Fun arrives in form of festival

Fun arrives this weekend in the form of the annual Canton Liberty Fest at Heritage Park. Summertime activities are planned for those of all ages. Organizers are hoping for minimal rain.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

It may be steaming hot, but whatever you do, don't hope for rain this weekend when the fourth annual Canton Liberty Fest takes over Heritage Park.

"It's OK if it rains midnight to 4 a.m.," said Bob Dates, Canton recreation supervisor and chair of the Liberty Fest planning committee.

Whatever the weather this weekend, fest planners are just hoping that it doesn't rain constantly like it did last year. "Actually, last year was as bad as it could get. Anything will be an improvement. I need to do an anti-rain dance," Dates added.

Because of expected heavy traffic, parking will be prohibited from 11 a.m. Friday until 9 a.m. Sunday along Canton Center Road, Cherry Hill to Palmer, as well as on Proctor Road, west from Canton Center.

The fest begins Friday with an evening of country and western music. The Willow Creek Band will perform a two-hour concert at 7:30 p.m. in the Heritage Park amphitheater stage. Prior to the show, Fran Mintz of Jazzercise will lead a line dance demonstration.

Friday night also provides a debut for new Liberty Fest events. A Las Vegas Night, hosted by the St. Thomas A' Becket Booster Club, will begin at 7 p.m. It will feature classic games of chance such as blackjack and roulette. The fund-raiser will continue until about midnight under a big top tent between the amphitheater and the Canton Public Library.

Another new feature of the fest is Bingo Night, hosted by the Canton Chamber of Commerce with cooperation from the Canton Community Foundation. Bingo, which will provide money for scholarships, will be open 7-11 p.m. and be in a tent next to the Las Vegas Night tent.

The Liberty Fest will help feature new highlights in and near Heritage

Now that the inaugural class of Leadership Canton has graduated, applications are available for the second session of the program to begin in September.

"You realize that the more you learn, the more you find out what there is to learn," said graduate Carol Thompson of the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council.

The 22 graduates of the first Leadership Canton — sponsored by the Canton Chamber of Commerce — encourage new participants to sign up for the nine-month program that begins with an overnight retreat Sept. 14-15.

Some graduates of the first class will serve on the program's 1995-96 steering committee, which plans the course of study, including field trips, visits to community businesses, court, a prison, social service agencies

Cable TV manager set for new challenges

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

You've probably heard her name. It's generally associated with cable television. But if you can believe it, Omnicom general manager Lisa Boland originally had her sights on becoming a physician.

"In college I took classes in everything imaginable," said Boland, who will be leaving Omnicom June 30 to become the product manager for basic and satellite services for Continetal Cable, which is buying Omnicom Sept. 30.

Boland signed up for cable television classes. "I really fell in love with telecommunications," said Boland, who switched out of pre-med at Michigan State University and set her sights on television. "I felt broadcast wasn't growing as fast as cable. And I wanted to grow with it."

She has. Boland has been general manager at Omnicom since 1988. But she started in cable television as a door-to-door sales representative. "I kind of stumbled into sales and marketing. I had these great ideas of being a director and producer."

But Boland was steered into marketing and sales. And she can't say she regrets it. In 1981, she was made marketing director of Ohio for Capital Cities Communications, which was involved with Omnicom in the early days. "It came easy to me. It's creative. It's organization. It's a lot of strategic planning."

Great fun is how Boland described those early years in sales and marketing, which involved a lot of traveling. In her 20s and married, but without children, the job was an experience. Two years later, Boland was promoted to the director of marketing in Michigan.

In 1986, Capital Cities left Omnicom and bought ABC Television. Omnicom owner Harry Suri bought the company. Continental has been a minority partner since 1992. When Boland leaves, Rick Collman now the director of corporate development and Omnicom's first general manager, will take over Boland's post.

"It's a complex business. It has always been a changing industry," Boland said. She recalls the early 1980s when 12 channels were available and the industry was not regulated as it is today.

She has been overseeing major technological changes at Omnicom in recent months, including the installation of 50 miles of fiber optic cable that will reduce service interruptions for customers at the end of the service line.

Omnicom is switching customers' converter boxes — used for premium channels such as Disney — to what is called an addressable system that allows communication between the customer and Omnicom. The company is also rebuilding its system and will increase available channels from 53 to an expected 110.

Coping with summertime heat is no easy task

BY KEVIN BROWN

Fresh heaps of coal-black asphalt steamed in the hot sun, and the sweat dripped off Charles Burks' arms and face as he raked it level.

The temperature early this week was in the mid-90s. That's plenty hot for most of us, but it had to be worse for Burks and two fellow crew members, laying hot patch on a Plymouth driveway for Ron's Asphalt.

How does he deal with the heat? "I drink four or five gallons of Gatorade a day," Burks said, adding he didn't mind working outdoors in the heat.

"You got to get work when you can get it," he explained.

Temperatures eased down into the 80s Wednesday and today and were

Proceeds from golf outing will benefit library

By JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

A golf outing Sept. 13 on the new Pheasant Run Golf Club will be a first for the Friends of the Canton Public Library.

"It will be the first good chance for the public to see the new golf course on an outing," said Marcia Barker, Friends' library volunteer coordinator.

To get the ball rolling on the Friends' new fund-raiser — FORE Friends — the non-profit organization had some help from participants in the Leadership Canton program. "They helped us with it this year. But next year, the Friends will take it over and do it ourselves," Barker added.

The public is invited to participate in the outing, which will begin with an 8:30 a.m. shotgun start in a scrambles format. Breakfast, lunch and dinner will be served. A traveling trophy will be offered, as will other contests and prizes, including a 50-50 raffle. Players also will have a chance to win a 1995 Dodge Stratus in a hole-in-one contest.

Outing fees are $100 for a single golfer and $400 for a foursome. The Friends are seeking sponsors for each of the 18 holes on the Arthur Hills-designed course that meanders through five subdivisions, south of Cherry Hill, west of Canton Center. Sponsorships are $100 per hole. Anyone who is interested in sponsorship or in donating prizes should contact the Friends at the library, 397-0999.

Interested players are asked to round up their friends and colleagues to help make the Friends first outing a success. Contact the library to participate, 397-0999, or mail a check to Friends of the Library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, Mich. 48188. Registration deadline is July 1.

The Friends group is dedicated to establishing a close relationship between the library and the Canton community by promoting public awareness of the library's services. The Friends also offers direct financial assistance for the purchase of new equipment, books as well as special programs for children and adults, Barker said.

Because the Friends has a special non-profit status, participation is tax deductible, Barker added.

The outing is being planned by Friends committee members Linda Garrett, Marta McCabe, Peg Moore and Barker, as well as Leadership Canton graduates Judy Teachworth, Bob Zulker, Brian Bunker and Debbie Zevalkink. Leadership Canton, sponsored by the Canton Chamber of Commierce, is a program designed to provide leadership skills and community knowledge to participants interested in getting involved in the community. The outing was one of a number of projects Leadership Canton graduates worked on.

Organizers flip over day's doings

By JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

■ The organization already awarded $500 scholarships to honor students Darren T. Schindel, a Canton High School graduate, and Samuel J. LaGrow, a Salem High School graduate.

Better weather brought more crowds to the annual pancake breakfast sponsored by the Experimental Aircraft Association at Mettetal Airport on Father's Day.

"We actually had a 150 percent increase in traffic this year," said Ed Purdy, president of the EAA Chapter 113, which has about 75 members.

The pancake breakfast serves as the EAA's fund-raiser for the organization that provides scholarships to graduating high school seniors interested in aviation.

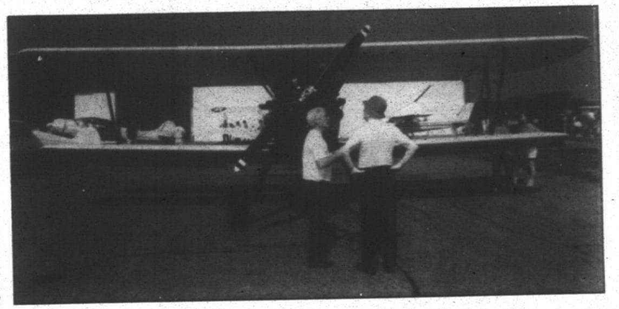

"I think we will be able to give two more scholarships this year," Purdy said. The organization already awarded $500 scholarships to honor students Darren T. Schindel, a Canton High School graduate, and Samuel J. LaGrow, a Salem High School graduate.

In all, 700 breakfasts of pancakes were served. That included 100 pounds of sausage and 30 half-gallons of orange juice. "We made more than 2,000 pancakes," Purdy said.

The pancake breakfast is also a perfect time for pilots to give free rides. The recent graduates and scholarship recipients, Schindel and LaGrow, were flying the skies, as were their families.

Pilots also signed up kids for the Young Eagles program, which introduces the youngsters to aviation with free plane rides. "We gave out about 100 Young Eagle forms," Purdy said.

Pilots will give rides at Mettetal Saturday, June 24. If more kids come than expected, the pilots will schedule them for subsequent Saturdays. "Kids can still come to the airport on Saturday but they will probably be in the group that we have to schedule later," Purdy said.

Condo project and eatery recommended for approval

By JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Attached condominiums in the $170,000 and up price range are expected to round out the Pheasant Run Golf Course community.

"You caught the spirit, the impetus of the township," said Vic Gustafson, Planning Commission chairman, Monday night as representatives of Robertson Brothers Co. developers offered their latest plans for the condominium project.

The Planning Commission recommended approval of the site plan for the condominiums, called the Links at Pheasant Run, which will offer 218 units on a little more than 48 acres, south of the Summit Parkway, west of Canton Center Road.

Commissioners also recommended approval of a site plan for a new McDonald's restaurant north of Michigan Avenue, between Canton Center and Belleville roads.

Recommended approval of both site plans came after representatives of both companies were asked to revise their individual designs.

Robertson Brothers, which is buying the acreage from Canton Township, revised the design of the condominiums — available in two and three bedrooms — to create a New England appearance.

"I like to think we listened very hard to what you had to say," said Paul Robertson, adding that the plans are now "significantly better."

"We deserved what we got two weeks ago," Robertson said. "It is certainly not the kind of elevations we are used to."

The Robertson architect added stone, horizontal siding, shake-style siding, board and batten on the exteriors. Also added were masonry fireplaces to the one-story condominiums, as well as arches to the garages, split garage doors and steeper pitch roofs.

"We think the two-story units are going to be real strong now," Robertson said. Ranch units will have a covered entry and windows on the condominiums will be spaced appropriately for a traditional look.

Planning commissioners also asked for an improved design on the rear of the condominiums that will be featured in two-unit, three-unit and four-unit buildings. While the rear elevations were improved to have their own unique appearance, Robertson said it's impossible to have a brick fascia on the chimneys on the two-story rear elevations.

"You can't put real brick up there because there are too many angle irons and the roof load (would be too heavy)," Robertson said.

Robertson developers also improved the design of a condominium clubhouse which will be the first structure that greets residents and visitors when they enter the complex.

Commissioner Melissa McLaughlin, also a township trustee, lauded the improved designs. "I think it punched up the curb appeal tremendously."

Commissioner Ron Lieberman agreed. "In my view it didn't have pizzazz. Now it does."

The Township Board must now approve the site plans for both companies. Robertson developers have yet to receive approval for engineering plans. "I think they would like to start this fall," Canton community planner Jeff Goulet said.

Commissioners had asked McDonald's representatives to improve the appearance of what is called the playscape portion of their restaurant. Commissioners said original designs made it look like a car sales showroom.

To make the playscape — designed for children — appear compatible with the remainder of the restaurant, the McDonald's architect added columns to break up the lengthy windows. The architect also designed the whole building in brick with dark-colored block to serve as an accent.

"I'm far more pleased with what we have here," Commissioner Bob Wade said.

Park, such as the newly built Heritage Hideout playscape, south of many fest events, as well as the new Pheasant Run Golf Course and Summit on the Park community center, which is still under construction.

The community center catering staff, Cregar's of Bloomfield, will offer "An Elegant Peek at Summit Sweets," 7-10 p.m. Friday near the front of the festival, across the walkway from the bingo and Las Vegas tents. The sit-down event is a fund-raiser for the Heritage Hideout playscape and will feature samples of desserts from Cregars. Coffee and punch also will be served.

Fest visitors can try out new golf equipment for Pheasant Run Golf Course at Demo Days. A golf cart will shuttle visitors from the Summit on the Park tent to the new practice range.

Saturday offers a full day of events, activities and treats for all ages of festival goers. Saturday will conclude with the popular and powerful fireworks spectacular at about 10 p.m. A new laser show is planned around the amphitheater in Heritage Park in conjunction with the fireworks.

The fireworks show will last about 40 minutes. It will be preceded by patriotic music provided by the 40-piece 70th Division Army Band beginning at 8 p.m.

"We increased the show size from last year," Dates said, urging visitors to arrive at least by 7 p.m. to get a parking space. "All the Liberty Fest activities are going on until fireworks time. There's plenty for a family to do."

The amphitheater will be alive with music, while strolling musicians and other well-known characters will mix with visitors throughout the weekend.

Kids will be entertained by Ronald McDonald; Twisty the Clown; 14-year-old magician Phillip Leja; as well as the Flying Aces, a group of Frisbee professionals. Kids will have loads of fun on the Mini-Midway on the west side of festival grounds.

Again this year, visitors will be entertained with the Classic Car Show Saturday and Sunday, at which 30 classes of automobiles will be shown and judged.

A fine arts show, featuring 80-100 artists, as well as art workshops and face painting, is sure to enthrall visitors. An antiques and collectibles show is featured, as is a Living History Sampler, sponsored by the Canton Historical Society.

No festival is truly an event without tons of food, which is available at a myriad of stands, as well as at the popular Taste of Canton and the Picnic in the Park, sponsored by Plymouth-Canton Drug Abuse Resistance Education, which features food from Outback Steakhouse Sunday afternoon.

Local organizations, such as the Canton Chamber of Commerce and others, will be prominent throughout the weekend. The chamber, which is a major sponsor of the fest, will host its second annual Business Expo, a well as a Health Expo.

"We have had tremendous cooperation from the business community for the festival. I want to thank all volunteers and those who have worked so hard on the festival," Dates said.

Heat

expected to fall to the 70s by the weekend, the National Weather Service said.

Still, the hot spell left its mark on Plymouth and Canton residents and business people, and sparked calls for voluntary cutbacks on water usage.

Of the heat, Amy Vollick of Plymouth, mailing a letter at the downtown post office, said, "I don't mind it. I do a little gardening, barbecue."

Charles Sprecher, biking around Heritage Park in Canton with friend Mike Wrobel, said that while it's good to be around air-conditioning when it's hot, "It's still fun to get out and ride."

"You got to get out and enjoy the weather," Wrobel added.

Marge Arcori of Canton said she was spending lots of time floating in the pool at her apartment complex, listening to Tigers' games on the radio.

"It's great, you soak up the sun," she said.

Chuck Batayeh, owner of Dimitri's Party Store at Main and Wing streets in Plymouth, said the hot spell made up for some of the business lost due to street construction work downtown.

"We're selling more drinks than normal, especially with the kids and the people working on the city (street) project," he said. The store is also selling more of the bigger 40-ounce and 2-liter drink containers.

Cindy Harrington, co-owner of Kid Kingdom in Canton, said business was up this week, due partly to hot weather.

"When we opened the business two and a half years ago we assumed summer would be a slow time for us," she said. Instead, summer business has been steady, and when it gets warm, "We do see our business increase," she said. "People are looking for a comfortable air-conditioned environment."

Officials with Canton Township, the city of Plymouth and Plymouth Township sought to alert residents Monday about voluntary water restrictions due to heavy water use sparked by the hot weather.

Then on Tuesday, the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department and the Michigan Department of Public Health ordered mandatory restrictions on outdoor water use by residents and businesses throughout Wayne County.

The agencies ordered residents and businesses to follow an odd-even schedule on outdoor water use, according to address. Watering can be done at an even-numbered address on even-number dates, and at odd-numbered addresses on odd-number dates.

Residents with questions are directed to call their local public works department.

Boland's last few months with Omnicom also have been spent in negotiations for a new cable franchise with Canton, the Plymouths and the city of Northville.

In the last few years, competition and federal regulations have invaded the industry. "It's a difficult time learning to live with reams of paper."

While the days of marketing and traveling were good, Boland is now glad those days were of another time, primarily because she has three children, Dan, 10, Megan, 8, and Katie, 6.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my 14-plus years here. My favorite part has been working with employees, customers and the councils," Boland added.

Her new job in Continental's regional offices in Southfield will be different. "The focus is 180 degrees different than what I'm used to. I am used to being responsible for everything, but in a smaller bowl."

Boland's new job will include deciding which channels will be delivered to which cable system and determining the channel lineup. Continental is the third largest cable company in the country with four million customers and 350,000 in Michigan. The company serves Westland, Dearborn Heights, Southfield, West Bloomfield, Roseville and Madison Heights.

"Right now I'm responsible to about 40,000 customers. I will soon be responsible for 400,000," Boland said.

She will leave her office on Ronda Drive in Canton armed with a lot of knowledge. It was when she was a marketing director in Ohio that she learned the technical side of the cable business.

"We had a plant engineer who all I had to do was ask a couple open-ended questions. I tried to make a point to learn this stuff. Actually, I'm an information sponge."

Boland also spent days on the telephone as a customer service representative. "Unless you have that type of exposure, you will never understand what your employees are going through."

Linda Shapona, chamber executive director, urges anyone interested in the leadership program to apply by the Aug. 14 deadline. Applications are available at the chamber, 5820 Canton Center Road, Suite 105, Canton, or call 453-4040.

Leadership Canton is limited to 25 participants who will be chosen by the steering committee. Tuition is $700, which covers basic costs, meals and materials for the program. Limited partial scholarships are available to non-sponsored participants or participants from nonprofit groups.

Requirements for application include living or working in Canton and having an interest in the community. Participants must agree to attend the retreat and all sessions throughout the year.

The program kicks off with the retreat, designed to allow participants to get to know each other, to learn about their leadership styles and to get some insight into the nature of leadership and the characteristics of leaders.

The sessions that follow include: growing pains of Canton, quality of life, the justice system, business and economic development, education, local and county government, human services, and finally, the challenge of the future.

"I learned how people around you can really make an impact. If you can make a small impact that's where it all starts," said program graduate Sally Bailey of Catherine McAuley Health System.

Graduate Carol Felker of Key Services said Leadership Canton shows participants how to take the first step toward involvement and activism in the community.

State House approves high school voc-tech bill

Capitol capsules:

For the second time, the state House of Representatives has passed a high school voc-tech bill. Last year the bill died in the Senate.

House Bill 4196 would set up a state cabinet on professional and technical standards under the Jobs Commission. Its tasks: an information system on what job skills are needed, coordination of training programs and creation of skills standards for various occupations. It also would work on pilot "school to apprentice" programs.

The bill was pioneered by retired Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City, and carried on by Rep. Glenn Oxender, R-Sturgis. They developed the idea after trips to Germany's hochschule system of vocational training students who aren't college-bound.

The House vote was 88-9. All area representatives voted yes June 13. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, was absent.

'Sassafras Trails'

The state will put up money for the Sassafras Trails in Westland, 64 acres of forests and wetlands, said Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton.

It's part of House Bill 4422, the natural resources budget, passed June 15 by the state Senate. The purchase will be made under the Farmland and Open Space Preservation Act.

Bennett credited Vicki Maple and The Friends of Sassafras Trails for promoting the issue.

Strike 2

Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, lost on an unrecorded roll call his effort to prevent state highway funds from being used to develop a new Tiger Stadium in Detroit without approval of the Legislature.

Hart and Doug Carl, R-Mt. Clemens, tried to attach the amendment to Senate Bill 304, the transportation budget. The Senate rejected House amendments to the bill and sent it to a conference committee.

"The infrastructure is already there. There is an expressway that runs south of the stadium (site) and one that runs north," said Hart.

"Look at the new Cleveland Stadium. The project is now $28 million in debt, and they just opened that stadium. Here is a team that is in first place, sold out for every game, yet they're $28 million in debt. You're going to find yourselves in a similar position here in Detroit," he added.

Youth gangs

A program called "Youth Gangs on the Move" will run from 6-8 p.m. Thursday, June 22, in Pontiac Central High, 300 W. Huron, with speakers from the Oakland County prosecutor's office and Madison Heights police department.

Said Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, who is promoting the program: "Unless we become better educated and really start to focus on giving our youth an alternative to joining gangs, the problem is only going to get worse."

The program is designed to help parents and other adults recognize signs of gang activity and help in combatting it.

Zoo extends hours

The Detroit Zoo is extending its hours until 8 p.m. every Wednesday through August.

Previously, the zoo was open until 5 p.m. on Wednesdays.

"The schedule has been extended because we want the community to enjoy the Detroit Zoo in the evening," said Ron Kagan, director of the Detroit Zoological Institute, in a press release. "Animals are more active during sunset hours, and it's a great place to relax after work."

On the other six days of the week, the zoo is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Admission is free for individuals up to age 2, $3 for individuals age 2-12, $6 for individuals age 13-61 and $4 for individuals age 62 and up.

The Detroit Zoo is located at the northwest corner of the Woodward Avenue and 10 Mile Road intersection in Royal Oak, just off of I-696.

- July 14-16 at Lake Gogebic State Park in Marenisco, (906) 842-3341.
- July 21-23 at Sleepy Hollow State Park in Laingsburg, (517) 651-6217.

Home's history highlighted by researchers

By Jill Halpin
Staff Writer

In its 97 years, the old beige house with the purple trim in downtown Plymouth has been home to a jeweler, an optometrist and a Hollywood writer. Located at 1046 Church St. and unofficially recognized as the Draper House, this home has a history that is as unique as that of its past inhabitants.

It's this home's rich heritage, combined with its stately Victorian-era architecture, that led to its recent landmark award designation by the Plymouth branch of the American Association of University Women. The award was presented during a ceremony held at the home last month.

Each year, the group recognizes local structures for architectural significance, and awards a "landmark" designation, according to Gerry Dugan, a member of the AAUW's landmark group.

"Every year, before we decide on a particular structure, we take a tour of the area. Of course, living in the area, we already have some ideas. We had been driving around town, looking at different houses and buildings. This home was on our list, and as soon as we began investigating the background, we knew we hit the jackpot," said Dugan.

Designation criteria

Structures considered for the landmark designation must meet specific criteria, Dugan said. The structure must be at least 75-100 years old, and have architectural significance. A strong local history adds to the attraction of a particular site. Dugan, along with other members of the group, conducted extensive interviews with past inhabitants as well as present owners and occupants Jerry and Becky Campbell. The Draper House met all of the qualifications and then some, Dugan said.

Built in 1898 for prominent Plymouth businessman Charles Draper and his mother, Draper also lived in the home with his wife, Sadie Merrel, after their 1902 marriage.

The couple's two children, Dr. Merrell Draper a dentist, and Winnie Carney, were raised in the house. Carney is the mother of Main Street optometrist Jim Carney.

Winnie Carney, now living in Florida, recently spoke with members of the landmark group and recalled fond memories of the home, Dugan said.

Historic memories

Carney, who lived in the home until her marriage at 25, talked of trips to the Opera House, located where city hall now sits. She also remembered playing "Pompon Pull-Away" in a nearby park with friends, and enjoying the sounds of concerts from the bandstand across the street.

More recently, the home has been owned by Jim and Cyndy Bernstein, Frances Anne Battle and now, the Campbells. Despite renovations and general improvements to the home, all owners have remained true to the home's Queen Anne style of architecture, a feature which impressed the landmark group, Dugan said.

A Queen Anne-styled home features a variety of interesting characteristics, include an overall "busy" appearance, as well as an asymmetrical facade with different-sized and shaped windows and wall projections, according to the landmark group.

The Draper House also boasts other distinctive qualities, including a front-facing gable with a clipped roof, fish-scaled patterned shingles on the second floor which were used to avoid a smooth wall surface. Wrap-around eaves and a large porch with pillars can also be found on the home. Another important characteristic of the home is the dagger-like "scepter" located directly above a second-floor window. This "scepter" was a trademark of a once-popular area builder and can be found on many homes throughout Plymouth, the group said.

Home style

Absent from the home are turrets, towers and spindles, also trademarks of the Queen Anne style, and this marks the Draper House as a "modest" example of such architecture, according to the landmark group.

Modest example or not, it was the home's overall appearance that impressed present owner Becky Campbell, who fell "in love" with the house at once, she said.

Campbell and her husband, Jerry, both born and raised in Plymouth, have long had a strong appreciation of old houses and the history imbedded within them. They are pleased with their home's award and are also appreciative of the research effort put forth by the AAUW's landmark group, Campbell said.

"Some people walk into an older home and look around and say 'Ugh!,' but others walk in and feel immediately comfortable. We fall into that category," she said.

Current residents

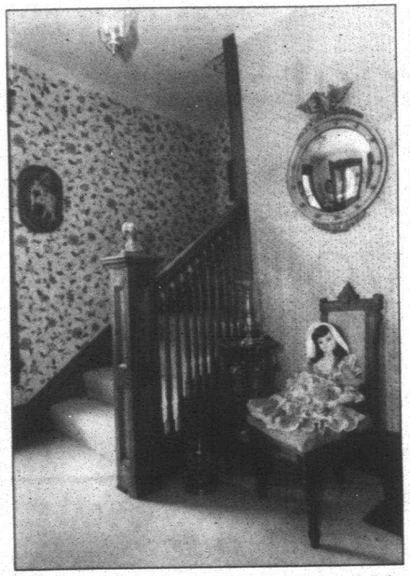

The Campbells have lived in Plymouth almost all their life, save for a five-year transfer to Denver. Campbell said that despite Colorado's natural beauty, she found it lacking in an abundance of older homes.

When the couple returned to Plymouth, they settled into an area home, but still kept their eyes on Church, a street that has long held their affection. The couple had just returned from a trip when they found that the Draper House was up for sale. A tour of the home revealed natural, original woodwork and an open floor plan that also appealed to the couple. Says Campbell, "I liked everything about it." The rest, according to Campbell, is history.

The couple has lived in the home for almost two years, and they are finally getting used to the passers-by in automobiles who slowly drive by their home and sometimes just stop and stare at the beautiful homes that grace the street. "My neighbor said that she has even seen a few minor fender-benders" outside the homes, said Campbell.

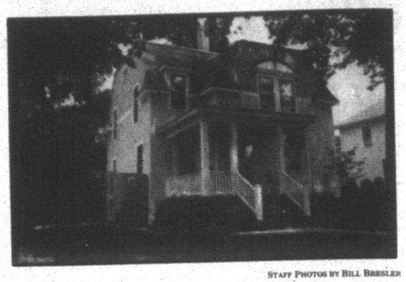

The past year has been spent cleaning and restoring the original windows in the house, a task that Jim Campbell handled on his own. Other future tasks include the restoration of the carriage house in the backyard.

But for the Campbells, it is a labor of love. "We love this house and hope to be here forever. My husband says that we are just caretakers of the home, and we are preserving history."

Historic home: As self-styled "caretakers of the past," the Campbells have tried to maintain a sense of history in furnishing their Victorian-era home. The home boasts the original natural woodwork throughout.

It's this home's rich heritage, combined with its stately Victorian-era architecture, that led to its recent landmark award designation by the Plymouth branch of the American Association of University Women. The award was presented during a ceremony held at the home last month.

Answers scarce in airport debate

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Wayne County Commissioner Bruce Patterson wants some answers on the proposed extension toward Canton of one of five Willow Run Airport runways, as well as how many cargo flights are necessary to generate a potential 26,000 new jobs for the local economy.

But answers were not forthcoming from Dewey Henry of Wayne County Jobs and Economic Development Wednesday when the Wayne County Commission Committee on Economic Development met to talk about proposed plans for Willow Run expansion and an international cargo facility.

"If this is going to be a cargo facility we should have a handle on how much cargo, how many flights," said Patterson, who represents the 11th District, which includes Canton and Van Buren townships, as well as Romulus.

But Henry and Joe Joachim, who represents Wayne County on the Willow Run International Tradeport Task Force, said such questions should be answered by airport experts, who are expected to attend a hearing at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, June 24, hosted by U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers in the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road. The public is invited.

'Some experts will tell you if you want an international tradeport, you'll never make it without a 10,000-foot runway,' Henry said, adding that the task force is also looking into the corporate aviation business, which requires smaller planes.

Dewey Henry
Wayne County Jobs and Economic Development

Joachim and Henry acknowledged Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter's conclusion that the tradeport, designed to boost the local economy with jobs and new companies — in the aftermath of the Willow Run GM plant closing — would likely require a runway extension.

In promotional material about the proposed tradeport, advocates suggest that 26,000 new jobs could potentially be created with the influx of cargo flight business and companies settling in the area surrounding the airport.

