School building plan unveiled

Superintendent Chuck Little unveiled a plan to build five new schools in the Plymouth-Canton district. Voters likely will be asked to pay for the schools with a bond issue later this year or early 1997.

Voters in Plymouth-Canton likely will be asked to approve a bond issue to build new schools sometime between December, 1996 and March 1997.

Superintendent Charles Little unveiled a sweeping plan to build five schools in the booming school district at Monday night's school board meeting.

Entitled "Pathway to Public Approval; School Facilities for a Growing Community," Little's plan calls for prompt action to deal with urban sprawl. The schools would open in August, 2000.

"Our school population has grown from 14,763 in June, 1994 to 15,313 in April, 1996," said Little. "From the time (former superintendent) Dr. Hoben left, the district has been able to absorb growth. Now we are at a point where the numbers are telling us accommodations for a larger district need to be created."

Many of the district's schools are at or above capacity, he said.

Little's game plan calls for:

- getting better population projections. "We have SEMCOG data, but to satisfy the state department (of education) we need precise data," he said. The board is likely to be asked next week to approve $1,200 for a study by a state-approved company, he said.
- Making a decision about Lowell Middle School, which is leased from Livonia. "Our lease expires in 30 months. We need to reach a consensus on whether we are going to lease, purchase or abandon Lowell so that two years from now, we will know where we are going," Little said.
- Personnel at Tanger (the former elementary school now used for special programs) must be reassigned.
- "Looking at the process of building buildings. In June we need to hire a key construction company.

Little anglers endure rainy derby

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW

The weather could have been better, but there were still plenty of wee anglers fishing in the Heritage Park pond Saturday in the ninth annual Canton Township Fishing Derby.

The pond was stocked Friday with 1,500 trout for the occasion, which is sponsored Canton Parks and Recreation.

Tom Houdek monitored the progress of son Jeffrey, 6, and Jeffrey's friend Matt Drake, 6, but neither had much luck.

"Jeff just wants to go home," Houdek said. "It's too cold out here for him."

"Are you having any fun?" Houdek asked Jeff. "No!" the boy said.

Richard Schley supervised the endeavors of son Ryan Schley, 7, who wants to be a hockey player and a fisherman.

"He's been fishing with me since he was 2," Schley the elder said, "in the playpen in the boat. He loves it more than I do, or we wouldn't be here because of the weather."

And what do the Schleys use for bait? "He's got me loaded up with salted corn, marshmallows and worms from the garden," Schley the elder said.

Mike Bodner brought son Kevin, 14, and daughter Amy, 12, out to try their luck, but they found none. Kevin and Amy fished for an hour without a nibble.

"Maybe we'll come back later," Bodner said.

Lauren Coleman, 8, and here sister Kayla, caught three fish in one hour. "My mom wants to eat them, but I don't want to eat them," Lauren said.

"She's more of a beef eater," said dad Kermit Coleman.

But Lauren might have to taste it. "When Kayla caught a fish in Florida (dad) made her try it, so I might have to try it," she said.

Pam Michael brought her daughter Jessica, 5, to have a go at fishing, but Jessica complained of the chilly wind and the rain.

"We thought it would be kind of fun," Michael said. "She's never fished before."

Local man grieves family crash deaths

BY KEVIN BROWN

Family and friends did their best to cope this week, after the plane crash in Florida on Saturday that killed Donna and Kimberly Rennolds.

Roy Rennolds could smile as he spoke of his wife and daughter. But sometimes he had to fight back tears.

"We both liked to travel, we were both quite active with water sports and ski trips," said Rennolds, a Ford engineer. He and Donna, 49, had talked of retirement plans.

"That's probably changed now," said Rennolds, seated on a couch in the living room of the family's home on Amesbury in Plymouth Township. "She was my best friend in addition to being my wife."

Kimberly, an Eastern Michigan University senior and cheerleader, would have turned 21 on Sunday. "She was 92 pounds, 4 foot 11, a sweet little girl," her father said.

"My son and I decided we're going to get through this as good as we can and proceed with our lives," said Rennolds, adding he and son Chris have had some good discussions with friends and the family's pastor.

"Talking helps," Rennolds said.

Meanwhile this week, search teams began examining the wreckage of the ValuJet which crashed in the Everglades shortly after takeoff from Miami. There were 109 people killed in the crash.

A memorial service for Donna and Kimberly Rennolds was scheduled for 7 p.m. today at St. Michael's

Students angry over Engler's canceled visit

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Canton High School freshman Eric Longsdorf was elated when he heard Gov. John Engler was going to visit his school last Friday.

"I've wanted to meet him ever since sixth grade. He's a role model and stuff," said Longsdorf. "I couldn't wait. I had questions I wanted to ask him, and I wanted to shake his hand."

Shortly before his expected arrival, word came that Engler wasn't coming after all due to a scheduling snafu.

Canton government teacher John Bulmer and State Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, had made arrangements for the governor's stop at the Canton Little Theater.

"The students certainly were disappointed. We were all disappointed," said Bulmer. "Apparently, the visit had not been put on the governor's schedule. I chalk it up to a mix-up in communication."

"When I found out he wasn't coming, I was really bummed," said Longsdorf.

"I had questions about how much money schools get. I feel our school should be getting more. I feel any school should get more money than it does. I wanted to ask the governor what he plans to do about it so that we can have a better education."

Salem freshman Ryan Himebaugh says "this kind of shows his views on education. He cut adult ed. That shows how much he thinks of education too."

Even though he's not a big Engler fan, Salem High School freshman Clayton Williams would have gone to hear the governor. "I don't really like him. I think he's too hard of a person. If he couldn't get a Church on Sheldon Road.

Donna Rennolds, an instructor at Schoolcraft College, and daughter Kimberly were returning from a scuba diving trip.

Kimberly Rennolds was likely the best gymnast to ever attend Plymouth Canton High. "She had four out of the five school records, she was the best gymnast I had in 20 years," said varsity gymnastics coach John Cunningham.

She was voted Senior Gymnast of the Year in 1993 by the Michigan High School Judges and Coaches Association. "Kim had also placed the highest of any gymnast I had in the state championships," Cunningham said.

While attending Eastern, she helped coach some at Plymouth Canton High. "The thing I've discovered since the tragedy is how wide an expanse of people she had touched, kids that she helped coach and kids that had been on the team. There are so many people who are so upset at the loss," Cunningham said.

At Eastern, Kimberly was initially on the gymnastics team. "She liked to socialize a lot, it interfered with her social life," her dad said, explaining why she dropped it for cheerleading as that activity required less time.

She majored in hotel management. Roy Rennolds said this was a good career choice for his daughter because like her mother, she was always smiling and pleasant to people.

At Schoolcraft College where Donna Rennolds was an adjunct associate professor, Assistant Dean Sirkka Gudan said, "She was always enthusiastic, always willing to help out. She had a zest for life and took it to the workplace. She was somebody I could call up and ask, 'Could you come in for two hours?' and she would say I'd be glad to do that."

Donna Rennolds worked in the collegiate skills department, teaching students reading and study skills. "She did a number of presentations before major organizations dealing with these issues," Gudan said, adding Rennolds helped create the school's curriculum on the subject.

After discovering scuba diving, Donna took lessons at Schoolcraft and got active with the Ford Seahorses scuba diving club. She became a certified scuba diver four years ago.

During lunch breaks Gudan and Rennolds would swim in the Schoolcraft pool. "She often brought flippers. She and Roy both loved snorkeling, she's a terrific swimmer, she also took up rollerblading," Gudan said, adding it was difficult to accept her death.

While Donna Rennolds had been able to go scuba-diving on trips with her husband to the Cayman Islands and Cozumel, Mexico, this was Kimberly's first scuba diving vacation.

and its importance. Schools share the resulting data throughout the Rouge watershed, and can even compare it to rivers in other countries, via computer.

"They're concentrating on what is the water quality, and how did it get that way? They're really learning cause and effect on the whole issue of water pollution," said Jim Graham, executive director of the Friends of the Rouge, which oversees the project.

Activities vary depending on student age, but possible actions include chemical tests such as pH, temperature, amount of dissolved oxygen, and presence of fecal coliform bacteria; a stream survey recording the site's physical characteristics; and a search for benthic macroinvertebrates, also known as water bugs. "Those are good, strong indicators of water quality," Graham said, since the students look for insects which do not tolerate pollution well.

The Friends encourage students to develop plans of action to improve the river, and to participate in the annual Rouge Rescue.

Marjane Baker took 28 Tonda Elementary fourth-graders to a site at Hines Drive and Haggerty in Plymouth Township. It is her fifth year of participation in the program.

"I am attracted to hands-on, experiential learning. I feel that students retain information better if they're actively involved," she said. Her students gathered a variety of data from their site to combine with other results.

"We take a snapshot of the Rouge River," said Mark Mitchell, one of the program coordinators. "It's like one day in the life of the Rouge."

The classes study their results and boil them down to a single number, with 100 being the top. Mitchell said this water quality index typically varies from around 88, in the headwaters near Walled Lake, to 45 far downstream.

"The river does need to be cleaned up," Baker said. However, she was encouraged by the number of macroinvertebrates her students found last week: "In other years, the quality of the stream has been worse than it was this year."

Jim Ridgway of the Rouge River National Wet Weather Demonstration Project — a governmental restoration effort helping to fund the education project — said the student results seem accurate.

"We're taking (professionally collected) data and laying it next to the data collected by the schools," Ridgway said. "That data collected by the children is fairly good data."

Once students finish analyzing their results, they share data over the Internet. Stacey Hoffer, another coordinator of the program, said it provides a good way for urban and suburban kids to interact.

The city-suburban ties get stronger with a student congress at the Detroit Science Center, scheduled for 4-7:30 p.m. Monday. All participating schools are invited to send representatives to the event, which includes displays, fair exhibits, videos, murals, posters, skits, and songs. Tonda might send a few kids this year, Baker said.

"It's a great chance for them to share and meet each other. It's just an incredible evening," Graham said.

The project doesn't end there, however. The Friends encourage students to develop plans of action to improve the river, and to participate in the annual Rouge Rescue, set for June 1 this year.

Schools also compare local results with rivers around the world. Modems link students here with their counterparts in 136 other countries, including Australia, Brazil, Italy, Japan, and France.

Most of the overseas schools have studied their own river using the same materials and equipment as the Rouge classes, Hoffer said. The Rouge Education Project served as a model for all these other efforts.

The local program began in 1987 with 16 participating schools, and has expanded to around 100. "This is actually the largest student water quality monitoring program in the country," Hoffer said. It aims to weave together several different school subjects, including math and social studies, in addition to science.

"I do think that the project is a wonderful project for the kids," Tonda Elementary's Baker said. "These kinds of experiences help us to grow a little."

Competition for six open seats on the non-partisan Canton Public Library's Board of Trustees will be one of the only contested, local election races, with seven candidates running. Of these, four are incumbents and three are newcomers.

Other contested races includes the 18th and 21st State House districts which represent Canton.

Filing deadline for all local seats was Tuesday at 4 p.m. According to information from election officials, partisan races for the Canton Township Board of Trustees, supervisor, clerk and treasurer and an open, non-partisan seat for the 35th District Court bench will all be uncontested with only incumbent officeholders seeking re-election.

Candidates for the Board of Trustees, library board and district judge will appear only on the November general election ballot, according to Canton election officials. They will not appear on the Aug. 6 primary ballot.

Library candidates include: incumbents Katherine Baldrica-Basner who lives on Cheshire Lane; Dr. James Gillig of Napier Road; Gregory Stachura of Sandalwood Ct.; and William Simmerer of Cheviot. Challengers include: Kathy Young of Runnymeade; Raymond VanHoeck of Bartlett; and Edward Zelmanski of Priestbury Ct.

Filing deadline for all local seats was Tuesday at 4 p.m.

In the 21st State Representative district incumbent Deborah Whyman, R-Canton faces Democrat Deborah Nesbit of Canton.

Incumbent candidates running for the uncontested seats are all Republicans and include: Supervisor Thomas Yack who lives on Brandywyne; Clerk Terry Bennett who lives on Denton; Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter who lives on Gyde; and trustees John Burdziak of Sandalwood, Phil LaJoy of Willow Creek, Melissa McLaughlin of Ridge and Robert Schefferly of Hanford.

Chief District Judge John McDonald is also running for a third term, uncontested. He filed his papers for re-election in Lansing in January. His main concern, he said, is the doubling of the court's caseload and its impact on court facilities and staffing.

As growth continues on a fast pace in Canton, library candidates said they are concerned about the future of the library program, the impact of electronic library access and maintaining a quality level of service.

Several spoke with the Observer about why they are running.

"The number one piece of business is what are we going to do to meet the needs of a growing community?" said Stachura, current library board president and 18-year Canton resident who has served for the past four years. "How will new libraries in Wayne, Westland and Plymouth affect us and what will new technology mean to physical traffic?"

Stachura said his interest in running for re-election "stems, in part, from a feeling of giving back to the community." He said he is pleased to see so many people running for library board seats, indicating an interest in the library program.

VanHoeck is a 19-year Canton resident, who is retired from the financial industry. He is running with the hope of offering some of his expertise as the library faces issues of growth, and to give something back to his community. "I certainly think something has to be done," he said. "The community has outgrown the library. The future and how to deal with the growth is the greatest issue."

Baldrica-Basner, a Wayne-Westland high school teacher who has been on the library board since 1980, said she is running because library services "have been one of my prime interests. I believe in a strong library service, especially in western Wayne County, and I think we finally have that." She added that technology, getting direction from patrons and the obvious growth of Canton are key concerns.

Zelmanski, a managing attorney, has been a resident of Canton since 1980 and is involved in local scouting and children's athletics. He is excited about being involved in the technology explosion and its impact on the library. "We have a great library system," he said. "I want to participate in that and help continue the excellence." He added: "We're blessed with a problem here – the tremendous usership rate."

Gillig, a local orthodontist, Simmerer, and Young could not be reached for comment.

The Observer will continue election coverage of these races, including candidate interviews.

Harley die-hards spend big on bikes

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Canton police sold three 1994 Harley-Davidson FXRP motorcycles at auction Saturday, May 11, for $38,300.

The bikes became expendable when the township leased four 1996 machines to use this year.

Auctioneer John Bippus of Team One Realtors & Auctioneers barely opened the bidding for each bike before the bids topped $10,000.

Many in the audience of 56 seemed to be outpriced in the first 15 seconds of bidding.

The first machine went to Mike Perry of Pontiac, who bid $13,000 for his choice of the three available bikes.

Gasper Firore of Detroit won the second bike with a bid of $12,800.

The third bike went to Neil Coan of Flint for $12,500.

Police officers Keith Myers and Dave LeBlanc said Coan got the best bike.

"We took care of it, and it never gave us a day of problems," Myers said.

Coan said he will give the bike to his wife. He added that the standard price for such a bike is $11,600.

Other bidders came from as far away as Allegan, Romeo, Leonard and Clarkston.

Ralph Kimble, who owns Kimble Tire in Allegan, came to the auction with his father. Harleys, Kimble said, "are tough to get. They're tough to find. The used ones are going for more than the new ones."

Although Sgt. Joe Bippus had expected about twice as many people to attend the auction, each bike sold for well over the minimum price the township board set a couple months ago.

The township was not prepared to take less than about $9,000 for each motorcycle.

job, would he want welfare to be cut?"

Longsdorf said he won't vote for Engler, should the governor be running for vice president or any other public office once he's eligible to vote.

"He probably thinks this is just a high school and it doesn't matter. To quite a few kids, it did matter, and I'm one of them. He broke a promise to 4,500 kids."

Whyman said it was the fault of the governor's scheduling office. "I'm furious, as is he," she said.

Engler's visit to Canton was planned because he was going to be in the area campaigning for Whyman and State Rep. Jim Ryan, R-Redford. Whyman said the governor's staff directed her to arrange an hour-and-a-half itinerary.

"I asked, 'Do you have any guidelines,' and they said 'No. whatever is good for you is good for the governor. He's there to help you in your campaign.'

"Every district is different," said Whyman. "The heart of this community is the schools and the chamber of commerce. I went ahead and called the schools and the chamber. It took a lot of time to get it coordinated. I turned it in, and on Thursday, the scheduling office called and said, 'We don't want to do the school thing.'"

When Engler arrived, Whyman learned he wasn't even aware he was expected at the high school. "I told him when he got down here. He was very angry. We've actually learned since then that there is a serious problem in his scheduling office. Apparently it's a pattern that's been going on for quite some time. It was his office that screwed up. Not him, not me, and not the school."

Engler and Whyman did stop at Bruegger's Bagels and attended a chamber meeting at Damon's restaurant in Canton before Engler was interviewed on WJR.

John Truscott, Engler's press secretary, said, "Unfortunately, the stop at the high school didn't work that day. He was on the road so much last week it was non-stop. We couldn't make it fit in his schedule, given all the other commitments we had.

"This was never scheduled on our schedule," Truscott added. "Rep. Whyman put together a number of suggested events. We had to do what worked for the governor."

Engler would like to come back to the high schools, but "he's pretty much scheduled through the end of June. So there's no way we can do it before the end of the school year," he added.

Whyman said "I'm really sorry students are upset. I hope they look at my past record (bringing dignitaries in), and I hope they know I will try to make it up to them.

"The governor's office doesn't understand that you do some things in one district that you can't do in another," she said. "I think they learned you can't do this to the schools."

Students win in robotics

High school students Jeff Nagle, Greg Dreslinski, Nick Yeager and Eric Sendelbach, accompanied by instructor Mark Siedlik, earned a third-place award at the Society of Manufacturing Engineers' 10th annual Student Automation Contest April 27.

Six hundred middle and high school students fro 14 states attended the competition at the Chrysler Technology Center in Auburn Hills.

The Plymouth Salem team earned placed in the robotics pick and place programming category, one of eight areas of competition. The Salem team programmed a robot to pick up designated objects, in a designated location, in a specific pattern. Other categories included robot construction, robotics/automation work cell, robotics/automation work cell stimulation, robot maze, robot problem solving, sumo robot and videotape.

"These students learned to work together as a team to solve problems and make decisions ... skills which served them well in this contest and will serve them well in future education and employment,' Siedlik said.

We'll need to press whatever consultant we hire to have demographic information to us by July."

• "We should meet with the state to make sure we are gathering the appropriate information."

• "It might be appropriate to get staff and community input in August. We need to decide what the scope of the project will be; what we think the locations will be; what it would cost; who will be served; and when will the vote take place."

Time is of the essence, Little said.

"We are moving rapidly in terms of population growth. To delay for a long period of consultation would push us back probably a year."

The superintendent suggested an October campaign kickoff, soliciting help from community advisory committees.

"We need to target at least 65 groups in the community to make sure it's effectively communicated," Little said. "December would be the earliest that we could get approval if we were able to get all the items laid out."

Board President David Artley liked the sound of the strategy.

"Sometimes we don't think sequentially enough," he said. "There are difficult hurdles to get through regarding the type of construction operation we'll have, and the scope of the project.

"It's nice to know people recognize the need. We'll need extensive financing over the years. We don't know the amount, because we don't know the scope of the project."

Audience member and former Plymouth Mayor Bob Jones spoke to the board about public confidence.

"I would like to emphasize working on the credibility of the school system. The sooner we can get information to the people who are going to vote, the better. I don't know where we are in terms of debt retirement. Maybe we can look at some millage flips.

"But it will be important to sell this from day one."

With the national election in the offing, "it will be hard to get any kind of interest," said Jones. "People will be tired of hearing about elections. It will be important to be up front about it."

Canton High School student's art work will hang in the Capitol in Washington

A Plymouth Canton High School senior's artwork will hang in the U.S. Capitol for one year as a result of her first-place status in an art competition.

"I worked on the pastel for about two weeks everyday during class. It's a real honor to know my work will be displayed in Washington D.C." said Amanda Humphrey, who received a four-year art and academic scholarship from Adrian College.

Humphrey took first place in the 13th District Congressional High School Art Competition sponsored by U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers' office and coordinated by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

Two other Plymouth-Canton Educational Park students earned awards in the competition. Jeremy Martin and Trevor Anulewicz, both Plymouth Salem students, received honorable mentions for their artwork.

Humphrey received the first-place honor for her pastel picture of a fruit bowl. "It is really impressive. The judges were awed," said Geoffrey Rose of Rivers' office.

An awards reception for the participants and public was hosted by the PCAC on April 27. Rivers announced the 11 winners who were selected.

Humphrey's artwork is currently on display at the Frameworks on Penniman in downtown Plymouth. Al Larson, owner of Frameworks, donated his services and framed Humphrey's work.

Second place went to Dustin Schultz of Ypsilanti and third place went to Yale Jallos of Catholic Central.

Other students who received honorable mentions included: Alician Galka, Westland; Steven King, Ann Arbor; Miquel Martinez, Redford; Crystal Noe, Ypsilanti; Jeremiah Pommerville, Wayne; LeJuan Richardson, Ypsilanti.

Steve Lietz brought daughters Christine, 8, Michelle, 7, and Irish setter Ted to the event. Ted, said Lietz, "might get the remnants" if Christine and Michelle caught any fish.

Joel Mattana, 6, son of Bob Mattana, won a new fishing pole in the drawing, then hooked a stick. "But it looks like a fish."

Area leaders named to Dem delegation

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

It was almost as easy as Michigan Democratic leaders made it look.

This year, all candidates for national convention delegates and alternates were for the incumbent Clinton-Gore team. No hassle over what proportion a minor candidate would get or who would pick them.

Altogether, 317 of the party faithful sought 47 at-large delegate slots and six at-large alternates. The problem of how to winnow them down was resolved Saturday in Brighton High School when party chair Mark Brewer unveiled a "unity slate" for the Democratic State Central Committee to adopt.

The unity slate was elected unanimously and without dissent.

Michigan will send a total of 158 delegates and 21 alternates to the largely ceremonial national convention in Chicago Aug. 11-15. Brewer, a Mount Clemens attorney, will lead the delegation since Democrats don't own the governor's office.

This year, all candidates for national convention delegates and alternates were for the incumbent Clinton-Gore team.

"I have good news," Brewer told the assemblage. "The Democratic National Committee is making Doug Ross a super-delegate to the platform committee. That gives Michigan seven seats instead of six."

Ross is the former state senator from the Southfield area, Commerce director under Gov. James Blanchard and now job training idea man in President Bill Clinton's Labor Department. Now a West Bloomfield resident, Ross often has been mentioned as a gubernatorial possibility.

"We've exceeded our affirmative action goals," Brewer told a questioner. Michigan's delegation must include at least 37 minorities and actually has somewhere in the mid-40s, he said, adding, "I know the president appreciates it."

Democrats held caucues March 16 in which Clinton got about 6,000 votes against a handful of opposition votes. And the Democratic State Central Committee, instead of a state convention, picked the at-large delegates.

The state central meeting was held in the Republican bastion of Livingston County because Brewer wants "to rotate meetings around the state. It was Brighton's turn. And this is a targeted seat," he said, referring to the 8th Congressional District, where Democrats hope to unseat freshman Republican U.S. Rep. Dick Chrysler, a local product.

Pledged party leaders and elected officials (17): state Sen. John Cherry of Clio, Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara of Livonia, Wayne County Commissioner Kay Beard of Westland, party treasurer Barbara Rom of Bloomfield Hills, state Sen. Alma Wheeler-Smith of Salem.

At-large delegates (28): Michael Duggan of Livonia and Freeman Hendrix of Detroit, both deputy Wayne County executives; F. Thomas Lewand, former state chair and an attorney, and Kathleen Lewand, Bloomfield Hills; Carolyn Forrest, Bloomfield Township; Jennifer Granholm, Wayne County corporation counsel, Northville.

At-large alternates (7): Ron Thayer, former Blanchard administration official, now with the Wayne County executive, Bloomfield Hills; Pamela Dobrowolski, Wayne.

The rest of the delegation was selected from 16 congressional district caucuses by party delegates May 4. Among area delegates:

SYNOPSIS
CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON
1150 S. CANTON CENTER ROAD
CANTON, MI 48188
BOARD MEETING - TUESDAY, MAY 7, 1996

The Regular Meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Canton was held on Tuesday, May 7, 1996, at 1150 S. Canton Center Road. The meeting was called to order by Supervisor Yack at 7:02 p.m. He stated no action would be taken on the items for discussion.

Present: Bennett, Burdziak, Kirchgatter, LaJoy, McLaughlin, Shefferly, & Yack

Absent: None

Topics For Discussion:
1) Census Presentation, 2) Community Policing, 3) Review and Evaluation of Police and Fire Monthly Reports, and 4) Closed Session to Discuss Sale/Purchase of Property (added item)

1. Census Presentation by Census Consulting

a) Introduction
Clerk Bennett introduced JoAnne Ladwig and Pat Loder, of Census Consulting.

b) Purpose/Benefits
A 15% need is required to prepare a mid-decade census and preliminary growth indicators show Canton is poised for a mid-decade census. A census would provide proof of an increase of 15% in the population growth for Canton which could entitle the township to receive additional state-shared revenue funds. A qualifying census would also enable the community to receive additional liquor licenses which could attract businesses.

c) Census Process
The census would be conducted under the supervision of the State of Michigan after the Township Board of Trustees passes a resolution approving the process. The census would be a head count only.

d) Time Line
1. Submit resolution to Board for authorization to conduct mid-decade census to be filed with the Secretary of State's Office.
2. November 1996 - begin coordination of pre-census activities.
3. March 31, 1996 - enumerators begin field work.
4. June 1, 1996 - deadline for submittal of census report to the State of Michigan for certification.
5. June 30, 1996 - State must submit census report to legislature.

Clerk Bennett suggested a committee be formed to oversee the project and prepare a bid package. A resolution for authorization to conduct a mid-decade census will be presented to the Board of Trustees.

2. Community Policing
Director Santomauro stated the Community Policing program was established to move the public safety program forward. The program enables the public safety department to become more proactive. The "teams" concepts within the community and township departments have empowered the success of the Community Policing program. Officer Lazar, coordinating officer for the Commons, talked about the Canton Commons Community Policing program's success. He said the Canton Commons project has pulled the citizens together by coordinating the residents, township departments, juvenile services, and representatives of the landlord. He stated problems are being solved using a team approach and that the residents have developed a Canton Commons Awareness Board, a neighborhood watch organization, and community newsletter. The benefits are: an overall increase in awareness by the residents; an attitude of increased safety in the complex; reduced gang activity; a positive community contact and a feeling of an improved lifestyle; and progressive interaction with the management company. Susan Daniels, a resident of Canton Commons and co-chairperson of the neighborhood watch for the past two years, spoke in support of the Community Policing project. She said communications have improved within the Commons and people are becoming more involved in the community with a new sense of pride. Dir. Santomauro said the program has been educational in that the residents have become more responsible for their actions and those of their children.

3. Review and Evaluation of Public Safety Monthly Reports. Board of Trustees will review and submit comments for discussion at a future study session.

4. Closed Session - Discussion of Purchase/Sale of Property
The above is a synopsis of actions taken at the Regular Board Meeting held on May 7, 1996. The full text of the approved minutes will be available following the next regular meeting on May 14, 1996, in the Clerk's Office, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, Michigan.

County land targeted for sale

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

If all goes well Wayne County will sell its Northville Township property by the end of the year, according to a county official.

A preliminary meeting on plans for the Wayne County-owned Northville Township property will be held next week, according to county officials.

A planned unit development proposal for the more than 900 acres owned by the county in Northville Township is nearing completion and county officials hope to bring it before the township's planning commission on June 18, according to Michael R. Prochaska, director of the Business Development Division of the county's Department of Jobs and Economic Development.

After the plan goes through the approval process, sales of parcels will begin, Prochaska said. "We're moving with deliberate speed," he said.

"We would like to have it all sold this year," he said at a meeting of the county commission's Economic Development Committee, held in Northville Township Hall last week. The property is between Five and Six Mile at Beck Road, extending east of Sheldon Road.

The goal is to enter into a planned unit development, negotiate sales and then submit the proposals to the county commission for approval, Bill Eisenberg, project team leader of the Farbman Group, said.

The county has a team working on plans for the property. Two concepts are being presented — one including a golf course, the other without.

Single-family housing, senior housing, apartments, a research and development area and a commercial area are among the uses included in the plan.

Keeping the rural flavor and saving the forests on the property are among the goals in the project, according to Barry Murray, principal of Johnson Johnson & Roy/Inc., which is working on the project.

"Open space has been a real important component. It is something that is helping us frame the project," he said.

Private open space as well as common open spaces, and recreation areas including an 18-hole golf course and play area are also envisioned, Murray said. With a golf course, plans include 1,500-1,600 homes and without, 1,700-1,800 homes.

The research and development site would be 60 acres next to the current Optical Imaging Systems site at Five Mile and Beck. OIS bought the property it owns from the county.

A commercial site, containing smaller scale retailers such as a grocery store and drug store, would be developed at Five Mile and Sheldon under the plan.

The site, a self-contained subwatershed area, will be part of a state-of-the-art storm water management system as a part of the National Wet Weather Demonstration Project. "This storm water management program is a very exciting part of this," Prochaska said.

"I personally like the golf course plan because it preserves more open space, but not a county-owned or township-owned golf course," Sue Hillebrand, Northville Township clerk, said.

"That's the direction we're taking," a private development with covenants that it has to be open to the public, Eisenberg said.

Hillebrand said she expects the plan to come to the township board in June or July.

"We do have a long process out here," she said.

A majority of the township board is not interested in the commercial site included in the proposal, but most think a golf course is OK, she said.

Proceeds from the sale will go to the county's 21st Century Fund, which will make loans to financially distressed areas of the county.

The county owes more than $1 million in taxes on the site. Taxes are owed on the land because a ruling by the Michigan Tax Tribunal went against the county last year. The county had appealed a ruling that government-owned property not being used for public purposes can be taxed.

