Cheer Club

The holiday season is here - and so is the Plymouth-Canton Observer Cheer Club.

Opening the Cheer Club to new and returning "members" is one of our favorite holiday traditions. Please join us by bringing donations of new toys and canned or boxed food to our office at 794 S. Main Street in Plymouth during business hours.

The items will be collected until Friday, Dec. 15 when we turn them over to the good folks at Salvation Army. They'll distribute the items to needy people in Plymouth, Canton and Northville.

The idea is to make the holidays special for everybody, not just the lucky familes where people have plenty to spend.

So if you're out doing your Christmas shopping and have a few minutes to look for another toy - or maybe a gift of warm clothing - your thoughtfulness will be appreciated.

When you bring your donations by our office, we'll ask you to leave your name and city/township of residence. That's because we like to print donor's names in the paper, while the Cheer Club drive is on. But you can be anonymous donor if you prefer.

Each year, we've recorded around 200 donors to the Cheer Club from Plymouth and Canton.

Happy Holidays! Please keep our Cheer Club in mind.

Fire marshal is a familiar face

Canton Township promoted Fire Inspector Frank Barrett to fire marshal Tuesday. The 15-year fire department employee called the move 'the pinnacle of my career." Barrett replaces Dave Champagne.

Canton's newest fire marshal said he's had his eye on the top fire prevention job since starting as a fire cadet 15 years ago.

Fire Inspector Frank Barrett, 42, was named fire marshal Tuesday following a series of tests and interviews. He will be in charge of fire prevention programs as well as fire code enforcement.

He will earn a base salary of $56,328 as fire marshal. He earned a base salary of $53,091 as an inspector.

"This is the pinnacle of my career," Barrett said. "This is a goal I've been shooting for since I started with the department."

Continuing fire prevention programs with school children and expanding them to include more adults are among his goals.

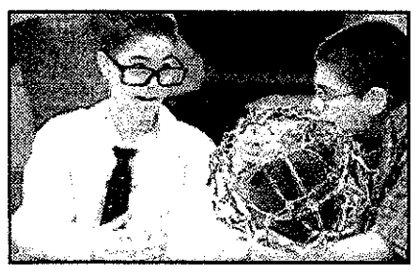

'The fire safety house is a mainstay of our fire prevention programs. Some new programs I'm looking at would reach out to adult senior populations as well."

The fire safety house is a mobile house replica used to educate children about preventing fires within the home and about how to exit homes that are on fire.

"I am looking forward to being in a position where I can bring fire prevention to the forefront in the community,"

Renaissance Fair a hit with seventh-graders, school staff

Lords and ladies. Scoundrels and damsels. Villains and wenches.

The seventh-grade students at Discovery Middle School were transformed into these, and more characters from the middle ages as the social studies teachers held their first Renaissance Fair Nov. 16.

"This is a brand new curriculum for us this year," said Ted Younglas, a social studies teacher who spearheaded the idea.

"Each student had to pick topic (to research), whether it was artists, arms and armor or food," he explained. "Games and entertainment was another popular (topic)."

"The kids had a lot of fun researching, and I think they learned a lot about the time period," added Younglas, who is in his third year teaching. "We also encouraged the kids to 'dress the part' of the characters they chose.

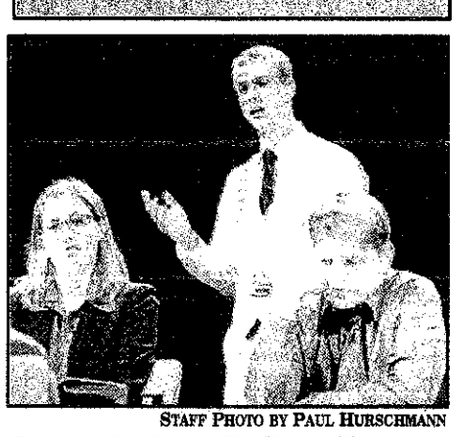

"We challenged the students and they stood up to the challenge."

He said the staff sat down afterwards and evaluated the day's activities and, for the most part, liked what they had seen. They will make a few changes for next year but they hope to make the Renaissance Fair an annual Discovery tradition.

Theater group narrows architect search to two

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER

There are no seats, no curtains, no stage and no dressing rooms.

But for about two dozen township residents and arts supporters in the Plymouth-Canton community, the performing arts center planned for Canton's Cherry Hill Village is slowly taking shape.

The committee overseeing the project will have an architect on board for a two-day design charette in mid-January. A design subcommittee Monday narrowed the choices to two firms – Architects Design Group of Ann Arbor and U.R.S. of Farmington Hills.

"We interviewed the candidates today. We still have to do some site visits and check references before we come back with a recommendation," said Canton Resource Development Director Mike Ager, who is chairing the subcommittee.

Ager expects a decision by mid-December.

U.R.S. is a large firm noted for designing public school bond projects in Plymouth-Canton, Redford, Farmington and other area communities. Architects Design Group is a smaller firm, Ager said.

"The relationship that you have with the architect is as important as anything in building a successful project," added Tom Yack.

The Canton supervisor is heading up the core committee responsible for moving the planned 400-seat, $5.5 million center from concept to reality. Yack has been a proponent of a regional performing arts center for several years. In fact, the township scaled back a plan to build a larger theater of about 1,200 seats on Plymouth-Canton Community Schools property several years ago.

The township will kick in $2 million towards construction and own the building and site. A non-profit "partnership for the arts" will be the admin-

Van Buren planning MEAP test changes

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

Students taking the Michigan Educational Assessment Program test will face additional challenges over the next few years under new state guidelines for the standardized test.

Van Buren school board members reviewed the latest guidelines at the board's regular meeting Monday. Test subjects for the MEAP will be expanded to include English language arts, an integrated test combining reading, writing and listening skills.

Raymond Gross, Van Buren director of instruction, said the district is still awaiting results from the most recent round of MEAP testing. They are expected to arrive no later than February.

"The bottom line is I'm not sure anymore when (the MEAP results are) coming."

The results, which were supposed to arrive in October, will be presented differently than results from previous years.

"The new summary reports will show by subject how many students in a graduating class tested, how many earned endorsements and how many earned Michigan merit awards," Gross said while presenting the report.

"Starting with the graduating class of 2000, the MEAP High School Test report will summarize the results for the class that just graduated, putting focus on students' level of achievement after all retesting opportunities are completed," the report stated.

"I have some questions about how meaningful that data is," Gross said. "It doesn't give you time to correct things."

Upcoming changes to the MEAP include:

- Testing seventh-graders in writing, beginning in winter 2001
- Testing fourth-graders in math with a new format, beginning in winter 2002

Burglar gets TV, tools in break-in

A television, VCR and a variety of tools were reportedly stolen from a business located at 47440 Michigan Friday, Nov. 24. Taken were a $200 electric drill and bits, a $289 soft gun case, $300 saw and blades, $150 gasoline-powered weed trimmer, $150 leaf blower, $400 gasoline-powered chainsaw, $189 electric chainsaw, $2,000 worth of tools and tool cabinet, a $50 extension cord, a $400 27-inch television and $300 VCR.

Entry was reportedly gained by prying open a rear warehouse door. The front doors were not disturbed, according to a police report.

Drunken driving

A man of undisclosed age and residence was cited for operating under the influence of liquor, second offense Saturday, Nov. 25, on Lilley south of Warren.

COP CALLS

He had a prior driving while impaired conviction from 1994.

Vehicle break-ins

Someone reportedly removed a stereo valued at $500 and compact discs valued at $200 from a 1990 Cadillac parked in the 1100 block of Stacy sometime before Friday, Nov. 24. There were no signs of forced, entry but there was roughly $25 damage to the door moldings.

Also in the 1100 block of Stacy, an automobile larceny involving a $150 car stereo and $15 ring was reported Saturday, Nov. 25. A police report did not state whether the vehicle was locked or whether there was any evidence of forced entry.

'Life' star to attend area showings

■ The Redford Theatre on Grand River at Lahser will show the movie starring Jimmy Stewart Friday and Saturday night.

Karolyn Grimes, who portrayed Zuzu Bailey in the 1946 classic film It's a Wonderful Life, will be at the historic Redford Theatre on Grand River (at Lahser) for two nights, Dec. 1 and 2, where the film will be shown.

Grimes will be on hand each night to discuss her role in the film and what it was like to be a child star in the 1940s and '50s, as well as to sign autographs.

Each night will begin at 7 p.m. with an organ overture and will be followed by the introduction of the evening's star, Karolyn Grimes. It's a Wonderful Life will be shown after a brief speech from Karolyn and a question/answer period from the audience.

There will be an intermission featuring dancing from the era, prizes, and other surprises. The cost for each ticket is $10 and may be purchased in advance by calling the Redford Theatre box office at (313) 531-4407 or (248) 258-5806.

Everyone is invited to sing Christmas Carols with Grimes after the movie. Souvenirs and autographs will be available before and after the movie in the theater lobby.

Also available will be Zuzu Bailey's It's a Wonderful Life Cookbook, co-authored by Karolyn Grimes and Franklin Dohanyos.

"I have traveled to many parts of the world, but no where have I felt more at home than in the Detroit area," she said. "The fans treat me so well and love It's a Wonderful Life so much, that it's hard to say good-bye when it's over. To be invited to a grand theater like this one is truly a thrill. I think the hard-working people in Michigan appreciate the message conveyed by Jimmy Stewart who played George Bailey in the film - That no man is a failure who has friends."

Karolyn's visit and the showing of It's a Wonderful Life are being co-sponsored by the Redford Theater and local writer Gus Mollasis, author of the book On a Wing and a Prayer.

"Karolyn is an incredible person, someone who has made a positive difference in my life," says Mollasis. "I had the great privilege of meeting and talking with Jimmy Stewart, and to finally meet Karolyn brings me even closer to It's a Wonderful Life. We have a very special event planned with an even more special woman."

For 72 years the Historic Redford Theater has been host to movies, organ concerts, special events, and more. The theater is home to the Motor City Theatre Organ Society, Inc., a nonprofit corporation dedicated to the preservation, restoration, and use of the theater pipe organ and the advancement of its music.

■ 'We're pretty proud of our record of getting people to comply with fire code without being too much of a burden.'

–Praise for Frank Barrett, from Canton Fire Chief Mike Rorabacher

he said.

Fire code enforcement is the other major part of Barrett's job.

"Enforcement is kind of a harsh word," he said. "We do (fire) inspections on a regular basis."

Fire inspections sometimes involve telling people, particularly business owners, how to make their businesses comply with fire code. Making the appropriate changes – such as installing sprinkler systems – can be costly.

"Generally we leave on good terms with (business owners)," he said. "I'm hoping to continue that."

Barrett's diplomatic attitude toward enforcement was one just one of the traits that impressed his supervisor, Fire Chief Mike Rorabacher.

"We're pretty proud of our record of getting people to comply with fire code without being too much of a burden," Rorabacher said,

Educating people about why they should comply with fire code rather than write tickets is the main objective, he added.

"Frank does an excellent job of getting that point across," Rorabacher said. "He gets along with everybody."

His knowledge of fire prevention was another plus.

"(Barrett's) technically very astute. He understands the code."

Barrett has lived in Westland since 1989. He is married to Julie and is father to Jessica, 11, and Michael, 9. He is a 1977 graduate of Plymouth Canton.

He started as a fire cadet in 1985 and was a firefighter and emergency medical technician from 1987-1997. He has worked in fire prevention for three years.

In addition, Barrett holds a diploma from the National Fire Academy and several fire prevention certificates.

Greg Sprys-Tellner was the department's only other internal candidate for the fire marshal job. Both were deemed equally qualified for the job by Career Directions of Ann Arbor, which professionally evaluates candidates for fire and police jobs.

The township paid the firm $5,000 to perform the evaluations, which included oral testing, personal interviews and personality profile testing. Neither candidate had to take a written test because both were deemed technically qualified for the job.

Barrett was ultimately chosen because he had more seniority than Sprys-Tellner, according to Rorabacher. Barrett has been with the department 15 years and Sprys-Tellner for 12 years.

The fire marshal position has been vacant since August, when Dave Champagne stepped down and took another position with the department. He had been in the position since former Fire Marshal Art Winkel retired in 1997.

Canton Little Theater renamed for history teacher

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER
sbuck@oe.homecomm.net

The cannon blast was a fitting close to the ceremony rededicating the Canton Little Theater Tuesday in honor of the late Allen DuBois, a flamboyant American History teacher who died from cancer two years ago at age 53.

When DuBois taught about the Civil War, he would bring a small cannon into his classroom and shoot it.

DuBois, who taught at Canton High School, captured his students' attention with his animated delivery through which he displayed colorful, vivid and dramatic presentations for 30 years.

People noticed Dubois, who stood out even in his appearance as a man who wore a suit and tie, with cowboy boots underneath that clicked down the hall.

"His was a life well lived," said Canton High School Principal Pat Patton.

Steve Bernacki, a senior at Canton High School and a Dubois student in 1997-98 offered his memories. "He reviewed what we learned the year before in three weeks and made a lot more sense of it," Bernacki said. "He brought history to life."

Dubois was a leader in positive reinforcement with incentives, Bernacki said. If students had no more than three absences they did not have to take the final exam. "This was such a great deal that I convinced my family to arrange our ski vacation around fourth hour so I wouldn't have to take the final," Bernacki said.

Eric Cunningham, Dubois' godson and a Plymouth Canton district graduate who also worked as a substitute teacher in his class, spoke of Dubois' dedication. It was common for him to work through lunch and breaks.

Tribute: A banner hangs outside the "Little Theater," now named the "Allen DuBois Little Theater," at Plymouth Canton High School Tuesday evening.

"He would yell, scream and jump up and down," Cunningham said. "As a result of this, students remembered history. Long after their high school days, students remembered his rantings and ravings. He would warn me that I need to be careful where I used his name."

The audience laughed.

Arlene Paquette, a Canton High School social studies teacher, said Dubois asked her to be on his educational team. "What did I know?" she joked.

Underneath the dramatics, Paquette saw a hardworking and organized man who also cared about his teachers' union. "His passion for history, for politics and for education always showed through," Paquette said. "He was also an emotional softy. He was empathic and sympathetic for fellow staff and students."

He was irreverent, she added. He reported on union business in a publication called, "The Canton Crapper."

"He reported on union business and made known his personal view of what was going on," she said.

Jerry Morris, a retired Canton High School administrator, called Dubois an historian and storyteller, who looked for truth and connections to the past as stories are told and renewed. "He challenged students to not only answer the questions but to also question the answers," Morris said.

Dubois' wife, Betty, expressed her gratitude after remarks as she looked out onto the family and friends in attendance as the ceremony ended.

"It's a deep honor," she said.

■ Testing fourth- and seventh-graders in "English language arts" beginning in winter 2003. This will combine reading, writing and listening skills.

Another change is that districts could lose state aid dollars if at least 80 percent of students do not take the test. That percentage increases to 85 percent the second year, and 90 percent the third year. Districts not meeting these percentages will be "unaccredited."

In addition, at least 75 percent or more of students meeting or exceeding state standards in each MEAP area receive "exemplary" status. This is followed suit by "high," 50 percent or more; "moderate," 25 percent or more and "low," less than 25 percent.

Under old criteria, if at least 66 percent of students scored satisfactory in all four subject areas, the testing group received "summary" accreditation.

Board treasurer Martha Toth said she was concerned about the MEAP guidelines.

"It sure sounds like an unfunded mandate to me," Toth said. "I smell another (Dick) Headlee lawsuit coming here," she added, referring to the class-action lawsuit involving special education funding.

Board trustee Susan Ward Callahan said that she feared the MEAP test discourages independent thinking.

"We're going to be held responsible for creating robots who all think the same way," Ward Callahan said.

"I don't think the intention is to turn out robots," Gross said.

Toth said teachers, who must align curriculum with the MEAP, also suffer.

"The MEAP is removing the spontaneity and joy for teachers," she said. "And that's crazy."

Q&A

Q: Who was Julia A. Davis Moore?

A: Julia Moore, known as the "Sweet Singer of Michigan," was born in a log cabin at Plainfield, Mich. on Dec. 1, 1847. A writer of homely verse and ballads, Moore enjoyed remarkable popularity and gave many public readings before realizing that her public appearances were occasions for laughter and ridicule. Her poems were said to be "so bad, her subjects so morbid and her naivete so genuine" that they were actually gems of humorous genius. At her final public appearance she told her audience: "You people paid 50 cents to see a fool, but I got paid $50 to look at a house full of fools." Moore died on June 17, 1920 near Manton, Mich.

■ Pearl Harbor Day Anniversary! At 7:55 a.m. Dec. 7, 1941, "a date that will live in infamy," nearly 200 Japanese aircraft attacked Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Pearl Harbor was long considered the U.S. "Gibralter of the Pacific." The raid, which lasted little more than an hour, left 3,000 dead. Nearly the entire U.S. Pacific Fleet was at anchor there, and few ships escaped damage. Several were sunk or disabled, while 200 U.S. aircraft on the ground were destroyed. The attack on Pearl Harbor brought about the immediate U.S. entry into World War II. A declaration of war was requested by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and approved by Congress on Dec. 8, 1941.

Grief seminar in Canton

The L.J. Griffin Funeral Home in Canton will hold a grief seminar 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 6.

The program, at the Canton Chapel on Ford Road, is especially designed to help individuals cope during the holiday period with the recent loss of a friend or family member. Cathy Clough, director of New Hope Center for Grief Support, will lead the seminar.

Topics include: Why holiday planning is important; ways others have handled the holidays; decorating and other traditions; making the holidays special for children when you don't feel like celebrating.

For information call the funeral home, (734) 981-1700.

SPOTLIGHT ON YOUR PET
Veterinary Notes
by Ellzabeth Routson, D.V.M.

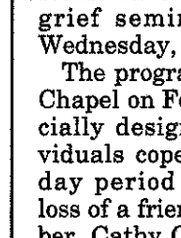

KEEP PETS SAFE DURING THE HOLIDAYS

While Individuals are reminded of the dangers of drinking and driving during the holiday season, pet owners need to know the dangers facing their furry friends at this time of year. Holly and mistletoe plants are poisonous if eaten, and the poinsettia's sap and leaves can cause severe stomach pains. If you use preservatives, sugar, or aspirin in your Christmas tree stand's water, limit your pet's access - these things can also cause gastric distress. Ingesting sharp pine needles can puncture an animal's intestines. Hang any sharp or breakable tree ornaments out of your pet's reach. Stringy tinsel and ribbons can be extremely dangerous if ingested, as they can wrap around the intestines or accumulate in the stomach.

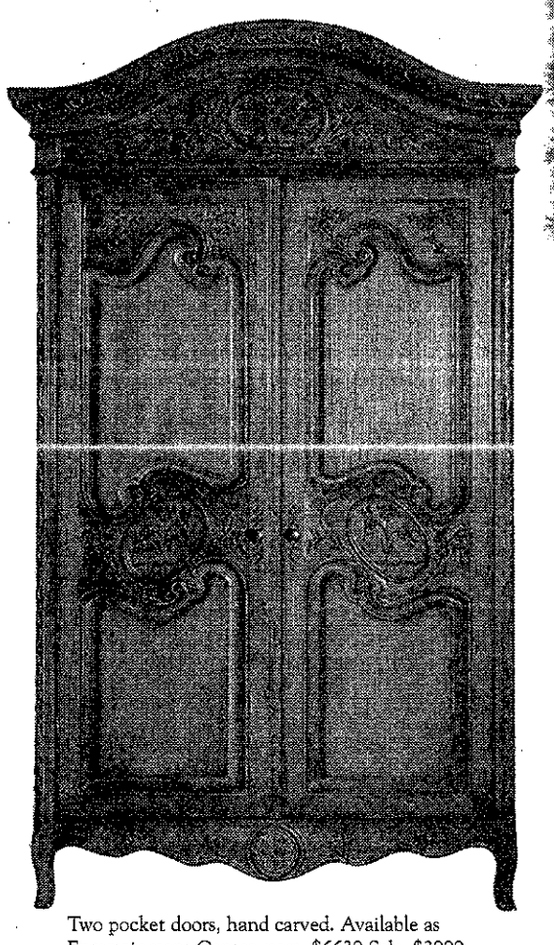

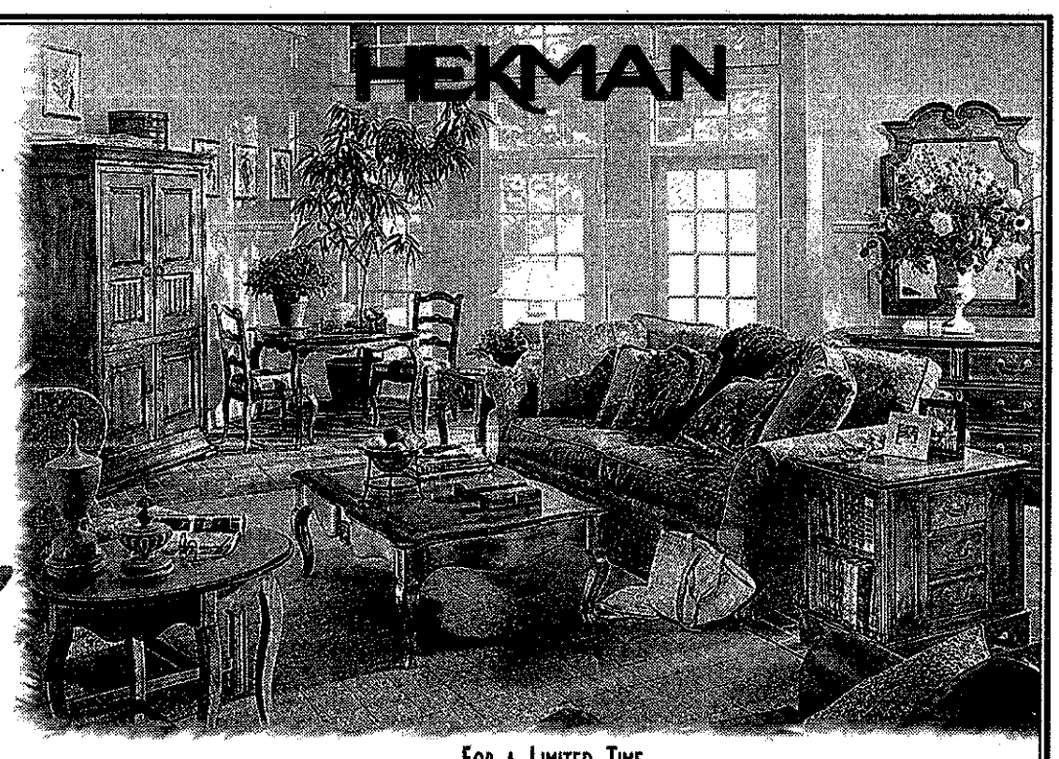

A few extra precautions can prevent tragic accidents. To learn more about pet care, please contact PARKWAY VETERINARY CLINIC. Dr. Neualt or myself, or one of our other doctors can describe routine animal care. When your pet is ill, we will carefully examine the animal and thoroughly explain any recommended treatments. Visit either of our two locations at 41395 Wilcox Rd. in Plymouth, tel. 734-453-2577, or 5750 Lilley Rd. in Canton, tel. 734-981-4400. We're open six days a week for your convenience.

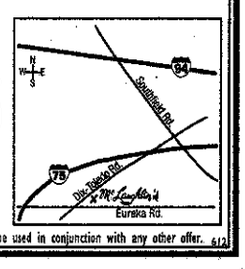

P.S. To help prevent accidents, secure your Christmas tree by anchoring it to the wall with cord or rope.

istrator responsible for use and programming.

The Cherry Hill site, with its new-urban mix of housing and a "town square," seemed like a good fit for the theater, Yack said at the time. And Cherry Hill developers have pledged some $2 million towards construction costs.

The architect and general contractor will be required to keep the building exterior in keeping with the overall tone of the village, Yack said.

The township received a $300,000 state grant for the project in September.

The project's timeline, budget and a set of "Development Guiding Principals" took up most of the discussion at Monday's meeting.

The January charette – where committee members and others will work with the architect to design the theater from the ground up – was one focus. A search for funding was another.

Yack said the committee will need to identify private donors and raise about $1.3 million before construction can begin, likely in early- or mid-2002. Attorney Bryan Amann will head up the fund-raising effort.

A communications subcommittee is designing a brochure to be used for the campaign. "We need something to show people so they can catch the same excitement we have," Yack said.

Area arts leaders envision the center as the home for Canton Project Arts, the Plymouth Theater Guild and other organizations. The center will also focus on education, with programming and space devoted to area students.

The Plymouth Symphony, which originally showed an interest in the larger auditorium, will be able to use the theater for chamber concerts or other, smaller productions.

Holiday concert is Sunday

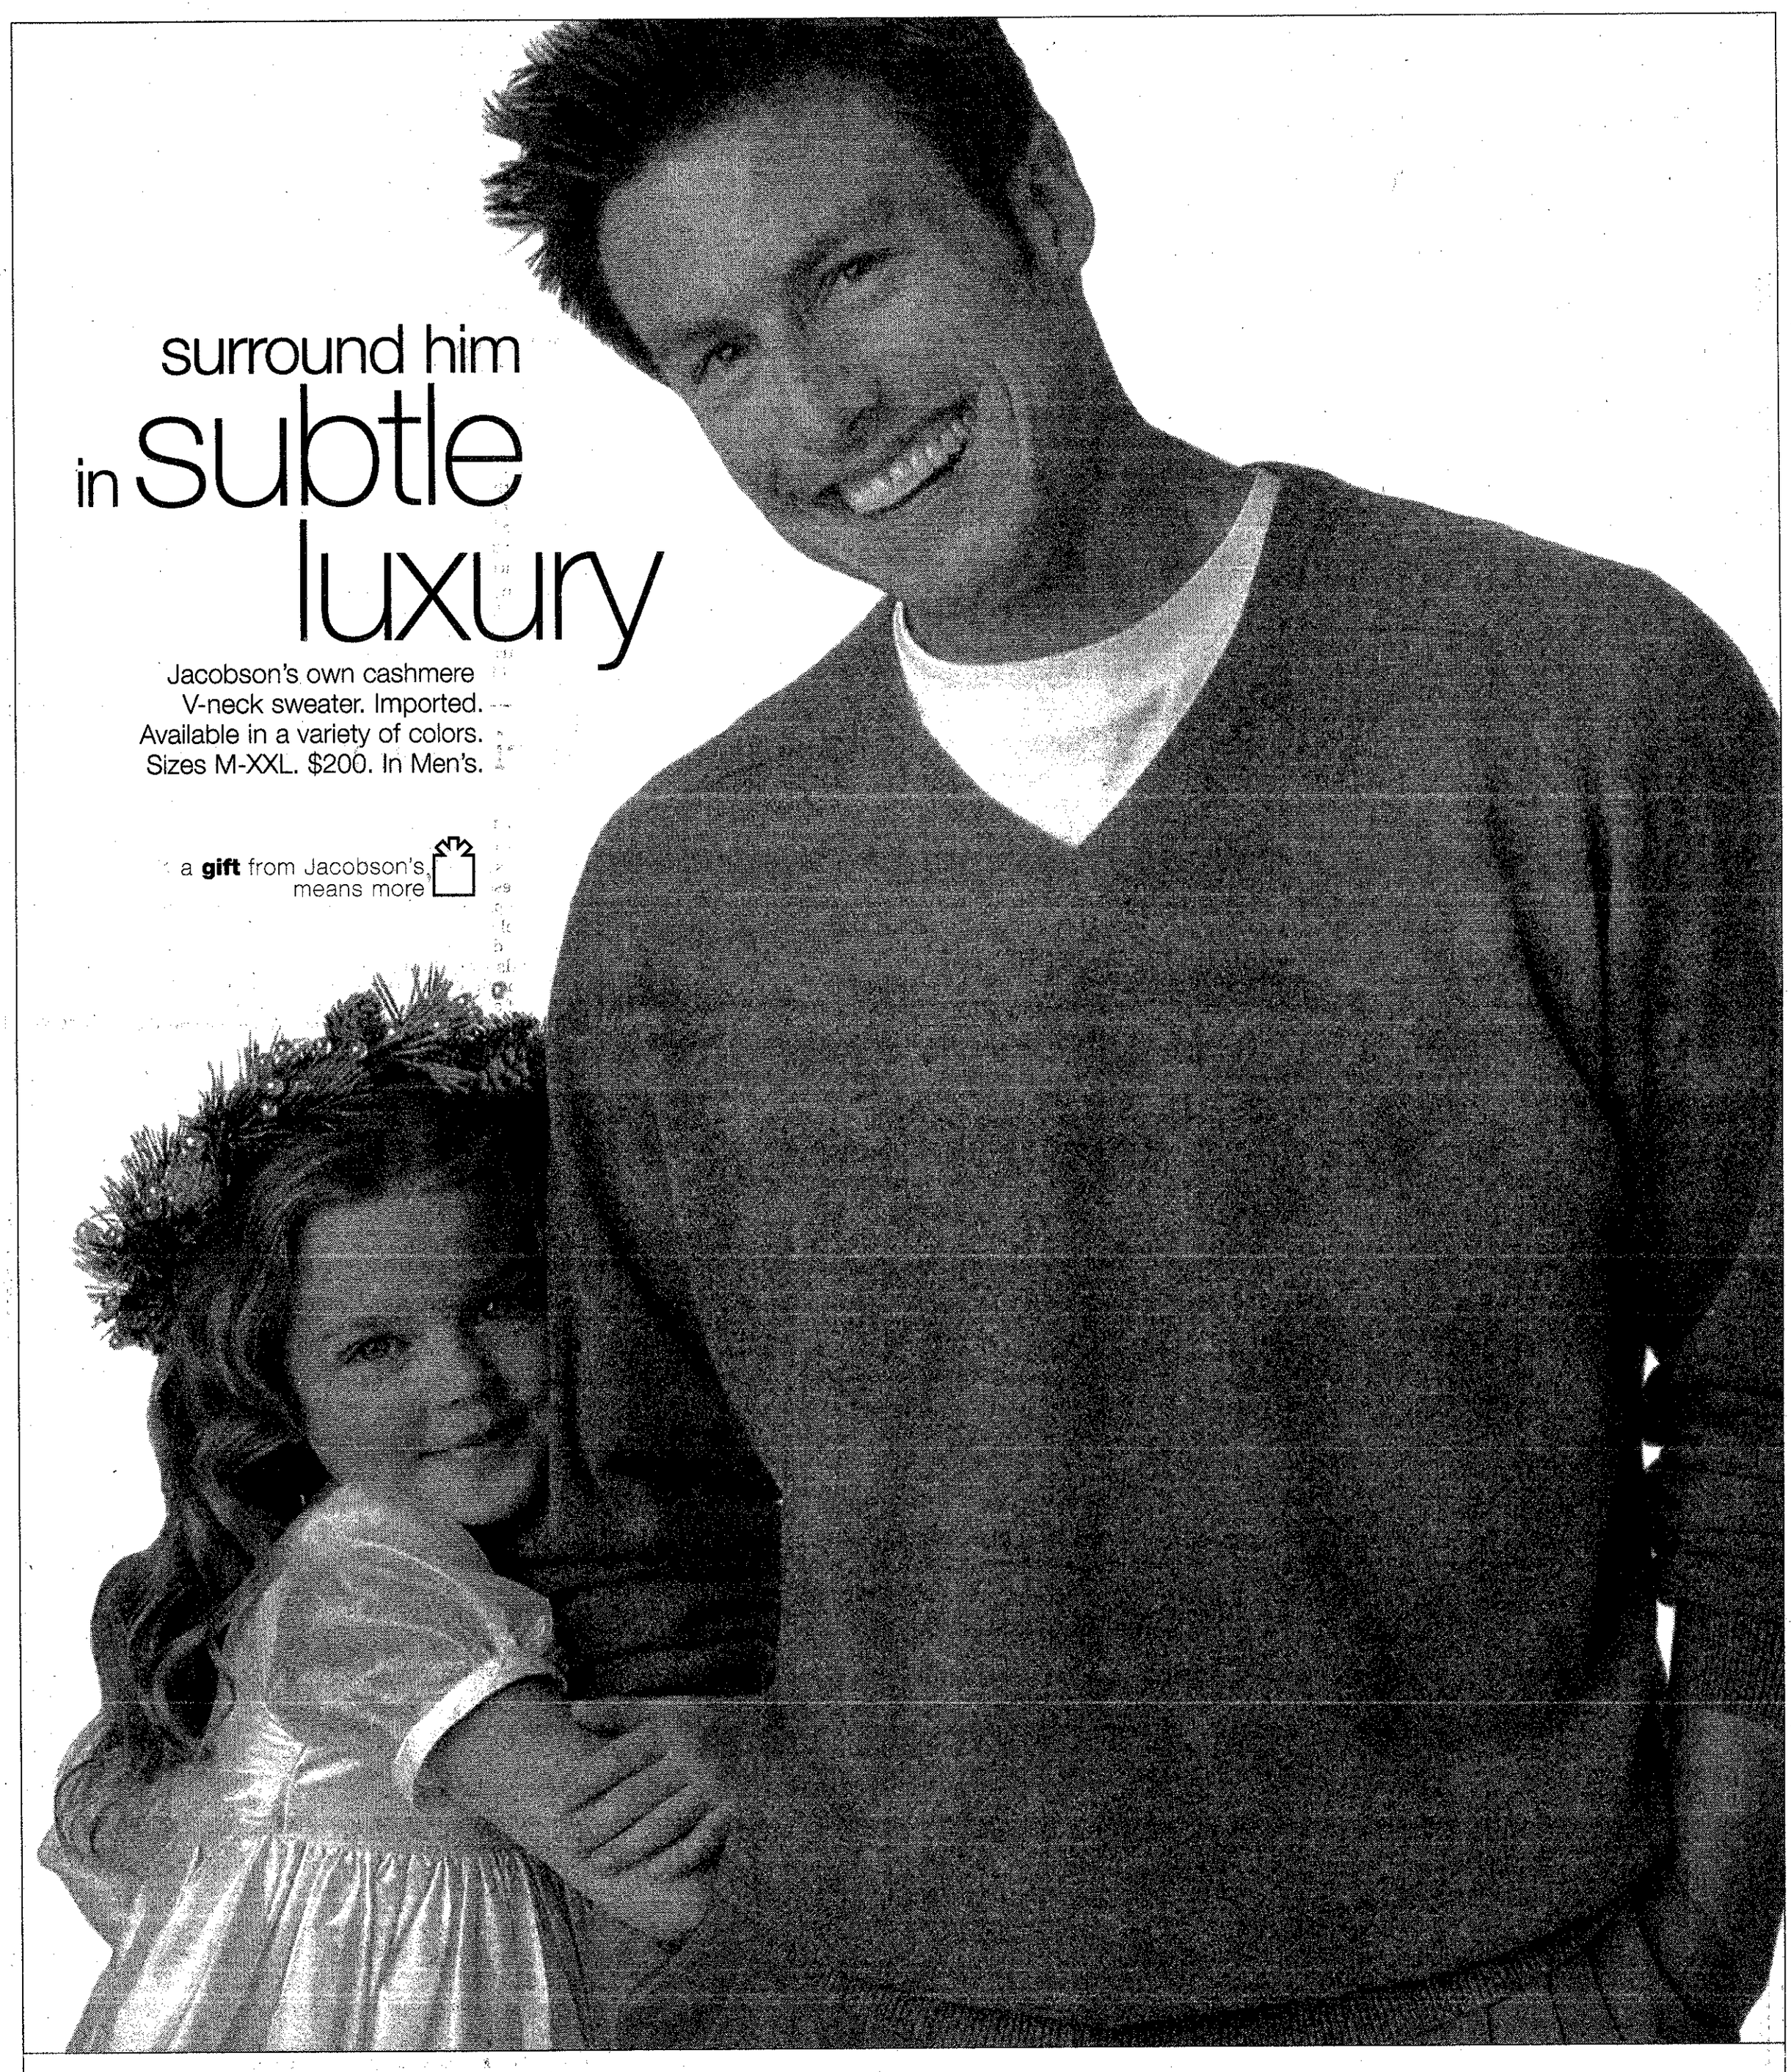

Catholic Central High School will host its annual Christmas Concert on Sunday, Dec. 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the school gym.

The concert will feature the Catholic Central Concert Symphony, Jazz Band and a performance by elementary trumpet players.

The guest trumpet players will perform parts from "Hark the Herald Trumpets Swing," and the Catholic Central Symphony Band will accompany.

The them of the concert is "Through the Eyes of a Child." An afterglow provided by the Mother's Club will be held after the performance. Admission is free. For information, call (313) 534-1310.

Meanwhile, Catholic Central students have collected 5,500 cans and $300 in an annual canned food drive. The food and money were donated to the St. Christine Soup Kitchen.

Eloise: This painting of Eloise Dickerson and her dog is more than 100 years old.

Eloise painting returns to Westland site

Eloise is coming home.

The painting of Eloise Dickerson – the 4-year-old, cherubic-faced child for whom the old Wayne County Eloise Complex was named – will be returned to its old home in Westland during a ceremony at the Kay Beard Building next month.

The occasion will be the annual Christmas dinner for Wayne County General Hospital retirees, set for 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 12.

A special guest will be Gladys Hamilton, 95, last surviving member of the family of Henry Ruff. Ruff, who died in 1949, was a farmer and real estate investor who owned land near Eloise.

Tickets for the buffet dinner are $10 each. Reservations are due Tuesday, Dec. 5. Call Patti Kukula at (313) 224-0809.

The painting of Eloise, daughter of Detroit Postmaster and Eloise Complex governing-board president Freeman Dickerson, is estimated to be more than 100 years old. It has been hanging in the office of the deputy county executive in the Wayne County Building for more than a dozen years.

■ 'This painting will be one of the most treasured artifacts at our Eloise Museum.'

Edward H. McNamara
County Executive

Prior to that, it hung in the now-demolished county General Hospital, which had been located at the north end of the complex.

"This painting will be one of the most treasured artifacts at our Eloise Museum," said County Executive Edward H. McNamara, referring to the growing collection of Eloise historical items housed inside the Beard Building.

The Beard Building, which was Building D, the complex's former psychiatric unit, and is the last remaining building in the complex, now is home to the county's Senior Citizens Services Division and the Head Start program.

It was through a bit of skullduggery that the complex that would eventually care for thousands of Wayne County's mentally disadvantaged and indigent residents, including many homeless, became named for a 4-year-old child.

First opened by Wayne County in 1832 in what was Hamtramck Township, then relocated to its Westland site in 1839, the infirmary, psychiatric facility and general hospital on the 902-acre parcel grew over the next 50-plus years.

By 1894, it was generating enough mail that its leaders wanted their own post office – it took too much time to haul the mail in horse-drawn carriages down Michigan Avenue to the Village of Wayne post office.

A perfect name

The U.S. Post Office agreed and requested a name for the new facility. But after a series of names submitted to Washington were rejected for various reasons, the complex's governing board submitted Eloise's name – without her father's knowledge.

It was accepted at once and, on July 20, 1894, a post office named Eloise was established on the grounds.

The Michigan Central Railroad Co. then adopted the name for its station there and the American Express Co. and the Detroit, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor suburban railroads followed suit.

Finally, "Eloise" came into such general usage that the board applied it to the entire institution, remaining thus until 1945, when the board changed the name to the Wayne County General Hospital and Infirmary at Eloise, Mich.

A portrait of Eloise and her St. Bernard hung in the board room behind the president's chair for many years.

At its peak, residents grew their own food, dried tobacco for cigarettes, raised farm animals and even operated their own theater.

In 1973, the remaining 900 mental patients were transferred to state hospitals. Building D closed in 1981 and the general hospital in 1984 – two years after the death, at age 93, of Eloise Dickerson Davock.

Expanded Friend of Court program yields results

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

COUNTY NEWS

More than 3,000 non-custodial parents have been referred for jobs and an additional $300,000 in child-support payments has been collected under an expanded program of the Wayne County Friend of the Court.

Alexander N. Luvall, the FOC for the 3rd Judicial Circuit, announced those figures Monday and praised the program's impact.

"The Non-Custodial Parent Program's expanded eligibility has made it possible for several thousand parents to make good on their support obligations and at the same time move toward economic self-sufficiency," Luvall said.

Those eligible for the program are all non-custodial parents who are unemployed or are under-employed – working fewer than 40 hours per week – and have been ordered to pay child support.

The program, begun in June 1998, originally was only for parents of children receiving Family Independence Agency benefits. But it was expanded this past June to include the broader group, according to 3rd Circuit Court spokeswoman Llenda Jackson-Leslie.

Luvall said the additional $300,000 in support payments from those parents means that "we know the program works.

"These moneys go directly to families and that is the mission of this program and the Friend of the Court," he said.

For fiscal year 1999-2000, which ended in September, the FOC collected more than $302,556,000 in support payments – about a third of the total collected statewide, according to Jackson-Leslie.

The non-custodial parent program is operated jointly by the FOC, the Michigan Department of Career Development, the Detroit employment and training department, the Southeast Michigan Community Alliance (SEMCA) and the FIA.

Parents referred to the program are required to attend an orientation meeting. Once they agree to participation, it becomes mandatory.

Luvall said payment enforcement for the eight weeks between referral and job-placement is suspended.

That allows participants "an opportunity to approach the prospect of employment and possible reunification with their children without the burden of enforcement activity," Luvall noted. "This is a humane approach and leaves us all with a good feeling."

Joann Cooper-Reid, manager of the non-custodial program, echoed Luvall: "This is a win for the entire family."

She said it gives the FOC "a chance to show we can work cooperatively with non-custodial parents in getting them to comply with their support obligations."

For information about the program, call the FOC, (313) 224-5293.

Rouge group meets Dec.6

Expanded Friend of Court program yields results

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

COUNTY NEWS

More than 3,000 non-custodial parents have been referred for jobs and an additional $300,000 in child-support payments has been collected under an expanded program of the Wayne County Friend of the Court.

Alexander N. Luvall, the FOC for the 3rd Judicial Circuit, announced those figures Monday and praised the program's impact.

"The Non-Custodial Parent Program's expanded eligibility has made it possible for several thousand parents to make good on their support obligations and at the same time move toward economic self-sufficiency," Luvall said.

Those eligible for the program are all non-custodial parents who are unemployed or are under-employed – working fewer than 40 hours per week – and have been ordered to pay child support.

The program, begun in June 1998, originally was only for parents of children receiving Family Independence Agency benefits. But it was expanded this past June to include the broader group, according to 3rd Circuit Court spokeswoman Llenda Jackson-Leslie.

Luvall said the additional $300,000 in support payments from those parents means that "we know the program works.

"These moneys go directly to families and that is the mission of this program and the Friend of the Court," he said.

For fiscal year 1999-2000, which ended in September, the FOC collected more than $302,556,000 in support payments – about a third of the total collected statewide, according to Jackson-Leslie.

The non-custodial parent program is operated jointly by the FOC, the Michigan Department of Career Development, the Detroit employment and training department, the Southeast Michigan Community Alliance (SEMCA) and the FIA.

Parents referred to the program are required to attend an orientation meeting. Once they agree to participation, it becomes mandatory.

Luvall said payment enforcement for the eight weeks between referral and job-placement is suspended.

That allows participants "an opportunity to approach the prospect of employment and possible reunification with their children without the burden of enforcement activity," Luvall noted. "This is a humane approach and leaves us all with a good feeling."

Joann Cooper-Reid, manager of the non-custodial program, echoed Luvall: "This is a win for the entire family."

She said it gives the FOC "a chance to show we can work cooperatively with non-custodial parents in getting them to comply with their support obligations."

For information about the program, call the FOC, (313) 224-5293.

Rouge group meets Dec.6

Students tackle jury room drama

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

The emotions amongst a jury deliberating about whether a 19-year-old male is guilty of murdering his father will take center stage this weekend as Belleville High School players present Twelve Angry Men.

The Reginald Rose play will show at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 30, Friday, Dec. 1 and Saturday, Dec. 2 at the Belleville High School auditorium. Tickets are $7 for adults and $6 for seniors and students.

Director and drama teacher Larry Koch said the production turned out to be a good fit for the young thespians.

"It's a story of a jury that has to deliberate the guilt or innocence of a 19-year-old boy accused of killing his father," Koch said. "One brave soul says that he's not guilty."

Duggan selects 'fresh, aggressive' prosecutor staff

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

Michael E. Duggan, Wayne County's prosecutor-elect, is choosing equal numbers of insiders and newcomers to head divisions within his new office.

The Livonia resident said operations have basically been the same for three decades.

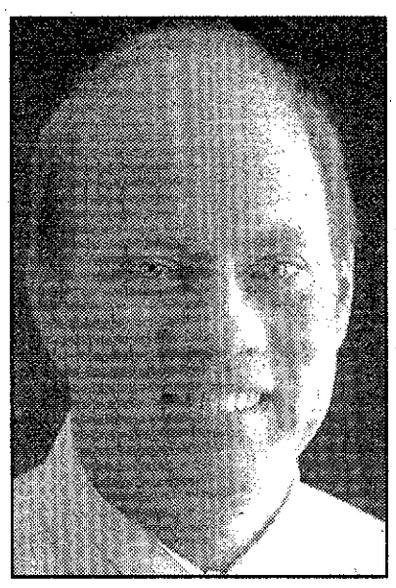

"The reality is, when John O'Hair came in in 1984, he left (predecessor) Bill Cahalan's staff intact," said Duggan. "For 30 years, it's essentially been run the same way."

He's "not saying that's necessarily bad, (but) ... We're trying to blend the best of the experience that's here along with a fresh and aggressive approach," said Duggan, who will leave his post as deputy county executive on Jan. 1 to take over his first elective office.

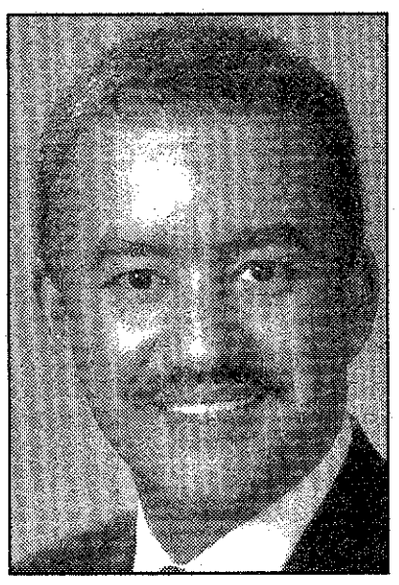

Earlier this fall, Duggan named former Recorder's Court Chief Judge Sam Gardner as his top assistant and appointed state Sen. Virgil Smith, one of his foes in the primary election, to be the office's liaison in Lansing.

Saying he has "a number of frustrations" with the department's handling of youthful lawbreakers and oft-raided drug houses, Duggan named two outsiders, Warren C. Evans and Maria Alfaro-Lopez, to head up juvenile prosecutions and forfeitures, respectively.

"Today, if a kid doesn't show up on the date of his trial, nobody goes out to look for him, unless he gets caught running a red light or in a drug house," Duggan said.

Michael Duggan: Prosecutor-elect

Virgil Smith: appointed to staff

■ 'We're trying to blend the best of the experience that's here along with a fresh and aggressive approach.'

Michael Duggan
Prosecutor-elect

Under his administration, Duggan vowed, "if a kid's not in court by 9 a.m., by 10 a.m. a police officer will be out with a warrant for his arrest.

"The thing is, juveniles grow into adult criminals," Duggan noted. "We need to get them to think differently. Otherwise, they just learn contempt for the system."

Duggan said Evans, an eastside Detroiter, previously directed Wayne County's community justice department, responsible for the county's new youth home and its juvenile justice program.

He said the county has "been having great success" handling all juvenile crime sentences since it took that over from the state.

The prosecutor-elect all but predicted he'd fulfill a key campaign pledge: Closing down drug houses that have been raided more than once.

Nearly 1,000

Duggan, noting O'Hair's office raided nearly a thousand drug houses more than once but "never took (possession of) them," said Alfaro-Lopez is "the county's expert in seizing abandoned houses," having filed 500 lawsuits against those property owners as an attorney in the county's corporate counsel office.

"So we're going to turn Maria loose to now start seizing drug houses," said Duggan of the southwest Detroit attorney. "It's much easier under the law for a prosecutor to take property" involved in drug usage than it is for the county to take abandoned property."

Running it all

He said Alfaro-Lopez, a southwest Detroiter, will run "the whole program, from the time we sue, to the time we take the house, to knocking it down.

"It's going to be a lot of fun," Duggan said.

Among other appointments announced this week were three from western Wayne County: Attorney Michael Cox of Redford Township as chief homicide prosecutor; attorney Kevin Simowski of Plymouth as chief of warrants; and Susan Kopinski of Canton Township as administrator.

Cox, a Redford native and 11-year veteran in the office, is succeeding Simowski as homicide chief. Kopinski is coming to the prosecutor's office after five years as finance director at Wayne County Detroit Metropolitan Airport and almost 10 years as Canton's financial services manager.

Cox comes to homicide, which is being reorganized to include family abuse cases, from the special cases unit, where he handled gangs, drugs, murder and public corruption. Among the cases he worked on was that of Malice Green, who was beaten to death by two policemen.

"Our office has some ideas that might actually help reduce homicides," said Cox, a graduate of both Redford Catholic Central High School and the University of Michigan and a former U.S. Marine.

Ideas include increased prosecution of gun offenders – another key Duggan campaign pledge – and closing dope houses, Cox said.

Prosecutors discovered that almost 20 murders occurred in drug houses raided more than once and that nearly 100 murders happened as close as two houses away.

"We also want to change how probations are handled," clamping down on those who are always getting into trouble, said Cox. "For them, (probation) is just a piece of paper."

The father of four said Duggan "has a lot of energy, a lot of ideas. He's already shaken up the culture of the office and made us feel we can make a difference."

Duggan said Kopinski will handle budget, equipment and personnel.

Lateral move

Kopinski, who said the change is "pretty much a lateral move" economically, will take on broader responsibilities but hopes she'll be working fewer hours.

"For several years, I've been working 60-70 hours per week, and I do have a family," said the wife and mother of one.

Kopinski said she's "been involved" in the ongoing state probe of Metro finances for 15 months. Although she liked working at the airport, "Enough's enough," she said.

Airports spokesman Mike Conway, describing Kopinski as "very vigilant ... very efficient, very much by-the-book" and "committed," said the questioning by state legislators "challenged her integrity and she really, really took it personally."

"I believe in what I say and I don't lie to people," said Kopinski, who said working in finance means "you have to learn and understand what's behind the numbers."

She said she had "no problems" with the scrutiny: "I know what we do and have no questions about it ... In most instances, (the decisions on contracts) made good business sense at the time."

Groups can care for state forests

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Community groups can already adopt a highway, a park, a river, a trail or a shoreline. But they cannot yet adopt a forest.

Such programs, administered through the state Department of Natural Resources, allow civic organizations to enter agreements with the state to care for highways, parks, trails and more on a volunteer basis. The work mainly consists of clean up, removing litter and illegally dumped solid waste from public lands.

It could be done informally. In fact it has been. The Michigan United Conservation Clubs, working with the DNR and the U.S. Forest Service have been caring for forest land in the Roscommon area for eight years.

Absent official status, however, there is no money for "tipping fees" – charges needed to dump the trash collected.

Rep. Scott Shackleton, R-Sault Ste. Marie, is proposing to fix that problem. House Bill 6013 would create an Adopt-a-Forest program through the DNR and make it eligible for the budget allocations needed to support the volunteer work.

The proposal has already received approval in the House and is pending in the Senate. State lawmakers wrap up work for the current session at the end of next. Uncompleted bills would have to be reintroduced next year.

On-line jobs directory updated

A completely revised and updated Training and Employment Connection (TEC) online directory, which helps both employers and job-seekers locate organizations that help them meet their needs, is now available.

Located at www.semcog.org/mac/tec.html, TEC provides an extensive directory of more than 200 job-training and placement organizations serving Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Washtenaw counties.

The TEC database is diverse and comprehensive, including everything from publishing to pet grooming.

Users can search the TEC database by geographic area and job type or by organization name and can follow links from search results to an agency's Web site.

Arabica targets upscale audience

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

With the beautiful actress Salma Hayek on its glossy, full-color cover, John Zogby doesn't see how the revamped Arabica Magazine can fail.

"There's just one problem," joked the noted marketer and political prognosticator from New York as he addressed the magazine's coming-out party Tuesday evening at Dearborn's Ritz-Carlton: "How do you follow this?"

Zogby, best-known as the first pollster in the nation to predict no easy presidential victory for George W. Bush, wore his marketer's hat Tuesday as he announced the results of Zogby International's study of metropolitan Detroit's Arab-American community – the target audience for the magazine.

It's a growing, affluent community of over 350,000 Arabic and Chaldean peoples, the largest such population outside the Middle East.

It includes highly educated, professional individuals with a purchasing power of $2.7 billion who spend much of that income locally on homes, cars, jewelry, clothing and dining.

As for specifics on Arabica's readership – the English-language magazine is popular locally and nationally – Zogby said his random sampling of 200 of the magazine's mostly local 7,000 subscribers showed:

- 77 percent are ages 30-64 and 44 percent are the parents of children under 17 living at home;
- 76 percent have one or more college degrees, with 43 percent having three or more;
- 66 percent are in professional or managerial positions;
- 94 percent are homeowners, with 49 percent owning homes larger than 2,000 square feet and 37 percent owning two to five properties;
- half earn more than $75,000 and 25 percent have investments between $500,000 and $5 million; and
- 41 percent own luxury and sport utility vehicles while 78 percent own vehicles worth more than $25,000.

"The subscriber base is perfectly consistent with the target audience," said Zogby.

That was good news to founder and publisher Ahmad Chebbani, the soft-spoken Lebanese native and successful accountant who originally started the magazine 18 months ago as a business publication.

Chebbani's initial vision – of a high-end magazine to serve a growing segment and give it a voice to the larger community – has since undergone a transition which led to the bi-monthly magazine's being revamped to appeal also to women and families.

He recently brought on board as editor-in-chief Karim Alrawi, an Egyptian-born, British-raised international political analyst and playwright who has done two plays for Meadow Brook Theatre and whose third, debuting there in February, will deal with Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

Alrawi, who also has co-authored studies on censorship and human rights, led the revamping of Arabica.

Its new look, design and content, which which debuted with the current November/December issue and maintained the upscale feel, includes a focus on culture and lifestyle.

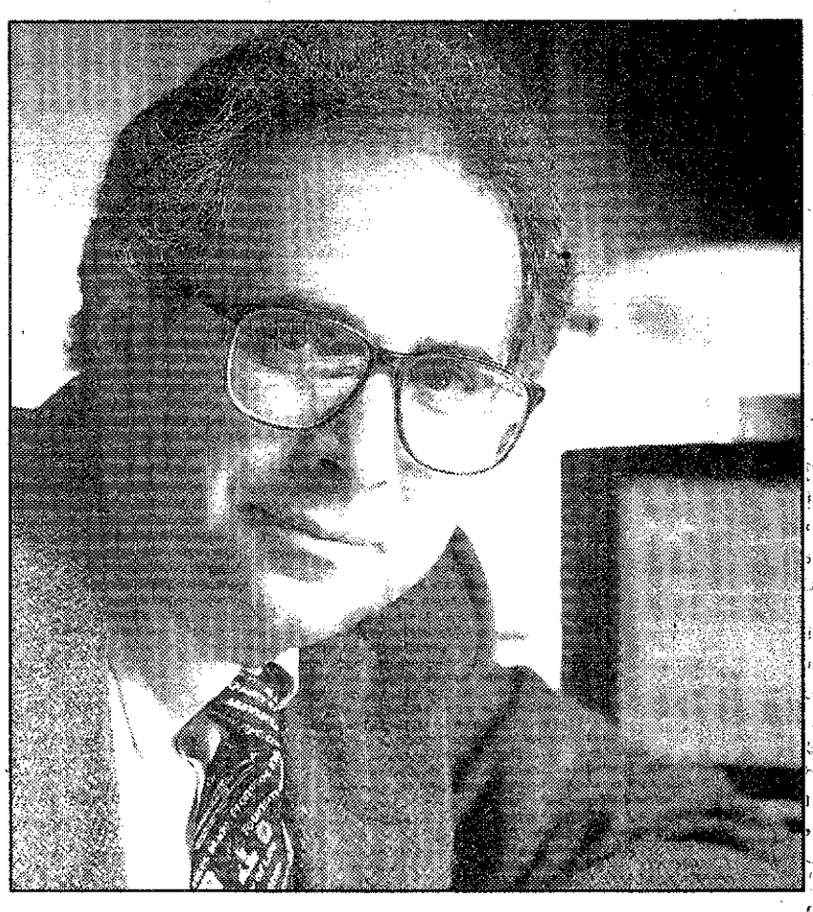

While it continues to address business – there are features on the highly successful, Dearborn-based La Shish restaurant chain and on the new Arabic-themed casino in Las Vegas – it also includes features on Hayek and Coptic art; articles on the Jewish vice-presidential candidate, Sen. Joseph Lieberman, and pieces on Saudi Arabia's transition from oil to cyberspace and on the Palestinians' future.

It seems to closely follow part of Chebbani's mission statement: To be "the voice of the community in the ongoing dialogue that is shaping American society in the twenty-first century."

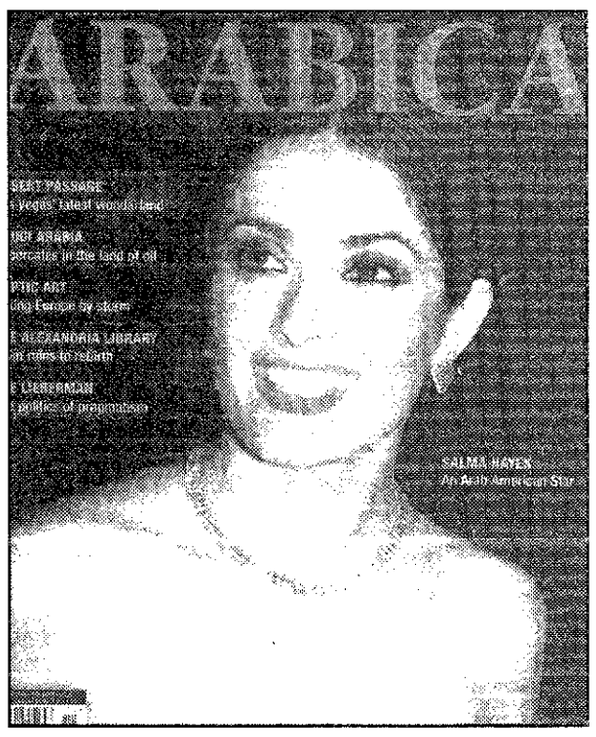

But what about following up that cover of Hayek, who incidentally is both Lebanese and Mexican?

Managing Director Mike Berry isn't worried. There's more than one beautiful actress of Arabic ancestry, he said.

Arabica Magazine is available on newsstands and in some Border's and Barnes & Noble bookstores.

Marketing man: John Zogby, noted political pollster, has created a marketing study of Arab-Americans.

Beautiful beginning: Film actress Salma Hayek is featured on the cover of the revised Arabica.

Western Wayne moves on enhanced 911 service

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

The Conference of Western Wayne has given unanimous approval to a pair of resolutions dealing with telephone communications for its 18 municipalities.

One resolution authorized CWW Executive Director Marsha Bianconi to proceed with wireless 9-1-1 enhancement while the other opposes the plan by Ameritech and other local providers to install area-code overlays. The resolutions were approved at the CWW's mid-November meeting at the Romulus City Hall.

The 9-1-1 resolution authorized Bianconi to informally negotiate and sign, on behalf of the CWW, standard non-disclosure statements with wireless phone companies serving the area.

The move is part of CWW's Phase I effort to improve wireless 9-1-1 emergency telephone service within the CWW's telephone service district. Once fully implemented, the service will let police and fire departments confirm where emergency calls from cellular and digital phones originate, just as they do now with land-line phones.

It will be useful both in false alarms and in situations in which the call is interrupted before it's completed.

Bianconi said the agreements protect the seven provider companies' proprietary information. In addition, having a single signatory streamlines the Phase I process, she said.

The companies are Ameritech, WorldCom, Media One, TCG, GTE/Verizon, Allegiance and Focal. Only Ameritech provides local service in all CWW communities.

Although Phase I has a six-month timetable, Bianconi said there are over 30 Michigan counties trying to implement it, so it's likely to be staggered. "I'm taking my time with it," she said. "I'd rather do it right" than have to re-do it.

As for the area-code overlays, the CWW's 18 governmental representatives adopted the Flint Chamber of Commerce resolution opposing them.

The plan would establish new area codes within the existing 810, 248, 313 and 734 areas, thus requiring 10- or 11-digit dialing for calls made to the new numbers, whether they're to phones, in the next room or office or across the street.

Ameritech, GTE and others say the increased demand for fax, second-line and cellular/digital phone numbers has depleted the supply, necessitating the overlays.

But the Flint Chamber says the problem is the issuance of numbers in blocks of 10,000 to new local phone-service providers.

It says that policy should be reconsidered or, if the numbers truly have been used up, then new geographic area codes should be created, not codes within codes.

The Michigan Public Service Commission has scheduled a public hearing Dec. 11 in Pontiac on the proposed 248 area-code relief plan. The meeting will be at 1:30 p.m. in the city council chambers, 47450 Woodward.

Part of Livonia and all of Farmington and Farmington Hills are in the 248 area code.

Flint, which is fighting the 586 overlay planned for its 810 area, is awaiting a decision on the matter from the MPSC. The decision is expected by year's end, according to MPSC spokeswoman Mary Jo Kunkle.

The PSC recently ruled that the 517 area be reduced in size and that a new 989 geographic area code be implemented for Saginaw and other communities.

Problem gambling linked more to lottery than casinos

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Problem gambling in Michigan appears to be more closely linked to the state lottery than to the opening of three new casinos in Detroit, at least for the time being.

The number of calls from state residents seeking help through Michigan's compulsive gambling helpline peaks after lottery games produce especially large prizes, according to Jim McBryde, who heads up the state's program within the Department of Community Health. Casinos haven't produced any appreciable jump in the number of calls, running typically at less than 2,000 per month, McBryde said.

That would not be a surprise to mental health counselors, who predicted that among players caught up in addiction through Detroit's new gambling houses, fewer than 1 percent would seek treatment in the first year. Compulsive gambling typically is a long-term problem, as the tragedy in Farmington Hills last week points out.

Jihad Moukalled wrote in a suicide note that he started gambling more than 10 years ago. He then took the lives of his three children and his pregnant wife before taking his own Tuesday, Nov. 21.

McBryde attributes the lottery-related spikes in helpline calls to two possible causes: the big cash prizes attract players and cause them financial trouble with their overspending on tickets, or the increases simply come from the fact the phone number is printed on the back of every lottery slip.

In October, some 1,450 residents called and 135 were confirmed to be compulsive gamblers, that is they ranked high on a screening test given right over the telephone. Those who are identified to be problem or compulsive gamblers can get referrals through the helpline to support groups like Gamblers Anonymous and counselors for treatment. Since financial trouble is a frequent result of excessive gaming, the state will make up to 12 one-on-one counseling sessions available to gamblers who cannot afford to pay for it themselves.

Gamblers themselves are often in denial while the financial burdens fall heaviest on immediate family members. So those family members can get help, too, through the helpline. Both counseling sessions and support groups, like Gam-Anon, are available to family and friends of addicted gamblers.

Nelson Westrin, executive director of the Michigan Gaming Control Board, said the state is preparing to roll out a new compulsive gaming program. Players who believe is it time for them to quit can sign up with the state to be excluded from Michigan casinos.

Once they sign, their appearance in a gaming house could lead a year in jail or a $10,000 fine. Harsh as it is, the program is designed to give addicted players a strong incentive to stay away from casinos.

Similar programs already exist at the three Detroit casinos, Westrin and McBryde explained, although they are not as harsh. Troubled gamblers can voluntarily sign up to be "disassociated" from the casino. Casino workers then receive photos of those players, and if they show up, are immediately ejected from the building.

McBryde gave credit to the Detroit casinos for their efforts to deal with compulsive gambling. All three have been more active at initiating programs and posting signs of the compulsive gambling helpline than is typical of casinos elsewhere, he said.

Michigan law requires the casinos to fund much of the state's compulsive gambling program from their profits. Just to open, the casinos had to put up a total of $2 million to get the program under way, out of a state services fund totaling $25 million.

Michigan's Compulsive Gambling Helpline is (800) 270-7117 and operates 24 hours a day.

Gamblers Anonymous has a Michigan Hotline at (313) 792-2877. More than 35 local chapters of the group meet weekly throughout the state.

Gam-Anon, for family and friends of addicted gamblers, can be reached at (718) 352-1671.

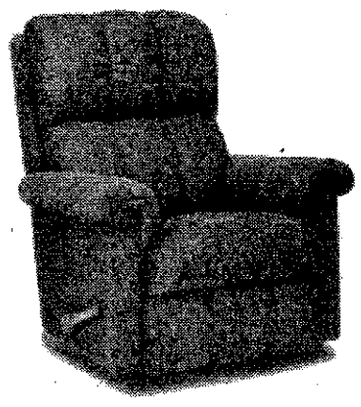

Problem gambling signs

According to the National Council on Problem Gambling, pathological gambling behavior is indicated by five or more of the following characteristics:

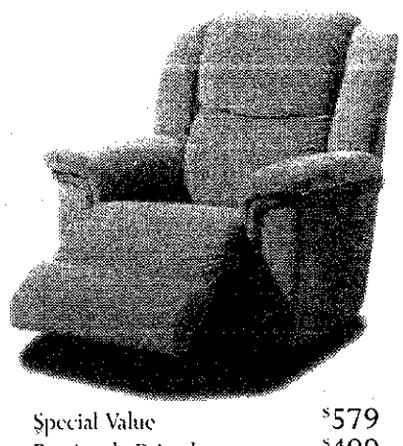

- Preoccupation with gambling, reliving past experiences, handicapping or planning the next venture or thinking of ways to get money with which to gamble;
- Need to gamble with increasing amounts of money in order to achieve the desired level of excitement;
- Repeated, unsuccessful attempts to control, cut back or stop gambling;
- Restlessness or irritability when attempting to stop or cut down gambling;
- Using gambling as a way to escape problems of the day or a bad mood;
- After losing money, returning to "get even" (often called chasing one's losses);
- Lying to family members, a therapist or others to conceal the extent of involvement with gambling;
- Committing illegal acts such as forgery, fraud, theft or embezzlement to finance gambling;
- Jeopardizing or losing a significant relationship, job or educational or career opportunity because of gambling;
- Relying on others to provide money to relieve a desperate financial situation caused by gambling.

Seat effort cushions renovation costs

The Van Buren school district is looking for people to become part of Belleville High School history while at the same time helping out with the costs of re-upholstering the auditorium's 32-year-old seats.

The district's Adopt-a-Seat program allows donors, for $50 a seat, to make tax-deductible pledges toward reupholstering the auditorium's 1,000 seats. Donors will get their names printed onto plaques that will be displayed in the auditorium's lobby. Belleville alumni may indicate which class they graduated with as part of the plaque recognition.

So far just under $10,000 has been raised through donations, said Jody Ihlenfeldt, auditorium manager.

"We're real far from our goal of $50,000," Ihlenfeldt said. "We've been at every function the schools have to try to raise money."

Each seat cost an estimated $68 to reupholster.

"We thought $50 would be a little more palatable for people," she said.

Anyone interested in donating to the district's Adopt a Seat program may call (734) 697-9123, ext. 225 or write to Van Buren Public Schools, Adopt a Seat, 555 W. Columbia, Belleville, MI 48111. Donations are tax deductible.

Rose's play was made into a critically-acclaimed 1957 film starring Henry Fonda, Lee J. Cobb and E.G. Marshall. It was directed by Sidney Lumet. A 1997 remake released in theaters starred George C. Scott and Jack Lemmon.

The single-set play centers entirely on the jury deliberations. Set pieces include chairs, a table, a window and ceiling to simulate the jury room. A water cooler is the only prop outside the jury deliberation room.

The cast includes Amanda Andrewjeski, Adam Hogan, T.C. Anderson, Laura Sucher, Lisette Wise, Natasha Witherspoon, Jason Wertz, Duran Johnson, Delissha Woods, Sara Hanna, Kari Mizer, Dan Luchi and Jordan Carr.

The student director is Bethany Crews.

Koch said he's impressed with the way the student actors tackled what he described as "heavy duty drama."

"I'm pleased because they've taken on quite adult roles," he said. "They're emoting very well."

For more information, call Belleville High School at (734) 697-9133.

Blanket campaign is under way

Thousands of people will be forced to take refuge in shelters this winter when they find themselves suddenly homeless. With over one hundred shelters in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, there is a desperate need for blankets. The Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross hopes to collect 7,000 blankets for these shelters through Dec. 31.

St. Mary Mercy Hospital has been designated as a Blanket Days drop-off site. The community is asked to bring new and gently used blankets, preferably twin-size, to the Five Mile Lobby.

St. Mary Mercy Hospital is at 36475 Five Mile in Livonia.

WSDP to broadcast high school winter sports

Our fundamental purposes are to enhance the lives of our readers, nurture the hometowns we serve and contribute to the business success of our customers.

Holidays require an open heart and checkbook too

It's the happiest time of the year for many, with Christmas and related celebrations showing up on the calendar.

Santa's coming to town – literally. Mr. Claus makes his annual appearance Monday at the Canton Tree Lighting Ceremony. This year's festivities are at Fire Station No. 1 beginning at 7 p.m. We know Santa is eager to hear the holiday wishes of good boys and girls and we're sure he'll be thrilled with a large turnout by them in Canton.

After Monday, Christmas will be officially here in Canton, making it an ideal time to share the spirit of goodwill.

Give what you can, help when you can. Remember those in need.

Already, signs of Christmas have been seen in abundance. On Saturday, the Canton Goodfellows will be out in full force, selling their holiday papers to raise money. Look for them at township intersections and in front of these local businesses: Holiday Market, Farmer Jack, Kroger, Old Country Buffet, Richardson's Drugs, Community Federal Credit Union, Alpha Graphics and others.

The Goodfellows hope to provide toys and donations for some 250 local kids this year, according to president Nancy Spencer.

The Goodfellows are just among the many who take time this time of year to give to others. The cheerful ring of the Salvation Army bell has already been heard, reminding shoppers to dig deep to help those in need as part of the red kettle campaign.

