Summit woes downplayed

Summit on the Park community center staff and Canton police believe troubles at the facility are decreasing, and likely to be temporary as the center's newness wears off and efforts are made to harness the troublemakers.

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Summit on the Park staff and Canton police said the previously reported trouble with swearing, smoking, fighting, loitering, disorderly conduct, vandalism, trespassing and larceny is abating at the popular community center.

Many of the Summit's travails are attributed to overcrowding and youths age 10-17 running around free of parental supervision. One of the changes officials are considering is to raise the minimum age kids must be to roam the $13-million community center unchaperoned by an adult.

"We do have some youths who are hanging out in the building, but that number is decreasing," said Summit Manager Debra Bilbrey-Honsowetz. "We want you to come in with a purpose in mind." In other words, simply hanging out is discouraged.

Since the Summit opened Jan. 8 an average of 1,300 individuals have visited the center each day. More than 3,500 annual passes have been sold, and folks are still buying.

The addition of 30 part-time employees has helped reduce the wait for the Summit's amenities. Bilbrey-Honsowetz said there is no wait for the aquatic center on weekday nights and a 15-minute wait on weekends.

Canton police have responded to reports of loitering and boorish behavior by placing uniformed officers in the Summit most evenings. This has a deterrent effect on would-be troublemakers, said Public Safety Director John Santomauro, but it's not permanent. "Long term, that is not the plan for the Summit," he said. "The goal is to have no police officers there."

Behavior in the Summit reminds Santomauro of "the mall mentality," where kids hang out and sometimes get into trouble. The key, he said, is to distinguish between "behavioral problems" and "behavioral problems that are criminal in nature."

"The fact remains they're being kids, and that's OK," he said.

But when the line is crossed, a "zero tolerance" policy takes effect. Miscreants are then jettisoned and

Hockey players make charity their goal

Canton Township's firefighter/police officer hockey team and the Red Wings Alumni have played three times in the last year, but Team Canton is no closer to defeating the former pros.

The first two times these teams met they raised more than $20,000 to help with medical and associated costs for Canton resident Greg Unger, 15, who has cystic fibrosis and underwent a double-lung transplant in 1995.

When they played again Saturday, Jan. 27, at the Plymouth Cultural Center they entertained a crowd of 1,190 and raised $10,367 for the University of Michigan Trauma Burn Center. Unger, now on his feet and looking good, served as honorary coach.

Although Team Canton managed eight goals against the Wings, Gordie Howe and company mustered 11 answering goals while simultaneously showboating for the admiring crowd.

When Team Canton trailed by two goals going into the third period, firefighter Tom Battistone was asked if they had a chance to win.

"No," he said. "No way. They're playing with us."

Indeed, the game was rife with horseplay, as demonstrated in the first period when Howe elbowed Team Canton goalie Jim Davidson.

"I dropped the gloves and went after Gordie, but he skated away," joked Davison.

Next Howe pinned Mike Myatt to the ice, then tossed police officer Debbie Newsome into the net.

"Gordie threw that girl through the net!" exlaimed Steve Rapson, whose father played for Team Canton.

"They're sitting on people," added Nick Norville of Canton.

Wings goalie Eddie Mio took the puck out to center ice in the first period as if to charge Team Canton's net. Red Wing Dave Shand put on a skating exhibition in the third period, doing circles around his own net until firefighter Mike Caruso tripped him, stole the puck and scored.

"We had to get him back for a few of the jocularities he put on us," explained Caruso.

"The guys in red aren't breaking a sweat," noted firefighter Lt. Don Adams who observed the game from a safe distance.

STAFF WRITER

The liability and maintenance costs of underground storage tanks has pushed Canton Township out of the gas and oil business.

Since 1990 there have been four cases of fuel leaking from underground tanks owned by Canton.

Removing tanks and clearing away fuel-soaked soil at the fire station on Canton Center at Cherry Hill cost $46,735 in 1990. Another tank was removed from that fire station last year at a cost of $13,820. A similar operation at the old Department of Public Works yard on Geddes west of Sheldon in 1993 cost $34,650.

Removing a 10,000-gallon tank and contaminated soil at the police station in 1994 cost $56,737, although $27,419 was reimbursed by a now-defunct state fund to partly pay for such cleanup operations.

Contamination of soil is also evident at the Department of Public Works yard on Sheldon, and at the fire station on Warren west of Haggerty, where tanks were removed last year. So far the township has spent $78,133 to remove the tanks and clean these sites, and the job isn't finished yet.

The township has hired Growth Environmental Services of Farmington Hills to handle the DPW yard contamination and Environmental Energy Technology of Southfield for the fire station contamination, said township purchasing coordinator Sally Hannan.

How much the cleanup of these sites will cost ultimately is anybody's guess. "We don't know the unknown yet," Hannan said. "It depends on how far the contamination has gone."

At one time, the township government had nine underground storage tanks with a total capacity of 56,000 gallons. But they are all gone now.

Although storing fuel in bulk made it possible to buy gas cheap (63 cents per gallon in 1992), the annual savings don't make up for the cost of complying with underground storage tank regulations and conducting the occasional cleanup, said Fire Chief Mike Rorabacher. "One spill can wipe that (savings) and more out."

And a serious leak could cost the township big money. "It's just such a great risk that it wasn't worth it," Rorabacher said.

Had Canton bought all of its gas at the pump in 1992, Rorabacher said, it would have paid about $16,000 more than it did refueling vehicles from its own underground tanks.

Furthermore, new regulations kicking in in 1998 would have required the township to pay at least $20,000 on new environmental safety gadgets.

"Some days I swore I worked for an oil company when I came in here," Rorabacher said.

Ford and Canton Center.

Plans now call for installation of above-ground tanks at the Pheasant Run Golf Course and at the DPW yard, Rorabacher said, but the township won't likely get as heavily into fuel storage as it was with the underground tanks. In 1994 it was estimated that putting an above-ground tank in at the DPW yard would cost $110,000.

Police investigate gang graffiti at middle school

By Darrell Clem

Gang symbols and sexually explicit statements were extensively spray-painted last week on the exterior of Stevenson Middle School — attended by Canton students — prompting a Westland police investigation.

"Sexual innuendoes regarding staff members, gang-related symbols, and sexually explicit statements regarding Stevenson students were widely spread on the front, west and back portions of the building," principal William Camp said in a letter to parents.

Camp revealed details about the vandalism in a Jan. 25 letter that was sent to parents on the day after the school's exterior walls, windows and doors were defaced.

In some cases, specific names of staff members or students were contained in the spray-painted statements.

"This is an attack on all of us, not just those few whose names were blazoned on the bricks," Camp said.

Custodians tried to remove all of the spray paint before students arrived for morning classes, but many of the statements and symbols remained visible.

Although Camp said the incident "sheds a negative light on us all," he tried to reassure parents that the problem isn't widespread.

"Let me reassure you that gang activity is not running rampant through the hallways of Stevenson, nor do we believe there is any imminent danger to any students or staff at Stevenson," he wrote in his letter.

Authorities are seeking information on possible suspects. William McLean, assistant principal, said Tuesday that anyone who can offer help is encouraged to call the school (595-2500) or the Westland Police Department (722-9600).

"This is an affront to everyone in the school," McLean said.

Greg Baracy, assistant superintendent/general administration, declared emphatically Tuesday that the district has "zero tolerance" for such behavior.

"We will prosecute to the fullest extent under the law for this kind of thing," he said.

Baracy said that clean-up costs force the district to spend money that could be better used for textbooks and other materials. An exact cost wasn't immediately available.

Baracy called the problem "isolated" and said, "This year, our schools have been almost vandalism-free."

In his letter, Camp told parents that "as adults, we understand the social/emotional harm and the waste of money, time and energy that incidents like these cause."

He noted that students "depend on our collective guidance, reassurance and support in understanding the behaviors of some individuals. When actions like this victimize one of us, they victimize all of us."

He advised parents to talk with their children about such incidents and to encourage them to have students come forth with any information they may have about potential suspects.

Camp noted that officials "need to know so we may bring the guilty parties to justice."

Camp stressed that the incident won't deter staff and students from striving for more positive school experiences.

"Please be reassured that the spirit of Stevenson Middle School is one of perseverance, and together we will rise above the vindictiveness of some individuals who lash out against us," he said.

"Chew and bite"

Canton Township Planning Commissioner Catherine Johnson told the township board recently that the planning commission is not universally loved.

"It's come back to me from different channels that we're really a picky wicky, crabby commission," she said at a joint meeting of the two bodies Jan. 15.

This surprised Johnson because "we always listen. We absolutely listen to everyone. We aren't really chewing or biting anybody about things."

Commissioner Ron Lieberman disagreed. "I think we chew and bite quite a bit," he said.

Former resident sentenced for trying to kill ex-wife

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

Former Canton resident Michael Janik committed a "terroristic" and "brutal" act when he set his former wife on fire in their Westland home, a Detroit judge said Tuesday before sentencing him to a minimum 15-year prison term for attempted murder.

Janik, 41, showed little emotion as Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Bruce Morrow sentenced him to prison for 15 years to 20 years/10 months for dousing Karen Janik, 31, with lighter fluid and igniting her.

Morrow also sentenced Janik to one to 10 years for arson. Defense attorney William Mitchell III said no decision has been made about an appeal.

As his sister, Candace Sharp, wept, Janik hugged family members before authorities led him from the fourth-floor courtroom to begin serving a lengthy sentence that Karen Janik had sought.

Now living with her mother in Florida, Karen Janik didn't return for her ex-husband's sentencing, but she pleaded for "no leniency or mercy" in a letter read aloud in court by assistant Wayne County prosecutor Jerry Dorsey IV.

The victim said she still awakens from nightmares caused by her ex-husband, who pinned her down and set her ablaze on Jan. 2, 1995, at his former 455 S. Hawthorne residence in Westland. The woman has permanent scars on her hands from ripping off her burning clothes.

Karen Janik had taken the couple's then 3-year-old twins, Chelsea and Michael, to their father's house to collect Christmas gifts. She has said her ex-husband begged her not to leave before he attacked her.

She managed to escape and crawl from the house, which was heavily damaged by the fire.

"Michael Janik showed the evil that can lurk in people," the victim wrote in her letter to Judge Morrow.

She also requested a lengthy sentence because she fears that Michael Janik might harm her or try to seize the twins.

Dorsey, arguing for a lengthy prison term, stressed that Michael Janik threw his ex-wife to the floor, straddled her body, doused her with lighter fluid and set her on fire.

"What he did to Ms. Janik is, in and of itself, a terroristic act," Dorsey said.

"He caused this woman more pain and suffering than most people ever have to live through in their entire lives," he added.

Morrow agreed with Dorsey's assessment and said Janik's action "at the very least was terroristic. Was it brutal, sure."

Mitchell, in arguing for leniency, said Janik, a 19-year Ford Motor Co. employee with a supportive family, could be rehabilitated within seven years.

Mitchell also said that Karen Janik shared part of the blame for the couple's history of problems. He described a tumultuous, several-year relationship destined for disaster.

"It was an accident waiting to happen," he said.

Michael Janik has claimed previously that he was under attack when Karen Janik was injured. On Tuesday, he declined an offer from the judge to make any statements on his own behalf.

Although a jury last month believed the ex-wife's statements, Mitchell said Tuesday that the truth probably is somewhere between the two versions.

Dorsey was pleased with Morrow's sentence and said, "I believe the judge made a good decision."

Mitchell said the sentence "was something that we certainly had to anticipate," but he added that no decision has been made about an appeal.

Morrow attributed the 15-year minimum sentence, in part, to fears that Janik might hurt someone else if he became involved in a relationship.

"I think he is dangerous to anyone he forms an intimate relationship with (who) doesn't do what he wants them to do," Morrow said.

Janik was convicted Jan. 11 at the end of a retrial. His first trial ended in a mistrial in late August after Morrow said Dorsey raised issues that jurors shouldn't have heard about conflicting statements made by the defendant.

Threat leads to the evacuation of school bus

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

A school bus carrying students home from Plymouth-Canton Educational Park was evacuated Monday afternoon, after someone called a bomb threat into Plymouth Salem High School.

A search turned up no explosives.

The incident followed Friday's bomb scare at the campus, which houses both Salem and Canton high schools.

Students were directed to a portable classroom at PCEP and the bus isolated after the threat was relayed to the bus driver via two-way radio.

"They received a call on the Salem switchboard Monday afternoon. The caller just said there may be a bomb on Bus 66," said Judy Evola, the district's community relations director. "The bus was evacuated immediately."

School personnel and Canton police searched the bus but found nothing.

"Another bus was brought in, and a group of security, administrators and police checked the bus out," said Evola. "There was no bomb found. We do know it was a different person who made the call. It's part of the copy-cat scenario that happens when bomb threats are publicized. Often when you get one, others follow."

If caught, the culprit could face up to six months in jail and a $100 fine for the misdemeanor, said Canton Crime Prevention Officer Lewis Stevens.

Stevens said police aren't sure "if it's the same guy or not. We have no idea."

Stevens and Evola said nothing has yet come to light about who is responsible for Friday's bomb threat. Friday's threats were made on a cellular phone.

A mother whose daughter was on the evacuated bus said she's upset about the way both incidents were handled by the district.

"I don't want to cause a big stir, but I want attention paid to this," she said. "I don't want to have to worry about my daughter being blown up on a bus. I assume it's just a prank, but I want to be assured it's not some wacko."

The parent said she had difficulty getting through when she called PCEP. "When I finally spoke with the gal on the switchboard, she laughed. I don't think this is funny."

The woman, who gave her name but asked not to be identified in the story, said she spoke with a district administrator who said Plymouth-Canton is thinking about installing a caller-identification system. "Thinking about it? I think it's a pretty good idea at this point.

"I am concerned that nothing was said to us about (the bomb threat) last Friday," she said. "They pooh-pooh it like it's no big deal. But to me it is a big deal when you have so many crazies around. I'm wondering how many other parents don't know what happened. Once the word gets out, people will be demanding answers."

The students' trip home was delayed about half an hour.

Evola said the issue is considered to be "a very serious matter. All precautions are taken. There was both security and administration present, and police were notified," she said. "There is a procedure for this and the procedure was followed strictly in both instances."

Officer Stevens said security isolated the bus at the back of the school and got people away from it.

"The school contacted us we sent some officers. We inspected the bus but didn't see anything unusual."

The Michigan State Police responded to Friday's bomb scare but weren't called to the school Monday.

Both incidents remain under investigation.

Teen-ager reports injuries from assault at Summit

Listed below are some of the Canton police incidents reported during the past week.

■ TEEN PUNCHED

A 14-year-old boy was punched up by a youth while standing outside the Summit on the Park community center waiting for his mother to pick him up, Jan. 20.

The boy was outside, when another youth told him to shut up. An older brother of the unidentified youth pushed the 14-year-old off a wall where he was sitting and then hit him in the eye with his fist. His tooth also was chipped.

■ MISSING ITEMS

A Northville guest at the Summit on the Park community center reported a leather gym bag with coat, pants, sweatshirt and wallet, removed from his unlocked locker, Jan. 25.

Staff helped the man look for his belongings. They were later found in another locker. The man suspected someone had moved his bag and clothing.

A female guest at the Summit also reported that someone took her towel and a card case, Jan. 25. Both items were valued at $15.

■ TICKETS STOLEN

Police responded to the breaking and entering of the Country Deli, 7349 Lilley and found lottery tickets strewn on the floor of the store, Jan. 27.

It appeared the only thing missing were scratched off tickets. Damage to the business was estimated at $350.

■ CASH STOLEN

Someone broke into the Zap Zone, 42130 Ford Road, Jan. 25 and walked away with $700 cash. When police arrived they found a plate glass window smashed. Damage was estimated at $200.

■ BREAKING AND ENTERING

Police responded to the breaking and entering of Canton Creations, 7692 Canton Center and found the front door smashed out, Jan. 24. Cash and checks were reported stolen. A witness told police that earlier a salesman came to the store asking if the business had a security system.

■ LARCENIES REPORTED

Several guests of the Fairfield Inn, 5710 Haggerty, and Budgetel Motel, 41211 Ford Road, were disappointed when they walked out to their cars Jan. 23-24.

Two guests at the Fairfield reported that their 1996 Chevrolets were broken into and in-dash radios were stolen. The radios were valued at about $400 and damage to each car estimated at $100.

The guest at Budgetel discovered that someone unsuccessfully tried to break into his 1995 Chevrolet. Damage was estimated at $100.

■ PROPERTY DAMAGE

A resident on Sandlewood, where homes are still under construction, saw a man drive his car into a mailbox, a tree and garbage can in the neighborhood, and drive off, but not before the resident jumped in his car and chased after him.

The resident finally caught up with the man near Cherry Hill and Beck roads. The resident got out of his car, approached the other driver, described as in his 20s, exchanged words with him and got his license plate number.

The resident saw the man drive into a tree and break it, as well as a garbage can that rolled into the street. He also saw the man drive into a neighbor's driveway, just missing a parked car, and knock over a mailbox.

■ BREAKING AND ENTERING

Police were called to a house in the 46000 block of Saltz Jan. 23 to investigate a breaking and entering.

The residents of the rented house told police that someone broke into their house while they were out between 7-9:30 p.m. The residents told police that nearly $1,000 cash was missing, as well as a VCR valued at $350, a stereo valued at $500 and $50 of coins. Each room in the house was ransacked.

The residents have a dog, which apparently did not stop the burglars. But it appeared the dog had been given treats.

A neighbor told police he saw a white Jeep Cherokee in the driveway at about 8 p.m. but didn't think anything of it.

School to be restored

Canton Township trustees voted 7-0 Tuesday, Jan. 23, to approve the site plan for Copper Creek Condominiums on 9.92 acres on the south side of Warren west of Old Haggerty.

Melvin Belovicz, president of Belle Dwellings Venture of Ypsilanti, told the board that he plans to begin construction in early March on a 73-unit attached condominium.

The condos are expected to cost somewhere "in the low hundreds," Belovicz said. There will be nine buildings with eight units in each.

The project includes the renovation and sale of the old Hough School House.

Belovicz said he will restore the exterior as a school, but turn the interior into a home.

possibly ticketed or arrested.

Canton Township resident Matt Suksi uses the Summit's treadmill, weights and pool. His only complaint is that "around 6 o'clock it get's really busy."

Canton teens Rene Schars and her friend Divya Arya were walking around the elevated track above the basketball courts Monday. Schars said she uses the fitness room and the track five days a week. Sometimes the wait for weight room equipment is 45 minutes or more, but neither girl complained about rowdyism.

Shirley Thomas only visits the Summit during the day when usage is low. "We really have enjoyed the track," she said. "I'm trying to get my husband down here. He needs it more than I do."

Santomauro has a group of individuals working on a long-term security plan for the Summit, including the possible installation of surveillance cameras, turnstiles and additional outdoor lighting. However, "we need to be very careful and not overreact to what is a temporary situation."

Officials are likewise writing a "code of conduct" that will be ready for board consideration Feb. 13.

Bilbrey-Honsowetz reports that some parents are still leaving children at the Summit for long periods of time. "I think we're seeing fewer, but it is occurring somewhat," she said. "Unfortunately, sometimes you get taken advantage of."

■ 'We do have some youths who are hanging out in the building, but that number is decreasing. We want you to come in with a purpose in mind.'

Students explore city of tomorrow

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Congratulations are in order for Plymouth's Our Lady of Good Counsel School.

The elementary school, whose students hail from Plymouth and Canton, received runner-up honors and a $125 gift certificate from CompUSA in the "Future City" competition sponsored by the Society of Manufacturing Engineers (SME) and the Engineering Society.

Thirty-three schools from throughout the state convened at the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn for the recent competition.

"OLGC took second place, and won the best essay contest," said Carol Anderson of SME. "They were better than 31 other schools from cities including Birmingham, Clayton, Grand Blanc, Ida, North Muskegon, Rochester Hills, West Bloomfield and Ypsilanti."

The winner was Ann Arbor's Middle Years Alternative School. Placing third was the Academy for African-American Students, also in Ann Arbor.

With their teacher Patricia Fair, OLGC students Gregory Lenhoff, Alexis Thebolt, Laura Adams and Justin Klixhaus created a futuristic model city and placed it in the Andes of South America. With some assistance from OLGC parent and engineer Daniel Sinnott, the students used solar collectors as well as ocean waves and tides to spin a turbine for power.

Industry was located inside the mountain to minimize its impact on the environment. Housing units were portable so that they could be moved from the rain forest to a more temperate climate, depending on where the homeowner wanted to live.

OLGC's city featured an automated transportation system. Residents drove their cars on a track and punched numbers on a screen to specify their destination.

The students were especially proud of themselves after learning that several of the teams had weeks of help from city planners and engineers. While Plymouth Township's Sinnott helped some, the students did the bulk of the work.

In addition, the competition was a new experience for OLGC.

"This was our first year for this," said OLGC principal Ted Behn. "The students did a computer simulation, did a report, an oral presentation and the model. They really worked hard researching things on the Internet.

Behn was grateful to Sinnott, who's employed with Turner Construction, for his help. "This was a contest for junior high kids. Mr. Sinnott has a first-grader, but he wanted to work with the kids and called us," Behn said.

Students utilized computer software applying math, science and their imagination in developing solutions to a variety of problems facing cities.

Detroit was one of seven regional competition sites that included Baton Rouge, La.; Chicago, Ill.; Milwaukee, Wis.; New York, N.Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; and Washington, D.C.

Michigan's winner will compete in Washington, D.C. in the finals during National Engineers Week this month.

The Society of Manufacturing Engineers, headquartered in Dearborn, is an international professional society dedicated to serving its members and the manufacturing community through the advancement of professionalism, knowledge and learning.

Few leaders on hand as SEMCOG debates road issue

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

David Moffitt, an Oakland County commissioner from Farmington Hills, looked around the executive committee meeting room of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments and shook his head.

"Gee, I wish my road officials had been here to advise me on this vote," Moffitt said after last month's meeting in Detroit.

SEMCOG, the official planning agency for the seven-county region, is being forced to go back to the drawing board on its Traffic Improvement Program (TIP).

The $2.1 billion, three-year TIP was cut drastically by 1) the Legislature's failure to pass $350 million in fuel tax increases and 2) federal cuts under the ISTEA (Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act).

SEMCOG's executive committee debated whether to fight (bringing all construction to a halt), surrender to state-directed cuts, or negotiate. A decision is due at a special meeting in March.

What bothered Moffitt was that so few local elected chieftains attended the monthly meeting.

No L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County executive, or road commission types. No Edward H. McNamara, Wayne County executive. No Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer.

There appears to be a 25 percent cut in available money over the next three years. Gov. John Engler and MDOT promptly announced four state projects that would be given priority.

These include: constructing M-5, the Haggerty connector, between 12 and 14 Mile roads in eastern Novi and rebuilding the 50-year-old Davison freeway in the middle of Detriot.

SEMCOG officials had no list of available of local projects that had been cut.

SEMCOG executive director John Amberger of Livonia, outlined four roads SEMCOG could take:

1. Proceed with the current Transportation Improvement Program — impossible because the federal government won't approve projects for which funds aren't available.

2. Re-examine all projects, including the state's four favored projects — impossible because Engler would veto it, and nothing would be done.

3. Approve the Engler-Nowak plan — the one an area rep called "vigorous surrender." It would require serious cuts in local roads programs, but keep on pressure for a fuel tax increase.

4. Approve the state proposal with negotiations. SEMCOG selected this option.

Abraham to speak at GOP fund-raiser

U. S. Sen. Spencer Abraham will be the featured speaker at a fund-raiser Saturday, Feb. 3 at the new Summit on the Park in Canton Township.

The reception, which will benefit the Wayne 13th Republican Committee, will run from 5-7 p.m.

The Summit is at 46000 Summit Parkway (Palmer Road), west of Canton Center Road, south of Ford Road.

Abraham is expected to comment on the budget battle in Washington, D.C., as well as the upcoming 1996 elections.

Tickets are $60 per person, or $100 per couple, and may be purchased at the door, or by calling (313) 420-4676 in advance. A cash bar will be available and hors d'oeuvres will be served.

The Wayne 13th Republican Committee is the front-line group serving to elect Republican candidates in the 13th Congressional District, which includes the cities of Garden City, Westland, Plymouth, and part of Livonia; and the townships of Plymouth and Canton.

The committee also organizes voter-education programs and telephone banks, and distributes poll cards and lawn signs for candidates.

Officers of the Wayne 13th District Republican Commitee are Carl Berry, chairman; William Case, secretary; and Jaylee Lynch, treasurer.

Board members are Samuel Durante, David Glaab, Carol Juarez, Colleen Kidder, Sandra McCafferty, Michael Novak, Kent Peterson, Herbert Scott, Nicholas Stasevich, William Steele and Beverly Yurchak.

Members of the honorary host committee are David Brandon, financial chairman of the Michigan Republican Commitee; Sean Cox, chairman of the 13th District Congressional District Committee; and former U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell.

Other members of the honorary host committee are Republican leaders Thomas Hickey, Steve Ragan, Thomas Yack, Charles McIlhargey, Robert Thompson and William Young.

