Bicyclist injured by driver, 13

A 15-year-old boy is in serious condition following an accident in which he was hit, and then dragged by a car. The driver of the vehicle is said to be 13 years old.

A 15-year-old Canton boy was in serious condition Friday at an Ann Arbor hospital following 12 hours of surgery for head injuries suffered when he was allegedly hit and dragged by a car driven by a 13-year-old girl.

Canton police said just before the accident the girl had talked the car's 16-year-old male driver into letting her operate the vehicle.

According to Renee Happner, neighbor of accident victim Miles Wright, the older boy had just graduated from high school with high grades.

Police refused to identify either youngster because both are minors. The girl faces at minimum a charge of driving without a license and the older boy bears some responsibility for authorizing it, they said, but they won't file charges until they're sure the victim will survive. If he doesn't, the girl could be charged with manslaughter.

Neither youngster lives in the Fellows Creek Villa apartment complex south of Ford Road where the accident happened, but both reportedly have friends there.

Police said Wright was riding his bicycle in the parking lot about 11:40 p.m. Wednesday, June 11, when the accident happened.

They said Wright had been riding alongside the car and had spoken to the driver. The two vehicles came to a divide, said police, and Wright went past the car, which then accelerated, striking and dragging him.

Police suspect the girl probably had meant to use the brakes but hit the gas instead.

When the car finally stopped, the 16-year-old jumped out of the passenger seat, saw Wright was trapped and yelled to the girl, "You're on him, get off! Get off!", said Happner, who heard the details

Team reaches gridlock on the gridiron

BY RICHARD PEARL

Field of dreams? Right now, J. Glenn Brothers will be happy with any field his football team can get for its five home games this summer.

Brothers, a Wayne native and longtime resident of Canton, is the owner of the Wayne County Twisters, a non-profit semi-professional football team which has been denied stadium-usage by both the Wayne-Westland and Plymouth-Canton school districts.

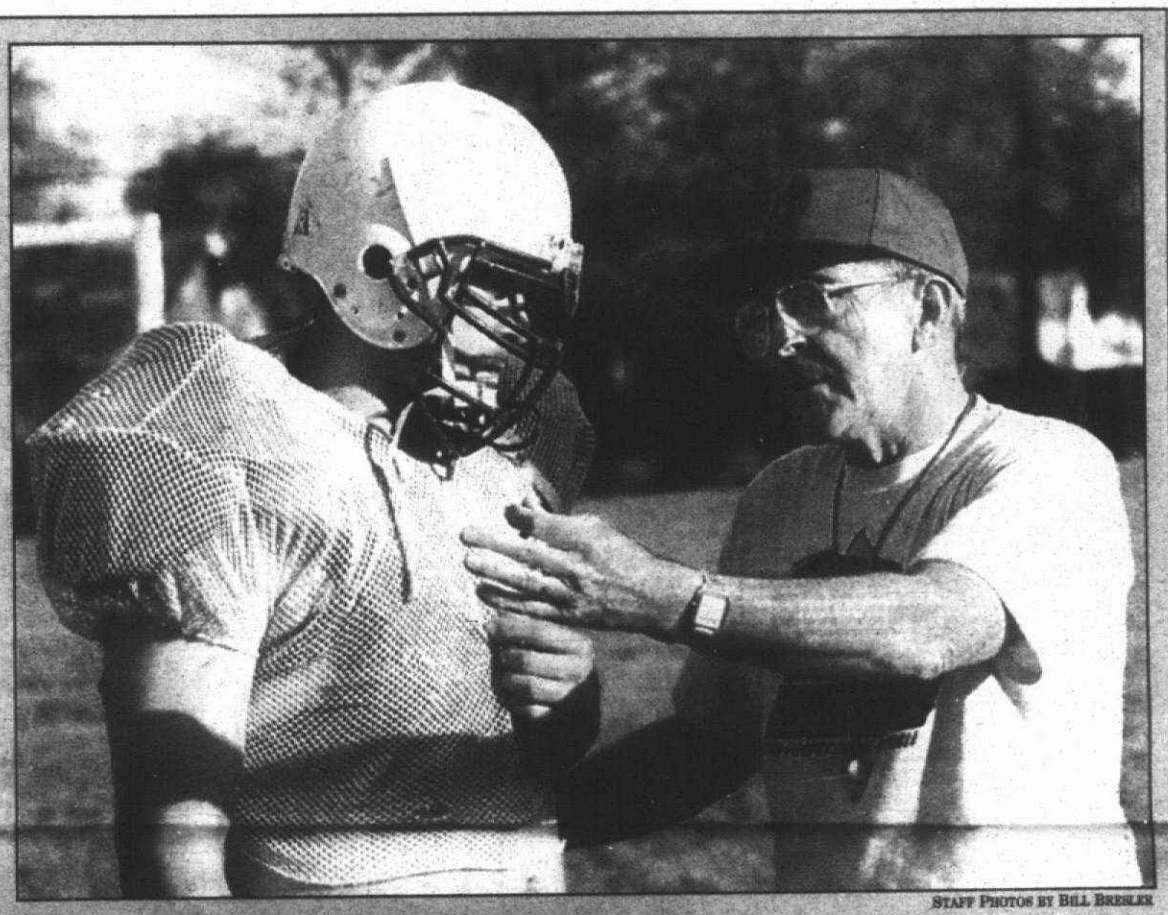

And with the first home game scheduled for July 26, Brothers is more than a little bothered.

"It's obvious they don't want us on their fields," he said, despite the team's guarantee of $200-$300 in field-rental per game and 80 percent of the adult gate in excess of 200 tickets. All concession, raffle or drawings proceeds also go to the host facility or its booster-club, while the team keeps the revenue from its season program book.

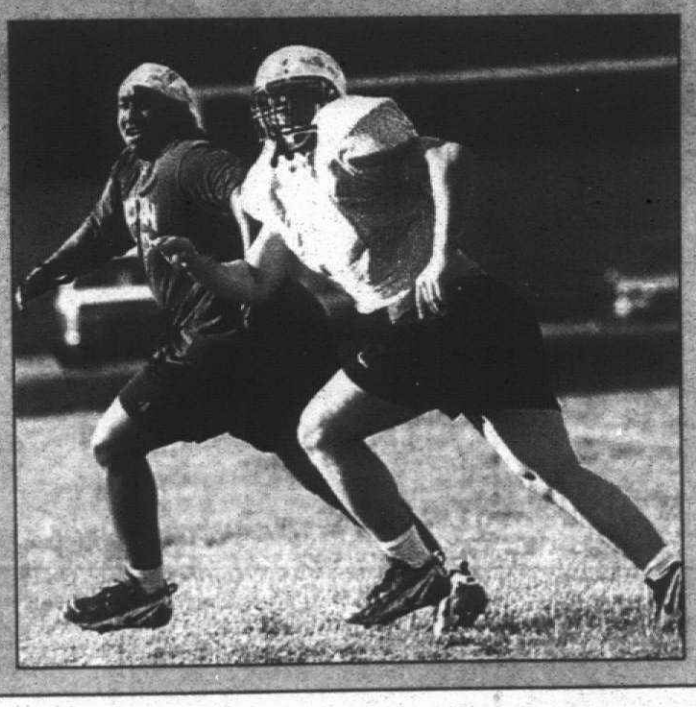

Although the Twisters played their home games last season at Downriver Community College in Southgate – and may get to play their first three games there this season – Brothers wants to play in western Wayne County, where over half the team's players live.

He approached the Wayne-Westland School District, but was turned down in early May because the team's previous $1 million insurance policy was deemed insufficient. The school

Teacher submits complaint

Canton High School teacher Ken Smith has filed an harassment complaint with Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, claiming he's been disciplined for publicizing unacceptable conditions at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

"I am being singled out and disciplined for alleged violations of district procedures. The directives have come to me and not to other staff," said Smith.

"Ken Smith needs to be sure he uses his teaching and planning time for work-related activities," said Plymouth-Canton Superintendent Charles Little.

Little declined to address the specifics of the complaint, saying only "I feel teachers and administration are doing their job."

The situation became so stressful that Smith began experiencing chest pains and respiratory difficulties while at school, he said. The Canton resident is on leave on doctor's orders.

Smith said he sent the complaint via regis

Chinese join Liberty festivities

The Canton community will be introduced to its growing multicultural population at this year's Liberty Fest. The Chinese Association of Greater Detroit-Western Center plans to display traditional dance and music at the amphitheater 5 p.m. Saturday.

"The number of Chinese in this area has increased dramatically in the last several years, not just in Canton, but in Plymouth, Northville, Novi and some in Ann Arbor," said Canton resident Xingyi Xu (pronounced Shingy Shu).

Many Chinese have settled in Canton and its surrounding areas because of its close proximity to Ford Motor World Headquarters, said the electrical engineer at Ford. In fact, the large influx of Chinese in Canton has grown by such an astronomical rate the Chinese Association of Greater Detroit spawned a western center in board feared lawsuits for rowdyism, drinking and fights – behaviors which Brothers said league rules strictly prohibit anyway – plus suits from injuries to fans or players. The board also cited the policy's lack of stadium-damage coverage.

Wayne-Westland carries an $11-million policy, but Brothers called that cost-prohibitive. He's submitted the team's $2 million 1997 policy for their review.

Brian Wolcott, Plymouth-Canton athletic director, said the district was unable to rent its facilities because of scheduling concerns. The Twisters will play five home games in July and August, months when the heavily-used varsity football field is given a break, he said.

"We reseed and do a lot of watering during July and August. Because we have two schools (Canton and Salem) playing on the one field, it tends to take a lot of punishment."

Plymouth-Canton does allow outside organizations to district facilities when possible, Wolcott said. For example, youth football leagues have used the field at Central Middle School.

The Twisters owner says a stadium would mean entertainment for fans, extra money for schools, exposure for their marching bands and a chance for young post-high school players to develop. Some could eventually play college ball, he said, or even professional football--like the two Monroe players who were drafted into the Europe-based World League last year.

■ 'We're a freelance booster club. All these boys want to do is to play football and be somebody in their neighborhoods, in the eyes of their friends and to the younger ones growing up.'

J. Glenn Brothers
–Twisters owner

The team practices at the Wayne-Westland YMCA.

Brothers, who lives on Cherry Hill Road in the house he built in 1963, moved the team from Ohio last year after retiring as a Ford engineer. He says the team's largest 1996 crowds were under 200, due mainly to late field procurement.

If he could secure a field by March, he said, the team could drum-up much more local Twisters support. Both he and Head Coach Kevin Bradford – who's also commissioner of the Lake Shore Football League – sell Twisters program ads, as do some players. All players either pay $90 or sell $200 in program ads to cover their league and team registration fees.

The players – who, like Brothers and the coaches, are unpaid – also get their own equipment and re-imburse Brothers for their jerseys. The team practices on Sundays.

Thirty-four players are expected back from last year's squad and 50 others are candidates.

Brothers said the team, which is registered as a 501 (c) (3) non-profit entity, needs $7,500-$7,800 for a 10-game season. That covers about $800 per game, including field rental and six officials ($350 per game), plus bus rental for away games ($6-700 per bus).

To date, the Twisters have sold $3,000 in ads – fully refundable if the team folds, said Brothers. "We'd generate more revenue if we could go after businesses knowing early enough we had a place to play," he said. All money exceeding seasonal expenses would be turned over to the community, he said.

Brothers, a former three-sport athlete at Wayne St. Mary's, has a son, Aaron, on the Twisters team. And although the 6-3, 254-pound linebacker is a three-time American Football Association All-American, he's not the sole reason Brothers got involved.

"It's the opportunity to help young people in the best years of their young productive lives to learn to be better people," he said.

The schools "have got nothing to lose and everything to gain," he believes.

"We're a freelance booster club. All these boys want to do is to play football and be somebody in their neighborhoods, in the eyes of their friends and to the younger ones growing up."

Twisters players lead victors in All Star game

Eight Wayne County Twisters, including two from Canton, helped the West team defeat the host East team, 26-16, May 30 at the Silverdome in the first Pontiac Chargers All-Star Game.

The West team consisted of both Michigan and Ohio semi-pro footballers, while the East was Michigan-only. The game drew several hundred fans.

The Twisters players--mostly offensive and defensive linemen and linebackers – included Aaron Brothers and Bill Davey of Canton, Patrick Bowie of Wayne, Mark Bennett and Mike Candela of Westland, Robert Bell of Inkster, Chuck Lauber of Garden City and Robert Berry of Madison Heights.

The all-star game was taped for area cable television systems.

In another development, Twisters President W. Glenn Brothers announced that former University of Michigan All-American defensive back Tony Bowles, 29, has signed to play with the semi-pro team.

"She went right back over his head," she said. "It was just horrible."

Wright was dragged over 30 feet, according to Tracy Robinson, mother of Jemaine. Jemaine had run, crying, to get his mother, who ran back with him and moved Milos's bike nearer to where he lay.

Miles was taken first to Annapolis Hospital, then airlifted by helicopter to the University of Michigan Hospital.

Wright's parents, David and Tisa, told Happner surgeons had to put metal plates into his skull and face and that he will need extensive plastic surgery. "They're still not sure about his eyes," Happner added.

Happner, who's lived next to the Wrights for five years, learned of the accident when she heard Tisa Wright outside by her son, screaming.

Both Happner and the Robinsons said the accident scene was very dark because the nearest floodlights in the complex weren't on. Tisa Wright had to bring a flashlight just to see her son, Happner said.

"It was so dark, you couldn't even see all the blood" until police and rescue units illuminated the grim scene, said Jemaine Robinson.

"Of course, they've got the lights working now," said Renee Happner.

School-end prank jolts kids on bus

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER

■ The boy reportedly ran up and down the aisle, spraying shaving cream at the younger riders, who were screaming in fear, police said.

Spraying shaving cream at each other on the last day of school may be a time-honored tradition among Plymouth-Canton high school and middle-school students, but three high-schoolers may have carried things too far.

An investigation was to continue this week into an incident in which a Canton high school boy allegedly assaulted a bus load of middle-schoolers with the messy foam.

Judy Evola, spokesperson for the Plymouth-Canton School District, declined to comment as to what action will be taken. "The matter will be under investigation until all information is in," she said.

The mother of the high-schooler was seeking to meet with school officials to resolve the matter.

According to Canton police, the youth was one of three boys with shaving cream and a fire extinguisher who attempted to board the school bus carrying 55 students.

The boy reportedly ran up and down the aisle, spraying shaving cream at the younger riders, who were screaming in fear, police said.

The incident took place about 4 p.m. Thursday, June 12, as the bus stopped to unload youngsters at the Crossings at Canton apartments clubhouse on Joy Road between Haggerty and Hicks.

"Quick action by the bus driver prevented" the other two from boarding, said Evola. Driver Russell Cotter closed the door on the pair, but not before one allegedly managed to spray the fire extinguisher, hitting Cotter and bus monitor Mary Nadasen, police said.

Cotter and Nadasen tried to grab the youth, but he refused to leave and allegedly pushed Nadasen to the floor and hit her. He then fled through an emergency door.

Nadasen suffered a minor leg abrasion, according to police. LuAnn Grech, district transportation director, said no medical attention had been requested. There was no damage to the bus, she said.

While the boy was on board, his two cohorts were outside throwing balloons and causing a disturbance, police said. The two were not identified.

After youngsters identified the youth, police visited him and his mother at their home. The boy admitted entering the bus, but denied hitting Nadasen.

Later, the mother called the school district, leaving a recorded message seeking to "try and resolve the matter" by meeting with school officials. Grech said she and the mother had been missing each other's phone calls all day Friday.

Central Middle choirs score No. 1

Students in the Central Middle School Choirs recently competed in the District 12 Southeast Michigan Choral Festival held April 10. The festival is sponsored by the Michigan School Vocal Music Association and awards choirs on their music reading and excellence in both music literature and performance quality.

Central Middle School Choirs are under the direction of Patrice Pedersen. She participates in the festival annually. About 40-50 schools participate representing the southeast corner of the greater Detroit area.

Pedersen states, "I am very proud of the students. They did very well again, receiving the best scores ever. I continue to hear praise from the Eastern Michigan University Music Department through directors who heard the performance. Central students worked hard and found that by doing the work, the results show."

Central students received straight First Division Ratings with comments from judges, such as, "I love your face! You seem to enjoy what you are doing. Glorious!!" And they commented, "nice dynamics. Congratulations for singing in German - great job".

Pedersen also stated, "It is rare for choirs to receive all perfect scores as my sixth-graders did this year. I participate as an adjudicator for the MSVMA and go to other areas in the state to judge their festivals. Central students were exceptional."

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

■ Municipal Services is considering site plan approval for Rite Aid Drugstore, a 10,180-square-foot facility proposed for the southwest corner of Ford and Canton Center roads.

■ Municipal Services is considering preliminary site plan approval for Creekside Villas Site Condominiums, proposed for 12 acres north of Palmer and west of Hannan. Plans call for 10 units.

■ Municipal Services is considering special land use approval for two projects. La-Z-Boy, proposed for part of Haggerty Corporate Park II East, south of Palmer and east of Haggerty. The developer has requested a variance on the 30-foot height requirement, so the office/storage facility can be 38 feet high. Kil's Karate School, proposed for the R & A Enterprises building located south of Joy and east of Lilley. Special land use is required to allow an indoor recreational center in an industrial zone.

■ Construction of Cherry Hill Court shopping center is expected to begin in the near future. The 70,112-square-foot facility will include a supermarket, as well as other retail space. Before any site work takes place, a concrete screen wall will be constructed to buffer neighboring residents from the work. Once utility work begins, drivers may experience some delays along Cherry Hill and Lilley.

■ Work is expected to begin soon on the paving of Warren Road, from approximately one-half mile west of Beck Road through the Ridge Road intersection.

■ Canton's Planning Commission will hold its next regular meeting on Monday, June 16 at 7 p.m. in the first floor meeting room of the Administration Building.

Car thief steals easy target

A car thief apparently got all the help he needed from the 27-year-old Canton owner of a 1979 Chevrolet Monza.

The man, who told police he routinely leaves his keys in the car and the car door unlocked, said the vehicle was stolen from his driveway Monday, June 9.

According to police, the owner said his vehicle had "improper plates" and he didn't know the license number. He said there was no lien on the vehicle.

Police are investigating.

Domestic Violence

Canton police arrested a young man on a domestic violence charge Thursday, June 12, after he allegedly became enraged when he couldn't use his own bathroom because one of his sisters was in it.

The man, who refused to use his parents' bathroom, started tearing up items in his sisters' bedroom, then went after his mother and one of his sisters, police said. The man's father told police when he intervened, the son attacked him.

The son claimed the father broke down his bedroom door and had a knife. The father said he had a butter knife, but didn't use it.

The father, whom police said had welts on his upper body, declined to press charges.

The sisters told police their parents don't discipline their son and that such incidents are common.

Police said the case was closed.

Bogus bomb threat

Canton police said a middle-aged woman "who sounded intoxicated" left a bomb threat on the answering machine at First Optometry on Ford Road.

The message, discovered by an employee, came at 10:04 p.m. June 11 and stated: "You better check around there — there might be a bomb."

Store personnel told police no employees had been fired and there had been no disgruntled customers recently. Police found nothing that resembled a bomb.

Teacher gets threatening letter

By Renee M. Skoglund
Staff Writer

■ According to Smith, the letter was typed on plain paper and unsigned. It read: "Clean out your closet of all the skeletons you have or we will clean it up for you. Get your a-- to work and quite spending our money."

Canton High School teacher Ken Smith filed a police report with the Canton Police Department on June 13 regarding a threatening letter he received at his home in the mail that morning.

Smith has been involved in a harassment complaint against the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. He sent them a formalized complaint, officially known as an "investigation into discrimination," on June 5.

Smith claims he's been continuously disciplined for publicizing conditions at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

According to Smith, the letter was typed on plain paper and unsigned. It read: "Clean out your closet of all the skeletons you have or we will clean it up for you. Get your a-- to work and quite spending our money."

Smith said the letter also contained personal references. "I just think it's somebody who knows me personally. They know my home address, what my beliefs are. It's a school problem they're bringing into my house. My family is a good family. They don't need to be threatened." Smith said vandals had driven across his lawn two weeks ago, and the tire tracks are still evident.

Smith has had an ongoing dispute with school administrators over matters of student discipline at Plymouth-Canton Education Park. "Young people are not being taught responsibility in a consistent way. We have rules, but they're not followed," said Smith in a June 12th Observer article.

In the article, Smith said the rules that are inconsistently enforced concern undue familiarity (kissing and hugging) in the hallways; foul language; dress code violations; loitering; eating on the floor and in stairwells; and littering.

Smith said he has the support of other teachers, "but they can't say anything or they will be in the same position I'm in. I'm getting more support than bad things, but the bad things are horrible."

He also said he has the support of parents. "They all have asked if they could help, but I don't want to get them involved. That's my main concern."

Smith missed the last week of school due to stress-related chest pains. "I don't have it (the pain) at home or in any of the other activities I do in the community. It comes from not knowing what rule they're going to change on me by the hour," he said.

"If I discipline a student, they call me in and don't discipline the student. Then I'm the wrong one. They don't let me talk to anyone involved in the discipline – the parents, the student, the teacher involved. They just tell me I'm wrong."

Lt. William Lenaehan of the Canton Police Department said investigations of threatening letters are "followed up as best as possible." The complainant is questioned as to who sent the letter and if the threats are ongoing. If the complainant can provide possible names, the matter is turned over to a detective.

