Dumping of items sparks protest

Residents of Holiday Park subdivision, at I-275 and Joy Road, have seen old furniture, clothing and other items strewn about. Residents of a nearby apartment complex who are evicted leave their belongings by the side of the road.

Residents of a north Canton subdivision are angry over evictions of residents from a nearby apartment complex who leave their belongings strewn by the side of the road next to the subdivision entrance.

Twice in the past five weeks, residents of Holiday Park subdivision, located at I-275 and Joy Road, have seen old furniture, bags and boxes of clothing, books, housewares and a variety of other discarded items lying along their right-of-way. The property, although owned by Wayne County, is maintained by Holiday Park homeowners.

"It looks terrible to have junk all over the entrance way to the sub. It is definitely an eyesore," said Corrine Yergenson, a Holiday Park homeowner. Yergenson is hopeful that the township will intervene and persuade the Crossings of Canton apartments to find another place to dump the items, out of the way of schoolchildren and other passers-by.

"I want them to find a different place to get rid of this stuff. Not in the way of the children, who can get into anything and everything," said Yergenson.

Canton Tonwship officials are looking for ways to solve the problem.

Tom Yack, Canton Township supervisor, said he is looking at an ordinance to ban such dumping.

"I've asked the municipal service people to, by way of ordinance, to preclude the situation from happening again. We've got to find some alternative," said Yack.

But township building officials say the dumpings pose a difficult problem because the property is maintained by Wayne County and the Summer time for learning

Donna Aveck, director of technology for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, was on top of the world this summer — literally.

To celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary over the Fourth of July, Aveck and her husband, Jim Aveck, crossed the Arctic Circle, traveling to Nanisivik in Canada's Northwest Territories to enter the Midnight Sun 10-Kilometer run.

"This ranks right up there with neat and different experiences. We love buying experiences," said Aveck, who with her husband has backpacked through South America, hiked up mountains in the rain forest, tracked down relatives in Sweden, and retraced Darwin's footsteps in the Galapagos Islands.

Both the Avecks ran well in the Land of the Midnight Sun, just 1,920 kilometers from the North Pole. Donna finished third in her age group and was the 18th woman overall, complet-

Great weather, great crowds, great festival.

That's what Plymouth Fall Festival organizers and business folks said after the weekend festival downtown.

"The weather was excellent, the crowds were big, it was one of the biggest Friday night crowds I've seen since I've been associated with the festival," said festival manager John Bida.

"We had no major problems, it was just a perfect weekend," he said.

Paul Sincock, Plymouth Rotary Foundation president and assistant city manager, said the chicken barbecue sold out, with nearly 12,000 chicken dinners cooked.

"Certainly the weather was a big factor in this year's event, we had perhaps some of the largest crowds we've had in recent years," Sincock said. "People were very impressed with the sand art and the Velcro wall and the Orbitron, and people seemed to really enjoy some of the entertainment," he said.

Police seeking tips in killing of man

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Canton police investigating the shooting death late Sept. 9 of Russell Lee Harmon, 25, of Wayne, are requesting that anyone with information contact them at 397-3000.

A bullet wound to the head killed Harmon, found dead in the home of his girlfriend, 41076 Canton Court in Canton Commons, a subsidized housing complex on Haggerty Road south of Cherry Hill.

No arrests have been made.

Police are seeking a white male, 25-35 years old, with black curly hair in connection with the death of Harmon, a machinist. The suspect was wearing jeans and was armed with a handgun.

Harmon was buried Tuesday from the Uht Funeral Home in Westland with burial at Michigan Memorial Park in Flat Rock. Born May 10, 1969, Harmon is survived by daughter Kelsey Leann; his mother, Dale Strickland; father Robert Harmon; brothers Rodney and Robert; and a niece.

"We are not ruling out anything at this point in time," said public information Officer Tammie Colling.

The 24-year-old resident, whose name has not been released, hasn't been eliminated as a possible suspect. "Everything still is so open that obviously we're investigating her, and a number of people," said Colling. It is known the shooting wasn't gang-related, she added.

Police said the woman was upstairs sleeping in her two-story townhouse and that her 4-year-old son was in the kitchen shortly before 10 p.m.

According to what the investigation has uncovered thus far, "The boy hears the door open and in comes the victim, the mother's boyfriend. He proceeds into the living room," said Colling. "At some point in time, 10 seconds or 10 minutes later, (the suspect) enters. The boy recognizes that two people came in, Russell and someone else.

"He was still in the kitchen peeling a carrot when he heard a bang, at which point he sees a figure exit the home. He looks in the living room, sees the victim on the floor with blood everywhere. He screams and the mom runs down. The mom calls police."

No vehicle was seen leaving. The bullet was recovered, but not the murder weapon, Colling said.

Residents air concerns on gas station location

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Area residents aren't happy about it, but a site plan for a Mobil gas station at the southwest corner of Cherry Hill and Lilley roads received approval from the Canton Planning Commission Monday night.

Residents said the station isn't needed, won't complement existing development and fear that it will create a traffic and safety hazard.

Representing property owner Nazek Mosallem was James Swiatko of Patterson Construction.

Swiatko said the 1,590-square-foot building will feature the required setbacks, lighting and signs, "adequate landscaping and a storm-water detention pond" to ward off flooding. "Per the planning department's request, it will have red-brick on three sides and a shingled, peak roof."

The township's associate planner, Judy Bocklage, recommended approval, saying plans comply with the zoning ordinance and staff recommendations.

Bocklage also said the site is part of the Cherry Hill Planned Unit Development and was designated in the mid-1970s as a gas station site in the master development plan. The land use can't be changed without the agreement of the property owner, she said.

Resident David Heinowski said the proposal is inconsistent with the development that's taken place. Since a fatal accident occurred at Cherry Hill and Lilley, a guard rail was erected alongside a nearby culvert. "We are having enough accidents. We don't need any more help on that," he said.

Heinowski questions whether the development will create drainage problems and noted that traffic "already cuts through our subdivision. Within a 10-house radius, we have 20-30 kids. The high traffic volume is a major concern."

Heinowski suggested the township "enter negotiations with the developer to come up with a development more in line with what's already in place."

Resident Rick Spencer objected to the proposed long hours of operation, questioned whether the Class B roads can handle heavy tankers delivering fuel, and expressed fear about gas, oil and hydrocarbon products entering the retention pond and placement of the junk piles is a matter between the 35th District Court and the apartment complex management.

According to Gil Kohls, a township building official, once the judge orders someone evicted, it is up to an officer of the court to oversee the eviction process.

"Once the judge orders the apartment contents off the property, the bailiff is obligated to see that everything is placed off the premises of the complex. The closest place is the right of the way," said Kohls.

Kohls said that he had attemat he believes that a 15-by-15-foot area located closer to the complex would be a more appropriate place for the junk.

Marion Belding, a 35th District Court administrator, is attempting to work with apartment complex management attorneys to find a more suitable arrangement for discarding the belongings of evicted residents. Belding, who surveyed the situation earlier this week, said she was "shocked" to find the debris lying alongside the road, and was working on a policy to ensure that the apartment management will keep it closer to their own property.

"The law says that it (the contents of the apartment) needs to go on a public right-of-way, but I'd like to see them get it closer to their own property. Responsibly, that's where it should go," said Belding.

Belding said that although it is the responsibility of the authorized court officer to oversee the removal of the material, it is up to complex to decied where it is dumped. Belding said that court officer is also responsible for removing pornography, drugs and weapons from the contents before it is dumped.

However, that does not include prescription drugs, over-the-counter medicine and kitchen knives and other dangerous items which may find their way into the junk pile.

Ann Blevins, who lives near the site, is concerned about the items. "There were about six kids on their way to school waiting while the trash was being dumped here so that they could paw through it."

Yack said that he was surprised that the apartment complex had not looked at the liability exposure connected with dumping potentially hazardous materials.

Yack said that although he was not familiar with the laws, it "just seems that when you dump something you become responsible for what happens to it next," he said.

Killing

Harmon's body was taken to the morgue after Canton police called the Wayne County medical examiner. Police are awaiting ballistics test results to determine what type of weapon was used. Harmon was shot in the face, Colling said.

Police canvassed the area, lifted fingerprints and have followed up on several tips.

The woman and her son lived alone at the townhouse. Police said Harmon probably was living with them off and on.

"One shot was heard initially, and neighbors thought it may have been a firecracker. People didn't get real alarmed initially," said Colling.

This marks the first shooting death in Canton since 1990. The last one also occurred at Canton Commons.

Canton woman dies in accident

A Canton woman was killed Friday when the car she was riding in was struck by a van on Plymouth Road at Haggerty in Plymouth Township.

Mary Jane Peck, 75, died at St. Mary's Hospital in Livonia after being transported by ambulance from the accident site. She was a passenger in a 1992 Mercury making a left turn onto north Haggerty from east Plymouth Road.

Driving was her husband Vernon Peck, 82, according to the accident report compiled by Plymouth Township police. A driver's side air bag inflated as the car was struck while making the turn. Vernon Peck was treated for injuries at St. Mary's and released Sunday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Police said both husband and wife were wearing seat and shoulder safety belts, but the car did not have a passenger side air bag.

Driving the van that collided with the car was a Belleville man, 23, who was treated and released from St. Mary's for injuries after the collision forced his van to roll over, according to the police report.

The van driver told police he was traveling 40 mph in the 45 mph zone when he struck the car which had turned in front of him.

Neither driver had been drinking, said police. The accident is being investigated.

Wayne-Westland board cuts secondary busing

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

■ One board member voiced fears that halting secondary busing, coupled with the elimination of parking lot security, will result in more students milling around outside of secondary schools.

Canton students who attend the Wayne-Westland schools will have to walk to school or find their own transportation beginning Oct. 24.

Busing for seventh through 12th grades was eliminated Monday as the Wayne-Westland school board slashed $1.2 million from its $91 million budget. About 2,500 students who depend on buses will be affected, officials said.

The school district serves about 300 familes in portions of eastern Canton Township.

Some students live several miles from their schools. Even before Monday's vote to halt secondary busing, some parents had voiced fears for their children's safety.

The board's decision followed a unanimous vote Monday night to drop plans for seeking a school tax increase in October. Officials learned from district attorneys that they can't levy a tax increase until the 1995-96 school year because of a quirk in new state laws.

Faced with a $1.9 million budget deficit, the board slashed $1.2 million during a series of votes Monday night. The district will have to live with the cuts for the entire school year and possibly longer, Superintendent Larry Thomas said.

The board still has to trim about $750,000 to avoid having the state step in and force a deficit-reduction plan.

Busing cuts will save an estimated $750,000, Thomas said. Officials didn't know Tuesday how many bus drivers will be laid off.

Among other spending cuts that bring the total to $1.2 million:

■ Money for school building supplies such as paper and pencils was slashed by $50,000, even though Thomas noted that Wayne-Westland already spends less per pupil than surrounding districts.

■ Evening adult education classes have been eliminated, saving $140,000.

■ Two administrative positions — one in the curriculum department and one in adult education — have been trimmed, saving $110,000.

■ Several teaching assistants at the Ford Vocational-Technical Center will be laid off, trimming $45,000 from the budget.

■ A central office receptionist position will be dropped, saving $45,000.

■ Parking lot security at the junior highs and high schools will be dropped, slashing $90,000.

Board member Debra Fowlkes voiced fears that halting secondary busing, coupled with the elimination of parking lot security, will result in more students "milling around" outside of schools.

"That's more potential for violence," she said.

But Fowlkes, who earlier had stated that she would cut busing instead of instructional programs, joined colleagues Richard LeBlanc, Laurel Raisanen, Vicki Welty and Mathew McCusker in slashing transportation. Board member Patricia Brown cast the lone dissenting vote, and colleague Francis "Bud" Winter was absent.

Brown, refusing to cut transportation, suggested demanding more state dollars to pay for programs.

"It is time that we as a community, and perhaps joined by other school districts facing the same problems, attack the problem at the root and stand up and say we aren't going to take this anymore, and that the students of Wayne-Westland deserve better or at least the same as the best districts are offering their students today," she said in a written statement.

Welty offered another possible solution, saying the state school code should be changed to allow districts to charge a pay-to-ride fee to support busing.

"I would rather see us charge a nominal fee than to not have transportation," she said. She has noted that laws don't prohibit charging fees for other services and programs, such as athletics.

Welty said laws allow citizens to join forces to hire a private company to bus students, while the school board has to lay off its own bus drivers.

"I would like to see us fight this," she said, adding later, "The squeaky wheel gets the grease. I want to be a squeaky wheel for awhile."

Welty volunteered to spearhead a movement to seek changes in the school code during a future state legislative session.

Brown disagreed that a pay-to-ride fee would be a viable solution.

"There will always be kids who can't afford to pay," she said. "What do we do about them?"

Meanwhile, as superintendent, Thomas said it is his duty to notify state officials that the district is facing a $1.9 million deficit and that only $1.2 million in cuts have been made. He said he will ask the state to give the district until early November to make the additional cuts.

His administration had reluctantly suggested eliminating elementary transportation, but board members refused.

The district could gain some state aid if the fourth-Friday student count comes in higher than the projected 15,500 pupils, Thomas said. But officials also fear that enrollment could be lower than expected, which means the board would face even more cuts.

The budget deficit emerged for several reasons, including reduced state aid and higher-than-expected costs for special education classes and breakfast programs.

Thomas recommended that the board consider a millage election next spring to seek a maximum 3-mill tax increase. If approved, the tax could be levied for the next school year.

Even with a tax hike, however, officials don't expect to be able to restore many of the cuts made Monday. To save money, officials are considering closing two or more elementary schools next year.

Parents opposed to thought of child switching schools

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

Wayne-Westland parents are split on a middle-school plan that would usher in new student attendance boundaries. But one message is clear: They don't want their children moved to a different building.

Those are among the findings in two surveys released Monday night by the Wayne-Westland school board.

Even as the results were made public, several parents addressed the board and voiced fears about a looming middle school redistricting plan that officials hope to implement next fall.

At least two elementaries would "very likely" be closed if the board approves the impending plan, said Greg Baracy, assistant superintendent for general administration. Newly proposed attendance boundaries are expected to be unveiled in a month.

Under the plan, students in grades nine though 12 would be placed in high schools, while pupils in grades six through eight would attend middle schools. Children in kindergarten through fifth grade would remain in the elementaries.

"The people I've talked to in my neighborhood don't seem to be liking it very much," parent Mark Dani of Wayne told the board.

Canton Township parent Renee Laird said she feared rumors that the plan is simply a veil to implement cross-district busing. But she was assured by Baracy that the rumors are false.

A middle-school plan would provide team teaching and other approaches that the junior highs lack, Superintendent Larry Thomas has said. The change also would place students in more age-appropriate settings, he has said.

The possible closing of at least two elementaries would provide savings for a district struggling with a $1.9-million deficit.

"I hope we keep the focus on the benefit of children instead of profit and real estate," Wayne resident Jim Netter told the board.

The two surveys conducted earlier this year reveal a community divided on the issues.

A mass survey was sent to 40,000 residences, but only 418 responses were received, for a 1-percent return. That survey went to parents and non-parents alike. A second survey asked the same questions but was sent to 400 parents, receiving a 10-percent response.

Thomas noted that more than 90 percent of all respondents want the district to become more efficient, but not necessarily if it means that students will have to switch schools.

As a parent, board member Vicki Welty said she understands that sentiment. But in her duty as a board member, she said the redistricting is "the only way out of a gloomy future."

Because of lopsided enrollments, some elementaries are overcrowded with several hundred students, while Vandenburg Elementary in Wayne, with 178 students, has extra space.

Among the survey results:

■ Forty-three percent in the mass survey favored the new middle school structure, 34 percent opposed it, and 23 percent had no opinion. The smaller parent-oriented survey found that only 34.1 percent favored the plan, while 38.6 percent opposed it and 27.3 percent had no opinion.

■ In the mass survey, 46 percent said the district needs to balance enrollment levels among elementaries, while 32 percent believed otherwise and 22 percent had no response. In the smaller survey, 65.9 percent of parents said enrollment inequities need to be addressed, while 15.9 percent said otherwise and 18.2 percent had no opinion.

■ When asked about moving elementary students to another school, however, the mass survey found that only 39.5 percent would support a move, while 53.3 percent would oppose it and 7.2 percent had no opinion. The smaller survey of parents found that 40.9 percent would support a move, while 50 percent would oppose it and 9.1 percent didn't know.

Responses were similar when respondents were asked if they would support moving junior high and high school students to another school.

Jeff Rahmberg, a consultant for Plante-Moran, the district's auditing firm, introduced the findings to school officials. He noted that some of the strongest opposition is in the west and north portions of the Wayne-Westland district, which serves most of Westland, all of Wayne, portions of Canton Township and Inkster, and a sliver of Romulus.

Board President Mathew McCusker noted that a storm of protest can be expected when residents learn of proposed boundary changes. Although only 1 percent of 40,000 households responded to the mass survey, he said, "there will be 39,700 people who will come in and say they didn't know about it."

'Ombudsman' dies at 93

By M.B. Dillon

Frank Millington

Plymouth Township has never employed an ombudsman. But for 37 years, Frank Millington volunteered for the job, counseling governmental officials, candidates and others concerned with the community's welfare.

Millington, who served as a township trustee and chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, died of a stroke in Plymouth on Sept. 10, 16 days before his 94th birthday.

With his long record of public service, Millington was regarded by many as the town sage.

"He cared tremendously about this community," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy, whose candidacy was endorsed by Millington. "I was very honored that he supported me, because he didn't know me before the campaign started.

"He saw that I was committed to the township's welfare, and asked me probing questions about who and what I am. He will be missed. His long-range view of the community and watching it grow is a very rare thing."

Millington, who lived on 26 acres on Beck Road, was born in Tipton, England, Sept. 26, 1900. He worked at the Studebaker Corp., the Associated Press, and at General Motors Corp., in the Cadillac Division where he was divisional purchasing agent. He retired from Cadillac after 48 years in 1965.

Former Township Clerk Esther Hulsing had high regard for Millington. "For the more than 50 years Ken and I knew him, Frank was vitally concerned about maintaining high standards as far as the community was concerned as a place to live," she said.

Hulsing credited Millington with establishing one of the township's first homeowners' associations.

He also was "vitally concerned about who was on school board and running for office in the township," Hulsing said. "He did his homework and was always very certain he was right. He was a person with great personal integrity."

Plymouth Township Trustee K.C. Mueller used to kid Millington, referring to him as a "triple agent, because he seemed to have connections with everybody. He kiddingly acknowleged he possibly was," she said.

"Anyone who chose to run for office always kind of seemed more secure if they had an audience with Frank Millington," she added. "He would help each candidate clarify issues and put them in perspective; give them the history behind what had been done before and where the township was coming from; and where he thought it should be going."

Mueller said that when she last spoke with Millington he was working on his next five-year personal plan. As his files showed, he was a wealth of "information, history and thoughts. He had the pulse of senior citizens, as well as the general population. I don't think we will ever have someone who can replace Frank Millington in this community," Mueller said.

Millington graduated from and taught for the Dale Carnegie Institute. Preceded in death by his wife Marion, he is survived by a daughter, Suzanne (Robert) Dietz of Okemos; brothers Fred of Northville and Walter of Hoon; four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. He was buried Wednesday from Schrader-Howell Funeral Home in Plymouth with burial at Oakland Hills Memorial Gardens in Novi.

Millington served as president and director of the Economic Development Commission and chairman of the Rotary Finance Committee, Recreation Committee and Water Retention Basin Community.

Millington's philosophy was, "He who hesitates is lost."

He was honored on "Millington Day," held in 1983 in Plymouth Township to commemorate his contributions in public service.

By Jill Halpin
Staff Writer

A former Hoben Elementary School teacher with more than 16 years experience in the Plymouth-Canton school district on Monday was appointed as the district's math and science curriculum coordinator.

A graduate of Michigan State and Eastern Michigan universities, Katherine Harenda of Ann Arbor holds degrees in fine arts and elementary education. She is a member of the Plymouth-Canton K-12 Science Committee and a member of the Plymouth-Canton Committee on Gender Equity in math and science.

Harenda will replace Ellison Franklin, who moved to the position of assistant principal of East Middle School.

In addition to the appointment of Harenda, the board also approved the hiring of 18 new teachers. Seven of the new hires will replace departing teachers and 11 of the teachers were hired due to increased enrollment for the 1994-95 school year.

The new teachers will fill 16 openings at district elementary schools and two at the middle school level.

ing the 6.2 miles over tundra and gravel in 1:01:10 despite a few mishaps. Jim finished in just under an hour, placing fourth in his age group and 16th overall. Other runners, who hailed from all over the world, entered a marathon, billed as the world's toughest, a 50K, and a 32K.

A Scottish bagpiper entertained runners, and a mounted policeman blasted the starting gun.

Probably most memorable for runners were the Eskimos and their hospitality; fascinating culture, and the unrelenting sunshine.

"They are such gentle people," said Aveck. "We left Toronto at 8 p.m. As we flew over the Arctic Circle, it got lighter and lighter. All the Inuits were there to meet us. They put us up in their homes. All the buildings are home like structures."

Nanisivik, in the Baffin Islands not far from the Arctic Bay, is 600 miles north of the Arctic Circle and 1,000 miles past the nearest tree. Aveck quoted one observer who described the country as "almost completely colorless, with just the brown earth and blue sky, but possessing a strong beauty."

Most of the inhabitants work in the zinc and lead mines. Because it never warms up, the ground is permafrost, and there a very little vegetation. Temperatures were in the 30s and 40s, said Aveck.

Visitors aren't the only ones who have trouble keeping schedules when the sun doesn't go down.

"Twenty percent of the work force in the mines are Eskimos. They've never gone by the clock," said Aveck. "They ate when they needed to eat and slept when they needed to sleep. It's not that they don't have a work ethic; it's just that they aren't used to punching a clock."

Imported workers earn $60,000-$80,000 a year in the mines. School goes through the eighth grade. After that, it's a six-hour flight to Toronto for high school and college.

"Most Canadians we spoke with said if good jobs were available in the south, they would live in the south," Aveck said.

The run was begun by the mining company "to give the miners something to look forward to," said Aveck. The local running club calls itself "the Braindead Runners," she said. "It's pitch black for four or five months a year, so a lot of their training is done in complete darkness."

Nanisivik is so isolated that ships come in just twice a year. "Ice boats jam into the ice and travel on top of the ice," she said. The ice cracks beneath the boats, and it can take up to a week to turn around.

Perishables are flown in and cost plenty. "Jim and I bought a half gallon of Tropicana orange juice for $8," Aveck said.

"It was a nice four- or five-day experience, but it was nice to leave, too." Aveck plans to visit classrooms this fall to share her experience with students and show them her photos, which number in the hundreds.

"The Velcro wall and the Orbitron were extremely busy for the older children, it gave them something to do," Bida said, adding sand art and the car show drew lots of attention.

"All reports are that this was a record year," said Fran Toney, executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce.

She said the new approach to street closings — Ann Arbor Trail near Kellogg Park was closed this year — helped boost crowds.

Toney said that's because traffic reports on WJR mentioned all weekend that Ann Arbor Trail was closed downtown for the Fall Festival, the publicity probably boosted crowds.

"Our phone just continued to ring," she said, adding, "It seemed like some of the booths were running out of their products."

"There was lots of traffic through the stores," Toney said, adding new events helped spark interest.

Box Bar owner Chip Falcusan said Tuesday, "I think it was an excellent festival, there were a lot of people, a lot of families, the weather was great."

Community groups who run food booths use proceeds to pay for community programs. Bida said booth operators he talked to were doing well.

He thanked festival assistant manager Charlie Hyde and Sincock for their work to make the festival a success.

ground water.

Resident Dennis O'Beirne also objected to the proposed gas station, citing fire hazard potentials, the proximity of other gas stations and the possibility of a "hang out attraction for undesirables."

"In the past year, we have seen our rural, treed atmosphere reduced to a plowed dirt patch of several acres that are now sprouting soybeans," he said. "Please don't take another planning step in the wrong direction."

Resident Jacqueline Berklich McIntyre agreed, saying the roads are inadequate, and that Cherry Hill "is going to look like Ford Road, which is what we are hoping to avoid. You've given permission to too many strip malls."

