Sub changes sought

Canton officials told the Phoenix and Selective development companies to go back to the drawing board and revise plans for a proposed 676-acre development that would include houses, condos, park and golf course.

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

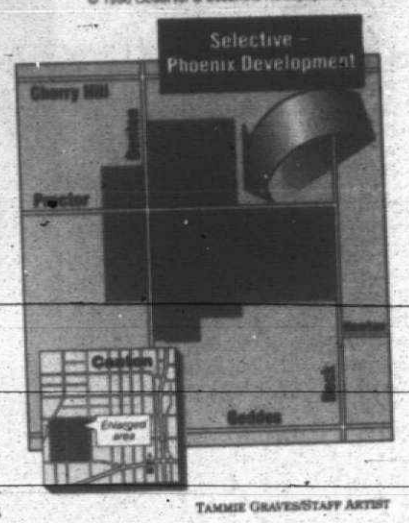

Canton Township trustees informally agreed Monday to ask the developers of a proposed 676-acre, 900-house subdivision to drastically alter their plans.

The proposed subdivision resembles an oddly shaped cross with the east side abutting Beck Road at the Pheasant Run Golf Course and the west side extending a quarter mile west of Denton. Each limb of the cross is more than a mile long.

The landowner, Phoenix Development Co., has partnered with Selective Development Co. to transform the land into a Planned Development District featuring houses, condominiums, a nine-hole golf course and a 41-acre park complete with soccer fields. Both developers are based in Farmington Hills.

Because a planned development district is a development plan for a large area that requires flexibility in development standards and a certain amount of open space, township officials have more latitude than usual in bargaining with developers to get what they want.

Pumpkin lover hits the big time

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Canton Township resident Jeff Cooper Jr. doesn't quite understand why, but he has long been fascinated by pumpkins.

Although he doesn't remember it, Cooper's parents tell him that he began drawing pictures of pumpkins at age 1.

Two years later when he first went out trick-or-treating on Halloween he "didn't ask for candy. I looked at every pumpkin and kissed it."

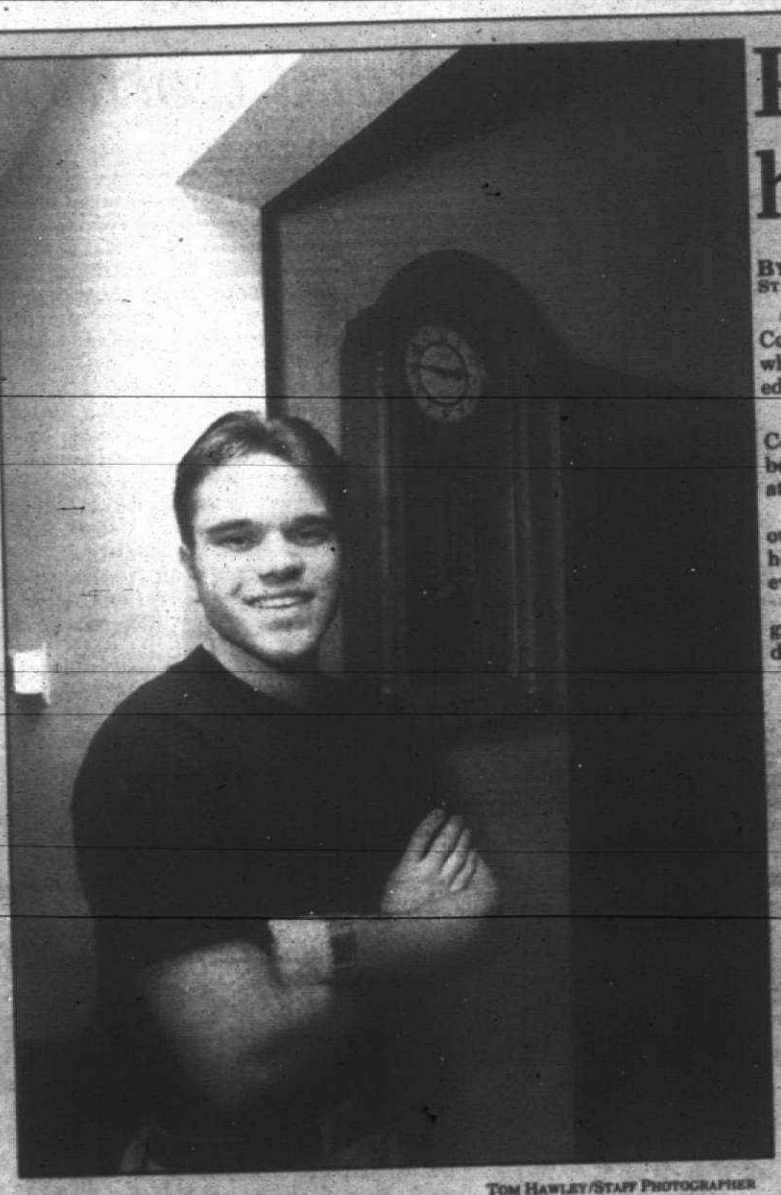

Once Cooper turned 8 he began to grow pumpkins in the backyard garden, which led to carving them.

Every year since, Cooper has carved pumpkins, getting more and more elaborate and detailed in his work as the years passed.

Then late last year the 19-year-old wunderkind hit the big time. A pumpkin he carved won the $1,500 grand prize in a nationwide contest put on by Pumpkin Masters, Inc. of Denver, Colo.

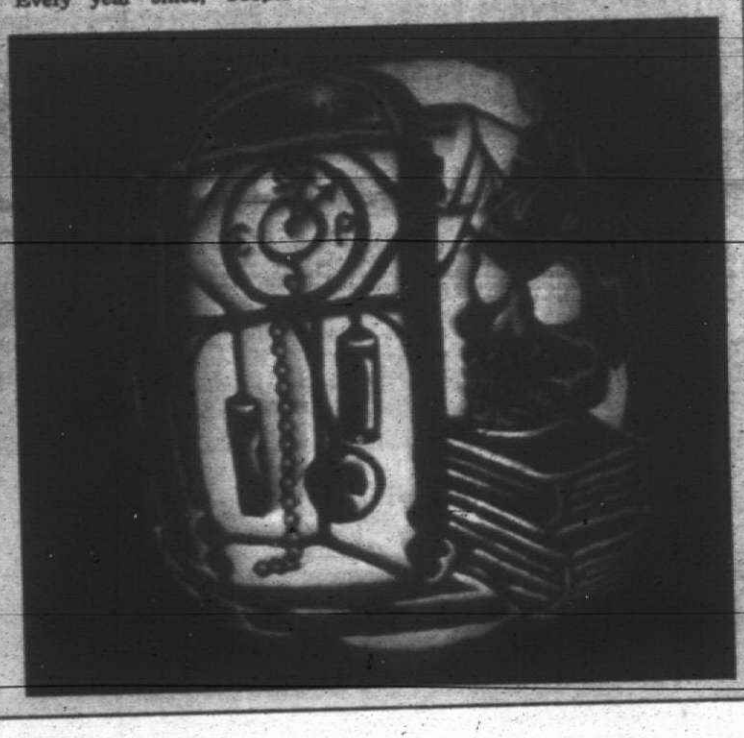

The winning design featured one of the many chiming clocks Jeff Cooper Sr. keeps in the house. Cooper the younger nearly named the pumpkin. "Just a Tic-Toc to Midnight," but changed it to "Just a Tic-Toc to All Hallow's Eve," which he credits for the victory.

Schools look to scrap swimming requirement

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Swimming may be discontinued as a graduation requirement in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools beginning with the Class of 2000.

The topic is up for discussion now that the state has dropped swimming as a mandated part of the curriculum.

At Monday's school board meeting, board members, staff and parents offered their viewpoints. A high school student — one of several swim team members who failed the district's "opt-out" test for credit — objected to the way the district handled her situation.

Superintendent Charles Little said he supports the swim requirement. "I firmly believe physical education has a role in schools," he said. "We should be educating the whole youngster. But I'm not pleased with the way we deliver phys ed."

The athletic department is "looking at different ways to deliver our physical education program," Little added. "I would spread it over four years and make it more of a wellness-for-life program."

Board Treasurer Michael Maloney said the board should seek input from the community. "If the state is no longer requiring swimming, we need to give folks the opportunity to come to us and tell us what they think."

Trustee Barbara Graham objected to the fact that 65 percent is considered a passing grade in swim class, yet 75 percent is required to opt out and receive the mandated half-credit.

"It just doesn't make sense," she said. "If a student has received instruction outside of our program, it's a waste of time and money for him to take it again." Perhaps the district should raise the requirement to pass to 75 percent, she added.

"You're right, but that's the what the state set up," said board President Dave Artley.

Little said if the district eliminates physical education or the half-credit swim requirement, "the net effect would be some people would be displaced from their jobs. We have people with K-8 certification that would end up in a middle school situation. It might be a damaging move to release those teachers."

Parent Connie Reeder of Canton was among the parents who told the board seven months ago that her youngster competes on teams in and out of the district, yet failed the opt-out test.

"After all these months, the appeal of these kids has been blown out of proportion into a districtwide issue," she said. "Instead of looking at these kids' portfolios and saying, 'Yeah, we made a mistake,' no one has considered their appeals. They've been pushed aside."

Marie Pochron is on the Canton High School swim team, competes with the Cruisers and on a softball team, and lifts weights. She told the board she received a 75-percent on the swim opt-out test, and didn't receive credit. "What do I do?" she asked. "Taking classes in the summer takes a lot of money. My preference is to take classes for my career."

Condominiums proposed to replace office use

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Many Mayfair Village subdivision residents would be satisfied with a plan to build condominiums on nearby land rezoned from office to residential. But there are a few homeowners who wouldn't mind offices.

"For the 16 years (lived there) we wanted to make sure it wasn't some HUD (Department of Housing and Urban Development) high-rise," said resident Brooke Disbrow, adding she also doesn't want another gas station like one west of the subdivision.

But others made it clear they preferred a doctor's office behind their houses on the southeast corner of Joy and Sheldon roads. When the offices close, traffic is gone, and the building is closed.

■ But Canton planning commissioners agreed to amend a consent judgment on the property and to recommend rezoning from office to residential for single-family attached condominiums.

"I don't want condos," said a Mayfair resident.

But Canton planning commissioners agreed to amend a consent judgment on the property and to recommend rezoning from office to residential for single-family attached condominiums.

"We're trying to develop here a small, intimate development," said Randy Morris of R&R Development Corp.

The five acres is part of what has long been called the Moceri consent judgment. The proposed amendment to the judgment must receive approval from the Township Board before the property owner — no longer Moceri — takes it to Wayne County Circuit Court for final approval.

"The consent judgment limits it to office use," said Jeff Goulet, Canton community planner.

Morris said he plans to develop 30 attached, one-story condominiums, called Partridge Place Condominiums, which is likely to have one entrance and exit. He told planning commissioners he will meet

Students explore legacy of civil rights crusader

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

At schools throughout the Plymouth-Canton district, students and teachers recognized Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on what would have been his 66th birthday.

Tom Workman, acting principal at Miller Elementary, produced a video with media specialist Tony Corrigan. Miller students helping out with the text included Melissa Henry, Jean Bemish, Crystal Bacchus and Jaime Paffenroth, and Erica Starkey, who is a relative through marriage of Dr. King.

Workman told students that "Some feel that Dr. King was the most significant American of this century. He spoke to the people of our nation about war, peace, social injustice, racial discrimination, our obligation to the poor, and of non-violence. He was concerned for white Americans and black Americans alike.

"Martin Luther King talked the talk and walked the walk. He never retreated, apologized, or begged for mercy. He was true to his belief and because he was here, you and I are more able to realize our American Dream. Dr. King was among the greatest influences on American life in the 20th century. He is the greatest American of my lifetime."

Erica said that her relative was a great man "because he let people get together and talk about their rights."

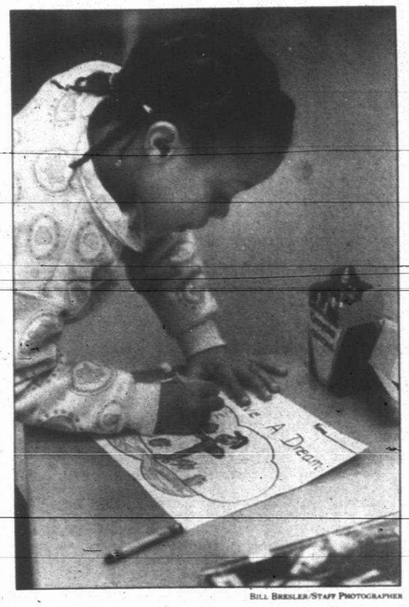

Her classmate, Ryan Johnson, said King "stopped all the violence and made everyone love each other and get along instead of hating each other."

Ryan Wheeler said "He put people in front of himself. He cared about people more than himself."

Fifth-grader Joe Karasin said "Dr. King knew he was going to get shot. He told his wife he wouldn't live to be older. I personally, if I knew I was going to get shot, I might have backed down from doing it. I want to live 'til I'm older. He was a man who believed in his rights, and not just his own, but the rights of other people."

Fifth-grader Brianne Drwonek said what Dr. King did was really important.

"Now we can have blacks and whites in the same schools, using the same bathrooms and water fountains. Even though we still have racism, he did a lot."

Bill Bresler/Staff Photographer

Student Christie Aoun said, "I think Dr. King didn't just take the black side because he was black. He didn't care if he got shot. He wanted people to live happier."

Mandy Bradley said "If it weren't for him, I wouldn't have a lot of new friends, because some of my good friends are black."

Workman said it's important for black children to have their heroes recognized. "It's very important for all groups to keep their heroes in the forefront for all of us."

At Bird Elementary, Carol Breed's first-graders did a presentation for older students, read books and wrote about Dr. King. The class collaborated on a paper mosaic of the slain civil rights leader.

"He helped black and white people go to the same schools and use the same drinking fountains," said first-grader Joey Daniels. "He helped people to go on the same bus and to the same restaurants," Stephen Lozier said.

Foundation benefits from hard work of its supporters

Some 1,100 individuals mingled, danced and ate a four-course meal Friday, Jan. 12, at Laurel Manor in Livonia as they raised about $45,000 to benefit the Canton Community Foundation.

The main ballroom at Laurel Manor was filled with 110 tables garnished with elaborate balloon centerpieces and a bandstand where Blue Jeans performed pop tunes for the dancers after dinner.

The centerpieces were designed and assembled by Burda Brothers, which used more than 1,400 balloons and a great volume of helium.

Tickets went for $60 per person, giving the foundation a profit of $28 per person. Proceeds are used for the foundation's endowment fund and for grants to help community organizations.

Credit for inventing the foundation ball goes to Pama Investments President Robert Paciocco, who is also president of the foundation.

Foundation Director Joan Noricks said Paciocco hatched the idea in 1994 and helped plan the first ball in January 1995, which raised $47,000.

Paciocco was also responsible for selling about 700 tickets for the most recent ball, Noricks said.

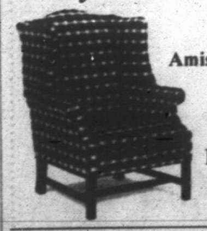

The main sponsors of the ball are Pama Investments, Moretti Foundation Co., Macom Co., DiPonio Construction, B&V Construction, Star Contracting, Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May, Sunflower Seven Associates, Stante Excavating, Dietrich, Bailey and Associates, Canton Waste Recycling, Wade-Trim, Multi Building Co., Tony Angelo Cement Construction, Romano Landscape Co., Image Glass Works, Tri Star Fire Protection, Rabaut Plumbing & Mechanical East, Tyrrell Electric, Detroit Concrete Products Corp., Michigan Cat, M.W. Mundos left the corporate grind

■ The Mundos formed American Automotive Design in 1985, with Jim handling the technological aspect and April seeing to the management duties.

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Friends, family and co-workers thought April and Jim Mundo "were absolutely nuts" when they quit their high-paying, white-collar jobs at Ford Motor Co. in 1983 and got married, April Mundo said.

Jim Mundo had been part of the design team that created the Ford Taurus, which, he said, was nearly destroyed by Henry Ford after Lee Iacocca was shown the door.

"I was working seven days a week," Mundo said. "It was a nightmare. People just lived (in the office). One of these days when I get free time I need to write a book about the Taurus. There wasn't a facet of human life that wasn't involved."

When time came to claim credit for the Taurus' design, Mundo said, none of Iacocca's original team members were recognized, allegedly because Henry Ford held a grudge against Iacocca.

By 1983 the Mundos had seen enough. "I kept looking upstream and couldn't see any jobs I wanted," Jim Mundo said.

So the Mundos left Ford and spent the summer of '83 living in a tent on various beaches along the Eastern seaboard.

"We simply didn't want to be wage slaves anymore," Jim Mundo said.

Although Jim Mundo took one more "wage slave" job with Volvo down south, two years later he quit, came to Canton Township and started a consulting business.

The Mundos formed American Automotive Design in 1985, with Jim handling the technological aspect and April seeing to the management duties. "And it worked. We were able to get contracts, make money and live."

Yet something was still missing. "You can't build any equity (in consulting)," Jim Mundo said. "It's just live and work.

"Our No. 1 objective is freedom. We wanted to be free to pursue life the way we want to pursue it."

In the consulting business, the Mundos found themselves immersed in computers, which polished Jim Mundo's programming ability and showed him the need for something like PC Snoop.

"There are no real support systems out there to enable (companies) to get the job done," Jim Mundo said.

Still, it wasn't easy selling PC Snoop in the beginning because many business owners who have never had computer trouble don't believe they ever will.

"If you haven't been stung, you believe you're not going to get stung," Mundo said. "These people don't want to buy any remedies or medicine until they get sick."

To date, the Mundos have sold nearly 300 copies of the program and expect to sell many more.

See the accompanying article for more information about PC Snoop.

Couple creates powerful program

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

A Canton Township couple have created a "baby" so powerful that it may be safely compared to a nuclear bomb for its ability to destroy the information on a computer floppy disk or hard drive.

April Mundo refers to "PC Snoop," the software program her husband created, as "our baby," but the program's capabilities are more accurately reflected by comparison to former Chicago Bears linebacker Dick Butkus.

"There's just a hell of a hidden danger here," Jim Mundo said. A PC Snoop user "could hose your computer, and hose it permanently. You can totally clobber someone."

The former McDonnell-Douglas and Ford engineer created PC Snoop over the last five years and began selling it for $59.95 last November.

But like most destructive forces, PC Snoop may also be put to constructive use. Unlike mainstream software programs that manage computer files, PC Snoop operates on a basic level, permitting users to examine and alter files and programs on a byte-by-byte basis.

Most computer users, Jim Mundo said, don't realize that "deleted" files are not deleted in the literal sense, but rather marked for overwriting. Deleted files continue to exist on floppy disks and hard drives until the computer needs the space to store additional information. Computers will not overwrite deleted files until a disk's "virgin" territory is filled.

"You can't get rid of that data unless you have a piece of software that is specifically meant to get rid of that data," Mundo said.

PC Snoop can be particularly valuable to companies that store information on computers, Mundo said. It may be used to retrieve partly overwritten files, to pick up the pieces when a system crashes, to defeat passwords known only to recently dismissed employees, and to encrypt sensitive files.

And since many companies lease computers, Mundo said, they can use PC Snoop to erase sensitive information from the hard drive before returning the computer.

"The hard drive is just sitting there wide open," Mundo said. "And businesses are amazingly stupid about the computer. There's a war going on out there with people trying to steal software."

Like a gun that can be used to protect its owner or to kill innocent people, PC Snoop can also be put to use to violate privacy and take revenge.

"It gives people the chance to be greedy," Mundo said. "You're not supposed to be doing that, but you can."

But like gun shop owners, April Mundo said, she and her husband "can't be the judge" of what customers do with the software. "We can't play God."

You may also buy PC Snoop with a credit card by calling (313) 981-9630. Internet users may contact the Mundos by visiting the World Wide Web page http://www.adcomm.com/pcsnoop/, or by sending E-mail to mundoaprmetronet.lib.mi.us.

State considering interchange at I-275 and Cherry Hill

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

What do you think of a new interchange at I-275 and Cherry Hill Road?

A handful of Michigan Department of Transportation staff are looking at that possibility.

"We have a technical group that's evaluating the proposal from the township for a Cherry Hill interchange," said Bob Kirkbride, MDOT manager of program planning.

Some of items that require study before a stamp of approval is put on the idea are spacing standards, traffic volumes, environmental issues, rights-of-way, how an additional interchange would effect the freeway and the local roads around the freeway.

"I think we need one, basically," said Canton Supervisor Tom Yack, referring to an additional interchange into Canton off I-275.

An exit at Warren Road is logical, but MDOT officials say that location is difficult because Haggerty Road is so close to I-275. There are barriers to the interchange on three corners of Warren and Haggerty, with either a building or wetlands as on the east side of the intersection, Yack said.

He called the look at a Cherry Hill exit good and bad news. An interchange would add extra traffic in the area. On the other hand, I-275 traffic coming in or out of Canton would then have three routes — Ford Road, Michigan Avenue and Cherry Hill Road.

The study is expected to be completed within the next two months.

"Ultimately, if the decision is to go ahead and put it on the federal aid interchange system, it has to be justified to the federal highway administration that it doesn't degrade the freeway," Kirkbride said.

