Students will renovate house

Plans are for construction students to renovate the interior of the historic Bartlett-Travis House. The move is expected to save the Canton Historic District Commission about $60,000.

Construction students will renovate the interior of the historic Bartlett-Travis House, which is expected to save the Canton Historic District Commission some $60,000.

Adult students with Wayne-Westland Schools' Bill Ford Vocational-Technical Center will work on the interior of the historic house on Ridge Road, just north of Cherry Hill. But Canton Township's part of the deal is to provide the necessary supplies for the renovation of the house on 20 township-owned acres on Ridge Road, just north of Cherry Hill.

The commission has requested $25,000 for the project in the proposed 1995 budget — now on the drawing board — for materials. "I think it is a marvelous opportunity. Until I see the entire budget I can't make an iron clad commitment I will support it," Township Clerk Loren Bennett said.

Township trustee and commission member Melissa McLaughlin said the commission is only making a request. "They (students) are making a classroom commitment to come," she said. "I expect this will be part of the discussion. This is part of the heads up (notice)."

But Bennett said he could not guarantee his support of the financial request until he sees what's in store for the township budgets. The township board Aug. 9 set maximum tax rates for the general, police and fire funds. Tax rates won't be set until Sept. 27, following budget discussions and a public hearing.

"We're facing the potential raising of taxes for the community. I'm going to be looking at the budgets very, very carefully," Bennett said.

Canton kids go whole hog at fair

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

There is nothing sarcastic in the name. Just an understanding of why Koppin, a 4-H Club member, was raising the hog. "That's one way of keeping from getting attached. I kept it in mind that he is a market animal," said the 14-year-old Canton resident.

Koppin was among the youths who represented Canton in the annual Wayne County Fair Aug. 9-13 and 4-H Livestock Auction this year. She plans to raise maybe a goat next year. Her older brother Paul, 16, was honored on the 4-H Court as senior youth representative. He too raised a hog. Younger brother Andrew, 9, is just starting the program with bunnies.

On the other side of the ring, Canton was also represented by buyers, such as Bob Boyer of Boyer's Meat Processing, who was buying animals for himself and others, including Canton Chamber of Commerce President Tom Adamusik, owner of Regal Construction. Also in the audience was state Rep. Deborah Whyman who bid on animals and donated proceeds back to the 4-H Club.

"I thought it would be fun to raise a pig. I learned it's a lot of work," said Koppin who has raised rabbits, chickens and guinea pigs in the past. Though she lives in the Franklin Palmer subdivision, a friend helps her out by allowing her to keep the animals at her farm.

The Stachowski children on the other hand have been born and bred on a farm and in the 4-H Club. Their mother, Joni, is a 4-H leader for the Country Pals club and secretary of the Wayne County Fair. In fact, Joni served as auction clerk with auctioneer Rollo Juckette.

"Ever since I was little I've been doing this," said Ed Stachowski, 18, who is headed for Michigan State University to probably study engineering. He also received the graduating senior award during the fair.

Volunteer coordinator believes in helping

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Some people have called Kathleen Salla a matchmaker. But it's not the kind of matchmaking you might think.

"I'm kind of a communication center. I will match volunteers with volunteer opportunities," said Salla, who is Canton Township's first-ever volunteer coordinator. "The township has had calls from people wanting to volunteer but they didn't know what to do with them."

The idea to create the part-time position came from two township officials: Supervisor Tom Yack and Clerk Loren Bennett.

Yack wanted someone to bring volunteers and groups together. Bennett wanted someone to work with residents who might qualify under Gov. John Engler's welfare initiative program in which recipients must take classes, get a part-time job or do community service.

The bottom line is to marry those who want to volunteer — or must for community-service hours — with organizations and efforts in need of people. "I'm hoping as word gets out, people will call and I can find out what their interests are."

Salla wants to develop a computer base of information about volunteers and organizations. "We would be able to match them."

She will also go into the community to determine what needs are out there. For example, she has met with First Step officials to see what kind of help they might need. "I want to be a liaison with organizations that have volunteer organizers. I can refer people," said the Plymouth Township resident.

Kids, parents get support from Growth Works

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

A single mother, Marge Somers (not her real name) thoroughly enjoyed her son Keith. He was well-behaved, got decent grades, and hung around with good kids.

Somewhere along the line, something went wrong. Somers began getting calls from Keith's middle school about his incorrigibility.

The Canton resident couldn't say she was surprised. Keith (not his real name) was becoming increasingly verbally abusive with her, even pushing and shoving her in bouts of anger. He was violating his curfew, skipping school, not doing his homework and was mouthy with people.

"She was struggling with how to control her son," said Sue Davis, director of community services for Growth Works, a Plymouth-based human services youth organization. "She was blaming herself, asking 'Where did I go wrong? Why is this happening? I've done all the right things. My parents did OK; I must be a worse parent.'"

Canton police referred Somers to Growth Works, where mother and son got involved with the Youth Assistance program, geared to juvenile first-time offenders.

Says Davis: "Nothing ever happens to the kid who shoplifts at Meijer. It's the more serious crimes that get the attention," in Wayne County, especially.

"The real goal of this program is to minimize incidence of first-time offenses."

Formerly, youthful offenders were warned and released. "One kid could be warned and released by a lot of different people," said Davis. "Our three communities made an agreement with probate court that we would write appearance tickets for curfew violations, truancy, shoplifting, malicious destruction of property and lesser offenses. The tickets go to Wayne County, and the county sends them to us."

■ DEATH INVESTIGATED

A 65-year-old man was found dead in his car parked in the lot of North Harvard Square shopping center, Aug. 12. Foul play is not suspected.

Police were called to the parking lot after a man who was dining in a nearby restaurant noticed the man in the 1987 Ford Escort. It's believed the car was parked there for at least a day before police were called.

Before calling police the restaurant customer approached the car, banged on the window and didn't get a response from the man. Police called the Canton Fire Department emergency medical personnel. There were no signs of struggle, according to the police report.

The man's body was transported to the Wayne County Morgue. Family members told police the man had recent heart problems.

■ FELONIOUS ASSAULT

A 17-year-old man was charged with felonious assault after a neighbor complained that the man pointed a pellet gun at him and threatened him at the Crossings Apartments, Aug. 11.

Two witnesses told police they came out of their apartments to help the 48-year-old neighbor. The 17-year-old, who reportedly was using the pellet gun in the complex, went back inside his apartment.

When police arrived he told them he didn't own a gun and didn't shoot or point it at anyone or anything. His mother allowed police to search the apartment. They found the pellet gun behind a dresser.

Damage was reported by neighbors in the Crossings Apartments, Aug. 10-11. Car windows, as well as apartment windows, were reported shot out. Another resident reported hearing pellet gun shots. Police also were called on the report of a loud stereo at the complex.

■ ASSAULT AND BATTERY

One of two brothers was arrested for assault and battery after he allegedly tried to choke a Canton reserve police officer, Aug. 14.

The reserve officer accompanied a patrol officer to the a mobile home park on Old Michigan following the report of an unlawful entry. The man in the trailer — one of two brothers accused of assaulting a couple earlier — became upset when police approached. When he tried to close the door of the trailer, one of the officers prevented it. The man then grabbed and began to choke the reserve officer, who was not seriously injured.

In what is believed a related incident, a man and woman in the mobile home park called police after they saw a man crawling out of the window of the trailer owned by the woman, who said she saw another man at the rear of the trailer. The couple told police they were punched and kicked by the men, who may be related to a boyfriend. Warrants are being sought against the two men.

Wayne-Westland school district weighs budget cuts

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

Snubbing $1.3 million in budget cuts, Wayne-Westland school board members are expected to decide Monday whether to seek a 3-mill school tax increase to avoid slashing programs and services.

The district serves about 300 homes in eastern Canton Township.

The board will meet at 7 p.m. Monday at district offices on Marquette, between Carlson and Newburgh.

Some board members indicated during a special session Monday that they can't support any of three budget-cutting options reluctantly submitted by Superintendent Larry Thomas' administration.

"I would go for a millage," board President Mathew McCusker said, though he voiced concern that a new state law limits the board to seeking a 3-mill increase for only the next two years.

"You know me. I'd go for a hell of a lot more than 3 mills," McCusker said.

Homeowners now paying 6 mills, or $6 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, would pay $9 per $1,000 if the board seeks a 3-mill tax increase and if voters approve it.

The owner of a $70,000 house would pay about $105 more a year.

Board member Laurel Raisanen stressed that the money would have to be earmarked for specific programs — and not for employee salary increases. District residents have retaliated in past millage elections because they feared the money would be used for raises.

Raisanen suggested the board consider increasing the pay-to-play fees for students involved in sports and other extracurricular activities. But the board has rejected that plan, fearing that students simply wouldn't participate.

Some board members said the pain of budget cuts would need to be shared by a majority of students, not just those who ride buses. One budget-cutting option calls for eliminating transportation at elementary and secondary schools.

"I'm not in favor of any one group bearing the brunt of our cuts," board member Vicki Welty said Monday. Of the district's 16,000 students, 5,000 depend on buses.

Other budget-trimming options would slash spending for adult education, security officers in high school parking lots, building supplies, administrative positions, library clerks and secretaries, among other areas.

"I don't intend to approve any of these," board member Patricia Brown said, referring to the specific budget-cutting plans.

Brown noted that a five-year curriculum-improvement plan would be gutted by the cuts — an assessment supported by Jane Kuckel, assistant superintendent of instruction.

"These are critical times for our instructional program," Kuckel said. "Every year our kids seem to get further and further behind. I don't know the answer. . . . Every year our kids lose; they can never make up."

Board member Richard LeBlanc said he also wouldn't support any of Thomas' budget-cutting options, singling out library clerks as one area he would refuse to trim.

McCusker called for "equal suffering" if budget cuts become necessary.

A 3-mill tax increase would generate about $2 million and eliminate the need for drastic cuts. The new 9-mill rate would still be far below the 37-mill rate that immediately preceded the March passage of Proposal A, which slashed property taxes and raised the sales tax from 4 cents to 6 cents.

Thomas may revise some of the budget-cutting options before Monday, when the board is expected to decide the perplexing financial issues.

"We are dealt the cards that the state of Michigan gives us," Thomas said, referring to the unexpected cut in state aid that caused the impending shortfall. "We don't create those cards."

Frank, 19, was there with a 269-pound hog.

Jenna Stachowski, 9, represented the female side of the family as 4-H Princess — an award based on community involvement, scholastics and 4-H knowledge. But she also represented her family with 230-pound and 182-pound hogs at the auction.

Canton was also represented throughout the fair with participants in the youth horse show. Volunteers from Canton also left their mark on a number of activities, including Senior's Day.

The auction, which drew companies such as Meijer and Kroger, also included geese, turkeys, chickens, ducks, lambs, goats and rabbits. Bob Boyer was quick with the draw when he bid and bought a 64-pound grand champion goat and a host of other animals. As a big supporter of the kids and 4-H Boyer urges other businesses to attend the auction and buy the animals.

Farm Bureau Insurance, for example, bought Frank Stachowski's hog for $1.70 a pound, while Ed Stachowski's hog was sold for $1.10 a pound. Whyman bought a goat — among a number of animals — and donated the proceeds to 4-H.

"It's important that you support the businesses who buy your animals," auctioneer Juckette told the youths, who have their photos taken with their buyers.

Anyone who attends the auction is well aware that the animals cost a little more than in the grocery store. But the meat is considered better, especially knowing that the youths — who learn by doing — raise the animals on natural grains, Stachowski said.

"The kids are great. They are just like one big family," said Stachowski, who is already working on next year's Wayne County Fair.

The total renovation is expected to cost about $240,000, including site work, according to township board discussions in May 1994. The money is not all coming out of the proposed 1995 budget. Money has been budgeted and saved in previous years.

Commission members aren't solely relying on the township for help. They have been fund-raising to get materials for the renovation and have asked local builders and businesses for supplies and cash contributions.

Developer Richard Lewiston has donated a furnace, John Denski has offered clean fill dirt, Aaron Machnik of township municipal services has offered four hours of time with earth-moving equipment, Doug Mans of Mans Do It Center is also donating supplies and Paul Denski of Canton Waste Recycling is checking with builders and vendors for donations.

"We figure if they are buying boatloads of bathtubs, they can give us one," McLaughlin said. "So far everything is going really well."

Mark Mills, the Wayne-Westland construction instructor, is expected to provide a list of needed supplies. Students will need piping, a septic tank, cement for the basement floor, electrical supplies, plumbing and plumbing fixtures, and heating materials, for example.

Anyone or any business interested in donating materials for the renovation is asked to call Mike Ager, township resource development manager, 397-5389, or McLaughlin, 495-0304.

Volunteers: Kathleen Salla is Canton Township's first-ever volunteer coordinator. She wants to hear from residents who want to volunteer or who are eligible for Gov. John Engler's work initiative program, as well as from organizations that need help.

The historic Bartlett-Travis House restoration has caught Salla's eye, as has the high school Close Up program, Scout organizations, the Canton Community Playscape and the Canton Community Foundation. She will also tap into area churches and civic organizations.

"Our program is in its infancy. We are starting from the ground up," said Salla, who is the office manager for her husband's CPA firm and who previously worked with Wade-Trim Associates. But she's no stranger to volunteering either. She has years in with the Boy Scouts, American Cancer Society and Michigan Consumer Council.

Salla said she would like to provide opportunities for residents to become involved in government, such as volunteering in township offices. And of course there's the annual Liberty Fest.

"We have volunteers who want to have a one-time volunteer opportunity or a long-range opportunity," Salla said. "A lot of people don't volunteer because they are never asked."...

Salla wants that to be a notion of the past. She's quick to point out the benefits of volunteering: making use of talents and abilities, acquiring new skills, securing job references, exploring career opportunities, improving communication skills, developing new friendships, being involved in community issues and receiving personal satisfaction.

"I would like to hear from people who want to volunteer," said Salla, a former Canton resident.

She works mornings and would like to hear from the community. Salla can be reached at 397-6450. If you call in the afternoon, you can leave a message on her answering machine.

"I think volunteers are valued and appreciated in this community. The fact that they created this position shows that," said Salla, mother of three children.

Parents come in for one hour per week, as do their children.

Diversion means that by completing the program, families avoid going through the juvenile court system.

"I can't make anyone do this program, but I do have an obligation to let the court know who comes into it," said Davis.

"Parenting is the toughest job any of us do, and where do you go to learn how? We look at the issues of having adolescents in the house, and more about responsible parenting versus good and bad parenting. We look at setting goals and expectations and holding kids accountable rather than 'I want to be my kid's friend.'"

Young people meet in a peer group and are matched with a mentor, usually of the same gender.

Keith meets with a Plymouth banker who volunteers his time. So far, Keith is benefiting. "He has a better self concept," said Davis. "He and his mom are working things out. He's more accepting of the consequences of his actions, is more cooperative, and is following through with things."

Growth Works' program is working so well — recidivism has remained at less than 5 percent in the program's first eight years — that Wayne County gave the agency a $70,000 grant to start up similar programs elsewhere. Growth Works is assisting Dearborn Heights, Belleville, and the townships of Sumpter, Huron and Van Buren in setting up similar programs.

Plymouth Police Chief Robert Scoggins gives Growth Works high marks. "I think it's a tremendous program. I strongly support it," he said.

Scoggins said intervening after a first offense isn't overreacting.

"I think really that is when we need to be responding and reacting," he said. "Our entire (cruising) program on Main Street is designed to preempt bad behavior. The purpose of our no-tolerance policy is to respond and react and get some change in behavior."

Home school battle

Charter academy application tests law

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

A rural school district in Ionia County has ignited a legal battle over its effort to claim $5,000 per student in state aid for a charter academy with fundamentalist religious overtones.

Berlin school district is using Michigan's new charter academy law, lauded by Gov. John Engler, to set up a "Noah Webster Academy." The twin problems:

■ If the Webster academy uses a computer network for home teaching statewide, will Berlin be eligible for state aid for 1,300 pupils its teachers never see? That question is on the desk of Attorney General Frank Kelley.

■ May Noah Webster Academy, as a public school, teach the religious doctrine of creationism in its science curriculum? That would depart from the State Board of Education's standard of evolution in the core science curriculum. The new law states charter academies may not have church affiliations.

Cropsey attacks

"I'm distressed at the letter the Department of Education sent to the attorney general," said state Rep. Alan Cropsey, R-Dewitt, whose House district includes Berlin schools.

Cropsey berated the State Board of Education last week for the department's "stifling" of educational diversity, "having the dubious reputation as being one of the three worst states for parents to educate their children at home," seeking "confrontation" instead of cooperation with home teaching and being "negative" toward academies.

"You might as well work with the Department of Education in Moscow as the Department of Education in Michigan," said Cropsey. The lawmaker said his four children are taught at home rather than in public schools.

Cropsey did his undergraduate work at the church-related Bob Jones University, described by World Book Encyclopedia as "the largest fundamentalist school in the world."

In past years, Cropsey has urged public school teaching of creationism, the fundamentalist doctrine that the Bible is literally true and the earth was created in six days 6,000 years ago rather than evolving over 4.6 billion years.

The U.S. Supreme Court has struck down a Louisiana law requiring the teaching of the biblical version.

Several news reports from Lansing and Detroit newspapers say the Webster academy planned to teach creationism.

Home non-public

State board treasurer Dorothy Beardmore, R-Rochester, was first to reply: "The word came from the attorney general in 1985 or '86 — not at our request — that home schools are non-public schools." Under that interpretation, Beardmore said, an academy serving homeschoolers would have to be considered non-public and ineligible for state funds.

"Each home should be classified as a private school," said board member Barbara Roberts Mason, D-Lansing.

Cropsey: "If a child takes homework home, isn't he still a public school student?"

Mason: "It (homework) is outside the 900 hours and 180 days (of schooling required by state law). . .This board is in favor of charter academies" - except for board co-president Annetta Miller, D-Huntington Woods.

Miller: "We have a constitutional amendment that public dollars not go to private schools. Is not the whole charter school movement an effort to plant public dollars into private schools? The (charter) movement tries to skirt the constitution — I think illegally."

State role limited

Superintendent of public instruction Robert Schiller: "There is nothing this department has done to discourage your school. We have not considered shutting it down. As the law is written, our role is quite limited in terms of intervention.

"What we have as our domain is for all schools to meet the state assessment program.

"We can look at who teaches (certified teachers) but not at the pupil-teacher ratio," Schiller said, noting that state aid can be deducted where non-certified teachers are employed.

"We do not approve facilities, but if a school site has more than six students, we notify the fire marshal and it's up to them (to inspect the building)."

But Schiller said "the laws are empty" on the questions of teacher-pupil contact time and use of telecommunications courses for home teaching.

"Our road to follow is to get an interpretation from the attorney general. Our letter (to Kelley) was not negative. (Noah Webster Academy) has broken the mold for which we have no precedent," Schiller said.

Armenian president visits suburbs

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

As part of a seven-day visit to the United States, Armenian President Levon Ter-Petrossian visited Wayne County last Friday as the guest of industrialist Alex Manoogian.

"The main purpose of the president's visit is to promote greater understanding and cooperation between the world's leading democracy and Armenia, which has vigorously pursued democratic reforms since its independence in 1991," said Armenian Ambassador Rouben Shugarian. "With this visit we hope to strengthen the political and economic ties between our two countries to secure the continued success of Armenia's transition to a market-oriented, democratic state."

Dennis Papazian, director of the Armenian Research Center at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, said Ter-Petrossian chose to visit Wayne County because the philanthropy of Manoogian and the estimated 30,000 area residents of Armenian descent.

"Without Manoogian he may not have come at all, and without the rest of us he may not have come to see Manoogian," Papazian said.

Armenia is a small and ancient country reborn in 1991 with the collapse of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The 11,000-square-mile country (about one-fifth as large as Michigan) with a population of about 3.5 million lies in the southernmost area of the former USSR, flanked by Azerbaijan and Turkey.

Throughout the world there are about 7 million Armenians, including almost 1 million in the United States.

