Development delayed

Canton planning commissioners want to see an improved design for the proposed Central Park 680-acre development west of Beck Road. The plan calls for a variety of housing types, parks and a township-operated golf course.

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

Canton planning commissioners say they want something better for what will be one of the township's largest residential and recreational developments that would offer a variety of housing types as well as a golf course and parks.

"It seems an awful lot compressed into one area with amenities," said Vic Gustafson, Planning Commission chairman.

The proposed Central Park planned development district would offer a variety of types of housing, a nine-hole golf course that would become part of the existing township-owned Pheasant Run Golf Course, as well as parks, pedestrian trails, the Lower Rouge River and Goodell Drain. Tunnels, under Beck Road, for example, would connect the existing golf course to the new one.

Commissioners Monday tabled approval of a preliminary plan for Central Park between Cherry Hill and Geddes roads, extending west from Beck Road to just west of Denton Road. A subcommittee of township officials and staff has worked

So just how do you paint murals that are eight feet tall and 18 feet long?

There's no point asking Michelangelo. The Sistine Chapel was plaster. Plymouth artist Barney Judge and fellow artist Aaron Dytyniak are working with today's building materials, and that calls for a different approach.

The creative partners are about ready to deliver two wall-size murals to the new Somerset Collection North to be displayed in the gourmet food court, the Peacock Cafe.

When you see their work at the new upscale mall in Troy, you might recognize their talent. Judge and Dytyniak's work can be seen at the Too-Chez restaurant in

Township election looking routine

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

The presidential election and competitions for Congress around Michigan promise to be hotly contested affairs, but Canton Township elections are shaping up to be rather dull.

All incumbent township board members expect to run for re-election, and just one potential challenger has so far come forward. All seven seats on the township board are open this year.

Mitch Howard, former owner of the Big Boy restaurant at Ford and Canton Center, has taken out a petition and may run for trustee. Although Howard believes "the community is being well-served at this point," and he has "a lot of respect for the people serving our community right now," he feels the urge to "add my two cents."

Howard said he is polling various folks around the township to see if there is enough support for him to run.

Ralph Shufeldt, who ran unsuccessfully for trustee in 1988 and for clerk last year, said he won't run this year.

"It has been one of the toughest decisions I had to make, but no, I'm not going to go for it," he said. "If you're not part of the clique, it will be almost impossible to gain elective office."

Low voter turnout also irks Shufeldt. "I'm sickened by the fact that people do not have enough interest to get out and vote," he said.

Asked who he would back on the current board, Shufeldt said, "The only one I would support, and it's

Plan calls for Hanford Road extension

Jimmy Durante believed you ought to "Make Someone Happy."

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will do just that for Canton property owners George and Anne Bradley, if they agree to a plan proposed by Canton Township developer Ron Cook.

Under the proposal, Hanford Road would be extended; the schools would gain Hanford Road frontage; and the Bradleys will be able to develop their land.

It looks as though the school district, which owns 18 acres in the area, will go for the plan. If it doesn't, the Bradleys say they plan to sue the township.

For decades, the Bradleys have owned a five-acre parcel off Canton Center Road between Warren and Ford roads, near the end of Hanford Road. Their frontage on Canton Center is zoned commercial; with residential land behind it. A small piece of the school district's parcel fronts Canton Center.

The Bradleys' problem began when Cook put together a site plan that would result in single-family homes being built in an area surrounding the Bradley property.

"The Bradleys filed a lawsuit against the township when it approved the development, because it left them hanging with undevelopable property," said Gene Daley, a former Canton planning commissioner.

Under an agreement hammered out by Cook and the township, the Bradleys' land could be developed if the schools agree to give up part of its northern frontage. That would

Students sing the praises of district's Journey program

By M.B. Dillon
Staff Writer

For the ninth-graders and their parents who bravely spoke about how the new Journey program has changed their lives, Monday night's packed Plymouth-Canton school board meeting was a little like the TV show "This Is Your Life."

Ellie Plass told the board that while she attended Central Middle School, "I had anger problems. When I got mad, I got violent. I didn't know how to control it. Mrs. (Principal Pat) Moore got so sick of me. I was suspended eight times a year or more.

"When you're a kid and you give up, you find so many ways around things. People, when they give up, they don't even care. I was dreading going to the high school this year. I thought I'd get trampled."

Ellie heard about Journey, the alternative ninth-grade program at Starkweather Center, and enrolled — with reservations.

"I thought it would be full of a bunch of dorks, but it wasn't anything like that. Everyone was cool. The teachers were cool. At the park, (Plymouth-Canton Educational Park) it's like you are in a stream. Here, you are actually a person. Everyone gets to know each other. It's a lot better."

Stephani Hootman said, "When we all started, we were 50 kids with big problems and big dreams." Lots has happened since then, she said.

"We are proud of our good grades. So many of us have learned to deal with our problems and solve them in a more mature and responsible way. I never felt I could talk to someone 'til I came here. I know I can't do it all, but when I can't, these teachers are here to catch me. This program does a lot of good."

Journey teachers Rick McCoy, Deb Trapp, Marie Schlosser and Heidi Mick described Journey for the board.

The 50 students, who signed "contracts" when they voluntarily enrolled in the Journey pilot raised their grade point by an average of 1.75 points this year, said McCoy. "Journey students have significantly fewer referrals for discipline." Attendance has greatly improved has well, he said. "If someone doesn't climb off the bus, someone is calling in five minutes, because we're concerned."

Mick said students take a shuttle at 7 a.m. from PCEP to Starkweather , where they study math, humanities, English, history, writing, and earth science in classes ranging in size from 16-25.

They take a bus back to PCEP for sixth hour. "It's really convenient for them to be there, so they can take a sixth-hour elective and participate in after-school activities," said Mick.

An hour a day is dedicated to the "Student Service Center," said Trapp. "Sixteen or 17 kids meet in a group for one hour every day. We deal with communication skills, conflict resolution, and talk about and resolve issues. We take a look at relationships and overall self-esteem building and confidence building. Students receive one credit. That really is the single component that makes us uniquely different from the ninth-grade program at the park." Students also volunteer for 20 hours of community service, mentoring at elementary schools.

Journey also offers parenting programs. Parents agree to provide 20 hours of school-related community service as well.

"Confucius said something that applies to this," said Jerry Morris, PCEP area coordinator and Journey administrator. "The beauty of a place is defined by the humanity that dwells there.' Journey has become a beautiful place."

Guy Carlson is a parent who agrees wholeheartedly. His son was doing "miserably" at PCEP. "He got caught in the shuffle. A week after he missed school, I would find out about it. One week later. He left Central Middle School with a 1.2 grade point average. He's an honor roll student this year. It's because of the teachers and the program here."

Tattan finalist for post

By Marie Chestney
Staff Writer

Plymouth-Canton schools executive director Thomas J. Tattan is one of three finalists for the job of Clarenceville school superintendent.

He and the other three candidates will be meeting with residents next week. The job is now held by David Kamish.

Starting Monday, April 1, each finalist will spend one day in Clarenceville, meeting administrators, staff and students.

Each day-long visit ends with a 7 p.m. open house in which residents can meet and talk to the educator, and a 7:30 p.m. second, one-hour interview before the school board. Both will take place at board offices in Clarenceville Middle School, 20210 Middlebelt.

E. Jake Hudson, a retired educator from Ohio, will be the first finalist to visit on Monday, April 1.

The second visit on Tuesday, April 2 will be by Tattan, executive-director for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

The third finalist, Alan K. McLean, superintendent of the Maple Valley School District, will visit Clarenceville on Wednesday, April 3.

"We had a lot of very fine candidates," said Vernice Dunklee, board president. "We had seven very strong candidates. It will be very difficult to make a choice. They all have a lot of experience. We're seeking a good mesh. We need to see them, and they need to come here and see us."

Also in April, the trustees plan to visit each educator in his own district.

The trustees have set May 1 as the target date for picking Clarenceville's new superintendent.

Fifty-seven educators initially applied for Kamish's job. The trustees winnowed the field to seven, then three.

Kamish retires from his post June 30, after spending five years in Clarenceville's top job.

Strong winds

BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Collapsed: Strong winds pushed to the ground this office building that was under construction on Canton Center Road, just south of Hanford Road, Monday afternoon. Canton firefighters who received a 9-1-1 call about the collapse said no was injured. It is believed that no one was on the site when the building -roof and all - collapsed.

Boundary changes on agenda

A public hearing is set for 7-9 p.m. Thursday, March 28, at Pioneer Middle School to discuss attendance boundary changes in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Pioneer is at 46081 Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth Township.

The changes recommended by the schools' Housing Committee will help accommodate the residential growth the district is experiencing.

More than 300 students will be switching schools next fall if the changes are approved.

with the developers to set goals for the project.

The delay gives developers — The Selective Group and Phoenix Land Development — time to address concerns and make some changes on their concept plan, based on the subcommittee's modifications, for the 680-acre development. The Township Board will also discuss the concept plan at a study session to be scheduled soon. Planning commissioners will consider the plan again on April 29.

Flexible design

Central Park would offer detached and attached condominiums, as well as single-family homes on a variety of lot sizes. Of the 680 acres, 250 are devoted to open space — more than required — including the golf course, regulated wetlands, uplands and a park by Denton Road that would be given to the township for soccer or softball fields.

"The open space separates and defines the individual neighborhoods that make up the Central Park community," said developer Steve Friedman.

Denton Road resident Edward Barlage expressed concern about a sports park close to his property, as well as possible drainage problems.

His neighbor Robert Budziak suggested they not close Proctor Road westward because of a lack of access to western Canton. "It makes it more difficult for emergency vehicles to get into this area."

A planned development district follows a different procedure than does a regular subdivision. After the preliminary approval process, the plan comes up for final approval, followed by site plan requests. A PDD is a negotiated agreement between the developers and township officials. The agreement spells out in detail just what the plan for the site is, including sizes of houses, setbacks, lot sizes, improvements for drainage and roads.

A PDD also allows flexibility in design of the development and is designed to encourage preservation of natural amenities, such as wetlands and woodlands. "The standards are flexible," said Jeff Goulet, Canton community planner.

Planning commissioners expressed concern that the proposed golf course and open space should not be the driving force for the design of the development. Supervisor Tom Yack expressed the same concern at a Downtown Development Authority meeting Tuesday morning.

"They got this big piece of ground they could do wonderful thing with but they don't understand what wonderful is," Yack said, adding that "this is probably going to be the last large parcel developed and we have got to do it right."

Suggested improvements

Commissioners offered a series of suggested improvements for the project, such as reviewing the number of housing units, which now stands at about 930, as well as continuing a boulevard throughout at least the northern portion of the development, and ensuring that individual subdivisions within the development are not divided between the Plymouth-Canton and Van Buren schools districts.

"I guess that bothers me, we're jamming so many residential units into an area," said Commissioner Ron Lieberman.

But Friedman said he expected to get plenty more housing units out of the project. The way Central Park is planned, the 930 units are more than 724 allowed in the same acreage for a traditional subdivision and less than the 1034 for a planned development district following gross density standards. "We promise we won't add any additional lots," Friedman said.

Commissioners also requested more information about how the developers plan to manage storm water from the golf course, which would involve Wayne County and the state Department of Environmental Quality.

"The course has to be designed so the water (run-off) is filtered before getting into the Rouge," Goulet said, adding that the township would operate the course.

Bob Leighton, landscape planner, said he is applying for a state grant for a storm water management program for the area. "This has a fairly large upper watershed," he added.

Developers also showed commissioners examples of housing styles. "This is redundancy throughout," Gustafson said. "This is more of the same. There is no newness. There is no creativity."

The Bradleys' suit was dismissed without prejudice, pending the school district's decision.

"We hope the road comes through. But que sera, sera. I think O.J. is guilty, but he is still a free man," said George Bradley, whose wife Anne was Canton treasurer in the 1970s.

John Birchler, Plymouth Canton schools executive director of finance, said that while a deal has not yet been negotiated, it's an attractive idea.

"We think the concept is beneficial to us. It would be good for us, whether we build a school there or sell. It would add value to the property."

The acreage, large enough for an elementary or middle school, is the southernmost parcel of land owned by the district. Purchased in 1968, the site extends west from the end of Hanford Road halfway between Sheldon and Canton Center roads. It includes 200 feet of frontage on Canton Center.

Girls explore world of careers in fields related to math, science

Why do many female students avoid math and science? How can we inspire girls who do like math and science to pursue their interests? What can parents and educators do to change this?

The sixth annual GEMS (Girls Excel in Math and Science) conference on March 23 at Plymouth Canton High School answered these questions and provided a chance for middle school girls and their parents to learn about career opportunities, and to participate in activities related to math and science.

Presenters included veterinarians, naturalists, athletic trainers, and certified public accountants. They acted as real-life role models, informing girls about opportunities in their respective fields. Break-out sessions involved hands-on math and science experiments and demonstrations.

Girls from all middle schools in the Plymouth-Canton school district took part, as did their parents.

Teamwork

Burdziak is running for re-election as a team with Trustee Robert Shefferly. Neither man plans to spend more than $1,000 on his campaign, so they will pool their resources to be more effective.

Shefferly got the fewest votes of any successful trustee candidate in 1992, so he may be vulnerable this year. "I think I'm going to have a real rough time," he said. "But I'll give it a whirl. I'm not going to give it to them."

Among Shefferly's goals are getting a post office in Canton ("A community isn't complete without one"), expediting road repair ("They keep filling the potholes, but it doesn't last too long"), ensuring the success of the Summit on the Park community center and Pheasant Run Golf Club and reestablishing the recently canceled Crickets preschool program.

Trustee Melissa McLaughlin said she enjoys being on the board because "it challenges your mind. You have to understand so many things.

"I feel like I have contributed to what I consider good government, and I think I have learned a lot in the last three and a half years. And I anticipate that I should have at least an improved level of understanding and ability to make good decisions (if re-elected)."

Future plans

Trustee Phil LaJoy said he'd "like to continue with the progress that has been made in providing good government and professionalism. We've accomplished a lot, but there's still more to do."

LaJoy's goals include construction of a performing arts center, an ice rink and additional soccer fields.

Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter said she enjoys her job and "would like to be a part of the continuation of the progress we've made in the community. Each day I get up and enjoy coming to work. I can honestly say that."

Clerk Terry Bennett chose to give her reasons for running in writing. She wrote that she remains "committed to community" and "committed to the quality of life that makes us a vital township."

In the future, Bennett said, the board: "Must provide for efficient/professional Canton government (and) first-class public safety."

Bennett would also like to maintain and increase property values, raise the standards for development and find "creative solutions to financing programs, facilities and growth needs."

Supervisor Tom Yack, who is running for his third, four-year term, said a commitment to public service makes the supervisor's job ideal for him.

"For somebody who likes to do public service, it's the best of all worlds because you get to do it full time," he said.

And Yack enjoys being able to have a direct impact on the development and quality of life in the community he lives in.

"You can make changes where you live," he said. "That's important."

How to run

Nominating petitions are available at the township clerk's office, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, and due back by 4 p.m. May 14 – if you are running as a partisan candidate.

If you plan to run as a non-partisan candidate, you must obtain a qualifying petition, also available at the clerk's office. Qualifying petitions are due by 4 p.m. July 18.

There's a difference in the two deadlines because non-partisan candidates don't run in the Aug. 6 primary election.

To qualify as a partisan candidate you must obtain not less than 164 signatures or more than 657. Non-partisan candidates must obtain at least 375 signatures on their petitions.

Success on the line for library Internet users

RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Hundreds of Canton Township residents are getting on the Internet via the township library's participation in a cartel of libraries called Metro Net.

With 16 modems and a link to the Metro Net's computer soul in Farmington Hills, the Canton Public Library is introducing a growing number of residents to the Internet.

Library director Jean Tabor estimates that more than 1,000 people have signed up since the program began in June, and additional patrons are being added at the rate of 100 per month.

The Metro Net cartel includes libraries in Farmington, Farmington Hills, Southfield, Independence Township, Birmingham, Bloomfield Township, West Bloomfield Township and Rochester Hills.

For Canton's part, every township resident is eligible to sign up for access, either from home computers or from terminals in the library.

Membership requests took off in January, said Patrick Persons, who oversees the program for the library, because "we had a whole new bunch of people with computers" right after Christmas.

Besides the Internet and the World Wide Web, Metro Net customers may access the library's catalog of material, retrieve articles from a magazine database and even view the catalogs of other Metro Net libraries.

The library does not provide electronic-mail accounts to users, however.

"I'm not sure it's our mission when there are commercial providers out there," Tabor said. She also fears that the library's 16 modems would be jammed with calls if e-mail was offered.

Besides the Internet and the World Wide Web, Metro Net customers may access the library's catalog of material, retrieve articles from a magazine database and even view the catalogs of other Metro Net libraries.

"I don't want to charge someone for e-mail and have them get a busy signal," she said.

Users still need to buy software to connect with Metro Net. He recommends products like Windows 95, Internet in a Box, Chameleon and Cyberjack. "These commercial packages just take away all the pain for you," Persons said.

The library has been offering introductions to the Metro Net and the Internet in groups of two, but demand has been overwhelming, so a seminar has been set for 8:30 a.m. Saturday, April 13.

Persons will use an overhead projector to go online and show people what they will have access to if they sign up for the free program.

To reserve a seat, call the library at 397-5447.

Rep. Rivers sponsors art competition

U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers has launched an art competition for high school students in the 13th Congressional District.

The winning entry will be displayed this summer, along with artworks from districts across the country, in a corridor of the U.S. Capitol _ an area dedicated to the skills of young artists.

The contest is part of An Artistic Discovery, the 15th annual competition implemented by members of the U.S. House of Representatives to recognize the creative talents of young Americans. Between now and May 31, members will conduct local competitions for high school students to select artwork to be displayed in the national exhibition.

The contest is being coordinated by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

The competition is open to any high school in the 13th District which includes the communities of Plymouth, Plymouth Township, southwest Livonia, Garden City, Westland and Canton Township.

Novi. Gail's Chocolate's in Royal Oak and at the Metro Music Cafe in Wyandotte - just to name a few. They also are responsible for the backdrops of a new exhibit at the Detroit Historical Museum, which shows Detroit at the turn of the century.

The two newest murals are mirror-image and follow an art deco style that depicts an overflowing cornucopia crowned by simplified peacock feathers. The murals of muted colors will be surrounded by a gold leaf frame.

"We came up with a few sketches and they picked one," Judge said, referring to JPRA Architects & Planners/Peter-HansRea Design, who designed the new food court.

The murals will serve as a backdrop for the cafe's sign, which will be a handcrafted wrought iron peacock. "It will anchor and announce the food court," said architect Jim Ryan.

Judge and Dytyniak worked on the murals in their studio on Ronda Drive, where there is plenty of space for their work. When the time comes, the artists will take the oil-painted canvas murals to the new shopping mall and put them up.

"We will prep it as if we were wallpapering a wall," said Judge, a Plymouth resident. "The canvas is durable. It has an artful feel to it. You will think mural when you see it."

There is the chance of ripping the murals as they are put on the walls. "But you can fix them. Once the canvas is glued down, you can come in and score it," Dytyniak said.

Judge and Dytyniak, a Wayne resident, consider themselves artists but not "artistes." They recognize ego and temperament. But their goal is to work at what they love and to earn a living.

"Artists are notorious for their pride and ego," Dytyniak said. But the partners work well together. Adds Judge: "We've got a good respect for each other. The big thing is that it comes out right."

After the architects picked out a design for the murals, Judge and Dytyniak took an overhead transparency and projected it the canvas tacked to the walls of their studio. "It's very practical. You can make all the mistakes on an eight-inch piece of paper," Judge said.

One of the reasons the artists work so well together, Judge said, is that they both can be nitpicky, but the other helps curb the tendency. "You need someone to cut your arm off when you are done," Judge said.

The artists, both who studied at the Center for Creative Studies, merge their talents from two different avenues. Judge started out as an illustrator and cartoonist. Dytyniak got into television scenery and set design.

"We can duplicate each other's styles," said Dytyniak, who started business as a sign and graphics shop. "Although we are not officially partners we always consider ourselves partners because we work on the same jobs."

Though the food court murals have taken some time to do, Judge and Dytyniak work on several projects at one time. "It always takes more time than you think," Judge said. "It's labor, labor and more labor."

But both artists agree. It's coming up with an idea that's the hard part. Of course there are those lucky, lucky times when the idea just jumps out at them. "But in our position, because we work with architects, they come up with the concepts and we both put our heads together for the design. Architects give us the parameters and the artists fill it in," Dytyniak said.

The partners and friends consider themselves quite lucky. They both do what they love and get paid for it. "It's like sitting down and listening to music. But you get to play it," Dytyniak said.

Judge agrees. "I always knew I wanted to be in art. But I also consider myself just like a plumber or a carpenter. I do believe when you're doing a job, you have to show up on time."

HOUSE TO TRY AGAIN ON COURT REFORM

By Tim Richard
STAFF WRITER

Two suburban district judges are hailing the revival of legislative efforts at "court reform" – the simplifying of Michigan's multi-tiered justice system.

The plan, scheduled to be unveiled in the House today, won't require a voter-approved constitutional amendment to eliminate county probate courts. But it could result in two years in elimination of Detroit Recorder's Court.

"District judges across our state already act as circuit and probate judges," said Southfield District Judge Stephen C. Cooper.

"The arguments against court reform appear to come from those who are afraid of any change," said Wayne District Judge Carolyn A. Archbold. Circuit judges have argued against such change.

In its simplest form, "court reform" means a single trial court instead of the current system of circuit, probate, district and Detroit Recorder's Court, with all having the same pay and same jurisdiction. Because probate courts are established by the constitution, it would take a constitutional amendment to consolidate circuit and probate courts.

In Lansing, Rep. Michael Nye, R-Litchfield, will introduce on Thursday a new substitute for his House bill 5158. Rather than eliminate courts, it will expand the powers of probate and district judges. Key elements:

• Probate judges would have concurrent jurisdiction, with circuit judges, over domestic relations cases. Probate courts could be called "family courts."

• All trial courts could handle equity cases.

• All matters involving the same family could be heard by the first judge to be assigned to the case. Reformers argue that under the current system, a family could find itself in probate court for a delinquency case, district court for the first step of a domestic violence case, and circuit court for divorce proceedings.

• Detroit Recorder's Court, which handles criminal cases in both Detroit and out-Wayne County, could be abolished by Jan. 1, 1998, unless the city agrees by Oct. 1, 1997, to be responsible for funding it. Recorder's judges would be "grandfathered" as Wayne County circuit judges. Detroit is the only city in Michigan where countywide circuit judges don't try major criminal cases.

The latter step is similar to a separate bill sponsored by Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton. The Whyman bill would abolish Recorder's Court and grandfather its judges as circuit judges, but without the option of staying in business if Detroit pays for it.

Whyman's bill is vehemently opposed by Detroit politicos, who say her motives are racial, as well as by Supreme Court Chief Justice James Brickley.

State government pays for a portion of all courts, but it pays the entire cost of Detroit Recorder's and Detroit District courts.

Plymouth District Judge Ronald Lowe insists reform is fair because district judges already are doing the work of circuit and probate judges. "Under emergency or special orders or as experimental 'pilot projects,' the Supreme Court and the state court administrator have already authorized full or partial trial court unifications," Lowe wrote in a February Michigan Bar Journal article.

One major change sought by Gov. John Engler and former Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, wouldn't be made. Under Nye's revised bill, Ingham Circuit Court would remain as the Court of Claims, handling prisoners' suits and claims against the state. Engler insists the Ingham judges are too liberal and pro-plaintiff. He wants such suits filed in the local jurisdiction.

