Canvassers deny bond re-vote

Challengers to the March 22 Plymouth-Canton bond issue will have to go to court to force a new election. The school district plans to move ahead now that the local board of canvassers has certified the vote.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' Board of Canvassers – Dennis Shrewsbury, Melissa McLaughlin and Herb Scott – reluctantly voted Tuesday night to deny voters' petitions for a special election.

"Intellectually, this is definitely what the law calls for," said McLaughlin, who is also an elected trustee in Canton. "I will support the resolution, but I do have a great deal of discomfort with 700-and-some-odd voters coming to the ballot box on Saturday and not being accounted for. I think that is extraordinarily unfortunate, because the most precious thing we have in our country is the privilege to vote."

Shrewsbury and Scott echoed her sentiments at the end of the three-hour session, citing the narrow legal parameters under which special elections may be granted.

Superintendent Charles Little was pleased. "The bond passed on March 22, and it has been certified again. Growth is increasing in the district, and we will move ahead with the project. If there is a court challenge, we will deal with that when it comes along."

Challengers including former board member Roland Thomas; Plymouth property manager Dan Herriman; former state Rep. Jerry Vorva; and Plymouth City Commissioner Don Dismuke requested a special mail election based on the high number of spoiled ballots, or "under votes" in the district's March 22 election.

By a 96-vote margin – 5,733 to 5,637 – voters passed a $79.7 million bond issue to build new schools and make improvements throughout the district. But the ballots of 720 voters couldn't be registered because of errors that occurred with the

Students, seniors work it out

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND

It's a win-win situation: Students from Hoben Elementary School get the homework help they need and residents of Canton Place, an apartment complex for seniors, get to put their talents and experience to good use.

Peggy Schneider, a counselor at Hoben Elementary School, located on Saltz Road between Sheldon and Canton Center roads, has wanted to bring together the two generations in a mutually beneficial way for a long time.

She attended a monthly meeting at Canton Place, located near the corner of Ford and Sheldon roads, and proposed that interested residents spend one hour with her students, some of them considered "at risk."

First the seniors were to help the students with homework, then play a game with them. "It's called grandma's rule," said Schneider, "Work first, play later."

Schneider's idea is working. Every Monday for the past three weeks, about 20 Hoben students have been trekking over to Canton Place after school with math, spelling and reading assignments in tow. For one hour they get the help and the TLC they need.

"Sometimes kids just need someone working beside them to say, 'Wow, you did a great job on that one. Do the next one,' " said Schneider.

Often, the students, many of whom come from the Fellows Creek housing complex, don't want extra help, just a quiet place to do

Wanted: Ghost stories

The Canton Historical Society is collecting additional stories for an upcoming book, "Ghost Stories of Canton." The volume will relate intriguing tales that have passed into local folklore – like the "haunting of Denton Road Bridge," which has long enjoyed fame even beyond the township limits.

"Ghost Stories" will not attempt to prove the existence of spirits, nor seriously explore the realm of psychic phenomena. However, if you live or lived in one of Canton's historic houses where unusual things occurred, and want to share those stories to preserve local traditions, please contact Virginia Bailey Parker through the historical society, 397-0088.

Books come alive for blind patrons

STORIES BY KEN ABRAMCZYK • STAFF WRITER

George Illingworth frequently uses his favorite library, but he never leaves his house.

He and his wife, Suzanne, enjoy literature ranging from fiction to non-fiction, including "All Things Bright and Beautiful" by James Herriott to novels by Danielle Steel.

The Illingworths can borrow these books from the library without leaving the comfort of their Redford Township home.

Instead they listen to "talking books" — special cassette tapes supplied by the Wayne County Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped in Wayne.

"It's very unique," said George Illingworth. "Where else would we get services like that? It has so much to offer. I can't use the regular public library, even though some like Redford's are starting to get some talking books."

Most talking books distributed by the county library were created by the Library of Congress so that the blind, visually- or physically-impaired can enjoy literature in a variety of genres, including romance, mystery, history and humor.

The Wayne County Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, 33030 Van Born in Wayne, contains 130,000 books with 45,000 different titles.

Between October 1995 and September 1996, it serviced 3,325 registered patrons, including 462 children in 10 schools for the blind, 61 public and private schools, 17 hospitals, 66 nursing and convalescent homes and 23 libraries.

It is part of the Wayne County Regional Library, which serves 437,000 persons in 23 municipalities through 14 libraries. The county

United States damaging deciduous trees, such as oak and aspen. Within the past several years the gypsy moth path has headed southward into Oakland and Macomb counties. Parts of western Wayne County (Livonia and Redford) have reported infestation.

The predicted course leads to Canton, Plymouth and the Northvilles, said Carl Dollhops, who has been hired as a consultant by the three communities. Dollhops, a Westland resident, is a retired horticulturist from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

"If they're not here this year, then next year they'll be here for sure," he said.

The survey has already begun in Northville, where a 60-acre area south of Seven Mile and east of Beck Road has been flagged as having a heavy pocket of gypsy moth eggs. Dollhops estimated the area as having upwards of 1,000 masses per site. Typically, 12 to 18 masses per site would qualify for a state program for chemical spraying, he said.

Small hot spots such as that are not usual migration patterns. It is suspected that the gypsy moths were brought to the Northville locale by a camping trailer that had been in northern Michigan or by fire wood.

■ 'After Memorial Day is when they do most of their feeding. The caterpillars can get to be about two and a half inches long and at that size they can do a lot of eating in one night.'

Carl Dollhops, –consultant

"If nothing was done there could have been 100 percent defoliation, but we're ahead of the game," Dollhops said.

Gypsy moths can be managed and do not typically kill trees. At worst some trees will suffer defoliation.

All three communities are to be surveyed by May 1. A representative from each community will train with Dollhops as he surveys their respective communities.

"The eggs will be hatching the first of May. They look like tan felt about one inch long and can be found on the underside of the lowest branches or on the trunk of oaks," he said.

The small sacs should be scraped off by residents and destroyed so that the population cycle doesn't start over, he said. It takes about six weeks for the eggs to hatch and turn into caterpillars.

"After Memorial Day is when they do most of their feeding. The caterpillars can get to be about two and a half inches long and at that size they can do a lot of eating in one night," he said.

In rural areas not much is done to prevent the infestation of the moths, while most cities will use chemical spray to kill the larva, said Dollhops.

"Canton with its wide open spaces and then all of its subdivisions could be impacted much harder than a populated area like Wayne," said Dollhops.

Education can be just as effective as chemical spraying to stop the gypsy moth infestation, said Dollhops. Brochures describing the moths life cycle and tips on controlling will be available at Canton's Administration building after May 1.

homework on their own. The homework-helping sessions are held in the Canton Place meeting room.

Ginnie Hauk, manager of Canton Place, is enthused about Schneider's project.

"I really believe that the two generations work well together. There's a lot of talent in this building. As the program evolves, I think more and more seniors will come down. Mary Huntley has been open to it at the beginning and is here all the time. She realizes the importance of helping the future generation," said Hauk.

Huntley, who has lived in Canton Place for about two years, is somewhat of a born-again teacher. "I have a really ancient degree in education," she said. Huntley graduated in 1942 from State College in Plattsburg, N.Y., with a degree in homemaking.

"I really do like working with children," she said. " So many children don't have anyone home when they get home from school. Children take a lot of time."

Huntley wants more seniors to get involved with the students. "The program helps older people to remember back to their childhood. If they don't have grandchildren, they get pretty remote from their childhood," she said.

"Mary has been working with some first-graders who are kind of challenging. It's amazing how they will sit one-on-one with her. One little guy in second grade read with her, then played this game. His eyes were just sparkling when he left. He said, 'I've won. I never played that game before,' " said Schneider.

Schneider said that seniors do not have to have a college degree to help the students with their homework. Their life experience and willingness to give of their time are all that's required.

Initially, Schneider planned to run the program for six weeks, but based on the interaction she has seen between Huntley and the students, she has changed her mind. "Already I'm going to carry it to the end of the school year," she said.

She's considering extending the program into the summer, maybe including craft projects or involving the kids in some outside cleanup. "I think the possibilities are limitless for things we can do with them (the seniors). I think they are a valuable asset to the community."

Huntley believes teaching the Hoben students is an investment in the future. "I expect I'll be continuing for a long time."

Mature drivers return to the classroom to relearn rules of road

BY RENEE SKOGLUND
SPECIAL WRITER

When the instructor told the 13 seniors gathered at Plymouth's VFW Post 6695 one sunny morning last week that "55 Alive" was a class for mature drivers, not "old" drivers, there was a murmur of assent.

It's not the gray hair that sometimes gives senior drivers a bad name, said Frankie Gadson-White of Detroit, an instructor for the American Association of Retired Persons' "55 Alive" program. "It's the little old lady who's starting to shrink and is peeking through the steering wheel. While she's peeking, she's missing things."

"55 Alive" is an eight-hour, classroom-based defensive driving program offered by AARP to anyone 50 or older. In two half-day sessions, students take tests and learn about traffic laws, new vehicle technology and the defensive driving techniques necessary to combat slowing reflexes.

All classroom materials are provided by AARP. The program costs $8 and can be held in a variety of community meeting sites. Drivers do not have to be members of AARP to attend the class.

Although the reason for last week's "55 Alive" class, sponsored by the Plymouth VFW's Ladies Auxiliary, was serious, responses to Gadson-White's questions were sometimes humorous.

"What would you do when you come to a green light, traffic to your right should be stopping, but John Doe rolls right through?" asked Gadson-White.

"You stop him and punch him out," said Floyd Riley, 64, of Canton, a big, robust man wearing a "Grandpa gives the best hugs" sweatshirt.

"Cemeteries are full of people who had the right-of-way," countered a neatly dressed man to Riley's right.

"You should look both ways. You do not have the right-of-way until all traffic stops," corrected Gadson-White.

Ann Riley, 67, of Canton is married to "punch-him-out" Floyd. "I call him a curmudgeon," she said. "Honestly, I hate driving with him."

Riley said she was getting a lot out of the class. "I've learned things. We did a test at the beginning and there were several things I got wrong. I think you should improve on your driving skills all the time. This class will help me."

Eleanor Chelian, 65, of Plymouth Township, was surprised she had some wrong answers on the driving test Gadson-White handed out. "I haven't driven for a few years. I wanted to refresh my memory before I take my test," she said.

Plymouth Township residents Dona Venne, 70, and Elizabeth McCrossin, 79, are neighbors. Venne said she heard about the "55 Alive" program for years.

"I finally caught up with it," she said.

"I felt it was a good chance to get up-to-date," said McGrossin.

"I tell her (the reporter) about the way you speed in your driveway," said Venne.

"Get a life," said McGrossin.

■ Some auto insurance companies, like Foremost and Hartford, offer discounts averaging 10 percent to policyholders who have taken the class. The course must be repeated every three years to continue the discount.

"Don't watch me. It's the only place I can speed. I never had a ticket."

Doris Seisser, 75, of Livonia, was honest about her reason for taking the class. "I'm realizing my age is catching up with me," she said. She counts herself lucky. "I've only had one accident in my lifetime. I guess I'm a mediocre driver."

Barbara Turnbull, 66, of Redford Township, was taking the class with husband, Herbert, 69, a former commander of VFW Post 6695. Turnbull doesn't like to drive behind older drivers. "Not if I can get around them. They're unpredictable," she said.

The Turnbulls are heading out to Salt Lake City, Utah, this summer for the national VFW convention. "Our driving days aren't over," Barbara said.

No one in the class was looking forward to hanging up their hubcaps for good. In fact, Margaret Smith, 68, of Plymouth Township, was considering taking driving lessons for the first time in her life.

"I've never driven a car. I'm considering getting a license. I'd just like to know how to drive and be independent," she said.

Age brings wisdom, and class members have learned how to deal with rude drivers with quick-draw fingers. McCrossin recalled an incident when she was driving with her grandson. "My grandson said 'Grandma, that man gave you the finger.' I said that was his problem," she said.

Although "Alive 55" may not teach the finer points of road etiquette, it serves its purpose.

Tom Stockman of Dearborn Heights is the state coordinator for the "55 Alive," which began as a pilot program in 1970 in Florida and now is offered all over the country. He said surveys conducted in Florida and California show a 16-percent reduction in traffic violations and accidents for drivers who have taken the class.

"I've had people in my classes who were over 80. I wouldn't hesitate to get in an automobile with those people," he said.

Legislation in 34 states and the District of Columbia require automobile insurance companies operating in those states to offer a premium discount to graduates of state-approved driver-improvement courses.

Stockman also said some auto insurance companies, like Foremost and Hartford, offer discounts averaging 10 percent to policyholders who have taken "55 Alive." The class must be repeated every three years to continue the discount.

"It's a good course. Some of the things refreshed my memory," said Floyd Riley, who hasn't punched out another driver recently. "It's a course everybody should take."

For more information about "55 Alive-Mature Driving," contact Tom Stockman at 313-274-2157. Volunteer instructors are needed.

AARP offers safety tips

According to American Association of Retired Persons research, typical traffic violations committed by senior drivers include failure to yield right-of-way, improper turning, incorrect lane changing, passing and entering and leaving expressways.

The following are just a few of the safety tips discussed in the "55 Alive-Mature Driving" course:

■ Use your turn signals. Let people know your intentions.
■ Check your mirrors frequently.
■ Always look over your shoulder before putting the car in reverse.
■ Choose traffic routes that are less demanding. Avoid expressways if they overwhelm you.
■ Keep your air-conditioning or heater on lowest setting to minimize background noise.
■ Check for worn out exhaust pipes before they become noisy,
■ Watch for flashing lights: police, ambulances, fire trucks, railroad crossings.
■ Don't blast your radio.
■ Allow more time when turning left and passing on a two-lane road.
■ Parallel parking can be tough. Don't attempt it unless you have plenty of room and patience.
■ Remember, your peripheral vision isn't what it used to be. Be extra vigilant in right-of-way situations. Make it a group project for all passengers in your car.

n Know which drugs and medications can affect driving ability.

Many community organizations sponsor the "55 Alive-Mature Driving" by offering classroom space. If interested, please write to: AARP, 55 Alive-Mature Driving, 601 E. Street, NW, Washington, DC 20049.

Teen injured in assault; thieves get constructive

A Canton teen was slashed in the face with a bladed object — possibly a razor — when he crossed paths with two other teens near a dumpster at Bob's of Canton, 8611 Lilley Road. The robbers yanked a gold chain from the teen's neck and ran off, police said.

The victim, 16, was a Bob's employee who had been taking out the trash when the armed robbery occurred about 5:15 p.m. Friday.

The employee told police he heard voices near the trash dumpster in the southwest corner of the parking lot of Golden Gate Shopping Center and was then confronted by two teens in hooded sweatshirts, police said.

One demanded money from the teen, who said he didn't have any. The attacker slashed him in the face with the unknown blade and yanked the $200 chain from his neck. When the attacker slashed at him again, he cut the victim's shirt. he was taken to Oakwood Hospital for the cut to his face.

The attacker is described as a "chubby" black male with light facial hair on his chin and dark hooded sweatshirt. The other teen is described as a white male six-foot-two inches tall and 150 pounds. He was wearing a white hooded sweatshirt. Both were approximately 17 or 18 years old.

Larceny

Approximately $4,500 in construction equipment was stolen from the All Saints Catholic School construction site on Warren Road sometime between 5 p.m. last Thursday and 7 a.m. Friday.

Stolen was a generator valued at $2,500 and $2,000 worth of miscellaneous tools.

Stolen car

A 1988 Ford Mustang was stolen from a home on the 1900 block of Brookfield in the Palmer and Sheldon area sometime between 1-9 a.m. Friday. Michigan State Police reported recovering the vehicle at 4 a.m. on I-94 at 30th Street in Detroit. There was fresh damage to the driver's and passenger's side of the car.

ship with the Summit on the Park and some of our local health care providers, like St. Joseph Mercy, Henry Ford, and the United Health Organization, the organizer of Health-O-Rama. It's also been another great volunteer opportunity."

Several dozen local volunteers have also been recruited to help staff testing and information tables.

The biggest winners in Canton's Health-O-Rama will be the public.

In addition to a variety of free tests – blood pressure, vision, height and weight – a number of lab-evaluated screening tests will be offered at a discounted handling fee. These include a 23-profile blood panel; ovarian cancer; prostrate cancer; ulcers; colorectal cancer; and a take-home HIV test kit. Osteoporosis (bone density) screening will be available for $25.

Canton's Health-O-Rama provides an extra bonus for its attendees. Because the Summit on the Park is a year-round fitness facility, certified personal trainers will answer any questions about the Summit's floor-based and aquatic physical fitness programs.

■ Several dozen local volunteers have also been recruited to help staff testing and information tables.

"We'll be available to discuss what the classes are like, their formats and their benefits to your body," said Kathy Fordell. "I can give you an idea of what a personal training class is like."

Curious about your body's fat-to-lean ratio? Using a pair a Lange skin-fold calipers, trainers will gladly pinch your body in six locations. The ratio is determined using guidelines established by the American College of Sports Medicine.

"People are sometimes pleasantly surprised," said Fordell.

After you're poked, pricked and pinched, you can head over to the massage therapist, who will demonstrate her prowess in relaxing tight neck and shoulder muscles.

And if you're planning to hit a fast-food drive-through on your the way home, consult with the two registered dietitians before you leave. They'll gladly discuss diets that will help you shed a few pounds to diets that meet special medical needs.

The Canton Chamber of Commerce and Summit on the Park Project Health-O-Rama promises to make its community debut a good one. "This is a win-win for everybody," said Flaharty. "There's no way to lose on this."

The Summit on the Park is located at 4600 Summit Parkway, south of Cherry Hill off Canton Center Road. For additional information, call (313) 397-5110.

Work starts again on Newburgh Lake project

By Ken Abramczyk
Staff Writer

A $10 million restoration of Newburgh Lake has often been referred by county officials as a project to make the lake the "pearl" of western Wayne County.

The restoration came to an abrupt and tragic halt on Feb. 27.

That day Frank Zimmerman, president of Divtec Corp. of Romulus, drowned while working underwater clearing debris from the front of a sluice gate. Construction work stopped for several weeks as investigators sorted out information.

Officials with the state's construction safety division operating under the Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Act have not completed a final report, and would not comment on their investigation last week. County officials also would not comment on that investigation.

But the Newburgh Lake contractual work resumed last week and is expected to continue over the next 15 months, through July 1998.

Earlier this year John Carlo, Inc. of Clinton Township received a $7.4 million contract for the actual excavation and restoration. Carlo recently subcontracted remaining dam work to Merriman Construction of Romulus.

On Monday, contractors were using a crane to pull out steel "sheetpiling" comprising the cofferdam, which was acting as a temporary dam in front of the sluice gate, according to Jim Ridgway, the restoration's project manager and president of Environmental Consulting & Technology.

The first of several 8-inch "stop logs" — which actually resemble railroad ties — was removed to initiate the lowering of the lake's water level. The lake levels vary between six inches and 15 feet.

The first phase to lower the lake is expected to last two weeks when excavators begin removing soil and sediment contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from the lake.

Approximately 390,000 cubic yards of contaminated sediment will be removed, and about another 230,000 cubic yards of additional sediment will be excavated to increase the lake's depth.

Trucks will transport the soil to a landfill in Salem Township owned by Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI). That Northville firm was awarded a $1.6 million disposal contract to house the excavated soil.

Motorists who commute or drive on Hines Drive can expect to see Hines Drive closed as early as Tuesday between Jughandle Road, just west of Newburgh Road in Livonia, and just east of Haggerty Road.

Contractors will drain the lake, conduct two "kills" of potentially contaminated fish and remove contaminated sediment and soil throughout the next 15 months.

Ridgway expects John Carlo will begin excavating first in the area where contaminants flowed into the river and lake, then move into the lake in May.

Soil samples will be taken again throughout the lake to ensure that the levels remain at manageable levels. If PCB readings surpass 50 parts per million, then the contaminated soils must be transported to special landfills outside of Michigan.

Small dikes will be built so that spring rainstorms will not

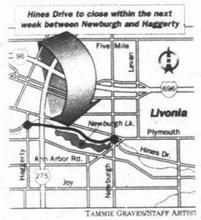
Hines Drive to close during lake restoration



TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Motorists who commute or drive on Hines Drive can expect to see Hines Drive closed within the next week between Jughandle Road, just west of Newburgh Road in Livonia, and just east of Haggerty Road.

Earlier this week Wayne County road officials expected that, if construction goes as scheduled and the weather cooperates, that portion of Hines Drive could be closed as early as Tuesday.

Contractors will drain the lake, conduct two "kills" of potentially contaminated fish and remove contaminated sediment and soil throughout the next 15 months.

"Trucks will be hauling dirt in and out of the lake area," said John Roach, public information manager of Wayne County's Department of Public Services. "We expect it will be closed for the next 12 to 15 months."

Motorists should commute around the Hines closure by driving on Plymouth Road between Haggerty and Newburgh, whether they are traveling eastbound or westbound. They can take either Haggerty or Newburgh southbound to pick up Hines Drive again at either location, said Roach.

County parks with public accessibility will not be closed during the Hines Drive closure. That portion of Hines also will be resurfaced during the closure, Roach said.

Commuters can expect to see work continuing this spring on Seven Mile Road between I-275 and Newburgh Road. Contractors are tearing out eastbound lanes, so those lanes are closed and eastbound motorists will be traveling in one lane on the northbound side of the road.

That construction work will be wrapped up by July, Roach said.

Special week spotlights need for infant immunizations

Wayne County is reminding parents to get their children fully immunized against vaccine-preventable diseases during National Infant Immunization Week, April 21-26, and is throwing in prizes and a drawing to make the task more pleasant.

County health officials are stressing that all two-year-olds need to get their basic recommended vaccines, especially since Michigan continues to rank last in the nation's immunization percentage rates, according to reports. In 1990, only 61 percent of Michigan's two-year-olds had received their basic series.

Michigan's goal is to raise immunization levels to 90 percent by the year 2000.

"The benefits of immunizations to protect our children against these serious diseases far outweighs the risks," said Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk, Wayne County medical director. "Making sure all children are fully immunized is a critical step in protecting most vulnerable citizens."

The recommended vaccines needed by age 2 include: diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis (whooping cough); measles, mumps and rubella; polio; HIB meningitis and hepatitis B.

This year, free prizes will be handed out during National Infant Immunization Week. Prizes include baby bibs, balls, Frisbees, McDonald's Band-Aids and free samples of Children's Tylenol.

Pregnant mothers participating in the Women's, Infants and Children (WIC) program will receive tote bags containing immunization, smoking cessation and nutrition information. A special drawing will be held at each of the Health Department clinics for Toys 'R' Us gift certificates.

Call any of the Health Department clinics for appointments or walk in:

■ Westland Health Center, 2501 S. Merriman, Westland, (313) 467-3319. Walk-ins Mondays, 8-11 a.m. and 1-3 p.m. By appointment, Tuesdays and Fridays, 8-11 a.m. and 1-3 p.m. By appointment, Wednesdays 8-11 a.m., 1-3 p.m. and an evening clinic 4:30-7 p.m.

■ Wayne County Health Department Community-Sponsored Clinic at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, 27475 Five Mile Road, Livonia. Free vaccines will be given to children on a walk-in basis on Wednesday, April 23 from 8-11 a.m.

schools' new touch-screen voting machines.

A recount conducted earlier in the day by the Wayne County Board of Canvassers at Herriman's request resulted in a tally very close to the original totals. The number of yes votes remained the same at 5,733, with no votes counted at 5,638 - up one from the 5,637 election night total.

The canvassers met at 7 p.m. to test the computerized equipment. Under state law, canvassers may grant a special election if equipment is found to have a mechanical malfunction or defect.

In a well-attended open session, canvassers tested the voting machines used in all 18 precincts.

A touch screen was wired to each of the 18 public counter units; machines that track the number of ballots cast; yeses; no's; and under votes. Shrewsbury, McLaughlin and Scott took turns entering into each counter unit pre-determined numbers of yes, no, and under votes by pressing areas on the touch screens. To properly register a vote, it's necessary to touch an area on the illuminated screen marked "Begin voting;" an area marked "Yes" or "No," and lastly, a space reading "End all voting."

Pressing yes or no twice negates a vote. Not pressing hard enough also results in a spoiled ballot. Pressing "End all voting" but failing to properly press yes or no prompts the message "Your ballot has been cast" to appear.

Recount: Beverly Bonning, an attorney representing Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, and Wayne County Elections Commission director Ed Carey go over the numbers Tuesday.