Plans call for extending one of the runways from 7,000 to 10,500 feet to allow 747 jets loaded with cargo to land and take off. The extended runway would be about one mile from Canton. But concerned citizens who have studied Willow Run flight paths say cargo planes will be flying over Livonia, Westland, Garden City, the Plymouths, Northvilles and Novi on their way to Willow Run.

"Some experts will tell you if you want an international tradeport, you'll never make it without a 10,000 foot runway," Henry said, adding that the task force is also looking into the corporate aviation business, which requires smaller planes.

"Again, the runway and the tradeport are related," McCotter said.

But Henry told the economic development committee, chaired by McCotter, that they should not get hung up on the creation of 26,000 new jobs with a tradeport. "But that's all I hear," McCotter responded.

The creation of a tradeport authority would allow for marketing and infrastructure improvements around the airport. "Primarily, we see development coming on 4,400 acres outside the airport," Henry said.

The tradeport, which would include the airport, would cover more than 6,000 acres. "It's a big industrial park with an airport in the middle of it," Henry said.

Patterson reminded Henry that Romulus residents are negatively affected by the expansion of Detroit Metro Airport. "We're talking about the destruction of the quality of life if the pattern in Romulus is followed at Willow Run," he said.

Attend the races at Ford Museum

The spotlight will be on the future at Henry Ford Museum as satellite technology tracks minute-by-minute progress of the 40-vehicle, 1,150 mile, solar-powered Sunrayce 95, June 20-29.

This biennial competition invites university and college teams to build solar-powered vehicles and compete against one another.

With a push of a button, visitors will be able to tap into the satellite Global Positioning System to track the precise location of the vehicles as they travel from Indianapolis, Ind., to Golden, Colo.

The exhibit explores the role of alternative-energy vehicles, traces the history of the Sunrayce, and provides details about this year's competition. It also includes two solar vehicles from the museum's collections: the University of Michigan Sunrunner, winner of the 1990 GM Sunrayce USA, and the Crowder College TSAR Phoenix, the first car to travel across the continental United States powered by solar energy during the summer of 1984.

For more information, call (313) 271-1976.

The museum and village are open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Commission keeps golf course open

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Wayne County commissioners kept the county's newest golf course open Monday by voting 10-3 to establish greens fees that have been charged all season.

Among the yes voters were Vice Chair Kay Beard, D-Westland, who also represents Garden City, and commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton Township.

Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, who also represents Plymouth and Plymouth Township, voted no.

Commissioner Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, who also represents Redford Township, was absent and didn't vote.

County administrators under Executive Edward McNamara had said they would shut the course down in the event that the fees weren't approved.

The par-three, 18-hole course, called Tall Oaks, is on Wahrman Road just off Eureka between I-275 and the airport.

It was purchased for $1.2 million late last year as part of a property-acquisition program so that a new runway can be built. Ninety percent of the money used to buy the golf course came from the federal government. The remaining portion came from bonds the county sold. The course is expected to be closed permanently in late 1996 when construction begins on the new runway.

Since the previous owner chose not to continue running the course, airport personnel called in the Parks Department to supervise the continued operation.

The Parks Department is supposed to keep enough money to cover expenses and sends what's left over to the airport, said airport director Robert Braun.

The issue reached the commission when a request was made to raise greens fees.

Bruce Patterson

Among the commissioners' complaints was that they had never been asked to approve the fees already being charged.

A vote on Thursday, June 15, to approve current fees "temporarily" until the Ways and Means Committee could examine the fees failed on a 7-7 tally, making the special meeting Monday necessary to keep the course open.

Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton Township, voted against approving the fees Thursday, but voted to approve the fees Monday.

"I felt the meeting that occurred Monday had provided for public hearing to occur," he said. "And if you will recall, on Thursday my objection to the procedure that was being followed was what made me vote against the establishment of an increased set of fees."

By Monday, Patterson said, "we had now gone ahead and dotted our i's and crossed our t's."

Of the Observer-area commissioners, only Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, who also represents Plymouth and Plymouth Township, continued to vote against the fees Monday.

Seniors, women driving a lot, survey says

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Local people are driving longer to work, buying more cars per household, and making more trips every day, a regional survey shows.

Commuters in 1953 drove one trip per day; today, 1.3 trips as two-income households increase.

"In 1953, drivers drove for 16 minutes to their jobs . . . In 1994, the average driver commute trip took 27 minutes," said Paul Tait, a staff member of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

The old morning and quittin' time rush hours? Gone. As more housewives, teens and senior citizens drive, the lunch hour "spike" in travel has become an elongated rush that lasts all afternoon, Tait told the SEMCOG General Assembly's annual meeting.

Data came from a survey of 7,000 households with 18,000 members. Each person (preschoolers excluded) was asked to complete a thorough travel diary for one day. It was SEMCOG's first comprehensive travel survey since 1968, Tait said.

Key findings:

■ Females, particularly homemakers, make slightly more trips than males.

■ People age 75 and older make as many daily trips (4.2) as the 16-24 age group.

■ People ages 64-74 make as many daily trips (4.5) as the 25-34 age group.

■ Each household averages 4.4 trips per person daily. Each household averages 9.4 trips. Total travel each weekday: 114 million miles.

■ In 1953, the average household was 3.5 persons and had less than one vehicle. By 1994 household size had shrunk to 2.6, a decline of 35 percent. But vehicle ownership per household had grown to 1.7 — a 75-percent increase per household.

"I would have loved to have seen the diary on each of my four teen-age daughters had we been selected for the survey," said Tait.

Travel in 1994 is perhaps understated in the survey figures. "More people make a stop during the commute trip to drop off children at day care, for example. In that case, both trips become part of the 'other' category," Tait said.

Tait added that SEMCOG is working on two smaller surveys — one on transit ridership, the other on trips into and out of the seven-county region.

"When data from all three surveys are ready, we will have the most comprehensive transportation planning foundation ever available in this region — and one of the most comprehensive in the nation," he said.

School elections

Canton helped by millage OK

Voter approval of a school millage package for the Wayne-Westland School District is good news for Canton Township.

While voters in the Plymouth-Canton School District rejected a 2.3 mill property tax increase for books and computers, two Wayne-Westland millages were approved.

Portions of Canton Township are also served by the Wayne-Westland and Van Buren schools. The health of those districts affects potential growth in Canton. Strong school systems will ensure more residential growth in the eastern portion of Canton.

At the same time, voters elected Martha Pitsenbarger and David James to four-year terms, effective July 1. They were the top vote-getters in a three-person race. Ed Turner was eliminated.

Looking ahead to the next four years, the Observer hopes the new board members will be able to grasp the complicated policy issues facing the district in the areas of finance, curriculum and community relations.

This fall's school opening will be unusually difficult for new board members to handle. Major changes to be implemented in the fall involve the grade structure, the related creation of the district's first middle schools, and substantial changes in school attendance boundaries.

At the same time, the new board will be working with a new superintendent, Duane Moore, who comes to the community from South Lyon.

Another major issue faced by the new school board is whether to allow a charter school permission to use an elementary school scheduled for closing this week.

On the money issues, Proposal 1 was particularly important. The 3-mill levy would raise $3 million and eliminate the pay-to-play fees, restore secondary school busing, help the two senior high schools retain important accreditation, and reduce the projected budget deficit.

Proposal 2 is the non-homestead tax to be levied on businesses, industries and rental apartment developments and raise $10 million in revenues.

With election returns now history, the Observer wants to offer its public thanks, on behalf of the community, for the contributions made by school board members Vicki Welty and Laurel Raisanen, who will close out their four-year terms June 30.

The two chose earlier this year not to seek a second term.

Over the past four years, Welty and Raisanen have lent common sense in the wacky business of a school board trying to set policy in an era of uncertain state financing and constant changes in messages and state aid from Lansing.

They served the students and taxpayers well.

The Observer, as well as others who welcome good government, thank them for their time and efforts.

Keep feds out of your computer

The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees freedom of speech and prohibits Congress from interfering with that right, is under attack again.

This time Congress and the special interest groups that have its political ear are targeting their latest attack on what they consider abuses of the Internet, an international collection of linked computer networks which also can be accessed through commercial on-line services.

The latest moves to curb your right to see and read what you want without governmental interference are taking two routes.

Both focus on prohibiting explicit messages and material which are accessible to children. The Senate passed a version last week with the House of Representatives considering its own legislation.

We hope people who value their right to obtain information through any source — via the Postal Service, the local library or computer services paid for by users — will protest such unwanted and potentially illegal governmental intrusion.

While most people will agree that sexually explicit material should be kept out of the hands of children, the federal government has shown in past regulatory actions that it is usually unable to keep from expanding its powers after it gets its political foot in the front or back door.

In addition to the freedom of speech issue, people should resist any governmental interference on the basis of protecting privacy.

This right of privacy has taken on new dimensions in the growing high-tech cyberspace.

Governmental agencies at all levels have shown that once they grab onto a piece of information — computerized or not — they refuse to let go.

Can you imagine what the Internal Revenue Service or FBI could do snooping into your private electronic-mail communications? Like private mail or telephone conversations, the Observer feels that what's private is private and if the feds feel a law is being violated, they can collect evidence elsewhere and get a judge to sign a warrant to investigate further.

Many proponents of the First Amendment and rights of privacy feel that if there is a perception of a problem, it can be solved without governmental interference.

If a majority of the country's computer users want some controls over materials made available to their children through the information highway, they can exercise some discretion in their homes or use lock-out device software, similar to those used by cable-TV companies.

It's time for Congress and federal agencies to recognize that the wide-ranging benefits of computerized services is a "plus" for everyone — government, business and individuals.

But Congress shouldn't let a complaint, made without valid, supporting data, lead to regulation of computer services.

The feds should let the marketplace deal with it. It will do a much better job.

Disappointment

The enhancement millage lost by 197 votes! It infuriates me that there may have been 198 Plymouth residents in support of the increase, who didn't exercise their right to vote.

Had those people done just that, the children of Plymouth-Canton schools would have gotten new textbooks and computers, and their teachers would have gotten tools and training.

The Plymouth-Canton school district spends $5,500 per student per year. Livonia spends $1,000 more per student. If Plymouth residents don't support the schools by passing very much-needed millage increases, the quality of education will not improve. Therefore, home values may decrease, and Plymouth may lose its appeal as a great community and wonderful place to raise a family. Please consider this with the next millage increase.

Jeanne M. Stevenson, Plymouth

Millage message

Your editorial of June 15 concerning the recent Plymouth-Canton millage election is subtitled "Voters send message to board." We sent it, but they won't get it. The prior composition of the board supported the millage and all eight candidates running for the board were quoted as supporting the millage, so what can we expect? Basically, until the board really communicates with the community, especially those who disagreed and carried the vote, nothing will change. They spend too much time talking among themselves and supporters, while avoiding and pushing aside those who disagree (without really finding out why they disagree).

Gary B. McCombs, Canton

Court reform

I applaud the courage state Rep. Deborah Whyman has demonstrated by introducing legislation to correct a fundamental flaw in our court system.

The present system provides for two separate courts, of equal authority and overlapping jurisdiction (Recorder's Court and Wayne County Circuit Court), that simultaneously serve Wayne County; however, all Wayne County voters elect the Wayne County Circuit Court judges but only Detroit voters elect the Recorder's Court judges. Unless an affirmative election is made within a short period of time in a Wayne County criminal case, you can have a Recorder's Court judge hearing a case involving an alleged crime committed outside of Detroit. The result is a judge hearing the case who is not accountable to the people affected by their decision.

Critics who have alleged a racial motivation for Rep. Whyman's proposed legislation: 1) Miss the fundamental point of making elected public officials accountable to the persons they represent; 2) Are prematurely speculating on the racial makeup of the future Wayne County Circuit Court; or 3) Have a vested interest in the present flawed system.

If Ohio voters could elect both Ohio and Michigan judges but Michigan voters could elect only Michigan judges, but could be forced to have their cases heard by an Ohio judge, would there not be an outcry to correct the injustice?

Michael J. Gerou, Plymouth

Creating 'renaissance'

Gov. John Engler recently unveiled a proposal — the "renaissance zone" — to revitalize distressed urban and rural areas in Michigan by creating defined geographic areas where all state taxes would be waived except the sales tax. The tax-free zone could exist for up to 15 years, with taxes being phased back in over some period of time.

Small-business owners located within the zone would receive waivers on the single business tax, property tax and personal property tax, and individuals living in the zone also would receive a waiver of state income taxes (not federal taxes).

While the proposed concept would be valuable for small businesses located within the designated zone, it could have a greater impact on Michigan's economy if we take it to the next level: a "renaissance zone" for businesses based on some measure of size — rather than geography.

This is not a new or radical concept. Recently passed single business tax reforms exempt businesses with less than $250,000 in gross receipts. And many Michigan regulations make exceptions based on business size. Establishing an "incubator" or safe harbor environment for Michigan's small businesses, regardless of their location, would be entirely consistent with the governor's renaissance zone concept.

For every small business that succeeds, another one succumbs to the pressures of the marketplace within the first five years. Fledgling small businesses would benefit greatly from an environment where they can grow and prosper, provide jobs and capital investment. It is important to remember that every large company in Michigan started out as a small business and every small business that succeeds and grows becomes a significant investment in the economic well-being of Michigan.

Points of View

Hoisting the flag

Ethnic backgrounds aside, we're all Americans

By Ray Konrad
Guest Columnist

Relating to guest columnist Luke Lampkin's view expressed this spring in this space, let me respond with a few comments of my own.

I'm sorry that he is "disturbed . . . that black America is the only ethnic group without a flag of origin." What's wrong with the Stars and Stripes? And who are you? Are you black, or black with a little white, or red with a little black or white?

I doubt if anyone, especially those who live in the United States, are so pure blooded that they can call any country, other than this, their nation of origin. I happen to be the product of an Irish (Roman Catholic) mother, but born in this country — in Ohio. Does this mean that I should display the Irish Republican flag or the flag of Northern Ireland? Perhaps even the Ohio state flag.

And then there's my father. He was German but born in Ohio also. His parents were born in the Alsace-Lorraine area controlled alternately by France and Germany. His grandparents could possibly have been Jewish. What flag should he fly?

My wife's father was English born in New York and her mother was Polish born in this country. Poland has been controlled by many nations, several times, by Germany, by the old Soviet Union. Maybe we should fly the Papal flag.

How about my children, to what flag should they relate? In fact, we can not really be called Americans in the pure sense of the word. The only real "Americans" were here wearing feathers and paint; they were considered red. Of course, let us not forget that there is a possibility that even they may have come from the Alaska region, even Asia; therefore, they are also yellow.

We are not the only Americans on this continent. We are only North Americans and we are not the only North Americans. Let us not forget our neighbors to the north and south, Canada, Central America and South America.

Mr. Lampkin needs to re-evaluate. He is a citizen of the United States, just like me, and he is no better nor any worse nor is he entitled to any more than I. His ancestors were, perhaps, slaves. But white people went to war and killed each other over that question and the slave was set free to fend for themselves, just as all of us must do.

Sometimes we need a little help and it is given. But it should not be given in perpetuity. When veterans return from the wars they are given a form of preferential treatment — affirmative action, call it what you will. But, here again, it has a life. In this case they have been given a chance for education, preferential hiring, a chance to buy a home, medical help when it was needed. But, once you are hired, you are on your own; don't start crying the blues because you were not elevated to the exalted rank of corporation president. For that you need something that must come from within.

Your GI loan that helped get that home must be paid back, from money earned by you. It should not be the responsibility of the taxpayers nor the government to be an umbrella for you from cradle to grave. The well must soon go dry and you must begin looking for a new site to dip your bucket.

So, if Mr. Lampkin is looking for a flag, look around you, as they say here in Michigan. His roots are here. He has no other life other than here. His fortune lies beneath his own feet. I am amazed that a man of his education has not figured this out yet. Unless, of course, he believes that this is the way he must make a living, steering the pot from Right to Left!

Court's in session for major reform debate

The cat's out of the bag. The game's afoot! Play ball!

Court reform, a long-festering problem, is emerging in Michigan as a major issue, in the same ballpark with Wayne County reform in 1980 and school finance reform in 1993-1994.

Let's define "court reform." It's a simplified structure — perhaps even a single trial court instead of circuit, recorder's, probate and district courts. It's the same revenue base for everyone — not state-paid courts in Detroit and locally funded courts in the other 82 counties. It's administrative simplification.

Let's pull together what look like discrete events:

■ State Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, finally uncorked her commonsense bill to consolidate Wayne Circuit and Detroit Recorder's courts. The system is crazy, and always was. Everywhere else in Michigan, circuit courts handle felony cases and major civil cases. In Wayne County, circuit court handles major civil cases, and 29 Detroit Recorder's judges, augmented by a handful (five) of circuit judges, handle felony cases.

To put it another way, Detroiters elect their judges and have half the votes to elect countywide judges. What's theirs is theirs, and half of ours is theirs. Naturally, the racists in Detroit squawked that "they" are taking away Detroit's power. Bull.

■ State Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, and a bipartisan crew of friends formally presented their plan to take Friend of the Court, which handles payments in our growing crop of divorce cases, away from the circuit judges and put it under general county government.

FOC is an administrative operation that doesn't belong under judges, who should be busy with judicial work. For some strange reason, circuit judges are the most pompous egomaniacs (look at the Oakland bench's annual report some time, with its fawning praise of every judge's every action) and don't want reform. But the fact is that aggrieved men and women can't take their mounds of grievances with FOC to anyone. The Geake Team's plan makes sense.

■ Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley gave the Geake plan backhanded support when he ruled that FOC chiefs are "employees" and "officers" of the court. That removes an imagined constitutional barrier to a reform.

■ After 12 years on the Supreme Court, James Brickley is chief justice. Brickley thinks in dynamic rather than static terms. He studies major structural problems instead of tinkering around the edges with sandpaper. As lieutenant governor, Brickley was Gov. Bill Milliken's hammer in launching a charter chief executive in Wayne County. Brickley was active on school finance reform before most politicos.

As chief justice, Brickley holds a lot of levers. The Supreme Court's task force has recommended a single trial court as one option in reform. Brickley can be expected to push that option. He also will push the task force's recommendations for more centralized administration of courts and full state funding of trial courts.

■ State Rep. Tom Mathieu, D-Grand Rapids, again is nagging the Legislature about state funding for the other 82 counties. Mathieu gets louder and louder every year. Bless him.

■ Gov. John Engler last year made wise use of his veto power by threatening to block more judges for Oakland, western Wayne and Washtenaw counties until judicial operations are reformed.

■ Sen. Wm. VanRegenmorter, R-Jenison, attending Geake's news conference, suggested that reforming Friend of the Court is tied to reforming overall court structure.

The chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee also hinted, if I heard him correctly, that the money for full state funding of courts could come from what is now revenue sharing. In other words, the state might quit sharing tens of millions with local governments in return for lifting the burden of court funding off the locals' backs.

The game's afoot! In bits and pieces, the debate over trial court reform has started.

Academy shows potential

Of all the arguments now taking place in Michigan, it is the debate about school reform that will have the most profound impact on the lives of most people.

It's plain that the K-12 school system is not producing graduates with the skills required to compete in a global economy, much less meet the current needs of employers. That's not in doubt. What is at issue is how to go about it.

The hard-right ideological majority on the state Board of Education is talking about selling "shares" in the public schools, evidently reasoning that the way to get "businesslike results" is to treat schools as though they were corporations.

The teachers unions like the Michigan Education Association sound as though there is nothing wrong with the schools that lots and lots of money couldn't cure, while at the same time spreading tales of gloom and doom that Gov. John Engler and his allies are out to destroy the public schools.

The moderates keep pointing to the school reform efforts already under way through things like diploma certification by the state and the MEAP tests now used throughout Michigan to measure what kids actually learn, year by year, building by building.

The debate has been marked so far by an enormous amount of hot air and relatively few facts. The time, however, is coming when results are going to count for a whole lot. I'd have to say that on first blush, it's employer-driven changes working through charter schools that have the best chance for success.

Here's an example: The Livingston Technical Academy, a charter school designed to provide an initial class of 100 students with the skills that are needed by the area's growing list of relatively high tech manufacturers like Ogihara America, in Howell.

The LTA is based on the good groundwork done by the Livingston Applied Technology Education Consortium, which over the past 10 years has provided vocational education to some 2,800 kids from all five of Livingston County's high schools.

But as time went on, the area manufacturers kept needing more and more technology and the pool of school-leavers kept dwindling. "We need candidates with more technically sound fundamental skills," according to Tom Olst, vice president at Bradhart Products in Howell and chairman of the Howell Area Chamber of Commerce's Manufacturer's Network.

Philip Power

With the need clear, the passage of Proposal A last year authorized creating charter schools and opened the way to action. Earlier this spring, the Livingston Technical Academy had its charter approved by Central Michigan University and collected a total of $65,000 in grants. It's now trying to pick a site, select a president and enroll its first class starting this fall.

What's remarkable about the LTA is its focus: Less on what goes on in its own classroom and more on the equipment, technology and skilled master craftsmen on the shop floor of local employers. "We consider the classroom to be our various businesses where students will learn by doing," says Tom Erhart, chairman of the LTA.

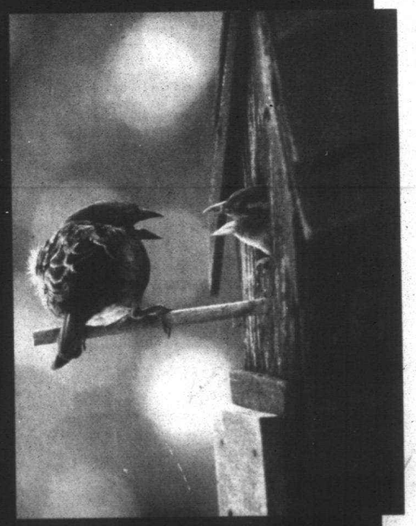

That makes sense. I remember taking shop way back when I was in high school. The equipment and tools we used then might, just barely, have made it into Henry Ford's first assembly line at the beginning of the century. There's no substitute for the actual tools and high-tech equipment being used in industry as the classroom for tomorrow's employees.

I'm optimistic about LTA's prospects. The group running the show seems to have a more results-oriented focus than all the ideologues now running around the school debate. And I've always felt that the key to school reform was arranging things so market forces — i.e., the real needs of employers for new hires with skills — could be brought to bear.

Let's see what they've accomplished in a year. (For more information on the Livingston Technical Academy, call (810) 227-5609.

1,000 flock to 'Y' races

The Plymouth YMCA's 16th Annual Run on Sunday, Father's Day, drew more than 1,000 participants — evidence of the continuing popularity of the event.

Under bright sunny skies, this year's event drew runners of all ages around the state and as far away as Cincinnati. Competitions included a one mile run, 5 kilometer run, 10K run, Junior Jog for 6-8 year olds and Tot Trot for 3-5 year olds.

"This is the first year the same man won the 1 mile, 5K and 10K runs," said Janet Murphy of the Plymouth YMCA. Plaques were awarded to the top three male and female overall finishers and medals were awarded to the top three finishers in each age division.

Money raised in the event, the YMCA's biggest annual fund-raiser, comes from runner's fees and helps pay for YMCA programs that benefit youth.

In the 5 kilometer run the overall male winner was Clint Verran of Ypsilanti; the overall female winner was Lynn Boven of Westland.

Verran was also the male overall winner in the 10K run, while Kimberly Bruce of Bradenton Beach was the overall female winner.

Gabrielle Crandall of Plymouth was the third place woman in the event.

In the 5K Walk, the male winner was William Swearengin of Ann Arbor. Jennie Patterson of Plymouth was the female winner.

In the One Mile Run-Walk, Verran finished first in the male category while Beth Knight of Canton was the top female.

Mary Walton of Plymouth finished third in that event.

KAREN MEIER

So mulch ado about mowing

My lawn mower and I are great friends now. We get together two, sometimes three, times a week. Especially this time of year when rain falls more frequently and the nights are cool.

But I have to tell you, there was a time last year when the lawn mower and I were on shaky ground. The relationship turned ugly. Really ugly. The lawn mower did terrible, mean things to me. And then I said some ugly things to the lawn mower because I was so mad. And then the lawn mower kept doing the same terrible, mean things.

We nearly split. It came this close...this close. But then we sought some outside help. And that's what saved us. And so here we are. Back on track. Engine purring, blade slicing, happily mulching along.

The trouble started not long after we first met. This lawn mower was new last spring; the old one had served well, but it just got old and quite useless really. So rather unceremoniously we got rid of it. Nobody even fetched it off the curb on garbage day. Garbage robbers didn't even give it a second glance.

So mulch newness

But the new one was a looker. It was a mulcher/mower with a detachable bagger thing you could stick on the back, if you didn't want to mulch. And if you didn't want to mulch, and you didn't want to bag in the rear, you could shoot out the side. Very excellent.

Now, the first few times the lawn mower and I went out, I was impressed by its newness and shininess. But frankly, its unwillingness to get moving in the first place bugged me . . . a lot. The ignition pull string would get hung up, and I'd scrape my knuckles.

And once I got it untangled, I then was faced with the chore of actually getting the engine to turn over. To do that the ignition pull string had to be pulled a minimum of 20 times. And at each subsequent meeting, the number increased. Sometime in May of last year I began counting, just for observation purposes, just to drive myself crazy. I was up to, and this is no lie, you can ask my neighbors, 60 pulls by the middle of May.

By June, I was up over a hundred. Again, I deceive you not. I am stubborn as the day is long when I'm pitted against a machine. Especially a new one, especially one that costs as much as a lawn mower. The stupid pile of metal and bolts and blades wasn't going to get me best of me. I'd show it who's boss. If it dished out 100 pulls, then fine. I was up to it. I had a lawn to cut after all. And that lawn wasn't going to stop growing just because my stupid lawn mower wouldn't start.

So mulch pulling

By June 24, a day that "will live in infamy" around here, it took 263 pulls of the ignition cord to get my new lawn mower started. I was drenched in sweat and my arm was hanging on by a tendon by the time I cut the first swath in the front yard. I was mad. But the machine hadn't beaten me. I had won. Perseverance won out again.

A third party intervened that evening. My husband said, "The lawn looks nice, dear."

"Thank you," I gasped. Then I wheezed and sputtered.

"What's the matter? You look terrible. Like you've been in a boxing ring all day."

"Well, I have. The good news is I knocked my opponent on his grass. The bad news is I threw 263 punches to do it."

Ron couldn't understand how it could possibly take so much to get the stupid lawn mower started. Was I weakling or something?

Weakling or something? Indeed. I'm tough as steel. Tougher.

At any rate, we all went in the garage and had a face-to-face. The lawn mower just sat there, not saying a dat blame thing. Taking it all in, I suppose. And Ron kept asking me my side of the story. So I went over the whole thing, in detail. I even demonstrated.

Finally, Ron shook his head, rolled his eyes, and made a bunch of breath come out of his nose. And then he pressed the primer bulb three times and gave the cord one pull and the engine sputtered to life. I'm not kidding. One measly pull. That's all that was needed after priming the engine with that little primer bulb. That's it.

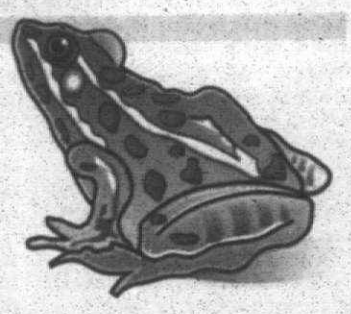

And that's how it was for the remainder of the summer. Three presses on the primer bulb and one pull on the starter cord. Every time without fail.

The lawn mower and I lived happily ever after after that. I guess you could say ours is a mulch made in heaven.

SUMMER day CAMPS

with emphasis on learning

Mention summer camp and images of glamorized Hollywood flicks might come to mind – Bill Murray as the wacky counselor in the film "Meatballs," teenager Haley Mills discovering a twin sister in "Parent Trap," and Wednesday and Pugsley enduring a summer camp experience in "Addams Family Values."

At one time, summer camp meant residential camp: buses filled with screaming kids headed for cabins in the woods by a lake and the three C's – counselors, canoeing and crafts.

But come the '70s, working parents in need of cost-effective child care found an alternative to residential camps, day camps: those week-long, close-to-home adventures for children. While there are still counselors and crafts, bus rides are for field trips and grassy fields had replaced the cabins by the lake.

And the evolution continues. Now parents are looking for camps with and educational twist. Forget the buses and cabins. It's classrooms at schools, colleges, museums and even the zoo. And while there's still crafts, the emphasis is on learning – as in computers, biology, chemistry, the fine arts and languages.

For parents looking for a camping experience for their children this summer, there are several from which to choose. Some are close to home; others require some drive time. But all have one thing in common – learning.

