some species that may have survived during our mild winters may not be able to tolerate this cold winter. Those that can survive are those that can insulate themselves from the cold.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia. You can leave him a message using a Touch-Tone phone at 953-2047, mailbox 1874.

Plymouth arts walk holds lots of promise

Look for an evening arts crawl in downtown Plymouth when the weather warms up — if a volunteer coordinator steps forward.

The Plymouth Community Arts Council envisions a spring crawl. "I threw out the idea at our January board meeting and it generated high interest," said council president Karen Tripp.

"It's an exciting concept. But we're as strapped as any organization relying solely on volunteers. It's just a matter of getting a committee together. The bulk of our volunteers right now is working real hard to put us in a permanent home. A gallery crawl may have to wait till next year."

If a volunteer from the chamber, DDA or arts council served as coordinator, the arts council board definitely would lend support, Tripp said.

An arts crawl is a great idea — what with Kellogg Park, an historic downtown, two cappuchino bars and springtime as the backdrop. Like Art in the Park, Fall Festival and the International Ice Sculpture Spectacular, it would draw out-of-towners to Plymouth's central business district.

The thought is to spotlight the variety of downtown spots with original artwork while staging a fund-raiser for local arts programming. The accent would be on fine art, fine crafts, and arts and crafts.

There'd be a leisurely stroll embracing nine or 10 stops after regular business hours. A program and map would be provided. One stop could include the best of Plymouth-Canton student art.

Participating merchants would offer special exhibits, giveaways and hors d'oeuvres. The Kellogg Park bandshell could showcase hometown talent like the Plymouth Symphony or Plymouth Community Chorus. Artists — a glassblower, a jeweler, a sculptor, a painter — could do demonstrations at the new Michigan Art Exchange at Forest Place Mall.

Stops would include the council's Art Rental Gallery in the Dunning Hough Library. The gallery houses 400 original paintings, reproductions and limited-edition prints. Themes include landscapes, florals, country scenes and abstract realism. Most of the artists are from Michigan.

"We rent framed pieces for a two-month period for $6 per picture per month with an option to buy on pieces in the collection at least a year," said Therese Gall, gallery co-chairwoman.

Many renters choose seasonal pieces. "It's a good way to change the art in your home or to see how a piece might fit in," Gall said. "There's nothing worse than spending $400 on a picture, then getting it home and saying, 'Oh, God. It's awful.' "

Gallery pieces that are sold bring $250 to $600; profits go toward buying new art. Rental fees are applied toward communitywide arts programming.

Gall is upbeat about an arts crawl: "There are people who have lived in Plymouth 20 years and still don't know we exist. It takes events like this to bring our gallery and others into focus."

A merchant for 11 years, Scott Smith sees promotions like a crawl as "essential to this community moving ahead."

"It's something that'd portray Plymouth in a different light, something that'll bring it into the '90s," said Smith, owner of Penniman Showcase of Arts and Crafts, which features "three-dimensional handmade work with a human touch" from around the world, especially the United States.

"We have several galleries here that don't necessarily have the recognition they deserve," he said. "A crawl also would portray Plymouth as something other than a so-called provincial town, which some people think it is."

Smith took part in a 1991 arts crawl that took place in November and involved a trolley tour of 10 Plymouth and Northville galleries. The arts council assisted but two gallery owners organized that crawl.

Smith sees a Plymouth crawl as a sort of "personalization of shopping in town. My philosophy of retailing in the '90s is that shopping is entertainment. Galleries are one aspect of that. They're multigenerational, appealing to all ages and income levels.

"When clients walk in, they come to be entertained. What I offer isn't something they can't live without nor something that's vital for survival.

"But this type of gallery makes life more interesting, exciting and fun. One of the rewards of hard work is to come here, or any other gallery, and spend your money."

Virgin Islands color artist's paintings

■ Audrey DiMarco brings the islands home in a series of paintings on exhibit to March 6 in a Livonia Arts Commission show of 30 vibrantly colored pieces in the Livonia Civic Center Library Art Gallery.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Audrey DiMarco visited the Virgin Islands for 10 days three years ago. The people, their customs and legends fascinated the West Bloomfield artist so that she spent the last year painting them.

DiMarco exhibits these brilliantly colored works Feb. 20 through March 6 in the Art Gallery on the second floor of the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

The public is invited to an opening reception to meet the artist 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 20, courtesy of the Livonia Arts Commission, sponsors of the monthly art exhibitions.

Just as primitives of the Polynesian islands inspired Paul Gauguin in the late 19th century, the natural beauty of natives in the Virgin islands fires DiMarco's acrylic, gouache and mixed-media paintings.

Schoolcraft seminar blooming with ideas

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

A one-day conference blooming with ideas for horticulturists and gardening buffs alike may ease you over the mid-winter hump.

"Gardening From the Ground Up" runs 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, March 5, in Waterman Center at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty (between Six and Seven Mile), Livonia. The $85 registration fee includes workshop handouts and a buffet lunch.

The fourth annual conference is cosponsored by Schoolcraft's continuing education services and Perennial Favorites, a landscape design firm in Waterford.

Local horticulturists, naturalists, professional gardeners, landscapers and floral designers will conduct forums that encourage gardeners to exchange ideas, said Deborah Dani, a continuing education staffer.

Classes cover a range of topics — from providing year-round color in the garden, to brick paving, garden sculpture, edible plants and garden photography.

"The workshop gets wonderful response. People have been cooped up all winter, so by the time this comes around, they're ready for change and ready to think about gardening again," Dani said.

