Life Time wins final approval

■ Canton Township Trustees voted 6-0 Tuesday for site plan approval of a $16.5 million health and fitness center on Haggerty Road. It will be built adjacent to a new hotel.

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

Developers of a Life Time Fitness facility proposed for Ford Road south of Haggerty received their final go-ahead from the township's board of trustees Tuesday.

Trustees approved the final site plan 6-0 with Supervisor Tom Yack absent.

The $16.5 million, 108,890-square-foot building will sit on 11.2 acres on the east side of Haggerty just south of Ford. Facilities will include indoor and outdoor swimming pools, a gymnasium, simulated rock climbing, cardiovascular fitness center, a child-care center, hair salon, tanning, a cafe and family locker rooms.

Tentative hours of operation will be 24 hours a day. Patrons will pay a one-time membership fee then month-to-month fees thereafter.

Life Time will be adjacent to an Extended Stay America hotel on a 26-acre parcel.

The site plan approval for Life Time was contingent upon the board also approving rezoning the property from interchange service district to regional commercial district. Trustees approved the measure 6-0.

Your vote counts, actor tells students

Sign here: Actor Richard Dreyfuss walks back to a news conference after signing autographs for students in the Salem auditorium.

"America is the greatest country that ever existed. Don't blow it."

Those were words of wisdom from actor Richard Dreyfuss, who took time from stumping metro Detroit for Democratic presidential nominee Al Gore, to address nearly 800 students in the Salem High School auditorium Wednesday afternoon.

Dreyfuss mostly kept his political opinions to himself, choosing instead to tell seniors, government class students and band members the importance of taking part in the political process.

"If you don't vote, if you don't think voting is the core, primary important political act of your life, you are deluded," said Dreyfuss. "If you think you can be a member of the citizenry of this country without voting, and escape the consequences, you are nuts."

Dreyfuss admitted that most young people have a profound cynicism about the political process.

"I bet an overwhelming majority of you think our politicians are corrupt, our institutions decayed, ineffective, useless and are destructive to your personal, ethical, moral character," he said. "And, you wouldn't be wrong."

Then the actor most students know from his characters in the movies Jaws, Mr. Holland's Opus, and What About Bob?, talked about the importance of the voting booth.

"By not voting, you hand over to your worst nightmare all the power that exists," Dreyfuss told students. "The corporations that make decisions, the government policies, the bureaucrats, the others that are more organized, are

SPRAWL AFFECTS US ALL

STREADING OUTWARD

Growth... when just a few more people take up a lot more land it's often called sprawl. That's what's happening around us in southeast Michigan. Today, we look at a few of the ways sprawl affects us all.

Population explodes into new century

BY DOUG FUNKE

Open spaces, a steady population growth regionally after a boom in Detroit from 1900-1930 and the trend toward more independence for younger and older people set the stage for expansion of the suburbs here.

That's how the top numbers guy at a regional planning agency sees it.

You have to have somewhere to go – available land – before you can go, said James B. Rogers, manager of the data center for the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

And there was plenty west of Detroit's riverfront for future subdivision and migration, not unlike settlement throughout American history.

Two other factors contributed to suburban growth. Detroit became a manufacturing center and folks came to value an independent lifestyle more than multigenerational living arrangements.

Figures provided by SEMCOG indicate that the city of Detroit's population rocketed from 286,000 in 1900 to 1.6 million in 1930.

"There was significant migration both from the rural Midwest ... from the rural South ... and significant immigration from Europe on top of natural increase," Rogers said.

As recent as 1940, SEMCOG reported, Canton, Garden City and Plymouth Townships all had populations under 5,000, Farmington Hills, Redford Township and Plymouth Township all under 9,000.

While Detroit's population peaked at 1.8 million with the 1950 census and declined to an estimated 965,000 now, according to SEMCOG, the numbers continue to grow in the seven-county area of southeastern Michigan that includes Wayne and Oakland.

The regional population has sprouted from 4.4 million in 1965 to an estimated 4.9 million now, SEMCOG reported.

"There is (still) a real growth," said Rogers. "That is happening, not just a redistribution of people.

"Households are getting a lot smaller," he added. "Many more households are being formed. Many more housing units are going up to Higher student count boosts district cash

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

An increase in enrollment this year will mean an additional $826,000 to the Plymouth-Canton school district.

Plymouth-Canton Schools, the seventh-largest school district in the state, reports an increase of 127 students, compared to last year's official student count.

For each student in the district, the state gives Plymouth-Canton a foundation grant of $6,505.

The final numbers show most of the district's growth is in the middle schools, where there are 92 more students than last year.

The largest of the middle schools is Discovery, which houses 810 students. Central Middle School is at 795, with East Middle School at 793.

The biggest increase in middle school students is at East, where there are 71 more students than last year.

There are 53 more students at the high school complex this year, while the elementary grades show a decrease of 18 students.

Eight of the elementary schools showed decreases in student population, led by Gallimore with a loss of 45 students. Miller showed the most growth, with an increase of 57 students.

Four of the 14 elementary schools have student populations of more than 600 students, and all are in Canton. They are Hulsing with 663 students, Bentley with 660, Miller at 610 and Field with 606 students.

Total enrollment in the Plymouth-Canton School District is 16,403 students.

Walsh offers alternative view in state Rep. race

■ 21ST HOUSE DISTRICT

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER

Mickey Walsh concedes he has an uphill battle in trying to unseat a popular, well-respected Republican for a seat in the state House of Representatives this fall.

Mickey Walsh

But it's battle worth fighting, the Canton Democrat said last week.

"What I bring to the dance is 43 years of working with people to help them better themselves. I've always been a champion of the underdog and I think that by getting involved with people and issues at the state level I'll be able to continue that," Wash said.

Election 2000

Walsh will oppose state Rep. Bruce Patterson, R-Canton, on Nov. 7. Patterson is seeking his second term in the House. The 21st state House District includes most of Canton, Sumpter and Van Buren townships, and the city of Belleville.

The 62-year-old retired UAW official characterizes himself as a "moderate, centrist Democrat." He said while he

The planning commission approved the site plan 6-0 in September. The measure received little public comment, except for one resident asking about whether a traffic signal would be installed. Another resident said he supported the facility.

The building's most prominent architectural feature will be the 45-foot glass atrium surrounding the lobby area. Canton's Zoning Board of Appeals granted a variance allowing the atrium to exceed 38 feet, the maximum height allowed under the zoning ordinance.

Bill Doerr, project architect, said previously that the atrium allow natural light to come into the club.

Petitioner Frank Jonna said 7.91 acres of the parcel are designated as wetlands and will need to be mitigated, or replaced, if built upon.

"Everything is mitigated on site," Jonna said. "We are ready to commence work on mitigation immediately."

Project representative Bryan Amann said Life Time will tentatively be ready to sign up members by next March. Construction should be completed by late next summer, he added.

Aaron Machnik, municipal services director, said Life Time, which also has facilities in Novi and Shelby Township, would be a good fit for Canton.

"(Life Time) provides a venue for what we think the folks in the community would find a great deal of usefulness for," Machnik said.

WSDP publishes newsletter

The second edition of WSDP's alumni newsletter, Spreading the Airwaves, is now available.

WSDP-FM 88.1 is the student radio station at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

The newsletter was created to strengthen the relationship between the station and it's former staff members. The new edition features photos from the station's archives, an alumni profile, WSDP's broadcast schedule, and much more. It was mailed this week to alumni throughout the country.

"The success of our 25th anniversary reunion planted the idea of creating a newsletter," said Bill Keith, station manager, "It has been exciting hearing from former staff members since the first issue came out last spring.

The newsletter's design and layout was created by Mike Piontek and a company, Tense Forms. Piontek is a former WSDP Staff member.

You can receive a copy by calling the station at (734) 416-7732 or by e-mailing Keith at keithb@pccs.k12.mi.us.

WSDP is owned and operated by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. The station has been serving the community since Feb. 14, 1972.

laughing at you who don't vote.

"Going into the voting booth is a more powerful act, and more responsible act, that you can imagine," he emphasized. "Continue not to vote and watch the worsening of America."

The group applauded when Dreyfuss said he was a liberal Democrat, the only reference to his own political preferences in the hour he spent addressing students, answering questions and signing autographs.

"He motivated me to go out and vote when I turn 18," said Chris Miltz, a senior from Canton Township. "His message made me feel like I'm really a part of the community."

"I thought he was really inspirational," added Lauren Morelli, 17, from Canton. "It's not every day a star is willing to talk to kids and tell us his passion on how important it is to get out and vote."

Dreyfuss began his speech by talking about the importance of the arts to a community.

"You can't come out of high school with anything like a well-rounded education unless you have the arts," said Dreyfuss. "You can have science and math and all sorts of core subjects. But, unless you have music and drama, you will be lacking something in the imagination. These programs aren't glib and extraneous, they are necessary to our heart."

Megan Kohn, a 17-year-old senior from Canton, agreed with Dreyfuss.

"I think he was influential, how they need more support and more money for the arts," she said. "Personally, I love the arts and they are important."

In answering questions from students, Dreyfuss revealed:

- "The entire voting process should be aimed more at young people. You have to pay attention, you've got to have all the opinions, you have to know the issues and then you've got to get in there."
- When asked about vouchers, Dreyfuss received loud applause after commenting, "Any program that takes money out of the (public) school system's budget and puts it towards private schools ... I have a problem with not being against."
- "I was nine years old and sitting at the kitchen table when I told my mother I wanted to be an actor. She said 'don't just talk about it.' I went down the street and auditioned for a play."
- "I'm for trebling teacher's salaries. I think teachers are given the shaft in this country. They should be paid high enough so they can attract a totally professional level of people."
- "Jaws was the first film ever shot in real water ... it was shot without a shark that worked, without a script, and without a full cast. It changed all of our lives, and is still a great film."
- His philosophy on life. "I subscribe to the 'or not' philosophy. There is only one God, or not. I believe there is a master plan for all of us, or not."

SPOTLIGHT ON YOUR PET Veterinary Notes
by Elizabeth Routson, D.V.M.

FELINE INFECTIOUS PERITONITIS (FIP)

Feline infectious peritonitis (FIP) develops from the coronavirus that invades and grows in a cat's white blood cells. Infected cells produce severe inflammation in nearby tissues, causing the disease. Most cats become infected by inhaling or ingesting the virus via direct contact with an infected cat or contaminated surface. After initial exposure to the FIP virus, most cats recover completely while some develop the lethal disease. Effusive (wet) FIP causes fluid to accumulate in the cat's abdomen and/or chest, making breathing difficult. Non-effusive (dry) FIP involves less fluid accumulation and develops more slowly. The cat commonly suffers weight loss, depression, fever, and anemia. Other symptoms can include increased thirst, jaundice, vomiting, diarrhea, paralysis, seizures, or blindness.

Not forgotten

Canton resident touched many during five-year battle

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

Greg Unger, 20, of Canton, endured more before he was 16 than most people endure during their entire lives.

He had two lung transplants, suffered cystic fibrosis, took 20 anti-rejection pills daily and fought a nearly constant battle to just live life as a normal kid, according to family and friends.

Unger died Wednesday, Oct. 4 at University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor. His visitation and funeral at McCabe Funeral drew roughly 360 mourners.

His mother, Barb Unger, said Greg went to a St. Louis hospital in late August for a routine check-up. The checkup showed he not only had signs of organ rejection but an infection as well.

"He hadn't had any rejection for four years," she said.

Doctors prescribed steroid pills to fight the infection. Unfortunately, those pills also suppressed his already compromised immune system.

"The infection just took hold of him," she said.

Greg seemed to be recovering from the infection when he caught an adenovirus, which causes nothing more severe than a cold in a healthy person. He was put back on a respirator because he was unable to breathe on his own.

"(The virus) proved to be fatal," she said. "The sad thing is he most likely caught it while at the hospital."

Barb Unger said she wants people to remember Greg's positive traits.

"He never made a big deal about his illness," she said. "He just wanted to be one of the guys. He was real goodhearted and kind and friendly. He could socialize with adults as well as with his own peers."

Greg also had a soft spot for animals, even ones many people would just as soon shoo from their yards.

"He loved animals and even fed raccoons," his mother said.

Greg bonded pretty strongly with a stray cat they found shortly before he died. A veterinarian diagnosed the cat, named Bobo, with feline AIDS, a potentially fatal disease which is contagious to other cats.

She said Greg might have identified with the cat's health problems.

"It was a common bond they both had," she said. "I didn't have the heart to turn (Bobo) out."

Greg's brother Kris, 31, said two of Greg's cousins are setting up a Web site, www.gregunger.com to memorialize him. The site will include stories about him and allow visitors to share their own stories, he said.

Greg's sister Jamie, 27, said she still can't believe he's gone.

"It feels like he's still up at the hospital," she said.

Greg was born Aug. 9, 1980 in Livonia. He received his first lung transplant in 1995 then another in 1996, which included two transplanted lobes from his older sister, Jamie and his father, Bill. He graduated from John Glenn High School in 1999.

After high school, Greg attended Schoolcraft College, where he took computer-aided design courses, worked as a host at Damon's The Place for Ribs in Canton and indulged his favorite hobbies, hockey and video games.

Damon's manager Mahua Mandi said Greg was very outgoing and personable.

"He was always striving to be the best at what he did," Mandi said. "He was a great big part of Damon's. His presence will be greatly missed."

Greg was the focus of major fund-raising efforts for his operations and treatment. His family and friends managed to raise nearly $200,000 and spent about half. The remaining funds will be redistributed to other people needing transplants through the Children's Organ Transplant Association. The Bloomington, Ind.-based charity that helps people raise funds for transplant operations.

Capt. Jim Davison of the Canton Fire Department got to know Greg well while organizing fund-raisers for his double lung transplants. Firefighters raised $22,000 through two Detroit Red Wing alumni benefit hockey games.

"Saturday was a sad day," Davison said, recalling the funeral. "We were pretty good buddies."

One of his fondest memories of Greg was of his being photographed with the "Budweiser Girls."

In 1996, when Greg was 15, Damon's hosted a video hockey tournament which pitted Detroit Red Wings Darren McCarty, Kris Draper and Chris Osgood against hockey and video game fans, including Unger, who won the tournament.

When the contest's sponsors asked Greg if there was anything he'd like to say, he said exactly what was on his mind, according to Davison.

"Yeah, could I get a hug from the Budweiser Girls?" Unger asked. His request was granted. The photograph capturing the moment was among several pasted to a board at his funeral Saturday at McCabe Funeral Home.

The photo, featuring a very youthful looking Unger with an older woman created an interesting contrast, Davison said.

"Greg was special. He was like one of us. He made you feel good that you were able to do something good and help out."

Memorials in Greg's name may be made to the Canton Firefighters Charity Foundation, 1100 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, MI 48188. Donations are tax deductible.

Police seek 2 suspects in carjacking early Sunday

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER
dclem@oe.homecomm.net

An Eastpointe man driving to his Westland job narrowly escaped a gunpoint carjacking attempt Saturday morning after his car was hit from behind on Hix Road at Executive Drive, police said.

Two suspects fled the 6:56 a.m. incident in what was described as a white Jeep sport utility vehicle, possibly a Cherokee Sport.

The 38-year-old victim, who works in an industrial park near Hix and Ford, had slowed to turn onto Executive Drive when his 1997 Lincoln Town Car was bumped from behind, police Sgt. Marc Stobbe said.

Suddenly, as the driver started to get out to check for damage, a suspect smashed out his window with a brick and waved a gun, possibly a .38-caliber handgun, inside the Lincoln, a police report said.

"The (victim) put his hands up on the left side of his face to protect himself," the report said.

The victim told police that the gun-toting attacker then yelled for a second suspect, who ran up and reached inside the Lincoln to try to take the driver's keys, police said.

As a struggle ensued, the victim managed to shift his car into drive and pull off, turning onto Executive Drive and leaving the would-be carjackers standing on Hix, police said.

"He just took off," Stobbe said.

The two attackers then fled southbound on Hix in the sport utility vehicle.

The victim sustained only minor scrapes and cuts to his left arm and face. He told police that he believes the suspicious vehicle trailed him southbound on Hix from I-96.

One suspect was described as a black male with a medium complexion, about 5-foot-6 to 5-foot-8. He wore dark clothing.

A second suspect was described only as a black male wearing dark clothing.

Anyone who can provide tips for police is urged to call (734) 722-9600.

Q&A

Q: Why are manholes round?

A: They are round so that their covers cannot be dropped through the manhole itself. Squares, rectangles, ovals and other shapes could be positioned so that they would slip into the manhole. The circular manhole cover rests on a lip that is smaller than the cover itself, thus the size and shape keep the manhole cover from falling into the hole.

Health Exploration Station marks first year

BY EILEEN MCCARVILLE
STAFF WRITER

Kids visiting The Health Exploration Station really get an eyeful. They get an earful, too, and more.

Part of the fun of the one-year-old facility, run by Saint Joseph Mercy Health System in Ann Arbor, is walking through the body parts. Children push buttons and pull levers to access accompanying interactive programs.

"It's designed like the inside of a gigantic human," said Cheryl McInerney, cooridnator of the center. Children walk through a giant rib cage, where they hear their own hearth beat, and meander down a path through the digestive systems, crossing through the stomach and large and small intestines, where they finally exit the body through a giant slide.

The center, located in the Saint Joseph Mercy Canton Health Center, 1600 S. Canton Center Road, celebrated its first anniversary Sept. 28 with tours and refreshments. The 3,500-square-foot center was created as a way to "raise awareness" about how to take care of our bodies, McInerney said.

It includes an interactive exhibit gallery and two classrooms, which accommodate up to 60 students and have teaching modules integrated into the walls. According to information from Saint Joseph, it's the first of its kind in Michigan.

Children also get hands-on experience in other areas like fitness — where they can try a high jump and see how long they can keep their balance — and nutrition. For example, in an exhibit designed to curb nicotine use, a mannequin "lights up and it shows smoking damage to parts of the body." Or, in the infection and sneeze area, it shows "how far" the spray travels from your nose.

Saint Joseph studied similar concepts across the country, including the "body" exhibit in Future World, a portion of Epcot at Walt Disney World in Florida.

ST. JOSEPH MERCY CANTON

"We did focus groups to find out if people wanted it," McInerney said. "The response was overwhelming." Over $1.7 million was raised through corporate and community donations. Though the goal was only $1.5 million, the extra funds made it possible for the station to be open one day a month for the public, McInerney said.

The facility is geared for preschoolers up to high school. Saint Joseph estimates more than 400 groups have visited, representing 34 different school districts, private schools, home schools, preschools and scout troops. Over all, 14,000 students – from Ann Arbor to Detroit to Flint – have marched through the doors since the center's opening.

It's become a favorite destination for field trips. McInerney said they enjoy reading the comments they get from some of the students.

"Our favorite came from this little boy: 'Thanks. I learned about the inside of me.'" It's also rewarding when they hear comments like "I learned not to smoke 'cause my lungs turn black."

The facility may be fun for the younger set, but it's mature enough to hold older students' interest. Even they provide feedback, McInerney said. "Oftentimes we see them come in on a field trip and they say, 'This is going to be dumb.' When they leave, they say, 'You know, that was pretty cool.'"

The station has been so successful, it plans to include programs for adults. Ideas range from "menopause programs; Boys to Men – raising sons today; and heart-to-heart conversations with Mom and Dad," McInerney said.

The Health Exploration Station is open to the public 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. the fourth Thursday of every month. For more information or to schedule a trip for your group, call (734) 398-7518.

EAA moves forward on new facility

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER

Members of the Experimental Aircraft Association's Plymouth-Canton chapter might thrive on taking some chances when they take to the skies.

But when it comes to building a new facility at Mettetal Airport, they say they don't want to take chances. The 100-member association wants to build a facility on a quarter-acre site that would include a hangar, mini museum, workshops for building and restoring planes and areas for hosting educational events.

"We've reached a point where there's just no sense in putting more money into (the old building)," said Al Bosonetto, EAA Chapter 113 president while addressing the Mettetal Airport advisory board last week.

The proposed building will be 5,000 square feet, considerably exceeding the current building's 600-square-foot space.

Don Moore, a member of the EAA's board of directors, said Visteon, a potential donor, is excited about the educational potential of the new building.

"We want to get the community's youth into here," Moore said. Money from Visteon would have to be earmarked for educational purposes, he added.

The Mettetal Airport advisory board last week approved allowing the EAA to continue discussing its building plans with the state of Michigan, which owns the airport, which is at Lilley and Joy.

The EAA has contemplated a new facility for eight years. The association has preliminary plans, $10,000 in the bank and another $10,000 in pledges.

The estimated cost of building will be $75,000 and would cover just materials. EAA members plan to do most of the construction work on the steel pole-barn style building themselves and contract out the rest.

Mettetal Airport advisory board chairman Mark Merlanti said the EAA performing its own labor shouldn't be a problem.

"You'll need to make sure you have proper insurance for your laborers in case they get hurt during construction," Merlanti said.

Members are seeking donations from corporations, including Visteon, which has expressed interest in the new building's educational potential. Some Backyard Eagles have pledged money, and others have offered loans. All donations to the non-profit organization are tax-deductible.

A buy-a-brick program for the new building pledges $1,000 toward the construction from each donor.

The group hasn't yet approached the state for permits or approvals.

EAA Chapter 113 is a member of the international Experimental Aircraft Association, an aviation organization with more than 165,000 members.

Demise of mass transit adds to clogged streets

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

The last streetcar stopped running in Detroit in 1956. A suburban rail system that at one time had been the largest in the country stopped operations in the metro area in 1932.

The streetcar and the rail systems developed along Detroit's "spokes," feeding into the heart of the downtown – east out Gratiot, north up Woodward, northwest up Grand River, west out Michigan Avenue and south down Fort. The city had been designed to grow along these corridors and a system of transportation had developed connecting as far north as Pontiac, west to Ann Arbor and south to Monroe.

Over the years, the automobile and a series of new roads and freeways have taken the place of fixed rail lines. Mass transit is primarily provided by two public bus systems, the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation or SMART and the Detroit Department of Transportation or DDOT.

"From our standpoint, mass transit would be a deterrent to sprawl," said Conan Smith, a policy specialist with Michigan Environmental Council. "One thing we see is when highways are built and they put an exit out in the middle of nowhere, things build up around it. Mass transit helps to slow growth, as we've seen in Portland, which has restrictions on growth, and especially in Washington, D.C., where the subway keeps people living close to the lines. Buses are not quite the same, they're more flexible and they go to where the people are. It's not the same effect."

Hot topic

Mass transit is suddenly a hot topic again in the Detroit area, but what kind of mass transit and who the mass transit system should serve is a matter of debate.

The Southeast Michigan Council Of Governments, a regional planning partnership of local governments, in June released the 2025 Regional Transportation Plan, covering all transportation needs from air service to bike paths. The SEMCOG plan's major emphasis is on road and bridge maintenance and road construction.

Public transportation is also part of the plan but accounts for just 10 percent of proposed capital projects. In addition the plan outlines $24 billion in projected revenue and spending but projects nearly $41 million in need for all forms of regional transportation.

"As we went through the process with the 2025 Regional Transportation Plan, the No. 1 topic of debate was the issue of public transit or the lack of it in the Detroit metro region," said Greg Pitoniak, mayor of Taylor and chairman of the Transportation Advisory Council for SEMCOG.

Paul Tait, executive director of SEMCOG and president of the Metropolitan Affairs Coalition, said developing a mass transit system for southeast Michigan is "an imperative." He said there is a lack of support for mass transit, because there is an inadequate mass transit system.

"What we have here is a chicken-egg problem. SMART and DDOT provide a lot of service for the limited resources they have," he said. "I'm impressed by the service they have. The chicken-egg problem is we don't have reliable, clean, safe service that will demonstrate what transit can be. We have to get ahead of the game."

Transit dependent

SMART operates 250 full-size buses, 100 small buses and 80 shuttle buses that operate in local communities. The service has 50 routes running as far north as Auburn Hills, to the county line in Macomb County, west to Haggerty Road in Livonia and south to Trenton. There is limited coordination of service with DDOT, but this is not seen as a problem by SMART officials.

"Twenty percent of our riders transfer from DDOT, from a passenger standpoint they are in one system. Our policy allows you to transfer between services," said Ron Ristau, director of service development for SMART.

There is also an awareness of each other's schedules to avoid too much overlap in those areas where SMART enters Detroit.

Dan Dirks, SMART general manager, said there is more cooperation between SMART and DDOT than is found in other metro areas with more than one system including Cleveland and Chicago.

Merging the systems would cost an extra $20 million in operating expenses due to higher labor costs, said a recent report by KPMG Peat Marwick. The study was paid for by the Regional Transit Coordinating Council, which governs SMART and DDOT.

For SMART the emphasis is on transportation-dependent riders, especially workers who need regular transportation to a job. "Choice riders," those who prefer taking mass transportation instead of driving, are a secondary consideration.

"What we've tried to do at SMART is service the transit-dependent," said Dirks. "For the transit-dependent we're doing well. We could use more money, absolutely. But we dedicated 25-30 buses to service the transit dependent to get them to jobs."

Ristau said since passage of a transit tax in 1995, SMART has developed a "good skeleton" system.

No core

One of the problems for mass transit here is that employment, shopping, medical services, educational centers and entertainment venues are scattered throughout the metropolitan area.

"There is no strong urban core that brings a need for transit," said Dirks. "Woodward is not what it used to be. Should you build a system for Detroit before the demand is there? In other cities, transit follows demand. The real need is in suburban

Another problem facing mass transit is the Michigan Constitution, which limits spending for mass transit to 10 percent of the fuel tax. Any other money for mass transit would have to be raised through a voter-approved tax. Currently just 8 percent of fuel tax money goes to mass transit

SMART, the Michigan Environmental Council and others are advocating that, at least, the full 10 percent should be given to mass transit. SMART has created a booklet outlining how spending the full 10 percent would improve SMART service by allowing the system to create more connecting lines and more frequent service.

Alternatives to the bus system are also under discussion. Karen Kendrick-Hands of Grosse Pointe is founder of Transportation Riders United, a coalition of groups interested in improving mass transit. She got interested after her teenage son, Stephen, wrote a report on using mass transit to revitalize Detroit.

"We see a bus rapid transit system that you can lay down quickly as the answer," she said. "For long hauls into downtown, restoration of commuter rail."

Speedlink

The Metropolitan Affairs Coalition, a private/public partnership to develop public policy solutions, has proposed a "Speedlink" system. The system was developed in Curitiba, Brazil, an industrial city of two million people.

The system uses specially designed buses on major road arteries that can pull several cars like a train, run on dedicated lanes, stop at specially designed stations where passengers get off at station level and buy tickets at the station and are able to control traffic lights so it never has to stop at a red light. These "trains with tires" are fed by conventional bus routes.

"The idea of Speedlink is to get choice riders into a service that they find attractive," said Tait.

Another mass transit idea that has been discussed for many years is the return of some light rail.

"We're studying rail from downtown to the airport," Tait said. "Express bus is, at least at this stage, more cost effective, more flexible."

Downtown redevelopment may stem urban sprawl

BY JONI HUBRED
STAFF WRITER
jhubred@oe.homecomm.net

It's a phenomenon Donovan Rypkema has seen happen all over the country.

A nationally recognized consultant on historic renovations, he firmly believes downtown redevelopment has the effect of preventing urban sprawl. While the theory hasn't been proven with statistics, Rypkema said, it's just a matter of seeing the relationships between land use, tax dollars and infrastructure.

"When downtowns are allowed to deteriorate or de-densify, tax dollars are being piddled away every day," he explained.

The issue is twofold. Downtown business districts are built to accommodate a certain density, and when they no longer have that, the infrastructure built to support them isn't being fully utilized. Roads, sewer and water lines are all built for time, not use, Rypkema said.

Also, when businesses once located downtown move to outlying areas, taxpayers in that city have to spend more money to build new roads, drains, sewers, traffic control, driveways and other pieces of infrastructure. Redeveloping downtown areas cuts down on the amount of land eaten up on the urban fringe.

Not surprisingly, said Tracey White of the Walled Lake Downtown Development Authority, downtown business districts' biggest allies are farmers.

"I was at a seminar hosted by the International Council of Shopping Centers, and the mayor of Lansing said people from the farm PACs (political action committees) told him keeping infrastructure in the cities helps them," she said. "There's just no way you can continue to build roads to support growth further out."

Walled Lake, Rochester and Royal Oak have been selected as the first participants in Oakland County's "Main Street" program, designed to give communities the technical and planning assistance they need to revitalize their downtown districts. Rochester's DDA Director Janet Manning said she was told communities were selected based on their readiness to embark on projects.

"We already have design procedures in place," she said. "We have a strong organization, with a three-person DDA office."

■ 'When downtowns are allowed to deteriorate or de-densify, tax dollars are being piddled away every day.'
—Donovan Rypkema, Renovation consultant

Rochester has also been involved with the national Main Street program since the 1980s. A reassessment now, she said, will give leaders an opportunity to see how programs designed to revitalize the downtown area have worked.

"For us, it's re-energizing," she said.

Getting people enthused and involved is key to any downtown redevelopment effort, Rypkema said. Residential neighborhoods and downtown business districts feed off each other. Having consulted in communities across the nation, he has a theory about what starts the domino effect of declining downtowns.

"My supposition is that the commercial activities depart because businesses are more free to move than people are," he said. "Nothing has a larger effect on residential and commercial property values than vacancies.

"Downtowns are getting stronger where there in a conscious effort to make them stronger," Rypkema said. "It takes people deciding to do something about it.

New homes crowd out the critters

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM

hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

People moving into a new neighborhood can sometimes expect to receive a goody-filled welcome basket from their neighbors shortly after relocating.

But another type of neighbor might be more likely to ransack that goody-filled basket, the trash can or dig holes in the yard.

Fields, woodlands and farmland are transformed seemingly overnight into platted subdivisions, which sends wild animals into people's yards.

Canton resident Cheryl Suppnick, who lives in the Pilgrim Hills subdivision off Warren west of Ridge, said some of her non-human neighbors include coyotes, raccoons, opossums, foxes and woodchucks. Once, a raccoon entered a pet door and perched on the their washing machine.

"We're really crowding them out of their natural habitats," she said. "They're here and they were here first."

The Northwest Canton Homeowners Association recently sent out a coyote alert to residents after some sightings were reported. The dog relatives hunt in packs and have been known to kill and eat cats and dogs.

Balancing act

Developers like John Retzlaff of Canton's Retzlaff & Associates have tried to maintain a balance between development and preserving wildlife habitat. The Preserve at Fellows Creek, a 108-unit attached condominium development on the south side of Palmer east of Lotz, has a wooded area set aside as a wildlife sanctuary. A walking path slices through the land, which is a designated wetland and undevelopable.

Retzlaff installed 24 birdhouses, two bat houses, and two wood duck houses as well as a number of feeder stations. The area is home to opossums, woodchucks, numerous birds and coyotes.

Preventative measures by homeowners are key to animal relocation success.

"The best thing that people can do is correct the situation that originally attracted the animal to the area in the first place," said Lt. David Purol, who works out of the DNR's Lansing enforcement office.

Vickey Steier, a full-time Livonia animal control officer, said education is a powerful tool.

"We spend a lot of time educating people about wildlife in Livonia," Steier said, adding that a video about coexisting with wildlife occasionally plays on Channel 8.

Steier said foxes posed a challenge for her recently in a corporate park area near Seven Mile, Newburgh and Victor Parkway. One fox was killed by a car, a second was killed after being struck by a car and Steier set a live trap for a third, which had been begging for food from area employees. Area residents also reported fox sightings.

The fox will most likely be sent to an animal rehabilitation agency in Howell.

Sue Neal, wildlife specialist with the Michigan Humane Society, which has shelters in Westland, Detroit and Rochester Hills, said wild animals pose little health risk to household pets and humans.

"A (domesticated) animal has a much greater chance of picking up a disease from another pet" than from a wild animal, Neal said. Pet owners should get their pets vaccinated against rabies and distemper.

Joe Derek, naturalist for the city of Farmington Hills, said people moving out to natural areas need to realize wild animals are part of the package.

"The biggest thing I see is when people move out to where nature is and decide they don't want it there," Derek said, adding that he tries to educate residents about coexisting with wild animals. He's received more than 1,400 animal complaint telephone calls since becoming the city's naturalist in 1994.

"People like to see deer come into their yards, but when they munch on their shrubs, they get all bent out of shape. People always want you to move (animals) to a nice place. That nice place doesn't exist.

"I think the biggest animal people should be worried about is humans," Derek said. "I think we have a human population problem."

For instance, average household size decreased over the last 40 years from 3.84 to 2.09 persons in the city of Farmington, 4.17 to 2.55 in Garden City and 3.91 to 2.40 in Redford, SEMCOG reported.

Total households have increased during that same period by nearly 3,000 in Farmington, 2,400 in Garden City and 2,200 in Redford.

Builders pulled just over 143,000 permits for new single-family homes in the seven-county area here from 1989 to 1998, the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan and SEMCOG reported.