When Jim wanted better care— his friends suggested a move to The Arnold Home.
It's a common story. A loved one goes to an assisted living or nursing home, expecting good care. Then the realization sets in that the care is not what was expected. When that disillusionment hit Jim, his friends suggested he move to The Arnold Home. Residents have a choice of beautifully appointed and affordable one bedroom apartments or deluxe private rooms. A supportive staff gives Arnold Home residents the assistance and encouragement to remain active, involved and independent. Is Jim happy?
Ask him. "These people give you personal attention. I like the fact that health care service is individually developed for each of us. There's just a lot of peace of mind here." If you'd like peace of mind, call the Arnold Home at 313-531-4001 and ask for Mary Cobello. The Arnold Home guarantees your satisfaction.

Middle school has a new principal

Roche E. LaVictor was named principal of Lowell Middle School, replacing Pat Patton who recently became principal at Canton High School.

LaVictor is executive director of Intermediate Curriculum and Instruction in central office administration with Bay City Public Schools. The district has 10,087 students in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Errol Goldman, assistant superintendent for employee relations and personnel, made the recommendation to the Plymouth-Canton school board Monday night.

LaVictor was chosen from among 18 qualified applicants by a selection committee consisting of Pat O'Donnell, executive director for instruction; Clint Smiley, assistant principal at Lowell; two parents; two teachers; and a support staff member.

Ten of the 18 were interviewed in the first round, and five in the second round, said Goldman. "It is the consensus of the committee that Mr. Roche LaVictor be appointed. The effective date will be arranged as soon as possible," he said.

LaVictor earned his bachelor's degree in history at Kalamazoo College and his master of arts degree in educational administration at Central Michigan University. He's currently earning is doctorate in education at Wayne State University.

Formerly, LaVictor worked as director of adult, community and alternative education with Bay City Schools. He also served as that district's director of secondary instruction and principal of Washington Intermediate, a middle school in Bay City.

He also worked as assistant principal at Bay City Western High School in Auburn, Mich., and at Hill-McCloy High School in Montrose.

He taught social studies and English and coached wrestling, softball and football at Linden High School.

In 1989-1990 he chaired the Bay City Association of School Administrators' negotiating team through a contract settlement.

He worked as district athletic director for Montrose Community Schools from 1984-86.

He belongs to the Bay County Substance Abuse Coalition, the Macro Michigan Multicultural Pre-Technical Educational Partnership, Michigan Association of Middle School Educators, Middle Cities Education Association, National Middle Schools Association and Phi Delta Kappa.

Trustees approve hiring of contractor

STAFF WRITER

■ Trustees voted 7-0 Tuesday, Jan. 23, to hire SCR Corp. of Ypsilanti. The $156,393 contract runs from March 1 through Feb. 28, 1997.

Canton Township has switched cleaning-service contractors.

Trustees voted 7-0 Tuesday, Jan. 23, to hire SCR Corp. of Ypsilanti. The $156,393 contract runs from March 1 through Feb. 28, 1997.

Although one of the other four bids on the contract was lower than SCR's bid, Administrative and Community Services Director Dan Durack said SCR has already "proved to be an outstanding company" when it worked in the Summit during construction.

"They have proven to be very willing to work with us on an interim basis," Durack said. "Their staff has been excellent."

The low bidder, City Building Maintenance of Oak Park at $154,153, "did not choose to assist us when we needed some help" with the Summit, Durack said.

Other bidders were ServiceMaster of Clawson ($193,504), Matthews Enterprises ($270,566) of Trenton and Mid-West Maintenance ($193,200) of Ypsilanti.

Mid-West had the last cleaning contract with Canton Township.

The cost of this service to property owners is higher than before because the Summit accounts for $71,000 of SCR's bid. The second most costly building to clean is the township hall at $34,800.

Computers a boon to ailing teachers

Beginning this week, it will be a lot easier for Plymouth-Canton school employees to call in sick, and for the district to contact substitutes.

The recently purchased, $40,000 system features three incoming and three outgoing phone lines.

In the past, employees were sometimes hard-pressed to call in, because they'd get a busy signal for extended periods of time.

Made by CRS Inc. of Dallas, Texas, the system will "more than double the current call-out times for securing substitute teachers, and also will allow substitutes to call in to acquire jobs," said Donna Feldt, executive secretary in the district's personnel department.

The system features as a back-up a six-hour battery pack. "When 25 percent of the power is left, the machine calls the person we designate," said Feldt.

Lamb Chop to perform

The Lamb Chop's "On Her Own" show will be performed three times Saturday, Feb. 10, at Livonia Mall.

The shows will be at noon, 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. on Feb. 10 at the stage near Crowley's.

The fun-filled 25-minute show features tunes and routines from Lamb Chop's hit PBS series, "Lamb Chop's Play-A-Long."

The mall is at Seven Mile and Middlebelt.

School officials must improve

It took a concerned parent to enlighten the community about bomb threats that forced the evacuation of the Plymouth-Canton Educational Park Jan. 26.

Thankfully, they were just threats, but parents didn't have a clue what was happening until their teens arrived home later that day and told them.

The local media was sinking in the same boat. School district officials who say they are armed with a "plan of action" when incidents of this type occur, weren't forthcoming either.

If the district indeed has a plan, the question is how many parents are aware of it? Or can they be aware of it when efforts are made to stifle the free flow of information?

Too often, efforts to gain information about the school district, including incidents that occur in its schools, are thwarted. The bureaucracy that envelops the school district stands in the way of communication and common sense.

Also too often, those in positions created to communicate with the public — and consequently the local media — serve as obstacles to the free flow of information between a public body and the public it serves. The same people, however, are quick to attempt to direct news coverage and taxpayers' opinions.

The deal in a democracy is that government — yes, public schools are government — is to be open to the public that supports it with its dollars.

Recently, a parent asked school officials for the 1992 and 1993 MEAP scores. She was told it would take at least a day to compile the information and that she would owe the district 16 cents per minute for the time it would take to retrieve the information.

Frustrated, the woman arrived at the Observer office in Plymouth and was given the newspaper files. Within 50 minutes she got the information she wanted — free of charge.

School officials should be reminded that a survey a couple years ago indicated that approximately 70 percent of the taxpayers questioned are distrustful of the school district.

Presenting roadblocks when taxpayers ask questions or request information only further solidifies the distrust between the public and the government.

Community relations personnel at the school district are there to foster communications, not to serve as roadblocks, or to avoid questions from the public and media. Problems must be addressed openly, not swept under the rug.

The school district's credibility and the taxpayers' right to know are at stake.

School officials are further reminded that the district does not belong to them, but to the parents, students and taxpayers who support the educational system. The district must be open to all who ask questions, demand information and want to know what is happening.

When information is lacking or not forthcoming, parents will paint all institutions — the media and government — with the same broad brush.

Parents can rest assured that the local media works daily to gain access and open the doors of communication and information.

And school officials are reminded of their responsibilities to the public.

What Engler forget to mention

At the risk of offending Republicans, we point out that Gov. John Engler's Jan. 17 State of the State address was strongly reminiscent of Democratic Gov. James Blanchard's in the 1980s. Both boasted Michigan was doing things right and Washington was wrong. Both eyed national power. Both also ignored — didn't even discuss — many problems at home.

Blanchard lost in 1990, so let's concentrate on Engler's omissions.

- Roads — In the same way Congress and the president are deadlocked over the budget, Engler, the Legislature and local road interests have been immobilized for years over raising fuel taxes while our roads and bridges crumble. Their differences are hardly matters of principle — just money, and they should be able to compromise. Engler never mentioned roads.
- Urban sprawl and lost farmland — Developers are eating up land far faster than the population is growing, generating huge needs for roads, new freeway exits, new water and sewer lines. In 1994, there were bills to address some of these problems, but they were shoved aside during 1995 efforts at school code reform. Meanwhile, developers are eating up the equivalent of 3.7 townships a year — the equivalent of all of Livingston and Washtenaw counties in 10 years. Much of that loss is farmland, meaning we'll have to preserve and import more food. Engler never mentioned land preservation.
- Natural resources — Engler boasted of cutting taxes 21 times in his five-year tenure but failed to defend the Department of Natural Resources' plan to hike hunting and fishing licenses 20 percent. He failed to mention land acquisition in the face of market competition from developers. Engler never mentioned natural resources.
- Safety — An audit of the state fire marshal's office revealed inadequate inspections of schools, public buildings and above-ground storage tanks. Engler deplored "red tape" and "bloated" government but ignored safety.
- Job training — Engler's recommendation was minor: an apprenticeship tax credit for business. What about work preparation curriculum for public schools? What about something beyond a pittance increase for community colleges, where the real preparation for the 21st century economy is being conducted? What about the white-collar managerial workers the Kmarts and AT&Ts are tossing on the scrap heap? Engler never mentioned them.
- Public schools — Engler continued to badmouth public education by reading a letter from a schoolboy about how safe his charter school is. He continued to sell the false line that charter academies are "pioneers" in education and not former private schools collecting subsidies while pandering to special interests.

Did the governor do anything right? Yes.

He's on the right track in experimenting with child care and transportation to help people off welfare. Unlike some Scrooges who would just kick folks off welfare, Engler realizes there's a cost to his "social contract" for helping people improve their lives.

Engler has precipitated a crisis in the trial courts by blocking creation of new judgeships, notably in the metro suburbs, until courts are reorganized and scarce resources deployed more efficiently. He is right. Engler prodded lawmakers to continue their reform effort and implicitly promised to work for a ballot proposal. We look forward to it.

The governor quoted the gist of President Abraham Lincoln's Civil War order No. 1: "Advance on all fronts." Engler should adopt the order himself. There's more to advancing Michigan than cutting taxes and subsidizing private schools.

Support new exit

I read in the Canton Observer of the Michigan Department of Transportation's current study of a proposed interchange to be located at I-275 and Cherry Hill Road within Canton Township, with great personal interest and approval.

I travel the I-275-Ford Road interchange every day to and from work. In my opinion it is a greatly overburdened interchange. Bottlenecks there are constant both going to and coming from work. The proposed Cherry Hill interchange would go a long way to improving this situation.

I hope the MDOT study approves a new interchange at Cherry Hill Road. It would help to eliminate the long line I see almost every day of vehicles stopped on southbound I-275 at the Ford Road exit during the 5 o'clock rush hour. I always wonder if the vehicle behind me will realize that I am stopped on I-275 and will not hit me from the rear.

I have lived here for 19 years and the Ford Road traffic is not getting any lighter. Readers are encouraged to write to the MDOT in favor of this road improvement project.

Talk with doctors

I am writing to express my growing concern for patients in our community. We have recognized in recent years that asthma deaths in the United States have increased by at least 40 percent since 1982.

A number of causes may be attributed to this increased mortality rate, including undertreatment, and failure to recognize the severity of the asthma. This is a disease that can be controlled, and asthma patients should be able to lead normal, active, healthy lives.

It is important that patients be seen for evaluation and that the appropriate diagnosis is made. If you already know you have asthma, effective communication can provide your doctor with the information needed to develop an appropriate asthma treatment plan.

In an effort to provide asthma patients with tools that can help them communicate well with their doctors, the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology has developed "Making the Most of Your Next Doctor Visit: A Personal Asthma Management Monitor," which is available free to patients who call 800-456-ASTHMA.

I encourage asthma patients in the Canton-Plymouth area to take advantage of this valuable source and help stem the growth of asthma deaths.

Schools for all

I have read Mr. Wira's "Church-School Ties: They Pose No Problem" in the Jan. 4, 1996, Observer and would like to comment.

Wira calls for strong school and church ties. This approach ignores the fact that the "public" in public schools includes people who are like us and people who are not like us. The public schools are for all of us even if we do not go to church but go rather to a temple, synagogue, mosque, or look to our hearts to understand what may be called the mystery of life. We are the public, all of us, not some of us. By aligning public schools with church the public becomes fragmented. Instead of bringing us together, it would push us apart.

We live in a country that is based on laws. The laws intend not so much as to bring us together but to stop us from breaking apart. The public schools are the major institution that we have to help us understand how much we have in common with those that are not like us. This understanding is what not only stops us from becoming like the former Yugoslavia but encourages us to continue to be the United States of America.

I support public school for everybody. The public supports their schools through taxes. That is part of being a citizen of the United States of America. Mr. Wira supports church schools. Go ahead. That is fine for you. Do not try to force it on the rest of us.

POINTS OF VIEW

Helping hands

Many contributed to Goodfellows' 1995 yuletide project

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone in Canton who helped to make Christmas 1995 a happy time for 86 Canton families. We were able to provide gifts, food and gift certificates for more than 250 children.

I cannot begin to name the hundreds of people who were "Goodfellows," but, from our youngest helpers (paper sellers Harrison and Spencer Hall) to our most senior workers (the gentlemen of VFW Post 6696) — I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

Many new people chose to join the Goodfellow effort this year. Many thanks go to Matt and Carol Adams who manned a moving van to collect for our families at Kmart.

Brownies, Girl Scouts, Cubs and Boy Scouts and young people from area schools and churches pitched in to help Canton families.

The employees of the Kmart Warehouse made a huge effort to collect and provide gifts for 101 children.

To everyone who took the time to buy a paper, drop off food, buy a gift and donate it, to wrap gifts and help pack and deliver baskets for Canton kids and families who needed a helping hand at Christmas — I thank you most sincerely.

To the Canton businesses who welcomed our paper sellers — I thank you sincerely. To those who didn't — perhaps you will join the efforts to help our own residents next year.

To all of the generous, caring residents of Canton who took the time to help out in any way — I thank you. The monetary donations (from pennies to hundreds of dollars) were stretched to help all of our Canton families. I hope that your generosity has given you a warm spot in your heart which will stay with you all year.

To all of the hard-working board of directors members who faithfully show up for meetings and work sessions from August through December — I thank you most sincerely. You are the backbone of our organization.

To the Canton Library director, Jean Tabor, and staff, who went way beyond the call of duty to help out — I thank you so very much.

Finally, to my husband, John, in spite of all the turmoil in his life, was always there to do all of the "honey do" jobs like hauling, lifting, driving, selling, buying and delivery of baskets. (He was also a great snow shoveler!)

Thanks, Canton, for all of your help. You came through, once again, to make the holidays happy for so many other Canton families. I hope that even more folks will be joining with the Canton Goodfellows in 1996 to make sure that all of Canton's kids will have a holiday to remember happily.

EMU Foundation falls into 'snake pit of secrecy'

Eastern Michigan University got its knuckles rapped, good and hard, by the state Court of Appeals last week. EMU's leaders could have avoided the embarrassment by reading their local newspapers back in 1989.

The situation has to do with government's increasing propensity to "privatize" — to hire private companies or set up what it hopes are private foundations to do governmental work in secret.

In 1989, the EMU board voted to authorize establishment of an EMU Foundation to "receive and disburse funds, property and gifts of any kind exclusively for the benefit of Eastern Michigan University."

The plot thickens. First, the bylaws provided for EMU officials to hold five of the 15 foundation trustee posts. Next, the first foundation president was to be "a university-related official."

Third, the EMU Board of Regents, in the first two years of the foundation's life, contributed $420,000, or half the foundation's assets. Finally, in 1992 the EMU board transferred the university's entire endowment of $7.7 million to the foundation.

One Eric Jackson requested information on the foundation's financial condition and its board meetings. He cited Michigan's "sunshine" laws — the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) and the Open Meetings Act (OMA). The EMU Foundation denied Jackson's requests, saying it wasn't "a public body" under the laws. Jackson lost in circuit court, appealed and was supported by the Ann Arbor News and the United Auto Workers union.

A court of appeals panel ruled 3-0 on Jan. 19 that the EMU Foundation is indeed a public body with public records. Its reasoning was elemental. FOIA defines a public body in a list that includes "any other body which is created by state or local authority or which is primarily funded by or through state or local authority."

TIM RICHARD

■ The situation has to do with government's increasing propensity to "privatize" — to hire private companies or set up what it hopes are private foundations to do governmental work in secret.

Foundations are a growing problem. In other states, foundation officers have spent lavishly on fancy cars, fancy salaries and memberships in fancy country clubs, all in the name of cultivating donors. Even a not-for-profit corporation deals in some big bucks.

The Michigan Legislature is about to make things worse. The senate has passed, and the house has been debating, SB 142 removing the requirement that non-profit corporations file with the state commerce department an annual statement reporting: the amount of authorized stock, distribution of funds to members or shareholders, amounts of loans, advances, overdrafts or withdrawals and repayments by officers and directors, and other good stuff.

Not only would future filings not have to contain that information, but past filings would be exempt from FOIA and your eyes.

Rep. Lynne Martinez, D-Lansing, offered an amendment to require the reporting of distributions of funds. The House rejected it, 50-56. Martinez remarked: "I feel like I've turned over a rock and found a snake pit."

Well phrased. Secrecy and a snake pit.

There must be a little privacy in regents' presidential search

First, a disclosure: I am both a regent of the University of Michigan and a working newspaper publisher.

So I have a foot in both camps in the developing debate over the mechanism the board of regents, as governing body of U-M, adopted last week to seek a new president.

The board tried — successfully, in my view — to balance two worthy but conflicting objectives: the Michigan Open Meetings Act, which holds that decisions of a public body like the board of regents should be taken fully in the public view, and Art. VIII Sec. 5 of the Michigan Constitution, which imposes a duty on the board to "elect a president."

The mechanism we adopted sets up a Presidential Selection Advisory Committee composed of U-M faculty, staff, students and alumni — no regents whatsoever. This committee is to meet in public with the board of regents and work up a set of criteria — skills, experience, background — which should govern the selection of the new president.

The committee is then, without contact with the regents and meeting in private, to develop a pool of prospects and, after careful evaluation, forward a list of at least five recommended candidates to the board. The board will then meet, deliberate and select a new president entirely in public.

There already is a fair amount of huffing and puffing under way about this. Some of my news media friends are grumpy that the search process isn't going to take place entirely in the open, while one of my regental colleagues abstained from the final vote on the grounds that the process compromises too much of the board of regents' fiduciary duty to find and recruit the very best president possible.

Abandoning the legalisms that usually infest this kind of discussion, I'd make just three points:

First, it's often overlooked, but the absolute key to any successful search is the care and thoughtfulness with which the selection criteria are set out. In the process we adopted, the board of regents and the search committee are to meet in public and develop their vision for the university and the criteria for the kind of person who will help them achieve that vision.

The whole point behind the Open Meetings Act is that public bodies like the board of regents should be held accountable not only for what they decide (picking an individual to be president, in this case) but why they decide the way they do (their vision of the university and the criteria in determining the selection).

PHILIP POWER

When the board of regents conducted its last search for a president eight years ago, it formulated with no public debate a list of 18 largely boilerplate selection criteria. This time around, the board had a public obligation to be pointed, detailed and specific about just what they're looking for and why.

Second, there is compelling evidence that conducting searches for university presidents entirely in public deters qualified candidate from allowing their names to be put forward.

This evidence is more than anecdotal. A survey done by the distinguished search firm of Korn/Ferry found that of presidents and chancellors of the leading universities in the country, 93 percent said they would not participate in presidential search that publicly disclosed names of candidates as part of the process.

It's this fact that has led Wayne State University President David Adamany to argue that persistently restrictive application of the Open Meetings Act to the selection of Michigan's university presidents, over time, has disadvantaged our public universities compared to privates in the competition for able leadership. I think he's right.

Third, when real people are trying sincerely to develop a real world process to get something important done, there is always a risk that absolutist editorial writers may become obsessively concerned about just how many Open Meetings Act angels can dance on the head of a public body pin.

Enough is enough! Let us get on with our job.

When skating was simply fun

Showing up on TV this time of year are those ice skating competitions which make for some pretty good family viewing. From the youngest in the family to the oldest, skating's fun to watch. You see skaters dancing, spinning, weaving across the ice, traversing the music. You see spotlights following the skaters around the rink as their costumes ripple and flutter. And you see lights glinting off ice and skates and the skaters' smiles as they glide past advertisements pasted on the rink walls. That's ice skating beauty.

And then there is, of course, that other side of skating — the in-your-face,with-a-stick-and-a-puck-and-a-fist kind of skating. The kind where crowds shout dismay and approval, all at the same time, and the noise rocks the entire place. And after some minutes pass, a big machine with a loud, gruff-sounding name comes out and shears the top layer of ice right off. That's the rough side of ice skating. Hockey.

And then there's the third form of ice skating. The most basic form, the most historical, that of ice skating as transportation, getting from here to there in the frozen part of wintertime. The same form ice skating takes in the old book "Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates," for in-

Double transplant gives Greg Unger new lease on life

A year ago, cystic fibrosis made getting ready for school difficult at best for Greg Unger. But thanks to a double lung transplant, the Canton teenager is breathing easier and even contemplating a weekend ski trip.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

As Barbara Unger answers the door of her Canton home, blips and bleeps radiate downstairs and fill the foyer. Her son, Greg Unger, is taking on a video game — and his lost teen-age years.

Greg, 15, had suffered from cystic fibrosis since birth, but a double-lung transplant on Aug. 5 at St. Louis Children's Hospital relieved him of that.

Now he's a few pounds heavier and a whole lot healthier. Greg's looking forward to driver's education when he turns 16 this summer, and his parents are thinking about letting him go on a ski trip. That's something he couldn't muster the energy to do before his surgery.

"We were delighted to hear that he wants to go on a ski trip in two weeks, which we're seriously contemplating," said Greg's father Bill, who lives in Shelby Township. "We need to talk to his doctors, but we see no reason why he can't go."

Greg is the picture of health compared to a year ago. He can breathe easier and accomplish every day activities.

"Mainly he's able to get up in the morning at 6:30, get ready for school and get out the door catching his 7:15 bus, which he was never able to do a year ago," Bill said. "He had a nurse that came in every day (a year ago) and he had to find someone to drive him to school. He doesn't go through hours in the morning of coughing up that mucus. His lungs are nice and clear."

Short wait

Greg's double-lung transplant took place exactly a month after Greg, his father, Bill, and sister, Jamie, moved to the Ronald McDonald House near St. Louis Children's Hospital to await the availability of donor lungs.

As soon as a donor was found his mother and brother Kris flew to St. Louis in time to wish him good luck.

When the surgery was complete, doctors told the Ungers the condition of the lungs they removed.

"When the doctors took out his old lungs they said it was like tak-

Plants and animals adapt to winter's 'solid state'

NATURE TRAILS

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

Water in Michigan shows its many states throughout the year. In summer, it is in the liquid state. During winter, we see it in the solid state as snow and ice, but as it melts it becomes liquid, and as the sun hits the snow, it evaporates as a gas.

Michigan is fortunate to have so much fresh water, in fact, the Great Lakes hold about 20 percent of all the fresh water on Earth. Without fresh water, living things, except marine organisms, would not survive. Great Lakes states have a great deal of responsibility to maintain the integrity of the fresh water needed by so many living things.

Although water is absolutely necessary for life to survive, in winter it can pose problems when temperatures fall below freezing. Plants and animals need to keep water inside their bodies, but if they cannot get away from the freezing temperatures, they must do something to avoid freezing.

The greatest proportion of any living thing is water. It's in all the cells of everything that's living. Deciduous trees lose their leaves in fall because of reduced sunlight for photosynthesis, the process where plants make food, and their water evaporating surfaces. They cannot get water because of the temperatures, so why have leaves?

But water left inside a tree during cold temperatures can create problems. If water inside a cell freezes, it will expand and burst the membrane that contains all the parts of the cell, causing it to die. If enough cells die, so would the plant.

In order for the tree to survive, water is shunted from the trunk and stems to the roots in fall. Some water remains in the wood tissue, but any water that freezes is between the cells, not inside the cells. Frozen water between cells tends to draw water from the cells, which creates a more salty solution inside the cell making it even less likely to freeze.

Our state tree, the white pine, can survive temperatures as low as 88 degrees below 0 in cold climates.

Animals also must adapt to water inside their bodies during winter. Cold-blooded animals like frogs and insects are not always able to avoid freezing temperatures. In preparation for their winter shutdown, they stop eating before cold temperatures settle in. By clearing their gut, they remove any food particles that could seed the formation of ice crystals.

Another adaptation for cold-blooded animals is the production of glycerol. Glycerol acts like an antifreeze. Increasing the concentration of glycerol in the body reduces the freezing temperature. In combination with sheltered winter resting places, small animals like springtails, only 1 mm by 3 mm, can survive temperatures as low as 50 degrees below zero.

Water gives life to all living things, but water in winter can be deadly without the proper adaptations.

ing out two sacks of pus," Bill said. "It literally just broke apart in their hands."

"Greg, whom his mother described as "the least nervous of all of us," said the surgery "wasn't that bad."

"You picture this real painful thing afterward," Greg said. "In the first couple days, I was real drugged so I don't really remember anything. By the time I was into things, like getting to know where I'm at, everything was out me like the chest tubes and the IV."

Barbara would believe otherwise. She didn't sleep for 40 hours after the surgery began.