Celebrate summer: 20 places meant for families

Isle landmark: The formal and perennial gardens outside are an introduction to the tropical flowers, ferns, palms and lily pool inside the Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory on Belle Isle.

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Ah, summer . . . the most favorite time of the year (next to Christmas) for children. The last school bell has rung and if you're counting, there's roughly 10 weeks of no more school, no more books, no more . . .

For kids old enough, there are summer jobs to keep them busy. For the younger crowd, day camp, parks and recreation activities and just playing with friends can nibble away at summer vacation.

But by July, kids generally have begun the you-know-it's-summer-if lament of "there's nothing to do." Parents can nip those woes in the bud with a few selective day trips or a morning or afternoon excursion close to home.

Need some ideas? Here are 20 to choose from. Some are what you'd classify as old standbys, while others are fairly new attractions for families in need of something to do.

(1) At the Detroit Zoological Park, 10 Mile Road and Woodward, Royal Oak, introduce the kids to more than 1,000 wild and exotic animals, many in their natural habitat. Summer hours (through Oct. 31) are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays and holidays through Labor Day.

Admission is $6 for adults (13-62 years), $4 for seniors citizens (62 years and older), $3 for children (2-12 years) and children under 2 free. Parking is $3 for cars and vans and $6 for buses. For more information, call (810) 398-0903.

Belle Isle in the Detroit River offers plenty of things for the family to do with its zoo, aquarium, conservatory and maritime museum. The bridge entrance is at East Grand Boulevard and Jefferson in Detroit.

(2) The Belle Isle Zoo features a natural habitat for more than 200 wild animals viewed from an elevated walkway. It is open 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily through Oct. 31. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for those 62 years and older and 50 cents for children 2-12 years old.

(3-4) The Belle Isle Aquarium is the nation's oldest freshwater aquarium, offering a look at a variety of aquatic life, while the neighboring Anna Scripps Whitcomb Conservatory is filled with tropical flowers, ferns, palms and lily pool and has formal and perennial gardens. Both are open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $1 for both.

(5) Also on the island is the Dossin Great Lakes Museum, which provides an excellent maritime history of the Great Lakes. It contains scale models of ships, a restored ship's saloon, maritime paintings and a reconstructed ship's bridge as well as the special exhibit "Michigan's Prohibition Navy," a look at rum running during Prohibition.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. Beginning July 1, admission will be $2 for adults, $1 for students 12-18 years old and senior citizens and children under 12 years free. The museum is closed on major holidays. For more information, call (313) 267-6440.

(6) The Children's Museum, 67 E. Kirby, Detroit, houses an excellent collection of doll houses and toys and features a planetarium and cultural and scientific displays. Summer activities run July 5 through Aug. 11 and include daily workshops for children 4-12 years of age and free planetarium shows at 1 p.m.

Hours are noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Workshops are at 2 p.m. and cost $1 per child for materials. For more information, call (313) 494-1210.

(7) The Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward Ave., Detroit, offers more than 100 galleries, featuring sculpture, textiles and paintings as well as the famous Diego Rivera wall murals. Current exhibitions include "Picturing Paris," a collection of 90 photographs from the museum's permanent collection, through July 30 and "Island Ancestor: Oceanic Art from the Masco Collection," 76 items from the pre-colonial periods of New Guinea, Polynesia, Micronesia and Melanesia, through Aug. 6.

The museum is open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. A donation is requested for admission with the recommended amount of $4 for adults and $1 for students and children. For more information, call (313) 833-7900.

(8) The Detroit Science Center, 5020 John R, Detroit, offers hands-on science exhibits where many scientific principles are demonstrated and the space theater with an Omnimax projection screen.

Now showing in the theater are "Journey Inside a Computer" on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and "The Tropical Rain Forest" on Tuesday and Thursday. On Saturday and Sunday, the playbill also includes "Search for the Great Sharks."

The hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Admission is $6.50 for adults, $4.50 for children 4-12 years of age and children under age 3 free. For more information, call (313) 577-8400.

(9) At Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, 20900 Oakwood, Blvd., Dearborn, summer is in full swing. At the museum, the newest exhibit, "Motown Sound: The Music and the Story," joins the ongoing "The Automobile in American Life" and "Made in America." In the village, early America comes to life at Edison's Menlo Park Laboratory, the Wright Brothers Cycle Shop, and a courthouse where young Abraham Lincoln practiced law.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Admission to the village and museum is separate and is $12.50 for adults, $11.50 for senior citizens 62 years and older, $6.25 for children 5-12 years of age and children under 5 free. For more information, call (313) 271-1976.

(10) For nature lovers, Matthaei Botanical Gardens and Conservatory, 1800 N. Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor, offers a conservatory filled with tropical, desert and temperate flora and gardens featuring roses, perennial, medicinal, rock and herbal plants. Daily hours for the grounds and gardens are 8 a.m. to sunset, while the conservatory hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily.

Admission to the conservatory is $2 for adults, $1 for school children (kindergarten-12th grade) and preschoolers free. On Saturdays and Mondays 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., conservatory is free to all visitors. For more information, call (313) 998-7061.

Hospice offers Camp Phoenix for kids

Community Hospice Services will again offer Camp Phoenix, a weekend bereavement camp for children ages 6-15 who have suffered a significant loss of a loved one.

The camp takes place Aug. 25-Aug. 27 at the YMCA's Camp Ohiyesa in the northwest Oakland County. Thanks to a grant from the Women's Committee for Hospice Care, CHS is able to offer Camp Phoenix at no charge to campers.

"On their own, children and adolescents lack the resources, cognitive ability and life experiences to deal effectively with a significant loss," said Yvonne Strand, director of social services for CHS. "Without help from adults who care and understand, children can and often do fail to thrive from their losses; conversely, with help these same children can learn and grow from their experiences."

'Children will integrate into their lives what they see and experience. As adults, we may assume that children don't grieve," said Kelly Rhoades, director of bereavement and spiritual care for CHS. "But any child who is old enough to love is old enough to grieve."

It can be difficult to recognize that a child is grieving. To an adult, it may seem as if the child is not grieving at all, or it may seem as if the child has bounced back from the loss. To complicate the matter, frequently the loss which affects the child has also had a profound impact on the adult in the child's life. The adult may be overwhelmed in their own feelings of grief.

"Where grief and loss are concerned, children are often the 'forgotten ones,'" Strand said. "The importance of assisting children to identify, acknowledge and express their grief cannot be understated. If we validate and acknowledge the importance of children's feelings, give them safe and secure ways in which to deal with their grief, as well as express themselves, we give children the gift of empowerment.'

Children need to have a safe, trusting environment for the expression of feelings that are sometimes overlooked or discounted in their daily lives. Camp Phoenix was designed to provide such an environment.

The weekend camp experience is designed to facilitate a healthy grieving process in an accepting environment for children who have lost a loved one through death.

Writer gets to the important aspects

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LOREME GREEN

Dear Lorene,

My friend, Pam, had her handwriting analyzed by you last year. I thought it would be interesting to find out what you think about mine. I must admit I print most of the time, so I hope this is "cursive" enough to analyze.

I am 39 years old. I write with my right hand, but use my left hand to play sports. I'm looking forward to seeing my letter in your column. Thank you.

A.F.,
Brighton

Optimism rides on each line of this interesting handwriting. However, I would like to see samples of handwriting done at other times, as I suspect she may have difficulty sustaining this upbeat attitude for extended periods. A little discouragement creeps into the handwriting in places.

When feeling optimistic, she is a self-starter. She has a faculty for eliminating the extraneous and getting right down to the important aspects.

Our writer's intelligence is above average. Her ideas are often innovative and original. She also has a well-developed sense for structure and proportion.

This is a woman who can visualize the large picture. Details are also important and I can almost see her checking to be certain they are handled correctly. A retentive memory is much in evidence, too. Little escapes her watchful eyes.

This woman was probably raised in a female-dominated home. Many of her personality traits have been shaped by this background. But she is a very independent woman with a need to express her individuality. Growing up, this may have labeled her as a rebel.

Our writer has a need for status and stroking. She is outwardly poised and controls her emotions. Decisions are discreetly weighed and she arrives at cool-headed determinations. Emotional appeals may often fall on deaf ears.

Her heavy pressure tells us she has vigorous vitality. This is augmented by a determination to overcome obstacles. A little hidden temper lies just below the surface and can be triggered when things do not measure up.

Currently, she may be apprehensive about something that is going to happen in the future or the persons involved. Some anxiety is suggested here.

Criticism has an adverse effect upon her. Perhaps she heard too much of it in her early life when she wanted to be independent and follow her own star.

Intuition is seen in her handwriting. This can act as a sixth sense in sizing up people. It also gives her an innate sense of timing in that she often knows when to pursue a project, when to hold it in abeyance and when to shelve it.

To both friends and to her principles she is loyal. On occasion she may harbor ambivalent feelings regarding doing for others and doing for herself.

The pleasures that life has to offer hold much appeal for this young woman. Materialism, athleticism, good food and the beauty of nature seem to stand out.

Her signature is large and the surname is almost illegible. Is this a wish to be enigmatic to others? She appears to demand space and knows how to get it, too.

With so much going for her, she does not seem to be as self-assured on the inside as she would like the world to perceive her.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are helpful. Objective feedback is welcome.

Livonia woman searches for person who can give her life

Ever since Lisa Petro was 13 years old, she has looked forward to going deer hunting with her dad. That was their special time together.

But in 1994, Lisa had to skip deer hunting and began a hunt of an entirely different nature — to find the person to donate the bone marrow that would save her life.

Lisa discovered she had myelodysplastic syndrome after nearly passing out in a friend's front yard in 1994. Tests showed that her hemoglobin level had dropped to 6, compared to a normal level of 12-19.

"It was so ironic; just two months earlier I went to a health fair and everything, including my hemoglobin level, checked out fine," Lisa Petro said.

Myelodysplastic syndrome is a precursor to leukemia whereby the body does not produce enough red blood cells. As a result, Petro must receive blood transfusions about once a month to boost her red blood cell level up to about 8.

"Because my red blood cell count is so low, I get tired very easily; that's the worst part," Petro said. "But, as long as I'm getting blood, I feel fine."

The 29-year-old Livonia resident has a strong support system of family, friends, co-workers and organizations like My Friends Care Bone Marrow Transplant Fund Inc., who are working hard to find her donor.

Numerous fund-raisers have been held in her honor to finance her compatjbility testing for donors who are found to be preliminary matches in the National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP) Registry. Right now, 180 people in the NMDP Registry are preliminary matches, but Petro is hoping that one will be her perfect match.

Petro's condition is stable and once her donor is found, she will undergo chemotherapy, which will completely eliminate her immune system in preparation for the new marrow.

"Now, I don't really feel sick and that's what makes me afraid of receiving the transplant," Petro said, "but I know that it's the only cure."

Wayne County residents will have a chance to help patients like Petro by participating in the Gift of Hope Drive, a blood donation and bone marrow testing event being held 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Friday, June 30, at 10 Red Cross donor centers in southeastern Michigan.

Participants at least 17 years old can donate blood and the first 500 qualifying people between the ages of 18 and 55 to schedule appointments can also join the NMDP Registry.

"This event will meet two very special patient needs," Dr. Dan A. Waxman, principal officer for the Southeastern Michigan Blood Services Region of the American Red Cross. "It will boost blood inventories leading up to the Fourth of July weekend, and it will increase the number of potential marrow donors listed in the NMDP Registry."

Costs associated with having your human leukocyte antigen (HLA) typed and entered into the NMDP Registry typically cost about $150, but at the Gift of Hope Drive, eligible participants are entered at no cost. The event is financed by My Friends Care Bone Marrow Transplant Fund Inc. and the Southeastern Michigan Marrow Donor Progmn.

The first step in looking for a marrow match is testing the patient's siblings and family members. If a match is not found within this group, as in Petro's case, a match must be found with an unrelated donor

"Finding a marrow match is often compared to finding a needle in a haystack," said Tracie Drayton, executive director of My Friends Care Bone Marrow Transplant Fund Inc. "The odds are estimated anywhere from 1 in 100 to 1 in 1 million."

At the Gift of Hope drive, participants will be able to donate blood, have their HLA tested and entered into the NMDP Registry in about 1¼ hours. The procedure includes registration; a brief medical history; having pulse, temperature and hemoglobin levels checked; and signing consent forms for the NMDP. The actual blood donation takes only about 10 minutes.

After the donor's blood is HLA typed, the results are stored in the NMDP's main computer which is searched daily on behalf of patients around the world with fatal blood diseases. Only a handful of people actually will receive a call saying they may be the lifesaving match for a patient, but the larger the registry, the greater the chances that a match will be made before time runs out.

To date, southeastern Michigan residents account for more than 15,000 of the more than one million potential donors listed in the registry.

Local American Red Cross donor centers are at the Bell Creek Office Plaza, 29691 Six Mile Road, Suite 100C, Livonia; in Westgate Plaza, 6700 Canton Center Road between Ford and Warren roads, Canton, and 25001 Michigan Ave., between Telegraph and Gulley roads, Dearborn.,

Number of kids in fatherless homes tops 24 percent in '94

The percentage of American children in families without fathers has increased fourfold since 1950, a trend that continues unabated and is cause for national alarm, a new study by the Annie E. Casey Foundation concludes.

The sixth annual "KIDS COUNT Data Book," a national and state-by-state effort to track the status of children in the United States, reports that the percentage of American children living in mother-only families has increased from 6 percent in 1950 to 24 percent in 1994.

This trend has been matched by an even more rapid rise in the percentage of young men with earnings below the poverty level for a family of four. This parallel is no coincidence, according to Casey Foundation Executive Director Douglas W. Nelson.

"If the data in this edition of 'KIDS COUNT' convey nothing else, they should make clear the powerful, fundamental and inescapable correlation between the declining earning success of less educated, less skilled young males and the increases in unwed parenting and single-parent families," Nelson said.

"KIDS COUNT" uses 10 key indicators of children's well-being — percentage of low birth-weight babies, infant mortality rate, child death rate, unmarried teen birth rate, juvenile violent crime arrest rate, percentage of high school dropouts, percentage of teens not in school and not working, teen violent death rate, percentage of children in poverty and percentage of single-parent families with children.

The increase in absent fathers is a complex and controversial phenomenon that leaves many children at a considerable disadvantage, Nelson said. Children who grow up without fathers are five times more likely to be poor and almost 10 times more likely to be extremely poor, according to the "KIDS COUNT Data Book." They are twice as likely to drop out of high school and significantly more likely to end up in foster or group care and in juvenile justice facilities.

The "KIDS COUNT Data Book" reports that for more than 19 million children in America, family life does not include a father. One-quarter of those children — 4.5 million, located in every state but Utah and Wyoming — live in entire neighborhoods where more than half of all families with children have no father present.

One of the major reasons fewer fathers are living with their children is the low level of employment and earning success experienced by an increasing share of young men, Nelson said.

Since 1972, the median earned income of all men ages 25-34 has fallen by 28 percent (in inflation-adjusted dollars). The percentage of men ages 25-34 with earnings below the poverty level for a family of four has increased from 14 percent to 32 percent in just 24 years.

Low earnings for men are correlated with reduced marriage rates. Among men in their 30s, those earning $50,000 a year are nearly twice as likely to be married as those earning less than $10,000 a year.

"Almost no one volunteers for roles and duties they cannot fulfill," Nelson said. "And the simple truth is that disadvantaged young men who do not have the education, skills or opportunity to succeed in today's economy are not prepared to contribute as providers, protectors and mentors to their children."

Societal neglect of these young men has to end, he added. "If we are serious about strengthening the American family, then we have to make improving the skills, prospects and opportunities of disadvantaged males a national priority."

Nelson proposed a four-step strategy for addressing this challenge:

(1) Putting a higher priority on improving educational outcomes for poor and minority male students.

(2) Making outreach to fathers a real part of child welfare and social work practice.

(3) Reforming welfare to enable, require and reward work by absent parents.

(4) Redoubling efforts to find and sustain employment for father-age males in communities where the problem is most severe.

The Annie E. Casey Foundation is the largest private charitable organization dedicated to helping build better futures for disadvantaged children and families in the United States. It was established in 1948 by Jim Casey, one of the founders of United Parcel Service, and his siblings, who named the foundation in honor of their mother.

How does Michigan 'count?'

A state-by-state study which reports on conditions facing America's children ranks Michigan 31st.

The 1995 "Kids Count Data Book" also reports that between 1985 and 1992, the well-being of Michigan's children deteriorated in four areas while it improved in six.

What the report found was that:

- Nearly 18 percent of Michigan's children are living in households with no adult male present.
- More than 14 percent of all Michigan children reside in neighborhoods where the majority of families with children are female headed.
- Many of the state's fathers don't earn enough money to support a family. Twenty-nine percent of all men ages 25-34 earn annual incomes less than the poverty level for a family of four ($14,763).
- The percentage of low-birth-weight babies increased by 11 percent between 1985 and 1991. Michigan is ranked 37th in this category.
- The rate of Michigan's unmarried teens having children rose 58 percent from 1985 to 1992, compared to a nationwide increase of 44 percent.
- The dramatic increase in the juvenile violent crime arrest rate is a national trend. Between 1985 and 1992, Michigan's rate jumped 19 percent compared to a 58-percent increase for the nation as a whole.
- Although the state's child death rate improved 16 percent between 1985 and 1992, it is still high: 31.3 deaths per 100,000 children, compared to the national rate of 28.8 deaths per 100,000 children.

'Board' adults enjoy role playing, changing history

STORIES BY BARB WILSON • STAFF WRITER

Gamers to convene June 30-July 2

More than 1,200 people of all ages are expected to show up Friday-Sunday, June 30 through July 2, to play games. They will be at convention known as the MichiCon Gamefest, the oldest privately run gaming convention in the world.

The convention has been held annually since it was organized in 1971 by Paul Wood of Troy. And Wood is still in charge.

After several years at the Southfield Civic Center, the convention moved to the Van Dyke Park Suite Hotel in Warren.

A three-day pass for the convention costs $18 at the door. Admission covers three used-game auctions, open gaming and admission to the dealer hall. Many game dealers, some from as far away as Arizona and Florida, will se up in the dealer hall selling new, used and obscure games and accessories.

Dress is casual but not offensive. Military uniforms may be worn only by active-duty military personnel. And there have been no reports of Klingons or Romulans wandering through past conventions.

Events will be offered in four main categories:

- Role Playing (Dungeons and Dragons is the best known)
- Board Games (ranging from Monopoly and Pit to Diplomacy and Advanced Third Reich)
- Miniatures (using painted metal soldiers and vehicles), and
- Collectible Cards (including the popular Magic: the Gathering).

A special section of family games will cater to the younger game player who might be intimidated by games with hundreds of pieces and 32-page rulebooks.

For more information about the game convention, call Mike Bartnikowski at 313-929-7744, Barry Jensen at 810-649-5718 or e-mail Dolphin2@oeonline.com.

The games people play aren't just for kids anymore. Gaming has become a new favorite with many adults who seek entertainment that stiumlates the mind, allows for socializing among friends, and doesn't require a five-mile jog every day.

The old standards - parlor games - like checkers, Scrabble and backgammon, have loyal followings with tournaments scheduled around the country. These, however, are not necessarily the games that have attracted thousands of men to the pastime, leading to the resurgence of gaming in general.

Computer games, role-playing games and advanced board games have soared in popularity among adults.

"There's always something to play, but it's true that gaming is male dominated," said Al Slisinger, an avid gamer and owner of the Old Guard Hobby Shop in Garden City. "They're great. You can be anything you want to be. You can build a railroad, be a diplomat. But you always want to win."

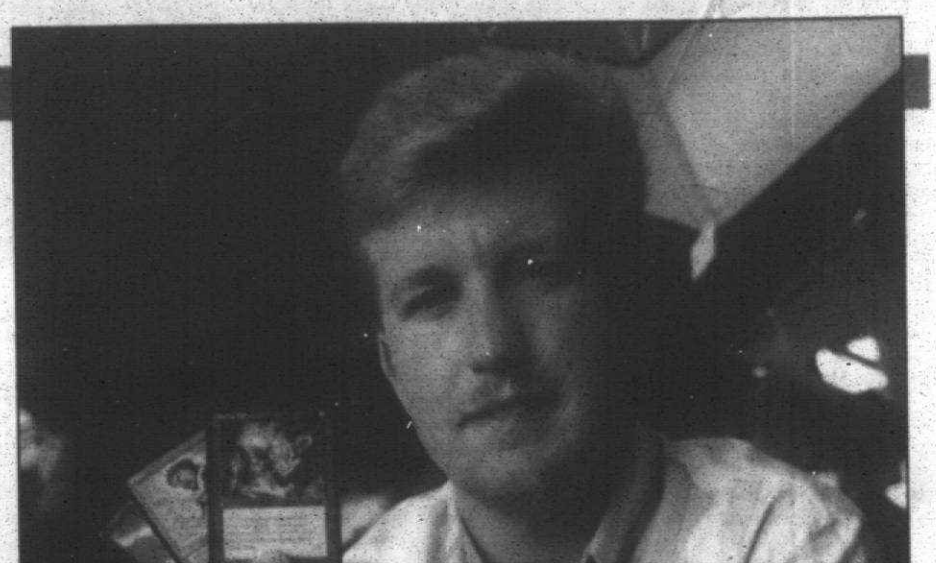

Role-playing games became popular with the inception of Dungeons and Dragons back in the late '70s. Players would assume roles of various characters and would make game moves based on how their character would respond in a situation. Vampire: The Masquerade is a role-playing game that has now taken gamers by storm.

There are many more of these games now being played, but they were introduced to the general public with various murder mystery games. Popular as party games, players perform as various suspects and the others try to solve the crime.

"The murder mystery games made role-playing more mainstream," said David Rapaport of Rider's Hobby Shop in Canton Township. "Before, they appealed to a fairly small group of people."

Card games take on new meaning with Star Trek: The Next Generation and Magic: The Gathering. Players collect cards - some with very ornate drawings - and then play using set rules in an attempt to collect even more cards.

Singles mingle at book stores, coffeehouses

Book stores, music shops and coffeehouses are becoming the singles bars of our time and standard pickup lines are being replaced by board games, role-playing games, puzzles and poetry readings.

Perhaps influenced by the popular television series "Friends" or the health-awareness movement, the trendiest young adults are seeking out "intellectually stimulating" conversation and new friends in these quieter surroundings and under safe circumstances.

Border's Books and Music in Novi attracts nearly 300 people for their monthly singles night and Monday has become a kind of informal singles night at the Plymouth Coffee Bean Company in downtown Plymouth.

"I don't really know how it happened, but it seems a lot of singles come in on Mondays," said Plymouth coffeehouse owner Pam Haase. "People are looking for an alternative way to meet people. There seems to be a move back to more traditional socializing."

Haase refers to socializing between old friends, as well as conversation between two people meeting for the first time.

Haase doesn't really designate certain nights for certain activities at the Coffee Bean Company, which will expand to Northville soon. She believes it distracts from the casual tone of the place and doesn't allow patrons to explore different uses for the place - reading, resting,

Specialty stores

Games for adults often are sold in stores that specialize in those games. Games such as chess, checkers and shogi can be found in stores that sell other adult accessories. Big-selling games such as Trivial Pursuit can be found in a local mass retailer for kids.

Still others may be bought in stores that specialize in low-volume games. Some of these stores in this area include:

- Classic Comics, 19047 Middlebelt Road, Livonia. 810-476-1254.
- Old Guard Hobbies, 27508 Ford Road, Garden City. 313-425-7470.

Quilt paintings please the senses

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Westland artist Saundra Weed creates quilt paintings that beg to be touched. More than a dozen of these sensuous works of art are on display through June 30 in the lobby of Livonia City Hall, Five Mile and Farmington Road.

In addition to her quilt paintings, Weed uses the medium of watercolor to show off her Oriental brushwork techniques learned from professor I-Hsiung Ju at Washington & Lee University in Lexington, Virginia.

Weed and Edythe Newbourne, who also studied Chinese brush painting with the professor, will teach a five day Oriental Brush Workshop Aug. 14-18 at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City. For information, call (313) 728-2535.

Weed is well-known in the area as an art teacher. Students rave about her oil and watercolor painting classes taught in the continuing education program at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Her "Marketing Your Arts and Crafts" seminars are equally as popular with students there, as well as at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

From the age of 17 art, in one form or another, has captured Weed's fancy. In high school the medium was silver in the form of jewelry. By the mid 1960s she was designing jewelry and clothes as "Saundreed Originals."

She began "Artistic Images," in Dearborn, to sew and design wedding gowns some 15 years ago.

"I like fabric. I like clothing the body. I like painting. I had a difficult time deciding which one to do and was looking for a way to combine them. That's when I found quilt painting," said Weed.

"Although I'm not a quilter I use their techniques. Surface design including painting, machining and beading of fabric can be turned into wall hangings and clothing. I like quilts, but not the stiffness the batting gives them. I wanted soft fabrics, soft embellishments. I use very little if any batting."

In many of the quilt paintings featured in this Livonia Arts Commission sponsored show Weed combines different fabrics, machine embroidery, and paint. "Oriental Enlightenment," three oriental-like landscapes sewn horizontally together features mountains, moons, and towering evergreens. Weed used a bleach

Slisinger knows people who have spent thousands of dollars on cards for the Magic game." A lot of the shops that used to deal in sports cards now sell these gaming cards too because they are so profitable," he said.

David Sparling of Novi takes advantage of a Monday night "Magic" fest at Border's Books and Music. He learned about the game on CompuServe and then his wife, a school teacher, started seeing kids play it at school.

"I started with a $15 investment, but people spend a lot of money on it," he said. "It's nice to have a place to come to meet other people who play game."

There are also many new board games on the market that make Monopoly really look like child's play. Allies and Axis by Milton Bradley is probably the most mainstream of the strategy board games enjoyed by gamers today, but even that is limited in scope.

"There are a lot of good games out there that you find through hobby shops and mail order catalogs," Slisinger said. "You can also learn about them on American On-Line and other computer services."

These games put players in the place of engineers and foreign diplomats and scientists matching wits in a game of global survival.

Also popular are miniature games in which elaborately painted figures are moved about in re-enactments of battles — real or imaginary.

"There are all kinds of rules set like you pieces can only fire so far, march so far and only act within the boundaries set," Slisinger said.

These games have inspired huge conventions where the miniatures, which range in size from 54 millimeters to 6 millimeters, are on display.

Games and pieces are available in all time periods, but some are easier to find than others, Slisinger said. World War II battles and the Civil War are among the most popular.

"I play with people in all walks of life," Slisinger said. "It's a great way to get involved in history and maybe change it in your game."

Gamers often spend hours pouring over books and magazines learning all they can about the time period to take the most advantage of their opponents.

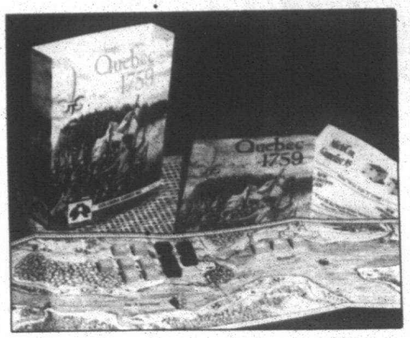

While these games are entertaining and challenging, they do have drawbacks. The boards can be huge and you have to have two people to play.

"The way things are these days, it's sometimes hard to get together for a game," Slisinger said. "That's why the computer counterparts of these war games are especially popular now."

Players can hook up to a computer service and play each other from two different places, or gamers can play a computer opponent.

Hobby shops are usually the best place to look for information on these strategy games. They aren't available in typical toy stores.

Finding just one avid gamer will put you in touch with a whole network of people who still enjoy a good game every now and then.

crossword puzzles and playing games.

"It becomes too planned, too predictable," she said. "It's more fun for the ambience to be created by the people in it."

These trendy "joints" aren't limited, of course, to the singles crowd.

Border's, just of I-96 on Novi Road, recently added a coffee shop which is usually packed with all kinds of people. They offer poetry readings, musical events and game nights to draw people in.

"We have some board games around that people play and we hope to organize a chess tournament," said Leslie Boughton, community relations director for the book store. "Monday nights are game night and we get a lot of people who play Magic: the Gathering here."

Haase also makes games and puzzles available for her customers as good icebreakers. She keeps old favorites on hand like Battleship, Backgammon, a deck of cards and checkers.

"They are kind of funky old games and people get a kick out of seeing them again," she said. "Jigsaw puzzles are a real favorite, though. It seems people can't help but join in when there's a puzzle to be done. They're irresistible, it seems."

Local resident Dennis Schrewbury and his son frequently come in for a game of chess and another father and son come in to read poetry together.

"It's like a real cultural awakening," Haase said.