The largest Armenian populations in the metro area are in Livonia, Dearborn, Southfield, Birmingham, Bloomfield Township, Bloomfield Hills and West Bloomfield Township, with lesser numbers living in Troy, Novi, Northville and Farmington Hills, Papazian said.

There are currently four Armenian churches in the area: Armenian Congregational Church in Detroit, St. John's Armenian Church in Southfield, St. Vartan's Armenian Catholic Church in Detroit and St. Sarkis Armenian Church in Dearborn.

Area Americans of Armenian descent in public office include state Rep. John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Hills; state Sen. George Hart, D-Dearborn (whose district includes Garden City, and Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Kaye Tertzag.

Teachers union files suit over new school strike law

AP — Michigan's largest teachers' union filed a legal challenge Aug. 5 to the state's new law against school strikes.

The Michigan Education Association filed the complaint in Wayne County. It comes a month after a labor coalition headed by the AFL-CIO filed a lawsuit against the same law.

"The bill actually gives school boards the leverage to say 'take it or leave it,'" said MEA President Julius Maddox. "It creates a subclass of public employees who have had their bargaining rights slashed."

The law, passed in April, would fine teachers a day's pay for every day they strike. Unions would be fined $5,000 a day for each strike day.

If school boards lock out teachers because of contract issues, they would be fined $5,000 for each day. Individual board members would be fined $250 a day.

Teachers couldn't be repaid for the fines after a strike was settled.

Teacher strikes, except those forced by illegal school board actions, were already illegal. Until now, there were no punishments for breaking the law.

The new law is scheduled to take effect next April. It also takes several issues off the negotiating table. Issues such as the starting time for classes, the use of volunteers in classrooms, and non-teaching services can no longer be negotiated in teacher contracts.

The MEA suit says the law infringes on a number of constitutional rights, including:

- The right to assemble.
- The right to freely associate.
- The right to equal protection.
- The separation of powers.

Part of the law requires courts to issue injunctions against strikes. MEA officials said that sets up a "star chamber" proceeding "where the result is preordained and no appeal is granted."

"This bill limits the rights of school employees to be involved in the school improvement process. It prohibits any discussion in areas that are crucial to public education," Maddox said.

Republican Gov. John Engler signed the law May 2. He said the law "restores the balance on both sides of the bargaining table."

Engler spokesman John Truscott said the MEA and AFL-CIO suits will both fail.

"This one, as with the other, is completely without merit," Truscott said. "The logic is convoluted. They may get it through a lower court, but the appeals court will throw it out."

Engler and fellow Republicans forced the law through the Legislature when the GOP caucus had a temporary majority in the House. They said the changes would help cut educational costs.

Republicans said such costs have outpaced inflation and can't continue to rise that way under the new school finance plan approved by voters last March.

The AFL-CIO lawsuit was filed in the same Wayne County court July 8. It also challenges the law's constitutionality.

The fair is sponsored by Ledge Craft Lane Ltd., a community handcrafts cooperative staffed by volunteers. It showcases the works of talented mid-Michiganians.

Free concert

The public is invited to hear Shirley Austin Reeves and the Shirelles with George Bedard and the Kingpins perform at the seventh concert in a series at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 18, in the Heritage Park amphitheater. Admission is $6 per carload.

The concert is sponsored by the Canton Township Parks and Recreation Services and Woodland Meadows Landfill. For more information, call parks and recreation, 397-5110.

Park equipment offered

The Plymouth-Canton Jaycees organization is looking for offers on play equipment at the Jaycees Park on Wing Street in Plymouth.

The group is looking for offers on the commander tower, twin tower, turbo slide and other accessories.

After the group assembled the equipment members found out that it is inappropriate for public use but is good for backyard use. New park equipment will cost three times the amount the Jaycees paid for the original equipment. Proceeds from the sale of the equipment will go back to the Jaycees.

"The Jaycees are trying to make Jaycee Park as safe as we can for the children of the community," according to the organization.

The Jaycees also will be accepting donations for a garage sale to recover losses for the park. The group is also collecting donations for flood relief victims in Georgia. Needed are items such as bottled water, clothes, cleaning supplies and disposable diapers. Anyone who would like to help, call the Jaycee hotline, 453-8407.

Historic endeavor

Big job awaits crew working on house

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Construction students who will renovate the interior of the historic Bartlett-Travis House have a big job ahead of them.

"We just sort of came along with this wonderful challenge for them," said township trustee Melissa McLaughlin, a member of the historic commission.

Adult students with the Wayne-Westland Schools' Bill Ford Vocational-Technical Center will provide their skills and elbow grease. "We talked about getting a vocational-technical class involved. So I contacted them," said Mike Ager, township resource development manager. "In the past the classes would put up tract houses. But rehabing a house is more challenging."

A challenge: Bryan McLaughlin, 4, son of Canton trustee Melissa McLaughlin, walks through the interior of the historic Bartlett-Travis House, which will be refurbished with the help of adult Wayne-Westland construction students.

The students, under guidance of instructor Mark Mills, will work on the septic tank and field, as well as electrical, plumbing, heating and even pour the basement floor - all providing they have the necessary materials provided by the historic commission. Students will give the historic house two nights of work each week, beginning September 1994 to June 1995.

"They can do everything right up to the final hookups," McLaughlin said. Mills was unavailable for comment.

Historic preservationist Rex Harvey of Plymouth was hired to renovate the exterior of the house that is believed to stem back to the late 1830s.

"He can take a little bit of something and make something out of it. We want to return it to the (style) of the turn of the century," McLaughlin said. "We're going to take away the modern things that happened to the house like a double window over the kitchen sink."

Harvey has already completed the exterior rear facade of the main portion of the post and beam farmhouse, which was updated in the 1870s with Victorian elements, an upper story - the house was originally a one-quarter story building - and a porch.

Harvey is also using a new technique in restoring the house. With use of a new wood resin he has been able to refurbish some of the old wood used in the house.

The commission isn't quite sure how the house will be used. Initially they considered using it as a farmstead museum. "At this point we haven't really determined what will be going on there," McLaughlin said. "It's wide open. There's opprtunity for just about anything."

Despite additions to the house, McLaughlin said it's possible to determine the area of the original house by the use of the big barn beams. Originally the upper half-story was a sleeping loft with two to three bedrooms.

Renovation: Canton trustee Melissa McLaughlin, a member of the Canton Historic District Commission, takes a peek at the refurbished rear exterior of the historic Bartlett-Travis House.

"There was a fire here at one time. The boards are scorched," McLaughlin said, pointing to the interior roof over the second story, which was later built as a balloon frame - similar to the old-fashioned barn-raising method of putting up an entire wall, a technique popular in the late 19th and early 20th century.

Upstairs closet doors appear to be the original two-panel doors with Norfolk latches. Volunteers over a number of weekends helped removed plaster walls, which was necessary because plaster keys were broken when the house was moved from its original site at Canton Center and Holmes.

The house was moved in the late 1980s from its original site at Holmes and Canton Center to 20 acres on Ridge Road where a basement was built for it. The house originally was part of the Bartlett family farm and was later purchased by the Travis family. The house also has been used as a two-family flat.

Roadside Marketplace shows its stuff to customers

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Plymouth's newest business, a 22,000-square-foot market featuring produce, a deli and more, celebrated its grand opening Wednesday.

The Roadside Marketplace showed its stuff to Plymouth shoppers on Wednesday, where the aging Stroh's warehouse once stood at the northwest corner of Ann Arbor and Lilley roads.

"We want to create the atmosphere that mom and the kids can come back to the market," co-owner Mark Tanaski said.

Shoppers entering the renovated building spot vegetables displayed along the far wall, flowers in a glass case along the west wall, and more vegetables and fruits in the center. They're placed on stands painted hunter's green, the prevailing color exhibited on everything from the Roadside Market sign to the roof.

A deli, bakery and coffee shop are on the east end of the market, and in good weather tables are placed outside, as are floral displays, plants and potted mums.

A front portion of the Stroh's building was removed to create more parking. There are 115 parking spots along Ann Arbor Road and behind the market.

The bakery and coffee shop open at 7 a.m. and the rest of the market opens at 9 a.m. The tentative closing time is 9 p.m.

Work to renovate the former Stroh's warehouse started Oct. 15 and completion was expected in May. But Tanaki, who owns the business with brother Jim Tanaki and Richard and Craig Schmidt, said there were several reasons for putting off the grand opening until August.

"We had delays because of the harsh winter and because of equipment problems," he said, adding that they wanted to wait and open only when everything was right.

On a tour of the market Monday, Tanaki gestured to the produce counter. "We'll have 48 feet of misted vegetables," he said. Gesturing to nearby tables, he said, "This whole area will be fruits and vegetables as high as you can pile them."

With 78 different types of coffee beans available, "This is the largest gourmet coffee shop in the state of Michigan," Tanaki said.

Prices range from $8 to $45 a pound. "We have the ability to make an individual pot," he said. Among the flavors are Jamaican blue mountain and chocolate streusel.

On Monday, Tanaki and several employees who include family members of the partners were getting displays ready and checking inventories. Tanaki said the store will have "up to about 120 employees."

When the store opens, "I'll be pumped up; we've got some long hours ahead," he said.

Politico takes road less traveled by

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

This politician is turning poet.

Bill Joyner, who served three terms on the Wayne County Commission and ran winning campaigns for others elected to local office, is about to put out his second volume of poetry.

"This one's a lot better than the first," said Joyner, of Plymouth Township. The first volume, "reflections by bill," is available by mail order or at the Little Professor on the Park bookstore. Volume two will be available Sept. 1.

Joyner got the idea to do the book after writing poems over two nights at the Outback Cappuccino Bar last summer. "Some people at the Little Professor bookstore said they didn't think I could write poetry," he said, adding that after writing several poems, he gave an impromptu reading at the bookstore.

"The response was good," he said, and that encouraged him to have a book printed.

The cover pictures a woman standing on a shore looking at a lake. Inside, entries touch on subjects ranging from lost love to Rush Limbaugh. Several entries feature plays on words.

"I like word games and word associations," Joyner said. That's evidenced by a short selection that reads:

"you drive me crazy/I auto respond."

Joyner, who holds a master's degree in speech-communications, said, "Public speaking has always been my forte; it was always easy to put words together."

"With speeches, I'm writing to move an audience. I'm writing just for myself when I do this. They're thoughts that come into my mind and may only mean something to me. I'm happy if it means something to somebody else."

The second volume is made up of poems Joyner wrote in 1985-88. "I was teaching on the college level. I was asking them to create; the students challenged me to write something," he said.

In deciding to publish his poems, "The first step was probably overcoming the feat people would laugh at it. You're really baring your soul, telling people you cry," he said.

There are 700 copies of the first book in circulation. Since leaving his job as head of the Canton Community Foundation in June, "I'm doing this full time," Joyner said.

"At this point there are not too many jobs open for community activists;" he said, adding that in September he'll continue hosting "Wednesday Report" on local cable TV, as he has in recent years.

Meanwhile, Joyner is researching a book on the subject of loyalty. Also, "I'm writing a novel about small-town politics in Plymouth," Joyner said, adding some characters will include local newspaper reporters.

"reflections by bill," volume one, is available for $7 plus $1 for postage by writing the Tonquish Creek Yacht Club, 45951 Amesbury, Plymouth 48170. Volume two will be available for $5, plus the postage and handling charge.

Am I blue?

Columnist seeks colorful flowers

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

■ Since there are not as many blue-colored flowers, compared to white, yellow and reddish-colored flowers, it's enjoyable to view them while they are blooming.

At some times of the year when I ask people on the trail to find something blue in color, the only thing they can find are some juniper berries and the sky. Blue jays and bluebirds are not often seen at the time I ask the question, though sometimes we get lucky.

During this past week however, I have seen several flowers that are blue in color. Since there are not as many blue-colored flowers, compared to white, yellow and reddish-colored flowers, it's enjoyable to view them while they are blooming.

One of the most common blue-colored flowers that easily can be seen on the way to work in the morning, is chicory. This scraggly plant grows in disturbed areas along the roadside and in fields. During the coolness of morning, blossoms of the plant are in bloom. By afternoon these blossoms have wilted. Another common name for this plant of coffee fame is the ragged sailor, because of its resemblance to a sailor's blue uniform.

Older established fields have richer soil where blue vervain grows. This tall, lanky plant produces several spikes where the small deep blue flowers bloom in rings starting from the bottom and progressing upward.

Along the trail in open fields or even rich forest soil heal-all can be found. It's not a large showy plant. In fact it seldom grows taller than 12 inches. But its blue flowers surrounding an elongated central core often draw your attention as you check the trail while walking. The name heal-all comes from the belief that it cured mouth and throat ailments.

Before modern medicines, people believed that if a plant had a flower, leaf, root or any structure that looked like a part of the human body, that part of the plant would cure ailments arising in that part of the human body. This became known as the doctrine of signatures. Because a heal-all blossom has a "mouth and throat" it was used as a mouth wash and to cure sore throats.

Deeper in the forest along the trail was another blue-colored blossom with a prominant "tongue" projecting from the center of the flower. The projection is actually the style. Pollen travels down the style resulting in fertilization. Even in the shade of the trees tall bellflower's blue blossoms are visible and easily identified.

Next time you take a walk, see how many blue flowers you can identify. Or, determine what is the most common color of flowers blooming at the time.

GOP state ticket draws fire here

STAFF WRITER

Lynn Allen, longtime Oakland County clerk, and 259 other Republican county officials will do battle with Gov. John Engler at the party's forthcoming state convention.

Engler, seeking a second term as governor, wants Candice Miller as his ticket for secretary of state. Miller, a former township supervisor, is in her first term as Macomb County treasurer.

Countered Allen: "There are 268 county-wide elected officials in Michigan, and 260 support Dan Krueger. Dan is one heckuva good candidate. He's been Ottawa County clerk for 15 years," Allen told the Oakland Republican convention Thursday in Pontiac.

"Never," added Livingston County clerk David Teggedine, a veteran of 36 years in government, "have I seen a candidate more qualified for the position sought than Dan is for secretary of state."

Krueger, 48, has other credentials: past president of the Michigan Association of County Clerks, county party chair, a record of heading campaigns for Bill Milliken for governor, George Bush for president and Bill Lucas for governor. Ottawa was the only one of Michigan's 83 counties that supported Bill Lucas in 1986.

So why are Engler, Oakland County GOP chief Jim Alexander and the party establishment supporting the relatively green Miller?

Geographical ticket balancing, Miller told the packed auditorium. Engler is from rural central Michigan; Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld is from the Lake Michigan shoreline; so is unchallenged attorney general hopeful John Smietanka, former Berrien County prosecutor; so are probably Supreme Court nominees Richard Griffin and Elizabeth Weaver of the Traverse City area.

"They're all central or westsiders," Miller said. "Our (Macomb) county once was viewed by most as one of the most Democratic counties in the state. I took out a 25-year incumbent. Great weight needs to be given to the governor's preference on this."

Winner at the Aug. 27 GOP state convention in Grand Rapids will challenge 24-year "secretary of state-for-life" Richard Austin, 81 — if Democratic gubernatorial nominee Howard Wolpe wants to keep Austin on the ticket.

Polls reported by Inside Michigan Politics, a political newsletter, say Democratic incumbents Austin and attorney general Frank Kelley may be vulnerable this year.

An unknown factor in Grand Rapids will be a group loosely known as the "religious right." In 1992, with no posters, almost no pamphlets, no buttons and no visits to caucuses, the religious right marshalled 44 percent of the vote against Engler-endorsed candidates.

Last week's Oakland convention overflowed the county auditorium, a turnout that was "close to a record," said Alexander. "We filled 421 of the 545 precinct delegate positions.

"In part it was due to hard work by the city and township directors. But there's also an anti-OBE group out there," he said.

The anti-OBE group sees a mortal danger in "outcome-based education," not only to public schools which use it but to private schools and home-teachers which don't. The group, which didn't identify itself by name, circulated flyers advertising a rally on the State Capitol steps. Organizers used only their first names.

Former U.S. education chief backs Schall

Lamar Alexander, the former Secretary of Education under President George Bush and a 1996 presidential hopeful, was in Livonia Tuesday to campaign on behalf of John Schall, Republican candidate for U.S. Congress in the 13 District.

The district includes Plymouth, Canton, Garden City, Westland and part of Livonia.

In endorsing Schall for Congress, Alexander said: "Our children deserve a better future. We all need to know more for the jobs of tomorrow. That is why we need John Schall in Congress. John Schall knows the link between jobs and education."

Schall, of Ann Arbor, was born and raised in Livonia and is a graduate of the University of Michigan and Harvard. He served as a White House policy advisor in the Bush Administration. He was also chief of staff of the U.S. Department of Labor during the Bush Administration.

Schall said he welcomed the endorsement.

"No one knows more about education in this country than Lamar Alexander. I'm proud to have him delivering that message here in the 13th District. We have some of the finest universities and community colleges in the nation right here and as many college students as as any district in the country. That's why I'm emphasizing education in this campaign."

Travis House

Project in need of donations

It's time for Canton residents to get behind the restoration of the historic Bartlett-Travis House, which is expected to cost $250,000 to renovate.

The project being pushed by the Canton Historic District Commission has already received help from local businesses and developers and has received a major shot in the arm from the William D. Ford Vocational-Technical Center in the Wayne-Westland School District.

Adults enrolled will work on the interior of the historic home on Ridge Road to gain experience in the building trades. Canton Township will supply the materials needed. The work is valued at $60,000.

However, the Canton Township board is dragging its feet on committing $25,000 to pay for the materials. The township board should be urged to come up with the money. If it doesn't it could lose the $60,000 in donated labor.

The township board should be reminded that the renovation project has community support. Developer Richard Lewiston has donated a furnace; John Denski has offered clean fill dirt; Aaron Machnik of township municipal services has offered four hours of time with earth-moving equipment. Doug Mans of Mans Do It Center is also donating supplies and Paul Denski of Canton Waste Recycling is checking with builders and vendors for donations.

Other donations could help cut the amount of township money needed. According to Mark Mills, the Wayne-Westland construction instructor who will oversee the volunteer work, the students will need piping, septic tanks, cement for the basement floor, electrical fixtures, plumbing fixtures and heating materials.

The need to preserve a portion of Canton's history becomes more apparent everyday as development spreads to the western portion of the township from Canton Center Road.

The Travis House could serve as an example of what life was like during the 1830s in the area.

Let's just hope Canton Township commits itself to the project. Without interest on the part of the township, private donations could be lost.

Those interested in donating materials for the renovation are asked to call Mike Ager, Canton Township resource development manager, at 397-5389.

Adopt a road? OK, but...

That's that you're asking? Adopt a road (or at least a mile of it), you say? And keep that stretch of highway clean through your own volunteer efforts?

Adopt-a-road. Maybe you've seen the signs along the sides of the interstates and other major highways in Michigan. The signs proclaim something like: "This stretch of road maintained by the Jolly Boys of Farmington Hills through the Adopt-a-Road program."

We're all supposed to think highly of the Jolly Boys (a mythical service club) for caring enough about its surroundings to take on this responsibility.

But, as much as a business, government entity or service club might like to help keep the roads clean - and as much as the officials of these concerns might benefit from the positive publicity that might result - we do have one nagging concern about the apparently popular adopt-a-road program.

We hate to spoil this warm feeling that volunteerism always gives, but we have some blunt questions:

- Why are they asking for volunteers to help keep the roads clean and maintained?
- Isn't that what we pay taxes for?
- Will our taxes be reduced if many, many miles of Michigan roadways get so "adopted"?

We raise these questions in light of a recent announcement that Wayne County officials have planned an adopt-a-road program modeled after the successful state setup.

Local volunteer groups will be given the chance to keep roadsides clean in residential and business areas throughout the year. Apparently, the "payment" will be the name of the company or organization prominently displayed on the sign. There'll also be a plaque or certificate to hang on an office wall.

"Community pride is at an all-time high right now, and it is becoming contagious," said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara, thumping the tub for the program in a press release.

"To accommodate this volunteerism, we chose the adopt-a-road program because it offers a lot of opportunities and is ongoing. Our goal is to make community cleanup a habit."

Participating groups must agree to clean their adopted mile of roadside at least three times a year, or more often if they like. In return, they will receive personalized signs at each end of their section of road and a certificate to display in their office or place of business.