"It was probably the most stressful night of my life," she said.

Greg had some rejection that kept him in the hospital for three weeks after the surgery. That's normal, according to his father. They returned home around Thanksgiving but more complications forced him back to St. Louis.

The lungs he received tested positive for Epstein-Barr, a herpes-like virus which is thought to cause infectious mononucleosis. Greg has never had the virus.

"As a result of the donor being positive for Epstein-Barr virus, there's a lot of complications," Brabara said. "In Greg's case it causes malignant lesions in the lungs. It's serious but they feel like they caught it early.

"They've had cases of it before and they treat it by cutting back on the amount of immuno-suppression that he receives so that his own natural immune system can fight off the proliferation, and they give him medication."

Barbara said that the transplant would still have been done had the doctors known about the virus.

"They don't consider it that big of a risk," she said. "It's kind of funny. It seems like a big risk to me."

Greg now goes to University of Michigan hospitals every two weeks for CAT scans to trace the growth or reduction of the growths. So far most of them have shrunk except for the original one that "kind of just doesn't want to go away."

Every few months for the first year he must return to St. Louis Children's Hospital for checkups. The hospital has done about 60 double-lung transplants in five years.

Greg was diagnosed with cystic fibrosis at age six. A genetic disease, it causes an abnormal accumulation of mucus in the lungs and other organs and literally suffocates and starves its victims.

He was active in elementary school but his health declined soon after. His lungs collapsed so frequently that in 1992 doctors suggested he get a transplant.

Help from others

Anticipating a financial burden, the Ungers and the Children's Organ Transplant Association Inc. (COTA) set out to raise $100,000. With the help of area residents, local bands, former Detroit Red Wings and Canton fire and police, the family raised about $196,000.

The family hopes that the donations will help cover out-of-pocket medical expenses.

"The bills are just now starting to come in," Barbara said. "My main concern is that we'll have enough to cover all his medications once the insurance company stops paying for it. From what I understand, they don't cover the Cyclosporin (immuno-suppressive drug) after the first year."

He has to take Cyclosporine for the rest of his life.

Greg's life — and number of medications — has dramatically changed. He still has cystic fibrosis, which affects his pancreas, so he takes enzymes when he eats.

Prior to his surgery, the John Glenn High School student sometimes gasped for air between sentences. Now he sniffles a little from a throat infection.

He's no longer required to do daily breathing treatments with a nebulizer, but he does have to test his rising lung capacity with a pulmonary fistness test machine.

For Barbara, one of the hardest parts about Greg's transplant was realizing that someone had to die to make her son healthy. The donor was a 26-year-old Georgia woman who died in a car accident.

"It's really strange to think that you're on one end of the stick and they're on the other," Barbara said. "I think that's the most difficult thing to cope with.

"Somebody has to be very, very generous. That's the most unselfish gift that anyone can give."

stance, written way back in the 1800s. And the same form it took one magical winter day about 30 years ago.

I think I was 8, maybe 9 years old that winter of the frozen fields.

We lived on the very edge of town, just one more house over and there you'd be, outside the town limits. And our house had a big back yard, but not nearly as big as the acres and acres of empty fields just back of the back yard. In summer, no rules baseball games would be played in "the weeds" as it was known. And any of us kids who owned dogs would take them out for the longest, best walks and romps a dog could ever imagine.

Back in the fields there were tall weeds, a spot with sand dunes, a low area with a make-shift wooden bridge, a couple forests — one with the town's creek running through it — a climbing tree so ancient and big and gnarled that it was scary in the late fall to walk by it all leafless and dead looking, and Indian burial mounds no one dared walk upon. Now whether or not there were bodies buried under the mounds was never the question. We all just knew it to be fact. Someone older had said it one time, and so it was true.

At any rate, the field, the "weeds," remained untouched throughout my growing-up years. And I had this notion, even then, that the fields were very, very special.

I loved those fields. In summer and winter. In winter, I'd still walk my dog, almost every afternoon. And she was a short beagle. But she'd hop and rise to the occasion, through the drifts. She'd bounce through the snow, tail wagging all the while.

And one year, over the deep snow in the fields, a thick layer of ice formed. The frozen rain had fallen relentlessly during the night. You could hear it tapping on the windows and on the roof. And come morning the miracle had been laid down on the landscape. An ice arena, huge and free as all outdoors, waited for us.

Of course, schools and workplaces were shut down. And normal modes of transportation were rendered useless. The only thing you could do was put your skates on and skate the way it was meant to be. Skating was the only way to get from here to there.

But, it turns out, only children skated that day. The adults thought of the ice as being a horrible disaster and an inconvenience and a dangerous situation. And even if the adults hadn't thought that way, the ice-covered snow in those magical fields could bear only so much weight. And an adult would certainly crack right through and wreck the magic.

So not being an adult, I was one who skated that day. I skated over the top of the baseball diamond. I skated to the sand dunes. I skated to the rickety wooden bridge. I skated to the gnarly tree. I skated past the Indian mounds. My hair flew. My arms and legs pumped like a speed skater's might. I tried a figure 8 and settled for a figure 1. I didn't feel the cold. No one with skates on that day felt it. Exhilaration took over.

And so here I am some 30 years later remembering that ice-covered day when skating returned to its humble origins. When skating had nothing to do with finesse or fistfights, but rather when it had everything to do with just plain fun. And fields and fields of freedom.

Writer interested in fulfillment of her immediate needs

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene,

I am a 29-year-old mother of a lovely 2-year-old daughter. I am also happily married to a wonderful man named David.

I am writing today because I read your column one day and thought it would be neat to have my handwriting analyzed.

I have always enjoyed writing. I like the way I write. To me it looks like nice handwriting, as one would say.

Can you please analyze my writing? Thank you in advance.

S.D., Garden City

The young woman who wrote this sample of handwriting is mainly interested in the here and now and the fulfillment of her immediate needs. She may be overly concerned for herself and her daily activities. And she appears to be more interested in people than intellectual development.

She is social, friendly and has a strong need for people in her life. She rather enjoys being in the center of things.

People of all persuasions appeal to her. In fact, she is open-minded as she interacts with others. She may even be a little naive about people.

The legibility of both her writing and signature tells us she wants to communicate with others. However, she can be secretive, self-protective and hold back on matters of personal concern. She has a private side and does not tell everything. And although she sometimes talks continuously, where her deep private feelings are concerned, she is not very communicative.

Seemingly, she has a great deal of emotional energy available to her. She is independent, strong-willed outwardly, but soft and sentimental inside. Her intense feelings run deep and remain with her for a long time.

In her work, she tends to have high standards and takes pride in her work. Her precision is admirable. She will work hard to make a good impression. How she is perceived by others is ever important to her. She may be overly aware of her appearance to the point of self-consciousness.

Her thinking pattern is methodical, creative and careful. She does not like to be rushed. She accumulates her observations and facts and then uses them to build a mental picture. She relies on logic and leaves as little as possible to chance. Practical methods more than hunches are depended upon. While her approach to learning is controlled and protective, the outcome is one of speed and efficiency in repetitive tasks.

I am a 29 year old mother of a year old daughter. I am also married to a wonderful man

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies are not possible. However, objective feedback is welcome.

Church to present discussion

The Rev. Dr. Virgil Jones, a distinguished Detroit theologian and minister, will conduct a unique series of discussions of "The Black Presence in the Bible — a Theological Evaluation" as a part of Black History Month activities at Westminster Church of Detroit.

The sessions will be held at 9:30 a.m. Sundays, beginning Feb. 4. The topics will be "Why the interest in the black presence in the Bible these days?" on Feb. 4, "Pertinent Scripture passages concerning the black presence in the Bible" on Feb. 11, "The Biblical basis for the struggle for black freedom and hope" on Feb. 18 and "The importance these days of the ecumenical movement in the drive for black freedom" on Feb. 25.

Westminster Church, at Hubbell and Outer Drive in northwest Detroit, is one of a few fully integrated churches serving southeast Michigan. Its slogan, "A Church for All People," reflects its congregation, which is composed of a 50-50 racial mix. Some 50 percent of its members live in western Wayne and Oakland counties.

Jones' classes are a way for Westminster Church to "reaffirm the inclusive nature of our ministry," according to Pastor William Puerstenau.

"These sessions being led by Dr. Jones are a tremendous opportunity for all interested persons, both black and white, to gain new insights into the Bible and its message," he said. "At Westminster we strive to practice the Christian message, which is all-inclusive, in all our activites.

"Dr. Jones willingness to lead us in these discussions adds yet another dimension to our ministry. In a society that still characterizes ethnic groups with worn-out stereotypes and hostile labels, we need to learn more about each other and understand each other's histories."

Jones graduated from the University of Michigan Engineering School, with a degree in engineering physics, then received a degree in philosophy from Wayne State University. Jones has been an ordained Presbyterian minister since 1954. He earned his master of divinity degree at Princeton University.

He also did post-graduate study at Oxford University in theology and philosophy and was Merrill Fellow at the Harvard Divinity School.

After graduating from Princeton, Jones went to New York City, where he became director of the Community House for St. James Presbyterian Church in Harlem and the church's assistant pastor.

He returned to Detroit in 1960 and served as university minister for the United Campus Christian Ministry at Wayne State University for 35 years before retiring in 1994.

In addition to his position as university minister, Jones also taught in the university's philosophy department. He also taught theology at McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Jones was the first president of the Presbyterian Black Caucus of Detroit in the 1960s, was involved in the formation of the national Presbyterian Black Caucus, and served on the national board.

Health care providers push for thyroid awareness

Last year, 46,000 Americans in 22 cities heeded the call to be screened for thyroid disease. Nearly 11 percent were found to have abnormal test results indicating a need for further examination by their physician.

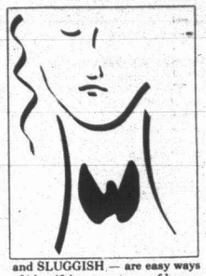
The call comes from a coalition of health care institutions and providers who want to educate the public about thyroid disease and the need for early detection and diagnosis.

The thyroid gland is a part of the endocrine system. A butterfly-shaped gland covering the windpipe just below the Adam's apple, it produces hormones that are essential to normal metabolism as well as growth and development.

The effects of thyroid diseases extend beyond the gland itself because the hormones it produces impact nearly every organ and system in the body. If the thyroid produces fewer hormones than the body needs, the result is known as hypothyroidism, the most common form of thyroid dysfunction. An overactive thyroid gland that secretes excessive hormones produces a syndrome called hyperthyroidism.

Barriers to detection

There are two potential barriers to effective detection and diagnosis of thyroid disease. In the first stage of the disease, patients often experience few or no symptoms and may not even know anything is amiss. Early detection and treatment can stop the progression.



The second problem is that even as the illness progresses to the overt stage, the symptoms tend to be vague and easily confused with those of other conditions, such as the natural aging process, menopause or stress. As a result, many patients remain undiagnosed and untreated for years due to lack of awareness of the disease and its signs and symptoms.

The development of sensitive and ultra-sensitive thyroid-stimulating hormone (TSH) tests have made it possible for physicians to identify thyroid disease earlier than ever, often even before patients begin to experience symptoms of the illness.

The test is used as the definitive screening method for both hyper- and hypothyroidism because it provides the physician with an accurate "window" into the functioning of the thyroid gland by measuring the thyroid-stimulating hormone produced by the pituitary gland. Other commonly used thyroid tests measure the hormone levels in the bloodstream.

Hypothyroidism affects approximately six to seven million Americans, primarily women. The condition occurs when the thyroid, due to disease or abnormality, fails to produce enough hormone.

In the U.S., the most common cause of hypothyroidism is Hashimoto's disease, in which the immune system inexplicably produces antibodies that destroy the thyroid as if it were foreign tissue. As the damaged thyroid gland produces less hormone, the pituitary gland secretes more TSH to encourage the thyroid to work harder. This increased demand may cause the thyroid to enlarge, resulting in what is commonly known as a goiter.

Hyperthyroidism, a less common thyroid disorder, occurs when the thyroid gland becomes overactive, secreting too much hormone. It affects approximately one million Americans and is more common among women, particularly those in their 30s and 40s.

Like hypothyroidism, hyperthyroidism can be an autoimmune disease. The most common form of this disorder is Graves' disease, the illness that affected former First Lady Barbara Bush.

Some symptoms

Two acronyms — RESTLESS and SLUGGISH — are easy ways of identifying symptoms of hyper- and hypothyroidism.

For hyperthyroidism, it's RESTLESS — Reduced menstrual flow, Excessive nervousness and irritability, Sleep disturbances, Tremor, Loss of weight, Eye irritation and changes in vision, Sweating and heat intolerance and Suppressed fertility.

For hypothyroidism, it's SLUGGISH — Sleepiness, fatigue and tiredness, Loss of memory, Unusually dry, coarse skin, Goiter (enlarged thyroid gland, Gradual personality change or depression, Increase in weight, bloating or puffiness (edema), Sensitivity to cold, Hair loss or sparseness of hair.

While the goal of treatment for hyper- and hypothyroidism is to attain normal levels, it's accomplished in different ways.

For hypothyroidism, doctors use doses of a synthetic hormone medication, levothyroxine sodium, tailored to their patients' needs in order to match the levels normally produced by a healthy thyroid.

The treatment of an overactive thyroid includes antithyroid drug therapy, which blocks hormone production, radioactive iodine to disable and reduce the size of the thyroid, and thyroid surgery, usually used to treat very young patients with Graves' disease and older patients with diseased thyroid glands. Radioactive iodine is currently the treatment of choice in the U.S.

People, especially women over age 40, who have symptoms of hyper- or hypothyroidism, may want to ask their doctor about a TSH test as part of their regular medical examination to help ensure a thyroid problem is detected as early as possible.

"WHAT MAKES MUSIC?"

Exhibit explains the science behind the sound

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

The '80s pop band The Hooters is getting a second chance at life at Cranbrook Institute of Science in Bloomfield Hills.

The long-dormant, Philadelphia-based group – which included Eric Bazilian who penned the Grammy-nominated song "One of Us" by Joan Osborne – gives a behind-the-scenes look at the recording of The Hooters' hit "And We Danced" to show how synthesizers, samplers and computers play an important role in modern recording studios.

The videotaped display is part of the "What Makes Music?" exhibit at Cranbrook, which runs through May 12.

"What Makes Music?", the first music exhibit at Cranbrook, delves into the science behind sound and the technology of music making to show it's not as simple as strumming a guitar.

"Musicians are very conscious of the science behind making music. But the public isn't always conscious (of the fact) that music is a wonderful illustration of how science involves every day life. We thought this would be a great chance to show how something they enjoy is rooted in science," said Daniel Appleman, director of the Cranbrook Institute of Science.

He hopes that visitors "gain more enjoyment of what they're hearing so the next time they go to a rock concert, they'll know more about what is happening."

"What Makes Music?" opened in Philadelphia in May 1988 but it's still timely because of the influx of computer-generated music in everything from commercials and movies to rap and rock music. Computers and synthesizers make recording easier for musicians by enabling them to manipulate and create sounds.

The exhibit gives visitors the opportunity to create music themselves – whether they think they're talented or not – by using computers and synthesizers as well as traditional string instruments. While doing so, museum-goers learn the scientific basis behind music.

"What Makes Music?" opens with the "Catch A Wave" display where visitors can watch the vibration of a piano string, normally not visible to the human eye, by turning a strobe light on it.

In the sound-proof "Jamming Room," guests can experiment with melody, harmony and rhythm through pre-recorded programs or variations of their creations on a synthesizer and electronic drum kit.

Even the most tone-deaf person can create music with the "Music Mouse" where a computer program helps composers write their own electronic symphony using only a mouse and a synthesizer.

"What Makes Music?" also explores the basics of music, starting with the sound wave. Created by vibrations, sound waves are actually pressure waves that radiate outward from moving objects. They are detected by the ear and processed as a distinctive sound by the brain.

To illustrate this, the exhibit uses an 8-foot Slinky showing what happens when pressure increases or decreases. Another display shows how little pieces of shells dance and vibrate as the sound waves move through a tube.

Two of the displays are particularly interesting to kids. Children – adult visitors– can take a stroll across the keys of a 15-foot-long "Walk-On Piano" like the one Tom Hanks used in the movie "Big."

In "Transpose Your Voice" museum-goers speak into a microphone and change their voice to sound like a Gregorian Chant, Alvin and the Chipmunks, Darth Vader, the Munchkins from "The Wizard of Oz," or an echo.

Many of the displays at the exhibit are child-friendly.

"That's something that I found to be really interesting about the exhibit," said spokeswoman Carrie Murphy. "It has the very basic-bang-on-make-noise activities for kids that they'll enjoy."

Included in "What Makes Music?" is a collection of rare acoustic instruments from the Lucy Wharton Drexel Collection. An early 20th century ethnologist and philanthropist, Drexel donated this collection to Philadelphia's Franklin Institute Science Museum in 1948.

The display shows a set of pan pipes from Turkey, an inner-duct flute from China, a lattice rattle from Java, and a host of other instruments from countries as diverse as Ethiopia and Soviet Georgia.

Although many of the displays are technical, Murphy said it appeals to people with and without music backgrounds.

"I don't have a music background and I'm also not a scientist, but I enjoyed some of the more basic exhibits like the exhibit with the strobe light and the piano where you plucked a piano string and could see the vibrations going on," Murphy said.

"I think people who enjoy music don't give a thought as to how it's created. This will give them a new appreciation about how sound is created and how music is made."

CHILDREN'S CONCERTS

Orchestras offer programs for fidgety fans

BY MATT JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Even the tiniest tots will enjoy classical music if it's presented the right way. This Saturday the Livonia and Detroit Symphony Orchestras are serving up classics for younger appetites.

DSO is taking youngsters "To the Zoo" on a musical safari where they will encounter Babar (the little elephant), Waltzing Cat and other new friends, 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 3, at the Mercy High School Auditorium, Farmington Hills.

"The DSO Goes to the Zoo" launches the orchestra's new "Tiny Tots" series. Kids make enthusiastic and receptive concertgoers, and the pieces in the "Tiny Tots' lineup are designed to get children ages 3 to 6 involved as well as to explore central themes, said Rheda Becker, who will narrate the concerts.

"They like to sing. They like to hear stories. They like to be read to. They like to play," said Becker, a host arrator for the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra who helps design concerts for young people.

Saturday's program features a slide show, performing dogs, Rossini's "William Tell" Overture, Gershwin's "Walking the Dog," and an old MacDonald sing-along.

ther."

The Tumble Bunnies, an acrobatic/dance group, will perform while the orchestra plays "Pink Panther."

Soprano Nancy Delewsky Villeneuve will sing "Battle Hymn of the Republic," accompanied by the orchestra for the grand finale. Fantasee Lighting of Ypsilanti is providing the light show.

"'The Firebird,' overture is a spectacular opening," said DiBlasi. "It starts out in total darkness and builds to a spectacular light show. There's a beautiful cello solo in the middle of the second movement of the Schumann Symphony. It's very delicate and quite difficult to play. The symphony will be the only work that doesn't include the light show, but it's very listenable."

■ Plymouth Symphony Orchestra is busy rehearsing for "A Carnival of the Animals" to be presented on Feb. 17. Featured soloist is 10-year-old violinist Melissa White of Lansing. Youngsters are encouraged to bring their favorite teddy bear to the concert.

"We'll be taking the audience on a musical zoological tour," said conductor/music director Russell Reed. The title work, "A Carnival of the Animals," by Saint-Saens, musically depicts a variety of animals including a tortoise, birds and donkey. Jerry Hodak of WJBK-Fox 2 is the guest narrator.

White, who has also performed with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will play "Prelude," the first movement of the Bruch Concerto No. 1 in G minor. "It's a major work, professionals play it," said Reed.

Education also plays a role in these concerts. "It's important for kids to know what an orchestra is, and something about symphonic music," said Reed. "This gives them an opportunity to see and hear an orchestra and see how the different instruments sound."

Sir Ian McKellen updates Shakespeare in Richard III'

TICKETS PLEASE

JOHN MONAGHAN

Sir Ian McKellen prefers to think of himself as more than just an interpreter of Shakespeare's work. He is, in his own words, more like an agent, "sticking up for Shakespeare" and making sure he is properly represented.

He certainly has the resume for the job. Hailed internationally a "the leading classical actor of his generation," McKellen has starred in definitive stage versions of "Hamlet," "Richard II," and Marlowe's "Edward II" since the late 1960s.

His film adaptation of "Richard III," currently on screen at the Star John R in Madison Heights, is an ambitious time travel experiment that places the hunchbacked king in 1930s Europe. The language is still Shakespeare, but the trappings are full of Art Deco furnishings and black-shirted thugs.

REVIEW

"Richard seems completely comfortable in the 1930s," said McKellen, a time when Mussolini and Hitler were making their own bloody assents to power. McKellen has been touring with the film, answering audience questions at a preview screening in Detroit last month.

In the opening scene, a tank blasts through the walls of a country home and Richard, wearing a gas mask, hops out and shoots his brother through the head. Huge blood-red letters spell RICHARD III across the very wide screen. You half expect to see it followed by Oliver Stone or even Ken Russell.

While McKellen has his hand in every aspect of the production (including co-screenwriter), he hands the director's reins over to Richard Loncraine, who follow the shocking opening with subtle, static scenes more impressive for set design and costuming than visual flair.

If the movie's tone is uneven, then blame it on Shakespeare, who was only 26 when he wrote it. "The play itself has a certain exuberance, but the tone shifts quite a lot," McKellen says. "Sometimes it's very dramatic, with lots of characters and vulgarity followed by intimate scenes of real people in real situations with real dilemmas."

In one unusual twist, Richard's sister-in-law Elizabeth, foreign-born in the original play, is now an American, played by Annette Bening. While she is quite good with the language, Robert Downey, Jr. couldn't be more embarassing as brother Earl Rivers.

McKellen met Downey while working on "Restoration" and placed him on a short list of American actors for the part. "In order to interest investors, especially from Berlin and Tokyo, we had to present a list of internationally-known American actors to make the film more appealing in the states," he says.

The price tag for "Richard III" was $8.6 million, only a quarter of what such an epic would cost in America. The supporting actors, including Maggie Smith, Nigel Hawthorne, and Jim Broadbent, worked at cut rates, along with countless technicians.

"The best thing about filming it in Britain," says McKellen, "is that we didn't have to rebuild London."

'The Secret of Roan Inish' worth discovering

By LEANNE ROGERS
STAFF WRITER

Mythical creatures and a deep connection with the sea are part of the story in the wonderful 1995 film "The Secret of Roan Inish." In the years after the second World War, many Irish have flocked to the cities to find work. Young Fiona is living with her widowed father in the city, often left to her own devices.

To get her into a healthier environment, Fiona is sent to the country in the west of Ireland to live with her grandparents. The older couple live on seashore, her grandfather and a cousin working as fishermen. The grandfather talks wistfully of the family's island home, Roan Inish, which sometimes can be seen in the distance.

A serious little blonde girl played by Jeni Campbell, Fiona is fascinated with Roan Inish, the island of seals, and the fate of her missing little brother. The entire family was being evacuated from their island homes three years earlier. The baby was in wooden cradle at the shore and floated away, perhaps not forever. Since that time, the family had refused to return to the island which was their home for generations.

VIDEO

Through the tales of her grandfather and a cousin, Fiona learns about her family. An ancestor punished and ridiculed for speaking Irish rather than English at school. The marriage between a man and a Selkie, a mythical half human-half beast, the repercussions of which continue to the current day.

This is a story about people with a deep and lasting connection with the sea and their native soil. When that relationship is disrupted, steps have to be taken to put things back into their proper order. It's also a story about strong families and ties to old ways, the traditions of a people.

Director John Sayles has crafted a lovely film that is natural and realistic, weaving together the mythical and daily life stories. This is a film that doesn't rely on special effects to create its magic. It's done with fine storytelling, good dialogue, fine acting and a beautifully shot film.

Critics have called it, "a Looney Tunes fantasy sprung from the head of Jules Verne."

"The Addiction" (USA - 1995). 7 p.m. Feb. 5. Abel Ferrara, the twisted mind that brought you "Bad Lieutenant," sets his graphic vampire story in modern-day Manhattan. Here a NYU doctoral candidate gets more than she bargained for when her thesis on good and evil unearths a real coven of vampires.

"Sense and Sensibility" (Britain - 1995). In yet another film adaptation of a Jane Austen novel (and one of the best films of the year), tragedy changes a family's circumstances and alters the romantic aspirations of its daughters. Emma Thompson, Alan Rickman, and Hugh Grant star in a script written by Thompson and directed by Ang Lee ("The Wedding Banquet").

"Dead Man Walking" (USA - 1996). Sean Penn makes a welcome return in front of the camera as a condemned man who forms a controversial friendship with a Catholic nun (Susan Sarandon). A decidedly offbeat drama directed by Tim Robbins.

"Restoration" (Britain - 1995). In this long-promised period piece, Robert Downey, Jr. plays a notorious womanizer in the court of Charles II who may have been stung by true love. Sam Neill, Meg Ryan, and Sir Ian McKellan co-star.

