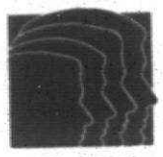
Handicappers protest parking



A group of western Wayne County handicapped advocates took aim at a parking dispute in Canton last week. A group of people in wheelchairs blocked parking spots used by non-handicapped people.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Ray Kreach says he just wants able-bodied people to stop parking in handicap spaces.

"There are a lot of wheelchair users out there," said the Canton resident, who brought attention to the issue beginning two weeks ago when he blocked in an able-bodied driver who parked in a handicap space at the Crackerbarrel party store, 41741 Ford Road.

"I don't care if they go in and get a load of groceries and don't want to park way down. Let them park in the fire lane and worry about getting a ticket," said Kreach, who is a quadriplegic.

Members of ADAPT — American Disabled for Attendant Programs Today — came to Kreach's support Friday and blocked in other able-bodied drivers at Crackerbarrel who had parked in designated handicap spaces. Members also picketed the store whose owner and staff they believe to be unfriendly and discriminatory toward disabled people.

"Ray was fighting for his rights," said Scott Heinzman, ADAPT western Wayne County coordinator. "We had two goals: to draw attention to illegal parking and to demonstrate because we feel this store owner is unfriendly to people with disabilities."

Nathan Jarbou, manager of the Crackerbarrel, said the store's owner and staff are not unsympathetic to disabled customers. "I don't want them to say we aren't treating them good," Jarbou said. "If we didn't care we wouldn't have put two handicap spaces in and a ramp right there. We have nothing against handicapped people. But we can't control the parking lot. They know we can't."

Model airplanes take to the skies

There's a group of pilots from Canton, Plymouth and Northville who soar with the eagles, but never leave the ground.

They're the Northville Radio Control Society. The group will be flying high on Saturday and Sunday during the Second Annual Big Bird Fly-In on Five Mile west of Ridge Road in Northville.

More than 100 pilots and their aircraft are expected at the event which starts at 10 a.m. both days and runs until 4 p.m.

"The event will feature two days of giant model aircraft flight demonstrations by local club members as well as pilots from all over Michigan, surrounding states and Canada," said Ed Douville of Northville, a club member.

He said that flight activities will be continuous, with up to three aircraft in the air at one time.

"Special attractions will include model aerobatic demonstrations by nationally known pilots, helicopter aerobatics and a special demonstration of electric powered models by Keith Shaw of Ann Arbor," said Douville.

Shaw is an internationally recognized authority and leader in electric technology development for model aircraft, said Douville. He said Shaw is a leader in electric technology development for model aircraft.

Police investigate suspicious death of man

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Police are investigating the suspicious death of a 53-year-old Canton man Monday.

"Right now we have a death of a suspicious nature," said Canton Police Capt. Alex Wilson. "What leads us to believe this is there is no evidence of any trauma: no blunt force, no stabbing, no gunshot. But we have other evidence to believe the death is suspicious."

The Wayne County Medical Examiner was expected to complete an autopsy on Xavier Q. Branson Tuesday. Branson lived on Cambridge in the Village Squire Apartments, just north of Ford, east of I-275. "That will answer a lot of questions for us," said Wilson about the autopsy results.

A sergeant with the state Department of Natural Resources' Livonia office contacted Canton police requesting that they check on Branson, who had not reported to work. The sergeant also told Canton police that Branson's sister in Lansing had received a call from an unidentified man in Detroit who said that he had found her brother's wallet and that his car had been stolen.

When police went to the apartment Monday afternoon to check on Branson, a DNR employee, they found the front door closed but unlocked. They found Branson's nude body face down on a bed in a back bedroom of the apartment. Branson's feet were tied

Building projects help balance general fund

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

The amount of building in Canton Township is helping balance the general fund.

"The general fund is basically balanced," said Canton Supervisor Tom Yack.

The police and fire funds are another matter. "In my opinion they (millage rates) will go up," he said.

In mid-August township officials set maximum tax rates for 1995. The tax rate that supports the general fund was set at a maximum 1.11 mills, which is the current level.

The fire special assessment millage maximum limit for 1995 is 3.09 mills. The current rate is 2.94 mills. The police special assessment millage maximum limit is 5.15 mills. The current rate is 4.96 mills.

"Is it possible to reduce the general fund? We're looking at total taxing," Yack said, adding that township administrators continue working on the budgets. "It is my philosophy — other individuals would not agree that the police fund should support its services. If the general fund supports police you get a distorted view of how much money the (police) service costs."

The proposed general fund is based on the current and maximum 1.11 mills.

A public hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 13, to disucss the maximum limits — township officials could decide to set lesser rates — as well as the proposed 1995 budgets.

The hearing will include a Truth-In-Taxation hearing on the charter millage. Public Act 5 requires a public hearing when a mill generates more in revenue because of increased property values.

Jarbou believes Friday's picketing and ADAPT members in wheelchairs blocking in able-bodied drivers began when he wouldn't sell Kreach beer two weeks before. Kreach and other ADAPT members say they are trying to draw attention to obstacles — such as able-bodied people parking in handicap spots — they encounter.

Two weeks ago Kreach and his 14-year-old son stopped at Crackerbarrel. Jarbou wouldn't sell the 14-year-old beer for his father. Kreach and Jarbou have a different recollection of what happened at that point.

Kreach said the store employee brought beer out for him but refused to sell it to him when he realized that Kreach had previously blocked in a customer parked illegally in a handicap space. The driver backed into Kreach's van.

"He then came up with all this (anti-) handicapped stuff," Kreach said. "He said, 'You handicapped people don't belong here. You're too much trouble.'"

Jarbou said he was never rude to his disabled customers. He recalls a disabled man asking for beer and wanting for it to be brought to his van. "We can't sell beer outside the store."

Kreach said he went back to Crackerbarrel later and blocked in another able-bodied customer in the handicap parking space. Kreach had angry words with the customer who parked in the designated space. Kreach said he was upset because at one point store staff helped the driver get away. Police were called. The driver was ticketed and Kreach received a trespassing ticket. Kreach acknowledged he was behaving angrily. Police also gave him a Breathalyzer test, which he passed.

"We kind of stacked the deck to make it attractive to people to park illegally," Heinzman said of ADAPT members who blocked in able-bodied drivers with their wheelchairs Friday.

In one incident Friday, a driver, who was ticketed for illegally parking in a handicapped spot, backed up and knocked over two people in their wheelchairs. The disabled people were given trespassing tickets. Another customer also was ticketed for illegal parking.

"As I told them, we don't make a determination on whether he should be charged (for backing into the disabled people). We'll send it to the prosecutor and he'll make the determination," said Canton police officer Davey LeBlanc, who added that the driver said he was backing up his vehicle when the two people got behind him.

Canton police Capt. Alex Wilson said the department doesn't get a lot of calls about people parking illegally in handicap spaces. "If we were to get someone to complain, we would send a car out there," he said. Otherwise, tickets are issued when patrolling officers notice someone illegally parked. A $75 fine accompanies the ticket.

Couple dies in crash with truck

A Westland couple was killed Wednesday in Canton and their two daughters injured when the car the family was riding in was struck by a Canton Fire Department rescue vehicle.

The fire department vehicle was responding to a report of a person injured in an assault, and was headed north on Canton Center Road at 12:06 a.m. when the incident happened, Canton fire Chief Michael Rorabacher said. Two firefighters were injured.

The crash occurred at the intersection of Warren Road when the truck struck a car headed east on Warren, carrying the Westland family. Killed were a man, 44, and his wife, 36.

A 16-year-old daughter sustained leg injuries and a 12-year-old daughter suffered minor injuries in the crash, police said. The older daughter was taken by helicopter to St. Joseph Hospital for treatment, and the younger girl was taken to St. Joseph Hospital.

The firefighter driving the rescue vehicle sustained a head injury and was in good condition at St. Joseph Hospital. The other firefighter in the vehicle was treated and released for minor leg injuries.

In keeping with Canton police policy, the Michigan State Police are investigating the accident. Their preliminary investigation suggests the driver of the car disregarded a flashing red traffic signal at the Warren-Canton Center intersection, according to the Canton fire department.

together with a necktie.

Although the apartment appeared messy, it didn't appear to have been ransacked, according to the police report. The television reportedly had been left on, as well as the VCR with an ejected tape.

Evidence technicians and detectives were called to the scene to collect evidence and begin the investigation.

"In interviewing neighbors, they said he pretty much stayed to himself. Occasionally he had friends over," Wilson said, adding that Branson may have had someone staying there for the past two weeks.

Branson's 1987 Chevrolet Caprice and wallet are missing. The car is now listed as stolen. Wilson said police plan to interview a number of people, including the unidentified Detroit man who called Branson's sister.

"We would like to talk to that guy," Wilson said.

Picketers likely to return to store

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Scott Heinzman and his colleagues will likely return to picket a Canton party store.

"We are seriously considering picketing that store on a weekly basis," said Heinzman, western Wayne County coordinator of ADAPT — American Disabled for Attendance Programs Today. "I want to make an appointment with the chamber of commerce to address the business community at large. We try to resolve our problems through the proper channels."

Heizman and other ADAPT members picketed the Crackerbarrel party store, 41741 Ford Road, Friday, two weeks after Canton resident Ray Kreach, who is a quadriplegic, blocked in an able-bodied driver parked in a handicap spot in the parking lot. Kreach and store manager Nathan Jarbou also had a disagreement over the sale of beer.

Heinzman said ADAPT members picketed because they didn't like the attitude displayed by the Crackerbarrel staff toward Kreach, including helping able-bodied drivers in handicap spaces get away before police arrived.

But Crackerbarrel manager Nathan Jarbou denies store staff treat disabled people badly. Jarbou admits he doesn't want trouble for any of his customers. Though he can't patrol the parking lot consistently, Jarbou said the staff takes a peek when business is slow.

"I tried to stress to this gentleman I can't be out there all the time," Jarbou said. "We do help these people (with disabilities)."

Heinzman said ADAPT, which serves as an advocate for people with disabilities, wants to show the type of obstacles they face daily.

"There is a perception in society that those with disabilities are seeking special privileges as with the parking spaces. That couldn't be farther from the truth," said the Livonia resident. "People are resentful about those parking spaces. Either they think they aren't needed at all or we who use them aren't that handicapped."

Having a disability is not a privilege. "We see these things such as special spaces and ramps as providing an equal access. We need these things to support a level playing field for us."

Heinzman asked that able-bodied residents keep in mind that not only do disabled people generally need assistance in their homes, which is expensive, but with transportation and employment as well.

"I don't think people realize to what extent these obstacles exist," Heinzman said. For example, Heinzman doesn't drive, yet public transportation is costly, as is health care. "What employer would give me health insurance?"

Heinzman said ADAPT members also supported Kreach because he felt he had been treated badly by Crackerbarrel staff and by the able-bodied drivers in the store parking lot.

"That level of rejection by mainstream society inhibits us. These obstacles make it difficult for us to get into mainstream society," Heinzman said.

On a national level, ADAPT is working to re-direct a portion of Medicaid payments traditionally used to institutionalize disabled people to allowing them to live in a home environment, Heinzman said.

"Locally, we do anything to improve the quality of life," he added.

Artists find this project a rewarding one

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

■ The greeting cards will feature Canton's familiar historic structures, including the Canton Historical Museum on Canton Center Road, the Bartlett-Travis House and a barn on Canton Center, north of Palmer.

Historic buildings in Canton will be forever remembered when Canton senior artists finish their summer project.

"We were looking for something to do while our art class was out for the summer," said Ralph Kelley who came up with the idea of capturing the historic buildings on paper in pen and ink.

The black-and-white drawings will take two forms. Larger drawings will be matted thanks to the donation of matting by Frameworks on Ford Road. The nine artists also are producing 3-by-5 greeting cards of the approximately 30 scenes, which include historic houses, barns and some items in the Canton Historical Museum.

The greeting cards, which will be printed on ivory-colored stock with matching envelopes, will be sold with proceeds to be used for Canton senior programming. The cards will be blank inside.

"Aren't we lucky to be the beneficiaries of their art," said Dianne Neihengen, Canton Senior Citizens coordinator.

Work on the drawings began in May not long after art classes taught by Sharon Dillenbeck at the senior center on Sheldon and Michigan Avenue were out for the summer. The plan is have the greeting cards ready for sale sometime in October.

"It was something new for us to do," said Ruth Warnemuende, who has painted her own greeting cards in the past.

The greeting cards will feature Canton's familiar historic structures, including the Canton Historical Museum on Canton Center Road, the Bartlett-Travis House now under restoration on Ridge Road, a Queen Anne-style house on Ridge, and a barn on Canton Center, north of Palmer.

Senior artists involved in the project include Kelley, Warnemuende, Dorothy West, Bill Smith, Phyllis Price, Chet Lebioda, Marion Marzion, Louise Bonczak and Jo Hilla.

"We get these ideas from coming to class," said Warnemuende, adding that Dillenbeck has shown the senior students how to complete certain projects, such as greeting cards. "People like to get hand-painted cards."

Kelley, for example, has drawn the Bartlett-Travis House and will give it to the Canton Historic District Commission. "They are going to use it in their publicity. I did a drawing of what the Travis house looked like then (in its own era)."

Well-known local historian and artist Dorothy West is drawing the store — turned into a bungalow — on the corner of Cherry Hill and Ridge owned by her father-in-law. "It was in the West family until eight years ago," said West who like other artists with the project is working from a photograph.

West is including in the drawing her late in-laws, Louise West and William Henry West who are in the photograph. In 1917 the family bought a nearby inn.

Jo Hilla is working on the drawing of the old barn at Palmer and Canton Center roads, as well as a drawing for herself of her old family house in Detroit. "We have fun with each other here," Hilla said of her artistic colleagues at the senior center. "We encourage people to visit us while we're working."

Youth hockey demand puts pressure on ice time

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

The rising popularity of youth hockey is outpacing the available ice time local and area rinks have for kids who want to play.

This was evidenced last week when 90 people were in line Saturday morning at the Plymouth Cultural Center — just to put their kids on a waiting list for membership in the Plymouth Hockey Association.

The hockey association has about 400 youths on teams and 150 in an instructional program where hockey skills are taught, and nearly 70 percent are Plymouth and Canton residents.

Some parents were waiting outside the rink at the cultural center as early as Thursday evening to get their kids on the waiting list.

Plymouth Hockey Association vice president Jim Nagel said getting available ice time is a problem around metro Detroit, as there aren't enough rinks to meet the demand.

Of those who went on the waiting list Saturday, Nagel said, "We could have taken every one of those kids if we had ice."

But the association has lost some ice time at rinks outside the city. Nagel said he's noticing a trend by which communities with ice rinks are moving to serve serve residents first, and cutting ice time for non-residents.

"We had nine hours of ice time in Grosse Pointe per week — They wanted to give it to their local association," Nagel said, adding no ice time is available at Livonia's rinks.

He and some parents say the Plymouth Cultural Center, which also provides ice time to South Lyon High School and Eastern Michigan University for practices and games, could choose to serve local kids first.

"They guarantee us 25 hours per week," Nagel said, adding that if there was more ice time, more Plymouth and Canton kids could be signed up to play on teams.

Tom Willette, city parks and recreation director, said that while contracts with outside groups will be honored through the hockey season, he and City Manager Steve Walters are discussing cutting back on outside groups' ice time.

"For a while our policy has been: They can keep their ice time until they give it up," Willette said.

Interest in hockey and ice skating tends to be cyclical, he said, adding former parks and recreation director Chuck Skene sought out South Lyon High and EMU in past years to fill ice time.

"I understand where the hockey association is coming from," Willette said. "Three or four years from now the hockey association's numbers are probably going to be down and they'll want to turn ice time back to us; that's the problem," he said.

Still, Willette said, "I wouldn't be surprised if you see Eastern and South Lyon out of here next year."

Meanwhile, parents say they'd like to see Canton build an ice rink at its new community center, Summit on the Park, but none is planned.

Canton Supervisor Tom Yack said the township hasn't considered building one for two reasons.

"Hockey and figure skating are cyclical; they go up and down in interest. We now have one ice surface in the area that is doing OK; if we had to build one, we could probably have two rinks, neither of them doing very well," Yack said.

"I've only been approached two or three times with a comment, 'We need to have ice at the Summit,'" Yack said. "There doesn't appear to be an organized interest group — They haven't indicated they exist."

The general fund is expected to total about $9 million with a fund balance or savings reserve of $3.5 million. The occasional sale of township property keeps the fund balance on an even keel, Yack said.

Changes reflected in the general fund include a reorganization in municipal services, which includes the elimination of two positions and the addition of two positions, one at a higher salary.

"This reflects the amount of activity Canton has seen over the last few years," Yack said. A change in engineering department personnel is planned because someone is needed to manage the number of consultants used.

"The way we staff engineering we don't do many in-house projects," Yack said.

With an increase of households in Canton, rubbish costs will increase because of additional stops. "The dollars per stop is fixed for three years," Yack said.

In recreation, a clerk typist will be added, as well as positions for the Summit on the Park and Pheasant Run Golf Course. But Yack said the community center and golf course operations should pay for the new employees.

In public safety, millage rates are likely to be raised to cover expenses — not to bolster the negligible fund balances, Yack said.

Public Safety Director John Santomauro has proposed hiring an additional three officers — two for patrol, one for investigation. Salaries and fringes comprise a lot of the expenses in police and fire. "Everything else is really nickel and dimes," Yack said.

The fire fund faces similar salary increases, based on contracts, plus about $128,700 in capital costs, such as a fire inspection vehicle, command vehicle and turnout gear. The police fund's capital costs are expected to increase by only $25,000, including buying a mobile data terminal.

Police seeking witness information

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER
STAFF WRITER

Livonia police are seeking additional witnesses to last week's armed rampage that ended with the arrests of three Indiana residents early Sunday in Cleveland.

Police believe the suspects — two men and a woman — went on a 16-day, five-state rampage that tore through Livonia Thursday-Friday. The spree came to an abrupt halt after a robbery and shooting Saturday night in an Eastlake, Ohio, adult bookstore.

Police chased the suspects to Cleveland, where they crashed a 1989 Pontiac Sunbird reported stolen from a Livonia couple early Friday.

"It was pretty wild. Usually you only see something like this every seven or eight years," said Livonia police detective Lt. Pete Kunst.

Livonia police and Wayne County prosecutors will seek warrants against the suspects, probably after indictment proceedings by an Ohio grand jury, Kunst said.