Planning Commissioner Catherine Johnson objected to the two-acre development, saying there is no need for a gas station in the area.

"This was an irresponsible PUD. I'm sure they thought it was a good idea at the time, but you won't find PUD's like this any more. I know by law I'm required to vote for this, but I don't support it," she said. "I resent it so much."

Commissioner Vic Gustafson lamented the fact that Wayne County, which has jurisdiction over major roads, won't improve them until years after traffic volumes warrant it.

Commissioner Phyllis Johnson also reluctantly supported the plan. "This is so distasteful. I hope the planning commisson doesn't allow these kinds of things to happen ever again."

Commissioner Melissa McLaughlin stipulated that the development's approval be contingent upon replacing three proposed parking sites with evergreens.

The commission also wants to see left-hand turn lanes on Cherry Hill and Lilley

Gun owners told to back candidate who 'shares beliefs'

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

The Livonia Library auditorium was filled to capacity and beyond last Thursday as the Gun Owners of West Metropolitan Michigan welcomed political analyst Bill Ballenger and several candidates for office to their regular meeting.

The gun group, formed last May, has grown quickly to comprise more than 1,200 members in a 13-county area.

"I see a lot of the patriots (in this room) that are making this country safe for a constitutional republic," said Joe Ditzhazy, the group's executive director. "I thank God there are people willing to step up and be the militia in this state."

The group's reason for being is the erosion of gun rights in the U.S. and in Michigan. The group believes that the Second Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Article 1, Section 6 of the Michigan Constitution have been seriously compromised by gun control laws.

Ballenger, who publishes a newsletter called "Inside Michigan Politics," said that state legislators tell him that their constituents seem more concerned with gun rights than any other issue. "I've had legislators come up to me stunned," he said.

If the group puts its full weight behind one candidate who shares its beliefs, the group could have "an enormous impact," Ballenger said.

His recommendation? The Libertarian Party's candidate for U.S. Senate: Jon Coon.

"John Coon is the only candidate whose views on the Second Amendment accord with yours," Ballenger said. "You can't really trust what Spence Abraham might do once he gets in office (regarding gun rights)." Ballenger also called Democratic candidate Bob Carr soft on gun rights.

Coon, who attended the meeting, drew the only standing ovation of the night. "The Second Amendment is not about duck hunting and it's not even about personal protection," he said. The amendment's purpose is to enable people to "defend themselves against their own government," Coon said, drawing loud applause.

The gun group also heard from Rick Bultkowski, co-founder of the Constitutional Coalition, a group that concerns itself with the entire Constitution. "That Bill of Rights is almost sacred," Bultkowski said. "We'd better take advantage of it and we'd better stop anybody from trying to undermine it."

Gary Stewart, co-founder of Stand Up America, talked about the 10th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which concerns states' rights. Stewart champions a move afoot in many states, including Michigan, to demand that the federal government recognize the 10th Amendment, which reads thus: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

"The 10th Amendment exists, but like the rest of the Constitution it's being ignored," Stewart said.

Dominick Vincentini, a Republican candidate for the state Senate in Oakland County, also spoke reverently of the Constitution to the gun group.

Holding up a copy of the Constitution, he said, "I'm a dangerous man because in this little book I have the supreme law of the land."

Carl Miller, who is on the gun group's executive board, reminded the audience that "we are the government, and without us there is no government. If we don't give them our consent they don't have any authority to govern."

Group raps Rivers' stand on gun control

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

The Gun Owners of West Metropolitan Michigan issued a press release criticizing U.S. Congress candidate Lynn Rivers for her advocacy of gun control laws.

Rivers, a Democrat state representative from Ann Arbor, is running for Congress in the 13th District, which includes Canton and Plymouth townships, Plymouth, Westland, Garden City and the southeast quadrant of Livonia. Her opponent is Republican John Schall. The election is Nov. 8.

According to the press release, Rivers "is living proof of the suspicion that you don't have to be literate to be elected to high office from the Ann Arbor area. Apparently she missed high school when they were teaching the Constitution."

The press release goes on to say, "Apparently, like most educational socialists who have spent only 18 months in the Michigan Legislature, Rivers has forgotten we are dual citizens, of the United States and of the state. She believes it is reasonable for concealed weapons boards in Michigan to deny people concealed weapons permits if they don't carry enough money, even though it is illegal to kill someone to protect property or money. The boards, whose own statute is unconstitutional in Michigan and apparently written by kindergartners with crayons, apparently subscribe to the theory that only political elites and people with money have a right to defend themselves."

The press release faults Rivers for voting for a law that added more restrictions to the manner in which people may legally carry guns.

The gun group believes that the law flies in the face of Michigan's Constitution, (Article I, Section 6) which states: "Every person has a right to keep and bear arms for the defense of himself and the state."

Rivers says that the gun group's argument "is not based on any legal precedent. It's pretty misleading. The materials they put out are not factual."

She said she has read the case histories that the gun group cites to bolster its position, and she has reached the opposite conclusion.

"There doesn't seem to be any legal basis for the arguments they're making," she said.

Dems nominate Arab-American

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Michigan Democrats, always sensitive about ticket-balancing, have nominated their first Arab-American to statewide office, dumping liberal activist Annetta Miller after 24 years.

"Alan Amen brings an Arab name to the ticket. We have 250,000 Arab-Americans in the state," said UAW heir-apparent Steve Yokich.

State Democrats picked Amen to run for the Wayne State University board Nov. 8. He is a five-year member of the Dearborn school board and Henry Ford Community College board (one board does both jobs).

Amen defeated Miller in the only contested race during the Democrats' love-in convention last weekend in Flint. His running mate will be Leon Atchison, retired Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. executive from Detroit and a 25-year member of the WSU board.

Amen makes his living by commuting to Flint to direct the financial aid office of Mott Community College. His issue: "I'm not happy with any of the tuition increases at any college in this state. Every time you raise tuition, you're losing some (students) at the lower earnings end," said the WSU graduate.

Series of errors

The Amen-Miller battle was the culmination of a series of errors and yet another defeat for the Michigan Education Association, whose power ranks a distant second to the AFL-CIO caucus among state Democrats.

Miller, a nurse from Huntington Woods, won her first term on the State Board of Education in 1970 but decided this year, "24 years were enough. It was time for someone else. It has been a sweet and sour experience — a pleasure to see some of my ideas put into policy, but also bad to see the religious right wing insert itself into the board through some members.

"I was very distressed at the support the State Board has given to charter schools. It's an excuse for vouchers," said Miller. She was one of three Democratic board members suing suit to block state aid to the Noah Webster Academy, a charter school with fundamentalist Protestant overtones.

"I wanted to graduate to college after 24 years in K-12," Miller quipped. So when Wayne State board member Robert Naftaly, a former Blanchard administration budget director from West Bloomfield, decided against seeking re-election, Miller bid for that post.

"Miller was too late. A consensus developed that an Arab was needed," said Aldo Vagnozzi, Farmington Hills councilman and a longtime figure in Big Labor's caucus.

Dems tap McNamara for MSU board

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Frank Garrison meant it as a compliment when he called Colleen McNamara "a beautiful young lady" whose chief political credential was "getting fired for trying to organize a union."

Garrison, president of the state AFL-CIO, announced the labor caucus' endorsement of McNamara for the Michigan State University board at last weekend's Democratic state convention in Flint.

McNamara, 44, of Plymouth and Lansing, prefers to run on her own credentials, never mentioning that she's the daughter of the Wayne County executive.

"Higher education should be accessible to everyone," she pledged as she spoke to district caucuses prior to the convention.

Michigan Democrats Sunday unanimously nominated her and incumbent MSU trustee Joel Ferguson, the East Lansing apartment owner who made a surprisingly strong bid for the U.S. Senate nomination.

McNamara said the story Garrison told was true. "I was a waitress when I was in college (at MSU) and tried to organize a union. The union lost. The NLRB (National Labor Relations Board) forced him (the owner) to take me back, and I got back wages."

Extend campus

For six years McNamara has been executive director of the Michigan Cable Television Association, a trade group. Her resume includes work in counseling low-income families with housing problems, five years on the state Senate staff and membership in the Democratic Women's Caucus.

Her platform: extending MSU's efforts into the community, helping non-traditional students and assisting students of all income levels.

As Ferguson's running mate, she will succeed Barbara Sawyer-Koch, who bowed out after two eight-year terms on the MSU board.

Although MSU has been the scene of bitter battles over the president versus the athletic director and closed meetings in hiring a new president, Ferguson candidly told Democratic delegates "it's not the most important job on the ticket."

Ferguson, who is black, was interested in being gubernatorial nominee Howard Wolpe's running mate. But when Secretary of State Richard Austin, 81, opted for a sixth term, Wolpe turned to state Sen. Debbie Stabenow, the woman who ran second in the gubernatorial primary.

Thomas picked

Democrats nominated Carol Thomas, a school union leader and Southfield resident, for the State Board of Education, succeeding Annetta Miller (see related story). They renominated incumbent State Board member Gumecindo Salas, MSU professor from East Lansing.

Completing the ticket, Democrats also renominated University of Michigan regents James Waters of Muskegon and Paul Brown of Mackinac Island; gave incumbent Supreme Court Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. a chance to run for a full term; and tapped Washtenaw Circuit Judge Don Shelton as his high court teammate.

"I have experience in education and experience in leadership with unions," said Thomas, executive vice president of the Detroit Federation of Teachers. "There's nobody on the ticket who can contribute what I have in depth."

A former math teacher in Detroit's Pitcher Elementary School, Thomas said, "I'm not for charter schools or the voucher system, or any of the Republican programs eroding public education. Those are union-busting and taking away collective bargaining rights of teachers. And I'm not for religion in the classroom," said Thomas, who has degrees from Wayne State and the University of Michigan.

Democrats spent much of the weekend blistering Gov. John Engler's efforts to curb the power of public employees unions.

"I want to defend our school system and our union," said Thomas.

"We'll never allow this state to become a right-to-work state," said Stabenow. "This governor (Engler) doesn't get it. If you let education money trickle down to Amway, it's not gonna make a good job," she said. Democrats continually blasted Engler for cutting adult ed funds for public schools and increasing job training funds for corporations like Rich DeVos' Amway.

"Remember four numbers: 5—1—2—8," said gubernatorial nominee Wolpe. House Bill 5128, now Public Act 112, will curb school unions' rights to strike and to bargain for their own insurance carrier as well as many school decision-making committee jobs. PA 112 takes effect next April. Wolpe and the convention vowed to repeal the law if they win control of the Capitol this year.

Kelley ruling cautions assessors

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Local assessors and the state Treasury Department may legally require homestead owners to list their Social Security numbers when they apply for property tax exemptions, Attorney General Frank Kelley has ruled.

Kelley's formal opinion cautioned local units to keep Social Security numbers confidential. His opinion has the force of law unless it is overturned by a court.

Kelley's opinion came last week in response to questions from three state senators. A handful of angry suburban homeowners had insisted that the state couldn't require their Social Security numbers when they applied to have their school tax rates cut from 24 mills to 6.

"The Department of Treasury, through local assessors, may collect Social Security numbers for identification purposes in its administration of the homestead property tax exemption," Kelley said.

"Social Security numbers (provided to assessors and Treasury) must be kept confidential and may not be disclosed to any other persons than those associated with administration of the homestead tax exemption."

He said, "Congress has authorized the use of Social Security account numbers by the (state) Department of Treasury and local units of government in their administration of the homestead property tax exemption."

Kelly advised local officials not to use Social Security numbers for any other purpose and to "store the completed affidavits in a secure area not accessible to the public.

"Make the Social Security number unreadable before making a copy of it to be given to anyone not administering the property tax exemption," he added.

During the controversy last May, a state Treasury spokesman said some applicants had refused to list Social Security numbers. They forced Treasury staffers to look up the numbers from income tax returns, raising the cost of administration, but did not prevent the state from obtaining the number.

SLEEP DISORDERS CENTER
If snoring is keeping you or someone you know from a more productive life, call the Providence Sleep Disorders Center.
An estimated 10 to 30 percent of adults snore, and for most, snoring has no serious medical consequences. However, for an estimated one in 100 persons -- typically, overweight, middle-aged men -- extremely loud, habitual snoring is the first indication of a potentially life-threatening disorder, called obstructive sleep apnea.
Snoring is caused when the airways are not fully open. A particular pattern of snoring interrupted by pauses, then gasps, reveals that the sleeper intermittently stops breathing.
Obstructive sleep apnea affects people in different ways and often disrupts personal lives and work. Some people fall asleep at inappropriate times, while driving, for example. Other people have difficulty concentrating or become unusually forgetful. And some become irritable, anxious or depressed. Often, family members, employers or co-workers recognize a pattern of changes in mood or behavior that prompts a visit to the doctor.
The physicians at Providence Sleep Disorders Center provide state-of-the-art diagnostic testing and therapeutic solutions for sleep-related problems in adults. Services at our Center are provided by professionals who are specially trained and experienced in diagnosing and treating sleep disorders. Patients are seen by physicians who are board-certified sleep specialists.

William T. Allen, MD, is medical director of the Center. Dr. Allen completed his undergraduate and medical degrees from Michigan State University. He completed a residency in internal medicine at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor and a fellowship in pulmonology at the University of Michigan Medical Center. He is a Diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine and Pulmonology and of the American Board of Sleep Medicine. Dr. Allen is also a Fellow of the American Sleep Disorders Association.

Timothy Hsu, MD, is the associate director of the Center. Dr. Hsu graduated from Harvard College and received his medical degree from Michigan State University. He completed residencies in both internal medicine and psychiatry at the Mayo Clinic, and a fellowship in sleep medicine at the University of Michigan. Dr. Hsu is a Diplomate of the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology and of the American Board of Sleep Medicine. He is a Fellow of the American Sleep Disorders Association.

School group to meet

Drawing for the randomly selected members of the Goals Committee for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools is complete.

That completion came about with the drawing for the random eight members of the group. The public drawing, conducted by board president David Artley assisted by trustee Mark Horvath and Superintendent Charles Little, chose two volunteers each from elementary, middle and high school parents and two volunteers who have no children in the district. Two alternates were also selected from each category in the event the original volunteers are unable to serve.

Those selected were: elementary parents, Kelly Jenkins and Phil Korovesis; middle school parents, Janice Peploski and Susan Scholfield; high school parents, Barbara Case and Gary Gavioli; and volunteers with no children in school, Sharon Gunter and Greg Morrison.

Alternates, who will serve only if those originally selected are unable to serve, were: elementary parents, Susan Margle and Robert Kokoszka; middle school parents, Beth Hempel and Patricia VanDusen; high school parents, Madeline Nunn and Deborah Wellman; and volunteers with no children in school, Richard Ham-Kucharski and Harvey Heneveld.

"There were 107 people who volunteered for these eight positions," said Artley. "That's a tremendous indication of the interest people in Plymouth-Canton have in their schools. We were only sorry that we couldn't put everyone on the committee."

The 47-member committee is composed of representatives from all parts of the community and all groups within the schools.

"We've included all the stakeholders," said Little, "so that the goals which this group develops are truly the goals which the schools need to address for the balance of this year. The willingness of the community to be part of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' life is important. These numbers speak well for Plymouth and Canton."

The group, which began meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 13, is charged with advising the school board on goals for the district for 1994-95 school year. Their report is expected to be presented to the board sometime in October.

Stars I've seen, songs I've sung

I still can't believe I saw them with my own bare eyes - Billy Joel and Elton John. My bare eyes just don't get to see that many famous people. I did see Mickey Mouse four years ago in Florida. In fact, I was close enough to him that I shook his paw. (We got his autograph, too.)

And Bob Bennett, the reporter for Channel 4, sat at a table near ours in a Big Boy restaurant in Ypsilanti once. And I did catch glimpses of President Bush through umbrellas and drizzle and darkness and lots of tall people standing in front of me when he came through Plymouth on his whistle stop train tour back in '92. But those occasions are very rare. I guess famous people are called stars because they are so far away all the time.

But, as I mentioned, I did see Billy Joel and Elton John. Two huge stars. With my bare eyes at the Silverdome back in August. Such performers! Such music! I was lifted out of my seat by it all! Their songs sounded just like the ones on my radio, and I knew the words! So I sang along. And the people there, the tens of thousands of them, they all knew the words, too. And they sang along.

There were garish spotlights, binocular vendors, sound equipment bigger than some apartments, and two grand pianos face to face, shinier, blacker and bigger than any piano in any music store I've ever been in. It was really cool.

The two played familiar songs all night long. Most of the songs, I realized, had been stuffed into this nook of memories I've got in my head.

That evening I heard songs that conjured up

Fall Festival big on family fun

Plymouth- and Canton-area residents marked the end of the summer last weekend with the annual Plymouth Community Fall Festival.

Homespun entertainment was provided throughout the three-day festival. Flo Lorimer of the Canton Senior Citizens Kitchen Band, at left, spiced up her band's Friday night show by dressing as an Italian chef while her group sang "That's Amore." Other local groups, such as the Polish Centennial Dancers, Plymouth Theater Guild, and the Renaissance Chorus, kept the festival-goers entertained.

Politicians were aplenty as U.S. Senate candidate Spencer Abraham and State Sen. Bob Geake, R-Northville, strolled through the festival shaking hands and chatting with constituents.

The Chamber of Commerce, Jaycees of Plymouth-Canton, and the Canton classes of 1995 and 1996, were some of the community organizations who set up booths around town hoping to raise money and awareness. The highlights of the event were the annual Kiwanis pancake breakfast and the Rotary chicken barbecue.

LORENE GREEN

Dear Ms. Green,
I am a right-handed 26-year-old. I am very interested in getting my handwriting analyzed.
I have been told that it is strange for someone who is right-handed to write with a back slant. Is this true? What exactly does this mean?
Thanks.
R.G., Farmington Hills

Extensive studies have proven that the ratio of both right- and left-handed people with a back slant to their handwriting is about equal in number. Here is the most widely accepted research on back-slanted handwriting, and I invite you to examine it and make your own determinations:

Back-slanted writers are often introspective with low emotional response. Rarely do they show what they are thinking or feeling at first glance. Many of them like keeping to themselves, remaining anonymous.

They are inclined to hold others at arm's length emotionally. This gives them a vantage point of control from which to operate. They, not others, are in charge of whether or not you will become friends. They are influenced more by their head than their heart. And often they perceive some hurt or rebuff from early life.

Movement to the left always carries an element of returning to self and security, rather than extending out into the world of risks and the unknown.

Our writer is a young woman who is individualistic and may act in ways that are unconventional and nonconforming. She was probably raised in a female-dominated home.

Early in her development, she wanted to be independent of home and society's dictates. This may have caused friction for those involved, so within her we see a struggle between her need for security and possibly a stronger need to follow her own star.

This handwriting style suggests intelligence and sophistication. She is a modest young woman, sensitive and subjective. She does not chase the limelight. Still she can be rather dominant at times, and she has the ability to direct and control. She knows what she wants and has the drive to make things pay off.

There is a directness to our writer. She adheres to a philosophy that is rational, pragmatic and to the point. In addition, she is prepared to take a stand for what she believes.

This young woman is goal-oriented and has a strong sense of purpose. Organizational skills are well developed. Mental efficiency cannot be missed. She knows how to discard the unnecessary and move right along with a task. Her determination helps her stay the course.

An active interest in the material, physical side of life is also here.

An awareness for form and proportion can be seen. I suspect art aptitude or some creative bent for her.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, signature and handedness are all helpful. And objective feedback is always welcomed.

Car show raises $3,000 for Hospice

Children were the real winners of the recent second annual Canton K mart Classic Car and Street Rod Charity Show. The show raised $3,000 for Hospice Services of Western Wayne County Inc.

"We are so very grateful to K mart manager Chuck Wagner and the store associates, it's really very inspiring," said Maureen Butrico, Hospice Services' executive director. "Each year the event gets bigger and better, and the enthusiasm of K mart staff is incredible . . . You could see that people were happy to be there, they wanted to learn about hospice, and they were really having a good time."

A car enthusiast himself, Wagner showed his 1993 Mustang Cobra and 1967 Chevelle. Wagner is a four-time sponsor of the event. He began the show when he managed of the Westland K mart and brought it to the Canton store when he was transferred there.

"Each manager decides (which charity to donate to), but I think it's important to give to Hospice, where the money will go to the families and not to people sitting behind a desk," he said. "We have also had several people employed here who have dealt with Hospice and they have always been treated nicely."

Some 140 classic cars, trucks and street rods were on display, attracting nearly 1,500 people. In addition to the show, there was a bake sale, food concessions and live broadcast by Oldies Radio WHND-AM radio, featuring on-air personality Boogie Brian.

Two checks were presented to Butrico — one for $2,500 from K mart & Friends for the money raised at the show and one for $500 presented in memory of Prudie Maffett, the grandmother of longtime K mart employee Gerard Grines. A hospice patient she died two months ago at the age of 103.

The money was used to pay for Camp Phoenix, a new weekend camp for children ages 6-15 who have suffered a significant loss of a loved one. The camp took place Aug. 19-21 at the YMCA's Camp Ohiyesa in the northwest Oakland County. The weekend camp experience is designed to facilitate a healthy grieving process in a safe, shared, accepting environment.

As a result of grants and fund-raising efforts like the car show, Hospice Services was able to offer Camp Phoenix at no charge to campers.

Hospice is a special kind of compassionate care for the incurably ill and their families. Hospice Services provides a comprehensive program which enables the patient to live each day in the peace and comfort they deserve. Care is provided based on need rather than ability to pay.

The same concern is shown for the families and caregivers after the patient's death. A full range of bereavement support services are provided for a minimum of 13 months.

Hospice Services has offices at 6701 Harriso St., Garden City, and 127 S. Main St., Plymouth, to serve persons living in western Wayne, eastern Washtenaw and southern Oakland counties.

high school cafeteria dances and carhop waitress days at the A&W and summertime tanning afternoons with the radio nestled close by in the grass (that was before ozone worries and SPF 30 lotion).

That night I saw again in my mind's eye the critter-infested riverbank apartment where I once lived long ago — the place where I typed up my first batch of resumes. And somehow, that long ago apartment didn't seem so yucky while the music played. Music does that — evokes the old days and then sort of airbrushes them, making them softer, fuzzier, even a bit nicer than they really were. Don't you think so?

Music that evokes that's good. And if I can sing along, too, well, then that's even better. I love music that has words I can decipher and notes in the middle C range and happy, jaunty rhythms.

So when Anna — you've met her before in this column — called to tell me she and her family had tickets for this most excellent concert of singable songs, I was envious. When she asked if I would babysit 4-year-old Lauren while the rest of them went to this concert, I was, how can I say this, "Happy for them." Yes, that's it.

Anyway, after a few days being "happy for them" passed, Anna called again. It seemed that her older daughter Jessica didn't really want to go. So Anna invited me. I greedily accepted.

This was going to be my third concert ever. I went to one in the '70s (as a teenager), another in the '80s (as a fiancee), and now I was heading out for still another in the '90s (married, four children). I'd heard a different artist in each decade. Who knows? As a grandma in the next millennium I might head out yet again. For the fourth time.

So concert day arrived. The rescheduled one; Billy Joel, you may recall, needed to cancel the original engagement because of a bad cold. Tim, Anna and Rachael (the daughter who wanted to go) picked me up after they'd driven from their home in Grand Rapids, and together we fought rush hour traffic all the way up to Pontiac.

Before the concert started, we ate dinner at a truckstop not far from the Silverdome. As we sat down on the cracked red vinyl seats of the back booth, Anna remarked, "This is quaint, yet creepy."

An old man with a long, dingy white beard sat by himself a few tables away from us. He was crumpled, huddled really, over his coffee, barely breathing. I wondered about him. I think he must have been heading over to the concert, too. Probably his fourth one.

Just a note . . . Some editions of last Thursday's paper didn't have quite enough room for the entire Family Room column. So for those of you who may be wondering what happened at Plymouth's Business and Professional Women's Club dinner meeting that one night, they laughed. Whether they laughed with me or at me, I can't be sure. But the point is, they laughed. And that's good.

Recreation

Public will have say in planning

Canton Township is going in the right direction by asking residents what types of recreation the township should provide.

