One could say the Plymouth-Canton community has the Luck of the Irish – or maybe it's just home to a melting pot of Irish-Americans.

Canton resident Bri[redacted]y is the third Plymouth-Canton ar[redacted] past five years to capture the hono[redacted]g named to the Maid of Erin court [redacted] annual St. Patrick's Day parade.

The seni[redacted] at Ladywood High School in Livonia was chosen first runner-up by a five-member panel of judges on Feb. 22. The annual event is sponsored by The Gaelic League of Detroit.

It wasn't luck, however, that won Mulcahy the honors, said Bridie Flynn, who with her husband, Tom, chairs the event.

Driver to face trial

■ The family of Carolyn Ann Juengel, killed in a fatal accident last November, continued a quest for justice in district court Friday. John Gorski, 22, was bound over for trial on negligent homicide charges.

A hug was exchanged between relatives of Carolyn Ann Juengel in 35th District Court Friday when a 22-year-old Livonia man was bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court on a charge of negligent homicide in connection with her death last November.

Juengel's daughter, Pamela Belanger, and her fiance, Charles Cummings, sat in the front row of the court room listening to testimony claiming that defendant John Gorski was driving at speeds of up to 60 mph in a 45 mph zone on Nov. 16 to prevent another car from passing.

Gorski's 1996 Chevrolet Camaro went off the road, struck a ditch, and rolled several times after he lost control at a deadly curve on Warren, east of Lilley.

Juengel was dead at the scene after being thrown from the backseat of the Camaro. Another passenger, Juengel's fiance, suffered spinal injuries after also being thrown from the car.

"He was playing games out there," Belanger said of Gorski, who had been her mother's friend.

Judge John MacDonald of the 35th District Court ruled that enough probable cause existed despite defense attorney Mark Haidar arguing that the other driver caused the fatal accident.

The 17-year-old Canton boy Haidar referred to was the first witness to be put on the stand.

Summit shuttle begins service for local seniors

UPDATE

BY VALERIE OLANDER
STAFF WRITER

A specially made eight-person golf cart arrived at the Summit on the Park to shuttle senior citizens to the senior center.

In October, seniors packed several township board meetings and demanded closer parking or use of the banquet room doors at the Summit. The walk was too far for some of the senior citizens attending events.

Instead, officials decided to buy an $11,847 multi-person vehicle to transport them from the parking lot to a rear door closest to the senior center. On Monday, the shuttle service quietly began operating.

"We've had few users in the first four days of operation but we expect more as seniors find out it's available," said Summit Director Debra Bilbrey-Honsowetz.

Since the golf cart needed to be big enough to seat eight and is enclosed with a heater for cold weather, it had to be specially ordered and manufactured by Georgia-based Club Cart, said Bilbrey-Honsowetz. The delivery date was an approximation.

"We didn't want to publicize it and then not have it," said Bilbrey-Honsowetz.

A story about the shuttle service will appear in Silver Threads, a senior newsletter. She expects more shuttle riders after its published.

Seniors are directed to park in the lot just west of the playscape. The shuttle will bring them to the north doors along the driveway for emergency vehicles. The shuttle is stationed at the east end of the Summit.

"My personal opinion is we still need parking near the senior center," said Esther Sprengel of the Pioneer Club.

"Or better yet we need our own building on the Summit grounds," she added.

The Summit was built with $750,000 in federal block grant money based on the senior population. The issue has been a source of contention for seniors who claimed they were being locked out of the Summit because of inadequate access.

They said at their old building on Michigan Avenue they could park close to the door.

During the winter months, seniors were allowed to use a side entrance that was typically used for deliveries until the golf cart arrived. The golf cart is operated by volunteers.

Intervention opens eyes of abuser

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND
STAFF WRITER

Brian Palmatier of Redford Township didn't expect to be arrested on charges of domestic violence the evening of June 4 last year. But he was, and it may have saved his marriage.

Palmatier, 23, was recently interviewed in the well-kept bungalow he shares with his wife Linda, 23, and their two children, Alexander, 3, and Andrea, 18 months. Linda declined to participate in the interview and did not want to be included in the photograph that accompanies this story.

Palmatier recalled the conditions of his sentence: 30 days of electric monitoring and in-house arrest at his parents' home, a week of community service, two years probation, $2,000 in court fines and, what proved to be most effective, 30 weeks of counseling through First Step's Violence Intervention Project.

"First Step opened my eyes to what I did," said Palmatier. "You're always in control of your actions. It took me 25 sessions of counseling to learn that."

First Step is a community domestic abuse prevention organization.

Palmatier cannot connect his abusive behavior to anything in his background. "I was born with a gold-plated spoon in my mouth. Not wealthy, but I had everything I wanted. I was never abused, never saw my parents fight. I thought they were the greatest people in the world. There are no violent people in my family, no alcoholics."

Until the night of his arrest, Palmatier had a clean record, not even a driving offense. He graduated from 12 years of Catholic education with good grades and served honorably in the Marine Corps for four years.

But Palmatier is a "fighter." He said people react two ways to a confrontation: fight or flight. "I like to fight."

Palmatier and his wife had their share of fights while dating. The pattern continued and escalated after marriage. "For three years I verbally and emotionally abused my wife. I'd throw things. One night I had a tantrum."

The "tantrum" began with an argument with Linda, the primary caretaker of the children, over "his" house not being clean enough. It went on for two days. "Defenses were high," said Palmatier. "We weren't talking to each other. The only time we spoke was through the children.

"I didn't like the situation. My wife had the control – my keys, wallet, clean clothes. Like a childish baby I didn't get my way. My wife wouldn't listen to me and I was going to control her."

Board: Bus deal to ease transit

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

PLYMOUTH-CANTON SCHOOLS

With the blessing of five school board members, the Plymouth-Canton school district is purchasing 10 buses for $550,000 with funds from the 1991 bond issue.

The move was approved 5-1, with dissension from board vice president Michael Maloney, who wasn't supported in his motion to table the expenditure. Board secretary Carrie Blamer was absent from the Feb. 25 meeting.

Superintendent Charles Little and John Birchler, executive director for business and operations, said the need is urgent.

"The fleet is regularly breaking down, and we're transporting more and more kids," said Little. "We have visited all of these buses all over Michigan, and are confident regarding the shape they're in." The buses – 1996 and 1997 models – have capacities ranging from 42 to 78 students.

Parents in the district have complained in recent months about bus delays causing their children's late arrivals.

The purchases, Birchler said, will allow the transportation department to "retire transit buses to the spare lot. We often have difficulties if the transit buses are off the road for inspection or repair, or on a field trip. The buses on the spare lot are all smaller buses, and we've had problems accommodating all students. This would alleviate some of those issues."

Advance notice of the bid was made to 57 bus dealers and manufacturers in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, New York, Kansas and Arizona, said Birchler. Eleven vendors requested bid documents, and seven submitted bids.

"The needs being addressed were for five special education vehicles with lifts, and five general education vehicles, either transit or conventional style," Birchler said. "We tried to obtain vehicles which would provide us with the most flexibility, including vehicles with lifts which could be used for general education, special education, and multiple special education uses.

"In addition to the 10 vehicles, it is recommended that two vehicles be retrofitted with lifts from the bond funds for a total of $9,000, and child restraint seats be purchased for $2,580 for special education students."

The board approved the purchase of 10 buses from vendors including Squires; Hoekstra; Tri-County; Wieland; and AmTran of Michigan.

Maloney was reticent to approve such a large purchase.

"I have a lot of questions about this. I really feel the board needs more time to go through the rationale. This is a lot of information to assimilate in 15 minutes, and a lot of money to spend based on a 15-minute conversation," he said.

It was learned following the district's last bus purchase that one of its vendors, Hoekstra, was convicted of price fixing.

Said Birchler: "One of the main things tying up our fleet is a lack of flexibility." Special education is of particular concern, he said.

"The special ed population, and their needs, change often. We have to change routes far more often than we would like. We need the flexibility to make changes to maintain more consistent routes throughout the year."

"Still," said Maloney, "This is a lot of information and a lot of money. I'm nervous on principle about spending this kind of money on a 15-minute discussion."

Board president Mark Horvath said, "I tend to share Mike's concern. It would have been nice to have this information more in advance. But my questions are answered in this documentation. I'm very comfortable that my questions have been answered."

Bridie.

The contestants, ages 17-23, were chosen on poise, appearance, speaking ability and knowledge of Irish culture.

Mulcahy said she studied Irish step dancing for 11 years with Tim O'Hare of Plymouth. She's also won several medals in competitions not only in Michigan, but Ohio and Pennsylvania.

In the fall, she plans to attend Eastern Michigan University, where the school colors ironically are green and white, although she said that had nothing to do with her choice of college.

Her father, Tim Mulcahy, played Gaelic football with the Gaelic Athletic Association and belongs to the Knights of Equity. Mother Mary Mulcahy also has been involved in various Irish clubs, including the Gaelic League of Detroit. Mary Mulcahy speaks in a quaint Irish brogue, despite being born in this country. "She's just been to Ireland so many times," said the younger Mulcahy, who also has visited the homeland.

It is Mulcahy's grandparents who were born in Ireland. Her maternal grandparents are from Northern Ireland while her paternal grandparents are from County Cork. Her parents met at the Gaelic League of Detroit.

As a member of the Maid of Erin court, Mulcahy will lead the parade route along Michigan Avenue. The day begins at St. Patrick's Catholic Church for mass and after the parade a number of appearances are scheduled at various Irish clubs, including the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

This year's Maid of Erin is Jennifer Watkins, 18, of New Boston and second runner-up is Elizabeth Oswald, 22, of Rochester Hills.

Other Plymouth-Canton residents named to the Maid of Erin court were Eileen Fallon of Plymouth in 1991 and Katie O'Rourke of Plymouth in 1994, said Bridie Flynn. O'Rourke was the granddaughter of the late Mayor of Detroit Jerome Cavanagh and the youngest ever to win the honors at age 17.

seven months and his 1996 Ford Mustang for five months at the time of the accident, according to his testimony. He was attempting to pass the Camaro, which was driving at an approximate speed of 35 mph, he said.

"He kept matching my speed and as I sped up he continued to match my speed. We were going about 60-65 mph (at the turn). I was scared, I knew it was a blind curve," Butler testified.

He said he was driving about 70 mph when his brakes "locked up and I 360'd." The Camaro went off the road at the known deadly curve, which claimed two lives in 1996.

Haidar argued that the charge against Gorski should be dropped because prosecutor's didn't charge Butler for his involvement in the accident. Police requested that both Gorski and Butler be charged in the fatal accident, but prosecutors decided only to charge Gorski, Haidar said.

"(Butler) had plenty of room to go behind (the Camaro) but he chose to press on. Then, he passes over in front of Gorski in a no passing zone and brakes. Mr. Gorski had to make a decision – he could hit the car doing a 360 in front of him and go into oncoming traffic or go to the right into the ditch," said Haidar.

He then turned to the prosecutor and asked, "How do you choose not to charge the one who precipitated the incident?"

But Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Maria Petito defended Butler, saying he began passing the Camaro in a passing zone. Gorski was the one who decided to speed up as they entered into the no passing zone, she said. In addition, when Butler realized that he was at a blind curve he had no other choice but to brake, Petito said.

Belanger and Cummings said both should have been charged in her mother's death.

"She was fun-loving. She lived life to the fullest. The problem is she had a lot of life to live yet."

Focus on family

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

It's not the kind of place where children are hustled into classrooms and made to sit in rows. At Youth Living Centers, children are encouraged to have fun.

"This is their building – we want them to play in the halls," said Ouida Cash, executive director of Youth Living Centers and 20-year veteran of the program which she helped to build, which includes programs such as Safe Stay Crisis Nursery and Family Respite Care Center in Westland and other programs throughout western Wayne County.

Family literacy, adoptions, encouraging families with money matters, helping young people learn the skills to be good adults and assisting family members through the many crises that face them are just part of the purpose of the 20-year-old agency.

It's this focus on family that helped to earn Youth Living Centers a recent honor from Crain's Detroit Business as the "best nonprofit agency with a budget of more than $3 million" in the magazine's Best-Managed Non-profit contest. The magazine cited them for innovative programming and financial stability.

Support is key

But Cash said the programs are only as good as the support the agency receives. Ninety percent of the agency's funding is from federal, state and county money; they do not receive United Way funding because of restrictions on fund-raising. The rest of their funding comes from corporate and individual donors.

"We have a wonderful network of supporters ... who have said they want to be a corporate partner," she said, adding that those who support the agency understand the philosophy of prevention and helping families. "It's the old 'You can pay me now, or you can pay me later,' " she added.

In recent years, the agency has expanded from its original position of helping those in trouble to focusing on prevention and helping families and children develop the skills they need to live in today's world.

"This isn't a conveyor belt like McDonald's – how many served?," she said. "We're like a MASH unit – the line of defense ... I'm in this for the marathon – not the sprint."

Cash and the agency have come a long way from the day she signed the purchase agreement for the Youth Living Centers business offices at a former Inkster elementary school just south of Cherry Hill Road off Middlebelt. "The day I signed the agreement ... it (the building) was firebombed," she recalled.

Today, the offices of the western Wayne County agency have been totally refurbished, and now house a community center where kids play floor hockey and basketball and families come for various types of counseling and other services.

"I had no intention of making this building a community center, but 150 kids showed up and said 'So when do you open?' How could I turn them down?" she said.

Many professional sports teams, including the Detroit Red Wings, have helped by providing equipment and support for these programs.

Starting small

The agency began in 1975 as Counterpoint Runaway Shelter, which was then run by Cash. In 1985, operating as Out Wayne County Youth Services Coalition, it merged with Youth Living Centers of Westland which offered group children's homes in that city.

Today, the combined agency has a $4.1 million budget and three service teams which serve more than 5,000 Wayne County residents each year including 600 children in residential services. In addition to the original Counterpoint shelter, the agency offers clinical services, prevention programs and other skill-building efforts.

"Every time we felt there was a gap or a need, we met that need because that's how much we care about our families," Cash explained. "We built the continuum of services one at a time."

Youth Living Centers serves youth from birth through age 20 and their families. Half of the clientele is from out-Wayne County and the other half from Detroit and half of all served are minorities. The agency prides itself on being able to change with the times and offer appropriate services.

"The only thing that is a constant is change," Cash added. "When I think I've got it just right, it changes. Our kids need to be ready for that change."

Clinton visit spurs GOP move on charter schools

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

State Senate Republicans sounded as if Democrat Bill Clinton was their best pal as they forced through a bill to take the 100 cap off charter academies.

Democrats objected that the GOP bill fails to provide assurance of educational quality – far more important, they said, than giving "parental choice" of tainted charter schools.

The Senate GOP acted in a rush March 5, one day before President Clinton was scheduled to address a joint session of the Legislature. "We want to support our president on charter schools," said Republican Joanne Emmons of Big Rapids.

With a 22-16 majority, Republicans barely got 20 votes to pass their bill as two members left early. All area senators voted with their parties.

'They rushed it'

"You know, the Senate Education Committee hadn't met for a year," said Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, who fought the measure in committee and on the floor.

"They rushed it through committee without a chance for opponents even to be listed. It was timed for one day prior to Clinton's visit," Peters said.

The Senate waived its own rules, moving the bill from a committee report to second reading to final passage in a half-day. Chances of House passage are nil.

Senate Bill 146 started life as a measure to allow more charter schools in 15 school districts, ranging from Detroit and Pontiac to Wayne-Westland, where significant numbers of pupils are eligible for federal free lunches But its scope was quickly broadened.

"I'm not concerned with where we draw the line in the sand," said Republican Emmons. "I'm concerned about poor kids tied to a geographic (public school) district."

Asked for statistics on the bill's impact, Emmons refused, quoting a mother who said, "If I don't have money, I don't have a choice."

Democrats offered amendments that would have:

- Allowed the state to reexamine the charters of schools that score below public schools on state assessment tests three years in a row. "Charter schools are a worthwhile experiment," said Peters, "but we should make sure they (parents) are not being sold a bill of goods." He cited Oakland charter schools that have lower scores than their surrounding school districts, including a public school that was targeted for takeover by Gov. John Engler.

Peters' amendment lost, 17-20, picking up one Republican vote.

- Reinstated the mandatory core curriculum that Republicans turned into a "model" curriculum when they rewrote the School Code in 1996. Said sponsor Ken DeBeaussaert, D-Macomb County: "We agree with President Clinton that charter schools can help to improve our educational system (but) we recognize that it is just one tool. . . The state should be a leader in setting high standards."

- Mandated smaller class sizes in kindergarten through third grade. The latter two also went down in party-line votes.

'Excellence' needed

"My Republican colleagues today have portrayed President Clinton's education policy as one-dimensional," said Senate minority leader John Cherry, whose district extends into northern Oakland County. "It's about more than charter schools. It's about curriculum and performance standards. It's about excellence."

Sen. Bill Schuette, R-Midland, praised Engler for working with Clinton to "give more choice and more freedom of decision-making for parents on chartering their own educational future."

Sen. Leon Stille, R-Spring Lake, said Democrats originally complained that charter schools would cream off the best students "and leave the dregs behind. Just the opposite has happened." To Peters he said, "the jury's not in on MEAP scores."

Dems sue Engler

In other developments:

- The four Democratic members of the State Board of Education filed suit in Ingham Circuit Court challenging the constitutionality of Engler's December executive orders shifting much of their power to the appointed state superintendent. Plaintiffs are board president Kathleen Straus of Detroit, Marianne McGuire of Grosse Pointe, Barbara Roberts Mason of Lansing and Herb Moyer of Temperance.

- Sen. Dianne Byrum, D-Onondaga, said legislative Democrats would file supportive briefs over the same issue, arguing Engler usurped the Legislature's authority as well as the State Board's.

- Rep. James Agee, D-Muskegon, introduced a bill for tougher oversight of charter academies. Agee's bill declares that all real and personal property of public school academies is state property. It is bound to stir up a furor because most academies were born years ago as private schools.

"Right now, if a public school academy closes, the authorizing body that holds the charter contract can sell off the land, buildings and personal property, such as computers and classroom equipment," said Agee, an announced candidate for governor in 1998.

But that's exactly what the local branch of the American Association of University Women has in store for the community as it presents "Pinocchio" this month at Garden City High School's O'Leary Auditorium.

Show times are set for 7:30 p.m., Thursday, March 20 and Friday, March 21. Shows on Saturday, March 22 will be at 10 a.m., 1 p.m., and 3 p.m.

Tickets will be sold Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 11-13, at all Plymouth-Canton and Garden City elementary schools. Remaining tickets will be available Friday, March 14 through Wednesday, March 19 at the Pied Piper on Main Street in Plymouth.

The play stars Melissa Uhl of Plymouth as Pinocchio. Her mother, Mary Uhl, played Pinocchio in the AAUW's production 20 years ago. Director of the school district's Head Start/Plus/Title I program, Mary Uhl will appear as one of the bad boys in the 1997 production.

Sharon Belobraidich, taking part for the 26th year, will play the Foul Fellow. Becky Copenhaver, a Livonia teacher, will play Jiminy Cricket. All cast members are AAUW members.

"We feel like it is very important for children, especially between the ages of 4 and 10, to be exposed to the experience of live drama," said Mickey Edell-Cotner, AAUW president who will portray "Gideon" in "Pinocchio."

"The play is very appropriate for that age group. And in the 38 years we have been able to present the play. The play has always been thoroughly enjoyed by both children and adults," added Edell-Cotner, a speech pathologist for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Rose Portelli, one of the directors, said the AAUW has a two-fold purpose in presenting the play.

"This is providing live drama for a young age group, which is what we are really trying to do. I think it's important, because children don't always have that opportunity, especially at such a minimal cost." An added plus is that "it's right here in the community," eliminating the need to drive a great distance. "The play is also one of our main fund raisers," added Portelli, a staffer at Canton's Gallimore Elementary.

The AAUW, comprised mostly of teachers, offers college scholarships to women from the Plymouth-Canton community.

"Last year, we were able to award $3,000 worth of scholarships to local colleges and universities," said Edell-Cotner. "We hope to able to continue that, but will need to be involved in another fund-raising activity to garner that much money."

The group's major fund raiser - the book sale - had to be disbanded because it could no longer be accommodated by Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. "We have a committee investigating possibilities (to replace the book sale). We're working on it," Edell-Cotner said.

Garden City High School is at 6500 Middlebelt between Ford and Warren roads.

CANTON CONNECTION

Bottoms up

Holidays aren't the only time of the year that families are in need.