Named in state and federal warrants in connection with armed robberies, carjackings and two bank robberies in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio were:

Frederick J. Treesh, 30, of Waterloo, Ind.; Keisha Harth, 29, of Waterloo; and Benjamin H. Brooks, 27, of New Haven, Ind.

Police believe the crime spree started Aug. 12 with a bank robbery in Delavan, Wis. A hand grenade, similar to one used in that robbery, was found early Friday with other items tossed out of a car traveling south on I-275 in Livonia, witnesses said.

The three could face the death penalty in Ohio, where a security guard was shot and killed.

Two Livonia detectives interviewed the suspects Monday in Cleveland, Kunst said.

Livonia investigators are particularly interested in talking to an unidentified woman who picked up two men, believed to be Treesh and Brooks, on Eight Mile in Southfield early Friday and gave them a lift back to their Livonia motel.

"It's very important for us to speak to this woman," Kunst said Monday.

Police believe the suspects needed the lift after dumping a stolen Mercedes Benz on a nearby residential street. That car, stolen Aug. 25 in Sawyer, Mich., is believed to be the getaway vehicle in the Thursday-night robbery and shooting at Best Video on Grand River at Eight Mile.

Store owner Ghassan Danno, 39, of Sterling Heights, died Saturday from multiple gunshot wounds suffered during the robbery.

Co-owner and brother Frank Danno, 36, of Southfield, also shot during the robbery, was listed in satisfactory condition Monday in Botsford Hospital.

The black, pregnant woman, driving a silver car, dropped two men off near the Royal Motor Inn, 27751 Plymouth.

Moments later, a lone gunman robbed the Plymouth Motel at the corner of Deering, about two blocks west of the Royal Motor Inn.

After that robbery, two men and a woman forced their way into the Arcola Street home of Frank and Janet Bushaw, tied and beat the couple and stole their car, police said.

Livonia police are also seeking a stripper reportedly called to the Royal Motor Inn on Thursday.

Anyone with information about either witness is asked to call Livonia police at 421-2900.

Labor Day weekend Road work suspended for Drivers will see fewer barrels and barricades on state highways during the Labor Day holiday despite the biggest road construction season in history, the Michigan Department of Transportation says.

M-DOT Director Patrick Nowak said he is suspending all road and bridge construction on state highways except emergency work, detours and construction areas where barriers cannot be conveniently removed.

"This year we are joining with the State Safety Commission's 'Drive Michigan Safely' campaign to help make summer's finale weekend safe and pleasant," said Nowak.

Record numbers of travelers are expected to log a record 990 million vehicle miles from noon Friday, Sept. 2, through noon Tuesday, Sept. 6, MDOT said. That's about 1.5 percent higher than the previous record set in 1993.

Here are a few areas where traffic still may be slowed over the holiday:

■ Metro Detroit — In Oakland County, the right lane of eastbound and westbound I-96 is closed at the Milford interchange. In addition, the eastbound I-96 exit ramp to Milford Road is closed with a detour at Kent Lake Road.

In Detroit, all lanes of northbound I-75 are closed and detoured to the northbound Lodge Freeway, to eastbound I-94, then back to northbound I-75.

Southbound lanes of I-75 are closed from Holbrook to Jefferson and southbound traffic is shifted to the northbound I-75 lanes. Seek alternate routes if possible. Watch for posted detours.

■ Monroe County — Traffic on US-24 (Telegraph Road) is detoured to I-275 during reconstruction of two bridges over Swan Creek and Little Swan Creek south of Flat River. The detour adds about 2.5 miles.

■ Saginaw area — Traffic on M-46 over the Tittabawassee River is restricted to one lane in each direction.

■ Flint area — At Bishop Airport, M-121 (Bristol Road) is closed west of the airport and east of I-69. Motorists should take I-69 to southbound I-75 and exit at Bristol Road.

■ Southwest Michigan — I-94 is restricted to one lane in each direction for 7.9 miles from Watervliet to Hartford. Near Battle Creek, eastbound I-94 is reduced to one lane at the bridge at F Drive.

■ Lansing area — Traffic on I-96 is restricted to one lane in each direction between the I-496 and US-127 interchange and Lansing Road. Take I-496 through downtown Lansing to avoid potential slowdowns.

Student tunes up in summer

Many teen-agers spend their summers at the beach, flipping hamburgers, or hanging out at the mall.

However, Jason Berckley, 18, of Plymouth, is doing something different. Berckley, the son of George and Deborah Hoadley, is spending his summer studying the saxophone at Interlochen Arts Camp near Traverse City.

Berckley, who plays tenor and soprano saxophone, performs with the High School Symphonic Band (HSSB).

He is also a part of the World Youth Saxophone Quartet, which includes the top four saxophone players from HSSB.

The quartet is like a regular class for its members. They rehearse from 10 to 11 a.m. each day, and during whatever free time they have when they are not practicing for band. "If I'm not eating or sleeping, I'm practicing," Berckley said.

They have played 14 shows on campus this summer, including "slumber music." This is where they play outside the campers' cabins shortly after their "lights out" call at 10 p.m.

Berckley recently graduated from Plymouth Canton High School and will attend the University of Michigan this fall. He said he has learned a lot during his time at Interlochen.

"Being away from the city really gives you time to think. You learn a lot about other people and cultures," he said.

This is Berckley's first summer as a camper at Interlochen.

"My mom died with us, at home..."

"It was so comforting to know that when Mom's time came, we would call Joan, our Arbor Hospice nurse, and she would come and handle everything. On Mom's last day, my daughter played the guitar and I sang... it was such a beautiful moment."
— Eleanor Gonda

Kelley neglects crime, opponent says

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Attorney General Frank Kelley's election-year habit of beating up on business is turning into a campaign issue.

Kelley, due to seek reelection this year, Monday staged a series of news conferences across Michigan to denounce overcharging by retailers, especially Kmart and Econo Foods. He threatened legal action.

John Smietanka, whom Republicans nominated last weekend to challenge Kelley Nov. 8, said the Democratic incumbent has his priorities mixed up.

"Remember 33, 270 and three," said Smietanka. "The first is the number of years Kelley has been in office. He has 270 attorneys as assistants. Only three are assigned to fight crime."

Smietanka, a former Berrien County prosecutor and U.S. district attorney, told the GOP convention that Kelley has ignored organized crime, street gangs and fraud cases, saying they are more threatening to the public than faulty price scanners in stores.

Kelley replied that local prosecutors handle the violent crimes Smietanka was talking about.

Meanwhile, a former aide to Gov. James Blanchard joined the chorus of criticism of Kelley's forays. Larry Meyer, ex-director of the Commerce Department and now chief executive of the Michigan Retailers Association, called the state's item pricing law outdated and flawed.

"The retail industry continues to support reopening the antiquated law. It's time to bring it into the 20th century and enable consumers to take advantage of the benefits of modern technology," Meyer said.

"But we need legislative changes, not press conferences," said Meyer, adding that last May he welcomed Kelley's call to reopen the law during a series of similar news conferences.

Meyer did not indicate what the 4,000-member MRA meant by "reforms."

Kelley said his investigators checked back-to-school prices in 23 stores and found 8.7 percent of scanner prices were inaccurate. The overwhelming majority of errors were high and only a few were low, he said.

Career stems from lucky 'break'

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

What began as a lousy break for Jeffrey Sirabian blossomed into a fulfilling career for Jeffrey Sirabian.

Sirabian was a ninth-grade football player in Rochester when he broke his arm making a tackle. His injury caused him to miss the last few games of the season and the ensuing basketball season.

But exercising and soaking his arm in rehabilitation at Crittenton Hospital, "I saw everyone in the physical therapy department," said Sirabian.

He was intrigued by what he saw. After graduating from Rochester High School, Sirabian entered the University of Michigan, majoring in physical therapy and graduating in 1989.

He worked at Providence Hospital as a staff therapist and in private practices for four years before establishing Plymouth Physical Therapy Specialists, 9368 Lilley Road in Plymouth Township.

Sirabian - who opened in April and is already looking to expand - specializes in orthopedics and sports medicine.

Currently, he services all his own patients. Australian-trained physical therapist Kim Snellgrove will join his staff in October.

The bulk of Sirabian's patients have suffered industrial accidents or are high school and recreational athletes who've injured themselves while playing football, basketball, baseball, hockey, tennis and golf or swimming.

His center features a whirlpool facility; an array of exercise equipment; a clinical area with treatment tables for joint mobilization exercises; and a casting room where patients are fit for orthotics. Molded to complement a patient's foot, orthotics are shoe inserts designed to correct injury-causing structural problems in the foot, ankle, knee and hip.

Helping hand: Jeffrey Sirabian treats an injured student in the office he opened in April. He provides physical therapy and sports medicine.

Patients also can be treated with ultrasound, electrical stimulation and hot and cold packs and pain-blocking devices.

Sirabian encourages athletes to ward off injury by making sure they're well-conditioned and warmed up before engaging in strenuous workouts and competition. "It's important to get the blood flowing and to do flexibility exercises, and to learn the fundamentals," he said.

While on-site physical therapy is important, "the real key is home exercise," he said. "People can come in two or three times a week. But if they don't work at it at home, the results aren't going to be as good as we'd like. We try to impress upon patients that they need to be an active participant in their rehabilitation."

There's good reason for the increasing number of physical therapy centers, Sirabian said. "Physical therapy can play a great role in the prevention and rehabilitation of injuries and muscular-skeletal disorders, using a total approach. Sometimes there's a misconception about physical therapy. People think all we do is massage and apply hot packs.

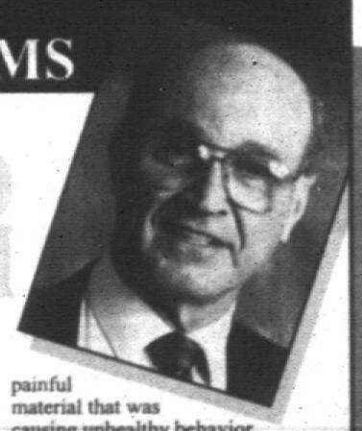
DREAMS: MORE THAN JUST SUGARPLUMS

by Kenneth Pitts, M.D.

GOOD HEALTH
Enjoying



Ever been chased by a pelican? Fallen off a rainbow? Walked around your old neighborhood at night and couldn't find your way home?

Maybe in your dreams.

Dreams — those seemingly senseless movies we see in our minds at night — are a phenomenon that's been around for 140 million years.

Although we still have a long way to go to really know what dreams are all about, we have learned quite a bit. One thing we know for sure: Our dreams can teach us much about ourselves and our problems.

Dreams uncover painful pasts

In 1905, psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud shared his beliefs that dreams had deep meaning, and were important tools in psychological treatment.

Freud believed that everyone has a place in their minds for buried or "repressed" information, which is not available to us by ordinary methods of recall. The buried information involves painful experiences, memories, and feelings related to disturbing events in our pasts. Although we are not aware of them, these repressed memories are still active in our lives, and influence our current behavior.

Dreams, according to Freud, could help patients uncover the painful material that was causing unhealthy behavior. By confronting these painful experiences, recognizing, understanding, and accepting them, patients gained freedom to handle the conflict in a healthier way.

Freud's notions still apply today

Today, it is widely believed that dreams perform a valuable function. When we dream, we are actually "thinking while asleep" — so we can be solving problems, easing tensions, and working out conflicts even when we're deep in slumber. Happy dreams may even compensate for the bad things happening in our lives.

Don't feel bad if you can't interpret your dreams. Just the fact that you are dreaming means that you're accomplishing something. And if you're one of those people who says, "I don't dream," guess what? Everybody dreams.

So, dream on! Even while you're asleep, you can gain a wealth of knowledge about yourself and others.

Hospice to offer training sessions in Plymouth

Community Hospice Services (formerly Hospice Services of Western Wayne County) will have fall volunteer training sessions.

An extensive eight-week, 24-hour training course is offered at Community Hospice Services' Westland and Plymouth locations.

Day classes will be offered at the Plymouth location 9 a.m. to noon, with classes beginning on Thursday, Sept. 29, and meeting weekly through Thursday, Nov. 17. Evening classes will be offered at the Westland location 6-9 p.m., with classes beginning on Tuesday, Sept. 27, and meeting weekly through Tuesday, Nov. 15.

The eight-week course focuses on all aspects of hospice care. The 24-hour program provides a complete overview of hospice and summarizes several aspects of patient care.

"This eight-session comprehensive Volunteer Education Program is offered free of charge to potential volunteers in an effort to further our mission of compassionate patient/family care as well as ongoing community education," said Doreen Vivyan, coordinator of volunteer services for Community Hospice Services.

Guest speakers will present pertinent topics which include comfort and direct care measures, spirituality and the hospice family, grief and loss issues, family dynamics and more. Children's grief will also be explored and the volunteer will learn how the loss of someone a child loves impacts his/her life through adolescence and adulthood.

Hospice volunteers are concerned and caring people who donate their time, effort, and talents to support those in need of hospice care.

"Volunteers are, by their very nature, extremely giving of themselves and their time. Their genuine care and concern for their patients and families speaks volumes and I am humbled to be in their midst," said Vivyan. "We enter a patient's life when he/she is most vulnerable and the very personhood of the individual and their family always needs to be honored. The volunteer's presence speaks to the value of each individual and offers reassurance and support at this extremely stressful time.

"Volunteers will also learn about themselves and their interests and skills will be considered when volunteer assignments are made," added Vivyan. "Each and every volunteer has unique skills and talents and these gifts are channeled as to be beneficial to our patients and their families, or those numerous service functions which support the delivery of patient care." Individuals interested in volunteering for Community Hospice Services can contact either Doreen Vivyan or Mary Letters at (313) 522-4244.

Community Hospice Services was established in 1981 to offer compassionate, skilled home care to those individuals who face an incurable illness. Hospice offers supportive care, promotes quality of life and provides comfort and emotional healing for the patient and family members. Through the efforts of full-time staff and volunteers, Community Hospice Services dedicates itself to providing much-needed services to patients with any incurable illness, with a limited life expectancy, in western Wayne, southern Oakland, and eastern Washtenaw counties.

Total family support is an additional component of Hospice Services' team approach to caring. A full 13-month bereavement program is offered to families. Compassion and concern are expressed to grieving family members through Adult Grief Relief Group meetings, Children's Grief Support Programs, mailings, telephone calls, visits and memorial services.

Community Hospice Services maintains offices in Westland and Plymouth.

East student has perfect attendance record

What began as a lousy break for Jeffrey Sirabian blossomed into a fulfilling career for Jeffrey Sirabian.

Sirabian was a ninth-grade football player in Rochester when he broke his arm making a tackle. His injury caused him to miss the last few games of the season and the ensuing basketball season.

But exercising and soaking his arm in rehabilitation at Crittenton Hospital, "I saw everyone in the physical therapy department," said Sirabian.

He was intrigued by what he saw. After graduating from Rochester High School, Sirabian entered the University of Michigan, majoring in physical therapy and graduating in 1989.

He worked at Providence Hospital as a staff therapist and in private practices for four years before establishing Plymouth Physical Therapy Specialists, 9368 Lilley Road in Plymouth Township.

Sirabian — who opened in April and is already looking to expand — specializes in orthopedics and sports medicine.

Currently, he services all his own patients. Australian-trained physical therapist Kim Snellgrove will join his staff in October.

The bulk of Sirabian's patients have suffered industrial accidents or are high school and recreational athletes who've injured themselves while playing football, basketball, baseball, hockey, tennis and golf or swimming.

His center features a whirlpool facility; an array of exercise equipment; a clinical area with treatment tables for joint mobilization exercises; and a casting room where patients are fit for orthotics. Molded to complement a patient's foot, orthotics are shoe inserts designed to correct injury-causing structural problems in the foot, ankle, knee and hip.

Patients also can be treated with ultrasound, electrical stimulation and hot and cold packs and pain-blocking devices.

Sirabian encourages athletes to ward off injury by making sure they're well-conditioned and warmed up before engaging in strenuous workouts and competition. "It's important to get the blood flowing and to do flexibility exercises, and to learn the fundamentals," he said.

While on-site physical therapy is important, "the real key is home exercise," he said. "People can come in two or three times a week. But if they don't work at it at home, the results aren't going to be as good as we'd like. We try to impress upon patients that they need to be an active participant in their rehabilitation."

There's good reason for the increasing number of physical therapy centers, Sirabian said. "Physical therapy can play a great role in the prevention and rehabilitation of injuries and muscular-skeletal disorders, using a total approach."

"The truth is we work on restoring mobility and strength by taking a well-rounded approach to body mechanics and posture using joint and soft tissue mobilization techniques. The key is biomechanics and muscle-strengthening. Just to give someone a hot pack is not going to restore function."

It's helpful for patients to receive physical therapy early on, he added.

"Medical costs go up when people wait two, three or four months to address a problem. If you wait to take care of a problem, it can become a lot worse and more costly to manage. Early treatment can avoid problems down the line."

More teachers

Little's priorities are correct

The students who this week returned to their classrooms in the Plymouth-Canton schools probably didn't notice that there is a new teacher in a classroom.

There's no reason they should. In the scope of things, adding one teacher to the 15,000-student district doesn't mean a lot. But it does.

New Superintendent Charles Little trimmed $38,650 from the central office budget, including about $6,000 from his own travel budget to hire the additional teacher.

Such an act sends a positive message to parents, the general public and the district's 746 teachers. The message is: Little is serious about spending money where it counts the most, in programs for kids.

That one teacher will be among nine additional teachers hired for the school year. Six additional teachers were budgeted for because of increasing enrollment and two others were to be hired because of additional state aid.

However, the most important hire is the one teacher whose salary will be paid by the cuts to the central office budget. Rightly or wrongly, the public sees schools as overadministrated and using money slated for spending on bureaucracy for a teachers' salary does much to dispel that view.

Little's action came shortly after he convinced the school board to scrap the $125 per student pay-to-play system used to fund sports and other after school activities. Little came up with the money when an assistant athletic director let the district to take another job, freeing about $70,000. The remainder of the money came from the school districts' fund balance, really a savings account.

Since pay-to-play started in 1992 there has been a 25 percent drop in participation in sports and other activities, according to school officials. That's unacceptable. At the foundation of public education is the idea that every child should have access to programs offered by the schools, not just those who can afford it.

But there's more. Little squeezed enough money out of the budget to reopen the Central Middle School swimming pool, which had been closed to save money. The cost estimate for pool operation was $70,000. However, those figures just didn't pan out.