Window shootout count rises

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

The damage count has grown higher, since someone decided to shoot out car windows throughout the night of Jan. 8.

"We now have well over 200-250 calls from people with shot-out windows," said Lew Stevens, Canton police community relations officer.

"I think there were a few who came in today. But it's now tapering off," Stevens added last Thursday, referring to residents making police reports.

The cars whose windows were shot out by BBs or pellets were parked on streets in subdivisions, primarily north of Ford Road, although some homeowners south of Ford were also victimized.

"They (detectives) have a couple of leads," Stevens said. "How good they are, I don't know."

Resident reports theft of tools

Listed below are some of the Canton police and emergency incidents reported recently.

■ BREAK-IN

A 31-year-old resident of a mobile home park on Geddes told police that $3,000 worth of tools were taken from his shed.

A tool box worth $300 was also reported stolen. Police found the lock pried off the shed. The theft occurred between Jan. 4 and Jan. 11, according to the police report.

■ LARCENY

A 41-year-old representative of Singh Construction told police that $835 worth of building supplies were taken from a house under construction between 4:30 p.m. Jan. 8 and 8 a.m. Jan. 9.

Reported missing were 20 feet of copper tubing ($125), a gasoline-powered water pump ($350) and six boxes of screws ($360).

■ STOLEN VEHICLE

A 54-year-old man from the 1400 block of Walnut Ridge told police a 1983 Cadillac El Dorado was taken from his garage between 4-6:45 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 9.

A new car next to the Caddy was not touched, according to the police report. The man said he thinks the garage was locked, but he was having trouble with his electric garage door opener in the cold weather, the police report stated.

■ HIT AND RUN

A 32-year-old woman from the 6500 block of Marshall told police that her son's remote control car was run over by a green van at 5:40 p.m. Jan. 3.

The van came up over the curb and struck the remote control car, according to the police report.

The remote control car was worth $65, according to the police report.

Township looks to avoid repeat of larceny from treasurer's office

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Canton Township officials are trying to make sure that no additional money will be stolen from the treasurer's office.

Officials were surprised Jan. 4 to hear that $1,000 in cash and $10,125 in checks were stolen from the treasurer's office the night before.

A 25-year-old janitor confessed to the crime and returned the cash, police said. He had destroyed the checks, according to police. Residents whose checks were destroyed have been notified.

Police have not yet arrested the janitor, but have a warrant and expect to charge him with larceny from a building, said police spokesman Lew Stevens.

The janitor is not an employee of the township, but of Midwest Maintenance Services, a company the township hires to clean its buildings.

The money and the checks were delivered by Parks and Recreation staff to township hall after business hours Jan. 3. However, they weren't put inside the night drop box, but rather slipped under the door of the treasurer's vault, police said.

Ordinarily, large, after-hours deposits are put into the drop box by using a key, said Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter, but Parks and Recreation staff, having just moved to the Summit Center, didn't have a key yet. That's why the envelope containing the cash and checks was slid under the vault room door.

"The rule is that you either put it in the drop box, or you hand it to one of our staff," Kirchgatter said.

The janitor said he got to the money by using a key to the vault room that he had found, police said.

Kirchgatter said she has ordered a new keyless combination lock for the vault room.

Supervisor Tom Yack said, "The procedures were fine. They just weren't followed as closely as they could have been."

Michigan GOP leader to speak

Susy Heintz, chairperson of the Michigan Republican Party, will be the featured speaker at the Canton Economic Club at noon Wednesday, Jan. 31.

Heintz, a former Wayne County Commissioner from the 10th District and former supervisor in Northville Township, will discuss leadership in the 1990s.

The Jan. 31 program will be held at Summit on the Park, Canton's new community center on Summit Parkway (Palmer Road) off Canton Center Road. Reservations are needed. Call 981-3002.

Heintz' role in the Republican Party has been on the fast track since her days as a volunteer for the late Gov. George Romney's campaign in 1962. Heintz began her career in politics as a teenager when her father, former Mt. Clemens mayor Bert VandeVusse, encouraged her to volunteer.

Heintz has since held many grassroots positions in the GOP including precinct delegate, charter member of the Republican Business and Professional Women's Forum and delegate to the 1992 GOP Convention in Houston.

In addition, she has served as an elected official. She was the sole Republican on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners from 1986-1990 and while on the board served as vice chair. She served as township trustee, clerk and then supervisor in Northville Township.

She was a member of the executive committee of the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments.

She left her seat on the Wayne County Board to join Gov. John Engler's administration as director of his southeastern Michigan office in 1991. She was appointed as chair of Engler's 1995 Inaugural Committee.

A Birmingham resident, Heintz is the mother of two grown children, Julie, 22, and Jim, 19.

The Canton Economic Club is in its seventh season and features monthly speakers from business, industry and government. The group is sponsored this season by Rudolph Libbe and the Observer Newspapers.

For more information about the Canton Economic Club, contact Joan Noricks, executive director of the Canton Community Foundation, at 981-3002.

Pumpkin from page 1A

"I almost named it the wrong name," he said. "It wouldn't have won. It wouldn't have been relevant to Halloween."

A regular at the Trumpet Sound church in Northville, Cooper credits the Almighty for his pumpkin prowess. "This is a God-given talent," he said.

Still, Cooper wonders where are the roots of his obsession. "I asked my mom, 'Why do I like pumpkins so much?'" he said. All she could think of is, "When I was little she called me 'pumpkin.'"

Cooper especially wants Uncle Mark to hear about the award because when Cooper was 13 Uncle Mark said, "you'll grow out of it." I remember it very well and how mad it made me," Cooper said.

With no room in the current Cooper yard for a garden, the 1995 Wayne-Memorial graduate had to buy his raw material last year. He purchased five pumpkins for $40 from a house near Five Mile and Beck.

Cooper dreams up his own patterns and draws them on paper before taking up his knife. Once the vegetables are completely crafted he shrouds them in garbage bags with a bit of water to preserve them as long as possible, which is about two weeks. "At first I don't want (them) to rot," Cooper said. "After a couple of weeks it doesn't matter. I can do it again."

"My dad always goes, 'Why don't you do something that lasts?'"

Perhaps following dad's advice, in part, Cooper hopes to parlay his ability into a lasting career.

"I'm hoping this will launch off into finding a job," he said. "I'm hoping somebody will notice this."

In the interim, anyone possessing a quality pumpkin in need of a good home would do well to call Cooper. "If you give it to me in June (or any other month), I'll carve it," he said.

Trustee Melissa McLaughlin characterized what the board decided to ask the developers to change when she said, "They need to get rid of this paper and start all over again."

The developers are proposing to:

- obliterate a stretch of Proctor Road from a point west of Denton to a point west of Beck, providing no alternative road for people to use.
- build 309 of 903 houses on 70- to 80-foot lots.

These parts of the plan are unacceptable to the board. Goulet was told to contact the developers and request that lots be a minimum of 85 feet in width to a point one-half mile west of Beck. Lots west of that point should be wider, the board said, culminating in 120-foot-wide, half-acre lots west of Denton.

Developers will also be asked to replace Proctor Road with a "landscaped boulevard," such as a wide road with a median, to align with the entrance to Pheasant View subdivision at Beck and align with Proctor at Denton. A second such road should loop around the south side of the development and align with any planned subdivision entrance west of Denton.

In addition, the developers will be asked to pay for golf-cart tunnels under Beck Road to accommodate Pheasant Run golfers playing the new nine holes.

The developers are also asked to check with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality for permission to build a golf course so close to the Lower Rouge River, where contamination of the river or flooding might be a problem.

Supervisor Tom Yack said area golfers would probably welcome additional holes. "This community could probably support three golf courses easily, especially as we grow," he said.

The district recently lowered the opt-out passing score from 85 to 75 for students, effective with the Class of 2000.

"Sometimes we as adults can't give you an answer you'd like right now," said Artley.

"I'd suggest you go back out and talk to the teacher," said Little.

"We did go, and he was no help at all," Pochron said. "The board is so wishy-washy it's ridiculous," said Pochron's mother.

Graham came to their defense. "This is ridiculous. This young person is getting the idea we don't know what we are doing, and I'm getting the sense that's correct."

Tom Tattan, director of instruction, said Pochron could take her appeal to a formal panel at the high school.

Canton parent Carol Bollman said her son, a competitive swimmer since the age of 6, is in the same situation.

In districts including Livonia, South Lyon, Brighton and Ann Arbor, if a student competes on an athletic team for two seasons, they receive physical education credit, she said. "They can then take another class in math, computer, English or foreign language."

Bollman said her son "wasn't allowed the opportunity to take the test-out, because he was not an incoming freshman."

Retired teacher and football coach Tom Moshimer made a passionate plea to the board to keep the physical education requirement.

Studies show that Michigan residents "are near the top in the deaths caused by stroke, diabetes and cardiovascular disease — conditions directly linked to the couch-potato lifestyle."

with homeowners to talk about different types of screening between the condos and the homes that will abut the development. Morris also said he has contacted a landscape architect for the project.

Residents told planning commissioners that Mayfair Village does not have an official homeowners association and many homeowners have not yet been contacted by the developer.

"I think attached residential provides a nice transition on the corner," said Goulet, referring to the busy intersection at Sheldon and Joy. "Office would be a lot more intrusive. With office, you have lights behind the building."

Goulet said the condominiums will be available in two- and four-unit buildings with 60 feet between the subdivision homeowners' property line and the condos. With office, only a 30-foot setback is required.

'Vintage Newt'

Stirring speech wows local crowd

■ Saying a battle on the homefront is exactly where the United States is today, Gingrich, the GOP leader from Georgia, said getting "our house in order" is far more important than what is happening in Bosnia, Haiti, Russia or China.

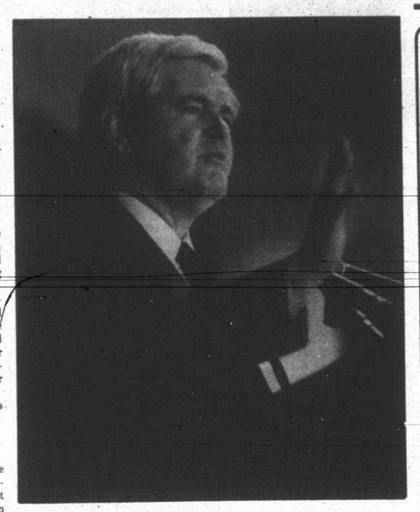

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

In what was described as "vintage Newt," U.S. Rep. Newt Gingrich, speaker of the House, discussed the "battle on the homefront" Tuesday at Burton Manor in Livonia.

Gingrich, who addressed about 2,600 mostly business people and political leaders at a meeting of the Economic Club of Detroit, borrowed the title of his speech from a speech called "The Battle on the Homefront" given by Sam Rayburn, who was the last speaker of the House to address the club in 1944. Meanwhile, between 800 and 900 protesters picketed outside Burton Manor, according to Livonia police.

Saying a battle on the homefront is exactly where the United States is today, Gingrich, the GOP leader from Georgia, said getting "our house in order" is far more important than what is happening in Bosnia, Haiti, Russia or China.

"We are in a time of enormous choices for our country," he said.

■ U.S. Rep. Newt Gingrich, speaker of the House, discussed the "battle on the homefront" Tuesday before a crowd of some 2,600 mostly business people and political leaders at Burton Manor in Livonia.

Challenges to face

The first challenge is to be competitive, he said. With problems such as a tax code that "isn't right" and an education system that is inadequate, the United States can't hope to compete in the future, he said.

The second challenge is to enter the information age. "We are not, I think, even at the point of Henry Ford and the assembly line in terms of the information age," he said.

He used former President Ronald Reagan's line "You ain't seen nothin' yet," in describing what the future holds in the information age.

Praises Engler

He compared himself to Engler. "We charge straight ahead and hope you'll figure out later why we were right," he said.

He held up charter schools as an example of Engler's work, saying parents in Detroit should be asking for charter schools. Parents should want a school of the future that actually is a learning experience and not a baby-sitting service, he said.

In criticizing those who have criticized cuts in government assistance, Gingrich said those receiving benefits from the government should turn off the soap operas, get off their tail and do something.

Every time a social worker says that a person is disadvantaged and can't be expected to do more, it is a sin against that person's birthright, he said.

"I will bet you in a very few years all unemployment compensation will be based on learning," he said. The welfare state is a well-meaning system that has failed totally, he said. "The safety net has become a strangling net."

On the issue of the national debt, Gingrich said that a child born last year already owes $185,000 in interest on the debt.

"It's not just a financial issue, it is morally wrong in peace time . . ." he said. "We're robbing our children of their future by having a deficit," he said.

He said he doesn't know where the budget talks, which resumed Wednesday, are headed. If there is no budget agreement and interest rates go up, while jobs go down, the country will be slicing into a recession, he said.

Budget battle

In response to a question about why seven years is the timetable for balancing the budget and whether that's non-negotiable, Gingrich said, "It's not non-negotiable; we can do it in six or five."

In talking with successful CEOs, Gingrich said he's told that tough deadlines and very, very high standards are important to meet challenges.

If it goes beyond seven years, then people feel nothing needs to be done immediately.

In response to a question referring to the protesters outside, he said they were misinformed by the people who brought them there, and at one point said being productive is better than picketing.

"We're trying to liberate and help the poor," he said.

Local reaction

Gingrich's talk sparked a positive reaction in the audience.

"He was very inspirational. He believes that we can be great," said Jack McDonald, who taught school in Livonia for 30 years. "He inspires us to be better."

Connie Hogan of Bloomfield Hills, an employee of General Motors in Detroit, said she thought the speech was "vintage Newt" and was "fabulous." "He's just what America needs."

Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey was impressed by Gingrich's ability to deliver a speech. "Obviously he's a master at that."

Although the speech was obviously partisan in nature, Kirksey, who is a Republican, said it was a good speech because Gingrich has the ability to simplify things. "He's an effective communicator." But Kirksey didn't agree on the charter schools issue, which he said Gingrich oversimplified.

Wayne County Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton Township, who had heard Gingrich speak several times before, found the speaker informative and challenging.

He was disappointed that there were people picketing. "I can understand that people disagree . . ." he said. He said he had heard the Rev. Jesse Jackson speak recently and that Jackson also challenges people to think. "Both men challenge you to think."

When Jim wanted better care— his friends suggested a move to The Arnold Home.

It's a common story. A loved one goes to an assisted living or nursing home, expecting good care. Then the realization sets in that the care is not what was expected. When that disillusionment hit Jim, his friends suggested he move to The Arnold Home. Residents have a choice of beautifully appointed and affordable one bedroom apartments or deluxe, private rooms. A supportive staff gives Arnold Home residents the assistance and encouragement to remain active, involved and independent. Is Jim happy? Ask him. "These people give you personal attention. I like the fact that health care service is individually developed for each of us. There's just a lot of peace of mind here." If you'd like peace of mind, call the Arnold Home at 313-531-4001 and ask for Mary Cobello. The Arnold Home guarantees your satisfaction.

Middle schoolers ice contest winners

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

Hats off to Steve Guido of Lowell Middle School; Paul Shawe of Central Middle School; Joseph Karas of West Middle School; Ryan Scott of Pioneer Middle School; and Krystal Burd of East Middle School.

They won the Observer Middle School Ice Sculpture Design contest.

Middle school students were asked to submit drawings to be carved in the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular. Carvers from Henry Ford Community College sculpted their creations Monday in the Gathering at Kellogg Park.

"It was pretty cool," said Guido, who drew the Cat in the Hat.

"I didn't think I was going to win; I did it just for fun. I think it's pretty cool they could make this out of ice."

"This was the first year I ever tried to do it," said Krystal Burd, who designed a butterfly ice carving. "I did it in my creative skills class. I couldn't believe I won."

Paul Shawe carved "Cecil the Turtle." "It's been fun," he said. "I like drawing and designing things. I want to be an engineer and design cars."

Gerald Benson, president of the HFCC Snow and Ice Carving Club, said he enjoyed working with the middle schoolers. "Kids are what it's all about," he said.

"I loved it. The more interest we can get among younger people, the better. Hopefully when they get into college they'll pursue ice carving."

"We are trying to get more of the children involved," said festival organizer Mike Watts, "and Richard Teeple of Henry Ford Community College volunteered to become the educational coordinator for this event.

"We're real pleased he did."

"What we've done for the last few years is go to art teachers in the middle schools and asked if they could have students as part of a class project submit a design for an ice sculpture. Teachers narrow it down to the top 10 at each school."

Judges of the contest are Watts, his wife Sandra, and Teeple, who is a Plymouth resident, certified culinary arts instructor, and executive chef as well as a nationally certified ice carving judge.

"We look for what would be not only the best drawing, but the best ice carving. We select one from each school, and those children are invited to the Gathering," said Watts. "Richard and his students from Henry Ford then carve those figures on Martin Luther King Day, and the students are invited to the park to see their art work and to have their pictures taken. Winners also received certificates for what they've done."

Teeple and his student carvers also visited Smith Elementary, where they carved sculptures designed by students.

"Richard has always done an exhibition at Smith where his kids went to school. This year, we used the designs as carvings for the street sculptures. It was a neat touch and people seemed to enjoy it," Watts said.

Sandra Watts lamented the fact there is no art at East or West middle school. "Teachers in other classes volunteered to help with the contest," she said. "It's a shame they still don't have art classes."

Condos to replace shopping center

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Canton Township has won the latest round in the battle of the Planned Unit Development districts.

Township trustees gave unanimous approval Tuesday, Jan. 9, to the rezoning of a 14-acre parcel of land on the northwest corner of Palmer and Haggerty from commercial to residential.

The owner of the land, Bayberry Park Inc., plans to build condominiums instead of a shopping center, which the owners could have done if they wanted to.

The property is part of the Century Farms Planned Unit Development district, one of 20 PUDs created in the 1970s. Planning commissioners Jan. 8 recommended approval of a site plan for the Bayberry Park Condominiums. Township trustees will consider the site plan in the near future.

A maximum 60 condominiums are proposed for Bayberry Park. The complex will have two entrances, one on Palmer, the other on Haggerty. The complex also will have no sidewalks, but will have private roads. Condo prices are estimated in the $150,000 range.

Several residents at the planning commission meeting said that, in a neighborhood vote, they have already received 75 percent preference for the condominium complex. One homeowner, the residents said, was disappointed there would be no Arbor Drugs at the site.

The controversial PUD agreements that have plagued the township are ironclad, permitting developers to build shopping centers according to less restrictive 1970s zoning ordinances.

So, today's developers can build on PUD commercial property according to rules that were in effect at the time the PUD agreement was signed, meaning they may put up bigger buildings and do less landscaping.

Officials have concluded that the township has no legal right to rezone anything in a PUD without the property owner's consent.

"The rules were stated in contract form," said Community Planner Jeff Goulet. "Unless there is mutual consent to amend the PUD agreement, we have to live with what's there."

Tammie Graves/Staff Artist

The township's only recourse is to attempt to persuade developers to build houses, condos, apartments, or small stores instead of the larger commercial developments that are allowed.

That's what was done in the case of Century Farms.

Bayberry Park agreed to give up its right to erect a strip mall and settle for a zoning classification permitting the condominiums.

"The corner itself is not a prime commercial site," said developer David Gumenick, president of Bayberry Park Inc. "It has a commercial usage but not for a shopping center."

About one year ago, a developer proposed a shopping center on the Bayberry Park corner with an Arbor Drugs as an anchor. But residents fought it and contacted Department of Natural Resources to ensure that any wetlands on the site were indeed regulated.

Goulet said Bayberry Park developers approached the landowners and worked out the parameters of what they wanted to do on the acreage. The condominiums are designed to protect wetlands on the site.

In two other cases, developers took commercially zoned PUD corners and built residential developments. They are Villa Maria subdivision on the northeast corner of Palmer and Lilley, as well as a development on the northwest corner of Palmer and Hannan.

Legislators applaud Engler's welfare stance

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Suburban legislators from both parties had mostly good things to say about Gov. John Engler's plan to remove work obstacles for welfare recipients.

The governor's goal: zero joblessness among welfare clients. The means: $30 million for day care in six areas — including nearby Romulus — to allow them to work.

"Like most welfare reform proposals, it has costs as well as savings," said Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, who chairs the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on social services which will handle the budget. "For 'Work First' to function, it will take more money for child care and transportation than we originally thought."

"Some of those programs have merit," said a skeptical Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, whose district includes Garden City. "However — consider the track record in this state," he said, citing Engler's 1991 ending of the general assistance program. "A University of Michigan study showed 80 percent did not get jobs. There are no bootstraps for these folks."

"Zero joblessness? An economic impossibility," said Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton. It's a good goal, but government has been largely ineffective in job training."

As for $30 million for child care, Whyman said, "I don't think that's a legitimate role of government; it's not a legitimate use of taxpayer dollars."

"Zero joblessness? Kind of a pipe dream," said Rep. Eileen DeHart, D-Westland. "A lot of them are unemployable." She called the boost to day care "a great idea — if we can give good day care."

"What's he going to do with middle-management people who are not on the unemployment rolls?" asked Rep. Jim Kelly, D-Wayne, charging Engler is ignoring corporate downsizing, led by AT&T's decision to ax 40,000 workers. "As soon as AT&T announced those layoff, their stock shot up," Kelly said.

"It's better than what we've got," said Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Redford. "Paying people to stay home is not what welfare mothers want."

"A very good goal," added Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth. "When I came to the Legislature, the question was how much the welfare rolls will grow. This is a monstrous total change in philosophy."