At that point, Lenaehan said the letter may be checked for fingerprints. Those fingerprints must be checked against a known set. If there is not an existing set of prints, suspects may be asked to be fingerprinted. They can refuse.

"We're not in the process of violating people's rights," said Lenaehan.

Smith said he misses his students and continued to call his classroom every day while school was in session. "I just hope during the summer things change at Canton High School. I will be back. I'm not retiring. I've only been out seven days because of stress," he said.

School district administrators made no specific comment on the letter. "This is a personnel matter, and this is under investigation. Any time we have a situation with an employee, it's confidential," said Judy Evola, director of community relations for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

tered mail to Little. The complaint will be investigated by a panel of district administrators, not including any of Smith's direct supervisors.

Smith, a special education teacher for 22 years in Plymouth-Canton, said he has an exemplary employment record. He recently invited anyone interested to tour the high schools to see that "young people are not given supervision."

At board meetings

At recent meetings, Smith has informed the board of education about his concerns. Chief among them is the attendance policy. Students are allowed up to eight absences before parents are notified.

"Young people are not being taught responsibility in a consistent way. We have rules, but they're not followed," Smith said. Notification of parents regarding tardiness is left to the teachers' discretion. "There's no consistency."

That goes for discipline as well, Smith said. "If one student does something and goes to one assistant principal, he might be disciplined. If he goes to another, it would be completely different. Parents might not even be notified."

Enforced inconsistently are rules involving undue familiarity (hugging and kissing) in hallways; use of foul language; dress code violations; loitering; eating on the floor and in stairwells; and littering, Smith said.

A student assistant recently came to his classroom wearing a Hooters T-shirt, Smith said. "That person came from an assistant principal's office," he said.

It concerns Smith that students are allowed to congregate outside in groups of up to 100. "Administration has tried to crack down on the smoking, but they're not trying to restrict where kids can go," he said.

Smith was ordered to discontinue giving tours, and reprimanded in the "beat-up room," he said. The tour restriction was rescinded "because one of the board members got to someone real fast. Twice I've had to go to the 'beat-up room' where you're chewed out by administrators who tell you how bad you are."

The teacher said he was reprimanded for returning the phone call of a former student who was suicidal. The student lived in Georgia. So anxious were the young man's parents for Smith to help their son that the family drove to Canton to speak with him and school administrators. No administrator would meet with them, Smith said. "They don't even have the courtesy of talking to people."

Smith said he was disciplined for printing a letter using school materials. "I've paid for everything I've used," he said. "Other people are printing things too. But as long as their opinions go along with administration's, they can print whatever they want to."

Words of praise

Parent Carol Bollman, an unsuccessful candidate in Monday's school board election, said Smith deserves the district's Extra Miler award for what he's done over the years. "His kids are usually special (ed kids who never participate in anything," she said. "He's come to the senior party with these kids. He's taken the time to be with these kids."

Smith is hopeful the issues he's raised will be investigated by the board, "which has responded very well to the needs of the district. I will be back again. I'm not giving up," he said. "Chuck Little is not a bad guy at all. He's a good leader and I respect him. But I think he is getting his information from the wrong sources."

It's Smith's hope that "they will clarify the rules all teachers are under, and that they will open up a real line of communication between staff, administration and the students."

At many staff meetings, teachers haven't been allowed to speak, said Smith, who's served as class adviser and on numerous school committees.

Smith says he's received many positive comments from supportive parents and staff since speaking out.

1994. The Chinese club, which boasts 2,000 members, is centered in Troy where there is the largest concentration of Chinese in southeastern Michigan.

Shortly after the association's western center formed, a picnic held at Canton's Heritage Park attracted over 150 Chinese families.

"The numbers have quickly changed since the inception of the western center. We were able to establish another Chinese school here. We have about 100 students, that's about 70 families. Altogether there are about 200 families who are active participants in the western center," he said.

The Canton Chinese School meets at West Middle School in Plymouth on Friday nights. The students are of various ages and take language and cultural classes, such as Chinese folk dance, Chinese painting and martial arts.

The eight girls who will participate in Saturday's festivities take dance lessons from instructor Ning Sho at the Chinese School. The Uygur Girls Dance will present a traditional selection from west China where Uygur people live – one of 56 minorities in China.

Afterward, Chinese musicians are slated to perform three selected melodies:

■ Soloist Xiaoqi Liu will perform Dragon Boat Race on the pipa, a plucked four-string instrument with a fretted fingerboard. Dragon Boat Race is a traditional sporting event in China to celebrate good harvests. The piece of music depicts the exciting scenes usually seen from such races. Liu is a famous pipa player who once served as the first pipa in the China National Symphony Orchestra of Traditional Chinese Music.

■ A four-person ensemble will perform Happy Tune. This is a very famous and popular piece of traditional Chinese music. The beautiful melody reflects the happy life pursued by generation after generation of Chinese people. The ensemble consists of the pipa (Xiaoqi Liu), erhu (Yang Hu), bamboo flute (Xiyuan Zhao) and dulcimer (John Meng).

■ The ensemble will also perform Lift Your Face Cover. The music describes a groom's anxiety to see the face of his bride at the wedding.

"This is the first time for us to participate in the community as a group. We view this from two angles. We feel we are residents and a number of us are citizens, and we need to do our part for the community ... and No. 2, we see the value to diversify the community so that we can all be tolerant of different cultures. By letting people know us and our culture is to enhance their understanding and tolerance of our cultural differences," he said.

■ 'AdVillage is the first comprehensive stand-alone Internet Classified site anywhere.'

Steve Pope
–O&E general manager

On Monday, June 16, HomeTown Communications Network Inc. (formerly Suburban Communications Corp.) will launch AdVillage: The Internet Classified Marketplace, the first Web site where people can place a classified ad directly on the World Wide Web.

The project is a joint effort among the Livonia-based corporation's Observer & Eccentric and HomeTown Newspapers divisions along with Observer & Eccentric Online and HomeTown Online.

The address (URL) of the new Web site is http://www.advillage.com.

"AdVillage links the classified advertising sections of your local Observer Newspaper with want ads from around the country, delivering both through Internet technology," said Philip Power, owner and chairman of Hometown Communications Network Inc.

"AdVillage is an entirely new advertising service in Michigan that enables people to put their ads for cars, jobs and homes directly on the Web.

"It is the first online medium linking buyers and sellers in your hometown to the millions of people in the global village," said Power.

The AdVillage site contains thousands of classified ads that can be accessed via an easy-to-use search engine. Other features of the AdVillage site include: personal ads, a conference center called The Coffee House, live chat, news and information, a demographic survey and more.

Classified ads on the AdVillage site will be available to millions of people with Internet access throughout the world. All classifications, including real estate, recruitment, merchandise and automotive, can be found on AdVillage.

"AdVillage is the first comprehensive stand-alone Internet Classified site anywhere," said Steve Pope, vice president and general manager of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, one of the companies that created AdVillage.

"AdVillage was developed for the rapidly growing audience of Internet users that do not perceive newspapers as a viable information source," added Pope.

AdVillage is currently targeted at 18- to 49-year-olds and represents an inexpensive opportunity to market goods and services to a worldwide public, said Pope.

A classified ad on AdVillage costs $25 for a 28-day run. Call 1-800-579-SELL(7355).

Unit cites increase in auto theft

By Leanne Rogers
Staff Writer

The economy is strong, so Sandra Miller is a bit puzzled by the big increase in cases handled by the Western Wayne Auto Theft Elimination Effort (WWATEE) unit.

"We've seen a great increase in insurance fraud. It's kind of strange in a good economy," said Miller, a Michigan State Police lieutenant who heads the regional auto theft unit.

Part of the increase may be due to the popularity of leasing vehicles, she said.

"We don't have any statistics on this but when lease cars get high mileage, people don't want to turn them in," said Miller. "They will say a thief did the high mileage on the vehicle. Also some people claim there was a hold-up of the vehicle. We usually find that was fraud."

Officers have a new weapon to combat fraud thanks to a change in state law that has someone convicted of making a false police report subject to a sentence equal to the crime reported. For example, someone falsely reporting an auto theft would be facing the four-year sentence that comes with an auto theft conviction.

"We've had some prosecutions under that. The Wayne County prosecutor's auto theft unit has no problem authorizing on that," said Miller. "There was no sense in doing a lot of investigation into false police reports when they were only facing 90 days. Now it's pretty serious."

The auto theft unit started 764 new investigations in 1996 – up from 536 cases in 1995. The number of vehicles recovered also increased from 351 in 1995 to 477 in 1996.

A long-running investigation came to fruition earlier this year with a raid on Miami Motors in Detroit and the arrest of seven people on conspiracy charges. Part of this case, with a weeks-long preliminary examination, are a Romanian auto theft ring that had also been under investigation.

"There are so many innocent people driving used cars they bought from them that are salvage vehicles," said Miller. "The owner never knows the car was assembled by a non-certified mechanic. The frame isn't straight. This was a case with huge implications for public safety."

This case was so large that WWATEE devoted a great deal of personnel and resources to the investigation, Miller said, so that it looks like that had been the unit's main focus.

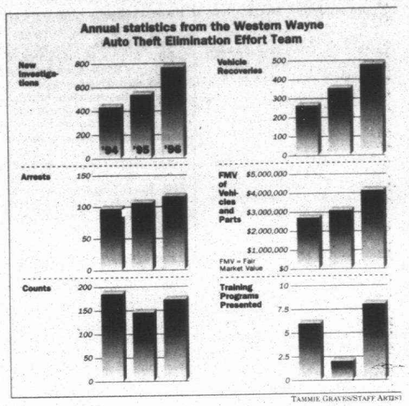

"We saw a dramatic decrease in auto thefts at Metro Airport because of this case. This crew was doing thefts there," she said.

Concept teams like WWATEE are funded by a $1 per vehicle charge included on private vehicle insurance. Less grant and other funding has led to an effort to get the charge added to commercial vehicle insurance but that has been unsuccessful so far, Miller noted.

"Some of the insurance companies think it's too difficult to collect on commercial vehicles but that's short-sighted," she said. "We benefit them, too. We don't pick and choose. We investigate everything. We have a case right now involving a tractor trailer. Heavy construction equipment is a big theft item."

Whether vehicles are stolen for specific parts such as airbags or as part of a scheme to re-title and resell the entire vehicle, Miller said auto theft is big business.

"When we seized all the records of Miami Auto we found that $900,000 plus went through their bank accounts in six weeks," said Miller.

Student exchange programs merge

Nacel Cultural Exchanges and Open Door Student Exchange, two non-profit student exchange programs, have merged to offer more opportunities for global education and friendship through hosting or traveling abroad during the summer or the school year.

The combined organization, called Nacel Open Door, is now looking for Michigan families to host exchange students during the summer beginning July 1 and also families to host students for the 1997-98 school year.

American families who would be willing to open their hearts and homes to a teenager from France and Spain are needed during July and/or August.

Nacel Open Door is seeking Michigan hosts for 50 French and 30 Spanish students July 1-27, 25 French and 25 Spanish students July 28-29, Aug. 24 and 25, and 20 Spanish students July 1-Aug. 24.

In the school year programs, youngsters from 35 countries throughout the world are coming to the United States to attend public schools while they live with an American family. They want to perfect their English, experience the American lifestyle, and share themselves and their culture with the school and the family.

In both programs, these youngsters are eager to experience American-style living as part of a Michigan family. All kinds of families are welcome including married couples with or without children, single parents as well as families with teenagers. The host family provides room, board and friendship, while Nacel Open Door provides screening, insurance and support throughout the experience.

Through the years Nacel and Open Door have developed different specialties. Founded in 1957, Nacel Cultural Exchanges specializes in home stay programs with France, Spain, Germany, Mexico and the Ivory Coast. Founded in 1964, Open Door Student Exchange specializes in school year programs with countries in South America, Eastern Europe and Asia where the student lives as part of a family and attends the local school. Now Nacel and Open Door are combining and expanding their programs, which also include summer and school year travel offerings for American teens.

Families interested in hosting a French or Spanish student for four to eight weeks during July or August, welcoming a student from one of 35 countries during the school year, or having a teen travel abroad, should phone Ann Marie Ott, the Michigan representative, at (810) 781-9005 or the national office of Nacel Open Door at 1-800-NACELLE (622-3553).

Parade to get early start

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

Just back from the Red Wings victory parade where his Briefcase Drill Team performed, Fred Hill's attentions are now focused on the new, improved July 4 parade.

The Plymouth Realtor's ideas for a truly grand parade -sponsored by the Plymouth-Canton Jaycees - are nearly all nailed down. They include a fly-over by four Air Force F-16 jets at 200 feet and a slew of attractions ranging from bands and clowns to a Marilyn Monroe look-alike.

And don't forget that 7:30 a.m. start time, to get a jump on other parades statewide.

"We want to get that red, white and blue blood flowing," Hill explained.

"From this point on it's just a mater of tweaking a few things, polishing up some of the details so we have an event people are proud to be a part of and proud to have seen," he said.

About 400 tickets are available for bleacher seats at Penniman and Main and Church and Main. In the bleachers, there will be pre-parade entertainment and a personal parade pack including a visor, shaker, flag, rubber nose and megaphone

Bleacher creatures are invited to use the items at strategic times, as directed by bleacher hosts and hostesses.

Busch's celebrates opening

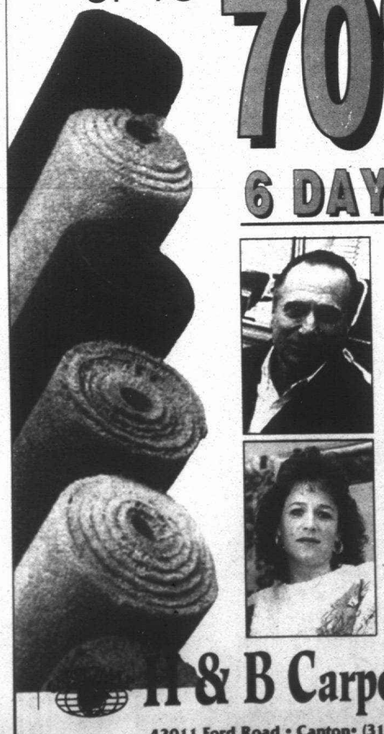

The new Sheldon Place mall anchor store Busch's Valu Land celebrated its grand opening Wednesday with dressed-up guests noshing on Alaskan salmon, shrimp, roast beef and more.

"We sent out 750 invitations," said owner John Bush, in a tuxedo facing the produce section where he greeted guests showing for the event.

Busch's Valu Land seeks to feature friendly staff, a wide range of fresh foods and traditional grocery values.

The store features a huge produce section, large deli and specialty foods section, and on-staff chef. Customers can buy gourmet, restaurant-quality items by the piece or pound.

Court ruling to prompt review of special ed costs

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

Lawmakers and local school officials will be taking a hard look at special education costs now that the Michigan Supreme Court has told state government it no longer may short-change local districts.

Western Wayne County officials have put together a book showing that an ever-growing percentage of their students are being assigned into ever-costlier special ed programs.

The state next fall will put up about $5,460 per pupil, but that's only an average. Regular classrooms cost only a fraction of that to operate.

A special education resource classroom, however, costs an additional $4,500 to $6,000 per pupil. A special education classroom placement costs an additional $8,000 to $12,000.

And if a youngster is assigned to full-time residential placement in the Michigan School for the Blind and Deaf, the cost runs to $100,000 per pupil.

Special ed is costly, says MAISL, because the pupil-teacher ratio is lower; support services are needed from psychologists, occupational therapists and other paraprofessionals; extra materials are needed; and pupils often must be transported.

Over the last 20 years, public school enrollment statewide has declined. But special ed enrollment, locally and statewide, has soared.

Take just one category: learning disabled (LD). In 1978 fewer than 2 percent of all Wayne County students were classified LD; in 1996, more than 4 percent. Statewide, LD rose from 2 percent in 1976 to 5 percent in 1996.

The book is entitled "Special Education Presentation" and was prepared by the Metropolitan Association for Improved School Legislation, a group of 10 suburban districts. Its executive secretary and lobbyist is Gerald Dunn, a former state senator.

Matters are coming to a head. The Supreme Court on June 10 found the state was shorting 84 mostly suburban school districts on several mandated costs -- special ed being the largest -- in violation of the Headlee amendment to the Michigan Constitution. Total cost is estimated at $500 million to $3.5 billion.

The high court ordered the parties to submit briefs on how the costs will be paid back.

MAISL's chart shows that state funding of special ed plummeted from a 1975 level of 45 percent to 15 percent in 1980, when the suburban districts filed suit. Today state funding is in the 5 percent range.

Lawmakers call the court loss a "budget buster." In back rooms, they are looking at ways to cut future costs.

One plan, floated by state budget director Mark Murray, calls for dropping Michigan's 1971 standards, which call for educating a pupil to the full potential from birth through age 25, to the 1975 federal standard, which specifies ages 3 to 21.

A second device, outlined in the MAISL book, is to lower referral rates to special ed.

Here is the broad picture statewide:

- Total enrollment dropped 21 percent – from 2.1 million in 1975 to 1.6 million in 1995.
- Special ed enrollment rose 31 percent – from 147,000 to 194,00
- Special ed enrolls almost one pupil in eight – 11.8 percent in 1995.
- The category of special ed called learning disabled has soared even more, from fewer than 20,000 in 1975 to more than 82,000 in 1995, or 316 percent.

Such national publications as Time Magazine and USA Today have reported that families are driving up the cost by insisting their children be classified as LD. That allows the child to be in a smaller classroom and get more individual attention.

Pennsylvania is trying to keep more kids in regular classrooms through ISTs, for "instructional support teams." The tactic is to work with a child before he or she needs to be classified into special ed, according to the journal Educational Leadership.

Faygo 'Remembers When You Were A Kid' this summer

Summer is finally here, and when we're thirsty, some of us will reach for a Faygo. In a 1996 Media Audit, we discovered our readers are more likely, than the market as a whole, to drink Faygo pop.

Started in 1907 by Ben and Perry Feigenson, two Russian immigrant brothers in Detroit, Faygo Beverages Inc. is celebrating its 90th anniversary this year. In those days, the brothers could hardly afford a bag of sugar. Pop was only sold in the summer, so during the winter the brothers worked as fish and bread peddlers. Pop then retailed for three cents a bottle or two for a nickel, and due to the lack of modern refrigeration, was almost always consumed at the point of sale.

The brothers would spend one day bottling, then close their storefront at Hastings and Wilkins to sell pop from a horse-drawn wagon to stores, auto plants and businesses throughout Detroit competing with more than 100 other pop businesses in the area.

Early flavors were based on recipes for cake flavorings brought by the Feigenson brothers from Russia. Many of the current 43 flavors are inspired by fruits. In 1908 the popular flavors were strawberry, orange, lemon and root beer. Redpop was called Strawberry Soda until it was renamed in 1970.

FAYGO BEVERAGES INC.

Flavorful fare: Gingered Gulf Shrimp with Faygo Ginger Ale was created by Chef Brian Polcyn.

Faygo introduces four or five new flavors a year, which are named by Faygo's staff at the plant on Gratiot in Detroit.

Drinking Redpop or Rock & Rye makes you "Remember When You Were A Kid." This song, featured in Faygo TV ads in the early 1970s, will be featured in an upcoming series of 90th anniversary commercials. Look for the Faygo Kid and other characters from vintage Faygo ads, too.

"I loved Faygo as a kid," said Chef Brian Polcyn, owner of Five Lakes Grill in Milford. Polcyn prepared a multi-course Faygo luncheon in honor of the company's 90th anniversary.

"For the past 50 years, people have been calling with new and unusual dishes made with Faygo," said Stan Sheridan, Faygo Beverages Inc. president. Polcyn's recipes will be printed in a commemorative book, which also includes recipes by other chefs and winners of Faygo's 90th Anniversary Recipe Contest. The book will be available free with a proof-of-purchase beginning this fall.

Faygo was purchased by Ft. Lauderdale-based National Beverage Corp. in 1987.

Quality Juice & Beverage Corp.

Troy-based Quality Juice & Beverage Corp. and Pointe Dairy Services Inc., producers and distributors of Wild Orchard Fruit Juice, is offering a buy one/get one free child coupon (a $4 value) to "Elephants: 40 Million Years of Evolution," an exhibit at Cranbrook Institute of Science, 1221 N. Woodward, (between Long Lake and Lone Pine roads), through Sept. 1 when you call to enter their own "Wanna Have Some Fun In Your Mouth?" giveaway. Calling the toll-free hotline 1-888-862-9453 also gives you the chance to win a weekend trip for two to the San Diego Zoo, family memberships to the Cranbrook Institute of Science, or Cranbrook Art Museum, The Detroit Zoo, and more. Contest deadline is July 1 with winners to be announced in August. Call Cranbrook Institute of Science, (810) 645-3200 or (810) 645-3209 for information about "Elephants."

Dads do dinner simply

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND
STAFF WRITER

Yo, guys, happy Father's Day. What's cookin'?

If you're like Mark Tallon of Canton, a lot is cooking, but the recipes are usually simple, not exactly light on calories, and sometimes the results taste better than they look.

"Not exactly the prettiest thing in the world, but that's what it ends up looking like," said Tallon, as he stuck a bowl of his infamous "Hockey Dip" under my nose.

Corn chip in hand, I plunged into the pinkish-orangish goo made from ground beef, melted Velveeta and salsa. Mmmmm. "Guy food" at its best. Tallon's marinated sirloin was sizzling on the grill.

"I've always done breakfast, the pancake king, you know. Once in a while it's kind of nice to do the whole dinner."