The savings were closer to $45,000 by the district's own account, and much less according to teachers and others at the school. Heat and maintenance of the pool were still required or it would have deteriorated.

Little's actions have gone a long way toward convincing the public they are getting the most for their tax money when it comes to education. They also help the school district regain the confidence of the public.

Death penalty is bad idea

Crime being the fad issue of 1994, our state senators next week will revive a bad old idea called the death penalty.

The Senate Judiciary Committee will visit Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills for a public hearing at 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 8. The sole agenda topic is Senate Joint Resolution F, which would put the question of allowing the death penalty before voters in 1996.

The chair and the committee majority are Republicans, but the death penalty is popular in both parties. It's puzzling, however, that Republicans want to give government such irreversible power.

At their convention last week, the Grand Old Party's orators condemned regulatory agencies ("get the government off our backs") and applauded the notion of downsizing government, equating regulation with bureaucratic dictatorship. It's odd that conservatives would lead a serious discussion of the death penalty.

Death penalty supporters seem to have a child-like faith that government will kill only the right people. We don't share their blind trust in government.

Just last week, for example, the Otsego County courthouse in Gaylord was the scene of a hearing on whether two men convicted of a 1986 murder should get new trials. A State Police lieutenant testified that he warned the prosecutor that a key witness was unreliable because she (the witness) had lied about other crimes. The prosecutor admittedly would have been bound to tell defense lawyers about his star witness' illegal activities.

Thank God Michigan didn't have the death penalty then. Witnesses aren't always believable. Even the government's prosecutor, itching for higher office, may have cut a corner.

Each year we read several stories about judges who are disciplined for drunkenness, improper treatment of litigants, financial sinsand so on. Some are removed from the bench and disbarred. A few judges become so arrogant that they think they know the law and refuse to look at a book. A few disregard sentencing guidelines and mete out "basketball score" sentences.

We don't mean to cast a cloud over the entire judiciary. We only warn that the power to decree the end of a human life is too much power to give a government official.

In England in 1750, some 200 crimes were punishable by the death penalty. The trend has been to whittle down the list. Michigan in 1847 was the first jurisdiction in the English-speaking world to abolish the death penalty entirely - after an innocent man was wrongly hanged in Windsor.

Governments used to kill people by throwing them to the lions, serpents or crocodiles; stoning, poisoning and dropping them off cliffs; flaying (skinning alive), impaling and burning at the stake; drawing and quartering (pulling apart the limbs by horses), breaking on the wheel and beheading; crucifying, boiling in hot oil and garroting (choking with an iron collar that has a sharp spike to pierce the neck). We are unimpressed that government today has less excruciating ways of killing people. The whole idea is wrong.

The death penalty doesn't deter other criminals. An 18th century English chaplain, who ministered to 167 men about to be hanged, reported that 161 already had attended one or more public executions. All studies since then have supported his finding.

In ancient Rome, a father had the power of life and death over his wife and children. Society took away that power and gave it to government. We say it's still too much power to give government. The whole death penalty idea should be shunned.

Bad taste

What a sad surprise to see a fellow go from wit to snit to twit in print. Tim Richard's Aug. 8 article ("The Only Boobs in the House Are Men") was amusing, if pandering towards the cheap chuckle he got in the end with his sorry suggestion of a title for a companion volume ("The Only Pricks in the House Are Women.") is amusing. It would seem that "In my longer experience with more levels of government," Mr. Richard might have exhibited a bit of restraint to demonstrate his acquired diplomatic skills? Alas, he took the dare, only reminding us that women and men are woefully equal in the realm of bad taste.

Say no to reform

No, no, no. The senior citizens of America do not want health care reform. Not the one the government is cooking up for us. They are misinformed and like sheep are just going along with something they think will be good for them!

Your article in Thursday read "Retirees back reform," and AARP has come out in support of a bill.

How sad it is to hear this. Most senior citizens haven't the foggiest notion of what's actually contained in any of the bills before Congress. Most of them feel there will be protection for prescription drug expense, home health care, and worst of all, nursing home care! None of which will ever happen.

If they were properly informed they would realize that they will actually have less than they have now, in the form of choices, and access to care, and they will eventually pay more, much more.

Seniors, please wake up; find out what's going on. This present administration is now just trying to pass reform, any kind, any shape, any way they can, just so they don't look like the fools they really are. They are leading us down a path from which there will be no return, and it will be the destruction of the finest health care in the world.

Granted, it's fraught with abuse and unfairness created by greed, but it is still the best in the world, and putting it in the hands of our government will only serve the selfish desires of the present administration and give them the power over the most expensive part of the national economy.

Mr. Clinton promised a lot of things in his campaign, one of which was to cut the government payroll by 25 percent. Why doesn't he work on that and leave the health care to the professionals? He has very subtly turned our attention from everything else because he knows health care is everyone's concern.

Don't be duped, senior America. Mr. Clinton's health care reform is a joke in its present form. Rise up and demand "Hands Off" until someone who knows what he's doing is in the driver's seat. Forcing reform out of Congress helps no one but Bill Clinton. He'll have his place in history and we'll have our place in line waiting for care we'll never get!

Wildflowers

Has it ever occurred to anyone how much money the state could save by planting the median and grassy areas along our expressways with wildflowers, as many other states are doing? When these flowers are in bloom it is breathtaking to see! Michigan has so many beautiful wildflowers, many of which are on the "Threatened or Endangered List." Let's put them to use and save money at the same time!

In the past when we had to cut back because of the economy, the grass was not mowed and at first it looked unkept and tacky. But after the wildflowers started blooming some areas became very attractive. In fact I've seen wildflowers which are on the state's list of threatened flowers. They are now mowed away as if they were objectionable, unsightly weeds.

How many man hours does it take to mow all the grassy areas? I would imagine these are not minimum wage jobs! Not to mention gasoline and other equipment necessary. What a waste! Our state should set an example of economy and environmental concern.

These people could be put to work repairing our roads instead and no jobs need to be eliminated. One has only to travel our roads to see that much work is needed on them and on our overpasses too. How wonderful to have decently repaired roads and beautiful flowers instead of neatly mowed grass.

This could also help replace some of the flowers and seeds (we are eliminating through development) for our songbirds and butterflies as they migrate through the state.

Maybe some of our garden clubs would be willing to adopt sections and help in some way. If service clubs and businesses are willing to help keep our roadways clean of litter for the recognition signs, wouldn't this be a plus for them too?

If you feel as I do then maybe we can convince elected officials who spend our tax dollars that we feel the benefits are worth it; in money saved, better roads and beautiful flowers to look at instead of grass.

Health care reform must start with honesty

By Lawrence Vidovic
Guest Columnist

I don't remember the date, but it was beginning to be cold. I was coming home from work when I noticed my elderly friend taking his evening walk. It was good to see him walking. Winter often creates a lonely scene on our court and the familiar site of him taking his evening stroll caused me to stop in the hope of regaining a bit of the joy of the past summer.

We greeted each other, but even in the darkness I could tell that my friend was not well. I asked and he answered that he had cancer, and would not be around much longer.

My friend and I spent many a summer evening standing on a freshly cut lawn talking about the state of the union, his years of work, and my current work in the hospital. He was interested in my insider's view of health care, and thus I found an audience for what has become a passion for me. We talked about dying. We talked about how anguishing it is to witness medical attempts to postpone death. On the freshly cut lawn it was easy to talk.

But with the snow and darkness of that evening our talk was difficult. "Are you sure?" "Second opinion?" "What treatment has the doctor recommended?" I knew there was no treatment and my friend echoed our words of summer: "I want to be made comfortable and I want to be home with my family." I realized he was embarking upon a course I so casually encouraged just this past summer.

My friend died this spring. His death was not delayed, but he was out walking two or three days before he died. He lived all his life.

We Americans continue to spend the major portion of our health care dollars in the last six months of life. That would not be so terrible if we got quality of existence for those dollars. What we get is poked, turned, and examined inside out. We get sent to emergency rooms where we wait for test results and doctors to verify insurance criteria for admission to the hospital. Some of us die waiting, some of us are admitted for yet more tests.

■ We Americans continue to spend the major portion of our health care dollars in the last six months of life. That would not be so terrible if we got quality of existence for those dollars. What we get is poked, turned, and examined inside out. We get sent to emergency rooms where we wait for test results and doctors to verify insurance criteria for admission to the hospital. Some of us die waiting, some of us are admitted for yet more tests.

I suspect so much waste in our health care system is predicated on our refusal to see death as a natural part of life. In the development of our wonderful technology, we secretly believed it would deny death its rightful place. Modern medicine is a wonder, but I fear that our society has not developed the maturity to properly use it.

There comes a time in our lives when we should not be seeking diagnosis and treatment, but rather understanding and care. The truly wise physician knows when to make that change. Such a physician provides information on the quality of life likely to result from treatment. That information is essential for informed consent. When provided with such information, unless we or our loved ones are in denial, we are not likely to choose a long, futile stay in an intensive care unit.

As we grow older, we need to change our focus from healing to maximizing the quality of our life. We are not going to heal arthritis, but we might improve our functioning with a joint replacement. Following a stroke, we don't usually need a hospital stay, but we do need to work at regaining whatever functioning we can. Research now verifies that returning home and receiving the love and care of family and friends is the best medicine to motivate us to a return to a quality life.

Health care reform must start with honesty. My friend's life could not be saved. All the marvels we have created would now only do harm to him. Being with him on his walks, enabling him to remain home in comfort is the worthy goal. Whatever health care plan we settle upon, it must respond to truth. In the Scripture, our ancestors built a tower that would defy creation. The result was babble. Communication broke. In illness and in death, communication is our ultimate comfort. Let us insure that our new health care system is built in communion with the human spirit. If we listen to our souls, we are likely to discover that we can afford universal health care.

Armenian president's visit proud moment for all

Guest Columnist

Dennis Papazian

■ I would try to explain that Armenian history went back 3,000 years, that the Armenians were the first people to adopt Christianity as their state religion.

Recently, for the first time in history, the president of the Republic of Armenia visited the Detroit metro area, including a brief stop in Southfield.

It was a proud day for Americans of Armenian origin and a unique day for all citizens of Michigan.

President Levon Ter-Petrossian, who had visited Washington at the invitation of President Bill Clinton, came to thank the people of America for the humanitarian aid sent to Armenia after the earthquake of 1988 — aid which continues to flow to that embattled nation today.

This is the first time that a president of any of the former Soviet states has visited the Detroit area. President Ter-Petrossian is also the only president who was not a Communist under the old, discredited system.

I, myself, am a second generation Armenian-American. When I was a child, people frequently asked me about my national background. I, of course, would reply "Armenian."

"What's an Armenian?" was the inevitable retort.

I would try to explain that Armenian history went back 3,000 years, that the Armenians were the first people to adopt Christianity as their state religion, that the Armenians — living at the crossroads of Europe and Asia — had over the centuries fought off the Persians, the Romans, the Mongols and were finally conquered by the Turks.

I would tell them about the unique and universal qualities of Armenian literature, architecture, miniature paintings, industry and commerce. I would also tell them about Armenians being the victims of the first genocide in the 20th century.

In 1920, Armenia was overcome by the Bolsheviks and eventually became a republic in the Soviet Union. In 1988, Armenia caught the world's attention when a great earthquake destroyed nearly 25 percent of the country, caused the death of more than 25,000 people, and left half a million homeless. Aid was sent from all over the world, including the United States. Some of the victims, commendably, were treated in Detroit area hospitals.

For almost 80 years, the Soviets had deprived the Armenians of their fundamental human, civic and economic rights. Fed up with Soviet repression, beginning in 1988, Armenians in vast numbers protested in the streets of Yerevan, their capital city. The protest movement in Armenia inspired similar protest movements all over the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, resulting in the fall of Communism.

Armenia declared its independence from the Soviet Union in 1991 and established itself as a free, independent and democratic state. Free elections were held; Levon Ter-Petrossian, one of the leaders of the protest movement, was elected president.

Under the leadership of President Ter-Petrossian, Armenia has moved along the road of democracy, has privatized agriculture and is working toward establishing a free-enterprise system.

Armenia's reform, however, has been stymied by the five-year struggle for independence of the Christian Armenians of Nagomo-Karabakh, an Armenian enclave in neighboring Muslim Azerbaijan.

Fearing that Armenia might give aid to their co-religionist and compatriots in Nagomo-Karabakh, the Azerbaijani Turks and their friends in Turkey have imposed an economic and humanitarian blockade on the fledgling democracy. This blockade has deprived Armenia of raw materials, food, medicines, gasoline and heating fuel — and has driven Armenia and its people to the edge of catastrophe.

The rail and pipeline blockade of Armenia by Azerbaijan and Turkey effectively cuts Armenia's lifelines. The Armenians have suffered through several unbearable winters with much pain, suffering and loss of life. An observer has said, "It looks like the Turks want to complete the Armenian genocide."

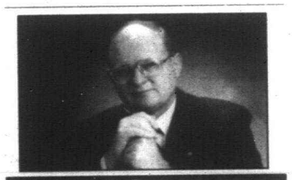
Fortunately for Armenia, the United States is determined to send sufficient food, medicines and fuel to ward off starvation and epidemics. For this aid, the people of Armenia will be eternally grateful.

Despite Armenia's present troubles, I have faith that the world's greatest democracy, the United States, will succeed in saving one of the world's newest democracies, Armenia.

The visit of Armenia's president should be the beginning of a warm friendship with America, which can prove mutually beneficial. Thank you, America.

Dennis R. Papazian, a professor of history at the University of Michigan-Dearborn and director of its Armenian Research Center, is a resident of Southfield.

Be informed when rating Supreme Court hopefuls



Tim Richard

Voters no longer have an excuse for voting for nice-sounding names when they reach the judicial ballot. There are sharp differences between Democrats and Republicans on the Michigan Supreme Court, which some call "the most political court in the country."

Court candidates give you blather about being firm and fair; they avoid issues. Voters can't tell Tweedledee from Tweedledum.

A good litmus test is the high court's recent 4-3 decision against the South Lyon School District. Adrian and Jeanne Dedes sued because one of their daughters was killed and another injured at a 10 Mile Road school bus stop.

Oakland Circuit Judge Hilda Gage dismissed the parents' suit. The Supreme Court reversed Gage on a party-line vote — Democrats for, Republicans against. The school district must either go to trial or try to settle out of court.

Important fact: The girls weren't hit by a school bus. A Wixom man in his car hit them. The high court opinion contains no word on how much, if anything, the Dedes family got from the car driver's insurer. The family said South Lyon school officials were grossly negligent in arranging the bus stop.

An ancient rule of law says, "The king can do no wrong." It means government can't be sued for providing normal governmental functions. Michigan legislators and courts have modified the doctrine of governmental immunity a lot in recent decades. The 1985 statute says a governmental employee is immune from tort liability when:

"The. . .employee's. . .conduct does not amount to gross negligence that is the proximate cause of the injury or damage. As used in this subdivision, 'gross negligence' means conduct so reckless as to demonstrate a substantial lack of concern for whether an injury results."

The issue is what's meant by "the" proximate cause. Does it mean "only" cause?

Justice Patricia Boyle (a Democratic nominee) said "it is incorrect to conclude that therefore 'the' means sole." She said the word "may mean" the employee's conduct was "the last proximate cause." After reciting much legal history, Boyle found that Senate bill analyses prepared by staff put so little emphasis on the word "the" that it had no importance when senators voted on it. The high court, Boyle said, couldn't depend on the "plain meaning" of the words in interpreting the law.

That was heresy to Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley, who wrote the dissent for the Republicans. She said the Democratic majority "ignores the plain meaning of (the statute) by eradicating governmental immunity for state employees who were not the sole cause of an injury. . .(T)he court may not ignore, substitute or redefine language." The Democratic interpretation "is in clear derogation of the phrase's plain and obvious meaning."

Political scientists would call the Democratic justices "activists" and the Republicans "strict constructionists." Some would add that the Democrats have a propensity to hunt for "deep pockets" — big bucks — just so the plaintiff gets something.

Clearly the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association (the plaintiffs' bar) is delighted with the Democratic interpretation. The defense bar, school districts and universities favor the Republican interpretation and are dismayed at the decision.

Under Michigan's strange election law, Supreme Court candidates run on a non-partisan ballot. For your information, Republicans have nominated Court of Appeals judges Richard Griffin and Elizabeth Weaver; Democrats will nominate incumbent Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. and (probably) circuit Judge Donald Shelton.

Governor strikes out at outcome based education

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Gov. John Engler's Republicans have veered to the political right over a key public school issue — OBE, or outcomes-based educatiofi.

So far, the eight-member State Board of Education has dealt with OBE without disagreement, even though the board contains four Democrats and four Republicans. They're for it.

The Republicans' leader is saying something different.

"Be assured that this governor will continue to lead the fight against outcome-based education," Engler told the a cheering Republican State Convention in Grand Rapids last weekend.

"Our schools won't be testing attitudes, values and beliefs; they'll be meeting tough, world-class standards. When I'm done, OBE will stand for Only the Best Education," the governor said.

Republican delegates agreed, voting 1,605 to 68 in favor of a resolution favoring "the basics — conventional reading, writing, mathematics and sciences — as opposed to new values-based OBE curriculum and Michigan Model and shall advocate local school board control over curriculum."

Outsiders tapped

Two years ago, a Republican convention nominated State Board candidates with experience managing public schools: Dorothy Beardmore (Rochester school board, Oakland intermediate board) and Harry Greenleaf (Schoolcraft College board).

This year the GOP turned to outsiders: Sharon Wise of Owosso and W. Clark Durant of Grosse Pointe. Engler endorsed both prior to the voting.

Wise, a party activist and co-owner of a water well-drilling company, attended public schools (including Farmington High) but never has served on a public school or college board. She advocates "voluntary school prayer" and opposes "multi-culturalism and OBE that concentrates on attitudes, beliefs, feelings and behaviors rather than on academics."

Durant is a Grosse Pointe lawyer who has run for the U.S. Senate and Supreme Court; his spokesman emphasized Durant's work with the archbishop of Detroit on a private school project but cited no public school credentials. (Durant didn't attend the convention and had no literature.)

OBE is a nationwide line of thinking that emphasizes outcomes (what students should be able to do after graduation) rather than inputs (so many hours of literature, math, etc.). Its big fans are industrial executives.