New census

It's worth the hefty price tag

If you look at all the new subdivisions that have gone up in Canton since 1990, it would be a wonder if the township's population hasn't grown considerably.

But a guess isn't good enough. A mid-decade census is needed to determine just how many people now live in Canton.

Additional state money _ to the tune of about $580,000 _ could come Canton's way if a mid-decade census is successful.

Successful means that Canton has to show that its population increased a minimum 15 percent since the 1990 census when 57,040 residents were counted. That increase means that the township must have grown a minimum of 8,560 residents.

A mid-decade census would cost the township somewhere in the ballpark of about $75,000. While it's a hefty price tag, the benefit of receiving additional state shared revenues _ based on population _ is worth it. Additional revenues could go a long way in helping solve some of the problems that have accompanied the burgeoning growth, such as deteriorating roads.

It must be recognized that there is always the chance that even with a documented population increase, the state Legislature could renege on additional payments. Historically, that hasn't happened.

An added benefit to a documented population increase is additional liquor licenses, which are based on population. Right now, Canton has one left through the end of the century.

Canton would be eligible for another license for every 1,500 additional residents. Clearly, by the number of restaurants that have recently opened their doors in Canton, the township is a hot spot for eateries. And there appears to be plenty of demand for more restaurants.

The driving force for a mid-decade census is the potential for additional state shared revenues, which are comprised of sales, income and small business taxes. This year Canton received about $4.6 million in state shared revenues.

If indeed Canton's population has grown and it can be proven, there's no reason why the township shouldn't receive more of the money that its residents are paying to the state.

According to Township Clerk Terry Bennett the next step is to research the use of a consultant for the census versus a bid process. A final estimate of the cost of a census won't be known until that information is available.

Conducting a mid-decade census by June 1, 1997, is the right road for Canton now. There's little point in waiting to prove the growth until the next decade census in the year 2,000.

The township could benefit from a mid-decade census, both in terms of additional state shared revenues and the added bonus of additional liquor licenses.

It's worth the time, effort and cost.

Rouge: Let's all do our part

Changing Currents

The Rouge River has made tremendous progress, but it still has a long way to go.

Inside today's newspaper is a special section called "Changing Currents" which takes a look at the ongoing recovery efforts focused on the Rouge. Ten years ago this week we published a similar section on the conditions of "our river."

We're happy to report that restoration programs have made considerable — in some cases, incredible — progress. The success of Rouge Rescue clearing-out efforts, expanding recreational opportunities, and the elimination of many sewer overflows into the river all indicate the start of a remarkable turnaround. It's only a start, however.

That the Rouge still needs saving is self-evident. That it deserves the resources required to do so seems almost as obvious.

For one thing, we have a responsibility to correct past abuses. We — our communities, our businesses, the people of this area — brought the river to its degraded condition. It's our mess, so we're the ones to clean it up.

Beyond that, it makes logical and economic sense to restore the Rouge. The river impacts this entire area's quality of life. A cleaner river means a nicer place to live, with better recreational opportunities. That translates into higher property values, more tax revenue, and happier residents.

Business benefits from a restored Rouge as well. A healthy river makes the entire area more desirable as a place to locate or expand. It demonstrates a commitment to the community that doesn't exist everywhere.

So, if the restoration deserves to continue, what still needs to be done? Continuing problems include actions by individuals, the rest of the sewer overflows, and pollution from storm water runoff.

As for individuals, we all need to remember our place in the watershed. At home and at work, we should all be aware of how our actions affect the river, and try to limit or eliminate our negative impacts.

The other two major concerns — remaining sewer overflows and storm water runoff — are in large part issues of government spending. Current construction will only take care of a third of the sewer overflow problems; beyond that, funding becomes uncertain.

Local, county and state governments have spent lots of money on the Rouge and will surely continue to do so. However, federal money has been key to this entire effort, and it will probably take more to see it through to completion.

Led in particular by U.S. Rep John Dingell, Congress decided years ago that the Rouge deserved funding because of what it could teach the rest of the country. It would be a shame to cancel the class halfway through the term.

The Rouge restoration is the kind of thing that only government can do. Not government alone — participation by groups and individuals is critical — but without government, this would never be happening.

The volunteers and officials who have cooperated to bring the restoration this far have earned the thanks and congratulations of everyone living in the watershed. It's up to all of us to finish the job.

Support legislation

There's a saying, "relationships almost always end badly, or else they wouldn't end."

Divorce is an unpleasant fact of life like death and taxes, but our current system of no-fault divorce is grossly unfair to many mothers and their children. Women in our society are not yet equal with men, earning equal pay, and men in our society are not yet equally responsible for the time-consuming, arduous task of rearing children. Yes, there are exceptions, but until there is true equality in these vital areas, there is no justification for a "50-50" settlement, which is what no-fault actually means.

Homemakers who forgo lucrative careers to care for children and make a safe, healthy environment for their families are especially wronged.

We must somehow get divorce out of the hands of greedy attorneys, who manage to prolong the process for their financial gain, and get it into the realm of fairness and the best interests of the children. This includes both their financial and emotional best interests. Far too many children of divorce are needlessly forced to live in poverty or with deprivation.

In addition, as a moral society, we should pass laws that send the clear message that marriage and parenting are valued and serious commitments. Selfish or callous disregard for these commitments and shirking of one's responsibilities should not be condoned. Our current law, in essence, reward such behavior. When there is obvious fault, such as abuse or affairs, there should be severe penalties.

I urge all of you who wish to see reform in this area to contact the lawmakers from your district. A final vote was to be taken on state Rep. Jessie Dalman's HB 4432 on May 14. Please let your opinions be heard on this important issue.

A big thanks

I wish that everyone who cares about children could have attended the First Annual Plymouth-Canton Community Turnaround Achievement Awards luncheon sponsored by Superbowl Lanes.

The luncheon at the Summit in Canton was excellent. Mort Crim as speaker was very thought provoking. But it was the love, dedication, and caring between the educators and the students being honored that was the real star of the day.

I have never had the privilege of witnessing such honest emotions between kids and their teachers, counselors, and administrators. The educators were so proud of these students who have "turned their lives around," and the students were so sincerely grateful to those who have helped them.

By the end of the presentations, there wasn't a dry eye in the house, and I think everyone attending felt that they had just been part of something very special. A very big thanks goes to all who made the magic possible.

Canton has no restraint

In response to all the "glee" about new development projects in Canton, I find it absurd that Canton is so consumed with building more outrageous homes and redundant commercial projects just for the sake of tax dollars.

Or is it perhaps to become the fastest overcrowded city in the nation? Having been reared in Plymouth, I am appalled at the lack of restraint the Canton city council is showing in saving the land that once was free to nature and its inhabitants, meanwhile, steadily destroying the appeal that Plymouth-Canton residents once enjoyed.

Not only is the housing surge an abomination, but building mega structures in the name of those already existing (Kroger and Kmart) is beyond rationality.

Moving to the west side was an exile for most and a pleasant place to raise a family. Now Canton can join the long list of quiet farming communities that turned into urbanized, traffic jammed examples of misplaced priorities in order for the rich to get richer.

POINTS OF VIEW

Rouge offered days full of fun, adventure

JOE BAUMAN

When I was a youngster growing up in Southfield, the physical landscape was much different from the concrete jungle of today. I grew up on 10½ Mile Road, now Civic Center Drive, between Telegraph and Lahser.

In the late 1960s, my street was a dirt road with large old houses set on four-acre lots. Behind the houses on the north side, and stretching all the way to what is now the I-696 service drive, was a great expanse of fields, woods, streams and ponds — a perfect place for kids to spend hours exploring, building tree forts and playing simulated war games.

Another favorite play spot back then was the Rouge River, which near my neighborhood wound its way along Telegraph Road, feeding the streams and ponds to the east and flowing to heaven knows where to the west after crossing Telegraph.

The "Rouge" offered year-round fun for our gang. In the winter it provided a great ice skating track; with the spring floods came a swollen river perfect for float trips in homemade Huck Finn-like rafts; and summer and fall saw lots of fishing and swimming. And the Telegraph and Civic Center overpasses provided perfect hunting grounds for my next-door neighbor Robby Cornacchini's raids on pigeon nests to supplement his coop.

Now, before you think I'm crazy, let's remember we are talking nearly 30 years ago here, and even if the Rouge pollution horror stories were around then — which I don't remember them being — we were just a bunch of kids. We didn't care about pollution or anything else; we were just looking for ways to pass the time.

Time has a way of blurring one's memory, but I still remember where the best fishing spots were, as well as our favorite swimming hole. During high-water periods, we used to jump off the Civic Center bridge into the water below, and I am happy to report that not a single serious injury was recorded during these leaps of faith (foolishness?)

You could catch fish in most stretches of the river, usually a combination of suckers, small carp and some sunfish. But the really big fish hid out in shady spots caused by big tree branches hanging over the river, and the previously mentioned bridge overpasses.

Which brings me to a favorite fish story. I was fishing one day with my brothers and some friends, and had camped out at the Telegraph overpass while the rest of the gang searched for fish further down shore. I was casting a big worm into the dark reaches of water flowing under the bridge and letting the current carry the bait to what I hoped was a lunker waiting in ambush.

I hadn't had a single bite and was ready to give up when I noticed that my line had stopped dead in the water. Thinking I had snagged a rock I gave it a slight tug. Instead of flowing back downstream, my line started heading upstream and I knew that I had hooked one of those lunkers.

Well, the fight with the mighty carp was long and intense. It would pull out line, and I would reel it back in. After what seemed like hours, I finally fought the behemoth to a spot directly below my feet. Standing on a rather high bank, I was faced with the dilemma of trying to lift the monster out of the water and up the bank. With no help around, the task proved impossible. Halfway up the bank, our eyes met; the fish gave a shake, and the line snapped, plopping the 10-pound beauty back into the river.

No one else saw that fish, but I will never forget it. And it saddens me every time I drive down my old street that almost nothing of my childhood remains. The houses have given way to a sea of apartment buildings, and the fields and ponds I so dearly loved were filled in and now support huge office buildings.

But one thing does remain. And who knows, if efforts like the Rouge Rescue and pollution controls are successful, maybe one day other kids will have a chance to share some of the good times that I enjoyed on the river. And there may even be another giant carp lurking under that bridge.

Kmart shows folly of unearned business bonuses

TIM RICHARD

Here's a pop quiz to see if you can think like a business mogul. Pretend you're a corporate director serving on the compensation committee.

Corp. A reported a 13 percent sales increase, hiked the dividend 12 percent to 19 cents a share, opened 259 new stores and added 53,000 jobs.

Corp. B reported a 5.8 percent sales increase, lost 23 cents a share, discontinued the dividend, closed 214 "underperforming" stores, sold off four entire subsidiaries, and either hid or didn't report employment in 44 pages of gray type in its annual report.

The other chief executive got a salary of $1 million but no bonus.

Question: Which company paid the $1 million bonus? Remember, you are to think like a corporate mogul, not a working-class peon.

Answer: Corp. B, with the shrinking assets and red ink, paid its CEO the $1 million bonus.

Corp. B is Kmart, the troubled Troy-based merchandiser. The CEO is Floyd Hall, on board since last June after Joseph Antonini bit the dust.

Hall's compensation is listed on page 7 of Kmart's proxy statement. (The profitable firm is Wal-Mart, which lists CEO David Glass' compensation in its proxy statement.)

In fairness to Hall, let it be pointed out he didn't trundle off with $1 million cash. He "voluntarily elected to use 100 percent of this cash bonus to purchase restricted shares of company common stock ..."

Recall that Kmart stock, which traded in the $20s a few years back, bottomed out at $6 last year. The day this was composed, it was at $10.

But Kmart's proxy statement (page 11) also tells us that Hall got "an effective 20 percent discount under the Company's Management Stock Purchase Plan." In other words, the stock Hall acquired in the $5 ballpark has doubled in price. He may not peddle it for two more years.

The page 7 salary chart says Hall's base salary was $660,300. Correction: He worked only part of 1995 for Kmart. On page 11, we find his annual base salary is $1 million. The proxy statement reveals him to be a warm-hearted soul: "At his request, Mr. Hall did not receive a salary increase for fiscal 1996."

Instead of soaking up $1.4 million in bonuses, Hall's team could have kept 25 workers aboard at $30,000 plus benefits.

Many left-wing writers say the issue is "people versus profits." Not so. The shared enemies of both stockholders and workers are executives who milk the corporation for unearned bonuses.

The Kmart board has a mushily-worded alibi for its generosity to the top of the heap: "In the circumstance of hiring new executive officers during the past year — in order to compete in the marketplace for executive talent — initial compensation was of necessity less performance based than executive officer compensation has been on an on-going basis."

Well, Kmart's annual shareholders meeting is coming up at 10 a.m. Tuesday, May 21, in a new setting — the Fisher Theater, 3001 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit. It should be quite a show.

Anyone who thinks Sam Donaldson and Mike Wallace are savage inquisitors never has been to a stockholders' meeting — particularly Kmart's.

PHIL POWER

Just to get the wheels turning, here's a selection of quotes about last week's conviction of Anthony and Susan Provenzino for violating the St. Clair Shores parental responsibility ordinance after their son, Alex, got into repeated trouble with the law:

- "We did the best we could. We taught him right from wrong from the day he was born. There's only so much you can do. Once they are outside the home, they are really making decisions on their own." – Susan Provenzino.
- "You don't ask your son to go (into counseling, which Alex had refused to do). You tell him what he's going to do." – An unidentified juror.
- "Should every act that a child does become part of the parent's responsibility? I don't know if it sends fear into the heart of every parent that their neighbor will be watching." – Jim Murphy, village manager in Holly, which is considering an ordinance.
- "We spend an awful lot closing the door after the horse is gone. I think anything that puts the family on notice about responsibilities of parenthood is a positive thing." – Gov. John Engler.

If your house is anything like mine, parental responsibility has been a hot topic around the kitchen table.

My wife, Kathy, is pretty strict about discipline. but she feels passing laws forcing parents to be responsible for their kids' behavior is, well, socialistic. "It's just another way for the government to stick its nose into places where it has no business," she said, putting her coffee mug down firmly.

Not only that, but "how in the world are they going to enforce ordinances like that? Lots of kids get into trouble, and who's going to decide which particular parents to prosecute?" she says. Indeed, vagueness of the St. Clair shores ordinance may well be the basis for appeals, according to Howard Simon, Michigan director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

As I sat mulling the matter, it occurred to me that what really has happened over the past 30 years or so is a significant shift in the definition of the American family.

In the old days (whenever that was), the traditional family was regarded as the basic module of social behavior. Sins or offenses committed by one family member were regarded as the responsibility of the entire unit. This old doctrine led to demands for family vengeance, feuds between families that lasted for generations. And it defined people more as family members than as independent individuals.

But beginning in the 1960s, the idea grew and flourished that members of a family should be defined as individuals, fundamentally autonomous and therefore ultimately responsible for their own behavior. In this definition of a person, membership in a family was secondary to one's own individuality.

I suspect that in a subtle way, this shift in the relative conception of individuals in relation to families has undergirded the breakdown of the traditional family. And it is this breakdown that lies behind the concern for "family values" and is expressed today in fascination with parental responsibility ordinances.

Certainly, the rise in juvenile crime is alarming. In Oakland County, for example, violent juvenile crime jumped 256 percent over the past 12 years, and national estimates suggest an increase of 100,000 violent juvenile offenders over the next decade.

Will parental responsibility ordinances have much weight in the mind of a bad kid like Alex Provenzino? I doubt it very much.

But properly written and applied with care, will they provide parents and police with a tool of last resort to suggest that people are, at the end of the day, family members and that their behavior needs to be affected by the family as a whole? I believe they will.

*Motor Trend

In the last two years, Chrysler Cirrus has won the praises of some of the world's most reputable publications. Car and Driver bestowed its "Ten Best" on Cirrus two years in a row. AutoWeek (May '95) called Cirrus "Best of the Bunch." And perhaps most satisfying, using information gathered from Kiplinger's Personal Finance Magazine (Dec. '95), it is projected that Cirrus will have a higher resale value than the Lexus GS300 in two years. All of this praise makes sense, especially when you consider that the cab-forward designed Cirrus LX has more interior room and more standard features (like air and ABS) than Honda Accord DX, Ford Contour GL and Nissan Altima XE. FAMILY ROOM

KAREN MEIER

A 100th salute to our families

Here it is! The 100th "Family Room" column!

As promised, today's column has been written by "Family Room" readers. But first, I'd like to say something. Thank you! Thank you to all who called or wrote this past week for so kindly opening the doors to your lives and your families.

And for those of you simply reading along today, I think you'll find kinship and camaraderie here. You'll be comforted to see you're not alone in the daily trials. The socks are unmatched in other laundry baskets, the bathroom floors are not always spick-and-span, and moms will be moms and children will be children, no matter where you go.

So here they are, the glimpses into other lives, other families. Each glimpse mentions family, mentions the number 100, and gets it done in about 25 words. Those were the rules. Here are the results.

Jon and Kathy from Livonia called to say, "Everyone said how sweet Allison's first words would be, but if you really listen (and Kathy told me to underline really) the 100th time, they're even sweeter.

Chris L. relates this wonderful family tradition: "After moving from a subdivision to five acres, we plant 100 trees every year. Rabbits and neighbors, snowmobiles and four-wheelers have killed a few, but we as a family keep on

Workshop helps women stay safe

■ Nick Colling and Bruce Miller and a group of their female karate students feel strongly that an ounce of prevention can keep women from becoming crime statistics. That's why they're offering a "Women's Personal Protection Workshop" this weekend.

The key to not becoming a crime statistic is to prevent yourself from becoming a victim in the first place.

Nick Colling and Bruce D. Miller, co-owners of Martial Arts America studio in Livonia, and their female black belt students, believe this so strongly that they have scheduled a "Women's Personal Protection Workshop" this weekend.

"I just got my black belt two months ago," said Julie MacGillis of Westland. "I thought there were so many things I have learned that you don't need a black belt to learn. We decided maybe we should put on something and see how it goes. Hopefully we can start something and do this every once in a while."

The free workshop is 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday, May 19, at the club, 37621 Five Mile, Livonia. If the demand is there, the studio will host another seminar 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday, June 9. Students should wear loose-fitting clothing.

Colling, a master instructor, came up with the idea when he opened the studio in 1991, but waited to hold the class until he had enough female black belts to help teach the seminar.

"I wanted their opinion, their input," Colling said. "The females at the seminar will be able to relate to the women black belts better, instead of a man standing up there saying you should do this or do that.

"Bruce and I, we're both males and although we're very sympathetic to the needs of women, obviously we can't put ourselves in their shoes."

The class is going to teach three break holds that can be used in many situations, explained Colling, a Plymouth resident. He and his students will keep the seminar simple by working with the most typical attacks and showing the responses.

"One of the things that I've heard is some of the ladies in the studio say they've taken a self-defense class and there was so much information that it was difficult to remember or recall all of it," he said. "So by taking a similar movement or action and applying it to a number of different situations it makes it easy for them to remember."

The seminar has a two-fold effect, MacGillis said. Besides teaching personal protection techniques, it will help boost self-esteem and assertiveness.

Colling, a seventh-degree black belt, knows that firsthand. He began taking martial arts classes at age 12 to overcome personal problems.

"I had a stuttering problem; I used to be picked on a lot," he said. "I took 11 different styles until I met Professor Roza. He helped me to work on my personal problems along with martial arts."

He started teaching in 1981 through local parks and recreation departments and 10 years later opened the studio.

At Martial Arts America, he has seen a variety of students at his club – doctors, police officers, homemakers and schoolchildren. But he hopes to see the prime targets of crime at his course.

"The people that need (the class) the most are young people and women," he said. "If you think about it, who is the person who is a victim

Jeanette P. of Canton is a busy mom with five children between the ages of 5 and 10 and from what I gathered from her message many of her five are boys. "Our family of seven can relate to your stories. I wipe the bathroom floor 100 times a day. When will their aim improve?"

Trichia, a Canton mom, looks at her family in another room in the house, the family room. "Watching my three children share 100 laughs and giggles as they build yet another fort in the heart of our home, the family room."

Mary from Livonia sounded a bit exasperated when she left this on the voice mail and I don't blame her. "I just bought about 100 juice boxes in the flavor all three of my kids crave and fight over. They just announced they no longer like that kind." And then I heard her quietly sigh.

I also detected a bit of exasperation in the message from Diane in Westland: "My five-member family schedules 100 activities into each and every week. Seem impossible, but we manage to accomplish each and every one. Amen! Alleluia!" That is cause for celebration.

From Aileen S. in Plymouth: "I have cut out most of your 100 'Family Rooms' and sent them to our daughter, Lynne in Maryland, a stay-at-home mom with four children." Thanks, Aileen. That's a very high compliment. I hope Lynne enjoys the most difficult and the most rewarding and the best job in the whole world – mom.

Maggie Z., also from Plymouth, writes: "Last August, when the temperature was near 100, our family packed 100 boxes (or more) and moved to Plymouth. Since then, 100 good times!" Maggie, I live in Plymouth, too. And 100 good times is right! It's a 100 percent wonderful place to raise a family.

Nancy and John H. in Livonia sent a postcard with a beautiful picture on the front and these beautiful, moving words on the back. "Twenty -five words aren't enough to tell about daughter Gail Cavanaugh and husband Jim. She had a kidney transplant in 1992 – Gail's father was the kidney donor. I gave her birth; he gave her a new life without dialysis. Gail and her husband are now in Russia adopting two children. Gail and Jim will be giving a new family life to 6-year-old Kelsey and 19-month-old Austin. We hope they'll be home in Troy May 15."

Kay K. from Plymouth writes this with a song in her heart and an open admission of her age, "After 'Happy Birthday,' our family sings, 'Stolat, Stolat,' the Polish birthday song that wishes you a lifetime of 100 years. I imagine the year 2053 and my children and their children licking the frosting off 100 candles."

Tony M., like Kay, openly admits his age. He's 12 and he writes, "My sister makes me mad for 100 reasons. Maybe more. She is always trying to pick a fight or make me mad ... I love her anyway."

Edna V. of Westland says: "I'm a grandmother of 16 and I'd love to have 100. I love to hear from them and receive pictures and letters. Praise the Lord!"

Great sales: Members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 373 show off the 54-inch stuffed panther they won for selling more than 1,800 boxes of Girl Scout cookies and which they are donating to the First Step Shelter for the victims of domestic violence.

Girl Scouts give cookie sales prize to families at First Step's shelter

Families staying at the First Step shelter for victims of domestic violence will son have a new stuffed animal to cuddle, thanks to Junior Girl Scout Troop 373.

The scouts won a 54-inch stuffed panther, which they named Daisy, by selling more than 1,800 boxes of Girl Scout cookies this year.

More than 70 troops qualified for the drawing, held by the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council, by selling at least 1,8000 boxes of cookies.

Troop 373 began doing service projects for the First Step shelter five years, when most were Brownies.

The troop is made up of 12 fourth and fifth graders from three schools: Lincoln and Schweitzer Elementary in Westland and St. Michael's Elementary in Wayne.

Each year, they have chosen First Step as their service project, according to troop leader Virginia Smith.

"The girls spotted the stuffed panther at the Cookie Kickoff event in January," said Smith. "When I told them about the contest, they were determined to try to win the prize and to give it to the kids at First Step."

The Florida panther was chosen as the national mascot for the 1996 Girl Scout Cookie Sale to make people aware of endangered species.

Once found throughout the southern states, today, there are only about 30-50 now living mostly in the Everglades and the Big Cypress regions of Florida.

Writer is self-motivated, likes to be in control of life

Dear Lorene,

I am a 68-year-old woman, who always reads your column. I am right-handed and ordinarily print my letters as I'm sure they are more legible. Never could write very well. I'm not sure how accurate graphology is, but always find your comments interesting. Thanks for your contribution to the paper. God bless.

S.S.,
No city given

This is the handwriting of a woman who likes to be in control of her life. She may seek to have her own way, possibly driving to take charge in a relationship.

She is self-motivated and has the ability to work energetically. Many of her goals are set high and require challenge on her part. However, she may hesitate or procrastinate when she feels unsure. Once her confidence is in place she moves forward.

A direct and resourceful approach to life is seen here. She can get down to work without prodding from others. This may sound paradoxical to the above paragraph. However, both patterns appear in her handwriting and can result in indecision at times.

This woman has a good mind. Presently, it appears that she is actively seeking information in the spiritual or metaphysical realm.

She does not want to be held back by traditional norms or past roots. Creative talents, intuition and leadership ability are part of her personality. She might want to guard against becoming too domineering.

While she has a desire for peace, don't think of her as a pushover. She can become aggressive where matters of importance are concerned. Feelings of resentment regarding past happenings also come into play at times.

Protective defenses are ever alert to disapproval from others. Perhaps she does not have the ability to recognize constructive criticism. The little green-eyed monster may give her problems at times.

Occasionally, the writer needs time to recharge her batteries. At times, she appears to be friendlier than at other times. This can be confusing to others, causing them to wonder where they stand with her.

Research tells us that printers are inclined to conceal a great deal, so few people probably know this writer intimately. Possibly, she is not as self-confident as she would have others think. There appears to be a sense of inadequacy here that has been with her for a long time. On the positive side this can act as a spur to greater things.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies are not possible.

I am a 68 year old woman, who always reads your column - I am right handed and ordinarily print my letters as I'm sure they are more legible - Never could write very well - I'm not even sure how

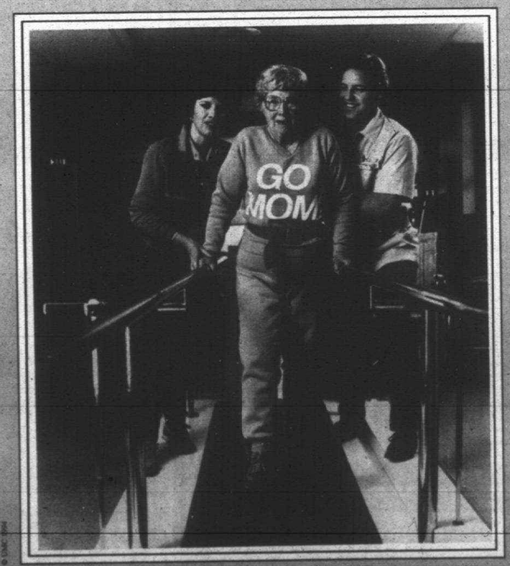
Rehabilitation Services
The Road Back.



St. Mary Hospital is affiliated with William Beaumont Hospital

It's been said that even the longest journey begins with a single step. For people disabled from strokes, sports and work related injuries, neck, back and hand injuries, fractures and spinal injuries, or arthritis — and for their families who offer the support and encouragement essential for successful rehabilitation — that first step can begin at St. Mary Hospital.

Our physiatrist-managed comprehensive programs of physical medicine and rehabilitation are tailored to the needs of individual patients. And our team of physicians and rehabilitation specialists bring their wide range of skills and experience together for a single purpose: to help each patient reach his or her maximum level of independence in daily life.

For more information on our inpatient and outpatient programs and ongoing support groups for patients and family members, talk with your physician or call (313) 464-WELL.

Sakharov speaks about his life in America, Russia

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

Nobody has ever accused Vladimir Sakharov of keeping his political and social views classified.

The man the CIA dubbed "the most knowledgeable defector on record" made that clear during a recent visit to the Northville Town Hall series. Sakharov began his hour-long, disjointed talk with a frank explanation about why he left the Soviet Union and came to the United States.

"American models, American Cadillac cars, and my dream for America and how I wanted to walk out of Waldorf Astoria hotel with two beautiful American models that I saw in Moscow and get into Cadillac with sharp fins," he explained in his thick Russian accent.

"Did I fulfill my dream in three years? No, but I gave up my Japanese car, that's a step in the right direction."

A former professor at Stanford University, he described the California education system as one that "caters to minorities" because English is not required. Many of his students did not speak English.

"I strongly believe in the motto that once you're in America, you speak English or else you get the hell out of here," Sakharov said to rousing applause.

■ 'I strongly believe in the motto that once you're in America, you speak English or else you get the hell out of here.'

Vladimir Sakharov

He became so frustrated with the system, he said he "dropped teaching" at Stanford University. With some sense of seriousness, he described his latest job.

"I have gotten involved in the last two years in some work which I don't really like," he explained. "It's not good for my health. It has to do with the Russian mafia. They're not like the Italians. They don't give you a second chance. If they don't like you they just say goodbye and nobody knows anything. That's why it's so impossible to penetrate them.

"Anyway, I'm not penetrating them. I'm just giving you my secrets."

Born in the ranks of the Moscow international elite, Sakharov became a leading diplomat and intelligence officer, representing the Soviets. Later, he became a special operative, courting Egyptian counter-intelligence and gained access to Anwar Sadat.

During that time, he worked as a "double agent" passing information to the United States. He doesn't consider himself a defector because he left when "glasnost" and "Perestroika" did not exist. Disillusioned with the Brezhnev regime, he risked his life to become an American.

Since coming to the West, he has had an international best seller with his book "High Treason." He received his doctoral degree in international relations and law from the University of Southern California; worked for the University of Arizona, University of Mexico and the U.S. Air Force and served as an advisor to the FBI.

He has also been featured on "60 Minutes" and worked as a commentator for CNN during the Persian Gulf War.

Recently, he has had the chance to return to Russia and found the conditions there distressing.

"When I go to Russia, I see a great deal of pain," he said. "Every time, it's becoming harder and harder for a person that was brought up when there was no crime, plenitude of goods and peace among people to come to a country with rampaging crime. It's very hard to know that your summer house has been robbed two to three times a year – not robbed for valuables, just for food.

"It's not very pleasant to know that the biggest business in Moscow is building steel doors for the apartments."

As a result, he said, Russians are going to look toward other options during the upcoming election. He comes close to guaranteeing that Boris Yeltsin will not return to power.