The required trash pickups will be coordinated with the county's schedule for mowing local roadsides.

"Not having to worry about clearing debris before mowing will make our equipment operators a lot more efficient," said Lorenzo Blount, deputy roads director.

Throughout Wayne County, there are hundreds of miles of roads available for adoption, many of them boulevards with grass medians, where groups may choose to plant flower beds or trees.

The Olive Garden restaurants in Livonia, Southgate and Dearborn already have signed on to the program, along with St. John Hospital, NBD, the Northville Eagles, Sinai and Grace Hospitals, and several Detroit-area community groups.

The Livonia Olive Garden restaurant has adopted the stretch of Five Mile west of Farmington to Hubbard (with the grass median).

But nowhere in all this does it say how much Wayne County tax money is spent cleaning the highways in the first place.

Americans have always been quick to volunteer when the need is there. Is there a need for volunteers to clean our highways?

Park problems

Canton residents are fortunate to have in the midst of our community a precious jewel of a park, called Heritage.

When this park was planned and built, an excellent job was done by everyone involved. Included in our park are a beautiful, striking Veterans Memorial, a nice play area for kids, soccer fields, a gazebo, picnic shelter and, most of all, several beautiful ponds with trees and grass and bushes which harbor lots of little critters.

This park is a real oasis in the middle of a busy bustling community. It's a place to walk or skate or jog or just to sit quietly and commune with nature. Most residents of communities in metro areas are not fortunate enough to have a beautiful park like this in their midst. Many people have to travel miles and miles for a spot of beauty and solitude.

So - here's a beautiful resource in our community and how is it treated? By and large, most residents treat our park with due respect. However - there are always the few bad apples who are turning our beautiful park into an outdoor trash bin. A stroll through the park will turn up cans, bottles, wrapping paper, plastic bags, aluminum foil, newspapers, cigarette butts and trash of all kinds floating in the ponds and strewn on the grass throughout the park.

Recently, while feeding the ducks - another blessing in our park are the wonderful birds animals who live there - I came upon a small duck which was injured by a plastic ring from the top of a plastic milk jug which was stuck between his upper and lower bill and then wrapped around his neck. He could not eat or drink or bend his head in any direction. My husband and I tried for a week to catch and free him, to no avail. No agency which we contacted was willing to help. And so, this little creature was forced to die slowly of starvation, thanks to the carelessness and thoughtlessness of somebody who found it easier to throw their trash in a pond than to walk a few feet to use a trash bin.

Please, people, wake up. Stop trashing our beautiful Heritage Park. Be thoughtful, be responsible - clean up after yourselves. Keep our park clean and beautiful and a pleasant place to spend time. Parents - teach your children good habits, too. Give a thought to the little animals who share our world too. Be kind, and teach kindness. We must all share this earth and this park together - keep it clean!

Political smear

Thank you very much for your recent article regarding the attack on Lorén Bennett by Dick McKnight, chairman of the Democratic party's 13th district. The article clearly shows how low the Democrats will go in their efforts to defeat a candidate of the opposing party. A candidate whose record of public service to Canton township is virtually without blemish.

Six years ago when I ran for the office of township trustee I made several disparaging remarks about Bennett which I have personally retracted to him. Over the years I have witnessed a man whose demeanor and professional bearing have earned him the respect of his fellow township officials, personnel of the Clerk's office and citizens of Canton. I guess Mr. McKnight feels that if he throws enough darts, by way of innuendo and lies, that maybe one or two will stick. To Mr. McKnight I would merely say, "Grow up", the days of Boss Ford style politics are over.

To Mr. Bennett I would say, "Hang in there". I can't vote for you because I live outside your district, however, I can and will encourage my family and friends who live south of Ford Road to vote for you. Does anyone want to try to impeach my right to contribute to, or recommend a highly qualified candidate? To the voters of the 8th Senate district I would say, "Vote for the candidate who has your best interest at heart and not for a candidate bought and owned by special interest groups."

Vote Bennett to the state Senate in November.

Pay-to-play debate

This letter is in regard to your Aug. 11 article and editorial concerning "pay-to-play" in the Plymouth Canton Schools.

The honest, open discussion that occurred during debate of this issue presented the board, public and staff with excellent points on both sides of the issue.

While it appears that we disagree on the best long-term approach for this particular issue, it is very encouraging to see the professional way your paper treated disagreement, both in your editorial and the accuracy of the article on this subject. This type of professionalism allows disagreements to be constructive tools for improvement, rather than destructive personal attacks.

I commend your treatment of this issue and challenge all members of our community to continue to seek new opportunities to improve our district. While we may disagree on methods for these improvements, we must remember that we share the common goal of providing our students with the best education possible.

GUEST COLUMNIST

DOROTHY MATSU

While the word hardly rolls off the tongue, its definition might be considered wordless. Physiognomy: Facial expression and features, especially as an indication of character.

The advice not to judge a book by its cover seems wasted in a world where illiteracy looms like a dreadnought. Let us just say one cannot always judge a book by its cover.

The recent flood of political advertisements peppered our day-to-day people watching with some pretty classic images. Mr. Man on the Street, wind in his hair, too busy to stop for his own paid camera and crew while spouting cliches.

Ms. Woman in the office appealing as a parent, just like you? Sir Tough Crimefighter, who guarantees you he'll build more jails to hold the weasels who cheated you out of those wedding gowns. But it seems you can't beat the old chestnut of holding up your own beaming babies as if living proof that this particular face breeds well.

Oddly enough, this ad was run during a news week that repeatedly showed a pro-life activist hoisting another traumatized infant above his own fierce face while hawking, "This is what we're fighting for!" in the aftermath of another abortion assassination.

I heard him, but I saw the face of the child and thought of the movie "The Dead Zone," where the evil politician snatches a baby from the crowd to shield him from the bullets of his executioner.

On the news we were privy to real confrontations between these faces nearly too painful to watch. The bugging eyes, the sweaty lips, the blank stares. We have seen a sad lot of faces this year. We would like to think there is something behind the facades.

The Ice Princess had a common, open, decidedly criminal face that nothing short of plastic surgery could alter. The Ice Queen, suddenly robbed of her dignity, revealed not so much horror and pain as sheer ugly anger. Cameras treated us to both the expected sleaze of one, and the unexpected behind-the-scenes grimacing and eye-rolling of another toward her rivals.

Where people once admired and respected athletes for both inspiration and lust for life, we are now treated to faces of joyless stress and ambition.

The smiling all-American hero is now seen as a spiritless skull, the Easter Island mystery of the court media. Even veteran newscasters cannot help but reveal the anguish of their profession with weary, heart-breaking faces.

While marveling at the size of Ted Kennedy's enormous head last week, I found myself at a rare loss to describe such a visage. "Mardi Gras?" my husband suggested.

Perhaps we are all guilty of dooming that huge papier-mache head to survive. I often fear that I smirk more than smile. It is said that smiling and laughing release endorphins, the brain's own pleasure source. Not the plastered-on smile of doing business, or merely humoring those who would contend with you, but a smile pleased with that which lies behind it.

Bill Bonds deserving of compassion, support

Easy Does It.

It was painted across the front of the white Ford pickup moving steadily north along Orchard Lake Road in West Bloomfield one day last week.

People familiar with Alcoholics Anonymous recognize it as a catch phrase that denotes the owner of that truck as a recovering alcoholic.

My thoughts immediately switched to Bill Bonds.

Bonds, the opinionated TV anchor man and area resident, had taken the same Orchard Lake Road route, although far less steadily, in his Jaguar a few nights earlier. He was later arrested for his uneven, drunken driving on Commerce Road — near where his daughter had died in an alcohol-related crash 13 years before.

I wondered if Bonds had ever had the courage to paint "Easy Does It" on his car would he be in the situation he's in today.

Because treatment for alcoholism, a progressive disease, is just the beginning. For most successful recovering alcoholics, aftercare and regular participation in Alcoholics Anonymous is key.

"Someone who really works with AA realizes the support it takes to rebuild what the disease has destroyed," says Renee Gerger, a clinical social worker with an extensive background in helping chemical dependent people and their families.

Gerger, whose office serves as the help line for the Michigan State Bar Lawyers and Judges, says prominent, high-powered people with alcohol and drug problems may have an added burden in the following areas:

- Ego: 'They lack humility. You can go to treatment 50,000 times," she says, "but until you see that you are powerless over this disease" there is no real change in behavior.
- Enabling: As we've seen in the case of Bonds, police leniency through the years plus knowing that his job was secure, may have kept him from hitting bottom.

JUDITH DONER BERNE

■ Because treatment for alcoholism, a progressive disease, is just the beginning. For most successful recovering alcoholics, aftercare and regular participation in Alcoholics Anonymous is key.

"Obviously there are economics involved," Gerger says. "The people (those setting the ground rules) didn't really understand alcoholism. If the disease is not arrested it's going to get worse."

- Easy Does It: They go right from treatment back into the fray.

"Once you're out of treatment, you really must have the time to integrate the skills that you learn into your life," Gerger says.

But Bonds is not one to give up on. "I have seen people that are so sick that you would say, no chance," Gerger says. "And they have been able to go into recovery and maintain it."

I have never enjoyed watching Bonds on the air. He is supposed to be a presenter of news, yet he consistently crosses the line to inject opinion.

During past discussions of Bonds' style in the newsroom, editor Sandra Armbruster has always defended him.

Nearly 30 years ago he was her instructor of radio and TV news writing at the University of Detroit.

"He made just such an impact on my career," Armbruster says. "He was the one who taught me how to conduct a good interview and to phrase a good question. I owe him a lot for that."

"We all go through problems," Armbruster says. "He's not someone to be thrown away because he's an alcoholic."

Of this latest bout of alcoholic behavior, she says: "I'm disappointed, but I'm not going to write him off my list."

In fact, Bonds may have his best chance ever. He is reported to be at a clinic that specializes in treating high-powered people. This time, police acted, and it is unclear that Channel 7 will take him back. So, he may have the opportunity he needs to heal.

We sincerely wish you One Day At A Time, Bill.

Mud-slinging diverts focus from state's pressing needs

We associate western Michigan with fruit-growing, fishing and furniture production. Lately it has turned into the site of a mud-slinging festival that contaminates the air.

Even Republicans from the southeastern armpit of the state are to blame, it seems. The mud comes from the 1990 amendments to the federal Clean Air Act.

Here, quickly, is the background: A decade ago, the feds found three counties — Wayne, Oakland and Macomb — guilty of having dirty air. Major solution: annual automobile emissions tests (AETs) for $10 before we can buy our vehicle tabs.

Under the 1990 act, the feds found three western Michigan counties in non-compliance: Kent (Grand Rapids), Ottawa and Muskegon. I suspect their west-side pride is damaged more than their pocketbooks. Now they are in the same category as the money-sucking slums of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Gov. John Engler, up for re-election, has joined the fray, threatening "aggressive action" against the feds. Echoing the official Grand Rapids line, Engler said:

"Michigan is not to blame. West Michigan is being punished for air pollution that area companies and residents did not cause. West Michigan is responsible for only 4 percent of the problem. The lion's share of the problem travels to Michigan from other areas, like Milwaukee, Gary and Chicago."

Engler's campaign manager, Dan Pero, thickened the alluvium by declaring Democratic gubernatorial Howard Wolpe was to blame. As a congressman, Wolpe co-sponsored the Clean Air Act amendments. Pero called Wolpe "a liberal Washington Democrat who is out of touch with Michigan" and a "liberal environmental extremist."

Gary Corbin, Democratic state chair, shoved the mud back in the GOP's face. "Every Republican member of Congress from Michigan cast a vote identical to Wolpe's," said Corbin, pointing to former congressmen Bill Broomfield, R-Lake Orion, Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, and even west-siders like Fred Upton, Guy Vander-Jagt and the late Paul Henry.

TIM RICHARD

■ The mud comes from the 1990 amendments to the federal Clean Air Act.

Looking at a map and aerial photographs, the dispassionate observer must conclude the Grand Rapids gang and Engler have it wrong. Kent, Ottawa and Muskegon counties can't be blameless for their "non-attainment status" (dirty air).

Why don't Bridgman, St. Joseph and Benton Harbor have dirty air? They're directly in the path of the prevailing southwest winds emanating from the steel mills of Gary, Ind. Why aren't Van Buren, Allegan, Oceana and Mason counties on the dirt list? What about Manistee, Benzie and pristine Leelanau?

Face it: Grand Rapids, Muskegon and environs are in the big time. Engler will accomplish little except full employment for lawyers by fighting their dirty-air status. Moreover, the mud bath takes attention away from genuinely pressing issues: potholed roads, rising tuition rates, weed-grown parks, workplace safety, court funding. . .

Et cetera.

State bar panel suggests overhaul of court system

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Local voters may find themselves voting for "trial judge" by the 21st Century instead of circuit, probate, district and recorder's court judges.

That's the goal of a State Bar of Michigan committee co-chaired by attorneys Robert B. Webster, a former Oakland circuit judge from Birmingham, and Bruce W. Neckers of Grand Rapids.

And judges are likely to find themselves part of a unified, regional system where workloads can be balanced among counties.

"Our courts are simply not positioned for the challenges they will face in the new century," said Jon R. Muth, State Bar president. "If we are to assure the quality delivery of justice to Michigan's citizens, we must be ready with bold, fresh approaches."

Among the 14 members are Martin Doctoroff, Southfield resident and chief judge of the Court of Appeals, and Wendy L. Potts, Birmingham, chair of the State Bar's legislation committee.

4 courts now

Currently Michigan has four trial courts:

- Circuit — 56 circuits of one to four counties; 177 judges; handles major civil suits, trials of felony and serious misdemeanor cases, divorce and paternity cases; hears appeals from lower courts (such as drunk driving) and from some state administrative agencies.
- Probate — roughly one per county; 108 judges; handles juvenile delinquency, neglect, abuse, adoption, probating of wills, and estates and trusts of deceased persons.
- District — 101 districts, ranging in size from one community to several counties; 260 judges; handles small lawsuits, landlord-tenant cases, pre-trial examinations in felony cases, misdemeanor trials (up to one year in jail) and garnishments.
- Detroit Recorder's — handles felony trials within Wayne County. On a rotating basis, five Wayne circuit judges are assigned to hear felony cases in recorder's court. Because of racial tensions, Detroiters are uncomfortable with being tried before suburban judges.

The Webster-Neckers committee grew out of a 1990 state government report called "Michigan's Courts in the 21st Century." The State Bar's goal is to recommend implementing that broad plan.

Lawmakers primed

The Webster-Neckers panel is scheduled to finish by the end of 1994 and place its recommendations before the House and Senate Judiciary committees in 1995.

There could be rival plans. For example, many judges and lawyers advocate a "domestic relations" court to handle divorce, child support, paternity and juvenile matters — in effect taking parts of the bailiwicks of circuit and probate courts.

Lawmakers, however, are primed and ready to make changes.

Every session, they are bombarded with requests for more judges because of heavy caseloads but rarely are asked to eliminate judges in low-work districts such as Pontiac.

Moreover, the Grand Rapids area is generating strong pressure to end the funding plan under which Detroit and Wayne County courts are entirely state-funded but the outstate courts are in part locally-funded.

Judges swapped

Already there is a swapping of judges between courts. District judges serve by assignment on the circuit bench. Circuit judges regularly are assigned to Court of Appeals panels. Retired judges often do short stints on the bench to reduce backlogs or allow for vacations.

The 1990 state recommendations were to:

"1. Create a unified court system that would merge two or all the existing trial courts (circuit, district and probate) so as to create a single trial court in each judicial circuit.

"2. Adopt a system of regional venue, balancing the inconsistencies in workloads that exist among counties and providing greater managerial flexibility.

"3. Appoint a chief judge in each judicial circuit with authority to administer the operations of each unified circuit . . .

"4. Provide the new system with adequate management resources, including compatible, state-of-the-art computer systems . . ."

Ex-Rocks meet on field

Another former Plymouth Salem gridder will be on the opposing team Saturday when Chip Wadowski's Southern Michigan Timberwolves play host to the Toledo Thunder.

Bill LaVeck, a 1988 graduate of Salem, plays center for the Thunder of the Mid-Continental Football League. Kickoff is 7:30 p.m. at Navarre Field in Monroe.

The 6-foot-3 LaVeck was a 208-pound offensive tackle for Salem as a high school senior in the fall of 1987 and now plays at 255.

A student at Eastern Michigan University and employee of Federal Express, LaVeck played last season for the Michigan Renegades.

"Like Chip, I just play for the love of the game," said LaVeck, referring the fact MCFL players are not paid.

Fall racquetball league

Canton Parks and Recreation is making plans for its men's fall racquetball league, beginning Sept. 14 at Rose Shores of Canton. The fee is $104 per person (includes court time, awards and T-shirt).

Players are divided into divisions based on ability levels. Play takes place every Wednesday for 15 week. There is no residency requirement. Players can register starting Aug. 22. Call 397-5110 for details.

'94 preparation begins

Summer league good experience for area players

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer

Scott Niemiec and Gary Pierce have had better numbers but not a better experience.

The pair of former Observerland baseball standouts just returned from playing in the 10-team Wooden Bat League in Cape Cod, Mass., where they played against some of the top collegiate talent in the nation.

Despite modest results, Niemiec, who will be a senior at the University of Michigan, and Pierce, who starts school next week at the University of South Carolina-Aiken, say they'll be better off in the long run.

Scott Kapla, another former Observerland star who plays at Eastern Michigan University, also played in the league. Kapla, who graduated from Redford Catholic Central and lives in Plymouth, was in Johnstown, Pa., playing in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national tournament with a team that drafted him and was unavailable.

Niemiec, a 1991 Plymouth Salem graduate, played catcher for a team called the Cotuit Ketteleers. The Ketteleers failed to make the playoffs and Niemiec had eight hits in 79 at-bats (for a .101 average), 11 RBI and seven runs scored.

He struck out 16 times and was walked 10 times.

Niemiec, who was platooned with another catcher, caught for Jason Bell, who had a 16-2 record for Oklahoma State last year, and Louisiana State standout Brett Laxton.

Niemiec was coming off a big year at U-M, where he led the Wolverines in hitting with a .331 average and had a .970 fielding percentage.

"I was hitting at people a lot, either grounders or line drives and not finding holes," he said. "I guess I used all my luck up at school. I wasn't about to change everything that got me there. I was real enthused how I caught and threw, how I handled myself behind the plate."

Niemiec said he stayed with the Murphys, a family with two children, including a rabid baseball fan, 3-year-old Allison.

This was Niemiec's second year with the Murphys. He spent half of last season in Cape Cod.

"Allison was 2 last summer and was into baseball then and she was even more into it this year, going to the ballpark every game," said Niemiec, who made money as a landscaper each morning. "Cape Cod is beautiful and the baseball is a plus."

Mustangs place 4th in nationals

SOFTBALL

The Mid-America Mustangs returned from a successful road trip and their highest finish ever in a national softball tournament.

The 16-and-under girls slow-pitch team finished fourth out of 45 teams in the ASA tournament Aug. 11-14 in Jacksonville, Fla. That followed a tie for ninth place in the USSSA world tournament Aug. 4-7 in Lexington, S.C.

The Mustangs started the ASA event with a 10-6 loss to the Blazers from North Little Rock, Ark. But they rebounded by winning five consecutive games — all the next day.

"The first game started at 9 a.m., and we left the field at 11:30 that night," Mid-America spokesman Ray Knickerbocker said. "We've played five (in one day) before but never won all five."

The Mustangs defeated the Litchfield (Ky.) All-Stars 15-4, the Oklahoma Misfits 10-2, the North Meridian (Miss.) Optimists 4-3 in nine innings, the Orlando (Fla.) Magic 12-8 and the Weekend Warriors of York, Pa., 11-8.

If there was one crucial hit during the five-game run, it was a bases-loaded single by Belleville's Julie Jones that gave Mid-America its win over the Optimists.

With six teams surviving to Sunday, the Mustangs defeated the third-place Jasper (Ala.) Tomboys 5-3 before losing to the eventual runner-up Douglas (Ga.) Bobcats 6-1.