State Board of Education standards, as drafted, call for preparing students for a global economy, teamwork and work readiness. It leaves to local school boards the precise curriculum for reaching those outcomes.

Five R's

Challenging Wise and Durant were several opponents even farther to the right who advocated reading, 'riting, 'rithmetic, religion and rote learning. They see teaching as "politicized and psychologized." They see the global view as "foreign to the U.S."

"Everything is group, group, group," said one of their nominating speakers. "This is a deliberate dumb-down. Where are the classics?"

The unsuccessful insurgents denounced several key school improvement laws passed with bipartisan support by the Legislature and signed by Engler. One law instructs the State Board of Education to recommend new curriculum standards.

State Democrats will convene Sept. 9-11 in Flint and probably will re-nominate incumbents Annetta Miller of Huntington Woods and Gumecindo Salas of the Michigan State University faculty.

Engler denounced Miller, in particular, for opposing charter public schools. "The battle for choice is not over," he said.

But it appears the 1994 candidates will battle on an even larger front: charter schools plus outcomes-based education. And even if Wise and Durant win Nov. 8, OBE still will have majority support on the State Board of Education.

Allergy foundation fundraiser set

The fundraiser "An Affair for Asthma" will benefit the Michigan chapter of the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America and Camp Michi-MAC, both nonprofit asthma organizations.

The Asthma and Allergy Foundation is dedicated to improving the quality of life for those suffering with asthma and/or allergies through education, programs and supporting research. Camp Michi-MAC provides a summer camping experience for asthmatic children ages 7-15 who would otherwise be unable to attend camp due to their special medical needs.

The event is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 28, at the Fairlane Club, 5000 Fairlane Woods Drive in Dearborn. Business attire is preferred. Activities include a cocktail hour and silent fantasy auction from 6:30-7:30 p.m.; dinner from 7:30-9 p.m. and 1950s-style entertainment by "Teen Angels" from 9-10 p.m.

Asthma affects one in five children, according to organizers. Only three chronic conditions have a rising mortality rate, they say — AIDS, TB and asthma. It's also the leading cause for pediatric hospitalizations and emergency room visits. Some 10 percent of the U.S. population has asthma.

Data shows that asthma deaths can usually be prevented with access to care. Appropriate management can reduce health care costs by 50 percent.

Daly's near triumph

Daly Restaurant made its appearance in the ASA Women's 'A' National Fastpitch Championships a successful one.

The tournament, hosted by Visalia, Calif., Aug. 18-21, featured 32 teams. Daly Restaurant, of Livonia, the only Michigan-based squad, finished third, winning four-straight games before losing to eventual national champion Lynch Mob (Sacramento, Calif.) 10-5 and Stark Street Pizza (West Linn, Ore.) 4-3.

Daly's wins came against Sports Plus (Elizabeth Town, Pa.), 4-0; the New York Raiders (Suffern, N.Y.), 3-1; the Diamonds (Montclair, Calif.), 2-0; and the Strike Zone (Foster City, Calif.), 3-2.

Kelly Holmes, a sophomore at University of Michigan from Plymouth Canton High School, tossed a four-hit, one-walk shutout vs. Sports Plus. She struck out 10. Holmes had a perfect game going through five innings.

Holmes also fired a four-hit, four-walk shutout against the Diamonds, striking out seven, then pitched 2⅓ innings of perfect relief, striking out three in the victory over the New York Raiders.

But against Lynch Mob, Holmes was tagged for seven runs (five earned) on nine hits and a walk, with three strikeouts in 6⅓ innings. Six errors cost Daly against Stark Street — Holmes gave up two unearned runs (all of Stark Street's four runs were unearned) on two hits and a walk in two innings.

Managed by Bob Thompson of Westland, Daly won its league with a 16-0 mark and finished the summer portion of its schedule with a 40-7 record. In addition to Holmes, other local team members are Michelle Silver (Birmingham Groves/U-M), Dawn Godfrey (Walled Lake/Eastern Michigan) and Kelly Thayer (Walled Lake Central/Western Michigan).

Consistency counts

Plymouth Salem jockeyed a remarkably consistent performance — with three players shooting 80s and a fourth carding an 82 — to a sixth-place finish at the 22-team Brighton Invitational, Monday at Oak Pointe Golf Club.

Mark Wesner, Mike Hjelmstad and Brian Covington each had 80s, with Ryan Andrzejewski shooting 82 for the Rocks. Brighton won with a 305; Salem shot 322.

Iowa cancels scholarship offer to Head

■ James Head, perhaps the most prolific basketball player to emerge from Salem, was informed Friday that the University of Iowa refused his admission.

By C.J. Risak

Staff Writers

Despite meeting all NCAA academic requirements, Plymouth Salem All-State basketball player James Head has been denied admission to the University of Iowa.

James Head

The school announced on Friday that Head, a 6-foot-6 forward who signed a binding national letter-of-intent in early November 1993, would not be accepted despite having fulfilled the NCAA's necessary grade-point average, ACT score and core curriculum courses.

"The course content of the classes he took were fundamental to the issue," said Iowa Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby, who addressed the media in a press conference on Tuesday. "Everyone involved in the process — his family, the high school people, and everyone at Iowa — knew this was a marginal admit from the beginning. There were several points where we could have said no."

Head, who averaged 18 points and 12 rebounds per game while leading the Rocks to a 19-4 record last season, is the younger brother of former University of Tennessee All-American Dena Head.

Recruiting repeated

He is now scrambling to find another Division I school to attend.

His father, James Head Sr., received a letter from Iowa which stated that his son "did not currently possess academic credentials consistent with our university's admissions provisions for recruited

Lack of experience could hurt Canton

■ FOOTBALL

By C.J. Risak

All the elements are there to make Plymouth Canton's football season a success.

Or are they?

There's more than the usual depth of doubt surrounding the team prior to its season-opener (7:30 p.m. Friday at home vs. Monroe). And not just from those on the outside trying to look in.

"We could have a good team," said Canton coach Bob Khoenle, now entering his eighth season. The Chiefs were 5-4 in '93. Then he added, "Or we could have the worst team in history."

It's not the talent-level that keeps Khoenle guessing. He has a corps of solid players in both the offensive and defensive backfields, all experienced. "We have better than average speed," he said. "We have some hard runners with good speed, and some good receivers."

And in the defensive backfield? "Same way," Khoenle answered. "It's not that we don't have good people."

The problem is experience on both lines. There isn't much.

"We have two big question marks," he said. "Our lines, and the inexperience of the guys we have."

The other problem could be related. Khoenle isn't convinced his team has the character to overcome adversity.

Many of the players on this season's team came out last year, but when it became evident they wouldn't get much playing time, they quit. "They were in the stands eating popcorn and watching last year," said Khoenle.

The experience lost will cost. "It's going to eventually show," the Chiefs' coach said. "There's no substitute for game experience. You can tell them everything there is to know about football, but in the end they've got to get in there."

The backfield is solid with senior Brett Elledge (6-foot, 160 pounds), a part-time starter in '93. At tailback there's senior co-captain Len Gardner (5-10, 165), a three-year varsity player and returning starter who will play defensive back, too.

Then there's Mike Marsh. At 6-2 and 260, the senior linebacker/offensive guard has talent enough to play collegiately, but may lack the academics. "He is one heckuva football player," said Khoenle.

Experienced senior linemen include tight end/defensive end Adam Gut (6-1, 170), tight end/linebacker Mike Musser (6-1, 170) and guard/defensive end Matt Shear (6-1, 165).

"We have to replace our tackles and our center," said Khoenle. Possible candidates at offensive tackle/defensive line are junior Kris Hornick (6-1, 240), seniors Dan Kersten (6-2, 250) and Earl Miller (6-1, 235), and junior Jason Masur (6-2, 190). Senior Casey Felkins (6-2, 210) should see time at center, and perhaps at defensive end, too.

Receivers/defensive backs include seniors Kevin Kovachevich (5-10, 165), Andy Bahrou (5-10, 160), Aaron Smith (6-0, 160) and David Wojcik (5-11, 150).

Others to watch: senior Derrick Young (5-10, 160), a tailback/linebacker; sophomore Tony Hollingsworth (5-11, 170), a tailback; senior Chris Agius (6-1, 170), a wide receiver/defensive end; junior Ron Hunter (6-3, 185), a wide receiver (and basketball player); senior Paul Fromm (5-8, 185), a fullback/defensive end; and junior Shaun Dyer (5-7, 165), a fullback/noseguard.

The kicking game is in capable hands with the return of senior Jeff Fliss (5-8, 155), a member of Canton's soccer team.

The key to a successful season, according to Khoenle, could depend on chemistry.

Bill Bresler/Staff Photographer

Pointing the way: Canton coach Bob Khoenle has several players capable of carrying the Chiefs to lofty heights this season. But there are still questions to answer.

Salem claims title

■ SOCCER

After struggling early in Saturday's season-opening Plymouth Soccer Tournament, Salem found its form.

The Rocks had to rally in their first game Saturday morning at CEP, scoring twice in the final four minutes to edge Portage Central 3-2.

But against Plymouth Canton, the defending tournament champion, in the final, Salem had no such problem. Three goals in the first 20 minutes led the Rocks to an easy 5-1 win and their seventh tournament title in 11 years.

"We adjusted to what we were doing wrong in the morning and just did everything right," said Salem coach Ken Johnson. "There was good teamwork, not a lot of individual work. They played the way I thought they might."

Mark MacInnis, Ronny Mashni and Scot Buczek gave the Rocks their 3-0 first-half lead. MacInnis and Buczek added goals in the second half. Drew Drummond drew two assists, with MacInnis, Matt Simmons and Trevor Pruett adding one each. Anthony Cosenza was in goal for Salem.

In its opener against Central, Salem got a goal from Doug Herriman to tie it at 1-1 (Pruett assisting), but Herriman later missed a penalty kick, leaving it knotted at the half. Central went ahead 2-1 and kept the lead until, with four minutes to play, MacInnis knocked in a shot (from Drummond) to retie it.

Herriman made up for his earlier miss by heading in Buczek's corner kick for the game-winner with two minutes left.

Canton advanced to the final by edging Grand Blanc, a Class A state semifinalist in '93, 2-1 Saturday morning.

Defense gets Rocks rolling to victory

■ BASKETBALL

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

There was a lesson to be learned in Plymouth Salem's girls basketball season opener Tuesday against visiting Ann Arbor Pioneer.

And Rocks' coach Fred Thomann plans to make sure they absorb it. "Now we get a chance to look at the video, break our game down a little bit and take a look at things," he said after his team's hard-fought 48-44 win.

That's because Salem has another week before it plays again (at Riverview). And after watching Tuesday's performance, well . . . let's just say there's room for improvement.

Particularly in the shooting department. The Rocks took a 7-2 lead in the game's first couple of minutes, then couldn't put anything through the hoop. The game was tied 11-11 after one quarter; the Pioneers led 23-19 at the half.

And this was no slow-paced game.

Which makes the second-half lesson more evident. Defense wins games.

"In the third quarter, fourth quarter, defensively we were pretty tough," said Thomann. "Basically, that's what got us going."

Or, described differently, it took Pioneer off track. Way, way off track.

For more than six minutes, the Pioneers stayed there. Connie Hart scored a basket inside with 1:36 left in the third quarter, putting them up 37-33. They didn't score again until there was 3:25 left to play, a span of 6:11.

Salem put 12 points on the board in that time, reversing a four-point deficit and giving the Rocks an eight-point advantage (45-37) — their biggest lead of the game.

Which led to a second lesson — don't pack your bags for home too early. The Pioneers are no slouches; after Becky Shayman's basket ended their scoreless string, they forced three Salem turnovers in two minutes. Ryan Johnson scored after one, and Stacy Reed drained her second three-pointer of the game and another, narrowing the Rocks' lead to 45-44.

There was still 45 seconds to play. But defense rescued Salem again. Kelly Lukasik missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw and Pioneer's Hart grabbed the rebound, but Shellye Sills knocked the ball loose, recovered it and banked it in, pushing Salem's lead to three.

Janelle Sterling's free throw with 10.1 seconds to go wrapped up the Rocks' win.

"We had a few mental lapses," said Pioneer coach Glen Virgin, referring to the six-minute drought. "Our goal coming in was to hold them to about 48 points, and we did."

Virgin wasn't too pleased with what he called a failure of an official to acknowledge a timeout, called by Kristin Quinn after Hart rebounded the missed free throw in the final minute. "She was right in his face," he said.

But he was satisfied with his team's overall performance. Pioneer got 12 points from Rachel Dobberstein, eight from Johnson, and six each from Reed and Hart.

Salem was led by Sills' 13 points. Karen Gundry, plagued by foul trouble throughout the game, scored eight, and Laurel Weinman and Amanda Abraham had six apiece.

■ CANTON 47, KETTERING 34: After a slow start, Plymouth Canton recovered and rolled past Waterford Kettering Tuesday at Kettering — in part, by holding the Captains to 13 second-half points.

"We got after them," said Canton coach Bob Blohm. "And we rebounded well."

The Chiefs trailed 12-8 after one quarter, but rallied to take a 22-21 halftime lead. In the second half, they outscored Kettering 25-13.

Amicie Crayton's 11 points topped Canton. Sarah Warnke had nine, Jackie Nicastri netted seven and Becky Vachow scored six.

Kettering got 14 from Teresa Talenger and seven from Kathryn Feeney.

students."

"There's a huge oversight, if that's what you want to call it," James Head Sr. said. "The other real contradiction on their part is that they laid out the curriculum for him back in December, what he would need, then the letter says, 'Sorry, you didn't meet our criteria.'

"I don't think anyone understands it."

James Head Jr., although diagnosed early in high school with a learning disability, finished with a cumulative 2.51 grade-point average after completing his final two semesters with GPAs of 3.00 and 2.89.

"He just didn't put forth his best effort early, but he kept getting better and, better," James Head Sr. said.

Classes scrutinized

But Head's core curriculum courses at Salem, including two math courses and an Interpersonal Communications class, came into question by the NCAA after the completion of his high school graduation in June.

An NCAA clearinghouse, which was created this year to review all transcripts for incoming student athletes, waited until last week to give Head the OK.

Bowlsby said Iowa did not receive Head's transcript from Salem until July 26, but Salem Assistant Principal Joan Claeys disputes that statement.

"I have documentation that my records clerk mailed out his transcript to both the clearinghouse and Iowa right before the end of June," Claeys said. "I've been involved (personally) since the first of July. I talked with Fred Mims, one of their admissions persons, on the eighth of July. I also talked with an Ann Kunkle. They had the final transcripts in plenty of time. Someone needs to question the validity of (Bowlsby's statement)."

Decision delayed

While waiting to hear from the NCAA clearinghouse, James Head Sr. believes Iowa procrastinated in reviewing the transcript.

"If there was ever a question, I think it would have surfaced much earlier than this," he said.

James Head Jr., meanwhile, is searching to find another school.

Among those mentioned prominently are Eastern Michigan, Bowling Green and Penn State. Other schools in the running could include DePaul, Ohio State, Cincinnati and Minnesota.

"We're just trying to stack all the information up and get things sorted out," said James Head Sr. "We're not letting the grass grow under our feet now. He hopes to sign by this weekend."

Head was among three Iowa recruits scheduled to enter the Hawkeyes' program this fall.

Coaching staff gone

Tom Davis, Iowa's coach, is trying to revive a team which finished last in the Big 10. Davis, his players and coaching staff spent the early part of August touring Europe.

"That probably complicated matters because nobody from the basketball program was around when the decision was finally made," said a source close to the Iowa athletic department. "They were gone from August 5th through the 20th."

The source also said that relations between Iowa's athletic department and academic people are strained. Ironically, a river, which runs through the middle of campus, divides the academic and athletic buildings.

"It all goes back to Norby Walters, the agent who went on trial," the source said. "He represented a couple of Iowa football players, Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell, and some embarassing things came out in the trial. They were taking a lot of Mickey Mouse courses. It made the university look bad. Since then, there's been at least a half-dozen academic failures on the football team. And I can name some on the basketball team, too."

Season starts: Canton, Salem face tough tests

By Dan O'Meara
Staff Writer

A year has passed and it's time for the rematch.

That means the start of another high school season and duel between Observer sports editors Brad Emons and Dan O'Meara.

Emons, the defending champion, and O'Meara will duke it out over the next nine weeks to determine the 1994 winner of the annual grid predictions contest.

Emons has had a year to celebrate after leading from wire-to-wire. He finished with a 103-27 record as opposed to 94-36 for his colleague.

But will the king continue his reign for an unprecedented two years in a row or be dethroned?

The opposition seems to recall O'Meara winning four consecutive years (and five of the last seven) prior to last year's reversal.

So, without further delay, let's get started on picking this year's winners:

FRIDAY GAMES
(all times 7:30 unless noted)

Liv. Churchill at Dearborn, 4: The Chargers begin the '94 season with a clean slate after ending a 34-game losing streak in the eighth week a year ago. But the word on Dearborn is the Pioneers, who won 10-0 last year, should be good and a tough opener for Churchill (1-8). PICK: The Pioneers prevail.

Farmington at Waterford Mott, 7: The Falcons have a new opening-game opponent in the Corsairs (3-6), who return six starters on offense and three on defense. Mott is led by junior quarterback Jeremy Koger (6-3, 180). Both teams are said to have strong offensive lines, so this one will certainly be decided in the trenches. The Corsairs return Paul Michiamare (6-0, 250), Alan Goodrich (6-0, 275), Mike Primean (6-3, 290) and Matt Snyder (6-0, 240) up front. PICKS: The Falcons get airborne early.

Liv. Franklin at S.H. Stevenson: Franklin (1-8) came darn close to beating the Titans last year, losing 21-12, but their seasons went in opposite directions after that. Stevenson went to the AA semifinals and is supposed to be strong again. Senior Darryl Daoust takes over at quarterback after playing just defense. The Titans (10-2) have a good line spearheaded by tackle Dave Sucura (6-4, 255) and guard Paul Perring (6-0, 225). Gary Grochowski (6-2, 24) and Ryan Dunlap (5-11, 246) anchor the defense. PICKS: The Titans grind out a victory.

Redford Union at Liv. Stevenson: Stevenson (7-2) is loaded with big, tough linemen who many believe will take the Spartans a long way this year and give opponents some long nights. Stevenson should have a solid running game with the return of backs Scott Goldman, Gade Clark and Chris Mullett and state wrestling champ Craig Martin moving to fullback. RU comes off a 1-8 season. PICKS: The Spartans roll again.