COUNTY MARKS HEALTH WEEK

Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara has declared April 1-7 as "Wayne County Public Health Week."

"This week is a wonderful way to remind people of the importance public health plays in protecting our health every single day," McNamara said. "For example, public health ensures our water is clean, our food supply is safe and diseases are kept under control."

The Wayne County Health Department will be showcasing its accomplishments and new initiatives.

The department has launched several new programs to promote health and well-being including a smoking reduction program, efforts to increase immunization rates and decrease adolescent violence, a campaign to promote rabies prevention and the recently implemented Community Health Assessment Program.

Also, the department's Environmental Health division is providing certification training courses for all food-service managers as mandated by law.

"Public Health Week was established to recognize the contributions of public health and prevention services to America's well-being," said Dr. Donald W. Lawrenchuk, health department medical director. "A clean bill of health is one of life's most precious gifts and public health helps make that a reality."

During the week, the Wayne County Health Connector, a van, will be parked outside county health department centers. Visitors will be able to hear prerecorded health awareness messages, receive informative pamphlets and have related questions answered by health department staff.

The van will be at the Westland Health Center from 9-11:30 a.m. Monday, April 1. The center is at 2501 S. Merriman in Westland.

AUTO THEFTS ON THE RISE

Some recent data from the Michigan State Police indicates that while overall crimes decreased motor vehicle theft has increased.

H.E.A.T. (Help Eliminate Auto Thefts), a statewide auto theft prevention program, has issued a "heads-up" on auto theft prevention, based on the results of the 1994 Uniform Crime Report, recently released by the Michigan Department of State Police. Statistics in the report, the most recent available from the Michigan State Police, indicate that while overall crimes from manslaughter to embezzlement decreased by 0.5 percent from 1993, motor vehicle theft was the only crime showing an increase _ up 6.3 percent from 1993.

"This statistic shows that auto theft prevention tactics need to be reemphasized," William Liddane, director of H.E.A.T, said.

"This is the first increase in motor vehicle theft in the past 10 years. H.E.A.T. has played a major role in that milestone _ offering auto theft prevention programs that educate the public and provide solutions on what they can do to help," Col. Michael Robinson, of the Michigan State Police, said.

"The key is keeping a steady flow of information out there so the public keeps thinking about protecting themselves," Liddane said. He said he believes citizens must play a larger role in combating auto theft. "We've had 10 good years and now we can't get complacent about this. People need to be aware of everything about auto theft _ from carjacking to lesser known crimes, such as auto insurance scams, re-tagging operations and chop shops," Liddane said.

"People should keep their eye out for re-tagged vehicles," Lt. Paula Whitty of the commercial auto theft section of the Detroit Police Department, said. "That's when the original VIN (vehicle identification number) has been removed and replaced with another n umber, usually indicating a stolen vehicle. Anything that looks tampered with, probably has been," Whitty said.

When buying a used car, even from a dealership, consumers should make sure they have proper titles, the VIN intact and the federal sticker is on the inside of the driver's door, Whitty said. "That federal stickers should also match the VIN. All the paperwork and vehicle ID should be in place and have matching information," Whitty said. If not, the car is probably stolen and the original owner is legally entitled to that car, she said.

Insurance fraud is trickier, Liddane said. "That's basically a paper crime _ usually where a vehicle owner hides or disassembles a vehicle, reports it stolen to the police, and in 30 days, (if insured) receive reimbursement from the insurance company," he said. Liddane advises citizens to be aware if they see a vehicle being stored for an extended period of time _ that is could be part of an auto insurance scam. Any citizen who has information about stolen vehicles or wants to report a tip should call the police and the H.E.A.T. tip line at (800) 242-HEAT and report what they know.

The tip line is monitored by the Michigan State Police Criminal Investigation Section in Livonia. the section directs tip information to the appropriate law enforcement agency in the state.

Tip callers are rewarded up to $1,000 if their tip leads to the arrest and binding over for trial of a suspected car thief, up to $10,000 is rewarded if the tip results in the arrest and binding over for trial of suspected theft ring members and or chop shop operators. H.E.A.T. also awards $2,000 for information leading to the issuance of a warrant for a carjacking suspect.

As of March 15, 35 tips have been paid a total of $61,150 with 57 vehicles recovered with a total value of $624,500. Also, 89 tip calls have been made and 55 suspects have been arrested, as of March 15.

In 1995, 87 tips were paid a total of $165,450, 154 vehicles were recovered for a total value of more than $1.8 million.

Communication

It's a community problem

Some residents in Canton are calling for a boycott of K-mart and Kroger. Other residents are blaming township elected officials for both chain's plans to build new and larger stores in the community.

Increasingly, residents are concerned about continued commercial development in Canton. They are concerned about vacant buildings. They are concerned about increased traffic -- with deteriorating roads that can no longer accommodate an increase in vehicles. They are concerned about losing what few trees, vegetation and animal life Canton has.

Residents also believe that elected officials can do something to stem the tide of development in Canton. They point to other communities that have bought vacant land to prevent development.

The overriding question elected officials in Canton must ask themselves is why many residents feel distrust and anger. Much of the answer can be found in a lack of communication between the local government and its residents.

Both local government and residents are to blame. Communication demands responsibility on both sides of the road.

Temperaments were ragged over plans for a Super K-mart at Haggerty and Ford roads to begin with. Distrust and anger were in the air when plans were approved by the planning commission. But salt was added to the wound when a majority of residents said they weren't informed when the issue came for final approval before the township board.

Trustees immediately responded to concern by putting agendas on the government cable channel. The Observer also began publishing agendas so residents can keep up with what is happening in their community.

In this same scenario, however, residents who were concerned about the K-mart issue, should have made their own attempts to find out when the issue would come before the township board. It only takes a phone call.

Still, elected officials must have some inkling how issues, such as a Super K-mart and a new Kroger -- five-eighths of a mile away from an existing store -- might incense the public, particularly those who are concerned about growth and development.

Elected officials would be wise to make an extra effort to publicize such controversial projects. But publicity isn't enough. Much of the lack of communication stems from a lack of information on these projects -- until it is too late for residents to react and educate themselves.

Elected officials must make an extra effort to inform the public through informational meetings about issues, such as a Super K-mart. While the law may require that residents within only so many feet of a project must be informed by letter, township officials and staff should make an extra effort and inform more people, particularly when they know a project is bound to be controversial.

The goal in Canton should be continued improvement of the community. That includes fostering an informed and knowledgeable public. That includes improved communication and cooperation between residents and township elected officials and staff.

It is always better to over-inform and educate, than to merely follow the letter of the law and slide by, leaving anger and distrust to permeate a community.

Older pets need homes too

An estimated 200,000 pets are euthanized in Michigan annually, according to the Michigan Humane Society.

That's a travesty when you consider that many of these dogs and cats were loved but for some reason discarded with the garbage.

This trend can be reversed _ not only by people refusing to discard their animals _ but also by adoption. A great number of the animals euthanized are adults, often as young as 2-3 years of age.

There are plenty of pet adoption agencies out there, including the humane society and the Michigan Animal Adoption Network, which has weekend adoption fairs.

True, there's nothing quite as heartwarming as a cuddly puppy or kitten. But there's also nothing as heartwarming as a pet who needs a home. By adopting older pets you already know what size the animal will be, what its habits are and what its needs are.

The dogs and cats that people have tossed onto the street are good pets. They just don't have anywhere to go _ except the incinerator.

Adoption agencies also ensure the pet is spayed or neutered, has its shots and has been checked by a veterinarian before it comes to your home.

Also consider that older pets are perfect for working families who are gone all day. Older pets know the score. They trust you will return.

Spring delays arrival here

If spring had an official sound, it would be the crack of a baseball bat, a smell, lilacs and a sight, green buds.

And while the calendar says spring is here, folks in Michigan know that those sights and sounds are still a few weeks away.

The Tigers usually have an opening day where the weather is more likely to produce snow than sunshine. And even though the hardy crocus has been popping out from under snow covered patches, other spring flowers don't dare come out until April or May.

That means we will have to wait patiently for at leat a couple weeks watching the weather maps and waiting for the real spring and not just the occasional warm day or two to finally arrive. While that sounds like grim work, we can take pride it that it makes us more resourceful.

•Get a copy of the Tigers' schedule. Check out which home games you'd like to see in May or June. April can be a cruel month in Tiger Stadium.

•Get out the state map and remember the warm lakes of July and August.

All those activities can take place inside, which is a good place to be until at least April.

The Plymouth-Canton school board and officials are trying to stop student smoking. How should the issue be handled?

Opposition raises issues

In response to the letter to the editor written by R. Giles responding to the Feb. 26, article "Residents oppose extension," I would like to make the following comments:

The Morton-Taylor Road extension issue is not simply a matter of the local residents opposing this extension on the basis of the effect that it will have on our enjoyment of our property, although this is a serious issue and one that has not been addressed by any of our local or county officials. They will tell you that they have addressed it, but from the constituents' standpoint, "addressing it" means bureaucratic doublespeak and elusive answers.

There are numerous other issues at hand that our local governments have failed to put anything more than minimal effort into. They are as follows:

1. Our local road officials have performed a number of impact studies that they claim show results favoring the construction of the road. Their studies include effects upon traffic flow, a cursory (yes cursory) environmental impact study, and noise abatement assessments. All of these studies are invalid based upon the fact that the studies are statistically biased because they were performed by the very people who are claiming an urgent need for the road. There is much to learn in this case from the old adage that the difference between a mathematician and a statistician is that the mathematician gets what he gets and the statistician gets what he wants. If the road is so needed as our local officials claim, then prove it. Have these studies certified by an independent contractor, release all of the data, and then after a reasonable time, hold a public review of the studies.

2. Have a class 'A' county highway slicing through a long stretch of residential housing is inherently a bad idea. The hundreds of children who will have to cross this busy stretch of road to get to Miller School on a daily basis, as well as crossing the other way to use the local park facilities, are being put in harm's way. No one has factored in an evaluation of the dangers that these children will face in an area where they currently enjoy safe access.

3. Local residents have seen Willow Creek flash floods over the years in the very spot where the government wants to further restrict water flow by bridging Willow Creek. Here is yet another real problem that our local officials do not have the answer for.

4. Another issue that is at play here is the role of the federal government in construction of this road, or more specifically, the strings attached to the federal dollars. It seems that the bureaucrats in Washington have issued this money for new road construction only. That means that the local officials can't use it for what is really needed, such as repairs and widening of the existing roads and//or purchase of right-of-way for needed widening projects. Our local officials, being good government employees, will find a way to spend that money rather than send it back to Washington. No wonder we continue to pile debt on ourselves and our children, but that is a letter for another day.

These in a little more that 500 words are some of the issues troubling those of us affected by construction of this road. Mr. Giles seems to have overly narrowed a complex issue and has tried make it seem to be something other than what it really is. Mr. Giles has blindly accepted all of the government rhetoric and applied it to his own misconception of what the problems really are.

Court decision sound

I agree with the federal court's decision on assisted suicide because it supports the premise of our Constitution -- every man has the unalienable right to his life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness.

Our Constitution is a document limiting the rights of government, not the rights of man. The Constitution did not and could not enumerate all of mans' rights. They follow logically from the premise of the Constitution.

The opponents of the decision are also correct when they say the Constitution did not and could not create such a right; it did not. Man's rights are unalienable; he is born with them. They are his choice to exercise or not as part of his nature.

POINTS OF VIEW

Summit a drain on township resources

By Michael Olin
Guest Columnist

Recently, I wrote a letter to the editor of the Observer expressing my thoughts about an article relating to the opening of Canton's new community center, Summit on the Park. Within days after my comments were published, I received a rather nasty, paranoiac letter from Township Supervisor Tom Yack in which he stated that "once again (I) have engaged in a campaign of misinformation in a feeble attempt to sway people to support (my) out in left field' position."

One might think I had hit a nerve at township hall.

Let me preface what I'm about to say by stating that I am not particularly opposed to Canton having a community center of some sort. What I'm opposed to is the process by which this one came about, and the sheer magnitude of the infraction. These are symptoms of underlying problems that need to be considered as the leaders of this township steadily and surely chip away at what was once a quiet, rural community.

The supervisor is welcome to his opinion that I am "out in left field," but I'll offer a correction: I think I am out in "right" field but that, as they say, is a matter of perspective. You see, I firmly believe the voters of Canton told the administration they did not want money taken from the community chest to build the Summit, yet a liberal (yes, "left") administration decided to do just exactly that.

A ballot issue in 1988 rejected the proposal, yet Mr. Yack says "surveys" were pursued well into 1992. Whose "out in left field" position was it that decided when 60.1 percent of the voters said no, they really meant yes? Apparently in Canton, even after the voters have said "no," a subject can be selectively broached and finessed until the numbers say something else. Is it any wonder that people are so disgusted with government these days?

Our community now finds itself in the unwise position of owning and operating an enterprise which is in direct competition with other businesses in the community. What -- or who -- drove the trustees to deliver this slap in the face to the owners of banquet/meeting facilities and dance/fitness studios? Whose egos were so desperately in need of stroking that it cost the community $13 million dollars? Just imagine all the truly useful things that could be done with that much money, things that benefit a majority of residents instead of very few.

We probably wouldn't have to consider floating bonds and burdening future taxpayers with payments (plus interest) for a new fire station -- something that benefits everyone. And even though the township is not responsible for road repairs, some of that money could be used to fix the inevitable potholes we're sure to have -- something that benefits everyone. Instead, we have a huge pothole in the community chest where $13 million dollars once existed, and no amount of smoke and mirrors or semantic games or account shuffling is going to change the fact that there is no plan, no intention whatsoever, to return even one penny of it to the community chest. (The "self-sufficient" part that is the "Republican way of doing things around here" seems to fall flat on its face, doesn't it?)

Thirteen million dollars adds up to $200 dollars for every man, woman, and child living in the community. I suspect there's more than one family of five who would prefer to have had something more useful done with their $1,000 share of that $13 million.

In his letter Mr. Yack took issue with my comment about the source of funding that will be used to support the Summit when and if it should fall on hard times, noting that "no voted millage funds will be used to operate the Summit." I am pleased to have this in writing, whatever that is worth. Given the previous failure to understand the concept of no, you can understand my trepidations.

It is not the "voted" funds that concern me, however. The current process of making "inter-fund loans" is more intriguing, and of course there's always the interest payments to be made on these "loans." From where will this interest repayment funding come? Will Mr. Yack assure me and the rest of the voters in Canton that public funds will never be used for this purpose? What projects will be delayed or declined due to insufficient funding because repayment of "inter-fund loans" deserves serious scrutiny, and I hope there are many other residents and taxpayers in Canton who share my concern. We are all well aware that slight-of-hand tricks are not unheard of where public funds are concerned, after all isn't this how the state of Michigan "funded" education with proceeds from the Lottery?

I was quite surprised -- and pleased -- to see Mr. Yack's closing paragraph which indicated that he is willing to consider selling the Summit. I'm sure this will come a huge surprise to his peers, but it shows he understands that it's just plain poor policy for the trustees to cling to an operation that the residents, voters and taxpayers of Canton rejected.

Perhaps Mr. Yack will come down off his pedestal some time soon and see his "social and cultural center of Canton" for what it really is: a monument to governmental largesse in Canton, a severe drain on the public coffers, and a slap in the face to the voters. (Quite frankly, I think it is virtually criminal that it exists at all.) Perhaps also the voters of Canton will be remembering and think about this at election time this year. I know I will, because I believe the people of Canton deserve better, more respectful and honest leadership than we are getting.

Many people reaping the benefits of Proposal A

By Bob Needham
Staff Writer

Hard to believe, but it was a full two years ago that the state of Michigan dramatically changed the way it pays for public education. Some people lately have been criticizing the lingering effects of 1994's Proposal A, and maybe with some justification. On the whole, though, here's one taxpayer who's mighty glad he voted for it.

What brings this to mind is the arrival of our property tax assessment earlier this month. That day of dread has lost its sting now, thanks to the combined efforts of our elected officials and the Michigan voters.

Of course, part of the whole reform package involved some tax increases, the most wide-ranging being the rise in the state sales tax from 4 to 6 percent. This part of the plan drew a lot of fire when it was proposed, some people arguing that it would discourage the purchase of goods and thus prove a drag on the state economy, and others worrying that it would be an unfair burden on lower-income people. I don't think either of these worries has really played out. As uncomfortable as I am defending any tax increase, this one still strikes me as reasonable, given the benefits of the package of the whole.

Which brings me to the aspect we most often think about: The changes in the property tax structure. Instead of a patchwork of local taxes, we have a statewide tax with some, much smaller, local taxes laid on top of it. The system of allocating the state money to the various local districts is confusing and cumbersome, and may indeed be unfair (though in my mind, certainly not as unfair as the previous system). But the impact on the homeowner — that's the key.

Most people got a cut in their property tax rate. A lot of people got a big cut. Some got a relatively small one.

As nice as the property tax cut was, however, in my mind it pales in comparison to the single most important reason I voted for the proposal: The cap on assessment increases.

This was probably the single best change in tax policy this state has seen in many years; I rate it more important than the Headlee Amendment. In case you've forgotten, the change is simple: For as long as you hang onto your home, the "taxable value" — from which the tax bill is calculated — can only increase by 5 percent annually or the rate of inflation, whichever is lower. That means, aside from changes in the tax rate, your — mine, everyone's — property taxes can only rise that much.

This change is critical. In this state's housing market, particularly in this area, the old assessments could shoot up 20 percent, 30 percent, or even more, in a single year. Talk about unfair impact. This situation was literally driving people out of their homes, and we've found a way to stop it.

Corporate greed costs a great deal to country

Tim Richard

One gets a different impression from the 1995 annual report of Black & Decker, the international maker of home and commercial tools.

In a rowing competition, the Japanese team had eight men at the oars and one coxswain to steer. The American team had one man at the oars and eight managers. The Americans lost by a mile. The managers fired the man at the oars and were duly accorded bonuses for analyzing the problem correctly.

Businessmen like Robert Eaton, chairman of Chrysler Corp., don't like such stories. Eaton spoke to the Economic Club of Detroit last week about the bashing in the media that managers get. "People like me and others who run companies like to think of ourselves as builders," he said. "And in spite of what the public hears and reads, we do care about protecting jobs..."

One gets a different impression from the 1995 annual report of Black & Decker, the international maker of home and commercial tools.

Business has been good. Revenues were $4.77 billion, up 50 percent from 1989. Earnings were $216.5 millon, up 620 percent from 1989. But jobs? If you check pages 46-47 of the fine print, you find jobs had dropped more or less steadily since 1989 from 38,600 to 29,300 last year _ a 24 percent loss. That's 9,300 people out of work.

Alonzo G. Decker Jr., former chairman of the board, is staying active. At age 88, he "is employed as a part-time employee/consultant at an annual rate of $150,000," says the fine type in the proxy statement. That sum could pay several workers with families to support.

The directors each get a retainer of $30,000 a year. They also get $1,000 for each board and committee meeting. There were five board meetings, and most committees met four or five times, so they can take home $39,000 to $40,000 apiece _ not bad for 10 meetings. Oh, and committee chairs get another $3,000 on top of that.

But there's more. B&D provides each director $100,000 of term life insurance and $200,000 of accident insurance. A non-employee director who serves five years gets half the retainer amount, $15,000, as a retirement benefit. How long do you have to work to get retirement benefits like that?

The chairman, president and CEO of this deal is Nolan D. Archibald, a man who is so good, apparently, that the free market system awarded him a salary of $839,000 and a bonus of $810,000. That's just the money payout. Archibald has perks and other personal benefits of $57,000, including $31,000 for personal use of the company plane. Some workers in the U.S. economy are supporting a family on his aircraft perk alone.

There are nifty stock options, too, but space is running out.

Is this just one horrible example, sensationalized by the media, of how American corporations are run? Two Associated Press stories of March 5 put some numbers on the anecdotes:

• Personal incomes in 1995 grew 6.1 percent.

• The average compensation for chief executives of large companies jumped 23 percent in 1995.

Black & Decker shareholders were asked to approve a new Executive Annual Incentive Plan to be administered by a committee of the board. Says the proxy statement: "The committee does not anticipate that it will disclose the specific goal or goals for any fiscal year, because the committee believes that this information is confidential business information."

COUNTY FUND TARGETS BLIGHT

An economic development fund to aid distressed communities and neighborhoods in Wayne County was announced Monday.

Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara and Wayne County Commission Chair Ricardo Solomon announced the creation of the 21st Century Fund.

"Wayne County faces significant economic and community development challenges as we approach the next century," McNamara said. "We have aging infrastructure, a shrinking population base and many blighted neighborhoods and commercial areas. The 21st Century Fund is designed to revitalize distressed areas while also creating jobs and enhancing the county's tax base."

Money from the sale of county surplus properties is being used to set up the fund, McNamara said. The fund has assets of about $3 million and is projected to grow to at least $25 million within the next five years as property sales are finalized.

The fund will take the county's economic development efforts to new levels, according to Solomon. "The county has created many innovative programs that have generated economic opportunities and neighborhood revitalization," Solomon said. "However, these activities have been hampered somewhat by a lack of dedicated funding. The 21st Century Fund will enable us to maximize our efforts."

The fund will be used primarily for loans as opposed to grants. To create greater overall return, the fund will target projects that bring in other public and private funds.

The fund will support a range of projects, including land acquisition and preparation for housing; infrastructure; industrial site reclamation and cleanup; minority business development and downtown redevelopment.

The Economic Development Corp. of Wayne County will propose project plans for use of the fund with staff support from the county's Department of Jobs and Economic Development. The EDC, established under Public Act 338 or 1974, is empowered to undertake projects which promote industrial, commercial and residential projects within the county.

McNamara said he envisions the 21st Century Fund being a partner in projects initiated by Detroit Renaissance, the city of Detroit and other municipalities, the new Greater Downtown Partnership and other public sector and private sector development ventures.

"We look forward to supporting Mayor (Dennis) Archer's vision of making Detroit a great city again," McNamara said.

Simple things in the morning

I love things — the simpler, the better. And if a thing is too hard, well, there's a chance I might get crabby. Like Saturday morning when I was working on tax stuff, I did get crabby — taxes are so hard. And to think, just a half hour before I wasn't crabby at all. That's because I was eating breakfast, and breakfast is a pretty uncomplicated thing. Cereal is why.

Every morning I eat a bowl of cereal for breakfast. It's good, it's simple. It's simply good.

Oftentimes, I'm alone with my cereal; it's just too early for everyone else. Which is good because I usually act a bit to simply. For instance, I sit the box of cereal right smack in front of me where I can read it. And so the box boxes me in. And then I read all the sides of the box, the offers on the box, the recipes, the nutrition information, all pretty simple stuff. Somehow that simple cereal stuff helps clean out the cobwebs in my head and gets me ready for the day.

This love of the simple breakfast goes back a long, long way. Back to my childhood when to I would ask my father the night before to wake me up before he went to work which was usually around 6 a.m. I would get up and pad to the kitchen and get my simple breakfast set up _ cereal, lots of it heaped in a bowl, milk, sugar and juice and the cereal box right smack in front of me.

Auction has safe sports in mind

It's considered an old adage, but Dr. David Janda firmly believes in an ounce of prevention. And that's why a weekend auction is being held to benefit his Institute for Preventative Sports Medicine.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Dr. David Janda believes that prevention is the best cure for the health care crisis, and since he created the Institute for Preventative Sports Medicine in Ann Arbor, he has taken it upon himself to prove that to Congress, medical professionals and the public.

"Health care needs to be made more affordable," Janda said in a 1994 interview. "The way to do that is by preventing need."