Last year's conference drew 221 attendees, but Schoolcraft expects up to 250 participants this year, according to Dani.

Conference-goers will choose three of the workshop's 10 seminars and attend a closing session with master landscape designer David Michener, who's the curator at Matthaei Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor.

Other instructors include Janet Macunovich, Perennial Favorites coowner, author and garden designer; Barbara Deegan, residential gardener; Rick Rohl of Birmingham Lawn Maintenance, and Deborah Davis, head horticulturist at SeaWorld of Ohio.

Between sessions, conference-goers

■ HAMMELL'S A WINNER

Steinway & Sons, the legendary American piano maker, presented Livonia-based Hamell Music with its sixth annual Advertising and Public Relations Award.

An exclusive authorized Steinway dealer, Hammell was honored as the dealer that has best communicated news of its activities as well as that of Steinway in general.

A brass lyre, representative of the famed Steinway logo, was presented to Hammell at the National Association of Music Merchandisers Jan. 22 in Anaheim.

"It gives us great pleasure to publicly recognize Hammell Music for their exceptional efforts and achievements," said Bruce Stevens, Steinway & Sons president. "Their great success has qualified them as deserved recipients of this prestigious national award."

■ ARTS AND CRAFTY

Arts and crafts, all made in America, will be featured at Westland Center, 35000 W. Warren, Westland, Feb. 17-20, during regular mall hours.

Professional artisans from any states will demonstrate and sell their work, including paintings, pottery, stained glass, wood crafts, jewelry, decorative painting, needlework, soft sculpture, floral designs and toys.

Raab Enterprises of North Royalton, Ohio, will present the show.

■ EYEING WATERCOLORS

Observerland residents are eligible to enter slides for the Michigan Water Color Society's annual exhibition June 12 to July 1 at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association. Paintings are limited to watercolor on paper.

Awards totaling $5,000 will be presented. Juror is Al Loving, a Michigan native now living in New York City and a faculty member in City College of New York's art department. He earned his MFA from the University of Michigan.

Deadline for postmarked entries is March 1. For entry forms, call 313-665-8924.

"I found their culture absolutely fascinating," said the 35-year veteran of painting, motioning to a work featuring five young warriors. "I asked them why their stomachs were protruding. It's a sign of bounty, they said, there's plenty of fish in the waters."

Several of the paintings speak to the dark side of island traditions. "Danger at the Gate," an acrylic-based mixed media, illustrates the culture's tradition of sacrificing the first-born girl child to the God, Pele. A man with a knife in his hand appears ready to appease the God so the island's volcano remains silent. Vibrant island colors cast shadows over the event about to occur.

Initially, DiMarco "laid out the paintings in her head" two summers ago, after hurting her back while golfing.

"I did the masks because I wanted to do people. I decided I wanted to paint expressions of where I'd been. I had to put down emotion. I had to put down what I felt," said the 1988 winner of the prestigious Scarab Club Gold Medal.

"The people there are so wonderful, gentle and kind. The world we live in is kind of scary. I found a gentleness there that is something lost for us."

Fellow artist Jeri Fellwock of Farmington Hills followed the development of DiMarco's island and mask paintings over the last year. "Her colors are vibrant, her brush strokes are energetic, the way she paints in layers, the way she lets her colors show through, the story she tells," Fellwock said.

As a 9-year-old girl, DiMarco learned the most valuable lesson of her life, one that guides not only how she lives that life but how she approaches her art.

"It was the last time I saw my mother before she died. I wanted to do something but backed away from it saying I couldn't. My mother said, 'Always try. If you have an idea no matter how abstract, how do you know you'll fail if you don't try. Always try. Not to try is to fail.'"

DiMarco learned from the best. Studies at Detroit Society of Arts and Crafts (now Center for Creative Studies) under Sarkis Sarkisian and Guy Palazolla, and at Eastern Michigan University, gave DiMarco the knowledge necessary to develop her drawing abilities.

Portraits sketched from life reflect much-practiced skills in the human form as well as the ability to manipulate the media of pencil and pastel.

■ 'Art doesn't have rules but you have to study to understand color compatibility. Some people call me a colorist, but I not only use color, I know the capability of color . . .'

Audrey DiMarco

An active member of the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association and Scarab Club in Detroit, DiMarco has taught multimedia painting at the Birmingham Community House, Visual Arts Association of Livonia and privately in her own studio 15 years.

On March 4, she begins teaching a series of three workshops in pastel at VAAL.

"Art doesn't have rules but you have to study to understand color compatibility. Some people call me a colorist, but I not only use color, I know the capability of color, how to place fuschia next to red separated by only a thin black line and offset by the coolness of Raku," she said, referring to "Masks," an acrylic painting that incorporates pieces of ceramics.

DiMarco is proud of the many awards and prizes she's received but says she doesn't keep track of them anymore. That isn't why she paints.

"If I'm not involved in a painting, I'm kind of down but if I have something in progress, I wake up happy as a lark," she said. "I enjoy painting. I need to paint. I have to."

DiMarco has exhibited at the Belian Art Center in Troy, Birmingham Community Center, Edee Joppich's Bay Street Gallery in Northport, Detroit Artista Market, Detroit Institute of Arts rental gallery, Farmington Community Library, Livonia City Hall and Atrium Gallery in Northville. Her work is in collections across the United States as well as Canada, Germany, Japan and England.

DiMarco likes to have three paintings in the works at any given time. The beginnings of her newest series focusing on impressionistic sunflowers raises its head for the first time in this show. Energetic bursts of gold light play on the canvas in all their magnificence.