"Younger people used to live with their parents," Rogers said. "As we have a more highly educated population, more college graduates, people tend to look more broadly at where to locate careers. There's more movement away from home. More money, higher income, makes it easier to do.

"There's another factor," Rogers added. "People are living longer, healthier lives."

The growing popularity of the automobile and major mile roads, including Grand River, Michigan Avenue and Five Mile, provided access to life beyond Detroit city limits, Rogers said.

The populations of Livonia, Redford, Garden City and what is now Westland soared between 1950 and 1960 during a post-World War II housing boom.

According to SEMCOG, Livonia's population that decade jumped from 17,534 to 66,702, Redford's from 18,940 to 71,276, Garden City's from 9,012 to 38,017 and what is now Westland from 30,407 to 60,743.

Freeways later provided quicker access to points further west and north.

The Jeffries, which opened in 1977, goes through the heart of Redford, Livonia and Plymouth Township. I-275, which opened in 1976-77, touches Canton, Plymouth, Livonia and Farmington Hills.

Canton's population, 11,026 in 1970, leaped to 48,616 by 1980, 57,047 by 1990 and an estimated 75,988 now.

Farmington Hills and Plymouth Township have grown at a less spectacular but noticeable clip – Farmington Hills going from 47,006 in 1970 to an estimated 82,000 now, Plymouth Township from 17,497 to an estimated 27,400 now.

The cities of Plymouth and Farmington, fairly small and self-contained, have shown comparatively constant populations over the years.

"Freeways certainly promoted longer-distance commuting," Rogers said. "I live in Ann Arbor and commute here (downtown Detroit). If we didn't have freeways, I would have moved when I took this job at SEMCOG 20 years ago."

A lot of factors go in to where folks decide to live.

"One thing people seem to do is spend the money available to them," Rogers said. "People seem to want space and the quality of life they can afford to buy.

"People are looking at where they can live and find quality of life ... and get to places of employment in a reasonable time," he said. "People weigh all facts – how much time do I have, how much stress can I take, how much does it cost."

Changing demographics

Blacks often were blocked from moving out of Detroit by restrictive deed covenants, which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled were unenforceable in 1948.

The suburbs here aren't lily-white now.

According to 1990 census bureau figures provided by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, non-whites made up 9 percent of Canton's population, 8 percent of Farmington Hills' and 7 percent of Westland's.

Census numbers for 2000 won't be available until next spring.

However, the number of all minorities in Observer municipalities could be even higher now based on extrapolations from public school enrollment figures.

Last year, South Redford reported a non-white student population of 18 percent, Farmington 14 percent, Livonia 6 percent and Garden City 5 percent.

All were higher than reported for 1990, 1992 in the case of Livonia.

SMART plans to put 100 new buses on road in '01

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

A $104-million deal between the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation (SMART) and a California bus manufacturer is expected to put 100 new SMART buses on western Wayne County streets by the end of next year and get a total of 287 new vehicles in operation by 2003.

The lease-purchase financing arrangement, worked out with the help of the Federal Transit Administration and members of Michigan's congressional delegation, will replace SMART's entire aging fleet six years sooner than expected under more traditional federal-grant financing, according to SMART officials.

Also helping cut delivery time to next summer from the usual two years was an unusual production-schedule break at the bus manufacturer, Gillig Corp. of Hayward, Calif.

"We were really extremely lucky to get that," noted a very happy Dan Dirks, SMART's general manager, on Wednesday.

Furthermore, if the loan hadn't come through when it did, "we would have lost our place in the production line," meaning the new buses wouldn't have arrived until 2002.

"It's one of those projects where, very seldom, everything that can go right, goes right," Dirks said wryly.

The SMART bus system operates routes and Park N Ride lots in Livonia, Garden City, Westland and Redford Township.

The new buses – two of which were loaned to SMART for the August Woodward Dream Cruise – have low floors, meaning usually only one step at the curb, Dirks said. And where necessary, the buses can be lowered to further reduce the drop to the ground.

Each bus also has space for two wheelchair riders apiece, with a motorized ramp that can be operated manually by the bus driver if the hydraulics fail.

Furthermore, said Dirks, the buses will be the first in the country to have thickly padded seats in a vandal-proof material which reportedly cannot be cut. They are made by American Seating of Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Our customers are on the bus an average of nine miles per trip when the average in the entire country is only two miles," said Dirks, adding, "That's why the seats are a lot more important. And the low floor on the bus means a better-riding bus than most."

The financing arrangement – $80 million of which is principal – is "something that's never been done (on) this large of a scale before," Dirks said.

"It's absolutely wonderful for us because we have a fleet right now of which over 50 percent should be scrapped by the end of next year.

"We will be able to replace in three years what would take until 2009 (to accomplish), based on the typical federal grants" normally involved in such deals, Dirks said: "I'm not sure the buses we have would make it that long."

Prototype in April

The schedule now calls for the "prototype" bus to be delivered in April for two months of operations and modifications, if any. Twenty buses will follow in June, with the rest of the first 100 arriving during the rest of the year.

In 2002, another 87 buses will be delivered, with the remaining 100 due in 2003.

Under the "municipal installment purchase" (lease-purchase) arrangement between the various participants – SMART; bus manufacturer Gillig Corp.; the Municipal Services Group financing company of Littleton, Colo., and the Federal Transit Administration in Washington, D.C. – federal funds will be committed to SMART over a period of 10 years, but SMART will buy and take delivery on its buses in the first three years.

This arrangement allows purchasing on an installment basis, but at tax-exempt interest rates, according to SMART spokeswoman Beth Gibbons.

Dirks credited U.S. Rep. David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens, with playing a major role in pulling everything together, with help from Reps. John Dingell, D-Dearborn; Joe Knollenberg, R-Bloomfield Township; and Carolyn Cheeks Kilpatrick, D-Detroit.

Dirks credited SMART staff members with finding the financing after a two-year effort to figure out what bus design would best serve metro Detroit riders.

He said "an internal committee of management and unions, including mechanics" worked together in the design process, along with senior-citizen riders and those with disabilities.

Survey claims strong support for 4-day Labor Day weekend

BELLAIRE, Mich., Oct. 9 /PRNewswire/ -- Travel Michigan, the state's official tourism promotion agency, today released findings from a recent survey that show strong support for the state's new four-day Labor Day weekend – which had its first test this year. The informal survey of convention and visitors bureaus from throughout the state showed the extended holiday helped boost the summer travel season – and support for continuing the extra day was universal.

A new law passed last year, Public Act 141 of 1999, requires Michigan public schools to close the Friday before the traditional end-of-summer holiday, beginning this year and lasting for three years.

The non-scientific survey of convention and visitors bureaus found nearly 50 percent reporting increased tourism activity and spending.

"Our survey shows that some areas of the state did very well while other areas remained static – reflecting last year's record levels," said Susy Avery, vice president of Travel Michigan.

"There was strong belief that the extra long weekend helped, and there was universal support for continuing it beyond the current three year test."

The survey did not attempt to scientifically measure an overall increase in tourism spending for the summer season. The data is expected to be available from the industry in a couple of months.

The four-day Labor Day weekend drew strong across the board numbers, with 74 percent of convention and visitors bureaus saying the weekend had a positive impact on their activity levels. Twenty six percent reported no impact, while none reported a negative impact. On supporting the continuation of the long weekend, 81 percent reported strong support for the legislation, while the remaining 19 percent showed some support. No one surveyed reported no opinion or any opposition.

"This law has definitely made a difference, and the industry is united in support of it," Avery said.

Travel Michigan will continue to monitor tourism activity over the remaining two years of the law's test period.

Social Security official slams Bush privatization plan

STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

The deputy commissioner of the Social Security Administration is raising questions about the privatization plan being put forth by the Republication presidential candidate, Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

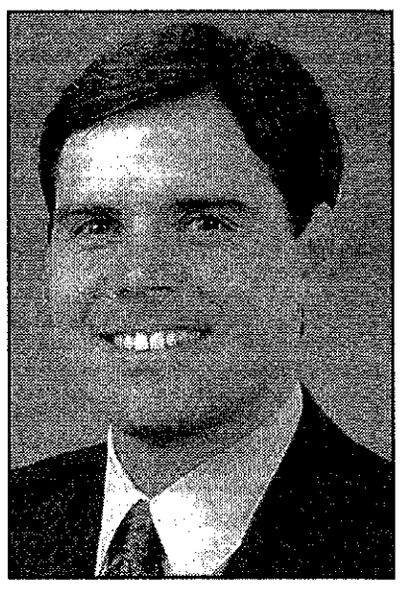
While visiting metro Detroit recently to promote the SSA's growing Internet Web site (www.ssa. gov), William A. "Bill" Halter also brought up the future of Social Security financing by discussing the proposals of both Bush and his Democratic opponent, Vice President Al Gore.

While Gore proposes keeping the Social Security Trust Fund "locked up," Bush proposes allowing today's younger workers the option of putting "a part of your payroll taxes into sound, responsible investments," which could result in increasing their retirement income.

Bush also vowed, "To seniors in this country: You earned your benefits, you made your plans, and President George W. Bush will keep the promise of Social Security. No changes, no reductions, no way."

But Halter, an appointee of President Bill Clinton, asks from where the money thus diverted – an estimated $1 trillion that Gore says is needed to pay today's retirees – would come.

Halter stated that, contrary to "a very large amount of misinformation" today, the Social Security Trust Fund is "strong and solvent to the year 2037." It's driven by money being paid into it by the baby boom generation (1946-64).



William Halter

Gore's proposal calls for a "lock-box" setup, whereby payroll taxes would be "reserved solely for Social Security benefits"; use of today's budget surplus to pay off the national debt by 2012; and using the interest thus saved to strengthen the Social Security Trust Fund and also raise benefits for elderly widows.

Halter said that group has "the highest rate of poverty among the elderly today." He said the increased benefit payments would come at a modest cost to Social Security.

Earned 7 percent

He also estimated $1 trillion in assets from government securities earned 7-percent interest last year, or $225 billion.

Additionally, he claimed, once the national debt is paid off as projected, the interest earned will extend Social Security solvency to 2054.

That would cover the last of the baby boomers to age 90, he said.

But, Halter said, Bush's proposal is "very different.

"He would divert a portion of the revenue to private, individualized accounts" and that raises "some key questions," Halter said – in particular, "If the investing goes bad, what happens?"

1) If an estimated 16 percent of Social Security tax, or $1 trillion, is diverted, how will current Social Security benefits be paid, Halter asked.

He cited government economist Martin Feldstein, who said, "fill the hole by borrowing."

But, countered Halter, "The objective is to pay down the (national) debt," and Bush still hasn't "told anybody where the (replacement) $1 trillion is coming from," Halter said.

2) Bush's plan could result in a 20-percent reduction in benefits, he suggested, or

3) It could result in taxes being raised.

Privately invested money lost through bad investments could mean less retirement income or that the government "has to bail the (people) out," he said.

With a bail-out of that size, "We are creating the next S&L (savings and loan) crisis," Halter said.

Additionally, he stated, any such diversion would reduce the length of trust-fund solvency from the year 2037 to 2024.

Halter said Social Security today is the sole income for about 10 percent of the country's 30 million retirees.

"When people depend on something like that, you have to be very careful what you do," he said.

With less than a month to go before the Nov. 7 election, "we need those answers," Halter said.

Lack of leadership identified as biggest obstacle to curbing sprawl

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Now is the time for Michigan to deal with the problem of urban sprawl, opinion leaders say. If it does not, it faces a period of growth in the next decade unprepared, and it may still miss out on economic development opportunities.

What the state lacks is a credible leader willing to take the reins on urban sprawl initiatives, according to the results of a survey released last month by the Traverse City-based Land Information Access Association. Gov. John Engler isn't doing it, critics contend.

A new organization, however, is hoping to fill the leadership gap. The Michigan Society of Planners (a 5,000-member group formed from a merger of the Michigan Society of Planning Officials and the state chapter of the American Planning Association) has announced it now plans to take that role.

Thirty-two top "opinion leaders" from across the state were queried for their views about sprawl over the summer. Twenty-seven named land use as one of the top three issues facing the state in the next three decades. That same number said state and federal policies have encouraged sprawl. Twenty-six said land use trends will affect the future of Michigan business.

"The survey results clearly indicated the absence of a single, credible leader or set of leaders capable of calling all parties to the table to drive a consensus on land use policy reform," the association's survey report concluded.

"We couldn't find a specific leader willing to take the point on this issue," executive director Joe VanderMeulen said. "The parade is forming, but nobody is getting out front. In other states, it has been the governor who has taken the lead."

The governor may not get the credit or blame, the governor's press secretary, John Truscott, countered, but Gov. Engler actually has been active in the issue.

Engler concentrates on "things that work" without harming the economy, Truscott said.

"If you want to stop urban sprawl, one way is to go back to the early '80s," he said, when the economy was troubled, development slow and unemployment high. "If you halt sprawl altogether you are going to stop the economy altogether."

Sprawl has already slowed since the 1970s, according to statistics compiled by the Mackinac Center about the rate of development of vacant acreage.

If Engler doesn't get credit, it is in part because of his attitude toward policy-making, said state Rep. John Jellema, R-Grand Ledge.

"Representatives went to him with the idea of a task force on sprawl. He said, 'We don't need any more task forces,'" Jellema explained.

"We've had countless task force reports. They are sitting right there on my bookshelf. What we need is viable legislation.

"This is a hot issue, but it cools down real fast when you ask someone what they would propose in terms of policy that fits in successfully with Michigan's government structure."

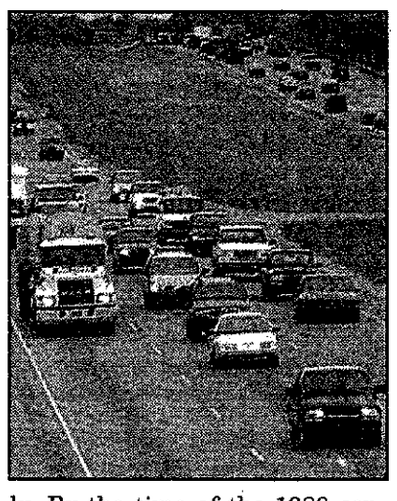
Canton farms disappear under concrete, lawns

BY JACK GLADDEN
STAFF WRITER
jgladden@oe.homecomm.net



After growing up in Nankin Township and graduating from John Glenn High School in 1965, Steve Hamilton took a job with a General Motors HydraMatic plant. Then he was drafted.

When his service was completed, it was time to come home. Nankin Township was now Westland, but the job at the HydraMatic plant was the same.

When he was 21, looking for a quiet place in the country, he followed up on an ad for a house for sale in Superior Township a few miles to the west.

Hamilton opened up a successful small business, the Star Stop Party Store. In 1972 he rented a storefront in a new strip mall that had just been built at the intersection of Ford and Lilley in Canton Township and opened up the second Star Stop Party Store.

The population of Canton then was 11,026 – having more than doubled from the 5,313 population of 1960. Ford was a two-lane blacktop running east and west. Hamilton shared the strip mall with a drugstore, a dry cleaners, a restaurant, a TV repair shop and one of the first Little Caesars stores. The other three corners of the intersection were farmland.

Hamilton never did buy a house in Canton. "They were just too expensive," he said.

The '70s marked the beginning of a building boom in the township. Subdivisions and strip shopping centers went up quickly. By the time of the 1980 census count, Canton's population had quadrupled in 10 years to 48,616.

For Hamilton, the most dramatic example of the changing landscape came in 1974, when Meijer Inc. opened its first Detroit-area Meijer Thrifty Acres at the southeast corner of Ford and Canton Center on what had been part of the Edward Hauk farm.

"Traffic was backed up bumper to bumper all along Ford Road for a week after Meijer opened," Hamilton said. "It was incredible. They had police out directing traffic. They even had helicopters out for traffic control."

By1988 Ford had grown from two lanes to five and bumper-to-bumper traffic was the norm. The cornfields and farmland had been replaced by subdivisions, strip malls, office and industrial parks and scores of fast food establishments.

While the growth was good for business, the accompanying congestion was too much for the kid from Nankin Township. He kept running his party store (now called Wilderberry Party Store), but he packed up his family and headed west again. He bought a house and 10 acres of land in Dundee, a small town 20 miles south of Ann Arbor with a population of around 3,500. Why did he move so far away?

"To get away from this," he said, waving his hand toward the backed up traffic at the Ford and Lilley intersection. "The traffic, the houses on top of each other."

By the 1990 census, Canton had grown to more than 57,000 people, and the estimated 2000 population was 75,000 – 14 times the 1960 population of 5,300. Dundee was still a small town with one traffic light. But that would change.

"Almost overnight," Hamilton said, "they started putting in subdivisions. They're all around me now. You wouldn't know it's the same place. New restaurants. Hotels. We used to have one traffic light. Within a week, we had five."

But the big shock for Hamilton came earlier this month, in a kind of déjà vu moment.

In the middle of September, Cabela's, a giant outdoors equipment superstore, opened its newest 225,000-square-foot store – in Dundee – about a mile from Hamilton's secluded refuge.

"Traffic was backed up bumper-to-bumper for miles," he said, shaking his head. "They had to call out the whole police department to keep the traffic under control. Unbelievable."

State lawmakers launch attack on sprawl

HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

State lawmakers will attack urban sprawl on several fronts this fall. A number of initiatives intended to address the issue are being prepared or already under consideration.

Among the most significant are proposals to be offered by Rep. John Jellema, R-Grand Haven, and Rep. Gene DeRossett, R-Manchester.

Jellema is planning to introduce legislation he has been working on over the summer with the Michigan Society of Planners that would provide incentives to local governments which participate in coordinated planning. The package calls for cooperation with neighboring communities as well as county and state level governments in municipal planning, according to society Executive Director David Downey.

DeRossett has several initiatives he'll be pushing this fall. One of the most important is a two-bill package that will accelerate the title-clearing process so that "brownfields" in central city areas can be more quickly redeveloped and put back into use.

Reusing central city land is one of the most effective ways to reduce development in so-called "greenfield" suburban fringe areas, DeRossett explained, but the clouded titles of those old parcels often makes it quicker and easier to build elsewhere.

DeRossett is also hoping to turn his House Republican Land Use Work Group into a standing committee. It's job, he explained, would be to review proposals coming up for consideration in the legislature and assess their effect on urban sprawl issues.

DeRossett was appointed chairman of the work group this spring and task force has met eight times over the course of the summer. As a result, the group is ready to address several sprawl related topics this fall, including agricultural preservation, revision of laws regulating location and taxation of manufactured housing, and even a bill to encourage the reuse of scrap tires.

Key piece

Still, the Jellema/ Society of Planners package appears to be the key piece, a culmination of discussions that have been taking place over the past year between planners, local officials, business interests and environmentalists.

Its intent is to resolve the conflict between the concept of regional planning and local control, coordinating planning without overriding home rule. Land use decisions in this state are currently left to local government – cities, townships and villages. And there are more than 1,800 such units of government across the state, which often plan for their development in isolation.

Jellema and Downey plan to make the program strictly voluntary, providing incentives for participation.

"This will be quite different that what is in use in any other state," Downey said. "What has worked in Maryland or Oregon just won't work here because there is such a strong tradition of home rule in this state."

Jellema said he has been working with both the Michigan Municipal League and the Michigan Townships Association on the package, and while neither has committed to support the program yet, they are interested. Jellema has also been working on the package with four other representatives, including Rep. Patricia Lockwood, D-Fenton.

To participate, communities will have to create 20-year master plans and update them every five years. That may not seem significant in some suburban communities that already have created such plans, but not all have, Jellema said. In other communities, the master plans may be 20 years old. What is new, even for suburban communities, is that zoning would have to match the master plan.

Master plans

"Many communities have master plans now, but the zoning doesn't necessarily follow it. This bill would mean that the zoning would have to comply with the plan. Residents and developers would have a clear idea of what the area is going to like, and it would good for at least five years," Jellema said. "Every five years, they would look at it again and they could revise it. This puts some teeth in the master plan."

Additionally, the plans would have to lay out capital improvement plans for the city, including roads construction, sewer improvements and even park development.

When the plans are finished, they would have to be shared with surrounding communities, county planning departments and the state. Other communities wouldn't have to approve the plan – they couldn't block implementation – but the purpose of the sharing is to make sure other community planners know what the municipality is intending to develop.

Currently, planners in one community may be reluctant to share information with surrounding communities, Jellema said. That leads to isolation. But awareness of what the next community is doing might affect another community's plans.

Incentives to participate would include accelerated permit reviews from the state, allowing communities to move ahead more quickly when state approval is needed, as well as access to a state revolving fund for projects, including capital improvement.

Suburbs cope with traffic jam

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER
scasola@oe.homecomm.net

Steve Dunne: "Do you think about traffic? Ever? Because I do, constantly. Traffic is caused by the single-car driver. Nine hundred thousand single people get into their cars every morning. They drive to work. And they wonder why there's gridlock. But this is what I've been working on: If you had a train, right, a supertrain, you give the people a reason to get out of their cars. You give them great coffee, great music, they will park and ride. I know they will."

Linda Powell: "I still love my car, though."

Singles (1992)

When writer-director Cameron Crowe created this scene from his 1992 feature film, Singles, he hit a nerve near and dear to all commuters in and around the Motor City. The truth is, Wayne County drivers also love their cars.

But the drawback to owning the latest GM, Ford or Daimler-Chrysler-mobile and living in these cities, which are financially fueled by the automobile industry, is just as Crowe described – gridlock. As cities expanded north and west, the suburbs grew bombarded with roads, roads that can hardly contain the high traffic volumes existing today. But area residents know the roads and the best routes, by heart.

"M-5 is my best friend," said Kristin DiPomio, a junior at Madonna University in Livonia. She drives to classes from her West Bloomfield home. "Haggerty is the only road in Oakland County that goes where I need to go."

Her solution to cutting out excess time behind the wheel? "I don't usually drive during rush hour," she said.

While DiPomio has at least a 20-minute commute to school, fellow Madonna student and Redford resident Jim McCourt takes the quick 10-minute jaunt west to reach his classes. "Usual-

Downtowns are a plus for Plymouth and Farmington

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER
sbuck@oe.homecomm.net

While former farms became cities, two established communities have done well by offering services that new cities must provide from scratch: schools, downtowns, roads, drains, sewers, water mains and destinations such as restaurants and theaters.

Providing efficient services is a strength, officials of both the cities of Plymouth and Farmington said. Their downtowns continue to draw people to both shop and enjoy leisure-time activities.

Kellogg Park is Plymouth's pride and joy.

"We are blessed in having Kellogg Park," said Paul Sincock, assistant Plymouth city manager. "Kellogg Park is a gem."

These cities, with neighborhoods and a sense of community, project an old-fashioned appeal not seen in newer subdivisions, said both Sincock and Paul Lauhoff, Farmington city manager.

"People who move to sprawl areas suddenly realize that they are on septic fields, have well water and gravel roads," Lauhoff said. "Farmington is 100-percent paved. Voters here approved a special millage for roads with no termination and operates a 20-year revolving program. In 1994 when we presented this program we found we could save significantly."

Residents shouldn't have to wait to repair roads until they completely fall apart, Lauhoff said. "We found we could save 40 percent – millions of dollars – by putting together a program to repair the roads, before they fall apart, and extend the life of that road. We replaced or rebuilt over 30 different road sections. We don't have any special assessments for roads anymore."

Both cities know quality of life also extends to entertainment.

The city of Plymouth hosts 130 events a year, Sincock said. He can remember when S.S. Kresge was located where Little Professor on the Park is now on Main Street. New restaurants like Compari's and E. G. Nicks and The Box Bar's recent renovation creates renewed interest in downtown, he said

Condos which are under construction where the Mayflower Hotel once stood on Main Street is affirmation of Plymouth's survival. The Penn Theatre recently started comedy nights in a non-smoking venue. The Civic Theatre in Farmington which recently became city-owned wants to attract conferences and business meetings.

The city of Farmington and Farmington Hills operate separate emergency services.

In 1995, however, Plymouth and Plymouth Township merged its fire departments to become the Plymouth Community Fire Department.

Last November, the two municipalities also merged emergency dispatch services which are housed at the Plymouth Communication Centers in the Plymouth Township police station.

Both mergers have resulted in cost savings and the Plymouths look for even more ways to combine services.

ly it flows pretty smooth," he said, with optimism.

And when it comes to traffic, McCourt seems unaffected. "I prefer having a car," he said. "I get to pick the time I want to leave and it's really more convenient (than taking a bus)."

McCourt aside, many people agreed if there were a way to create an efficient system of public transportation, at least in high traffic areas, it would be a welcome change. DiPomio said she would use public transportation if it were readily available to her and easy to find. She said she loves New York City, where trains, cabs and buses abound. "I love the fact that you don't have to have a car," she said.

DiPomio isn't alone.

Plymouth resident John McMeekin admitted that he wouldn't mind leaving his sports utility vehicle behind every once in a while, in the interest of convenience. While he said he rarely uses any public transportation in the area, he has taken a taxi cab to the airport on occasion. Most often found behind the wheel, McMeekin keeps up with construction projects to make his ride go along more smoothly.

"I'm constantly trying to find a new way to go, which usually ends up costing me time," he said. "If there were better transportation downtown, even if it was just for recreation, I probably would be inclined to use it."

Three main roads go north out of western Wayne County: Southfield Freeway/road, Telegraph and I-275. All three have seen extensive construction work over the past couple of years. While this should result in better traffic flow, drivers can find three lanes cut down to one lane and traffic backing up – with few alternatives available.

The alternative currently available is the park-and-ride system, which allows drivers to park their car in suburban park-and-ride lots and then take the bus into Detroit.

This best works for those who live in the suburbs and go to Detroit. Those who live in one suburb and work in another usually head out on the highway – there's little public transportation available.

But some believe public transportation is more of a dream, rather than a viable solution to Motor City traffic woes. "We don't have enough stuff centrally located," said DiPomio.

Maybe the time for a super-train has come.

OBITUARIES

ANNA MARIE CLEVER

Services for Anna Marie Clever, 70, of Jackson, Mich., formerly of East Jordan were held Oct. 10 at the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Jackson and also Oct. 13 at the First Presbyterian Church in East Jordan. Burial will be at Sunset Hill Cemetery in East Jordan.

Mrs. Clever was born Dec. 8, 1929 in North Canton, Ohio and died Oct. 7, 2000 at her home in Jackson, Mich.

She is survived by her husband, Ray Clever of Jackson; three daughters, Pamela (Amos) Howard of Plymouth, Paula (David) Hopper of Concord, Mich., Lisa (Mary Locey) Kiel of Ann Arbor; one son, Kurt (Brenda) Haag of Gurnee, Ill.; and five grandchildren. She is also survived by Ray's four daughters, Nancy (Joel) VanRoekel of Grand Ledge, Merideth (Russ) Ritchel of Winston Salem, N.C., Mary (Bruce) Cameron of Evergreen, Colo., Lisa (Jeff) Behan of Colorado Springs, Colo.; and 11 grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to the Hospice of Jackson or the American Heart Association.

Arrangements were made by Penzien Funeral Homes.

THEODORE E. DONNITHORNE

Services for Theodore E. "Cowboy" Donnithorne, 91, of Plymouth were held Oct. 11 at the Schrader-Howell Funeral Home with the Rev. John Shinn officiating. Burial was at Riverside Cemetery in Plymouth.

Mr. Donnithorne was born on Jan. 17, 1909 in Ishpeming, Mich. and died Oct. 7, 2000 in Garden City. He came to the Plymouth community in 1940 from Detroit. He worked as a rodeo clown. His stage name was Ken D. Hawthorn and he worked with Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and Bob Steele, among others. He owned his own business, Ted's Carpet Service in Plymouth. He was a floor covering installer. He started his business in 1947 and retired in 1987 after 40 years of service. He also drove the ambulance for the Schrader Ambulance Service. He delivered furniture for the Schrader Furniture Store. He also was a doorman at the Mayflower Hotel for more than 50 years.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Jane Donnithorne; and one sister, Mildred Bell.

Survivors include his daughter, Theo (James) Igrisan of Plymouth; two grandchildren, KylieMarie Igrisan of Plymouth, Danielle Preston Igrisan of Plymouth.

Memorials may be made to the Angela Hospice in Livonia.

Arrangements were made by Schrader-Howell Funeral Home.

A. JOYCE DUSSEAU

Services for A. Joyce Dusseau, 69, of Canton will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 14, with visitation from noon until the time of the service, at the Schrader-Howell Funeral Home with the Rev. H. Paul Clough officiating.

Mrs. Dusseau was born Aug. 2, 1931 in Detroit and died Oct. 8, 2000 in Canton. She came to the Plymouth community in 1999 from Florida. She retired from the Fairview Schools where she was a secretary to the principal. She was a homemaker. She enjoyed family reunions, traveling and family outings. She enjoyed trips to the Mio, Mich. area. She graduated from high school in Mio, Mich.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Robert Dusseau.

Survivors include her three sons, Tom of Homosassa, Fla., Steve (Cindy) of Canton, Gary of South Lyon; one brother, George Potter of New York, eight grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to Angela Hospice, 14100 Newburgh, Livonia, MI 48154.

Arrangements were made by Schrader-Howell Funeral Home.

agrees with Patterson on some issues – welfare reform and opposition to the state proposal on school vouchers, for example – there are basic differences between the two of them.

If elected, Walsh said his priorities would include revisiting recent legislation that he believes weakened individual rights on unemployment insurance and worker's compensation. He would also beef up efforts to promote MI-Child, the state program that guarantees health insurance for children from economically disadvantaged families.

"A lot of people don't know about it (MI-Child) and that's a mistake," Walsh said. "People are being pushed into the Medicaid program instead when that's not the best option available."

"We need to be enacting legislation that gives back to the citizens of Michigan, that gives them more power and more support from their government," Walsh said.

Crime and education are other key issues Walsh would focus on if elected next month. He also believes in "tax fairness."

Walsh said he supports legislation for a state earned income tax credit that would work much the same way as the federal credit, which provides relief to low- and moderate-income families. Ten states already offer such a credit, he said. "The concept is a good one and I think you'll see more states get on the bandwagon," Walsh said.

■ 'A lot of people don't know about it (MI-Child) and that's a mistake. People are being pushed into the Medicaid program instead when that's not the best option available.'

–Mickey Walsh

Walsh said he is firmly against state Proposal 1, which if passed by voters next month would allow state money to be used as partial tuition payments at private schools for children from "failing" school districts.

"I think it's a sham being perpetrated on the people of Michigan," Walsh said. "I'm staunchly opposed to any public money going to parochial schools. There are issues of accountability and selectiveness by private schools that aren't addressed," he said.

"And on top of that I think the proposal itself is confusing," he added.

Walsh was less firm on state Proposal 2 and in fact, said he was undecided about how he would vote on the so-called Home Rule issue.

Walsh retired in February as UAW assistant director of community services, working out of the union's downtown Detroit headquarters. He spent much of his time helping to develop and work on alcohol and substance abuse prevention programs. Before that, he served as president of UAW Local 32, representing workers for Cleveland-based White Motors Corp.

He has lived in Canton for 22 years with his wife, Charlotte. They have three adult children, Michael, Colleen and Charles.

A Cleveland-area native, Walsh is a graduate of Benedictine High School and he attended St. Johns College (Cleveland) and Schoolcraft College.

He has received awards from the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Program, Save Our Sons and Daughters (SOSAD) and the United Way, as well as the Samuel Gompers Labor Award for Transplant Awareness Campaigns.

Say it with Flowers
by Steve Mansfield
ROSES ARE RED... AND WHITE
While most people associate roses with the color red, white roses have a gentle appeal that conjures up images of bridal bouquets and Edwardian times. During medieval time, white roses stood for purity. In reality, however, the illusion of pristine whiteness gives way to what may be more properly described as blush white, milky white, creamy white, or ivory. When properly arranged in a glass vase and outlined in leafy green, white roses exude an otherworldly charm. This is especially so when viewed in the light of dusk, when they seem to glow against the darkening shadows. At times like this, white roses rival their red counterparts in terms of romantic intent.
Today, roses come in a variety of stunning colors. They're elegant and beautiful, and perfect as a decorative arrangement or to express your feelings to someone special in your life. For quality and service, visit HEIDE'S FLOWERS & GIFTS, 995 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth. To place your order by phone, call 453-5140. Worldwide wire service is available. Township does right with new 'Salute' to veterans

It's been a long time since the country was at war. The thought that American lives aren't at stake in a major military conflict is a comforting one. And we can certainly pray that ongoing tensions in the Middle East, the Balkans and other regions don't require a ramping up of U.S. military presence anytime soon.

Decades of relative peace and prosperity have made it difficult to recall that times weren't always so tranquil, that thousands of Canton residents have served proudly and dozens have been wounded or died for their country. Which is why we were glad to hear last week that the township is expanding efforts to mark Veterans Day, which falls this year on Saturday, Nov. 11.

In addition to the traditional ceremony at the veterans memorial behind the administration building (11 a.m. Nov. 11), a "Salute to Service" celebration is planned for 2-5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 12 at Summit on the Park. The public is welcome to attend both events.