The Observer is accepting donations through its Cheer Club. Just drop off new, unwrapped toys or canned goods at our offices at 794. S. Main during business hours and we'll make sure your donation gets to those who can use it most during the holidays.

Maybe you've been looking for a way to get involved this year. Why not call the Salvation Army at (734) 453-5464 to ask about being a volunteer bell ringer? You'll be helping a good cause and also feeling good about what you're doing.

When you open your purse or wallet to give this year, just do the best you can and don't worry about not giving more. Just do what you can, and take pride in knowing that you've helped.

Small contributions add up into bigger ones, so if we each do our part no one should have to go hungry or shiver from the cold.

Canton is humming with the signs of success and prosperity. So let's take some time this holiday season to be people of goodwill. Give what you can, help when you can and remember all those in need.

OK, you've sold me

This theater thing just might work after all

I'll admit it up front. When Tom Yack began talking about Canton as the home for a regional performing arts center a few years ago I was, well, less than thrilled. My arduous training as a journalist (OK, professional cynic) told me this was the last thing local government should be putting on its to-do list.

Pick up that trash? Yes. Make sure the neighborhoods are safe? Sure. Even throw in a park and a pool or five at the Summit. But keep the simple services effective and the tax rate low and you've got a recipe for municipal success.

Tedd Schneider

We definitely don't need our local officials going ga ga over some temple for the "arts," is what I thought. Especially one that will sit empty most nights while the overwhelming majority of residents snuggle into La-Z-Boys with the remote and a cold pop. Well, it's beginning to look like I was wrong. And not just about the cultural proclivities of Canton's still-growing population.

A $5.5 million, 400-seat performing arts and education center is about to leap from concept in a forward-thinking township supervisor's mind to an architect's drawing board. A design subcommittee of the planned theater's core committee will make a final decision on the architect by mid-December. From there – assuming all the pieces fall into place – it will become the brick-and-mortar embodiment of Yack's vision. (The brick part is especially true if certain planning commissioners have their way.)

And you know what? The journalist/cynic really likes the idea. Damn near gushes about it when describing it to friends and colleagues. Here's why:

■ Location, location, location. Plans call for the theater to be a centerpiece in Cherry Hill Village. So not only will the project be a regional drawing card, but it will function as a key, non-residential component for the neo-traditional "village" going up near Cherry Hill and Ridge Roads. It will help forge the identity of Cherry Hill as an atypical, suburban development.

■ Togetherness. The theater project is fostering a spirit of cooperation in the local arts community that hasn't always been easy to come by, but will pay big dividends down the road. The core committee has representatives from Canton Project Arts, the Plymouth Canton Theater Guild, the Peter Sparling Dance Company and others, as well as the township and the Canton Community Foundation. The finished product is expected to play host to the Plymouth Community Chorus, the Plymouth-Canton Ballet Company, youth theater groups and visual arts exhibitions. Although the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra would need a larger hall for full concerts, it may still stage chamber music or sponsor other performances at the theater. Planners say the theater will be used at least 150 nights per year.

■ Education. Students at all age levels will have a new resource in the community and a new facility to jump-start their interest in the arts. Committee members have made the project's educational component a priority and are talking about everything from presentations aimed at schools to student exhibitions to hands-on training in theater arts such as costuming and staging.

■ Costs. Much like the township did with the Summit, Yack is looking to a combination of private funds, grants and a fund-raising campaign to get the project off the ground. In September, Canton received a $300,000 state arts, cultural and quality of life grant for the theater. The township itself will put up $2 million for construction and Cherry Hill Village developers another $2 million. The supervisor is committed to the project but won't ask for any kind of tax increase to help foot the bill.

So it looks as if my "can't do" attitude has been vanquished when it comes to the performing arts center. I just can't resist the supervisor's dogged determination on this one and I've buckled in to the unbelievable optimism of the two dozen or so dedicated individuals who are seeing the theater plans through its infancy.

In fact, I've accepted an invitation to join their committee. And I promise to check my cynicism at the door for all official meetings and functions.

■ Electoral College fails

In an article I wrote in early September of this year, I attempted to explain the mechanics of how the Electoral College works, or does not work, and postulated it was time to discard it and allow the people to elect the president by direct vote.

I suggested in this election year the system would misfire, by which I meant the winner in the Electoral College would not get even a plurality of the votes cast. It appears this prognostication was correct. If George "W" wins the Electoral College, but does not receive as many popular votes as Al Gore, then the guess was correct.

Has this happened before? Yes, on three occasions - all in the 19th century. It occurred in 1824, 1876 and 1888. The three presidents elected in these elections were ineffective and were not re-elected. It can be argued persuasively that the "people" rejected them.

I suppose that some TV pundit could argue they would have been failures as president anyway, but being elected with less votes than their respective opponents sure didn't help. Of course, in today's lexicon of political verbiage, the word "mandate" is used - some would say overused. That is, could either of our two current presidential aspirants argue (except with tongue in cheek) that he has an endorsement of the people to enact his respective platform on which he based his campaign? Hardly.

Indeed, I suggest such an argument is impossible if the winner fails to receive even a plurality of votes. He will no doubt try to do so anyway (maybe by putting two tongues in two cheeks at the same time). But, I predict a failed effort, an ineffective presidency, and a one-term president. I do not have much pity for the president-elect in this setting, but I do have considerable sympathy for us, the people.

Let me return to my initial premise that the Electoral College has not worked again and that it has "misfired." We have had something in excess of 50 presidential elections. In only three of them has the Electoral College winner failed to receive a plurality of votes.

We now face the real possibility of a fourth; that is, if you can believe the election returns told, and retold ad nauseum, by the TV media. There is, however, one good outcome to this bombast of information - the people are getting smarter by the minute.

I dare say the American people know more about the Electoral College system now than at any time in our 213-year history. This is good. It is an essential tenet of the theory of a successful democracy that the people are knowledgeable and informed.

Indeed, people now seem to be not only informed, they seem to be aroused and maybe even angry. One TV pundit recently stated that a poll of people who failed to vote on Election Day indicated that two-thirds of them (the non-voters) would vote if they had the chance again. This is an absolutely amazing fact since, no doubt, some of these non-voters probably thought the Electoral College was some type of educational institution located in rural Ohio.

What if the Electoral College had "misfired" not just three or four times, but 20 or 30 times? Do you believe that a knowledgeable and informed, aroused and angered citizenry would have allowed such a result where the winner receives less than a plurality of votes? I suggest that such a scenario would have produced a grassroots, surging effort to eliminate the Electoral College long before now.

Timing is always important. Perhaps now is the time. The people should be allowed to elect our president by direct popular vote. The Electoral College does not necessarily allow this result. Any new system we might fashion would probably still permit a president to be elected without a majority of the popular vote if there are third-party candidates.

The Electoral College was not crafted by the founding fathers to give small states a disproportionate vote. Rather, it was crafted to avoid the "tyranny of the majority." Unfortunately, it now allows for the minority to rule the majority.

Furthermore, the Founding Fathers provided in the Constitution for a method to amend the Constitution. They knew things would change and the Constitution would have to be amended from time to time. Let us use that wisdom too.

■ On discrimination

This week's editorial (Observer, Nov. 23, Page A16) concludes, "Discrimination in any form is inherently wrong." Really?

Today's society prohibits convicted pedophiles – based on their behavioral choices – from being employed as day-care workers. That's a form of discrimination. Smokers are banned from sitting on airplanes or in certain sections of restaurants or entering most government buildings while exercising their particular behavioral choice. That's a form of discrimination. Convicted drunk drivers, based on their behavioral choices, are eventually prohibited from driving. That's a form of discrimination.

Society judges these and numerous other forms of discrimination to be justified, even laudable.

Are you sure your editorial writers believe, in contrast, that "any" form of discrimination, including those listed above, is inherently wrong?

Don't you mean that any irrational form of discrimination is wrong. For instance, it is irrational to prejudge or discriminate against a person based on his or her skin color or ethnic background, since those are characteristics that tell you nothing about the person's character, judgment, reliability, or likely behavior?

Once again, in clear contrast, if a person knowingly and repeatedly engages in: (1) behavior that constitutes a felony violation of state criminal code, (2) behavior that a 2-to-1 majority of Americans believes is "wrong," and (3) behavior that is scientifically proven to increase the risk of certain forms of cancer by 4,000 percent and cut up to 20 years off his life span: Is it irrational to take such willful, self-destructive, even life-threatening behavioral choices into account when assessing that person's character, judgment, reliability, and likely future behavior?

■ Is it too much?

We are excited by the new possibilities in downtown Plymouth including the Wilcox project. But we wonder how much is too much? We hope the city commissioners will not let their quest for tax dollars spoil the character of our wonderful town.

Downtown Plymouth - charming, livable, traditional - with a real Main Street USA feel has anchored the community for decades. Why ruin the ambiance?

Are multi-story complexes crammed on small lots, crowding our beautiful park and downtown streets charming?

Will the inevitable competition for parking spaces due to encroaching development make our town livable? How will our much used new library and enlarged museum cope?

Will too many new bars and restaurants crowd out our popular main street business mix of retail and professional?

Do we really want the "Royal Oak scene" in Plymouth where so many of their signature shops were forced out?

We are all for progress and improvement but not at the expense of the character of our town. Greedy and thoughtless development will forever alter what made Plymouth special to begin with. We will then look like every other homogenized "upscale" suburban crossroads and lose our unique charm.

The city commissioners have the fate of our community in their hands. We hope they have the wisdom to temper their enthusiasm with prudence. To register your concerns, please attend the Planning Commission meeting on Dec. 13 at 7 p.m. on the second floor of City Hall. The issue is too important to ignore.

■ Only one Civitan

Recent press articles have inadvertently suggested that two separate Civitan clubs exist in the area, one in Plymouth and one in Canton. Such is not the case. One club only has been sanctioned and chartered. Its correct name is the Plymouth-Canton Civitan Club.

Trouble in auto industry still means trouble in Michigan

Economists like to play the "good news, bad news" game. And the economists at the University of Michigan are no exception to the rule.

In their most recent publication, "The Michigan Economic Outlook for 2001-2002," the U-M experts predicted our state's economy will remain strong next year but the rate of growth will start slowing down. Saul Hymans, Joan Crary and George Fulton have been looking at our state's economy for years; their forecasts are widely regarded as the best in the business.

Phil Power

Clearly, we have been enjoying the best economic times in most people's memories:

■ By year-end, the Michigan economy will have turned in its ninth straight year of job growth, the longest run of prosperity in 50 years.

■ Unemployment is at record low levels. As a practical matter, anybody who wants a job and has transportation can get one.

■ In five of the past six years, the manufacturing work week has been longer than for any prior year since 1970. Long work weeks means big overtime checks, not to mention bigger profit sharing payouts as the auto companies share good profits.

Next year won't be quite as good, according to the U-M experts:

■ Auto and truck sales will slow down, the victim of increased interest rates, which make car payments more expensive. The auto companies are already trying to cope with a soft market by offering big cash incentives.

■ Because auto sales will drop, manufacturing employment will go down. Michigan's unemployment rate, which has been below the national average for more than five years, will match it by 2002, with seven out of eight job losses coming from the durable manufacturing sector.

■ Businesses already clamoring for skilled labor will face tight labor markets as they try to grow. The U-M economists point out that labor shortages will likely be one of the biggest barriers to growth next year.

Things won't be all bad, though, especially as big investment decisions made in the last few years begin to be translated into bricks and mortar. General Motors' new assembly plant in Lansing will open sometime next year; GM also plans on spending $1.5 billion on research and engineering facilities in southeastern Michigan. The Detroit Lions' new football stadium is still under construction, and the $1.2 billion renovation at Detroit Metro Airport will boost service employment in 2001.

Five out of six new jobs in Michigan will come from the service and retail sectors, according the U-M economists, which should result in a 3.4 percent unemployment rate next year, higher than this year but still lower than 1970. Rising labor and materials costs will increase the rate of inflation from 2.3 percent this year to 2.6 percent in 2001.

For what it's worth, my own personal view is slightly less optimistic than the U-M forecast. I think the auto industry is facing big time problems and I figure most middle managers have become so used to good times they have little idea what to do when the economy turns south.

The real interest rate (i.e. the difference between the prime rate the banks charge their best customers and the underlying rate of inflation) is very high by historic standards. High interest rates have already cut sharply into current sales. And it looks as though the only way for the auto companies to keep sales up is by offering enormously expensive incentives. Chrysler is clearly headed for a major retrenchment.

Next year won't be quite as good, according to the U-M experts.

The auto supplier industry is scared stiff, and not just the American parts makers who are worried the Germans now in charge of Chrysler will dump them for foreign firms. For a number of years now, the auto companies have required suppliers to both increase quality and cut prices, maybe 3 percent one year, maybe 4 percent the next. The pressure is now so bad in the supplier chain that many companies can only remain profitable by running at full-tilt, three-shift basis. What happens if parts orders slow down?

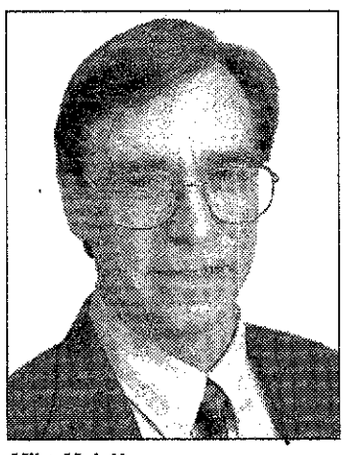

And I understand that the bad loan workout departments at local banks are already busier than they have been in years.

Over the past few years, the Michigan economy has become much more diversified and less dependent on the auto industry. But the auto companies and the supplier chain still represent the guts of our economy. And trouble for the auto industry still means trouble for the rest of Michigan.

So if I were you, I wouldn't blow all your bonus check on Christmas shopping. I'd keep some tucked away for a rainy day.

Legalized gambling claims more victims

Mike Malott

What kind of a casualty rate are we willing to accept in our pursuit of a good time?

James Dobson, the ultra-conservative president of Focus on the Family, phrased the question that way a year ago. He was referring to America's growing affinity for gambling despite the fact we know that some, typically 5 percent, will become compulsive about it and, as a result, lives will be destroyed.

Now more than ever, it is time we consider what our answer is going to be here in Michigan.

Legalized gambling claimed its latest victims last week in Farmington Hills. After returning from a trip to Las Vegas, Jihad Moukalled wrote out a note explaining that he had been gambling for more than 10 years. He suffocated his three children, ages 3, 5 and 7; killed his pregnant wife; and then took his own life.

Police Chief William Dwyer said the suicide note sent chills up his spine, especially a line in which Moukalled stated, "I was gripped by the hope of one more shot." That's the fallacy that drives addicted gamblers, Dwyer said, the belief that the next bet might turn it all around for them.

Almost as shocking, if you ask me, is what police found in the kitchen wastebasket in Moukalled's home – torn up "markers" from the MGM Grand in Vegas worth $225,000. The markers show he was, in essence, gambling on credit.

How could a casino let a player run himself into debt by almost a quarter million dollars?

Jim McBryde, who heads up the compulsive gambling program in the Michigan Department of Community Health, is also surprised by the amount.

"Someone should have seen that he was getting himself into trouble and put a stop to it," he said.

It turns out that extending credit to a player is common practice, according to Nelson Westrin, executive director of the Michigan Gaming Control Board. There are some, known as "whales" to the casino operators, who regularly play with thousands, even millions of dollars. They don't walk around carrying cash.

The practice is limited to the highest rollers, Westrin said. They have to be regulars and have to pass a credit check. It isn't in the casino's interest to run players into bankruptcy because it has to count those markers as revenue and pay taxes on the amount regardless of whether it can collect, Westrin said. He was explaining the practice, not endorsing it.

Nevertheless, it seems to me that the practice is particularly well suited to the destruction of lives.

Many who have enjoyed even moderate success in life could make themselves look like high rollers for a time, but they'd be playing with their life savings. I doubt casino credit checks are designed to protect out-of-control gamblers from themselves. A gambler on the way down might be able to qualify for more credit then he or she could really afford to lose.

How could a casino let a player run himself into debt by almost a quarter million dollars? ... I doubt casino credit checks are designed to protect out-of-control gamblers from themselves.

Not only could someone bet away a life savings in one afternoon, a gambler could do it without having to slow down long enough to go withdraw it from the bank.

Granted, this happened out of state. We might not be able to convince Nevada to end the practice, but if we are going to embrace legalized gambling here in Michigan, as we have, we would be well advised to curtail activities likely to encourage compulsive gambling. A ban on credit in casinos, or at least restrictions on the amount that can be given, would now seem to be well worth considering. Forcing players to put up their money up front is a good way to insure they can really afford to bet it.

Better yet would be a moratorium on new games, as a federal panel called for last year, or even a re-examination of whether we need everything from a lottery to horse racing to casinos in Michigan.

We should think about all this before the toll gets any higher ... because it will.

The chance to win big too often rings hollow

Twice a week I spend a couple dollars for Lotto tickets. I dream of making that big hit that will allow me not a life of leisure but an independent life.

Hugh Gallagher

Those pipe dreams are often just enough to keep someone going, especially through the gloomy dark months of winter in Michigan. Visions of a sandy beach, gulf breezes, funny drinks with umbrellas are a salve against wet snow and black ice.

Then I can also tell myself that I'm helping public education. The money goes for a good cause and it's not enough to make a major difference in my life. I spend more for coffee.

But, as we discover more each day, that kind of casual gambling – a Lotto ticket, a bingo game, a football pool – is not enough for some people.

The tragedy of the Moukalled family in Farmington Hills is unusually painful and sad. According to police reports, Jihad Moukalled, a successful, hardworking businessman, killed himself and his family because of overwhelming gambling debts.

Moukalled began his gambling odyssey at Casino Windsor but then began traveling out of state to follow his tragic obsession. According to Farmington Hills Police Chief Bill Dwyer, Moukalled went elsewhere to travel because of the strong prohibitions against gambling of his Islamic faith.

Sunday marked the beginning of the holy month of Ramadan and this tragedy will offer much to reflect upon by area Muslims and all of us.

Not all religions prohibit gambling and not all gamblers become deeply indebted and self-destructive. For many people going to a casino or a racetrack is a simple night out, a chance to play a few games, have a few laughs and that's it. For most people, a set limit for loss never exceeds the cost of going to a stage play or a professional sporting event.

But for others, it doesn't end there.

As the payoff grows in the Lotto games, some people feel compelled to drop more and more money into a game where their chance of winning is extremely slim. When the one-armed bandit awards a nice prize for a small contribution, some people keep feeding it with the impossible hope of realizing an even bigger return, like a pump that's been primed to keep giving.

When the casinos opened in Detroit, many concerned people were upset that the victims would be relatively poor people who would throw away their money on sucker bets. The experts say that the number of people seeking help for gambling problems has not grown significantly and that many of those with problems are Lotto players, not casino goers.

Perhaps it is too early to tell what the impact of the casinos will be on Detroit.

But it is perhaps too early to tell what the impact of the casinos will be on Detroit. It isn't the city poor who crowd the casinos but the suburban middle class with a steady income they hope to use to hit the jackpot.

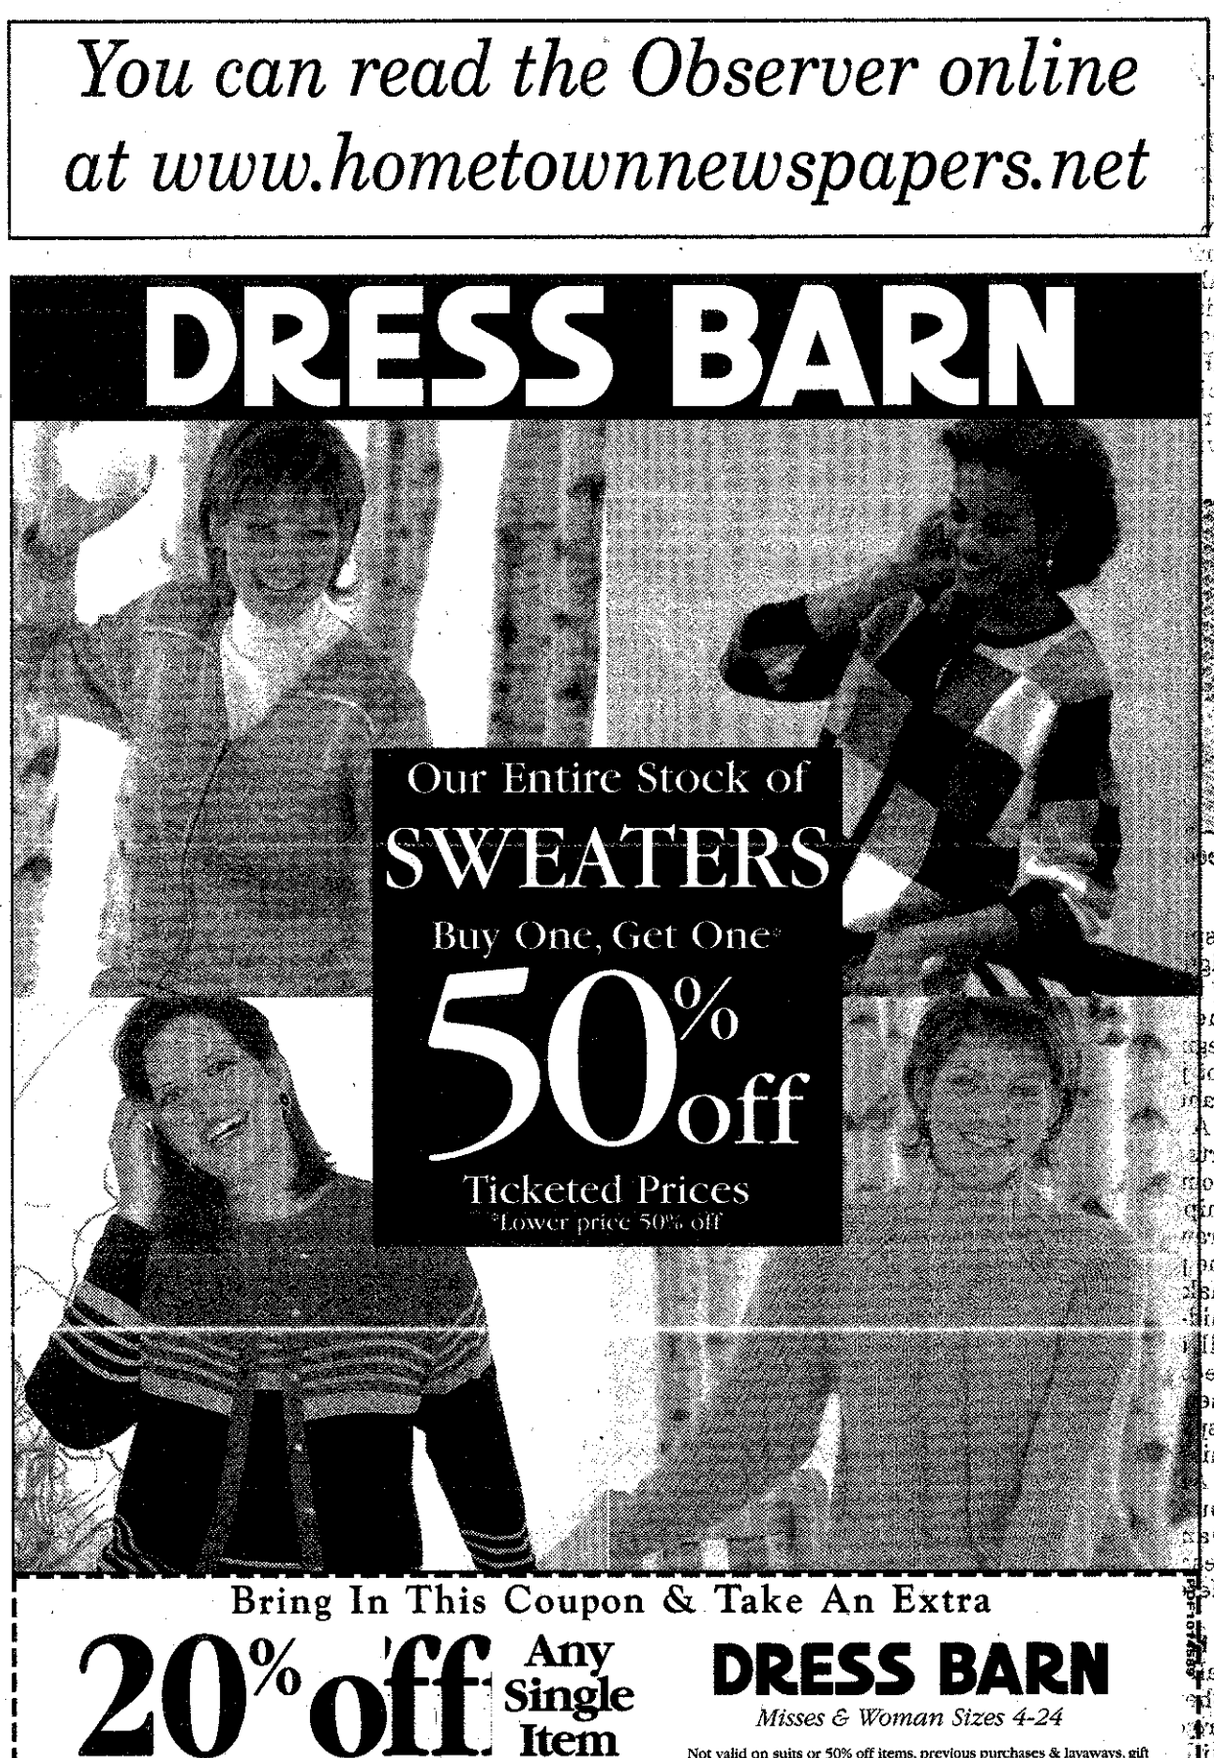

Even in their preliminary incarnations, the casinos make brightly colored baubles in a generally dreary urban landscape. The bright lights, snazzy appointments, uniformed valets suggest a revival of life that is probably as phony as the promise of getting rich with the twirl of a roulette wheel. Detroit suggests the ugly disparity of Atlantic City rather than the amusement park city of Las Vegas.

Still, wouldn't we like to believe it. Wouldn't we like to believe that gambling will not only save us individually from our lives of compromise, drudgery and routine but also save our central city from its dizzy, downhill spiral.

Don't bet on it.

Schools after state for 3rd time in new Durant lawsuit

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

School districts and the state government are at it again, fighting over funding.

Districts across the state filed their third lawsuit – known as Durant III – this month claiming that the state is underfunding schools for what they are owed for mandated special education programs under both the Headlee Amendment to the state Constitution and Proposal A.

More than 365 districts launched the suit, filed in the state Court of Appeals. Bloomfield Hills Attorney Dennis Pollard, representing the districts, believes the list of districts involved will eventually grow to more than 450.

What they are asking for is $417 million they say they've been shorted. Two previous lawsuits – Durant filed in 1980 and Durant II in 1998 – netted plaintiff districts more than $200 million in extra dollars from the state, they contend.

According to Pollard, the state is still "playing a shell game" with funding, counting money owed under the Headlee Amendment for special education as also fulfilling state obligations under Proposal A. The new lawsuit differs from the previous Durant suits in that a separate action was filed to contest allocations in more than a dozen other areas of funding.

'Frivolous suit'

But Gov. John Engler, according to spokesperson John Truscott, believes this most recent case is a "frivolous lawsuit" and that the state will seek first to have the suit dismissed.

Why then are so many districts signing on? "It's like the lottery for school districts. It's free. It costs them nothing. They are not paying the attorney fees, the taxpayers are and they might get lucky and get wealthy. There is no down side for the school districts," Truscott said. "We may have to ask that they pay their own attorney fees this time."

Truscott says shortages found in the first case have been fixed. While the court disagreed with the state's accounting in the second case, it did not agree that districts were being underpaid, Truscott argued. That accounting has been fixed as well, he said. And since then, the state has increased the state school aid budget more than ever before.

"Does that make any sense? Who pays attorney fees in a lawsuit? Does the winner pay attorney fees for the loser?" Pollard responded. "On the one hand, he wants to claim victory in the last case and on the other hand, he admits the state paid attorney fees – he admits he lost."

School view

A statement issued by 14 superintendents of district involved in the case explained their position. "The state is still playing games with the funding for special education. (The governor's) new scheme, similar to the last, uses the constitutionally guaranteed, unrestricted funding from Proposal A in order to meet the State's funding responsibility for special education costs ... The same dollar cannot be both, which is what the State is trying to do. In Durant II, the Michigan Court of Appeals made that point abundantly clear. By counting the same dollar twice, the State is pitting special education and general education parents against each other in a destructive fight for funding."

Signers included Michael Dixon, assistant superintendent, Rochester Schools; C. Robert Maxfield, superintendent, Farmington; John M. Schultz, superintendent, Rochester; and Dan C. Wertz, superintendent, Okemos.

Richard Headlee, author of the 1978 Headlee Amendment, has spoken out on behalf of the districts. In part, the amendment required the state to continue funding mandated programs at pre-1978 levels.

"Simply put, they decided to use local school districts' own revenues, guaranteed to them through Proposal A, to meet the State's funding obligation under the Headlee Amendment ... Michigan school districts were paid under this scheme out of their own financial resources for the State's wrongdoing," Headlee said. "Some concept. Consider for a moment how preposterous this legislative scheme truly was. This would be akin to a bank having been found guilty of not paying interest to its depositors on their savings accounts, turning around and shifting money from the checking accounts of those same depositors in order to remedy the bank's wrongdoing."

Local school districts joining the case so far include Avondale, Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Brandon, Clarkston, Clawson, DeWitt, East Lansing, Eaton Rapids, Eaton ISD, Farmington, Fenton, Garden City, Grand Ledge, Hazel Park, Huron Valley, Lake Orion, Lamphere, Livonia, Northville, Novi, Oak Park, Oakland ISD, Okemos, Oxford, Plymouth-Canton, Redford Union, Rochester, Royal Oak, South Lyon, South Redford, Southfield, Taylor, Troy, Van Buren, Walled Lake, Wayne County RESA, Wayne-Westland, and West Bloomfield.

Northwood has lunch classes

Northwood University is holding lunch-time learning classes in business management beginning Dec. 5 at Northwood's new Livonia Program Center, 38777 W. Six Mile Road, Suite 212 at the corner of Six Mile and I-275.

The first class, Philosophy 301: Ethics, will be taught by Michael Rasak of Livonia. Students will meet during lunch hour twice a week to earn college credits toward a management degree. The classes will run for 10 weeks with holiday time off.

Philosophy 301: Ethics is an analysis of the moral and ethical principles of our civilization and consideration of topics such as moral influence, responsibility, the Judeo-Christian traditions, humanism and law and order.

KIMBERLY MORTSON

Holiday letters need to be personalized

Now that the turkey's been carved and the biggest shopping day of the year past, we're on the fast track to Christmas. Topping my "to do" list this week will be writing my annual Christmas letter.

I know, I know. There are a faction of people out there who hate them and another segment of the population that love them. I'm in the love group. Nothing is more of a letdown than opening up a Christmas card only to find this ...

"Happy Holidays — The Andersons"

It's particularly disheartening when it's from those people whom I don't hear from that often. What better an opportunity than to sit down and catch me up on what's been happening at your end of the mailbox than in a Christmas letter.

■ 'First and foremost don't write a novel.'

Maybe it's my addiction to mail. I love getting mail. I remember in college I couldn't wait until the mail came after lunch to see who'd written me or sent me a card. Today it's the first thing I do when I get home from work. I love junk mail, catalogs, marketing survey's and magazines. Since the inception of e-mail my personal correspondence has dropped off somewhat, which is slightly disappointing, but at the same time it has improved the communication lines between some of those people that only scratched their name in a Christmas card once a year.

The right stuff

There are several approaches and some etiquette necessary to writing a good letter. First and foremost don't write a novel. Either choose some clever way to run through your past year like listing the top 10 things you did or create a one-page scrapbook of scanned pictures highlighting your travels or milestones during 2000.

Another no, no is dishing the family dirt. A friend of our family writes a letter so eyebrow raising, a Harlequin romance novel pales in comparison. In recent years she's talked about cheating sons-in-law, children who returned home, ongoing ailments, financially struggling siblings who don't repay old debts, divorces and more. I must admit it makes for interesting reading, but at the same time I cringe for her family who may not know she's divulging such personal information in a form letter.

Guidelines

Keep the tone of your letters light. They aren't meant to be depressing but need to strike a balance between what you and your family did this year and the letter becoming a brag fest.

Try writing a short resume for each family member. A brief synopsis of your children's activities, how you've been keeping busy on the weekends and someplace interesting you vacationed this year.

You might want to write two letters. One to those people who see you on a regular basis — for example a note explaining what you're thankful for — and another letter to friends and acquaintances. It's also possible not everyone on your Christmas list needs a letter.

A different twist on the Christmas letter is sending a holiday recipe. I once received a photograph of a friend's child mixing dough and attached to the back was a recipe card for cookies with a brief note from my friend. I thought it was particularly clever and the picture said more than a long letter could have!

If you include an e-mail address or maintain some kind of family Web site remember not everyone is online. Hand write a short personal note at the end of your letter in place of your e-mail address and include your phone number if it's someone you haven't spoken to in a while.

If you have a unique way of sharing your family news write HomeTown Editor, Kim Mortson, 36251 Schoolcraft Road, Livonia, MI 48150.

Girl Scouts troop into malls during holidays

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER

Girl Scouts from the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council are again offering gift wrapping services at three area malls during the holidays.

In their ninth year of business, Cadette/Senior Leader and Registrar Diane Bergendahl says the wrapping service the girls provide is "a job."

"In many instances this is the first job many of these girls have," said Bergendahl. "It's a good opportunity for them to learn how to handle money and to interact with customers."

Gift wrapping tables will be managed by approximately 200 scouts and adult supervisors now through Christmas Eve at Wonderland Mall (outside Wards and a second near the food court), Livonia Mall near Sears, and Laurel Park adjacent to Olga's restaurant.

"This is our seventh year at Wonderland and our ninth year in business," said Bergendahl. "We're pleased to be able to gift wrap at the new locations this year."

Kathy Swan, the mother of 13-year-old Girl Scout Christine Swan, said the troops are grateful for the complimentary space the shopping centers provide.

"All the malls should be commended for letting us be here rent free," said Swan. "They could be charging for the space we use but they welcome us back each year because shoppers count on us to wrap their gifts and they know their money is going to a good cause."

The motive for the girls working three-hour shifts after school and on the weekends until Christmas Eve is to raise money for scout activities and end-of-the-year trips.

Christine Brooks, 13, of Westland who is wrapping gifts with her mom Jane, is looking forward to the end of the year trip. "I don't know where I'm going to go yet," said Christine. Jane added that four of her six scouts from Troop No. 544 were volunteering at the gift wrapping tables in order to supplement the cost of their scout activities and field trips.

"The girls in my troop are really excited about being able to work like this," said Jane.

Gift-wrapping services are provided during school hours by the parents of Girl Scouts that come from Livonia, Westland, Redford, Novi, Farmington Hills, Inkster, Southfield, Detroit, Dearborn Heights, Northville and Allen Park. After school, 22 troops, ranging from seventh- to 12th-graders, work in three-hour shifts starting at 3 p.m. On the weekends the girls have the opportunity to work different hours and some former scouts return from college to lend a helping hand.

"We couldn't do this without the help of the troop leaders, parents, scouts and volunteers," said Bergendahl. Committee members and volunteers include Sue Roy, Carolyn Feathers, Jeanette Bray, Theresa Marshall, and Vicki Kowalski.

All of the bows are hand-made by the scouts as well as the more than 4,000 gift tags they use in the first few weeks. Gift wrapping isn't limited to gifts purchased at the malls either.

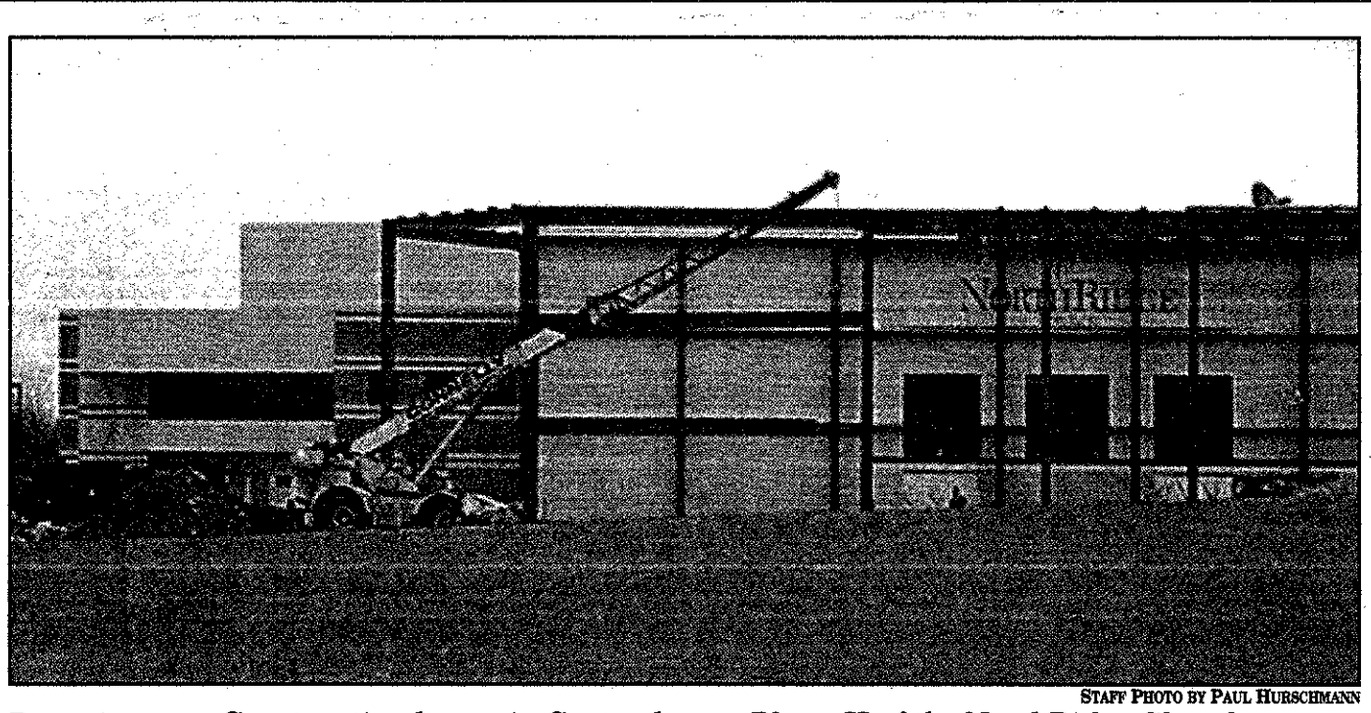

Bergendahl said every year Ollie Fretter, former chairman of the retail appliance business, drops off packages to be wrapped from stores as far away as New York. Last year Bergendahl and Swan estimate they collected $13,000 (before expenses) during the five-week holiday season. Swan said some people are more than generous and tip the scouts because they know the money is going toward something

Plymouth church begins Phase II

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON

Motorists making their way west on M-14 have undoubtedly seen the construction under way at NorthRidge Church in Plymouth. The existing church campus at 75,000 square feet is hard to miss. The current project, that began in mid-September, will add another 46,000 square feet of space onto the facility.

Under the design of Ann Arbor architectural firm Hobbs & Black and construction managers, The Christman Company of Lansing, Phase II of the NorthRidge Church is expected to be completed by December 2001.

According to Wayne Kurtycz, communications and front-line pastor at NorthRidge, the expansion will complete the final phase of the original master plan and has become a necessity due to the growing number of individuals and families who worship and socialize at the Plymouth church.

United by faith

"In April, the NorthRidge family took over the Compuware Arena [and] we all came together under one roof. That was exciting in itself because we have multiple services ... To show our heartfelt gratitude to God for what he is doing through the people of NorthRidge, now and for the future, we pledged over $8 million dollars over three years to fund Phase II," said Kurtycz. "Because it's not about the building of Phase II that is important. It is about the lives that will be changed that come into this building, it's about people."

Included in the 46,000-square-foot expansion will be a multi-purpose/banquet area, chapel, classrooms, a nursery for NorthRidge Kid's Ministry, and a new lobby featuring an exterior canopy offering shelter during inclement weather.

Kurtycz said one of the most unique and highly anticipated features of the construction project will be a "Starbucks" type café. "We are actually going to have our own Starbucks-style café — how cool is that!"

Multiple uses

NorthRidge members will use the multi-purpose area for programs, meetings and banquets as well as a place for worshippers to dine together during the church's Wednesday evening buffet. The chapel will be a "beautiful place for weddings" said Kurtycz and of the Kid's Ministry area he said, "We have kid's all over the place. NorthRidge is a kid's haven so we are going all out to give the kid's the kind of space they need to have fun with room to grow."

Aesthetic features of the addition include a large, spacious lobby accented by two stories of sea foam-colored glass.

While the expansion comes with a high price tag, Kurtycz said the April gathering of the NorthRidge family supported their belief that the lives they have and will change are worth every penny.

"The height of emotion was when the lights were turned off in the arena and we were asked how many of our lives had been changed by coming to this church. It was awesome to see the hundreds of [people] that lit candles representing how many of our lives had changed as a result of coming to NorthRidge. It was a moment that we will never forget. As we say around NorthRidge ...'Changed lives ... priceless!'"

NorthRidge Church offers contemporary music, concerts, and relevant talks is located at 49555 North Territorial Road, Plymouth Township. Sunday a "Seeker Sensitive Worship Service" is offered at 9:30 or 11:15 a.m. Visit NorthRidge on the Web at www. NorthRidgeChurch. com or call (734) 414-7777.

Disney trip a dream for ailing toddler

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

While other moms are making play dates, 3-year-old Erinne Williams' mom, Suzanne, makes doctor's appointments for countless tests, pokes and painful procedures. In the midst of the sadness as the toddler's body slowly deteriorates, Erinne captures hearts with ease and teaches profound lessons about life.

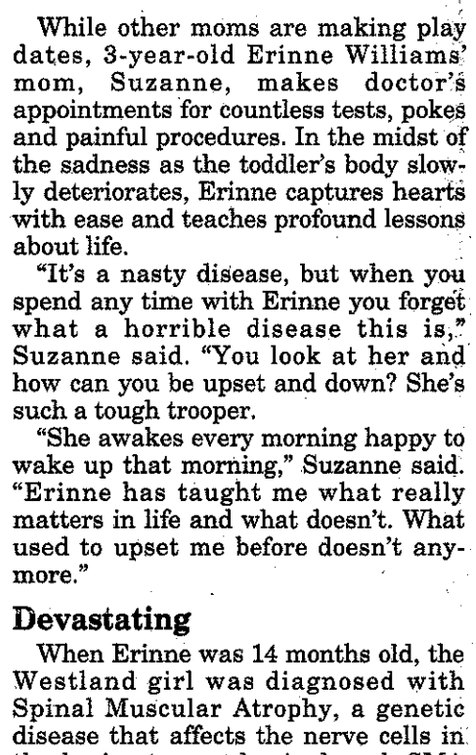

"It's a nasty disease, but when you spend any time with Erinne you forget what a horrible disease this is," Suzanne said. "You look at her and how can you be upset and down? She's such a tough trooper.

"She awakes every morning happy to wake up that morning," Suzanne said. "Erinne has taught me what really matters in life and what doesn't. What used to upset me before doesn't anymore."

Devastating

When Erinne was 14 months old, the Westland girl was diagnosed with Spinal Muscular Atrophy, a genetic disease that affects the nerve cells in the brain stem and spinal cord. SMA wears at its victims' bodies until they become so weak they usually die from respiratory infections.

Erinne has pulled through pneumonia four times.

"Erinne's our little angel on loan to us," she said. "It has been tough on my faith, but I realize that God chose me to be her mom. I can honestly say I've never been angry with God. There's profound sadness, but I feel very honored. My job is to see how long I can keep her here. I know my other kids (Claire, 15, and Kevin, 9) feel that way, too. Erinne is different, very, very special."

The Williamses met Erinne's best friend, Olivia Werstein, and her parents, Cynthia and Chris, through a Web site for people with SMA. The two little girls have survived more challenges than most adults and together they are going to Disney World with their families Dec. 2-9. The vacation is paid for entirely by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan.

"We don't know how many opportunities these girls will have to go together," Suzanne said. "Rather than wait, we thought we would get it now."

Erinne's wish is to have tea with Alice in Wonderland and Cinderella and Olivia wants to pet a real elephant and ride Dumbo. They'll maneuver the fantasy world of make-believe in their motorized wheelchairs.

The need to make the trip as soon as possible was accentuated when Erinne suffered from a respiratory infection that lead to a collapsed lung a week before the trip.

"The trip will be a nice positive change for the families," Suzanne said. "We will be able to take a break from the doctor's appointments, physical therapy appointments, machines and treatments."

But even the prospect of a fun-filled vacation was bittersweet.

When Suzanne asked Olivia's mom about taking the girls at the same time and accepting the Make-A-Wish offer, she knew the Brighton couple had to acknowledge the idea that their daughter may die at a young age.

"It's a final step: 'That my kid will get their wish granted,' " Suzanne explained.

Best of friends

The girls have had other adventures together, like appearing on the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon and being featured in Make-A-Wish public service television spot that will be shown during December.

But their futures aren't promising. Most people with SMA don't live past childhood.

"Our biggest problem is keeping her from getting respiratory infections," Suzanne said, explaining that neither she nor her husband knew of a family member with the disease.

Erinne was born in May 1997 and was diagnosed in July 1998 after Suzanne tried to convince doctors that her daughter wasn't meeting the milestones she learned to expect from her other children and from her vast experience as the director for Botsford Hospital employee day care.

"It took me four months to convince doctors," Suzanne said. "With some families, it takes them up to a year to get doctors to see this is the problem, especially if you don't have it in your family."

Suzanne knew there was something wrong when Erinne wasn't attempting to stand and she was crawling on the top side of her hands.

"The doctors didn't want to say a whole lot about the prognosis," she added. "I had to research what it is and it was quite a shock when I learned that many, many die in early childhood."

Before she was diagnosed, Erinne was able to stand if she was propped up by furniture. She walked with a tiny walker and leg braces and she was making progress in the summer of 1999.

But all that changed in November 1999 when she got pneumonia and was hospitalized for 15 days. Erinne never regained even those first skills.

Erinne can no longer crawl or roll over without help. She can feed herself, but she fatigues easily and always needs help by the end of the meal. Helping her to gain weight is a struggle.

Erinne can hold markers and is starting to write, but she isn't strong enough to take caps off of markers.

She's in a wheelchair now and will be getting a power chair this month on loan by Frank Mobility in Pennsylvania. While insurance companies have rejected requests for a power chair, a Frank Mobility company representative, Bill Russell, wanted to make sure Erinne's trip to Disney World would be as carefree as possible.

Even though Erinne's body is weakening, her mind is strong. She's doing what you might expect from 5- and 6-year-olds – spelling her name, identifying coins and mastering the alphabet, colors and numbers with ease.

"Kids with SMA tend to have extremely high IQs," Suzanne explained.

Painful time

But the disease has been stressful for the family and has taken a toll. Family and friends tend to keep a distance.

"People have pulled away from Erinne and me – it's painful to see," Suzanne said. "It's a horrible disease and people don't like to talk about horrible things and 3-year-old children shouldn't be like this. It's an isolating journey. The only person I feel can understand what I'm going through is Olivia's mom. She has become my soul mate. It's a very lonely road."

The Williamses faced another six months before Erinne was diagnosed. Her father, Jim, suffered a closed head injury that affected his personality.

Suzanne and Jim have been separated for 15 months. But one of the most frustrating things for Suzanne is dealing with insurance companies.

"Every appointment with specialists has been a fight," she explained. "Life shouldn't be that way. If they can deny half the people who come across, they can save money. If Erinne dies while she's waiting for them to provide a power chair, they don't have to end up paying for it. It's an expensive disease from an insurance company's point of view."

Erinne can't sit up in the bathtub while Suzanne bathes her, which means she needs a special bath chair. She also needs a special car seat and other incidentals to do everyday tasks.

One of her happiest moments with Erinne was when she was being fitted in a powerized chair. Suzanne was talking to the medical professionals and Erinne took off after two minutes of instruction. She maneuvered it perfectly and never hit a wall. It was her first small sign of independence away from her mother's protective arms.

"I told her to come back after a few minutes and she turned around and said, 'No, Mom. I want to go.' My kid told me 'No' and it made my day."

worthy.

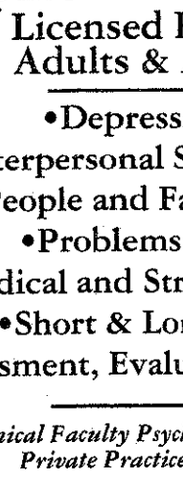

"Last year I wrapped a package for a gentleman on Christmas Eve that came to $1.50. He handed me a $100 bill and told me to keep the change," said Swan. "That's really generous."

Swan and her daughter Christine are looking forward to a Girl Scout trip to Savannah, Ga., in late spring with their troop thanks to the money they raise through gift wrapping project. "The trips are educational and a nice way for the girls to spend time with their peers. While in Savannah, we're going to visit the home of Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts," said Swan.

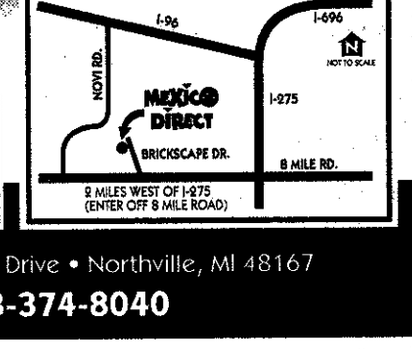

Gift-wrapping services are available during mall hours at Wonderland, Livonia Mall and Laurel Park. Prices are determined two ways: boxes brought by customers are measured then priced. Boxes purchased from the Girl Scouts have a different pricing schedule.

World class chorale

Songs of the season ring true

Cantata Academy, Detroit's World Class chorale, will present its holiday concert "Songs of the Season" at 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 9 at the Trinity Church of the Brethren in Redford.

The concert will include a mix of holiday songs including some traditional carols and songs for the Hanukah season. In addition, religious works by Hector Berlioz, Anton Bruckner, Giovanni Pergolesi, Antonio Vivaldi and Dominick Argento will be performed.

Now in its 39th year, the Cantata Academy performs annually throughout the Metro Detroit area. The group recently performed at the Detroit Institute of Arts as part of the Detroit Cultural Center's celebrated Noel Night.

The 35-member group is conducted by Dr. Michael Mitchell, a celebrated Choral conductor and music clinician. In addition to conducting the Cantata Academy Chorale, Mitchell is also the director of Choral Activities at Oakland University where he directs the University Chorus and the Oakland Chorale.

Admission for the concert is $15 ($12 for students/ senior citizens). Tickets will be available at the door the night of the concert or by calling in advance at (248) 358-9868. Trinity Church of the Brethren in Redford is located at 27350 West Chicago at Inkster Road.

What do you want for Christmas?

If you ask children what they want for Christmas, they will probably tell you about all the latest toys and games on the market. For most well-cared-for youngsters, it may be these material things in their lives that give them the most joy and happiness. The same isn't true for the less fortunate children in this world. For Christmas, these children would probably ask for something like a new pair of shoes, or a warm coat, or perhaps a sweater. The true Christmas spirit should be more about giving than receiving, and sharing what we have with others.

He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise. King James Version Luke 3:11

God's Love Is Everywhere

Smart shoppers who budget expenses avoid post-holiday debt

MONEY

Consider this vision of holiday bliss:

A Scotch pine fills the room with fragrance, delighting the eye with twinkling lights and bright ornaments. Gifts are piled beneath the tree in a colorful riot of ribbon and wrapping paper. Stockings hang from the mantel. And the tantalizing smell of a roast goose wafts in from the dining room.

Now — tally it up. Tree and tree stand: $50. Boxes of ornaments, flashing lights, tinsel? Another $50. Wrapping paper, $1.99 a roll. Presents for the kids, the spouse, the parents — $50 to $100 per person? One stocking, $6.99, plus $20 worth of stuff to fill it. And Christmas dinner — goose, dressing, vegetables, fruit salad, pies, candies, snacks, wines — $100 if you're lucky.

It's enough to make even the most dedicated Christmas—phile want to drive a stake of holly ($4.99 at the local nursery) through Santa's heart.

This season holiday shoppers might consider giving themselves the best present of all: a debt—free new year.

"This is the time of year when purchases are driven by feeling and emotion," said Ron Stampfl, professor of marketing at San Diego State University. "The spirit of the holidays is one of giving — we like to give to those we love — but it doesn't mean we should go into unreasonable debt to express our feelings."

Easier said than done, said some shoppers, in tones that rose from whines to wails.

"You try to contain it, but then you start buying all these little dumb things," said Chris Tim, 26. "I do try to shop around, go from one store to another to check out prices — until Dec. 24, when I just buy what's left."

There are ways to rein in the high cost of the holidays, say consumer advocates.

Shopping tips

Holiday shoppers should consider the following:

— Prepare a budget. Along with gift-giving, include the cost of gift wrapping and mailing packages, travel expenses, higher entertainment costs, new clothing and decorations. Eliminate the unnecessary and stick to the final budget.

— Prepare a list of family and friends you will give gifts to this year. Are there people on the list who could be omitted

— Once you've narrowed your gift-giving list, set a dollar limit for each person.

— Make a list of the gifts you want to buy, then shop for the best bargain. Avoid impulse buys. Consider handmade gifts, gifts of your time or gifts to charity in a family member's name.

— Shop when you are rested. If you are tired or hurried, chances are you'll make bad or extravagant purchase decisions.

— Learn this mantra by heart: "Visa, MasterCard, American Express — each a ticket to excess."

— Do leave home without them. Use cash, check or a debit card. If you insist on using credit cards, be prepared to pay them off when the bill comes, and use only the card with the most advantageous interest rate or bonus reward.

This last bit of advice is particularly important for the majority of shoppers who vow to make budgets or lists, and fail, said Irene Wells, president of Consumer Credit Counselors in Southern California, a nonprofit consumer debt counseling service.

"In January, we will see droves of people with buyers' remorse, and they start to come in as soon as the credit card bill arrives," said Wells. "When people use credit cards, they just aren't as aware that they are spending cash, cash that they will owe — with interest."

Holiday shopping calls for extra safety measures

As the season of holiday shopping approaches, shoppers should be mindful of convenience and safety measures. The following tips were submitted by Westland Shopping Center:

- Avoid the rush, shop at off-peak hours. Most shopping centers will extend their hours next month to accommodate the rush. Mall traffic is lighter from 9 a.m. 3 p.m. Monday through
- arly. Waiting until vill decrease the ailable.
- Be aware and alert of your surroundings. Walk with confidence and make sure someone knows where you are, when away from home.
- Park in well-lit areas as close to your destination as possible.
- When in public, carry your purse or wallet close to your body. Don't let a purse hang off of your shoulder, where it might easily be grabbed.
- Don't use an automated teller machine alone.
- Be discreet in carrying your money. Keep it concealed until you reach the checkout. Keep a list of all credit card numbers in a safe place. Hold onto receipts and destroy carbon papers.
- Carry your key in hand before walking out into the parking lot. Check your car and look inside before entering.
- If someone suspicious approaches you, or you feel uncomfortable about a situation, return to the building and report it to a public safety officer or the police.

Physical Therapy UPDATE
Hands On Center
Presented by Hands On Center For Physical Therapy

SPREADING THE MESSAGE OF MASSAGE

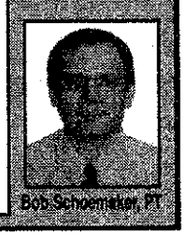

According to a national survey, massage therapy is gaining popularity, particularly among middle-aged adults. According to the most recent poll, commissioned by the American Massage Therapy Association, 27% of Americans indicated that they had a massage in the past five years. This is up from 22% in 1998 and 17% in 1997. Part of the increase is attributable to weekend athletes who suffer from injury or aching muscles. Office workers are also seeking massage therapy for treatment of repetitive-motion injuries arising from computer use. There are also those who appreciate the overall sense of well-being that they derive from massage. Studies show that massage improves nervous system functioning and lowers stress hormone levels.

In fact, along with regular exercise and good nutrition, massage can play an important role in preventative health care, as well as in treating existing conditions and injuries. At the HANDS ON CENTER FOR PHYSICAL THERAPY, basic treatment always includes an hour of manual therapy administered by our staff of experienced physical and massage therapists (in closed rooms for your privacy). Our services also include myofascial release, and cranio-sacral therapy. For more information, please call our center, located at 470 Forest Avenue, Suite 20, in Plymouth, at 445-8370.

P.S. Scientific research finds massage helpful for a wide variety of problems, ranging from migraines to asthma.

Vernarsky saves Whalers

Beating a team by three goals on its own ice should indicate an easy game against them at home. The Plymouth Whalers discovered that wasn't necessarily so when they hosted the Peterborough Petes Saturday.

BY NICHOLAS A. GISMONDI
SPECIAL WRITER

This wasn't the same Peterborough Petes team the Plymouth Whalers beat 7-4 in Peterborough in September. But at least the result was the same.

On Saturday in front of 3,111 fans at Plymouth's Compuware Arena, the Whalers got the game-winning goal from Kris Vernarsky with 4:17 left to play to claim a 3-2 victory.

"I had the benefit of seeing (Peterborough) Friday night in Windsor, and right now they are playing playoff hockey in November," said Whalers associate coach Steve Spott. "And I think that frustrated us early in the game, but it was something that we were able to address in between periods.

"They were playing very defensively and our top guys were able to make it happen for us."

Slowly, the Whalers are getting back the key players who could make a difference. On Saturday, Tomas Kurka — who scored 36 goals and totaled 64 points last season, including a team-best 12 power-play goals — was back in the lineup after being sidelined all season with a hip flexor.

Kurka was instrumental in the victory, collecting a goal and assisting on Vernarsky's game-winner.

"He's a world-class player, and Tomas will definitely be a guy, along with (Stephen) Weiss, who we will lean on heavily throughout the season," said

Rockers iced by Blizzard

A trip to Buffalo to face the Blizzard proved no help to the struggling Detroit Rockers Saturday.

They did manage to make a game of it — unlike Thursday's 14-5 thrashing suffered against Toronto — with Shawn Boney knotting it at 7-all with a one-point shootout goal with just 27 seconds left in regulation.

But it was Buffalo, with former Rocker Bryan "Goose" Finnerty in Chiefs get set for a title hunt

CANTON

Last season, Plymouth Canton's wrestling team attained goals that, just a few years ago, would have seemed unlikely if not unreachable.

The Chiefs set a school record for dual-meet wins, posting a 19-6-1 record. Injuries down the stretch, however, cost them just enough to delegate them to a tie for fifth place at the Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament.

Canton was then eliminated by Salem, a team it had beaten earlier in the season, in the state team district final.

Despite the struggle at the finish, it was a very successful season for the Chiefs. "It was," agreed coach John Demsick. "We had some injuries at the end of the season that held us back, but overall we were very pleased."

Now the question is how do

SALEM

Last season provided a bit of everything for Plymouth Salem's wrestling team.

The Rocks had some outstanding individuals, including three state qualifiers in Ronnie Thompson, Rob Ash and Josh Henderson. Thompson finished second at state in the 119 weight division, while Ash was eighth at 125. Henderson made it to the second day, wrestling at 140, but didn't place.

There were several others, like Mike Popeney, Lucas Stump and Steve Dendrinos. One thing they all have in common is that they've all have graduated.

And that means coach Greg Woochuk is facing a rebuilding job.

"Without a feeder program, you're always in a rebuilding year, so I guess the answer is yes, this is the proverbial rebuilding season," Woochuk

Walk-on star gains top status

BY PAUL BEAUDRY

pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

A little more than four months ago, Kristah Manteuffel was a normal college student — juggling classes with work and trying to fit in a personal life somewhere in the cracks.

When she gets up this morning, she'll still be doing the same thing — work, school, maybe some time for herself.

It is the four months in the middle that make this story special.

For in that time, Manteuffel went from being a walk-on for Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team to walking away with a rare honor — first-team All-American.

"It's an accomplishment, for sure," said Manteuffel, who scored 20 goals and 28 assists for the Ocelots as the team finished fifth at the National Junior College Athletic Association. "Playing this season was a great experience. Of course, being as successful as we did helped a lot."

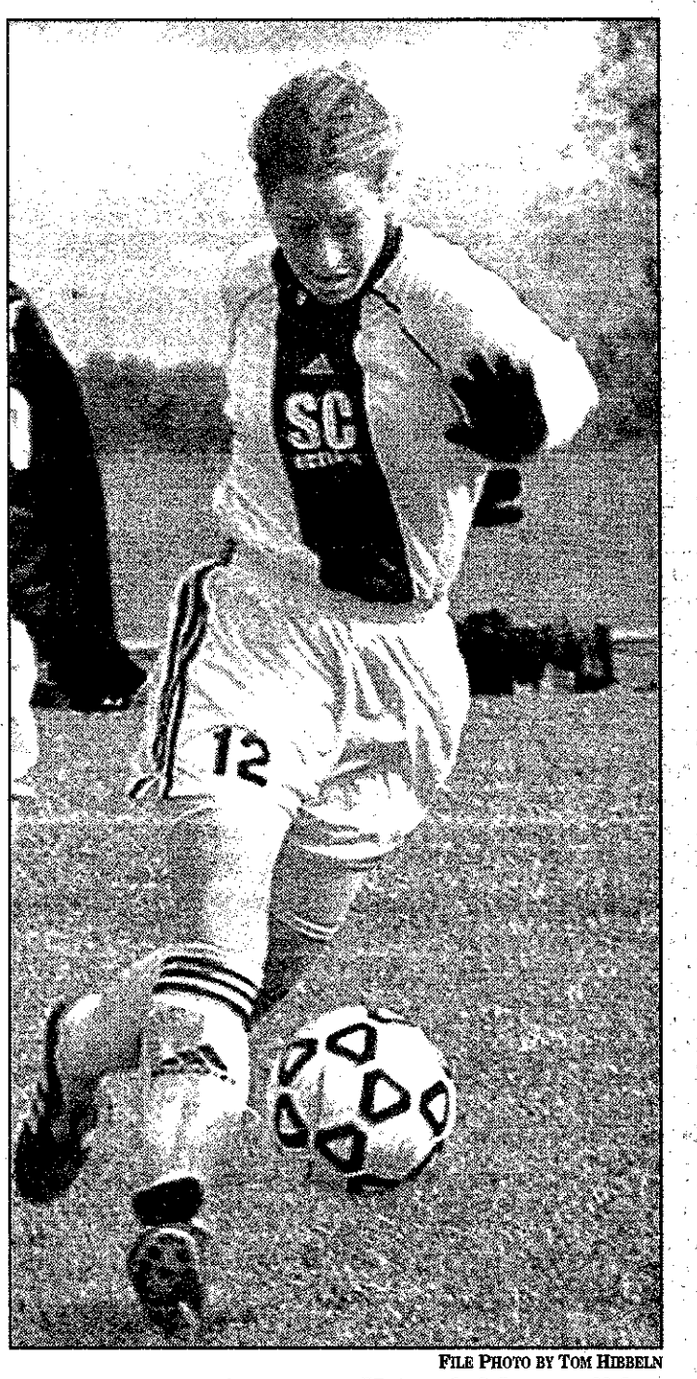

We'll back this story bus back up to 1997, when Manteuffel made the All-Observer soccer team as a senior at Redford Thurston. She did so well that she played the next season at Eastern Michigan University, but something wasn't right.

"It just wasn't for me," said Manteuffel. "I didn't like it there. There was a lot of crap going on and it wasn't what I was looking for. I wanted a fun time playing and you can be competitive and have fun at the same time. I played the year and I hated it."

So Manteuffel left Eastern and headed for Schoolcraft, where she planned on juggling a part-time class schedule with her job at Sizzling Sticks in Northville. But she still had the soccer bug, and kept in the mix by helping out at soccer camps, run by Schoolcraft men's coach Van Dimitriou. And there, she caught the right person's eye.

"Some of the people working with the team had seen her helping out and suggested that she might fit and that I talk to her," said

ALL-OBSERVER GOLF

The Rockets caught fire and took coach Dan Burtka all the way to Coach of the Year on the Observerland golf scene this season.

Westland John Glenn fought off some tough losses to record the area's top team finish in the state tournament and earn Burtka recognition for molding a young team into a state power.

"We struggled in our duals; we lost six matches by a stroke," Burtka said, "so I knew we had kind of a special team.

"Going into the season we knew we were going to be there with everbody else. It's just that we never seemed to get on the same page together. But we just caught fire in the regionals.

"I thought we had a chance of qualifying — but winning it was something that gave the kids a lot of confidence."

It was the second time Burtka's team had qualified for the state finals. The other time it missed playing on the second day by two strokes, which turned out to be incentive to make it to the second round this fall.

The Rockets did, finishing in the top dozen as junior Jeremy Fendelet shot 79-77--156 to tie five other golfers for fifth place in the individual standings.

John Glenn scored 334-337--671 to wind up 12th, 10 shots behind Ann Arbor Pioneer at Forest Akers West at Michigan State University.

"I'm proud of this team," Burtka said, "and four of them are coming back next year."

Reason enough for their coach to stick around past his retirement at John Glenn, where he works in the work co-op program for special education kids, for one more season of coaching the boys golf team.

Burtka has always coached because he enjoys it and he enjoys the kids.

He was asked to take over one day about 15 years ago on the eve of the season and discovered "I just love it. I got hooked on it and one thing led to another.

"So I think I'm going to be back coaching one more year. I've had this group since ninth grade. I kind of want to see that group through.

"They are dedicated and fun kids. I hope next year to make a little more noise in the league. It's a tough golf league."

Competition in golf, both boys and girls, has increased so dramatically that teams are shooting losing scores today that would have produced undefeated seasons in the early and mid-1990s.

"Kids today are playing better than I ever imagined," said Burtka, a golf fanatic who did not play in high school. "They hit the ball a long way and have a lot of finesse around the greens.

"And they have a good mental attitude. If you don't have it there, you don't have it."

Burtka's boys definitely have it.

The 2000 All-Area golf team:

First Team

Jeremy Fendelet, Jr., John Glenn: Jeremy's 79-77 earned him a fifth-place finish in the state tournament and sparked the Rockets to a 12th-place tie in the team standings. He averaged 79.6 for his six 18-hole rounds and 41.4 for dual meets, recording a 35, 36 and 37 for low rounds. The Rockets played at Fellows

Creek, a par 72 course. The three-year letter winner medaled four times in dual meets.

"Jeremy will be the rock of a potentially exciting squad next year," said his coach, Dan Burtka. He was honorable mention All-State.

T.J. Lester, So., Catholic Central: Lester moved up from the junior varsity to make a big impact in his first year with the big team. He averaged 38.4 for nine holes, playing at Cattails in South Lyon, and 77.6 in six 18-hole tourneys. Lester was the overall medalist at the Division I regional by shooting a 72 and wound up fifth overall at the state tourney, earning him All-State honors to go with his All-Catholic League awards.

"He worked on his game over the summer and was a solid competitor," said CC coach Bill Hayes. "He played his best throughout the year and continually improved. He has an excellent demeanor for the game and 99.4 percent of the time, he's got excellent course management."

Matt Lee, Jr., Harrison: A repeat selection on the all-area team, Lee received an all-state honorable mention for the second year in a row, too. He qualified for the Division 2 state meet after shooting 76 and finishing third in the regional at Dunham Hills.

Lee averaged 78.5 strokes in eight tournaments and 36.6 in 10 dual matches. He shot 76 in the Oakland County, WLAA (tied for third) and Country Day tournaments. Lee was all-WLAA and all-county.

He was the medalist in six events and led the Hawks for the last three years with the lowest scoring average.

"He's a good kid with a great disposition, and he knows what he has to do to improve," coach Bill Spencer said. "He's making that little bit of improvement each year that you need to make. He's making the jump past a lot of kids that are out there."

Scott Wolfe, Jr., Stevenson: Voted Most Valuable on Spartan team (7-4) that finished third in Western Lakes meet and seventh in regional. Team co-captain averaged 38.3 for dual meets and was WLAA medalist with a 71, his best score of the season.

"He's one of the best in the league, obviously," said his coach, John Wagner, "and he proved that at the conference match. He's a natural athlete. He assists his coach and his team during the season."

Rich Sudak, Jr., John Glenn: Steadiest player on Rocket squad that surprised with 12th-place finish in state meet. Medalist or co-medalist in four dual meets, averaging 40.8 with low of 35. Averaged 79.6 for six 18-hole rounds, including a 79-80 in the state meet. A 79 earned Sudak a top-10 finish in the regionals at Carrington in Monroe. Tied for first with 77 in Western Wayne meet at Kensington. Three-time varsity letter winner. "I'm really looking forward tohaving him back next year," said Coach Dan Burtka of John Glenn.

Evan Chall, Sr., Churchill: "Evan was the backbone of our team," Chargers' coach John Farrar said. "His worst nine was 41. He either put up a good score or a great score. Every match he was reliable."

Chall medaled in five dual meets with a low of 32. He had a 76 at the Brighton Invitational that placed him seventh and recorded an 81 at the Western Lakes meet. He averaged 38.18 and recorded a 38 in the city meet that was the best individual round.

Second Team

Jon Luna, Sr. Catholic Central: Luna had a memorable senior year, averaging 39.6 for nine holes — led by shooting a 33 at Oakland Hills' South Course — and a 79.6 average for six 18-hole tourneys. The four-year letter winner also made the All-Observerland team as a sophomore.

"His overall leadership has been very good," said Hayes. "He's had some very good rounds for us and kept us going in several matches."

Brad Johnson, Sr., Redford Union: Johnson stood out for the Panthers this season, averaging 39.1 in dual meets and being named the team's Most Valuable Player. He did pretty well in the Mega Blue too, earning medalist honors at the league meet with a 75 and coming in second overall, after dual meets were factored in.

"He was our medalist in six of eight dual meets," said RU coach Bob Sadler. "He just played great all of the time. I can't say enough good things about him."

Matt Bartnick, Jr., Stevenson: Averaged 39.3 and medaled in two dual meets. Was the Western Lakes conference medalist in 1999.