Appeal possible

In two precincts, the totals didn't reflect what canvassers intended to enter as yes, no, and neutral votes due to their own errors, which were acknowledged at the time.

Neither Herriman nor Thomas – the only challengers present – said they were prepared to appeal the decision. However Stephen Boak, attorney for Vorva and co-challengers from 14 precincts, has said he would appeal a negative ruling in Wayne County Circuit Court.

Herriman and Thomas addressed the canvassers prior to the vote.

"This process is important and precedent setting," said Thomas. "You are going to put a floor on what the minimum acceptable percentage of lost or spoiled votes is for voting with election equipment in our community. You are going to tell more than 700 people whether they can expect to go to their precincts with the confidence that they can vote and have their vote recorded."

Large undervote noted

Thomas quoted from the state Constitution, which reads, "the Legislature shall enact laws to preserve the purity of elections; to preserve the secrecy of the ballot, and to guard against abuses of the elective franchises." Even if the abuses are unintended, you therefore "must order a special election," said Thomas. He noted that in prior school elections, under votes ranged between .36 percent to 1.04 percent of the vote, as compared to 7 percent in the March election.

Herriman said it "would be appropriate to authorize a special election, even if the equipment is not defective, because it was deficient in the way it permits humans to interact with it. There ought to be some sort of feedback to allow voters to know their vote hasn't been registered. I urge you to consider the intent of the law to be certain that votes are recorded."

Former Plymouth mayor Bob Jones, who attended the evening session, said that while the decision "turned on a very stringent point of law, I'm concerned. You could see from the test there were problems recording votes. We are going to have to do a lot more training if we are going to make the system work."

Said Thomas: "Dan Herriman's point is well taken: laws haven't caught up with technology."

State can't overrule

The state elections bureau was represented by Sue McRill, who said that of the six jurisdictions in Michigan using the new touch-screen technology, "I'm not aware of any situations where under voting was as high as it was here."

The state has no authority to overrule the local board of canvassers, she said. Even if it did, it's unlikely - at least from McRill's standpoint - that an appeal would be successful. "Under the statute, a special election can be granted only in cases of a defect or malfunction in equipment. With new equipment, we expect a certain learning curve," she said. Moreover, the touch-screen equipment was approved for use by the state board of canvassers a couple years ago, McRill added.

The recount, which began at 8:30 a.m. and took until nearly 4 p.m., was closed to the public by the county election officials. Attorney Errol Goldman, Plymouth-Canton's assistant superintendent for employee relations - said he believed state law required the process to be closed,

Not so, said McRill. "While the county can limit the number of people in the room" and require that they not interfere with proceedings, "under state law it is a public process."

Road funding

Municipalities lobby Engler for fuel tax hike

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

The news is that city officials and Gov. John Engler are on speaking terms. It's not news that they still disagree.

Engler spoke to the Michigan Municipal League's legislative conference April 9 in Lansing and, according to his news release, said the state has been "a generous partner with municipalities."

"State funding for local roads increased more than 38 percent" since 1991, he said. He won't support a fuel tax increase for transportation, however, until all other efforts are exhausted.

MML wants more revenue through a fuel tax hike. Its March 26 legislative bulletin quoted the mayors of Dearborn and Kentwood as advocating "a substantial increase in the gas tax (that) must be part of any package."

Engler said he would "review" the PA 51 formula that allocates 21.8 percent of the $700 million fuel tax to cities and villages in 1998, when it expires, but promised nothing. MML wants changes in PA 51.

They disagreed on revenue sharing. The Norton Shores mayor complained of "the continuing deterioration of revenue sharing."

Engler replied that statutory revenue sharing (as distinct from constitutionally required revenue sharing) was intended for one-time capital projects, and too many cities are using it for general fund operations. (Engler's fiscal 1998 budget proposes that revenue sharing with cities be counted as road aid.)

MML and Engler agreed:

■ The federal government should return more road money to Michigan because this state gets back just 4 cents for every 5 cents it sends to Washington. Engler set a goal of $200 million and may get half. MML's stand: "The board joined with the governor."

■ There should be "tort reform to stop outrageous and expensive lawsuits," in Engler's words. "MML supports," said the cities. Their argument is that generous jury awards in road liability cases gut those budgets.

■ Changes in the compulsory arbitration law (PA 312) need to be made. MML cited a "one-sided arbitration settlement involving the state troopers." MML "welcomed the governor to the club."

Michigan has 534 municipalities – 271 cities and 263 villages. The figure does not include 1,241 townships.

'Turnback'

Engler said he's studying a "turnback" plan in which part of the federal fuel tax is repealed and replaced by an increase in the state fuel tax.

Taxpayers wouldn't notice a difference, but governments would. The federal government levies 4.3 cents per gallon for the general fund (not transportation). If Michigan could capture that for its state transportation fund, the net benefit would be about $194 million.

SEMCOG meetings

"Road funding will be a key item on the agenda," said the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, which will hold spring workshops later this month.

Wayne County units will meet from 9 to noon Saturday, April 19, in the Wyndham Garden Hotel at Metropolitan Airport, Romulus.

Oakland County units will meet from 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 22, in the county's Information Technology Building, Pontiac.

SEMCOG members include counties, townships and community colleges as well as cities and villages.

Hatless tuition

A key state senator warns parents of collegians against a Democratic bill raising the income tax credit for college tuition.

The idea sounds good – a $500 tax credit instead of $250 – but Sen. John J.H. Schwarz noted the bill eliminates the requirement that colleges and universities cap tuition hikes at or below the rate of inflation, currently about 2.5 percent.

The cap contains "a strong incentive for universities to keep tuition rates low," said Schwarz, R-Battle Creek, chair of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on higher education. The law was sponsored by Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton.

Last year 10 of the 15 universities and 13 of the 28 community colleges kept tuition hikes below the increase in the consumer price index (CPI), so their students' families could claim the tax credit. The University of Michigan and Schoolcraft College were among those whose tuition hikes exceeded the CPI.

Refer to House Bill 4191 when writing to your state senator, State Capitol, Lansing 48909.

Appointments

The governor has reappointed Dr. Paul DeWeese of Williamston to the Michigan Municipal Bonding Authority, which provides low-cost method of financing capital improvements for school districts and local governments.

DeWeese is founder of Teach Michigan, which advocates charter schools and a voucher system whereby the state could aid private and parochial schools.

DeWeese has been an emergency room physician at Eaton Rapids Community Hospital and Owosso Memorial Hospital. His term expires March 31, 2000.

Student writers head to 'boot camp'

They won't be marching cadence but aspiring high school writers will have the chance to be all that they can be by learning from professional writers during the seventh annual Summer Writers Institute at Lawrence Technological University. Enrollment is now open.

The SWI runs from June 30 to July 25, with sessions scheduled for 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays. A public reading will be held July 24 at 7 p.m. There is a $65 non-refundable registration fee.

The husband and wife team of Helen and Jack Zucker, of Oak Park, will be the fiction and poetry workshop leaders, respectively. In 1990 the Zuckers founded The Bridge, a journal of fiction and poetry.

Helen Zucker, an instructor at Oakland University for 13 years, has written for Monthly Detroit, and the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. She has had short stories published around the country and has won several fellowships. She holds a master's and bachelor's degree from Oakland University.

Jack Zucker, an Oakland University faculty member since 1984, has been teaching English since 1959. His poetry has earned him the Poetry Society of America John Masefield Award and his work was included in the Borestone Mountain Anthology's Best American Poets. He has also been published in Esquire. He earned a master's degree from New York University, and a bachelor's degree from City University of New York.

County will expand Web site

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Wayne County officials hope to promote county services and ease access for residents to county information with an expanded World Wide Web page on the Internet.

On April 3, county commissioners concurred unanimously with County Executive Edward McNamara on a two-year contract for $210,000 with Jurist Systems Group of Detroit to provide improved accessibility to the Internet, establish a Web site service home page and expand Web site content.

Wayne County's Department of Information Procession will be working with Jurist Systems.

County residents who own computers and access the Internet regularly can expect to find information about county commissioners, parks activities, immunization sites or even bid specifications on advertised contracts up for bid.

Currently computer users must dial different numbers to access various county web sites. The new system will allow just one number to be used for access to information from various departments.

The first information expected to be up on the expanded site includes the Electronic Procurement Assistance Center system, according to Carol Steffanni, deputy director of Wayne County's Department of Information Processing.

EPAC is a seven-day, 24-hour computerized on-line system designed to permit businesses, particularly those that are small and minority/disadvantaged, to submit bids and learn about electronically access purchasing opportunities from Wayne County and Michigan Consolidated Gas, using a personal computer.

The current EPAC system outlines bids below $15,000, but will be expanded on the new site for bids at all price levels. About 300 businesses are registered on EPAC.

A policy committee consisting of all elected county officials will examine and recommend what information should be accessible on the Internet.

Other information on park schedules of activities, roads, economic development and health will be available by the fall on the expanded Web site, Steffanni said.

"By having Wayne County on one site, they'll be able to see what county government does," said Steffanni.

While the Internet allows residents access to some information already, the new expansion will allow for improved accessibility.

For county departments examining bids, it will allow for quicker answers for questions on specifications or bids, and interaction to speed up purchasing orders.

For Wayne County's Department of Jobs and Economic Development, the expanded site means it can complete a geographic information system (GIS) from an economic development standpoint.

The Web site is expected to contain aerial photos of each property and statistics on each site, said Tim Johnson, director of marketing and communications division for the Department of Jobs and Economic Development.

Johnson said businesses can learn about loan programs to expand or modernize, or about brownfield sites, which are contaminated sites that can use a tax increment finance authority to finance clean up and allow for future development.

Jurist Systems will complete "firewalls" for computer security purposes. That allows only certain specific activities so viruses and hackers can't make it into the Web site, Steffanni said.

Residents will be able to access information on roads, whether the road is a local or county road or state highway, what projects will be undertaken over the next several months, and pothole information.

Wayne County asks for and expects county residents to provide input on the available information.

"It will be a growing learning experience as we find out what people want," said Dave Wattenberg, information processing consultant for Wayne County.

"What we find with computers is it levels the playing field. You get people who won't tell you something in the hallway, but then they will e-mail you with what they think."

To find out more about Wayne County Jobs and Economic Development, contact that department on its Web Site at www.waynecounty.com. To obtain information about Detroit/Wayne County Metropolitan Airport, use the Web Site number of www.metroairport.com.

flood over areas where contaminated soil lies, while channels will redirect those flood waters on the south side of lake.

"You want to keep certain things dry and you want some flood control," Ridgway said. "The construction site will be flooded a couple of times during the project."

The stop logs can be returned to the sluice gate if the lake level needs to be raised. Ridgway expects Carlo's workers will be dredging on a small barge, which will need various levels of water to float and operate around the lake area. About 10 acres will need to be dredged, Ridgway said.

Nearby residents may notice a smell from decomposing seaweed, which will be exposed to open air on the land in the lake area. Residents will not smell rotenone and potassium permanganate during the fish kill, Ridgway said.

As contractors remove the killed fish on the same day as the rotenone and potassium permanganate are applied, residents should not smell the decomposing fish, Ridgway said.

Contractors will exercise measures to control odor if necessary.

"If there is a problem with odor, and we see it and smell it, and what impact it has on residents, we may use something called a landfill foam," Ridgway said. "It is sprayed on, and both the soil and foam is removed.

"But it is very expensive to use. We do have money in the budget and you try to anticipate what the problems will be."

Contractors may be able to add lime to the soil while excavating, Ridgway said.

The first fish kill will be completed between June 15 and July 15, while another will be completed in July 1998. Game fish will be stocked in July 1998.

Schoolcraft registers for spring semester

Almost 400 classes are available to college students during Schoolcraft College's spring semester, which begins May 5. For the college student who attends a nonlocal university and is home for the summer, the wide ranging curriculum and small class sizes present an excellent opportunity to earn extra credits or completed required courses.

Schoolcraft offers both day and evening classes at its Livonia and Garden City campuses and most classes convene Mondays through Thursdays so that students have their weekends free. The schedule also includes 21 television courses, two audio classes and one e-mail class — Introduction to Short Fiction.

New students must meet with a counselor before registering. Students with a touch-tone phone can call in their registration by dialing (313) 462-4800. Spring phone-in registration continues through May 1, during the hours of 5 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 5 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

Walk-in registration begins April 28 and continues through May 2, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 9 a.m. through 4 p.m. on Fridays.

Walk-in registration takes place in the McDowell Center, Room 200. Registration at the Radcliff Center takes place Wednesday, April 30, between 1 and 7 p.m.

For information, call (313) 462-4426. Schoolcraft College is located at 18600 Haggerty Road.

Local sports editor named O&E Journalist of the Year

Brad Emons, sports editor at the Observer Newspapers, was honored as the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers Journalist of the Year last week.

Emons, a Plymouth resident and graduate of Franklin High School in Livonia, was among five staff members nominated for the award.

"To receive this award and be recognized by my peers is very gratifying," Emons said. "I feel I play a supporting role in a very large cast. I've received lots of support from not only my supervisor, Susan Rosiek, but also from many other people over the years including editorial receptionists, photographers, copy editors and the graphics department, many of whom often go unrecognized for their efforts.

"I also have appreciated the efforts of my most immediate coworkers in the sports department, including Dan O'Meara, C.J. Risak, Steve Kowalski, Rich Shook and Neal Zipser.

"The greatest thing, from day one, about working at the Observer is that people have been always willing to lend a helping hand. And that also goes

Education gap widening, says WSU's Adamany

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Unless public policy changes in funding for colleges and universities, increasing tuition costs and less scholarship money will prevent the poor from obtaining a post-secondary education, according to the president of Wayne State University.

David Adamany believes that American society will be hurt by the growing educational gap between the poor and other classes, and admission trends that discourage diversity at American colleges and universities.

Adamany spoke to the editorial staff and corporate officers from the Observer & Eccentric Newspaper on Thursday at a breakfast to honor the O&E's Journalist of the Year.

Adamany will step down as president once a successor is found. Adamany has been president of WSU and a professor of law and political science at WSU since 1982.

Prior to his arrival at WSU, he served for three years as vice president for academic affairs and professor of political science at the University of Maryland, and held the same position at California State University, Long Beach. Adamany holds undergraduate and law degrees from Harvard University and master's and doctoral degrees in political science from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

"We have been raising the cost of going to college for a period of at least 15 years," Adamany said. "We have raised the cost because we have raised tuition. That trend doesn't follow the Consumer Price Index, but the incomes of those who wish to attend college do follow (the CPI)."

Appropriations for higher education have remained virtually unchanged since 1978, Adamany said.

Shifts in public policy for scholarship funds, namely the downsizing of scholarship grants into loan programs, also has had a detrimental effect on opportunities for people to obtain a college education, Adamany said.

"It's a terrible prospect of paying off the country's debt," Adamany said.

Another educational issue facing Americans is the growing gap between the poor and other income levels in accessing computers.

"Technology will overtake us," Adamany said. "It will have a more profound impact on the prospects for success between the 'haves' and 'have-nots.'"

Students will find themselves so far behind, that they may be considered illiterate, Adamany said.

Adamany also was concerned with a recent 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in a California case on preferential treatment for minorities.

Adamany, whose father emigrated from Lebanon, said Christians and Arabs, and Jews and Arabs in the Middle East have not gotten along because these groups have "no history of being incorporated" into each other's societies.

"Post-secondary education is a way for people to be incorporated in our society," Adamany said. "We have to think of ways to open the doors."

Wayne State currently educates a populace consisting of 56 percent women, 22 percent African-Americans — just under the Detroit metropolitan composition of 26 percent — and about 6 percent Asian, along with large contingents of Mexican- and Arab-American students.

"It makes for a very exciting institution," Adamany said.

If college admissions used merit criteria alone, it may have prevented Adamany from gaining admission into Harvard College in the 1950s.

On test scores alone, Adamany would have failed in his attempts to enter Harvard, he said. But the then-Harvard president in 1952 believed Harvard would not be a great university if 80 percent of the students came from the East Coast.

"It had to have a national student body, even if it meant turning away applicants from the East Coast," Adamany said.

If universities were to be American-, and society-incorporated, people of all economic backgrounds and all regions of the country needed to be admitted, Adamany said.

Adamany was asked if universities should scale down their goals, given the high cost of education. "As compared with other industrial countries, we have lower tax burdens (25 percent) than other countries," Adamany said.

The U.S. has a good allocation when compared to the countries. "But the portion of the budget taken up by defense is quite high," Adamany said. That is a burden that comes with being the most powerful country in the world, Adamany said.

Adamany was asked about what could be done about the "dummying down" of students because so many were entering college without basic academic skills.

"Students in American secondary schools do not have the proficiency as do students in post-secondary schools in the rest of the industrialized world. We tend to think of potential college students in educating every high school in the country. In foreign countries, they sort them early."

In the European system of tracking, students are placed in programs specializing in trade schools or in academics, which may skew comparisons. "We need to be careful." Adamany said.

"We see much weakness in test scores where people are economically disadvantaged."

Adamany also believes school principals were no longer principals, but "middle managers."

"We ought to go back for empowerment of school principals. We train them now to take orders from school boards and superintendents. Instead of leaders of schools, they've become middle managers."

Also nominated were Susan DeMaggio, special editor in charge of the O&E Malls & Mainstreets sections; Sharon LeMieux, photographer for the Observer Newspapers covering Farmington and western Wayne County; Sharon Dargay, reporter on staff at the Rochester Eccentric and Darrell Clem, reporter on staff of the Westland Observer.

The award carries a cash prize and plaque. Emons is the 14th staff member to receive the award in as many years.

Emons, 42, has worked at the O&E for nearly 20 years. He holds a bachelor's degree in journalism from Franklin College of Indiana in 1977. He is a member of Covenant Baptist Church in West Bloomfield. He also is a member of the Downriver Runners and the Heart and Sole Running Club of the Livonia Family YMCA.

He was nominated for the award by Livonia reporter Matt Jachman.

"What Brad brings to coverage of suburban athletics — detail, a broad base of knowledge and an appreciation for small personal stories as well as stories on wins, losses and championship triumphs - is reflected in the solid sections he turns out twice weekly for the Westland and Livonia editions," wrote Jachman in his nomination.

Emons has received many state and national honors for his work over the years, but 1996 was a special year for him. He took first place honors in the sports writing and breaking news categories of the Suburban Newspapers of American Editorial Contest.

"Brad's hard work, strong ties to the communities he covers and deep personal knowledge of the prep sports scene in southeast Michigan make him a superb editor," said Susan Rosiek, managing editor of the Observer Newspapers.

In addition to his editing duties, Emons helps coordinate the Observerland Boys Track Relays and the Observerland Wrestling Tournament, both of which are open to high school athletes and sponsored by the Observer Newspapers.

District praises superintendent, offers extension

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

In his latest job evaluation, Wayne-Westland school Superintendent Duane Moore has drawn sweeping praise from school board members who voted Monday to extend his contract through June 30, 2000.

Moore's $118,606 salary won't change for the fiscal year that begins July 1, amid budget constraints that are forcing board members to tighten spending. However, his pay hasn't been established for the final two years of his contract.

As a reward for an "outstanding" evaluation by board members — the highest rating possible — Moore will now be eligible for 40 vacation days rather than 20.

Board members doubled Moore's vacation time to provide an incentive for him to stay here, rather than risking a potential leadership change as the district faces crucial issues such as a looming budget deficit.

"Frankly we just couldn't afford to pay more," board member David Cox said Tuesday. "But we recognize that we have an outstanding administrator here."

Moore started his Wayne-Westland job in July, 1995 on a three-year contract. His starting pay was $110,000 when he replaced former Superintendent Larry Thomas — a casualty of a divided school board that opted for new leadership.

Each year, the board has routinely added another year to Moore's contract to maintain a three-year agreement. The latest one-year extension will carry Moore through June 30, 2000.

Board vice president Debra Fowlkes on Monday read a five-page board statement commending Moore's job performance in several key areas.

In response, Moore, 55, attributed part of his success to district employees, particularly his administrative staff.

"I truly think that we have an outstanding team working in the Wayne-Westland schools," he said.

The prepared board statement heaped praise on Moore for his professional leadership, curriculum/instruction efforts and finance expertise. He also won support for his relations with district employees, board members, community groups and government officials at the municipal, state and federal levels.

Moore's "leadership and vision" have fueled "a positive atmosphere which focuses on the student and has resulted in our staff continuing to improve their commitment and dedication to the teaching profession," Fowlkes said.

The board's statement commended Moore for:

■ WAYNE-WESTLAND SCHOOLS

Duane Moore

■ Continuing to implement a five-year curriculum improvement plan.

■ Continuing to fine-tune a middle school concept that is "going very well."

■ Forming more partnerships with local businesses and governments.

■ Fueling productive relations with community groups such as chambers of commerce, parent-teacher groups and Rotary clubs.

■ Seeking ways to reduce expenses, such as current efforts to examine employee insurance packages and workers compensation programs.

■ Lobbying state legislators for long-term solutions to school funding problems.

Moore's job in Wayne-Westland marks his fourth superintendency. His last post was in the South Lyon district.

hires and oversees 75 employees at the municipal libraries, and is reimbursed by each community.

Through the Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, all county residents who qualify have access to free library service. Here, hundreds of books on tape and periodicals on disk are mailed each week.

The Illingworths and the 3,300 other users in Wayne County who are blind or have other impairments — to the point that they cannot turn pages — can listen to their favorite books, receive a current popular magazine on an audio disk or borrow videotapes of movies with special narration describing the action.

The service is free to users, funded through money from Wayne County, while equipment is paid for and supplied by the Library of Congress.

The Illingworths particularly enjoy the talking books.

George Illingworth recently listened to "Life on the Color Line: The True Story of a White Boy Who Discovered He Was Black" by Gregory Howard Williams. Williams reflects on his life, as he was raised believing his father was Italian. He details his feelings after he went to Muncie, Ind., and discovers that his father's side of the family was actually black.

The Illingworths receive a catalog quarterly of talking books, listen to a tape of the list, then they can call the library or type up and mail an order form.

"When the spirit moves us, we read," said George.

Books that 'talk'

Talking books generally are created by the Library of Congress, but Wayne County also records some works through volunteer readers.

When deciding to tape a particular book, the Library of Congress chooses a narrator whose voice and speech inflections are appropriate for the book's context, said Pat Klemens, county librarian.

"They're people who are professional actors or speech therapists," Klemens said.*"(Library users) love it."

At the Wayne County library, narrators generally read local books, such as a book on a regional leader, or a book with regional appeal. The volunteers read in a soundproof booth. A monitor listens to the narration outside the booth and informs the reader if a particular tone or voice inflection is inappropriate for the story's context.

The narration of about 350 pages can be taped on three regular cassettes. The cassettes use four tracks and run at about half the usual speed.

X- and O-shaped letters on top of the cassette player's operational switches allow for a blind person to feel which switch indicates play or stop. Blind or disabled people can use the machines as long as they continue to borrow talking books from the library, Klemens said.

Library users can borrow the tapes for eight weeks.

"We mail them out with several days lead time and they mail them back to us," Klemens said. "I'm always surprised. It seems to take longer to listen to a book."

Library users can send reference questions on the Internet, or e-mail a question or book requests to the library.

Every year the users receive a catalog, containing categories such as For Younger Readers, Romance and Humor.

Faster publication

In September 1996, a bill amended the Copyright Act to allow a reproduction without the copyright owner's permission of "nondramatic" literary material in alternative formats for use in publications for the blind.

"People now get books much more rapidly," Klemens said.

What's new?

The library recently purchased a large number of books in Arabic and Polish. Klemens expects to add popular radio show tapes from the 1940s and 1950s to the collection.

"The demographics show that 60 percent of library users are past the age of 60," Klemens said. But users can be as young as 2. They range from students to white-collar workers, some employed, some unemployed, Klemens said.

"We really have a cross-section of the population," Klemens said.

They enjoy best sellers from Mary Higgins Clark, and Louis L'Amour and W.E.B. Griffith, Klemens said. "They tend to like romances, Harlequin novels, and you see a little more inspirational. Not necessarily theological, but inspirational."

Young readers enjoy the "Goosebumps" series, while preschool readers like "Dr. Seuss." "Black Beauty" remains popular for preteen girls, along with "Sweet Valley High" and "Anne of Green Gables."

The library has four librarians, two library aides and five part-time student assistants who help with the sorting of mailed talking books.

"We have the most wonderful group of young people," Klemens said. "They are good with what they do, they do so much in rewinding and duplicating tapes and repairing tapes."

videos money for operations, including employee salaries, utilities and money for some equipment.