While Talon dreams of Alaskan king crab legs – "at least a pound" – he's content with a good steak, mashed redskin potatoes and a country biscuit with cheese. And for dessert?

"Philadelphia vanilla ice cream. That with fresh blueberries, about a teaspoon of sugar sprinkled on that, a little bit of Cool Whip, and you got it," he said, his eyes glassing over..

Thirteen-year-old James Tallon occasionally helps his father in the kitchen, browning hamburger and cutting up vegetables. But James, who dreams of his grandma's apple "dump cake," in addition to crab legs, does a pretty good job cooking solo.

"I make lots of stuff, but it usually comes out Cajun," he said. Fine, James, just keep the toast plain.

What is it about men and chili, especially Brian Konley's chili?

"I use Canadian whiskey in it," said Konley of Plymouth Township, a supervisor at Ford's Sheldon Road plant. "They ask me to bring it into work. It's always requested."

Konley, who describes himself as a "grill man," started cooking when he was very young. "My parents worked. I started dibble-dabbling." When he married Kathy, he dibble-dabbled even more. "I would do potato salad, chicken soup and spaghetti sauce. Kathy's grandmother from Italy taught me how to make the sauce."

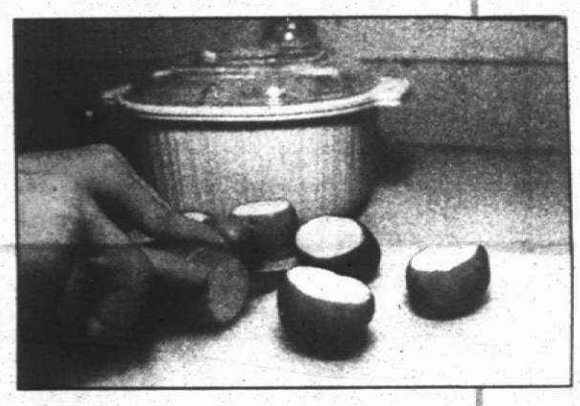

But it's Konley's chili that has made him famous. And it's more than the whiskey that gives it its bite. "This guy I work with, his wife is from South Africa. They brought pepper seeds from there. They gave me the peppers, and another guy got the seeds. He grows them."

Konley said you can substitute Jalapeños. Just don't be afraid to use them.

Tom Cox, recently retired commander of the Farmington Police Department, and fellow public safety officer Carl Swanderski are good friends and good cooks.

"My specialty, and all my wife's girlfriends rave and rave, is my chicken noodle soup," said Cox. "I even roll out my own noodles." Cox, who describes himself as a "connoisseur of good food," also makes a great marinade for beef with crushed pineapple and maple syrup.

Cox is looking forward to giving wife Karen a break in the kitchen now that he's retired. "I hope to surprise her several times a week with a nice dinner." He shouldn't have any problem coming up with ideas since his friend Swanderski gave him a cookbook he wrote.

"It was just a conglomeration of things," said Swanderski, whose mother owned a catering business. "I do a lot of Polish cooking."

Swanderski does all the cooking at home – every day, every single meal – and he doesn't like his wife Michelle to meddle. "Because she'll say, 'Why did you do that?' I'll tell her you ate that three weeks ago and you loved it!" he said.

Swanderski loves breakfast and nominated his "Sunrise Breakfast" as a great way to begin Father's Day. "Serve it with crisp home fries, golden toast and fresh brewed coffee. It will be the best breakfast you ever had," he said.

Not only does Swanderski cook, he cleans the house every Monday. Thanks guys. We love you all. Happy Father's Day.

Michelin star chefs match wine and food in Birmingham

This May, Birmingham's Forté gained a prestigious, Guide Michelin two-star as its sister restaurant. Forté's chef Keith Famie adopted twin brothers, 32-year-old chefs Jacques and Laurent Pourcel, in his kitchen. All participants in the day's events learned to match wine and food much better.

The wines are those of Fortant de France, a high-quality varietal wine producer from southern France. Fortant wines range in price from $8 to $9.50 per 750mL bottle and include Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, White Merlot, Syrah Rosé, Syrah, Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon. The cuisine is that of the Pourcels with recipes from their Michelin two-star restaurant Le Jardin des Sens in southern France's city of Montpellier. Translated from French, the restaurant name is "the garden of the senses." The Pourcel's food, so well-harmonized with the Fortant wines, was a true awakening of the senses.

Le Jardin des Sens was established by the Pourcel brothers in 1988 after they had both graduated from culinary school and trained in French Michelin star restaurants. The very next year, the restaurant received a Gault et Millau listing with two toques. In 1990, the Pourcels got their first Michelin star and by 1992, it was elevated to two. They've since expanded the restaurant with a luxury hotel and are now listed in the Relais et Chateaux guide and the Maitres Cuisiniers de France (French master cooks).

And just how do they practice their art of food and wine matching. "We first think about a dish that we'd like to prepare," Jacques said. "Then we select about four wines that we think will be a harmony with the dish. We make the dish and taste the wines. The key is to be sensitive to the acidity in the wine and in the food. If the food doesn't have good acidity, then you can add some lemon juice or a little vinegar to push the level up. If you don't, the wine's acidity will overpower the dish. If the wine's acidity is too low, it's hard to make a good pairing."

As Americans, we're becoming fond of red wines, but we are at the same time interested in eating more fish. What about red wine with fish?

"We think that young red wines, served at cellar temperature, are best," Chef Jacques

Dentistry in the 90s
by Herbert M. Gardner, D.D.S. & Martha P. Zinderman, R.N., D.D.S.

PROFESSIONALLY-WHITENED TEETH

Tooth-whitening procedures performed by the dentist utilize bleaching agents that differ substantially from drugstore formulations. Thus, the dentist can whiten teeth that have become stained, discolored, or darkened to an extent at-home bleaching kits cannot be expected to match. One type of in-office bleaching procedure, known as chairside bleaching, uses an oxidizing agent that is painted onto the teeth, after which its whitening effect is activated by a special light. Three to four visits, each taking up to an hour, are necessary to complete the work. Nightguard bleaching, on the other hand, makes use of a custom-fabricated mouthguard holding bleaching gel that is worn according to the dentist's recommendations.

At your next appointment we'll be happy to discuss if tooth-whitening is an option for you. At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals who want you to look and feel your best. Today's technology enables us to make your teeth better looking than ever before. When is the last time you had a complete dental exam? Call us at 478-2110 and we'll gladly answer any questions you may have. We're located at 19171 Merriam Road. Come smile with us! Smiles are our business.

MONKFISH WITH TOMATO TART

Yield: 6 servings
6 monkfish fillets, about 10 ounces each, skinned
14 garlic cloves, 2 peeled and minced, reserve remaining whole and unskinned
3 shallots, minced
1 pound bread dough (frozen and thawed works well)
1/2 pound yellow onions, minced
6 medium tomatoes
3 ounces Italian olives, pitted
1 ounce anchovy fillets in oil (anchovy paste in a tube works well)
1 bunch Italian parsley, 12 sprigs and remaining chopped generous cup of white wine
6 ounces fish stock
Olive oil, butter, sea salt, pepper and dry thyme
Juice of one lemon

In a small skillet, sauté onions in one tablespoon olive oil. Add olives and anchovies. Reduce heat to low and allow mixture to cook over very low heat to blend flavors. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Preheat oven to 350°F.

Roll out dough to 1/8-inch thick. Cut into six 3 to 4-inch circles.

Slice two of the tomatoes and reserve six best slices. Seed and dice all remaining tomatoes.

Spread filling on each unbaked crust and lay a whole unskinned tomato slice on top of each bread dough round. Sprinkle with thyme, season with salt, sprinkle with olive oil and season with pepper. Bake on a cookie sheet about 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a medium skillet sauté shallots and garlic in one tablespoon butter. Add diced tomatoes and wine. Season with thyme. Cook mixture until liquid is reduced by half. Add fish stock, mix and add olive oil to taste. Whisk in some butter to thicken and season with salt and pepper.

In another small pan, cook 12 unskinned garlic cloves in a mixture of water and olive oil until garlic is softened.

In a non-stick skillet, large enough to hold all the monkfish, sear the fish in olive oil for about 8 minutes. Turn fillets frequently. Season with salt and pepper. Remove fillets from skillet and cut each lengthwise.

To serve: Place a tart on each of six plates. Top with split monkfish fillets. Add the whole, cooked garlic cloves to the plate as garnish. Serve sauce on the side of each plate. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, fresh lemon juice, a ribbon of olive oil and a dash of salt. Sprigs of parsley add the final touch.

continued. "It's also best to prepare the fish in a rustic style, even using meat or veal stock in the preparation. Fish needs another medium like good stock or pancetta (bacon) to give it a lift in order to make a better match with red wine."

You can try your hand at the suggestions for red wine and fish, but since it's summer, we think you might prefer trying out your two-star culinary skills by recreating the Pourcel's Monkfish with Tomato Tart in the "pissaladiere" style paired with a 1995 Fortant de France Chardonnay. What this will prove is that popularly-priced wine makes a great match with two-star cuisine!

Houlihan, who cooks like her Italian mother did – with her hands and eyes, just got back from visiting Italy.

"My family has kept authenticity in their recipes," she said. Another new product, Elena's House Dressing, Insalata della Casa, is made with all natural ingredients – extra virgin olive oil, red wine vinegar and a generous supply of Italian herbs, garlic and sweet basil. Houilhan manufactures a number of products under the "Elena" product line including Roman style pasta, pasta sauces, and a bread dipping sauce.

"One of my customers told me their father, who is from Italy, ate my sauce, and started to cry," said Houlihan. "It reminded him of home."

GINGERED GULF SHRIMP WITH FAYGO GINGER ALE

2 cups Faygo Ginger Ale
4 tablespoons unsalted butter, divided
1 inch of ginger, peeled and sliced penny-thin
2 tablespoons garlic (peeled, ends removed, and minced)
2 cups clam juice or fish broth
1/2 cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons water
18 (16 to 20 per pound size) gulf shrimp, peeled and deveined
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound fresh spinach, washed, dried, stems removed
Salt and pepper to taste
1/2 sweet red pepper, washed, cored, seeded, and finely julienned
1/4 cup chives, washed, dried and chopped

Place Faygo Ginger Ale in a large uncovered saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer about 22 minutes, or until 2 cups are reduced to 1/2 cup. Set aside. Melt 1 tablespoon unsalted butter in large skillet over medium heat. Saute ginger and garlic in butter for 3 minutes. Add clam juice or fish broth and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered to reduce to 1 1/3 cups, about 18 minutes. Add the reduced Faygo Ginger Ale. Stir in cream. Strain, reserving the cream sauce into a small saucepan and discarding the ginger and garlic.

In a small bowl stir together cornstarch and water, until lump-free. Add the cornstarch mixture to the cream mixture. Bring to a boil, stirring until thickened. Remove from heat and set aside.

In a large skillet melt the remaining 3 tablespoons of unsalted butter. Add shrimp and saute for 2 minutes, then add cream sauce to the shrimp. Set aside. Heat oil in a large, second skillet and add the spinach, tossing for about 2 minutes to wilt on all sides. Add salt and pepper if desired. To serve, place a puddle of sauce on each of six plates, then divide spinach evenly on all six plates.

FAYGO ROOT BEER GLAZED LOIN OF PORK

3 cups Faygo Root Beer
2 tablespoons garlic, peeled, ends removed, and minced
2 tablespoons shallots, peeled, ends removed and chopped
1/4 cup light brown sugar
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons canola oil
3 pounds boneless pork center rib
Salt and pepper to taste

Pour Faygo Root Beer into large uncovered saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer until three cups is reduced to one cup, about 22 minutes. Add garlic, shallots, brown sugar, and cayenne, bringing mixture back to a boil. Reduce heat to medium and simmer for about 15 minutes or until a syrup consistency. Set aside.

Rub the oil on the pork and season with salt and pepper. Sear the pork on all sides in large skillet over high heat. Preheat oven to 350°F. After meat is seared, place pork in a roaster, pour root beer glaze over and roast uncovered.

Or, to grill instead, preheat grill, place meat on grill and turn to sear on all sides. When seared, brush frequently with glaze. Cook meat until internal temperature reaches 145 degrees F, about 40 to 50 minutes in oven or on grill. Remove from oven or grill, cover meat and let rest for 10 minutes. Carve into 1/2-inch slices. Serve with potato and seasonal vegetables. Serves 6 to 8.

Share the gift of good health with Dad

Whether your dad is a traditional "meat and potatoes" man, or someone who has taken nutritious eating to heart in recent years, Father's Day is a wonderful opportunity to show how much you care about him and his health. Plan a special meal that uses some of his favorite foods in a healthy way that is downright delicious.

If dad loves beef, present him with zesty beef medallions, prepared by cutting 1/4-inch slices of select eye of round (a four-ounce serving contains just 6 grams of fat). Brown the pieces for one minute on each side in a skillet coated with non-stick cooking spray, remove and place on a platter to keep warm. In the skillet, prepare a light, spicy gravy by sauteing 1/3 cup sliced spring onion; then adding 1/4 cup water, 2 tablespoons white wine and a 1/4 teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules. Stir 1-1/2 teaspoons flour and 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard into 1/4 cup plain nonfat yogurt and add to the onion mixture, stirring constantly until thick and bubbly. Serve the medallions with a steamed carrot and potato duet and round out the meal with feather-light angel food cake and fruit sorbet.

Spicy dish: Cajun Catfish Skillet is east to prepare, but looks and tastes like a labor of love.

For the pasta lover, thrill him with a vegetable-rich pasta primavera. Steam chopped onions, broccoli florets, mushrooms, zucchini slices, carrot slices and peas until tender. In a separate pan, saute two minced garlic cloves in a teaspoon of sesame oil, add a cup of chicken broth, the steamed vegetables, and sliced cherry tomatoes; season the mixture with oregano and marjoram and simmer for five minutes. Serve the vegetable sauce over cooked spaghetti with a bit of grated Parmesan cheese. Include a fresh loaf of Italian bread and finish with a dessert of low-fat frozen yogurt topped with rosy fresh strawberry slices.

If Dad appreciates fine cuisine, create an elegant chicken with orange sauce. Bake skinless, boneless chicken breasts and, while they cook, create the savory sauce by combining 4 teaspoons cornstarch, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 1/8 teaspoon ginger, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup orange juice and 1 tablespoon lemon juice in a small sauce pan. Bring the mixture to a boil while stirring constantly, and simmer for one minute. Remove the sauce from the heat, add an 11-oz. can of drained, mandarin orange slices, and serve over the chicken. Green beans seasoned with basil, garlic powder and black pepper and whole wheat dinner rolls complete the meal.

Dads who enjoy spicy food will love Cajun Catfish Skillet. This piquant low-fat dish is easy to prepare, but looks and tastes like a true labor of love.

CAJUN CATFISH SKILLET

2 cups water
1 cup uncooked rice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground red pepper
1/4 teaspoon ground white pepper
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon margarine
1 lb. catfish or other firm flesh white fish, cut in bite-sized chunks
1 (15-1/2 oz.) can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon dried oregano

Combine the water, rice, salt, white, red, and black pepper in a 3 quart saucepan. Bring the mixture to a boil and stir. Reduce the heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes, or until the rice is tender and the liquid is absorbed. Senate OKs community health bill; Northville facilities may get less money

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer

The state Senate has passed a community health bill that calls for the closing of Clinton Valley Center in Pontiac and two other state mental hospitals.

If the Senate version becomes law, it will mean less money and work for Hawthorn Center and Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital, both in Northville Township. They were scheduled to receive patients from Pheasant Ridge in Kalamazoo and Detroit Psychiatric Institute, which also are slated for closing.

"We should not be in a hurry to close existing facilities at the expense of some of our most vulnerable citizens," warned Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, who opposed the closings. On June 10 Peters waged an unsuccessful last-ditch effort to have the Senate reconsider its vote.

The Senate version was passed June 5 on a 25-13 vote. Here's how senators voted on final passage:

YES – Loren Bennett, R-Canton, Robert Geake, R-Northville.

NO – Democrats George Hart of Dearborn and Alma Smith of Salem.

■ 'We should not be in a hurry to close existing facilities at the expense of some of our most vulnerable citizens.'

Gary Peters
—state senator

The $7.1 billion budget bill was sent to the House for concurrence in Senate amendments. But House agreement is unlikely because on May 28 majority Democrats voted to keep all three facilities open.

So the bill will go to a conference committee – three senators (two Republicans and a Democrat) and three representatives (two Democrats and a Republican) to iron out differences. Geake, as chair of the Senate appropriations subcommittee, is likely to be a member.

Given the deep divisions between the chambers, however, the conference committee is likely to have a tough time. Lawmakers hope to adjourn before the Fourth of July. The new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

Peters came a vote short of saving Clinton Valley Center with his amendment to delay closing "until the department develops and puts in place a statewide plan or the provision of a continuum of mental health services."

Peters' amendment failed on a 19-19 vote. He faulted Dunaskiss for being the only Oakland County senator from either party to oppose his amendment and casting the deciding vote.

During floor debate, Sen. Geake, a psychologist, said, "The governor already has a plan. He requires an individual treatment plan for reach patient.

The Senate largely went along with Gov. John Engler's plan on all three facilities:

• Detroit Psychiatric Clinic – Engler wants to close and consolidate it with Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital. House Democrats voted $17.7 million to keep DPI open.

• Clinton Valley Center – Engler wants to close and consolidate it with a unit at Caro in the Thumb. House Democrats voted $33.2 million to keep it open.

• Pheasant Ridge Children's Program at Kalamazoo – Engler wants to close it and consolidate it with Hawthorn Center in Northville Township. House Democrats voted $4.1 million to keep it open.

In the House, both parties hurled rhetorical barbs at each other on the community health issue:

Republicans: "A pattern from the 1980s is rearing its ugly head again. . . (Democrats) promising everything to everybody. . . Democrats are falsely promising programs they cannot possibly pay for. . . Then they will blame the governor or someone else."

Democrats: "This budget reflects our values – protecting senior citizens, people with disabilities, and young children – while ensuring that reform moves forward in a responsible manner."

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON BOARD PROCEEDINGS

A special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Canton was held on Tuesday, June 5, 1997 at 1150 South Canton Center Road. Supervisor Yack called the meeting to order at 7:02 P.M.

ROLL CALL

Members Present: Bennett, Burdziak, Kirchgatten, LaJoy, McLaughlin, Shefferly, Yack
Members Absent: None
Staff Present: Zevalkink
Also Present: Senator Loren Bennett, Senator Robert Geake, Commissioner Bruce Patterson, Township Attorney - Bryan Amann, Brice Kelly-Director of Development Van Buren, Matt Fletcher - Legislative Aide from Representative Whyman's office, and Joe Munem-Deborah Whyman's office

ITEM 1 WILLOW RUN TRADEPORT

Supervisor Yack gave background information on the Willow Run tradeport topic. He said that recent meetings and correspondences had been occurring, thereby peaking Canton's interest once again.

Senator Loren Bennett, summarized Senate Bill 548 which would ban tradeports within 15 miles of any airport that services four million or more passengers per year. Since Metro Airport meets that criteria, there could be no tradeport established at Willow Run. This legislation, cosponsored by Senator Robert Geake, if supported would eliminate the tradeport component.

Senator Robert Geake said that the capital outlay goes through the Appropriations Committee, of which he is Vice Chair. Senator Geake's bill states at no capital outlay would be provided for the Willow Run runway extensions. Senator Geake's said that the bill prohibits any state funds for runway expansions.

Mark Fletcher, legislative aide representing Deborah Whyman's office, explained HB4338. He said that this idea developed with the Citizen's Against Willow Run Expansion group. Mr. Fletcher said that House Bill 4338 would allow residents of adjacent communities 45 days to place a binding local referendum on the ballot. He said they were relatively optimistic that the legislation would pass. Mr. Fletcher said that their intent was to stop the tradeport and to allow communities and adjacent communities the right to vote on the issue.

Discussion transpired regarding HB4338 and SB548. It was noted by various members that a referendum vote could be ongoing as the development plan for the tradeport could be changed any number of times. Each modification would require another referendum. Language changes in proposed language changes to HB4338 were suggested concerning the number of elections necessary to stop the tradeport.

Supervisor Yack voiced his frustration at the continued interest in the Willow Run tradeport and recommended incorporating the force of Congressional Representative Lynn Rivers. Supervisor Yack thanked those in attendance for their efforts. Supervisor Yack said that there were a number of vehicles to block the tradeport with. The Board directed Township Attorney, Bryan Amann to work on behalf of the Township with various legislators in updating drafted language in bills. He also recommended that Mr. Amann provide feedback as changes to bills occur. Supervisor Yack adjourned the meeting at 8:30 P.M.

The above is a synopsis of discussions taken at the Special Board meeting held on June 5, 1997. The full text of the approved minutes will be available following the regular meeting of the Board on June 24, 1997.

Hospice medical class offered

Hospice nurses, workers and volunteers who missed the Wayne County Medical Examiner's Office first-ever training in hospice medical investigation in early June will get several additional chances to take this unique course.

Original plans called for two courses to be held in 1997. Under the revised schedule, classes will be held from 4-7 p.m. on the following dates: July 3, 9, 23, Aug. 14 and Sept. 3. Day classes will be held from 1:30-4:30 p.m. on Aug. 6 and Sept. 10.

"We had such a tremendous turnout for our first course, we decided to offer the class on a more frequent basis," said Dr. Sawait Kanluen, Wayne County's chief medical examiner.

Trustees review academic procedures, policies

By Ken Abramczyk
Staff Writer

Schoolcraft College trustees were literally fit to be tied May 28.