In these times of fast-paced work schedules and family commitments, it seems more people are turning away from the noise and rowdiness of bars and are looking for something quieter. A cup of coffee or espresso, a snack, a comfortable chair and life seems a little easier.

"People are looking for a club, a place where everyone knows each other, but they'll leave you alone if that's what you want," Haase said. "Kind of a Cheers bar without the booze."

"Garden Trellis," another quilted painting, is the exact opposite of the landscape. Vibrant red colors this quilt square incorporating fabric flowers to give a three dimensional look. Both of the artworks were sewn on Weed's $3,500 computerized sewing machine.

"The new machines and equipment allows you to be the designer and manipulate the fabric. I try to use the edges (or borders) as a frame for the painting," said Weed, whose future plans include making fabric sculpture.

"I really would like to to give (well-known Redford Township sculptor) Sergio De Giusti credit for teaching me to draw and for influencing me to one day do sculpture out of fabric," she said.

Local quilt artist wins award at 'Celebrate Life' exhibit

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Observerland artists are busy winning awards, and exhibiting their work in shows from Plymouth to Bloomfield Hills. Two of them practice time-honored crafts.

Plymouth quilt artist Nancy Meyer won a Merit Award ($100) at the "Celebrate Life" exhibit continuing through June 25 at the Congregational Church of Birmingham in Bloomfield Hills. The show was jurored by Michael Farrell, associate professor in the School of Visual Arts at the University of Windsor.

"Greta Come Kiss Me" is a quilt focusing on Meyer's very eccentric great-grandmother and features umbrellas and lightning strikes in the design.

"It's a great multi-media show and for fiber art to win an award I think it's especially important. A lot of people don't consider fiber as art so it's important fiber got recognized," said Meyer.

She shouldn't be so surprised about fiber being a winner. Back in 1992 the self-taught fiber artist won Best of Show for a quilt at "Celebrate Life."

Meyer teaches quilting at Quilt Works, 580 Forest, Plymouth (313) 207-8708, and Quilter's Quarters, 118 Main Street, Chelsea (313) 475-5848.

In between lessons she is co-chairing the "Quilt University" which takes over the campus of Concordia College in Ypsilanti Aug. 4-6. The three days of quilting classes and workshops with national as well as local quilt experts is sponsored by the Greater Ann Arbor Quilt Guild. For more information send a self addressed stamped envelop with double postage to co-chair Cindry Zengros, 323 S. First Street, Brighton 48116.

Viewing hours for the "Celebrate Life" exhibit are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday- Saturday, and 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Close to Home

Livonia marbler Susan Argiroff has been busy creating jackets, scarves and coats for sale at The Art Gallery in Garden City, Donna Anderson Gallery in Pontiac, and Bezaires in Plymouth. In her spare time she passes on the ancient craft of marbling to students of the Visual Arts Association of Livonia.

Argiroff is one of more than 70 artists who will color Canton Township's Heritage Park June 24-25 as part of Liberty Fest '95, a fun-filled family festival. Hours for the juried show, sponsored in part by Canton Parks and Recreation, are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Heritage Park is at 1150 S. Canton Center Road behind the Canton Township Administration Building.

Once again this year, two tents will be filled with exhibitors, many of whom are from Observerland. They will be offering painting, clay, jewelry, photography, and garden art.

"Many of the artists are homegrown. It's a wonderful opportunity to purchase fine art in an outdoor environment," said show coproducer Sharon Dillenbeck. "Many of the artists will be demonstrating their particular mediums the entire time."

Several groups will be represented in the fine art show including Three Cities Art Club, Women of Artistry, and Dillenbeck's painting students from the Canton Senior Citizens Center and Plymouth Cultural Center.

Fun for the Kids

Mr. Sandman and the Sand Lady. Ronald and Debbie McKibban of Florida, will return to Liberty Fest this year to create sand art in jars to delight children of all ages.

Activities tailored especially for children include face painting by art students of Dillenbeck. Art Workshops, sponsored by Canton Parks and Recreation, will offer children the opportunity to make art and take it home. nearly 1,000 kids made art at last year's festival.

Building model cars charges his battery

By Linda Ann Chomin
Special Writer

In 1965, Henry Smith of Livonia saved up enough allowance to buy his first kit for building a model car — a 1965 Ford Mustang.

Smith's interest flagged, and model railroading replaced the 14-year-old's love for building model cars.

His passion for collecting model cars returned in 1991 when his son challenged him to build one. Smith built four. The rest is history.

Livonia Arts Commission is presenting an exhibit of Smith's hand-built model car collection through June 29 in the circular showcases on the second floor of the Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile Road.

From a 1934 Ford Coupe to a 1969 Firebird, Smith has built and collected hundreds of cars.

"I'd like to own a '57 or '55 Chevy but since I can't collect a real one I collect these," said Smith whose only regret is that he didn't start sooner.

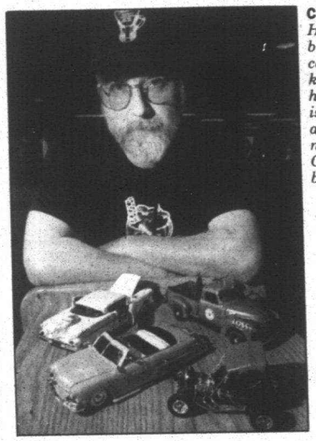

"If you had kept model cars from the 1960s, they go for $500 and up now," said Smith about the plastic models.

Forced into early retirement, from his job as a machinist due to a medical problem, it takes Smith a couple of weeks to build a single model car. Detail work, right down to wiring the exhaust system, installing the engine and making the wheels turn, takes a lot of time.

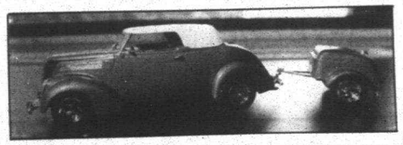

"Since 1994 I've attended a lot of classic car shows and formed a lot of ideas. I soon began kit bashing or going a bit radical," he said.

"Chopping tops down and customizing to the limit gave me a challenge. I get to customize them the way I want. On one car I combined a 1949 Mercury back end with a 1994 Firebird."

Exhibit hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday.

Jail will detain you in Crawfordsville

BY MARY QUINLEY
SPECIAL WRITER

The century-old red brick structure trimmed in limestone appears serene and stately. But looks are sometimes deceiving. Once inside the Crawfordsville, Indiana old Jail Museum, visitors get a sense of the horrors of incarceration. Tales are told of limbs getting caught in bars, food and water shortages and lack of proper fire escape routes.

The jail on Washington Street closed in 1973. Two years later it reopened as a museum boasting to be the only operational rotary jail house in the world.

Guided tours present a fascinating legacy of the hardships inmates endured in circular confinement. Cell blocks turned on a system of shafts and gears thus limiting prisoners to a single exit.

The Old Jail, just one of several area museums, draws curious souls to Crawfordsville. Located 40 miles west of Indianapolis, this laid-back Indiana town (population 13,500) sports a mix of city-life activities, outdoor recreation and strong country influences.

■ Author, inventor and statesman General Lew Wallace, designed what is now called the Ben Hur Museum. History buffs and "Ben Hur" movie fanatics will find a tour of this former residence of Wallace intriguing.

General Wallace, the author of "Ben Hur" and numerous other writings, lived in Crawfordsville. An extensive collection of memorabilia from the movie and it's star (Charlton Heston), Mexican and Civil War artifacts and 3-D postcards line the walls and shelves.

■ The Lane Place built by Indiana's first Republican Governor and Senator, Henry Lane, served as the village green for the young 1840s Crawfordsville community. This completely restored 1840s Greek Revival style mansion served as a popular meeting place for politicians. Tours are available.

■ Looking for mini-shopping adventures? Then browse the Main Street stores for a diverse selection of gifts, crafts and antiques. For the serious antique collector try Cabbages and Kings Antique Mallon Washington Street.

The historic commercial downtown district presents non- mall variety shopping ranging from affordable vintage clothing at The Marc Antiques to custom-made glassware at Marilyn's Stained Glass.

■ For the outdoor lover three of the four seasons provide canoeing challenges. Paddle your canoe under a 19th century covered bridge or hire a guide for a rafting trip during high waters. Area parks provide camping facilities where boating, swimming and fishing possibilities abound.

Or grab your golf clubs. Three golf courses within a 15 minute radius of downtown are open to the public.

Turkey Run State Park, 23 miles south of the city, offers relaxed lodging with an indoor swimming pool, miles of easy-to-very-rugged trails in scenic landscapes, special programs for kids and a nature center, Rooms fill up sometimes two years in advance, particularly during the Covered Bridge Festival in October and the summer months.

■ October 13-22: Crawfordsville boasts two covered bridges. Yet her neighbors 26 miles south in Rockville host the annual Parke County Covered Bridge Festival.

Homemade food ranging from navy bean soup to persimmon ice cream and elephant ears; hundreds of arts and crafts booths; and 32 covered bridges. Lodging reservations should be made well in advance.

■ November 11-12: Extension Homemakers Arts & Crafts Bazaar on the Montgomery County 4-H Fairgrounds, the bazaar (317) 364-6362 features more than 50 booths of handcrafted items. Food available.

'Mr. B.' to boogie at Frog Island

BY MARK E. GALLO
SPECIAL WRITER

Frog Island has become a highly respected festival date for some of the biggest names in the business over the years. This year's festival, June 23-25, is certainly no exception with Mark Braun, better known as "Mr. B" and the Bird of Paradise Orchestra, Los Lobos, Luther Allison, Dr. John, Arthur Blythe and the Staple Singers heading up the bill.

Mr. B sums up it up,: "It'll be a ball!"

When I first encountered the dazzling fingers of boogie and stride pianist extraordinaire "Mr. B," he was barely 20 years old.

I was a member of an archival organization in the midst of a videotaping/interview with the legendary Vernon Harrison, a.k.a. Boogie Woogie Red. While listening to the playing and story telling of the veteran pianist in the basement of Ann Arbor's fabled Blind Pig bar, young Mr. B, as he had already come to be known, sauntered in to much joking and obvious admiration from the elder pianist. When the two sat down to share the piano bench and keyboard it was obvious that they were each other's biggest fan.

When the young upstart took to the keys for a solo set, the room took on an electrical charge.

"That was a real regular occurance," Braun remembered during a recent telephone conversation.

"I started playing when I was around 16 or 17," he told me. "I moved down to Ann Arbor from Flint in '75 and I got to know Red around then. That was a big part of why I moved down here."

While other teens who came of age in the 1970s might have been consumed by the likes of Led Zepplin, Jimi Hendrix or Janis Joplin, young Mark Braun was inspired by the barrelhouse, boogie and Chicago-style blues piano work of men old enough to have been his father — if not his grandfather.

"Some people thought it was exotic," he says, "but it wasn't to me. That's what these guys were playing."

The "guys" in question were his heroes.

"I was on a quest to find all the great living blues piano players," he says of his unusual adolescent passion.

"I found many of them lived in Chicago: Little Brother Montgomery, Blind John Davis, Sunnyland Slim and a host of others — but those were the main three players, and I tried to learn what I could."

With the passing of Montgomery in 1985, Red a few years ago and Davis and Sunnyland Slim within the past year, the blues has seen the demise of a specific style of piano playing, as well, and few are as accutely aware of that transition as Mr. B.

"I don't want to say my interest in traditional playing died with them," he says, "but there aren't many left playing in that style. I don't find it natural to play in that style any longer. I've expanded my interests."

His first gig with Ann Arbor's Bird of Paradise Orchestra, named after the club of the same name, was at last year's Montreux-Detroit International Jazz Festival. Since then, he says, they have put in "hundreds and hundreds of hours" on the new collaboration, adding that "writing arrangements for a big band is hard work."

There have been a handful of performances around the state, and they're scheduled to release a CD on the Schoolkids label any minute now, but this doesn't consume all his time.

"Oh God no!," he says. "I work with the orchestra as much as I can, but I'm also working on a solo piano record, a record with a drummer and a three-horn band."

As regards Frog Island, Mr. B says "I'm sure I've worked there as much as anybody — probably five or six times. I didn't do it last year, so I'm really looking forward to this year."

He'll do it minus an important band member, bassist Paul Keller, who co-leads the band with drummer Pete Siers, is out touring with a vocalist and will be replaced for this gig by Curt Krahnke. When not running the Bird of Paradise Orchestra, Keller and Siers can be found in the rhythm section of jazz guitarist and CBS recording artist Russell Malone, and Mr. B enthuses that the orchestra is "full of really good players."

Event 'spotlights' historic theaters

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

The success of the alternative rock band Sponge has directed the musical spotlight toward the Detroit area. Rolling Stone magazine recently wrote a short story listing the band's favorite hot spots around town. In an interview with MTV, they talked about the local music scene.

But there's a lot more to Detroit than intimate clubs, arena shows, the Grand Prix, International Freedom Festival, and sports. The Grand Circus Development Association is out to show area residents that the city offers a variety of family-oriented cultural entertainment as well.

From 4-9:30 p.m. Monday, June 26, the association is offering the "Spotlight Festival," a street party celebrating established entertainment venues, those preparing to open their doors to the public, and buildings that are past their prime. This year marks the organization's largest event which has been expanded to provide entertainment and food at many of the tour stops.

Tickets — $15 for individuals and $7.50 for students and children — are available in advance at the Fox Theatre box office, 2211 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Tickets will cost $17 the day of the tour and will be offered under the tent at Grand Circus Park. For more information, call (313) 341-6813.

"The principal major difference is that there will be more entertainment — entertainment on the street by the Graystone Jazz Band. There will be Rollerbladers and unicyclists riding the streets. It's creating this atmosphere of activity on the street," said Allen Dickinson, the event's co-chairman.

Entertainment for the evening also includes a live animal show, magicians at the Fox Theatre, line dancing and unicyclists in Harmonie Park, the sounds of Eli Fountaine in Harmonie Park, and dancing on the Music Hall stage to the music of David Myles and the Mylestones. After the tour, DeMaris said, the Music Hall until November for renovations.

The Gem Theatre is hosting the Mosaic Youth Theatre of Detroit while the alternative arts venue 1515 Broadway will provide entertainment by the Tree House players, Detroit Film Makers Coalition, and performance artist Satori Circus.

Batman' does justice to comic series

JOHN MONAGHAN

TICKETS PLEASE

Holy blockbuster!!! "Batman Forever," the third in what could be an endless franchise of movies about the caped crusader, isn't that bad. It has so much eyepopping color, action, and special effects that "cool" seems the only word to aptly describe it.

Sure it's overblown, overhyped, and director Joel Schumacher relies much too heavily on MTV-style editing. It nevertheless holds its own with Tim Burton's first two entries, which had major problems of their own.

Just when I was getting used to Michael Keaton in the lead, he backed out, saying the movies' bad guys were upstaging his performance. He's got a point, especially when box office phenom Jim Carrey dons the skin-tight, question mark-covered costume of The Riddler.

A scientist at Wayne Industries, Carrey's Edward Nygma idolizes billionaire Bruce Wayne and wants to make him a partner in a venture that uses TV signals to alter brainwaves. When Wayne warns him about messing with people's minds, Nygma becomes arch villain The Riddler.

His invention, which looks like a Dadaist blender, sends waves of green energy into homes, draining people's brains while making The Riddler even smarter. His riddles to Batman, perverse twists on kids' pop-up books, get more and more cryptic as the film goes on.

As in "The Mask," Carrey's own talents with physical comedy and facial contortions are accentuated by the movie's special effects, especially when he undergoes the mind blasts. He not only upstages Batman, but also partner-in-crime Two-Face, an admirable attempt by Tommy Lee-Jones.

Val Kilmer, meanwhile, offers a very restrained Bruce Wayne. In costume, it hardly matters, but when he's a regular guy, he needs an extra something — Keaton's expressive eyebrows perhaps — to keep us interested in between action scenes.

Back in the Batcave, Bruce Wayne undergoes some heavy therapy with a curvaceous criminal psychologist (Nicole Kidman) who has made it her mission to disrobe Batman both physically and mentally. This becomes a double threat for Bruce Wayne, who has fallen in love with her while outside the costume.

Most interesting in "Batman Forever" is the introduction of Robin. Played with a surprising edge by nice guy Chris O'Donnell, the former aerial acrobat watches his family die at the hands of Two-Face. He swears vengeance, just as Wayne did long ago when the Joker gunned down his parents.

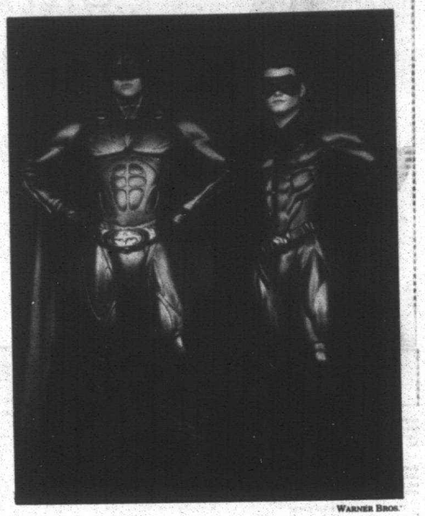

Director Tim Burton, who serves as producer here, has left his mark on the series. His intriguing blend of ultra-modern/retro images and dark moody lighting remain in many scenes, especially when the sleek Batmobile is chased by sedans usually driven by Prohibition-era gangsters.

In "Batman Forever" director Schumacher adds wild cartoon colors to the movie's palette, best displayed in a neon-bright black-light fight with Robin and skeleton-masked thugs. When he resurrects those tilted camera shots from the '60s television show, I know it's just a matter of time (Batman 12?) when those "POWS" and "THWACKS" will make a comeback.

Schumacher, who directed the fascinating "Falling Down," also makes some mistakes. He feels that if he slows down for a second he'll lose his audience. When he needs three shots to show an action (Robin sliding into a slowly closing Batcave door, for instance) he gives us about six shots too many.

By the end of the movie, characterization takes a backseat to gadgets as the Dynamic Duo unveils a Batboat, a Batplane, and some awesome new black rubber costumes. The only thing not "cool" about this mega-blockbuster and cultural phenomenon is the idea that we'll all be walking around in black rubber by summer's end.

Send or fax entries by Friday, June 30 to: Keely Wygonik, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Inc., 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150. To fax entries: call (313) 591-7279. Call (313) 953-2105 for more information.

"The Postman (IL Postino)" is a funny and moving story about a postman whose eyes are opened to a world of new possibilities when he finds himself delivering letters to one of the most romantic poets of the 20th century. The film was inspired by incident in the life of renowned Chilean poet and diplomat, Pablo Neruda played by Philippe Noiret, who was forced into exile from his native country in 1952 and granted sanctuary on a remote, beautiful island off the coast of Naples.

The local postmaster, overwhelmed by the daily mail being sent to Neruda, even prior to his arrival, hires Mario Ruoppolo (Massimo Troisi), the son of a local fisherman desperate for an escape from his father's fishing boat. The young postman's first instinct is to take advantage of his close contact with Neruda, celebrated poet of love, to improve his own profile in the community, especially with women.

All that changes as Mario slowly gains the poet's confidence. A friendship develops as Neruda introduces Mario to the world of poetry. Almost as a consequence, Mario falls in love with the beautiful, but unapproachable Beatrice Russo (Maria Grazia Cucinotta). In enlisting Neruda's help, Mario discovers a sense of himself he's never had as his inner soul blossoms. He learns that a way with words can be a marvelous way to a woman's heart.

"The Postman (IL Postino)," a Miramax Films release, is rated PG.

"The Underneath" (USA - 1995). This new psychological thriller reunites "sex, lies, and videotape" director Stephen Soderbergh and actor Peter Gallagher. When a man returns home to Austin, Texas, he realizes that things have changed and he doesn't know who to trust.

Batman Forever soundtrack — various artists

You don't have to get any further than the CD case to realize that the "Batman Forever" soundtrack (Atlantic) is a step ahead of other blockbuster movie soundtracks recently released.

Some of modern rock's top names — U2, PJ Harvey, Mazzy Star, The Offspring, Nick Cave, INXS's Michael Hutchence, and The Flaming Lips — and R&B/rap acts Brandy and Method Man have contributed previously unreleased tracks to the album which will surely make this a hit.

The first single, U2's "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me, Kill Me" kicks off the album with its Page/Plant Unplugged sounding strings and heart-racingly dramatic guitars. Lenny Kravitz lends a hand to the "Batman Forever" soundtrack by penning the funky Brandy song "Where Are You Know." Sullen mope-crooners Mazzy Star bring their trademark moodiness with the luscious "Tell Me Now." The incredibly talented "Beverly Hills 90210" veterans The Flaming Lips offer to "Batman Forever," "Bad Days," a twisted, psychedelic carnival-like song.

The major acts will no doubt draw listeners to the CD in turn raising the awareness of lesser-known acts like Eddi Reader, Massive Attack, and The Devlins, all of whom deserve every ounce recognition they get.

The soundtrack only falls flat once. The monotone "The Riddler" by Method Man is too blase to accompany Jim Carrey's flamboyant portrayal of the character.

Dreams Can Be Your Friend — Carolyn Striho and the Detroit Energy Asylum

"Energy" is an appropriate term to describe "Dreams Can Be Your Friend" (Mysteriho Music), the latest album by Carolyn Striho and the Detroit Energy Asylum. Backed on record by a furious musical assault by some of Detroit's top musicians: Sponge singer Vinnie Dombrowski on drums, trumpeter Rayse Biggs, guitarist Wayne Gerard, Hoarse's Joey Mazzola on slide guitar, Romantics drummer Jimmy Marinos, and guitarist Bobby East, it's hard to go wrong.

The pop/rock-flavored "I'll Chase My Nightmares" would be the hit apparent if area radio stations started playing more local bands. The pedal-to-the-metal "Terrible Twos" adequately captures her mosh-friendly sound. The short blasts of aggro-guitar on "Tainted Love" turns the whiny retro hit into a ticked-off ode to a former love. Her cover of Brian Wilson's "I Just Wasn't Made For These Times," recorded in memory of the MC5's Fred "Sonic" Smith, closes the album.

Carolyn Striho with special guest Patti Smith perform with a host of others at the "89X Birthday Bash" at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 24, at the Phoenix Plaza Amphitheatre, 10 Water St., Pontiac. The show is free and open to all ages. For more information, call (810) 335-4850. Mysteriho Music can be reached at P.O. Box 441915, Detroit, MI 48224-1915.

Mighty Morphin Power Rangers: The Movie soundtrack — various artists

Recycled old go-get'em, sports bar songs like Van Halen's "Dreams," the Red Hot Chili Peppers' "Higher Ground," and "The Power" by Snap bring down the soundtrack to the big-screen version of children's television show "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers." Even Devo can't save the soundtrack with "Are You Ready?!" the band's poor attempt to delve into the techno market. They Mighty Be Giants' "SenSurround" is a toe-tapper, but it's uncomfortable to listen to sandwiched between Van Halen and a song called "Ayeyayiyai (Alpha Song)" by Power Jet.

The only flickering light on the album is Shampoo's "Trouble," but it's hard to get past the fact that it sounds so much like the B-52's "Love Shack." You've probably heard this song on the radio but thought the lyrics were elementary ("Uh, ho, we're in trouble. Something's come along and it's burst our bubble. Uh, ho, we're in trouble. Gotta get home quick march on the double"), but it's somehow easier to swallow once you find out it's on the "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" soundtrack.

Guns 'N Roses fans might be interested, however, to know that drummer Matt Sorum performs "Go Go Power Rangers" with The Power Rangers Orchestra.

If you're really in the mood to hear songs like "The Power" for the bazillionith time, go to a sports bar instead of buying this soundtrack. Then you can at least people watch and get a good laugh.

Nitzer Ebb rides wave of change

STAFF WRITER

The industrial band Nitzer Ebb has gone through a wave of changes since the 1991 release of "Ebbhead." The once sample-happy duo of Douglas McCarthy and Bon Harris picked up a guitar and bass, respectively, while adding stickman Jason Payne.

McCarthy quit drinking 2½ years ago, and last week he celebrated the first anniversary of his marriage to a Grosse Pointe model. All that's fine and good, but most importantly, he's caught Red Wing fever.

"I've been watching ESPN (and) glued totally to the television. I can't believe it," said McCarthy via telephone from the Grosse Pointe home he shares with his wife, Carrie. They're expecting their first child Aug. 17 and plan to move to New York soon thereafter.

McCarthy and the rest of Nitzer Ebb — with the addition of former Ethyl Meatplow guitarist John Napier — return to his new hometown area Friday, June 23, to play St. Andrew's Hall as part of their tour in support of their latest album "Big Hit" (DGC/Mute). The St. Andrew's Hall show is sure to jog the McCarthys' memories. The couple met there after Nitzer Ebb played there a handful of years ago.

"Big Hit" is a departure from their previous works "That Total Age" (1987), "Belief" (1988), "Showtime" (1990), and "Ebbhead." The stomp-heavy samples in songs like "Getting Closer" and "Control" have been squashed into distorted guitars and keyboards. Prior to the recording of "Big Hit," McCarthy didn't know how to play a guitar but he picked it up quickly.

"Literally in an afternoon, I could make a song and I'm not gifted by any stretch of the imagination," he said with a laugh.

McCarthy's trademark forceful vocals have been massaged into singing and even spoken word in the song "Border Talk." Fans of earlier Nitzer Ebb will be happy to hear that the old-time electro-rage prevails on the first single "Kick It."

Lyrically, Harris and McCarthy brought their personal emotions to the forefront, scraping off the candy coating that surrounded songs in the past.

"In the past, I did actually always put in personal things but it was more coated, and less apparent to the people who didn't know me. One of the plots we've always had was to talk about a third party, but in reality they're things that I've been doing."

For example, the dour song "Boy" is about the pain he felt at being separated from his son after ending a long-term relationship. "Oh my boy I love you so, so, so. Oh my boy I had to go, go, go," McCarthy sings. "Hear Me Say" describes the fears of letting a loved one go. "Cigarette smoke's hanging onto my tears/ clouding up my mind like all its fears/I'm leaving you/you want me to/ but how/I got no shame/so call my name/call now/just hear me say/yeah, hear me say/don't turn away."

"In Decline" was triggered by a visit Nitzer Ebb made to Russia, two years ago.

"I remember seeing this old man, about 80 years old, sweeping the streets of St. Petersburg in full military uniform. It was so sad and pathetic, and yet it's no different from the West where we have to wear this uniform of pretending to be an adult, just to keep people in their place," McCarthy said.

Despite the multitude of personal, musical and lyrical changes, Nitzer Ebb feels it's important to delve into their back catalogue for live shows. To deny their past, McCarthy said, would be ridiculous. Plus, they still like their old material.

"We enjoy that as much as anybody else."

Nitzer Ebb and Earth Eighteen perform Friday, June 23, St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Doors open at 6 p.m. for the 18 and older show. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT or (810) 645-6666.

Aussie band Silverchair wins quick success

STAFF WRITER

The past year has been a Cinderella story for Aussie teen grunge rockers Silverchair. Last June, the trio entered this "really boring" song called "Tomorrow" in a national demo competition for a chance to win a day in a recording studio.

Silverchair won the contest beating out 800 other entrants, much to the surprise of lead singer/guitarist Daniel Johns.

"It was the worst tape," he said barely awake via telephone from his Australia home. "It was so bad. (It was) just all out of tune. It's a six-minute version of the song and it gets really boring."

Silverchair — which rounds out its line-up with bassist Chris Joannou and drummer Ben Gillies — used its studio time at Australia's national alternative radio station 2JJJ-FM to record "Tomorrow." The song was added to 2JJJ's playlist and by December the song was No. 1 in the country.

Along with studio time, Silverchair's prize included months of hype, a record deal and a double-platinum album "Frogstomp." (In Australia a band reaches platinum status after selling 70,000 copies, according to Billboard magazine, as opposed to 1 million in the United States.)

"It's been pretty good for us here. We only expected to sell 1,000 copies," Johns said.

The kudos don't stop there. Silverchair swept Australia Rolling Stone's annual readers poll winning the "Artist of the Year" besting long-established acts like Nick Cave and Crowded House, "Best Single" for "Tomorrow," "Best Hard Rock Band," "Hype of the Year," and "Brightest Hope for 1995" prizes. In addition, Johns won "Best Male Singer," and was nominated for "Best Songwriter," and "Best Guitarist." Joannou was up for "Best Bass Player," and Gillies for "Best Drummer" topping Rob Hirst of Midnight Oil, and Jon Farrias of INXS.

Members of the highly acclaimed band — which averages 16 years of age — don't seem themselves as rock stars, however.

"We're not rock stars. We've got an album out and it's goin' all right. Everything's just normal but we travel more," he said.

"Frogstomp" took off in Australia, now Silverchair prepares to battle the U.S. charts. "Frogstomp" hit the stores on Tuesday and the band made its North American live debut the following day at the Roxy Theater in Atlanta. Silverchair comes to the Phoenix Plaza Amphitheatre in Pontiac on Saturday to perform as part of the "89X Birthday Bash."