Other paintings in the show continue a theme that thrives on social and psychological mores. "From the Caves" deals with the fact that women have always submitted to men's needs and wants.

On the other hand, "Masks in the Men's Room" toys with the premise that "men don't show their feelings the way women do.

'Most of the things I do, have to do with people. I want to emotionally and psychologically get the viewer involved with the painting."

Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Ritual fire: As a colorist, Audrey DiMarco shines in "Masks," an acrylic painting daring in its use of warm, red colors.

Dietrich's daughter pens provocative biography

BOOK BREAK

VICTORIA DIAZ

"If you live with people like my mother, who are utterly powerful simply because they are famous, you come to know that they can say anything or do anything, and will never be questioned," says 69-year-old Maria Riva, daughter of the late Marlene Dietrich and author of the just-out-in-paperback biography, "Marlene Dietrich" (Ballantine, $14).

"After a while, you simply want to scream the truth."

It's difficult to imagine the petite, soft-spoken Riva screaming about anything. Nevertheless, via her written words, she has gained the attention of thousands of fascinated readers worldwide.

The book's original hardcover edition from Knopf last year became a blockbuster bestseller. And with its paperback re-release this month, audiences are sure to grow.

Stopping off at Borders Novi last week in the midst of a whirlwind U.S. tour to promote the paperback re-issue, the trim, blonde author (who resembles her famous mother only slightly) emphasized that she could hardly remember a time when she didn't want to write a book about the woman she still refers to as "Dietrich."

"When I finally sat down to write (the book), I felt, in a sense, as if I'd been researching it all my life," she said. "There were all the conversations I remember, all the phone calls I remember. My mother, you see, trained me to remember and repeat to her entire conversations when I was very young and so I have an especially retentive memory. Then, there were all her letters and diaries that I had access to. My greatest problem was that I had so very much to say."

Actually, Riva (who was never permitted by Dietrich to attend school) ended up saying a lot. The memoir is 700-plus pages (with more than 200 black-and-white photos included) and apparently, as the New York Times pointed out on its 1993 release, "leaves no sequin unturned."

Riva, who did not want the book published until after Dietrich's death (in 1992), insists, however, that her story is not just another literary event in which yet another glamourous "movie mommy" is trashed by her offspring. On the book's original release, a number of major reviewers agreed with her.

The San Francisco Chronicle called the memoir "extraordinary," adding that "the greatest tribute to Dietrich may be that Riva . . . is . . . fair and decent." The Chicago Tribune declared, "Riva does not attempt to take over the narrative, parading invectives, exhibiting hurts . . . She actually has much good to say about her mother."

True. Riva does give the great star her due, especially when it comes to her professionalism.

"My mother was beautiful and utterly fascinating," she commented recently. "And, professionally, she was greatly disciplined. But I have no regard for my mother as a human being. She simply had no conscience, and the cruelty she directed toward others was outrageous."

As an example of this singular cruelty, Riva recounts in the book a story of a time when Dietrich spotted a news photo of an emaciated, dying Yul Brynner, a former lover who had long since rejected the great star. "Goody," she scrawled across his photo (and sent it to Riva). "He has cancer! Serves him right!"

"Sometimes, I'm rather frigthened of my gene pool," Riva said, recalling the event.

Dietrich's cruelty was not just directed toward lovers whose ardor had cooled but toward "anybody and everybody," according to Riva.

"I was always fascinated by the fact that people — even people with great minds — were always willing to take the cruelty almost as if it felt good to be beaten by the great Dietrich."

Riva's written words do, indeed, provide luscious bits of grist for a gossip mill — in addition to Brynner, Dietrich's lovers included such diverse types as Adlai Stevenson, Frank Sinatra and Edith Piaf — but "Marlene Dietrich" goes a lot farther than just movies, movie stars and gossip.

This story about an individual, who was a legend in our time, is a highly provocative comment on that time as well.

It's also a carefully detailed, vivid portrait of self-destruction. Though played out against a starry, glittering background, it may be one of the darkest tales you'll ever read.

Victoria Diaz of Livonia, a longtime member of Detroit Women Writers, tracks the books and literary industry for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. She says she "has a lifelong interest in reading, everything from great novels to cereal boxes." You can leave a message for her on a touch-tone phone by dialing 953-2047, then her mailbox number, 1854.

Wanted — Cranbrook guides

The Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum is accepting applications for volunteer tour guides for Saarinen House, which will open for tours beginning in May 1994.

Tour guides will be trained to give extensive tours of the house and the surrounding grounds to visitors. Tour responsibilities will include giving tours an average of one afternoon a week May through October.

Training will take place Monday mornings. Applicants should be interested in architecture, historic preservation and Cranbrook in general, and be comfortable speaking in front of groups of 10 or more. For an application, call associate curator David D.J. Rau at 810-645-3323.

Saarinen House is considered by many to be one of the pre-eminent residential interiors in the United States. It was designed in the 1930s by Finnish-American architect Eliel Saarinen, who was responsible for designing most of the architecture at Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills.

Designed for Saarinen for his family, Saarinen House was traditionally the home of the president of the academy, including Saarinen, who lived in the house until his death in 1950.

Over the years the house was "modernized" and in essence, altered considerably from Saarinen's presentation. Current president Roy Slade, with Gregory Wittkopp, curator of collections, have spent six years restoring the house to its original glory.

In May, the newly restored Saarinen House will be open to the public for the first time.