"At the front of the election is the nationalist front, which is supported by radical elements that want to bring Russia and make it back into a mighty powerful empire because Russian pride has been stripped from Russia," he said. "'Russia used to be the country that controlled half the world. The military was going into Indian Ocean, into the Mediterranean Sea, and to the Atlantic and to the Pacific, everywhere.

"Now they don't have the money to sew the flags. Their nuclear plants are degrading themselves. The second Chernobyl is going to happen very soon."

Women's gossip: Call it history's own 'shop talk'

By Linda Ann Chomin
Special Writer

Janet Langlois knows how to entertain her audience with tales about women, folklore and gossip, and their connection to the needle arts.

A professor of literature and director of the folklore archive at Wayne State University, Langlois explores the history of women and folklore by looking at its place in embroidery and textile arts.

For hundreds, perhaps thousands of years, women have sat and sewn together. Folklore and gossip flourished in royal courts as well as in the sewing circles of American pioneers, providing a forum for women like Susan B. Anthony who gave her first suffragette speech at a quilting bee.

Men' gossip or "shop talk" is considered a part of corporate culture and being in the know, said Langlois. However in most world cultures, women's folklore and gossip carries a negative connotation like relayed in the old Javanese saying "that a woman's tongue three inches long can kill a man 6 feet high."

Langlois prefers to think of gossip in a more positive light. She views women as keepers of the oral tradition.

"We usually define gossip as malicious words spoken at someone who is not there," said Langlois, who closed out the Schoolcraft College Women's Resource Center's Winter Luncheon Series April 12. "But opinions are changing. There's a whole realm of positive gossip that hasn't been talked about. There's gossip that is talking about someone in a caring manner."

Langlois is quick to point out the irony evidenced in the topic of woman gossip.

"When women talk about their daily lives, it's considered gossip," she said. "When they write about their daily lives, it's considered literature."

Recognized value

According to the New York Times, many people now recognize and value women's' domestic arts like quilting and embroidery. In fact, there's a revival of quilting bees by American women. One of the benefits of these group needle sessions is the social outlet that's provided.

"There's a sense of intimacy building through gossip and there's gossip as therapy,' she said. "Quilting is therapy during which there is mild social criticism like what they didn't like about their spouses. The quilting process is people talking together and enjoying each other's company.

"There's a connection with quilting and story-making. Many quilts have pieces of their family stories."

"Quilts are a form of language," said Nancy Swanborg, director of the Women's Resource Center afterwards. "It's like Janet Langlois said, old quilts tell a story like the friendship quilt hanging in the Women's Resource Center. It was assembled by women who have been helped by the center."

Nancy Remick is a volunteer at the center. She attends the luncheon series regularly because of the thought provoking speakers.

"I thought it was interesting that she was talking about gossip as a form of socialization," said Remick, who is a Plymouth resi-

Scott aims for state honor

Members of the Garden City Business and Professional Women's Club have plenty to celebrate about. Their 1996 Young Careerist, Kimberly Scott, is on her way to the state competition.

Scott, a Livonia resident, recently was selected as Young Careerist at District competition in April. She will represent District 9 at the state judging, which will be held during the state convention later this month.

The Young Careerist Program is sponsored by BPW/USA to highlight the achievement of men and women ages 25-35 who have been employed in business or the professions with at least one year of experience in the career area.

The nominee must live or work in the area served by the state federation and support the goals and objectives and legislative platform of the BPW/USA.

Scott, 27, is a detective sergeant on the Garden City Police Department, earning the rank in the minimum number of years (five) needed for promotion.

She currently is the department's D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer, providing a "structured education program" to sixth-graders in the Garden City Public Schools.

Scott is a graduate of St. Alphonsus High School in Dearborn. She will graduate later this month from Madonna University with a bachelor's degree in police administration.

Prior to becoming a police officer, she was employed by the Dayton Hudson Department Store Company as a loss prevention investigator.

Goals Scott has set for herself include getting comfortable with her new position before pursuing graduate studies. She also would like to seek advancement within the police department.

"And as a form of support," added friend Connie Fitzner, also of Plymouth.

From professional photographers to storytellers and gardeners, the WRC Luncheon Series not only serves up a delicious meal prepared by the Schoolcraft College Food Service but a diversity of topics focusing on a closer look at the lives and stories of women. Between 60 to 100 women per luncheon take advantage of the special afternoons held during the fall and winter terms for the last 10 years.

Community service

"The luncheon series is held as a service to the community and to show off Schoolcraft College and the Women's Resource Center," said WRC office manager Elaine Tomalty.

The Women's Resource Center provides support for exploring educational, financial, professional and personal plans for women in transition. Founded in the late 1960s, WRC assists single parents, widowed and divorced women, and displaced homemakers with counseling, support groups, grief and coping seminars, career information and financial aid to return to school.

The displaced homemakers "From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips" program is a 16-week course in assertiveness training, identifying job-related skills, resume writing, interviewing techniques, job placement assistance, and educational counseling and help in applying for school-related financial aid.

Last fall this grant program enrolled nearly 130 students, including single parents, single pregnant women, homemakers, and displaced homemakers who lacked skills necessary for self sufficiency for themselves and their families.

For more information on its programs and luncheon series, call the Women's Resource Center at (313) 462-4443.

Local band PUNK by definition

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Compliment Jason Navarro on his black stud earrings and you might get more than you bargained for.

Saying that the hole is getting a little dirty, Navarro reaches up and pulls out one of his earrings to reveal a dime-sized hole in the lobe of his ear.

Punk is all about attitude, but the earring hole, and nose and eyebrow rings are superficial enough proof of Navarro's ethic.

There's no questioning Navarro's beliefs just like there's no second-guessing that The Suicide Machines, the band he fronts, is rooted in punk. Because it's so obvious, it frustrates guitarist/vocalist Dan "Suicide Machine" Lukacinsky that his band keeps getting mislabeled as a ska group.

"We're definitely not ska," said Lukacinsky, 26, of Redford. "That's one thing that's always bothered me. If you want to label us with anything, I would definitely say we are a punk band."

The clarification comes at an important time for The Suicide Machines, who is releasing its debut album "Destruction by Definition" (the Walt Disney-owned Hollywood Records) on Tuesday, May 21.

Recorded in California, the album tears through 16 songs at breakneck speed with 14 of the three-chord anthems clocking in at under 3 minutes. It peeks into the "the vulnerable state of being young and dissatisfied," as reflected in the title.

"The name kind of speaks for itself. There's a lot of people in the scene who are punk, who are this, who are that. It's kind of destroying itself and separating people," said the 23-year-old Navarro, formerly of Livonia and Redford.

In the Lukacinsky-penned "No Face," Navarro sings "Every time that I hear that another kid died through a senseless act of violence it makes me want to cry."

"It's true. Every time I heard that some kid was killed, it makes me sad," Lukacinsky said when asked about the inspiration behind the song. "Younger kids are killing each other over stupid (stuff)."

"What inspires me is there's a lot of stuff that needs to be said. I'm doing it for a purpose. If I'm not conveying a worthwhile message then I don't think I'm doing anything."

The band didn't pull the plug on its sense of humor for the album, however. "The Vans Song" urges listeners to "worship Jeff Spicoli/not Chris Cornell." (Spicoli is the Sean Penn surfer dude in "Fast Times at Ridgemont High" and Chris Cornell is the lead singer for Soundgarden.)

"I wrote that song four years ago. It's silly but it's meant to be. I don't think you'll find us writing and playing songs like that now. Back then I didn't know what I wanted to write about. After awhile you just figure out what your music is all about."

For the recording of the album, Hollywood Records offered a crack team of punk geniuses to bring out The Suicide Machines' big sound. Julian Raymond, the band's artist and repertoire representative, produced "Destruction By Definition" along with Phil Kaffel. Jerry Finn, who has worked with Green Day and Rancid, mixed it. Bim Skala Bim's Vinnie Nobile stopped by the studio also to throw in his trombone on "Hey."

"We went in there with the idea of what we wanted to do and we came out with exactly what we wanted to do. It was a big success as far as I'm concerned," Lukacinsky said.

Formed in March 1991 by Navarro and Lukacinsky, The Suicide Machines – which also includes drummer/vocalist/keyboardist Derek Grant, 19, of Westland, and bassist/backing vocalist Royce Nunley, 20, of Redford – originally billed itself Jack Kevorkian and The Suicide Machines. They subsequently shortened the name due to convenience and obvious other legal problems.

"We were just avoiding any problems in the future," Lukacinsky said during an interview last year. "Besides I always thought that the name was too long. I hated saying the name."

Following a debut gig in a friend's basement, the group opened for the Mighty Mighty Bosstones in 1992.

The next year, The Suicide Machines opened Rancid's first Detroit show at Grounds Coffeehouse at the University of Detroit Mercy. In the fall of 1994, the band rejoined Rancid on stage in front of 900 people at St. Andrew's Hall.

Inspired, The Suicide Machines set up their own tours, including a 1994 west coast stint and last year's nationwide trek with fellow ska punks Buck-O-Nine.

In the meantime, The Suicide Machines released two demos "Green World" and "The Essential" along with a 7". The band's big break came in 1995 when The Suicide Machines released a split CD "Skank for Brains" with San Francisco's Rudiments on Dill Records.

A song from the album, "New Girl" weaseled its way onto Detroit radio creating a buzz in the city. Hollywood Records sniffed around and swept up the band.

"What drew me to them was the songs and the energy in which they played them. They fused punk and ska, instead of doing just punk or just ska, which I thought was interesting, fresh and cool," Hollywood's Raymond explained.

The Suicide Machines will hit the road once again the morning after their Friday, May 24, show at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit. The quartet will tour the west coast with Guttermouth and then join with the Specials in New Orleans in June. Also on the menu this summer are selected dates on the "Warped" tour which includes No FX, Pennywise, Mighty Mighty Bosstones and Bad Religion on some dates.

Raymond has high hopes for The Suicide Machines.

SPECIAL WRITER

Jo Griffing remembers when the Visual Arts Association of Livonia functioned as an educational subgroup of the Livonia Arts Commission in the 1970s. Griffing was one of the original arts commissioners. Although now a separate entity, VAAL remains dedicated to the advancement of knowledge in the visual arts by offering classes at the Jefferson Center.

From a watercolor of bright yellow daffodils to a pastel of purple coneflowers, the VAAL Spring Art Exhibit at Livonia City Hall serves as a showcase for its workshops and classes. Excitement filled the air May 8 as 34 members installed their artworks in the lobby.

"There's a real variety of artists and styles. There's literally something for everyone," said show co-chair Judy Granata.

From 115 entries 83 works, representing mediums ranging from oil to montotypes, were juried into the exhibit by artist/sculptor David Messing, owner of the Art Store and More in Livonia and a former art columnist for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. Messing, who earned a bachelor in fine arts in sculpture from Wayne State University, Detroit, was commissioned for paintings and sculptures by the Detroit Historical Museum, Kalamazoo Valley Science Museum and the Monroe Museum. He presently designs sets used in commercials and print advertisements for Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and General Motors.

Messing awarded Griffing the Grumbacher Award for Best Use of Color for a watercolor of a red chair and flowers. Griffing painted the work in Edee Joppich's Color Theory Workshop at VAAL.

"I love flowers," said Griffing, an employee of FTD in Southfield.

Regina Dunne took Best of Show for a pastel created in an independent session held weekly with a live model at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association. Dunne won Best of Show four years ago in a VAAL exhibit, also for a pastel. Born in Cuba, she immigrated to this country in the 1970s to study fine art. Dunne compromised her dream when an aunt with whom she lived suggested studying commercial art to ensure a stable income. In her fourth year at Society of Arts and Crafts (now Center for Creative Studies) in Detroit, Dunne accepted an illustrator position at J.L. Hudson in downtown Detroit. Fifteen years later, she shelved her art career to raise four children. Five years later, she began freelancing for major metro Detroit retailers. In 1987, she quit to study fine art at VAAL, the BBAA and Center for Creative Studies. Red and purple color the background of her winning piece.

"I like things bright. I use a lot of bright colors in my work. I think it comes from my culture," said Dunne.

Susan Aitken won the Livonia Arts Commission Award for a heart-touching watercolor of a little girl living in squalor in Mexico. A former art teacher at the Plymouth Christian Academy, Aitken is currently a master of arts candidate at Eastern Michigan University. She has illustrated six children's books published by the Centering Corp.

The books are used in therapeutic situations to assist children facing personal and social difficulties.

"A painting which combines all the basic elements of art and is technically well executed can be considered good art.

But the most successful, poignant paintings are those that find meaning beyond the two-dimensional surface.

I see my work as a catalyst challenging the emotion, intellect and experiences of the viewer," said Aitken.

The VAAL exhibit was judged in three categories. In oil: First and Second Place went to Irene Kallas, and Third to Gerald Flannery. Watercolor: Al Weber won First Place; Beverly Johnston, Second; and Jan Clark, Third. Mixed Media: Regina Dunne was awarded First Place; Saundra Weed, Second, and Helen Lewicki, Third.

Honorable Mentions went to Gerald Flannery, Helen Kryson, Louise Dorman, Susan Aitken, Barbara Anderson, Billie Thompson, and Linda McVicar. Prices for the work range from $125 to $600.

Not to be missed is the pastel of purple coneflowers by Evelyn Henry of Redford. Henry recently won First Place in the Farmington Artists Club exhibit that took place as part of Farmington's first Festival of the Arts.

Also worth a look are Louise Dorman's monotype of the Grand Canal in Venice, and a mixed media work incorporating calligraphy by Linda McVicar.

Dorman is a former medical librarian at the University of Michigan who paints because she's "driven to it and wants to share with others the pleasure" she receives from looking at various subjects.

Dorman says, "every city has its own exquisite light" as is evidenced by her canal scape. McVicar teaches calligraphy at CCS and the BBAA.

One of her works was accepted into an exhibit at the National Cathedral in Washington opening June 15.

"I hope people think of calligraphy as more than addressing envelopes," said McVicar. "Calligraphy can be used to enhance other art forms."

FRIENDS OF POLISH ART

If you have an interest in Polish history, culture or music and the connection between music and history, you will want to attend a general membership meeting of the Friends of Polish Art 7 p.m. Friday, May 24 at St. Colette Church, 17600 Newburgh Road, (one block north of Six Mile) Livonia. Guest speaker Frank Koscielski will share a presentation entitled "Music or Mayhem? Exploring Penderecki's Threnody for 52 Strings" in which he will reveal the connection between Krzysztof Penderecki's composition and the nuclear bombing of Hiroshima at the end of World War II.

Koscielski teaches at Wayne State University where he is a Ph.D. candidate in history. He has a long-time interest in history, especially the history of World War II and the post-World War II era. He acquired his love of music from his mother who taught piano. She introduced Koscielski to the compositions of Penderecki, who conducted the Warsaw Symphony Orchestra in Ann Arbor last year.

The meeting is open to guests. There is no admission charge. For more information call Edward Wojtan at (313) 425-2727.

FINE ARTS

Journey through 'Time, Mind and Space'

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

The multimedia production of Sojournus Antiquitus: Paleolithic Journeys through Time, Mind and Space presented by Schoolcraft College May 17-19 promises to be the arts experience of a lifetime. Performances will run 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 3 p.m. Sunday in the Liberal Arts Theatre on campus, 18600 Haggerty Road, Livonia. Tickets are $7 and available at the door before the performances, or in advance by calling (313) 462-4409.

Thirty minutes before the performances, the audience is invited to walk through a gallery of paintings, photographs and drawings produced by Michael Todoroff of Westland; Shekinah Errington, Garden City; Sharlet Di Giorgio, Birmingham, and Monte Nagler of Farmington Hills, among others.

Nagler, who studied with Ansel Adams, is a nationally recognized fine art photographer as well as a columnist for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

In addition to demonstrations of stone tool construction by the Michigan Flintknappers, artifacts on loan from the Cranbrook Institute of Science in Bloomfield Hills exhibited in the pre-show gallery, add an air of authenticity to the production.

Created and composed by John Feliks of Garden City, Sojournus Antiquitus utilizes original art, photography, video, music and the performing arts to delve into what life was like during the Upper Paleolithic period 40,000 to 10,000 years ago.

Divided into 25 vignettes or short stories, the show progresses from an awakening of life to courtship and hunting rituals, a Shaman dance, and death. There is even a tribute to the animals who inspired the Lascaux cave paintings in France.

"The show is going to be pretty unusual for most folks. There's everything from poetry about subjects that pre-historic people may have thought about, to a funerary rite for a much loved woman in a clan. I made up all the language and lyrics so it's a combination of English and this other language. Elaborate program notes guide the audience through it," said John Feliks.

"There's a lot of variety in it. Lots of well-known artists and musicians and different kinds of music from classical to folk, Native American, and New Age. While it's not a New Age show, it does have some of those elements in it."

Sponsored by Schoolcraft College's Office of Instruction and Student Services and the Multimedia Team of Bradley Bloom, Gayle Stanek, Sharon Szabo and graphic design professor Stephen Wroble, the production evolved over the last year thanks to cooperative efforts of Feliks, and members of the faculty, staff and students of the Schools of Music and Art, the Media Center and Computer Information Systems at the college.

"We've never done anything like this before. It's been a learning experience. We're basically ground breaking, taking 21st century technology and journeying it back in time," said Gayle Stanek in an interview before a technical rehearsal last week.

"It's totally a student originated production and takes multimedia to another dimension."

Bloom, professor of music at Schoolcraft College and visiting lecturer at the University of Michigan Centre for Performing Arts and Technology, is musical director and conductor of Sojournus Antiquitus. His recent work centers on the application of the computer to music education. As a result, Schoolcraft College is a leader in this field and maintains one of the finest electronic music labs in the state.

Jim Posante, who has staged productions for the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, the Ann Arbor Civic Theatre and Performance Network in Ann Arbor, is theatrical director and choreographer.

"It explores what might have been if we could drop in on this era and visit the various cultures. The actors are behind a scrim (or screen). So everything will be seen as shadows," said Posante, a faculty member of the independent Greenhills School in Ann Arbor.

Feliks originally was inspired to create Sojournus Antiquitus three years ago as a project in the now defunct Academic Options independent study program at the college.

A student of Bloom's since 1990, Felix said it was Bloom who first supported the project and promoted the college's involvement. Additional inspiration came from an art history class with Robert Dufort.

The production involves more than 60 volunteers who provided hundreds of hours of labor. Wroble's computer graphics class designed all of the flyers, posters, program, tickets and gallery catalog for the event.

They also assisted in creating video and scrim shadow templates.

"It's been a logistics nightmare trying to coordinate everything," Wroble said.

MUSIC

Bob Dylan boogies down with roaring crowd

By Hugh Gallagher
Staff Writer

Bob Dylan tore it up Tuesday at Ann Arbor's Michigan Theater.

Looking healthier and friendlier than he has in years, Dylan and his tight rock band gave an all out, boogie down concert of blues and rock. The esteemed poet king of rock put the emphasis on the music this time.

A short acoustic set, featuring a croaking but sweet "Mister Tambourine Man" and a scorching "Masters of War," was just a break from the wall of sound music. Dylan's own guitar work and his always spirited, but this time inspried, harmonica playing were more in touch, more driven than they have been in recent years. And his voice, though showing the wear of age and overuse, was clearer and more expressive than recent outings.

This was perhaps the most diverse audience this side of a Grateful Dead gathering, ranging from grandparents to 12-year-olds. Toward the end of the evening, as Dylan and the band roared through an encore performance of "Highway 61," the crowd got out of hand and took the mosh pit onto the stage, with some female audience members kissing the rock idol and others just touching the "sacred" silver sport coat. The lax security people finally woke up as Dylan had to slip away to preserve his safety and his dignity.

Surprisingly, Dylan returned and gently chastised his audience with a song, "It Ain't Me Babe." Dylan has always loathed hero worship ("Don't follow leaders, avoid the parking meters.")

He then continued to sing, playing to the audience with a final encore of "Rainy Day Woman" ("Everybody must get stoned.") The crowd was dancing up a frenzy by this time.

In final salute to his new young fans Dylan, as he had at several earlier points, went to the edge of the stage and shook hands with the adoring crowd, playing them like Bill Clinton two weeks before the election.

But, of course, Dylan has already been elected. He is the greatest living rock star, and even Elvis and John Lennon would yield to Dylan as the greatest songwriter in the history of rock music.

Dylan's caustic, allusive, densely packed lyrics have been the sounding board of now three generations. My own sons couldn't understand why I listened to that odd croaking voice when they were listening to the irritating drivel of rap. Now they are as in awe of Dylan as I am.

Dylan changed popular music. He sang about love, yes, but in apersonal, even wrenching and bitter rush of words (Tuesday he was electrifying on "Just Like A Woman"). But he also sang about a changing, disturbing world.

He took protest singing from the tiny world of the leftist movement and made it a genre, albeit one he works at sparingly.

But, most peculiarly, he sang about God and man's relationship to God, not just in his "born again" phase but from the very beginning of his career.

His songs are rich with Biblical allusions and a very personal, Judaic give and take with the deity as any careful listening to "Highway 61" will attest. Tuesday the band ripped through a Jimmy Hendrix style version of "All Along the Watchtower," one of Dylan's great apocalyptic visions, both a deviously simple and stunningly complex take on biblical prophecy.

Dylan plays this area again tonight at Pine Knob. He is playing at his best in years and is not to be missed!

PSO ends season with pops concert

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra will perform popular music from the past five decades at its pops concert featuring composer James Lentini on May 17. Tickets are $15 adults, $12 seniors and college students, and $6 children. Call (313) 451-2112 for information.

The concert at Fox Hills Country Club on North Territorial in Plymouth begins 7 p.m. with a silent auction. Prizes include airline tickets, golf packages and season tickets to the symphony. A live auction will take place dung intermission. Coffee and dessert will be served.

The Symphony will play music by Andrew Lloyd Webber, the Carpenters, Beatles, Beach Boys, and Big Band music. A special piece "Sinfonia Di Festa" (Overture in Celebration) commissioned by the PSO to commemorate the 50th season will also be performed. The piece, composed by James Lentini, an associate professor of music composition at Wayne State University, is composed for large orchestra. The work is intended to capture the spirit of a celebration, opening with the full orchestra playing a fanfare-like theme. Gradually, the piece journeys through several melodic passages, including solos for many instruments. "It's fantastic that the Plymouth Symphony is celebrating 50 years," said L. John Miller, a retiree from Lou LaRiche Chevrolet in Plymouth, and auctioneer for the evening. "We need to keep this polished jewel going as long as we can. We don't want to let it dull or die out."

BOOK BREAK

Detroit novel has more gore than sense

"Scare Tactics," by Elizabeth Manz (St. Martin's Paperbacks, $5.99, 329 pages).

This gory, body-strewn debut novel starts out at a Detroit-area writers' conference, and ends up in never-never land.

VICTORIA DIAZ

I think.

Perhaps its main reason for being is to illustrate that hell hath no fury like a writer who goes unpublished.

But I'm not really sure about that, either.

Obviously, "Scare Tactics" left me pretty confused.

It starts out well enough. At the aforementioned writers' conference on the campus of a local university, best-selling horror novelist Nicholas Cross is just winding up his after-dinner, keynote speech. He's feeling maybe better than he's felt in five years – since the day his wife, Linda, was brutally, mysteriously murdered. He's written his first novel since that traumatic event, and already, the book is on the New York Times Best Seller List. His teenage son, Jeff, a traumatized ear-witness to the murder, appears to be getting on with his life. And here at the conference a large number of writers have gathered in to listen to him, "looking for that one piece of information that would change them from unpublished hopefuls to published novelists."

Surely, Elizabeth Manz has attended a conference or two. Her opening scenes paint a clear and involving picture, for instance, of the faint desperation that often colors the behavior of many literary aspirants gathered together under one roof, their hands "clutching" or "grabbing eagerly at the empty air."

"It takes a lot to scare me," Nicholas Cross replies to a question from a member of the audience.

Uh-oh. Right away, we suspect that old Nick is going to regret this rather noncommittal answer. Right away, we guess that, pretty soon, "a lot" is going to come along and scare the living daylights out of this Stephen King-like character.

But then, just about the time it's starting to get good, this tale of terror begins to disappoint.

First, Cross encounters a threatening "occultist" at the conference, who issues a warning: "You dabble in dark forces you don't understand." (Haven't we heard this song just a few too many times before?)

Shortly afterwards, the president of Cross' Michigan fan club is found dead at the famous author's desk, in a kind of bloody reenactment of his wife's murder earlier. Then, a psychic writer starts to receive urgent messages from the dead Linda. Then, a psychic child falls into a coma. Next, other violent deaths occur. Somewhere in all of the difficulty, Cross' son vanishes, and the policewoman who is in charge of the case falls for the author. He finds her pretty much irresistible also. Hey, a guy needs comfort and joy when his son is missing and may be dead or dying a terrible death, and when his home is practically awash in the blood of various murder victims.

Several other implausible and sometimes vague events occur before this hodgepodge of horror reaches a conclusion. A lot of "between two worlds" stuff figures in – the real world and the one that's created by and in the imagination. There's an endless snowstorm in a place that's eternally dark, where some shape-changing, wolf-life beasts prowl around in the shadows. Plus a tattoo that changes into a writhing, lethal reptile makes an appearance.

Of course, it's not that, in a successful work of fiction, events have to be plausible. One hopes, however, that they would seem credible, that one's disbelief could be willingly suspended. Here, past the first few pages, that rarely happens. What doesn't seem faintly confused seems all-too-contrived, and this story ultimately reads more like a shopping list of horrors than an effective tale of terror. The reader keeps hoping to be swept away. But "Scare Tactics" never spreads its dark wings and leaves the ground.

'Twister' tells stupid story, but magnificent effects sweep audience

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
SPECIAL WRITER

DAVID JAMES

Action adventure: Jo Harding (Helen Hunt) and Bill Harding (Bill Paxton) star in Warner Bros.' and Universal Pictures' "Twister."

It doesn't take a weather man to tell you that summer is almost here. It just takes a trip to "Twister," the kind of big, dumb warm weather entertainment that turns over box office receipts with the ease of a tornado in a trailer park.

Whether or not the movie is any good hardly matters. I could tell you that the dialogue is cliched and the plot insultingly stupid, yet I found myself swept away with the rest of last weekend's sold out audience when the sky turned green and the wind started to kick up.

Jan De Bont, the Dutch-born director of "Speed," makes sure his audience has thrills at regular intervals. Still, with Steven Spielberg as executive producer and Michael Crichton as co-writer, you'd expect more of the wonderment and fun that infused "Jurassic Park" and even "Congo."

At its best, "Twister" taps into our basic fears of the things we can't control. We have certain safeguards against space aliens, giant sharks, and even serial killers, but a funnel cloud can relocate a white clapboard farmhouse into the next county before you can say "there's no place like home."

In a nod to Hollywood's screwball comedies, Helen Hunt lures her soon-to-be ex and fellow storm chaser Bill Paxton out for one last adventure.

But movies like "Twister" aren't about plot. They're about special effects and the way this story goes, we get at least a half dozen chances to stare that twister down. The first happens in flashback, when we join Hunt as a little girl in the storm cellar as a tornado wrenches off the door and takes her father along with it.Her fascination with tornadoes obviously led her to Paxton, who has a sixth sense about which way these storms head. Driving off-road to cut the tornado off at the pass, he dodges uprooted trees, houses, semi-trucks, even a cow or two. No movie in recent memory has cried out more for 3-D.

Aside from the obvious visual marvels, "Twister" also offers some amazing sound effects. Though I could have done without the lion's roar that accompanies the swirling wind, a good sound system (few and far between in Metro Detroit theaters) will give the illusion that the thing has actually got you "surrounded."

Though Hunt and Paxton make likable leads, I could have done without his fiance, a cat-phone toting therapist played by Jami Gertz. She comes along for the ride and has (for our benefit as much as hers) explained for her all the scientific information that's supposed to make this whole thing plausible

Sure it's junk food movie making. Yet, as many times as I wanted to strangle Dusty, the most irritating of the storm chaser dudes, I couldn't help but agree with him when the big one finally hit: "awesome."

Band puts best foot forward for record deal

CHRISTINA FUOCO

For the California ska/punk band Goldfinger, getting a record deal with Mojo Records was as easy as selling a pair of shoes.

"He came into the shoe store that I worked in at the time. I sold him a pair of shoes. I gave him a demo tape and he gave it to his boss," said lead singer/guitarist John Feldmann.

Within six months, the band was recording its self-titled debut in between rounds of the popular video game Mortal Kombat.

"Darrin (Pfeiffer, drummer) and Simon (Williams, bassist) are the best players. I hated it at first because I'm 'Mr. Non-Violence Sonic the Hedgehog Video Guy.' But it's addictive."

The hobby has gone out on the road with them.

"We've been playing some. We have a little thing hooked up in our van. When I play, I get so stressed out that I have to get up and walk around afterward. It's hard to do that in a van."

For a group that was snuffed by major labels, Goldfinger is doing all right for itself. The plucky first single "Here In Your Bedroom," about a couple's first sexual experience, receives airplay on alternative rock stations throughout the United States. Feldmann said some guys who hear him sing lines like "when I wake up tomorrow/will you still feel the same?" think it's so sensitive that it has to be written from a female's point of view.

"A lot of guys don't think it's a guy's perspective. It was a little song I wrote after my little experience one night. It's just a song, really."

Love songs prevail on the album that unexpectedly jumps from ska to punk to reggae. "Mable" sings the praises of a new-found relationship. "I kissed her once and now I'm able to walk the mile, crack a smile, she makes me want to kiss all the babies/hug. the puppy dogs/she makes me feel like my mom/Smell the flowers and plant a tree/I gotta say that Mable/She's the bomb."

It's not exactly romantic, but "My Girlfriend's Shower Sucks" shares the sentiment of plenty of guys who have bathed at their girlfriends' homes. "It makes me grumpy and/Sometimes I lose hope/The water's hard so I can/Never rinse the soap."