"Two Bits" (USA - 1995). Al Pacino has made up for lost time in yet another flamboyant role, here as a grandfather teaching his grandson about life and love. Starts Friday.

■ MICHIGAN THEATRE
603 E. Liberty, Ann Arbor. Call (313) 668-8397 for information. ($6; $5 students/seniors)

The strange story of Leon Theremin, the Russian-born inventor of his namesake instrument, a cabinet full of tubes that produced an eerie sound when objects moved near it. Those who thought this was just the stuff of science fiction movies like "The Day the Earth Stood Still" are in for a rare and exciting treat.

"Restoration" (Britain - 1995). Through Feb. 14 (call for show time). See Main Art Theatre listing above.

■ STAR JOHN R
John R at 14 Mile, Madison Heights. Call (810) 585-2070 for information. ($6; $3.50 matinees/twilight)

"Richard III" (Britain - 1995). Sir Ian McKellen stars in this ambitious but uneven attempt at updating Shakespeare to the 1930s. Though the hunchbacked king seems at home in the era of Mussolini and Hitler, director Richard Loncraine doesn't know whether he wants the movie to be classical or over-the-top. Starts Friday.

■ UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN - DEARBORN
Evergreen between Michigan and Ford Roads. Call (313) 593-5390 for information. (Free)

"All the Mornings of the World" (France - 1992). 7:30 p.m. Feb. 2 (shown in Room 138, Science Building.) Gerard Depardieu plays a 17th century royal musician in this romantic drama.

Deftones play with their idols

STAFF WRITER

Life has come full circle for Deftones guitarist Stephen Carpenter. While growing up in Sacramento, Calif., he admired Ozzy Osbourne. Now as an adult he and his band are touring with him.

"I grew up with Ozzy when I was like 12. I would have never thought I would be on tour with Ozzy. I never thought about seeing Ozzy. I was too young at the time," said Carpenter who plays The Palace of Auburn Hills with Osbourne on Tuesday, Feb. 6.

"You only get one chance to tour with Ozzy. I can't wait. It's weird, in the past six months the bands we've toured with either influenced us or we grew up listening to them."

The Deftones have also hooked up with Anthrax, which includes Carpenter's favorite guitarist Scott Ian, Sepultura, and Bad Brains.

"That was probably the coolest tour," Carpenter said of the Bad Brains tour. "Those guys are just legends. It was eye-opening . . . just to become good friends with those guys, watching and seeing how they react to some things and how they deal with it.

"They're one of the greatest bands ever. There's definitely bands and then there's bands. They forged many a paths for people and are still doing it, that's the crazy part."

The Deftones are touring in support of its debut album "Adrenaline" (Maverick), a volcanic mix of primitive, unsettling rage ("7 Words") and melodic vocals ("Root"), packaged around rap influences and thick, chunky guitars.

"I think it's a combination of (rap and rock)," Carpenter said describing his album. "We don't try to write one style of music. We don't really try to write anything. We do what we do. There's common points in all of them. We like quiet and heavy stuff," Carpenter said.

Singer Chino Moreno agreed.

"I think that one of the best things we have going for us is our dynamics," Moreno said. "There's never too much of anything. It's not like there's a real heavy song and then a real soft song. Each of our songs contains many different levels."

Aside from recording most of the record live, the band tried unorthodox methods in the studio. For the recording of the brutally cathartic "7 Words," Deftones singer Moreno crouched inside a Styrofoam cave that was erected in the recording studio screaming "Suck Suck Suck Suck."

Moreno took this bizarre approach after the traditional method of singing it in a control booth didn't get the song's point across.

Some would say that his plan didn't work. When radio programmers got ahold of the single "7 Words," many of them misunderstood words in the song, Carpenter said, mistaking them for swear words therefore keeping the song off the air in some cities.

One of his goals in life is to erase the stigma that goes along with swear words.

"I've got two crusades, things I'd like people to do in life. The first is to get over the cuss-word phenomena. It's so pathetic. I can see maybe 30 years ago when it was a different environment but now every person cusses. It's normal talk nowadays," he said.

Carpenter added that people should refrain from swearing around children, however.

"The second one is (against) people who categorize music. Music is music nowadays. They should learn to enjoy music." Deftones and Korn open for Ozzy Osbourne at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 6, at The Palace of Auburn Hills, 2 Championship Drive (I-75 and Lapeer Road), Auburn Hills. Tickets are $27.50 in advance. For more information, call (810) 645-6666 or (810) 377-0100.

Charm Farm

Suddenly, everything is beautiful

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

As their hit song "Superstar" goes, "everything is beautiful" for the Detroit-bred band Charm Farm.

The alternative pop/rock band and the independent record label it has signed to, Los Angeles-based PRA, have inked a deal with Mercury Records to release Charm Farm's latest album "Pervert" nationally and internationally. The terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

"I think they're a great band," said Jim Fouratt, the artist and repertoire representative from Mercury who signed the band. "We expect very big things from them."

"Pervert" will be released in April with "Sick," a song that starts out innocently but escalates into a booming, chest-pounding rock song, as the first single. So far, the influential California radio stations KROQ and 91X have committed to playing it.

The tongue-in-cheek look at Studio 54 scenesters "Superstar" will be worked in dance club followed by a national release in May.

The single "Superstar" is what piqued the attention of record labels. Released locally in the fall, the song reached No. 1 on WHYT's ("The Planet" 96.3) weekly countdowns multiple times beating out acts like Smashing Pumpkins, Bush, the Goo Goo Dolls and Everclear.

"Radio stations send out reports to all the record companies about what they're playing. WHYT had us on their report and the companies were asking, 'Why did our records just get bumped out of the top ten and who the hell is Charm Farm,'" said Dennis White, the band's singer, songwriter and producer.

"We didn't go away so then they really wanted to know about Charm Farm."

PRA Records started shopping the record around and Mercury was one of a handful of labels that took the bait. They sent Fouratt to the Detroit Music Awards show to see the band play.

"It was a matter of timing. It couldn't have worked out better because we were up for these awards. He sees us win all these awards. He sees the band play and he really liked it. We were No. 1 on the radio station's (weekly) countdown the next day and he heard that on the way to the airport," said White, a former music director for the break-through techno act Inner City.

Fouratt was impressed by White's songwriting ability and the songs' blend of modern and retro sounds.

"When I first heard it ('Pervert'), I thought the songs were so '90s but had such a reverance for some great '70s glam kind of sound. It had almost a techno kind of sound in there too. But it was also a very '90s guitar-driven rock 'n' roll band," explained Fouratt, a former columnist for Hits magazine.

"We lived through grunge, with all due respect, but it's about time people started using their hips again."

Patrick Rains of PRA said Charm Farm also sticks out for its unique sound.

"It's clearly a different-sounding record. A number of people in the last month and a half have come up to us saying, 'Oh my God. Thank you for a record that doesn't sound like anybody else.'"

A week after the show, the label flew band members to New York to meet Mercury executives, including label President Danny Goldberg, whose former company Gold Mountain management boasted a roster that included Nirvana.

"Everybody got along smashingly. It all happened ridiculously fast."

It was Goldberg's involvement that cemented the deal with Mercury, White said.

"Danny Goldberg has a great reputation of taking large record companies to the next step. His history is in management. He's done business all his life battling against record companies. Now that he's the head of a label, he's a very, very artist-oriented type of guy," he said.

Filming for the "Sick" video will begin here in a couple weeks. White feels very strongly about keeping the Detroit connection alive.

"I'm not trying to sound corny about this, but I'm quite proud of the artistic element to the city," White explained.

"When we did these recent photos for the company, we insisted they do them here. They asked us where we wanted to shoot videos, I insisted that we shoot them here. When they wanted to fly us out to New York to show the rest of the company what they got themselves into, I cordially invited them out to Detroit to see what we're all about here."

"You don't have to get the hell out of here to be successful."

Charm Farm performs a showcase for record company executives and the public at the Magic Bag, 22918 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, on Thursday, Feb. 15. Doors open at 8 p.m. for the 18 and older show. Tickets are available at Ticketmaster. For more information, call (810) 544-3030 or (810) 645-6666.

■ 'When I first heard it ('Pervert'), I thought the songs were so '90s but had such a reverance for some great '70s glam kind of sound. It had almost a techno kind of sound in there too. But it was also a very '90s guitar-driven rock 'n' roll band.'

Mental Landscape plays rock for thinkers

STAFF WRITER

Mental Landscape's popularity has been hampered by the fear of the unknown. According to band members, people are afraid of what they'll find — musically and theatrically — at a Mental Landscape show.

The band's "Statement of Purpose" says Mental Landscape vows "to awaken thoughts, revive imagination, challenge intellect, and combine the capacity of the mind with positive action to create change."

It may sound overbearing to an average music fan who just wants to go out and have a good time and not have to think about lyrics. But it's certainly not scary.

Mental Landscape is the thinking-person's hard alternative rock band. Challenging lyrics, abstract vocals and ethereal guitars that sometimes give way to more abrasive sounds fill the band's second full-length CD "Psychic Prostitution."

"Challenge" is a word that comes up many times during the course of a conversation with Mental Landscape. Guitarist Jeremy Polanz, formerly of the band Sin Eye, explained that it was the "challenge" that lured him to Mental Landscape 1½ years ago.

"It's been challenging just because we all challenge each other mentally. There is no sitting on your laurels in this band. We're constantly challenging each other. I think that's why things improve . . . because it's a constant challenge," said Polanz, formerly of West Bloomfield.

Detroit-based Mental Landscape agrees that "Psychic Prostitution" is the band's best effort to date. That's primarily because the animosity that surrounded the recording of Mental Landscape's last album "Harrow's Bard" has lessened with the addition of new members Polanz and drummer Ken MacMillan.

Although singer/songwriter Rambeaux said "Harrow's Bard" is a "decent album," it turned out a "little more stripped down and rock oriented. It was not how we wanted to sound." "Psychic Prostitution" represents what the band is about.

"It's much better than the last release. This time, everyone was in agreement about how the record should sound, how it should be arranged, and the mood that we wanted to convey (with the album)," the band's singer/songwriter Rambeaux explained.

Polanz and MacMillan help with that. MacMillan's tribal drumming under Polanz's fluid guitar playing, similar to the Red Hot Chili Peppers' Dave Navarro, and Viola Redox's bass lines keep the musical hooks alive. Rambeaux's grinding vocals are so full of hooks themselves that there's no turning back after the first note.

Guitarist Polanz said his guitar playing has upped Mental Landscape's ante.

"I just think I've finally brought the guitar sound that they were looking for," Polanz said.

"I think we've really completed the sound, you know. . . . We've kind of molded and found the sound that needed to come out of this band."

Never ones to record a love song, Mental Landscape's songs examine "the psychology of how society works and how the powers that be shape and form opinions without people really having the common knowledge that these events and these things are being shaped for them," according to Rambeaux.

Mental Landscape celebrates the release of its CD with a party and performance on Saturday, Feb. 3, at the Magic Bag, 22918 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, with God Loves Overdose and Fathers of the Id. Tickets are $5 for the 18 and older show. For more information, call (810) 544-3030.

DINING

You can dine like royalty at King's Court Castle

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

This weekend don't just go out for dinner, go out for an experience!

Step back in time to merry old 16th century England and enjoy a meal with the family in a castle complete with knights in armor and wood-paneled fireplaces.

As an added treat, The King's Court Castle Restaurant at Canterbury Village in Lake Orion presents its 3rd Annual Winter Carnival Feb. 9-18, with lots of things to do while you stroll through the old world town surrounding the restaurant.

Canterbury's owner Stan Aldridge of Bloomfield Hills said he's had a wonderful time designing his "castle," taking great time and effort to acquire the different suits of armor, bronzes, weaponry, and ship models on display. The restaurant's gigantic entrance hall has a stained glass window, oak-paneling with carved medieval figures, and is carpeted and chandeliered in the spirit of King Henry VIII. Diners must climb a winding stairway to gain entrance to the four dining rooms on the second level.

"I hope to deliver a visual experience so guests feel they're coming into a castle," Aldridge said on a tour of the King's Court. "I want to see their eyes open wide and hear their 'Wows!"

The King's Court Castle Restaurant officially opened Jan. 12 under the direction of Indianwood Golf Course's executive chef Eddie Mattson. (Aldridge owns Indianwood as well as the Lakewood Shores Resort in northern Michigan.) The menu features "king size portions with affordable prices," and under the heading "Feasts of the Realm" choose from baked chicken, strip steak, prime rib, smoked pork ribs, skewered lamb, Eric the Great's Nordic Salmon and King George's Canadian Whitefish.

There are also salads, pasta dishes, sandwiches, a selection of pizzas and a "Clan Gathering Chicken Dinner" served family style for $12.95 per person. (Kids 12 and under pay $6.95; Children 5 and under eat free.) There are a few vegetarian entrees, but the menu is definitely for the meat and potatoes crowd. The King's Court Castle offers a complete bar and beverage service.

"We recently hosted a dinner theater at the castle, featuring The Imagination Theatre's salute to Scotland's national poet Robert Burns," said village spokeswoman Peggy Bruscha. "It was a light-hearted audience interactive program and we hope to arrange more in the future."

Many special events are being discussed for the various dining rooms of the castle, and wedding parties may eventually be added. Currently, the castle is smoothing out its day-to-day operations and fine-tuning the menu based on patrons' comments. Aldridge said so far, diners have been very positive and supportive.

"The restaurant is generating traffic for the village shops that opened three years earlier," said Aldridge. "I probably should have opened the Castle first because food drives sales, but, you live and learn. These type of festival villages are doing well in other parts of the country because they provide quality entertainment, something for people to do. There are about 4 million families within 45 minutes of The Canterbury Village. We saw 5-6,000 on weekends through October and December. Hey, it's not often you can come into a castle!"

King's Court Castle is in the Olde World Caterbury Village, built on the 21 acres of the former Scripps Farm. The 14 specialty boutiques are housed in renovated historical buildings, including the year-round two-story Always Christmas store with more than 60,000 holiday items from around the world; a pavilion featuring a working carousel; a chiming Clock Tower; Flowers, Pots and Baskets; The Toy Store; The Canterbury Store and Tea Room; Offspring Children's Wear, Stangallini's Cafe, Many Moons Ago southwest art; Highland Fling Scottish specialty; The Fudge Shop; Leather Cottage; Kathryn's Cookies; and Goin' Nuts gourmet candy.

Under construction: a gourmet food shop adjacent to the King's Court Restaurant and a cider mill.

Unbeatable Stingrays

The TNT Stingrays, a Plymouth-Canton Hockey Association Squirt A team, proved unbeatable through their 18-game Little Caesars regular season. The Stingrays played three Canadian teams in a weekend tournament to keep sharp for the playoffs, and ended up winning the tournament in a shootout final against the LaSalle Sabres.

The Stingrays begin district playoff action tonight.

Tournament titlists

The Pistons upended the regular-season champion Magic, 42-37, to win the Plymouth-Canton Junior Basketball Association's Girls A League tournament championship Jan. 18.

The Magic had won the regular-season crown with a 9-1 record. The Pistons were tied for second with a 6-4 mark.

Piston team members are Lindsey Smith, Summer Smith, Jessica Geiser, Lyndsay Lowman, Angela Dascenzo, Kristen Thomas, Meredith Fox, Julieann Jastrzebski, Lauren Burniac and Terri Schroeder. The team is coached by Waine Thomas.

Swim champs

Hope College's women's swim team splashed to its eighth undefeated dual-meet season in the last 10 years of Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association competition by beating Albion College, 126-80, last Saturday. The Flying Dutch finish 4-0 in the MIAA; they are 5-1 overall.

Plymouth Canton graduate Kari Jackson, a freshman on Hope's team, continues to hold down the team's best marks in one-meter diving. Jackson has posted a 196.75 point total for six dives and a 318.30 score for 11 dives.

Baseball, softball sign-up

The Plymouth-Canton Junior Baseball League will have registration for the upcoming season on Saturday, Feb. 10; Saturday, Feb. 17; and Wednesday, March 13. All registrations will be at the Canton HS cafeteria.

The Saturday sign-ups will be from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.; the Wednesday, March 13 registration will be from 7-9 p.m. Boys 7-15 years-old and girls 7-16 are encouraged to participate. Practice opens

Look out the window, and what do most Michiganders see?

Winter.

Unless you're a member of the Madonna University Bullpen Club, the official support group for the Crusaders' baseball team. Those associated with coach Mike George's team see spring right around the corner — why else would baseball practice already be underway?

Madonna embarks on its annual spring trip to Florida in seven weeks to open its season March 1. Last year, the Crusaders posted a 39-25 record while winning their first-ever sectional championship.

George thinks his current team is capable of making the next step, particularly after noting the academic performance last fall: a 3.04 combined grade-point average. Fifteen team members were named to the dean's list:

George is still looking for Bullpen Club members. For the minimum $100 donation, members receive a bi-weekly newsletter (from January through June); a Madonna University t-shirt; free media guide; one ticket to the baseball banquet; a Crusader special (hot dog, drink, chips) at all home games; unlimited coffee at all home games; official Bullpen Club membership card.

All proceeds go to offset operating costs of the Madonna baseball program and for field renovations. All checks should be made payable to Madonna University.

For more information on the Bullpen Club, call Mike George at (313) 432-5609.

Madonna sinks to Saints

■ A difficult season hit another low for Madonna University with Monday's loss to Siena Heights. The Fighting Crusaders have made some strides, but their weaknesses are evident, too — particularly a lack of depth, brought sharply into focus when Salem grad Brandon Slone was forced to the sidelines.

By C.J. Risak
Staff Writer

If there is one lesson Madonna University men's basketball coach Bernie Holowicki would like his team to absorb, it would be that games last 40 minutes.

Realizing that, and finding a way to play consistently the entire time, would be extremely beneficial for the Fighting Crusaders.

Example: Monday's game against visiting Siena Heights College, a team Madonna defeated earlier this season. The Crusaders struggled early, trailing by as many as nine, but a 50-second surge that included three-pointers by Christian Emert and Mike Maryanski and two free throws by Mike Miller trimmed that to 30-29 with five minutes left in the first half.

Those final five minutes, however, ruined Madonna — and propelled Siena Heights to a 91-75 triumph. The win raised the Saints' record to 14-9.

"We always seem to revert back," said Holowicki after his team slipped to 6-18. "We're trying to break some bad habits here. There's a lack of discipline. (Siena Heights) wanted to go up and down the floor, to set a fast tempo. Fred (Smith, Siena Heights' coach) has got some great athletes."

What upset Holowicki was that the Crusaders seemed only too happy to oblige. And while they kept pace with the Saints, they probably should have been leading. "They probably didn't shoot and convert on the back end of our press as well as they would have liked," said Siena Heights' Smith.

Holowicki agreed. "We don't finalize," he said. "It's been our problem all year. You've got to go to the basket and expect to get fouled, and then get fouled."

Smith switched his pressure defenses, to a diamond-and-one, with five minutes left in the half, and the effect was immediate. Madonna scored just one basket in that final stretch and turned the ball over five of its last six possessions.

Which fueled Siena Heights' finishing run — a 15-2 closer that allowed the Saints to open up a 45-31 halftime lead.

"We switched presses and that helped us," said Smith.

Their poor play in those last five minutes seemed to deflate the Crusaders, who never really overcame it. Siena Heights scored the first seven points of the second half to boost its lead to 21, and the Saints kept their lead hovering around 20 the rest of the game.

Indeed, Madonna scored the game's final nine points — and still lost by 16.

Dan Perttula (from Redford Thurston) paced Madonna with 18 points, including 4-of-11 on three-pointers. He also grabbed nine rebounds. Miller added 17 points and two steals, Jeff Kennedy had 12 points, four assists and three steals, and Maryanski finished with 11 points, 13 rebounds and three blocked shots.

Siena Heights got 18 points and eight boards from Roger Williams, 16 points from Byron Johnson, 11 points from Sam Lofton, and 10 points apiece from Anthoney Staff.

Hunter-less Canton wins

By Richard L. Shook
Staff Writer

■ BASKETBALL

If someone had said at the start of the season that Plymouth Canton would still be a viable basketball team when missing both Ron Hunter and Rob Johnson, Chiefs fans would have laughed. Once they stopped shuddering, that is.

Yet there they were Tuesday night, minus both key returning players from last year's team.

And all they did was demolish North Farmington, 58-37, at Canton.

Which should only make the Chiefs stronger, should both Hunter and Johnson return — as it seems increasingly likely they will.

"They're a great team," coach Brian Swinehart of North Farmington said after his Raiders dropped to 3-9 this season and 2-4 in the Western Lakes Activities Association. "They work hard. You just can't prepare for the kind of defense they're going to throw at you."

"They're a heckuva team with Hunter and Johnson. I'm glad we don't have to see them with those two."

Hunter suffered a foot injury in Canton's only loss of the season, last Friday to Northville.

A diagnosis is "still not definite," according to coach Dan Young, "but it's the top of his foot. It could be a stress fracture, it could be a strain.

"We don't know if he'll play at all Friday. But then again, he could. We'll have a definitive diagnosis soon."

Hunter was at the game in sneakers and street clothes, walking with a noticeable limp but not so hampered that he couldn't stand up and wolf down a piece of post-game cake.

Johnson was also in attendance. Smiling.

Original diagnosis on his early-season injury was a torn knee ligament, the worst one. But he since has undergone surgery to repair damaged cartilage.

"He's already in rehab," Young beamed. "They were hoping for 3-4 weeks from the operation or 2-3 weeks from the start of rehab.

"We're hoping he'll be able to play maybe at the start of the league tournament, maybe at the start of the state tournament."

A visitor was intently looking for signs of timidity, fear and fragile self-confidence. There was none to be found — at least on the Canton side.

North Farmington came out using a patient offense, moving the ball well. But after holding a 7-6 lead with 5:23 remaining in the first quarter, the Raiders hit a dry spot — a dry spot that lasted until the fourth quarter.

They went scoreless the remainder of that period, had four points in the second and nine in the third to trail, 45-20, entering the fourth.

"They outworked us in every phase of the game," Swinehart said. "Their defense was better. They were excellent against our zone and scored against our man-to-man. It didn't matter. It's not the end of the world, though."

Rich Beal, Julian Cochran and Corey Forth each scored six points to lead North Farmington. Brad Rivers and Tim Dolan had five apiece.

Mark Bray picked up the slack for Hunter with a 15-point performance. Donte Scott did also, getting 11. Brandon Hartke got nine while Matt Ammons and Nick Hurley picked up eight apiece.

"I was real happy with our play," Young said after the Chiefs improved to 11-1 overall and 5-1 in the WLAA. "Our concentration was as good as it's been for an entire game all year.

"We had two good practices and we came out and played good basketball. Bray and Ammons and Hartke have played a lot of minutes. One big thing I told them was not to come out and try to do it all at one time. Just do what you do, only do it a little bit better."

Mission accomplished, coach.

Churchill jolts Salem, 62-56

This just isn't right. It must be some sort of mirage, an illusion.

At least it would make a good trivia question: When was the last time Plymouth Salem had a losing season in basketball?

The Rocks are teetering on just that sort of ignominy. They lost their fourth-straight game Tuesday, all of them Western Lakes Activities Association contests, getting outplayed down the stretch by host Livonia Churchill, 62-56.

Salem fell to 5-7 overall, 2-4 in the WLAA. Churchill is 4-8 overall, 2-4 in the WLAA.

"It's been a long time," admitted Charger coach Tom Lang, who could not recall the last time a Churchill team beat Salem. "At least a decade," he estimated.

It came down to the final minute for the Chargers to end that streak. The game was tied at 56-all with 40 seconds left when Shawn Woloszyn stepped to the free-throw line to shoot a one-and-one. He made both, then duplicated that a few seconds later to increase Churchill's cushion to 60-56.

A steal and a basket with five seconds to go by Matt Hughes sealed Salem's fate. Woloszyn's 19 points paced the Chargers; Kevin Renaud and Allen Polanski added 10 apiece, with Polanski grabbing nine rebounds. Jay Van Wagoner totaled five points and 12 boards, making it four-straight games rebounding in double figures.

For Salem, Andres Lopez scored 19 points and Phil Parker got 15.

The Rocks started quickly enough, jumping out to a 22-13 lead after one quarter. But Lang's between-quarters message — "I told them they can't win without playing defense" — apparently stuck. Churchill limited Salem to five points in the second quarter while scoring 17, giving the Chargers a 30-27 lead at the half.

It was still a three-point game after three periods, and stayed close until Woloszyn's clutch free throws.

■ Agape 79, Macomb Christian 75: Josh Thompson's 24 points and 15 rebounds Monday night sparked Plymouth Agape Christian to the non-league win, its ninth in 11 outings this season.

All five starters scored in double figure for Agape. Cory Mullen added 16 points, Rick Gutterson 15, Adam Martin 13 and Matt Major 11. The Wolverines hit 16 of 22 free throws to Macomb's 6-of-9.

Rob Edberg scored 27 points for the visiting losers with Dave Tanner netting 13 plus 13 rebounds. Macomb Christian is 5-8.