Cranbrook Academy of Art with its contemporary art museum is a division of Cranbrook Educational Community, which also includes Cranbrook Institute of Science and Cranbrook Schools. Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum activities are supported in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs. For more information, call 810-645-3314.

Symposium to shed light on shade gardening

By Marty Figley
Staff Writer

"Understanding Shade Gardening" is the title of a symposium on design, plants and garden style sponsored by Horticulture magazine and the Cranbrook Educational Community, 8:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 19, at Cranbrook Science Museum auditorium.

"The Cranbrook Gardens Auxiliary is very excited at the thought of having the prestigious group from Horticulture magazine selecting Cranbrook to have their seminar," said Rita Mason, president of the Gardens Auxiliary. "The Science Museum is an excellent locale."

Registration fees are: $89, Cranbrook members; $99, Horticulture subscribers; $109, nonmembers; and $58, students with proof of full-time status. The fee includes all handouts and refreshments, and a box lunch (except for student rate).

To register, write Horticulture, 98 N. Washington, Boston, Mass. 02114-1913, or call 1-800-370-1730 or fax 617-367-6364. Indicate regular or vegetarian box lunch. MasterCard, Visa or check accepted. Early registration is encouraged, since space is limited. Walk-ins are welcome if space permits.

To reach the Science Museum, use the Cranbrook main entrance at 1221 N. Woodward in Bloomfield Hills, just north of Cranbrook Road and south of Long Lake. The gate attendant will direct you.

Finding suitable plants and other uses for shady gardens is sometimes quite a challenge. At the symposium you will learn to appreciate the many possibilities in such an area, whether you choose to grow shade-loving wildflowers, enjoy the subtle textures of foliage or elect other options.

Starr Foster of Lake Angelus was very instrumental in bringing these programs to this area.

"It's wonderful to have these speakers," she said. "I'm thrilled that new, fresh ideas from all over the country are being shared here.

"Nan Sinton, director of horticultural programs, Horticulture magazine, was formerly in charge of programs at the Arnold Arboretum, Harvard. Since coming to Horticulture she is doing a fine job of expanding their program. She is very good at finding the most current and knowledgeable speakers."

Topics

Four excellent speakers will participate in this symposium. Vicki Ferreniea, former director of horticulture for the New England Wild Flower Society, and author of "Wildflowers in Your Garden," will explain how she designs and maintains a woodland wildflower garden from the earliest spring bloom to the end of fall.

Author and lecturer Tom Wirth, landscape architect of PBS's "This Old House" and "The Victory Garden," will demonstrate how selective tree pruning will enhance shady areas. He will also explain how the addition of arbors and pergolas can create shadow patterns for added enjoyment.

Stephen Morrell, a graduate of the New York Botanical Garden School of Horticulture, a horticultural designer specializing in Japanese-influenced gardens, will show ways to create a path through the shade by the judicious placement of stones, foliage plants and moss.

Charles Cresson, author of several books including "Charles Cresson on the American Flower Garden," will share his thoughts about combining native and exotic plants and how to merge the edges of shade gardens with sunnier areas.

A design forum with the speakers will round out the program. Attendees are invited to submit questions with their registration. Questions from the floor will also be encouraged.

Books

One of the two of the books available for purchase will be Ferreniea's "Wildflowers in Your Garden" (Random House $35). This is a practical guide that explains how to mix wildflowers and other plants to create natural areas and includes 10 landscape plans for many types of gardens.

Plant lists are arranged in three sections: stalwarts, intermediates and specialty plants, then each section is further divided into plants for shade or sun. Color photos are excellent. Horticultural information will guide the gardener to success.

The other book will be "Charles Cresson on the American Flower Garden" (Prentice Hall, Burpee series, $20).

His method to gardening is "understanding how to combine the various types of flowers, how they interact as a plant community, and how to manage them so that you work with the community rather than fight it. This book is about how to put together and maintain such a garden, whether it be large or small."

Cresson explains the importance of knowing your property, and the plants you wish to grow, how to combine them, and their care — staking, pruning and more. The encyclopedic section includes pertinent information, such as how each plant can be used most effectively in the garden.

Cranbrook House and its 40 acres of gardens are a part of the Cranbrook Educational Community, which also includes Cranbrook Academy of Art and Museum, Cranbrook Institute of Science, Cranbrook Schools and affiliated cultural and educational programs.

He holds a Graduate, Realtors Institute of Michigan designation and maintains a Valuation Specialist License issued by the State Board of Appraisers.

He's a member in good standing of the Western Wayne County Board of Realtors, the Michigan Association of Realtors and the National Association of Realtors.

■ SALES UP
The Southfield-based Detroit Metro Region of RE/MAX showed expansion in 1993, including increased sales volume of more than 40 percent. The number of closed transactions also rose, exceeding 1992 totals by more than 20 percent.

Ed LeVoir, regional director, cites more than record-low interest rates. "First-time and move-up buyers ar taking advantage of the opportunities available, but that's not what has made us one of the fastest-growing real estate organizations in North America," LeVoir said. "We owe our success to the professionalism, dedication to service and experience of our staff. There are no part-timers here."

RE/MAX associates average 10 years of real estate experience, more than three times the national average, he said.

■ ON THE MOVE
Grubb & Ellis Co. and Axiom Real Estate Management Co. have moved to larger quarters in Suite 500 the 2000 Tower of the Prudential Town Center, Southfield. Both previously were on different floors.

"We are very pleased to be moving to a larger space because of the need to accommodate our growth," said Dennis Burnside, senior vice president.