After wrapping up a headlining tour that comes to St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit on Sunday, May 19, the band will hit the road on different occasions during the summer with No Doubt, the reunited Sex Pistols, the Buzzcocks, and Dog Eat Dog. Goldfinger also jumps on "The Warped Tour" for a few dates. This year's ever-changing lineup includes: No EFX, Bad Religion, Pennywise, Civ, and the Mighty Mighty Bosstones.

"It's all my favorite bands. I just told Jay (Rifkin of Mojo Records) if he can get the Replacements back together, or (the original) Specials, I can quit music. I'll have all I ever wanted."

• Misc: "Swank!" an 18 and older, dance night of space-age bachelor pad, swing and cocktail music, comes to the 7th House 7 N. Saginaw, Pontiac, every Tuesday at 9 p.m. For more information, call (810) 335-8100. ... Tom Petty is writing the score for "She's The One," the new film from Edward Burns, writer/director of "The Brothers McMullen." In addition to the original score, Petty has written six songs to be used in the movie. The Warner Bros. soundtrack should be out early summer. The romantic comedy stars Jennifer Aniston, Burns, Cameron Diaz, Maxine Bahns, John Mahoney and Mike McGlone. ... Cast, featuring former members of The La's, had to postpone its show set for Saturday, May 18, at The Shelter below St. Andrew's Hall after guitarist Liam "Skin" Tyson broke his shoulder.

Collegiate standouts

•Saginaw Valley State's baseball team concluded its regular season with a pair of shutout wins over Grand Valley State Sunday, which assured the Cardinals' of a second-place finish in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference with a 17-7-1 record (26-16-2 overall).

The two wins, by scores of 5-0 and 3-0, gave SVSU pitchers a string of 19 consecutive scoreless innings to end the season with. Brian Paluk, a junior righthander from Plymouth (Redford Catholic Central), tossed a four-hitter in winning the second game.

The victory gave Paluk a 4-2 record in the GLIAC, ninth best in the league. His earned run average dipped to 3.49 for the GLIAC season, 10th best in the conference.

In his career at SVSU, Paluk has a 16-6 record, fourth on the all-time victory list. He also has a 3.24 ERA in his career.

•It wasn't a great showing for Hillsdale College at the Ferris State Invitational last weekend. The Chargers placed 10th with a team score of 683. Their leader was consistent enough, however - Josh Edgar, from Canton (Plymouth Canton). He shot an 82-82/164.

•It had been an almost type of season for University of Michigan softball pitcher Kelly Holmes, a junior from Plymouth Canton.

She was almost the team's No. 1 pitcher, before sophomore Sara Griffin got hot. Last Friday, she was in position to advance her place on the U-M staff with a strong performance in the Big Ten tournament against Minnesota. Instead, she lasted just three innings, although the Wolverines won 3-2.

Last Saturday, she got another chance. And there was no "almost" about it - Holmes relieved Griffin in the fifth inning after the Gophers had narrowed a 5-1 U-M lead to 5-4, and she stopped them on just one hit the rest of the way to assure the Wolverines of a 6-4 triumph and a berth in the NCAA Tournament.

Griffin got the win, improving her record to 32-5, while Holmes earned her first save of the season. U-M takes a 48-12 record into the NCAAs.

Ups and downs

Not quite there: Salem's softball team has turned in a surprisingly strong season, considering its youth. And on Monday, with sophomore Jenny Trott (left) on the mound, the Rocks had an opportunity to tie Lakes Division frontrunner Walled Lake Central for first. But it was not to be; despite their efforts, the Rocks lost to Central for the second time this season.

Canton closes in on 1st; Salem falls back

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

It was an opportunity that slipped away.

No blaming the weather for this one. Plymouth Salem's softball team got its shot at Walled Lake Central, the team sitting atop the Western Lakes Activities Association's Lakes Division standings. The Rocks had lost to Central in their first meeting; that loss was the only difference between the two teams in the division.

On Monday at Salem, the Vikings doubled their lead.

Combining a four-run third inning with a three-run sixth - and the overall mound excellence of Jenny Tapp - Central handcuffed the Rocks 8-2 to remain unbeaten in league play.

The loss left Salem at 9-2 in the division, 13-8 overall.

"It was disappointing because we had five errors and we didn't hit the ball the way we can," said Salem coach Bonnie Southerland. "(Tapp's) a good pitcher, but she's definitely hittable."

She wasn't Monday, at least not by the Rocks. Kristin Los and Stefanie Volpe got the only hits off Tapp, and they were singles.

Salem scored both of its runs in the third when Nicole Sitek's fly to center field was misplayed by Central's outfielder, allowing two runs to score.

Tapp walked three and struck out three. For Salem, the loss went to Jenny Trott, who worked all seven innings and surrendered two earned runs on six hits and six walks, with three strikeouts.

Jeanna Stewart paced Central's offense with a double and a two-run home run in the sixth.

Canton 7-13, W.L. Western 0-0: Sarah Carson tossed a no-hitter in the first game and Jenny Sikora followed with a five-inning one-hitter as Plymouth Canton moved into sole possession of second place in the WLAA's Western Division.

The Tuesday sweep of Walled Lake Western improved the Chiefs' record to 12-9 overall, 6-2 in the division - trailing frontrunner Livonia Churchill by one loss. Western is 0-7 in the division, 0-12 overall.

In the opener, Carson faced the minimum number of batters - 21 - in the no-hitter. She walked one (eliminated in a double play) and struck out one, improving her record to 4-4.

"She's been struggling a bit, but she'll be all right," said Canton coach Jim Arnold. "She just needed a bit more confidence, that's all. She was really on today."

Amber LaGrow, Nicole Kovachevich and Lindsay Roberts each had two hits for the Chiefs, with Roberts driving in three runs - two with a sixth-inning double.

In the second game, Canton managed just four hits, but it was enough. In the Chiefs' nine-run fourth,Tara Biro had a three-run double and Shana Bidwell had a two-run single. LaGrow also contributed two hits and an RBI.

Sikora was nearly as effective as her predecessor: She did not walk a batter, with one strikeout.

Canton 7, Northville 3: Freshman Gretchen Hudson made an early five-run lead stand up Monday for Canton, scattering five hits and striking out nine. She did not walk a batter.

Shelly Butske went 3-for-4 with a double and an RBI, Hudson went 2-for-3 and Jenny Sikora 3-for-4 with two RBI as Canton pounded out 14 hits. Tara Biro went 2-for-4 and drove in two runs and Amy LaGrow went 2-for-3 and had an RBI.

Chiefs win 12th title; Rocks turn it around

BY C.J. RISAK

That makes it 12 in a row.

No, it's nothing new to Plymouth Canton girls track coach George Przygodski to win a Western Division championship, which the Chiefs secured Tuesday with their 99-29 triumph over Walled Lake Western in a dual meet run at Walled Lake Central.

In fact, Canton hasn't ever been beaten in the divisional race. "They kind of all blend together," Przygodski answered when asked which title stood out in his memory.

"But it's always our first goal. And I'm proud of what they've accomplished."

The Chiefs, 4-0 in the division and 6-0 overall, were never threatened by Western. Their depth was more than evident: only Brandy Bernard accounted for more than one of their

Canton, Salem to host All-Stars

Considering the source, it seems only natural.

After all, is there a better area in the state for soccer, both girls and boys? Troy may offer an argument. Livonia, too. But neither can match Plymouth and Canton for overall excellence, for both boys and girls.

So it seems right that the first annual Michigan High School All-Star Soccer Games will be hosted by, and played at, the Canton-Salem complex.

With the success the Michigan High School All-Star Football Classic has enjoyed, this seems a positive step. The game will be Saturday, June 15, with the girls' match at 6 p.m., followed by the boys at 8 p.m.

The top 44 senior players in the state, both boys and girls, in all classes will be invited to participate. The plan is for two teams of 22 players in each game. Teams will not be bound by geographics; instead, a coaches' committee will form them.

Also, in a major departure from the all-star football game, schools will be allowed to send more than one player to the game.

That means schools with traditionally strong soccer backgrounds - Salem, Canton, Livonia Stevenson, Livonia Churchill, Troy Athens and Troy, to name but a few - will be able to send more than one player.

There is one restriction, which is enforced by the Michigan High School Athletic Association: no underclassmen. Any athlete who

Despite strong showing, Madonna falls short

■ SOFTBALL

In the end, only St. Francis stood between Madonna and the NAIA Tournament.

The Lady Crusaders' softball team won three times at the NAIA Regional, hosted by the College of St. Francis in Joliet, Ill., from May 8-11. Unfortunately, they also lost twice - both times to the host team - and that was enough in the double-elimination format.

In those two defeats, Madonna lacked both offense and defense. Shanna Streng, the Crusaders' ace, surrendered just one earned run in the two games and lost both, 4-0 on Thursday and 7-3 on Friday.

Still, considering the caliber of the competition - St. Francis ended up losing to fourth-ranked Shawnee State in the regional final, but both will go to the NAIA Tournament, St. Francis as an at-large team - Madonna performed well.

A year ago, it was the Crusaders who eliminated St. Francis at the regional. The tables were reversed this year, but Madonna coach Jerry Abraham didn't think the outcome was a true reflection of the teams.

"We let up some easy errors," he acknowledged, "but in both games we were right in it. Except for a couple of bad innings, we played really good."

There wasn't much separating St. Francis and Madonna, Abraham felt. "If we played them 10 times, we'd probably win five," he said.

In the end, a problem that has confronted the Crusaders all season hurt them against St. Francis. "Our hitting was sort of sporadic at times (this season)," said Abraham. "When we hit it, we hit it well."

They did that in their three wins, but in the two losses, they didn't. They managed just seven hits combined in the 14 innings against St. Francis, and only one extra-base hit.

In the 4-0 defeat, Madonna had two singles, by Dawn Shaffer and Jamie Heins. Streng allowed seven hits and a walk, with one earned run. She struck out two. The Crusaders committed two errors.

In the 7-3 loss, St. Francis scored seven unearned runs off of Streng on seven hits and a walk (Streng struck out four) - and five Madonna errors. Streng committed three of them.

The Crusaders scored three unearned runs on five hits, with Jennifer Pinter getting the only run batted in in the two games. She joined Michelle Birchmeier (from Redford Thurston), Shaffer, Jeanie Baxter (Redford St. Agatha) and Heins in the hit department.

The 7-3 loss ended the Crusader season, with a final record of 31-17. Streng finished with a 16-10 won-loss mark.

It was a different Madonna team in the three regional wins. The Crusaders opened the tournament May 8 against Bethel College, posting a 3-0 triumph. Streng tossed a three-hit shutout, giving up two walks while striking out five.

Shaffer had two hits, including a run-scoring triple, and Courtney Senger had two hits and an RBI.

In their first game Friday, the Crusaders faced a tough Siena Heights squad and came away with a 7-4 victory. Again the bats boomed, with Birchmeier collecting a double and a triple while driving in three runs. Baxter also had two hits, while Shaffer, Senger and Christy Riopelle each had a hit and an RBI.

After that it was Olivet Nazarene for Madonna, later that same day. The Crusaders withstood a four-run, seventh-inning rally to post a 6-4 win.

Angie VanDoorn was the winning pitcher, giving up two earned runs on five hits and three walks, striking out 10. Lynda Weichel did all the damage Madonna needed at the plate with a pair of doubles that resulted in five RBI.

Unfortunately, that was as far as the Crusaders were going to go. Twelve errors in the five games certainly hurt them; they were also limited to 29 hits, an average of less than six a game.

But it was hardly a disappointment to Abraham. "Not at all," he insisted. "I was very impressed with the way we played. We weren't the best team there, but we were pretty good. And we've got a good nucleus of players coming back."

Indeed, the only player losses are seniors Pinter, a catcher; Birchmeier, a shortstop; and Weichel, a pitcher/outfielder. Those are the three positions Abraham will be shopping for in the months ahead, with hopes of an even longer post-season run.

Crusaders lack key hits, but get the bad bounces in early exit

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

■ BASEBALL

It wasn't a lack of hitting that doomed Madonna University's baseball team to an early exit - at least for them - from the NAIA Sectional Tournament last week.

Nor was it pitching. Or defense.

Coach Mike George won't even chalk it up to inexperience, although his team did not have a single senior.

It was none of those things, in particular. But it could have been all of them, to a degree, at just the wrong time.

"We just never got out of the gate," said George after his team had lost by a single run for the second time in three Sectional games. "We always seemed to be battling uphill."

George wasn't referring to the tournament. He meant the entire season. A few bad breaks early on cost the Fighting Crusaders some games, and from there it just expanded and multiplied.

Before the season comes off sounding like a complete and utter disaster, however, remember Madonna finished 29-26. Which isn't all that bad.

But as George said: "As far as Madonna baseball is concerned, I don't think anyone is happy with this season. It was a long frustrating year for the players. They had some pretty lofty goals that they didn't achieve.

"We just didn't get the breaks when we needed them."

To drive that point home, George noted that Madonna's last eight losses were by a single run.

Was that a lack of pitching? Hardly - the staff had a 2.60 earned run average.

A lack of hitting, then? Every starter hit over .300, so that's out.

Was it that lack of senior leadership? Perhaps so, although several of Madonna's players have playoff experience.

Or maybe it's just what George said: bad luck. Maybe it was just Madonna's turn for all the bad bounces.

"This is a team that was capable of winning it," the Madonna coach said, referring to the Sectional. "We were a base hit away from (victory) in two games. I think we just came up short. We just didn't get the hit when we needed it, like we did last year.

"And it wasn't due to a lack of effort from the players or coaches."

Bad breaks, then? Well, Madonna did lose its one true power hitter - Aaron Shrewsbury - to ligament damage in his elbow prior to the tournament. That hurt. Shrewsbury led the Crusaders in home runs (eight) and runs batted in (33).

It also confirmed for George what his team would need to get over the hump, from contender to champion in the Sectional.

"We need a lefthanded pitcher, a lefthanded power hitter and better overall team speed," he listed. With so many players returning, however, he knows it won't be easy to bring in many newcomers.

He also believes that this team can achieve the goals it has set, with no real changes. "They realize how close we were," he said. "And they'll use that as motivation next year."

Vikings pound Salem in a double-header sweep

■ BASEBALL

It was one of those rare days this spring it didn't rain when Plymouth Salem was scheduled to play baseball. But the Rocks wish it had.

Well, it did rain, sort of. It rained base hits. Walled Lake Central base hits.

The Vikings drowned the Rocks with 20 hits Monday to win a doubleheader by scores of 10-4 and 10-3.

"They came out hitting," Salem coach Dale Rumberger said. "This is one of the best hitting Walled Lake teams I've seen in probably 10 years."

Salem dropped to 8-11 overall, 6-5 in the Western Lakes Activities Association and 4-2 in the Lakes Division. Yet the Rocks are just a game out of first in their division.

"We're all trying to get caught up with the rain," said Rumberger, whose son Ryan was one of Salem's bright spots with a 6-for-7 performance in the two games. Ryan hit a home run, drilled three doubles and drove in five runs.

Both teams pounded out nine hits in the first game. There was a distance difference, however.

Steve Crapean hit a solo home run and a two-run home run for Walled Lake Central while Rob Wing smacked a three-run home run.

Dan Heitzmann had a pair of singles and drove in a run for Salem with Kevin Niemiec collecting a pair of singles and scoring a run. Rumberger hit his home run in the first game.

Ryan Andrezjewski took the loss in the opener while Keith Boughner was touched for 11 hits to absorb the defeat in the second.

The Vikings scored five in the second and had a 9-0 lead before Salem got on the board with a pair in the fourth.

Walled Lake Central scored six in the third inning of the second game to take a 6-1 lead and added four in the fifth to salt it away.

Salem made just one error in the first game and two in the second and walked only one hitter in the opener. But oh, those hits.

When it rains, it pours. And sometimes when it doesn't rain, too.

•PCA 16, Inter-City Baptist 7: Jim Speier throttled Allan Park Inter-City Baptist over the last four innings and Plymouth Christian Academy rallied for seven runs in the third to overcome a 4-0 deficit.

A pep talk by coach Dave Robillard, after his team had been held to one hit over the first two innings, may have contributed to the 7-run third.

Starting pitcher Nate Bryan doubled, Chris DeRenzo tripled and John Isensee singled to get the ball rolling. Speier squeezed in a run the things snowballed from there.

Isensee went 2-for-2 and scored three times, sophomore Chris Brandon went 1-for-2, scored twice and drove in a run.

Speier faced just 19 batters in his four innings, walking four and allowing three hits. He fanned five.

PCA is now 7-7 overall, 4-5 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Association and 3-1 in the MIAA's Blue Division. It plays the team responsible for that loss, Oakland Christian, today.

Chiefs hoped for more, got less in dual-meet loss; Class A regionals next

■ BOYS TRACK

It wasn't the way Plymouth Canton boys track coach Bob Richardson wanted to head into the Class A state regional this Friday, which Canton and Plymouth Salem will co-host.

In fact, he figured it would be a close, down-to-the-wire type of dual meet when the Chiefs hosted Walled Lake Western Tuesday. But it wasn't - the Warriors dominated, beating Canton 74-54 to improve to 3-1 in the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division. Canton is 2-2 and 2-4 overall.

"I thought we matched up better than that," said Richardson. "But they ran some races they haven't shown yet.

"It was our chance to tie for the division lead. But it wasn't to be."

Canton fell short in the field events, the sprints and the hurdles. Kevin Keil, in the discus (115-feet, 8-inches), and Jim Chefan, in the high jump (5-10), were the Chiefs' winners in the field events.

They managed just two more individual firsts: Jon Page in the 800 (2:03.7) and Ian Bedford in the 1,600 (4:35.1).

Canton did manage a split in the relays. Evan Crocket, Steve Putala, Ben Nelson and Page combined to win the 1,600 (3:46.7), and Crocket, Craig Brunskole, Adam DeGiorgio and Page teammed for a first in the 3,200 (8:46.1).

The Chiefs have one dual meet left - against Livonia Churchill - if they can reschedule it. With the regional Friday and the WLAA meet next Tuesday, that is uncertain.

As far as a state-meet qualifier, Richardson offers Chefan in the long jump (state qualifying standard is 21-1; he's gone 20-3) and perhaps the high jump, and Bedford in the 3,200.

"It's a very strong regional," the Canton coach said. "It never fails - it always seems like we have teams there that beat each other up."

Which helps the rest of the teams at the state meet. The 17-team regional begins at 3 p.m.

Notes: Plymouth Salem should have several potential state qualifiers on its roster, beginning with its middle distance/distance corps of Jared Biniecki, Scott Pengelly and Jason Barylski. Another contender is hurdler Rob Hawley.

The two longer relays - the 1,600 and 3,200 - are the Rocks' next best qualifying hopes.

SOCCER

As warmups go, it was fairly hot.

Troy broke a scoreless tie with a goal 15 minutes into Monday night's second half. Troy put a shot off the post in the scoreless first half.

But Mari Hoff evened the score some five minutes later off a ball from Missy Simons. Then, about five minutes later, Leah Retherford converted a feed from Jodi Coyle for the margin of victory.

Coach Doug Landefeld praised goalie Julie Buczek for some excellent win-preserving saves in the waning moments of the game, which left Salem 13-2.

"In the second half, we probably carried more of the play," Landefeld said. "It was a pretty good game. Both teams played well at different times."

One of Salem's defeats was inflicted by Churchill, in the third game of the season by a 2-1 score. The crossover match for the WLAA championship was set to start at 7 p.m.

•Stevenson 1, Canton 0: It was a close game, yet there were two differences.

The first was Christine Wilson. She scored the lone goal of the game Monday night as Livonia Stevenson nipped Plymouth Canton, 1-0.

The second was goaltender Jenny Barker. She kept the Chiefs off the scoreboard in the Western Lakes Activities Association match.

Wilson scored in the fading minutes of the first half to set Barker up for her ninth shutout of the season. The Spartans are 11-2-1 and played Northville, the team responsible for the tie, Wednesday night.

"It was an evenly matched game," Stevenson coach Jim Kimble said. "We dominated the first half. Canton applied a lot of pressure in the second and came close to tying the game a couple of times."

The Spartans held a 15-8 edge in shots and Kimble singled out midfielder Leah McGrath and defender Melissa Jacobs for playing big roles in the shutout.

But the coach felt that "as a team, I was not real happy with the way we're playing. We're going right into the state playoffs and we need to be playing a bit better."

Bernards' wins came in the shot put (31-feet, 9 3/4 inches) and discus (106-10). Others went to Mary Anderson in the 100-meter hurdles (16.4); Nancy Hoffman in the 300 hurdles (51.4); Alina Boyden in the 100 (13.4); Tiffany Williams in the 200 (28.1); Becky Uryga in the 800 (2:34.3); Jaine Vergari in the 1,600 (6:02.5); and Becky Wolfrom in the 3,200 (12:07.8).

Boyden, Williams, Doris Igwe and Kim Robertson combined for a first in the 400 relay (53.0); Williams, Anderson, Hoffman and Uryga teammed to win the 1,600 relay (4:28.1); and Amy Klim, Amanda Roberts, Brooke Larson and Angkana Roy were first in the 3,200 relay (10:44.0).

It was a solid performance that provided a solid step toward the Class A Regional, which Canton and Salem co-host Friday. The question is, how well can the Chiefs compete on a state-wide level?

"I think it's a little premature to ask that now," Przygodski answered. "We'll know better in a week."

That will be after both the regional and the Western Lakes Activities Association meet. One thing Przygodski is certain of - his team won't lose without a battle.

"This team is more competitive, top to bottom, than any team we've had here," he said. "These kids like to race."

Hurdlers Anderson and Hoffman; Uryga in the 400; Wolfrom in the 3,200; Nkechi Okwumabua in the long jump; and all four relays have a good shot at making it past the regionals.

Rocks rebound

After two consecutive dismal performances, Plymouth Salem coach Mark Gregor was happy to see what he saw Saturday at the Troy Athens Relays.

"Nobody on the team complained about the conditions and I think that made a difference," he said. "They handled the conditions real well, better than most teams."

That mental toughness, Gregor figures, was translated into performance. Salem finished second in the 20-team event, losing by a single point to Sterling Heights Stevenson (36 to 35). Troy was third (34), with Canton fourth (32 1/2) and Livonia Ladywood fifth (28 1/2).

The Rocks won three events. Nicole Van Hees, Kristin Kosik and Tiffany Reiber won the high jump relay (14-feet, 7-inches); Angela Smith, Jessica Ash and Lisa Smith were first in the shot put relay, setting a new school record (95-4 1/2; old record, 92-9 set in 1987); and Katie Bonner, Evelyn Rahhal, Jennifer Burke and Ellen Stemmer teammed for a win in the 4x800 relay (10:22.1).

Stemmer, Nicole Bolton, Kathy Jost and Rahhal teammed to place second in the 4x1,600 relay (23:33.4); Angela Smith, Sarah Vida and Jennifer Simpson combined for a fourth in the discus relay (274-11); Bonner, Burke, Kim Sheldon and Rachel Thompson were fourth in the 4x400 relay (4:29.7); and Erin Lang, Hannah Watts, Jost and Bolton took fifth in the distance medley relay (14:23.1).

Canton finished first in both the shuttle hurdle relay, with Anderson, Erin Stabb, Diana Jastzrebski and Amy Sonnanstine (1:10.6), and the 1,600 relay, with Williams, Natalie Wood, Anderson and Hoffman (4:24.4).

The Chiefs got thirds from Klim, Roy, Wood and Wolfrom in the distance medley relay (13:46.8); Bernard, Emily Moran and Sarah Israel in the discus relay (278-3); and from Smith, Stacey Boucher and Erin Stabb in the high jump relay (14-1).

Boyden, Robertson, Camille Lynn and Hoffman finished fourth in the sprint medley relay (1:59.7), as did Boyden, Williams, Robertson and Anderson in the 400 (53.1) and Boyden, Anderson, Uryga and Williams in the 800 (1:52.1).

Klim, Larson, Wolfrom and Roy in the 3,200 (10:41.1) and Jessa Scott, Crystal Alderman, Marcie Emerick and Amanda Roberts in the Athens (7:34.3) both took fifths.

For Salem and Gregor, the solid showing couldn't have come at a better time, with the 17-team state regional Friday. In the field will be Detroit Cass Tech, the four-time defending state champion.

"I expect Cass Tech obviously to be extremely tough in everything from the 800 and down," said Gregor. "I know they're going hard after another state title. But we can do some things."

Gregor figures Kosik and Van Hees are a solid one-two punch in the high jump. The Rocks' 4x800 relay has potential; so, too, does the 4x400 relay. Smith and Ash look good in the shot put, and Smith and Vida look the same in the discus. And Stemmer and Kristie Giddings could have an impact in the 800 and/or 1,600.

Since only graduated seniors will play, that will not be a concern.

"We're hoping we can get something started here that will last for years to come," said Gary Balconi, former assistant athletic director at Plymouth Salem and one of the game's developers.

Balconi, Pete Morrissey and Dave Cook have been the driving force behind the game. But as Balconi said, he doesn't want it to be a long-term obligation.

"It would be my hope that the Michigan High School Soccer Coaches Association would pick up this event," he said.

At least two sponsors are in place: Adidas and the Canton Soccer Club.

There is already a schedule of events in place for the players on the day of the games. Uniforms will be presented to them, which they may keep; they will also receive certificates of participation.

Player rosters are still being formed. Balconi added that special coaches may be asked to man the benches.

All in all, it looks to be the right way to end a year of high school soccer.

Area hosts conference on disabled workers

Detroit has been selected as the host city for the national conference of the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities.

It is the first time in the 49-year history of the conference that it will be held in Michigan.

The conferen will be held May 22-24 at the Westin Hotel in Detroit.

There are more than 49 million people with disabilities in the United States, of which 1.7 million live in Michigan. More than 70 percent of people with severe disabilities who are willing and able to work, are unemployed.

"This conference is designed to bring together businesses, people with disabilities and labor to stimulate them to work on issues related to employment of people with disabilities," said President's Committee Chairman Tony Coelho, a former congressman from California who introduced the Americans with Disabilities Act in Congress.

"This issue goes beyond doing the right thing," Coelho said. "People with disabilities want to be productive, self-supporting and taxpaying participants in society."

The conference is expected to attract about 2,500 business, labor, political and disability rights leaders. The three-day event will feature workshops and seminars focusing on legal, technological and social issues related to the employment of people with disabilities.

Serving the Detroit Metro area.

Tony Coelho
President's Committe chairman

The conference theme, "Investing in Ability," mirrors the mission of the ADA, the civil rights legislation designed to help create economic, social and political equality for those with disabilities.

"The bottom line is that we must eliminate discrimination in the workplace. In the disability community that means focusing on what people can and are able to do, not what they can't," Coelho said.

For more information, call the Michigan Commission on Disability Concerns at 1 (800) SAY-ABLE. On-site registration is $100.

The information on the museum's site was passed on by a colleague at work. Some of my column information comes by snail mail, but most comes via E-mail through Listserv discussion groups to which I am subscribed. My major two sources are Elliott Parker and Liz Thompson but also helpful are Patrick Douglas Crispen, Gleason Sackman, Bob Rankin and an E-mail service on new and changed Listserv groups.

Local hospital introduces registration, lobby area

St. Mary Hospital in Livonia recently opened the registration area and lobby of its new Diagnostic Services Center, located on the second floor of the Pavilion of the hospital at Five Mile and Levan roads.

The new center, which opened for patients in early March, provides centralized registration for patients requiring diagnostic services, such as laboratory, radiology, respiratory care, cardiovascular services, EEG, nuclear medicine and pre-anesthesia evaluation.

The computerized registration area features a lobby designed with patient service and comfort in mind. Patients and staff benefit by combining registration and diagnostic services into one centralized location on the second floor. Convenient access to the new area is from the Levan Road entrance at the south end of the hospital.

In related news, renovation of the hospital's Pavilion Lobby is currently under way in preparation for opening of a new south entrance this spring. The two-story lobby is undergoing a facelift to include removal of the stairway, removal of the tile flooring and recarpeting. During the four-week renovation of the lobby, entrances and elevators will remain open and signs will direct patients to offices in the Marian Professional Building, Main Hospital, Diagnostic Services Center and Michigan Eye Institute.

The new Diagnostic Services Center and South Entrance are part of the $36 million expansion project at the Livonia hospital. The entire project is slated for completion in spring of 1997 and will include a west addition, housing a new maternity center, women's center and surgical suites.

Medical Center Director Edward L. Gamache presented the VA Secretary's Awards for Excellence in Nursing to: Dawn Guswtitus, Medical Intensive Care Unit and a Redford resident; Shirley Freshney, from the medical/neurology unit 5 North and a Pinckney resident; and Nancy Gray, a nursing care technician in the operating room and an Ann Arbor resident.

Nominated by their co-workers, the national award-winners are recognized for effectively putting current nursing standards into practice, working positively with their co-workers to provide excellent care to patients and for keeping up their nursing skills through continuing education.

The medical center's Chrysalis Award was given to Gary Curry, head nurse of the inpatient substance abuse treatment unit and a Garden City resident. He received the award for positively demonstrating behavior which reflects the art of nursing.

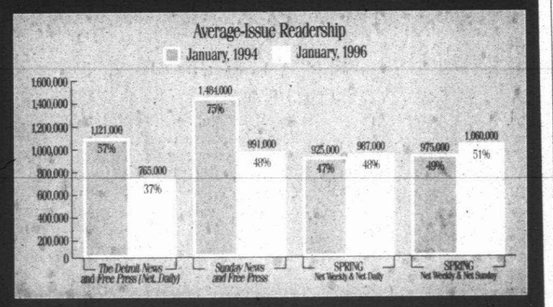
Suburban Detroit:
We have the leadership in readership!



SPRING delivers the suburbs with more weekday readers than The News and Free Press combined!*

Now there are more reasons than ever to go home with SPRING Newspapers. SPRING continues to be the primary weekday newspaper for suburban residents of this suburb-driven market.* For example:

- 48% of adults in the SPRING survey area read SPRING weekly and daily newspapers.
- SPRING delivers, on average, 1,060,000 total readers every week.
- That means SPRING delivers 1,167,000 gross impressions for an entire week.