That's one of the reasons the Salvation Army with the help of Nancy Werth, a University of Michigan-Dearborn student, is asking for donations of baby diapers, training pants and baby wipes.

The diaper drive – "Help baby some bottoms!" – runs through March 22.

Residents are encouraged to participate in the drive because struggling families have a particularly difficult time providing baby care necessities, such as diapers, said Bill Stern, Salvation Army social service supervisor. Food stamps, for example, do not include the purchase of such items, Stern said.

"It's a real need and we want to thank people for their donations throughout the year. If families can't provide these products for their babies, there is risk to the health of the baby," Werth said.

The diaper drive is a community service project for Werth, who is studying for her teaching certification and early childhood endorsement. She has a bachelor's degree in management.

Donations may be dropped off at the Salvation Army on Main Street in Plymouth, as well as Canton Township Hall, Canton Library, Northville City Hall, Northville Library and Northville Township Hall.

For more information, call Stern, 453-5464.

Whyman named to tax, utility committees

Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, was recently appointed to the House Tax Policy and Public Utilities Committees. She also was selected to serve on Advanced Technology and Computer Development as well as the Constitutional and Civil Rights committee.

"These committee assignments mean my constituents will have the first say in many areas concerning their everyday lives," Whyman said. "Electric deregulation, taxation and the growth of computer technology must be monitored closely to ensure that common sense prevails in our work on these important issues."

Stadium bond proposal OK'd, local commissioners split

By Ken Abramczyk
Staff Writer

Financial consultants expect hotel and car rental taxes will bring in $728,000 more in revenue than it will cost to pay off a portion of stadium bonds in 1997.

That's according to a report from Coopers & Lybrand given to the county commission's Committee on Ways and Means on Wednesday, prior to approval Thursday by the full commission of a lease contract between Wayne County and the Detroit Wayne County Stadium Authority.

Tourist taxes are expected to bring in nearly $23.3 million through the year 2000. The bond debt payments are expected to total $18.7 million during that time period.

County voters approved increases in hotel taxes and car rentals to pay off bonds issued for a new Tiger Stadium.

The lease provides a first pledge of all tourist tax revenues collected by the county treasurer and additionally the full faith and credit pledge of the county's general fund to meet the cash rental payments.

"We believe that the projected tourist tax collections will be sufficient to pay the debt service on the bonds and the risk to the county's general fund will be minimal," said Tom Naughton, chief financial officer of the Wayne County Department of Management and Budget.

"The current proposed financing structure assumes initial year tax collections of $5 million, allows for 2 percent growth in tourist tax collections and will provide a self-imposed coverage allowance of 1.1 times debt service."

Commissioners approved the lease contract, 9-3 with one commissioner absent, and two who missed the vote because they were out of the room.

Commissioner Robert Blackwell, D-Detroit, was absent. Commissioners Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, and William O'Neil, D-Allen Park, had left the room prior to the vote and had not returned by the time commissioners acted on the item. Both commissioners left the room immediately after a lengthy discussion on an appropriations vote.

The stadium agenda item had been moved up on the agenda for action.

Naughton requested the commission to "close" on the bonds by April 1.

"This timetable, as you know, is necessary to stay ahead of U.S. Sen. (Patrick) Moynihan's proposed legislation which, when introduced into committee, could jeopardize the tax-exempt status of the bonds," Naughton said.

Plawecki, Patterson and McCotter have maintained that they oppose pledging — and possibly using — tax dollars to finance sports stadiums in Detroit.

Plawecki said her position hadn't changed. "I don't believe in spending county taxpayers money on the project."

Last month Mike Duggan, assistant county executive, called that an irresponsible position because the county was beholden to the pledge under an agreement approved by commissioners last year.

Patterson thought Chairman Solomon was "out of order" for moving the lease agreement up on the agenda when McCotter and O'Neil left the meeting. McCotter has opposed the county pledge of money and any use of tax dollars for the stadium.

"I was surprised that the chairman moved that item," Patterson said. "That's not good government.

"My position hasn't changed. I won't support it from the beginning to the end."

Potato recipes

2 UNIQUE

KELLI LEWTON

Spuds are simply smashing any way

The word "potato" itself derives from the Spanish patata, which in turn comes from the Caribbean word batata, meaning sweet potato. Americans have for many years referred to white potatoes as "Irish potatoes" even though their point of origin is not Ireland.

Many centuries ago Indian tribes living along the western coast of South America were feasting on the many wild varieties of potatoes. The Incas of Peru were growing and eating potatoes 2,000 years before Columbus discovered America.

Potatoes were carried back to Europe in the early 16th century by the Spanish ships coming from the New World. They were not well received by most of Europe and especially France where they were believed to be poisonous. However, in Ireland, they soon became the main food crop. Potatoes were eaten for breakfast, lunch and dinner. After the potatoes long journey from the Americas to Europe they came back to this country from Ireland with the settlers.

Vegetable friend

Speaking from a culinary standpoint, they are one of a chef's best vegetable friends. Virtually any cooking method can be applied to potatoes – steaming, sauteing, deep frying, boiling, baking, roasting, grilling and even microwaving (if you must). Truth be told most of us only order all that other stuff to get to spuds anyway don't we? For years the potato has taken a back seat to make room for sexy, posh, trendy starches such as the million new grain sides we see in restaurants – guiana, cous-cous, fun-shaped pastas, bistro risotos etc. I say pass the spuds!

The matriarch of comfort food, mashed potatoes is my personal favorite way to prepare spuds ... I mean mashed with anything! Try mushrooms, artichokes, the old favorite garlic mashed or three cheese. The possibilities are truly endless. Some basics for the perfect mashers are as follows: Bring a pan with water covering potatoes to a boil, then reduce to a simmer until the potatoes are fork tender (15-20 minutes). Drain the water off and place the potatoes back on the stove or in the oven. Evaporating the excess moisture from the potatoes helps to ensure a fluffy end result.

The actual mashing of cooked potatoes requires ones own discretion. Some chefs hand prefer passing potatoes through a ricer or food mill, while others (myself included) find a hand masher or wooden spoon the instrument of choice. Food processors are not a great idea for mashing potatoes since the sharp blade will completely denature the starch granules causing them to seep glutinous matter which makes for a slushy mash. A good rule of thumb to follow for basic mashed potatoes is 2 pounds of potatoes to 1 cup if liquid to 6 tablespoons of butter. Don't forget that potatoes are best mashed when hot. Once they are cooled, the desired mealiness is never to be regained. The mashed potato has in a way become a new canvas for culinary expression. Just about any combination in the realm of taste is fair game. Be creative and "Happy Mashing."

Spud stuff

Did you know?

- There are more than 200 varieties of wild species of spuds?
- Potatoes were and still are used for medicinal purposes.
- One 5.5 ounce potato has 120 calories, no fat, 5 mg of sodium, 2 g of fiber, 27 g or energy bursting starch, 3 g of protein and 40 percent of the daily requirement of vitamin C.
- Potatoes stay good for several weeks.
- Approximately 120 pounds of potatoes per capita per year are consumed.
- Potatoes are the edible portion of the starchy tubes of the potato plant, solanin tuberasum.
- The English grew potatoes only as ornamental plants
- Before the early 1800s many people in Europe believed potatoes to cause leprosy, scrofula, syphilis and provoked unbridled lust.
- Prussian peasants refused to eat potatoes even in times of great famine.

'All Foods Can Fit' into a sensible diet

BY PEGGY MARTINELLI-EVERTS
SPECIAL WRITER

March is National Nutrition Month, and this year's theme is "All Foods Can Fit." Dietitians from around the country are ready to explain how all foods can fit into your diet. I'll let you in on the secret: variety and portion control. All foods can fit if you choose a variety of foods and eat them in sensible portions.

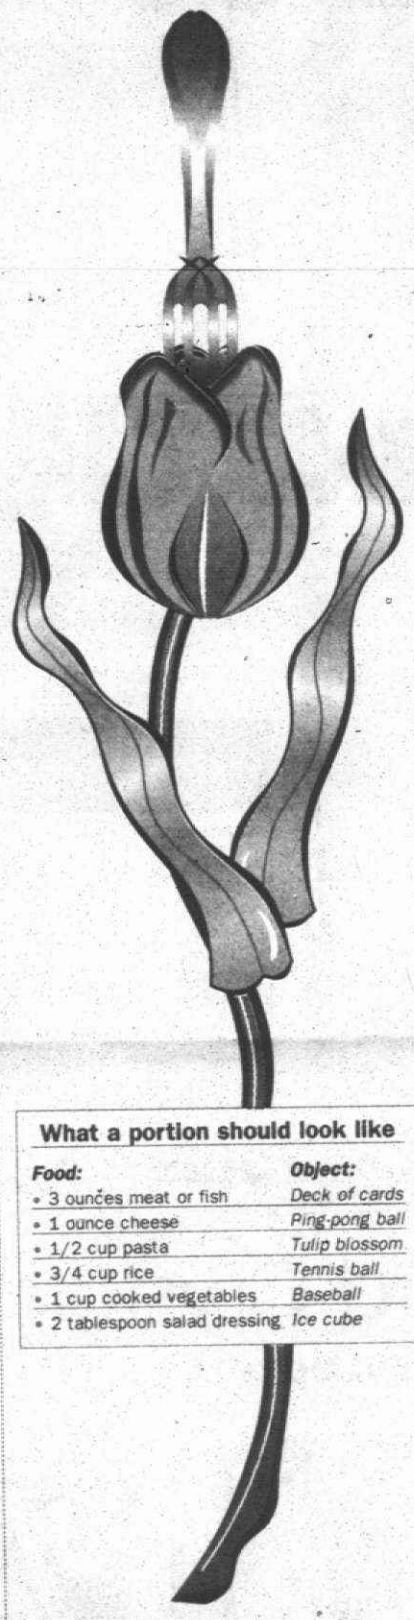
Simply put, variety means making sure that the foods you eat change daily, weekly and monthly, just like the seasons. For example, a breakfast of oatmeal, orange juice and skim milk is wonderfully nutritious. However, if you eat it every day, you'll miss out on other important nutrients found in foods such as rice or wheat cereal, grapefruit juice and non-fat yogurt. Variety means selecting foods from the full spectrum of each food group.

I know how difficult it can be to control portions and assure variety. About 10 years ago I discovered that I had high blood cholesterol. Levels or cholesterol can rise for many reasons. Some people, like me, inherit a tendency toward high levels. But that doesn't mean cholesterol levels can't be controlled. It just takes some work. I had been eating very little meat but lots of vegetables, eggs and cheese, thinking that this semi-vegetarian diet would be good for me.

Always in a hurry, I wasn't careful to watch how much saturated fat and cholesterol I was including in my diet and didn't stop to consider how it might affect me. I did successfully lower my cholesterol by limiting eggs and dairy products but by last November, after I delivered my second baby, my cholesterol crept back up to 301. Perhaps the nine-month pregnancy "pigfest" had an impact but so did the fact that "little things" I was doing were sending my blood fats way over the top.

For instance, two creamers when I sat down with my decaf; eggs, cheese and meat on my salad bar salad and other "little things" added up to the "big" numbers on my lipid profile. So, for now, I do pay attention to portion sizes and include lots more variety in my diet with grains, fruits and vegetables and much smaller servings of dairy, eggs and meat.

Controlling portion size can be difficult. Where food is concerned, it seems as though everywhere we go, whether it's to the grocery store, restaurant or fast food window, the portions are getting bigger. Even though many of us have slashed high-fat, high-cholesterol foods from our diet, we still eat massive amounts of other "nutritious" foods. We think we're being "good" by ordering fish or chicken when we go out. But sometimes the portions we are served – a huge chunk of fish or a half a chicken – negate our good intentions. This mind set continues at home, too, as we take an extra helping of a low-fat dish, followed by a bunch of fat-free cookies. But low fat does not mean low calories. A rice cake or fat-free cookie has nearly as many calories as a full-fat cookie. And plain pasta, the golden boy of good nutrition – that's low in fat and rich in B vitamin and iron – can have up to 600 calories in today's average "serving." Keep an eye on the sauces you typically find in some restaurants and look out!



What a portion should look like

Food:	Object:
• 3 ounces meat or fish	Deck of cards
• 1 ounce cheese	Ping-pong ball
• 1/2 cup pasta	Tulip blossom
• 3/4 cup rice	Tennis ball
• 1 cup cooked vegetables	Baseball
• 2 tablespoon salad dressing	Ice cube

Remember, the larger the portion, the higher the caloric count. Many people who are watching their weight wouldn't consider eating an 8-ounce porterhouse steak. However, they don't realize that a giant bowl of pasta can contain even more calories.

Recent restaurant visits reveal a curious trend: apparently responding to customer demands, restaurants of all kinds are increasing portion sizes, adding back the high-fat selections and preparing dishes with more fat than ever. In the February issue of FoodService Director magazine, a special report indicated that a good barometer of trends in restaurants is the National Restaurant Show, held each year in Chicago. In this year's show low-fat foods were either very low-key or nonexistent. This is in direct contrast to the 1995 show, where low-fat foods were practically everywhere. The magazine also reported that fast food restaurants are joining in by piling on the fat and calories to satisfy the consumer's quest for taste. Taco Bell eliminated all but three of its 11 Border Light menu items; sales for the remaining three account for less than 1 percent of the chain's sales. McDonald's completely eliminated its McLean Deluxe burger after disappointing sales over the last five years.

Grocery shelves are not immune to this bigger-is-better trend either. Manufacturers like Nabisco, with its once highly-sought-after SnackWells line, have experienced flattening retail sales, and Stouffer's Lean Cuisine is now offered in "Hearty Portions."

With these alarming trends, how can I, as a dietitian, say that "all things can fit" in a healthy diet? Again, as tempting as restaurants and grocery stores are making it, with moderation. It is important to remember why we all begin eating more healthily in the first place – for a healthier lifestyle. Even though restaurants are creating ever-larger portions, it is up to us to take responsibility for what we eat. The clean-the-plate mentality can lead to ballooning weight. Watch the way a child eats: enough to satisfy hunger without overstuffing. Remember this and learn to stop when you are full, not necessarily when your plate is empty.

All foods can fit, but certain foods should be limited to less than appetizer-sized portions. These include foods high in fat, cholesterol, salt and sugar. Check the nutrition facts on food labels for your guide. Then enjoy all foods, sensibly.

Satisfy your craving for Mexican food without guilt

BY LAURA L. SYKES
SPECIAL WRITER

Think twice before you order an appetizer bowl of guacamole dip. It is loaded with fat and sodium. An average recipe allows for 1/4 cup of dip per person. That already adds up to 12 grams of fat, 645 milligrams of sodium and 137 calories and doesn't even include the chips! And, more importantly, most of us eat more than 1/4 cup of dip!

This month's recipe makeover is quick and easy. Since most of the ingredients in guacamole are healthy we just have to make a few adjustments.

First, we can replace the avocados with grilled eggplants. Three medium avocados contain 971 calories, 92 grams of fat and 60 milligrams of sodium. Three medium eggplants, on the other hand, contribute only 357 calories, 2.5 grams of fat and 41 milligrams of sodium. This simple substitution easily reduces 90 grams of fat from the recipe or approximately 11 grams of fat per serving.

The average person will eat at least 2 ounces of corn chips with their dip. This contributes 306 calories, 19 grams of fat and 357 milligrams of sodium. By using unsalted baked corn chips we can reduce this to 220 calories, 0 grams of fat and 50 milligrams of sodium.

You can eliminate the 1/2 teaspoon of salt called for in the original guacamole recipe. Substitute fat-free sour cream in place of regular sour cream in the original guacamole recipe, or remove it completely.

If you are just having a Mexican snack craving, try low fat tortilla chips with This will usually satisfy your urges without adding hundreds of unwanted calories.

Use your noodle to make healthful choices

The U.S. may be known as a melting pot for many cultures, but adventurous cooks have also made it a boiling pot for noodles from around the world. As National Noodle Month, March is a great time to look at how such a popular food can play a major role in healthy eating.

The average American now consumes about 11 pounds of noodles each year, or double the amount consumed a decade ago. That's a healthy trend since noodles are a low-fat food and contain complex carbohydrates, niacin, thiamine, riboflavin, protein, iron and fiber. When combined with the protein in a low-fat meat sauce or grated cheese, and served alongside a green salad with low-fat dressing and fresh fruit, noodles can serve as the foundation of a filling, nutritious meal.

Mix Asian flavor with Italian pasta in manicotti stuffed with sweet-and-sour cabbage. Heat a tablespoon of olive oil in a heavy-bottomed skillet and saute a small finely-chopped onion until it becomes translucent. Fill a skillet with water to a quarter-inch deep. Stir in a pound of shredded cabbage, a peeled, grated carrot, a peeled, cored and grated apple, and 1/8 teaspoon salt. Cover and steam the vegetables until soft – about 30 minutes – adding water as necessary. Stuff twelve cooked manicotti tubes each with 2/3 cup of the cabbage mixture. Arrange the tubes in a baking dish and pour 1½ cup low-sodium chicken stock over them. Cover the dish tightly with aluminum foil and bake for 30 minutes at 400 degrees. Serve with a tomato sauce cooked with 1/4 cup raisins.

For a nutritious meatless pasta topper, try this sauce on your favorite noodles: Saute 1/2 cup finely chopped onion in 1 tablespoon olive oil in a large skillet. Add 1 clove chopped garlic and cook 1 minute more. Add 1-1/2 pounds of chopped fresh tomatoes (or a 28-ounce can of whole tomatoes packed in puree), 2 cups chopped broccoli, a 15-ounce can of kidney beans (drained and rinsed), 1/2 teaspoon sugar and 1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer about 15 minutes to blend flavors.

LINGUINE WITH SHRIMP AND TOMATOES

- 4 ounces linguine
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 garlic clove, chopped
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
- 2 large tomatoes, coarsely chopped
- 1/4 teaspoon dried basil
- 1/2 pound small or medium shrimp (raw)
- 2 spring onions, chopped
- Salt
- Freshly ground pepper

In a large pot of boiling water, cook linguine until it is tender but firm (according to package direction); drain and set aside, keeping warm in the pot with a little water.

Meanwhile, in a heavy fry pan, heat the oil over medium heat. Add the garlic and shallots and cook, stirring, for about 30 seconds. Add the tomatoes and basil and cook for 1-2 minutes. Stir in the shrimp and cook until they are hot and pink. Sprinkle the sauce with spring onions and season with salt and pepper. Serve over hot linguine.

Each of the two servings contains 395 calories and 8 grams of fat.

Stuffed peppers still have family appeal

So many foods have nostalgic appeal – Mom's best recipes or Saturday night supper favorites. Many we remember because we just enjoyed eating them.

Stuffed peppers, for example, are a nostalgic favorite. The whole family loved them – especially Mom, since they were easy to make with convenient, economical ground beef Guess what? The same holds true today.

Easy Beef Stuffed Peppers are super simple. Mom probably used green peppers, but today we have many colors from which to choose – we can even use a combination to add a colorful contemporary touch to this tried and true favorite.

Stuff the peppers with a mixture of lean ground beef, onion, rice, ketchup and oregano. As an added timesaver, you don't have to precook the beef or rice. Place the peppers in a baking dish, top with a tasty blend of Italian-style stewed tomatoes, ketchup and oregano – and bake. That's it! No attention needed until they come out of the oven. Remember to completely cook all dishes made with ground beef. To ensure doneness, ground beef mixtures should be cooked until the beef is no longer pink and a thermometer inserted in the filling registers 160 degrees F.

Complement this home-style family meal with crusty rolls, a tossed green salad and warm apple crisp topped with vanilla yogurt. Since the oven's already on for the peppers, bake the apple crisp at the same time.

EASY BEEF STUFFED PEPPERS

Preparation and cooking time: I hour and 45 minutes

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 4 medium green, red or yellow bell peppers
- 3/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/4 cup uncooked rice
- 2 tablespoons ketchup, divided
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Topping:

- 1 can (14-1/2 ounces) Italian-style stewed tomatoes, undrained
- 1 tablespoon ketchup
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Cut tops off bell peppers; remove seeds and membrane. In large bowl, combine ground beef, onion, rice, ketchup, oregano, salt and pepper, mixing lightly but thoroughly. Spoon an equal amount of meat mixture into each bell pepper. Place in 8 x 8-inch baking dish. 3. Combine topping ingredients; spoon over stuffed peppers. Cover baking dish tightly with foil. Bake in 350-degree oven 1-1/2 hours to medium (160 degrees F.) doneness or until beef mixture is cooked.* Makes 4 servings (serving size: 1/4 of recipe).