"An admirable goal, but I'd like to know where he's going to get the money from," said Rep. James Ryan, R-Redford.

Area lawmakers had a keen interest in other parts of Engler's message.

Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton, applauded Engler's plan to give environmentally-conscious companies a "clean corporate citizen designation." Bennett, chair of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, said his top '96 issue will be "a healthy balance between business, agriculture, residences and the environment."

Sen. Hart's top priority: recovering the $192 in local road funds from the federal government Engler seized for state projects. "Our district was looking at $20 million of that in western Wayne County," Hart said.

Board OKs wastewater fee hike for business

The Wayne County Board of Commissioners recently approved an increase that will double the fees for wastewater exemptions and would affect several western Wayne County businesses.

The fee had last been changed in 1955, when it was instituted, according to Terry Galloway, assistant superintendent of field operations, of the Wayne County Department of Environment.

The county will now charge an initial fee of $300, up from $150, and an annual renewal fee of $200, up from $100, for businesses which qualify for a wastewater exemption.

The exemption is for businesses that use a large volume of water that ends up in a product, not back in the sewer system, according to Walter Syrkowski, department manager of the industrial pretreatment program for Wayne County.

All sewage disposal charges are based on water consumption, but if a considerable amount of that used water goes into a product, the company receives "sort of like a credit," Syrkowski said.

The companies in western Wayne County that have the exemption are: B.M.C. Manufacturing on Mill Street in Plymouth, Frank's Nursery and Crafts on Schoolcraft in Livonia, GMC Delco on Eckles in Livonia, Ladbroke Racing Michigan Inc. on Schoolcraft in Livonia, Madonna University on Schoolcraft in Livonia, National Block Company on Ford Road in Westland, Plymouth Concrete Inc. on Junction Avenue in Plymouth, Plymouth Lawn Spraying on Pearl in Plymouth, R.J.F. International on Wayne Road in Livonia, and Wagenschutz Lawn Spraying on Main Street in Plymouth.

These businesses use the Rouge Valley Collection System. The fees also apply in the Downriver and South Huron Valley systems. There is no exemption for lawn sprinkling, according to Syrkowski.

Cooperation

Leaders should join forces

Finally! It's been almost eight years since representatives of local governments — Canton and Plymouth townships and Plymouth — got together formally with the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and even the chambers of commerce.

A pat on the back goes to Superintendent Charles Little who hosted the recent gathering Jan. 10, that even included the chambers of commerce, to talk about the future including ways to economize with joint purchasing and shared services with recreation and library services, as well as helping the community's youth.

What a great idea! But why did it take so long?

The kind of discussion and brainstorming that took place at the Jan. 10 meeting is something that should be a continuing effort among the governmental bodies in the communities of Plymouth and Canton and Plymouth townships — not a gathering at eight-year intervals.

Because the communities are close-knit and share the school district, there's plenty of potential to recognize common problems and provide common solutions. Cooperation shouldn't suffer because of old turf battles when families in the Plymouths and Canton share history and their children attend both Plymouth and Canton schools. There should be no empires, only efforts to serve community residents and businesses.

Let's start with recreation. Each community provides its own to its own residents. That's not to mention the resources of the school district with athletic facilities. There is duplication, not only in services, but in the cost of providing those services and facilities.

Under Little's leadership, there's great potential for the school district to open up and share its facilities, while the municipalities could do their part to provide financing for improvements and programs.

Many have long asked why the school libraries are not open after school hours to accommodate students. The only answer anyone got was that it was cost-prohibitive for the schools. What about the public libraries that are cramped for space and need ever-increasing budgets to keep pace? It's time for some serious talk about cooperation.

It's true the school district's first responsibility is the education of children. Extending school library hours should dovetail right into that mission.

Participants at the Jan. 10 gathering expressed concern about drug and alcohol use by students in the district. Perhaps it's time to breathe some new life into the Plymouth-Canton Substance Abuse Task Force, whose members were trained to intervene and counsel students and families. They're still waiting to help.

The first step toward progress on the alcohol and drug abuse front is formal acknowledgement that there is a problem and that the problem affects the community.

Of course, we're eager to hear what the "youth initiative group" — members of religious, civic and political leaders and educators — come up with. But we do hope this is not just another report, rather goals that spell out workable and reachable solutions and activities for the community's youth.

The Jan. 10 gathering was a start. Clearly, there was plenty for the municipalities, school district and chambers to talk about. But it's only a start. Community leaders should continue to meet regularly and act on suggestions of cooperation.

State dodges fine arts issues

State lawmakers are moving 180 degrees in the wrong direction in keeping alive our fine arts, performing arts, cultural heritage and history.

First, the Legislature this fiscal year hacked 26 percent from the budget for arts and cultural funding.

Was it because the money wasn't there? No, for Gov. John Engler is now boasting of signing 21 tax cuts into law, the latest being the single business tax and a one-time income tax cut.

Second, the House, by a heavy bipartisan majority, approved a bill allowing Detroit, counties and groups of counties to form cultural districts and levy up to 1.5 mills of property tax for 20 years. If the Senate were to approve House Bill 5394 without change, the effect would be to shove the burden of arts and cultural funding off the state and onto local units.

Certainly that eventually could have an impact on a wide range of cultural programs, such as musical groups in Livonia, Redford and Plymouth/Canton; arts centers in Plymouth, Livonia and elsewhere; and theatrical groups in Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and elsewhere.

The timing is so bad that the bill amounts to a dirty trick on local government. Less than two years ago, voters approved Proposal A to achieve a major cut in property taxes. Now lawmakers are telling us that, to keep arts and culture alive, we must start jacking the hated property tax upward again.

For the metropolitan Detroit region, the timing is worse yet. Much of Wayne County, all of Macomb County and most of Oakland County last year voted an increase in property taxes to pay for public transportation.

While Proposal A helped public schools' operating budgets, schools still must levy taxes for new construction, renovations and equipment.

At some point — probably very soon — voters will again say "Enough!" and reject higher property taxes as a way of meeting needs from which the state is walking away.

Private donations aren't the answer, though philanthropists deserve hearty thanks. Even European nations, with royalty and millionaires, use government as a source of nutrition to keep arts and culture alive.

Business needs to make a profit. It caters to mass markets. Business can operate theme parks like Disney World, but it is ill-suited to preserve our cultural heritage.

HB 5394 contains internal flaws, too.

In setting up cultural districts, it apportions board members on the basis of county commissioner districts — a fair way to run county government but an inefficient way to tap cultural knowledge.

While HB 5394 provides for audits to keep cultural districts honest, it creates still another level of single-purpose government that ordinary citizens can't keep an eye on. How can they be expected to ride herd on the board of directors of a cultural district?

Funding arts and culture on a small scale is the job of municipalities and on any metropolitan scale of state government. Our governor and lawmakers need to make a heroic effort to 1) quit playing politics with tax cuts and 2) find the money for arts and cultural institutions.

And while they're at it, they should 3) move the cultural council out of the Department of Commerce, where Engler put it, and back in to the Office of Management and Budget, where former Govs. Milliken and Blanchard more properly placed it.

LETTERS

Taxpayers are the losers

Re: Opinion Page Dated Dec. 14 — Reorganization Budget and Finance Department. This article presented an accurate assessment of the hatchet job Tom Yack and his rubber stamp council are doing on John Spencer, a longtime qualified employee. John held both of these jobs some six years ago and then a consultant was hired to recommend that both jobs previously held by Mr. Spencer should be separated.

It appears that Mr. Yack finds it expedient now to follow the consultant's recommendations to again combine the finance and budget jobs under a new director. This new finding did not give consideration to allowing Mr. Spencer to reapply for this position that he previously held some six years ago. John Spencer has proved himself time and time again. The truth of the matter is that John has held a tight rein on spending and the supervisor and his cronies want to replace Mr. Spencer with someone that they can manipulate.

If I were making a book on this I would be willing to bet that Mr. Spencer, even through the most qualified person for this position, will not be considered by the evaluation team. The losers are Mr. Spencer and the taxpayers of Canton Township. Consultants do not come cheap and can come up with any findings favored by those hiring them. They will search the entire country for the best qualified person, and Canton taxpayers will have to pay moving expenses, a higher salary than they are paying John Spencer and possibly some kind of housing.

Incidentally, the final candidates selected will be sent to the state of Pennsylvania for a three-day evaluation to pick the new director. No one knows what the cost of all this will be because it was done rather hush-hush and we won't know until the consultant bills the township for services rendered.

I am a firm believer in the rule, "if it ain't broke don't fix it." It is the opinion of this writer that the taxpayers of Canton should take a long hard look at Tom Yack and the trustees next year and exercise their prerogative at the voter booth. Yack's background and qualifications are that of a school teacher before being elected as supervisor. I am not putting down school teachers but feel the job of supervisor should have leadership abilities which Mr. Yack sadly lacks.

Jack Runkle, Canton

Editor's note:John Spencer was allowed to automatically become a finalist candidate for the new director's job.

New life

Undaunted by the lack of parking and its usual worship space in the Masonic Temple of downtown Plymouth, the members of New Life Lutheran did an end-run around the Plymouth ice festival. The forming congregation of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America worshiped Jan. 14 in the chapel of the Griffin Funeral Home in Canton.

New Life members were, at first blush, skeptical of the invitation.

But before church that day a 7-year-old member walked into the office where I was robing and talked about the death of one of his grandparents. Another member, so moved by the brightness, openness, and warmth of the staff and building, asked who the congregation would have to pay off to use the chapel each Sunday!

The early church first met in catacombs, so it's not inappropriate nor surprising to find mission congregations throughout the United States meeting temporarily in funeral homes. We thank David Griffin and his staff for allowing us this "early church experience" and the opportunity to undergo new life in yet another way.

POINTS OF VIEW

Legislation a boon to owners of older buildings

GUEST COLUMNIST
MELISSA MCLAUGHLIN

There is good news on the tax front for "old" house and building devotees like me.

The Michigan Historic Preservation Network, a 15-year-old, statewide, nonprofit, citizens' preservation organization, and Republican Sens. John Schwarz and Mat Dunaskiss with their staffs, have created two bills providing for tax incentives for the rehabilitation of local, state and national register properties by private individuals, businesses, renters, and qualifying non-profit groups.

These bills would provide an Income Tax Credit (proposed by Schwarz in SB 625) and a Single Business Tax Credit (proposed by Dunaskiss in SB 626).

The bills would provide a 25-percent income tax credit or single business tax credit for qualified historic preservation expenditures. Or the bills would provide a 5-percent income tax credit or single business tax credit, if the property owner uses the 20 percent federal tax credit, (for qualified National Register Sites), which requires those eligible for state and federal credits to use them together.

To qualify for the credits, historic resources could be buildings, structures, sites, objects, features, and open space in income-, or non-income-producing commercial, industrial, and residential uses. They may be either owned or leased by the rehabilitator, but property owned by governmental bodies, non-profit organizations, or tax-exempt entities, are also eligible for the credit if the rehabilitator is a taxpayer. Eligibility for the proposed state tax credit is not affected by non-profit or governmental occupancy.

Also required is that a historic resource contribute to a historic district which is designated by a local protective ordinance. The local ordinance must be established using the Michigan Local Historic Districts Act (PA 169 or 1970) as amended.

Finally, "qualified rehabilitation expenditures" means that work is done in compliance with the U.S. Secretary of Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation. Certification for historic significance, work proposed, and completed work would all require approval from the Michigan Historical Center, Michigan Department of State.

Here's how things would work if the bills become law: Qualified rehabilitation expenditures would be those made after Dec. 31, 1994, and must be equal or greater than 10 percent of the State Equalized Valuation (SEV) or appraised value of the resource, or the portion that is rehabilitated.

For example: An owner's historic property is worth $80,000; its SEV is $40,000. He invests at least 10 percent of that $40,000 or $4,000, on qualified rehabilitation expenditures. A 25 percent credit on this $4,000 or $1,000 can be claimed.

If the credit exceeds the taxpayer's Michigan tax liability for the year in which it is claimed, it may be carried forward up to 10 years. If the resource is sold less than five years after the credit is claimed, percentages of the credit would be added back to the taxpayer's Michigan tax liability.

The Michigan Legislature should pass these bills. Thirty-eight other states have tax and/or financial incentives to encourage historic rehabilitation. There are 17,750 resources in Michigan that may qualify for the proposed incentives.

Preservation is one of the highest job-generating development options available. In Michigan, $1 million in rehabilitation creates 12 more jobs than the manufacturing of $1 million of cars.

Preservation is environmentally and economically friendly. It supports heritage tourism — the fastest growing segment in the travel industry.

A tax incentive is yet another tool for people who want to help themselves to expand home and business ownership opportunities for low- and middle-income individuals and families to stimulate the revival of old neighborhoods and make communities stronger and safer.

Please consider writing to your local state senators and representatives urging them to support Senate Bills 625 and 626. This is an opportunity to foster preservation of the historic resources we have in our communities.

This will encourage private owners to add long-term protection to their property's architectural integrity, by allowing them to be listed as local historic sites and take advantage of an income tax credit for rehabilitating the buildings property.

It's been said that "you don't own an old building . . . it owns you!" These buildings belong to the community's heritage collection and with the help of these bills, the owners may have new incentive to preserve them for the future.

Evidence of Michigan police state should raise alarm

TIM RICHARD

A Middle Eastern region was ruled by a military government. No local elected officials. No law. No due process or trial. No appeal.

I've read dozens of news stories like this: A young man was suspected of taking part of a rock-throwing incident. The authorities sent a bulldozer to his parents' house and leveled one room.

Why, you ask, punish the family for the sins of the young man? Why punish before an arrest and trial? The authorities never bothered to answer. We're talking about a police state.

Can it happen here? It's happening.

The Michigan Legislature is fashioning a set of reforms for Friend of the Court — that's the agency that collects child support payments from a working parent and transfers the money to the custodial parent.

The House passed one oppresive bill 87-12. Interestingly, the harder-nosed conservatives rather than the bleeding-heart liberals dissented most vocally.

Here is the formal protest of Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton:

"I am opposed to revoking a driver's license for anything other than a driving offense. It doesn't make ANY sense to revoke an occupational license for alleged non-payment of child support and eliminate their ability to earn a paycheck. I have had many complaints on Wayne County Friend of the Court. Fathers pay their child support to FOC via payroll deduction, yet have sanctions brought against them for ALLEGED non-payment of child support." (Emphasis hers.)

Rep. Greg Kaza, R-Rochester Hills, entered his formal objection on a companion bill that passed 58-46. This time the negative ranks were sweiled by Democrats like Maxine Berman of Southfield and Eileen DeHart of Westland as well as Republicans like Whyman, Barbara Dobb of Union Lake, John Jamian of Bloomfield Township and Al Cropsey of DeWitt. Said Kaza:

"The legislation before us implements license sanctions for matters that have nothing to do with professional ability or driving record. By eliminating an individual's means to practice his or her profession or occupation, the bills would eliminate their ability to pay support."

A more recent trick is differential punishment. Whack me over the head and you get two years in the slammer. Whacking a 62-year-old brings you four years because it's a senior citizen. Our statute books are like a page out of George Orwell's "Animal Farm," where "all animals are equal, but some are more equal than others."

During the handgun debate, readers in many Michigan counties learned that police and prosecutors rigidly controlled the licensing process, awarding permits only to cops, ex-cops and a handful of pals. It's just like the aforementioned Middle Eastern police state: disarm civilians.

The U.S. Supreme Court soon will be looking at a federal forfeiture case from Michigan that smacks of police state thinking.

Guy Usery of Perry (near Lansing) was convicted in 1993 of manufacturing marijuana and sentenced to five years. Fair enough. But the prosecutors filed suit for civil forfeiture of his home, where the pot was grown and harvested, To settle the case, Usery agreed to pay the feds $13,250.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in Cincinnati, nixed the scheme, saying the conviction was "a second punishment" for the same offense — a violation of the double jeopardy clause in the Bill of Rights.

Keep in mind the top U.S. prosecutor is a former law professor named Bill Clinton, who allegedly is a "flower child" liberal. The Clinton prosecutors say, shucks, forfeiture of drug-related property is not punishment. They're appealing to the Supreme Court.

You probably already know about the 18-year-old two-bit drug dealer from Westland who was sent to prison for life under a law designed to wipe out kingpins. And the Ferndale guy who picked up a Detroit lady cop disguised as a hooker and had his wife's car confiscated. The law was supposed to be used on organized crime, not a john in an aged car.

Economic change wrenching

PHILIP POWER

The new economy is characterized by last week's announcement that AT&T, up to now the most paternalistic and stable corporation in the country, intends to lay off 40,000 workers — the equivalent of at least 10 auto plants.

It is in Michigan — cradle of the automobile industry, the Arsenal of Democracy, the home of the United Auto Workers — that the transition from the old economy to the new will be the most wrenching.

As anybody older than 50 knows down to the sweat glands, the old economy that made Michigan rich was based on hard, human labor in return for good pay and good benefits.

Generations of Michigan kids left school and countless thousands of adults left their farms in the South to work in the auto plants. Bolting on right fenders at Ford's didn't require many skills, other than the ability to tolerate hard, boring work. The old line was: "If you can stand and take a breath and have a friend at the UAW hiring hall, you'll get a good job."

That was the old economy. It was solid, and it was stable. And it built a middle class here in Michigan that made Detroit — where at one time more houses were occupied by their owners than any other big city in America — the envy of the world.

But it isn't the new economy. The new economy is characterized by last week's announcement that AT&T, up to now the most paternalistic and stable corporation in the country, intends to lay off 40,000 workers — the equivalent of at least 10 auto plants. "Most of the cuts," according to the Wall Street Journal, "are facilitated, one way or another, by new software programs, better computer networks and more powerful hardware."

In other words, people — 40,000 of them at AT&T and countless hundreds of thousands elsewhere — are being replaced by computers.

"The wholesale substitution of machines for workers is going to force every nation to rethink the role of human beings in the social process," writes Jeremy Rifkin in an important book, "The End of Work." "Redefining opportunities and responsibilities for millions of people in a society absent of mass formal employment is going to be the single most pressing social issue of the coming century."

Rifkin quotes William Wimpisinger, a smart man and the past president of the International Association of Machinists, a union that has lost half its members to automation, to the effect that within 30 years, as little as 2 percent of the world-wide workforce will be able to produce all the goods needed to meet total world demand. No wonder the UAW has made job security its top priority in the coming contract negotiations with the auto companies!

It's this phenomenon — the transition from the old economy to the new and the displacement of unskilled human labor by machines and computers — that undergirds so much of the general anxiety so many people feel today. "My God, if the can lay off 40,000 middle managers at AT&T just like that, what can they do to me?"

It's also this same transition from the old economy to the new that makes so much of the political debate about welfare reform so utterly misplaced.

Of course it makes sense to require people getting public assistance to work.

Some people don't work because they aren't enterprising enough to get off their butts and get a job. But most people on welfare are there because they don't have enough skills to get a job. And if the only jobs available are those which involve skills, demanding that unskilled peolpe take them is both silly and futile.

And the contradiction between the glories of political rhetoric about welfare reform and the hard reality of what jobs will be available is going to get sharper and sharper as the transition to the new economy progresses.

That's why University of Michigan professor Sheldon Danziger's new book, "America Unequal," makes so much sense. "The Contract With America essentially takes the position that anybody who tries to work hard can get ahead, and that characterization, if was ever true, was true from the end of World War II until about 1973."

I wonder how long it's going to take until somebody proposes "jobs of last resort," government-supported, low-paying, low-skill jobs to move the unemployed poor from a welfare check to a paycheck.

Best-laid plans: the conclusion

In last week's installment of the Family Room, you read about a celebration going asunder. The celebration was my parents' 50th wedding anniversary four days before Christmas.

Baby Jack, as the story went, became ill en route from the airport all over my bachelor uncle who'd just flown in from the East Coast. He'd come to Michigan for his brother's (my Dad's) 50th wedding anniversary gala event that evening. Uncle Howard was planning also to spend the Christmas holiday week at my home.

But then the best-laid plans

It was bedlam at 65 miles per hour that early afternoon in my van. Jack screamed screams, I shouted apologies. Joe cried. A sign for a hotel came into view. Three minutes away. It happened to be where the visiting relatives were staying. I had an idea. I shouted it out above the din. It had to do with anyone being able to flee this terrible mess, to do so, now was the time.

Uncle Howard nodded in agreement as he wiped his coat with diaper wipes. I died several deaths.

We arrived at the hotel. Uncle Howard went in wearing his inglorious traveling coat. Once inside, he was greeted by some long unseen kin. I saw him point to his coat sleeves and gently waved the greeters off. I died some more deaths

Cook's choice: With the help of Weight Watchers and the support of friend Cheryl Carley, Sherry Siedlik lost 40 pounds last year and hopes to lose another 30 this year. Carley lost 31 pounds and has 15 to go to reach her weight loss goal.

Sticking together through thick, thin

New Year's resolutions, more times than not, are never kept. But Sherry Siedlik and Cheryl Carley made a resolution last year to loose weight and say they stuck to it for a very good reason — support from each other.

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

For Sherry Siedlik and Cheryl Carley, the key to sticking to their New Year's resolution of losing weight can be found within a Beatles song — "I get by with a little help from my friends."

The Canton residents joined the Farmington Hills-based Weight Watchers in January 1995 and both say that without each other, their resolutions would have gone to the wind.