Compare these numbers to your other media alternatives: only 37% of adults in the SPRING survey area read the weekday Free Press or The Detroit News.

More suburban Detroit readers turn to SPRING.

- SPRING delivers more weekday suburban readers with household incomes over $50,000.
- SPRING delivers more suburban homeowners (51%) than any other weekday newspaper.

To find out more about how the Detroit market has changed, and for information about our current audit, call the SPRING Newspaper Network at 1-800/382-8878.

A WORLD OF IDEAS

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

Columnist helps TV uncover a scam

JOE GAGNON

During Friday's 11 p.m. news, the Newshawk reporter Joe Ducey aired a story about appliance repair on WXYZ-TV. That story and my involvement are the subject of today's column with assurance that there is more to happen in the months ahead.

The TV station rented a fully furnished house in Madison Heights and installed several hidden cameras throughout. I was asked to inspect the refrigerator and to create a problem which would need diagnoses from a qualified service technician. Much to my amazement and the camera which was watching my every move, I didn't have to create a problem, because there already was one occurring with the refrigerator.

This 20-year-old top mount refrigerator has a plugged drain and it was obvious that is had been plugged for quite some time. The crisper drawers in the bottom of the refrigerator section had been removed and two large towels placed on the floor of the refrigerator to absorb the water. This had been happening for so long that the floor paint had been eaten away and plenty of rust was showing. The existing problem with the refrigerator was so obvious that I didn't think a technician would try to deceive a homeowner.

The station's legal people thought it best to just leave it as is and go on with the rest of the story. I also felt sorry for the homeowner, she apparently does not read my column or sent for my free booklet which describes this problem in detail and how to correct it with a turkey baster. My point is we did not have to create a problem with the refrigerator, it already had one of the most common problems which occur with top mount refrigerator.

I then began the process of checking the operation of the product and found the temperatures in both sections to be adequate for good food preservation. I found the compressor to be doing its job even under the strain of a very dirty condenser. It will have to be cleaned before the hot summer temperatures arrive or serious failure will take place.

I removed the back wall inside the freezer and found the evaporator coil to be free of accumulated frost indicating any kind of a defrost problem. The defrost timer, the defrost heater and terminator all functioned properly through more than one defrost cycle. Those in attendance, plus the camera, all agreed that the refrigerator was working properly except for the two obvious problems. I also pointed out that a qualified technician could take care of these problems and be in and out of the house in less than half an hour. I also made mention that because this service call done honestly would not create much income for the service company, the technician might add to the existing problem of a plugged drain by saying that the defrost timer was defective as well. According to the story on television, that is exactly what happened.

A service technician charged this supposed homeowner almost $200 for replacing the defrost timer . This is a part you can buy for $33 and install yourself in less than half an hour. If a service call plus a half hour labor equate to $160 per half hour, that's $320 per hour. Give me 10 men who do this 10 times a day and I'll show you a very rich man.

When the service technician was finished with replacing the defrost timer, he took it with him and wouldn't give it back to the supposed homeowner. He said it was an exchange part, which I doubt to be the truth. I don't know anyone who is paying for old defrost timers and if they are I'm losing thousands of dollars. I suspect there might be another reason why a company would want to keep the customer's old parts.

The company sent the old timer back to the customer's house along with a letter from the station. There was nothing wrong with the timer, except that it had a wear factor involved. Was it the same timer returned that was removed from the refrigerator? There must be a way to find out - stay tuned.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor," available at area bookstores.

GARDEN SPOT

State gardens offer rich displays

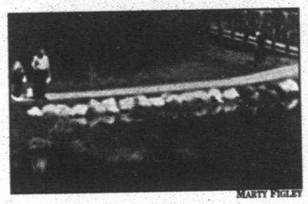
MARTY FIGLEY

Last month I visited two Michigan gardens that I highly recommend, if you are traveling west in our state this summer.

The first has been in existence since 1964 and is named Fernwood. The founders "dreamed of Fernwood becoming a place of beauty and a learning center for the public to enjoy forever," and that dream has been realized as "tens of thousands" of visitors arrive to enjoy the 105 acres. Nearly 10,000 people learn through their educational programs.

A 40-acre arboretum and eight acres of demonstration gardens contain more than 2,000 species and cultivated varieties of plants that suit their environment. We took a stroll through the grounds and the woods in late April and many wildflowers were in bloom as were both the Christmas and Lenten roses. Soon the sensory and herb garden will be greening up and visitors can delight in its beauty where bees and butterflies will be in abundance.

A special room, a library/study, has a glass window wall that enables visitors to view the wildlife, especially many species of birds, closeup. The Nature Preserve is five acres in size and contains several ecological systems or habitats such as upland forest to bottom lands woods, streams and ponds and a prairie. Because of this, any time of the year is a good time to visit.



MARTY FIGLEY

On the boardwalk: The boardwalk recently opened at the Frederik Meijer Gardens.

Art exhibitions take place in the conference center. You will find a gift shop, a cafe and the Fern Conservatory. Some of the facilities are available for rental.

To reach this interesting Botanical Garden/Nature Preserve, take I-94 west and exit at Exit 28 (south), which connects with US-31. Continue on to US-31 bypass (south).

On the way home, I drove to Grand Rapids and spent some time enjoying the quiet ambiance of the Frederik Meijer Gardens. A reception area, a dining room, a gift shop, classrooms, a library and an auditorium are housed in this large structure.

This Lena Meijer conservatory, 15,000 square feet, is the largest tropical conservatory in the state. It features tropical plants from five continents, waterfalls and more. It's just beautiful!

Just recently butterflies were brought into this tropical area and were a great success. When I was there just a few remained. This exhibit will be repeated yearly during the middle part of March. The Arid Garden features plants from the deserts of North and South America, an area called the Victorian Garden Parlor is reminiscent of "garden rooms" of the 1800s. Afternoon teas and private parties often take place there.

The Gardener's Corner is filled with garden items as well as plants that are sold by Kent County Master Gardener volunteers. They also answer visitors' gardening questions. Greenhouses where new and rare plants will be grown from seed for eventual displays are adjacent to the front of the building. Soon an outdoor garden with a formal yew hedge and an English Perennial garden will highlight this area.

More than 50 bronze sculptures by artists Marshall Fredericks, Andre Harvey, Kirk Newman, Gary Pride and others are exhibited both outdoors and in the building.

I enjoyed a walk on the just-completed boardwalk, which is constructed along a wildlife/bog area where many habitats for wildlife can be observed and sounds of birds and other creatures can be heard. This is connected to the nature trail; a printed guide identifies particular trees and other points of interest along the way.

Guided tours take place every day; for group tour reservations call (616) 975-3171.

LET'S REMODEL

Get expert help to test for asbestos

Q: We had a remodeling company prepare plans for improvements on our older home and the contractor indicated there may be an asbestos problem with the existing two-coat plaster. The company indicated they cannot proceed until the issue is addressed due to potential liability. He insists we handle the problem. We don't know where to start.

A: The identification of asbestos as a potential indoor air quality problem has been with us now since the mid 1970s. The major area of concern lies in the potential for latent manifestation of asbestos related diseases, which have been extensively documented in numerous studies of this material in its former usage (i.e. insulation products). The past wide spread usage of asbestos in an estimated 2500 products has caused extensive public health concerns. The first step is to determine whether or not asbestos (or ACM's-materials which contain 1 percent of greater asbestos by volume) does in fact exist in the plaster.

Several small, random samples of the suspect ACM need to be secured from the materials in question for analytical testing by a number of EPA recognized methods. These are tested as a certified laboratory. The reason for several samples is that, especially in plaster, there was not always a homogenous mixture of asbestos fibers in each batch of plaster. Consequently, a single sample could result in a negative test result.

While the homeowner could secure and submit the samples for testing, this is not highly recommended due to several reasons: 1. The complexity of submitting proper documentation along with the samples to a lab. 2. Accidental release of asbestos fibers into the home. 3. This may not convince the contractor (who is obliged by OSHA to protect his workers and subcontractors) that sufficient testing was conducted.

It is preferable to procure the services of a qualified third-party which should be a state-licensed asbestos inspector for the collection of samples. A qualified inspector would be able to identify any other suspect ACMs which may be overlooked by the lay person, but which could have an impact on the projected improvement plans.

Once the material has been tested and confirmed, it is time to seek out a qualified, professional and licensed asbestos abatement contractor.

In selecting this contractor, I suggest the following:

■Contract the licensing board of the Michigan Department of Public Health, Asbestos Program at 517-335-8246. They can tell you if the contractor has a current license and whether there are any existing complaints or violations.

■Insurance is a must in dealing with hazardous materials. Look for occurrence type coverage, versus claims made. You may want to ascertain the viability of the insurance issuer.

■Determine ahead of time, with the abatement contractor how or where the ACMs will be disposed. In closing, the potential impact of future negative health consequences (when dealing with harardous building materials) fully warrants a cautious approach to the suspect material, as well as the expenditure of resources.

Being neutral could mean not taking or advocating any particular course of action.

In the case of the Junior League of Detroit Designers Show House, being neutral means going all out for style.

Some of the 34 area designers who put their talents on display at the show house, 340 Lakeland in Grosse Pointe, opted for such neutral colors as taupe and oatmeal when decorating their rooms. The results are still grabbers, as welcoming and uplifting as the areas done in bright tones.

See for yourself by visiting the show house now to May 25. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday-Tuesday, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday-Friday. Meet the Designers Day is every Wednesday. Tickets, available at the door, are $15. A gourmet cafe, a greenery with unusual garden accessories and plants, and a raffle are featured, and on the third floor art works by Center for Creative Studies and Cass Tech students are displayed. Call (313) 881-0040.

Statements

The grand foyer by DMJ Interiors Inc. of Rochester is gracious as well as grand; the upper level shows romantic scrolling in the doorway molding on the floor and the railing across the top, the colors are whispery soft.

The master sitting room on the second floor, designed by Rick Carmody of Au Courant of Royal Oak, makes you feel at home among the tree branches visible from the windows. The room features birch bark wallpaper, black wooden floors and a woven mat. Birdhouses are accents, as are buttons - big buttons in a glass table, and a fish covered with buttons.

With white and off-white Linda Golden made a colorful statement in her design for a bath and closet, which she coordinated with the room by Carmody. Golden, of Socially Yours Design of Bloomfield Hills, worked with artist Linda Soberman. Soberman created an interactive art installation called "The Shoe Project" for the room. The motif of the room is women's shoes. They are everywhere, actual and artistic, three-dimensional and photo - mostly white ones, but a sparkling ruby pair can be seen - and quotes about shoes travel over doorways and across shelves. Tiny white plastic shoes line a frame.

The "youth bathroom" by Prior-Evans of Birmingham suggests a little castle, with such touches as the commode resembling a throne and the bathtub moat.

Colorful

Sharon A. Holton Interiors of Plymouth designed the "Lady of the Manor's Office" on the second floor. This sitting room features plaid drapes under a floral valance; a floral area rug is over a woven floor covering. Topping the valance is a thick rod tipped by large glass orbs that echo the crystal light in the center of the ceiling. The dark green chair in the corner gets light from the windows on one side and the floor lamp on the other. Furniture, including a table and cabinet, bears dark, rich burled wood, some with gold trim. Taffeta fabric lines the closet. A paint treatment makes the walls resemble stone.

The ceiling and trim are white.

Red, white and blue make a warm showing in the living room by Hudson's Interior Design Studios of Southfield. A blue and white area rug covers some of the wooden floor. The furniture is red, or black and white spotted. Cream drapes are pulled back and resemble soft columns, letting light from the windows pour in. Also in the spacious room, the ceiling is cream, accessories are blue and white, and the interiors of the shelves are red.

Outside this room is the loggia by Gregg Petty Interiors of Bloomfield Hills. The loggia contains sculpture done specifically for it, and can be divided into sections like rooms or left open.

Scott Shuptrine of Troy added a touch of the '40s to the living room and bath in the carriage house. The living room displays a lively assortment of patterns in the goldenrod hue in the walls and ceiling and two area rugs.

Imagine this

The master bedroom by Perlmutter-Freiwald Inc. of Franklin is like a giant bouquet, with large, colorful blooms in the canopy, curtains and armchair, a floral pattern in the carpeting and painted on the bedposts, and a gentle design of flowers in the yellow wallpaper. Framed illustrations of flowers line the walls. Dark green chairs face each other at the fireplace, with a matching footstool between them.

La Belle Provence of Birmingham calls the bedroom it designed "A Child's View of the World from the Treetops." A giant globe was painted in the room, with the top of the world on the ceiling and the bright continents arranged around the walls over vibrant stripes. Zebras painted on one wall appear to be charging out of Africa in clouds of dust, and a giant stuffed toy giraffe greets visitors. The bedpost is covered in woven material, and woven baskets instead of drawers line a cabinet.

Georgia & Associates of Birmingham mixed taupe and gold leaf to elegant effect in the butler's pantry. Painted freehand circles echo the circles on the chair backs. Gold silverware pieces adorn a curtain. A boldly painted message across the perimeter of the room urges visitors to EAT, DRINK, BE MERRY.

Next to the pantry is the kitchen by Joie de Vie of Birmingham. The room features a pine hutch, tile on part of the walls, blue wallpaper and fabrics, and a glass-topped table with a base painted to resemble terra cotta. The rug gives a splash of color to the cool country tones.

Other participating designers include Brian Killian & Co., Charles Oliver Interiors, P.D.C. Design and Sara Scott Cullen Designs, all of Birmingham.

The house was built in 1928 and measures 9,400 square feet. It features eight bedrooms, nine fireplaces and nine bathrooms. The two-bedroom carriage house measures 750 square feet.

Proceeds from the 1996 Designers' Show House will benefit the programs and projects of the Junior League of Detroit, including the Junior League of Detroit/Police Athletic League Tutorial Project.

Enjoy special bounty of Garden Park

By Marty Figley
Special Writer

How does one plant a 70-acre-plus garden? Jim Hilty and Evelyn Raskin, with the help of his family, Loren, Monroe, Alon and Sandra, have been doing just that! Since 1990 they have been planning and planting this 77.7-acre parcel of land, transforming it into an unusual garden to be enjoyed by all. Now the Garden Park of Holly is ready for your visit.

So much has been done: Thousands of trees and tons of earth have been moved, mounded and graded; large boulders, weighing thousands of pounds, have been set in place; ponds, lakes and streams have been dug and innumerable plants have been set into the ground.

Last year, during the summer season, 15 weddings took place in the outdoor walled "Secret Garden," and many conferences were in the specially designed building. Wedding guests sit around the perimeter of the colorful garden, which is intersected with walkways to allow a closeup look at the plants. Statuary and water features add to the ambiance of this lovely place.

Historic look

The building adjacent to this garden was designed by Hilty and Raskin and is reminiscent of Tuscany in style. The pale green stucco walls and the care taken with details inside and out led three building inspectors to think it was an old structure.

This building contains a large conference room, library, reception hall and much more. Furnishings include a 19th century handwoven Chinese rug, English cathedral choir chairs, a 17th century tapestry and many other museum-quality antiques.

The conference room is dedicated to Frederick Hill Meserve, who saved a great number of photographic images on glass plates, many of Lincoln. These, along with hundreds of photos of Lincoln and all the generals of the Civil War, and other displays will be rotated in this room.

This is an excellent facility for offsite meetings and is equipped with audio-visual and other amenities. Paneling in the rooms came from a 19th century Ohio bank; many other architectural details have been recycled from other landmarks.

Dinners and lunches are catered by the Holly Hotel.

Evelyn Raskin, an artist, has painted wonderful murals on two walls of the building that form an alcove from the garden, imbuing it with a romantic Italian look.

Fifty dogwood trees planted near the building are in full bloom each spring and many Michigan wildflowers have been moved into a section of this large acreage. Another section is comprised of a hardwood forest, including a Wye Oak, hickories and other trees.

Now to the gardens. As you approach the building, a series of ponds cascades from an underground spring and against one wall of the Secret Garden, a large, 25-year-old espaliered apple tree 22-1/2 feet wide that has been transplanted from Oregon. Iron gates lead into the walled garden.

At the present time several gardens are under construction. An Italian Follies garden, filled with oversized animals, mythical beasts and gods, will consist of a couple of acres.

"A two-layer amphitheater will be built up through the follies garden to enable visitors to see the actors on a stage that will be behind one of the garden walls," Hilty said.

This will be the site of a youth theater.

Nearby a miniature forest of black oak, white oak and wild Michigan cherry will be kept to a height of six to eight feet and will serve as a transition between the follies garden and a Japanese moss garden.

Cherry poles will hold up the black pine trees because, as Hilty said, "The Japanese use cherry and we're trying to maintain the spirit of it." Petrified wood has been found that Hilty said "must be 3 million years old." A little pool of water will be constructed nearby and the wood will be placed so that the lengthening afternoon shadows of the forest will grow toward the Japanese garden.

Eighteen varieties of mosses have been identified and grow on the property. Most were found beneath native trees where they thrive in their natural location. A wooden walkway will be elevated above the mosses to encourage visitors to view them without damage.

Another future project is a domed-over butterfly garden where these ephemeral creatures will fly freely and feed on tropical plants.

Nearby an overlook will be built to enable visitors to enjoy the views of a spring-fed lake and see for one-eighth of a mile across to sunken gardens.

An old-fashioned croquet lawn will also be built. A pair of arbors on either side of the croquet lawn will be festooned with hanging baskets from the ceiling with a serpentine walk meandering through.

This area will be cared for by physically impaired people, so serpentine tables at wheelchair height will enable gardeners to lower the baskets of flowers to train and care for them.

This large parcel of land also contains wetland areas. A wooden walkway, wide enough for two wheelchairs to pass, will be built so that this part of nature can be enjoyed by all.

A handrail to guide sightless visitors will enable them to traverse this walk unaided. A cassette tape will point out specific things of interest on this walk.

Master gardener volunteers have been a great help to the Hilty family in its endeavor. The Garden Park of Holly is at 976 E. Maple, Holly. Take Exit 98 west from I-75.The garden is on the south side.

The garden is open May through October. At the present time, reservations are required to visit this one-of-a-kind garden. Call (810) 634-9300 to reserve your day for a personal tour of the grounds. Admission to the gardens is $3.50; an optional catered box lunch is available for an additional $6.50.

Make library personal space

Naomi Stone Levy

The library or book room becomes your very special personal space. Anyone who loves to read wants to house their collection of books in a room in which they can relax.

Obviously the seating pieces must be exceptionally comfortable. Situating the seating in the center of the room instead of around the perimeter allows easier access to the books. Usable, not just decorative, side tables are essential. A bowl of fruit, candy or nutmeats should be nearby. Juxtaposition of great reading light is helpful. Accordingly -- your private library.

I cannot possibly describe the warmth and personality that emanates from shelves of books. They needn't be in costly bookcases; mere open shelves are sufficient. Gilding a lily sometimes helps, but isn't always recommended. The bindings themselves resonate their own charisma.

If you plan to build in shelves I love to see the top shelf continue across the top of doorways, around the perimeter of the entire room. This creates significant alcoves for the doors. You can embellish the book room look with all manner of moldings. Build up a strong crown molding and add "egg and dart" or "dentils" available at lumber yards by the foot and very tasteful.

You are free to select your preferred finish, from woods such as light pine, walnut, mahogany or ebony. You can also paint any suitable color. Dirty mustard yellow, barnyard red or old blue are a subtle spectrum. I like to have the painter rub a "glaze" over any of the preceding. It adds another dimension to brush "flyspecks" over all. Having said all of the above, you have created a library.

If you prefer to buy prefinished bookcases and place them against the walls you can do these in multiples if space is available, or as a single if limits are set. I needn't tell you how to arrange the books, but if you discuss this with a librarian he or she will give you remarkable advice -- there is a better way.

Make room for periodicals. Many people own back issues of National Geographic in their traditional yellow covers. Quite an addition. These can stand on their own. Other periodicals must lie flat.

Underplay the upholstery colors. The books themselves are sufficiently colorful. Custom-made lamp shades of bookbinders paper are charming. One word of caution: This paper isn't translucent and does cut down on the amount of light. Don't use more than two, perhaps on a pair of brass candlestick lamps. The rest of the shades should be of sheer natural linen.

Speaking of brass, use a lot of it! It is vibrant, and there are many accessories available. A singular choice is a twisted column floor lamp with a three-way 50/200/250 bulb. There are tobacco boxes, bowls, paperweights and even a brass trivet/table. I wouldn't be true to myself if I didn't tell you antiques outclass reproductions. However, new ones are better than none. Use some vinegar to remove the too-new look.

All of the foregoing are quite traditional in character. You readers who are contemporary minded need to translate whatever I have discussed in the space above into a modern mode. The colors won't be nearly so muted. Lighting is best if supplied by recessed ceiling lights (called hi-hats in the trade) and the use of table and floor lamps.

An eminent architect I know divides his bookshelves into equal size box squares, and paints them white, oftimes edged with stained wood. The library suddenly has a very contemporary look. If there is a fireplace it must be extremely simple, the hallmark of modern. The surround should just be straight slabs of granite or marble with no ornamentation.

Accessories in this venue will be sparse. There can still be antiques mixed with 20th century creations. Undoubtedly the tables will be fashioned of glass, marble or very simple wood designs. Art work for either environment must be carefully chosen -- even the picture frames become important. Add a piece of sculpture for further impact.

INVITING IDEAS

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

With the weather finally beginning to break, most of us are starting to panic about the weight we've put on during the winter – swimsuit weather has a tendency to initiate that kind of panic. Summer clothes are not just as kind as the heavy woolen ones, and now it's time to do something about it.

With all that is available – specific diets, diet-related foods, including diet sodas, appetite suppressants, and exercise equipment, why does it seem so difficult to lose weight on your own? For whatever reason, it seems to be much more palatable to lose weight with another person – a spouse, friend, or family member.

Several years ago, while complaining to a friend that I still hadn't lost the weight from giving birth – my standard line was, "I just had a baby" (11 years earlier). My friend totally lost sympathy for me and talked me into joining Weight Watchers with her. We both stuck to our diets and lost a considerable amount of weight. My friend being 10 years younger, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and gorgeous to begin with, made me a bit crazy by losing the weight a lot quicker than I did – but it worked! Losing weight in whatever method you choose, works well when you do it with someone – there's something to be said for dieter's camaraderie.

Get a group together, or just one friend, and walk on scheduled days – then plan to have a low-fat lunch together. By making it an event you won't feel punished – deprivation does not work well for me. If you plan to go on a specific diet with your weight-reduction partner, it is best to check first with your family doctor, and make sure the diet is safe for you.

'Tis the season for lots of fresh vegetables, salad greens and fruits – incorporate them into your specific plan and make watching your weight fun – get some exercise, and change your lifestyle to a healthy one – you'll be surprised how quickly you get into that swimsuit, and are able to stay in it.

"Craig Claiborne's Gourmet Diet Cookbook" by Craig Claiborne with Pierre Franey (copyright 1980, Times Books) with an introduction by Jane Brody, contains some of my favorite recipes. The following is very low in fat and calories.

DILL AND YOGURT SOUP

4 cups unsalted chicken broth (homemade or prepared)
1 egg yolk
2 teaspoons flour
1½ cups plain yogurt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill

Combine about ¼ cup of broth, the egg yolk and flour in a mixing bowl. Beat with a wire whisk until smooth.

Put the yogurt in a mixing bowl and beat in the yolk mixture. Add a generous grinding of pepper.

Bring the remaining broth to a boil. Spoon about ¼ cup of the hot broth into the yogurt mixture, stirring. Pour and scrape the yogurt mixture into the broth, stirring vigorously with a whisk. Bring just to the boil, stirring constantly from the bottom. Do not boil or the soup will curdle. Stir in the dill and serve hot, or chill and serve cold, Serves 6.

I am always looking for scallop recipes, my husband loves them, and they are low in cholesterol. The following recipe is from one of the newer Weight Watcher cookbooks – "Quick Meals in 30 Minutes or Less!" (published by (Macmillan, a Simon & Schuster Macmillan Company, 1995).

SCALLOPS WITH HERB SAUCE

½ cup packed fresh basil leaves
3 tablespoons low-sodium chicken broth
2 tablespoons fresh thyme leaves
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
½ garlic clove, minced
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
15 ounces sea scallops

In a food processor or blender, combine parsley, basil, broth, thyme, lemon juice, oil, garlic, salt and pepper; puree until smooth. Set aside.

Spray large non-stick skillet with non-stick cooking spray; place over medium heat. Add scallops, cook, turning once, 2-3 minutes on each side, until golden brown and heated through. Remove from heat; transfer scallops to medium bowl. Let skillet cool slightly.

Pour reserved herb mixture into cooled skillet; cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, 1-2 minutes, until heated. Pour over scallops; toss to combine. Serves 4.

Protect high tech equipment from power surge

With millions of people now working at home, many American residences are becoming high-tech havens. Besides computers, printers and modems, home offices frequently accommodate fax machines, scanners, copiers and other equipment.

Although a home office provides flexibility and convenience, it is just as susceptible to power problems as a traditional office. And one of the most common types of power problems is a power surge.

A power surge is a sudden increase in voltage and current that lasts for just a fraction of a second. But it can cause gradual deterioration and sometimes immediate damage to all types of micro-processor-controlled equipment.

"Potentially damaging power surges occur on a regular basis in the average home and office," said Mike Einstein of Intermatic, a manufacturer of surge protection products. "They're caused when the power company switches substations, by motors and fluorescent lights switching on and off in your home or office, and by lightning strikes."

This unseen threat can be controlled with a device called a surge protector. When a power surge occurs, the surge protector responds immediately by absorbing the overload and permitting normal voltage to flow through the equipment. After the disruption occurs, the surge protector automatically resets itself.

Surge protectors are packaged individually for specific applications, as well as in kits that protect a typical home or business.

Another option is a whole home surge protector that provides protection for electronic equipment throughout the home. It is wired to the incoming power line on the home's main panel box, and can be installed by either an experienced do-it-yourselfer or electrical contractor.

One of the latest innovations is Intermatic's line of surge protectors with built-in timers. Not only do these units secure home office equipment from power surges even when the power is turned off, but they can be programmed like a timer to eliminate warm-up delays. Three different options covering virtually every office equipment application are available.

To accommodate electronic phone systems, answering machines and fax machines typically found in home offices, some manufacturers have added built-in jacks on their surge protectors. For offices with little space around the electrical outlet, there are new space-saving side-entry models. Other popular features include indicator lights and audible alarms.

While you're determining which type of surge protector you need, take a look at your home's electrical system. Make sure it can handle the increased load of your equipment so that you don't create an overload and possible fire hazard.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Your simple shots can KISS and tell

MONTE NAGLER

As my photography students all know, I like to promote the idea of the KISS theory in my classes. No, it doesn't mean smooching with the student next to you! KISS means to "keep it smartly simple," to be smart and to maintain a simplicity in your photographs.

Good writers, for example, don't clutter up their work with superfluous words. They get right to the heart of the matter, which makes their writing easier to understand. You'll also find a simplicity of style and content in many of the great paintings that we all enjoy.

Similarly with our photography, keeping things simple will often result in impact shots that will capture our attention.

One of the best ways to apply the KISS theory in photography is simply to move in close and express a single idea.

A closeup of a rusted latch on a weathered barn door can tell a lot about the barn as a whole. A well-executed intimate shot of a single bud will usually have more impact than a picture of an entire garden of flowers.

How about a simple photo of a flower-laden window ledge in a small French village? Such a picture can convey the feeling and charm of all of Europe.

As in all good photography, watch your backgrounds. Simplifying your compositions also means simplifying the background. Look for backgrounds that are uncluttered or select a background that complements the subject.

Remember, a well-done shot that uses the KISS theory and contains the essence of the whole will reward you with a photograph of which you'll be proud.

Mist-ical: Nothing wrong with shooting the whole waterfall. But how about trying to keep it simple and photograph just a portion? Monte Nagler took this intimate scene in Hocking Hills, Ohio.

Get your refrigerator ready for summer

(AP) _ Your refrigerator and freezer work harder than ever during the hot, humid days of summer. Here are tips on general use and maintenance, anticipating summer stress.

Locate your refrigerator or freezer away from direct sunlight or from a heat source such as range, dishwasher or heating vent. Don't put your refrigerator in an unheated space either. Food will not be kept properly cold in a refrigerator or freezer kept at temperatures below 60 degrees Fahrenheit, which can easily happen if you put an old refrigerator or freezer in an unheated laundry room or a garage.

Always plug a refrigerator or freezer into a 15-amp circuit with no other appliances. The outlet should accept a grounded three-prong plug. If you must use an extension cord, it should be a heavy-duty three-wire type.

A refrigerator or freezer operates most efficiently when fully loaded, but be sure to leave enough space between items for air to circulate. Don't cover vents that send cold air to the refrigerator compartment.

Keep a refrigerator between 34 F and 40 F. To check it, put a refrigerator thermometer in the center of the food compartment overnight. If you can't maintain this temperature by adjusting the refrigerator's thermostat, check for clogged coils under the refrigerator or on the back of the unit. Keep a freezer close to zero degrees. To check it, put the thermometer on top of a carton of frozen food and leave it for a day. Note: if ice cream is firmly solid without being brick hard, the temperature is fine.

Clean the drain system in a self-defrosting refrigerator. The drain holes are at the bottom of the refrigerator and freezer compartments. Insert a piece of stiff wire to unclog the drain, then flush it with water from a basting syringe. Wash the drain pan in soapy water.

To see if a refrigerator door gasket is forming a tight seal, close the door on a dollar bill at several points. Look for slight resistance when you pull the dollar out. Or put a 150-watt outdoor floodlight in the compartment and look for a light leak in a darkened room. Try the light at different angles with the floodlight's cord coming out a side you are not checking.