With 100 offices nationwide, Grubb & Ellis offers commercial brokerage and consulting, properties and facilities management (through its Axiom subsidiary), appraisal, residential brokerage, mortgage brokerage and auction services.

Industrial, office outlook mostly bright

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Area Realtors who specialize in industrial and office properties painted a positive picture generally during their recent annual state of the industry review.

They reported that:

■ Industrial vacancies, primarily manufacturing facilities, have decreased on the east side of the metro area, including Rochester Hills and Auburn Hills, due to growth in the auto industry.

■ Industrial vacancies, primarily warehouses, have decreased on the west side, including the I-275 corridor, due to growth in service industries, especially video-related.

■ Office vacancies decreased in smaller submarkets like Livonia, Farmington Hills, Bloomfield Hills and West Bloomfield due to business expansions sparked by improvements in the economy.

Consequently, landlords and property managers in those communities find it less necessary to offer incentives like rent concessions and financing leasehold improvements.

"Last year, we were predicting we'll come out of the bottom. Now, we're out of the bottom," said David N. McNabnay, president of McNabnay & Associates in Bloomfield Hills and president of the Society of Industrial and Office Realtors Michigan Chapter.

"We've got it good now compared to other parts of the country," said Paul S. Hoge, an associate broker with Signature Associates in Southfield.

"I think most people look at real estate brokers as perpetual optimists," he said. "I think this year, they're going to have to take us at face value."

SIOR's annual report indicated an overall office vacancy rate of 19 percent with an inventory of some 51 million square feet in Detroit and suburban markets combined as of the end of last year.

That compares to 26 percent for the Dallas market, upwards of 25 percent in some sections of Los Angeles and 23 percent in Cleveland and New Orleans.

The U.S. office vacancy average was 17 percent.

Detroit's city/suburban industrial vacancy rate was 9 percent with an inventory of 213.6 million square feet, the SIOR reported.

That compares to industrial vacancy rates of 15-17 percent in the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens boroughs of New York City; 12-20 percent in major sections of Los Angeles, 14 percent in Memphis and Phoenix, 12 percent in Houston and 11 percent in Cleveland.

No nationwide industrial vacancy average was reported.

"What you're seeing basically throughout this marketplace (is) business is improving, people are getting contracts, feeling more optimistic about themselves, their companies, the economy," said Gary F. Sallen, an associate broker with Signature. "They're now feeling the energy to go out and find new space."

Different office submarkets are doing better than others.

Absorption increased dramatically in communities along the I-275 corridor such as Livonia, Novi, West Bloomfield and Farmington Hills, said Michael L. Gerard, a senior marketing consultant with Grubb & Ellis of Southfield.

"We're finding with absorption a supply of 1.8 years left," he said.

However, the situation is bleaker in Southfield and Troy, with a 12- and 20-year supply, respectively, Gerard said.

The reasons — downsizings at corporations like IBM and EDS, massive movings of companies like Volkswagen to owner-occupied facilities in other northern suburbs and a large inventory to start with.

Landlord incentives probably will continue in Troy and Southfield, the panel agreed.

A few other trends were reported.

"A lot of (financially troubled) buildings were bought by users ... smaller buildings, 15,000-40,000 square feet along Northwestern Highway and some in Troy," said Joan R. Bassey, vice president of Trerice Toso in Bingham Farms.

"Some corporate clients we're dealing with in Detroit have put relocation plans on hold. They're looking for action from (new Mayor Dennis) Archer," said John R. Boyd, executive vice president for Signature.

"Business doesn't want to move," Boyd added. "The cheapest thing to do is stay put."

"Before you see major (office) building, I think some people will be pushed back into existing markets," McNabnay said. "There will be some construction, some built to suits, smaller buildings."

"If auto sales are going to be materializing, there absolutely will be a shortage of industrial space by the end of the year," Sallen said.

Managing agent owes disclosure

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. We have discovered our management company operates an affiliated company as a landscaping contractor, which has been doing business with our association but which is owned by the managing agent.

We were never advised by the managing agent that it owned the landscaping company, which always managed to have the lowest bid against other landscape contractors we solicited.

I am concerned that the management company utilized its position of obtaining bids to make sure it was always the lowest bidder, precluding other contractors from getting involved in the project.

I also am concerned about the nondisclosure and want to terminate the management company. The other board members say we got a good deal so why complain. Your comments?

A. It would appear your association has not been treated fairly by the managing agent in that it did not disclose to you its relationship with its affiliated landscape contractor. You also have been denied the opportunity to seriously consider the other contractors who were at a distinct disadvantage in the bidding process because of the preferred position of your management company in securing the bids.

Your managing agent, as a fiduciary to the association, should have disclosed its relationship with respect to the landscape contractor to the board. This may be the tip of the iceberg in regard to other abuses that may have taken place by the management company, which may be undermining the ability of the association to operate in its own best interests.

Moreover, an obligation of this type should have been clearly set forth in the management agreement between the association and the management company.

I would suggest that the board consider the fact that even though it may have gotten the cheapest bid on the landscape contract, it may not have gotten the very best services, as is clearly manifested by the fact that it has hired a management company that has not been totally honest with the board.

The board may wish then to consider retaining a new management company, which is more straightforward and may have "cause" to do so.

Barrier-free house offers teen a new start

A teenager paralyzed in a 1990 auto accident looks forward to a fresh beginning. This month, the 16-year-old moves into a new home specially designed by a Bloomfield Township architect.

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

Like other architects, Michael Trautman started his latest project by looking at structure and space.