Materials are delivered directly to a patron's address by mail.

Here are some of the services the library provides:

Talking books. These are books recorded on tape and vinyl record. The collection covers topics similar to those offered in a mid-sized public library, including best sellers, mysteries, biographies, science fiction, poetry, humor, westerns and suspense.

All books have been recorded in their entirety.

The Library for the Blind does not offer recorded textbooks or music. Equipment to play the talking books is provided on extended loan.

Magazines. More than 60 popular titles are available in recorded format on audio discs.

Large Print Books. These are available for adults and children in 14-point print and larger.

Descriptive Videos. Residents with vision difficulties can also receive on loan popular videos similar to what they can rent from video rental stores. Braille is provided to all qualifying residents.

Library items also can be loaned to the handicapped. Magnifying aids are loaned to people for them to decide what kind of magnifier will serve them the best.

Other items are available for use at the library, including a closed circuit TV enlarger and Kurzweil Reading Edge — a machine that reads aloud printed material — and a Kurzweil voice-synthesized computer.

Who is eligible?

Those residents who are unable to hold or turn pages of print books also qualify, besides those who are blind or have poor vision. The service can be long-term or temporary.

"People who use our library must qualify," said Pat Klemens, Wayne County librarian. "That (qualification) was originally blindness, but it was modified for anything that prevented them from reading print, in that they cannot hold a book or turn its pages. It can include people on medication or someone in an auto accident and can't use their arms.

People must be certified as having a physical disability by a medical doctor.

People are eligible if vision in their "better eye" is 20/200 or less with correcting glasses, or the widest diameter of visual field is no greater than 20 degrees, or they cannot see well enough or focus long enough to read standard print, according to the Library of Congress.

Both individuals and organizations, such as schools and nursing homes, may enroll in the Talking Book program.

How to apply

The library staff will send residents an application for enrollment in their program. Residents complete the application and have it signed by a "certifying authority" and mail it to 33030 Van Born, Wayne, Mich. 48184-2496.

Persons who are visually or physically disabled may have the application signed by a doctor, optometrist, visiting nurse, counselor, etc. Persons who are reading-disabled must have the application signed by a doctor of medicine.

Persons may request an application be sent by calling (313) 274-2600.

Urban sprawl

SEMCOG officials say signs point to 'managed growth'

STAFF WRITER

■ Patrick Brunett, SEMCOG's environmental and land use manager, said he is "a little more on the optimistic side. For the last 20 years you couldn't say 'land use' in Michigan because people equated it with stopping growth. Now we (the region) are willing to talk about it."

One year you see a fox den and deer tracks in the vacant lots near your new home. Next year you see a shopping center full of chain stores and traffic lights at the corner.

And yet there is little overall population increase. People, businesses and health care offices just shift around – outward.

For three decades, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments has talked against "urban sprawl" and in favor of "managed growth."

This year the numbers continued to worsen. Ed Limoges of SEMCOG's data center staff told delegates from seven counties in March that single-family lot sizes were getting larger. Average density was three households per acre before 1990; two to three per acre in 1990-95; and one per acre in Livingston County.

"Our forecast is that we're likely to see further loss of farmland," said Jerry Rowe, also of SEMCOG's data center staff.

Nevertheless, Patrick Brunett, SEMCOG's environmental and land use manager, said he is "a little more on the optimistic side. For the last 20 years you couldn't say 'land use' in Michigan because people equated it with stopping growth. Now we (the region) are willing to talk about it."

Toward consensus

In a recent interview, Brunett and Rowe pointed to many signs that people from many kinds of communities across the state are edging toward a consensus on managed growth and away from sprawl. Items:

■ The Michigan Legislature last year had 50 or so bills on land use. In previous years, there had been but a handful.

■ The leading name in the Legislature is not a big city academic but Sen. Leon Stille, a former business executive and village president of Spring Lake (pop. 2,500), near the Lake Michigan shoreline.

■ The Michigan Economic and Environmental Roundtable has taken up land use as a project. Key player: Dow Chemical of Midland.

■ Environmental groups are looking beyond fragile meadows and bird populations to the urban sprawl issue.

■ Churches in Detroit and the near-in suburbs are seeing a linkage between the problems of poverty and sprawl, said Brunett, singling out interfaith organizations like the Moses and Jeremiah groups.

■ The Legislature streamlined the Condemnation Act, which in the past has blocked the assembly of large land parcels for redevelopment. "But that act needs more reform than we were able to get," said Brunett.

■ Former House Speaker Paul Hillegonds, now president of the corporate-sponsored Detroit Renaissance, told SEMCOG delegates about a bipartisan group of lawmakers coming together on land use reform issues, though so far there is no consensus.

■ Dr. Robert Burchell, of Rutgers University's Center for Urban Policy Research, did a study for SEMCOG in which he said that a 10 percent more compact land development would save millions in local government and homeowners' dollars.

The savings nationally would be "15 percent in developable land, 12 percent in local roads, and an average of 15 percent in water-based development utilities" because homeowners would be watering smaller lots.

'Get together'

The problem is not how good guys in white hats can beat bad guys in black hats.

"Unless less we get the urban and rural interests together, we're not going to go anywhere in this state," said Brunett.

"There is a loss of credibility when both sides are after each other," said Rowe.

Detroit lawyer Norman Hyman, who has represented developers like Taubman as well as municipalities, cautions those who point a finger at developers. Said Hyman in response to Hillegonds' speech:

"It is not developers who are responsible for urban sprawl but municipalities. The declines in density relate to restrictive, exclusionary housing practices embodied in local zoning ordinances. Moreover, not only are our suburban municipalities requiring larger lots and mandating lower densities, but by and large, they oppose other higher density residential residential uses, such as multiple residential. . .

"In California, there are even single-family residential developments with as many as nine to 10 units per acre. The last time I looked, in a county in Florida adjoining Tampa, four units per acre is considered the dividing line. . ."

School board

June race will gauge progress

If times were normal, the June 9 school board election could easily be considered a ho-hum affair. Plymouth-Canton voters have already approved a $79.7 million bond issue for construction of two new schools and other improvements throughout the district. Three candidates are running for a single, open seat now held by longtime trustee David Artley, who will retire.

But times aren't normal in Plymouth-Canton. There is an undercurrent of uncertainty in the district and the board race, coupled with other events this spring, may be viewed in some corners as a mandate on Superintendent Charles Little's administration. While it would be unwise to judge the administration's effectiveness based solely on its handling of elections or their results, the Observer believes Little has entered into a key period in setting the district's overall direction for the next decade.

Tuesday's recount was the first step in what could be a lengthy – and cumbersome – series of individual challenges to the passage of the bond issue last March 22. Four challengers are basing their protests on the fact that 720 ballots were miscast at the polls and not counted. The bond passed by 96 votes out of 11,300 cast.

Still to be determined is whether the district will have to hold a revote on the bond question in a special election. Little has put bond construction projects on hold until a decision is made.

Of the three candidates seeking a school board seat, only Suzanne Dershem of Canton was an unabashed bond supporter. Carol Bollman, active with the district's Housing and Facilities Committee, was a lukewarm supporter after the administration struck down the committee's recommendation for a new middle school. Roland Thomas, a former board member, openly opposed the construction of a third high school as outlined in the proposal. After voters approved the plan, Thomas told school officials he would support its implementation.

Other issues at play in the board race are continuing friction between teachers and administrators; divisions within the communities served by the district; the struggle to keep a lid on class size at elementary and secondary levels; and the search for ways to compensate for inequities built into the state's Proposal A — mandated school funding law.

Little, who came on board in July 1994 following the retirement of longtime Superintendent John Hoben, has made these areas priorities, particularly the class-size and community issues.

Unfortunately, the outcome in most school board races is left to a small minority of voters. Even with added interest in this year's Plymouth-Canton election, that isn't likely to change. Still, the administration and current board can look to the June vote as a progress report.

Nearly three years into his tenure, Little has reached a kind of critical mass. If the programs and philosophy he has pushed can't gain acceptance in the schools or community at large, moving the district forward will become increasingly difficult. Success in those areas will create an atmosphere of accomplishment where real gain is possible.

Libraries: their role expands

National Library Week. It's one of those annual events that is more often overlooked than celebrated. It doesn't have the consciousness-raising element of "Black History Month" or "Women's History Month," the personal involvement of "Take Your Child to Work Day" or even the tongue-in-cheek possibilities of "Groundhog Day." But it's a week that should be celebrated.

Public libraries have long been the repositories of knowledge and learning. In today's rapidly changing society, they have taken on even greater roles. Suburban libraries have become centers of community activities, providing gathering places and meeting rooms for local organizations. They have taken the lead in bringing new technology (the so-called "Information Superhighway") to their patrons. And they have done it all at a bargain price for the taxpayer.

Property owners in western Wayne County pay, on average, about 1 mill for library services. For the owner of a $200,000 home, that amounts to $200 a year – roughly what it would cost to purchase eight hard-cover books. Circulation figures indicate that library patrons check out considerably more materials than that. In January alone, according to figures compiled by The Library Network, Livonia's four libraries circulated almost 66,000 items.

In Canton, the figure was more than 63,000, Plymouth 43,000, Westland 30,000, Redford 18,000 and Garden City 8,800. In addition to books, those figures also include materials such as videos, audio cassettes, compact discs and CD-ROMs. That $200 wouldn't go far in purchasing these items.

But community libraries have begun to provide an even more important service than simply circulating books and videos. As innovators in the technological revolution, community libraries are trying to bridge the gap between the "haves" and the "have-nots."

The theme of this year's National Library Week is "Kids Connect @ The Library." According to Mary R. Somerville, president of the American Library Association, the goal of the ALA is to have every public school and college library on-line by the year 2000. Somerville says that families with incomes of $50,000 a year are five times more likely to have computers at home than other families.

"As librarians," she said, "we're concerned that all children and adults have access to this important new technology. A library card gives every child the key to success."

And with such technological services as Metro Net and The Library Network, even the smallest community library has access to other resources. Patrons at any of the member libraries of The Library Network have access to more than 500,000 titles in the shared access catalog. And all Metro Net and TLN libraries offer Internet access at terminals in their own facilities.

Just this week the Canton Township Library was selected to receive the "Library of the Future Award" from the American Library Association for its Cyber Kids room.

As libraries bridge the gap between the old and new technologies, those resources literally become available to anyone with a library card. That's something worth celebrating.

Poor legislation

On Feb. 26, 1997, the Michigan House of Representatives passed HB 4044. This bill, sponsored by Rep. Kirk Profit, R-Ypsilanti, has been referred to the Senate Committee on Judiciary. If the bill passes the Senate and becomes law, it will affect every citizen in Michigan. While the bill is only one sentence long, that single sentence will have far-reaching impacts:

"The Common Law doctrine that precludes a firefighter or police officer from recovering damages for injuries arising from the normal, inherent, and foreseeable risks of his or her profession is abolished."

What does this mean to us as citizens if this bill becomes law? If your house catches fire, and a firefighter is injured while extinguishing the fire, you may now have not only the trauma of losing your home, but you may also face a million-dollar lawsuit from the firefighter who was injured. A small business owner is held up, and a police officer is shot while apprehending the suspect. That businessman may now lose his business due to an expensive lawsuit brought by the officer. The possibility of a possible lawsuit will linger every time a citizen dials 911 for help.

This bill was introduced to remedy what many saw as an unfair policy against police and firefighters. Currently, they are unable to bring suit against citizens if they are injured in the line of duty, as they are engaged in professions where they are expected to face danger and take risks.

As the Michigan Supreme Court wrote in Krfeski vs. Modern Wholesale Electric Supply, the public hires, trains and compensates firefighters and police officers to deal with inevitably dangerous situations, and the public should not be made liable for injuries that result from the officer's performance of the very function that he or she was intended to fulfill. Safety officers are covered by worker's compensation if they are injured on the job, which is paid for by the taxpayers.

Unfortunately, worker's compensation does not always provide enough income for some who are seriously injured. This led to the argument that safety officers should be entitled to sue citizens for damages in cases where negligence by the citizen caused the injury. From this argument comes HB 4044, which instead of fixing a legitimate problem causes an even greater one.

It is quite apparent that police and firefighters take risks and put their lives in danger every day to protect the public. As the law currently stands, they have no legal recourse if injured, and must rely sorely on worker's compensation, which sometimes not enough. Obviously this is a problem everyone can sympathize with. However, with one sentence, the Michigan House of Representatives has irresponsibly addressed this problem. By allowing any public safety officer to sue any citizen, for any injury, they have solved one problem. The public safety officers do now have legal option. Unfortunately for Michigan citizens, they may now face liability each time the police and firemen leave the station. Instead of completely abolishing a law that served an important purpose, the House should have either addressed the shortcomings of the worker's compensation, or allowed litigation only in instances of injuries caused by intentional negligence.

Police and firefighters arguably have among the most dangerous of jobs. However, they are trained and expected to face danger every day. They accept this risk when they are hired by the taxpayer. We should not have to fear being sued every time we call for help.

Orchestra a plus

Plymouth has an outstanding symphony orchestra (unusual for a city of its size) which not only benefits the Plymouth-Canton area but Belleville, Northville and Novi as well. Each year it provides well-rounded programming including music of all types for children and adults.

The orchestra grew from a dedicated nucleus of about a dozen members in 1947 to 90 members in 1997. These talented and dedicated musicians under the direction of conductor Russell Reed truly enjoy playing a wide spectrum of orchestral selections. This year included the music of Wagner, Tchaikovsky and Haydn in the beginning of the season to a program of Spanish classical guitar, The Nutcracker Ballet and a children's Family Fantasia in the middle season.

The orchestra will end the season in April with a Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band performance at the pops concert.

A symphony orchestra is a real asset to a community. It sparks civic pride, increases the value of commercial and residential property, to say nothing of the cultural advantages it offers the citizens of the community and their children.

Attend concerts, discuss the music with your children, and most importantly, enjoy with them good musical programming. Support the orchestra with your attendance and contributions. You will not regret the rewards.

POINTS OF VIEW

Build foundation for reading early

"Kids Connect @ the Library" is the theme for National Library Week and kids clearly do connect at the Canton Public Library. Since last July, 850 kids have Cyber Kids stickers on their library cards; more than 1,600 toddlers and preschoolers attended storytimes last year; 1,374 children participated in the summer reading program; 777 first-graders visited the library with their classes in March; and 403 Beanie Baby fans came to the Beanie Baby programs last week.

It's also clear that the options of connecting have expanded because today's library is a hybrid of the old and the new.

A child still checks out a book on a president for a school report, but now also clicks on the Hall of Presidents Web site to access information from the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C.

A Detroit Pistons fan still takes home a biography of Grant Hill, but now also checks the Pistons homepage for Hill's current stats. A toddler learning how to count chooses a board book and a Sesame Street counting video.

A kindergartner looking for Arthur can find him a book, CD-ROM, video and book/cassette, all of which are available at the library. Technology and books, Internet training and storytimes thrive side-by-side as kids find many ways to connect at the library.

I spoke with a mother of a 2-year-old who described their library visit: "We always greet Karibu and Rafiki, (the giraffes), and say "Hi" to Emma, (the library gerbil), then find the featured fish in the aquarium, put on a puppet show, sit under the skylight with a book, and play McGee on the computer. And then often begin all over again. Kristen just can't wait to visit the library – often entering way ahead of the rest of the family."

Judy Teachworth

While her older brothers and sisters may be more restrained in their approach, they are just as eager. They come to read favorite stories, to find information, to satisfy their curiosity, to access the world through the Internet, to play computer games and gain skills using technology. The library is truly an exciting, fun place to be. No wonder kids can't wait.

If we care about our children and our nation, adults can't wait either. If we want to be a nation of readers, we must begin early.

Research has shown that reading aloud to a child is the single most important factor in raising a reader and the most formative years are from birth to 5 years old.

If we want our children to be knowledgeable in a global environment, we must provide them with the necessary tools and information.

If we seek to offer equal opportunity and access to all our children, we need to level the playing field. If we wish to give our children a chance to succeed, we, as a society, need to allocate our resources and time to provide for the least powerful among us for they are the future.

Youth Services librarians know that kids can't wait. One day, they are toddlers in storytime showing us their new shoes, and before we know it they are surfing the Web as Cyber Kids showing us why the printer won't work.

The childhood years go by very fast. When children are given a good foundation, they can build upon it for the rest of their lives. We have a very short time to get it right.

Judy Teachworth is head of the youth services department at the Canton Public Library.

Race for Cure offers breast cancer reminder

My mom doesn't walk well, but otherwise is healthy. There is no history of breast cancer in our family. But my daughter and I will be among the more than 15,000 people taking part in the Race for the Cure this Saturday at the Detroit Zoo as we have done in years past.

Carol Lifton's mother died of breast cancer 25 years ago at the age of 59. Carol, now 59 herself, was diagnosed with early phase breast cancer in one breast four years ago. The Beverly Hills resident, accompanied by two of her daughters, will have special status among the more than 600 breast cancer survivors registered for the race, the fourth largest aimed at breast cancer in the country.

Lifton, talkative and energetic, was taken aback but not by surprise, by her diagnosis. "When my mother died of breast cancer, I said then I knew it (breast cancer) would happen to me – but I'd find it in time." And when it did, she chose an aggressive course of action: a double mastectomy with reconstruction at a later date.

She acknowledges husband Sidney, a retired electrical contractor, preferred that she undergo less drastic treatment. But, "I'm pigheaded and stubborn, and it was my life," she asserts. "I wanted to live. I had waited for this diagnosis my whole life and I wasn't going to take any chances." As it turned out, her doctors also found cancer in her other breast.

Lifton, a travel agent for Mayfair Travel in Southfield when she and Sidney aren't traveling themselves, didn't have to go through radiation or chemotherapy. "I was lucky. Everyone should be as lucky as I was." But she is very conscious of a legacy she doesn't like. Those with breast cancer in their immediate family are at higher risk. And she has three daughters and a 10-year-old granddaughter she describes as "the light of my life."

Judith Doner Berne

"I thought positive," she said. And by her example, she hopes she has turned what could have been a legacy of fear into a legacy of hope. She caught her disease early. She attributes her now-healthy status to early detection, education about the disease and the fact that she's in touch with her body and knows it well.

It's a legacy we should all be passing on to our daughters and granddaughters. Because even if breast cancer runs in families, just 20 percent of breast cancer patients can confirm a familial link. Other factors that put a woman at higher risk include: menstruation before age 11 or menopause after 54, having a first child after age 30 and early exposure to radiation. Obesity, high-fat diets and alcohol consumption of more than two drinks a week also influence.

Lifton wants to see more research. And that's where Race for the Cure, a group of road races across the country, puts 75 percent of its proceeds. Locally it's presented by the Karmanos Cancer Institute, in affiliation with The Detroit Medical Center and Wayne State University.

Remaining funds go to promote awareness, education and early detection. And this year, for the first time, a free, eight-hour Expo on those very subjects will be held the day before the race. From noon to 8 p.m. Friday at the Oakland YWCA, 839 S. Crooks at the corner of 13 Mile in Clawson, you can get important information on breast cancer prevention and treatment and be entertained as well, sponsored by Jacobson's.

The Expo is open to everyone, whether or not you enter the race. But it's also your last chance to register for Saturday's 5K or one-mile walk or run since there's no race day registration.

Breast cancer is no casual matter. It threatens one in 12 white women and one in 14 black women by age 75.

Monthly self examination, yearly medical screening and regular mammograms for those either at risk or over 40 make it more likely that it will be detected early when it can be cured. It bears repeating that once a year we join together to Race for the Cure. Once a month, each woman must race for herself.

Judith Doner Berne, a West Bloomfield resident, is former managing editor of the Eccentric Newspapers.

Adamany takes sensible position

America is the most diverse country in the world, possibly one of the most diverse societies in history.

Michigan's early history, for example, mingled French Catholic fur traders with indigenous Indians. Later on, English-rooted farmers and businessmen employed a dazzling array of ethnics – Irish, Poles, Flemings, Czechs, Hungarians, Lithuanians. After World War II, drawn by the presence of good wages and the absence of Jim Crow segregation, thousands of black families immigrated from the rural South to the factories of Detroit, joined eventually by a latter-day Diaspora of Christian and Muslim families from the Middle East.

The obvious sociological question – how to keep such a heterogeneous society from flying apart at the seams? – has haunted our institutions. For the last 30 years or so, it has been an article of establishment faith that one important tool to do so is "affirmative action" – policies that cause social institutions to set aside certain benefits for ethnically defined groups.

A highly charged example is admission to colleges. Virtually every university in Michigan tilts a certain portion of its admissions to accommodate students, principally black, who are deemed "disadvantaged" by income, by past segregation or by poor schooling.

These policies came about in response to differing kinds of arguments, from the civil rights movement in the 1960s asserting simple justice to the round of student activism in the 1980s with the sometimes explicit threat to "shut the place down."

Though certainly not all minority high school graduates who are admitted by Michigan's universities are less qualified by grade point average or aptitude test scores than the average of majority applicants, there is no doubt that some are.

This has created two kinds of conflicts. At some universities where admissions are highly competitive – the University of Michigan, for example – white parents are outraged when their children are denied admission in favor of minority students with poorer test scores and grade point averages. Once on campus, however, many minority students are equally outraged to find themselves stereotyped as "quota students," presumed to be academically inferior.

All this has contributed intensity to a series of legal challenges now being mounted against affirmative action programs of all sorts around the country. Voters in California, for example, after a nasty campaign that bordered on race-baiting, voted last November to adopt Proposition 2209, which eliminates any race-based preferential policy whatsoever.

And there are legitimate constitutional questions having to do with the simple "race-blind" equality set out most compellingly in the 14th Amendment. The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year struck down the University of Texas Law School's admissions policy, which was in part tilted to admit minority students, on the constitutional grounds that race or ethnic-based admission standards are on their face impermissible. Other suits are sure to come, and the entire issue of affirmative action surely is headed for the U.S. Supreme Court.

Philip Power

So it was with great interest that I listened last week to retiring Wayne State University President David Adamany, who spoke to the Journalist of the Year awards program at some of these newspapers and was asked about affirmative action and university admissions.

"The big difference between America and other societies around the world is that our society, because so heterogeneous, has adopted for many years a kind of 'inclusionist' idea," said Adamany.

"Our social policy for many years has been to try to find ways to include into full membership in our society the endless stream of immigrants: Irish, eastern European ethnics, blacks, Latinos and Asians. That's the way we have continually fashioned and refashioned America, including my own family which originally came to Wisconsin from Lebanon.

"There is no doubt that access to learning and technology, even more than family wealth, will determine success in the years to come," Adamany continued. "That's what our great universities offer, and that's why admission to them is such an important thing. And if we are going to continue to include everyone into American society, that's why we need to preserve affirmative action admission policies."

It's good to see such a sensible position taken on a contentious issue by such a distinguished leader.

FAMILY ROOM

KAREN MEIER

Things to do list includes some clogging

On my "To Do Someday" list I've added clogging. That's right, clogging. It's got nothing to do with drains or arteries – those are under UN-clogging, on my "To Do Right Now" list.

But this clogging, this is something else. It's dancing. There's clacking and stomping and tapping and rhythm and music and an ensemble of joyful noise to be made in this dance.

And I like that. Just like I like tap dancing, although I've never seen a live performance of tap dancing, but I have seen it in old movies and on TV.

I remember one Bill Cosby Show episode where he and an old guy, a tap dance instructor, had dueling feet. The instructor would tap out a completely impossible rhythm and yell out to Cliff Huxtable (Bill Cosby), "Challenge," and then Cliff would have to repeat the rhythm. And back and forth they'd go.

I remember standing in my family room and watching that when I should've been doing a thousand other things, folding the laundry, scrubbing the floor, baking brownies, something other than watching tap dancing. A commercial finally intervened and I went back to real life, the dishes, but now adding a terrible, amateurish tap dance done in tennis shoes at the kitchen sink.

And just yesterday when I finished mixing up cake ingredients in the mixer I, and I always do this (ask my annoyed children), clanged and tapped the beaters on the top edge of the bowl to get the batter off. It, too, is a rhythm sort of thing with crescendos and decrescendos and variations of sound, metal on glass, and metal against metal. It's quite dramatic. And dumb, according to certain young critics. Oh, well. It's a joyful noise.

Make a joyful noise and all, you know.

So maybe that's why clogging is so appealing. It has that at its heart – a joyful noise.