By law, the township must revise its recreation plan every five years in order to receive state money. But Canton is going beyond what is required by doing a community survey, and sponsoring focus groups, public hearings and workshops to find out what residents want.

The survey comes at a good time for Canton residents who are in support of an ice arena for the community. Recently, parents stood in line overnight at the Plymouth Cultural Center to sign their children up to play hockey, and some were shut out because of the lack of ice time available at the Plymouth facility.

That points up the need to at least look at building an ice arena in Canton, which, with a population of about 60,000, is about twice the size of Plymouth.

Also, Canton Township is looking for more cooperation between the Plymouth-Canton schools and the township on recreation. That's the correct direction in which to go. Often gyms, swimming pools and schoolyards designed for recreation and paid for with taxpayer dollars sit unused because of the lack of such cooperation.

However, recreation doesn't always mean there's a score, a ball, teams or leagues. Jogging/walking paths, fishing sites, hunting land, gun ranges and petting farms are also recreation sites.

Currently, Canton has a $13 million community recreational center under construction. It includes workout facilities, swimming pools and meeting rooms.

The irony of the community/recreation center is that while it is being constructed, facilities at many schools are not accessible to youths during the summer or on weekends.

That was pointed up by Canton Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter at a recent meeting when she urged better cooperation with the schools.

Supervisor Tom Yack said: "There has to be recognition by the schools that there are other goals and objectives that need to be accomplished rather than just educational ones. They shouldn't just think of a playground as satisfying educational leisure needs from 9 to 3, September through June."

Yack said the township has contacted the school district, offering to bring in improved soils for the playgrounds at the two new Canton elementary schools. "We were willing to work with them, but we never got a response," he said.

Canton Township residents have a wonderful opportunity to improve recreation in their community. The township will start the survey in October. It's time to stand up and be heard.

Endorsed diplomas good step

The first crop of high school graduates with state endorsed diplomas hit the job market this summer and started as freshmen in colleges and universities this fall.

It will take several years to determine what effects the program will have on education and improving the state's image for potential employers.

During that time, suburban educators and parents should make sure the intent of the state measure is implemented by the schools.

That intent is to give parents, educators and potential employers a yardstick by which to judge the effectiveness of public education. And in these days of grade-point inflation, it gives employers a better method with which to hire workers.

For parents, the number of endorsed diplomas in a district gives them an indicator by which they can judge how their school district stacks up against others in the state.

However, getting those numbers this summer was difficult. The state doesn't keep track of the number of endorsed diplomas granted by school districts. A contractor was retained to obtain and send to districts the gold seals that accompanied endorsed diplomas, and the contractor wasn't required to supply the state with the data. The Observer checked with a number of districts over the summer, many of which were operating on skeleton crews and couldn't supply information on how many seniors graduated with endorsed diplomas.

The endorsed diplomas are based on MEAP scores taken by high school students in the 10th and 11th grades. Starting this year, students were required to pass those exams in math, science and reading to be able to receive endorsed diplomas.

But making the new system work isn't all up to the schools. Parents are equal partners in ensuring that MEAP tests are a true reflection of the abilities of students. Students also need to know that they have a stake in taking a MEAP test and having the endorsed diploma accomplishes that.

Until now, students had no reason to take MEAP tests seriously. It was just another day out of class for test taking.

Although it's hard to prove, we've often wondered just how seriously students took the tests.

At the present time, the numbers look good for endorsed diplomas. In Livonia, 86 percent of those who graduated received endorsed diplomas, while in the Plymouth Canton district, about 88 percent hit the mark.

Also, schools have the ability to retest the students who failed to make the endorsement grade.

MEAP testing has sparked some controversy among educators, parents and students. Some educators argue, and rightly so, that MEAP test results aren't the only indication of how well a student has mastered basic skills. Some private schools don't even give the tests, considering them meaningless.

However, when education gets kicked into the public arena there has to be some system of measuring the effectiveness of how public tax dollars are spent.

MEAP scores and the state endorsed diplomas aren't the perfect system. But they are important steps we can take toward making sure our children have the basic skills to compete in the 21st century.

Are you serious?

Abolish The Death Penalty? (Sept. 1, "Opinion")? You must be joking. Fungus like Manson are sitting in prison flipping channels on his TV from his rack using his personal stick. He's doing "easy time," leeching the taxpayers' money.

No one in the world can convince me Manson should be allowed to inhabit this earth.

What about child killers, serial killers and just plain-old murderers? Just shuffle them off to prison so they can hang out for life parasitizing society via taxes, complaining about wearing uniforms when in reality they should be removed from existence just as they removed the existence from their victims.

Of course capital punishment does not deter crime. I propose capital punishment as a means to eliminate the killer from society.

People need to look at a murder from the victim's perspective instead of sympathizing with the killer. I do not think the impact of a lost life is realized among people who oppose the death penalty.

I cannot believe that a family who has lost part of that family to a murder would feel justice has been served if the murderer simply went on living in prison, being clothed and fed by the very family the killer destroyed by the murderous act.

Good outing

This year's men's and women's golf outing was such a tremendous success that it has exceeded even the committee's expectations. This was made possible only because of our generous contributors and volunteers.

The Canton Chamber of Commerce would like to thank you for your donation for our 1994 golf outing. Your donation was greatly appreciated and your business name was listed in the golf program and in our monthly newsletter as a contributor to this event. We look forward to your participation in this fun-filled event next year.

A thanks

On Aug. 16, my daughter and I were involved in a serious accident at the intersection of Plymouth and Gotfredson roads. There were numerous people who stopped to provide their assistance during this traumatic experience. I would like to take this opportunity to thank all these people for their caring and kindness. We are truly grateful.

I would also like to thank the Superior Township police and fire department, deputy Patrick Bell, Tom Barden and Don Marsh from Huron Valley Ambulance, they were outstanding in their care of my daughter and keeping us both calm. Thank you also to Dr. Bitterman and the fine staff at St. Joseph's emergency room. Mrs. Barb Stadtmiller was the first to stop at the accident and provided immediate assistance, thank you, and Rev. Brandham who was so supportive and contacted my family.

This was a difficult experience, however I have learned that there are truly many wonderful people in this world. I thank you and am grateful.

Outcome based education isn't about partisan politics

BY BOBBIE CLEARY
GUEST COLUMNIST

I found Tim Richard's article on Engler's opposition to outcome based education inaccurate. OBE is not about partisan politics at all.

Outcome based education, also known as mastery learning or Skinnerianism, has been around for some time. Skinner claimed that he could train a rat or a pigeon to read if he simply reinforced positive behavior and punished negative behavior at the proper time.

That, in essence, is the character of OBE: It consists of mindless training and endless behavior modification. Children who are constantly trained by mastery learning curriculum, even the ones used by Christian schools, simply cannot think for themselves, despite all the rhetoric the schools chant about critical thinking.

Since 1965 when the Elementary and Secondary Education Act was passed at the federal level, education has been on a rapid downslide. As the federal government has been researching innovations in education (all of them being OBE), they have concurrently tracked the changes different curricula have effected in the attitudes and values of students.

This is why when Dr. John Hoben promoted OBE in Plymouth-Canton Schools, he knew a new technology package was needed. This is so every individual child can be eventually computerized and tracked to see how they are progressing "developmentally." Are they becoming the type of people a large central government wants? The National Diffusion Network has been amassing numerous "validated" programs since 1965, validated to effect prescribed changes in attitudes and values.

When former President George Bush met with then Gov. Bill Clinton and the other governors for a conference on education, America 2000 was born.

When former President George Bush met with then Gov. Bill Clinton and the other governors for a conference on education, America 2000 was born, a supposedly Republican reform. When Bill Clinton was elected, the plan changed in name only. Neither party wanted to give up the increased power grab for the federal government.

The planners of Goals 2000 own the minds of the future of our country. They hold the power to decide which behaviors and attitudes are acceptable and which are punishable. Once business and education links are completed, the average citizen's child will simply be a "human resource" to fill the slot that government and business have collaboratively deemed in their best interests.

You can be sure free thinkers and independents will be punished, i.e., found only fit to shovel manure. It is a more subtle form of a controlled society than the USSR ever attempted.

Harvard elitists and businessmen have already stated that the future needs will be for a malleable and compliant worker, with literacy not even a necessity due to computer pictographs. The worker will simply need to be primed and prompted at the correct time, just like Skinner's pigeon.

In fact, a highly literate society would be downright dangerous to an ever-increasing, ever-encroaching government and financially squeezed business community.

OBE is not about conservatism or liberalism. It is about being able to think and choose freely for oneself, as opposed to the government determining the outcome of every student's life.

Proceed with caution when privatizing schools

It's an interesting question. I don't know the ramifications," a plain-speaking Robert Roy, Ed.D., said several times during our interview.

Roy is the new (since July) superintendent of Pinckney Community Schools. That's the Livingston County school district seriously considering "privatizing" — hiring a business called Educational Alternatives Inc. (EAI) to operate the schools.

My questions (on the Sept. 4 WXYZ-TV Channel 7 show "Spotlight on News") focused on the public's right to information about their schools if a private business runs them.

One or more members of the Pinckney school board have an ideological agenda — to privatize for the sake of privatizing because all government is bad and all business is good. They obviously are wired into the Mackinac Center, the Midland think tank whose essays constantly bash public schools and extol the virtues of "choice" and private schools.

Neither Rob Roy nor Larry Beckett, the new business manager, knew who was providing the ideological thrust. Roy intends to make a yes-or-no recommendation on privatizing to the board by Dec. 31.

Roy seems to be a common-sense guy, not an ideologue: "Privatization is a tool that can be used to free up money that can be put back into the curriculum. I'm an advocate of privatization to the extent that it's a valuable tool. I don't believe in privatization for the sake of privatization. It has to have a purpose and a function.

"I was hired to take an outside look — stand back from the emotionalism that has taken place in this school district. In the process, I am not only examining EAI's but also the MEA (union) proposal," Roy said. He wants a lot more detail from EAI and MEA about operations, goals and accountability before he recommends anything.

"Privatization" is a buzzword in Michigan, in these years of expensive public employee union contracts. But business and government are different creatures. In Roy's words, "Now we're working with a private corporation in a marriage with a public corporation."

TIM RICHARD

'Privatization' is a buzzword in Michigan, in these years of expensive public employee union contracts. But business and government are different creatures.

Some unanswered questions in a privatized situation:

- If administrators fire an employee or expel a student, does that person still have a right to a public hearing before the board under the Open Meetings Act?
- If parents have gripes about school boundaries or bus routes, can they appeal to their elected board of education for changes?
- Will the corporation still release MEAP scores and annual improvement plans as required under PA 25?
- What does the elected board do about curriculum and other matters once a private corporation is in charge?
- What does the superintendent do?
- What happens if voters throw out a majority of the current board? (They elected two anti-EAI candidates last June.)

We have reason to be suspicious of the current Pinckney board majority, which twice has been hauled into court over the Open Meetings Act. Once the board was spanked for a closed meeting with EAI.

A week ago, the Pinckney board settled an open meetings suit by paying $13,500 to plaintiff Charles Porter. He argued the board violated OMA by holding a closed disciplinary session on the previous superintendent.

What's particularly bothersome was board member Richard Baumgartner's defiant response to the Brighton Argus. He insisted the board had done nothing wrong and that the courts have a "bias" in favor of anyone who sues the board.

Using Orwellian double-think, Baumgartner said, "That's the maliciousness of the complaint . . . Charles Porter (plaintiff) cost the taxpayers money."

Privatization could be dangerous when a board has such a public-be-damned attitude.

Michigan's public schools under a fateful microscope

Summer's over. It's back to school for hundreds of thousands of kids who will be once again a battleground in the continuing war over the future of public schools in Michigan.

I don't want to sound too alarmist, but I suspect that the next five years or so are going to be crucial to the fate of a public school system that has served our children well for most of its 150-year history but has come on hard times in recent years.

Today, many parents and most employers believe that the schools provide neither the academic rigor to prepare our kids to compete in a rapidly globalizing economy nor the grounding in values to guide them for good citizenship.

And so the general cry has arisen to reform the schools. Not surprisingly, it has taken many forms.

One Michigan district, Pinckney, is considering privatizing, turning over management of the schools to a corporation, Educational Alternatives Inc. That might be a good idea, but see Tim Richard's column on the same page of this newspaper for a list of questions that should be asked before taking the plunge.

Charter schools are another experiment sanctioned by the passage of Proposal A. The Noah Webster Academy, headquartered in Ionia County, starts this fall a statewide network of 1,500 home-schooled children connected with teachers through correspondence, telephone and computers.

Charter schools like Noah Webster are supposed to receive $5,500 per student, the same per-pupil funding that goes to other schools. A legal challenge, however, has been filed arguing that the school violates a constitutional prohibition against spending public money on private schools.

These various experiments have received a lot of media attention, often at the expense of some very serious and far-reaching reforms already set in place by the Legislature and the State Board of Education.

Did you know, for example, that the academic performance for all kids in Michigan schools is assessed three times before graduation? And did you know that the results of these MEAP (Michigan Educational Assessment Program) tests are published, school by school, in this newspaper? And did you know that most schools, embarrassed by poor scores, are busy changing teaching methods and materials in order to improve?

PHILIP POWER

Did you know that all schools will be required by 1997 to implement an academic core curriculum, complete with performance level standards? Hearings at various locations around the state on these proposed core academic outcomes will start this November.

And did you know that these various assessment devices are now being used to endorse diplomas, so parents and employers can get a good idea of just how well graduates did in their academic work?

All schools are required to prepare for public disclosure this fall an annual plan for improvement. How about that?

The point of this recital is that a whole lot of work is already under way to improve our schools. It won't happen overnight, but the foundation for serious reform is being laid by some thoughtful people on the State Board of Education and by Bob Schiller, the state superintendent of public instruction.

I suppose it isn't as sexy in the media as fights over privatization in Pinckney or suits against the Noah Webster Academy, but it would be a big mistake to overlook the solid reality of change that is taking place right before our eyes.

Ten years ago, the road to a normal childhood would have been too long for this baby to survive. Your donations to the United Way have supported the kind of medical research in prenatal care that gives premature babies like this the chance to survive.

The United Way supports some 140 agencies in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties that help the homeless, the illiterate, the unemployed and many more. And because nearly 90 cents of every dollar you contribute goes directly to those in need, you can be sure your donation will make a difference. So please give to the United Way. Plymouth chilihead places 2nd in cook-off

Congratulations to Ken Horn of Plymouth for winning second place in the Michigan State Chili Cook-off on Sunday at Acadia Restaurant in Auburn Hills. Jim Weller of Bloomfield Hills won fifth place.

The winner was Mary Ellen Janes of Wyandotte who will represent Michigan in the World Cook-off in Reno, Nev. on Oct. 2.

Third place was won by her husband, John Janes; Ron Cubberly of Chelsea was fourth.

We were well represented at the cook-off. Of the 47 cooks competing, 14 live in Observer & Eccentric communities. I was one of the judges, and believe me picking a winner wasn't easy.

Be sure to pick up the Observer on Monday, Sept. 26 for the chili cook-off story including pictures, chef's secrets, and the winning recipes.

Meet people, lose weight, feel great

BY DIANE HANSON
SPECIAL WRITER

"Do you know what T-R-O-U-B-L-E is like?" The cowboy's question caught me off-guard. He was handsome, short in stature and serious about his question.

"Why, no," I had to admit.

"Do you want to see it?" he asked with a twinkle in his eye.

With barely a consenting nod, boot-clad, 7-year-old Tony McHugh dazzled me with the intricate pattern of the Country Western line dance T-R-O-U-B-L-E.

Duly impressed and somewhat intiminated, I asked the young man when he started line dancing. Secretly I hoped he would say he learned to walk to the strains of "Boot Scootin' Boogie" or "Achy Breaky Heart." No such luck.

"Like, six weeks back," he said with an impish grin.

This made me even more hestitant to try learning my first line dance at the class that Tuesday evening at the Wayne Community Center. That little cowboy was good, and I was certain my two left feet would collide with one another should I attempt to force them to submit to such a pattern. McHugh's mother, Annette, reassured me.

"No matter how bad you are at it everybody says, 'Oh, that's OK.' Everybody will work with you," she promised. "It's just a lot of fun and it's good exercise. The people are really friendly. I haven't found a non-friendly person yet."

I began to realize that there may actually be hope for my ability to learn line dancing. I was still stuck in the random disco dancing style of the 1970s where the ability to move was the only prerequisite.

I didn't know what I was doing. I had never even learned any of the old line dances like "The Stroll," or "The Hustle." How was I supposed to join the 190 plus dancers gathered at the community center, moving in unison to the soothing and hip hip country melodies, without heading on a collision course?

Associations make sure teachers step in line

BY DIANE HANSON
SPECIAL WRITER

To be sure that your diagonals, dips and drags aren't confused with your slides, stomps and strolls, it's a good idea to learn Country/Western Line Dancing from someone in the know.

Line dancing started out several years ago "as a maverick type of thing," according to Gail McClure who, along with John McClellan, form the line dance teaching team of Denim and Lace. As that maverick dance form grew rapidly in popularity, a dance of the same name could look entirely different from one locale to another.

The need for some regulation became apparent so that "when you go to one class they don't call a leg lift a scooth and another place calls it a hitch," said McClure.

The National Teachers Association for Country/Western Dance (NTA) and Country/Western Line Dance Asocation (CWLDA) are two organizations that attempt to bring some uniformity to line dancing. They distribute a teacher's manual, and a phrase manual as well as offer workshops to keep members informed.

Kitty Leach of Farmington Hills is a Country Line Dance instructor. As a member of NTA she has seen more uniformity in dance steps within the past two years.

While line dancing itself is a very old dance form, emerging from ancient tribal circle dances and the precursor of couples dancing, the Country Western line dancing rage has really come into its own within the past two or three years.

Doctors, lawyers, teachers, policemen, dentists, children, teens, senior citizens, folks from every walk of life and all ages are standing in line just to do it. What? Country Western line dancing of course, dude!

"It's good exercise. It's a great way to meet people, and you don't need a partner."

Those were just a few good reasons Gail McClure immediately listed why so many people enjoy line dancing. McClure is the Lace portion of the line dance teaching team of Denim and Lace. The Denim half is partner John McClellan. Both are Westland residents.

Initially, the pair started teaching couple's two step patterns but began teaching line dance about four years ago.

"The demand was just so great," explained McClure. "We had people keep asking us why we didn't teach line dancing." Once they did, the classes grew. They now employ other instructors as well and teach in schools and bar classes, Downriver, in Novi, Pinckney, Brownstown Township, Howell and Livonia.

Lonestar

Judy DeLorenzo and her partner and fiance, Gary Reno of Novi, make up the line dance teaching company known as Lonestar. They also enlist the abilities of eight additional instructors who teach bar classes, private parties and at community centers.

Although Reno enjoys line dancing, he prefers to handle the business end of the organization while DeLorenzo obviously delights in donning the hat, boots, and other western garb, positioning her wireless headset and turning a crowd of eager city-slickers into a synchronized company of co-ordinated cowboys and girls.

"The music that is country music today is kind of like soft rock 30 years ago," said Reno. DeLorenzo agreed. "It used to be, 'My wife left me. The dog died. The deal failed.' It was all down. Now it's much more upbeat. The music itself has made a big difference in line dancing."

"It's really gratifying to watch people as their stumbling and they're learning and 45 minutes later everybody's moving as one unit," said DeLorenzo. "Or just to sit back and watch them dance and to know that I've taught them that. It's really incredible!"

She's right! I took my place somewhere in the middle of the group of nearly 200, hoping to be relatively inconspicuous.

DeLorenzo began calling off the steps, demonstrating as she went slowly and only a few steps at a time. She walked among the crowd as she repeated the same sequence over and over. So far, so good.

Satisfied that we could accomplish that much, she added the next series of maneuvers with numerous repetitions. Then we had to put it all together. She continued on with the same method until the entire dance was completed.

Next, she added music. Starting with a slow tempo and still calling off the steps, I began to feel as though I made it through an off-Broadway audition, and was on my way to the final cuts.

The next song picked the pace up considerably but DeLorenzo's reassuring voice kept us all in step. Then came the real test. The third song quickened the tempo even more and suddenly, DeLorenzo stopped telling us where are feet should be, which way we should slide and where that grapevine belonged.

Lo and behold, barring a few minor close encounters with those surrounding me I found myself facing the four walls at the proper time and having a ball doing the "Hillbilly Jitters!" That 40-minute lesson was as aerobically dynamic as any session I experienced with my VCR version of Jane Fonda and a whole lot more fun.

"I don't think the people realize the exercise they will get," said DeLorenzo. "Once they get started and see how good they feel — then it's apparent." DeLorenzo dropped 27 pounds since starting line dancing a few years back. "And it's not because I stopped eating, believe me," she confessed.

Country Class

Beverly Arsenault of Garden City, "Country Class" owner and instructor teaches classes through Wayne/Westland Continuing Education as well at the Plymouth Elks, Dearborn Civic Center, Plymouth VFW and other locations.

One of the biggest advantages according to Arsenault is you don't have to have a partner. That's a real advantage for people who are newly single either from a bad relationship or the death of a spouse.

"All of sudden, they've been been in a couple oriented situation for so many years, they don't know where to start," said Arsenault. "They have no self esteem. It's like starting to learn to walk. All of your friends are married. All of a sudden you're alone — 'Where do I go? Where do I fit in? What do I do? I'm a fifth wheel."

Arsenault had been divorced about nine years when she went to a lounge with friends and first saw country line dancing performed. She was intrigued.

"When I found out what this was and that you didn't need a partner I thought this is great!" she said. Now married to Joe, with whom she enjoys doing other types of western line dances and who also helps her teach classes, line dancing is still her passion.

Barbara Perrin of Westland is divorced and agrees with Arsenault. "The nice thing about the line dancing is you don't have to have a partner," she said. "I've met a lot of people and we go to a lot of dances all around the area."

Perrin takes classes from both DeLorenzo and Arsenault because "you learn different things." Another plus for Perrin is the opportunity to be someone other than a school teacher and a mother.

"It gives me a chance to put on boots and I have a hat," she said with a smile. "It gives you a chance to dress kind of funky."

DeLorenzo said line dancing brings families together. She knows families who plan to meet at a hall on certain day each week to dance together."

One of the big benefits of line dancing is all ages can do it," said McClure. Denim and Lace teaches a children's class through the Livonia School District.

Dancing for fun

Teens and preteens, too young for the adult scene, find line dancing to be a great outlet. Beth Gillis and Stephanie Myers, both 12, and both Northville residents, have been coming to the Wayne Community Center Lonestar Roundup lessons ever since they were offered.

"It gives you something to do that's fun," said Gillis. "You can't go out to a disco or anything."

Plymouth resident Pat Flannery, a single gentleman employed by Wayne County, started line dancing because he was just "sitting around the apartment and doing nothing but going to work and going home."

He hasn't missed one of DeLorenzo's Tuesday classes since she started teaching them.

"It's a good way to learn," Flannery said. "You'll see some people who have been doing this for a long, long time. Other people started a few weeks ago. Nobody looks down at anybody. If you're having trouble with a step, more than likely the guy next to you is going to give you a hand. Nobody is going to take offense."

For Arsenault, "The biggest advantage of all this is when you have people come to you and tell you these things about how line dancing has changed their life.

How they had no self esteem, no confidence, nothing. They felt like such failures. They started to get out. They started to make a social life for themselves. They started to be with people. They made a lot of friends — and it's changed everything for them."

"A few years ago, I'd get up on the dance floor to do a certain dance and in that area they'd have a different way of doing it," said Leach. "Now I see where you can go to different areas and it's more or less the same steps."

Finding a place to learn country/western line dancing may be as easy as contacting your local school district's continuing education office, city recreation office, church, or country/western lounge.

Some classes run for a number of weeks and are paid for in advance, while others run every week and are paid for at the door, like classes offered by Lonestar with NTA instructor Judy DeLorenzo at the Wayne Community Center. Those classes, currently offered on Tuesdays, will be offered on Thursdays as well.

Lonestar will also offer a monthly Country Jamboree at the Wayne Community Center beginning Friday, Sept. 16.