"In spite of what was an off year for him, he still managed a 39.3 average," Coach John Wagner of Stevenson said. "He was a consistently low-scoring player and he has a very competitive spirit."

Jimmy Cappelli, Jr., Garden City: Cappelli worked hard this season, finishing sixth overall in the Mega White, earning all-league honors, averaged 39.5 for dual meets and 82 for 18-hole events. He also finished third in the Western Wayne County tourney and had the fifth-lowest score at the Division I regional with an 80.

"He's a hard worker," said GC coach Ron Pummill. "He played on the Powerbilt Tour over the summer and was third-alternate for the Michigan Junior Amateur. He's golfed a lot and worked hard."

Keith Hay, So., Farmington: Hay averaged 39.6 strokes in dual matches and 80.4 in tournaments to lead the Falcons with the best overall averages.

He was medalist in the Country Day Invitational with a 74 and was all-WLAA, shooting 76 to tie for third place.

Hay also shot 77 and medaled in the West Bloomfield Invite at Kensington Metropark and 83 in the Oakland County tournament.

"He hits the ball very well for a 15-year-old young man," coach Jim Miner said. "If he continues to play and improve, I expect him to start coming in with 37 and 38 pretty consistently.

"We haven't seen that since (state champion) Jason Buha. He has a chance to set some records by the time he's a senior. He has a good future ahead of him."

Derek Vermeulen, Sr., Canton: Not much was expected of Plymouth Canton's golf team this season. But those like Vermeulen helped after that.

Vermeulen served as the Chiefs' captain in only his second year on the team. There was a good reason for that: He paced Canton throughout the season, registering the team's best average in both nine-hole dual meets (38.6) and 18-hole tournaments (80.8).

Along the way, he shot a one-under par 34 at Hilltop, Canton's home course — the lowest score a Chief has shot there, at least in coach Tom Alles' memory.

Vermeulen shot an 80 to earn all-division at the WLAA Tournament and had a team-low 83 at the state regional.

"He definitely deserved some recognition," said Alles. "He had a good season."

Oh yes: Canton went 7-4 in dual meets and tied Northville for first in the Western Division with a 4-1 mark.

Ocelots win a pair, lose a pair

BASKETBALL

The opportunity for a highly successful road trip was there for Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team. But poor choices, on and off the court, made it only partially a success.

The Ocelots won two of their three games, dropping their biggest test of the trip to 12th-ranked Tallahasee CC 106-93 Saturday in Tallahassee, Fla.

After the trip, SC coach Carlos Briggs suspended two of his key players, guard Mike Peek and forward Dwayne Holmes, indefinitely for violating team rules.

Briggs said both could still return to the team this season if they abide by the terms of their suspensions.

Poor defense in the second half was the main culprit in the loss to Tallahassee. SC led 45-39 at the half, allowing the host team to shoot just 33 percent from the floor.

"We played a pretty good first half," said Briggs. "We were up by 13 points at one time, but we let them close it at the end (of the half).

"In the second half, we just didn't play good defense. They came out fighting and we didn't come out fighting at all. We never quit, but we shouldn't have been in that position."

Tallahassee more than doubled its shooting percentage in the second half, converting 73 percent from the field.

Sam Hoskin led SC, now 4-1 for the season, with 26 points and 10 rebounds. Derrick Bird netted 22 points and seven boards, Dave McGlown had 14 points and seven assists, and Nick Evola scored 11 points.

Marcus Hatten paced Tallahassee (9-0) with 25 points.

On Friday in Tallahassee, Hoskin poured in 34 points and Bird added 26 as the Ocelots drubbed the Sydney (Aus.) Sharks 126-76.

This game was never close. SC led 64-28 after one half and kept running up its point total in the second.

Joining Hoskin and Bird in double-figures scoring were Dwight Windom III with 18 points and eight rebounds, and Evola and Emir Medunjanin (from North Farmington) with 11 points apiece (Medunjanin had a team-high nine rebounds). McGlown added seven points and 10 assists.

Trevor Black led Sydney with 19 points.

Last Thursday in their trip's opening game, SC toppled Gulf Coast CC 103-78 in Tallahassee. The Ocelots recovered from a sluggish start — they led by just two, 48-46, at the break — to rout Gulf Coast.

"We talked at halftime how they liked to run up and down the floor," Briggs said. "So do we, but we like to do it with a purpose. And we take pride in our defense. We knew that they don't, and that was the difference."

Bird topped SC with 25 points (and eight boards). Hoskin added 22 points and 10 rebounds, with Colin Wilkinson scoring 15 (going 5-for-7 from three-point range) and Medunjanin collecting 10.

Shawn Dunston was best for Gulf Coast, which fell to 4-4, with 14 points; Ken Green added 13.

The Ocelots rank second in the NJCAA in scoring, averaging 110.8 points per game. Hoskin is fourth individually in scoring at 25.2.

Madonna routed

Poor shooting continued to plague Madonna University's men's basketball team in its 74-48 loss at Albion College Tuesday.

The loss, the Fighting Crusaders' fifth-straight, left them with a 2-5 record. Albion is 3-1.

Madonna converted just 7-of-27 first-half shots (25.9 percent) and shot just 30.2 percent (16-of-53) for the game. Albion was 26-of-62 for the game (41.9 percent).

The Crusaders were also outrebounded 44-36 and committed 18 turnovers to the Britons 12.

Madonna trailed 33-18 at the half and never caught up.

Aaron Cox led the Crusaders with 13 points. Mike Massey netted 10. Brett Quayle had 16 for Albion, with Jon VanderWal collecting 12 and Steve Champine 10. Andrew Neidlinger had eight points and 10 rebounds.

Tech drops Madonna

Madonna University's women's basketball team could not contain the juggernaut presented by Florida Tech last Saturday as it absorbed a 98-76 loss in Melbourne, Fla.

Tech hit 38-of-79 floor shots (48.1 percent), including 7-of-9 three-pointers (77.8 percent); Madonna was 28-of-60 from the field (46.7 percent) and 3-of-7 on triples (42.9 percent).

The biggest difference: The Crusaders had 32 turnovers while Tech made 18.

Madonna, now 3-3, trailed 54-40 at halftime. Tech improved to 4-1.

Kathy Panganis led the Crusaders with 20 points; she also had two steals. Lori Enfield added 14 points and eight rebounds, Mahogny Fletcher (from Farmington Harrison) had 11 points, five boards and two steals, and Kristi Fiorenzi (Plymouth Canton) netted 10 points, six rebounds and two steals.

Tech had six players reach double figures in scoring: Delicia Phillips with 18 (and 10 rebounds), Felicia Bell and Hatasha Griffin with 17 apiece, Shawntel Williams with 14, and Stephanie Barrowman and Sarah Awe with 12 each.

Madonna wins NAIA opener

One step at a time, and the first step at the NAIA Tournament was certainly a successful one for Madonna University's volleyball team.

The Lady Crusaders opened up pool play in the 20-team event, hosted by Palm Beach Atlantic in West Palm Beach, Fla., on Wednesday by rolling past Bloomfield (N.J.) College 15-5, 15-6, 15-4.

The win raised Madonna's record to 39-6. Bloomfield fell to 24-6.

"We played really well," said Crusader coach Jerry Abraham. "We seemed to be synchronized as a group and we're playing with a lot of confidence. Everyone who comes in is contributing.

"The next two teams are big and fast and present a difficult challenge."

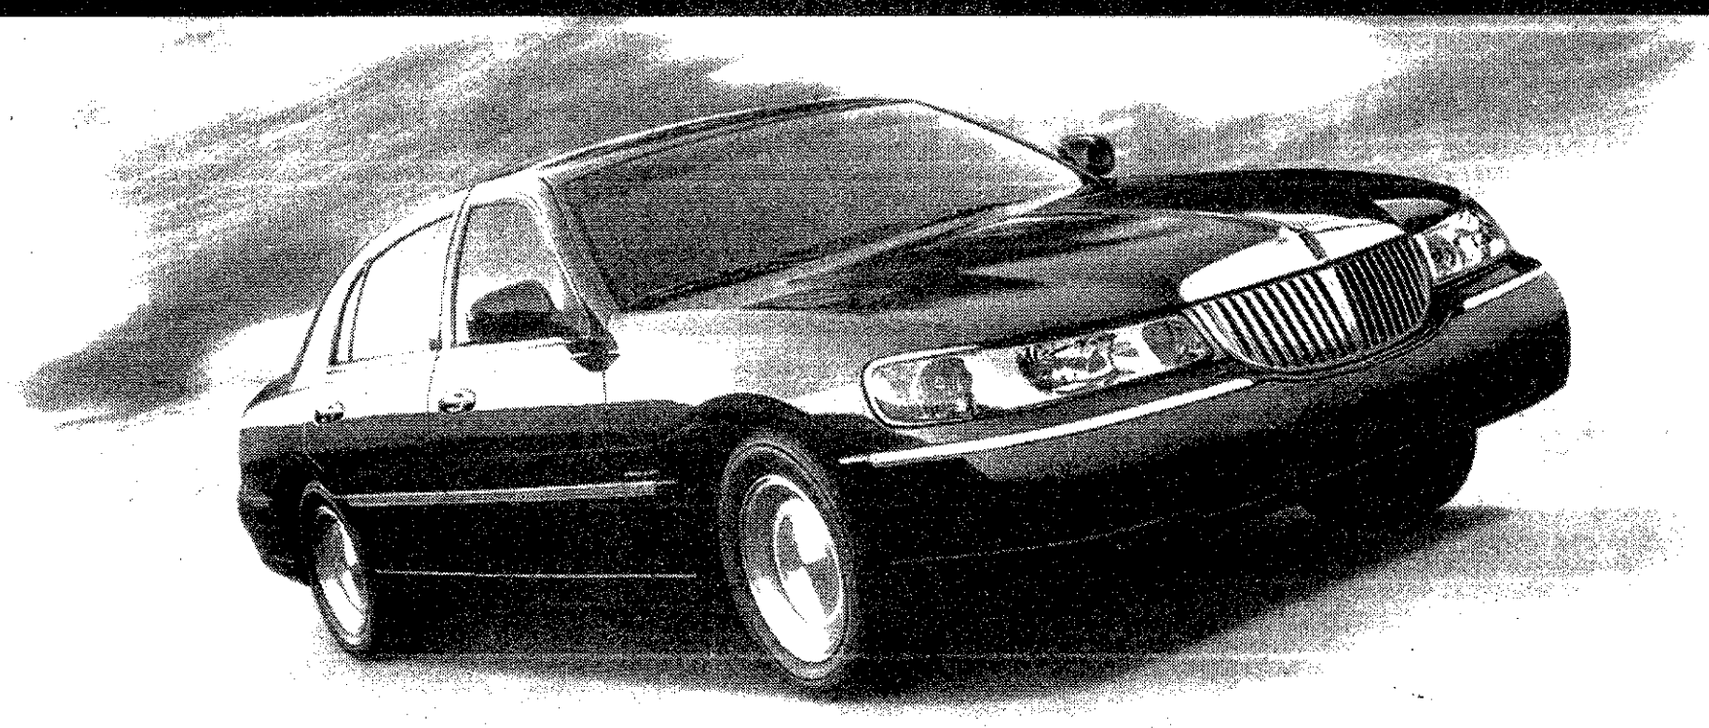

That they do. The Crusaders go against third-seeded College of St. Mary's (Neb.) at 11:15 a.m. this morning, then take on sixth-seeded Point Loma Nazarene (Calif.) at 6 p.m. this evening. St. Mary's is 31-4, Nazarene is 30-5, both won their opening matches Wednesday.

Brandy Malewski's 13 kills (a .550 kill percentage) topped Madonna effort against Bloomfield. Erin Cunningham contributed 11 kills (.785) and Kelly Artymovich had seven.

Jennie Wind collected 28 set assists and 12 digs; Cunningham also had 15 digs and three block assists, and Malewski had five block assists.

Nagel carries Rocks past Flyers

Steve Nagel collected the game's first two goals, then assisted on the next two — including the game-winner, scored by Chad Schlamb with 3:09 remaining to play — as Plymouth Salem edged Farmington United 4-3 Tuesday at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

The win improved Salem's record to 2-1. Farmington is 0-2-1.

The Flyers were playing their first game under the direction of coach Mike Harris, formerly of Livonia Stevenson. Harris was serving as an assistant coach under Glenn Breuhan until Breuhan and assistant coach Bernie Buller both abruptly resigned Monday.

Nagel got both his goals in a 13-second span of the first period, with Mike Maurer and Mark Nagel assisting on the first and Dave Bida and Maurer assisting on the second.

PREP HOCKEY

Farmington narrowed the gap to 2-1 on a first-period goal by Matt Lee, but the Rocks made it 3-1 by period's end when Bida scored, assisted by Schlamb and Steve Nagel.

Kevin Temerowski got the only goal of the second period, narrowing Farmington's deficit to 3-2, and Brian Marion knotted it for the Flyers with 6:52 left in the third period.

James Dogonski was in goal for Salem. Greg Diven was in the net for Farmington.

CC 5, St. Joseph 2: Redford Catholic Central had Buffalo (N.Y.) St. Joseph right where it wanted them on Sunday — tired.

The Shamrocks wore down St. Joe — playing its third game in as many days — and wound up with a 5-2 win.

After St. Joe's opened the scoring, Mike Radigan put CC on the board at 9:43 of the first period. Brett John then scored the first of his two goals at 13:05 of the second.

John scored again 31 seconds into the third period, followed by goals by Jared Ross at 8:18 and Ryan O'Dea at 9:30.

Andy McCoy and Jim Blanchard combined for 30 saves for CC, while the Shamrocks had 36 shots on goal.

CLASSES/ CLINICS

FLY TYING
Westbank Anglers, located in the Bloomfield Plaza at Telegraph and Maple roads, will conduct a Classic Atlantic Salmon Fly Tying Class. This two-day class will offer the intermediate to advanced angler an opportunity to learn to tie classic Atlantic Salmon flies. The first segment, scheduled for 6 p.m.-9 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 15, consists of explaining the various materials, how and where to obtain them and their preparation. The second segment, slated for Saturday, Dec. 16 from 9 a.m.-7 p.m., involves tying a married wing fly. The materials will be provided, but participants need to bring a vise, scissors, bobbin, hackle pliers and small non-serrated jaw pliers. For costs and additional information, call Westbank Anglers at (248) 538-3474.

Spott. "He gives us more options when we look down the bench just because he is a guy who can perform in any situation out there, be it the power play, penalty kill, or four-on-four.

"Whenever he is on the ice, he's a threat to score a goal."

The Whalers are still without Carolina draft choice and veteran point man Jared Newman, who is day-to-day with a back injury. Also, winger Justin Williams continues to play well for the NHL's Philadelphia Flyers.

The Petes opened the scoring at the 1:44 mark of the second period with a goal by Ryan Ramsay, with assists going to Marcel Rodman and Kurtis Foster. Kurka equalized the score with a power-play goal at 17:49 of the second, following passes from Weiss and James Wisniewski (from Canton).

Peterborough recaptured the lead on an unassisted goal by Brad Self at 2:45 of the third period, Self knocking the puck loose from beneath Plymouth goalie Rob Zepp and putting it in.

Less than two minutes later, the Whalers re-tied it. A Libor Ustrnul slapshot from the blue line slipped away from Petes' goalie Davie Currie; Stacey Britstone pounced on it and slid it in to knot it at 2-all. Ustrnul and Damian Surma earned assists.

The game-winner started with Kurka in the neutral zone. His cross-ice pass reached Weiss, who fired a low shot toward the left side of the Peterborough net. Vernarsky was in position to redirect the shot past Currie and give the Whalers their first lead of the game, one they would not surrender. It was Vernarsky's first goal of the season.

The Whalers are 17-4-2-1 this season with 37 points, good for first place in the OHL's West Division and second in the Western Conference behind the Erie Otters. The Whalers play the North Bay Centennials at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Compuware, then host the Oshawa Generals at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. On Sunday, they play at Windsor.

goal, that emerged with the victory, thanks to a goal by Matt Little 12:01 into overtime.

The loss left Detroit with a 1-7 record. The Blizzard are 3-5.

Andrew Crawford scored on a shootout just 22 seconds into the game to give Buffalo the early lead; the Blizzard maintained it through the half, with Sean Bower's two-point score the Rockers only points of the first two periods.

After a scoreless third quarter, fourth-period two-point goals by Decu (from Droo Callahan) at 3:12 and Tim Ernst (Boney) at 7:23 put the Rockers up 6-5. A two-pointer by the Blizzard put them back on top before Boney's dramatic game-tying goal.

The Rockers return to action at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Philadelphia.

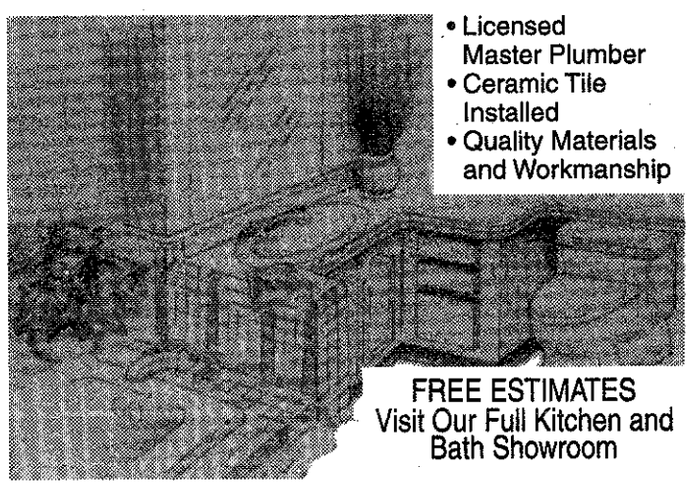

Families share a lot more than a last name. However, the things they have in common aren't always that obvious. Like their blood pressure. High blood pressure has been strongly linked to heredity, so it tends to run in families. There are no symptoms, so it can easily go unnoticed. And, left untreated, high blood pressure can lead to a heart attack, stroke, or kidney failure. But, the good news is that it's easily checked and readily treated. So maybe it's time to start a new family tradition. Call for an appointment to get your blood pressure checked today. To find a University of Michigan physician near you, simply call 1-800-211-8181. We accept a variety of health care plans, including MCARE.SM said. "But we have a great group of juniors who have stuck together since they were freshmen.

"And hopefully, we'll have some surprises as well."

The cupboard is never bare at Salem. The Rocks have 52 kids out for wrestling, so the interest in the sport remains strong. Developing that interested group into a talented team is the task facing Woochuk and his assistants, Lee Krueger and Dave Dameron.

There are eight wrestlers with notable experience who return, but only one is a senior: James March, who wrestles at 160.

Others with experience include juniors Zack Jenson, who's moving from heavyweight down to 215; Andrew Bennett, who will be at 152; John Early, who wrestled at 215 last year but will be at a more natural 189 this season; and Ryan Bedoun, who placed in the top four at the Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament last year at 145.

Another junior, Phil Portellos, is recovering from a knee injury and should return to the lineup by early January. Portellos will help strengthen the 160-171 divisions.

A pair of sophomores should also supply some experience to the lineup: Mike Goethe, who wrestled at 103 last season and will move up to 119 this year; and Nick Moniodis, who's going from 112 to 125.

Last season, the book on Salem was to stay with the Rocks through the lower weight divisions and overtake them in the uppers. This year, there are still places in the lineup other teams can take advantage of.

"We still have a few holes, but we have a lot of juniors who have put in the time at JV," said Woochuk.

Wrestlers the Salem coach hopes will step up include juniors Tony Kennard at 140, Brandon Sammut at 130, Adam Schaefer at 152, Brian Schultz at 145 and Craig Blair at 171. Mike Dendrinos, a freshman and Steve's little brother, may see action at 103.

All things considered, this may best be described as a developmental season for Salem.

"If we could wrestle a whole season before this season, it would be just great," said Woochuk as he noted the team's inexperience at the varsity level.

"We're going to have some ups and downs, but they're working real hard."

Something good is bound to come from this Rocks' wrestling team, but most of it may not be noticed until next year.

Chiefs — C1

you prolong it? That answer won't be difficult for Demsick to supply.

He graduates just one key senior from last year's squad: John Pocock, who was 38-8 while wrestling at 140 pounds and completed his prep career with 105 wins. This season, Pocock is helping as a coach.

That leaves a lot coming back. And although most of them have bulked up and will be moving up a weight division or two, the talent is there to make Canton one of the WLAA's premier teams.

"The thing about our team this year is we do have a lot of talent," said Demsick. "Success is within our grasp. They'll be no one to blame but ourselves."

The team's four captains supply an able corps to build around. Combined, they totaled 128 mat wins.

Kyle Pitt, a senior, was 38-4 at 103; he'll move up to 119 this season, a jump that could cause him some trouble. "I don't expect him to go loss-less,"said Demsick. "But I think he will place at state.

"It could be a real shock for him. The kids are more mature and a lot stronger."

Pitt has 99 career wins. He'll be shooting for his 100th tonight when Canton opens its season with a tri-meet against Plymouth Salem, Monroe and Farmington at Salem.

The Chiefs other captains are senior Joe Faraoni, who had 25 wins in an injury-shortened campaign at 145 last season (he'll wrestle at 152 this year); junior Greg Musser, who was 34-11 a year ago at 135 (he'll be at 140 this year); and junior Doy Demsick, whose record at 119 a year ago was 31-14 (he'll be at 125-130 this season).

That isn't the end to Canton's strong lineup. Others who return are Scott McKee, a senior who had 25 wins at 152 last season and will be at 170 this year; Derek McWatt, a senior with a 31-14 mark at heavyweight; Shahein Rajaee, a junior with 25 wins at 160; Phil Rothwell, a junior with a 31-14 mark at 189; Mike Siegrist, a junior who had 25 wins at 130 (now at 145); and Chris Hosey, a junior who had 25 wins at 125 (now at 135).

Some others to watch include senior Ozzie Wagner at 215 and sophomore Rob Schnettler, the team's top freshman last year, at 103-112.

"We do have some weight classes that aren't as strong," said Demsick. "We're not invincible. We have a couple of weights where we go back and forth — we have some variance at 103, 112 and 130.

"But we have some guys who are really battling for it, and that's good to have."

The strength of this season's team may be evident in Demsick's choice of where to focus his attention: in developing his second team. "That's one of the areas we're trying to shore up," he said. "We were a little shallow last year."

If depth is the main problem, the Chiefs could slide up behind WLAA powers Northville (the defending conference champ) and Walled Lake Western, teams that Demsick thinks will dominate again. Livonia Stevenson and Plymouth Salem were strong last season as well.

"I think our boys are developing confidence and moral fiber," said Demsick. "And that's what you need for success."

The Chiefs have the ingredients. Now it's just a matter of blending them properly.

The Observer: Best at local sports coverage

Schoolcraft women's coach Bill Tolstedt. "I got her to try out and picked her up right away. Wow, did it work out well for us."

It worked out well for Manteuffel, too.

"I wasn't going to play any more," said Manteuffel. "Then I did those soccer camps and did some training for them. Then someone talked to me about it and I thought, 'well . . . '"

It wasn't quite a done deal, though. First, it meant Manteuffel would have to go back to school full time. And she'd have to find a way to juggle work around classes and find someone to cover her shifts when she was unavailable. Those two proved to be relatively painless.

Then there was the little matter of not playing competitively in three seasons.

"She wasn't too terribly rusty, but there were skill sets that hadn't been used in competition for a while," said Tolstedt. "It was evident that she was talented and in discussions with her, she showed her maturity to want to play and to commit to it."

"I guess I was never really out of it," said Manteuffel. "I've always been good at sports. Sure, the level wasn't as good as in a game, but skill-wise, it was the same as in the camps and messing with the ball. Game-wise, I had to get used to it again."

On the field, it wound up coming back pretty easily. Off the field, there was some adjustment.

"I need to be busy, so playing wasn't tough," said Manteuffel. "But the toughest part was the schedule. It was non-stop, between school and work and soccer and soccer weekends away. And being told what to do. I haven't been told that in a while. You have to listen all the time and that was the hardest part about it."

She worked her way into the starting lineup and in the Ocelots' attack, flourished.

"One of the things we do differently than other schools is attack more out of our midfield than our front," said Tolstedt. "She played both positions for us and we had the rotation set up to keep her on the outside and rotate into the front. She was able to score from anywhere."

That she did. Manteuffel was second on the team with 20 goals scored and led the team with 68 points. And it didn't hurt that she was a team leader by example.

"She has a great personality in terms of supporting the team," said Tolstedt. "She was mature in her approach to the games and at practice. She wasn't a captain, but led by example. She's an assertive person who knows what she wants, but she also supported all those around her, regardless of who it was."

Next season's plans are still up in the air. Because she played at Eastern, her NCAA clock started and Tolstedt is trying to find out how much eligibility Manteuffel has left. Several schools are looking at her, and Division II, III or NAIA schools are an option. She could end up back at Schoolcraft for another season.

But whether she plays again or not, Manteuffel has had a season to remember.

"It's an accomplishment for sure," said Manteuffel. "If I can keep playing I will. It was fun, in any case. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON
BOARD PROCEEDINGS - NOVEMBER 21, 2000

A regular study session of the Charter Township of Canton Board of Trustees held Tuesday, November 21, 2000 at 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, Michigan 48188. Supervisor Yack called the meeting to order at 7:00 p.m.

ROLL CALL
Members Present: Bennett, Burdziak, LaJoy, McLaughlin, Shefferly, Yark
Members Absent: Kirchgatter
Staff Present: Director Santomauro

ADOPTION OF AGENDA
Motion by Bennett, support by LaJoy to adopt the agenda as presented. Motion carried unanimously.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY - PUBLIC SAFETY DEPARTMENT SURVEY
Jerome Boles is with the Regional Community Policing Institute at Michigan State University. Mr. Boles is the former Chief of Police at the Lansing Police Department, where he served as a police officer for thirty years. Jane P. White is the Associate Director of the National Center of Community Policing for the School of Criminal Justice at Michigan State University. She has served internationally and nationally as an active consultant to criminal justice organizations, including innumerable police departments on reorganization as it relates to community policing. Some of the benefits of community policing that were explained are: increases potential for impacting crime, fear of crime, and quality of life issue; coordinates and leverages resources from all sectors for more effective strategies; increases trust and understanding; strengthens organizational support, creates a network of assistance, guidance and technical support in problem-solving; and uses a more strategic approach to create long-term impact. The National Center for Community Policing was established twenty-seven (27) years ago at Michigan State University and is currently working with thirty-four (34) Departments statewide. The survey conducted for Canton Township, finds strong leadership within the department, job satisfaction ranks high within the department, and in nearly all of the points of the survey (approximately twenty), Canton Township's Public Safety Department ranks high.

COMMUNITY SURVEY
Director Santomauro explained that a community survey was conducted by the Public Safety Department to evaluate service, to prioritize service needs and to identify areas of development for the department. More than 90 percent answered yes to the question Do you feel safe in Canton? Not surprisingly, Canton residents overwhelmingly believe their police and fire departments are doing a good job. Approximately 85 percent of those surveyed said police service is good to excellent. Canton's fire department rates even higher with nearly 98 percent of residents saying it provides good to excellent service.

CRIME DOWN TURN
Director Santomauro explained that crime on the FBI's definition of part & offenses was evaluated. The part I offenses include Criminal Sexual Assault, Robbery Aggravated assault, Burglary, Larceny, Retail Fraud, Motor Vehicle Theft and Arson. The good news is the crime is down 27 percent of the Canton for the first eight months of 2000. The total number of part I offenses dropped from 1,748 in August 1999 to 1,265 during the same period this year. Director Santomauro explained that monitoring crime statistics helps the department stay in tune with what's happening in the community.

CRIME vs. TRAFFIC
Director Santomauro explained that a community, in general, views traffic stops as a positive sign from its police department. Neighborhoods enjoy the visibility that traffic stops bring to their area. Traffic law enforcement is an important element of community policing. It is for these reasons that the Canton Police Department places such a high emphasis on traffic stops. Money from tickets does not come back to the police department. The time, effort and money spent of traffic enforcement comes from various police department budgets, none of which are reimbursed from tickets written. Offices are encouraged in their efforts for traffic enforcement and as a result is in a safer community due to more public awareness, more criminal arrests, drug interdiction, and criminal investigations. Officers become better at what they do because of the frequent interactions with the public.

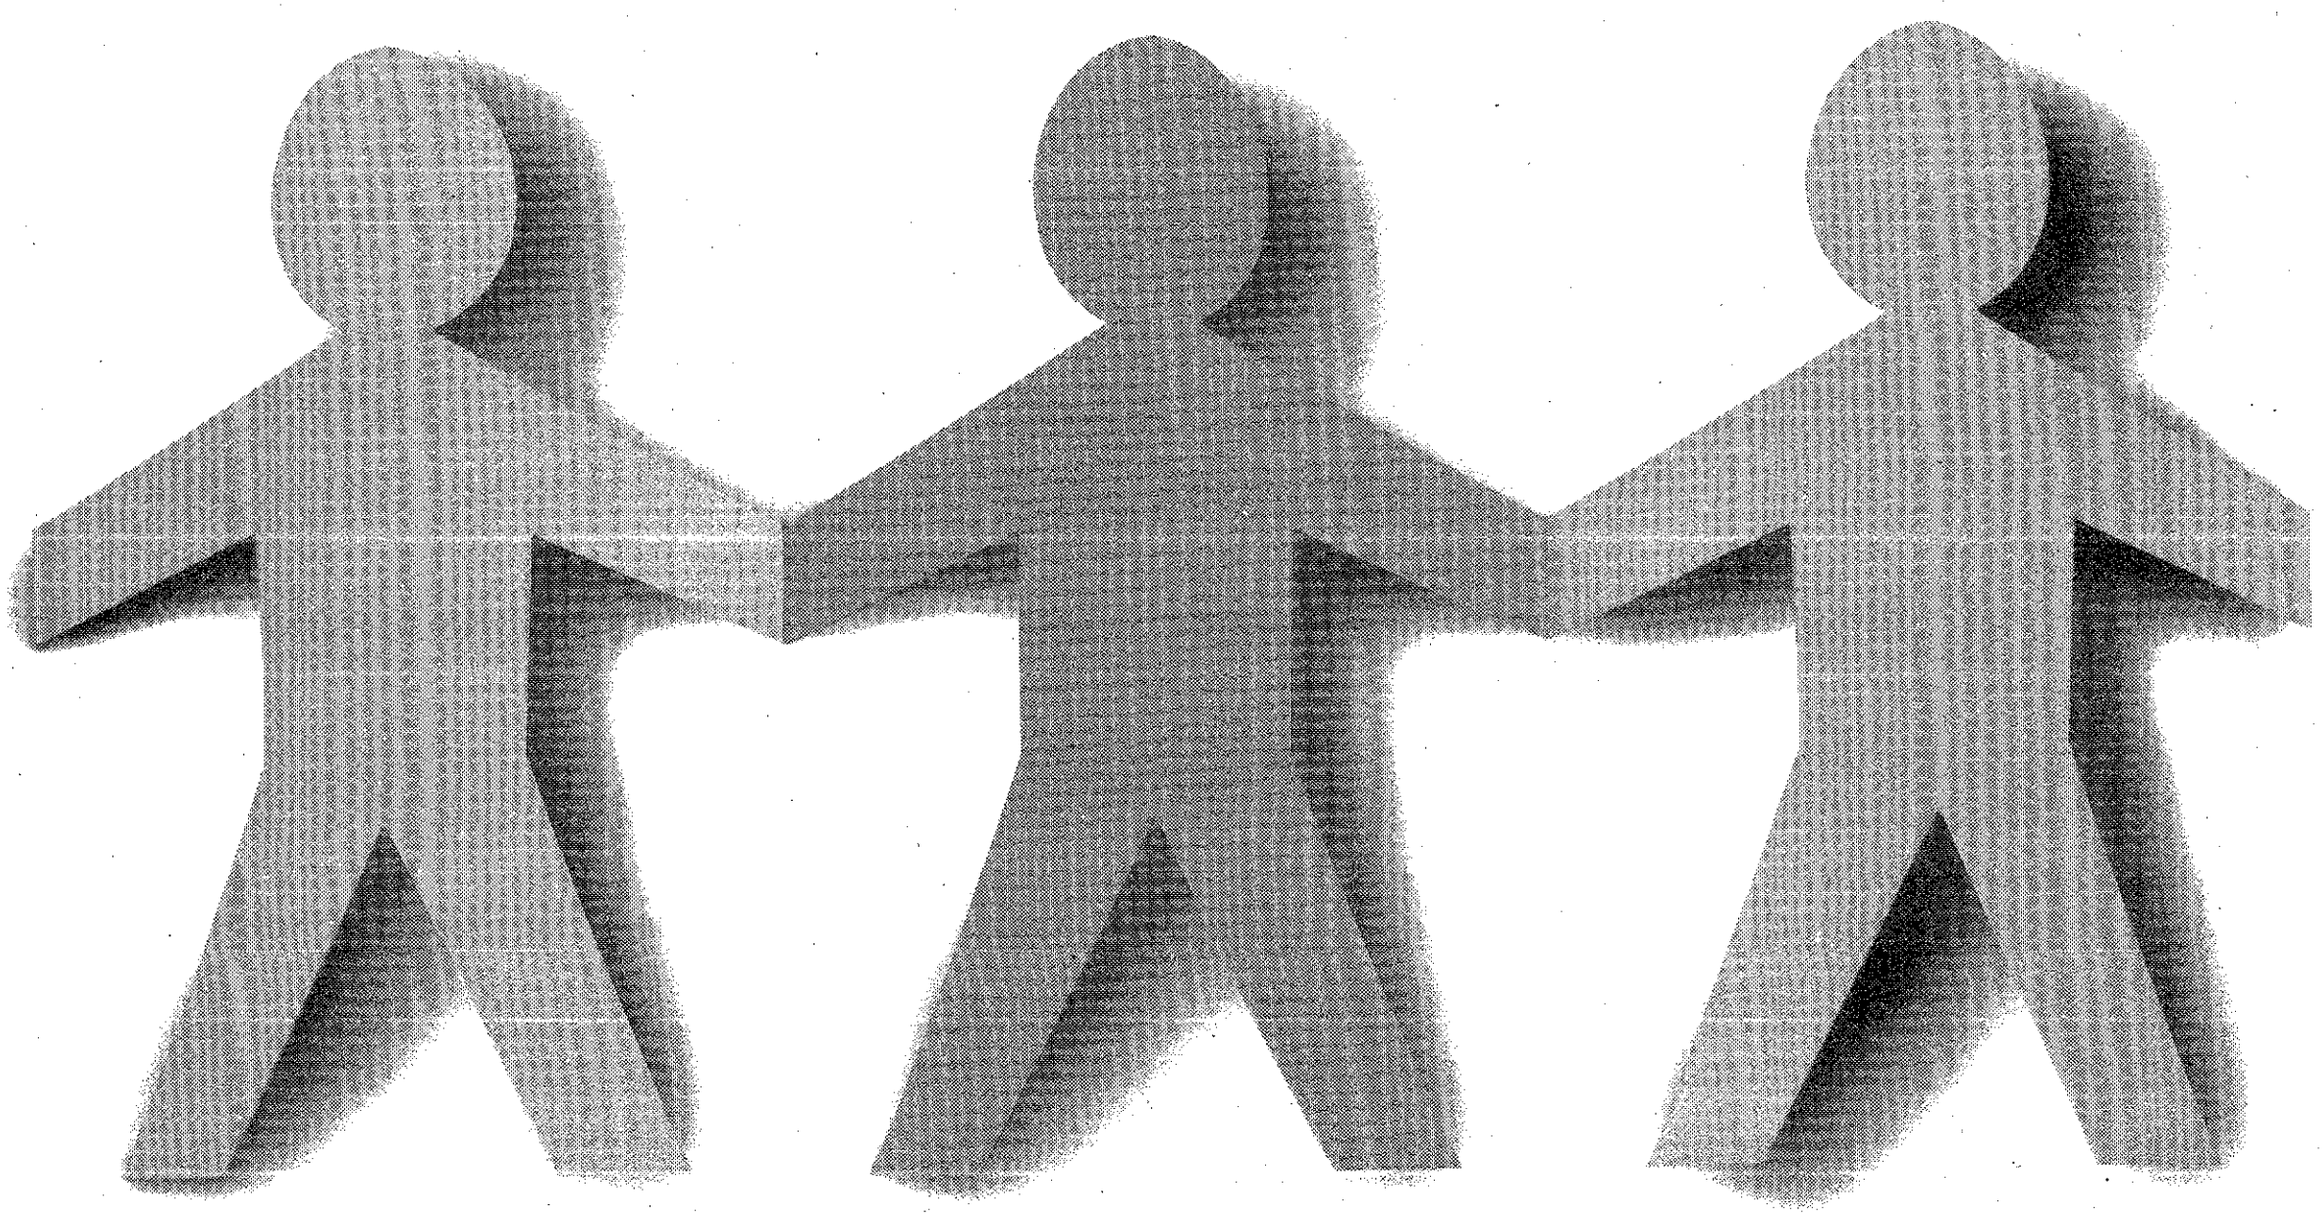

The above is a synopsis of the actions taken at the regular study session of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Canton. The full text of the approved minutes will be available following the next regular board meeting of November 28, 2000.

Grand Celebrations

Meadow Brook Hall presents scenes from 'A Charmed Life'

Celebrate the holiday season in a grand manner, by visiting a grand manor. The 30th annual Holiday Walk at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester, A Charmed Life: Celebrations in the Grand Manor, opens Friday, Dec. 1, and continues through Sunday, Dec. 10. Visitors will have glimpses into celebrations by the Dodge-Wilson family at the mansion.

Oakland University founders Matilda Dodge Wilson and Alfred Wilson and their family lived in the 110-room mansion from the late 1920s through 1967. A Charmed Life will present vignettes recalling special occasions, arranged among elegant holiday decorations.

It was a charmed life. Family members traveled around the world, and in the winter, they rode a sleigh on outings. Frank Sinatra and Tommy Dorsey entertained for Frances Dodge Johnson's 25th birthday in 1939.

Photos and souvenirs, and objects from the Meadow Brook collection that are rarely seen — including the sleigh, and Frances Dodge's 1938 wedding dress — will be on view. Tables will be set as they might have been for Christmas and New Year's parties.

For example, the dining room table will feature a centerpiece of packages, each with a string leading to a place setting. This is in keeping with the family tradition of each person sitting at the table pulling the string to get his or her package.

For the holidays, the mantel in Alfred Wilson's study is laden with greenery decorated in silver and gold angels, ornaments, strings and tassels, similar to a tree in the window.

The family had a New Year's Eve card party in this room. After dinner and toasting the New Year, guests would play bridge.

"They had enough friends and family over for four or five sets of bridge," said Maura Overland, curator of collections.

"Richard (one of the sons) thought the parties were so nice he would bring dates back for them."

The lower level games room features molding with a checkered pattern accented with images of chess pieces. It contains unusual furniture, including a chair with a bear figure forming the back and arms. Around a card table, which has recessed sections for the players' convenience, are chairs with pointed, cathedral-like arches.

For A Charmed Life, old Clue and Chinese Checker games are exhibited, along with a small table shuffleboard. The Christmas tree in the room is adorned with poinsettias, ribbons and holly.

Visitors will see the dress Matilda Dodge Wilson wore to Frances' debutante ball at the Book Cadillac Hotel in 1933. The event had a silver and dark theme; Matilda's silk and satin crepe dress is dark and features rhinestone accents.

(Frances' outfit included an orchid that had been dyed black. It was considered scandalous and shocked Detroit society, Overland said.)

Frances' bedroom is decorated in burgundy for the holidays. Among the decor are strings of glittering beads on a chandelier. As in other years, the decorating at the hall is done by Panache, designers from Georgia.

Hours for A Charmed Life: Celebrations in the Grand Manor are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily (except for Wednesday, Dec. 6), with last admittance 4:30 p.m. Hours Wednesday will be 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., with last admittance at 8:30 p.m.

The Meadow Brook Hall Gift Shop, with new and unusual items added for holiday shopping, will be open during the Holiday Walk hours.

Admission — which includes admission to the Knole Cottage playhouse, where Santa will greet visitors — is $12.50 for adults, $6 for ages 12 and under, $6 for OU affiliates with ID, $10 for groups of 20 or more.

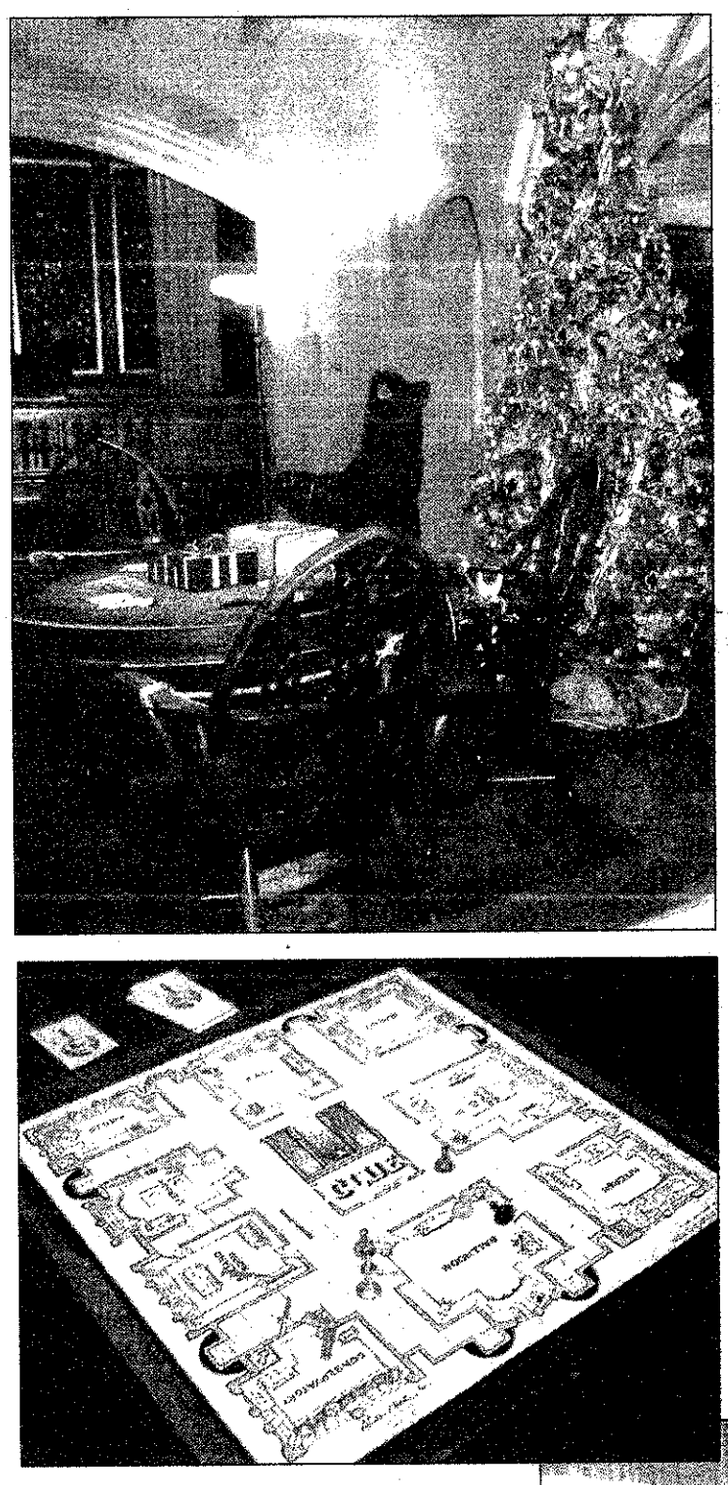

Black-tie holiday gala evenings are scheduled Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 and 2, with reception and touring 6:30 p.m. and dinner 8 p.m. An afterglow following dinner includes dancing. Cost per person is $200 for patron, $275 for benefactor. Advance reservations are required for the gala evenings.

Meadow Brook Hall is on the OU campus, off Adams, south of Walton. Call (248) 370-3140 or visit www.meadowbrookhall.org

Winter can be dangerous for pets

ASK THE VETS

DRS. MICHAEL AND TRACY JAFFE

Dear Doctors, My husband and I are having the same argument we have every fall. He says it's fine to let Molly, our 8-year-old golden retriever, live outdoors during the fall and winter. I think she should be allowed to stay indoors when it's cold and just go outdoors for her walks. He says "Just leave her outside, she'll be fine." Can you settle this disagreement for us?

The bottom line is: Keep your husband outdoors and let your dog inside. Since it's hunting season, how many of you wives would know the difference?

On a more serious note, as the temperature and snow start to fall, it's time to start to consider the hazards of winter and help acclimate your pets to the harsher climate.

Young, healthy arctic breed dogs, such as huskies, samoyeds and malamutes, generally tolerate the cold and wind better than most pets.

We don't think any pet, including your golden retriever, should be left outdoors during temperature extremes. Those especially at risk are very young or old animals, ones with medical problems, thin pets, and those with sparse or short hair coats.

During harsh weather, the only time your pet needs to be outdoors is for a few minutes at a time to get exercise and relieve herself. Some dogs enjoy romping in the snow and want to play outdoors longer.

Winterize your pet

If you can't tolerate your pet in the house during cold weather, please follow our advice to help "winterize" your pet. Your pet will partially acclimate herself by storing a bit more fat and developing a denser coat as she is exposed to cooler temperatures.

Provide approximately 25 percent more calories in the diet of an outdoor pet during winter because extra calories are needed to help generate the extra energy to keep warm. Indoor pets may not get as much exercise, so cut slightly back on their food.

Provide a well-insulated, windproof outdoor shelter for your pet. The house should be just large enough for your pet to stand up, turn around and comfortably lie down. If it is much larger it may not provide sufficient insulation.

The house should be dry and draft-free, and contain soft bedding. Straw on the floor of the dog or cat house also provides insulation. Any bedding or straw needs to be replaced when it becomes wet.

Electric heating pads are available to place on the bottom of the house, but they must be plugged in to an electrical outlet and could pose a fire hazard if left unattended. If possible, relocate your pet's house to the sunniest part of the yard.

You'll deprive your pet of water if the water bowl freezes. Place fresh warm water in the outdoor water bowl several times each day. A non-stainless-steel bowl works best.

Pet Supplies Plus carries an electric water bowl heater. If you have an electrical outlet on the outside of your house, this water bowl heater may work well for you.

Since cats seldom will use a "cat house," consider installing a small pet door in the garage or leave the garage door open a crack so your cat can escape the cold.

Under the hood

Cats tend to nestle under car hoods to warm themselves near the car engine. Pets can get injured if they are trapped under the hood when the engine is started.

Hit the hood of your car with your fist or honk your horn before you start your car, especially if your cat sleeps in the garage or if you park outdoors. This should startle a cat who has taken refuge under your hood, and it is hoped he'll scurry away.

If you have any doubts, open your car hood and check to make certain there aren't any cats under the hood before you turn on the engine.

After your pet spends time outdoors, inspect her feet for clumps of ice, snow, or ice-removal agents that might become embedded in the hair of the feet or in between the toe pads. These need to be removed with a moist towel because they can cause discomfort.

Your pet can get sick if it licks large volumes of ice-remover containing salt, magnesium or calcium chloride from his feet. Nontoxic ice remover is commercially available (Safe Paws®).

Some dogs prefer to be bundled up in a sweater or coat and waterproof booties when they go outdoors. Pet apparel constructed of fleece is our first choice for warmth. Your local pet supply store should carry a variety of styles and sizes.

Overexposure danger

Even a healthy pet with an outdoor shelter isn't immune from cold overexposure. An animal left outdoors in extremely cold weather, especially if he gets wet, can suffer from hypothermia and frostbite.

A hypothermic pet may shiver, act more sluggish and not move around as much. Hypothermia can be life-threatening. If you think your pet is hypothermic, bring him indoors and warm him with heated towels or blankets placed around his torso, head and extremities.

Inspect your pet's toes, tips of ears and tail, and external genitalia for coldness, pain, numbness or swelling, which is indicative of frostbite. Don't rub these frostbitten parts in an attempt to warm them — it may further damage the tissue.

Left untreated, frostbitten tissue will continue to die and gangrene may develop. Pets with hypothermia or frostbite need prompt medical attention.

If you live in a wooded, hunting region, please don't allow your pets or children to roam outdoors unless they are supervised and wear orange reflective collars and vests. Accidentally shooting a person or pet must be every hunter's nightmare.

Finally, keep your pets off the streets and snowmobile trails. Ice and snow make maneuvering a vehicle to avoid hitting an animal more difficult.

Keep pets from wandering onto ice-covered ponds or lakes. Your pet won't be able to determine whether the ice is thick enough to support his weight.

Antifreeze

When you add antifreeze to your car, wipe up any spills and place antifreeze containers out of the reach of both pets and children.

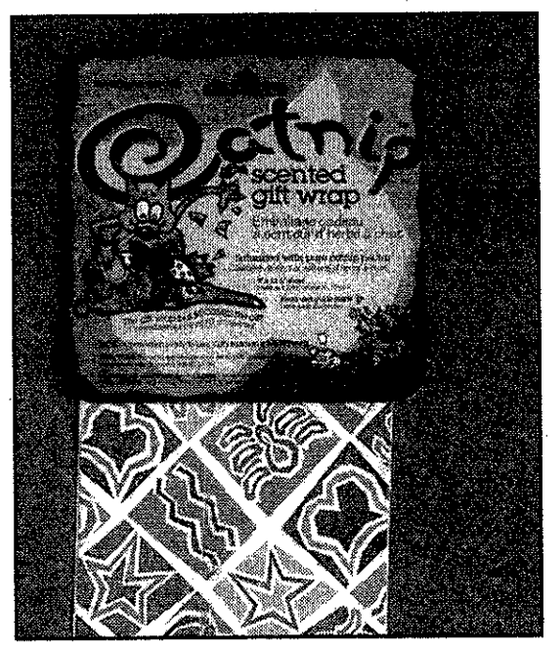

The sweet taste and bright color may entice a thirsty or inquisitive animal or child to ingest some. Just a few swallows of ethylene glycol-based antifreeze, depending on the person or pet's body weight, can be fatal.

If you suspect your pet or child has ingested antifreeze, contact your veterinarian or physician immediately.

We recommend the use of Sierra Antifreeze Coolant® or Prestone LowTox® Antifreeze because they are propylene glycol based and are significantly less toxic to pets, wildlife and children than ethylene glycol-based antifreezes.

Good luck convincing your husband to let Molly take refuge in the house this winter. We hope we have addressed the hazards of leaving pets outdoors when it's just too darned cold!

Purr-fect wrap: Catnip-scented paper by the Kong Company is perfect for wrapping gifts for your cat.

Catnip-scented paper makes purr-fect wrap

The Kong Company, maker of the Kong Toy, has introduced a catnip-scented gift wrap for the felines on your shopping list.

Using a specially developed process, Kong saturates its wrapping paper in fresh catnip nectar. The paper is then sealed in mylar to preserve its pure catnip scent.

Just one whiff of this unusual gift wrap will captivate cats, setting off a blissful chain of scratching, sniffing and rolling around in ecstasy.

"You can give your cat this wrapping paper on Christmas morning, and she'll keep herself amused without having to investigate everyone else's presents," said Joe Markham, a cat owner and president of the Kong Company.

"All of the cats who tested this for us, including my own pets, went wild over the gift wrap."

The Kong gift wrap has also been tested by veterinarians, and is completely safe for cats.

The suggested retail price of the paper is $3.49 for a 9-by-12-1/2-inch sheet. For more information, call the Kong Company at (303) 216-2626, or visit www.kongcompany.com

Only the freshest catnip plants are used in the gift wrap making process. Kong processes the catnip into nectar within a few hours after it is harvested to ensure that the wrapping paper has a field-fresh scent.

The scent of the fresh catnip on the paper is so rich and so real, it acts like a magnet to attract cats.

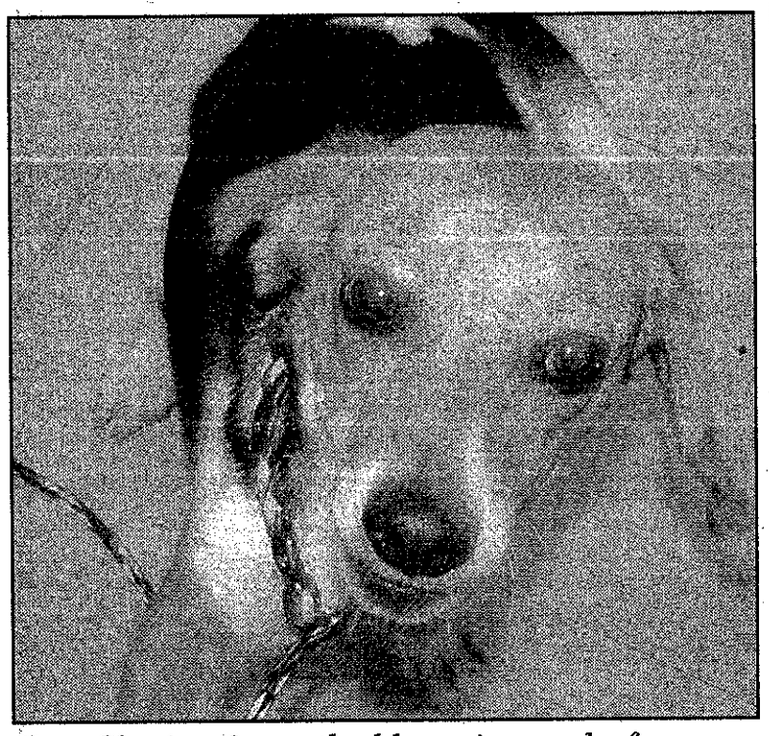

Markham advises owners not to put a Kong-wrapped present under the tree until they're ready to give it to their pet.

"There's no way you're going to surprise a pet with this paper, they know it's catnip," he said.

The new catnip gift wrap is available in two festive, contemporary patterns. Both feature vivid colors and eye-popping designs.

One of the patterns is built around a fish, butterfly and cat food theme. The other has lively abstract stars, kaleidoscopes and paws.

Follow these tips to prevent dog bites

Detroit is ranked eighth on the list of Top 10 Dog Bite Accident Cities, according to the U.S. Postal Service.

Dogs that lack proper socialization skills to people, and are not supervised or safely confined, are most likely to bite humans along with those that are not sterilized or receive little or no attention or handling.

Although particular breeds of dogs are often accused of being most likely to bite, other characteristics are better predictors of canine biting behavior. Dogs not spayed or neutered are three times more likely to bite. For this reason, the Michigan Humane Society suggests the first step you take to prevent your dog from biting is to have it spayed or neutered.

The Michigan Humane Society offers these tips to prevent dog bites:

- Always use caution around a dog you don't know.
- Respect a dog's space. Don't enter a strange yard or reach over a fence to pet a dog.
- Never surprise a dog, especially one that is eating, sleeping or caring for puppies.
- Dogs rarely attack without warning; potentially dangerous dogs may stare straight ahead with hair raised and teeth barred or growl, snarl or snap.
- If a dog threatens you, avoid eye contact, stay motionless and keep your hands at your side. Children should be taught to stand still and "be a tree" if approached by a strange dog.

Here's some advice on cleaning up after pets

Everyone gets caught up in the excitement of the holiday season, even our four-footed friends.

Sometimes the hustle and bustle of the holidays can lead our pets to have messy "accidents."

Cardinal Laboratories, maker of the Pet Botanics Stain & Odor Remover, says that sales of the popular cleaning solution pick up every December as more owners try to cover up Fido's foibles.

"The holidays are fun, but they can be rough on a dog's bladder," said Barbara Denzer, vice president of marketing for Cardinal Laboratories.

"A dog's routine is thrown during the Christmas season. He's left home alone a little longer than usual, then the next thing you know he has an accident on the living room rug – just before your guests arrive for a holiday party."

Denzer offers the following advice for cleaning up your pooch's problems:

- Gently wipe and blot liquid from the soiled area with paper towels or cloth before applying stain and odor remover.
- Don't rub stain and odor remover into the soiled area, since this will make the stain spread.
- Avoid exposing the soiled area to direct heat or sunlight, both of which will cause the stain to set in the floor-covering fabric.
- Get to the source of the odor by cleaning the pad under your carpet as well as the floor boards.
- Use products specifically formulated for removing pet stains and odors, rather than all-purpose household cleaners.

The Pet Botanics Stain & Odor Remover is an herbal, biodegradable stain and odor remover that offers a safe and effective, non-toxic alternative to chemical products. It is available at PETsMART.

HOME WORK

Fewer technicians available to service appliances

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

There are many problems in the major home appliance industry today.

New products are introduced only for consumers to find the appliances have serious flaws shortly after they're broken in. Many consumers make repeated calls so items like $1,000 washing machines can be serviced. They are frustrated.

In my end of the business, I know fewer appliance repair technicians are available. No one trains them anymore. Service companies also are finding it hard to expand the customer base.

In fact, the entire industry is short many thousands of service technicians which are desperately needed to take care of the increasing number of new products sold. I know friends who just can't simply hire a new technician because there are none to be found.

In the electronics industry, the situation is even more desperate. They tell me that in some areas of the country, consumers can't get service unless they carry-in their projection set or their HDTV. The waiting period keeps on getting longer for a service call.

For those of you who think that your product is new and covered under warranty, that warranty makes no difference.

Never before in the history of this country, have we seen such turmoil between the manufacturers and service agents. Many of the long-time agents are refusing to service certain products because they feel they are losing money doing so. They want to concentrate time and effort in making a profit and that can mean dealing only with cash-paying customers. What will happen in the future is becoming very uncertain.

The problems above are magnified by another important fact. These appliance and electronics repair companies are closing up a lot faster than any new ones opening up.

Who can blame them for getting out if all they do is go around in a circle? You own a business and you can't pay the bills, you might as well get out. What about the service technician who makes the least amount of money in all the service industries? He might as well get into another type of service industry, use his mechanical aptitude and make more money.

A lot of work is derived from taking care of manufacturers' warranties and the service companies have some issues with the reimbursement they receive. To list a few problems, payments do not equal regular out-of-warranty calls, reimbursements are delayed, and parts costs and shipping are not covered. The future does not look rosy.

Since I first wrote about this four years ago, it is much worse. In the years ahead, you will wait a long time when you need service, you will spend a lot more for that service and you will get sticker shock when you go shopping for new products that you must purchase.

The positive side to this story, if there is one, is that a manufacturer cannot afford putting a product into the American home that costs so much and ensure that it is "fail proof." It will be a better product, but cost more money. How this all comes about is the question. Stay tuned.

Joe Gagnon can be heard on Newstalk 760, WJR-AM, every Saturday and Sunday mornings. He is a past president of The Society of Consumer Professionals. His second book, "The Words and Wisdom of The Appliance Doctor" is available in book stores. His phone number is (313) 873-9789.

Blow away the heavy white stuff with well-maintained snow thrower

ASK DAD

HARRY JACHYM

If the predictors and early indications are correct, we'll see a greater than normal snowfall this year.

Haven't we heard this before? In any event, it's good to be prepared for it. Remember the January 1999 snowfall.

To start, be sure you own at least a snow shovel, and it's in good shape. Don't wait until the first big snowfall. They quickly disappear from the stores after that one.

Don't forget to get your ice melting products. Calcium chloride or ammonium sulfate are less corrosive than rock salt and easier on the lawn.

Now is a good time to think about buying a snow thrower. There are several sales going on and selections are still pretty good.

Don't be snowbound

Though these machines come in many sizes, shapes and prices, they can be basically broken into two types. The single-stage models, which have paddles or augers that pick up the snow and throw it in one action or two-stage models which pick up the snow with an auger, sending it to a blower. This blower throws the snow through the chute.

The size of the area you have to clear and how far the snow must be thrown will determine the correct one for you. A two-stage unit clears a wider path and throws the snow further than the single stage models, and they are self-propelled. They are larger, taking up more storage space, and usually more costly. They also contain more moving parts which can lead to higher maintenance costs.

■ Look over the entire unit for loose and broken parts and check the drive belt for wear. Any problem should be repaired now before the repair and part shops get busy.

Two-stage units are probably the right choice for you if your driveway is over 40-feet long, you have a corner or other large lot or you need to throw the snow further than 15 feet.

A single stage is fine for most snowfalls and lots in this area. Besides being less expensive to purchase, they store in a smaller space and maintenance is minimal.

Another consideration when purchasing either single or double stage throwers is electric starters. As I see more years pass me, I realize this option really isn't that expensive.

Keep it clean

If you already have a snowthrower, it's time to check that it's running right.

Frank Chapp, a vocational automotive technology instructor for a local school district, says preparing the snow thrower for winter should have started last spring. Chapp suggests keeping gas stabilizer such as Sta-Bil mixed with the gasoline, and making sure it is not just in the tank, but has been run into the carburetor.

As a matter of fact, it's a good idea to mix stabilizer with gasoline used in all your lawn and snow equipment.

Gasoline, especially when mixed with oil (for 2-cycle engines), begins to break down within a few weeks. Gasoline left in the carburetor between seasons is bound to cause trouble. Even if you ran your snow thrower dry at the end of last season, there is still a little in the carburetor. This is enough to cause difficult starting and poor operation.

Chapp also suggests protecting the upper cylinder with fogging oil (available at most small engine repair shops) and changing the crankcase oil before storage. If you didn't change the oil in the spring, do it now.

Check the drive belt

Check the wiper blade and paddles for wear and proper operation. Look over the entire unit for loose and broken parts and check the drive belt for wear. Any problem should be repaired now before the repair and part shops get busy.

Try starting the snow thrower. If it's difficult to start or won't keep running once started, the problem is often caused by the spark plug. You can check it for wear and fouling, but why not just replace it?

The frustration of trying to operate the snowthrower on a worn or fouled plug, especially on a two-cycle engine isn't worth the $2 or $3 a new one will cost.

Once the snow thrower is up and running, don't forget to winterize your lawnmower and other gas lawn equipment (see above). If you have a power washer, along with winterizing the engine, drain the pump or add anti-freeze according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

Dates set for home, garden shows

The Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan (BIA) has announced the dates of its home and garden shows for 2001.

"By bringing everything together under one roof, our shows are redefining how many homeowners do their shopping," said Dave Kellett Sr., president of BIA and of Kellett Construction Company of Bloomfield Hills.

BIA is the non-profit sponsor of the shows.

BIA will sponsor:

■ the ninth annual Home Improvement Show Feb. 1-4 at the Novi Expo Center

■ The Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan will sponsor the ninth annual Home Improvement Show Feb. 1-4.

■ the fourth annual Macomb Home Improvement Show Feb. 16-18 at the Macomb Sports & Expo Center in Warren

■ the 83rd annual GMC Builders Home & Detroit Flower Show March 22-25 at the Cobo Conference-Exhibition Center

■ the fifth annual Spring Home & Garden Show April 5-8 at the Novi Expo Center

■ the ninth annual Fall Remodeling and Furniture Show Oct. 11-14 at the Novi Expo Center.

The shows will feature advice, ideas and innovations from exhibitors displaying products and services for the home and garden.

An array of experts and celebrities will share their knowledge to help attendees achieve their home and gardening goals.

■ Professional tile setters use a wet saw to cut tough glazed ceramic tile, marble and stone. The motorized saw is equipped with a diamond-abrasive blade, sliding table and water pump that cools the blade as it cuts.

The Craftsman Soft-Wire Cable Cutter ($20, Model 42758) is designed for slicing through copper and aluminum electrical wiring as well as the tough plastic insulation that surrounds them.

Unlike most wire cutters, which rely on brute strength, this tool features a compound-leverage mechanism that has a 12-to-1 power ratio. Translation: It exerts 12 times more force than a traditional wire cutter, which reduces hand cramps and wrist strain.

Professional tile setters use a wet saw to cut tough glazed ceramic tile, marble and stone. The motorized saw is equipped with a diamond-abrasive blade, sliding table and water pump that cools the blade as it cuts.

Wet saws make setting tile much easier, but they cost a prohibitive $1,000 to $2,000. If you have a small area to tile, the trick is to rent a wet saw for $50 to $65 a day. But if your project is a lot bigger, you might consider purchasing Porter-Cable's new Model 1500 Tile Saw ($299), an affordable, pro-quality wet saw. It has a 7.4-amp motor and 7-inch diamond blade for crosscutting tile up to 14 inches square. It can also slice tiles on the diagonal up to 10 inches square.

Think all utility knives are the same? The new Instant Change Utility Knife ($10, Model 10-788) from Stanley has three key features that make it different.

Blade changes take about 10 seconds. Press the yellow button on the side of the tool, pull out the old blade, insert a new one and release the button.

New blades are conveniently stored in a swing-out magazine molded into the handle. No more screws to remove and lose. Finally, the knife is equipped with a handy cord cutter that lets you cut string while the blade is safely retracted into the handle.

AR Kramer now open in Canton

The AR Kramer Flooring Co. has opened a store in Canton.

AR Kramer opened a new Dupont Flooring Center at 42170 Ford Road, just east of Lilley in early November.

This showroom is what company officials call the exclusive source for DuPont Stainmaster Ultra Life carpet. As a DuPont Flooring Center, the showroom represents an innovative approach to carpet shopping. Carpet samples are arranged in easy-to-shop, well-lighted display racks, segmented by three Stainmaster brands: DuPont Stainmaster carpet, Dupont Stainmaster Xtra Life and Dupont Stainmaster Ultra Life carpet.

Now celebrating its 75th anniversary, the AR Kramer Co. opened its first showroom in Detroit in 1925. Today a third generation of the Kramer family carries on the tradition of offering its customers products and service.

Have friends over for a holiday cleanup party

INVITING IDEAS

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

You made it through Thanksgiving. Perhaps the holiday meal was out at a restaurant or at someone else's abode, but Christmas dinner is designated as yours. Time to get out the dustbin and start preparing for the big dinner plans.

Now is the perfect time to get organized, clean out the pantry, or set up an area designed to fit your holiday needs — a real party planning central.

And why do it alone? Gather some close friends and do it as a group project. Friends always come through when there is a need (if you have the right friends!).

Here is the perfect time to get them committed, but make it a fun experience and provide lunch and food breaks throughout the day.

Begin your cleanup party with calls for help. Don't have too many over unless your house is huge. Three or four is the perfect number.

Provide your helpers with aprons, paint smocks or some old XL shirts (all of which you aren't worried about getting dirty or having paint spill on them).

Have a plan ahead of time. Don't plan it out when guests (helpers) arrive, although they may have some great suggestions.

Have ready a big pot of coffee or tea, or a cooler filled with bottled water, juice and pop.

Make some submarine sandwiches ahead of time. It is good to have some vegetarian options available for those who want to keep it light while working. Have sandwiches wrapped in wax paper or restaurant tissue for easy handling, and no added stuff to wash.

Also ahead of time, bag up some sticks of fresh veggies (individual bags would be ideal), and have some individual snack bags of snack foods (potato chips, corn chips, vegetable chips or pretzels) to accompany your submarine sandwiches.

If your particular cleanup party involves organization, a great field trip with the flock would be to such places as Organized Living, Bed, Bath and Beyond, Linens and More, Meijer household department. You get the idea.

Your guests may have some great ideas for reorganizing, and seeing the options available at these locations helps enormously.

If you are planning on painting a room, have paint, tarps or drop cloths, rollers, paint pans and brushes on hand before helpers arrive. There's something not fun about going out and getting this stuff!

Pick up some extra large Baggies (2-gallon and 2-1/2-gallon are available at Meijer and Kmart, respectively). They are wonderful for covering baking equipment, serving pieces and foodstuffs.

In my room-size pantry, I have some restaurant shelving that holds large plastic containers. These lidded plastic boxes are labeled and filled with bagged equipment. Each container is organized with certain items that are used in conjunction with one another, and are labeled (with a labeling machine) for easy viewing.

A little planning makes for great storage and easy entertaining. Include these friends in the labor. Do feed them while they are there, then invite them for a holiday party to enjoy the real fruits of their labor.

Some ideas for great submarine sandwich combinations at work time:

- Traditional Italian meat and cheese sub with a pesto spread instead of mustard or Italian dressing
- Leftover turkey or chicken sandwiches with sun-dried tomatoes, Romaine lettuce and a black olive pesto
- Roasted vegetables layered with assorted cheeses, topped with shredded lettuce and some balsamic vinaigrette
- Sliced roast beef topped with an herb mayonnaise (with or without cheese)
- Crisp bacon, Romaine lettuce and tomato slices, drizzled with mayo-mustard sauce
- Sliced Havarti cheese, lettuce shreds and thin slices of mango, apple or crisp pears, topped with a drizzle of fruity vinaigrette

Learn how to cook dishes for holidays at Novi show

Turkey, ham, cakes and cookies, fancy appetizers and feel-good foods sound like a holiday feast in the making.

It's all part of the Michigan Christmas Show, which runs Thursday-Sunday, Nov. 30- Dec. 3, at the Novi Expo Center.

During the show's four days, more than two dozen cooking programs are scheduled for the stage sponsored by Honey Baked Ham Co.

Kathy Stark, a cooking instructor and professional chef, will demonstrate how to cook the perfect holiday ham or turkey.

Stark has a holiday menu planned, along with a soup sampler, quick and elegant holiday appetizers and what she calls "twice is nice." You may call them leftovers.

Maureen Kimmel of the Pampered Chef demonstrates easy and simple (and prize-winning) luscious desserts. Chef Jeff Evans of Steve & Rocky's in Novi will cook up some holiday surprises. You'll learn the real secrets of cake decorating from Rhoda Sheridan at Lechter's Housewares.

Hour Detroit magazine is bringing Chef Evans, and chefs from the Epoch Group and The Essence of Northville. Karie Lee Shull, the Homemade Gourmet, will have time-saving tips for the cooking season ahead.

Small shops will be set up with crafts, gourmet foods, hot-piping strudel, gifts for everyone on your list and entertainment. The show is sponsored by Fox-2 News.

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Sunday. Admission is $7 for adults and $4 for children 6-12. Children six and under, excluding groups, are free.

A Farmer Jack bonus card will get $1 off admission. Discount coupons are available at Honey Baked Ham and Einstein Bagel stores.

CREATIVE LIVING

Check used equipment carefully before buying

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

Each year, millions of new cameras, lenses and photo accessories are sold. An almost equal number of used items are either exchanged, sold privately, buried in a drawer or discarded.