Nutrition information per serving: 373 calories; 29 g protein; 29 g carbohydrate; 16g fat, 4.4 mg iron; 81 7 mg sodium; 84 mg cholesterol. (Complete nutritional available on request.)

*Due to the natural nitrate content of certain ingredients such as onions, celery and bell peppers often used to make meatloaf, meatloaf may be pink even if a 160-degree F internal temperature is reached. Always check the temperature with a meat thermometer or instant-read thermometer to be sure it reaches 160 degrees F.

Spring Seafood Pasta incorporates all food groups

See related story on Taste front. Recipe from Peggy Martinelli-Everts, registered dietitian and director of clinical operations for HDS Services in Farmington Hills.

Here's a recipe that incorporates all the food groups into one dish. It's easy to prepare and tastes great. Best of all, a 1-1/2 cup serving provides just 348 calories and 6 grams of fat. You can get creative with this recipe, too. For variety, use seasonal vegetables. Instead of using crab meat, you can also substitute white tuna or boneless, skinless chicken breast for a different flavor.

SPRING SEAFOOD PASTA

Makes 8 servings.

- 6 cups uncooked rotini pasta
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 8 green onions
- 3 cups fresh broccoli florets
- 1 red pepper
- 12 ounces asparagus (about 1 bunch)
- 8 ounces fresh mushrooms
- 2 cups fresh pea pods
- 6 tablespoons fat-free mayonnaise
- 1 pound imitation crab meat
- 4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- Juice from 1/2 of a small orange

Cook and drain pasta according to package directions and reserve covered, to keep pasta warm. Mince green pepper. Chop all other vegetables into bite-size pieces. In a large frying pan or wok, saute onions in olive oil over medium heat.

Add the rest of the vegetables and cook al dente (cooked through but still firm), tossing frequently. Add mayonnaise, imitation crab meat and Parmesan. Toss with noodles over fire to heat thoroughly and squeeze orange juice over top. Serve immediately.

Drinking Water Week tours planned

Do you know how much water is pumped by the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department on an average day? (646.5 million gallons)

Do you know why the Water Department uses very few chemicals (five) in its treated water? (Because the source water is of high quality.)

Do you know how to save almost 6,000 gallons of water a year? (Repair a faucet with a slow drip.)

Do you know that a leaky toilet can lose 100 gallons of water a day - which will add up to 30,000 gallons a year? (A costly waste of a necessary product.)

Do you know how many customers the department has in southeastern Michigan? (Over 4 million)

Chances are you're one of those 4 million-plus customers. And to educate the public more about drinking water, and use for numerous other purposes, the DWSD invites everyone to participate in its 12th Annual Drinking Water Week Celebration.

The department will offer a number of special activities during the celebration during May. Beginning May 5 and extending throughout the month, special public tours will be conducted for school/community groups and individuals at the Northeast Water Plant, 11000 East Eight Mile Road in Detroit, just east of Van Dyke. Special handouts will be provided to visitors.

Regular plant tours are offered year-round. Speakers bureau presentations illustrating the importance of quality drinking water are also available to school and community groups.

Tour reservations and speaker requests are a must and can be made by calling DWSD's public relations division at (313) 224-3834, between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Part of the DWSD's youth component also will include awarding U.S. Savings Bonds of up to $300 for water-related student projects entered in the Science and Engineering Fair of Metropolitan Detroit, April 16, at Cobo Center in Detroit. Project categories will be geared to middle and high school students for projects dealing with water purification/analysis, among other topics.

County to offer moth spraying program

Wayne County is making available a gypsy moth suppression program to the county's 43 communities.

While a 25-acre area is required for spraying, property owners are encouraged to work with community organizations, block clubs and their communities to put together tracts, say officials.

It is expected residents will pay $20 to $25 per acre to participating communities to cover the cost of spraying. Payment is due by March 31.

Spraying is expected to take place in mid- to late May.

In 1996, Wayne County sprayed approximately 2,000 acres in portions of Huron Township and Livonia.

The exact spray date will be determined when the proper weather conditions – little or no rain for a period of 4-6 hours after spraying and wind less than 10 miles per hour – exist. The program is intended to reduce caterpillar populations to tolerable levels and preserve tree foliage. The spraying is expected to be completed in one or two days, depending on weather conditions.

The program uses a biological insecticide called Bacillus thuringiensis (B.t.), and is not harmful to birds, bees, fish mammals or humans. It will not contaminate ground or surface water.

Property owners should call their municipal offices for details. To find out more about the suppression program, call John Miller, county program coordinator at (313) 833-3279.

Dentistry in the 90s

NEWS FOR PREGNANT WOMEN
A study recently published in the Journal of Periodontology suggests that untreated periodontal (gum) disease in pregnant women may account for a large share of premature births for which no other explanation can be found. Although this finding is preliminary, it backs up an unpublished study conducted about a decade ago at Harvard University's Forsyth Dental Clinic in which a similar relationship between periodontal disease and preterm births was found. The new findings suggest that periodontal infection may be responsible for as many as 18 percent of the 250,000 premature babies who are born weighing less than 5.5 pounds each year in the U.S.
Pregnant women now have more reason than ever to ensure the health of their own teeth and gums when scheduling a dental appointment during their pregnancies.

New Plymouth stationer takes things personally

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Sometimes, necessity is the mother of a new business.

Just ask Tanja von Kulajta and husband Tim Winn, who recently opened RSVP, a store in Plymouth that sells and personalizes invitations, announcements, fine papers and gifts.

On the walkway at 829 Penniman Avenue, in a former skateboard shop, the idea for RSVP was born after the young couple's daughter Madeline arrived eight months ago.

"We were looking for birth announcements that were unique and different, but there was nothing available in this area," said von Kulajta, who stocks items such as frameable English wrapping paper; notecards from the Art Institute of Chicago; dozens of albums of invitations and announcements; handmade greeting cards; and the Crane line.

The couple confronted a similar situation three Septembers ago when planning their outdoor wedding. "That's when our hunt started for something different," said von Kulajta. "We wanted to tell people what it was, and not to wear their most formal clothes."

Winn and von Kulajta had been planning to start their own business and gave some thought to a bread franchise. But with a newborn, bakery hours were less than appealing.

A walk von Kulajta took through Kerrytown in Ann Arbor proved fortuitous. The Wheaton College graduate and former medical saleswoman stopped by "Regrets Only," a store she'd heard about that sells and personalizes unusual cards, invitations and announcements.

Owner Nancy Chenevey "was a godsend," says von Kulajta. "There are business owners who feel everyone is going to be competition. Not Nancy. With her, it was 'let me share with you...'

"We've shared information back and forth ever since."

The couple, who recently moved from Plymouth to Northville, chose Plymouth for their store because "it had the mix we were looking for. This is a good size for us to start with," said von Kulajta, whose Ohio-born husband works in engineering sales for York International and is vice president of RSVP. Von Kulajta is president.

Patrons who stop in the out-of-the-way store wonder if the business is surviving - given its location.

A woman looking in RSVP recently for a cat-themed birthday card asked von Kulajta, "How are you doing tucked away back here?"

Von Kulajta told her business has been fine, seemingly due to word of mouth. "No one else around here does what we do; you have to go to Ann Arbor, Birmingham or West Bloomfield," she said.

That's not to say RSVP carries everything. "If someone wants a 'Happy 30th Birthday, Dad' card, I refer them to other stores in town," said von Kulajta.

With a sophisticated software program, Von Kulajta can design "imprintables" - one-of-a-kind invitations, stationery and announcements. "Our whole focus is to offer different and unique things for people who want to make occasions special," she said.

Unlike major companies, "we can print one day, and deliver the next. We can do just 10 invitations, or five. You don't have to order 25."

"It's no coincidence that the entrepreneur has international flair, and the name to go with it. Her roots extend to Yugoslavia, her father's birthplace, and Germany, where her mother was born. Her father spoke several languages, and German was the first language von Kulajta learned.

Need new glasses? Fitting rules differ

BY DONNA MULCAHY
SPECIAL WRITER

It's time to clear up some misconceptions – take off the blinders, if you will – about eyeglasses and sunglasses.

That's what Bill Seski thinks.

A licensed cosmetic optician, Seski is co-owner of Eyes Right Optical in Farmington Hills and Oak Park.

Before buying his business in 1993, Seski was an eyeglass designer for D.O.C., and before that, he owned a posh optical boutique on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills, Calif., so he knows a lot about eye-wear.

One of the misconceptions people have, he said, is that the shape of their face determines what kind of frames they can wear. Basically, he said, there are three face shapes and three frame shapes: oval, triangular and square.

"The old rule of thumb, was that the frame shape had to be the opposite of the face shape in order to achieve balance. So if you had a square face, you'd wear round or oval frames."

However, that was discriminatory, he said, because different frame shapes have different connotations.

"When you see a person wearing oval glasses, you instantly think he's intelligent, whether he is or not, because they look very business-like," Seski said.

The new rule: "As long as the eye is in the exact center of the frame, a person can wear any style frame, no matter what the shape is of his or her face."

Another misconception is that if you have a strong prescription, you can't wear horn-rimmed glasses and certain other styles. That may have been true in the past, because strong prescriptions used to mean thick lenses, which didn't look right in certain frames. However, thanks to improved technology, ultra-thin lenses are now available.

A popular trend, Seski said, is to tint the upper and lower portions of eyeglass lenses so that it looks like a person is wearing eye shadow and blush, even when she's not.

As for frame colors, "Shiny metals are out. Antique colors and matte metal finishes are in."

A misconception about sunglasses, Seski said, is that bigger is always better. Small lenses can provide more than adequate protection, he said, if the frames fit snug against the face and if the lenses have a good coating to block harmful UVA and UVB (ultraviolet) rays.

But unless you're willing to spend at least $40 on a pair of sunglasses, don't wear any at all, he said, because inexpensive sunglasses can cause more harm than good.

He said that sunlight can bleach out the anti-ultraviolet coating on inexpensive sunglasses within a few days. The glasses remain tinted, however, which causes the pupils to expand. This in turn lets more ultraviolet light into the back of the eye where it can damage the retina over time.

Seski offers three reasons why children 16 and under should never wear sunglasses: Their glasses are usually inexpensive and lack the proper protective coating; children can get adequate UV protection just by squinting; and ultraviolet rays are not as harmful to children as they are to adults.

Dr. John Roarty, a pediatric ophthalmologist at Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit, said he agreed with Seski on those three counts.

"But I wouldn't go so far as to say that children should never wear sunglasses," Roarty said. "If a child is in a high-glare situation – on the snow or on the water on a bright, sunny day, for example – and it will help with the child's comfort, then I don't see a problem with wearing sunglasses."

Sunglasses are regulated to a small extent by the U. S. Food & Drug Administration's Center for Devices and Radiological Health, but the center never tests to see how long anti-ultraviolet lens coatings last. So when it comes time to pick out a pair of specs or shades, go into it with your eyes open.

THE ACADEMY FOR BUSINESS AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

• New Educational Choice for High School Students
• New Charter Public High SchoolOpening in Dearborn Heights

The Academy For Business and International Studies will begin accepting applications for students entering the 9th and 10th grade this coming school year. There are a Limited Number of Open Seats Available. The Academy Will Accept Only Three Hundred (300) Students for the Academic Year of 1997/1998. An additional grade level willbe added each subsequent year. The Academy will be a four year program in 1999-2000 school year. . The Academy received a charter from Eastern Michigan University to operate a public High School.

The school's curriculum calls on students to undertake a rigorous program in Math, Science, and International and Business Studies. Students must meet far more demanding standards than those of most schools today. The Academy will respond directly to business community requests for a rigorous program of entrepreneurial study to prepare students for jobs in international trade.

Focus on High-Paying International Trade. The world is becoming too competitive to allow Michigan students to explore only the economic environs of their birthplace. They need the necessary tools to meet the challenges of the 21st century. States and nations with the most advanced work forces will attract high-wage jobs. As a result, strategists say it is urgent for the state of Michigan to move rapidly to build that work force. The Academy for Business and International Studies will be at the forefront of that effort.

Graduates of the program will be equipped to transition into very highly paid employment opportunities in international trade and business. Many graduates will go on to college, and they will be highly prepared and ready to specialize. Others may decide to go right into a business of their own after having successfully run one as students at the Academy.

Emphasis On Specialties and High Demand Languages. The Academy curriculum is a four-year program. Students have an opportunity to select one of the following tracks: International Studies or International Business. Within each track students can select courses within their specialty, such as International Marketing, Finance, Accounting, Computer Science, Real Estate and other areas.

Overseas Exchange Program. Students will have the option to apply for participation in a student exchange program. The exchange program focuses on countries that use the languages taught in the Academy, such as Chinese, French, Japanese, Spanish, Russian, Arabic, German and others. The language programs concentrate on those that are in high demand throughout the international trade community. Headhunters specializing in recruiting international business executives note that people with fluency in these "hot" languages, combined with solid business experience, can often double or even triple their value in the job market.

Emphasis on Real World Problems. The Academy's curriculum is challenging and draws on real world problems. Instructional methods involve applying knowledge and skills from many fields of study in posing questions and doing original research to find their own answers. Students build their own bridges between the theoretical and the practical.

Curriculum Stresses Practical Approach. The Academy will use a unique new program not found in any other high school. Students learn business skills using unique "Mall-Classroom Learning Centers" with a Mini-Store, Mini-Bank, Mini-Wall Street, Mini-United Nations, Science and Math labs, Information Systems Lab and Board Meeting rooms. Using these mini-centers, teachers can more easily translate concepts into practical experiences which students respond to enthusiastically.

Fostering Relations Between Students,Parents, and Teachers. The Academy will function as a community; a place with an ethos of shared purpose and responsibility; an atmosphere of learning, security, caring and mutual respect. Teachers, parents, and students will have the greatest voice and place in our Academy.

Program Likened to Elite Private Academy For Free. Although recently chartered, school officials are very encouraged about initial response to the program. Initial applicants have expressed their excitement about the program. The school already has commitments form many families who are planning to enroll several children in the school when it opens next Fall.

Graduating seniors exhibit talent in show at Madonna

If you're interested in what advertisements of the future will look like, check out the art exhibit by Madonna University graduating seniors Kelly Datillo, Jane Cassisi, Suzanne Dykas, and Shannon Fuller-Arment.

The 1997 Senior Art Exhibit continues through March 12 in the second floor Exhibit Gallery of the Library Wing on campus, 36600 Schoolcraft (at Levan), Livonia. Exhibit Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday to Thursday, until 7 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

From pen and ink to gouache and computer graphics, the show boasts a variety of media. Graphic artists need this versatility to survive in the rapidly changing field of commercial art.

Commercial art

"The show is particularly strong in commercial art examples, but there are some fine examples of Oriental brush work which is considered fine art," said art department chairman Ralph F. Glenn.

"Kelly Datillo's Oriental brush paintings of an iris and orchids are very delicate and very sensitive, and Jane Cassisi did her Oriental brush works with quite a bit of flourish and flare," said Glenn.

Although Datillo, a Redford resident, majored in fine art at Madonna University, the 22-year-old exhibits a sampling of her painting and drawing skills. "Beginning and End," a pencil on paper drawing, focuses on three classical figures. Each winds themselves around the other to create a tangle of arms and legs leading the eye upward.

An acrylic and airbrush painting of a green mermaid with horns by Datillo sets an eerie scene.

"I'm especially attracted to the areas of sci-fi and fantasy art," said Datillo. "I'd eventually like to illustrate." Datillo is employed as a layout artist at Gehringer Printing in Redford.

Two of the graduating seniors returned to school after earning associate degrees earlier in their life. Cassisi obtained an associate degree from Macomb Community College, got married and had a baby before deciding to attend Madonna University to earn a bachelor's degree.

Developing skills at work

Cassisi worked as a graphic artist at Chrysler Defense from 1980 to 1994. She continued to work at the Warren company even after General Dynamics purchased it in 1982. Cassisi is presently employed by TRW Integration Group in Troy.

It is apparent Cassisi learned many of her skills while on the job. Although since 1985 most of her work was created on a Macintosh computer, a black and white drawing of a seated leopard looking over his shoulder

DIA ART

DIA docents bring art to schools

Art tours: Detroit Institute of Arts docent Dodi Weil of West Bloomfield brings the museum's collection of art to life during an Art to the Schools presentation at St. Raphael School in Garden City.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

St. Raphael School students recently toured the Detroit Institute of Arts without leaving their Garden City classroom. In a slide presentation of utilitarian and ceremonial art works, which included ceramics, stone carving, metalwork, quill and bead work, docent Dodi Weil of West Bloomfield brought the history of native cultures to students as part of the DIA's Art to the Schools program.

"Textbooks are so one-dimensional so I like to liven things up," said Nicole Rakozy, a seventh grade social studies and English teacher at St. Raphael School.

Rakozy arranged the art appreciation talk last October. Free to tri-county area schools, the DIA's Art to the Schools program enriches student understanding of the place of art and humanities in society. Thanks to the efforts of 56 volunteer docents like Weil, Art to the Schools reached more than 26,000 students in 281 schools last year.

Students at St. Raphael draw, and create art during a one hour class offered each week, but they seldom have the opportunity to learn about art and its history.

Yearly trips to the DIA with her parents instilled Rakozy with an appreciation for the art, and American, Mexican and South American Indian culture. "Art is so much more than creating art," said Rakozy. "You can learn about a culture by studying their art. The students need to know there are resources like the DIA at hand."

In addition to native cultures, the DIA's Art to the Schools program offers presentations on African, Asian, Egyptian, European, American and modern art. Rakozy follows up the annual talks by DIA docents with a class trip to the museum. Nearly all of the students learned about art and history during previous tours of the DIA led by volunteer docents. When asked what they remembered from the trip, students replied the suits of armor and Bruegel's "The Wedding Dance" were their favorites.

"As far as the native cultures, they aren't exposed enough to it," said Rakozy. "A lot of children don't know we have a large Indian population in Michigan that has a rich cultural heritage."

Using the "Visual Thinking" approach to art education, Weil encouraged students to observe and develop critical thinking skills.

This "learning to look" teaching technique, which instills students with confidence to independently appreciate and enjoy art, was part of Weil's 10 months of intense training in art history required by the DIA's education department.

"You remember more when you think about what you've seen, what is it, what was it used for," said Weil, an Art to the Schools speaker for 20 years.

After Weil showed the final slide, students responded enthusiastically when asked what they liked about the presentation.

"I liked the way she let us talk about it. It was more exciting," said Genevieve Prusatis of Garden City.

"You can learn about how they lived," added Sara Smythe of Westland..

"I like the Mayan stuff," said Tom Grant of Garden City. "It's pretty cool. You wouldn't be able to find stuff like this these days."

"I liked how the slides of the art are all joined together and you can see how they relate. It makes it easier to understand," said Mallory Gentile of Garden City.

Sydney Korth of Westland visits the DIA because her family has a membership in the DIA's Founders Society. "My mom likes art so we go to the museum a lot," Korth said.

The DIA Art to the Schools Program is looking for volunteers. For more information, or an application call (313) 833-9178.

"We consistently receive more requests for presentations than we can fill," said Art to the Schools vice-chairman Barbara Wojcik of Farmington Hills. "There's an infinite number of talks we can give. If we could get 10 new volunteers, who are available 20 times during the school year, we could offer hundreds of additional programs."

Volunteers critical to keeping museum open

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

In 1991, when the Detroit Institute of Arts was in its darkest days after Gov. John Engler cut nearly $7 million in state appropriations from the museum's budget, Gallery Service volunteers stepped in to reopen more than 100 galleries.

Today, the 390 Gallery Service volunteers account for just one of the eight branches, which comprise the DIA's Volunteer Committee. In 1996, 1,200 volunteers worked 77,680 hours, or the equivalent of 35 full-time employees.

These Volunteer Committee members provided gallery and Founders Society membership information, served as Art to the Schools and museum docents and staff aides, spoke to various community organizations, and worked as sales and stock staff in museum shops at the DIA, Twelve Oaks and Somerset Malls.

According to Dianne Abel, DIA associate director of development for volunteer services and special events, the museum needs at least 180 more volunteers to fill a variety of positions on eight service committees.

Anyone interested in volunteering should plan to attend an orientation session 12:30 p.m. Sunday, March 16, in the Lecture Hall. For more information, call (313) 833-0247.