But this undertaking, started a year ago, called for a third element that is essential to his work as a designer of barrier-free buildings - sensitivity.

The president of Trautman Associates in Bloomfield Township began specializing in barrier-free architecture for people with disabilities, many confined to a wheelchair, about two years ago.

For an architect like himself, who runs a small practice, the work is more challenging and more satisfying than designing conventional buildings, he said.

This project, ready for occupancy in a few weeks, is a tightly planned, 1,700-square-foot ranch style house in Lake Orion. It's designed for Beau Wern, the architect's youngest client, a 16-year-old Lake Orion youth, who suffered a traumatic brain injury in a 1990 auto accident.

Beau has been in a wheelchair since an eight-month stay at University of Michigan Hospital following the accident, which left him with limited use of his left side, but otherwise paralyzed and unable to eat or speak, said his mother, Beverly Wern, a registered nurse.

"Beau's excited when we drive past the house. It's very frustrating to see what he goes through to entertain himself (in the apartment where they're staying). We've been able to make some alterations here for the wheelchair, but basically it's like living in a prison for him," Beverly Wern said.

Trautman started the house's preliminary design by looking at the home's core - Beau's bedroom, study and bath.

Beau can park his wheelchair under countertops in the study, where he'll have an Apple computer with a left-hand control board.

The house sits vertically on a large treed lot backing to Paint Creek, so Beau has views from his bedroom and adjoining study. He has access to the main living area through wide double-action doors in the bedroom. A wrap-around deck, whose construction is similar to conventional decking, runs from his room to a second bedroom.

"Emotional well-being is a subtle thing, but it's as important as the functional parts of the house. After my first trip to the lot and after meeting Beau, I knew we needed to take full advantage of the site. He likes what we've done and even gave me a thumbs-up sign when we designed the computer area," said Trautman, a University of Michigan graduate, whose first assignment with Albert Kahn Architects in 1965 was to the design team of Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit.

Trautman's latest undertaking presented two giant challenges: Giving Beau complete access to all areas of the house and sticking to a budget of $150,000, an insurance settlement earmarked for the lot, architect's fee and construction.

The builder is Daniel Olmack of Olmack Builders Inc. in Rochester Hills.

The cost for most new home construction runs $100-$125 per square foot; this house cost about $70-$75 a square foot, Trautman said.

To stay on budget, the architect whittled down original plans by 300 square feet by taking out all single-purpose areas. Since Beau can't eat regular meals, Trautman designed a great room in place of a separate dining area. The galley-sized kitchen is large enough for storage and some meal preparation for Beverly Wern.

"We tightened things up and developed the house without sacrificing spaces that are important to Beau's lifestyle. Waste was minimized by eliminating places that he can't use, like hallways that would be impossible for him to navigate in a wheelchair," Trautman said.

The garage opens to the street and is designed around a side-loading van that requires eight-feet to load and unload the wheelchair. A cement walk leads to a courtyard that is sheltered on three sides, so Beau be outside through late fall.

Trautman adhered to Building Officials & Code Administrators of America (BOCA) rules and to local codes for barrier-free building, but he made alterations along the way. For example, the exterior door off the courtyard is flush with the cement deck because Beau can't boost the chair over a conventional three- quarter-inch threshold. To keep out moisture, the builder added flashing around the opening behind the vinyl siding.

A bright laundry area overlooking the courtyard has front-loading appliances that Beau can operate with his left hand; awning-style windows are operated with a left-hand crank. Windows are 39 inches from the floor, so he can see outside from the wheelchair.

The all-ceramic bath has separate shower and toilet areas, a change made after the room was framed.

"We altered the bathroom after seeing how Beau could get around in the wheelchair. He needed extra room to park the chair and to turn himself around in front of the toilet. You can't anticipate these things without driving through," said Trautman, who made changes before costly plumbing and drywall were installed.

All light switches are operated by remote control and electrical outlets are placed over countertops, giving Beau some control of the house. In place of an entertainment center, the architect used countertops that Beau can reach.

Trautman believes the lower level walk-out will add to the home's value. A chair lift gives the teenager access to the 1,600-square-foot room, which may be finished later.

The architect used low maintenance materials, such as vinyl windows and siding, and altered the height of stock cabinets and closet fittings instead of buying custom.

He splurged on four skylights around Beau's living area because they create a bright, pleasant environment, said Trautman, who made a video of the construction for use at University of Michigan Hosptial.

"I'm happy with the way we've solved problems and I wouldn't have done anything differently," the architect said. "It's difficult getting beyond the emotional part of this, but your attention must be on how much you can help, not on how tragic the situation is."

Ed Primeau has the idea that people will pay a premium to stand out from the crowd with an AudioGram or VideoGram business card or brochure.

Then there are those who really want to make an impression on friends and family by sending audio cassette invitations to parties and special events complete with appropriate background music and sound effects.

Primeau can do it.

He also records radio commercials, tapes videos for motivational speakers and trainers and puts together in-store direct advertising promotions for malls and individual retailers.

He started his company, Primeau Productions, in 1984 as a sideline while working for another firm as a sales manager and recording engineer.

Since cutting the cord three years ago and going independent, Primeau has grown his business from the basement of his house to a suite of offices on the 17th floor of North Park Plaza in Southfield.

"We're a production company, not a recording studio," the 35-year-old Troy resident said. "A production company is a full-service facility with professional voice talent, professional script writing, directing and producing."

Construction industry upbeat about '94

By Doug Funke
Staff Writer

Building contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, architects and engineers — not always an optimistic lot by nature — apparently feel encouraged about business prospects that lie ahead.