A 'Gate-ful' noise

One recent Friday I sat in on a rehearsal session of the Sixth Gate Cloggers up in Novi. And this group, I'm telling you, was terrific! The cloggers were all women, with one of the two instructors a man. One dancer, Donna, had been with the group since it began nine years ago and she explained how the Sixth Gate Cloggers practice two times a week, three hours a pop!

Now the short while I was there, I saw these dancers dancing and dancing and dancing. Tapping and moving and clacking and clicking the whole time. A ton of energy was expended in that short amount of time. A ton!

The Sixth Gate Cloggers are good. And they're in demand. They're asked to perform all over the place, about 50 shows a year. And, of course, these shows are above and beyond the six hours of practice a week. Needless to say, I was overwhelmed by the dedication and commitment to this art form these women had.

And it is an art form; it's an art form that originated in the Appalachian Mountains here in the U.S. and has been influenced by other dance art forms including tap and Irish step dancing.

Appalachia? Tap? Ireland? Clogging? But what about Holland? I asked. You know, the wooden shoes? The Dutch "clogs" dancers wear in Holland? Oh, no, no. That's not this. This clogging is done with more regular looking shoes with taps nailed or glued to the toe and the heel. No wooden shoes here. As a matter of fact, at practice, the women, many of them anyway, wore tennis shoes – with taps glued on the bottoms.

Practice attire also consisted of jeans, pants, or shorts. Performance attire, though, consists of short, fluffy, flouncy, kind of like square dancing dresses only shorter, with lots of leg showing.

Verna, another Sixth Gate Clogger, filled me in on just how much fun the performances are. She's the group's master of ceremonies; she loves the job. She knows so much about the history of the dance. And her enthusiasm for it just bubbles over. She figures it's a way to skip all that dusting and vacuuming and those household chores and go clogging instead.

Difference in age

I could have signed up right then and there! But there was this age difference, you know. And then the three solid hours of dancing, twice a week, and the 50 performances a year. At almost 40 years old, I couldn't keep up with that, not now.

But my heart and feet were captivated. I felt like I could clack and tap and turn and jump,

Father knows best: When it comes to children fathers James Dolan (left) and Christopher Lee (center) have managed their time and made strong commitments to spend quality time with their children. Along with fellow father Kevin Kelly, they were part of a panel discussion on fatherhood, moderated by WDIV-TV news anchor Emery King.

Three fathers got together last week to talk about their kids. Those there to listen came away with a view of fatherhood that goes well beyond being the good provider.

"It comes down to time management," says James Dolan, principal of Carter Middle School in Warren. "You can't do everything, so you have to decide what you want to do and set priorities. You have to make changes in your life not out of need, but because you want to."

A father and grandfather, his message is one that was repeated again and again as the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Out-Wayne County supporters gathered at its annual meeting to "Celebrate Fathers!"

Joining Dolan in discussing fatherhood were Christopher Lee, the father of four children ages 6-11, and Kevin Kelly, the father of a 20-month-old son.

Offering insight into fatherhood of the '90s was Dr. John Farrar, the father of two children, a counselor at Livonia Churchill High School and adjunct professor at Madonna and Eastern Michigan universities.

The panel looked at fatherhood in three ways – how they juggle their work schedules and other demands and share parental responsibilities with their wives and others and the resources they have identified as helpful. Their comments painted a portrait of fatherhood that goes beyond the traditional concept of being the good provider.

According to Farrar, the roles of mother and father are merging, and while some may say "only a mother loves the smell of a dirty diaper," today's father sees a correlation between being a good father and the number of activities he performs, specifically diaper changes.

"Raising kids is an adventure," Farrar said. "We all have ideas in our heads about raising children and our behavior flows from those ideas. The common thread here is that being a father is important, and each of these men has chiseled a notion in their head that the role of the father is important."

That was a part of the message Dolan, a Royal Oak resident and father of five adult children, conveyed. For him, it is important to do things with children. When his children were young, he was a coach at and member of the Shrine Grade School's Board of Education and Dad's Club and Royal Oak T-ball coach.

While his wife stayed home, they worked together and shared the responsibilities for raising their children. Since he was the educator, he was better with homework. She was the better listener and would read to the children, he said.

"We worked out our priorities and we never made decisions without sitting down and talking it over," he said. "When our oldest son went to college, she had to go to work full time. It showed she cared and set an example. It's definitely important to do things together."

Past shapes present

For Lee, it was the lack of not having a father growing up that motivated him to be the father he is today.

"I used what I lost as a child to regain it through my children," he said. "I'm there; I'm part of their lives. I take them to school, I pick them up, I do the homework and I take them to dance classes. Saturdays and Sundays are theirs. It's quality time for my children and my wife."

It is no easy feat for Lee, an Ecorse resident. He works as a Hi Lo driver at Dana-Spicer in Pontiac and commutes 150 miles each day. He has chosen to work midnights so he can spend time with his children and squeezes in sleep while they are at school and for a few hours before leaving for work. He also set aside two hours each evening for quality time with his wife.

He also does volunteer work with the schools and coaches and helps out with the summer baseball league.

"It's very stressful and strenuous on me, but I'd rather do this to have the quality time with my children because my father was not there for me," he said. "There's a lot on my shoulders, but I enjoy it. I'm kind of a homebody. I love being home with my wife, I love my wife."

Kelly's "good fortune" is the two 24-hour shifts he works as a Detroit firefighter. His schedule gives him five days in which to spend with his 20-month-old son Kendall.

"I include my son in my activities," he said. "I don't like to be away from my son, so I take him with me. I take him to as many things as I can and only juggle things when I have to."

Born and raised in Detroit, Kelly is committed to the city. He is

Parenting tips to help fathers

It's not easy being a father, but fathers shouldn't think they aren't as important as mothers. The roles might not always be the same, but their interest in their children can make a significant difference.

Children don't need perfect fathers; they need caring and involved fathers.

- Give your children hugs and kisses often. Children need physical comfort and contact from their fathers.
- Tell them how much they mean to you.
- Praise their efforts, especially if they don't succeed; teach them the importance of doing their best.
- Give your children rules and make sure your rules are clear to them; don't say maybe when you mean no.
- Explain your rules; it's important that children understand why they need to follow those rules.
- Be consistent with your rules; children get confused when you seem to change your mind without any reason.
- Use effective discipline to help children develop self-control; set limits and encourage children to feel good about themselves.
- Gain your children's trust by listening to them when they come to you with a problem. Children will welcome your guidance, but are not likely to listen to lectures.
- Be honest with your children; admit your mistakes and teach your children the importance of taking responsibility and making amends.
- Tell your children that they can come to you with any questions, otherwise they may receive inappropriate answers from other people.
- Remember that you are your children's role model; they are looking to you to learn how a responsible and mature adults acts.
- Do household chores with your children; make them feel good about helping you and teach them that fathers also share household duties.
- Encourage your children to think for themselves; guide and help them with their decision making process.

Auction attracts generous bidders

The sound of nervous laughter could be heard at times last Friday in Laurel Manor as anxious guests tried to outbid one another all in fun and for a worthwhile cause – scholarships for students at Madonna University.

The university's ninth annual Scholarship Dinner Auction drew more than 400 supporters and raised more than $260,000 for student scholarships.

Items such as a weekend getaway including four tickets to a Notre Dame home game went for $5,000. A Lalique crystal statue of the Madonna drew lots of attention and was sold for $3,250 to Madonna University trustee William Phillips and his wife, Bridget.

The unusual was a challenge to some, such as the opportunity to be a fighter pilot for day flying one-on-one air combat in a Marchetti. It was purchased by university trustee Elizabeth Stevens and her husband, John, for $1,600.

Four people will get to spend a day on the J.W. Westcott, the only postal boat service in the world. The boat is harbored on the Detroit River and delivers mail while vessels are underway. The trip went for $300.

The annual items – very much in demand – are the Name Your Street sign, which was purchased by trustee Jean Coor. The sign is located on a prominent spot on the Madonna campus.

Another annual favorite, the eight-hour Lake Erie fishing trip with Sister Lauriana and Captain Fred Benson, went to William Johnson, owner of Burton Manor in Livonia, for $1,200.

An original oil painting by Canadian artist Littorio Del Signore, will hang in the main entrance of Madonna University's Residence Hall, thanks to James and Earlene Bonadeo of Plymouth. Bonadeo.

A Madonna trustee, he and his wife bid $6,000 for the painting and donated it to back to the university. In return, the Bonadeos received a framed, sign lithograph of the painting.

This year's auction paid special attention to Madonna University's 50th anniversary. General chairpersons Jerry and Justine Raymond hosted a champagne and roses reception, greeting guests with a yellow rose in honor of the golden anniversary.

The silent auction featured gold-colored mystery bags that went for $50 each.

Gold bars were placed on the silent auction tables containing dinners and get-away weekends, with bidding starting at $80 for each.

Adding to the celebration was Joe Weaver, retired editorial director of what was formerly WJBK-TV2, as master of ceremonies and an appearance by Miss Michigan 1996 Jennifer Lynn Drayton.

Topping off the evening was the drawing for the 1997 Cadillac Catera, donated by Don Massey of Don Massey Cadillac in Plymouth. The lucky winner is Frank Pellerito of Beverly Hills.

The raffle for the Cadillac Catera brought in more than $112,000 of the $260,00 in gross profit from this year's event.

"It is heartwarming to see so may committed to providing scholarships for Madonna University students," said Sister Mary Francilene, university president. "Because of their very generous support many students, including some students who might not have had the opportunity to attend a college or university, are earning college degrees.

"More than 50 percent of Madonna students receive financial assistance."

and learn something new, and keep up if only ... Oh, forget that "if only." I'll do this. I plan on jumping in, with both feet!

But I'm going to have to wait, right now six hours a week and 50 performances, that's too much time away from home and the children. But someday.

Someday'll be OK. After all, the Sixth Gate Cloggers are 15 to 35 years OLDER than I am! Verna, the bubbly, energetic master of ceremonies, is going to turn 76 this October.

What do you think of that?

EFFECTIVE MARKETING

You are feeling a little hysterical--your home has been listed for two weeks, and you have seen only one newspaper ad featuring it. Although your house is being shown regularly, you are wondering if the agent is doing enough.

Sellers often equate effective marketing with classified ads in the weekend Sunday real estate section, however, the most skilled Realtors know their market well enough to know where the prospective buyers for your home are likely to come from. They will look for the best ways to reach those people through direct mail, telephone contact or specialized ads in neighborhood publications. They will also work to get their colleagues excited about your house, especially agents who have many listings or sales in your neighborhood. And remember--it is important for you and your agent to communicate often so you will know exactly what is being done to sell your home.

Glaser's visit will focus on gay/lesbian issues

A prime moving force on behalf of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered Presbyterians, Chris Glaser will present a series of workshops and worship services, "Coming Out to God," Saturday, April 19, through Tuesday, April 22.

After receiving his master of divinity degree from Yale University's School of Divinity in 1977,, Glaser served for 10 years as director of the Lazarus Project, a groundbreaking ministry in Los Angeles funded by the Presbyterian Church to help reconcile the church and the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered community.

He was the only openly gay member of the Presbyterian Task Force to Study Homosexuality and also served as national coordinator of Presbyterians for Lesbian and Gay Concerns. He also is past editor and current contributor to their newsletter.

In addition, he has traveled internationally, leading hundreds of retreats and workshops and giving thousands of presentations and sermons.

He is the author of four best-selling books – "Uncommon Calling – A Gay Man's Struggle to serve the Church," "Come Home – Reclaiming Spirituality and Community as Gay Men and Lesbians," " Coming Out to God – Prayers for Lesbians and Gay Men, Their Families and Friends" and "The Word Is Out."

Glaser will present "Coming Out as Sacrament – An Interative Workshop" 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday, April 19, at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, 27475 Five Mile Road, Livonia.

The workshop will explore the concept of coming out as a sacrament led by Glaser who has a completed a book on that theme.

Gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered people have a unique sacrament to offer the world and the religious community – coming out. Coming out serves as a sacrificial offering – a sacrifice because of the risks involved and an offering because of the gifts (charisms) the church offers. Coming out is a sacrament that reveals the at-one-ment possible between our sexuality and spirituality, among sexual orientations.

Cost of the workshop is $30, including lunch. For more information, call (313) 422-1470.

Glaser will participate in worship services at 5:30 p.m. April 19 at the First Presbyterian Church, 1669 W. Maple Road, Birmingham and at 11 a.m. Sunday, April 20, at Northside Presbyterian Church, 1679 Broadway, Ann Arbor.

A social gathering, hosted by Presbyterians for Lesbian/Gay Concerns, will be held at 5 p.m. Sunday at the home of Dan Stoepker, 18695 Wildemere, Detroit. Participants should bring food or beverage to share. For more information, call Stoepker at (313) 861-3476.

A clergy luncheon "Claim the God within You," focusing on the insights of J.M. Nouwen, will be noon-2 p.m. Monday, April 21, at Fort Street Presbyterian Church, 631 W. Fort St., Detroit.

The informal conversation on Nouwen's life, ministry and insights will be led by a Presbyterian student and personal friend. Nouwen warned against letting others hook our "wounded" selves rather than be attentive to the Gospel message that God has to proclaim.

Cost will be $10 and includes lunch. For more information, call (313) 961-4533.

Events on Tuesday, April 22, include a pre-Presbytery event, "How to Minister to Gays/Lesbians and Their Families," 3-4:30 p.m. and "Issues and Concerns," a Presbytery meeting, that evening, University Presbyterian Church, 1385 S. Adams, Rochester. For more information, call (810) 375-0400.

Glaser's visit has been organized by the Social Justice and Peacemaking Committee of the Presbytery of Detroit and its Task Force, Homosexuality and the Church.

When Kelly talks about sharing the parenting, it includes not only his wife, but their families. The Kellys, he explained, made a choice to live near their families to "not only share parenting with each other but with our families."

Making specific choices

"We made a choice to live near our families to share the good times and have support," he said. "You have to yes to the people who say yes, they want to help. The big thing is to share the responsibility."

Kelly, however, admits that saying yes to help is easy when he needs to get something done, but other times he "feels guilty." And on the flip side, he has learned to say no and not overextend himself.

Each of the fathers has found different people and institutions have served as resources in the effort to be good fathers.

■ 'We went to school before we got married, we had a home before we started our family. We did it in the proper sequence which makes it easier to be a father and a husband.'

Kevin Kelly
–Detroit firefighter

Kelly credits his church and being raised in a Christian, nonviolent faith, his family and friends. He also points to his parents as role models and the fact that they stayed together even when his father was drinking. It has given him the faith "that we will be here for the long haul."

"We planned out our relationship," he added. "We went to school before we got married, we had a home before we started our family. We did it in the proper sequence which makes it easier to be a father and a husband."

Lee credits his late grandmother, the woman he met as a teen who invited him to play his guitar at her church and the minister who "made me feel complete." They gave him "meaning, hope, faith and a belief in what I can and will do," he said.

Raised "in a faith community," Dolan sees that as a resource for fathers. It shaped how he saw himself, how he viewed what is right and wrong and what was expected of him. Likewise, he views education as extremely important, but sees it as failing to teach children what is right and wrong.

Asked how to avoid the "wait until your father gets home" syndrome, Dolan pointed out that both the man and wife have to be equal disciplinarians, one should not have to wait on the other, a concept Farrar agrees with.

"The line should be 'I need to talk to your mother or your father,' " he said. "People see it as opposites on the continuum, but is possible as a parent to be affectionate and an effective disciplinarian. Children need both simultaneously to grow up to be responsible adults."

WRC program earns state honors

The Schoolcraft College Women's Resource Center's program "From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips" has been named an exemplary college program by the Community College Services Unit of the Michigan Department of Education.

The DOE cited it as "one of the best in the state." The 16-week program is designed to help displaced homemakers get back into the work force.

Displaced homemakers, either female or male, are defined as those who have worked in the home for a period of time, have diminished marketable skills, and must seek paid employment because of the wage earner's death, divorce, desertion, separation or disability.

In the "From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips" program, students come to class or activities twice a week for 122 hours of involvement and instruction.

The "Chips" program is very structured and includes orientation, assessment, tuition help, study skills, group and other support activities, two hours of group physical activity each week, assistance in resume writing, a Job Club, referrals, job placement and a boutique for free professional clothing.

There also is a two-hour college credit class.

"This is the key place," said Nancy Swanborg, WRC director. "Participants come out with an official college transcript."

When participants complete the program, they often go into vocational education programs to further their skill levels in preparation for a job.

Swanborg estimates that the earning potential of the program since it started in 1986 is more than $15 million, based on the initial wages paid after participants were first hired.

The "Chips" program is part of the Carl D. Perkins Act funding, which provides support to single parents, displaced homemakers and single pregnant women enrolled in vocational education programs. So far this year, 255 persons have participated in the Perkins grant program at Schoolcraft.

Participants tend to be between 25 and 34, although the program attracts persons ranging in age from the teens to the 60s. Most have a limited yearly income, and some are receiving Aid to Dependent Children support.

Of 214 students, 157 had some post-high school education or training, 85 had a high school diploma or general equivalancy diploma and 99 had a regular job.

Swanborg said they come from all over southeastern Michigan and 87 percent hear about the program by word-of-mouth. There are several students whose spouses are disabled, some with closed head injuries, Parkinson's disease or coronary problems. There are several widows, one who has four children under age 10.

"Many women are angry," Swanborg said. "They are widowed, divorced, or something has happened to force them out of the home. One of the things we do best is work on their self-esteem.

"We help them to be able to say, 'I'm lovable and capable.'"

Swanborg said anecdotal data indicates that participants' children often do better in school after their parent gets involved in the WRC, so that its programs have a positive influence on the entire family.

The designation came as part of the Michigan's 1995-96 annual performance report for the Perkins grants. WRC received a special certificate of recognition in honor of its achievement.

For information about the "From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips" program or other available services, call the Women's Resource Center at (313) 462-4443.

Schoolcraft College is at 18600 Haggerty Road, Livonia.

Built by book lovers for book lovers.

At Barnes & Noble, we know there's simply no such thing as a great bookstore without a great staff. That's why we make sure ours is the best. Someone is always readily available to steer you to the right shelf or help you track down that elusive title or author you can't quite recall.

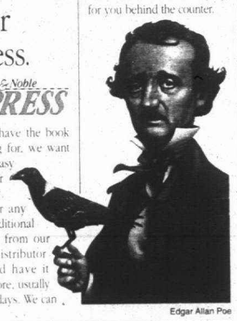
As for the atmosphere of our new store, we consider it to be the book lover's second home. Browsers are always welcome here. Chairs and benches scattered throughout the store invite you to sit and stay awhile. And nobody—absolutely nobody—is in a hurry for you to leave. We want you to feel so at home, you'll forget you aren't.

Sue Grafton

Customer orders are our business.

Barnes & Noble EXPRESS

If we don't have the book you're looking for, we want to make it as easy as possible for you to get it. We can order any one of an additional 200,000 titles from our nationwide distributor network, and have it back in the store, usually within seven days. We can also order any book in print directly from the publisher. When your order arrives, we'll notify you by telephone and have the book waiting for you behind the counter.

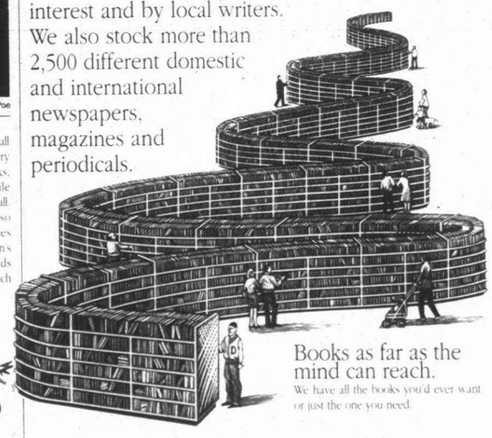


Edgar Allan Poe

A Title Wave of Selection!

We invite you to browse through our extraordinary selection of more than 150,000 titles. Wander in and out of sections on literature, poetry, cooking, business, computers and history that are more comprehensive than anything you've ever seen. Our inventory also includes thousands of unusual and hard-to-find titles from independent and university presses. And, of course, we have an extensive selection of books of local and regional interest and by local writers.

We also stock more than 2,500 different domestic and international newspapers, magazines and periodicals.



Books as far as the mind can reach.
We have all the books you'd ever want or just the one you need.

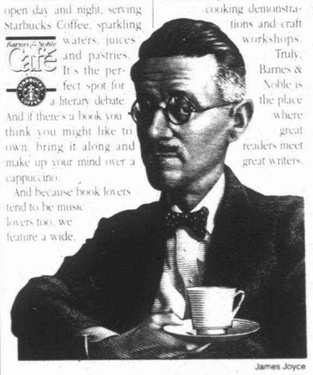
There's more to a great bookstore than just great books.

Nothing you could want in a bookstore has been left out of the new Barnes & Noble.

The Barnes & Noble Cafe is open day and night, serving Starbucks Coffee, sparkling waters, juices and pastries. It's the perfect spot for a literary debate. And if there's a book you think you might like to own, bring it along and make up your mind over a cappuccino.

And because book lovers tend to be music lovers too, we feature a wide, deep selection of more than 25,000 CDs and cassettes, a special-order system that brings you any of 100,000 additional titles (most within seven days), and in-store listening stations where you can "preListen" to selected recordings. All of this plays out in a serene, comfortable atmosphere that won't hurt your eyes or your ears.

Barnes & Noble hosts a variety of literary events ranging from author readings and signings to musical and theatrical performances to cooking demonstrations and craft workshops. Truly, Barnes & Noble is the place where great readers meet great writers.



James Joyce

For children, a 15,000-title library of dreams.

Strolling into our children's department is like—well, like stepping back into your own childhood.

Here's a space as big as most other complete bookstores, full of kid-sized tables and chairs and, of course, all the familiar classics from Dr. Seuss to Mother Goose, all the Caldecott and Newbery award winners, workbooks, learning aids and juvenile fiction—some 15,000 titles in all.

This magical place is also home to weekly storytimes and special treats like children's author visits. Your kids will love it as much as you do.

St. Mary's readies for Pascha

Bishop Demetri

While Easter day is already long forgotten by many American Protestants and Roman Catholics, Orthodox Christians all over the world are still preparing for and anticipating their Easter or "Pascha" celebration on Sunday, April 27.

For St. Mary Antiochian Orthodox Church in Livonia, this year's celebration will be a very special.

In April 1996, just prior to the special Holy Week of services before Easter, St. Mary's Church facility was devastated by an accidental fire which consumed its entire contents.

While this tragedy was an emotional strain and inconvenience, St. Mary's parishioners never doubted that, through the leadership of the Rev. George H. Shalhoub, their church building would be restored. This year, the community of St. Mary will celebrate Pascha on with a special fervor and with a renewed sense of resurrection.

Commonly referred to in the west as Easter, the Eastern Orthodox "Pascha" is preceded by the Great Lenten fasting period and stretches 40 days after the actual celebration of the Resurrection to the feast of Christ's Ascension.

The word Pascha, or Passover the most ancient Christian term, refers to the passing over "from death to life, and from earth to heaven" affected by Jesus's Resurrection. In the Bible Jesus is referred to as the "paschal lamb" (see 1 Cor. 5:7).

The difference in calculating the day of Pascha goes back to early Christian times. For the Orthodox, the celebration may fall on the same day as the western Easter, or as long as four weeks after, as is the case this year.

The main difference in timing occurs because the Orthodox Church makes its calculation based upon the Jewish Passover which falls on the 14th day of Nisan, a lunar-based calculation. Pascha is dated each year on the first Sunday following the spring equinox, the date the Jewish Passover fell in the year that Jesus was crucified.

St. Mary's Holy Week and Pascha services this year (to be held in Cultural Center at 18100 Merriman Road) include the Bridegroom Service at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, April 21 and 22; Holy Unction Service at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 23; Service of the Twelve Passion Gospels at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 24, and the Great and Holy Friday Services at 8 p.m., Friday, April 25, Divine Liturgy at 10 a.m. and Pascha (Easter) Service at 10 p.m. Saturday, April 26.

On Sunday, April 27, the Agape (Love) Vespers with Bishop Demetri presiding and including readings of the Gospel in many languages will be at 1:30 p.m. A children's Easter egg hunt will follow.

The community is invited to participate in the services, especially people able to read the Gospel in Asian languages, such as Chinese, Japanese, Vietnamese and Korean. For more information, call the church office at (313) 422-0010.

Classical Bells concert to benefit Piano Teachers Forum

Classical Bells, Michigan's premier handbell ensemble, will present a spring concert at 4 p.m. Sunday, April 20, at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Livonia.