They deadlocked, 3-3, on a recommendation to delete two academic probation and dismissal policies from the college's policies and procedures manual. They will revisit the issue June 25 when administrators will report on the implications of such an action.

Before the tie vote, administrators told trustees the policy was duplicated elsewhere, but once the vote was taken, trustees indicated they wanted more information before acting on it again.

Administrators wanted a probation policy removed which places students on academic probation if their grade-point average falls below 2.0 after completing 15 credit hours. Those students must meet with a counselor before registering for each semester until that student maintains a cumulative grade-point average above 2.0.

A second policy calls for students to be dismissed if they fail to reach the 2.0 grade point average after 30 hours. A student may appeal the dismissal to the dean of instruction, or a further appeal may be made to the Academic Probation and Dismissal Committee.

Administrators said the deletions of the two academic policies and three other policies were proposed to eliminate items that were duplicated in the manual or existed in the student catalog. But the change was questioned by trustees Steve Ragan, Richard DeVries and Brian Broderick.

Ragan wondered what the implications would be for trustees or future college boards if trustees removed the items.

"Normally we do these on face value, but we've had a lot of these," Ragan said. "The cumulative effect is we're removing ourselves from a large area." Ragan asked whether the catalog policies could be changed without board approval, hence bypassing trustees on the academic policy if that were to happen.

Schoolcraft president Richard McDowell responded that sometimes the policy wording is not up to date or they do not comply with the law.

"Many of these are word changes," McDowell said. "The changes have been rather minor. We're really not changing the direction or scope of what we're doing."

Trustee Richard DeVries agreed with McDowell, but added that the academic policies "were a little different" and believed the college needed a policy in the manual on academics.

Conway Jeffress, vice president of academic instruction, said students still can appeal dismissals, all the way to the board if necessary.

Board vice chair John Walsh said he was "comfortable" leaving the decision on academic policy to educators and administrators. "Perhaps Steve (Ragan) is right. If we delete this, what is it being replaced with. But I'm very comfortable leaving it to the staff."

But Ragan added: "I always have concerns about voting with the absence of other information."

Then the board voted, 3-3, with Walsh, board chair Patricia Watson and trustee Carol Strom supporting the deletion of the two academic policies, while trustees Ragan, DeVries and Brian Broderick opposed it.

Trustee Mary Breen was absent.

Broderick said he had "full faith with administrators, but there should be something in the policy book that refers to procedure."

Strom asked if the administration could return with some kind of policy. "We'll take another look at it and come back," McDowell said.

The college's cabinet of McDowell, Jeffress, Butch Raby, Schoolcraft's vice president of business services, and Sandra Florek, dean of marketing and communication, will meet to compile information for the board for the trustees' next meeting.

"We went back through that (policies and procedures manual) and deleted those things that were covered in other places," Florek said. "Students still have a final recourse with the board of trustees."

Later, Watson said the academic policies were outlined in a admissions policy in the procedures section of the manual.

"The (college) handbook also represents a contract the student has with the college," Watson said. "Most of us don't want a change in the policy, but much of the requested changes represented duplication."

That information was not immediately presented to trustees, but Watson believed it would be clarified for the next meeting. Students can check the academic procedures regarding probation and dismissal in the new student catalog for 1997-98 – also received recently by college officials.

Commissioners form task force on townships to review services

Wayne County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, will lead the Wayne County Commission's Task Force on Townships.

The task force was created at the urging of McCotter and Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton. It is the first commission task force aimed at townships.

"The purpose of this committee will be to ensure that the county is fully and fairly providing all of the services to which townships are entitled," McCotter said.

"In instances where this is not occurring, the task force will draft and introduce legislation to see that townships get their fair share of county services."

Patterson said townships are in a more interdependent relationship with the county than are cities.

"Under state law and the county charter, county government is mandated to provide townships with essential public services that the county is not required to provide cities. The most obvious and important area is roads, which I know will be a primary focus of the task force."

■ 'The purpose of this committee will be to ensure that the county is fully and fairly providing all of the services to which the townships are entitled.'

Other members of the task force include Commissioners Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights; William O'Neil, D-Allen Park; and Ed Boike, D-Taylor.

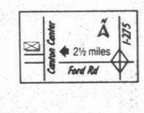

The task force will hold an organizational meeting, and then proceed to hold meetings throughout Wayne County's townships.

McCotter said: "We are going to actively seek the comments and concerns of the people who best understand the needs of townships — the residents and elected officials of the townships."

Did you know that our carriers are in business for themselves? We call them Junior Merchants and they are committed to getting the fruits of a lot of people's labor on your doorstep twice each week. And, like business people everywhere,their goal is customer satisfaction. But their job doesn't end there. Other business skills include keeping accurate records and reporting information on time.

There are a lot of famous names in the Newspaper Association of America's Carrier Hall of Fame—three presidents, Hoover, Truman, and Eisenhower. There are spiritual leaders, Norman Vincent Peale and Martin Luther King, Jr , there are astronauts and poets and entertainers. All of them recognizable not only for their talent, but for their values and character.

We think a carrier route is an excellent way to learn responsibility, respect for others, and a sense of what it takes to earn a dollar these days. If you agree and would like to put your son's or daughter's name on our waiting list to become a carrier, give us a call—who knows? Between us, we may be giving the world another president or poet.

BEAUTY AND THE BEST

Jeffrey Bruce, guest columnist

Better take care of summer skin

BY JEFFREY BRUCE
SPECIAL WRITER

It is tempting at this time of the year to go outdoors and soak up as many rays as possible. It feels great, puts thoughts of winter behind you, and besides, you're getting lots of Vitamin D into the body, right?

But times are changing, thanks to the depleted ozone layer and much more information about the effects of the sun.

I don't want to spoil all your fun, so let's see if we can tackle this sensibly. Not everybody wants to sit inside the whole time, and those who go outside don't want to be covered from head to toe with protective clothing.

If you are enjoying outdoor activities, make sure you reapply sunscreen every couple of hours or after coming out of the water, even if you are using waterproof lotion. Experts tell us to use a minimum SPF of 15, but if you are spending a day at the beach, I would suggest a higher number than that. You will still get a healthy glow, but with a bit of luck, no burn.

If you are wearing a full face of make-up, do not feel that you are totally protected. Check the list of ingredients, ask the person selling you the products, make sure that there is some form of protection in the items you are using. Whether they are in fashion or not, and thankfully they usually are, wear as many big brimmed hats as possible. If you don't want liver spots or aging marks, don't forget the backs of your hands and neck.

To get some expert advice I spoke with Dr. Lisa Manz-Dulac of the East Side Dermatology Clinic. She gave me the same advice that has been written about, advice that we probably don't want to hear. However, with skin cancer rates growing rapidly, it pays to heed her warnings.

Most people, according to Dr. Manz-Dulac, do not recognize the warning signs, even though these signs should be easy to detect. We also forget that exposure to the sun is accumulative, and that the most damage is done by burns before we reach the age of 18. For most of us that is too late, but not for our children and grandchildren. Do not forget to pay particular attention to their skin.

One of the secrets of healthy skin, not only in the summer months, is moisture. Not only in the sense of using plenty of moisture lotions after you have been in the sun, although that is very important.

Do not forget to drink as much fluid as possible. In the summer time you are unaware of how much fluid the body is losing due to perspiration, exhaling while doing activities, etc. In order to keep the body replenished, to flush toxins out, and to give the cells of the body, including the face, nourishment, keep water as close to you as possible.

My favorite trick is to freeze a couple of plastic bottles with water overnight, and when going out either to the beach, playing sports, or even just riding around in the car between appointments or errands, keep sipping the water as it defrosts.

Apart from keeping those damaging rays away from your eyes, big sunglasses also stop you from squinting which can lead to those old friends, the crow's feet. Even on overcast days, the glare is strong enough to wear glasses. Think of the money you'll save on plastic surgery later.

It has been very popular for a few years now to slather fruit acids, or alpha hydroxy acid, as it is properly known, on the face in order to get rid of wrinkles. You have probably been warned by your doctor that you cannot go into the sun. They mean it!

Dermatologists have also been taking note of the fact that a lot of you, and you know who you are, are using too much of these products. Some women have been found to be using more than one product at a time. Other women are not adept at using the correct amount of one product, thinking that a little more will give better results.

If you are one of these, be prepared to encounter problems such as turning red, itching, burning and stinging at a much higher rate than normal.

I would be remiss if I didn't thank Greg Allowe of the exquisite Townsend Hotel in Birmingham for hosting my personal makeovers the past three months. For those of you who couldn't book an appointment (we were completely sold out) I am now scheduling September dates. For more information please call 1-800-944-6588. And remember, sunscreen!

Marketing downtowns means special events

Main Street shopping districts and their savvy promoters use festivals, fairs and frequent shopper programs to lure families away from Friday nights in front of their television set – especially in the summer.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
EDITOR

Last summer, downtown Birmingham merchants launched a children's theatre series on Friday nights, and families who'd otherwise be home "nesting," filled the streets, ice cream shops and delis.

"It was wonderful," said Gail Gotthelf, director of the Principal Shopping District (PSD). "Likewise for our Night on the Town, Jazz Festival, and Art Fair."

Downtown Rochester promotions director Kristi Trevarrow, reports similar success during her town's Dancing In The Streets series, the annual Summer Sidewalk Sales, and the Art-N-Apples festival.

"These events are so wonderful because they bring out friends and neighbors to enjoy the summer, have some fun and discover what's new in the community," she said. "The town's merchants also get the chance to show off their products and services to many new people."

Judy Downey of the Farmington Downtown Development Authority, said her town also uses special events to introduce new customers to the shops and restaurants along Main Street.

"We have our concert series, our winter and summer fun series for children, a Halloween festival and a holiday event," she said. "We also have a Farmer's Market on Saturday mornings to bring folks into town, and of course our Founders Festival in July is always the big celebration."

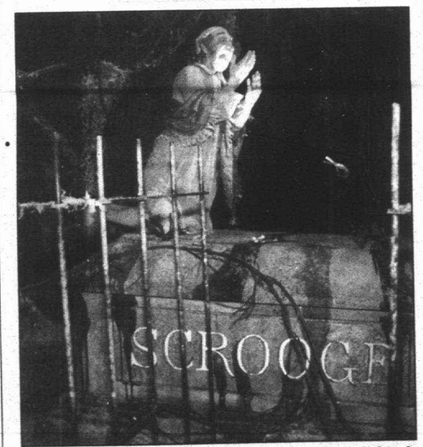

Downey said she focuses her energies on the special events and keeping a "strong merchant base" downtown so Farmington "does not suffer the loss of retail in 10 years."

"It's up to each individual store to do their own marketing as well, like offering customer discounts and frequent shopper rewards. Many of the stores, like the Bon Ton Hallmark Shoppe do. So do our chain stores."

Gotthelf said although the merchants are considering offering designated senior citizen shopping days, holiday shopping days just for kids, and customer appreciation days,"Birmingham is not a coupon/discount town."

"We see more opportunities in special events that draw new customers to the area to see what we have to offer, than handling discounts," she said. "Maybe retail dollars aren't immediately generated from a special event, but people from surrounding areas walk by our windows and make plans to come back and shop."

Madonna's teacher prep program gets seal of approval

Madonna University's standards for teachers and teacher preparation has been recognized by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Madonna University has received official notification that its advanced level teacher education programs have been accredited and its existing programs at the initial teacher preparation level will continue to receive NCATE accreditation.

These accreditations are in place through the year 2001. This five-year period is the maximum period an institution can be accredited. Madonna's teacher education program was first accredited by NCATE in 1972.

NCATE is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as the only accrediting body for schools, departments and colleges of education. On-site visits, document review, and accreditation decisions are all carried out by professionals from the education community, including teachers and teacher educators as well as education policy makers and school specialists.

Representatives from NCATE and the state of Michigan visited the Madonna campus in November to review the teacher preparation program and the four master's programs in education.

Now celebrating 50 years of academic excellence, Madonna University began offering teacher education programs in 1947 when it first became a four-year liberal arts college. Advanced degree programs in education were initiated in 1988.

"Our teacher education program at Madonna University plays a significant role in producing teachers of quality who possess a humanistic dimension which is directly aligned with the University's mission and so needed in today's challenging educational environments," said Robert Kimball, chairperson, department of education.

The University recommends students for both provisional certificates and the Professional Education Certificate, as well as additional endorsements to existing certificates. Students may complete requirements for either elementary provisional certification (K-8) or secondary provisional certification.

On the graduate level, education programs are offered in Catholic school leadership, educational leadership, learning disabilities and literacy education.

"NCATE accreditation signals to all of the University's stake holders that our program meets the highest standards of excellence," said Ernest Nolan, vice president for academic affairs. "Since teacher education was one of the University's founding programs in 1947, it is fitting that, 50 years later, the University has been acknowledged as a leader in the field of education."

Art/flowers are forever

In Jeanne Hutko's mind, flowers, art and music all have one thing in common, they last through the ages. Hutko is co-chairing the second annual "Flowers are Forever" Garden Walk noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 24. The walk, sponsored by the Trailwood Garden Club of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association, combines with the opening of a floral art show and sale at the Plymouth Community Arts Council. Together, the two events celebrate the everlasting nature of flowers and art and their ability to renew.

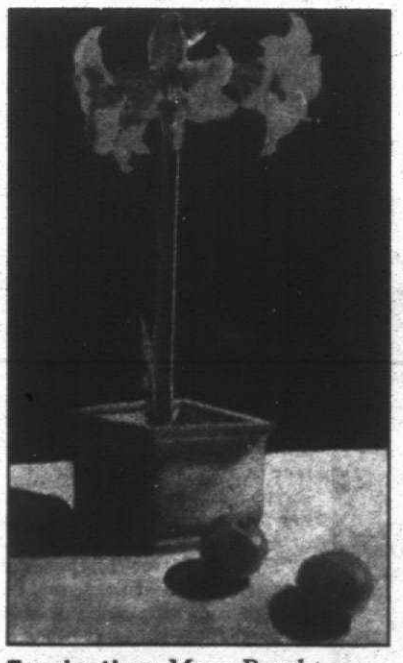

Admission to the art show is free. Tickets for the garden walk are $6 in advance, $7 the day of the walk and available in Plymouth at Good's Nursery, Saxton's Garden Center, Picadilly's, and the arts council office at 774 N. Sheldon. In case of severe weather, the walk and opening will take place the following day. For more information about the walk, call Jeanne Hutko at (313) 459-5285 or Georgia Randinitis (313) 459-7146.

"It's a day to renew your spirit," said Hutko. "Flowers are just like art and music. That's how we came up with the title 'Flowers are Forever.' They may die or lie dormant in winter but in spring the flowers are alive just like arts and music."

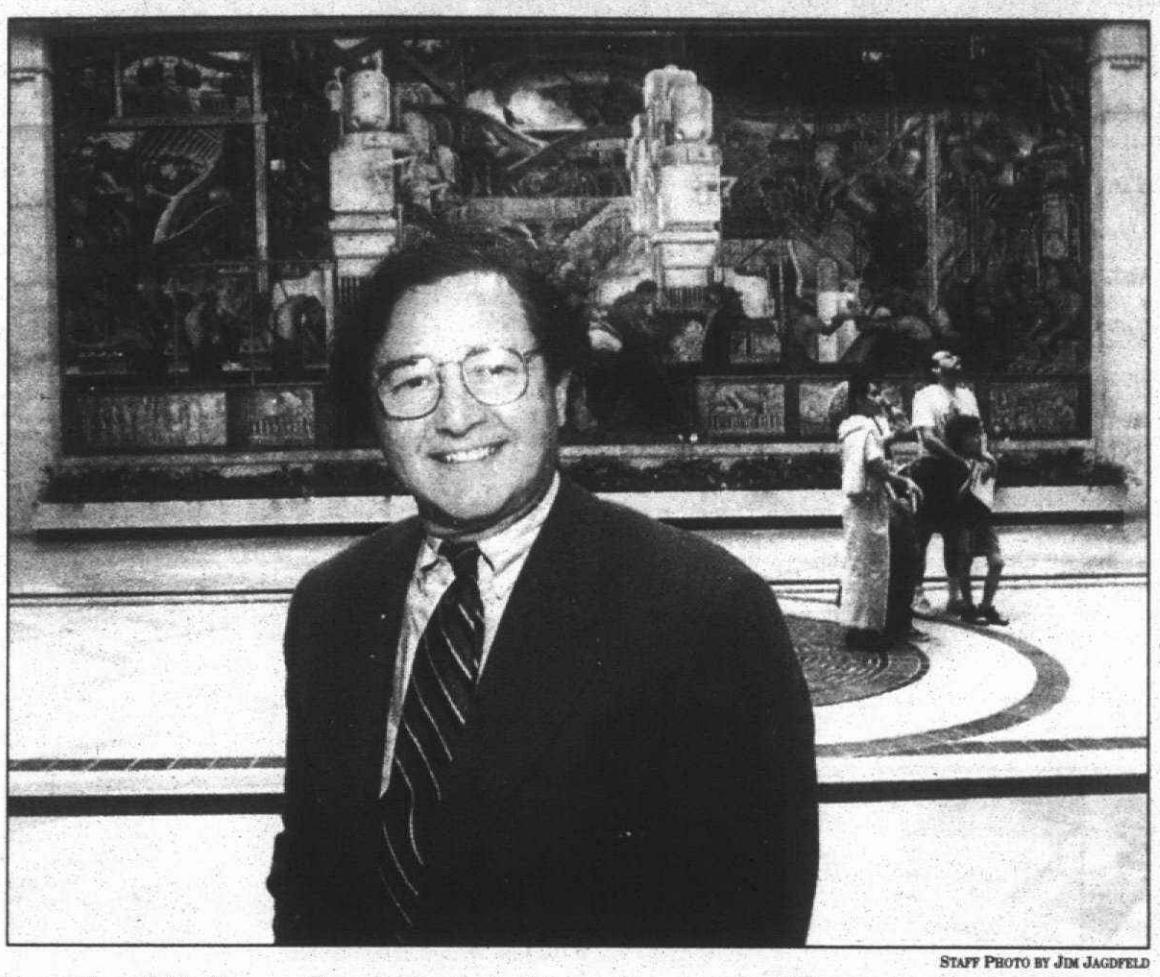

Designing gardens

Hutko thought the walk could serve as a way to introduce the community to the newly renovated home of the arts council. After visiting gardens ranging from English and American Cottage styles to woodlands, art afi-

KEEPER OF THE DIA PASSES THE TORCH

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

In mid May, Detroit Institute of Arts director Samuel Sachs II announced his resignation to accept the top position at the prestigious Frick Collection in New York. Amid the current financial crisis at the DIA, Sachs' pending departure adds to the uncertainty about the institution's future.

At the time, Sachs speculated that his resignation could be a "catalytic event" to draw attention to the DIA's dire situation. Weeks later, that seems prophetic. Late last week, the Detroit City Council reversed its position and agreed to consider proposals for a nonprofit organization to run the DIA. (Currently, the City and the Founders Society jointly operate the museum.)

Sachs called the Council's decision "a most important first step in the process" of addressing how the DIA will come up with funding to cover an $8 million budgetary deficit. The move, according to Sachs, may symbolize the type of political partnership and optimism to draw donors and broaden public support.

Unfortunately, a potentially catastrophic situation awaits if the DIA cannot attract additional long-term, stable funding. Frankly, few at the state or county level are taking the lead to resolve the DIA's long-term financial dilemma, much to the dismay of the 46,000 Founders Society members, many of whom live in Oakland County and Western Wayne.

A proposed tri-county cultural millage to support the DIA has yet to gain wide backing. Many public officials, recalling the funding controversies of the National Endowment for the Arts, maintain that the arts should seek their own private funding.

In what is expected to be one of his last interviews as director of the DIA, Sachs' final words resound with urgency and warning. He wonders if public officials can put aside partisan interests to figure out how to save one of the country's greatest cultural treasures.

Talking with the O&E from his Detroit home in Palmer Park, Sachs, 61, has the self-assuredness of being in control of his destiny. He's obviously proud that he's given "110 percent" during one of the most tumultuous periods in the museum's 112-year history.

But now, he's clearly ready to move on. The question, of course, is whether the DIA can move on without him.

O&E:* It's been about a month since you announced your resignation. Any second thoughts or second guessing?

Sachs: Second thoughts, probably not. Second guessing, yes. You always want a sense of closure. I'm very proud of what we've accomplished in the last 12 years. I wish I could've helped us get over this current hurdle so people would feel like the museum is on much more solid ground. The statements we've been making about the impending financial disaster are very real and imminent. If something isn't done it's going to be very unpleasant.

The simple solution of having the Detroit City Council take appropriate action (streamlining the management structure of the DIA) isn't the fix, but a step toward a fix.

O&E:* If the Detroit City Council had decided to accept bids (earlier than last week) for a nonprofit organization to run the DIA, would you still have decided to accept the Frick post?

Sachs: With this offer that I received – even in the best of times – I wouldn't have refused. The Frick is the real gem of American museums. Superb in every aspect. Beautifully located. The activities at the Frick revolve around keeping the flame of quality. Plus I'll be working with the extraordinary adjunct, the research library.

O&E:* When some people heard about your resignation, they thought, "He's jumping from a sinking ship." How do you respond to these critics?

Sachs: The immediate response is that they don't know me. I don't think anyone could claim that I'm bailing out after being here for 12 years. It's not inappropriate at this stage of my career to seek another opportunity regardless of whatever the situation (at the DIA).

I'm in no way regretful about the last 12 years. For the last six years, some people have said to me, "Why are you staying here?" To me, that's the more interesting question.