The Sunday event is an excellent chance for local residents who may not have a direct link with the veterans' community to get a living, breathing glimpse of what the experience was like. It's an opportunity for students to gain some real-life knowledge on a subject they only read about in history books, or see fictionalized on movie and TV screens.

It is being put together by a committee co-chaired by Dan Durack, township administrative and community services director, and John Spencer, who works in the finance department. Both are Vietnam veterans.

Participants will bring memorabilia including uniforms, medals and photographs. On the lighter side, an cook will prepare Army haute cuisine – namely chipped beef on toast – for visitors to sample.

Most importantly, local veterans will share stories of their service and offer some oral history on a facet of American life that is fading into the background as the generations pass. It's almost difficult to fathom, but those who served in World War II and Korea are aging and their ranks are thinning. Even surviving veterans of the Vietnam War are getting older and it's been almost 10 years since the Persian Gulf.

The Veterans Day ceremony and "Salute to Service" celebration will act as a tribute to those who served during war time, a reminder to those who didn't and a learning experience for future generations.

Volunteers are needed for the Nov. 12 "Salute to Service" celebration. The township is still looking for people to share accounts of their military service, which will be taped for cable television. Also, about a dozen people are needed to watch over military memorabilia on display at the celebration. Interested people may call Debby Bradley, Canton volunteer coordinator, (734) 397-6450.

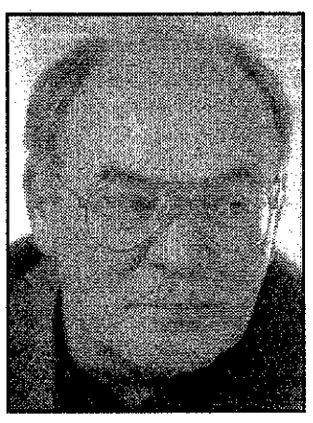
Dated Electoral College no way to elect president

Winston Churchill, in referring to Russia, described it once as "a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma." This may be considered an accurate description of our current electoral system used to elect the president and vice president of the United States.

Our country as it moves into Fall 2000 is once again galvanizing for the election. Although millions of people will be voting, many do not understand they are actually casting their vote for electors who may, if they so decide, vote independently for the president and vice president.

The Electoral College was created as a consequence of compromise at the Constitutional Convention of 1787. At the convention, many feared the direct democracy advocated by James Wilson; on the other hand, there seemed to be little doubt that the ultimate authority should reside in the people. The electoral system, as a consequence, was created to compromise the interests of those who were advocating direct democracy and those who were expressing their apprehensions regarding such a revolutionary idea.



John E. Thomas

When the American voters go to the polls in November, they will not in fact be voting for the president and vice president. Rather, the voters will be voting for "electors" who, in turn, will be voting for them thereafter. The electors then vote, their votes are counted and certified and sent to the President of the Senate (the vice president of the United States) where the votes of the "electors" will be opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress. Presto, the president and vice president are elected, maybe. This last event occurs in January, well after the American voters assumed that they had voted for "their candidates."

In the Electoral College, there is one vote for each member of the House of Representatives (435) plus one vote for each U.S. Senator (100) and finally, three (3) votes for the District of Columbia. The total of 538 is an important number to remember. The candidates for each party must get an absolute majority of the whole number of electoral votes. The minimum number for election is 270. This number is even more important to remember.

The electors who are elected are those electors in each state who receive more popular votes than any other group of electors for other candidates for those offices. Thus, this is a "winner take all" system within each of the states. The winning candidates for president and vice president (or "electors for..." depending on how the voter looks at it) then receive all of the electoral votes from the state. The winning candidates anticipate that they will get other "winner take all" results in other states as well as the District of Columbia to a total of at least 270 electoral votes.

The "winner takes all" system does not mean that it is applicable to the country as a whole. Thus, it is conceivable that your candidate could win in the Electoral College but fail to win the majority or even a plurality of the popular vote cast nationwide. In effect, there are 50 such elections (or 51 if you count the District of Columbia) rather than one big election.

What happens if the Electoral College fails; that is, no one gets the necessary votes to win? The Constitution, as amended by the 12th Amendment, gives us direction as to what then occurs. The House of Representatives ... "from the persons having the highest number not exceeding three...shall choose immediately, by ballot, the president." Presumably, Messrs. Gore and Bush will be there. There could even be a third candidate if just one rogue elector casts a vote for another person.

The House of Representatives then votes, but not the way the voters might expect. Again, do not assume that this is a democratic process. Each Congressman does not get to cast a vote. Rather, each state gets one vote. That is to say, each state's congressional delegation shall caucus to decide how each state's single vote will be cast. The winner here needs to get 26 votes.

Since the Electoral College, rather than the voters, actually elects the president and vice president it is not a totally democratic system. But, it was never intended to be. The Electoral College system is not based upon the people if that word is defined to mean "one — man, one — vote."

■ Cartoon missed mark

On Thursday, Sept. 28 the Canton Observer printed a cartoon on its Opinion Page that featured Dr. Kathleen Booher, Plymouth-Canton Superintendent. I have not met Dr. Booher but I have heard nothing but good comments about her performance as superintendent and was surprised by the extremely negative nature of the cartoon.

I wondered if perhaps she had recently done something outrageous that prompted your cartoonist to portray her in such an ugly fashion. After contacting a number of people who are knowledgeable about school district activities, I learned that this was not the case.

The cartoon implies that she has no interest in the district's curricula, class sizes and testing scores. Does your cartoonist have evidence to support this? I realize that this cartoon appeared on the Opinion page but usually when someone gives an opinion, they also give evidence to support that opinion. The Observer has a reputation for fairness and I hope that this cartoon does not indicate a change in your approach.

■ Columnist confused

After reading Hugh Gallagher's column "Special interest groups drive 'citizen' ballot initiatives" (Sept. 21 Observer), I wonder whether he himself is confused, or is trying to confuse the Observer readers.

Instead he should be writing a column titled "Special interest groups oppose 'citizen' ballot initiatives". I wonder whether those who oppose the citizen ballot initiatives are aware of the fact that it was in the dictatorial former Soviet Union (now defunct), where a small clique of Marxists ruled, the people had no say whatsoever how they were ruled; were not allowed to have ballot initiatives.

Mr. Gallagher quotes David Broder's arguments to support his own biased point of view. Broder's arguments regarding initiatives are conspicuously slanted, apparently to serve his and his favored faction purpose.

It seems that according to him, the initiative process was good and desirable for the advancement of liberal, often unworthy causes, but is not good for decent, traditional, conservative causes no matter how worthy.

Broder says that "our democracy is actually the triumph of special interests with big money over the best interest of the country." I agree with him on that, but I believe that he speaks for these special interests, entrenched, Marxist-like liberals, the fourth branch of government, dominant over the other three, who look after their selfish interests more then the interests of the public and the country.

Fortunately, there are still many of us who believe that in this country democratic processes still work. If a government by "special interests with big money" governs contrary to the best interest of the public and country the government by initiative is the most desirable alternative in a democratic system, despite the Broder's present assertion that it is a wrong idea.

■ Agrees with stand

Your editorial against the school voucher proposal (Canton Observer, Sept. 21) was well argued.

I think a lot of well meaning voters in Michigan believe that a yes vote on the proposal would simply mean giving kids in failing schools a chance to go to better schools. They are unaware that passing the proposal will allow all school districts in Michigan, whether they are failing or not, to vote in vouchers.

Why would a school district with top quality schools vote in vouchers? Simply because vouchers would allow parents to send their children to parochial schools and have the state pay the tuition.

Janusz M. Szyszko

■ Change the system

So much wailing and gnashing of teeth by the opponents of schools of choice and the voucher system.

I don't want my money to go to religious or private schools, they say. Well, think of the countless years people with convictions have paid taxes subsidizing children at public schools, with no relief for non-usage.

Doesn't their conscience bother them a little? It should.

Public schools are a necessity for many, but not as a burden to those who choose otherwise.

Rising demands means higher taxes and rising costs at religious and private schools.

Arguments that good schools raise home values. Well, that includes all schools, not just public.

But when you add higher taxes and higher tuition costs at religious and private schools, who gets the best deal?

The only failing in the proposed voucher system, I see is it should go to all children regardless of the school they choose.

This means no exceptions whatever. Of course it will require a strict method of state accreditation, teacher qualifications, pupil performance, and results.

This should make a real freedom of choice available to those who want it. Times change, so why not the system?

Vladie Martin

■ Forgotten history

Those in favor of the voucher proposal seem to have forgotten our American history. The Founding Fathers went out of their way to assure that government money (our tax dollars) was never to be used to support private or parochial education.

The flip side of that is that most religious groups have long realized that to accept tax money makes it very likely that they would have to accept government control and regulations. Neither Lansing nor any other government body just hands away dollars without demanding that you accept their rules. That's a short step to the state government telling those private and parochial schools how and what they should teach.

Instead of realizing the long run danger of this happening, the Catholic bishops and the religious right see a short run chance to get our tax dollars, and, if they'll pardon the expression, "the h--- with the consequences."

I am a reasonably devout Catholic with 15 years of Catholic education to my credit, but I know tax money is to be spent for the common good, not private schools. My parents made the choices needed to provide for the education of my brothers and me. They never expected government help. And no wise American of any persuasion should consider voting for the voucher money grab.

I am so angry at the waste of resources an shortsightedness of my church leaders that I am rescinding my pledge of dollars to the bishop's annual appeal. Diocesan money is now being wasted on expensive mailings that present half views of the truth about the voucher issue. My pledge will be redirected to my own local parish.

■ Reform is here

Real education reform is, for the first time, in the hands of Michigan parents and taxpayers. They're the ones who put Proposal 1 on the ballot with a half-million signatures and they're the ones who will pass it on Nov. 7.

Proposal 1 contains three common sense education reform provisions that will change education for the better. First, Proposal 1 protects each district's per-child funding allowance from dropping below current levels. Second, Proposal 1 requires all teachers to pass regularly administered examinations in their academic subject areas. Third, Proposal 1 will give a voucher to parents whose children are trapped in schools that fail to graduate at least two-thirds of their students, so they can send their children to a better performing non-public school.

On Nov. 7 we can guarantee funding for our kids, guarantee that only the best teachers are instructing our kids, and stop funding failure by allowing expanded educational choices for those families that need it the most. Proposal 1 will save our children by allowing parents and taxpayers to reform the system from the outside.

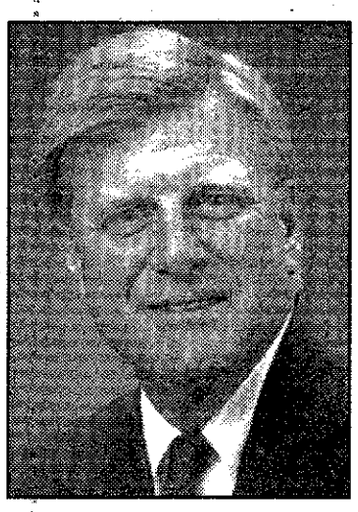
Pro-voucher forces attempt to strangle debate on proposal

I'm not at all surprised the anti-voucher folks are upset. The audacity of their opponents is breathtaking.

First, a scheme is concocted to overturn the long-standing constitutional ban on use of public funds for religious and private schools. An expensive campaign gets enough signatures to put the measure on the November ballot as Proposal 1. The effort is funded mainly by a bunch of wealthy Michigan businessmen, including very conservative multimillionaires Richard DeVos (Amway) and Tom Monaghan (Domino Pizza).



Next, the Roman Catholic Church, which stands to gain big time public funding for its network of parochial schools if the voucher plan passes, contributes $750,000 to the campaign and mails sermons supporting the plan to parish priests, together with instructions to read them on Sundays leading up to election day.

Not surprisingly, local school officials, teachers unions and parent groups get organized in opposition. They start putting out the word that the voucher plan is nothing more than a disguised way to destroy Michigan's public schools.

So the pro-voucher folks complain to Secretary of State Candice Miller that school officials and teachers unions are spending public money in violation of a recently passed election law. And they file a whole string of Freedom Of Information Act requests to examine the materials the anti-voucher folks are putting out. Some districts have received as many as eight FOIA requests so far.

Then the pro-voucher forces take the stuff they get under FOIA to Miller, who rules that some of the school folks may be guilty of illegally using public tax dollars to fight the voucher proposal. (Attentive readers may note that Candice Miller is herself a near-certain candidate in what looks like a very competitive race for the Republican nomination for governor in 2002. Whether her rulings in this matter have something to do with her own political interests in currying favor with important GOP constituencies is something I cannot assess.)

Not surprisingly, the anti-voucher folks are cross. No, not cross; mad. "The purpose is to intimidate us into silence," says Livonia superintendent, Kenneth Watson. Oakland Intermediate School District Deputy Superintendent Rick Simonson says the Secretary of State is tying the hands of school officials in trying to get factual information out to the public. That's a violation of educators' free speech rights, according to Huron Valley Superintendent Robert O'Brien, who believes teachers and school officials have "an obligation" to explain the impact of the voucher proposal on school districts.

So the anti-voucher forces filed suit late last month, arguing that Miller's rulings under campaign finance law are curtailing their free speech rights. Ingham County Judge Michael Harrison ruled last Thursday that public school officials are free to speak their minds about the voucher plan, but he refused to tell the Secretary of State to quit enforcing the campaign finance law.

The pro-voucher forces have been trying their darndest to strangle public debate over their radical and far-reaching proposal.

Who won seems to depend a lot on who's spinning. However, Liz Boyd, spokeswoman for the Secretary of State, admitted she was "disappointed" by the judge's ruling, which differed from Miller's interpretation of the law in several respects.

A public official in a policymaking role, according to the judge's ruling, may express views on public policy issues, even if that involves some use of public resources.

And the judge also ruled (again, in disagreement with Miller) that when school districts distribute information about the voucher proposal, it does not have to be balanced. "There may be nothing against which to balance," Judge Harrison wrote. "It does not require anybody to have to propound both sides of an issue. It merely says (the information must be) factual."

And Judge Harrison further ruled that school districts can distribute opinions about the voucher plan in regularly published materials. A routine newsletter could contain comment, the judge said, but a one-time brochure would be out of bounds.

The pro-voucher forces have been trying their darndest to strangle public debate over their radical and far-reaching proposal. Judge Harrison deserves a big pat on the back for leveling the playing field.

Using tax money for campaigns becomes hot issue

"Hey, I thought we decided to outlaw (muffle) the use of taxpayer dollars (muffle) to influence the outcome of elections (muffle, muffle, muffle) ..."

You've probably heard the ads that the organization known as Let Local Votes Count is running on the radio in support of Proposal 2. They're hilarious. A voter begins to speak out on some local issue when an unseen hand covers his mouth, blotting out what he has to say.

If the ad itself isn't impressive enough, certainly the number of times it gets played on the air ought to be.

"We voted for you," the voter says, "not some lobbyist in Lansing."

Of course, it fails to mention one important fact – senators and representatives who make up the Legislature in Lansing are elected by voters, too.

One thing those lawmakers really need to do when they get back into session after the election is address the issue of using taxpayer money to campaign for or against ballot issues. It has become a hot topic this year. And well it should be. When I pay taxes to the government, I intend them to be used for services and programs, not to give officials cash to further their agenda at the ballot box.

State lawmakers outlawed the use of public resources by government officials to influence elections in 1996. Before that, it was judged to be out-of-bounds only as a result of Attorney General opinions, so the prohibition was weak and enforcement was virtually non-existent.

This year, the Secretary of State's office has attempted to crack down. The effort is making headlines because we have two proposals on the November ballot that affect the way government officials do their work – Proposal 1, to create school vouchers, and Proposal 2, which would require a two-thirds vote from the Legislature on any law that "intervenes" in local government.

Readers have likely heard more about the issue as it relates to Proposal 1. Pro-voucher folks have filed 17 complaints against school districts over things like publishing newsletters and press releases, pretty minor stuff. When it ended up in court, a judge sided with the school officials.

The bigger issue is the question of how the Local Votes folks are paying for their campaign. When Let Local Votes Count filed its campaign finance statement in September, it had received almost $900,000. Most of it came directly out of the accounts of the Michigan Municipal League, $521,000. Where does the MML get its money? The largest single chunk comes from membership dues. Who pays those dues? Municipal governments, out of taxpayer-funded budgets. The MML argues that dues actually constitute only about a quarter of its annual budget. The rest comes from fees for services, such as hosting seminars. But who buys those services? Mostly municipalities, one would have to assume.

Most of the cash the MML has turned over to Local Votes – $514,000 – was labeled as a "loan." The top brass at the MML, who also run the Local Votes organization, say it will all be paid back later.

I'm skeptical. From February through September, the group had managed to raise only $79,000. The remainder – $300,000 – was a loan from the Bank of Ann Arbor, which also has to be paid back. And it's difficult to imagine that much cash being generated in the last month of the campaign. Debts are routinely "forgiven" rather than being paid off. It happens all the time. So it would be easy for that $514,000 to become a donation after the fact.

Of course, this is all legal. Once cash is paid out by a municipal government, it is no longer considered to be public money. Michigan's previous Attorney General and the courts both reached that conclusion. You wouldn't prohibit another service-provider, just because he or she took payment from a municipality, from participation in the elections process.

On the other hand, it isn't hard to imagine how municipal officials, with decision-making authority over taxpayer-funded budgets, might abuse the system by funneling money into another organization where they also ultimately make the decisions on how those funds are to be spent.

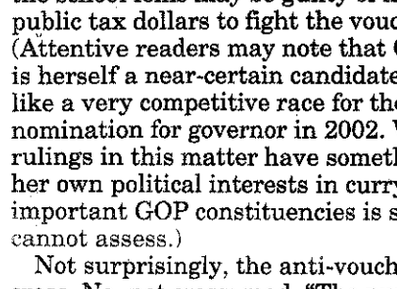
Nursing home bill should be stopped

Michigan residents have the opportunity to protect people living in nursing homes from neglect, abuse, and in some cases, death in facilities and also reduce Medicare fraud across the United States.

Eighty to 85 percent of the people who enter a nursing home as private pay residents become Medicare and Medicaid recipients.

We must stop bill SB 2999 from becoming a law, because it will allow nursing homes to neglect and abuse residents while the owners continue receiving and earning interest on Medicare overpayments.



James Wilson and Cathie Wallace

It will have an impact on nearly 1.8 million Americans living in 17,000-plus nursing homes.

This number is expected to increase to 2.9 million by 2020. U.S. Sen. Spencer Abraham has sponsored bill SB 2999, called the "Health Care Provider Bill of Rights," more aptly dubbed by citizen advocates as the "Nursing Homes' and Hospitals' Bill of Rights."

It strips the Health Care Finance Administration (HCFA), the U.S. health care regulatory agency, of its power to investigate and enforce the federal regulations governing Medicare to protect nursing home residents. It also weakens the False Claims Act that now forces nursing homes that have fraudulently billed Medicare to improve their care of neglected residents, and allows criminal investigations of these facilities.

The U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) stated in its March 1999 report that "surveys conducted in the nation's 17,000-plus nursing homes in recent years showed that each year, more than one-fourth of the homes had deficiencies that caused actual harm to residents or placed them at risk of death or serious injury.

The most frequent violations causing actual harm included inadequate prevention of pressure sores, failure to prevent accidents, and failure to assess residents' needs and provide appropriate care."

The elderly and younger disabled residents confined to these facilities are a highly vulnerable population.

If abuse and neglect cases are reported to the Michigan agency, Consumer and Industry Services (CIS), and they are not investigated or corrected, the only recourse is to report them to HCFA; they takes action after a lengthy process to document these incidents. In many cases it has taken CIS 100 to more than 320 days to initiate an investigation.

The GAO report states that in one Michigan nursing home after 292 days, CIS had still not started an investigation of a complaint that alleged "resident developed pressure sores on both feet and had to have part of one leg amputated due to improper care of the sores." Sen. Abraham's bill prevents HCFA from investigating these types of alleged abuses and informing the public until the charges go through the legal process. It also discontinues HCFA's ability to immediately institute new regulations to protect and care for the residents.

In one Medicare fraud case against a large nursing home chain, the government's sentencing memorandum said they fabricated nursing cost figures based on set formulas designed to maximize profits which were backed by false documents, such as phony nurse sign-in sheets.

The federal estimates put the total cost to Medicare in this case at $460 million and, when finalized, the deal paid only $175 million to resolve charges the company defrauded the Medicare system.

Five nursing home chains have filed for bankruptcy, including one firm with a claim from the U.S. Justice Department that they owe the government more that $1.3 billion. Much of that, the Justice Department charges, is due to fraudulent billings the company submitted to the government for medical treatments.

And we, the taxpayers, have reimbursed these companies for services that were never given to the residents.

My grandfather died at 102 years-of-age after twenty-seven months of inadequate care in four different nursing homes.

Nursing home residents need more enforcement of laws and HCFA is often their last hope.

We must demand that Sen. Abraham will no longer sponsor bill SB 2999, and that our legislators actively and aggressively fight to protect the vulnerable nursing home residents! After all, Sen. Abraham and the other legislators need to improve their possible future homes and the future homes of many of the US citizens.

Cathie Wallace and James E. Wilson are co-directors of A Coalition for The Improvement Of Nursing homes (ACTION), a Livonia-based group. The married couple live in Westland.

Kirksey will work to increase bus ridership

STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

The new head of the Wayne County Transit Authority says he welcomes the challenge of bettering the region's public transportation.

The challenge, said Livonia Mayor Jack E. Kirksey, is in both increasing bus ridership while also working to avoid potential pitfalls and problems.

Kirksey on Sept. 13 was unanimously elected chairman of the 10-member WCTA board just six months after being voted a seat on the board.

The Wayne County Transit Authority is the legal entity established by the county in 1995 as both the policy-making board for the county's portion of the suburban bus system SMART (Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation) and collector of the 1/3-mill property tax for operating it.

As WCTA chair, Kirksey also gets a seat on the SMART board of directors.

Kirksey also serves as chairman – until year's end – of the Conference of Western Wayne (CWW) and recently became chair of a newly organized county arts and culture council.

Kirksey called his WCTA election "an unexpected honor" and stated, "I appreciate the opportunity to serve in this capacity."

He said he is "delighted with the prospect of being able to work" with fellow board members "and do what I can to improve public transit."

He aims "to continue to work towards improved and enhanced public transportation, both locally and across the metropolitan area."

More bus runs

As Livonia's mayor, he's already been involved in that: Recent improvements to Livonia's local transportation include increasing the number of total SMART bus runs, extending routes to Laurel Park Mall, the Livonia Mall and to Schoolcraft Community College, and also increased service on Plymouth Road – buses now run every half-hour as opposed to hourly, he said.

Also, "We created some new bus lines in Livonia the last couple of years by working with the SMART people," the mayor said, noting, "They've been very helpful in bringing a workforce into Livonia" to both the new Millennium Park industrial and retail area at Middlebelt and Interstate 96 and also to the Livonia Mall.

In addition, he noted, "We've launched own local bus system (Livonia Community Transit) that filled a dire need" for residents needing door-to-door service both in Livonia and neighboring communities. For a flat fee, seniors and the disabled can travel anywhere in Livonia.

Commuter buses

LCT operates four commuter-type buses, each seating 22 people, for which Livonia paid 20 cents on the dollar, Kirksey noted.

Regionally, Kirksey said, he will be monitoring new construction developments in downtown Detroit that could involve reconfiguring streets around the Renaissance Center.

That "could be problematic for public transit, in that buses would not be able to penetrate as deeply" into the city.

"They may have to stop well short of the (work) destination of many riders," he said, describing it as "a potentially very serious problem" for those forced to find other transportation to their jobs.

Otherwise, Kirksey said WCTA will continue working with SMART to replace its aging fleet and to continue lobbying in Washington, D.C., "for funds to make all this happen."

Regarding the recent addition of two stops in Redford Township that angered some Livonia Park N Ride customers, Kirksey said Livonia arranged a meeting with SMART executives and believes the meeting helped those affected to understand "it was the best SMART could do at the time."

SMART said it was done to counteract a decline in ridership.

Kids will be "KIDS!" if you allow them to

Kids are great. "KIDS!" are horrid.

A decorator came to my home recently. She brought her "sweet" daughter. (Oh, joy.)

Sweetie wanted to play with my computer. (NOT!) Mom assured me that Sweetie was very good. (Possibly, but the answer is still "NO.") Sweetie whined, pouted, nagged. (Tough, Sweetie. You're not touching my computer.) Meanwhile, Mom installed a valance.

"Do you have a husband," Sweetie asked.

"Not any more," I replied.

"Why?"

"I got rid of him."

"Why?"

"He wanted to play with my computer."

Sweetie was suddenly hungry. Mom explained that Sweetie often became hungry at odd times, such as at bedtime. "But, I don't think it's on purpose to avoid going to bed," Mom cooed. (Hellooo. Anybody home?)

(Oh, yeah. Right.)

"What's the matter, Sweetie?"

"I'm afraid."

"Afraid of what, Sweetie?"

"This house scares me."

"What's scary, Sweetie?"

"Whine, mumble, sniffle, whine, mumble."

Watching TV

Mom suggested watching cartoons. We went into the TV room and turned on the set. With a demonic gleam in her eyes, Sweetie snatched the remote and aimed it at the TV like a Swat Team member during a raid. She stabbed in cable TV channel numbers, which don't work without cable.

Sweetie didn't want to watch TV. She wanted to call someone. Mom asked if Sweetie could use my phone. (Yeah, OK. Maybe Sweetie will stop whining for a nanosecond.)

Sweetie jammed her fingers in her ears and scrunched up her face.

"What's wrong, Sweetie?"

"The Barney Song! The Barney Song!" she wailed. "I don't like Barney!"

"But, you used to like Barney."

"I don't like him anymore!" Sweetie snarled, stomping her foot.

Mom gave me a weak smile. With her eyes, she pleaded for me to turn off the TV. She gently guided Sweetie to the phone. Sweetie made her call, but reached an answering machine and pouted.

Kiddie fingers

While Mom hung pictures, Sweetie whined and picked up every crystal item on the glass coffee table. She handled the items carelessly over the table and tried to peel the felt from the bottom of one piece. I snapped ... twang!

"DON'T DO THAT!" Sweetie stared at me, stunned. Obviously, no one had ever uttered those words to her before. Mom sweetly explained that the felt protected the table. But, Mom didn't say, "Put it back." I glared at Sweetie; she put the crystal down.

Mom finished, packed her tools and started loading her van. Sweetie picked up a hand-blown glass candleholder from another table. When Mom returned, she told Sweetie, reluctantly, to stop touching things. Sweetie pouted. She wanted to make another call and lunged for the phone. (NOT!) I told them I had limited service, which I do. Sweetie pouted and stomped to the van. Good! Sweetie was gone and that's the only way that "KID!" will ever be any good ... gone.

There are kids and then there are "KIDS!"

Church collects gift-filled shoe boxes for needy children around the world

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER
kmortson@oe.homecomm.net

You'd be surprised at the amount of joy children throughout the world have received from the gift of a shoe box. Not an ordinary shoe box but one filled with toys, candy and school supplies from caring people in the United States as part of Operation Christmas Child.

With the backing of Samaritan's Purse, Operation Christmas Child has touched the lives of more than nine million children in 65 countries around the world with gift-filled shoe boxes.

For the fourth year in a row, NorthRidge Church in Plymouth will serve as a relay center for individuals, families, businesses, churches and service organizations who wish to fill shoe boxes with age appropriate gifts for children from as far away as Swaziland and Belize.

Samaritan's Purse is a Christian relief and evangelism organization founded by Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham. With processing centers in Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Denver, Atlanta and North Carolina, Operation Christmas Child has continued to thrive since its inception in 1993 when 28,000 boxes were distributed. Last year approximately 3.1 million shoe boxes made it into the hands of underprivileged children overseas.

■ 'This is a very do-able project before the rush of the holidays.'

Karen Williams
—Operation Christmas Project leader at NorthRidge Church , Plymouth

"Operation Christmas Child is an outreach of NorthRidge Missions, led by Karen Williams, that allows our people the opportunity to put together shoe boxes filled with toys, goodies and personal items that are then sent to children all over the world. These packages are then used by local pastors to help them share the good news of Jesus with the people in their area," said D. J. West, pastor of mission and community outreach at NorthRidge.

Meaningful mission

Williams, a Canton resident who actively participates in her Plymouth Church, finds her involvement exciting and humbling, "It is a privilege to be a part of something of this nature," said Williams, who leads the outreach mission at NorthRidge Church. "The extent to which this organization targets children worldwide is really moving. The boxes have made it to wartorn Kosovo and to Honduras where Hurricane Mitch destroyed everything in its path."

For the second year in a row Williams is overseeing the project that not only involves the families of NorthRidge but appeals throughout communities and denominations in southeastern Michigan.

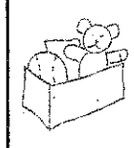
"I liked the idea of this project because it was something a family could do together or a way for parents to introduce a hands-on approach to helping those less fortunate," said Williams, who involved her two children last year and will do so again this holiday season. "This is a very do-able project before the rush of the holidays."

The kick-off for the Operation Christmas Child program is Sunday, Oct. 29. Boxes will be accepted from that Sunday until Nov. 17 at NorthRidge Church in Plymouth before they are shipped to a collection center in Brighton and then onto the processing center in Minneapolis.

How to Pack Your Shoe Box Gift

Find an empty shoe box. You can wrap it — lid separately — if you would like, but wrapping is not required.

Decide whether your gift will be for a boy or a girl and the age category: 2-4, 5-9 or 10-14. Cut out the appropriate label from the back of the brochure, tape it on the top of your box and mark the correct age category. Labels can be printed from the Web site www.samaritan.org



Fill the box with a variety of gifts. In a separate envelope you may enclose a note to the child and a photo of yourself or your family. If you include your name and address the child may write you back.

Suggested gifts:

- Toys - small cars, balls, dolls, stuffed animals, plastic kazoos, harmonicas, yo-yos, small Etch A Sketch, toys that light up or make noise (with extra batteries), Slinky, etc.
- School supplies - pens, pencils and sharpener, crayons/markers, stamps and ink pad sets, stickers, coloring books, writing pads or paper, solar calculators, etc.
- Hygiene items - toothbrush, toothpaste, soap, comb, washcloth, etc.

Other - hard candy, lollipops, mints, gum, sunglasses, flashlights with extra batteries, ball caps, socks, t-shirts, toys jewelry sets, hair-clips, watches, small picture books, etc.

Samaritan's Purse asks that you DO NOT include the following items: used items, war-related items (guns, knives, etc.), perishable items (chocolate, canned foods, crackers, etc.), liquids (shampoo, lotions, bubbles, etc.), medicines (vitamins, cough drops, ointment, etc.), breakable items (mirrors, china dolls, etc.).

IMPORTANT: Enclose $5 or more in the attached envelope and put it inside your shoe box to help cover the shipping and other costs. Please place the envelope so it is clearly visible on top of the gift items. Place a rubber band around your box and lid.

Checks are recommended rather than cash. If you're packing more than one box, you can make on combined donation in a single envelope. Gifts are tax deductible to the full extent allowed by law.

The collection center nearest you is NorthRidge Church, 49555 North Territorial, west of Beck Road in Plymouth Township. You can also ship your box to: Samaritan's Purse, 801 Bamboo Road, P.O. Box 3000, Boone, NC 28607.

NorthRidge parishioner Mark Holmes, a resident of Garden City, will make arrangements again this year

Shelter strives to send families home

BY BEVERLY A. LEN
SPECIAL WRITER

By a nasty twist of fate or a string of bad luck, they are homeless and so are their children. They are from the Grosse Pointes, Livonia, Detroit, Westland, throughout Wayne County and throughout Michigan. They are the residents of the Wayne County Family Center.

Tucked behind the imposing main building of the old Eloise Psychiatric Hospital, on Michigan Avenue in Westland, the center is one of the largest shelters for homeless families in Michigan.

"Children are the key to eligibility," said Cynthia Haberman, director. The center accepts one and two-parent families and pregnant women. In partnership with Wayne County, Lutheran Social Services of Michigan now cares for 27 adults with a total of 72 children. The center is filled to capacity.

"Our focus is to keep families together," said Haberman. "Unlike most shelters, we provide each family with one private room, with a lock and key."

Donated beds with donated sheets and blankets are the only furnishings. The rooms aren't pretty, but they are clean and comfortable. And, for now, they are home. Here, parents can be with their children to cuddle them, read to them, make them feel safe.

Fires, evictions, domestic violence and other adversities don't fit neatly into a nine-to-five time frame. Incoming families are accepted 24 hours a day, 7 days a week as long as there is space available.

BEVERLY LEN

Cuddles: Wayne County Family Center day care director Monique Thompson cuddles a preschooler in the KidZone. Children can stay there while their parents work or attend school.

Once a family comes to the center, all of their needs are taken care of for up to two years, providing the family follows the program and makes progress. However, the average stay is two months.

The program includes job counseling, training and placement, education and GED testing, parenting classes, support groups, individual and group counseling, relocation services and much more.

Sharing responsibilities

It is not a free ride. As part of the job-training program, residents work in the kitchen, the day care center and building maintenance, as well as maintaining their own rooms. Residents, who are employed, must save 85 percent of their wages.