Mid-America finished ahead of another Douglasville team, the Georgia Girls, who had previously won national NSA and USSSA tournaments.

"We made it to the Final Four; that was our goal, and we did it the hard way," Knickerbocker said.

"That was a big feather in our cap. We hadn't played ASA all season. We were coming in as an unknown and established a good reputation for ourselves down there."

In the USSSA tournament at Lexington, the Mustangs won their first three games but lost their next two and were eliminated the second day.

Mid-America edged the Fayette County Misfits from Fayetteville, Ga., in their only game Aug. 4, 5-3 in 12 innings.

The Mustangs whipped the Tennessee state champion, Mid-Tennessee Radiology from McMinnville (Tenn.), 13-4 and avenged a loss in an earlier tournament to the Louisville (Ky.) Hit-N-Misses with an 11-1 victory.

Then came back-to-back defeats later that day, Aug. 5. The Mustangs lost a 4-0 lead and the game 5-4 to the Neel Chargers from Danville, Ala., and were eliminated 9-6 by Whalen Farms from Brownsburg, Ind.

The Mustangs had a number of outstanding performers during the two tournaments, according to Knickerbocker.

Jones and Lauren Wright (Redford) excelled in the field as well as at the plate. Heidi Wahl (Southfield) hit better than .700 in each tournament, Knickerbocker said.

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

The wait is over. The time has come. The Bassmasters have arrived.

One hundred of the top-ranked professional bass anglers from across the country and 100 amateurs including eight from the O&E area will battle it out on Lake St. Clair next week in the four-day, pro-am Bassmaster Top 100.

"They're bringing in the top 100 pros from all over the country," said Livonian Duane Ray, a two-time pro-am competitor. "This is like a pro-am (golf tournament) at the TPC and being able to golf with (Lee) Trevino or (Jack) Nicklaus. This is as big as it gets for bass anglers."

Such notable pros as Roland Martin (17-time Bassmaster tournament winner), Rick Clunn (four-time world champion), Jimmy Houston (two-time B.A.S.S.-Angler of the Year), Larry Nixon (leading money winner and four-time MegaBucks champion) and David Fitts (1993 Masters Classic world champion and reigning B.A.S.S. Angler of the Year) will all be competing in the tournament, which runs Wednesday, Aug. 24, through Saturday, Aug. 27.

Joining the pros will be local amateurs Greg Babiarz of Farmington Hills, Livonians Duane Ray, John "Randy" Sparkman and Rick Swain, Darrin Beattie of Auburn Hills, Kyle Greene of Bloomfield Hills, Rick Van Tiem of West Bloomfield and Art Wargo of Rochester.

The 100 amateurs were selected through a random draw from national and international entries. Amateurs will compete only against other amateurs and will fish with a different pro each day.

"This is the thrill of a lifetime," said Babiarz, a two-time qualifier for the Michigan Bass Federation state fish-off. "They're coming to fish my lake, and I'm looking forward to learning something. They'll learn in two days what it took me two years to learn. I'm elated."

Swain had similar feelings.

"This is the biggest thing that has happened to me in a long, long time," he said. "I've never had much luck gambling or with the lottery so when I got picked for this I just couldn't believe it. What I learn from these guys will be invaluable to me."

Monday and Tuesday will be practice days. The tournament runs Wednesday through Saturday. Daily 3 p.m. weigh-ins are open to the public and will take place at the picnic site at the North Marina at Metro Beach Metropark in Mount Clemens.

Sparkman, winner of the TNT Top Dog Tournament on Belleville Lake earlier this year, said he "welcomes the challenge of being paired with someone of that caliber" and feels the pros will like what they find on Lake St. Clair.

"I think they'll be back," Sparkman said. "The smallmouth quality on St. Clair is phenomenal. Even a novice can go out there and catch smallmouth. I'm really excited."

The pros will be available for autographs and a short picture-taking session after they weigh in their fish each day.

"If people want to see some big bass they'll see some real nice ones at the weigh-ins," added Babiarz. "Those southern boys just love to come up here and fish for smallmouths and Lake St. Clair is probably the third best body of water for smallmouth bass fishing in the world. Lake Erie is probably number one and Lake Ontario is number two. The Great Lakes are totally unfished for bass, and I think the pros are going to like it."

Anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009. Fax information to 644-1314 or call Bill Parker Monday evenings at (810) 901-2575.

Tourney puts state waters on display

BY BILL PARKER
STAFF WRITER

Art Ferguson is excited about the Michigan Bassmaster Top 100 coming to Lake St. Clair next week.

Even though he won't be competing in the four-day pro-am event, the Rochester Hills native and Livonia resident is excited about the prospect of 100 of the top professionals from across the nation coming to fish his home lake.

The tournament runs Wednesday through Saturday with daily weigh-ins at 3 p.m. Spectators can catch the weigh-ins at the picnic area of the North Marina at Metro Beach Metropark in Mount Clemens.

There will be 100 boats in the tournament with a pro and an amateur in each boat. Eight of those amateurs hail from the Observer & Eccentric coverage area.

"This is a huge tournament, and I think it's going to open a lot of eyes as to what Michigan has to offer," Ferguson said. "The largemouth fishing is good out there, but the smallmouth fishing is just phenomenal. I think everyone will have an opportunity to do very well."

Ferguson should know. The local pro always does well when he hits the waters of Lake St. Clair. In the last three years, Ferguson has won four tournaments on Lake St. Clair, placed second three times and placed third twice. On top of that, he runs a guide service on the 490-square-mile lake during the summer.

"There are a lot of shallow, weedy, sandy areas with plenty of forage. I'd have to say Lake St. Clair probably has the second or third best smallmouth fishery in the nation. About 60 percent of the lake is current influenced, which is what smallmouth like."

The bass are there

Ferguson took me out on Lake St. Clair recently to give me a glimpse of what the pros will be up against.

We didn't expect to do real well since we went out the day after a cold front moved through and the morning began without a cloud in the sky. Despite these unfavorable fishing conditions, we managed to catch 10 bass (as well as two pike and one shad) in a half day of fishing. The biggest was a 5-pound, 5-ounce smallmouth, and our biggest five weighed better than 16 pounds.

We concentrated our efforts on "secondary spots" (he wouldn't show me his favorite holes) and fished mostly over weedlines in five to eight feet of water. We caught most of the bass on pearl Gitzits and chartreuse Rattle-Traps.

The Michigan Bassmaster Top 100 is the first of 15 qualifying events on the $4 million professional Bassmaster Tournament Trail that leads to the prestigious world championship B.A.S.S. Masters Classic.

More than $270,000 will be up for grabs next week, including $24,000 cash and a $21,000 fully rigged Ranger Bass Boat for the top professional and a $19,000 fully rigged Rahger Bass Boat for the amateur champ.

The 100 amateurs were selected through a random draw from national and international entries.

Ferguson decided not to enter the amateur draw and instead worked to help Roland Martin — one of the nation's most popular bass anglers and a 17-time Bassmaster Tournament winner — prepare for the Michigan tournament. Martin is also the host of The Roland Martin Fishing Show, which airs locally on the TNN cable station.

A friend and mentor

Ferguson became friends with Martin while guiding out of Martin's Marina on Florida's Lake Okeechobee over the last few winters.

"I consider Roland a great friend and a mentor," Ferguson said. "Roland hasn't fished tournaments for two years, so I was kind of helping him get caught up on what's happening, especially with smallmouth. I showed him around for a week during pre-practice and we did a show on Lake St. Clair, which will air after the first of the year.

"When you get to meet a celebrity like Roland Martin, at first you're kind of in awe," Ferguson said. "Now I look at him as a friend, but sometimes I look at him and think 'Wow! That's my childhood idle sitting there.'"

Although Ferguson won't be fishing when the tournament begins next Wednesday, he'll hardly be sitting still.

"I'll be pretty busy. (Livonia resident) Ed Dietrich and I will be running the camera boat for the Bassmaster TV crew," he said. "Jan's Sport Shop in Goodrich, my local sponsor, will have the exclusive boat display at the weigh-in site and I'll be helping out there, too."

Cycler returns for state race

BY MARTY BUDNER
STAFF WRITER

■ BIKING

Tom Schuler will be making his annual hometown return when the Tour de Michigan begins this weekend. But this year the bike race is not his only reason to come home.

Schuler, a former world-class cycler who now manages the up-and-coming Saturn Racing Team, is anxiously awaiting his 20-year class reunion — Birmingham Seaholm class of '74 — scheduled for Aug. 20 at the Somerset in Troy.

The class reunion occurs right in the midst of the annual Tour de Michigan bicycle race series that begins Friday, Aug. 19, in Muskegon. The timing couldn't have been better.

"The reunion should be a lot of fun," said Schuler from his home base in Wisconsin. "In fact, I'll probably miss one stage of the (Tour de Michigan) because the reunion is on one of the race nights.

"I remember (while at Seaholm) we had one of the first cycling leagues in the area," he said. "We're having a reunion group going out for a ride and that will be fun. I'm really looking forward to it."

But the reunion won't be his primary order of business.

Schuler is busy these days as a first-year manager of the Saturn Racing Team. He is basically the team's program director, responsible for getting sponsors, managing the team and securing team members.

There are 14 Saturn team racers, six of which will be competing in the Tour de Michigan. Those riders include Tim Swift, a former Redford resident, Nate Reiss, Steve MacGregor, Robbie Ventura, Scott Fortner and Jonas Carney.

The Saturn squad is taking this year's race very seriously. Team Coors has dominated the annual race, having won the past three years. Saturn plans to end that domination this year.

"This is the most successful season ever for a Saturn team," said Schuler, whose parents still live in Birmingham. "The race is sponsored (in part) by Saturn and we want to make it a good experience for the Saturn retailers.

"We go out and try to win every race we enter, and we are going to do the same in this race. We'll develop a strategy to get one of our riders in position to win that car (a Saturn to the overall tour winner).

"I think we have to be one of the favorites coming in," he said. "We have a well-balanced team with a lot of enthusiastic athletes. They're young, energetic and they like the competition."

The eighth annual Blue Care Network Tour de Michigan is an eight-stage criterium race with a $50,000 purse.

The overall Pro/Elite Division champion is determined by points gained at each of the eight individual tour stops. Each stage winner gets 20 points, second place gets 19 points, and so on. Points are added up and the overall leader at the end of eight stages not only wins a cash prize, but is awarded with a new Saturn automobile.

"Every year this (Tour de Michigan) is getting bigger and bigger," said race organizer Mark Elliot. "Our major sponsors are all gung-ho and the racers love it."

The Tour de Michigan begins Aug. 19 in Muskegon, then travels to Waterford (Aug. 20), Rochester (Aug. 21), Lansing (Aug. 23), Monroe (Aug. 24), Midland (Aug. 26), Flint (Aug. 27) and Birmingham (Aug. 28).

At each stage, there are a number of amatuer races to accompany the Pro/Elite Division.

In Rochester and Birmingham, for instance, there are beginners, women's and masters races. A new feature this year is a Kids Mini-Tour and Bicycle Safety Rodeo for kids up to 14 years at each stop.

At the final stage in Birmingham, there will be a special Pro/Elite Invitational Miss & Out race. It promises to be an exciting climax to the week of racing.

S'craft names soccer coach

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

■ COLLEGES

Nikki Johnson, a 1990 Livonia Churchill graduate, is the new women's soccer coach at Schoolcraft College.

Johnson, 22, looks forward to the challenge of taking over for her former coach. O'Shea led the Ocelots to the 1987 National Junior College Athletic Association national championship.

Johnson doesn't have any head coaching experience but has learned a lot coaching with O'Shea in the summer at camps.

"They're going to be hard steps to follow but I'm ready for it," said Johnson, who found out about the appointment on Tuesday and was planning to hold her first practice 24 hours later.

"As soon as Nick told me he was resigning, I said 'Let (athletic director) Ed (Kavanaugh) know, let everyone know I'm interested.' After talking to the girls today they were excited and that boosted me even more. We have a great roster and I think we can do well if everyone's heart is in it," Johnson said.

Johnson, an honorable mention All-Observer choice as a senior in 1990 at Churchill, was the first Siena Heights player ever to play in the Umbro Senior Bowl all-star game last spring.

She has taken pride in being a leader on every team she's played for.

"Generally, when I was on a team, I was a captain so that shows my leadership," she said.

This is the first time one of his players has replaced him.

"I just got a call a couple weeks ago from a guy doing an article about (OU men's soccer coach) Gary Parsons having so many former players turning into coaches," said O'Shea, who played for Parsons at OU. "I said I think it's because Gary made soccer fun, and because we had a good time, we wanted to coach. I try to make it fun for my players and the more I see go on to coach themselves, makes me feel good.

"Nikki always played center-midfield for me and was the quarterback of the team. She always thought about the game and had a good overall grasp of the play."

Area stars compete nationally

Six present or former Observerland high school swim stars are competing this week in the Phillip's 66 National Swim Championships in Indianapolis.

Sheila Taormina, who swam for Livonia Stevenson and the University of Georgia, was 12th in the women's 200-meter freestyle (2:03.73) and 22nd in the 100 freestyle (57.75).

Taormina, representing the Athens Bulldogs swim club, also will swim Friday in the 100 butterfly in which she has a 56.70 qualifying time.

Ron Orris (Plymouth Salem/ Michigan State) placed 27th in the men's 100 butterfly (55.78) and 49th in the 200 freestyle (1:54.84). Matt Martin (Westland John Glenn/Stanford) finished 2th in the 200 backstroke (2:06.46).

Martin is entered in the 100 backstroke today with a 50.20 qualifying time, and three others were still to enter the competitive waters.

Mandi Falk (Stevenson) was ranked 38th in the 100 breast stroke (1:14.24) and Scott DeWolf (Stevenson/Texas A&M) 30th in the 200 butterfly (1:47.62).

Orris was swimming for the Texas Aquatics, Martin the Birmingham-Bloomfield Atlantis, Falk the Oakland Live Yers, DeWolf the Aggies Swim Club and Aristeo the Livonia-Novi Spartan Aquatics.

The top swimmers at the meet hosted by Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis will compete for the United States in the world championships.

Baseball

Pierce, a 1991 Westland John Glenn graduate who starred the last two years at Henry Ford Community College, batted less than .200 in a month with the Chatham A's.

Pierce played second base, shortstop and third base.

He started the summer playing in a less-prestigious wooden bat league in New York before getting the call to head to Cape Cod.

"The Cape was the best baseball experience of my life," said Pierce, reached at his new residence in South Carolina. "Being a junior college player, I hadn't seen that caliber of pitching, but I wasn't overpowered. It's a pitcher's league out there. There's a few flame throwers, but most throw in the upper 80s and can put the ball where they want it."

Leaving New York was like getting promoted from the minor leagues to the majors. Pierce did not have a job while in New York and lived in less than favorable conditions in a "run-down" apartment.

Dave Martin, an assistant coach at Bowling Green and formerly at Henry Ford, coaches in the Cape and was responsible for getting Pierce there. During his month at the Cape, Pierce stayed with a family in a house and worked mornings at baseball camps before heading to the ballpark.

"I wanted to get out of there (New York)," Pierce said. "They told me they'd get me a job and they didn't. I had to get money from my mom and dad and that set them back."

Weather dampens boxing fundraiser

The Livonia Boxing Club expects to raise close to $1,000 from the Boxathon held last weekend, according to director Paul Soucy.

Despite the fundraiser, the LBC still owes $5,000 in rent for use of space in the building on Middlebelt and Plymouth roads in Livonia, and faces possible eviction, Soucy said.

The Boxathon was scheduled to start at 10 a.m. Saturday but because of rain, was delayed until 2 p.m. Soucy was hoping to raise more money.

"We were KO'd by the weather," said Soucy, who also has a regular bingo night to raise funds. "We'll probably end up making $800 or $900 but we had some good fights and had some people come in Saturday and sit in the bleachers all day."

Soucy said the LBC owed as much as $13,000 in rent last January so "we've caught up some."

World heavyweight champion Michael Moorer was scheduled to make an appearance but didn't show because of the weather, according to Soucy.

Soucy stepped into the ring and showed his boxers how it's done, sparring 37 rounds against younger opponents.

"I kicked some butt," he said.

Probably because he was upset about the weather.

Seniors carry workload for Hawks

BY DAN O'MEARA

BASKETBALL

Coach Pete Mantyla has what he considers an extraordinary group of senior players, and his hope is they will make 1994 a special year for Farmington Hills Harrison girls basketball.

The Hawks would like to build upon consecutive winning seasons, and Krista Snow, Kelly and Erin LaCosse, Jenny Myslinski and Kathy Schneider could take them to the next level.

"The five seniors have been part of the whole turnaround in the athletic program here at Harrison," Mantyla said. "We've had others who were big factors, but this group gave us the numbers to do that.

"They're also the first group of kids to come in when I did. I was starting as a varsity coach when they were coming into high school, and we've grown up together in that regard."

Harrison returns six players in all, including junior post player Erika Greene, from a team that finished 13-8 and was third in the Western Lakes Activities Association regular season.

Snow and the LaCosse twins are the captains and most experienced players. Snow is a four-year starter and all-division player twice, and the LaCosses have started since they were sophomores.

"The big focus is on them in terms of the commitment they made to the program and becoming better basketball players," Mantyla said. "All three are getting interest from colleges and are capable of playing after high school."

The 5-foot-9 Snow is the top returning scorer (nine points) and rebounder (seven) and can play any position. She also excels in volleyball and track and will likely end her prep career with 12 letters.

"At times she'll be a low post player and other times a perimeter post," Mantyla said, adding Snow missed just one game in three years (sprained ankle). "I've been able to count on Krista game after game for points, rebounds, hustle and effort."

Kelly LaCosse (5-8), who averaged five points and three assists, will start again at point guard, but the development of sophomore Monique Anderson gives the Hawks more flexibility and will enable LaCosse to play the No. 2 guard more often.

"This year I'd like to take full advantags of her skills," Mantyla said, adding LaCosse is a good outside shooter. "She runs the floor well and opens us up in transition, and she attacks the basket as well or better than anybody we have."

Erin LaCosse (5-8) provides a lot of offense from her wing position where she scored 8½ points and had four rebounds per game. She was the leading three-point shooter with 16 field goals, two more than Snow.

"But she's not just a perimeter scorer," Mantyla said. "She can take the ball to the basket, and she has real good post skills for a guard."

Myslinski (5-8) begins her third season on the varsity and first as a full starter, having averaged three points, four rebounds and two steals. She can play the perimeter but will focus on the post, and her forte is defense.

"She's strong enough to defend bigger players and quick enough to defend smaller players," Mantyla said. "She creates a lot of energy with her style of play and the team feeds off that."

Greene (5-11) is the fifth starter and follows in the footsteps of two all-area post players — Heather Hopkins (1992) and Carey Perkins (1993), who now play at Lake Superior State and Niagara, respectively.

"It's been a great opportunity for her the past two seasons to play against two college post players," Mantyla said. "The time has come for her to establish her own identity as a post player.

"What we need from her is to run the floor hard, defend the big tough girls on the other team, rebound and be a finisher inside. For this year, I want her to be the best she can be. I'd rather have the seniors carrying the load, and I think they will."

Schneider (5-8) was twice the most valuable player on the JV team, and the Hawks have added three juniors: 5-10 Ami Patel, 5-9 Sarah Rauch and 5-2 Cicely Dowdell.

The Hawks, who start Sept. 1, at Waterford Kettering, were 8-3 in the league but lost their first playoff game and finished seventh overall. They hope for a better ending this time.

"We're shooting to make this our best season together," Mantyla said. "One of our goals is to win the division and make a run at winning the league. There are probably six teams that have a shot to win it, and we consider ourselves to be one of them."

630,000 households already are.

Ozone high in the stratosphere protects us from dangerous sunlight. But, ozone near the ground, where we breath, is a pollutant which causes health problems for the young, the elderly and those with pre-existing respiratory ailments. Ozone is formed when the hot sun "bakes" unburned hydrocarbons from tailpipe emissions, fuel evaporation and smokestacks.

We are doing better.