The concert is sponsored by the Livonia Area Piano Teachers Forum with the proceeds to be used for the scholarship fund and other sponsored forum student activities.

The concert will feature arrangements of favorite melodies from Handel and Grieg to Joplin and Fats Waller, as well as original compositions for handbells, some with instrumental accompaniment.

The concert is open to the public. Tickets cost $8 for adults, $6 for senior citizens and children under age 12. Group sales of 10 or more are available in advance at $6 each. They are available from any Livonia Area Piano Teacher Forum member or by calling the church office at (313) 422-1470. They also will be available at the door on the day of the concert.

Classical Bells rings six octaves of English handbells plus five octaves of choirchimes, one of the few handbell sets this large in the Midwest.

The 12 members of the ensemble are handbell ringers and directors from many communities in the Detroit Metropolitan area. They combine an entertaining presentation with outstanding musicianship, making Classical Bells as delightful to watch as it is to hear.

Classical Bells, organized in 1983, has been featured in many programs with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, including the 1994 Holiday Pops concerts with conductor Richard Hayman, and the Detroit Aglow program in the Fox Theater.

The ensemble has produced two recordings broadcast over local radio stations and a cable television program shown each year during the winter holiday season.

Classical Bells members share the art of handbell ringing to encourage the proficiency of others. Programs in schools bring the joy of ringing to children, who delight in "hands-on" experience with choirchimes. Individual and group workshops are offered for all levels of ringing.

Classical Bells is affiliated with the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers and with Young Audiences of Michigan. The ensemble is endorsed by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church is a 27475 Five Mile Road, Livonia.

Canton clips Northville, 1-0; Salem rolls

SOCCER

First blood drawn.

And it goes in Plymouth Canton's favor.

The Chiefs' Emile Meier drove home a penalty kick at the 17:53 mark of the first half Monday at Northville, and the defense did the rest as Canton blanked the Mustangs 1-0.

The win was important to the Chiefs in two ways: It put them atop the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division to start the season, with a win over one of the three teams (Canton included) expected to challenge for the title; it also avenged the Chiefs' early-season loss to the Mustangs last season, a loss that dumped them from the WLAA race before it even started.

"It was a good game for us," said Canton coach Don Smith, his team now 1-0-1. "It was a rough game — it was rugged. We controlled the ball, we controlled the play. But they were marking us pretty tight and knocking us around.

"We didn't give up, we fought back. We need this kind of game."

Canton was awarded a penalty kick after a Northville defender knocked a corner kick, taken by Lisa Tomasso, out of the box with her hand.

Kristin Lukasik was in goal for the shutout for Canton; she has yet to surrender a goal this season.

Salem 8, Farmington 0: Plymouth Salem got some measure of vengeance Monday, playing with more determination against an outmanned Farmington team than in last Friday's shocking 4-1 home-field loss to Novi.

Mia Sarkesian and Jessica Bucks each scored two goals for the Rocks, now 2-1. Missy Simons, Christen Shull, Jeannine Edwards and Julie Katcherian added a goal apiece.

Merritt Walker was in goal for Salem, making three saves.

"We played quite well," said Rocks' coach Doug Landefeld. "Hopefully, we're going to be a more improved team every game.

"I just kind of challenged our younger kids to play better, to raise their level of play, to be more physical and play faster against more experienced teams."

The Falcons fell to 1-1-1 with the loss.

Chiefs outduel Harrison

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

The timing was all wrong.

This isn't the kind of game that's supposed to be played at this time of year. For that matter, these two teams shouldn't even be playing each other this early in the season.

Why? Because anybody who knows anything about Western Lakes Activities Association softball knows, come season's end, Farmington Harrison and Plymouth Canton will have something to say about the conference crown. So put the game at the end of the schedule, where the drama a title race spawns will be put to good use.

It would be a lock because they're both good teams. On Monday at Canton they proved it once again, playing to a standstill through 4 1/2 innings before the Chiefs managed to eke out a run and turn it into a 2-1 victory.

Which meant Canton has drawn first blood in the WLAA's Western Division. The Chiefs are 2-0 overall, 1-0 in the division; Harrison is 2-1 overall, 0-1 in the division.

Canton got the game-winning run in the bottom of the fifth. With one out, Angela Litwin singled — then proceeded to create a run with her base-running. She stole second and went to third on a wild pitch.

Tara Biro's single to center scored the eventual game-winning run.

"I was impressed," said Harrison coach Mike Teachman after the loss. But it wasn't Canton that did the impressing: "I knew they would be good," the Hawks' coach added. "But we came out hacking."

Teachman lost just three players from last season's team, but they were important ones — the first three batters in his lineup. So, at least as far as the offense was concerned, he couldn't be sure what to expect.

Great start: Canton softball players swarm around winning pitcher Gretchen Hudson (center) after the Chiefs outdueled WLAA Western Division rival Farmington Harrison. The win puts Canton a leg up on the Hawks in the divisional race.

"I was just pleased with the way the girls went out and played aggressively," he said.

Canton's Jim Arnold could have done without a game of this stature at this time, however. "I don't like 'em like that this early," he said. "They always play us tough. I'd rather have that kind of test further down the road.

"What can you say about a game like this? That was anybody's ball game — we just got a timely hit."

Canton pitcher Gretchen Hudson was a bit better than her Harrison counterpart, Ali Ault. Hudson surrendered five hits and did not walk a batter, striking out three. Ault gave up eight hits and three walks, fanning two.

The Chiefs opened the scoring with a run in the first. Litwin again was involved, leading off with a single. She went to second on a passed ball and reached third on a ground out. Nikki Kovachevich's sacrifice bunt delivered the run.

Harrison tied it with a pair of doubles in the second. Megan Wild led off the inning with a two-bagger, then — with two out — Jenny Dewaele knocked her in with a double.

What this game might mean down the line is difficult to say this early in the season. Canton, in particular, has no easy road early in the campaign; the Chiefs must travel to Livonia Franklin Friday, and that also should have major repercussions in the division race.

Falcon pitching stops Salem; Chiefs frustrated by Hawks

BASEBALL

Farmington's Charlie Avery handcuffed Plymouth Salem with a five-hitter Monday in handing the Rocks their first baseball defeat of the season, 4-1 at Salem.

Salem slipped to 3-1 with the loss, its first game in Western Lakes Activities Association Lakes Division play. Farmington is 2-1 overall, 1-0 in the WLAA's Lakes.

"We didn't have very many good swings at all, to be honest with you," Salem coach Dale Rumberger said. "We just didn't have many good at-bats."

Kurt Berlin suffered the loss for the Rocks, despite a solid effort. Berlin surrendered two runs on two hits and two walks in five innings, striking out five.

"He pitched really well," said Rumberger. "He still hasn't won a varsity game, and most of them have been just like this."

The game was a pitcher's duel, tied at 1-1, until the sixth. After Berlin walked the first two batters in the inning, he was replaced by Kevin Niemiec.

With the bases loaded and two out, Niemiec had two strikes on Chuck Archambeau — then hit him with a pitch to force in the eventual game-winning run.

Farmington opened the scoring, getting a run on Dave Viane's solo home run in the second. Salem tied it when Alec Ras reached base on an error, then scored on Ryan Rumbergers base hit.

Avery gave up just four hits and two walks, striking out six in six innings.

Harrison 4, Canton 1: Plymouth Canton's WLAA Western Division opener was a disappointment, with the Chiefs falling to highly-regarded Farmington Harrison Monday at Harrison.

Canton, now 1-3 overall, started well. Ray Horton opened the game with a single and was bunted to second by Nate Copenhaver. Pat Noonan's fly out moved Horton to third, and Dave Kwiatkowski delivered the run with a single.

But that was as much as the Chiefs could manage against Harrison's Matt Derocher, who got the win. He allowed seven hits in four innings.

Canton's Jason Mortiere was the losing pitcher, giving up five hits and six walks, with four strikeouts, in six innings.

The Chiefs' lead didn't last long. C.J. Ghannam slugged a two-run home run in the bottom of the first to put the Hawks on top, and the lead never changed again.

Canton outhit the Hawks 10-5, but couldn't outscore them. "Walks will hurt you," said Chiefs' coach Scott Dickey. "We played great defense, but we didn't get the clutch hits. They did."

Noonan, Pat Van Hull and Kyle Richardson each had two hits to pace the Chiefs.

CC 5-10, U-D 4-0: Redford Catholic Central needed extra innings for the first game and only five for the next to sweep a baseball double-header Saturday against visiting U-D Jesuit.

The Shamrocks won the first game, 5-4, in eight innings before taking the nightcap, 10-0, in five innings because of the mercy rule.

CC, which improved to 4-2 overall and 2-2 in the Catholic League Central Division, needed a little luck and some timely hitting over the last two innings to win the first game.

With two outs and a runner, Josh DelCorvo, in scoring position in the seventh, Matt Firlik sent a ground ball toward the first baseman.

The throw to the pitcher covering first base was wild, sending DelCorvo home for the tying run.

The Shamrocks won 5-4 when Anthony Tomey singled up the middle with the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth to score Joe Saah from third base.

Matt Ksiazek earned the pitching victory in five innings of relief.

Ksiazek, who inherited a 2-1 deficit after two innings, surrendered only one run on two hits with two walks and six strikeouts.

The Shamrocks had only four hits but took advantage of six U-D errors. Ryan Kolb was 2-for-4 to lead CC.

Mike Haller was the winning pitcher in the second game, tossing a four-hitter with nine strikeouts and three walks.

Pete Broccoli was 2-3 with two runs scored and two stolen bases. Saah and Ryan Ossenmacher each had RBI triples during a six-run fourth innings.

They were the Shamrocks' only extra-base hits.

CC stole 10 bases during the double-header.

Salem golf

Plymouth Salem was short a Katie at Monday's double-dual meet against Farmington Hills Mercy and host Grosse Ile, and it was enough to drop the Rocks to last.

Grosse Ile, the defending Class B-C-D state champions, won easily with a 184. Mercy was second with a 215; Salem shot 221.

Katie Murinas was missing from the Rocks' lineup. Leading Salem was Katie Collins with a 47. She was followed by Julie Licata with a 57, Jessica Hedges with a 58, and Angela Jones and Crystal Koparz, each with a 59.

Mercy was paced by Kristen Smith, 51; Jennifer Borowiec, 52; Heidi Wegmueller, 55; and Sarah Cahill, 57. Leading the victorious Red Devils were Courtney Reno and Misia Lemanski, each with a 45.

Mercy improved to 3-0 in the Catholic League and 4-1 overall with a 210-214 win over Livonia Ladywood Tuesday at Livonia's Whispering Willows.

Best for Mercy were Borowiec and Angela Harbar, 47 apiece; Cahill, 56; and Tanya Foster, 60. Becca Anderson's 49 topped Ladywood; Gretchen Siebert shot 51, Katie Zimmerman a 55 and Jackie Korreck a 59.

Salem meets Livonia Churchill at 4 p.m. Friday.

Canton boys track

In a non-scoring quad meet Saturday at Ann Arbor Pioneer, Plymouth Canton's boys track team had a couple of first-place finishes and a handful of solid performances.

Other good efforts by the Chiefs: Byron Miller finished second in the long jump (17-4 1/2); Dave Koshizawa, Nathan Howe, Kwaku Dankwa and Geoff Brown were second in the 400 relay (49.9); Keil was third in the shot put (41-6); and Koshizawa, Dankwa, Miller and Brown were third in the 800 relay (1:40.5).

Canton is at Walled Lake Western for a WLAA dual meet at 3:30 p.m. today, then competes in the Dearborn Elks Relays Saturday.

Crusaders, Cards split

COLLEGE SOFTBALL

Christy Riopelle knocked in four runs with two hits, including a double, to help Madonna University's softball team salvage a split in its double-header at Saginaw Valley State Tuesday.

The Cardinals won the opener 7-4; the Lady Crusaders bounced back with an 8-3 victory in the nightcap. The split left Madonna with a 16-9-1 record; SVSU is 14-11.

Angie VanDoorn got the pitching win (she's now 3-4) for Madonna in the second game. She worked all seven innings, allowing eight hits and five walks, with three strikeouts.

Karrie Smith started and took the loss for the Cardinals, giving up six runs (four earned) on seven hits over three innings.

Stephanie Dye added three hits, with three runs scored, to the 10-hit Madonna attack. Jamie Vickers contributed a double and two RBI, and Melissa McGue slugged a triple and scored twice.

Kim Seyuin had a double and a triple, scored one run and drove in another for SVSU.

In the opener, the Cardinals struck for six runs in the first four innings to breeze past the Crusaders. Lisa Hillman gave up four runs on 10 hits and two walks, with three strikeouts, in her seven innings on the mound, but she still got the win.

Shanna Price fell to 9-2 with the loss, surrendering seven runs (six earned) on 10 hits and two walks, with two strikeouts.

Vicki Malkowski had two hits, including a double, and drove in two runs for Madonna. Vickers chipped in two hits — one of them a double — and an RBI, and Shawna Greene had a hit and two runs scored.

Poor defense again plagued the Crusaders. They committed four errors in the first game and five in the double-header.

Madonna 15-10, Siena Heights 1-4: The bats were booming for Madonna University's softball team Sunday against visiting Siena Heights, and that made for a short double-header — with the mercy rule applied to both games.

Siena Heights dipped to 5-17.

Dawn Shaffer, named the NAIA Great Lakes Sectional Player of the Week for her performance, and Shawna Greene each collected three hits and four runs batted in in the two games.

Greene had two triples, driving in four runs, in the 15-1 victory in the first game. Shaffer added two hits, including a double, to drive in three runs, and Jeanie Baxter (from Redford St. Agatha) collected two hits and two RBI. Vicki Malkowski also had two hits and an RBI.

Shanna Price was the winning pitcher; she worked all five innings, giving up one unearned run on three hits and no walks, striking out two. Price improved to 9-1.

Lea Kell lasted just 1 1/3 innings for the Saints; she was riddled for 11 runs (nine earned) on eight hits and four walks.

In the second game, Madonna struck for nine runs in the second inning and coasted from there, making Janell Leschinger the winning pitcher. Leschinger surrendered four unearned runs on four hits and four walks, striking out four.

Mariann Baumann was the loser, giving up 10 runs (five earned) on six hits and four walks for Siena Heights. The Saints committed five errors in the game.

Stacey Piontkowski had a double and an RBI, and Shaffer and Jamie Vickers each had a single and an RBI for Madonna.

Spring salmon opener: A day to remember

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

Standing on the dock gazing across the open water as the sun peaked over the far horizon a warm feeling of contentment flowed through my insides. And it was a good thing, because that was about the only part of my body that was warm.

With temperatures hovering in the mid-teens at sunrise I wondered why on earth I was even thinking about fishing. Yet there I was last week, bundled up like an Eskimo on a pilgrimage, waiting to motor out of Lexington Harbor and into the southern waters of Lake Huron for some early spring salmon fishing.

Although the weather was more suited for ice fishing, I felt fortunate that we were even able to get out on the lake on such a frigid morning. The lower unit on the motor of Captain Rod Cope's 24-foot Sea Ray froze-up during the arctic drive to the lake.

Fortunately he was able to work it free and launch the boat, but the episode added to my concern about the cold. When Cope ran his finger along the side of the boat and came up with a pile of frost we all seemed to silently agree that the prospect was bleak for a cooler full of tasty King salmon.

"It's a little cold, but we'll give it a try," said Cope, who then admitted, "I really don't know what to expect."

The shallow water in the southern end of Lake Huron provides anglers with terrific early spring salmon fishing opportunities.

When spring breaks and the warm weather finally sets in, the shallow water in southern Lake Huron begins to warm. When the water temperature reaches the low 40's smelt move in toward shore. The warm water triggers the smelt's spawning runs into the dozens of rivers, streams and cuts that slice into Michigan's thumb. When the smelt move in toward the river mouths, salmon leave their winter holds in the middle of the lake and move in toward shore to feed on the large numbers of baitfish gathered in the shallow waters.

Anglers have great success at this time of year by trolling body plugs and spoons just off shore in 12- to 20-feet of water. Planner boards and outriggers help get the lures out from beneath the boat in such shallow water.

The water temperature was hovering around 38- to-40 degrees last week, which seemed to be a little cold.

Good thing no one told the fish.

We found a good number of salmon but they were out a little deep, in 30 to 40 feet of water, and suspended eight to 15 feet down. They were still a little sluggish because of the cold water temperatures, but with a very slow troll they were enticed into attacking our bait.

The fish should be in tight to shore next Saturday, April 26, when hundreds of anglers will gather in southern Lake Huron to participate in the 19th annual River Crab Salmon Stakes charity fishing tournament. Although the fishing is expected to be great, of even greater significance is that money raised through the tournament will benefit family service agencies statewide.

To date, the Salmon Stakes tournament has raised over $800,000.

Money is raised through the sale of $10 raffle/entry tickets. Anyone who purchases a ticket is automatically a winner because the tickets are good for $10 off dinner for two at any Chuck Muer restaurant nationwide. Raffle prizes, which will be drawn at the weigh-in of the tournament, include a trip for four to Walt Disney World; a trip for two to the Napa Valley wine country; a trip for two to Toronto; hundreds of dollars in gift certificates redeemable at any Chuck Muer Restaurant nationwide; and a charter fishing trip for four.

If you haven't purchased a ticket it's not too late. Tickets are available at all Chuck Muer Restaurants including Muer's Sea Food Tavern in West Bloomfield, Charlie's Crab in Troy, Meriwethers in Southfield, Big Fish in Dearborn, Big Fish Too in Madison Heights, and Gandy Dancer in Ann Arbor or by calling the River Crab Restaurant at 1-800-468-3727.

The raffle drawing will take place at the fish weigh-in, 1-3 p.m. Saturday April 26, at the River Crab Restaurant in St. Clair. The weigh-in is a festive affair complete with a duck pond for the kids, a barbecue, clowns, music and more.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-2573.

Salem, Canton gymnasts among best

BY DAN O'MEARA AND C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITERS

An elite group of six gymnasts comprises the 1997 All-Observer team.

Farmington's Sarah Nolan and Plymouth Salem's Kristin Kosik proved they are among the best in the state.

Brook Rubin also represents Farmington Public Schools, which had the best team in Observerland this year.

Plymouth Canton first-team selections Marcie Emerick and Liz Fitzgerald, Westland John Glenn's Katie Boogren and Kosik were major reasons their teams qualified for the Class A finals.

Farmington combined its two teams into one this year, and coaches Jeff Dwyer and Alicia Herpick were chosen Coaches of the Year.

Farmington had the best finish among area teams in the Western Lakes Activities Association, which expanded to eight teams, placing fourth behind Hartland, Brighton and Northville-Novi.

Competing in what was arguably the toughest regional in the state, Farmington scored 139.55 — the best ever recorded by a Farmington team — but finished fifth and missed qualifying for the state meet by 1 1/2 points.

ALL-AREA FIRST TEAM

Sarah Nolan, junior, Farmington: Nolan came back from a potential season-ending back injury to finish the season with a strong performance at the state finals.

Nolan achieved her highest all-around score (35.85) of the season at the state meet and finished third in Division II all-around.

She also was all-state on bars, beam and vault. It was her second time at state, having finished 10th in the all-around last year.

In the regional, Nolan placed second on bars (9.25), sixth on vault (8.75), seventh on floor exercise (9.2) and fifth in the all-around (35.8).

Nolan was ninth in the all-around (35.55) at the Western Lakes meet, seventh on beam (8.85) and ninth on vault (8.7).

"Sarah is one of the best competitors I've ever coached," coach Jeff Dwyer said. "She's able to put aside any nervousness and just concentrate on the task at hand. She usually accomplishes what she sets out to do.

"It will be hard to top what she did this year. But she has a great opportunity next year, and she definitely has the potential to do as well or better."

Brook Rubin, sophomore, Farmington: Rubin has been a solid performer for two seasons. She was a state qualifier as a freshman but just missed on vault and floor in a difficult regional this year.

She had an outstanding WLAA meet, placing sixth in the all-around with a season-high score of 35.55. Rubin also was second on beam (9.3) and eighth on bars (8.9) in the WLAA.

Rubin averaged 34.40 in all-around competition. Her high scores were 8.6 on vault, 9.0 on bars, 9.3 on beam and 9.3 on floor.

"Brook was our leader in every competition," Dwyer said. "She was consistently one of the top all-arounders in every big meet. For a sophomore, that was outstanding.

"She makes the sport look really easy. She's very elegant and she makes it look like an art. She's one of the most dedicated gymnasts I've had. She's in the gym year round. She's already started working out for next year."

Liz Fitzgerald, freshman, Ply. Canton: What Fitzgerald accomplished as a freshman is almost scary, particularly considering she took a year off from gymnastics before returning to compete for the Chiefs.

Chosen as Canton's rookie of the year, Fitzgerald "didn't get it together until mid-season," according to Canton coach John Cunningham. "You could see her improvement week-to-week.

"She's taking the steps that will make her an elite gymnast in the years to come."

At the state regional meet, Fitzgerald placed 10th in the all-around (33.55); at the WLAA championships, she was 13th (34.15).

Together with teammate and first-team selection Marcie Emerick, Fitzgerald gives Cunningham something "exciting to look forward to."

Marcie Emerick, sophomore, Ply. Canton: What Emerick managed to accomplish in the past year is truly amazing.

On the Chiefs' state runners-up team of last season, she was "sixth or seventh" best, according to her coach. With the loss of several of those gymnasts, Emerick's stock rose — and she rose to the challenge.

"She did a lot of work during the off-season and, if not for her strained back, she would have done even better at state meet," Cunningham said. "She's going to be someone to beat next year."

Emerick was ninth at the state regional meet in the all-around (34.025) and placed 15th at the WLAA finals (33.95).

"Both (Emerick and Fitzgerald) are team leaders, someone the others look up to," said Cunningham. "They haven't yet reached their potential, and it's not because they haven't worked at it. They just need time.

"They made quantum leaps this year, and they have quantum leaps yet to go."

Katie Boogren, senior, John Glenn: Boogren was Glenn's most consistent gymnast and led the Rockets to the state finals as a team qualifier.

She qualified for state individually on beam and would have qualified for the all-around competition if not for a fall in floor exercise.

Her season best was 34.35 in the all-around. She was 12th in the WLAA meet (34.25) and tied for ninth in the regional (33.1). She averaged 33.5 for the season.

Boogren's best scores were 9.1 on floor, 8.9 on beam, 8.2 on bars and 8.4 on vault.

"Katie is an unselfish team leader," coach Debbie Hosein said. "It's natural for her to think about others before herself. She is the best captain I've ever had. She is also the hardest-working person I have ever seen."

Kristin Kosik, senior, Ply. Salem: Kosik isn't just an athlete who enjoys competing. She excels, at everything she goes after.

The defending WLAA champion in the high jump, Kosik has been Salem's leader in gymnastics the past two seasons, during which she has served as team captain.

Her consistency is exceptional. Kosik scored 35.575 in placing fifth in the all-around at the state regional, and hit 36.55 at the WLAA meet to finish second.

At the regional, she was also second in the vault, sixth in the bars, seventh in the floor and eight in the beam.

At conference, Kosik placed second in the vault and floor, fifth in the beam and sixth in the bars. She scored 9.60, her season's best total, on floor at the WLAA final.

Kosik's grade-point average is another indication of her drive for excellence: 4.02, making her a National Honor Society member and class valedictorian.

HMOs report less revenue

EAST LANSING (AP) – Mirroring national trends, more than two-thirds of Michigan's health maintenance organizations saw "profits" decline last year, a physicians' group said last week.

Despite having less money to put in reserves at the end of the year, all 19 HMOs in Michigan _ most of which are nonprofit _ and Blue Cross Blue Shield in Michigan are in good financial shape, the Michigan State Medical Society concluded in its second annual evaluation of health plans.

"We have no concern for any of the plans we looked at this year," said Mary Anne Ford, the society's director of medical economics and health care delivery.

Of the 17 health plans that had been in operation since before 1995, the last year for which complete financial information was available, 11 saw left-over funds fall _ to an average of 3.5 percent of revenues in 1995 from 4.3 percent in 1994.

The decrease in extra revenues, combined with relatively stable spending on patient care and only slightly rising administrative costs, could be a result of lower health care premiums, the society said.

But higher premiums could be on the way again in Michigan and around the country, representatives from Blue Cross and an association of HMOs said.

"It's cyclical," said Blue Cross spokeswoman Sheila Wright.

The society found that of each dollar health plans received from premium payments in 1995, the amount that went into financial reserves _ called "profits" in the report _ ranged from 10.1 percent for Total Health Care Inc. of Detroit to minus 2.7 percent for Priority Health of Grand Rapids.