"Unfortunately the political elite have not really heard that message and it's a real problem," said Janda last week. "They keep talking about health care reform. They keep focusing on the availability and accessibility to care and manipulating health care need.

"What we should be talking about is the prevention of health care need."

To promote education and raise money for research, the institute is hosting its annual celebrity benefit auction 7-10 p.m. Friday, March 29, at The Ritz-Carlton Hotel and Convention Center in Dearborn. Radio personality Dick Purtan, formerly of Q95 and soon of WOMC, will serve as celebrity auctioneer.

The R&B act, One Wish, who won a 1994 Detroit Music Award for its single "Tell Me Why," will provide the entertainment. The all-male trio is scheduled to release its album, "Romantic," in late April or early May.

The $10 admission includes the chance to win two round-trip tickets to anywhere in the United States that Delta Airlines flies. Janda said that the admission price is intentionally low to allow more people to attend.

"We'd like to get as many of the public there as possible," he said. "To us, $10 is an affordable price. It's come as you are. There will be folks there in tuxes and some in sweatshirts, and that's great."

Besides the drawing, a Grand Hotel getaway, a suite at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, a two-night stay at Palmetto Dunes Resort on Hilton Head Island, S.C., and bed and breakfast getaways will be auctioned off.

A majority of the items offered are sports memorabilia, including: an Oscar Robertson basketball, a John Elway football, rookie baseball cards, a Wayne Gretzky tour stick, golf clubs, an Anfernee "Penny"

"We have quite a collection," said Janda, a Plymouth resident. "We're trying to attract a wide spectrum of folks. We want to have the fund raiser as a fund raiser, but we also want to have it as a bit of an event.

"We're going to have literature available that way folks can save and prevent injuries. Hopefully, the public will latch on and take that information and bring it home and read it and maybe make some of these changes in the community."

The auction is part of the institute's fourth annual Mid-American Sports Medicine Symposium, during which Janda will talk about the headway his organization has made.

The Institute for Preventative Sports Medicine is a non-profit, charitable organization that focuses on the prevention of children's sports injuries with a reduction in health care expenditures. According to the institute's literature, one of the studies performed by the board of directors led to the proposed prevention of approximately 1.7 million injuries with a savings in health care of $2 billion a year nationally.

'We're trying to attract a wide spectrum of folks. We want to have the fund raiser as a fund raiser, but we also want to have it as a bit of an event.'

Dr. David Janda

The institute has studied improper soccer "heading" techniques, which have been shown to result in an irreversible loss of memory and information processes in youth and young adult soccer players, and how to prevent fatal arrhythmia as a result of being struck in the chest by pitched balls.

The project for which Janda is best known is his study of "break-away bases," created by Roger Hall of Pennsylvania. The bases pop off when players slide into them with a certain amount of force. The Centers for Disease Control analyzed Janda's data and concluded that if break-away bases were used throughout the United States, it would prevent more than 1.7 million injuries, he said.

According to Janda, injuries caused by sports, motor vehicle accidents and the unintentional discharge of firearms are claiming the lives of more individuals younger than age 44 than any other cause. More than $133 billion is spent on short-term care of those injuries -- excluding an employer's cost of replacing an injured employee.

"Until folks deem the prevention of injuries worthy of their attention, they're not going to give it support," Janda said. "If we can't get the support, we can't get the studies done to benefit them. That's where the fund raiser comes in."

And if my father were still home and he and I happened to eat breakfast together, I could still have the cereal box right smack in front of me because he would always be reading a book of his own, and we both had a tacit understanding that we could be rude and bury ourselves in our chosen reading material, be it cereal boxes or books.

Occasionally, the back-of-the-box offers were too good to be passed over. And sometimes I would discuss an offer with my Dad as we ate our cereal early in the morning.

And sometimes, I would get to order things. Like the time I ordered something from the back of the Alpha-Bits box. I told my Dad that if I sent in a number of box tops, I can't remember now how many it was, but however many it was, I'd receive the spokescharacter for Alpha-Bits, Lovable Truly, in the form of an inflatable, three-foot tall, non-toxic vinyl likeness of the postman who delivers the cereal letters of the alphabet to children back in the '60s.

Anyway, I saved up the cereal box tops and sent away for this great treasure. When it finally arrived about six weeks later, it was every bit as cool as it had looked on the back of the box the morning my Dad helped me fill out the order form. Lovable Truly came with a patch kit and everything.

Back then, as now, some cereal box treasures didn't have to be ordered, some could be obtained just by opening the box up and digging your hand to the bottom to find the enclosed riches. I had a whole collection of '67, or was it '68, Ford Mustangs, little plastic replicas, different colors.

I have no idea whatever became of them or Lovable Truly, but one thing is certain, they were terrific. And simple. They were simply terrific.

When it finally arrived about six weeks later, it was every bit as cool as it had looked on the back of the box the morning my Dad helped me fill out the order form.

And just yesterday, you're not going to believe this, I mean a grown woman and all, I ordered something offered on the back of my Rice Krispies box. It was a set of four bowls, each one having a different cereal character imprinted on the inside of the bowl.

One has the Rice Krispies guys, another Toucan Sam, another the rooster from Corn Flakes, and the last one Tony the Tiger. It cost four box tops, actually bottoms where the UPC symbol is, and a dollar something for shipping and handling.

I tried convincing myself that I was ordering the bowls for my children, but I must say, I ordered them for me, too, because when they get here I'll set them out for my children, in the dark part of the morning, when I'm alone, and I'll read them like I do the boxes. You see, on the rims of the four bowls this is printed, "The best to you each morning." I like that.

It's simple. It's good. It's simple good.

Churches ready for Easter

If you thought carols were only sung at Christmas, you would be mistaken. Palm Sunday, March 31, marks the beginning of Holy Week as area churches celebrate the passion of Christ with special music, including carols.

The word "carol" originally meant a ring dance. It is believed that at one time people used to dance as well as sing to carol tunes. When they were most popular _ the 1400s to the mid-1600s _ they were sung at all times of the year. Many of the older carols, especially those from continental Europe countries, were written to be sung at Easter or in the spring.

Because people in the 1800s thought about carols only at Christmas, some of the best spring carols had Christmas lyrics put to their tunes. The song "Good King Wenceslas" originally was printed in 1582 as "Spring Has Now Brought Forth the Flowers."

With this in mind, local churches are putting the finishing touches to their music that will bring special meaning to the Holy Week observance and Easter celebration.

At Christ Our Savior Lutheran Church in Livonia Festival Palm Sunday services will be at 8:30 and 11 a.m. March 31. The Christ Our Savior Choir will feature Hal Hopson's "Enter His Sanctuary Singing," accompanied by brass and organ. The Cherub, Choristers and Handbell Choirs will join the choir in singing "Hosanna to the Son" by Jodi Lynch. Palm crosses also will be distributed to worshipers.

On April 4, Maundy Thursday worship will be at 7 p.m. with Holy Communion and special music from the Christ Our Savior and Woodwind Choirs. As a part of the service, the altar will be stripped of all cloths, candles and furnishings in preparation for Good Friday.

The Good Friday service of the cross will be at 12:30 p.m. with special music and reflection. A candlelight Tenebrae service of darkness will be at 7 p.m., featuring the Christ Our Savior, Cherub, Choristers and Handbell Choirs. The service, entitled "Gathered on the Green Hill," is based on the newly commissioned work by Charles W. Ore, "There Is a Green Hill Far Away."

Easter Sunday will be celebrated with a 6:30 a.m. sunrise devotional, and festival communion services will be at 8:30 and 11 a.m.

The Christ Our Savior, Cherub, Choristers, Handebell and Brass Choirs will join in performing "On the Third Day" by Allen Pote at each festival service. The spring carol, "Now the Green Blade Riseth," often performed as the Christmas carol "Noel Nouvele," will be one of the Easter carols sung by the choirs.

An Easter breakfast will be served by the church youth 7-10:30 a.m. Tickets are $5 for adults, $2.50 for children 4-10 years of age. Children under age 3 are free.

Christ Our Savior Lutheran Church is at 14175 Farmington Road, Livonia. For more information, call (313) 522-6830.

The Chancel Choir of St. James Presbyterian Church will present the cantata, "Walk Worthy" by Joseph Martin, at 10 a.m. worship service Palm Sunday, March 31.

The Maundy Thursday service will be at 7:30 p.m. April 4 in the chapel and will include the serving of Communion.

St. James Presbyterian Church is at 25350 W. Six Mile Road, Redford. For more information, call (313) 534-7730.

The First United Methodist Church of Plymouth will have meditations and Communion at 12:15 and 7 p.m. Maundy Thursday, April 4, at the church, 45201 N. Territorial Road, Plymouth.

On Easter Sunday, April 7, there will be a dawn service at 6:30 a.m., followed by Easter breakfast at 7:15 a.m. Worship services will be at 9 and 11 a.m., with the sermon , "A Risen Savior _ Our Eternal Hope," by Dr. Dean A. Klump.

For more information, call the church at (313) 453-5280.

A group of churches in the Livonia community will gather for a 14th year for a special 12 noon community worship service Good Friday, April 5. The host church this year will be St. Matthew's United Methodist Church, Six Mile Road just east of Merriman Road.

Churches participating in the service will be St. Andrew's Presbyterian, St. Timothy's Presbyterian, Rosedale Garden Presbyterian, St. Edith Catholic and Nativity United Church of Christ. The preacher will be Rev. Bob Seltz of Holy Spirit Lutheran Church.

The offering received will support Habitat for Humanity.

Garden City Presbyterian Church will host the ecumenical Good Friday service, sponsored by the Garden City Ministerial Association, at 12:30 p.m. April 5 at the church, 1841 Middlebelt Road.

The theme of this year's service will be "Were You There?" with the Good Friday message told through stories and viewpoints of those who were present during the trial, crucifixion and burial of Jesus.

Participating will be Rev. Felix Lorenz Jr. of St. Paul United Church of Christ, Pastor Art Wilde of Good Hope Lutheran Church, Rev. Gretchen Denton of Garden City Presbyterian Church and Rev. Gary Damon of the First United Methodist Church. Each of the church choirs will sing an anthem during the half hour that is lead by their church pastor. There will be congregational singing and prayers as well.

The service will last until 2:30 p.m., however, people may attend as much as of the service as they can. A free will offering for the Garden City FISH will be received.

Ward Presbyterian Church invites the Livonia community to attend all or part of the services of worship that will begin at 12 noon and conclude at 3 p.m. at the church, Six Mile and Farmington roads, April5.

The service will feature "The Seven Words of Christ" with music by the Chamber Choir. Messages addressing the "Seven Last Word" will be delivered by Dr. James McGuire, Dr. L. Edward Davis, Pamela Hodge, Dr. Bartlett Hess, Rev. David Brown Jr., Rev. John Quigley and Rev. James Killgore.

Members of the Chancel Choir will be singing "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by Dubois under the direction of Dr. Jerry Smith. Soloists include Marjorie Baker, Gordon Walls, David Flanigan, William Butler, Lawrence Zane, Lisa Meyer, Keith Wilson, Ronald Wroblewski, Connie Grimes and Sherry Aronson.

Child care will be provided for children through age 4. For more information, call (313) 422-1150.

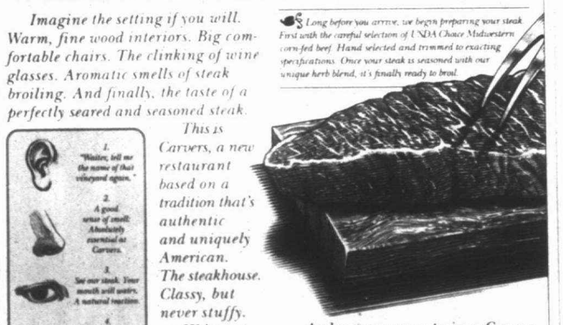
A STEAKHOUSE YOU MIGHT EXPECT TO FIND IN NEW YORK, San Francisco or Chicago is now here in Farmington Hills: Carvers.

Consider how each of your senses is rewarded by a visit to Carvers.

Imagine the setting if you will. Warm, fine wood interiors. Big comfortable chairs. The clinking of wine glasses. Aromatic smells of steak broiling. And finally, the taste of a perfectly seared and seasoned steak.

This is Carvers, a new restaurant based on a tradition that's authentic and uniquely American. The steakhouse. Classy, but never stuffy.

We're not about trends. We're all about food: steaks, prime rib and seafood.



Long before you arrive, we begin preparing your steak. First with the careful selection of USDA Choice Midwestern corn-fed beef. Hand selected and trimmed to exacting specifications. Once your steak is seasoned with our unique herb blend, it's finally ready to broil.

And now you can experience Carvers for yourself, right here in Farmington Hills. Please call for dinner or lunch reservations to avoid any longer of a wait. For your convenience, we open at noon on Easter.

Celebrate Easter with a bit of perfection.

Women needed for study

Providence Hospital's Cancer Center is recruiting patients with advanced breast cancer to take part in a large, nationwide clinical trials program for a new medication recently approved for the treatment of post-menopausal women with advanced breast cancer.

Providenceis the only community-based teaching hospital in Michigan participating in the study.

The new drug, Arimidex (anastrozole) is a potent, selective, aromatase inhibitor approved recently by the Food and Drug Administration as a new treatment option for advanced breast cancer in women who have already been through menopause and whose disease has progressed following therapy with tamoxifen, an established hormonal breast cancer therapy.

The objective of the clinical study is to test Arimidex opposite tamoxifen as first-line therapy for advanced breast cancer for this patient group.

"It is critical that we keep searching for new ways to treat advanced breast cancer," said Dr. Judie Goodman, coordinator of the Breast Cancer Work Group at Providence. "Clinical trials in this important disease area are of special interest to us since they have the potential to offer treatment to patients of all backgrounds who do not benefit from, or cannot tolerate, current therapy or have difficulty with multiple dosing regimens."

Approximately one woman in eight will develop breast cancer in her lifetime. According to the American Cancer Society, an estimated 184,300 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in 1996.

It is estimated that about 6 percent of patients with breast cancer in the United States have advanced breast cancer. Further, the Breast and Cervical Cancer Project, sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, reports that a disproportionate number of deaths from breast cancer will occur among minorities and women of low income.

To be eligible for the Arimidex study, women must have already been through menopause, have been diagnosed with advanced breast cancer, not currently be taking tamoxifen as part of their breast cancer treatment, have an interval of at least 12 months between stopping tamoxifen and relapse of their disease before entering the trial, have an interval of at least 12 months between the start of chemotherapy and entry into this trial and not have any life-threatening disease, such an extensive liver disease.

Participants in the clinical trial will receive free study medication and frequent monitoring at no charge.

Those interested in participating can learn more about the study program by calling Providence Cancer Center research nurse Sandy Remer at (810) 424-3341.

Global glass goes to the edge

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Two years ago, Ferdinand Hampson began visiting artists' studios in Asia, Europe and North America to research the latest in contemporary glass. He showcases the findings in Habatat Galleries' 24th annual International Glass Invitational. One-third of the more than 90 exhibiting artists are new, selected on the merit of their images not their credentials or years of experience spent working with glass.

"The theme this year is a celebration of creativity. These new artists were juried on what they created, not on their resume. In years past, the International centered around geographical location and historical tradition. I think the theme will challenge the noted artists as well," said Ferdinand Hampson president of Habatat Galleries. "Most of the this year's International is storytelling art or personal images, not always relying on the beauty of the material."

Traveling to museums, galleries and artists' studios from Czechoslovakia to North Carolina, Hampson learned of artists mixing materials and using traditional techniques in innovative ways. Mundy Hepburn combines glass and gas. A trip to his Connecticut studio led to an exhibit of Mundy's work in a separate building behind the gallery leased especially for the International. The only other artist shown there is legendary glass master Dale Chihuly with his new 10-foot long wall pieces.

Hepburn's luminous glass sculptures use high frequency static electricity to light up carefully balanced mixtures of harmless gasses such as neon, argon, krypton, helium and xenon. Colors arise from the blend of gasses inside as well as from phosphorous painted on the glass. Looking like sea life or strange creatures from outside our solar system, the glass sculptures literally move, reds flowing into blues.

"Mundy Hepburn's work is technology beyond. It's glass you have to plug in so we're going to display it in a darkened area where his 9-foot sculptures will rise out of the ground," Hampson said. In July, Hampson traveled to Taiwan to discover Heinrich Wang whose work deals with cultural values of virtue, nature and the circle of life. Unlike America where the majority of glass artists mix materials Asian artists like Wang, who studied at Center for Creative Studies College of Art and Design in Detroit, concentrate exclusively on glass.

According to CCS' crafts department chairman Herb Babcock, Wang's "glass sculpture imparts a visual vitality to the classical." "I wanted to familiarize myself with Chinese arts of all types so I visited museums relying on historical tradition.Part of selecting works from other cultures is finding out about that country," said Hampson.

Although Troy artist Glen Michaels began exhibiting glass assemblages 30 years ago in New York, this year's theme challenged him to create pieces confined to a single concept. "Copper River" is a tall rectangular relief incorporating copper fused in glass. Using copper fragments as fine as human hair, Michaels surrounds them with unglazed gray tile reminiscent of the facade of a building or mountain. "I hope it suggests that it's a man made work being exposed. As if the side of a mountain has fallen away, or an echo of an archaeological site," said Michaels, best known for his 90-foot long mural in the Brick-town Station of downtown Detroit's People Mover. Michaels, whose primary work is private and commercial commissions, is currently creating a 100-square foot fused glass wall mural which flows into a pool in front of Beaumont Hospital.

Bigger and Better Hampson expands the International to includes four levels of glass this year. Spaces, designed for showing Asian art and a retrospective of glass works from the 70s and 80s, will transport visitors into different worlds. Outside the gallery in the park will be a sculpture garden of glass.

Two weeks before the International, staff members unpacking the glass were in sheer delight as if it were Christmas morning. Catching their fancy were sleek and sophisticated raspberry and burnt umber geometrical works by Czechoslovakian husband and wife artists Stanislav Libensky and Jaroslava Brychtova. As always, Emily Brock's found objects like old waffle irons turned into miniature diner scenes produced amazement. Large jars pierced by dozens of straight pins and looking as if they came from a mad doctor's laboratory by another artist drew mixed responses. Once assembled, said Hapmson, the artist's intent will become apparent. He preferred to reserve his comments until then.

Begun one year after Habatat Galleries was established in Dearborn, the International Glass Invitational is the oldest and largest annual exhibit of contemporary studio glass martin the United States. Held in conjunction with Michigan Glass Month, the International continues to show the progressive growth of glass as a respected art material. Once considered a craft, the contemporary studio glass movement born 34 years ago, is now a contender in the world of fine art.

Local boy gets taste of stardom as teacup in Beauty and the Beast

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Seven-year-old Nathan Keen of Beverly Hills is getting his first taste of Broadway in "Disney's Beauty and the Beast," and he's loving it. Keen, 7, who plays Chip, an adorable and inquisitive tea cup in the full-length, stage musical now playing at the Masonic Temple Theatre in Detroit was picked from approximately 60 children who auditioned for the part.

Keen who has been involved in local theatrical productions in metro Detroit since the age of three, prepared for his audition by watching the movie "Beauty and the Beast" and listening to the music. "I've never seen him so excited to be at rehearsal. He's having a wonderful time," said Nathan's father Christopher.

"It's fun to find someone from the local community to be in the show," said producer Robert W. McTyre, senior vice president of Walt Disney Productions. "We have one person who plays the part travel with us, and then pick one from the community where the show is playing." Detroit is only the third stop on the national tour of "Beauty and the Beast."

"Audiences will enjoy a full-length Broadway musical, complete with spectacular production numbers, elaborate costumes and unforgettable songs," said McTyre who grew up in Birmingham. "The sets are enormous, there are special effects, and costumes. It's enjoyable for everyone. The show is fun for children, adults and couples. It's a touching love story, and a huge spectacle."

Beauty and the Beast

Where: The Masonic Temple Theatre, Detroit through April 28.

Tickets: Range in price from $16 to $60 available at the box office, all Ticketmaster outlets or by calling (810) 645-6666.

"Beauty and the Beast" tells the story of Belle, a young woman in a provincial French town, and the Beast, who is really a young prince trapped in a spell placed by a beautiful enchantress. If the Beast can learn to love and be loved, the curse will end and he will be transformed into his former self. Time is running out. If the Beast does not learn his lesson soon, he and his household will be doomed for all eternity.

Nathan is dividing his time between home and the theater while the show is in production. He works with a tutor at the theater to make up the time he's away from school "My wife Kim and I were in the Australian Opera Company and sung on stage in Sydney," said Christopher who is a graduate student studying conducting at Oakland University. He's also the conductor of the Detroit Ballet Orchestra. Kim teaches vocal music at Pierce Elementary School in Birmingham where Nathan is a second grader.

"We noticed at a very early age that Nathan had a talent for singing, but we never forced him, it was always a game," said Christopher. "We took him to the theater, and he's taken classes from Nancy Gurwin . She showed him how to prepare for auditions." Nathan recently performed in Nancy Gurwin's production of "Peter Pan" at the Jewish Community Center in West Bloomfield.

Nathan Keen

"He's a very talented little boy," said Gurwin of Southfield who taught Nathan how to perform on stage. "He's a natural, and has all the makings of a star. He's adorable, has a great personality, and he's fearless. He's taken private performance classes from me, and was cast in some of my youth theater productions."

The first venture of Walt Disney Theatrical Productions, "Beauty and the Beast" features Alan Menken's Academy Award-winning score, songs by Alan Menken and the late Howard Ashman, plus new songs by Alan Menken and Tim Rice.

Gallery features ancient glass

By Mary Klemic
Staff Writer

What excitement is contained within the cool surface of glass!

Esthetic beauty, scientific wonder, historical fascination ... the viewer can find all of these in the color and form of glass works. Even ancient pieces have enchantment, as shown at Donna Jacobs Gallery Ltd., 574 N. Woodward, Birmingham (call (810) 540-1600).

The gallery's 17th annual exhibit of ancient glass, "Beautiful Visions," will take place March 30 through April 27.

Featured pieces are both delicate and durable. The colors and intricate work have lingered through the centuries. You can marvel at the artistry as you wonder who may have used the items.

A cobalt blue bottle from the first century A.D., a Byzantine flask with trailing on its neck from the fifth or sixth century A.D., a jug from the fourth century ... these are just some of the objects that delight and beckon in the exhibit.

The gallery's wonders are on view all year, not just during Michigan Glass Month, and they are in a variety of media, not just glass.

A textile from Peru, dating A.D. 900 to 1500, shows detailed work in a pattern of birds. Detail is also evident in a bronze bell with two tiny ibex, and a silver bird pin from Persia.

A cuneiform tablet is shown with its own envelope. The clay tablet, sealed with the seal of the scribe, tells of payment of barley and features a presentation scene.

Drinking vessels called Kantharoi date from 330-310 B.C. Their deep bowls are brightly and joyously adorned with women's faces. Smaller faces are found inside the vertical handles that extend above the lip of the cup.

On a larger scale is a vessel called a krater from the early fourth century B.C. The item bears a depiction of a gorgon, a creature whose stare could turn a human into stone. Loops resembling heads of geese are around the top of the vessel.

Mary Klemic is Oakland County arts writer. You can call her at (810) 901-2569. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Graduating seniors emerge as artists

By LINDA ANN CHOMIN
Special Writer

An opening reception for an exhibition featuring five seniors graduating from Madonna University's art department was packed with proud parents, spouses, children and friends on March 22. The show, a retrospective of students' works, continues through April 11 in the Exhibit Gallery on the second floor of the library wing at 36600 Schoolcraft and Levan in Livonia.