For more than 15 years, businesses and individuals have spent millions of dollars to reduce the hydrocarbon emissions which produce ozone. As a result, Southeast Michigan has met federal ozone standards for three years. But, if the region violates those standards this summer, automobile emissions testing will become more expensive and businesses will be required to spend an additional $55 million annually on emission controls - a cost that would be passed along to consumers.

The Clean Air Coalition of Southeast Michigan is a business, industry and government partnership to improve and maintain the region's air quality. The Coalition identifies as Ozone Action! days those hot summer days when higher ozone levels are likely. On those days, business and the public are asked to take no-cost and low-cost voluntary actions to reduce emissions.

It's working!

An estimated 630,000 households are participating in Ozone Action! days. Ozone levels have remained within federal standards on seven action days this summer. On two of those days the ozone levels remained barely below the standard. The voluntary efforts of more than a million people in those households undoubtedly helped prevent exceeding the standard.

Clip the List: Join the Action.

Join the Ozone Action! now. Clip the Ozone Action! Tips section and put it on your refrigerator or bulletin board. Take one or more of those no-cost and low-cost actions each time an Ozone Action! day happens. (In fact, many of those tips are a good idea all the time.)

OZONE ACTION! LET'S CLEAR THE AIR

Ozone Action! Tips

You can make a difference in reducing ozone by taking no-cost and low-cost voluntary steps on Ozone Action! days. Many business have taken these actions already.

REFUELING CARS, BOATS, LAWN EQUIPMENT, MOTORCYCLES:
1. Don't refuel on Ozone Action! days; if refueling is necessary, wait until cooler evening hours, after 6 p.m.
2. Use low vapor pressure fuel (available this summer at Marathon and Speedway stations).
3. Keep vehicles/boats/lawn equipment well maintained.
4. Make certain your gas cap is tightly sealed.
5. Turn off engines, rather than idling them.
6. Avoid "topping off" gas tanks.

HOUSEHOLD TIPS:
1. Encourage walking or bicycling. Minimize recreational vehicle use.
2. Don't mow lawns on Ozone Action! days, or wait until after 6 p.m.
3. Avoid use of charcoal lighter fluid and other solvent-based paints and cleaners.

TRAVEL TIPS:
1. If possible, work at home.
2. Use public transportation. For route information, call SMART at (313) 962-5515.
3. Or, carpool - Special Ozone Action! Ride-sharing information is available by calling (313) 963-RIDE for short-term arrangements.
4. Combine business, errand or recreational trips.
5. Drive smoothly - avoid "jack rabbit" starts/stops.

For daily Ozone Action! updates and tips, call 1-800-66-33-AIR.

Gary Puckett to play at Marshbank Park

If you missed Woodstock, here's another chance to hear a voice from the past. Gary Puckett, known for such hits as "Young Girl," "Woman, Woman," and "This Girl Is A Woman Now," will present a free concert 7 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 21, at Marshbank Park, Hiller Road, north of Commerce Road in West Bloomfield Township.

Sixties music fans will remember Puckett who together with The Union Gap had six consecutive gold records in 1968. The group disbanded in 1971, and Puckett now tours and writes songs with his brother David.

Bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on. For information, call (810) 334-5660.

■ Merchant of Vino is planning an Aussie Barbie Bash, 5:30-8:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 29 at the Kingsley Inn, 1475 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills. Tickets are $35 per person. Call (810) 642-0100 for reservations. A portion of event proceeds will benefit public radio.

The not-to-be-missed event will feature the 18 piece Big Band sounds of The Brookside Jazz Ensemble and a delicious dinner prepared by Chef Dennis Lindinger. Of course there will be outstanding Australian wines, and a big table of Australian beers to try.

Lindinger's walkabout menu includes "Outback Grill" sweet potato pancake, apple/kiwi salad, lamb, skewered shrimp and scallops, and other delightful dishes and desserts.

■ Bring your canned goods to the Michigan Renaissance Festival in Holly Saturday, Aug. 20 to receive a $2 discount on adult tickets, and $1 for children age five and over. Oldies 104.3 WOMC is sponsoring a mass wedding for 104 lads and lasses in turn of the century surroundings during the Michigan Renaissance Festival Romance Weekend. Everyone going to the festival on Aug. 20 is a guest and invited to bring "wedding gifts" of canned food donations to help feed the hungry. The food will be donated to the Gleaners Food Bank.

Paul K, David Olney to play at La Casa

Paul K of the Weathermen used to live in Farmington. He'll be in town this week to perform with David Olney at the La Casa Music Series in Birmingham. The two played together last at La Casa in 1993.

BY MARK E. GALLO
SPECIAL WRITER

When Paul K plays La Casa 8:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 19, it will be both as an internationally recognized rocker, and as the proverbial local boy makes good. The concert will be at the Birmingham Unitarian Church, 651 N. Woodward at Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Township. Tickets are $10 in advance or $12 at the door. Call (810) 646-4950. Tickets are also available at It's The Ritz, 193 W. Maple, Birmingham.

"I used to live in Farmington, and I used to deliver the Farmington Observer" said K during a phone interview from his home in Lexington, Ky.

The Catholic Central grad's folks still live in the house they raised him in, but K was out of town before his hat hit the ground at commencement.

"I came here to go to college on a debate scholarship," he said. The University of Kentucky proved to be a short-lived diversion. In short order, following a succession of names and personnel shifts, the Weathermen were born, and music became all that mattered. The Weathermen played Lollapalooza last year. Paul K won't expect you to be impressed. He'll be happy if you've heard of the band at all.

"We're a cult band," he says simply. "There's a certain number of fans who are always going to be at the shows." There's no rancor in his tone. Dealing with reality, you imagine, is one of his strong suits.

"People don't go out much anymore," he said. "They stay home and channel surf, which is cool. That's why specialized things stay alive. Some of the people who come to this show may not see anything else this year. They probably won't go into the city, to St. Andrew's Hall."

A solid guitarist, both electric and acoustically, K's vocals remind me of John Wesley Harding's, with a different accent, of course. There are times during a couple of songs on the new Paul K and the Weathermen Silenz disc, "Garden of Forking Paths," when he may remind you of Lou Reed, or even the New York Dolls ("The Tower").

Another powerful influence in the world of Paul K is David Olney. As will be the case this go-round, when K last played an acoustic show in Detroit, it was with Olney at La Casa. He's looking forward to it.

It was in January 1993. I met (La Casa founder and everything man Dave) Brogen through Olney. That one show we did was great!"

Having done a superb job of covering Olney's "Jerusalem Tomorrow" (also on the new disc), a song that Emmy Lou Harris just released, K gets enthusiastic about the subject.

"I just heard that Linda Ronstadt is doing one of his songs ('Women Across The River'), which is great!"

K comes by his appreciation for Olney, and other of his contemporaries honestly. He's just come back from a European tour with some of the cream of that crop. With Olney, he shared an amazing bill with Guy Clark, Eric Andersen, Alex Chilton and Townes Van Zandt.

"The Who made me want to be a musician," said K. "I listened to the Who, Bob Dylan, Hendrix, stuff like that. There's nothing special about my background. When my friends started listening to Foreigner, Boston, Kansas — I was listening to Led Zeppelin and the Beatles, but around 1975 I just veered off. I started listening to the New York Dolls and the Sex Pistols, when they came up."

DSO set for Hollywood

Local music lovers will have an opportunity to preview the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's Hollywood Bowl performances at the "Hollywood Bowl Preview Festival" at Orchestra Hall in Detroit.

With Hollywood as a theme, these casual concerts will be offered at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 18, 8:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 19 and 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 20.

Tickets to the local preview performances, are available by calling (313)833-3700 or Ticketmaster (810) 645-6666. They range in price from $7 to $35.

During the Festival, Orchestra Hall and Orchestra Park Place, the adjacent city park, will provide a lively "set" for the DSO's "Walk of Fame" with Hollywood look-alikes, music, entertainment and food.

The Festival welcomes back music director Neeme Jarvi from several European summer tours. Jarvi will conduct the DSO and musical guests in three separate concert programs.

Guest soloist Hakan Hardenberger, a Swedish trumpet virtuoso, joins the DSO on Thursday evening to perform the Haydn Trumpet Concerto. This concert also features work by Rimsky-Korsakov, Waldteufel and Dvorak.

Friday night's concert will feature an all-Russian program with the music of Tchaikovsky, Rachmaninoff and Shostakovich. Estonian-born Jarvi will lead the DSO together with pianist Peter Donohoe and mezzo-soprano Irina Lekhtman, from the former Soviet Union. Lekhtman will perform the Suite from the Snow Maiden by Tchaikovsky.

A highlight of the final Festival concert is a performance of Carmina Burana, the masterpiece by German composer Carl Orff.

For this huge symphony with chorus that lasts 62 minutes, Jarvi and the DSO are joined by the Choral Union of the University Musical Society, soprano Lisa Saffer, tenor Craig Estep and baritone Kevin McMillan.

Preview performance: Neeme Jarvi and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will preview an engagement at the Hollywood Bowl with the "Hollywood Bowl Preview Festival" at Orchestra Hall Aug. 18-20.

Hero fights crime

City crime is at its worst. The police are on strike. The mob is holding the mayor hostage. Only one man has the courage to take a stand.

He's got no superpowers, no money and no name. He's Blank man (Damon Wayans), a self-appointed neighborhood crime stopper who's so broke he fights crime in his underwear.

Columbia Pictures presents the superhero adventure comedy, "Blankman," opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters. The film also stars David Alan Grier, Robin Givens, Jon Polito and Jason Alexander.

Eccentric inventor Darryl Walker (Wayans) is the one man who thinks he can make a difference. Making the most of his bargain basement budget, he can turn an orthopedic shoe into a lethal boomerang and his grandmother's housecoat into a cape. Armed with an arsenal of homemade crime-fighting gizmos, the mild-mannered Darryl transforms himself into ever vigilant Blankman.

Joining Blankman in his war on crime is his older brother and reluctant sidekick, Kevin, played by David Alan Grier — reuniting the comedy team made famous on television's "In Living Color."

Since no superhero would be complete without his own Lois Lane, Robin Givens is Kimberly Jonz, the ace television reporter who breaks the story of Blankman's escapades and catapults him to fame.

Jason Alexander is Mr. Stone, the sleazy newsman who tries to get the scoop on Blankman. Mayor Harris, played by Christopher Lawford, finds his campaign goals thwarted by the mob's gridlock of graft and corruption. Lynne Thigpen portrays the doting grandmother who inspires her boys, Darryl and Kevin, to be heroes.

Also opening this week:

■ "The Color of Night" — An erotic thriller about a psychiatrist who becomes romantically entangled with one patient and caught in a deadly mind game with another. Stars Bruce Willis and Jane March. Rated R.

■ "Wagons East!" — Fed up with a West that's dangerous, dirty and dull, a group of settlers do the unthinkable: they form a wagon train and head back east.

NICOLA GOODE

Crime stopper: Eccentric inventor Darryl Walker (Damon Wayans) transforms himself into the bargain-basement neighborhood crime stopper known as Blankman, and despite, himself, wins the heart of ace television reporter Kimberly Jonz (Robin Givens), in "Blankman," a superhero adventure comedy from Columbia Pictures.

Carmen adopts family

Christine Jackson of Plymouth is the grand prize winner of our "Andre" contest. She won four tickets to a screening of the movie, a 4-inch, plush replica of Andre the Seal, and a movie poster.

Nine other lucky readers won four tickets each to a preview screening of "Andre," the story of a seal who became legend when he adopted a family on their summer vacation.

To win, readers wrote to tell us about an animal who adopted their family.

Here are excerpts from Jackson's winning story.

Carmen came into our lives one day a few years ago. I was driving to work in downtown Detroit in the far left express lane of I-96. I only saw the dog for an instant and I immediately pulled on the shoulder of the expressway. It was during the morning rush hour and she was jogging along facing traffic, apparently unaware of me calling for her to stop. I'm sure that I looked quite amusing as I ran after her but all I could think of was the horror if she deciced to cross four lanes of traffic.

Fortunately for both of us, a man was able to stop ahead of Carmen's path and she ran to him. When I caught up to them, I told him that I would take the dog.

People often comment on how lucky Carmen is to have found a home with us. We smile because we know that we are the lucky ones.

Baseball: Way it was meant to be

Big league baseball is too big for its britches. Salaries . . . too big. Egos . . . too big. Stadiums . . . too big. Ticket prices . . . too big. Everything . . . too big. Too big.. TOO BIG!.

That's just not how it was meant to be. Baseball was meant to be a lot smaller. A small summery, magical kind of game. The kind of game I played as a kid in the overgrown field in the little town on Michigan's west side. The game where just hitting the ball, any direction, meant greatness. The game with a few simple rules: bring a bat, wear shoes, help trample the tall weeds to make the baseline; don't ask for more than two ghost men to be on your team; don't argue about a ticked ball (it's just a tick, not a strike or ball); and when the ball gets lost in the weeds, go to second.

Now that was baseball - seat-of-the-pants rules, rag-tag teams, lost and found equipment, hot, dry afternoons that sometimes turned into hot, dry evenings, sheer joy in making it to second base and cicadas and crickets our loyal fans.

That kind of baseball magic doesn't exist in the big leagues. That's because those guys chase dollars not dreams.

But that doesn't mean baseball magic can't be found anywhere. I found it; I found a whole team chasing dreams instead of dollars not 15 miles from my overgrown field. The team, a brand new minor league one, is the West Michigan Whitecaps and they play in a brand new place, Old Kent Park just north of Grand Rapids.

The park is perched off to the side of US-131; you can't miss it. Big, tall lights stand like sentinels around the stadium, the ample paved parking lot with its bright white lines shimmer in the summer heat, and the grass grows green on the field.

It's a beautiful place. It's a small place. It's a beautiful place because it's small. Its capacity is only 5,500, although the night I was there, there were 8,118 of us in seats and on the grassy slopes.

Family affair

Entire families turn out for these games - babies to grandpas: They all come. They can afford it - parking is $1, cheap seats $3, expensive ones $4.50, popcorn $1.

Even big hunks of little towns show up. Like on Aug. 1, Red Flannel Underwear Night at the stadium, when 450 people from the Red Flannel Underwear Capital of the World, Cedar Springs, bought up a block of seats and sat together behind home plate.

That was the day I went.

As the announcer, with his deep, booming voice, introduced the players, he crescendoed and he fortissimoed through each name. The crowd went wild. They recognized that those guys on the field were there for the sheer love of the game, not for the piles of money or any of the other things that have clouded and muddied the big leagues.

These guys get $5,000 total for playing the game five months. They travel to the away games by bus. They live in small apartments near the field or with local families.

Crowd pleasing

They play teams from such places at South Bend, Ind., and Cedar Rapids, Iowa. They played the Appleton Foxes from Wisconsin that night. One of the Foxes was so full of the joy of playing ball that he back flipped and cartwheeled on the grass during the warmup. An impressed murmur bubbled up from the crowd.

When the warmups and introductions were complete, a man walked out on the field and sang the "Star-Spangled Banner" acapella, 8,118 voices rose up in song that August night in that little stadium, and I got goose bumps.

Red flannel toss

The mayor of the Red Flannel Underwear Capital threw out the first pitch. The crowd roared, and the game was under way. There were homeruns, severe bobbles, ground ruled doubles, a three-run inning, a very theatrical pitcher's mound conference, and a victory for the home team. The fans cheered and stamped.

Earlier on they'd sang "Happy Brithday" to Emily, a little girl who turned 12 that day and got to stand on top of the Whitecaps dugout in front of everyone.

The crowd applauded when the Dirtiest Car in the Parking Lot Award was presented. The car's owner received a certificate for a free car wash. Pairs of red flannel underwear were given away.

Two kids were chosen for the nose-on-the-bat-spin-around-real-fast contest. Henry, the ebullient guy with STAFF written on the back of his shirt, got the crowd yelling in unison and doing the wave. Those peddling peanuts, popcorn and cotton candy had fresh, young faces. They smiled as the did their job.

Friendship keeps them together

Seventy-one years ago, teacher Deda Emmons organized Home Science Club at Detroit Northwestern High School. The club disbanded last year, but the remaining members still keep getting together, mostly out of friendship.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Seventy-one years ago at Northwestern High School in Detroit a bond was created between the girls in Deda Emmons' Home Science Club. Although their numbers have dwindled over the years, the ties remain as strong as ever as the August meeting at the Garden City home of Betty Colton Henke revealed.

"I like coming, because I like the girls." said Ruth Corbett, 84 of Westland. "We have a lot of fun. This feels like home to me, to be here."

For the girls, ranging in age from 80 to 88 years old, the camaraderie has lasted through marriages, the births of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and death. And to think, it is all based on the formation of a club whose student members served as hostesses for teachers' teas.

"We continue to meet because we don't want to lose track of one another, the fun we've had over the years, we were all in the same boat," said Henke, 80. "You just remember all the silly things."

Founded in 1923 by Miss Emmons, the club's primary purpose, according to its constitution, was "to have a group of high school girls ready at any moment to take complete charge of serving at any social event," but also "to find new and novel ways of entertaining, and to further the spirit of the home." It was disbanded around 1932 after the high school banned all clubs.

In the early days, the alumnae numbered more than 100. Today the number has dwindled to 12 active members who meet at homes or restaurants for lunch once a month June through October, since many of the members spend the winters in Florida. Nine were present at the recent meeting on Henke's patio.

"Miss Emmons taught us how to plank a fish, how to make fancy sandwiches for the teas. Teas were big back then," said Henke.

Families matter

"A place for everything, and everything in its place," recalled Bessie Chiasson, 88, of Livonia, the only surviving member of the founding group. Chiasson believes the fact that they were all having families at the same time kept them together. She has four children, 13 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

"We kept meeting because we all liked one another; we all were having families," Chiasson said. "I consider them part of my family. When I go to the hairdressers and say I'm going to a meeting I've attended for the last 71 years, people can't believe it.

"There's been a lot of changes over the years. We experienced a lot together. We lived through the Depression, the different wars and a lot of different presidents. I wish we could go back and do it over."

Through the years, club members held white elephant sales to raise funds for the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan, Livingston Community Hospice and the Salvation Army.

"We held white elephant sales where people contributed something that they didn't want anymore, then developed into sales of food, cookies and cakes. We made Christmas ornaments and dressed dolls for Goodfellows," said Henke. "It's been a great group of people."

"It's very supportive; I miss it when I'm in Florida," added Bernice Cobane Smith, 80, of Walled Lake, formerly of West Bloomfield.

AIDS victim devotes life to son, educating others

BY SUE MASON,
STAFF WRITER

"I don't think we'll ever see a world without AIDS."

It's a matter-of-fact statement that 33-year-old Tammy Boccomino makes to the small group of people gathered in the Harrison School auditorium . . . Matter of fact and a reality for the mother of two who deals with the tragedy of AIDS daily.

Boccomino is HIV positive; her 7-year-old son Michael has AIDS. Diagnosed seven years ago, following Michael's birth, she has devoted herself to her son and to educating people, especially young people, about the killer disease.

"There's no second chance with this disease," Boccomino said. "You can be tested this morning, have sex tonight and get AIDS. You can be a virgin when you get married and still have AIDS."

Boccomino decided to go public about the disease for Michael and son Tony, age 9. The question was how could Michael live out his life in dignity, if they kept the illness a secret.

Since then, she has spoken at hundreds of high schools and appeared on several local and national television shows to tell her story and talk about what people must do to avoid being infected. Her Aug. 8 speech in Garden City was sponsored by Hospice Services of Western Wayne Inc.

She directed several of her remarks to the lone teenager in the group, telling her that "AIDS is not going to go away when you get married; you have to worry about your kids. You have to talk to them."

Shared disease

It hasn't been easy for Boccomino, who was infected by her first husband, an IV drug user whose drug of choice was cocaine. He died almost four years ago; his second wife, whom he also infected, died two years ago.

Suprisingly, Boccomino has only infected Michael. Her husband Brian and 9-year-old son Tony tested negative for the virus. And, yes, she and Brian practice safe sex.