Much of this old equipment is obsolete or damaged beyond repair. But some of it can be found hardly used and in excellent condition. Substantial savings can be made and a worthy piece of equipment added to your photo gear if you can distinguish between bargains and junk.

The best sources for finding used equipment are camera stores, classified ads and local photo flea markets.

With basic items such as tripods, flash units and darkroom accessories (trays, measuring cups, tongs, etc.), very little can go wrong, so buying them is a pretty safe bet. But with cameras and lenses, you need to be more cautious and check them out closely. Here's how:

First, carefully inspect the exterior of that used camera you're interested in. A lot can be learned from its general condition.

Some wear and tear is normal, such as worn corners and marks from neck-strap fittings. Just be sure the wear isn't excessive.

Be wary of dents, large scratches and especially distortion of the camera body. These indicate a dropped or abused camera and serious damage could be concealed inside.

Look through the viewfinder to ensure that focusing devices, readouts and so on are all clearly visible.

Be sure to check the battery compartment for any damage from old, corroded batteries. Wind the advance lever and snap the shutter at all speeds. It should operate smoothly down the scale.

Open the camera back and check for cleanliness. Then set the shutter at "B" and watch through the opened camera back as the shutter closes. There should be no sluggishness.

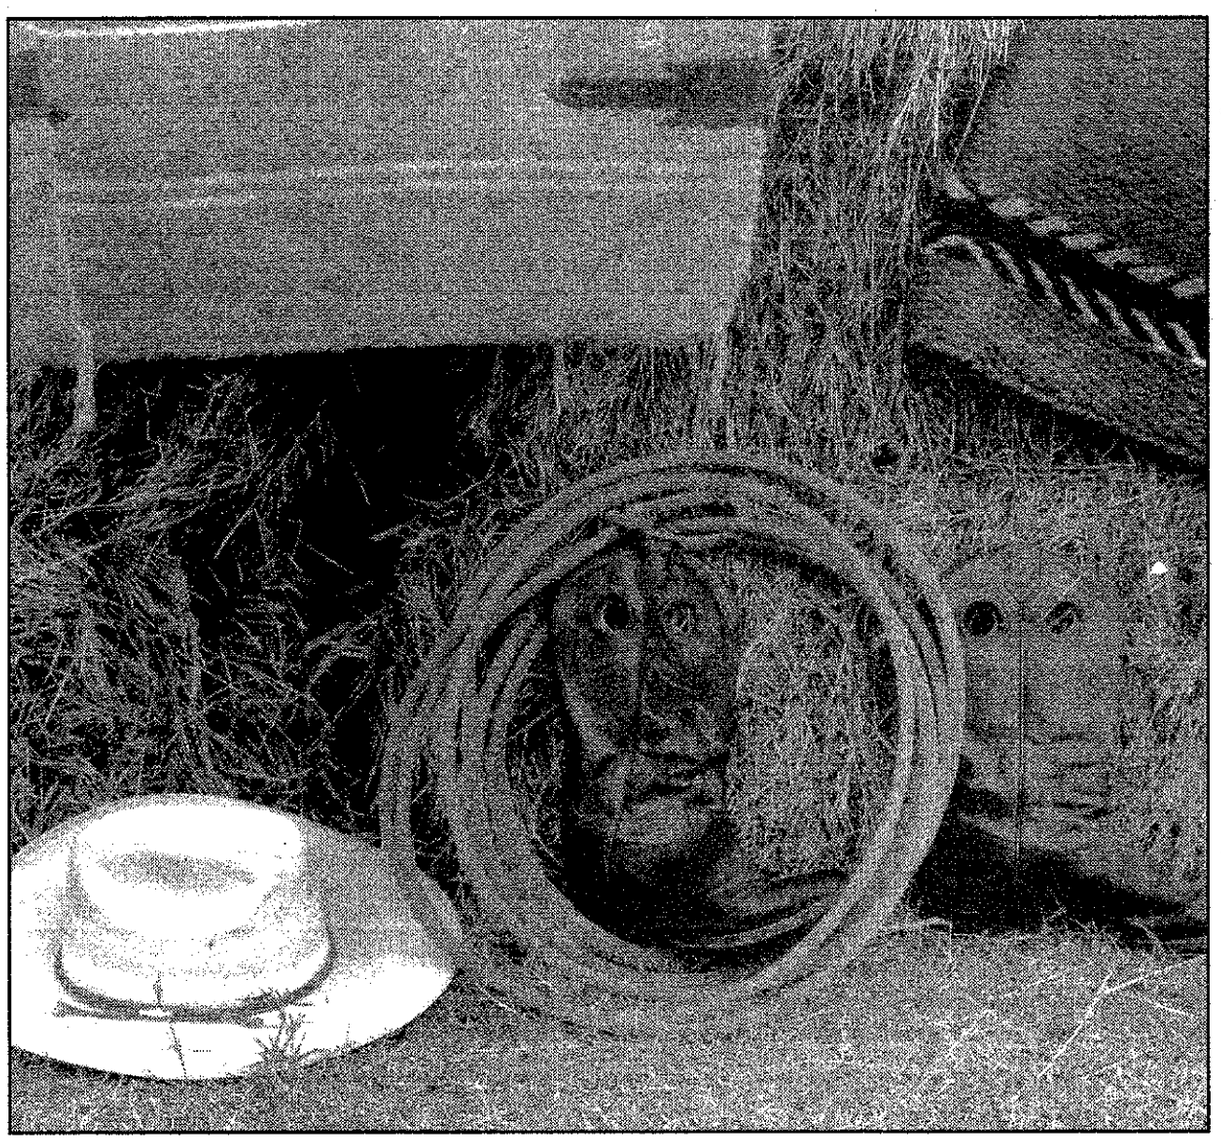

At different ASA settings, check the meter out by using a spare or friend's camera as a reference. Readings should be within one-half stop.

Finally, focus at infinity and look through the viewfinder. Distant objects should be clearly in focus. If not, the lens mount, mirror or focusing screen may be out of alignment.

Good lenses can be terrific bargains. You may be able to pick up a top-quality used lens at the same price, or lower, as a new but inferior model. Even at the same price, you're better off with the used lens. Everything should operate smoothly on the lens. It should focus easily and the glass should be free from scratches.

Buying from a distant seller when you can't check out the equipment can be risky indeed. Better to buy locally where you can ensure that your new piece of used equipment will serve you well.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then 111, then N-A-G-L-E-R. His fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Austin power: No problem with used equipment here. A used lens performed perfectly for Monte Nagler in his photograph of this cowboy "still life" in Austin, Texas.

Woodworking show visits Novi again

Don't miss the one-stop shop for woodworkers when the Metro Detroit Woodworking Show returns to the Novi Expo Center.

Show hours are noon-7 p.m. Friday, Dec. 8; 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 9, and 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 10. Admission to the show is $9 for adults, with children 12 and under free. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Woodworkers, home builders, woodturners and carvers, hobbyists and professionals can see the newest in hand tools, power tools, machinery and supplies.

The event features more than 100 different manufacturers displaying and demonstrating woodworking, turning, carving, finishing materials and supplies. The show gives attendees the luxury of shopping for all their workshop needs — home or commercial — all under one roof, at discount prices.

Woodworkers can ask questions, improve skills and interact with industry authors, instructors and master craftsmen at seminars and floor demonstrations presented by Fine Woodworking magazine and the Marc Adams' School of Woodworking.

Visit the Masters' Stage and see demonstrations by Marc Adams and Michael Fortune on a variety of woodworking techniques. They will also answer questions and show woodworkers how to correct common mistakes. Each session will last 30-60 minutes and takes place on the show floor. Adams and Fortune, along with Bill Hull and Jeff Jewitt, will be conducting a series of in-depth, three-hour seminars presented by Fine Woodworking magazine and the Marc Adams School of Woodworking.

Sessions include basic woodworking, bending wood, bandsaw and planer jigs, basic veneering, decorative veneering, coloring wood and hand-applied finishes.

Full-day seminars are $95 and three-hour seminars are $60. Advance seminar registration includes a free weekend pass to the show ($12 value) and can be charged by calling (800) 826-8257.

The Michigan Woodworkers Guild will be present to display members' work and collections, demonstrate skills, share tips and answer questions.

All attendees will be eligible to enter a prize drawing for a new Jet, Performax, Powermatic shop valued at up to $7,500.

For information, visit www.thewoodshows.com or call (800) 826-8257.

DESIGN CALENDAR

■ All generations are invited to celebrate the season at a holiday Victorian dessert tea 1:30-3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 6, at the Costick Center, 28600 11 Mile in Farmington Hills. Tickets are $10 and available at the center; they won't be sold Wednesday. The program will be "A Civil War Holiday," presented by Pamela Yockey, who collects and restores historical gowns. Seasonal music, poinsettias, an elaborate gingerbread castle, desserts catered by Mary Denning's Cake Shoppe and an array of teas will be featured. The tea is sponsored by the Farmington Hills Senior Adult Division and Waltonwoods at 12 Oaks. Call (248) 473-1830 for more information.

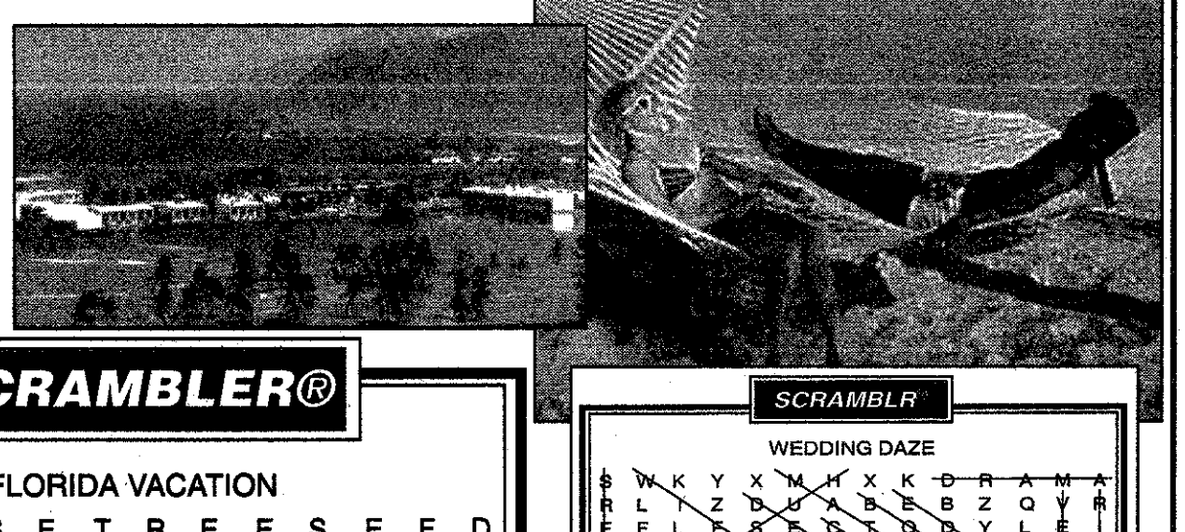

■ Children of all ages will enjoy visiting with Stumpy the Talking Christmas Tree, a miniature tree that responds to questions and has ideas of his own to share, 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 3, at Art Van Furniture, 29905 Seven Mile in Livonia. A friendly elf will be with Stumpy to greet youngsters and pass out gifts. Call (248) 478-8870.

■ A holiday food drive continues through Sunday, Dec. 17, at all Art Van Furniture stores. Help the hungry by bringing in non-perishable food items (boxed and canned meals, canned vegetables, canned fruits, powdered milk, canned soup and boxed cereal).

GARDENING

Books highlight gardens, from cottage to greenhouse

GARDEN SPOT

MARTY FIGLEY

This is a busy time of year, but gardeners can always find some time to make that green thumb a little greener.

Everything you may want to know is included in Creating a Cottage Garden in North America, Stephen Westcott-Gratton ($29.95, Fulcrum).

The author explains how to transform an existing landscape as well as what to do when starting from scratch. He stresses the use of native plants and warns that a little "messiness" is to be expected, that straight lines and rigid plantings aren't suitable.

The idea is to have a garden that has interest throughout the season with all types of plants — flowers as well as vegetables and trees that provide food. By following Westcott-Gratton's guidelines, every gardener can be successful with cottage gardening. Much good information.

Also from Fulcrum, a revised and expanded edition of Greenhouse Gardener's Companion, Shane Smith ($21.95, soft), is now available. It features a new section on orchids, an expanded section on natural disease and pest control, plus more.

You will learn how to grow flowers and food in a greenhouse or sunspace, and how to use greenhouse principles in a sunny room as well as to grow all manner of crops, propagate, and properly take care of problems when they arise. The nitty-gritty of greenhouse construction and the technicalities that make everything work is fascinating.

Garden guides

You've seen him on TV, now you can have Ainsley Harriott's Meals in Minutes ($19.95, DK), a cookbook that will prove good food doesn't need to take long to prepare.

Each of the 100 recipes has a snappy title, such as "Teasing Turkey Pita Pockets," "Pasta Cream Bean Dream" and "Merry Berry Christmas Crumble." Harriott has thoughtfully included tips for saving time, necessary ingredients for the pantry and equipment to make cooking easier (buy the best).

The Plantfinder's Guide to Garden Ferns, Martin Rickard ($34.95, Timber Press), is just the ticket for those who grow, or wish to grow, these versatile plants.

Rickard discusses their use for every garden condition — tender and hardy, large and small, robust and filmy, and the many shapes and colors of the lovely fronds. It is fascinating to learn the history of ferns (collectors would go to great lengths to find choice specimens), and the photographs show how versatile they can be.

The majority of the book describes the many ferns now in cultivation, and also features Rickard's personal observations of the species and cultivars that he has grown.

A little book, Blue Mountain: A Spiritual Anthology Celebrating the Earth, F. Lynne Bachleda ($15.95, paper, Menasha Ridge Press, distributed by Globe Piquot Press), is a collection of nature writings of such people as Georgia O'Keefe ("When you take a flower in your hands and really look at it, it's your world for the moment. I want to give that world to someone else. I want them to see it whether they want to or not."), plus R. Carson, Mohammed, A. Dillard, Thoreau and others; poems, proverbs, lyrics, essays and fiction passages.

"The book has seven guideposts for a spiritual journey ... that originates with a longing that might also feel like loneliness — a need or desire to reconnect with the vitality and possibilities offered by nature," Bachleda says.

Facts not Fear, Michael Sanera and Jane Shaw ($14.95, paper, plus $4 shipping and handling; write Regnery Publishing Inc., Dept. 194, 1 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C., 20001), is "a parents' guide to teaching children about the environment."

The book claims to "provide parents and teachers accurate information to address children's concerns about the health of our planet.

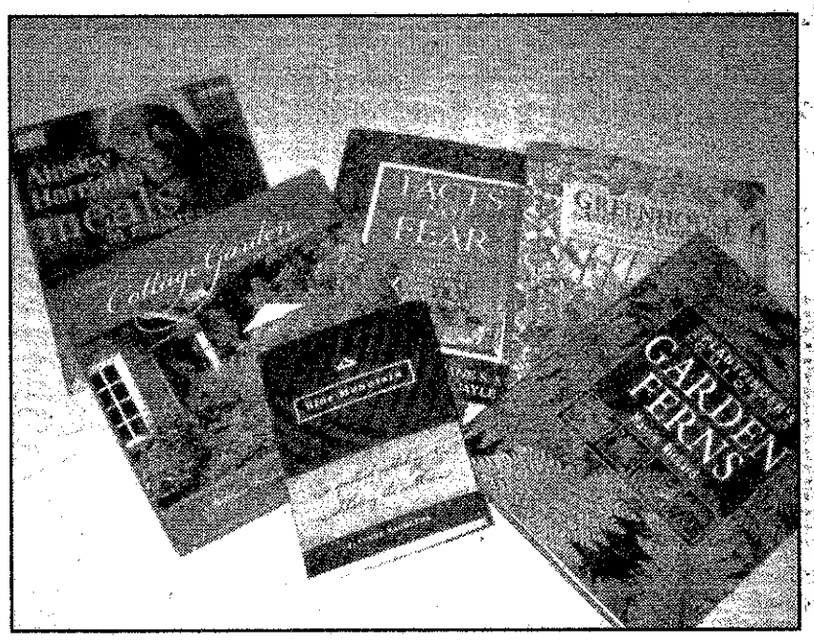

"It gives balanced attention to environmental issues that plague our generation ... It will show through simple activities with children how you can set the environmental record straight."

Sanera is the director of the Center for Environmental Education Research, a division of The Claremont Institute; Shaw is a senior associate of the Political Economy Research Center, a non-profit institute that studies market approaches to environmental problems.

From the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Hummingbird Gardens: Turning Your Yard Into Hummingbird Heaven ($9.95), shows how to entice these birds to your garden and how to encourage them to stay a while.

It also offers information about appropriate hummingbird plants for each section of the country, and a section illustrating the 18 species of hummingbirds in the United States and Canada, as well as four species that are rare here. All pertinent information about each bird is included.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then 111, then 3445. Her fax number is (248) 644-1314.

GARDEN CLUBS

LIVONIA

The Livonia Garden Club will hold its annual "Fresh Greens Table Arrangement" workshop at the Churchill High School cafeteria at 9:30-11:30 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 2. This year's holiday arrangement will feature a hurricane candle set amongst a bed of various crisp, fresh pine boughs embellished with gold ribbons. Register through Livonia Public Schools Community Education Department. Cost is $22 for Livonia residents and $27 for non-residents. All instructions and supplies are included. Bring your own pruners and scissors. Early registration is encouraged as this annual event is usually a sellout. Refreshments are included and a Ways and Means table of gift ideas will be available for purchase. This annual event is a major fund-raiser for the Livonia Garden Club.

Also, on Saturday, Dec. 9, members of Livonia Garden Club, with the help of local teens, create holiday arrangements for Angela Hospice patients.

HERBS DISCUSSED

An evening herb study group will meet 7-9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 4, to share herb-related crafts. Bring any type of craft idea to share, using herbs. You may make a brief presentation to the group, explaining your craft or simply show a sample of the finished project. The group will meet in Room 125 at Matthaei Botanical Gardens, 1800 Dixboro Road in Ann Arbor. For further information about the program or membership, please call (734) 761-1029 or e-mail sburek@provide.net.

WINTER BIRDS

Matthaei has the potential for hosting a number of birds which overwinter in southeastern Michigan. Expect common and uncommon local birds. The session begins at 8 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 9, and lasts until noon. It starts with an inside lecture and moves outside. Bring binoculars, warm outdoor clothing and warm boots. Participants will adjourn to a local eatery for lunch and discussion. For information, call (734) 998-7061,

INDOOR BONSAI

Learn the ancient art of bonsai on five Sundays in January and February from 2-4:30 p.m. Classes will be a mix of lecture and hands-on experience as students will given time to create their own indoor bonsai. Students are encouraged to bring their own plants. Plants and pots will be available for purchase.For information, call (734) 998-7061,

Apply now for master gardener classes

The Michigan State University Extension program in Wayne County will offer classes in January for Wayne County residents interested in becoming master gardeners.

The Michigan Master Gardener program is a horticulture education and volunteer leader training program offered by MSU Extension in Michigan counties. The volunteers distribute home gardening information to Michigan residents.

Classes are scheduled 6-10 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 9, at the Wayne County Extension and Education Center, 5454 Venoy in Wayne and 9 a.m.-1 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 13, at the Wayne County MSU Extension Office, 640 Temple (sixth floor), in Detroit.

All classes will be taught for 12 consecutive weeks, covering the following topics: introduction to plant science, flower gardening, indoor plants and their care, integrated pest management, vegetable gardening and woody ornamentals. Also included are soils for plant growth, household pests and wildlife, lawn establishment and care, growing backyard fruit, diagnosing plant problems and composting and vermiculture.

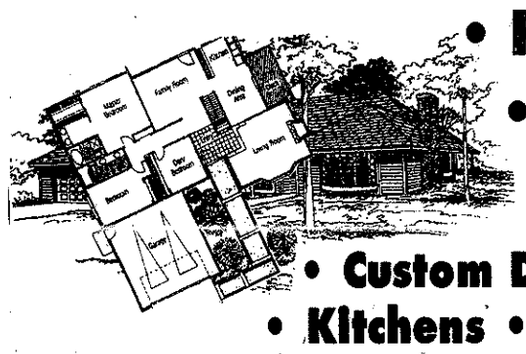

To obtain certification, master gardeners must pass weekly quizes, the final examination and volunteer 40 hours within one year of completing the class to help MSU Extension educate the public in the horticulture field.

Fees are $200 for a Wayne County resident or $240 for others. Two members of the same household can enroll in the class and fees are $300 for both. A horticulture professional, paying by a business check, will be charged $210.

Applications for the 2001 Master Gardener class can be picked up at the Wayne County MSU Extension office at 640 Temple (sixth floor), in Detroit from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. To have an application mailed to your home, call Monica Van Buren or Kristine Hahn at (313) 833-3417 during the same hours.

Wayne County MSU Extension must receive completed applications and a check for the entire course fee made payable to MSU Extension by Friday, Dec. 8.

Add soft light to bathroom with blinds

INTERIORS

The increasing luxuriousness of the American bathroom has made it an oasis of escape from the stress of the outside world – and sometimes from the rest of the house as well.

It's no longer unusual to see bathrooms outfitted with such amenities as a whirlpool, steam room or even a complete workout facility. It's also no surprise that the style and décor of bathrooms are now given as much importance as other areas of the home.

When it comes to design trends in today's opulent bathrooms, there's one word on everyone's lips: windows.

Windows and skylights are what people want most in their newly built or remodeled bathrooms, according to the National Kitchen & Bath Association's latest design trends survey. Just like the bathrooms they illuminate, these windows are bigger and bolder than ever.

"It's often the case that these prominent windows face the street, so homeowners are looking for stylish window coverings that let in the outdoor light, while providing privacy." says Stephanie Witt, a certified bath designer in Grand Rapids, Mich., and NKBA president.

These two essential bathroom design elements can be presented in a single shade called Duette Duolite, where two honeycomb fabrics are combined to provide total flexibility in light control.

For a window overlooking the tub, for example, one could make the top section of sheer fabric and the bottom section of opaque fabric to enjoy the daylight.

Often, there is too much daylight flooding the bathroom, so light control becomes an important design factor. A new remedy for this problem is Serenette SoftFold Shadings from Hunter Douglas. This is a light-diffusing window ensemble with a tailored, drapery look and privacy and light control options. Serenette Shadings feature a patented 4-1/4-inch wide 100 percent fabric SoftFold louver that diffuses and softens light through its unique teardrop shape.

Seamless and contoured for a full and graceful appearance, the louvers rotate for varying degrees of light control.

"I find that the huge windows of today's bathrooms need softening," says Witt. "Window coverings and shades create that essential soft touch." Vignette window shadings can achieve that desired effect. Featuring layers of gently contoured fabric folds that overlap one another like billowy waves, Vignette shadings combine the softness associated with fine custom draperies with the ease, practicality and durability of shades. Vignette shadings come in a bevy of rich woven fabrics and over 100 designer colors.

As for color in bathrooms, the NKBA survey found that white is still the most popular color. However, Witt points out that many find an entirely white bathroom too sterile. "An excellent way to give a white bathroom flair," she suggests, "is to use window coverings as an accent color."

Remembrance window shades from Hunter Douglas come in dozens of fabrics and hues. They create a dramatic effect when set against an all-white interior. They also offer practical features such as a heavy-duty clutch roller system and a wrapped bottom rail with balance and weight adjustment.

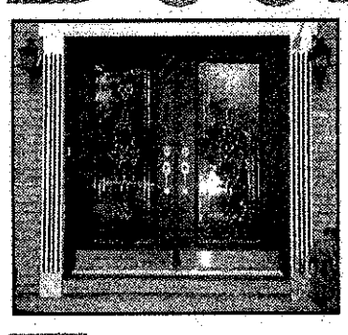

For many Americans, the bathroom is that special room where they can relax and pamper themselves. Windows give it that essential dramatic aura.

America's Only Full Mattress Warranty
Most sets of Thomasville bedding come with a 20-year non-prorated full warranty.

20 YEAR Non-Prorated

While most other manufacturers pro-rate their warranty after just five years, we don't. Which means if you have any problem with the structure of your Thomasville mattress set, it will be repaired or replaced at no cost to you.

Visco Elastic Foam
Visco elastic foam reduces body pressure better than traditional mattresses, and promotes more comfort and better circulation - more evenly distributing body pressure!

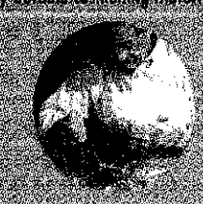

Hand-Stitched Borders
Our 100% upholstered cotton sidewalls eliminate shifting of the comfort levels and provide a solid edge that will never sag or break down. The result is a sleeping surface that is just as supportive and comfortable at the edge as the center.

Cotton Encased
The innerspring unit is encased in over 96 pounds of supportive 100% cotton. This process ensures flexibility, a long lasting firm seating edge, and uniform comfort over the entire sleeping surface.

Latex
Latex provides superior back support by gently conforming to body contours and reducing the pressure associated with tossing and turning. Inherently hypo-allergenic. Latex is the most naturally durable cushioning material in the world.

8-Way Hand Tied
For optimal comfort, each coil is hand tied and knotted eight ways. The result is strong but flexible support with each coil responding independently to your body's weight.

Inner-Tufted
To secure long lasting comfort and durability, mattress upholstery materials are "inner-tufted" by hand. Inner-tufting secures materials, insuring no separation or distortion of comfort levels.

Roll Edge Process
The mattress perimeter is stitched with a "roll edge" creating a one-of-a-kind natural border that eliminates the border rod.

Cotton Upholstery
Cotton provides the ultimate in sleeping comfort and is found in only the finest mattresses. Only the finest grade 100% cotton is used in the Thomasville Mattress Collection.

Noel Night

EVENT ENTICES YOUNG, OLD WITH MUSIC AND REINDEER

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

Noel Night is more than just an opportunity to sing for Shari Clason and the rest of the members of the Schoolcraft College Community Choir in Livonia. After the 50-voice chorus performs at 7 p.m. in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, many of the singers plan to take horse-drawn carriage rides, visit Santa's reindeer, and indulge themselves in a multitude of multicultural music styles.

The choir, under the direction of Mark Perrine, will sing seasonal music, including selections from Brahms, Purcell, Rutter and Luboff along with conducting a Messiah sing-a-long. This is the second year the choir, now in its 36th year, will perform at Noel Night.

Something different

"It's always fun to see all the people down at Noel Night," said Clason, a Northville resident who joined the choir 25 years ago. "And the Cathedral Church of St. Paul is a wonderful facility, a somewhat older church that has a cathedral atmosphere. It gives us an alternative to our usual venues. It's something that's a little bit different."

Noel Night gives young as well as older musicians the opportunity to perform in a variety of venues. Ensembles from the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra, under director Charles Burke, will play holiday and classical music amidst the van Goghs and Da Vincis at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"It's such a festive event to begin with and it's a nice way for them to perform in front of a large audience and it gets the word out about the civic orchestra," said Burke, a Canton resident. "It's always nice to kick off the holiday with music."

Maureen Riley is expecting about 20,000 to attend the 28th annual Noel Night which concludes with a sing-a-long to the music of the Salvation Army Band on Woodward Avenue.

The theme this year – One Planet, One People – celebrates the holidays in a multitude of ways from Jewish programming at the International Institute and the Kids Klez Band of Michigan at the Detroit Public Library to an old-fashioned Southern Christmas with Appalachian carols and spirituals at the Heritage Museum. Or watch dancers perform scenes from the Harlem Nutcracker at the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History.

What: The 28th annual Noel Night features music, art exhibits, caroling, carriage rides, holiday shopping, and a chance to visit Santa's reindeer. The evening concludes with a sing-a-long on Woodward Avenue
When: 5-9:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2.
Where: In the University Cultural Center between Ferry and Warren, and Cass Avenue and John R, Detroit. For more information, call (313) 577-5088.

Festive

"It fills the streets; it's definitely festive," said Riley, special events director for the University Cultural Center Association which produces Noel Night. "The kids can come and see the reindeer stabled at the New Detroit Science Center and meet the elves. The Scarab Club will have a jambalaya dinner and Santa will visit there as well. Santa, the Christmas Bear and elves are available for photos in several locations."

Along with music from around the world, Noel Night offers a chance to purchase gifts including one-of-a-kind art works and items from museum shops and holiday church bazaars.

"We've expanded the programming on Woodward Avenue to include a Holiday Gift Shoppe, a tented artists' enclave with hand made German ornaments, Pewabic Pottery, a glass artist, and items from Bag Lady Beads," said Riley. "There will also be food booths with everything from hot dogs to turkey legs and soup. The Detroit Artists Market will also be joining us this year. It adds another shopping opportunity. There's lots of holiday shopping including a Center for Creative Studies student sale."

Christmas caroling: The singing street urchins of Oakland county-based Michigan Youth Theatre perform music that brings the world of Charles Dickens to life.

Drama based on 1911 trial

BY KEELY WYGONIK

The Runner Stumbles by Milan Stitt, opening Friday, Dec. 1 at the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford, is a production Sean Kelley has wanted to do for a long time. It's based on a 1911 Michigan trial. A nun is murdered and the prime suspect is the parish priest.

"It is a very gripping drama that deals with the religion, a possible inappropriate relationship between the father and nun, and the murder trial," said Kelley who is directing the show, and serves as Guild president. "I think it has all the qualities of good theater, it makes you think as well as feel. A great deal can be learned about ourselves through the theater and this is an excellent example. It also has a surprise twist at the end which is done very well."

Plot

Here's the plot — Father Rivard, banished to a small parish in Solon Township, near Grand Rapids, falls in love with Sister Rita. When circumstances forced her to move into the rectory with him, his anguish became unbearable. Their relationship, inevitably, spelled tragedy, but not until the explosive and surprising climax of their sacrifice and the identity of the murderer is revealed.

John Hicks of Livonia portrays the young, just out of law school, prosecutor who would like to put Rivard in jail.

"It's interesting how quickly the play changes from past to present," he said. "You're in court, and then there's a scene of what actually happened in the past. There are lots of twists. It's a plain set and the audience has to use their imagination."

The script is what attracted Lance Abke of Plymouth to the show. "As soon as I read it I knew I had to do the show," said Abke who portrays Rivard. "These characters are striving for perfection, but realize they're human and flawed."

Rivard was banished because the bishops and other higher ups in the archdiocese thought he was disruptive. "It's very political," said Abke. "There are ulterior motives behind what happens."

As the play begins, Rivard is arrested in Detroit four-and-a-half years after Sister Rita was murdered, and brought back to Solon for trial.

Flashbacks

"The play is a series of flashbacks from 1911 to 1906," said Abke. It starts with when Sister Rita first comes to the parish and progresses to the point where she is killed.

"There are a lot of interesting characters and it seems to capture that time period," said Abke. "It's an excellent drama, a couple of hours of good entertaining suspense. It's riveting."

Abke, who has performed in plays on Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge campus in Farmington Hills,

Poor Cynthia McCall is treated like an indentured servant by her mean Aunt Gertrude and cousins Constance and Anne. Her father, a seaman in the Union Navy, is away fighting, and her only friend is a neighbor Thomas Alva Edison. McCall is comforted by the hope that her father will return as promised for the Mariners Ball.

If this sounds a little like Cinderella, you're half right. It's the plot for Cindy Cinderella: An American Fairytale an original family show by Michael Vigilant and Gerald Castle opening Saturday, Dec. 2 at the Anderson Center Theater inside Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn.

Vigilant, a Troy resident, wrote the book and lyrics for this delightfully funny show that will tug at your heartstrings. It takes place in Port Huron, a city where Edison spent part of his childhood.

"It was an exciting challenge," said Vigilant, who worked on the script with Birmingham-based Heartlande Theatre Company. Heartlande Theatre was approached by Henry Ford Museum to prepare a family show for the holidays.

Curtain call: The cast of "Cindy Cinderella: An American Fairytale" practices the final scene during rehearsal.

Original script

"This is a first for us," said Mary Rychlewski, who founded Heartlande with Jan Radcliff. "It was our first original script for children/family theater."

Unlike other theater companies who present the works of others, Heartlande works with playwrights like Vigilant to develop the work from inception of an idea, to script to music and production.

"It's a fascinating process," said Rychlewski. "People don't understand it. Original theater allows us to comment on our society."

Vigilant and Castle have worked together before. Castle's brother, Dan, a Birmingham resident, is directing the show. "Gerry, Dan and I started out together," said Vigilant. "There's always been a nice chemistry between us."

Because the play is at Henry Ford museum, it had to have a historical foundation. "Thomas Alva Edison spent part of his childhood in Port Huron," said Vigilant, who is marketing director and interim managing director at Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts in Detroit. "He was precocious and incredibly industrious. He published his likes working at the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford.

"It's very personal," he said. "There's not a bad seat in the house. When you're there you're close to the audience. There's a lot of energy. It's an intimate space that's beneficial for the actors and the audience."

Samantha Steckloff of Farmington Hills portrays Sister Rita. "It's kind of a murder mystery that's based on a true story," she said. "I really like my character, and the rehearsals are going well. It's a very good story that takes place in Michigan."

The Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford continues its season in January with Driving Miss Daisy. Performances Jan. 19-20, Jan. 26-28, and Feb. 2-4.

Chamber concert showcases clarinetist, pianist

The Chamber Music Society of Detroit continues its 57th season with a performance by clarinetist Richard Stoltzman and pianist Lukas Foss 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2 at Seligman Performing Arts Center on the campus of Detroit Country Day, 13 Mile Road at Lahser in Beverly Hills.

The program will include Lutoslawski's Five Dance Preludes, Stravinsky's Three Pieces, Bartok's Romanian Dances, and Three American Pieces by Foss.

Known for his innovative jazz performances and chamber music excellence, Stoltzman has performed with more than one hundred orchestras worldwide. A two-time Grammy winner, he has released nearly 50 recordings on multiple labels including RCA and Sony Classical.

Foss is known throughout the world as a pianist, composer, conductor and educator. A former music director for the Brooklyn Philharmonic, the Buffalo Philharmonic, and the Milwaukee Symphony, he has appeared with many orchestras including the New York Philharmonic, Boston Symphony, and Tokyo Philharmonic.

Tickets are $18 to $67, students $15, and available at all Ticketmaster locations. Call (248) 645-6666.

Stoltzman will conduct a master class with three area advanced clarinet students — Angela Brenton a student of Theodore Oien of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Michael Wayne, and Jeremy Eig, students of Fred Ormand of the University of Michigan — 1-3 p.m. Friday, Dec. 1 at the Seligman Performing Arts Center. Brenton will perform a selection from Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra, K622. Wayne will play a selection from Nielsen's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra, Op. 57. Eig will perform Bartok's Contrasts with Lydia Liu, violin and Bonnie Wagner, piano. There is no charge for the session, which is open to the public.

own newspaper."

Relationship

The father of two daughters ages 9 and 7, Vigilant wanted the story to be about a father/daughter relationship. It's a topic near and dear to his heart. "I wanted Cynthia to have an empowered person," he said. "I didn't want her to rely on a romance to fulfill her life"

Cynthia McCall, played by Stacy Cole, is an aspiring writer who helps Edison with his newspaper. Her father sends her shoes from his travels so that she'll know what it's like to walk in other people's shoes. He believes having this insight will help her become a better writer.

The subtle message is that ours is a world of diversity. Walking in other people's shoes helps you understand where folks come from.

"I'm only making a suggestion," said Vigilant. "I don't want it to evolve into preaching."

The show is also about the magic of believing in your dreams and the happy ever after.

"Life isn't just an equation, magic occurs" said Vigilant. "It's wonderful for children and wonderful when adults believe that it still can happen."

Patty Ward of Birmingham portrays Aunt Gertrude. "She's very nasty," said Ward as she tried to think of something positive to say about her character. "Cynthia's mother died, and her father is away fighting the Civil War. I have to provide food and a bed, and I resent it. Toward the end I soften."

Prince

Patrick O'Reilly of Farmington portrays the prince-like character who rescues McCall. He's a Union soldier stationed on the same ship as her father."

Both Ward and O'Reilly are enjoying being part of an original production.

"It's fun to create the role; you get to make it your own," said O'Reilly. "We're doing a lot of creating as we go along."

'It's geared for kids and it's a very funny, heartwarming story. It's wonderful to work here. You step right into history the minute you walk into the museum.'
Patty Ward
Actress

Both are enjoying the music and messages about inspiration. Edison had a lot of failures before he was successful. Each character has to overcome obstacles to achieve their goals.

"It's geared for kids and it's a very funny, heartwarming story," said Ward. "It's wonderful to work here. You step right into history the minute you walk into the museum. It all kind of melts together. And there's a happy ending; good prevails over evil."

Stage manager

Stacey Griffin of Garden City, a graduate of Oakland University, is the stage manager. "I love directing, and the next best thing is stage managing," she said. "I call the show, and make sure everything technically happens when it's supposed to."

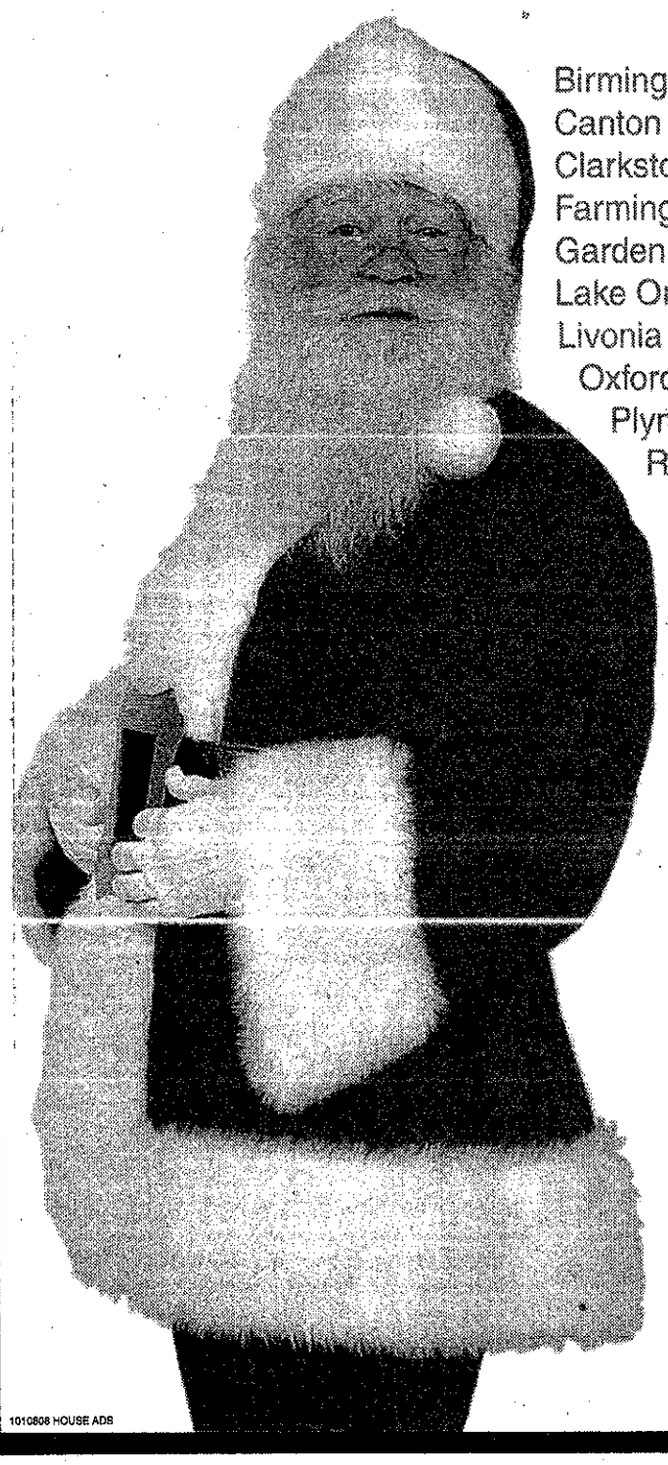

Griffin who is married and has a 21-month-old son, loves all aspects of theater. In addition to working on Cindy Cinderella she stars in the title role of the Velveteen Rabbit presented by September Productions.

She believes Cindy Cinderella is a wonderful family production, and offers an opportunity for people to support local theater in metro Detroit.

She likes the love story aspect of the show and historical aspect.

"It really is fun giving personality to Thomas Edison a person many children of heard of, but couldn't phantom as a young man. It's just fun."

Plymouth Theatre Guild performs 'Miracle'

The Plymouth Theatre Guild brings to life the heart-warming story "Miracle on 34th Street" 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 1-2 at the Water Tower Theater on the campus of the Northville Psychiatric Hospital. Tickets $10, $7 ages 18 and under. Call (248) 349-7110.

BY PAMELA JOY MCGOWAN
SPECIAL WRITER

Sure we've all seen one version or another of the movie Miracle on 34th Street, but experiencing it on stage is much more fun, and the Plymouth Theatre Guild delivers it.

Directed by Barry V. Levine, a former drama teacher and off-off-Broadway actor, the cast of various ages and experience do an exceptional job bringing the Christmas spirit to the Water Tower Theatre in Northville.

In the stage adaptation there is some deviation from the familiar story found on the silver screen, but the lesson is the same: "Faith is believing in things when common sense tells us not to." Peppered with humor, elves and even a strolling choir, the magic of Christmas comes alive in this production.

Kris Kringle is a kindly old man who claims to be the real Santa Claus. A desperate Macy's executive, Doris Walker, hires him to fill in for the store's drunken – and thus recently fired-Santa, though she is not falling for the "real Santa" bit. A dispute arises between "believers" and "non-believers" and eventually Mr. Kringle finds himself in court with Doris' new boyfriend, Fred, struggling to prove the "non-believers" wrong. Everyone gets what he or she deserves in the end, including the nasty Ms. Sawyer, who is set on "exposing" Kris Kringle from the beginning. Of course, Doris' skeptical daughter, Susan, rediscovers the blind faith of a child and is rewarded by Santa.

Kris Kringle

Kris Kringle is convincingly played by C.J. Nodus. No stranger to the stage, Nodus has appeared on Broadway, and directed and acted in many other small productions. So it's no surprise that he is Santa right down to the ho, ho, ho's.

His discussion of imagination with Susan (played by Lauracindy Plague of Canton) is compelling and flawlessly delivered. Likewise, Kathleen Booker (Doris) and Dennis Hubel (Fred) do an exemplary job building the chemistry between their two characters. Watching Doris go from a cold, career-obsessed person to a sensitive, lovable woman keeps the audience from wanting to shake her for not immediately noticing the wonderful guy she has right in front of her. And Fred stays nicely confident in his belief in her and Kris Kringle.

Elves

And then there are the elves. They are cute, they are silly, and their appearances are so meaningfully placed that the production would not be the same without them. The "Littlest Elf," played by 5-year-old Plymouth resident Kelsey Tomei, is small in size but big on character. All the elves work well together to illustrate the "Elf Union." The troop of elves (Kelsey Tomei, Wendy Tomei, Stephanie Hubel, Chelsea Rourke, Laura Van Valkenburgh, Teresa Asevedo and Lauren Norris) consists of kids (and one adult) from not only Plymouth, but Farmington Hills, Northville, Novi, and Garden City as well. Livonia residents, Lauren Maceroni (Megan) and Phyllis Sollars (ensemble), make their debuts with the Plymouth Theatre Guild.

Other stand-out performances include the appearance of Producer and Assistant Director, D. Ed Cox as Charlie Halloran, and John Yono, who brings some of the first humor of the play with his portrayal of the Drunken Santa – Christmas is in the bottle.

Sets

The sets and props for this production by area residents are kept simple, which helps not to detract from the characters. The costumes, especially those of the elves, keep with the spirit and tone of the story, and Santa looks just like he did when you dreamed of him as a child – and maybe still do.

The cast makes excellent use of the aisles, enveloping the audience even further. It's hard not to leave the production wanting to put up your Christmas tree, sing carols, and maybe even tackle the shopping malls.

'The Lion in Winter' thought-provoking

The Farmington Players present "Lion in Winter" 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 1-2, Dec. 8-9; Thursday, Dec. 7, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 3 at Barnes & Noble Booksellers, 6800 Orchard Lake Road, between 14 and 15 Mile Roads, West Bloomfield. Tickets $12, call (248) 553-2955.

■ The setting, costumes, props, lights and sound are well done.

If indeed, history is prologue, The Farmington Players potent production of The Lion in Winter provides insights into the lengths men will go to secure and maintain power (e.g. the presidency). It is Christmas Eve, 1183, at the castle of Henry II, in Chinon, France.

The king not only rules England, but is titular head of much of France, because of a weak King Philip. It is not a cheerful time for Henry, however. Which of his three sons will succeed him on the throne? That is the question. He favors one, his queen another. Henry has cast her into the dungeon to set her mind straight. When that fails, he releases her from prison is a vile ploy to see things his way. What follows is a endless series of deceits, lies, betrayals, crosses, double crosses and triple crosses, as the principals plot to have their way.

Commanding performance

James Goldman's play makes for great theater as performed by the Players under the able direction of Nancy Harrower. Ves Spindler gives a commanding performance as Henry II. In appearance, stature and voice Spindler is more like a pride than a mere lion bellowing about the stage demanding that others bow to his wishes. His legacy must live on. Even if it breaks his heart. Even if he must disinherit his sons, throw them in the dungeon, have his marriage annulled, and marry his mistress to give him more sons to choose from. His shrewish wife, Queen Eleanor, played superbly by Jan Salisbury, holds the trump card — title to the province of Aquitane, which Henry covets. She has a sharp tongue and will stop at nothing be the winner. One time taunting Henry that she has slept with his father. Another time, presenting knives to her sons to use against Henry.

The queen tolerates Henry's many affairs, including his latest with a French princess, Alais. Brienne rae is alluring and compelling as a women who may have to sacrifice her desires to satisfy the whims of the men about her. Ken Branshaw, masterfully creates a vivid character in Geoffrey, the middle son, who is favored by neither parent. He survives on intelligence and cleverness.

Randy Coble, as Richard the Lionheart, gives an understated but effective performance as the son favored by the queen. Matt Yanke, in his first major role, plays Henry's favorite son, John. Still in high school, Yanke's youth serves him well as a young man caught in a whirlwind of intrigue he doesn't quite understand. John Abair, Jr. is very good as King Philip, who arrives to claim what is rightfully his — only to be rebuffed by the strong personality and devious deals of Henry.

Setting

The setting, costumes, props, lights and sound are well done, contributing to an entertaining and thought-provoking evening of theatre — even though playwright Goldman gives us a longish first act.

'Grinch' shows how Jim Carrey stole our hearts

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

Twenty years ago, Robin Williams was the toast of Tinseltown. His overflowing popularity and over-the-top personality, however, couldn't save the overblown screen version of Popeye. Jim Carrey must surely be wondering whether the $123 million Grinch will be his Popeye.

Worry not, Jimbo. Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas is a tour de fur for the incomparable Carrey, a swirling blizzard of otherworldly fantasies that the good doctor himself would have blessed with a papa's pride.

As innocent as was the 1957 book, as unsophisticated as was the 1966 animated television version, director Ron Howard built the largest set in Universal Studios' history and still managed to keep it simple. The story, that is.

Grinch, at its heart, is about the meaning of Christmas. And since the cave-dwelling Grinch – lean, green and mean – has a heart that's two sizes too small, the village of Whoville has a problem. Two problems, in fact, as one of its smallest citizens, Cindy Lou Who (Taylor Momsen), harbors holiday doubts of her own. In her song Christmas, Why Can't I Find You? Cindy laments, "Did Christmas change, or just me?"

■ 'Grinch, at its heart, is about the meaning of Christmas. And since the cave-dwelling Grinch – lean, green and mean – has a heart that's two sizes too small, the village of Whoville has a problem.'

The Grinch and Cindy Lou are the only characters from the original book. Jeffrey Price and Peter A. Seaman (Who Framed Roger Rabbit) offer a "whostory" lesson (there are lots of "who" puns, from "whovenile delinquent" to "whobilation") that expands the story without adding any fat.

They show, for example, how the 8-year-old Grinch (Josh Ryan Evans, in a fine, Grinchy performance of his own) came to have it in for the Whos. They also give Cindy Lou parents: befuddled Whoville postmaster Lou Who (Bill Irwin) and wife Betty Lou Who (Molly Shannon).

But it's Carrey who carries the film, with an assist from five-time Academy Award-winning make-up artist Rick Baker. Carrey's voice, face and body are a symphony, harmonious and eloquent, soaring through new and uncharted progressions of expression.

Carrey's Grinch is every bit the meanie from Mount Crumpit that Dr. Seuss gave us, "the one creature within a billion billometers who hates Christmas." He's also a lonely soul who just needs a friend. Doesn't that hit a familiar chord? Only someone totally lacking in-forgive us-whomanity would turn such a creature away.

Watch for some other notable Whos, including Jeffrey Tambor as Mayor May Who and Christine Baranski as haughty neighbor Martha May Whovier. And it wouldn't be a Ron Howard film without brother Clint, here as mayoral assistant Whobris.

Is Grinch an instant family classic? Possibly, but some of the effects, even Carrey's rapid-fire mannerisms and Ralph Kramden temper, may be a bit intense for the youngest ones.

Interestingly, while the Grinch has the bark but little bite, the Whos have these distorted faces reminiscent of the pig people from that Twilight Zone episode where the beautiful girl is the one sent away. They may need more explaining than the six-foot furball himself.

Happy Wholidays.

Film suffers from lame script

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

JASIN BOLAND

Red Planet: Carrie-Anne Moss and Val Kilmer star in this film about a futuristic mission to Mars.

You know you're in trouble when the best performance in the film is by the scenery. With an honorable mention to an animated metal robo-dog.

Red Planet poses a premise worthy of consideration. It is 50 years from now, and we've totally loused up good old Earth. The planet is so polluted even frogs are extinct. Hey, no problem. There're lots more planets where this one came from; let's just move to the next one.

First, probes are sent to seed Mars with oxygen-producing algae to create a breathable atmosphere. When communications mysteriously stop, the first manned Mars mission is dispatched to find out why.

But that's just the prologue. During the next two hours, we learn that Mars itself has way more life than the six-pack of actors on board Mars One. Naturally, everything that can go wrong does. No surprise there, when you consider that three of the crewpersons are named Robby, Chip and Bud. Would you trust your future to two of My Three Sons and the youngest Bundy from Married With Children?

Val Kilmer (At First Sight) is Robby, the ship's fix-it man. The only thing he can't fix is himself up with the ship's commander, Carrie-Anne Moss (The Matrix). She's up there on the mother ship while he's down on the planet with four of the least interesting space travelers in sci-fi memory. Even the accomplished Terence Stamp can't rescue himself from screenwriters Chuck Pfarrer and Jonathan Lemkin's lame spiritual meanderings.

The guys are interchangeable in color as well as in character. Star Trek creator Gene Roddenberry had to fight the networks for diversity 35 years ago; it's a shame to even have to bring it up today.

Moss fares better than the men, with considerable gratitude to the ground laid by Sigourney Weaver in the Alien trilogy. Her Lt. Commander Bowman is strong and able. Not that strong, however, that she can tell the filmmakers what they can do with the obligatory space shower scene.

Moss isn't the only import from The Matrix. The sound, costume and production designers were all brought in, and their work, at least, is exceptional. Pay close attention to the astronauts' uniforms and see how many corporate logos are featured; we spotted Nokia, IBM, Hughes Aircraft and Toshiba. Perhaps these companies won't suffer the same fate as Pan Am and Bell Telephone, each prominently displayed in the late Stanley Kubrick's visionary 2001: A Space Odyssey.

Shot in the Australian outback and a Jordanian desert, Red Planet does get across the idea that we'd better take care of what we've been given; the alternative is not pleasant.

In fact, the only alternative less pleasant is a sequel about Venus.

Then again, that's where we've read women are from, so maybe there's hope.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Scheduled to open Friday, Dec. 8

PROOF OF LIFE
An American engineer working in South America is kidnapped and held for ransom. His company won't pay, so his wife must hire a freelance hostage negotiator to secure his release. Stars Meg Ryan, Russell Crowe, David Morse.

Scheduled to open Friday, Dec. 22

CHOCOLAT
A mysterious woman arrives in a French town and opens an unusual chocolate shop. Her ability to sense a customer's private desires and satisfy them with just the right confection stirs up the town. Stars Juliette Binoche.

MISS CONGENIALITY
An FBI agent trying to follow in her heroic mother's footsteps goes undercover as a beauty pageant contestant to thwart the efforts of a group threatening to bomb the event. Stars Sandra Bullock, William Shatner.

WES CRAVEN'S DRACULA 2000
Taking up where the Bram Stoker legend chillingly ends, Dracula's century-old crypt is opened and the world's most seductive and sinister vampire is unleashed upon modern times. Stars Gerard Butler, Johnny Lee Miller, Justine Waddell, Christopher Plummer.

Scheduled to open Monday, Dec. 25

MALENA
From the Academy Award-winning director of Cinema Paradiso comes an intimate portrait and an epic story of independence, intrigue, courage and the indelible presence of true love. Stars Monica Bellucci, Guiseppe Sulfaro.

SONGCATCHER
The story of musicologist Dr. Lily Penleric, a fiercely tenacious woman who journeyed into the mountains and discovered the wild-hearted world where American folk, bluegrass and country music were born. Stars Janet McTeer.

The Tragically Hip get back to 'work' with new music

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

Few bands adopt a true egalitarian system of songwriting, establishing a real collective effort. But for Ontario-originated rock sensation The Tragically Hip, music comes from all five members, equally. And the band believes that's the key to longevity in the rock world.

"We're a songwriting collective," said Robby Baker, guitarist. "Everyone writes all the time."

That credo has kept the band intact and fostered a mutual respect among its members for more than a decade. For longtime friends Baker, vocalist Gordie Downie, drummer Johnny Fay, guitarist Paul Langlois and bassist Gord Sinclair, it's also been a means to success. The Hip have sold over a million records in the United States alone. They sell out arenas like The Palace and Pine Knob Music Theatre on most visits to the metro area. No one seems to tire of their guitar-laden riffs and swaying melodies. Not around here, anyway.

On Nov. 16, Baker called from Vancouver, the second night of the band's arena tour, to talk about this long history and The Hip's latest album, Music @ Work. Fresh from soundcheck, he sounded more enthusiastic than expected – the band has essentially been on the road since last May. "I think the idea is always just to try and push ourselves," said Baker. For those attending the upcoming Detroit show, An Evening With The Tragically Hip, the band will perform two separate sets; 70 minutes of music followed by a 20 minute break and then another 70 to 100 minutes of music. I guess when you have a 15-year history and nine albums to your credit, you can do that sort of thing.

With Music @ Work, the band came up with 30 songs in its first session of writing. Again having no particular direction in mind, the music molded into what appears on the album. Like all the band's previous work, the songs tend to evolve each time they are performed. For The Hip, music that "works" is music that constantly changes.

"I don't go back and listen to the records," said Baker of the band's previous material. "(If I) hear a song on the radio, it takes me back to the five of us at that moment. It's weird but for us, a song is a living, breathing thing. We take them out, play them live. We're always nipping and tucking."

"Songs are like frozen moments in time, like a snapshot," said Baker. "Listening to the records for me is like looking through a high school yearbook."

By that he means, it's nice to have but he doesn't often crack it open. As for the new songs, Baker feels the band created an eclectic record. From the band's heaviest moments, on Tiger the Lion, to its most subtle, As I Wind Down The Pines, Music @ Work showcases a tight-knit group of friends whose musical efforts ebb and flow seamlessly.

"(On) Tiger The Lion we were really pleased to have a song that challenged us, and challenges our audience," said Baker. "People say as we get older, we're getting mellower."

The Hip never did cater to trends, anyway

"We never really saw ourselves as a hip band," said Baker. "I always thought that because we were friends first, we would sort of outlast everybody. We'd be around in 15 years. When your best friends are in the band, you're in it for the long term."

The Hip's devoted fan base has proven they too are in it for the long haul. The band, while it hasn't achieved heaps of commercial success, earned a dedicated following who often travel from one show to the next. "In the past we haven't been a huge radio or video band," admitted Baker. "Because we were not that kind of band, people know the band through our albums. They listen to the whole album. They are fans of the band rather than fans of a song."

Knowing that, The Hip reach out to those devoted fans at live shows by digging deep into its past and performing obscure material alongside a mix of newer songs. "Those are the fans you really want," said Baker. "They force us to basically change up the set every night."

Expect the unexpected when The Tragically Hip return to Cobo Arena. It's a venue the band loves, said Baker. The band previously recorded its live album there. While this time the tape won't be rolling, the Tragically Hip is sure to prove again that its truly their music at work.

See An Evening With The Tragically Hip 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2, Cobo Arena, Detroit. Tickets are $27.50. Call (248) 433-1515.

Enter the cold, metal-laden world of Rent and you'll find some of the most engaging, realistic characters in modern musical theater. Jonathan Larson's live-for-the-moment drama returns to Detroit bringing back all the enthusiasm a rock opera can possibly muster.

The set remains a simplistic array of cold steel structures. A white paper lantern moon and cold blue lights shine on the cast who are carefully decked in bright costumes that – like the story itself – celebrate life. The Detroit Opera House offers an intimate, elegant and contrasting backdrop to a show that glorifies bohemian life off 11th Street and Avenue B in New York City.

Rent, based on Puccini's La Boheme, centers on a group of young, struggling artists who are faced with eviction when a former friend named Benny (Brian M. Love) comes to collect back rent. Benny hopes to open a virtual studio and demands the money owed to him. But he'll let it slide if they prevent the "drama queen" performance artist, Maureen, from protesting the loss of performance space.

What unfolds under this premise is a story of love, life, art and compromise told straight and unflinchingly. The story is seen through the eyes and camera lens of Mark Cohen, an aspiring filmmaker whose voyeuristic approach to life stifles his own happiness. Matt Caplan portrays him with vehement enthusiasm, wearing the signature black and white striped scarf with pride.

Mark's roommate, Roger Davis, has all but given up on life since his girlfriend committed suicide. As the reclusive rock singer, actor Christian Mena doesn't quite live up to the role of Roger. He got off to a shaky start on opening night. Mena's voice didn't always match the power and fury demanded by the character. At times he seemed uncomfortable with his guitar – the very instrument Roger uses to express his feelings. Over the course of the year, the time span of the story, Roger strives to find the song he will leave as a legacy. His achingly-beautiful solo One Song Glory, does begin to redeem him.

Angel Schunard, the delightful transvestite, is played with boundless energy by Shaun Earl Angel marks the very epitome of believing in one's self and making each moment in life count. For it's his sad demise from AIDS which refocuses the rest of the characters on their own dreams.

Highlights of the show, however, lie with the female cast members. Mimi Marquez, played by the fiery Saycon Sengbloh, is the wild girl who lives too fast. Her strong voice and demeanor won't hold back, and her talent is showcased in her solo Out Tonight, which has Sengbloh howling like a cat and prowling around the set in heels and rubber pants. Mimi is the personification of a will to live.

Maureen Johnson (Maggie Benjamin) and Joanne Jefferson (Jacqueline B. Arnold) portray a convincing lesbian couple on the roller-coaster relationship express. Maureen's impromptu attitude constantly clashes with Joanne's need to take-charge. The comedic duet between Joanne and Mark – Maureen's ex-boyfriend – titled Tango: Maureen, still holds gets the audience roaring with laughter with its take on infidelity.

Blaze of glory: The Touring Company of Rent performs this weekend at Detroit's Opera House. Share in the glory of Bohemian life as seen by the show's creator, the late Jonathan Larson.

Scenes are cut with "recorded" telephone messages, hinting at the lives of these characters. But perhaps the strongest musical elements of the show are found in songs like the catchy Seasons of Love and powerful La Vie Boheme, where the entire cast showcases its ability to sing, dance, and profess the all-encompassing theme: the joy of living.

Though Larson – who died of an aortic aneurysm after the final dress rehearsal in 1996 – never lived to see his show in completion, Rent allows his words and vision to live on. Much like Jack Kerouac's legacy in the novel On The Road, Rent is a musical celebration and reminder to live for today. As Larson believed, there is truly "no day but today."

Tellme: Number to call for restaurant information

By Eleanor Heald
Special Writer

Need restaurant information quickly? Can't remember the name? Local restaurant or national? What style of food do you want? Seafood, Cajun, Italian, Tex-Mex or other?

Would you like a recommendation for the restaurant too? What about a reservation? Directions?

You can get all this and more by phoning 1-800-555-TELL and following the voice-activated prompts. If you have Internet access, you may find the service easier to use by first checking out keyword options at www.tellme.com under the category "restaurants."

When I learned recently about Tellme from Master Sommelier Evan Goldstein and vice president of online services and public relations for Seagram Chateau & Estate Wines Company, a sponsor of the Tellme restaurant category, I knew it would be expertly done.

Directory

The free, voice-activated restaurant directory provides information for more than 435,000 restaurants nationwide and can even make a toll-free connection directly to a restaurant for directions or reservations.

For some eateries, there is a recommendation from Zagat Survey, a well-respected professional publication which reviews and rates restaurants nationwide.

Tellme combines the traditional one-on-one consumer reach that electronic media provides with the interactive experience of the Internet.

Using Tellme

This is a smart phone. Once I stated the category "restaurants," it recognized I was phoning from a Birmingham, Mich., exchange. Therefore, I was asked (by a natural-sounding electronic voice) if I wanted a restaurant in the general area.

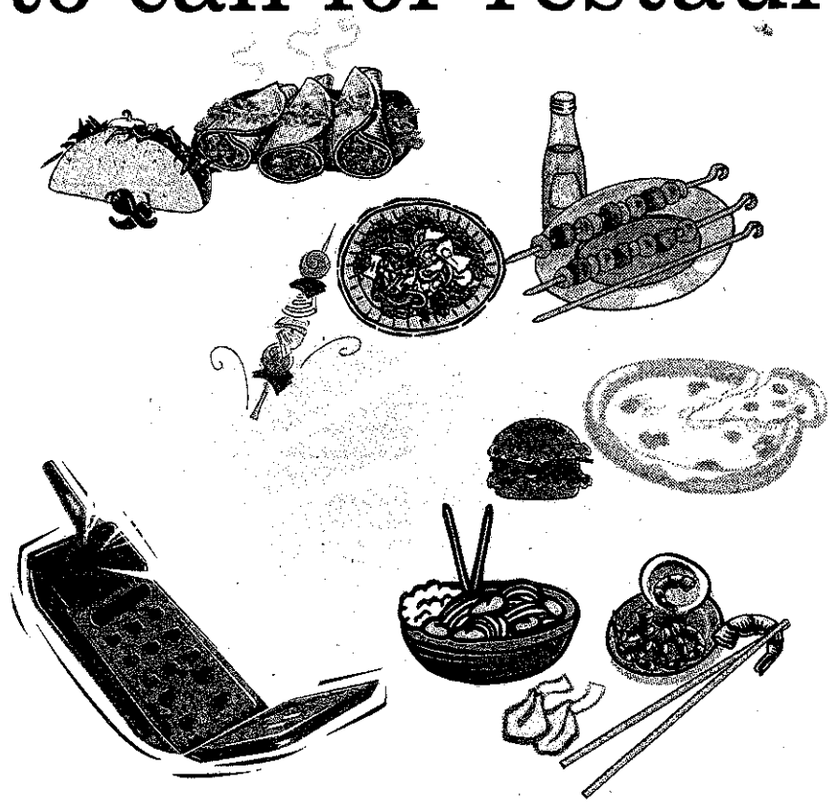

Responding "yes," the next inquiry came about category. Because I had checked the website, I was familiar with possibilities, and responded, "seafood" and avoided listening to a list of options.

Among seafood choices were the following: Ocean Grille, Streetside Seafood, Troy Marriott, Flying Fish Tavern, Joe Muer's Grill, Cooker's Bar & Grill in Troy, and Lily's Seafood, Royal Oak.

Why was Charley's Crab not on the list? Why wasn't there a review option for Ocean Grille, a restaurant in the Michigan Zagat Survey?

According to Marci Gottlieb, Tellme's press contact, Tellme was launched at the end of July 2000 and evolves daily. Restaurants on the list, read to a caller, are in order of their Zagat ranking. All reviews are not yet recorded.

"Speech recognition is not perfect," Gottlieb said. "We have 70 linguists recording in audio studios across the country. They use dialects, regional pronunciations and proper French, for example, if the restaurant has a French name."

Expanding options

Time for a movie after a casual dinner? To test this potential, I phoned the same 1-800-555-TELL and "the voice" said "thanks for calling again."

Again? The smart phone knew it was not my first call. Big brother? Not really. Once you get hooked on the helpfulness of Tellme, you can store favorite information too.

As for movies, I learned what was playing where, got a short review, a Tellme rating, show times, theater location, and a connection if I wanted it.

What better gastronomic pleasures than those found in New Orleans? What did Tellme offer that would be useful on a business or pleasure trip?

I got hungry for Cajun food. Along with several others, Commander's Palace and Galatoire's were on the list with Zagat reviews. Why not Brigtsen's, on everyone's favorite Cajun list?

"Because it's pronounced BRIGHT SONS, this name is a challenge for speech recognition," Gottlieb said.

OK, so it's not perfect yet.

Readers use Tellme

Internet savvy and well-traveled gourmand, Greg Stein of Bloomfield Hills, prefers to use search engines that give him more information. "I found it awkward because I couldn't glance as I'm used to online," he said.

But what about usefulness for Internots (new-age lingo for those not connected in cyberspace)?

"Lacking access to the Internet, I'd rate the service good," Stein said. "But I still think more reviews need to be added. Ideal would be for the Web site to offer the same information as it does now by voice. An either/or scenario would be more functional."

Gottlieb said the site was lauded by the visually handicapped. "Using a dining guide or the yellow pages is difficult for this segment of the population," she noted. "Directory assistance is expensive. Tellme contacts for free."

Jim McCook of Beverly Hills is handicapped for phone use. He and his wife Aldamarie eat breakfast out nearly every day. He used Tellme to search out new places. "I think they missed the best breakfast places in and around Birmingham like the Original Pancake House, The Gallery and The Breakfast Club," he said.

Because McCook can access the Internet, he like Stein, would like a pop-up list that could be printed. He'd also like a pop-up sample menu, too.

Internet savvy Allen Beckerman of West Bloomfield is internationally well traveled. "I used Tellme to search for restaurants in Chicago," he said.

"When I got the list, I had no idea what area of Chicago they were in. The system needs some area or district divisions."

When I suggested he could use the free phone connection to learn this, Beckerman said he thought this wasted his time and that the system should provide more questions that pinpointed his location relative to restaurants in which he might be interested.

"However, if Internet sourcing is not available, Tellme is great," he concluded.

According to the Pew Internet and American Life Project, an authoritative source for timely information on the Internet, half of American adults do not have Internet access and 57 percent of these are not interested in getting online. For them and when Internet access is not available to regular users, Tellme is a handy restaurant information source.

Where to go for legal knowledge

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

I recently bought a condominium here but have lived in a condominium in Florida for many years.

What legal requirements are condominium owners in Michigan subject to other than the association's documents? I know Florida law, but I don't know Michigan law.

Our interest is mainly becoming familiar and knowing whatever legal requirements exist for condominium owners here in Michigan.

Michigan has a condominium statute entitled the Michigan Condominium Act of 1978. This collection of laws has had several amendments, and it is presently in the process of being considered for amendment yet again.

Another relevant statute relating to condominiums is the Michigan Nonprofit Corporation Act, since most associations are incorporated under that statute.

There are courses that are taught by persons experienced in community association law, including a condominium operations class offered by Oakland Community College. You should call (248) 471-7729 for more information.

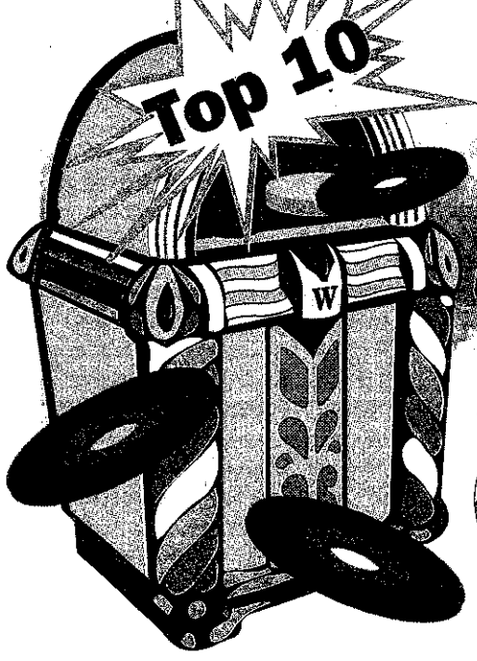

You may also wish to obtain a copy of the condominium statute from your legislator.

Robert M. Meisner is an Oakland County area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation. You are invited to submit topics that you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph, Suite 467, Bingham Farms MI 48025. His e-mail address is bmeisner@ mich. com, and his Web site is www. meisner-law. com This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

What are Top 10 reasons for buying a new home?

BY NORMAN PRADY
SPECIAL WRITER

You're going to buy a house. Why will you choose this one or that one? What are your reasons? What is most important to you?

Do you think everyone has just about the same reasons? Is the old saying true that the most important consideration in real estate is location, location, location?

Perhaps you'd like to compare your reasons against the results of an unscientific survey of real estate agents here.

The agents were given an alphabetical list of 10 buying reasons and asked to prioritize based on their own sales experiences and their customers' decisions.

Certainly, there are no correct answers and, clearly, the list was random and arbitrary with no claim of being totally representative of the endless roster of concerns which leads to a purchase.

The answers to the survey, however, might give you some reassurances or some new thoughts about your own choices and decisions.

It was generally agreed among the sales agents surveyed that location referred to a general area or community and that neighborhood was a specific area within the location.

Decor or landscaping had to do with the acceptability of the home's appearance relative to painting, wallpaper, greenery and such.

State of repair had to do with the buyer's feelings about how much or how little mechanical and fix-up work had to be done to make the house workable and livable.

Here's the list. Get a pencil and number the reasons 1-10, starting with the one that's most important to you down to the least important.

- ❒ Architecture
- ❒ Decor
- ❒ Distance to work
- ❒ Landscaping
- ❒ Location
- ❒ Lot size
- ❒ Neighborhood
- ❒ Price
- ❒ Schools
- ❒ State of repair

Now here's how some professionals ranked the reasons. Deon Benson, Realtor, Blue Sky Realty, Southfield.