There are many myths and preconceived beliefs about homelessness. Typical beliefs are that all homeless people are alcoholics, drug addicts, inner city welfare recipients or just too lazy to get a job. That's not true, according to Haberman. Although people in all of those categories are among the homeless, most are single mothers with two or more children. They have, or had, low-paying jobs and no backup support. If one of their children gets sick, there's no one to care for it; the mother doesn't go to work and gets fired. Bills stack up, they get evicted — it's a vicious downward spiral.

"With our programs, we want to break the cycle," Haberman said. Most of the families at the center have done a lot of 'couch hopping.' After losing their home, they may have stayed with relatives, friends, or lived in a motel or even a car. Many have large utility bills left over from their last home, which makes it impossible to secure another residence. The center offers assistance in planning finances, with emphasis on the proper use of credit and budgeting. The mandatory savings helps pay outstanding utility bills and provides the funds necessary to obtain permanent housing. Residents are encouraged to stay at the center until they are debt free. This makes the transition to self-sufficiency easier and more likely to be successful.

The impact of a homeless lifestyle on children can be profound.

Striking a balance

"Our main priority is to get the children stabilized," Haberman said. "Our KidZone is a licensed childcare center where children can stay while their parent works, looks for housing or employment or attends school." Many of the younger children are behind developmentally, because of the instability in their short lives. KidZone helps them catch up or at least improve.

"And, their parents don't have to worry about their child's safety or whether they're being fed or if they're sick," Haberman added. With equipment donated by World Medical Relief, a storage room was recently converted into a small health clinic. Now children and adults receive needed medical care on site.

Homeless children tend to have a higher incidence of asthma than do mainstream children, as well as other health problems. Dr. Terry Joiner, a volunteer from the Ypsilanti Pediatric Clinic, provides regular medical care for the children every Friday. With the exception of inhalers, Staff members dispense all medications, even aspirin.

through his employer, Keebler, to acquire a semi-truck for transporting the shoe boxes from Plymouth to Brighton.

According to Williams, one box changes hands seven times before a child receives it. "It's amazing all of the volunteer effort that goes into a program of this magnitude."

In 1999 six cargo jets and 342 truck-sized sea containers carried boxes overseas from donor countries such as Australia, Canada, Finland, Germany, Netherlands, United Kingdom and United States. From there the shoe boxes are sometimes taken by helicopter to remote villages or carried on horseback — whatever means of transportation it takes to bring Christmas to a child who lacks even the most basic necessities such as a clean water, electricity, nutritional food and adequate shelter.

"I feel like this has been a good way to teach my children how to give to other people who really have nothing," said Sue Levergood of Canton. Her two children ages 9 and 6 went with their mom to shop for items for the shoe box they packed last year. Levergood said she and her children read a lot of books about foreign countries and watched a video in 1999 about some of the children who receive the shoe boxes.

"My son was so moved by the video that he said to me 'Mom, I feel like I've got to do this,'" recalled Levergood.

After the processing centers receive the gift boxes volunteers sort the boxes to make sure that each one is equally filled with items and include a copy of the Christmas story in the language of the country it will be delivered. Williams noted that boxes for boys ages 10-14 are in greatest need.

"A lot of boxes come in for younger children. They really need gifts for older boys from age 10 into their early teen years," said Williams.

If you would like to make an individual or group donation of a shoe box(es) filled with gifts, NorthRidge Church (49555 North Territorial Road) in Plymouth will accept boxes from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and after Sunday services until Nov. 17. You can also visit www.northridgechurch.com or www.samaritan.org for more information.

"We keep everything locked up," said Haberman. "There are too many children here to allow even over-the-counter items anywhere else in the building."

With the children cared for, parents learn marketable skills and parenting skills to help them cope with real-life problems. With the help of staff members who specialize in job placement and housing, families return to independent living with hope for the future.

In 1999, the center served 176 families | a total of 616 individuals, most were children. A social worker stays in touch with the family for six months after they leave to help during the transition. "We have gotten a few repeat residents," Haberman said, "but not many."

The center's goal is to go out of business.

"I wish my staff would say that we have empty rooms and no one to fill them," said Haberman.

Last year, after ten10 months at the center, one family was able to purchase their own small home. Now, once a month, they return to the center as volunteers with their church group and food, which they cook and serve to current residents. Another former resident returns once a week to drive people to look for work and housing.

These volunteers know better than anyone that being broke, out of a job, in debt and homeless with children isn't hopeless after all, thanks to Lutheran Social Services and the Wayne County Family Center.

WEDDINGS & ANNIVERSARIES

Burnham-Bakowski

Pat Burnham of Minden, Louisiana and (the late) Kenneth Burnham Sr. announce the marriage of their daughter, Lisa Lynn Burnham to Adam John Bakowski.

The bride is a 1992 graduate of Minden High School in Louisiana and a 1997 graduate of the University of Arizona in Tucson, where she earned a degree in psychology.

Her husband, son of Robert and Irene Bakowski of Canton, is a 1994 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School and a 1998 graduate of Michigan State University, where he earned a degree in zoology.

The couple wed June 20 at Sandals Royal Bahamian Resort & Spa in Nassau, Bahamas. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth Burnham, and was attended by her matron of honor, Kelly Burnham of Louisiana, Mandy Harrison of Louisiana and Lauren Bakowski. The groom was attended by best man and father, Robert Bakowski, and groomsmen Xuong Duong and Chris Bagozzi.

The couple were honored with a reception in Shreveport, Louisiana in late June and in Dearborn Heights in late July. They now live in Ypsilanti.

Holliday-Fyke

Paul and Mary Holliday of Portage announce the marriage of their daughter, Brandi Lynn, to Mitchell Craig Fyke. The groom is the son of Russell and Suzanne Fyke of Plymouth.

The couple wed June 3 in the ballroom of the Holiday Inn West in Lansing before the Rev. Carl L. Hausermann of Portage Chapel Hill United Methodist Church.

The bride was attended by her sister Kelly Ann Holliday who served as her maid of honor and bridesmaid Allison Brooke Fyke, the groom's sister.

Chicago, Illinois.

The couple received guests in the ballroom of the Holiday Inn West in Lansing and took a wedding trip to Disney World - Florida. They are making their home in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Drott

Bob and Irene Drott of Garden City celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Sept. 30. They have been residents of Garden City for 41 years.

Bob is retired from Cummins/Ex-Cell-O in Walled Lake, formerly called the McCord Corp. in the New Center Area of Detroit, where he worked as a cost estimator. Irene retired from the World Headquarters of Kelly Services in Troy where she was a keypunch operator.

Much of their time is spent with their only daughter, Terri Golla who resides in Farmington Hills, with her husband Dennis and their 14 year-old son, Derrick who attends Farmington High School. Bob and Irene can be seen at most of Derrick's extracurricular activities and sporting events such as soccer and basketball. The couple also belong to the Livonia Travel Club and have taken numerous trips and cruises with the group exploring the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Celebrate pastoral care

To celebrate Pastoral Care Week, the Samaritan Counseling Center of Southeastern Michigan is planning a gathering to celebrate pastoral care and to propose an opportunity for continuing education for pastoral caregivers. Call the Samaritan Center at (248) 474-4701 for further information.

Stephen Ministers, deacons, and others in pastoral care are invited to come on Sunday, Oct. 29, to a session at Nardin Park United Methodist Church, Farmington Hills. The program will include worship, speakers on the topic of pastoral care, refreshments and a time to meet caregivers from other congregations. An important part of the day will be exploring the possibility of starting a group to work with the Samaritan staff to guide and develop ongoing programs of continuing education for lay pastoral caregivers.

Each year houses of worship in many countries celebrate Pastoral Care Week, which honors and celebrates the caring outreach of religious communities to their members, and to those in the wider community in need of care.

Since 1995, the Coalition on Ministry in Specialized Settings has sponsored events to recognize the professional pastoral caregiver.

Gripping Drama of Human Courage

OCT 18 THROUGH NOV 12

A teenage girl's joyous love of life and indomitable spirit triumphs in a world gone mad. From her family's secret attic hiding place in Nazi-occupied Amsterdam, young Anne fills her diary with hopes and dreams. Her compelling story of innocence in the face of terror has inspired generations.

Announcing a revolutionary look at bifocals.

ACUVUE BIFOCAL contact lenses.
Ask if they're right for you.

Never before has seeing well both near and far been so comfortable or attractive. ACUVUE® BIFOCAL Contact Lenses are a truly unprecedented breakthrough in bifocal technology giving you the feeling and freedom of natural vision. Plus, they're the only bifocal contact lens with UV blocking.* If an eye exam determines that they're right for you, ask about a free trial pair. Free trial offer is available to first-time wearers and does not include professional fees.

*WARNING: UV-absorbing contact lenses are NOT substitutes for protective UV-absorbing eyewear such as UV-absorbing goggles or sunglasses because they do not completely cover the eye and surrounding area. You should continue to use UV-absorbing eyewear as directed. NOTE: Long term exposure to UV radiation is one of the risk factors associated with cataracts. Exposure is based on a number of factors such as environmental conditions (altitude, geography, cloud cover) and personal factors (extent and nature of outdoor activities). UV-blocking contact lenses help provide protection against harmful UV radiation. However, clinical studies have not been done to demonstrate that wearing UV-blocking contact lenses reduce the risk of developing cataracts or other eye disorders. Consult your Eye Care Practitioner for more information.

*Give Thanks To The Lord...*The Bible tells us to give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, His love endures forever. We all have so much to be thankful for, regardless of our situation in life.

God has given us so much and asks for little in return. We should always be thankful for His love for us and realize that in everything, God works for good with those who love Him who are called according to His purpose.

Give thanks to the Lord, because He is good, and His love is eternal.

God's Love Is Everywhere

RELIGION

When I found our preschooler son hugging his basketball in his bed at night instead of his teddy bear a few years ago, I knew I had an Olympic-size problem. Growing up, I wasn't very fond of sports. It seemed to me that sports was all about proving one's superiority over someone else, and of course about winning; and since I was usually the one losing, I could see nothing fun about athletics. Then when I became a mother, our young son taught me a grand lesson, which changed my views. Let me tell you about it.

When our son would look at the pictures in sports magazines instead of playing in the kid's toy section, there was no doubt in my mind that we had an athlete on our hands. So what was I to do? If sports were to be a part of his life I wanted to love sports and all his activities and be able to support him in anything that was right for him, so I decided to pray.

I knew that divine Love, God would provide an answer. When he was five, he began to make baskets at ten feet with a full sized basketball. When he was six he could throw a baseball to me with precision across the width of our back yard (70 feet). At seven, he was diving off the diving board at the high school Olympic-sized pool with fearlessness and grace and then swimming to the bottom of the deep end (13 feet deep) just to see if he could touch it. He did.

I started to realize sports weren't about beating someone else. They weren't about putting someone else down. They were about being the best each one could be and demonstrating the unlimited qualities of God. Not that our son is a superstar or anything. He's just an ordinary boy. But because he never accepted (or learned) limitations, he has exceeded people's expectations of what is possible for kids his age.

Anyone can show by different degrees that all athletic abilities (as well as qualities such as intelligence and joy) come from God and are available to each one in abundance. To the degree that one understands that God, not one's self, is the source of all abilities and action, one can claim these qualities as God's reflection. The result is seeing less limitation and more freedom and talent in our experience.

The Bible confirms this as Jesus says, "I can of mine own self do nothing," (John 5:30) and "with God all things are possible" (Matt. 19:26) — and what mighty things he accomplished!

For karate students to break a cement block with their bare hands; for Michael Jordan to appear to defy gravity if only for a moment as he flies into the air and "hangs" there to sink a slam dunk; for a gymnast to perform feats of flexibility and balance beyond human comprehension — these experiences all point to the infinite possibilities of man as the expression of an infinite God.

I finally got it! Since all things are possible to God, and man is God's own likeness (and that includes the true nature of each one of us), then limits can crumble away. Mary Baker Eddy, who in her lifetime overcame many limitations, puts it like this: "The admission to one's self that man is God's own likeness sets man free to master the infinite idea." (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures)

Sports and competition are more about expressing God's nature and overcoming limitations, whether self-imposed or imposed on us by others, than about winning or beating someone else. Then, win or lose, we have made a conquest and found true joy and a greater degree of excellence in sports and everywhere in our lives. Thank you, son, and let the games begin!

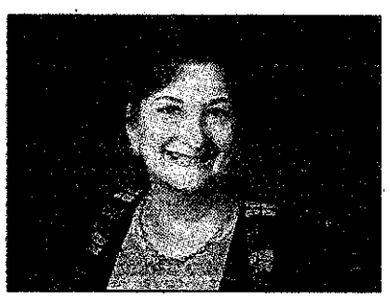
If you are interested in attending one or all of the Livonia Town Hall lecture series programs, call Emily Stankus for reservations and luncheon tickets at (734) 420-0383. The deadline to purchase tickets for the Oct. 18 luncheon is Friday, Oct. 13.

CANTON PUBLIC LIBRARY



BEVERLY LEN

Kids will be "KIDS!" if you allow them to

Kids are great. "KIDS!" are horrid.

A decorator came to my home recently. She brought her "sweet" daughter. (Oh, joy.)

Sweetie wanted to play with my computer. (NOT!) Mom assured me that Sweetie was very good. (Possibly, but the answer is still "NO.") Sweetie whined, pouted, nagged. (Tough, Sweetie. You're not touching my computer.) Meanwhile, Mom installed a valance.

"Do you have a husband," Sweetie asked.

"Not any more," I replied.

"Why?"

"I got rid of him."

"Why?"

"He wanted to play with my computer."

Sweetie was suddenly hungry. Mom explained that Sweetie often became hungry at odd times, such as at bedtime. "But, I don't think it's on purpose to avoid going to bed," Mom cooed. (Hellooo. Anybody home?)

(Oh, yeah. Right.)

"What's the matter, Sweetie?"

"I'm afraid."

"Afraid of what, Sweetie?"

"This house scares me."

"What's scary, Sweetie?"

"Whine, mumble, sniffle, whine, mumble."

Watching TV

Mom suggested watching cartoons. We went into the TV room and turned on the set. With a demonic gleam in her eyes, Sweetie snatched the remote and aimed it at the TV like a Swat Team member during a raid. She stabbed in cable TV channel numbers, which don't work without cable.

Sweetie didn't want to watch TV. She wanted to call someone. Mom asked if Sweetie could use my phone. (Yeah, OK. Maybe Sweetie will stop whining for a nanosecond.)

Sweetie jammed her fingers in her ears and scrunched up her face.

"What's wrong, Sweetie?"

"The Barney Song! The Barney Song!" she wailed. "I don't like Barney!"

"But, you used to like Barney."

"I don't like him anymore!" Sweetie snarled, stomping her foot.

Mom gave me a weak smile. With her eyes, she pleaded for me to turn off the TV. She gently guided Sweetie to the phone. Sweetie made her call, but reached an answering machine and pouted.

Kiddie fingers

While Mom hung pictures, Sweetie whined and picked up every crystal item on the glass coffee table. She handled the items carelessly over the table and tried to peel the felt from the bottom of one piece. I snapped ... twang!

"DON'T DO THAT!" Sweetie stared at me, stunned. Obviously, no one had ever uttered those words to her before. Mom sweetly explained that the felt protected the table. But, Mom didn't say, "Put it back." I glared at Sweetie; she put the crystal down.

Mom finished, packed her tools and started loading her van. Sweetie picked up a hand-blown glass candleholder from another table. When Mom returned, she told Sweetie, reluctantly, to stop touching things. Sweetie pouted. She wanted to make another call and lunged for the phone. (NOT!) I told them I had limited service, which I do. Sweetie pouted and stomped to the van. Good! Sweetie was gone and that's the only way that "KID!" will ever be any good ... gone.

There are kids and then there are "KIDS!"

Church collects gift-filled shoe boxes for needy children around the world

■ 'This is a very do-able project before the rush of the holidays.'

Karen Williams
—Operation Christmas Project leader at NorthRidge Church , Plymouth

You'd be surprised at the amount of joy children throughout the world have received from the gift of a shoe box. Not an ordinary shoe box but one filled with toys, candy and school supplies from caring people in the United States as part of Operation Christmas Child.

With the backing of Samaritan's Purse, Operation Christmas Child has touched the lives of more than nine million children in 65 countries around the world with gift-filled shoe boxes.

For the fourth year in a row, NorthRidge Church in Plymouth will serve as a relay center for individuals, families, businesses, churches and service organizations who wish to fill shoe boxes with age appropriate gifts for children from as far away as Swaziland and Belize.

Samaritan's Purse is a Christian relief and evangelism organization founded by Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham. With processing centers in Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Denver, Atlanta and North Carolina, Operation Christmas Child has continued to thrive since its inception in 1993 when 28,000 boxes were distributed. Last year approximately 3.1 million shoe boxes made it into the hands of underprivileged children overseas.

"Operation Christmas Child is an outreach of NorthRidge Missions, led by Karen Williams, that allows our people the opportunity to put together shoe boxes filled with toys, goodies and personal items that are then sent to children all over the world. These packages are then used by local pastors to help them share the good news of Jesus with the people in their area," said D. J. West, pastor of mission and community outreach at NorthRidge.

Meaningful mission

Williams, a Canton resident who actively participates in her Plymouth Church, finds her involvement exciting and humbling, "It is a privilege to be a part of something of this nature," said Williams, who leads the outreach mission at NorthRidge Church. "The extent to which this organization targets children worldwide is really moving. The boxes have made it to wartorn Kosovo and to Honduras where Hurricane Mitch destroyed everything in its path."

For the second year in a row Williams is overseeing the project that not only involves the families of NorthRidge but appeals throughout communities and denominations in southeastern Michigan.

"I liked the idea of this project because it was something a family could do together or a way for parents to introduce a hands-on approach to helping those less fortunate," said Williams, who involved her two children last year and will do so again this holiday season. "This is a very do-able project before the rush of the holidays."

The kick-off for the Operation Christmas Child program is Sunday, Oct. 29. Boxes will be accepted from that Sunday until Nov. 17 at NorthRidge Church in Plymouth before they are shipped to a collection center in Brighton and then onto the processing center in Minneapolis.

How to Pack Your Shoe Box Gift

Find an empty shoe box. You can wrap it — lid separately — if you would like, but wrapping is not required.

Decide whether your gift will be for a boy or a girl and the age category: 2-4, 5-9 or 10-14. Cut out the appropriate label from the back of the brochure, tape it on the top of your box and mark the correct age category. Labels can be printed from the Web site www.samaritan.org

Fill the box with a variety of gifts. In a separate envelope you may enclose a note to the child and a photo of yourself or your family. If you include your name and address the child may write you back.

Suggested gifts:

- Toys - small cars, balls, dolls, stuffed animals, plastic kazoos, harmonicas, yo-yos, small Etch A Sketch, toys that light up or make noise (with extra batteries), Slinky, etc.
- School supplies - pens, pencils and sharpener, crayons/markers, stamps and ink pad sets, stickers, coloring books, writing pads or paper, solar calculators, etc.
- Hygiene items - toothbrush, toothpaste, soap, comb, washcloth, etc.

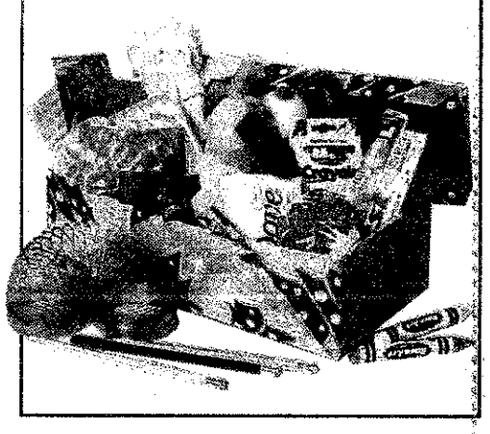
Other - hard candy, lollipops, mints, gum, sunglasses, flashlights with extra batteries, ball caps, socks, t-shirts, toys jewelry sets, hair-clips, watches, small picture books, etc.

Samaritan's Purse asks that you DO NOT include the following items: used items, war-related items (guns, knives, etc.), perishable items (chocolate, canned foods, crackers, etc.), liquids (shampoo, lotions, bubbles, etc.), medicines (vitamins, cough drops, ointment, etc.), breakable items (mirrors, china dolls, etc.).

IMPORTANT: Enclose $5 or more in the attached envelope and put it inside your shoe box to help cover the shipping and other costs. Please place the envelope so it is clearly visible on top of the gift items. Place a rubber band around your box and lid.

Checks are recommended rather than cash. If you're packing more than one box, you can make on combined donation in a single envelope. Gifts are tax deductible to the full extent allowed by law.

The collection center nearest you is NorthRidge Church, 49555 North Territorial, west of Beck Road in Plymouth Township. You can also ship your box to: Samaritan's Purse, 801 Bamboo Road, P.O. Box 3000, Boone, NC 28607



NorthRidge parishioner Mark Holmes, a resident of Garden City, will make arrangements again this year

Shelter strives to send families home

BY BEVERLY A. LEN
SPECIAL WRITER

BEVERLY LEN

Cuddles: Wayne County Family Center day care director Monique Thompson cuddles a preschooler in the KidZone. Children can stay there while their parents work or attend school.

By a nasty twist of fate or a string of bad luck, they are homeless and so are their children. They are from the Grosse Pointes, Livonia, Detroit, Westland, throughout Wayne County and throughout Michigan. They are the residents of the Wayne County Family Center.

Tucked behind the imposing main building of the old Eloise Psychiatric Hospital, on Michigan Avenue in Westland, the center is one of the largest shelters for homeless families in Michigan.

"Children are the key to eligibility," said Cynthia Haberman, director. The center accepts one and two-parent families and pregnant women. In partnership with Wayne County, Lutheran Social Services of Michigan now cares for 27 adults with a total of 72 children. The center is filled to capacity.

"Our focus is to keep families together," said Haberman. "Unlike most shelters, we provide each family with one private room, with a lock and key."

Donated beds with donated sheets and blankets are the only furnishings. The rooms aren't pretty, but they are clean and comfortable. And, for now, they are home. Here, parents can be with their children to cuddle them, read to them, make them feel safe.

Fires, evictions, domestic violence and other adversities don't fit neatly into a nine-to-five time frame. Incoming families are accepted 24 hours a day, 7 days a week as long as there is space available.

Once a family comes to the center, all of their needs are taken care of for up to two years, providing the family follows the program and makes progress. However, the average stay is two months.

The program includes job counseling, training and placement, education and GED testing, parenting classes, support groups, individual and group counseling, relocation services and much more.

Sharing responsibilities

It is not a free ride. As part of the job-training program, residents work in the kitchen, the day care center and building maintenance, as well as maintaining their own rooms. Residents, who are employed, must save 85 percent of their wages.

There are many myths and preconceived beliefs about homelessness. Typical beliefs are that all homeless people are alcoholics, drug addicts, inner city welfare recipients or just too lazy to get a job. That's not true, according to Haberman. Although people in all of those categories are among the homeless, most are single mothers with two or more children. They have, or had, low-paying jobs and no backup support. If one of their children gets sick, there's no one to care for it; the mother doesn't go to work and gets fired. Bills stack up, they get evicted — it's a vicious downward spiral.

"With our programs, we want to break the cycle," Haberman said. Most of the families at the center have done a lot of 'couch hopping.' After losing their home, they may have stayed with relatives, friends, or lived in a motel or even a car. Many have large utility bills left over from their last home, which makes it impossible to secure another residence. The center offers assistance in planning finances, with emphasis on the proper use of credit and budgeting. The mandatory savings helps pay outstanding utility bills and provides the funds necessary to obtain permanent housing. Residents are encouraged to stay at the center until they are debt free. This makes the transition to self-sufficiency easier and more likely to be successful.

The impact of a homeless lifestyle on children can be profound.

Striking a balance

"Our main priority is to get the children stabilized," Haberman said. "Our KidZone is a licensed childcare center where children can stay while their parent works, looks for housing or employment or attends school." Many of the younger children are behind developmentally, because of the instability in their short lives. KidZone helps them catch up or at least improve.

"And, their parents don't have to worry about their child's safety or whether they're being fed or if they're sick," Haberman added. With equipment donated by World Medical Relief, a storage room was recently converted into a small health clinic. Now children and adults receive needed medical care on site.

Homeless children tend to have a higher incidence of asthma than do mainstream children, as well as other health problems. Dr. Terry Joiner, a volunteer from the Ypsilanti Pediatric Clinic, provides regular medical care for the children every Friday. With the exception of inhalers, Staff members dispense all medications, even aspirin.

through his employer, Keebler, to acquire a semi-truck for transporting the shoe boxes from Plymouth to Brighton.

According to Williams, one box changes hands seven times before a child receives it. "It's amazing all of the volunteer effort that goes into a program of this magnitude."

In 1999 six cargo jets and 342 truck-sized sea containers carried boxes overseas from donor countries such as Australia, Canada, Finland, Germany, Netherlands, United Kingdom and United States. From there the shoe boxes are sometimes taken by helicopter to remote villages or carried on horseback — whatever means of transportation it takes to bring Christmas to a child who lacks even the most basic necessities such as a clean water, electricity, nutritional food and adequate shelter.

"I feel like this has been a good way to teach my children how to give to other people who really have nothing," said Sue Levergood of Canton. Her two children ages 9 and 6 went with their mom to shop for items for the shoe box they packed last year. Levergood said she and her children read a lot of books about foreign countries and watched a video in 1999 about some of the children who receive the shoe boxes.

"My son was so moved by the video that he said to me 'Mom, I feel like I've got to do this,'" recalled Levergood.

After the processing centers receive the gift boxes volunteers sort the boxes to make sure that each one is equally filled with items and include a copy of the Christmas story in the language of the country it will be delivered. Williams noted that boxes for boys ages 10-14 are in greatest need.

"A lot of boxes come in for younger children. They really need gifts for older boys from age 10 into their early teen years," said Williams.

If you would like to make an individual or group donation of a shoe box(es) filled with gifts, NorthRidge Church (49555 North Territorial Road) in Plymouth will accept boxes from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and after Sunday services until Nov. 17. You can also visit www.northridgechurch.com or www.samaritan.org for more information.

Samaritan's Purse

"We keep everything locked up," said Haberman. "There are too many children here to allow even over-the-counter items anywhere else in the building."

With the children cared for, parents learn marketable skills and parenting skills to help them cope with real-life problems. With the help of staff members who specialize in job placement and housing, families return to independent living with hope for the future.

In 1999, the center served 176 families | a total of 616 individuals, most were children. A social worker stays in touch with the family for six months after they leave to help during the transition. "We have gotten a few repeat residents," Haberman said, "but not many."

The center's goal is to go out of business.

"I wish my staff would say that we have empty rooms and no one to fill them," said Haberman.

Last year, after ten10 months at the center, one family was able to purchase their own small home. Now, once a month, they return to the center as volunteers with their church group and food, which they cook and serve to current residents. Another former resident returns once a week to drive people to look for work and housing.

These volunteers know better than anyone that being broke, out of a job, in debt and homeless with children isn't hopeless after all, thanks to Lutheran Social Services and the Wayne County Family Center.

WEDDINGS & ANNIVERSARIES

Burnham-Bakowski

Pat Burnham of Minden, Louisiana and (the late) Kenneth Burnham Sr. announce the marriage of their daughter, Lisa Lynn Burnham to Adam John Bakowski.

The bride is a 1992 graduate of Minden High School in Louisiana and a 1997 graduate of the University of Arizona in Tucson, where she earned a degree in psychology.

Her husband, son of Robert and Irene Bakowski of Canton, is a 1994 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School and a 1998 graduate of Michigan State University, where he earned a degree in zoology.

The couple wed June 20 at Sandals Royal Bahamian Resort & Spa in Nassau, Bahamas. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth Burnham, and was attended by her matron of honor, Kelly Burnham of Louisiana, Mandy Harrison of Louisiana and Lauren Bakowski. The groom was attended by best man and father, Robert Bakowski, and groomsmen Xuong Duong and Chris Bagozzi.

The couple were honored with a reception in Shreveport, Louisiana in late June and in Dearborn Heights in late July. They now live in Ypsilanti.

Holliday-Fyke

Paul and Mary Holliday of Portage announce the marriage of their daughter, Brandi Lynn, to Mitchell Craig Fyke. The groom is the son of Russell and Suzanne Fyke of Plymouth.

The couple wed June 3 in the ballroom of the Holiday Inn West in Lansing before the Rev. Carl L. Hausermann of Portage Chapel Hill United Methodist Church.

The bride was attended by her sister Kelly Ann Holliday who served as her maid of honor and bridesmaid Allison Brooke Fyke, the groom's sister.

Chicago, Illinois.

The couple received guests in the ballroom of the Holiday Inn West in Lansing and took a wedding trip to Disney World - Florida. They are making their home in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Drott

Bob and Irene Drott of Garden City celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Sept. 30. They have been residents of Garden City for 41 years.

Bob is retired from Cummins/Ex-Cell-O in Walled Lake, formerly called the McCord Corp. in the New Center Area of Detroit, where he worked as a cost estimator. Irene retired from the World Headquarters of Kelly Services in Troy where she was a keypunch operator.

Much of their time is spent with their only daughter, Terri Golla who resides in Farmington Hills, with her husband Dennis and their 14 year-old son, Derrick who attends Farmington High School. Bob and Irene can be seen at most of Derrick's extracurricular activities and sporting events such as soccer and basketball. The couple also belong to the Livonia Travel Club and have taken numerous trips and cruises with the group exploring the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Shaffer

Roger and Dorothy (Stanley) Shaffer of Livonia will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary this month. The couple wed Oct. 18, 1940 in Detroit. They have lived in Livonia for 17 years.

The couple has three children, Karen, James and David, along with eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Roger Shaffer is retired from his job at Chrysler, where he worked for 40 years. The couple enjoys spending time bowling, golfing and traveling.

The Shaffer's will celebrate with a party at their son James' home.

Buck

John and Sue (Gazda) Buck of Redford Township celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary last month. The couple wed Sept. 27, 1975 at Our Lady Queen of Heaven in Detroit.

John Buck has lived in the area all of his life, while his wife Sue has lived here for 25 years. The couple have two children, John Jr. and Anni. John Jr. is a paramedic and student at Eastern Michigan University. He lives in Redford Township. His sister Anni is a freshman at Michigan State University where she is studying to become a veterinarian.

John Buck works as the deputy police chief in Redford Township. For several years he has been president of the Redford Township Goodfellows and served as an advisor to the Police Explorer Scouts. He attended the National Academy of the FBI in 1991.

Sue Buck is a reporter for the Plymouth Observer. She is also a former board member of the Society of Professional Journalists and member of Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc.

To celebrate the special occasion, the family will share a special dinner with family and friends in November.

Lefke-Townsend

David and Marlene Lefke of Portland announce the marriage of their daughter, Sarah Jo Lefke to James Patrick Townsend of Portland, formerly of Livonia.

The bride is a 1995 graduate of Portland High and a 2000 graduate of Alma College. She works at the Michigan Early Elementary Center in Lansing as a second grade teacher.

Her husband, son of William and Kathleen Townsend of Dearborn, formerly of Livonia, is a 1995 graduate of Stevenson High School and a 1999 graduate of Alma College. He is employed by USXchange in Grand Rapids as a provisioner.

The couple wed in September in Portland, Mich.

Poprawa-Dziedzic

Conrad and Patricia Poprawa of Inkster announce the marriage of their daughter, Lisa Marie, to Scott Mitchell Dziedzic of Redford.

The bride earned her bachelor of science degree from Eastern Michigan University and is a graduate student in the speech-language pathology department at EMU. She will graduate with her masters degree in April, 2001.

Her husband, son of Walter and Christina Dziedzic of Livonia, is a millwright apprentice at DaimlerChrysler in Detroit. He is expected to get his journeyman's card in April 2001.

The couple wed Sept. 1, at St. Robert Bellarmine Catholic Church before the Rev. Denis Theroux. The bride was attended by Michele Buchanan, Debbie Zemoyan, Amy Marcoe, Jaclyn Dziedzic, Kendra Phillips, Lisa Berg, Jaclyn Theeck, Melissa Crosby, Chelsea Kangas and Hailey King.

The groom was attended by Lance Shockley, Jeff Dziedzic, Eric Buchanan, Jim Allen, Ryan Dziedzic, Michael Fremont, Michael Mackiewicz II and Daniel Crosby.

The couple received guests at Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth and will make their home in Redford Township.

ENGAGEMENT

Hansen-Taylor

David and Susan Hansen of Livonia announce the engagement of their daughter, Colleen Marie Hansen to Kevin Michael Taylor.

The bride-to-be is a 1992 graduate of Franklin High School and a 1996 graduate of Michigan State University. She earned her juris doctorate from University of Dayton School of Law in 1999 and is a magistrate for Butler County Court in Hamilton, Ohio.

Her fiancé, son of Linda Taylor of Albany, N.Y. and Alan Taylor of Voorheesville, N.Y., is a 1995 graduate of LeMoyne College and earned his juris doctorate from University of Dayton School of Law in 1999. He is a senior legal research attorney for Lexis-Nexis in Miamiburg, Ohio.