"The need for volunteers is critical to operating the museum," said Abel. "We have a vast array of areas where volunteers are needed. If you have the time, we have the spot for you."

The Livonia, Plymouth and Redford Symphony orchestras are building bridges to reach future generations of musicians with programs that nurture and encourage a lifelong love affair with music.

At spring concerts on March 15, the Livonia and Plymouth orchestras will spotlight young artists.

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, under conductor Russell Reed, joins in a partnership with 35 string players from Plymouth and Canton middle and high schools to present "March Musical Madness."

The program ranges from the Classicism of Mozart to the Post Romantic style of Richard Strauss. In celebration of the partnership between the schools and PSO, children from kindergarten to the 12th grade will be admitted free.

"It's the first time we've done a real partnership and took a group of students plus the PSO's 50 strings," said Reed. "It's interesting to hear that many strings all together."

Reed, a retired music professor taught music in public schools for 22 years before becoming orchestra conductor at Eastern Michigan University.

"It's important to the students because they can see string playing can be a lifelong endeavor from high school through 91 years old," said Reed in reference to the PSO's oldest member, cellist Louise Bradley. "They'll have to play with more mature players. It's going to motivate them to pursue music more seriously."

A former student of Reed's at EMU, Debbie Stearns conducts the Plymouth Canton Schools middle and high school orchestras. To prepare for the March 15 concert, her student string players, not only participated in clinics with Reed, but also attended evening rehearsals with the PSO for the last four weeks.

"We're really excited," said Debbie Stearns, Plymouth Canton Educational Park Orchestra conductor. "The new trend in education is to get the community involved with the students and vice versa. It's important for them to experience what it's like to be a professional musician and also to be introduced to the orchestra in their community."

Also on the PSO's guest roster is Bryan Kennedy, a French horn player. A member of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra from 1982 to 1995, Kennedy is an associate professor of horn at the University of Michigan School of Music. In conjunction with the PSO's partnership with young string players, Kennedy, a two-time Heidenleben International Horn Competition prize winner, will conduct a school clinic for horn players.

"It's part of his contract," said Reed. "We're committed to helping school music programs as much as we can. Even though we have limited resources, the PSO's whole mission is to help people understand and enjoy music. It's not just President Clinton building bridges (to the next century). All of us are trying to build bridges to future generations."

A New Attitude

In addition to showcasing the Young Artist Competition's first place winner in the piano category, Livonia Symphony Orchestra conductor Volodymyr Schesiuk is presenting several works never performed before by the LSO.

Although the LSO has performed Dvorak's "Symphony No. 9" (New World Symphony) before, this is the first time the audience will be able to hear the orchestra play the composer's "Symphony No. 8."

"Why play 'Symphony No. 9' when you can turn the radio on and hear it?" said Volodymyr Schesiuk.

"I love the music of 'Symphony No. 8.' It's full of sunshine, full of new life. In history, many composers were not happy. Dvorak was very happy. His music reflects everything happy and warm."

Of course, the much anticipated performance of the evening will feature Karl Shymanovitz, one of the first place winners in the LSO's 19th annual Young Artists Competition held last May at Madonna University in Livonia.

A 17-year old junior at Cousino High School in Warren, Shymanovitz will play "Concerto in D-flat minor for Piano and Orchestra" by Aram Katchaturian, an Armenian-born composer who lived most of his life in Moscow. It is the concerto which won Shymanovitz top honors in the piano category at the LSO's statewide competition. A total of $4,500 in cash prizes was awarded to first and second place winners in three separate categories: piano, instrumental and voice.

"The competition fits one of the objects of the symphony to outreach fine music to young people and embrace them in the arts, and to find new talent in the state," said former Livonia Mayor Robert Bennett, chairman of the biennial competition.

Already an award-winning pianist, Shymanovitz began music studies at age six. In middle school, he taught himself to play oboe. For the last year, he's played oboe with the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra. A two-time winner of the University of Michigan All-State Interlochen Scholarship for piano, Shymanovitz continues to study privately with Susan Witucki.

"I was excited to win the Young Artist Competition because I was competing against college students," said Shymanovitz.

The young pianist attended his first rehearsal with the LSO on March 3. He looks forward to performing the concerto.

"I love this concerto and love performing with this orchestra," said Shymanovitz.

Another young artist performing at this concert is violinist Xiang Gao. Joining the LSO for the two final concerts of the season, 24-year-old Gao serves as LSO concertmaster. Gao graduates from U-M School of Music with a master degree in violin performance this spring.

Irish Eyes

Although the Redford Civic Symphony will not feature any young artists during its March 16 concert at Thurston High School, founder/conductor John Gajec has consistently spotlighted students.

"Whenever we can get students from South Redford or Redford Union Schools or choirs from the schools to perform at our concerts we do. Until they cut the budgets of school music programs, we frequently featured young musicians," said Gajec.

Since everyone is Irish on St. Patrick's Day, the Redford Civic Symphony will present a free cabaret concert with guest artists the Ford Tempos (a vocal group affiliated with the Ford Motor Company Chorus). There will be an Irish sing-a-long, which includes such favorites such as "Danny Boy," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," "Gaelic Blessing," and "Puttin' on the Ritz" making this concert a fun way to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

"The whole concert is going to be centered around St. Patrick," said Gajec, adding the Redford Civic Symphony will also perform Baroque music by Venetian composer Vivaldi as well as excerpts from "Finnian's Rainbow."

Museum Docent committee, found volunteering as a DIA docent so exciting that she returned to Wayne State University to earn a master's degree in art history. A professor of art history at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, Evans teaches the "Survey of World Art" course as part of the DIA's 10-month training program for museum and Art to the Schools docents.

"Our primary function as museum docents is to give tours to school children from preschool to 12th grade even on Tuesdays when the museum is closed," said Evans. "Our aim is to introduce the students to the arts and get them excited about it. It's hard work, but we love it. The kids are fun. The only requirement is to love children and like art."

Docent vice-chairman Elaine Adams of Bloomfield Hills also enjoys taking school children from as far away as the Upper Peninsula and Alpena on museum tours. Adams specializes in DIA tours of the ancient world of Greece, Mesopotamia and Rome.

"The children love the mummies; they're really fascinated with the mummies," said Elaine Adams. "At the end when I ask 'Was the museum what you expected?' they say they thought it would be all paintings. But the DIA is so much more. After seeing the sculpture, pottery and weavings, they begin to have a feel for the culture."

A former banker with a degree in communication, Adams is proof volunteers need not be art history majors or artists to become a museum docent.

"We have to know all that we can about the art, but the 'Survey of World Art' course brings everyone up to speed," said Adams. "The education is just incredible, and we're constantly being exposed to the collection and learning more."

In addition to introducing children to art, museum docents give public tours 1 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 1 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. Sundays.

"We have a tremendous need for volunteers," said Helga Wise, chairman of the 130-member museum docent committee.

"Our museum docents are currently studying and reading all kinds of books in preparation for the 'Images in Ivory' exhibition so when people ask questions, they have the answers.

"We'll need even more volunteers for the 'Splendors of Ancient Egypt' exhibition in July that spans an unprecedented period of time (from the predynastic period to the seventh century A.D.) with over 207 objects. It will take up all of the modern galleries."

Museum docent Judy Lewis of Plymouth agrees with Wise about the need for volunteers especially for the upcoming Egyptian art exhibition.

"They don't have to have the 10-month training that museum and Art to the Schools docents have," said Lewis, a longtime volunteer for the arts. Lewis currently chairs the exhibition committee of the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

"We'll need gallery service volunteers, staff aides, museum shop help, and people to host information tables for Founders Society membership. They can get their feet wet and then think about becoming a docent."

demonstrates her pen and ink skills. Cassisi's artist's statement reveals her respect for art created on a computer.

"The computer is a wonderful tool for the artist," she said. "I believe you still have to have the knowledge and training of creating art manually and more importantly you have to have 'the eye' for it. Any tool an artist uses is only an extension of their creativity."

Suzanne Dykas earned an associate degree at Henry Ford Community College in Dearborn. Like Cassisi, her professional work experience as a graphic artist preceded her years at Madonna University.

A car illustration in marker and fashion illustration in colored pencil show Dykas is skilled in many mediums. Not to be missed are her black and white photographs of a train yard.

Fuller-Arment thinks the five years she studied at Madonna University was a growing experience. As a freshman, Arment worked in a realistic style. As the years progressed, she loosened up, and now places more emphasis on line and structure. Line is very important in her black and white photographs, which are at once thought provoking and mysterious.

'Richard III' moves fast

BY LEANNE ROGERS
STAFF WRITER

For those of you who like your Shakespeare fast moving there is the 1996 version of "Richard III" featuring Ian McKellen as the conniving would-be king.

This film, with a running time of well under two hours, is a streamlined adaptation that sets the battle for the throne in the 1930s and sets Richard up as a fascist leader, complete with his own Brown Shirts and mini Nuremburg rally.

The story opens during civil war as the Yorks are completing their attempt to unseat the Lancaster king and replace him with their preferred monarch Edward. Leading the victorious York army is Edward's youngest brother Richard. Once the less-than robust Edward is on the throne, Richard sets about eliminating the human obstacles between himself and the crown, including another brother and two young nephews.

ALEX BAILEY/UNITED ARTISTS

Shakespeare's Richard is hunchbacked with a withered arm. As he explains, if he cannot play the lover, he'll play the villain. In that statement, at least, Richard is being truthful. He is nothing if not ruthless in climbing to the top of the heap, utterly lacking any bond of family, affection or even loyalty to his allies. He's like a railroad train that won't leave it's course until he is violently derailed.

The shift of the story to the 1930s is an effective device. Richard's machinations certainly can compare with those of Hitler or Mussolini as they rose to power. He will tolerate no dissent, a true totalitarian. Rather than armor, Richard is first seen in battle wearing a gas mask armed with a pistol.

Some scenes are effectively staged such as Richard's opening speech ("Now is the winter of our discontent...") which is actually made as a speech during a party celebrating his brother's victory.

The scene where Richard decides to seduce and marry the widow of the crown prince he recently has unseated and killed takes place in the morgue but still over the dead man's corpse. The biggest problem with that scene is that McKellen lacks the oily charm that Laurence Olivier brought to the role, making it hard to believe people could be taken in so easily by him.

McKellen and director Richard Loncraine adapted the play for the film. Another problem with the film is that it seems excessively compressed timewise. The feeling is almost like events which occurred over several years happen over at most a couple of months.

An interesting exercise that doesn't really come completely together.

Wildlife Art Festival celebrates conservation

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

On an early morning drive through North Carolina, Heiner Hertling experienced what many artists refer to as "the moment," an insightful realization when composition, lighting and mood intersect. Actually, after 25 years as a painter and sculptor, the prolific Hertling has had quite a few "moments."

On this day, Hertling suddenly stopped his car, pulled out his camera and took many photos of horses grazing as their steaming breath mingled with the morning haze. As soon as he got to his easel, Hertling transformed the inspiring sight to his best-selling painting, "Carolina Morning."

From Friday through Sunday, Hertling, a West Bloomfield resident, will be among 60 artists in the 14th Annual Michigan Wildlife Art Festival, held in the Southfield Pavilion. "Carolina Morning" will be one of Hertling's 48 images displayed at the festival, including 20 new works. Along with painters, this year's festival features woodcarving, photography, bronze sculpture and glass artists.

Sponsored by the Michigan Wildlife Habitat Foundation, the festival is a major fund-raising event for the nonprofit conservation group.

The festival has grown along with the popularity of wildlife and landscape art, said Dennis Fijalkowski, executive director of the Habitat Foundation, which claims a 35,000-name database. Fourteen years ago, 35 artists displayed a narrow range of wildlife subjects. Today, nearly twice as many artists will be on hand to reflect the growing diversity of the genre, from realism to Monet-like impressionism.

Until recently, wildlife art wasn't widely considered as "serious art." That's changed dramatically, said Fijalkowski. "Just because it's affordable doesn't mean that it's not good art," he said.

While early wildlife art started with decoy carvings and paintings that appealed to hunters, the more recent subjects reflect the tastes of a broader audience.

"I've always had a love for nature," said Hertling, a seven-time conservation stamp winner, including the Michigan Duck Stamp award in 1992.

Readers offer their tips on traveling with children

BY BARRY JENSEN
STAFF WRITER

Take these along when you travel

- Drinking water
- Pillow for each passenger
- Beach towels
- 9" TV with VCR and cigarette lighter adapter
- Magnetic/board games
- Children's books with accompanying tapes
- Lap board
- Colored pencils
- Walkman
- Hand-held computer games
- Play Doh
- Action figures/dolls
- Ball/Frisbee
- Food box: tissue, toilet paper, paper plates, paper towels, utensils, sharp knife, plastic glasses, flexible straws, plastic bags and twist ties, pretzels, goldfish crackers (avoid sweets), breakfast drink, sweet rolls

Because the summer driving season is not that far away, we offered several tips for traveling in a car with children. Readers responded with their own tips – and suggested improvements in some of the tips we gave.

Marjorie Nanian Mugerian of Farmington Hills suggested one we never thought of: Install a nine-inch TV/VCR combination with an adapter cord so it can be plugged into the cigarette lighter.

"I can't tell you what a blessing it was to have children watch video tapes while driving through a snow storm in Ohio!" Mugerian explained.

Judith Williams of Livonia shared a whole raft of tips. She echoed Mugerian in recommending electronic gear, only in Williams' case, she suggested the most important item is a radio/cassette player and head phones for each child.

"From the time our children were 2, we bought them children's books with accompanying tape cassettes. They are a great help in teaching children to read."

Hand-held computer games are good, "but only the kind where you can control or eliminate the volume," she said. Having sat in the same living room with a child playing a hand-held Donkey Kong game with no volume control, I can imagine how much more stressful stupid little tunes played on tinny speakers must be.

Williams recommended Play Doh and miniature cooking/baking utensils, especially for air travel. Every airline employee she has ever dealt with liked this idea for keeping the kids busy and out of the other passengers' hair.

Always get up and go to bed at the driver's normal waking time. (We had recommended at the child's normal waking time.) "Children are very flexible and can sleep easily in the car. It is very important for the driver to be well rested."

Also, we usually traveled with just one child. That obviously left out an important part of car travel with children: keeping the peace.

"If you have a van or station wagon, load the car in such a way that you keep the better part of two seats vacant. Children must sometimes be separated to avoid conflicts." Or at least put the food box, cooler, pillows or towels between the children to create two private spaces.

"Pack the suitcases so you only have to bring one of them into the motel. Remember, you'll have to bring in the food box, cooler and children's toys."

"Remove toys from their commercial packaging and store in plastic bags. Have a canvas tote bag or shopping bag for each child's toys. These prevents toys from being strewn all over the car when not in use and are very easy to carry."

Children should be treated as people who can make the trip better, not just as passengers who are to be catered to:

"When your children have their driver's licenses, let them take turns driving. Interstate driving is much different than city driving; and while this may slow you up when they are first learning, it's a valuable skill to teach your children."

"Let older children help fill the gas tank, check air pressure in tires, check and add oil and clean windows. Allow older children to read hotel/motel guides and help plan the night's stop, based on driving time and speed limits."

Recommended take-alongs:

Colored pencils, never crayons. (If an adult or responsible child is in charge of it, a battery-operated pencil sharpener. This can be in the trunk and used to sharpen pencils at the next rest stop. It can be emptied at the rest stop so that there is little danger of having shaving scattered throughout the car.)

Lap boards. (If you are going to have writing tools, you have to have something to write on.)

Action figures/dolls.

Magnetic/static games, such as chess, checkers, Scrabble.

"Always bring drinking water."

She suggest replacing our suggested blankets with extra large beach towels. Sounds good to me.

"These tips worked extremely well for many years and thousands of miles. The efforts we put in to accommodating the children were well worth it. We enjoyed traveling and looked forward to it every summer, Christmas break and Easter vacation. Our children are now married adults who love to travel and are teaching their spouses to enjoy it also."

TRAVEL

Visitors to China remember the people best

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

Lenore and Joe Baum of Farmington Hills walked along the Great Wall, entered the gates of the Forbidden City and waited in line at Mao's tomb. But their sharpest memories of China are a language lesson in Shanghai, a school for the deaf in Jinan and ballroom dancing in the park at the Joyous Garden in Suzhou.

The Baums were part of a people-to-people "Citizens Diplomacy" tour of China in September. The 70-person tour was put together by the Human Awareness Institute and subsidized by the Chinese government.

Lenore Baum, who operates Lenore's Natural Cuisine, a vegetarian cooking school, said the trip cost only $1,900 apiece and included first-class hotel, meals, train and plane transportation.

It was a trip that inspired Joe Baum, a validations manager at GM Truck, to send a holiday letter enthusing about the friendliness of the Chinese people.

"Though our Chinese was limited to "shay-shay" (hello) or "dzi jen" (good-bye), we were easily accepted with friendly smiles and interest everywhere we went. Before we came to China, it was very mysterious because we didn't know much about it. Now we feel a bonding with many of the people and guides that we spent some time with. We feel more like we are on this world together than apart."

Chinese dance: These kindergarten teachers in Chibao performed a dance for American visitors.

Dr. Stan Dale of San Mateo, Calif., heads Human Awareness, which offers courses on love and human sexuality. This trip, Dale, who is highly regarded in China, received an honorary degree in Shanghai.

Lenore Baum said Dale's reputation opened doors to the group away from the standard tourists venues including a kindergarten, a prestigious high school, the school for the deaf and blind, a home for the elderly, a hospital and a farming village.

The trip began with teeming Shanghai – with 14 million people, it is China's largest city.

"It was like another world – donkeys pulling handmade carts next to old trucks and tens of thousands of bicycles," Lenore said, while leafing through colorful photographs of scenes from Chinese life.

Though the streets were kept constantly cleaned, sanitation in China is not the same as in the United States. She said modern plumbing facilities such as toilets are available only in the best hotels and most popular tour areas. But, she said, the people seemed healthy and happy.

"In the streets we'd walk by and say "shay-shay" (hello) and we'd get smiles from the little kids and the old people," she said. "Old people in Mao jackets would bow to us. We would get up early in the morning and walk in the street. People would be surprised to see us."

Baum said she was somewhat prepared for the trip. She said she learned about 15 Chinese words, reread some novels about China and drew on her experience teaching Chinese cooking and the philosophy behind it.

She was interested in how the Chinese buy and cook their food. She visited many open air markets. The group was served a "banquet" at every meal. But, she said Chinese sanitary conditions made their open air market vegetables suspect.

But it is the rich people-to-people memories that made lasting impressions. At the kindergarten in Chibao, teachers and students performed colorful dances. At the Joyous Garden the Baums came upon a group doing Western ballroom dancing and they joined in.

"We had the most fun doing that," said Lenore Baum.

They also came upon a group of people practicing their English, as Joe Baum described in his holiday letter:

"On Sunday afternoons, many Chinese people go to the 'English corner' here to practice their English. Lenore and I went there and were immediately recognized as Americans; they surrounded each of us separately: age ranges from 9 to 60. It was so special to have that many faces giving us their full attention and being so interested in what we like to do, where and how we live and what we think (about bombing in Iraq, the November elections). They were very well informed about what is going on outside of their country."

In one small town the visitors were greeted by firecrackers, streamers and 2,000 people. At the royal village they were treated to a 27-course feast, each family hosting eight of the visitors. The meals were cooked over open fires in shacks away from the main houses.

The Baums learned about acupuncture and massage at a hospital, visited a tourist guide school and, of course, took in all the big sights. One special place was Confucius' hometown, where dozens of buildings are preserved to honor the great philosopher.

It was the spirit of Confucius that remained.

"They had a community spirit, real family ties, warm, loving, happy, satisfied with the simple things of life, not materialistic," said Lenore Baum. "Most believe in Confucius and his teachings of honoring ancestors and living right. It was a throwback to another century. It was better than the U.S. I didn't see any stress."

Canton Panthers reign

The Canton Panthers, an under-eight boys soccer team, finished first in their age group in the competitive division of the Winter I Session at the Wide World Sports in Ann Arbor.

The Panthers were 8-0-0 for the season, outscoring their opponents 68-4.

Team members are Gregory Bolton, Matthew Boylan, Mark Calabrese, Sean Dillon, Garrett Fishaw, Alec Hahn, Jeremy Henderson, Rebecca Houdek, LIndsey Iseler, Kevin Jozefczak, Christopher Leonetti, Daniel Popoff, all of Canton, and Jeremy Chestnut of Westland.