You can often fix a small crack in the gasket around a refrigerator door with silicone caulk. Use your fingers to roll back the gasket and apply the caulk to the inside. Be careful not to apply too much. Use only a caulk whose label's fine print indicates it's safe for contact with food.

A tripped circuit breaker could turn the food in your freezer into a spoiled mess before you discover it. To avoid this, put a low-wattage night light in the same outlet as the freezer. You'll see immediately if it's off.

If your area has power outages, keep your freezer full, packing empty spaces with packets of picnic-cooler artificial ice or plastic bottles of frozen water.

Do ice cubes stick to your automatic ice-maker? Take out the ice-maker unit, wash the tray and let it dry. Lightly coat the inside with nonstick cooking spray and wipe off any excess. The cubes will slide right out and there will be no taste from the spray.

Have an old refrigerator that must be defrosted manually? To help melt the frost in the freezer, reverse the airflow on a canister vacuum and direct the stream of warm air into the emptied freezer.

The push is on, reel lawn mowers make comeback

(NU) - As real estate prices rise and lot sizes shrink, more and more people are rediscovering the practicality, simplicity and proven reliability of reel lawn mowers.

Lot sizes of new single family homes now average about 13,600 square feet, a 23 percent decrease from their peak size in the late 1980s, according to statistics from the U.S. Census Bureau.

The result is smaller lawns. And lawn size is the No. 1 reason more and more people are choosing reel mowers over powered rotary mowers, according to a survey by longtime reel makers American Lawn Mower Co./Great States Corp. in Shelbyville, Ind.

Of 2,013 customers surveyed, 64 percent said they used their reel mowers on lost of less than one-quarter acre. Another 24 percent said they used reel mowers on lots ranging in size from one-quarter acre to an acre.

American/Great States, which has built and refined the quiet, user-friendly machines for more than 100 years, found that customers also prefer reel mowers because they're: better for the environment, easier to maintain, better for health and fitness, less expensive, safer and superior at cutting grass. And some said they just couldn't resist the reel mower's nostalgic charm.

Reel mowers have become almost universally popular, according to the survey. Purchasers are nearly as likely to be women as men and buyers range in age from 19 to 60. Half live in suburban locales, but many also live in rural and urban areas. And although one strong selling point is price, as many people making more than $75,000 a year buy reel mowers as those making $25,000 or less.

The reel mower's proven reliability helped push annual sales up to about 250,000 units last year - nearly three times the amount sold in 1985.

Public effort restores Rouge River

SUPPLEMENT TO THE OBSERVER & ECCENTRIC NEWSPAPERS

Changing Currents: Introduction

Rouge cleanup making progress

By Bob Needham
Staff Writer

It's everywhere you turn.

Drive, bike or walk through north and west greater Detroit, and if you look for it, it's there.

It's that creek running through the park down the street, that drainage ditch behind the grocery, that lake you drive past on the way to work.

It's home to a surprising amount of wildlife, and a growing number of recreational possibilities.

It's historically the most polluted watercourse in the state of Michigan. But the Rouge River is also the focus of a massive, multifaceted push to bring it back — an effort unmatched anywhere in the nation. And although it has a ways to go, that effort has shown considerable results.

A river runs through us

"This has been the largest watershed project in the entire country dealing with urban problems," said Jim Murray, a key figure in Rouge efforts. "We've really become the nation's laboratory."

Contributing to the uniqueness is the large amount of park land along the river, he added: "It's one of the most accessible urban rivers in the country."

Reversing decades of abuse and neglect is a tall order, but officials believe in the river coming back.

"The Rouge is never going to be the way it was back in the 1700s," said Cathy Bean, state coordinator of the Rouge Remedial Action Plan. However, "The river is worth saving."

The river needs saving in the first place because of years of pollution — industrial discharges, overflows of raw sewage, and all kinds of assorted junk tossed in by those mistaking the river for a landfill. The tide started to turn in the early 1970s with the dawning environmental movement.

"People said, 'We've had enough,' " Bean said. Eventually, Rouge Rescue sprouted and grew, with thousands of volunteers turning out each spring to do a lot of the heavy physical work.

"There was a fundamental change in the way this country regulated pollution in 1972," said Murray, director of Wayne County's Department of the Environment. Congress passed the Clean Water Act, and one goal was to see the Rouge River completely clean in four years.

"Here we are 25 years later and we haven't quite achieved that goal," Murray said.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency sued the Detroit waste water treatment plant in 1977 for polluting Lake Erie, and federal Judge John Feikens — in a relationship with Rouge concerns which continues today — ordered the EPA and state Department of Natural Resources to address point-source pollution — that which, unlike storm water, can be traced to identifiable sources.

State officials started working on a Rouge cleanup strategy. Meanwhile, the U.S.-Canadian International Joint Commission identified 43 "areas of concern" for Great Lakes pollution, including 14 in Michigan, one of which was the Rouge watershed. The resulting Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement required each area of concern to develop a remedial action plan, or RAP, to address its own situation.

Bean explained that the Rouge cleanup strategy already under way got transformed into a formal RAP. It called for control of combined sewer overflow points, limits on "nonpoint source" pollution, and analysis of sediments. The nine-volume RAP won adoption in 1989, with a major update in 1994.

As plans moved further ahead, cost estimates mounted. In 1991 the U.S. Congress, led by Reps. John Dingell and Bill Ford, identified the Rouge River as a national demonstration project, a situation so unique it deserved federal attention — and money. It would restore the river and, in the process, provide an example of how to address similar situations elsewhere. Murray said the funding came in part because Congress was impressed by the breadth and dedication of the volunteer efforts to clean up the river.

"This is the first comprehensive watershed project in the country that's in an urban area. All the others ... have been agricultural," Murray said.

The federal government has dedicated $288 million so far, paying 95 percent of engineering costs and 55 percent of construction costs for sewer projects, Murray said. Other units of government pay their share as well.

The federal side of the restoration is officially called the Rouge River National Wet Weather Demonstration Project, since river pollution is largely a rainy-weather concern. Murray does double duty as Rouge Project director. Phase I, nearing completion in many areas, will see the elimination of about a third of the combined sewer overflows, mostly in the river's upper reaches. Phase II, to be done by 2005 in the downstream areas, is designed to finish the CSO part of the job.

"Our goal is by the year 2005 to have the public health risks removed completely," Murray said.

Now, the EPA and the Rouge effort are both turning their attention to the issue of storm water runoff.

"We need to have better soil erosion control," Bean said. "Soil is a pollutant. It's not just mud."

The Rouge resource

Other problems are being addressed, too; Murray mentioned ongoing efforts to identify illicit connections, and the discovery of certain areas in Oakland County with 50- to 70-percent failure rate of septic tanks.

"Where we do find problems with the septic tanks, there are local ordinances and state laws," he said. "There's lots of problems, but lots of opportunities to get this right."

Both Bean and Murray talk about the need for cooperation among all facets of society: individuals, governments, organizations, businesses.

"To me, the most crucial thing for the watershed is that people realize it's not a sewer," Bean said. "If we're going to be successful we have to get the support of the people who live in the watershed, and the governing bodies.

"We need to get homeowners to realize they have an impact even if they don't live right next to the stream," she said. "There's lots of things that people can do themselves.

"There are some beautiful pieces of the stream ... If we don't take care of the uncontrolled growth, it's not going to be like that. I'm not against development, but we need to have responsible development."

Both officials said they love to see the results when people start cooperating, with governments, residents, community organizations working to a common goal. Said Murray: "That's really the gratifying part of this."

Changing Currents: History

River drew the efforts of Henry Ford

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

The Rouge River played a tiny role in Henry Ford's version of automotive history, though at one time the Dearborn pioneer had high hopes for it as both a manufacturing and sociological experiment.

"I am a farmer," Ford said after World War I. "I am going to establish plants for manufacturing parts of Ford cars and Fordson tractors in places where they will be within easy reach of farming districts, and provide employment for farmers and their families in winter. And these plants are going to be operated by water power."

Instead of drawing country boys into city squalor, Ford would take his factories to the country. The farmer could earn $6 a day in the factory, save enough to buy tractors and equipment, then be given time off for his mechanized farm duties — which Ford estimated at 24 days a year.

Hydroelectric power was the fad of the 1920s. Ford established plants on several rivers in Ohio and Michigan, including four on the Middle Rouge. If the Rouge's current could power gristmills, why, it should be able to power a manufacturing plant, the 57-year-old ex-farmer reasoned.

Trouble was, however, the Rouge is narrow and has a weak current. For most of its length, it drains an ancient lake bottom flattened by glaciers that melted 12,000 years ago. The Rouge's water power never was too powerful.

Ford bought a mill site at Northville in 1920 and hired 300 men to make valves. National historian Allan Nevins in the 1950s wrote that he had to supplement water power with a steam turbine. Local historian and editor Jack Hoffman, in Northville: The First Hundred Years (1976), quoted workers who said the waterwheel was just a backup source of electricity and never used. The second Northville plant, built in 1936, has been converted to other uses and still stands at the bend of Main Street.

At Nankin Mills, Ford's plant made rivets — all one could do with only 30 to 50 horsepower. At the Phoenix dam, outside Plymouth, the plant used 100 horsepower to make small taps for threading operations.

At Waterford (Six Mile and Northville roads) stood an early settlement that in its day was larger than Plymouth and Northville. The dam there generated 50 horsepower. The turbine stood in an enclosed glass case outside the factory.

The manager in charge of village industries soon saw water power was insufficient and, against Ford's wishes, installed a Lincoln engine. Nevins, in Ford: Expansion and Challenge, wrote: "Ford was outraged. He ordered the engine and generator delivered to Avery's house, where they were left on his front porch at night. "We built these plants to run on water power," he pointed out. "When I want any other kind of power in, I'll let you know how to do it."

Ford would establish a dozen other village plants with hydroelectric dams in the Midwest. By 1939 they employed a peak of 2,460 making cigarette lighters, carburetors, horns and ignition coils.

Ford could bend managers and workers to his will, but he couldn't conquer the sluggish Rouge.

The plants were built with much local fanfare, but one by one they were quietly abandoned as unprofitable. "Most are in use as antique shops and community centers, highway maintenance facilities, or for non-Ford manufacturing," wrote University of Michigan business historian David L. Lewis in The Public Image of Henry Ford (1976).

Ford Motor Co. eventually did expand to the suburbs, but in the giant plants along rail lines, as in Highland Park and Dearborn.

The Rouge was to have one final victory over Henry Ford.

He used a 14-foot dam to supply power to his Fair Lane home, now part of the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus, to generate electricity through three-fourths of a mile of brass tubing and 135 miles of electrical conduit. Wrote Robert Lacey in Ford: The Men and The Machine (1986):

"Every bathroom had four taps yielding well-water and rainwater, both hot and cold, as well as nozzles which shot out hot air for hair-drying on command. The marble benches around the indoor swimming pool were continually warmed to comfort the posteriors of those who sat upon them, and the same heating pipes extended outside to prevent the 500 birdbaths scattered around the estate from freezing up in winter."

On April 6, 1947, Henry and Clara Ford returned from the warmth of Georgia to rainy Michigan. The Rouge rose to record levels, flooding out the power plant and forcing shutdown of the turbines. The next day, Henry Ford, who started his industrial career as an electrical engineer, died in a chilled home without electric power.

The Rouge has less than half the water flow of the Clinton River, which runs eastward from Pontiac across Macomb County, and one-third the flow of the Huron River, which starts near Pontiac and flows southwestward to Ann Arbor, then southeast to Lake Erie.

"The country around Detroit is uncommonly flat, and in none of the rivers is there sufficient fall to turn even a gristmill," said a 1796 observer. "An inconsiderable stream," sniffed a later business historian of the Rouge.

Yet the Rouge is a survivor. When Cadillac founded a French fort at Detroit in 1701, there were three rivers between the Clinton and Huron. The Savoyard, next to his Fort Ponchartrain, is an enclosed sewer. Parent's Creek, the east side stream which acquired the nickname "Bloody Run" after Pontiac's tribes massacred the British in 1763, was simply filled in.

Rolling on the river: The Northville Ford Plant pioneered Henry Ford's innovative — but ultimately unsuccessful — "village industry" idea. The plant stayed in operation until the late 1980s.

Indians began settling area

When the Rouge River first drew the attention of Henry Ford, it had already been a place of recreation, commerce, agriculture and industry since prehistoric times.

Two great Indian burial mounds have been found on the Rouge. One mound measured 40 feet by several hundred feet and was used by several generations and possibly different tribes living in the same area.

When the French arrived in the late 17th century the Potawatomis had a village near the largest mound. The Indians fished, hunted and settled along its shores.

But the French named it — for its reddish color — and used it to further their exploitation of the fur trade. The explorers and trappers, used the Rouge as a passage to the interior from the Detroit River. As early as 1705, the more adventurous French settlers began establishing riverfront farms on the Rouge.

The river was a place for recreation from the earliest days. French, and later British and American, settlers used to delight in skimming and racing the frozen river in light sleighs pulled by ponies. Fishing was another favorite recreation.

Settlement picked up in the interior following the defeat of Chief Pontiac in 1763. The four branches of the river each drew settlers.

The Rouge had other uses as well. Two grist mills opened at the main forks of the Rouge in 1776, and others soon followed. By 1875 the river was the site of such companies as the Michigan Car Co., making railroad cars; and Detroit Glass Works.

But the most important development on the river was the Detroit Shipyard, built by the British just before the Revolutionary War. The shipyard continued in operation until after World War I.

During that war, the Eagle Boat Works built a small boat used to fight submarines. It was here, in 1917, that Henry Ford came home to work as well as live.

Residents on Rouge observe changes

Ten years ago this week, the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers published a special supplement, similar to this one, called "Our River."
Among other stories, it visited a few people who lived along the Rouge to hear their opinions about, and experiences with, the river. We caught up with two of those same people to see how conditions have changed, if at all.

Jon Heinrich, Southfield

Ten years ago, Jon Heinrich wondered if someday he might be able to stroll into his back yard with a fishing pole and catch his breakfast in the Rouge River.

"I haven't realized my dream," he said recently, but the past decade has brought tremendous improvements in several chronic problems: odor, appearance, and the frequency of flooding.

"When we moved here, the river looked like chocolate milk all the time," he said. The river bottom was covered in silt.

"Today, unless there has been some major runoff due to heavy rains, the river is very clean and you can see a natural sand and gravel bottom."

Odor was another big problem which he has seen lessen and ultimately disappear over the years he and his family have lived on their 3-acre river lot. Now, the air stays pure year-round.

Flooding was a third important issue, with many big logjams right behind his house.

"Back when we moved here, that thing would flood after any moderate rain," he recalled. "Today you have to have a major amount of water."

Heinrich has been active in the Southfield efforts to clean up the river for years, and still coordinates food for the volunteers.

"It really took 20 years to get the major jams out of that river in Southfield. That's how big a job it was," he said. Now, of course, the cleanups continue, but the job is nowhere near what it once was.

"There is no end. There's always something that's going to fall in or wash down, but it's small stuff compared to what was there."

Heinrich has canoed part of the Southfield stretch and found it eye-opening: "You're in another world. You would have no idea that Eight Mile was up there." Lately he's noticed deer in his area for the first time.

"The satisfaction is tremendous. Here's a project we worked on all these years and we can really see results," he said. "You can see it, you can smell it, and it's there."

Freer flow: Jim McCook spent a lot of energy years back restoring the true flow of the river behind his Beverly Hills home. The work continues, but the McCooks don't see the trash they once did.

Jim McCook, Beverly Hills

Jim McCook and wife Aldamarie moved to their own home on the river in 1979. Their back yard is a long slope down to river, and looks out onto a small island, with a village nature preserve across the river.

When they moved in, lots of logjams of one side of the island forced the river into an unnatural flow, and they heard stories about the river turning green by the end of summer.

"The water didn't run at all. It closed off the river," McCook said.

Things are much different today.

The McCooks broke up a lot of logjams and did a lot of cleaning. "It's flowed very well since," he said. "I really think the course of the river has changed since we broke the logjams up."

"We're not seeing the trash that was there when we arrived," Aldamarie McCook said. They found one tire last year, and a couple of trash cans need to be removed this spring. But for the most part, they have seen a big improvement in the trash flowing through the river.

However, Jim McCook added, one problem remains: "We haven't seen a decrease in the amount of cut logs."

Somewhere upstream of their area of the river, people keep cut wood too close to the river, the McCooks explained. When big rains come, the logs come washing downstream, and someone has to clean them out all over again.

McCook said some people seem to suffer from "a lack of interest in the environment and each other." He believes more education needs to be done, and in more than one arena: "It starts at home," he said. "They could reinforce it in the schools."

They're also concerned because retention basin construction last year drained some wetland areas near the river. This spring, the area is marshy once again, but they don't know whether the moisture will remain throughout summer.

In the meantime, the McCooks can enjoy their own nature sanctuary along the Rouge. They've seen woodchucks, pheasants, deer, and the occasional Baltimore oriole. Back when Jim McCook was feeding the raccoons regularly, he once had 40 of them visit at one time. A few years back an entire fox family frequented the back yard.

Sitting on a bench along the river, McCook told of watching red-tailed hawks soar around and herons nest in trees. Describing kingfishers, he said, "When they dive after something, they crash right into the water."

He watched a couple of Canada geese in some obscure, but noisy, dispute on the water and said, when sitting in an area like that: "You don't know civilization is here."

Changing Currents: Pollution

Variety of sources contaminate river

Testing methods

Sampling the river for pollution is a part of the National Wet Weather Demonstration Project. Pollutants sampled include bacteria, nutrients, total suspended solids, biochemical oxygen demand, and dissolved oxygen.

Sampling strategies are different for different problems, Kaunelis said.

For example, when the Rouge River Remedial Action Plan began, experts knew dissolved oxygen would be an issue, Kaunelis said. Dissolved oxygen in the water is important, because if the oxygen level is at zero, everything in the water dies. Dissolved oxygen is monitored at the sites where meters have been set up to monitor continuously.

Gathering data: The Lower Rouge undergoes sampling at Newburgh Road in Wayne.

Bacteria is also an issue. Bacteria is monitored on a random sample basis. The Rouge River fails to meet water quality standards for bacteria throughout the river, according to a 1994 status report.

The sampling program was set up to establish base-line conditions, according to Lou Regenmorter, an environmental engineer and manager of the sampling program.

Sampling begins in April or May and continues until October or November. Sampling started in the fall of 1993 and was conducted all of the summer of 1994. It was scaled back to fewer sites, but was conducted all summer in 1995. It will continue in 1996.

The high cost of continuing many sampling sites has resulted in plans to scale back, Regenmorter said. For 1993-96, sampling has cost $8.6 million, including the planning, collecting of samples, lab analysis, data handling and validation and entering results in the database.

To reduce the number of sites, sampling meters could be placed only at the mouth and lower ends of the branches of the Lower, Middle and Upper Rouge, but then localized problems may not be picked up, Regenmorter said.

Sampling has found that storm water runoff and uncontrolled combined sewer overflows are major polluters. When many sewer systems were built, they had sewage and stormwater running in the same pipes; during rains, the pipes would fill and raw sewage would flow into the river.

Other pollution sources are contaminated sites and sediments.

Contaminated sediments include polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, toxic chemicals that have been found in Newburgh Lake from an old dumping system.

A study has found leaking septic tanks to be a significant source of pollution, particularly because of the bacteria, Kaunelis said.

Illicit or illegal connections to storm water systems add pollution to the river. Almost every community has some connection problems, he said.

Metals, such as mercury and lead, are monitored. Metals work their way up the food chain. Metals can be toxic to fish and can be toxic to those who eat the fish. Deposits on pavement, such as from leaded gas, caused lead levels to rise in the Rouge. Mercury contamination is a problem everywhere, Regenmorter said.

"Atmospheric deposition," in which pollution can come from far away, as acid rain does, also pollutes the river. "That's not an easily controlled source," Kaunelis said.

Testing results

Following are some results from the 1994 status report on the National Wet Weather Demonstration Project.

- Overall, the bacteria levels are higher than the Michigan Department of Natural Resources standard of 200 counts per 100 milliliters of water.

During dry-weather conditions, the bacteria levels are high in the entire system, but especially in the Lower Rouge River. The sources include illicit connections, failed septic systems, dry-weather CSO discharges and waste from water fowl.

During wet-weather conditions, the bacteria levels increase further. The sources can also include CSO discharges and storm water runoff.

- Excessive amounts of two types of nutrients, nitrogen and phosphorus, are found in the river.

During dry weather, nutrients concentrations are high in the head waters and downstream ends of the Lower Rouge. The source is unknown, but could be CSO discharges and /or illicit connections.

High total nitrogen concentrations also occur on the upstream end of the Middle Rouge.

During wet weather, total nitrogen concentrations are high in the head waters and downstream end of the Lower Rouge, the head waters of the Middle Rouge and moderate concentrations are found in the Main Rouge below Five Mile Road.

During wet weather, phosphorus concentrations are raised in the entire system, from storm water and CSO discharges. The phosphorus levels appear to be sufficiently high to promote significant algal and plant growth in much of the river system.

- The amount of solids found in water, ranging from clay, silt and plankton to industrial wastes and sewage, can be high in both dry and wet weather conditions. High amounts of suspended solids reduce light penetration which inhibits the aquatic community and presents an aesthetic problem.
- Dissolved oxygen is the amount of oxygen gas dissolved in a certain amount of water at a particular temperature and pressure. The current dissolved oxygen concentrations cannot support an aquatic community in the lower end of each branch and the Main Rouge below Five Mile Road.

The 1994 sampling data analyzes each of the branches of the Rouge:

- The Lower Rouge has relatively high nutrient concentrations at both upstream and downstream segments of the system. Total suspended solids and bacteria values were high and dissolved oxygen levels were poor.
- In the Middle Rouge, high nutrient concentrations were observed at the upstream end of the system. The remainder of the Middle Rouge had little or no nutrients. Bacteria levels were high and dissolved oxygen levels low at the downstream end.
- In the Upper Rouge, relatively high concentrations of nutrients were observed at the downstream end. High bacteria and poor dissolved oxygen levels were also observed at the downstream end.
- The Main Rouge does not exhibit any areas at which the nutrient concentrations are unusually high. The head waters of the Main Rouge had high total suspended solid levels. Bacteria levels were high over much of the upper section. Dissolved oxygen concentrations were poor at the upstream end of the lower section.

As controls on combined sewer overflows come on line by the end of 1997, the sampling program will look at how effective they are, Kaunelis said.

Also this year, a clean business program and clean neighborhood program will begin to help stop more pollution.

Changing Currents

Public effort restores the Rouge River

The Rouge River Watershed — the area which drains into the river — covers about 438 square miles in Southeast Michigan, stretching from Rochester Hills, Wixom and Salem in its outer reaches to the city of River Rouge, where the Rouge and Detroit rivers meet on their way to Lake Erie. The watershed covers part or all of 48 different municipalities in Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties. More than 1.5 million people live within the watershed, with half its land considered urbanized and about a quarter considered undeveloped. The river itself runs for more than 126 miles and consists of four separate branches: the main, running through Birmingham, Southfield, and Detroit; the Upper, in Farmington, Livonia and Redford; the Middle, in Plymouth, Livonia, Westland, and Dearborn Heights; and the Lower, through Canton, Inkster and Dearborn.

With more than 50 miles of the Rouge flowing through public parks, it is one of the most accessible rivers in the state, and the watershed includes over 400 lakes, impoundments and ponds. The river has played a critical role in the development of this entire region, serving as a mode of travel and transport, a source of power, and a foundation for the communities in which we live today. However, the river itself is one of the most polluted in the state, much of the problem coming from overflows of combined storm and sanitary sewers. Many actions have been taken to address these problems, including government projects to end direct discharges of sewage into the river, separate combined sewers, and build retention basins to control overflows. Volunteers like the Friends of the Rouge provide crucial efforts to clean up problems, and private individuals are taking action to help heal the river as well. More work will continue to be done on all these fronts.

Changing Currents: Government

Sewer projects address overflow

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

Whether coordinating multi-million-dollar sewer improvement projects, participating in regional water quality committees, or enforcing local laws to control the effects of development, government has been a major player in cleaning up the Rouge River.

Much of this involvement came from mandates in the federal Clean Water Act, and after approval in 1989 of the Rouge River Remedial Action Plan.

Since then, awareness by local government officials has increased and many are beginning to work together on these issues, said Cathy Bean, Rouge RAP coordinator for the state Department of Environmental Quality.

"It's getting better," she said. "I'm hearing more 'we want to do it,' that 'this would be a good thing to do.' I think the will is coming. They're starting to realize that people care about the river."

County officials agree. "Everybody's kind of embraced the idea that we're going to have to do something," said Vyto Kaunelis, director of the Wayne County Public Works Division-Environment Department.

Multi-faceted plan

The RAP cleanup plan includes: separating and upgrading sanitary and storm sewers in 168 older communities in Wayne and Oakland counties to remove sewage which overflowed into the river during heavy rains; building retention basins to hold, treat and control the flow of sewer and storm water; and dealing with storm water, industrial pollutants and leaking septic systems which also affect the river.

After some initial wrangling — a Birmingham project is still in court — construction is under way throughout Oakland and Wayne counties, including about $307 million worth of projects funded partially through $160 million in federal grant money. Other projects, such as one done in the city of Farmington in the early 1990s, were built with local bond money.

Retention structures are being built in Beverly Hills, Birmingham, Dearborn Heights, Dearborn, Inkster, Redford Township, Detroit and River Rouge to hold, treat and control storm and sewer water releases. Sewer separation projects are under way in Plymouth Township and in the cities of Garden City, Livonia, Wayne, Westland and the Bloomfield area Some of these projects are already completed, with others slated to be done in 1997.

"I think these projects are right in line with where they need to be," said Wayne County's Kaunelis. "We have good, tight schedules, and everybody's working hard to meet those."

Although a number of combined sewer areas will remain in Detroit, Dearborn, Inkster, Dearborn Heights and Redford in Wayne County when these projects are over, the areas left must be taken care of by 2005.

The projects being done in Oakland County should eliminate any overflow problems there, Kaunelis added.

Mike Duggan, deputy Wayne County executive, said that despite the millions in public money spent, most residents are unaware of the results.

"They don't really know what they're getting. What they're getting is a cleaner Rouge River," he said. "The benefit is that Hines Park is more usable; the Rouge River is more usable."

One city's story

Livonia is one Rouge community involved with several projects, starting 10 years ago. The city did a sewer system evaluation, and spent $24 million ($12 million of city money) to build an underground retention tank, a three-year project completed in 1992.

It is now working to stop storm overflows into the river and is, this year, focusing on six areas on the city's south side to separate older sewer systems and educate area residents about storm water, said Robert Beckley, director of public works for the city.

Government representatives also participate in the Rouge RAP Advisory Council. MDEQ's Bean said the RAP committee is forming alliances between groups and government. "I'm very happy with the participation I'm getting from members of the council," she said. "It's getting stronger, bigger."

Whatever government's role, those involved in the Rouge Project are pleased with the progress made and are encouraged about the future.

"The thing I find encouraging is that something's being done about it. That's encouraging to me," said Joe O'Brien, senior scientist. "Hopefully, it will start a movement that will grow ... and that will start to change things."

Next challenge: controlling storm water runoff

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

Despite costly efforts to improve old sewer systems and stop sewage from flowing into the Rouge River, cleanup organizers are now focused on pollutants from another source: storm water runoff.

They are now pushing into the next phase: finding the best ways to slow or eliminate storm water runoff which carries pollutants into the Rouge.

Most everyone involved with the topic agrees: The biggest issue will be time and cost to local communities, and whether they will be allowed to make their own decisions or be forced to treat storm water through a federal court order.

"The regulatory process never ends — it is becoming more and more complex and cumbersome," said Robert Beckley, director of the Public Services Division for the city of Livonia. "There is a fear of how much money it's going to take."

The court issue remains open-ended, as leaders of local communities continue to meet in federal court with U.S. District Court Judge John Feikens, who was involved with the regional permitting and combined sewer separation projects, and who has apparently taken an interest in the storm water issue.

Storm water effects

Storm water runoff can carry soil and other pollutants into the river, which affects water quality, fish and wildlife habitats. "Soil erosion, if not controlled, seriously destroys the river," said Cathy Bean, Rouge Remedial Action Plan coordinator for the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. "It can choke the fish, cover their eggs."

Surges of storm water to the river also harm oxygen levels in the river and fish habitats, experts say.

One regional effort is a $5 million funding of pilot projects in three sub-areas of the Rouge Watershed:

- The Middle 1 — includes Northville, Northville Township, Salem Township areas
- The Upper 2 — includes Livonia, Farmington, Redford, Farmington Hills areas
- The Middle 3 — includes Dearborn Heights, Garden City areas

These communities, or groups of them working together, have submitted proposals for pilot projects which will address "best management practices," or alternative ways to change the way surface storm water gets into the river. Awarding of the grants, about $1 million each, will be judged on innovation and projects which provide lasting benefit.

Jim Murray, director of the Rouge Project and Wayne County's Department of the Environment, hopes to see municipalities cooperate on things like regional retention basins, incorporating wetlands construction, monitoring of siltation, and wildlife habitat projects. "I think that's a real opportunity here for communities to work together," he said.

"What you can do in a built-up urban area is different from what you can do in a green-field area."

Joe O'Brien, senior scientist with the Rouge Project, is coordinating the pilot project effort, and said the proposals are awaiting approval from Wayne County: "We hope to get them started this year."

Education is key

Livonia's Beckley said his city is one of six communities which have proposed a sub-watershed project focused on pesticide application, fertilizing, sediment issues from street sweeping, road maintenance, and clean business practices. Some of the efforts will focus on city services, while others will be an education process for businesses and residents. Other communities involved are Redford, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Northville and Plymouth Township.