"I think that doing it with a friend is key," Siedlik explained. "We keep our motivation up. When she's not motivated, I am and vice versa."

Carley agreed.

"I think what helped Sherry and I the most is that we did it together. We had to go exercise or go to Weight Watchers because someone was waiting to go with you."

Carley and Siedlik are two of the many people who vow to lose weight at the beginning of a new year and accomplish their goal, according to Christy Edwards, a Weight Watchers spokeswoman.

"Our membership increases fourfold from December to January and it stays pretty consistent," Edwards said. "It usually starts dropping off a little bit in the spring (because), just in general, people are going outside doing other things like taking summer vacations and spring break (trips)."

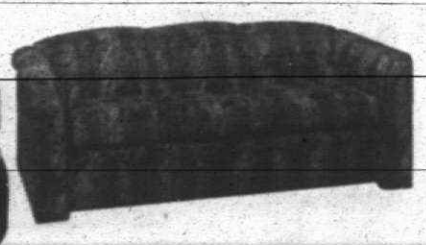

In this case, the two stuck with Carley's idea to lose weight as a New Year's resolution. She lost 31 pounds and has another 15 to go, while Siedlik shed 40 and hopes to lose 30 more.

"Basically, I had my last child and decided enough was enough. I gained weight with each baby and decided I wanted to take it off for the rest of my life," said Carley, the mother of Allison, 5, twins Bradley and Laura, 3, and Anna, 18 months.

After adding Jazzercise to their weight-loss regime in February, the two saw quick results. Siedlik lost her weight between January and May and admits that she strayed a bit after that.

"We got cocky, (saying) 'Oh, I can eat that now,' so it just became a balancing act but we got back on program," Siedlik said.

She isn't discouraged, however, that she hasn't lost weight since then.

"I realize that I really wasn't following the program," she said. "Part of the program is that you write down what you eat so you can keep track. I was skipping doing that. I was eating more and I was exercising more, so it was equaling out.

"It stayed off but now it's time to take the rest off."

Adjusting to the diet was rough at first, Siedlik said, especially with two children, Rachel 3½, and Matthew, 5, and a husband, Mark, who enjoys red meat and brownies. She has since gotten used to the drastic change.

"At first that's all you think about is food — 'If I eat this then I can't eat that,' " she said. "With kids, you go to places like McDonald's and Little Caesars, so you try to fit that in."

Carley's husband, Daniel, lost weight right along with her. Siedlik said her husband is considering joining Weight Watchers which would add to her support system.

"There are times when he just has to have a steak; there are times when he just has to have a brownie — a real brownie, not just something I made," she said. "He's wanted to get on the program with me. Hopefully, we can slowly get him into that. It would be very helpful."

In the meantime, Siedlik has learned a few tricks about how to resist the urge to eat fatty food when her family craves it. For example, when her children want McDonald's, she goes through the "drive-through to get them Happy Meals and I don't get myself anything. It eliminates a lot of problems."

She also suggests bringing your own fat-free salad dressings to restaurants.

The two said that losing weight has boosted their self-esteem and energy level.

"Especially with kids, you have more energy," Carley said. "It makes you feel better to accomplish something that a lot of people want to do and have a hard time doing it."

Siedlik explained that sticking with a New Year's resolution positively affects her entire life.

"It changes your attitude toward everything," she said. "It's more (of a) positive change. If I can do this I can do other things. If I eat better my kids eat better and that was good too because if you stand there eating a cookie then they want a cookie. If you're eating an apple and they'll eat an apple then you're better off."

■ 'Especially with kids, you have more energy. It makes you feel better to accomplish something that a lot of people want to do and have a hard time doing it.'

WW's way is through education

Weight Watchers approaches weight management through an educational program directed at lifestyle change in an atmosphere of group support.

The Weight Watchers Program, designed by physicians and nutritionists, is built on sound scientific principles in the areas of nutrition, behavior and exercise.

Weight Watchers programs, which are tailored according to members' needs, are used with regular groceries as opposed to pre-packaged food products. Fifteen-45-minute motivational meetings are held weekly and include a confidential weigh-in.

The company is offering free registration for the month of January. The regular charge is $30 which includes program materials, orientation and first week's meeting fee. Afterward it costs $11 per week.

Once the goal weight is achieved and maintained for six consecutive weeks, the member receives a lifetime membership. That allows the person to go to Weight Watchers free for the rest of his or her life as long as he or she remains within two pounds of the goal weight and weighs in once a month.

Family Room

and headed home.

Both Joe and Jack fell asleep. This was the calm after one storm and before the next. I just knew it.

Now it was almost 2 in the afternoon. The elegant, once-in-a-lifetime anniversary dinner was only five hours away. I had to think of something.

I thought of a miraculous, complete recovery. I thought of coverups, like walking into the fancy restaurant that evening and exclaiming to all those gathered, "Oh, Uncle Howard! What a joker you are! You guys really didn't believe his gross story, did you?" and bursting into laughter. I thought of a lie I could tell as we took our seats around the elegant table: "Did you realize that in every culture on earth except ours, throwing up on one's great uncle is considered the highest honor and the ultimate show of respect?"

After mulling over these lies and deceits, I was home. Reality hit home just then, too.

Reality like getting Jack out of his yucky coat and car seat. And cleaning him up, putting on his jammies, putting him in his crib, simultaneously fixing lunch for urgently hungry Joe. Then disassembling the car seat, laundering the car seat cover, hosing down the mats in the van, cleaning the upholstery, notifying my daughter's teacher to say I'd be falling down on the job today and not helping at the class Christmas party that afternoon as I'd promised earlier, picking my oldest son up from his school, picking my daughter up from hers, getting the healthy children ready for the elegant party and being cheerful and efficient throughout.

Any mom can tell you of afternoons like this. And when she tells you, you listen. You'll learn something very important. You'll learn how life can be messy and how moms somehow, some way tidy it up.

So the afternoon passed quickly that day. And at 6:40 p.m. I minced my way through the snow in the front yard with my Sunday shoes on, carrying a clean and reassembled car seat. I reinstalled it, minced back through the snow, packed the remaining items in the baby bag (plenty of diaper wipes, an extra change of baby clothes), grabbed Jack into my arms, locked the door, and set out. I had 20 minutes to make the 30-minute drive to the celebration.

Jack was fine. It turned out to have been nothing more than a combination of high excitement, noisy airport crowds, too much juice and a blankie with a sheepie on it making a 1¼-year-old too hot.

The celebration was grand and focused entirely on the couple who'd spent the last 50 years together. I quietly sat at the far end of the long table with Jack, set apart from the rest. You can never be too careful. And from that vantage point, I admired my parents more than I'd ever imagined possible.

I knew what it took to make it through that impossible afternoon and smile at the end of it and not make a big deal about it. I knew that during their 50 years, they must have done the same thing over and over. And that's humility for you. And frustration. And putting others first. And keeping your lip buttoned. And doing the best you can with what you're given.

And like the evening itself, Uncle Howard's coat and shoes were just fine. His visit was fun and none of the relatives took sick.

And here I'd thought everything would fly off the face of this whirling, spinning planet during that afternoon. But that night I realized it's the whirling and spinning that keeps everything rooted and stable. And right where it belongs.

Writer is confident in her judgment

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Hi —

I am very interested in having my handwriting analyzed!!

I am a 38-year-old female, right-handed and self-employed. I have read and enjoyed your column for quite a while.

I will be anxiously awaiting your analysis!!

Thank you.

J.A., Dearborn

I am a 38 year old female, Right handed and self employed. I have read and enjoyed your column for quite a

This is the handwriting of a young lady who finds the fast lane more appealing than the others.

Her good mind is quick and alert, making her resourceful and creative. In addition, she is flexible, adaptable and has confidence in her judgment.

Self-confidence exudes from this lady! In both conduct and style, she is efficient. Eliminating the nonessential and getting right down to important things come naturally. She does not get lost in trivial issues. Neither does she procrastinate, delay or waste her time. She feels strongly about the importance of utilizing her time effectively.

Our writer has a cheerful attitude. She focuses on the positive things she wants to happen. Most of the time she anticipates the best outcome. When an occasional setback occurs she does not dwell on it, but will refocus on the positive.

This independent young lady is a self-starter who does not require anyone prodding her into action. Neither does she want to be held back by past memories.

The writer wants good equipment that will be an aid in expediting the job. When making new purchases, what the product can do for her appears to have the most influence on her selection.

She is not one to sit down and make lifelong plans for the future. She enjoys spontaneity and is more inclined to plan as she moves right along in her rapid-paced life.

In social relationships, she is usually sunny and an addition that is welcome in most any group. She tends to be rather talkative and can be open and frank. Clarity is important in sharing feelings and ideas. Content is more important than style. On occasion, she might get carried away and find it difficult to keep a confidence that has been shared with her.

Some intuition rides along in this handwriting. I hope she is using it to her advantage.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies are not possible. However, objective feedback is welcome.

Divorce recovery workshop scheduled for St. Michael's

Richard and Ruth Gatza have succeeded in changing the attitude of their church toward people whose marriages have ended in divorce.

Lay leaders of St. Michael Lutheran Church in Wayne, they lead a program for divorced people that is open to people of all faiths and races. The program, Divorce Recovery Workshop, is making a difference in the church, the community, and especially in the lives of the participants.

"People are more open and sensitive to the real hurts people suffer as a result of divorce," said Rev. Carl Gnewuch, pastor at St. Michael. "The church has responded to the work of Ruth and Richard with enthusiasm and support."

Members of the church were initially hesitant about starting Divorce Recovery Workshop when the Gatzas introduced it to the congregation last summer.

"There were the usual questions from members about cost and the use of facilities," said Gnewuch. "But what we seemed most concerned about was how the workshop might make it seem like the church condones divorce. At that point, we were more concerned about our reputation than people.

"But when Richard and Ruth explained how the workshop helps people pick up the pieces of their shattered lives and gives them hope for the future, our way of thinking changed. Now that we've seen what the workshop can do, we support it completely."

The workshop has helped the participants. All of those attending the fall workshop felt the time spent was well worth their while. Several participants are even returning to help as facilitators for the workshop in February. Linda Joy of Romulus will be one of the new facilitators.

"It helped me work out feelings I didn't realize I had," Joy said. "Even though I was divorced some years ago, the workshop brought me to the point where I could accept my ex-husband and not feel angry toward him. Now I want to help others."

The Gatzas first became involved with Divorce Recovery Workshop when they attended a similar program at First Presbyterian Church in Northville. Their personal satisfaction with the workshop led them to work with the program at Christ the King Lutheran Church in Southgate and now at St. Michael's.

Their experience and training have made them excellent leaders, according to Joy.

"Richard and Ruth are so open and honest," she said. "And they respect your privacy. Nothing is said outside of the meetings. It's great to open up and know your feelings are safe."

The next seven-week program will be 7-9 p.m. Thursdays, beginning Feb. 1 and running through March 14. At the end of the workshop, regular monthly meetings will be held 7-9 p.m. April 18, May 16 and June 20.

The workshops format uses video tapes and small group discussions, covering such topics as "Coping with Your Ex-Spouse," "Assuming New Responsibilities," "Being a Single Parent" and "Finding and Experiencing Forgiveness."

The registration fee is $15 with $10 for the optional work/study book. Free child care will be provided.

St. Michael Lutheran Church is at Glenwood and Hannan roads, Wayne. For more information or a brochure, call the church office at (313) 728-1950 (days) or (313) 722-6212 (evenings).

County opens skating areas on Wilcox, Newburgh lakes

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Wayne County officials want residents to sharpen their ice skates and head out to Hines Park this winter.

For the first time in more than 30 years, supervised, lighted skating areas are open at Newburgh Lake in Livonia and Wilcox Lake in Plymouth Township. Both sites are in Hines Park.

Both sites have warming areas and restroom facilities. Wilcox Lake also has a concession stand.

Supervised skating is offered from 3-10:30 p.m. on week nights and from 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays through February.

By offering skating, the county parks department is trying to respond to things people have requested, said Hurley J. Coleman Jr., director of the county's division of parks.

Plymouth resident Michael Johnson, who was skating with his daughter Kristy at Wilcox Lake Monday, welcomes the opportunity to skate on rinks maintained by the county.

He remembers a time when skating races and barrel jumping were offered in Hines Park. "I used to come out here as a kid (30 or 35 years ago)," he said.

"This was where everybody came after school," he said. They even brought their dates to the park, he said.

Johnson said he's glad to see the services. "With the concession stand in there — that's great," he said.

Jack Pereira is the new concessionaire at Wilcox Lake. He plans to try to stay open year-round. The concession stand offers coffee, hot cider and hot chocolate, potato chips, doughnuts and candy.

He hopes to be successful with parents as well as kids. "A lot of parents drop off their kids and leave, but a lot would like to sit in here and watch their kids out there (on the ice)," he said.

People have been coming out for years and shoveling off a place to skate, according to Michael Duggan, deputy CEO for the county. Now the county sends a snow plow out to clear the snow, he said.

"It's been a long time since we tried this, and it's still in the experimentation stage," Duggan said. Parking may need to be expanded in the future, he said.

"The county's financial troubles have been so bad, almost all activities were eliminated (in the parks)," Duggan said. But now the county has made it a priority to bring the parks back, he said.

"It's nice to go from canoes to the LightFest to winter skating," said Duggan, who brought his two children out skating at Wilcox Lake.

"What the county executive has really wanted to do is give the parks back to the folks and the community," Coleman said. "It's the quality of life things that the county executive wants to see," he said.

Pam Dobrowolski, who works for county Executive Edward McNamara, had the Monday off so she brought her daughter Heather out to skate. "When I heard about it, I thought that it would be fun," Dobrowolski said.

"It seemed like a good way to get exercise," she said. Her daughter Heather and her daughter's friend Andrea Bean were trying out outdoor ice skating for the first time. They both said it was different because the ice is bumpier that at an indoor rink, but that it is fun.

Parks officials make sure the ice is safe for skating and post a sign. Park foreman Carl Miller said 30 holes are made in the ice to take measurements of the ice depth, with 8-10 inches of depth considered safe. Yellow reflector poles are set up to mark the edges of the rink.

Area business people named to workforce development board

Fifteen appointments have been made by the Conference of Western Wayne to a Workforce Development Board.

The board, which will have 41 delegates, will eventually replace the Wayne County and Downriver Community Conference/Monroe Private Industry Councils.

Appointed by the Conference of Western Wayne are: David Brandon, president and chief executive officer of Valassis Communications in Livonia; Karen Correll, training manager of New Horizons Computer Learning Center in Livonia; Richard Cox, chief executive officer of R&D Enterprises in Northville; Terrence Harder, owner of Andy's Town in Inkster; Blair McKendrick, chief executive officer and president of Artcraft Pattern Works in Westland; J. Jim Morrow Jr., vice president and plant manager of Detroit Diesel Corp. in Detroit.

Also, Carmen Munoz, president of Munoz Machine Products in Livonia; J. Robert Rock, senior partner of Rock & Borgelt law firm in Dearborn Heights; Carl L. Schultz, chief executive officer of Sealant Equipment and Engineering in Plymouth; Nancy Siwik, owner and vice president of Jedtco Corp. in Westland; Gary Stevens, president of Metaltec Steel Abrasive Co. in Canton; Michael Taylor, senior vice president for ambulatory care and business development at Oakwood Health Care System in Dearborn; Tim Tindall, president of Spring Engineering and Manufacturing Corp. in Livonia; William White, president and chief executive officer of Dearborn Federal Savings Bank in Dearborn; and Patrick Williams, vice president of Michigan Induction Inc. in Canton.

The group will meet at the end of January or the beginning of February and at that time officers will be elected.

Representation on the board is specified by law. The "No Wrong Door" governance policy adopted by the Michigan Jobs Commission requires the private sector to hold 70 percent of the board appointments.

This board stems from five metropolitan governmental entities that have joined together to form a new regional public service agency to provide job training and substance abuse programs.

The rest of the appointments are being made by the other members of The Southeast Governmental Alliance, or SEGA, the new consolidated service agency formed by officials from the Conference of Western Wayne, Conference of Eastern Wayne, Downriver Community Conference, Monroe County and Wayne County.

The five governmental entities comprising SEGA represent 42 of the 43 Wayne County communities, and all of Monroe County. The city of Detroit will continue to operate its own job training and substance abuse services.

The realignment of training programs came as a result of Gov. John Engler's desire to let Michigan residents walk in the door of any state or federally funded agency and access all the services they need to be independent and self-sufficient.

Engler decided to create the "No Wrong Door" model and not wait for funding changes at the national level. Congress is considering the elimination of individual entitlement programs in favor of a single block grant.

SEGA plans to be in place when the block grant funding arrives.

Family Tradition.

Every family has its traditions. Gathering for Sunday dinner. Marking anniversaries and celebrating birthdays. Unfortunately, some families share more than happy times ... they also share the risk of certain illnesses.
Breast cancer—which now strikes one in nine American women—is among them. If your mother, grandmother, aunt or sister has been diagnosed with this disease, your doctor probably has explained the added risk you face. But unlike women in past generations, you can put time and technology on your side.
We at the Marian Women's Center, St. Mary Hospital, encourage you to see your doctor regularly whatever your age and, once you reach 40, to see us for a mammogram. Our mammography services are designed to give you peace of mind by bringing together certified radiologists and staff, personalized education and high-tech imaging equipment approved by the American College of Radiologists.
Make mammography and regular breast exams a new family tradition. For more facts on mammography services and other programs at the Marian Women's Center just call us at (313) 591-3314.

KATHY WOLFE

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Waitresses, teachers, fortune tellers, and hockey players: Kathy Wolfe creates a bevy of whimsical ceramic cookie jar characters. They are on display through Jan. 30 in the second floor showcases at the Livonia Civic Center Library.

Wolfe and her husband Doug, who works in law enforcement, produce the one-of-a-kind and limited edition collectibles in their West Bloomfield studio.

Never ones to live unfulfilled lives, the couple also tends their own sled dog team, raising eight Alaskan Malamutes and Siberian Huskies right there in their nearly two acre backyard. Both also ride Harley Davidson motorcycles for fun. But back to the their cookie jars, a fun medium in itself. Advertising and figure-shaped cookie containers are hot commodities right now.

Collectors from all over the world meet annually at conventions to trade items and learn more about the hobby.

What makes the Wolfe's jars so popular is the fact it's art. Most of the jars are hand-built in the tradition of pottery. Others employ a combination of these techniques combined with a molding process. In 1992, Wolfe Studio was commissioned by Elias Brothers Big Boy to sculpt and produce a limited edition jar of Big Boy using the second method. The 250 pieces sold out within three months.

Other licensed jars to the Wolfes' credit include Purdue Pete, mascot of Purdue University, and a San Jose Sharks hockey team goalie jar. Doug's underglazing and airbrushing of the characters' features gives them a life of their own.

"Andy Warhol's cookie jar collection made collecting popular. Figurative and advertising are the most sought after themes of jar dealers and auctions," said Kathy Wolfe who grew up in Royal Oak and studied commercial art at Southfield Lathrup High School and Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

"We do jars for the serious collector, handcrafted rather than mass produced outside of the United States. It gets very boring doing the same piece over and over. I have more fun doing one-of-a-kind jars. This way collectors can have their own piece of art."

The Statue of Liberty, brides, angels, an Inuit Eskimo holding a Siberian Huskie puppy in her arms, a female rabbi, and a two jar set featuring the Phantom of the Opera and Christen are among the human figures sculpted by the Wolfes. Many of the pieces like the 1958 Girl Scout Wolfe researches at the library to maintain authenticity.

A wolf in a tuxedo is the trademark jar of their studio. A head of a wolf or husky cookie jar by the Wolfes would make a great gift for a dog lover.

"Cat Lady features a lady holding a gray cat and a tiger cat. I think animals personalize collecting if people want a jar of their own pet. Or they can have someone done like their grandmother. It's a great remembrance," said Wolfe. "And they give you a good feeling when you look at it."

The Wolfes' works sell mainly by word of mouth. Customers contact them at their studio, (810) 855-4444, after seeing their jars at exhibits, in homes or collectors' books and guides. Prices range from $65 to $500.

This couple, married 23 years with three children, has come along way from "producing salt and pepper shakers in their spare time for something to do."

"What started out as a hobby has turned into a business," said Wolfe whose first set of salt and pepper shakers, a record and a radio, commemorated a song written by her father for Patti Page.

Livonia Civic Center Library is at 32777 Five Mile Road (east of Farmington Road). Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; until 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

BY TAMI TARACCHI
SPECIAL WRITER

The Players Guild of Dearborn has, once again, put on another brilliant performance. Paul Rudnick's hilarious comedy, "I Hate Hamlet," opened Friday, Jan. 12, and received lots of laughs, as well as applause.

"I Hate Hamlet" concerns the life of actor, Andrew Rally, who has recently moved into a fabulous New York apartment that once belonged to the late great actor John Barrymore. Shortly after moving in, Andy is confronted by Barrymore's ghost, who is determined to teach him the brilliance of Shakespeare.

Andy has been offered the role of Hamlet, and despite his disinterest in this prestigious role, Barrymore tells Andy that his ghost will remain in the apartment unless Andy accepts the role of Hamlet.

After much coaching, Andy has a change of heart and takes the role. Andy's girlfriend, agent, and Barrymore are all ecstatic and eagerly await the performance that could make or break Andy's career.