A 24-15 second quarter helped Macomb take a 34-31 halftime lead but Agape won the next two periods, 23-21 and 25-20. The Wolverines were much more aggressive defensively and moved the ball better on offense.

■ PCA 68, Southfield Christian 66: A back-and-forth struggle wasn't decided until Jeremy Shaw canned a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left, giving Plymouth Christian Academy the winning margin Friday against visiting Southfield Christian.

Jamie Neil's 26 points paced PCA. Shaw scored 13 and Chris DeRenzo had 10. Southfield Christian got 21 points apiece from A.J. Ztian and Nate Van Noord.

Rocks rip Dearborn

Another meet, another victory — but no qualifiers.

That sums up Tuesday's action for Plymouth Salem's swim team. The Rocks experienced no trouble in collecting their eighth-straight dual-meet triumph, beating non-league foe Dearborn 122-63 at Salem.

Eight of the 12 events were won by the Rocks, including all three relays. John McLenaghan, Kyle Petroskey, Tim Buchanan and Nick Corden combined to win both the 200-yard medley relay (1:45.23) and the 200 freestyle relay (1:33.33). Corden, Petroskey, Buchanan and Mark Dettling were the winning team in the 400 free relay (3:24.68).

Individual wins went to McLenaghan in the 50 free (23.47), Otto Geiseman in diving (243.85 points), Buchanan in the 100 butterfly (57.46), Brent Mellis in the 500 free (5:09.80) and Pat Morgan in the 100 breaststroke (1:11.06).

Although it was a welcome win, the Rocks still have no state qualifiers — but they're getting closer, according to coach Chuck Olson. They have a dual meet against Western Lakes Activities Association rival North Farmington Thursday at Salem, then compete in the Michigan Interscholastic Swim Coaches Association meet next Saturday (Feb. 10) at Eastern Michigan University.

Olson has the team pointing toward the MISCA meet at EMU to make qualifying standards.

Salem holds off North's challenge

This is getting to be a habit.

At least Plymouth Salem is on the right side of these close gymnastics results. For the second-straight outing, the Rocks narrowly averted a loss, this time edging Farmington 135.7-135.2 Monday at Farmington.

The win was Salem's fifth in six duals. The Falcons slipped to 1-4 in Western Lakes Activities Association duals, 5-5 overall.

Last Wednesday, the Rocks managed to eke out a win over Westland John Glenn by the narrowest of margins: 135.7-135.6. Against Farmington Monday, it was nearly as close, thanks to the Falcons' school-record scoring record. Their best team score prior to the Salem meet was 131.5.

The Rocks survived behind solid all-around performances from Zoe Yockey, Kristin Kosik and Brooke Kilby. Yockey posted the highest all-around score of 35.5. Kosik was third (34.75) and Kilby fourth (34.2).

In individual events, Yockey won the floor exercise (9.25), was second in the uneven parallel bars (8.75), tied for second with teammate Danielle Puchalt in the balance beam (8.7), and took third in the vault (8.8).

Kosik was first in the vault (9.25), second in the floor (9.2), tied for third with Farmington's Brook Rubin in the bars (8.7), and seventh in the beam (7.6). Kilby won the bars (8.95), was fourth in the vault (8.35) and tied for fourth with Kelly Barenie in the beam (8.25), and finished seventh in the floor (8.65).

Farmington's top performer was Sarah Nolan, who won the beam (9.05) and took second in the all-around (35.35).

"For a minute, we thought we won until we re-checked the score," Farmington coach Alicia Herpick said.

"Still, we had our all-time best. We can't be upset with that. Improving more than three points in one meet is great."

Salem competes with Plymouth Canton at the Canton Invitational Saturday in what promises to be one of the state's premier events prior to the state tournament. Competition begins at 9 a.m.

State-ranked Inter-City just too much for PCA

BY NEAL ZIPSER
STAFF WRITER

The freshmen, JV and varsity basketball games Tuesday at Plymouth Christian Academy were running more than hour late due to a tardy referee for the freshmen game.

That didn't bode well for the Eagles, who were facing Allen Park Inter-City Baptist. The Chargers were coming off a 56-49 loss to Pontiac Oakland Christian which dropped them from No. 3 to No. 10 in one Class D state poll.

Needless to say, the extra hour gave Inter-City more time to think of ways to decimate PCA, which they did in a 77-48 rout.

"The loss definitely made us refocus our focus," Inter-City coach Mark Kraatz said. "It gave us more motivation and we were definitely more focused."

The Chargers improved to 10-2 overall and 3-1 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference. PCA dropped to 8-4 overall and 1-3 in the MIAC.

Inter-City dominated from start to finish and used its superior height to take the early lead. The Chargers collected eight offensive boards in the first quarter alone and held a 41-27 advantage for the game.

The dominating force underneath was Inter-City's 6-foot-8 senior center Mike Zeismer. The "Shaq of the MIAC" collected 15 points, 10 rebounds and four blocks. The Chargers played without their other 6-8 center, who was declared academically ineligible two weeks ago.

"We've had the height advantage over teams all year so it wasn't a surprise we'd have it again," Kraatz said.

PCA coach Dan Brandel wouldn't blame the mismatch on size, pointing to last season's double overtime loss versus the Chargers. Instead, Brandel said poor shooting proved to be the difference.

"Our game plan was to take it right at them," Brandel said. "But when you shoot 11-for-40 in the paint, that says it all. Perhaps it was intimidation, but it also was lack of confidence."

In all, the Eagles shot a dismal 28 percent (18-of-64). Conversely, the Chargers shot 48 percent (27-of-56).

Senior guard Jim Mong netted 15 points for Inter-City. David Harrison added 11 while Joel Compton and David Bourlier chipped in with 10 and nine points, respectively.

Senior forward Jim Neil paced the Eagles with 15 points and seven rebounds. Junior guard Chris DeRenzo added 10 points before fouling out early in the fourth quarter.

The Chargers took an early 13-3 lead as the Eagles could muster only one field goal in the first 7:59. A Neil putback at the buzzer closed the deficit to eight heading into the second quarter.

But thanks to some high percentage shots, the Chargers shot a blazing 84 percent (11-of-13) in the second quarter. Inter-City capped the onslaught with a triple at the first-half buzzer by Mong, which put the Chargers ahead 43-20.

"We're not physical and most teams can out-muscle us," Brandel said. "We got moved around and couldn't hold our position."

One of the few bright spots for PCA was the play of its bench, which outscored Inter-City's bench 15-12 in the fourth quarter.

SC in sync in victory over OCC

In what assistant coach Joe Miskovich called the team's best performance of the season, Schoolcraft College's women's basketball squad got out in front quickly against Oakland CC and stayed there, rolling to an 82-64 victory Saturday at SC.

The victory lifted the Lady Ocelots' record to 14-6 overall, 4-2 in the Eastern Conference. OCC fell to 7-9 overall, 2-4 in the conference.

All five starters reached double figures in scoring for the winners. Becky Billicki's 22 points and four assists led the way; Sheilah Coulter added 14 points, three assists and three steals; both Amy Pietila and Jenny Markham scored 12, with Pietila grabbing 10 rebounds and dishing out three assists and Markham making four steals; Yvonne Malewski scoring 10 points and making five steals.

OCC got 14 points and 14 rebounds from Holly Mazich; 14 points from Shawna Greene; and 13 points and 11 boards from Michelle Feltzer.

The Ocelots, who had made it a habit to get off to slow starts this season, this time jumped all over OCC from the beginning. SC led 44-20 at the half, thanks to Pietila's 12 points. The Raiders kept it respectable in the second half thanks to Greene's four three-pointers.

■ Spring Arbor 81, Madonna 73: Two factors wrecked Madonna University's hopes for victory at Spring Arbor Tuesday — a terrible start and Courtney Thompson.

Regarding the former, the Lady Crusaders trailed 41-25 at the half. As for the latter, the 6-foot-2 Thompson, a freshman from Chelsea, put up a triple-double: 26 points, 16 rebounds (seven offensive) and a school-record 13 blocked shots.

Another indicator of how poorly things went for the Crusaders — they hit just 14-of-40 second-half shots, which translates to 35 percent. And that was an improvement over their first-half performance (10-of-47, 21.3 percent).

Francine Williams' 24 points topped Madonna. Katie Cushman added 18, Mary Murray had 10 and nine rebounds, and Angie Negri totaled nine points, 11 boards and four steals.

Joining Thompson in double figures in scoring for the Cougars were Liz Chriscinske with 16 points (with nine rebounds and, six assists), Penny Supiran with 13 and Michelle Brayton with 12.

The win boosted Spring Arbor's record to 16-8 overall. Madonna fell to 16-11 with its second-straight loss.

■ Lake Superior St. 91, Madonna 60: It was an awfully long bus trip — more than six hours — for a lesson like this.

Madonna battled the weather all the way to Sault Ste. Marie and back, stopping to play Lake Superior State while there. The results proved no better than the road conditions.

The Lady Lakers, co-leaders in the powerful NCAA II Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, improved to 14-3 with the win.

Stacy Lamphere played at Oakland University for three years before transferring to Madonna, which prepared her for the long, tedious bus trip; she led the Crusaders with 18 points and two blocked shots. Dawn Pelc contributed 13 points, five rebounds and four steals.

Raiders rally past Ocelots

A relentless rally in the final seven minutes allowed Oakland Community College to overcome Schoolcraft College's 15-point advantage and post a 72-71 victory Saturday at SC.

Derrick White capped the rally by nailing a jumper with 25 seconds left, giving OCC the game-winning points.

The result was another frustration in a season full of them for SC, which fell to 6-13 overall, 1-6 in the Eastern Conference. OCC improved to 4-3 in the conference, 9-9 overall.

Dave Pavlak led SC with 19 points. Tim Burns and Dwaun Warmack added 12 apiece, and Bruce Goode scored 10. Warmack's seven rebounds were best for the Ocelots.

OCC got 14 points, six assists and four steals from Troy Daniels; 13 points, eight rebounds and three assists from White; and 10 points and two blocked shots from Jason Hanson.

SC led 32-28 at the half and remained in front until the Raiders' stretch drive. OCC outshot the Ocelots, making 26-of-57 from the floor (45.6 percent) to SC's 27-of-66 (40.9 percent), and held a 44-36 edge in rebounding.

Plymouth Salem

Perhaps what happened in the last two games of Monday's match at North Farmington was a look at what's to come.

"It was sort of an awakening," said co-coach Allie Suffety after the Rocks recovered from a slow start to bump the Raiders, 15-11, 13-15, 15-3, 15-0. "We're not quite there yet, where we can put someone away consistently."

But they're closing in. Monday's win was Salem's 28th straight (covering the last three years) in Western Lakes Activities Association play; the Rocks are 22-4-2 overall, 5-0 in the conference this season.

Shellye Sills, the senior middle hitter who has already verbally committed to attend the University of Toledo to play volleyball, "dominated the last two games," according to Suffety. Sills collected 16 kills, 12 digs, three solo blocks, two block assists and three service aces in the match.

Kim Sheldon stepped up her game, totaling nine kills, 10 digs and two aces. Karissa Socia had six kills and five aces; Jenny Trott had six kills; Amanda Abraham had five kills; and setter Karen Springsteen finished with 19 assists to kills and 10 aces.

Plymouth Canton

Plymouth Canton extended its winning streak in WLAA matches to five with a 15-10, 9-15, 15-10, 15-4 triumph over visiting Farmington Monday, setting up a showdown against Livonia Churchill for the Western Division championship Monday.

The win boosted the Chiefs' overall record to 15-5-5. Farmington is 1-5 in the WLAA.

Jessica Orleman's 10 kills paced Canton's offense. She also had 12 digs. Amber Wells collected eight kills, 13 assists to kills and 19 digs; Beth Ostach had five kills; Nikki Kovachevich had five service aces; Kristie Drinkhahn had four aces and eight digs; and Anne Alioto totaled eight assists to kills and 18 digs.

Last Saturday, the Chiefs played a bit erratically but still managed to finish third at the 32-team University of Michigan-Dearborn Tournament.

Drinkhahn and Orleman were both selected to the all-tournament team, primarily "due to their defensive play," said Canton coach Steve Anderson. Drinkhahn had 28 kills and 48 digs during the tournament, with Orleman getting 35 kills and 36 digs.

Others with strong tournament performances were Ostach, 28 kills; Wells, 41 assists to kills and 35 digs; Alioto, 16 assists to kills; and Jessica Bradley, 30 digs.

The Chiefs were up-and-down all day, starting in pool play. They split with Chelsea, 15-7, 12-15; beat Detroit Western 15-2, 15-0; and split with Ypsilanti, 5-15, 15-8.

Their 1-0-2 record tied Ypsilanti, with Ypsi earning the top seed by virtue of point differential. In the first round of the playoffs, Canton edged Class D North Adams-Jerome 15-8, 11-15, 15-10, then faced Rochester Adams in the quarterfinals and won 15-9, 3-15, 15-12.

"We did another disappearing act in that second game," said Anderson of the Rochester Adams match.

ney and Greg Hartman (Wayne Memorial).

What hurt Madonna significantly was the absence of forward Brandon Slone (Plymouth Salem), one of the team's top scorers and rebounders. Slone suffers from tendonitis in his shoulder; inflammation forced him to the sideline for the next week.

"We're not that deep as it is," noted Holowicki. "I didn't think we'd miss him as much as we did, but we did. (Siena Heights) shot well, but we played terrible defense."

The Saints weren't awesome from the field, making 31-of-75 (41.3 percent) to Madonna's 27-of-71 (38 percent). But they outrebounded the Crusaders 47-36, including 19 offensive boards to Madonna's 10, and did more damage at the free throw line, converting 21-of-28 (75 percent) to 12-of-15 (80 percent) for Madonna.

Shamrocks favored to wear Observerland crown

BY STEVE KOWALSKI

WRESTLING

Garden City High School has hosted the Observerland Wrestling Tournament each year since its inception in 1992.

Maybe the Cougars, who are hosts again on Saturday for the fifth-annual tournament, will give their coaching staff and administration a just reward — the championship.

Detroit Catholic Central is the favorite, but Garden City, fresh off a 37-33 dual-meet victory over Livonia Stevenson at the Hartland Invitational, could contend.

The wrestling starts at 10:30 a.m. with the finals scheduled for about 5 p.m. Admission is $3.

The Cougars finished seventh in 1995 when Stevenson won for the second-straight year. Farmington and CC won in '92 and '93, respectively.

Garden City owns a 13-4 dual-meet record, led by five wrestlers with at least 20 victories.

"We peaked in December, went down a bit, then back up," Garden City coach Dave Chiola said. "It's a long season, but the kids work hard. They come into practice, and I don't even have to tell them what to do."

Stevenson coach Don Berg wasn't thrilled with the loss to Garden City, but points out it came two days after an emotional dual-meet win over previously undefeated Walled Lake Central.

Also, the Spartans voided two weight classes because of injuries and were left standing around a couple hours before their first match because Southgate Aquinas forfeited a match.

Eric O'Neil, the Spartans' 160-pounder, is expected back in the lineup Saturday but heavyweight Jerry Bramer is out for the season.

"Garden City is not bad and we were on a high with (the) Walled Lake Central (win)," Berg said. "Our whole objective is to win the league title. The matches at Hartland were matches. We didn't put emphasis on trying to win them. Aquinas didn't show up, we had a 2½ hour sit around before we had our first match."

CC appears to be the team to beat despite its 9-12 dual-meet record. All of the Shamrocks' losses have come against top-notch competition in both the state and Ohio.

CC was fourth at its own invitational, one of the toughest fields in the state, last month. Stevenson was the best of four other Observerland teams, taking ninth.

Wayne Memorial, which lost only by 10 points to CC despite voiding three weight classes at at tri-meet on Jan. 3, is another contender.

"That gentleman (coach David Davis) over there has done a great job at Wayne," Berg said. "I know what shape it's been in the last two years."

Farmington might not contend as a team, but features two-time Observerland champion Matt Michalski, one of the top 112-pound wrestlers in the state with a 24-2 record.

CC has undoubtedly the wrestler with the best reputation, heavyweight John Spolsky. The defending Observerland champion and runnerup in Class A last year is undefeated in 33 matches.

The Shamrocks went 1-4 in their Super Dual held Saturday, but Spolsky had a shining moment when he whipped the No. 2 heavyweight in the state, Flint Northern's Eugene Callaway, by a score of 9-3. CC beat Northern, the defending state champion, in that meet, but lost to Traverse City, Howell, Hazel Park and Whitmer, Ohio.

"He's pinning people that will probably place in the state," Chiola said. "I thought that's the kid (Callaway) who would give him the best match. If he can't beat Spolsky no one can."

The Shamrocks also have one of the top 135-pounders in the field, Dave Gardner, who is 29-2. A finals match between him and Stevenson's Dan Christenson, who is 28-3, would be interesting.

CC coach Mike Rodriguez said he has inserted four freshmen in the lineup between 160 and 215, Casey Rogowski, John Abshire, Brocc Naysmith and Ryan Zajdel, because the upperclassmen weren't getting the job done. Each ninth grader has at least one win.

"From 160 up to 215 we're really hurting, they're young," Rodriguez said.

Chiola looks forward to a high team finish. It would make the job of putting the wrestling mats up (after a late home basketball game, to boot) and down a little easier.

"It's hard to practice on Friday and Monday (before and after the Observerland meet), you have to break down everything," he said.

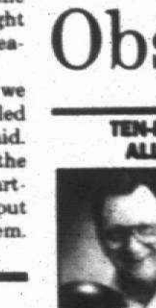
Observerland well-represented at GDBA

TEN-PIN ALLEY



AL HARRISON

There can be no argument as to the top bowlers in the metro Detroit area. Of the top 32 bowlers in head-to-head match play finals at the GDBA Masters at Troy Lanes, nine are from O&E communities. Twelve of the 39 who cashed in also reside locally.

The finalist positions belonged to Paul Grauzer (3rd) of Westland, Paul Hutchinson (4th) of Garden City, Joe Fitzsimmons (5th) of Waterford, Larry Franz (10th) of Redford, Doug Spicer (16th) of West Bloomfield, Rick Eiermann (18th) of Garden City, Ed Malinowski (27th), Ryan Wilson (28th) of Livonia and Mark Bunting (30th) of Rochester Hills.

All have a shot at the championship which takes place in the near future. The others who cashed, but did not qualify, were Ralph LeBlanc of Plymouth, John Staricha of Livonia and Ken Kossick of Canton. Dearborn's Vernon Peterson took the No. 1 qualifying spot with a record 2,034 for eight games, including a perfect 300 game along the way.

■ Some people say records are made to be broken. That's not always true, as one of the all-time GDBA records has just been tied after standing alone for 25 years. Team high game set by the great "Stroh's" team in 1971 has been equaled in the Lou Ansara's Big Boy All-Star Traveling League with a 1,326 scratch game at Bel Mar Lanes.

The five bowlers who broke the record are from five different O&E cities: Julius Maisano (Redford), who shot 278; Bryan Macek (Canton) with a 268; Steven Klein (Garden City) with 255; Steve Kiefer (Westland) at 267; and anchor Gerald Brown (Farmington), who not only contributed a 258, but knew that he needed to strike on the last ball to gain the record-tying performance.

They combined for a total of 44 strikes during the game and a most memorable and exciting day on the lanes.

■ I get phone calls, I get mail and I get faxed. Sometimes I am there when news happens, and that, you can believe, is the most exciting way to be able to report on a story. Sure, there are a lot of 300s these days, but it's something else to be there, to see the tension build up, see the other bowlers come to a stop to watch the last frame.

It took 71-year-old Jack Dahlstrom in the Wednesday Senior Classic League at Mayflower Lanes to provide the recent excitement. I saw him strike in the fifth — looked like a 4-9 split coming — but the four pin toppled and took out the nine. Same thing again in the ninth, the 4-9 stayed around momentarily, but the four pin again wobbled, fell and took out the nine.

Dahlstrom, a resident of Redford, was unflappable in the 10th with three solid hits and three more strikes. Surprisingly, it was the first perfect game for him, and like fine wine, he seems to get better with age.

Observer & Eccentric NEWSPAPERS

Phone line offers used-car prices

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Jim Ross of Livonia and his brother-in-law had an idea over Labor Day weekend.

That weekend spawned a company, New Insight Inc., and a 900 number that provides access to car-pricing data from the Kelley Blue Book Corp. of Irvine, Calif.

New Insight, a company specializing in development and distribution of information services, entered into an agreement with U.S. Trans Comm Inc. of Frisco, Colo., to market the service.

The call to 1-900-BLUEBOOK takes an average of four or five minutes and costs $1.95 a minute.

About 99 percent of people understand the words blue book, said Ross, who also works at Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn.

The service started in January, offering information that can be obtained for free at the library or by buying a book of used car prices. But Ross doesn't see that as a deterrent, as people will dial information on the telephone rather than look in the telephone book. Ross, who is New Insight's vice president of marketing, started the company with his brother Phil Ross and brother-in-law James Casey, who serves as president of the company.

A certain percentage of people will never use the service, but Ross is counting on the percentage who will.

"If you're looking at the paper on Sunday afternoon, we're the only game in town," Ross said, pointing out that libraries and stores may be closed.

He hopes his service will limit the number of people paying too much for a car or asking too little.

The service works by asking the caller to spell out the year and make of the car, truck or van on a touchtone telephone pad and then takes the caller through a series of voice mail prompts to help in determining the value of a used car.

The value is based on many things, including mileage, region of the country, options such as air conditioning, cruise control, sunroof, anti-lock braking and custom wheels. The wholesale and retail value can be obtained on the phone.

Older car prices aren't as readily available, and this service offers information on cars dating back to 1976, Ross said.

"The customer really is the one who is benefiting from this line," Ross said. Many customers don't trust sellers of used cars, but "they can trust us as an independent source," Ross said.

Ross sees his business as one with potential for growth. "The need for reliable information is growing as car quality and longevity lead to a higher population of older vehicles in the market."

Don't let year pass you by financially

TOM HOGAN

■ Most people wait too long to pull together their resources for the purchase of their next asset. As a consequence, they usually need to borrow more than is financially sound to make that next acquisition.

We are already one month into 1996. Isn't it amazing how fast the month passed us by? At the end of the year we will look back and be surprised at how fast the year went by. Hopefully, when we look back we won't be disappointed because we didn't accomplish much financially.

Maybe you are trying to save money for your child's education or it's possible you need to accumulate more for a down payment on the purchase of a new car, home, or a cottage up north.

You could be concerned about whether you can afford that expensive special vacation you were thinking about taking or you could be uneasy about a possible early retirement from your company. All of these worthy financial concerns require sufficient time for the accumulation of adequate sums to make the dream a reality.

Most people wait too long to pull together their resources for the purchase of their next asset. As a consequence, they usually need to borrow more than is financially sound to make that next acquisition.

Planning for your future financially and acquiring new cars, appliances, homes, etc., require that you plan ahead so that you are ready financially when the time arrives. It's just like goal planning, you need to set your financial goals for the next year, five years and 10 years.

Then you need to determine what it is going to take each and every day for you to reach those stated objectives. Break it down into little tasks that are easy to accomplish each day. By doing what it takes daily, you are moving a step closer to your goal each day.

As you begin developing your financial goals success plan for 1996, you need to make sure that you write it down. When you put it on paper, you become more committed to that financial goal.

Your final step is to begin visualizing your goals as already being accomplished. Imagine yourself driving down the highway in that sporty bucket seat coupe with the smell of new leather or seeing the sights of Hawaii as waves wash up on the beach with Diamond Head in the distance. You need to be able to visualize your financial goals to stay focused and committed. Then, at the end of 1996 when you look back, you'll be able to see that you did accomplish a lot. You planned it that way.

Questions and comments are welcomed. If you would like to have a particular financial subject addressed, contact: Elizabeth A. Allen or Thomas E. Hogan at the Observer Newspapers Editorial Department, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, Mich. 48150.

Thomas Hogan is a former president of the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the International Association for Financial Planning. He owns HFA Planning Corp. in Livonia.

Classical musician conducts web site

EMORY DANIELS

On their next stop on the Internet, music lovers will want to visit the World Wide Web site hosted by Joseph Rescigno, who conducted Opera Columbus' "Salome" last weekend (Jan. 25-27) at the Palace Theater in Columbus, Ohio.

Visit Rescigno's web site by pointing to http://www.concertatore.com/concertatore/.

Announced Nov. 1, Concertatore is believed to be first substantial, interactive web site maintained by a full-time, performing classical musician. Among its attractions is a Discussion Board where Rescigno responds to questions posted by onliners.

"We invite amateur and professional musicians, students, and journalists to pose technical questions or questions about performance practice," said Rescigno.

Musician and webmaster Rescigno has experimented with illustrating a response with a sound file. "I illustrate a few bars at the piano and visitors can download the sound if they like."

The site also includes a selection from "Verismo," a CD on which international diva Diana Soviero sings arias from well-known and little-known operas of the turn-of-the-century Italian school of opera composition known as verismo. She is accompanied by L'Orchestre de L'Opera de Montreal under Rescigno's baton.