1. Neighborhood
2. Schools
3. Location
4. Price
5. Distance to work
6. State of repair
7. Decor
8. Landscaping
9. Lot size
10. Architecture

■ Perhaps you'd like to compare your reasons against the results of an unscientific survey of real estate agents here.

Benson believe that once homebuyers choose location – the general area desired – choice of neighborhood is less important to them and that they might be likely to choose a less desirable neighborhood if it's a way to get a home into the larger community.

Ron Walraven, sales associate, RE/MAX Gold, West Bloomfield:

1. Location
2. Distance to work
3. Architecture
4. Neighborhood
5. Price
6. Schools
7. State of repair
8. Decor
9. Landscaping
10. Lot size

Price, Walraven said, was definitely a middle concern. He put decor and landscaping low because "they can be changed." Lot size, to him, was just to be accepted if everything else was OK.

Debbie Biehl, co-owner, Blue Moon Appraisal and Real Estate Consultants, Clarkston:

1. Schools
2. Location
3. Neighborhood
4. Decor
5. Architecture
6. Price
7. State of repair
8. Lot size
9. Landscaping
10. Distance to work

Biehl put distance to work last. She said, "People drive two hours to work, don't they?"

She initially listed schools third and then moved it to first. "People believe that schools are better" in one neighborhood or another. She put decor high because of her recent sales of houses that "looked cute."

Mike Root, sales associate, Century 21 Hallmark West, Clarkston:

1. Location
2. Distance to work
3. Neighborhood
4. Schools
5. Lot size
6. Decor
7. Architecture
8. Landscaping
9. State of repair
10. Price

Root listed price last, saying that if the buyer is happy with the other reasons on the list, price becomes acceptable even if higher than an original buying limit.

Rick Fatyma, associate broker, Realty Executive West, Plymouth:

1. Price
2. Location
3. Schools
4. Neighborhood
5. Distance to work
6. State of repair
7. Architecture
8. Lot size
9. Decor
10. Landscaping

Fatyma wondered how the newspaper's list had been compiled and then said, "Your 10 are as good as anyone else's."

He put price at the top because "everything is an outgrowth of price and one's ability to buy." He said that he gets mortgage pre-qualifications on homebuyers "so we know what range we're talking about."

Patrick J. Acree, sales associate, Why USA All American Properties, Inc., Farmington Hills:

1. Price
2. Schools
3. Location
4. Neighborhood
5. Architecture
6. Distance to work
7. State of repair
8. Lot size
9. Landscaping
10. Decor

Acree ranked schools high because he knows of buyers "who would not go to certain areas because of the schools."

You can get up-front financing

MORTGAGE BITS

TIM 'TIMBO' PHILLIPS

Some wholesale mortgage lenders have introduced "up-front" financing for new residential construction.

Until now, a builder either had to tie up his own money or the buyer would have to give the builder progress payments during construction. Such payments often came in the form of loans against the borrower's current home. Either way, the construction finance process was burdensome.

The rules have changed. Borrowers may now secure complete financing at the beginning of construction instead of at the end. Borrowers accrue interest only on the draws (incremental payments) they make until the construction is complete, but they do not have to make payments until then. Interest due is rolled into the fully funded loan.

The best "up front" lenders also help borrowers by allowing them to borrow up to 95 percent of their new home's cost, and by letting them take a more favorable interest rate if the market improves.

Some of these cutting-edge lenders do not consider borrowers' current mortgage or rent payments to calculate maximum financing. They figure that if a borrower is building a new home, he will be selling the old one about the time the new one is completed.

Because "up front" financing allows borrowers to secure the entire amount of their mortgage at the beginning of construction, they do not need "bridge loans" or equity loans, and they only pay one set of closing costs. When their home is complete, they simply move in without the added pressure of meeting a firm deadline to sell their current home.

Though beneficial to borrowers, residential builders have the most to gain when borrowers using "up-front" mortgages as the new construction will be financed with minimal builder out-of-pocket costs. With "No Document" and "Stated Income" options now available, you should count on seeing much more of these "win-win" mortgage products in the near future.

Existing-home sales eased in October, Realtors report

Sales of existing single-family homes slipped last month but remained at historically strong levels, according to the National Association of Realtors.

Existing-home sales slid 3.9 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 4.96 million units from an upward-revised level of 5.16 million units in September. However, last month's sales activity remained 1.6 percent above the 4.88-million unit pace in October 1999.

NAR President Richard Mendenhall said sales activity is within the level of expectations. "The present existing-home sales volume is consistent with the pattern of stabilization that began in September, with sales expected to fluctuate within a fairly narrow range in the months ahead," he said.

■ In the Midwest, homes were reselling at an annual rate of 1.07 million units in October, down 4.5 percent from September.

"The decline in mortgage interest rates is helping to keep sales activity strong, and we expect the 30-year fixed interest rate to average close to 7.8 percent for the next year," Mendenhall said. According to Freddie Mac, the national average commitment rate for a 30-year, conventional, fixed-rate mortgage was 7.80 percent in October, down from 7.91 percent in September; it was 7.85 percent in October 1999.

Any month with home resale activity close to a 5.00-million unit pace is historically very strong, said David Lereah, NAR's chief economist. "We're forecasting existing homes sales to total 5.04 million this year, only the second year in history with sales exceeding the five-million mark," he said.

The national median existing-home price was $138,200 in October, up 4.3 percent from October 1999 when the median price was $132,500. The median is the midpoint – half the homes sell for less, while half sell for more.

Seasonal shifts

Lereah noted home prices are down on a month-to-month basis, but this is a decline resulting from seasonal shifts in the market. "Every year since recordkeeping began in 1968, the median home price has dropped in the fall because fewer families with children are in the market. As a result, a higher percentage of buyers are singles and childless couples, generally purchasing more moderately priced homes, so we see a seasonal dip in prices," he said. "This has nothing to do with appreciation, which is why we always compare prices to the same period a year earlier," he explained.

Housing inventory levels rose 1.8 percent at the end of October with 1.74 million existing homes available for sale, which represents a 4.2-month supply at the current sales pace. However, inventory levels remain 13.0 percent below the 2.00 million homes available in October 1999.

Breakdown by area

Regionally, In the Midwest, homes were reselling at an annual rate of 1.07 million units in October, down 4.5 percent from September, but remained 1.9 percent above October 1999. The median price in the Midwest was $120,000, down 0.1 percent from a year ago.

The Midwest region consists of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

The existing-home sales pace in the South rose 2.6 percent in October to an annual rate of 1.99 million units; they were 4.2 percent above October 1999. The median price of an existing home in the South was $128,200, which was 6.5 percent higher than October 1999.

The South region consists of Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia.

In the West, home resales fell 11.6 percent from September to an annual rate of 1.30 million units in October; however, September was the second-highest level ever recorded in the West. The pace was 2.3 percent below October 1999. The median existing-home price in the West was $183,300, up 6.1 percent from the same month a year earlier.

The Western region consists of Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

Housing Affordability Index declines in 3rd quarter of 2000

Higher home prices offset rising incomes and declining interest rates during the third quarter of this year, resulting in an erosion of housing affordability, according to the National Association of Realtors.

NAR's composite Housing Affordability Index was 124.7 during the third quarter, down 1.6 percentage points from 126.3 reported in the second quarter; it was 7.2 points below the same period a year earlier when it stood at 131.9.

The index shows half the nation's households had at least 124.7 percent of the income needed to buy a home at the third quarter median existing-home price, which was $142,800. This index measures affordability factors for all home buyers making a 20-percent down payment, with an index of 100 defined as the point where a median-income family has the exact amount of income needed to buy a median-priced existing home. The third-quarter median family income was $50,657.

The affordability index is at the lowest level since the second quarter of 1992, when it registered 123.7, said Dennis R. Cronk, NAR president. "Although home sales remain near record levels, we are concerned that affordability conditions are at an eight-year low," Cronk said. "The biggest concern is for first-time buyers, who face an even larger challenge," he added.

Affordability for first-time home buyers is at the lowest level since the second quarter of 1990, David Lereah, NAR's chief economist, said. "Our first-time buyer index dropped 1.3 percentage points in the third quarter to 73.6...a 10-year low," he said.

Lereah added a positive note. "Interest rates have been declining in recent weeks and appear to be having a stabilizing effect, but this underscores how sensitive the market is to changes in interest rates, which are the single biggest factor in entry-level housing affordability," he said.

The association's First-Time Homebuyer Affordability Index shows a typical first-time buyer household, aged 25 to 44, with an income of $29,288, had 73.6 percent of the income needed to buy a typical starter home with a 10-percent down payment. The median starter home price was $121,400, during the third quarter.

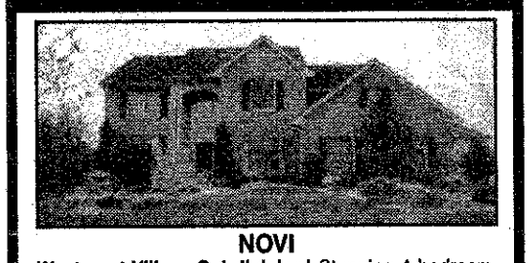

According to the Federal Housing Finance Board, the average effective mortgage interest rate for existing homes was 8.10 percent during the third quarter; down from 8.19 percent in the second quarter; it was 7.58 percent in the third quarter of 1999. This is a weighed average interest rate between fixed and adjustable loans, including the cost of points, and represents a bottom-line mortgage cost.

Conditions remain fairly good for trade-up buyers, who can use the equity from their existing home to make a 20-percent down payment, Lereah said. "Our index shows a median-income family can afford a home costing $178,100 – well above the third quarter median price of $142,800. Obviously, conditions vary widely across the country, but as a general national gauge, good housing affordability conditions remain."

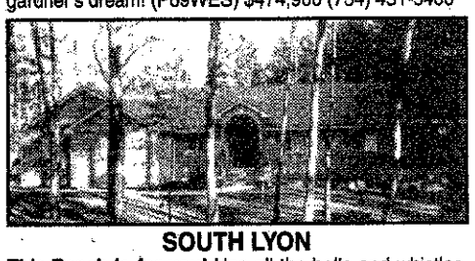

The typical first-time buyer could afford a home costing $89,400 during the third quarter – about half of what a median-income family could afford. Cronk said the dramatic difference in affordable prices demonstrates the problem for first-time buyers. "While first-time buyers are in fairly good shape in the much of the Midwest and South where home prices are relatively low, the situation in the high-cost markets of the Northeast and on the West Coast is becoming even more critical," he said.

"This means that whoever is elected president must not take today's good housing market for granted – if we don't help first-time buyers, who account for 42 percent of home sales, the housing market could drop to levels where it would become a drag on the entire national economy," he explained.

Taubman joins GM in RenCen upgrade

■ Construction will begin next year on the new GM Heritage Museum of Technology that is scheduled for completion in 2002.

Taubman Centers Inc. has joined in the $500 million redevelopment program for General Motors Global Headquarters at the Renaissance Center.

Taubman will be responsible for developing merchandising plans, implementing retail-leasing activities and providing retail marketing for the Renaissance Center, Millender Center and the future River East mixed-use project, all located in downtown Detroit.

"Taubman brings an enormous wealth of retail experience to our team and knowledge of the marketplace," said Matt Cullen, general manager of the GM Enterprise Activities Group. "Retail is important to our mix of services within the Center for GM employees, Center tenants and Detroit residents and visitors."

There is approximately 230,000 square feet of retail space in the Renaissance Center and Millender Center; River East retail space is undetermined at this time.

Renaissance Center has been reconfigured to create clusters for retail and service firms. The Center's financial services area in Tower 100 was completed earlier this year and includes Bank One, Comerica, Michigan National Bank, Research Federal Credit Union, Kinko's and Shoefixer's. Last month was the grand opening of the Center Court Cafe, a 40,000 square foot food court on the Promenade Level that features 17 restaurants and seating for 1,100. The five-story Wintergarden overlooking the Detroit River is under construction and will also feature retail and restaurants. Earlier this year GM World, a showcase of GM interactive product displays, opened to the public on the Center's Promenade Level.

Construction will begin next year on the new GM Heritage Museum of Technology that is scheduled for completion in 2002.

"We are very pleased with the opportunity to work with General Motors at their global headquarters in Detroit," said Robert Taubman, Taubman Centers president and chief executive officer. "Our plan is to identify merchants that will serve both internal and external customers and create a thriving retail environment." Taubman will work closely with Hines, the Center's development and property management firm, to develop the retail plan.

"We recognize that under GM's direction Renaissance Center is undergoing a significant rebirth and the city is emerging with new growth potential," said Taubman. "We are delighted to be a part of the Center's future and the future of Detroit."

General Motors Global Headquarters at the Renaissance Center currently has offices for more than 5,500 GM employees and 2,500 non-GM tenant employees. Renaissance Center includes four 39-story office buildings and the 73-story Detroit Marriott Renaissance Center Hotel.

Ascending from a four-level, 14- acre podium, the four office towers have a combined office space of 2.2 million square feet and could house a working community of more than 10,000.

Taubman is based in Bloomfield Hills.

Loan rates holding steady for holidays

(AP) Rates for 30-year and 15-year mortgages held steady last week but adjustable-rate mortgages ticked up.

The average interest rate on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages was unchanged at 7.73 percent for the week ending Nov. 24, the same rate as the previous week, according to a survey released Wednesday by Freddie Mac, the mortgage company. A year ago, the rate on 30-year mortgages stood at 7.75 percent.

In mid-May, rates on 30-year mortgages hit a five-year high of 8.64 percent.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for refinancing, also were unchanged at an average 7.41 percent this week. A year ago, 15-year mortgages averaged 7.36 percent

On one-year adjustable-rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 7.28 percent, up from 7.25 percent the week before. For the same period last year, one-year ARMS averaged 6.45 percent.

The rates do not include add-on fees known as points, which averaged 1 percent of the loan amount for all three types of mortgages.

"Financial markets are in a holding pattern as the winter holiday season begins, leaving rates below 8 percent for the 15th consecutive week," said Robert Van Order, Freddie Mac's chief economist.

Haley & Aldrich of Michigan, an environmental consulting and underground engineering firm with offices in Plymouth, has been hired for a brownfield (contaminated site) redevelopment near downtown Jackson.

The 12-acre project will include a 430,000-square-foot office structure, structural and surface parking and a pedestrian mall.

The relocation of the Consumers Energy Headquarters, a major utility, triggered the project.

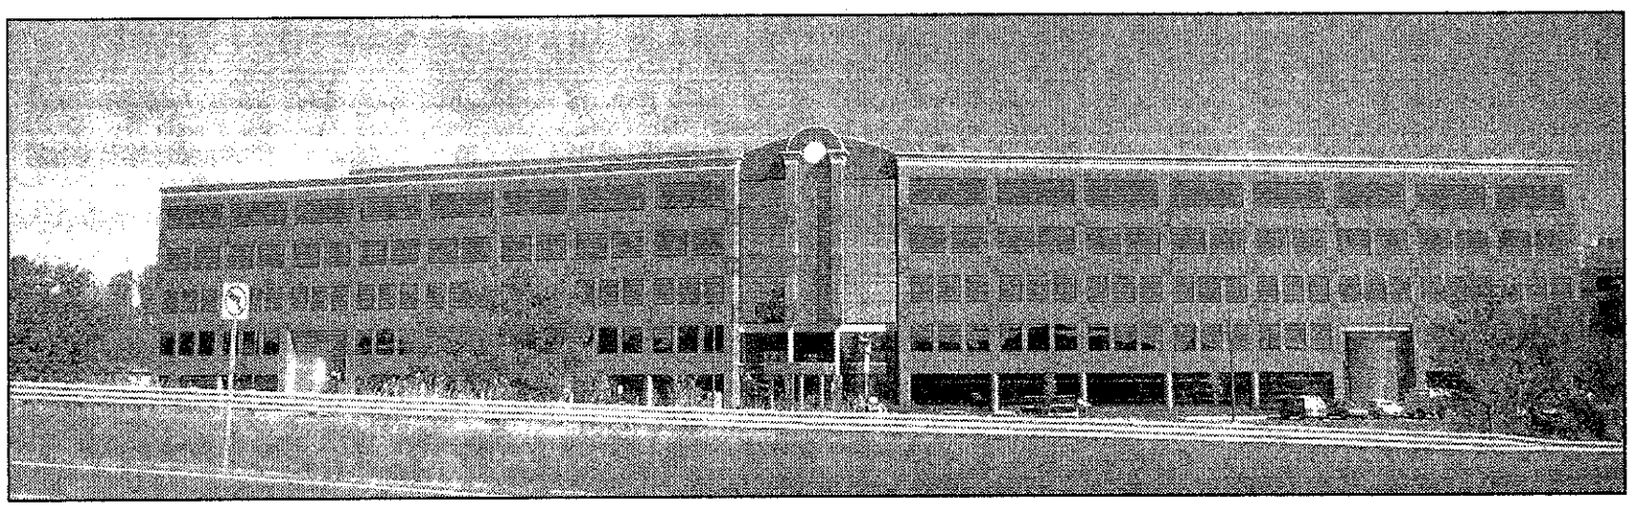

CPA firm opens its newest office

Plante & Moran, the ninth-largest certified public accounting and management consulting firm in the United States, opened its new Auburn Hills office. Located in the Cambridge Court complex at I-75 and University Drive, the office combines the firm's former Troy and Bloomfield Hills offices and houses more than 150 staff.

Plante & Moran is headquartered in Southfield.

"We have been watching the business and residential growth patterns in northern Oakland County, and Auburn Hills in particular, for several years," said Bill Doyle, managing partner of Plante & Moran's Auburn Hills office. Doyle specializes in real estate.

The five-story office building, which includes a floor-to-ceiling atrium, was developed by University Development Co. Plante & Moran will occupy the top two floors, using 54,000 square feet. Their address is 2601 Cambridge Court, Suite 500, Auburn Hills, 48326. The phone number is (248) 375-7100 and the Web site is www. plante-moran. com

Along the freeway: Plante & Moran combined two existing offices when it had a 5-story building built to handle the firm's expanding business.

Founded in 1924, Plante & Moran specializes in manufacturing, healthcare, real estate and construction, government and financial services. In addition to traditional audit and tax services, the firm provides innovative management consulting services that include technology and network communications, process and quality management, employee benefits, mergers and acquisitions, executive training, wealth management and international structure and transactions.

3 brochures can help with buying or selling home, and moving

Each year, one out of every five families moves. To help ease the stress involved with buying, selling or moving from your home, the MetLife Consumer Education Center has created three free brochures – Buying a Home, Selling a Home and Moving.

Made available as a public service, the free brochures are part of the MetLife Consumer Education Center's Life Advice program, created to help people better understand and manage the major events in their lives. (800) 638-5433.

To help determine how much money you may need to borrow to finance your home, Buying a Home provides methods for determining your net worth and disposable income. The brochure also offers tools to calculate a monthly mortgage payment you can handle and suggests questions to ask when interviewing possible real estate agents, including:

- How many houses are you prepared to show me?
- Will you provide references?
- Do you represent the seller's interest, the buyer's interest or both?

In addition, Buying a Home stresses the importance of carefully selecting your prospective home's location, specifically noting its proximity to local schools, municipal services and public transportation.

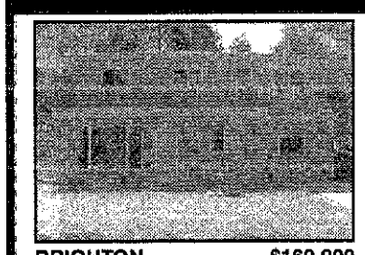

Selling a Home suggests placing your home on the market early; if you find a new home before selling your present one, you may wind up with two mortgages. The brochure also provides information on using a broker and offers simple suggestions for increasing your home's marketability. Selling a Home lists factors to consider when pricing your home and emphasizes the importance of knowing what tax implications may result from the sale of your home.

Moving helps you evaluate whether to move yourself or to hire pros and offers guidelines on how to properly pack valuables. In addition, the brochure provides a checklist of everything that needs to be done prior to the move, such as closing bank accounts, notifying utilities and service companies and filling out a forwarding address form at the post office. Moving also includes important tips to help the actual moving day go smoothly.

Call (800) 638-5433 to request free brochures. The advice program was recently awarded the first-ever Consumers' Choice Award for outstanding educational services to the American public by the United States Consumer Information Center.

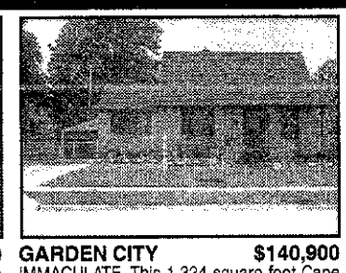

All brochures list reference sources for additional information, and many can be accessed on the Internet at www. lifeadvice. com

Cheer Club

The holiday season is here - and so is the Plymouth-Canton Observer Cheer Club.

Opening the Cheer Club to new and returning "members" is one of our favorite holiday traditions. Please join us by bringing donations of new toys and canned or boxed food to our office at 794 S. Main Street in Plymouth during business hours.

The items will be collected until Friday, Dec. 15 when we turn them over to the good folks at Salvation Army. They'll distribute the items to needy people in Plymouth, Canton and Northville.

The idea is to make the holidays special for everybody, not just the lucky families where people have plenty to spend.

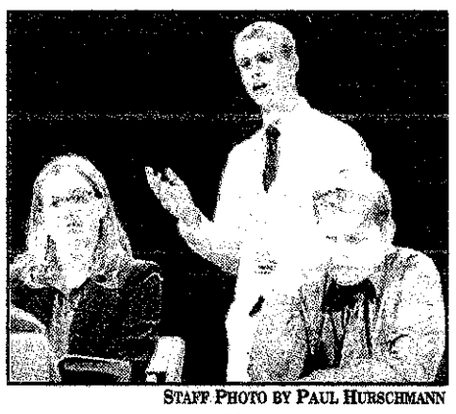

So if you're out doing your Christmas shopping and have a few minutes to look for another toy - or maybe a gift of warm clothing - your thoughtfulness will be appreciated.

When you bring your donations by our office, we'll ask you to leave your name and city/township of residence. That's because we like to print donor's names in the paper, while the Cheer Club drive is on. But you can be anonymous donor if you prefer.

Each year, we've recorded around 200 donors to the Cheer Club from Plymouth and Canton.

Happy Holidays! Please keep our Cheer Club in mind.

Fire marshal is a familiar face

Canton Township promoted Fire Inspector Frank Barrett to fire marshal Tuesday. The 15-year fire department employee called the move 'the pinnacle of my career." Barrett replaces Dave Champagne.

Canton's newest fire marshal said he's had his eye on the top fire prevention job since starting as a fire cadet 15 years ago.

Fire Inspector Frank Barrett, 42, was named fire marshal Tuesday following a series of tests and interviews. He will be in charge of fire prevention programs as well as fire code enforcement.

He will earn a base salary of $56,328 as fire marshal. He earned a base salary of $53,091 as an inspector.

"This is the pinnacle of my career," Barrett said. "This is a goal I've been shooting for since I started with the department."

Continuing fire prevention programs with school children and expanding them to include more adults are among his goals.

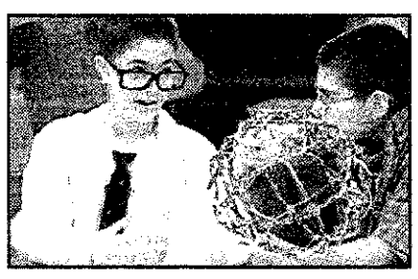

'The fire safety house is a mainstay of our fire prevention programs. Some new programs I'm looking at would reach out to adult senior populations as well."

The fire safety house is a mobile house replica used to educate children about preventing fires within the home and about how to exit homes that are on fire.

"I am looking forward to being in a position where I can bring fire prevention to the forefront in the community,"

Renaissance Fair a hit with seventh-graders, school staff

Lords and ladies. Scoundrels and damsels. Villains and wenches.

The seventh-grade students at Discovery Middle School were transformed into these, and more characters from the middle ages as the social studies teachers held their first Renaissance Fair Nov. 16.

"This is a brand new curriculum for us this year," said Ted Younglas, a social studies teacher who spearheaded the idea.

"Each student had to pick topic (to research), whether it was artists, arms and armor or food," he explained. "Games and entertainment was another popular (topic)."

"The kids had a lot of fun researching, and I think they learned a lot about the time period," added Younglas, who is in his third year teaching. "We also encouraged the kids to 'dress the part' of the characters they chose.

"We challenged the students and they stood up to the challenge."

He said the staff sat down afterwards and evaluated the day's activities and, for the most part, liked what they had seen. They will make a few changes for next year but they hope to make the Renaissance Fair an annual Discovery tradition.

Theater group narrows architect search to two

BY TEDD SCHNEIDER

There are no seats, no curtains, no stage and no dressing rooms.

But for about two dozen township residents and arts supporters in the Plymouth-Canton community, the performing arts center planned for Canton's Cherry Hill Village is slowly taking shape.

The committee overseeing the project will have an architect on board for a two-day design charette in mid-January. A design subcommittee Monday narrowed the choices to two firms – Architects Design Group of Ann Arbor and U.R.S. of Farmington Hills.

"We interviewed the candidates today. We still have to do some site visits and check references before we come back with a recommendation," said Canton Resource Development Director Mike Ager, who is chairing the subcommittee.

Ager expects a decision by mid-December.

U.R.S. is a large firm noted for designing public school bond projects in Plymouth-Canton, Redford, Farmington and other area communities. Architects Design Group is a smaller firm, Ager said.

"The relationship that you have with the architect is as important as anything in building a successful project," added Tom Yack.

The Canton supervisor is heading up the core committee responsible for moving the planned 400-seat, $5.5 million center from concept to reality. Yack has been a proponent of a regional performing arts center for several years. In fact, the township scaled back a plan to build a larger theater of about 1,200 seats on Plymouth-Canton Community Schools property several years ago.

The township will kick in $2 million towards construction and own the building and site. A non-profit "partnership for the arts" will be the admin-

Van Buren planning MEAP test changes

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

Students taking the Michigan Educational Assessment Program test will face additional challenges over the next few years under new state guidelines for the standardized test.

Van Buren school board members reviewed the latest guidelines at the board's regular meeting Monday. Test subjects for the MEAP will be expanded to include English language arts, an integrated test combining reading, writing and listening skills.

Raymond Gross, Van Buren director of instruction, said the district is still awaiting results from the most recent round of MEAP testing. They are expected to arrive no later than February.

"The bottom line is I'm not sure anymore when (the MEAP results are) coming."

The results, which were supposed to arrive in October, will be presented differently than results from previous years.

"The new summary reports will show by subject how many students in a graduating class tested, how many earned endorsements and how many earned Michigan merit awards," Gross said while presenting the report.

"Starting with the graduating class of 2000, the MEAP High School Test report will summarize the results for the class that just graduated, putting focus on students' level of achievement after all retesting opportunities are completed," the report stated.

"I have some questions about how meaningful that data is," Gross said. "It doesn't give you time to correct things."

Upcoming changes to the MEAP include:

- Testing seventh-graders in writing, beginning in winter 2001
- Testing fourth-graders in math with a new format, beginning in winter 2002

Burglar gets TV, tools in break-in

COP CALLS

A television, VCR and a variety of tools were reportedly stolen from a business located at 47440 Michigan Friday, Nov. 24. Taken were a $200 electric drill and bits, a $289 soft gun case, $300 saw and blades, $150 gasoline-powered weed trimmer, $150 leaf blower, $400 gasoline-powered chainsaw, $189 electric chainsaw, $2,000 worth of tools and tool cabinet, a $50 extension cord, a $400 27-inch television and $300 VCR.

Entry was reportedly gained by prying open a rear warehouse door. The front doors were not disturbed, according to a police report.

Drunken driving

A man of undisclosed age and residence was cited for operating under the influence of liquor, second offense Saturday, Nov. 25, on Lilley south of Warren. He had a prior driving while impaired conviction from 1994.

Vehicle break-ins

Someone reportedly removed a stereo valued at $500 and compact discs valued at $200 from a 1990 Cadillac parked in the 1100 block of Stacy sometime before Friday, Nov. 24. There were no signs of forced, entry but there was roughly $25 damage to the door moldings.

Also in the 1100 block of Stacy, an automobile larceny involving a $150 car stereo and $15 ring was reported Saturday, Nov. 25. A police report did not state whether the vehicle was locked or whether there was any evidence of forced entry.

'Life' star to attend area showings

■ The Redford Theatre on Grand River at Lahser will show the movie starring Jimmy Stewart Friday and Saturday night.

Karolyn Grimes, who portrayed Zuzu Bailey in the 1946 classic film It's a Wonderful Life, will be at the historic Redford Theatre on Grand River (at Lahser) for two nights, Dec. 1 and 2, where the film will be shown.

Grimes will be on hand each night to discuss her role in the film and what it was like to be a child star in the 1940s and '50s, as well as to sign autographs.

Each night will begin at 7 p.m. with an organ overture and will be followed by the introduction of the evening's star, Karolyn Grimes. It's a Wonderful Life will be shown after a brief speech from Karolyn and a question/answer period from the audience.

There will be an intermission featuring dancing from the era, prizes, and other surprises. The cost for each ticket is $10 and may be purchased in advance by calling the Redford Theatre box office at (313) 531-4407 or (248) 258-5806.

Everyone is invited to sing Christmas Carols with Grimes after the movie. Souvenirs and autographs will be available before and after the movie in the theater lobby.

Also available will be Zuzu Bailey's It's a Wonderful Life Cookbook, co-authored by Karolyn Grimes and Franklin Dohanyos.

"I have traveled to many parts of the world, but no where have I felt more at home than in the Detroit area," she said. "The fans treat me so well and love It's a Wonderful Life so much, that it's hard to say good-bye when it's over. To be invited to a grand theater like this one is truly a thrill. I think the hard-working people in Michigan appreciate the message conveyed by Jimmy Stewart who played George Bailey in the film - That no man is a failure who has friends."

Karolyn's visit and the showing of It's a Wonderful Life are being co-sponsored by the Redford Theater and local writer Gus Mollasis, author of the book On a Wing and a Prayer.

"Karolyn is an incredible person, someone who has made a positive difference in my life," says Mollasis. "I had the great privilege of meeting and talking with Jimmy Stewart, and to finally meet Karolyn brings me even closer to It's a Wonderful Life. We have a very special event planned with an even more special woman."

For 72 years the Historic Redford Theater has been host to movies, organ concerts, special events, and more. The theater is home to the Motor City Theatre Organ Society, Inc., a nonprofit corporation dedicated to the preservation, restoration, and use of the theater pipe organ and the advancement of its music.

■ 'We're pretty proud of our record of getting people to comply with fire code without being too much of a burden.'

–Praise for Frank Barrett, from Canton Fire Chief Mike Rorabacher

he said.

Fire code enforcement is the other major part of Barrett's job.

"Enforcement is kind of a harsh word," he said. "We do (fire) inspections on a regular basis."

Fire inspections sometimes involve telling people, particularly business owners, how to make their businesses comply with fire code. Making the appropriate changes – such as installing sprinkler systems – can be costly.

"Generally we leave on good terms with (business owners)," he said. "I'm hoping to continue that."

Barrett's diplomatic attitude toward enforcement was one just one of the traits that impressed his supervisor, Fire Chief Mike Rorabacher.

"We're pretty proud of our record of getting people to comply with fire code without being too much of a burden," Rorabacher said,

Educating people about why they should comply with fire code rather than write tickets is the main objective, he added.

"Frank does an excellent job of getting that point across," Rorabacher said. "He gets along with everybody."

His knowledge of fire prevention was another plus.

"(Barrett's) technically very astute. He understands the code."

Barrett has lived in Westland since 1989. He is married to Julie and is father to Jessica, 11, and Michael, 9. He is a 1977 graduate of Plymouth Canton.

He started as a fire cadet in 1985 and was a firefighter and emergency medical technician from 1987-1997. He has worked in fire prevention for three years.

In addition, Barrett holds a diploma from the National Fire Academy and several fire prevention certificates.

Greg Sprys-Tellner was the department's only other internal candidate for the fire marshal job. Both were deemed equally qualified for the job by Career Directions of Ann Arbor, which professionally evaluates candidates for fire and police jobs.

The township paid the firm $5,000 to perform the evaluations, which included oral testing, personal interviews and personality profile testing. Neither candidate had to take a written test because both were deemed technically qualified for the job.

Barrett was ultimately chosen because he had more seniority than Sprys-Tellner, according to Rorabacher. Barrett has been with the department 15 years and Sprys-Tellner for 12 years.

The fire marshal position has been vacant since August, when Dave Champagne stepped down and took another position with the department. He had been in the position since former Fire Marshal Art Winkel retired in 1997.

Canton Little Theater renamed for history teacher

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER
sbuck@oe.homecomm.net

The cannon blast was a fitting close to the ceremony rededicating the Canton Little Theater Tuesday in honor of the late Allen DuBois, a flamboyant American History teacher who died from cancer two years ago at age 53.

When DuBois taught about the Civil War, he would bring a small cannon into his classroom and shoot it.

DuBois, who taught at Canton High School, captured his students' attention with his animated delivery through which he displayed colorful, vivid and dramatic presentations for 30 years.

People noticed Dubois, who stood out even in his appearance as a man who wore a suit and tie, with cowboy boots underneath that clicked down the hall.

"His was a life well lived," said Canton High School Principal Pat Patton.

Steve Bernacki, a senior at Canton High School and a Dubois student in 1997-98 offered his memories. "He reviewed what we learned the year before in three weeks and made a lot more sense of it," Bernacki said. "He brought history to life."

Dubois was a leader in positive reinforcement with incentives, Bernacki said. If students had no more than three absences they did not have to take the final exam. "This was such a great deal that I convinced my family to arrange our ski vacation around fourth hour so I wouldn't have to take the final," Bernacki said.

Eric Cunningham, Dubois' godson and a Plymouth Canton district graduate who also worked as a substitute teacher in his class, spoke of Dubois' dedication. It was common for him to work through lunch and breaks.

Tribute: A banner hangs outside the "Little Theater," now named the "Allen DuBois Little Theater," at Plymouth Canton High School Tuesday evening.

"He would yell, scream and jump up and down," Cunningham said. "As a result of this, students remembered history. Long after their high school days, students remembered his rantings and ravings. He would warn me that I need to be careful where I used his name."

The audience laughed.

Arlene Paquette, a Canton High School social studies teacher, said Dubois asked her to be on his educational team. "What did I know?" she joked.

Underneath the dramatics, Paquette saw a hardworking and organized man who also cared about his teachers' union. "His passion for history, for politics and for education always showed through," Paquette said. "He was also an emotional softy. He was empathic and sympathetic for fellow staff and students."

He was irreverent, she added. He reported on union business in a publication called, "The Canton Crapper."

"He reported on union business and made known his personal view of what was going on," she said.

Jerry Morris, a retired Canton High School administrator, called Dubois an historian and storyteller, who looked for truth and connections to the past as stories are told and renewed. "He challenged students to not only answer the questions but to also question the answers," Morris said.

Dubois' wife, Betty, expressed her gratitude after remarks as she looked out onto the family and friends in attendance as the ceremony ended.

"It's a deep honor," she said.

Darwin Watts, president of the Plymouth Canton School District, presented Betty Dubois with a crystal memento honoring Allen.

■ Testing fourth- and seventh-graders in "English language arts" beginning in winter 2003. This will combine reading, writing and listening skills.

Another change is that districts could lose state aid dollars if at least 80 percent of students do not take the test. That percentage increases to 85 percent the second year, and 90 percent the third year. Districts not meeting these percentages will be "unaccredited."

In addition, at least 75 percent or more of students meeting or exceeding state standards in each MEAP area receive "exemplary" status. This is followed suit by "high," 50 percent or more; "moderate," 25 percent or more and "low," less than 25 percent.

Under old criteria, if at least 66 percent of students scored satisfactory in all four subject areas, the testing group received "summary" accreditation.

Board treasurer Martha Toth said she was concerned about the MEAP guidelines.

"It sure sounds like an unfunded mandate to me," Toth said. "I smell another (Dick) Headlee lawsuit coming here," she added, referring to the class-action lawsuit involving special education funding.

Board trustee Susan Ward Callahan said that she feared the MEAP test discourages independent thinking.

"We're going to be held responsible for creating robots who all think the same way," Ward Callahan said.

"I don't think the intention is to turn out robots," Gross said.

Toth said teachers, who must align curriculum with the MEAP, also suffer.

"The MEAP is removing the spontaneity and joy for teachers," she said. "And that's crazy."

Q&A

Q: Who was Julia A. Davis Moore?

A: Julia Moore, known as the "Sweet Singer of Michigan," was born in a log cabin at Plainfield, Mich. on Dec. 1, 1847. A writer of homely verse and ballads, Moore enjoyed remarkable popularity and gave many public readings before realizing that her public appearances were occasions for laughter and ridicule. Her poems were said to be "so bad, her subjects so morbid and her naivete so genuine" that they were actually gems of humorous genius. At her final public appearance she told her audience: "You people paid 50 cents to see a fool, but I got paid $50 to look at a house full of fools." Moore died on June 17, 1920 near Manton, Mich.

■ Pearl Harbor Day Anniversary! At 7:55 a.m. Dec. 7, 1941, "a date that will live in infamy," nearly 200 Japanese aircraft attacked Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Pearl Harbor was long considered the U.S. "Gibralter of the Pacific." The raid, which lasted little more than an hour, left 3,000 dead. Nearly the entire U.S. Pacific Fleet was at anchor there, and few ships escaped damage. Several were sunk or disabled, while 200 U.S. aircraft on the ground were destroyed. The attack on Pearl Harbor brought about the immediate U.S. entry into World War II. A declaration of war was requested by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and approved by Congress on Dec. 8, 1941.

Grief seminar in Canton

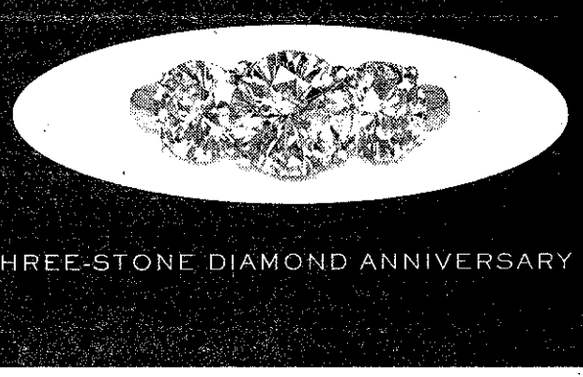

The L.J. Griffin Funeral Home in Canton will hold a grief seminar 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 6.

The program, at the Canton Chapel on Ford Road, is especially designed to help individuals cope during the holiday period with the recent loss of a friend or family member. Cathy Clough, director of New Hope Center for Grief Support, will lead the seminar.

Topics include: Why holiday planning is important; ways others have handled the holidays; decorating and other traditions; making the holidays special for children when you don't feel like celebrating.

For information call the funeral home, (734) 981-1700.

SPOTLIGHT ON YOUR PET

Veterinary Notes

by Elizabeth Routson, D.V.M.

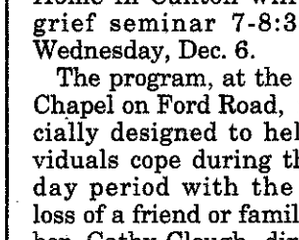

KEEP PETS SAFE DURING THE HOLIDAYS

While individuals are reminded of the dangers of drinking and driving during the holiday season, pet owners need to know the dangers facing their furry friends at this time of year. Holly and mistletoe plants are poisonous if eaten, and the poinsettia's sap and leaves can cause severe stomach pains. If you use preservatives, sugar, or aspirin in your Christmas tree stand's water, limit your pet's access - these things can also cause gastric distress. Ingesting sharp pine needles can puncture an animal's intestines. Hang any sharp or breakable tree ornaments out of your pet's reach. Stringy tinsel and ribbons can be extremely dangerous if ingested, as they can wrap around the intestines or accumulate in the stomach.

A few extra precautions can prevent tragic accidents. To learn more about pet care, please contact PARKWAY VETERINARY CLINIC. Dr. Neualt or myself, or one of our other doctors can describe routine animal care. When your pet is ill, we will carefully examine the animal and thoroughly explain any recommended treatments. Visit either of our two locations at 41395 Wilcox Rd. in Plymouth, tel. 734-453-2577, or 5750 Lilley Rd. in Canton, tel. 734-981-4400. We're open six days a week for your convenience.

P.S. To help prevent accidents, secure your Christmas tree by anchoring it to the wall with cord or rope.

istrator responsible for use and programming.

The Cherry Hill site, with its new-urban mix of housing and a "town square," seemed like a good fit for the theater, Yack said at the time. And Cherry Hill developers have pledged some $2 million towards construction costs.

The architect and general contractor will be required to keep the building exterior in keeping with the overall tone of the village, Yack said.

The township received a $300,000 state grant for the project in September.

The project's timeline, budget and a set of "Development Guiding Principals" took up most of the discussion at Monday's meeting.

The January charette – where committee members and others will work with the architect to design the theater from the ground up – was one focus. A search for funding was another.

Yack said the committee will need to identify private donors and raise about $1.3 million before construction can begin, likely in early- or mid-2002. Attorney Bryan Amann will head up the fund-raising effort.

A communications subcommittee is designing a brochure to be used for the campaign. "We need something to show people so they can catch the same excitement we have," Yack said.

Area arts leaders envision the center as the home for Canton Project Arts, the Plymouth Theater Guild and other organizations. The center will also focus on education, with programming and space devoted to area students.

The Plymouth Symphony, which originally showed an interest in the larger auditorium, will be able to use the theater for chamber concerts or other, smaller productions.

Holiday concert is Sunday

Catholic Central High School will host its annual Christmas Concert on Sunday, Dec. 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the school gym.

The concert will feature the Catholic Central Concert Symphony, Jazz Band and a performance by elementary trumpet players.

The guest trumpet players will perform parts from "Hark the Herald Trumpets Swing," and the Catholic Central Symphony Band will accompany.

The them of the concert is "Through the Eyes of a Child." An afterglow provided by the Mother's Club will be held after the performance. Admission is free. For information, call (313) 534-1310.

Meanwhile, Catholic Central students have collected 5,500 cans and $300 in an annual canned food drive. The food and money were donated to the St. Christine Soup Kitchen.

Eloise: This painting of Eloise Dickerson and her dog is more than 100 years old.

Eloise painting returns to Westland site

Eloise is coming home.

The painting of Eloise Dickerson – the 4-year-old, cherubic-faced child for whom the old Wayne County Eloise Complex was named – will be returned to its old home in Westland during a ceremony at the Kay Beard Building next month.

The occasion will be the annual Christmas dinner for Wayne County General Hospital retirees, set for 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 12.

A special guest will be Gladys Hamilton, 95, last surviving member of the family of Henry Ruff. Ruff, who died in 1949, was a farmer and real estate investor who owned land near Eloise.

Tickets for the buffet dinner are $10 each. Reservations are due Tuesday, Dec. 5. Call Patti Kukula at (313) 224-0809.

The painting of Eloise, daughter of Detroit Postmaster and Eloise Complex governing-board president Freeman Dickerson, is estimated to be more than 100 years old. It has been hanging in the office of the deputy county executive in the Wayne County Building for more than a dozen years.

■ 'This painting will be one of the most treasured artifacts at our Eloise Museum.'

Edward H. McNamara
County Executive

Prior to that, it hung in the now-demolished county General Hospital, which had been located at the north end of the complex.

"This painting will be one of the most treasured artifacts at our Eloise Museum," said County Executive Edward H. McNamara, referring to the growing collection of Eloise historical items housed inside the Beard Building.

The Beard Building, which was Building D, the complex's former psychiatric unit, and is the last remaining building in the complex, now is home to the county's Senior Citizens Services Division and the Head Start program.

It was through a bit of skullduggery that the complex that would eventually care for thousands of Wayne County's mentally disadvantaged and indigent residents, including many homeless, became named for a 4-year-old child.

First opened by Wayne County in 1832 in what was Hamtramck Township, then relocated to its Westland site in 1839, the infirmary, psychiatric facility and general hospital on the 902-acre parcel grew over the next 50-plus years.

By 1894, it was generating enough mail that its leaders wanted their own post office – it took too much time to haul the mail in horse-drawn carriages down Michigan Avenue to the Village of Wayne post office.

A perfect name

The U.S. Post Office agreed and requested a name for the new facility. But after a series of names submitted to Washington were rejected for various reasons, the complex's governing board submitted Eloise's name – without her father's knowledge.

It was accepted at once and, on July 20, 1894, a post office named Eloise was established on the grounds.

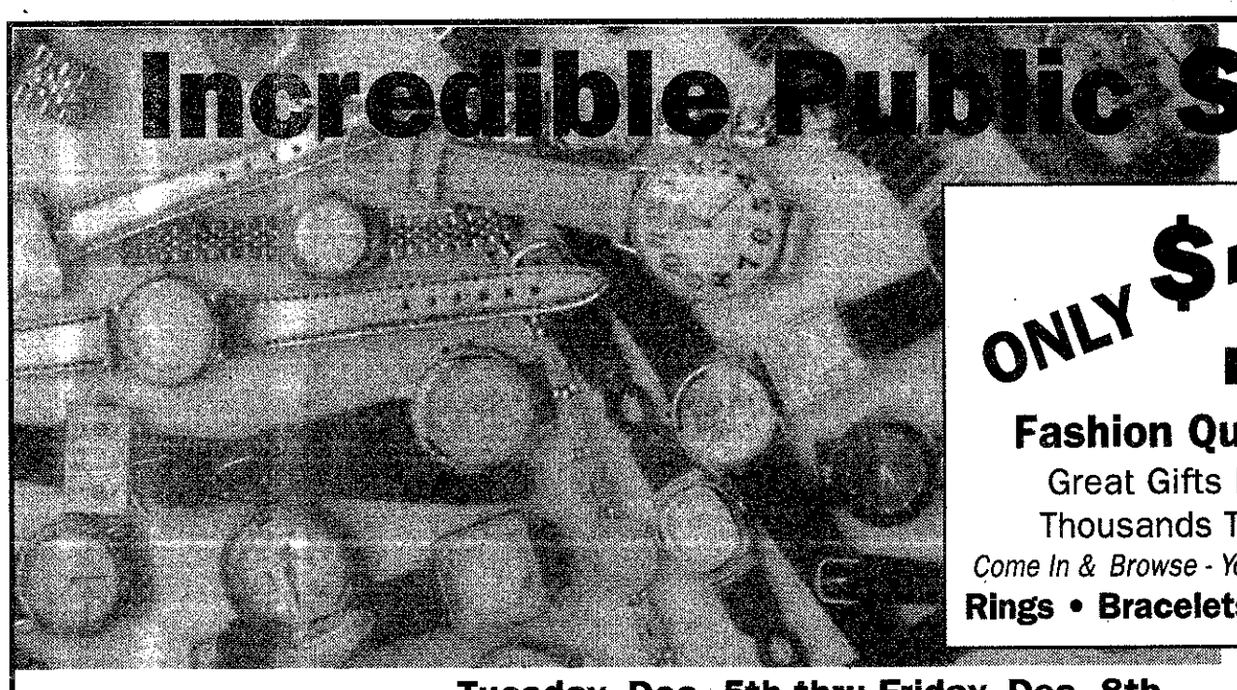

The Michigan Central Railroad Co. then adopted the name for its station there and the American Express Co. and the Detroit, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor suburban railroads followed suit.

Finally, "Eloise" came into such general usage that the board applied it to the entire institution, remaining thus until 1945, when the board changed the name to the Wayne County General Hospital and Infirmary at Eloise, Mich.

A portrait of Eloise and her St. Bernard hung in the board room behind the president's chair for many years.

At its peak, residents grew their own food, dried tobacco for cigarettes, raised farm animals and even operated their own theater.

In 1973, the remaining 900 mental patients were transferred to state hospitals. Building D closed in 1981 and the general hospital in 1984 – two years after the death, at age 93, of Eloise Dickerson Davock.

Expanded Friend of Court program yields results

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

COUNTY NEWS

More than 3,000 non-custodial parents have been referred for jobs and an additional $300,000 in child-support payments has been collected under an expanded program of the Wayne County Friend of the Court.

Alexander N. Luvall, the FOC for the 3rd Judicial Circuit, announced those figures Monday and praised the program's impact.

"The Non-Custodial Parent Program's expanded eligibility has made it possible for several thousand parents to make good on their support obligations and at the same time move toward economic self-sufficiency," Luvall said.

Those eligible for the program are all non-custodial parents who are unemployed or are under-employed – working fewer than 40 hours per week – and have been ordered to pay child support.

The program, begun in June 1998, originally was only for parents of children receiving Family Independence Agency benefits. But it was expanded this past June to include the broader group, according to 3rd Circuit Court spokeswoman Llenda Jackson-Leslie.

Luvall said the additional $300,000 in support payments from those parents means that "we know the program works.

"These moneys go directly to families and that is the mission of this program and the Friend of the Court," he said.

For fiscal year 1999-2000, which ended in September, the FOC collected more than $302,556,000 in support payments – about a third of the total collected statewide, according to Jackson-Leslie.

The non-custodial parent program is operated jointly by the FOC, the Michigan Department of Career Development, the Detroit employment and training department, the Southeast Michigan Community Alliance (SEMCA) and the FIA.

Parents referred to the program are required to attend an orientation meeting. Once they agree to participation, it becomes mandatory.

Luvall said payment enforcement for the eight weeks between referral and job-placement is suspended.

That allows participants "an opportunity to approach the prospect of employment and possible reunification with their children without the burden of enforcement activity," Luvall noted. "This is a humane approach and leaves us all with a good feeling."

Joann Cooper-Reid, manager of the non-custodial program, echoed Luvall: "This is a win for the entire family."

She said it gives the FOC "a chance to show we can work cooperatively with non-custodial parents in getting them to comply with their support obligations."

For information about the program, call the FOC, (313) 224-5293.

Rouge group meets Dec.6

Students tackle jury room drama

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER
hneedham@oe.homecomm.net

The emotions amongst a jury deliberating about whether a 19-year-old male is guilty of murdering his father will take center stage this weekend as Belleville High School players present Twelve Angry Men.

The Reginald Rose play will show at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 30, Friday, Dec. 1 and Saturday, Dec. 2 at the Belleville High School auditorium. Tickets are $7 for adults and $6 for seniors and students.

Director and drama teacher Larry Koch said the production turned out to be a good fit for the young thespians.

"It's a story of a jury that has to deliberate the guilt or innocence of a 19-year-old boy accused of killing his father," Koch said. "One brave soul says that he's not guilty."

Duggan selects 'fresh, aggressive' prosecutor staff

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

Michael E. Duggan, Wayne County's prosecutor-elect, is choosing equal numbers of insiders and newcomers to head divisions within his new office.

The Livonia resident said operations have basically been the same for three decades.

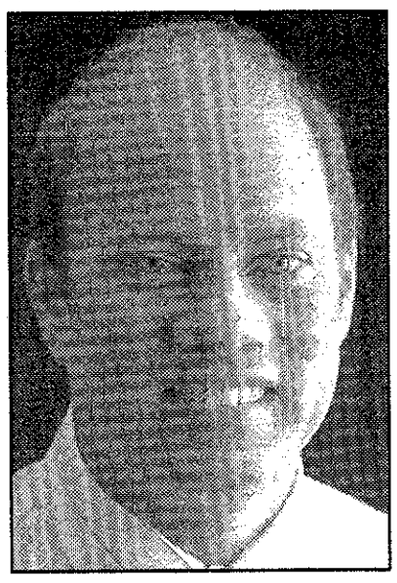

"The reality is, when John O'Hair came in in 1984, he left (predecessor) Bill Cahalan's staff intact," said Duggan. "For 30 years, it's essentially been run the same way."

He's "not saying that's necessarily bad, (but) ... We're trying to blend the best of the experience that's here along with a fresh and aggressive approach," said Duggan, who will leave his post as deputy county executive on Jan. 1 to take over his first elective office.

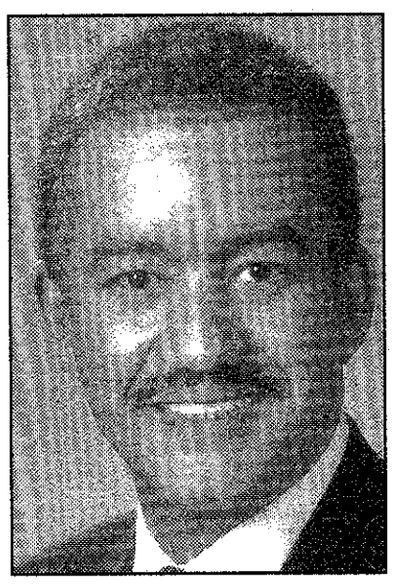

Earlier this fall, Duggan named former Recorder's Court Chief Judge Sam Gardner as his top assistant and appointed state Sen. Virgil Smith, one of his foes in the primary election, to be the office's liaison in Lansing.

Saying he has "a number of frustrations" with the department's handling of youthful lawbreakers and oft-raided drug houses, Duggan named two outsiders, Warren C. Evans and Maria Alfaro-Lopez, to head up juvenile prosecutions and forfeitures, respectively.

"Today, if a kid doesn't show up on the date of his trial, nobody goes out to look for him, unless he gets caught running a red light or in a drug house," Duggan said.

Michael Duggan: Prosecutor-elect

Virgil Smith: appointed to staff

■ 'We're trying to blend the best of the experience that's here along with a fresh and aggressive approach.'

Michael Duggan
Prosecutor-elect

Under his administration, Duggan vowed, "if a kid's not in court by 9 a.m., by 10 a.m. a police officer will be out with a warrant for his arrest.

"The thing is, juveniles grow into adult criminals," Duggan noted. "We need to get them to think differently. Otherwise, they just learn contempt for the system."

Duggan said Evans, an eastside Detroiter, previously directed Wayne County's community justice department, responsible for the county's new youth home and its juvenile justice program.

He said the county has "been having great success" handling all juvenile crime sentences since it took that over from the state.

The prosecutor-elect all but predicted he'd fulfill a key campaign pledge: Closing down drug houses that have been raided more than once.

Nearly 1,000

Duggan, noting O'Hair's office raided nearly a thousand drug houses more than once but "never took (possession of) them," said Alfaro-Lopez is "the county's expert in seizing abandoned houses," having filed 500 lawsuits against those property owners as an attorney in the county's corporate counsel office.

"So we're going to turn Maria loose to now start seizing drug houses," said Duggan of the southwest Detroit attorney. "It's much easier under the law for a prosecutor to take property" involved in drug usage than it is for the county to take abandoned property."

Running it all

He said Alfaro-Lopez, a southwest Detroiter, will run "the whole program, from the time we sue, to the time we take the house, to knocking it down.

"It's going to be a lot of fun," Duggan said.

Among other appointments announced this week were three from western Wayne County: Attorney Michael Cox of Redford Township as chief homicide prosecutor; attorney Kevin Simowski of Plymouth as chief of warrants; and Susan Kopinski of Canton Township as administrator.

Cox, a Redford native and 11-year veteran in the office, is succeeding Simowski as homicide chief. Kopinski is coming to the prosecutor's office after five years as finance director at Wayne County Detroit Metropolitan Airport and almost 10 years as Canton's financial services manager.

Cox comes to homicide, which is being reorganized to include family abuse cases, from the special cases unit, where he handled gangs, drugs, murder and public corruption. Among the cases he worked on was that of Malice Green, who was beaten to death by two policemen.

"Our office has some ideas that might actually help reduce homicides," said Cox, a graduate of both Redford Catholic Central High School and the University of Michigan and a former U.S. Marine.

Ideas include increased prosecution of gun offenders – another key Duggan campaign pledge – and closing dope houses, Cox said.

Prosecutors discovered that almost 20 murders occurred in drug houses raided more than once and that nearly 100 murders happened as close as two houses away.

"We also want to change how probations are handled," clamping down on those who are always getting into trouble, said Cox. "For them, (probation) is just a piece of paper."

The father of four said Duggan "has a lot of energy, a lot of ideas. He's already shaken up the culture of the office and made us feel we can make a difference."

Duggan said Kopinski will handle budget, equipment and personnel.

Lateral move

Kopinski, who said the change is "pretty much a lateral move" economically, will take on broader responsibilities but hopes she'll be working fewer hours.

"For several years, I've been working 60-70 hours per week, and I do have a family," said the wife and mother of one.

Kopinski said she's "been involved" in the ongoing state probe of Metro finances for 15 months. Although she liked working at the airport, "Enough's enough," she said.

Airports spokesman Mike Conway, describing Kopinski as "very vigilant ... very efficient, very much by-the-book" and "committed," said the questioning by state legislators "challenged her integrity and she really, really took it personally."

"I believe in what I say and I don't lie to people," said Kopinski, who said working in finance means "you have to learn and understand what's behind the numbers."

She said she had "no problems" with the scrutiny: "I know what we do and have no questions about it ... In most instances, (the decisions on contracts) made good business sense at the time."

Groups can care for state forests

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Community groups can already adopt a highway, a park, a river, a trail or a shoreline. But they cannot yet adopt a forest.

Such programs, administered through the state Department of Natural Resources, allow civic organizations to enter agreements with the state to care for highways, parks, trails and more on a volunteer basis. The work mainly consists of clean up, removing litter and illegally dumped solid waste from public lands.

It could be done informally. In fact it has been. The Michigan United Conservation Clubs, working with the DNR and the U.S. Forest Service have been caring for forest land in the Roscommon area for eight years.

Absent official status, however, there is no money for "tipping fees" – charges needed to dump the trash collected.

Rep. Scott Shackleton, R-Sault Ste. Marie, is proposing to fix that problem. House Bill 6013 would create an Adopt-a-Forest program through the DNR and make it eligible for the budget allocations needed to support the volunteer work.

The proposal has already received approval in the House and is pending in the Senate. State lawmakers wrap up work for the current session at the end of next. Uncompleted bills would have to be reintroduced next year.

On-line jobs directory updated

A completely revised and updated Training and Employment Connection (TEC) online directory, which helps both employers and job-seekers locate organizations that help them meet their needs, is now available.

Located at www.semcog.org/mac/tec.html, TEC provides an extensive directory of more than 200 job-training and placement organizations serving Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Washtenaw counties.

The TEC database is diverse and comprehensive, including everything from publishing to pet grooming.

Users can search the TEC database by geographic area and job type or by organization name and can follow links from search results to an agency's Web site.

Arabica targets upscale audience

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

With the beautiful actress Salma Hayek on its glossy, full-color cover, John Zogby doesn't see how the revamped Arabica Magazine can fail.

"There's just one problem," joked the noted marketer and political prognosticator from New York as he addressed the magazine's coming-out party Tuesday evening at Dearborn's Ritz-Carlton: "How do you follow this?"

Zogby, best-known as the first pollster in the nation to predict no easy presidential victory for George W. Bush, wore his marketer's hat Tuesday as he announced the results of Zogby International's study of metropolitan Detroit's Arab-American community – the target audience for the magazine.

It's a growing, affluent community of over 350,000 Arabic and Chaldean peoples, the largest such population outside the Middle East.

It includes highly educated, professional individuals with a purchasing power of $2.7 billion who spend much of that income locally on homes, cars, jewelry, clothing and dining.

As for specifics on Arabica's readership – the English-language magazine is popular locally and nationally – Zogby said his random sampling of 200 of the magazine's mostly local 7,000 subscribers showed:

- 77 percent are ages 30-64 and 44 percent are the parents of children under 17 living at home;
- 76 percent have one or more college degrees, with 43 percent having three or more;
- 66 percent are in professional or managerial positions;
- 94 percent are homeowners, with 49 percent owning homes larger than 2,000 square feet and 37 percent owning two to five properties;
- half earn more than $75,000 and 25 percent have investments between $500,000 and $5 million; and
- 41 percent own luxury and sport utility vehicles while 78 percent own vehicles worth more than $25,000.

"The subscriber base is perfectly consistent with the target audience," said Zogby.

That was good news to founder and publisher Ahmad Chebbani, the soft-spoken Lebanese native and successful accountant who originally started the magazine 18 months ago as a business publication.

Chebbani's initial vision – of a high-end magazine to serve a growing segment and give it a voice to the larger community – has since undergone a transition which led to the bi-monthly magazine's being revamped to appeal also to women and families.

He recently brought on board as editor-in-chief Karim Alrawi, an Egyptian-born, British-raised international political analyst and playwright who has done two plays for Meadow Brook Theatre and whose third, debuting there in February, will deal with Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

Alrawi, who also has co-authored studies on censorship and human rights, led the revamping of Arabica.

Its new look, design and content, which which debuted with the current November/December issue and maintained the upscale feel, includes a focus on culture and lifestyle.

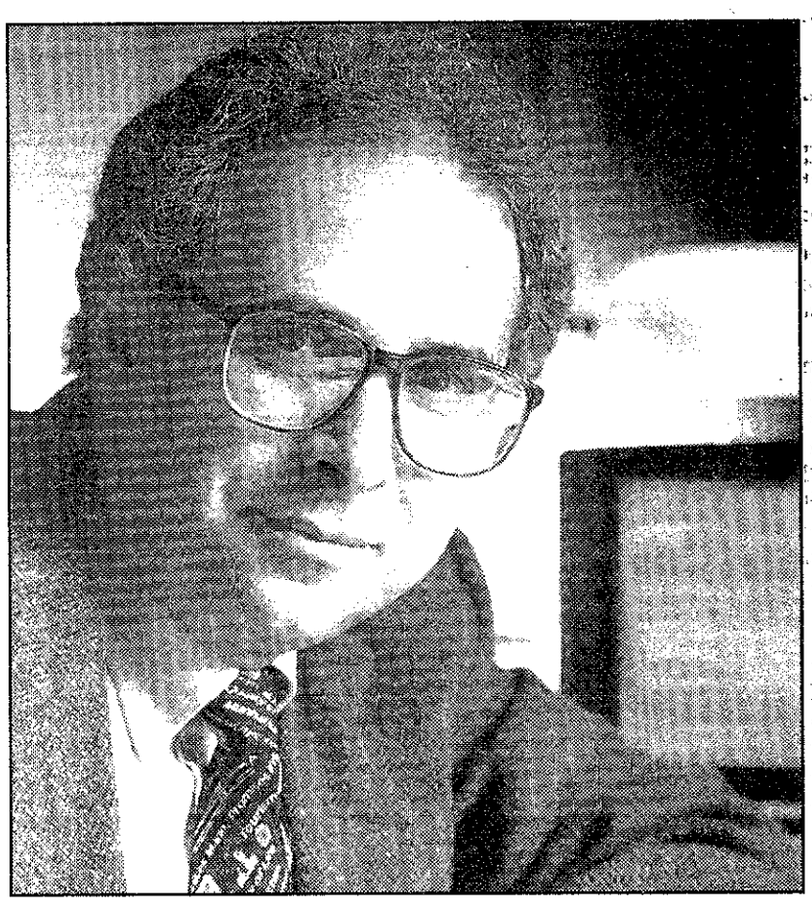

While it continues to address business – there are features on the highly successful, Dearborn-based La Shish restaurant chain and on the new Arabic-themed casino in Las Vegas – it also includes features on Hayek and Coptic art; articles on the Jewish vice-presidential candidate, Sen. Joseph Lieberman, and pieces on Saudi Arabia's transition from oil to cyberspace and on the Palestinians' future.

It seems to closely follow part of Chebbani's mission statement: To be "the voice of the community in the ongoing dialogue that is shaping American society in the twenty-first century."

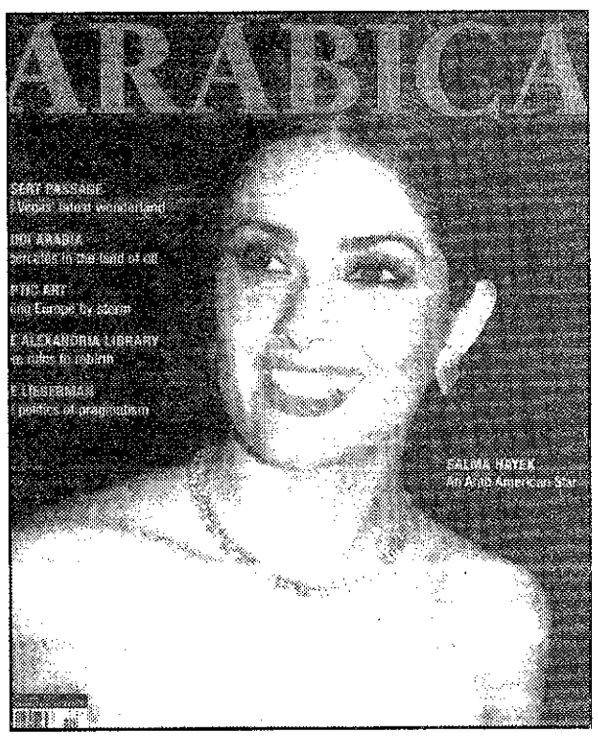

But what about following up that cover of Hayek, who incidentally is both Lebanese and Mexican?

Managing Director Mike Berry isn't worried. There's more than one beautiful actress of Arabic ancestry, he said.

Arabica Magazine is available on newsstands and in some Border's and Barnes & Noble bookstores.

Marketing man: John Zogby, noted political pollster, has created a marketing study of Arab-Americans.

Beautiful beginning: Film actress Salma Hayek is featured on the cover of the revised Arabica.

Western Wayne moves on enhanced 911 service

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

The Conference of Western Wayne has given unanimous approval to a pair of resolutions dealing with telephone communications for its 18 municipalities.

One resolution authorized CWW Executive Director Marsha Bianconi to proceed with wireless 9-1-1 enhancement while the other opposes the plan by Ameritech and other local providers to install area-code overlays. The resolutions were approved at the CWW's mid-November meeting at the Romulus City Hall.

The 9-1-1 resolution authorized Bianconi to informally negotiate and sign, on behalf of the CWW, standard non-disclosure statements with wireless phone companies serving the area.

The move is part of CWW's Phase I effort to improve wireless 9-1-1 emergency telephone service within the CWW's telephone service district. Once fully implemented, the service will let police and fire departments confirm where emergency calls from cellular and digital phones originate, just as they do now with land-line phones.

It will be useful both in false alarms and in situations in which the call is interrupted before it's completed.

Bianconi said the agreements protect the seven provider companies' proprietary information. In addition, having a single signatory streamlines the Phase I process, she said.

The companies are Ameritech, WorldCom, Media One, TCG, GTE/Verizon, Allegiance and Focal. Only Ameritech provides local service in all CWW communities.

Although Phase I has a six-month timetable, Bianconi said there are over 30 Michigan counties trying to implement it, so it's likely to be staggered. "I'm taking my time with it," she said. "I'd rather do it right" than have to re-do it.

As for the area-code overlays, the CWW's 18 governmental representatives adopted the Flint Chamber of Commerce resolution opposing them.

The plan would establish new area codes within the existing 810, 248, 313 and 734 areas, thus requiring 10- or 11-digit dialing for calls made to the new numbers, whether they're to phones, in the next room or office or across the street.

Ameritech, GTE and others say the increased demand for fax, second-line and cellular/digital phone numbers has depleted the supply, necessitating the overlays.

But the Flint Chamber says the problem is the issuance of numbers in blocks of 10,000 to new local phone-service providers.

It says that policy should be reconsidered or, if the numbers truly have been used up, then new geographic area codes should be created, not codes within codes.

The Michigan Public Service Commission has scheduled a public hearing Dec. 11 in Pontiac on the proposed 248 area-code relief plan. The meeting will be at 1:30 p.m. in the city council chambers, 47450 Woodward.

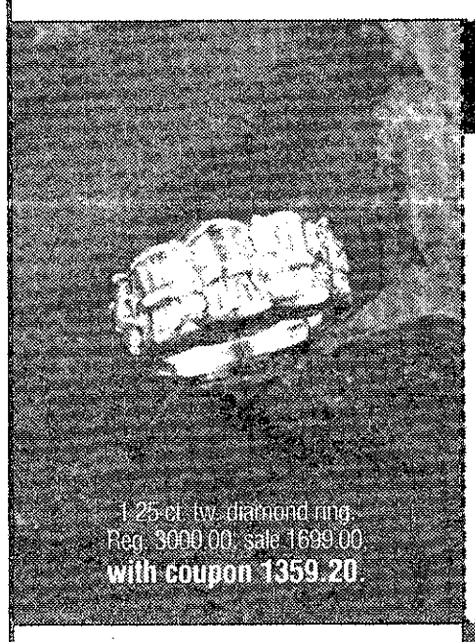

Part of Livonia and all of Farmington and Farmington Hills are in the 248 area code.

Flint, which is fighting the 586 overlay planned for its 810 area, is awaiting a decision on the matter from the MPSC. The decision is expected by year's end, according to MPSC spokeswoman Mary Jo Kunkle.

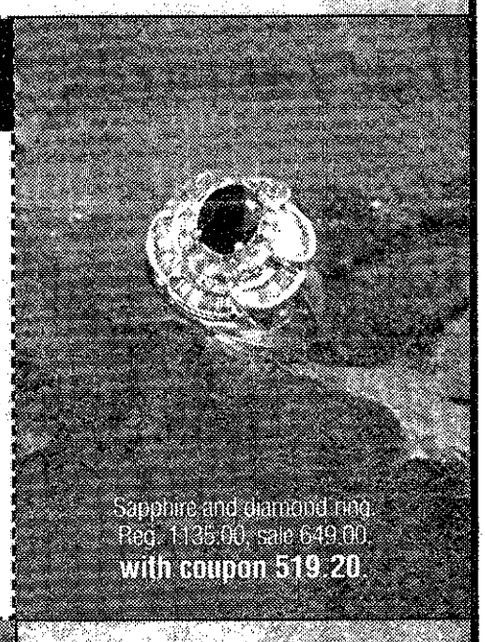

The PSC recently ruled that the 517 area be reduced in size and that a new 989 geographic area code be implemented for Saginaw and other communities.

Problem gambling linked more to lottery than casinos

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Problem gambling in Michigan appears to be more closely linked to the state lottery than to the opening of three new casinos in Detroit, at least for the time being.

The number of calls from state residents seeking help through Michigan's compulsive gambling helpline peaks after lottery games produce especially large prizes, according to Jim McBryde, who heads up the state's program within the Department of Community Health. Casinos haven't produced any appreciable jump in the number of calls, running typically at less than 2,000 per month, McBryde said.