"These are five strong individuals who've done an outstanding job in their four years here," said Doug Semivan, Madonna University associate professor of art.

A mix of mediums representing the studies of each student were as varied as their future career goals. Madonna University offers bachelor degrees in commercial and fine art so both were on display.

Anna Helkowsky of West Bloomfield exhibited delicate works of a mouse and bird created in an Oriental brush painting class with Ralph F. Glenn, art department chairperson. The 40-something mother of one exhibits regularly in shows held by the Farmington Artists Club and Scarab Club in Detroit. She hopes to continue showing while working part-time at the Detroit Institute of Arts Museum Shop in Novi.

"We're very lucky to have instructors who actually work as artists out in the field. They bring that information back to us," said Helkowsky, who returned to school at mid-life after becoming bored with writing tutorial textbooks for computer software programs.

Twenty-two year old Anne Mondro of Livonia studied commercial art. She presently works in Livonia full-time as a graphic artist for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and part-time as a religion teacher at Ladywood High School. Her black and white illustration for a Michigan Humane Society poster hits the mark as it aims to prevent heart worm. A green and white version of a logo for Project Earth, an environmental group at the university, is graphically dynamic. A Franklin High School graduate who studied art at the Livonia Career Center, Mondro hopes to teach art one day.

"I love doing anything outdoors like biking tours, and I love animals," said Mondro. That love shows in Mondro's art.

Right now Gayle Killingbeck has her hands full caring for a 3 and 4- year old. The Livonia resident plans to stay home for a while to raise her family, but continue the decorative painting shown in the exhibit. Not to be missed is her blue and yellow sunflower study after Georgia O'Keefe. Four squares of canvas gradually abstract the flower till it's nothing more than geometric shapes. "Mother's Day," a framed wall piece, combines lithography, acrylic painting and three dried red roses. Killingbeck's rose theme is repeated in her decoratively painted table and chair.

Janice DeBaeke of Westland, has earned three degrees, the latest a bachelor of fine arts. For the last 10 years, she's exhibited her primarily functional ceramics around town in art fairs and student shows at Pewabic Pottery and Henry Ford Community College from where she transferred. A grandmother of two, DeBaeke plans to begin showing her work in galleries. Of note is her porcelain pot with lid featuring an enveloping abstract form. It is appropriately titled "Mother's Touch."

Daniel McEvilly of Livonia hopes to teach high school art in a couple of years. The Churchill High School graduate's most striking works are on a large scale. Paintings, many with dark palettes, vary in subject matter and style. Abstract, but representational, his works invoke thought while creating a mood. A primarily gray and white acrylic, "Life of a Man," was done for his 50- year old uncle who died of cancer last year. The focal point of the painting is a black leafless tree. Not to be missed are the found objects of steel, plastic and wood comprising a more than 5-foot sculpture. Titled "The Fire Within," it features a female figure with lapping flames of fire coming from below.

Learn to layer and blend colored pencil from two of the best artists utilizing the medium at a workshop Saturday and Sunday, May 18-19 at the Holiday Inn in Livonia. Hosted by the Colored Pencil Society of America, Detroit District Chapter 104, the day long sessions feature instruction by award winning artists Bonnie Auten and Janie Gildow. Tuition is $125. Deadline for registration is April 1.

Auten, whose work has been shown nationally and internationally, was awarded the Outstanding Recognition of Excellence Award at the 1995 International CPSA Exhibition. Gildow won First Place in the 1993 Masters of Colored Pencil National Competition.

CRAFTERS NEEDED

The Friends of Nankin Mills are looking for crafters to exhibit in their eighth annual show noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, June 2 on Edward Hines Drive in Westland. Deadline for application is April 30.

"We need a few good crafters. This is a fund raiser for the interpretive center focusing on a time line of the mill's history and area surrounding it," said show co-chair Denise Johnson.

"The history is important for future generations. We should all be stewards of history." Booth fees are $30 inside the tent, $25 outside. For more information call Johnson, (313) 261-3633 or Kathy Myers, (313) 421-7213.

Concerts feature the classics

Every holiday season, it seems as if there is a "Nutcracker" performance in every city. Having packed away all the "Nutcracker" costumes and sets, the Birmingham-Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra, conductor Felix Resnick, and the Michigan Classic Ballet Company, Artistic Director Mary C. Geiger, jointly present "Animal Crackers" 3 p.m. Saturday, March 30 at West Bloomfield High School, 4925 Orchard Lake Road.

This performance consists of ballet and music of two family masterpieces Prokoviev's "Peter and the Wolf" to be narrated by Sherry Margolis of WJBK Fox TV 2 Eyewitness News, and Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of the Animals" to be narrated by local producer and actor, G. Brian Kauffman.

Geiger choreographed ballet to both works and has joined forces with the BBSO to present this live stage production. "Peter and the Wolf" represents many children's first introduction to symphonic music and dance. As the brave Peter begins his wolf-hunting adventure, each character is represented by an instrument of the orchestra, delightfully combining fun and education. It's a classic tale enjoyed by young and old throughout the world.

"The Carnival of the Animals" combines Ogden Nash's hilarious poetry with tongue-in-cheek musical and dance depiction of animals like lions, birds, turtles and fish. "Camille St. Saens was racked with pains when people addressed him as 'Saint Saens.' He held the human race to blame, because it could not pronounce his name. So he turned with metronome and fife, to glorify other forms of life. Be quiet, please, for there begins, his salute to feathers, furs and fins." Thus begins "The Carnival of Animals."

The "Animal Crackers" Concert is underwritten in part by Pontiac Motor Division and Target Stores. Tickets are $15 adults, $12 children and senior citizens. To order tickets call the Michigan Classic Ballet Company (810) 661-4349 or the BBSO (810) 645-2276.

Margolis joined WJBK Fox 2 Eyewitness News team as a weekday anchor in September of 1984. She currently anchors "Eyewitness Morning" and "Eyewitness News at Noon." In 1993 she won an Emmy Award for Best News Anchor from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

G. Brian Kaufman is a producer, director, and actor who has worked on theatrical productions ranging from Shakespeare and grand opera to musical revues, to dinner theater to television and radio.

DINING

Sweet Lorraine's exercises perfection

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

Having a meal at Sweet Lorraine's is much more than an evening or afternoon out. It's an exercise in perfection.

Lorraine Platman - owner of the restaurants in Southfield, Madison Heights and Ann Arbor - is an admitted perfectionist. Some might consider that a bad trait, but for Platman it has helped her restaurants maintain their reputation for having quality service and food.

"Everything we do here, we try to do against the negative things that you might experience with other restaurants," Platman said.

The presentation of the food at Sweet Lorraine's is like a play on a stage, she explained. Visitors to her restaurants are greeted with "hello" instead of the curt "smoking or non smoking?" or "how many?" There are no bussers screaming across the floor. The servers welcome guests like they're the only ones who matter.

Platman makes sure that none of her dishes goes out with garnish. If it does, it isn't finished. She wants to make the show look finished.

Even the decor at Platman's restaurants is meticulous. The stores, like the 11 1/2-year-old Southfield location, are filled with conversation pieces - funky brightly colored salt and pepper shakers, lights that are held by little trapeze artists, heat-sensitive straws served with lemonade, and mannequins dressed with clothing from trendy Royal Oak stores.

Sweet Lorraine's locations:
- 29101 Greenfield (north of 12 Mile Road), Southfield, (810) 559-5985.
- 1451 W. 14 Mile Road, Madison Heights, (810) 585-0627.
- 303 Detroit St., Ann Arbor, (313) 665-0700.

All major credit cards are accepted.

When she was preparing to open her Ann Arbor location 2 1/2 years ago, she saw the new building as a palate on which to create yet another conversation piece.

Located in the lower level of a building near Farmers Market, the Ann Arbor store fills with light from the ceiling to floor windows. Artworks from Matisse and Monet adorn the walls. Some of the guests call ahead of time to make sure that they're not seated next to the classically painted nudes, Platman obliges.

"These are our guests. We want to make them comfortable."

Even her cafeteria-style location in Madison Heights, opened 13 1/2 years ago, has funky touches of its own.

"People don't have to notice everything. They notice this thing and that thing. Like in my Madison Heights store, I have gray napkins and people come in and say, 'they have grey napkins.'"

Platman, who moved to Michigan from Essex County, England, in 1965, is a self-taught chef. Having studied fine art and environmental science in college, she calls herself an "environmentally aware art chef."

"Actually I think about food all the time. My beginnings are in art so I visualize food as an art form. I'm very influenced by cuisine around the world," said Platman who runs the restaurants with her husband.

Her vivid imagination helps her create the dishes that has made her restaurant popular. Smoked Salmon Quesadillas ($6.95) - made with Norwegian smoked salmon combined with cream cheese, capers and spices then grilled in a large whole wheat flour tortilla - is a top choice as an appetizer.

Her Jamaican "jerk" steak marinated in hot Caribbean spices then broiled to order ($16.95), and her Hot Yellowfin Tuna Nicoise salad tossed with green beans, diced tomatoes, fresh herbs and Yukon gold potatoes ($12.95) are among the favorites of her clients.

She created her burgers ($5.95-$8.95) with flair as well. The Portebello Mushroom Burger is served with no-fat balsamic roasted garlic dressing and grilled served with caramelized onions, spicy aioli, tomatoes and baby organic greens.

A vegetarian-friendly restaurant, she offers a different vegetarian entree every night. On the menu, Platman goes out of her way to make sure that vegetarians know that her Caesar salads are made without egg yolks.

"We make things easier on guests. We don't do stuff that's easier for us."

What if guests still aren't happy?

"If they don't like it, we'll change it. I try not to be a trendy restaurant. I tend to appeal to people on a comfort level."

Singer's tape campaign wins rock star's notice

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

Jonny Polonsky didn't want to play the game of chance and hope that a record company would one day notice him. So he cut to the chase.

"I mailed tapes to anyone I could think of who might help me along the path of rock, particularly to those whose music I admired," Polonsky wrote in his one-page autobiography.

Polonsky didn't stop at writing his favorite rock stars. Sometimes tracked them down through directory assistance and called them up.

"I can't lie to you. I did do that," Polonsky said during a recent phone interview. "Most people are listed. It's something that seemed like it would be fun to do. ... I would use it as an excuse to bug certain rockers. ... Plus, I didn't want to put together a band and play the club circuit.

Jonny Polonsky: self made musician.

Through a mutual friend he met former Pixies lead singer Frank Black and asked him to listen to his demo tape.

"I was thrilled to learn of his enthusiasm for my music as I was a tremendous fan of his."

Black helped Polonsky find a manager, produce his demo tape, and get his record deal with American Recordings. The label mates are now touring together; they come to St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit on Thursday, March 28.

Polonsky played all the instruments and sang all the vocals on his appropriately named debut "Hi My Name is Jonny." But he hired a band to bring his Replacements-style pop rock on the road.

"It changes the songs for sure. There's no harmonies just a guitar, bass and drums. It makes it a little more rock pop than pop rock. At first I was a little Nazi-esque in wanting to make the songs sound like the record. I think they still do have the basic feel and everything."

On the 10 song, 24-minute CD "Hi My Name is Jonny" Polonsky sings about relationships ("Love Lovely Love," "Evil Scurvy Love," "Gone Away" and "In My Mind"), "post mortem astral projection" ("Uh-Oh"), a boating excursion turned fatal ("I Don't Know What To Dream At Night"), and "an ode to the joys of avoiding painful confrontation through napping" ("It's Good To Sleep").

His most recent relationship, which ended last fall, was "definitely an inspiration" for "Hi My Name is Jonny," the Chicago native explained.

"A lot of the songs are definitely written from a certain period of time for me. They're about a specific person, but not always all the way through. The core of the song might be inspired by something," Polonsky said.

"Hopefully they're just good songs. I like songs that everyone can relate to."

Jonny Polonsky opens for Frank Black at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 28, at St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Tickets are $10 in advance for the all-ages show. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT.

Band won't explain 'Just' video

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

"When the British rock band Radiohead comes to the Sanctum in Pontiac Friday, April 5, don't plan on any of the members revealing why a man lays down and refuses to get up in the video for "Just."

I asked guitarist Ed O'Brien during a recent phone conversation if he ever plans on explaining the plot and he answered bluntly.

"No. Never," O'Brien said with a slightly annoyed tone in his voice. "You wouldn't believe how many times we get asked that. We're thinking about wearing pins that say 'No Just Answers.'

The follow-up video, for "High and Dry," a crime mystery plot that takes place in a San Francisco diner with real patrons as extras, is just as intriguing. The secrets behind Radiohead's videos for its latest album "The Bends" are shoestring budgets and young art students who have no experience in making videos, O'Brien explained.

"Our trade is to perform live. We wised up on videos on (the debut album) "Pablo Honey. We were quite involved in them and we were deeply horrified," O'Brien said with a laugh.

"We've been lucky with the videos that we've had (for 'The Bends'). Although this album hasn't been huge, we've gotten quite a bit of MTV play. MTV told us, 'The videos have been good. We now so look forward to getting a Radiohead video.' When you watch MTV and stuff like that, you see the same directors. It has become a very boring format. It doesn't have to be like that. You don't need to spend hundreds of thousands of pounds to make a video."

The creative videos have helped push "The Bends" out of record store shelves nearly a year after its release. Like the Sanctum show, most of the gigs on Radiohead's tour are sold out. O'Brien chalked the slow climb up to the album's eclectic nature.

"There are no stand-out tracks on the album. There are different songs for different moods hence we haven't really had that one big track. That's exactly what we wanted. 'Creep' (from "Pablo Honey") was a stand-out track. We wanted to get away from that stand-out track (theory) and make a more cohesive album."

• Concert postponements: Spacehog's show originally scheduled for Tuesday, March 26, at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit was postponed due to weather problems in Minneapolis. The rescheduled date is Wednesday, May 22. Tickets for the March 26 show will be honored. ... Also, according to Geffen Records, the Garbage show scheduled for Sunday, April 14, at St. Andrew's is going to be postponed. For more information on both shows, call (313) 961-MELT.

• In the studio: The Alternative funk rock band Fathers of the Id is recording at Roscoe's Recording in Detroit. In mid-May the band is heading to Cleveland for the Undercurrents music festival ... The punk ska band The Exceptions are working on their follow-up to "No Shoes, No Shirt, No Exceptions" at the Tempermill studio in Ferndale.

• Best picks for the week: Big Block and the Howling Diablos come to the Magic Bag, 22918 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, at 8 p.m. Friday, March 29, (810) 544-3030 ... 'Girl 6' rates a 4 for Lee

By John Monaghan
Special Writer

On one level "Girl 6" returns Spike Lee to his roots as a low-budget filmmaker. Released last week with little of the director's usual hype, it serves up another slice of black urban life with an engaging cast and a hip-hop sense of humor.

You can also see it as a vanity project of sorts, garnering wide release with seemingly little effort. Where the cleverness and edge of "She's Gotta Have It" forced viewers to take notice, "Girl 6" works on only the slimmest of ideas.

Lee leaves himself open for comparison. Here Theresa Randle plays a struggling actress whose opening-scene audition requires her to read lines from that previous film. Humiliated after disrobing for a pushy director, she hooks up with a phone-sex job where she finds not only money but an appreciation of her talents.

She recreates herself daily, not only on the job but on the streets, donning a series of often outrageous outfits and wigs. She dreams about the black actresses that have gone before her, mimicking everyone from Dorothy Dandridge in "Carmen Jones" to Pam Grier's Foxy Brown.

As Girl 6, she soon becomes the most-requested operator, servicing a steady stable of clients. We see them, filmed mostly on video, calling from lonely bars, seaside villas, and corporate offices. The funniest likes to talk dirty while he stands in his underwear, bat in hand, before an elaborate baseball stadium backdrop.

The phone-sex idea is hardly novel. Robert Altman's "Short Cuts" had as one of its many characters a housewife who fulfilled callers' sexual fantasies while doing mundane chores like changing a diaper or nursing a child. Fine as a subplot it has yet to carry an entire film.

"Girl 6" is also a cautionary tale in which the fantasy encroaches on the actress' real life. A psychopath phones with plans to rape and kill her, even giving her address, a harrowing idea that Lee introduces then drops.

As aimless as the whole project ultimately becomes, you actually look forward to Lee's ubiquitous cameo, this time as a baseball memorabilia-collecting neighbor who serves as shoulder for her to cryon.

John Turturro shows up as a slimy theatrical agent along with Quentin Tarantino as a hot director known only as QT. Madonna, who has found her niche in the movies as a character actress, plays the boss who encourages the woman to work from home.

If nothing else, "Girl 6" serves as a showcase for the chameleon-like Randle. You're reminded how good she is when Halle Berry shows up (in yet another cameo), barely able to make a convincing job of playing herself. Super model Naomi Campbell also appears as a fellow operator, dressed in a tee-shirt reading "Models Suck," a good indication of the movie's often self-conscious humor.

The twenty-plus vintage Prince songs (and a few new ones) give the movie a welcome sense of nostalgia. It's a fitting combination, since the movie, in concept at least, recalls the days, a decade ago when Lee, like Prince, was more than just a symbol.

Following a recent foray into his childhood ("Crooklyn"), it's not surprising that Lee would again look back to his own past. Unfortunately, on a scale of one to 10, his work on "Girl 6" only rates about a four.

'Braveheart' victory a surprise

By Keely Wygonik
Staff Writer

Last month Lenny De Genio, a vice president at Bally's hotel-casino in Las Vegas, placed a bogus even-money bet that either "Braveheart" or "Il Postino" would win the Oscar for Best Picture. The prediction, made simply for entertainment purposes because the casinos don't take bets on the Oscars, was right on the money.

Mel Gibson's Scottish epic, "Braveheart" winner of Best Picture in the 68th annual Academy Awards, was not the favored choice of Observer & Eccentric readers who overwhelmingly picked "Apollo 13" to win for Best Picture. Nobody correctly answered all of the questions in our Observer & Eccentric Oscar contest. Three winners were randomly drawn from 10 entries, which contained the most correct answers. See chart for the winners.

First prize was awarded to Mrs. C. Cook of Birmingham who, with the exception of "Sense & Sensibility" for Best Picture, picked all of the winners.

Second prize went to Effie Mascarenhas of Southfield who predicted all of the winners, with the exception of Best Supporting Actor. Mascarenhas picked Ed Harris, but the winner was Kevin Spacey.

Our third prize winner was Suzze Tiernan of Livonia who picked all of the winners except Best Picture. Like Mrs. Cook, she predicted "Sense & Sensibility" would win.

The runners-up were: Rose Eickhoff of Livonia; Robert Lundberg of Owosso; Angela Mucci of Livonia; Charles Olschefske of Livonia; Nancy Korby of Farmington Hills; Richard S. Kosiba of Livonia; and Marjorie Sharp of Farmington Hills.

Thank-you to everyone who took the time to either send or fax us your entries. The response was unbelievable. We couldn't believe our good fortune at having so many readers enter the contest, and are already starting to plan next year's contest.

•Christine Lahti, a Birmingham native and graduate of Seaholm High School and Jana Sue Memel won an Oscar for "Liberman in Love," a Chanticleer Films production in the Short Film (Live Action) category.

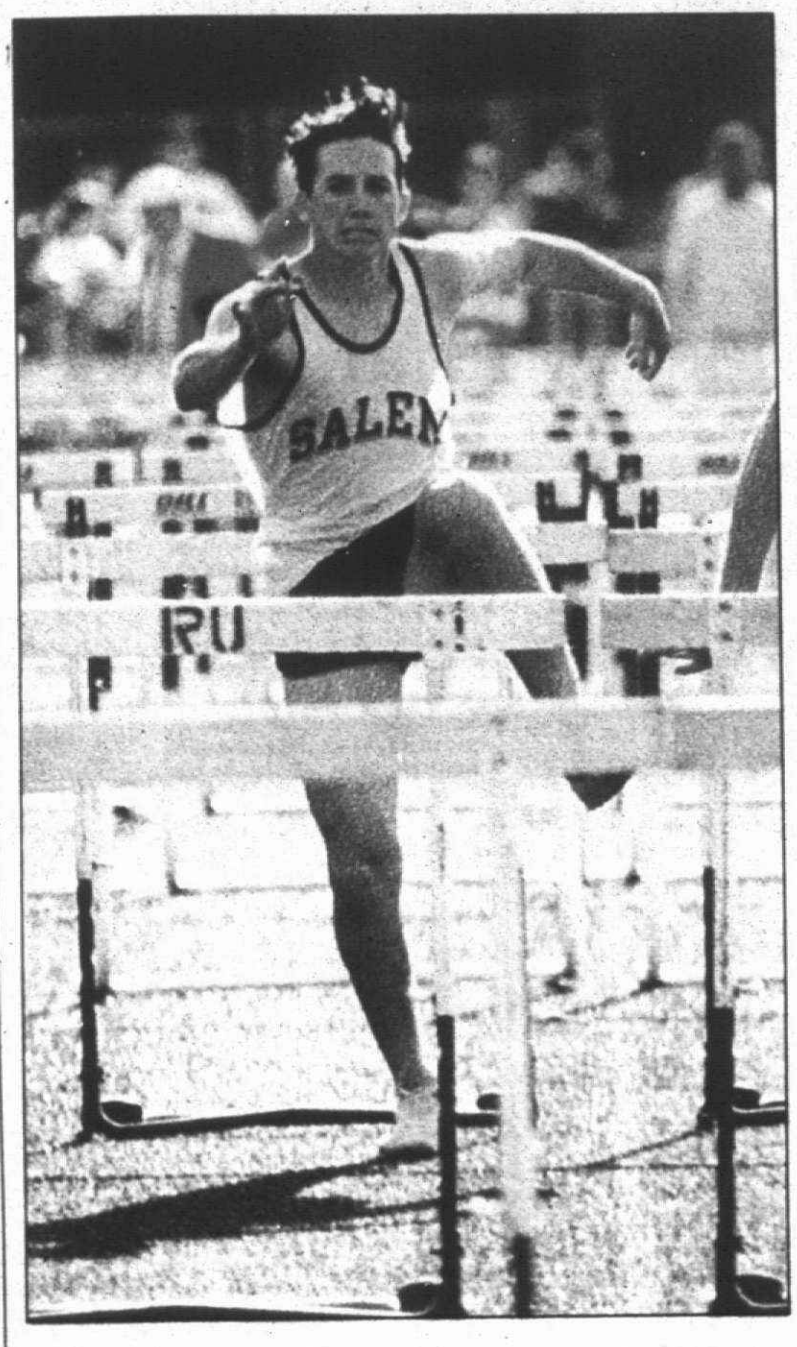
Salem aiming at WLAA title



Top hurdler: Dirk Schmiedel, a senior, is one of Salem's leading candidates in the hurdles and the long jump. The Rocks have lofty plans for this season.

Is it time for the Plymouth Salem boys track team to go the distance?

This may have to be the year the Rocks win the Western lakes Activities Association, according to fifth-year coach Geoff Baker.

Salem returns two of the area's best long distance runners in seniors Jared Binecki and Scott Pengelly. With an improved supporting cast, Baker believes the Rocks will improve on last year's third place finish in the league standings.

"We have about 12 juniors and seniors and the rest are underclassmen," Baker said. "But we have quality in those juniors and seniors and if they can pass it on to the younger ones, we'll be good for several years to come.

"This may have to be the year for us, however, because Binecki and Pengelly will be very hard to replace."

Salem didn't lose a lot from last year's team. Besides middle distance runners Andrew McDonald and Steve Karmann, the Rocks lost Rocky Johnson, a state-qualifier in the discus and shot put.

There's no question that the strength of the team will be in the distance. Binecki was the WLAA champion in the mile run and second in the two-mile last season. He also qualified for the state meet in both with season-best times of 4:26 (mile) and 9:50 (two-mile).