Westland Glenn at Howell: Howell returns only three starters from a AA playoff team that was 7-3, but the Highlanders are expected to field another good team. Howell has reloaded and will start a senior at 20 of 22 positions. The holdovers are tackle Joe Adam (6-4, 260), fullback Tom Deit (6-1, 213) and guard Kevin Mattie (6-0, 220). Glenn (11-2) also was rocked hard by graduation after reaching the AA championship game, but the Rockets are never short of players (53). PICKS: O'Meara thinks the home field will make the difference for Howell. Emons says the Rockets are out of this world.

Adrian at Wayne Memorial: The Maples (7-3) rolled over the visiting Zebras 23-7 last year and later made the AA playoffs, getting crushed by John Glenn. Wayne QB Lorenzo Guess (6-3, 175) is a sophomore but started all of last season. The Zebras (4-5) have good skill players, including fullback Corey McClelland (6-0, 230) and tailback Stan Stevenson (5-9, 185), and a host of big linemen. PICKS: Wayne gets started on a good year.

Monroe at Ply. Canton: The Chiefs (5-4) will try to reverse a disturbing trend, which had them losing late in each game, in the last two season openers. Monroe (4-5) scored on the last play of the game to win 14-13 in '92, and it won 12-9 in overtime last year. Canton has a veteran QB in senior Brett Elledge, and Lenny Gardner returns at tailback. PICKS: Monroe eeks out another win.

Ply. Salem at Belleville: Belleville is considered one of the top 25 teams in the state, but the Rocks (5-4) heard the same thing last year before handing the Tigers a 16-7 defeat. Belleville has a lot of players back from a 7-2 team that just missed the AA playoffs. Senior two-way back Chris Cannon and twins Jason (tackle) and Jeremy Gold (halfback) are the top players. PICK: Belleville gets even.

GRID PICKS

Garden City at Crestwood: Both teams in this Mega Conference crossover were 4-5 last year. The Chargers started six sophomores a year ago and are said to be much improved with the added experience. The top player is tailback Mike Kaczmarcyk (5-10, 160), whom coach Floyd Carter compares with former Crestwood star Chuck Reynolds. The top defenders is linebacker Mazen Sasb (6-1, 216). PICKS: Crestwood cages the Cougars.

St. Agatha at Clarenceville: The Aggies (4-5) anticipate a better year with the return of some key players. Tailback Bill Matti rushed for nearly 1,000 yards last year and should gain a lot of yards again with fullback Kajuan Davis (6-2, 235) blocking for him. Junior QB Mike Wilson is rapidly developing into an outstanding player. The Trojans (4-5) are trying to establish consistency on offense. PICKS: St. Agatha's prayers are answered.

SATURDAY GAMES
(all times 1 p.m. unless noted)

W. Bloomfield at N. Farmington: West Bloomfield (6-3) was hit hard by graduation but has speed and talent at the skill positions with Lorenzo Ferguson and transfers Mike Hicks, Todd Mathies and Kyle Albertie. The Raiders don't have to play Pontiac Northern any more, for starters. They should have a solid running game with Russell Hayes, Nigel Whitt and Jeff Kong if they can get the necessary blocking from a small and inexperienced line. PICKS: O'Meara gives the edge to the Lakers, but Emons favors the Raiders.

Country Day at Red. Thurston: Country Day was 9-3 and advanced to the Class B semifinals last year, and the outlook is for the Yellowjackets to have the same kind of success this year. DCD is led by senior two-way back Gerald Conoway, who rushed for 1,200 yards, and quarterback Matt Kives, who passed for 14 touchdowns and 1,500 yards. The Eagles (7-2) return second-team, all-area linebacker Brian Simard. PICKS: It's no day in the country for the Eagles.

St. Alphonsus at Jrth. Westland: The Arrows (6-3) are led by junior tailback Gino Williams, who rushed for 2,600 yards the last two years. Other key players are end/back Asa Young and two-way back Shawn Dorsey. The Warriors hope a good start in '94 will generate the momentum needed to improve a 3-6 record. PICKS: The Arrows have poison tips.

Bishop Borgess at Tiffin (Ohio) Calvert: Calvert, a small coed Catholic school with 91 boys in three grades, handed the Spartans a 21-6 defeat last year. Calvert lost its last six games and finished 3-7. Tony Ewald takes over at QB for Axel Risner (5-11, 165), who moves to tailback this year. Borgess (3-6) has a couple of prospects in senior tight end Torrey Thomas and junior QB Richard Paige. PICKS: Borgess comes back a winner.

Redford CC vs. London (Ontario) CC, 4 p.m. at Silverdome: Canadian teams have never offered much competition for the Shamrocks, but that could change Saturday. London CC won five straight city championships (1988-92) and was the top high school team in Canada two years ago. The Crusaders were 7-2 last year and had their 31-game league winning streak broken by London Laurier. The Shamrocks aren't supposed to be as powerful as last year, but it would be a mistake to think CC is headed for a down year. PICKS: The Shamrocks have a lucky four-leaf clover.

Harrison vs. Brother Rice, 7 p.m. at Silverdome: What a topper for the first weekend of high school football — a rematch of the '93 regular-season finale won by Rice, 35-0. History says the first team to score wins since the loser never has. Harrison won the first meeting 32-0 in the '91 opener (also in the Dome). A loss won't doom the loser, however. Rice was still the Class A runner-up in '91, and the Hawks rebounded to win the Class A title in '93. The Hawks has been on Hermann's mailing list, but the Warriors have outstanding players in QB Derek Canine (6-1, 205), center Sean Regan (6-2, 270) and linebacker Walter Jenkins (6-3, 220). PICKS: Don't expect another blowout (either way) this time. Both like Harrison this year.

Harrison dominates best player list

The following is the Observerland's list of top 25 football players. The top 10 are listed in order, followed by the next 15, in alphabetical order.

1. Kevin Bryant, senior wide receiver/defensive back, Farmington Hills Harrison: Bryant (6-0, 170) is a game-breaker in many ways. He led the Hawks with 25 catches for 553 yards and eight TDs. He also averaged 33½ yards on kick returns and 13 more on punt returns and is always around the ball in the Harrison secondary on defense.

"Kevin had outstanding double sessions," Harrison coach John Herrington said. "He catches the ball better and runs excellent routes. He looks very good on defense, too. He breaks well to the football, and he hits. He's a definite big-time prospect."

2. Nick Williams, fullback/linebacker, Harrison: The 6-2, 248-pounder punished Harrison's playoff opponents, gaining half of his 850 yards in the post-season to lead the Hawks to the Class A championship. They also need a good effort from him at inside linebacker.

"We expect Nick to be a force on offense," Herrington said. "He's going to have to play more two ways, so we'll have to find a place to rest him.

3. John Spolsky, junior fullback/linebacker, Redford Catholic Central: Spolsky, who can bench press 400 pounds, is the Shamrocks' best player on offense and defense. He had impressive numbers for a sophomore and should easily top double those totals this year. The 6-foot, 230-pounder goes 100 percent whether he's carrying the ball or going after it.

"Spolsky ran and blocked like a sophomore last year; he was a little hesitant and made sophomore mistakes," CC coach Tom Mach said. "He's like a seasoned veteran this year and came in with real good confidence."

4. Brent Washington, senior tailback, Westland John Glenn: A starter last year at defensive back, the 6-foot, 170-pound Washington will make an impact in 1994 at tailback. He's the Rockets' best athlete and can be an effective receiver with extraordinary leaping ability.

"He's a tremendous competitor and has a great attitude," Glenn coach Chuck Gordon said. "I think he'll have a good season. He has excellent work habits."

5. Lorenzo Guess, sophomore quarterback, Wayne Memorial: The 6-3, 175-pound athlete extraordinaire started every game as a freshman on the varsity, throwing 11 TD passes. He also was a standout in the secondary, but coach Chuck Howton will use him mostly on offense in '94.

"Lorenzo will be much improved," Howton said. "He'll be a really good quarterback this year, next year and hopefully the following year. He's a real leader, it doesn't matter what sport. He did the same thing in basketball."

6. Torrey Thomas, tight end/linebacker, Redford Bishop Borgess: Thomas, a 6-foot, 195-pound senior, has 4.6 speed in the 40-yard dash. He was third on Borgess last year in tackles at defensive end. His future in college could be at strong safety, but Borgess coach Craig James is playing him at outside linebacker because "We need to get him where he'll punish people. Torrey is legitimate."

7. Jason Granger, junior tailback, Farmington Hills Harrison: Granger, brother of former Harrison star Roy Granger, is the fastest player the Hawks have ever had, according to Herrington. The 5-8, 148-pounder was second on the team last year in rushing with 815 yards and six TDs.

"He has outstanding moves and he's stronger this year," Herrington said. "If you keep giving him the ball, he's going to make something happen."

8. Jake Siskosky, junior tailback/strong safety, Farmington: Siskosky became the full-time tailback midway through his sophomore season and finished with 523 yards and a 4.8 average per carry. A slashing runner, Siskosky also will line up in the secondary at strong safety after spending last fall at outside linebacker.

"He's our best-conditioned athlete," said second-year coach Lauri Niskanen, a former assistant coach in the Canadian Football League. "He has a great work ethic. He comes to practice and works hard whether he's on offense or defense."

9. Steve Shaieb, senior guard, Farmington Harrison: Shaieb (5-10, 197) begins his third year as an offensive line starter for the Hawks. He earned all-league honors on offense last year and will start at noseguard on defense. Shaieb exemplifies the kind of steady high school player who has been the backbone of Harrison's success over the years.

"Shaieb is our strongest lineman, and we look to him for leadership," Herrington said.

10. Bill Matti, senior tailback, Redford St. Agatha: Matti rushed for 937 yards and 16 TDs as a junior. Coach Gary Tuz calls him the best high school back he's coached with the exception of Wayne State star Joe Gough, who played for Tuz at Walled Lake Central before transferring to Orchard Lake St. Mary's.

The next 15 players:

Nick Bellovary, senior lineman/linebacker, Garden City: The 6-1, 210-pound senior was a second-team All-Observer pick a year ago.

David Erickson, senior tight end/linebacker, Livonia Franklin: Erickson (6-3, 220) missed most of last season with a knee injury, but coach Rick Lee said he has a lot of ability. He's a good blocker and has good hands as a receiver.

Scott Goldman, senior running back, Stevenson: One of several running backs in the Stevenson stable, Goldman combines power and guts to get the job done for the Spartans.

Scott Gurke, senior defensive end, Farmington Harrison: Had it not been for two serious knee injuries, Gurke (6-1, 205) would have been one of Observerland's top college prospects. Gurke, who received another season of eligibility this semester, is still expected to play defensive end this year.

Ryan Lewis, senior fullback/linebacker, Farmington: The 5-11, 204-pound senior helps open holes for tailback Siskosky but also has the speed to find his own daylight.

Mike Liebau, senior center, Redford CC: The 6-foot, 210-pounder took over as a starter midway through the '93 season. His blocking keys the CC rushing attack.

Mike Marsh, senior lineman, Plymouth Canton: The 6-2, 260-pounder plays guard on offense and has the speed to play linebacker on defense. A possible Division I player.

Craig Martin, senior fullback, Livonia Stevenson: The 6-foot, 220-pound senior moves from offensive line to fullback, where he'll have a couple extra yards to gain momentum and hit people. He's also the 189-pound state wrestling champ.

Nick McClaren, senior tight end/defensive end, Stevenson: The 5-10, 197-pound senior will miss quarterback Kevin Szczembara, who graduated, but he'll still be a steady target for the Spartans. He was Stevenson's second-leading receiver in '93.

Corey McClelland, senior fullback, Wayne Memorial: The 6-foot, 230-pounder hits the line strong whether he's lining up at fullback or as a tackle on defense.

Chris Mullett, senior slotback, Stevenson: The Spartans won't have last year's deep threat Brad Morgan, who graduated, so the play of the 5-9, 170-pound Mullett will be of even more importance in a short-yardage passing attack.

Richard Paige, junior quarterback, Bishop Borgess: Borgess coach Craig James predicts Paige (6-0, 185) will be a sure-fire blue-chip player next season. James already is comparing Paige to former Farmington Hills Harrison quarterback and current Michigan State wide receiver Mill Coleman.

Jason Pawlowski, senior tight end/linebacker, North Farmington: Blocking is his forte, but the 6-3, 210-pound Pawlowski should catch a lot more passes as the Raiders' starting tight end. Last year, he was backup to All-Observer first-team player Scot Lord.

Andy Short, senior lineman, Redford CC: Short (6-0, 220) starts for a second straight year at defensive tackle for the Shamrocks. He benefitted last year with the presence of all-state tackles Nick Brzezinski and Nick Kallas and this year will have to shoulder more of the tackling burden.

Brian Siriani, senior linebacker, Redford Thurston: Pound for pound, there isn't a stronger, more intense player in Observerland than this 5-9, 185-pound linebacker/fullback.

'Simple Twist of Fate' changes lives

Viewed by his neighbors as a recluse with a mysterious past, cabinet-maker Michael McCann (Steve Martin) has withdrawn from society to lead a solitary, unencumbered life. Then, one fateful winter's night, the beguiling baby daughter of a young mother who has succumbed in the cold and snow, wanders into Michael's secluded cabin.

As a result, his life changes forever. The strong attachment that immediately develops between Michael and little Mathilda leads the once-morose man to legally adopt the orphan. Together, the pair happyily begins life anew, thriving on mutual devotion and filling every day with the most extraordinary experiences any parent and child would be delighted to share in "A Simple Twist of Fate," opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters.

But unknown to Michael, his daughter's biological father is local politician John Newland (Gabriel Byrne), who observes the girl's progress from a distance, while making plans of his own for the future of the child he abandoned at birth. And, when Newland eventually comes forth and publicly demands custody of the girl, a bitter controversy ensues over what constitutes family.

Touchstone Pictures presents

PREVIEW

"A Simple Twist of Fate," directed by Gillies MacKinnon from a screenplay written by Steve Martin. The film is produced by Ric Kidney. Executive producer is Steve Martin. Buena Vista Pictures distributes.

Martin began writing "A Simple Twist of Fate" after re-reading the classic 19th-century novel "Silas Marner" by George Eliot. "It was a book I'd read 30 years ago," Martin said. "I just happened to pick it up, and I was intrigued by the powerful story, and the interesting characters who intimately influence that story. I felt it would make a very strong movie."

Steak dinner helped her win the love of her life

Jan Kozowicz of Troy is the winner of our "Eat Drink Man Woman" contest — Write and tell us how food helped you win over the love of your life.

Kozowicz won movie tickets, and a book that contains recipes for dishes served in the movie. Twenty-four runners-up received passes to the movie now playing at the AMC Maple III Theatre in Birmingham.

Here's the winning entry.

"I won over my husband's heart by promising to make him dinner if he did my tax return," wrote Kozowicz. "He's a CPA and I used to work for one of his clients. So to get to know him better I asked him to do my tax return. In return, I cooked him a steak dinner with all the trimmings. Within three months we were engaged. And a year later we were married and have two wonderful children. We have been married 20 years now."

Share vacation memories

There's still time to enter our "Wagons East!" contest. Share memories of your wildest vacation adventure to win four tickets to "Wagons East!" a comedy about a group of settlers who do the unthinkable — they form a wagon train and head back east.

KAREN MEIER

Daddy's treat: My new dress

Preface. Here's a read-aloud children's story. It's true, mostly. (Daddy really does do the school shopping. I'm allergic to it.) For the narrator/child use a bubbly-over, effervescent voice. For the beleaguered, yet very loving Daddy, use your own voice.

My Daddy calls me over to his big easy chair and brushes back my hot August hair. He says into my little ear, "It's getting to be that time of year."

He unfolds a newspaper across his knee. I see lunch boxes, pencils, paper, erasers, crayons, markers and a tiny red stapler. He folds back that page then smiles at me. He points at the next page - it's the Dresses he wants me to see!

He tells me to look them over and be very picky 'cause the dress I choose just can't be Icky. 'Cause this year I'm getting a School Dress, a First Grade School Dress. A going to school all day with the big kids Dress. A doing my-work at my very own desk Dress. A carrying my lunch in a box Dress. A learning to read and tell time on clocks dress. A very important School Dress. I think I'll get one with a ruffle, or a pleat. Or maybe both. That would be neat.

We're here now, at the store. The floor is shiny, the lights are bright. I hear the click of the hangers from the shoppers over there. I smell the smell of new shoes, the smell is in the air. And now, I see them! The dresses!

"I see the dresses, I see the Important Dresses!"

"Where? Carmelina Pearl! Where??"

"Daddy, Right There. Past the automatic stair. Daddy, hurry. Let's run, let's go!"

"Oh, no. Not run. I don't think so."

"Oh Daddy! Come on! Hold hands! I'll show you the way. Past this! And that! Look! We're almost there!"

"Oh, Carmelina. How you run! How you dance! You make my heart pound! I'm pooped, I'll sit down."

"I'll be right out, Daddy. You'll love this one, you'll see. Ta-da! I'll whirl around again. Ta-da! Watch me in this dress. I love this shiny floor. It lets me whirl upon my socks and show off the ruffles and the pleat. I think this should be my First Grade dress. Don't you think it's neat?"

"Oh, Daddy! I'm glad the tag on the sleeve doesn't make you mad. You're not money mad! I'm whirling happy! So let's hurry this dress to the lady with the little writing pad. She'll mark it on the paper and say, 'Good day to you.' She'll put this dress in crinkly paper and slide it in the bad. And then you know what? You know what Daddy? This dress won't be without a girl anymore. It'll have ME."

Today I'm going to First Grade. It's an all-day day. Not like kindergarten, which was half-day day. And to make the first day of Grown-up First Grade very important, y'see, I'm wearing my Dress of Whirl, my dress of ruffles and a pleat, my Important Dress. i think it's really neat.

"Daddy, oh Daddy, come down quick to see. I've got my Important Grade Dress on me. Ta-da! I'm Carmelina Pearl. Today I'm grown up First Grade girl! Daddy! Look! It's really me. Uh, oh! It's here. My bus is here! I must hurry. I must go! I can't be late, Daddy. That would be a shame, don't you know, Daddy, don't you think?"

I run to the bus, my pleats and ruffles in a whirl. Daddy calls and yells from the door. I wave a wave. "I must hurry Daddy! I gotta go!"