Celebrate pastoral care

To celebrate Pastoral Care Week, the Samaritan Counseling Center of Southeastern Michigan is planning a gathering to celebrate pastoral care and to propose an opportunity for continuing education for pastoral caregivers.

Stephen Ministers, deacons, and others in pastoral care are invited to come on Sunday, Oct. 29, to a session at Nardin Park United Methodist Church, Farmington Hills. The program will include worship, speakers on the topic of pastoral care, refreshments and a time to meet caregivers from other congregations. An important part of the day will be exploring the possibility of starting a group to work with the Samaritan staff to guide and develop ongoing programs of continuing education for lay pastoral caregivers. Call the Samaritan Center at (248) 474-4701 for further information.

Each year houses of worship in many countries celebrate Pastoral Care Week, which honors and celebrates the caring outreach of religious communities to their members, and to those in the wider community in need of care.

Since 1995, the Coalition on Ministry in Specialized Settings has sponsored events to recognize the professional pastoral caregiver.

See both near and far the way nature intended.
*WARNING: UV-absorbing contact lenses are NOT substitutes for protective UV-absorbing eyewear such as UV-absorbing goggles or sunglasses because they do not completely cover the eye and surrounding area. You should continue to use UV-absorbing eyewear as directed. NOTE: Long term exposure to UV radiation is one of the risk factors associated with cataracts. Exposure is based on a number of factors such as environmental conditions (altitude, geography, cloud cover) and personal factors (extent and nature of outdoor activities). UV-blocking contact lenses help provide protection against harmful UV radiation. However, clinical studies have not been done to demonstrate that wearing UV-blocking contact lenses reduce the risk of developing cataracts or other eye disorders. Consult your Eye Care Practitioner for more information.

Give Thanks To The Lord... The Bible tells us to give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, His love endures forever. We all have so much to be thankful for, regardless of our situation in life.

God has given us so much and asks for little in return. We should always be thankful for His love for us and realize that in everything, God works for good with those who love Him who are called according to His purpose.

Give thanks to the Lord, because He is good, and His love is eternal.

God's Love Is Everywhere

Mother learns Olympic-size lesson from young son

When I found our preschooler son hugging his basketball in his bed at night instead of his teddy bear a few years ago, I knew I had an Olympic-size problem. Growing up, I wasn't very fond of sports. It seemed to me that sports was all about proving one's superiority over someone else, and of course about winning; and since I was usually the one losing, I could see nothing fun about athletics. Then when I became a mother, our young son taught me a grand lesson, which changed my views. Let me tell you about it.

When our son would look at the pictures in sports magazines instead of playing in the kid's toy section, there was no doubt in my mind that we had an athlete on our hands. So what was I to do? If sports were to be a part of his life I wanted to love sports and all his activities and be able to support him in anything that was right for him, so I decided to pray.

I knew that divine Love, God would provide an answer. When he was five, he began to make baskets at ten feet with a full sized basketball. When he was six he could throw a baseball to me with precision across the width of our back yard (70 feet). At seven, he was diving off the diving board at the high school Olympic-sized pool with fearlessness and grace and then swimming to the bottom of the deep end (13 feet deep) just to see if he could touch it. He did.

I started to realize sports weren't about beating someone else. They weren't about putting someone else down. They were about being the best each one could be and demonstrating the unlimited qualities of God. Not that our son is a superstar or anything. He's just an ordinary boy. But because he never accepted (or learned) limitations, he has exceeded people's expectations of what is possible for kids his age.

Anyone can show by different degrees that all athletic abilities (as well as qualities such as intelligence and joy) come from God and are available to each one in abundance. To the degree that one understands that God, not one's self, is the source of all abilities and action, one can claim these qualities as God's reflection. The result is seeing less limitation and more freedom and talent in our experience.

The Bible confirms this as Jesus says, "I can of mine own self do nothing," (John 5:30) and "with God all things are possible" (Matt. 19:26) — and what mighty things he accomplished!

For karate students to break a cement block with their bare hands; for Michael Jordan to appear to defy gravity if only for a moment as he flies into the air and "hangs" there to sink a slam dunk; for a gymnast to perform feats of flexibility and balance beyond human comprehension — these experiences all point to the infinite possibilities of man as the expression of an infinite God.

I finally got it! Since all things are possible to God, and man is God's own likeness (and that includes the true nature of each one of us), then limits can crumble away. Mary Baker Eddy, who in her lifetime overcame many limitations, puts it like this: "The admission to one's self that man is God's own likeness sets man free to master the infinite idea." (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures)

Sports and competition are more about expressing God's nature and overcoming limitations, whether self-imposed or imposed on us by others, than about winning or beating someone else. Then, win or lose, we have made a conquest and found true joy and a greater degree of excellence in sports and everywhere in our lives. Thank you, son, and let the games begin!

Salem slips

After a fast start that saw the Plymouth Salem swim team win its first two dual meets, the Rocks have hit rough waters. On Tuesday against non-league foe Novi, Salem lost its third-consecutive dual — this one by a single point, 93.5-92.5.

The Rocks are now 2-3 overall in duals.

Highlight in the meet for Salem: Kari Foust, who bettered the state qualifying time in the 100-yard backstroke, finishing first in 1:02.13.

Other winners for the Rocks were Amy Mertens in the 100 breaststroke (1:10.28) and the 400 freestyle relay team of Monica Glowski, Jennifer Crabill, Foust and Mertens (3:54.64).

Salem hosts Walled Lake Central in a Western Lakes Activities Association dual at 7 p.m. tonight.

Ambassadors take title

The Compuware Ambassadors invited 20 teams for the annual Compuware Fall Classic last week and, after 33 games, they emerged with the championship with a 2-1 triumph over the Capital Centre Pride in the title game Monday.

Ryan Webb scored the game-winner on a feed from David Booth. D.J. Vogt netted the Ambassadors other goal, while Chad Davis turned away 28 shots in goal.

In the semifinals, Compuware (which was 2-0-1 in its division) defeated the Texas Tornado 5-2.

The Ambassadors' Matt Rutkowski led all scorers in the tournament with four goals and seven assists (11 points) in five games.

The Ambassadors resume their North American Hockey League schedule Friday when they host the Soo Kewadin Indians; on Saturday, Team USA visits Compuware Arena.

Counsel spikers 1st

Our Lady of Good Counsel's eighth-grade volleyball team was undefeated through its season, finishing first in the Catholic Youth Organization's West Division. District playoffs are next, beginning Saturday.

Team members are Ashley Aquinto, Teresa Coppiellie, Kristina Hall, Lori Hoetger, Ashton Judis, Jane Kruszewski, Trisha Morrill, Lauren Price, Jennifer Walker, Kristin Zawzcki and Brooke Ziomek. The Crusaders are coached by Kim Price.

Rockers' tickets on sale

The start of the National Professional Soccer League is about two weeks away, and the Detroit Rockers will have their first-ever game, and their home-opener, at the Compuware Sports Arena in Plymouth when they host the Wichita Wings at 3:05 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 29.

Tickets for all 15 Rockers' games to be played at Compuware are now on sale at the Compuware box office.

Olympian gives talk

Livonian Sheila Taormina, 1996 gold medalist in the women's 4 x 200-meter freestyle and sixth-place finisher in the women's triathlon at the 2000 Sydney Olympic Games, will be among the guest speakers Saturday at the Detroit Free Press/Flagstar Bank International Marathon Expo at the Detroit Marriott Ren Cen (Ontario Room).

Marathon winner Dr. Jeff Martin, sports psycholgist and professor at Wayne State University, kicks off the program at 1 p.m. followed by Taormina, the 2000 U.S. Olympic Trials triathlon winner and former University of Georgia All-America swimmer, at 2 p.m.

Author and writer Don Kardong, fourth place finisher at the 1976 Olympic marathon, will speak at 3 p.m. followed by Dave Hillger, program coordinator for Providence Athletic Medicine at 4 p.m.

Alumni game

The Madonna University softball team is hosting an Alumni Game from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 15 at Livonia Ladywood HS. All previous Madonna softball players are invited.

If any Madonna alumni softball players have contact information for former teammates, please contact head coach Al White at (734) 432-5783.

Anyone interested in submitting items to Sports Scene or Sports Roundup may send them to sports editor C.J. Risak, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI, 48150, or may FAX them to (734) 591-7279.

Canton claims division title

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

Just a few minutes after the completion of the match that decided who would play for the Western Lakes Activities Association soccer championship, Livonia Churchill coach Reid Friedrichs said of his team's offensive problems, "We need to fix it before playoff time."

Time for that is running out. The regular season is coming to a close; the state district tournament starts in 10 days. If your team hasn't come up with a way to score goals by now, it's in trouble.

That describes Churchill's woes. The Chargers hosted Plymouth Canton Wednesday, knowing a win or just a tie would earn them the Western Division title and put them in the WLAA Championship match opposite Lakes Division winner Livonia Stevenson.

But Canton proved faster and, in all-around performance, superior in riding two first-half goals to a 2-0 triumph.

The win boosted the Chiefs' overall record to 12-4-3. Churchill, which was shutout for the second-straight time on its own field, fell to 6-6-3.

Canton will host Stevenson at 7 p.m. Wednesday to determine the WLAA championship.

Goal-scoring miseries haven't been the Chargers' sole possession this season — it's plagued the entire league. In recent seasons Stevenson, Canton and Plymouth Salem have at different times boasted two superior goal-scorers on their teams at the same time.

This year, Churchill's Eric Scott may be the only player capable of approaching those of past standards.

The Chiefs, who struggled to find the net in the first few weeks of the season, seemed to have solved their problem by committee: by using wave after wave of fleet-footed forwards in an effort to wear out their opponents.

The strategy worked until last Monday, when Livonia Franklin shut Canton down in a scoreless draw.

"Against Franklin last Monday, it didn't get tight because (Franklin) never did anything offensively," said Canton coach Don Smith. "I should have played more people."

Smith rectified that mistake by using more than 20 players against the Chargers. "We've got to come as a group (offensively)," he explained.

The game's first goal came before the midpoint of the first half, with Evan Malone converting a pass from Mike Zemanski, putting it past Churchill keeper Eric Sicilia to make it 1-0 with 21:43 left.

Sixteen minutes later, the Chiefs doubled their lead when Zak Juntila fielded a cross from Scott McKee and raced down the left wing, beating the Churchill defense and Sicilia to make it 2-0 with 5:32 to play in the half.

That was all Canton needed. Because the Chargers could generate no offense against the Chiefs' defense, particularly in the second half.

"We've been dependent on Eric Scott all season," said a frustrated Friedrichs. "When he doesn't score, we don't score. We haven't scored a goal in our last two matches at home.

"The effort was there tonight. But (Canton) kept playing backside balls, weakside balls against us and that's how they scored. We got very few chances on goal."

Which is what Smith wanted to see from his defenders. "They're working hard," he said. "They're covering up for each other and they do a nice solid job. Nothing fancy."

The Chiefs will have to do more of the same against Stevenson, a team they defeated 2-0 during the season.

"We didn't get a lot of scoring opportunities against them," said Smith. "They didn't have a lot against us, either.

"We got a couple of chances and hit 'em. Now we've got to keep it going."

N'ville rules tourney; Salem fades

WLAA GOLF

Foursomes came trickling in, poring over scorecards before handing them to a group of coaches, who would re-calculate the scores before jotting them next to the corresponding names on sheets of paper taped to the window on the patio Tuesday at Salem Hills Golf Club.

The crowd of Western Lakes Activities Association golfers anxiously watching all this kept multiplying, straining to see each 18-hole total. After about 40 minutes, 11 of the 12 WLAA teams had at least one score posted.

The team without a single number by one of its names: Plymouth Salem, the league-leader through the dual-meet season with a 9-2 record. That might have made a few people queasy, because at that point only the Rocks seemed able to derail dual meet runner-up Northville.

Just before the Rocks' scores came in, any drama still remaining dissipated. The Mustangs' Tom Borda, Dave Oljace and Kris Betker had already put scores of 76, 77 and 78 on the board; when teammate Dean Conway came in with a 72, it was over.

No one could match Northville's marks.

As it turned out, the scores chronicled by Salem were well below its usual standard. Northville won easily with a team total of 390, 18 strokes ahead of Farmington, Livonia Stevenson and Walled Lake Western, each with 408s. Westland John Glenn was fifth (412), Walled Lake Central was sixth (414), Salem placed seventh (416) and Plymouth Canton ended up eighth (421) (see statistical summary).

Salem's tournament showing dropped it from contention for the WLAA championship. Northville won the league title with 20 points (a combination of dual-meet and tournament results), with Stevenson second (17), Western and Farmington tied for third (16) and Salem fifth (15).

Individually, Stevenson's Scott Wolfe repeated as tournament medalist with a 71. Conway's 72 was second best; Harrison's Matt Lee, Farmington's Keith Hay and Northville's Borda tied for third, each with a 76.

The scores posted by the Mustangs weren't all that surprising, considering those they put up in dual-meet wins over Canton (shooting a 186) and Salem (with a 199).

"We've been up and down a little bit," said Northville coach Brian Stedry. "We've been shooting scores like these individually, just not all at the same time. It's nice to seem them shoot scores like that in a big tournament."

Wolfe's score truly made a difference for Steven-

SC ranks with nation's elite

BY C.J. RISAK

This was the weekend Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team had been pointing toward for most of the season.

The Lady Ocelots' coach, Bill Tolstedt, knew he had something good. The question was how good — particularly when compared to the other top teams in the NJCAA.

That's the question last weekend's matches would answer. And for SC, it was a pleasant answer indeed.

The Ocelot Invitational featured four of the top teams in the NJCAA: No. 1-ranked Monroe (N.Y.) CC, No. 6 Lewis and Clark (Mo.) CC, No. 9 SC and College of Lake County (Ill.).

In Saturday's semifinal, the Ocelots — playing what Tolstedt called "as close to a perfect game as I can recall coaching" — blanked the defending NJCAA champions, Lewis and Clark, by a 2-0 margin.

SC followed that up with a come-from-behind 2-2 tie against No. 1 Monroe in Sunday's championship match. The win and tie didn't just improve the Ocelots' record to 13-0-1, it vaulted them to No. 4 in the national rankings.

For Monroe, the tie was the first blemish on its record (now 11-0-1) this season. Monroe maintained its spot atop the NJCAA rankings; Lewis and Clark, which beat Lake County 3-1 Sunday to improve to 10-3-1, stayed at No. 6.

"It was terribly exciting for us," said Tolstedt of the weekend's results. "When you're doing as well as we are, you just North Farmington broke Northville's stranglehold on the Western Lakes Activities Association girls tennis tournament titles Tuesday by outscoring the Mustangs, 28-24.

Coach Norm Staniszewski's Raiders won the meet hosted by Livonia Stevenson by splitting four of the eight flights with Northville. Plymouth Canton and Host Stevenson tied for third with 11 points each, while Plymouth Salem was fifth with 10. Farmington was sixth with eight.

Whaler win streak ends with OT loss

BY NICK GISMONDI
SPECIAL WRITER

Back-to-back games against the London Knights, an Ontario Hockey League Western Division rival, produced a pair of one-goal games for the Plymouth Whalers last weekend.

The Whalers won on the road Friday by a 5-4 count, thanks to two goals and an assist from Stephen Weiss, but on Saturday at Compuware Arena they lost to London 2-1 in overtime.

The Whalers lead the OHL's Western Division with a 5-1 record.

Plymouth's only goal was scored by Stephen Morris, who knocked home a rebound off a Rob McBride shot. Stacey Britstone also assisted.

The Knights tied it at 1-all at 13:26 of the second period on a goal by Rick Nash, then won it on a goal by Joel Scherban at 3:37 of overtime.

"I was not happy," said Whalers' coach Pete DeBoer. "We got out-worked. If it was not for Rob (Zepp) playing as sharp as he did, we may not have even made it into the overtime."

Zepp turned away 23 shots for the Whalers. Former Whaler goalie Aaron Molnar, now starting for the Knights, faced 33 shots.

On Friday in London's Ice House, each team's power play was working to perfection. The Knights and the Whalers each converted 4-of-7 chances, which made Bristone's even-strength goal — Plymouth's first of the game — the difference.

Britstone and Weiss scored goals in a two-minute span to give the Whalers a 2-1 first-period lead, but the Knights knotted it at 2-2 by the period's end. Weiss' second goal of the game regained the lead for Plymouth, but London tied it again on a goal by Joel Scherban.

Jarrett and McBride gave the Whalers a two-goal lead entering the third period. Lou Dickenson's marker with 6:12 left in the third got the Knights to within one, but they couldn't get the equalizer past Whaler goalie Paul Drew.

"I was thankful that our power play was as strong as it was against the Knights and Paul (Drew) played very sharp for us again in net," said DeBoer. "We did not have a real consistent effort out there though.

"I think that our complacency was a little high starting out the year 5-0-0-0 and we fell into the mindset that all we have to do is show up. We have to get back to the games we played earlier and realize that it was hard work that got us to where we were."

FOOTBALL

North Farmington had a touchdown called back and missed a field goal Saturday in its homecoming football game against Plymouth Salem.

If they had been successful, the Raiders would've had their first victory of the season. Instead, the Rocks went away 7-0 winners.

Salem's Brandon Ellison set up his own touchdown run of 2 yards with a 22-yard gain on the previous play.

North was in the red zone three times, but an interception, the missed field goal and a penalty stopped it from scoring.

The Raiders (0-5 Lakes Division, 0-7 overall) scored the tying touchdown with two minutes remaining, but it was nullified by an illegal procedure penalty. They eventually turned the ball over on downs.

"Our defense played great," North coach Rich Burrell said. "We had great field position and were moving the ball well. We just couldn't score."

Linebackers Jon and Justin Kasgorgis led the defense with 19 and 15 tackles, respectively. Mike Zultak had 10 tackles and recovered one of three Salem fumbles. Brandon Engel and Joe Jarjis had the other recoveries.

Blair Weiss, who has moved from tailback to quarterback, completed six of 17 passes for 76 yards, and he rushed 24 times for 69 yards.

Eric Wilder caught three passes for 56 yards; Marc Piper had two receptions and Brian Johns one.

The Raiders are without fullback Justin Cook, who was their leading rusher until suffering a knee injury in the Farmington game.

Salem (1-4, 2-5) outgained North on the ground, 237-68, and in total yards, 259-144.

"We had talked all week about playing with Raider Pride," Burrell said. "I thought we played with enthusiasm and intensity. I was pleased with the effort. We just need to execute a little better in certain situations.

"I can't fault the effort at all; the guys played hard. I was proud to be their coach."

CC sinks DeLaSalle

Redford Catholic Central could get another shot at Birmingham Brother Rice — the only team to beat the Shamrocks this year.

But to get that shot, they'll have to stop Detroit DePorres from exacting a little revenge on the Shamrocks.

CC (6-1, 3-1) clinched a spot in the Catholic League semifinals against DePorres on Saturday at Hamtramck's Keyworth Stadium thanks to a 21-3 win on Saturday over De La Salle at Kraft Field. CC beat DePorres earlier in the year, 16-0.

Matt Markiewicz led CC, which also clinched a state playoff berth with the win, with touchdown runs of 7 and 1 yards, while Joe Goldsmith caught a 7-yard scoring pass from Tom Jakacki for the other touchdown. The Pilots' only score came on a 30-yard field goal.

CC ground out 276 yards in total offense — 171 on the ground and 105 in the air — while the Pilots had 208. Mike Banaszak led CC with 22 carries and 87 yards, while Dave Groth had 45 yards on eight carries. Jakacki was 6-for-10 passing for 70 yards, while Markiewicz threw one pass for 35 yards. Anthony Coratti caught three passes for 49 yards.

Defensively, Ryan Rogowski had 10 tackles and Stephen Abdal had eight. Craig Nabozny had one interception for the Shamrocks, while Brad Jarzembowski and Matt LoPiccolo both had fumble recoveries.

Chiefs, Patriots both end up goalless

SOCCER

There's one thing about the scoreboard — it doesn't care who carried the play.

Both coaches, Don Smith of Plymouth Canton and Dave Hebestreit of Livonia Franklin, agreed the Chiefs carried the play much of the time during Monday's Western Lakes Activities Association soccer match.

The scoreboard, however, decreed the outcome dead even: 0-0.

"We outshot them by quite a bit," Smith said. "But that doesn't make much difference. They played very well."

"We had a golden open opportunity in the first four minutes," Hebestreit said, "but we did not finish.

"Certainly Canton carried the play. But there were no clean, clear opportunities by either side the rest of the game.

"We tied Canton, Northville and Churchill. That's the best division record I've had in six years."

The match had important consequences in the WLAA's Western Division race. It eliminated Franklin from contention, which was decided last night when Canton faced Livonia Churchill.

T. J. Tomasso was in goal for Canton while Chris Austin recorded his seventh shutout for Franklin (8-5-3, 2-0-3).

Canton played Livonia Churchill on Wednesday needing only to win to clinch the Western Division title and a berth in the WLAA finals against Livonia Stevenson.

"We only gave up one goal in five divisional games," Hebestreit said, "and that was to Harrison."

Hebestreit cited the play of junior sweeper Jon Nettles in the game.

"He's been awesome all year," Franklin's coach said. "Our whole midfield played well. Bobby Geisinger played most of the game for us — and was sensational for a freshman."

Geisinger swung between midfield and forward.

Southfield Christian 0, PCA 0: Travis Yonkman earned his fifth shutout of the season for Plymouth Christian Academy Tuesday at Southfield Christian, but it wasn't enough to give the Eagles a victory.

The scoreless draw left PCA with a 2-3-2 record in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference, 7-5-4 overall. Southfield Christian is 3-2-2 in the MIAC.

"It was evenly played," said PCA coach Rick Ericson. "We had some good opportunities, they did too."

Each side had six shots on net, and each had four corner kicks.

Last Friday, PCA edged Adrian Lenawee Christian 1-0 at PCA. John Sink's first-half goal gave the Eagles with the only goal they would need.

On the previous Tuesday (Oct. 3), the host Eagles defeated Bloomfield Hills Roeper 2-1, with Sink and Jason Zajac scoring PCA's goals. Yonkman was in goal for both wins.

Rocks slip

Call it a slip. Or a blip.

Whatever it's called, the direction was not the one Plymouth Salem girls cross country coach Dave Gerlach had in mind, particularly at this time of the season.

The Rocks competed in the 12-team Ypsilanti Braves Cross Country Invitational last Saturday finishing ninth with 244 points.

"I was very disappointed with the way our team ran today," said Gerlach. "We collectively stunk up the course. We did not have one medal winner and our team looked, overall, miserable."

Best finish for the Rocks was Stephanie Hajduk, who was 31st in 21:28. Next Salem finishers: Halle Burton, 33rd (21:37); Anna Moniodis, 53rd (22:56); Jill Grey, 62nd (23:22); Kim Wood, 65th (23:27); and Jenny Kassem, 71st (24:02).

Canton and Stevenson: Win or forget playoffs

GRID PICKS

C.J. RISAK

Clinched it.

Yup, that's what I did. And with a week to go, too. I clinched the privilege of writing the last two regular-season "Grid Picks" columns.

Am I lucky or what?

See, some people may think this is some sort of penalty. I choose not to, whatever our ghost writer, Paul "Boooooodreee," says.

Painting a positive picture, or making the most out of the situation you're facing, is what so many of the Observerland teams must do this weekend.

It's make-or-break time, with a state playoff tournament berth as the prize.

Let's start with the "bubble" teams, those that must win their last two games to obtain that magic number of six wins and make the playoffs. Livonia Stevenson and Plymouth Canton are both 4-3 after suffering losses last Friday.

Stevenson faces a very strong Northville team this Friday. The Mustangs handled Canton with relative ease last week and, with five wins, are searching for a playoff spot of their own. Northville, led by Brandon Langston, one of the top running backs in the Western Lakes Activities Association, has the added advantage of hosting this game.

Canton's picture is considerably brighter. It's been nine years since the Chiefs made a playoff appearance (their one and only). The two teams they have remaining have just four wins between them. Also, Canton plays both of them — Farmington on Friday followed by the traditional Plymouth Salem-vs.-Canton game Oct. 20 — on its home field.

Coach Tim Baechler's team was in this same position a year ago, but lost its last three games to finish 4-5. Baechler said from the start of the season this team is stronger than last year's; now's the time to prove it.

The teams with five wins (one more and they're in) — Westland John Glenn, Redford St. Agatha and Garden City — should all qualify. John Glenn will be tested Friday at Walled Lake Western, to be sure, but the Rockets finish their season at Wayne Memorial, a 1-7 squad.

Redford Catholic Central, by the way, joined the state playoff elite by beating Warren DeLaSalle, 21-3, on Saturday, giving the Shamrocks a 6-1 record. Farmington Harrison and Livonia Clarenceville are both undefeated and are already in.

Now for the prognosticators' standings. O'Meara remains in front at 88-13 (12-3 last week), with Emons close behind with an 85-16 record (12-3). Beaudry is next at 81-20 (11-4), followed by yours truly at 75-26 (11-4).

FRIDAY'S GAMES

(all 7 p.m. unless noted)

Walled Lake Central (6-1) at Farmington Harrison (7-0): The championship of the WLAA is at stake in a game featuring a perennial powerhouse (Harrison) against a team that's been a bit of a surprise this year (Central). This isn't their first meeting; in the season's second week, the Hawks laid a 51-12 whuppin' on the Vikings. And that was at Central! Don't think things have changed a whole lot. PICKS: Harrison — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Westland John Glenn (5-2) at Walled Lake Western (5-2): Should be one of the best games of the week. Both teams have played extremely well of late. Western's losses are to Birmingham Brother Rice and Farmington Harrison, two teams with one loss between them. Glenn has experienced a similar fate, losing to unbeaten Detroit Kettering and once-beaten Walled Lake Central. PICKS: Western — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Garden City (5-2) at Lincoln Park (0-7): The Cougars will make the playoffs by simply riding on the legs of Steve Sparks, who rolled over Dearborn Edsel Ford last Friday for 211 yards and three TDs. Lincoln Park, meanwhile, remained winless by getting trounced by a mediocre Dearborn team, 41-0. PICKS: Garden City — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Redford Thurston (2-5) at Romulus (7-0): Thurston got its second win of the season against winless Taylor Kennedy last Friday. Romulus routed Trenton, 40-6, to remain unbeaten and atop the Mega Blue Division. PICKS: Romulus — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Stevenson (4-3) at Northville (5-2), 7:30 p.m.: Northville showed no respect for Canton, ruining the Chiefs' Homecoming by trouncing them 41-21 on Friday. Stevenson, meanwhile, was beaten by John Glenn, 32-7. Langston and the home field should be enough for the Mustangs. PICKS: Northville — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

B.H. Cranbrook (6-1) at Clarenceville (7-0), 7:30 p.m.: Two playoff-bound teams will clash with the Metro Conference title at stake. Cranbrook beat Lutheran Northwest 34-20 last week, while Clarenceville — the defending conference champions — defeated University-Liggett, 33-13. The home-field advantage should allow the Trojans to repeat. PICKS: Clarenceville — Risak, Emons, O'Meara; Cranbrook — Beaudry.

Farmington (2-5) at Plymouth Canton (4-3), 7:30 p.m.: This is the second time this season these teams have met. In Week Two, the Chiefs blasted host Farmington, 48-21. Just knowing one more loss will end their playoff chances should be enough for Canton. PICKS: Canton — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Plymouth Salem (2-5) at Livonia Franklin (2-5), 7:30 p.m.: Nothing at stake here but pride. Salem's struggles continue, even with last Saturday's 7-0 win over winless North Farmington. Franklin was somewhat more impressive, knocking off Livonia Churchill, 20-14, with quarterback Joe Ruggiero completing 7-of-11 passes for 82 yards and Joe Meier rushing for 104 more. PICKS: Franklin — Risak, Beaudry; Salem — Emons, O'Meara.

North Farmington (0-7) at Livonia Churchill (1-6) 7:30 p.m.: Churchill's only victory this season came in its season-opener against Redford Union, another team that is currently winless. This WLAA crossover between the teams at the bottom of their respective divisions should favor the home squad. PICKS: Churchill — Risak, N. Farmington — Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Rochester Hills Lutheran Northwest (3-4) at Lutheran Westland (1-6), 7:30 p.m.: The Crusaders lost by two touchdowns to Cranbrook last Friday, while Lutheran Westland was beaten by Harper Woods, 43-8. The Warriors, who will be bringing in portable lights for homecoming, have had trouble producing wins for the last few years; this game won't provide any relief. PICKS: Lutheran Northwest — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Wayne Memorial (1-6) at Ypsilanti (3-4), 7:30 p.m.: Been a tough season for the Zebras, who suffered a 34-15 loss to Wyandotte Rooseveh last Friday. Ypsilanti was touted to be a major state playoff contender, but the Braves' 19-7 loss to Belleville has just about ended their hopes. PICKS: Ypsilanti — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

(all at 1 p.m. unless noted)

Redford St. Agatha (5-2) at Dearborn St. Alphonsus (2-4): The Aggies are a game away from that playoff spot, which should be enough incentive for them in this game. The Arrows were walloped by Cardinal Mooney 43-6 last Saturday, while St. Agatha was taking care of Detroit Urban. State playoffs, here come the Aggies! PICKS: St. Agatha — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Allen Park Cabrini (2-5) at Redford Bishop Borgess (2-5), 2 p.m.: The Spartans earned their second win of the season Friday by upsetting Riverview Gabriel Richard, 14-10. Cabrini, on the other hand, keeps slipping. The Monarchs won't regain their footing at Borgess Saturday. PICKS: Borgess — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Redford Catholic Central (6-1) vs. Detroit DePorres (6-1), 2 p.m. at Hamtramck Keyworth Stadium: Both teams are in the playoffs, both teams have lost just once, but there is one key difference — DePorres' 16-0 loss came against CC in the fourth game of the season. Avenging that defeat won't be easy. The Shamrocks are tuning up for a playoff run. PICKS: CC — Risak, Beaudry, Emons, O'Meara.

Twisters unbeaten string ends with a 7-0 playoff defeat

No points equals no way.

The Michigan Twisters didn't score a point in their playoff game Saturday night and thus were ousted from the Lake Shore Football League playoffs, 7-0, by the Lorain (O.) Steelmen.

It was the only game the Twisters lost of the 11 they played this season.

"Our season of 2000 has ended," General Manager Glenn Brothers of the Twisters said, "but we will cointinue to build upon our current squad for the 2001 season."

Michigan lost two fumbles and threw three interceptions, which was too much to overcome.

Lorain pounced on a fumbled punt to get the ball at the Michigan 26 some 12 minutes into the game. On third down, running back Michael Church worked a draw play for a 23-yard touchdown.

The Twisters' defense was outstanding otherwise. It forced six punts and held the Steelmen to 113 yards rushing and one 18-yard pass completion.

Lorain missed field goals from 37-, 34- and 41-yards.

FOOTBALL

Michigan nearly scored on the final miss, with defensive back Matt Garca (Garden City) fielding the short kick and running 61 yards — getting tackled by the last man between him and the goal line.

John Gajda (Garden City) returned three punts a total of 76 yards to give the Twisters good field position but they were unable to capitalize.

Pat Bowie (Westland) ran for 61 yards on 8 rushes. Bob Pensari (Canton) and Aaron Brothers led the defense with four solo tackles and seven assists apiece. Garca had two solo tackles and six assists.

Canton JV still rolling

The Plymouth Canton junior varsity team recorded its seventh-straight victory with a 44-14 win over Northville Thursday. On a cold and rainy evening, Canton's defense dominated.

The Chiefs scored 20 unanswered points on two touchdowns by Reggie Joyner and one by Doug Davidson. After the Mustangs' Kyle Godatti returned a kickoff 87 yards to get the Mustangs on the board, Canton closed out the first half by rushing for three more TDs. Doug Davidson and Reggie Joyner finished with three TDs apiece.

Salem JV knot North

Plymouth Salem scored twice in the first quarter Thursday against visiting North Farmington, but the Rocks' junior varsity couldn't hold the lead and ended up tying the Raiders 14-14.

The result left Salem's JV with a 3-2-2 record.

A 3-yard scoring run by Jason Lewis and a 1-yard dive by Matt Cole, following a North fumble, gave the Rocks their early lead. Salem fumbles in the third quarter led to both Raider scores. Matt Trublowski, David Hull and Mike Jones (who had an interception) paced Salem's defense.

Canton freshmen fall

The Canton freshmen fell to 4-2-1 for the season after a 37-22 loss to Northville Thursday at Northville. The Chiefs scored first on a pass to Tom Balewski, and after the Mustangs answered two minutes later to make it 6-all Canton answered with a TD by Matt Paye and a two-point conversion by quarterback Ryan Rundle, making it 14-6 at the half.

Northville took command in the second half, however, scoring three touchdowns. The Chiefs got another score and a two-point conversion from Matt Paye.