Pengelly, who is coming off a strong cross country season, qualified for the state meet last season in the two-mile, but a late-season ankle injury kept him sidelined.

Joining the two seniors in distance will be sophomores Teono Wilson and Japbir Gill, junior Greg Mitchell and freshman John Little.

"We're going to have to make sure we don't run our distance runners to death," Baker said. "We did that last year and it took its toll."

A pair of sophomores - Dave Hester and Karl Brandenberg - will make up for the loss of Johnson in the throwing events. The two will also be important because Salem doesn't have any pole vaulters.

Hester broke Salem freshman records last season in the discus (139 feet) and in the shot put (43-feet-9). About seven other throwers will help the duo.

"There are some big shoes to fill, but I'm sure that Dave can do it," Baker said.

The Rocks were weak in the long- and high-jump last season, but Baker sees improvement. Junior Andres Lopez will hope to use some of his basketball ability to help him be the top jumper.

Joining Lopez will be fellow hoopster Bahvin Patel, a sophomore. Hester and sophomore Jeff McKian will also jump both events.

Junior Mike Rodriguez, senior Dirk Schmiedel and senior Kyle Dylsizen will specialize in the long-jump. Dylsizen has fully recuperated from a serious injury last season, when his head banged off a concrete a landing.

"Our jumpers are young, but we're going to need points out of them to make a run for the championship," Baker said. "We have to have them jump as much as possible so they'll be ready for the conference meet."

Schmiedel and Hester are the leading 110-meter high hurdle returnees. Junior Rob Hawley and sophomore Mike Discher will compete in both the 110 and 300 hurdles, as will senior Dan Johnson - the WLAA's second fastest 300 hurdler last season.

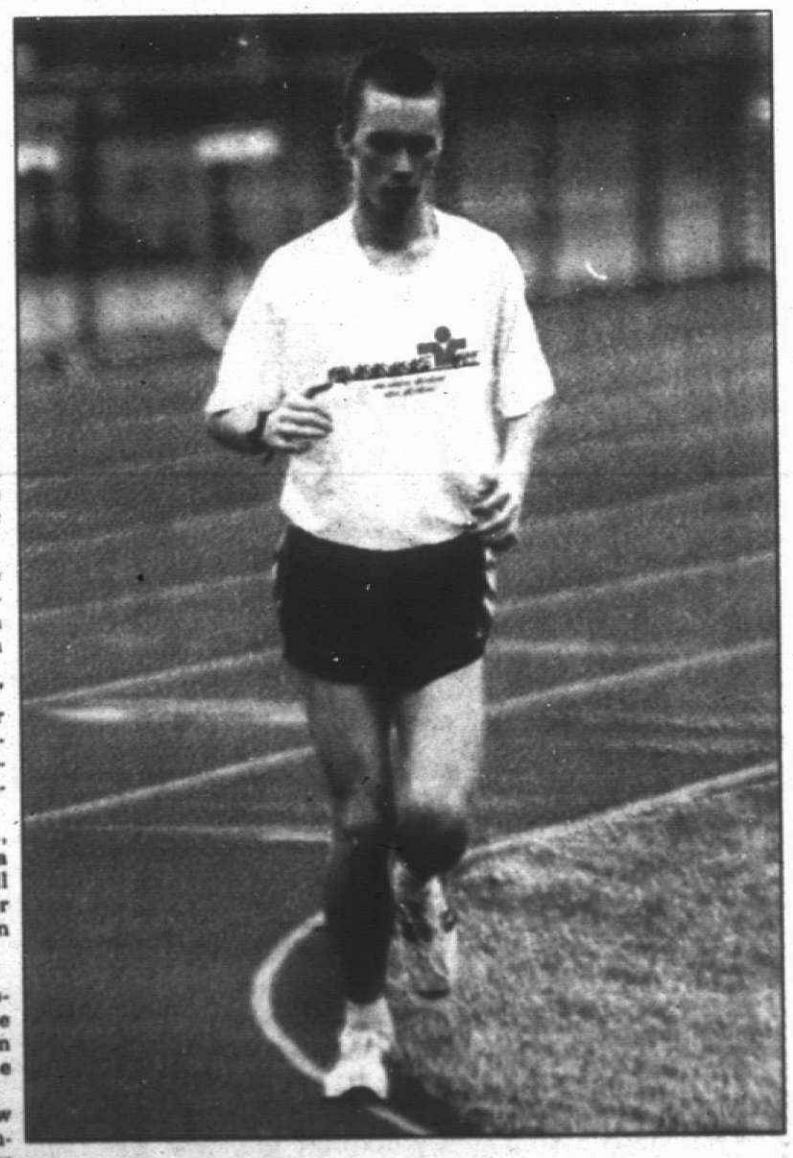
A young but experienced group of sprinters will help the Rocks improve on last season's performances. The group includes junior Lawrence Nunn, sophomores Kevin Conte and Scott Kingslien, and freshman Chris Mason.

Perhaps the most versatile runner will again be senior Jason Barylski, who may see action in each event from the 100-meter dash all the way to the one-mile run.

Junior Scott Loewe and sophomores Ian Searcy and Charlie Schmidt will run with Barylski in the middle distances.

"We're definitely a better team than we were last season," Baker said. "My goal is the conference championship. Westland John Glenn, Farmington Hills Harrison and Northville will all be tough challengers."

Canton looking for better things in '96



Distance threat: Ian Bedford will help make Canton formidable in the distant events, and hopefully help the Chiefs regain their form after last season.

BY NEAL ZIPSER
STAFF WRITER

The key to success for this season's Plymouth Canton boys track team may be health.

Even though it sounds simple enough, the injury bug was something that plagued the Chiefs last season. And it may be back.

What promises to be a promising year for Canton has already started off with an injury. Senior Chris Benskey, who was to be Canton's leading thrower, broke one of his legs a month ago. His status to compete at all this spring is questionable.

But coach Bob Richardson, now in his eighth season at the helm of the Chiefs, is still optimistic that his team will improve on last season's 2-5 record and eighth place finish at the Western Lakes Activities Association meet.

"We have the talent this season, so staying healthy will be a key," Richardson said. "Some teams that were strong last season lost some key people to graduation. I believe this league will be very competitive and we could finish in the top five - perhaps even the top three."

The reason for Richardson's optimism is a strong balance of upperclassmen and lower classmen on the 40-plus member squad.

In addition, graduation didn't significantly hurt the Chiefs. Only three seniors left, the most vital being the team's leading thrower, Jon Gallinger.

Still, the throwing events looked to be strong before the loss of Benskey. Sophomore Kevin Kiel is now the team's top thrower. Junior Keith Balcon and senior Mark Wolf - both first-year members of the team - will add some much-needed support.

"We thought we had two good returning throwers, but now we only have one," Richardson said. "We are fortunate, however, to have two guys come out for the team, and they are both big, strong kids."

The top long jumpers are back, led by senior Jim Chefan, who recorded a leap of 19-feet, 6-inches last season. Junior Dave Koshizawa, senior Curt Davidson and sophomore Jason Falardeau also return.

Chefan is the top returning high jumper (6-feet), too. Junior Mike Zdziebko and sophomore Eric Larsen also return.

Zdziebko, and juniors B.J. Page and Jeff Soash, will run the 110- and 300-meter hurdles. Senior Ben Nelson will focus his attention on the 300 hurdles.

"This is a good group of hurdlers," Richardson said. "It's the third year for all of them and fourth for Nelson. We definitely are looking forward to when we could run the shuttle hurdle relays."

Nelson, Chefan, Davidson, Felardeau and Koshizawa lead a deep group of sprinters. Junior Bill Iler, sophomore Rob Lynn and senior Steve Putala will also compete in the short distances.

A newcomer to the team, sophomore Kwaku Dankwa, may be the fastest member of the Canton team and may make some noise in the sprints, according to Richardson.

Sophomore Jon Page will show how versatile a runner he is by running the 400 and 800 runs. Others who will run middle distances and possible the 1,600 are Iler, seniors Craig Brunskole, Evan Crocket and Andy Hoisington and junior Adam DeGiorgio.

Senior Ian Bedford, who was Canton's leading scorer last season, is the team's top distance runner. Bedford, who qualified for the state meet in the 3,200 last season, recently finished fifth in the state in the 3,200 at an indoor meet held in Ann Arbor.

Senior Ryan Portrey, juniors Jason Vergari and Bobby Mayer, sophomore Shaun Moore and freshman Jason Rutter will try to help Bedford score points in the distance events.

"Last year, we did our best in the distance, but I think we'll see improvements in the sprints and the hurdle events," Richardson said.

"The throwing events, which we're usually strong in, are still a question. And it doesn't help that we don't have a pole vaulter. We're forced to start a lot of meets down 9-0."

Richardson also believes the addition of assistant coaches Paul Bedford, Jeremy Rheault and Terry Barnhart are paying immediate dividends in practice.

CANTON SPORTS SCENE

Sparkling performance

Kelly Holmes, the Plymouth Canton graduate who leads the University of Michigan softball team, was named to the all-tournament team at the Lady Seminole Invitational, hosted by Florida State March 15-17.

Holmes led the Lady Wolverines to a school-record six-straight shutout. U-M outscored its opponents 56-6 in the tournament, collecting 74 hits while allowing 32. Holmes was 3-1 in the eight-game tourney, tossing a no-hitter in a 7-0 triumph over Illinois-Chicago and a one-hitter in the Wolverines' 11-0 quarterfinal victory over Indiana.

A junior, Holmes is 8-4 for the season with a team-best 1.65 earned run average over 72.7 innings. She has a 35-16 career record at U-M with 14 shutouts. The Wolverines improved to 16-7 overall with their 7-1 tourney run.

Locke an academic star

Fred Locke, a sophomore at Michigan State from Plymouth Salem, was named to the all-Big Ten academic team. A swimming standout for the Rocks, Locke splashed to a season-best time of 48.92 in the 100-yard freestyle at the Big Ten Championships Feb. 17. His best time in the 50 free (21.82) came Nov. 30.

Locke was even better in the classroom, posting a 3.88 grade-point average with a major in pre-medicine. MSU was 5-4 overall in dual meets, 2-4 in the Big Ten, finishing ninth at the conference finals.

Crusaders drop game

On Friday, host Point Loma Nazarene (Calif.) improved to 17-10-1 overall, clinching its own Bombs at the Beach Baseball Tournament with a 10-5 triumph over Madonna University in Game No. 8.

Jeff Gutt had a two-run homer and a single for the Fighting Crusaders, who fall to 7-14 overall. Mark Serra (1-1), who worked into the fifth inning, suffered the loss.

Earlier in the day, Pacific Lutheran (8-5) downed the Fighting Crusaders, 8-5, with a 14-hit attack. Gutt had two hits, including a double along with teammate Delano Voletti. Pitcher Tim Holland (1-2) suffered the loss.

On Thursday, Madonna rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to beat Pacific, 7-2, as Dan Pydyn (3-1) scattered 12 hits over seven innings to pick up the win. Pete Quinn had three hits, while Jason Renkiewicz, Kurt Wilczynski, Eric Marcotte and Tim Kasubowski added two apiece.

On Wednesday, Madonna collected just three hits in a 4-1 loss to Pacific. Matt Baxter belted a two-run homer for the winners, pinning the loss on starter Craig Benedict (0-3).

Never-say-die Saginaw overtakes Lathrup

By Marty Budner
Staff Writer

■ CLASS A

Sitting near the end of the player's bench, Greg Grays leaned forward with a blank look in his eyes. Harold Allison — arms folded and head angled wildly to the side — slumped backward in his chair. Reggie Butler's 6-foot-9 frame drooped dejectedly on the scorer's table. In stunned silence and with towel draped over the head, Mike Chappell listened to consoling words from assistant coach Chris Grier.

This wasn't the way it was supposed to end for the Southfield-Lathrup basketball team.

The Chargers advanced to the Class A championship game, only to have their dream of bringing home the school's first state title swept away by a swift Saginaw High squad that simply refused to give up. It was a bitter loss to swallow after such a pulsating playoff performance.

Lathrup, which had never won a regional title prior to this year, lost Saturday's championship game to Saginaw, 67-60, at Michigan State University's Breslin Center before an entertained crowd of 11,342.

The loss snapped a 13-game winning streak and left the Chargers cherishing the memories of a 23-4 season record.

"It was kind of a dream run for Southfield-Lathrup, and the dream almost happened," said Lathrup coach Bob Herm. "We wanted it bad. It would have been a great, great victory. What a great experience."

Lathrup's championship hopes took a fateful turn midway through the fourth quarter.

The Chargers built a 52-43 lead with 5:48 remaining on a triple by Grays. But that would be their last basket until Grays made a four-point play four minutes later.

In between, Saginaw tallied 18 unanswered points to turn a nine-point deficit into a nine point advantage.

The Trojans began that run with three consecutive three-point plays to tie the score at 52-all. Then, as if Saginaw needed any more momentum, Chappell fouled out of the game at the 4:20 mark.

Saginaw scored nine more points and the Chargers, without Chappell's steadying influence on the court, played totally out of sync. Chappell watched helplessly from the bench as the Chargers could not mount the rally they needed.

"There was nothing I could do," said Chappell. "Even after I fouled out I was confident we could still win. I did not anticipate spending the last four minutes of my last game on the bench."

Herm agreed Chappell's fifth foul proved pivotal.

"At first, right when he got the foul you know we're in trouble," said Herm. "But we played without him before. We played against West Bloomfield without him and you're just hoping maybe you can weather the storm and some miracle can happen. We weren't going to give up.

"We were hoping to get it going, but what happened is that we tried to force the ball into Greg (Grays) a little too much," he said. "We were still in it. We had a shot, but it's very disappointing."

Lathrup, which rallied to a 77-67 semifinal victory Friday over Wayne Memorial, came out red hot against Saginaw.

The Chargers canned five of their first six shots and surged to a 14-3 lead. They finished the quarter at a 71 percent shooting clip and took a 26-17 advantage into the second quarter. They hiked to margin to 34-24 by halftime.

The Trjoans used a 16-4 run in the third quarter to take their first lead of the game. However, Chappell hit a three-point shot late in the quarter and Lathrup clung to a 46-43 after three quarters.

Lathrup increased the advantage to 52-43, but Saginaw's Jason Peoples canned a three-pointer and that was the beginning of the brilliant Trojan run that would lead to their first state crown after four runners-up titles over the years.

Grays finished with 21 points to lead the Chargers and Chappell was right behind with 18. Allison, who had a team-high 11 rebounds, chipped in with nine points.

Despite loss in the Class A final, Chargers were winners

By Marty Budner
Staff Writer

Mike Chappell will be remembered as one of Southfield-Lathrup's all-time premier basketball players.

The 6-foot-8 Duke-bound senior not only finished as the school's career scoring leader, but also will be remembered for his exemplary off-court conduct.

Chappell signed autographs on his way to the locker room just minutes after his team lost Saturday's state championship game to Saginaw, 67-60. It certainly was a tough loss for the Chargers to digest, but Chappell and the rest of his teammates handled the disappointment with dignity and class.

Chappell, of course, was a key figure in Lathrup's rmarch to its first Class A state championship game appearance.

The Chargers had never won a regional title prior to this season. They finished the year with a 23-4 overall overall record — the third time in school history they've won at least 20 games.

Lathrup lost three games during the season — two before the Christmas break to Royal Oak Kimball and Clarkston. However, the Chargers regrouped to take 14 of their last 15 regular-season outings.

Lathrup opened the Class A district tournament at Berkley with a victory over Birmingham Brother Rice — a team that had concerned Lathrup coach Bob Herm because of the Warriors' methodical, disciplined style of play. The Chargers dominated, however, and went on to take the district championship over the host Berkley Bears.

Lathrup defeated Bloomfield Hills Lahser in the regional opener before shocking No. 1-ranked Detroit Pershing for the regional championship. Junior guard Greg Grays won that game with a last-second jump shot.

The Chargers registered a similar victory in the Class A state quarterfinal game against Clarkston. The Wolves, who defeated the Chargers by two points earlier in the year, had Lathrup on the ropes again before Chappell hit a last-second shot to send his team on to the Final Four.

Lathrup won its Class A semifinal game over Wayne Memorial, 77-67, to advance to the final against Saginaw. The season-ending defeat snapped a 13-game Lathrup winning streak.

"The season as a whole was unbelievable," said Chappell, Lathrup's second tallest player — to 6-9 teammate Reggie Butler — in school history.

"This game was disappointing, but I'm sure after a few weeks when we look back on all the accomplishments this year we'll see that we've done a lot — a lot that most teams have never accomplished."

Chappell also praised his teammates after Saturday's loss.

"I'm disappointed in the loss, but I'm proud of all my teammates for coming along this far," he said. "This is the first time anything like this has happened to our school. I'm just really proud of the way my teammates have played over the last three months."

Lathrup coach Bob Herm also was proud of his team.

"I don't think the press here that hasn't seen us all year long saw the real Southfield-Lathrup High School and the things that we've done all year," he said. "The high-lob dunks, and so on and so forth. We didn't do it in the tournament, but what a great bunch of athletes. I was proud to be coaching these kids."

■ CLASS A NOTES

■ THE FOUL PROBLEM: One big factor in Lathrup's loss to Saginaw was the foul trouble Mike Chappell faced throughout the second half.

Chappell was saddled with his third foul at the 5:51 mark of the third quarter and picked up his fourth with 6:19 left in the game. He sat out for 41 seconds before reentering at the 5:26 mark.

Chappell picked up his fifth foul at the 4:20 mark with the score tied at 52-all. He had to play tentatively most of the second half because of the foul problems.

Coaches Bob Herm of Lathrup and Marshall Thomas of Saginaw agreed Chappell's absence was a key.

"With five minutes to go I figured he's going to have to play, and hopefully play long enough and be in there, but it didn't happen that way," said Herm, who had never logged a 20-win season in 10 years as Lathrup's head coach.

"(Chappell fouling out) was big-time for us," said Thomas. "I had told the guys prior to the game about Greg (Grays) and Mike. You can be right in their faces and they'll still get their shots off.

"Mike's just a great player," he said. "Not only can he put it on the floor, but he can also make the three-pointer."

And Chappell's view of the foul trouble?

"After the third foul, I kind of shied away from any contact," said Chappell. "I didn't want to pick up any cheap fouls. After I picked up the fourth foul, I should have let the fifth foul go."

■ REMEMBERING GINA: The Chargers played the entire state tournament with the letters 'G.W.' printed on their right arms.

The letters stood for Gina Wright, the junior varsity girls basketball coach, Lathrup graduate and ex-Charger basketball star who was murdered over the winter. Wright's brother Larry was a member of this year's Chargers squad.

"The team kind of rallied around that, with Larry being on the team and they wore (those letters) on their arms," said Herm. "It kind of helped bring us together as a team.

"Some days during this tournament I thought maybe she (Gina) was the one helping guide us through it," he said. "We kind of had a dream run for Southfield-Lathrup, and the dream almost happened."

■ FINAL FOUR ODDS & ENDS: Lathrup defeated Wayne Memorial in the Class A semifinal game on Friday, 77-67. Senior Reggie Butler played a great game against Memorial with 19 points and a team-high 12 rebounds. Many called it his best game of the season; Senior forward Harold Allison had five blocked shots against Memorial; Chappell and Grays were Lathrup's top scorers in both the semifinal and final games as they combined for 82 of the team's 137 total points; Chappell and Grays were the team's scorers, but Grays appreciated the roles Allison and Butler played this year. "I don't know where we would have been without Allison and Butler," said Grays. "They did the grunt work. They did a lot of the little things that don't get recognized."; Junior guard Brandon Barrett led Lathrup in assists over the final two games with six.

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer

Michigan State University senior wrestler Jed Kramer interrupted a telephone conversation late Monday night to pay for some pizza at the front door.

Pizza? Up late? On a Monday night?

Is this really Jed Kramer, the guy who prides himself on being disciplined in the wrestling room, classroom and at home?

Kramer happened to be entertaining his brother, freshman Ezra Kramer, a member of the MSU wrestling team who lives in a dormitory across campus. Since he just finished a successful career and Ezra has at least three years left in his, Jed wasn't feeling guilty about eating his share.

"Now that the season is over, I guess I can eat all I want," said Kramer, a 1991 Redford Thurston graduate.

Kramer finished his career with successive berths in the NCAA Tournament following grueling competition in the Big Ten, long known as the best wrestling conference in the country.

Kramer, who wrestled at 134 pounds, placed fifth in the Big Ten meet this year after taking sixth place last year.

He was 27-21 as a senior with seven pins to finish his career with a 71-81 overall record. He had a 1-2 record in the NCAA Tournament, just missing his chance to place among the top six.

Kramer opened with a 10-4 loss to Steven Schmidt, the third seed from Oklahoma State University.

"I wrestled well, not well enough to beat him," Kramer said. "I was getting desperate toward the end and ended up giving up a few points."

Kramer won a 10-1 major decision in the second round against Missouri's Emory, giving the Spartans 1.5 points toward their seventh-place finish in the team standings. He bowed out of the tournament with a 5-3 loss to his regular nemesis from the Big Ten, Northwestern's , who ended up taking fifth place.

Ironically, Kramer defeated 6-4 the last time the two met at the Big Ten meet, earning Kramer fifth place there.

Still, Kramer is satisfied how his career turned. He was one of four MSU co-captains during the 1995-96 season.

"To go in and wrestle varsity at a Division I school, that's even an accomplishment," said Kramer, who finished third in Class B as a senior at Thurston at 119 pounds. "Now that my career has ended, I realize I accomplished a lot."

Kramer carries a 2.8 grade point average majoring in education, which is impressive considering his busy schedule. Along with being a member of the wrestling team, Kramer is president of Champions For Christ, a Christian group that meets regularly on campus.

"It helps me grow to be a stronger Christian and better person overall," Kramer said.

His schedule took on a new dimension this semester as a student teacher for seventh and eighth grade math at nearby Haslett Middle School.

Some of the students, used to seeing Kramer in a suit ad tie, also got to see his other side when they attended some of his matches at MSU. Some even prepared banners, which in this case is the equivalent to leaving an apple on the teacher's desk.

"At school, I'd dress up real professionally and they'd call me, 'Mr. Kramer,' " Kramer said. "It was funny to hear them at some of the meets saying, 'Go, Mr. Kramer.' "

Tom Minkel took over as MSU coach the same year Kramer arrived on campus in 1991-92. One of Minkel's trademarks is having a well-conditioned team, which suited Kramer well.

Kramer was a cross country runner in high school and regularly won preseason distance competitions with the MSU wrestling team.

An MSU wrestling practice might be overwhelming for someone who is out of shape.

"It's a very intense practice," Kramer said. "We practice only in a T-shirt and shorts, not a sweat shirt, and I can remember losing six pounds once in practice. You sweat a lot."

Kramer wrestled as a freshman at 118 pounds with the MSU varsity before being redshirted as a sophomore, mostly to catch up to some of the more experienced wrestlers in the Big Ten.

He was able to recover in about five weeks from a partial medial collateral ligament tear in his knee in the summer of '94. He also can laugh about a tough stretch a couple years ago when he competed despite sustaining stitches in his head in two straight matches sandwiched around an ankle sprain in practice.

Kramer, who attended eight different schools because of family moves before settling in at Thurston in the ninth grade, is keeping his teaching options open. The Kramer family once lived in South Carolina and Jed had a fondness for warm weather.

He feels he can help make a difference as both a teacher and coach.