O&E:* What are your proudest accomplishments during the last 12 years?

DIA volunteers gear up for Egypt exhibit

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

If you love Egyptian art and have a few hours to spare, the Detroit Institute of Arts has the ticket for you. In order to manage the crowd of 250,000 visitors expected to attend "Splendors of Ancient Egypt," the museum is seeking volunteers for a one-time only program. Special Egypt Volunteers who work at least one shift during the exhibition will be allowed to purchase two admission tickets for the price of one.

Golden Splendor: The Sarcophagus of Djedbastetiue fankh (332 B.C.-A.D. 330) from the Roemer-Pelizaeus Museum in Hildesheim, Germany is one of 200 artifacts on exhibit in the Detroit Institute of Arts "Splendors of Ancient Egypt."

Dianne Abel, assistant director of development for volunteer services and special events, estimates the DIA will need to fill 3,000 volunteer positions for one of the largest exhibitions of ancient Egyptian treasures to visit the United States in decades. "Splendors of Ancient Egypt" opens July 16 with more than 200 masterpieces including jewelry, mummy cases, statues, wall carvings, and ceramics from the pre-dynastic period to the seventh century A.D. The exhibit creates a panoramic view of the pharaohs, political unrest, technical achievements, and afterlife with objects drawn from the collection of the Roemer-Pelizaeus Museum in Hildesheim, Germany.

According to Abel, this is the first DIA exhibition to use timed tickets due to the fact the museum is expecting between 800 to 1,000 visitors per hour.

"This is such a huge project, we need community support," said Abel of Beverly Hills. "Splendors of Ancient Egypt' is three times our regular exhibition size and varies from jewelry to a two-ton sarcophagus."

Fine art blossoms in park

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

Nearly one hundred artists will bring their wares to the Liberty Fest Fine Art and Craft Show Saturday and Sunday, June 21-22. This is the sixth year for the fine art show, and like the Canton community itself, it's growing.

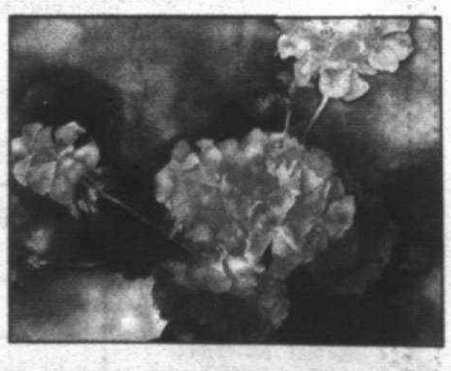

The fine art, face painting and free children's art workshop are only a few of the highlights at the Canton Liberty Fest running June 19-22 at Heritage Park in Canton Township. A showing of Disney's "101 Dalmations" with Glenn Close, live entertainment, a taste of local Canton restaurants, the ALPO-Canine Frisbee championships, classic car show, road rally, fireworks, a Las Vegas night, display by Canton Public Safety's canine unit, and a mini-midway for kids are among other activities sure to appeal to families.

"It's one of the most exciting family events to happen in Canton," said Sharon Dillenbeck, fine arts show co-chair and owner of D & M Art Studio in Canton. "It's fun to be there. There's something going on all the time. Artists are calling me because of last year's success and because it's becoming established. It's word of mouth. If one artist likes the show, they tell others about it."

Pottery, jewelry, painting, photography, stained glass, calligraphy, basketry, air brush, metal sculptures, and folk art will be located in two, 90 by 100-foot tents on the soccer fields west of the park's gazebo and two ponds where paddle boating will be available. Smaller, personal tents will ring the large tents.

Joyce Murphy, co-chair with Dillenbeck, thinks the show, a joint venture by Canton Parks and Recreation

Sachs: The British, instead of calling us curators, call us keepers. That's a good name. You keep this valuable treasure as a learning place, a place to go to repair your soul.

I came in 1985 and everyone said that it wasn't the museum's finest moment. We changed the relationship between the city and city government. It's much more of a partnership. We changed the relationship with donors and made changes to run the DIA as a solid business. For the past 12 years, we've never run a deficit. We have no debt. We've ended every year, including the year (1991) we took a $7 million cut, with a surplus. Now that's a triumph of management.

We've done this with the formidable assistance of the Founders Society. Last year, our volunteers gave in excess of 75,000 hours of service. (Since 1985, Founders Society membership has doubled to 46,000.)

We've renovated the Pre-Columbian gallery, the Korean and Japanese galleries, the French 19th-century gallery, the Dutch and Flemish, the Rivera Court, the Great Hall. Then there's been a new roof, air conditioning, new handling equipment. Much of it done with city bond money. (In 1988, the city passed a $25 million bond authorization. To date, the city has sold about $18 million.)

The big problem, however, is that the exterior walls of the building need serious treatment. That's likely to be a $60 million project.

O&E:* What are the consequences of the foreboding talk about the DIA's future?

Sachs: When we drastically reduced our schedule in 1991 many people thought we were closed. Attendance dropped precipitously. We had to cancel many exhibits. Since then, we've turned it around.

Many institutions that want to partner with us, no longer see us as a stable partner. People wonder why the great exhibits don't come to Detroit? If you want those things to happen here, we need some (financial) stability.

We've had six years of stability with the Partnership for Renewal (which has raised about $27 million). Because of good management, we've been allowed to run (on those funds) for six years. That's brought us the Egyptian exhibit.

But the future of the DIA's stability requires predictable funding.

O&E:* How close are we to a catastrophic situation – closing the museum or cutting back the accessibility to the DIA?

Sachs: We have said this over and over again. As of June 30, 1998, we don't have the $8 million we need. "Hello!" How can we be clearer? The only hope is either regional funding, which is highly unlikely in a short period of time. Or to mount an emergency bridge fund.

Do we go back to the public and say we need more help from many of the same people who supported the Partnership for Renewal. I don't think that the mood in the giving community is sufficiently encouraged by the prospects of the DIA that they'll easily vote with their dollars to extend the bridge. I think it's going to be very hard going. Unless there's some kind of political breakthrough.

In the long run, the DIA cannot extend itself on this bridge. There must be stable, predictable funding. A regional tax, I believe, could do that.

O&E:* What are the prospects of regional funding?

Sachs: They're good. But we're sitting here wondering what, when and how, particularly when Oakland County's executive came out against it. It's worked in other communities. In Denver, regional funding for the arts has been extremely successful. It creates a support fund for the symphony, the zoo, the DIA as well as small and emerging arts organizations.

When you talk about taxes, most people have big numbers in mind. We're talking about it costing $25 a year (per taxpayer). How many people spend that much and more to go to a professional sports game?

O&E:* Why hasn't the general public fully realized that the future of the fifth largest art museum in the country is threatened?

Sachs: The arts are a tremendously convenient target. Politically, bashing the arts is a brilliant idea.

You have a (state) administration that says it believes in job creation, education and tourism, the DIA and the arts are all of those. The DIA is the number three tourist attraction in the state. It ought to be an integral part of any educational system.

I'm concerned about the appreciation for the arts on a governmental level. There's all this furor about the National Endowment for the Arts. In 30 years, the National Endowment has given hundreds of thousands of grants and maybe six to eight have been controversial, and somehow the whole thing is threatened. What does it save the taxpayer? 64 cents (per person). France, Germany and Canada spends $10 to $40 per person (on public money to the arts), and in the US it's 64 cents.

We need creative people so we can compete worldwide. Where does inspiration for creativity come from? The arts.

O&E:* In a recent article, The New York Times referred to the sterling, well-financed new Museum of African-American History and the financial woes and crumbling facade of the DIA to highlight the conflicts of race, class and labor in Detroit. Do you agree?

Sachs: Detroit has a difficult role. The DIA is written into the city charter. It's been suggested to have a charter referendum to amend the chart. Right now, the city council doesn't have any oversight over the DIA, other than budgetary. That's where the difficulty comes in. The mayor appoints the Detroit Arts Commission. But it doesn't mention the council.

Since the city put actually a negative amount into the DIA, budgetary oversight has been an oxymoron. (The city charges the DIA for police protection.) If you amend the charter, and the DIA is a free-standing entity, like the AA museum, maybe they'd feel more comfortable.

Most museums across the country are run by nonprofit boards, including museums that used to be – or still are – municipally owned.

O&E:* Years from now, when the history of the DIA is written, how do you think your tenure will be characterized?

Sachs: (Laughs) Some will say, "Good riddance to him." I hope they say it was a period of solidification, of bringing credibility and respectability back to the DIA at a time when it desperately needed to have its entire community aware of its tremendous value. I'm hopeful about the acquisitions that I've made. Most talk about my predecessor William Valentiner as having built the collection. But we haven't done badly in the last 12 years. (DIA endowment has increased from $20 million to $70 million.)

I hope they'll remember the exhibitions. Not least is the Egyptian exhibit (opening July 16 through January), which will be one of the truly memorable events in the DIA history.

Special Egypt Volunteers will be required to work a 3 1/2 hour weekday or 4 hour weekend shift. A 20-minute training session will be held immediately before the shift.

"Volunteers will serve as hosts and hostesses in the galleries, give directions, assist security officers in seeing that no one touches the works of art, greet people with a friendly face and be a friendly congenial person," said Abel, "because they will be representing the museum."

Abel encourages families and employees to volunteer together. Groups of 12 or more will be recognized with a sign at the entrance of the exhibit on the day they serve as hosts.

"We would love to have people volunteer for more than one shift," said Abel. "Hopefully, they will enjoy it and become one of our regular volunteers."

According to Leslie Lazzerin, past Gallery Services chairperson, the special Egypt volunteers are critical to the everyday operation of the museum.

"It will take about double the amount of volunteers because it's a very extensive exhibition occupying 18 galleries and some 19,000 square feet," said Lazzerin, a Bloomfield Hills resident. "The volunteers are very important because without their assistance, the museum would have to close the other galleries during the exhibition."

There is no special criteria for volunteers and unlike the regular Gallery Service, you need not be a DIA Founders Society member.

"We're looking for anyone willing to give their time from high school seniors, to couples, retired and working people," said Lazzerin. "It's important for Detroiters and suburbanites alike to realize the importance of the exhibition. It enhances the museum's reputation to host the exhibition, plus they'll have a lot of fun. Hopefully, people who haven't visited the museum in a while will consider volunteering. It's a wonderful chance to see the exhibition first hand."

Antoinette Bryant is excited about volunteering to work in the galleries during the exhibition. This is the first time, the Farmington Hills resident has volunteered at the DIA. Bryant has visited Egypt several times, once as part of an African American heritage study tour with Egyptologist Dr. Asa Hillyard of Georgia State University.

"I volunteered because I think people should be able to see and learn about this great African civilization that came out of the Nile Valley," said Bryant. "Although I haven't seen any of the artifacts, I've seen artifacts in museums around the country. The exhibition should be educational for all of us, not only children but adults."

For years, Elaine Beresh of West Bloomfield thought about devoting a few hours to the DIA and other arts organizations, but works full time. The Special Egypt Volunteers program gives her the opportunity to accommodate her busy schedule.

"The exhibition triggered my decision to volunteer and I thought this was absolutely perfect way to start," said Beresh.

'La Mancha' music is live

A review of "Man of La Mancha" at the Fisher Theatre in Thursday's paper incorrectly reported that the orchestration was pre-recorded. Because of staging requirements for "Man of La Mancha" the orchestra warms up and performs off stage.

We regret the error.

Former Schoolcraft student writes fine story collection

Because They Wanted To
By Mary Gaitskill
(Simon & Schuster, $22, 254 pp.)

VICTORIA DIAZ

In the closing pages of "Stuff," the last short story in this collection, a woman and some of her friends releases a small army of ladybugs into a garden. "I thought how vast and deeply textured the surface of the flower must be to them," she recalls, "how huge and abstract the garden."

It is a fitting way to end this searching collection, written by a former Schoolcraft College student who also authored the critically lauded "Two Girls, Fat and Thin" and "Bad Behavior."

In crystalline and striking prose, Gaitskill writes here of the serpentine complexities of love and relationships, and the bewildering/bewildered nature of the merely-human heart. Back and forth and in and out these modern-day tales go, often filigreeing and the past and the present so finely that a reader can barely discern the seams. Echoing this, Gaitskill's characters often seem amorphous and slippery to grasp as the world around them, although this is not at all to say that they are without dimension. Most are about as convincing as a swiftly-delivered, well-placed punch in the nose.

In the title story, a young runaway named Elise finds herself stranded one afternoon with three small children when she promises to sit with them while their mother looks for a job. The mother never returns. Perhaps, like Elise, she has run away also. In this disturbing story, set in modern-day Vancouver, we never find out. It doesn't matter, though. It is enough to know this young runaway's aloneness and growing panic on this particular muggy afternoon in this small odorous apartment with these monstrous little boys and their needy, infant sister. We hang on every word of this story about damaged lives because we care so much about its characters – from the abandoned children whose "energy unspooled crazily and spilled all over," to the high-strung mother who "seemed to flicker in the dark," to the solitary Elise, moving through her life like splintered, buoyant flotsam after some terrible shipwreck.

In "The Dentist," a sexually promiscuous writer experiences a strong attraction toward her "mild, pale, middle-aged" dentist. As her fixation grows – and he does not return her feelings – she decides to see a therapist, who tells her that the dentist sounds "like a fairly typical man ... perhaps a little bit frightened and immature." He may be "fairly typical," but Gaitskill's dentist is never stereotypical. And though he may appear slightly stiff, he is never the least bit wooden. In a cast of characters that (again) simply glows with life, this pale dispenser of pain and novacaine utterly beams. You can particularly hear his grunts as he wrestles with that stubborn wisdom tooth, almost smell the sweat as he starts to perspire from the effort. Gaitskill brilliantly enhances this vaguely nightmarish tale by occasionally adding the odd spot of cartoonish color.

All the stories in this collection emphasize life's contradictions, with Gaitskill's characters trying for connections, either offering a kind of rescue, or groping for one. But the twisting currents of everyday existence get in the way, and reaching out is fraught with risk. Sometimes souls are dashed against the rocks. "The Girl on the Plane" is a story about a loquacious salesman who reaches out to a travel mate, but repels her with a story from the emotional baggage he's brought on board. In "Tiny, Smiling Daddy," a father seeks to know and understand a lesbian daughter who, at his own hands, has grown into a stranger. In "Comfort," a mother is badly injured in an auto accident, and loved ones attempt to soothe each other in the midst of the crisis. Their aloneness, however, remains distinct, their efforts doomed by their own singularity.

Along with memorable characters and rather stunning perceptions about life in general (and our times in particular), Gaitskill fortifies these stories with a kind of gritty detail that brings these scenes to life instantaneously – from a "minute pistil of broccoli" on a dirty plate, to a "tiny green tear" tattooed beneath a woman's eye, to "the dull ruffle of toilet paper unraveling from its roll."

The concluding, rather rambling story, "Stuff," centers around a woman approaching middle-age who searches for identity through heterosexual and gay relationships. The lead character's tendency toward over-analysis and second-guessing occasionally grows tiresome, and this story stumbles into implausibility here and there, but Gaitskill's nimble talents pull it off, anyway, leaving her fans in disappointment that every fine thing must come to an end.

Young reporter explores the new 'capitalist' Russia

Vodka, Tears and Lenin's Angel
By Jennifer Gould
(St. Martin's Press, $30)

'Vodka, Tears, and Lenin's Angel' leaves no doubt about Gould's considerable talent and intelligence. For the most part, her insights are profound and truly impressive for one so young.

ESTHER LITTMANN

"The Russians were easy to bribe," my dad often told me while explaining how he escaped from the Soviet Union in 1945. Having eluded the Nazis in '39, he fell into Soviet hands and was sent to a prison camp in Vorkuta, Stalin's gulag 100 miles north of the Arctic Circle. After the war, he obtained his release in exchange for a promise to remain in Russia. But freedom beckoned, and cigarettes and chocolate bars easily purchased hiding places on trains that headed toward the west.

Fifty years later, my dad would not be surprised to learn that little has changed, despite the fall of the Communist regime. Today, in Russia, "anything can be bought for the right price," maintains author Jennifer Gould. Currently a staff writer for the "Village Voice" and freelancer for numerous publications, Gould also speaks from experience. In 1992, the 24-year-old journalist left a good job at the "Philadelphia Inquirer" to travel to Russia so that she could see history in the making. At the time, this gutsy young woman had no job waiting for her, no Russian-language skills, and only a single contact – a friend of a friend – to help her get settled.

Recipient of the prestigious Canadian Council Grant, Ms. Gould tells the story of her 4-year adventure in her book: "Vodka, Tears, and Lenin's Angel."

Gould arrived in Russia when everyone was convinced that emerging capitalism would soon bring about an era of freedom and prosperity in the FSU, the Former Soviet Union. Democratic "firsts" were announced with great fanfare: the "first" stock exchange, the "first" privatized factory, the "first" McDonald's, etc.

But it wasn't long before disillusionment set in. Seventy years of communist rule and mindset (privilege, status, paranoia, dependence) were hard to reverse. When old laws were repealed, new laws to assist budding capitalists and foreign investors failed to take their place. Quoting Georgian leader Iseleiani, Gould writes, "We're moving from feudalism to capitalism, gaining freedom and individual rights – before there are laws for people to abide by."

Shortly after her arrival in Moscow, Gould found a full-time job with the "Moscow Times," an English-language newspaper for expatriates, diplomats, and business executives. Her first reports focused on social welfare. She investigated the disenfranchised: the homeless, sick, and elderly. She visited the runaway children living in train stations or abandoned houses and the "troublesome" teens drugged to submission in psychiatric hospitals. She interviewed "swallows" like Marina Oswald Porter, young women once used as communist agents of "sexpionage."

As Gould's acculturation and language skills increased, so did her social and professional contacts. She met Russian and foreign millionaire "biznesmeni," artists and entertainers, and political leaders of various persuasions. In 1995, she accompanied fascist presidential candidate Vladimir Zhirinovsky on an 8-day boat trip down the Volga interview him for "Playboy." The interviews revealed a perverse and self-destructive man, a would-be potentate who admits that his brand of madness reflects the qualities of a "sick, abnormal country."

"Vodka, Tears, and Lenin's Angel" leaves no doubt about Gould's considerable talent and intelligence. For the most part, her insights are profound and truly impressive for one so young. We can only wonder what projects and books lie ahead for this already accomplished author.

But Gould's loyalty to a man whose ideology blatantly failed and ruined the lives of millions of innocent people is puzzling, to say the least. Nicknamed "Lenin's Angel" because of her political sympathies, she writes, "Russian communism 'may have' (quotations are mine) turned out to be a totalitarian tool for continued, state-sanctioned oppression, imperialism, and anti-Semitism, but in theory it wasn't so bad. There's a lot of good to be found in reading Lenin."

What good is there in communism, Leninist or otherwise? The problems in Russia today are, after all, not the fault of democracy and capitalism, but of a system that taught people dependence instead of self-reliance and replaced the incentive of lawful profit with that of fear. My Dad left Russia with no illusions. He'd been there as a victim, not as a starry-eyed witness. For him, communism, Leninism, or whatever you call it, was "The horror! The horror!"

Jennifer Gould will discuss and autograph her book at Barnes and Noble on Orchard Lake Road on Tuesday, June 17, at 7 pm. Call (248) 626-6804.

TRAVEL

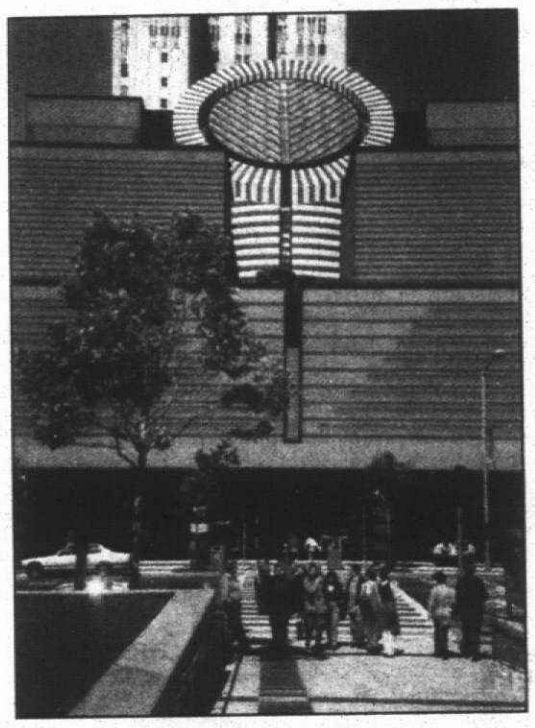

San Francisco has surprises for old friends

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE
SPECIAL WRITER

Count us among the people who have lost their hearts to San Francisco, partly because part of our heart – our youngest child – has chosen to live there. Over the years, between visiting San Francisco on our own, for business meetings and, now, to see our daughter, we have seen most of "the sights." With those out of the way, it's time to discover another layer of this active, cosmopolitan "City by the Bay."

Saturday morning's Farmer's Market at the base of Market Street at the Embarcadaro finds us shoulder to shoulder with San Franciscans, recycled bags in hand. They're purchasing among other items fresh produce, flowers and not just sour dough but all kinds of breads. "These are the best beans in the world," one native confided, as he persuaded me to take a package of Phipps Country Western Heirloom Bean Soup, recipe and seasoning included, back to Michigan with me. Coincidentally, I'm finishing the last of the batch as I'm writing this.