Classes tend to fill up fast. Beverly Arsenault, a member of NTA and CWLDA, has watched her Wednesday night classes offered through Wayne/Westland continuing education grow from 12 to 20 people up to the one class before Christmas that had 192 people in it.

Many metro Detroit country western lounges offer lessons on certain nights.

Newly opened Cadillac Cafe offers food, entertainment

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

It's hard to please everybody, but Keith Wadle, 29, owner of Cadillac Cafe and his staff are trying very hard. Wadle opened the restaurant, formerly called Johnny Magnum's, in February after extensive remodeling. Wadle grew up in Bloomfield Hills and now lives in Westland.

He brightened up the restaurant with a fresh coat of paint, knocked out walls, and opened up the ceiling to the second floor to create a more open, airy atmosphere. The color scheme is softer, but Spartan — lots of greens. Wadle is a Michigan State University grad.

The dance floor is new, along with TVs, pool tables, dart boards and pinball machines.

Outside, there's a new deck with umbrella tables, and plans are in the works to improve the landscaping. Wadle is a member of the Farmington/Farmington Hills Chamber of Commerce and a member of a beautification committee composed of business owners on Grand River between Eight Mile and Nine Mile.

"We're not a burger and fries joint, but we have a good burger. It's only $3.95 and served with fries and all the trimmings," said Chef Greg Grattarola, 32, of Keego Harbor, a graduate of Oakland Community College's Culinary Arts program.

Menu: Chicken, ribs, steak, seafood, salads, sandwiches
Appetizers, soups, salads: $1.50 – $6.96
Entrees: $7.95 – $14.25
Combination restaurant/bar, quiet dining upstairs, deck. Reservations recommended for parties of 6 or more.
Seating capacity: 235.
Credit cards accepted.
Hours: 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. Monday – Saturday, 5 p.m. to 2 a.m. Sundays

Everything on the menu is homemade, including the salsa, soups, desserts and bread — an Italian round flat bread baked with olive oil and fresh rosemary.

"We offer generous portions, a quality meal for a realistic price, with outstanding service," said manager Maggie Hayden.

Cadillac Cafe's menu offers something for everyone — soups, salads, sandwiches, ribs, a 14 ounce New York Strip Steak marinated in bourbon and chargrilled, chicken dishes, a pasta bar, shrimp and scallop dishes, as well as daily specials.

Those watching their diets will enjoy the fresh fish special offered every day, and Heart Healthy dishes like chargrilled salmon topped with non-fat yogurt, cucumber dill sauce and served with vegetable and red skin potatotes; and chargrilled chicken served on a bed of greens with pineapple-strawberry vinaigrette and red skin potatoes.

Entrees are served with salad or cup of soup and homemade bread. If you're hungry for beef, there's a Cracked Black Pepper Tenderloin served wtih a mushroom, onion, cognac cream sauce and potato. For $5.95 extra you can have surf and turf and choose from any of Cadillac Cafe's fresh seafood choices.

Chicken Florentine — sauteed chicken strips with spinach, artichokes and a lemon cream sauce that's served over pasta will appeal to lighter appetites.

Spicy Shrimp — sauteed jump shrimp with tomatoes, roasted peppers and pea pods, in a spicy wine sauce served over pasta is a house specialty.

Bring the kids along, there's a menu just for them, and the restaurant has high chairs and booster chairs for little ones.

Private dining rooms are available for large parties of up to 100 people and special ocasions.

After 10 p.m. the crowd ranges in age to 25 to 45. There's live entertainment on Monday and Wednesday nights beginning at 9:30 p.m., and a DJ Thursday to Saturday, beginning at 9:30 p.m. There is no cover charge.

Opening a restaurant was the last thing on Wadle's mind when he began premed studies at MSU. During the summers he worked as a dish washer at ares restaurants, and at P.T.O. Malley's in East Lansing while going to school. He graduated with a bachelor's degree in science, but after some soul searching decided his heart was in restaurants, not medicine.

"Cadillac Cafe is a combination restaurant and bar," said Wadle. "You can play pool or darts, sit down for a quiet dinner, dance or sit outside on the deck. We're planning to add a brunch. We also have a banquet room that can seat up to 100 people and a special menu. We can accommodate the customer's needs whether it's family style, a buffet, business meeting or appetizer/cocktail party."

"We want people to come here, have dinner, and stay and enjoy themselves," said Hayden. "Our waitstaff is friendly, personable, realiable, efficient and neat. The food is excellent, and the prices are reasonable for the amount you get."

House specialty: Maggie Hagden and Keith Wadle of Cadillac Cafe present Sauteed Jumbo Shrimp on the deck of the newly opened restaurant.

Westland native shines in 'Fiddler on the Roof'

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Handsome Dan Cooney who grew up in Westland and graduated from John Glenn High School, shows his rebellious side again as Perchik in the 30th anniversary tour of "Fiddler on the Roof" playing at the Fisher Theatre in Detroit until Oct. 2.

Cooney recently finished touring the U.S. and Canada as Che in "Evita." If you missed the show at the Fisher last September, don't worry, you've got another chance to see this very talented performer.

His role in "Evita," as the revolutionary Che Guevera was larger, but Cooney puts the same amount of energy and heart into his portrayal of Perchik in "Fiddler on the Roof."

For those unfamiliar, "Fiddler" is the story of a Jewish family — Tevye a dairyman, his wife, Golde, and five daughters set in the small Russian village of Anatevka in 1905 on the eve of the Russian Revolutionary Period. "Fiddler" is about families, marriage, traditions, faith, and being displaced from home by events beyond your control.

Perchik is a university student from Kiev, and revolutionary who falls in love with Hodel, one of Tevye's daughters.

He meets Tevye while passing through the village, and offers to give his daughters lessons in exchange for meals and a place to stay.

"Fiddler on the Roof" features a book by Joseph Stein based on the stories of Sholem Aleichem, with music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick.

The songs are unforgettable, including "If I Were A Rich Man," "Matchmaker, Matchmaker," "Do You Love Me?" and "Sunrise, Sunset."

A simple set, softly lit with hues of orange, grey and brown provides the backdrop for the story which opens with Tevye and the villagers singing "Tradition." There aren't many set changes, most of what the audiences pieces together about Anatevka comes from the villagers who live there, another way of saying home is not a place, but in your heart.

Even though he's played Tevye over 1,000 times, Theodore Bikel makes you feel like it's his first. Marcia Rodd does a fine job as Golde, his wife.

"Matchmaker," with Tevye's daughters Tzeitel, Hodel and Chava singing about the man of their dreams is a highlight. While singing, the girls slide their brooms across the floor and act surprised when they catch them as if they were doing it for the first time.

Cooney makes his entrance on the eve of the Sabbath in Act 1. As Perchik, he brings to the role many of the same qualities that made him oustanding as Che in "Evita." It's easy to see how Tevye's daughter, Hodel, played by Michele Ragusa, "who has her eye on the rabbi's son," could be swept off her feet by this stranger who looks as if he could, and will conquer the world.

"Sabbath Prayer," is beautifully executed. Tevye, his family and guests in the center of the stage are flanked on either side by four other families repeating sabbath prayers and this tradition, a weekly ritual, which binds them together.

The "Bottle Dance" performed during Tzeitel's wedding in Act 1, is another highlight. A lot of people wondered how the bottles stayed on top of the dancers' heads without crashing to the ground. It was an amazing feat.

When the curtain falls on Act 1, there's a hint of trouble to come.

In Act 2 Cooney and Ragusa sing the duet "Now I Have Everything." They look at each other like two people desperately in love, and their beautiful voices soar.

Chava, Tevye's third daughter, played by Stacey Lynn Brass, shocks her father by marrying a soldier Fyedka, (Bruce Alan Johnson) who is not Jewish, in a church.

"Fiddler" ends sadly, but you'll leave humming the songs. The audience opening night loved the show, and you will too.

REVIEW

'Annie' cast got a well-deserved standing ovation

BARBARA MICHALS

"Annie," that staunch tribute to eternal optimism, continues to exude its charm in the current Nancy Gurwin production at the Jewish Community Center. The lively, talented cast, led by 10-year-old dynamo Diana Steingold in the title role, earned a standing ovation on opening night.

The familiar comic-strip tale of the little orphan who gets adopted by a billionaire while the country struggles through the Depression has enormous appeal no matter how many times it's viewed. The bouncy Charles Strouse-Martin Charnin songs make "Annie" a prime example of a "feel good" show.

Steingold, even younger than the character she portrays, has impressive stage poise and uses wonderful body language and facial expressions as character enhancements. She belts out pleasing solos of "Maybe" and "Tomorrow" with perfect aplomb, and easily holds her own in ensemble pieces such as "I Think I'm Gonna Like It Here," "N.Y.C.," and "I Don't Need Anyone But You."

Ably backing Annie are a fine sextet of plucky orphans — Brooke Andres of Livonia, Chaire Fasi, Jenny Piorkowski, Amy Gross, Morgan Rose, and Michele Sick — delivering "It's a Hard Knock Life" and "Fully Dressed."

Gary Sturm is highly convincing as Oliver Warbucks, the hard-edged tycoon whose heart is melted by the irrepressible Annie. Sturm has a commanding presence benefiting his character, and his pleasing voice smoothly handles "N.Y.C.," "Something Was Missing," and "I Don't Need Anyone But You."

Diana Reynolds is delightfully funny as the orphan-hating Miss Hannigan, one of the all-time great musical-comedy roles. She makes the part her own, steering clear of imitations of her Broadway and film predecessors, as she vocalizes her dislike of "Little Girls."

Sharing comedy honors with Reynolds are Jamie Richards, perfect as the shady Rooster Hannigan, and Lisa Andres, his tawdry girlfriend Lily. The trio deliver a strong, energetic "Easy Street" as they scheme against Annie.

Linda Barsamian is a likable Grace Farrell, Warbuck's clever secretary with a crush on the boss, and she lends good vocal support to many of the ensemble numbers.

Edgar Guest III makes a very credible FDR, surrounded by fusty, self-important cabinet members Rhone Fidler as Perkins and Mark Hammel as Hull. Mark Holden gets maximum laughs as the stodgy Ickes, turning the small part into a comic gem.

Director-choreographer Kathi Bush and music-vocal director Carole Mihalo have achieved a well-balanced, skillfully polished production. Patricia LaFramboise's costumes work well throughout. David Reynolds Sr.'s set designs are fine when they are representational — the orphanage, the New York skyline — but the more literal set of Warbucks' living room looks absurdly dull, shabby and recycled.

For anyone seeking a ray of sunshine, "Annie" is the ticket.

Barbara Michals is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

LET'S GO! MOVIES

'Princess Caraboo' captivates those she encounters

One day in 1817, a beautiful young woman mysteriously appears in an English village. Wearing a turban and speaking a language no one in this corner of the world has ever heard before, the exotic stranger, whose name seems to be Caraboo, completely baffles everyone she meets in "Princess Caraboo" opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters.

It may be that Caraboo is a gypsy or, worse, a vagrant. In either case, the authorities, not knowing what to do with her, put Caraboo in jail. Yet there is something graceful, self-assured, even regal about her, and soon she captures the imagination of the local aristocrats when she manages to convey to them that she is a princess from a faraway land. This secures her release from jail and brings her to the attention of several skeptics, including newspaperman John A. Gutch. He suspects she might be a fraud and begins to investigate her origins even as he, too, is falling under her spell.

Princess Caraboo, a romantic and comic film based on a true story, stars Phoebe Cates, Jim Broadbent, Wendy Hughes, Kevin Kline, John Lithgow and Stephen Rea. Directed by Michael Austin, the film is produced by Andrew Karsch and Simon Bosanquet and written by Michael Austin and John Wells.

It is England in 1817, and there is general unrest among the poor. The English aristocracy, in fact, has had strict laws passed to keep the peasants under control, laws that allow for the jailing of vagrants or just about any other suspicious characters. Even more dire consequences await anyone committing fraud: in most cases it could mean the death penalty. And that is what Caraboo faces if she turns out to be a charlatan. Is she a princess from a Southeast Asian kingdom as she claims to be or an impudent fraud playing a dangerous game with the most powerful in the land? Whatever the answer, no one can doubt her extraordinary appeal as she manages to climb to the top of England's social ladder in no time at all, captivating all those she encounters.

Playing Caraboo is Phoebe Cates (Gremlins, Bodies, Rest and Motion), who had to learn a strange vocabulary of sounds which, along with her character's graceful hand language, convinces all around Caraboo that she really is a princess from somewhere near Java.

"Most of it is made up, but it is based on real Indonesian and Thai sounds in particular," Cates says. "Michael (Austin) wrote them into the script, and I translated in my head what they meant. Occasionally he did say, 'Just mutter something!' I was also really helped by Anthony Van Laast, the choreographer, before the movie and during because he helped me to create a convincing body language."

Jim Broadbent and Wendy Hughes star as Mr. and Mrs. Worrall, leading citizens of the area who hope to advance themselves in wealth and social status by taking Caraboo into their stately home.

Broadbent describes his character as "a nouveau riche on other people's money. He's an entrepreneurial merchant banker who has borrowed heavily and is deeply in debt, but he has to have a lot of front, so he'd rented this huge, stately home with his wife's money. He's got a lot of energy and a lot of ideas but is fairly ruthless."

Mrs. Worrall, on the other hand, "is a very kind person and quite gullible," Hughes says. "Through the film she actually develops some courage and she really does have a personal journey. She learns something by spending time with Caraboo. She is not greedy, like her husband, and when she sees what a monster he has become, she realizes that she has no need for him at all."

Oscar and Tony Award-winning actor Kevin Kline stars as the Worralls' Greek butler, Frixos, who, along with the other Worrall servants, is initially very suspicious of Caraboo.

"Princess Caraboo" is rated PG (Parental Guidance Suggested).

'Where the River Flows North' deserves a look

JOHN MONAGHAN

"Where the River Flows North" tells a story as old as the hills, or at least the Vermont forests in which it is set. Old Noel Lord, a cranky and grey-bearded logger, is being unfairly forced to be "bribed off his land" by a group of developers.

It's 1927 and the valley where Noel's family has been making its living for generations will soon be under 50 feet of water. The company people building the area's first hydro-electric dam offer him $5,000, far more than other locals are receiving, yet he refuses to budge.

Instead, he comes up with what he considers a brilliant trade. He'll give up his lifelong lease to the land for a stand of 100 ancient trees. They think he'll preserve the trees as a nature park, but he plans to cut each one of them down, make a killing on the lumber, and move to Oregon.

What saves the movie from becoming a cliche is the fortitude with which it has arrived at area theaters. It is now playing at the Main Theatre in Royal Oak after setting house records in the northeast, an amazing feat for a movie starring Rip Torn and an unknown Indian actress.

The movie rides on these two actors' shoulders, and each is up to the task. Torn, best known today for his role as the on-screen producer of "The Larry Sanders Show," is virtually unrecognizable beneath a shaggy gray beard and layers of rough, bulky clothing.

Most of the time, however, it's Tantoo Cardinal who steals the film. The Native American actress (she had bits in "Dances with Wolves" and "The Black Robe") plays Bangor, Noel's mate and housekeeper, who speaks her mind whether the old man wants to hear it or not.

The relationship is a strange one. Frequent visits to the wife and child buried atop the hill show that Noel's true love died long ago. Cardinal's depiction of companionship is both funny and poignant, her smile and unspoiled love of life reminiscent of Giulietta Masina in Fellini's "La Strada."

She echoes our own thoughts when she wonders out loud whether the old man is up to the task of cutting down so many trees before the company people figure out what he's up to.

At least two of the smaller parts are filled by well-known actors. Michael J. Fox, donning Teddy Roosevelt mustache and round glasses, tries his hardest but still looks like a boy in a man's part. Treat Williams fares better as a fight promoter who offers Noel yet another option to logging.

The movie, co-written and directed by Jay Craven, takes its time to reach the final credits. It lingers for a spell on the blazing leaves in fall and the all-important river and forces you to recognize the beauty that Noel doesn't want to give up.

"Where the River Flows North" is dynamic almost without meaning to be. Although far from a great film, it deserves a look for its depiction of a lifestyle long buried by progress.

LET'S GO! TRAVEL

Getaway to falls was great, make reservations

BY SANDRA DALKA PRYSBY
SPECIAL WRITER

Spontaneity might be good for some things, but not for travel.

That's what I, my husband and children discovered on our recent getaway to Niagara Falls.

It started with a spontaneous idea (by some "naive" family member) of going to Niagara Falls for an overnight mini-vacation. After all, it was only five hours away (approximately 250 miles) and this popular tourist attraction offered a wealth of activities for a family of five including three children ages 11, 13 and 15. Although Andrew, 15, said that looking at a whole lot of water wasn't his idea of a good time.

Undaunted by mixed opinions and emotions, the family packed the car and early one rainy Saturday afternoon took off for the Canadian side to experience what has been labeled "a natural wonder," mesmerizing travelers from around the world.

We did leave without room reservations, but, according to friends, "that shouldn't be a problem, because there are hundreds of motel/hotel rooms at and around Niagara Falls." Also, we left without trading our American currency for Canadian funds at a bank or the border to get the best exchange rate — something our friends did advise.

The first part of our journey — from Windsor to London, Ontario, was fairly dull. The only sites were vast stretches of farmland. It wasn't until we reached the city of Hamilton and the Hamilton Harbour that both the views and the weather improved. Brief glimpses of the hills, then of Lake Ontario and finally of wine vineyards, made the journey more pleasant.

It was on the final leg of our journey that we discovered our first mistake. We stopped for dinner and gas at a place with the unCreative name of "Stop 50." (It was right at Exit 50!)

The menu selections at this musty smelling restaurant were varied, but also very expensive.

That's OK, we thought. "With the .35 40 percent exchange rate, the prices will be much lower."

Were we wrong! This place gave only 10 percent on our American dollars, so the $6 BLT sandwich (fries extra) was $5.40. And our $40 bill was not $24 to $26 as we expected, but a whopping $36.

We sure learned a lesson! The lessons (If you don't exchange your currency (a MUST!), at least ask what percentage the establishment is giving on American dollars! If it's not good, leave!

Make reservations

When we arrived in Niagara Falls under cover of darkness, we discovered our second, and most serious, mistake. We could not find accommodations, anywhere. Guess what other lesson we learned? We learned that whenever and wherever you travel, it's important — no, make that essential — to make and confirm lodging reservations before you arrive at your destination. A good place to start calling for information is the Niagara Falls Canada Visitor and Convention Bureau 1-800-ONTARIO.

Had we made reservations, we could have stayed close to the falls, at reasonable rates, and at one of the lodgings offering such family features as indoor pools and game rooms. Fall rates range from $28 to $190 for two persons, two beds, with a minimal or no charge for children.)

After eight hours and more than 100 miles searching for a room, any room, we arrived at the Niagara Falls (Ontario) Parks Police station. It was 3:30 a.m. We were desperate and exhausted.

The officer on duty offered a solution. We could park on the circular drive in front of the building and sleep in our car. It was the only option left, and we took it.

The next morning we discovered we had one of the best views in this tourist town. We overlooked the falls on one side, and a lovely garden, with washrooms, was just feet away on the other side. Also, we were parked in a bona fide parking space, a rarity in the main tourist areas.

After washing up and changing clothes, this "homeless" family began what turned out to be one of the best vacation days ever.

Seeing the falls

The falls, we discovered, are truly spectacular. Even Andrew enjoyed watching "a whole lot of water" crash into Niagara River from heights of 177 (Canadian Horseshoe Falls) and 184 feet (American Falls).

We saw the falls from the top, from the Canadian side and from the American side and, best of all, from a Maid of the Mist boat at the bottom of the falls.

Covered in vibrant blue hooded raincoats (provided), we traveled so close to the falls that the deafening roar and the spraying water made us realize how truly awesome and powerful this water flow is. (Maid of the Mist continues its operation through October 24.)

Other views of the falls can be obtained from such attractions as the Niagara Spanish Aero Car, an aerial cable car that travels over a spectacular whirlpool (open until the end of November), and Journey behind the Falls, which, like its name, takes you behind the falls to observe the full force of the falls (open all year).

Also, on the New York side, Goat Island offers spectacular views from the edges of both falls, and the Cave of the Winds trip (Goat island) takes visitors on wooden walkways to within 25 feet of the base of the falls (open through October 31).

Viewing the falls is just a small part of the Niagara experience. The area offers a menagerie of other attractions, many of which were enjoyed by the Prysby children.

Tourist attractions

Dazzleland, a family fun center with arcade and video games, was among our favorite hangouts. This attraction is on Clifton Hill Street, which also sports such amusements as Louis Tussaud's Wax works and Movieland Wax Museum, Guinness World of Records, Ripley's It or Not, the Magical Houdini Hall of Fame and the Adventure Dome.

We found it expensive to walk on this street, which also has a scary side with the House of Frankenstein, Castle Dracula and the Haunted House. The kids wanted to see and do everything. We had to set a financial limit forcing them to select just a few activities.

The endless attractions of Niagara Falls eventually took their toll on us. We were tired from our lack of sleep and from exploring this amusing and alluring area.

We began our retreat not knowing that soon we would make our third mistake of the trip.

When we reached London, we decided to return via Sarnia and the Blue Water Bridge. We thought we would enjoy a change in scenery. Besides, we've never been over this bridge.

It wasn't until we neared Sarnia that I learned what a bad decision we had made on selecting this route home. The Blue Water Bridge had a five- to seven-mile backup. it took us one and a half hours to get over the bridge.

To make matters worse, the border guard said the backup is a "known fact" Sunday evenings. (Too bad, we didn't know this fact!)

Anyway, we eventually arrived home with lots of memories. It wasn't what we expected, but "a wonderful time was had by all!"

STREET SOUNDS

Superstar — Superstar

The name "Superstar" is pretty pretentious for an up and coming band. But there really isn't much that's pretentious about this Scottish quartet.

Superstar is all about straight-ahead pop — without the pompous attitude of some other British bands who shall remain nameless. Lush harmonies reminiscent, believe it or not, of the Beach Boys, form a base for Superstar's sound.

Every once in awhile, different ingredients are added in. For example, in a nod to singer/songwriter Joe McAlinden's classical background, a four-piece string section carries the ballad "The Reason Why." Horns spice up the very accessible "I Can't Help It."

Alex Chilton, the epitome of pop, even lends a hand (rather a guitar) in the song "Don't Wanna Die." Soup Dragons fans might like to know that Superstar is a side project of Jim McCulloch.

With "Superstar," pure pop never sounded so good.

LIVE REVIEW

Voodoo Lounge Tour — Stones at Spartan Stadium

In the 1960s, it was written that a city about to be visited by the Rolling Stones experienced a strange tension, like a notorious street gang was about to blow into town. And while the Stones may not inspire that kind of fear today, the atmosphere in East Lansing the week leading up to their show had been nothing short of electric.

It's useless to compare a Stones show in 1994 with one from their heyday. These days the band is less synonymous with sex and violence than old drug habits and big lips. But in the face of age, continuous jabs by late-night talk show hosts and the threat of self-parody, the Stones defiantly strutted on stage Friday night and, for more than two hours, rocked nearly 50,000 faithful and non-believers alike into a frenzy.

Even after 30 years of media overkill surrounding the Stones' every movement, seeing them live, in the flesh, is an overpowering thrill. And the music sounded as hot and vital as ever.

Flames jetted as a lean, muscular Mick Jagger came out dancing to the pounding beat of "Not Fade Away." Despite the lines in his face, Jagger displayed incredible energy and stamina. The same concert goers who may have snickered about "Grandpa Mick" hours earlier shrieked and squealed with delight as he broke into his trademark snaky moves. Jagger's dancing and Keith Richards' rhythm guitar are the core of the Stones experience, and witnessing these two forces of nature live was pure magic.

The Stones have never been a technically perfect live act, but the dirty guitars of Richards and Ronnie Wood meshed perfectly, especially on trademark stompers like "Tumbling Dice" and "Honky Tonk Women." It's a cliche, but seeing Richards play on stage is like watching the beating heart of rock'n'roll. Kicking his legs and pumping his arms, Richards looked possessed by the music's pulse.

Meanwhile, Wood was as playful as ever, smoking and grinning as he bounded around the stage, supplying incredible slide guitar throughout. New bassist Darryl Jones held down a dependable rhythm, and was even showing his own dance moves by night's end.