"Frogstomp" takes a few lessons from the Seattle grunge scene, much like English rockers Bush. Johns doesn't mind most of the comparisons to the American Northwest, but the Nirvana comparisons he said are unfounded.

"None of us really liked Nirvana. We get compared to them a lot. None of us have any of their albums or anything. The main influence was probably Helmet and Soundgarden," he said.

One thing he can't deny is his striking physical resemblance to Nirvana's deceased lead singer Kurt Cobain. During a tour stop in Sydney, Australia, Courtney Love even acknowledged that Johns looks eerily like her ex-husband but later lamented, "he sounds like Eddie (Vedder). And that's not so great."

Lyrically, Johns and Gillies co-write songs like teams twice their age. In "Suicidal Dream" Johns sings, "I dream about how it's gonna end/approaching me quickly/Leaving a life of fear/I only want my mind to be clear/The people making fun of me/for no reason but jealousy/I fantasize about my death/ I kill myself from holding my breath."

"Pure Massacre" touches on social ills: "Families been torn apart/ don't have to be this way/some people just have no heart/it's happenin' every day."

Musically, they have crafted a collection of songs that runs the gamut from full-on thrash ("Madman") to brooding, introspective ballads ("Shade," "Suicidal Dream") to metallic grunge grooves ("Undecided" and "Leave Me Out").

Silverchair began as a band that wrote songs as a way to kill time. Their hobby seems to have paid off and, Johns said, his family is thrilled.

"They're pretty happy about it. They know that we've started a career or something. We're not too smart at school so they're pretty happy that we've done something."

Silverchair performs along with Catherine Wheel, Carolyn Striho and Patti Smith, Hum, Hardship Post, and Rusty on the main stage; Love Battery, Big Block, Paul K. and the Weathermen, and Suicide Machines on the second stage, as part of the "89X Birthday Bash" at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 24, at the Phoenix Plaza Amphitheatre, 10 Water St., Pontiac. The show is free and open to all ages. For more information, call (810) 335-4850.

Hawthorne Gardens rates an ace

By Ralph Echtinaw
Staff Writer

George Mourtos, owner of Hawthorne Gardens, prides himself on offering a variety of upscale dishes for lunch and dinner at reasonable prices.

If you've never heard of the Westland eatery, that may be because it is part of Mourtos' other business, the Hawthorne Valley Country Club public golf course. The nine-hole course and restaurant are on the east side of Merriman just north of Warren Road.

Hawthorne Gardens was recently renovated and redecorated "both inside and out from landscaping to wallpapers inside to carpets" at a cost of $150,000, Mourtos said.

The main dining area seats 250 individuals and sports a green carpet with square tables and white tableclothes topped with sheets of glass and imitation flowers. The rattan chairs are nicely cushioned and roomy. Booths circumnavigate the perimeter of the room.

Mourtos characterized the restaurant as a "down to earth kind of a place (where) you don't have to spend an arm and a leg. We're not a classy place where you've got to have a suit and tie to come in."

Four banquet rooms seat 60, 120, 250 and 320, respectively. The Aspen Room, Mourtos said, is in heavy demand for wedding receptions and other affairs.

There is also a patio with four tables. Inside is a full-service bar.

Redford Township resident Bob Ault said he has been eating at Hawthorne Gardens since 1979.

"My wife died 16 years ago and I've been coming here ever since," he said. "It's the best food. I eat everything they have. You can't beat their liver and onions."

Across the spacious dining room, Dearborn Heights residents Betty and Joe Mitchell consumed their meal. The Mitchells have been eating at Hawthorne Gardens for 10 years. Betty likes the new decor. "It's light and airy now," she said. "It's a big improvement."

Said Joe: "We can sit down and we have lots of room around us. It's a nice place to come. It's nice and quiet." The chicken kabob, he said, "is always done, but juicy, not cooked to death. It's just a good meal."

People who haven't eaten at Hawthorne Gardens since last year will notice a new menu when they return.

Mourtos emphasizes his prime rib for two ($18.95), but offers a little bit of everything else, too. Lunch fare includes hamburgers, reubens, clubs, BLTs and so on. For dinner there are two veal dishes, five chicken selections, seven ways to eat beef, plus a solid selection of fish, Mexican food, Italian food and ribs.

Prices range from $2.95 for a BLT to $11.95 for an eight-ounce filet mignon.

The restaurant opens at 11 a.m. Monday though Friday, noon on Saturday and Sunday. Closing time is 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 9 p.m. Sunday.

Mourtos came to this country from Greece when he was 14 years old in 1955. His father was in the restaurant business, so it was a natural step for the son. He began as a cook and eventually co-owned two restaurants: Better Made in Detroit (gone now) and Acropole in Roseville, which still exists.

Mourtos bought the golf course and restaurant about 10 years ago and runs it with his son Frank.

Mourtos tries to maintain a steady staff, he said, because "the turnover is not healthy. It sends out bad vibes. Every time you change an employee it's costly."

Regarding customers, Mourtos' philosophy is clear. "Along with food, we're in the people business," he said. If a customer is dissatisfied, Mourtos will find out why and correct the problem.

"If we get them once, we spoil them and they come back," he said.

Competition in the restaurant business is keen, Mourtos said, and getting keener as deep-pocket corporations spread chain eateries across the landscape.

However, like the old rental car commercial, Mourtos said he tries harder.

"The only thing you've got is your strong arms to do it," he said. "We might not be as well educated as the top notch guys, but we have the aggressiveness, the hunger that it takes to go out and kick butt."

Ice arena support sought

Support groups are starting to form in an effort to build an ice arena in Canton.

The Citizens of Canton is one such group. Plymouth/Canton residents interested in supplying information or feasibility studies for the board to review are currently being sought.

Initial studies indicate a two-ice facility would cost more than $5 million, which means voter support and tax dollars would be required. In order to gain needed support, the Canton Hockey Commission is forming as a subgroup to the Recreation Advisory Committee and is seeking volunteers who may be willing to aid in the planning process.

Anyone interested in bringing a multi-ice facility to Canton may send their name, address and telephone number to: Canton Hockey Commission, PO Box 87914, Canton, MI. 48187-0914.

Soccer standouts

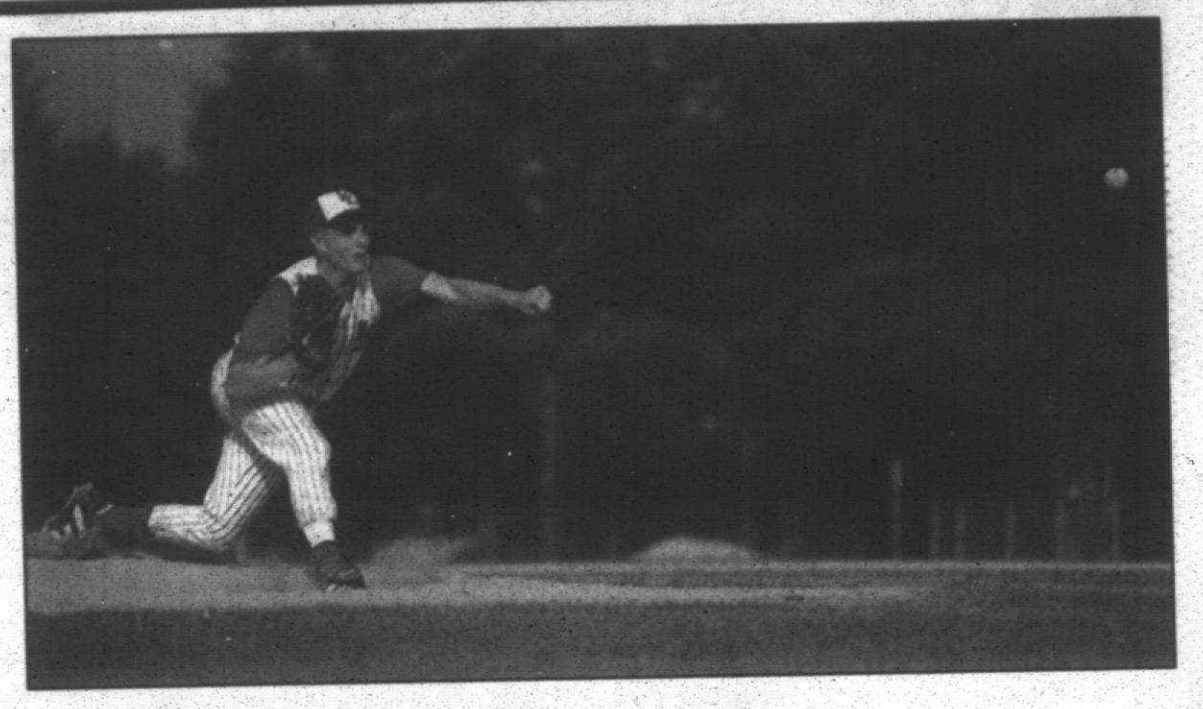

The Plymouth Panthers, an under-9 boys soccer team, collected a second Division I title when they finished tied for first in the spring season with a 7-1 record. The Panthers won their last six matches to gain the co-championship.

The Panthers are coached by Don Warner and Bob Adsit.

The Canton All-Stars, an under-10 girls soccer team, made their first season of operation a memorable one by winning the Great Lakes Soccer League Erie Division title. The All-Stars surrendered just one goal in their last six games and six for the season.

Hines Park scorches Caesars

Little Caesars fell further behind Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League standings with Monday's loss at Ford Field.

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer

Little Caesars' left-hander Dave Susalla played first base and outfield during a Livonia Collegiate Baseball League doubleheader Sunday against Decision Consultants Inc.

Hines Park Lincoln Mercury pitcher Craig Benedict, meanwhile, enjoyed the afternoon off as his team had a bye in the schedule.

Guess who was able to last longer in the 95 degree heat Monday night at Ford Field?

A well-rested Benedict (Plymouth Canton/Madonna University) pitched a complete-game five hitter, leading Hines Park to a 7-2 victory over Caesars.

Susalla (Redford Catholic Central/University of Detroit) had a 2-1 lead through four innings, but tired in the fifth when Hines Park rallied for six runs to go ahead for good.

The win improved second-place Hines Park to 6-3 overall. Caesars fell to 3-8.

"It wasn't hard staying loose, but towards the end I got a bit more tired," said Benedict, who had a no-hitter through 3⅔ innings.

Benedict scattered six hits, struck out three and didn't walk a batter. Four of the six hits went for extra bases, including a solo home run by Kevin Foley. The other Caesars' run came on a single by Dennis Madden to score J.R. Taylor, who had doubled.

"That's why I tell them to run early in the season, because these 95 degree temperatures will knock you out," Hines Park coach Dave Carroll said. "The first four innings, Craig was in control. He battled.

"They were up 1-0, we give up two, and then come back and take the game right out of their hands. That's a killer, that's what you're supposed to do if you're going to win ball games."

Hines Park took a 1-0 lead in the third after loading the bases with one out on a walk to Brian Kalczynski (Birmingham Brother Rice/Henry Ford College), a Texas League single by Jeff Lance (Redford Thurston/Henry Ford) and a walk to Danny Wise. Kalczynski scored on a ground ball that was booted by Caesars' first baseman J.R. Taylor.

Caesars regained the lead, 2-1, before trouble started for Susalla with one out in the fifth.

Susalla issued consecutive walks to Dan Wise and Derek Besco (Westland John Glenn/University of Michigan) and the next hitter, Brian Besco (John Glenn/U-M), was safe on a catcher's interference to load the bases. Dino Rovinelli followed with a sacrfice fly to tie the score, 2-2, and E.J. Howell sent Susalla to the bench with a two-run single to put Hines Park ahead 4-2.

Still 'Crazy'

At 42, hoop wizard remains hit with kids

By Brad Emons
Staff Writer

Crazy George Schauer is still a kid at heart.

"I'm 42 going on 12," said the basketball wizard, who paid his annual visit to Bernie Holowicki's All-Star Basketball Camp at St. Robert Bellarmine School Monday in Redford.

Ever since the ball-handling expert left the University of Minnesota, Schauer has trekked all around the country, and for that matter, the world, doing shows the past 21 years.

During the past school year he visited 312 schools.

Based in Willoughby, Ohio, just outside Cleveland, Schauer made a special trip from Harrisburg, Pa., in his jam-packed Dodge Caravan, to work Holowicki's camp. It was the first of 93 camps he'll do this summer.

Schauer has a special relationship with Holowicki, the former Catholic Central High coach, who is now in charge of Madonna University men's basketball program.

"I first met Bernie Holowicki at Howard Garfinkel's 5-Star Basketball Camp (in Pennsylvania) . . . 1974," Schauer recalls. "I remember he had guys like Rob Gonzalez and Alan Mitchell. Bernie's just unbelievable with kids."

And so is Schauer, who is half entertainer, one-quarter teacher of fundamentals, and one-quarter personal motivator.

It was well in excess of 90 degrees Monday afternoon inside the cramped St. Robert gymnasium, but Schauer had the 100-plus youngsters mesmerized.

Audience participation — volunteers who show hustle — are essential to his act.

He'll spin or dribble a ball, in one form or another, with just about any kind of prop. He can brush your teeth, fire off sparklers and play Spartacus.

"Many are called, but few are chosen," Schauer barks out on his own P.A. system. "Come on, let's show some spirit."

He can spin four balls at once on miniature NBA life-like dolls ("I make them out of Kens," he says); play a menacing Toronto Raptor, or sling a bow and arrow while honoring Native American Indians. He'll whip out his Ghostbusters' cassette as 20 kids dribble round the gym trying to pop balloons on the floor.

"The only routine I couldn't do today was shaving the girls' leg spinning the ball," he said. "There weren't any girls here today."

Schauer also gives away plenty of prizes such as Penny Hardaway T-shirts or Clyde Drexler wristbands.

But Schauer also has a message to go along with his routine — stay away from drugs and alcohol, study hard, get good grades, and enjoy the game.

"Learn from the experts," Crazy George exhorts his campers. "Basketball is fun. The better you get, the more fun you have.

"And don't forget to thank your parents tonight for sending you to

Isle Royale provides natural setting

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

The crackle of tiny feet moving swiftly over dry leaves and grass gave my wandering attention to focal point. Perched for bet ter than an hour on a fallen Tamarack overlooking a fox den, patience was finally paying off.

A flash of orange and the tip of a bushy tail crossed my peripheral vision, then a vixen was suddenly upon me. But I was more startled then she.

Undaunted by my presence, she proceeded to the den-mouth and offered a subtle feeding purr. In an instant, the opening was alive with bouncy young cubs — six in all — fighting for a nipple to suckle.

Heart pounding ... pulse racing ... a broad smile crossed my face as my parental instincts intervened.

Having hiked or hunted hundreds of miles of Michigan's prized forests and woodlands, never once had I witnessed such a heartwarming display in nature.

The mother fox was in the process of relocating her cubs to a new den, a defensive ploy she will carry out two or three times before the cubs are old enough to fend for themselves. After a few minutes of nursing, she grabbed one of the cubs by the fur on the back of its neck and trotted off to the new den. The vixen returned every couple of hours and repeated the process until the entire litter had been moved.

The cubs remained outside for a few minutes following their mother's departure, frolicking and exploring the immediate surroundings of their new world beneath the golden warmth of the mid-morning sunshine. Then, one by one, they retreated to the safety of the den.

This was Isle Royale National Park at its finest.

A crown jewel

The state's only national park and certainly the jewel of Michigan's crown, Isle Royale is 551,000 acres, including water, of unspoiled pristine wilderness. There are no roads on the island, but hikers and backpackers can explore over 164 miles of foot trails.

Located 56 miles off the northern tip of the Keewenaw Peninsula in the northwest corner of Lake Superior, Isle Royale is accessible by boat or sea plane only. The island is roughly 50 miles long and nine miles wide. Travel on and around the island is by foot or boat with camping, hiking, backpacking, canoeing, kayaking, fishing and sightseeing adventures at a premium.

Leaving the fox den behind, I trudged anxiously along the narrow trail winding through a birch and fir forest above the rugged, grey bedrock cliffs on the north side of the island.

Twenty minutes down the path and the faint sound of crunching leaves once again stirred my attention.

Another fox? A beaver? A wolf? A moose?

The uncertainty didn't last long.

A cow moose and her calf emerged from the nearby underbrush. Browsing on grasses and budding fir trees the duo approached with minimal caution, glancing my way only when they raised their heads to chew the entree.

With camera clicking, I studied their movements from close range. Not until they wandered to within 15 yards did I decide they were a little too close for my comfort and high-tailed it back to the trail.

A wilderness paradise

If backpacking or canoeing is your forte, you'll be right at home on Isle Royale. Group and individual campsites are scattered throughout the island on a first-come, first-served basis. The backcountry area of the island is rough and rugged. Hikers and backpackers should be well prepared for rough terrain and inclement weather.

If you prefer the more pampering accommodations National Park Concessions Inc. offer rooms at Rock Harbor Lodge as well as housekeeping cabins, a restaurant, a marina and a store. Park rangers conduct nature hikes and slide shows as well as guided sightseeing boat trips. Many of the trails are self-guiding with nature interpretive signs posted along the way. Fishing charters head out into Lake Superior daily in persuit of some of the lake trout that provide a world-class fishery around the island. Canoes, boats and motors are also available for rent at the marina.

Isle Royale is home to moose, wolves, fox, beaver and other wildlife as well as swarms of mosquitoes and black flies — so be prepared. The numerous inland lakes and bays produce northern pike, walleye, perch, rainbow and brook trout as well as many other species of fish.

From the deep dark crashing waters of Lake Superior and the tranquil trills from lovelorn loons to the lush lichens-covered conifers blanketing the top of Greenstone Ridge and the majestic moose feeding regularly along the shore of the inland lakes, Michigan's lone National Park is truly a wilderness paradise.

Anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham MI 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at 901-2573.

Caesars reliever Jason Carter (Livonia Churchill/Madonna) allowed a walk and RBI singles by Kalczynski and Lance before striking out Wise to end the inning.

"I played two games yesterday and got burned up," said Susala, who allowed four hits and walked five with one strikeout in 4⅔ innings. "I got tired and walked five, that's why I lost. They didn't really hit me hard, until the last hit."

With two pitchers recently quitting and three starters absent for a variety of reasons, Caesars' coach John Moraitis didn't have much left on the bench.

The recent acquisition of Scott Kapla, who asked for a release from Hines Park, couldn't have come at a better time. Kapla (Redford Catholic Central/Eastern Michigan) can pitch and on Monday played shortstop. He went 1-for-3 at the plate.

"If you want to play, show up," said Moraitis. "We held down some good hitters today. I don't get mad (about the absences), what are you going to do? They've got a powerhouse."

Lance and ninth hitter Dave Kapla (Redford CC/Michigan State) led Hines Park with two hits each. Kalczynski was 1-3 and scored twice.

Several of Benedict's teammates at Madonna play for DCI.

"I think we've got a good chance, we're confident we can play with those guys," Benedict said.

Jumpin' ship

Kapla leaves Hines Park for Caesars

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Scott Kapla doesn't have anything against his former teammates at Hines Park Lincoln Mercury.

After all, his brother, Dave Kapla, is still a member of Hines Park.

It's just that Scott, who recently finished his junior year at Eastern Michigan University, was seeking more playing time as an infielder than he was getting with the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League club based out of Plymouth/Canton.

So Kapla asked for a release last week from Hines Park coach Dave Carroll and received one, making him free for any other LCBL team. Kapla was picked up by Little Caesars, which promised him increased playing time as an infielder.

In the first eight games with Hines Park, Kapla was used mostly as a relief pitcher and as a designated hitter. He played one game at third base.

Kapla, drafted out of high school by the Detroit Tigers, was 3-5 as a starting pitcher this year at EMU. His coach at Eastern, Ron Coryell, said there was a chance Kapla could play other positions besides pitcher his senior year.

That's why it was important he got experience as an infielder this summer. With Brian Kalczynski (Brimingham Brother Rice/Henry Ford College) playing shortstop and Greg Janus (University of Detroit) playing third base for Carroll, Kapla wasn't going to get much action at either position.

"I told him I didn't like it, but I understand his wishes, and I understand what Coryell wants," Carroll said.

With Caesars, Kapla feels like he's back at Redford Catholic Central, where he pitched and played both the infield and outfield.

"I just need playing time, somewhere in the infield," said Kapla, a Canton resident. "It's just like old times. I'll do what I can for coach (John) Moraitis."

The addition is a blessing for Moraitis, who has been struggling to find enough bodies to fill his 18 uniforms.

Hines Park, 6-3, is expected to contend for the LCBL championship and a berth to Johnstown, Pa., for the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national championship. The playoff champion is allowed to pick up a few players off other rosters to take to Johnstown.

Would Carroll consider taking Kapla with?

"It depends on what your needs would be," Carroll said. "Pitching is always first and foremost and I'd certainly take a look."

Kapla said he hasn't received much grief from his teammates or his brother at the dinner table.

"They just teased me, saying 'What are you doing?' " Scott said.

Victory over Little Caesars aids Decision Consultants

Decision Consultants Inc. fattened its Livonia Collegiate Baseball League record with three victories over Livonia Little Caesars last weekend.

DCI defeated Caesars, 3-2, on Friday at Ford Field and came back Sunday with a 10-5, 11-3 sweep over coach John Moraitis' club at Madonna University Park.

DCI, which lost to Michigan Honig's, 9-2, on Monday at Ford Field, leads the LCBL with an 8-2 record.

In Friday's victory against Caesars, DCI scored three runs in the sixth inning to erase a 2-0 deficit.

Jeff McGavin drove in the first run with a single. Aaron Jones followed with a single and both players scored when a ball was thrown into center field on a delayed steal attempt of second base by Jones.

Tim Holland (Madonna University) and Eric Butler shared the pitching duties.

Holland scattered six hits, walked three and struck out three in five innings.

Butler allowed no hits with two strikeouts in two innings.

Chris Champanois and Dennis Madden (Livonia Franklin) had RBI singles for Caesars.

In the 10-5 opening game win Sunday, Dan Pydyn (Madonna) improved his record to 2-1 with an eight-hit complete game outing. Pydyn struck out four and walked two.

Jones was 3-for-4, including a double, and two RBI.

Craig Petersen had a two-run homer for DCI, which broke the game open with five runs in the fifth.

Jones had a three-run homer and a grand slam to finish with seven RBI in the 11-3 second-game victory.

McGavin was 2-for-3 with an RBI and Joel Hillebrand earned his third win against no defeats. Hillebrand allowed nine hits, struck out five and walked one.

Eric Marcotte (Plymouth Canton) went 3-for-3 with two RBI and Doug Gaughan had two hits.

■ HONIG'S 9-7, ADRAY 8-1: Honig's of Ann Arbor swept a double-header Sunday against Dearborn Adray, coached by Livonia Franklin assistant Tim Napier.

In the opening game, Honig's scored three runs in the top of the seventh inning off Matt Fournier (Franklin/Wayne State University) to erase an 8-6 deficit.

Derek Gaffery had a three-run home run for Adray in the fourth inning.

Adray scored its only run in the nightcap on an RBI single in the sixth inning by Gaffery. Steve Guibord suffered the loss, striking out six and walking four in five innings of work.

Adray on Friday night lost to Hines Park Lincoln Mercury, 11-1.

Craig Benedict was the winning pitcher, going three innings for Hines Park. He struck out five and walked none.

Dave Larner suffered the loss for Adray.

Jeff Lance (Redford Thurston/Henry Ford) and Dan Wise had two hits each. They hit back-to-back home runs in the first inning.

Hines Park had four straight hits in a six-run third inning. Adray third baseman Mike LaPointe had to leave the game with a broken nose in the inning when he was hit in the face by a hard grounder hit by Dave Knight (Plymouth Salem).

Coxswain leads top regatta crew

Livonia's John Fox knows exactly where he's going when it comes to the water.

And that's good, because as a coxswain on this year's Orchard Lake St. Mary's Prep crew team, he was responsible for keeping the strokers on course and on their way to victories at the Wyandotte Regatta and the Hebda Cup in Wyandotte.

Fox also guided the Eaglets' crew teams to their only medal won in the finals of an international regatta held recently in St. Catherine's, Ontario.

Ironically, Fox had no idea he'd be involved in rowing when he finished eighth grade at Riley Middle School and enrolled last fall at St. Mary's Prep, an all-boys college prep school on the shore of Orchard Lake.

But it was fun, as winning usually is, and a lot of hard work. Practices started at 6 a.m. followed by after-school workouts.

"It was difficult, too," said the 15-year-old, 110-pound freshman, who also earned varsity letters in cross country and wrestling.

Fox was the brains of the eight-man crew. He finished near the top of the honor roll with a 4.26 grade-point average out of a maximum 4.3.

"I have a lot on my mind during a race," he said. "I have to steer the boat (with an eight-man crew), tell the guys how we're doing, what place we're in, and motivate them. I'm kind of a cheerleader.

"And if we're dropping behind, I call out 'Power 10s,' which means the guys have to give 10 powerful stroke. At the end of the race, I bring the rate up for a final kick."

The Hebda Cup victory gave the Eaglets the right to claim a state title, while the medal in the Canadian race, along with nine others in qualifying heats, was impressive because more than 500 crews representing some 100 schools participated.

St. Mary's had two other important races cancelled due to poor weather conditions, one in Toledo and the other in Indianapolis (where the Eaglets were defending Midwestern USA champs.)

this camp. Don't wait, thank them tonight."

Holowicki said Schauer is well worth the cost.

"He covers the gamut, not just basketball," Holowicki said. "The money they pay him he more than gives back to the kids.

"He's a giver."

Schauer's own message to kids, however, was severely tested last year when he suffered injuries after being hit by a drunk driver in Pennsylvania.

"I was very lucky to be alive," he said. "I was laid up for three months and I got depressed. All I did was eat. I had to go through physical therapy just to raise my arm. I learned to appreciate the doctors and nurses.

"But I'm coming back. I had to follow my own advice I give to kids, but sometimes life is not easy.

"The kids have to realize their health is the most important thing. That's why I enjoy the schools and giving the anti-drug message."

Some may remember when Schauer was a full-time half-time showman for the Detroit Pistons, during the Dick Vitale days (1979-81). He performed at the NBA All-Star Game at the Silverdome and visited hundreds of schools during his Detroit stint.

"Bill Davidson (the Pistons owner), he's worth about $500 million now, isn't he," Schauer said. "I remember doing a personal show for his kid's birthday party. Those were the days."

During the past year, Schauer worked part-time for the Quad City (Ill.) Thunder of the Continental Basketball Association.

"It's fun to work the smaller markets," he said.

Schauer carts 50 basketballs along with him on tour, not to mention his chest full of props, prizes and sound system.

"The show is the easy part," he says. "It's the driving that's tough. Setting up and tearing it down takes about one and a half hours. And there's no room in the car."

Somehow Schauer wedges everything in and heads off for his next destination — a short stop home in Willoughby before heading to the Jersey Shore.

"Man, it's a hot one," he said. "I would have hated to do this on an outdoor court. One time I did a show outside and I could feel the asphalt burning right through my shoes."

But Schauer doesn't mind the heat.

"Basketball popularity is at an all-time high," he said. "And as long as I enjoy it, I'll keep doing it."

Next year, Schauer hopes he can land himself a spot during the '96 Olympics basketball competition in Atlanta, Ga.

"I've been talking with Coca-Cola," he said. "That would be nice to get in on that because the whole world will be watching."

Maybe they'll give this kid a chance.

Livonia Concealed Security outhit Bloomfield, 21-1, on Monday in a Connie Mack Little Caesars League game played at Bloomfield Hills Andover High School.

Concealed was nearly as dominant on the scoreboard, rolling to a 19-1 victory in a game called after six innings due to darkness and mostly because Bloomfield wanted to go home. Greg Ryan (Garden City/Dearborn Divine Child) pitched a one-hitter through five innings and Ryan Kelly pitched one inning of hitless ball.

Ryan struck out 10 and walked none and helped his cause, going 3-for-6 at the plate. Aaron Shrewsbury went 2-for-2 with a home run and three RBI and Tom Hartley was 3-for-5 with three RBI.

D.J. Eckhart, Ryan Cameron and E.J. Roman each added two hits. Roman homered and had three RBI.

On Saturday, Concealed crossed the Ambassador Bridge and shut out Tecumseh, Ont., 12-0. Roman threw a seven-hitter with 13 strikeouts and two walks to pick up the win.

Eckhart went 4-5, including a homer, two doubles and five RBI. Shrewsbury went 3-5 with two RBI and Deandre Cooper and Chris Deshetler had two hits each.

Hornets divide twinbills

Mike Anderson fired a six-hitter Monday, giving the Livonia Hornets a 5-0 victory over Holly in the first game of a Tri-County League (ages 15-16) baseball double-header Monday at Stevenson High School.