The team is coached by Vic Dillon and Randy Houdek.

College standouts

•Bowling Green State's hockey team had never held Michigan State scoreless in their series, covering 70 games dating back to 1971 — until March 1.

That's when Bob Petrie combined with Chad Alban to blank the Spartans in a 0-0 overtime tie. Petrie, a senior from Plymouth Canton HS, made 30 saves, including 14 in the second period.

The shutout was the third in Petrie's career with the Falcons. He ranks sixth all-time at BGSU with 46 career victories, and his 3.426 goals-against average also is sixth-best in school history. For the season, Petrie is 11-9-4 overall with a 3.50 goals-against average and an 87.9 save percentage.

•Central Michigan University's men's track team completed its indoor season at the University of Michigan March 1.

Among the winners for the Chippewas was freshman Jared Biniecki, a freshman from Plymouth Salem. Biniecki won the 3,000-meter run in 8:37.31.

•Senior pitcher Kelly Holmes, from Plymouth Canton, helped fifth-ranked University of Michigan's softball team to a 9-3-1 start. Holmes collected the 19th shutout of her career when she blanked Nebraska 2-0 March 1.

Holmes ranks fifth on the Wolverines all-time shutout list.

Defensively outdone

Salem stops Canton to earn a district crown

Just five-and-a-half weeks ago, Salem was thrashed by Canton by 15 points — and a key player for the Chiefs was missing. But in the state tournament, things can change drastically.

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

Out-defense them.

In an emotional, hard-fought, in-your-face district final Friday at Northville HS, Plymouth Salem did just that to upend two-time defending district champ Plymouth Canton 49-43.

The Rocks, now 18-5, advance to the Class A regional to meet Detroit Central at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Southfield-Lathrup. Canton ends its season at 16-7.

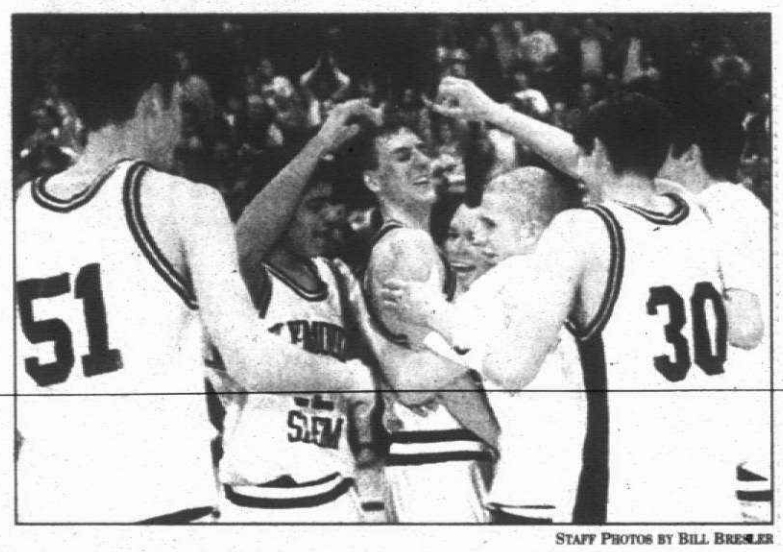
The Salem defense, which surrendered 62 points in a 15-point loss to Canton Jan. 28, made the necessary adjustments to frustrate the Chiefs this time.

"We got specific assignments on every player," said Salem point guard Andy Power. "We just did what the coach said."

And that, according to Salem coach Bob Brodie, was: "Play (Donte) Scott straight up, lay off (Nick) Hurley, and play (Rob) Johnson tough inside.

"They knew what they had to do on certain people. The kids did their jobs tonight."

That they did. And while the Rocks' defensive effort wasn't perfect, from the second quarter on it was darn close.



STAFF PHOTOS BY BILL BRESLER

Well-deserved jubilation: There were few shots that went uncontested in Friday's district final, as Canton's Joe Cortellini (far left) proved to Salem's Nate Gray (50, at left). But in the end, it was the Rocks who did the celebrating.

Scott started the game as if he might be the difference. The 6-foot-3 point guard, who missed the first Salem-Canton game with a knee injury, was responsible for staking Canton to an 18-11 lead after one quarter, pouring in nine points.

The Chiefs converted 6-of-12 shots in that first period. They never came close to matching it the rest of the night, making only 11-of-35 from then on (31.4 percent) for a total of 17-of-47 (36.2 percent).

Salem was 19-of-48 from the field (39.6 percent).

"We couldn't score," said Canton coach Dan Young. "We've got to hold 'em to 20 to win."

The Rocks weren't exactly on fire offensively. They made just 8-of-25 first-half shots (32 percent); still, they were able to narrow the halftime gap to 24-19, thanks to nine points from Power.

The momentum changed in the third quarter to favor Salem. The Rocks limited Canton to 3-of-12 shooting in a 15-6 spurt to go up 34-30 entering the last period.

"We got a great effort in the second half," said Brodie. "At halftime, we just told them to stick to what you're doing, we're not going to do anything different."

After Andres Lopez — who led Salem with 17 points, eight rebounds and four assists — put the Rocks ahead with a basket with 1:16 left in the third quarter, Canton never caught up.

"We're kind of a stay-ahead team," said Canton's Young. "We've got to be in front. If we've got to start putting up a lot of threes and play catch-up, we're in trouble.

"It's disappointing. We had a hard time scoring, and that was the difference."

The Chiefs, who totaled just 12 points in the second and third quarters on 6-of-24 shooting (25 percent), were a bit better in the fourth. A pair of three-pointers by Hurley helped keep them close; then back-to-back baskets by Johnson and Scott pulled them to within a field goal, 43-41 with 1:35 left.

Salem, however, wasn't about to sit on its lead. Power took a kick-out pass on the left wing and buried a 17-foot jumper to push the Rocks' lead to four.

The Chiefs still had chances, but couldn't convert. Matt Ammons missed a layup, Joe Cortellini misfired on a triple-try, and three shots by Scott bounced out in the last minute.

Salem added to Canton's woes by making 4-of-5 free throws in the final 31.9 seconds.

Power finished with 13 points, five steals and three assists, while Bhavin Patel chipped in with 11 points.

Canton got 15 points, seven rebounds and three assists from Scott; 12 points, seven boards, three assists, two steals and two blocked shots from Hurley; and nine points, nine rebounds and two blocks from Johnson.

"This is a big win for the kids, to move on to that next level," said Salem's Brodie.

And what should a young team like the Rocks — just two seniors, Lopez and Nate Gray — expect in the regional?

Neither Salem nor Canton have fared well once they leave the districts. In the last four years, Detroit Pershing has beaten Salem and Canton twice each. The Doughboys won't be there this year; instead, the Rocks must face the team that beat Pershing — Central.

"We're looking forward to it," said Lopez confidently. "We practiced all summer against those city guys. We're ready for them."

If Salem's as ready as it was against Canton, it could be interesting indeed.

Shamrock rallies can't catch Redford

DISTRICT BASKETBALL

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK
STAFF WRITER

A shakeup in Detroit Redford's starting lineup dropped Redford Detroit Catholic Central right out of the state high school basketball tournament.

Detroit Redford held off two second-half Catholic Central surges Friday night to post a 53-48 victory over the Shamrocks and win the CC Class A district.

The Huskies, 15-6, advance to a 5 p.m. Tuesday night date at Southfield against Detroit Murray-Wright in the start of the regional phase of the Michigan High School Athletic Association tournament. Catholic Central ended with a 15-8 record.

Redford played poised, polished basketball and used what the good teams use — defense — to avoid falling down when it stumbled.

"We were good at the beginning of the season," Redford coach Derrick McDowell said. "After the Christmas tournament we were struggling, but we were winning.

"We had momentum going into the (Detroit Public School League) playoffs. But in the semi-finals against Denby, we were dead. We didn't come to play. Plus the consolation game.

"But after the Denby game, we started playing different people. (Junior guard Kenneth) Tinsley played more minutes in this game than he did in the entire rest of the year.

"And (sophomore) Arnett Sydes was playing with the junior varsity."

The Huskies had a good game plan. They wanted to pressure the Shamrock guards and deny center Chris Young the ball. They front Young, double-teamed him and got good weakside help down low.

"If we were going to lose," McDowell said, "we were going to lose to one of their other guys. Marc McDonald and Young weren't going to beat us.

"We didn't want Young to catch the ball down low. And if he did, we wanted it to be away from the basket. In the second half he started getting the ball a little more and had a couple of nice spin moves."

Nice spin moves with Michigan coach Steve Fisher watching, too. Fisher stood next to the wall near the end of the Catholic Central bench all game long.

"We started out slow," Shamrocks' coach Rick Coratti said. "And they're a good team. That was probably the best defense we played against all year.

"We couldn't get over the hump. That three they hit just before the half hurt."

CC trailed at the half, 23-11 after scoring just two points in the second quarter. CC cut the gap to 30-25 with 4:03 left in the third quarter but Redford closed the period 10-5.

The Shamrocks trimmed an 11-point deficit to 46-42 with 2:03 left and 47-45 with 1:29 to play but the Huskies made 5-of-6 free throws and picked up their defense to lead 52-47 with 36 seconds to play.

"We played better defense the second half," Coratti said. "But we couldn't capitalize on certain situations. We couldn't get over the hump."

McDonald didn't hit a three the whole game, ending with 12 points. Sophomore Nick Moore led CC with 16 points, Young scored 10, Matthew Martinez seven, Dave Lusky two and Josh DelCorvo one.

Omar Zeigler led Redford with 16 points, Jason Washington had 12, Jason Prater 10, Tinsley seven, Gino Jones four and Aaren Watts and Sydes had two apiece.

"I don't think Omar Zeigler gets enough credit for what he does," McDowell said of his left-hander, who can play all five positions and play them well. "He plays defense, rebounds, passes and scores inside."

He also dribbled the ball near center court for some 60 seconds with some three minutes remaining in the first half.

CC missed a triple after Washington made one to make it 20-11. McDowell hollared to his team to pull the ball back while the Shamrocks were in their zone.

They did. Zeigler stood near mid-court dribbling, until McDowell told him to quit tiring himself out and let one of his teammates take a

Brown-led Lakers surprise Harrison for title

BY DAN O'MEARA

DISTRICT FINAL

Pierre Brown let it be known he's back playing basketball for West Bloomfield, and the Lakers are back in a regional tournament as a result.

The 6-foot senior scored a game-high 26 points while leading the Lakers to a 61-59 victory over Farmington Harrison and their first district championship in four years Friday.

It was only the third game Brown has played after missing five straight at the end of the regular season while he recovered from mononucleosis.

"I'm a streak player," Brown said. "When I start making them, I don't miss. I like penetrating better than taking the jumper, but if the jumper is there I'm going to take it."

West Bloomfield (9-11) will play Birmingham Seaholm in the Class A regional Tuesday at Southfield-Lathrup. Tipoff is 7 p.m.

Brown, who scored most of his points on back-door layups and quick drives to the basket, was 10-of-17 from the field and 6-of-9 at the free-throw line.

He was 0-for-3 and scoreless in the first quarter, but he started lighting it up with 12 points in the second quarter to help the Lakers rally from a 16-7 deficit after one quarter.

"I don't know if there's a quicker player in Oakland County," West Bloomfield coach Tim Domke said. "Speed kills and he's got it."

The senior trio of Garon Oseff, Ronald Levin and Troy Armstrong added 11, 10 and six points for the Lakers, respectively.

Junior Jared Hopkins scored 14 points to pace Harrison (17-5), which had hoped to win its first district title.

Junior Matt Derocher and senior Aaron Iaconelli had eight points each.

The Hawks outscored West Bloomfield 11-2 to end the first quarter and take a nine-point lead.

Hopkins extended it to 21-11 with five straight points in the second, but the game started to unravel for Harrison after that.

The Hawks scored only three points on free throws in the final 5 1/2 minutes of the half and made nine of its 24 turnovers in the second period.

Brown was 5-of-6 from the floor and 2-of-2 at the line in that quarter as the Lakers rallied within a point at halftime, 24-23.

"In the second quarter, we played with no courage," Harrison coach Mike Teachman said. "We dazzled them in the first quarter by running the offense. In the second quarter, we just stopped.

"We had some defensive breakdowns. Brown was the one getting open on the back door away from the trap. We told and told them; they wouldn't drop. They played the mid-court line instead of the basket (on the half-court trap)."

Oseff hit a three to begin the second half and put West Bloomfield ahead. The Lakers kept rolling with a 22-14 advantage in the third quarter.

The Lakers upped their lead to 45-33 behind Oseff's nine points and Brown's seven in the quarter.

Four threes by Iaconelli (two), Derocher and Jerrard Johnson allowed the Hawks to stay within seven at the end of the period, 45-38.

Harrison rallied to hold a two-point lead midway in the fourth, 53-51. Armstrong and Randy Wexelman gave the Lakers a 55-53 lead, but Hopkins tied it with two free throws with 1:03 left.

West Bloomfield spread its offense, and Harrison chose to put Oseff on the line with 46 seconds left.

He made the first, but Brown grabbed the rebound after the missed second, which led to Levin being fouled.

Levin exchanged free throws with Hopkins, then made two more for a 60-57 lead. Hopkins scored on a rebound with 2.6 seconds.

Brown made the second of two free throws with .07 on the clock, and Harrison didn't have time to set up another shot.

Zebras battle their way past Romulus in district final

Wayne Memorial took a licking, but kept on ticking Friday night in the state Class A boys basketball tournament.

Although bruised and battered, the Zebras survived a tooth-and-nail struggle with Mega Conference Red Division rival Romulus, beating the Eagles for the third time this season in district championship game before an overflow crowd at Garden City, 52-47.

In one of the roughest and most intense battles witnessed in recent memory, Wayne (21-1 overall) used a 19-15 scoring edge in the final quarter to put away the determined Eagles (18-4).

The win advances Wayne into Wednesday's regional semifinal at Jackson against Temperance Bedford (8-15). Game time is 7 p.m.

Wayne was literally put to the Timex watch test for 32 minutes.

With officials Tom Poma and Gary Jenkins really "letting them play," the game deteriorated into a take-no-prisoners approach. It was a night filled with hand-to-hand combat and sparring underneath the basket.

There were few uncontested layups without somebody paying the price.

Lorenzo Guess grabbed Karl Callaway's missed free throw and scored on a critical rebound with only 52 seconds left to give Wayne a 46-42 cushion.

The Zebras then held Romulus off by making six consecutive free throws — two each by Rodney Hurst, Lorenzo Guess and twin brother LaVelle Guess during the final 37 seconds — to offset a desperation three-point banker from Melvin Hicks with 26 seconds remaining.

Lorenzo, the 6-3 senior point-guard who led Wayne to the semifinals a year ago and quarterfinals as a sophomore, finished with a game-high 20 points despite an off shooting night (eight for 26).

And he had the battle scars to prove it afterwards, displaying a nasty 20-inch scar down his chest.

"We wanted to be intense and we wanted to play hard, but we were a little impatient with our shots," said the all-stater. "Tonight we missed some shots we normally make because we weren't following through. We were rushing it and they weren't falling."

Richard Rashad and LaVelle Guess contributed 13 and 11 points, respectively, for the winners.

The Zebras made only 19 of 56 shots from the floor (33.9 percent), but Romulus wasn't much better at 29.8 percent (17 of 54).

With Wayne clinging to a 33-32 lead after three quarters, coach Chuck Henry went to spread offense and two players came off the bench to deliver Brian Williams and Deon Willis.

Their ball-handling and passing cleared the heavily congested lane area and opened things up.

The strategy helped Wayne mount a seven-point lead, 44-37, with only 3:05 left to play after Rodney Hurst converted a three-point play.

"We couldn't get our kids into a settled state offensively," Henry said. "We took a lot of quick shots. Maybe it was because there was so much noise, so much emotion and the intense atmosphere. The spread offense dictated what kind of shot we wanted."

Williams, who came on late in the third quarter after Lorenzo Guess picked up his third foul, was able to break down the Romulus defense off the dribble.

"They couldn't handle him in that matchup," Henry said. "He made some big, big plays off the spread."

Hicks was the only Romulus player to score in double figures with 13. Brandon DeYampert and Lewis Atkins each added nine, while Reggie Kirkland had eight.

"We had a couple of shots rattled out and on some penetration drives we didn't get the calls, but it's not the officials' fault," Romulus coach Guy DelGuidice said. "It was too physical, but I told my kids at halftime (trailing 24-21) they were letting us play and we were not going to back off."

Guess, who slipped around Reggie Kirkland on the free throw line for the pivotal rebound basket with 52 seconds left, made the definitive play of the night.

"I can't fault Reggie — those things happen," DeGuidice said. "I'm proud of the kids. We made number 20 (Guess) work for every point. We couldn't have played much harder."

Wayne's veteran lineup, however, proved to be tough and resilient.

"We have four guys with 13 years of (varsity) experience," Henry said. "I know they'll be there, give it their best and be mentally ready.

"This was tough. I'm glad we don't have to play them a fourth time."

Seasons at an end for PCA, Agape

BASKETBALL

Just because you don't have size doesn't mean you can't stand tall.

Redford St. Agatha? Just two basketball players over 6-feet tall.

Yet St. Agatha came up big down the stretch Tuesday night to take a 71-63 victory from Plymouth Christian Academy.

The win put the Aggies, 16-5, into Friday night's Class D district finals at Southfield Franklin Road Christian.

"We got the ball to the people we were supposed to," St. Agatha coach John Fenbert said. "In the past we didn't do that too well. These kids do.

"We have four seniors. They've been around a long time. They're not going to panic."

But St. Agatha wasn't the only team that stood tall: So did Plymouth Christian Academy, which came into the Michigan High School Athletic Association tournament game with a record that was a little on the short side at 7-13.

"We play in a tough league," Eagles' coach Paul Sauers said. "We played a lot of close games.

"But our kids never give up. As you could see."

There's seven feet of truth in that statement. The Eagles absorbed a 15-6 jolt at the start of the game yet rallied behind a triple from Mark Hovermale to cut the gap to 19-13 at the end of the first quarter.

And Chris DeRenzo, who stands all of 5-foot-8? That's his height, not the size of his heart.

"Their point guard killed us," Fenbert said. "He penetrated, and when our guys came up he hit the right man every time.

"We tried to get him to go to his right, but that's easier said than done. And he never tired out.

"We've got enough good athletes that we can run fresh kids at you. But he never got tired."

DeRenzo showed a nice knack for finding the open man as soon as the man was open. Sometimes before.

And like all the decent ones, he looked pass first and score second.

DeRenzo finished his high school career with an 11-assist game, 10 points and five steals.

Hovermale led PCA with 19 points, including four triples, while Scott Carty had 14. Nate Bryan had eight points while Tim Wright and junior Chris Brandon had six each.

Junior Ian Wincher paced St. Agatha with 22 points, 16 in the first half. Spencer Galloway contributed 19 and both the 6-2 Wincher and the 6-foot Galloway did the bulk of their scoring from layup range.

Another key contributor for Fenbert's team was sophomore Johnny Lomibao, who split time with Cole guarding DeRenzo and did an outstanding job of denying PCA's fine left-handed guard the ball at critical times in the fourth quarter.

"Our kids played their hearts out," Sauers said. "There were a couple of key possessions in the fourth quarter. We made a turnover and missed a layup. You can't do those things."

"They bottled up Spencer," Fenbert said, "which gave us some other things. Like Wes. He stepped it up big for us. He's only a sophomore and that was one of his better games."

PCA came out with eight unanswered points at the start of the second half to take a 39-38 lead. St. Agatha scored the last five points of the quarter to take a 54-50 lead.

A Bryan basket with 6:13 left tied the score, 55-55, but Galloway made a three-point play, Shaw hit a free throw, Galloway stole the ball and made a layup and Shaw drove the lane for another hoop to make it 63-55 with 4:54 left. The Eagles never recovered.

"We'll have to box out a lot better if we're going to win this thing," Fenbert said.

No matter. Just stand tall.

REDFORD ST. AGATHA 82, AGAPE 36: In Monday's district quarterfinal, the Aggies jumped out to leads of 19-11 and 36-19 en route to the easy victory.

Galloway scored 15 points and Wincher added 13 while Matt Major led Agape with 15.

CC finally ditched its zone but Redford played keep-away, missing a three but getting the ball back and having Tinsley nail a trey from the top of the key to make it 23-11 at the half.