That would not be a surprise to mental health counselors, who predicted that among players caught up in addiction through Detroit's new gambling houses, fewer than 1 percent would seek treatment in the first year. Compulsive gambling typically is a long-term problem, as the tragedy in Farmington Hills last week points out.

Jihad Moukalled wrote in a suicide note that he started gambling more than 10 years ago. He then took the lives of his three children and his pregnant wife before taking his own Tuesday, Nov. 21.

McBryde attributes the lottery-related spikes in helpline calls to two possible causes: the big cash prizes attract players and cause them financial trouble with their overspending on tickets, or the increases simply come from the fact the phone number is printed on the back of every lottery slip.

In October, some 1,450 residents called and 135 were confirmed to be compulsive gamblers, that is they ranked high on a screening test given right over the telephone. Those who are identified to be problem or compulsive gamblers can get referrals through the helpline to support groups like Gamblers Anonymous and counselors for treatment. Since financial trouble is a frequent result of excessive gaming, the state will make up to 12 one-on-one counseling sessions available to gamblers who cannot afford to pay for it themselves.

Gamblers themselves are often in denial while the financial burdens fall heaviest on immediate family members. So those family members can get help, too, through the helpline. Both counseling sessions and support groups, like Gam-Anon, are available to family and friends of addicted gamblers.

Nelson Westrin, executive director of the Michigan Gaming Control Board, said the state is preparing to roll out a new compulsive gaming program. Players who believe is it time for them to quit can sign up with the state to be excluded from Michigan casinos.

Once they sign, their appearance in a gaming house could lead a year in jail or a $10,000 fine. Harsh as it is, the program is designed to give addicted players a strong incentive to stay away from casinos.

Similar programs already exist at the three Detroit casinos, Westrin and McBryde explained, although they are not as harsh. Troubled gamblers can voluntarily sign up to be "disassociated" from the casino. Casino workers then receive photos of those players, and if they show up, are immediately ejected from the building.

McBryde gave credit to the Detroit casinos for their efforts to deal with compulsive gambling. All three have been more active at initiating programs and posting signs of the compulsive gambling helpline than is typical of casinos elsewhere, he said.

Michigan law requires the casinos to fund much of the state's compulsive gambling program from their profits. Just to open, the casinos had to put up a total of $2 million to get the program under way, out of a state services fund totaling $25 million.

Michigan's Compulsive Gambling Helpline is (800) 270-7117 and operates 24 hours a day.

Gamblers Anonymous has a Michigan Hotline at (313) 792-2877. More than 35 local chapters of the group meet weekly throughout the state.

Gam-Anon, for family and friends of addicted gamblers, can be reached at (718) 352-1671.

Problem gambling signs

According to the National Council on Problem Gambling, pathological gambling behavior is indicated by five or more of the following characteristics:

- Preoccupation with gambling, reliving past experiences, handicapping or planning the next venture or thinking of ways to get money with which to gamble;
- Need to gamble with increasing amounts of money in order to achieve the desired level of excitement;
- Repeated, unsuccessful attempts to control, cut back or stop gambling;
- Restlessness or irritability when attempting to stop or cut down gambling;
- Using gambling as a way to escape problems of the day or a bad mood;
- After losing money, returning to "get even" (often called chasing one's losses);
- Lying to family members, a therapist or others to conceal the extent of involvement with gambling;
- Committing illegal acts such as forgery, fraud, theft or embezzlement to finance gambling;
- Jeopardizing or losing a significant relationship, job or educational or career opportunity because of gambling;
- Relying on others to provide money to relieve a desperate financial situation caused by gambling.

Seat effort cushions renovation costs

The Van Buren school district is looking for people to become part of Belleville High School history while at the same time helping out with the costs of re-upholstering the auditorium's 32-year-old seats.

The district's Adopt-a-Seat program allows donors, for $50 a seat, to make tax-deductible pledges toward reupholstering the auditorium's 1,000 seats. Donors will get their names printed onto plaques that will be displayed in the auditorium's lobby. Belleville alumni may indicate which class they graduated with as part of the plaque recognition.

So far just under $10,000 has been raised through donations, said Jody Ihlenfeldt, auditorium manager.

"We're real far from our goal of $50,000," Ihlenfeldt said. "We've been at every function the schools have to try to raise money."

Each seat cost an estimated $68 to reupholster.

"We thought $50 would be a little more palatable for people," she said.

Anyone interested in donating to the district's Adopt a Seat program may call (734) 697-9123, ext. 225 or write to Van Buren Public Schools, Adopt a Seat, 555 W. Columbia, Belleville, MI 48111. Donations are tax deductible.

Rose's play was made into a critically-acclaimed 1957 film starring Henry Fonda, Lee J. Cobb and E.G. Marshall. It was directed by Sidney Lumet. A 1997 remake released in theaters starred George C. Scott and Jack Lemmon.

The single-set play centers entirely on the jury deliberations. Set pieces include chairs, a table, a window and ceiling to simulate the jury room. A water cooler is the only prop outside the jury deliberation room.

The cast includes Amanda Andrewjeski, Adam Hogan, T.C. Anderson, Laura Sucher, Lisette Wise, Natasha Witherspoon, Jason Wertz, Duran Johnson, Delissha Woods, Sara Hanna, Kari Mizer, Dan Luchi and Jordan Carr.

The student director is Bethany Crews.

Koch said he's impressed with the way the student actors tackled what he described as "heavy duty drama."

"I'm pleased because they've taken on quite adult roles," he said. "They're emoting very well."

For more information, call Belleville High School at (734) 697-9133.

Blanket campaign is under way

Thousands of people will be forced to take refuge in shelters this winter when they find themselves suddenly homeless. With over one hundred shelters in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, there is a desperate need for blankets. The Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross hopes to collect 7,000 blankets for these shelters through Dec. 31.

St. Mary Mercy Hospital has been designated as a Blanket Days drop-off site. The community is asked to bring new and gently used blankets, preferably twin-size, to the Five Mile Lobby.

St. Mary Mercy Hospital is at 36475 Five Mile in Livonia.

Our fundamental purposes are to enhance the lives of our readers, nurture the hometowns we serve and contribute to the business success of our customers.

Holidays require an open heart and checkbook too

It's the happiest time of the year for many, with Christmas and related celebrations showing up on the calendar.

Santa's coming to town – literally. Mr. Claus makes his annual appearance Monday at the Canton Tree Lighting Ceremony. This year's festivities are at Fire Station No. 1 beginning at 7 p.m. We know Santa is eager to hear the holiday wishes of good boys and girls and we're sure he'll be thrilled with a large turnout by them in Canton.

After Monday, Christmas will be officially here in Canton, making it an ideal time to share the spirit of goodwill.

Give what you can, help when you can. Remember those in need.

Already, signs of Christmas have been seen in abundance. On Saturday, the Canton Goodfellows will be out in full force, selling their holiday papers to raise money. Look for them at township intersections and in front of these local businesses: Holiday Market, Farmer Jack, Kroger, Old Country Buffet, Richardson's Drugs, Community Federal Credit Union, Alpha Graphics and others.

The Goodfellows hope to provide toys and donations for some 250 local kids this year, according to president Nancy Spencer.

The Goodfellows are just among the many who take time this time of year to give to others. The cheerful ring of the Salvation Army bell has already been heard, reminding shoppers to dig deep to help those in need as part of the red kettle campaign.

The Observer is accepting donations through its Cheer Club. Just drop off new, unwrapped toys or canned goods at our offices at 794. S. Main during business hours and we'll make sure your donation gets to those who can use it most during the holidays.

Maybe you've been looking for a way to get involved this year. Why not call the Salvation Army at (734) 453-5464 to ask about being a volunteer bell ringer? You'll be helping a good cause and also feeling good about what you're doing.

When you open your purse or wallet to give this year, just do the best you can and don't worry about not giving more. Just do what you can, and take pride in knowing that you've helped.

Small contributions add up into bigger ones, so if we each do our part no one should have to go hungry or shiver from the cold.

Canton is humming with the signs of success and prosperity. So let's take some time this holiday season to be people of goodwill. Give what you can, help when you can and remember all those in need.

OK, you've sold me

This theater thing just might work after all

I'll admit it up front. When Tom Yack began talking about Canton as the home for a regional performing arts center a few years ago I was, well, less than thrilled. My arduous training as a journalist (OK, professional cynic) told me this was the last thing local government should be putting on its to-do list.

Pick up that trash? Yes. Make sure the neighborhoods are safe? Sure. Even throw in a park and a pool or five at the Summit. But keep the simple services effective and the tax rate low and you've got a recipe for municipal success.

Tedd Schneider

We definitely don't need our local officials going ga ga over some temple for the "arts," is what I thought. Especially one that will sit empty most nights while the overwhelming majority of residents snuggle into La-Z-Boys with the remote and a cold pop. Well, it's beginning to look like I was wrong. And not just about the cultural proclivities of Canton's still-growing population.

A $5.5 million, 400-seat performing arts and education center is about to leap from concept in a forward-thinking township supervisor's mind to an architect's drawing board. A design subcommittee of the planned theater's core committee will make a final decision on the architect by mid-December. From there – assuming all the pieces fall into place – it will become the brick-and-mortar embodiment of Yack's vision. (The brick part is especially true if certain planning commissioners have their way.)

And you know what? The journalist/cynic really likes the idea. Damn near gushes about it when describing it to friends and colleagues. Here's why:

■ Location, location, location. Plans call for the theater to be a centerpiece in Cherry Hill Village. So not only will the project be a regional drawing card, but it will function as a key, non-residential component for the neo-traditional "village" going up near Cherry Hill and Ridge Roads. It will help forge the identity of Cherry Hill as an atypical, suburban development.

■ Togetherness. The theater project is fostering a spirit of cooperation in the local arts community that hasn't always been easy to come by, but will pay big dividends down the road. The core committee has representatives from Canton Project Arts, the Plymouth Canton Theater Guild, the Peter Sparling Dance Company and others, as well as the township and the Canton Community Foundation. The finished product is expected to play host to the Plymouth Community Chorus, the Plymouth-Canton Ballet Company, youth theater groups and visual arts exhibitions. Although the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra would need a larger hall for full concerts, it may still stage chamber music or sponsor other performances at the theater. Planners say the theater will be used at least 150 nights per year.

■ Education. Students at all age levels will have a new resource in the community and a new facility to jump-start their interest in the arts. Committee members have made the project's educational component a priority and are talking about everything from presentations aimed at schools to student exhibitions to hands-on training in theater arts such as costuming and staging.

■ Costs. Much like the township did with the Summit, Yack is looking to a combination of private funds, grants and a fund-raising campaign to get the project off the ground. In September, Canton received a $300,000 state arts, cultural and quality of life grant for the theater. The township itself will put up $2 million for construction and Cherry Hill Village developers another $2 million. The supervisor is committed to the project but won't ask for any kind of tax increase to help foot the bill.

So it looks as if my "can't do" attitude has been vanquished when it comes to the performing arts center. I just can't resist the supervisor's dogged determination on this one and I've buckled in to the unbelievable optimism of the two dozen or so dedicated individuals who are seeing the theater plans through its infancy.

In fact, I've accepted an invitation to join their committee. And I promise to check my cynicism at the door for all official meetings and functions.

■ Electoral College fails

In an article I wrote in early September of this year, I attempted to explain the mechanics of how the Electoral College works, or does not work, and postulated it was time to discard it and allow the people to elect the president by direct vote.

I suggested in this election year the system would misfire, by which I meant the winner in the Electoral College would not get even a plurality of the votes cast. It appears this prognostication was correct. If George "W" wins the Electoral College, but does not receive as many popular votes as Al Gore, then the guess was correct.

Has this happened before? Yes, on three occasions - all in the 19th century. It occurred in 1824, 1876 and 1888. The three presidents elected in these elections were ineffective and were not re-elected. It can be argued persuasively that the "people" rejected them.

I suppose that some TV pundit could argue they would have been failures as president anyway, but being elected with less votes than their respective opponents sure didn't help. Of course, in today's lexicon of political verbiage, the word "mandate" is used - some would say overused. That is, could either of our two current presidential aspirants argue (except with tongue in cheek) that he has an endorsement of the people to enact his respective platform on which he based his campaign? Hardly.

Indeed, I suggest such an argument is impossible if the winner fails to receive even a plurality of votes. He will no doubt try to do so anyway (maybe by putting two tongues in two cheeks at the same time). But, I predict a failed effort, an ineffective presidency, and a one-term president. I do not have much pity for the president-elect in this setting, but I do have considerable sympathy for us, the people.

Let me return to my initial premise that the Electoral College has not worked again and that it has "misfired." We have had something in excess of 50 presidential elections. In only three of them has the Electoral College winner failed to receive a plurality of votes.

We now face the real possibility of a fourth; that is, if you can believe the election returns told, and retold ad nauseum, by the TV media. There is, however, one good outcome to this bombast of information - the people are getting smarter by the minute.

I dare say the American people know more about the Electoral College system now than at any time in our 213-year history. This is good. It is an essential tenet of the theory of a successful democracy that the people are knowledgeable and informed.

Indeed, people now seem to be not only informed, they seem to be aroused and maybe even angry. One TV pundit recently stated that a poll of people who failed to vote on Election Day indicated that two-thirds of them (the non-voters) would vote if they had the chance again. This is an absolutely amazing fact since, no doubt, some of these non-voters probably thought the Electoral College was some type of educational institution located in rural Ohio.

What if the Electoral College had "misfired" not just three or four times, but 20 or 30 times? Do you believe that a knowledgeable and informed, aroused and angered citizenry would have allowed such a result where the winner receives less than a plurality of votes? I suggest that such a scenario would have produced a grassroots, surging effort to eliminate the Electoral College long before now.

Timing is always important. Perhaps now is the time. The people should be allowed to elect our president by direct popular vote. The Electoral College does not necessarily allow this result. Any new system we might fashion would probably still permit a president to be elected without a majority of the popular vote if there are third-party candidates.

The Electoral College was not crafted by the founding fathers to give small states a disproportionate vote. Rather, it was crafted to avoid the "tyranny of the majority." Unfortunately, it now allows for the minority to rule the majority.

Furthermore, the Founding Fathers provided in the Constitution for a method to amend the Constitution. They knew things would change and the Constitution would have to be amended from time to time. Let us use that wisdom too.

John Thomas

■ On discrimination

This week's editorial (Observer, Nov. 23, Page A16) concludes, "Discrimination in any form is inherently wrong." Really?

Today's society prohibits convicted pedophiles – based on their behavioral choices – from being employed as day-care workers. That's a form of discrimination. Smokers are banned from sitting on airplanes or in certain sections of restaurants or entering most government buildings while exercising their particular behavioral choice. That's a form of discrimination. Convicted drunk drivers, based on their behavioral choices, are eventually prohibited from driving. That's a form of discrimination.

Society judges these and numerous other forms of discrimination to be justified, even laudable.

Are you sure your editorial writers believe, in contrast, that "any" form of discrimination, including those listed above, is inherently wrong?

Don't you mean that any irrational form of discrimination is wrong. For instance, it is irrational to prejudge or discriminate against a person based on his or her skin color or ethnic background, since those are characteristics that tell you nothing about the person's character, judgment, reliability, or likely behavior?

Once again, in clear contrast, if a person knowingly and repeatedly engages in: (1) behavior that constitutes a felony violation of state criminal code, (2) behavior that a 2-to-1 majority of Americans believes is "wrong," and (3) behavior that is scientifically proven to increase the risk of certain forms of cancer by 4,000 percent and cut up to 20 years off his life span: Is it irrational to take such willful, self-destructive, even life-threatening behavioral choices into account when assessing that person's character, judgment, reliability, and likely future behavior?

Gary Glenn, President
American Family Association of Michigan

■ Is it too much?

We are excited by the new possibilities in downtown Plymouth including the Wilcox project. But we wonder how much is too much? We hope the city commissioners will not let their quest for tax dollars spoil the character of our wonderful town.

Downtown Plymouth - charming, livable, traditional - with a real Main Street USA feel has anchored the community for decades. Why ruin the ambiance?

Are multi-story complexes crammed on small lots, crowding our beautiful park and downtown streets charming?

Will the inevitable competition for parking spaces due to encroaching development make our town livable? How will our much used new library and enlarged museum cope?

Will too many new bars and restaurants crowd out our popular main street business mix of retail and professional?

Do we really want the "Royal Oak scene" in Plymouth where so many of their signature shops were forced out?

We are all for progress and improvement but not at the expense of the character of our town. Greedy and thoughtless development will forever alter what made Plymouth special to begin with. We will then look like every other homogenized "upscale" suburban crossroads and lose our unique charm.

The city commissioners have the fate of our community in their hands. We hope they have the wisdom to temper their enthusiasm with prudence. To register your concerns, please attend the Planning Commission meeting on Dec. 13 at 7 p.m. on the second floor of City Hall. The issue is too important to ignore.

■ Only one Civitan

Recent press articles have inadvertently suggested that two separate Civitan clubs exist in the area, one in Plymouth and one in Canton. Such is not the case. One club only has been sanctioned and chartered. Its correct name is the Plymouth-Canton Civitan Club.

Trouble in auto industry still means trouble in Michigan

Economists like to play the "good news, bad news" game. And the economists at the University of Michigan are no exception to the rule.

In their most recent publication, "The Michigan Economic Outlook for 2001-2002," the U-M experts predicted our state's economy will remain strong next year but the rate of growth will start slowing down. Saul Hymans, Joan Crary and George Fulton have been looking at our state's economy for years; their forecasts are widely regarded as the best in the business.

Phil Power

Clearly, we have been enjoying the best economic times in most people's memories:

■ By year-end, the Michigan economy will have turned in its ninth straight year of job growth, the longest run of prosperity in 50 years.

■ Unemployment is at record low levels. As a practical matter, anybody who wants a job and has transportation can get one.

■ In five of the past six years, the manufacturing work week has been longer than for any prior year since 1970. Long work weeks means big overtime checks, not to mention bigger profit sharing payouts as the auto companies share good profits.

Next year won't be quite as good, according to the U-M experts:

■ Auto and truck sales will slow down, the victim of increased interest rates, which make car payments more expensive. The auto companies are already trying to cope with a soft market by offering big cash incentives.

■ Because auto sales will drop, manufacturing employment will go down. Michigan's unemployment rate, which has been below the national average for more than five years, will match it by 2002, with seven out of eight job losses coming from the durable manufacturing sector.

■ Businesses already clamoring for skilled labor will face tight labor markets as they try to grow. The U-M economists point out that labor shortages will likely be one of the biggest barriers to growth next year.

Things won't be all bad, though, especially as big investment decisions made in the last few years begin to be translated into bricks and mortar. General Motors' new assembly plant in Lansing will open sometime next year; GM also plans on spending $1.5 billion on research and engineering facilities in southeastern Michigan. The Detroit Lions' new football stadium is still under construction, and the $1.2 billion renovation at Detroit Metro Airport will boost service employment in 2001.

Five out of six new jobs in Michigan will come from the service and retail sectors, according the U-M economists, which should result in a 3.4 percent unemployment rate next year, higher than this year but still lower than 1970. Rising labor and materials costs will increase the rate of inflation from 2.3 percent this year to 2.6 percent in 2001.

For what it's worth, my own personal view is slightly less optimistic than the U-M forecast. I think the auto industry is facing big time problems and I figure most middle managers have become so used to good times they have little idea what to do when the economy turns south.

The real interest rate (i.e. the difference between the prime rate the banks charge their best customers and the underlying rate of inflation) is very high by historic standards. High interest rates have already cut sharply into current sales. And it looks as though the only way for the auto companies to keep sales up is by offering enormously expensive incentives. Chrysler is clearly headed for a major retrenchment.

Next year won't be quite as good, according to the U-M experts.

The auto supplier industry is scared stiff, and not just the American parts makers who are worried the Germans now in charge of Chrysler will dump them for foreign firms. For a number of years now, the auto companies have required suppliers to both increase quality and cut prices, maybe 3 percent one year, maybe 4 percent the next. The pressure is now so bad in the supplier chain that many companies can only remain profitable by running at full-tilt, three-shift basis. What happens if parts orders slow down?

And I understand that the bad loan workout departments at local banks are already busier than they have been in years.

Over the past few years, the Michigan economy has become much more diversified and less dependent on the auto industry. But the auto companies and the supplier chain still represent the guts of our economy. And trouble for the auto industry still means trouble for the rest of Michigan.

So if I were you, I wouldn't blow all your bonus check on Christmas shopping. I'd keep some tucked away for a rainy day.

Legalized gambling claims more victims

Mike Malott

What kind of a casualty rate are we willing to accept in our pursuit of a good time?

James Dobson, the ultra-conservative president of Focus on the Family, phrased the question that way a year ago. He was referring to America's growing affinity for gambling despite the fact we know that some, typically 5 percent, will become compulsive about it and, as a result, lives will be destroyed.

Now more than ever, it is time we consider what our answer is going to be here in Michigan.

Legalized gambling claimed its latest victims last week in Farmington Hills. After returning from a trip to Las Vegas, Jihad Moukalled wrote out a note explaining that he had been gambling for more than 10 years. He suffocated his three children, ages 3, 5 and 7; killed his pregnant wife; and then took his own life.

Police Chief William Dwyer said the suicide note sent chills up his spine, especially a line in which Moukalled stated, "I was gripped by the hope of one more shot." That's the fallacy that drives addicted gamblers, Dwyer said, the belief that the next bet might turn it all around for them.

Almost as shocking, if you ask me, is what police found in the kitchen wastebasket in Moukalled's home – torn up "markers" from the MGM Grand in Vegas worth $225,000. The markers show he was, in essence, gambling on credit.

How could a casino let a player run himself into debt by almost a quarter million dollars?

Jim McBryde, who heads up the compulsive gambling program in the Michigan Department of Community Health, is also surprised by the amount.

"Someone should have seen that he was getting himself into trouble and put a stop to it," he said.

It turns out that extending credit to a player is common practice, according to Nelson Westrin, executive director of the Michigan Gaming Control Board. There are some, known as "whales" to the casino operators, who regularly play with thousands, even millions of dollars. They don't walk around carrying cash.

The practice is limited to the highest rollers, Westrin said. They have to be regulars and have to pass a credit check. It isn't in the casino's interest to run players into bankruptcy because it has to count those markers as revenue and pay taxes on the amount regardless of whether it can collect, Westrin said. He was explaining the practice, not endorsing it.

Nevertheless, it seems to me that the practice is particularly well suited to the destruction of lives.

Many who have enjoyed even moderate success in life could make themselves look like high rollers for a time, but they'd be playing with their life savings. I doubt casino credit checks are designed to protect out-of-control gamblers from themselves. A gambler on the way down might be able to qualify for more credit then he or she could really afford to lose.

How could a casino let a player run himself into debt by almost a quarter million dollars? ... I doubt casino credit checks are designed to protect out-of-control gamblers from themselves.

Not only could someone bet away a life savings in one afternoon, a gambler could do it without having to slow down long enough to go withdraw it from the bank.

Granted, this happened out of state. We might not be able to convince Nevada to end the practice, but if we are going to embrace legalized gambling here in Michigan, as we have, we would be well advised to curtail activities likely to encourage compulsive gambling. A ban on credit in casinos, or at least restrictions on the amount that can be given, would now seem to be well worth considering. Forcing players to put up their money up front is a good way to insure they can really afford to bet it.

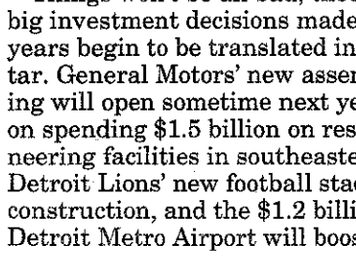

Better yet would be a moratorium on new games, as a federal panel called for last year, or even a re-examination of whether we need everything from a lottery to horse racing to casinos in Michigan.

We should think about all this before the toll gets any higher ... because it will.

The chance to win big too often rings hollow

Twice a week I spend a couple dollars for Lotto tickets. I dream of making that big hit that will allow me not a life of leisure but an independent life.

Hugh Gallagher

Those pipe dreams are often just enough to keep someone going, especially through the gloomy dark months of winter in Michigan. Visions of a sandy beach, gulf breezes, funny drinks with umbrellas are a salve against wet snow and black ice.

Then I can also tell myself that I'm helping public education. The money goes for a good cause and it's not enough to make a major difference in my life. I spend more for coffee.

But, as we discover more each day, that kind of casual gambling – a Lotto ticket, a bingo game, a football pool – is not enough for some people.

The tragedy of the Moukalled family in Farmington Hills is unusually painful and sad. According to police reports, Jihad Moukalled, a successful, hardworking businessman, killed himself and his family because of overwhelming gambling debts.

Moukalled began his gambling odyssey at Casino Windsor but then began traveling out of state to follow his tragic obsession. According to Farmington Hills Police Chief Bill Dwyer, Moukalled went elsewhere to travel because of the strong prohibitions against gambling of his Islamic faith.

Sunday marked the beginning of the holy month of Ramadan and this tragedy will offer much to reflect upon by area Muslims and all of us.

Not all religions prohibit gambling and not all gamblers become deeply indebted and self-destructive. For many people going to a casino or a racetrack is a simple night out, a chance to play a few games, have a few laughs and that's it. For most people, a set limit for loss never exceeds the cost of going to a stage play or a professional sporting event.

But for others, it doesn't end there.

As the payoff grows in the Lotto games, some people feel compelled to drop more and more money into a game where their chance of winning is extremely slim. When the one-armed bandit awards a nice prize for a small contribution, some people keep feeding it with the impossible hope of realizing an even bigger return, like a pump that's been primed to keep giving.

When the casinos opened in Detroit, many concerned people were upset that the victims would be relatively poor people who would throw away their money on sucker bets. The experts say that the number of people seeking help for gambling problems has not grown significantly and that many of those with problems are Lotto players, not casino goers.

Perhaps it is too early to tell what the impact of the casinos will be on Detroit.

But it is perhaps too early to tell what the impact of the casinos will be on Detroit. It isn't the city poor who crowd the casinos but the suburban middle class with a steady income they hope to use to hit the jackpot.

Even in their preliminary incarnations, the casinos make brightly colored baubles in a generally dreary urban landscape. The bright lights, snazzy appointments, uniformed valets suggest a revival of life that is probably as phony as the promise of getting rich with the twirl of a roulette wheel. Detroit suggests the ugly disparity of Atlantic City rather than the amusement park city of Las Vegas.

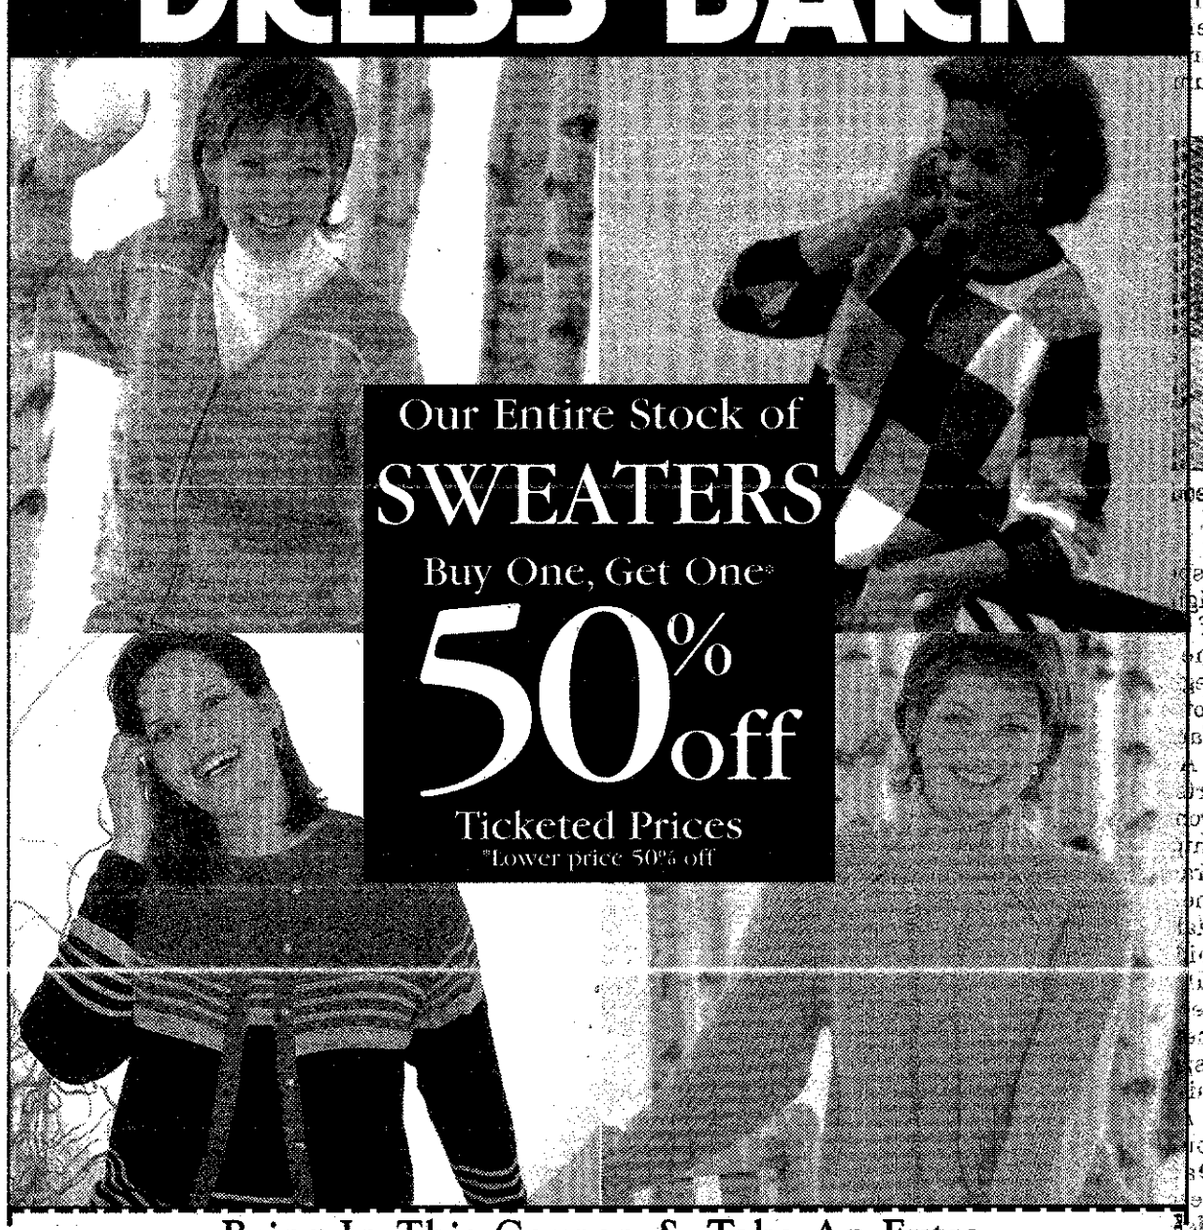

Still, wouldn't we like to believe it. Wouldn't we like to believe that gambling will not only save us individually from our lives of compromise, drudgery and routine but also save our central city from its dizzy, downhill spiral.

Don't bet on it.

Schools after state for 3rd time in new Durant lawsuit

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

School districts and the state government are at it again, fighting over funding.

Districts across the state filed their third lawsuit – known as Durant III – this month claiming that the state is underfunding schools for what they are owed for mandated special education programs under both the Headlee Amendment to the state Constitution and Proposal A.

More than 365 districts launched the suit, filed in the state Court of Appeals. Bloomfield Hills Attorney Dennis Pollard, representing the districts, believes the list of districts involved will eventually grow to more than 450.

What they are asking for is $417 million they say they've been shorted. Two previous lawsuits – Durant filed in 1980 and Durant II in 1998 – netted plaintiff districts more than $200 million in extra dollars from the state, they contend.

According to Pollard, the state is still "playing a shell game" with funding, counting money owed under the Headlee Amendment for special education as also fulfilling state obligations under Proposal A. The new lawsuit differs from the previous Durant suits in that a separate action was filed to contest allocations in more than a dozen other areas of funding.

'Frivolous suit'

But Gov. John Engler, according to spokesperson John Truscott, believes this most recent case is a "frivolous lawsuit" and that the state will seek first to have the suit dismissed.

Why then are so many districts signing on? "It's like the lottery for school districts. It's free. It costs them nothing. They are not paying the attorney fees, the taxpayers are and they might get lucky and get wealthy. There is no down side for the school districts," Truscott said. "We may have to ask that they pay their own attorney fees this time."

Truscott says shortages found in the first case have been fixed. While the court disagreed with the state's accounting in the second case, it did not agree that districts were being underpaid, Truscott argued. That accounting has been fixed as well, he said. And since then, the state has increased the state school aid budget more than ever before.

"Does that make any sense? Who pays attorney fees in a lawsuit? Does the winner pay attorney fees for the loser?" Pollard responded. "On the one hand, he wants to claim victory in the last case and on the other hand, he admits the state paid attorney fees – he admits he lost."

School view

A statement issued by 14 superintendents of district involved in the case explained their position. "The state is still playing games with the funding for special education. (The governor's) new scheme, similar to the last, uses the constitutionally guaranteed, unrestricted funding from Proposal A in order to meet the State's funding responsibility for special education costs ... The same dollar cannot be both, which is what the State is trying to do. In Durant II, the Michigan Court of Appeals made that point abundantly clear. By counting the same dollar twice, the State is pitting special education and general education parents against each other in a destructive fight for funding."

Signers included Michael Dixon, assistant superintendent, Rochester Schools; C. Robert Maxfield, superintendent, Farmington; John M. Schultz, superintendent, Rochester; and Dan C. Wertz, superintendent, Okemos.

Richard Headlee, author of the 1978 Headlee Amendment, has spoken out on behalf of the districts. In part, the amendment required the state to continue funding mandated programs at pre-1978 levels.

"Simply put, they decided to use local school districts' own revenues, guaranteed to them through Proposal A, to meet the State's funding obligation under the Headlee Amendment ... Michigan school districts were paid under this scheme out of their own financial resources for the State's wrongdoing," Headlee said. "Some concept. Consider for a moment how preposterous this legislative scheme truly was. This would be akin to a bank having been found guilty of not paying interest to its depositors on their savings accounts, turning around and shifting money from the checking accounts of those same depositors in order to remedy the bank's wrongdoing."

Local school districts joining the case so far include Avondale, Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Brandon, Clarkston, Clawson, DeWitt, East Lansing, Eaton Rapids, Eaton ISD, Farmington, Fenton, Garden City, Grand Ledge, Hazel Park, Huron Valley, Lake Orion, Lamphere, Livonia, Northville, Novi, Oak Park, Oakland ISD, Okemos, Oxford, Plymouth-Canton, Redford Union, Rochester, Royal Oak, South Lyon, South Redford, Southfield, Taylor, Troy, Van Buren, Walled Lake, Wayne County RESA, Wayne-Westland, and West Bloomfield.

Northwood has lunch classes

Northwood University is holding lunch-time learning classes in business management beginning Dec. 5 at Northwood's new Livonia Program Center, 38777 W. Six Mile Road, Suite 212 at the corner of Six Mile and I-275.

The first class, Philosophy 301: Ethics, will be taught by Michael Rasak of Livonia. Students will meet during lunch hour twice a week to earn college credits toward a management degree. The classes will run for 10 weeks with holiday time off.

Philosophy 301: Ethics is an analysis of the moral and ethical principles of our civilization and consideration of topics such as moral influence, responsibility, the Judeo-Christian traditions, humanism and law and order.

Holiday letters need to be personalized

Now that the turkey's been carved and the biggest shopping day of the year past, we're on the fast track to Christmas. Topping my "to do" list this week will be writing my annual Christmas letter.

I know, I know. There are a faction of people out there who hate them and another segment of the population that love them. I'm in the love group. Nothing is more of a letdown than opening up a Christmas card only to find this ...

"Happy Holidays — The Andersons"

It's particularly disheartening when it's from those people whom I don't hear from that often. What better an opportunity than to sit down and catch me up on what's been happening at your end of the mailbox than in a Christmas letter.

'First and foremost don't write a novel.'

Maybe it's my addiction to mail. I love getting mail. I remember in college I couldn't wait until the mail came after lunch to see who'd written me or sent me a card. Today it's the first thing I do when I get home from work. I love junk mail, catalogs, marketing survey's and magazines. Since the inception of e-mail my personal correspondence has dropped off somewhat, which is slightly disappointing, but at the same time it has improved the communication lines between some of those people that only scratched their name in a Christmas card once a year.

The right stuff

There are several approaches and some etiquette necessary to writing a good letter. First and foremost don't write a novel. Either choose some clever way to run through your past year like listing the top 10 things you did or create a one-page scrapbook of scanned pictures highlighting your travels or milestones during 2000.

Another no, no is dishing the family dirt. A friend of our family writes a letter so eyebrow raising, a Harlequin romance novel pales in comparison. In recent years she's talked about cheating sons-in-law, children who returned home, ongoing ailments, financially struggling siblings who don't repay old debts, divorces and more. I must admit it makes for interesting reading, but at the same time I cringe for her family who may not know she's divulging such personal information in a form letter.

Guidelines

Keep the tone of your letters light. They aren't meant to be depressing but need to strike a balance between what you and your family did this year and the letter becoming a brag fest.

Try writing a short resume for each family member. A brief synopsis of your children's activities, how you've been keeping busy on the weekends and someplace interesting you vacationed this year.

You might want to write two letters. One to those people who see you on a regular basis — for example a note explaining what you're thankful for — and another letter to friends and acquaintances. It's also possible not everyone on your Christmas list needs a letter.

A different twist on the Christmas letter is sending a holiday recipe. I once received a photograph of a friend's child mixing dough and attached to the back was a recipe card for cookies with a brief note from my friend. I thought it was particularly clever and the picture said more than a long letter could have!

If you include an e-mail address or maintain some kind of family Web site remember not everyone is online. Hand write a short personal note at the end of your letter in place of your e-mail address and include your phone number if it's someone you haven't spoken to in a while.

If you have a unique way of sharing your family news write HomeTown Editor, Kim Mortson, 36251 Schoolcraft Road, Livonia, MI 48150.

All wrapped up

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER

Girl Scouts from the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council are again offering gift wrapping services at three area malls during the holidays.

In their ninth year of business, Cadette/Senior Leader and Registrar Diane Bergendahl says the wrapping service the girls provide is "a job."

"In many instances this is the first job many of these girls have," said Bergendahl. "It's a good opportunity for them to learn how to handle money and to interact with customers."

Gift wrapping tables will be managed by approximately 200 scouts and adult supervisors now through Christmas Eve at Wonderland Mall (outside Wards and a second near the food court), Livonia Mall near Sears, and Laurel Park adjacent to Olga's restaurant.

"This is our seventh year at Wonderland and our ninth year in business," said Bergendahl. "We're pleased to be able to gift wrap at the new locations this year."

Kathy Swan, the mother of 13-year-old Girl Scout Christine Swan, said the troops are grateful for the complimentary space the shopping centers provide.

"All the malls should be commended for letting us be here rent free," said Swan. "They could be charging for the space we use but they welcome us back each year because shoppers count on us to wrap their gifts and they know their money is going to a good cause."

The motive for the girls working three-hour shifts after school and on the weekends until Christmas Eve is to raise money for scout activities and end-of-the-year trips.

Christine Brooks, 13, of Westland who is wrapping gifts with her mom Jane, is looking forward to the end of the year trip. "I don't know where I'm going to go yet," said Christine. Jane added that four of her six scouts from Troop No. 544 were volunteering at the gift wrapping tables in order to supplement the cost of their scout activities and field trips.

"The girls in my troop are really excited about being able to work like this," said Jane.

Gift-wrapping services are provided during school hours by the parents of Girl Scouts that come from Livonia, Westland, Redford, Novi, Farmington Hills, Inkster, Southfield, Detroit, Dearborn Heights, Northville and Allen Park. After school, 22 troops, ranging from seventh- to 12th-graders, work in three-hour shifts starting at 3 p.m. On the weekends the girls have the opportunity to work different hours and some former scouts return from college to lend a helping hand.

"We couldn't do this without the help of the troop leaders, parents, scouts and volunteers," said Bergendahl. Committee members and volunteers include Sue Roy, Carolyn Feathers, Jeanette Bray, Theresa Marshall, and Vicki Kowalski.

All of the bows are hand-made by the scouts as well as the more than 4,000 gift tags they use in the first few weeks. Gift wrapping isn't limited to gifts purchased at the malls either.

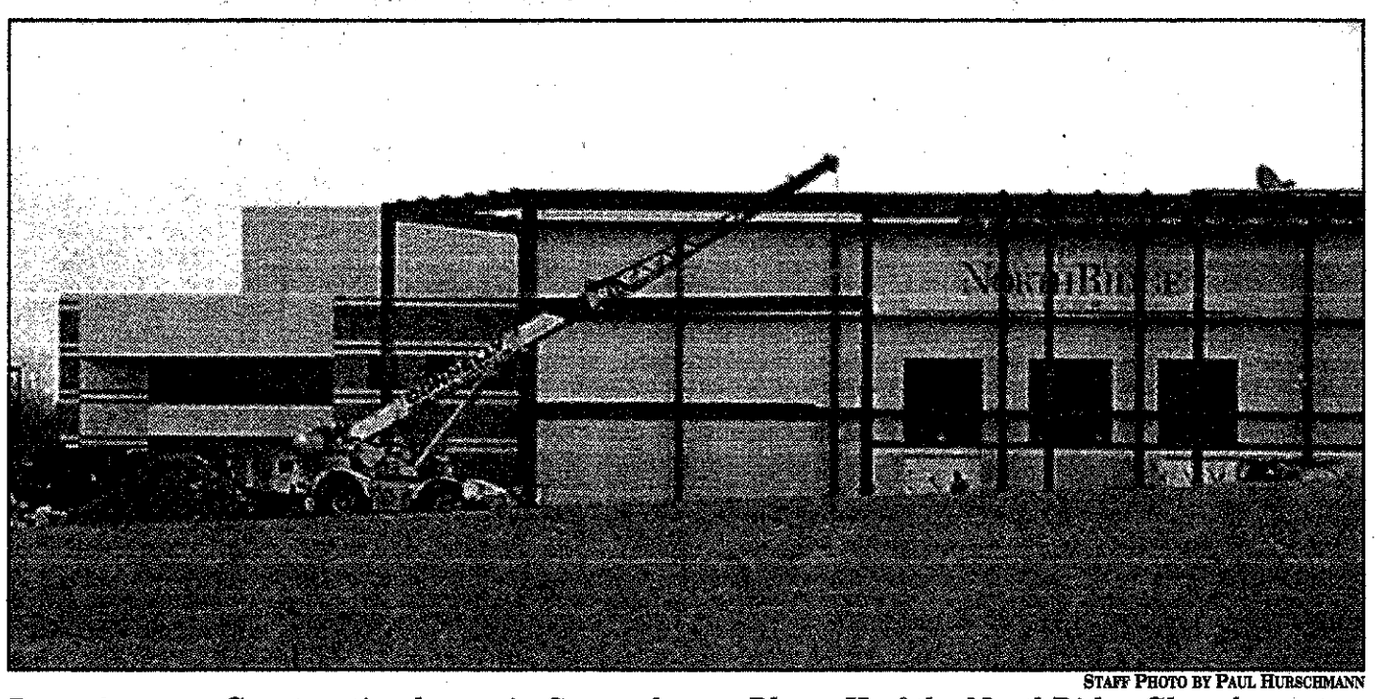

Bergendahl said every year Ollie Fretter, former chairman of the retail appliance business, drops off packages to be wrapped from stores as far away as New York. Last year Bergendahl and Swan estimate they collected $13,000 (before expenses) during the five-week holiday season. Swan said some people are more than generous and tip the scouts because they know the money is going toward something

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER
kmortson@oe.homecomm.net

Motorists making their way west on M-14 have undoubtedly seen the construction under way at NorthRidge Church in Plymouth. The existing church campus at 75,000 square feet is hard to miss. The current project, that began in mid-September, will add another 46,000 square feet of space onto the facility.

Under the design of Ann Arbor architectural firm Hobbs & Black and construction managers, The Christman Company of Lansing, Phase II of the NorthRidge Church is expected to be completed by December 2001.

According to Wayne Kurtycz, communications and front-line pastor at NorthRidge, the expansion will complete the final phase of the original master plan and has become a necessity due to the growing number of individuals and families who worship and socialize at the Plymouth church.

United by faith

"In April, the NorthRidge family took over the Compuware Arena [and] we all came together under one roof. That was exciting in itself because we have multiple services ... To show our heartfelt gratitude to God for what he is doing through the people of NorthRidge, now and for the future, we pledged over $8 million dollars over three years to fund Phase II," said Kurtycz. "Because it's not about the building of Phase II that is important. It is about the lives that will be changed that come into this building, it's about people."

Included in the 46,000-square-foot expansion will be a multi-purpose/banquet area, chapel, classrooms, a nursery for NorthRidge Kid's Ministry, and a new lobby featuring an exterior canopy offering shelter during inclement weather.

Kurtycz said one of the most unique and highly anticipated features of the construction project will be a "Starbucks" type café. "We are actually going to have our own Starbucks-style café — how cool is that!"

Multiple uses

NorthRidge members will use the multi-purpose area for programs, meetings and banquets as well as a place for worshippers to dine together during the church's Wednesday evening buffet. The chapel will be a "beautiful place for weddings" said Kurtycz and of the Kid's Ministry area he said, "We have kid's all over the place. NorthRidge is a kid's haven so we are going all out to give the kid's the kind of space they need to have fun with room to grow."

Aesthetic features of the addition include a large, spacious lobby accented by two stories of sea foam-colored glass.

While the expansion comes with a high price tag, Kurtycz said the April gathering of the NorthRidge family supported their belief that the lives they have and will change are worth every penny.

"The height of emotion was when the lights were turned off in the arena and we were asked how many of our lives had been changed by coming to this church. It was awesome to see the hundreds of [people] that lit candles representing how many of our lives had changed as a result of coming to NorthRidge. It was a moment that we will never forget. As we say around NorthRidge ...'Changed lives ... priceless!'"

NorthRidge Church offers contemporary music, concerts, and relevant talks is located at 49555 North Territorial Road, Plymouth Township. Sunday a "Seeker Sensitive Worship Service" is offered at 9:30 or 11:15 a.m. Visit NorthRidge on the Web at www. NorthRidgeChurch. com or call (734) 414-7777.

respiratory infections.

Erinne has pulled through pneumonia four times.

"Erinne's our little angel on loan to us," she said. "It has been tough on my faith, but I realize that God chose me to be her mom. I can honestly say I've never been angry with God. There's profound sadness, but I feel very honored. My job is to see how long I can keep her here. I know my other kids (Claire, 15, and Kevin, 9) feel that way, too. Erinne is different, very, very special."

The Williamses met Erinne's best friend, Olivia Werstein, and her parents, Cynthia and Chris, through a Web site for people with SMA. The two little girls have survived more challenges than most adults and together they are going to Disney World with their families Dec. 2-9. The vacation is paid for entirely by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Michigan.

"We don't know how many opportunities these girls will have to go together," Suzanne said. "Rather than wait, we thought we would get it now."

Erinne's wish is to have tea with Alice in Wonderland and Cinderella and Olivia wants to pet a real elephant and ride Dumbo. They'll maneuver the fantasy world of make-believe in their motorized wheelchairs.

The need to make the trip as soon as possible was accentuated when Erinne suffered from a respiratory infection that lead to a collapsed lung a week before the trip.

"The trip will be a nice positive change for the families," Suzanne said. "We will be able to take a break from the doctor's appointments, physical therapy appointments, machines and treatments."

But even the prospect of a fun-filled vacation was bittersweet.

When Suzanne asked Olivia's mom about taking the girls at the same time and accepting the Make-A-Wish offer, she knew the Brighton couple had to acknowledge the idea that their daughter may die at a young age.

"It's a final step: 'That my kid will get their wish granted,' " Suzanne explained.

Best of friends

The girls have had other adventures together, like appearing on the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon and being featured in Make-A-Wish public service television spot that will be shown during December.

But their futures aren't promising. Most people with SMA don't live past childhood.

"Our biggest problem is keeping her from getting respiratory infections," Suzanne said, explaining that neither she nor her husband knew of a family member with the disease.

Erinne was born in May 1997 and was diagnosed in July 1998 after Suzanne tried to convince doctors that her daughter wasn't meeting the milestones she learned to expect from her other children and from her vast experience as the director for Botsford Hospital employee day care.

"It took me four months to convince doctors," Suzanne said. "With some families, it takes them up to a year to get doctors to see this is the problem, especially if you don't have it in your family."

Suzanne knew there was something wrong when Erinne wasn't attempting to stand and she was crawling on the top side of her hands.

"The doctors didn't want to say a whole lot about the prognosis," she added. "I had to research what it is and it was quite a shock when I learned that many, many die in early childhood."

Before she was diagnosed, Erinne was able to stand if she was propped up by furniture. She walked with a tiny walker and leg braces and she was making progress in the summer of 1999.

But all that changed in November 1999 when she got pneumonia and was hospitalized for 15 days. Erinne never regained even those first skills.

Erinne can no longer crawl or roll over without help. She can feed herself, but she fatigues easily and always needs help by the end of the meal. Helping her to gain weight is a struggle.

Erinne can hold markers and is starting to write, but she isn't strong enough to take caps off of markers.

She's in a wheelchair now and will be getting a power chair this month on loan by Frank Mobility in Pennsylvania. While insurance companies have rejected requests for a power chair, a Frank Mobility company representative, Bill Russell, wanted to make sure Erinne's trip to Disney World would be as carefree as possible.

Even though Erinne's body is weakening, her mind is strong. She's doing what you might expect from 5- and 6-year-olds – spelling her name, identifying coins and mastering the alphabet, colors and numbers with ease.

"Kids with SMA tend to have extremely high IQs," Suzanne explained.

Painful time

But the disease has been stressful for the family and has taken a toll. Family and friends tend to keep a distance.

"People have pulled away from Erinne and me – it's painful to see," Suzanne said. "It's a horrible disease and people don't like to talk about horrible things and 3-year-old children shouldn't be like this. It's an isolating journey. The only person I feel can understand what I'm going through is Olivia's mom. She has become my soul mate. It's a very lonely road."

The Williamses faced another six months before Erinne was diagnosed. Her father, Jim, suffered a closed head injury that affected his personality.

Suzanne and Jim have been separated for 15 months. But one of the most frustrating things for Suzanne is dealing with insurance companies.

"Every appointment with specialists has been a fight," she explained. "Life shouldn't be that way. If they can deny half the people who come across, they can save money. If Erinne dies while she's waiting for them to provide a power chair, they don't have to end up paying for it. It's an expensive disease from an insurance company's point of view."

Erinne can't sit up in the bathtub while Suzanne bathes her, which means she needs a special bath chair. She also needs a special car seat and other incidentals to do everyday tasks.

One of her happiest moments with Erinne was when she was being fitted in a powerized chair. Suzanne was talking to the medical professionals and Erinne took off after two minutes of instruction. She maneuvered it perfectly and never hit a wall. It was her first small sign of independence away from her mother's protective arms.

"I told her to come back after a few minutes and she turned around and said, 'No, Mom. I want to go.' My kid told me 'No' and it made my day."

worthy.

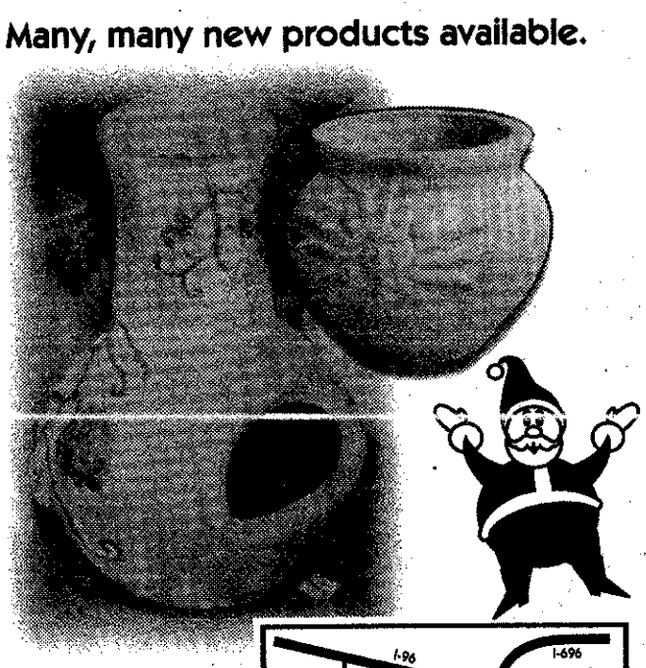

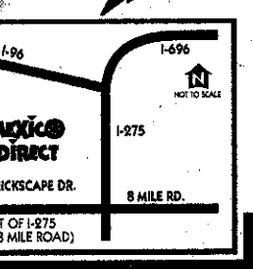

"Last year I wrapped a package for a gentleman on Christmas Eve that came to $1.50. He handed me a $100 bill and told me to keep the change," said Swan. "That's really generous."

Swan and her daughter Christine are looking forward to a Girl Scout trip to Savannah, Ga., in late spring with their troop thanks to the money they raise through gift wrapping project. "The trips are educational and a nice way for the girls to spend time with their peers. While in Savannah, we're going to visit the home of Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts," said Swan.

Gift-wrapping services are available during mall hours at Wonderland, Livonia Mall and Laurel Park. Prices are determined two ways: boxes brought by customers are measured then priced. Boxes purchased from the Girl Scouts have a different pricing schedule.

What do you want for Christmas?

If you ask children what they want for Christmas, they will probably tell you about all the latest toys and games on the market. For most well-cared-for youngsters, it may be these material things in their lives that give them the most joy and happiness. The same isn't true for the less fortunate children in this world. For Christmas, these children would probably ask for something like a new pair of shoes, or a warm coat, or perhaps a sweater. The true Christmas spirit should be more about giving than receiving, and sharing what we have with others.

He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise.* King James Version Luke 3:11

God's Love Is Everywhere

Smart shoppers who budget expenses avoid post-holiday debt

MONEY

Consider this vision of holiday bliss:

A Scotch pine fills the room with fragrance, delighting the eye with twinkling lights and bright ornaments. Gifts are piled beneath the tree in a colorful riot of ribbon and wrapping paper. Stockings hang from the mantel. And the tantalizing smell of a roast goose wafts in from the dining room.

Now — tally it up. Tree and tree stand: $50. Boxes of ornaments, flashing lights, tinsel? Another $50. Wrapping paper, $1.99 a roll. Presents for the kids, the spouse, the parents — $50 to $100 per person? One stocking, $6.99, plus $20 worth of stuff to fill it. And Christmas dinner — goose, dressing, vegetables, fruit salad, pies, candies, snacks, wines — $100 if you're lucky.

It's enough to make even the most dedicated Christmas—phile want to drive a stake of holly ($4.99 at the local nursery) through Santa's heart.

This season holiday shoppers might consider giving themselves the best present of all: a debt—free new year.

"This is the time of year when purchases are driven by feeling and emotion," said Ron Stampfl, professor of marketing at San Diego State University. "The spirit of the holidays is one of giving — we like to give to those we love — but it doesn't mean we should go into unreasonable debt to express our feelings."

Easier said than done, said some shoppers, in tones that rose from whines to wails.

"You try to contain it, but then you start buying all these little dumb things," said Chris Tim, 26. "I do try to shop around, go from one store to another to check out prices — until Dec. 24, when I just buy what's left."

There are ways to rein in the high cost of the holidays, say consumer advocates.

Shopping tips

Holiday shoppers should consider the following:

— Prepare a budget. Along with gift-giving, include the cost of gift wrapping and mailing packages, travel expenses, higher entertainment costs, new clothing and decorations. Eliminate the unnecessary and stick to the final budget.

— Prepare a list of family and friends you will give gifts to this year. Are there people on the list who could be omitted

— Once you've narrowed your gift-giving list, set a dollar limit for each person.

— Make a list of the gifts you want to buy, then shop for the best bargain. Avoid impulse buys. Consider handmade gifts, gifts of your time or gifts to charity in a family member's name.

— Shop when you are rested. If you are tired or hurried, chances are you'll make bad or extravagant purchase decisions.

— Learn this mantra by heart: "Visa, MasterCard, American Express — each a ticket to excess."

— Do leave home without them. Use cash, check or a debit card. If you insist on using credit cards, be prepared to pay them off when the bill comes, and use only the card with the most advantageous interest rate or bonus reward.

This last bit of advice is particularly important for the majority of shoppers who vow to make budgets or lists, and fail, said Irene Wells, president of Consumer Credit Counselors in Southern California, a nonprofit consumer debt counseling service.

"In January, we will see droves of people with buyers' remorse, and they start to come in as soon as the credit card bill arrives," said Wells. "When people use credit cards, they just aren't as aware that they are spending cash, cash that they will owe — with interest."

Holiday shopping calls for extra safety measures

As the season of holiday shopping approaches, shoppers should be mindful of convenience and safety measures. The following tips were submitted by Westland Shopping Center:

- Avoid the rush, shop at off-peak hours. Most shopping centers will extend their hours next month to accommodate the rush. Mall traffic is lighter from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday.
- Shop early. Waiting until the last minute will decrease the selection of goods available.
- Be aware and alert of your surroundings. Walk with confidence and make sure someone knows where you are, when away from home.
- Park in well-lit areas as close to your destination as possible.
- When in public, carry your purse or wallet close to your body. Don't let a purse hang off of your shoulder, where it might easily be grabbed.
- Don't use an automated teller machine alone.
- Be discreet in carrying your money. Keep it concealed until you reach the checkout. Keep a list of all credit card numbers in a safe place. Hold onto receipts and destroy carbon papers.
- Carry your key in hand before walking out into the parking lot. Check your car and look inside before entering.
- If someone suspicious approaches you, or you feel uncomfortable about a situation, return to the building and report it to a public safety officer or the police.

Physical Therapy UPDATE
Hands On Center
Presented by Hands On Center For Physical Therapy
SPREADING THE MESSAGE OF MASSAGE
According to a national survey, massage therapy is gaining popularity, particularly among middle-aged adults. According to the most recent poll, commissioned by the American Massage Therapy Association, 27% of Americans indicated that they had a massage in the past five years. This is up from 22% in 1998 and 17% in 1997. Part of the increase is attributable to weekend athletes who suffer from injury or aching muscles. Office workers are also seeking massage therapy for treatment of repetitive-motion injuries arising from computer use. There are also those who appreciate the overall sense of well-being that they derive from massage. Studies show that massage improves nervous system functioning and lowers stress hormone levels.
In fact, along with regular exercise and good nutrition, massage can play an important role in preventative health care, as well as in treating existing conditions and injuries. At the HANDS ON CENTER FOR PHYSICAL THERAPY, basic treatment always includes an hour of manual therapy administered by our staff of experienced physical and massage therapists (in closed rooms for your privacy). Our services also include myofascial release, and cranio-sacral therapy. For more information, please call our center, located at 470 Forest Avenue, Suite 20, in Plymouth, at 445-8370.
P.S. Scientific research finds massage helpful for a wide variety of problems, ranging from migraines to asthma.

Vernarsky saves Whalers

Beating a team by three goals on its own ice should indicate an easy game against them at home. The Plymouth Whalers discovered that wasn't necessarily so when they hosted the Peterborough Petes Saturday.

BY NICHOLAS A. GISMONDI
SPECIAL WRITER

This wasn't the same Peterborough Petes team the Plymouth Whalers beat 7-4 in Peterborough in September. But at least the result was the same.

On Saturday in front of 3,111 fans at Plymouth's Compuware Arena, the Whalers got the game-winning goal from Kris Vernarsky with 4:17 left to play to claim a 3-2 victory.

"I had the benefit of seeing (Peterborough) Friday night in Windsor, and right now they are playing playoff hockey in November," said Whalers associate coach Steve Spott. "And I think that frustrated us early in the game, but it was something that we were able to address in between periods.

"They were playing very defensively and our top guys were able to make it happen for us."

Slowly, the Whalers are getting back the key players who could make a difference. On Saturday, Tomas Kurka — who scored 36 goals and totaled 64 points last season, including a team-best 12 power-play goals — was back in the lineup after being sidelined all season with a hip flexor.

Kurka was instrumental in the victory, collecting a goal and assisting on Vernarsky's game-winner.

"He's a world-class player, and Tomas will definitely be a guy, along with (Stephen) Weiss, who we will lean on heavily throughout the season," said

Rockers iced by Blizzard

A trip to Buffalo to face the Blizzard proved no help to the struggling Detroit Rockers Saturday.

They did manage to make a game of it — unlike Thursday's 14-5 thrashing suffered against Toronto — with Shawn Boney knotting it at 7-all with a one-point shootout goal with just 27 seconds left in regulation.

But it was Buffalo, with former Rocker Bryan "Goose" Finnerty in Chiefs get set for a title hunt

CANTON

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

Last season, Plymouth Canton's wrestling team attained goals that, just a few years ago, would have seemed unlikely if not unreachable.

The Chiefs set a school record for dual-meet wins, posting a 19-6-1 record. Injuries down the stretch, however, cost them just enough to delegate them to a tie for fifth place at the Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament.

Canton was then eliminated by Salem, a team it had beaten earlier in the season, in the state team district final.

Despite the struggle at the finish, it was a very successful season for the Chiefs. "It was," agreed coach John Demsick. "We had some injuries at the end of the season that held us back, but overall we were very pleased."

Now the question is how do

Rocks lacking in experience

SALEM

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

Last season provided a bit of everything for Plymouth Salem's wrestling team.

The Rocks had some outstanding individuals, including three state qualifiers in Ronnie Thompson, Rob Ash and Josh Henderson. Thompson finished second at state in the 119 weight division, while Ash was eighth at 125. Henderson made it to the second day, wrestling at 140, but didn't place.

There were several others, like Mike Popeney, Lucas Stump and Steve Dendrinos. One thing they all have in common is that they've all have graduated.

And that means coach Greg Woochuk is facing a rebuilding job.

"Without a feeder program, you're always in a rebuilding year, so I guess the answer is yes, this is the proverbial rebuilding season," Woochuk

Walk-on star gains top status

BY PAUL BEAUDRY
STAFF WRITER
pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

A little more than four months ago, Kristah Manteuffel was a normal college student — juggling classes with work and trying to fit in a personal life somewhere in the cracks.

When she gets up this morning, she'll still be doing the same thing — work, school, maybe some time for herself.

It is the four months in the middle that make this story special.

For in that time, Manteuffel went from being a walk-on for Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team to walking away with a rare honor — first-team All-American.

"It's an accomplishment, for sure," said Manteuffel, who scored 20 goals and 28 assists for the Ocelots as the team finished fifth at the National Junior College Athletic Association. "Playing this season was a great experience. Of course, being as successful as we did helped a lot."

We'll back this story bus back up to 1997, when Manteuffel made the All-Observer soccer team as a senior at Redford Thurston. She did so well that she played the next season at Eastern Michigan University, but something wasn't right.

"It just wasn't for me," said Manteuffel. "I didn't like it there. There was a lot of crap going on and it wasn't what I was looking for. I wanted a fun time playing and you can be competitive and have fun at the same time. I played the year and I hated it."

So Manteuffel left Eastern and headed for Schoolcraft, where she planned on juggling a part-time class schedule with her job at Sizzling Sticks in Northville. But she still had the soccer bug, and kept in the mix by helping out at soccer camps, run by Schoolcraft men's coach Van Dimitriou. And there, she caught the right person's eye.

"Some of the people working with the team had seen her helping out and suggested that she might fit and that I talk to her," said

ALL-OBSERVER GOLF

The Rockets caught fire and took coach Dan Burtka all the way to Coach of the Year on the Observerland golf scene this season.

Westland John Glenn fought off some tough losses to record the area's top team finish in the state tournament and earn Burtka recognition for molding a young team into a state power.

"We struggled in our duals; we lost six matches by a stroke," Burtka said, "so I knew we had kind of a special team.

"Going into the season we knew we were going to be there with everbody else. It's just that we never seemed to get on the same page together. But we just caught fire in the regionals.

"I thought we had a chance of qualifying — but winning it was something that gave the kids a lot of confidence."

It was the second time Burtka's team had qualified for the state finals. The other time it missed playing on the second day by two strokes, which turned out to be incentive to make it to the second round this fall.

The Rockets did, finishing in the top dozen as junior Jeremy Fendelet shot 79-77--156 to tie five other golfers for fifth place in the individual standings.

John Glenn scored 334-337--671 to wind up 12th, 10 shots behind Ann Arbor Pioneer at Forest Akers West at Michigan State University.

"I'm proud of this team," Burtka said, "and four of them are coming back next year."

Reason enough for their coach to stick around past his retirement at John Glenn, where he works in the work co-op program for special education kids, for one more season of coaching the boys golf team.

Burtka has always coached because he enjoys it and he enjoys the kids.

He was asked to take over one day about 15 years ago on the eve of the season and discovered "I just love it. I got hooked on it and one thing led to another.

"So I think I'm going to be back coaching one more year. I've had this group since ninth grade. I kind of want to see that group through.

"They are dedicated and fun kids. I hope next year to make a little more noise in the league. It's a tough golf league."

Competition in golf, both boys and girls, has increased so dramatically that teams are shooting losing scores today that would have produced undefeated seasons in the early and mid-1990s.

"Kids today are playing better than I ever imagined," said Burtka, a golf fanatic who did not play in high school. "They hit the ball a long way and have a lot of finesse around the greens.

"And they have a good mental attitude. If you don't have it there, you don't have it."

Burtka's boys definitely have it.

The 2000 All-Area golf team:

First Team

Jeremy Fendelet, Jr., John Glenn: Jeremy's 79-77 earned him a fifth-place finish in the state tournament and sparked the Rockets to a 12th-place tie in the team standings. He averaged 79.6 for his six 18-hole rounds and 41.4 for dual meets, recording a 35, 36 and 37 for low rounds. The Rockets played at Fellows Creek, a par 72 course. The three-year letter winner medaled four times in dual meets.

"Jeremy will be the rock of a potentially exciting squad next year," said his coach, Dan Burtka. He was honorable mention All-State.

T.J. Lester, So., Catholic Central: Lester moved up from the junior varsity to make a big impact in his first year with the big team. He averaged 38.4 for nine holes, playing at Cattails in South Lyon, and 77.6 in six 18-hole tourneys. Lester was the overall medalist at the Division I regional by shooting a 72 and wound up fifth overall at the state tourney, earning him All-State honors to go with his All-Catholic League awards.

"He worked on his game over the summer and was a solid competitor," said CC coach Bill Hayes. "He played his best throughout the year and continually improved. He has an excellent demeanor for the game and 99.4 percent of the time, he's got excellent course management."

Matt Lee, Jr., Harrison: A repeat selection on the all-area team, Lee received an all-state honorable mention for the second year in a row, too. He qualified for the Division 2 state meet after shooting 76 and finishing third in the regional at Dunham Hills.

Lee averaged 78.5 strokes in eight tournaments and 36.6 in 10 dual matches. He shot 76 in the Oakland County, WLAA (tied for third) and Country Day tournaments. Lee was all-WLAA and all-county.

He was the medalist in six events and led the Hawks for the last three years with the lowest scoring average.

"He's a good kid with a great disposition, and he knows what he has to do to improve," coach Bill Spencer said. "He's making that little bit of improvement each year that you need to make. He's making the jump past a lot of kids that are out there."

Scott Wolfe, Jr., Stevenson: Voted Most Valuable on Spartan team (7-4) that finished third in Western Lakes meet and seventh in regional. Team co-captain averaged 38.3 for dual meets and was WLAA medalist with a 71, his best score of the season.

"He's one of the best in the league, obviously," said his coach, John Wagner, "and he proved that at the conference match. He's a natural athlete. He assists his coach and his team during the season."

Rich Sudak, Jr., John Glenn: Steadiest player on Rocket squad that surprised with 12th-place finish in state meet. Medalist or co-medalist in four dual meets, averaging 40.8 with low of 35. Averaged 79.6 for six 18-hole rounds, including a 79-80 in the state meet. A 79 earned Sudak a top-10 finish in the regionals at Carrington in Monroe. Tied for first with 77 in Western Wayne meet at Kensington. Three-time varsity letter winner. "I'm really looking forward tohaving him back next year," said Coach Dan Burtka of John Glenn.

Evan Chall, Sr., Churchill: "Evan was the backbone of our team," Chargers' coach John Farrar said. "His worst nine was 41. He either put up a good score or a great score. Every match he was reliable."

Chall medaled in five dual meets with a low of 32. He had a 76 at the Brighton Invitational that placed him seventh and recorded an 81 at the Western Lakes meet. He averaged 38.18 and recorded a 38 in the city meet that was the best individual round.

Second Team

Jon Luna, Sr. Catholic Central: Luna had a memorable senior year, averaging 39.6 for nine holes — led by shooting a 33 at Oakland Hills' South Course — and a 79.6 average for six 18-hole tourneys. The four-year letter winner also made the All-Observerland team as a sophomore.

"His overall leadership has been very good," said Hayes. "He's had some very good rounds for us and kept us going in several matches."

Brad Johnson, Sr., Redford Union: Johnson stood out for the Panthers this season, averaging 39.1 in dual meets and being named the team's Most Valuable Player. He did pretty well in the Mega Blue too, earning medalist honors at the league meet with a 75 and coming in second overall, after dual meets were factored in.

"He was our medalist in six of eight dual meets," said RU coach Bob Sadler. "He just played great all of the time. I can't say enough good things about him."

Matt Bartnick, Jr., Stevenson: Averaged 39.3 and medaled in two dual meets. Was the Western Lakes conference medalist in 1999.

"In spite of what was an off year for him, he still managed a 39.3 average," Coach John Wagner of Stevenson said. "He was a consistently low-scoring player and he has a very competitive spirit."

Jimmy Cappelli, Jr., Garden City: Cappelli worked hard this season, finishing sixth overall in the Mega White, earning all-league honors, averaged 39.5 for dual meets and 82 for 18-hole events. He also finished third in the Western Wayne County tourney and had the fifth-lowest score at the Division I regional with an 80.