Mark Dietrich went 2-for-2 to pace the Hornets' offensive attack.

In the second game, Holly rallied for a 5-4 win over the Hornets to earn a split of the twinbill.

Reliever Todd Wilson, who came on for starter Brent Wojtyniak in the fifth inning, suffered the loss.

Kevin Marvin went 2-for-2 in a losing cause.

Both teams are 6-4 in league play.

On Saturday, the Hornets divided a double-header Saturday against Brighton at Ford Field.

Marvin tossed a four-hitter over seven innings to give the Hornets a 12-4 victory in the opener.

Justin Kerr led the Hornets offensively by going 4-for-4 with four RBI and four runs scored. Ed Szumlanski and Marvin each added two hits.

Brighton won the nightcap, 5-2, as losing pitcher Chris Colley gave up seven hits.

Observer stars rank with state's

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

Three teams ranked among the state's top six.

Four players listed in Michigan's top 11.

Another typical, average year in girls soccer for Observerland.

Perhaps the only thing missing was a state championship. Plymouth Salem made it to the Class A final, but the Rocks could not stop Birmingham Seaholm, losing 4-2. Which means it's been five years since a girls team from this area has reigned supreme (in 1990, Livonia Stevenson was champ).

Since then, it's been Eccentric area teams that have won every year. So perhaps we should resurrect the Observer vs. Eccentric all-star game, discontinued a decade ago?

(Editor's note: It's the state high school athletic association and its rule forbidding underclassmen from competing in such events that prevents us from sponsoring it.)

That Class A dominance could change in the very near future, considering this year's all-Observer teams. Of the 22 players selected to the first two teams, only 10 are seniors. And of the remaining 12, there are three freshmen and four sophomores.

Which means there's a lot of young talent developing in this area. The next few years could be even better than the past few.

Still, there were a couple of losses from this season that must be acknowledged. First and foremost is the retirement of Salem's Ken Johnson, the school's only girls coach in its history. Johnson will coach one last season of boys soccer, then it's off to Florida.

Also gone is the last person to coach an Observer-area girls soccer team to a state title: Mary Hussey. Personal problems caused Hussey to surrender her coaching position at Stevenson in the early stages of this season.

The Spartans recovered, however, to regain their status as one of the state's premier teams under the guidance of Jim Kimble. A former player at Stevenson and Central Michigan University, Kimble had served as Hussey's assistant last year.

His performance as a coaching replacement — after an 0-2 start, the Spartans went 14-2-1 under Kimble — earned him recognition as the Observer's coach of the year.

Here are the 11 first-team selections to the all-Observer squad.

ALL-OBSERVER SOCCER

All Lord, North Farmington, senior forward: Soccer is a team sport, sure and Lord was the kind of player that defied that claim. No other single player meant more to their team than Lord did to North.

A member of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's dream team, Lord netted 34 goals this season (a North school record) and assisted on seven others. Her performance for a mediocre Raider team earned Lord the most valuable player award for the Western Lakes Activities Association for the second straight year.

Already signed to play at North Carolina-Greensboro, Lord, according to North coach Tim Ernst, was special because she's a very aggressive player and likes to go straight to the goal. It's more of an instinct than something you can teach.

Any team we played against she was double-teammed, and in most cases she wasn't beating just one player but two or more.

Marie Spaccarotella, Livonia Churchill, junior forward: The best example of Spaccarotella's importance to the Chargers was in their final game of the season — when she didn't play, due to a knee injury. Churchill lost in the regionals to Salem, due at least in part to a problem generating offense.

Spaccarotella's description as a "goal-scoring machine" by her coach, Nick O'Shea, pretty much says what a difference he thinks she would have made in that match. Her statistics tell the rest: 24 goals and two assists this season, 66 goals and 14 assists in her three-year varsity career.

"It's wonderful to see great players who continue to improve and not rest on their laurels," said O'Shea. That's what the speedy Spaccarotella did, playing much of the season at midfield in order to improve her skills — which were good enough to land her a spot on the all-state dream team.

Kelly Lukasik, Plymouth Salem, senior forward: Lukasik did not play for the Rocks as a junior, but it became quickly apparent her impressive skills had not diminished. A second team all-Class A selection and a first team all-WLAA choice, Lukasik poured in 28 goals and assisted on 24 others for the Rocks this season.

As a three-year varsity starter, she totaled 49 goals and 44 assists.

"She's an excellent attacking forward," said Salem's Johnson. "Her great speed and touch helped Salem reach the state final."

Lukasik also blended well with the Rocks other offensive star, Mari Hoff. But Lukasik was no one-way player; she showed that by dropping back at times, when Salem had a lead, to mark the opposition's toughest offensive player.

Melissa Tomei, Plymouth Canton, senior forward: Tomei gave Canton something every team needs to be successful — a strong foot.

She could score consistently from anywhere inside 20 yards, and did so often. Tomei led the Chiefs in scoring each of the past two years, totaling 16 goals and 10 assists this season and 37 goals and 29 assists for her career.

A second team all-Observer selection as a junior, Tomei moved up to first team all-WLAA this year.

"Melissa has been a solid performer all four years," said Canton coach Don Smith.

Laura Fedrigo, Livonia Stevenson, senior midfielder: Fedrigo's true value to the Spartans may not become readily apparent until next season, but it will show. As Kimble, the Stevenson coach, said: "It was like having a player-coach. She was a coach's dream."

Her accolades would seem to back up those assertions. First team all-WLAA and a member of the state's dream team, Fedrigo scored 12 goals and collected seven assists this season, during which she served as Stevenson's co-captain for the second-straight year.

"No one understood the game better on the field than Laura," said Kimble of his four-year varsity star. Like many of her all-Observer teammates, Fedrigo's playing days are far from over — she's committed to play for the University of Michigan in the fall.

Mari Hoff, Plymouth Salem, junior midfielder: Like Lukasik, Hoff did not play soccer for Salem last year. She made up for it this season, however, becoming perhaps the area's most dangerous offensive player.

There are few, if any, in the state that can match Hoff's all-around abilities. She was extremely adept at handling the ball both in the air and on the ground, which is why she led Observer-area players in goals scored with 38, a single-season Salem school record. She also had 16 assists, bringing her two-season total to 49 goals scored and 28 assists.

"She's the best soccer player Salem has ever had," Johnson summarized. "She's a complete player: ball control, passing, shooting and reading the game. She helped Salem reach the state finals."

Hoff also possesses speed, making her even more dangerous. But perhaps what scares opponents most about Hoff is that she has a year of eligibility remaining.

Krissy Mahon, Farmington, senior midfielder: Mahon was not a big goal-producer, but she was the Falcons' top playmaker from her center midfield position. Farmington's most valuable player the last two years and team captain this year, Mahon had one goal and three assists as a senior.

For her career, Mahon had nine goals and eight assists. Her other team honors this season were all-Lakes Division and Farmington's female athlete of the year. It was her third year in a row as an all-division choice.

"She was our playmaker," said Farmington coach Bob Neff. "Often she was the third pass from the goal-scoring shot — she would make the pass to the player credited with the assist.

"We wish her good luck in college, but we will miss her next year."

Margaret Wirth, Livonia Churchill, senior defender: How important a player was Wirth for Churchill? The team captain, she was also co-MVP, sharing the honor with Spaccarotella. Wirth was an all-WLAA selection and was also picked to the all-Class A second team. And she accounted for three goals and 10 assists, too.

"Margaret's strength is her defensive tactical awareness," said O'Shea, Churchill's coach. "Her organizational skills, along with some big saves by Crystal (Wright, Churchill's keeper), were directly responsible for our 13 shutouts.

"Next year's team will sorely miss their defensive leader. In the two years she played for us (she transferred from Farmington Mercy), she established herself as one of the best defenders ever to play at Churchill."

Michelle Block, Livonia Stevenson, senior defender: Block earned honorable mention all-Class A, was all-WLAA and was picked as Stevenson's MVP after helping the team post 13 shutouts. The team's co-captain for the second year, she was "a very focused and consistent defender," said Kimble, the Spartan's coach.

"I never had to worry about marking or a defensive breakdown while Michelle was sweeping. Being in a skilled position such as sweeper, she will probably be missed most of all — you just don't replace her."

Block will continue playing collegiately at Indiana University this fall.

Kara Moylan, Plymouth Canton, sealer defender: Moylan is a repeat selection to the all-Observer team. Playing sweeper for the Chiefs this season, Moylan was also a repeat pick as all-WLAA.

As the anchor to one of the league's best defenses, she deserved the honors. She helped Canton tie for the league championship last season and was instrumental to the Chiefs' second-place finish in the Western Division this year.

"Kara was our most reliable defender over the last two years," said Smith, Canton's coach. "She was very good at distributing the ball to forward players and was very difficult to beat one-on-one."

Jenny Barker, Livonia Stevenson, freshman keeper: Barker made her first season playing at Stevenson a very successful one. She was an all-Lakes Division pick, finishing behind Farmington Harrison's Sara Kloosterman (the all-conference selection).

However, despite Kloosterman's exceptional skills (she was second team all-Class A), Barker was named to the Observer's first team simply because her numbers were far better — 13 shutouts, a 14-4-1 record and a 0.63 goals-against average (Kloosterman had a 4.4 goals-against average).

"She's a superior goalkeeper," said Stevenson's Kimble of Barker. "She has great instincts, she's a hard worker, and she takes keeping the ball out of the net personal.

"She will be one of the best (keepers) Stevenson has ever seen by the time she's done."

PLYMOUTH CITY CODE
MOTOR VEHICLE SIZE, WEIGHT, AND LOAD RESTRICTION ORDINANCE
ORDINANCE NO. 95-6
SYNOPSIS

An ordinance to amend the Code of the City of Plymouth by adding a new Chapter, which new Chapter shall be designated as Chapter 136 of Title X, Traffic, of said Code; to provide for the prohibition of oversize vehicles; to provide for the prohibition of overweight vehicles; to provide for load restrictions on vehicles; to provide for vehicle height restrictions; to provide for vehicle length restrictions; to provide restrictions on vehicles transporting flammable liquids; to provide restrictions for the towing of mobile homes; to provide definitions; to require certain information be painted on the trucks, tractors and trailers; to provide authority for weightmaster; to provide for special permits for unusual vehicles to provide penalties and fines for violation of this ordinance.

THE CITY OF PLYMOUTH ORDAINS:

Chapter 136 of Title X, Traffic, entitled Motor Vehicle Size, Weight, and Load Restriction Ordinance is hereby adopted.

This ordinance provides definitions for terms used in this ordinance including axle, civil infraction, driver, gross weight, highway or street, implement of husbandry, maximum axle load, person, peace officer, roadway, semi-trailer, spacing between axles, special mobile equipment, tandem axle, tandem axle assembly, trailer, truck, truck trailer, vehicle and weightmaster.

Unless specifically declared in this ordinance to be a civil infraction, it is a misdemeanor for a person to drive or move, or for the owner to cause or permit to be driven or moved, on a highway, a vehicle or vehicles of a size or weight or otherwise exceeding the limitations stated in this ordinance. The provisions of this ordinance governing size, weight, and load shall not apply to fire apparatus, or to an implement of husbandry incidentally moved upon a highway, or to a vehicle operated under the terms of a special permit issued as herein provided.

The total outside width of a vehicle or the load on a vehicle shall not exceed 96 inches except as otherwise provided in this ordinance. Exceptions are made for the following: farm tractor and machinery; vehicles hauling concrete pipe, agricultural products, unprocessed logs, plywood, and wood bolts; vehicles with pneumatic tires; and busses (see complete copy of ordinance on file with City Clerk for limitations on the above excepted vehicles). It is within the City of Plymouth Engineer's discretion to permit the operation of a vehicle which would otherwise be in violation of this ordinance. A person who violates the width section of this ordinance is responsible for a civil infraction.

Except as otherwise provided, a vehicle unloaded or with load shall not exceed a height of 13 feet 6 inches. The owner of a vehicle which collides with a lawfully established bridge or viaduct shall be liable for all damages and injury resulting from a collision caused by the height of the vehicle, whether the clearance of the bridge or viaduct is posted or not. A person who violates the height section of this ordinance is responsible for a civil infraction.

A truck, truck tractor, semi-trailer, or trailer manufactured on or after July 27, 1978, shall not be used to transport flammable liquids, in bulk having a flash point at or below 70 degrees Fahrenheit, if the truck, truck tractor, semi-trailer or trailer exceeds eleven feet eight and one-half inches (11'8½") in height.

This ordinance limits the lengths of vehicles operated in the city. The ordinance provides guidelines for combination vehicles, and for lamp and reflectors. A person who violates the length section of this ordinance is responsible for a civil infraction.

Notwithstanding any other provisions of this ordinance a person shall not operate a towing vehicle, having attached mobile home having a body length in excess of 45 feet and having a combined length of over 60 feet, a realistic body width of over 100 inches at base rail, and a height of over 12½ feet in the roadways of the City of Plymouth. The City of Plymouth may issue permits to mobile home manufacturers or dealers, for the movement, in the ordinary course of their business, of mobile homes to home transport companies or to mobile home manufacturers or dealers, for the movement, in the ordinary course of their business. This ordinance further provides a definition of mobile home and guidelines for the movement of mobile homes on the streets of Plymouth. A person who violates the towing of mobile homes section of this ordinance is responsible for a civil infraction.

The maximum axle load shall not exceed the number of pounds designated in the ordinance which prescribe the distance between axles. The ordinance provides for season restrictions on maximum axle loads. For the purpose of enforcement of this ordinance, the gross vehicle weight of a single vehicle and load or a combination of vehicles and loads, shall be determined by weighing individual axles or groups of axles, and the total weight on all the axles shall be the gross vehicle weight. In addition, the gross axle weight shall be determined by weighing individual axles or by weighing a group of axles and dividing the gross weight of the group of axles by the number of axles in the group. A person who violates the weight section of this ordinance is responsible for a civil infraction.

All motor trucks, tractors, trailers or semi-trailers, except as otherwise provided, of more than five thousand (5,000) pounds weight in operation upon public highways in the City of Plymouth shall have painted upon them information relative to name and address of the registered owner of the vehicle, and lessee of vehicle if the vehicle is being operated under lease, in letters of not less than 3 inches in height. This information shall be conspicuously placed upon the vehicle. A person who operates a vehicle without this information painted on the vehicle is responsible for a civil infraction.

The Weighmaster, having reason to believe that the weight of a vehicle and load is unlawful may require the driver to stop and submit to a weighing of the vehicle. When the Weighmaster, upon weighing a vehicle and load, determines that the weight is unlawful, the officer or agent may require the driver to stop the vehicle in a suitable place and remain standing until that portion of the load is shifted or removed as necessary to reduce the gross axle load weight of the vehicle to the limit permitted under this ordinance. A driver who fails to obey an official traffic control device is responsible for a civil infraction. A driver or owner of a vehicle who knowingly fails to stop when requested or ordered to do so by the Weighmaster who is authorized to require the driver to stop and submit to a weighing of the vehicle and load by means of a portable scale is guilty of a misdemeanor. This ordinance provides for fines based upon the number of tons the vehicle is overweight.

The Wayne County Office of Public Services, upon application in writing and good cause being shown, may issue a special permit in writing authorizing the applicant to operate or remove or combination of vehicles of a size or weight of vehicle or load exceeding the maximum as specified in this ordinance. A person who violates the special permit section of this ordinance is responsible for a civil infraction.

The City Manager may designate, subject to the approval of the City Commission, one or more agents who shall be called "Weighmaster" who shall enforce the provisions of this Ordinance. Weighmasters may issue citations for violations of this ordinance.

The City Commission and the County of Wayne may provide by ordinance prohibitions and limitations on the operation of commercial vehicles on designated highways or streets. A person who violates a prohibition, limitation, or truck route designation established by the City Commission and County of Wayne is responsible for a civil infraction.

A person found to have committed a civil infraction under this ordinance shall be ordered to pay a civil fine of not more than Five hundred dollars ($500.00), costs and excess weight fines. A person convicted of violating a provision of this ordinance not constating a civil infraction shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) or by imprisonment for not more than ninety (90) days, or both such fines and imprisonment in the discretion of the Court.

This ordinance shall become operative and effective on the 23rd day of June, 1995.

Students take to the road

Steve Sancricca, in car (above), a senior from White Lake majoring in mechanical engineering at Lawrence Technological University, shared details from his last run in the autocross event during the Society of Automotive Engineers Formula competition at the Pontiac Silverdome. He talked with Eric Benninger of Farmington Hills and George Holmes III of Canton along with Scott Bentham of Northville.

Sancricca and Benninger piloted the car through the final two events — autocross and endurance. The Lawrence Tech 12-member team — during the past academic year as their senior project — designed and built the car, which took sixth out of a record field of 84 competitors at this year's Formula. The three-day competition puts the vehicles, entered from universities and colleges from across the United States and Canada, to the test in design and performance events.

Derivatives — 'plain vanillas' or 'exotic'

MORE THAN MONEY

Second of two parts.

SID MITTRA Ph.D

Derivatives can be divided into two general classes: "Plain vanilla" and "Exotic." As their names suggest, there are significant differences between these two classes.

Plain-vanillas

Many of the plain-vanilla derivatives, such as futures, options and currency forwards, have been around for more than two decades. They trade on exchanges in standardized contracts or over-the-counter among a wide range of institutions. Exchange-traded derivatives (futures and most options) are closely regulated and their prices are published daily in the Wall Street Journal, just like stock prices. Plain-vanilla derivatives generally can be bought and sold easily. However, these derivatives can also become quite volatile and lose liquidity, especially under volatile market conditions. Some commonly traded plain-vanilla derivatives are discussed next.

Forward currency contracts

One instrument that derivative managers frequently use is the forward currency contract. Typically, these managers enter into forward currency contracts only with major banks or brokerage firms. Entering into these contracts does involve business risk, should one of these companies falter.

Forward currency contracts help protect stock holdings against declines in the value of foreign currencies relative to the U.S. dollar. A decline in the value of a foreign currency can reduce or even eliminate any gains in a foreign stock.

Options

An option gives its buyer the right, but not the obligation, to buy or sell a specified underlying item at some agreed-upon price, known as the exercise, or strike, price within some agreed-upon time period. There are two types of options — calls and puts. The call option gives the buyer the right to buy the underlying item at the strike price, while a put option gives the buyer the right to sell the underlying item at a specified price.

Perhaps the best-known options are stock options. Standardized stock options are traded in the United States on the American Stock Exchange, the Chicago Board Options Exchange, the New York Stock Exchange, the Pacific Stock Exchange and the Philadelphia Options Exchange. In addition, many firms award their key executives compensation packages that include stock options. Such compensation packages often are flavored by a firm's shareholders because they give management an incentive to pursue strategies that increase the firm's stock prices.

As an example of how firms use call options, suppose the Board of Directors of Pine Corp. awards the company's vice president of finance, George Segar, an option to buy 100,000 shares of the company's stock at $50 per share within a specified time period. When George receives the option, however, Pine Corp.'s stock is selling at $45 a share; so he has no reason to exercise the option immediately. If Pine Corp.'s stock price never rises above $50, the option will not be exercised before the specified time runs out. On the other hand, if the stock price rises to, say, $70 per share, George can exercise the option to earn a handsome profit. The call shares is $7 million, George can earn $2 million (less commission) by exercising the option, buying the underlying shares, and then immediately selling them at $70 a share.

Exotic derivative

Exotic derivatives are the new arrivals. Due to their short histories, exotics are relatively untested. Most are not exchange-traded and some are highly specialized and frequently customized for institutional investors. They are sometimes based on relationships between diverse markets: for example, changes in European interest rates and the price of copper. As a result, exotics can be highly illiquid and difficult to price accurately.

Exotic derivatives can be subdivided into two subcategories. The first included relatively straightforward products that managers use to hedge. The second category consists of customized contracts that managers use to gamble on stock or currency prices, the direction of interest rates, or indices, or some interrelationships between any or all of these factors. Collateralized mortgage obligations (CMOS), which are a popular derivative, can fall into both categories.

Derivative myths

There are four derivative myths that never seem to fade away. They are discussed below:

■ Myth No. 1: Derivatives are new and untested. Plain-vanilla derivatives have been around for a long time. Contracts guaranteeing crop prices have been traded on the Chicago Board of Trade since 1848. Also, mutual funds have used currency futures ever since they started investing overseas. Other derivatives like options have been around a lot longer.

■ Myth No. 2: All derivatives are complex. Not all derivatives are complex. In fact, the more conventional derivatives, like options and forwards, were originally designed in a simple manner to control risks. For instance, many mutual funds routinely use call and put options to lower their portfolio risk.

■ Myth No. 3: Derivatives are more risky than the associated security. Derivatives are usually no riskier than the underlying securities to which they are tied. For instance, an investor who wished to participate in the market could invest in various stocks. However, if he is not sophisticated enough to construct an efficient portfolio, he could buy S&P 500 index futures. If the market rises, the investor wins; if not, the investor may suffer the same result he would have if common stocks were acquired. Of course, if stocks were purchased, the investor could wait for a rise, in contrast, the owner of the option is forced to realize a loss when the times runs out.

■ Myth No. 4: The real problem is that derivatives are overly risky. As mentioned, the risk of derivatives is intimately related to the risk of the securities they represent. The real problem, however, has to do with disclosure. Admittedly, the investment community has done a poor job of communicating to the general public the true nature and use of derivatives. Consequently, investors panic when they discover that their mutual fund managers are using this esoteric instrument that they do not understand or approve.

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

■ I have spent a lot of time at and gained a lot of information from the TravelWeb, an interactive electronic color catalog for the hotel industry launched last fall.

Still planning your summer vacation? Planning next year's vacation? Information available on the Internet includes travel tips, hotel information, Amtrak train services, tourist information on numerous cities, and outdoor recreation and travel to name a few subjects.

I have spent a lot of time at and gained a lot of information from the TravelWeb, an interactive electronic color catalog for the hotel industry launched last fall.

Within two weeks TravelWeb was recording 2,400 visits a day and that number has been growing by about 10 percent daily.

This Web page links to the reservation systems of 20 of the largest hotel companies.

In the near future, on-liners will be able to make reservations with these hotels but right now that feature is not available.

But a lot of information about major hotel chains and their resorts, including toll-free numbers, can be accessed with Lynx or a graphical browser by pointing to http://www.travelweb.com.

Amtrak now offers its latest promotions and products on the Internet via World Wide Web. Some 50 pages of Amtrak photographs and texts are available at http://www.amtrak.com.

Amtrak Web browsers qualify for a 10 percent discount for all coach and first class travel through June 15.

Amtrak's Web pages detail new train services, routes, travel hints, and includes Amtrak's travel planner, illustrated with graphics and pictures. Special promotional offers are available and Amtrak's timetables will be on-line in the near future.

Shoestring Travel is a page that focuses on how people can travel cheaply.

The editor collects stories and information from Internet users via e-mail and scouts news groups like rec-travel to find the most interesting and useful items. He then shares information on hotels, restaurants, airfares, recreation, etc.

There also are lots of links to other travel services on the Internet. A lot of the information has to do with travel aboard. There also is a lot of information about Bread and Breakfast establishments and hostels. Take a look by pointing to http://metro.turnpike.net/eadler/index.html.

The Web site Time Out is a resource of worldwide city information and entertainment listings for Amsterdam, Berlin, London, Madrid, New York, Paris and Prague with more cities to be added.

The site has been developed by editors of Time Out magazine and the Time Out City Guides series. For each city there are weekly entertainment cities, new features each month, insider information on where to go and what to do, suggestions for eating, sightseeing, shopping and accommodations. The Universal Resource Locator (URL) is http://www.timeout.co.uk.

A brand new travel site, as of mid-June, is the Conde Nast Traveler site as http://www.cntraveler.com. Among the features here are sumemr air fares, and a Beach & Island Finder.

The city of Chicago offers Chicago Mosaic with a great deal of information on hotels, restaurants, museums and other tourist attractions, information on the L transit system, and much more.

You can link to Chicago Mosaic through the University of Chicago site at http://www.uchicago.edu/chicago.html.

NandoNet also has a lot of travel information on its Web pages as does CityLink, the folks who bring us Santa by e-mail and other holiday promotions on the Net.

The ULR for CityLink is http://eosoft.com/citylink. For NandoNet's PCTRAVEL, Telnet to PCTRAVEL.COM for free air fare information or browse to http://www.nando.net/pctravel.html.

And why not visit GORP (Great Outdoor Recreation Pages) for descriptions of most of the U.S. National Parks, Forests and Wilderness areas. This site contains information on outdoor recreational activities such as hiking, biking, paddlesports, fishing, climbing, skiing, etc., by location for the U.S., Africa, Asia, Australia, New Zealand,Canada and parts of Europe. The URL is http://www.gorp.com.

Southwest Airlines offers flight schedules and costs, and a reservation phone numbers, at http://www.iflyswa.com. Canadian Airlines offers airline schedules at http://www.cdnair.ca.

Trip Planner, a gateway to travel resources to research and plan your next journey, can be accessed at http://gnn.com/gnn/meta/travel/res/inetresoures.html.

And, finally, a Listserv suggestion where you can obtain information on all aspects of travel for disabled persons.

The Travable mailing list is open to the disabled community, and their families, and to people in the travel industry. Members share travel experiences, passing along new and useful information about travel for the disabled, and share ideas on how to make travel better for the disabled.

To subscribe to Travable, send an e-mail message to Listserv@sjuvm.sohns.edu and in the body of the message type "Subscribe Travable first name last name" without the quotes and substituting your full name.

You can direct questions to Emory Daniels by e-mail with emory@oeonline.com, at voice mail at 953-2047 then dial 1910, or fax number 591-7279. INTERIOR MOTIVES

'Early American' is not always authentic

NAOMI STONE LEVY

If one visits a furniture store and asks to see some Early American bedroom furniture, is one going to REALLY view Early American? Of course not!

One may be shown a matched "suite" of a bed, night stands, a chest or chest of drawers and a "triple" dresser — all with a ponderous look. All of these are a manufacturer's interpretation of Early American, but a far cry from anything authentic. On the night stands could be displayed a pair of imitation oil lamps with very ruffled shades. I deplore ALL of the above. Please don't ever select a matched "suite" of anything. No worthwhile interior designer would consider such purchases.

To place an identifying date on "Early American" is hazardous. The first settlers of the colonies brought some possessions with them from Europe, but transporting these was difficult. Therefore they made much of the simple pine furniture themselves, with some pleasing results. These austere forms were often washed with thin paints — and subsequently repainted during their lifetime — not always the initial color. If you are lucky enough to locate one of these very early pieces, it will have an incredible patina.

As cabinetmakers increased their skills the settlers also became more affluent and sophisticated in their tastes. Huge open fireplaces were the cooking center of the home. There wasn't a real so-called "kitchen" — architecture wasn't applicable. Obviously the unskilled and primitive aspects were soon abandoned. Soft pine gave way to harder woods, maple and oak. Singular storage cabinets, without ostentation, made their appearance to accommodate bowls, dishes and mugs. These often hung from their handles. Racks were designed to lodge spoons and cutlery. These were festively painted.

Eventually walnut and mahogany were imported and furniture became more stately and distinguished, no longer to be classified "Early American," merely "American." Where is the line of demarcation? Obviously somewhere between primitive and worldly. The awesome names Townsend, Goddard and Affleck paralleled their English counterparts Chippendale, Adam and Hepplewhite.

Let us return to and execute that "Early American" bedroom I decried earlier, never to be MATCHED. A good bed is the first requirement. It could be brass or wrought-iron. It could also be a wooden "Jenny Lind" or four-poster. Any of these would happily accept a tasteful quilt with great color. The Amish "Square Within a Square" is a definite favorite — or perhaps a Log Cabin or a Mosaic. There are a number of books about quilts illustrating American coloring.

The night stands needn't be a pair, but they should be very similar in height. Washed pine? Super with any of the suggested beds. Remember there were no triple or even double dressers in the history of furniture. For storage I might suggest a painted cupboard. This could now accommodate a television set above with drawers below. It is true there were no televisions in Early American, but we LIVE in the 20th century and they are a necessary evil. For additional storage in this room, add a four- or five-drawer chest with an eagle mirror on top.

A Windsor chair would be welcome. Tie on a cushion for extra comfort. Accompany the chair with a wrought-iron, two-candle (electrified) candlestand. Small lampshades in a mini-print of either fabric or paper will add charm.

If one is fortunate to have stained hardwood floors it will add to that "look" to use either brightly colored hooked or braided scatter rugs. Are you getting the picture?

The window treatment should be short curtains, even two-tiered. Perhaps they can be hung from tabs on wood or iron rods, refined and tasteful. Oftentimes the crown moulding and chair rail as well as the other woodwork is painted Old Red, Old Blue or Old Mustard Yellow.