Writer craves attention from others

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Lorene,

I am 27 years old and write with my right hand. My mother sent in a sample of her handwriting for you to analyze a few years ago. The subsequent profile was quite accurate. I hope I have provided you with an ample sample for your analysis. Your column is wonderful.

Thanks so much.

H.G.,
Livonia

Today's handwriting sample is replete with ornamentation. This suggests a person who craves attention from others. Often she makes a pretentious display of herself, intended to invite praise and/or flattery. She wants so very much to impress, be admired and receive compliments. She tries to squeeze every bit of drama out of each situation. Center stage is where she wants to be found. Others may see an inflated sense of pride in her.

A high degree of insecurity is usually the underlying cause for this type of behavior. Her self-esteem is not what she would like to have the world believe. Seemingly, she has experienced or perceives rejection of some sort which causes her to feel inferior. To compensate and feel more worthy in other people's eyes, she has developed this artificial means of showing off her qualities.

Ornamented handwriting can also suggest one who is attracted to eye-catching fashions in clothing. Interior decorating would probably be more on the ornate than plain side also. Our writer has a need to hold onto those things that symbolize security to her. She may not be ready to take big risks.

Overlapping lines tell us she has many irons in the fire at this time. While she likes to be busy and active, she may currently be involved in more than she can comfortably handle.

Inconsistent word spacing alerts us to inconsistencies in dealing with others. Sometimes very friendly, other times less so, can make it difficult for others to know where they stand with her.

This young woman can be quite a persuasive talker. A tendency to exaggerate her capabilities, promising more than she can produce, is sometimes seen. When this happens, she can rationalize, offering all sorts of plausible-sounding reasons why it didn't work out.

Plymouth doctor honored for work

The Michigan Academy of Family Physicians has honored Dr. John Battle of Plymouth as the Family Practice Educator of the Year.

The award was presented during the meeting of the Academy's Congress of Delegates at Grand Traverse Resort July 16. The Michigan Academy of Family Physicians is a state organization representing more than 2,700 family physicians.

Battle graduated from the Wayne State University School of Medicine and completed his internship at Fitzsimmons Army Hospital. He has been director of the family practice residency program at Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn since 1980 and is serving a second appointment as director of medical education and continuing education at Oakwood.

He is board certified in family practice and before entering academia, Battle had a private practice in Dearborn. He also is a clinical associate professor at the Wayne State University School of Medicine and is serving as the interim vice president of medical affairs, charged with guiding the development of educational affiliations between Oakwood Hospital and the University of Michigan.

In presenting the award, Dr. Tim Tobolic, president of the Michigan Academy of Family Physicians, noted that Battle's "educational and professional influence are felt indirectly by literally thousands of patients weekly who benefit from the excellent care provided by family physicians (he has trained)."

It was by chance that she was diagnosed. The hospital decided to do a specialized test on the umbilical blood of mothers delivering babies the day Michael was born and tested that blood for a variety of diseases before using it. The mothers know nothing of the testing.

Boccomino found out a month later when the hospital called to tell her she had tested positive for the HIV virus. Retesting turned up the same results.

The reaction was a "big disbelief"; she and her husband didn't believe nor did they want to believe it. Brian turned to binge drinking to deal with the fact that he would lose both his wife and son to AIDS.

"We didn't have a marriage then," Boccomino said, "we just lived for our son. We didn't think he would live to be 1 year old. I've gotten to a plateau where I live for today and my vision is for my son."

Michael developed full-blown AIDS at age 4 and Boccomino has become his primary caregiver. Brian gave up his own business and went back to being a pipefitter to get the union's medical insurance for his family.

Crippled Children's help pays for a lot of Michael's expenses, and their current policy does reimburse them for a portion of Boccomino's $250-a-month AZT prescription, but when she develops AIDS, she said she will have to divorce her husband to get help with her "outrageous" medical bills.

Relatives sued her family because she used her name and as a result it was associated with AIDS. Some people also picketed the school where she did volunteer work, wanting her to wear a mask and gloves.

"People react mostly out of fear not their hearts," she said. "But if you think about there's someone living on every street who is HIV positive. Within five years, each of you will know someone who is HIV positive. There will be one child in every grade who will have AIDS that they got from their mother."

Boccomino pooh-poohs the idea of AIDS as a gay disease. Granted, a lot of gay males were dying of AIDS in the early '80s, but with education, the gay community is no longer getting infected.

However, the group now at risk of AIDS, she said, is women . . . "women who think like I did, 'I'm not gay' and I'm not an IV drug user.'" With her internal organs, the disease can filter into a woman's body through the thin membranes.

And likewise, a man may think because he isn't gay or an IV drug user, he can't get AIDS, but he can get it from a woman, according to Boccomino.

The AIDS ways

The AIDS virus lives on T-cells, high concentrations of which can be found in blood, semen, vaginal fluids and breast milk and can be transmitted in three ways, the most prevalent being sex — vaginal, anal and oral. In the case of oral sex, the person giving it is at a high risk of getting AIDS, Boccomino said.

The virus can't be contracted from saliva, sweat and tears because the concentration of the virus is too low.

"And you can't get it from kissing; I've been kissing my husband for 10 years and he's not infected," Boccomino said. "You would have to take in a quart of saliva at one time to get a high enough concentration and you'd drown before you got AIDS.

The second way is blood to blood — through IV drug use, ear or body piercing and tattooing without proper sterilization and injectible steroid use, popular among high school athletes, said Boccomino, pointing to a high school wrestling team down South where buddies on the wrestling team shared the needle.

During the early '80s, hemophiliacs were at risk of AIDS because the clotting factor they rely on was made from tainted blood. Most of those hemophiliacs who were infected were men who went on to infect their wives and who in turn passed it on to their children.

The third way is from mother to child while it is a fetus, while giving birth where a lot of blood is present and through breast milk, which has a lot of T-cells.

Boccomino talked of her friends who have been infected and died of AIDS. There's Ruth who dated a guy for a while before they separated. When he turned up sick at a later date, she discovered he was a casual IV drug user. She, too, became ill and died. She was age 21.

Another friend named Shelly at age 19 married an IV drug user. She cleaned up her act when she had a baby. He didn't, so she divorced him. She remarried and discovered she was HIV positive at the birth of her second son. She now is in hospice care.

"She doesn't want any more drugs; she just wants to be home with her family," Boccomino said. "I'd like to go over once a week to give her husband a break; he has quit his job to be with her."

Boccomino had though about naming the names and ages of the people she has come to know in the last seven years who have died as the result of AIDS. She decided not to when she realized her list had 15-16 names on it.

And their ages led her to stress to the hospice workers present that there will be a lot of young people ages 25-35 who will be dying, infected 10 or so years earlier when they were in high school and college.

She also stressed that caregivers respect their patients' confidentiality, asking who they have and haven't told, and offering them compassion and support.

"Hug them right away and tell them you'll be there to listen; AIDS patients need a lot of psychological help," she said. "And don't judge them. Look, anyone in this room could be infected with AIDS, but you've just been lucky."

Then after the game, standing very still in the parking lot, I heard crickets and cicadas. And I got goose bumps, again. Now that's what baseball was meant to be.

A closing note: The Whitecaps play their last home game of the season on Sept. 2. Call their number, (800) 227-7946 (it's tool free), for their schedule. The drive to Grand Rapids is definitely worth it.

Even though the club was officially dissolved at the annual dinner at the Western Golf & Country Club in 1993 and the funds distributed to charitable organizations, they continue to meet monthly.

Back in '24: A year after being founded, Deda Emmons' Home Science Club at Northwestern High School had grown to 27 members.

For Miss Emmons

It takes a bit of digging to find that the mysterious element binding them together is a grand old gal who died in 1956. When asked that question, "Miss Emmons," they resounded in chorus. The reasons number into the dozens.

"She was a totally delightful teacher; she taught me when you don't have lemons to use your ingenuity," said Henke.

"Deda holds us together; she was warm, friendly," said Betty Roemer Schott, 83 of New Baltimore, formerly of Dearborn. "You could cry on her shoulder. Even though she never had children, she always knew just what to say. She called us her girls because she never married and had no children."

Schott joined in 1926 because of her admiration for Miss Emmons.

"She was a marvelous inspiration for girls. She was always neat and always wore a pretty handkerchief. She taught us to wash our hands before we did anything, but she never cooked outside of school. She told us, 'When I go home, I never cook. My sister won't let me into the kitchen.' She was the adhesive that made us stay together and as the years have gone by we have formed really close friendships."

Eighty-seven-year-old Edith Ternes Reynold, who taught school in Dearborn and Chicago for 47½ years, ended the tributes by saying, "She was a remarkable woman to start a group like this. It's a nice group, almost like family."

Changing times

The world has changed over the years. When the club, originated seven decades ago, the dues were 10 cents. By 1964, they jumped to $1. The annual alumnae dinner in 1930 cost 75 cents. By 1950, the dinner held at the Botsford Inn was $3.25. A club scrapbook holds all of the handmade invitations for the annual dinners since the first.

"Back then you had to make your own fun. You couldn't afford to spend $100 on invitations; you made them. It was a different world back then. You could go anywhere without worrying," said Henke.

"A lot of them we lost to marriage or moving," said Henke, who herself had left the state when husband Al was transferred to Baltimore for a brief time.

Corbett lived in Florida for 20 years before moving back recently. Constance Biowell Carter, 85, was absent for almost 40 years after she married a Kmart executive.

"I would hear from the girls; they never failed to remember me," said Carter who will host the Sept. 17 meeting at her Howell home.

Barbara Hartsough brought her mother-in-law, Evelyn, 84, to the meeting. Lengthy marriages, says Barbara, seem to be another shared attribute among club members. Evelyn Hartsough and Henke are but two whose marriages endured 50 years.

"They're all an inspiration; everybody here stays current on sports, politics and their families," she said. "They're simply all women who have grown older. They're from another generation where there's no talk of divorces."

ANNIVERSARIES

Demers

The Demers exchanged vows on Aug. 11, 1944, in Southbridge, Mass. She is the former Teresa Lemire. As part of the festivities, the Demers renewed their wedding vows.

Thirty-year residents of Livonia, they have five children — Barry of Grand Ledge, Gregory of Cape Canaveral, Fla., Judy Bendig of Canton, Mike of Westland and Ken of Redford. They also have seven grandchildren.

Elzermans

The couple exchanged vows on Aug. 12, 1944, in the Plymoth Methodist Church. She is the former Cecelia Hubert.

A veteran of the Merchant Marines, Ernie worked on the Elzerman family truck farm on Plymouth Road as well as for the Wayne County Road Commission, Utilex in Fowlerville and as a custodian for the Webberville Schools.

She worked as a riveter at the Willow Run Bomber Plant, then worked in sales. Following her husband to New York, she worked on Wall Street before they returned to the Plymouth area. When they moved to Webberville, she was employed as a cook in the local schools for six years.

Bersano

The couple moved to Garden City in 1956 and have been active members of the community through the Garden City Jaycees, Garden City Parks and Recreation Department, Garden City Youth Athletic Association and Garden City Presbyterian Church.

Victim testifies abductor had assistance fleeing area

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

Karen Stewart Perez of Westland testified that her ex-boyfriend, William Joseph Lavack, had help fleeing southeast Michigan after he abducted her June 27 in Redford Township, where they met for dinner.

After Lavack forced her into a Trans Am and handcuffed her to a glove box handle, he drove to his hometown of Lincoln Park and made arrangements by phone to pick up his 1987 Chevy Caprice near a local drugstore, Perez testified Monday.

Perez, 37, quoted Lavack, 30, as telling an unidentified friend by phone, "Put the ammo, the gun and the gas mask in the car."

Lavack also spoke in codes such as "condition red," which meant the abduction had occurred, and "condition yellow," which meant that someone was to "snatch" Perez's then-fiance, Tony, she testified.

Tony Perez of Westland was to be abducted "so I could watch him (Lavack) put a bullet in (Perez's) head," Karen Perez testified during a preliminary hearing in Redford 17th District Court.

Lavack picked up his Caprice, but he and Karen Perez never saw her fiance (now her husband) before they left southeast Michigan for a nearly 450-mile trail of terror to the Upper Peninsula, she said.

Lavack hasn't said whom he called; therefore, no charges against a potential accomplice have been possible, said Westland police Sgt. Terry Donohue. But Perez's testimony indicated for the first time that Lavack may have had help.

Monday's hearing ended with Judge Karen Khalil ordering Lavack to stand trial on one count of kidnapping, nine counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct and 10 felony firearms charges. He could face life in prison if convicted.

Perez was repeatedly raped in motel rooms, threatened at gunpoint and, at one point, bound by thick tape and forced to endure a grenade being placed between her breasts, in her bra, with the pin pulled, she testified.

"He told me not to move or else I'd be blown to bits," Perez said.

Perez licked the tape to moisten it so that she could speak. She was sweating and the grenade was slipping, she told Lavack, who then removed the explosive from her bra, she said.

Karen Perez said she was repeatedly forced to have intercourse with Lavack and to perform oral sex on him during the nine-day abduction that ended at 2:15 a.m. July 6, following a standoff between Lavack and authorities at an Upper Peninsula cabin.

Lavack told Perez that he still loved her, she said. "He said he couldn't believe that I was getting married and that he should just end it all right then and blow my f------g head off."

Lavack forced her to have anal sex and later warned her that she had better follow his commands "or I would get it again," Perez said. She has said she obeyed him to save her life.

During stops in small towns, Perez mouthed the word "help" to people she encountered. One man "just looked right at me and then looked away," she said.

Three days into the abduction, Perez and Lavack saw a television news report about the abduction, and Lavack "freaked out," Perez testified. "He became really agitated. He picked up the gun and started walking around the room with the gun."

When the couple entered the Upper Peninsula, Perez pleaded with Lavack to let her go, but she said he told her "it had gone too far."

Lavack would handcuff Perez to the steering wheel of the car whenever he got out, she said. At night he handcuffed her to himself, she said.

At one point, Lavack handed Perez a 9mm handgun and indicated that the only way she could escape was to kill him, she said. He then grabbed the gun and told her that she missed her chance, she said.

When asked why she didn't try to get away while she had the gun, Perez testified that she was frightened because she knew that Lavack had another weapon, an assault rifle. He also had knives and a bayonet, she later testified.

Perez was rescued by authorities after she managed to pass a note for help to a grocery store clerk near Marquette. The note helped police find the remote cabin where Lavack had taken Perez.

Longtime area clerk Cairns will be missed

Floyd A. Cairns

By Tom Baer
Staff Writer

They called him "Mr. Farmington Hills" — and with good reason.

Floyd A. Cairns, whose name graces the Farmington Hills City Hall, was township and city clerk for 29 years before his retirement 10 years ago. He was the one they always went to when they wanted to know what was what in the city.

"This city functions well today because of the work he did back then," said Bob McConnell, who was a Farmington Township supervisor during part of Floyd Cairns' long reign as clerk.

Mr. Cairns, a lifelong resident of Farmington Hills, died of congestive heart failure Tuesday at St. Mary's Hospital in Livonia. He was 79.

Dedicated, conscientious, courtly and helpful are a few of the kind words used by former colleagues to describe Mr. Cairns, who was in office 21 years ago when Farmington Township became the city of Farmington Hills.

"He was a very dedicated, quiet, conscientious public servant," said McConnell. "He did a lot of good work for the city. I remember that he pulled together all the water and sewer plans for the new city.

"He had a terrific memory, and it was really needed. There weren't a lot of records back in those days."

Another longtime Farmington Hills resident, Kay Briggs, also mentioned Mr. Cairns' great memory.

"You could ask him just about anything having to do with the city, and he'd know the answer," said Briggs, who attended Farmington High School with Mr. Cairns more than 60 years ago and served with him on the Farmington Historical Commission.

"He was a very nice, courtly man," added Briggs, "and he was interested in people. Everybody respected him. When he said something, you knew it was right."

Sue Rose, a current employee of the Hills Clerks's Office, was hired by Mr. Cairns. Again, his memory for local facts was mentioned.

"He was a great person to work for and he was much respected in the community," Rose said. "He had a terrific memory for things that had happened in the city."

Keith Deacon, former Hills councilman, served with Mr. Cairns on the city's Economic Development Corporation.

"The thing you have to know about Floyd Cairns is that he was like a father to this community," Deacon said. "He knew where every drain and drainpipe and waterway was located in this city . . . not just the present ones, but also the ones that used to be.

Lost first election

Born Nov. 5, 1914 in Farmington Township, Mr. Cairns was educated in the community's schools. Up until he became clerk in 1956, Mr. Cairns ran a trucking company handed down from his father. His trucks hauled milk from the farms to the Wilson Dairy.

One of his customers was the Farmington Township supervisor, who convinced him to run for public office. Despite this encouragement, Mr. Cairns lost to the incumbent, Harry McCracken, by about 60 votes in 1955.

But Mr. Cairns was appointed clerk when McCracken resigned a few months later. He seemed to grow into the job, a colleague re-

He retired as city clerk at the end of 1984. The City Hall was named the Floyd A. Cairns Municipal Building a few years later.

Mr. Cairns' resume includes a few stints as acting township supervisor and acting city manager, as well as a long list of accomplishments on civic and governmental boards and commissions.

Some of his accomplishments include chairmanship of the Farmington Hills Historical Commission, tenure on the Scheduling Committee of the Oakland County Elections Commission, board member of the Farmington Area YMCA, and fund-raising chairman for the current YMCA building on Farmington Road.

He was a past master of the Masonic Lodge, past president of the Farmington Exchange Club and a member of the Farmington Elks Club.

Mr. Cairns, a member of the Walled Lake First Baptist Church, served on the Economic Development Corporation at the time of his death.

Survivors include Leola, his wife of 56 years; a daughter, Ginny Steele of Troy; a son, Richard Cairns of Novi; a niece; a nephew; 11 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Visitation will be 2-9 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 18, at Thayer-Rock Funeral Home, 33603 Grand River, Farmington. A service will be held 11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 19, at the same funeral home, the Rev. Allen Rogers of the Walled Lake First Baptist Church officiating.

In addition, a Masonic Memorial Service will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 18, at Thayer-Rock.

'Losing Jessica' is a compelling story

"Losing Jessica," by Robby DeBoer (289 pp., Doubleday, $22.00.)

As you know, in a recent, much-publicized legal battle, Robby and Jan DeBoer of Ann Arbor lost the 21/2-year-old child they had raised since birth to the child's natural parents, Cara and Dan Schmidt, of Iowa. Known then as Baby Jessica (and since re-named Anna), the little girl has lived with the Schmidts for a little over a year now.

This sometimes surprising, up-close and personal account of that battle doesn't clarify everything about this heart-wrenching event, of course. But, keeping in mind that every story has (at least) two sides, "Losing Jessica" will certainly help anyone reading it to see the aspiring adoptive parents - and what they tried to do - more clearly. And, in a highly readable way, it will answer many questions about the legal system, especially as it relates to this case.

Reading this book is a little like sitting down with a loquacious friend (DeBoer made a speech at her own wedding) who is trying very hard to make sense of something that does not lend itself to logic: a full-fledged nightmare.

She stumbles from time to time. She contradicts herself now and then and, in doing so, confuses. Also, her frequent tendency to note how long and how often she wept during the nightmare threatens somehow to trivialize her emotion, and even to turn this highly dramatic story into melodrama at times.

Ultimately, though, "Losing Jessica" is a genuinely moving, quietly compelling story of this "venture into a dark place . . . full of pain."

"How was it possible that so many professional people could have been wrong?" DeBoer asks at one point.

Good question.

It should be stressed at the outset that this book is not simply a single-noted, unrelieved cry of pain. Everyday life with "Jessi," who seems to have been a remarkably uncomplicated child, was apparently an ongoing, pleasure-filled adventure for the DeBoers. We watch as she grows, going with her to birthday parties, on Ann Arbor shopping trips with "Momma," exploring her neighborhood at Halloween, experiencing Christmas, growing attached to a special cousin, forming a relationship with a playful uncle, visiting with adoring grandparents, carousing around with Dutchy, the golden retriever, and other close friends.

But, for the Deboers (almost from the start), a darkness lingered at the edges of the fun. With time, it seemed to creep into more and more corners, and finally to touch almost every aspect of their lives, until Jessica herself seemed, in a sense, the only light left.