"In Livonia, we've got an Environmentally Friendly Business Program," he said. "It includes training and education and focusing in on good housekeeping and hoping to answer any questions business has. We'll then measure the effect on that."

Development issues

O'Brien said the Rouge Project and Wayne County are also working on a draft of a storm water ordinance that local communities can consider using to help control storm water from new developments. Some of the ways to treat and retain storm water that might be adopted include: detention ponds (to pollutants to settle to the bottom before the water is slowly released); porous pavement which allows water to soak through; and natural or man-made wetlands, which hold and naturally cleanse water.

Changing Currents: Organizations

Volunteer groups rescue the river

BY BILL COUTANT
STAFF WRITER

What started as a high school science project has spawned an annual environmental "Woodstock" that pulls hundreds of people together throughout the Rouge River Watershed.

After some humble beginnings, cities, neighborhood associations and environmental groups make the pilgrimage to the river for the massive early June cleanup.

Little could Southfield biology teacher Jim Bugg know that a modest science project could have turned into something so massive. After one of his students pitched the idea on a limited scale, Bugg asked him, "Why not the whole river?"

But it took time to catch on.

"Back then (in 1971), there wasn't much of an environmental movement," said Steve Marshall, who first became involved as Southfield's parks and recreation superintendent. "There had been a few one-time cleanups for two or three years. And Redford had done one in 1970."

But appropriately, the role of education along with a continuing interest in several communities started to make the event an institution, and spawned the creation of the Friends of the Rouge, the organization that studies, teaches about and coordinates cleanups of the river.

"Southfield was the first city to get involved," said Friends of the Rouge Director Jim Graham. "When the kids first became involved, it was so bad that you could drive on trucks along the nine miles of the river that ran through Southfield."

It was so bad that it took a month for the first cleanup of the river in Southfield, Marshall said.

"After a couple of weekends, the volunteers started falling off," said Marshall, who now works in the city's planning office. "It took heavy cranes and construction equipment to clear the river."

And getting volunteers was a hard sell, he said.

"In the early years, people did not really know where the Rouge was," he said. "Some people thought of the Rouge Plant and envisioned a heavily polluted area."

But over time, several civic organizations became involved. Not only did organizations that one might suspect like the Detroit Audubon Society become involved, but others like the Dearborn chapter of the League of Women Voters began pitching in.

By 1986, there was a need for a formal organization to give structure to cleanup and education efforts. The Friends of the Rouge was established and the National Wet Weather Demonstration Project provided money to staff the group and pay for educational and research programs. The Friends has three full-time and two part time staffers.

The cleanup has gone from 12 sites and 1,000 volunteers to 30 sites and 2,500-3,000 volunteers since then, Graham said.

The focus of the Friends of the Rouge has expanded, too. The group is involved in stream bank stabilization, including work on a manual of ideas, and other needed improvements. And on May 9, more than 100 schools throughout the area participated in an annual Friends education project in which students conduct actual sampling of the river and share results.

Several companies have become involved as well, from Michigan Caterpillar in Novi, which provides volunteers and equipment, to Coca-Cola, Pepsi Cola and even sports equipment giant Fila, which provide soft drinks and other items to volunteers.

Farmington Hills, which is formally participating in its 11th Rouge Rescue, is one of several cities that donates equipment and workers for the event.

"We seem to have a core group of about 100 and we've had up to 300 people volunteer," said Jean Barrett of the Farmington Hills Department of Public Services. "A lot depends on the weather and on whether there is a media blitz."

Barrett said the heavy equipment is needed because of the amount of large trees and other natural debris. There is also a fair share of man-made clutter, including tires and shopping carts, to be removed.

"We have been fortunate that private property owners have been very helpful," she said. "We have a lunch, with banjo and guitar music. It becomes a real family event."

Several neighborhood associations have made the event a part of their calendar.

"This is the seventh year we've been involved," said Joyce Caudill of Lola Valley Park in Redford. "We walk the river three or four times to find a good site. The township gives us a couple of pieces of equipment and the staff to run it.

"I love it," she said. "Every year I get grubby, nasty and stinky. But it's a real feeling of accomplishment."

Members of the Brightmoor neighborhood in the Five Mile and Telegraph area of Detroit have been taking part for the past eight years. They'll be pitching in at the Eliza Howell Park again this year, said John Malynarczyk of Brightmoor Concerned Citizens.

"Last year we had a lot of kids participate," he said. "A private towing company provided a large tow truck."

Marshall said the cleanup has come a long way, from a one-month ordeal down to a one-day event. But it's only been in the last few years that the river has been kept free-flowing.

"It took the first 20 years to get rid of decades of accumulation of debris," Marshall said. "We've set up a well-organized operation and we're an all-day cleanup. And we get a lot of volunteers from other areas, like Warren and Plymouth, who participate."

Cathy Bean, the Rouge Remedial Action Plan Coordinator with the state Department of Environmental Quality, had high praise for the Friends of the Rouge and for neighborhood groups, like the Friends of the Mill Pond in Northville, that raise awareness of the river among officials and the public.

It's public pressure that has brought the Rouge restoration efforts this far, and public pressure that keeps the effort going, she said. "I'd really like to have more public participation, especially in my advisory council meetings.

"If they (the public) say, 'We want a clean Rouge,' then it's going to happen."

Changing Currents: Individuals

Everyone's actions can affect river

By Margaret O'Brien
Staff Writer

If you've never been one to get all mucked up and haul cars and refrigerators out of the Rouge River during annual cleanups, no need to feel guilty.

You can do your share to clean up the Rouge in little ways each day. That is because everyone who lives and works in the Rouge Watershed area has an effect on the river.

Drain lines in communities along the Rouge from Bloomfield Township to Westland all empty into the river. So whatever gets put into them, gets put into the long-troubled, but rebounding, Rouge.

"All of us who live in the Rouge River Basin live on the banks of the Rouge River," James Ridgway, a coordinator for the federally funded Rouge Project cleanup and education effort, said. He emphasized that people need to realize that every pollutant dumped on the ground or in the water all over the Rouge Watershed will eventually find its way to the river.

Pollutants not dumped directly in drains often flow to the river as runoff after heavy rains. Federal grants and projects are beginning to address overflow problems, but only individuals can reduce the amount of toxic chemicals and pollutants that the rain collects.

"We have to help citizens understand that they have been part of the problem," Wayne County Department of Environment Director James Murray said.

"They have to change their lawncare fertilizing methods, disconnect downspouts, and discover different ways to dispose of hazardous waste," he said, adding that education will do the river as much good as the annual cleanup.

With regular mailings, articles and other communications the Rouge Project has been trying to teach people how to be better Rouge neighbors.

Watch your fertilizer

When fertilizer gets into the river, plant and algae growth multiplies exponentially and causes the oxygen to get used up. That causes fish and other aquatic life to suffocate and die.

- If you live on the river, don't apply fertilizer within 50 feet of it.
- Don't spread fertilizer on paved surfaces like driveways sidewalks and roads. The rain will wash it into the river.
- Make sure you are only using as much fertilizer as you need. Apply small amounts frequently rather than large applications twice a year.
- Use a fertilizer that is at least 25 percent nitrogen in slow-release or water-soluble form.

Proper yard care

Leaves and grass clippings also affect oxygen levels in the river. Proper disposal of them is important.

- Make sure leaves don't wash into storm drains.
- Don't dump leaves or grass clippings into the river.
- Sweep leaves away from storm drain openings, curbs, sidewalks, driveways and other paved areas; then compost them. If you must bag leaves, the project recommends that you check with your community for special curbside pickups.

Car maintenance harm

People who take care of basic car maintenance at home — such as changing oil, antifreeze and batteries — need to be careful of how they dispose of these items.

- Check your car regularly. If you find any leaks in these systems, get them repaired. Oil and antifreeze puddles left in parking lots and driveways are easily carried into the river.
- Make sure you don't dispose of oil, batteries, transmission fluid, brake fluid and gasoline in drains or in the garbage. Oil can be taken to many service stations for disposal, and most communities hold regular hazardous-waste disposal days throughout the year for these and other items.

Around the house

Homes are filled with dozens of toxic or hazardous chemicals that should never be dumped down drains, on the ground, down the toilet or in street storm drains.

- In the house: Solvent-based glue, varnish, oil-based paint, primer, paint thinner, mothballs, nail polish and remover, turpentine, photographic chemicals, furniture polish and insect sprays.
- In the garage: Herbicides, fungicides and swimming pool acid.

Ridgway said all household hazardous waste products should be used as sparingly as possible. People should only buy as much as they need or pass the remainder on to someone else to use.

With controls on the levels of these chemicals in combination with continued cleanups to keep the river flowing, Ridgway said, the Rouge will be able to regain its health and become a place to swim, fish and boat along its entire length once again.

Wayne County requests: Please don't feed geese

Unfortunately, one way individuals sometimes harm the river is also a way in which they enjoy it: feeding the abundant waterfowl.

Geese and ducks grow accustomed to getting fed by humans in various areas along the Rouge River, and naturally, the birds leave droppings behind. Officials now realize that those droppings provide a significant contribution to the pollution in the river.

So one of the best things individuals can do for the river's health is to stop feeding the birds. Northville discourages feeding at its downtown park site, and Wayne County this year plans to begin an enforcement program to stop the feeding in Hines Park.

Dan Navarre, deputy director of the Wayne County Division of Parks, said that environmental and health officials from the county and the state all agree that geese and ducks contribute significantly to pollution counts.

"We really have to start taking steps to not encourage the gathering of large flocks of geese in the Rouge," Navarre said. "It's a health hazard."

The county already prohibits feeding under an ordinance, but that has not been a priority for enforcement. That's going to change, although the county does not plan a hard-nosed approach.

"We need to get the word out," said Hurley Coleman, director of the Wayne County Division of Parks. The county plans a wide-ranging program of new signs and brochures explaining the problem and the ordinance. Parks officials will approach people feeding the birds and talk to them, and give them a brochure. Warnings may follow.

Coleman described this as a first step, in the hope that people will readily understand the situation and agree to cooperate. If the feeding persists, however, additional measures may be required.

Changing Currents: Wildlife

Rouge home to wildlife

By Bob Needham
Staff Writer

Although much of the Rouge River watershed, with its built-up nature, provides little support for wildlife habitat, some areas offer a surprising diversity.

Rick Simek, supervisor of natural areas for UM-D, said the area he oversees in particular, and the Rouge in general, supports a considerable variety of wildlife.

"The natural area here is what I would call a surprising area," he said. It is home to both red and gray foxes, and among his more exciting spottings are a gray fox right along Fairlane Drive. "The gray is generally the more uncommon of the two," he said. "Here was one in the middle of Dearborn."

The university sponsors a variety of public programs in the natural area — call (313) 593-5338 for information — and once a southern flying squirrel swooped right over the heads of one group, Simek said. Red bats and big brown bats are other sightings.

The natural area supports a wide diversity of animals because it includes several different types of habitats, Simek said, including "a really nice floodplain forest," a climax beech-maple forest, and a small lake.

Julie Craves, supervisor of avian research at UM-D, recently completed a book on the birds of Dearborn. They number around 170–175 over the course of a single calendar year, with around 135 returning every year.

"I think it really astounds people that there are that many in an urban area like that," she said.

Describing the UM-D/county preserve as "one of the largest green areas left in the Detroit metropolitan area," Craves said the site is important as a stopover for migrating birds heading farther north. "Birds need a place every day to stop along a migratory route," she said.

The area hosts a wide variety of warblers every year. Among the "accidental" species sighted — those which aren't generally expected in a given region — have been a Virginia's warbler, native to the Utah-Arizona area, and a Townsend's warbler, in its only reported Michigan sighting.

"We're looking to expand our horizons along the river," she said, with bluebird monitoring efforts at Heritage Park in Farmington Hills and the Sheldon Road Ford Plant in Plymouth Township.

Simek said the area also hosts "a lot of really nice spring wildflowers," including trout lily, jack-in-the-pulpit, and both white and red trillium. "It's really a nice variety."

Cathy Bean, coordinator of the Rouge Remedial Action plan, said, "There's a wide diversity of plants ... They're all there; it's just they're in tiny little pockets."

"The floodplain is a pretty rich area. The soil is pretty conducive to growing," he said.

Bell Creek, a tributary, runs through his subdivision. Sightings in the area include fox, wood ducks and bats. "There's a respectable amount" of wildlife for viewing, he said.

Deer are common throughout the Rouge watershed, even in some relatively built-up areas, several people said. Joe Derek, naturalist for the city of Farmington Hills, explained that deer follow the river as a trail.

"They use it as a travel way. They follow a watercourse," he said. "That's how you get deer at Eight Mile and Telegraph."

Derek lives along a Rouge tributary, and has been pleasantly surprised by the wildlife in his back yard: "There's some huge, old snapping turtles in the Rouge ... We're losing frogs worldwide, but in my area I've seen bullfrogs and green frogs ... and toads."

He also mentioned the redside dace, a threatened species found in the upper reaches of the Upper Rouge.

Bean said the success of some fish species provides encouragement for progress made, and for the future. "The salmon in the Lower Rouge are spawning there," she said. "Signs like that make you feel like something is happening here." And the fish support other animals, of course: She's watched an osprey swoop to grab dinner in Nankin Lake.

A wildlife habitat subcommittee of the RAP Advisory Council is working on a survey, and a fisheries assessment through Wayne County aims to project possible future fisheries.

"What's really hurting the wildlife is the habitat destruction," she said. "(Animals) like to move up and down the river."

It will take public effort to ensure that remaining habitats stay healthy, she said, offering Northville Township as just one specific example of a municipality that keeps habitat in mind when making development decisions.

"We need communities to take a stand," she said.

Dredging to improve area lake

By Bob Needham
Staff Writer

The quality of Livonia's Newburgh Lake as a wildlife habitat will improve dramatically if plans to dredge the lake work out as expected.

Although dredging the lake — primarily to remove PCBs from sediment in the lake bottom — has been talked about for years, Deputy Wayne County Executive Michael Duggan said the project will definitely start in 1997.

"It is a very popular fishing spot. In the relatively near future it's going to be dramatically different," he said.

The state is currently cleaning up the Evans Products site above the lake to remove contamination by PCBs, a toxic chemical. That work needs to be completed first, Duggan said.

The county, meanwhile, is repairing the gate on the Newburgh Lake dam, which controls the water flow. In the spring of 1997, workers will drain the lake, then excavate sediment.

"The first several inches (of sediment) will be contaminated," he explained. According to plans for the work, disposal of the contaminated sediment will take place in different approved landfills, depending on the degree of contamination. Uncontaminated sediment will go toward development of shoal areas along the shore and Holcomb's Island to improve the habitat for aquatic plants and to improve aesthetics.

The county expects to remove about 390,000 cubic yards of contaminated sediment and about 230,000 yards of noncontaminated material.

While the lake is drained, Duggan added, the county will change the slope of the dam. Right now, the slope creates dangerous currents.

"That's something we've been really concerned about," Duggan said. "It (changing the slope) will eliminate the undertow, we believe ... This year, people ought not to be anywhere near that dam in the water."

The fish in the lake — which now carry no-consumption advisories due to contamination — will be killed. After that, the lake will be restocked with healthy fish, said Jennifer Beam, a fisheries management biologist in the state Department of Natural Resources' Southeast Michigan office.

"We'll basically be starting over in that system," she said. "Then we can hope to get some fish that you can actually take home with you ... That (Newburgh dredging and possibly work upstream) would remove one of our bigger consumption advisories."

Current plans call for the entire project to be finished by late 1998. Funding comes from a U.S. EPA grant.

Changing Currents: Recreation

River offers relaxation, enjoyment

BY BOB NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER

Talk to a few people about recreational opportunities on the Rouge River — whether it's canoeing, fishing or just walking around in nature — and a theme quickly develops:

"It's like you're Up North."

Even though the Rouge may never quite become another Big Two-Hearted River, it already offers a wealth of recreational opportunities very similar to those which some downstaters are accustomed to driving great distances to reach. On some stretches of the river, it's common to hear people say the scenery looks very similar to something you'd find in much more rural areas. And new recreational opportunities arise almost constantly.

"We're trying to get water recreation back as part of a family experience in Wayne County," Deputy County Executive Mike Duggan said. "Several years of improvements have come together, and we are making the river more usable year by year."

Canoeing and boating

Last fall, the Wayne County Division of Parks returned canoeing to the Rouge River with the opening of a livery. The route runs for 3 nautical miles between Newburgh and Nankin lakes. The introduction went well, Parks Director Hurley Coleman said.

"We only opened for four weekends (last year). We thought the response we got for that period of time was incredible," he said. This year the county will offer a full season; even in midsummer, this stretch of the river remains deep enough to canoe.

"We think there's going to be a great, great response to this," Coleman said. "It's a beautiful trip. Everybody that gets finished says, 'I can't believe this is Wayne County.'"

The trip — through a clean area of the Middle Rouge — takes between 1 and 1 hours. "Everybody thinks they're up north," county parks Manager of Design Nancy Darga said.

Deputy Parks Director Dan Navarre said the county holds ambitious plans for canoeing in the future.

"Our goal is to one day have the whole Rouge canoeable," he said, except for the shallow upper reaches.

Duggan said the stretch of the river from Newburgh Lake to Farmington Road is considered OK for body contact, and from Farmington to Merriman is almost there. The county monitors conditions and makes adjustments as needed; the concession closed one weekend last fall due to a sewage overflow.

"If we err, we're going to err on the side of protecting people," Duggan said.

Within a year or so the county expects to add the stretch of river from Ann Arbor Trail to Merriman road; canoeists could do one or the other, or both.

"By the year 2000 you'll be able to go to Inkster Road," Duggan projected. By 1998 he hopes to see a canoe concession on the Lower Rouge as well.

The county's paddleboat concession has also returned for a full season. Duggan said that part of the goal is to provide a chance for families to enjoy locally the type of fun activity that would otherwise require a long drive and an all-day commitment.

For information on these programs call 261-1990.

In addition to the canoe and paddleboat concessions, a $5 boating sticker permits use of the public boat launch on Newburgh Lake at Sumac Point, west of the sheriff's mini-station. Navarre even looks ahead to the day when the Rouge might offer things like sculling and kayaking.

Fishing

The Rouge River now hosts several fishing derbies, in which game fish — generally trout — are stocked for a special one-day event. As these events increase in popularity, the idea of using the Rouge as a viable season-long fishery gets more attention as well.

Wayne County will host its inaugural fishing derby in Hines Park May 18 — call (313) 261-1990 for information — and the Farmington area hosted its third annual event April 27. The city of Southfield has sponsored Rouge derbies for more than a decade.

Jef Farland, Southfield director of parks and recreation, said the city marked its 12th annual fishing derby May 4. The state Department of Natural Resources stocks the river, and the event is entirely free; not even a fishing license required, for that event only. The derby takes place along a 1-mile river stretch at Civic Center Drive just east of Telegraph.

The first derby at McDonald Towers senior center drew about 50-100 fishers. "Now we're pushing 500 people," Farland said.

A habitat restoration project in conjunction with the Michigan Wildlife Habitat Foundation, DNR, and Michigan State University made a big difference.

"The muddy sediment that was there ... is no longer the case," Farland said. "That, I think, is the key: bringing back the quality of the water so the fish can survive."

With the restoration, the water stays cooler, and some spring-planted fish stick around until August, Farland said. Some DNR-planted smallmouth bass have made it from Southfield into the Detroit River, he added.

On a longer-term basis, the DNR in 1992 began a program of annual brown trout plantings in the Johnson Drain, a Middle Rouge tributary flowing through Salem, Plymouth and Northville townships. Liz Hay, a river ecosystem biologist with the DNR fisheries division, said results have been decent.

"The original goal was to have a self-sustaining brown trout fishery," she said. Going in, there were several issues which could prevent that goal.

Food supply has proven adequate, and summer temperatures cool enough. Winters, however, sometimes cause a problem — for example, when the bottom of the river ices up. And whether the drain can act as a spawning ground is doubtful, Hay said.

"The winter's very hard on them in there," she said. "It's extremely difficult for any fish species to cope with."

Meanwhile, though, as long as the plantings continue, the Johnson Drain offers a nice fishing opportunity, and Hay regularly sees anglers at road crossings and in Fish Hatchery Park in Northville.

Unlike most fish caught in the Rouge, the Johnson Drain trout carry no warnings against consumption.

"They are just fine," Hay said. "They should be as healthy as anything can be in this day and age."

Jennifer Beam, a fisheries management biologist at the DNR's Southeast Michigan Office, is in the process of writing a Rouge watershed assessment, due out for public review this fall.

"There's obviously been a lot of work on the Rouge," she said, but most of the river still carries warnings against eating fish due to contamination.

The annual DNR fishing guide details consumption advisories. Many fish carry no-consumption warnings, but some limited consumption, of some fish, in some areas, is allowed.

Even though anglers can't eat much Rouge fish — yet — "what you can catch, is a lot of fish," Beam said. "We found a really good fish population in Newburgh Lake," including bass, panfish, and pike.

Work planned or under way at various sites offers considerable hope to relax or lift the consumption advisories in the near future, she said.

Other uses

Sometimes people wonder about the feasibility of someday swimming in the Rouge without worrying about health concerns. Wayne County's Coleman is determined to make it happen.

"We don't know where, we don't know how, but our goal is to create swimming in the Rouge River area. Based on the water quality in the river, that's not feasible in the near future," he said

"We think the river is a valuable recreational resource," he added, to be used many different ways.

One of those is ice skating, which the county brought back to Wilcox Pond in Plymouth last year. Coleman would like to continue and expand that program, maybe to include outdoor hockey.

Nancy Darga has lately been working on the new Inkster Valley Golf Course — which Coleman described as one of the most environmentally friendly ever built — along the Lower Rouge. Its innovative design keeps the river as a high priority.

"I think it's going to transform the whole feel of the river down there," Darga said.

She also mentioned the county's ongoing bike path project along the river, now totaling 17 miles. "It's a river way as well as a bike way," she said.

In Southfield, Farland said, the Valley Woods Trail was recently completed, running from Civic Center Driver south to I-696. It includes a bridge, fishing stations, and a handicap-accessible trail.

Darga also mentioned the river as an attraction for people who simply like to sit and watch it. New water pumps for aeration offer a nice focal point.

"Just the smallest little improvements have the most astonishing effects on the public," she said.

Fair shows how to realize housing dream

■ Some people have nagging doubts about buying a house. Fears based on lack of information can be paralyzing. An informational fair this Saturday could get you in the purchasing mode.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Perception is reality for many people, even though impressions are sometimes formed without the facts.

A case in point. Some folks may conclude that they can't buy a house because they don't have enough cash for a down payment, their jobs don't pay enough to make monthly payments or their credit history will disqualify them.

Maybe yes. But probably not.

That's the thinking of organizers for the third annual Detroit Metro Homebuyers Fair, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. this Saturday at the University of Detroit Mercy, McNichols (Six Mile) and Livernois.

The fair, sponsored by the Mortgage Bankers Association of Michigan, the Michigan Department of Civil Rights and the Urban Bankers Forum, is free.

"Basically, what we're trying to do is turn renters into home buyers," said Patricia J. Thornton, a senior underwriter at John Adams Mortgage Co. in Farmington Hills and publicity chairperson for the event.

"You've got a lot of people who don't know what the mortgage process is about," Thornton said. "They're afraid they don't have enough money to buy, their income isn't enough. They have questions about credit.

"We're trying to target low to moderate income homebuyers, generally people who make under $45,000, $50,000 family household income," Thornton said. "If you pay $400 to $500 to rent, you can own a $50,000 house."

Nearly 60 vendors, mostly mortgage lenders but also firms that sell real estate and homeowner's and title insurance, will set up booths in Calihan Hall.

Informational classes - what to look for when buying a house, how to save money and qualify for a mortgage, fair housing/lending, how to establish good credit, and obscure but affordable mortgage programs - will run concurrently at 9:45 a.m., 11 a.m., 12:30 p.m. and 1:45 p.m.

"It's not a Detroit need, it's a southeastern Michigan need," Michael Lubig, chief lending officer at Standard Federal Bank headquartered in Troy and president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of Michigan, said of the fair.

"Last year, we drew people from Pontiac, Oak Park, Southfield and Inkster," he said. "Maybe somebody will read about this in your newspaper from Redford and want to come. Garden City."

"A lot of energy is being extended across this country to promote home ownership, which is consistent with the American dream."

Thomas Cronin
Chairman MCA Mortgage

"It's designed to cover practically everyone," Lubig said. "For example, there's an FHA program where they can get you into a house for no money down and conventional programs with as little as 3 percent down."

"Traditional underwriting has gone out the window in the last few years," said Thomas P. Cronin, chairman of MCA Mortgage in Southfield and general chairman of the fair. "Anyone could benefit from spending an hour or two at something like this."

And how should visitors approach the experience?

"Basically, they should spend their time in the classroom," Cronin said. "Questions they don't get answered, they can bring them to the hall where the exhibitors are."

DeLoisKirkland, broker/manager of a Real Estate One office in Detroit, has been on hand for each of the first two homebuying fairs.

"Last year, I think we had five buyers and 10 houses to sell, listings, as a result of attending," she said.

"This fair can be very personal or very non-personal," Kirkland added. "Pick up as much information as you can. Meet everyone you can. Eventually, you will meet someone you are comfortable with and buy a house."

That's the ultimate goal.

"Everyone knows ownership is better for a community and neighborhood than tenancy," Cronin said,

"I can take you down a street and, without knowing who lives there, can show you which ones are owner occupied and which ones are tenants. People tend to take better care of what they own.

"For most Americans, investment in a house represents the core of their net worth," Cronin said. "A lot of energy is being extended across this country to promote home ownership, which is consistent with the American dream."

Upwards of 2,500 attended each of the first two homebuying fairs, organizers reported.

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q: I have read with interest about a major project going on in the Petoskey area which includes condominiums and marinas. I am thinking about it as full-time housing. Do you have any concerns?

A: I have been approached by several clients who have an interest in puchasing in the project about which I believe you have made inquiry. Certainly, it is necessary, as in the case of any other purchase, to fully examine the respective agreements, condominium documents, as well as the overall development in making a business decision. It appears that the prospect of a successful development is strong but it is important to be cautious with respect to any substantial purchase. Incumbent with that is a necessity to read all of the accompanying documents and to be familiar with the potential risks incumbent with any such development.

Q: I own a lot on a lake and our neighbor for a number of years drove his tractor in and out of his property by driving partially on a section of our property. We did not object to this since the roadwork he was doing befitted all of the neighbors on the road and part of the access was on my neighbor's property in order to get our boats into the lake. Since that time, two owners after him have taken into accessing their property by driving on the same portion of our property with their cars as a driveway.

This has been going on for about five years. We have recently had a survey done and find that their driveway is about half on our property and half on theirs. Access to their property, without using ours, would be very difficult because of a very sharp drop off and heavy growth of trees in that section.

The most recent owners have even done a small amount of excavation which was done on our property to maintain the width of the driveway. We wonder if we will have problems later on should we decide to take the property back for our own use.

A: Again, it is difficult to answer your question which involves questions of potential adverse possession or, more realistically, a prescriptive easement which is created if in fact the use and enjoyments of the presmises, in order to gain access to another property, is for a certain number of years without interruption.

It is clear, however, that you should look into the matter at this time so as to assert your rights and /or know what your rights and obligations are as it relates to your adjacent property owner.

It may be that you are able to work out an arrangement whereby there is a joint use of the driveway by way of the granting of easements to each other so as to avoid any boundary disputes in the future. In any event, you should consult an attorney to assist you in this matter as soon as possible.

VA loans offer many cost advantages

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

Thinking of buying a home? If you are a veteran, a VA-guaranteed home loan may make the difference in whether you can buy now or later.

The main purpose of the VA home loan program is to help veterans finance the purchase of homes with favorable loan terms. Advantages of a VA loan include no down-payment in most cases, limitations on closing costs, an assumable mortgage (with VA or lender approval), long (up to 30 years and 32 days) repayment terms, and the right to prepay on the loan without penalty.

VA-guaranteed loans are made by private lenders such as banks, savings and loan associations, or mortgage companies. The guaranty means the lender is protected against loss if you or a later owner fail to repay the loan. Although there is not maximum VA loan, lenders generally limit the maximum VA loan to $203,000 because most VA loans are sold in the secondary market.

You may be eligible for VA financing if your military service meets certain requirements. These requirements vary depending on the dates of your service. In addition to regular military service, individuals who have completed six years in the active reserves may also be eligible for the VA loan program. A Certificate of Eligibility is issued by the VA to verify that a veteran is eligible for the home loan benefit. For additional information on service requirements, and to obtain an application for a Certificate of Eligibility , call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

The next step is to find the home that you wish to purchase, Most homeowners use the services of a professional real estate broker to help them find their new home. While in general just about any real estate professional can assist you, you may want to use the services of one who is located in the community to which you are planning to move and is familiar with the market in that area. Finding a real estate broker is as simple as looking in your Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. When you have found a new home and discussed the purchase with the seller or selling broker, a purchase contract is negotiated with the condition that the agreement is subject to the availability of a VA loan.

Now is the time to apply for your home loan. VA no longer sets the interest rates on VA loans. The rate is freely negotiable between the veteran and the lender. Call several lenders that are listed in the telephone book. You want to find the most affordable combination of interest rate and loan discount points that are charged. A point is a fee charged by the lender which is one percent of the loan amount. Two points, therefore, would be two percent of the loan amount. VA no longer prohibits veterans from paying points on a VA loan. When negotiating your purchase contract, the seller may agree to pay all or a portion of any points or closing costs charged on your VA loan. Often, sellers will consider paying some or all of the discount points required by the lenders in order to complete the sale.

Another factor to consider when selecting a lender is whether the lender has what is called "automatic authority." Be sure you ask whether the lender you are considering has automatic authority because it is very important. Automatic lenders have the authority to make the credit decisions on the loan without VA's approval. This can result in time saved by avoiding the need to wait for VA's approval before loan closing.