"I hear of gangs starting up and what they're thinking, I'm not sure. Some parents, I don't think some care what their kids do. Some don't want to be overbearing and have no rules," said Kramer, who carried a 3.45 GPA in high school. "Unless you see successful people having fun being disciplined and motivated, you don't have the motivation to lead an upward life."

EXPANDING AWARENESS
Both car manufacturers and the car buying public know a good thing when they see it. All passenger cars manufactured after September 1, 1997 will be required to come equipped with air bags for both the driver and front seat passengers; however, most car manufacturers are not waiting. Nearly all are now installing driver-side air bags (as well as passenger-side air bags, in many cases). In all new cars, sports utility vehicles, and light trucks. Why the rush? Air bags save lives. According to the National Center for Statistics and Analysis, air bags have saved more than 911 lives in this country since 1987, and 374 in the last year alone. The insurance institute for Highway Safety reports that there are 23% fewer deaths than expected among drivers equipped with air bags. And, these numbers do not even address the thousands who are saved from serious and debilitating injury.
Even if your car does have an airbag, there's no substitute for the safety advantage gained by wearing your seatbelt. At HOLIDAY CHEVROLET INC., your one-stop full-service facility, we are a smaller dealership which enables us to give more personalized service to each of our customers. Phone: 474-0500. We are conveniently located at 30250 Grand River. Sales Hours: Mon.-Thurs. 8:30-9:00; Fars. & Wed. 8:30-6:30; Fri. 8:30-6:00. Service Hours: Mon.-Fri. 7:00-6:00. Parts: Mon.-Fri. 8:00-6:00; Body Shop: Mon.-Fri. 8:00-6:00. When you need quality, service, and integrity, come to us, because we stand behind every car we sell and every service we provide.

NOTE: The National Highway Traffic Safety Admin. station advises that seat belts remain the main source of protection in any kind of accident and that air bags offer supplemental protection only in front-end collisions.

Forward talent takes center stage

By Brad Emons

This year's All-Area hockey team has an offensive look to it.

Or getting down to brass tacks, these guys can put the biscuit in the basket.

The top six first-team selections are forwards, also the most valuable players on their respective clubs.

Livonia Churchill coach Jeff Hatley, who guided the Chargers to a 20-4-1 overall record, the Suburban High School Hockey League crown and a berth in the Class A regional finals (losing 4-0 to eventual state champion Trenton), has been named Observerland Coach of the Year.

During his four-year reign as the Chargers' coach, Hatley has compiled a 67-23-4 record, including two SHSHL titles and two runner-up finishes. Churchill has cracked the statewide Class A rankings (coaches poll) in each of his four seasons.

Introducing the 1995-96 All-Observer hockey team.

FIRST TEAM

Kyle McNeilance, senior, Stevenson: The 5-foot-10, 170-pound winger is a first-team repeat selection, scoring 44 goals and adding 42 assists for a school-record 86 (breaking former Michigan State standout Frank Finn's 20-year mark) this season.

The center and right winger had a total of 207 career points (104 goals and 103 assists).

"Kyle plays with a lot of emotion and enthusiasm," Stevenson coach Mike Harris said. "He has good speed and he's very aggressive. He doesn't mind the hitting game. He has it all.

"He's just a coach's dream and will be a success at any level. He can go to Junior A and has ability to play at the Division I level."

McNeilance was also the leading scorer in the Suburban circuit with 62 points as he was named first-team All-SHSHL. He was also named to the Class A All-State team.

Eric Bratcher, junior, Redford CC: The Shamrock center was one of the top scoring threats in the Michigan Metro High School Hockey League this season.

In 23 games, Bratcher had 18 goals and 21 assists as CC (16-6-3 overall) reached the state Class A quarterfinals before failing to eventual state champion Trenton.

Bratcher is a two-year performer for CC who earned honorable mention All-State honors this year.

"Eric is a great stick handler and a good skater," CC coach Gordie St. John said. "He developed into a leader for our club this year."

Dave Higham, senior, Churchill: The senior is no stranger to All-Area teams. He was also a first-team selection in golf.

The right winger finished his senior year with 49 points on 18 goals and 31 assists en route to honorable mention All-State and first-team All-SHSHL honors.

Not only did he play on Churchill's top line all three seasons, Higham also played a key role for the Chargers this season on the power-play and penalty-killing units.

The Class A individual finalist will play golf this fall at either Eastern Michigan or the University of Detroit Mercy.

Ed Kruschka, senior, Franklin: The left winger was the Patriots' team captain the past two seasons and a three-year letter winner.

He finished the year with 31 goals and 29 assists. Kruschka was also voted to the Coaches All-State team. For his career, he finished with 130 points, seventh best in school history.

"Ed has been a true leader on and off the ice, and a real pleasure to coach," said Franklin's Terry Jobbitt of the All-SHSL pick. "Ed gives everything on every shift and always thinks of the team. He will be very hard to replace next year."

Chris Kiehler, senior, Churchill: The center has more going for him than hockey.

He was recently honored as one of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's Scholar-Athlete Award winners and the All-State Academic Team.

In golf, Kiehler was medalist in the Western Lakes tourney and helped Churchill earn a berth in the state finals.

This season, Kiehler scored 25 goals and added 28 assists for 53 points.

"Chris has a sound all-around game," Hatley said. "He has good vision on the ice and knows when to finish around the net. He plays well in the defensive zone, too."

Kiehler plans to play college golf at either Michigan State or Miami of Ohio.

Jeff Wollschlager, senior, Redford CC: The Shamrock team captain is a two-year starter who scored 15 goals and added 13 assists in 23 games.

The 5-10, 163-pound right winger is a two-year performer who played on CC's top line this season.

"Jeff always gave 110 percent," St. John said. "He's the hardest worker of anybody we had. He has tremendous speed and played hurt most of the year.

"He has the ability to make people around him better. And he virtually had no penalties."

Work ethic propels swimmers

By C.J. Risak
Sports Editor

Individually speaking, the 1996 boys swim season was a remarkable mirror of past seasons.

Once again, Plymouth Salem dominated the Western Lakes Activities Association. But once again, the Rocks did it with depth rather than individuals.

That's evident when examining the '96 all-Observer team. A year ago, Salem put three relays on the first team but just two individuals. This season, the Rocks have one relay and three individuals.

And yet, they still rank as the top team in the WLAA, the league that dominates all-Observer selections (Redford Catholic Central had two second-team selections; they were the only non-WLAA swimmers chosen).

There are only two individual repeats from '95: Livonia Churchill's Mark Campbell and CC's Kevin Reinke.

Best team effort of the season? Although Salem again won the WLAA title, the most impressive team at season's end was Livonia Stevenson, which edged North Farmington by a point at the WLAA championships.

This with a team of 13.

First team

200-yard medley relay: North Farmington sophomore Dan Gabriel, senior Jason Speer, junior Patrick Duthie and senior Phil Zald qualified for state meet in the final dual meet of the season, then finished second at the WLAAs to Stevenson. They gained some measure of vengeance with a ninth place at the state finals in 1:39.31, the fastest time posted by an Observerland team this season. They also set a North pool record.

"We always had strong aspirations for our medley relay," said North coach Pat Duthie. " The four young men that swam on this relay each qualified for the state meet in the individual events of their strokes."

Mark Dettling, Plymouth Salem, 200-yard freestyle: A junior, Dettling was second in the 200 free at the WLAA meet to double-winner Mark Campbell of Livonia Churchill and was first in the 100 butterfly. He qualified for state meet in the latter.

"Mark has been a valuable swimmer the past three years with his versatility to swim whatever was needed for the team," said Salem coach Chuck Olson.

Dan Belanger, Farmington, 200-yard individual medley: A senior, Belanger qualified for state and finished second in the 200 IM at the WLAA finals (2:01.94). His best time was 2:00.8 in the IM, he also had a 59.38 in the 100 breaststroke.

"Dan's performance this year was outstanding," said Farmington coach Ross Bandy. "This season was a cap to four excellent years at Farmington High School."

Jason Speer, North Farmington, 50-yard freestyle: Speer finished second at the WLAA finals in both the 50 (22.58) and 100 (49.00) freestyle. His best clocking in the 50 (22.49) was a state qualifier. He also placed sixth in the 50 and fourth in the 100 at the Oakland County meet.

"Jason was an outstanding leader in and out of the pool for the Raiders," said Duthie. "He was our 'go-to' guy' when we needed a big swim, such as anchoring our winning 400 freestyle relay in the WLAA championship meet." For his efforts, Speer was named North's most valuable swimmer for the '95-96 season.

Jeff Thomas, Farmington, diving: After a mediocre performance at the WLAA finals at which he finished fourth (428.40 points), Thomas, a junior, busted loose to place third at the state regional meet and ninth at state. His top six-dive performance was an Observerland-best 265.10 points.

"Jeff has had an outstanding season," said Farmington assistant coach Kurt Campbell. "Both his diving and leadership skills have grown by leaps and bounds. He continues to be a solid addition to the Farmington team."

Tim Buchanan, Plymouth Salem, 100-yard butterfly: Only a sophomore, Buchanan placed second to teammate Mark Dettling in the 100 fly at the WLAA meet (55.91). He saved his best for last, however, finishing eighth at the state finals with a career-best 53.27. That and his performance in the 500 free (5:00.96, sixth in WLAA) earned Buchanan co-MVP award at Salem.

"Tim had a fine sophomore season following a great freshman year, but he really stepped up his performance at state meet with six outstanding swims," said Olson.

Mark Campbell, Livonia Churchill, 100-yard freestyle: A self-described big meet swimmer, Campbell - a senior - proved it by winning both the 100 and 200 free at the WLAA finals. At the state meet, he further improved his stature by placing eighth in the 100 free (47.76) and ninth in the 200 free (1:44.04).

"Mark has been one of the most talented swimmers Churchill HS has ever had," said Chargers' coach Ken Stark. "Mark is an excellent big-meet swimmer and has left his mark on the league and at state meet."

Kyle Petroskey, Plymouth Salem, 500-yard freestyle: A versatile swimmer, Petroskey was at his best in the 500 free, an event in which he scored in at state meet, placing 10th (4:54.65). Nobody in Observerland had a faster time, but the junior also contributed to Salem's success in the 200 IM (seventh at WLAA meet) and in the 100 breaststroke. He was third in the 500 at the WLAA finals.

"Kyle had a great dual-meet season, in which he proved why he had been chosen most improved swimmer in 1995 by showing his versatility," said Olson. "Kyle was chosen Most Valuable Swimmer for 1996."

200-yard freestyle relay: What may concern opponents most about this Salem quartet is that just one of them - John McLenaghan - is a senior. Nick Corden and Buchanan are sophomores and Dettling is a junior. They took second at the WLAA finals (1:31.73) and finished 15th at state (1:30.31).

"It's an outstanding foursome with three of four returning to finish in 1997 what they started in 1996," said Olson.

Dan Gabriel, North Farmington, 100-yard backstroke: Gabriel set team pool records in the 100 backstroke (55.64) and in the 200 medley relay. The sophomore accomplished far more than that, however, winning the 100 back at the WLAA meet (55.52) and placing ninth at the state meet (54.15).

"Dan Gabriel knows what it takes to get the job done," said Duthie. "He is a highly-motivated hard worker." Those qualities earned him North's outstanding swimmer award for the past season.

Phil Zald, North Farmington, 100-yard breaststroke: A senior, Zald qualified for the state finals early in the season, then finished it by placing 11th at the state meet. His WLAA performance wasn't his best - he was sixth (1:02.87) - but everything else was.

"Phil has been an outstanding sprint freestyler and breaststroker for North Farmington," said Duthie. "He has been a major player in the success of North's swimming teams for four years. He has been a hard and very focused worker," one who holds the school record in his specialty.

400-yard freestyle relay: More good news for the Rocks and bad news for their opponents. The Salem foursome that took third at the WLAA meet (3:21.01) and qualified for state, where it took 10th (3:18.12), will be back in '97.

Nick Corden and Buchanan are sophomores; Dettling and Petroskey are juniors. "This foursome will be returning in 1997 and should be a force to be dealt with at the state level," said Olson.

2nd team

200-yard medley relay: With three seniors (Brian Butrico, Ted Burmeister and Chad Crosby) to anchor the relay (with sophomore Mark Sgriccia), Livonia Steven excelled. The Spartans only lost once all season in a dual meet and peaked at the WLAA finals, winning the league championship (1:40.60).

"I was real happy when this relay won at the league meet," said Stevenson coach Doug Buckler. "They did a great job all year."

Brian Rajdl, North Farmington, 200-yard freestyle: The Raiders' team captain, Rajdl took third at the WLAA finals in the 200 free (1:50.08). A senior, he qualified for the state meet on two North relays.

"Brian is a consistent hard worker," said Duthie. "He has always had exceptionally good swims at the end of the season, such as he had in this season's WLAA championship meet."

Alex Rottgers, Plymouth Canton, 200-yard individual medley: The one thing Rottgers has over most of his fellow all-Observer mates is age. He's just a freshman, and he already has taken a trip to the state championship meet. Rottgers qualified for state in both the 200 IM and the 100 breast, finishing third in the IM (2:02.04) and fifth in the 100 breast (1:01.98) at the WLAA finals. He posted a career-best 1:01.39 in the 100 breast at state.

"As a freshman, he was our high-point scorer in the dual-meet season and at the conference meet," said coach Kyle Lott.

John McLenaghan, Plymouth Salem, 50-yard freestyle: A senior, McLenaghan qualified for state in the 50 free and both the 200 free and 200 medley relays. His 22.56 clocking in the 50 was second-best in Observerland; he placed third at the WLAA meet in that event and sixth in the 100 back.

"John was chosen as one of our captains for the 1996 season, in which John and the other seniors won their four-straight WLAA Conference championship," said Olson.

Otto Geiseman, Plymouth Salem, diving: A state qualifier, Geiseman - a junior - battled Farmington's Thomas for top honors within the Observerland area all season. His season-high 260.00-point total was second only to Thomas. He finished fifth at the WLAA finals (414.65 points in 11 dives).

"Otto has improved every year and has continued the great tradition of outstanding divers from Plymouth Salem," said Olson.

Patrick Duthie, North Farmington, 100-yard butterfly: Duthie enjoyed a fine junior season by finishing third in the 100 fly and sixth in the 200 free at the WLAA meet, qualifying for state in the former. His 54.35 at state was 14th best.

"Patrick is a very conscientious and diligent worker," said his coach, and father. "He made outstanding progress during the 1995-96 season, having dropped five seconds off of his 100-yard butterfly and qualifying for state."

Kevin Reinke, Redford Catholic Central, 100-yard freestyle: Reinke's junior season for the Shamrocks was capped by a double win at the Catholic League meet. He won both the 100 freestyle (49.72) and the 100 backstroke (56.84), qualifying for state in both.

Reinke was a first team selection on last season's all-Observer team in the 100 back.

Keith Falk, Livonia Stevenson, 500-yard freestyle: Falk is another of the promising freshmen in Observerland. He finished first in the 500 free at the WLAA finals (4:55.72) and qualified for state meet in that and the 200 IM. He was fourth in the 200 IM at the WLAA meet (2:03.42).

"Keith had a great first year at Stevenson," said Buckler. "He works real hard, and I think he'll be one of the greatest swimmers that I will have coached by the time he's a 12th grader."

200-yard freestyle relay: Chad Crosby (a senior), Steve Domin (a sophomore), Kevin Fordell (a senior) and Falk (a freshman) provided some big surprises down the stretch for Livonia Stevenson. The Spartan foursome qualified for state with a third-place finish at the WLAA finals (1:31.93).

"I was very proud of this relay team," said Buckler. "To take third place at league and then go to state and drop more time was just great."

Nick Sosnowski, Redford Catholic Central, 100-yard backstroke: Only a sophomore, Sosnowski paints a pretty picture for the Shamrocks' swimming future. He placed first in the 200 IM (2:03.75) at the Catholic League meet, at which CC finished second.

In the 100 back, Sosnowski posted the third-best time in Observerland (55.87) and qualified for state meet in both the 200 IM and 100 back.

Ted Burmeister, Livonia Stevenson, 100-yard breaststroke: Burmeister, a senior, excelled at the end of the season for the Spartans. He finished second in the 100 breast at the WLAA meet (1:01.86), qualifying for state, then finished 12th at the Class A final.

"Ted has been a pleasure to coach for four years," said Buckler. "He's the second-fastest breaststroker in Stevenson history. I will miss Ted a lot - he has been our backbone."

400-yard freestyle relay: North Farmington's Rajdl, Duthie, Gabriel and Speer came together at the WLAA meet - simply because that was the first time they swam the event together. They cut 14 seconds off North's previous best, becoming league champs (3:20.27) and qualifying for state.

"During the dual-meet season, we usually loaded the 200 medley and 200 freestyle relays due to the strength of those relays and the positioning of our athletes in the individual events," Duthie explained. That need did not exist at the WLAA meet. "We were confident at the end of the season that we had the personnel to swim a very strong 400 freestyle relay. They all had lifetime best swims."

Spring weather welcomes fly fishing season

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

The Tigers are well into spring training. Summer baseball and softball leagues are filling up and practice dates are being inked on the calendar. It won't be long before the real spring weather shows up and we can all once again enjoy the outdoors.

It you're a fly fisher and are interested in a little pre-season action take a sick day Monday (blame it on spring fever) and head out to the Huron River at the Proud Lake Recreation Area because trout season officially opens at 12:01 a.m. on April 1. Well, in this neck of the woods anyway.

Thanks to the dedicated efforts of the Michigan Fly Fishing Club and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources a 23-year tradition continues beginning Monday as a two-mile section of the Huron River in the Proud Lake Recreation Arera will be open to catch-and-release, fly fishing only for trout April 1-26.

Back in the early 1970's, when gas prices were rising faster than the federal deficit, the cost of taking a trip north to fly fish was getting out of hand. A group of anglers from the Livonia based Michigan Fly Fishing Club decided they wanted to institute a program to bring fly fishing a little closer to home.

In cooperation with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, the Michigan Fly Fishing Club came up with this special season. Approximately 3,000 brown and rainbow trout are planted each spring in a two-mile stretch of the Huron from posted signs just below Moss Lake to posted signs 100 yards below Wixom Road. This is the only section of the river open for the special season. General trout fishing rules apply to the area when the regular season opens on April 27 (Check the DNR Fishing Guide for specific guidelines).

"Our club spearheaded the project," said Dale Ross, a board member of the Michgan Fly Fishing Club. "It has become a great training ground for people interested in fishing for trout in a stream."

A 1987 DNR study showed that each fish was caught an average of 3.8 times and most of the stocked fish are caught in May during the regular trout season. Some evidently do survive through the summer as ice anglers have reported catching trout throught the ice on Proud Lake. Call (810) 685-2433 for more information or contact the Michigan Fly Fishing Club at (313) 420-2233.

Campground hosts wanted

The Michigan DNR is looking for volunteers to work as a Michigan State Park or State Forest Campground Host. This program allows individuals to camp at no charge in return for providing assistance in the campground.

"The campground host program offers individuals a unique opportunity to combine the fun of camping with the satisfaction of serving others," said DNR director Michael Moore. "Hosts can give something back to the parks and forests they have enjoyed for years, while finding pleasure in meeting new people in a beautiful setting."

Campground hosts can be teams or individuals and are responsible for greeting campers and directing them to their sites, explaining camping fees, providing light maintenance, answering questions about the park or forest, and arranging campground activities depending on the host's talents.

Requirements for campground hosts include: must be at least 18 years of age; must attend a training session June 5-7 at the McMullen Conference Center in Roscommon; must serve a four-week minimum; must provide their own camping and personal equipment; and must provide the service for five days of the week (approximately 30 hours) including weekends and holidays.

For more information contact the park or forest campground you wish to work at or call Monica Terrell (state park) at (517) 373-8232 or Dean Sandell (forest campground) at (517) 373-9483.

Judge advocates unifying courts

By Ralph R. Echtinaw
Staff Writer

Judge Ronald Lowe of the 35th District Court told Canton Chamber of Commerce members Thursday, March 21, that trial court unification would simplify a complex system and cost less to run.

Although a state House effort to combine the district, circuit and probate courts in Michigan has so far failed, and a tamer state Senate court-reform effort has emerged, Lowe believes unification is still possible.

"We find ourselves with an unprecedented opportunity to reorganize," Lowe told chamber members at their "Third Thursday" breakfast gathering in the Old Country Buffet. "The governor's office wants to do it. The Supreme Court wants to do it. The state Legislature wants to do it. It's not often you get all those powers wanting to do something. Now what we have to do is come up with the best plan.

"The best thing that could happen to you would be total trial court unification," he said. "If a proposal is out there to allow for trial court unification, that's something you should get behind because I think you'll find that the benefits will come down to your pocketbooks, too."

Under a unified system, any judge could hear any case. The way it's set up now, the cases are categorized and divided between district, circuit and probate courts.

"There are ways you could find yourself in all three courts," Lowe said. For example, an adult and a juvenile could break into a house, then injure themselves falling into a hole for a pool in attempting to flee.

As a witness, the homeowner could be in district court for the adult's preliminary exam, in circuit court for the adult's trial, in probate court for the juvenile's trial and in circuit court again to fight the lawsuit filed by the adult thief because the hole for the pool wasn't adequately marked with warning signs.

See story, page 7A

The current system, Lowe said, runs up attorney bills, causes police officers to work overtime and crowds jails with people waiting for trial.

Defined High-Yield Corporate Income Series 5
from EVEREN Unit Investment Trusts
Structured as a Unit Investment Trust (UIT), the Defined High-Yield Corporate Income Series 5 is designed to provide high monthly returns for fixed-income investors. The corporate bonds in the portfolio are considered "high-yield" issues, which means that investors assume a speculative degree of risk to earn higher possible income. Trust highlights include:
• Short/Intermediate-Term Portfolio
All the bonds in this portfolio are due to mature in the next two to five years.
• BB-Rated Bonds
This series consists exclusively of bonds rated BB or better by at least one of the three major ratings agencies. This bond category is considered "speculative," but it remains only one upgrade away from "Investment Grade."
• Diversification
Series 5 consists of 9 corporate bonds professionally selected by the experts at EVEREN. Diversification is a known tool in reducing investment risk, although it will not eliminate risk entirely.
• Monthly Income Checks
Investors receive an interest check every month, so budgeting and financial planning are simple.

Starting March 1 1996, it will be a part of Continental's Satellite Service, so you no longer have to pay an additional fee to bring Mickey and the gang right into your own home. Until then, all Satellite Service customers can enjoy a free preview. Just another one of the wonderful things that happen when the customer is the most important part of a business.

Scouting around

Websites have wealth of info on youth groups

By Emory Daniels
Staff Writer

Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts alike have a wealth of information and resources available to them on the Internet.

I sampled just a bit of what's out there recently in a response to Sara, one of our O&E On-line users who wanted some Internet links on Cub Scouts.

One of my first stops was to an unofficial Boy Scouts page which included links to Boy Scouts of America Councils, BSA national phone numbers, national committees, Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Explorers, Sea Scout Ships, Order of the Arrow, Camps & High Adventure Bases, Jamborees, Camporees & Other Encampments, Wood Badge Courses, and links to other U.S. and international scouting resources. The Universal Resource Locator was http://www.scouting.org/.

I also was interested in the Slovene Catholic Girl Guides and Boy Scouts Association, also an unofficial page, which can be visited at http://www.uni-mb.si/~uelulv28b/scoutse.html. Their scouting groups are Cub Scouts (ages 8-10), Scouts (ages 11-15), Rover Scouts (ages 15-21), leaders and spiritual assistants (21 and older).