The plans spent between 70.8 percent and 91.6 percent of revenues on patient care, with the Blue Care Network-Health Central of Lansing and the Health Alliance Plan of Detroit tied at the top.

Total Health Care spent the fewest premium dollars on patient care.

But Ford said there was cause for concern only when a plan's patient care spending dipped to about 65 percent of its revenues.

More than two-thirds limited their administrative costs to 12 percent or less, although some ranged as high as 19 percent, the report said.

One potential problem the society cited is the growing number of Michigan patients enrolling in managed care plans. The number of Michiganians enrolled in managed care topped 20 percent for the first time, Ford said.

"Managed care is not bad, as long as it's the physician doing the managing," said Dr. Peter Duhamel, president-elect of the society. "If it's managed cost, that's not the ideal situation."

And with the state's plan to force all Medicaid recipients into managed care by 1998, starting with several southeastern Michigan counties this year, the numbers will grow dramatically. That already has brought new health plans flocking to the state looking for new business _ and profits.

Of the 20 plans included in this year's report, just three are for-profit. But of the two new HMOs licensed in 1996 and the three which have applications pending, all are for-profit.

Along with worries these new systems will pay more attention to their bottom lines than to patients, Duhamel said some plans are using questionable tactics and false information to lure Medicaid patients.

But Eugune Farnum, executive director of the Michigan Association of Health Plans, said there is no need for concern. The association represents nearly all the HMOs in Michigan.

"Any HMOs coming into this state are going to have to become a Michigan HMO and play by Michigan rules _ and a lot of states don't have rules as tight as Michigan does," Farnum said.

"It doesn't matter whether they're for-profit or nonprofit ... they're going to be just as strict."

In addition, Michigan has hired an enrollment broker to do the marketing for all the plans and assign Medicaid patients to them. So even if there have been problems up to now, they already have been solved, Farnum said.

The society prepares its report for its 12,000 member physicians as they decide which HMOs to participate in. This year's study was published in the March issue of Michigan Medicine, the society's journal.

The society looks at such indicators of HMO stability and quality as financial health, enrollment and utilization by patients and doctors. The report is based on data, mostly from 1995, filed by health plans with the state Department of Community Health and Michigan Insurance Bureau.

Seven Mile Crossing may have new tenant

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

The owner of three buildings at Seven Mile and Haggerty Roads currently is negotiating a purchase agreement with a real estate investment firm.

Schoolcraft College owns the property on which the buildings sits, so trustees are expected to receive a lease agreement for the land at Seven Mile Crossing to be approved on April 23. Duke Investments, Inc. is the current owner of the buildings.

If negotiations are successful, Prentiss Properties Trust, a real estate investment firm, is expected to assume Duke's contractual responsibilities on the lease with Schoolcraft.

Duke is leaving the Detroit area and had examined possibly selling the buildings with the land — if the college accepted an offer to sell the land — or Duke could sell just the buildings. But Schoolcraft officials want to hang onto the property because of its prime location — just west of I-275 — and land value.

Butch Raby, vice president of business services at Schoolcraft College, told trustees at their March business meeting Duke's sale of the buildings is expected to materialize this month. Once Duke reaches a deal with Prentiss, Raby expects to have documents prepared for the Schoolcraft board to approve.

Prentiss Properties Trust was initially founded in Dallas by Michael Prentiss in 1979.

"The company owns 87 properties in 10 major markets," Raby said. "Twenty-eight of the properties are office buildings, with over 3.8 million rentable square feet."

Prentiss owns one Class A office building in Southfield at One Northwestern Plaza. It manages this facility out of its Midwestern region headquarters in Chicago.

Prentiss wants to continue the option to develop an adjacent vacant parcel, but that firm wants revise Duke and Schoolcraft's quarter-to-quarter arrangement, Raby said. Prentiss wants a date-certain option agreement to give the parties assurances that Prentiss would be expecting to exercise that option by 2002, Raby said.

Schoolcraft also may need to execute a "nondisturbance and attornment" agreement that would require Schoolcraft to assume responsibility for a Schoolcraft Development Authority (SDA) if the SDA ever defaults.

That document essentially assures Prentiss and any lender that their agreements will remain intact should the SDA default.

New events take center stage at area parks

Whether it's live music, movies in the outdoors or children's storytelling, Wayne County parks will offer more activities this summer than at any time in its nearly 80-year history.

The expanded events schedule is part of the new parks millage that was passed last year. The 1/4 mill will generate $40 million worth of parks improvements over the next five years.

"The parks millage just went into effect last winter, but there's already been a remarkable amount of growth in the Wayne County parks system," said Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara. "This summer we'll have something going on almost every day at one of our parks and that wouldn't have been possible without this millage."

Giant video projection in full color and stereo surround sound will set the stage for Movies in the Parks — a series of three family movie screenings at three of Wayne County's parks. The Concerts in the Parks series will feature six concerts at six different park locations and a variety of jazz, country, top 40 and opera artists. Six different locations will also host the Children's Evening Out, which will feature children's entertainment acts including music, magic and puppet shows. All of these new events are free.

Jazz fans can enjoy an extra day of Jazz on the River at the county's Elizabeth Park in Trenton. This event made its debut in 1996 and was so well received it has been expanded to two days — Aug. 16 and 17.

In addition to more jazz artists, the event will add a boat parade and fireworks to the festival.

Walkers, runners, roller bladers and bicyclists will have the entire weekend to enjoy Hines Park, as Saturday in the Park expands to Saturday and Sunday in the Park. Six miles of Hines Drive between Ann Arbor Trail and Outer Drive will be closed to motor traffic every Saturday and Sunday between May 3 and Sept. 28 between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

A bigger and better children's area at Elizabeth Park will add more children's entertainment and games to the Somewhere in Time event in Trenton on Sunday, Sept. 14. This event recreates Elizabeth Park's environment the way it was in the late 1920s. Antique auto displays, trolley rides, river boat rides and musical entertainment provide a trip back to the early days of the park.

For a complete 1997 events schedule or information on other parks programs and facilities, call the Wayne County parks office at (313) 261-1990.

Lifestyle sets design for singles

By Sharon Chris
Special Writer

While many singles can benefit from interior design advice for living alone, the reality is that most of my business is requested by the recently divorced man.

At the risk of sounding as if I'm discriminating, it has been my experience that the newly alone man is establishing a new household with very little materially – a sofa, the dog and a can opener come to mind.

The newly single woman, who may be emotionally and financially drained as well, seems to have a clearer sense of what she wants in her new home, how it should look and, yes, a more practical view of what it costs to set up a household.

I do hope my insights can work equally as well for both, even though my views seem more male oriented.

The key to setting up your new home is determining how you want to live in it. When I'm working with a client I try to get a lot of lifestyle information.

So, start with your grand scheme. Will you be entertaining? Will it be the boys for poker, or will it be business entertaining or meetings? Will you have children visiting on the weekend? How casual are you, or how formal? Will you cook at home, or will you mostly be eating out? Do you travel a lot? Will you need a housekeeper?

In the initial interview, I often look at the way a client is dressed. You may find by opening your closet door that the colors you love to live with are all right there. I also may get a chance to look around his office – it's helpful in determining the "things" he likes.

Your surroundings, too, will play a big part. For example, are you in an apartment or condo? Do you plan to stay there, or is it temporary while you look for a house? Remember, all these considerations may have an impact on your initial budget, or how much you're willing to spend if you're planning to move on.

Newly single, you may find that you need a lot at a time when your budget and resources are small. It can be done, but plan to be realistic about your goals.

We know you want the big screen TV, VCR and surround-sound stereo. The payback is that you might be sitting and/or sleeping on the floor. For instance, furnishing a bedroom is a lot more than buying a bed and dresser.

Sharon Chris

You also need mattresses, pillows, mattress pads, sheets, blankets and maybe a comforter. You may even have to buy hangers for the closet!

Ideally, you will establish a budget that allows you to be flexible and stretch a little. The time may come when you find you really do want that answering machine, or wine rack or window coverings or a piece of art.

Also, don't think that you must buy a number of things with a small amount of money. Think long term and make some good investments to enjoy now and use in a future residence.

This is where a professional designer can be very beneficial. He or she can save you money by knowing where the good values are; will save you time, and your time is money; and will develop a plan helping to create something special that makes you feel at home.

Above all, this is your home now. You're starting over, but you're not starting empty. You want to create a sense of "wholeness," something complete, that's not a "macho stereotype," but an environment that reflects who you are and how you want to live.

Some of my clients get very involved in the design process, many say "just do it." In the end, a great deal of my reward comes when I finish a bachelor interior and he or she says "I'm home." And means it.

Nothing batty about vital bats

MARTY FIGLEY

Several weeks ago I spoke at the Lansing Home & Garden Show and learned how important bats are to our environment. I also learned that many Michigan bats are tiny little innocent creatures that have gotten a lot of "bad press" through the years, along with larger bats.

Bats are quite good at devouring unsuspecting unwelcome garden pests – and human pests such as the mosquito! Representatives of the Organization for Bat Conservation were at the show with several of the soft little creatures, and all who heard a young lady speak about bats went away with many myths dispelled. The children were fascinated.

Some of the things we learned were:

Bats aren't "blind as a bat," but rather have eyesight similar to that of a dog. They need warmth to survive and come out from their roosts in the evening when insects are most prevalent. One little brown bat can eat 600 to 1,000 mosquito-sized insects each hour. The Upper Peninsula is home to approximately 1 million bats during hibernation, where they gather in a cave near Iron Mountain.

Most bats in Michigan are found in bat houses, human dwellings, trees or abandoned mines. We probably haven't been aware of how small bats are, so haven't recognized them if they are flying around in our yards. Here in lower Michigan bats are often seen near lakes, streams or rivers, often during sunset.

A bat house on your property encourages them to roost and enjoy the feast in your back yard; it may take a year for the bats to find your house.

Eight species of bats live in Michigan. Bats are in the Chiroptera (pronounced cur-aptera) order of creatures and are the only mammals that can fly. Their wings resemble a human hand with four fingers that are elongated and a thumb.

Megachiroptera bats mainly eat fruit and nectar and live in the old world tropics. Microchiroptera bats are generally very small and mainly eat insects (although in other parts of the world they eat other food) and are one type living in Michigan. They find their food through high-pitched sounds (called echolocation) that hit the insects and bounce back to the bat's ears.

The Little Brown Bat, Myotis lucifugus, is the one you will probably see most readily in this area. They are very small to medium-sized with brown fur and emerge to forage for their food at dusk.

There are several things we can do to encourage these creatures to stick around and help rid our outdoor spaces of mosquitoes and other insects. If there is a good water source, a small pond for instance, insects are attracted to it and therefore bats will come.

Trees and those that are dying or dead provide a natural habitat for the bats. If this isn't possible, piles of logs, shrubs or mixed woodland are good sites.

Night-flying insects feed on the nectar of sweet-scented flowers, so bats will be attracted to that area of the property. Evening primrose, nicotiana, sweet rocket and soapwort are all desirable, as well as herbs such as borage, chives, mint, marjoram and lemon balm. Solitary bats may find a spot to roost in climbing vines such as honeysuckle, ivy, white jasmine or dogrose.

Another way to provide a feeding ground is to leave part of the lawn unmowed during the summer, which increases the insect population whose larvae feed on grasses.

Mercury vapor lights attract insects, which in turn attract the bats.

Bat houses aren't just a phase but can really provide a perfect place for bats to roost. The design of bat houses must be built to specifications to attract them.

The newer designed houses provide easy access to the houses and are designed to be temperature efficient (bats don't like cold weather). Some contain several chambers so more bats can inhabit the house and cuddle up to stay warm. Dark-colored houses retain the most heat.

OBC is a group that encourages education about bats, conservation to provide suitable habitats and research to study bats' habits without harming them. For additional information or membership, write: OBC, 2300 Epley Road, Williamston, Mich. 48895, or call (517) 655-9200.

For meat lovers – the beef is back

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Meat is back in a big way – steaks are definitely being served (big and rare) and there are actual "houses" being devoted to them.

With the concern over fat and cholesterol, I'm in a quandary, as to why now? I guess if I'm honest with myself and believe the trends that I closely watch, and share with all of you – it's truly that old comfort thing. As with almost all good things, the moderation issue is key. It seems the steak restaurants don't necessarily agree with me – they are huge! Some of the steak house are selling steaks that are almost the size of a cow. Morton's of Chicago (in Southfield) is selling Porterhouse steaks that are a full 48 ounces (for 1-2 people).

You do realize in the dietitians world of numbers, most recipes are designed and calculated nutritionally for 3 1/2 to 5 ounces of meat per meal. Morton's is selling big steaks, and plenty of them.

"Where's the Beef?" may resurface for another go-round in the ad world, and the timing is right on. This may be a great time to do a steak party at home. Invite some friends, make sure they are all carnivores, call your local butcher, or favorite grocery, and place your order (I don't suggest 48 ounces per person). If you want to invite your friends by sending an invitation, it might be fun to get some actual photos from the National Cattleman's Beef Association – Chicago Office (312) 467-5520 or the USDA Meat and Poultry Hot Line 1-800-535-4555 – automated system or real folks 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Use a color copier or your computer art program, and entitle your invitation – Let's Meat.

In preparation of your steaks (whatever cut you choose), decide how you would like to prepare them; you can grill them in- or outdoors, broil, or pan saute them. Le Creuset Cookware has several brand new grill pans available, as well as their brand new Oven with Ribbed Reversible Grill-Lid this fabulous cast iron over enamel roaster has a lid that doubles as a grill pan – two for the price of one!

Another idea is to do the steaks table side with the use of a small gas burner and pan or grill (Burton makes the gas burners, they can be purchased at Kitchen Glamor Shops, upscale hardware stores – in the camping section, or camping stores. Oriental brands of the gas burners are available, and can be found in Asian grocery or gift shops). Make sure you buy the can(s) of butane fuel you need to make your burner operational.

The best tool for checking doneness (or lack of it in my case of rare, almost mooing) is the instant read thermometers (sometimes called contact thermometers). They have them in packages at Sam's Club, or sold individually at all kitchen shops. These wonderful thermometers will check everyone's steak for the perfect amount of pink!

If a Morton's of Chicago 48-ounce steak intrigues you, pay them a visit at One Town Square in Southfield, for reservations call: (810)354-6006. If interested in cooking your steaks at home, add a baked potato stuffed with cheese and chopped peanuts, a huge leafy green salad splashed with some Balsamic Vinegar, and add some beautiful steamed Spring asparagus for a side dish.

Some meaty tips:

- Buy good quality meat
- Pat the meat dry before cooking
- If cooking the meat in a pan or grill, make sure the surface off the pan or gill is well oiled.
- Cook the meat over high heat
- While many chefs rely on the "touch test" or "feel test" to see what point of doneness has been achieved on the meat, instant read thermometers do a great job (just don't keep poking the meat with the thermometer).
- Remember the meat keeps cooking after it has been removed from the heat source, so take that into consideration of cooking time.

CHEDDAR AND PEANUT STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

While these double stuffed potatoes are delicious, make sure your guests have no nut allergies – nuts can be deadly for some. Because the nuts are chopped and not necessarily recognizable, make sure you check with your guest before someone takes a bite! The amount of servings will be as flexible as the amounts of each ingredient.

Baking potatoes (one per person)
Milk
Butter
Cheddar Cheese, shredded
Peanuts (without shells), chopped (not too fine)
Salt and pepper if desired

Wash and scrub each potato, poke the potato all around with the tines of a fork. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven or microwave until the potato is tender.

Remove the potatoes from the oven, let cool down enough to handle. Slice off the top of each potato, and carefully scoop out the inside of the potato, leaving the walls and skin of the potato in tack – making the jacket. Place the inside of the potato in the bowl of a mixer, or mash in your own typical fashion – add a small amount of milk and butter, to taste. When your potato looks like mashed potatoes, add the desired amount of cheddar cheese and chopped peanuts (again to desired taste) and mix only to combine all ingredients.

Add salt and pepper if desired – adjust seasonings.

Divide the potato-cheese-nut mixture evenly between all of the potato jackets. They should appear to be quite full. Place stuffed baked potatoes on a sprayed cookie sheet, and place back in the oven. Heat the potatoes until they appear golden on top (approximately 15-20 minutes, or longer if your potatoes were out of the oven for a long time. Serve as a side with your steak!

BALSAMIC VINAIGRETTE

Yield: approximately 1 cup of dressing

3 tablespoons Balsamic Vinegar
2 whole cloves (small) or 1 large clove of garlic, peeled
1 1/2 teaspoons light brown sugar
3-4 anchovies
Salt and freshly ground pepper
3/4 cup good quality Olive Oil

In a food processor, fitted with the steel S blade, or a blender, place all of the ingredients except for the olive oil, gradually add the oil as the processor is going. Process until mixed. Adjust seasonings (you may not want any salt at all with the saltiness of the anchovies. Splash desired amount of vinaigrette over your washed and dried salad greens.

Modernism streamlines design

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
Staff Writer

Modernism's minimal design melds with the ornate 18th century English and contemporary furniture decorating the Bloomfield Township home of Judge Avern and Lois Pincus Cohn.

Modernism, a catch-all term for 20th century design, accents the environment in nearly every room of the couple's 3,500-square foot home. Although from different eras, the burnt umber coloring of Dutch Gouda pottery displayed on an English secretary in the foyer works to create warmth.

"What I like about Modernism is the way it mixes," Lois Pincus Cohn said. "It's so elegant, so simple. I like the clean lines. It's warm, not austere. It speaks to me of the many changes in this century."

The Modernism objects decorating the Cohns' home are typical of the furniture, art glass, pottery, paintings, and bronzes on display in the Michigan Modernism Exposition. The fourth annual show and sale of merchandise dedicated entirely to 20th century design runs 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, April 26, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, April 27, at the Southfield Civic Center, Evergreen Road at 10-1/2 Mile in Southfield. Tickets are $7.

Preview the show at a gala party to benefit the Detroit Area Art Deco Society 7-10 p.m. Friday, April 25. Tickets are $60 per person in advance and include hors d'ouevres, wine and entertainment. Call (810) 547-5716.

Leger's 1952 painting of a woman holding a potted plant is hung above an American Federalist table just left of the contemporary black marble fireplace in the Cohns' living room. Vibrant red, yellow, green, and blue starkly contrast the softness of the table's inlaid satinwood. Milton Avery's painting of a white dove against a red background is hung on the right. In front of the fireplace, matching gray five-legged Art Deco chairs rest on an antique peach Bakshaish area rug from Iran.

Inspired by a purchase of Tiffany candlesticks, Cohn began collecting Modernism objects and furniture last year. Everywhere the eye can see, Modernism compliments and contrasts the surroundings. In the den, pre-Columbian pottery sits atop an Art Deco end table. An ivory glow emanates from Rookwood pottery filling an upper shelf of a built-in bookcase to the right of the end table.

A black Bombay lamp lighting the Joseph Hoffman designed chairs and tables in the den is from Artspace II, Cohn's Birmingham gallery. Many of the visual arts, antiques and lighting similar to those in her home can be found in her gallery, including art works by Joan Miro, Jim Dine and Alex Katz.

"Modernism is the art of this century. Begun as a reaction to the industrial revolution, the key concept of the movement was form followed function. When I think of Modernism, I think of elegant, refined, streamlined design and curvilinear lines."

History

Although Modernism was known by several different names depending on the country where it was prevalent, the theme reoccurring in all styles celebrating the 20th century was new, original, modern.

The Decorative Arts movement, founded by William Morris and John Ruskin, emerged in England at the end of the 19th century. In the United States, Gustav Stickley was the father of the American Arts and Crafts Movement. In France, the movement was known as Art Nouveau. In Austria, the Vienna Sezession, founded in 1897, led to the creation of the Wiener Werkstatte in 1902 and eventually the creation of the Bauhaus School of Design in Germany.

The Detroit Area Art Deco Society, a non-profit corporation founded in 1986, conducts tours, lectures and social events aimed at increasing public awareness of the Art Deco style and period.

A society board member, Chuck Zuccarini of Livonia, will exhibit furniture, glass, jewelry, ceramics, silver, and chrome from the late 1800s to the 1960s in the upcoming exhibition. Zuccarini sells many of the same 20th century Decorative Arts objects at his Modernage Gallery in Pontiac. At times, he finds collecting Modernism for the gallery, co-owned with Jauques Caussin, both stimulating and educational.

"There's always something new to learn," Zuccarini said. "Art Deco, one of the styles of Modernism, was the avant-garde merchandise of its day and usually quite costly. We travel all over the country attending auctions and estate sales; it's a challenge to find objects from the era."

Ann Duke, publicist for the society, specializes in selling objects and furniture from the Arts and Crafts era. She will exhibit a 1910 Austrian ceramic handled vase, Mission style furniture, and Mexican and Arts and Crafts jewelry at the Modernism exposition.

Duke admires the "Decorative Arts as an art form because it challenged the artist to make something functional and beautiful that adds to our daily life.

"At the end of the 18th century, decorative objects were industrialized, made by machine. Morris and Ruskin were interested in elevating the status of the worker when they initiated the Decorative Arts movement. By the 20th century, they realized they had to instill some industrial aspects in the work to make them affordable enough for everyone," said Duke, who formerly owned the Duke Gallery in Birmingham.

"One of the nice things about Modernism is it consists of objects that are familiar to us. Most everyone can remember these items from our childhood. Either our parents or grandparents had them in their homes."

Starting business teaches lessons

LISA LUCKOW-HEALY

For some families, summer break commences the end of April when college students disassemble their dorm lofts or campus apartments and pack up the family minivan for the jaunt home.

Unless parents find tremendous pleasure in watching their students turn into beach bums, late afternoon snoozers or money spongers, many will encourage their children to go out and find summer jobs immediately while the picking is still good.

High school and middle school students dismissed for summer break in June often have to settle for the leftovers – those jobs the college students didn't want.

Whether it be a 12-year-old starting a lawn service or a 20-year-old interning at an advertising agency, summer jobs help keep young people busy during summer break.

These jobs also instill responsibility while providing that much-coveted spending money parents often hope their children will save for the upcoming school year.

Many children learn a more valuable lesson when they opt to start their own business. A new kit on the market helps youngsters get started. World of Money Business Kits for Kids, produced by Summit Products Inc., has all the ingredients to assist young people age 12 and older in starting their own businesses.

Student entrepreneurs may select from five available choices, including General Business, Baby Sitting, Car Wash, Pet Care and Lawn Mowing. Other student business ideas not covered in these kits include baking for social events, home videotaping events and computer invitation/flier design.

Youngsters considering any of the five businesses covered in the kits can benefit from valuable business information contained in each kit's handbook, business cards, fliers and invoices. An accompanying videotape features helpful facts and tips on the given business, including how to maintain a competitive edge.

In addition to providing children with the business tools to get started, the kit offers guidance on goal setting, accounting, collecting, marketing and profitability.

Youngsters who set their minds on starting their own businesses should spend at least a few hours planning their endeavor.

Parents can help their entrepreneurs work out a simple business plan that takes into account initial startup costs, ongoing expenditures (i.e. transportation, materials, marketing), profitability and the competition. Parents may want to assist their child in getting in touch with the secretary of state's office to gather necessary legal and tax information.

When children express interest in starting their own summer or year-round businesses, it's important that parents encourage their desires and applaud their efforts.

Children need to take charge of their business planning and decision making as much as possible. One of the valuable lessons they will learn in running a business is making mistakes.

Call (800) FOR-A-KIT to order the World of Money Business Kits for Kids (retails for $19.95), or (800) 513-3779 to find a kit at a local retail market.

Column inspires plan for new book

JOE GAGNON

A little something happened in last week's edition of this newspaper which you could say was the catapult which is pushing me in another direction. That path which I intend to follow is leading to a new book about the teaching profession.

Now you might wonder, what in Sam Hill is an appliance technician going to write concerning the teaching business and what is it that lit the light bulb in his uneducated head.

It all started when I read a column in last Thursday's Community Life Section written by Karen Meier. I sometimes let my ego get the best of me and think I'm a pretty good column writer,but after reading what Karen wrote, I'm back on earth where I belong.

Karen wrote about her visit as an invited guest reader to children at Bulman Elementary in the Redford Union school district. I happen to know the school quite well because the principal, Valorie Williams, has been my main motivator in life for the past eight years. Karen described the teachers and students as sparkling, shining and shedding light on the future. The children were filled with excitement, spirit, electricity, enthusiasm, all rolled into one, and then she pointed out the fact the the kids stood to say the Pledge of Allegiance. She was brought to tears as she described how these young children said the pledge.