"That was big in two ways," McDowell said. "First in killing that much time and we didn't have to sub. We had a chance to catch our breath.

"Then when that shot went in, it gave us a big lift."

Still, Catholic Central wasn't finished. But making only four three-point shots in the game really hurt, considering that is a big part of its offensive arsenal.

"We missed a free throw (trailing 46-42), got the ball back then lost the ball out of bounds," Coratti said. "That hurt."

The Shamrocks saw a good chance go down the drain with a minute to play. Trailing 49-45, they missed a shot, two free throws and another shot on one possession.

"In that situation, you've got to convert," Coratti said.

CC shot just 36 percent in the game (18-of-50), made 8-of-19 free throws and got 31 rebounds. Redford made 39 percent of its shots (16-of-41), got 34 rebounds and sank 18-of-35 free throws, including 11-for-22 in the fourth quarter.

Now it's on to the regionals for Redford. And on to spring sports for CC.

Borgess 81, Benedictine 65: Redford Bishop Borgess hopes this is a payback year.

Bishop Borgess went to the regionals last season only to lose by a point to Southgate Aquinas, a game the Spartans could well have won had a makeable shot fallen.

So what happens this year? Borgess gets another crack at Aquinas, thanks to a Friday night district final victory over Detroit Benedictine.

"The toughest part is yet to come," Spartans' coach Roosevelt Barnes said after his team improved to 15-8 with the district win in a game played at Harper Woods Notre Dame.

Aaron Jessup and Sam Hoskin scored 17 points apiece for Bishop Borgess, Durand Bynum added 15 and Kevin Jordan contributed 12.

Kenneth Taylor paced Benedictine with 23 points, including six triples, and Sam Davis had 18.

The Spartans jumped out on top, 19-11, after the first period and were ahead, 38-28, at the halfway point. They also won the final two quarters.

Hoskin made 5-of-7 free throws and used his 6-foot-7 height to score at will inside against shorter Benedictine. Jessup scored 11 of his points in the final period, including 3-of-4 from the line.

Bishop Borgess made 11-of-17 free throws while Benedictine sank 7-of-13.

Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher will host the Bishop Borgess-Aquinas rematch. The Spartans defeated the Raiders, 59-47, earlier this season in the Detroit Catholic League tournament.

TEN PIN ALLEY

Most of us are well aware of the services provided to the community by the Big Brothers-Big Sisters organization of metropolitan Detroit.

Now, bowlers can help by participating in the Bowl for Kids' Sake Fund and Friend Raiser, March 7, 8, 9, 15 and 16 at several area bowling centers including Thunderbird Lanes, 400 W. Maple Road, Troy.

Bowl for Kids' Sake is a bowlathon that raises funds to support Big Brothers-Big Sisters services in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Last year, the event raised more than $83,000. With the increased need for mentors to youth in the metropolitan Detroit area, Bowl for Kids' Sake hopes to raise $110,000 this year.

Big Brothers-Big Sisters is an organization that matches prescreened adults with children from single parent homes.

For information on participating in the fund-raiser, call (810) 569-0600.

A HATS OFF: The Greater Detroit Bowling Association has produced its second newsletter of the season. Members should have received one by now, if not call (810) 773-6350. It contains good commentary by Mark Martin, executive director, Henry Mistele of the BCA and Mayflower Lanes proprietor, and Michael Barr, WJR's announcer and bowler.

There is a full page on "Do you know the rules?," answering common questions that come up in league play.

The purpose of the newsletter is to keep members informed about the local bowling scene.

All bowling leagues, at every level should be sanctioned. The benefits outweigh the few pennies per game that it costs for the annual membership dues. League officers in unsanctioned leagues who does not think that his or her bowlers are "worthy" of sanctioning should look at the whole picture, not just the 300 game award.

HANDICAPS: The primary reason most bowling leagues have a handicap system is to equalize the chances for opposing teams to compete with each other with a reasonable chance for either team to win.

This was best exemplified last week at Cherry Hill Lanes in the Bowling Bags ladies' league on Wednesday morning where the two opposing teams finished up with a tied score in each of the three games.

Team No. 11 "Lucky Stars" with Helen Versele, Betty Mitchess, Pauline Norwich and Peggy Wieckowski rolled a set of 550-584-600.

That's exactly what the Team No. 12 "Pin Pals" with Barbara Wojtkowicz, Linda Korzeniowski, Elizabeth Conrado and Janet Foltman bowled against them.

Both totals, of course were identical at 1734.

What are the odds of something like this happening?

Hockey players say a tie game is like kissing your sister. How about three straight tie games in bowling? Ladies, that must be like kissing your own brother.

Al Harrison has been writing a bowling column for the Observer Newspapers since 1987 and is a member of the Bowling Writers Association of America.

CC's icers reach final

Detroit Catholic Central earned a berth in the Class A state hockey championship game with an 8-1 victory Friday night in a semifinal played at the Flint IMA Sports Arena.

Because of early deadline's details of Saturday's championship game against rival Trenton, won't appear in the Observer until Thursday.

Trenton, the defending Class A state champion, earned a berth in the final with a 4-0 victory over Alpena.

Jason Tardif, Tim Cibor, Joe Beaudoin, Dan McLellan (two), Brad Karabelski, Mike Sharpe and Eric Bratcher scored goals for CC, which took a 24-1-1 record into the final.

Hartland's starting goaltender Daryl Marshke was injured on CC's first goal at 11:19 of the first period and left the game. He had already made 12 saves to that point.

One of McLellan's goals came short-handed. Karabelski's came on the power play.

CC led 2-0 after one period and 5-1 after two.

The Shamrocks outshot Hartland 41-12, giving goalie Rickey Marnon a relatively easy night. Hartland finished 16-9-2.

CC 6, Brother Rice 1: It's a one-game knockout in the state hockey playoffs, and teams that lose to Detroit Catholic Central might understand that literally.

If the Shamrocks don't leave an opponent's head spinning from their swift skating, they'll do it with their aggressive checking.

The Shamrocks combined grace and rugged play again last Saturday night (March 1) and earned a victory over rival Birmingham Brother Rice in the Class A regional championship game before 1,500 fans at Compuware Arena.

Senior defenseman Mike Porter scored the hat trick and added an assist to lead the Shamrocks.

Nick Kaleniecki, Keith Rowe and Dan McLellan scored one goal each. Scot Curtin had two assists and Mike Sharpe, McLellan, Eric Bratcher, Ian Devlin and Brad Karabelski had one each.

"I'd like to tip my hat to CC," Rice coach Mike Brown said. "That's a solid team up and down the lineup and what I like about them is they are nasty. If you don't like the way they play, go play badminton on Thursday night.

The Shamrocks jumped to a 3-0 lead midway through the second period before the Warriors cut the deficit with a goal by Chris Cassidy, assisted by Joe Kustra and Kevin Lefere, with 4:12 left in the second period.

The Shamrocks regained their three-goal lead less than two minutes later as Porter scored on a slap shot from the point that got through a screen to beat Rice goaltender Paul LaMarre.

The Shamrocks scored two insurance goals in the third period with the Warriors concentrating less on defense and more on scoring.

Senior forward Dan McLellan made the score 5-1 when he scored short-handed on a breakaway assisted by Curtin and Karabelski at 9:19 of the third period.

The Warriors ended the season with a 12-10-1 record.

RECREATION

TIM NOWICKI

I saw my first red-winged blackbirds of the year on Feb. 27 in a marsh along I-75 near Baldwin Road.

Two weeks prior, my family counted 20 robins in our back yard. Spring is rapidly approaching by all the indicators.

NATURE NOTES

Two other preludes to spring are the Bluebird Festival, sponsored by the Dahlem Environmental Education Center in Jackson, at Jackson Community College, and the Michigan Wildlife Habitat Foundation Wildlife Art Festival (WAF) at the Southfield Civic Center. Both events celebrate the onset of spring.

This year both events are on the weekend of March 15-16. So you can go to one event on Saturday and the other on Sunday. I recommend both because they are not only fund-raisers for each organization, they provide different information regarding the natural world.

Wildlife art is featured at both festivals, it is the No. 1 attraction at the art festival. There is flat work, bronze sculptures, wood carving, scratchboard and more. These artists combine their knowledge and love of nature with their artistic talents to produce some beautiful pieces.

At each festival, you can talk with representatives of various environmental groups to see where they stand on certain issues and to help in their fund-raising by browsing and buying some articles such as books, pins, feeders and patches. It's a good way to become aware of the various local organizations.

Each event will host guest speakers, on such subjects as back yard habitats, raptors, bats, wildlife watching and early American nature.

For more information on the art festival in Southfield, call (517) 882-3630; for information on the Bluebird Festival, call (517) 782-3453. Hope to see you there.

ON THE RUN

MARYBETH DILLON

There's not a more enjoyable way to kick off the running season than by wearin' the green and entering the Corktown Races, sponsored by the United Irish Societies and Motor City Striders. The 15th annual race is set for Sunday, March 16.

Not only will you do your cardiovascular system a favor, you'll help St. Patrick's food program. Race proceeds go to the historic Catholic church in the Cass Corridor, which feeds the homeless and elderly 365 days a year.

The race begins at Tiger Stadium at Michigan and Trumbull, leading runners and walkers through Corktown, Detroit's oldest neighborhood. The quarter-mile walk and run for kids 12 and under is set for 12:30 p.m. A 1 1/2-mile walk begins at 1 p.m., as does the 4-mile run.

Stick around after the short awards ceremony and post-race refreshments. You'll be just in time for the start of St. Patrick's Parade on shamrock-laden Michigan Avenue.

Late entry fee is $15, and T-shirts go to all entrants.

Entry forms are printed in Michigan Runner Magazine. They're also available in area running stores and at the Gaelic League, 2068 Michigan Ave. For more information, call (313) 963-5745.

Payback 5-kilometer

The Metro Macomb Runners will host the Payback 5K at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 22, at Metropolitan Beach Metropark on Lake St. Clair. Take I-94 east to Metroparkway (16 Mile Road). Entry fee is $6. Awards go to all finishers. Call (810) 426-7221 for more information.

Easter Bunny boogie

This Metro Macomb run features a 4-miler at 11 a.m., followed by a kids' 50-yard run at noon at Metro Beach. (810) 426-7221.

Run the Shores

Some of the best post-race goodies around are served compliments of Run The Shores, an annual 5K/1-mile run and race-walk presented by the Lake Shore High School Athletic Booster Club in St. Clair Shores. The race starts and ends at Lake Shore High School, 13 Mile Road at Jefferson.

Athletes are treated to an assortment of bagels, fruit, pretzels, chips, sports drinks and bottled water, and a raffle. Call (810) 293-7937 for more information.

Manchester Mill Run

The 5-mile race through scenic Manchester, 25 minutes southwest of Ann Arbor, begins at 11:15 a.m. Saturday, April 6. The 1-mile fun run starts at 11 a.m. Proceeds benefit Manchester school athletics.

Entry fee before April 3 is $15. The fee includes a colorful long-sleeved T-shirt, an all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast, flowers for all participants, and a raffle.

Creative awards are a highlight of this race. Last year, horse's tail trophies were awarded to second-place finishers. This year, race director Chris Brooks has "dubious distinctions" planned for third-place honors. He's not elaborating except to say he'll probably disappoint the runner who suggested a horse piles trophy.

Local artist Bill Shurtliff is designing a pen-and-ink drawing of the Manchester mill which will go to first-place finishers in five-year male and female age groups.

M.B. Dillon is a Observer staff writer and is rated as a master runner in Michigan.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Phony solicitors

The American Heart Association is warning the public about a rash of recent telemarketing campaigns that are soliciting funds for somewhat questionable organizations that have included the word "heart" in their names. Recently, the Attorney General's Office issued an advisory that warned the public to beware of telemarketing campaigns using sound-alike names such as "heart" and directed the public to gather as much information from an organization as possible prior to sending any money.

American Heart Association offices have received dozens of calls from concerned members of the public who have been solicited for contributions from callers identifying themselves as American Heart Association representatives or other organizations with the word "heart" included in their name. The American Heart Association does not solicit funds from the public through the use of telemarketing.

The association recommends that those receiving such a call:

- Ask for the caller's name;
- Ask for the organization's State License Number;
- Request that any literature be sent to the home and do not give a donation over the phone;
- Ask what the money will be used for and how much of the money will be spent on fund-raising;
- Ask for the phone number and address of the organization soliciting the funds.

For more information, call the American Heart Association at 1-800-968-1793.

Essay competition

Through a national essay competition known as PROJECT: Learn MS '97, high school and college students can compete for separate $8,000 college scholarship awards and raise funds to assist those suffering from multiple sclerosis. Sponsored by the Multiple Sclerosis Association of America, the program is open to high school sophomores, juniors and seniors and college freshmen, sophomores and juniors. Official registration forms are available at high school guidance offices or by calling 1-800-LEARN MS.

Now entering its fourth year, MSAA's PROJECT: Learn MS '97 encourages students to write a 500 to 1,000 word essay on multiple sclerosis, its effects on the family, and how society can improve life for the physically challenged. MSAA will appoint two independent panels to judge the essays separately for the high school and college levels. All essays must include an official registration form, a minimum of $7.50 in prepaid sponsorship, and must be postmarked by April 11. Students are encouraged to raise additional sponsor money to win various prizes.

Known as the most common neurological disorder of young adults, multiple sclerosis affects as many as 500,000 Americans. At present, there is no known cause, cure or prevention for MS.

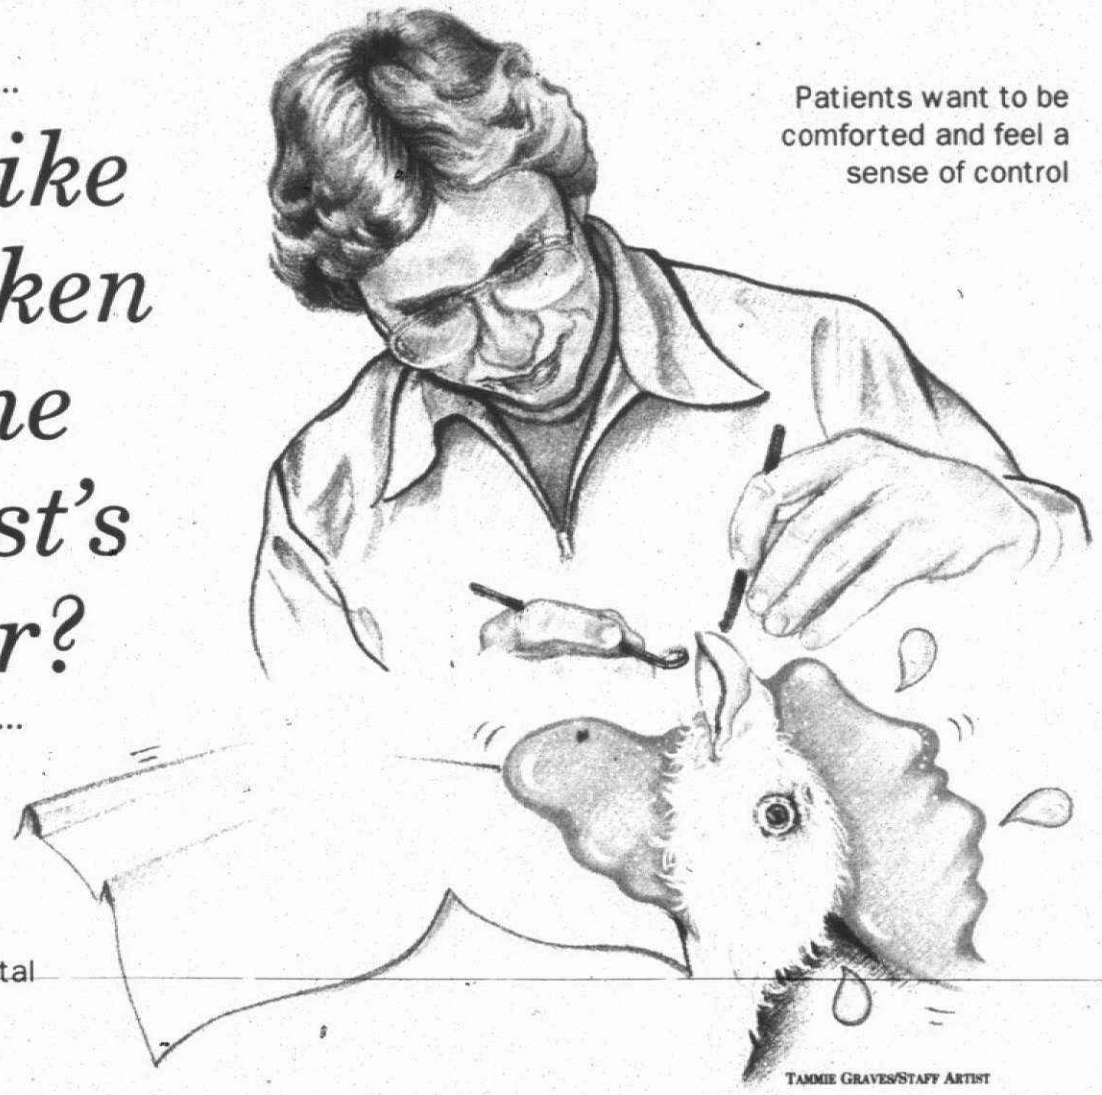
Feel like a chicken in the dentist's chair?



Patients want to be comforted and feel a sense of control

Learning what they don't like about dental offices is key

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

New techniques help quell fear

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

With these new choices many people who once avoided the dentist can maintain healthy teeth and gums.

Sharon Campbell was paralyzed with fear about going to the dentist for 25 years until she found a doctor who listened to her concerns and offered a procedure that helped her overcome her phobia. The 47-year old Wixom woman wasn't born afraid of dental offices. She learned the fear after a bad experience.

In fact, when she was a young girl and in her teens her parents took her regularly to the dentist without a problem. Then when she was 17 she had a wisdom tooth removed. And the doctor decided to do it with a minimum amount of sedation.

"The dentist went ahead, did his job and totally terrified me from going to the dentist," Campbell said. The pain was so excruciating that she remembers knocking over a machine and feeling "mortified" by the experience. "It was a horrible thing living day by day," she added. "There was a battle within me for the fear."

Campbell can now have some dental procedures done without intravenous sedation. Three years ago, Campbell went to Dr. Martha Zinderman who offered her an intravenous sedation that allows Campbell to relax enough to get the dental work she had postponed.

Campbell had gone to the dentist about six times since she was 17 until she met Zinderman, but only when she had a toothache and it was absolutely necessary.

A godsend

"She was a godsend for me," Campbell said. "She was this caring, kind person who sat me down, listened to me, did not laugh at my fears and totally took me under her wing. I used the IV sedation, because I was terrified to do anything else. I was really happy that there was that type of thing available for people like me."

Having gone to the dentist and leaving with a positive experience, Campbell was on her way to a new outlook. "I had the IV sedation and she totally changed my life, because this was something I lived with every day," she said. "You want to be your best. I had a half way decent smile, but I needed to have work done on it."

After her first appointment with Zinderman, who practices at Livonia Village Dental Associates, Campbell learned she didn't need as much dental work as she anticipated. The real testimonial comes in Zinderman's appointment book. Campbell is scheduled every six months.

The sedation Campbell receives is called a twilight sleep and is akin to anesthesia given during outpatient surgery. Zinderman usually uses a drug that is like Valium or another, which is like Demerol. Patients who have the intravenous sedation need someone to accompany them to the office and they can't drive for 24 hours.

This type of sedation in dental offices isn't new, but recent regulations by the American Dental Association and the Michigan Dental Association have become more strict about its usage. For instance, office staffers need basic life support training and dentists must have advanced cardiac life support and other specialized training.

A good deal of Zinderman's practice is made up of people who have fears about dentists. Those people aren't hard to find, either. "I would say 70 percent of the people who come to a dentist's office have some fear of going," said Zinderman, who was a registered nurse for 12 years before going to dental school. "I don't know a lot of people who love going to the dentist. But it can be literally crippling."

She estimated that half of her patients are quite fearful of having dental work done and one-quarter need IV sedation.

"We try not to go to that length, but if we do that's OK, too," she said. Other methods to quell fear can be used, like relaxing gas (nitrous oxide), which comes in different flavors, including vanilla or bubble gum. First impressions, from the moment people call the office to the initial visit, are essential in making people feel at ease, she said.

Patients want to be comforted and feel a sense of control. Learning what they don't like about dental offices is key. For instance, some people don't like the sounds of various procedures. They're given headphones and they can tune into the music of their choices.