Collectibles such as an earthenware pitcher and wash basin, some glorious colored handblown glass, pewter and brass accessories will further enhance this room. Our children don't realize that pierced brass warming pans were an integral part of comfort before central heating. Our forefathers warmed their beds with coals using this long-handled pan. Then they climbed in!

As the frosting on the cake, gather together a modest number of eye-catching antiques. Mix them with GOOD reproductions and you will achieve a tasteful and subtle environment. On the walls you could assemble a series of silhouettes in black frames. Primitive watercolors of fruit or flowers in birds-eye maple frames are to be found in antique shops, all of the above appropriate to Early American.

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

When my dryer quit drying I called a service man to repair it. All he did to fix the problem was remove a bird's nest from inside the vent line. He told my husband to replace the plastic vent line with solid aluminum line. The dryer now works fine, but will this change to metal vent line prevent the same occurrence?

Many thousands of homeowners go through this same problem every year and the majority are using the old slinky type dryer vent line. The reason the birds like it so much is because it has folds and crevices in it that can be stretched to form a pocket where they can build their little homes. They like the heat factor, which allows mama bird to leave the nest and take a cruise while the eggs are still kept warm. It is a sad day, though, when little children observe the service technician remove a nest with little eggs or birds in the nest. That happening can be etched in the mind forever.

In most cases, the old style solid metal vent line will prevent the nest because it is smooth and isn't going along with nature.

Your question helps me bring up another factor. In the past year, 47 major newspapers across the country had my face plastered across their front pages with the caption, "Your dryer is a ticking time bomb." The story was about how many house fires there are in the United States every year (more than 13,000) caused by the clothes dryer. It is finally agreed by many — the government, manufacturers, underwriters, fire commissions, even the vent line producers themselves — that the majority of these fires are caused by the use of an improper vent line.

When I say "improper vent line," I mean the plastic flexible vent line that has been used by the majority of homeowners for more than 20 years. Just think of the tragedy that has occurred because consumers weren't aware. I ask you to cut out this column and keep it to help someone who may not have heard of this story.

A restriction to the air movement that travels through your dryer to the outside will cause a lint buildup inside the dryer, which can then be an ignition point. It is as simple as that, and I have seen it happen many, many times.

Common sense says that the old-fashioned solid aluminum vent line has no ridges and is smooth and will let the air, plus the lint, go to the outside in a much easier fashion. The plastic or the tinfoil with ridges will only help create this ticking time bomb because of the designated obstacle it presents to smooth air flow. The buildup of lint inside your vent line occurs rapidly and that gives you sufficient restriction to air movement, causing lint buildup inside the dryer. Believe me, folks, when I tell you that this causes a fire, and also believe that it is responsible for more than 70 percent of the service calls rendered on clothes dryers. If air can't move to the outside as it is supposed to, the inside of the product runs under extreme high heat conditions and causes premature failure of drum rollers, belts, bearings, seals, motors, etc. Also, the dryer consumes more of your dollars to operate because it takes much longer to dry a load.

The state construction code now says that in new home construction or home renovation you must use metal vent line to vent your dryer. The Maytag Co. says on a warning ticket attached to its products, "Do not use plastic or tinfoil vent line." The Appliance Doctor says, "I have been an expert witness in several lawsuits across this country against those who wouldn't listen to reason. They installed plastic vent line, a fire resulted and tragedy happened. Some very big settlements were awarded to homeowners."

You will find this plastic vent line still available in many stores, but it is the responsibility of these people to help educate the buying public. Meijer and Damman stores have notices posted in their vent line departments to warn consumers of what is proper to vent your clothes dryer.

Proper venting of your dryer is an easy, do-it-yourself job with all the material available at your local hardware store. Take a string and measure how many feet you need from the back of the dryer to the flapper piece in the wall. Buy the needed amount that comes in two-foot sections and couples together very easily. Wrap the joints with duct tape, don't use screws, and make sure you bought the needed elbows to go around the corners. When you are done, and have used two elbows in the system, your vent line shouldn't be any longer than 14 feet from the dryer to the outside.

Oh, I almost forgot to tell you: The bird got in through the flapper outside, and that might be prevented by making sure the flapper is free of lint and closes properly. Don't forget, folks, that you still have to clean out the vent line occasionally even though you're now using the solid aluminum proper vent line.

GARDEN SPOT

Columnist answers your garden questions

MARTY FIGLEY

As we garden we all have questions that come to mind. Perhaps some of the following information will be just what you wanted to know.

What flowers can I plant in a shady area rather than the usual ferns, astilbes or hostas?

Look to wildflowers to fill the void. Jacob's Ladder, Polemonium reptans, Wild columbine, Aquilegia canadensis, Hepatica, H. Americana, Cardinal flower, Lobelia cardinalis, Blue phlox, P. divaricata, and Wild geranium, G. maculatum, are a few suggestions. Remember to buy only wildflowers that are nursery propagated.

I like to dig my tulip bulbs up each year and store them until fall. What is a good way to do this?

After the foliage ripens and dies down, dig the bulbs and set them in an airy place to dry. Don't let them get wet. Clean the soil off and dust with sulfur, then put them in nylon bags and hang to store in a cool, dry room that is well ventilated. Label each bag for quick identification.

My peony hasn't bloomed for several years. Any suggestions?

Peonies begin to produce food for storage in the roots for next year's flowers right after they bloom. Don't let weeds crowd the plant and compete for moisture and nutrients, and water them during prolonged dry weather. They need sunlight to bloom, so check the location, especially if they have been doing well and trees have matured enough to make more shade.

Are there any flower seeds that can be sown directly in the ground this month?

Yes, this month is ideal for perennials and biennials for next year's bloom. Delphiniums, lupines, primroses and violas are some. The seeds do need ample moisture through germination and early growth; a light mulch of straw wil help retain moisture. When transplanting the seedlings the soil needs to be friable to allow the roots to grow. English daisies, Canterbury bells, Verbascum, Hollyhocks and Foxgloes can also be sown now.

This is the first year I have planted broccoli. Some of them are getting little yellow flowers. What can I do?

The yellow flowers are the mature flower heads. The edible part is the immature flower buds. Remove the yellow heads and harvest the smaller side shoots the plant sends up.

My Brussels sprouts are doing well. Any tips to ensure a good harvest?

Remove a few of the lower leaves to allow the sprouts more room to grow. Don't remove too many, because the plants need that foliage for plant growth.

Why do I need to tie the leaves around the heads of my cauliflower?

White cauliflower is caused by being shaded from the sun, so pull the leaves up over the head and tie the. Purple or green types and self-blanching varieties will do fine without this step.

When is the best time to divide and transplant hostas?

These versatile plants aren't particular about when they are manipulated. Remember, little divisions soon turn into large plants, so be sure to give them plenty of room in the garden. Those with variegated leaves can tolerate more sun than the solid shades.

This is the first year we've had a strawberry patch. Do they need any special care?

Sorry to report this, but you shouldn't let the plants produce fruit this year, so remove all the flowers. In the following years then, the yield will be higher. Keep the weeds at bay by cultivating shallowly. This also keeps the runners confined to a specific area. Sidedress with nitrogen if they aren't growing well and the foliage isn't dark green. They need one to 1-½ inches of water weekly.

I'm growing sunflowers. Any tips?

Don't apply too much fertilizer before flower heads appear. If you want tall sunflowers, pour on the nitrogen. Phosphorus and potassium help with flower size.

NATURE

State wildlife guides help map out nature

TIM NOWICKI

Summer is indeed the time when many Michiganders travel throughout the state. There are many lakes, rivers and tourist areas anywhere in Michigan. There are so many that it's difficult to find them all, especially natural areas for viewing wildlife.

Through the years I have collected books that outline natural areas and descriptions of what can be seen in those natural areas. Back in 1987, Tom Powers published a book on 165 natural areas in Michigan. Then in 1992 he added 141 more natural areas in a second publication. This year he has published an updated version of his two previous books and has added maps in this edition.

Jim DeFresne, Dennis Hanser, the Michigan DNR, the Michigan Nature Association, the Michigan Audubon and others have published books on trails, birding areas and more. These books cover some of the same areas, but there are too many of these books to take on a trip.

Something I have done that you may want to consider is to identify all the areas in these books in one source. I've taken the Michigan Atlas and Gazetteer and put a colorful dot at the location of these natural areas throughout the state. On each dot is a reference to one of the books that has additional information on that site. Before I go to an area of the state I can check what locations are in the vicinity and take one of the references along. Most of the books are divided by general regions of the state, like southeast Michigan or northwestern Michigan.

On the way back from Oscoda, when the traffic backed up this past Memorial Day weekend, I was thankful I had my map with me. By looking at the detailed maps of the back roads I was able to bypass much of the heavy traffic and see some new areas of Michigan.

Tim Nowicki lives in Livonia and works as a naturalist with Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County.

HOME ELECTRONICS

Nifty new product makes it easy to plug in

BARRY JENSEN

A nifty new product made in Canada is becoming available in this area. It allows you to have more electrical outlets without hiring an electrician or knocking holes in your walls.

Easy Trac is based on two wires covered by a hard plastic strip that plugs into a single outlet. You can put outlets as far from the original outlet as you wish.

Think of Easy Trac as a heavy, grounded extension cord that mounts to a wall. It consists of a plug that goes into a wall electrical receptical and a hard-plastic strip that attaches to a wall.

The system is rated at 20 amps and 125 volts ac, the same as most modern home electrical circuits. It is approved both by the U.S.-based Underwriters Laboratories and the Canadian Standards Association.

The track consists of a ground wire in the middle with the "hot" wires at the upper and lower edges of the track. The wires are almost completely covered by the basic track. The smooth plastic cover is more for looks than for protection, but a cover does make it nearly impossible to touch one of the "hot" wires.

Easy Trac is no substitute for additional circuits. If you need more circuits, they must be brought into your electric panel (the box that contains your circuit breakers or fuses). Easy Trac is for the person who has a circuit or two with almost nothing on it and wants more outlets on those circuits.

The system is not designed to handle an electric clothes dryer. It is best for lightly loaded lines: a dox-matrix printer and a 100-watt lamp don't draw much current. Avoid such current-hungry appliances as large color TVs, microwave ovens, resistance heaters and refrigerators.

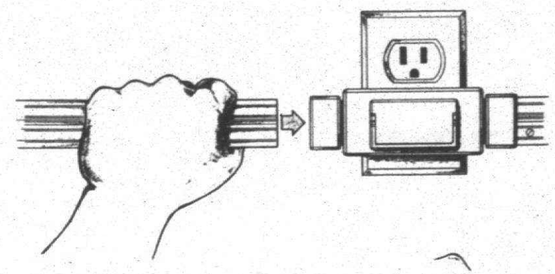

To use Easy Trac, plug a master plug into an existing outlet. Then extend the hard plastic track as far as you want. Cut the track (with a hack saw) wherever you want an electrical outlet. Finish the electrical work with end pieces.

You can buy smooth pieces of plastic to cover the main track pieces. The cover can be cut with a heavy knife. You don't have to cover the tracks, but they look nicer, and the covers can be painted.

All kinds of track pieces are available: end caps, outside corners, inside corners, elbow connectors, and, of course, outlets. Cost depends on how man pieces you needs. You can even buy a surge suppressor that fits into the track.

The Easy Trac system is available at hardware stores such as ACRO Hardware, Ace Hardware, Builder's Square and some independent hardware stores.

Barry Jensen welcomes your comments and suggestions for topics for future columns. His telephone number is 313-953-2125. This number has voice mail attached, so you can call at any time.

Uncomplicated: New Easy-Trac system is no trouble to assemble and makes it easy to make the most use out of your electrical circuits.

6 gardens to be featured in annual walk

BY MARTY FIGLEY
SPECIAL WRITER

The Evening Primrose Garden Club of Troy will have its annual garden walk, rain or shine, 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 24.

Donation is $6. For information, call Sherryl at 879-9591 or Dorothy at 879-9160. Tickets can be bought the day of the walk at 2691 Binbrooke, or the Boys and Girls Club of Troy on the southeast corner of John R and Long Lake Road. Proceeds will be used for club beautification.

Six gardens are open for the walk. One is an acre in size, owned by Daniel and Leslie Minard, who began concentrating on their plans while they watched their son, Nathaniel, now 7.

Leslie has researched and planned the garden with the full cooperation of Daniel, who has also been very active in garden club projects. The goal of this couple is to minimize the maintenance, especially mowing. Thus many beds of flowers, vegetables and tree surrounds are in place. Ground covers are used to eliminate weeds and to keep the soil cool.

Color has been used to great advantage. Purple leafed plants such as Pygmy barberry and purple leafed maples echo that color throughout the property. A smoke tree is also part of the scene.

Foundation gardens continue all around the house and are gracefully designed with curved edges. They have been closely planted with a variety of flowers and shrubs.

The front area boasts a blue and pink color scheme in the spring with grape hyacinths and pink tulips. As the season progresses salvias with coral blooms and white alyssum march along the front edge. Burgundy ajuga carries the color scheme, while the yellow foliage of Thread leaf Cyprus adds light. Tall conifers anchor.

The front garden glows again in the fall when mums and Autumn Joy sedum bloom. A Peegee tree hydrangea with white plums that turn to rose adds an interesting note. A prized planting of Oriental lilies and later Stargazer lilies bloom at the proper time, while a Coral burst crab placed at the front of the border garden is sited perfectly.

The garden continues around the side of the house where plants that like dry, hot conditions such as Silver Queen artemesia, Moonshine Yarrow and Painted Daisies, and prickly pear cactus live alongside Red Hot Poker, a Peony and more Oriental lilies. The patio area in the back is also attractively planted, and fruit trees such as plum, apple and cherry provide their bounty during the season.

The organic vegetable garden consists of beds bordered with kiln-dried, treated lumber. The soil has been enriched with peat, vermiculite, cow manure, a little lime, gypsum and bone meal. Dried blood repels rabbits, while providing nitrogen to specific plants. Broccoli, peppers, squash, tomatoes, herbs, melons, salad greens as well as Yukon gold potatoes — "They're the best" — are some of the crops. Nathaniel's chore is to water the vegetables that have been marked with decorative labels. Companion planting as well as other non-chemical methods are used.

"We've never used chemicals and have very good luck," they said.

A special feeding area for wild critters is regularly replenished with sunflower seed and corn that deters them from the garden plants. This strategy works for them.

The property boundaries have been planted with trees and shrubs to provide privacy and interest to this well-planned landscape. Visitors will find many ideas for their own gardens.

The other gardens on this walk will also inspire. One features container plantings dominated by shades of pink and contains a surprise or two. Another has been fashioned from a stone quarry and contains many unusual trees, a water garden and much color. The landscape designed to enhance an Early American colonial house is a picture in shades of lavender, yellow and white and is planned for color throughout the season. The front entrance is a terraced garden. Still another garden comes alive with container plantings of a plethora of flowers, as well as a watering can collection and ceramic bird feeders.

The Boys and Girls Club of Troy's garden is also on the tour, for which the Evening Primrose Garden Club of Troy won a Community Improvement Award for District I as well as a national special achievement award. They also won first place in the state and a national award for their newsletter from the Federated Garden Club of which they are members.

Improvements show scheduled

As part of Streetscape, Plymouth's ongoing project to revitalize the community's landscape and improve pedestrian and traffic safety on Main Street, Plymouth will celebrate home improvements with "Garden in the Park: A Home and Garden Exposition."

Garden in the Park will take place 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, June 24, in the area surrounding Plymouth's Kellogg Park, which is on Main. The show's participants will include landscapers, home builders and florists — a myriad of products and services to make homes more beautiful.

It will be an intimate, outdoor affair.

COVER STORY

Bonsai

Living art takes shape

Story and photos by
Marty Figley, Special Writer

Marc Makahon grows 50 to 55 Bonsai trees in his sunny, secluded back yard in Bloomfield Hills on 10 benches and six pedestals. They are artfully arranged on two levels and can be seen from the windows of the house.

Makahon has been a member of the Four Seasons Bonsai Club of Michigan for four years and will demonstrate his art during the club's 22nd Anniversary Show noon to 9 p.m. Friday, June 23, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, June 24, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, June 25. The show will be at the Washington Square Building, Washington and Fourth in Royal Oak. Admission is $2 for adults, free for those under age 16.

People from every walk of life belong to the Four Seasons Bonsai Club — artists, architects, doctors, executives, teachers, retirees, etc. Women and men enjoy this art and couples bring young adult children to meetings. Members live in all areas of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

"I became entranced with the Far East when I traveled there on business and took classes at the Bonsai Club in Mount Clemens," said Makahon, an architect.

Last year he traveled to all the major conventions in the United States to attend workshops. This year will be dedicated to his collection that he feels needs styling and attention. He has been practicing his art for six years.

He concentrates on outdoor Bonsai, and although he has no favorite — "They're all like kids" — he is dedicated to pines, [fi]Pinus[fr]. Japanese White Pines, P. parviflora, is called "Queen of Bonsai," while the Japanese Black Pine, P. thunbergiana, is "King of Bonsai." His collection includes five Maples, Acers (naturally understory trees), which he keeps in a shady area of the garden.

Before pruning he visualizes how a finished Bonsai will look. The ultimate goal is an illusion of age and shape. Some take less than an hour, while others take longer. Braces and aluminum wire are used to encourage the plants to grow into the desired form. The bark is protected with rafia to avoid wire injury. A certain amount of patience is required — "Nature doesn't work fast." The wire is left on the plants for two years, then removed, so the tree can rest in between, then the wire is replaced.

"It will be another 12 years before I feel a particular plant is ready to show."

His architectural expertise shows in his work and he stresses the overall sense of design. He also clips the candles on the pines to control growth.

Makahon uses a standard soil mix, available from Bonsai nurseries, and tries to duplicate the soil where a plant originated. For instance, a pitch pine, Pinus rigida, from the Appalachian Mountains is well and happy at the age of 70 years. He has had this Bonsai for three years.

He buys some of his plants and also collects from the wild.

The plants live outdoors all summer from the first part of April, then right after the first heavy frost or the first snow they are carried to his unheated dark garage, it is hoped with snow on them. In early to mid-February he waters the plants or puts snow on them if it's available. Since they are in dormancy during the winter they don't need light.

The upcoming exhibit will include specimens from members' private collections and will feature miniature trees. Demonstrations during the show will include basic care techniques, styling, pruning and softing.

Demonstrations will take place as follows:

Friday — 12:30-2:30 p.m. Vance Wood, Roseville; 7-9 p.m. Marc Makahon, Bloomfield Hills.

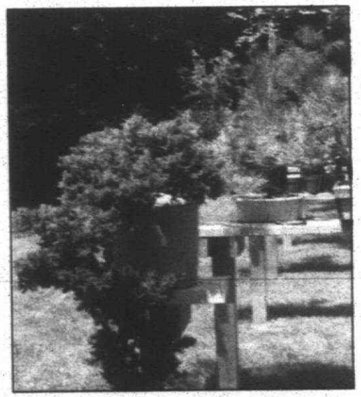

Saturday — noon to 2 p.m. Nick Lantz, master artist from Maine; 3-5 p.m. George Randall, Livonia, and Gordon Hoilman, Bloomfield Hills; 6-8 p.m., Vance Hanna, Bloomfield Hills.

Sunday — 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Vance Wood, Roseville; 2-4 p.m. Len and Anne Buckman, Troy.

Bonsai master: Mark Makahon of Bloomfield Hills will demonstrate his art at the 22nd anniversary show of the Four Seasons Bonsai Club of Michigan this weekend.

LET'S REMODEL

How much should you spend on a new bath?

Q: We would like to remodel our bathroom and want to know how much an average bath costs.

A: That question is asked of our saff daily. People who come into our showroom might be surprised by our response. The only way to answer that question is for us to ask 'How much would you like to spend?'

Truthfully, there is no good average cost estimate the industry has for remodeling the bath. The only, thing that is known is that this is the most expensive room per square foot to remodel. This is due to the fact that every mechanical item you find in the home is in that room. You have plumbing, electrical, heating, drywall, ceramic tile, floor and wall covering and any number of other items that need to be considered. No other room in the home has as much going on behind the walls as does the bath.

What you really should do first is ask yourself 'How much can I realistically afford to spend on the remodeling?' Take into consideration your financial worth (how much you have saved), how much equity you have in your home to add to it if you are going to finance it, and, most importantly, how much you will be able to recoup when it comes time to sell the home. We look at the bath remodel as an investment just like stocks, bonds or any other way to have your money work.

■ We look at the bath remodel as an investment just like stocks, bonds or any other way to have your money work.

National statistics show that remodeling your bath can have an effective return of more than 100 percent when done within reason.

One way to find out how much your home can afford is to ask an area real estate agent how much the new bath would add to the value of your home over leaving it as is. Another way is to check the home section of the paper to see what features are included in ads for homes in your neighborhood and the asking prices. Any real estate agent will tell you that the two most important rooms in the home are the bath and the kitchen.

Also, you need to place a value on how much that new bath is worth to you regardless of the investment return. Some people feel, for example, that spending money for a new bath is better than buying a new car this year. It is up to you.

After you have arrived at the budget then look for someone to remodel your bath. Check with organizations such as the Michigan Remodeling Association, ask friends, neighbors and relatives, who they have used and ask the firm you are considering for references. That way you will have the peace of mind of knowing that the company doing your bathroom is really the one that will work for you. Most remodeling professionals I know have one thing as their goal; that is to give you the most that they can for the budget you have established. We look to you to give us your wants, and we, in turn, will give you as much as we can.

Gene Pindzia, Riverside Kitchen & Bath, 313-886-3188.

Q: How do I determine the best way to finance my remodeling project?

A: Just as each remodeling project is unique and designed to the existing structure, so it is with the best way to finance it. When it comes to determining how to finance your remodeling project, one size doesn't fit all. It really depends on the individual circumstances involved. In some cases it is best to refinance an existing first mortgage and in other cases it is more advantageous to use a fixed rate equity loan with no closing costs. It really depends on details such as: How long do you plan on staing in the home? How much equity is currently available in the home? What is the interest rate on the existing first mortgage? When do you need to pay the contractor? (in installments or at the end of the project?) When do you want to pay off the additional amount financed? (Repayment terms). Your answers to these and other questions will help a lender customize the best financing program for your situation. A good first step is to ask your contractor or manufacturer for the name of a reputable lender who can offer a broad range of mortgage loan programs and is capable of designing a loan program ideally suited to your situation.

Cynthia Hall, Harris Financial Group, 810-362-6950.

Answers are provided by members of the MRA, the local chapter of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry (NARI). Students show work at trade fair

Students from the Center for Creative Studies Industrial Design Department exhibited their furniture designs at the NeoCon '95 World's Trade Fair, the annual international conference and exposition of the International Interior Design Association.

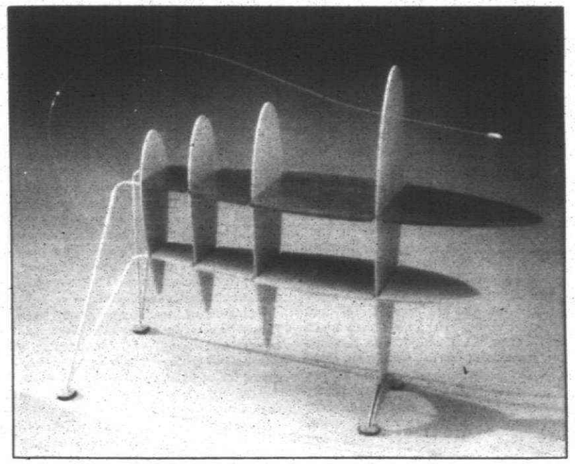

The fair took place in Chicago last week. It is the first year that CCS had a display booth of its own at NeoCon. Last year CCS students participated as part of the Steelcase exhibit.

CCS showed 50 to 60 full-scale furniture pieces, 12 interior and exterior models, and 20 maquettes, from 31 students. The display included ideations, sketches and photographs documenting the process of creating the products.

"You are not invited to NeoCon unless you are qualified. This show is for the cutting edge and future of furniture design," said Bill House, chair of industrial design.

Among the area students who exhibited at NeoCon were Kristyn Koth and Jason McCombs of Farmington Hills, Maureen Voorheis of West Bloomfield, Greg Darby of Canton, Jason Coffer of Troy, Patrick McDonald of Birmingham and Jesus Piney of Plymouth.

In addition to CCS, six other schools exhibited at this year's event — the University of Michigan, Michigan State University, Ball State University, the University of Illinois-Chicago, Northern Illinois and the University of Missouri-Columbia.

INVITING IDEAS

Spend a lazy afternoon sipping iced tea

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Tea time over ice — not in "Jolly Old England." America's contribution to the tea craze, aside from the Boston Tea Party, was cool and refreshing Iced Tea.

First served in 1904 at the St. Louis World Fair, iced tea is hot! It's available bottled, canned, and boxed in a variety of flavors including tropical and lemon.

Hot summer days make me thirsty for iced tea and the company of dear friends. Pamper your guests with small sandwiches filled with lemon flavored soft spreadable cheese or lemon curd. Slice the bread into interesting shapes with cookie cutters. Add a beautifully arranged platter of sliced, seasonal fruit, some fresh fruit puree on top, and serve with water biscuits. Mix and match iced teas to complement the foods you're serving.

Instead of serving lemon wedges with iced tea, mix lemonade and iced tea together in equal portions for a refreshing drink. A fresh sprigs of mint will also wake up the flavor of iced tea. Brew some black tea with freshly peeled and sliced ginger root.

Ice cubes made with lemonade will also zip up the taste of iced tea. Sun-brewed tea, with the zest of citrus fruit is another possibility. Add some rose water or orange blossom water to a pitcher of iced tea to impart an international-ethnic flair. Brewed herbal teas and flavored iced teas make refreshing drinks.

Here are some tips for making sun-brewed tea. Start with cold water — always use a glass container — 6 tea bags to a quart-size pitcher. Place the container in the sun; remove tea bags when desired strength is achieved.

Refrigerated tea tips: Start with room-temperature water — a glass container works best — 6 tea bags to a quart-sized pitcher. Place in the refrigerator for at least three hours. Remove the tea bags — iced tea will last a few days if kept refrigerated.

To make lemon-flavored cheese — add Neufchatel cream cheese or any other spreadable to blender or food processor bowl fitted with the steel blade — add fresh lemon juice and some grated peel, to taste, a dash of sugar and process until well mixed.

Sunkist offers a lemonade kit — a great grouping of lemon tools including a grater, juicer, and recipe book for $5.95. The price includes tax and postage. Send check or money order payable to "Sunkist Lemon-Aid Kit" to: Sunkist, Lemon-Aid Kit, P.O. Box 4587, Overland Park, KS 66204. Call 1-800-CITRUS-5 for information.

HOMEMADE LEMON CURD

Juice and grated rind of 5 lemons
1½ cups sugar
1 cup butter, cut into bits
5 eggs or 10 egg yolks beaten

In a double boiler combine lemon juice, lemon rind, sugar and butter. Set over medium heat and continue to stir until the butter has melted and everything is well mixed.

Add fresh eggs or yolks (whichever is preferred) and whisk briskly to combine. Set aside whisk and continue to stir with a wooden spoon until the lemon mixture coats the spoon. Do not let the lemon mixture boil — it will curdle!

Strain the lemon mixture through a fine sieve to remove the rind. The mixture will appear thick and creamy. Let the mixture cool and keep refrigerated.

SUGAR-DUSTED FLOWERS

2 egg whites
2 tablespoons superfine sugar, plus additional for dusting
Whole edible flowers — purple chive flowers, marigolds, nasturtiums or pansies, washed, stems removed
New paint brush (relatively small for painting leaves)
A piece of fine mesh screen or fine mesh strainer

In a mixing bowl, beat the egg whites and sugar on high speed for approximately 1½ minutes or until the mixture forms a small-bubbled foam.

Carefully dip the flowers into the egg mixture until evenly coated. Remove the flowers from the mixture and set stem side down on a wire cooling rack, have something beneath it to catch the drippings.

Gently brush off any excess foam — the coating should appear like a sheen.

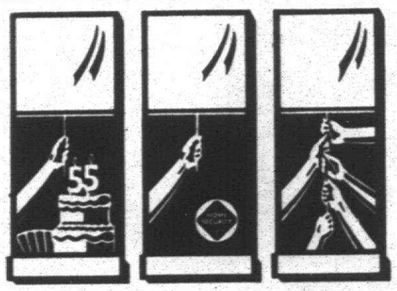

Place the flowers into a small bowl of superfine sugar to coat the bottoms.

Using a fine meshed screen or a strainer, lightly sift the superfine sugar onto the tops of the flowers — if there are bare spots, brush on more egg mixture and repeat the sifting process.