"He's a hard worker," said GC coach Ron Pummill. "He played on the Power-bilt Tour over the summer and was third-alternate for the Michigan Junior Amateur. He's golfed a lot and worked hard."

Keith Hay, So., Farmington: Hay averaged 39.6 strokes in dual matches and 80.4 in tournaments to lead the Falcons with the best overall averages.

He was medalist in the Country Day Invitational with a 74 and was all-WLAA, shooting 76 to tie for third place.

Hay also shot 77 and medaled in the West Bloomfield Invite at Kensington Metropark and 83 in the Oakland County tournament.

"He hits the ball very well for a 15-year-old young man," coach Jim Miner said. "If he continues to play and improve, I expect him to start coming in with 37 and 38 pretty consistently.

"We haven't seen that since (state champion) Jason Buha. He has a chance to set some records by the time he's a senior. He has a good future ahead of him."

Derek Vermeulen, Sr., Canton: Not much was expected of Plymouth Canton's golf team this season. But those like Vermeulen helped after that.

Vermeulen served as the Chiefs' captain in only his second year on the team. There was a good reason for that: He paced Canton throughout the season, registering the team's best average in both nine-hole dual meets (38.6) and 18-hole tournaments (80.8).

Along the way, he shot a one-under par 34 at Hilltop, Canton's home course — the lowest score a Chief has shot there, at least in coach Tom Alies' memory.

Vermeulen shot an 80 to earn all-division at the WLAA Tournament and had a team-low 83 at the state regional.

"He definitely deserved some recognition," said Alies. "He had a good season."

Oh yes: Canton went 7-4 in dual meets and tied Northville for first in the Western Division with a 4-1 mark.

COLLEGE SPORTS

Ocelots win a pair, lose a pair

BASKETBALL

The opportunity for a highly successful road trip was there for Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team. But poor choices, on and off the court, made it only partially a success.

The Ocelots won two of their three games, dropping their biggest test of the trip to 12th-ranked Tallahassee CC 106-93 Saturday in Tallahassee, Fla.

After the trip, SC coach Carlos Briggs suspended two of his key players, guard Mike Peek and forward Dwayne Holmes, indefinitely for violating team rules.

Briggs said both could still return to the team this season if they abide by the terms of their suspensions.

Poor defense in the second half was the main culprit in the loss to Tallahassee. SC led 45-39 at the half, allowing the host team to shoot just 33 percent from the floor.

"We played a pretty good first half," said Briggs. "We were up by 13 points at one time, but we let them close it at the end (of the half).

"In the second half, we just didn't play good defense. They came out fighting and we didn't come out fighting at all. We never quit, but we shouldn't have been in that position."

Tallahassee more than doubled its shooting percentage in the second half, converting 73 percent from the field.

Sam Hoskin led SC, now 4-1 for the season, with 26 points and 10 rebounds. Derrick Bird netted 22 points and seven boards, Dave McGlown had 14 points and seven assists, and Nick Evola scored 11 points.

Marcus Hatten paced Tallahassee (9-0) with 25 points.

On Friday in Tallahassee, Hoskin poured in 34 points and Bird added 26 as the Ocelots drubbed the Sydney (Aus.) Sharks 126-76.

This game was never close. SC led 64-28 after one half and kept running up its point total in the second.

Joining Hoskin and Bird in double-figures scoring were Dwight Windom III with 18 points and eight rebounds, and Evola and Emir Medunjanin (from North Farmington) with 11 points apiece (Medunjanin had a team-high nine rebounds). McGlown added seven points and 10 assists.

Trevor Black led Sydney with 19 points.

Last Thursday in their trip's opening game, SC toppled Gulf Coast CC 103-78 in Tallahassee. The Ocelots recovered from a sluggish start — they led by just two, 48-46, at the break — to rout Gulf Coast.

"We talked at halftime how they liked to run up and down the floor," Briggs said. "So do we, but we like to do it with a purpose. And we take pride in our defense. We knew that they don't, and that was the difference."

Bird topped SC with 25 points (and eight boards). Hoskin added 22 points and 10 rebounds, with Colin Wilkinson scoring 15 (going 5-for-7 from three-point range) and Medunjanin collecting 10.

Shawn Dunston was best for Gulf Coast, which fell to 4-4, with 14 points; Ken Green added 13.

The Ocelots rank second in the NJCAA in scoring, averaging 110.8 points per game. Hoskin is fourth individually in scoring at 25.2.

Madonna routed

Poor shooting continued to plague Madonna University's men's basketball team in its 74-48 loss at Albion College Tuesday.

The loss, the Fighting Crusaders' fifth-straight, left them with a 2-5 record. Albion is 3-1.

Madonna converted just 7-of-27 first-half shots (25.9 percent) and shot just 30.2 percent (16-of-53) for the game. Albion was 26-of-62 for the game (41.9 percent).

The Crusaders were also outrebounded 44-36 and committed 18 turnovers to the Britons 12.

Madonna trailed 33-18 at the half and never caught up.

Aaron Cox led the Crusaders with 13 points. Mike Massey netted 10. Brett Quayle had 16 for Albion, with Jon VanderWal collecting 12 and Steve Champine 10. Andrew Neidlinger had eight points and 10 rebounds.

Tech drops Madonna

Madonna University's women's basketball team could not contain the juggernaut presented by Florida Tech last Saturday as it absorbed a 98-76 loss in Melbourne, Fla.

Tech hit 38-of-79 floor shots (48.1 percent), including 7-of-9 three-pointers (77.8 percent); Madonna was 28-of-60 from the field (46.7 percent) and 3-of-7 on triples (42.9 percent).

The biggest difference: The Crusaders had 32 turnovers while Tech made 18.

Madonna, now 3-3, trailed 54-40 at halftime. Tech improved to 4-1.

Kathy Panganis led the Crusaders with 20 points; she also had two steals. Lori Enfield added 14 points and eight rebounds, Mahogny Fletcher (from Farmington Harrison) had 11 points, five boards and two steals, and Kristi Fiorenzi (Plymouth Canton) netted 10 points, six rebounds and two steals.

Tech had six players reach double figures in scoring: Delicia Phillips with 18 (and 10 rebounds), Felicia Bell and Hatasha Griffin with 17 apiece, Shawntel Williams with 14, and Stephanie Barrowman and Sarah Awe with 12 each.

Madonna wins NAIA opener

One step at a time, and the first step at the NAIA Tournament was certainly a successful one for Madonna University's volleyball team.

The Lady Crusaders opened up pool play in the 20-team event, hosted by Palm Beach Atlantic in West Palm Beach, Fla., on Wednesday by rolling past Bloomfield (N.J.) College 15-5, 15-6, 15-4.

The win raised Madonna's record to 39-6. Bloomfield fell to 24-6.

"We played really well," said Crusader coach Jerry Abraham. "We seemed to be synchronized as a group and we're playing with a lot of confidence. Everyone who comes in is contributing.

"The next two teams are big and fast and present a difficult challenge."

That they do. The Crusaders go against third-seeded College of St. Mary's (Neb.) at 11:15 a.m. this morning, then take on sixth-seeded Point Loma Nazarene (Calif.) at 6 p.m. this evening. St. Mary's is 31-4, Nazarene is 30-5; both won their opening matches Wednesday.

Brandy Malewski's 13 kills (a .550 kill percentage) topped Madonna effort against Bloomfield. Erin Cunningham contributed 11 kills (.785) and Kelly Artymovich had seven.

Jennie Wind collected 28 set assists and 12 digs; Cunningham also had 15 digs and three block assists, and Malewski had five block assists.

Nagel carries Rocks past Flyers

Steve Nagel collected the game's first two goals, then assisted on the next two — including the game-winner, scored by Chad Schlamb with 3:09 remaining to play — as Plymouth Salem edged Farmington United 4-3 Tuesday at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

The win improved Salem's record to 2-1. Farmington is 0-2-1.

The Flyers were playing their first game under the direction of coach Mike Harris, formerly of Livonia Stevenson. Harris was serving as an assistant coach under Glenn Breuhan until Breuhan and assistant coach Bernie Buller both abruptly resigned Monday.

Nagel got both his goals in a 13-second span of the first period, with Mike Maurer and Mark Nagel assisting on the first and Dave Bida and Maurer assisting on the second.

PREP HOCKEY

Farmington narrowed the gap to 2-1 on a first-period goal by Matt Lee, but the Rocks made it 3-1 by period's end when Bida scored, assisted by Schlamb and Steve Nagel.

Kevin Temerowski got the only goal of the second period, narrowing Farmington's deficit to 3-2, and Brian Marion knotted it for the Flyers with 6:52 left in the third period.

James Dogonski was in goal for Salem. Greg Diven was in the net for Farmington.

CC 5, St. Joseph 2: Redford Catholic Central had Buffalo (N.Y.) St. Joseph right where it wanted them on Sunday — tired.

The Shamrocks wore down St. Joe — playing its third game in as many days — and wound up with a 5-2 win.

After St. Joe's opened the scoring, Mike Radigan put CC on the board at 9:43 of the first period. Brett John then scored the first of his two goals at 13:05 of the second.

John scored again 31 seconds into the third period, followed by goals by Jared Ross at 8:18 and Ryan O'Dea at 9:30.

Andy McCoy and Jim Blanchard combined for 30 saves for CC, while the Shamrocks had 36 shots on goal.

Spott. "He gives us more options when we look down the bench just because he is a guy who can perform in any situation out there, be it the power play, penalty kill, or four-on-four.

"Whenever he is on the ice, he's a threat to score a goal."

The Whalers are still without Carolina draft choice and veteran point man Jared Newman, who is day-to-day with a back injury. Also, winger Justin Williams continues to play well for the NHL's Philadelphia Flyers.

The Petes opened the scoring at the 1:44 mark of the second period with a goal by Ryan Ramsay, with assists going to Marcel Rodman and Kurtis Foster. Kurka equalized the score with a power-play goal at 17:49 of the second, following passes from Weiss and James Wisniewski (from Canton).

Peterborough recaptured the lead on an unassisted goal by Brad Self at 2:45 of the third period, Self knocking the puck loose from beneath Plymouth goalie Rob Zepp and putting it in.

Less than two minutes later, the Whalers re-tied it. A Libor Ustrnul slapshot from the blue line slipped away from Petes' goalie Davie Currie; Stacey Britstone pounced on it and slid it in to knot it at 2-all. Ustrnul and Damian Surma earned assists.

The game-winner started with Kurka in the neutral zone. His cross-ice pass reached Weiss, who fired a low shot toward the left side of the Peterborough net. Vernarsky was in position to redirect the shot past Currie and give the Whalers their first lead of the game, one they would not surrender. It was Vernarsky's first goal of the season.

The Whalers are 17-4-2-1 this season with 37 points, good for first place in the OHL's West Division and second in the Western Conference behind the Erie Otters. The Whalers play the North Bay Centennials at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Compuware, then host the Oshawa Generals at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. On Sunday, they play at Windsor.

goal, that emerged with the victory, thanks to a goal by Matt Little 12:01 into overtime.

The loss left Detroit with a 1-7 record. The Blizzard are 3-5.

Andrew Crawford scored on a shootout just 22 seconds into the game to give Buffalo the early lead; the Blizzard maintained it through the half, with Sean Bower's two-point score the Rockers only points of the first two periods.

After a scoreless third quarter, fourth-period two-point goals by Decu (from Droo Callahan) at 3:12 and Tim Ernst (Boney) at 7:23 put the Rockers up 6-5. A two-pointer by the Blizzard put them back on top before Boney's dramatic game-tying goal.

The Rockers return to action at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Philadelphia.

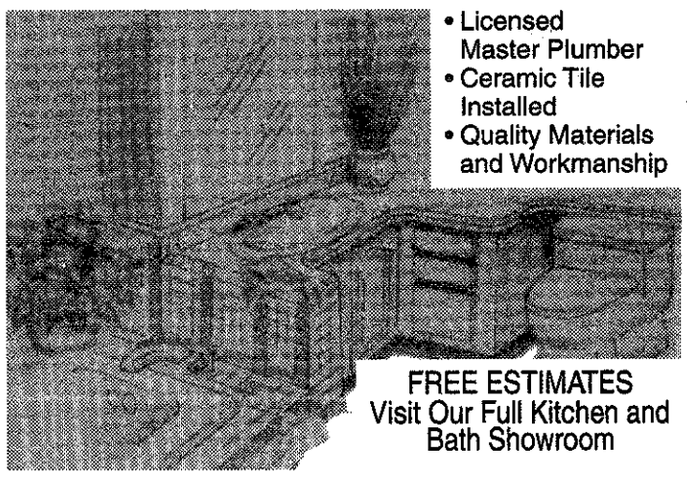

Families share a lot more than a last name. However, the things they have in common aren't always that obvious. Like their blood pressure. High blood pressure has been strongly linked to heredity, so it tends to run in families. There are no symptoms, so it can easily go unnoticed. And, left untreated, high blood pressure can lead to a heart attack, stroke, or kidney failure. But, the good news is that it's easily checked and readily treated. So maybe it's time to start a new family tradition. Call for an appointment to get your blood pressure checked today. To find a University of Michigan physician near you, simply call 1-800-211-8181. We accept a variety of health care plans, including MCARE℠ said. "But we have a great group of juniors who have stuck together since they were freshmen.

"And hopefully, we'll have some surprises as well."

The cupboard is never bare at Salem. The Rocks have 52 kids out for wrestling, so the interest in the sport remains strong. Developing that interested group into a talented team is the task facing Woochuk and his assistants, Lee Krueger and Dave Dameron.

There are eight wrestlers with notable experience who return, but only one is a senior: James March, who wrestles at 160.

Others with experience include juniors Zack Jenson, who's moving from heavyweight down to 215; Andrew Bennett, who will be at 152; John Early, who wrestled at 215 last year but will be at a more natural 189 this season; and Ryan Bedoun, who placed in the top four at the Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament last year at 145.

Another junior, Phil Portellos, is recovering from a knee injury and should return to the lineup by early January. Portellos will help strengthen the 160-171 divisions.

A pair of sophomores should also supply some experience to the lineup: Mike Goethe, who wrestled at 103 last season and will move up to 119 this year; and Nick Moniodis, who's going from 112 to 125.

Last season, the book on Salem was to stay with the Rocks through the lower weight divisions and overtake them in the uppers. This year, there are still places in the lineup other teams can take advantage of.

"We still have a few holes, but we have a lot of juniors who have put in the time at JV," said Woochuk.

Wrestlers the Salem coach hopes will step up include juniors Tony Kennard at 140, Brandon Sammut at 130, Adam Schaefer at 152, Brian Schultz at 145 and Craig Blair at 171. Mike Dendrinos, a freshman and Steve's little brother, may see action at 103.

All things considered, this may best be described as a developmental season for Salem.

"If we could wrestle a whole season before this season, it would be just great," said Woochuk as he noted the team's inexperience at the varsity level.

"We're going to have some ups and downs, but they're working real hard."

Something good is bound to come from this Rocks' wrestling team, but most of it may not be noticed until next year.

Chiefs — C1

you prolong it? That answer won't be difficult for Demsick to supply.

He graduates just one key senior from last year's squad: John Pocock, who was 38-8 while wrestling at 140 pounds and completed his prep career with 105 wins. This season, Pocock is helping as a coach.

That leaves a lot coming back. And although most of them have bulked up and will be moving up a weight division or two, the talent is there to make Canton one of the WLAA's premier teams.

"The thing about our team this year is we do have a lot of talent," said Demsick. "Success is within our grasp. They'll be no one to blame but ourselves."

The team's four captains supply an able corps to build around. Combined, they totaled 128 mat wins.

Kyle Pitt, a senior, was 38-4 at 103; he'll move up to 119 this season, a jump that could cause him some trouble. "I don't expect him to go loss-less,"said Demsick. "But I think he will place at state.

"It could be a real shock for him. The kids are more mature and a lot stronger."

Pitt has 99 career wins. He'll be shooting for his 100th tonight when Canton opens its season with a tri-meet against Plymouth Salem, Monroe and Farmington at Salem.

The Chiefs other captains are senior Joe Faraoni, who had 25 wins in an injury-shortened campaign at 145 last season (he'll wrestle at 152 this year); junior Greg Musser, who was 34-11 a year ago at 135 (he'll be at 140 this year); and junior Doy Demsick, whose record at 119 a year ago was 31-14 (he'll be at 125-130 this season).

That isn't the end to Canton's strong lineup. Others who return are Scott McKee, a senior who had 25 wins at 152 last season and will be at 170 this year; Derek McWatt, a senior with a 31-14 mark at heavyweight; Shahein Rajaee, a junior with 25 wins at 160; Phil Rothwell, a junior with a 31-14 mark at 189; Mike Siegrist, a junior who had 25 wins at 130 (now at 145); and Chris Hosey, a junior who had 25 wins at 125 (now at 135).

Some others to watch include senior Ozzie Wagner at 215 and sophomore Rob Schnettler, the team's top freshman last year, at 103-112.

"We do have some weight classes that aren't as strong," said Demsick. "We're not invincible. We have a couple of weights where we go back and forth — we have some variance at 103, 112 and 130.

"But we have some guys who are really battling for it, and that's good to have."

The strength of this season's team may be evident in Demsick's choice of where to focus his attention: in developing his second team. "That's one of the areas we're trying to shore up," he said. "We were a little shallow last year."

If depth is the main problem, the Chiefs could slide up behind WLAA powers Northville (the defending conference champ) and Walled Lake Western, teams that Demsick thinks will dominate again. Livonia Stevenson and Plymouth Salem were strong last season as well.

"I think our boys are developing confidence and moral fiber," said Demsick. "And that's what you need for success."

The Chiefs have the ingredients. Now it's just a matter of blending them properly.

The Observer: Best at local sports coverage

Schoolcraft women's coach Bill Tolstedt. "I got her to try out and picked her up right away. Wow, did it work out well for us."

It worked out well for Manteuffel, too.

"I wasn't going to play any more," said Manteuffel. "Then I did those soccer camps and did some training for them. Then someone talked to me about it and I thought, 'well . . . '"

It wasn't quite a done deal, though. First, it meant Manteuffel would have to go back to school full time. And she'd have to find a way to juggle work around classes and find someone to cover her shifts when she was unavailable. Those two proved to be relatively painless.

Then there was the little matter of not playing competitively in three seasons.

"She wasn't too terribly rusty, but there were skill sets that hadn't been used in competition for a while," said Tolstedt. "It was evident that she was talented and in discussions with her, she showed her maturity to want to play and to commit to it."

"I guess I was never really out of it," said Manteuffel. "I've always been good at sports. Sure, the level wasn't as good as in a game, but skill-wise, it was the same as in the camps and messing with the ball. Game-wise, I had to get used to it again."

On the field, it wound up coming back pretty easily. Off the field, there was some adjustment.

"I need to be busy, so playing wasn't tough," said Manteuffel. "But the toughest part was the schedule. It was non-stop, between school and work and soccer and soccer weekends away. And being told what to do. I haven't been told that in a while. You have to listen all the time and that was the hardest part about it."

She worked her way into the starting lineup and in the Ocelots' attack, flourished.

"One of the things we do differently than other schools is attack more out of our midfield than our front," said Tolstedt. "She played both positions for us and we had the rotation set up to keep her on the outside and rotate into the front. She was able to score from anywhere."

That she did. Manteuffel was second on the team with 20 goals scored and led the team with 68 points. And it didn't hurt that she was a team leader by example.

"She has a great personality in terms of supporting the team," said Tolstedt. "She was mature in her approach to the games and at practice. She wasn't a captain, but led by example. She's an assertive person who knows what she wants, but she also supported all those around her, regardless of who it was."

Next season's plans are still up in the air. Because she played at Eastern, her NCAA clock started and Tolstedt is trying to find out how much eligibility Manteuffel has left. Several schools are looking at her, and Division II, III or NAIA schools are an option. She could end up back at Schoolcraft for another season.

But whether she plays again or not, Manteuffel has had a season to remember.

"It's an accomplishment for sure," said Manteuffel. "If I can keep playing I will. It was fun, in any case. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF PLYMOUTH
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 2000
INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES EXEMPTION CERTIFICATE FOR DIEBOLT INTERNATIONAL, INC. (DADCO)

PLEASE TAKE NOTE: That a public hearing will be held on Tuesday, December 12, 2000, during a regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Plymouth to consider Diebolt International, Inc.'s (DADCO) request to amend Industrial Facilities Exemption Certificate No. 98-375 to reflect the actual total cost of the project. The applicant submitted and was granted a request for tax abatement covering the addition to their existing facility, including machinery and equipment. The actual total cost of the project exceeded more than 10% of the original estimate cost. The facility is located at 43850 Plymouth Oaks Blvd, Plymouth Oaks Business Park, Plymouth Township, Wayne County, Michigan.

The request is on file in the Township Clerk's Office where it is available for public perusal from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Any Township resident or member of any taxing authority within the Township of Plymouth shall have the right to appear and be heard. Written comments directed to the Clerk and received prior to the meeting will be considered. Following the public hearing the Board of Trustees may consider the request.

The public hearing, commencing at 7:30 p.m., will be held in the Meeting Room at Plymouth Township Hall, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, Michigan 48170, on Tuesday, December 12, 2000, during the regularly scheduled Board of Trustee meeting. Telephone number (734) 354-3224.

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON
BOARD PROCEEDINGS - NOVEMBER 21, 2000

A regular study session of the Charter Township of Canton Board of Trustees held Tuesday, November 21, 2000 at 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, Michigan 48188. Supervisor Yack called the meeting to order at 7:00 p.m.

ROLL CALL
Members Present: Bennett, Burdziak, LaJoy, McLaughlin, Shefferly, Yark
Members Absent: Kirchgatter
Staff Present: Director Santomauro

ADOPTION OF AGENDA
Motion by Bennett, support by LaJoy to adopt the agenda as presented. Motion carried unanimously.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY - PUBLIC SAFETY DEPARTMENT SURVEY
Jerome Boles is with the Regional Community Policing Institute at Michigan State University. Mr. Boles is the former Chief of Police at the Lansing Police Department, where he served as a police officer for thirty years. Jane P. White is the Associate Director of the National Center of Community Policing for the School of Criminal Justice at Michigan State University. She has served internationally and nationally as an active consultant to criminal justice organizations, including innumerable police departments on reorganization as it relates to community policing. Some of the benefits of community policing that were explained are: increases potential for impacting crime, fear of crime, and quality of life issue; coordinates and leverages resources from all sectors for more effective strategies; increases trust and understanding; strengthens organizational support, creates a network of assistance, guidance and technical support in problem-solving; and uses a more strategic approach to create long-term impact. The National Center for Community Policing was established twenty-seven (27) years ago at Michigan State University and is currently working with thirty-four (34) Departments statewide. The survey conducted for Canton Township, finds strong leadership within the department, job satisfaction ranks high within the department, and in nearly all of the points of the survey (approximately twenty), Canton Township's Public Safety Department ranks high.

COMMUNITY SURVEY
Director Santomauro explained that a community survey was conducted by the Public Safety Department to evaluate service, to prioritize service needs and to identify areas of development for the department. More than 90 percent answered yes to the question Do you feel safe in Canton? Not surprisingly, Canton residents overwhelmingly believe their police and fire departments are doing a good job. Approximately 85 percent of those surveyed said police service is good to excellent. Canton's fire department rates even higher with nearly 98 percent of residents saying it provides good to excellent service.

CRIME DOWN TURN
Director Santomauro explained that crime on the FBI's definition of part & offenses was evaluated. The part I offenses include Criminal Sexual Assault, Robbery Aggravated assault, Burglary, Larceny, Retail Fraud, Motor Vehicle Theft and Arson. The good news is the crime is down 27 percent of the Canton for the first eight months of 2000. The total number of part I offenses dropped from 1,748 in August 1999 to 1,265 during the same period this year. Director Santomauro explained that monitoring crime statistics helps the department stay in tune with what's happening in the community.

CRIME vs. TRAFFIC
Director Santomauro explained that a community, in general, views traffic stops as a positive sign from its police department. Neighborhoods enjoy the visibility that traffic stops bring to their area. Traffic law enforcement is an important element of community policing. It is for these reasons that the Canton Police Department places such a high emphasis on traffic stops. Money from tickets does not come back to the police department. The time, effort and money spent of traffic enforcement comes from various police department budgets, none of which are reimbursed from tickets written. Offices are encouraged in their efforts for traffic enforcement and as a result is in a safer community due to more public awareness, more criminal arrests, drug interdiction, and criminal investigations. Officers become better at what they do because of the frequent interactions with the public.

The above is a synopsis of the actions taken at the regular study session of the Board of Trustees of the Charter Township of Canton. The full text of the approved minutes will be available following the next regular board meeting of November 28, 2000.

Meadow Brook Hall presents scenes from 'A Charmed Life'

Celebrate the holiday season in a grand manner, by visiting a grand manor. The 30th annual Holiday Walk at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester, A Charmed Life: Celebrations in the Grand Manor, opens Friday, Dec. 1, and continues through Sunday, Dec. 10. Visitors will have glimpses into celebrations by the Dodge-Wilson family at the mansion.

Oakland University founders Matilda Dodge Wilson and Alfred Wilson and their family lived in the 110-room mansion from the late 1920s through 1967. A Charmed Life will present vignettes recalling special occasions, arranged among elegant holiday decorations.

It was a charmed life. Family members traveled around the world, and in the winter, they rode a sleigh on outings. Frank Sinatra and Tommy Dorsey entertained for Frances Dodge Johnson's 25th birthday in 1939.

Photos and souvenirs, and objects from the Meadow Brook collection that are rarely seen — including the sleigh, and Frances Dodge's 1938 wedding dress — will be on view. Tables will be set as they might have been for Christmas and New Year's parties.

For example, the dining room table will feature a centerpiece of packages, each with a string leading to a place setting. This is in keeping with the family tradition of each person sitting at the table pulling the string to get his or her package.

For the holidays, the mantel in Alfred Wilson's study is laden with greenery decorated in silver and gold angels, ornaments, strings and tassels, similar to a tree in the window.

The family had a New Year's Eve card party in this room. After dinner and toasting the New Year, guests would play bridge.

"They had enough friends and family over for four or five sets of bridge," said Maura Overland, curator of collections.

"Richard (one of the sons) thought the parties were so nice he would bring dates back for them."

The lower level games room features molding with a checkered pattern accented with images of chess pieces. It contains unusual furniture, including a chair with a bear figure forming the back and arms. Around a card table, which has recessed sections for the players' convenience, are chairs with pointed, cathedral-like arches.

For A Charmed Life, old Clue and Chinese Checker games are exhibited, along with a small table shuffleboard. The Christmas tree in the room is adorned with poinsettias, ribbons and holly.

Visitors will see the dress Matilda Dodge Wilson wore to Frances' debutante ball at the Book Cadillac Hotel in 1933. The event had a silver and dark theme; Matilda's silk and satin crepe dress is dark and features rhinestone accents.

(Frances' outfit included an orchid that had been dyed black. It was considered scandalous and shocked Detroit society, Overland said.)

Frances' bedroom is decorated in burgundy for the holidays. Among the decor are strings of glittering beads on a chandelier. As in other years, the decorating at the hall is done by Panache, designers from Georgia.

Hours for A Charmed Life: Celebrations in the Grand Manor are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily (except for Wednesday, Dec. 6), with last admittance 4:30 p.m. Hours Wednesday will be 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., with last admittance at 8:30 p.m.

The Meadow Brook Hall Gift Shop, with new and unusual items added for holiday shopping, will be open during the Holiday Walk hours.

Admission — which includes admission to the Knole Cottage playhouse, where Santa will greet visitors — is $12.50 for adults, $6 for ages 12 and under, $6 for OU affiliates with ID, $10 for groups of 20 or more.

Black-tie holiday gala evenings are scheduled Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 and 2, with reception and touring 6:30 p.m. and dinner 8 p.m. An afterglow following dinner includes dancing. Cost per person is $200 for patron, $275 for benefactor. Advance reservations are required for the gala evenings.

Meadow Brook Hall is on the OU campus, off Adams, south of Walton. Call (248) 370-3140 or visit www.meadowbrookhall.org

All proceeds from the Holiday Walk are used for the preservation and interpretation of Meadow Brook Hall.

ASK THE VETS

DRS. MICHAEL AND TRACY JAFFE

Dear Doctors,

My husband and I are having the same argument we have every fall. He says it's fine to let Molly, our 8-year-old golden retriever, live outdoors during the fall and winter. I think she should be allowed to stay indoors when it's cold and just go outdoors for her walks. He says "Just leave her outside, she'll be fine." Can you settle this disagreement for us?

The bottom line is: Keep your husband outdoors and let your dog inside. Since it's hunting season, how many of you wives would know the difference?

On a more serious note, as the temperature and snow start to fall, it's time to start to consider the hazards of winter and help acclimate your pets to the harsher climate.

Young, healthy arctic breed dogs, such as huskies, samoyeds and malamutes, generally tolerate the cold and wind better than most pets.

We don't think any pet, including your golden retriever, should be left outdoors during temperature extremes. Those especially at risk are very young or old animals, ones with medical problems, thin pets, and those with sparse or short hair coats.

During harsh weather, the only time your pet needs to be outdoors is for a few minutes at a time to get exercise and relieve herself. Some dogs enjoy romping in the snow and want to play outdoors longer.

Winterize your pet

If you can't tolerate your pet in the house during cold weather, please follow our advice to help "winterize" your pet. Your pet will partially acclimate herself by storing a bit more fat and developing a denser coat as she is exposed to cooler temperatures.

Provide approximately 25 percent more calories in the diet of an outdoor pet during winter because extra calories are needed to help generate the extra energy to keep warm. Indoor pets may not get as much exercise, so cut slightly back on their food.

Provide a well-insulated, windproof outdoor shelter for your pet. The house should be just large enough for your pet to stand up, turn around and comfortably lie down. If it is much larger it may not provide sufficient insulation.

The house should be dry and draft-free, and contain soft bedding. Straw on the floor of the dog or cat house also provides insulation. Any bedding or straw needs to be replaced when it becomes wet.

Electric heating pads are available to place on the bottom of the house, but they must be plugged in to an electrical outlet and could pose a fire hazard if left unattended. If possible, relocate your pet's house to the sunniest part of the yard.

You'll deprive your pet of water if the water bowl freezes. Place fresh warm water in the outdoor water bowl several times each day. A non-stainless-steel bowl works best.

Pet Supplies Plus carries an electric water bowl heater. If you have an electrical outlet on the outside of your house, this water bowl heater may work well for you.

Since cats seldom will use a "cat house," consider installing a small pet door in the garage or leave the garage door open a crack so your cat can escape the cold.

Under the hood

Cats tend to nestle under car hoods to warm themselves near the car engine. Pets can get injured if they are trapped under the hood when the engine is started.

Hit the hood of your car with your fist or honk your horn before you start your car, especially if your cat sleeps in the garage or if you park outdoors. This should startle a cat who has taken refuge under your hood, and it is hoped he'll scurry away.

If you have any doubts, open your car hood and check to make certain there aren't any cats under the hood before you turn on the engine.

After your pet spends time outdoors, inspect her feet for clumps of ice, snow, or ice-removal agents that might become embedded in the hair of the feet or in between the toe pads. These need to be removed with a moist towel because they can cause discomfort.

Your pet can get sick if it licks large volumes of ice-remover containing salt, magnesium or calcium chloride from his feet. Nontoxic ice remover is commercially available (Safe Paws®).

Some dogs prefer to be bundled up in a sweater or coat and waterproof booties when they go outdoors. Pet apparel constructed of fleece is our first choice for warmth. Your local pet supply store should carry a variety of styles and sizes.

Overexposure danger

Even a healthy pet with an outdoor shelter isn't immune from cold overexposure. An animal left outdoors in extremely cold weather, especially if he gets wet, can suffer from hypothermia and frostbite.

A hypothermic pet may shiver, act more sluggish and not move around as much. Hypothermia can be life-threatening. If you think your pet is hypothermic, bring him indoors and warm him with heated towels or blankets placed around his torso, head and extremities.

Inspect your pet's toes, tips of ears and tail, and external genitalia for coldness, pain, numbness or swelling, which is indicative of frostbite. Don't rub these frostbitten parts in an attempt to warm them — it may further damage the tissue.

Left untreated, frostbitten tissue will continue to die and gangrene may develop. Pets with hypothermia or frostbite need prompt medical attention.

If you live in a wooded, hunting region, please don't allow your pets or children to roam outdoors unless they are supervised and wear orange reflective collars and vests. Accidentally shooting a person or pet must be every hunter's nightmare.

Finally, keep your pets off the streets and snowmobile trails. Ice and snow make maneuvering a vehicle to avoid hitting an animal more difficult.

Keep pets from wandering onto ice-covered ponds or lakes. Your pet won't be able to determine whether the ice is thick enough to support his weight.

Antifreeze

When you add antifreeze to your car, wipe up any spills and place antifreeze containers out of the reach of both pets and children.

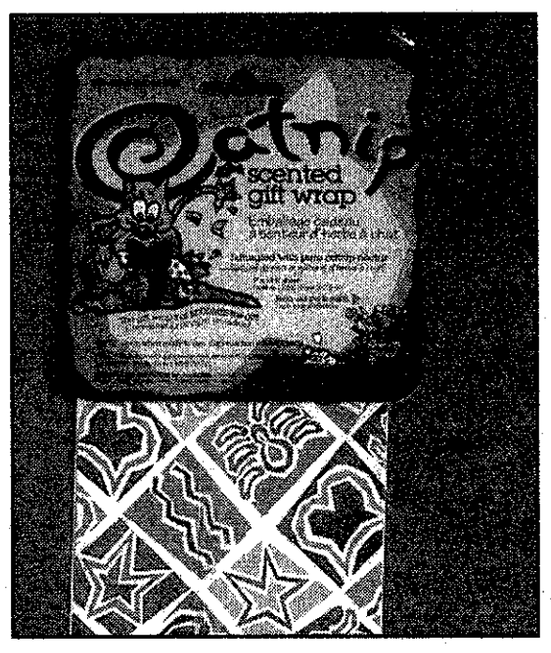

The sweet taste and bright color may entice a thirsty or inquisitive animal or child to ingest some. Just a few swallows of ethylene glycol-based antifreeze, depending on the person or pet's body weight, can be fatal.

If you suspect your pet or child has ingested antifreeze, contact your veterinarian or physician immediately.

We recommend the use of Sierra Antifreeze Coolant® or Prestone LowTox® Antifreeze because they are propylene glycol based and are significantly less toxic to pets, wildlife and children than ethylene glycol-based antifreezes.

Good luck convincing your husband to let Molly take refuge in the house this winter. We hope we have addressed the hazards of leaving pets outdoors when it's just too darned cold!

Purr-fect wrap: Catnip-scented paper by the Kong Company is perfect for wrapping gifts for your cat.

Catnip-scented paper makes purr-fect wrap

The Kong Company, maker of the Kong Toy, has introduced a catnip-scented gift wrap for the felines on your shopping list.

Using a specially developed process, Kong saturates its wrapping paper in fresh catnip nectar. The paper is then sealed in mylar to preserve its pure catnip scent.

Just one whiff of this unusual gift wrap will captivate cats, setting off a blissful chain of scratching, sniffing and rolling around in ecstasy.

"You can give your cat this wrapping paper on Christmas morning, and she'll keep herself amused without having to investigate everyone else's presents," said Joe Markham, a cat owner and president of the Kong Company.

"All of the cats who tested this for us, including my own pets, went wild over the gift wrap."

The Kong gift wrap has also been tested by veterinarians, and is completely safe for cats.

The suggested retail price of the paper is $3.49 for a 9-by-12-1/2-inch sheet. For more information, call the Kong Company at (303) 216-2626, or visit www.kongcompany.com

Only the freshest catnip plants are used in the gift wrap making process. Kong processes the catnip into nectar within a few hours after it is harvested to ensure that the wrapping paper has a field-fresh scent.

The scent of the fresh catnip on the paper is so rich and so real, it acts like a magnet to attract cats.

Markham advises owners not to put a Kong-wrapped present under the tree until they're ready to give it to their pet.

"There's no way you're going to surprise a pet with this paper, they know it's catnip," he said.

The new catnip gift wrap is available in two festive, contemporary patterns. Both feature vivid colors and eye-popping designs.

One of the patterns is built around a fish, butterfly and cat food theme. The other has lively abstract stars, kaleidoscopes and paws.

Follow these tips to prevent dog bites

Detroit is ranked eighth on the list of Top 10 Dog Bite Accident Cities, according to the U.S. Postal Service.

Dogs that lack proper socialization skills to people, and are not supervised or safely confined, are most likely to bite humans along with those that are not sterilized or receive little or no attention or handling.

Although particular breeds of dogs are often accused of being most likely to bite, other characteristics are better predictors of canine biting behavior. Dogs not spayed or neutered are three times more likely to bite. For this reason, the Michigan Humane Society suggests the first step you take to prevent your dog from biting is to have it spayed or neutered.

The Michigan Humane Society offers these tips to prevent dog bites:

- Always use caution around a dog you don't know.
- Respect a dog's space. Don't enter a strange yard or reach over a fence to pet a dog.
- Never surprise a dog, especially one that is eating, sleeping or caring for puppies.
- Dogs rarely attack without warning; potentially dangerous dogs may stare straight ahead with hair raised and teeth barred or growl, snarl or snap.
- If a dog threatens you, avoid eye contact, stay motionless and keep your hands at your side. Children should be taught to stand still and "be a tree" if approached by a strange dog.

Here's some advice on cleaning up after pets

Everyone gets caught up in the excitement of the holiday season, even our four-footed friends.

Sometimes the hustle and bustle of the holidays can lead our pets to have messy "accidents."

Cardinal Laboratories, maker of the Pet Botanics Stain & Odor Remover, says that sales of the popular cleaning solution pick up every December as more owners try to cover up Fido's foibles.

"The holidays are fun, but they can be rough on a dog's bladder," said Barbara Denzer, vice president of marketing for Cardinal Laboratories.

"A dog's routine is thrown during the Christmas season. He's left home alone a little longer than usual, then the next thing you know he has an accident on the living room rug – just before your guests arrive for a holiday party."

Denzer offers the following advice for cleaning up your pooch's problems:

- Gently wipe and blot liquid from the soiled area with paper towels or cloth before applying stain and odor remover.
- Don't rub stain and odor remover into the soiled area, since this will make the stain spread.
- Avoid exposing the soiled area to direct heat or sunlight, both of which will cause the stain to set in the floor-covering fabric.
- Get to the source of the odor by cleaning the pad under your carpet as well as the floor boards.
- Use products specifically formulated for removing pet stains and odors, rather than all-purpose household cleaners.

The Pet Botanics Stain & Odor Remover is an herbal, biodegradable stain and odor remover that offers a safe and effective, non-toxic alternative to chemical products. It is available at PETsMART.

HOME WORK

Fewer technicians available to service appliances

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

JOE GAGNON

There are many problems in the major home appliance industry today.

New products are introduced only for consumers to find the appliances have serious flaws shortly after they're broken in. Many consumers make repeated calls so items like $1,000 washing machines can be serviced. They are frustrated.

In my end of the business, I know fewer appliance repair technicians are available. No one trains them anymore. Service companies also are finding it hard to expand the customer base.

In fact, the entire industry is short many thousands of service technicians which are desperately needed to take care of the increasing number of new products sold. I know friends who just can't simply hire a new technician because there are none to be found.

In the electronics industry, the situation is even more desperate. They tell me that in some areas of the country, consumers can't get service unless they carry-in their projection set or their HDTV. The waiting period keeps on getting longer for a service call.

For those of you who think that your product is new and covered under warranty, that warranty makes no difference.

Never before in the history of this country, have we seen such turmoil between the manufacturers and service agents. Many of the long-time agents are refusing to service certain products because they feel they are losing money doing so. They want to concentrate time and effort in making a profit and that can mean dealing only with cash-paying customers. What will happen in the future is becoming very uncertain.

The problems above are magnified by another important fact. These appliance and electronics repair companies are closing up a lot faster than any new ones opening up.

Who can blame them for getting out if all they do is go around in a circle? You own a business and you can't pay the bills, you might as well get out. What about the service technician who makes the least amount of money in all the service industries? He might as well get into another type of service industry, use his mechanical aptitude and make more money.

A lot of work is derived from taking care of manufacturers' warranties and the service companies have some issues with the reimbursement they receive. To list a few problems, payments do not equal regular out-of-warranty calls, reimbursements are delayed, and parts costs and shipping are not covered. The future does not look rosy.

Since I first wrote about this four years ago, it is much worse. In the years ahead, you will wait a long time when you need service, you will spend a lot more for that service and you will get sticker shock when you go shopping for new products that you must purchase.

The positive side to this story, if there is one, is that a manufacturer cannot afford putting a product into the American home that costs so much and ensure that it is "fail proof." It will be a better product, but cost more money. How this all comes about is the question. Stay tuned.

Joe Gagnon can be heard on Newstalk 760, WJR-AM, every Saturday and Sunday mornings. He is a past president of The Society of Consumer Professionals. His second book, "The Words and Wisdom of The Appliance Doctor" is available in book stores. His phone number is (313) 873-9789.

Blow away the heavy white stuff with well-maintained snow thrower

ASK DAD

HARRY JACHYM

If the predictors and early indications are correct, we'll see a greater than normal snowfall this year.

Haven't we heard this before? In any event, it's good to be prepared for it. Remember the January 1999 snowfall.

To start, be sure you own at least a snow shovel, and it's in good shape. Don't wait until the first big snowfall. They quickly disappear from the stores after that one.

Don't forget to get your ice melting products. Calcium chloride or ammonium sulfate are less corrosive than rock salt and easier on the lawn.

Now is a good time to think about buying a snow thrower. There are several sales going on and selections are still pretty good.

Don't be snowbound

Though these machines come in many sizes, shapes and prices, they can be basically broken into two types. The single-stage models, which have paddles or augers that pick up the snow and throw it in one action or two-stage models which pick up the snow with an auger, sending it to a blower. This blower throws the snow through the chute.

The size of the area you have to clear and how far the snow must be thrown will determine the correct one for you. A two-stage unit clears a wider path and throws the snow further than the single stage models, and they are self-propelled. They are larger, taking up more storage space, and usually more costly. They also contain more moving parts which can lead to higher maintenance costs.

■ Look over the entire unit for loose and broken parts and check the drive belt for wear. Any problem should be repaired now before the repair and part shops get busy.

Two-stage units are probably the right choice for you if your driveway is over 40-feet long, you have a corner or other large lot or you need to throw the snow further than 15 feet.

A single stage is fine for most snowfalls and lots in this area. Besides being less expensive to purchase, they store in a smaller space and maintenance is minimal.

Another consideration when purchasing either single or double stage throwers is electric starters. As I see more years pass me, I realize this option really isn't that expensive.

Keep it clean

If you already have a snowthrower, it's time to check that it's running right.

Frank Chapp, a vocational automotive technology instructor for a local school district, says preparing the snow thrower for winter should have started last spring. Chapp suggests keeping gas stabilizer such as Sta-Bil mixed with the gasoline, and making sure it is not just in the tank, but has been run into the carburetor.

As a matter of fact, it's a good idea to mix stabilizer with gasoline used in all your lawn and snow equipment.

Gasoline, especially when mixed with oil (for 2-cycle engines), begins to break down within a few weeks. Gasoline left in the carburetor between seasons is bound to cause trouble. Even if you ran your snow thrower dry at the end of last season, there is still a little in the carburetor. This is enough to cause difficult starting and poor operation.

Chapp also suggests protecting the upper cylinder with fogging oil (available at most small engine repair shops) and changing the crankcase oil before storage. If you didn't change the oil in the spring, do it now.

Check the drive belt

Check the wiper blade and paddles for wear and proper operation. Look over the entire unit for loose and broken parts and check the drive belt for wear. Any problem should be repaired now before the repair and part shops get busy.

Try starting the snow thrower. If it's difficult to start or won't keep running once started, the problem is often caused by the spark plug. You can check it for wear and fouling, but why not just replace it?

The frustration of trying to operate the snowthrower on a worn or fouled plug, especially on a two-cycle engine isn't worth the $2 or $3 a new one will cost.

Once the snow thrower is up and running, don't forget to winterize your lawnmower and other gas lawn equipment (see above). If you have a power washer, along with winterizing the engine, drain the pump or add anti-freeze according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

Dates set for home, garden shows

■ The Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan will sponsor the ninth annual Home Improvement Show Feb. 1-4.

The Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan (BIA) has announced the dates of its home and garden shows for 2001.

"By bringing everything together under one roof, our shows are redefining how many homeowners do their shopping," said Dave Kellett Sr., president of BIA and of Kellett Construction Company of Bloomfield Hills.

BIA is the non-profit sponsor of the shows.

BIA will sponsor:

■ the ninth annual Home Improvement Show Feb. 1-4 at the Novi Expo Center

■ the fourth annual Macomb Home Improvement Show Feb. 16-18 at the Macomb Sports & Expo Center in Warren

■ the 83rd annual GMC Builders Home & Detroit Flower Show March 22-25 at the Cobo Conference-Exhibition Center

■ the fifth annual Spring Home & Garden Show April 5-8 at the Novi Expo Center

■ the ninth annual Fall Remodeling and Furniture Show Oct. 11-14 at the Novi Expo Center.

The shows will feature advice, ideas and innovations from exhibitors displaying products and services for the home and garden.

An array of experts and celebrities will share their knowledge to help attendees achieve their home and gardening goals.

Here are gift ideas for remodelers

■ Professional tile setters use a wet saw to cut tough glazed ceramic tile, marble and stone. The motorized saw is equipped with a diamond-abrasive blade, sliding table and water pump that cools the blade as it cuts.

The Craftsman Soft-Wire Cable Cutter ($20, Model 42758) is designed for slicing through copper and aluminum electrical wiring as well as the tough plastic insulation that surrounds them.

Unlike most wire cutters, which rely on brute strength, this tool features a compound-leverage mechanism that has a 12-to-1 power ratio. Translation: It exerts 12 times more force than a traditional wire cutter, which reduces hand cramps and wrist strain.

Professional tile setters use a wet saw to cut tough glazed ceramic tile, marble and stone. The motorized saw is equipped with a diamond-abrasive blade, sliding table and water pump that cools the blade as it cuts.

Wet saws make setting tile much easier, but they cost a prohibitive $1,000 to $2,000. If you have a small area to tile, the trick is to rent a wet saw for $50 to $65 a day. But if your project is a lot bigger, you might consider purchasing Porter-Cable's new Model 1500 Tile Saw ($299), an affordable, pro-quality wet saw. It has a 7.4-amp motor and 7-inch diamond blade for crosscutting tile up to 14 inches square. It can also slice tiles on the diagonal up to 10 inches square.

Think all utility knives are the same? The new Instant Change Utility Knife ($10, Model 10-788) from Stanley has three key features that make it different.

Blade changes take about 10 seconds. Press the yellow button on the side of the tool, pull out the old blade, insert a new one and release the button.

New blades are conveniently stored in a swing-out magazine molded into the handle. No more screws to remove and lose. Finally, the knife is equipped with a handy cord cutter that lets you cut string while the blade is safely retracted into the handle.

For more information, visit Sears at www.sears.com/craftsman or call (800) 377-7414; Porter-Cable, www.porter-cable.com, (800) 487-8665, or Stanley Tools, www.stanleyworks.com, and (800) 782-6539.

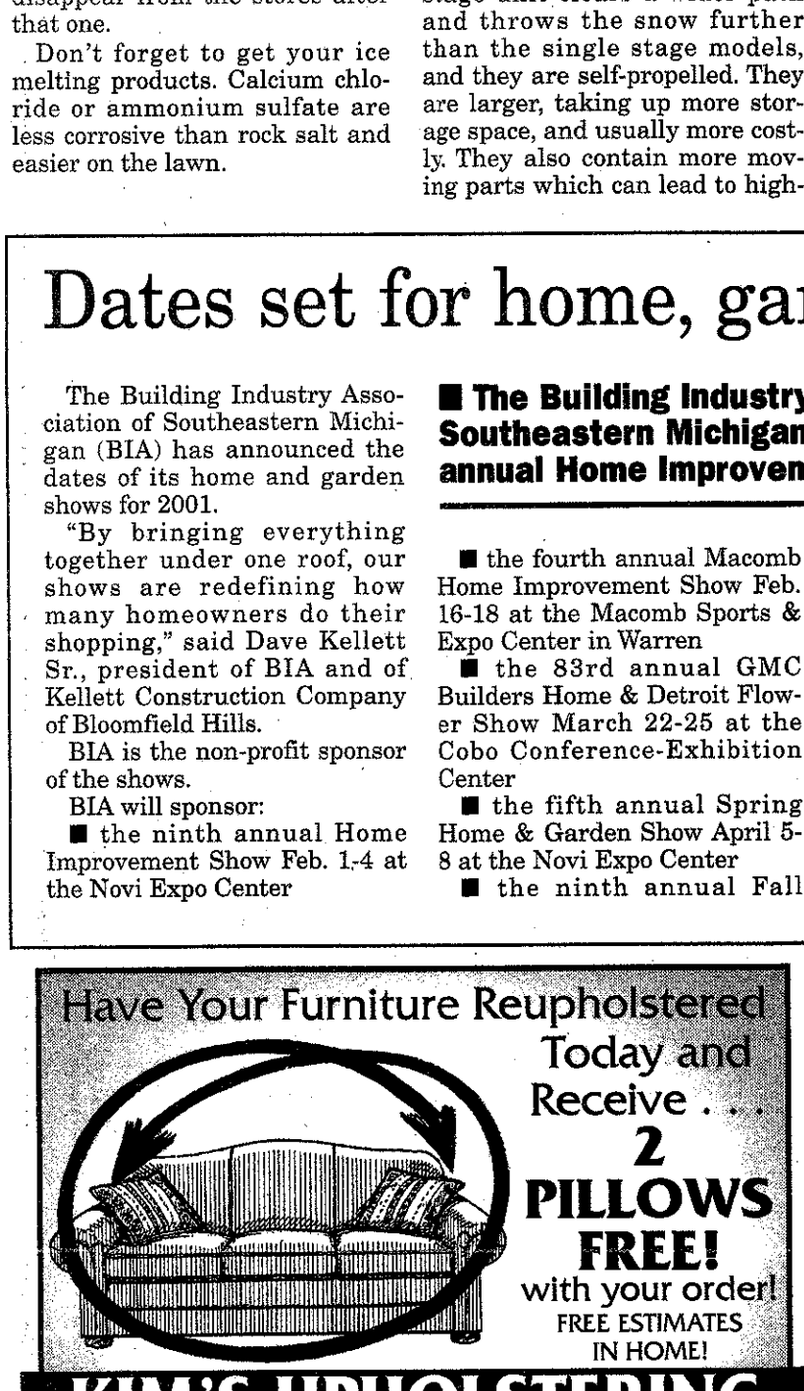

AR Kramer now open in Canton

The AR Kramer Flooring Co. has opened a store in Canton.

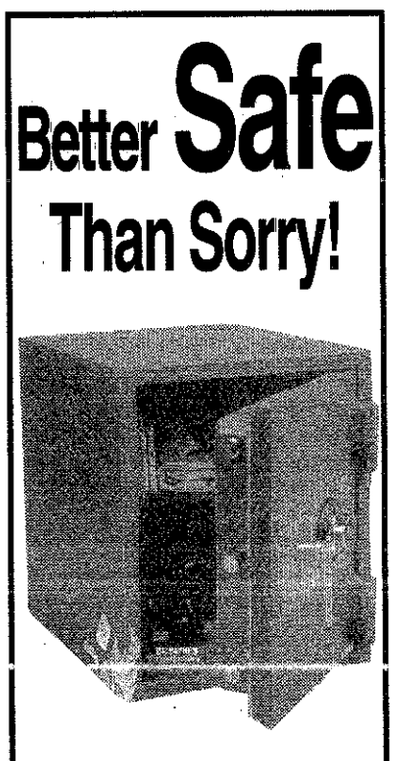

AR Kramer opened a new Dupont Flooring Center at 42170 Ford Road, just east of Lilley in early November.

This showroom is what company officials call the exclusive source for DuPont Stainmaster Ultra Life carpet. As a DuPont Flooring Center, the showroom represents an innovative approach to carpet shopping. Carpet samples are arranged in easy-to-shop, well-lighted display racks, segmented by three Stainmaster brands: DuPont Stainmaster carpet, Dupont Stainmaster Xtra Life and Dupont Stainmaster Ultra Life carpet.

Now celebrating its 75th anniversary, the AR Kramer Co. opened its first showroom in Detroit in 1925. Today a third generation of the Kramer family carries on the tradition of offering its customers products and service.

Have friends over for a holiday cleanup party

INVITING IDEAS

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

You made it through Thanksgiving. Perhaps the holiday meal was out at a restaurant or at someone else's abode, but Christmas dinner is designated as yours. Time to get out the dustbin and start preparing for the big dinner plans.

Now is the perfect time to get organized, clean out the pantry, or set up an area designed to fit your holiday needs — a real party planning central.

And why do it alone? Gather some close friends and do it as a group project. Friends always come through when there is a need (if you have the right friends!).

Here is the perfect time to get them committed, but make it a fun experience and provide lunch and food breaks throughout the day.

Begin your cleanup party with calls for help. Don't have too many over unless your house is huge. Three or four is the perfect number.

Provide your helpers with aprons, paint smocks or some old XL shirts (all of which you aren't worried about getting dirty or having paint spill on them).

Have a plan ahead of time. Don't plan it out when guests (helpers) arrive, although they may have some great suggestions.

Have ready a big pot of coffee or tea, or a cooler filled with bottled water, juice and pop.

Make some submarine sandwiches ahead of time. It is good to have some vegetarian options available for those who want to keep it light while working. Have sandwiches wrapped in wax paper or restaurant tissue for easy handling, and no added stuff to wash.

Also ahead of time, bag up some sticks of fresh veggies (individual bags would be ideal), and have some individual snack bags of snack foods (potato chips, corn chips, vegetable chips or pretzels) to accompany your submarine sandwiches.

If your particular cleanup party involves organization, a great field trip with the flock would be to such places as Organized Living, Bed, Bath and Beyond, Linens and More, Meijer household department. You get the idea.

Your guests may have some great ideas for reorganizing, and seeing the options available at these locations helps enormously.

If you are planning on painting a room, have paint, tarps or drop cloths, rollers, paint pans and brushes on hand before helpers arrive. There's something not fun about going out and getting this stuff!

Pick up some extra large Baggies (2-gallon and 2-1/2-gallon are available at Meijer and Kmart, respectively). They are wonderful for covering baking equipment, serving pieces and foodstuffs.

In my room-size pantry, I have some restaurant shelving that holds large plastic containers. These lidded plastic boxes are labeled and filled with bagged equipment. Each container is organized with certain items that are used in conjunction with one another, and are labeled (with a labeling machine) for easy viewing.

A little planning makes for great storage and easy entertaining. Include these friends in the labor. Do feed them while they are there, then invite them for a holiday party to enjoy the real fruits of their labor.

Some ideas for great submarine sandwich combinations at work time:

- Traditional Italian meat and cheese sub with a pesto spread instead of mustard or Italian dressing
- Leftover turkey or chicken sandwiches with sun-dried tomatoes, Romaine lettuce and a black olive pesto
- Roasted vegetables layered with assorted cheeses, topped with shredded lettuce and some balsamic vinaigrette
- Sliced roast beef topped with an herb mayonnaise (with or without cheese)
- Crisp bacon, Romaine lettuce and tomato slices, drizzled with mayo-mustard sauce
- Sliced Havarti cheese, lettuce shreds and thin slices of mango, apple or crisp pears, topped with a drizzle of fruity vinaigrette

Learn how to cook dishes for holidays at Novi show

Turkey, ham, cakes and cookies, fancy appetizers and feel-good foods sound like a holiday feast in the making.

It's all part of the Michigan Christmas Show, which runs Thursday-Sunday, Nov. 30- Dec. 3, at the Novi Expo Center.

During the show's four days, more than two dozen cooking programs are scheduled for the stage sponsored by Honey Baked Ham Co.

Kathy Stark, a cooking instructor and professional chef, will demonstrate how to cook the perfect holiday ham or turkey.

Stark has a holiday menu planned, along with a soup sampler, quick and elegant holiday appetizers and what she calls "twice is nice." You may call them leftovers.

Maureen Kimmel of the Pampered Chef demonstrates easy and simple (and prize-winning) luscious desserts. Chef Jeff Evans of Steve & Rocky's in Novi will cook up some holiday surprises. You'll learn the real secrets of cake decorating from Rhoda Sheridan at Lechter's Housewares.

Hour Detroit magazine is bringing Chef Evans, and chefs from the Epoch Group and The Essence of Northville. Karie Lee Shull, the Homemade Gourmet, will have time-saving tips for the cooking season ahead.

Small shops will be set up with crafts, gourmet foods, hot-piping strudel, gifts for everyone on your list and entertainment. The show is sponsored by Fox-2 News.

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Sunday. Admission is $7 for adults and $4 for children 6-12. Children six and under, excluding groups, are free.

A Farmer Jack bonus card will get $1 off admission. Discount coupons are available at Honey Baked Ham and Einstein Bagel stores.

For more information, call (800) 849-0248 or visit www.southernshows.com/mcs

Check used equipment carefully before buying

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

MONTE NAGLER

Each year, millions of new cameras, lenses and photo accessories are sold. An almost equal number of used items are either exchanged, sold privately, buried in a drawer or discarded.

Much of this old equipment is obsolete or damaged beyond repair. But some of it can be found hardly used and in excellent condition. Substantial savings can be made and a worthy piece of equipment added to your photo gear if you can distinguish between bargains and junk.

The best sources for finding used equipment are camera stores, classified ads and local photo flea markets.

With basic items such as tripods, flash units and darkroom accessories (trays, measuring cups, tongs, etc.), very little can go wrong, so buying them is a pretty safe bet. But with cameras and lenses, you need to be more cautious and check them out closely. Here's how:

First, carefully inspect the exterior of that used camera you're interested in. A lot can be learned from its general condition.

Some wear and tear is normal, such as worn corners and marks from neck-strap fittings. Just be sure the wear isn't excessive.

Be wary of dents, large scratches and especially distortion of the camera body. These indicate a dropped or abused camera and serious damage could be concealed inside.

Look through the viewfinder to ensure that focusing devices, readouts and so on are all clearly visible.

Be sure to check the battery compartment for any damage from old, corroded batteries. Wind the advance lever and snap the shutter at all speeds. It should operate smoothly down the scale.

Open the camera back and check for cleanliness. Then set the shutter at "B" and watch through the opened camera back as the shutter closes. There should be no sluggishness.

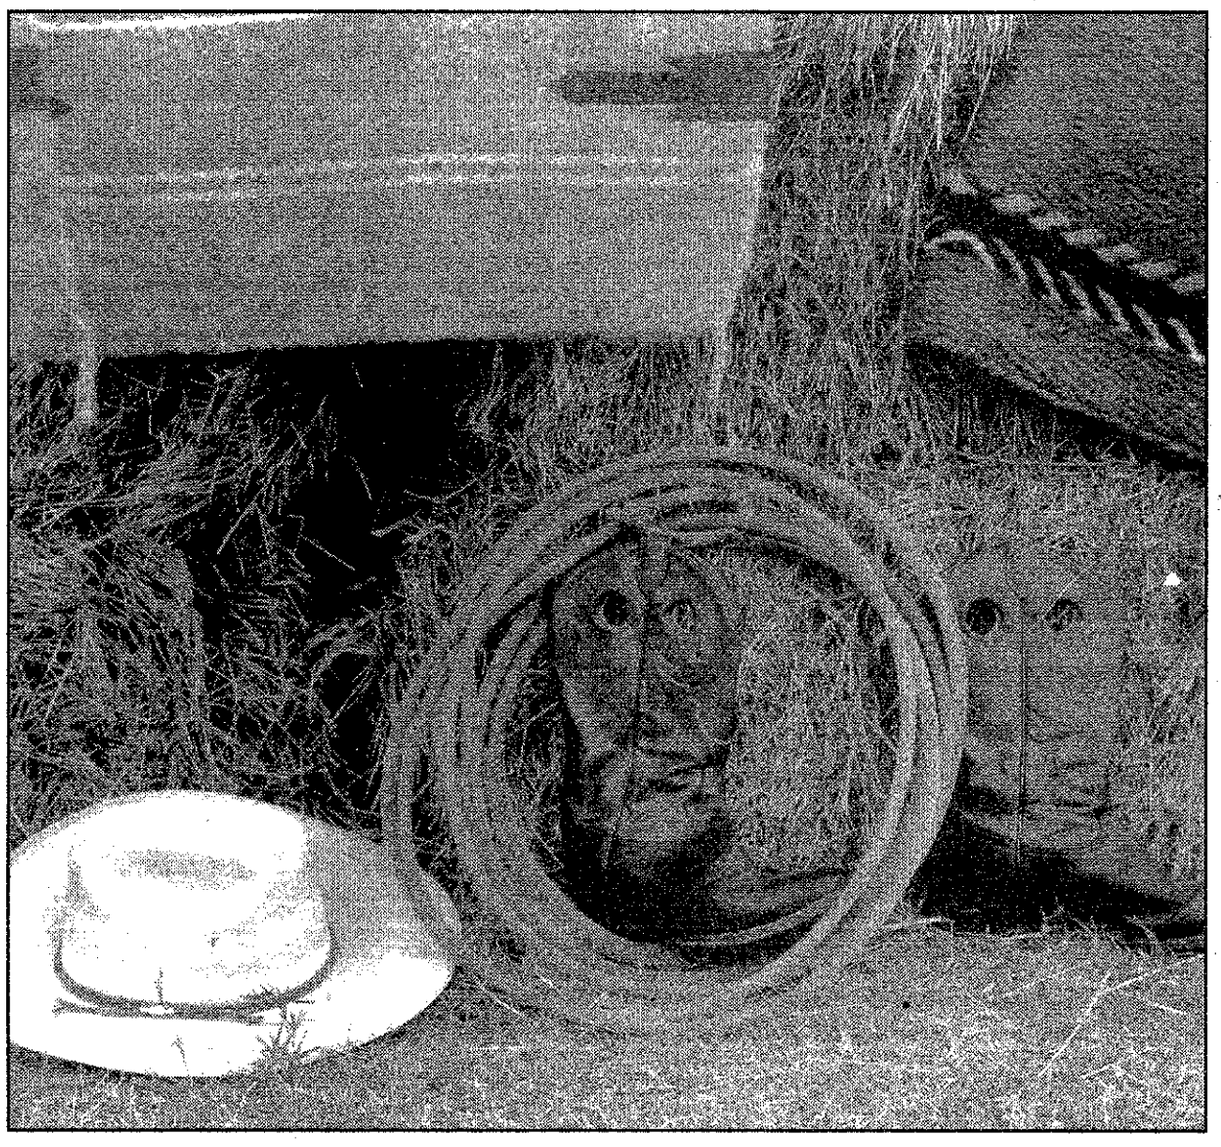

At different ASA settings, check the meter out by using a spare or friend's camera as a reference. Readings should be within one-half stop.

Finally, focus at infinity and look through the viewfinder. Distant objects should be clearly in focus. If not, the lens mount, mirror or focusing screen may be out of alignment.

Good lenses can be terrific bargains. You may be able to pick up a top-quality used lens at the same price, or lower, as a new but inferior model. Even at the same price, you're better off with the used lens. Everything should operate smoothly on the lens. It should focus easily and the glass should be free from scratches.

Buying from a distant seller when you can't check out the equipment can be risky indeed. Better to buy locally where you can ensure that your new piece of used equipment will serve you well.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then 111, then N-A-G-L-E-R. His fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Austin power: No problem with used equipment here. A used lens performed perfectly for Monte Nagler in his photograph of this cowboy "still life" in Austin, Texas.

Woodworking show visits Novi again

Don't miss the one-stop shop for woodworkers when the Metro Detroit Woodworking Show returns to the Novi Expo Center.

Show hours are noon-7 p.m. Friday, Dec. 8; 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 9, and 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 10. Admission to the show is $9 for adults, with children 12 and under free. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Woodworkers, home builders, woodturners and carvers, hobbyists and professionals can see the newest in hand tools, power tools, machinery and supplies.

The event features more than 100 different manufacturers displaying and demonstrating woodworking, turning, carving, finishing materials and supplies. The show gives attendees the luxury of shopping for all their workshop needs — home or commercial — all under one roof, at discount prices.

Woodworkers can ask questions, improve skills and interact with industry authors, instructors and master craftsmen at seminars and floor demonstrations presented by Fine Woodworking magazine and the Marc Adams' School of Woodworking.

Visit the Masters' Stage and see demonstrations by Marc Adams and Michael Fortune on a variety of woodworking techniques. They will also answer questions and show woodworkers how to correct common mistakes. Each session will last 30-60 minutes and takes place on the show floor. Adams and Fortune, along with Bill Hull and Jeff Jewitt, will be conducting a series of in-depth, three-hour seminars presented by Fine Woodworking magazine and the Marc Adams School of Woodworking.

Sessions include basic woodworking, bending wood, bandsaw and planer jigs, basic veneering, decorative veneering, coloring wood and hand-applied finishes.

Full-day seminars are $95 and three-hour seminars are $60. Advance seminar registration includes a free weekend pass to the show ($12 value) and can be charged by calling (800) 826-8257.

The Michigan Woodworkers Guild will be present to display members' work and collections, demonstrate skills, share tips and answer questions.

All attendees will be eligible to enter a prize drawing for a new Jet, Performax, Powermatic shop valued at up to $7,500.

For information, visit www.thewoodshows.com or call (800) 826-8257.

DESIGN CALENDAR

■ All generations are invited to celebrate the season at a holiday Victorian dessert tea 1:30-3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 6, at the Costick Center, 28600 11 Mile in Farmington Hills. Tickets are $10 and available at the center; they won't be sold Wednesday. The program will be "A Civil War Holiday," presented by Pamela Yockey, who collects and restores historical gowns. Seasonal music, poinsettias, an elaborate gingerbread castle, desserts catered by Mary Denning's Cake Shoppe and an array of teas will be featured. The tea is sponsored by the Farmington Hills Senior Adult Division and Waltonwoods at 12 Oaks. Call (248) 473-1830 for more information.

■ Children of all ages will enjoy visiting with Stumpy the Talking Christmas Tree, a miniature tree that responds to questions and has ideas of his own to share, 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 3, at Art Van Furniture, 29905 Seven Mile in Livonia. A friendly elf will be with Stumpy to greet youngsters and pass out gifts. Call (248) 478-8870.

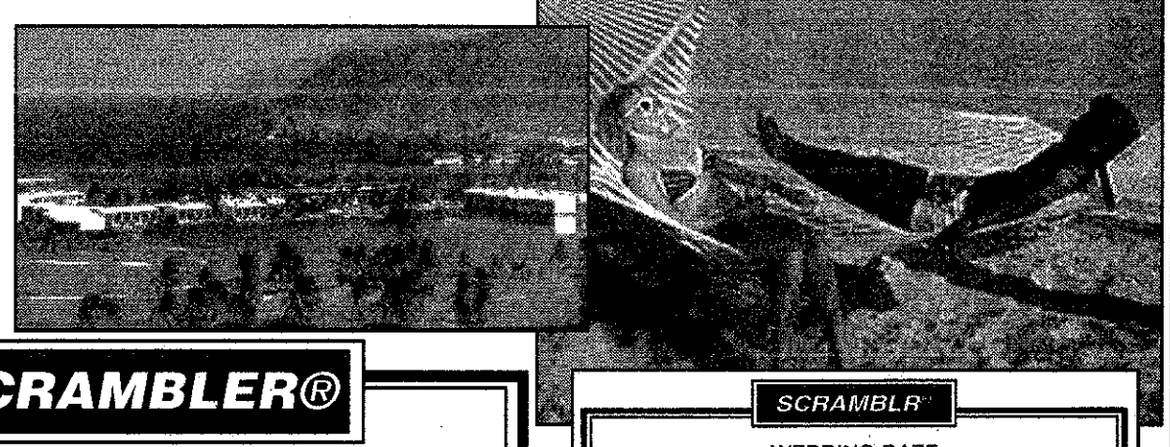

■ A holiday food drive continues through Sunday, Dec. 17, at all Art Van Furniture stores. Help the hungry by bringing in non-perishable food items (boxed and canned meals, canned vegetables, canned fruits, powdered milk, canned soup and boxed cereal).

GARDENING

Books highlight gardens, from cottage to greenhouse

GARDEN SPOT

MARTY FIGLEY

This is a busy time of year, but gardeners can always find some time to make that green thumb a little greener.

Everything you may want to know is included in Creating a Cottage Garden in North America, Stephen Westcott-Gratton ($29.95, Fulcrum).

The author explains how to transform an existing landscape as well as what to do when starting from scratch. He stresses the use of native plants and warns that a little "messiness" is to be expected, that straight lines and rigid plantings aren't suitable.

The idea is to have a garden that has interest throughout the season with all types of plants — flowers as well as vegetables and trees that provide food. By following Westcott-Gratton's guidelines, every gardener can be successful with cottage gardening. Much good information.

Also from Fulcrum, a revised and expanded edition of Greenhouse Gardener's Companion, Shane Smith ($21.95, soft), is now available. It features a new section on orchids, an expanded section on natural disease and pest control, plus more.

You will learn how to grow flowers and food in a greenhouse or sunspace, and how to use greenhouse principles in a sunny room as well as to grow all manner of crops, propagate, and properly take care of problems when they arise. The nitty-gritty of greenhouse construction and the technicalities that make everything work is fascinating.

Garden guides

You've seen him on TV, now you can have Ainsley Harriott's Meals in Minutes ($19.95, DK), a cookbook that will prove good food doesn't need to take long to prepare.

Each of the 100 recipes has a snappy title, such as "Teasing Turkey Pita Pockets," "Pasta Cream Bean Dream" and "Merry Berry Christmas Crumble." Harriott has thoughtfully included tips for saving time, necessary ingredients for the pantry and equipment to make cooking easier (buy the best).

The Plantfinder's Guide to Garden Ferns, Martin Rickard ($34.95, Timber Press), is just the ticket for those who grow, or wish to grow, these versatile plants.

Rickard discusses their use for every garden condition — tender and hardy, large and small, robust and filmy, and the many shapes and colors of the lovely fronds. It is fascinating to learn the history of ferns (collectors would go to great lengths to find choice specimens), and the photographs show how versatile they can be.