"1997 National Scout Jamboree" is a highly-developed Website that can be visited at http://w3.trib.com/~dont/scouting/jambo97.html. I learned that the 1997 Jamboree will be in Bowling Green, Va., July 28 through Aug. 5, and will be attended by some 34,000 Scouts ages 12-18. Activities will include aquatics, scuba diving, action centers, conservation, merit badge midway, arena shows, fishing, field sports including archery, shot gun and pioneering. The site gives the cost and criteria to attend.

This site also tells you how to subscribe to a Listserv discussion group on the 1997 jamboree by sending an E-mail message to majordomo@hoplite.org and in the message area type "subscribe jambo97" (without the quotes). The site also has a long list of jamboree Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) as well as a who's who list of adult leaders attending. By the way, the Webmaster who maintains the jamboree home page also maintains home pages for the Masonic order including one for Job's Daughters.

A Cub Scout leader seeking information on Awards and Advancement will want to visit http://w.hiway.net/usscouts/csawards.html. There are links relating to Tiger Cub Scouts, Cub Scout Advancement, Webelos Advancement, BSA Knot Awards for Cubs and leaders, and other Cub awards.

The best laid-out and most complete site I found was The Scout Hut which can be visited at http://www.skypoint.com/members/srtobin/scouting.html. A lot of the information comes from both Listserv E-mail discussion groups and Usenet news groups postings on Scouting.

"The Scouter's Reference Shelf" is a very complete reference that's very nicely and graphically laid out with colorful yellow file folder tab-like indexing graphical devices. The "Creative Campfires" folder label, for instance, is loaded with such items a Creative Campfires Handbook, Skit Planning, Campfire Cheers, etc.

"Stories & Storytelling" includes "The Bear's Tail ... an Indian Legend," how-to tips on effective story telling, how to use stories, and a Shaggy Dog Story. "Scoutmaster's Minute" folder includes the Scout Oath, Meaning of Honor, Know Your Camp, a Scout Worship Services handbook, and messages and biography of Lord Baden-Powell, founder of boy scouting.

The official home page of the Girl Scouts of American can be visited at http://www.gsusa.org/. Upon arriving, the user finds a greeting from the national executive director and a "current news" link. Other pages offer information on How We Serve Girls, Funding the Organization, Volunteer Opportunities, Publications, National Facilities, Cookie Sales, Adult Education, Technology, and Special Dates among other links. (I've had mixed results connecting to this site, probably because of busy volume demands.

A Girl Scouts Cookie Store can be accessed at http://cookies.openmarket.com/GSstore/. "Pathway Partners, Ltd. will complement other operational services which ITI provides to Michigan's manufacturing companies and further enhance the competitiveness of the manufacturing sector in Michigan," Edwin Carlson, president of the Industrial Technology Institute said.

"The purpose of finding these contracts is to develop a method by which service providers at the MEP centers can forge strong relationships with financial intermediaries and institutions such as investment banking firms, merchant bank operations, leasing firms, venture capital firms and private investors that are looking for qualified firms with which they can do business," David Cranmer, manager of strategic partnerships at NIST/MEP, said.

The Michigan Manufacturing Technology Center, an affiliate of the NIST Manufacturing Extension Partnership, is a division of the Industrial Technology Institute. The institute is an independent not-for-profit organization.

Nursery sets spring expo for weekend

By Marty Figley
Special Writer

Bordine Nursery Ltd. will have its third annual Spring Garden Expo Saturday-Sunday, March 30-31, in its greenhouses at 1835 S. Rochester Road, Rochester Hills, and 8600 Dixie Highway, Clarkston.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days. Admission is free.

The highlight at the Clarkston location is the new, improved, high-tech production facility. Tours will be conducted 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. both days.

Beautiful displays of colorful gardens and blooming plants await visitors both young and old. Jodi Headlee, garden writer for The Oakland Press, will be on hand to answer your specific gardening questions 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday in Rochester Hills and Sunday in Clarkston.

Exhibits by local landscape contractors such as Haley Stone Supply of Troy, Michigan Brickscape and Jim Babcock Landscape Architect of Rochester Hills and Dillman & Upton Lumber of Rochester will show how paving, brickwork, decks, gazebos and other structures can enhance your property.

Several non-profit organizations will have displays and representatives available to explain what they're all about and answer questions. They include the Southern Michigan Unit of the Herb Society of America, master gardeners from both Oakland and Wayne counties, Global Releaf and the Chamber of Commerce.

The staff of Bordine's will share information about new gardening products and explain how they can best be used, from the benefits of proper potting soil to specific lawn programs.

In Rochester, the Rotary will offer food for hungry visitors, and the 4-H group will do the same in Clarkston. Proceeds will go to these two non-profit organizations.

Excitement is in store for children at this Expo. A visit with the Easter Bunny 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at both locations — bring your camera — will get them ready for the holiday. They can also enjoy a pony ride for $1 or pet the animals at the petting zoo. Other activities to keep them amused and busy include a fish pond, a hidden stamp game and potting a geranium seedling.

A raffle will take place at each store with the winners drawn Monday, April 1 (no fooling). Raffle tickets are $1 each.

SHOW CELEBRATES THE ART OF GARDENING

STORY BY HUGH GALLAGHER · STAFF WRITER

Artists have taken inspiration from nature since the beginning of time. It's only fair that nature take some inspiration from art – at least nature as artfully arranged by gardeners and landscape designers at the Ann Arbor Flower and Garden Show, sponsored by the University of Michigan Matthaei Botanical Gardens, March 28-31.

The seventh annual show opens today at the Washtenaw Farm Council Grounds in Ann Arbor, see map and schedule.

This year's theme is "Art in Bloom," paying homage to numerous artists with appropriate garden settings prepared by area garden clubs, professional nurseries and individual gardeners. The artists spotlighted in the exhibits include Vincent Van Gogh, Salvador Dali, Pablo Picasso, William Morris, Piet Mondrian and many more.

Seven buildings will be connected by blossoming "greenhouse" tunnels.

The show features over 500 displays and exhibits including landscape garden displays, floral creations, a Master Gardener booth, a Marketplace with over 45 commercial booths, educational and plant society exhibits, live music at a gazebo and an Antique Garden area featuring ornaments, accessories, furniture and more.

The show's 2,400-square-foot feature garden, "In an Artist's Garden," has been inspired by Claude Monet's garden in Giverny, France. The garden will be include a series of arches with climbing roses, a walkway of nasturiums, the facade of Monet's Pink House, a pond with a section of Japanese bridge and a 60-foot mural painted in the style of Monet depicting the Seine and the landscaping of Giverny. The feature garden will be designed by Lodi Farms Nursery of Ann Arbor and the UM Matthaei Botanical Gardens.

Adrienne O'Brien, horticulturalist at Matthaei, has been busy trying to force bloom nearly 8,000 pots of plants for the main exhibit and the linking tunnels. She has had to alternately warm and cool plants to get them blooming at peak times for the show.

"As I get more experienced, it gets easier. I can tell what will bloom," she said. "I take records without fail."

The Ann Arbor show includes a Standard Flower Show presented in cooperation with the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan Inc. with judging in three categories – design, horticulture and special exhibits. Judging will be completed the day before the show opens. The show features 30 professional exhibitors, 35 gardening groups and 350 amateur exhibitors.

The Cranbrook Garden Auxiliary will present a special exhibit featuring another artist recently in the news.

"Since the major exhibit is Monet's garden, we thought we'd do Vermeer's garden because of the big Vermeer show in Washington. No one has ever seen Vermeer's garden, so that's an advantage," said Phyllis McLean of Bloomfield Hills.

The exhibit will feature a townhouse near a market square with a walled garden. Over the wall will be scenes of Vermeer's Delft.

"You can see it from a window in all his paintings," said McLean. "We've tailored it to a Dutch garden. Vermeer was interested in perspective, line, linearity and we try to capture that."

This is the fifth year that Cranbrook has participated in the Ann Arbor show. McLean said this was an important outreach project for Cranbrook. A hostess is always present at the exhibit to invite visitors to come to Cranbrook.

"It gets quite exciting. Everybody is playing out their fantasies. I always learn a lot from other exhibitors," McLean said.

Each exhibit offers a different challenge for the gardeners.

Winifred Boni of the Livonia Garden Club is working with Nancy Sannar on an entry called "Spacious Spaces."

"Our category is masters of form and we have to design a garden to include a sculpture," Boni said.

This is Boni's second year at the show. Last year the garden club did a lakeside cottage room with a fishing theme and took a second prize. This year her exhibit will be eligible for the Matthaei Botanical Garden Group Award.

"We'll have a mixture of plants, different foilage and flowers. The walls are a dusty pink and we'll work with those colors," Boni said.

Last year Keller and Stein Florist and Greenhouse of Canton won the People's choice award with its "Maytag Rag" exhibit, centering on an antique washing machine. This year the focus is on artist Georgia O'Keeffe.

"We're doing a small porch and patio exhibit with the theme 'Georgia on My Mind' in reference to Georgia O'Keeffe," said Bob Simmons of Keller and Stein. "We'll have shades of purple based on her purple petunias."

The O'Keeffe style flowers will be draped about "an old-fashioned Southern porch on a lazy afternoon."

Florence Smith of Farmington Hills, director of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan District 1, will be focusing on a very different modern artist.

"I'm entering a class called 'Hello Dali' as in Salvador Dali," said Smith. "I'm planning that I will try to get a feeling that will represent his work in color and form. I'll be using fresh plant as well as dried."

The area for the exhibit is tiny, not to exceed 8 inches in any dimension and viewed through an 11 inch opening.

"It's tedious to do. I have to keep the scale as well. I'm also involved in making miniatures and it helps."

Complimentary shuttle buses will run every 15 minutes from Briarwood Mall.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Study photos critically

MONTE NAGLER

Did you know that one of the best ways to improve your photography is by closely looking at the photographs of others?

Whether it's browsing through a gallery or leisurely thumbing through a good photography book, many benefits can be yours by a good, hard, critical look and analysis of the photographs. It doesn't matter if you prefer landscapes, street scenes, abstracts, people pictures, color or black and white. The important thing is to start looking at pictures and to begin to understand not only what the photographer is trying to communicate but, more importantly, how he or she is doing it and what the picture is doing to you.

By tuning into your own emotions and asking yourself some important questions as you "read" a photograph, you'll gain insight and technical skills that will certainly help you in making your own photographs.

Begin by asking what the subject or main theme of the photograph is. Does it move you and how do you respond to it? How do you suppose the photographer felt about it?

Study the lighting. Is it harsh or soft? What direction is it coming from and what time of day do you think it was? Ask yourself what might happen to the picture if the lighting were different.

What camera position was used — near or far, low angle or high? Why do you think the photographer used a particular camera position and what does it do for the picture? How might another camera location affect the photograph?

What lens do you think was used and why? Was it a wide angle, normal or perhaps a telephoto?

As you know, a lens' focal length and aperture greatly affect depth-of-field. Is there a lot of depth-of-field or little in the picture? How would a change in depth-of-field alter the final image?

What about shutter speed — slow or fast? Is the subject blurred in motion or caught at the peak of the action? Look for use of filters or any other special effects, too.

Of course, you should study the composition carefully. How are the elements of the picture arranged and does it all make sense to you?

Is the photograph telling a story? If so, tune into your feelings of it. Try to interpret what the photographer is trying to say and what your responses are.

A GUIDE TO REAL ESTATE LINGO

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Real estate has a language all its own.

Earnest money, closing costs, escrow accounts. It's hard to play the game if you don't know the rules or the lingo.

"One reason being a good Realtor is when you explain to people what it means – and what it means to them – and help them make a qualified decision on total understanding," said Linda Rea, an annual multi-million dollar seller with Real Estate One in Troy.

"The one who really needs protection is purchasers," said Tom Nemes, a Farmington Hills lawyer who does a substantial amount of real estate work. "They're always enthused, caught up in emotion. Detail is often overlooked."

Here's some basic terminology buyers and sellers should know before they jump into the market.

PURCHASE AGREEMENT
A document submitted by prospective buyers detailing the terms and conditions of a purchase offer.
Because the document is legally binding if accepted, it should be examined by a lawyer before submission to the seller.

EARNEST MONEY
A cash deposit, usually 3 percent of the proposed purchase price, included with a purchase agreement to indicate a buyer's sincerity in making the offer.
Earnest money is applied to the down payment at closing.

DOWN PAYMENT
Up-front money paid by a buyer to acquire a mortgage. Traditionally, it's 20 percent of the purchase price.

MORTGAGE

CLOSING COSTS
Fees charged by lender when a mortgage is needed to buy a house. Costs can include appraisal fee, credit report, survey, title insurance, recording fees and mortgage application/document preparation fees.

PRIVATE MORTGAGE INSURANCE
Insurance required of a buyer by a lender to protect the outstanding mortgage in case of foreclosure.
Usually required if a downpayment is less than 20 percent, PMI can be costly – $43 per month with only 10 percent down on a $100,000 mortgage.

HOMEOWNER'S INSURANCE
Usually required by mortgage lenders and a must at all times whether required by others or not unless you're very wealthy. It protects the owner against losses from fire, weather and criminal activity and damages from personal injury claims.
Cost is several hundred dollars.

HOME WARRANTY INSURANCE
Becoming more popular, usually offered as an inducement by sellers. It pays to fix major mechanical, electrical and plumbing problems for a year or two after purchase.
Cost can be a couple of hundred dollars.
Buyer should consider including this in purchase agreement designating the seller as the premium payer.

TITLE INSURANCE
A policy to protect buyers and mortgage companies from challenges to legal ownership.
Sellers usually buy a policy for a buyer's protection as part of a standard purchase agreement, and the buyer purchases a policy that protects the lender for the amount borrowed.
Real estate agents handling a transaction usually arrange for title insurance. Cost can be several hundred dollars each way.

COMMISSION
A fee paid to agents by the seller for selling a house. Exact amount is negotiable, but the going rate here is about 6 percent.
Commissions usually are split between agents representing buyers and sellers if both are involved.

TRANSFER TAXES
Usually paid by the seller, the state/county transfer tax rate is $8.60 per $1,000 of a house's selling price everywhere in Michigan except Wayne County, where it's $9 per $1,000.

POINTS
A fee charged by a lender for a more favorable interest rate, payable at closing or rolled into the monthly payment.
A point is one percent of the money borrowed. Two points on a $100,000 mortgage would be $2,000. Generally, the more points paid, the lower the rate.

INSPECTION
Usually included as a condition of sale in purchase agreement by buyer, an inspection gives purchaser a third-party's overview of property's condition. An inspection can cost a couple hundred dollars.

SELLER DISCLOSURE STATEMENT
Required by state law, a form in which sellers describe their knowledge of the condition of the property.

FSBO
For sale by owner.

MLS
Multi-listing service is a current list in computer or book form of houses available for sale compiled by realty boards.
Descriptions usually includes basic information such as location, how many rooms in the house, special features and asking price.

BUYER'S (SELLER'S) REMORSE
The pyschological feeling of regret about making a big change in life. It almost always passes.

ESCROW ACCOUNT
Usually required by a mortgage lender, it allows homeowners to pay property taxes and, sometimes, homeowners insurance on an installment basis. Lender pays property taxes and insurance from individual accounts when due.

Board should have control over funds

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q: Our board has placed our reserve funds in an account where the management company has signatory power. In fact, I am not sure that the directors themselves have any power to sign checks on the account. Is that a good idea?

A: No. The board of directors should maintain tight controls over the expenditure of association monies at all times. Unfortunately, there have been a number of instances of embezzlement by management companies in certain locations around the country, particularly in Manhattan and California. I would not allow any third party to have any direct control over your funds without getting the requisite signatures from the association board members, i.e., at least two, particularly with respect to reserve funds. I recognize, of course, the difficulty in facilitating the remittance of day to day checks by management firms of the association funds if they need the association board's signature. The board must consider the pros and cons of giving the management company that flexibility with respect to the expenditure of association operating funds. However, as to reserve funds, I believe that the association should have exclusive reign over the expenditure and remittance of any checks from these accounts.

Q: I am attorney representing the buyer of a resale unit within a community association which is still under construction. Do you have any tips which I could consider beyond the normal aspects of reviewing the contract in any real estate purchase.

A: In the limited space available, may I suggest that you consider the following: (1) has the developer completed the recreational amenities, if any, and other common facilities and, if not, is it committed to do so by a certain date; (2) has the developer made the necessary financial contributions required by the governing documents and/or the disclosure statement. If not, what is the likelihood that the unit owners will be required to fund a deficit in the association's working capital reserve accounts after the developer is departed; (3) has control over the homeowner association governing body been transferred to the unit owners; (4)if control has been transferred to the unit owners, has "transition" been completed. If not, is there an expectation of significant litigation with the developer for defects in the common areas or for the developer's failure to make the necessary financial contributions.

Use different lenders for different needs

By David Mully
SPECIAL WRITER

THIS WEEK'S HOME MORTGAGE SHOPPING TIP:

Using a lender or loan officer who specializes in the type of financing required for your home purpose can make all the difference.

The days of going to the corner bank for all your home financing needs are over. The home buying process has changed, along with everything else. Income, assets and credit are three of the four major components lenders look at when considering a mortgage for approval. The evaluation of the property to be financed is the other major component. Buyer's salary and commission plans have become more confusing for lenders to analyze. The way people manage their assets is not as simple as when they simply deposited their extra money into savings accounts, making it much easier for underwriters to track. Finally, the depth of people's accumulated credit history makes the mortgage approval process much more involved for the lender.

Due to the changes mentioned above, mortgage lenders increasingly need to become more flexible in how they determine a borrower's credit worth and more flexible in the types of mortgage programs they offer.

This brings me to my mortgage shopping tip of the week. With so many lenders and so many mortgage programs available today, I believe it is very important to narrow down the specific mortgage program you will need before you select the lender. There are several reasons for this. First, I have found that most lenders and loan officers have developed specialties in certain mortgage programs and have mastered how to handle them better than others. Along with this, the interest rates and closing costs are usually lower than the competitors. I've often seen someone spend more money or have problems with a certain lender/loan officer who simply was not the best choice for their mortgage needs. And, subtle differences between lenders can translate into major problems or big losses.

Again, try to figure out what type and what size mortgage you're going to need. You may need a conventional loan, new construction loan, first time buyer loan, low down payment loan, fixed or adjustable rate loan, shorter term loan, a loan that allows for bad credit, a no-income verification loan, bridge loan, balloon loan, no-point/no-cost loan . . . . . The list goes on and on. With so many programs to choose from, it would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for any one lender to offer every one of these loans efficiently and competitively. Just remember, like most products and services in today's world, if you use a lender or loan officer who specializes in your specific mortgage needs, you'll be getting help in making one of your biggest lifetime investments a better experience, while probably saving additional money in the meantime.

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION:

Q. We are planning to purchase a home this spring. We think that we will only be staying in the home approximately four to five years. What type of mortgage would you recommend? Should we buy the points to lower the interest rate?

A. I would first advise against buying points when you've not planning to have the mortgage more than five years. It normally takes five years to make up for the up front cost of paying the points. You would be better to pay the slightly higher rate over the five years instead of one lump sum up front. In my opinion, a 3-, 5- or 7-year adjustable rate would be ideal for you. The rate would not change for the loan period but could then adjust upward or downward, normally at a maximum of 2 percent per year with a lifetime cap of 5 to 6 percent. These programs can have rates 3/4 percent to 1/2 percent lower than the 30 year fixed rate and end up saving you plenty of the five years.

Dress up your kitchen with cabinets

No longer is the kitchen simply a place to prepare meals. Today, as families take refuge in their homes from hectic daily schedules, it also functions as a dining room, a family room, an office, a playroom and a recycling center. Without question, the kitchen is again becoming "the heart" of the American home.

It comes as little surprise, then, that the kitchen is the most frequently remodeled room in the house. After all, if you're spending so much time in the kitchen, shouldn't it be a functional place that fits your family's lifestyle? So, more than ever, as interest rates and home prices climb, Americans are opting to stay put and remodel, starting with the kitchen.

According to the National Kitchen and Bath Association, 52 percent of the cost of a new or remodeled kitchen goes toward new cabinetry. Therefore, you'll want to spend some time shopping for cabinet styles, sizes and options to fit your design plans and your budget. And, since cabinets are a high-ticket item, why not use them and coordinating accessories to dress up the look of your kitchen? Your first step should be visiting kitchen and bath dealer who has a showroom with numerous full-size accessories that fit their personal tastes and unique lifestyles."

Be it country, contemporary, traditional or something in between, there are a multitude of design options to select from.Dressing Up Cabinetry

Dettinger offered Yorktowne's popular white vinyl Whitehall cabinetry, customized with Country accents and accessories, as an example of how homeowners can create a functional, personalized kitchen, without paying custom cabinet prices. Here are a few of Dettinger's suggestions for dressing up kitchen cabinetry:

Period wall end cabinets with Country English fretwork and spindles soften the look of cabinets and provide easy-access areas to display plants, cookbooks, etc.

Cabinets with see-through mullion doors create an open look and are an ideal showcase for cherished silver, china, glassware or prized collectibles. Most manufacturers offer multiple mullion styles, as well as plain door frames. They can be customized with clear, smoked or stained glass, or consider adding lace curtains. Any combination will be both attractive and practical. Period open shelf base cabinets also provide a unique decorative touch with decorative fretwork, an adjustable shelf and a special grooved paneling back called wainscoting). They are usually 24 inches deep, making storing oversized items easy.

To conserve sacred cabinet storage space, while adding a stylish flair to your kitchen, consider plate racks and/or decorative cup holders. Space-saving cup holders also can be used to display spices, decorative tins or collectibles.

Want your new kitchen to be a clutter-free zone? Add base cabinets with built-in trash containers and recycling sorting bins. Other cabinet accessories that combine form and function: drawers with built-in bread boxes, solid maple cutting blocks and even ironing boards. Toasters, mixers, etc., can be neatly stored away in "appliance garages" with sliding tambour doors. When you visit the dealer showroom, take a look at some of the following special cabinets and accessories and add them to your "dress up" wish list:

- Open shelf wall cabinets with decorative gallery rail
- Wall1 bookcase cabinets and china closets for collectibles or kitchenware
- Decorative wooden range hoods
- Lattice wine racks
- Microwave oven shelves
- Dishwasher and refrigerator panels customized to match your cabinetry
- Decorative spindles, gallery rails and moldings
- Under-sink drop-down louver trays for sponges, etc.
- Decorative fluted (vertically grooved) fillers and overlays
- Winscoting paneling for a textured look
- Shaped wooden supports to hold countertops or shelvingFinishing Touches

Elegant moldings and decorative rims, once only crafted by custom cabinet builders, are now readily available from most major cabinet manufacturers in many shapes and sizes and can go a long way toward creating a warm, inviting kitchen.

Shaped crown moldings or a gallery spindle) rail can be applied to the top front of wall cabinets creating a distinctive, finishing touch. A wide variety of looks can be achieved by using different molding styles and shapes together. Applying rope or dental moldings onto crown moldings is a good example. You also can creatively use moldings to enclose lighting fixtures, "dress" range hoods, or trim around windows and doors.

A hot trend right now is to use a different color molding or trim to complement your cabinetry. Whether you choose distinctive moldings to go along the top of wall cabinets, or a refined trim to outline counter top edges, these little extras help your cabinetry and your kitchen make an elegant statement. A good cabinet manufacturer also will have a large selection of decorative hardware to put just the right finishing touch on your new kitchen.

The Winning Edge by Roger Hempel

Resumes: Do You Have What It Takes?

I recall seeing a quote on the wall of an employment office that stated - "A person never comes closer to perfection than when they are filling out a job-application form." Some people look fantastic on paper, but often their actual abilities lack the substance and depth, for true success.