Other patients are turned off by how dental offices smell. "So we use strawberry scented gloves," Zinderman said.

And most people don't like the shot. In those cases, a topical solution is applied that numbs the gums. "If a child has had an exam and needs a filling and the parent is apprehensive, I tell them don't tell the child a long time ahead," she said. "A lot of times the fears we have can be passed along to them."

Fear is common

Meanwhile, Dr. Raymond Katz, who has a practice on Ann Arbor Road in Livonia, agreed with Zinderman that most people have some fear of dental offices and there are a number of people who have extreme fear.

"With those people you try to make sure there is no discomfort involved with procedures," Katz said, adding that people with these phobias have to be treated with special care. And he offers patients a new procedure, Kreativ KV-1 (or Mach 4.0) advanced particle beam for cavity preparation, which usually eliminates needles, pain and fear. It takes between 20 and 30 seconds to prepare a filling.

Using the KV-1, Katz can prepare most cavities without anesthesia. A tiny beam of particles is propelled by compressed air at transonic speed, which is greater than the speed of sound, to remove tooth structure, old fillings and even through crowns. The particles turn into hydroxide, which is an ingredient used in toothpaste.

The microabrasive technique also eliminates the micro-cracks and fractures that can be caused by the traditional method that sometimes included excessive drilling. This preparation also complements the new aesthetic tooth-colored bonded composite fillings.

Katz said he no longer uses silver fillings. "When you use a drill, you open it up and extend around the grooves to hold the silver filling," Katz explained. "With this procedure, you remove decay and instead of weakening the teeth it's actually a strengthening procedure."

Most people fear the injection and the pain during the procedure, he said. In most cases, with KV-1 you eliminate the need for a shot or a drill. Of his patients who have used this new procedure, between 90 to 95 percent haven't felt a need for anesthesia, Katz said.

With these new choices many people who once avoided the dentist can maintain healthy teeth and gums. "Your smile is your whole person," Campbell said

Kidney disease has early warning signs

Kidney disease often goes undetected for many years, until it reaches an advanced state which could lead to death if untreated. "That is why it is important to make sure your doctor includes tests of your kidney function in your annual physical," said Dan Carney, executive director of the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan.

Two simple blood tests can help to determine if your kidneys are functioning normally. They measure the levels of waste substances in your blood that are normally eliminated by the kidneys. However, when your kidneys are not working as they should, wastes may build up in your blood.

Many people don't realize how important their kidneys are to their good health. There's a tendency to forget about these two small organs, located in the lower back. In addition to filtering wastes from your blood, the kidneys do key jobs to keep your body functioning smoothly.

- Kidneys produce hormones that help your body make red blood cells and regulate blood pressure.
- Kidneys strengthen bones by making an activated form of vitamin D.

"It's also important to learn the early warning signs of kidney disease and to see your doctor if you have any of them," said Carney. Some people think that as long as they are making urine, their kidneys must be working OK. However, this can be very far from the truth.

Urinating more than usual and getting up at night to go to the bathroom can sometimes be indicators or kidney disease. Other warning signs are: swelling of hands and feet and the area around your eyes; pain in your lower back; blood in the urine; pain or burning when urinating; high blood pressure.

Some signs cannot be detected without tests performed by your doctor. For example, your blood pressure can be elevated without causing any symptoms, Uncontrolled blood pressure is a leading cause of kidney disease. However, when these diseases are detected and controlled, the risk of kidney disease and other complications is greatly reduced.

The National Kidney Foundation has designated March as National Kidney Month and urges you to learn more about your kidneys and to get regular medical checkups that include tests for blood pressure, blood sugar and kidney function. For more information about kidneys and kidney disease, call 1-800-482-1455.

Doctor to share dietary message

Dr. John McDougall, M.D., isn't a bacon and eggs kind of guy.
McDougall is a graduate of Michigan State University's medical school and now lives in Santa Rosa, Calif., with wife Mary. The McDougalls advocate a diet that doesn't rely on meat and dairy products.
"The New McDougall Cookbook" is their latest published effort. The McDougalls also have food products available in grocery and health food stores. John McDougall is founder and medical director of the McDougall Program, a 12-day live-in plan at St. Helena Hospital and Health Center in California.
The food items at stores feature vegetarian entrees that are nutritious and high in fiber. There was a time not too long ago when such a diet wasn't considered healthful.
"Today, everybody does," said McDougall, who grew up in Dearborn and whose parents live in Canton. "Things have changed a lot."
Humans do need some protein, McDougall said, but should get it from vegetables as animals do. He grew up believing that meat and dairy products were essential.
"Of course, that's the way I was raised." He and his wife, a nurse and author, have raised their three children on a diet that isn't based on meat and dairy products.
Some 60 percent of the world population gets its protein from vegetables, he said. A diet high in fruits and vegetables has been shown to prevent heart disease and certain cancers.
A meat and dairy diet causes damage to the kidneys and liver, and also leads to osteoporosis, he said. The animal protein causes an acidic condition in the body, McDougall said, and leads to calcium kidney stones. That isn't commonly heard.
"It's drowned out by the message from the dairy industry."
Several dietary myths will be addressed at a McDougall health and weight loss seminar, to be held 1-5 p.m. Sunday, March 16, at the Holiday Inn Fairlane-Dearborn, 5801 Southfield. Those include meat as a protein source, milk for bone strength, and chicken being low-cholesterol. For registration information, call 1-800-570-1654.

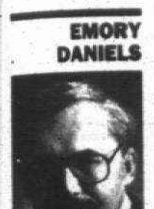
'Cookies' tool acts as a log of Web sites user visits

EMORY DANIELS



O&E ONLINE

Maybe the time has come to discuss the Cookie Monster. One of my regular readers recently sent an E-mail request for more information on "cookies."

The use of cookies deserves a close look because of the privacy concerns shared by many Internet users.

"Cookies" is a tool that resides within Netscape and other browsers. It acts like an ongoing log of Web sites you visit. It lays dormant on your hard drive until you load up your browser and begin visiting Web sites. Then this application begins to record on its log the names of the sites you visit.

The cookie initially is placed on your hard drive by a Web site which wants to conduct surveillance of your surfing habits. That cookie lays sleeping on your hard drive until you revisit that site when the site then captures information. That information likely will include your site user name, when you last visited, which pages you visited, what products you ordered or what files you downloaded.

Some Web sites, for marketing reasons, are interested in the interests of people who visit their site. And so these sites, when you arrive, connect to your cookies application and copy the log information. The log of Web sites you visit provides a profile of your interests which is of value to marketing-type people.

Although the business purpose may be legitimate, online users are concerned about privacy. Does business, or anyone else, have a right to gather information without the consumers consent?

Among those concerned is Justin Kerr, a journalist in Indiana who also has been engaged in electronic journalism in recent years. Kerr recently set his Web browser to prompt him every time a Web site tapped cookies on his hard drive. Kerr was amazed by the number of sites using this application.

"Although I don't mind if a site uses a cookie to aid in my navigation of the site, I don't know if I feel the same way about giving up more specific access information."

Marc Matteo, a Web engineer for the Sacramento Bee (http://www.sacbee.com), is less concerned about cookies.

"Despite all the myths about cookies, if you are using an even marginally up to date Web browser (basically anything NOT Netscape 2.0) the only way someone it going to get "more specific access information" about you is if you tell it to them in the first place.

"Cookies are merely tiny storage places in your browser that can be filled by Web sites," Matteo continues. "Thinking that cookies are some evil incarnate is like thinking your shoe box is going to steal your shoes when you're not looking."

Vin Crosbie, president of Digital Deliverance in Brookline, Mass., agrees with Matteo that cookies can't specifically identify an individual by name, age, or even gender but stresses that cookies very much are being used to monitor and gather information about users.

He points to DoubleClick, an application that implants cookies into the hard drives of any user who browses any Web site that licenses DoubleClick software. Whenever that user subsequently accesses that or another DoubleClick licensee's Web site, the updated cookie is surreptitiously read from the user's hard drive and automatically reported back to DoubleClick.

DoubleClick uses this information (currently gathered from more than 70 major Web sites that license its software) to compile a "profile" of that user. DoubleClick then reports the user's profile back to the Web site licensees so the licensee can target specific ads to that user.

"DoubleClick may not know your exact identity, but it tracks your travels among major Web sites and may very well be able to identify your tastes," adds Crosby.

There are other similar tracking systems in use or development. Firefly's Passport system will do something similar but with potentially even more sophisticated profiling.

Because some Web sites ask users to register by name or E-mail address, it is theoretically possible to match registered identities with cookies, thereby identifying which individual has the tastes that vendors such as DoubleClick and Passport identify.

"Cookies today don't operate with the informed consent of consumers. Consumers may be voluntarily visiting Web sites, but many consumers wish to keep their identities, even their tastes, private."

The latest versions of Netscape and Microsoft Explorer do give users the ability to accept or decline cookies totally. (With Netscape Navigator 3.x, go to Options and look under Protocol; with Explorer, go to Options and then Advanced.)

An interesting view is offered by Bill Densmore, president of Clickshare Corp. Densmore describes his major product, Clickshare (http://www.clickshare.com), as a "reverse cookie."

"Instead of sites dropping bits of unrequested information on a user's hard drive, Clickshare vests a user with a 'digital calling card' which includes that user's anonymous ID. It is the user, when making an 'http' request for information, who leaves this calling card at a Web site."

There is a new program called PGPcookie.cutter that lets you control which cookies are on your system. Go to http://www.pgp.com if interested. There also are utilities at http://www.wizvax.net/kevinmca or http://www.privnet.com for Netscape and Explorer that will automatically delete cookies from your hard drive after each site visit.

Personally, I'm not overly concerned about cookies. The marketing data-grabbers already know a great deal about me and they are welcome to a log of my Internet journeys as well. I am concerned about privacy but years ago I pulled in my fortress walls closer together to protect what is really important to me.

NEW HOMES

Delcor provides mix and match options

Choice prevails at Lake Forest Village, a platted residential subdivision off Pontiac Lake Road between Hospital and Airport roads in Waterford.

Call it a la carte construction.

Buyers can include or exclude such elements as family rooms, finished upper levels and larger basements when choosing among the six basic floor plans offered by Delcor Homes, the developer/builder.

"We make houses so people on a tight budget can at least get in a house," said Cathy Doig, Delcor's sales manager.

"We offer hundreds and hundreds of options for people," said Kevin M. Wilson, vice president of construction for Delcor. "If someone wants something done, most of the time, we'll work something out."

"We are very much customer-driven," said Luana Winkel, sales consultant. "We do accommodate our clients. We want to make their dreams come true."

Prices at Lake Forest Village range from $134,900 for an 1,100-square-foot Cape Cod with two bedrooms and two baths to $148,900 for 1,600-square-foot colonial with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

However, a family room and extended basement can be added to the Cape Cod for an additional $11,900 and a third bedroom with walk-in closet and full bath for $6,500.

On the colonial, additional living space can be added with a family room and extended basement for $12,900, a fourth bedroom for $5,900.

Other optional features include a fireplace and air conditioning, each $2,990, and skylights, $890-$1,780 depending on size.

Delcor is the rare builder that offers a quad-level floor plan.

The Canterbury has been built as a model/sales office.

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Visitors walk up several steps to the front door and mid level, which features a living room and kitchen/dining area on either side of a cathedral ceiling.

The lower level features a family room, laundry and half bath and, below that, a finished basement with wet bar.

Three bedrooms are upstairs.

The master with cathedral ceiling has a built-in entertainment center and shelves, a walk-in closet, shower, and dressing/make-up area.

The other two upstairs bedrooms and a full bath also have sloped ceilings.

The model, some 1,800 square feet with upgrades, carries a price of about $179,000. The standard plan, about 1,600 square feet with roughed-in family room, laundry and half bath and unfinished basement, goes for $140,900.

Delcor's other on-site model, the Kensington, also includes some of the bells and whistles buyers may select.

The Cape Cod features a great room with cathedral ceiling, kitchen/dining area, master suite with sloped ceiling, shower and walk-in closet, a second bedroom, a second bath with combination tub/shower, and a laundry, all on the first floor.

Kensington model: This house at Lake Forest Village situates two bedrooms on the main floor, a third bedroom and full bath upstairs.

An optional third bedroom, bath and walk-in closet have been finished upstairs.

Base price of the Kensington is ~~$134,900~~. The model with all the upgrades is priced at about $195,000.

A two-car garage, basement and dishwasher are standard elements included in all floor plans at no extra cost. Vinyl siding is the exterior material.

Lake Forest Village is serviced by Waterford's water and sewer system. The sub has sidewalks and is within the Waterford school boundaries.

Prospects may be enticed by a couple of nature preserves on the site totaling about 25 acres, plus access to a small, passive recreational lake with beach and picnic area.

"The location is great," Winkel said. "We're close to M-59. People can get to their local shopping and major entertainment and business needs.

"Visitors are impressed with the spaciousness of the homes, the high ceilings," she added. "They're very impressed with the quality of the homes for the price."

The property tax rate currently is $27.36 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $150,000 house would pay about $2,050 the first year.

Trash removal is extra. The monthly association fee to maintain the common areas is $18.

Jeananne and Brian Trefil bought a ranch.

"It just seemed like we got a lot more for our money for what we looked at," Jeananne said. "It just had everything we needed – three bedrooms. It has a smart layout, very efficient, vaulted ceilings, design, architecture. It seems a lot larger than it actually is."

Karen Oertel bought a quad.

"I liked that site the best. It was woodsy, it has some trails," she said. "I love the house – the high ceilings ... lots of room. It's open. It's really a comfortable house."

The sales office at Lake Forest Village, (810) 698-4888, is open 1-6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

OVER 50 YEARS OF BEING SOUTHEASTERN MICHIGAN'S PREMIER DEVELOPER AND BUILDER

Architect manages construction for this home

STEVEN SIVAK

Some readers have asked me to follow a project from the beginning to illustrate the entire process with its inherent ups and downs. I thought it was a great idea, so in addition to discussing a series of ever-changing topics related to architecture and construction, we are following the design and construction of a "custom" home, which is on the boards at my office. Two months ago I began reporting on the progress of this project, and I will continue to have monthly updates as the project progresses.

The end of March, which is our proposed date for the beginning of construction, is fast approaching. Design development, which is the second phase of an architectural project, was completed in about one month and included framing plans, which were prepared by the structural engineer. Framing plans also included electrical plans, electrical fixture specifications and plumbing specifications. One of the major differences between the design development drawings and the schematic design drawings, which was the first phase, is that these drawings are prepared at a scale of 1/4" =1'-0" while the schematic drawings were done at 1/8"=1'-0". This means that the drawings are twice the size. Other parts of the house have been drawn to a larger scale including bathrooms and kitchen 1"=1'-0" and detail areas are drawn to 3"=1'-0".

The major news is that in addition to being the architect for the project, I will also be acting as the general contractor for the project. I have done this a few times in the past, and it works very well for the client. A level of trust has been established during the architectural phases that would have to be established for a builder – why bother? More important, I know the project better than anyone and why not just be the builder? reading these articles, I like things done a certain way, and as the builder I am in a better position to get that level of quality out of the sub-contractors than if I were one step removed from the action as the architect. This is a big undertaking to assume this role – a good builder puts a lot of time in to getting this kind of project built, and if it were not such a special project, I would not have the desire to assume this role.

So in addition to drawing the design development and working drawings, I am also putting certain parts of the project out to bid as the drawings for them are complete. For example the plumbing system can be bid based upon having accurate but not final drawings, specifications and a fixture list. The same is true for the electrical system, floor finishes, doors/hardware, kitchen appliances, heating/cooling, well and septic, windows, drywall and paint.

Sub trade items that must wait for the final set of working drawings are foundation walls, rough materials and rough carpentry. These are critical subtrades, but the drawings for these are the last to be finished.

This process of drawing, bidding and building in a non-linear process is called fast-tracking. Fast-tracking is different than the conventional means of working whereby an architect does a complete set of working drawings, puts the whole project out to bid and then, along with the owner, negotiates a contract for construction with a builder and then begins construction.

Fast tracking saves much time- 3-4 months in the case of this project. More important, it allows me to see the bids come in and adjust the final drawings to reflect the level of detail that can be afforded by the client. A perfect example of this is the preliminary window pricing, which was about $3,000 higher than I was looking for – working with the window manufacturer we reduced the size of some windows and completely eliminated others and standardized the size of others and by the time the final elevations are drawn, the windows drawn will be the windows purchased! If, on the other hand, the architect does not have access to the prices of all of the components of the structure, it is hard to surgically remove the fat.

The proper term for my involvement during the construction phase is "construction manager." This is a term that I am seeing more and more often and while the CM is similar to a general contractor/builder, the CM does not risk capital to build your project. Basically the CM gets a fee (either a percentage or a fixed fee) for his services and places such fee on top of his costs for doing the work.

The advantage to the homeowner is that it is unnecessary to pad costs to cover small items that can be forgotten. The downside is that the homeowner will not know the final costs of the project until the project is finished. Because most homeowners do not have complete drawings with complete specifications, it is very hard for general contractors to give guaranteed maximum pricing on projects.

CM's, like architects, charge for their time and do not typically bid on jobs without signed contracts from prospective clients. From my point of view, the use of construction managers makes lots of sense for building custom projects.

Revival of interest in American garden

After a period of eclipse, there's been an upsurge of interest in America's gardens.

"Just in the last decade or so we've come to think of design gardens as important American works of art," said Robin Karson, executive director of the Library of American Landscape History, Amherst, Mass.

Karson is curator of the traveling exhibition, "The Gardens of Ellen Biddle Shipman 1869-1950," about one notable landscape architect.

"Ellen Shipman, one of the long-forgotten garden makers being brought to light by the Library of American Landscape History, comes across as a true artist," Anne Raver writes in an article in the New York Times about the exhibition.

Karson says the library's goal is to preserve the country's gardens as part of Americans' cultural heritage.

When gardens like those of Shipman are restored and can be reopened to the public, "It's very exciting to see something once inaccessible now playing a role again in the lives of thousands of garden visitors," Karson said.

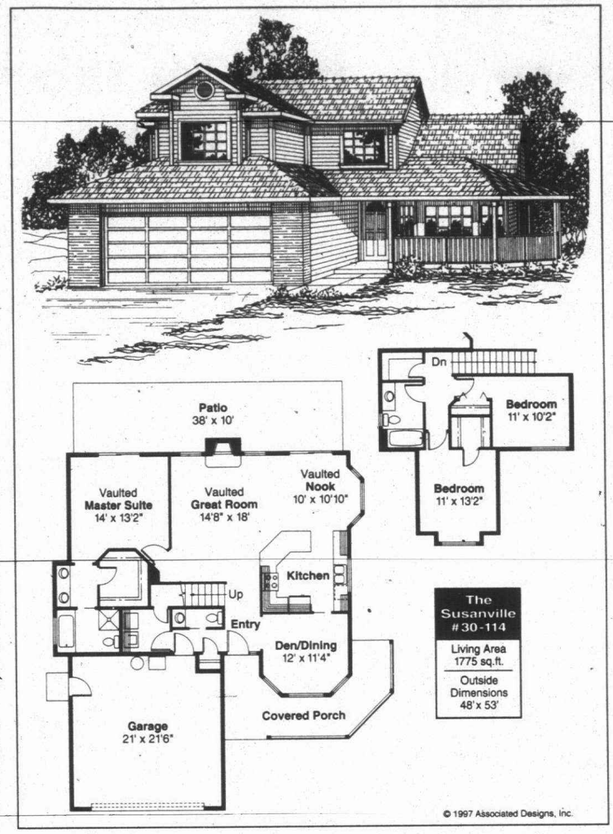
Informal family's floorplan



The Susanville is a mid-size contemporary home designed for families who prefer comfortable, informal living spaces. It has no living room, but the bayed front-facing room can be outfitted as a dining room. Or it could just as easily be a den.

Great room, nook and kitchen flow together. All are large, and all but the kitchen have lofty vaulted ceilings that make these areas seem even more spacious. Windows line most of the rear wall. The space filled by the fireplace is, in fact, the widest unglazed expanse. Sliders in the nook open onto a patio that spans the entire rear of the home and is also accessible from the master suite.

Expanded by a windowed alcove, the nook is exceptionally bright. Kitchen amenities include an angled eating bar, efficient design, plenty of counter space, and built-in appliances.