Steeler varsity unbeaten

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers varsity football team remained undefeated with a 28-15 victory over the Redford Rangers. Andy Case, Joe Crist, Jake Powers and Russ Bruner scored touchdowns for the Steelers, and Dylan Tobin was good on a pair of two-point conversion kicks. Defensive standouts for the Steelers were Case, Steven Campbell, Tim Storch and Jeffrey Rork.

The Steelers' JV team came out on top in an offensive shootout with the Rangers, 40-30, bringing its record to 5-0. Shawn Little returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown, then added three more scores on quarterback keepers and passed for another to Deshon McClendon. Matt Czajkowski also scored a touchdown and added a key interception in the fourth quarter to halt a Rangers drive.

The Steelers freshman shut out the Redford Rangers, 16-0. Dalton Walser rushed for two touchdowns. The Steelers' other points came from the defense on an Alexander Avramoski safety. Tyler Rusin, John Kaptur, Paul Kanaan, Joseph Massel, Spencer Tobin and Nathan Bachert, who recovered a Ranger fumble late in the fourth quarter, led the defense.

Lions' varsity roars

Richard Ratcliff's third-quarter touchdown propelled the Canton Lions varsity team to a 12-6 victory over the Ypsilanti Braves Sunday in the Lions' Homecoming game. Julian Smith scored the game's first TD for Canton; after the Braves tied it, Ratcliff got the game-winner to give the Lions their fifth-straight win.

The junior varsity Lions weren't as fortunate, suffering a 12-0 defeat against the Braves. One Ypsi TD was scored on a fumble return, another on a long end-around. Twice the Lions drove inside the Braves' 5-yard line only to be turned away.

The freshmen Lions absorbed their first loss of the season by a 19-6 margin to the Braves. The Lions only points were scored by Chris Fischer on a 65-yard interception return. Erik Wright led the Canton defense with an interception and nine tackles; William Tidwell recovered a fumble, and Jeremy Epley and Justin Scott recorded quarterback sacks.

Madonna reigns

■ VOLLEYBALL

This was one instance where almost perfect beat perfect.

Madonna University lost only three points Tuesday in its Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference match at Spring Arbor.

The Lady Crusaders took the first two games by 15-0 scores and cruised to a 15-3 win in the final game to improve to 7-1 in the WHAC and keep the Cougars winless in seven league matches.

Brandy Malewski paced the offense with seven kills for Madonna (22-4). Erin Cunningham knocked down five and Kate LeBlanc four.

Jennie Wind had 20 sets and Natalie Sayre seven. Sayre also served a team-best three aces.

Spring Arbor (1-28) was only able to put down six team kills in 42 tries.

Ocelots fall in tourney

Schoolcraft College's volleyball team took a break from conference action during the weekend and got reacquainted with losing.

The Ocelots, 11-1, in league matches, took part in the Jefferson College Invitational against some high-powered competiton and finished fourth in the six-team field with a 2-3 record. Schoolcraft is 17-8 overall this season.

Barton swept the tournament with five wins, host Jefferson was a game behind and Kellogg Community College was next at 3-2. Johnson was fifth, 1-4, and Illinois Central was winless.

Kellogg defeated Schoolcraft on Friday night, 16-14, 15-11, and Jefferson defeated the Ocelots, 15-7, 15-4.

On Saturday, Schoolcraft upended Illinois Central, 10-15, 15-13, 15-12, and knocked off Johnson, 15-6, 15-7, before losing to tournament champion Barton, 15-8, 15-5.

Nicole Boyd was Schoolcraft's lone representative on the All-Tournament team.

Boyd led the Ocelots in the tournament with 45 kills. Amy Kiefer was next with 30. Fran Hamilton had 29 and Andrea Kmet 26.

Jana Nitschke was the serve lead with six aces. Hamilton had five, and Amanda Yaklin and Kmet four apiece.

Nitschke had 108 assists to kills while Yaklin recorded a team high 62 digs.

Hamilton was strong at the net with three solo blocks and seven assists.

Ocelots shut out Columbus

■ MEN'S SOCCER

The Schoolcraft College men's soccer team continued its hot play, but an icy field kept the Ocelots from finishing off a pair of Ohio teams last weekend.

On Saturday, Schoolcraft blanked Columbus State, an NCAA Division III school, 2-0, but Sunday's scheduled game with host Cuyahoga was called because of unplayable conditions due to Lake Erie effect sleet.

"Our guys were dressed and ready to go," said Schoolcraft coach Van Dimitriou, whose team is 7-3-2 overall. "I don't think Cuyahoga wanted to play after the 8-0 shellacking they took from us last year. They could have found a suitable site, but they didn't consult the officials who ultimately make a determination. I'm insisting this is going to be a forfeit."

Schoolcraft, which has shut out its last five opponents and allowed just one goal in seven games, was all over Columbus State.

Justin Fishaw (Plymouth Canton) scored in the first half from John Johnson (Plymouth Salem).

Dan Lipon (Livonia Stevenson) tallied a second-half goal from Nick Skotanis (Northville). The play was initiated by outside midfielder Corey Goulet (Berkley), whom Dimitriou calls "one of the three top players in the region."

"That first half was the best we've played since the 1997 season when we finished third in the country (NJCAA)," Dimitriou said. "We're coming along as a team. They're communicating and we're starting to put it all together."

Goalkeeper Doug Koontz (Canton) made five saves to lower his goals-against average to 0.58.

Anchoring the defense is Brighton's Tom Stark, the Region 12 Player of the Year and second-team NJCAA All-America.

Stark has gotten ample help in the shutout run from Sergio Mainella (Stevenson), along with a pair of freshmen, Chris LaMasse (Canton) and Phil Moore (Brighton).

Defensive midfielders Casey Cook (Redford Catholic Central) and Shaun Presnell (Redford Union) have also contributed to the streak.

Crusaders split pair

The win counted but the loss didn't.

Madonna University's men's soccer team split a pair of matches Saturday.

Sure, they both counted on the Crusaders' record — but only one was a Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference contest.

Madonna visited Concordia (1-12, 0-9) for its first match Saturday and blanked the helpless Cardinals, 4-0, to improve to 6-2-1 in WHAC play.

Madonna then went home to host Illinois-Springfield — and got drilled, 6-0, in the non-league encounter.

Salvatore Piraine scored an unassisted goal at 76:37, just 1:57 after Michael Healy scored unassisted to give Madonna a 1-0 lead against Concordia. It was the sixth goal of the season for each player.

Ryan Kracht and Alan Gieleghem each scored their first goals of the season at 83:26 and 88:40, respectively. John Hirshey assisted on the final goal.

Joe Suchara was in goal for Madonna and only needed to make three saves to get the shutout. The Crusaders had 14 shots on Matthew Gilbert.

Madonna had a 30-5 edge in shots.

Later, Madonna dropped to 8-6-1 overall and was outshot 20-9 by Illinois-Springfield. Both goalkeepers made five saves.

Illinois-Springfield only held a 1-0 halftime lead but goals at 48:16 and 56:48 broke it open.

want to know how you stack up against the competition."

By halftime of Saturday's Lewis and Clark match, Tolstedt knew. "It was a team we dominated," he said, noting a 19-6 advantage in shots on goal. "It was fun to watch.

"At halftime I talked to my coaches and, even though it was scoreless, there wasn't anything we wanted to do differently."

The only thing that changed in the second half was the score. Kelly Connell (from Plymouth Canton) gave SC the only goal it would need before the second half was 15 minutes old; Emily Alford (Livonia Clarenceville) and Angela Maile assisted.

With 10 minutes left, Alford gave the Ocelots an insurance goal, with Tina Albaugh (Redford Thurston) assisting.

"I didn't think Lewis and Clark ever really threatened," said Tolstedt. "Even though we only had a one-goal lead, I felt pretty comfortable with the way we were playing (defensively).

"Our defense did one helluva job."

Sunday's match against Monroe started the same way, with the Ocelots carrying the play. The result was a goal scored 10 minutes into the match by Maile, with Kristah Manteuffel (Redford Thurston) and Kristen Hait assisting.

But then, near-disaster struck. "We made a couple of errors in back" Tolstedt said, and the result was two Monroe goals in a five-minute span, making it 2-1 at halftime.

Playing into the wind in the second half, SC "spent a lot of time defending our goal" — which wouldn't get the Ocelots the equalizer. But that managed it, with Manteuffel netting the game-tying goal with 18 minutes remaining. Maile and Hait assisted.

Monroe did score an apparent go-ahead marker late in the match, but it was disallowed by an offside call.

"I think the girls found out this weekend what it takes from a total-team standpoint to win," said Tolstedt. "They wanted to know if they would get the chance to play (Monroe) again.

"The girls are convinced they can take them."

That chance may come at the NJCAA Tournament. But SC must get there first.

gles, along with No. 4 doubles, while Northville took No. 2 singles and the first three doubles flights.

"I'm pleased we hung in there because I knew it would be close," Staniszewski said. "We've been here before when we've had the advantage, but when it's a one-day tournament anything can happen. I've seen things go either way."

With dark rapidly approaching late Tuesday afternoon, two singles matches remained with the final tally yet to be determined.

But North sophomore Amy Berke clinched the win with a three-set victory over Joanna Lee in the finals at No. 3 singles.

"Our key matches were first singles and fourth doubles, and Berke's clutch match," said Staniszewski, whose Raiders edged Northville in a dual meet earlier this fall, 5-3. "Amy lost to Lee in the dual meet, but today she made a nice comeback."

North's Emily Jaffe defeated Livonia Stevenson sophomore Erin Mazzoni to grab the title at No. 1 singles with a 7-5, 6-4 triumph.

Jaffe is following in the footsteps of her brother Brad, a former Division II state singles champion now playing for Emory University (Ga.). Emily is ranked No. 12 in the Southeastern Michigan Tennis Association for Girls 14s and is No. 67 in the Western Tennis Association rankings.

Mazzoni proved to be a lot tougher than the September meeting when Jaffe prevailed, 6-4, 6-2.

"She (Mazzoni) was a lot more consistent and she hit more balls in the court, she played well," said Jaffe, who has only two losses all season. "The conditions were very tough today. I don't like playing in the wind."

Jaffe, who will also play softball as an infielder this spring for North, has honed her aggressive baseline game since she was 10 from teaching pros Steve Herdoiza Franklin Racquet Club and Joe Brennan of the Sports Club.

"Emily's not even 14-years-old yet and she'll get better as she gets older," Staniszewski said.

Another North title came when senior co-captain Joyce Chung outlasted Northville's Allison Long in a marathon two-set match for the No. 4 singles title, 6-3, 6-5 (injury default). Long suffered a leg cramp on match point and had to be helped off the court.

North added another crown at No. 4 doubles when Elina Pilnits and Jessica Hoffman took the crown with a straight set win over Christa McKay and Jennie Kazmierczak of Plymouth Canton.

North also had runner-up finishes at No. 2 singles (Bethany Nestor), No. 1 doubles (Michele Boothroyd and Chrissy Dwyer), No. 2 doubles (Allison Kay and Julie Shindler) and No. 3 doubles (Jenna Street and Sarah Williams).

Northville's chances of repeating were diminished when No. 1 singles player Kerry Woolfall defaulted with a pulled hamstring and bad knee. The Mustangs also lost to Canton in the semifinals at No. 4 doubles.

"We kind of self-destructed," said Northville coach Uta Filkin, now in her 33rd year.

The two teams will meet again Friday in the Division II regional with Northville being the host.

"It was kind of surprising because we've been second to Northville for so long," said Jaffe, who obviously knows the history between the two schools. "We just wanted to go out and do our best.

"We're used to having close matches with them, but the last few years they've dominated."

To become the outright WLAA champion, North needed a dual meet victory Wednesday against host Canton on Wednesday in a make-up match.

See statistical summary.

son. For that matter, so did sixth golfer Dru Girard, who shot an 89 — two strokes better than Western's sixth golfer, Ryan Schultz.

That allowed the Spartans to finish third in the tournament standings, behind Farmington but ahead of Western. Which gave them 10 points, one more in the overall league standings than both Western and Farmington.

"The kids improved and I was happy to see that," said Stevenson coach John Wagner.

Kids that weren't too happy to see their scores were those from Salem.

"We prepared well for this," said Salem coach Rick Wilson. "But obviously we didn't play well at all. I mean, the conditions were windy for everyone, but we didn't handle the windy conditions well. And we didn't putt well.

"It's disappointing. This is one of the biggest events of the year, you hope to have a better showing."

The state regional tournaments are Friday, with Division I Salem and Canton playing at Leslie Park, hosted by Ann Arbor Pioneer. Churchill, Stevenson, Franklin and North Farmington will play at Pontiac Country Club (hosted by West Bloomfield), with John Glenn competing at the Monroe regional.

Harrison and Farmington, both competing in Division II, travel to the Hartland regional.

Salem powers past Pats; Canton crushes Glenn

The preliminaries are over for Plymouth Salem's girls basketball team.

They ended on Tuesday with the Rocks' 43-20 victory over Livonia Franklin. The win improved Salem's record to 5-1 in the Western Lakes Activities Association, 9-3 overall. Franklin fell to 2-4 in the WLAA, 4-7 overall.

"I didn't think we played very well," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. "It wasn't a very productive game for us."

The Rocks led 14-2 after one quarter and 26-7 at the half, then coasted — something they won't be able to do in the upcoming games. Salem plays at Livonia Stevenson tonight (the Spartans upended Farmington Harrison Tuesday), then host hosts Harrison Tuesday. Both teams have 4-1 WLAA records.

"It should be interesting," noted Thomann.

The win over Franklin wasn't. "We walled them up (defensively) pretty good," the Salem coach said. "They didn't present much of a problem."

Amy Szawara paced the Rocks with 11 points. Dawn Allen added 10 and Kelly Jaskot scored six. Franklin was led by Gabrielle Nixon with five points.

Stevenson, a 64-62 winner over the Hawks, converted 12-of-18 three-point shots (66.7 percent). That kind of shooting should make tonight's game a challenge.

Canton 57, John Glenn 34: The Chiefs took control in the second half Tuesday night to brush aside the challenge from the Rockets.

Leading 25-17 at the half, Plymouth Canton (8-4 overall, 5-1 in the WLAA) went on a 16-6 run in the third quarter to clinch the WLAA victory.

Janine Gaustella scored 16 points to lead the Chiefs and Anne Morrell, whom John Glenn coach John Albrecht termed "a big-time defender," chipped in with 11.

Bianca Woods led John Glenn (4-8 overall, 1-5 in the WLAA) with 12 points and freshman Jennifer Thauvette added 11.

"We hung in for two quarters," said Albrecht, whose team helped itself by going 11-for-17 from the free throw line. Canton was 8-for-13 from the line.

It won't be that easy for the Chiefs tonight, when they host Farmington Harrison (5-1 in the WLAA).

"We're going to have a hard time matching up with those guys," said Canton coach Bob Blohm. "I've watched them play two or three times and I thought this was one of Pete's (Mantyla, the Hawks' coach) better teams.

"There's no question in my mind they'll be ready. We'll just have to be ready, too."

Blohm felt Tuesday's loss to Stevenson would only make Harrison hungrier. "I still think they're a very good team," he said.

At present, the WLAA is led by 6-0 Northville, with four teams boasting 5-1 records — and those four play each other tonight, with Salem at Stevenson and Harrison at Canton.

Agape 50, Huron Valley 38: The Wolverines won the middle periods 32-16 Tuesday night to take this one.

Canton Agape Christian (7-3 overall) turned turnovers into points in the 19-7 second quarter at the old Wayne Memorial gym. Sophomore guard Amy Henry scored 17 points and senior forward Amber Cross had eight as seven different Wolverines scored.

Rachel Zahn led Westland Huron Valley Lutheran (7-5) with 15 points and Lauren Merion had 12.

Agape sank 4-for-9 free throws while Huron Valley was 6-for-17.

PCA 51, S.H. Bethesda 28: Seven was certainly not a lucky number for Sterling Heights Bethesda Christian Tuesday at Plymouth Christian Academy.

The visiting Eagles scored seven points in each period, but that wasn't nearly enough to offset the offensive barrage led by PCA's Laura Clark. Clark finished with 19 points and four assists as PCA improved to 9-3 overall.

Bethesda fell to 2-9.

PCA led 25-14 at the half and 33-21 after three quarters before burying Bethesda with an 18-7 fourth-quarter surge. "A lot of people played, everyone scored and everyone contributed," said PCA coach Rod Windle.

Amanda Saagman collected six points and three blocked shots and Erin Young also had six points for the winners. Mary Able's eight points paced Bethesda.

Divine Child 37, Ladywood 34: The inability to hit outside shots is leaving the Blazers on the outside looking in.

The host Falcons mixed traps in with a zone defense Tuesday night and packed the middle against the Blazers to win the Detroit Catholic League Central Division struggle.

Michelle Harakas led Livonia Ladywood (9-4 overall, 5-2 in the Central Division) with 10 points but Dearborn Divine Child (8-5 overall, 3-4 in the division) had the game's high scorer in Maria Jilian, who scored 16.

"We did a pretty good job defensively," Coach Andrea Gorski said. "But all the teams are going to play us zone now. We got the looks, we've just got to knock them down."

The Blazers were 10-for-39 from the field and only 2-for-14 from beyond the three-point line.

The score was tied at 13 at halftime and Divine Child led by one after three quarters, 25-24.

WRAPPING IT UP

NOW IS THE TIME TO GET YOUR GARDEN READY FOR THE WINTER

Tours and tips: At top, Tim Marsh leads the way through the community garden at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. Above, Kathy Israel gives gardeners a few pointers about potted plants and some fall garden preparation tips.

By Ken Abramczyk
Staff Writer
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Turn your soil now. Pull those noxious weeds. Fix that raised bed with a blanket of compost.

Once yards and gardens were pelted with heavy rains in late summer and again last week, that meant gardens need tilling and soil turned starting as early as September, according to master gardeners.

"You should start now (September) to clean out your garden, and turn your soil as much as you can," said Kathy Israel, a gardener who lectured on potted plants at a recent conference. "Otherwise, your garden will create a haven for fungus."

Gardeners gathered in September at the University of Michigan-Dearborn with members of the Master Gardeners Association of Wayne County. Event organizers believe the MGAWC is one of the largest master gardener groups in the country.

Gardeners heard many reminders about the fall and what they should do to prepare for winter. Fall is an ideal time to seed for lawns, plant shrubs and trees, plant spring bulbs and create compost bins.

Israel focused on potted plants, telling gardeners to dump the old soil in the compost bin. "Wash terra cotta pots in bleached water and set them in the sun to dry, especially with terra cotta, because diseases can absorb into it."

Moisture in the terra cotta pots also can crack them if they aren't dried completely, Israel said.

Trees and shrubs

Conference attendees also received tips on pruning at a lecture on shrubs.

Prune to the outside – not inside – so the shrub grows and blooms outward. "You don't want the plant to grow into itself," said Judith Watkins, who lectured on shrubs and trees.

When branches cross each other, one should be pruned.

"Crossing over causes branches to rub against each other, and removing that outside layer (of the branch) opens it up to diseases and bugs. Take one (branch) out."

Electrical shears should be avoided because they shatter the branch tips, Watkins said. She demonstrated how to use manual pruners, which she also sterilizes with one part bleach and nine parts water before moving onto the next tree to avoid spreading diseases or pests that may be present.

Gardeners should cut just above the bud. Using electrical shears on a burning bush will create a spider web, in that one branch becomes five, then that five becomes 25, "creating a canopy," Watkins said. The lower part of the plant remains bare due to the canopy creating shade and inhibiting sunlight from reaching the lower branches.

Shrubs that flower in the spring should be pruned after they flower. If they flower in the summer or fall, prune them in the spring.

Diseased shrubs or trees can be pruned at any time of year, but growers should research pest or disease problems with a local nursery or garden expert. The best time to prune is late winter or early spring, before buds break.

Lawns

Owners of a new home with a cleared lot often want and work toward a full, thick green lawn. They should order enough top soil for a lawn and select the right kind of grass, and prepare the root zone and the topsoil.

Anyone who spends $250,000 on a home should spend more than a few hundred dollars on a lawn, said Dean Krauskopf, who hosts a gardening show on WJR on Sundays.

"If I'm going to drop $5,000, over 20 years that's not so bad," Krauskopf said.

For lawn growers who can't afford a 4-inch layer of topsoil, they should at least till a smaller amount into the clay. Krauskopf also recommended that grass should be watered about 1 1/2 inches a week, applying water every day if possible.

Grass should be dry before evening. Grass also can store nutrients in the winter, so homeowners should use slow-release fertilizers.

While most residents spend thousands on dollars on lawns, some scientists and environmentalists may argue lawn maintenance is costly and is not the natural or native landscape that belongs in Michigan.

Native landscaping

Orin Gelderloos, a professor at UM-D and director of the natural area there, conducted a seminar on native landscaping.

Gardeners can plant native plants, such as aspens and golden rods instead of attempting to maintain large grassy meadows. "We're trying to shift how we behave to a more sustainable picture," Gelderloos said. "Acres of this size are not sustainable." He showed a slide of a large meadow.

Gelderloos said the Natural Heritage Program identifies native plant and animal species and attempts to protect, manage and restore them. Native species are identified as those in this area before 1700.

Such native approaches to yards can help save water as the average 1/3-acre lawn requires 9,000 gallons of water a week or 109,000 gallons a summer, Gelderloos said. It also saves on financial and environmental costs of fertilizer, which contributes to the nutrient runoff, one of the surface water problems that federal, state and local officials are trying to tackle through the Rouge River Wet Weather Demonstration Project. Nutrients contribute to algae and plant growth in the Rouge's water.

The current runoff exceeds state standards for nutrients in the water, Gelderloos said.

Native landscapes also reduce runoff and erosion and saves gasoline from lawnmower use.

Gelderloos suggested gardeners plant oaks or other species suggested in the Michigan Natural Heritage Program including varieties of ash, hickory and maple and native shrubs including varies of dogwood and chokeberry.

Plant spring bulbs

By November, growers should have many of their bulbs lined up and buried.

Scott Kunst, owner of Old House Gardens in Ypsilanti, which sells heirloom bulbs of species dating from the 1600s-1800s, said spring's warmth brings early blooms, of snow drops and little yellow wolfe-bane, along with glory of the snow, snake's head fritillary and nodding star of Bethlehem.

More common bulbs that bloom a few weeks later include tulips and daffodils.

Kunst suggested gardeners should plant their spring bulbs using a ruler or marked trowel to a depth of six to eight inches. And there is no need to water them. "After all, your grandmother didn't water," Kunst said.

Gardeners should be wrapping that up by now. "By November, it's way too late. It's raining and starting to snow."

If gardeners are plagued with deer, they should plant daffodils, Kunst said.

Kunst said the older bulb varieties offer a living connection with families of the past – a grandmother, the family that built your home, Thomas Jefferson or even ancient Chinese emperors.

"If they last a couple of centuries, they'll last in your garden, too," Kunst said. "A lot of heirlooms have a built-in toughness that allows them to survive."

Kunst also told gardeners to check on the oldest garden and gardener in the neighborhood or elder family members for bulbs.

"It's like an old bed - George Washington never slept in it, but it's still an old bed."

HOME WORK

Warning on range prompts question from reader

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

Here's just a few questions I've received from readers and listeners:

Q: I have just had a new kitchen range delivered to my home and there is a label on it which states that this product contains hazardous materials which can affect a woman during pregnancy. I just happen to be three months pregnant and I'm sending this range back to the store. How do I know if the next new stove doesn't have the same materials?

A: Thank you for the question, as it was an education in itself. This is the first time I've heard this concern and your question quickly prompted me to visit an appliance retail store.

I picked a different brand that what you had delivered to your home, pulled the instruction booklet out of the package and found a warning of sorts which explains that the insulation behind the oven walls does indeed contain hazardous material. This can be harmful to anyone who is working with the material and in particular I would think that they mean a service technician.

I really don't think you have anything to worry about unless you buy the new baby a set of tools and give him or her the run of the kitchen. I doubt that will happen.

■ I pulled the instruction booklet out of the package and found a warning of sorts which explains that the insulation behind the oven walls does indeed contain hazardous material.

Appliance manufacturers should be more precise in their explanations.

The state of California has a law which the rest of the country doesn't. It states that any product sold which contains even a small harmless trace of hazardous material must so be advised to consumers. In this case I think we are thinking about fiberglass which in quantities can produce ill effects. Even though the amount of it in the insulation of a range is very small, and of no concern in the hidden areas where it is installed, it must still be published. Now, you tell me how smart a manufacturer is, by putting on a warning label without explanation on a product. I'll leave you to form your own opinion.

Q: You advertise a hot tub company on your radio show and yet you have written several columns on your concerns about the quality of water we consume. Are you not afraid of the water that sits in you tub for months? What if you slipped and swallowed a mouthful?

A: I don't know if you're poking fun at me or if you might be serious. Either way, I'll take the concern to heart. I have had this hot tub for over three months now and let me tell you that I play it safe. Instead of leaving and using the same water for months at a time, I have been changing the water every four weeks on the nose. It is very easy to hook up the garden hose and run it to the street. Filling it is even easier.

You are correct, I don't trust sitting water and that is exactly why I do this. The company gives you an easy to use test kit and I test it every day. I add the necessary chemicals to keep things from growing.

Q: My next door neighbor uses her dishwasher to defrost frozen food. Do you think that is an OK idea?

A: Your neighbor is so cheap, excuse the expression, she is trying to save energy by using the heat of her dishwasher. Who knows how much contamination is created by doing this and just how safe would it be to be eating a meal off the plates? I'll give you a sound warning of advice: make up an excuse why you can't go over for dinner when she invites you.

This month starts my busy season for home shows etc. I will be in contact with many thousands of readers of this column and I would like to remind you of a certain fact. I am an easy-going guy. I love to talk and help people along the way. Stop and say hello.

Keep your patio door sliding smoothly by cleaning tracks

BY POPULAR MECHANICS FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

■ Wash the track and channel annually with a household cleaner.

From its massive size and weight, you might guess that keeping your patio door sliding smoothly would be tough.

Surprisingly enough, it can roll on for years without needing attention. And when it does start sticking, you need just two tools to get to the root of the problem – a flat-blade or Phillips screwdriver and a pair of pliers.

Occasionally in older doors, you'll encounter really big problems, like a rotting wood frame or sagging overhead beam. Such repairs are not do-it-yourself. They often call for major surgery or a completely new door unit.

To find a replacement for a damaged roller or other easily fixed part, try calling the door manufacturer for a local dealer (check the door hardware for a label). If that fails, contact local window repair and glass companies. They stock weatherstripping and probably rollers, too. Even better, they can order or tell you where to find parts they don't stock.

Here are some tips on keeping your patio door rolling smoothly:

■ Keep track of screws when you disassemble parts for repair. Thread the screws into the edge of a piece of corrugated cardboard, then tape the cardboard to the disassembled items.

■ Anytime you need to inject oil in a tight space around the rollers of your patio door, use a disposable irrigation syringe available at pharmacies. The tip is curved and the taper lets you snip it at different points to adjust the size of the opening.

■ Wash the track and channel annually with a household cleaner. You can vacuum up dust and other debris, but you'll have to scrub to remove the grease and grime that stick to the track and clog the rollers.

■ Spray your sliding door tracks with a silicone lubricant. Or try aerosol polish. The wax in the polish reduces friction and doesn't attract dirt.

■ Adjust the roller height if the door scrapes or binds against the track at the top or bottom. On wood doors, the adjusting screw is on the inside of the bottom rail. On aluminum doors, it's on the vertical edge.

■ If your rollers still don't glide smoothly, remove the door and clean or replace the rollers. Have a friend help you because patio doors usually weigh about 150 pounds each. To remove a newer wood door, unscrew the top drawer stop, tilt the sliding portion inward, and lift it off its track. If you have an older wood door or one with an aluminum frame, lift the sliding door up and swing the bottom inward. You may have to loosen the roller adjustment screw first.

■ Unscrew the latch assembly if it operates poorly. Clean and lubricate it with light oil. If that fails, or if the parts have broken, you'll have to replace the assembly.

■ Adjust the latch strike plate if the latch operates smoothly but fails to catch the plate.

■ Replace weatherstripping when it doesn't seal the door properly. It's inexpensive, but some types might be hard to find since there are many sizes and shapes. Take a sample of your old weather stripping along to find the closest match when you buy the new material.

■ To make the vinyl insect screens in your doors look like new again, spray the screening with an automotive protectant. It removes the dirt and restores the color, which washing alone can't do.

Sunrooms brighten home, spirits during the cold winter months

/PRNewswire/ - With the onset of winter, people can become quite creative in their attempts to hold on to some sunshine.

Some will head south. Others will visit tanning beds. Increasingly, more and more people will simply stay put, enjoying the year-round sunlight of a glass- enclosed sunroom.

"Sunrooms create an in-home haven of sunny relaxation that revitalizes a person's spirit, not to mention creating that needed extra room," said Rick Jones, president of Patio Enclosures, North America's largest manufacturer and installer of custom-designed sunrooms and solariums.

"Fall is a great time to install a sunroom," he said. "With that closed-in feeling in mind, imagine what it would feel like to enter a room that's entirely open to nature - and sunshine," said Jones.

In addition to becoming the most sought after spot in the home, sunrooms create the perfect atmosphere for holiday celebrations, whether dining under the moonlight or wrapping presents under a snowfall.

"The day after Thanksgiving, I transform my sunroom into a Christmas tree display room. Our guests tend to gather there, surrounded by the decorations and snow outside," said Francine Mangoni, of Cleveland, Ohio.

"We painted blue skies and clouds on the ceiling of our wintergarden to create a summer-like room no matter what the season," said Grace Weidaw, a Patio Enclosures, customer. "I also added a large paddle fan to enhance the atmosphere."

Sunrooms are also used as an enclosure for hot tubs, creating a romantic get-a-way for stargazing, or as a place for plants and gardens to thrive. Surrounded by soft, casual furniture and sunlight, the blooming flowers help create a warm, springtime feeling even in the dead of winter.

There are many things to consider when adding a sunroom for wintertime enjoyment. First, for year-round use, you will want to make sure your sunroom is supplied with the latest technology and glass design. Glass combinations that utilize selective tints and coatings along with thermally improved framing members offer the best performance.

Patio Enclosures, Inc. offers a new design that combines the thermal properties of Geon Fiberloc, a glass reinforced PVC, and the structural properties of thermally broken aluminum to optimize sunroom comfort while maintaining the structural soundness of the room. A triple weather-stripping system enhances this performance by keeping air infiltration well below industry standards.

You will also want to design your room so that it can be closed off from the rest of the house. French doors and sliding doors are popular for this purpose. When you close the room off and leave the blinds or shades open, you can collect solar heat in the room while you are out for the day.

In the evening, open the doors to bring in natural warmth to adjoining rooms. "It's a heating method used in New England for decades when they used to call their glass-filled rooms sunrooms," says Jones. "Your plants will also reap the benefits of the warmth and sun."

Jones noted that many homeowners create useful, home-brightening sunrooms simply by enclosing an existing porch, carport or patio overhang.

Solariums can be built upon an existing deck, patio or existing concrete pad.

However sunrooms are used, they offer homeowners a chance not only to expand their homes, but also to display their creativity and enhance their overall health and spirit.

GARDENING

Many homes for bulbs available in the garden

GARDEN SPOT

MARTY FIGLEY

As we tuck the spring flowering bulbs into the ground this fall, we have faith that these plain little things hold all the nutrients necessary to bring them to life in just a few short months.

Sometimes we look around our property and wonder just where to plant the bulbs for the most effect. You might consider the following:

A Christmas bed – The site could be next to a regular walkway, or possibly near the kitchen door, so that the color and scents can be enjoyed as you pass.

It's possible that an area like this will be lit at night, giving you a greater chance to see the plants. Trees will have shed their leaves and be beginning to mulch the beds, so light will be adequate.

Good drainage is essential, so a raised bed will improve that. A few other plants can be intermingled with the bulbs to add interest and possibly protect the bulbs.

Snowdrops, Galanthus species, the Christmas rose, Helleborus niger, Narcissus, Crocus and Cyclamen coum are some from which to choose.

The whole bed can be top dressed with a fine bark mulch to provide a good contrast to flower and foliage and also prevent mud being splashed on this most select grouping.

Herbaceous borders – When you clean up the borders this fall, you can give some thought to where bulbs will grow and be seen at their peak.

If your border contains a few shrubs, then the areas around them make ideal islands for planting bulbs. Perennials that are rarely divided also are good spots.

Plant in groups or drifts as individual plants can create a "spotty" picture. Incorporate plenty of grit and insert the bulbs deeper than usual so any surface cultivation will miss them.

If this is a problem, assess the structure of the garden in late winter when the "bare bones" can be seen and plan where bulbs will go in the following fall.

Bulbs in grass – Naturalizing bulbs in grass can be one of the most effective plantings, but does need to be carefully planned.

Site this type of planting where grass won't be mowed until the foliage has died down to allow the leaves to build up the food supplies for next year – perhaps under a tree or a wilder part of the garden.

Narcissus and Crocus are the favorites for naturalizing in grass and give a great display year after year with little effort for the gardener. A group planting of a single color is most effective.