Gently set the flowers aside to dry at room temperature.

For best results, prepare dusted flowers the day of your party.

Dear Nancy and Frank:

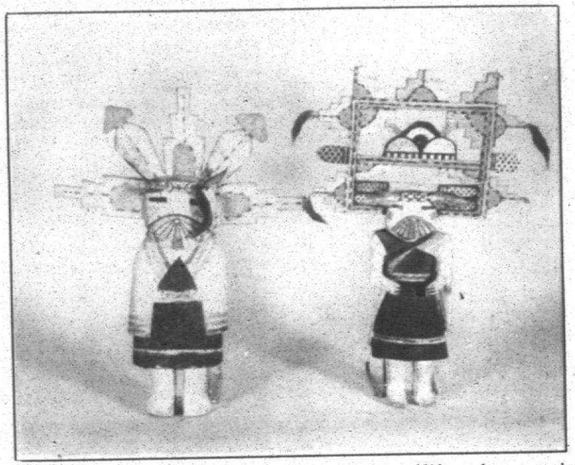

My uncle out West sent me these unfamiliar doll-like items that look like they're from another world. Can you explain?

Ruth, Troy

■ Be careful! There are very strict rules governing trading in kachinas, as some parts of the ornamentations can belong to birds or animals on the endangered species list, and some may have come from sacred burial grounds or may have been used in sacred rituals.

You're almost right! They are representative of another world. What you have are "kachina dolls" that represent powers of life and ancestral spirits of the Pueblo Indians. They are usually carved from cottonwood root and clothed and decorated with costume details handed down from generation to generation and that reflect the personality of the individual kachina. BE CAREFUL! There are very strict rules governing trading in kachinas, as some parts of the ornamentations can belong to birds or animals on the endangered species list, and some may have come from sacred burial grounds or may have been used in sacred rituals. These newer examples have an approximate value of $400 to $800 each. Depending on age and condition, they can range up to several thousands of dollars each.

Nancy and Frank Boos are with the Frank H. Boos Gallery, an appraisal firm and auction house at 420 Enterprise Court in Bloomfield Hills that has been in the auction business for more than 30 years. Do you have an item you would like to know about? Send in a good photo of it, along with its description (including size, working parts, etc.) and any known provenance (history) to Treasure Search, The Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham 48009. Include your name, community and phone number.

Capture the drama of clouds

MONTE NAGLER

One subject that has always excited me is clouds. How often does a dramatic cloud pattern catch your eye and you find yourself staring skyward oblivious of other surroundings? We've all marveled at fickle cloud formations constantly changing in shape as they're nudged across the sky by gentle winds.

And we've all shared an ominous feeling at the sight of a fast approaching storm as black clouds threaten to disrupt a serene day.

Clouds come in a variety of shapes, textures and colors. They can be huge and billowy white or soft and wispy. They can be bold and dramatic, even frightening at times. Capturing them on film is truly exciting and will most definitely enhance your photographs.

How to better photograph clouds? First, learn to "see" them. Look for constantly changing shapes and patterns. See how clouds can become a colorful palette as the descending sun paints the sky. Notice how a receding black storm cloud serves as a sensational backdrop for foreground objects being lit by the rays of an emerging sun.

Enjoy foggy, misty days, too. Some of the very best mood-filled pictures are shot in this type of weather.

Once you "see" the clouds, how do you enhance your photographs of them? Begin with a good sense of composition by using a low horizon line to accentuate the clouds and give your shot a feeling of spaciousness.

When shooting white, puffy clouds against a blue sky with color film, use a polarizer filter. Position yourself at a 45-degree angle to the sun and rotate your polarizer until you see maximum blue. The result will be an impact-filled photograph showing the white clouds contrasted against a rich, deep blue sky.

Add spice to your cloud pictures by using colored filters such as orange or red. Used at sunset, these filters with color film (slide preferably) will present you with truly dramatic results.

Black and white film "sees" white clouds and blue sky as an almost identical tone. Thus clouds become lost in the finished print. But filters in yellow, orange and red values will achieve cloud/sky separation for you.

A yellow filter will give you normal cloud/sky separation. Orange produces more. And a red filter renders a blue sky almost black, producing very striking results. A polarizer will also darken the sky in black and white photography.

Traveling by air? Clouds from above have a character all their own as they appear like a bed of fluffy cotton. Just set your camera at a fast shutter speed to eliminate vibration and the shot is yours.

Be on the lookout, also, for sunbeams bursting through clouds. Underexpose slightly and you'll capture them on your film.

Another idea: montage slides of clouds with other images for a truly special look. Clouds superimposed over a tree, a landscape, even a portrait will result in vivid, almost abstract photographs.

So don't be ashamed to "keep your head in the clouds" — as long as your camera's in there, too!

STUCK ON STAMPS

New Marilyn Monroe stamp uses body doubles

JOHN FOXWORTH

■ The signature on the Monroe stamp isn't Marilyn's either! But it's a close facsimile of the original, as penned by a secretary dealing with the volumes of requests received by Monroe.

It's not Marilyn Monroe's body, it's not Marilyn's hand nor her signature! We are, of course, talking about the new Marilyn Monroe stamp issued June 1.

So don't fall in love with the stamp image as it pictures Marilyn only from the neck up! Her body is based on the modeling of two friends of stamp artist Michael Deas of New Orleans. He based his design on a 1953 Monroe photo.

Deas liked the head in the photo but not the angle of the body. He changed the tilt of the head and added the hand. Two friends, Karen Conaway and Julie Gladson, modeled for the body. The hand belongs to Karen.

However, let's not stop yet. The signature on the Monroe stamp isn't Marilyn's either! But it's a close facsimile of the original, as penned by a secretary dealing with the volumes of requests received by Monroe.

It's not unusual for stamp designers to alter or enhance their designs to fit the space available. Will the Monroe stamp suffer? No! There is no doubt that the stamp is a popular winner. Get your sheet(s) soon!

Shuttle Challenger

The ill-fated shuttle Challener, which exploded during launch Jan. 28, 1986, with the loss of the entire crew, finally appears on a stamp. But the new stamp isn't a memorial to that disastrous flight.

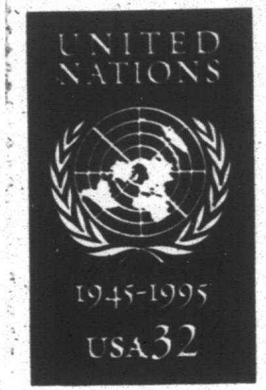

The new stamp shows Challenger in flight on Mission STS-7, June 8-24, 1983. The new Priority Mail stamp is being issued today. It was the Challenger's second flight, commanded by Robert Crippen, and carried Sally Ride, the first U.S. woman into space. For free first day of issue cancels, buy the new stamp(s) locally, affix to an addressed envelope, insert a thin card; tuck in the flap and mail in a larger envelope to: Challenger Stamp, Anaheim, Calif. 92801-9991, by July 21. The thin card inside will get you a better cancel and using address labels that peel off will keep your souvenirs clean.

The 50th anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Charter is marked by a new U.S. stamp and six stamps plus two souvenir sheets from the United Nations. The charter was signed June 26 at the Veterans Memorial Opera House in San Francisco by leaders of 50 nations weary of war.

The new international organization was created to help maintain peace and bring a better life to all peoples. Both the postal service and the UN mark the anniversary with special pictorial cancels. Free first day cancels may be obtained by sending stamped, addressed envelopes to: United Nations Stamp, San Francisco, Calif. 94188-9991 by Aug. 25. Stamps, souvenir sheets and covers with UN stamps may be obtained using a credit card and calling (800) 234-UNPA (8672).

John Foxworth of West Bloomfield is president of the American Philatelic Research Library. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then his mailbox number, 1900. His fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Column to explore enduring art

HUGH GALLAGHER

It's a classic.

They say it about movies, rock music, furniture, cars, paintings.

When other things fade away and no longer have appeal, the classics keep on giving. But why? What makes one thing a product of the moment and another a classic? Why do "In the Mood" and "Cherokee" still get people up on the dance floor while scores of other big band hits have turned to mold? Why does an Eames chair define modern good taste while so many other pieces of "modern" furniture define kitsch?

We will explore classic works here from the fine arts to the popular arts, from furniture design to architecture, from automobiles to bicycles, from Shakespeare to Lennon-McCartney.

Each week we'll explore a classic, we'll ask some experts to tell us what gives a work enduring value and we'll offer some evaluations of our own.

Of course, not everyone agrees what a classic is. One person's classic is another man's claptrap. And while Hank Williams (senior not junior) is a great classic of country music, opera fans or jazz aficionados would find his vocal stylings wanting.

My own tastes are extremely broad in appreciating different styles and approaches but narrow about what I like and don't like within each. Some of these columns will be personal but most will try to define what ranks as a classic within each field.

We'll also try to engage in an ongoing debate about what constitutes art and culture. Three generations of TV watchers have changed the reference points that stimulate art and design, causing great concern among culture watchers.

The idea that high art and culture are being rudely pushed aside by a crass and shallow pop culture suggests the snobbery of academia that elevates complexity of technique over genuiness of feeling. But it also shows a legitimate concern about losing connection with the past and with the artistic ideals and craftsmanship that have defined our heritage.

Though much of popular culture is disposable, there is also much that has value, appeal and artistic richness. Likewise, though much of what has survived as high culture is stimulating, rich and varied, a lot has also become arcane, tiresome and pretentious.

Also, tastes change, reputations rise and fall, the one time classic is now an embarrassment and the one time scandal is now a classic. Does this mean that nothing has enduring value? And if some things do, what gives them that enduring value?

We'll explore these and other topics as we take a look at the classics. My own background includes studying literature and film. I have also had a long interest in popular music and its folk music roots. I will call on the expertise of others to explore industrial design, architecture, painting, sculpture, cityscapes and numerous other areas that have given us classics.

Hugh Gallagher is the assistant managing editor for feature sections at the Observer & Eccentric. He has a longtime interest in the arts. He welcomes your comments and any suggestions you have for discussing a classic.

Neighborly gardeners raise beautiful designs

BY MARTY FIGLEY
STAFF WRITER

Don't miss the chance to see six beautiful gardens during the garden walk sponsored by the Beverly Hills Garden Club. The time and date: 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday, June 27, rain or shine.

Tickets are $4 in advance; call 642-2265 or 362-1961. Tickets on the day of the walk are $5; buy them at the Beverly Hills Park Pavilion on Beverly Road, west of Southfield Road. Maps are printed on the tickets.

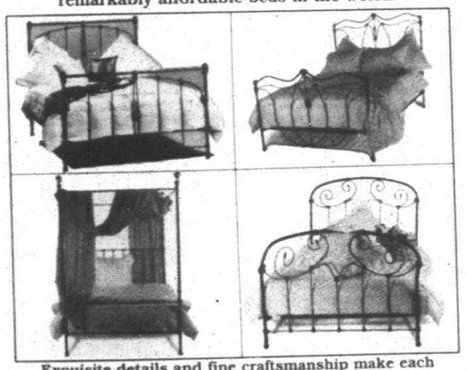

Refreshments and a gift boutique will be available at the park pavilion. The boutique will feature items handmade by members — such as baskets, swags and decorated pots that contain plants as well as other lovely gifts. Visit the booths any time during the day.

A trio of gardens on a small court will be the first stop on the walk. Three gardens side by side have been cared for by long-standing friends and neighbors for many years. These gardens have been coordinated colorwise and each complements the other.

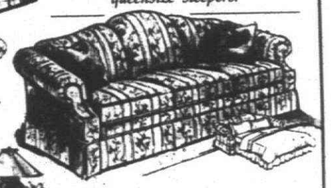

The first abounds with ideas for landscape design — the shrubs and flowering bushes provide constant color. The shrubs provide privacy as well as beauty in the meticulously maintained garden.

The second features a front deck filled with pots of impatiens and cane chairs. The back yard offers ferns and hostas as well as annuals for color.

Irish film goes on special journey

LeANNE ROGERS

A white horse gallops along the shore of a sea, looking almost ghostly in the clear moonlight. Nearby, an elderly man is sitting at his campfire. When the man leaves the next morning in his horse-drawn caravan, the white horse follows.

The delightful 1993 Irish film "Into the West" begins exactly there — the wilds of western Ireland. The man, an Irish Traveler, could be living in some long ago age in the desolate and scenic terrain. But as he continues on his journey, a jet roars overhead and arrives in the slums of modern-day Dublin.

The man's two grandsons, 8 and 12, are living in dilapidated high-rise government housing with their widowed father. Played by Gabriel Byrne, the father had been the king of the Travelers until his wife died. In the years since her death, he no longer travels and spends a good deal of his time drinking. To Travelers, putting down roots is seen as a slow death.

The boys, played by Ruaidhri Conroy and Ciaran Fitzgerald, don't attend school and for the most part are left to their own devices. They join other children help a couple scam a welfare worker to get a large apartment. When a friend's father drinks the welfare payment, they add their own funny twist to successful panhandling.

The horse seems to have come especially for the boys, who have quite a time caring for it in the family flat. The horse winds up in police custody and through some shifty manuevering, races for a rich man. The boys see their missing horse on television and manage to reclaim it. The rich man isn't too happy about losing the horse and the boys, fans of movie Westerns, go on the lam into the west of Ireland fancying themselves quite the outlaws. The police and the boys' father each mount searches. The father's search takes him back to his old traveling companions and the life he had tried to forget.

There is plenty of humour in the film and a bit of a sadness as a family has been splintered by death. Both boys are wonderfully natural and the younger, played by Fitzgerald, is one the most adorable kids you'll ever see.

Directed by Mike Newell with a script by Jim Sheridan, "Into the West" is that rare film that children will love and adults can enjoy. There is a fable-like quality to some elements of the story, which uses Irish myths as an important part of the story.

LeAnne Rogers is a longtime movie buff and film student. If you have a recommendation for a review or a comment, call her at 313-953-2103.30

Investment series talk explores rare coins

"Making 'Cents' of Collecting Rare Coins and Precious Metals" will be the subject of the next program in The Bank of Bloomfield Hills' 1995 Alternative Investment Series, Thursday, June 22.

Well-known Michigan numismatist John Abbott will be the featured speaker. The program will take place 7-8:30 p.m. at the Townsend Hotel in downtown Birmingham. Admission is free but reservations are necessary. For more information or to make reservations, call The Bank of Bloomfield Hills at (810) 540-6224.

Abbott, president of Abbott's Coins in Birmingham, is a highly recognized numismatist not only in Michigan but nationwide. He is sought out by auction houses and financial institutions around the country for his appraisals and evaluations of coins and collections. In business since 1956, Abbott's has expanded in recent years to include jewelry and collectibles, an area in which Abbott's two sons play an active role.

Thursday's seminar is the eighth program in the bank's series, which began in 1994. The series features area experts with tips and advice on buying and investing in various collectibles. The series received the International Association of Business Communicators Award of Excellence in the special event communications category in 1994.

Looking out for themselves

JOHN STOREZAND/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

En garde: Nancy Sielaff, a real estate sales agent and karate black belt, teaches colleagues commonsense self-defense techniques.

She teaches self defense to agents

■ Personal safety is an important part of any job. Real estate agents can learn fairly easy, self-defense techniques from one of their own.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Nancy Sielaff, an associate broker with Coldwell Banker Schweitzer Real Estate in Bloomfield Hills, has received several professional accolades for sales production.

But her reputation is starting to spread for a different reason.

Sielaff, 66, a second-degree karate black belt, wins rave reviews for a seminar she gives to agents and other business people on common-sense self-defense techniques.

Her message, gained from years of training and personal thought on the subject, is simple.

"You must prepare yourself and you must have a plan," she said. "Know what you're going to do. I try to focus on awareness."

Sielaff, an agent for five years, said she's never been assaulted while on the job.

But she decided to learn something about self defense after a friend was beaten up at a mall and focused specifically on karate after a niece was attacked at her home.

Several aspects of learning karate appealed to Sielaff.

"I was having fun. I liked the discipline. Every class you come out learning something," she said.

Real estate agents, who often meet strangers during the course of their work, need to be careful on several accounts. Sielaff shares her expertise with colleagues.

She advises:

■ "On open houses, generally don't do them by yourself. Have at least two people there.

■ "Follow (don't lead) people into a house. Follow them into rooms. You don't allow yourself to be backed into a corner.

■ "We're often in the office alone at night. We keep this door locked after dark.

■ "I make a positive thing of keeping car doors locked always.

■ "Pay attention. Don't go bopping around in an area you shouldn't be and don't walk around with your head down."

People aren't as helpless as they might believe if assaulted from the front or behind, Sielaff said.

She demonstrates several techniques and advocates practice just in case they're needed.

If grabbed at the shoulders from the front, Sielaff jams her knee into the attacker's knee or inner thigh, runs her shoe down the shin, then stomps on the foot.

After the attacker releases his arms, Sielaff said she'd box his ears and/or karate chop his throat. "Then, I'm leaving," she said.

If grabbed at the waist from behind, Sielaff slaps or punches hard at the fingers to escape. "There's a lot of little bones there," she said.

If grabbed at the shoulders from behind, she thrusts her butt into the attacker, simultaneously thrusting her elbows into his stomach.

"The man who taught me said you may never do this, but you have to concentrate," Sielaff said. "You've got to train."

Several agents who have taken her class like what they hear.

"When I walk through parking lots now, I'm not meandering around," said Helga Nisonger, associate broker with Coldwell Banker Schweitzer. "I'm watching cars, looking at who's sitting in cars."

"She demonstrated some defense moves anyone can do, experienced or not," said Eva Lorenz, an associate broker with Max Broock Birmingham.

"You have to act self-confident and be on the lookout."

"She told us to be prepared," said Elaine Schultz, a Realtor with Hall & Hunter in Bloomfield.

"When showing houses, let someone know who we're going to be with, where we're going."

"The best thing I got out of the demonstration is at the end, she made everyone scream "No" like it came out of the bottom depth of you," said Betty Barbour, manager with Coldwell Banker Schweitzer.

"That's enough to make someone realize you don't want to be touched or harmed in any way, shape or form."

Mindset can be just as important as preparation when personal safety is threatened, Sielaff emphasized. Self-defense sometimes requires action.

"We're brought up not to hurt people. Those who attack aren't. You have to give yourself permission to do that.

"That's very important."

Talk to adviser before changing your corporation

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. We are a small developer company who has been doing business as a Subchapter S. Should we reconsider changing our election?

A. Since the top personal tax rates are now higher than corporate rates, many business owners are considering revoking their S corporation elections. The question remains as to whether you should switch to C status.

There is no single rule of thumb that answers this question. There are a number of factors involved, including the following:

A primary advantage to S status is that there is no double taxation on corporate income or on proceeds from the eventual sale or liquidation of the business. Other advantages include the ability to reduce payroll taxes by taking a small (but reasonable) salary and the ability to pass S corporation losses through your personal income tax return.

On the other hand, in addition to the lower income tax rates for corporations, C corporation status allows deductions for a wide range of fringe benefits to its employee owners. Group health, life and disability insurance, deferred compensation plans, medical reimbursement plans, and cafeteria plans are some of the tax-advantaged fringe benefits available to C corporations.

Also, C corporations can have an unlimited number of shareholders, and they can have trusts and nonresident aliens as shareholders.

Again, you should consult with your tax adviser as to the best course of action to take before making any election.

Q. I have been approached by my municipality regarding the condemnation of my property. No complaint for condemnation has been filed. Apparently the fair market value of the property has gone down because of the threat. Do I have any recourse because of that, should condemnation proceedings be begun?

A. A change in the fair market value of property before the date of the filing of a complaint for the condemnation of that property by statute is to be disregarded in determining just compensation for the property if the change is substantially due to the general knowledge of the eminence of condemnation and if the change is not due to physical deterioration that is within the reasonable control of you as the property owner based on a Michigan Statute.

Therefore, it would appear that you would NOT have a basis to seek recovery for the diminution in value of the property merely because of the threat of condemnation proceedings being commenced.

Source of money defines type of real estate lender

DAVID C. MULLY

ON MORTGAGES

What's the difference in the types of mortgage lenders I might use?

Those most commonly used by homeowners are the traditional banks, mortgage bankers and mortgage brokers.

The main differences between these types of lenders is for one, that a bank usually lends its own money for the mortgage and generally keeps servicing your loan in the future (you mail your house payments to this bank).

Mortgage bankers and brokers may lend you their own money but generally lend you another inventor's money for the mortgage and may not continue to service your loan (you may end up mailing your house payment to a different lender).

Some other differences are whether the company you deal with has its own processing, underwriting, appraisal or closing staff. This can possibly affect the type of service you get. If they do not have their own staff, it just means they lose a little control over the service you receive.

Depending on who you talk to, you're going to get some people who prefer one type of lender over another.

Most people form an opinion based on personal experience or what they hear from friends and coworkers. Although this may be helpful, it may be unfair to those who never had a chance for your business because of what others said about them.

The most important thing to remember when making your judgments on which lender to deal with is the individual you're going to be working with, not necessarily the company.

Almost every time I hear about a problem with mortgatge service, it is the individual, not the company that falls down on the job.

So don't necessarily make your judgment on the company from what you hear, try to make it on the individual you're going to be working with, because you could deal with a different person at that same company and have the best experience ever.

Most companies have a sound system in place to give you good service.

Even then, the person who got a bad reputation may not have been at fault. Sometimes people don't bother to hear both sides of the story.

With the big increase over the last few years in the number of mortgage lenders, you need to be careful in who you decide on. Because of the growth in mortgage banking there are going to be employees with limited experience working for lenders.

Shopping for a mortgage is like anything else in that you look for a competitive price, good service, quality in the product or company and strong follow-up service, not just good service when you buy the product.

If you are shopping for a mortgage and would like some assistance feel free to give me a call at 810-981-9118 or toll free at 800-554-5244.

The information and opinions contained in this article are those of Dave Mully, not necessarily those of NBB Bank. Mully has been assisting homeowners with their mortgage needs for several years. He is a mortage representative with NBD Bank. His toll-free number is 1-800-554-5244.

Most Americans hire a pro for buying or selling a house

■ Electronic Realty Associates, with regional headquarters in Farmington Hills, provides 19 different educational opportunities for its agents.

Ninety percent of Americans turn to a local real estate professional when selling or buying a house, said Jeff Genna, spokesman for ERA Real Estate.

That's why Electronic Realty Associates, with regional headquarters in Farmington Hills, provides 19 different educational opportunities for its agents.

Courses are formulated in direct response to meet changing needs of real estate brokers, sales associates and customers. ERA has added six new training courses and three advanced training courses including the selling skills workshop.

Developed by Fernando Licopoli, national training production manager for ERA, selling skills uses interactive video and print materials that simulate real life job scenarios.

The six-day training course, which blends theory with practice, allows the real estate professional to analyze needs and to tailor the latest real estate technologies and services to satisfying individual customers.

Agents who complete the workshop come out with extensive knowledge of the industry that can only benefit prospective clients.

"This revolutionary new approach to training has actually accelerated the learning curve while increasing agent comprehension and results," said Jeanne Ratzow, regional service manager.

"A home purchase is the biggest expenditure of an individual's life. Why not let the most highly-trained agent aid you in the process," Ratzow said.

LuAnn Goodson, training assistant at ERA's worldwide headquarters, echoes similar sentiments.

"As we approach the 21st century, the ability for a Realtor to adapt to a more diverse client base and to maximize efficiency will be critical to both the agent and the consumer," she said.

"That's why a large portion of training is built around utilizing ERA's top-notch software programs," Goodson said.

ERA is a leader in real estate technology with its own database of more than 50,000 houses along with house listings on Prodigy and the Internet.

ERA has more than 2,500 franchised offices, each independently owned and operated.

Clinton says his plan will make house-buying easier

By Tom Raum
AP Newsfeatures

■ 'Red tape will be cut, and aggressive steps will be taken to increase the supply of new, attractive, modest-size affordable homes for first-time buyers.'

Henry Cisneros
Housing Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before an audience of young, first-time house buyers, President Clinton detailed steps he said his administration is taking to make it easier for Americans to buy and finance houses.

"We'll make home ownership more accessible," Clinton said in an East Room ceremony that was fed by satellite to similar events in several dozen U.S. cities earlier this month.

The administration's program is built around a coalition of government entities and banking, real estate and construction groups formed to simplify mortgage procedures and reduce closing costs.

The coalition came up with 100 recommendations, most of them calling for more study.

"Red tape will be cut, and aggressive steps will be taken to increase the supply of new, attractive, modest-size affordable homes for first-time buyers," said Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros.

Since 1980, house ownership has declined from 65.6 percent of all households to about 64 percent. The administration's goal is to increase house ownership by the end of the decade by roughly 8 million units, to 67.5 percent.

The strategy does not create new government programs nor require federal money.

Some steps have already been taken, including a relaxing of federal escrow requirements so that mortgage closing costs can be reduced.

Participating banks and financial organizations have agreed to reduce house-settlement paperwork and make the process simpler and more understandable for average buyers, administration officials said.

Participants on the construction side vowed innovations in housing design and construction technology to reduce the cost of building new houses and repairing existing ones.

Noting the presence of young couples in the audience who had just bought houses, Clinton said, "We have to remember that there are millions of people just like them who believe that home ownership is out of reach."

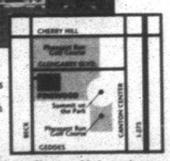

"This is the new way home for the American middle class," he said.

New houses flaunt luxury

Pine Ridge Estates
in Plymouth Township

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

When you buy a house from Robert R. Jones, a West Bloomfield residential builder, you buy customized luxury.

Nowhere is that more evident than Pine Ridge Estates, a subdivision of 33 lots on Ridge Road between Ann Arbor Road and Powell in Plymouth Township. A third are still available.

Standard features in all six floor plans include three-car garage, two furnaces, air conditioning, whirlpool tub, fireplace, cooktop, oven, microwave, dishwasher, first-floor laundry and basement.

Prices start at $371,000 for a two story house of 3,500 square feet with four bedrooms and 3½ baths. The priciest plan, a two story of 4,100 square feet with four bedrooms and 3½ baths, goes for $428,000.

"We want the customer to be able to customize," Jones said. "When they walk into one of our models, they have the ability to change. We kind of look at it as we personalize for them."

There is no typical buyer profile in Pine Ridge Estates, but prospects appear have at least one thing in common — money.

"We have two engineers, three doctors, corporate executives," said Pat Hansen, sales consultant. Business owners and husband/wife teacher combinations also have built in the sub.

"It's one of a kind, really, in Plymouth," Hansen said. "It's away from the expressway. It has a distinctive entry, large lots, unique homes."

"We never repeat an elevation (exterior appearance)," Jones added. "That's our trademark. That's very important."

The spec house used as an on-site sales center illustrates exactly what Jones can do.

The main floor features a library with bay window and built-in bookcases. The living room opens to a dining room.

Crown moldings, oak flooring, upgraded cabinetry and plush carpeting can be found throughout the model.

A separate, second stairway to the basement goes through the attached two-car garage. A second detached two-car garage is accessible to the house by a porte cochere, a covered walkway.

All bedrooms are upstairs.

BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Fancy kitchen: The model at Pine Ridge Estates features many amenities, including a luxurious kitchen with an extra long island.

The master has a double-door entry, bay window, expansive two-sink vanity with sitting area, separate tub and shower, and two walk-in closets.

Two secondary bedrooms, each with a walk-in closet, are separated by a bathroom with a combination tub/shower and two vanities.

The fourth bedroom — or what at first seems like a bedroom — actually is a suite with its own kitchen, bathroom and sitting room.

The suite has a private stairway and would be great for a live-in parent, older child returning to the nest or nanny, Hansen said.

The house has two furnaces, two air conditioning systems and two hot water heaters.

Exterior is brick, wood siding, fieldstone and cedar shakes.

The model, 4,100 square feet, is priced at $576,000. That includes upgrades and landscaping.

Pine Ridge Estates is served by city water and sewers. It's in the Plymouth-Canton school district. A sidewalk winds through on one side of the street. Nearly a quarter of the acreage at the site is dedicated to passive community parkland. Ridge Road fronting the subdivision is unpaved.

The property tax rate at Pine Ridge Estates is now $24.82 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owner of a $400,000 house there would pay $4,964 this year.

John and Phyllis Arlen live in Pine Ridge Estates.

"The thing that really attracted us was only 33 houses in the subdivision," John said. "You have two cul-de-sacs. You have convenience. You're close to the metro area but have easy access to Ann Arbor."

Denise and Ted Makuch also live there.

"We didn't want a sub with 100 homes," Denise said. "We wanted something smaller, a little more exclusive and put in a home that was almost 4,000 square feet.

"I especially like the fact that the master bedroom is on the first floor," Denise said. "I have a formal dining room and a spacious family room."

The sales office at Pine Ridge Estates, (313) 454-9484, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.