I land in the bus in the nick of time! It growls a grumble. Dust whirls in the street. I bump down on the big red seat. Here I go! My very first day of Important First Grade.

Through the window I see Daddy. He sees me. He's still yelling and calling to me. He grows small now and far now, all that's left is a whisper now. I know what he say, I know it by heart. He says, "You always dance and whirl inside my heart." He says, "Inside my heart, you'll always stay. My little girl, my little Carmelina Pearl."

The bus slows down now. Through the window I see a Momma calling to her boy. She waves a wave. He does too. Dust whirls in the street again and we go to school.

■ 'And then you know what? You know what, Daddy? This dress won't be without a girl anymore. It'll have ME!'

Ounce of prevention

At the helm: Carroll Jackson of Redford has plenty of shoes to fill, those of the former heads of the Upshaw Institute for the Blind, the former Greater Detroit Society for the Blind.

JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

He strives to help others 'see'

Carroll Jackson is committed to educating people, but his "three R's" aren't reading, writing and arithmetic, but rather the prevention and the early detection of vision loss and helping the blind to live full lives.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Carroll Jackson lost complete vision in one eye after an archery accident in the third grade. In the sixth grade, a horseback riding accident caused a detachment in his good eye. A reattachment left scarring which, over the years, has worsened, leaving the Redford Township resident legally blind.

For the past 12 years as executive director of the Upshaw Institute for the Blind, Jackson has dedicated himself to reducing the negative impacts on the lives of 80,000 blind and visually impaired people in Michigan.

Focusing on a seven-county area, including Wayne and Oakland, the nonprofit organization provides rehabilitation and training programs, primarily for senior citizens, in addition to stressing the importance of prevention and early detection of vision loss through the dissemination of videos, printed materials and presentations.

"We're in the information business," said the 46-year-old Jackson. "These are things that people need to have access to. Our services have always been community based.

"It's impractical for a newly blinded senior to ask them to come to us. We go to them instead, teaching people those techniques they need to know like using a white cup for coffee. The contrast allows people with limited vision to see the difference between the two when pouring hot coffee."

According to Jackson, rehabilitation training provides people with what they need to fend for themselves such as putting a braille B in a shirt for blue or what to do when you get to the supermarket and how to put the cans away so you know what's in them.

Jackson learned all of these living skills at a residential school for the blind in Iowa, enabling him to enter college. After graduation from Ohio State University, where he competed in track, wrestling and swimming, he went on to teach "regular" high school in a small town. While there, he decided to return to OSU for a master's degree in education for the blind and visually impaired.

Changing careers

"I was teaching woodworking, auto mechanics and serving as assistant football coach; it was part of the deal, if I wanted to teach there," said Jackson. "I'd met a blind student whose older brother I'd been in school with when the realization hit that I wanted to teach him the skills needed to survive, social skills (like) how do you groom yourself. I had to go back to school to learn how to teach concept . . . Over, under, through. That glass can be clear."

After Jackson's second stint at OSU, it was on to his current position at the Upshaw Institute, formerly the Greater Detroit Society for the Blind. There he took up the institute's mission to lessen the two major problems caused by vision loss, communication and mobility, by providing specialized information and training.

With the advent of voice-synthesized and enlarged print computers, communication has become easier. Founded in 1985, the 4-Sights Network, a national electronic bulletin board run by the

The beauty of nature and art would be lost without vision, which is why early detection and prevention are key to maintaining healthy eyes. It's the goal of the Upshaw Institute for the Blind to help people learn to care for their vision by providing educational videos, printed materials and presentations in the community.

"The Upshaw Institute is in the people business; we work to prevent blindness and to restore newly blinded senior citizens to independent living," said public relations person Deborah Chapman-Vargas. "We want people to know we're an excellent resource for information, from elementary students who want to learn about braille to college students thinking about going into the field."

The Upshaw Institute urges people learn the early warning signs of possible eye disease that should prompt a visit to an eye specialist - pain around or in the eye, sensitivity to light, blurring of vision, excessive tearing, continual redness, light flashes and floaters or little black dots that float across the visual field.

These symptoms could indicate the presence of common eye diseases like:

- Cataract, a clouding of the eye lens, is the most frequent cause of preventable blindness in the world. Some 5.5 million people have vision obstructed by cataract.
- Diabetic Retinopathy is the leading cause of blindness among working age Americans. Some 14 million diabetics are prime targets.
- Age-related macular degeneration is the leading cause of functional blindness in Americans over 65 years of age. Ten million suffer vision loss due to ARMD.
- Strabismus (crossed eyes) occurs when one or both eyes fail to develop normal sight during childhood. Without corrective treatment, the disorder leads to significant visual loss and diminished depth perception. Some 7.5 million people struggle with strabismus.
- Glaucoma is the buildup of fluid pressure within the eye damages the optic nerve. A rare form, acute angle-closure, is accompanied by intense pain and causes blindness within a day or two, if left untreated. Two million people suffer loss of sight from glaucoma.

According to the Upshaw Institute, as Amercians live longer, a growing number of them will be affected by age-related vision loss. People over age 40 begin to develop limitations in vision.

Along with optical devices, there are simple ways to adjust the environment to help maximize vision by improving lighting, reducing glare and increasing contrast. Lighting is the most important vision aid for aging eyes.

Printed material on topics, such as these as well as Visual Acuity Tests for children, and an Amsler Grid for early detection of retinal conditions like macular degeneration, are available through the Upshaw Institute.

Religion and newspapers share a social responsibility

MORAL PERSPECTIVES

REV. DAVID STRONG

Twenty two years ago this column began in this newspaper. This week it will end. For all these years, our interfaith team — a Jewish rabbi, Roman Catholic priest and Protestant clergy has brought to you our moral perspectives.

The question posed in our first column in the fall of 1972 was, 'Does religion motivate people to overcome social injustices, or does it teach them that such injustices are only of passing importance?' The question is just as important today as it was then.

It is an expression of the times that this column is being canceled. The prophets are few. The interest in social pain and injustice is faint. Ralph Nader reports that when he went to the University of Michigan he found that only 10 percent of the students were interested in any social issue.

Whether it is the "me" generation or the generation X, we hear only a faint echo of the religiously motivated movements of the past.

Perhaps it is God's intention that the issues are becoming global. Over the lunch table, I hear men talking about business interactions with Japanese, German and British people. I hear questions about the United Nations. Should the U.N. intervene in civil wars or just let them play out to their conclusion? What I hear from people about crime and health care are concerns about how it will affect "me, our family."

The powerful social issues of the '70s are no longer with us. There have been positive changes. There is also a great deal of silence about what is hurting us. Social pain and tragedy are just as present today as they were then. No one wants to talk about it.

The religion I practice is about all of life. It is especially about those who are in trouble. My religion reaches out to the hungry, the unemployed, the depressed, the addicted, the grieving, those who suffer indignity because of their race. Many people are hurt by the social change that is going on every day.

A man told me this week that if his company does not become more efficient it will be out of business. A second man I know is out of work for the same reason. Social and moral concerns are plentiful. Are people interested in what is happening to their neighbor? Who is my neighbor? The question is as important as when it was first asked. The answers are not as obvious.

Religion has a social responsibility. The movements for racial equality, for world peace, for equality for women and equality for the disabled, these and more have helped our nation progress toward equality and justice. Many religious people have worked toward these noble goals.

Do our newspapers have any responsibility in the realm of religion and social issues? I believe that they do. It is generally acknowledged that the media, radio, television and newspapers exist in part to serve the public interest. They are granted freedom of expression and the means to communicate to the public.

One responsibility of the media is to assist in building a more just society. Religion must not be left out of this responsible task. Religion is not private. Religious institutions have more impact on moral and social values in our society than any other institution.

Newspapers also have a responsibility to society. The religion page should report more than the church bazaar or the human interest story in their community.

Community institutions, such as newspapers, must pay attention to more than strictly economics. Consumer and publisher alike must realize that some services are necessary in our society for the benefit of the entire community rather than simply to make or to save a dollar. More human interest features will sell more papers but this approach will not build society.

We all need to ask this question. What resources do we commit to the building of a just and more beneficial society? Are we committed to a future that is marked by peace and justice or are we in it for the present gain?

Bill Moyers and a movie director commented a while ago about the greed that has infected the East and West Coasts of this nation. People are out to get more, regardless of how it may hurt other people. Such will be our fate, if we leave religion out of the social realm.

We four writers of "Moral Perspectives" are proud of what we have offered to the readers of this newspaper over the past 22 years. We are grateful for the opportunity to have shared our perspectives on the connection between religion and society.

Tigers, Red Cross join for blood drive

Before Pablo Uranga was old enough to learn about America's greatest pastime, he learned about doctors, nurses and hospitals. At age 2, he underwent surgery to repair a hole in his heart, and the blood he received from voluntary blood donors helped save his life.

There are many others like Pablo — cancer patients, burn victims, transplant patients and newborns — who depend on blood from voluntary donors. And during holidays, such as Labor Day weekend, that need does not lessen. However, a decline in collections causes blood inventories to fall to critically low levels.

That's why the Detroit Tigers, WJR-AM and WDIV-TV have picked Saturday, Sept. 3, to sponsor the second annual Detroit Tigers Statewide Blood Drive.

"Everyone wants to enjoy the Labor Day holiday, but the Tigers are asking you to remember those in area hospitals depending on your blood donation," said Jim Price, director of community relations for the Detroit Tigers.

Blood drive hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at sites in Dearborn, Canton, Livonia, Ann Arbor, Bloomfield Hills, Oak Park, the Renaissance Center, Roseville and Southgate. Other sites in Michigan will include Flint, Petoskey, Lansing and Muskegon.

The Tigers had planned to give the first 500 participants in southeastern Michigan a pair of Tigers tets for the Sept. 9 or 10 game against the Baltimore Orioles. Those tickets will be handed out to donors at the drive, in the event that the players' strike is called off in time for the games.

"Although the baseball season may end prematurely, the need for blood never ends. We still need residents of southeastern Michigan to support the blood drive," said Chris Rodgers, chief administrative officer for the American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Blood Services Region.

Collections decrease during the summer months as many donors go on vacation, area high schools are closed, and universities and colleges have lower enrollments. Every week, the Red Cross needs to collect 5,500 pints of blood to be self-sufficient in meeting the needs of patients at 54 hospitals in southeastern Michigan. During the summer months, collections average less than 4,000 pints a week.

Three-day holiday weekends, such as Labor Day, worsen the situation because the Red Cross is not able to collect blood on Monday, usually a day when around 800 pints of blood are collected.

Platelets, a component of blood that aids in clotting, only have a five-day usable life. For that reason, long holiday weekends can jeopardize platelet inventories.

"Last year, more than 300 pints of blood were collected in southeastern Michigan alone for the Tigers drive," said Rodgers. "This year our goal is to have 500 donors participate."

Call (800) 582-4383 to schedule an appointment at the Canton Donor Center in Westgate Plaza, 6700 Canton Center Road, between Ford and Warren roads; the Livonia Donor Center, in Suite 100C of the Belle Creek Office Plaza, 29691 W. Six Mile Road, west of Middlebelt Road; or the Dearborn Donor Center, at 25001 Michigan Ave., between Telegraph and Gulley roads.

Writer is shy, has need for acceptance

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Ms. Green,

I have been fascinated with graphology ever since I first heard about it five years ago. I have lived in Canton all my life and just graduated from high school.

I love reading your column every Thursday and I hope you will analyze my handwriting in the newspaper before I go off to college this fall.

I am an 18-year-old lefty. Hope to hear from you soon.

L.B., Canton

Today's letter was written by a young woman who is not without turmoil in her life. Vacillating slants and several down slanted lines tell us her moods can change rather quickly. At the time she wrote this letter, she was living with anxiety and discouragement.

She tends to be quite secretive about her personal life. Seemingly, she is living with a problem she cannot solve, so she attempts to hide or conceal it. This is her defense against intrusion from others.

Few people really know her on an intimate level. Confidants are probably very limited in number.

Our writer is basically shy. Like most of us she has a great need for love and acceptance. To receive this, she has learned to conform to the accepted behavior of her peer group or the people who are most meaningful in her life.

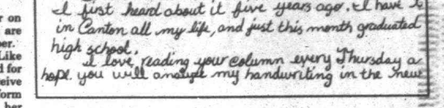
Our writer wants to be independent and yet finds it necessary to cling to the security of the past. Often she blames herself for something that has happened previously.

Going away to college can be a wonderful opportunity for her in several ways. She will gain more confidence in herself and put some of this behind her. She can make a fresh start with new friends and experiences.

Academically, I feel she will do very well. She has a fine mind, methodical and careful. She accumulates facts and makes observations, then uses each piece logically to build a mental structure. Once she learns something new, her retentive memory never forgets it.

Everything she does must meet her standards of perfection. Accuracy and thoroughness are always stressed. It might be helpful if she could realize that perfection is like the impossible dream. An article from Psychology Today, written by Dr. David D. Burns, reads: "Perfectionists clearly experience more anxiety and depression in their lives. They strain compulsively toward impossible goals and measure their self-worth entirely in terms of their achievement. As a result, they are terrified by the prospect of failure. They feel driven and at the same time unrewarded by their accomplishments." He continues by saying, "Aim for success, not perfection!"

Her large numbers written in contrast to the smaller size of her handwriting suggest her interest in money or what it symbolizes to her.



When both the signature and the handwriting are legible and the same, it tells us she wants to communicate with others and is probably the same in both her private and public life.

Note to P.K.: If you wish to have your handwriting analyzed, I will need another sample. The previous one was interesting, but too light to reprint.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Objective feedback is always welcome.

Benefit to raise money for research

When the doors open at the Shenandoah Country Club between 6 and 8:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 9, the visitors will be there for a specific reason — to raise money for Alternating Hemiplegia of Childhood, a frequently misdiagnosed disease for which there currently is no cure.

AHC is a group of symptoms that affect children from early infancy and onward throughout life. The symptoms consist of developmental delay, episodes of paralysis, abnormalities of motor movement control, epilepsy and mild to severe mental retardation in some children.

The fund-raising effort is in response to the desperation felt by Richard George and his family when their newborn son was born with severe medical problems.

The family has started the International Foundation for Alternating Hemiplegia of Childhood and the Sept. 9 fund-raiser represents the first money to be collected for research and finding a cure for AHC.

The cost is $100 per person and beer, wine and hors d'oeuvres will be served. Tickets are available by calling the Associated Food Dealers of Michigan at (810) 557-9600. Donations also can be sent to the International Foundation for Alternating Hemiplegia of Childhood, 30303 Plymouth Road, Livonia 48150.

Shenandoah County Club is on Walnut Lake Road, between Farmington and Drake roads, in West Bloomfield.

"I hope this event is successful and that we can find a cure that will help Nicky and other children who suffer from this debilitating disease," said George, a Livonia resident.

The apple may deceive, Eve.

Are the Detroit dailies tempting you with their "apples-to-apples" ads?

This information will help you resist:

72% of metro Detroiters live in the suburbs, where SPRING has twice the circulation of the Free Press—and nearly three times the circulation of The News.

And all of SPRING's circulation is audited.

Advertising in the Detroit dailies isn't exactly forbidden...

institute, gathers and offers information for blind and visually impaired people and blindness professionals.

While solutions to loss of mobility have not advanced with technology, certain steps can help make an environment more user friendly.

Outside of the offices and his home, Jackson uses a white cane even though he has some tunnel vision, allowing him to read about two letters at a time under adequate lighting conditions. Inside, you would never know he's blind the way Jackson deftly moves through the offices.

Contrasting carpeting, he points out, signals a change in rooms or an obstacle, such as a set of stairs. What's important to understand, he said, is blind and visually impaired people are just like sighted people, but sometimes they need help.

He credits his wife of 26 years, Susan, and 21-year-old daughter Sarah with giving him the encouragement, love and assistance he needs.

Volunteer drivers for blind and visually impaired rehabilitation teachers are always in demand at the institute, but other ways exist in which everyone could help.

Helping hand

"The reality is that not everyone who carries a white cane is blind; some have limited vision and sometimes we need assistance," he said. "The important thing is to make yourself known, ask how can I help? If you know someone in your community who's blind or visually impaired, offer a ride to the supermarket or the doctor's office.

"We try to focus people to rely on doing things for themselves. We're trying to mainstream blind or visually impaired people into the community. Blindness can be a tragic experience, but there are ways to overcome that, so people can be independent but only through training."

The goods news about sight loss, says Jackson, is that, with the birth of OSHA, there are fewer accidents in the workplace. The bad news is we have an aging population. The incidence of visual impairment increases with age from six per 1,000 of the general population to more than 44 per 1,000 for those age 65 and older.

The latest research is that 13 percent of the population over age 65 is going to be dealing with a severe vision loss, and within the next 30 years we'll have an aging population with one-third of the U.S. population over the age of 65.

these seniors presents its own set of problems. In its first year of operation, the Upshaw Institute was entirely funded by United Community Services.

Throughout its history, the institute has sought other sources of revenue, including federal research and state facility development grants and Area Agencies on Aging funds for senior citizen programs.

In 1981, the organization became an agency of the United Way, which over the years, has provided the largest source of income. And in this budget-cutting era, funding reductions from traditional sources threaten the Upshaw Institute's work, a portion of which services all people.

"Even though we're called the Upshaw Institute for the Blind, we put a high priority on prevention," said health education supervisor David Banks of Southfield. "Eye injuries can create blindness, trauma within a family, unemployment."

According to Banks, the institute's video lending library includes films on cataract, glaucoma, common eye hazards in the home and printed materials available to families, classroom teachers and programs for seniors. It also does presentations on eye care and prevention of blindness.

"Eye injuries can happen in sports, activities around the home, hobbies; there's always a need for wearing eye protection," Banks said. "Kids are going back to school and sports activities are beginning. If you notice, football players are beginning to wear eye shields. Later in the season, basketball players are being encouraged to wear eye protection to prevent injury caused by elbows and other flying objects.

"It's not expensive for a couple of dollars to pick up eye goggles for around the home where there's still a lot of injury from anything sharp, pointed, a projectile. And use them, just as one would put on a seat belt."

The Upshaw Institute for the Blind is at 16625 Grand River, Detroit. For information or to request materials, call (313) 272-3900.

as individually and collectively, Semonick said.

Semonick's presentation is fast-paced and interactive. It aims to show participants how to reduce unproductive interpersonal and intraorganizational conflict, how to cultivate an improved work environment, how to convert differences into assets and construct an action plan for improved effectiveness.