The excerpt from Verismo takes advantage of cutting-edge MPEG audio compression technology. (MPEG is the Motion Pictures Experts Group standard devised in 1994.)

Visitors to Concertatore will find links to other sites where music in classical forms may be downloaded. "Many sites contain text about classical music," Rescigno says. "But sound is still pretty rare and hard to find." Web surfers are invited to leave leads and help build a useful directory of such sites.

Surfers not interested in classical music, or those who won't visit Columbus under any circumstances, may enjoy either of these two sites:

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

To get honest service you have to pay cost

JOE GAGNON

The other day a customer who had service on his refrigerator called to complain about the high cost of having my company come out to his home.

My son checked out his refrigerator which was located in his ice cold garage and found nothing wrong with the refrigerator. Not meaning to sound like a smart alec, I informed the consumer that he should have purchased my book at a book store, it only cost $15 and explained why you shouldn't run a refrigerator in a cold garage. It is a lot cheaper than the $46 we charge to tell you what's wrong with your product.

I agreed with this customer that the cost of appliance service is expensive, and there were others who charge a lot more than my company. He said that since I was making a fortune doing talk radio shows and writing newspaper columns, I should charge less. I told him that I had tried that for 15 years and that it had almost cost me my business. I also made him aware that when I make a fortune doing side jobs in radio and newspaper writing, he wouldn't see me working behind the parts counter in my store. The customer informed me that he would never use my company again and I felt bad in losing his future business and in his dissatisfaction. I wished he could understand why service cost so much.

You pay an average of $15 to $20 to a qualified service technician with years of experience. This hourly rate should equal out to the average of an hour spent covering a service call. You purchase a new service van every few years at a cost of $20,000 and you maintain it perfectly or you're in trouble. You pump into this service van $100 or so of gas every week and you spend thousands on insurance, not only on the vehicle but also on the technician. You invest in a truck stock of parts to the tune of $2000 so that consumers can have their product repaired on the spot.

You pay Social Security and withholding taxes and you spend roughly $1000 a month to advertise the availability of this service technician. You pay other employees to answer the telephone and write up service calls etc. I could go on and on but that's enough. Now you're asking, where is he going with this story which all began with a customer's phone call of dissatisfaction.

I agreed right from the beginning that $46 is a lot of money to spend to have someone tell you what is wrong with a major home appliance. Especially if there is nothing wrong with it, or the problem is corrected by the flick of a switch. As I have explained, it cost a lot to employ a service technician who you could compare to a doctor. The doctor works on two models and the technician works on hundreds of models which continue to change every year. Each year these new models incorporate new technology which requires new tools and test equipment etc. etc. And the story goes on and on and you're still wondering, what's his point.

Number one point is that you are now aware of why service cost so much, number two point is that I would like you to be aware of the company that has no service call charge or is so far below the $46 figure, it doesn't sound natural. When you have service in your home rendered by a company which you selected because of their cheap rate, call me. It is one of the very strong reasons why State Rep. Lyn Bankes is working on a new service bill in Lansing

As many hundreds of consumers have done in the past I would like you to bring me the completed service invoice of one of these service calls and I will show you several invoices where we performed the same work. You may be shocked to discover the difference in the cost of service work performed. This column was instigated by a consumer's phone call, but it is also a story which the good honest service companies have been trying to tell their customers for years. Good service is demanded by the American consumer, it is costly and it is not all that abundant in the appliance repair business. — Be aware and shop wisely.

LET'S REMODEL

Refinishing hardwood is often hard work

Q: We recently purchased a home and when the carpeting was removed from the hallway it revealed a beautiful hardwood floor. As a novice do-it-yourselfer, what is the best way to bring the beauty back and how do I address the nail and staple holes. In addition, as I walk down this hall there are many creaks. The planks are close together. How can I eliminate the noise and do I need to have this done professionally?

A: There are several ways to bring back the beauty of a hardwood floor after it has been hidden under carpeting for many years. But first, ask yourself a few questions. How much do you like handiwork around the house? Are you capable of taking on a project of this maqnitude? How much money can you save? How much mess will there be? I would recommend that you hire a professional for this type of work but if you feel you are ready to take on the project then here is what I would recommend.

Most often people begin the refurbishing of an existing floor by sanding away the old finish and the top surface of the grain. To sand an oak floor it is recommended to rent a circular floor buffer with a fabric sanding mesh. The buffer follows the existing contours of the floor more closely then does a belt sander and removes substantially less wood. A wood floor may require repairs beyond a good thorough sanding. The main problems are deep stains, bad gouges, broken wood, cupped or warped boards, nail holes from carpeting and squeaking. You may have to replace the planks that are badly stained or broken. To repair nail hole from carpet tack strips insert wood putty in the holes left from the nails. It is important to choose a color of wood putty that will closely match your hardwood finish color. Once you have finished the repair of the hardwood flooring it is time to put on a protective finish. There are many types of protective finishes available in your local paint/hardware stores. Once you select your type of finish it is best to spread it with a lambs wool pad or varnish brush.

Spread on a tough urethane finish. The number of finish coats you us depends on the manufacturer's recommendation for floor finishing. In a room with liqht traffic, a urethane finish can last a long time without refinishing. As far as floor squeaks are concerned you need to determine if it is the hardwood flooring or the subfloor. If it is the subfloor you can spray some silicone between the floor joists and subfloor. The local hardware store should also carry a product for squeaks.

African Violets easy to grow

MARTY FIGLEY

African Violets of today are a far cry from the large, often gangly plants that our grandmas grew. Now, because we can control heat, light and humidity more readily than in the past, these favorites are once again blooming happily in our homes.

New cultivars are being introduced and the miniatures seem to fit a nitch that wasn't there before. The blooms of purple, blue, pink, white, bi-colored and mottled shades as well as different leaf hues assure that they can complement any decor and add beauty for a long time.

Soils, too, have improved. Several companies have specially formulated growing medium for African Violets in which the soil is blended with wetting agents and trace elements and fortified with time-released fertilizers. Vermiculite and/or perlite lighten the mixture, and peat moss is often used. These all assure good drainage that is essential to the plants.

These beauties are very easy to grow and propagate. I have found that an east window with a sheer curtain is ideal, although for several years they grew in a west window covered with mini blinds.

Watering

Experts recommend watering them from the bottom, but mine are in an antique oak planter, so I water them from the top, being careful not to get water on the leaves. I have divided some of them more than once and they still are going strong.

When the plants are blooming I give them liquid fertilizer according to package directions, and remove the blooms as they fade and the leaves as necessary. I try to maintain four to five whorls on each plant. A whorl is a group of three or more leaves or shoots that emerge from a single node.

Push your finger one inch into the soil and if it is dry, water. Don't overdo it; African Violets don't like to have soggy feet. They also do best when the temperature is maintained, year-round, between 70 and 77 degrees Fahrenheit.

Taking root

The easiest way to propagate your plants is to take leaf cuttings, stick them in a glass of water, set it in a bright window and wait. Seventy-two degrees is ideal. About four weeks later you will see the tiny roots emerge from the bottom of the stem. You can also plant the leaf in soil with about half the stem covered — the waiting period is about the same. Several leaves can be put in a container at the same time.

If you've used the water method, as I have (grandson Max will be thrilled to see the roots), transfer the rooted leaves to the soil. A new plant will appear in eight to 14 days and when it has reached a diameter of about four inches it can have its own pot. Keep the humidity high at this time and water regularly with liquid plant food to get the plant established. It will take about eight months from the first cutting to become an adult plant. African Violets can be started from seed, but the process is long and rather difficult.

African Violets originated in the hills of Tanzania in east Africa by Herr Von Saint Paulliare, from whom it got its botanical name, Saintpaulia. The leaves are evergreen and the plants can flower for many months of the year. They do take "time out" to rest and build up strength for the next flowering.

When shopping for these plants you will be happily surprised to find the array of colors, single and double blooms with either smooth or fringed petals. After you have chosen one (or more), make sure there are are no brown patches and that there are many buds.

Care

These plants are basically healthy but they do need regular care. If you notice scorched leaves, it could be the result of too much sun, or cold water on them. Make sure the water is room temperature, especially in the winter. If the leaves turn pale or change shape, it is probably too cool. They don't do well in temperatures less than 55 degrees Fahrenheit. If the surrounding air is too dry, mildew may appear.

They do like high humidity. Set them atop a container of water, with pebbles to raise the pot from setting in the water, to provide the needed humidity.

If you see sunken, brown spots on the leaves, especially underneath, a leaf minor is probably at work. If it is severe, destroy the plant.

INVITING IDEAS

Stay home at the movies

RUTH MOSSON JOHNSTON

We three Johnston's are big movie fans — if it's out on the big screen, we've seen it. With all the good books and true life stories being made into screen plays, it's interesting to see how marketing can further capitalize on the movies made — toys, clothing, and even cookbooks. And why not, it's fun.

Courtney Work (an illustrator) and Jane Hemminger (a food consultant) from Des Moines, Iowa were selected to become the food prop caterers for food scenes in "The Bridges of Madison County," and now they've written a cookbook, "The Recipes of Madison County," (published by Oxmoor House, Inc., 1995). Included in the book are all of the recipes they prepared for use in the movie, along with some menu ideas and tips for setting the stage, so to speak.

Try some recipes from their book, or develop a movie concept of your own. The theme of the movies can lead to lots of entertainment options: have guests pick their own secret movie and bring a dish that would give a clue to represent the film they've chosen. Or, have guests bring along their favorite video and show the movie during the course of the evening. Everyone can even dress up as their favorite star. Serve food that would be appropriate to the movies selected.

Do a "Breakfast at Tiffany's," (Audrey Hepburn and George Peppard), a "Picnic" (William Holden and Rosalind Russell), a "Joy Luck Club" mahjong party, a "Forest Gump" seafood/shrimp fest, a "Like Water for Chocolate" decadent dessert soiree or a "Sense and Sensibility" country English meal. This evening could be one, or a series of dinners, all the way to the time of the Oscars.

The film fest concept grew out of the urging of some dear friends of ours to go with them on vacation — not just any vacation, but a cattle drive! I quickly threw together a Western evening, served suitable chuck wagon cuisine and showed them the movie "City Slickers," which stars Billy Crystal. A real cattle drive, chaps and all, was definitely not my idea of vacation fun, but the evening was a blast.

"The Recipes of Madison County" offers comfort food and romantic goodies. Here are two recipes from the book.

APPLE BROWN BETTY

- ⅔ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups graham cracker crumbs
- ½ cup butter or margarine, melted
- 3 medium cooking apples, peeled and sliced (about 3 cups)
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice, divided
- ¼ cup water, divided
- ½ cup raisins, divided (optional)
- Whipping cream or vanilla ice cream

Combine brown sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, salt, lemon rind, and vanilla; stir until blended, and set aside.

Combine graham cracker crumbs and melted butter. Firmly press ⅔ cup crumb mixture on bottom of greased 8-inch square pan. Top crumb mixture with half of sliced apples, and sprinkle with half of sugar mixture. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 2 tablespoons of water over top of sugar mixture.

Top with an additional ⅔ cup crumb mixture and, if desired, ¼ cup raisins. Top with remaining apples and remaining sugar mixture. Sprikle with remaining 2 tablespoons each of lemon juice and water. Top with remaining ¼ cup raisins, if desired, and remaining crumb mixture.

Cover pan with aluminum foil and bake at 300 degrees F. for 35 to 40 minutes or until apples are nearly tender. Remove foil, increase heat to 400 degrees F. and bake another 10 minutes or until mixture is lightly browned. Serve warm with whipping cream. Serves 4-6.

WHITE LASAGNA

- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1½ tablespoons all purpose flour
- ¾ cup milk
- ¼ cup chicken broth
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ⅛ teaspoon white pepper
- ½ medium onion, sliced into thin strips
- 2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 (14½ ounce) can artichoke hearts, drained and chopped
- 8 lasagna noodles, cooked, drained, and cut into thirds
- ½ cup (2 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese, divided
- 1 cup finely grated Parmesan cheese, divided

Melt butter in a saucepan; stir in flour. Cook 1 minute, stirring constantly. Gradually add milk and broth; cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened. Stir in garlic and pepper. Saute onion and mushrooms in oil; stir in artichokes. Set aside.

Spread 1½ teaspoons white sauce into 4 greased (2-cup) casseroles. Place 2 pieces of noodles in each dish. Top each with 1 tablespoon white sauce, 2 tablespoons artichoke mixture, 1 tablespoon mozzarella, and 2 tablespoons Parmesan. Top each evenly using half of noodles, 2 tablespoons white sauce, remaining artichoke mixture, and remaining mozzarella. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon Parmesan on each. Top evenly with final layers of noodles, white sauce, and remaining ¼ cup Parmesan. Cover with foil; bake at 375 degrees F. for 15 minutes.

Remove foil and bake 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Freezes well. Serves 4.

TREASURE SEARCH

NANCY AND FRANK BOOS

Dear Nancy and Frank:
I bought this washstand this summer at a garage sale and my wife thought I was crazy.
Don McC., Livonia

Dear Don:
Crazy like a fox! Place some bets with your wife before she reads this article.

A washstand is a table or cabinet-like piece of furniture that provides areas for wash bowls and for storing washing utensils and accessories. There were also cousins to the washstand called shaving stands.

The shaving stand was obviously developed more particularly for men's grooming needs. For instance, unlike your washstand, shaving stands have shelves very close to the mirror, which makes shaving less messy in terms of the wet, lathery razor's travel distance between wash bowl and chin. These stands were developed in the late 17th century in Europe and the early 18th century in America.

True to American ingenuity, more versatility was developed in the stands

Cleaning up: This washstand has such versatile features as a swing or tilt mirror, a removable wash or shaving bowl, towel racks and candle holders.

ESTHER LITTMANN

Mary Fisher is only 5 feet 1 yet stands tall in the eyes of AIDS activists everywhere. Her third and most recent publication, "My Name Is Mary" (Scribner, 1996, $24), is an attempt to counter complacency or false assumptions about a disease that draws no distinctions between black and white, rich and poor, straight and gay. Fisher should know: She carries the AIDS virus.

Quoting her speech at the 1992 Republican National Convention in Houston, the author writes, "My call to the nation is a plea for awareness. If you believe you are safe, you are in danger."

Yet Mary Fisher's memoir is more than a book about how a heterosexual woman, educated at an exclusive prep school and sheltered by one of the wealthiest and most prominent families in Michigan, became HIV positive. "My Name Is Mary" is also the story of a personal struggle that originated in childhood, a struggle between lofty aspirations on the one hand and grim reality on the other.

"All my life I've wanted to be good," Fisher writes. Goodness, she believed, was about pleasing others: helping, organizing, taking charge, regardless of the emotional cost.

An unstable childhood didn't weaken her resolve. Parental divorce, adjustment to a new environment and family when her mother remarried, a supportive but preoccupied stepfather (business magnate and philanthropist Max Fisher), and a loving mother who used alcohol to combat loneliness forced Mary to ignore her own needs and become "Mommy" to three younger siblings. In school Mary was everybody's friend and elected class president for four consecutive terms.

Premature adulthood eventually took its toll when Mary dropped out of the

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

Have you ever shot a roll of film, begun to rewind it into the cassette and then — you guessed it — found the film had never advanced through the camera? Don't feel lonely; it has happened at some time in almost every photographer's career.

But did you know there's a way to assure that your film always advances through the camera? There are a number of helpful hints to keep you out of a jam and improve your photographs. Here are some:

■ To resolve the film advance problem, simply watch the film rewind crank as you advance the film. If the crank turns, everything is OK. If not, the film isn't going through the camera. It's that simple.

■ Use a skylight or haze filter on all your lenses. They won't only warm up colors and cut through haze, but will protect your valuable lenses.

■ Thoroughly read your camera owner's manual. Carry it in your camera bag for quick reference. It contains valuable information on your camera and useful information on photography.

■ To be safe, especially with electronic cameras, change batteries in your camera once a year, even though it still appears to be functioning properly. Pick a day you'll remember, such as Jan. 1 or your birthday.

■ Tape the label from your film box on the back of your camera (some cameras have slots for this purpose) as a reminder of what kind of film you are shooting. If you don't take many pictures, it's easy to forget what's in your camera.

■ Don't always use fast film (high ASA ratings). I recommend using the slowest speed film that conditions and lighting will permit. You'll get finer grain and more vivid colors, and save money on film, too.

■ When is it safe to hand hold your camera? Shoot at the shutter speed that comes closest to the focal length of your lens, not slower. For example, with your normal 50mm lens, shoot at 1/60 second or faster. With a 135mm lens, use 1/125 second or faster. When limited light demands a slower speed, use a tripod.

■ If your meter should fail, all isn't lost. Simply set the shutter speed to the number closest to the ASA of the film you are using. Example: With Kodacolor 100, the shutter speed should be 1/125 second. Then set the aperture at f/16 on a sunny day, f/11 on a bright overcast day, f/8 when it's overcast, and so on.

■ As always, try to add impact to your photographs. Move in close, compose carefully, watch your backgrounds and learn how to use depth-of-field creatively.

No problem: No problems here for Monte Nagler and his camera. This is Scott Falls and it's in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Elmore Leonard to speak at Author's Luncheon

Join the city of Southfield's Cultural Arts Division in welcoming area writer Elmore Leonard to the Author's Luncheon Series 11:30 a.m. Sunday, May 5, at the Southfield Radisson Hotel.

This special afternoon will feature a lively lecture from western/mystery writer Leonard, crowned "the best American writer of crime fiction alive" by Newsweek magazine. Come discover how Leonard comes up with his wonderfully messed up characters and intricate storylines that have been described as so real and compassionate that "the reader forgets that it is fiction."

Admission is $15 for the luncheon and lecture, $5 for the lecture only. The division is offering 10 percent off the admission price to the luncheon and lecture. Reservations must be made before Thursday, Feb. 29, to receive the discounted price. Call (810) 424-9039 for reservations or information.

The author has gained much fame in the past few months with the release of his 32nd novel, "Riding the Rap," as well as the release of the movie "Get Shorty," based on his book by the same name. The movie was a smash featuring John Travolta, Danny DeVito and Gene Hackman.

Leonard's followers include Quentin Tarantino of "Pulp Fiction" fame, who has bought the rights to four more of Leonard's novels — "Kill Shot," "Bandits," "Rum Punch" and "Freaky Deaky" — to produce into movies.

University of Michigan in her freshman year and floated in and then out of a six-month marriage. She tried her capable hand at everything, from organizing the first Channel 56 auction to becoming the first woman appointed as presidential advance man for the White House.

Yet no matter what she did — producing the Bob Hynes TV morning show on Detroit's Channel 7 or tap dancing for leisure — or where she lived — in Washington, D.C., or Paris, France — Mary Fisher longed for what no occupation or geography could provide: a sense of self, a personal identity.

The irony of Fisher's life is that just when her quest for normalcy and identity culminated in marriage, two children and a renewed dedication to her art work, she discovered that her greatest trial was yet to come: AIDS.

Fisher had already kindled her religious faith when treated for alcoholism at the Betty Ford Center. Next she learned that faith must be accompanied by purposeful action.

Anything but ordinary

Today, Mary Fisher's mission is to educate the public about AIDS. In her book and in speeches throughout the country, she portrays herself as "ordinary," just an average mom who contracted the dreaded disease through a loving marital relationship. The obvious conclusion must be that if "she" got the AIDS virus, then anyone can.

Yet three-quarters into her memoir, we regard Mary Fisher as anything but "ordinary." Neither the privileged life as Max Fisher's daughter and friend of Gerald and Betty Ford nor her marriage to a former drug abuser can be categorized as unexceptional. Assuming the identity of "just plain mom" doesn't accurately reflect her varied background or the lives of truly ordinary people who have never shared such experiences.

Readers are likely to find the author's failure to discuss the subject of prevention equally disconcerting. Since no cure for AIDS is currently available, the only way to prevent this fatal disease is through precautionary measures in the public arena and in one's private life. Compassion for the ill, certainly! Stepped-up research for a cure, of course! But what about the safety for the unafflicted, common sense advice for the preservation of health?

"My Name Is Mary" is written from the heart by a giving and forgiving individual. It will touch every reader with its frankness and courage. Its strength, however, lies not only in its emotional appeal but in its ability to provoke thought as well.

that evolved in America. You'll note that the mirror near the top is a swing or tilt mirror for convenient adjustments. The white area is a removable wash or shaving bowl. The metal side bars, probably brass, are towel racks. The lower shelf is used for storage of the bowl and possibly a water pitcher. Also, it's very desirable to have a drawer for utensil storage. Yours has a very nice feature in that it has candle holders on either side.

If not a reproduction (there are a lot of repros and we can only tell by personal inspection), yours is Victorian, probably late 19th century. Like most Victorian furniture, it was mass produced. We feel this could have been a Sears mail-order catalogue item.

To shave to the chase, taking all features of your stand into consideration, we feel that it could very well be priced at $600 to $1,200 in a retail antique shop. Let us know what your wife says.

P.S. As an interesting side note, we've had designers, photographers and movie production people call us to inquire if we knew where they could rent a shaving stand. May we give them your name and number?

INTERIOR MOTIVES

Arrange to show your best

NAOMI STONE LEVY

Quoted from Webster's Unafraid Dictionary: "Interior decorating is a matter of spending money you haven't got on things you don't want to impress people you don't like."

After reading this column you will keep the money you shouldn't spend, and please the one who counts most — you! It will discuss a rearrangement of your present possessions to display them to their best advantage. Do be adventurous.

I deplore all furniture placed against the walls. Freestanding groups are so much more convival. Try them. Use scaled paper cutouts on a scaled floor plan for beginners. Move the furniture with ease!

Robbing rooms

Assuming that you own a sofa and several chairs, a couple of endtables, a coffee table, assorted lamps and perhaps a floor lamp, let us do what a professional designer would do. Rob the rest of your home of usable pieces. The robbery could begin in the dining area.

Is there a sideboard that would be used to better advantage in the living room? With a wonderful group of pictures above it, you have availed yourself of a significant focal point in the room. If the room has a fireplace, it might be a still more important place to concentrate the interest; that now becomes the center of activity.

Therefore, place the sofa at right angles to the hearth. Opposite that, site two chairs with a table in between. They can be a pair, or two of varying size. A winged model is appropriate to the fireplace.

Space permitting, the stolen sideboard could function well on the opposite side (see illustration). A pair of dining room armchairs might be ensconced, one at each end. They are light in weight and can be pullups when required. Into this squared-off layout of your possessions your coffee table will find its new home.

Television always rears its ugly head. All groups bow to this dominating force. Does yours reside in its own cabinet or is it merely on a stand? Dictatorial,

See LEVY, 15D

TIMELY GARDEN TIPS

■ Check mulch around garden beds and shrubs to make sure they're still protecting the roots. Apply additional mulch if necessary.

■ When you water house plants, rotate them 90 degrees so they will grow evenly.

■ Order seeds and get in supplies. You can start pansies, snaps and hardy perennials now.

■ Prune apple and other fruit trees.

■ Wash pots in a mixture of one tablespoon bleach to one gallon of water to get ahead of the season.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then her mailbox number, 1859. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Adopt-a-pet

Madelin: Madelin is a 5-year-old female-spayed domestic gray cat. She has her front paws declawed and is litter-trained. Madelin is afraid of dogs and other cats and would be best for homes where she can be the only pet. She is very affectionate and especially loves being rubbed around her ears. Madelin (No. 63140) and other pets are available at the Michigan Humane Society Rochester Hills shelter, 3600 Auburn Road. Call (810) 852-7420 between noon and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday-Friday and 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Saturday-Sunday.

isn't it? Suggestions for placing it are illustrated. Try setting your TV near one end of the sideboard, not in dead center. That will spoil your potential picture arrangement, a mesmerizing adjunct to the artful completion.

Using color

Use of color is vital to a delightful finished product. This may require reupholstering a chair or two for success. I am trying to save you dollars, but ruining the completed job would make you very unhappy. Oftimes the purchase of one new chair is more economical than reupholstering an old one. Take my word for it, but if in doubt, compare costs. You can also reuse that single chair in another room. I term it playing "musical chairs."

Placing of color requires real skill. Don't have all the vibrancy in one locale. As you diversify the spectrum it is prudent to "spot" the darkest tones. Scatter other colors.

As an example, if you are using a dark red, almost wine color as the darkest shade, why not enhance it with graduated shades of rouge-red and pink? You may accomplish this in a group of sofa pillows, with one or two of the fabrics replicated on a small chair or bench; this couid be the one newly bought piece.

The same idea is feasible in blue or green or any other preferred color; just be cautious if you are doing a melange of colors.

The layout of your former furniture is approaching its new conception. It is hoped your tables and lamps are maneuverable and happily fall into this "mix." This is going to test your capabilities.

Accessorizing

Robbery is addictive. It will be advantageous to further your cause by stealing accessories. Since accessories are my favored design tool I may have a few words of wisdom. Walk through your entire home, including attic and basement, with vision. Gather together every bit with a new thought in mind. The same will apply to your photographs, drawings and paintings.