The ghost of Barrymore is an eccentric, humorous, and somewhat drunken character, who is most appealing to his audience. Each line is a laugh and every movement is an uproarious exaggeration. Andy's virginal girlfriend, Diedra, is another eccentric character who makes us laugh with her naive innocence, and ultimately idiotic behavior.

"I Hate Hamlet" is loaded with some wonderful performances and a side-splitting script that will make even the most critical theatergoer laugh.

Sergio Mautone of Redford is wonderful as the ghost of John Barrymore. His character and performance are witty, articulate, and intelligent. Ross Grossman gives his second performance of Andy, having previously played this role at the Village Players of Birmingham. He has some great moments, with zany facial expressions and an all-around a notable performance.

Gary and Felicia, played by Alan Ellias and Jeanine Matlow are also wonderful, right down to their flamboyant costumes and Felicia's New York accent. Lisa Marie Reynolds, as Diedra, and Diane Kremser as Lillian, both Garden City residents, also give some memorable performances.

Director, Anthony T. Lawry of Garden City, has obviously dedicated himself to making "I Hate Hamlet" an enjoyable performance. It is a great play for all, with its contemporary theme and humor, it is sure to entertain the whole family.

Whether you loved or hated Shakespeare, "I Hate Hamlet" is a performance not to be missed.

DINING

Casual Red Robin friendly, fun

The Red Robin has come to roost in some local branches.

The October opening of a Red Robin restaurant in Westland brought the second Red Robin franchise to the state. Michigan's first Red Robin opened in Novi in 1993.

Red Robin is a family style, casual-dining restaurant with a separate, full-service lounge.

"It's a lot of fun to be in. It's comfortable. It's unique," said Lew Ansara, one of the principals of Red Robin of Michigan Inc., which owns the Red Robin development rights for most of Michigan.

"You won't find a place anything like it in the city."

A friendly greeter is on hand as patrons walk through the door. A large dining area (seating capacity is about 250) has a mixture of free-standing tables and large, comfortable booths. An outdoor patio will be opened during warmer weather.

Where: 36350 Warren Road (at Central City Parkway), Westland, (313) 421-4081
Hours: Open 11 a.m.-midnight Sunday through Thursday, 11 a.m.-1:30 a.m. Friday and Saturday
Menu: Eclectic American — burgers, sandwiches, steak, chicken and pasta dishes, salads, soups and appetizers. Full-service bar with specialty drinks.
Prices: Moderate. Sandwiches and entrees range from $4.49 (Natural Burger) to $12.99 (jumbo rack of pork ribs). Salads are $2.49 to $7.59. Specialty alcohol drinks are $3.79 and up.
Atmosphere: Casual, family dining. Full-service lounge.
Reservations: None, but you're welcome to call ahead.
Major credit cards: Accepted.

The decor is fun and eclectic: neon signs, framed prints of varying styles, hanging lamps with cloth shades and what Ansara calls a Southwestern flavor in the fabric on the booth benches. "It's a very warm setting," he said.

The menu is eclectic, too. Red Robin offers burgers (14 varieties, including the Amazing Meatless Burger, a vegetable patty), sandwiches (10 varieties) salads (seven) and pasta dishes (seven). Burgers and sandwiches include all-you-can eat steak fries.

The menu's "Specialties" category includes steak and chicken fajitas, New York strip steak and the Rib-Tickler Platter of baby back pork ribs.

There are also soups, appetizers and side orders.

Vegetarians can enjoy the Bamboo Steamer (steamed vegetables and noodles), linguini with marinara sauce, or the Pasta Fresca (linguini with tomatoes, black olives, pinenuts, basil and parmesan cheese).

Favorites include the Red Robin Cheeseburger, the Red Robin Cobb salad and pasta dishes, Ansara said.

Beer is available on tap and in bottles, wines by the glass. Specialty drinks include Mai Tais, margaritas, ice-cream drinks and coffee drinks. Floats, shakes, malts and "mocktails" are available for abstainers.

Red Robin offers karaoke in the lounge on Thursdays from 9 p.m. until midnight.

The restaurant follows a core of Red Robin menu items, but is given some latitude in other selections, Ansara said.

What you won't see on the menu are Ansara's 35 years of experience in the restaurant business.

"It's been a pleasure. We enjoy serving the public," he said.

Planet B.A.D.
F-Punk
— Big Audio Dynamite

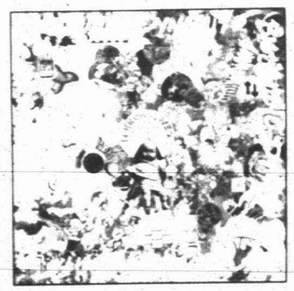

Everybody loves the Clash, but does anybody care about Big Audio Dynamite?

Mick Jones has been asking this musical question for years — a decade, to be exact, since the British singer/songwriter left the highly influential Clash and formed the first incarnation of B.A.D. in 1985.

In the Clash days, Jones was usually relegated to playing second banana to Joe Strummer. But when taking a rare lead vocal, his songs proved more melodic, brighter, and usually more popular ("Train In Vain," "Should I Stay Or Should I Go?").

Coming after the proletariat punk and white reggae of those glory years, B.A.D. probably seemed like a radical departure. With an interracial lineup, ridiculous early-'80s sportswear and an emphasis on dance music with dabblings in techno, B.A.D.'s old stuff sounds fairly common now. Precursors to English pop acts like Jesus Jones and the Farm, the band's greatest strength has also been its songs, as the greatest hits compilation "Planet B.A.D." (Columbia) documents.

Its debut single, "The Bottom Line," is classic B.A.D. — electronic beats and a sing-along chorus, tempered with just enough guitar to give it all guts. For all of his old band's working-class grousing in the '70s, Jones's buoyant optimism shines through in most of "Planet B.A.D." "C'Mon Every Beatbox" finds him reteaming with co-writer/producer Strummer for a stirring update on "Dancing in the Street," and here his background works for him. If such a risky venture came from some young unknown, it would be laughable. But given

Jones's long stint in one of rock's greatest politically oriented groups, "C'Mon Every Beatbox" sounds like the sentiment of a world-weary man who has found solace, if not salvation, in dance music.

"Planet B.A.D." sags in the middle, but picks up again when it reaches the simple two-chord buzz of "The Globe's" classic single "Rush," Jones's reminiscences on his past. From the serious ("If I had my time again, I would do it all the same") to the silly ("Somehow I stayed thin, while the other guys got fat"), "Rush" contains all the best reasons to like B.A.D. Coupled with the strangely familiar sampling on "The Globe" and "Looking For A Song's" busy rhythms, the album's final barrage of hits is its most captivating. Although indirectly documenting both Jones's hair loss and his decreasing popularity, "Planet B.A.D." also stands as a testament to his post-Clash accomplishments.

The album's last song, "I Turned Out A Punk," also serves as the opener on B.A.D.'s latest "F-Punk" (Radioactive), and is an abrupt stylistic change. The soundbites and techno blips that once served as the core of its sound have now been banished solely to intros and occasional flourishes. The album sounds like it was cut live as a straight, guitar-based four-piece, then handed to the band's D.J. with strict instructions to "Keep it under 30 seconds."

This seems to have strengthened B.A.D.'s work. Perhaps sparked by the renewed interest in the Clash, Jones has made the closest thing to a rock record since "Combat Rock." The cover art even apes the pastel lettering of "London Calling," and save for its low political content and joyful tone, "F-Punk" could have almost been passed off as a Clash album and not many would have noticed.

Or complained. "I Turned Out A Punk" can only be described as fun-filled venom. "Vitamin C" is a stuttering, spitfire account of Jones's childhood medications. Recycling the old "Clash City Rockers" riff, "Psycho Wing" takes stabs at the National Front, asylums, and more. A hidden rave-up of David Bowie's "Suffragette City" seals it: "F-Punk" is a keeper.

Whether a new record label pushed him for a more consistent album or his rock 'n' roll spirit has simple resurfaced, a new flame has been lit under Jones and B.A.D. Meanwhile, the calls and offers for a Clash reunion will probably keep pouring in, and he'll keep turning them down. Smart move. The public may not like B.A.D. nearly as much as the Clash, but if "F-Punk" is any indication of Jones's new direction, it's their loss.

Replicants formed by happy accident

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

You could say that the Replicants were an accident waiting to happen.

After completing a world tour together, members of the platinum-selling rock band Tool and rising stars Failure sporadically jammed together without any intentions.

That evolved into a demo session when ex-Tool guitarist Paul D'Amour, and Failure's bassist/vocalist Ken Andrews, drummer Greg Edwards and keyboardist Chris Pitman recorded some songs to test out Failure's then-newly purchased recording equipment.

The result was "pretty cool," D'Amour said, provoking them to make a side project out of the Replicants.

"I guess it was kind of an accident really," D'Amour said of the collaboration. "We were all so caught up in our regular projects with Tool and Failure that we needed a release on the side."

The Replicants started out doing their own material, but they didn't have enough time to devote to writing songs.

"So we said, 'Let's play some covers for fun.' It was neat to do songs by artists that we always admired but we wanted to change them a little bit more toward our way of thinking," D'Amour said.

Its eponymously titled debut on Zoo Entertainment is an 11-song tribute to some of their favorite artists. "Replicants" kicks off with a monotone, guitar-driven cover of the Cars' "Just What I Needed" and works its way through Neil Young's "Cinnamon Girl," Steely Dan's "Dirty Work" and Syd Barrett's "No Good Trying."

"We just like started playing a whole bunch of different songs. Some of them worked, some of them were cool. We just kind of picked and chose and to see which ones were the most fun to play," D'Amour explained.

Tool singer Maynard Keenan jumps on board as guest vocalist for a musically abrasive 7½-minute rendition of Paul McCartney's "Silly Love Songs." Keenan sings "I love you" more frighteningly than romantically, perhaps because it isn't exactly one of his favorite songs, according to D'Amour.

"We had to have Maynard on the album. Maynard hates Paul McCartney so much I thought I'd play a little gag on him. He said he'd sing whatever we chose so he had to do it. It was either that one or 'I Like Boys' by Missing Persons. He chose Paul McCartney."

Missing Persons still makes its way onto the album, however, with an industrial version of "Destination Unknown."

The D'Amour-Keenan collaboration could be one of the last. D'Amour, a native of Michigan's Upper Peninsula who now lives in California, has since left Tool due to "communication problems, personality conflicts. The same old crap."

"It was just kind of one of those things where we weren't seeing eye-to-eye. I kind of really had done as much as I felt I could with that kind of music and I was ready to do something a little more outside than that. They were more interested in 'Undertow Part II.'"

Tool begins work on its follow up to "Undertow" March 1 and expects to release the album in late summer. D'Amour, meanwhile, has opted to pursue his own musical avenues.

"It's going to be my original music. I can't even describe it at this point. Right now I'm working with Chris and Greg, who are also in the Replicants, and another guy, Brad Laner of Medicine. We'll see what happens."

One thing that won't be happening is a Replicants tour but D'Amour said a few songs may pop up on Failure's next tour. A second album may be in the future.

"We had talked about it actually just before Christmas. It would be fun to do another one of those records some day."

'I guess it was kind of an accident really. We were all so caught up in our regular projects with Tool and Failure that we needed a release on the side.'

Guitars have short life in Fathers of Id

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Looking out onto a sea of unfamiliar people at the Undercurrents music festival last year in Cleveland, Fathers of the Id singer/guitarist Sean Ike asked the audience what most would think to be a peculiar question for a musician:

"Does anyone have a guitar?"

He had kept up his tradition of accidentally breaking guitars but this time didn't have a spare.

"This was, at that time, the most important show of our career. The first song was so out there. There was so much energy involved that I just swung the guitar around my head without thinking. The next thing I know it's in two pieces on the ground," Ike said.

A good Samaritan loaned him a guitar to finish the show, a showcase for music industry folks and fans.

Had the owner known Ike's history of breaking guitars, he probably would have been apprehensive about offering the instrument. But it's not like Ike made conscious decisions to break three guitars within a few year's span to be a rock god or something.

"When Sean plays, he's not really rooted much in the material world," said drummer Marko Smith. "He kind of spins around, (doing) this whirling dervish weird thing. Some things don't come back from there in tact."

For the most part, Ike just gets lost in Fathers of the Id's blend of funk, soul and rock produced by his three-piece band which also includes bassist Gustav Hoffman.

The three Detroit residents are transplants from Ohio, where they met while attending Miami University.

Forming in October 1992, the band got its first potential big break the following summer when a friend of Ike's asked asked if Fathers of the Id wanted to play a Grateful Dead cover song in "A Reason to Believe," a date-rape drama that was being locally produced.

In no way similar to the Grateful Dead, Fathers of the Id agreed to perform in a bar scene but ditched the Dead song for the more appropriate cover of "Hey Joe" by Jimi Hendrix.

Last fall — nearly two years after the movie was wrapped up — Fathers of the Id made its big-screen debut in "A Reason to Believe," produced by twentysomething Doug Tirola, whose credits include assistant production coordinator on "A League of Their Own."

The independent film, which had a brief showing in Ann Arbor late last year, was done for $177,000 and starred television sitcom actress Allison Smith. Although in limited release, the movie earned press in Rolling Stone and Elle magazines, as well as The New York Times.

Upon graduating from Miami University, Hoffman, Ike and Smith moved to Detroit in early 1994 and almost immediately began setting the groundwork for Fathers of the Id's future in Detroit.

As a start, Ike attended a Detroit Musicians Alliance meeting. The newcomer went into the meeting hoping to network with fellow musicians, and left as the organization's vice president for 1994-95. Last November, he was elected president with Hoffman and Smith as co-vice presidents.

Still, between all that, Fathers of the Id found time to record their debut EP "Bougnela." The title is Wolof, one of the traditional languages of Senegal, for "I love you."

"The reason why we named it anything was because we used it in terms of the group of friends that we got (since moving to Detroit)," Ike explained.

The six-song tape explores the band members' wide variety of musical influences which range from jazz to rock to free-form funk to soul.

Although all four members write songs together, Ike said "somehow lyrics end up on my notebook first and then we go into musical notes and feel what we're feelin'."

"Soul Kid," a song which shows the similarity between Ike's and ex-Living Colour frontman Corey Glover's vocal range, kicks off the six-song release. The band tears through the straight-ahead funk rock of the socially conscious "Chewing Gun," the lazy groove of "Procrastination" and the musically maniacal "Who Will Rise Up."

In early December, the band was honored for one part of its multi-dimensional sound with the Detroit Music Awards' "Best Funk Band" prize.

Fathers of the Id will soon return to the studio to record a full-length CD. Ike said that the album will be a departure from "Bougnela."

"It's going to be noticeably different from the first release — in maturity level and the number of songs. As far as being three musicians, we're going through different things and growing as musicians and (we'll) finally bringing it to a new batch of songs."

Fathers of the Id performs at The Foundry, 18000 E. Warren, Detroit, with Shinhore and Snake Oil, Saturday, Jan. 20. Doors open at 9 p.m. for the 18 and older show. The cover charge is $5. For more information, call (313) 886-9900. The band also plays at 9 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 27, at New Way Bar, 23130 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, (810) 541-9870; and 9 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 3, at Magic Bag, 22918 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, during Mental Landscape's CD release party, (810) 544-3030.

'When Sean plays, he's not really rooted much in the material world. He kind of spins around, (doing) this whirling dervish weird thing. Some things don't come back from there in tact.'

■ THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME

Village Potter's Guild has found a permanent home at 340 N. Main Street, in the back section G-6, at Ann Arbor Trail behind Plymouth Landing.

The Plymouth Zoning Commission denied the group's request for approval to inhabit a bungalow in Old Village last fall.

Ceramics classes using wheel thrown and hand-built techniques begin Feb. 6 at the newly renovated facility. Sessions run 1-4 p.m. and 7-10 p.m. Wednesdays; and 7-10 p.m. Thursdays. The cost is $150 for 10 weeks and includes a $10 non-refundable registration fee. Class size is limited to eight. Only adult sessions are being offered at this time.

"We're excited. We've moved a gas kiln, brick by brick," said publicity person Ruth Price.

The Guild is also welcoming new members. To register for classes or for more information about joining the Guild call Kris Darby, (313) 453-2281 or Ruth Price, (313) 454-4122.

■ STUDENT SHOW

Westland artist Saundra Weed and her students at Schoolcraft College in Livonia will present an exhibit of their mixed media works through Jan. 31 in the lobby of Livonia City Hall, 33000 Civic Center Drive off Five Mile east of Farmington.

Sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission the show runs 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

In addition to the city hall show across the way, the arts commission is hosting one-of-a-kind ceramic cookie jars by Kathy Wolfe of West Bloomfield in the second floor showcases at the Livonia Civic Center Library. While at the library stop in to see the moving exhibition by Lin Baum. The Detroit artist captures the anguish and pain of society's cast-aways in "They Turn Heads," a series of oil portraits done on location primarily in homeless shelters in Detroit and New York. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, until 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Although not an arts commission exhibit but definitely worth a look are quilts by Kathleen Mayo of Livonia on display in the library's interior windows. Mayo won an award in the Quilter's Challenge sponsored by three quilt magazines in 1993. There were more than 300 entries.

■ CALLING ALL ARTISTS

The Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans is looking for fine artists and contemporary craftsmen for the 1996 Greektown Art Fair to be held May 17-19 in Detroit. Deadline for entry is Feb. 1.

Presented by the Greektown Merchants Association in cooperation with The Guild, organizers of the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair, the Greektown Fair will showcase 150 exhibitors. Artists applications are available by calling (313) 662-3382.

Chorus offers scholarships

Plymouth Community Chorus is offering three vocal scholarships to students pursuing an education in the performing arts — one $800 scholarship will be awarded to a graduating senior, and two $400 scholarships to students in high school and junior high (sixth through 11th grades).

For an application, or more information, call (313) 533-4796. Application deadline is March 1.

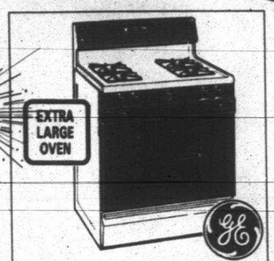

The scholarship program was established in 1984 to assist students pursuing a career in vocal music, an applied vocational career in the field of vocal music, the academic study of voice, or the study of voice relating to recreational and community singing.

Making their mark

Henry Ford CC's men's basketball team has plenty of local talent helping the Hawks this season.

The team's second-leading scorer is 1994 Plymouth Canton graduate Matt Paupore, averaging 18 points per game — ranking him fifth among the Michigan Community College Athletic Association's Eastern Conference leaders. Paupore is a transfer from Wayne State, where he played as a freshman last year.

Doug Herriman, a '95 graduate of Plymouth Salem, leads the conference in assists with 8.0 per game. And Dan McKian, another '95 Salem grad, is averaging 12.1 points (18th in the conference) on 58.3 percent shooting (ranking sixth), while getting seven rebounds a game (10th).

Unfortunately, the Hawks have not mirrored their success. Henry Ford CC was 7-6 overall, 2-3 in the conference through last Saturday.

Hurting

After a fast start, Bob Petrie — a junior goalie from Canton — has seen his season level off and then come to a complete stop.

Bowling Green State's No. 1 netminder, Petrie won eight of his first 10 games this season (with one tie). But the tide turned after that, starting with an 8-1 home ice loss to Michigan Dec. 2.

The Falcons lost Petrie's next three starts, too, the last on Dec. 15 vs. Western Michigan in Las Vegas. Petrie suffered a groin pull early in the game (a 6-4 loss) and has not played since. He is not expected to return until late this month, hopefully for BGSU's game at Notre Dame Jan. 30.

In 14 games this season, Petrie has a 3.42 goals-against average and an 8-4-1 record, with an 87.5 save percentage.

Salem JV 1st

The youth of the Plymouth Salem wrestling team paid dividends Saturday when the Rocks competed in the 16-team Melvindale Junior Varsity Tournament.

Salem finished first in the team standings, with five weight-class champions.

Rock winners were James Green, by a 16-0 score at 135; Dan Hamblin, by a 17-9 count at 140; Anwar Crutchfield, by a 12-8 margin at 152; Craig Van Camp, with a fall in 1:36 at 160; and James Walker, with a fall in 5:35 at 189.

Other top-four finishers for Salem were Dan Morgan, second at 103; Charlie Hamblin, second at heavyweight; and Robert Infante, fourth at 119.

Youth soccer champs

The Livonia Y Michigan Hawks, an under-14 girls soccer team, captured the regional indoor title Dec. 29 in Southfield.

After downing clubs from Troy, Canton, Southfield and Chippewa Valley, coach John Buchanan's team advances to the North American Indoor Championships, March 22-24, in Columbus, Ohio.

Members of the Hawks include Susan Bear, Lindsay Gusick, Kristin Leszczynski, Brianna Roy, Andi Seid, Stacey Supanich and Michele Vettraino, all of Livonia; Suzi Towne, Canton; Jessica and Rebecca Brady, Grosse Pointe; Nicole Breger and Laura Grode, Sterling Heights; Alyson Kehler and Gayle Lukes, Grand Blanc; Michelle Lowe and Kristen Weidle, Royal Oak; Cassie Teeple, South Lyon. The assistant coach is Shannon Loper. The team manager is Bill Bear.