Do you have what it takes to secure an exciting, dynamic and challenging position? In today's business environment, the worst thing you can be, is a generalist! Mind you, there is nothing wrong with being dynamic and showing flexibility, but you don't want to exhibit signs of being a "Jack of all trades, but a master of none". When you are pursuing a particular career, you should create a unique resume, that only relates to that occupation.

How many different resumes do you have? If you are just starting your career, one or two good resumes are going to be difficult to create. As a student, you may have had a couple of different avenues of study and interest. You have to realize where you want to go in your career and put together resumes that reflect your interests and knowledge. On the other hand, if you have been in the work force for a number of years, you probably have had several diverse employment situations or opportunities. These should automatically generate resumes of different types, with distinctive points. A person who has been employed for 15 to 20 years may have as many as five or six unique resumes. As an exercise, write multiple resumes that target particular areas of your current career and interests.

A key item to remember: A resume should not read like a personal biography. Resumes are a reverse chronological listing of your major career accomplishments. A resume should never say that you were assigned, or you were only involved in, a particular element. Future employers don't care how much you were assigned. If you didn't accomplish measurable, meaningful tasks, they don't count them as true experience. Most companies are interested in only the last eight to ten years. With today's rapid changes in technology, many of your accomplishments before then provide little merit today. If you feel that you have significant accomplishments prior to that, you may want to list them as a one- or two-line-item entry. When designing your resumes, there are a wide variety of different styles and appearances. Your public library is an excellent source of style guides and industry practices. Pick and choose ideas that you are comfortable with and fit your career field. What I have commonly seen in industry are resumes using bulleted items to focus on accomplishments. This is an example of ones which state positive accomplishments:

- ➤ Created a new, weekly payroll system, which eliminated the need for three people
- ➤ Authored a freight-tracking program, saving the company $2,000,000 per year
- ➤ Designed a new steering component, saving one man hour of assembly per vehicle.

Be proud, list achievements as indisputable accomplishments. You are selling your skills and abilities to your future employer. In the sales game, the two major factors are "Facts and Benefits". Present your future employer with "Facts" of your unique career and demonstrate the "Benefits" that you have provided and could develop for them.

Take a moment to think about your work life. What have you accomplished? What did you plan to do and never got to? Did you help the company to succeed or did you just work there? Does the management recognize that you generated profits and provided benefits to the company? Did you cut expenses? Did you reduce personnel? Did you save them time, or perform any number of other tasks that could be seen as a benefit to the company. If this sounds like your career, congratulations! You will do well with this company or any others where you seek employment. On the other hand, if you can not see how you have become an integral and necessary part of the corporate goal, maybe you need to redirect your energies. If you are going to succeed in this highly competitive business world, you have to be a participate, an active player and a leader, not just a spectator on the sidelines of life.

Under the heading of Education, if you have completed college, list your major and highest-level degree first. If you are presently attending college, list the program and expected date of graduation. If you are in college or have completed college, there is no valid reason to list high school or elementary-level institutions. With today's electronic resources available, verification of education and employment history have become routine. Under no circumstances should you ever risk the embarrassment and loss of career opportunity by having your credibility questioned.

If you are a student, just starting out, your accomplishments may include being the chairperson of a student-based committee or doing research and advanced work for various professors. You could also include scholarships that you have won as an accomplishment point. List awards you have won for a particular project that you completed. If possible, try to show how these attainments can benefit your future employer. Don't forget your summer internship programs. If you happen to be involved in one that paid no real compensation, be sure to state that, because it clearly shows that you were after the experience, not the money. There should be a wide variety of other things that you can list as accomplishments, if you just take the time to think about them. A common mistake and totally unnecessary statement on your resume is "References available upon request". Everyone should have references available, if requested.

Where do your goals and objectives belong? Goals and objectives should not be in your resume. In most cases, they are better off being part of the closing paragraph of your cover letter. The cover letter states exactly how your talents will benefit the organization to which you are applying. This is not the time to list what you want in your life, in general. We will talk more about cover letters in a future edition.

You know that you are a winner! Show them what you have to offer!

Until next time - this is Roger... Go out and make it a great day!

Oakbrook Village avoids sticker shock

It probably shouldn't be too surprising that 108 of the 166 condominium sites in Oakbrook Village North, built in Commerce Township by MJC, have sold within a year.

Price certainly is a big factor.

A 1,380-square-foot unit with two bedrooms and two baths sells for $133,900. A unit of 1,630 square feet with three bedrooms and three baths goes for $147,900.

The base price includes two-car garage, first floor laundry, dishwasher and range.

"The thing that makes it interesting to buyers is they're all end units, two to a building, as opposed to an attached con plex that may have interior units," said Frank Munaco, MJC sales manager.

"Here, we put some niceties you might find in larger homes," said Michael A. Chirco, the builder/developer. "We give 'em volume ceilings, nice big windows, doorwalls."

"When people want to buy today, it's sticker shock," Munaco said. "When people find something affordable, they get excited. They see this as very affordable. It's affordable for working people and retirees."

Just two floor plans are available.

The Easton situates everything on the main floor. A two-story sloped ceiling sits like a canopy over the great room and dining room. A half-wall separates the kitchen/nook from the dining room.

The model decorates one bedroom as a den. The main bath has a combination tub/shower. The master, with cathedral ceiling, has two wall closets and bath with shower only.

The Franklin is a split-level.

A loft upstairs has a bedroom and bath.

From the outside, the units are virtually indistinguishable. Vinyl siding is the primary exterior material with some brick and wood accents.

"We started thinking that because the ranch was more affordable, more people would want it," Munaco said. "But they've been selling about one for one. People coming out of bigger houses, if they could afford it, it's something they don't want to give up."

Franklin model: This condo at Oakbrook North has an upstairs bedroom and bath but still looks almost the same from the outside as the one-story Easton.

Most of the buyers are empty-nesters, but Oakbrook North isn't designed to be a senior citizens haven.

"There are children in here. We aren't a retirement community by any means," said Mary Mintzer, sales rep.

Popular options available at premium price include fireplace ($1,795), air conditioning ($2,300), skylights ($1,250 a pair) and bay window ($1,500).

The average ranch sold in the sub is upgraded to the tune of six to eight thousand dollars, Mintzer said.

"The floor plan, openness, layout _ they love it," she said. "They can't believe how nice these are for the dollar. They do a lot of shopping. They educate themselves on what's available."

Oakbrook North is serviced by city water and city sewers. It's in the Walled Lake school district. There are no sidewalks.

The property tax rate is $24.62 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $148,000 condo would pay just over $1,800 in taxes the first year.

A trash removal fee of $111 also is charged by the township. The monthly association fee is $65.

Wesley and Karen Clark bought a ranch.

"What we like most is it has a spacious living area," Wesley said. "It feels big, and I also like that is has a two-car garage and full basement.

"We've had a couple of service issues, but they were taken care of as soon as I'd written the warranty request," he said.

Dick and Irene Stojak also selected a ranch.

"As soon as we walked into the models and saw how open and bright they were ... it's just what we were looking for," Dick said.

"My wife is handicapped ... and when we saw how easy it was to get around and how easy it was to get in and out of, it was just what we needed.

"The condo is well built," he added. "You don't hear your next door neighbor at all."

The sales office at Oakbrook North, (810) 624-0520, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

Strong surge in employment spurred housing construction

Jobs drive construction. And a strong surge in employment last year in southeastern Michigan spurred residential construction to a six-year high.

For 1995, builders here acquired permits for nearly 24,000 units _ 19,500 houses and condominiums, the rest apartments _ according to a tracking service based in Livonia.

The 10-county area surveyed included Wayne and Oakland, according to U.S. Housing Markets, published by Lomas Mortgage USA.

"Metro (Detroit) area recorded the greatest employment expansion in the country as the auto industry continued robust output in '95, feeding community of suppliers, R&D, design and high-tech firms," U.S. Housing Markets reported.

"Employers made about 115,000 net additions to payrolls last year _ annual growth rate of 4.8 percent, highest since 1985 record. Hiring surge brought three-year total to 225,000 net new jobs."

Builders of single-family product, houses and condominiums, were especially busy in the western and northwest Detroit suburubs _ Canton, Novi, Farmington Hills and Waterford, the publication reported.

Apartment activity was especially strong in north Oakland, Lapeer and Genesee counties, following the employment boom along the I-75 corridor. The Auburn Hills-Lake Orion corridor was especially productive, U.S. Housing Markets reported.

While the number of multi-family permits here remained about the same last year as in 1994, volume in the more northern locales more than doubled.

Concessions disappeared on apartment rents, the publication said. Occupancy rates were in the mid-90 percent range in most modern projects.

The thriving employment picture here also resulted in good news for owners of existing product, U.S. Housing Markets indicated.

"Strong economy leads to housing price inflation," the publication stated.

"Median (half above/half below) existing home sales price in fourth quarter just short of $100,000 _ nearly 15 percent higher than a year earlier, astonishing for a metro market of this size.

"Even used condos, typically weakest market niche, are selling well," U.S. Housing Markets reported.

Mortgage trends: As the interest rates falls, fixed-rate mortgages become more popular than adjustable rate mortgages, U.S. Housing Markets reports.

Nothing dispels kitchen blahs faster than fresh paint

Paint is the easy, affordable answer if you want to give the kitchen a new look but hesitate to delve into a costly, time-consuming remodeling project.

So says Shari Hiller, the well-known color maven and home fashion consultant of Dutch Boy Paints.

"A fresh coat of paint can do wonders for a tired kitchen," explains Hill. "It can brighten a dark room, and make a great big space appear cozy. It can lend richness, drama, and depth. It can make simple paces important, and can add great personal style.

"Unless you've repainted before, it hard to believe just what a change a few hours with a gallon of paint and a brush can bring to a room. You may find that painting walls is enough, but if you want more of a change, take a paint brush to the cabinets as well. With some today's fancy finishes, such as sponging, rag-rolling or combing, even battered old cabinet doors can look so good that you won't want to replace them."

Painting Is easy

But can you really do it yourself?

Nancy Craig, a color expert for Martin-Senour Paints, says yes.

"It's hard to imagine somebody who can't use a brush or roller," she says. "And, actually, some of the new painting techniques that create such dazzling effects are even easier. Take sponging, for example. The cloudlike effects it creates on walls, cabinets or pieces of furniture are fabulous, and yet it's hard to make a mistake. You apply a solid-color base coat, dab a sponge dipped in paint of another color onto the surface, allowing some of the background to show through. Then, if you don't think you've got enough color, let the first layer dry and sponge on some more. Waiting for the various layers to dry is almost the hardest part of the process, I think."

"Combing, which involves the removal of wet paint from a freshly painted surface, to create stripes is a bit more difficult than sponging," she adds.

She feels that sponging and combing are great finishes for tired cabinetry.

"They produce a very luxurious look," comments Craig. "Squint a little bit, and I think it's easy to see an heirloom where you just had a tired cabinet before."

Neutrals work wonders

If yours is one of the white laminate kitchens that dominated the housing market back in the '80s, paint can be a fantastic pick-me-upper. Hiller mentions she recently saw such a kitchen, which had been given a dramatic new lease on life with a coat of deep raspberry on ceiling and soffits. "Before, this kitchen was white everywhere," she tells. "White cabinets, countertops, floor, walls and ceiling. It's no wonder the owners found it cold and clinical. The infusion of raspberry gave it great warmth and personal style. It didn't even look like the same kitchen.

However, if you have kitchen cabinets made of wood, she recommends sticking to neutral tones such taupes, beiges, peach, soft gold, pale orange, and, of course, the entire spectrum of whites, which ranges from snowy tones to creamy hues.

Creating texture if you're working with neutrals is one of the tricks Hill has taught viewers on the new decorating show, Room-By-Room, where she is a co-hostess.

Or you can mask off stripes, and paint every other stripe in a satiny finish. Color-on-color finishes are easy to live with, yet very interesting."

She warns against using snow whites in kitchens with almond-color appliances. "Use creamy off-whites instead to avoid giving the appliances a dingy look," she advises.

Accessories count

For a country look, Hiller suggests framed cross-stitch samplers, old-fashioned mason jars and cooking utensils, and all sorts of folk art. For what Hiller terms a "salsa mood," go with cactus plants in terracotta pots, colorful platters, ropes of red peppers, jars of beans. The contemporary kitchen can benefit from brightly colored canisters and serving pieces in simple shapes, modern art in sleek frames, and dramatic designer cookware.

"Such accessories needn't cost a lot and finding them can be fun," she says. Go to garage sales and flea markets, the five-and-ten, crafts fairs and museum shops. "And the fact that today's paints are vastly improved is more good news for those craving a kitchen make-over with minimal expense and fuss. Dutch Boy, for example, has a Kitchen & Bath Collection, which is formulated to resist moisture and humidity, clean up with the swipe of a sponge, and provide color for many years."

A new 16-page booklet that tells how to select colors and use the proper painting techniques is free from Dutch Boy. Call 1-800-828-5699 and ask for Dutch Boy's Easy-Does-It Painting Interiors booklet. Free product literature is also available from Martin-Senour, 1-800-542-8468.

New phones add twist to home electronics

One of the newest answering machine/cordless phone combos available has rewritten the laws of mathematics. One answering machine plus one cordless phone equals four phone options in Casio PhoneMate's Model 2970, now featuring 25 channels for clear reception in densely populated areas.

In addition to an answering device, the base of the 2970 features a corded feature phone (one) and speakerphone (two), while the "satellite" cordless handset (three) has a speakerphone capability as well (four).

The 2970 also includes a speakerphone-intercom function, allowing the base unit and cordless handset users to page each other and talk via hands-free intercom.

Casio PhoneMate is also introducing the Model 2870 answering machine/cordless telephone/speakerphone combo, which joins the 2970 in bringing the latest digital technology to new and experienced users.

Casio PhoneMate's trademarked Solid State Message Storage records and plays the answering machine's outgoing message through a unique, tapeless, solid-state circuit that provides audio quality superior to conventional digital systems.

The cordless telephone handsets in the 2870 and 2970 combine convenience with state-of-the-art technology. They can be kept anywhere within normal communication range — additional phone jacks are not required. Free-standing chargers ensure continually charged handset batteries, while a power-saver switch allows the ringer to be switched off to preserve battery power.

The 25-channel cordless phones in both models provide reception superior to conventional cordless units through Casio PhoneMate's exclusive Ultra Clear Noise Reduction Circuitry, and the trademarked Optimum Channel Memory automatically selects and recalls the clearest available channel to provide a dial tone quickly.

For added convenience, the cordless handsets feature 10-number programmable autodial and can redial the last number called. The 2970 also allows users to screen calls and retrieve messages via the cordless handset.

The well-equipped base units of the 2870 and 2970 use a synthesized voice to provide step-by-step instructions during remote message operation and to announce the time and day messages were received.

Messages are stored by both units on a single microcassette and can be played, replayed, saved or erased from most touchtone phones, including car phones.

The auto extension disconnect feature in the 2870 and 2970 automatically stops the answering machine from recording when a call is answered from any phone in the home, while power failure protection saves outgoing and incoming messages for up to two months without a battery.

Sometimes you just know.

The Renken: This well-appointed home is suited for couples who love to entertain. It has a variety of interesting spaces.

Spacious, elegant Renken designed for entertaining

For a study kit of the RENKEN (402-33), send $10.00, to Landmark Designs, P.O. BOX 2307-OE48, Eugene, OR 97402 (Be sure to specify plan name & number) For a collection of plan books featuring our most popular house plans, send $20 to Landmark, or call 1-800-562-1151.

The Renken is a spacious, elegant house, designed to meet the needs of couples who like to entertain. It includes 3,609 square feet of living space, with an additional 832 in the combination garage/shop, with a built-in workbench and cabinets to hold tools and materials. There is a darkroom in the garage, allowing for easy unloading of supplies.

The front facade is formal and majestic. Two tremendous columns support a regal, high-gabled porch, creating an elegant entrance mezzanine. Off to the right, flourishing greenery spills down graceful sloping planter walls that surround the patio.

Interesting angles abound throughout the house. The vaulted dining room is octagonal in shape and has French doors that open onto the landscaped patio. The parlor is a modified octagon, and the rest of the rooms defy classification.

The main gathering spot in the house, the vaulted family room, is quite generous. Sliding glass doors open onto a substantial back patio, where summertime will find you at the barbecue.

The kitchen adjoins the family room and allows the cook to take part in the conversations during family gatherings. Kitchen features include a work island, an eating bar, cooktop, built-in ovens, microwave, dishwasher, and walk-in pantry.

The utility/hobby room includes a sewing area, pull-down ironing board, trash compactor, and space for a freezer. This room is large enough to accommodate the various materials needed for a multitude of crafts.

Guests will have the feeling of home when visiting. The two guest suites are large and private. Guest suite two has a living area and private entrance. It could be used as an in-law's suite, or a college student's area, with access to the rest of the house.

The master suite is nothing short of elegant. Luxury amenities include a walk-through closet, office area, and controls for a security system. The master bath features a raised spa tub, oversized shower, twin basins and a vanity for the lady of the house.

A ladder is a ladder, right? Wrong, it depends on job

You're in the process of getting all the tools and materials you need to complete the job. Then you discover that in addition to everything else, you need a ladder.

So off you go to your favorite hardware or building supply store to buy one. When you get to the store, you're amazed at how many sizes and styles are on display in the ladder aisle. Which one do you buy? A ladder is a ladder, right? WRONG!

Having the right ladder for the job is the key to safely completing your task. Using the wrong ladder is extremely hazardous. When you choose the wrong ladder or use it improperly the result may be serious injury or death.

So while you're standing in the aisle looking at all the choices you have, ask yourself these questions:

- Will the ladder be used indoors, out doors, or both?
- What's the highest level you'll need to reach?
- What tasks will you be doing on the ladder?
- Including your tools and material, how much weight will be on the ladder?
- Is there even a remote chance that the ladder will come into contact with electricity or electrical wires?

Style

If you'll be using the ladder indoors only, a step stool, a stepladder, a platform or a multi-purpose ladder (one which folds into several positions) is usually recommended.

If the ladder will be used outside only, a taller stepladder, a multi-purpose ladder, or an extension ladder will be more appropriate.

Size

Selecting the correct size ladder is based on the highest level you'll need to reach. One of the more common (and more dangerous) mistakes is using a ladder that is either too long or too short for the task at hand. For example, many homeowners purchase extension ladders that are too short to safely use for cleaning the gutters or painting the outside of the house. They end up reaching up or leaning out too far, both potentially very dangerous.

Extension ladders should be 7 to 10 feet longer than the highest support or contact point, which may be the wall or roof line. For a one-story house, a 20' or a 24' extension ladder is normally best. This will allow enough length for proper set-up, overlap of ladder sections, height restrictions of the highest standing level, and where appropriate, the extension of the ladder above the roof line. The highest standing level is four rungs down from the top. Never stand on the ladder above the support points or roof line. For two-story houses, 28' or 32' models are usually required, depending on whether you need to reach windows, gutters, or the peak.

For stepladders, the highest standing level is two steps from the top.

A person standing higher could lose his or her balance and fall. The maximum safe reaching height is approximately 4' above the height of the ladder. Technically, an 8' ceiling can be safely reached on a 4' ladder. Most people prefer taller ladders, however, because the pail shelf and molded top that hold the paint, tools or cleaning supplies are closer to the highest work area.

Duty Rating

Ladders are designed and constructed with specific uses and weight loads in mind. These uses and weight loads are indicated by "duty ratings." The duty rating is the maximum safe load capacity of the ladder. A person's weight, plus the weight of any tools and materials he or she is carrying, must be less than the ladder's duty rating. Wemer ladders are available in four different duty ratings, and each duty rating is indicated on the ladder's label by a different color.

The four Werner Ladder duty ratings are:

Type III - Light Duty Household Grade: This ladder can handle working loads up to 200 lbs. It's economical, lightweight, and dependable for many light duty around-the-house uses. Color Code: Red.

Type II - Medium Duty Commercial Grade: This ladder can handle working loads up to 225 lbs. It's good for the painter or handy person and is great for most general light work. Color Code: Yellow.

Type I - Heavy Duty Industrial Grade: This ladder can handle loads up to 250 lbs. It's built to take heavier everyday use from contractors, maintenance or industrial workers, as well as the serious do-it-yourselfers. Color Code: Blue.

Type IA - Extra Heavy Duty Professional Grade: This ladder can handle loads up to 300 lbs. It's specifically designed for rugged industrial, maintenance and construction use. Color Code: Black.

Material

Once you've selected the appropriate size and duty rating for your project, the last step is choosing the materials. Wemer ladders are made of fiberglass, aluminum, or wood. Each of these materials has characteristics that make it best for certain applications.

How you'll be using the ladder determines what material will be best for you. For example, if you'll be working primarily outside, or around corrosive chemicals, you might select one material over the others. And if you might be working around electricity, an aluminum ladder should never be used.

Fiberglass ladders are a great value and the top choice of both consumers and professionals, as they are suitable for a wide variety of applications. Fiberglass is strong, lightweight, and electrically non-conductive.

The aluminum ladder's advantage is its high strength and light weight. Typically a low-maintenance ladder, it performs well in rough working environments, it's rust resistant and corrosion resistant, and it's available in all four duty ratings. A very important warning about aluminum ladders: Aluminum ladders conduct electricity and should never be used when doing electrical work or in a situation when you may come into contact with live electrical wires.

The "traditional" material for ladders is wood because it's from wood that ladders have been designed and built for thousands of years. When kept clean and dry, they offer a margin of safety around electricity, and they're available in a variety of sizes and duty ratings.

Once you've answered the important questions about the ladder size, material and application, you can take an informed, confident stroll down the ladder aisle and select the right ladder for your projects.

Geothermal heat pump uses earth's natural energy to heat

Homeowners interested in saving money on utility bills for heating and cooling need look no further than their own back yard. A geothermal, or water source, system can harness and enhance the heat from the earth and ground water to heat and cool a house more cost effectively than a conventional system.

While the exact amount of energy savings varies with climate, the type of house and its present comfort system, a typical homeowner can expect to save up to 60 to 70 percent on heating bills and up to 30 to 40 percent on cooling.

"There is an increasing demand from homeowners for this environmentally sound, highly efficient option for heating and cooling," says John Manning of Carrier Corp., which recently introduced the WeatherMaker GT and GTX Water Source Comfort Systems.

Manning points to a recent study by the Electric Power Research Institute showing a high degree of customer satisfaction with water source systems compared to conventional systems. He also cites a report by the Environmental Protection Agency acknowledging the energy and environmental benefits of ground source technology.

Saving Energy Saves Money

With a water source system, part of the heat used to warm the house is free. Two-thirds of the energy comes naturally from the ground. The homeowner pays only for the remaining third in the form of electricity, which is used to move and enhance this natural heat. This three-unit ratio of heat (two generated from the earth and one from electricity) is called the Coefficient of Performance, or COP. Carrier's WeatherMaker GTX, for example, achieves a COP heating rating of up to 4.5 for efficient year-round performance.

Similarly, in the air conditioning mode, a heat pump's Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER) defines how many thousands of BTUs (units of heat) can be removed from the house for the cost of one kilowatt hour, a unit used by utilities to determine homeowners' electricity usage — and bill. The WeatherMaker GTX has an EER of up to 21.0.

An added energy- and money-saving advantage of this method of heating and cooling is the water heater option. In summer, heat extracted in the cooling process goes directly into the house's water tank, providing free hot water, as well as the added benefit of improved overall system efficiency. In winter, the water is heated at an efficiency that is two-and-a-half to three times greater than a standard electric water heater.

In addition, utilities in many parts of the country currently are offering incentives — including substantial rebates — for geothermal systems, making them especially attractive for homeowners to install.