Now set everything out on the floor. Just as you have arranged the cutouts of furniture on your scaled paper, once again push and pull, and rearrange your platters, bowls and covered casseroles from dinnerware, vases, figurines, cut crystal, colorful books and small bits of silver, pewter and brass. Some of these may have formerly resided in kitchen cabinets, the library or the bedroom.

Large vs. small, tall vs. short, round vs. square — they should all prove compatable. Each time you achieve a significant group, find a logical location for that assemblage. Now proceed to another group.

I trust that this new layout has saved you money, and you have pleased the one who needed pleasing. You have a truly new look — now enjoy it.

Today's bride seeks sleek, simple, sleeveless gowns

Talk to bridal consultants around the country about this year's wedding dress styles and you'll hear a similar refrain: "The lady is back."

"The Jackie O look is totally in — that whole sleek, streamlined, fitted top; sleeveless; elegant gloves — the return to the ladylike looks of yesterday," said Cindy Hale, spokeswoman for Priscilla of Boston, bridalwear manufacturer and retailer.

Mary Anderson, bridal consultant at Dayton Hudson's agreed.

Crowning touches: Bridal headpieces like this one from Toni are available from Hudson's Northland Salon $200-$500.

"The trend this year is a return to the '60s. Gowns of choice are simple, almost sleeveless, very tailored, maybe some lace, not a lot of beading, with long gloves and simple classic bridal veils like bead bands with a pillbox look."

Look for classic, simple luxury fabrics, said Jacobson's bridal buyer Colleen Gibbs. Lots of strapless. Lots of silk.

"Less is more," said Joan Ellis, president of Impressions based in Atlanta. "The style has changed drastically over the past few years due to the influence of Vera Wang. Her things are just beautiful fabric, in very simple architectural lines."

Wang, who designed bridal gowns for Mariah Carey, Holly Hunter and Chynna Phillips, is a former Vogue fashion editor and Ralph Lauren design director who began her own business in 1990.

"I brought a sense of modernity," Wang once told Working Woman magazine, when she began designing "slinky, form-fitting gowns made of the sexy "sheer illusion" material that quickly became her trademark.

"Bridal fabrics are almost all silk today," said Anderson. "All different types of silk: silk satin, organdy, organza, shantung. They're beautiful fabrics."

Long trains evidently are a thing of the past, too.

"Many of my dresses have no trains, while brides may be doing that with their veiling," said Ellis. "This way brides can be more comfortable and dance more easily."

Anderson said two veil styles are popular: a classic headband with the veil off the back in a pouffy look that's fingertip or waist length with two layers, beaded or plain or floral. It looks good on every hairstyle.

"The other important look is the cluster at the back of the head if you're wearing your hair up," she said. "For example, three silk flowers at the back of the head with a lace or silk veil coming down the back. These go well with the nice, simple dresses."

Most brides still choose white, according to these consultants, though ivory might be a close second.

"But pearl or creamy white is the most flattering color on most skin tones," said Anderson. "Some of these white gowns may have a touch of color in embroidery or even bows in the back."

Ivory and cream are even popular colors for bridesmaid's dresses this year.

"Last year and this year we've seen monochromatic looks in bridal parties," Anderson pointed out. "Brides maids may wear golden ivory cream tones, sand and cashmere. A lot are even going back to pastels, which we haven't seen for years. And most dresses will come in pinks, fuchsias and roses — almost every woman can wear these colors."

Wang's bridesmaid dresses tend to be done in earth-tone colors, and Ellis says they aren't the hackneyed bridesmaid dresses that a woman would never be caught wearing again.

Modern Weddings

So you're going to tie the knot. Get hitched. Stay together 'til death do you part. Well, congratulations! As the philosopher Heine wrote, "To love and be loved, this on earth is the highest bliss."

But, you don't need to be told that this is a very special, important time in your life! Your heartbeat soars when the phone rings and your loved one is expected to call . . . You walk around with a silly smile on your lips for no apparent reason . . . You find yourself darting into card shops to purchase those Love You-sentiments just because it's Thursday . . .

Ah, yes! Engagement is enchanting. And nerve-wracking!

Will the hall be available on the day you've planned to marry? Will the band play music enjoyable to all wedding guests? Will the photographer miss the shots you envision? Will the wedding gown arrive on time? Will the guest list have to be cut when the caterer presents the cost for the dinner and beverages? Who will pay for the flowers? Where's the most romantic honeymoon site?

To shed some light on these issues, The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers present "Modern Weddings," a supplement slated to introduce the latest wedding ideas, plus local resources to help with wedding plans. The newspaper staff also wishes to extend to engaged couples, its very best for love and happiness — today, tomorrow and always! Susan DeMaggio, Editor.

The tuxedo is a Pierre Cardin with satin lapels curved at the notch, accessorized by Lord West's wing-collar shirt, metallic plaid vest and matching crossover tie at local formal wear dealers.

Grooms like fashion with new twists

Grooms are following fashion suit with brides this year. Simple and elegant tuxedos that are traditional and conservative are in. Black and white are de rigueur.

These days many wedding parties are going for classic, single-breasted tuxedos with a black vest or black tie. A lot of people are saying they want a look that's classy but elegant, that complements the bride's dress," said Andrea Fazio of Gingiss Formalwear. "Colors are out right now."

The basic black tuxedo is still the proper attire for a formal evening wedding, with black trousers, coordinated vest or cummerbund and bow tie, according to Modern Bride magazine. A dinner jacket could work for that formal evening wedding as well as for a semiformal evening wedding. The cutaway or morning coat is the traditional look for a formal day time wedding.

For an informal daytime or evening wedding, grooms can get away with a black, dark gray or navy business suit, switching to a white or natural jacket in summer.

The new look for that basic tuxedo is a three-button notched style matched with a six-button vest. The three-button is a new look that replaces the single-breasted or double-breasted two-button.

Perry Ellis' formal wear this year "continues to be inspired by the designer's vision of simplicity and purity, always comfortable, functional and well made," according to the company. Ellis' single-breasted two-button tuxedo features sat-in notched lapels as does the double breasted six-button model. Satin shawl collars offer slightly jazzier possibilities.

With the new emphasis on elegant styling, the Oscar de la Renta collection highlights smart, formal dressing with small, understated details," said a company spokesman. Subtle features from de la Renta include brush-stroke detailing on lapels and vests and double lapel shawl collars.

The most popular total look today is the single-breasted tuxedo with a vest. You wouldn't wear a vest with a double-breasted style, but might choose a cummerbund.

Formal experts agree that vests are preferred among accessories. Grooms are adding fashion to their look through the vest they choose, and, when they take their jacket off at the reception, they still have a nice formal vest look.

"Regardless of whether the tuxedo is classic in style or a reflection of advanced fashion, it can be a frame or a foil for an interesting shirt, an intriguing vest, an attractive cummerbund, a tie with a special flair or any number of other accouterments such as button covers or collar bands and well-designed studs and cuff links," said Harvey Weinstein, chairman of Lord West, manufacturer of tuxedos and formal accessories. "Even so, the look is still black.

Lord West's current collection features vests in multicolor silk prints, Oriental print velvets, abstract patterns with a Southwestern heritage and even striated silks.

For the more conservative, the company shows richly patterned black on black brocades and vests with satin lapels to coordinate with tuxedos.

Wing collar shirts are still the most popular, but there are variations in the way wings are cut.

"Whether the wings go behind the tie or float freely above is a matter of letting nature take its course, often dictated by shape and size of tie or wings," said Weinstein. Shirts may also feature narrow or wide pleats, pin tucks, embroidered edges or very fine black shapes.

And just so every man will look elegant at his wedding, Robert Talbott, one of the top designers of ties and cummerbunds, has revised the basic dimensions of the cummerbund to accommodate "America's chubbier paunches."

"The extra 1½ inches of height in our new cummerbund proved the perfect antidote for the contemporary body type of today's man," said Talbott's John Haller. "From every perspective of fit and fashion, this new cummerbund is a far superior silhouette."

Hassle-free honeymoons

After all the wedding planning, most newlyweds want to drop everything and completely relax on the honeymoon. Here are some travel tips to help things run smoothly on your private getaway:

■ Intial planning: Choose a reputable travel agent with whom you have worked before, or get a trusted recommendation. Most travel agents don't charge a fee, so take advantage of their services and spare yourself the research. Meet the agent in person with a firm budget range and some desirable destinations in hand.

If traveling outside the country, find out immediately if a passport, special visa or medical clearance are required; these things take time.

■ Evaluate all-inclusive packages or cruises. Generally, all-inclusive resorts or cruise packages offer good value for honeymooners, but be sure to look closely to see exactly what is included in the price, and then compare it to an "a la carte" vacation.

One of the best things about all-inclusives is that they allow couples to know exactly what they will spend ahead of time; another benefit for active honeymooners is the chance to try snorkeling, horse-back riding or other new experiences without worrying about extra cost.

■ Packing: Write up a master packing list well before the wedding, so that you don't have to spend any extra time debating about what to bring before you depart.

Check to see if your hotel provides hair dryers, irons and robes so that you don't have to lug your own. Stock up on basic sundries such as Band Aids, aspirin, sun screen and toothpaste — these items often are expensive at a resort shop.

Put a contact name and address on the inside and outside of each piece of luggage, and carry essentials with you, including your itinerary with emergency contacts, your travel agent's phone number, and hotel and car rental confirmation numbers.

■ Be realistic about security. Keep a close eye on your luggage enroute; use traveler's checks or credit cards instead of flashing cash, ask your rental car agency about emergency assistance or request a car phone (you're often only charged if you use it); store valuables and airline tickets in your hotel or room safe.

The National Safety Council has brochures on safe vacationing; call (800) 621-7615.

Islands often epitomize the ultimate "dream vacation," so here's a sampling of four romantic island destinations from four corners of the globe — the Pacific, the Midwest, Europe and Asia.

Lanai, Hawaii

The 50th state retains seemingly endless popularity as a honeymoon destination.

Oahu offers the brilliant bustle of Honolulu and Waikiki; Maui has world-class resorts and nightlife contrasted with pristine scenery; the Big Island provides dramatic volcanic activity and spectacular beaches; Kauai is lush, green and tranquil.

Lanai, chosen out of all the world by Microsoft mogul Bill Gates as his private wedding site, is luxurious and intimate. Home to two top-rated romantic resorts — the upcountry Lodge at Koele and the beach-front Manele Bay Hotel — the island of Lanai gives couples championship golf, terrific snorkeling, horseback riding, croquet, exceptional regional cuisine — and lots of blissful peace and quiet after a whirlwind of wedding planning.

For information, call (800) 321-4666.

Mackinac Island

Mackinac Island offers a wonderful get-away without leaving the mainland U.S. Poised between Michigan's upper and lower peninsulas in the Straits of Mackinac, this island — less than nine miles around — is as secluded and magical as visitors discovered in the 19th century.

Take a small public ferry or private plane to the island, once you arrive, no cars are allowed. Couples can explore natural and historic sites, botanical gardens and golf courses, and a lively, cobblestone Main Street by traveling on foot, horseback, tandem bike or in a horse-drawn buggy.

The historic Grand Hotel — the setting of many a romantic movie, including "Somewhere in Time," with Christopher Reeve and Jane Seymour — is Mackinac's show place, a white pine palace with a sweeping front porch (the world's largest) overlooking a lush lawn, pool and the cool, calm waters of the straits. Or cuddle up at one of the island's lovely Victorian bed-and-breakfasts.

Call the Mackinac Chamber of Commerce for details at (800) 454-5227.

Isle of Giudecca, Venice, Italy

If Italy means romance, then Venice should be the capital.

It is a city renown for dreamlike gondola rides on tranquil waterways, leisurely cappuccinos in St. Mark's Square and stolen kisses beside the Grand Canal. But a hidden secret of this northern Italian coastal city is the exclusive Isle of Giudecca, just across the Giudecca Canal from the heart of Venice.

And here lies the Hotel Cipriani, a first-class European hotel which — in the true Italian fashion — caters to lovers. With only 67 rooms and 28 suites, attention to detail can be seen in the fine fabrics, canopy beds, marble baths and French doors leading to private patios; the hotel's Olympic-size, outdoor saltwater pool, is surrounded by gardens.

When couples are ready to emerge from their seclusion to explore the narrow streets and extraordinary art galleries of Venice, the hotel provides a complimentary, five-minute boat ride to St. Mark's Square around the clock.

Pangkor Laut, Malaysia

A largely unknown and untraveled tropical destination, Pangkor Laut was once a private island seen only by a sultan.

Today, this 300-acre getaway off the west coast of Malaysia has been turned into a sublime resort with an exotic ambience perfect for couples.

Nestled within an ancient rain forest, Pangkor Laut has all the amenities of the modern world in a setting reminiscent of a traditional Malay village.

Although it is quite a journey to get there — including a helicopter ride from Malaysia's capital of Kuala Lumpur or a ferry from Pangkor — this enchanting destination is worth the trip. Honeymooners will find picturesque Malay cottages hovering above the turquoise Strait of Malacca, inside are beautiful rooms and enormous baths with windows that showcase panoramic views.

Private beaches, charter boats for exploring nearby islands, guided treks through the jungle and romantic dinners for two under glowing lanterns will fill the days and nights with unmatched memories.

For information, call (800) 628-8929.

Sound the right notes with your wedding music

The disc jockey has the power that few of us ever have — to make people giddily happy. Most receptions last deep into the night so it takes a special talent to bring families together through music.

At the end of your wedding day, the music will have made or wrecked your evening. It sets the wedding's tone. Whether you use a wedding coordinator or undertake the planning yourself, there are some basic decisions you'll need to make about the music for your reception.

Band or DJ? If a band, how many pieces and what kind? Rock, swing, jazz, or country-western? Depending on where you live, the number of pieces used, the band's reputation, the time of year and day of the week, a good band can run upward of $1,500. A good DJ, on the other hand, may cost on average $125 an hour.

"If the bride and groom have at least 100 guests and enough money to hire a really good band, then that can create the most dynamic reception imaginable," said Adrian Cavlan, a longtime wedding DJ and a partner in Weddings Online, the Internet's Wedding Information Resource (weddings-online.com). "However, for many people, hiring a really good DJ is more affordable and provides the best overall variety of music."

Aside from the cost, however, some people prefer hearing the music as it was originally performed and also find that a good DJ can provide an enormous variety of music — party oldies, classic rock, dance hits, country, polkas, waltzes and swing. Also, DJs have a larger repertoire available for requests, are able to perform all night without breaks, can adjust the layout and size of their systems for smaller receptions, plus setup will frequently be done in a half hour or less.

A band is always going to give you the mystique and excitement of a live show, and will have a larger presence on the stage, which may be important if your reception has several hundred guests. A good general wedding band will also have a wide repertoire and the added bonus of being able to pull together something appropriate off the cuff to offset a gaffe — perhaps a poorly thrown bouquet or an overly enthusiastic cake-cutting ceremony.

Whether you choose a DJ or band, going through the selection process is something that takes care and an investment of time. Ask friends, co-workers and family for recommendations; if a wedding consultant is involved, she will probably have several vendors to refer to you. The sales manager at the site you've chosen should have suggestions. Or call the local bridal association for referrals.

Once you have some names, it's time to audition them. Unless the DJ or band has approval from their client for you to attend, don't plan on visiting someone else's wedding to hear the music. For one thing, it's rude, and for another, that style of wedding may be completely different than what you have planned.

Instead, listen to them perform at other kinds of gigs, or find out if they will be playing at an upcoming bridal show. While many consultants suggest you listen to tapes or a promotional video, others believe these should be taken with a grain of salt.

After you've narrowed your list, ask for references and call some of them. If a company is providing the band or DJ, interview the person who actually will be doing the wedding. Clarify what your expectations are. Can they perform the songs you like? If you saw something you really liked at another wedding, ask if they can do it. What kinds of selections do they have for the first dance and the father-daughter dance? Other important questions to ask a band and/or DJ include:

■ How long do they play?

■ How many people are in the band?

■ Can you see their song list and select what you want?

■ Will they learn a special song if they don't already know it?

■ How long have they been playing together?

■ How many breaks do they take and for how long?

■ What do they charge?

■ How much would they charge if you wanted them for an extra hour?

■ Are there any extra fees, such as light shows, backup equipment, mileage, tax or hotel rooms?

■ What is their deposit and is it applied to the balance?

■ Is there a cancellation penalty in addition to the deposit?

You must also decide whether or not you expect the person to act as the equivalent of a master of ceremonies as well. If you do, the DJ or band leader must be both flexible and entertaining.

Once you have settled on a band or DJ, put all these details in writing, and don't be surprised if the contract includes the provision of a meal. In fact if it's not in there, decide what your arrangement will be.

Once you have the band or DJ nailed down, how do you decide on the music? If you are planning a theme party you are probably already clear on the kind of music you want. In general, however, there are two phases, background music during cocktails and the meal, and dance music.

Instrumental music is ideal for the background because the absence of vocals allows for better conversation among the guests. For dance, a wide range of hit music from all different styles and eras, thus making all of the guests happy, not just some.

Catering clues to make the party menu perfect

The wedding reception will be one of the most memorable parties you ever throw for friends and family. The food that is served contributes to the overall success — whether it's a fun and festive theme or a formal black-tie affair. It is also likely to be the largest expense of all your wedding preparations. When deciding on a menu, remember that there are quite a few options to consider, and they don't all require a lifetime's worth of earnings.

Serving selections

The time of day, number of invited guests, and budget, definitely influence the type of menu that is appropriate. However, most receptions fall into one of the following categories:

- Sit-down dinner or lunch. Meals are served to guests at their designated tables.
- Buffet stations. Fairly simple or lavishly (and expensively) elaborate, food is arranged on tables at locations around the room.
- Cocktail reception. Drinks and hors d'oeuvres in lieu of a full meal.
- Afternoon tea. Tea sandwiches and sweets, coffee, tea and champagne served buffet-style.
- Brunch. Usually a buffet of fresh fruit and vegetables, pastries and baked goods, omelet bar and other light foods along with juices, coffee and champagne.

It follows that a morning ceremony calls for brunch or a luncheon, and evening weddings fall around dinner time. Try not to schedule a cocktail reception or tea at times when guests would normally be eating a full meal. Formal weddings usually incorporate a sit-down dinner, while less-formal affairs can rely on hors d'oeuvres buffets or an afternoon tea.

If you've chosen a theme or have included ethnic traditions, serve foods that fit right in. Holiday weddings present their own options, with recognizably traditional foods and drinks.

Call on a little creativity along the way, and consider the lifestyles of your friends and family. Would they appreciate a vegetarian buffet station or are they strictly meat-and-potatoes folk? Out-of-town visitors might enjoy the opportunity to try regional specialties like New England seafood or Southern Cajun dishes.

Cost Control

Few young couples enjoy the luxury of an unlimited budget. Fortunately there are ways to keep costs in the range that is reasonable for you.

Opt for a simple hors d'oeuvres buffet and pastry bar rather than a sit-down dinner. Brunches, teas and pre or post-dinner cocktail receptions may also be more economical. If a sit-down meal is important to you, do away with the open bar and serve wine with an elegant meal. Select foods that are in season and stay away from expensive luxury items.

Some fun themes just seem to call for less-expensive food — a clambake, Texas-style barbecue, luau, or Mexican fiesta, for example. You may even want to ask talented relatives or friends to help with the food preparations.

Remember also that if you decide to limit your guest list you may be able to splurge a little more on luxuries. If you

Wise newlyweds plan a financial audit

Engagements are a time for love, music, flowers — and full financial disclosure.

"You would never merge two companies together without an audit right?" asked Ann Diamond, a New York financial adviser and author of the book, "Fear of Finance" from Harper Collins. So with a new marriage, "here we are trying to merge two people together."

But in many cases, love-struck couples approach the altar without full knowledge of each other's assets, debts, and all-important style of cash management. A candid discussion of money and financial goals should be on every prospective newlyweds' to-do list.

The early months of a marriage offer an excellent time to make long-range plans, and also to capture the savings that usually result from combining two incomes and two households. If you wait a year or two to plan, you get used to living on that income.

Diamond suggests that newlyweds ask themselves, "Will we spend the money eating out because neither of us wants to cook? Or do we want to save $50 per week for a house down payment?"

Unfortunately, the wedding often starts a couple off on the wrong foot financially. They and their families can go deeply into debt for a big ceremony.

Irene Freeman, president of Consumer Credit Counselors, said that men as well as women often feel driven by the notion that "this is my day in the sun. But, if you think of marriage as the beginning," she advised, "you're much better off."

Although traditional weddings are still prevalent, the old-fashioned husband-in-charge approach to money management is out. Because of divorce and widowhood, women are more aware they need to be financially informed.

"A lot of young women watched their mothers go through some pretty harrowing experiences," Diamond said. "They want a partnership. They realize it's important not to delegate the finances to someone else."

Because many people get married at a later age, a newlywed couple might not start out with the proverbial "clean slate." One partner might have high debts, while another might already own a house or other assets.

She also has seen several couples who want to keep assets acquired before marriage separate from the community property. This sometimes requires a prenuptial agreement.

For most couples, though, the experts offer the following advice:

- Learn how comfortable you are with your prospective partner's income. If the woman makes more than the man, will that create discomfort for one or both? If one partner plans to relocate for educational or job purposes, is the other prepared?
- Discuss your individual styles of saving and buying. The goal here isn't to agree on everything, but to keep the lines of communication open. Diamond estimates that 90 percent of all couples fight over money because people's priorities are different. Their money styles are different.
- Talk frequently. Even if one person pays the bills and handles most of the finances, both should talk about the state of the family finances at least once a month.

- When talking, communicate in a non-accusatory way. Speak in terms of "I" not "you". Say, "I feel uncomfortable when we have no money in our checking account," rather than, "You spend too much money."
- Adjust withholding tax. If you both work, you are likely to pay higher taxes because of the marriage "penalty." In some cases, this can be thousands of dollars.
- Coordinate employee benefits. Some couples can save money by eliminating duplicate coverage. It might be more economical for one spouse with a cafeteria benefits plan to drop health insurance in favor of disability insurance and become a dependent on the other spouse's medical plan.

But be sure to look at the cost of adding a dependent. Seek help from company benefits departments in weighing the options.
- Consider setting up three bank accounts: yours, mine and ours. It has become increasingly popular for newly hitched husbands and wives to set up a joint household account, while keeping individual discretionary accounts.

Financial advisers say separate personal spending accounts can sharply reduce bickering over money.
- Discuss goals and dreams. While it can be good to have separate checking accounts, it's important to pool resources. For larger goals, like buying a house or saving for retirement, you need to have the same vision.
- Consider tracking your finances on a computer software program. Diamond is helping promote the country's top-selling program, Quicken, as the ultimate in practical wedding gifts (retailing at $40). Such money-tracking programs, help couples plan by giving them real numbers rather than guesses on where their money goes.

Catering tips

Make sure to book a caterer or hotel package at least a year in advance or the best ones will already be contracted. Hire only state-licensed caterers with liability insurance, or you could be sued in the event of some mishap like food poisoning or an alcohol-related accident. It also ensures that they've been inspected by the board of health.

When discussing the costs, ask for a detailed rundown of what is included: price per person, security deposit, sales tax and any gratuities or bar fees. Don't be caught off guard without budgeting for the extras!

Most importantly, get it all in writing — including a price guarantee. Once a deal is struck, go over the contract carefully and be well aware of their cancellation policy.

If an event is canceled, there may be no obligation to refund a deposit.

Gown shopping tips

Maggie Yelensky, veteran bridal buyer and manager of Alvin's Bride on Pierce St. in Birmingham offers these tips for gown shopping:

- Peruse the pages of Modern Bride and Elegant Bride magazines to see pictures of how you envision yourself on your wedding day.
- By a process of elimination, determine which styles are too fussy, too plain. Settle on the few that seem most suitable and take them with you when shopping.
- Make an appointment with a full service bridal retailer at least three months prior to your wedding day. Look for a shop you can trust, which offers pleasant surroundings and an array of designs including a diverse collection of recognized labels.
- Review the pictures clipped with your bridal consultant so she is totally in tune with your thinking. She's not there just to sell you a dress, but to make certain you are offered a choice suitable for you. She will see that you are properly measured and arrange for timely delivery.
- Ask a close friend or relative whose opinion you value to share the shopping experience.