San Francisco is a walking city, but if you jog you need to find some part of it that isn't all hills. That's the Embarcadaro, which runs alongside the waterfront. You used to have to watch your step very carefully, because when San Francisco lost most of its commercial shipping business to nearby Oakland, the working pier area fell into disrepair. Within the last couple of years, however, most of the walkway was repaved, widened and adorned with a horizontal stripe of aquamarine tiles mirroring the water beyond.

MOMA: The San Francisco modern art museum is more notable for its architecture than for its art.

Another flat surface is, of course, the Golden Gate Bridge. You obviously have viewed it, and maybe have crossed it on your way to Marin and/or the wine country. But, it's nice tto take the time to run or walk along its pedestrian lane, a 3-3/4 miles round trip. The danger is that even though the weather may be clear and mild as you look out the window of your hotel, it could be a whole other story at the bridge. No matter how warm it is, you'll seldom see a San Franciscan without something with sleeves wrapped around his or her waist, ready at a moment's notice for both the changeable and wide variety of weather within the city. The neighborhood known as the Mission, for example, is reputed to get the most sunlight.

Although San Francisco is diverse, its neighborhoods are distinct. The Mission hosts a large working-class Hispanic population as well as Filipinos and blacks. But even in the couple of years we've been observing it, it has undergone gentrification. Cutesy coffee houses and upscale restaurants are moving in next to Formica -countered Tacquerias and Chinese eateries that, oddly, also sell doughnuts. And housing prices are on the way up.

Still, there is a distinct contrast as we walk up the hill to Noe Valley, where tony boutiques, small groceries, yogurt shops and an unusually high density of children's clothing and toy stores signal this as an area where young professionals are moving with their families.

The University of California at Berkeley as well as Berkeley itself is worth exploration. You can take the BART (short for Bay Area Rapid Transit). The University of Michigan of the West as we call it, or "Cal" as they call it, is certainly hippier and more diverse than Ann Arbor. Our daughter, a U-M graduate, pronounces it "edgier." It will be interesting to re-visit in a couple more years to see the effect of the repeal of affirmative action – if it stands. The campus, enhanced by a scenic river and stands of redwoods, is prettier than U-M. Plus the weather allows for all kinds of outdoor gathering places of which one is the famous Sproul Plaza , site of the Berkeley sitins of the '60s. Of course, U-M has the Diag. But it was the steps of the Michigan Union where President John F. Kennedy first announced formation of the Peace Corps. Cal has its equivalent of Burton Tower, Sather Tower also known as the Campanile.

Sproul Hall: On these steps at the University of California, Berkeley, the Free Speech Movement and the student protest decade began.

Head for the Berkeley Hills for breath-taking views of San Francisco Bay. They give rise to incredible homes, although the area can be dangerously dry in summer and subject to fire. As we hiked a section of Tilden Regional Park, it was fun to see large numbers of young mothers, with babies in knapsacks, also out for an afternoon hike.

If you haven't been to San Francisco in a couple of years, you might note some new "sights" such as the recently relocated public library and Museum of Modern Art. The library has an interesting staircase, designed by New York artist Alice Aycock, that you must ascend to the upper floors to view. The MOMA, so far, is worth seeing more for its architecture than its collection or exhibitions.

The MOMA, the Center for the Arts and two more museums moving to the area – the Jewish and the Mexican – are a part of the South of Market (SoMa) redevelopment. They frame Yerba Buena Gardens. This pocket-sized park with its delightful man-made waterfall and sloping hillside is a perfect spot to catch your breath and make plans for your next trip to San Francisco.

CONSTRUCTION NOTES

AAA Michigan suggests considering alternate routes through the construction zone again this summer on I-75 through Toledo (see accompanying map). There is a potential for long delays, especially during rush hours and holidays. Here are suggested alternate routes: Take I-275 or I-75 south and exit at southbound U.S. 24 (Telegraph Road). Follow it into Toledo until it rejoins I-75 at the Phillips Avenue-Telegraph overpass. If you're going south of Toledo, then take I-75 south. If headed east or west, take I-75 south to the Ohio Turnpike (I-80/90). If coming from western Michigan or Ann Arbor area, take U.S. 23 south to Ohio, then take I-475 south. If you're going south of Toledo, continue on I-475 to rejoin I-75 south of Toledo. If headed east or west, exit at Ohio Route 2 (Airport Highway, exit 8). Turn left (east) to Reynolds Road (U.S. 20). Then turn right (south) to the Ohio Turnpike (I-80/90. AAA Michigan advises that many Ohio roads, including the Turnpike east of Toledo, will experience summer construction and possible delays. Members can check their local branch offices for updates.

Denison operates the Raymond House Inn which is also on M-25 a half mile north of the museum. For information, call 810-622-8800 or 800-622-7229.

SAUGADUCK FESTIVAL

Saugatuck is the site of the Saugaduck Festival on Saturday, June 21. The Lake Michigan resort community will host a parade, a downtown arts and crafts show, a family scavenger hunt, several "ducky" children's activities.

Adoring fans flock to see Roush Racing team

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

They came in all shapes and sizes, young and old, waiting in long lines which stretched hundreds of yards through J.R.'s Garage.

Over 2,000 gathered off Schoolcraft Road in Livonia to get a glimpse and grab their piece of memorabilia as Jack Roush's Winston Cup NASCAR team of Mark Martin, Ted Musgrave and Jeff Burton greeted die-hard racing fans.

Also on hand were Trans Am driver Tommy Kendall and Super Truck competitor Joe Ruttman, also a part of Roush's vast and ever-expanding racing empire.

Even a thunderstorm couldn't dampen the turnout as buses shuttled fans ran back and forth between the Madonna University parking lot and J.R.'s Garage, which serves as a merchandise store and set-up garage for Roush's Trans Am and Super Truck racing teams.

The open house also included several of the race cars and vintage vehicles on display, along with food tents, merchandise for sale and a booth staging a raffle for a cruise to the Bahamas.

Winston Cup's popularity continues to grow and Livonia has a threesome it calls its own in Martin, who currently sits third in the point standings in the Ford Thunderbird Valvoline No. 6 car; Musgrave, who drives the No. 16 Family Channel/Primestar T-Bird; and the newcomer Burton, who sits in the No. 99 Exide Batteries Ford.

The racing teams are based in Liberty, N.C., but the engine development occurs right here in Livonia.

"You could say we're kind of the Red Wings of the Winston Cup circuit, we're the hometown team," said Roush marketing coordinator Joe Thompson.

This was the biggest turnout since Roush began his yearly open houses, which occurred three days prior to Sunday's NASCAR event in Brooklyn, Mich.

The drivers signed everything imaginable for their loyal fans including discarded racing tires, miniture helmets and dolls, hats, shirts, flags, photos, collector cards, cardboard cutouts and posters.

Musgrave even signed a piece of discarded sheet metal from his own car for one fan.

As fans waited patiently inline, some for over an hour, to meet and greet their racing heroes, many walked away with large smiles.

Late rally lifts Adray over Hines Park

■ COLLEGIATE BASEBALL

Rain began to fall between games of an Adray Metro Baseball Association double-header Friday night at Livonia's Ford Field.

Livonia Adray coach John Moraitis wasn't hoping for a Game 2 rainout, but having a 3-2 victory over Hines Park in the first game already made the night complete.

"I had lost three by one run, it's about time I win one," said Moraitis, whose team improved to 3-4 overall.

Results of the second game will appear in Thursday's Observer.

Adray broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning as Derrick Wolfe tripled and scored on Bill Kish's single.

Matt Sebring was the winning pitcher, throwing a two-hitter with two walks and one strikeout.

Kish also excelled at second base, making a diving stop of a grounder hit by Dave Knight in the fourth and completing an unassisted double play with two Hines Park runners on base in the seventh. Kisch grabbed a line drive hit by Kurt Kosky and stepped on second base to end Hines Park's threat.

Kimya Massey suffered the defeat for Hines Park, scattering five hits and striking out eight. He started strong, retiring the first 10 batters before Adray's Todd Tobin broke up his no-hit bid with a double.

Both teams scored two runs in the fifth inning.

For Adray, Kish walked and went to third on Charles Yessaian's double. Aaron Racey's ground out scored Kish and Yessaian came home on a wild pitch.

Hines Park scored two on an RBI single by Scott Colburn and an RBI double by Kosky in the fifth.

Adray on Wednesday night beat Downriver Adray, a team of unlimited aged players, 4-1.

Adray scored four runs in the first inning in support of winning pitcher Tobin, who scattered five hits, walked none and struck out five in a complete-game.

Kevin Uzarski, Wolfe, Brian Goodell and Jason Baas scored the Adray runs.

Uzarski doubled with two out and came home on a single by Wolfe. Consecutive walks to Goodell and Baas loaded the bases and two more runs scored on Racey's single. The other Adray run came home on a wild pitch.

Describing the all-Observer girls golf team is quite simple, really.

Title contenders.

Individually, they were superb. No argument there. But equally impressive was the effect they had on their teams.

Farmington Hills Mercy won the Catholic League championship and advanced to the Class A state tournament — and three good reasons why they did so well are members of the first team: Jenny Borowiec, Angela Harbar and Kristen Smith.

Livonia Stevenson and Plymouth Salem battled throughout the season for supremacy in the Western Lakes Activities Association. Stevenson ended up winning that battle, thanks in large part to the performance of Kelly Kristy.

As for Salem — well, the Rocks survived on the play of their Katies, Katie Murinas and Katie Collins. Murinas finished as the area's top performer, earning individual all-state honors with a fifth-place finish at the state tournament.

Those three teams were easily the best in Observerland, which is why night at Ford Field, and Redford Thurston graduate Pete Quinn was one of the winning team's heroes.

Quinn doubled in the seventh inning to score a run and break a 1-1 tie.

The Rams threatened in the bottom of the seventh as Brian Issitt singled and went to second on a grounder by Tom Biljan, but that's where he was stranded.

Delano Velotti had an RBI single in the first to give DCI a 1-0 lead. The Rams tied the score without getting a hit in the bottom of the first.

Schuyler Doakes walked and stole two bases before coming home on a grounder by Rickey Miller.

Bob Mason threw a two hitter with eight strikeouts to pick up the win for DCI. Tom Willeher was the losing pitcher, allowing nine hits and two walks while fanning 10.

The Rams are 2-3 overall.

they dominate the team. Here are their profiles:

Kelly Kristy, senior, Livonia Stevenson: Consistency best describes Kristy's prep career.

In her four years, she played in every varsity dual match — and was the medalist in 27 of the 35. She again earned all-WLAA honors this season, finishing third at the conference tournament. She was also sixth at the state regional tournament at Sylvan Glen with a 93.

Kristy averaged 41.9 strokes per nine holes in dual matches and 43.3 overall per nine holes as a senior, marks that made her medalist in nine of 10 dual matches and earned her Stevenson's Brieske Award, presented to the school's female athlete of the year.

"Kelly's record helped our team to its second season with no dual match losses," said Spartan coach John Wagner. "She has set an excellent example for her teammates in every aspect: Her work ethic, skills and character were of the highest caliber.

"She will be sincerely missed by her Stevenson High School family."

Katie Murinas, senior, Plymouth Salem: A team co-captain, Murinas gave Salem one of the toughest one-two punches in the state.

By season's end, Murinas was indeed tough to beat. She won the WLAA Tournament with an 85, tied for fifth at the Class A regional at Brighton's Oak Pointe with an 81, then fired an 87-86/173 to tie for fifth at the state tournament.

For the season, Murinas averaged 44.1 strokes per nine-hole meet and 85.7 per 18-hole tournament.

"Katie finished in the top-10 in every tournament this year," said Salem coach Rick Wilson. "Katie's strength was her length off the tee and her consistent all-around game.

"Katie was also always ready to go when the bell rings. She is a mentally tough competitor who continued to maintain a strong demeanor in every competition."

Murinas will attend Vanderbilt University in the fall, and plans to make the Commodores' golf team.

Katie Collins, senior, Plymouth Salem: Okay — there were a couple of downs this year in a career full of ups for Collins. But perhaps the best measure of an athlete is how they respond to adversity.

Collins had really one off day, and unfortunately it came at the state regional tournament at Oak Pointe. A team co-captain, she had the best nine-hole average among the Rocks (42.9); her 18-hole average was mighty impressive, too (87.0).

As far as responding to adversity, after an uncharacteristic 96 at the state regional, Collins bounced back immediately, firing an 87 to place second at the WLAA Tournament.

The four-year letterwinner's ability was more than evident earlier this season, when she placed fourth among 120 golfers at the Brighton Invitational (also at Oak Pointe), shooting an 82.

"Katie has a sound golf swing and improved her short game tremendously this year," said Salem coach Wilson. "Katie was a valued team member and will be missed by the Salem golf program."

Collins will continue to play in college, at Grand Valley State next fall.

Jennifer Borowiec, sophomore, Farmington Hills Mercy: It's takes a lot of talent to be a team leader as a sophomore — and Borowiec has it.

She was, in basic terms, always in the running. Her best performance of the season was at the Oakland County Tournament: Borowiec shot an 80 to earn medalist honors.

There were plenty of other impressive outings, however. She shot an 85 at the Catholic League Tournament to earn medalist honors, shot 89 to place second at the Class A regional, and fired an 89-88/176 to finish eighth at the state tournament.

Borowiec's nine-hole average was 43.8.

"Jennifer is an outstanding golfer," said Mercy coach Vicki Kowalski. "She spent a lot of time at the course and on the (driving) range.

"When she won the Oakland County Tournament, I knew we were in for a great year. She's a super young lady, and I look forward to twomore wonderful seasons."

Angela Harbar, sophomore, Farmington Hills Mercy: As the season ground down to its later stages, Harbar's play picked up. "Angela came on stronger and stronger as the season progressed," said Mercy's Kowalski.

Her season average of 46.7 doesn't quite reflect Harbar's late-season impact. She shot an 89 at the Catholic League Tournament, earning herself a second-place medal and helping Mercy win its sixth-straight championship.

At the state regionals at Sylvan Glen, Harbar shot a 90 to finish fifth. She was also 12th at the Oakland County Tournament with a 97.

"She scored 41 and 40 against (Livonia) Ladywood and (Birmingham) Marian (respectively) the second time we face them in league play," said Kowalski. "Her medals at the Catholic League meet and at the regionals show outstanding progress.

"Angela is very outgoing and will be a great cheerleader for two more seasons."

Kristen Smith, junior, Farmington Hills Mercy: It might be easy to be overlooked when a team has sophomores like Borowiec and Harbar.

Smith more than made her mark for the Marlins, however.

The team captain, Smith "helped lead the talented sophomores to victories at the Oakland County, Pinckney and Catholic League tournaments," said Kowalski. "Kristen has improved each year, and I look forward to one more year of success with her on the team."

Smith averaged 48.0 strokes per nine holes, and came up with consistently strong scores at several major tournaments. Her 92 at the Catholic League Tournament was worth a fifth-place medal; she also shot 96 at the state regional at Sylvan Glen and had a 103 at the state tournament.

Other good scores came at the Brighton Invitational (92) and at Oakland County (99, good for 15th).

Garden City's Marty Vasas brought both his sons, Matthew, 13, and Justin, 10, to meet Martin.

"I like Mark because he always drives clean," Vasas said. "Some drivers bump people off the track, but never Mark.

"I was down in Adrian two years ago (before an MIS event) and waited three hours to get his autograph. I just like his image. I started watching him on TV and it got me started. And now my wife (Cynthia) yells at me whenever I watch a race on TV because I stop everything I'm doing and never get my chores done around the house."

Vasas, a true-blue Ford racing fan, works out of the Mazda plant in Flat Rock. His two sons, however, admit to being fans of Terry Labonte and Jeff Gordon.

"I'm a Ford guy all the way, our plant was just bought out by them," Vasas said. "But I won't take it out on my kid,s even though those guys (Labonte and Gordon) drive G.M. cars."

Gene Emerson, 44, of Redford, is also a huge Martin fan. The Texas native, who has dabbled with Busch Grand National crews out of Houston, often travels the Winston Cup circuit. He just returned from a trip from Charlotte and the Coca-Cola World 600.

"Mark's a class act, you never hear anything negative about him," Emerson said. "He pretty much stays out of the limelight. He's a family man. I never miss a chance to see him."

Emerson once suffered from a perforated ulcer, losing so much blood that he nearly died.

"I owe a lot to the good Lord and Mark," Emerson said. "He works out and stays in shape. And I try stay healthy by being in the best shape I can. He serves as a source of inspiration."

Happy day: Fans of all ages came to see Martin, with all sorts of things for him to autograph.

TIM NOWICKI

Mid-May is the time when many species of migrant birds return through southeastern Michigan on their way to northern breeding grounds.

Colorful warblers like the blackburnian with fiery orange, black and some accentuating white will be passing through from their wintering grounds in northern South America. Black-throated greens, bay-breasted and black-throated blues are just a few more spectacular warblers that can only be seen for a short time of the year in our area.

Some of these species will be feeding in the trees around your yard, so be on the lookout. Or keep your ears open for unusual sounds that might cause you to look up at some of these passing jewels. But not far away are some areas where migrants concentrate.

In Dearborn, the University of Michigan manages a natural area as part of the Ford Fairlane Estate adjacent to the Fairlane Towne Center.

Julie A. Crave's new book, "Birds of Southeast Michigan: Dearborn," reports that 247 species of birds have been identified on the property and another 16 in the nearby area.

This approximately 500-acre area is part of the Rouge River floodplain. It's an oasis in a sea of concrete. Because it's the only area in the vicinity where birds can stop and refuel on their journey, many different species can be seen there.

Julie A. Crave's new book, "Birds of Southeast Michigan: Dearborn," reports that 247 species of birds have been identified on the property and another 16 in the nearby area. That's about 60 percent of all the species that have been identified in Michigan. Not bad for 500 acres.

Metro Beach Metropark near Mt. Clemens is another hot spot for birding. The area adjacent to the nature center is wooded with low lying areas containing water in spring. This prime birding area is also next to the lake where waterfowl can be seen just a short distance from the woods.

Pt. Pelee in Canada is an old standby for birders, but two other less crowded areas are on the southern shore of Lake Erie. Crane Creek State Park and Ottawa National Wildlife Refuge are great places to view migrants. These two areas in Ohio are next to each other on Route 2 about 18 miles east of Toledo. The boardwalk at Crane Creek State Park restricts travel to protect the vegetation, but a variety of migrants come down low and close to the walkway.

If you plan to be sick one day in May to view these migrants, watch the weather map and choose a day when a warm front has passed and a cold front is approaching. This condition provides winds from the south to push a new batch of migrants north. Good birding.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

TEN PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

While most of the attention went to the men's pro tournament last week at Taylor Lanes since it was on a national level, the ladies held a regional pro tournament at Skore Lanes.

Unfortunately, none of the guys from the greater Detroit area made it to the cut of 24 for match play. It was a much different story in the women's contest, as Aleta Sill, formerly of Westland and Garden City, now a Dearborn resident, came through with the championship title.

Winning is nothing new for Sill, as she is now the all-time leading money winner on the ladies pro tour, a member of the WIBC Hall of Fame and destined to gain election to the local Greater Detroit Hall of Fame later this year, the first time that she is eligible due to the age limit rules.

Kim Adler of Palm City, Fla., was runner-up and Marianne DeRupo who also lives in Dearborn now, came in seventh.

Sill's line score showed 2845 pins in qualifying, plus 2804 in match play where she went 7-1 while earning 210 bonus points while averaging 232. Her prize total was $1,200 which helped boost her all-time earning record.

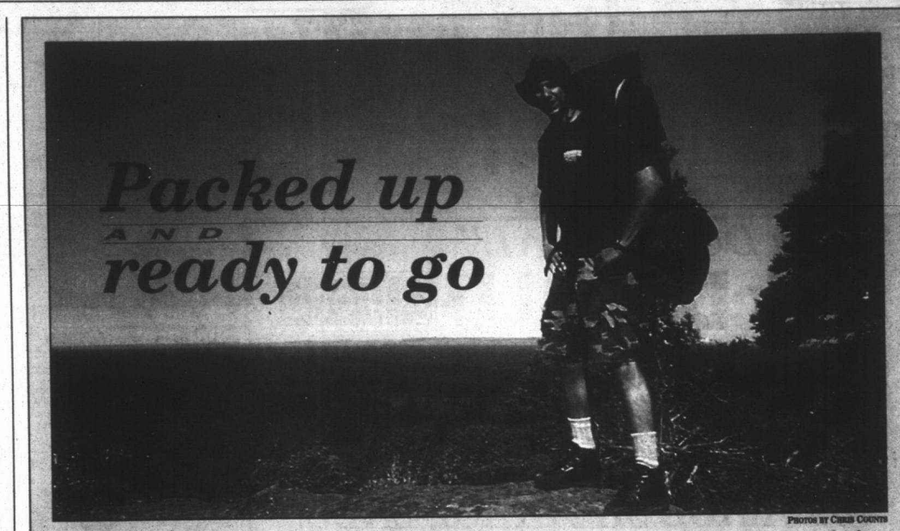

Getting back to the men's pro tour, for those who may have missed it on ESPN TV, Richy Ward came away with the title. Ward, a powerful lefty from Ft. Myers, Fla., took home $18,000 with his second PBA victory. Pete Weber came in second and Tommy DeLutz Jr. cashed in at the No. 3 spot.

Weber and Walter Ray Williams are in a race for all-time winnings on the Men's PBA tour. Several of the local amateur bowlers took home prize money as well.