The Hawks also won the under-15 division with a 4-1 victory over Birmingham at the Total Soccer Christmas Tournament, Dec. 27-29, in Farmington Hills. They advanced to the finals with wins over teams from Plymouth, Novi, Birmingham and Sterling Heights.

The '82 Hawks also took the under-16 A Division crown at Southfield with contributions coming from Livonians Bear, Leszczynski, Roy, Sied, Supanich, Vettraino and Deanna McGrath; along with Breger, Grode, Kehler, Lowe, Weidle, Towne and Christen Shull (Canton).

Fast splash: Tim Buchanan filled several important roles for Salem against Huron, swimming on the first-place 200 freestyle relay and on the second-place 400 yard free relay. He was also second in the 200 free.

Salem splashes past Huron

The dual meet against non-conference foe Ann Arbor Huron was expected to be a challenge for Plymouth Salem Tuesday, and the Rocks rose to meet it. Still, the victory did not come easily, nor early.

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

The road is familiar to Chuck Olson, one he's traveled so many times in his career as Plymouth Salem's (only) swim coach. Still, it's never the same; a new pothole always seems to be waiting just around the corner.

On Tuesday, the Ann Arbor Huron River Rats were the newest bump — and they were formidable enough to nearly swallow Salem whole. But the Rocks persevered, thanks in great part to superior strength in the freestyle events, posting a 97-89 triumph at Salem.

The win kept the Rocks' record perfect at 3-0.

"They swam real well," said Olson of Huron, "and we swam a lot better than I thought we'd have to to win."

In layman's terminology, that means if Olson figured his team would swim as well as it did prior to the meet, the spread would have been "20 or 30 points," not eight.

The score was tight through three events, but the Rocks took control — and the lead for good — in the 50-yard freestyle. The 1-2-4 finish of John McLenaghan (23.47), Pat Morgan (23.86) and Andrew Locke (25.21) allowed them to outscore Huron 12-4 in the event, giving Salem a 34-28 advantage going into the diving.

The Rocks added to their lead in the next two events, thanks to first-place finishes from Otto Geiseman in the diving (229.90 points) and Mark Dettling in the 100 butterfly (56.83).

The fatal blow to Huron's chances came in the following event: the 100 free. Once again, Salem went 1-2-4 to outscore the River Rats 12-4, increasing its lead from 52-42 to 64-46. Nick Corden (52.62), Morgan (52.64) and Justin Hulett (56.06) were the point-scorers for the Rocks.

A first in the 200 free relay, recorded by Corden, Morgan, Tim Buchanan and Kyle Petroskey (1:36.01), pushed Salem's lead to 80-60 — too much for the Rats to overcome, although they did narrow the gap to 10 going into the final relay by finishing 1-2-3 in the 100 breaststroke.

"We swam some very good swims," said Olson, noting Petroskey's times in the 200 individual medley (2:07.29) and the 500 free (5:02.00), both earning second places.

Others Olson mentioned were Dettling's win in the fly and 59.33 in the 100 back (third place), and McLenaghan's win in the 50 free and his 58.93 in the back (second).

Salem's other first came from McLenaghan, Morgan, Dettling and Hulett in the 200 medley relay (1:48.04).

Huron was paced by double-winner Jay Zawacki, first in both the 500 free (4:56.86) and the 200 free (1:51.39); by Dave Swank, first in the 200 individual medley (2:06.95); and by Phil Heller, first in the 100 breast (1:07.57).

Salem hosts the Rock Invitational Saturday, starting at 1 p.m. Four teams will compete: Livonia Stevenson, Birmingham Groves, Saginaw Heritage and Salem.

Before that, however, the Rocks must entertain Farmington at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Rocks, Chiefs winners in WLAA openers

VOLLEYBALL

The Rocks had a lot to replace after a superb performance last season. The players were there to fill the holes, but blending them together into a team would take time.

Coaches Allie Suffety and Brian Gilles knew this going in; after the Portage Northern Tournament Jan. 6, which featured many of the state's top teams, the Rocks' weaknesses became clearer.

Those faults have been addressed, and improvement was noticeable at both Saturday's Plymouth Festival Tournament and Monday's Western Lakes Activities Association opener at Farmington.

Salem won both.

The Rocks went 6-0 — indeed, they did not lose a single game — in collecting the Festival triumph. Their victory streak continued Monday, when they disposed of Farmington in three straight games, 15-5, 15-0, 15-8.

The wins improved Salem's record to 12-4-1 overall, 1-0 in both the WLAA and the Lakes Division. The Falcons are 0-2 in the WLAA.

"Our free-ball passing has gotten a lot better since the Portage Northern Tournament," said Suffety. "Right now, what we have to work on is our serve receiving. If we can improve that, we'll be a good team."

The Rocks already look pretty good. Shellye Sills, a senior middle hitter, is a good reason why — in the win over Farmington, she had seven kills, two solo blocks, five block assists and six digs. Then in the six-match tournament, she had team highs in kills (47), service aces (14), solo blocks (11) and block assists (tied with seven).

Other team leaders in the win over Farmington: Karissa Socia with five kills and six digs; Kim Sheldon with three kills, seven digs and two aces; Amanda Abraham with three kills, one solo block and two block assists; Jenny Trott with three kills and team highs in digs (10) and aces (tied with four); Karen Springsteen with 10 assists to kills; and Kari Flynn with two kills, five assists to kills and four aces.

In the Festival tournament, Socia had 31 kills and seven aces; Nicole Van Hees, 14 kills, two solos and seven block assists; Trott, 13 kills, 16 digs, two

Good show, again

Strong performance puts Canton in 2nd

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

It seems the Plymouth Canton gymnastics team has found its motto for the season — or at least the Chiefs' coach, John Cunningham, has.

"It went better for us than I expected," Cunningham pronounced after Saturday's trip to the 16-team Rockford Invitational, at which Canton placed second to defending state champion Holland.

The Dutch scored 141.40 points; Canton was second with 134.80, with East Kentwood third at 132.45 and Traverse City (which had been ranked second in the state) fourth (130.25).

It's not the first time the Chiefs' coach was surprised by his team's finish.

"It's another one of those things," he explained. "I told the girls we were going to be third, so relax and do your best."

They surpassed expectations because of some fine performances by their top three all-arounders: Brie Wall, Brooke Larson and Kim Nowak.

"We really had some fine individual performances by those three," said Cunningham. "They really came together and carried the team."

Particularly impressive was Wall's second-place finish in the Division II all-around. "She injured an ankle last fall, and she's just now coming around," said Cunningham.

Wall totaled 34.65 points in the all-around, finishing second to Holland's Suzy Walsh (35.80). Larson and Nowak were nearly as strong, tying for fifth (33.80).

Wall placed second in the uneven parallel bars (8.80), third in the floor exercise (8.95), tied for fourth in the vault (8.50) and tied for ninth in the balance beam (8.40).

Larson had an up-and-down type of day, taking second in the floor (9.00) and tying for third in the beam (8.55), then finishing 12th in the vault (8.20) and tying for 15th in the bars (8.05).

Nowak tied Larson for third in the beam (8.55), was fourth in the bars (8.65), tied for eighth in the floor (8.55) and ended up tied for 16th in the vault (8.05).

Other top-15 finishes for the Chiefs in individual events came from Nicole Vaagenes, 13th in the bars (8.15), and Sandy Mulder, tied for 13th in the floor (8.40).

"This gave us a really good forecast of what's over in the west (side of the state)," said Cunningham. "I thought we were improved. It was just a very nice meet."

And as long as the Chiefs continue to outdo themselves, meets will continue to be "very nice."

CC stumbles

Canton back in the pack at CC Invitational

Holt, beaten 24-0 by Redford Catholic Central in last fall's Class AA state championship football game, got some revenge Saturday.

The Rams won the 32nd annual Catholic Central Wrestling Invitational with 177 points, 11 better than second-place Temperance-Bedford. Clarkston was third (160½), while CC was fourth (154).

Livonia Stevenson finished in a tie for ninth place with Howell at 89½ points, Westland John Glenn was 11th (80) and Plymouth Canton 14th (22).

CC coach Mike Rodriguez wasn't pleased with the Shamrocks' finish. CC hasn't won its own invitational since 1988.

"The kids, they're like a yo-yo," he said. "Sometimes they're hot, sometimes they're not. We were actually lucky to get fourth. If it wasn't for John and Dave, we wouldn't have been anywhere."

Five freshmen filled spots in CC's lineup. Casey Regulski at 160 pounds was the only freshman to record a victory, winning his first-round match. Regulski was replacing Aaron Rock, who is injured.

"That's quite an accomplishment for a freshman," Rodriguez said.

Spolsky, still undefeated, pinned Holt's Steve Robedau in 1 minute, 35 seconds in the heavyweight final. Robedau, you'll recall was the top lineman on Holt's AA runner-up football team.

He'll have to wait until the state individual meet to gain personal revenge.

"He gave him a little bit of a match, but it wasn't close," Rodriguez said.

Gardner, seeded No. 2, beat Birmingham Brother Rice's Joe Cotant in the finals at 135, 8-3.

"Dave's had trouble with only one kid in the state, the kid from Brighton," Rodriguez said. "He's pretty-well focused right now. He has one thing in mind, that's to win it."

HOCKEY

Rogan leads Shamrocks to win

Redford Catholic Central spotted Ann Arbor Pioneer an early lead Saturday night, then scored eight unanswered goals to win the Metro League hockey encounter, 8-1, at Redford Ice Arena.

John Rogan scored the hat trick and added two assists for the Shamrocks, who improved their record to 7-1-1 overall, 5-0-1 in the Metro.

Pioneer opened the scoring with a power-play goal before the Shamrocks answered with two goals of their own for a 2-1 lead after one period.

Junior Mike Davis had two goals and Brad Curtin, Brad Karabelaski and Ian Devlin contributed one goal each.

"We're starting to get some stuff out of these young guys," CC coach Gordie St. John said. "You don't know if the young guys can do it in the big games, but if they do it in an 8-1 game, at least they get a taste of it. They're hard-working kids."

The goaltender was Rickey Marnon for most of the game. Richard Bartley played the last half of the third period.

solos, three block assists and eight aces; Sheldon, 13 kills, 20 digs and 12 aces; Abraham, 11 kills, two solos and five block assists; Springsteen, 53 assists to kills, 10 digs and seven aces; Flynn, 24 assists and seven aces.

The Rocks opened pool play with a 15-4, 15-10 win over North Farmington and continued their strong play with wins over Ypsilanti Lincoln, 15-8, 15-6; Trenton, 15-3, 15-4; and Dexter, 15-9, 15-10.

After that, it was on to the semifinals against fifth-seeded Dexter. Salem won again by a 15-8, 15-2 count. In the final, the Rocks rolled past North, 15-5, 15-6.

Particularly pleasing to Suffety were the attack totals. "We're getting a really decent balance after Sills and Socia, with a lot of people contributing," he said.

He was also happy with the team's quick disposal of Farmington Monday. "We just didn't let them do very much, to be honest," he said. "We played really well the first two games, then got everybody into the last one."

The week will continue to be a busy one for Salem. The Rocks host their Plymouth Varsity Invitational Saturday. Ten teams will compete, with Plymouth Canton, Livonia Franklin, Farmington Harrison, Garden City and Romulus in one pool and Salem, North Farmington, Hazel Park, Farmington and Dearborn Heights Crestwood in the other.

Plymouth Canton

The Chiefs opened their WLAA slate with a sweep of Northville Monday at Canton.

Game scores were 15-5, 15-13, 15-5, and — as they indicate — only the second set was in doubt.

Northville had a 13-11 lead in that game until "we got back on track," said Canton coach Steve Anderson.

The win pushed the Chiefs' overall record to 6-3-1; they are 1-0 in the WLAA. Northville is 0-1 in the league.

Canton's middle attack proved to be the Mustangs' downfall. Senior middle hitter Beth Ostach finished with 13 kills (a .410 kill average) and three block assists, and junior middle hitter Jessica Orleman had nine kills (.470), with 16 digs.

"She was hot all night," said Anderson of Ostach. Of Orleman, he said: "She was hitting very strong out of the middle, too. They were using one block on her and she was going around them."

Amber Wells, the team's primary setter, totaled six kills (.630), 18 assists to kills and four service aces. Nikki Kovachevich and Kristi Drinkhahn led the defense with 10 digs apiece, with Jessica Bradley coming off the bench and collecting six digs, many coming in the pivotal second game.

"It was a real good opener," summarized Anderson. "It was more of a team effort."

CC star picks Air Force

■ FOOTBALL

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer

John Spolsky finished his groundwork with the football team at Redford Catholic Central, and now the sky is the limit as he embarks on his next challenge at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Spolsky's earliest interest in flying came in the sixth grade when he attended Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala.

His football talent, leadership, and 3.2 grade point average with an ACT test score of 25 made him a perfect candidate to gain acceptance to the Air Force Academy.

The 5-foot-11, 235-pound fullback/nose guard, who routinely plowed over opponents in his three years on the CC varsity, turned down a full-ride scholarship to Bowling Green State University after receiving his appointment over the holidays.

His teammate at CC, Eric Gilbo, made a verbal commitment to BGSU.

"I kind of knew all along, but Bowling Green had so much to offer, the football program and the school," Spolsky said. "It was a really tough decision. It's more of a choice of what kind of lifestyle I want in the next 10 years."

An Air Force commitment includes four years at the academy followed by a minimum six years of service.

Spolsky will report to boot camp June 27, about two months sooner than the average freshman begins college.

He must prefer the disciplined regimen.

"It doesn't excite me, but it's something I think I need," Spolsky said.

Spolsky said one of the biggest considerations was his mother, Rita, who has raised him, along with his younger brother Chuck, by herself for the last nine years.

It will be an adjustment being away from home most of the year.

"I can't say enough about her," he said. "Never once have my brother and I gone without anything we needed or wanted. She plays two roles and does it well. I want to make sure I become successful enough and take care of her and pay her back for what she's given me."

The Air Force finished 8-5 overall following a loss to Texas Tech in the Copper Bowl. The Falcons earned the bowl berth after placing in a four-way tie for first place in the Western Athletic Conference with a 6-2 record, 8-4 including non-league games.

Spolsky didn't draw much attention from Division I schools despite rushing for 1,313 yards and 16 touchdowns as a fullback and recording four sacks as a nose guard for the Class AA state-champion Shamrocks.

Spolsky bench presses 400 pounds, but his lack of breakaway speed and height kept most of the big schools away.

"I was getting some letters from Northwestern early, but once they went to the Rose Bowl I must have started dropping from their recruiting list," he said. "I wasn't expecting anything. I'm a short kid, but the Air Force fullbacks are about my size, maybe lighter. I thought, 'Maybe I can fit in at this place.'"

Spolsky joins Joe Suhajda, a 1993 CC graduate, in the Air Force football program. Lou Yeager, a 1989 CC graduate, also played at Air Force.

The Falcons have a freshman, junior varsity and varsity team and it's likely Spolsky won't make the varsity team until his sophomore or junior years. Football was far from his No. 1 priority.

"It's a bonus, I guess, the best way to look at it," Spolsky said.

■ MEN'S HOOPS

In addition, Madonna outrebounded the Wolves 51-40, with Jeff Kennedy and Mike Maryanski leading the team with nine apiece.

Five players reached double figures in scoring for the Crusaders. Kennedy led with 22 (he also had three steals). Maryanski had 17 (and two steals), Dan Perttula (from Redford Thurston) scored 12, Mike Miller netted 11 (with eight boards) and Brandon Slone (Plymouth Salem) finished with 10. Christian Emert collected nine assists and three steals to go with four points.

UM-D got 13 points apiece from Zach Belilil and Tyree Jackson and 11 from Pat Hughes. Jackson also had 10 rebounds and nine assists.

Madonna trailed 29-28 at the half but exploded in the second half, outscoring the Wolves 50-26.

■ Delta CC 96, SC 59: A couple of runs away.

That's what separated Schoolcraft College from victory Saturday at Delta CC. Unfortunately for the Ocelots, those runs were extensive ones.

The Pioneers took an early lead, repelled an SC rally with an 11-0 run to end the first half, then blew the Ocelots away in the game's final 13 minutes to win easily.

SC slipped to 5-10 overall, 0-3 in the Michigan Community College Athletic Association's Eastern Conference. Delta improved to 4-10 overall, 2-1 in the conference.

"We just didn't play well," said SC coach Glen Donahue. "We didn't shoot free throws well . . . we missed 10 in the second half."

Going 9-for-19 at the line (48 percent) for the game — 7-of-17 in the second half — was only one of SC's problems. On the opening jump, Tim Burns, the team's second-leading scorer (13.2 points) and leading rebounder (7.5), twisted an ankle and did not play for the first 10 minutes of the game.

His contributions were limited after that. He managed just two points. Dave Pavlak led the Ocelots with 18 points; Jason Maschke (from Livonia Franklin) added 12, Dwaun Warmack had nine and Rudy Hatfield (Livonia Churchill) netted eight points and nine rebounds.

Delta got 21 points from Corey Willis, 16 from Shane Hinkle, 15 apiece from Vennis Liles and Sheddrick Nufreil, and 10 from Demarquis Simington.

After falling behind early, the Ocelots closed to within 36-31 in the final minutes of the opening half. But the Pioneers regrouped, scoring the last 11 points of the half to take a 47-31 lead.

SC fought back again in the second half, pulling to within 52-43 with more than 13 minutes remaining. But that was it for the Ocelots; Delta outpointed them 44-16 the remainder of the game.

Fast start carries Crusaders; slow start stops SC

Perhaps the scariest fact facing opponents of Madonna University's women's basketball team is that the Fighting Crusaders are only going to get better.

Madonna collected its third-straight win Tuesday night at Concordia, taking a big first-half lead and cruising with it to an 81-67 triumph. The victory improved the Crusaders' record to 15-9; Concordia fell to 8-8.

Francine Williams was the spark for Madonna this time, scoring 21 points (3-for-3 on three-pointers), grabbing 12 rebounds, making five steals and blocking three shots. Stacey Lamphere added 19 points, 11 boards (seven offensive), three assists and two steals; and Mary Murray had 13 points.

Katie Cushman and Angie Negri contributed nine points apiece, with Cushman getting six assists and three steals.

The Cardinals were led by Lori Shingledecker (from Livonia Stevenson) with 21 points. Amy Wilson totaled 16, with 13 rebounds, six assists and four steals.

This game was over not long after the opening tip. Madonna built a 29-7 lead after 13 minutes and took a 40-22 lead into the intermission. Concordia never got closer than 10 in the second half.

The Cards managed to make just 7-of-26 first-half floor shots (26.9 percent), one reason for their loss. Another: The Crusaders' 55-41 rebounding advantage, including a 27-14 edge on offensive boards.

■ Delta CC 72, SC 70: If Schoolcraft College could just manage to play one full game like the second half of Saturday's matchup at Delta CC . . .

Instead, the Lady Ocelots came out cold and didn't truly defrost until the second half. By that time they were behind by a dozen — too big a deficit to overcome, although they gave it a good shot.

The loss dropped SC to 11-7 overall, 1-2 in the Michigan Community College Athletic Association's Eastern Conference.

Becky Billicki led the Ocelots with 25 points, 20 of those coming during the second-half rally as SC overcame a 40-28 deficit. Jenny Markham had 15 and Amy Pietila scored 10.

For Delta, Jodi Shember netted 20 points and Termecia Nelson added 11.

Pietila capped SC's comeback with a jumper with 51 seconds remaining to tie it at 70, but that was all the Ocelots could muster.

Last Wednesday (Jan. 10), it was SC that built the big first-half lead then held on in a 70-63 triumph over visiting Alpena CC, the Ocelots' first conference win this season.

Billicki totaled 16 points, six rebounds and five assists for SC. Julie Schmidt scored 11 points, with Yvonne Malewski getting 10 points and six boards. Sheilah Coulter contributed eight points and 10 rebounds, and Amy Pietila had six points, 11 boards and five assists.

Kristi Whaley's 29 points paced Alpena; Marisa Stoppa had 16 and 17 rebounds.

Local businessman appointed to state board

By Beth Sundrla Jachman
Staff Writer

Small businesses are a sign of the times, according to a local businessman.

R. Gene Racho, president and founder of E R Long and Associates, a family run consulting firm, was recently appointed to the board of the Small Business Association of Michigan.

He sees the downsizing at many large companies as the spark for the creation of small businesses and an opportunity for those people who have been put out of work.

"With the reorganization of larger companies, it's a reality that all of these qualified people are being made available in the workforce," he said.

"Tens of thousands of people have to go somewhere," he said and along with that he sees the formation of small businesses also as a formation of jobs.

Racho started his business in 1990 after being the victim of a downsizing himself. He joined the Small Business Association of Michigan a short time later, and has been active in it for several years.

He chairs the association's International Trade Committee, which encourages members to get involved in international trade. It offers "cookbook lessons" on how to enter the international trade market, he said.

The committee also informs legislators of the association's concerns on trade, he said. SBAM has a strong interest in trade and trade issues, he said. In fact two or three of the top issues presented by Michigan and the Midwest region were in the top third of issues presented at a White House conference in June 1995, he said.

Those issues included the availability of services, a centralized location for information on trade and intellectual property protection.

"All of that showed the strength that SBAM had on legislative issues on the national forefront," Racho said.