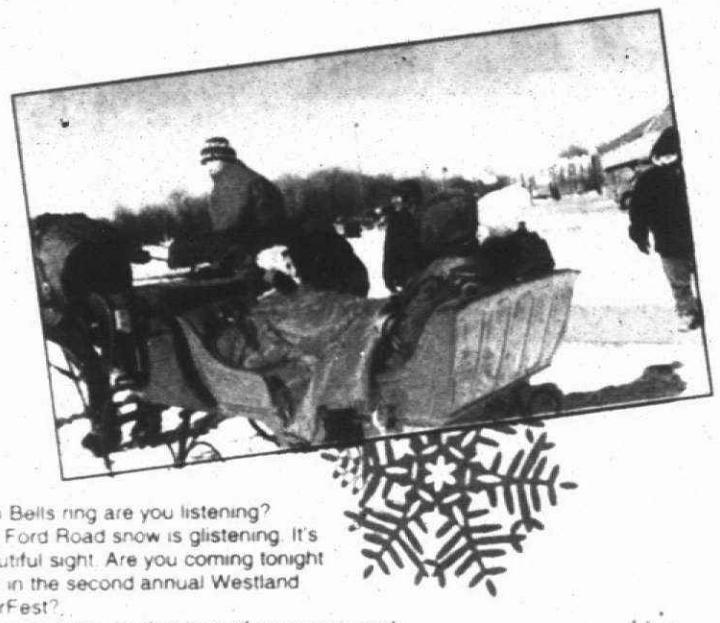
Bring You
Westland's 2nd Annual

WinterFest '96



Sleigh Bells ring are you listening? Down Ford Road snow is glistening. It's a beautiful sight. Are you coming tonight to join in the second annual Westland WinterFest?.

That's right folks, it's that time of year again and Westland is celebrating it's WinterFest Friday through Sunday.

The fun begins Friday, Feb. 2 in the Hellenic Cultural Center with a sock hop that will take you back to the '50s. (For more details, please turn to the back cover)

On Saturday, the fun continues with sleigh rides, ice sculptures, children's activities, laser shows, figure skating exhibitions, family open skating, bowling tournament, snowball tossing contest, youth hockey scrimmages, fun run and walk, snowman building contest and other events the whole family can enjoy.

WinterFest is sponsored by area business and other groups, agencies and health care organizations that support the Westland community.

Look for money saving coupons, a complete schedule of events and a map to make your WinterFest visit easy and convenient.

Sock hop, a new event added to the WinterFest schedule, will include contests for the best dressed, dancers and Hula Hoopers.

In keeping with tradition, the WinterFest committee is planning plenty of culinary treats for festival-goers, such as a pancake breakfast, spaghetti dinner, and chili dinner.

Through the weekend, there will be numerous community groups serving hot dogs, hot coffee and cider, tacos, barbecues and specialty foods.

Most of the events are free and will be held in the Westland Civic Center area, on the south side of Ford between Wayne Road and Newburgh.

One of a kind: Agents who try to sell expensive or unusual listings like this custom-designed house near Upper Straits Lake face many challenges.

Unique houses pose a challenge

By Doug Funke
Staff Writer

The challenge in this specific case is to find a buyer for a custom-designed, 6,300-square-foot house, great for entertaining with an indoor pool, sauna, media room and office, near Upper Straits Lake but not on the waterfront and priced at $879,000.

Michael S. Katz and his wife, Tracy Stanton Katz, who work together as a sales team with Century 21 Country Hills in Bloomfield Hills, have stepped up to the task.

But it could be any agent working with any unique or high-end house in any location that comparatively fewer prospects find both appealing and affordable.

"The more expensive the property, the more intangibles are involved," said Michael Katz. "There's a certain point that whoever buys a house isn't going to haggle over $50,000 or $100,000. You have to be able to convey intangibles into value."

"When people walk in here," Tracy Katz added, "They might not have the imagination to see what can be done with the house. You have to show them the possibilities."

But how do agents find serious, qualified buyers to walk in and look at the unique, off-beat or high-end product in the first place?

Target mailings to business executives, professionals, entertainers and athletes. Personal networking on social circuits. Getting the word out to other agents.

"I've talked to Chrysler, Ford, hospitals, doctors, people who come into the area," Tracy said. "Different charities and country clubs. We definitely have our lists."

"A certain amount of it is networking with agents," Michael said. "Full-color brochures have to be made up and sent to agents, top producers, in this area."

Open houses are scheduled for other agents rather than prospective buyers.

"To throw this house into the multi list doesn't do it justice," Michael said. "This has to be presented."

And you just never know when lightning will strike.

"You're asking somebody who looked at the house one time, fell in love with it and bought it," said Peter McAteer, who owns the house in Orchard Lake the Katzes are trying to sell.

McAteer proved to be a buyer with vision.

"My wife, Monika, wanted an indoor pool," he said. "I wanted a lake. I think this was the third house we saw that day. There was just a marsh back here. The lady (agent) apologized for the yard. But that's what I was looking for."

McAteer went to work and had a 90-by-40 foot pond dredged and stocked with bluegill, bass and carp. He had his water, Monika hers.

"We're realistic," McAteer said. "We realize it might take a year, possibly more to sell. One of the things about a home like this is you have to have the luxury of time."

Connections and chutzpah are keys to moving unusual or high end properties, said Donna Stone, a Realtor with Cranbrook in Franklin.

"How many people are walking around with that kind of money?" Stone said of a $5.7 million listing she has in Bloomfield Hills. "If they do, they have to like every detail or they will build their own."

A personal referral can make all the difference in the world.

"It was knowing someone, a key person, who got me to someone else," Stone recalled of a major high-end sale while declining to be more specific.

"You have to be real private. You have to be very careful not to be intrusive or pushy. There's a right time. Someone who has lost someone, you don't approach."

But Stone remembered an effort to reach actor Tom Arnold and his bride at the Ritz Carlton in Dearborn on their wedding day with information about the Bloomfield Hills listing.

Stone enclosed a fancy brochure into a card, marked it confidential and drove the package down to the hotel.

"I said, "Who's going to spend $5 million on a house?" Stone recalled. "Although he (Arnold) is from out of town, she's from Michigan and, who knows? Maybe some day I'll hear from him.

"The concierge said she'd be sure he got it," Stone said. "At the time it happened, I was real charged up. It was interesting, fun. I'd do it again."

Stone said she always seems to be passing out her business card to people in retail sales, especially when special ordering or asking others to keep their eyes open for unusual requests.

Referrals and home sales have resulted from those encounters.

"I've been doing this for 18 years. I have some wonderful contacts," Stone said.

Douglas C. Whitehouse, an owner of Hannett, Wilson & Whitehouse in Bloomfield Hills, uses specialty magazines like Estates Internationale and Leading Estates of the World.

"These publications are distributed throughout the United States and the world," Whitehouse said. "They're found in places like the Ritz Carlton, Embassy Row in Washington, D.C. and the finest hotels in Europe.

"I've personally had calls from Estates Internationale that major sports figures are coming into the Detroit area and would like to talk to you," he said.

Agents in this stratosphere sometimes tries to create something out of nothing.

"I literally drive an area clients are interested in and contact owners of properties not for sale and see if they're interested in selling," Whitehouse said.

"We find the high end is a very unique market," he said. "All buyers are very successful, busy people. Therefore, they always acquire their properties through a Realtor.

"When you're in an upscale area, your marketing is more to agents than actual buyers.

Condominium documents must be brought up to date

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. Our condominium has been in existence for over 20 years, and we have not had our documents revised.

Our attorney has advised us that we need to amend the documents, but the majority of the board seems to think that since they have seemed to work well over the years, why change them? Why would you think it was necessary for us to amend our documents at this time?

A. Merely because the board members perceive that the documents have served them well, which they may have, that does not necessarily mean that there are not many provisions of the documents that need upgrading to deal with both changes in the law.

For example, a prohibition on the size or weight of dogs has been deemed unenforceable by court decision in Michigan. Condominium documents containing these provisions should be corrected.

Moreover, 20 years ago, many condominium documents followed a "form" that did not take into consideration various issues that have later arisen in the enforcement of the condominium bylaws, the collection of assessments and the liability of the association for casualty losses.

Finally, certain provisions must be included in the condominium documents in order to meet the secondary mortgage lending requirements.

If your documents do not contain these provisions, your members may be deprived of the opportunity of being able to sell their homes as expeditiously as possible because of the lack of being able to obtain a mortgage that can be sold to a secondary lending institution, thus underpinning the salability of the units and ultimately the value of them in the condominium project.

You need to update and streamline your documents when circumstances change; not having done any changes in 20 years could seriously undermine the ability of your association to properly function and to otherwise insulate your directors and committee members from potential liability.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation. You are invited to submit topics which you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Bingham Farms, Michigan 48025. This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

Making yourself at home in the home office

It's been said that the home is a person's castle, and these days, that may not be far from the truth. For, in one's castle, one eats, sleeps, juggles the family finances and, now, works at home.

Works at home? Isn't that what the office is for? Exactly. Except now office — the traditional office, that is — extends to an area in the home specifically designated as the home office.

People who used to work long in the night at the corporate office are finding that taking work at home with them allows them to spend more time with their families. Busy executives who used to travel into their corporate offices on weekends to catch up on paperwork find that it's a whole lot easier to simply roll out of bed and walk a few feet to the home office to accomplish the task.

What's more, entrepreneurs who work at home as a matter of choice are thrilled by the concept of the home office. Perhaps most surprisingly, the home office concept is an affordable one.

The home office is comprised products you're probably familiar with — not components plucked from some science-fictional universe, in other words. Typically, you'd make use of least a computer, a printer, a fax machine, and a telephone or two. By themselves, these are all pretty productive products; together, they're an unbeatable, powerful combination the at-home worker.

It's estimated that 40 million to 41 million people are working at home either part- or full-time, by telecommuting or on an after-hours basis, according to BIS Strategic Decisions. (The number is expected to increase between 8 and 6 percent this year, according to BIS.)

The home office is clearly a trend to be reckoned with.

At the center of most home office setups is the computer. These days, computers are more affordable and offer more features than ever before. Today's computers, especially those centered around the lightning-fast Pentium microprocessor chips, are especially welcome home office tools.

"The significance of a computer is that it makes possible the rapid creation and editing of one's thoughts," says Jonathan Zar, Senior Busines Development Manager, Apple Computer. "If you have a small office or home office," says Zar, "you're doing what once was done in a larger office that you would travel to, and you are competition, in many cases, with bigger companies. So, time is of the essence as it always is in business, in particular, you really need to be able to correspond and communicate and compose your thoughts as effectively and quickly as you can." Zar says he thinks "a computer has become an indispensable tool for doing that, through its ability to let you edit quickly the words that you write — it makes for a much faster means of communication than handwriting. You can certainly do everything we do with a computer in a day with a quill pen, but the amount of time it would take you to do it would be considerably greater."

Zar's view is that computers "allow for a much greater ease and fluidity expression, and a more effective way of creating, composing and communicating one's thoughts to others."

If you're putting together a home office and you're not sure what to look for in a computer — how much memory do you get? what speed CD-ROM drive? what kind of processor? — take a deep breath, and then think about what you going to be using the computer for.

Greg Meluch, manager, Worldwide Product Marketing, Consumer Desk Systems, IBM, says that, first off, people should look at name-brand value. After that, take a look at what Meluch calls "the basic industry building blocks, such as the processor, random access memory," and things like the hard disc drive, where you store the information you process on the computer, and the CD-ROM drive, which is a must for today's high-demand sophisticated programs.

Ease of use is very important, said Meluch. People "do not want to have to spend hours reading through manuals to be able to get up and running, he says; in other words, being able to have the computer "up and running out of the box in just a few minutes is very, very important purchase decision," he adds. Also important is dependability, warranty, toll-free customer service assistance, and access on-line help and information.

The final point to look at, says Meluch, is expandability. People "are going to make this investment," he notes, "and the system has to not only cover their existing needs, but also be able to grow beyond those needs into their future needs and be able to cover the expansion of the home office."

These days, many computers referred to as multimedia-capable. What this means to the home office person is the ability to listen to audio portion of videos on any of many reference CD-ROMs available today, such as encyclopedias and dictionaries. It also means, for the savy entrepreneur, being able to put together whiz-bang multimedia presentations, combining audio, video a brilliant color 'illustrations, with an eye toward getting future business. So speakers are a must.

When you're looking at speakers for your computer, Gary Savadove, senior vice president, marketing and product development, Labtec, says listening to them is the most important thing you can do.

Savadove suggests that you "listen to the speakers with the kind of software you use most often. Different speakers are optimized for different sounds. Also, it's helpful to test speakers priced just above your intended budget. People are frequently "very surprised with how much better sound they can get very little extra," he adds.

After you've decided on the right computer, there are still a few decisions to make for your home office. For example, says Bill Kopp, Vice President of Communication and Home Office Electronics, Matsushita Consumer Electronics Company. "Communication is critical to a home office. Without communication, the home office can't exist."

Kopp is talking about voice communication — the kind you conduct with your telephone — and data communication, which can be accomplish with a computer and a modem. But, he says, "image communication is necessary in many, many businesses and, in fact, is a very fast way of communicating a visual message. From that standpoint, fax is very critical."

When looking to purchase a fax machine, Kopp says to think about what you can afford.

"Think about the types of information that you get and receive today (and) the kinds that you might want get and receive six months from now" he says. Once you start faxing, he notes, "It becomes an ordinary way of life like the mail arriving at the house." Think about whether you want a machine that uses thermal or plain paper. (If you're going to make presentations or keep hard copies of faxes, plain paper models are the way to go, says Kopp.)

Ultimately, look at fax machines that can grow with your business, at least "for the next year," says Kopp. In fact, he adds, it's a good idea to "stay slightly ahead of your business. Anticipate your needs six months from now. "Don't underestimate the amount of faxes you're going to send and receive;" he suggests.

The other way of communicating in a home office is talking to clients. For that purpose, you use the good old telephone. Only thing is, today's telephones aren't like the telephones you remember from the good old days. These days, telephones are feature-laden and able to perform a variety of functions, allowing home office workers to be more productive than ever before. brought people together (and) enabled us to come together in cities to work," says Cynthia Zey, marketing director, AT&T Consumer Products. Computing technology enables people to go the other way, she adds, "and to be just as productive from the home as we are when we're together in an office situation. I really think about phones, and to some extent computers, as being the very heart of what's behind the work at home, home office trend."

When purchasing a phone for your home office, think about what your needs are going to be, says Zey. "In most cases, the recommendation is that you find a dedicated, isolated location for your phone, she notes. "That probably means that you need a second telephone line, so we're usually talking about needing either a new telephone or a two-line telephone." The benefits of having a two-line phone: versatility, flexibility and productivity (and, by the way, one of the lines could double as a fax line for your computer).

Another important component any home office is the answering machine. If you're working out of your home, you might be on another call or out of your home office seeing a client — you certainly don't want to miss any important business calls. Consider the number of messages you're going to receive when looking to purchase an answering machine, says Steven Knuth, president, Casio PhoneMate. "There's a lot of product that's on the market today that's basically shuttle-based, which is where the incoming messages stack up behind outgoing message in sequence," he says — in other words, longer wait times for people trying to leave you messages.

"That's not something that somebody who's running a business out of the home is really going to want present to the caller," says Knuth. "So, they're going to want to step up above and beyond the promotional entry price level-type product and to products that have some additional features to them, such as either half-digital-type product that has the outgoing message recorded on a digital chip' and allows the recording incoming messages on tape.

All-digital products, where both incoming and outgoing messages are recorded digitally, are also available.

Finally, you'll want to keep plenty of accessories around to keep your home office products running smoothly and efficiently — for example, fax machine cleaning paper that looks like typical fax paper and cleans the unit's roll and laser lens. Surge protectors are a good ideas — they prevent the potential spikes that can suddenly shut down your home office equipment.

Other accessories for use in a home office include power interruption devices for computers, which allow computers to operate for a short period of time if they should suddenly be subjected to a power failure; cleaning devices for computer 'monitors, to eliminate dust and dirt that typically collect there; and CD-ROM drive cleaners. You also might think about a pair of wireless speakers for multimedia-enabled computers.

Whichever products you decide to purchase in the end, you will find that your home office will make you more productive than you ever thought possible. But remember — all work and no play makes you a dull person. Be sure to stock up on your favorite games that you can play to relax during breaks.

Taking it with you on travels

Imagine that you're driving to your mom's house, and it's going to be a looong trip. You gather up the kids, some snacks, a couple of maps (just in case), and head out in the early morning light on the stop-and-go highway.

Oops! Forgot the home stereo! So, you get off at the next exit, head home, unplug the amplifier, compact disc player and speakers, get everybody back in the car, get back on the stop-and-go highway, point your car in the direction of mom's house, when, suddenly, you realize: There's no place to plug in the stereo in the car!

Well, of course. That's why it's called a home stereo. If you lived in the car, it'd be called a car stereo. Thankfully, such things exist. You haven't had to even consider dragging the home stereo into the car to get great sound in a long time — or strap the home stereo to your back to get great sound while jogging or riding the bus.

In fact, these days, you can take all manner of consumer electronics products with you just about wherever you go. Watches, video games, stereo systems, computers, personal stereos — the list of consumer electronics products that are either made for portable use or are portable versions of products typically used at home is just about endless.

"Practically everything that once fit on a desk can now be worn or carried," says John J. McDonald, president of Casio. McDonald says that there are watches that function as barometers, altimeters and thermometers; hand-held business organizers that boast 256kb of memory; color televisions that can be held in the palm of the hand; and full-size musical keyboards that you can take along to any party or performance. "When the size came down, so did the price," says McDonald. "Portable consumer electronics products offer the best value for the money."

Consumers today "are always on the move," says Mark Viken, Vice President of Sony Electronics' General Audio Division. "Consumer electronics manufacturers are making our fast-paced lives more enjoyable by developing innovative products that are easily taken almost anywhere. Manufacturers are incorporating features that make their products more convenient convenient for consumers."

Viken says that, in our fast-moving world, "it seems that, no matter where we go, we want to take our portable electronics with us. From personal stereos, compact disc players and MiniDisc portables to boomboxes, radios and voice recorders, manufacturers bring to market a variety of products that are feature-packed and easy to use — products specifically designed for those of us who to be out and about."

One of the things you may like to do when you're "out and about" is talk to people — on the phone, that is. (Don't stop talking to people in the flesh, of course!). If you're an on-the-goer and you like to take the conversation with you, cellular telephones are for you.

Eagle Landings offers lake location, good price

You don't get fancy or luxury if you buy a house at Eagle Landings on the Lake in Waterford. You don't get massive living space or kitchen appliances other builders often include as standard amenities.

What you do get is a brand new functional house at prices starting at $129,900 and access to a private all-sports lake.

You get city water and sewers, sidewalks, trees/wetlands and the Waterford schools.

"It's an affordable home for someone to live in," said Mark Adler, vice president of the family-owned development/building company that's pulling the project together.

Eagle Landings, 174 lots, is on Hospital Road between Cooley Lake and Elizabeth Lake roads.

Seven floor plans are available.

The least expensive, a two story of 1,410 square feet with three bedrooms and 1½ baths, carries a base price of $129,900. The most expensive, a story-and-a-half of nearly 2,000 square feet with three bedrooms and 2½ baths, goes for $165,900.

Those prices include an all-vinyl siding exterior, two-car garage and basement.

Fireplaces ($2,200-$2,400) and air conditioning ($2,600) are extra. No kitchen appliances are included in the base price.

"Amenities we offer with the lake are a park and topography," Adler said. "There's quality, Adler's reputation. We've been building homes over 25 years. Trades have been with us 25, 30 years."

"The development is set (several hundred feet) off the road," said Wende Boerema, marketing director for Adler. "That creates a more community feeling. It's set apart, wooded.

"Price point is a big plus, too," Boerema said. "There's not many places where for $129,000 you get a nice house on a wooded lot and you get lake privileges.

"We're finding location is a big plus," Boerema added. "If you work in the northern or western suburbs, it's right in the middle."

About a dozen buyers reserved a house before work was begun on any of the three models.

The models to be erected include the Lakeview, the 1,410-square-foot two story that will include a country kitchen, living room and half bath on the main floor.

The Seabreeze, the largest and most expensive offering in the sub, will feature a master suite on the main floor, country kitchen, great room, first floor laundry and half bath.

The Harbour, a two story of 1,825 square feet with a base price of $157,900, will have a great room, kitchen, nook/sitting room, laundry and half bath on the first floor, three bedrooms and two full baths upstairs.

Computer simulation allows prospects to "walk through" any of Adler's plans and see exactly what they're getting.

Buyers select cabinetry, countertops, fixtures, floor covering, shingle and brick (upgrade) coloring at Adler's New Home Design Studio in Brighton.

Most lots at Eagle Landings carry a premium that ranges from $3,000 to $95,000 for a lakefront site.

"People want to stay here and they want to have brand new," Bob Manzagol, on-site sales manager said of prospective buyers. Couples with children, marrieds without kids and empty-nesters all will be attracted to the sub, he added.

The property tax rate at Eagle Landings currently is $28.13 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $158,000 house would pay about $2,220 the first year.

An annual association fee on the order of $200 per property also is projected.

Joanne and Brian Foley, along with son, Jason, have ordered a ranch.

"For a new home, the price, we found, was pretty good," Joanne said. "It doesn't look like you're confined. You have trees back there, you're set back from the road, it has a lake.

"We liked the entrance off the garage — how you go into a mud room and not directly into the kitchen," she added. "We also liked the foyer at the front. In our last house, you walked right into the living room."

A vaulted ceiling, ceramic tiles in the bath, extra insulation and wider lumber used for framing also were mentioned as big pluses by Joanne Foley.

James and Anne Collins, with kids Kieran and Linda, were the first to reserve a house in Eagle Landings. They will get a Seabreeze.

Adler's reputation and workmanship, the location and the value for price were the draws.

"The builder — they're very cooperative," James Collins said. "They have a design center in Brighton where you can go in and browse and pick out what you want, no pressure."

The sales center at Eagle Landings, (810) 229-5722, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

Mortgages reach 2-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-year, fixed rate mortgages averaged 7 percent this week, down from 7.02 percent last week and the lowest level in nearly two years, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Thursday.

The rate was the lowest since they averaged 6.97 percent during the week ended Feb. 3, 1994. Rates then rose to 9.25 percent on Dec. 15, 1994, before they started falling.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.37 percent, down from 5.40 percent last week.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for those refinancing mortgages, averaged 6.5 percent this week, down from 6.53 percent a week earlier.

Help design dream home

Let loose your imagination and creativity and design your own "Dream Home." Landmark Designs, a nationally syndicated home design column, in partnership with the Observer & Eccentric, invites you to participate in the "The Dream Home Survey."

Remember, the napkin you doodled on to show your spouse or friend what you would like to have in your "Dream Home?" Hope you saved it. This is your chance to have it count as part of the dream. You are the only one that knows the features you want in the home of your dreams.

There may be some practicality for you. If you are seriously considering building your own dream home, the results of the survey just might create your custom plan at a plan book cost. If the community's dream homes are close to yours, then the resale value of your house will be higher because of its popularity.

The project should be fun so make it a family affair, even if you are far away from having your dream house come true. Other readers may share in your desires. The more information you give us, the more detailed our dream home design will be. We encourage you to attach letters, sketches, pictures, and comments inspired by your imagination.

Landmark Designs will compile the survey results and design a dream home. These plans will be published by this paper when the survey and designs are complete, in approximately six weeks.

For a study kit of the Dream Home Survey (1996), send $8 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307-0E48, Eugene, or 97402 (Be sure to specify plan Dream Home Survey). For a collection of plan books featuring our most popular home plans, send $20 to Landmark, or call 1-800-562-1151.

Remodeling enhances value

The value of a new car can drop $2,000 to $5,000 the moment you drive it off the dealer's lot.

If you would rather invest in something that can actually gain in value, perhaps you should consider remodeling your kitchen. According to Remodeling magazine, a remodeled kitchen might actually be worth up to 180 percent of what you put into it, depending upon what remodeling you do and where you live.

Each year, Remodeling magazine surveys Realtors in sixty key markets, asking them to estimate both the cost of minor and major remodeling jobs, and the increased resale value of the house as a result of such remodeling. Results vary regionally, but the national average showed a 104 percent return on investment (ROI) for a minor remodeling job and 95 percent ROI for a major remodeling.

A minor remodeling project can be as simple as replacing counter tops, adding a coat of paint and one or two new, updated appliances, such as a new smoothtop range with a Ceran glass-ceramic cooktop. A smoothtop not only gives a kitchen a dramatic new look, it makes clean-up fast and easy, and can double as additional counter space. Recently, Ceran glass-ceramic cooktops have become available in multiple colors as well, providing yet another visual element in the kitchen.

Minor remodeling jobs in San Francisco bring the greatest ROI, according to Remodeling magazine, returning a whopping 182 percent of your investment. Other locations surveyed included Westchester, NY (129 percent); Atlanta, GA (130 percent); Dallas, TX (127 percent); St. Louis, MO (125 percent); Portland, OR (115 percent) and Seattle, WA (136 percent).

Major remodeling jobs can include new cabinets, new flooring, and frequently involve a reconfiguration of the kitchen to add more cabinet or counter space. One popular trend is to upgrade from a kitchen range to double ovens and to include a Ceran smoothtop.

Even if you're not planning to sell, a kitchen remodeling will still pay dividends . . . in the form of a better looking, easier to use and easier to clean kitchen.

For more information on smoothtop ranges and cooktops, write for a copy of "Your Pocket Guide to Ceran Glass-Ceramic Rangetops," c/o Schott Corp., Technical Glass Division, 3 Odell Plaza, Yonkers NY 10701.