The stage show itself was a good compromise between the overly flashy "Steel Wheels" concerts and the stripped-down tours of the late 1960s. There were pyrotechnics and impressive gimmickry, but they remained secondary to the incredible charisma of the Stones themselves.

The show wasn't just about hard-rocking firepower, either. There were plenty of tender moments: Richards' warm vocals on "The Worst," a romantic "Beast of Burden" and a loud but touching ovation for silver-haired drummer Charlie Watts, whose usually stony expression broke into an embarassed smile.

Newer numbers were well-received, especially the sinister single "Love Is Strong" and "I Go Wild," which turned into an anthemic sing-along. A definite highlight was an extended "Miss You" that let the band stretch out and shine. Lesser-heard classics like "Rocks Off" and the funky "Monkey Man" were treats for the hard-core fans, but the final barrage of hits had everyone standing and dancing with excitement.

From the moment Richards hit the party-time opening riff of "Start Me Up" through the last pumping chords of the "Jumping Jack Flash" encore, the Stones were like some supernatural force. The way they shrug off jokes about their age and keep on doing what they love, fiercely and as wonderfully as ever, should be an inspiration.

It might be silly to say that nearly 50,000 fans went home Friday night, suddenly realizing that age really has nothing to do with rock'n'roll. But from the sweaty, satisfied grins on stage during their final bows, one could tell that the four Stones already knew it was true.

Suns shed light on their heritage

■ Immigrants Suns' music is like a recipe with a touch of this, a touch of that and and a pinch more. And their well-seasoned sound, they say, is a nice change from the noise in popular culture.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO

:Shades of heritage: Immigrant Suns — Joel Peterson (clockwise from top left), Ben Temkow, Doug Shimmin, Djeto Juncaj and Mark Sawasky — will soon release their debut CD.

It's safe to say that the Immigrant Suns is one of the most versatile bands in the Detroit area. One night they may play their passionate, mostly European ethnic music at a private club in Hamtramck. The next they may gig at alternative havens Alvin's or St. Andrew's Hall.

Wherever Immigrant Suns go, their music, which is a hybrid of Albanian, Turkish and other European cultures, gets rave reviews.

Immigrant Suns recently got the stamp of approval from a Turkish Wayne State University student who had only been in the United States a week. He was surprised, band member Doug Shimmin said, to see a group of "suburban American guys" playing music in a rhythm found mostly in Eastern European and Middle Eastern dance music.

Their last show was a spot opening for the loungey pop band Love Jones at the Burns Room in St. Andrew's Hall. (They'll return there Tuesday, Sept. 13, to open for Combustible Edison.) The band was so impressed by Immigrant Suns that they're considering bringing them on tour with them.

The self-proclaimed "chameleons of music" make the audience feel at ease which may be part of the attraction of the band. Anyone who has even an atom of Eastern European heritage in them will feel like they've just stepped out of a family wedding at an Immigrant Suns show. In a land where gangsta rappers and down-trodden grunge rockers rule, Immigrant Suns shed a little light playing what Djeto Juncaj calls "happy music."

"People thought we were a refreshing change after hearing all the noise in the popular culture," said Juncaj who plays the guitar and violin among other things.

Transfixing shows

Immigrant Suns shows are so transfixing that it's easy to forget you're watching something, ah-hem, educational.

Violinist Ben Temkow and accordionist Shimmin vocalize with the utmost emotion, and Juncaj thrashes his black cheekbone-length bobbed hair while playing a potpourri of instruments, including the electric guitar.

Joel Peterson, a veteran of Not Me Dave and the ska band The Exceptions, keeps his trademark smirk on his face while playing his stand-up bass.

Mark Sawasky, who has played every music genre from Polka to rock, pounds away on his drums like he's still in a rock band.

They swap instruments throughout the show as well so they're a handful to watch.

The Immigrant Suns' music is so inspiring that fans have taken to writing poetry and even a film after their shows. The film, written by Ithaca (N.Y.) College film student and Michigan native Jeremy Schroeder, is a "surreal fairytale" that features six Immigrant Suns songs and Shimmin in a major role. "Stand in the Water" will premiere in the Detroit area at the Immigrant Suns soon-to-be scheduled record release party for their CD "Montenegro."

Instrumental decision

For years, Juncaj had an Albanian folk instrument called a Qyteli sitting around his home as a decoration. When he thought about incorporating that with his band Granfalloon, his fellow bandmates weren't really into it.

Knowing that the Detroit-based band Sugi Gun would be receptive to trying most anything, Juncaj strolled into a rehearsal with his Qyteli in tow. Then-Sugi Gun members drummer Sawasky and former Plymouth resident Shimmin liked what they heard and decided to record the music with violinist Ben Temkow and bassist Joel Peterson. That was roughly two years ago.

As a testament to their talent, Immigrant Suns will perform at the Ark in Ann Arbor on Oct. 1. Temkow has a few reservations about playing there.

"I hope they don't mind the distortion," Temkow said with a bouncy laugh.

In early to mid-November, the band will release "Montenegro" on their label Pho-Net-Ic, which also works with Sugi Gun, Burnt Weiners and Not Me Dave.

No, there's no pretentiousness to be found in this band. The accomplished musicians, or at least just Shimmin and Temkow, are it in for one reason.

"Girls."

Immigrant Suns perform Saturday, Oct. 1, at The Ark, 637½ S. Main St., Ann Arbor, (313) 761-1451; and Saturday, Oct. 8, at The Tap Room, 14915 Charlevoix, Detroit, (313) 824-1030. Sugi Gun will reunite for the Thursday, Sept. 22, Weird Music Workshop at Alvin's, 5756 Cass Ave., Detroit, (313) 832-2355.

Bent Lucy: Looking to home for support

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Westland-based rock band Bent Lucy has received fan mail literally from all over the world. But in their hometown, they just can't seem to conjure up the same admiration.

"We're like Jesus of Nazareth," guitarist Rob Miller said. "We are not welcome in our own town." He's not just spewing Matt Dillonisms from "Singles," ("We're loved in Belgium," he told "bandmates" Eddie Vedder and Stone Gossard after receiving a bad review.) So far, they've captured the attention of RIP and California's BAM magazines, generating interest from a variety of record labels.

Miller blames the lack of support on the hands-off attitude that grips most music executives, clubs and bands. All of them want success, but they're all afraid to take a chance, he said.

"They want to play football but nobody wants to touch the football," Miller said.

The band is hoping to gain notoriety locally now that they've released their Rustbelt Records debut "Clowns." It's been a frustrating trek so far. Bent Lucy has heard that their songs are too long (they average six minutes), not radio-friendly, and because lead singer Matthew Ruffino makes a few positive references about God, they've been wrongly labeled a Christian band.

"They can't define our sound and it's threatening to people. Our music has a great beat but you can't dance to it," said drummer Michael Brasic in reaction to those comments.

"We're scary to too many people," Miller added. The sound in question can be best described as The Doors with a dirgy, heavy 200-pound sound. (They even have an unpredictable lead singer in Ruffino whose actions have caused them to be blacklisted at a handful of clubs.)

They said they don't plan on changing their sound to make it more "commercially accessible." Bent Lucy, which also includes bassist Kirk Bleau, is not giving up, however. Now is probably not the right time for them, Brasic explained.

"It's just not cool to like us yet," Brasic said with a laugh.

Bent Lucy will perform with Magic Dragonat Friday, Sept. 16 at Alvin's, 5756 Cass, Detroit, (313) 832-2355; and at the Magic Bag Theatre Cafe, 22918 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, Friday, Oct. 7, (810) 544-3030.

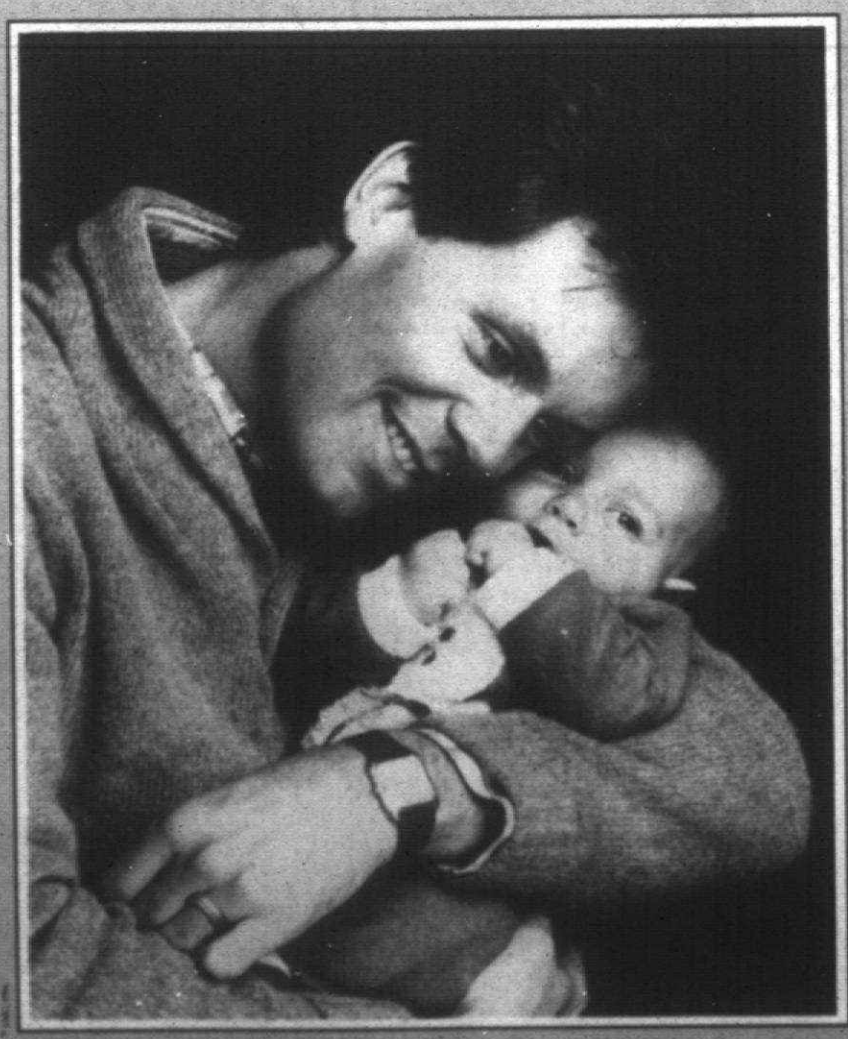
We Deliver Families.



Some people think birth is a woman's concern. It is, of course, but it's also much more.

At St. Mary Hospital, we think it's a family affair, so we make it easier for the father and the whole family to share the wonder of childbirth; before, during and after.

Before you're due — when your anticipation is growing as quickly as your baby — our prenatal classes for expectant families such as Lamaze, breastfeeding and infant care and safety get your family ready for the new arrival.

And when your baby is born—after months of waiting come down to a single day— we make sure that day is everything you meant it to be. Our commitment to family involvement includes flexible visiting hours; time with your baby; and time for father, grandparents, brothers and sisters. And all the while, you'll enjoy private rooms that combine homelike comforts with the support and security of St. Mary Hospital.

Once you're home, we're as close as your phone, with follow-up and basic infant care information.

CANTON SPORTS SCENE

Lions roar

The Canton Lions varsity football team scored two quick touchdowns and went on to roll past the Northville Colts 27-0 in their season-opener Sunday. Bill Wanniger scored on the Lions' first play from scrimmage and, when their defense followed by forcing a punt on Northville's first possession, Brandon Evans returned it for a second Canton TD.

Cliff Simons touchdown and Wanniger's two-point conversion elevated the Lions' advantage to 20-0 at the half. Scott Archer rounded out the scoring, with Jim Sholar kicking the extra point. The Lion defense got a fumble recovery from Mike Tremonti and an interception from Sholar.

The Lions' junior varsity got a game-opening kickoff return of 74 yards for a TD from Archie Kenney and scoring runs of 43 yards from Grant Grayer, 11 yards from Dean Shirkman and 25 yards from Chris Trott to beat the Northville JV 28-0.

The Canton freshmen also won, 14-0, thanks to a pair of fourth-quarter TD runs (15 and 25 yards) by Jason Evans.

Steelers stunned

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers varsity, defending league Super Bowl champs, were shocked in their opener by the Redford Rangers 36-6 Sunday. The Rangers started off quickly, going in front 22-0 by the end of the opening quarter. Shaun Nicoloff accounted for the Steelers only touchdown; he had 59 yards rushing.

The Steelers' junior varsity had no such problem — they romped past their Ranger counterparts 32-6 behind Andy Kocoloski's 114 yards rushing and two TDs. Other touchdowns came from Chris Pisani on a 41-yard run, Steven Stiles on a 72-yard fumble recovery and Mark Dasher.

The freshmen Steelers blanked Redford 13-0. Kevin Entsminger rushed for 57 yards and two TDs.

Monday's match was more like it for Plymouth Canton.

It fit the Chiefs' style: fast and furious. Their pressure defense and speed on offense dictated the game's tempo and resulted in a 5-1 loss for North Farmington at Canton.

Which was a better result than Canton's Saturday match against Troy Athens. The Chiefs took a 1-0 lead into the final minute — on a goal by Chad Dale — only to wear out and surrender a late goal that allowed the Red Hawks to forge a 1-1 tie.

"That was a slower-paced game," said Canton coach Don Smith of the Athens' match. He also went with his starting lineup longer against the Red Hawks, a tactic that may have left his team tired and vulnerable at game's end.

That didn't happen against North. The Chiefs scored in the first minute of the game, Dale knocking it home with a Lance Pellow assist, and were never in serious trouble after that.

"Our defense is inexperienced," said North coach Rocky Patel. "And they're still showing some inconsistencies because of it. I think the physical part of the game is there, but the confidence level isn't."

The Raiders kept it close, but Canton's constant pressure forced some errors that led to goals. The first came in the 16th minute when Jeff Fliss intercepted an attempted clearing attempt by North defender Duane Wilder and rifled a shot into the corner to make it 2-0.

The score climbed to 3-0 on a fast break-type goal, with Evan Sabourin fielding a long, looping pass and netting it in the 24th minute.

North stopped the Chief onslaught briefly, getting a goal in the 32nd minute when Chris Kemp got free down the right wing to take a pass from Dennis Rica, angling a shot into the left corner to cut the deficit to 3-1.

But the second half belonged to Canton. Fliss scored again, thanks to the Chiefs' constant pressure, in the 49th minute and Pellow rounded out the scoring by intercepting keeper Joey Berger's clearing attempt and putting his shot over the backtracking goalie with 6½ minutes left.

The Raiders tried to take advantage of Canton's fast-break offense by using an offsides trap, but it was ineffective. Indeed, Canton's Smith thought "we got a couple of goals off of it.

"You're going to catch them because they're eager."

Which is why Patel tried to use the trap in the first place. "We didn't plan it," he said. "But Canton was very eager (on offense)."

Although the Raiders surrendered five goals in dropping to 1-2 overall, Berger was more than adequate in goal. The Chiefs' quick attacks could easily have accounted for twice that number of goals, if not for several solid stops. Berger was credited with 20 saves.

"We're playing pretty well right now," said Smith of his Canton team, which improved to 3-1-1. "As long as we stay healthy."

Ocelots rule over Monarchs

SC SPORTS

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

For more than a decade, the matches Schoolcraft College would play against Macomb CC every year would decide the Region 12 soccer championship.

And quite often it would extend beyond the home-and-home regular season series. Usually a playoff would be needed to decide the title and the accompanying trip to the NJCAA Inter-regional playoff.

Not any more. The Monarchs have become just another opponent on the Ocelots' schedule.

It's been three years since Macomb has beaten SC, and it doesn't appear as if the 1994 version of the Monarchs will break that streak, either. Not after the way SC handled them Wednesday, strolling to a 4-1 win at SC.

Ocelot coach Van Dimitriou put the rivalry in its current perspective: "As long as we keep winning, that's all that matters to me.

"I'm not worried about Macomb, I'm worried about our team. As long as they keep playing well."

The Ocelots really didn't play that well against Macomb, but they won anyway — a sure sign the two programs are heading in different directions. SC put three goals on the board in the first half, and on each it seemed they outfought Monarchs to score.

The first came 11 minutes into the match. Defender David Binkiewicz (from Livonia Stevenson) scored it, simply bouncing in a short shot from in front of the net, thanks to a centering pass from Ryan Smith (Plymouth Salem).

The second goal, which came 14 minutes later, nearly matched the first in simplicity. Mario Piacentini centered the ball to Fadi Bazzi, and Bazzi knocked it away from Macomb keeper Adam Mangiapane, then got up and drove it into the net.

The Ocelots' scoring ended with just five minutes left in the match. Phipps sent a through ball in to Emo Chiaburu, who slipped in behind the pressing Macomb defense, and Chiaburu did the rest, luring the Monarchs' Mangiapane off his line in the goal before putting his shot into the corner.

Macomb closed out the scoring with a goal with a minute left.

"We were tested, and we showed we're lacking in certain areas," Dimitriou said. "At least this game showed where we need to improve."

It should start on defense, where the Ocelots will need much tighter marking against a good team. But unless there's a tougher-than-expected foe lurking somewhere on SC's schedule, a team that could help SC hone those skills, it won't happen.

At least not against the current crop of competition.

SOCCER

Something had to give when unbeatens Livonia Churchill and Plymouth Salem collided Monday in boys soccer.

Using a combination play up the middle, Mike Minghine scored the game-winning goal from Charlie Roberts at the 65-minute mark, breaking a scoreless deadlock to propel Churchill to a 1-0 victory over the Rocks.

Churchill is now 4-0 overall, while Salem falls to 3-1.

Both goalies, Bryan Stramecki of Churchill and Anthony Cosenza of the Rocks, stood out in the Western Lakes Activities Association crossover match.

Stramecki, a junior, made 15 saves.

"Bryan played a phenomenal game," Churchill coach John Boots said. "It's always such a good game and it's becoming a rivalry.

"The entire game was a great effort by each defense. Both teams' defenders and goalies played extremely well.

"For being a 1-0 game, it was very entertaining. Either team could have won by two or three goals. We just got lucky and they didn't."

Salem, Canton just want Mercy (title)

The Mercy Hoops Classic just might have its most competitive field in the 14-year history of the girls basketball tournament.

The 1994 entries include three state-ranked teams and the host Marlins (3-1).

Plymouth Canton (1-1) is ranked No. 3 in Class A and will attempt to win its third consecutive title. The Chiefs, who have won three times since 1988, defeated Mercy in the last two championship games.

Competing for the first time in the Hoops Classic will be No. 5 Plymouth Salem (2-0) and No. 10 Rochester Adams (2-2).

In the first round tonight, Salem plays Adams at 5:45 followed by the Mercy-Canton game at 7:45. The latter will be a rematch of last year's state regional game in which the Marlins won 55-50 in overtime.

The consolation game will be 6 p.m. Saturday with the final to follow at about 7:45 p.m.

Mercy senior center Julie Angell has made the all-tournament team the last two years, and Canton senior guard Amicie Crayton also was selected last year.

Eagles soar to a win over Aggies, thanks to Reed's 18 points

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

When in need, bring in Karin Reed.

Plymouth Christian girls basketball coach Rod Windle wouldn't argue, especially after seeing what his senior point guard accomplished in Tuesday's 46-37 non league victory over host Redford St. Agatha.

Reed went to the bench with four fouls in the second half, but returned in the fourth quarter to key an Eagles' rally that sealed the victory.

PCA trailed 33-28 after a baseline drive by St. Agatha freshman guard Joann Tischler with 5:45 remaining, but the Eagles outscored the Aggies, 18-4, the rest of the way.

Reed scored five of her game-high 18 points down the stretch and she was instrumental getting her teammates involved.

Reed finished with seven rebounds and four assists.

The Eagles, who improved to 3-1 overall, made six of their final eight shot attempts. St. Agatha missed seven of its last nine attempts.

"Karin gives the team steadiness and leadership on the floor," PCA coach Rod Windle said. "In her years on the varsity, she's moved from being a great athlete to an intelligent athlete. She sees things on the floor and makes them happen that wouldn't happen without her out there."

Kristy Petke also contributed to PCA's surge, scoring all of her eight points in the fourth quarter.

Petke was followed in the scoring column by Lisa Erickson and Sarah Sumner, who scored six points each.

Sumner and Amy Jefferies led PCA with nine rebounds each and Petke contributed eight.

"Kristy is aggressive on the boards, a hustler with a lot of energy," Windle said.

Petke scored five straight points to tie the score at 33. Reed's free throw broke the tie with 3:45 remaining and she followed with a bank shot to put the Eagles ahead 36-33.

Reed stole a St. Agatha pass and threw the ball ahead to Petke for an uncontested layup and a 38-33 lead.

St. Agatha's Kelly Vandermariere cut the lead to 38-35 but the Eagles sank four straight free throws and followed with baskets from Petke and Jefferies for a 46-35 lead in the last minute.

St. Agatha, which trailed by as many as 13 points in the first half, fell to 1-3 overall. The Aggies host a tournament on Thursday when they will play Bloomfield Hills Sacred Heart in a first-round game at 5:30 p.m.

"That Reed is a bonafide basketball player," St. Agatha coach Jim Kearly said. "Mental quickness was not an operable phrase for the Aggies tonight. And we missed a record amount of shots inside. I don't know if it was a matter of us looking ahead to our tournament or what, but you can't miss that many shots."

Susie Baxter led St. Agatha with 11 points and 6-foot-2 center Nancy Simpson, who was in foul trouble, contributed eight. Vandermariere and Tischler added six each.

Windle didn't like PCA's chances inside when he saw Simpson step to center court for the jump ball. Windle used 5-10 Kristine Zedan to defend Simpson and she did a commendable job.

The Eagles led 7-2 after one quarter and opened up an 18-12 halftime lead.

Sumner made consecutive baskets early in the third quarter to put PCA up 26-15, but the Aggies scored 12 of the next 13 points to tie the score at 27-27 after three quarters.

The Eagles return home to play for the first time in their new gym on Friday against Franklin Road. Windle said the team has benefited already, even before the first jump ball.

"The new gym has really helped us improve our skills, we have more baskets and it has given us quality time," Windle said.

■ PCA 57, BETHESDA 22: Last Saturday, the Eagles led from start to finish in wrecking Detroit Bethesda Christian in Detroit.

Plymouth Christian led 21-10 after one quarter and shutout Bethesda 12-0 in the second. Reed scored 21 points and added six assists, Erickson had 13 points, and Zedan netted five points and eight rebounds.

Mary Bulat led Bethesda with 10 points.

Rocks 9th, Chiefs 12th in season's 1st real test

It's early.

That was the assessment of both Plymouth Salem's Mike Krafchak and Plymouth Canton's George Przygodaski, whose girls cross country teams finished ninth and 12th, respectively, out of 18 teams in Division III (biggest schools) of the West Bloomfield Invitational Saturday at Marshbank Park.

"A lot of our kids didn't run in the Early Bird (race, Sept. 14), so this was a kind of see-where-you-are-now meet for us," said Krafchak. "We're not bad. As I indicated earlier, we're the kind of team that will come on late in the season."

Salem's best runner was Leah Rutherford, who placed 20th in 20:58. Meredith Davis finished 41st (21:49), Kathy Jost was 56th (22:25), Sarah Hamilton placed 57th (22:26) and Kristi Giddings was 59th (22:28).

Combined with the solid runs of Stacy Moore (second in 22:09) and Meran Miles (fourth in 22:14) in the junior varsity run, Krafchak has seven runners spaced 1½ minutes apart. The problem: "We've got to get faster. Right now, we're in shape to race about two miles."

Canton's Becky Wolfrom was the best local finisher, placing sixth in the Division III run in 20:10. The Chiefs' other top five: Beth Knight, 37th (21:42); Megan Barresi, 69th (22:57); Jamie Vergari, 73rd (23:07); and Rachel Burt, 82nd (23:35).

"I think the girls ran as well as they could at this time of the year," said Przygodaski. "They'll get better before the end of the season."

Plymouth Christian boys

In its first dual meet of the season, Plymouth Christian emerged as a winner, outrunning Auburn Hills Oakland Christian 27-36 Tuesday at Oakland Christian. Lutheran Northwest and Bloomfield Hills Roeper had partial squads that also ran.