After you have selected a lender, you must submit a mortgage application fee at this time, as well as a fee for an appraisal and for a credit report. If it is obvious that the purchaser will not qualify because of unsatisfactory credit or insufficient income, the lender has the responsibility to decline the application and avoid needless delays and disappointment to the purchaser, seller and broker. If a lender is unwilling to accept a veteran's application for a loan, the veteran should see another lender. The fact that one lender is not interested in making the loan the veteran wants does not mean that other lenders will not make the loan.

To get a VA loan, the law requires that you must have enough income to meet the new mortgage payments on the loan, cover the costs of owning a home, take care of other obligations and expenses and still have enough income left over for family support. You must have a good credit record. A recent bankruptcy may not necessarily disqualify you, depending on the reasons for the bankruptcy and whether you have re-established any credit since the bankruptcy.

After the lender determines that the veteran may qualify for the requested mortgage, the lender will proceed with the application process and order an appraisal. Lenders approved to participate in VA's Lender Appraisal Processing Program (LAPP) are generally able to expedite the processing of VA appraisals. Remember, the VA appraisal is not intended to be an "inspection" of the property. If you have any doubts about the condition of the house, it is in your best interest to seek expert advice before you legally commit yourself to a purchase agreement.

The cost of obtaining a mortgage can include: VA appraisal, credit report, survey, title evidence, recording fees, a one percent loan origination fee and the discount points. The closing costs and origination charge may not be included in the loan, except for VA refinancing loans. A VA funding fee, which varies from 1.25 percent to 3 percent of the loan amount, is also payable at the time of closing. This fee may be included in the loan and paid from the loan proceeds. Veterans who receive compensation for service-connected disabilities are exempt from payment of funding fees. The funding fees can be financed in the loan amount and paid over the life of the loan, resulting in an increased mortgage amount but only a few dollars a month more.

Question of the week:

Q: What are the advantages of a VA loan as compared to a conventional mortgage?

A: VA loans don't require any down payment and therefore, a low cash outlay is required to get into a home. And, they are generally easier to qualify for. If you choose VA financing, make sure you use a loan officer experienced in VA mortgages because they can be confusing.

Veternarians offer tips on moving pets

DENVER, April 23 /PRNewswire/ -- With nearly one million American households that moved last year, the American Animal Hospital Association (AAHA) reminds pet owners as part of National Pet Week, May 5-12, to keep a few tips in mind when moving or traveling with pets.

-- Before you move ask your current veterinarian to recommend another doctor in your new area. You can also call AAHA at (800) 883-6305 for the names of AAHA veterinarians near you.

-- Travel with a copy of your pet's medical records, especially if the animal has a difficult medical history. Be sure to take your pet in for its annual checkup either before you travel or when you settle in your new location.

"If there is any medical problem, the pet may need to be examined before travel," says Dr. Walt Ingwersen an AAHA veterinarian in Whitby, Ontario. "Some countries require a full exam and health certificate."

-- If your move involves driving, book ahead hotels that accept animals. "Vacationing With Your Pet," by Eileen Barish is a directory of pet-friendly lodging throughout the United States and Canada. Order a copy by calling 800-496-2665.

-- Learn more about your new area. Your veterinarian can tell you if there are any unusual diseases such as heartworms, vaccinations or medications your pet may require.

-- Call ahead to the city information bureau for information on unique laws, such as restrictions on exotic animals and restrictive breed laws.

-- If you'll be traveling between countries, it's important to carry a rabies vaccine certificate. Call the Agriculture Department or embassy of the country or state where you will be traveling for information.

-- Make sure your pet is wearing an identification tag or has a microchip implanted. "The more methods of identification, the better chance that the owner will be found," says Dr. Ingwersen. Microchip databases are specific to the United States and Canada, so register your pet in both if moving between these countries.

"People get into a panic if they don't have enough medication for their pet or no appropriate documentation for travel to other countries," Dr. Ingwersen says. "Be prepared by bringing a copy of your pet's medical records, proper documentation and medication, and knowing the laws going into the new city or country."

The American Animal Hospital Association is an international organization of more than 12,000 veterinarians who treat companion animals. AAHA reminds pet owners that they can help pets live healthier and longer lives by taking their pets to the veterinarian for periodic exams, vaccinations and dental care, as well as providing pets with fresh water, a balanced diet and exercise. Established in 1933, the association is well-known among veterinarians standards for hospitals and pet health care.

How to make antiques look good, but old

BY MARGARET KRUGER
WATERTOWN DAILY TIMES

HELENVILLE, Wis. (AP) _ Repairing antiques to look good but keep that favored look of worn wood can be a challenge, especially for the do-it-yourselfer.

Do you strip the finish and start over, risking having an expensive piece look too new to be old and diminishing the value? Or do you let the old piece sit as is _ with cracks, warps and water stains, and not really fitting into your tidy home decor?

Louis Aranda, a furniture restorer and artist who works in a variety of mediums, prefers another option _ restoring the wood back to its original condition, often without stripping.

Aranda utilizes his art expertise and experience in working with wood to restore any type of furniture ranging from very old, veneers of the early 1930s, or modern pieces.

Armed with an art degree and a resume which lists 10 jobs in 10 years, he is able to combine an artist's approach with modern techniques to preserve history.

Since graduating from Jefferson High School in 1980 and from the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater in 1984, he has worked in New Jersey, Milwaukee, Chicago and Fox Lake, Ill., learning his trade.

Odd jobs have included repairing altars in churches, finishing harps, restoring antiques including boats and cars, training employees for a furniture manufacturer, servicing defective furniture for a manufacturer, and restoring the head on a St. Francis statue.

He has also designed parks and buildings, and worked on his own as a commercial artist. He opened his own business, Louis Aranda Art Furniture Inc., in May 1994 at the family homestead.

Aranda, 35, who calls himself an artistic carpenter, is currently working on a French armoire, dating back to about 1915, which requires extensive restoration.

In addition to fixing the warped doors, repairing cracks, unbubbling the veneer, and perfectly matching the stain, he has carved new leaves for the top.

"That's where the craftsman goes out and the artist comes in. True restoration is a lot of repair. You must be able to make parts and match the existing finish," Aranda said.

He is also working on a rocking chair which needs a new matching spindle, and a mirror which will soon have an intricate cutout design added on one side identical to the other. Large cracks will be removed from a table with boards shrunken from age.

A dresser will have the scratches completely covered, and a companion piece will have a newly finished top which will look just like the rest of the bedroom set.

"Conservation and preservation can be a lot cheaper than stripping," Aranda said. "It is very important to be able to match the finish.

A whole new finish can take away from the antique look, but the look can be recreated. I have new tools and equipment to utilize old techniques that Old World craftsmen did by hand."

In-depth cleaning and using products direct from the manufacturer to recreate compatible finishes are two of the many techniques used by the craftsman.

Not all of the wood he repairs is old. "I can add old antique charm to new furniture by doing things like pickling and distressing. It is cheaper than buying an antique for people that just want the look. If people want to spend the money, I can also create modern custom furniture. I understand the past but look to the future," he said.

For those reluctant to part with a favorite piece even for a little while, he will take a portable oven into the home for burn-ins to repair scratches. "When I worked in Chicago, you would not believe how many times I was called for touch-ups before parties," he said.

"I went to art school to be an artist. People said I would starve, but I wanted to try to make it as an artist in a big city. It is less exciting than it sounds, but the art degree gave me the opportunity to work at companies and learn from others," he said.

"I wanted to be a sculptor. Now I am a sculptor in wood and preserve history and the works of other artists."

•LOCKWOOD COMPANIES

For the second year in a row, Rodney M. Lockwood Jr., president of a construction, material procurement, development services group in Bingham Farms, has given all of his employees a paid day off for Tax Freedom Day.

That's the date designated by the Tax Foundation from which the average American has worked since Jan. 1 solely to pay federal, state and local taxes for the year.

"The typical American family now pays more in taxes than it spends on food, clothing and shelter combined, which is simply outrageous," Lockwood said. "We believe that calling attention to Tax Freedom Day is the best way to raise public awareness of tax issues."

•EVICTION SEMINAR

The Real Estate Investors Association presents a program, "Tenant Evictions and Who You Can Hire to Do It for You," 7 p.m., Tuesday, June 4, at the Ramada in Southgate on Northline Road one block east of I-75.

Title searches also will be discussed.

Cost is $10 for non-members. For a free introductory information package on the association, contact Wayde Koehler at (810) 277-4168.

•BUILDING LICENSE CLASS

Walled Lake Community Education and Oakland Builders Institute co-sponsor a 16-hour class on passing the state builder's license examination 6-10 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays June 4-13 at the Walled Lake Community Education Center, 615 N. Pontiac Trail.

•DiMORA TOP SELLER

John DiMora of Coldwell Banker Schweitzer Real Estate Northville office recently was named the number one Coldwell Banker sales associate in the state for closed sales, gross commission income and listing sold for the first quarter of this year.

Specific numbers weren't disclosed.

•PRUDENTIAL GREAT LAKES

Lucy W. Ham and Randal L. Goodson recently were recognized as the top sales associates for the Prudential Great Lakes Realty during 1995.

Ham, a Flushing resident based in that community, had total sales volume in excess of $18 million. Goodson, a Waterford resident who works in the Farmington Hills office, recorded sales of more than $11 million.

•ELSEA ELECTED

Dan Elsea, senior vice president and general sales manager for Real Estate One, has been elected to the board of directors for Genesis Relocation Services.

Genesis, in conjunction with Royal LePage, is an association of 395 real estate firms with over 41,000 sales associates and 1,700 offices throughout North America.

•CONCIERGE SERVICES

Francine Finucan, owner of Executive Concierge Services in Troy, announces she's added Fox Hills Apartments, Bloomfield Hills, and Oakwood Corporate Housing, Southfield, as clients.

"Customized to each client, our services can range from airport shuttles to total household management," Finucan said. "These personalized services are in response to peoples' growing needs and shrinking leisure time."

How do you handle formaldehyde insulation?

(AP) - Q: I would like information regarding urea formaldehyde foam insulation (UFFI) in walls. We are thinking of buying a house and are afraid of settling on something not knowing if formaldehyde is present.

A: UFFI was installed in most homes during the 1970s, but was banned in 1982 by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission for use in schools and homes. The commission banned the material after reviewing test data that linked formaldehyde fumes to cancer in rats and mice. The ban was later overturned by a U.S. Court of Appeals. By that time, however, most of the contractors installing the material had gotten out of the business.

During and after installation of UFFI, formaldehyde levels decline rapidly (to below .1 parts per million within the first year of the installation). Although people vary in their susceptibility to formaldehyde, most healthy adults would not experience ill effects from exposure below .1 parts per million. And since a house containing the insulation would probably have had it installed years ago, any vapors from the insulation would probably be negligible.

Formaldehyde is widely used in many other products such as plywood, particleboard, chipboard, plastic laminates, cosmetics, cleaners and paper products. It is possible that the air in the house could have a high formaldehyde concentration from these products.

If you are concerned about this, have the air tested for formaldehyde by a certified lab.

Q: My 4-year-old son decided to use the living room wall as a canvas for his new crayon set. I've had problems in the past trying to repaint over stains when I was unable to completely remove them. What's the best procedure for dealing with this problem?

A: Your first impulse may be to try to paint over the stain, but many stains cannot be covered with paint alone. Rust, grease or oil, crayon wax and magic-marker ink may be activated by the solvent (water or oil) in the paint, and bleed back through the new paint. This is true regardless of how many coats of paint you apply. You must either seal over the stain or remove the offending material from the wall before painting.

The best approach is to try and remove the stain material. Check with your local paint dealer for products containing solvents that will remove splattered latex paints, grease, crayons and other stains. Pour some cleaner on a clean cloth, wet the stain and let the cleaner work for a couple of minutes. If you just try to scrub the stain away, you may also remove some wall paint.

If the stain comes off the paint, spot-prime the stain area and then repaint the wall.

If the stain proves difficult to remove you can seal in almost any stain with a shellac sealer. The shellac is fast-drying so it does not activate the stain material, but covers it over.

To avoid the shiny spots due to higher sheen over the shellac sealer, seal the entire wall with shellac, not just the stain.

Mortgage interest rates inch upward

WASHINGTON (AP) _ Thirty-year, fixed rate mortgages averaged 7.99 percent last week, up from 7.92 percent the previous week, according to a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the highest since April 11, when rates averaged 8.05 percent. After falling to 6.94 percent on Feb. 14, rates began to rise gradually and have been in the upper 7 percent range in recent weeks.

NEW HOMES

Chelsea Park success exceeds expectations

The success of Chelsea Park, several luxury residential communities of different price points in one large West Bloomfield development, has surpassed all expectations since opening a little over a year ago.

"We've done 75 houses in this price ($300,00-$450,000) range," said Gary Shapiro, partner with Ivanhoe-Huntley Homes. "That's unprecedented. We're almost three years ahead of schedule."

Three builders, Biltmore Building and MJC West along with Ivanhoe-Huntley, have teamed to design and build 17 different floor plans that offer just about anything any buyer might want. Each plan has three possible exterior looks.

"We designed all the plans together and we all build all the plans," said Lorne Zalesin, a vice president and construction manager with Biltmore Building.

"We knew the topography and we designed product to take advantage of the site, woodlands, wetlands," said Steven Perlman, partner with Ivanhoe-Huntley. "Then we created a house with the features all focus group customers were looking for. You can't miss."

About 10 building sites are still available at the Hills of Chelsea Park, Maple and Halstead.

Prices range from $373,500 for a 3,000-square-foot, story-and-a-half with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $420,500 for a two story of 4,150 square feet with four bedrooms, three full baths and two half baths.

All plans at the Hills include at base price three-car, side-entry garage, fireplace, air conditioning, dishwasher/cooktop/double oven and microwave, whirlpool tub in master suite, first floor laundry and basement.

The master, with cathedral ceilings in the bed and bath areas, has a separate tub and shower, walk-in closet and dual sink vanity with sitting area.

The Birchwood II, 3,450 square feet, features a living room with cathedral ceiling, dining room with step ceiling, library and family room on the first floor.

The walk-up master on the second floor has a cathedral ceiling, two walk-in closets, separate tub and shower with sloped ceiling and dual sink vanity with sitting area.

Base price is $378,900.

The Cambridge, 3,940 square feet, features living room, dining room with butler's pantry, family room, library and two half baths on the main floor.

The upstairs master with pan ceiling, has separate tub and shower, two vanities and walk-in closet. Two bedrooms share a jack-and-jill bath and the fourth upstairs bedroom has its own bath.

Base price is $419,900.

"Visitors are most impressed with the trees and natural areas, and elevations (exteriors) on the houses," said Lesley Schneider, sales director at the Hills.

Lots and houses are smaller at the Glenns of Chelsea Park, 14 Mile at Halstead. About 20 building sites remain.

Prices range from $293,500 for a 2,280-square-foot, story-and-a-half with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $353,000 for a two story of 3,550 square feet with four bedrooms and 3-1/2 baths.

The same basic features except for the microwave and whirlpool tub are included at standard prices for the Glenns as the Hills.

The wide-open Carrington features a media room just off the family room. The master bath has a unique layout with vanities and walk-in closets on either side of the tub.

The master in the Greenbrooke Deluxe features a pan ceiling in the bed portion, a cathedral ceiling over the bath.

"They (prospects) are very impressed with the site because it's so beautiful," said Kathy Newman, sales rep at the Glenns. "The models are different and decorated different. I think they're impressed they're not seeing the same models they see all over the place."

Both the Hills and the Glenns feature ponds, gazebos, tennis courts and vest-pocket parks with benches.

Chelsea Park is serviced by city water and sewers. The sub will have sidewalks. It's within the boundaries of the Walled Lake schools.

The property tax rate currently is $28.31 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $375,000 house in Chelsea Park would pay about $5,300 the first year.

The annual association fee to maintain the common areas and recreational sites is $300.

"We're proud of it," Shapiro said of the sub. "We don't have to do a lot of talking. It speaks for itself.

"This year, we plan to add two new villages," he said. "One will be priced higher than the Hills, the other between the Hills and the Glenns. We're completing focus groups now."

The sales offices at the Hills, (810) 788-9595, and the Glenns, (810) 788-3355, are open noon to 5 p.m. daily.

Spring is the time to think of selling your home

By Bill McCullen
Special Writer

So, you've decided to act on that New Year's resolution to start the exciting search that will end with the purchase of your dream home. Or, on the other hand, you're ready to take the plunge and seriously pursue the sale of your present home.

Whether you've chosen to buy or sell, now is the time to begin your adventure. Don't get left behind. When the season peaks in late spring, most of your work should be nearly complete. Here's a valuable checklist to set you on the right track.

For Buyers

Before you pile into the family wagon to visit the communities in which you will concentrate your search, get pre-qualified. Find out from your local mortgage broker how much you can actually afford to spend on a new home.

This eye-opening visit can take less than an hour, and it will determine your spending limit. This is important because it will protect you from an object of obsession, the expensive home you must have but sadly can't afford.

At the same time, start assembling your 'search set' a kit that contains a still camera or videocam, detailed street maps of your targeted communities and checklists on each listing you visit.

Most real estate professionals ask their clients to make three lists of a home's features - a 'wish list' that includes the wood burning fireplace and an extra guest room; a list of 'must have features;' and a third list of 'deal breakers.'

The killers are those totally unacceptable and objectionable characteristics that no amount of guarantees will overcome, such as a damp basement.

When you're ready to venture forth, practice the art of the streetwise observer. Every neighborhood and every home has its distinct make-or-break characteristics.

A realistic overview of the neighborhood you like should show you who is out on the street at different hours; whether well-concealed train tracks or waste treatment facilities are out of sight, but not out of mind. Remember, that only you, the buyer, is responsible for finding these detrimental aspects.

Most important, rely on professional help. Although prospective buyers use various sources to search out a home, real estate brokers and sales agents are still the most important, according to studies by the national Association of Realtors.

The Century 21 System, for example, has a number of helpful, free publications that explain in detail how and why you should consult with a broker or sales associate.

In addition, a home inspector will thoroughly survey a property for hidden defects. (Indeed, this is a tip for sellers, as well. Both parties to a sale should know beforehand whether serious repairs are in order).

A real estate lawyer can also be of tremendous assistance - and not only at the critical closing stage - because he or she can explain all the details involved in an ongoing negotiation.

Finally, don't become infatuated with a home you shouldn't buy. There will be others you will want just as much.

For Sellers

Most real estate writers agree that buying and selling a home are essentially the same adventure. It's just two sides of the same equation.

For this reason, buyers and sellers alike can benefit from many of the same tips such as employing the services of a home inspector. Sellers will be ahead of the game if they're certain that the property is defect-free and ready for sale.

Nonetheless, there are a few cardinal rules just for sellers.

First and foremost, set a reasonable price. Even better, set a realistic price. Experts agree that pride goeth before a fall when a seller sets an unrealistic price.

The professionals have a saying, "There's a buyer for every home and the right price will cut the competition in half." Professional relocation services get two appraisers to estimate a reasonable asking price, then take an average of the two. Very, very few homes sell for more than appraised value.

Clean your home and then clean it again. Nothing turns off a prospective buyer more than an unkempt home that's in a state of disarray.

Other hints - reseal the driveway, paint the exterior (or at least the entrance way and the trim), install a few elegant exterior fixtures such as a brass door knocker and lockset, a tasteful mailbox or exterior light fixture. This will improve your curb appeal.

For the interior, pack away personal collectibles and hobby paraphernalia. Don't send a message to buyers that your home will never be theirs.

Make the interior as clean and bright as possible. Mirrors can help enlarge and brighten smaller rooms.

Never attempt to conceal a leaking roof, an overburdened septic system or a furnace near the end of a useful life. Undisclosed defects can destroy a closing, or worse, result in a lawsuit afterwards.

Find a listing broker with a respected firm. Check to be sure she or he has a good reputation.

When you work with a real estate professional, you gain the capabilities of the multiple listing service that places your home in front of hundreds of agents, who in turn, represent many other prospective buyers. This is in addition to advertising services offered by the broker's firm.

Experienced agents can easily separate qualified buyers from tire kickers and con artists. Regarding the latter, your agent will always accompany a prospective buyer through your home and will guard against wasting your valuable time with an unqualified visitor.

Finally, enjoy the process. It's challenging and even daunting at times, but finding that perfect home is a tremendous source of satisfaction. It's a rewarding

Friedman joins CORFAC network

Friedman Real Estate Group in Farmington Hills has joined King & Co. CORFAC International, a worldwide network of office and industrial real estate firms.

Friedman can now tap into an organization that provides brokerage, valuation, project management, development and property/asset management services in 35 major North American markets and 11 major European markets.

"We wanted to extend our business not only on a local level, but a national level and international level," said Roxanne Larson, associate broker at Friedman.

"A lot of clients we continually have business with are looking at European markets and other states," Larson said. "And vice versa. Companies are looking to establish in Michigan and we will be contacted to work with them."

King & Co. CORFAC International offers its members the ability to meet clients' growing global real estate needs through the organization's membership referral service.

"We've found many of our clients have real estate needs in markets outside those that we regularly serve," said Thomas Burns, president of King & Co. CORFAC and senior partner of Carey Winston Co. in Washington, D.C.

Even before you get out of the car it speaks to you. Inside, an inviting warmth draws you from room to room. You can picture your family here. Homework spread out on the kitchen table. The soft flicker of light from the hearth. Laughter drifts down the stairs, a mixture of deja vu and intuition. Then you just know, it's the home you've been waiting for. Or has it been waiting for you?

Sometimes you just know.

THE ENCLAVE

House features private areas

A dramatic recessed entry welcomes visitors into this unusual contemporary home. The two parallel wings on either side of the front porch relfect the division of space within.

The panoramic scope of the central living area allows full appreciation of the finest that nature has to offer. In warm weather, the patio and two decks allow for enjoyment of the hot summer nights and cool fall evenings.

The heart of the Lida is the large open dining, living and kitchen area. A bordering nook with six skylights will surely make any meal more appetizing. Meals may be prepared and served with the cook in the household not having to miss out on any of the fun. Kitchen amenities include an island with cooktop, double ovens, grill, dishwasher and walk-in pantry. The vast living room is accented by a woodstove insert.

Rectangular wings extend from two sides of the central living area. This arrangement allows for kids and teens to make as much noise as they want in their bedrooms, without the sound they produce intruding on their parent's privacy and quieter atmosphere at the other end of the house. The study has a woodstove and large storage area for games or a collection of books. The sitting area is a sanctuary for meditation and has a private entrance to the master suite.

The master suite has two walk-in closets and a large private bathroom with his and her basins, a shower and a spa.

At the other end of the other end of the house there is a sitting room that could be used as a bedroom, and features a private entrance to bedroom three. This bedroom has a pocket door that leads to the bathroom. The other two bedrooms share a bathroom.

Features in the garage include a secure closet and space for a freezer, and a shop with built-in workbench for the handyman of the house.

For a study kit of the Lida (405-02), send $10 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307-0E48, Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number). For a collection of plan books featuring our most popular home plans, send $20 to Landmark, or call 1-800-562-1151.

AMERICAN INVSCO

Before you dig, call MISS DIG to avoid danger

The first signs of spring are here. Crocuses are blooming, grass is becoming green again, and gardening and home improvement projects are on the minds of many. Before the first shovel hits the dirt or saw cuts wood, Consumers Power Company reminds customers to call MISS DIG three working days before starting any construction or underground excavation work.

One toll-free call is all it takes to have MISS DIG notify participating utilities to stake their underground facilities or for assistance when work is to be performed near overhead electrical lines. Homeowners can call MISS DIG at 1-800-482-7171 Monday-Friday 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

MISS DIG is a statewide, one-call construction safety and utility damage prevention company funded by Consumers Power and more than 750 Michigan utilities and municipalities. Participating utilities are natural gas, electric, cable television and telephone companies.

Many routine, seemingly simple home improvement or gardening projects have resulted in damages to Consumers Power's natural gas and electric systems. This is particularly evident when MISS DIG is not called prior to beginning the work.

Every year hundreds of residential natural gas and electric services in Consumers Power's service territory are damaged by homeowners during construction and/or excavation work. Examples of yard work which may cause damage include.

- [illegible] landscape walls
- Installing mail boxes using a pole hole digger
- Putting in deck foundations
- Performing grading work on driveways
- Transplanting trees, shrubs and gardens
- Putting up fencing

"These incidents reinforce the importance of contacting MISS DIG at least three working days before beginning any project involving construction of excavation. There's no excuse not to call. It's easy, it's free and one call can greatly reduce the risk of personal injury and damage to utilities," said Kathleen Fournier, executive director of MISS DIG System, Inc.

Participating MISS DIG members will mark the approximate location of underground facilities with color-coded stakes, flags or paint at no cost to the caller. This will help homeowners to determine the precise location of hand-exposing underground facilities.

"Homeowners should know that those who fail to contact MISS DIG before they begin a construction or excavation project risk their own and the safety of others. Also they could be held responsible for repair costs if utilities are damaged. No price can be placed on personal safety; however, charges to repair damaged utilities can run as high as several hundred dollars if major work is required," said Richard H. Valk, Consumers Power's senior claims administrator.

Consumers Power Company, the principal subsidiary of CMS Energy Corporation, is Michigan's largest natural gas and electric utility serving 6 million of the state's 9 1/2 million residents in all 68 Lower Peninsula counties.

Satellite dish adds hundreds of TV channel options

(NU) - Bored with what's available on your television set? Want better quality from the world of TV entertainment?

Join the crowd. Many people want more than their cable services offer today and millions of people don't have access to cable at all.

So entertainment hungry Americans are turning to the skies to expand their home theater horizons. More than 2 million people already own the small digital satellite dishes and set-top receivers required for direct broadcast satellite, or DBS programming. Within the next decade, 40 million are expected to adopt this state-of-the art technology.

Why? Digital television offers unparalleled choice and quality.

"Satellite-delivered programming will give consumers more selection and power in home entertainment that they've ever had before," says Murray Klippenstein, president of AlphaStar, the new kid on the block in the satellite TV business.

For instance, his company has basic packages ranging from 76 to 100 channels, including one that delivers 91 channels of cable and premium programming for $29.99. Among the offerings are news channels, sports channels, movie channels, audio channels, and the complete network slate.

There's the Playboy Channel, HBO, Sundance - Robert Redford's premium movie service showcasing the work of independent filmmakers - and a 24-hour national feed from the Disney Channel.

All this, Klippenstein says, will give subscribers premium value for their digital television dollar.

What about quality? Digital TV has laser-sharp video and CD-quality sound. AlphaStar, for instance, provides MPEG-2 digital video broadcasting signals beamed via AT&T's 402R satellite will be used, and the number of channels will increase to 200.

The system is easy to install and use, company officials say. You can install it yourself, with company help, or the person who sells it to you can take care of installation. Call 1-888-AlphaStar for information about buying or leasing to buy.

Some of the other reasons consumers say they are switching to digital television include child locks, preset program spending limits, secure coding technology to prevent costly pirating of programs, on screen program guides and more.

Protect your home when you're away

(NU) - Picture this: You and your family are returning from a fun-filled vacation, ready to unpack and update the photo album.

Only when you get home, you find the back window broken and valuables missing from all over the house, including your "clever" hiding places in the dresser drawer and in the back of the freezer.

You're not alone. Each year, nearly 5 million families become victims of burglary, often while they've been on vacation.

According to the National Burglar and Fire Alarm Association, there are some simple steps you can take to make your home less attractive to would-be burglars.

Before you leave on your trip, pack your sunblock and be sure to:

- Get a trusted friend or relative to "house sit." Or make sure your neighbors know your plans.
- Have a neighbor pick up your newspapers and mail daily.
- Lock all doors and windows and secure the garage door.
- Leave a car parked in the driveway or ask a neighbor to park in your driveway.

Used Cars to be sold for $5.00

Gene Butman Ford in Ypsilanti is overstocked and will be selling cars and trucks for as low as five dollars, this Saturday, May 18, 1996 during a ONE-DAY sale event.

Ken Butman, owner of Gene Butman Ford just announced plans to hold a Five Dollar used car and truck sales event on Saturday, May 18 1996. According to Mr. Butman, sales from the last few months have resulted in an overstock of trade-ins. "In the last three months, our sales have increased," Butman said. "Now, we must reduce the number of cars and trucks on our used lot to a more manageable number. During this Five Dollar Sale, every used car and truck will be sold below its original price. Our customers will find some prices even lower than at Wholesale Auctions."

Every car is on sale, first come first served, and no bidding. It's the perfect opportunity to get a good quality used car at the lowest price possible, including three pre-owned cars for only five dollars. All cars will be on display at Gene Butman Ford. At 10:00 a.m. on Saturday all vehicles will be opened so that buyers may inspect the vehicles for one hour before the sale begins at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday. Whoever is sitting behind the wheel at 11:00 a.m.when the prices are posted on the windshield will be given the first opportunity to purchase the vehicle at the sale price. This innovative approach to selling pre-owned vehicles will make it easy and quick for anybody in the market for a good pre-owned vehicle to get a great car or truck at a very low price.

"We will have over $6 million dollars in inventory to choose from," Butman said. "Our total inventory will be close to 500 new and used cars and trucks. We want to remind everyone that this is a ONE-DAY sale only. When our inventory has been reduced, we will remove the sale prices."

Special incentives will also be posted on most new vehicles with interest rates as low as 2.9% APR up to 48 months on approval of credit and rebates of up to $2400. Combined with special sale prices to reduce inventory and special factory incentives it is a great time to buy!

The sale will take place at 2105 Washtenaw Avenue, Ypsilanti, Saturday, May 18, 1996. Any questions can be directed to our sales department at (313) 482-8581 or (313) 482-3673.

Employee & family members of Gene Butman Fordare not eligible to purchase in this sale. In order to buy a vehicle, customer must have a valid drivers license and be at least 18 years of age.