Enter through the garage, and you can step right into a tiny bathroom or the laundry room without tracking mud elsewhere in the house. The bathroom is equally close to the front door, and handy to the kitchen as well.

The vaulted master suite is the only bedroom on the ground floor. It has a large walk-in closet, double vanity, and separately enclosed tub, toilet and shower.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Susanville 30-114 and include a return address when ordering.

Kit lets you grow tomatoes indoors

First, you can have the fun found in growing things yourself.

Second, you can enjoy the fruits of your labors as you pick, eat, preserve and give away the terrific tomatoes you've grown.

There are also two ways you can go about growing tomatoes. One is with a new Hanging Tomato Garden which grows rapidly in a hanging pot or basket, indoors or out. It produces bright, delicious cherry tomatoes in about 60 days.

If you want to start early, consider the Big Red Tomato Starter Kit. It consists of a plastic tomato divided into two growing containers. You just add the growing mix and the special Miracle Sweet hybrid seeds. In about four weeks, you plant them in your garden. The six plants can produce up to 100 pounds of eight ounce tomatoes, which are the best tasting ever. They are available at Kmart, Walgreens and Osco.

Ventless heaters chase winter's chill – for less

(NAPS) – Space heaters are a great way to take the chill out of winter. The question is how can homeowners use them without taking a bite out of the household budget. Today, a record number of homeowners are answering that question with vent-free gas space heaters.

Efficiency and lower operating costs are why vent-free gas space heaters are a hot trend. They are approximately 99 percent efficient because heat does not escape through vents or chimneys. All the heat stays in the room.

More than four million U.S. homes now have vent-free gas heating units. They represent the fastest growing category of gas appliances.

According to Grover Mollineaux of Comfort Glow, a leading manufacturer of vent-free appliances, common questions about vent-free gas space heaters include:

• How do they work? Their sophisticated burner system burns natural or propane gas so cleanly the units can operate without a vent.

• Where are they used? Vent-free gas space heaters can warm up to a 1,000-square-foot room. They are being used in additions, basements, and those rooms that always seem to be chilly. With these heating challenges met, many homeowners say they run their home's central heating unit less. Vent-free gas space heaters also provide emergency heat during electrical power outages.

• Why gas? Because it is the economical choice in many areas. Compared with traditional electric space heaters, vent-free gas space heaters can cost up to 75 percent less to operate.

• What about air quality? Vent-free gas space heaters are clean burning. They meet or exceed national standards and recommendations for indoor air quality, and are design certified by the American Gas Association.

Other vent-free gas appliances include gas logs and fireplaces.

As with all gas appliances, homeowners should check local codes and restrictions, and use a professional installer. Vent-free gas space heaters are available at most hardware stores and home centers.

Wood foundations becoming more popular

The strong home building industry has meant plenty of construction work.

But it's also caused difficulties for building companies getting timely service from busy subcontractors.

Otto Binggeser, president of Bing Construction in Bloomfield Hills, was frustrated by the delays. With limited control over scheduling, he was unable to build houses in a time period that satisfied his customers.

At the same time, one of his suppliers, Erb Lumber in Birmingham, was investigating the feasibility of Permanent Wood Foundations, an alternative building system with growing popularity in the Great Lakes area.

This foundation, which uses pressure-treated wood instead of block or poured concrete, can be installed by carpentry crews rather than masonry subcontractors.

Impressed with PWFs many benefits – comfortable living environment, relative humidity, energy savings, easier finishing and greater usable space – Erb decided to seek out one receptive builder to try the concept on a model home.

The proposal was pitched to Binggeser, who was looking for such an aggressive idea.

After touring several custom homes with PWFs, Binggeser decided to start out by building his own house with a permanent wood foundation.

"Construction can continue in weather that doesn't permit proper curing of concrete, and builders can keep carpenter crews busy from basement to roof," said Robin Green, vice president for purchasing at Erb.

"Also, the warmth of a basement wood floor is a desirable homeowner feature," he said.

Wood foundations originally were introduced in 1969 following test work by government and trade associations.

It's estimated that more than 300,000 houses have wood basements, with the greatest concentration in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio where wood foundations give builders an edge on inclement weather.

About 2,000 are in southeast Michigan.

The foundations consist primarily of framing lumber and plywood walls, all pressure treated with wood preservatives for protection against damage from termites and rot.

Even under severe weather conditions, permanent wood foundations are waranteed against leaks. Wood's elasticity enables the foundations to withstand pressure from expanding soils that would crack cement.

The cost is comparable to or a bit less than poured concrete, Erb reports.

However, Mark Miller, Bing vice president and Binggeser's son-in-law isn't so sure. He figures it may cost more – but maybe not when factoring in time savings using carpenters rather than waiting for masonry contractors.

Miller, however, likes the concept.

"With a walk-out, you'll probably finish the basement. It makes it so much easier, better. The walls are already studded out and the floor will seem like upstairs," he said.

Based on 40-year test stakes in Wisconsin and Mississippi, experts agree that permanent wood foundations should last over 100 years.

PWFs are approved by building codes, federal housing agencies, lending institutions and insurance agencies.

Binggesser likes the his permanent wood foundation, Miller said, adding that it probably will take some education – and time – before the typical buyer jumps on the bandwagon.

Wet basements can be corrected inexpensively

By Popular Mechanics
For AP Special Features

Wet basements can often be corrected easily and inexpensively. The main exception is when the culprit is ground water. In that case, the only sure solution is to install drainage tile around the outside of the wall and sump pumps inside.

Bear in mind that water – not basement walls – causes leaks, and the presence of water is almost always the result of poor drainage and poorly maintained gutters. Problems like these must be corrected first.

There are two kinds of basement waterproofing materials. The first are masonry patch items. These products work well when the basement is not leaking at the time of repair. They range from mortar caulk to pre-mixed mortar to hydraulic putty.

Adding a latex bonding agent to a standard masonry mix will improve bonding. Hydraulic putty works well if you're repairing a continuously seeping hole. The product bonds extremely well and cures quickly, even when wet and under pressure.

The second category includes a variety of rubberized coatings, which usually contain portland cement. As these products are expensive (more than $20 per gallon), cover only 75 to 125 square feet per gallon and produce noxious fumes while they cure, they should only be used when drainage improvements and wall repair come up short.

Highlights of the operation begins with checking the perimeter of your foundation for depressions in the fill-soil. Especially check areas around window wells. Add soil to build up these depressions, and tamp the soil firmly into place. Then plant grass seed.

Remove any blistered paint from the interior of your foundation wall with a wire brush and coarse sandpaper. Scrub mildew with an abrasive pad and a mix of household bleach and water. Use muriatic acid on efflorescence – a white chalky substance that is actually crystallized mineral salts that have leached from the concrete or mortar.

Caulk small leaky cracks with a silicone-mortar caulk and smooth with a putty knife dipped in mineral spirits. If the cracks are larger, enlarge the crack with a tapered mason's chisel, clean the joint and wet with a mix of water and latex bonding agent.

Blend the premixed mortar with water and bonding agent until the mortar will stand up when you slice through it with a trowel. Then, stack a little mortar on the back of a small trowel, place the trowel against the crack and push the mortar into the joint with a pointing trowel.

Pack the entire joint, then scrape away the excess and smooth the joint with a jointstriking tool. Use the same methods to fill any gaps or cracks around utility pipe holes.

Before deciding to paint a wall with waterproofing, wait a few weeks. If it rains and your basement stays dry, chances are you won't need it. If you don't see any obvious leaks, but the masonry surface is damp, then a sealant is a good idea.

Furnish rooms with futons

(MPS) – You can create the room of you with affordable and stylish futon furnishings. With easily interchangeable futon covers and accessories, giving any room an updated look is easy.

Ideal for making the most of space, futon frames quickly and easily convert from sitting to sleeping places and back again. A futon can convert any room into a guest room.

Use Leverage To Make Best Choice

By Sheryl Silver
Career Source

Information technology professionals with expertise in one or more of today's in-demand technologies are feeling pretty confident these days. Multiple job offers are common. Demand has boosted salaries significantly. Even sign-on bonuses are back.

As enviable as this situation is, some qualified individuals are still managing to sabotage their search efforts. Phil Meltzer, recruiting manager in the Pacific Southwest for KPMG Peat Marwick Strategic Services, says, "The one thing that turns me off is if the candidate is pretentious, if they say, 'I wont do that' or 'I don't do that.' We need people are willing to make it happen."

Deborah Coughlin, senior v.p. of human resources for Computer Associates International Inc., headquartered in Islandia, New York, also puts a premium on a flexible attitude. "If someone has the right skill set but not the right mind set, they won't get an offer," says Coughlin.

Arrogance and big egos are commonly a turn off for employers, says Paul Siker, a principal with The Guild Corporation, a recruiting firm in McLean, Virginia. Prima donnas simply aren't a fit for today's flatter, more team oriented organizations, he says.

Neither are candidates who are primarily money motivated. Angela Ewell, in recruiting and staff for Anteon Corporation in Fairfax, Va. says she can detect and eliminate such candidates during brief telephone calls. "When someone's questions are focused on money rather than the work they'd be doing with us, or when they say, 'I'm just shopping around. What can you do for me?', I generally don't bring them in for an interview. We're looking for people who are really excited about the work we're doing."

Joanna Wallis, director of staffing in Santa Monica, California for Virginia headquartered BDM Technologies Inc., says many employers will back off when they sense a candidate is primarily money motivated. "Companies sometimes can't get around their formal compensation structure," says Wallis. "Recognize that if money is your top priority, you may need to consider contracting" where hourly rates for IT professionals are very inflated at the moment. Wallis adds, however, that contracting isn't for everyone. "You need to be a chameleon able to adapt to various work environments, to different co-workers and supervisors," she says.

Rather than using their leverage to alienate employers, technology professionals are urged to use it wisely, to pick from the various offers they receive the position that offers the best professional potential. And best, by the way, doesn't always mean the highest dollar offer.

"Look beyond the immediate monetary value," advises Coughlin. "Look at the entire package a company is offering. Look a few years down the road and ask, 'Does the company have a good reputation both with customers and for delivering to employees what it promises?'"

Siker adds, "Although a few thousand or even then thousand dollars more is tempting, the truth is, if another opportunity provides experience in leading edge technologies that may be the better offer. If you're just going for the money, in the long run, you're selling yourself short. In the technology world, it's really more critical to stay at the leading edge of technology."

Meltzer agrees. "It's the leading technology that's going to add value and money to someone's future," he says.

With that, as well as someone's long term job satisfaction in mind, Meltzer says there are several factors - besides salary - candidates should consider when comparing offers. Among them: Are you going to like the role you're in? Will it stimulate you every day? Will it add value to your technical background? Is there trust and respect for the person you'll be working for? And what about location? "If you're going to have a long commute every day, it can impact your attitude," says Meltzer.

Wallis says if a company someone wants to work for can't match another employer's salary offer, the applicant should consider negotiating up front for training in new technologies in lieu of the salary dollars. This approach, she says, enables the company to stay within its compensation structure, while providing the prospective employee a vehicle for enhancing their future marketability and earning power.

Working Life

Contracts That Limit Your Career Options

By Deborah L. Jacobs
Chronicle Features

Job-hopping has some bosses worried about workers leaking trade secrets to competitors. More and more, they're requiring staff to sign "non-compete agreements": promises not to join rival companies for a set time. That may be good for business, but it's often a disaster for workers. Signing one of these contracts can seriously limit your ability to find other work.

Consider what recently happened to Daniel O'Neill, a former executive a Campbell Soup. His departure in December to join H.J. Heinz, set off a fiery legal battle over a non-complete agreement that O'Neill signed two years after joining Campbell. This very onerous document said he wouldn't work for a competitor for 18 months after leaving.

Heinz filed suit against Campbell, trying to invalidate the contract. Campbell fired back with a case to stop O'Neill from working for Heinz. The two sides hashed out a complex settlement last month. It will delay O'Neill's first day until September. But that's nine months sooner than the non-compete agreement would have allowed him to start.

Long a routine requirement for research scientists, sales reps and high-level execs, non-compete agreements are now cropping up in other contexts. Plenty of rank and file workers are being told (either when they start work or later on): "sign on the dotted line, or you won't have a job."

Is this legal? Unfortunately, the answer isn't always perfectly clear. A lot depends on how the contract is worded. Plus, laws vary dramatically from state to state. California prohibits these agreements unless they're necessary to protect confidential information, like customer lists. Elsewhere, courts and legislatures have said the contracts must be "reasonable" in terms of how long they last, and the territory they apply to.

Ideally, companies should offer extra cash, stock options or other perks when asking current employees to sign - some courts have said this is required. Occasionally companies have successfully argued that signing the contract is a fair trade-off for keeping the job, says Diana Marshall, a Houston lawyer.

Intimidating as these contracts can be, workers may have more bargaining power than they think. For example, says Marshall, when a large insurance company recently asked 14 sales agents to sign a non-compete agreement, they went to the boss collectively. Worried that all these workers would jump ship, the company made some important concessions. It agreed that the provision wouldn't apply to workers who get laid off. It also shortened the length of the restrictions, from one year to four months. Sometimes you can negotiate similar terms before signing on at a company.

When all else fails, there may be time to chisel away at the non-compete agreement on your way out the door. Your leverage at this point depends largely on whether you have a potential legal claim - say for race, sex or age discrimination, notes Nancy Erika Smith, a lawyer in West Orange, N.J.

One of Smith's favorite strategies when negotiating at any stage is to ask the company for a list of its direct competitors. That's much better than accepting the sweeping restrictions some businesses try to apply. A prime example: one milk company that made a high-level executive promise he wouldn't work in the "beverage industry" for a certain time. Technically the executive couldn't ever have taken a job at Coca-Cola, Smith says.

Whether or not you get a lawyer involved in actual negotiations, ask for whatever time you need to consider the contract, and have an attorney review it before you sigh. Depending on how comfortable you feel negotiating, you might want the lawyer to coach you behind the scenes, or represent you on the front line. You can pay by the hour for these services ($150 to $300 is typical).

Finally, if you're miserable in your current job but are afraid to leave because you've already signed a non-compete agreement, have an attorney look it over. A lawyer can tell you just what the contract covers, if it's legal, and if you stand a chance of negotiating some changes. All these factors could affect your decision about whether to stay put.

Nissan Maxima offers luxury AND excitement

CAReport

BY ANNE FRACASSA
Avanti NewsFeatures

This is Nissan's flagship vehicle, this 1997 Maxima. You would tend to assume flagship means "the best, the most luxurious."

If that's what you want from the Maxima, you're done shopping because the GLE trim line is what you'll choose.

But this flagship has a little more to offer.

A little more fun.

A little more excitement.

Choose the Maxima SE and you'll get that and even a little more.

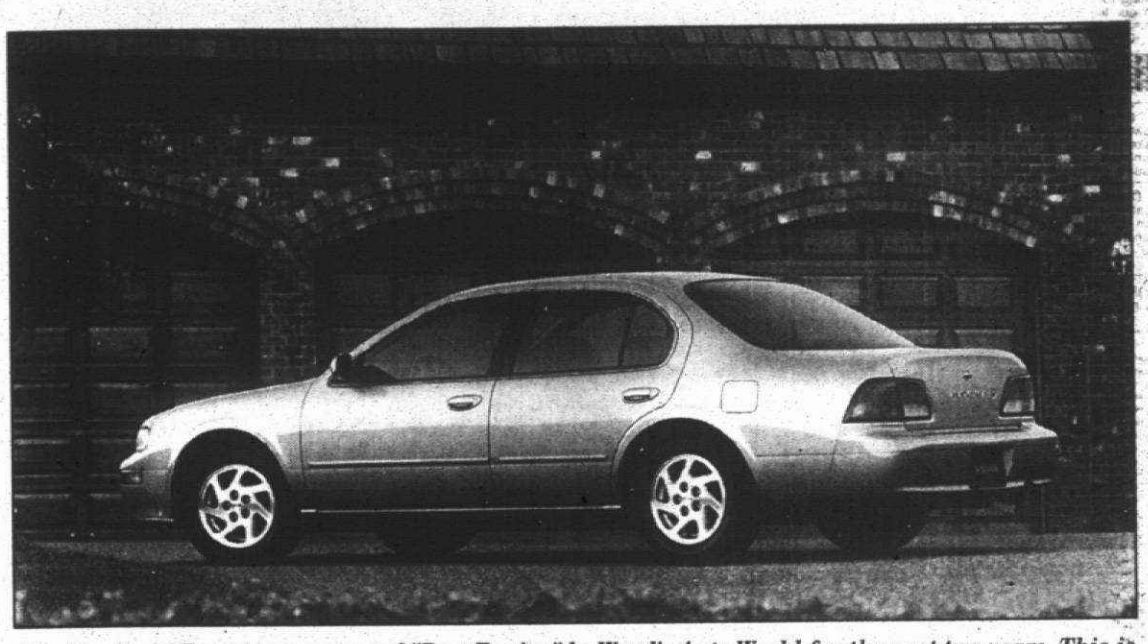
The excitement? Well, you've got a 3.0-liter dual overhead cam V6 that outputs 190 horsepower with a tap of your right foot. When you get this thing up to cruising speeds, check your speedometer, cuz you're probably over the limit by now.

There have extensive exterior and interior updates for this model year. From the front grille to the new taillights, most of the exterior has been refined to be even more sporty-looking.

Back to the engine for a moment. It's been named "Best Engine" by Ward's Auto World for the past two years. This is the Nissan's lightest and most compact production engine. The design enabled an enhancement in engine performance, reduction of exhaust emissions and improved performance and fuel economy.

The test Maxima SE was outfitted with a standard 4-speed manual transmission that wasn't effortless to shift, but was not a big pain, either. It's standard on the GXE as well. On the GLE, a 4-speed automatic is standard equipment. You can still outfit either the GXE or SE with an automatic as an option. Stick with the manual — it gives you a spirited driving experience.



The Maxima SE engine was named "Best Engine" by Ward's Auto World for the past two years. This is the Nissan's lightest and most compact production engine. The design enabled an enhancement in engine performance, reduction of exhaust emissions and improved performance and fuel economy.

The safety equipment on all Maximas this year is impressive. Take a look at the front and rear crumple zones, dual airbags, power-assisted 4-wheel disc brakes (anti-lock brakes are an option), energy-absorbing steering column, child safety rear door locks and steel side-door guard beams.

The 3-point front seat belts have height-adjustable front shoulder belts that make it a breeze to wear without cutting across your neck. There are also 3-point seat belts for the rear outboard passengers in the back.

Handling this car doesn't mean you have to pull the reigns in once in a while. There are front and rear stabilizer bars and a rear multi-link suspension system that really helps keep the car firmly planted on all fours. The SE has a sport-tune suspension package that gives you firmer shocks and struts. Response, as I said before, is there at a tap of the foot.

Interior room is impressive. You can fit three people in back without so much as a squeeze. Front buckets are comfy and the center console can hold a ton of your junk.

Instrumentation is, well, funky during the day. The analog tachometer and time driving. I do like it, however, when the sun goes down. In the dark, the white disappears and what you've got here is something that resembles a plane's cockpit. Nice graphics, just a little annoying during the day.

Comfy, too, are the leather-wrapped steering wheel and gear shift knob. The feel of the leather is soft and supple and fits your hand oh, so well.

Trunk space is impressive. You can fit a whole lot more stuff in there than you'll probably ever need. There's also a pass-through on the trunk that can come in handy when transporting skis or anything else that's too long to fit.

And here's a blast from the past — the trunk has a courtesy lamp so you can see inside. Why did that feature go away? Hardly anyone has a lighted trunk anymore.

The front-wheel drive SE starts just under $23,300 and is nicely equipped.

Here are a few things on the standard equipment list: CFC-free air conditioning; cruise control; power windows, door locks and antenna; AM/FM cassette/CD system with 6 speakers; dual power remote-controlled outside mirrors; tilt steering column; digital quartz clock; electric rear window defroster; dial cup holders; remote hood/trunk/fuel door releases; map light; intermittent wipers; front door map pockets; tinted glass; and 16-inch all season steel belted radials on alloy wheels.

Even with the options on the test Maxima SE — Bose stereo system, 8-way power driver's seat, homelink transmitter, remote keyless entry, security system, power trunk release, illuminated vanity mirrors, ABS and a sunroof — the price only went up to $26,400. A pretty terrific value.

1997 Nissan Maxima SE
Vehicle class: Midsize sedan.
Power: 3.0-liter DOHC V6.
Mileage: 22 city / 27 highway.