"These children did not mumble, did not fool around, shuffle feet, they did not gaze about, no. With hands on their hearts, eyes on the flag, they, every one of them, said the pledge with conviction and with spirit. And such clarity of voice, it almost sounded like a cheer. A cheer for being American."

As I finished reading Karen's beautiful story, I, too, had tears streaming down my cheeks and I realized what a rookie I am at writing for this wonderful newspaper. Karen's article has prompted me to write about the very principal, Ms. Williams, who has spent the past 25 years loving children like her own.

Before coming principal three years ago, Valorie worked in Farmington as a teacher with special talents. Her friends were other teachers and they became very close friends as well. They are a special kind of person and I fell in love with every one of them.

The social events and school functions became a part of me, so much so that I was thought to be a teacher by some students and I wore a false badge proudly.

Today Ms. Williams wears the title principal with great pride and spending many of ther own school hours to received accreditation. Her job has changed and now includes preparing and guiding teachers to perform their tasks in life. Her main focus in life is to take her fine teaching staff and make sure that every child is affected by some degree of betterment.

Of the young adults that I have met who were taught by Valorie, many comments have been about her influence on them. Karen Meier walked into that school a few weeks ago and observed in just a short time what I have known for years. That's called being smart and observant and seeing what is right there in front of your nose. That's called being a professional in the field of writing.

Thank you, Karen, because now I will write another book. It will be about Valorie Williams, her smile, her always positive attitude, her common sense approach and her professional example she always displays . It will be quite a book and just might make the best seller list in Redford and Farmington. Stay tuned.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM.

Come out at night for special photos

Have you ever been tempted to photograph a dramatic moonlit landscape and gave up because you just didn't know how to adjust the camera settings? Or ever wanted to shoot Christmas lights at night or, six months later, the Fourth of July fireworks?

Well, stars, werewolves and photographers who want to add to their portfolios all come out at night! So don't give up. Night photography offers an abundance of opportunity from the examples above to an intimate setting lit only by candlelight.

Most likely, your camera metering system won't function properly at night so the best thing to do is to use the recommended exposures from the chart below.

You will, of course, need a steady tripod and cable release and bracket your shots to assure getting a correctly exposed negative or slide. You'll have to set your automatic cameras to a manual mode.

Subject – Settings (400ASA)
Home interiors at night – 1/4 sec. f/5.6
Outdoor Christmas lights – 1/15 sec. f/5.6
Candlelit closeups – 1/8 sec. f/5.6
Streets at night – 1/4 sec. f/4
Floodlit buildings/statues – 1/4 sec. f/4
Moonlit landscapes – 30 sec. f/4
Fireworks/lightning – "B" f/11

MONTE NAGLER

The "B" setting for fireworks and lightning shots means "bulb" and the shutter remains open for as long as you depress the cable release.

While this chart contains recommendations based on 400ASA speed film, any other film speed can be used. Simply calculate what the exposure should be. For example, 100ASA film is two increments "slower" than 400. So a candlelit scene requires an exposure two increments less, or 1/2 second at f/5.6.

Expert photographer Frank Andreae took this excellent night photograph of Blackfriars Crafts in Plymouth, England. Shot at midnight with a wide angle lens, Frank's exposure of f5.6 at 1/2 second worked perfectly.

So don't always be a daytime photographer. Come out at night! Nighttime photography offers dramatic and exciting opportunities for you and your camera.

Monte Nagler will be conducting a two-week photo workshop to Spain June 27 to July 11. Call Nagler at his office, (810) 426-0333, for more information.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 then his mailbox number, 1873.

Sprinklers need proper maintenance

Q: We winterized our lawn sprinkler system last fall,but when we opened it in the spring the back flow preventer was broken. What would cause this?

A: You may have a couple issues going on. First of all, older systems are being serviced where there is a gate valve in place. There are two types of valves used to connect the domestic water system to the back flow preventers; gate valves and ball valves. A gate valve that is screwed down and over time may not seal completely, causing water to get into your backflow preventer which may expand when the water is frozen during winter, breaking the backflow. Many people purchase gate valves due to initial cost. However, a brass ball valve fastens tight enough so that no water can get through to the backflow preventer. If your system has a gate valve you may want to consider replacing it with a ball valve for preventative maintenance. This would take approximately an hour of labor costs at $60. The part will run about $30. To repair a back flow is about $185 labor included.

The second thing to consider is that when fall rolls around, many so-called sprinkler companies drive through neighborhoods offering winterization as extremely low costs and are often unqualified, some even uninsured. Remember, saving money now may cause you big money down the road. Keep in mind that an eight zone system will probably cost $5 per zone with a minimum of $40 to winterize. The company should also offer a warranty against damage to the system for the spring opening unless you have a gate valve. Preventative maintenance should include converting to a valve and selecting a qualified contractor. Although there is no licensing required for an irrigation contractor in the State of Michigan, you will want to look for the following:

- Ask for a certificate of insurance. You can verify with their insurance company.
- Choose a full-time irrigation company that specializes in servicing after the installation.
- A written work order provided by the company which includes an address and phone number. Ask for a business card.
- Make sure that the company you choose has been in business for at least three years and intends to continue in this line of work.
- Keep your receipt and contact the same company in the spring for a spring turn-on, so if damage has occurred, you're now dealing with the same contractor.

In short, a qualified legitimate contractor will gladly do the job the first time so you will continue to do business with them. A sprinkler business is not unlike any other service business – it boils down to service and backing up your work. Keeping the customer happy. The bottom line is service, service, service ...

CLEVELAND SAN JOSE BALLET

Elvis returns – again: The Michigan Opera Theatre presents the Cleveland/San Jose Ballet in "Blue Suede Shoes," inspired by the music of Elvis Presley. The new ballet is attracting wider audiences to the classic dance form. Performances run through Sunday at the Detroit Opera House.

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

Elvis not only lives, he's returned to his rightful place.

No, not to a Burger King in Kalamazoo. Not even as a sandwich artist at a Southfield deli. His latest resurrection isn't strictly a rock and roll incarnation, but as an inspiring influence for a ballet named after his famous obsession for a hue, texture and footwear.

Dance Card

- What: "Blue Suede Shoes," a classical ballet performed by the Cleveland San Jose Ballet, inspired by the music of Elvis Presley. Presented by the Michigan Opera Theatre.
- Where: Detroit Opera House, 1526 Broadway, Detroit.
- When: Thursday-Sunday, April 17-20; 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday; 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday; 2 p.m. Sunday.
- Tickets: Range from $17 to $67, call (313) 874-7464.

With the Michigan Opera Theatre's current presentation of "Blue Suede Shoes" at the Detroit Opera House, all bets favor that Elvis can do for American ballet what his quivering lips and pulsating pelvis did to ignite pop music.

Elvis in tights? Well, he's back in spirit anyway.

Despite purists grumbling that ballet is being unhinged from its classical roots, the show of exuberant Presley songs provides an aphrodisiac to baby boomers who regress into rebellious adolescence at the sound of "Hound Dog," "Jail House Rock" and "Heartbreak Hotel." And who become squishy sentimentalists over "Teddy Bear," "Are You Lonesome Tonight" and "Love Me Tender."

The classical ballet of Presley music is performed by the Cleveland San Jose Ballet under the direction of former Detroiter Dennis Nahat. Since its preview last May, "Blue Suede Shoes" is often mentioned as one of the new American ballets designed to attract audiences to what has been considered a "high brow' art form.

In the past year, along with the Houston Ballet's "Dracula," "Blue Suede Shoes" has been a bona fide "hit," a term usually reserved for big-scale Broadway musical productions. Longtime designer Bob Mackie created costumes and set designs for "Blue Suede Shoes."

The ballet ties together a tenuous plot of three guys who travel along a similar road as the King – from a backwoods high school in the 1950s to induction into the army to coming back to a rapidly changed America. Feeling defiant, lonesome yet determined to follow the American Dream, the three search for perspective as Presley croons "Stranger in My Own Hometown," "In the Ghetto" and "Big Boss Man."

Unlike most other classical ballets, "Blue Suede Shoes" offers a contemporary subject with music that nearly everyone has heard. It's surely not "Romeo and Juliet" or "Swan Lake." But according to Bradley Stroud, MOT's director of dance, that's exactly the point.

Time has come, said Bradley, a Birmingham resident, for American ballet to reinvent itself by incorporating more accessible music and themes.

Never an Elvis fan? Come on.

"I was never truly an Elvis fan until I saw the ballet," said Stroud. "People are coming to see this ballet because of the music, and because of their love for Elvis Presley. It has both the appeal of a Broadway show, and a strong connection with classical ballet."

In the rather staid dance world, that amounts to a minor rebellion. It's probably difficult for ballet diehards to imagine Michigan's 7,000-member Elvis fan club lining up to watch classic ballet. But then, who else but Elvis could perform the miracle conversion?

"Dance is more than a tutu and point shoes," said Stroud, former executive director of the former Metropolitan Ballet Theatre of Detroit. When that fledgling dance company folded three years ago, Stroud went back to practicing law and accounting. When the MOT position opened last August, he found himself in the ideal place to apply his administrative skills and love of ballet.

In past years, MOT produced a couple of classical ballets per season. Stroud was hired to create a dance program to spotlight the Detroit Opera House to international dance companies. Last February's presentation of the American Ballet Theatre was an unprecedented step in that direction.

"In the dance world, Detroit is back on the map because of this venue," said Stroud, who readily listed versatility, size, rehearsal space and ambience as the reasons for the growing appeal.

"Not many venues can handle 'Blue Suede Shoes' and the ABT," said Stroud. "To truly appreciate dance, you need to see it in the right venue. If people hear enough about dance, it'll become more familiar and they'll consider spending more of their entertainment dollars on it."

In just six months, Stroud has already developed plans for a Family Dance Series as part of MOT's community outreach program.

Ironically, metro Detroit has more small private dance studios than any other area in the country (see related side bar), yet has few large-scale productions, said Stroud. The MOT, he said, hopes to be the magnet that draws leading contemporary dance companies such as Mark Morris and Les Ballet de Monte Carlo.

"Classical ballet is reinventing itself along with the emergence of the contemporary dance movement," said Stroud, who points to the popular success of "Stomp," "Riverdance," "Tap Dogs" and "Lord of the Dance" as evidence of the resurrection of dance.

And now, with "Blue Suede Shoes" once again eliciting widespread adulation for Elvis, classical ballet might have found its savior in a familiar specter.

Long live the King!

"Poor" Appalachia, a region of America touching 13 states, including Kentucky, West Virginia, and Tennessee, is celebrated in "Appalachian Strings," opening Wednesday, April 23, for previews at Meadow Brook Theatre.

The dictionary may define this area as "economically poor," but playwrights Randal Myler and Dan Wheetman found it rich in tradition and music.

"My father was born in West Virginia, and I was drawn to the region," said Myler who co-wrote "Appalachian Strings," with Wheetman from oral histories and music they discovered at the Smithsonian Institution.

"These people are misunderstood. There's the stereotype of the lazy hillbilly, the Beverly Hillbillies, but these are a proud people, fiercely independent, hard working with a lot of family values worth keeping."

"Appalachian Strings" premiered last May at the Denver Center Theatre Company where it played to sold-out audiences. Several regional theaters have expressed an interest in the play. Meadow Brook will be the first in the Midwest to present it.

"I flew out to Denver, and saw the show," said Geoffrey Sherman, Meadow Brook Theatre's artistic director. "I had a whale of the time, and so did the audience. I was moved by the music, and the cast is remarkable. As an Englishman I was fascinated by the story, and didn't know the way Appalachia was settled. When I came back I discovered that people here didn't either."

There's a line in the play – "Who is this man General Motors?"

When the coal mines closed in the 1950s, the people of Appalachia, Irish and Scottish immigrants who settled the area in the 1840s, left their homes, and moved where jobs were, which included automobile factories in metro Detroit.

" 'Appalachia Strings,' is not a realistic play with a plot," explained Myler. "It's an evening chockful of song. Among the songs are stories and reminisces about life in the mountains."

The words, taken from oral histories, and books, are spoken by three actors, representing three generations. Bob Burrus plays a grandfatherly character, Melinda Deane, the daughter, and Adale O'Brien the mother.

History is woven through a beautiful quilt of music and song by Molly Andrews, a ballad singer, and music is played onstage by Tony

James Morisi of Livonia directs the Plymouth Theatre Guild production. Margaret Wunschul of Troy is the music director/conductor. Judy Ryckman of Canton is the producer. MaryLynn Kuna of Plymouth designed the costumes.

Based on the novel by Frances Hodgson Burnett, "The Secret Garden," musical book and lyrics by Marsha Norman, music by Lucy Simon, is about an 11-year-old girl, orphaned in India, who returns to Yorkshire to live with an embittered, reclusive uncle and his invalid son.

The uncle's estate includes a magic locked garden. Flashbacks, dream sequences, a strolling chorus of ghosts, and music dramatize "The Secret Garden's" enduring tale. Plymouth Theatre Guild's cast of 20 ranges in age from eight to 60.

"The show is about healing through love," said Morisi. "The house is haunted by ghosts who come to but the events in motion, and help Archibald Craven put to rest the memory of his wife who died giving birth to their son. The music is beautiful, and very richly orchestrated."

For this production, Morisi played up a lot of the mysticism and the ghosts. "Ghost stories are interesting," said Morisi. "If you don't know which people in the cast are ghosts it's confusing. The bottom line is I want to make it an evening of magic, because that's what theater is all about."

The cast features Michael Burden of Redford as Dr. Neville Craven; Leslie Burgamy of Canton as Ayah; Cindy Cooper of Livonia, (Martha Sowerby); Christina Djordjevic of Garden City (Claire Holmes/Mrs. Shelley), Angie Djordjevic (children's chorus); Elizabeth Filios of Canton (Mary Lennox); Catie Filios (children's chorus); Mike Hammonds of Canton, (Dickon Sowerby); Peter Hathaway of Walled Lake (Lt. Shaw); Dane Jardine of Westland (children's chorus); Brianna Overmars of Plymouth (children's chorus); Kerry Plague of Canton (Lt. Wright); Connie Randall of Livonia (Claire Holmes/Mrs. Shelley); Judy Ryckman of Canton (Nurse); Wendy Sielaff of Canton (Mrs. Medlock and Mrs. Winthrop); Dave Signor of Plymouth (Ben Weatherstaff); Allison Soranno of Livonia (Martha Sowerby); Michael Soranno (Fakir); Jeanette Sowman of Farmington Hills, (Alice); Meghan Symons of Canton (children's chorus); and Craig Wickham of Plymouth, (Major Holmes/Major Shelley).

Marcus, L.J. Slavin, and Dan Wheetman on guitars, mandolins, fiddles, penny whistles, dulcimers, autoharps, jugs, and a musical saw. Sandy Silva, a clogger, also performs. It is an ensemble piece where people play multiple roles, and instruments.

"Appalachia Strings," opens with an Irish reel as a family leaves Ireland to escape starvation caused by the potato famine and settles in the eastern mountains of the United States.

"It's music I've been playing for 25 years. It's music I love, and feel very close to," said Wheetman, a professional musician and composer who was a member of John Denver's band for seven years.

Some of the songs will be familiar like "The Water Is Wide," which I remember singing in high school choir, but many such as "The Farmer is the Man," and "Hard Working Miner," will not.

"The songs related to courtship, farming, mining, they're songs of the land and about how people made their livelihood. Randy put together the words, I put together the music, and we worked together. We picked aspects of life that were common to people. The words and music are traditional, except in the second act where they're more modern."

"Appalachian Strings," gives the audience a taste of making moonshine, the sale of which gave people, many of them farmers, extra money to buy flour and other necessities. It also shows what happened during Prohibition when stills were destroyed.

"They made their living off the land, and didn't want anyone telling them what they could do with it," said Wheetman. "Their feeling for the land was almost a mystical bonding."

With Act 2 comes the beginning of the end when coal mining came to the area, destroying land and lives. "People offered farmers money for mineral rights. The farmers sold them not realizing that mining would destroy the land."

When the mines shut down in the 1950s, the people, who were once self-sustaining – they grew or hunted their own food, made their own houses, toys, clothes and musical instruments – were forced to leave the mountains to search for work in cities. But every weekend they would come back.

Radio also played a role in changing the fabric of Appalachian society. "Everyone participated, if you weren't playing an instrument, you were singing or dancing," said Wheetman. "When people started listening to radio, that's when oral histories started to fade."

For the authors, the play is a celebration of a way of life, and also a proud people. "It shows how much alike we are by opening a window that shows how these people lived. They believed in family values, things that are important – love, responsibility, giving support in hard times, things that make us human that are lost in urban living."

Myler, who directs "Appalachian Strings," was involved in other popular Meadow Brook productions including "Quilters," "The Immigrant," and "To Kill a Mockingbird."

Myler and Wheetman have worked together on other musicals, including "It Ain't Nothin' But The Blues," which toured nationally this year.

BY SUE SUCHYTA
SPECIAL WRITER

Arnold, Lucien, Norman and Barry share their hopes, dreams and fears as well as an apartment. Their social worker Jack is the glue that holds them all together. He, however, is suffering from job burnout and personal problems which compel him to examine the direction of his own life, which is changing while his charges' lives remain essentially the same.

Director Trudy Mason has brought together a wonderful ensemble cast. The actors playing the mentally challenged individuals capture the mannerisms, postures and speech patterns in a very realistic way without resorting to stereotype or compromising the dignity of the roles.

Often audiences are uncomfortable with the issue of group homes and the mentally challenged. In "The Boys Next Door," the characters are so likable, and their human vulnerability so touching that this hesitation disappears, and is replaced with a feeling of caring sympathy as the small dramas of their lives unfold. Randy Coble, a likable actor, skillfully portrays the social worker Jack, who narrates the story through poignant asides.

The four group home residents all turned in remarkable performances. Dan Gumina is a wonderful Arnold, perpetually nervous and "playing without a face card." Gary Brda captures the innocence of Norman, the child-like donut shop worker, with dignity and charm. His scenes with his girlfriend Sheila, wonderfully portrayed by Beth Temple, are especially touching.

Mark Barrera believably captured the tension and turmoil of Barry's schizophrenic inner demons, while Jason Birkby just as effectively portrayed Lucien, a grown man with the innocent persona of a young, vulnerable child.

The play, which moves swiftly through a series of short scenes, made effective use of side platforms to convey locations other than the men's apartment. The sound effects were exceptional. The prop people needed to pay more attention to detail, though, especially with the groceries. They should have at least put something in the Wheaties boxes and milk carton to keep them from bouncing around with an empty sound when they're unpacked.

Smith, Linklater talk about their generation

Drama: Ben Affleck and Joey Lauren Adams in Kevin Smith's "Chasing Amy."

JOHN MONAGHAN

One upshot from this year's Oscars was the credence given to low-budget independent films. So you might experience more than the usual hype about "Chasing Amy" and "SubUrbia," two odes to the unique problems facing Generation X.

And some of it is even deserved. With two and three features under their belts respectively, Kevin Smith ("Clerks") and Richard Linklater ("Dazed and Confused") could easily cross over to bigger budgets and actors. Both prefer to stay far from mainstream Hollywood and the headaches that go along with it.

"Chasing Amy," currently at the Main Art Theatre, focuses on Holden and Alyssa (Ben Affleck and Joey Lauren Adams), a pair of comic book artists whose blooming love story is interrupted by the fact that she's decidedly gay. They stay platonic friends until an emotional confrontation in the rain lands them in each other's arms.

Of course it's never that simple. Holden's best friend Banky (Jason Lee) uncovers some dirt on Alyssa from her high school days that starts Holden questioning their relationship. The movie then becomes not so much a story about homosexuality as how anyone deals with a partner's past. Which is not a bad idea for a movie, especially in an era where AIDS has made it impossible to place blinders on when it comes to sex. Whether Smith, whose main interests remain hockey and comic books, is the best filmmaker for the job is another story entirely.

Made for about $250,000 (far less than the millions spent on his sophomore disaster "Mallrats"), "Chasing Amy" is, according to Smith, the third in a trilogy of films set around the New Jersey suburbs he came from. While Smith addicts will pick up the more obscure references, the main link here is his ongoing cameo as Silent Bob, who, along with trash-talking sidekick Jay (Jason Mewes), pops in to offer sage advice.

In "SubUrbia," opening tomorrow at the Main, Richard Linklater teams with writer Eric Bogosian ("Talk Radio") for a story about recent high school graduates who spend their time around the corner of an all-night convenience store. Their late teen existentialism is thrown off balance when a successful former school mate, now a rock star, comes home for a visit.

When the writing doesn't get too preachy or ansgst-ridden, the movie actually comes alive. Bogosian wrote the piece for the stage and many of the actors have come along, including Steve Zahn as Buff, a simultaneously irritating and endearing wild man and drunk.

Leading this ensemble is Jeff (Giovanni Ribisi), whose jealousy of his former friend is cloaked in cynicism. "Just because I don't choose to prostitute myself in front of an audience doesn't mean that I'm not a creator," he says while taking another slug of Pabst Blue Ribbon, drink of choice for these sidewalk slackers.

Ethnic tension arises in the form of the irritated convenience store owner, a young Indian roughly the same age who is going to college while tending the family business. During his nightly ritual of shooing them away, he makes a point of belittling them for squandering the opportunities that he and his family have worked so hard to obtain.

Ultimately "SubUrbia" turns into a slightly more mature version of the John Hughes high school movies, in which characters inevitably fall into types. Nicky Katt's Tim walks an uneven line between sensitive and tough guy, especially in his soul-searching interludes with rich-girl music publicist Erica (another satisfying turn by ubiquitous independent star Parker Posey.)

Ultimately, the mark that Linklater and Smith leave on the cinematic landscape has less to do with story as location. Think of "SubUrbia's" leisurely rolls past generic-looking suburban Thomes and strip malls or "Chasing Amy's" no-frills shooting in New Jersey parks, bars, and even comic book conventions.

Both fall short of their intentions, but both have also proven to the world that suburban life is no longer an oxymoron.

Band capitalizes on 'That Thing You Do' success

CHRISTINA FUOCO

New York-based pop band Fountains of Wayne is looking toward a longer career than Tom Hanks' fictional band The Wonders in the movie "That Thing You Do!"

The Fountains of Wayne's brilliantly crafted self-titled album (Scratchie/TAG/Atlantic) is filled with addictive pop melodies that harken back to the '50s and '60s. The quartet – bassist Adam Schlesinger, singer Chris Collingwood, guitarist Jody Porter, and drummer Brian Young – doesn't apologize for its soaring harmonies and irresistible choruses. As the song "Barbara H." goes, "can't shake that tune/but it's OK."

If the description of Fountains of Wayne sounds a lot like The Wonders, it's because Schlesinger is the man behind the Oscar-nominated movie theme.

"I think it's pretty ironic that it (the song's popularity) paralleled the course of the movie," said Schlesinger. "It was really a fluke thing in a sense."

A fluke, sure, but the timing of the single was perfect, coinciding with the release of "Fountains of Wayne" (Scratchie/TAG/Atlantic).

"I certainly didn't plan it that way. As we started to get closer to the release date I realized that it (the release date) would fall almost exactly when the movie came out," said Schlesinger, a partner in the Chicago-based Scratchie Records label, co-owned by D'arcy and James Iha of the Smashing Pumpkins.

His bandmate Collingwood said that the media hype was good and bad.

"It's allowed us to get some sort of media coverage. Otherwise we might have been ignored. But people think that this is Adam's band and he's the songwriter."

Schlesinger added, "Ultimately that will sort of be a footnote. I think we made a really good record. It's not even all of my songwriting. Chris wrote more of the stuff."

Coming to town: Fountains of Wayne bassist Adam Schlesinger and vocalist Chris Collingwood.

(Fountains of Wayne – the latest incarnation for Collingwood and Schlesinger who have played in other bands together – do not play "That Thing You Do!" live. As a matter of fact, neither of them sing the song. Mike Viola of the band the Candy Butchers takes on the vocal duties.)

Although Collingwood writes most of the lyrics, Fountains of Wayne has been compared to Squeeze's Chris Difford and Glenn Tilbrook, and John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

"As far as Lennon and McCartney, we have more in common with them than Difford and Tilbrook. It's a definite collaboration. In Squeeze, Chris Difford writes the words and the other guy writes the music. With Lennon and McCartney, they never split it up like that."

Collingwood explained that he and Schlesinger's styles are definitely different. Take the second single "Radiation Vibe," for example.