Raised beds – As soon as you raise the soil 8 inches or more above the surrounding land, a greater variety of bulbs can be grown because of the improved drainage.

For formal gardens, the walls of the bed can be built of bricks or blocks to match the surroundings; in more informal surroundings treated timber, such as old railway ties, is appropriate.

If treated timber is used, it will give you added peace of mind to line the inside with plastic, just in case creosote is still seeping from the wood. (Treated lumber is fine, also. M. Figley.)

These are some of suitable "homes" for bulbs found in the book The Plantfinder's Guide to Early Bulbs by Rod Leeds ($34.95, Timber Press).

Leeds gives insight into planting in rock gardens, frames, in pots and bowls, and bulbs as cut flowers, and gives instructions for making a tussie-mussie.

Specific cultivars are included as he suggests the best bulb for the site. The bulk of the book is encyclopedic and provides much information to help with selection. Photos enhance.

About the book, Leeds says, "The word bulb is used loosely to cover all storage organs and so includes true bulbs, corms, tubers and rhizomes ...

"The aim of this book is to show the range of plants that can be grown quite easily in temperate gardens.

"By utilizing a knowledge of the environment together with tried and tested methods of cultivation, the gardener can get great enjoyment in almost cheating winter and in so doing eradicate those winter blues by growing some of the most diminutive and beautiful plants in the world."

Plantfinder's guide: Rod Leeds' book contains several color plates.

Among the sources for early bulbs is our own local Scott Kunst of Old House Gardens, 536 Third St., Ann Arbor, MI 48103-4957. His illustrated, 48-page catalog is a treasure trove of heirloom and rare bulbs and is available for $2, or visit www.oldhousegardens.com

Repair those leaky garden hoses

BY SCOTT GIBSON
TODAY'S HOMEOWNER MAGAZINE
FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's an unspoken law of yard work that a garden hose always stops just short of where you need it. But tugging on the hose to gain the last bit of ground only shortens its life. Eventually, a spray of water at one of the couplings tells you it's time to fix the hose or pitch it.

You can stop the leaks with replacement couplings, of which there are several styles. Quick-disconnect fittings are great, but they're not cheap. There's also an older type of coupling that requires you to bend metal tabs around the end of the hose to secure it. But these are more leak-prone and harder to install.

The most practical are two-part plastic replacements, which consist of a fitting that slips inside the hose and a clamp tightened with two screws; they cost less than $2 each. The only tools you need are a knife and a screwdriver. Do the job right, and the repairs shouldn't leak.

If your hose is beyond repair, replace it with a bargain model only if you don't use a hose often. But beware that cheap hoses are thinner, less pliable and more susceptible to bursting. The best hoses coil easily, and have heavily reinforced, multiple plies and heavy-duty brass hardware. Also look for a lifetime warranty. A high-quality 50-foot, five-eighths-inch hose costs $25 to $30. You should take care of your new hose. After each use, shut off the water, relieve the pressure in the hose and store it on a reel, not slung over a nail. At the end of the season, disconnect and drain the hose, and store it indoors.

It's also a good time to inspect paint on windowsills and exposed trim. Don't paint in direct sunlight, which causes the finish to dry too quickly, lowering adhesion and durability.

Master gardening programs are offered by the Michigan State University Extension Services. Classes meet for 13 weeks 6-10 p.m. Tuesdays, starting Jan. 16 for Wayne County residents at 5454 Venoy in Wayne and Saturday mornings at 640 Temple in Detroit. Master gardeners must complete 40 hours of classroom instruction and 40 hours of volunteer time. Applications are available in October for Wayne County residents. Call (313) 833-3417.

MORE GARDENING

The Michigan School of Gardening, 29429 Six Mile, in Livonia offers a variety of subjects. Level 1 classes last through December and are prerequisites to many others. Register in advance. Many classes are limited in size.

Here is a list of some of the classes:

Janet Macunovich teaches a practical gardening class Monday, Oct. 23. A focus on design class will be taught in November by three instructors. Advance classes include shade gardens on two consecutive Tuesdays starting on Oct. 17, instructed by Pam Palechek. Also, Vines and Vertical Features, a class on using plants for wall covering or as vertical divisions in a garden, will be taught by Sue Grubba 6:30-9:30 p.m. Thursdays, Oct. 26, and Nov. 2.

Learn about water gardens from Janet Macunovich in her overview of pond design, construction and plants 6:30-9:30 p.m. or 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Oct. 25 and Nov. 1. Learn how to take care of your tools and learn how to sharpen blades and keep wooden parts in good shape at a three-hour tool-care class offered on at either 9:30 a.m. or 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 9.

Gardening is great fun as long as gardeners maintain health. Avoid common problems by participating in a discussion of safety and health concerns, such as back and muscle strains, skin exposed to poisonous plants and toxic substances and airborne irritants. The three-hour class is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. or 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 7.

Learn about ground cover from Pam Palechick, who will discuss plants, mulches and other materials used to pave areas, which ones to use where, how to establish them and maintain these areas. The three-hour class is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. or 6:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Nov. 8 and Nov. 15.

Have 'can do' attitude for taking candid shots

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

■ Don't forget candids close to home. Whether it's a family gathering at holiday time or a ball game in the back yard, candid shots will provide you with natural looking, lasting memories.

Most of us remember the excitement of Candid Camera, the popular television show from many years back. Well, with a little thought and planning, you too can become an Allen Funt with your camera.

After all, people are among the most fascinating of photographic subjects.

Posed deliberately in front of the camera, people often become stiff and self-conscious. But if they're caught unawares, you'll end up with shots that are natural in expression and exciting in content.

Approaches

Basically, there are two approaches to candid photography. You can intentionally provoke a reaction by attracting your subject's attention and snapping the camera at that instant, or you can try to be unnoticed and capture life as it happens.

The first approach will freeze people's snap response to your camera and you'll get expressions of surprise and humor that can be very revealing.

The second approach, shooting unobserved, will produce natural looking pictures of people going about their daily lives. If photographing in public places such as an airport, stadium or crowded street, try to attract minimum attention to yourself. Blend in with the surroundings and become a quiet observer of the action.

Telephoto lenses are certainly helpful in candid photography because you can fill the frame without having to get too close to your subject. Often, with a telephoto, you can get striking shots of people absorbed in work or play and they won't even know you're there.

But don't rule out normal or even wide angle lenses. They'll give you more of the background in your shot, which can be valuable in placing subjects in their natural environment.

Wide angle lenses

Wide angle lenses, due to their increased angle of view, will enable you to include people in the viewfinder without having to point the camera directly at them. People rarely believe they're being photographed unless the camera is aimed in their direction.

Don't forget candids close to home. Whether it's a family gathering at holiday time or a ball game in the back yard, candid shots will provide you with natural looking, lasting memories.

On vacations, too, don't overlook that joyful expression just as the fish is hooked or Junior's glow of accomplishment as he completes his sand castle at the beach.

To help you get these shots, try to have your exposure predetermined so that you can trip the shutter without having to fuss with the camera's controls.

Speed

In all candid photography, speed is an important ingredient. Not so much the shutter speed or film speed, but the speed with which you can react to the image and decide on the composition, focusing and exposure of your shot.

A thorough familiarity with your camera equipment is essential if you are to operate quickly and unobtrusively to get the shots that count.

Exhibit

Monte Nagler will be holding his annual Fall Photographic Exhibition at Barnes & Noble, 6800 Orchard Lake Road, West Bloomfield Monday-Tuesday, Oct. 16-31. Nagler, a former student of Ansel Adams, specializes in moody, atmospheric landscapes he photographs while traveling around the world. He will host a reception 7-9 p.m. Friday, Oct. 20 and present a discussion "A Journey Through the History of Photography," 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 21. The discussion will focus on photographs from his own collection, which features the works of Ansel Adams, Alfred Stieglitz, Alfred Eisenstadt, and Arnold Newman.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then 111, then N-A-G-L-E-R. His fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Reel life: Late afternoon backlighting and a telephoto lens helped Monte Nagler obtain this very dramatic candid of this "sunset fisherman."

Living Well

Create ultimate sweets for your sweethearts

INVITING IDEAS

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

I spent a very long and lonely night this week baking a multitude of cookies for some special people in my life.

That got me thinking, "Next up, Halloween. More stuff to send, and by golly, I'm not creating those goodies alone."

As these thoughts went through my mind, my eye hit a copy of Bruce Weinstein's new book, The Ultimate Candy Book.

A-ha! Now there's something that would be great fun to do with friends. Make the goal of the day assorted batches of candies to give as Halloween gifts.

This might also be a fun idea for a fund-raiser. Do your very own candy sale instead of a traditional bake sale. Or just make some treats to satisfy your insatiable sweet tooth.

Bruce does it again, another in a series of ultimates – goodies that are quick, simple and yummy.

The Ultimate Candy Book ($15) is just arriving on the shelves of local book shops. Here are a couple of recipes from the book.

Pumpkin Seed Crunch

"Pumpkin seeds, called pepitas in Mexican markets, are usually sold raw, shelled and unsalted. You will need to toast them before making this recipe. It takes about 5 to 7 minutes in a skillet over medium heat. The seeds pop as they toast. When the popping stops, the seeds are done."

Makes about 1 1/2 pounds

1/2 cup water
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup light corn syrup
1 1/2 cups shelled, toasted pumpkin seeds
1 tablespoon butter, plus additional for greasing the cookie sheet
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon baking soda

1. Butter a large cookie sheet (preferably non-stick) and set it aside. Alternatively, butter a large marble slab. If you have a marble or granite counter, by all means use it. Simply clean it, then generously butter it.

2. Combine the water, sugar and corn syrup in a heavy medium saucepan. Place the pan over medium heat and stir until the sugar is completely dissolved and the mixture comes to a boil.

3. Clip a candy thermometer to the inside of the pan and cook, without stirring, until the syrup reaches 285 degrees F (just over soft crack). Stir in the toasted pumpkin seeds.

4. Bring the mixture back to a boil and cook, stirring often, until it reaches 300 degrees F (hard crack). Immediately remove the pan from the heat.

5. Add the butter, vanilla and baking soda. The mixture will be very thick and will foam.

6. When the foaming subsides, pour the hot candy onto the cookie sheet or the buttered marble slab. Pour it as thinly as possible, but don't spread the hot candy. After a few minutes, run a long, thin, buttered spatula or knife under the candy to make sure it isn't sticking.

7. While the candy is still quite warm, start pulling the candy. Grab the edges and stretch out the brittle. Pull it thin enough (about 1/4-inch) to keep the seeds in one layer, if possible. Alternatively, use two buttered forks to help you pull and stretch the candy.

8. As you pull, pieces of the candy may break and holes may form. That's OK – you're going to break it into pieces later on anyway.

9. The candy will become harder to pull as it cools, and will quickly become impossible to stretch without breaking. At this point, allow the candy to cool completely, about 1 hour. Using your hands, break the candy into small, irregular pieces about the size of a credit card. Store the candy in an airtight container at room temperature for up to a month.

Granola Chewy Bars

Makes about 16 bars

1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup corn syrup
1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup real maple syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
7 cups granola cereal
Vegetable oil for greasing the pan
Confectioners' sugar for coating

1. Oil a 9-by-13-inch Pyrex baking pan and set it aside.

2. Combine the sugar, water, corn syrup, honey and maple syrup in a heavy medium saucepan. Place the pan over medium heat. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and the mixture comes to a boil.

3. Clip a candy thermometer to the inside of the pan. Raise the heat to medium-high and cook, without stirring, until the mixture reaches 250 degrees F (firm ball).

4. Remove the pan from the heat and add the vanilla and granola all at once. Stir until the cereal is thoroughly incorporated. Spread the hot mixture into the prepared 9-by-13-inch pan. Set it aside on a cooling rack until the bottom of the pan feels cool.

5. Use a sharp knife to cut the cooled granola mixture into bars while it is still in the pan. Lift each bar out with a spatula and wrap them individually in wax paper. If the granola bars are too sticky to handle, you may coat them with confectioners' sugar before wrapping.

6. Store them at room temperature in an airtight container for up to 2 weeks.

M-FIT CLASSES BEGIN

Fresh Ideas for Fast Weekday Meals begins the M-Fit Culinary School and Nutrition Education class schedule. Fast and Fresh from the Sea, presented by Monahan's Seafood Market, 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 25, and Swift and Simple Suppers, Kathy Goldberg and Lizzie Burt, 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 1. Super Foods for Super Health is scheduled noon-1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 7. You'll learn Five Fast and Festive Party Trays of smoked salmon platter, steamed asparagus wrapped in prosciutto, rosettes of sweet potatoes, garden vegetable crudite and Grand Marnier marinated strawberries at a class scheduled 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 8, from Peter Julian, Busch's chief executive chef. Dazzling Holiday Desserts are on the menu 6-8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 15, by Kathy Goldberg and Lizzie Burt. Dishes include cranberry apple crisp, poached pears with raspberry sauce, fragrant orange bundt cake, pavlova with custard filling and fruit and chocolate dipped berries.

Classes are held at the East Ann Arbor Health Center Demonstration Kitchen, 4260 Plymouth Road, in Ann Arbor. Individual class fees are $30, while a two-person fee is $50, and a series of any three classes is $80.

Employ painting techniques to add a designer's touch

(NUE) - Adding a creative designer touch to your room is easy.

Making that designer look reflect your own personal style is even easier.

Using a designer painting technique can give your room a professional look and reflect your personality — without the professional price.

Sponging and ragging are two popular painting techniques that use multiple colors. Deciding which colors look best doesn't need to be a difficult task. By using the Color Key System at your local Devoe/Fuller-O'Brien paint store, you can combine colors that create a mood — and a personal touch.

The Color Key System divides colors into natural, harmonizing mood palettes of "warm" and "cool." Whatever paint combination you pick, you can be sure it will harmonize.You can be creative, daring and have confidence that the colors match. And your room will have a designer feel.

Now that you've picked some colors, it's time to paint. The painting technique sponging blends colors and gives the room the feeling of an impressionist painting.

When sponge painting, first put on the basecoat and let it dry.

After the paint is dry, use a natural sea sponge available at your local paint store and dampen it in water. Then touch the side of the sponge to the paint and blot it on some newspaper. This will prevent your sponge from depositing too much paint on the wall.

Start in the middle of the area, gently touching the sponge against the wall. Dab a two- to three-foot area, varying the sponge angle to create different patterns. Put spaces between dab marks to give the room a gentle feeling and to let the basecoat shine.

After the first sponge coat dries, you can repeat the process with a second and even a third color to give the room a real designer look.

Another designer technique is ragging. This technique conveys the look of crushed fabric on a wall.

First, apply your basecoat and let it dry. Next get a lint-free rag, wet it with water and wring it out to remove any particles. Wad the rag up so the edges are not exposed, and dip the rag in paint. Test the look by blotting the rag on newspaper.

Again, start in the middle of the wall and work in a two- to three-foot area. Dip the rag in the paint and dab on the wall. Keep refolding the rag until it is dry. Repeat the process. For best results, use only one color over the basecoat.

For more ideas on color selection and inexpensive designer painting techniques, stop by your local Devoe/Fuller O'Brien dealer or visit www.fullerpaint.com and www.devoepaint.com.

BY MARY KLEMIC
STAFF WRITER
mklemic@oe.homecomm.net

Orson Starr came to Royal Oak from New York in 1831 to seek his fortune in the Territory of Michigan.

Starr built a factory and manufactured cowbells, selling them to settlers coming through the territory. It was the community's first industry and Starr operated it for more than 40 years.

His great-great-granddaughter, Mary Starr, has collected an assortment of the cowbells. Today they are displayed in her Franklin home.

They are among the variety of antiques furnishing the residence with additional charm, beauty or both.

"I've had the fever (for antiques) forever," Mary Starr said.

What is the appeal of antiques?

"The individuality of the pieces and the interest and I would say the 'artistic-ness' of being able to put things together," Starr replied.

Find the appeal for yourself by visiting the sixth annual Franklin Community Antiques Show, Friday-Saturday, Oct. 20-21, at the Franklin Community Church, 26425 Wellington.

The church is on the Village Green at Wellington and Normandy in the historic district of Franklin Village, south of Maple.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 20 and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 21. Admission is $6.

More than 30 dealers will present brass, silver, porcelain, linens, quilts, rugs, jewelry, Flo-Blue, Orientalia, American decorative arts, lamps, paintings, primitives, books, Meissen, Quimper, and English and American furniture. The show will also feature a country cafe and bake sale.

The event will kick off with a Preview Night, 6-9 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 19, featuring hors d'oeuvres and cappuccino. Preview tickets are $40 and include re-admission to the show.

"It's one of the nicest shows in the area," Starr said. "It's very well attended."

Starr bought a pine table from the event one year. It is in the same room with a teal pine cabinet and some of her majolica pieces on a shelf.

"I love the colors," she said of majolica.

Another room houses a deep red cabinet.

Orson Starr's cowbells were made of sheet iron, zinc and copper. At that time it took several days to make the trip to Detroit to obtain the materials.

The cowbells came in eight sizes – the smallest (which were put on sheep) about 3-1/2 inches high and 2-1/2 inches in diameter, and the largest about 8 inches high and 6 inches in diameter.

Sometimes payment was made in farm produce. Once Starr exchanged a load of bells for a farm, which replaced the two-room log house in which he and his family – consisting of his wife, four daughters and six sons – lived.

Comfortable: Old iron beds in Mary Starr's home have a special grace.

Some of the larger cowbells in Mary Starr's collection hang from wide straps on the wall. Others are arranged on shelves.

Other items in Mary Starr's home have stories. She bought what she thought was a case at an auction. When she got home, she discovered that it contained gears for a clock. Starr had the clock assembled and repaired, and now it hangs on a wall.

Over the fireplace is a delicate sampler, made in the 1800s by an ancestor who was 13 years old at the time. The softly colored sampler features the alphabet, numbers, a ship and flowers.

Old iron beds, including one from Starr's grandmother's house, display a special grace. Among Starr's other collections are boxes, one of which is an exquisite papier-mâché snuff box from the 1700s.

Starr is an advocate of really living with antiques, instead of keeping them at a distance.

"You can put your feet up on it ... You don't have to be careful of furniture at all," she said.

The Franklin Community Antiques Show will take place a short walk from the village center, with boutiques and the Franklin Cider Mill offering cider and fresh baked doughnuts.

Proceeds from the antiques show will benefit outreach programs supported by Franklin Community Church and selected Franklin community organizations. For more information, call (248) 626-6606.

DESIGNER DATES

■ An exhibit by fine art photographer and At Home columnist Monte Nagler will run Oct. 16-31 at Barnes & Noble, 6800 Orchard Lake Road in West Bloomfield. Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford to present fun musical season opener

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER
kwygonik@oe.homecomm.net

Addiction can be a positive thing, just ask Heidi Kelley and her husband, Sean.

"Theater is an addiction for both of us," said Kelley, who serves as publicity chairwoman on the board of the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford. Sean serves as president. "It allows us to spend time together."

They've been spending a lot of time at the theater working with a talented crew and cast to get ready for the opening of the Guild's first show this season, a musical — Little Shop of Horrors — on Friday, Oct. 20.

"We tried to pick quality shows for a small audience," she said. "The theater seats 99 people. There's not a bad seat in the house."

Sean and Heidi met at Western Michigan University where they both majored in theater. After graduating, they worked for a professional theater company, the Actors & Playwrights Initiative in Kalamazoo.

When Ryan, who is now 5, was born, they decided to move to Hazel Park to be closer to family. Sean grew up in Rochester and is a graduate of Adams High School.

"There's not enough money in theater to raise a family," said Heidi, explaining that Sean now works as a computer programmer. But, when a friend introduced him to the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford, Sean knew he had found a second home.

The group has been in transition. Last year the guild presented just one show, but the Guild's on the rebound and has scheduled a season of four shows plus a festival of one-act plays.

"What made the group so appealing was its similarity to the group I had worked with in Kalamazoo," said Sean. "Both are small, intimate, Off-Off-Broadway style theaters and I have always loved theater where you can closely interact with the audience.

"I chose to run for president because the theater was in trouble. This theater has a long history in this community, but as the old vanguard left, there was not enough new involvement to sustain it. I thought I could change that, so I went out and gathered some people I knew, as well as people I just met that had a deep desire to see this theater succeed, put them together, and reenergized this theater. We are slowly rebuilding and spreading the word that this is the place to go to see quality theater."

"We bring in people from all over," said Heidi. "We pretty much cast everyone. If you're there, we'll use you. It enables people who aren't professionals to do something that's a dream of theirs.

Great experience

"Community theater really starts people on their way to professional theater," said Heidi. "Being in a show makes people appreciate theater more and broadens their awareness of the world."

Beckett drama reflects on human nature

David Kelly's Irish brogue rings through the phone lines strong and clear. The 72 -year-old actor is on the road playing the role he first took on more than 40 years ago in Krapp's Last Tape.

The one-man drama is part of a Samuel Beckett mini-festival the Gate Theatre of Dublin will perform Friday-Saturday, Oct. 13-14, in the University Musical Society series in Ann Arbor.

Kelly plays an old man looking back over his life in the 45-minute play that became the sensation of the off-Broadway season in 1960.

"We get older and we understand the whole bizarre mystery tour a little better," said Kelly as he rested between performances in Iowa City. "Krapp's listening to a tape he records every year on his birthday. This one is from 30 years ago as a young man. I had the exuberance of youth then. I was only 30 when I first played Krapp.

"It's about looking back and what might have been. It takes tremendous energy to create the thing that makes you hold an audience."

Four decades later Kelly is as taken with the role as when he first played Krapp, a hard-drinking unsuccessful writer, in a 1959 Gate Theatre production. Kelly joined the company after studying theater at the Abbey School of Acting associated with the Abbey Theatre in Dublin. Movie explores little known rescue mission

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

"It was an idyllic life and I was the center of the universe." For Kurt Fuchel, that was the Vienna, Austria he knew in 1938 as a seven year old.

Then, in March of that year, the Nazis came. And Kurt's idyllic life was ripped asunder.

For baby boomer Deborah Oppenheimer, executive producer of "The Drew Carey Show," the years preceding World War II had become a personal jigsaw puzzle.

"I couldn't ever get my mother to sit and tell me her story. She would start crying and I would start crying, but I could see what it did to her emotionally. She died without my ever knowing what happened to her."

Until now. Oppenheimer discovered that her mother, like Kurt Fuchel, was one of more than 10,000 children in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia whose parents made the voluntary but agonizing decision to send them away to Great Britain. These children, or Kinder, as they came to be known, were taken into foster homes and hostels, expecting eventually to be reunited with their parents. Most of them never saw their families again.

Rescue mission

This extraordinary but relatively unknown rescue mission called Kindertransport is the subject of Oppenheimer's feature-length documentary, Into the Arms of Strangers: Stories of the Kindertransport, opening Friday exclusively at the Landmark Maple Art Theater in Bloomfield Hills.

Deborah Oppenheimer, producer

With the cooperation of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, Oppenheimer found and interviewed Fuchel and more than a dozen other participants, parents and rescuers. Their accounts meld with remarkable footage – and the narration of Dame Judi Dench – to present a disturbing yet uplifting look at that dark chapter of our history from a new perspective, that of the children themselves.

Sitting in her Dearborn hotel suite after the film's screening, Oppenheimer and Fuchel – one of the few who did reunite with his parents and who now lives in the New York area – discussed the documentary and the importance of its message.

Important message

"I didn't make the movie to make a statement; I made it because nobody had heard of the Kindertransport," said Oppenheimer. "But I think that the people in the film are eloquent in their honesty and what they say has tremendous relevance today, because we don't learn from history."

MICHAEL STEINBERG

While two-month-old Katharine sleeps peacefully nearby, Heidi talks about the positive impact the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford has had on Ryan.

"He sits and watches the story, and sees his daddy do something he doesn't usually do. He understands the difference between real and play, and will come home from rehearsal and act out scenes."

The cast ranges in age from 16 to 35. There are no age requirements to audition for a show. Three high school students were cast.

Fun show

"I chose Little Shop of Horrors to open the season because it is a fun show for both the audience and the cast, it is challenging, and was a good opening for a season that begins near Halloween," said Sean. "Though I have never done the show myself, I have seen the original movie it was based on and I have seen the movie version of the musical. I love the music in this show. Many musicals today are more like one long song interrupted by dialogue, but each of these songs are unique as well as an intricate part of the story."

Sean is cast as Seymour Krelborn, a meek, mild-mannered florist who dreams of getting out of his life on skid row. He is also desperately in love with a girl named Audrey who also works at the flower shop. All of his dreams start to come true after he discovers a new breed of plant. The only problem is that the plant needs blood to survive, and as it grows, so does its appetite.

Excellent cast

Director Adam Organ of Livonia is happy with how the show is progressing.

"We have an excellent cast and a talented crew who are working very hard," he said. "It's the best live entertainment you'll find for $12. It's a fun show, family-oriented, with excellent characters everyone can relate to."

Organ joined the group in June and says he was welcomed with open arms. "I like the fresh ideas and energy."

He encourages people who are thinking about getting involved in theater to consider joining the group. "Anyone who has talent — they'll find a way to work with them," he said.

Mark Ripper of Westland has been involved with the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford for a few years.

"This is a show I've always wanted to do," he said of Little Shop of Horrors. He likes the symbolism of '50s and '60s B movies, the music and campiness of it. Ripper also liked the 1986 movie version.

He's cast in fun bits including the chorus, salesman and a bum.

"They always come together to put good shows up," he said about the group. "The small size gives actors an opportunity to grab the audience."

Janet Stevenson of Novi, who serves on the board as vice president, portrays Mrs. Mushnick. Her specialty is improv, and she was previously with Second City Chicago.

She joined the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford in March. "I like the way they work," she said. "They really try to bring the community into theater."

"Little Shop of Horrors has been challenging, but fun. "It's so cheesy," said Stevenson. "There's so much room for the characters to explode. It's been so much fun. You're kind of seeing a monster Hollywood-type movie on stage. It's just a very fun, goofy, cheesy, play. We've bonded as a cast and work well off of each other."

Members sought

The Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford is looking for more members. "We could use a few extra hands," said Ripper, who is also designing the lighting for Little Shop of Horrors. Painters, plumbers, and other technical people are needed to help with sets and lights.

"I think membership in the Theatre Guild is very beneficial," said Sean. "Membership helps support cultural activity in your community, and are tax deductible. However, you do not have to be a member to get involved. Any help is appreciated, whether you donate time to come down and help paint a set, or just want to donate some office supplies. You can also help by purchasing an ad in our program, or just see a show."

"Saturday is our work day," said Heidi. "Anyone who wants to join and have fun is welcome. "Our doors are open."

This year, for the first time, the guild will host a by-invitation-only President's Preview at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 19. This special performance of Little Shop of Horrors is open only to members and businesses that advertise in the guild's seasonal program.

"This is our way of showing our appreciation to all of those who are supporting the arts in this area," said Heidi. Appetizers and wine will be served, and the audience will have a chance to meet cast members, and even walk on stage to see how it feels.

ous playhouses in Europe.

"It's an awfully good part," said Kelly. "I have no interest in quitting. In fact, after I'm dead, I plan to play Yorick in Hamlet. In Beckett, there's a message with everything he writes. 'Do it now, don't write things off.'

"People think of Beckett as all despair and dustbins, but it never is. It's always about hope and the unsinkable human spirit. And it's always a challenge. Beckett hands you these beautiful words. It's your job to hold the audience. You want them to be riveted to the spot."

And that's not always easy. The significance of a scene may take a while to evolve whether the play is Krapp's Last Tape or the second production in the mini-festival – Waiting for Godot.

Kelly, like Krapp, is a creature of habit himself. Born and raised in Dublin, Kelly still lives in the house he grew up in as a young boy.

"Krapp has this thing about bananas," said Kelly. "He eats two bananas every day. When he listens to the old tape he finds himself saying 'I nearly had four bananas today. Overindulgence is not good for a man in my condition.' He still persists with these little indiscretions despite the warnings."

Unlike Krapp, Kelly is taking care of his health. Between now and spring, Kelly will need all his energy for the three films in which he's been cast. Acting on screen is his second love.

Kelly's best known for starring in the award-winning film Waking Ned Devine for which he received Hollywood's Golden Satellite Award for Best Actor in 1998. The last few years he's also appeared in Ordinary Decent Criminal with Kevin Spacey. He has just finished filming Rough for Theatre I with Milo O'Shea for the Beckett Film Project.

"Film is totally different – you only have to speak a couple of words a day and leave it to a director to chop it," said Kelly. "It's not acting in the real sense of acting. I love live theater. That's what keeps me going. It's my very breath. It's playing to that audience, the wonderful rapport.

"I don't think an audience realizes how important they are. They supply one of the main ingredients of your performance."

Local economy profits from an investment in arts

BACKSTAGE PASS

ANN DELISI

We knew it was good for us, but it isn't often that the economic impact of a major event in the arts community is assessed as thoroughly as the study of this spring's Van Gogh: Face to Face exhibit at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Research conducted and recently released by Yee/Minard Associates indicated that nearly $93 million was pumped into our local economy by the 315,000 visitors to the show. The drawing power was best illustrated in the findings that 50 percent of visitors were from out of town, 11 percent of which were making their first trip to Detroit.

The study demonstrates that an investment in the arts can bring a hefty return. The dollars are best tabulated and estimated by the economists and researchers. But each of us can obtain first-hand knowledge of how we benefit from our cultural institutions.

Some recent attractions may have lacked the economic clout of the Van Gogh exhibit, but certainly packed a wallop in revealing the diverse advantages of a thriving arts scene.

Let's begin with opportunity. Cultural institutions go to great lengths to be accessible to all – not just as spectators, but participants as well. Take, for example, the stories of a Detroit police officer and an automotive engineer who performed alongside international stars as extras in the Michigan Opera Theatre production of Aida.

Role in education

Then there's the important role that the arts play in education. For over 30 years, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra has been training new generations of musicians through the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra. Young people from middle schools, high schools and colleges can get an open audition, and earn the privilege or working with and learning from world class professionals like Pinkus Zuckerman and local greats like Marcus Belgrave.

The arts make an enormous contribution in preserving our cultural traditions. Amid the triumph of the Van Gogh exhibit and other events that boosted the gate at the DIA in the past year, a little known Mexican folk art received prime exposure in the Rivera Court. As artist Alejandro Garcia Nelo created an altar of Papel Picado, or "punched paper," attendees were introduced to the techniques that are often used to beautify tables, windows, and ceilings.

To remain vibrant, the Detroit area's key cultural institutions have consistently delivered something extra – a fresh perspective.

Cranbrook

Whenever we're seeking a diversion from our everyday lives, the renowned Cranbrook Art Museum is one of the first places to look. A recent installation offered filmmaker Robert Anderson's quirky, yet accommodating view of the dramas that unfold in motels across the country. Anderson's short films provided an escape for those that checked in. An award-winning segment to air at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 19 on Detroit Public TV's BACKSTAGE PASS gives you a glimpse.

The Van Gogh exhibit affirms that we get a good return on our investment in the arts. But let's also put a value on the other benefits from exhibits and activities that provide opportunity, teach, preserve our cultural traditions and otherwise enrich our lives.

– from either side of the operation.

"Countries had quotas that were filled very quickly," said Oppenheimer.

"The only country that was willing to do anything, and then only for children so as not to be a burden on their economy or to take jobs away, was Great Britain, which forced the parents into the devastating decision of having to send their children away alone to strangers."

And what of the United States? While a bill allowing an additional 20,000 children to our shores was submitted to Congress, it died before coming to a vote. "The American response was shameful," said Oppenheimer. "Canada, in fact, said none is too many," added Fuchel.

Research

Oppenheimer researched the Kindertransport operation for over two years and developed a general script with Academy Award-winning documentary filmmaker Mark Jonathan Harris (The Long Way Home). They threw out half the script after putting their interviewees on film. What the Kinder told them, no one could possibly have written.

■ The vast majority of children left their parents bound for British holding centers, where they would remain unless selected by foster parents. Inevitably, the cutest and youngest children were picked first. Brothers and sisters were separated.

"All of the people were surprised by the emotion that was tapped from inside of them (during the interviews)," Oppenheimer said. "They had never sat for hours and told their stories like that."

Writer/ director Harris, in previously released materials, commented that "when they talk, you can still see the child in their faces as they remember. They're back there at that moment and it's clear they're all still living it."

The vast majority of children left their parents bound for British holding centers, where they would remain unless selected by foster parents. Inevitably, the cutest and youngest children were picked first. Brothers and sisters were separated. Teenagers were often chosen to work as servants.

Others had to be placed in hostels. The parents of director John Schlesinger (Midnight Cowboy) organized a hostel for 13 children. The parents of Lord Richard Attenborough (Cry Freedom) took in two girls.

Kurt Fuchel's story was less typical than most. He had already been sponsored by a couple in Norwich, England when his parents put him on the train.

"They told me to do whatever the nurses on the train would tell me to do and to be a good boy. I'm sure they said something like they'd be along soon, but of course they said it in German, which I don't speak anymore," recalled Fuchel.