Fully 25 percent of 622 members of the Construction Association of Michigan who responded to a December survey indicated that they plan to hire more people this year. Only 13 percent anticipate layoffs.

Seventy-four percent indicated that their cash flow position was the same or better than 12 months ago.

Nearly one in four reported an increase of 10 percent or more in their volume of work during the last half of 1993. Only three in 10 reported any kind of decline.

Nearly 60 percent said their material prices had remained the same or increased less than 5 percent during the past six months.

"What we do impacts all residents of the metro Detroit area," said Jim Edwards, a Farmington Hills resident, owner of Vulcan Iron Works and chairman of the Construction Association of Michigan.

"We represent an industry that is a large proportion of the gross state product. The construction industry basically is the best barometer of business. If the economy starts down, we are down. If it's coming back up, we're up.

"Not one person builds a building," said Richard Schneider, president of the Construction Specifications Institute, metro Detroit chapter. He basically has subcontractors. There's an architect. Then there's manufacturers and suppliers.

"It's amazing how many people are involved in one construction project," Schneider said.

Specifiers write, interpret and enforce construction documents.

"We all spend 89 percent of life in buildings from our residences to where we work," said Eugene C. Hopkins, an Ann Arbor architect and president of American Institute of Architects-Michigan.

"Quality of the building environment plays a major role in performance level and psyche. To have architecture that continually improves the home and environment is good for all of us," Hopkins said.

Edwards, Schneider and Hopkins were interviewed during the annual Design and Construction Expo recently co-sponsored by their professional associations.

"Edwards said he wasn't really surprised by anything that surfaced in the survey of the CAM membership.

"Activity appears to be on a slow, gradual uptick," he said. "Hopefully, that will continue. After the last couple of years, any increase in volume is positive.

"Housing is up. Every aspect of construction with the exception of office is up or as good as 1992 and 1992 was better than '91. Ninety one was probably the bottom of the roller coaster.

"I've been in the business my whole adult life," Edwards said. "It's always been a roller-coaster ride. What we're seeing now probably is the most gradual recovery we've ever seen."

Hopkins also sees a change for the better.

"From an architectural standpoint, we are encouraged," he said. "It's been a difficult last couple of years. A lot of architects have found different careers. We see a lot of enthusiasm and optimism."

Schneider said he's observed more planning in recent months.

"Last year, everything was fast track," he said. "This year, everyone knows when they're building, if they're building. Basically, we see more backlog. We're seeing more projects out there six, nine, 12, 18 months down the road."

Dealing with governmental agencies at various levels continues to be a major problem facing the construction industry, Edwards said.

"The biggest challenge we see is the ability for business to get enough education to be able to deal with government controls that are being put on us almost every day," he said. "Small business today has a real tough time filling out forms for real small projects."

A statutory increase in the single business tax if the school financing ballot proposal fails next month also will hurt members, Edwards said. "The single business tax is very hard on a labor intensive industry like construction."

One goal is to get more members directly involved in the political process early, especially on issues that affect their livelihood, Edwards said.

Planners can hone skills

The Michigan Society of Planning Officials will present a series of advanced training programs for community leaders who have been appointed to local planning commissions and zoning boards of appeals.

The program also is geared for elected officials, planning and engineering staff, historic commissions, downtown development authorities, central business representatives and citizens concerned about the viability of their communities.

The topic is "Improving Community Appearance." The program was developed with the assistance of the following professional organizations: American Institute of Architects-Michigan; Michigan Chapter, American Planning Association; Michigan Chapter, American Society of Landscape Architects; and Michigan Society of Professional Engineers.

It is the first time these professions have joined together to present an educational program on community appearance. Six programs will be presented in different locations in the state from March 30 through May 4.

Planning commissions and zoning boards have specific statutory responsibilities under Michigan law. Planning commissions have the authority to prepare a comprehensive master plan to guide future development. Through the planning process, specific goals are outlined, existing problems are identified and methods adopted to prevent undesirable conditions from developing.

Under Michigan Law, the zoning board of appeals considers appeals from administrative zoning decisions and other zoning actions. It makes the final decisions on requests for variances on dimensional standards and may do so for extensions of nonconforming uses and lot splits.

The annual series, which includes basic and advanced training programs, has been offered since 1983. Close to 14,000 officials appointed to local planning commissions, zoning boards of appeals and elected officials have attended.

The Michigan Society of Planning Officials is a 4,000-member non-profit educational organization, composed primarily of local planning and zoning officials.

The registration fee is $95 for early and $115 for late registration. For more information, call 810-651-3339.

Apply for stop-smoking grant

There's good news for employers who want to institute smoke-free work environments. The Michigan Department of Public Health is offering employers up to $5,000 each in free funding for smoking cessation programs.

The trend toward smoke-free work environments has escalated with recent medical data. A 1993 Environmental Protection Agency study shows that at least 3,000 deaths per year can be attributed to secondhand smoke. Also, pack-a-day smokers have 18-percent higher medical costs than non-smokers and cost employers about $620 annually in extra expenses, reports the Southeastern Michigan Health Association.

Employers often offer employee smoking cessation programs before going smoke-free to ensure a smooth transition to the new environment.

MDPH's Worksite & Community Health Promotion Program helps employers adopt non-smoking policies by footing the bill for about half of the employer's smoking cessation program costs. Employers select a service provider from a list of vendors offering multi-component programs. The focus is to help employees understand why they smoke and learn techniques for quitting permanently.