The Small Business Association of Michigan, which includes about 100 members in the Observer readership area, is focused on small companies statewide and their needs. The association offers benefits to members such as discount cards, group health insurance, long distance telephone services, information by fax, collection services, legal services, payroll processing, unemployment insurance consulting services, overnight express discounts, monthly publications, a loan program and bank credit card processing.

He doesn't see the organization as competition for the chamber of commerce, which he sees as operating more on a local level.

R. Gene Racho

■ 'With the reorganization of larger companies, it's a reality that all of these qualified people are being made available in the workforce. Tens of thousands of people have to go somewhere.'

R. Gene Racho
E R Long and Associates

SBAM has taken on issues such as the single business tax and also is concerned with capital and insurance issues.

Racho was appointed to a term that expires this year, but he has plans to seek election to the seat.

He says his work on the board is similar to the job of being on the board of directors of any not-for-profit organization.

The position on the board comes after a period time in which Racho said he was faced with a lot of the challenges many people are facing with shifting at companies.

"I made a choice," he said. "No longer being 30-something, the effort of getting a new job and starting a company were about the same, the risks were about the same."

"I don't regret it," he said.

His own company offers business planning, marketing services and technical support. He has special expertise in technology and his company can help people put together a start-up business plan and then follow up when the company reaches certain levels of growth.

He doesn't do these services alone, he has help from other small businesses by calling together a team for a specific project. He calls this a "virtual company." Individual companies group together and can charge less for services, Racho said.

His is a family company in which his wife, daughter and son are active.

Livonia is a city with a lot of opportunity for small businesses to form and grow — with technology and light manufacturing facilities, close to the airport, good roads and rail services as well as access to office buildings in which to start a business, he said.

He's versed in transportation issues as a member of "Through Detroit," the advisory board to the Port Authority of Detroit.

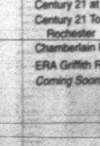

"I look at southeast Michigan as very, very competitive as a world trade port because of air, sea, road and rail transportation facilities. It certainly, in my estimation, is every bit as good and could be better than Indianapolis as a hub. It certainly can provide better services for this area than I believe Chicago can," he said.

He also sees advantages to expanding Willow Run Airport into a tradeport. "There are a lot of the issues and concerns of a lot of groups that have to be addressed," he said. But he thinks it's important for different groups to work together.

"If all of the groups don't get together, someone else will walk away with the pie," he said.

'95 on stock market — it was a very good year

TOM HOGAN

■ Since 1995 was such a great year, can we expect 1996 to be a repeat? Probably not, because the market tends to go in five-year cycles. Last year appears to be the great year in a five-year cycle. The previous market high last occurred during 1991.

Stocks closed broadly higher the last trading day of 1995 and the Dow Jones Industrial Average ended the year with its best gain since 1975.

The Dow soared to 33.5 percent, the S&P 500 hit 34.1 percent and the NASDAQ Composite reached 39.9 percent. General stock funds rose an average of 31 percent, their best year since 1991.

After being pounded by rising interest rates in 1994, the bond market also recovered. It was a terrific year for investors.

Since 1995 was such a great year, can we expect 1996 to be a repeat? Probably not, because the market tends to go in five-year cycles. Last year appears to be the great year in a five-year cycle. The previous market high last occurred during 1991.

If we can obtain a good budget accord in Washington coupled with low interest rates, low inflation, and maybe a capital gains tax cut, all this should work toward keeping the economy strong. The result could push stocks higher in 1996. If all of this doesn't happen, then the economy may be headed toward a recession by the end of 1996 or early 1997.

What are the experts saying? According to Abby Joseph Cohen of Goldman, Sachs and Company, the S&P 500 should climb to 665 and the Dow to 5600 by the end of 1996. Arnold Kaufman of Standard and Poors investment newsletter thinks the market will be a bit more choppy than in 1995, but he still looks for positive gains in 1996. In his opinion, the current law of averages will play a role, because there hasn't been a major market correction in some time. These two examples express the consensus of some experts. The market could be up modestly this year, but the ride could be a volatile one.

Who is right? If you look at what the experts were saying at the beginning of 1995, the market was not going to do well. They in fact were wrong. Although all the signs seem to point to a very favorable stock market for 1996, maybe now is the time we should be contrarians. That being the case it could be time to build cash reserves, giving a way to take advantage of potential bargains and sales in the market. Now is the time to start preparing.

Smile, Michigan Dental Association has web site

O&E ONLINE
EMORY DANIELS

Received an E-mail message from a reader last week, Dane Robison, director of membership services for the Michigan Dental Association Services Group.

Dane had just come across my Nov. 9, 1995, column — a potpourri piece on Internet sites for everyone from senior citizens to children. (In the past couple months, I've taken to writing potpourri-type columns, using the excuse that I'm cleaning my desk for 1996. Actually, my desk is just as messy as it was before, but it is fun once in awhile to hit several mini-topics in a column instead of concentrating on one.)

Anyhow, in the Nov. 9 column, I mentioned the American Dental Association's home page and Dane E-mailed me that there is something a little closer to home — the MDA Online, the Web site of the Michigan Dental Association. The MDA has just started developing this, which promises to get more content-rich as time passes. Check it out, now or later, at http://bizserve.com da./

■ A common inquiry I receive, which often is asked of others as well, is how do I find someone else's E-mail address. All the smart alecs out there (or is it smart Alexs?) advise us to pick up the phone, call and ask. Of course! But none of us want to do that. So here's an alternative to try:

Four11 (admittedly a step or two below Seven-11) is a free search engine that allows you to search through more than two million E-mail addresses. To do so, however, you first must sign in and provide your E-mail address. This is how they got two million, but that's fair enough.

So load up your Web browser and point to http://www.Four11.com/ and upon arriving click on "First Time Users, Click Here" on the home page. Enter your E-mail address and you are immediately allowed to search for the address you want. Bookmark this site before leaving.

Four11 does not want you to enter your E-mail address time each time you return. And so after registering the first time, you will receive an E-mail message giving you a personal password with which to access Four11. (Enter this password in the "commenta" section of your bookmark if your software allows; there is nothing sensitive about this password.)

At the Four11 search screen are boxes asking for first name, last name, city, state or province, and country. Hit ENTER or RETURN for a search and the results are produced. Click on any item the search produces and receive a detailed summary of that entry's information including name and current E-mail address. Entries may be outdated but try them and see. The worst that can happen is that the sent message bounces back as undeliverable.

■ WOMEN20S is a listserv mail discussion group whose purpose is to discuss issues pertaining specifically to women in their 20s. Related topics might include issues of safety, professional/educational issues, relationship/marriage issues, and economic issues. This list encourages women between the ages of 20-30 to subscribe.

To subscribe send the following command to listserv@sjuvm.stjohns.edu and in the body of the message type "Subscribe WOMEN20S your first name your last name" without the quotes, (i.e., Subscribe WOMEN20S Jane Smith).

■ A growing number of O&E Online users have their own home page. Throughout the Internet having your own home page is becoming quite a popular thing, akin to the earlier desire to have your own E-mail address. Anyhow, there is a site on the 'Net that will, upon request, "proofread" your home page.

Doctor HTML can be accessed at http:/imagiware.com xHTML.cgi. Enter the URL of your home page and Doctor HTML will perform several tests to see if your home page is in tiptop shape. You are given the choice of choosing which tests you want performed, such as spelling checks, image analysis, hyperlink verification, and syntax tests. When I last visited the site it announced the existence of glitches it was hoping to fix soon. Only part of the page would load not my screen. Hopefully its fixed by now.

■ Speaking of home pages (which we were), if you missed the earlier announcement in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, O&E On-Line has a completely re-designed, modernized, restructured and content rich home page. It's really very functional and quite fun to navigate. I'm excited about it and you will be too if you point to http:/oeonline.com.

You can direct questions to Emory Daniels by E-mail with emory@oeonline.com or fax number 591-7279. To sign up for O&E On-Line, dial (313)591-0903, at "log-in" prompt type "new" and at "Key:" prompt type GL6NY2. Past columns may be accessed online at http://oeonline.com/(tilde mark)emoryd/archive.html.

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

Knowledge, 'gift of gab' led to radio shows

By Joe Gagnon
Special Writer

A few weeks ago I received a letter from an Observer & Eccentric reader who asked me how I managed to get into the radio business and if she would continue to hear me on the weekends.

The answer is yes to hearing me on the weekend, and the radio story goes like this:

In 1979, I purchased a business in Garden City called Carmack Appliance which had been formed some 20 years before by Mr. Carmack. The mode of operation in this business had been one of informing the consumer how to do things themselves.

I continued the practice in much the same fashion and being a radio listener to so many new types of programs, I decided to ask Jack Bailey at WCAR if I could do a show about major home appliances on his station.

In 1985, the radio career of the Appliance Doctor was launched and in the next 10 years a total of $88,000 would be spent by the good doctor to keep himself on the air.

Many people thought I was being paid to do the show but the opposite is true. On some stations around Detroit, you have to buy the air time. Soon after the show went on the air, I received a call from America's Master Handyman,

Glenn Haege of WXYT, who asked if I would be a regular guest on his program. This proved very successful with the increase in business and name recognition and the request for my services at home shows, seminars, etc.

This radio relationship with Glenn had to end a year ago when I signed on with 760 WJR. The business and personal side of our friendship continues to flourish today as I'm sure it will for many more years.

At about the same time, I received a call from Ted Heusel at WAAM in Ann Arbor asking if I could be a guest on his show every month. I have been there with him now for 11 years and I love that gentleman like he was my father.

Thanks to the understanding of WJR, they have allowed me to continue on his station this past year. It was on this station some 8 years ago that I met Fat Bob Taylor, the singing plumber.

He informed me that 33 family members were coming to his house for Thanksgiving dinner, and that the bake element in his electric stove had blown up and the service company couldn't get one for two weeks.

The next day I replaced the element in his stove and he never forgot that small favor. A great friendship developed between us and I miss him so very much since his passing this past Father's Day.

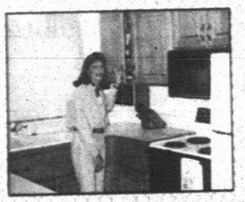

I'm not alone, but I may be the only man who cries when he hears his music.

Fat Bob Taylor had me on his show on WJR many times during 1994 and it prompted management to look at what I was doing. I was signed to do my own show at the beginning of '95 and according to a recent meeting, it looks like I am going to be on 760 WJR for some time to come.

And, guess what folks? I am being paid.

A personal point of view before you ask me what it is like to be a celebrity on a major radio station in Detroit. I AM NOT A CELEBRITY. . . . I am a blue collar worker with 30 years of experience in appliance service blessed with a God-given gift of gab.

Doors open up new look

STORY BY LINDA CHOMIN

What's the first thing visitors notice when entering your home? The front door. Installing a new entry door is one of the simplest home improvements for rejuvenating a tired exterior.

When the wooden entry door on Ed and Valerie Sinnamon's Livonia home began cracking, the couple decided it was time for a change. Built in 1967, the brick home needed freshening. Out went the old white door, replaced by a fiberglass door stained to look like mahogany.

"The door was out of fashion. It had sidelights with bettle glass. The new door with frosted glass in a tulip design gives the house quite a bit of curb appeal," Ed Sinnamon said.

In addition to painting the siding and shutters, Diane and Sam Williams updated the front of their Livonia colonial by replacing a double wood door with a single and two sidelights.

"I think the new door added to the value of our home. We get so many compliments," Diane Williams said.

Improving the looks of a home from the street seems to be on a lot of folks' minds these days. Entry door sales for existing homes are booming all over Wayne and Oakland counties, including at Empire Doors and Windows in Redford.

Sales representative Phillip Ben-Ezra says purchases of doors for homes 10 to 50 years old account for 95 percent of his business. Although not the only reason, beautification is the number one reason for increasing sales.

"People want to beautify their homes. It adds value to the home. A new entry door is the next step in home improvement, like an interior design update outdoors," Ben-Ezra said.

Saving on heating and cooling bills remains a strong second to beautification. Empire builds its steel entry doors with a solid polyurethane core ensuring a R-15 insulating value, which makes it up to five times more energy efficient than wood doors and approximately 30 percent more than steel doors with polystyrene insulation.

"The old wooden doors are warping and they're losing a lot of energy. The fiberglas and steel doors will not shrink, swell, warp, split or crack," Ben-Ezra said.

Harold and Roz Kohn replaced their double entrance doors on their 11-year-old West Bloomfield ranch to create an airy atmosphere in their dark foyer after plans to add a skylight failed.

"We wanted to get some light in the house. The new door added to the beauty both inside and out," Roz Kohn said.

What styles are popular with people buying entry doors? According to Ben-Ezra, it varies.

Since Empire manufactures its own doors, the company is able to offer one-of-a-kind custom looks to please just about anyone.

According to Henry Tarnow of Tarnow Doors Inc. in Farmington Hills, his customers, who are "choosing to invest in their homes insteading of moving," are opting to dress up exteriors with less expensive steel doors incorporating fancy glass.

"People are fixing up their homes with doors that are more decorative with leaded glass. The steel doors are lower in price," Tarnow said.

"They're buying fiberglass doors because they can be stained to look like wood and are a very attractive low-maintenance door."

As far as adding a storm door, some people think it detracts from a beautiful door. Tarnow says no. Aluminum dulled by weather and time is simply a sign of a door past its prime.

"Storm doors are more attractive today. Many people like them because they allow for cross ventilation as well as daylight. You add a brass plate and lock and you have an asset, what I like to refer to as kind of an entrance to the world," Tarnow said.

What should homeowners look for when shopping for a door? Both Tarnow and Ben-Ezra agree buyers should spend a little extra time searching for a reputable company because, as Ben-Ezra says, "a door is not just a door."

"Installation of a door is 90 percent of it," Tarnow cautioned. "If it's not hung plumb and square, it won't seal well."

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Hit the streets to find subjects

MONTE NAGLER

Did you know that one of the most varied and rewarding of photographic subjects is literally right at your doorstep?

It's streetlife! Whether it's the familiarity of your own town or the unexplored streets in a strange place, streetlife provides tremendous opportunity for you and your camera.

If you look through a photography book or at a collection of old photographs, you'll find some of the most interesting pictures are invariably of streetlife. This is largely because it is this aspect of our lives that most readily reflects the fashions, trends and lifestyles of a particular period.

Store fronts have an identity of their own. Advertising signs, lampposts, even mailboxes are important features of the street and can be effective elements of a photographic composition.

A street is dynamic. Cars, buses and bicycles are all subjects with strong pictorial potential.

And, of course, there are the people. People walking down the street, people engaging in animated conversation, people standing on the corner — all wonderful opportunities for streetlife photography. There is an almost irresistible appeal in people pictures and a subject preoccupied is easy prey to a photographer with a keen eye and a quick response.

A street market can be a treasure trove of streetlife pictures. Market people are extroverts by nature and often have faces and mannerisms that can make great photos.

One problem that often occurs in streetlife photography is confusing and busy backgrounds. Try to avoid this by choosing a camera position that isolates your subject from the surroundings. Use a telephoto lens to frame your picture tightly and by using a wide aperture, distractions in the background will be kept out of focus.

To minimize problems with contrast, photograph subjects that are out of direct sunlight. Better still, an overcast day provides the best lighting for streetlife people pictures. Bright colors are more saturated and lighting on faces is more flattering.

Use a fast film in the 400ASA range either color or black and white depending on your preference. The faster films will enable you to handhold exposures under most circumstances.

So there you have it! Become streetwise with streetlife.

BOOK BREAK

Looking at literary trivia

By Victoria Diaz
Special Writer

I'm forever coming across bits of literary fact that, while not exactly earth-shattering, nevertheless give me pause in the crazy hours of my day. Here's an odd assortment I've encountered recently:

- Poet Maya Angelou was the first African-American and the first female conductor of a San Francisco cable car.
- Zane Grey was a dentist.
- Henry Miller once worked as a gravedigger.
- Jack London was repeatedly jailed for vagrancy.
- "Stones for Ibarra," her highly lauded first novel, was published in 1983 when Harriet Doern was 73 years old.
- The phrase, "not a creature was stirring not even a mouse," first appeared in Alexandre Dumas's "The Three Musketeers" — not in Clement Clarke Moore's "A Visit From St. Nicholas."
- Shakespeare and Cervantes died on the same day — April 23, 1564.
- The Lilly Library at Indiana Uniiersity owns some of poet Sylvia Plath's hair. It's part of a large archive purchased from her mother in 1978.
- In the early '80s, Jove published what they called "no frills" books. Each was titled "Western," "Science Fiction," "Romance," or "Mystery." Covers were white, and the generic titles in plain black letters. No author's name appeared on the books, and each book was, in a sense, a collection of cliches peculiar to the genre. Customers paid $1.50 for each sixty-page story.
- Mary Shelley was 21 when she wrote "Frankenstein."
- Madeleine L'Engle's well-loved children's book, "A Wrinkle in Time," was rejected by more than 30 publishers before it finally found a home. It went on to win the coveted Newbery medal in 1963.
- In L. Frank Baum's "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," the magic slippers were not ruby-red (as in the movie), but silver. According to some film sources, silver photographed poorly.
- In the earliest Cinderella, the glass slipper was not glass, but fur — probably ermine. According to some sources, a mistranslation occurred early on.
- Dominick Dunne ("A Season in Purgatory," "The Mansions of Limbo") was the stage manager for the highly-popular "Howdy- Doody Show" in the early days of television.

House erectors: Residential builders here expect another productive year during 1996.

1996 looks like another good year

Residential construction activity in our little corner of the world dipped slightly last year, but not as much as the national average. Area builders expect the good times to continue.

By Doug Funke
Staff Writer

A good economic climate including low mortgage rates, low inflation and low unemployment leads residential builders here to project another solid year of construction activity in 1996.

Permits were issued last year for nearly 15,150 single-family units in a seven-county area including Wayne and Oakland, said Irvin H. Yackness, executive vice president of the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan.

"We expect permits to maintain the same level. We expect to see in excess of 15,000 in 1996," he said.

Even though activity was down nearly 4 percent, 1995 was still the second-best year here since the 1970s.

Several builders who recently attended their association's annual forecast meeting anticipate that the momentum will continue.

"We expect our production to be up 10-15 percent," said Scott Jacobson, president of a Bingham Farms development/construction company. "We expect to do between 230 and 240 houses."

Jacobson, who described 1995 as a good year, has about a dozen active projects including Adams Ridge and Hunt Club in Auburn Hills and Windridge in Northville.

He said his product ranges in price from $135,000 to $300,000.

"Interest rates are down, consumer confidence is up," Jacobson said.

Prices are edging up, too, he added.

"We're seeing vendor increases. Mechanical is up, drywall is up a little bit. Lumber is stable now. We're looking at the potential of concrete going up this spring," he said.

While Jacobson said it was difficult to estimate a specific price increase, Janet Compo, president of a Farmington Hills company specializing in custom-built, luxury houses, projected an increase on the order of 10 percent.

"Price increases — we're already getting them," she said. "Drywall has creeped up. Refrigeration, washers and dryers are up."

This year has started off with a bang, said Paul Robertson Jr., a Bloomfield Hills builder.

"I stopped in at Pinewood in Canton last weekend (Jan. 6-7) and planned to stay about 20 minutes and ended up staying about four hours because so many people were there," he said.

Robertson said he projects selling 135 houses this year compared to 89 in '95 primarily because he's opening two new subdivisions — the Links of Pheasant Run in Canton and the Glens in Troy.

Condominiums start at about $160,000 at the Links, houses at about $190,000 at the Glens, he said.

"I'm really bullish," Robertson said. "It's about time for the cycle to go the other way. Usually I can smell that. I can't smell it this time."

Rex Rosenhaus, vice president of Uniland in Farmington Hills, also cited the state's economy in predicting a good year.

"Interest rates are coming down, and they're still extremely attractive," he said.

"The economic base in Michigan is diversifying. Unemployment is low — I think it's one of the lowest in the country for big cities."

Standard Federal Bank offers rates of 6 1/8 and 6 3/8 on 30- and 15-year fixed-rate mortgages, respectively. The Michigan Employment Security Commission reports a seasonally adjusted unemployment rate of 5 percent.

Uniland offers condos for sale starting at about $100,000 at Deerhurst and houses at $130,000 in Cherry Oak, both in Westland.

Uniland sold 68 units last year, Rosenhaus said, and he expects to sell about the same this year.

"We're still gearing to an affordable product," he said. "Demand still seems to be there."

David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, told BIA members that the rosy economic picture should continue.

"We're talking about a moderate-growth, high-employment economy," Seiders said. "Inflation is under control — below 3 percent for the third year in a row. There's no real structural imbalance we can find in the economy."

Seiders advised builders to keep their inventory under control and not overbuild.

He also warned that some potential buyers around the country reportedly are maxing out on credit limits, which could affect qualifying for a mortgage.

Seiders also suggested that builders monitor budget and tax talks in Washington, D.C. especially as to how any changes might affect home ownership.

"We are now heavily favored," he said.

Yackness also gave builders the good news that a more strict model energy code has been repealed by the state legislature.

"Our association believes homes built today are sufficiently insulated and energy efficient consistent with affordability," Yackness said.

"If a buyer wants more and they can afford to pay for extras, there's no doubt that no builder won't be glad to provide those extras."

Keep track of home improvement expenses to cut taxes

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. Last week, you answered a question regarding strategies of selling a house where you talked about deferring income and the $125,000 exclusion. Are there any other issues that you think should be considered from a tax standpoint?