The squad winners in the Greater Detroit PBA Pro-Am were: Floyd Gurney of St. Clair Shores, Joseph Paquette of Allen Park, Terry Riviera of Saline, Steve Boyce of Detroit, Fred Gay of Pittsford, Kathleen Lloyd of Belleville, Shandron Joyce of Detroit, Paul Koch of Harrison Township, Kim Cox of Southfield, Fely Topacio of Roseville, Sam Younce of Flint and Kit Depew of Roseville.

Bowlers who stop in at the new AutoNation USA in Canton will receive coupons good for free games of bowling at Super Bowl. That is all part of the grand opening promotion now going on during the month of June. There are many door prizes being offered, including a new bowling ball from Ebonite.

Al Harrison covers the western Wayne County bowling scene for the Observer Newspapers.

Seeing the sights: Once you buy the equipment, backpacking is an inexpensive sport that can take you into the back country. There are sunsets on Lake Superior where there isn't a car in sight; vistas of forests and lakes only seen after a hard climb; and friendly foxes.

BY BRUCE KERRY
SPECIAL WRITER

School's out and it's time to plan things to do during the summer.

One popular activity is backpacking. There's a trip for everybody.

Backpacking can be costly to get into. The equipment is expensive, but essential.

Good shoes are a necessity. A good heavy hiking shoe can cost between $100 to $200 and a light hiking shoe can cost $50 to $150, according REI in Northville.

Socks should not be cotton. Cotton retains moisture and your feet will remain wet.

Clothing should be appropriate for the season but it's recommended that you be prepared for all kinds of weather.

Clothing should be layered. It is easier to remove a layer than to put something on that you didn't bring. A hat is critical to protect you from the sun.

The most important piece of equipment is the pack. It has to hold everything you'll need.

If you're going for a day hike, you'll be using a different pack than one needed for a weeklong trip.

There are two types of packs: external frame and internal frame. Both types have their benefits.

An external frame is classified by the simple fact that it's a pack mounted on a plastic or aluminum frame.

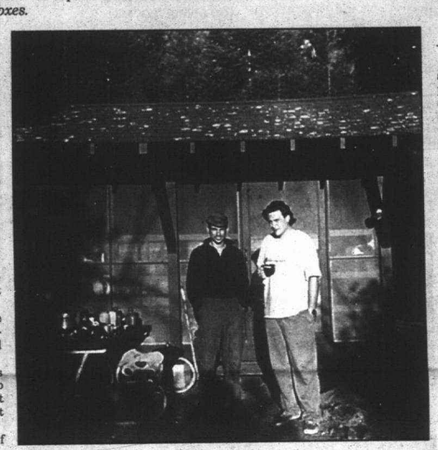

This type of pack is generally cooler because it allows air to flow between your back and the pack.

Another benefit is that external frame packs are generally less expensive than their counterparts.

They have many compartments to organize and access gear and their construction allows for good weight distribution over the hips.

Internal frame packs are generally designed for more active sports such as telemark skiing, mountaineering or climbing.

However, internal frame packs are increasingly more popular because of their stability and comfort.

Where to buy

There are many western Wayne County area stores that offer backpacking equipment.

REI has just opened in Northville. The Benchmark in Farmington has a great selection. Venture Outdoors, in Plymouth, has just moved to Five Mile at Sheldon.

All three stores have qualified sales specialists to assist in making backpacking trips successful.

Taking the pup

Backpacking trips can also be beneficial for dogs. Dogs should be physically fit and checked by a veterinarian prior to the journey. The dog should respond well to voice commands.

Another benefit to this pack is its size availability. Internal frame packs come in different sizes that allow easy fitting and a greater selection for trip length.

Some other important necessities are a first aid kit, a map of the area and a compass.

A first aid kit is essential because of the wear on the shoulders and the feet.

The outdoors can be unpredictable. A first aid kit can provide the comfort and necessities for an exciting hike.

A map and compass can provide security so you don't get lost.

Once you have purchased the gear that's needed for a safe hike, backpacking is inexpensive.

And you don't have to travel far. Backpacking is offered at the Waterloo and Pinckney Recreation Areas.

The trail is the Waterloo-Pinckney Trail and is classified as a moderate hike, but will be challenging for beginners.

In addition, local hiking is available at Island Lake Recreation Area, near Brighton, and Proud Lake Recreation Area, near Milford. Both trails are classified as easy hiking.

Other popular areas for hiking in Michigan, are: Isle Royal National Park, on Lake Superior, the Sleeping Bear Dunes, near Traverse City and the Pictured Rocks, near Grand Marais.

Backpacking offers many variations. Individually, backpacking is not recommend. If you must backpack alone, be prepared for the worst.

With a group of people backpacking can be a great workout and a lot of fun.

Some important recommendations for group backpacking are:

- Every person should be at physical capacity to complete the trip.
- The pace should be set by the slowest individual in the group.
- Try to keep the group small because too many people will make the odds bigger that someone will get lost.

ON THE RUN

MARYBETH DILLON

A chance to celebrate women's running and honor its pioneers arrives Sunday, June 22, with the 15th Annual Saturn For Women & Kids Only Challenge at Huron High School in Ann Arbor.

Events kick off with a 5K run, 5K racewalk and fitness walk at 8 a.m., followed by kids-only events on the track at 9:30 a.m. The 5K run will feature competition among mother/daughter and sister/sister teams. Kids ages 14 and under will compete in the mile; 800 meter; 400 meter; and 200 meter.

The race benefits the Breast Cancer Fund, dedicated to research, education, advocacy and patient support.

This year's breast cancer honoree is Sandy Eiler. An eight-year survivor of the disease, Eiler is chief operating officer of Eiler Communications, a Breast Cancer Fund board member, and the "mom extraordinaire" of seven kids. Sandy's husband, Larry, authored the book "When the Woman You Love Has Breast Cancer."

This year's race honoree is Ann Forshee-Crane of Okemos. Ann began running at 13 with the Michigammes running club. At Huron High, she took second in the mile at the state meet. In 1977, she became the first Michigan woman to run a sub-three-hour marathon. A wife and mother of five, Ann has directed numerous races and coaches the Leukemia Team in Training marathoners.

Trophies and prize money will be awarded, as will the Allyson Mann Spirit Scholarship. The scholarship goes to the runner who best exemplifies the competitive spirit of the late all-state runner, a 1993 graduate of Pioneer High School.

Registration fee on or before June 21 is $18. Race day fee is $20. Kids' events are $5. Entry forms are available at most running stores. For more information, call (313) 769-2926.

Standout runner Don Demetriades of Ann Arbor is among the hard-working volunteers behind the scenes of the For Women Only run. He noted that women have not always been welcome participants in the sport.

"As late as the 1967 Boston Marathon, Katherine Switzer could not even register for the race, and had to fight off male protesters in order to finish," he said. "Women's running slowly gained momentum and identity, but arguably it wasn't until Joan Benoit's victory in the inaugural Olympic women's marathon in Los Angeles in 1984 that U.S. women's distance finally secured its rightful status in the running world.

"The real pioneering work," he added, "was done by runners between Switzer and Benoit. These women – despite facing obstacles no less difficult than Switzer's – took women's running from relative obscurity to the degree of popularity necessary to convince the sports world, or at least the International Olympic Committee, that the Olympics should include a women's marathon, and to convince the running world that women deserve just as much prize money as men.

"Some of these pioneers lived and ran in Michigan, including Karen McKeachie and Karen Holappa of Ann Arbor and Ann Forshee-Crane. These women not only raced and trained; they also organized, directed and publicized running events with and for women."

Wayne County can boast its share of pioneer women runners – among them Jeanne Bocci, the first Michigan woman to qualify and run the Boston Marathon in 1974; Priscilla Gilliam of Canton; Alexa Kraft, who died of breast cancer; Marilyn Morehead; Sharon Sowell; Ella Willis; Marge Peruski; Beth Trudgeon and Charlene Foster. We'll salute them as well on Sunday, and explore their stories in future running columns.

Items for On the Run are welcome. Please fax them to Brad Emons at (313) 591-7279. Emons will be the Observer's running columnist while M.B. Dillon is on maternity leave.

Floor plans abound at Button's Orchard

Phoenix Land Development has done very well in the Farmington community in recent years. Residential projects include Arbor Oaks, Pinecreek, Arbor Park and Pine Meadow.

Now comes Button's Orchard, 14 platted lots on 10 acres off 12 Mile between Drake and Farmington roads.

"We feel it's an ideal single-family site," said Scott Drumm, Phoenix vice president.

"It's very close to the 696-Orchard Lake interchange, which can obviously service folks going downtown or Ann Arbor, Canton or any of those various areas. It has easy access by 12 Mile to banks, office buildings, shopping and freeways.

"Also, we feel any piece of property in Farmington Hills is a winner due to property values as well as a fantastic school system," Drumm added.

"This piece is quaint, a small piece bordered by large evergreens in the west side. There's quite a lot of topography on the property. Seven walkout basement are available," Drumm said..

The houses in Button's Orchard will be built along two cul-de-sacs. Access will be off Yorktown street through Farmington Green Subdivision, not 12 Mile.

Phoenix offers eight floor plans.

They range in price from $235,900 for a ranch of 1,872 square feet with three bedrooms and two baths to $272,900 for a colonial of 2,735 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

All but two of the lots are offered at base price. Walkouts carry a premium of $12,500.

"I think price for square footage is a good value," said Mary Lou Breslin, sales manager.

A fireplace, range and dishwasher, first-floor laundry, two-car garage, basement, full carpeting and a lighting allowance of $1,000 are included in all plans at base price.

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Exterior materials include brick, vinyl siding and wood siding.

"There really is a plan for anyone who walks through the door," Drumm said.

"If they want a master suite on the first floor with bedrooms up, we have the Pinecrest. If they like the great room concept, we have the Whitney. We offer the Aspen I and II. That's a ranch. We have five colonials."

The Whitney model, the most popular plan so far among buyers at Button's Orchard, can be walked through at Pinecreek off 10 Mile between Middlebelt and Inkster.

The colonial features a two-story foyer, a living room and dining room with cathedral or pan ceiling depending on elevation, kitchen/nook with breakfast island and family room.

The master, with cathedral (standard) or pan (upgrade) ceiling, has a separate tub and shower, walk-in closet, two sink vanity and compartmentalized commode.

Three other bedrooms and a full bath also are upstairs.

Base price of the 2,463-square-foot house is $249,900.

Because there are just 14 lots at Button's Orchard, there are no plans to build a model there. A sales trailer is on site.

Drumm described his targeted purchaser as a second- or third-time buyer with children who likely has built before.

"Floor plans we offer are wide ranging," he said. "We're finding larger colonials are the most popular. That would be based on our buyers having children."

Button's Orchard is serviced by city water and city sewers. The property is within the Farmington schools boundary. There will be no sidewalks.

The property tax rate currently is $38.75 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $250,000 house in Button's Orchard would pay about $4,850 the first year.

An association fee to maintain common areas is now set at $50 annually per house.

The development was named after the Button Family, which previously owned the property and about 70 surrounding acres.

The sales trailer at Button's Orchard, (810) 848-9707, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

Whitney plan: This colonial of nearly 2,500 square feet with four bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths, living room, dining room and family room is popular among Phoenix Land Development buyers.

Architect battles mud to complete house

STEVEN SIVAK

BIG MUD

Some readers have asked me to follow a project from the beginning to illustrate the entire process with its inherent ups and downs. I thought it was a great idea, so in addition to discussing a series of ever-changing topics related to architecture and construction, we will follow the design and construction of a "custom" home that is on the boards at my office. Four or five months ago I began reporting on the progress of this project, and I will continue to have monthly updates as the project progresses.

This month, we have dug a hole in the ground, and the masons have poured footing, and the block work for the basement is just about to begin.

The rain, the rain – it has finally ended. We had work to do and could not get enough consistent sunny days to take care of the tasks at hand. The mud and clay were so thick one day that I nearly lost my rubber boots.

Delivering concrete and concrete blocks was a major problem, and we are having to put more limestone on the drive than anticipated: this is what a contingency fund is for. Who could have known that the spring would have brought such wet weather? But with a 70,000-pound truck sitting in the mud spinning its tires, you have to act quickly and decisively to avoid even bigger problems, such as making the world's biggest paper weight.

Other problems arose because the truck could not get to all sides of the project: the majority of the concrete had to be wheelbarrowed across the site: 60,000 pounds or so.

The rain and over commitments by the mason has put us behind by a month or so. In and of itself, this is not all bad, but it has really pushed the framing contractor back. This will affect all contractors from here forward: the entire schedule is messed up.

One has to hope that when one needs a specific contractor that he will be available. My fingers are crossed, but I am not sure. It will have to play itself out, and the issues will be dealt with as they arise.

Once the footings were poured, the exact layout was undertaken for the block work. This is an absolutely critical step because it is very difficult to make framing corrections to misplaced block walls.

This is a tricky house with lots of corners and exacting dimensions. As both the general contractor and the architect, I feel it is my duty to make sure that these walls are correct.

The old "proverb" that if you want it done correctly one must do it oneself is true when it comes to layout. The footings do not have to be perfect, but the layout for the block does. The footings are 20 inches wide, but the walls are 10 inches wide. Since this is a wood-sided house, the walls do not have to be centered on the footings. It would nice if they were, but they do not always wind up in that position.

The beautiful redwood that was planned for the entire exterior is proving to be difficult to obtain. Limited cutting is the source of the problem. Even with four months of lead time, we may not be above to get enough redwood and we may have to substitute cedar. Clear cedar is slightly less expensive and is available in the quantities we need.

Left in the sun and rain, the two types of wood will weather down very rapidly to a similar buckskin color. However, the windows/ doors were going to match the siding and now, one will be redwood and the other cedar. The cedar can be obtained in four weeks, so the redwood order will be left standing until the last possible minute.

Next month we should be starting the rough carpentry, and I am very excited for that to begin!

Xeriscape

It's a new way of looking at low-water landscape

For those homeowners looking to put green in their yard and keep green in their pockets, Xeriscape offers an alternative solution to high-water maintenance landscape.

"Xeriscape is more than cactus and rocks. It's a concept using drought-resistant plants from all over the world," said Burnie Hughes, a garden expert with Home Depot. "You can have almost any garden you like and still save water."

This gardening of the '90s, which combines creative landscaping and water management, is a sensible trend that is taking hold in dry summer areas.

Hughes recommends using the seven steps of Xeriscape:

- Planning and design. Planning is the most important step to a successful Xeriscape. Organizing a garden for aesthetics, practicality and water efficiency can help avoid costly mistakes and ensure long-term cost-effectiveness.
- Soil improvement. This allows for better water penetration and improved water-holding capacity of the soil. It is best to test soil to determine the correct adjustments and water amount needed.
- Appropriate plant selection. Year-round greenery, bright flowers, borders and accents can all be achieved efficiently and attractively. Many plants are a lot more drought tolerant than you would imagine.
- Practical turf areas. Turf can be limited or even replaced with other less thirsty materials, such as ground covers, low-water-use plants or mulches.
- Efficient irrigation. Irrigation technology has boomed in the last few years. A combination of sound irrigation design and installation with careful water management will conserve water.
- Use of mulches. Mulches include organic materials, such as bark or chips, and inorganic materials, such as rock or gravel, all of which cover and cool the soil.
- Appropriate maintenance. "Pruning, weeding, proper fertilization, pest control and water adjustments preserve the intended beauty of your landscape," said Hughes. "Because of their design, Xeriscapes can result in reduced maintenance cost and time."

Begin your Xeriscape design by making a list of what you want and need for your garden, and a budget. "Hardscape" features, such as gravel or decks, may cost a bit more initially, but they will never require water.

Or perhaps you want more water around your home

Would you like to spend a little less time getting your hands dirty this summer, but still enjoy the pleasures of gardening? Then consider building a water pond, a creative alternative to the "average" garden

The water garden is really nothing more than a manmade pond with a liner to contain the water, a pump to circulate it, and a filter to aid in keeping it clean and clear.

A small goldfish pond can be built in about a half-day and cost under $300, while a larger garden with a waterfall may take an entire weekend to complete.

"Water gardens are the hottest landscape item on the market," said Glenn Preston, a Home Depot associate who helps customers design them. "Whether you live in a condo or own 30 acres of land, you can build a water garden to your specific taste."

Water gardens have become a great source of relaxation and a fun hobby as homeowners discover the rewards of building their own pond, Preston said. Here is his checklist for building a water garden:

Choose a site with at least four hours of sunlight, preferably in the morning because mid-day rays encourage algae growth. Select a level spot, protected from water runoff which may contain fertilizers or herbicides.

First draw your design on paper and then lay it out on the ground, using a garden hose to decide upon the shape. You'll need to measure it so you can purchase the right size liner. Don't forget to have your utilities marked before you dig so that you don't disturb buried power lines in the process.

Begin with the deepest point. A standard depth is 18 inches, but if you add fish, you will need to dig down two to three feet. The bottom of the pond should be flat, so make sure it is level. Remove all rocks, cut back roots in the basin and add about two inches of sand before putting the liner in place.

Drape the liner in the hole and anchor the edges with weights to preserve its position and form. Use native stone, boulders or discarded brick to finish the edges. Fill the pond with water to just below ground level.

Ponds without pumps generally require more care and upkeep. You may not need a pump if you keep the algae growth and ammonia levels in check and maintain a balance between oxygenating plants and have a minimal number of fish.

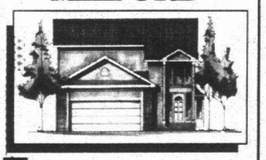

A pump will keep the water circulating and therefore will cut down on constant up- keep. For a distinctive touch, try connecting a fountain or waterfall to the pump.

The filter is used to collect decaying organic matter. To assure complete filtration, locate the pump and filter at one end of the pond, then run discharge tubing to the opposite end. This will ensure that the entire pond is thoroughly filtered, Preston said.

Add one bunch of submerged plants for every one to two square feet of pond surface. Plant lilies in containers and set them on submerged bricks.

Japanese ornamental fish known as koi have become popular in water gardens, but many pond owners are content with stocking only gold fish. Plan on one inch of fish per foot of pond surface.

The Abbot	#10-075
Living Area	1646 sq.ft.
Outside Dimensions	64'x 32'

4-bedroom home is designed for large family on tight budget

Decorative shutters and a clapboard exterior give a nostalgic flavor to the Abbot, a compact four-bedroom, three-bathroom home designed to suit the needs of a large family on a tight budget. The small front porch, spiced with a dash of gingerbread trim, adds to the old-fashioned flavor. And there's even room enough for a porch swing.

A tiny powder room just inside the front door is convenient for young children dashing in from play. Living room and dining room flow together, with just a suggestion of separation. A fireplace warms the living room, and a glass door in the dining room opens onto a railed deck.

Both the dining room and living room have kitchen access. Leaving the doors open creates an informal traffic flow. But it's equally handy to be able to close off the kitchen during formal gatherings, to conceal the aftermath of meal preparation or muffle the clatter of clean-up activities. Kitchen conveniences include plenty of cupboard and counter space, built-in dishwasher, range and oven, a broom closet, and garage access.

Utilities and children's bedrooms are upstairs. The three bedrooms share an oversized bathroom with double vanity, linen closet and a combination tub and shower. For more privacy, a pocket door could be installed in the partial wall between the basins and the toilet.

Adult sleeping quarters are on the main level, in a separate wing to the left of the Abbot's family living area. Luxury amenities include a roomy walk-in closet and a glass-enclosed, oversized shower.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Abbot 10-075 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Simple garden architecture will enhance the flowering

By Town & Country Magazine For AP Special Features

All does not come up roses in the new country gardens of the '90s .

But the savviest of the new plant people, Anthony Barzilay Freund wrote in an article in the current issue of Town & Country, are taking their lead from America's original gentleman farmer, Thomas Jefferson, who loved the grape arbors he designed at Monticello almost as much as his octagonal dome. They are turning to garden architecture for help.

Simple structures such as pergolas, tuteurs (a stake for plants) and latticework trellises can create beautiful frames for garden areas that will flesh out into "rooms" as plants and flowers mature. Requiring no pruning or watering, garden architecture can be as basic as a ready-made fence from a local nursery or as elaborate as the rustic burlwood arbor, bridge and tree house for a rambling forest garden in Basking Ridge, N.J.

Conceived in the 19th-century Romantic style, the work "looks like it sprang up naturally from the landscape," said Trenton-based Robinson.

A more civilized approach is taken by New York landscape designer Deborah Nevins, who believes structural elements can help make gardens "more socialized places."

"Lately I've been designing a lot because people are more interested in entertaining outdoors and they want shade," she said. "Also these forms give people something to look at in winter."

Used widely, garden architecture can hide a garden's flaws and play up its strong features.

Brian Foster, a Philadelphia landscape designer whose clients include the Winterthur Museum and various Du Ponts, has used free-standing trellises to create the gentlest of barriers, diverting attention from undesirable sights. At the back of small gardens, he has built archways "that look like entrances to another 40 acres," and pyramidal tuteurs for climbing roses that give vertical thrust to immature plant beds.

■ 'An exquisite garden with terracing and trellises bordering the pool can help an ordinary house achieve an extraordinary price.'

When it comes to choosing an architectural style for garden structures, most landscape designers recommend picking up on the vocabulary of the house. Nevins designed prim, white wooden trellises to complement David Geffen's Cape Cod house in Malibu. She works in metal when she wants the structure to disappear beneath flowering vines. Foster uses both materials and believes "the architecture looks elegant showing through the greenery."

The cost ranges from less than $200 for a ready-made tuteur to $40,000 to $50,000 for a custom-built pergola. But it is an investment that pays off.