The majority of the book describes the many ferns now in cultivation, and also features Rickard's personal observations of the species and cultivars that he has grown.

A little book, Blue Mountain: A Spiritual Anthology Celebrating the Earth, F. Lynne Bachleda ($15.95, paper, Menasha Ridge Press, distributed by Globe Piquot Press), is a collection of nature writings of such people as Georgia O'Keefe ("When you take a flower in your hands and really look at it, it's your world for the moment. I want to give that world to someone else. I want them to see it whether they want to or not."), plus R. Carson, Mohammed, A. Dillard, Thoreau and others; poems, proverbs, lyrics, essays and fiction passages.

"The book has seven guideposts for a spiritual journey ... that originates with a longing that might also feel like loneliness — a need or desire to reconnect with the vitality and possibilities offered by nature," Bachleda says.

Facts not Fear, Michael Sanera and Jane Shaw ($14.95, paper, plus $4 shipping and handling; write Regnery Publishing Inc., Dept. 194, 1 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Washington, D.C., 20001), is "a parents' guide to teaching children about the environment."

The book claims to "provide parents and teachers accurate information to address children's concerns about the health of our planet.

"It gives balanced attention to environmental issues that plague our generation ... It will show through simple activities with children how you can set the environmental record straight."

Sanera is the director of the Center for Environmental Education Research, a division of The Claremont Institute; Shaw is a senior associate of the Political Economy Research Center, a non-profit institute that studies market approaches to environmental problems.

From the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Hummingbird Gardens: Turning Your Yard Into Hummingbird Heaven ($9.95), shows how to entice these birds to your garden and how to encourage them to stay a while.

It also offers information about appropriate hummingbird plants for each section of the country, and a section illustrating the 18 species of hummingbirds in the United States and Canada, as well as four species that are rare here. All pertinent information about each bird is included.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing (734) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then 111, then 3445. Her fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Does your garden club have an upcoming event or meeting you want publicized? Send items for consideration in Gardening Calendar to Ken Abramczyk, Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150 or e-mail kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net. To send a fax, call (734) 591-7279.

GARDEN CLUBS

LIVONIA

The Livonia Garden Club will hold its annual "Fresh Greens Table Arrangement" workshop at the Churchill High School cafeteria at 9:30-11:30 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 2. This year's holiday arrangement will feature a hurricane candle set amongst a bed of various crisp, fresh pine boughs embellished with gold ribbons. Register through Livonia Public Schools Community Education Department. Cost is $22 for Livonia residents and $27 for non-residents. All instructions and supplies are included. Bring your own pruners and scissors. Early registration is encouraged as this annual event is usually a sellout. Refreshments are included and a Ways and Means table of gift ideas will be available for purchase. This annual event is a major fund-raiser for the Livonia Garden Club.

Also, on Saturday, Dec. 9, members of Livonia Garden Club, with the help of local teens, create holiday arrangements for Angela Hospice patients.

Apply now for master gardener classes

The Michigan State University Extension program in Wayne County will offer classes in January for Wayne County residents interested in becoming master gardeners.

The Michigan Master Gardener program is a horticulture education and volunteer leader training program offered by MSU Extension in Michigan counties. The volunteers distribute home gardening information to Michigan residents.

Classes are scheduled 6-10 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 9, at the Wayne County Extension and Education Center, 5454 Venoy in Wayne and 9 a.m.-1 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 13, at the Wayne County MSU Extension Office, 640 Temple (sixth floor), in Detroit.

All classes will be taught for 12 consecutive weeks, covering the following topics: introduction to plant science, flower gardening, indoor plants and their care, integrated pest management, vegetable gardening and woody ornamentals. Also included are soils for plant growth, household pests and wildlife, lawn establishment and care, growing backyard fruit, diagnosing plant problems and composting and vermiculture.

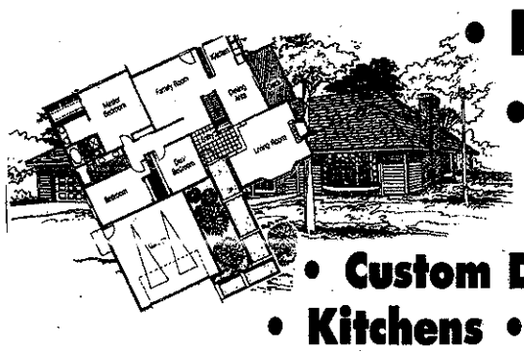

To obtain certification, master gardeners must pass weekly quizes, the final examination and volunteer 40 hours within one year of completing the class to help MSU Extension educate the public in the horticulture field.

Fees are $200 for a Wayne County resident or $240 for others. Two members of the same household can enroll in the class and fees are $300 for both. A horticulture professional, paying by a business check, will be charged $210.

Applications for the 2001 Master Gardener class can be picked up at the Wayne County MSU Extension office at 640 Temple (sixth floor), in Detroit from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. To have an application mailed to your home, call Monica Van Buren or Kristine Hahn at (313) 833-3417 during the same hours.

Wayne County MSU Extension must receive completed applications and a check for the entire course fee made payable to MSU Extension by Friday, Dec. 8.

Add soft light to bathroom with blinds

INTERIORS

The increasing luxuriousness of the American bathroom has made it an oasis of escape from the stress of the outside world – and sometimes from the rest of the house as well.

It's no longer unusual to see bathrooms outfitted with such amenities as a whirlpool, steam room or even a complete workout facility. It's also no surprise that the style and décor of bathrooms are now given as much importance as other areas of the home.

When it comes to design trends in today's opulent bathrooms, there's one word on everyone's lips: windows.

Windows and skylights are what people want most in their newly built or remodeled bathrooms, according to the National Kitchen & Bath Association's latest design trends survey. Just like the bathrooms they illuminate, these windows are bigger and bolder than ever.

"It's often the case that these prominent windows face the street, so homeowners are looking for stylish window coverings that let in the outdoor light, while providing privacy," says Stephanie Witt, a certified bath designer in Grand Rapids, Mich., and NKBA president.

These two essential bathroom design elements can be presented in a single shade called Duette Duolite, where two honeycomb fabrics are combined to provide total flexibility in light control.

For a window overlooking the tub, for example, one could make the top section of sheer fabric and the bottom section of opaque fabric to enjoy the daylight.

Often, there is too much daylight flooding the bathroom, so light control becomes an important design factor. A new remedy for this problem is Serenette SoftFold Shadings from Hunter Douglas. This is a light-diffusing window ensemble with a tailored, drapery look and privacy and light control options. Serenette Shadings feature a patented 4-1/4-inch wide 100 percent fabric SoftFold louver that diffuses and softens light through its unique teardrop shape.

Seamless and contoured for a full and graceful appearance, the louvers rotate for varying degrees of light control.

"I find that the huge windows of today's bathrooms need softening," says Witt. "Window coverings and shades create that essential soft touch." Vignette window shadings can achieve that desired effect. Featuring layers of gently contoured fabric folds that overlap one another like billowy waves, Vignette shadings combine the softness associated with fine custom draperies with the ease, practicality and durability of shades. Vignette shadings come in a bevy of rich woven fabrics and over 100 designer colors.

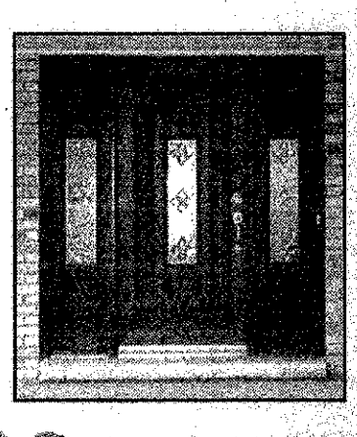

As for color in bathrooms, the NKBA survey found that white is still the most popular color. However, Witt points out that many find an entirely white bathroom too sterile. "An excellent way to give a white bathroom flair," she suggests, "is to use window coverings as an accent color."

Remembrance window shades from Hunter Douglas come in dozens of fabrics and hues. They create a dramatic effect when set against an all-white interior. They also offer practical features such as a heavy-duty clutch roller system and a wrapped bottom rail with balance and weight adjustment.

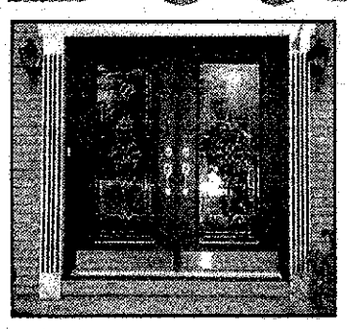

For many Americans, the bathroom is that special room where they can relax and pamper themselves. Windows give it that essential dramatic aura.

America's Only Full Mattress Warranty
Most sets of Thomasville bedding come with a 20-year non-prorated full warranty.

20 YEAR Non-Prorated

While most other manufacturers pro-rate their warranty after just five years, we don't. Which means if you have any problem with the structure of your Thomasville mattress set, it will be repaired or replaced at no cost to you.

Visco Elastic Foam
Visco elastic foam reduces body pressure better than traditional mattresses, and promotes more comfort and better circulation - more evenly distributing body pressure!

Hand-Stitched Borders
Our 100% upholstered cotton sidewalls eliminate shifting of the comfort levels and provide a solid edge that will never sag or break down. The result is a sleeping surface that is just as supportive and comfortable at the edge as the center.

Cotton Encased
The innerspring unit is encased in over 96 pounds of supportive 100% cotton. This process ensures flexibility, a long lasting firm seaming edge, and uniform comfort over the entire sleeping surface.

Latex
Latex provides superior back support by gently conforming to body contours and reducing the pressure associated with tossing and turning. Inherently hypo-allergenic, Latex is the most naturally durable cushioning material in the world.

8-Way Hand Tied
For optimal comfort, each coil is hand tied and knotted eight ways. The result is strong but flexible support, with each coil responding independently to your body's weight.

Inner-Tufted
To secure long lasting comfort and durability, mattress upholstery materials are "inner-tufted" by hand. Inner-tufting secures materials, insuring no separation or distortion of comfort levels.

Roll Edge Process
The mattress perimeter is stitched with a "roll edge" creating a one of a kind natural border that eliminates the border rod.

Cotton Upholstery
Cotton provides the ultimate in sleeping comfort and is found in only the finest mattresses. Only the finest grade 100% cotton is used in the Thomasville Mattress Collection.

Noel Night

EVENT ENTICES YOUNG, OLD WITH MUSIC AND REINDEER

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

Noel Night is more than just an opportunity to sing for Shari Clason and the rest of the members of the Schoolcraft College Community Choir in Livonia. After the 50-voice chorus performs at 7 p.m. in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, many of the singers plan to take horse-drawn carriage rides, visit Santa's reindeer, and indulge themselves in a multitude of multicultural music styles.

The choir, under the direction of Mark Perrine, will sing seasonal music, including selections from Brahms, Purcell, Rutter and Luboff along with conducting a Messiah sing-a-long. This is the second year the choir, now in its 36th year, will perform at Noel Night.

Something different

"It's always fun to see all the people down at Noel Night," said Clason, a Northville resident who joined the choir 25 years ago. "And the Cathedral Church of St. Paul is a wonderful facility, a somewhat older church that has a cathedral atmosphere. It gives us an alternative to our usual venues. It's something that's a little bit different."

Noel Night gives young as well as older musicians the opportunity to perform in a variety of venues. Ensembles from the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra, under director Charles Burke, will play holiday and classical music amidst the van Goghs and Da Vincis at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"It's such a festive event to begin with and it's a nice way for them to perform in front of a large audience and it gets the word out about the civic orchestra," said Burke, a Canton resident. "It's always nice to kick off the holiday with music."

Maureen Riley is expecting about 20,000 to attend the 28th annual Noel Night which concludes with a sing-a-long to the music of the Salvation Army Band on Woodward Avenue.

The theme this year – One Planet, One People – celebrates the holidays in a multitude of ways from Jewish programming at the International Institute and the Kids Klez Band of Michigan at the Detroit Public Library to an old-fashioned Southern Christmas with Appalachian carols and spirituals at the Heritage Museum. Or watch dancers perform scenes from the Harlem Nutcracker at the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History.

What: The 28th annual Noel Night features music, art exhibits, caroling, carriage rides, holiday shopping, and a chance to visit Santa's reindeer. The evening concludes with a sing-a-long on Woodward Avenue
When: 5-9:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2.
Where: In the University Cultural Center between Ferry and Warren, and Cass Avenue and John R, Detroit. For more information, call (313) 577-5088.

Festive

"It fills the streets; it's definitely festive," said Riley, special events director for the University Cultural Center Association which produces Noel Night. "The kids can come and see the reindeer stabled at the New Detroit Science Center and meet the elves. The Scarab Club will have a jambalaya dinner and Santa will visit there as well. Santa, the Christmas Bear and elves are available for photos in several locations."

Along with music from around the world, Noel Night offers a chance to purchase gifts including one-of-a-kind art works and items from museum shops and holiday church bazaars.

"We've expanded the programming on Woodward Avenue to include a Holiday Gift Shoppe, a tented artists' enclave with hand made German ornaments, Pewabic Pottery, a glass artist, and items from Bag Lady Beads," said Riley. "There will also be food booths with everything from hot dogs to turkey legs and soup. The Detroit Artists Market will also be joining us this year. It adds another shopping opportunity. There's lots of holiday shopping including a Center for Creative Studies student sale."

Christmas caroling: The singing street urchins of Oakland county-based Michigan Youth Theatre perform music that brings the world of Charles Dickens to life.

Drama based on 1911 trial

BY KEELY WYGONIK

The Runner Stumbles by Milan Stitt, opening Friday, Dec. 1 at the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford, is a production Sean Kelley has wanted to do for a long time. It's based on a 1911 Michigan trial. A nun is murdered and the prime suspect is the parish priest.

"It is a very gripping drama that deals with the religion, a possible inappropriate relationship between the father and nun, and the murder trial," said Kelley who is directing the show, and serves as Guild president. "I think it has all the qualities of good theater, it makes you think as well as feel. A great deal can be learned about ourselves through the theater and this is an excellent example. It also has a surprise twist at the end which is done very well."

What: The Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford presents The Runner Stumbles by Milan Stitt
When: 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 1-2, Dec. 8-9, Dec. 15-16, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 10 and Dec. 17.

Plot

Here's the plot — Father Rivard, banished to a small parish in Solon Township, near Grand Rapids, falls in love with Sister Rita. When circumstances forced her to move into the rectory with him, his anguish became unbearable. Their relationship, inevitably, spelled tragedy, but not until the explosive and surprising climax of their sacrifice and the identity of the murderer is revealed.

John Hicks of Livonia portrays the young, just out of law school, prosecutor who would like to put Rivard in jail.

"It's interesting how quickly the play changes from past to present," he said. "You're in court, and then there's a scene of what actually happened in the past. There are lots of twists. It's a plain set and the audience has to use their imagination."

The script is what attracted Lance Abke of Plymouth to the show. "As soon as I read it I knew I had to do the show," said Abke who portrays Rivard. "These characters are striving for perfection, but realize they're human and flawed."

Rivard was banished because the bishops and other higher ups in the archdiocese thought he was disruptive. "It's very political," said Abke. "There are ulterior motives behind what happens."

As the play begins, Rivard is arrested in Detroit four-and-a-half years after Sister Rita was murdered, and brought back to Solon for trial.

Flashbacks

"The play is a series of flashbacks from 1911 to 1906," said Abke. It starts with when Sister Rita first comes to the parish and progresses to the point where she is killed.

"There are a lot of interesting characters and it seems to capture that time period," said Abke. "It's an excellent drama, a couple of hours of good entertaining suspense. It's riveting."

Abke, who has performed in plays on Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge campus in Farmington Hills,

Poor Cynthia McCall is treated like an indentured servant by her mean Aunt Gertrude and cousins Constance and Anne. Her father, a seaman in the Union Navy, is away fighting, and her only friend is a neighbor Thomas Alva Edison. McCall is comforted by the hope that her father will return as promised for the Mariners Ball.

If this sounds a little like Cinderella, you're half right. It's the plot for Cindy Cinderella: An American Fairytale an original family show by Michael Vigilant and Gerald Castle opening Saturday, Dec. 2 at the Anderson Center Theater inside Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn.

Vigilant, a Troy resident, wrote the book and lyrics for this delightfully funny show that will tug at your heartstrings. It takes place in Port Huron, a city where Edison spent part of his childhood.

"It was an exciting challenge," said Vigilant, who worked on the script with Birmingham-based Heartlande Theatre Company. Heartlande Theatre was approached by Henry Ford Museum to prepare a family show for the holidays.

Original script

"This is a first for us," said Mary Rychlewski, who founded Heartlande with Jan Radcliff. "It was our first original script for children/family theater."

Unlike other theater companies who present the works of others, Heartlande works with playwrights like Vigilant to develop the work from inception of an idea, to script to music and production.

"It's a fascinating process," said Rychlewski. "People don't understand it. Original theater allows us to comment on our society."

Vigilant and Castle have worked together before. Castle's brother, Dan, a Birmingham resident, is directing the show. "Gerry, Dan and I started out together," said Vigilant. "There's always been a nice chemistry between us."

Because the play is at Henry Ford museum, it had to have a historical foundation. "Thomas Alva Edison spent part of his childhood in Port Huron," said Vigilant, who is marketing director and interim managing director at Music Hall Center for the Performing Arts in Detroit. "He was precocious and incredibly industrious. He published his likes working at the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford.

"It's very personal," he said. "There's not a bad seat in the house. When you're there you're close to the audience. There's a lot of energy. It's an intimate space that's beneficial for the actors and the audience."

Samantha Steckloff of Farmington Hills portrays Sister Rita. "It's kind of a murder mystery that's based on a true story," she said. "I really like my character, and the rehearsals are going well. It's a very good story that takes place in Michigan."

The Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford continues its season in January with Driving Miss Daisy. Performances Jan. 19-20, Jan. 26-28, and Feb. 2-4.

Chamber concert showcases clarinetist, pianist

The Chamber Music Society of Detroit continues its 57th season with a performance by clarinetist Richard Stoltzman and pianist Lukas Foss 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2 at Seligman Performing Arts Center on the campus of Detroit Country Day, 13 Mile Road at Lahser in Beverly Hills.

The program will include Lutoslawski's Five Dance Preludes, Stravinsky's Three Pieces, Bartok's Romanian Dances, and Three American Pieces by Foss.

Known for his innovative jazz performances and chamber music excellence, Stoltzman has performed with more than one hundred orchestras worldwide. A two-time Grammy winner, he has released nearly 50 recordings on multiple labels including RCA and Sony Classical.

Foss is known throughout the world as a pianist, composer, conductor and educator. A former music director for the Brooklyn Philharmonic, the Buffalo Philharmonic, and the Milwaukee Symphony, he has appeared with many orchestras including the New York Philharmonic, Boston Symphony, and Tokyo Philharmonic.

Tickets are $18 to $67, students $15, and available at all Ticketmaster locations. Call (248) 645-6666.

Stoltzman will conduct a master class with three area advanced clarinet students — Angela Brenton a student of Theodore Oien of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Michael Wayne, and Jeremy Eig, students of Fred Ormand of the University of Michigan — 1-3 p.m. Friday, Dec. 1 at the Seligman Performing Arts Center. Brenton will perform a selection from Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra, K622. Wayne will play a selection from Nielsen's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra, Op. 57. Eig will perform Bartok's Contrasts with Lydia Liu, violin and Bonnie Wagner, piano. There is no charge for the session, which is open to the public.

own newspaper."

Relationship

The father of two daughters ages 9 and 7, Vigilant wanted the story to be about a father/daughter relationship. It's a topic near and dear to his heart. "I wanted Cynthia to have an empowered person," he said. "I didn't want her to rely on a romance to fulfill her life"

Cynthia McCall, played by Stacy Cole, is an aspiring writer who helps Edison with his newspaper. Her father sends her shoes from his travels so that she'll know what it's like to walk in other people's shoes. He believes having this insight will help her become a better writer.

The subtle message is that ours is a world of diversity. Walking in other people's shoes helps you understand where folks come from.

"I'm only making a suggestion," said Vigilant. "I don't want it to evolve into preaching."

The show is also about the magic of believing in your dreams and the happy ever after.

"Life isn't just an equation, magic occurs" said Vigilant. "It's wonderful for children and wonderful when adults believe that it still can happen."

Patty Ward of Birmingham portrays Aunt Gertrude. "She's very nasty," said Ward as she tried to think of something positive to say about her character. "Cynthia's mother died, and her father is away fighting the Civil War. I have to provide food and a bed, and I resent it. Toward the end I soften."

Prince

Patrick O'Reilly of Farmington portrays the prince-like character who rescues McCall. He's a Union soldier stationed on the same ship as her father."

Both Ward and O'Reilly are enjoying being part of an original production.

"It's fun to create the role; you get to make it your own," said O'Reilly. "We're doing a lot of creating as we go along."

'It's geared for kids and it's a very funny, heartwarming story. It's wonderful to work here. You step right into history the minute you walk into the museum.'

Patty Ward

Actress

Both are enjoying the music and messages about inspiration. Edison had a lot of failures before he was successful. Each character has to overcome obstacles to achieve their goals.

"It's geared for kids and it's a very funny, heartwarming story," said Ward. "It's wonderful to work here. You step right into history the minute you walk into the museum. It all kind of melts together. And there's a happy ending; good prevails over evil."

Stage manager

Stacey Griffin of Garden City, a graduate of Oakland University, is the stage manager. "I love directing, and the next best thing is stage managing," she said. "I call the show, and make sure everything technically happens when it's supposed to."

Griffin who is married and has a 21-month-old son, loves all aspects of theater. In addition to working on Cindy Cinderella she stars in the title role of the Velveteen Rabbit presented by September Productions.

She believes Cindy Cinderella is a wonderful family production, and offers an opportunity for people to support local theater in metro Detroit.

She likes the love story aspect of the show and historical aspect.

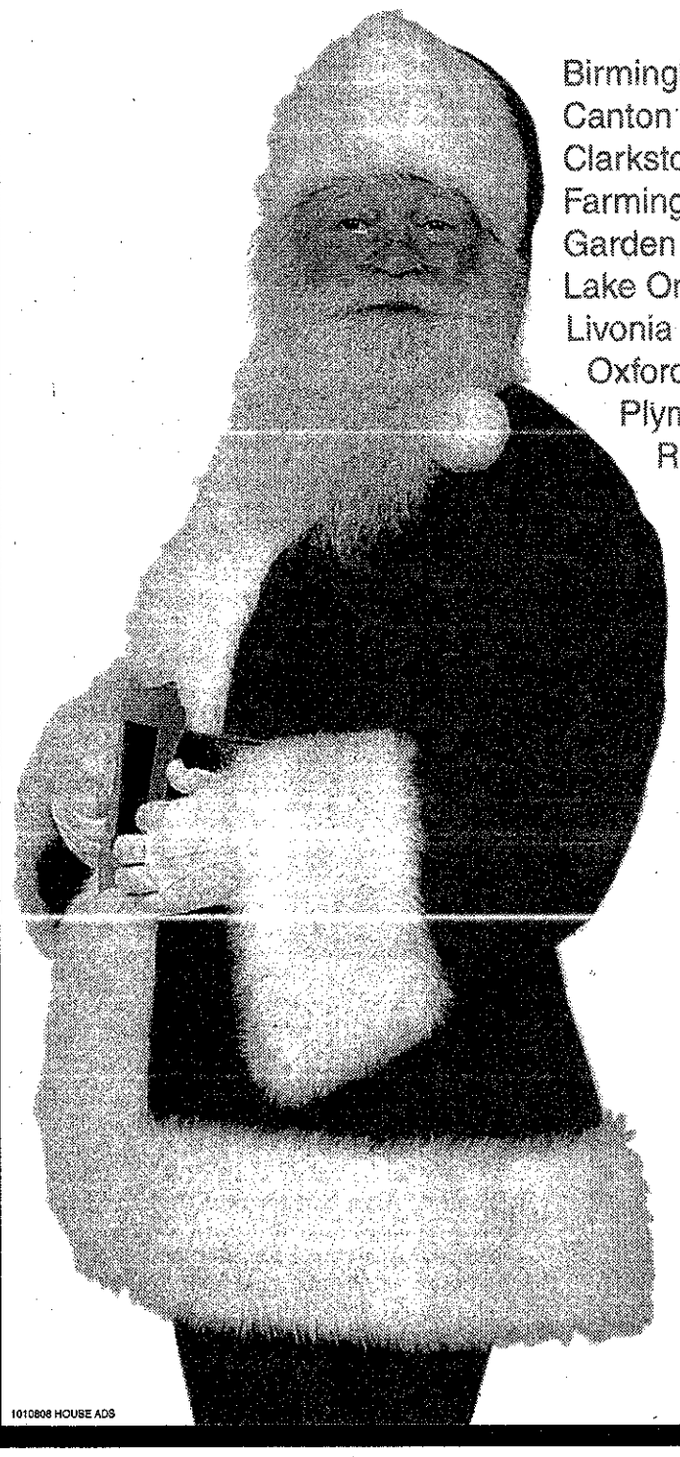

"It really is fun giving personality to Thomas Edison a person many children of heard of, but couldn't phantom as a young man. It's just fun."

Plymouth Theatre Guild performs 'Miracle'

The Plymouth Theatre Guild brings to life the heart-warming story "Miracle on 34th Street" 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 1-2 at the Water Tower Theater on the campus of the Northville Psychiatric Hospital. Tickets $10, $7 ages 18 and under. Call (248) 349-7110.

BY PAMELA JOY MCGOWAN
SPECIAL WRITER

Sure we've all seen one version or another of the movie Miracle on 34th Street, but experiencing it on stage is much more fun, and the Plymouth Theatre Guild delivers it.

Directed by Barry V. Levine, a former drama teacher and off-off-Broadway actor, the cast of various ages and experience do an exceptional job bringing the Christmas spirit to the Water Tower Theatre in Northville.

In the stage adaptation there is some deviation from the familiar story found on the silver screen, but the lesson is the same: "Faith is believing in things when common sense tells us not to." Peppered with humor, elves and even a strolling choir, the magic of Christmas comes alive in this production.

Kris Kringle is a kindly old man who claims to be the real Santa Claus. A desperate Macy's executive, Doris Walker, hires him to fill in for the store's drunken – and thus recently fired-Santa, though she is not falling for the "real Santa" bit. A dispute arises between "believers" and "non-believers" and eventually Mr. Kringle finds himself in court with Doris' new boyfriend, Fred, struggling to prove the "non-believers" wrong. Everyone gets what he or she deserves in the end, including the nasty Ms. Sawyer, who is set on "exposing" Kris Kringle from the beginning. Of course, Doris' skeptical daughter, Susan, rediscovers the blind faith of a child and is rewarded by Santa.

Kris Kringle

Kris Kringle is convincingly played by C.J. Nodus. No stranger to the stage, Nodus has appeared on Broadway, and directed and acted in many other small productions. So it's no surprise that he is Santa right down to the ho, ho, ho's.

His discussion of imagination with Susan (played by Lauracindy Plague of Canton) is compelling and flawlessly delivered. Likewise, Kathleen Booker (Doris) and Dennis Hubel (Fred) do an exemplary job building the chemistry between their two characters. Watching Doris go from a cold, career-obsessed person to a sensitive, lovable woman keeps the audience from wanting to shake her for not immediately noticing the wonderful guy she has right in front of her. And Fred stays nicely confident in his belief in her and Kris Kringle.

Elves

And then there are the elves. They are cute, they are silly, and their appearances are so meaningfully placed that the production would not be the same without them. The "Littlest Elf," played by 5-year-old Plymouth resident Kelsey Tomei, is small in size but big on character. All the elves work well together to illustrate the "Elf Union." The troop of elves (Kelsey Tomei, Wendy Tomei, Stephanie Hubel, Chelsea Rourke, Laura Van Valkenburgh, Teresa Asevedo and Lauren Norris) consists of kids (and one adult) from not only Plymouth, but Farmington Hills, Northville, Novi, and Garden City as well. Livonia residents, Lauren Maceroni (Megan) and Phyllis Sollars (ensemble), make their debuts with the Plymouth Theatre Guild.

Other stand-out performances include the appearance of Producer and Assistant Director, D. Ed Cox as Charlie Halloran, and John Yono, who brings some of the first humor of the play with his portrayal of the Drunken Santa – Christmas is in the bottle.

Sets

The sets and props for this production by area residents are kept simple, which helps not to detract from the characters. The costumes, especially those of the elves, keep with the spirit and tone of the story, and Santa looks just like he did when you dreamed of him as a child – and maybe still do.

The cast makes excellent use of the aisles, enveloping the audience even further. It's hard not to leave the production wanting to put up your Christmas tree, sing carols, and maybe even tackle the shopping malls.

Pamela Joy McGowan is a Livonia resident who writes about community theater for the Observer Newspapers.

'The Lion in Winter' thought-provoking

The Farmington Players present "Lion in Winter" 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Dec. 1-2, Dec. 8-9; Thursday, Dec. 7, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 3 at Barnes & Noble Booksellers, 6800 Orchard Lake Road, between 14 and 15 Mile Roads, West Bloomfield. Tickets $12, call (248) 553-2955.

BY BOB WEIBEL
SPECIAL WRITER

■ The setting, costumes, props, lights and sound are well done.

If indeed, history is prologue, The Farmington Players potent production of The Lion in Winter provides insights into the lengths men will go to secure and maintain power (e.g. the presidency). It is Christmas Eve, 1183, at the castle of Henry II, in Chinon, France.

The king not only rules England, but is titular head of much of France, because of a weak King Philip. It is not a cheerful time for Henry, however. Which of his three sons will succeed him on the throne? That is the question. He favors one, his queen another. Henry has cast her into the dungeon to set her mind straight. When that fails, he releases her from prison is a vile ploy to see things his way. What follows is a endless series of deceits, lies, betrayals, crosses, double crosses and triple crosses, as the principals plot to have their way.

Commanding performance

James Goldman's play makes for great theater as performed by the Players under the able direction of Nancy Harrower. Ves Spindler gives a commanding performance as Henry II. In appearance, stature and voice Spindler is more like a pride than a mere lion bellowing about the stage demanding that others bow to his wishes. His legacy must live on. Even if it breaks his heart. Even if he must disinherit his sons, throw them in the dungeon, have his marriage annulled, and marry his mistress to give him more sons to choose from. His shrewish wife, Queen Eleanor, played superbly by Jan Salisbury, holds the trump card — title to the province of Aquitane, which Henry covets. She has a sharp tongue and will stop at nothing be the winner. One time taunting Henry that she has slept with his father. Another time, presenting knives to her sons to use against Henry.

The queen tolerates Henry's many affairs, including his latest with a French princess, Alais. Brienne rae is alluring and compelling as a women who may have to sacrifice her desires to satisfy the whims of the men about her. Ken Branshaw, masterfully creates a vivid character in Geoffrey, the middle son, who is favored by neither parent. He survives on intelligence and cleverness.

Randy Coble, as Richard the Lionheart, gives an understated but effective performance as the son favored by the queen. Matt Yanke, in his first major role, plays Henry's favorite son, John. Still in high school, Yanke's youth serves him well as a young man caught in a whirlwind of intrigue he doesn't quite understand. John Abair, Jr. is very good as King Philip, who arrives to claim what is rightfully his — only to be rebuffed by the strong personality and devious deals of Henry.

Setting

The setting, costumes, props, lights and sound are well done, contributing to an entertaining and thought-provoking evening of theatre — even though playwright Goldman gives us a longish first act.

Bob Weibel is a Westland resident and writes about theater for the Observer Newspapers.

'Grinch' shows how Jim Carrey stole our hearts

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

Twenty years ago, Robin Williams was the toast of Tinseltown. His overflowing popularity and over-the-top personality, however, couldn't save the overblown screen version of Popeye. Jim Carrey must surely be wondering whether the $123 million Grinch will be his Popeye.

Worry not, Jimbo. Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas is a tour de fur for the incomparable Carrey, a swirling blizzard of otherworldly fantasies that the good doctor himself would have blessed with a papa's pride.

As innocent as was the 1957 book, as unsophisticated as was the 1966 animated television version, director Ron Howard built the largest set in Universal Studios' history and still managed to keep it simple. The story, that is.

Grinch, at its heart, is about the meaning of Christmas. And since the cave-dwelling Grinch – lean, green and mean – has a heart that's two sizes too small, the village of Whoville has a problem. Two problems, in fact, as one of its smallest citizens, Cindy Lou Who (Taylor Momsen), harbors holiday doubts of her own. In her song Christmas, Why Can't I Find You? Cindy laments, "Did Christmas change, or just me?"

■ 'Grinch, at its heart, is about the meaning of Christmas. And since the cave-dwelling Grinch – lean, green and mean – has a heart that's two sizes too small, the village of Whoville has a problem.'

The Grinch and Cindy Lou are the only characters from the original book. Jeffrey Price and Peter A. Seaman (Who Framed Roger Rabbit) offer a "whostory" lesson (there are lots of "who" puns, from "whovenile delinquent" to "whobilation") that expands the story without adding any fat.

They show, for example, how the 8-year-old Grinch (Josh Ryan Evans, in a fine, Grinchy performance of his own) came to have it in for the Whos. They also give Cindy Lou parents: befuddled Whoville postmaster Lou Who (Bill Irwin) and wife Betty Lou Who (Molly Shannon).

But it's Carrey who carries the film, with an assist from five-time Academy Award-winning make-up artist Rick Baker. Carrey's voice, face and body are a symphony, harmonious and eloquent, soaring through new and uncharted progressions of expression.

Carrey's Grinch is every bit the meanie from Mount Crumpit that Dr. Seuss gave us, "the one creature within a billion billometers who hates Christmas." He's also a lonely soul who just needs a friend. Doesn't that hit a familiar chord? Only someone totally lacking in-forgive us-whomanity would turn such a creature away.

Watch for some other notable Whos, including Jeffrey Tambor as Mayor May Who and Christine Baranski as haughty neighbor Martha May Whovier. And it wouldn't be a Ron Howard film without brother Clint, here as mayoral assistant Whobris.

Is Grinch an instant family classic? Possibly, but some of the effects, even Carrey's rapid-fire mannerisms and Ralph Kramden temper, may be a bit intense for the youngest ones.

Interestingly, while the Grinch has the bark but little bite, the Whos have these distorted faces reminiscent of the pig people from that Twilight Zone episode where the beautiful girl is the one sent away. They may need more explaining than the six-foot furball himself.

Happy Wholidays.

Film suffers from lame script

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

JASIN BOLAND

Red Planet: Carrie-Anne Moss and Val Kilmer star in this film about a futuristic mission to Mars.

You know you're in trouble when the best performance in the film is by the scenery. With an honorable mention to an animated metal robo-dog.

Red Planet poses a premise worthy of consideration. It is 50 years from now, and we've totally loused up good old Earth. The planet is so polluted even frogs are extinct. Hey, no problem. There're lots more planets where this one came from; let's just move to the next one.

First, probes are sent to seed Mars with oxygen-producing algae to create a breathable atmosphere. When communications mysteriously stop, the first manned Mars mission is dispatched to find out why.

But that's just the prologue. During the next two hours, we learn that Mars itself has way more life than the six-pack of actors on board Mars One. Naturally, everything that can go wrong does. No surprise there, when you consider that three of the crewpersons are named Robby, Chip and Bud. Would you trust your future to two of My Three Sons and the youngest Bundy from Married With Children?

Val Kilmer (At First Sight) is Robby, the ship's fix-it man. The only thing he can't fix is himself up with the ship's commander, Carrie-Anne Moss (The Matrix). She's up there on the mother ship while he's down on the planet with four of the least interesting space travelers in sci-fi memory. Even the accomplished Terence Stamp can't rescue himself from screenwriters Chuck Pfarrer and Jonathan Lemkin's lame spiritual meanderings.

The guys are interchangeable in color as well as in character. Star Trek creator Gene Roddenberry had to fight the networks for diversity 35 years ago; it's a shame to even have to bring it up today.

Moss fares better than the men, with considerable gratitude to the ground laid by Sigourney Weaver in the Alien trilogy. Her Lt. Commander Bowman is strong and able. Not that strong, however, that she can tell the filmmakers what they can do with the obligatory space shower scene.

Moss isn't the only import from The Matrix. The sound, costume and production designers were all brought in, and their work, at least, is exceptional. Pay close attention to the astronauts' uniforms and see how many corporate logos are featured; we spotted Nokia, IBM, Hughes Aircraft and Toshiba. Perhaps these companies won't suffer the same fate as Pan Am and Bell Telephone, each prominently displayed in the late Stanley Kubrick's visionary 2001: A Space Odyssey.

Shot in the Australian outback and a Jordanian desert, Red Planet does get across the idea that we'd better take care of what we've been given; the alternative is not pleasant.

In fact, the only alternative less pleasant is a sequel about Venus.

Then again, that's where we've read women are from, so maybe there's hope.

The Tragically Hip get back to 'work' with new music

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

Few bands adopt a true egalitarian system of songwriting, establishing a real collective effort. But for Ontario-originated rock sensation The Tragically Hip, music comes from all five members, equally. And the band believes that's the key to longevity in the rock world.

"We're a songwriting collective," said Robby Baker, guitarist. "Everyone writes all the time."

That credo has kept the band intact and fostered a mutual respect among its members for more than a decade. For longtime friends Baker, vocalist Gordie Downie, drummer Johnny Fay, guitarist Paul Langlois and bassist Gord Sinclair, it's also been a means to success. The Hip have sold over a million records in the United States alone. They sell out arenas like The Palace and Pine Knob Music Theatre on most visits to the metro area. No one seems to tire of their guitar-laden riffs and swaying melodies. Not around here, anyway.

On Nov. 16, Baker called from Vancouver, the second night of the band's arena tour, to talk about this long history and The Hip's latest album, Music @ Work. Fresh from soundcheck, he sounded more enthusiastic than expected – the band has essentially been on the road since last May. "I think the idea is always just to try and push ourselves," said Baker. For those attending the upcoming Detroit show, An Evening With The Tragically Hip, the band will perform two separate sets; 70 minutes of music followed by a 20 minute break and then another 70 to 100 minutes of music. I guess when you have a 15-year history and nine albums to your credit, you can do that sort of thing.

With Music @ Work, the band came up with 30 songs in its first session of writing. Again having no particular direction in mind, the music molded into what appears on the album. Like all the band's previous work, the songs tend to evolve each time they are performed. For The Hip, music that "works" is music that constantly changes.

"I don't go back and listen to the records," said Baker of the band's previous material. "(If I) hear a song on the radio, it takes me back to the five of us at that moment. It's weird but for us, a song is a living, breathing thing. We take them out, play them live. We're always nipping and tucking."

"Songs are like frozen moments in time, like a snapshot," said Baker. "Listening to the records for me is like looking through a high school yearbook."

By that he means, it's nice to have but he doesn't often crack it open. As for the new songs, Baker feels the band created an eclectic record. From the band's heaviest moments, on Tiger the Lion, to its most subtle, As I Wind Down The Pines, Music @ Work showcases a tight-knit group of friends whose musical efforts ebb and flow seamlessly.

"(On) Tiger The Lion we were really pleased to have a song that challenged us, and challenges our audience," said Baker. "People say as we get older, we're getting mellower."

The Hip never did cater to trends, anyway

"We never really saw ourselves as a hip band," said Baker. "I always thought that because we were friends first, we would sort of outlast everybody. We'd be around in 15 years. When your best friends are in the band, you're in it for the long term."

The Hip's devoted fan base has proven they too are in it for the long haul. The band, while it hasn't achieved heaps of commercial success, earned a dedicated following who often travel from one show to the next. "In the past we haven't been a huge radio or video band," admitted Baker. "Because we were not that kind of band, people know the band through our albums. They listen to the whole album. They are fans of the band rather than fans of a song."

Knowing that, The Hip reach out to those devoted fans at live shows by digging deep into its past and performing obscure material alongside a mix of newer songs. "Those are the fans you really want," said Baker. "They force us to basically change up the set every night."

Expect the unexpected when The Tragically Hip return to Cobo Arena. It's a venue the band loves, said Baker. The band previously recorded its live album there. While this time the tape won't be rolling, the Tragically Hip is sure to prove again that its truly their music at work.

See An Evening With The Tragically Hip 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2, Cobo Arena, Detroit. Tickets are $27.50. Call (248) 433-1515.

Stephanie Angelyn Casola writes about popular music for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. She can be reached at (734) 953-2130 or e-mail at scasola@oe.homecomm.net. To send a fax, dial (734) 591-7279.

Modern musical celebrates life

Jonathan Larson's modern musical, "Rent," continues through Sunday, Dec. 3. at The Detroit Opera House, 1526 Broadway in Detroit. Showtimes are 8 p.m. Thursday-Friday, Nov. 30-Dec. 1; 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2; 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 3. Tickets $16.50-$53.50.Call (248) 645-6666.

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER
scasola@oe.homecomm.net

Enter the cold, metal-laden world of Rent and you'll find some of the most engaging, realistic characters in modern musical theater. Jonathan Larson's live-for-the-moment drama returns to Detroit bringing back all the enthusiasm a rock opera can possibly muster.

The set remains a simplistic array of cold steel structures. A white paper lantern moon and cold blue lights shine on the cast who are carefully decked in bright costumes that – like the story itself – celebrate life. The Detroit Opera House offers an intimate, elegant and contrasting backdrop to a show that glorifies bohemian life off 11th Street and Avenue B in New York City.

Rent, based on Puccini's La Boheme, centers on a group of young, struggling artists who are faced with eviction when a former friend named Benny (Brian M. Love) comes to collect back rent. Benny hopes to open a virtual studio and demands the money owed to him. But he'll let it slide if they prevent the "drama queen" performance artist, Maureen, from protesting the loss of performance space.

What unfolds under this premise is a story of love, life, art and compromise told straight and unflinchingly. The story is seen through the eyes and camera lens of Mark Cohen, an aspiring filmmaker whose voyeuristic approach to life stifles his own happiness. Matt Caplan portrays him with vehement enthusiasm, wearing the signature black and white striped scarf with pride.

Mark's roommate, Roger Davis, has all but given up on life since his girlfriend committed suicide. As the reclusive rock singer, actor Christian Mena doesn't quite live up to the role of Roger. He got off to a shaky start on opening night. Mena's voice didn't always match the power and fury demanded by the character. At times he seemed uncomfortable with his guitar – the very instrument Roger uses to express his feelings. Over the course of the year, the time span of the story, Roger strives to find the song he will leave as a legacy. His achingly-beautiful solo One Song Glory, does begin to redeem him.

Angel Schunard, the delightful transvestite, is played with boundless energy by Shaun Earl Angel marks the very epitome of believing in one's self and making each moment in life count. For it's his sad demise from AIDS which refocuses the rest of the characters on their own dreams.

Highlights of the show, however, lie with the female cast members. Mimi Marquez, played by the fiery Saycon Sengbloh, is the wild girl who lives too fast. Her strong voice and demeanor won't hold back, and her talent is showcased in her solo Out Tonight, which has Sengbloh howling like a cat and prowling around the set in heels and rubber pants. Mimi is the personification of a will to live.

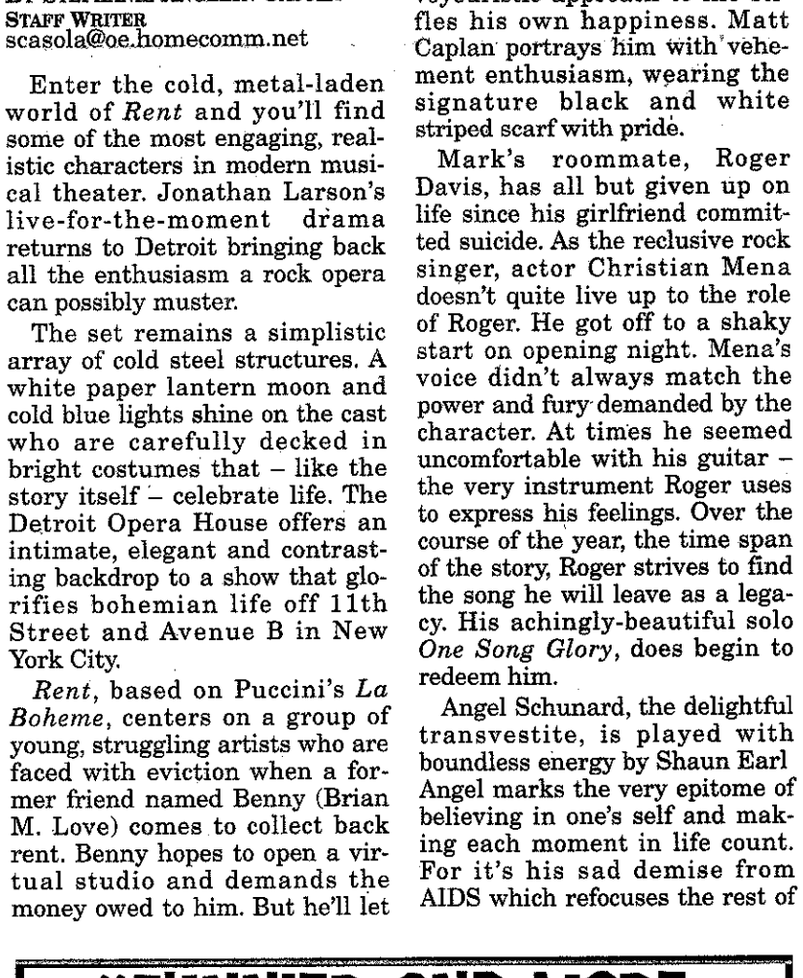

Maureen Johnson (Maggie Benjamin) and Joanne Jefferson (Jacqueline B. Arnold) portray a convincing lesbian couple on the roller-coaster relationship express. Maureen's impromptu attitude constantly clashes with Joanne's need to take-charge. The comedic duet between Joanne and Mark – Maureen's ex-boyfriend – titled Tango: Maureen, still holds gets the audience roaring with laughter with its take on infidelity.

Scenes are cut with "recorded" telephone messages, hinting at the lives of these characters. But perhaps the strongest musical elements of the show are found in songs like the catchy Seasons of Love and powerful La Vie Boheme, where the entire cast showcases its ability to sing, dance, and profess the all-encompassing theme: the joy of living.

Though Larson – who died of an aortic aneurysm after the final dress rehearsal in 1996 – never lived to see his show in completion, Rent allows his words and vision to live on. Much like Jack Kerouac's legacy in the novel On The Road, Rent is a musical celebration and reminder to live for today. As Larson believed, there is truly "no day but today."

Blaze of glory: The Touring Company of Rent performs this weekend at Detroit's Opera House. Share in the glory of Bohemian life as seen by the show's creator, the late Jonathan Larson.

Tellme: Number to call for restaurant information

BY ELEANOR HEALD
SPECIAL WRITER

Need restaurant information quickly? Can't remember the name? Local restaurant or national? What style of food do you want? Seafood, Cajun, Italian, Tex-Mex or other?

Would you like a recommendation for the restaurant too? What about a reservation? Directions?

You can get all this and more by phoning 1-800-555-TELL and following the voice-activated prompts. If you have Internet access, you may find the service easier to use by first checking out keyword options at www.tellme.com under the category "restaurants."

When I learned recently about Tellme from Master Sommelier Evan Goldstein and vice president of online services and public relations for Seagram Chateau & Estate Wines Company, a sponsor of the Tellme restaurant category, I knew it would be expertly done.

Directory

The free, voice-activated restaurant directory provides information for more than 435,000 restaurants nationwide and can even make a toll-free connection directly to a restaurant for directions or reservations.

For some eateries, there is a recommendation from Zagat Survey, a well-respected professional publication which reviews and rates restaurants nationwide.

Tellme combines the traditional one-on-one consumer reach that electronic media provides with the interactive experience of the Internet.

Using Tellme

This is a smart phone. Once I stated the category "restaurants," it recognized I was phoning from a Birmingham, Mich., exchange. Therefore, I was asked (by a natural-sounding electronic voice) if I wanted a restaurant in the general area.

Responding "yes," the next inquiry came about category. Because I had checked the website, I was familiar with possibilities, and responded, "seafood" and avoided listening to a list of options.

Among seafood choices were the following: Ocean Grille, Streetside Seafood, Troy Marriott, Flying Fish Tavern, Joe Muer's Grill, Cooker's Bar & Grill in Troy, and Lily's Seafood, Royal Oak.

Why was Charley's Crab not on the list? Why wasn't there a review option for Ocean Grille, a restaurant in the Michigan Zagat Survey?

According to Marci Gottlieb, Tellme's press contact, Tellme was launched at the end of July 2000 and evolves daily. Restaurants on the list, read to a caller, are in order of their Zagat ranking. All reviews are not yet recorded.

"Speech recognition is not perfect," Gottlieb said. "We have 70 linguists recording in audio studios across the country. They use dialects, regional pronunciations and proper French, for example, if the restaurant has a French name."

Expanding options

Time for a movie after a casual dinner? To test this potential, I phoned the same 1-800-555-TELL and "the voice" said "thanks for calling again."

Again? The smart phone knew it was not my first call. Big brother? Not really. Once you get hooked on the helpfulness of Tellme, you can store favorite information too.

As for movies, I learned what was playing where, got a short review, a Tellme rating, show times, theater location, and a connection if I wanted it.

What better gastronomic pleasures than those found in New Orleans? What did Tellme offer that would be useful on a business or pleasure trip?

I got hungry for Cajun food. Along with several others, Commander's Palace and Galatoire's were on the list with Zagat reviews. Why not Brigtsen's, on everyone's favorite Cajun list?

"Because it's pronounced BRIGHT SONS, this name is a challenge for speech recognition," Gottlieb said.

OK, so it's not perfect yet.

Readers use Tellme

Internet savvy and well-traveled gourmand, Greg Stein of Bloomfield Hills, prefers to use search engines that give him more information. "I found it awkward because I couldn't glance as I'm used to online," he said.

But what about usefulness for Internots (new-age lingo for those not connected in cyberspace)?

"Lacking access to the Internet, I'd rate the service good," Stein said. "But I still think more reviews need to be added. Ideal would be for the Web site to offer the same information as it does now by voice. An either/or scenario would be more functional."

Gottlieb said the site was lauded by the visually handicapped. "Using a dining guide or the yellow pages is difficult for this segment of the population," she noted. "Directory assistance is expensive. Tellme contacts for free."

Jim McCook of Beverly Hills is handicapped for phone use. He and his wife Aldamarie eat breakfast out nearly every day. He used Tellme to search out new places. "I think they missed the best breakfast places in and around Birmingham like the Original Pancake House, The Gallery and The Breakfast Club," he said.

Because McCook can access the Internet, he like Stein, would like a pop-up list that could be printed. He'd also like a pop-up sample menu, too.

Internet savvy Allen Beckerman of West Bloomfield is internationally well traveled. "I used Tellme to search for restaurants in Chicago," he said.

"When I got the list, I had no idea what area of Chicago they were in. The system needs some area or district divisions."

When I suggested he could use the free phone connection to learn this, Beckerman said he thought this wasted his time and that the system should provide more questions that pinpointed his location relative to restaurants in which he might be interested.

"However, if Internet sourcing is not available, Tellme is great," he concluded.

According to the Pew Internet and American Life Project, an authoritative source for timely information on the Internet, half of American adults do not have Internet access and 57 percent of these are not interested in getting online. For them and when Internet access is not available to regular users, Tellme is a handy restaurant information source.

Where to go for legal knowledge

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

I recently bought a condominium here but have lived in a condominium in Florida for many years.

What legal requirements are condominium owners in Michigan subject to other than the association's documents? I know Florida law, but I don't know Michigan law.

Our interest is mainly becoming familiar, and knowing whatever legal requirements exist for condominium owners here in Michigan.

Michigan has a condominium statute entitled the Michigan Condominium Act of 1978. This collection of laws has had several amendments, and it is presently in the process of being considered for amendment yet again.

Another relevant statute relating to condominiums is the Michigan Nonprofit Corporation Act, since most associations are incorporated under that statute.

There are courses that are taught by persons experienced in community association law, including a condominium operations class offered by Oakland Community College. You should call (248) 471-7729 for more information.

You may also wish to obtain a copy of the condominium statute from your legislator.

Robert M. Meisner is an Oakland County area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation. You are invited to submit topics that you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph, Suite 467, Bingham Farms MI 48025. His e-mail address is bmeisner@ mich. com, and his Web site is www. meisner-law. com This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

What are Top 10 reasons for buying a new home?

BY NORMAN PRADY
SPECIAL WRITER

You're going to buy a house. Why will you choose this one or that one? What are your reasons? What is most important to you?

Do you think everyone has just about the same reasons? Is the old saying true that the most important consideration in real estate is location, location, location?

Perhaps you'd like to compare your reasons against the results of an unscientific survey of real estate agents here.

The agents were given an alphabetical list of 10 buying reasons and asked to prioritize based on their own sales experiences and their customers' decisions.

Certainly, there are no correct answers and, clearly, the list was random and arbitrary with no claim of being totally representative of the endless roster of concerns which leads to a purchase.

The answers to the survey, however, might give you some reassurances or some new thoughts about your own choices and decisions.

It was generally agreed among the sales agents surveyed that location referred to a general area or community and that neighborhood was a specific area within the location.

Decor or landscaping had to do with the acceptability of the home's appearance relative to painting, wallpaper, greenery and such.

State of repair had to do with the buyer's feelings about how much or how little mechanical and fix-up work had to be done to make the house workable and livable.

Here's the list. Get a pencil and number the reasons 1-10, starting with the one that's most important to you down to the least important.

- ❒ Architecture
- ❒ Decor
- ❒ Distance to work
- ❒ Landscaping
- ❒ Location
- ❒ Lot size
- ❒ Neighborhood
- ❒ Price
- ❒ Schools
- ❒ State of repair

Now here's how some professionals ranked the reasons. Deon Benson, Realtor, Blue Sky Realty, Southfield.

1. Neighborhood
2. Schools
3. Location
4. Price
5. Distance to work
6. State of repair
7. Decor
8. Landscaping
9. Lot size
10. Architecture

■ Perhaps you'd like to compare your reasons against the results of an unscientific survey of real estate agents here.

Benson believe that once homebuyers choose location – the general area desired – choice of neighborhood is less important to them and that they might be likely to choose a less desirable neighborhood if it's a way to get a home into the larger community.

Ron Walraven, sales associate, RE/MAX Gold, West Bloomfield:

1. Location
2. Distance to work
3. Architecture
4. Neighborhood
5. Price
6. Schools
7. State of repair
8. Decor
9. Landscaping
10. Lot size

Price, Walraven said, was definitely a middle concern. He put decor and landscaping low because "they can be changed." Lot size, to him, was just to be accepted if everything else was OK.

Debbie Biehl, co-owner, Blue Moon Appraisal and Real Estate Consultants, Clarkston:

1. Schools
2. Location
3. Neighborhood
4. Decor
5. Architecture
6. Price
7. State of repair
8. Lot size
9. Landscaping
10. Distance to work

Biehl put distance to work last. She said, "People drive two hours to work, don't they?"

She initially listed schools third and then moved it to first. "People believe that schools are better" in one neighborhood or another. She put decor high because of her recent sales of houses that "looked cute."

Mike Root, sales associate, Century 21 Hallmark West, Clarkston:

1. Location
2. Distance to work
3. Neighborhood
4. Schools
5. Lot size
6. Decor
7. Architecture
8. Landscaping
9. State of repair
10. Price

Root listed price last, saying that if the buyer is happy with the other reasons on the list, price becomes acceptable even if higher than an original buying limit.

Rick Fatyma, associate broker, Realty Executive West, Plymouth:

1. Price
2. Location
3. Schools
4. Neighborhood
5. Distance to work
6. State of repair
7. Architecture
8. Lot size
9. Decor
10. Landscaping

Fatyma wondered how the newspaper's list had been compiled and then said, "Your 10 are as good as anyone else's."

He put price at the top because "everything is an outgrowth of price and one's ability to buy." He said that he gets mortgage pre-qualifications on homebuyers "so we know what range we're talking about."

Patrick J. Acree, sales associate, Why USA All American Properties, Inc., Farmington Hills:

1. Price
2. Schools
3. Location
4. Neighborhood
5. Architecture
6. Distance to work
7. State of repair
8. Lot size
9. Landscaping
10. Decor

Acree ranked schools high because he knows of buyers "who would not go to certain areas because of the schools."

You can get up-front financing

MORTGAGE BITS

TIM 'TIMBO' PHILLIPS

Some wholesale mortgage lenders have introduced "up-front" financing for new residential construction.

Until now, a builder either had to tie up his own money or the buyer would have to give the builder progress payments during construction. Such payments often came in the form of loans against the borrower's current home. Either way, the construction finance process was burdensome.

The rules have changed. Borrowers may now secure complete financing at the beginning of construction instead of at the end. Borrowers accrue interest only on the draws (incremental payments) they make until the construction is complete, but they do not have to make payments until then. Interest due is rolled into the fully funded loan.

The best "up front" lenders also help borrowers by allowing them to borrow up to 95 percent of their new home's cost, and by letting them take a more favorable interest rate if the market improves.

Some of these cutting-edge lenders do not consider borrowers' current mortgage or rent payments to calculate maximum financing. They figure that if a borrower is building a new home, he will be selling the old one about the time the new one is completed.

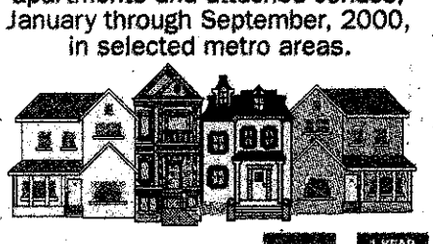

Because "up front" financing allows borrowers to secure the entire amount of their mortgage at the beginning of construction, they do not need "bridge loans" or equity loans, and they only pay one set of closing costs. When their home is complete, they simply move in without the added pressure of meeting a firm deadline to sell their current home.

Though beneficial to borrowers, residential builders have the most to gain when borrowers using "up-front" mortgages as the new construction will be financed with minimal builder out-of-pocket costs. With "No Document" and "Stated Income" options now available, you should count on seeing much more of these "win-win" mortgage products in the near future.

Existing-home sales eased in October, Realtors report

Sales of existing single-family homes slipped last month but remained at historically strong levels, according to the National Association of Realtors.

Existing-home sales slid 3.9 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 4.96 million units from an upward-revised level of 5.16 million units in September. However, last month's sales activity remained 1.6 percent above the 4.88-million unit pace in October 1999.

NAR President Richard Mendenhall said sales activity is within the level of expectations. "The present existing-home sales volume is consistent with the pattern of stabilization that began in September, with sales expected to fluctuate within a fairly narrow range in the months ahead," he said.

■ In the Midwest, homes were reselling at an annual rate of 1.07 million units in October, down 4.5 percent from September.

"The decline in mortgage interest rates is helping to keep sales activity strong, and we expect the 30-year fixed interest rate to average close to 7.8 percent for the next year," Mendenhall said. According to Freddie Mac, the national average commitment rate for a 30-year, conventional, fixed-rate mortgage was 7.80 percent in October, down from 7.91 percent in September; it was 7.85 percent in October 1999.

Any month with home resale activity close to a 5.00-million unit pace is historically very strong, said David Lereah, NAR's chief economist. "We're forecasting existing homes sales to total 5.04 million this year, only the second year in history with sales exceeding the five-million mark," he said.

The national median existing-home price was $138,200 in October, up 4.3 percent from October 1999 when the median price was $132,500. The median is the midpoint – half the homes sell for less, while half sell for more.

Seasonal shifts

Lereah noted home prices are down on a month-to-month basis, but this is a decline resulting from seasonal shifts in the market. "Every year since recordkeeping began in 1968, the median home price has dropped in the fall because fewer families with children are in the market. As a result, a higher percentage of buyers are singles and childless couples, generally purchasing more moderately priced homes, so we see a seasonal dip in prices," he said. "This has nothing to do with appreciation, which is why we always compare prices to the same period a year earlier," he explained.

Housing inventory levels rose 1.8 percent at the end of October with 1.74 million existing homes available for sale, which represents a 4.2-month supply at the current sales pace. However, inventory levels remain 13.0 percent below the 2.00 million homes available in October 1999.

Breakdown by area

Regionally, In the Midwest, homes were reselling at an annual rate of 1.07 million units in October, down 4.5 percent from September, but remained 1.9 percent above October 1999. The median price in the Midwest was $120,000, down 0.1 percent from a year ago.

The Midwest region consists of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

The existing-home sales pace in the South rose 2.6 percent in October to an annual rate of 1.99 million units; they were 4.2 percent above October 1999. The median price of an existing home in the South was $128,200, which was 6.5 percent higher than October 1999.

The South region consists of Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia.

In the West, home resales fell 11.6 percent from September to an annual rate of 1.30 million units in October; however, September was the second-highest level ever recorded in the West. The pace was 2.3 percent below October 1999. The median existing-home price in the West was $183,300, up 6.1 percent from the same month a year earlier.

The Western region consists of Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

Housing Affordability Index declines in 3rd quarter of 2000

Higher home prices offset rising incomes and declining interest rates during the third quarter of this year, resulting in an erosion of housing affordability, according to the National Association of Realtors.

NAR's composite Housing Affordability Index was 124.7 during the third quarter, down 1.6 percentage points from 126.3 reported in the second quarter; it was 7.2 points below the same period a year earlier when it stood at 131.9.

The index shows half the nation's households had at least 124.7 percent of the income needed to buy a home at the third quarter median existing-home price, which was $142,800. This index measures affordability factors for all home buyers making a 20-percent down payment, with an index of 100 defined as the point where a median-income family has the exact amount of income needed to buy a median-priced existing home. The third-quarter median family income was $50,657.

The affordability index is at the lowest level since the second quarter of 1992, when it registered 123.7, said Dennis R. Cronk, NAR president. "Although home sales remain near record levels, we are concerned that affordability conditions are at an eight-year low," Cronk said. "The biggest concern is for first-time buyers, who face an even larger challenge," he added.

Affordability for first-time home buyers is at the lowest level since the second quarter of 1990, David Lereah, NAR's chief economist, said. "Our first-time buyer index dropped 1.3 percentage points in the third quarter to 73.6...a 10-year low," he said.

Lereah added a positive note. "Interest rates have been declining in recent weeks and appear to be having a stabilizing effect, but this underscores how sensitive the market is to changes in interest rates, which are the single biggest factor in entry-level housing affordability," he said.

The association's First-Time Homebuyer Affordability Index shows a typical first-time buyer household, aged 25 to 44, with an income of $29,288, had 73.6 percent of the income needed to buy a typical starter home with a 10-percent down payment. The median starter home price was $121,400, during the third quarter.

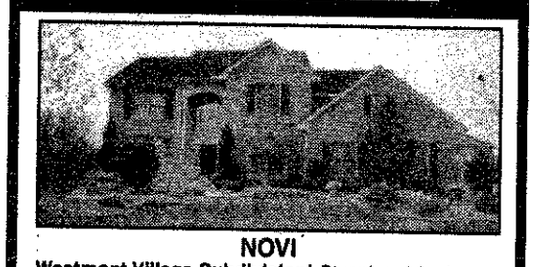

According to the Federal Housing Finance Board, the average effective mortgage interest rate for existing homes was 8.10 percent during the third quarter; down from 8.19 percent in the second quarter; it was 7.58 percent in the third quarter of 1999. This is a weighed average interest rate between fixed and adjustable loans, including the cost of points, and represents a bottom-line mortgage cost.

Conditions remain fairly good for trade-up buyers, who can use the equity from their existing home to make a 20-percent down payment, Lereah said. "Our index shows a median-income family can afford a home costing $178,100 – well above the third quarter median price of $142,800. Obviously, conditions vary widely across the country, but as a general national gauge, good housing affordability conditions remain."

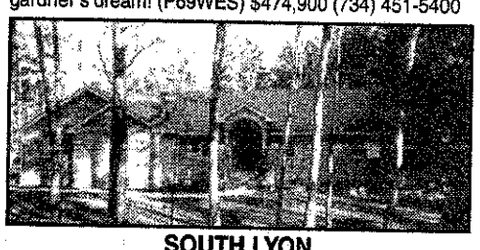

The typical first-time buyer could afford a home costing $89,400 during the third quarter – about half of what a median-income family could afford. Cronk said the dramatic difference in affordable prices demonstrates the problem for first-time buyers. While first-time buyers are in fairly good shape in the much of the Midwest and South where home prices are relatively low, the situation in the high-cost markets of the Northeast and on the West Coast is becoming even more critical," he said.

"This means that whoever is elected president must not take today's good housing market for granted – if we don't help first-time buyers, who account for 42 percent of home sales, the housing market could drop to levels where it would become a drag on the entire national economy," he explained.

Taubman joins GM in RenCen upgrade

■ Construction will begin next year on the new GM Heritage Museum of Technology that is scheduled for completion in 2002.

Taubman Centers Inc. has joined in the $500 million redevelopment program for General Motors Global Headquarters at the Renaissance Center.

Taubman will be responsible for developing merchandising plans, implementing retail-leasing activities and providing retail marketing for the Renaissance Center, Millender Center and the future River East mixed-use project, all located in downtown Detroit.

"Taubman brings an enormous wealth of retail experience to our team and knowledge of the marketplace," said Matt Cullen, general manager of the GM Enterprise Activities Group. "Retail is important to our mix of services within the Center for GM employees, Center tenants and Detroit residents and visitors."

There is approximately 230,000 square feet of retail space in the Renaissance Center and Millender Center; River East retail space is undetermined at this time.

Renaissance Center has been reconfigured to create clusters for retail and service firms. The Center's financial services area in Tower 100 was completed earlier this year and includes Bank One, Comerica, Michigan National Bank, Research Federal Credit Union, Kinko's and Shoefixer's. Last month was the grand opening of the Center Court Cafe, a 40,000 square foot food court on the Promenade Level that features 17 restaurants and seating for 1,100. The five-story Wintergarden overlooking the Detroit River is under construction and will also feature retail and restaurants. Earlier this year GM World, a showcase of GM interactive product displays, opened to the public on the Center's Promenade Level.

Construction will begin next year on the new GM Heritage Museum of Technology that is scheduled for completion in 2002.

"We are very pleased with the opportunity to work with General Motors at their global headquarters in Detroit," said Robert Taubman, Taubman Centers president and chief executive officer. "Our plan is to identify merchants that will serve both internal and external customers and create a thriving retail environment." Taubman will work closely with Hines, the Center's development and property management firm, to develop the retail plan.

"We recognize that under GM's direction Renaissance Center is undergoing a significant rebirth and the city is emerging with new growth potential," said Taubman. "We are delighted to be a part of the Center's future and the future of Detroit."

General Motors Global Headquarters at the Renaissance Center currently has offices for more than 5,500 GM employees and 2,500 non-GM tenant employees. Renaissance Center includes four 39-story office buildings and the 73-story Detroit Marriott Renaissance Center Hotel.

Ascending from a four-level, 14- acre podium, the four office towers have a combined office space of 2.2 million square feet and could house a working community of more than 10,000.

Taubman is based in Bloomfield Hills.

Loan rates holding steady for holidays

(AP) Rates for 30-year and 15-year mortgages held steady last week but adjustable-rate mortgages ticked up.

The average interest rate on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages was unchanged at 7.73 percent for the week ending Nov. 24, the same rate as the previous week, according to a survey released Wednesday by Freddie Mac, the mortgage company. A year ago, the rate on 30-year mortgages stood at 7.75 percent.

In mid-May, rates on 30-year mortgages hit a five-year high of 8.64 percent.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for refinancing, also were unchanged at an average 7.41 percent this week. A year ago, 15-year mortgages averaged 7.36 percent

On one-year adjustable-rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 7.28 percent, up from 7.25 percent the week before. For the same period last year, one-year ARMS averaged 6.45 percent.

The rates do not include add-on fees known as points, which averaged 1 percent of the loan amount for all three types of mortgages.

"Financial markets are in a holding pattern as the winter holiday season begins, leaving rates below 8 percent for the 15th consecutive week," said Robert Van Order, Freddie Mac's chief economist.

Founded in 1924, Plante & Moran specializes in manufacturing, healthcare, real estate and construction, government and financial services. In addition to traditional audit and tax services, the firm provides innovative management consulting services that include technology and network communications, process and quality management, employee benefits, mergers and acquisitions, executive training, wealth management and international structure and transactions.

3 brochures can help with buying or selling home, and moving

Each year, one out of every five families moves. To help ease the stress involved with buying, selling or moving from your home, the MetLife Consumer Education Center has created three free brochures – Buying a Home, Selling a Home and Moving.

Made available as a public service, the free brochures are part of the MetLife Consumer Education Center's Life Advice program, created to help people better understand and manage the major events in their lives. (800) 638-5433.

To help determine how much money you may need to borrow to finance your home, Buying a Home provides methods for determining your net worth and disposable income. The brochure also offers tools to calculate a monthly mortgage payment you can handle and suggests questions to ask when interviewing possible real estate agents, including:

- How many houses are you prepared to show me?
- Will you provide references?
- Do you represent the seller's interest, the buyer's interest or both?

In addition, Buying a Home stresses the importance of carefully selecting your prospective home's location, specifically noting its proximity to local schools, municipal services and public transportation.

Selling a Home suggests placing your home on the market early; if you find a new home before selling your present one, you may wind up with two mortgages. The brochure also provides information on using a broker and offers simple suggestions for increasing your home's marketability. Selling a Home lists factors to consider when pricing your home and emphasizes the importance of knowing what tax implications may result from the sale of your home.

Moving helps you evaluate whether to move yourself or to hire pros and offers guidelines on how to properly pack valuables. In addition, the brochure provides a checklist of everything that needs to be done prior to the move, such as closing bank accounts, notifying utilities and service companies and filling out a forwarding address form at the post office. Moving also includes important tips to help the actual moving day go smoothly.

Call (800) 638-5433 to request free brochures. The advice program was recently awarded the first-ever Consumers' Choice Award for outstanding educational services to the American public by the United States Consumer Information Center.

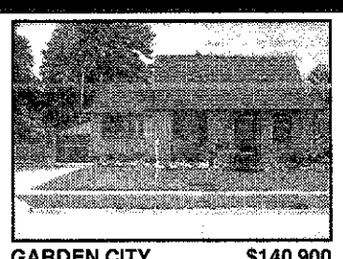

All brochures list reference sources for additional information, and many can be accessed on the Internet at www. lifeadvice. com