Russ Robillard led the Eagles, finishing second overall in 19:33. Matt Smith was sixth (21:05), Mark Hovermale placed eighth (21:44), Dan Marlow took ninth (21:57) and Erik Copeland ended up 11th (22:51).

OUTDOORS

Officially, hunting season is starting today

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS
BILL PARKER

It was a great summer, but the winds of autumn are calling and I, for one, am ready to answer the call.

Small game season opens today statewide, officially kicking off the 1994 hunting season in Michigan. (Sure there was the special early Canada goose season, but that ends today and most hunters still regard the opening of small game season as the official opening day, anyway.)

If you're waiting to head north before you venture into Michigan's great outdoors you needn't waste any more time. Area hunters are blessed with a variety of hunting opportunities on public lands within an hour or so of home.

Between Bald Mountain State Game Area in Lake Orion to the east, the Waterloo State Recreation Area near Chelsea to the west and the Ortonville State Game Area to the north there are a total of 15 state game or state recreation areas that are open to hunting. Following is a brief overview of each area:

■ Bald Mountain State Recreation Area: Oakland County, east and west of M-24 in Lake Orion. Thick, hilly terrain spotted with lakes and ponds. Bring a compass. Very good squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting. Decent waterfowl hunting in the north east corner. Good goose hunting near the corn fields west of M-24 on the old Chrysler land, (810) 693-6767.

■ Pontiac Lake State Recreation Area: Oakland County, north of M-59 in Waterford. Waterfowl hunting is open at the extreme west end of the lake only. Very good rabbit and squirrel east of the state correctional facility on Teggerdine Road. Fair deer and pheasant hunting. Some woodcock during the fall migration in the lowlands along the Huron River Drain, (810) 666-1020.

■ Proud Lake State Recreation Area: Oakland County, southeast of Milford and south of Wixom Road. Good squirrel and deer hunting, especially at the west end of the park near Garden and Childs Lake roads. Good rabbit hunting in the low lands and along the edges of the wood lots. Nice sized local flock of Canada geese, (810) 685-2433.

■ Highland State Recreation Area: Oakland County, east of Highland and south of M-59. Very hilly, thick terrain so use of a compass is suggested. Good squirrel and deer hunting. The heart of the area is a field-trial area and gets a lot of pressure during the off season. Best bets are near the perimeter at the southwestern and eastern ends of the area where many rabbits are also found, (810) 685-2433.

■ Seven Lakes State Park: Oakland County, west of Holly and north of Grange Hall Road. There are several closed areas in and around the day use areas. Call the park for specific closures. Lots of wood iota with good squirrel, rabbit, woodcock and deer hunting. Fair pheasant hunting, (810) 634-7271.

■ Holly State Recreation Area: Oakland County, northeast of Holly and east and west of I-75. Very good squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting and good woodcock hunting during the fall migration. The DNR has been conducting a habitat improvement program in the northern section of the area, east of I-75, offering excellent rabbit hunting in this area, (810) 634-8811.

■ Ortonville State Recreation Area: Along the Oakland and Genesee county line, north of Ortonville and east of M-15. Heavy cover with lots of hills, use of a compass is highly recommended. Very good deer, squirrel and rabbit hunting. Fair duck and goose hunting and decent pheasant hunting, (810) 627-3826.

■ Metamora-Hadley State Recreation Area: Lapeer County, south of Lapeer, west of M-24. A small area with good squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting. Limited duck and goose opportunities, (810) 797-4439.

■ Lapeer State Game Area: Lapeer County, northeast of Lapeer along Vernor road and northwest of Lapeer along Norway Road. A compass is suggested for use in this large hilly, wooded area. Very good squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting with a few grouse. Pheasant are plentiful near the scattered corn fields, (810) 664-8355.

■ Island Lake State Recreation Area: Livingston County, southeast of Brighton, south of I-96 and east of U.S. 23. Large number of hardwoods provide good deer and squirrel hunting. Decent duck and goose hunting along the Huron River flood plane, which runs through the middle of the area, (810) 229-7067.

■ Brighton State Recreation Area: Livingston County, southwest of Brighton along Bishop Lake and Chambers roads. This is one of the Sichuan pheasant release areas and provides pretty good pheasant hunting opportunities. Lots of hilly, wooded areas offer great squirrel and deer hunting, (810) 229-6466.

■ Pinckney State Recreation Area: Along the Livingston and Washtenaw county line, southwest of Pinckney and south of M-36. A lot of heavy, hilly cover so a compass is suggested. Good rabbit, squirrel and deer hunting. A large number of lakes in the area provide great opportunities for waterfowl hunters, (313) 426-4913.

■ Waterloo State Recreation Area: Along the Livingston and Jackson county line, west of Chelsea, north of I-94 and west of M-52. Again, a compass is recommended when venturing into this rugged, hilly terrain. A few lakes provide duck and goose hunting opportunities. Very good squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting. Fair for woodcock during the migration. Good turkey hunting in the spring, (313) 475-8307.

■ Chelsea State Game Area: Washtenaw County, northeast of Chelsea, north of Dexter-Chelsea Road. A small, limited area with decent squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting. Phone number for the DNR district office in Jackson is (517) 784-3915.

■ Oak Grove State Game Area: Livingston County, north of Howell and west of U.S. 23. Another small area with pretty good squirrel, rabbit and deer hunting. Not much water so not many ducks and geese. Phone number for the DNR district office in Jackson is (517)784-3915.

Although the wild game is out there, hunters must do their homework and scout the areas they intend to hunt to locate the areas holding the animals. Use of a map and compass is always recommended when venturing into unfamiliar territory. Always hunt with a partner and let someone at home know where you will be hunting.

Be sure of your target and what's behind it and have a safe, successful season.

Salem starts with a win

Even though the final outcome may indicate Plymouth Salem won easily, don't believe it.

Salem coach Chuck Olson doesn't. His team opened the season with a 101-85 triumph over Brighton at Salem, and the Rocks won 10 of 12 events. Still: "We needed every one of them," said Olson. "We used a lot of people. First meets always scare us."

Jenny Werthman won two individual events, the 200-yard freestyle (2:14.5) and the 100 butterfly (1:11.35). Other individual winners for Salem were Yvonne Lynn in the 200 individual medley (2:31.76); Carrie Dzilo in the 50 free (27.31); Kelly Ann Williams in the 100 free (1:00.12); Sarah Vanderlaan in the 100 backstroke (1:11.15); and Carey Hyatt in the 100 breaststroke (1:20.53).

The Rocks also won all three relays. Lynn, Hyatt, Sara Casillas and Dzilo combined in the 200 medley (2:02.77); Williams, Dzilo, Lynn and Werthman teammed in the 200 free (1:52.95); and Williams, Dzilo, Casillas and Werthman were first in the 400 free (4:11.53).

The Rocks are idle until they host Plymouth Canton next Thursday at 7 p.m. at Salem.

CC defensive gem: 7-0 win vs. Pioneer

By Brad Emons
Staff Writer

■ FOOTBALL

It was nearly a hung jury Saturday night, but Redford Catholic Central's defense rested its case with an exclamation point against Ann Arbor Pioneer.

The stingy Shamrocks held the Pioneers to a mere 72 yards total offense en route to a 7-0 football victory in a non-leaguer played at Livonia Clarenceville.

CC, now 2-0 overall, capitalized on a Pioneer turnover late in the final quarter to score the game's only touchdown.

In the intense defensive struggle, CC got the break it needed when Pioneer punter Jeff Lutz couldn't hang on to the snap.

Out of desperation, Lutz threw an incomplete pass from his own 44-yard line after trying to scramble away from a host of CC would-be tacklers. The pivotal play occurred with just over five minutes remaining.

CC fullback John Spolsky then capped the nine-play, 44-yard drive on a 10-yard touchdown run with only 43 seconds to go. The drive consumed nearly 4½ minutes.

"The way we played in the first half, I thought some kind of break would determine this game," CC coach Tom Mach said. "We're both real good on defense, but there was nothing exceptional on offense.

"We kept playing hard, but every time we did something on offense, we had a holding or a clipping penalty."

Pioneer, a 14-7 upset winner over East Lansing a week earlier, made it extremely tough on the Shamrocks to move the ball.

CC had 133 yards rushing in 35 carries (3.8 average). The passing game was limited to one completion in five attempts for 6 yards.

"Every yard was tough to get," Mach said. "They (Pioneer) played real good defense."

Spolsky, a bruising 6-foot, 230-pound junior, led CC with 67 yards in 16 carries. Sophomore fullback Milam Brooks added 43 yards in nine attempts.

In the third quarter, CC's Andy Short and Brad Rainko each recovered fumbles, but the offense couldn't take advantage of the turnovers.

Ron Bialobrzeski, who possesses a strong leg, tried to break the scoreless deadlock with 4:07 left in the third, but his 35-yard field goal attempt missed wide-left.

The senior, however, had an excellent night punting, sporting a 44.5 average in eight attempts.

"We took ourselves out of drives with mental mistakes, plus we're young," Mach said. "Our offense needs to sustain drives and hold the ball. Until we eliminate mistakes, we're going to have to fight and scratch to win."

Ken Marzec, who led a strong secondary effort, paced the Shamrocks with eight tackles.

"We not as big as we have been the last couple of years, but I think our defense maybe has more speed," said Mach, whose team limited Pioneer to 28 yards rushing in 19 tries. "We always hang our hat on defense. Our whole program is predicated on that, while our offense has to take advantage of opportunities."

Warriors surprised

Notre Dame wasn't the only team singing the blues on Saturday.

In a Metro Conference football opener, host Rochester Hills Lutheran Northwest pulled off a mild surprise by beating Lutheran High Westland, 20-15.

Both teams are 1-1 overall.

Lutheran Westland shot itself in the foot, losing six fumbles and throwing one interception. The Warriors coughed up the ball in the Northwest end zone on their opening drive.

Northwest enjoyed a 6-0 halftime lead following quarterback Matt Blom's 30-yard touchdown run, off an option play, in the opening quarter.

The Crusaders opened up a 13-0 advantage in the third quarter on freshman safety Jim Essian's 75-yard interception return. Essian is the son of former major league catcher Jim Essian. (Blom added the extra point.)

Senior halfback Jon Smolka scored on a 3-yard TD run later in the quarter and Jelani Kyles converted the two-point run to pull Lutheran Westland to within five points, 13-8.

But Northwest answered in the fourth quarter when Blom, on another option run, capped a 71-yard drive with a 12-yard TD burst. He added the PAT to make it 20-8.

Smolka, who had six catches on the day for 125 yards, grabbed a 20-yard TD toss from quarterback Nathan Soos with 2:30 remaining. Jason Bayush's PAT cut the deficit back to five.

Lutheran Westland got the ball back and mounted a last-ditch drive.

Soos, who was five of 14 on the afternoon for 117 yards, connected with Smolka on a 56-yard pass down to the Northwest 30.

But the Warriors turned the ball over on downs at the Northwest 22 with only 50 seconds left.

Smolka also led Lutheran Westland in rushing with 89 yards in 12 carries.

WLAA divisional battles on agenda

By Dan O'Meara
Staff Writer

■ GRID PICKS

The battle for division championships begins in earnest this week for area high school football teams.

The Mega Conference began division play a week ago, and Garden City and Redford Union proved the predictions wrong by posting initial Mega White victories.

The Western Lakes Activities Association weighs in this week with some excellent matchups in the Lakes Division.

Farmington Harrison is favored to win its upteenth Western Division title. Livonia Stevenson, Plymouth Salem, North Farmington, Farmington and Walled Lake Central are a combined 9-1 and eager to dethrone perennial Lakes winner Westland John Glenn.

The Catholic League has another week to go before starting division games, but St. Agatha and Catholic Central are looking like bonafide contenders.

In the prediction contest, Dan O'Meara took the lead after the Farmington teams came through for him last week.

O'Meara posted an 11-4 mark and improved to 23-8 overall, taking a two-game lead over Brad Emons, 9-6 and 21-10.

FRIDAY GAMES

Redford Union at Edsel Ford, 3:30: RU (1-1/1-0) showed the importance of special teams in beating Taylor Truman 10-8. Eric Scott kicked the winning field goal, and Rich Str□bowski blocked a late attempt by Truman to win the game. The Panthers no doubt have their confidence up while Edsel (1-1/0-1) is smarting after its 14-6 loss to Garden City. PICKS: The T-birds fine tune their engines, rebound with a win.

Red. Thurston at Gibraltar Carlson, 7: Both teams are 0-2 (0-1 in the Mega Blue) but have played pretty good competition. That's especially so for the Eagles, who faced Country Day and Trenton Woodhaven (32-20) and Crestwood (21-6) have beaten Carlson. PICKS: Emons hopes to soar with the Eagles. O'Meara is rock-solid sure about Gibraltar.

Farm. Harrison at Liv. Churchill: The Hawks (1-1) looked like the team everyone expected last week in beating Glenn backer Gordon Tyrrell. P-S, a small Class C school with 270 students, was 4-5 last year. The Spartans (0-2) are coming off a 20-12 loss to Detroit Osborn. PICKS: Emons predicts a Borgess win; O'Meara says the Bulldogs show true grit.

SATURDAY GAMES
(times 1 p.m. unless noted)

Ply. Salem at Farmington: This could be one heckuva of a game, and it will be a pivotal game — and very similar to the North-Glenn matchup — for both. The Rocks (1-1) handled Northville after giving state-ranked Belleville a good game, and they heed a good start in the division to stay on track. Farmington (2-0) had its best start in years and needs to beat a team like Salem to take it to the next level. PICKS: The Falcons jumped in front 21-6 last year, but Salem roared back for a 40-21 victory. It'll be closer, but the Rocks still come out ahead.

Clarenceville at G.P. Liggett: The Trojans (0-2/0-1) were impressive last week in that 20-19 loss to Metro Conference favorite Cranbrook, which means Clarenceville isn't bad and Redford St. Agatha is darn good. Liggett (1-1/1-0) is ahead of the Trojans in the Metro, but they won 16-13 over Harper Woods after losing 41-0 to Cardinal Mooney. PICKS: The Trojans get their first win.

St. Agatha at Cardinal Mooney: The Cardinals might need more than a cardinal pulling for them in this Catholic League crossover. Is the Pope busy this weekend? St. Agatha (2-0) has crushed two opponents 65-7, the latest win being a 34-7 rout of Camden-Frontier, and is ranked No. 10 in Class D. Mooney (1-1) ripped Liggett 41-0 and only lost 12-0 to Shrine, so the Cards might not be too bad. PICKS: The Aggies keep the momentum going.

B.H. Cranbrook at Luth. Westland: What happened to the Warriors? Luther an Westland surprised us by losing to Lutheran Northwest (20-15) after beating St. Alphonsus in the opener. The Cranes are 2-0 but barely so after escaping with a 20-19 win over Clarenceville last week. Cranbrook defeated Harper Woods 33-6 in its first game. PICKS: We might be craning our necks a bit here, but it looks like a win for Cranbrook.

Redford CC vs. Belle River (Ontario) at Clarenceville: After seeing the Shamrocks against Ann Arbor Pioneer, we're certain of this much: Few teams will score on CC. The Shamrocks showed us they have another fine defense in that head knocker of a game, which they won 7-0. Of "huge concern" to Belle River coach John Bloomfield is opening against a team that has played twice, not to mention a team of CC's caliber. Bloomfield has turned the program around in three years, winning a championship with a 9-1 record last year. Belle River has some size and a fine running back in George Chittle, who is being recruited by American colleges. PICKS: CC rings the (victory) Belle.

Liv. Franklin at Ply. Canton: A break for Franklin! The Patriots (0-2) get to play someone other than Stevenson. Franklin has lost to state-ranked Sterling Heights and Livonia, which might be ranked before long. It's an even playing field this week since Canton also is 0-2, losing close games by six points (total) to Monroe and North Farmington. The Patriots will need continued good play from guys like Ryan Bayer, who had five pass receptions for 55 yards, an interception and a fumble recovery last week. PICKS: Emons thinks Canton is due to win; O'Meara says the same about Franklin.

Liv. Stevenson at W.L. Central: Maybe the Spartans (2-0) aren't well known or respected outside of Observerland yet, but some people in the know like them to win the Lakes Division. The Spartans have their best team in years, and this will be their biggest test to date. The Vikings also are 2-0 with wins over Milford (32-14) and Churchill (40-14). PICKS: One team is going to lose but it won't be Stevenson.

N. Farmington at Walsh. Glenn: The roles are reversed for these teams. Usually, Glenn is the team on a roll and North trying to be the spoiler. But the Rockets (0-2) are winless after a difficult early schedule, and the Raiders (2-0) are enjoying their best start in this decade. Nonetheless, this is a big game for both teams. North needs to beat its nemesis to prove it's legitimate, and Glenn needs a win to get its season on track. PICKS: Glenn puts one in the win column.

Garden City at Southgate: After winning their Mega-White Division opener from Edsel Ford 14-6, you have to believe the Cougars (1-1/1-0) can do it again. Even if Garden City was aided by Edsel miscues, that's part of the game. Southgate looks formidable, only losing 16-14 to Allen Park and beating a good Dearborn squad 13-7. PICKS: Southgate steps on the cats' paws.

Lincoln Park at Wayne Memorial: Was that a letdown the Zebras had last week? After beating a good Adrian team 32-24, Wayne needed an overtime to get past Taylor Kennedy 20-14. The Railsplitters (0-2) have lost to Southfield (18-6) and Wyandotte (27-20). PICKS: Lorenzo keeps 'em Guess-ing with his running and passing for Wayne.

Borgess at Petersburg-Summerfield: The host Bulldogs are 1-1, defeating Dundee (8-0) and losing to Ida (20-8). They are led by 5-foot-7 Ryan LaRocca, a halfback and noseguard, and tackle/linebacker Gordon Tyrrell. P-S, a small Class C school with 270 students, was 4-5 last year. The Spartans (0-2) are coming off a 20-12 loss to Detroit Osborn. PICKS: Emons predicts a Borgess win; O'Meara says the Bulldogs show true grit.

Rally scoring ruins Crusaders' Indy trip

■ VOLLEYBALL

The trip Madonna University's volleyball team took to the Indiana University-Purdue University-Indianapolis Tournament last Friday and Saturday was, as it turned out, for naught.

Or nearly so. The Lady Crusaders played four matches and won just one, but the last two were rally scoring — which means there is a point scored on each serve (no side outs).

Madonna coach Jerry Abraham tried to tell the IUPUI coach that the NAIA would not count rally-scored matches. But it was to no avail.

After discussing the situation with people at the NAIA offices when Abraham phoned in his scores, he was told the last two matches (both Madonna losses) would not count.

So Madonna went 1-1 at IUPUI — the first two matches had best-of-three-games scoring — beating Huntington College 16-14, 15-8, but losing to the College of St. Francis (Ill.), 14-16, 16-14, 15-10.

"Last weekend we played very inconsistent," said Abraham after his team rebounded Tuesday to spike Alma College 15-7, 15-7, 15-8 in Madonna's home opener.

"Often we played like we were unstoppable, awesome . . . most of the time, in fact.

"Other times we looked timid, lackadaisical. But the potential is there. There's a lot of talent on this team."

In the win over Huntington, Julie Martin had 13 kills (a .423 kill percentage) and Kelly McCaus (.428) and Mo Paulin (.286) each had six. Laura Fisher collected 23 assists-to-kills and Julie Wood had eight digs.

In the loss to St. Francis, Martin had 13 kills (.136), with Wood (.271) and McCausland (.190) adding 12 apiece. Fisher had 40 assists.

Although Madonna started a bit slow against Alma, once in gear, the Crusaders dominated — particularly at the net.

"I was very pleased with the way we spread the offense," said Abraham. "Julie Martin is a dominant hitter, and this is the first time we really got the ball to her. We didn't do that last weekend."

Campau leads Ocelots

The lineup is still being adjusted, so Schoolcraft College isn't as good now as it will be later.

At the Lake Michigan Tournament last Saturday, SC reached the semifinals before losing to Kellogg CC 15-8, 15-6.

The Lady Ocelots opened the tournament with a 15-4, 15-9 win over Oakland CC, then they dropped a 12-15, 15-11, 15-6 match against Henry Ford CC. They battled back from the losers' bracket, defeating South Suburban (Chicago) 15-4, 15-7, and Lake Michigan 15-5, 15-6, to reach the semis.

"Julie Campau had a great weekend," said SC coach Tom Teeters, his team now 4-5. He made note of her match against Henry Ford, during which she had seven-straight kills — six from the back row. For the weekend, the Livonia Churchill grad had team highs in kills with 52 (a .290 average, 4.7 per game) and 37 digs.

Shannon Gottschalk also performed well with 41 kills (.292, 3.7 per game) plus 24 digs. Megan Heslip added 34 digs (.294).

Janet Zabivnik (Plymouth Canton) took over full-time setting duties and performed well with 91 assists-to-kills (8.3 per game). Janell Hemme (Livonia Ladywood) had a strong all-around match with 10 kills (.207), 34 digs, five service aces and six blocks, and Vicki Rohraff had six service aces.

Help is still needed. "I'm looking for two others to step up and contribute," said Teeters. "Where we're limited is that we have just two hitters (Campau and Gottschalk), but opponents will have to stop those two."

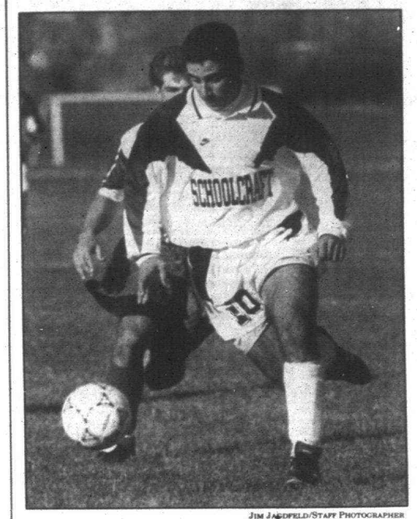
Hats off to S'craft's Bazzi



Jim Jaedfield/Staff Photographer

Scoring machine: Schoolcraft's Fadi Bazzi, a Dearborn Fordson product, has been on a goal rampage this season.

■ SOCCER

Schoolcraft College tuned up for its biggest Region 12 men's soccer match of the season (against Macomb CC yesterday) by routing Lakeland (Ohio) CC 13-0 Saturday at Lakeland.

The starting keeper for Lakeland was out of action, which had something to do with a halftime score of 7-0. In the second half, the second-string keeper went out after a hard shot from Fadi Bazzi broke one of his fingers.

Bazzi finished with three goals, his third hat trick in four matches (he had two goals in the other game). "He's stronger, quicker . . . and very hard to defend one-on-one," said SC coach Van Dimitriou.

Nasser Salame also had three goals, Emo Chiaburu scored two, and Mo Hijazi, Chris Hayes, Ryan Phipps, Mario Piacentini and Khodor Baydoun added one apiece.

As has been the case all season, Arie Mechlowicz (first half) and Brian Mlynarek (second) split time in goal.

The Ocelots also have wins against St. Clair College, 5-0 Sept. 7 in Windsor (Bazzi two goals, Hijazi two goals, Chiburu one); 5-1 at Monroe CC Sept. 3 in Rochester, N.Y. (Hijazi, Salame with first-half goals, Bazzi with three in the second half); and 6-0 over Niagara CC Sept. 4 in Rochester (Bazzi three goals, Hijazi, Eric Stoecklein and Baydoun one apiece).

Other than Macomb and perhaps Cuyahoga CC, it's difficult to find a challenging match on SC's schedule — until the NJCAA Inter-regional in November.

Madonna still winless

Despite a two-man advantage and a dozen chances, Madonna University's first-year men's soccer team could not find the net Saturday and lost 1-0 at the Detroit College of Business.

According to assistant coach Dave Hebestreit, the Fighting Crusaders hit the crossbar and the post twice each, and lofted another shot from in close over the net.

All this happened after a scuffle resulted in the ejection of a DCB player in the first half. Another followed him to the bench five minutes into the second half after receiving his second yellow card.

And yet, playing with just nine men, DCB was able to drill a shot into the corner of Madonna's net — its only shot on goal, according to Hebestreit — to score the lone goal of the match.