For instance, though DeBoer does not really dwell on it here, the Ann Arbor couple came, early on, to be in rather desperate financial circumstances. (This may surprise many of us who saw them, in all the brouhaha, as not particularly affluent, but certainly not desperate.) Legal bills mounted at an alarming rate, forcing Jan DeBoer, a printer, to take on two jobs. Eventually, Robby sewed curtains at home to help out. Jan was injured in an auto accident, Jessica needed minor surgery. Medical bills entered in. On the way to Iowa for yet another legal proceeding, their car broke down, and left them stranded just outside Moline, Ill.

"The mechanic said he could repair the engine for $3,000, or he would give us $400," DeBoer writes. "We had just made the last payment . .n. We took the $400."

Friends and family later chipped in, enabling the struggling couple to buy a used car.

Another surprise in this book: a number of letters Cara Schmidt wrote to her infant daughter shortly after Jessica's birth. I'm not sure I ever heard Cara Schmidt utter a word during this entire controversy and, from that, I drew a mistaken conclusion that she was a rather emotionless woman who didn't have much to say, or if she did, couldn't think of how to say it. The letters, however, are strikingly articulate. One hopes that someday this rather shadowy woman will write her account of these events, also.

THROUGH THE EYES OF A CHILD

■ Art from outer space along with cartoon favorites like Kit the Cat and the Lion King spring to life in the fourth annual Children's Art Show Aug. 28 at the Plymouth Cultural Center. This is the largest exhibit of children's art in Michigan featuring more than 350 artworks by students ranging in age from 3 to 16.

Yvonne Lorenz of Plymouth believes strongly in raising her children Katie, 10, and Joey, 8, to be well rounded. For the last two summers the Lorenz children have attended weeklong art camps run by D & M Art Studio and the city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department.

They along with 165 other budding artists from the summer camps will exhibit more than 350 artworks in a wide spectrum of mediums from painting, drawing and clay to scratchboard, sand and animation cels in "Art from Outer Space" 3-5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 28, in the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer. The public is invited. A reception sponsored by the city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation along with the viewing of art, and a secret mural is free.

"It's a terrific self confidence builder to have their work in an art show and have people come and see it. That's just an excellent end to the week," said Lorenz, who worked as a teacher's aide during her children's camp session to help defray the costs.

"The kids have a great time. Both of my kids love to draw, love to paint, but Joey plays sports as well. They need sports for the physical exercise. They learn to cooperate and work together as a team with others. In the art camps, they get an

State art show has big news

It's a really big show at the Paint Creek Center for the Arts.

The Rochester center's eighth annual Celebrate Michigan Artists exhibition features many large-size pieces and local talent from Redford Township.

The show runs 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday to Sept. 23 in the Main Gallery at 407 Pine.

The show is big in other ways too. More artists are entering the event as its reputation grows.

"I was really impressed," said MariaLuisa Belmonte, PCCA exhibition director. "I thought the quality was exceptionally high."

More than 200 artists submitted entries to this year's competition. Juror MaryAnn Wilkinson, associate curator of 20th century art at the Detroit Institute of Arts, selected works by 37 artists from 26 communities in Michigan.

"This show is a superb cross section of Michigan art, including many artists who have devoted impressive careers to working here, as well as some at the beginning of their professional lives," Wilkinson said in a statement.

Award recipients

Art Beat

■ PAINTING CLASSES

Learn basic techniques, color mixing, composition and how to control the medium from the award winning artist who's painted for more than 35 years. In advanced oil painting, she will teach glazing techniques of the old masters, keeping a sketch book, enlarging a sketch and drawing, and painting landscapes with a limited palette. This semester, Weed diversifies the artistic subject matter taught by including Sewing as a Business, and Marketing Your Arts and Crafts.

■ POLISH ARTISTS WANTED

Calling all Polish American artists living in Redford, Garden City, Westland, Livonia, Plymouth and Canton. Artists of Polish background by birth or by marriage and who were born in Michigan or currently live in the state are invited to submit their work for the ninth annual Richard Kubinski Art Competition to be held Oct. 2.

Deadline for entry is Sept. 24.

Original art in all mediums is being accepted. A cash award of $200 will be given to the work judged Best of Show. Other awards include $150 for First Prize, $100 for Second, and $25 each for three honorable mentions.

The competition is sponsored by the Friends of Polish Art and the Orchard Lake Schools. Artwork will be exhibited Oct. 2-30 at the Galeria on the schools' campus northwest of Detroit.

For more information and an entry form, call Johanna Bielecki at (313) 581-4198, or Marian Owczarski at (810) 683-0345.

outlet for their creative side and because of that they're more confident in their abilities to do things. That's one thing they stress is that everyone has a creative side, and here they learn to express it."

Teaching techniques

As one recent session proved, creativity exhibits itself in a multitude of ways. During a daylong camp featuring painting and drawing, art camp director Sharon Dillenbeck set up still life, one unit on soccer, one on baseball. In another, students created miniature paintings so they would understand the technique of pointillism used by French Impressionists Seurat and Bonnard.

Throughout the camp, visiting artists Susan Argiroff of Livonia, Hugh Burley of Ann Arbor, and Roy Rinke of Plymouth taught marbling, oil painting and colored pencil.

"We stay away from cut and paste. I teach presentation, marketing. I encourage kids to do it. With the preschool and early grades, it's not the results that are important. They love doing it. They love what they do. They should have fun doing it. There shouldn't be any guidelines around it. All children's art has merit. It gets out the good and bad from inside them," said Dillenbeck whose own children, Kristen and Erin attended the camps.

"Each child exhibiting in the show will receive a fine art medallion. Because it's an exhibition not a competition, I want everyone to feel good about themselves.

"The work you're going to see has more technique, how to use paints and pencil in different ways. The show this year is bigger. We got the children more involved in the show itself by doing the mural. I wanted them to understand it was their show."

Mural is theme

A brightly colored mural done in tempera focuses on this year's theme. The 15 by 10 foot work features 50 panels created by individual art camp sessions under the direction of student aide Kerry Ioconelli. Since each session worked on only one panel, the mural is a secret until all pieces are assembled for the show.

"They get a chance to try all different types of media. It's much more extensive than what they learn in school as far as techniques. What they learn here they practice at home. The foil pieces, they wouldn't have known how to do, but they learn it here and take it home. They learn just because they can't draw, they can be successful in other media."

"This allows Kelly to develop her talents beyond the classroom, beyond what's available at other camps. Sharon's so professional and teaches them self esteem. It allows Kelly to be her own person and not just a participant in group activities. She has something to show for it and be proud of," said Jackson, principal of Our Lady of Victory school in Northville.

Working on animation cels during a recent camp session, students sat quietly, intent on capturing the likeness of their favorite cartoon characters. Katie Lorenz was doing a line drawing of Kit the Cat which she will then transfer onto a cel.

Young artists

"At school for the whole year you get to do maybe 25 projects at school. My favorite part of the camp is painting, and the art show at the end. It's fun," said Katie, stressing that while she doesn't plan on making a career out of art, she likes it as a hobby.

This is also Matt Reuter's second year in the art camp. The 10-year-old was in the midst of drawing Marvin the Martian.

"I like how creative it is. It's really fun because you never know what's going to happen tomorrow," said Reuter of Canton Township.

"My favorite is all, every single one. They're fun," said Kin as he drew Dizzy from Tiny Teens Adventures.

If you missed the summer camps, in fall the art sessions continue in the form of classes at the Plymouth Cultural Center, Westland Bailey Center, Plymouth-Canton elementary schools, D & M Art Studio and through the Canton Parks and Recreation Department.

Associate director Janie Tucci helped Dillenbeck teach the camp sessions with additional help from Elaine Savola of Canton, Marilyn Grech of Northville, and Brian Walker and Marion Marzion of Livonia.

"The most important thing they get out of the camps is confidence. I don't allow them to crunch anything because what the artist sees is not necessarily what everyone else does. It also develops their hand and motor skills and the way they see things."

Local businesses contributing gift certificates and art supplies for the drawing include Frameworks of Plymouth, and the Plymouth Cultural Center; The Art Store, Canton; Miller Art Supply, Farmington; and three in Livonia, the Art Palette, JNB matting services, Design-A-Shirt, Livonia Trophy and Sales, and Integrated Crafts, Arts & Novelties.

Cranbrook Academy of Art. The work features bright colors and a subtle message. The painting shows two large, red, shadowy hands, a cup and saucer, and a book in a bird cage with an open door. All of the images are over a text that is integrated into the paint.

The viewer is invited to explore mysteries of the mind. Is the book with its ideas "safe" in the cage, or should it be "free"? What is the key to finding a way out of the surrounding writing?

"Perfect Idea" will be reproduced on a limited edition fine art poster, sales of which will benefit programs at the non-profit PCCA.

Second prize ($500) went to Pi Benio of Adrian and third prize ($250) to Robert Bielat of Ferndale. Honorable mention awards ($100 each) went to Allen Berke of Madison Heights and Carole Zak of Rochester.

Benio's piece, "Hejira," features a paper human figure, torn in places as though it were a cocoon from which something had emerged. The figure reclines on a pile of bristly teasels, which resemble the tops of cattails, and examines a brown smear on its chest.

"Bones & Stones I" is Bielat's work. Components of the mixed media wall piece include an apparent vertebrae, a smooth stone, hooks and pieces of wood. The items are arranged on a wire screen. It is "bare bones" but also has a strong beauty with its symmetry.

Berke, who teaches at Wayne State University and the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, presents an untitled oil work that represents Michigan's auto history. A faceless assembly line of cars turns into a variety of workers in the foreground, the rugged workers taking on the strength of auto components. A figure suggesting Walter Reuther is at the side. Berke exhibited at the Xochipilli Gallery in Birmingham recently and at the Helen DeRoy show at Oakland Community College last year.

"Daughter," a mixed media work by Zak, comments on the role of women. The piece features acrylic and antique prints. Portraits of different men line the border, while a portrait suggesting mother and daughter is repeated in the center, all on a quiltlike design. The message is that women have been kept in place without change, but a crack in the center hints that this pattern may be broken. Zak's work may be seen at the David Klein Gallery in Birmingham.

Variety

Among the other local artists are Joseph Bernard and Dale Sparage of Bloomfield Hills, Peter Gilleran and Sally Kaplan of Birmingham, Shirley Parish of Lathrup Village and Marian Mudie and James Pujdowski of Redford.

Bernard's "Bottom of the Hour" is an acrylic and collage on wood. Its elements include film strips and what look like seeds, arranged within a series of rectangles. Sections of the work almost look as though they are in a sort of gel. The feeling is that of a moment holding still.

"Street Crowd" by Gilleran is an oil painting upon which a pointillist style plays, colors dancing and lines overlapping. Sparage's "Broken Spell" is a haunting, charcoal on paper piece in which a veil hangs loose over a flat figure. As the veil moves slightly, it is as if the figure is moving it with a feeble breath.

Bright and brooding hues converge in two oil paintings, "Marian" by Mudie and "Excursion" by Pujdowski, a portrait and a scene of swans respectively. In "Excursion," bands of color are angled or placed almost vertically or horizontally to create a sense of flowing movement.

Arts Foundation of Michigan provided the $1,000 first place prize. The Avon Printing Co., the Balian Eye Center, Dillman & Upton and First of America Bank's Rochester Community Group each made $1,000 contributions toward exhibition expenses. Ameritech donated the printing costs of the call for entries. Consumers Power underwrote the exhibit invitation.

Livonia artist colors Artrain

By Linda Ann Chomin
Staff Writer

Artrain rolls into town sporting the murals of Livonia resident Glenn Dorshimer Aug. 18-21 at Ypsilanti's Heritage Festival.

Dorshimer, a product designer/industrial engineer, focuses on the history of transportation since the 19th century in the 660 feet of brightly colored murals. Purple, blue and hot pink color the art designed and executed by Dorshimer on the train's exterior. Imagery includes an offshore racer looking harried as he races his boat toward a train of the future. The futuristic train was influenced by Raymond Lowery, the father of industrial design in America, said Dorshimer, and the Broadway Limited S-1 locomotive of the Chicago-New York line of 1934.

Dorshimer's father inspired his own personal romance with transportation. Robert Dorshimer, chief engineer for Oldsmobile and later vice president of engineering for the Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac group, dedicated his life to the advancement of the automobile. He died in 1986.

Artrain, America's Museum in Motion, is presently featuring an exhibition entitled, "The Romance of Transportation: Vehicle and Voyage in North American Art" Curated by Dr. Ellen Plummer of the University of Michigan Museum of Art, the exhibition explores artists' fascination with vehicle and voyage through paintings, sculptures, photographs and prints. Works by world-renowned artists such as Thomas Hart Benton, Dorothea Lange, Richard Estes, Claes Oldenburg, Andy Warhol and Detroit's Tyree Guyton are featured. The art is on loan from the Detroit Institute of Arts, University of Michigan Museum of Art, Cranbrook Academy of Art Musuem, Henry Ford Museum, Kresge Art Museum of Michigan State University, Flint Institute of Arts, Muskegon Museum of Art, and Grand Rapids Museum of Art.

GARDEN SPOT

MARTY FIGLEY

We are extending the deadline for our High Hopes Sunflower contest, so all who want to enter can have a fair chance of winning.

The response from you has been enthusiastic and heartwarming and I have enjoyed the calls. There seems to be some confusion about how to enter. Contest rules are given in today's column.

I hope your sunflower has grown even taller and has a larger seed head than you anticipated!

A great big THANK YOU to Bordine's Better Blooms of Rochester and Clarkston and Plymouth Nursery of Plymouth for their generous prize donations. First prize will be a $50 gift certificate from Bordine's. Two runners-up will each receive a $25 gift certificate from Plymouth Nursery.

Sunflower tips

After the seedhead of the sunflower has formed, you will need to make a decision about whether to share these delicious tidbits with the birds or save them for a family treat. If you want the animals to eat the seeds, just leave the head on the stalk and enjoy their antics while they have a feast. Information follows on how to save the seeds to provide food for the animals in the winter or for your own consumption.

The National Garden Bureau advises that when birds start to visit the sunflower, it's time to cover the head by encasing it in securely fastened cheesecloth or black landscape fabric. Twist-ties will hold it firmly in place. Seedheads can be harvested when two-thirds of the seeds are mature. Covered seedheads are ready to harvest when the back of the head is brown and no traces of green remain.

Harvest time

Put a cloth on the ground to catch the seeds if the head hasn't been covered. Cut the stalk, leaving about a 2-foot stem, then hang it in a warm, well-ventilated area. When the backs are entirely brown and papery, remove the seeds by brushing them out with your hands or a stiff brush. Don't wash them, or they may mold or rot.

Store the harvested seeds in the refrigerator in an air-tight container for several months. Roasted seeds will provide a nutritious and yummy snack.

The recipe is easy. Just toss unwashed seeds in a touch of vegetable oil and salt them lightly, then spread them out in a shallow pan. Roast at 250 degrees until they are crisp and brown, about 30-45 minutes. Don't let them burn!

Cutting remarks

The NGB also reminds us that sunflowers bloom in many colors besides the popular yellow. Creamy white to bronze, mahogany, purple and orange shades as well as bicolors are available. And the seedhead changes color as it matures, due to pollen and then seed development.

For cut flowers, the shorter new hybrid pollenless varieties with smaller head size work best. Regular shorter types make nice arrangements also. As you cut the flowers, trim the stems under water while in the garden, or under running water as soon as you bring them indoors. Place them immediately in warm water with cut flower food.

Cover the flowers with a black plastic bag and place them in a dark area in a cool location for several hours to condition them, then arrange as you wish. Dried sunflowers also make interesting arrangements.

Contest rules

Here are the rules for entering the High Hopes Sunflower Contest. You may submit your entry from now until the deadline. The winner will be the person who grows the tallest sunflower in the 1994 season, through Sept. 1.

Measurement must be taken from soil level to the base of the head where the stem attaches to the flower.

Participants must submit entries as follows, postmarked by 5 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 1: On a plain piece of paper, clearly print or type your name and address, your telephone number (including area code), and the best time of day to call if we wish to measure your entry and/or take photos. Children should include their ages.

It isn't necessary to send a photograph. Please write about your experiences — how you cared for the sunflower, planted seeds, watered and fertilized, and any special comments — with your entry.

All entries must be delivered or mailed to: High Hopes Sunflower Contest, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham 48009. Please don't call to enter.

Judges will contact finalists to verify height. Winners will be announced in the Garden Spot column Thursday, Sept. 15. Decisions of the judges are final.

Employees and families of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers aren't eligible. Entrants must live in Wayne or Oakland county.

TIMELY GARDEN TIPS

■ Small tools designed for children or houseplants are also suitable for container gardening.

■ To keep the garden hose from kinking or cracking at the coupling that fastens the hose to a faucet, tie a piece of clothesline around the spout and the other end to the hose about a foot below the coupling.

■ If you need to move a heavy plant or pot, lay it on the blade of a shovel to lighten the load.

■ Chrysanthemums need to be pinched back for bushy and compact growth.

■ Straw placed under vegetables such as melons and pumpkins will keep them dry and possibly prevent rotting.

■ Keep an eye on the vegetable garden and pick the produce when it is at the peak of flavor.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

In my last column, I discussed hints to help improve your photography and things to keep you out of a jam. Today, I'm going to give you some more tips.

Change your battery once a year even though it appears to be functioning properly. Doing so will make sure you never get stuck in a remote area unable to buy a new battery. Remember, many cameras require a battery to not only work the meter but to operate the camera itself. Select an easy day to remember such as Jan. 1 or your birthday.

When is it safe to hand-hold your camera? Shoot at the shutter speed that comes closest to the focal length of your lens, not slower. For example, with a 135mm telephoto lens, shoot at 1/125 second or faster. With a normal 50mm lens, a shutter speed of 1/60 will do. When you're not able to because your meter is calling for a slower shutter speed, use a tripod.

Don't always use "fast" films. The colors won't be as vivid, the films will be grainier and they'll cost you more when you buy them. The same is true for black and white films. I suggest using the slowest speed film that conditions and lighting will allow. Films with a speed of ASA 100 will suffice for most picture taking opportunities.

Remember to always use the guidelines of good composition to add impact to your shots. Move in close, simplify, watch your backgrounds and learn to use depth-of-field effectively.

Look at photographs! Go to museums, galleries and exhibits. Invest in photography books. Not just "how to" books, but photography picture books. Study closely and carefully the works of other photographers. Doing this will improve your own pictures as well as enhance your personal enjoyment of photography.

Finally, always remember that it is you making the photograph, not the camera. The true lens of the camera is in the mind and heart of the photographer. Sharpen your visual awareness and perception of the world. Get in the frame of mind that you are making photographs, not taking snapshots.

Sunflower contest for kids

Children of all ages are invited to McFarland Florist and Greenhouses to enter — or help judge — the Tallest Sunflower-Funflower Contest Saturday, Aug. 27.

McFarland Florist and Greenhouses is at 28915 Grand River, four blocks east of Middlebelt in Farmington Hills. For more information, call (810) 474-0750.

First prize is the Kid's Discovery Kit, a huge collection of child-sized projects that includes all the materials necessary to make a bug box, nature prints puzzle, sand painting and a worm house, and a hardcover book packed with more than 50 nature projects to fill four seasons of fun.

Just cut the tallest sunflower from your garden and bring it in. The tallest sunflower takes home the prize. The fun starts at 10:30 a.m.

Youngsters who planted sunflower seeds at McFarland's in June are also invited back with their sunflower to measure them up against the competition. In addition to the tallest, prizes will be given for the largest and best-looking sunflowers.

If children don't have a sunflower to enter, don't worry. They can help master gardener Betti Pool judge the entries. Children will also learn to make Nature's Birdfeeder, a natural and homemade way to feed backyard birds.

Exhibition wear the art is

They are artists for whom the human body becomes a frame or a pedestal, a place to display their work. In other words, their art is wearable.

"Fiber-Fashion-Form '94," an exhibit at the Community Arts Gallery at Wayne State University, shows the wide variety of wearable art. Artists from around the country are featured, including 26 from Michigan. The show runs to Sept. 9.