A. Another way to reduce the tax bite in a sale of a house is to ensure that you have taken all of the qualified home improvement expenses that could reduce the sales price of your house. For example, in calculating you house's adjusted basis, be sure to add to the original purchase price the cost of all permanent home improvements, such as replacing the roof, installing hardwood floors, and landscaping your yard.

You can also include certain closing costs along with other expenses you paid in connection with buying your house.

Another way to lower any taxes that you might otherwise owe is to time the sale of your house to coincide with the year in which your income will be less and your tax rate lower.

Another matter that should be considered is that if you are able to defer income tax on the sale of your house by meeting the deferral requirements, you are limited to one deferral in a two-year period, unless the move is job related.

It is also important to understand that the tax you owe on your profit is merely deferred, not forgiven. You still owe the full amount, although as long as you continue to own your house and meet the deferral requirements, you do not have to pay the tax.

Q. We are a very large community association and are concerned about whether we are covered by the Americans with Disability Act and the Family and Medical Leave Act as they relate to one another. Can you help?

A. As of July 26, 1994, the coverage of the Americans with Disability Act (ADA) expanded to all private employers with 15 or more employees.

The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), which took effect Aug. 5, 1993, applies to employers with 50 or more employees, provided the employee that works at a site that has at least 50 employees within 75 miles.

The interplay between these two federal statutes is very complicated and factually sensitive.

A number of fairly common personnel policies relating to attendance, absenteeism, reinstatement and discipline are being called into question and must be addressed by employers covered by these statutes.

You are best advised to consult with your attorney, who, hopefully, will have experience in this area.

Lower water use, lower bills come with today's houses

A major benefit of a new house is your savings in the amount of water the household will use and its accompanying cost. New houses use less water than older ones because they use low-flow fixtures that would be considered "conservation measures" if they were installed in existing houses.

The average family of four in a new house with low-flow fixtures uses 30,000 gallons of water per year, while the same family in a house built before 1980 with traditional fixtures would use 80,000 gallons per year. That's a savings of 63 percent.

The bathroom is a primary area where water use can be reduced. Traditional toilets use five to seven gallons of water per flush, but water-saving toilets use three to three and a half gallons per flush. Low consumption (also called ultra low flush) fixtures use 1.6 gallons per flush. This can save the average household 20,000 gallons per year, while low-consumption toilets can save 30,000 gallons per year.

Also, low flow shower heads installed in most new houses use 2.5 gallons per minute, while traditional pre-1980 fixtures use 16.3 gallons per minute and post-1980 fixtures use 12.5 gallons per minute. Low-flow shower heads not only save as much as 12,000 gallons per year for an average family, but they also save the energy used to heat the water.

Water-conserving kitchen and lavatory faucets can reduce water use by 2,000 to 9,000 gallons per year. Total household savings for a family of four with new low-flow fixtures can amount to 20,000 gallons per year over conventional post-1980 fixtures or 50,000 gallons per year over traditional pre-1980 fixtures. In addition, manufacturers have begun to design appliances with shorter cycles, adjustable water levels and water recycling features. These features can reduce water use by as much as 40 percent.

Potential community benefits of lowered water use in new houses include avoiding system expansions and higher operating costs, improved water quality, reduced load on wastewater treatment facilities and septic systems, reduced new facility construction costs and enhanced capacity to sustain growth and development.

Secondary market is foundation for home loans

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

(This is the first in a two-part series explaining the home mortgage secondary market.)

Since the mid-1970's, secondary marketing has become an increasingly useful tool in helping lending institutions provide money for house purchases. However, there are still many people in the mortgage business, let alone the general public, who do not fully understand what the secondary market is and how it operates.

The following is the first of a two-part series examining secondary marketing and its effect on the housing market. The first section deals with the structure and pricing of secondary marketing. In next week's column, we'll look at the major players in the secondary marketing industry.

Secondary marketing is a portion of the mortgage market in which the lenders and investors buy, sell and trade mortgages. With yearly-transactions totaling more than $1 million, it provides the foundation for all mortgage lending.

Here's how it works: A company we'll call National Mortgage keeps very few mortgages it originates in its portfolio. So, when National closes on a mortgage, it offers the loan for sale to a permanent investor. This investor may, in turn, decide to sell or trade this loan to another company. Both National Mortgage and the investor are participating in the secondary market.

There are four major benefits secondary marketing brings to the nation's economy. They are:

1. The secondary market provides liquidity to investors who do not traditionally invest in mortgages.

2. The secondary market moderates negative effects of periods of capital shortage. By encouraging other investors to buy mortgages, the market provides funds for new mortgages.

3. The secondary market facilitates the movement of capital through a national network of investors who buy mortgages from low-capital regions with money from capital-surplus regions.

4. The secondary market moderates regional differences in interest rates and lessens the effects of regional economic downturns. In the secondary market, primary mortgage lenders can sell the mortgages in several different formats: whole loans, participations and mortgage-backed securities. With a whole loan, the purchaser has entire ownership of the loan. These loans may be sold with or without recourse. If a loan sold with recourse goes into default, the seller may be required to repurchase the loan. Primary lenders may also sell a partial interest or participation in a loan. For example, a lender may sell 70 percent participation and retain 30 percent. Because the interests of the buyer and seller are mutual, documentation requirements for participations are often less strict than for whole loan sales. The third type, mortgage-backed securities, are more liquid than whole loans or participations and may require even less paperwork. With these securities, investors in any part of the country can invest in mortgages as easily as buying stocks and corporate bonds while receiving a similar or better assurance of safety. The primary interest for institutions selling mortgages is how investors decide on prices for the mortgages you wish to sell in the secondary market. An executive from a major mortgage bank explains how his company arrives at the pricing structure for mortgages. "There are a number of different factors that impact the prices we pay for mortgages," he says. "Investors look at what the economy is doing, where we are in the current economic cycle, the amount of debt in the system, the money supply and more." He continues, "Basically, the prices are determined by the market for the loans. We look at the market every day and we quote our own prices accordingly. If investors are willing to pay more for a loan, the discount points will be less. If the prices are down, the discount points will be more."

He concludes that the prices for loans in the secondary market comes down to the principle of supply and demand. "We have to determine whether investors are in a position to invest in mortgages. If they're bullish, the prices will go up."

David Mully is a Senior Loan Officer for Source One Mortgage Services Corporation in Farmington Hills. Source One is Michigan's largest mortgage bank. He has specialized in residential mortgages in the Detroit metropolitan area for the last eight years. Builders share respect for value at Halstead Forest

One good collaboration often leads to another.

Benivegna Building and Italo-American Building, which worked together at Caliburn Estates and Caliburn Manor in Livonia, are joining forces again to build Halstead Forest, detached site condominiums in Farmington Hills.

The two are building each other's plans on an alternating basis for buyers at a 25-acre site off 13 Mile between Haggerty and Halstead. Forty-six units are planned.

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Seven different floor plans are available ranging from $264,900 for a two story of 2,600 square feet with four bedrooms and 2½ baths to $335,900 for a two story of 3,400 square feet also with four bedrooms and 2½ baths.

Lot premiums range from $4,000 to $25,000.

"We work together," said Ronald P. Benivegna. "We're not competing. Expenses are shared. We're controlling costs better.

"We're both old-time Italians," he said. "Tony DiFederico (Italo-American) and my father go way back together. He likes to build a good house, quality-looking home. Our philosophy is exactly the same."

Several factors will draw prospects, Benivegna said.

"It's pretty private, small and cozy. It's like virgin forest back here in some spots. And one road in and the same road out."

Benivegna also cited value of construction at Halstead Forest.

"A lot of people are looking at square footage in relation to price," he said. "As soon as you cross 14 Mile, you hit another plateau of price ranges."

The Farmington School District, which services the sub, is a big plus, too.

The typical buyer is 35-45 years old, has a child or two, both husband and wife work and they have built previously, Benivegna said.

Standard features in all seven plans include first floor laundry, range and dishwasher, fireplace, air conditioning, two-car garage and basement. Exterior materials include brick and wood siding — no vinyl or aluminum.

Two models have been built.

The Hickory, constructed by Italo-American, is a two story of 2,600 square feet.

All four bedrooms are upstairs. The walk-up master has a separate tub and shower, cathedral ceiling, walk-in closet and dual sink vanity. One of the other three bedrooms has a cathedral ceiling.

The main floor is laid out almost as two distinct houses. A library is off one side of an elegant two-story foyer, a more formal living room and dining room flow together off the other side.

A less formal kitchen/eating nook and family room are along the back of the house.

The basic Hickory floor plan built costs $268,900. The model, with upgrades, is priced at $294,000.

Benivegna has built the Birch, a more open, contemporary two story of 2,500 square feet with three bedrooms and 2½ baths.

The master suite is on the main floor. It has walk-in, wall and linen closets, built-in dressing table, separate tub and shower, dual sink vanity and cathedral ceiling.

The main living area also has a study with catedral ceiling, half-bath with sloped ceiling, kitchen/nook with island, built-in desk and cathedral ceiling over the nook, and a combination family room/dining area.

Two bedrooms and a bath with shower are upstairs.

The subdivision is serviced by city water and sewers. There are no sidewalks except for around the perimeter of the property.

Birch plan: This model at Halstead Forest situates the master suite on the main floor along with a study, great room/dining room combination and kitchen/eating nook.

The property tax rate currently is $38.76 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $268,900 unit at Halstead Forest would pay about $5,200 the first year.

The annual association fee is $120.

"They love the location, that it's in Farmington Hills . . . (and) we've left trees instead of clear-cutting the site," he said.

"They like the openess of the plans. We also hear people like the fact not all the houses are the same. Ron and Tony will work with each purchaser. We've discouraged people from building the same house next door or across the street," Oleinick said.

Jane and Ken Dause are buying the Laurel, a two story and the most economically priced plan.

"We currently live in almost the exact same area and didn't want to move too far out," Ken said. "It's real convenient to a lot of different stores, restaurants, malls and freeway access. We also like the Farmington School District.

"It seems I was getting more house for the money than other homes in the area," he added. "It has a big family room with an open floor plan. It had what we were looking for as well as a nice master suite."

Kathy and Roy Casteel and daughter Nicole will move into a Sycamore, also a two story with four bedrooms and 2½ baths.

"We like Benivegna," Kathy said. "The quality of his house is very good. He reminds me of a perfectionist. It's taken longer than we anticipated, but he wants it right."

The models at Halstead Forest, (810) 553-4061, are open 1-6 p.m. weekdays, noon to 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, closed Thursdays.

Supply of house lots stable

The supply of available lots for new home construction continues to remain stable here and across the country, a tracking service based in Livonia reports.

"Prices, though generally advancing, have stayed within workable parameters," writes Robert R. Denton, executive vice president of Lomas Financial Group which publishes U.S. Housing Markets.

When price increases do occur they are more a result of development costs than supply and demand, Denton indicates.

"In many cases, higher lot prices reflect growing costs — a developer's requisite contributions to infrastructure and greater attention to engineering, plus increased administrative expenses that accompany a more deliberate planning and regulatory process," Denton writes.

Demand pressure on prices most often occurs in projects aimed at entry-level buyers. Attractive mortgage rates have especially opened the door to people able to build new for the first time.

Here's what U.S. Housing Markets specifically has to say about southeastern Michigan in a report dated Dec. 15:

"Lot prices have escalated in western suburbs, but have generally remained stable in most other submarkets despite continued pressure of single-family construction gains.

"Land development in the past two years has produced plenty of building lots in most submarkets.

"Employment gains in the past year have been impressive, and the housing market has been feeding off a robust local economy flavored with low mortgage rates. Both entry-level and move-up builders have benefitted.

"Lot prices in the Novi area have risen dramatically, with few move-up sites available for less than $50,000. Quick flips are seen. Rapid growth has put curbs on water supplies; taps are more costly.

"In growing northern and northwest suburbs, 60-by-120 lots in well-located subs can command $45,000 or more. Hundred foot lots in move-up enclaves command $75,000 and up.

"Elsewhere, typical starter home lots sell for $32,000-$36,000 and larger 80-foot sites can bring up to $45,000.

"Developable raw land is selling for $20,000 to $30,000 per acre in most corridors."

Developers today have an easier access to financing than they did in the late 1980s and when this decade began, U.S. Housing Markets reports.

"The lending industry seems to have shed the hangover caused by the savings and loan collapse," Denton writes. "Bankers have learned to work with the tighter capital requirements that followed. And funding is offered to developers from a wide variety of sources institutional and private.

"Plenty of money is available now for land acquisition and development," Denton writes. "If a residential development faces impediments today, they are more likely to be in the nature of regulatory obstacles than financial curbs."

Roofs come in many materials

AP — When putting on a new roof, you have a few decisions to make. First, you must choose a style and color that best suit your home's architectural style. Also, you must consider cost, durability, fire resistance, ease of maintenance and manufacturer's warranty.

Take a look at some of the different types of roofing: asphalt shingles are used on more than 80 percent of American homes. There are two main types: organic base and fiberglass base. The organic kinds have a base of felt made from wood and paper. They cost about $40 to $50 per square (a square is 100 square feet of roofing) for standard-grade shingles and $50 to $80 per square for premium grade. They are attractive, widely available, durable and easy to install.

Fiberglass base shingles are as economical and as easy to use as organic base but they can last 5 to 10 years longer because they don't absorb water, so they resist warping and cracking better.

Wood roofing, although time-consuming to install, is naturally beautiful and can give your home a rugged outdoor look. There are two types: shingles and shakes. Shingles are usually sawn and have a smooth, finished appearance. Shakes are usually split first and then sawn to a taper on their backs. Because they are split, the face has a rough texture. Wood roofing costs about $60 to $100 per square. Flammability is a big worry. Fire retardants can help reduce, but does not eliminate, this danger. Untreated wooden shingles are prohibited in certain areas, so check your local building codes.

Tile roofing made from clay and concrete is used on many Mediterranean and Spanish-style homes. It's relatively inexpensive at about $50 to $90 per square, but it's heavy. Your roof framing must be strong enough to support its weight, and shipping costs from a distant manufacturer can make it prohibitively expensive.

Slate is fireproof, attractive and extremely long lasting but, at $275 to $370 per square, expensive. It also requires strong framing.

Relatively flat roofs that slope less than 2 inches of rise per 12 inches of run can have drainage problems. Aluminum or steel panels at $50 to $200 per square, asphalt roll roofing ($25 to $35), and tar and gravel ($35 to $45) produce the extra waterproofing needed.

Replacing a roof is a job for a professional roofing contractor and should be managed like any other major home-repair contract.

Tamra has handyman space

For a study kit of the Tamra (403-52), send $10.00, to Landmark Designs, P.O.BOX 2307-OE48, Eugene, OR 97402 (Be sure to specify plan name & number) For a collection of plan books featuring our most popular house plans, send $20 to Landmark, or call 1-800-562-1151.

Is there someone in your family who enjoys woodworking, restoring a vintage automobile, or just doing different fix-it projects around the house? Have you been stymied by lack of a proper space to set up your tools?

If so, take a look at the brilliant design of the Tamra. One of the many notable assets of this plan is the 780-square-foot, two-car garage. It includes a shop/storage area with a built-in workbench and cabinets to hold tools and materials.

Adjacent to the garage is a full-length RV pad to hold your vacation vehicle when not in use.

Step inside from the garage and deposit your soiled clothing in the large utility room. In addition to room for a washer and dryer, there is a deep sink, built-in ironing board and room for double freezers. Conveniently located across the hall is a full bathroom with a skylight.

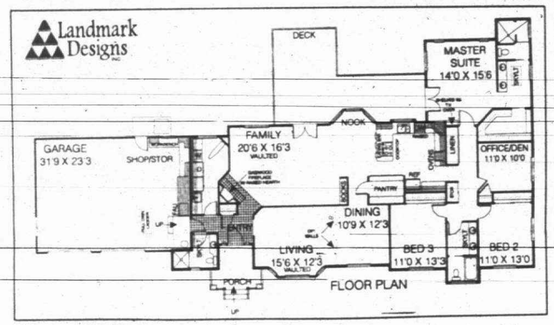

To the front of the Tamra are the living and dining rooms. They can be left open to each other, or optional walls may be constructed. The vaulted living room is good-sized and has a nice bay window. After a meal in the formal dining room, you can entertain your guests here in elegant style.

The main gathering spot in the house, the vaulted family room, is quite generous and features built-in book shelf and combination gas/wood fireplace on a raised hearth. French doors open onto a substantial back deck where summertime will find you at the barbecue.

A bright breakfast nook separates the kitchen from the family room. The easily managed kitchen has an informal eating bar, cooktop range, separate ovens, appliance center and walk-in pantry.

The master suite, isolated for privacy, has among its amenities a huge walk-in closet, raised TV shelf, access to the deck and a private bathroom with skylight and twin basins.

The two identical secondary bedrooms, divided by a skylit bathroom, have plentiful closet space and a view to the front. Completing the floor design of the Tamra is a small home office/den, and hallway linen storage.

Privacy: The Tamra separates the master suite from the rest of the house to give privacy. It also features a shop in the garage that is convenient for auto repair and house repair.

Kitchen is nerve center of time-conscious homes

Time. Who really has enough of that precious commodity in today's hectic world? Certainly not the 724 Americans recently surveyed by Whirlpool Home Appliances. In fact, almost three-quarters of those questioned reported being too busy to complete household chores, and almost half felt they were busier today than their parents were at the same point in their lives.

How we do spend the time allotted us during an average day seems to be related to both our gender and our family situation. For example, the survey found that:

■ Women spend more time per week hand washing dishes than men. But, men spend more time per week using the dishwasher.

■ Married men and married women spend almost the same amount of time each week grocery shopping.

■ However, single women spent the greatest amount of time of any group grocery shopping, spending almost twice as much time per week than single men.

■ The largest share of home and yard maintenance seems to go to married men. Women, regardless of their marital status, do more laundry and general housecleaning than men during a given week. Even among singles without children, women seem to dedicate more time to doing this type of housework.

■ Singles, whether male or female, spend about the same amount of time cooking and eating their meals. Among those married, however, women spend a significantly higher number of hours each week in meal preparation than men.

Although the majority of both men and women surveyed reported being happy with their lives overall, many of the respondents still wished for more time — especially to be with family. According to the survey, just 17 hours of personal time is spent each week with spouses or significant others, and just six hours — talking, playing, helping with homework — is spent with the children.

"In many ways, this is why the kitchen has become the nerve center of family life," says Dr. Marietta Baba, anthropology professor at Wayne State University in Detroit. The kitchen is one of the few places in a home where families can combine household responsibilities and personal pursuits.

"Parents spend time helping their children with homework at the kitchen table, and spouses talk to each other while cooking or cleaning up," says Dr. Baba.

So, how do you transform your kitchen into the family center you need? A good place to start is with the right appliances. Flexible and efficient appliances can do a lot to free up a kitchen for other pursuits. Dual convection/conventional ovens, easy-to-clean ranges, programmable microwave ovens, frost-free refrigerator-freezers all help to give you more time for family and friends.

Also an important factor in turning a kitchen into a family room is the noise level of your appliances. Dishwashers can be especially troublesome in this area, so look for ones that promise quiet operation.

"Kitchen technology must be quiet technology," says Dr. Baba. "Today's kitchen must be quiet enough for normal conversation and calm, uninterrupted thought."

And don't forget layout. If your kitchen is going to be the hub of family and social activity, it better have the space to accommodate the extra traffic.

Add a large table or island where everyone can gather, and you'll have a kitchen that — although it may not add any more hours to your day — will allow you to spend more of the time you do have with those special people in your life.

Crunch the numbers before refinancing

First impressions can be deceiving.

At least one expert in home mortgage refinancing warns borrowers anxious to reduce monthly payments by refinancing to thoroughly investigate proposals and crunch the numbers before accepting promises of savings.

"Borrowers may be misled by low rate offers," said Maurice Janowitz, president of Express Mortgage in Farmington Hills. "The borrower may lose thousands of dollars, even tens of thousands of dollars, on proposed refinancing transactions."

Janowitz has been involved in the mortgage business since 1974.

"When borrowers hear that interest rates may be reduced two or more percentage points, they may jump at the opportunity," he said. "The interest rates may indeed be lowered but the loan is stretched out over a longer period usually to the note's original term, costing the borrower additional money.

"If the borrower fails to factor in new fees and costs, refinancing could prove a regretful experience," Janowitz said. "Even so-called no-cost loans have undisclosed costs included in the rate."

Lower monthly payments now don't necessarily reflect savings in the long term, especially if several years of an existing loan have been paid and the clock is reset to the original 15 or 30 year mortgage period.

It usually takes more than a year just to make up the difference in points — a loan origination fee — charged on refinancings.

Then there are other fees like loan application fees, appraisals and credit reports that must be considered.

How long do you plan to stay in your house?

Less deductible mortgage interest paid with a refinancing can impact federal and state income taxes.

"So many lending institutions develop so many plans, they're complicated and hard to compare with each other," Janowitz said. "Refinancing isn't always a good deal. It's hard for the average person to understand."

Annual percentage rate, which includes origination fees as well as the mortgage rate, is the key figure in refinancings, Janowitz said.

"If you can get 2 percentage points (savings) on APR, it absolutely makes sense," he said.

■ 'Borrowers may be misled by low rate offers. The borrower may lose thousands of dollars, even tens of thousands of dollars, on proposed refinancing transactions.'