Madonna is now idle until Monday when it travels to Tri-State (Ind.) University.

Lady Ocelots boot Siena Heights, 3-2

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

When it was over, when Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team had battled back from a goal down in the final minutes to net two and pull out a 3-2 win over Siena Heights Tuesday, only then would first-year Lady Ocelot coach Nikki Johnson admit it:

"Inside, I really, really wanted to win," she said. "Someone from their team told me before the game, 'We've never beaten Schoolcraft.'

"I didn't want this to be the first year."

What added to Johnson's anxiety was her background: yes, a high school career playing at Livonia Churchill, and yes, two years at SC. But after that, she played two seasons for Siena Heights — reaching NAIA All-America honors for the Saints.

Thanks to the all-around solid play of sweeper Danielle Priebe, and the sometimes good, sometimes erratic performances of just about everyone else, Johnson had her "inside" wishes fulfilled.

The Ocelots got the game's first goal when Holly Kimble got loose on a breakaway late in the first half, thanks to a pass from Colleen Connell, who beat Siena Heights offsides' trap. Kimble tucked it in to make it 1-0 at half-time.

But the Saints forged a tie on a direct free kick by Colleen Baierly from 25 yards out that SC keeper Jenny Mansfield got her hands on but couldn't stop 10 minutes into the second half. And they went ahead with 12 minutes left when Mansfield bobbled a shot and Natalie Hernandez it knocked away, then poked it in.

With only eight minutes remaining, the Ocelots knotted it, with Connell again springing a quick strike down the right wing and centering the ball to Andrea Zawislak, who got it past keeper Amy Daniel and scored.

It didn't stay tied for long. Two minutes later, a Connell throw-in went to Kelly Noles, and she drilled a shot from the right side into the left corner of the net.

"We didn't play our best," said Johnson. "We definitely had our luck with us. I don't know what the deal is with our inconsistencies. We play great one game and bad the next."

The Ocelots were good enough to win this one, anyway, evening their record at 2-2-1.

■ Last Saturday, SC traveled to the College of DuPage (Chicago) and lost 2-0. "We did not let up once," said Johnson. "We played so good, the whole game."

This church regards WATER BAPTISM and the LORD'S SUPPER as ordinances. Water baptism is necessary for admission into the membership of the church and participation in the Lord's supper. Proper baptism follows faith in Christ and is by IMMERSION in water. Scriptures deny the common practices of sprinkling and infant baptism.

Festival celebrates bicentennial of Orthodox Church

By Diane Hanson
Special Writer

Stepping into an Orthodox church filled with its beautiful icons and frescoes is like leafing through an old family album where relatives and events are frozen in time by the wonders of photography. It brings the same sense of connectedness and unity with religious history.

"Within the Orthodox church, the iconography is just ever present, all over," explained the Rev. Michael Matsko, pastor of Holy Transfiguration Orthodox Church in Livonia. "When you go into some of our churches, there are icons on the ceilings, frescoes all over the walls, so this is just the beginning of how the church will develop for the future."

Matsko is referring to the ongoing addition of icons to the church he has pastored for the last six years. He had been pastor of Sts. Peter and Paul Orthodox Church in Detroit, the first Orthodox church established in Michigan in 1906, for six years before moving to the newly established Holy Transfiguration.

Members from Sts. Peter and Paul and Holy Resurrection, who had relocated to the suburbs, merged to form the present parish which now consists of about 140 adults and 60 children.

Bicentennial year

This year, the Orthodox Churches in America will celebrate the 200 years since St. Herman of Alaska brought Orthodox Christianity to North America on Sept. 24, 1794. Holy Transfiguration will celebrate with a special fall festival and open house noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 18.

The event will include a tour of the church, viewing of the newly painted icons of master iconographer Dennis Bell and a specially commissioned bicentennial icon depicting a panorama of North American saints. Guests touring the church will receive a print of the commemorative icon.

Homemade ethnic food and baked goods as well as handcrafted items will be for sale, and there will be games and pony rides for the children. The Blu Tones will provide dance music and the Troupe Ta'amullat Near East Dancers will perform at 4 p.m.

"What we've done here as far as the Orthodox Church in America, is dedicate the whole year of 1994 as a festival year," said Matsko. "So what we've done here at the parish is tied into a parish festival. We're going to have a wonderful day of celebration."

One glance inside the church reveals plenty of activity. Matsko is proud of the work done by members of his congregation. The choir stands, iconostasis (icon stands), screens, baptismal font, special decorations, altar cloths and many of the priest's vestments were all made by parishioners.

"Not only do they bring their spirit to worship, but they bring the work of their hands," Matsko said of his congregation.

The icons, alive with expression and color, surround the altar and worship area and depict the life of Christianity beginning with the icon representing the birth of the mother of God. Icons of the saints grace the walls as well, with space allotted for the addition of new icons as they are acquired.

A relevation

"Theologically speaking, the icon itself is a written theological statement or revelation," Matsko explained. "Each icon represents a real dogmatic statement or theological revelation."

Matsko recently returned from a pilgrimage to Cicero, Ill., where an icon of Mary has been weeping for some time and has attracted thousands of pilgrims of many faiths from all over the world.

Known as "The Miraculous Lady of Cicero," the icon is enshrined at St. George Orthodox Church. According to Matsko, the tears have a sweet smell and are mixed with oil to anoint the faithful who flock to the church. Reportedly, miracles and physical healings have occurred there.

"These tears are just real," said Matsko who assisted with the anointings."To see and be in this presence is just unbelievable, to see the tremendous miracles that take place and the conversions of the spirit. This is not an event for the Orthodox Church, but it's a miracle for the entire world."

There is a small replica of "The Miraculous Lady" at Holy Transfiguration and the parishioners are awaiting a larger version.

The congregation is also waiting to begin work on new church that's an artist's sketch at present. They completed the rectory last year and are currently involved in painting and installing new doors on the existing church structure.

"The only thing we need is a million dollars," Matsko admitted with a laugh. "Everything is done in faith."

Holy Transfiguration Orthodox Church is at 36075 W. Seven Mile Road, east of Levan, Livonia. For more information about the Fall Festival and Open House, call the church at (810) 476-3432.

Here's an overdue look at Michigan 'exports'

When I began writing this column more than five years ago, I planned to focus it mainly on books or writers with a Michigan connection. With an exception now and then, things have gone pretty much as planned.

With all that happens here, however, I've overlooked some important Michigan connections elsewhere.

Ethan Canin

This literary wunderkind was born in Ann Arbor in 1960, his father a violinist and his mother an artist/teacher.

After growing up in various spots in the Midwest and California, he took the publishing world by storm in 1988 wrth his highly-praised collection of short stories, "Emperor of the Air." One of the most stunning surprises about this debut book was its selling power. The collection quickly proved doomsayers wrong, with their belief that short stories never sell. "Emperor of the Air" found its way to the New York Times Bestseller List and stayed there for eight weeks. Canin's second book, "Blue River" (a novel), was brought out by Houghton in 1991. His third, "Palace Thief," appeared in January.

Canin writes of dichotomies: good and evil, the young and the old, life and death, the ways in which people love and despise each other.

On publication of "Emperor of the Air," he received the Houghton Mifflin Literary Fellowship award, a prize bestowed only occasionally by the publisher for a notable first work of fiction.

Terry McMillan

McMillan has lived and worked in California for some years now, but was born and grew up in Port Huron, where she used to shelve books at a public library for $1.25 an hour. The lauded African-American author of the 1992 bestseller "Waiting to Exhale" (her third novel) remembers discovering the joy of reading at that library. Her working-class parents, she says, rarely read to their children at home.

The outspoken, 43-year-old author, in a 1992 interview with Publishers Weekly, calls her generation "a new breed, free to write as we please."

"I appreciate and value all the protest literature of the '60s," she says. "I know that if it wasn't for Martin Luther King and Malcolm X, we wouldn't be able to do some of the things we do now, but I don't need to constantly remind you of that. I'm not trying to prove anything . . ."

Watch this writer.

Thomas McGuane.

Born in Wyandotte, this veteran novelist who has been compared to Hemingway (more Michigan connections!), graduated from Michigan State University in 1962, after a couple of stints at the University of Michigan and Olivet College. He later gained a graduate degree at Yale. (For trivia buffs, McGuane also later married actress Margot Kidder and then later, musician Jimmy Buffett's sister, Laurie.)

The story goes that, when the young McGuane told his parents of his ambition to become a writer, they were less than enthusiastic. His father, a manufacturer, and his mother, a housewife, considered the choice "hopelessly impractical."

They needn't have worried. McGuane apparently paid little attention to the disapproval and went on to dazzle literary critics from the start. He was only 29 when his debut novel, "The Sporting Club," was published in 1969. "The Bushwacked Piano" and "Ninety-two in the Shade' (set partially in Michigan) soon followed, establishing McGuane as a singular stylist and prompting critic R.T. Smith to describe the Wyandotte native's work as "amphetamine-paced-acetylene-bright."

The highly-prolific McGuane, who came from a long line of Irish storytellers, went on to write short stories, essays, screenplays (he also directed the screen version of "Ninety-two in the Shade" in 1975), and a fistful of other novels. His latest, "Nothing But Blue Skies," appeared in 1992.

McGuane lives now on a ranch in Montana.

add Color to your life with fall plantings

Fall color: The Plymouth Nursery folks say now is the time to plant for color in all four seasons. Splash blulbs into a landscape bed or around trees like the red maple above or perennials for summer gardens.

Color has been shown to affect our moods. With days growing shorter in preparation for the coming winter, color can boost your spirits especially if it's the living color of yellow chrysanthemums, purple pansies or red tulips.

by Linda Chomin, staff writer

Think about adding a little to your garden or landscape this fall by designing and planting not only for fall color, but for all four seasons. There couldn't be a better time.

"We're just unpacking all our bulbs from Holland. This is the time to plant your fall bulbs for a spring garden or perennials for summer gardens," said Tina Lopez of Plymouth Nursery and Home & Garden Showplace.

"People are splashing bulbs into a landscape bed for a dash of color, mixing them in around the shrubs. A yellow daffodil looks great against an evergreen for color," added Tim Parker, the nursery's general manager.

"Wildlife gardening is big now also. Do you want to attract butterflies and birds? To attract birds for fall, people are planting viburnum. I love the viburnum family because it's a plant for all seasons. It has a great flower and a lot of them are fragrant. They have outstanding fall foliage and great fruit for wildlife. Holly attracts birds to the yard for winter."

According to Parker, a graduate of Michigan State University, now is the time for planning and planting for all seasons, including next summer.

Perennials make sense

"Some people think of perennials as old fashioned, as quaint, but perennials give a lot of summer color. Some folks are getting away from annuals. Perennials are economical, and labor wise they make sense."

For a deck or entrance way, along walkways or the perimeter of a gazebo fall blooming perennials such as sedum, coreopsis, delphinium, black-eyed susans, flowering kale and pansies will provide lots of yellow, purple, green and blue. Pansies will flower right through the snow. But for shades of red and orange, hardy garden mums can't be beat. A member of the daisy family, mums are easy to grow. With a minimum of care they provide many years of showy fall color.

"We grown our own mums. We start 4,000 hardy garden mums from rooted cuttings in spring. They need to be pruned hard, three times by the 4th of July. They're heavy feeders. They require a lot of water and fertilizer," said Parker.

"Fall's a great time to plant because of cool temperatures and rainfall, it eliminates transplant shock. With modern nursery techniques you can plant all year round. If you do it in fall, this way plants have two seasons to establish the plant before the 95 degree dog days of summer.

Fall weather ideal

Ed Good, Sr. of Good's Nursery in Plymouth, known statewide for offering 125 varieties of hosta, agrees the time to plant is now. The weather is perfect.

"It's a proper time to plant bushes, transplant perennials and plant mums. The newlyweds who don't

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

Agnes Hillyard collects glassware from the Great Depression. She fills two of the Livonia Arts Commission's showcases in a sparkling display continuing through Sept. 30 at the Civic Center Library, Five Mile and Farmington Road.

A member of the Michigan Depression Glass Society, Hillyard began collecting the Caprice pattern made by the Cambridge Glass Company in Ohio nearly 50 years ago. The crystal, pink, blue, amethyst and pistachio dinnerware was sold in stores and given away free with purchases of gas, movie tickets and soap.

"It was a pattern made by the company from 1930 to 1951. What they did was try to make people happy with their place settings. They made anything they could that was pretty to set tables in the Depression. I started collecting them in 1946 when I got married," said Hillyard of Livonia.

"The pink, pistachio and amethyst is the rarest and therefore the most valuable. Some pieces I bought for 25 cents at Crowley-Milner. A crystal compote I bought at a garage sale for $1 is worth $100 in today's collector's market."

The Cambridge Caprice glassware was manufactured in Cambridge, Ohio where today the Cambridge Glass Museum exhibits only Cambridge made products. The area was the source of materials forming the glass' composition. Just about the time Hillyard moved to Livonia in 1954, the glass company went out of business, making it impossible for her to complete the 12-place settings and accessories.

From the early 1950s to 1974 Hillyard searched unsuccessfully for the pattern until reading an article in the Observer that the Michigan Depression Glass Society was displaying the pattern. Since attending her first meeting, Hillyard has continued to add to her 350-piece collec

■ OUTDOOR SCULPTURE DISPLAYED

Matthew Hanna of Redford Township is one of six artists spotlighted in a temporary exhibition of outdoor sculpture at Municipal Park in downtown Rochester through Sept. 18.

Presented by Paint Creek Center for the Arts, "Installments" also features the work of Robert Bielat, Al Hebert, Shawn Skabelund, Catherine Smith and David Torgoff. It was juried by Matthew Holland, assistant professor of fine arts at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit. Each installation on display, as juror Holland explains, represents more than the sum of object and environment.

Hanna's "Saints and Sinners" consists of seven, six to 10 feet welded steel and rubber totem-like sculptures laid out to form the Big Dipper or Ursa Major constellation with an overall size of approximately 12 by 30 feet. The totems draw on various influences from American Indian villages to 20th century pop culture.

As viewers wander along Hanna's installation, they will be transported back into history, drawing on a vast range of influences from an American Indian village of coop sticks to a medieval battlefield, or down the interstate humming the old tune "sign, sign, everywhere a sign."

Following a tradition initiated by Cass Corridor artists, Hanna's work has been influenced by the level of seriousness and experimentation that created Detroit's first true avant garde missing copy. Loaded with images that are potent in meaning, often to the point of inspiring poetic interpretation, the work is compacted with so much information that attempting to navigate it becomes an inviting challenge.

"Taken to another level, the work is evidently autobiographical. I am essentially a nonverbal visual thinker who would rather express myself with images than with words," said Hanna, a graduate of Center for Creative Studies, College of Art and Design.

The exhibition "Installments" is made possible by a grant from Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs. Each artist received a $1,200 stipend.

For more information about the exhibit call PCCA at (810) 651-4110.

tion, buying pieces at flea markets, garage sales, antique and glass shows. A 96-ounce pitcher made by the company still eludes her. Is it the fact the glass was made during the Depression era, or its see-through beauty that keeps her collecting?

"Underneath it all, I'm a collector. My mother used to collect American Sweetheart ... every time she filled up with gas," said Hillyard, a nurse who retired in 1984 after 41 years, only to return to the compassionate profession in 1990.

Rose bowls, powder jars and candle stick holders are kept in a china cabinet and displayed in the living room where Hillyard rented her daughter Valerie now living in Farmington Hills. The rest of the glass is packed away in boxes for safekeeping because it requires extra care. Strong sunlight fades the delicate colors.

"The glass is so unique especially for that generation. It's reminiscent of a time past. I have fond memories of the crystal made at that time when you received it going to the movies or through coupon offers," said arts commissioner Lee Alanskas, who books the monthly exhibits in the LAC cases.

For those yearning to view Depression era glass on a larger scale, the Michigan Depression Glass Society presents its 22nd annual show and sale 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 5-6 in the Dearborn Civic Center, 15801 Michigan Avenue. Admission is $2.

The Michigan Depression Glass Society meets the first Monday of the month September through June, at 7:30 p.m. in the Senior Citizens Center at Farmington Road and Five Mile in Livonia.

"Anyone can sell their glass from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. before the meeting," said Hillyard.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday to view the Depression glass on display in the Livonia Civic Center Library.

Book fair is scheduled

There will be something for everyone, from the nostalgia buff and serious collector to the general reader, at the 18th annual Midwest Antiquarian Book Fair Friday-Saturday, Sept. 16-17, at the Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward.

For more information, call the Friends of the Detroit Public Library at 833-4048.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Library, this free event features more than 20 private book dealers from Michigan, Ohio and Illinois offering books, prints, autographs, illustrations and posters at a range of prices. This year will be an exceptionally large selection of turn-of-the-century books on fashion and architecture.

The book fair is open during library hours, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. It takes place during the three-day Detroit Festival of the Arts in the University Cultural Center Area, when the area bounded by John R, Third, Ferry and Warren is closed to street traffic.

Color

know a petunia from a perennial will want to plant mums," said Good.

"Plant them in sunshine where your petunias are dying out. You'll have color for six to eight weeks right through Halloween. They're hardy mums. They'll last the winter if you mulch them."

If you're looking to spice up a fading, yard or garden, mums are not the only source of fall color.

"If people are looking for fall color the viburnum gives good fall red color plus berries for the birds. Flowering kale is going into beds after a lot of the annuals are starting to die down for an extra splash of color," said Susan Caulfield, assistant nursery manager at Clyde Smith & Sons Greenhouses and Garden Center in Westland.

"Our better sellers for fall color are Red Sunset, October Glory and Crimson King maples, also flowering trees like the Bradford pears," said Burle Bean, salesman in Crimboli Lanscape & Nursery in Canton Township, "and right now's a good time too to think about adding to their overall design with brick pavers, ponds and waterfalls."

Design services

All of the nurseries offer design services. Many are catered to do-it-yourselfers.

"We draw up the designs so people can do it themselves,' said Carol McCreedy, general manager at Clyde Smith & Sons.

"People bring in a photograph of their home and we tell them what will work there."

With 16 acres of trees, plants and bushes, a design studio and 5,000 square feet garden center, The Plymouth Nursery also caters to do-it-yourselfers.

"For guidance they should see a professional and get a plan," said Parker. "We will draw a professional design to scale. The more they can do to prepare themselves the better. Take any measurements they can for the designer, dimensions of the home: sidewalks, driveways, Know the exposure, which way the house is facing. What kind of soil they have. Look through the magazines for their likes and dislikes. There is no such thing as no maintenance, but there is low maintenance."

Taking care of that newly-planted color is another matter. It requires less watering than most people think.

"We have a lot of clay in our area. People have to plant differently in clay soils. With automatic watering systems and clay soils what happens is people are drowning their plants," said Caulfield.

Spring is just around the corner according to Jon Adams, assistant nursery manager at English Gardens in West Bloomfield. It's a good time to plant tulips, daffodils, hydrangeas and crocus. English Gardens in West Bloomfield and Dearborn Heights offers on-the-spot design help for a spring bulb garden.

"The difficulty with a bulb garden is it takes a lot of time and a lot of planning. There's the problem of what to do with dying leaves before they can be removed. A lot of bulbs are being mixed in with a perennial garden," said Adams.

"But for fall color, mums are selling fastest now, and pansies. Pansies start popping up through the snow in early December. But mums are the plant people associate with the football season. Plant them by the front door where the geraniums are dying out."

Piano study program to begin

Evola Music in Plymouth begins a piano study curriculum Sept. 19, headed by Joanne Smith, University of Michigan Piano Pedagogy Department. The program is designed for first-year students ages 6-8.

This is a serious study program under the sponsorship of one of America's most distinguished university music programs. In a time when the arts and music are being cut back in public schools Evola representatives said they are "making an effort to provide music training of the highest quality for young students in the community."

Course curriculum for the Beginning Piano Class For The Serious Student was developed by Smith and will be taught by her proteges. First-year students (ages 6-8) participate in two, one-hour classes each week until Thanksgiving. In early December, a 30-minute private lesson will replace the second class. Children are carefully grouped according to age and ability. An audition is necessary to determine a child's readiness for study.

Class enrollment is limited to 12 students. Classes will be held at Evola Music Center in Plymouth 4-5 p.m. and 5-6 p.m. Monday and Thursday. Tuition is $340. For registration and audition call Evola (313) 455-4677.

Roses star in show at Laurel Park Place Mall

By Marty Figley
Staff Writer

All kinds of roses — Floribundas, Shrub, Hybrid Teas, Grandiflora, Old Garden Roses and Miniatures — will be on display when the Detroit Rose Society has its annual Fall Rose Show 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 17, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 18.

The show will take place at Laurel Park Place Mall, Six Mile and Newburgh, just east of I-75 in Livonia. Admission is free. For information about the show, membership or speakers, call Art Oberlin at (313) 287-6142.

The Detroit Rose Society is conducted by and for all rose enthusiasts in the greater Detroit area, and is a non-profit organization, founded in 1930.

It is an affiliated chapter of the American Rose Society and has more than 300 members throughout the metropolitan Detroit area and from as far away as Traverse City, California and Florida. Some members live in Canada.

Tours, speakers, slide lectures, demonstrations and panel discussions are all part of the yearlong activities of the society, as well as two rose shows yearly.

The rose, the living symbol of love, friendship and peace, was grown in Egypt at the time of the pharoahs and was cultivated by the Chinese thousands of years before their roses wre introduced to the European market in the late 1700s. Almost every rose of today can trace its ancestry back to a rose imported from China.

The DSR's official statement is: "The purpose of the Detroit Rose Society is to bring together people interested in growing roses, to increase their knowledge of growing and exhibiting roses, and to develop community interest in using roses in both public and private gardens."

At present, the society has planted and is caring for two rose gardens in the area. One is at Presbyterian Village in Redford Township and one is in Pontiac at the Pontiac Area Transitional Housing facility.

The show will feature specimen roses, singles and clusters, floral arrangements and more.

Roses will be displayed according to many classes, such as fragrance, hybrid teas, stages of bloom, sprays and a new class, artist's palette, with seven miniature roses representing paint colors on the palette. The public will judge the two fragrance classes 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday during the show.

Miniature roses will be for sale and consulting rosarians will be on hand to answer questions.

People grow roses for many reasons. This well-loved flower was made the official emblem of the United States in 1986.

Don Harshman of Lathrup Village, corresponding secretary, joined the society in 1985 or 1986 because he wanted to learn more about growing roses and to have contact with other rose fanciers.

"I get so much out of the society because I enjoy it and receive so much benefit, not only about growing and caring for the plants, but the fellowship," he said.

"My mother grew roses in Detroit and I always liked the essence of roses and I said to myself as a kid, 'When I have a home I'm gonna grow roses,'" said Jim Hill of Warren, president.

"I began with 25 in 1963. Among those were three All-American Rose winners for that year, 'Tropicana,' and I'm still growing one of those original plants, which attests to the fact that it's a tough bird."

Art Oberlin of Taylor, second vice president, has been chairman for the last four shows and has been a member for nine years.

"I bought the first rose as a birthday present for my wife, Kay, 'Tropicana,' a hybrid tea, and it looked so pretty, each year I kept addding roses and we now grow 400 in our garden," Oberlin said.

"We are a team — she helps me grow them and helps me show them."

■ The Detroit Rose Society is conducted by and for all rose enthusiasts in the greater Detroit area, and is a non-profit organization, founded in 1930.

Fall offers painter's palette for camera

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

In the past, I've written about photographing in the fall. But it's such an important time of the year to photograph, I'd like to cover it again and give you some new pointers. After all, fall is truly a color spectacle, a painter's palette, and you with your camera become the artist.

Fall colors can be found everywhere. The countryside is dotted with lovely roads and trails that display rainbows of vibrant hues.

Here are some tips on how you can get better fall pictures:

Contrary to what you might think, try shooting on an overcast day. Contrast is reduced, and fall colors will appear much more intense.

Best time of day to shoot? Early morning or late afternoon. These times produce maximum shadows and textures that will make your shots look more "alive." Try to position yourself to get back or side lighting.

Use whatever lens suits you best, keeping in mind that a wide-angle lens gives a greater expanse to your picture, whereas a telephoto will get you in close to isolate one particular tree or capture a splash of color in a cluster of fallen leaves. If you have a macro lens or set of closeup filters, you can highlight the veins in an individual leaf or detail any other intimate subject.