"An understanding of human behavior is a prerequisite for creating optimum productivity in any situation where two or more people are working together," Semonick said. "Superlative performance increases when we understand, accept and value the richness of diversity in human perceptions, styles and temperaments."

Semonick is a member of the National Speakers Association and the Professional Speakers Association of Michigan (PSAM). As a member of the PSAM Board of Directors, she chairs its Parnerships for Education efforts with the Michigan Department of Education.

She is also a member of the Detroit Organizational Development Network.

The BPW is a national organization dedicated to the advancement of all working women. In western Wayne County, the BPW has local groups in Garden City, Westland, Plymouth, Canton, Northville and Livonia.

Certain factors accelerate extinction

NATURE TRAILS

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

As I watched the mourning doves at our feeders in the back yard I was reminded of its now extinct cousin the passenger pigeon. Seven Ponds Nature Center near Dryden, Mich., has a mounted specimen on display, and from a distance it looks very much like a mourning dove.

Both birds have a small head in proportion to their body, a long pointed tail and a muted rosy-brown coloration. Mourning doves are a very common bird found throughout the 48 contiguous states. My wife and I even saw them on the southern shore of Hudson Bay.

Mourning dove researchers estimate the U.S. population at 400+ million birds. Though that may seem like a tremendous number of birds, it is not even close to the estimated population of passenger pigeons that once existed.

In 1808 Alexander Wilson observed a flight of passenger pigeons in Kentucky a mile wide and several tiers deep pass by him for four hours. He estimated the number of birds in that flight to be 2.25 billion. It's hard to comprehend that not a single passenger pigeon is alive today.

We see its ghost in the form of the mourning dove, but few alive today can remember when the last passenger pigeon died Sept. 1, 1914. Her name was Martha. She had lived in the Cincinnati Zoo for 29 years. Today there is a memorial building at the Cincinnati Zoo documenting the history of the passenger pigeon.

Extinction is a natural process — after all we don't see any Archaeopteryx flying around today — but man has accelerated the rate of extinction far beyond the natural rate. Loss of habitat and unregulated market hunting caused the passenger pigeon to become extinct.

Its feeding habits were much the same as those of the mourning dove, so it's feasible that in addition to mourning doves at our feeders, we could have had passenger pigeons at our feeders too. So instead of being awakened in the morning by the "hooooing" of just the mourning dove, we would have had another species to be confused with the hoot of an owl.

Passenger pigeon: Loss of habitat and unregulated market hunting caused the passenger pigeon to become extinct.

BOOK BREAK

VICTORIA DIAZ

Treats at the newsstand

If you enjoy magazines as much as I do, you'll find some extra-special treats at newsstands this month. Here's a sampling:

■ "Esquire." Those who love good literature shouldn't miss critic Harold Bloom's "278 Books You Should Have Read By Now," if only to discover how far you're falling behind, reading-wise.

"Everyone . . . should have a desert-island list," says Bloom.

As would Blum, I'd definitely try to pack Robert Stone's "A Flag for Sunrise," Carson McCullers' "The Ballad of the Sad Cafe," and John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath" into my ill-fated boat. But, in his "catalog of canonical authors of our century," I think he's left out a few essential titles. "Esquire" is a "guy thing," of course. Maybe this list is, too.

■ "InStyle." If you ask me, this new, trend-following glossy that promises to go behind-the-scenes and look at the personal lifestyles of celebs hasn't delivered a whole lot its first three times out. In this, its fourth issue, it seems to be a bit more on the right track, however. Or maybe I just like it better because, in it, InStyle travels to Michigan, and I get to see the crimson-and-gold inner sanctum of the home of singer Anita Baker and husband, Walter Bridgforth. The 15-room, 7,000 square-foot Michigan manse "may be geographically only a few miles from the . . . n edges of Detroit," observes writer Benilde Little, "but psychically, it's a long way from the downtown neighborhood where Baker grew up." It's in Grosse Pointe, on the lakeshore.

■ "Victoria." Once a year (I think it's always September), this is my favorite magazine. That's when "Victoria" focuses (partially) on books, bookstores, writers, and writing. This issue features a New Jersey book shop called The Mill, a renovated, pre-Revolutionary War building, which also serves today as a showcase for local artisans. Crammed with vintage books and the artwork, and with cozy chairs, sofas, desks, hand-made rugs, and fireplaces here and there, The Mill looks more like a comfortable, lived-in library than the thriving business it actually is.

This month, "Victoria" also takes a look inside the historic, family home of nineteenth-century poet and editor, William Cullen Bryant, in western Massachusetts. Many of Bryant's well-preserved possessions are still in the house. In fact, his cheerful library - with its well-used books, inkwell, writing pen, and desk lamp - looks as if the writer had just stepped out for a stroll in the surrounding woodlands.

Other delights for readers: Patricia O'Toole's "The Romance of Old Books," and "A Poet's Page," featuring U.S. poet laureate, Rita Dove.

■ "Mary Emmerling's Country." If you're a David Mamet fan (or not), read the piece he's written here on country life in northern Vermont, from his own personal viewpoint. A long-time resident of the Green Mountain State, the Pulitzer-Prize-winning creator of such dramas as "Speed-the-Plow" and "Glengarry Glen Ross" introduces readers to his down-the-road neighbors, who turned their home and their love of primitive country antiques into a family store called Boney Woods Gallery. Mamet provides all the colorful details, including the telephone number of the little shop in Barnet, Vermont. (The playwright's first novel, "The Village," will be out this month from Little, Brown.)

■ "Murder Ink." This is not really a magazine, but a unique little catalog from the famous mystery bookstore at 2486 Broadway in Manhattan. The latest issue contains among dozens of other goodies, the Top 25 Mysteries of All Time, as selected by the Murder Ink staff. Following each selection is a brief, but carefuly-written description of the favorite. Among the chosen few: Agatha Christie's "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd," Thomas Harris' "Red Dragon," and Dorothy Sayers' "Gaudy Night" - the last "a mystery without a murder." Call 1-800-488-8123 to subscribe.

■ "Midwest Living." Go along as the magazine explores "The Golden Season" in Michigan's eastern Upper Peninsula. In this colorful piece, writer Barbara Morrow takes readers on a leisurely tour from Drummond Island, to Munising on the Lake Superior shore, then south to Fayette near Lake Michigan.

Victoria Diaz of Livonia, a long-time member of Detroit Women Writers, tracks the books and literary industry for the Observer Newspapers. She has a lifelong interest in reading, "everything from great novels to cereal boxes." You can leave a message for her on a Touch-Tone phone by dialing 953-2047, then her mailbox number, 1854.

They capture life's joys and struggles

■ Uniting husband and wife artists James Pujdowski and Marian Mudie is their love for each other, painting and Bantu — their Basenji hound.

Painting Partners: Redford Township artists, James Pujdowski and Marian Mudie is their common love for painting, their love for one another, and for their 4½-year-old Basenji, Bantu.

If it's true that opposites attract, then artists James Pujdowski and Marian Mudie of Redford Township surely were meant for each other. Like day and night, this husband and wife paint contrasting subjects such as wolves and sunflowers in completely different styles and palettes, each portraying a view of life.

Mudie, by day a construction worker and electrician's apprentice, brushes strokes of vivid oil onto canvases resembling works by German Expressionist Franz Marc. Her vibrant palette reveals a tough physical side, meant to define the struggles of life. Darkly colored wolves in packs stealthily move through the night, quite often lit by the raging red and orange flames of a bonfire. Metaphors for man, the wolves evoke good or evil thoughts, depending on the viewer.

An art instructor at University Liggett School in Grosse Pointe Park, Pujdowski controls his paint, many times setting it down in fairly rigid planes. His watercolor, oil and drawing reflect on memories of moments and places etched in his memory, usually because of their beauty. Shafts of light, and lyrical lines frequent his work.

Days spent at Mudie's parents cottage in White Rock instill a peacefulness in their paintings ranging from swans to self-portraits. Both are displayed in the eighth annual "Celebrate Michigan Artists" exhibition continuing through Sept. 23 at Paint Creek Center for the Arts in Rochester. The all-media show was juried by MaryAnn Wilkinson, associate curator of 20th century art at the Detroit Institute for the Arts.

Binding this extremely likeable couple together is a common love for painting, their love for one another, and Bantu — their 4-year-old Basenji. Romping and playing and pulling silk scarves from dresser drawers, it's easy to see why he's the hound of their hearts. Who else could get away with running across a palette of wet paint and then across the couch?

But Bantu aside, Pujdowski and Mudie first fell in love with each other. Although they earned their masters' of fine arts degrees from Wayne State University, their paths never crossed until 1986 when nationally known artist Gilda Snowden of Detroit introduced them one night at Alvin's downtown. They married one year later. From there, the rest is history, says Pujdowski

"We give each other feedback and value each other's opinions," said Mudie, a one-time track and field coach at Ladywood High School in Livonia

"I always wanted to be an artist, to share your vision or view of the world. There's a common bond in nature that anyone can see."

He works upstairs; she, down. Both paint prolifically, exhibiting in galleries from the Detroit Artists Market to Paint Creek.

A rare opportunity to experience Detroit in earlier times, this exhibition is not to be missed.

"Jack Steele is a member of the senior center club. He's going to be joining us for the tour," said Elissa Breen, senior coordinator.

To register for the tour or for more information call the senior citizens' office at the Maplewood Community Center (313) 525-8848.

Autofocus works like radar

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

Many of today's cameras have autofocus lenses. Whether your camera is a simple point-and-shoot or more sophisticated, autofocus allows spontaneity and ease of operation when photographing to help you retain the essence of a particular moment.

Basically, autofocus works in a similar way to radar. The autofocus camera emits an invisible infrared beam that bounces off the subject and back to the camera. The camera then analyzes this information and sets the focus to the correct distance by means of a small electric motor.

It all sounds simple and it really is. But there are some important things to remember to keep from spoiling what may have been a good shot.

On most simple autofocus cameras, the area analyzed by the autofocus mechanism is in the center of the viewfinder. This is where the camera will focus even if the subject is to one side. So if you're not careful, you'll get a shot with a sharp background but an out-of-focus subject.

To correct for this, point the camera at your subject and gently depress the shutter release part way. This will "set" the autofocus mechanism on the subject in the foreground. Keeping the shutter release button depressed, move the camera to the desired position so that the picture is composed satisfactorily. Now push the shutter fully and you'll have a picture of which you'll be proud.

An autofocus camera helped in this delightful shot of 6-year-old twins Sean and Steven Kosek. Because of autofocus, I was relieved of the need to keep the brothers in focus and was able instead to concentrate on capturing the joyful and spontaneous moment shown in the photograph here.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then his mailbox number, 1873. His fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Dynamic duo: Six-year-old twin brothers Sean and Steven Kosek of Ottawa Lake, Mich., strike a delightful pose for Monte Nagler's camera. Autofocus helped capture the spontaneity of the moment.

Jim paints about the joy of life," said the 34-year-old Mudie.

Pujdowski, whose teaching credentials include stints at Wayne State University, Henry Ford Community College and the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, lives and breathes art. When he broke a leg while rollerblading in 1991, he couldn't sit still. Instead, he produced hundreds of thumbnail sketches for future paintings.

"I like painting on canvas and birch panels. I keep a supply of them already primed," said Pujdowski, 44.

The artistic edge in both was influenced by a family of artists. Mudie's mother, Irmgard taught calligraphy for many years at Schoolcraft College. Pujdowski's brother, though working in an industrial vein, has been a photographer at Ford Motor Co. for 26 years.

From wall to wall, Pujdowski's and Mudie's color and emotion fill the environment with intensity. These two have a lot of heart not only for art, but for their fellow man. Both serve on the board of directors overseeing the budget and future plans for Living Concepts, Wayne Community Living Services, a nonprofit agency of the Michigan Department of Mental Health.

"We monitor group homes to see the clients are treated with respect and dignity," said Pujdowski.

■ LIVONIA CIVIC CENTER LIBRARY
Continuing to Sept. 30 — An exhibition of glass owned by Agnes Hillyard, a member of the Michigan Depression Glass Society, is on display in the Livonia Arts Commission's second floor kiosks. Hillyard of Livonia started collecting glass in 1946 when she selected the Cambridge Caprice pattern for her personal use and received many pieces as wedding gifts. By 1952/53, she was unable to complete the set as Cambridge Glass Company in Ohio went out of business. The glass was manufactured/mouth blown in Cambridge, Ohio as the area provided the correct chemicals for making up its composition. From the early 1950s until 1974, she searched unsuccessfully until reading an article in the Livonia Observer that the Michigan Depression Glass Society was displaying this pattern. Since attending her first meeting, Hillyard has been collecting glass at flea markets, garage sales, shows, and through friends. She owns approximately 350 pieces including 12 place settings, candle sticks and accessories. Cambridge Caprice glass was made in crystal, amber, pink and pistachio. There is a Cambridge Glass Museum in Ohio exhibiting only Cambridge made products. Library hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday. Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Dahlias take spotlight in September shows

BY MARTY FIGLEY
STAFF WRITER

Two dahlia shows will take place in September.

The first is the 64th annual show sponsored by the Michigan Dahlia Association, at Matthaei Botanical Gardens, 1800 Dixboro Road in Ann Arbor. Times are noon to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 3, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 4. Admission is free.

The second is the 42nd show sponsored by the Southeastern Michigan Dahlia Society at Meadow Brook Mall, 82 N. Adams in Rochester Hills. Times are noon to 9 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 10, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 11. Admission is free.

Two enthusiastic members shared their techniques.

Wilson Garner of Auburn Hills, president of the Southeastern Michigan Dahlia Society, is also a member of the Michigan Dahlia and American Dahlia Societies and has won numerous awards. He has been growing dahlias since 1981.

His two sunny gardens are filled with dahlias. One hundred plants grow in one, while the other, covered with shade cloth, contains 125 plants. The cloth helps keep insects away and gives about 33 percent shade, which dahlias appreciate. Garner has found that the foliage of the plants grown here is finer textured.

Harold Buxton of Garden City has been growing dahlias just four years and won many awards the first year he entered his flowers.

His garden, a mix of sun and shade, is also rectangular and contains 64 plants standing in soldier-like rows as do Garner's. Dahlias like six to eight hours of sun each day, but some varieties do well in less sun, just as long as the light is good and the soil is warm. Buxton has a row of these near the house.

Down to earth

The soil in the Garner gardens is very sandy. He spades in two to six inches of composted or right-from-the-barn sheep manure to a depth of 18 to 20 inches each year. The sheep he raises assure a steady supply.

When Buxton first prepared his bed he just dug it and put in tubers. The following year he rototilled in a load of horse manure, then rototilled again in the spring.

Now each spring he applies a granular fertilizer 12-12-12, then when the plants are larger he uses Rapid-Gro. In August they receive 6-24-24 granular fertilizer for strong roots and tubers. Grass clippings and shredded leaves are used as mulch.

Water watch

Both men agree that although foliage may wilt on a hot afternoon, they may not need water.

"Look at the plants either sundown or in the morning; if the leaves are drooping, they need water. If the leaves are sticking straight out and are a nice rich color, then you know they're all right," Buxton said.

He mostly waters close to the roots and believes rain is the best. Dahlias like water, but not wet feet.

Garner has installed soaker hoses in both beds.

"I let the water run 2-½ to three hours at each watering, which wets a strip through the garden a foot wide," Garner said.

Both men use binder twine to tie the plants to 4- to 5-½-inch wooden or metal stakes.

Color and care

Dahlias can provide color to a garden from July until frost.

Memorial Day is planting time (unless frost is predicted). All plants are labeled. The tubers are planted six inches deep and stakes are put in at that time.

Soon the general care of the flowers begins, with August being a very busy time. Side buds are pinched out to allow the central bud to produce large flower heads. This is especially important for show flowers. Garner allows only four flowers per plant.

Flowering is gauged to come in so the best blossoms appear the first part of September. Some plants aren't disbudded, especially those with small blooms. This is the time to re-tie broken plants, and be especially watchful for insects.

Earwigs, red spider and spider mites are enemies of dahlias and at the first sign of them spraying is begun. Dahlia growers don't like to spray any more than is necessary because the insects become immune to the chemicals and it also kills the good bugs.

At the end of the season, when frost has killed the foliage, the plants are cut down to three inches, which provides a "handle" with which to hold them. Around the first of November, before the ground freezes, the tubers are dug, washed and laid out to dry for about three days.

Garner stores his in vermiculite in wax-coated boxes that contained chickens, while Buxton uses vermiculite or a mixture of equal parts of fine dark peak humus, vermiculite and Canadian peat in apple boxes. All must be dry; the ideal temperature for winter storage is between 40 and 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

Variety

Dahlias can be propagated by seeds, which rest in pods in the middle of the flower, visible after the petals fall off. They are hung to dry and the long narrow seeds MAY produce a new variety.

These are planted indoors in the winter and, because they are bee-pollinated, one never knows what will be the result.

Identical plants can only be obtained from tubers or cuttings. Cuttings grow from the eyes of a tuber, Garner explained. A tuber with three to five eyes is planted under fluorescent lights indoors in February and March so two-thirds of the bottom is in the potting medium.

In about 10 to 14 days the eyes will sprout. When it grows to about three inches it is carefully cut away from the tuber, just slightly above a node. The skin mustn't be cut. The cutting is dipped lightly in rooting hormone and replanted. If all goes well, the cutting will be about 12 inches high by Memorial Day and ready for its garden location. A tuber will form in the ground by fall.

There are thousands of blooms and hundreds of varieties of dahlias. Colors ranged from pale yellow to deep reds. Some are one color.

Judges look for bright and clear colors, blended colors and variegated ones (bicolors with distinct separations of color), the width, depth of the bloom as well as the foliage. Sizes range from one-inch pompons to large blooms up to 15 inches across.

If a new dahlia receives more than 85 points and if grows successfully the next year or two, the grower has the privilege of naming it.

jewelry, stained glass, calligraphy, needle art, sewn items, wood, dried flowers, and dolls. "It's a little bit addictive to see how pretty a pen you can make. I started out making Cross-like pens. I became addicted to buying new kits. My latest is a reproduction of a 1920s Parker pen," he said.

Beginning with a band saw, Easterbrook cuts perhaps 50 pieces of wood, costing from $1 to $30 a pound, into blocks. As he does, he points out safety features installed in the workshop. That is very important to him with two young daughters.