According to East Hampton realtor Peter Halock of Allan M. Schneider Associates:

"An exquisite garden with terracing and trellises bordering the pool can help an ordinary house achieve an extraordinary price."

It can also lend your property a sense of history it may otherwise lack. For newly built houses in Santa Barbara, interior and garden designer Douglas Bartoli creates gardens in sandstone-columned pergolas, for instance, that serve as "bridges back into time. You get the feeling that his contemporary house has been slipped into an old estate."

These structures serve the same purpose as 18th-century follies, "where people went off and indulged themselves," Bartoli said.

"But," Bartoli says, "now they bring their cellular phones with them."

MEDICAL BRIEFS

TB clinic

The Oakwood Healthcare System, in collaboration with the Wayne County Health Department, has opened a new tuberculosis clinic to better serve the community. The Oakwood TB clinic will provide tuberculosis screening and/or treatment by physicians and nurses who are experts in providing care for patients with TB.

Tuberculosis is caused by bacteria spread through the air when a person with active TB coughs; it can be cured with proper treatment. A simple skin test is the only way to tell if you have ever been exposed to TB. This test is usually done on the arm, and in two to three days, a health care professional will check to detect a reaction to the test.

If the test is "positive," further evaluation is necessary to determine whether treatment is needed. All patients receive counseling and education.

The clinic has a special ventilation system and an onsite X-ray, pharmacy and lab. It is staffed by four board-certified infectious disease physicians who provide a wide range of clinical services. The clinic is located at 2345 Merriman, one block north of Michigan Avenue in Westland.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, 8 a.m. to noon Friday. For information about the Oakwood TB clinic, call (313) 467-2412.

Swimming safety

In an effort to reduce the number of drownings and water-related injuries and save lives this summer, the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross strongly urges people to learn to swim and to be safe in, on and around the water when in home pools, at the lake, or enjoying a multitude of water sports.

Drowning is the second leading cause of death from unintentional injuries for youth ages 5-24, according to the National Safety Council's 1996 Accident Facts Report.

Urging people to learn water safety is part of the Red Cross launch of "Save-A-Life Summer," an educational and interactive initiative designed to reach out to families in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties with important messages about saving lives through learning how to perform CPR and first aid, how to be safe in the water and other lifesaving information.

American Red Cross "Water Safety Tips" highlight the need to know your swimming limits, how to avoid a back and neck injury when diving into the water, and signs to look for indicating an emergency.

Drownings can occur in home pools, community pools, lakes, water parks, bathtubs or even large buckets.

To enroll in a swimming class, contact the Southeastern Michigan Chapter at (313) 546-4101.

Diving accidents

With warmer weather, more people are heading to beaches, lakes and pools to cool off. Unfortunately, if they don't practice a little common sense and safety, they could also be headed toward the emergency room.

"Last year, Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan had an increased number of serious water accidents resulting in paraplegia and quadriplegia. During the summer of 1996, we treated a number of patients who sustained spinal cord injuries from jet skiing, tubing, diving and boating accidents," said Patti deBear, service line administrator, RIM's Spinal Cord Injury Unit. RIM is part of The Detroit Medical Center.

Diving accidents are the No. 1 cause of sports-related spinal cord injuries. Diving accidents usually result in serious injuries – more than 95 percent of the victims who hit their head on the bottom become quadriplegics. The average age of those sustaining a spinal cord injury is between 16 and 30.

Tips help users navigate when links don't work

EMORY DANIELS
O&E ONLINE

Today might be well-spent with a few tips, some of which have been offered months ago and others which are new.

The first is a standard procedure to follow when the Universal Resource Locator (URL) you type in does not work. First, of course, check for typos and make sure your "caps lock" key is not on.

Then chop off the very last element of the address on the right side and try it again. For example, a recent column had the wrong URL for a Web site on the Oklahoma bombing trial. The URL given was http://denver.digitalcity.com/bombing/courtroom.htm. If you start on the right and delete "courtroom" and cut and paste the balance of the address into the "open site" dialogue box, you'll connect to the site.

If that hadn't worked, though, you could delete the next right-hand element ("bombing/") and you'd be left with denver.digitalcity.com which would take you to the home page of the site. Likely, links from the home page will take you where you want so you end up starting from the beginning and working back to where you wanted to go.

Other suggestions

A couple other suggestions. If the ending extension is .htm, try the URL again only substitute .html. If the Web site was created on a PC with Windows, the .htm likely is correct. But it could also be a typo. Some addresses have an ending / but try removing the slash when trouble-shooting.

At the other end, if denver.digitalcity.com didn't work, try adding www. at the beginning. There's a real mixed use out there; many use www and many don't.

Looking at the domain also is worthwhile. The URL "umich.com" for instance would correctly be changed to "umich.edu." Likewise, "oeonline.org" would be correctly used as "oeonline.com." There's a new class of domains coming out in order to expand the number of E-mail addresses and URLs, so become familiar with the new ones. Some URLs will change because the creator changed domains. This is a tip for the future.

One thing to remember when sending E-mail is that the Internet primarily is still run on a Unix platform and most documents are text. When you create an E-mail message in a commercial format, such as Word or Word Perfect, change the copy to text before sending it to anyone else.

In your word processor environment, do a "save as" and look for the dialogue that specifies the type of file. Look for "text," "ASCII Text," "DOS text" or something similar. Then save. The formatted copy will be saved as a text file and can be read by any E-mail software on the Net.

Cut and paste

I prefer to cut and paste and enter my copy in the "message" area of my E-mail correspondence. This is easy for sender and receiver alike. Some users like to send copy as an attachment. This is fine as long as the attached copy is in text format, but sometimes requires the sender to take one or two extra steps to access the attachment. As a courtesy, make it as simple as possible. In any event, don't send the attachment as a Word or Word Perfect file.

For privacy reasons, some people encrypt their E-mail but I would not recommend doing that unless you first warn the receiver you plan on doing that. The sender and receiver can then assure themselves that each has the correct privacy software available to decrypt. And remember, unless there is a compelling reason for the receiver to go through a loop or two to decode your message he likely will hit the delete key instead.

Finally, exercise care when typing the address. It's true that if you send an E-mail message you can be assured that it has been delivered if it doesn't bounce back to you. But that assumes you typed the correct address. Most E-mail software, including Eudora, has an "outbox" or directory of sent mail you can check if you suspect non-delivery. Open the outbox, find the message, open it and check the address.

The outbox also provides a file of messages you sent. For housekeeping reasons, though, you will want to access this file occasionally and delete messages of no possible future use.

Most E-mail programs, including Eudora, also allow you to create special file folders to store messages by topic. Create folders like "personal," "hold," "Internet tips," "listserv name," etc. Then when a message in the index is highlighted, go to "transfer" on the menu bar and select the appropriate folder and the message automatically is transferred there. Users with old PCs like myself, with limited hard-drives, must remember that whether a message is in a folder or on the index is still resides on your hard-drive so use the delete key frequently.

Emory Daniels may be reached via E-mail at emory@oeonline.com. Past columns may be accessed at http://observer-eccentric.com/main/emoryd/archive.html.

He found a $185,000 condo in the trash.

Patricia Shea, vice president of Rock Homes is used to having people learn about Shire of Hamlet Village Condominiums from relatives, friends or from people who drive by and stop in.

She also gets great response to her advertisements in our New Homes section. But in her 16 years in the business, she's never had someone discover one of her developments in the trash.

But there it was, crumpled up in the waste basket at the YMCA.

Our newspaper.

With a feature story about Rock Homes.

Someone had enjoyed their hometown news and then put it in the right place at the right time to be discovered by a gentleman headed for the steam room and looking for something to read while there.

He found and bought just what he and his wife had spent months looking for—a condo at Shire of Hamlet Village.

Is there a message hidden here? Could be.

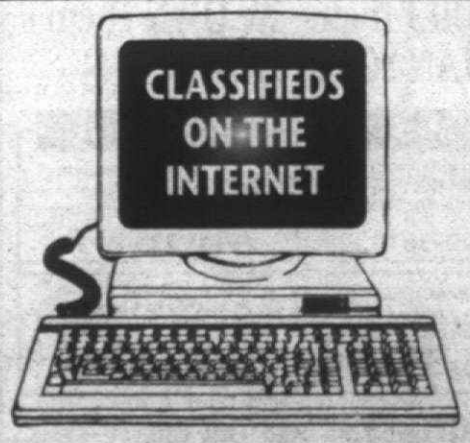

Perhaps it's that you never know where you'll find what you've been searching for.

Or maybe it's not that cosmic. Maybe it's that you will save yourself a lot of looking when you have your hometown newspaper delivered right to your doorstep.

Banks look for sales skills when hiring

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Whatever happened to the sedate world of banking? A far cry from the time when banks had what one bank executive termed "a gentleman's agreement" not to go after one another's depositors, banking today is a fiercely competitive industry.

"Banks used to wait for customers to walk in," says David Furman, a senior human resources executive with First Union Corporation, a banking company with $137 billion in assets and branches in 12 states (including Georgia) and the District of Columbia. "Today," says Furman, "banks are far more proactive about going out and prospecting for customers."

Christine Omero Freenor, retail banking employment manager for the State of California for Wells Fargo Bank, agrees. "Customers need to be pursued and they need to be kept," says Freenor.

That's where customer service and sale skills come in. Both have become high priorities for bank recruiters when hiring. For teller positions, for example, Waltraud Owen, and regional manager in Northern Virginia for Central Fidelity Bank, says, "We used to look for someone who had some cash handling experience. Now, we've instituted an assessment, a great portion of which focuses on measuring sales and service abilities. Now, rather than cash handling experience, we look for retail sales experience."

For what Furman calls the "platform" side of the business, sales skills have also become a top priority. "The banking professional of the future, is going to be a salesperson in very much the same sense as someone who sells insurance or stocks," says Furman. "In fact, we've hired people with backgrounds in the brokerage and life insurance businesses. We've also hired people who have been successful selling cars and office equipment. What we're looking for are people who have a love of the sale, who like to go out and prospect and meet customers' needs. Sales skills are what's important. We can train people on the products we sell."

Freenor says a strong sales and business development orientation is extremely important for those hired to work in Wells Fargo's "in store" branches located in supermarkets. "There's a whole educational process required to help customers understand what's available in those locations," says Freenor. "Someone working in those branches needs to be proactive. They need to be able to walk up to customers and break the ice."

The role of the branch manager in traditional banking locations has also changed to reflect today's accent on sales. Branch managers are more like sales coaches today, say Owen and Furman. "The sales coaching piece of their role is a bigger part of their annual evaluation," says Owen.

"The branch manager of the future won't have to worry as much about the operational side of the business," adds Furman. In fact, at First Union, the focus on sales for managers is being built into the organizational structure. "First Union is redesigning its organizational structure to enable managers to focus on sales," explains Furman. "We'll have a sales coach who oversees a sales team including several branch managers and their sales teams." To keep the transaction side of the business running smoothly, Furman says area operations managers will be designated. Each will be responsible for several teller leaders, who will in turn, each be responsible for tellers at multiple branches.

First Union has even changed the way it compensates employees with sales responsibilities. "All line positions have an incentive component," says Furman. "You're rewarded for your production. Some people find that scary. Others thrive on it. We're looking for those who thrive on it." Freenor says Wells Fargo also offers employees with sales responsibilities "a base plus type salary package that provides the opportunity to earn incentive compensation."

Despite all the changes taking place in banking, some important traditions have stayed the same. one is the accessibility of bank careers to those without college degrees. "For sales positions, we'll trade a college degree for a successful track record in sales," says Furman. "And although most of our branch managers probably have college degrees, you won't find positions, even at the management level, that require a college degree."

Owen concurs. "A college degree is not a requirement although some college is preferred for management hires," she says.

International promotion also remains a strong tradition. "We still promote from within," says Owen. The same holds true at Wells Fargo. Furman says at First Union, about 50 percent of promotions continue to be filled internally.

WORKING LIFE: Looking Your Best As the New Kid On the Block

By Deborah L. Jacobs
Chronicle Features

No matter how well you know your field, starting work at a new company can leave you feeling green. You don't fully understand the culture. You're not familiar with the players. You have no allies to warm you about inevitable pitfalls.

Many folks figure the safest bet is to take a back seat. But while you're busy checking out your new colleagues from this vantage point, they're sizing you up. Their first response may be that you're too passive--not the dynamo they expected--and someone to push around.

Here are some ways to make the best impression when you're the new kid on the block.

•Do advance work. After giving notice at one job, many people take a vacation before starting the next. Hard-earned and necessary as such breaks may be, this is also a good time to prepare for what's ahead. Have lunch with your new bosses, sit in on a few meetings, and read whatever you can about the work you'll be doing.

Unless you're stepping into a new slot, you'll also want to talk with your predecessor. Ideally, you contacted this person before accepting the offer.

Either way, your concerns now run deeper. You'll want to know which coworkers are likely to be helpful or hurtful; how to get off to a good start with your new boss; and what might differ on your watch. Tactful, but open-ended questions you can ask: Who are the people I should get to know right away? Would you describe the boss as a hands-on or hands-off manager?

•Make yourself visible. Once you're on board, begin building relationships with coworkers in your own department and in other parts of the organization. The best starting point is to meet with people one at a time and ask about their work. Many individuals are happy to offer advice.

Instead of hiding behind your desk, circulate. Observe how people interact with each other, their good and bad times of the day, and who they eat lunch with. Pay attention to who the boss seems to like and how that person operates. Listen to what everyone says, but don't get sucked into office politics.

Speak up at meetings, even if it's only to ask questions. If a query comes your way and you don't know the answer, promise to look into it and respond promptly.

•Be sensitive to work styles. People have different ways of giving--and taking--directions. One boss might like frequent updates to be sure you're on schedule with a project, while another just assumes you'll deliver it on time. Some subordinates appreciate detailed directions about how to tackle an assignment, while others find the same suggestions mediesome.

Rather than using trial and error, or imposing your own style on someone else, it's best to ask, says Debra Benton, author of the book, "How to Think Like a CEO" (Warner Books). Sample language: "I try to be aware of peoples' preferences, and over time I'll get to know yours. For the moment, can you tell me whether you'd rather I write a lengthy report, or summarize my research in a brief memo with bullet points?"

•Don't be a pushover. When people are overworked or unhappy, they sometimes try to take advantage of newcomers. They may hand off work they're supposed to do themselves, withhold information, or blame you for others' mistakes.

Should that happen, it's important to pleasantly and firmly stand your ground.Not taking action--even just this once--makes you seem weak and invites similar problems in the future.

Working hard? You're not home alone

By Alice Bredin
Tribune Media

The night before my husband and I moved back to New York, our neighbors asked us over for dinner. We didn't know them well and were touched that they wanted to share our last evening in the neighborhood. As it turned out, they are starting a home-based business and wanted to pick my brain about how to set up a home office.

On the way to our new home, we stopped overnight with my in-laws. We stayed in my brother-in-law's spare room, which doubles as a home office. Over dinner, my other brother-in-law was talking about wanting to strike out on his own in a home-based business.

The next day, we moved to our new apartment in New York City. As we moved in, we learned that four of the five apartments in our building have home offices. We set up the apartment quickly because I had to fly to California to speak at Work at Home Day, an event that honors the 34 percent of Californians who complete some work in a home office.

This story is anecdotal evidence of the prevalence of home offices. In case you ever feel like you are the only one working at home, you can remember these examples and consider the following statistics.

According to IDC/Link's 1996 Work-at-Home Study, 43 million people did some work in home offices during 1996. These people set up their home offices in approximately 30 office. It also means that many households have more than one peron working at home.

The workers in these offices fall into the following groups: primary self-employed, 13.1 million; part-time self employed, 11.7 million; telecommuters (who work at home for a corporate boss), 7.1 million, and after-hours home offices, 11.1 million.

Wondering what kind of people work at home? The average home-worker is 40.2 years old; 56.7 percent of all homeworkers are between the ages of 30 and 49. More than 65 percent of work-at-homers are married, and the group is well-educated: 25 percent have college degrees and 19 percent have graduate degrees and 19 percent have graduate degrees. This compares to 17.9 percent and 8.8 percent respectively of the non-homeworker population.

The number of home-based businesses in this country will increase dramatically in coming years. Baby Boomers are dissatisfied with traditional office jobs and many of retirees are looking for ways to supplement income. in a recent Gallup poll, 80 percent of college seniors nationwide said they want to be entrepreneurs after graduation. For many people, a home office will provide an affordable and convenient headquarters.

Downsizing also contributes to the establishment of home-based businesses. For example, Novell, the networking software company, recently announced the layoff of 1,000 people. Many of these people, I am sure, have the skills, connections and resources to set up a home-based business.

Improvements in technology, specifically the Internet and phone services, make the home a viable office location. As the number of home-based businesses increases, the stigma against working with home-based professionals has diminished rapidly and is now rarely an impediment to business. Family responsibilities including child- and elder-care will also encourage entrepreneurs to operate at home.

Telecommuting - working at home for a corporate boss - is the fastest growing segment of the home office market. Management is realizing that at least some home-based work enable workers to manage their workload and their personal demands.

Technology is making these changes possible. According to a recent article in Inc. magazine, telecommuters receive more and faster promotions than their counterparts who report to the office every day.

Job anxiety creates a cycle of failure

By Lindsey Novak
Tribune Media

Q: I'm a welfare recipient who, more than anything, wants to be a contributing member of society by getting a job. Although I have a bachelor's degree in journalism, I feel stupid and incompetent when I work. I get so nervous it affects my concentration and I end up doing a poor job.

I've gotten fired from every job I've had. Now that I'm able to work again, the last thing I want to do is start this cycle of failure. I have tried relaxation technique, meditation and even prayer, but nothing works.

My fear is immobilizing me, but no one - counselors, psychiatrists and family members - takes me seriously. I feel as if no one else has this problem, but I'm desperate to start on the road to self-sufficiency.

A: You are not alone - many people suffer from anxiety problems that can interfere with daily living. It sounds like you are not receiving the help you need.

According to Marlene Lorenz, psychotherapist at the Anxiety and Agoraphobia Treatment Center (located in Northbrook, Ill. and Kenosaha, Wis.), people with this type of problem feel they are always being negatively evaluated. A cognitive-behavioral approach has resulted in greater success with anxiety disorders than more traditional psychotherapy.

Cognitive therapy would help you evaluate your perceptions of your abilities and your beliefs about how others see you. For the behavioral part of the therapy, you would be encouraged to get a job and remain in therapy so the therapist could coach you during employment. To accomplish the behavioral change, you must go into the situation that causes anxiety; the coaching is crucial, to make sure the cycle does not repeat itself.

Your letter shows you are aware of your problem and, without that, a person cannot move forward. Your next step is to connect with the right type of therapist, who can give you the support you need. For a referral to a therapist in your area, call the Anxiety Disorders Association of America at (301) 231-9350; or write to them at 11900 Parklawn Drive, Suite 100, Rockville, Md. 20852-2624.

DANGEROUS SUPERVISOR IS COMPANY'S RESPONSIBILITY

Q: I'm an elderly union worker who does physical labor. The only other employee present is a nonunion employee. He writes down everything I do and turns in a report to the boss the next day. He complained that I take too long to complete one of the tasks. He treated me so badly that I brought him to court for menacing and the judge gave him six months deferred prosecution. Seven months later, he drove the company's pickup truck toward me at a high speed and then swerved away, but the truck hit my foot. I had to drive myself to the hospital immediately. The company did not discipline him at all. He caused me so much trouble, the company installed a camera behind me to watch me work. We will be going to court soon because of the truck incident, but all of this harassment has raised my blood pressure and devastated me. I now hate going to work with him there and my union won't do anything.

A: Many people think unions are the answer to all problems, but I've received many letters from union workers who say their unions don't back them when they need it.

The newly installed camera may be your only protection, as this man sounds sick and dangerous. It's good that you pressed criminal charges and followed through on it. Companies are responsible for their employees who act as supervisors, so you should consider consulting a lawyer to see if you have a possible age discrimination suit against the company.

part-time 4-wheel-drive system, and Selec Trac, the full-time 4WD system. The transmission parts, by the way, are from Japan, making this vehicle 76 percent U.S./Canadian parts content.

The base price of the Cherokee is $16,815. By the time all the good stuff was added to the test Cherokee, however, the price jumped to $22,580. And it still didn't have power windows, remote mirrors or power door locks.

What it did have was Command Trac (that means it's shift-on-the-fly, by the way), power steering, power brakes, a 20.2-gallon fuel tank, front and rear stabilizer bars, reclining front bucket seats, tinted glass and cargo tie-down loops.

The optional equipment list includes highback bucket seats, rear wiper/washer (an absolute must), skid plates, tow hooks, remote mirrors, offhighway suspension, anti-lock brakes, floor mats, an automatic transmission (this should be standard), rear window defroster, air conditioning, speed control (mounted on the steering wheel), leather wrapped tilt steering wheel and the 6-cylinder engine.

The Cherokee would be best served with one improvement: A new design for its seat belts. It has what look like adjustable seat-belt straps. I adjusted mine all the way down and it wasn't enough. The shoulder belt clipped me at my neck, which was annoying, to say the least.

The Jeep Cherokee, with its smart and classic styling, is one compact sport utility to take a gander at. The price is reasonable, it's a comfortable ride and it's all Jeep.

No hidden charges or ugly surprises? Are you sure this is a lease?

When you walk into a Saturn retailer and say you're interested in a lease, a funny thing happens: we explain every agreement, disclosure, item and sub-item to you. That way, you'll know exactly what you're getting. A low monthly payment. A low down payment. Plenty of mileage each year. And, oh, we almost forgot, a great car too.