Now's the time to try slide film if you've been hesitant in the past. Slides will produce the most vivid and saturated colors. Exposures need to be more accurate than color negative film, but just bracket your shots and you'll have no problems.

For lovers of black and white, don't think fall colors won't give you pleasing results. Shooting under an overcast sky will give you exciting autumn pictures with a full tonal range.

As always, use good rules of composition. "Frame" your pictures with overhanging branches. "Place" your main subject off center for a more dynamic feel in your shot. Use foreground subjects to take advantage of depth-of-field, especially when using a wide-angle lens. And use roads, fences and streams to your advantage as "lead-in" lines.

Be aware of other fall picture-taking opportunities. Football games, cider mill activities and patches of pumpkins are just a few.

Art classes help you turn creativity into gifts

By Linda Ann Chomin
Staff Writer

(Second of two part series)

Fall signals the coming of winter, an excellent time to start thinking about spending more time indoors. Art and craft classes ranging from painting to quilting begin in the next few weeks teaching new skills as well as reviving the rustier ones. Why not learn how to turn your talent into gifts for family and friends this holiday season? A whole new world opens up when you take continuing education classes, perhaps even a new business.

Pam Grossman, a commercial pen and ink artist from Livonia, teaches basic drawing techniques in a variety of media at two locations in Plymouth: the Cultural Center, and D & M Art Studio. Classes are ongoing and geared to your specific needs and interests.

"People realize they've always wanted to draw and learn with a few classes that they can. I start everyone with drawing cartoons, a head of a dog, simple shapes. I show them if it doesn't look right, how to correct it, a short cut to mistakes because I've made them all," said Grossman, a drawing instructor for 10 years.

"Students learn to draw an animal or person they know. I show them how to draw what they're drawing to look exactly like their dog or grandchild."

Grossman is well known in the area for her cartoon portraits of sports teams usually commissioned as a gift for the coach. Some of her most recent caricature-like artworks include ones rendered for the girls' basketball and volleyball teams at Plymouth Salem and Churchill high schools.

On a more serious note, her latest commission is to draw new maps of the campus at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

To register for Grossman's classes call her at (313) 464-3968.

If you already know how to draw, painting classes with award winning artist Ilene Tarkington at The Art Store in Canton could help you paint a portrait as a gift for someone else, or yourself. Classes for youth, adult and senior citizens run Monday through Saturday in The Art Store's new location at 8571 N. Lilley Rd. at Joy.

"It's how-to instruction. It's left up to them what they want as far as subject matter. They can work from reference materials or a still life," said Tarkington of Canton.

Other classes include art for children ages 6-9, an introduction to the materials: paint, pencil, and clay as well as color with A. Disbow; youth ages 9-12 with Kathleen Montgomery starts to develop future artists; watercolor with Saundra Weed teaches different techniques, and Andrew Barlow shows teens cartooning, and how to draw the human body and have fun doing it.

"My oil painting class is geared for homemakers and seniors because it's in the afternoon,'" said Tarkington, last year's winner of the President's Award in Canton Project Arts annual gallery showing of fine arts.

For information on registering for classes at The Art Store call (313) 455-9777.

If drawing or painting classes lack appeal, Schoolcraft College's Continuing Education Services offers ceramics, quilting, photography, calligraphy and Chinese brush painting along with its standard fare of the arts. Or,, how about floral design. Learn the mechanics of wiring and arranging to create dish gardens, corsages, and specialty arrangements. Upon completion of the course, students should have acquired many of the preliminary skills for employment in the florist field. A plus for this eight week course are fresh flowers provided during the session which may be taken home afterwards.

Sewing as a Business with Westland artist, Saundra Weed will turn your sewing abilities into a part-time or full-time home based business. Dressmaking, alteration, piece work and cottage industry are some of the possibilities for making money from sewing. This class covers time management, taxes, licensing, goal setting, business plans and identifying your market. Weed also teaches a course on Marketing Your Arts and Crafts to help promote any artsy end product.

For information about other offerings in Schoolcraft College's CES program call (313) 462-4400.

Livonia Public Schools' continuing education program for senior citizens offers academic and enrichment classes including two dimensional design, jewelry, and a humanities course studying the art, music, history and literature of the Great Depression at the Bentley Center 15100 Hubbard, and a variety of other locations. Classes are free.

"In these classes the older adult learner continues to be exposed to new ideas and concepts for socializing, to the continued challenge and rewards for learning new things," said Jan Wilhelm, program supervisor.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

New focus follows Birmingham merger

BY JANICE TIGAR KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

Two real estate firms with strong marketing presence in many Observer & Eccentric communities recently got stronger.

The merger of Real Estate One in Birmingham with Ralph Manuel's Birmingham agency is a good deal for both firms and for consumers, the brokers said.

"We're the first broker in the country to consolidate two companies but maintain separate names and identities," said Dan Elsea, Real Estate One metro Detroit north/east division president. "Our market share will continue to grow and accelerate quicker because of (the consolidation)."

The merger won't change Ralph Manuel's image, which is largely what appealed to Real Estate One, said Dennis Dickstein, former owner of Ralph Manuel Associates in Birmingham. The high-end agency, at 1821 W. Maple, has been a benchmark in the Birmingham-Bloomfield area for more than 30 years. It will continue to be a Ralph Manuel agency although owned by Real Estate One.

"Real Estate One now has a venue to capture and compete in the high-end real estate market and to expand on the Ralph Manuel name in the future," he said.

The deal gives Real Estate One licensing rights to open additional Ralph Manuel offices from Telegraph Road east through Wayne and Oakland counties. Dickstein still owns Ralph Manuel West, at 32961 Middlebelt in Farmington Hills, and has the licensing rights west of Telegraph Road.

Dickstein said he'll receive residuals from any new offices opened in the licensee's region. The financial terms were not disclosed.

The consolidation doesn't require approval from the Michigan Association of Realtors.

Farmington Hills-based Real Estate One, with 29 company-owned offices and 34 franchises mostly in southeast Michigan, offers clients sophisticated marketing tools. They include Market Power, a computer-generated home marketing analysis for buyers and sellers, and Relocation America, a full-service relocation division.

Real Estate One also is the area's exclusive representative for Genesis, a client referral network.

For now, Real Estate One's biggest challenge is the physical move from its old office at 101 Southfield Road to the Ralph Manuel agency on Maple. They may enlarge the 9,000-square-foot building to accomodate 40 to 50 sales people. The Southfield Road office will be closed after the move.

Sue Kelly, who had managed Real Estate One in Bloomfield Hills, will head the Birmingham agency. She expects about 10 Real Estate One agents to transfer to Ralph Manuel; others will move to Real Estate One in Bloomfield Hills.

Since sales agents are independent contractors, she said no one will lose a job because of the consolidation.

How will the merger affect buyers and sellers?

"We won't attempt to change Ralph Manuel," said Elsea, "but consumers will see increased marketing, more presentation pieces and a larger (sales) staff. We just intend to improve what is already there."

The consolidation does not affect contracts that sellers have with Real Estate One agents who have transferred to Ralph Manuel, he added.

Said Dickstein: "This is a good move for Real Estate One and Ralph Manuel. I like being innovative and being part of something that's innovative."

Limits key to allowing dogs; do audit to track defects

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I have read about a condo association that encourages dogs to come into the condo project. How would we go about accomplishing that result and do you think it's a good idea?

A. As with any other type of restriction, there are benefits to having a condominium that prohibits dogs absolutely, that allows one or two dogs as a limit, or alternatively that allows any number of dogs.

A condo that does not put any limitations on animals has to be prepared to embark upon a very strenuous and perhaps difficult enforcement policy to ensure that the dogs are properly maintained and that they do not cause a problem for the other residents.

The article that you are referring to may have dealt with a condo that was having marketing problems and chose resort to this type of alternative to interest purchasers in the condominium. It may well backfire.

It would also require, depending upon your documents, amendments to the condominium bylaws requiring sufficient co-owner approval to accomplish the result intended.

Q. We have a series of construction defects with our developer. What is the process that should be followed to ascertain whether or not we have a claim against the developer?

A. The association should embark upon a physical audit to determine the exact nature of the defects, whether these defects are attributable to the developer or person for whom the developer is legally responsible, what corrective measures need to be taken to correct the defects and what those corrections will cost.

Presumably, this should be done by an architect and/or engineer disciplined in the area of expertise necessary to determine the nature and extent of the defect.

The association should consult with legal counsel as to the various theories of law under which the association can seek redress depending upon the nature and extent of the defects in the condominium project and then make a business decision as to whether legal action will be necessary to resolve the dispute.

It is important to have a team of consultants, working on behalf of the association, who are experienced and knowledgeable in this area.

Q. How do we ensure that the election of the directors is being conducted fairly and that we have a good representation on the ballot with respect to directors? There also has been an abuse of the "proxy" at our association.

A. Advertise in the newsletter at least six months before the election regarding the upcoming election. Send a separate call for a nomination letter. Send a followup postcard to interested candidates.

As far as collecting proxies is concerned, send a reminder notice to the community or building; if applicable, use a postage-paid, pre-addressed post card for proxies or ballots. Send a reminder letter to owners five days after mailing the proxy and accept only a proxy that is in conformity with the bylaws.

Limit the number of proxies that one person can hold and require proof of validity (proper authorized signature, signature card kept by the association, etc.) with respect to proxies, if your documents otherwise do not prohibit it.

In terms of conducting a fair election, have a neutral party conduct the election and give everyone a chance to run, vote and voice opinions. Give the candidates an equal chance to speak, showing no preference to any one candidate.

Finally, in terms of counting the ballots, have a neutral party count the ballots, count the ballots in the open, not in private, and allow owners to watch the counting process.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham-area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

People's Choice: This ranch built by Tanck Carpentry of Novi was voted the favorite model of visitors who attended the first weekend of Homearama.

Ranch is Homearama's most popular

Homearama, an annual showcase of idea houses sponsored by the builder's association, winds down this weekend. There's still time to check out the design, decorations and landscaping at all 13 models including the People's Choice Award winner.

A 2,250-square-foot ranch with three bedrooms, 2½ baths and an unusual I-joist system in the basement proved to be the most popular model for visitors during opening weekend at Homearama.

The Georgetown, built by Tanck Carpentry of Novi, garnered the People's Choice Award.

Homearama, sponsored by the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, showcases 13 new models in Brentwood Subdivision in White Lake Township.

Tanck's model was the top vote-getter by a fairly wide margin, said Nancy Rosen, BASM spokeswoman.

"People mentioned three things - the open floor plan, the master suite with a separate sitting room and see-through fireplace, and the game room and entertainment center on the lower level," she said.

"They liked the lower level. It had a special joist system so there were only two support poles," Rosen said. "They liked the walk-

Violence is predictable

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Is the workplace more violent or do isolated incidents just get more publicity?

Kenneth L. Wolf, a psychologist, executive director of Multi Resource Centers in Southfield and a consulting expert in the field, concludes that it's more dangerous nowadays in the office, on the shop floor, in the classroom and at the cash register.

He should know.

Wolf, a 49-year-old West Bloomfield resident, has conducted numerous seminars for companies such as AT&T, Detroit Edison and the U.S. Postal Service. He is scheduled to testify on violence in the workplace before Congress in November.

Following are edited excerpts from a recent interview.

How widespread is the problem?

Wolf: Part of the problem with violence in the workplace is there are no requirements for reporting non-fatal acts of violence.

OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) requires that companies with more than 10 employees report acts of homicide. It doesn't include mom-and-pops and a lot of small places subject to robbery.

There are different kinds of violence.

You have commercial opportunities. Hate crimes . . . (where) certain people justify a belief system. There's crime directed against security and law enforcement officers. Vendor, angry customer crime.

There's the employee or ex-employee driven to violence. They come back out of anger. There's crime where you have misdirected affection, an ex-spouse or lover . . . stalking.

What's an employer to do?

Wolf: In order to get a valid handle on the issue, you need to standardize a reporting system on threats, intimidating gestures, violent acts, then a system to investigate threats, gestures, acts.

Then you'll be able to develop an institutional response. Know risk analysis, then develop preventative measures.

How does an employer go about that?

Wolf: First, dealing with threats, intimidating gestures and violent behavior with zero tolerance. Without a policy, there's good reason for employees and supervisors to be ostriches.

It sounds to me like you believe most companies currently don't have a policy

Kenneth Wolf

INSIGHT &

Wolf: Absolutely. We go to companies and talk to security, human resources people and ask about threats. They don't know. When we ask different employees, every one can give examples of five instances.

Why is that?

Wolf: I think a lot of it is denial. No one wants to talk about risk factors in "our" organization.

There's another thing. Very few people know behavioral indicators of the violent employee.

Violence

What is the profile?

Wolf: It's impossible to predict workplace violence.

On the other hand, in a recent study, 88 percent of workplace killers in a study of 125 cases gave threats and warnings they would come back and do what they were going to do.

Some indicators are employees who give veiled threats. "Something bad might happen here," or conditional threats, "If you don't give me my job back."

References to or expressions of sympathy about other acts of violence are important indicators. Things like, "The Royal Oak guy did what he had to do," or "If they don't watch out, the World Trade Center thing could happen here."

People who flash or display weapons at work.

People who make a list and document other people, "If not for Jones, Parker or Smith, this place could run well."

People who have substance abuse problems.

Any one of these indicators doesn't indicate a mass killer, but when you see many indicators together and a self-perceived unjust action, then you may want to say, "Maybe I should intervene to try to get more information."

How?

Wolf: If every statement were investigated by the company, people will take it seriously. It will suppress a lot of threatening behavior and statements by bullies.

People who still make statements are very, very angry or emotionally disturbed. Immediately intervene as to the source of their anger . . . and try to defuse it in a preventative way.

What kind of intervention?

Wolf: Normally when you intervene, you try to have a non-confrontational meeting. It's a process of gleaning information. You say something like, "We'd like to understand the context . . . so we can understand your point of view."

There are a number of options. You can suspend with or without pay. You may want to prosecute the person. Maybe refer to a counselor.

I suppose that legal issues are involved here.

Wolf: Invasion of privacy, slander, wrongful discharge are all sources of litigation.

Another source of litigation is third parties, people injured. Sources there are negligent hiring, negligent retention, negligent supervision and training.

Why is there more violence in the workplace today?

Wolf: The economy is making job loss a lot more significant issue than 15 years ago. With downsizing, people feel betrayal of the organization.

The real problem is there aren't as many replacement jobs with the same salary, same benefits, same field in the same location. It will affect their lives. They may lose their house, car, the ability to put kids through college. You may lose the American Dream.

I think another source of violence is violence on TV. Violence is the solution to so many problems, you get desensitized. It loses impact.

(Also), the availability of guns and drugs.

One concern is violence in school today. In the old days, a kid was sent to the principal for chewing gum or throwing an eraser. Now, it's for using a weapon and assault. These kids are the workers of tomorrow.

ed ceiling and fireplace, and a half bath off one side of the entry foyer.

A first-floor laundry is at the entrance to the living quarters from the garage.

All three bedrooms are on the opposite side of the foyer from the common areas of the house.

The master has a separate tub and shower, walk-in closet, see-through fireplace and 11-by-12-foot sitting room. That's in addition to the 11½-by-13-foot bedroom portion of the suite.

The other two bedrooms share a full bath.

Other touches include arched windows, inlaid border hardwood floor in the dining room and cedar clapboard exterior siding with brick and fieldstone accents.

The Georgetown as landscaped in Brentwood carries a price of $312,900.

"It's really a standard house design we modified for Homearama," said Todd Tanck. "We modified it for traffic flow, made it even wider, a more open floor plan.

"The master suite is incredible. That word is used a lot by people coming through. It has vaulted ceilings, a fireplace. People love the arches in the living room and dining room.

Brentwood is Tanck's first Homearama.

"We do about a half dozen (new) houses a year. Most of our work is additions and remodeling," he said.

The Georgetown model appeals to a cross section of buyers, Tanck said.

"Older people with grown kids can have the whole bottom level for the kids," he said. "Older people tend to like ranches because there's fewer steps.

"Younger people like it because it's easier to keep track of the kids," Tanck said.

The I-joist was formed with a half-inch-thick piece of plywood about 10-inches wide sandwiched between a pair of 2-by-2s, Tanck said.

"We've got bigger spans with less lumber and fewer posts," he said. "The basement is eight feet, three inches high."

Finishing the lower level bumps the square footage from 2,250 to 3,600, Tanck said.

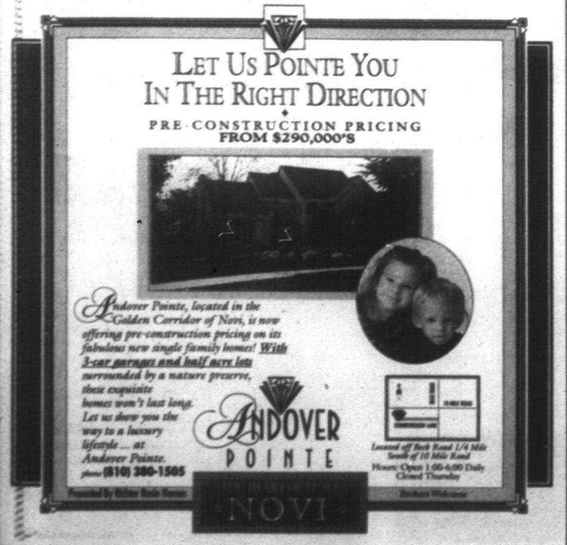
"We spent a lot of time on the design making sure the floor plan moves well," Tanck said. "Some houses tend to have box-in rooms. People said this flowed well, the rooms made sense.

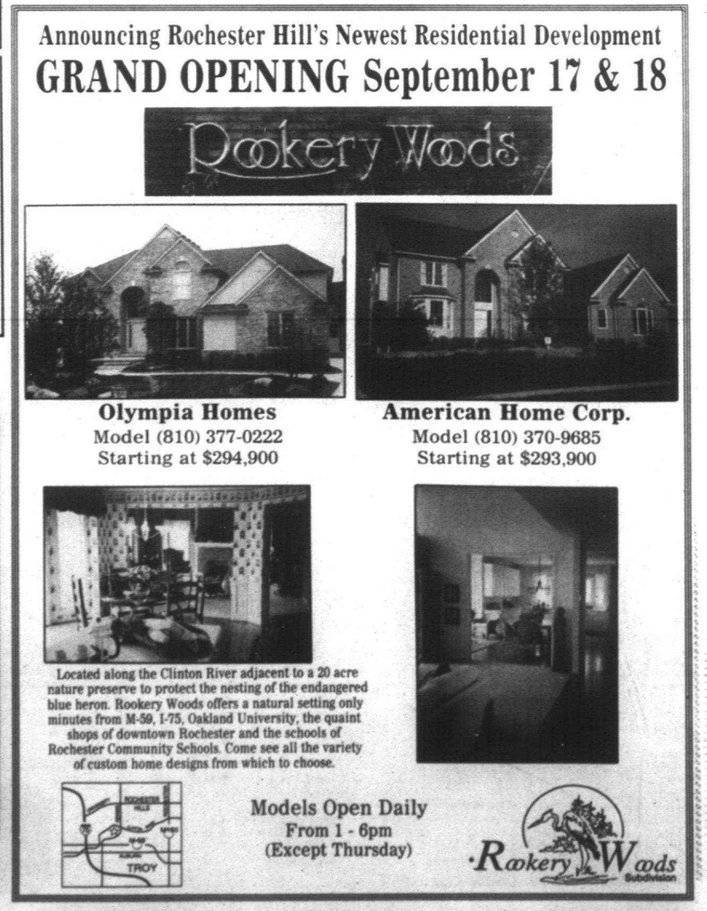
"We're really proud of the house we built with new technology — high-efficient windows, high-efficient furnace, one-inch foam (insulation) on the outside."

A Victorian two-story house placed second in Peoples Choice voting. The house was built by McGrath Construction of Commerce Township featuring a gazebo built into the front porch and 800 feet of porch around the model.

A two-story, country-style model built by Fireside Homes of White Lake placed third.

Homearama continues through Sunday. Hours for the final weekend are 3-10:30 p.m. Friday, noon to 10:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission, $6 per person, includes parking and a plan book.





Computer users can talk with each other on-line

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

Most of us are so used to talking on the telephone that we don't give it a second thought. In the future, talking with a keyboard will feel just as natural.

Right now, though, the uninitiated often believe that talking to another computer user electronically is unnatural, stilted, if not downright weird.

The practice of talking to another PC user online is known as "chat." This is done on bulletin boards, such as O&E Online.

Chat is simultaneous conversation. Your computer monitor is split into two parts. On the lower part you type the words you wish to speak. When you hit RETURN, the message appears on the upper half of the screen for other users to see. You are "private" or talking to yourself when you are typing the words on the lower half. As soon as you hit RETURN, you go public and your words are seen by all users who are in the "chat" area.

Electronic chat is very popular with many PC users. Teenagers like chat and will hang out and gab in chat much like teens of an earlier era hung out on the phone. But people in their 30s and 40s also enjoy chat. It's a chance to meet new people and chat with strangers, much like people do on Citizen Band radio channels.

O&E Online offers two chat options: local chat and international chat. Today let's try local chat. Next we'll try the Internet's international chat -- International Relay Chat (IRC).

Local chat option is on the main menu after you sign in. The option "Chat" is almost in the middle of the menu selection. To enter chat, type the letter "C." Upon entering, you are shown a list of other users in chat. The list will show their user names (often nicknames). When you enter, other users chatting receive a notification that you have arrived.

Often users stop their conversation, greet you, and then return to the chat in progress.

Immediately upon entering chat, you will also see the conversation going on at that moment. Visible is the user's nickname followed by the message. When people greet you, simply type "hi" and the person's name who greeted you, i.e., "hi greg," or "hi everyone." With greetings out of the way, you might want to just sit still and "listen in" on what is being talked about. In chat, IRC or in other on-line discussions groups, it is always smart to monitor the talk before jumping in.

Sometimes, though, if there are not too many folks chatting, other users will address you personally with questions after the greeting. If so, don't be rude. Simply type an answer and get into the flow -- reading responses and typing your answer. The name of the other user will always appear on the screen to the left of his message. When you enter a message, your name will appear to them in the same way.

Stay relaxed. This is new, so don't tense up. Type your normal speed. If you get rattled and rush your typing, you make mistakes and slow your response time. When you make a mistake, you can select "Control X" to erase your line. "Control H" deletes the character to the left of the cursor.

Keep messages short. A sentence of about 8-12 words is good. Most PC users are impatient and won't sit around wondering if you are going to respond. If there's not a quick response because you are typing an epic, they will start talking with another user. Additionally, most PC users don't want to take the time to read a paragraph. So use short sentences in chat.

In local chat there are not many commands you need to know. Type /help or /? to view the commands. If you have lost who's in chat, type /s to list the chatters. To leave chat, type /q. As you leave, the other users will see a message announcing your exit so they won't try to talk to you when you aren't there. You might miss the exit message so if you are talking to someone and they don't answer, type /s to see who's there.

You can enter private chat. Only users in private chat can see the messages being entered. When another user enters chat, he sees a list of those in private chat along with those who are chatting publicly. To enter private chat, type /p. I'm not sure why users go into private chat. It seems like a contradiction of the open spirit of chat. Maybe I don't want to know.

There is an online tradition of exchanging insults (flame throwing). Flame throwing is within the boundaries of acceptable behavior online. Users who feel uncomfortable with chat because of flame or any other irritating dialogues could avoid using chat and enjoy other areas of our on-line service. If the offensive chat involves sexual harrassment, notify the system operator immediately.

So try chat. If you like it, great. If not, that's great too. Next week, we will look at Internet Relay Chat (IRC) and practice talking with PC users throughout the world and nation.

You can direct questions to Emory Daniels by e-mail with emory@oeonline.com, at voice mail at 953-2047 then dial 1910, or fax number 591-7279. To sign up for O&E On-Line, dial (313) 591-0903, at "log-in" prompt type "new" and at "Access:" prompt type GLENY2.

When you give to the Red Cross, you take on a great responsibility: saving thousands of lives. Maybe even your own.