"It's very difficult to define," curator Barbara Altwerger of Farmington Hills said of wearable art. "It's art . . . You have an emotional response to it . . . You look at it more than one way."

Special styles

Among Altwerger's pieces in the show are a jacket made in the Japanese dye method of shibori and a woven jacket with a design that almost looks inlaid. The artist uses a variety of methods in her work, such as stitchery and dyeing. Her favorite material is silk noil, which she calls raw silk ("It's like a cotton").

She has been interested in the art "my whole life," she said.

"It's evolved from sewing to (decorating) sweat shirts . . . to art. I always wanted to be an artist."

Imagination knows no limits with the works in the show. A raincoat by Elizabeth Agius of Farmington Hills features Vogue magazine covers. Through computer manipulation and screening, Victoria Kocewars-Rodrigues of Bloomfield Hills made "Feminine Resources — Pattern for the '90s," a work covered with women's images in sepia tones.

Other area participants are Tracy Gruits of Farmington Hills, Louise Hall of Farmington, JoAnne Bellet of West Bloomfield, Anita Sudakin of Birmingham and Cynthia Wayne-Gaffield of Livonia.

The show is in three parts — the national juried display, a graduate show by Altwerger and the non-juried "The Coat as Art," which features interpretations on the same duster coat by MSDA members.

Increased interest

Wearable art began in the late 1960s and early 1970s as a new form of self-expression, expressing personal identity with all components working in harmony. The artistry of the garment took precedence over fashion dictates of the time.

Urban Jupena of Pinckney, MSDA president and head of the WSU fiber department, sees increased respect for wearable art.

In the five years he has been president, the MSDA has grown from about 20 members to about 150, from all over the state. The group of artists isn't limited to those who only work in fiber.

"We all deal with color, shape . . ." he said.

Especially in these days of mass production, people want handmade, one-of-a-kind items, Jupena said.

Altwerger sees the process of creating wearable art, involving tearing things apart and putting them together to make something new, as similar to life.

Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday-Friday or by appointment. Call (313) 577-2423.

■ SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

For the second consecutive year, Farmington-based Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors gave scholarships to local students enrolled in real estate related courses.

Scholarships ranging from $200 to $500 went to: Amy L. Pulk, Redford; Neil Lokey, Northville; Carol Hainline and Shari Bajorek, both of Livonia; Stacey Cornwell, Farmington; Aashish Shah, Kevin Sturgill and Jennifer Marie Weigard, all of Canton; Christian Pomodoro, Farmington Hills; Jonathan DeKiere, Plymouth, and Roger B. Wilson, Commerce.

Curtis Shinsky, WWOCAR president, said in just two years the number of program applicants and scholarship awards have tripled.

Scholarship recipients, who must be nominated by a WWOCAR member, attended a reception Aug. 4 in Farmington. To select winners, WWOCAR looked at class content, the course's relevancy to the student's curriculum, the nominee's GPA, the course's cost and a student essay.

■ ON SALES TEAM

Molly Macdonald of Bloomfield Hills was promoted to the sales team of The Crossings of Oakland, a Robertson Brothers Group Development in Oakland Township. She's worked in Robertson's main office for two years.

In her new position, she'll concentrate on sales at Bridlewood Village, the development's newest phase of homes.

■ SELLING YOUR OWN

An upcoming real estate seminar may answer some important questions for homeowners thinking about selling their own home.

The session, sponsored by Philip Lang of Red Carpet Keim-Superior Inc. in Lathrup Village, will run 7-9 p.m. Monday, Aug. 22, in the Southfield Public Library's Marcotte Room, 26000 Evergreen, Southfield.

Homeowners will learn proper home-selling procedures and how to avoid mistakes and aggravation during the home-selling process. Lang will discuss the major do's and don'ts of selling on your own and answer homeowner questions. Standard Federal will supply current information about the mortgage market.

Realtor board hones professional edge

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

■ 'Being the largest (Realtor) board in the state, we've always stressed service to our members. Our focus won't change.'

Art Mullen, Jr.
WWOCAR executive VP

The Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors (WWOCAR) is gearing up for a challenge facing Realtor boards around the state Jan. 1.

That's when Board of Choice — a big change for the real estate industry — starts in Michigan. The change won't directly affect home buyers and sellers, but it will save brokers and sales agents hefty dues and application fees paid to local, state and national Realtor associations.

The open board policy allows agents to join any real estate board in Michigan to access (for additional fees) any Multiple Listing Service file in the state. Now, some agents join four or five boards, mainly to get the area's home listings.

Board of Choice starts nationwide in January 1996. At the urging of its membership, Lansing-based Michigan Association of Realtors decided to kick in the open board policy a year earlier.

"Being the largest (Realtor) board in the state, we've always stressed service to our members. Our focus won't change," said Art Mullen Jr., WWOCAR executive vice president and a member of the Michigan Association of Realtors Board of Choice study group.

"We're excited about the change," said Marta Saint-James, director of education for Farmington-based WWOCAR. "We'll still share information and ideas with other boards, but differently. As Lee Iacocca said, 'The competition is good and we have to be better.'"

Saint-James already is beefing up her board's continuing education curriculum, which includes classes for Realtor designations, and specialized courses for attorneys, tax consultants, mortgage lenders, appraisers and other professionals. Last spring, her fair housing awareness seminar drew more than 125 attendees.

Kathleen Redilla, WWOCAR's education marketing administrator, was hired this year to market its more than 125 courses to real estate industry employees. The association also offers legal counsel to members, an on-site print shop and Realtor's store.

"This change means members will have the freedom to decide what board to join based on its service level and what they want to pay," said Dan Dressman, Michigan Association of Realtors executive vice president.

"Some of the charters granted to Realtor boards are based on market areas in existence 50 to 75 years ago. Over the years, market boundaries have changed. Board of Choice will allow natural market areas to be formed," he said.

WWOCAR's charter, granted in 1920, is bounded by Napier Road to the west; Woodward to the east; Van Born and Belleville Street to the south, and the lakes area and 14 Mile to Inkster Road on the north.

Still, their 2,700 members regularly sell homes outside the charter. "(Board of Choice) is a reflection of what's going on in the business world. We'll have a much leaner, meaner, market-driven association that offers better services at a better cost for members. That means a better-educated, more professional Realtor," said Dressman.

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I live on the third floor of a condominium complex in northern Michigan. The people underneath our unit have a big family and, unfortunately, they repeatedly slam doors, doorwalls and the front door so, at times, our unit rattles.

I do not know how to go about telling them so that we won't have any conflicts. The other problem is that they repeatedly have a "gang" there. They are not necessarily rowdy or noisy at night, but over the weekend, they sometimes sleep 17 in their place. Is there a fire law about how many can occupy a dwelling unit at one time?

A. I presume that you live in a condominium complex, but even if you do not, the bylaws of your association should cover issues concerning excessive noise and creating an annoyance to your neighbors.

Even though those clauses are somewhat ambiguous in nature, they are many times enforceable, depending upon the facts of your case.

As to the number of occupants in a unit, there may well be various health and safety hazards in the municipality in which you reside, as well as in the condominium or association bylaws.

Again, sleeping 17 in one unit of 1,100 square feet as you indicated would seem to be, per se, unreasonable. I would have the association write them a letter requesting their cooperation and compliance.

You may also inquire of the municipality as to the fire laws. Sitting back and doing nothing may result in the problem getting worse.

Q. We live in a homeowners association in a rural area where there is a deed restriction restricting the use of the property to residential purposes of one family.

One of the association members wants to open a bed and breakfast. Is that, in your opinion, a violation of the restriction? The people who own the home plan to operate the bed and breakfast while they are using the property as their primary residence.

A. Assuming the deed restriction is unambiguous, it would be my opinion that the restriction would preclude the home's use as a bed and breakfast, since it was presumably the intent of the covenant to prohibit use other than for a single-family residence.

Obviously, operating a bed and breakfast creates more than a single-family residence and the association should consider its legal alternatives, including injunctive relief.

Carriage Park moves into Phase II

A residential construction company that has built a 30-year reputation in Washtenaw County is about to embark on the second phase of a condominium development in Canton.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Bob Guenther, a second-generation builder/developer in Ann Arbor, has come east to Canton.

He's about to start his second phase at Carriage Park, 28 two-story condominiums off Canton Center Road just south of Ford. Only a couple units remain from the initial phase of 59 where the first resident moved in nearly two years ago.

"We've never built in this area before," Guenther said. "We came out here looking at what other builders were doing.

"Canton in the last three years is a hot area where people want to live," he added. "Canton is very desirable. It has a great school system. It's on the fringe of the metro area. You've got great freeway access regardless of where you want to go.

All of the units also will have a fireplace, air conditioning, first-floor laundry, cathedral ceilings, upper-level bridge, two-car garage, basement, patio, plus range, dishwasher, and double sink in the kitchen.

The Bradley, nearly 1,600 square feet, has a larger dining room, a separate eating nook in the kitchen and both bedrooms upstairs.

The Dartmore, 1,700 square feet, has the master suite on the main level and the second bedroom upstairs.

The master suite in both the Bradley and Dartmore contain separate tub and shower.

Units in the second phase will be clustered in groups of six or four to a building.

"We get quite a nice cross section of people," Guenther said. "About half are young people whether married or single. The other half are people who aren't retired, but are near retirement and getting ready to retire.

"Young people, for the most part, are first-time buyers," Guenther said. "We have some children, but very few children. The older buyers now have a larger home, the kids are grown and they're moving to this."

The Dartmore, with the master on the main floor, is especially requested by the older crowd who want to minimize up-and-down the steps, Guenther said.

Buyers have a choice between ceramic and wood flooring in the foyer. Popular upgrades include ceiling fan, furnace humidifier, cabinets and carpeting.

"Size for the money, open floor plan, two-car garage that's attached, again, in this price range, the fact there's 2 baths, they can move in for the price quoted, those are the high points," said Karen Townsend, sales representative at the site.

The property tax rate for a residence in Canton within the boundaries of the Plymouth-Canton Schools is about $31 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value.

That means the owner of a $124,000 condo in Carriage Park would pay about $1,900 per year for township, county and school services.

Mary and Richard Gray moved into Carriage Park from an apartment. Mary thought she wanted to live in a ranch, but everything she saw looked like an apartment, she said. So they settled on a two-story condo.

■ 'Canton in the last three years is a hot area where people want to live.'
Bob Guenther

"We felt what we were getting for the money was worth it, plus what it came with - things like wood, Anderson windows, double-car attached garage," she said. "I liked the kitchen layout. Rooms are good size. The master had good room in there."

The first-floor laundry room also made a big impression, Mary added.

Jan LaPierre said she sold her house overlooking Carriage Park because she didn't want to see condos from her back yard. Ironically, she ended up buying in Carriage Park.

"It was pretty. It just looked kind of classy. It's a nice appearance when you come in," LaPierre said. "I wanted to stay in Canton. This was the most condo for the money.

"Workmanship was great," she added. "They took care of everthing that was a problem."

The sales office at Carriage Park (981-9420) is open 1-6 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, 1-5 p.m. Friday and noon-5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, closed Thursday.

13 model houses on display Sept. 1

Houses with steel frames, energy-efficient features and golf-course living will be displayed next month during Homearama '94, a showcase of idea houses sponsored by the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Thirteen models, each created by their own teams of architects, designers, builders and landscapers in Brentwood Subdivision of White Lake Township, will be open to the public Sept. 1-18.

Hours are 3-10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, noon-10:30 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Labor Day. Admission is $6 per person and includes a plan book and parking.

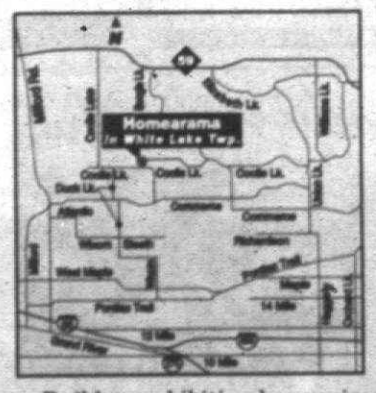
"Whether or not you're in a market for a new home, this is a rewarding event to attend and gather an assortment of novel home improvement and decorating ideas," said Robert R. Jones, BASM president and a West Bloomfield builder.

"Our builders enjoy this opportunity to showcase their unique skills to the public during Homearama," Jones added. "A healthy spirit of competitiveness among them spurs them on to new heights in home innovations and conveniences."



Builders exhibiting houses include Brentwood Farms Development, West Bloomfield; Hughes Management Group, Farmington; Norman Marcus Group, West Bloomfield; and McGrath Construction, Commerce Township.

The houses incorporate the latest features in style, living convenience and construction. Models range in price from $250,000 to $325,000 and in size from 2,300 to 2,900 square feet.

Visitors Sept. 3-5 will have the opportunity to vote for their favorite model, the Peoples' Choice Award.

Try electronic mail — it's easy

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

E-mail is popular because the user can send messages to others throughout the nation and world — free of charge. It is extremely fast, arriving at its destination within minutes, usually within seconds. And delivery is guaranteed. If the mail does not arrive, the sender gets a message that the attempt to mail "failed." If the user does not received a "failed" message, he knows the message was received.

E-mail is especially popular for parents and grandparents to communicate with sons and daughters, grandsons, grand-daughters. O&E On-Line has several grandparents and even more parents who signed up for the Internet service so they could communicate via e-mail with family members. Businesses also love e-mail via the Internet because it provides a quick, secure means of communicating with offices in other cities, states, and nations. One of O&E Online's business customers uses the Internet to send e-mail messages to employees in seven branch offices in metro Detroit.

O&E On-Line has a very powerful "Post Office" called "Pine" that handles e-mail for the user. Pine is one of the most popular e-mail softwares for use on the Internet. When you sign onto O&E Online and go to the main menu, type "M" for "Mail" to access Pine.

One handy feature is its Address Book which collects e-mail addresses and automatically posts them onto the outgoing message to ensure the correct e-mail address is used. Some e-mail addresses are long and must be typed exactly to be sent. With Pine, you need type the correct address only once.

At the Pine Main Menu, to enter a new address type "A" for "Address Book." Tell Pine you want to add an address by typing "A" again, this time for "add." Pine will ask for the person's full name — last name, then first name. Hit RETURN. Pine will ask you for a nickname so when you address a message in the future you need only type that nickname, not the entire address. I entered my own e-mail address, using the nickname "self." (Sometimes you will want to test delivery by sending yourself a message).

After inputting a nickname Pine will ask for the e-mail address. Enter it. Pine saves the address in an alphabetical list in the address book. To start building your Address Book, enter "emory@oeonline" and use "emory" as a nickname to input my e-mail address in your Address Book. Easy, right?

Now type "M" to return to Pine Main Menu. Sending an e-mail message is as easy as typing "C" for "Compose a Message." Do it by typing "C" now. To the right of "To:" type the nickname "emory" and type RETURN (or ENTER). My e-mail address appears. By "From:" type your real name and hit RETURN. For now skip "attach" and "CC" by hitting RETURN twice until the cursor ends up flashing in the "message area." Type me a message, something like, "I love the O&E Online with full Internet access because it makes sending e-mail so easy and so much fun."

To send your message, select Control X. When the message "Do you wish to send now?" appears, answer "yes." Within seconds your message will be in my mail-box. That's it! To assure you arrived, I will send a brief (and polite) response.

When you first access the Pine Main Menu, Pine flashes at you a message telling how many messages you have from others waiting to be read. To view any read or unread message, type "I" and a listing of messages appears. Move the up and down arrow keys to select whatever message you wish to read or re-read. Then hit RETURN and that message appears on your screen.

A final note today on e-mail. The addressing construction method used by O&E On-Line is to begin with the user's first name (emory) or nickname, then the at (@) sign, followed by "oeonline" (without the quotes) and finally ".com". The ".com" extension is used because we are a commercial site. Other common mail extensions are ".edu" for educational institutions and ".gov" for governmental institutions.

You now have mastered some of the basics of e-mail. Pine does has many other features, some quite advanced. We'll look at those options next week.

Direct questions or comments to Emory Daniels by e-mail at emory@oeonline.com, at voice mail at 953-2047 then dial 1910, or fax number 591-7279. To sign up for O&E On-Line, dial (313)591-0903 or (810)901-4711, at "log-in" prompt enter "new" and at "key" prompt enter GL6NY2.

Turnaround expert takes TWA post

By Doug Funke
Staff Writer

Robert A. Peiser

Robert A. Peiser, a Bloomfield Hills resident who's had two previous employment stints with TWA, has joined the airline a third time as executive vice president and chief financial officer.

Peiser, 46, said he plans to maintain his residency here and commute to St. Louis where the publicly owned, financially troubled airline is headquartered.

"This is an opportunity to go back to a company I've been involved with my whole life," Peiser said. "It's an emotional attraction as much as anything else."

TWA, which emerged from Chapter 11 (reorganizing) bankruptcy proceedings last November, reported an operating loss for the year of $281.2 million on sales of $3.1 billion.

Operating losses each of the previous three years starting with 1992 were $404.6 million, $353.5 million and $162 million, the company reported.

The most recent operating profit, $24.3 million, occurred in 1989.

"A primary role of mine is to restructure debt," Peiser said. "Another role is effective cost savings to the company. We're in the middle of negotiating with three unions now. We expect to get additional savings."

Peiser said he worked on leasing and pension matters during his first tour of duty with TWA after earning an MBA from Harvard in 1972. He left to become treasurer at Hertz.

Peiser was chief financial officer during his second five-year hitch starting in 1982. He said he departed the second time because he didn't feel comfortable working with new ownership.

He also has served as chief financial officer with Allnet Communication, a long-distance telephone network in Birmingham, and Borman's, the Farmer Jack supermarket chain.

Peiser also served as president and CFO of Orange-Co., a Florida-based, juice-processing firm. There, he engineered a financial turnaround from a $15 million loss to a $12 million profit.

"I'm attracted to challenges," Peiser said. "There's a total new management team here now. The president's new. I am new, the marketing guy, counsel, the planning guy. I am nothing short of astounded by the degree of cooperation between employees and management."

The company's 25,000 employees now own about 45 percent of the stock for past compensation concessions, Peiser said. The stock is traded on the American Stock Exchange.

"We look forward to the contributions Bob Peiser will make as a member of our new management," said Jeffrey H. Erickson, TWA's president and chief executive officer.

"He brings a unique combination of a 10-year history at TWA and considerable management experience outside the airline industry. His exemplary record at bringing financial stability to companies speaks for itself."

Peiser is married to Kathleen and father to Karyn, Brian, Craig and Scott.

■ CHARITY GOLF SHOOT

Pulte Homes of Michigan, headquartered in Royal Oak, offers golfers a chance to win a $200,000 house in a hole-in-one shoot out for Ronald McDonald Children's Charities.

Willow Creek Golf and Sports Center, on Lapeer Road in Orion Township about two miles north of the Palace of Auburn Hills, will host qualifying shots (three for $5) 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily through Saturday, Aug. 20. The five closest to the pin shooters daily will compete Sunday for a $1 million cash prize and the house.

Competitors must shoot an ace the day of the final to win either the million dollars or the house. The golfer with the shot closest to the pin Aug. 21 if no one records an ace will win a Jeep Wrangler.

For additional information, call (810) 391-6156.

■ LIFE POLICIES SOLD

Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. of America, headquartered in Farmington Hills, has sold off its entire whole life business — some 24,000 policies with a face insurance value of $880 million — to Franklin Life of Springfield, Ill.

Those policy owners will continue to pay the same premiums and retain coverage for the stated amounts, said Jim Ponder, director of marketing for Alexander Hamilton.

"These were older, whole life policies . . . and some term policies . . . from 30 to as little as eight years old," Ponder said.

"In recent years, we were kind of breaking even on these policies. They were a service drain. We didn't have critical mass, enough policies. That led to the decision to sell to a company in that (whole life) line of business," he said.

■ ADVERTISING CLIENT

Bannister and Co. of Birmingham, a marketing communications firm, has been hired by Binson's Hospital Supplies, a durable medical equipment company, to handle advertising and public relations.