"My parents got out by hiding out in France, and that's where they stayed throughout the war. I lost touch with them when the Vichy government (in France) was taken over by the Germans. But they knew where I was, and after the war they sent a telegram saying that they were alive. They said good-bye to a seven year old and found a 16 year old."

Fuchel emigrated to America in 1956, and is a past president of the Kindertransport Association of North America. He estimates that one-fourth of the original 10,000 Kinder found their way to the United States or Canada.

"The message today I hope reaches the young people," Fuchel says with the quiet optimism of a real-life survivor. "Who knows, 20 years from now they may see in the papers that there are places where the children are in danger and need a helping hand, a place to live for a while, an education. And perhaps they will think back and respond."

RON ESPINOZA

Fire-breathing rock and roll: Together more than a decade now, The Dragons rock like radio never existed. Ignoring the industry standards that claim Limp Bizkit and Britney Spears as rock and pop royalty, the San Diego-based quartet strip down to a raw sound, declaring all you need is a few guitars, a bass and drums. The Dragons features (left to right) Steve Rodriguez on bass, Ken Mochikoshi Horne on guitar, Mario Escovedo on vocals and Jarrod Lucas on drums. The band's latest release R.L.F. on Junk Records shrieks with the anthemic "Roll The Dice," punk aesthetics of "Sleep When I'm Dead" and doomsday-style vocals reminiscent of Evan Dando on "Killing Time." The Dragons prove that punk is alive and well. Johnny Rotten should be proud.

Rock out with The Dragons, when they perform with headliners Gaza Strippers and The Von Bondies, 9 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 14, Magic Stick, Detroit. Call (313) 833-9700.

CD REVIEW

Are We There Yet
Treblehead

It's the epitome of a family vacation. The whine emitted from the back seat, about three hours into any road trip. "Are We There Yet." It's also the debut album by Livonia-based quartet, Treblehead.

By the end of the second song, What Have I, if you're not jumping and at least tempted to chirp along to the punk-pop sounds emitted by vocalist Brian Shaney, bassist Lori Gidley, drummer Ron Vensko and guitarist AJ Pahl, someone seriously needs to slip you a Prozac. With opening harmonies on Mashed Potatoe (sic) that swing back to Weezer's Buddy Holly days and the straightforward rock of such tracks as Happytown and Lies, Treblehead is establishing a strong reputation in the area.

The band was chosen out of 5,000 contestants to perform at Toronto's North By Northeast music showcase last June. Treblehead was most recently seen on stage at Arts, Beats and Eats in Pontiac.

Listen for yourself. "Are We There Yet" can be found at www.treblehead.com and will be released nationally Oct. 16 on Sound 340 Records. Treblehead will perform 11 p.m. Friday, Oct. 13 at Lili's 21 in Hamtramck. Opening the show is Royal Dose and QWT5. Call (313) 875-6555 for more information.

Sally Field gives beauty lessons in comedy

BY CARRIE COOPER
SPECIAL WRITER

It is said that beauty is only skin deep and that beauty is in the eye of the beholder. But, could beauty actually make your dreams come true and give you everything you have ever wanted?

Is being beautiful really all that matters in life? Mona Hibbard (Minnie Driver) seems to think so in the upcoming female-charged comedy Beautiful.

A Destination Films presentation, Beautiful is a Sally Field film. It stars Minnie Driver, Joey Lauren Adams, Hallie Kate Eisenberg, Kathleen Turner, Leslie Stefanson, Bridgette Wilson, and Ali Landry.

Beautiful takes a look at young girls' fascination with beauty pageants and wanting to be the next "Miss American Miss." Mona Hibbard is a young woman who grew up in an unhappy and unloving household. Her only escape was participating in beauty pageants.

After losing several pageants, Mona starts to realize that maybe she could gain attention by winning the most creative costume category.

But when you have a mother who doesn't even attend your pageants, let alone make you your costume, you have to be more than creative. Mona befriends Ruby (Joey Lauren Adams), who knows how to sew and agrees to make Mona's costumes. When Mona wins for most unusual costume she knows she is on her way. Throughout the years Mona makes her way up the pageant ladder.

Now Mona has one thing on her mind, and that is to be the next "Miss American Miss."

But, there was one thing she didn't plan on – having an illegitimate daughter, Vanessa (Hallie Kate Eisenberg). Ruby decides to help her friend hide the secret that could prevent Mona from becoming the next "Miss American Miss."

But when Vanessa emerges as Mona's biggest supporter, Mona finds herself losing her hunger for winning. Not only does she have the media and her fellow competitors threatening her chances at the crown, but her maternal instinct may cause her to lose it all by herself.

Academy Award nominee Minnie Driver (Good Will Hunting) returns to the screen with yet another heart-warming performance. She is the epitome of beautiful. Joey Lauren Adams (Chasing Amy) possesses a warm and friendly smile that makes her perfect for her role. Hallie Kate Eisenberg (The Insider) is no longer just the Pepsi girl. She proves she can hold her own with veteran actors and steals the show.

Sally Field brings us a comedy for all ages, with a life lesson – being beautiful doesn't guarantee happiness.

ELECTRONIC MUSIC

BT 'comes back down' to Detroit

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER
scasola@oe.homecomm.net

If the symbol of true stardom is seeing one's name in lights, then BT achieved it first in Detroit.

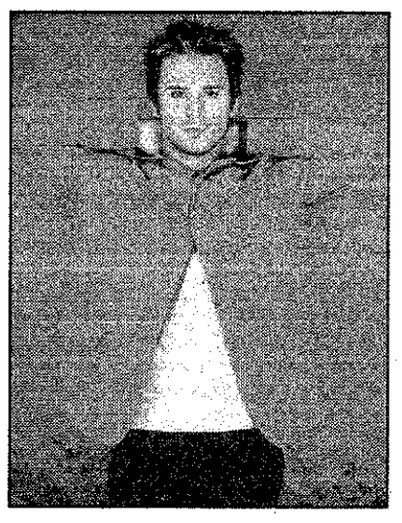
The last time he was in town, the renowned producer, musician and singer – also known as Brian Transeau – saw his name on a marquee for the first time in his career. He even sent the photo of Detroit's State Theatre home to his mother with pride.

Considering the 29-year-old pioneer of electronic music has been consumed by the pursuit of sounds all of his life, it was about time.

But BT has always moved one step ahead. Innovative soundscapes virtually run through his veins. "I started studying music when I was four," he said, calling from his hotel room in St. Petersburg, Fla. "I've told this story before, but I remember sitting in the back of my Aunt Gloria's Camero when I was 2 1/2, with my mom, my aunt, and my grandmother, listening to Bad Bad LeRoy Brown. And I just started shouting my 2-year-old head off. My grandmother leaned over and said 'Watch out for this one.'"

Turns out, grandma was right; they had a musician on their hands. A classically-trained child prodigy, the Maryland native entered the Washington Conservatory of Music when he was only 8 years old. But BT wouldn't stop at Rachmaninov. He moved onto another realm, one that would shift the electronic revolution toward trance and house music. "My real introduction to electronic music was via break dance culture."

Coerced by his break dance crew, BT bought his first drum machine and began creating dance tracks for his friends. It was then he discovered something "open-ended and infinite."



BT

While he officially broke into the scene in the mid 1990s with his first release, Ima, BT's formal introduction to rave culture came long after he began making the music.

"I first started in 1987 when I was at the Berklee School of Music in Boston," he said. "It was weird house music."

Again ahead of his time and misunderstood, BT recalled a time when friends asked "'What are people going to do in the 2 to 3 minute breakdown where there are no beats?'" So he took his sound to England, where the music had already taken hold, where he wouldn't have to explain himself.

Gaining ground with club favorites like Embracing the Future and Blue Skies, BT won over American fans as well. Eight years later trance has taken over. As the masses embrace it, BT looks ahead.

Don't call it a departure; BT's latest Movement in Still Life takes on a whole new musical dimension. "This is the first record where I get to do all of what I do in one album," he said. And the influences he grew up with are all there. The first single, co-written with Soul Coughing frontman and friend M. Doughty, Never Gonna Come Back Down, shows shades of New Order with its infectious beat. Shame is BT's ode to Depeche Mode. Satellite shines with atmospheric reminders of Pink Floyd. Madskillz and Smartbomb give a nod to the power of hip hop.

"I don't think of it as a departure at all," he said. "I think of it as the first time I get to be honest."

Rather than sticking to one genre, BT comes into his own, defying the boundaries of progressive house music.

Collecting a group of friends that reads like a list of who's who in the scene, BT worked with Paul VanDyk, Sasha, Kirsty Hawkshaw, Jan Johnston, Mike Truman of Hybrid and Doughty, to create a record in which each track complements and illuminates the next. The album reflects the artist's wide-eyed, anything's-possible approach.

"He's pretty straight-forward," said Doughty in a recent phone interview. "He's one of the happiest people I know. He's a ray of sunshine."

An appropriate metaphor for a man who claims he's never more inspired to write music than in those moments when he can walk barefoot through the grass. "I feel really plugged in when I'm able to spend time in beautiful, natural places."

On the Jensenergy Tour BT will plug in like never before – with a live band. "It works," he said with that air of enthusiasm and charm. "I didn't know if it would work. It's scary because a lot of people expect something similar to a DJ set, except live. I want it to still feel like that."

Aside from his own music, BT scored the critically acclaimed soundtrack to the 1999 feature Go, directed by Doug Liman. That was just the first step. His credits now include a soundtrack

Get your kicks with The Flaming Lips

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

Wayne Coyne was one of the lucky ones. It seems his yellow brick road was chosen for him.

"I always grew up in a house of music," said the Flaming Lips frontman. "I don't think I ever considered it being something weird. I wanted to be in a band. I always thought I wanted to do this.

"It wasn't until I was 28 years old that I woke up and realized, 'Oh my gosh, this is crazy, this career I've chosen for myself. Why didn't I become a banker.' I was too far into it."

For fans of the trio, which also includes Michael Ivins and Steven Drozd, the Flaming Lips are lucky he didn't take the "rational" route. The Oklahoma City-based band, that gained national attention with its 1994 hit She Don't Use Jelly, will bring it's on-stage hijinks – complete with hand puppets, fake blood and possibly a rendition of Over The Rainbow – to Detroit's Majestic Theatre this Friday, Oct. 13.

I called Coyne while he was on the band's bus in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Chapel Hill is a place he knows well. The band has been playing there since 1985. Actually, there aren't many places Coyne and company haven't been. When you're a member of the Flaming Lips, touring is life. And they've going been nonstop now for a year and a half, on the road supporting The Soft Bulletin, an album critics hailed as art-rock at its finest.

"We've been touring since 1984," said the seasoned musician on the line. "There have only been a couple of years when we didn't tour." Much of that hiatus was filled with recording the album, The Flaming Lips ninth offering, as well as working on Zaireeka, an innovative musical project that involved four CDs played simultaneously to produce a fifth, living, synchronous sound.

If the Flaming Lips must be known for something, let it be the band's intense songwriting, music that makes you think. Still, Coyne approaches it as he would any career. Quite simply, rock and roll is his job.

"When I write songs, I come up with the initial impact. I think 'Oh, that's a song that moves me.' That's when a song has some kind of personal identity."

But it doesn't last, he insisted. "It's sort of like asking 'Do you feel a connection to the clothes you wear?' In a sense you do. You're just so used to it. When I was making all of these songs, something of me was invested in it. I want people to feel they know me through the songs."

Coyne said there's a perception that everything in the business is exciting, but after more than a decade making music he's found it's truly a career. "Sometimes it's not exciting at all. I kind of use the analogy of guys building a big, tall skyscraper. Brick by brick it goes up. I don't think they're necessarily inspired. If all along you're making records and songs, you get inspired. (But) it becomes boring to work on big ideas that take a long time."

So you don't have to live that rock and roll lifestyle myth, he claimed. The Behind the Music-style drama where the music is great and the musicians are a mess doesn't apply here. "We don't have to worry about egos getting in the way," said Coyne. "It allows us to do bigger, better things."

Some of those things include re-creating Zaireeka visually using DVD. Since the DVD would play all tracks at the same time, it would prove more user-friendly this time around. The band plans to tour through Thanksgiving and will later begin work on a new album.

Before they disappear, The Flaming Lips promise to give quite a show. "I just do these things to give people something to look at," Coyne said of the stage antics. "I was kind of awkward. People just went crazy. We'll bring 400 pounds of confetti to a show. They love it. I don't think it detracts from the music. It gives it a really spontaneous element. I thank god that there are things like confetti and fake blood."

Check out the Flaming Lips 9 p.m. Friday, Oct. 13, Majestic Theatre, Detroit. $13.50. 18 and older. Call (248) 645-6666.

Pucker up: "We were just so bizarre, it really drew people to us," said Flaming Lips frontman Wayne Coyne (right). The Lips also include Michael Ivins (left) and Steven Drozd (center).

for the Sony Playstation game Die Hard, and music for a film due out this month, Under Suspicion. He describes the latter as "going back and forth between 20th Century romantic Rachmaninov classical to full on, intense, 145-150 b.p.m. Detroit-sounding techno." At the film's premier, viewers shook his hand and told him he was crazy.

Maybe he is. It seems to work.

"When you're making music for yourself, the music is sort of a catalyst for purging something, some experience, some emotion," said BT. "The music chronicles how you feel. Whereas working on a film, you have to find something that pulls you even further into the picture. You have to complement what someone else has said emotionally."

While invested in the prospect of films, especially those embracing the music he's helped to define, BT remains rooted in his own vision.

"I've been really selective in picking the stuff I've worked on," he said. "It's really hard. Things that work on a record seem so over-the-top for film. Subtlety can be 10 times more powerful."

Catch BT on the Jensenergy tour, with Hooverphonic, Saturday, Oct. 14, St. Andrews Hall, Detroit. Call (248) 645-6666.

DINING

Legendary Mario's opens new restaurant

BY ELEANOR HEALD
SPECIAL WRITER

In a half century, Mario's (on Second Avenue near Canfield in Detroit) has served 4.5 million people and cooked enough spaghetti to stretch around the world twice. More than nine million tomatoes have been made into the famous red sauce or become a minestrone ingredient. More than 4.5 million shrimp have been served on antipasto trays.

In Troy, legendary Mario's hopes to have similar success in its newly opened, first suburban location.

Beginnings

Mario Lelli founded Mario's downtown in 1948. The Passalacqua family bought it in 1981. Today, Vince Passalacqua, third generation restaurateur, whose grandfather owned the first pizza parlor in East Detroit (now Eastpointe), is proprietor of both locations.

Mario's of Troy moved into the former Capraro's Italian Den, which closed in the spring. It sports a new interior and a new lunch menu but serves the same classic northern Italian cuisine as the downtown restaurant.

"This location operated as a restaurant since 1974," Passalacqua said. "We've brought in the Mario's name, our expertise, our hospitality and tender loving care."

Much of that expertise is in the hands of Executive Chef Eric Alderton, who held the same position at Mario's downtown for six years. In saying, "The Mario's style is not about greet 'em, seat 'em, and get 'em out," he gives you the clue that if you reserve a table, don't be in a hurry.

Take time to enjoy

Expect to take, on average, two hours to enjoy a Mario's dinner. At a ristorante in northern Italy, diners linger for three or four hours, savoring each course. They are not in a hurry to add another event to an evening. Eating is entertainment.

Retaining a classic ambiance, Mario's of Troy takes on the appearance of a private club with plush booths and tables for two, four, or larger groups. The reverse side of their business card reads, "We feed the whole mob." Translation: Mario's welcomes large groups.

If you order an entree, your meal begins with an antipasto tray. Don't fill up on the delicious European-style bread because your next course is a choice of minestrone or onion soup, followed by Mario's table side-served salad. A side of pasta arrives before your potato and vegetable garnished main dish.

But you can dine a la carte. Appetizers such as Crabmeat Cocktail, Caponata, Oysters Rockefeller or Casino, Calamari and Alaskan King Crab hint that you don't need to go beyond page one of the expansive menu to feast. Consider that Alaskan King Crab. You can't get shelled crab legs in a creamy sherry-cognac sauce everywhere.

Pasta

If you like pasta as an entree, try the Manicotti/Cannelloni combination, a half portion of each. Insider info: Chef Eric suggests that you tell your waitperson to put in your order as marinara sauce on the manicotti and bolognese sauce topping on the cannelloni.

Chicken Moretti is a chef's favorite. Chicken breast is sauteed with green onions, mushrooms, sherry wine, and a hint of tomato sauce. "Served on a bed of wild rice, this dish is clean and fresh – what I call the best of all worlds," he said.

All veal dishes are prepared using milk-fed Provimi veal. Veal Alitalia Bonissimo is consideration numero uno, followed by Veal Tosca and Spiadini of Veal. These and all dishes are well-described on the menu. For a longer explanation, just ask your formally dressed, experienced server.

Among beef and lamb dishes, Chef Eric recommends Pepperonata of Beef Tenderloin or Beef Stefanelli. But if you've never had Mario's famous Zip Sauce, then Broiled Filet Mignon is the way to go. Three cuts from petite to extra are available. With Zip Sauce, it's outstanding.

For seafood, baked-to-perfection English Dover Sole is not found on many menus. Served table side with Almondine butter, it is elegant.

Romantic evening

Out for a romantic evening, there's nothing more classic than Chateaubriand for Two, complete dinner at $50, a dining bargain. Keep the romance going by ordering one of the table side prepared flaming desserts.

And if you missed the flag under "On the side," I repeat, prices at Mario's of Troy are 20 percent less than Mario's downtown.

"We're trying to make new friends in the suburbs," Passalacqua said. "We're here for the long term. I want everyone to learn that we're about dining in the grand Italian tradition."

What part of condo do I own?

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

When I inquired as to what I was buying when I buy a condominium, I was told I was buying the space inside the walls in the residence and the garage. The walls, inside and outside, the land and the buildings aren't included in the purchase. He said something about air space.

It doesn't sound like much of a purchase. Is that true?

The sales person with whom you are talking was fairly technical with the description of the condominium unit that you are buying. In a traditional condominium, you usually are buying merely air space that you own outright, that is, typically the condominium unit is described from the surface of the drywall in, inclusive of the air space contained in the condominium unit.

You are also buying, of course, not only air space, but an undivided interest in the common elements. This would include the exterior walls, floors, foundations and the other components of the condominium project.

You are buying real property, and the assessor will assess you on the fair market value of your condominium unit – and your proportionate interest in the common elements.

Each condominium may be defined differently depending upon the condominium documents, and it is important that a buyer understand exactly what he is buying outright as opposed to what areas that he is going to be owning in common with the other co-owners of the condominium project.

Robert M. Meisner is an Oakland County area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation. You are invited to submit topics that you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Going away?

Professionals will help you get ready

BY NORMAN PRADY
SPECIAL WRITER

You've sold the house and now you want to sell the stuff that's in it. Quick, name three things you shouldn't do when you hold your moving sales.

One, no matter how much you loved Grandma, don't price her maple veneer night stand at a half million dollars.

Two, don't price anything too high or two low.

Three, don't have a snowstorm.

Professional sellers say that you can lose money with low prices, you can lose sales with high prices, and you can lose the flow of customers if the weather is bad.

"Disappointment," said Haig Jevahirian. After all, you've sold the house, you've sent People magazine your change of address and the moving van is coming the day after tomorrow. "What are you to do now?"

Well, whether you call it moving sale, estate sale, garage sale or yard sale, maybe the call you needed in the first place was to someone such as Jevahirian. He's the manager of Re-Sell-It Estate Sales in Farmington. His company is one of a number in the area which will have your moving sale for you.

What we can do

"We can do two things," he said. "On-site estate sales in which we organize all their things in their own home. We sell over two days, generally a Friday and Saturday.

"Or lesser quantities of merchandise can be consigned to our showroom." That also could include, he said, "better furniture" that didn't sell at the house.

"We clean up and clean out," Jevahirian said, explaining that there's more to having a moving sale than just having a sale and moving.

"After the sale, any items that would be donated would be expedited. Any trash that needed to be carried away would be carried away. We clean up the house," he said, leaving it broom-clean as required by the home-sale contract.

Jevahirian's fees for these additional services "vary according to what has to be done and the size of the house." He said that his company's commission of 25 percent on sales is about average in his business.

For the sale, he said, "We need approximately 10 days lead time to advertise, prepare the merchandise, price everything" and plan staff for two days.

If you'll feel better about Grandma's night stand by not selling it, you out to get it out of the house, Jevahirian said. And get yourself out of the house. Even leave town, if that's where you're headed. "We can manage the entire thing," he said, even if you're already on the packet boat to Anchorage.

Okay, so Grandma's night stand is going into the sale. What do you want for it? "Most people don't know value," Jevahirian said. "They tend to try to sell something for two much or give it away. We know what the market will bear. Much of the sales that occur are negotiated and you have to know where you stand in order to negotiate."

Don't interfere

At Lilly M & Co. in Southfield, Irving Meisner said his wife's company doesn't want you to be home when it's selling your stuff. "That's the interference we don't want. It gets very touchy." It's an emotional time, Meisner said, considering all the changes which come with selling the house and moving.

He also thinks it's a mistake for you to try to sell things yourself. Homeowners "don't have the knowledge" of prices and the market, "they don't have the tact for dealing with the consumer, and they're so tied in with what they own it's hard" to be objective.

Meisner said that home sellers should choose a reselling company based on its experience. "We get most jobs through recommendations."

Ruthann Helmer of Braun & Helmer Auction Service wants to set up the sale to take place "a day or two before they have to move out."

Helmer said that her company, headquartered in Ann Arbor, knows that everything at this time is an emotional challenge for the owner." Especially trying to decide, in a do-it-yourself sale, which things are treasures and which are trash.

"There are a lot of family feelings. But auctioneers can do it in a day."

On the other hand, Susan Shacket of Birmingham set up a little moving-sale training program for herself.

Planning to move next summer, she recently helped her California-bound next door neighbor run the house sale there.

When its her own turn, Shacket said, "I'm going to move out what I want and take it with me.

"A lot of other things, like my daughters' Formica bedroom sets, the kitchen table and chairs and stools will stay. Then I'll have a big sale and let people come in and buy what they want.

They know prices

"I go to a fair amount of estate sales, so I know about prices. If you want to sell your merchandise and not have to follow it, and make a fair amount of money, you have to make the prices cheap enough and appealing enough that people will want to buy it."

When Shacket goes to a moving sale, she sometimes asks the owner to call her if a certain item is left over. "It may not be overpriced but it might be more than I would pay at the time.

"And it's nice to tell the seller what a treasure something is and they'll sometimes make you a better deal because it's going to a good home. You know, like the puppy they can't take with them."

It's not a puppy Russell Harris can't take with him, but 90 suits, 100 jackets, 300 shirts, scores of cuff links and a gold-inlaid French desk he said is worth $25,000 which he's willing to share for a fraction of that claimed value. The desk presumably once had a role in his Oakland County family's steel and oil business.

Beware if your broker is online

MORTGAGE BITS

TIM 'TIMBO' PHILLIPS

Some homebuyers may find a competitive mortgage interest rate on the Internet, but many of these tech-savvy shoppers will miss the hidden costs.

Many Internet mortgage lenders impose additional up-front fees to compensate for their advertised low rates. Some virtual mortgage lenders require borrowers to meet certain credit criteria and down payment requirements to get the advertised rates. Others mandate that borrowers adhere to strict timelines or incur higher rates and fees.

Even if a borrower successfully overcomes these hurdles, he still has to contend with unknown "what-ifs". As a full-time mortgage broker, I have yet to see two identical home loans. All are different, and most have unique challenges that have required my personal intervention. People who borrow online should make sure they have a "virtual loan officer" who will help them with unforeseen issues.

Airplanes have been able to take-off and land themselves for decades. So why do commercial air carriers still employ pilots? The answer: There are some important aspects of life that people are not willing to trust solely to technology. People want contingency plans in case technology fails. This holds true whether it is flying or making huge financial decisions.

Since there are almost as many moving parts in the mortgage approval process as there are in an airplane (I'm in a position to discuss both) borrowers should carefully weigh the benefit of an online mortgage with the opportunity cost of not having an expert readily available. The old adage, "You get that for which you pay," holds true in mortgage lending, too.

Would you have a "discount" heart surgeon operate on a family member?

If not, you understand the value of having a professional loan officer assist you in finding the right mortgage at the right price. Shop online if you must, but let the buyer beware: You may find yourself needy and alone.

Tim "Timbo" Phillips is a loan officer for Commonwealth National Mortgage Corp. in Livonia. You may contact him at timbo@ tir. com, or at (734) 591-5900 for information about upcoming free homebuyer seminars, or with questions about residential or commercial mortgages. Homebuyers should always consult a professional for guidance specific to their situation.

Playground safety still a real problem

Recent reports indicate that playground safety continues to be a very real problem across the nation. Homeowner and community associations need to pay particular attention to these findings and other studies that support the same conclusions.

Community Associations Press (CAP), the publishing division of the Community Associations Institute (CAI), recently reissued a classic work by Donna Thompson and others entitled, "Playgrounds for Young Children". This book outlines the nature of the problem and offers some very real solutions. The safety checklists in this book make finding the hidden dangers in a playground quick and easy. Also included is detailed information on maintaining a safe playground.

"When children are on the playground, their safety should be the last thing a parent has to worry about," said Barbara Byrd Keenan, president of CAI.

"In 'Playgrounds for Young Children', parents and community managers alike will find the tools and resources to ensure that these environments are both safe and enjoyable for all. A little peace of mind goes a long way when children are involved," she said.

"Playgrounds for Young Children" (250 pages) is available for $40 by calling (703) 548-8600, or via CAI's Web site at www.caionline.org. CAI members receive a 40-percent discount.

Get answers to 100 questions on buying a new home - for free

Buying a home is a big investment. Not only is it a financial asset, but it also is the place where you and your family will live and grow.

Finding and purchasing the right home for your family's needs can be stressful. There are so many questions to ask, where do you start?

Get all the answers you need from 100 Questions and Answers About Buying a New Home from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. It takes you step-by-step through the home-buying process.

Learn how to calculate how much home you can afford, which loan programs are available to help and what other costs, such as insurance and property taxes, you need to be aware of.

Use its Home Scorecard to keep track of the houses you've seen and the condition that they were in. Once youve found a house you're interested in, find out about home inspection, making an offer and what is expected at closing.

■ Get all the answers you need from 100 Questions and Answers About Buying a New Home from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. It takes you step-by-step through the home-buying process.

The first step in buying a new home is determining your housing needs and how much you can afford.

You're ready to buy a house when you have a steady source of income, a good record of paying your bills, money saved for a down payment and the ability to pay a mortgage, utilities and upkeep every month.

When figuring how much you can afford, keep in mind that the Federal Housing Administration recommends that your monthly housing costs (minus utilities) should equal no more than 29 percent of your gross (before taxes) income.

Use the guide's handy quick calculation chart to determine how much you can afford.

The next step is to decide how much house you need. Make a list of priorities and establish a set of minimum requirements your new home should have.

Then, use your friends and family to find a real estate agent. Find one who listens well and understands your needs. Most importantly, choose an agent you feel comfortable with.

But remember, unless you've hired a buyer's agent to represent you, the real estate agent works for the seller and has the seller's best interests at heart.

There are three easy ways to get your free copy of 100 Questions and Answers about Buying a New Home.

■ Call toll-free (888) 878-3256 weekdays 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. EDT and ask for the Item 574G.

■ Send your name and address to Federal Consumer Information Center, Dept. 574G, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Try these to avoid home inspection blues

Home buying is a lesson in delayed gratification. But eventually, you get the payoff you've been waiting for... moving day. It's hard to believe you're really there.

Just remember that sooner or later, some flaw in your dream home will bring you back to earth. It's inevitable.

"New homeowners should keep minor problems in perspective. Every home has them," says Richard Roll, president of American Homeowners Association (AHA).

"The way to avoid larger problems is to pick a qualified home inspector and really understand the inspection report, before you go to closing."

Maybe a kitchen circuit breaker trips every time you run an appliance, or a balky door won't close. Why did you miss the problem?

■ 'New homeowners should keep minor problems in perspective. Every home has them.'

Richard Roll,
president,
American Homeowners Association

Home inspections are such a routine part of the closing process these days it's easy to assume that any inspector will do. Don't take your home inspector's qualifications for granted.

The home inspector is your last line of defense between you and problems that could bust your budget to repair.

Dig a little deeper rather than accept a referral with no questions asked from your real estate agent. How long have they been in business? Ask for customer references and call them.

Call the Better Business Bureau, (248) 644-9100, just to make sure there are no complaints.

Before you hire someone, ask to see a sample copy of the inspection report. Look for a narrative description that fully explains each problem – a check-off box with good, fair and poor isn't good enough.

Every inspection should cover all the major systems at a minimum, including plumbing, heating, and cooling; the structural conditions, including the roof; and the electrical system.

When you receive the report, make sure you actually read it. If you don't understand something, get your inspector to explain it. Don't let unanswered questions come back to haunt you on moving day.

What if a problem rears its ugly head before closing?

Your response really depends on the nature and severity of the problem. For example, do you want to engender bad feelings with your seller by complaining about a torn screen in a window?

What if you discover something after moving in that the seller failed to disclose and your inspector missed? Good inspectors make mistakes. And good inspectors encourage customers to call them whenever problems surface.

That's why every inspector should have errors and omissions insurance.

For more information on any aspect of buying a home, go to www.realhome.com, the Web site for American Homeowners Association.

Guarding your home from outside threats

Imagine the kind of damage that a violent lightning storm would have on your home and its electrical equipment. Robert and Joanne Zipparo experienced this terror firsthand when they found themselves in the midst of a violent thunderstorm one night, when severe lightning hit their region. Such weather is not unusual for their neighborhood, which is why they installed surge protection throughout their home. Surely enough, "Lightning struck our block with a vengeance," says Robert Zipparo.

All five houses on the Zipparo's block were struck by lightning. "I know ours was struck because we had a circuit breaker trip," says Joanne. But of all the homes, the Zipparo's was the only one that did not suffer damage. Neighbors told of high repair or replacement costs of fried computers, telephones, alarm systems, appliances and other electronics. In contrast, the Zipparo's equipment survived.

What the Zipparos had on their side was surge protection. One feature of their protection shields a home's electrical panel – the main entry point for electricity-from damaging high-voltage surges.

Savvy homeowners should be aware that, aside from a home's electrical panel, there are many paths through which electricity enters a home. Signal lines, such as TV cable lines, telephone lines, and modem connections for computers, are gateways for dangerous surges to travel through. Panamax, the manufacturer of the Zipparo's surge protection, features signal protection in their products. The combination of main electrical service entrance protection and signal line protection is critical.

"It's vital to protect every energy pathway in your home," warns Panamax's president, Henry Moody. "It's not just lightning that can harm your home; about 40 percent of all potential voltage surge dangers come from outside sources, which include accidents and downed power lines." When these surges come into your home via energy pathways, they can wipe out expensive appliances and electrical gear.

One installer recalls the harm that surges emanating from outside a home can cause to home equipment. A customer called him after the customer's house had experienced a power surge. Most of the customer's home office and home entertainment devices had blown out as a result of the surge.

"When I got there I realized that calling it a 'surge' was an understatement," says the installer. "What had happened was a power company employee was working on an underground transformer when a wrench fell out of his pocket and into a transformer," he recalls.

This mistake sent tens of thousands of surge volts into neighboring homes, rendering many appliances useless.

Home equity loan can be an alternative

With the recent interest rate increases – 2 percentage points since June 1999 – the national average of credit debt has reached an alarming $10,000 per household.

Financial experts suggest reviewing your credit card statements and looking into consolidating increasing debt before it's too late. The average interest rate on a standard variable-rate credit card is the highest ever at 17.08 percent, according to Bank Rate Monitor. Still, many cardholders are unaware of the rising rates and the additional funds it is costing them. "People are paying hundreds of dollars in interest rate charges today," said Don Mather, senior vice president, Champion Mortgage. "Actually, the first $142 of a consumer's monthly payment on an unpaid balance of $10,000 (with an interest rate of 17.1 percent) is totally consumed by credit interest charges."

With hopes to control credit card spending and consolidate rising debt, Mather finds that many people are in a position to explore home refinancing or apply for a home equity loan to relieve credit card debt and to finance other needed expenditures. Currently, many are already taking advantage of home equity loans, which they are using to help pay off credit card bills, as well as lower their monthly payments and interest rates.

"The average credit card interest rate is 10 percent higher than the average home equity loan's rate," said Mather. "Home equity loans help pay off high credit card bills with substantially lower monthly payments as well. Home equity loans can also assist many with funding home improvements, college tuition and weddings." According to Mather, many people fall into debt due to unusual circumstances, such as sudden medical bills or the recent rising interest rates, while their money management skills are otherwise excellent.

Refinancing or using a home equity loan is a worthwhile option for homeowners to consider when confronted with such situations.

"Whether or not they are interested in pursuing refinancing or a home equity loan, homeowners should be well aware of their financial situations and credit card interest rates before the FED meets again," recommends Mather.