"That's actually one of Adam's songs. That's the one song on the record that's completely Adam and didn't involve me in the least. He wrote that song around the phrase 'radiation vibe.' My songs are more based on personal experience. His usually are works of art. He's much more of a craftsman."

But they did have a common goal in mind while writing songs for "Fountains of Wayne."

"We wanted to write songs that we could play drunk so the best way to do that is to write them when you're drunk."

The band comes to St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress in Detroit, for an all-ages show on Sunday, April 20, with Sloan and Treadmill Trackstar. Collingwood told Newsweek magazine that one time the band spent an entire show making fun of Eric Clapton. This time Collingwood mused a more violent tale.

"We like shoot model rockets and the more people who get hurt the funnier it is for us. Hopefully there'll be some blood," Collingwood said with a sinister laugh stressing that he's joking.

"Jody likes to dance. We have this break in the show where, you know that dance where you stand and put your left leg behind your right, and then your right behind your left? I'm doing it right now. It's that dance that like elementary school does. Sometimes we like to play songs by Grammy winner Jon Secada, too."

Doors for the Fountains of Wayne show open at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $9.89 in advance. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT.

• The Aussie rock band Silverchair knows full well about freaks and the treatment of them.

The threesome – drummer Ben Gillies, bassist Chris Joannou, and guitarist/vocalist Daniel Johns – were in their early teens when Silverchair's debut album "Frogstomp" was released on Epic Records June 20, 1995. Although the album was a platinum seller, skeptics wrote Silverchair off as Nirvana rip-offs. Teenagers who could rock? Fans flocked to the 'freak show' to get a glimpse of the group.

It seems apropos that the title of Silverchair's sophomore effort released Feb. 4, 1997, on Epic is "Freak Show." "Freak" is the second track on the album.

"It's mostly just talking about how people get perceived as being freaks," bassist Joannou explained during a phone conversation from his Australia home. "At freak shows, people would come along and be looking at them as if they're freaks. They travel around, perform, pack up and move on – just like us."

The first single "Abuse Me" and the song "Freak" talk about that phenomenon, which Joannou hopes will end now that he and his bandmates are in their late teens.

"Come on, abuse me more I like it," Johns sings in "Abuse Me" referring to nay-sayers. "I don't think you like me. I hate you as well."

The album is a departure from the straight-ahead rock of "Frogstomp." A few of the songs include violins ("Cemetery"), timpani drums, and Indian instruments.

"We had a lot more of an idea what we wanted to do when we went in the studio to record 'Freak Show.' We had more time. We did a lot more pre-production and work on getting the songs ready and all that kind of stuff."

Through "Freak Show" Joannou is hoping to prove to music listeners that Silverchair's success is no stroke of luck.

"We're basically hoping to establish ourselves and show a lot of people that 'Frogstomp' is not a fluke."

Silverchair with special guests Handsome and Local H perform at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 23, at the State Theatre, 2115 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Tickets are $16.50 in advance for the all-ages show. For more information, call (313) 961-5451.

Singer happy with male response to anti-macho song

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

A performance with Sarah McLachlan on June 12, 1996, at Pine Knob Music Theatre will forever be embedded in the mind of singer/songwriter Paula Cole.

"It was my first time playing piano live in front of an audience," Cole said via telephone from New York. "It was terrifying. I was very shy to reveal my piano playing in front of that many people. I think the discomfort was in my own head."

Fans can expect Cole to tickle the ivories at her headlining show Thursday, April 17, at Clutch Cargo's in Pontiac.

"I've gotten a lot better, too, with repetition," Cole said with a laugh.

Things have improved in many respects for Cole since her performance at Pine Knob, and in the short time since her intimate show at The Shelter below St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit last fall. The single "Where Have All the Cowboys Gone" has given her sophomore effort "This Fire" (Imago/Warner Bros.) a burst of energy by increasing her fan base by more than 13,000 a week.

Blazing up the charts: Singer Paula Cole.

Cole, who produced "This Fire," had a feeling that "Where Have All the Cowboys Gone" would be the first single.

"As a producer I ensured that it would sound really good on the radio – as good as possible coming out of the crappiest little speakers," she said.

The song is the tale of macho men and frail women afraid to stand up for themselves: "I will do the laundry/if you pay all the bill. Where is my John Wayne?/Where is my prairie song? Where is my happy ending?/Where have all the cowboys gone?"

"It's a little story of the every woman. It's a life story in 3 1/2 minutes. It's about the wistfulness and melancholy and disappointment of a life. There's a touch of sarcasm and hopefully it's a chance to tear apart some of our media stereotypical roles."

The great thing about the song, Cole explained, is that men have positively responded to the song too.

"There's a lot of pressure to be macho and be a rogue man. There's certainly pressure on women to be confined by stereotypical roles, which feels so archiac but they still exist."

Recently, a few of those stereotypes were disspelled for Cole.

"I found out what John Wayne's real name was the other day. It's Marion Morrison and he was afraid of horses. He hated horses, apparently. That says everything I think. When Newt Gingrich fawned over John Wayne as the all-American male, I don't think he knew that's who the all-American male really was."

The video for "Where Have All the Cowboys Gone" shows a buff Cole in a sort of new-age dance and thought process. She said it amazes her how many times people ask her if she's had any dance training.

"I did study some for about a year in the eighth grade and recently I took some Eastern dance lessons which in the western world we call bellydancing," she said.

"It's just natural for me to shut my eyes and move with the way I feel. Live – that's when I really let loose."

Cole grew up in Rockport, a small Massachusetts town and the "Bethlehem" she sang about on "Harbinger," her debut album released on Imago and re-released on Warner Bros. Records. On "This Fire," Cole revisits Bethlehem on the lead-off track "Tiger," to pronounce "I've left Bethlehem and I feel free. I've left the girl I was supposed to be."

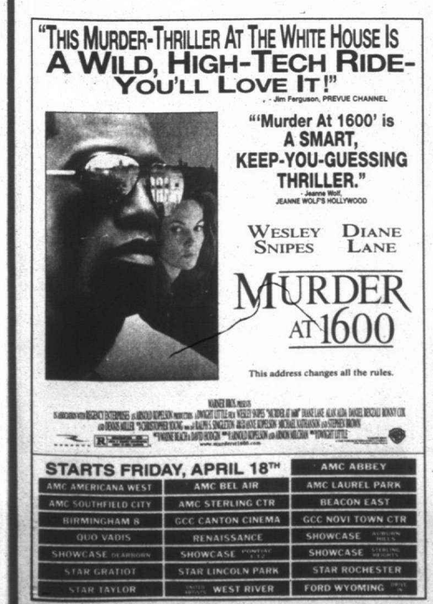
"This Fire" is a vocal roller-coaster ride. "Throwing Stones" rushes down the steep hill to meet the smoldering sensuality of "Feelin' Love," and the soul-baring "Me." On "Me" Cole explains that she is "not the person who is singing. I am a silent one inside. I am not the one who laughs at people's jokes. I just pass it by their egos."

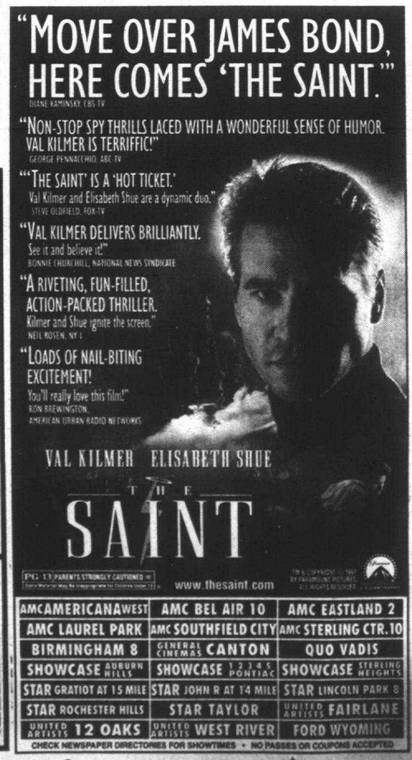
"... I am like the winter, a dark cold feelin.' ... It's me who is my enemy. Me who beats me up. Me who makes the monsters. Me who stoops my confidence."

Cole said she gets "a lot of responses from 'Me.' Life is hard and we all go through depressions and times of darkness. 'Me' is about going through one of those long dark tunnels and finding light at the end."

Sort of like overcoming the fear of playing piano.

Paula Cole and special guest Holly Palmer will perform Thursday, April 17, at Clutch Cargo's, 65 E. Huron, Pontiac. Tickets are $15 in advance for the 18 and older show. Doors open at 7 p.m. For more information, call (810) 333-2362. She will also appear on David Letterman's show, 11 p.m.-midnight on channel 62, Monday, April 28.





DINING

Cap off, or start, a great evening at Edison's

BY JOE BAUMAN
STAFF WRITER

Edison's Restaurant is like no other in Birmingham, or for that matter, all of Oakland County. The latest creation of Bill and Judi Roberts is closed more than it is open, offers more specialty cocktails than food items, and includes not a single entree on its menu.

But like the Birmingham couple's other restaurants — The Beverly Hills Grill in Beverly Hills and Streetside Seafood and 220 in Birmingham – Edison's has proven a huge success in the three weeks since its opening.

Manager Carol Cahalan describes Edison's, tucked into a former framing shop and antique business directly below 220 on Merrill Street, as an upscale piano bar offering lively cocktails and entertainment in an atmosphere reminiscent of a New York nightclub.

"People come in all the time and say the place reminds them of New York and Chicago and think it's really cool to have something like this in Birmingham," said Cahalan, who worked for three years upstairs in 220 before taking over the daily operations of Edison's. "This is a popular after dinner or theater stop, and we are confident the restaurant will become a destination place."

Designed by the owners' longtime associate Ron Rea, Edison's certainly presents a clubby atmosphere with low lighting, sofas and chairs replacing traditional couches, and a long bar prominently centered in the room.

The restaurant is only open 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. Thursdays and Fridays, and 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Saturdays. The space is available for private parties the rest of the week.

Edison's
Where: 220 Merrill St. (downstairs, separate entrance), downtown Birmingham. (810) 645-2150
Hours: Thursday and Friday, 6 p.m. to 2 a.m.; Saturday, 7 p.m. to 2 a.m.
Menu: Short list of appetizers, finger sandwiches and desserts; large offering of upscale cocktails. No children's menu
Highlights: Live entertainment; cigar friendly Available for private parties Sunday-Wednesday
Reservations: None
Credit cards: All major cards accepted

Roberts Restaurants corporate chef Jack Leone, who returned recently from Denver to work with former college pal Bill Roberts, created the brief menu, which features 11 hot and cold appetizers chilled lobster with truffled risotto cake, crispy leeks and remoulade sauce; peppered, seared tuna carpaccio with wasabi, ginger soy sauce and crispy leeks, and smoked salmon with mascarpone and Beluga caviar purses.

Another unique offering are five types of panini sandwich, an Italian finger food made with focaccia rubbed with garlic oil, stuffed with a variety of vegetables, cheeses and meats, and grilled in a special pan. Early favorites include one made with roasted prime rib, stilton cheese, caramelized red onions and pancho sauce, and a vegetarian offering made with artichoke hearts, asiago cheese, roasted red pepper and basil pesto aioli.

A handful of desserts including creme brulee with fresh berries, chocolate fondue with fresh fruit, pound cake and truffles, and warm cappuccino cheesecake with chocolate sauce round out the menu.

Cahalan said what has pleasantly surprised patrons is the breadth of the cocktail menu, including six sparkling wines by the glass, 14 frozen and flavored premium vodkas, and a large selection of Cognac, ports and single malt scotch.

Edison's isn't child friendly, but Cahalan said it wasn't meant to be.

"Bill and Judi wanted to create a place where adults could meet for drinks and appetizers before heading to the opera, or stopping in after for dessert and a nightcap," she said. "They are very good at identifying a weakness in the restaurant scene, and filling that void. Where else can you order Tattinger or Dom Perignon by the glass with fresh, Beluga caviar?"

Based on early returns, it appears Team Roberts has scored another hit.

Landlord might be responsible for safety off-property

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. My landlord knew of several muggings on some property next to our apartment but failed to warn me about the problems with the vacant lot next to our apartment. I was attacked and robbed there.

Do I have any recourse against the landlord?

A. Under a recent case rendered by the New Jersey Supreme Court, that court held that a landlord cannot be held liable for an attack on property from which it receives no "economic benefit."

The courts indicated that imposing liability on the landlord would be "unprecedented" and would "transfer to an innocent property owner the duty to prevent criminal conduct that is more properly the responsibility of others."

In a recent California Supreme Court case, the court allowed a landlord to be sued for an accident on a neighboring property where he "exercised control" over the property regardless of whether he realized any economic gain. In that case, there was a jury issue as to whether the landlord "exercised control" over a strip of city-owned land where he cut the grass three and built an fence after the accident occurred. In short, depending upon the facts of your case, you may have basis to pursue the matter.

Waskiewicz can access multilists of houses available for sale, prepare instantaneous market analyses, take and process photographs and send faxes – all from his car.

"It saves tons of time," he said. "If it saves me time to prepare for an appointment, I have more time to go on appointments. Timing is everything in house hunting."

Dayid R. Johnson, a Realtor with Coldwell Banker Preferred in Plymouth, also has all the bells and whistles in his vehicle.

"It makes you about 75 percent more efficient than the old days," Johnson said. "There's no way people can run back and forth to my office and do it more efficiently."

Al Block, a Realtor with RE/MAX East in Clinton Township, does a lot of work out of his van, too.

"I want an office so I can do business anywhere," he said. "It's just time. Have I made more money? I think so."

Waskiewicz figures he spent upwards of $5,200 to equip his mobile office and that it costs about $300 per month in telephone charges to run it.

But he isn't deterred by the expense.

"All you have to do is sell two houses and the tools pay for themselves," he said, adding that favorable tax regulations also help the bottom business line.

Clients can be dazzled when he compiles information for them with his laptop from inside his vehicle or at a kitchen table, Waskiewicz said.

"It shows I'm committed to my profession and can help buyers and sellers be more prepared for transactions," he said.

"I'm in my car constantly with buyers," Johnson said. "I don't think there's been a sale I've participated in in the last six or seven months that I didn't use my laptop.

Waskiewicz related a story.

"We were looking for a house that wasn't to exceed $140,000. They wanted a three bedroom ranch. We had looked at all ranches available in that price range and hadn't found anything to suit their needs.

"We made a wrong turn and there was a colonial with a for-sale sign," Waskiewicz said. "The purchasers asked me, 'How much is that house?' I typed the address into my laptop computer.

"The price was about $14,000 more than they wanted to spend, but they decided they wanted to look at it anyway," Waskiewicz said. "I called (car phone) the listing company to see if the property was available and could it be shown."

The answer to both was yes.

"After viewing, the purchasers decided they wanted to make an offer," Waskiewicz said. "We went back to the truck, typed in the legal description and looked at all the comparable listings in the last 12 months that sold.

"We drove by the comps and compared each one to establish fair market value," Waskiewicz said. "We made an offer the same day."

The deal was sealed after a couple of days of negotiations.

And what if Waskiewicz didn't have a mobile office when they stumbled upon that colonial?

"We probably would have bought a ranch under $140,000," he said. "Who knows how many other houses I would have showed them? The frustration level at that point was pretty high."

Not to mention all the time that was saved identifying and visiting comparables immediately.

"The industry trend is agents are going to portability rather than desktops," Waskiewicz said. "Prices have dropped and there's a need for having all information with you."

So why don't more Realtors have mobile offices?

"They don't see a benefit or they're scared to change," Waskiewicz said.

"We're a rarity," Block said, adding that cost and temperament may hold others back. But cost shouldn't, he said.

"I think anybody who drives a Cadillac or a Buick or a higher-end car can afford this easily," Block said.

'96 home building highest since '88

BY JOHN D. MCCLAIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) – Builders put up more houses and apartments in 1996 than in any year since 1988, but the pace slowed to an 18-month low in December due in part to severe storms in Western states.

Many analysts expect housing activity to moderate this year, although remain at a relatively high level.

"We see a moderate decline, but still a good year," said David G. Seiders, chief economist with the National Association of Home Builders. He predicts 6 percent fewer units will be built this year than last.

"Housing activity is expected to be basically flat in 1997," said economist Cheryl Katz of Merrill Lynch & Co. "Household debt service is at a record share of income, constraining further borrowing.

She also predicted a leveling off because "income growth will almost certainly slow in coming months" and "pent-up demand for housing is probably exhausted for this cycle."

Housing starts shot up 8.8 percent in 1996 to 1.47 million, the most since 1988 when foundations were dug for 1.48 million units, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

They had dropped 7.5 percent in 1995, to 1.35 million, the first decline since a 15.1 percent plunge in 1991 when the economy was recovering from the last recession.

The Northeast led the 1996 advance with an 11.2 percent gain, but other regions also posted increases.

Starts in December fell 12.2 percent to a seasonally adjusted 1.33 million annual rate, lowest since a 1.30 million rate in June 1995. The drop was the steepest since a 16.7 percent fall in January 1994.

All regions shared in the decline, including the West where activity plunged 29.2 percent to a 257,000 rate. But the West's drop was largely due to the extreme weather. For the year, starts were up 8.8 percent to 360,600.

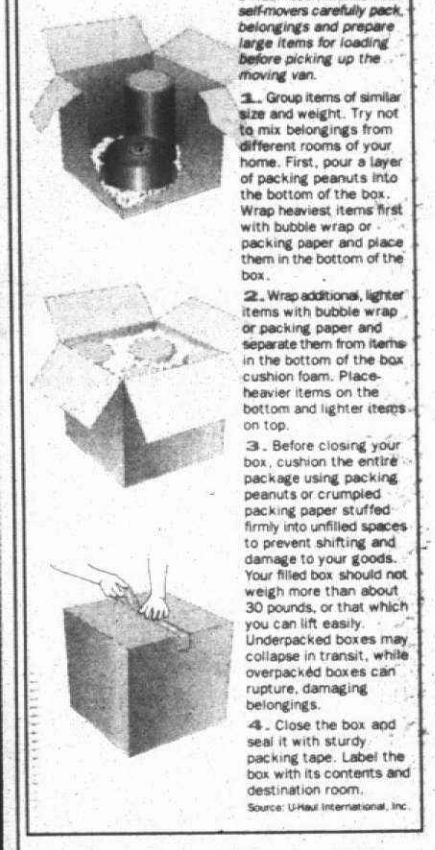
"Fundamentally, the West is in pretty good shape," Seiders said.

Starts were off 7.9 percent to a 302,000 rate in the Midwest in December, but up 10.6 percent to 320,800 for all of 1996. They fell 7.2 percent in the South to 645,000 for the month, but gained 7.5 percent to 661,200 for the year. In the Northeast, new construction was down 2.3 percent to a 125,000 rate in December while posting an 11.2 percent advance to 130,900 for the year.

Applications for building permits – often a barometer of future activity – slipped 0.6 percent in December, to a 1.41 million rate from 1.42 million in November.

Single-family starts, which had risen 6.7 percent in November, fell back 11.8 percent in December to a 1.02 million rate. For the year, they were up 7.8 percent to 1.16 million.

Construction of apartments and condominiums dropped 13.6 percent to a 305,000 rate after shooting up 18.9 percent in November. They jumped 12.9 percent during all of 1996 to 313,500.



How to pack a box

U-Haul recommends that self-movers carefully pack belongings and prepare large items for loading before picking up the moving van.

1. Group items of similar size and weight. Try not to mix belongings from different rooms of your home. First, pour a layer of packing peanuts into the bottom of the box. Wrap heaviest items first with bubble wrap or packing paper and place them in the bottom of the box.

2. Wrap additional, lighter items with bubble wrap or packing paper and separate them from items in the bottom of the box cushion foam. Place heavier items on the bottom and lighter items on top.

3. Before closing your box, cushion the entire package using packing peanuts or crumpled packing paper stuffed firmly into unfilled spaces to prevent shifting and damage to your goods. Your filled box should not weigh more than about 30 pounds, or that which you can lift easily. Underpacked boxes may collapse in transit, while overpacked boxes can rupture, damaging belongings.

4. Close the box and seal it with sturdy packing tape. Label the box with its contents and destination room.

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

Selecting a loan officer for personal service is key to your satisfaction with mortgage process

Whenever consumers ask for my mortgage shopping advice, I have always asserted that the most important thing they can do when shopping for a mortgage is to find an experienced loan officer who really knows the mortgage business. Neither the lender nor the mortgage product are as important as the loan officer you will be working with because a good loan officer can save you thousands of dollars with their knowledge and guidance. In addition, they will answer the numerous questions you may have during the mortgage process.

Two recent surveys of the mortgage industry have findings that attest to this advice. First, in a survey conducted for the Mortgage Bankers Association, results showed that four of 10 consumers find the paperwork and disclosure forms associated with the mortgage application and settlement process confusing. Here's a good example of how having a loan officer take time and explain all aspects of the mortgage process can affect how happy you feel when the final papers are signed. In the same survey, 98 percent of the 500 households sampled said they would like to receive a firm cost commitment prior to the application process. The bankers association commissioned the survey to help the mortgage industry, consumer groups and regulators find ways to improve the mortgage process for borrowers.

In another survey of people who had recently mortgaged, establishing a strong relationship with a mortgage lender was shown to be a crucial factor in a buyer's level of satisfaction with the mortgage process. For example, the mortgage application process can be very complicated. If your mortgage lender is preoccupied with seeking more sales, he/she may not be available to spend the time necessary to explain all aspects of the process to the homebuyer.

First-time homebuyers should focus more on customer service than on rates when seeking a loan officer because the application process entails many more factors than just the rate. Typically, buyers will need to have a lot of their questions answered at this time, such as which is the best mortgage product for them and an explanation of all costs associated with the loan. rate is more important because buyers may jump from lender to lender looking for a good rate. Homebuyers will have already been through the mortgage process at leans once and may feel more comfortable with the process.

Gayle Kaye

One of the best mortgage lenders I have found is Gayle Kaye of Kaye Financial Corporation. Kaye provides a truly unique environment where the loan officer takes the time to work one-on-one with the borrower and helps fill out all the required documentation for the loan.

I have known and respected Kaye's work for some time now. She is considered by many of her peers to be one of the top mortgage loan officers in the business and has achieved great success since opening her own company in 1993.

Even while serving as president, Kaye continues to work directly with borrowers. "I personally get great satisfaction from being able to guide people in the right direction to achieve their homeowning dreams," Kaye said.

Kaye Financial offers programs from more than 50 lenders, as well as their own portfolio products. They can close first mortgages up to $4 million, handle construction draw loans, FHA and VA loans, builder's spec and model loans, refinances, mobile and manufactured home loans, a wide variety of No-Income Verification loans and poor credit financing. They also offer second mortgages and lines of credit.

Home prices rise in Midwest and South

BY DAVE SKIDMORE
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) – Home prices nationally kept up with inflation last year. But values in the Midwest and South steeply appreciated.

Throughout the nation, 130 of 184 metro areas recorded median price increases, while 39 showed a decline, according to a survey by the National Association of Home Builders.

There was no change in nine areas, while comparative data were not available in six. The median is the midpoint, meaning half the homes sold for more than that cost and half for less.

Nationally, the median price of new and existing homes rose 2.6 percent over the year to $120,000 in the fourth quarter. The core inflation rate last year – minus volatile food and energy prices – also was 2.6 percent.

"It's a statistic of vital importance to many Americans because 'far and away housing is the most important asset of most households,'" said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

Kent Colton, executive vice president of the home builders, said "faltering economies put downward pressure on home prices" in parts of the Northeast but "in places where the economies are creating jobs and the housing markets are hot, we are seeing healthy gains."

Kalamazoo had the third-biggest increase in median prices in the nation at 15.5 percent to $82,000.

Home-price increases in the Midwest and South "reflect a tight labor market that's raising everyone's wages," he said.

The home builders' affordability index, which measures the ability of someone earning the local median income to purchase a median-priced home, showed the most affordable markets in the country as:

Binghamton, NY; Wilmington, Del.; Elkhart, Ind.; Lima and Elmira. The least affordable markets were San Francisco; Salinas, Calif.; Santa Cruz; Portland, Ore.; and Santa Rosa, Calif.

Rates drop

WASHINGTON (AP) – Interest rates on 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages declined to 8.15 percent this week from a seven-month high of 8.18 percent a week earlier, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said.

Despite the small drop, the rate remained more than half a percentage point higher than the 7.56 percent average just seven weeks earlier.

On one-year adjustable-rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.91 percent this week.