The funding process is simple, requiring an application form that takes about 15 minutes to complete.

Joan Sheridan, program coordinator for the Worksite & Community Health Promotion Program in metropolitan Detroit, says it's time well spent since over 90 percent of applicants receive funding. Any public or private workplace in the seven-county southeastern Michigan area can apply. Funding favors sites with high risk workers, fewer than 500 employees and little wellness experience.

In addition to smoking cessation, the Worksite & Community Health Promotion Program offers funding for other employee health promotion services such as blood pressure and cholesterol tests and control, fitness tests, health risk surveys, weight loss and healthy eating. If they qualify, employers can apply for funding more than once and for more than one program up to a $15,000 total.

For an application, call 313-873-6502.

Kids to learn about construction

Barton Malow, a Southfield-based construction firm, is a program co-sponsor for the second annual Block Kids Contest sponsored by the National Association of Women in Construction (NAWIC).

The event will be 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, March 5 at Northland Mall, Southfield.

The purpose of the contest is to introduce 200 Detroit Public Schools children in grades one through six to the construction industry. NAWIC hopes the contest will help the children develop a favorable impression and will be encouraged to pursue a career in the design and building industry.

All the children will receive certificates. The contest winners will be awarded trophies at a ceremony the day of the event.

The students will compete in a building contest judged by a panel of construction industry leaders, including two Barton Malow employees: Don Shalibo, senior vice president, and Joann O'Dea, project manager.

Shalibo, one of the judges last year, has been in the construction industry for almost 30 years. As executive vice president, he has served as project executive on many large, complex projects, including the Mayo Clinic, Chrysler Jefferson Assembly Plant and the Detroit Metropolitan Airport improvement program.

Following are edited excerpts from a recent interview:

What's the story behind an AudioGram business card?

Primeau: I came up with the concept because I think people needed another way to communicate from traditional printed material. I've seen some pretty slick brochures people have spent a fortune on. The desk starts to look like this (grabbing a pile of papers).

When you get something in that's a little different using another medium such as audio cassette, you get people's attention a little quicker. Now, all of a sudden, you've got more than a one-dimensional promotional piece.

Is it expensive?

Primeau: People get 25 cassettes and everything is produced for $99. That's a two- or three-minute tape. Additional tapes are 89 cents each.

Who uses your services?

Primeau: Audio, everybody. We've done party invitations. We've done business cards for IDS, other insurance companies. Lawyers.

We have an awesome creative staff here that knows how to extract information and turn it into a real slick production. Our creative director is Greg Gersabeck. He's the most talented person I've worked with.

A lot is involved in shaping sound. You need to match someone's personality to the project. We market them, we come up with a way for the listener of an AudioGram to do business with them.

In two minutes, you can give them (potential clients) more information than a brochure would contain and there's no mistake with interpretation. There's no error, no misunderstanding. It's all cut and dried.

What about VideoGrams?

Primeau: We've been doing them about six months. You're showing benefits just like an AudioGram. Product variety. Personality. Customer service.

You (a potential client) are like a fly on the wall watching these things. There's no pressure from a salesman. It's a very comfortable sell. If you do a good job, they call you.

As a viewer, you get an idea of what the person is like. The alternative for a company looking for a trainer is to go out in the field and see for yourself.

You can look at it now, your boss a few minutes later. It's consistent and has longevity.

The cost depends on the scope of the work involved. Twenty-five hundred dollars is an average price for a single copy.

How much work do you do?

Primeau: When things started to take off in 1990, business has doubled every year except 1993, when it tripled. We had close to a half million in sales last year.

Those two products together (AudioGrams and VideoGrams) represent about 40 percent of the business here. The remainder takes up training and motivation programs and doing actual broadcast work, radio and TV commercials.

Does that also include your In-store Promotion Network?

Primeau: Yes.

Where do you find your customers or how do they find you?

Primeau: Word of mouth. We're in the Yellow Pages, but 90 percent of our business is referrals. That's the best kind because people calling already respect you and know you do awesome work.

We use AudioGrams as well. We've almost got a 100-percent hit rate. We've got some business from malls . . . in-store promotion.

You seem to really have fun with what you do. How did you get started and what's your business philosophy?

Primeau: When I was 6 years old, I took apart my close'n play record player. When I went to the University of Detroit, I wanted to be a disc jockey. That was my goal through high school. A profession stuck me in a radio production class and I knew I wanted to be an engineer.

When I worked at Ambience Recording, every day, on the drive home, I would think this is a wonderful communications medium. There's more to it than advertising.

In 1987, I went through some horrible health problems, lost my father and divorced within three months. It just made me stronger. What I learned is life is too short not to live your dreams.

I want to do things that make people feel good, make people happy. As soon as you stop worrying about making money and concentrate on making people happy, it all comes together.

Who is your competition?

Primeau: Better to ask who are my mentors.

OK.

Primeau: My mentors are my wife, Marianne. She gave me a lot of confidence in myself. Floyd Wickman, a professional speaker. He trusted me to come out and record his programs. Diane Ferrise, who did my press release, for giving me courage.

Imagine a beautiful breakfront in traditional mahogany as you enter your living room for that classic look of refined prosperity. Add one of our guilded or mahogany framed mirrors with beveled glass to reflect that glorious Tiffany-style lamp illuminating that gorgeous library table with deeply carved legs and apron. Any one of our paintings or prints will add a touch of calm or excitement over a sofa, settee, or a quiet study. These are just a few of the treasures to be found at Mahogany On Main, where everything old is new again.