Pen making has become a family activity in the Easterbrook household. Wife Mary Lou sews slip cases from soft materials while 6½-year-old Lauren counts and sorts parts. For now Cara, 4, is content to learn the names of woods perched at her dad's workbench.

Easterbrook was introduced to woodworking at a young age, also. His father taught the industrial arts back home in Elmira, N.Y. Several years ago after buying a multi-task wood-working machine for $2,000 then trying to figure out how to make money with it, Easterbrook spotted an advertisement for a pen kit in a magazine. It took one pen, and he was hooked.

Many woodworkers turn a couple of pens and quit. They lose interest, but not Easterbrook. What keeps his hand to the wheel is experimenting with a forest of different woods. From a 200-year-old olive tree to zebra wood and Michigan bird's eye maple, he works a variety of natural exotic hardwoods. Lately however, colorful synthetics melded with the wood grains have also caught his eye.

"I'm always striving to find new woods, new materials. I like wood that's fun to work with, that smells good like the olive, and looks good. I like revealing the art that's within the wood."

Once turned, the cases for the pens are ready for polishing. Easterbrook uses a natural method, wax, spinning them to a high sheen. Easterbrook has spent dozens of hours investigating drill bits and other tools, calling the manufacturers for advice and leveling criticism when something could be improved.

Pens are a sideline, but a serious one. Tying in with that is Easterbrook's full-time career in sales. He's a manufacturer's rep for an industrial components company in Pennsylvania.

"Our nieces and nephews enjoy watching him make them a pen. They've never been exposed to taking something in a raw state and creating a finished product," said Mary Lou. "They're filled with amazement just watching him work."

Dispute clause eases real-estate woes

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

"Let the buyer beware" may be standard operating procedure for garage sales, but it doesn't apply to buying and selling new or used homes anymore.

Thanks to real estate associations throughout Michigan, including four in Wayne and Oakland counties, buyers can feel safer knowing if they buy a lemon, they may still wind up with lemonade.

Since 1991, 37 real estate chapters in Michigan have adopted the Dispute Resolution System, set up by the American Arbitration Association's (AAA) Michigan branch and the Michigan Association of Realtors to settle disputes between home buyers and sellers.

Participating Realtor boards in Observer & Eccentric communities are the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors; Birmingham-Bloomfield Board of Realtors; Rochester Area Association of Realtors, and South Oakland County Board of Realtors.

Here's how the system works:

Say you're the buyer, for example. If your sales agent belongs to a participating board, the purchase agreement you signed probably includes a "demand for arbitration clause." If you want to file a complaint involving the house or the sale, call AAA for a dispute form.

Within 48 hours, they'll send you and the seller the names of three arbitrators: an attorney, a construction expert and a real estate representative. Both parties select two and the association picks one to settle the complaint. An informal hearing is set up at the home or in AAA's Southfield office in about two weeks.

The association also decides cases when two parties agree to dispute but don't have a "demand for arbitration clause" in their contract, said Janice Holdinski, commercial supervisor for AAA.

The filing fee runs $350 to $700 and may be reimbursed if the initiating party wins. The arbitrator's decision is binding, but there are limited options within the legal system to appeal, according to AAA.

"Most problems are reported to us by the buyer three to 18 months after moving in and the cases are settled in about 60 days," said Holdinski.

There's no statute of limitations in the agreement, but Michigan law gives buyers and sellers six years after a sale to take legal action, she added.

Typical disputes involve earnest money deposits and unreported physical defects in the home, including bad plumbing, leaky roof, damaged carpet, fire damage and septic tank problems, reports AAA. The average claim is around $5,800.

To date, filers have included 66 buyers, 11 sellers and one broker; three buyers and sellers filed jointly. Claims have involved 22 earnest money deposits, 57 physical defects and two for contract performance. Awards are mixed: 17 claims were denied, 23 partially awarded and 10 entirely awarded.

Holdinski said filers like the informal, private proceedings and a choice of arbitrators who are experienced in the real estate industry.

"It's a simple, economical and efficient system for everyone. There aren't any court fees and it's very non-threatening because the claim is settled at the house or in the office," she said.

So far, suburban area buyers and sellers haven't filed the number of claims the association expected, which may partly be due to the Seller's Disclosure Law, said Holdinski. The disclosure law, which went into effect Jan. 8, requires sellers to complete and sign a form listing a property's known defects.

Many Realtor boards have grievance committees to handle consumer complaints, but their process often takes longer because arbitration is not a Realtor's full-time job.

"Their (AAA) process seems quick and efficient and they arrive at solutions in a very logical and workable way for both parties," said Heidi Gundy, professional standards administrator for three Oakland County Realtor boards.

Independent operations a must after turnover

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. We are in the process of preparing for turnover and the managing agent retained by the developer for the association is recommending certain contractors and an attorney to us.

One of the members of the steering committee is somewhat suspect because he believes the developer wants the management company to recommend persons who will not aggressively pursue the developer and is using the excuse that he can find "inexpensive contractors and professionals with whom he has worked in the past to assist the association." How do I investigate this matter?

> 'It's a simple, economical and efficient system for everyone. There aren't any court fees and it's very non-threatening because the claim is settled at the house or in the office.'
> Janice Holdinski
> AAA commercial supervisor

A. It is not clear from the question whether the managing agent retained by the developer is a subsidiary of the developer or a so-called independent management company.

Even in the latter case, there may be some implied or express understanding between the management company and the developer regarding the retention of personnel by the association after turnover, particularly if the management company has worked with the developer in the past and wants to get business in the future.

Obviously, the choosing of contractors, legal counsel and other professionals necessary to assist the association should be made by the board of directors elected from the homeowners, independently from any other person or entity.

Indeed, one of the questions you may ask of the management company is how many associations that management company is involved in with the contractors and-or professionals involved to determine whether there is an arm's-length relationship between the parties.

You should also do your own investigation as to whom you wish to hire and make sure they are independent from any influence from the developer and-or the management company that would inhibit the ability of the association to pursue its interests in behalf of its members.

All you have to do is call our new Builders Hot Line Directory number from your touch-tone telephone and take a "talking" tour of what's being offered. Beckoning pedestrians: A light monument in Woodward would draw all kinds of people to the Columbia Street Entertainment Link, planners envision.

Local dreamers could help Detroit

Several architects and designers with local connections have devised a master plan for a downtown Detroit entertainment district. All attractions, anchored by a new ballpark and arena.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Imagine taking a 10-minute walk along Columbia Street in downtown Detroit from Cass to John R.

You start at the new Red Wing Arena and Plaza, then come upon two moderate-to-upscale residential townhouses each 50,000 square feet.

You pass an arena parking deck that holds 2,000 cars and arrive at the Detroit Firehouse Museum and vest-pocket Firehouse Park.

A glance north toward Park Street a short block away finds Little Italy, a series of ethnic restaurants and shops similar to Greektown.

Theater Park, Shops at Fox Center, the Fox Theatre, Second City and the State Theater pull you toward Woodward.

The Theater District Light Monument in the middle of Woodward serves as a beacon for the entire entertainment zone.

Just across Woodward forming a circular-like park on either side of Columbia are the Michigan Sports Hall of Fame and a cafe, with retail on the lower floors and residential lofts on the upper level of those fairly compact structures.

On either side of Columbia as you continue east are entertainment and sports walks of fame featuring portrayals of local personalities on the sidewalk.

The new Jazz Institute is across from the Gem Theater. You then pass the Detroit Automobile Showcase, 55,000 square feet over three floors dedicated to exhibiting technological advances and history of the motor car. Then there's the Motown Museum.

Residential lofts are scattered along this part of the walk until you arrive at the new Tiger Stadium and Plaza.

That's the dream of Mark Nickita, a Birmingham resident who has an architectural practice in Detroit.

Nickita and his partner at ArchiveDS, Kevin Borsay, an engineer/designer, along with Dorian Moore, a designer at Smith Hinchman & Grills, and Roland F. Day II, a designer with Sims-Varner, conceptualized the Columbia Street Entertainment Link over a year and a half.

Nickita, Borsay and Day all graduated of Lawrence Technological University in Southfield.

All four are fairly young, which probably accounts for their audacity to even attempt such a project with no upfront commissions or financial commitments. Nickita and Borsay are just 31.

But they have plans, renderings, models and one impressive presentation.

"We're in (business) to make money and do what we have to do," Nickita said. "We're into architecture and design because we want to do something in the world."

Nickita and Borsay are proponents of New Urban architecture for which they said they developed an appreciation through extensive travel.

"We were looking for culturally oriented lifestyles, pedestrian orientation, quality of life, ease of doing things, how people work, how people shop, how they spend leisure time," Nickita said.

"Cities that have problems tend to sprawl," Borsay said. "We're trying to create a critical mass of destination points that can feed off each other."

"It's not about the stadium, really, it's about a district," Nickita said. "It's 'do we support a city or not?' It's always cheaper to build on greenfield sites than in urban areas.

"Are we going to support making it (Detroit) a world class city or throw it away?" Nickita said. "The stadium is a commitment. What we really need is the region and state to back and support the city."

Need a pizza oven? Look to these guys

BY DOUG FUNKE

Olender Equipment, with a warehouse and offices in Livonia, bills itself as the largest distributor of pizza ovens in the United States.

That's some accomplishment considering that the privately owned company has pursued the niche only since George G. Mills joined as a certified equipment specialist four years ago.

But don't get the idea that Olender is a johnny-come-lately business entity. Or one-dimensional.

Marvin Olender, a West Bloomfield resident, is the third-generation Olender to head the family business, which was started by his grandfather, Abraham, and father, Philip. Marvin's sons, Jeffrey and Robert, are involved now.

The Olender Group is headquartered in Hamtramck. Some

"If the stadium doesn't go, this would work," Borsay said of the entertainment district. "But the stadium would make it a lot easier."

A combination of private and public money would pay for the projects, according to the planners. Preliminary construction costs alone are estimated at $316 million.

Neither Nickita nor Borsay object to governmental assistance for road, water and sewer assistance at the site.

"We pay for infrastructure with taxes," Nickita said. "People don't realize we pay all the time. Part of the purpose of government is to spur development.

"For Chrysler, we paid when they built out in Auburn Hills. Do we go to Chrysler for anything? Here's something we can all use."

Nickita said his group didn't pull the plan together just to appease Mike Ilitch, whose business empire includes the Red Wings, Tigers, Little Caesar, the Fox and Second City.

"Our intent wasn't, 'Mike, here's a great plan. Can you pay for it?' With him as a major player, we can get other people.

"We started this when (Tom) Monaghan owned the team (Tigers)," Nickita said. "Then Ilitch bought the team. We knew Ilitch had moved his company (Little Caesar) downtown. We thought, 'Here's an opportunity for some ideas.'"

Things probably won't start happening until after the stadium issue is resolved, Nickita said.

"If that stadium comes, we're rolling. Things will fall into place quickly," he said. "If it doesn't happen, things will inch along. Maybe something will get built incrementally.

"There's no one behind the scenes ready to do something. It's something we ran with," Nickita said.

"We'd love to be involved in the projects or planning," Borsay said.

Eric Larson, project manager for Hines Interests, a development/management company, said he liked what he saw of the Columbia Street Entertainment Link.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for their thought process and their ideas," he said. "They've used a logical train of thought and really tried to create a town square gathering place.

"They have focused on the need to create a dramatic impact, a focal point that says Detroit is changing. And they've paid attention to linkage," Larson said.

Some of the plans are ambitious, Larson said, and whether any, some or none of the plan materializes depends on what happens as a result of the city's land use study task force. And whether a new ballpark is built downtown.

"It's a grand scheme that would take a lot of cooperation between the private and public sector," Larson said.

Lisa Ilitch Murray is coordinator for Build the Ballpark Information Office, which was created by the Ilitch family to look at options for building a new ballpark.

"We really commend their efforts," she said. "They've put hard work in it. They have some interesting ideas. We'll continue to keep in touch with them as we move forward and prepare our own plans."

You get the idea that just becoming part of the discussion may be enough for Nickita and his group.

"The bottom line is whether people like the plan or not, we're telling people who we are, what we're capable of doing," he said. "Maybe they'll say, 'These guys are talented. Maybe we can use them in another development.'"

125 work for all segments together, 13 in Livonia.

Following are edited excerpts from a recent interview with Mills and Marvin Olender.

What exactly is the Olender Group?

Olender: Olender started in '21. My dad and grandfather started the company as a sugar and flour distributor for bakeries and so on.

As a group, we were handling bakery equipment, too, mixers, ovens, anything used in baking. Growth was to offer anything bakers use.

One day, George came around with a proposal of the possibility of distributing pizza ovens. It was of great interest to us. We brought George aboard. The business grew to the point where we couldn't fit in the (Hamtramck) warehouse, so we came out here (Livonia).

Our biggest problem is to leave him alone to do his thing.

Mills: I was with a company that at the time (and) didn't see the potential for development of pizza (equipment) business. I left because Olender had vision. Not everyone sees the same opportunity.

What is the scope of your business?

Olender: With all the groups and everything, we do in excess of $40 million a year.

Mills: Equipment, we're around 10 percent ($4 million), I'd say. Pizza ovens is probably 50 percent of our business in this division. Probably 15 percent is refrigerators. The rest is peripheral items that go into it — sinks, stainless steel tables, cutting tables.

Olender: Mixing machines.

Who are your pizza customers?

Mills: We sell mostly to small pizza chain accounts. Next door to us is Hungry Howie's, for which we've done several hundred stores. Papa Romano's, we've done most all of their stores. Jet's Pizza on the East Side. Marcino's in the Grand Rapids area.

And independents throughout the country.

What about the big boys like Little Caesars, Pizza Hut and Domino's?

Mills: Major players have their own major supply division. Those major players are only 15 percent of the market. There are about 75,000 pizza stores in the U.S. Twenty percent are those three.

What's the potential for growth? Aren't we about maxed out on pizza?

Mills: Pizza in and of itself is a growing product. I think pizza has another 20 years growth. People are eating more all the time. There are still a lot of old-fashioned ovens out there.

Who's buying what and what are the costs?

Mills: We're on a ratio of about 60 percent new, 40 percent reconditioned. Average cost is $30,000 new, $20,000 reconditioned. Leasing is only 20 percent.

A start-up operator is eager to get as much reconditioned equipment as he can. They're on a tight budget. People start used and as they go to more starts (outlets), they go new. As they build a little nest egg in the business, they exchange for new equipment.

Where do you get the used equipment that you recondition here in Livonia?

Mills: I have about 45 fellows throughout the U.S. I've networked with, got to know, who keep their eyes open for us. They would bid on it at auction and sell to us. In many instances, they will call in advance and I'd tell them what I'd pay. If they get it for less, the difference is theirs.

Most equipment we get is the result of upgrades.

Locally, if someone is going out of business, we'd approach them.

We didn't start with used. As people asked, it became clear it's something we should do. We jumped in.

How do you find buyers for either new equipment you distribute or reconditioned products?

Mills: We advertise in trade magazines. We participate in trade shows. And we get a tremendous amount of word-of-mouth recommendations from people satisfied with what we've done over the years. I've been selling 17 years.

Internet can be used to transfer your documents

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

If you create a lot of word processing files and want to send them to others, the documents can be transferred via e-mail using the Pine mailing system available among the full range of Internet options offered by O&E On-Line.

Doing that is a little involved. But you and I can do it. There are some things we must remember to do first while working in our word processing program and in the file management area of O&E On-Line.

To transfer word processing copy on-line it first must be converted to a standard text-form to travel through the airways and be in readable form when received. A standard format that will work is "ASCII DOS" text. When you call up an existing document, set the left and right margins to one-inch, and save it to another area of your computer. This way you retain a regular version to use with your word processor and a second ASCII version to send electronically.

If PROCOMM is your communications software, you could save it to that directory. Your word processor, when you save copy, likely has an option to save it under another format. Select "ASCII DOS" and then save it to the path "C:PROCOMdrjones.txt." The copy now awaits your next command.

Dial up O&E On-Line and at the Main Menu, type "P" for "Program," then "I" for "Internet," then "M" for "File Manager." Choose option (1.) to upload a file. You will then be asked to select a protocol.

To transfer files from your PC to O&E On-Line and vice versa, or from another data base to your computer, the sender and receiver must use the same protocol so proper error-checking procedures are followed. Z-modem is the protocol that will work for us. (If you dialed in using a Merit number, though, use the Kermit protocol).

Choosing (1) Z-modem in the Manage Files area selects Z-modem as the receiving protocol for O&E Online. Next press the"Page Up" key to select Z-modem as the sending protocol from your PC. (If Page Up is not the key used by your communications software, refer to manual or documentation).

You then will be asked for the file name, "drjones.txt." Enter the path name along with the file name, "C:Procomdrjones.txt". Either way, do not forget to add the extension ".txt". Enter the the file name and hit RETURN.

When the transfer begins, a status message screen appears to inform you how large the file is, how much of the file has been transferred and how much remains, time required to transfer, and errors. Don't worry if errors appear. Z-modem will correct errors as they occur. If too many occur, because of line-noise or other factors, Z-modem will cut off the transfer. Try again at a later time.

Usually, the transfer is completed without incident and the file is copied (uploaded) from your PC to O&E On-Line. To confirm the transfer, ask the file manager for a directory of your files and the file name you just transferred will appear.

Now, exit file manager by selecting option (5.) or (3.), depending on where you ended up. Then type "E" for "Exit" twice until you end up at the Main Menu, then type "M" for "Mail" to enter Pine.

At Pine's Main Menu, select "C" to "Compose" a message. Fill in the "To:" line and go to "Attach."

If you know the recipient also has Pine, type in the file name "drjones.txt" or the more polite "c:procomdrjones.txt" and hit RETURN. Fill in the "Topic:" line. In the message type a cover note about the document you are sending. Select Control X, then Yes, and away goes your note and your document, too.

If you are not certain whether the recipient has Pine, alter the above step slightly so the document will be readable when sent. Instead go to Message Area and select Control R. A prompt will appear, asking for your file name. If this second method is not used for non-Pine recipients, the document is received in MIME format and cannot be read.

The attach feature is great if you are working on a written project with someone else and you can swap documents back and forth.

(Direct questions or comments to Emory Daniels by e-mail at emory@oeonline.com, at voice mail at 953-2047 then dial 1910, or fax number 591-7279. Sign on O&E On-Line! by dialing (313) 591-0900 or (810) 901-4711 at "login" prompt type "new," at "key" prompt, type GL6NY2.)
